THE

BANNER OF ISRAEL.

A Weekly Journal,

ADVOCATING THE

IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH NATION

WITH THE

LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

VOLUME V. 1881.

London:
W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK LANE, PATERNOSTER ROW, E.C.
ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.

Digitized by Google

Harvard Divinity
DS
131
.B36x
v.5

INDEX

HARVARD UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

PAGE

Leading Articles by the Editor.

Afghan Complication, The 342
Ammi and Lo-Ammi 519
Anglo-Israelite Argument, as Described by the Most Distinguished of the Plymouth Clergymen 399
Assassination of the Tsar 117
Attempted Assassination of President Garfield 289
Afghan Policy of the Day, The 509
Brief Résumé of the Past Twelvemonth, A 541
British-Israelite Supremacy in the Earth ... 333
British Trade and its Amount 318
Banner, The 478
Bring Ye All the Tithes Into the Storehouse 110
Bradlaugh's Right to a Seat in the House of Commons 221
Calm Before the Storm, The 317
Candahar 77
Clifton Conference 450, 458, 475
Chief Mahommedan Sovereign of the World 462
Colonies, Gates, and Confederation ... 177
Complications at the Cape 45
Census of Israel's Heathen Empire, The ... 493
Confederation 374, 449
Condition of Madagascar 461
Custody of Jacob's Stone After Edward I. Time 394
Cui Bono? 385
Cyprus 61, 362
Death of the Earl of Beaconsfield ... 169
Disaster in the Transvaal, The ... 21, 101
David's Throne, and Benjamin a Tribe of Israel 395
Days of Noah and the Days of Lot, The ... 396
Death of President Garfield 405
Day of Preparation, The 452
Diaspora, The 462
Ephraim and Manasseh—A Comparison ... 546
European Coalition, The 501
European Earthquake, The 109
Egypt 405
Egypt and Israel 413
Ethnographical Argument, The 505, 512, 526
Elect, The 433
Ephraim's Message to Manasseh 12
"Ephraim Before Manasseh, and He Set" 361
Fair Trade 449
Future of the British—New View 138
Garfield's Death 449
Gathering Storm, The 138
Gladstone and Israel's Great Gate 149
God of Israel, The 202
Gladstone on the Crisis 437
Goodheart, The Rev., on the Identity ... 257
Great City Divided into Three Parts, The 418
Historical Argument, The 415
How the Empire Grows 525
"In the Place Where it Shall be Said," &c. 142
"I Will be Like the Most High" 398
Ireland 473
Invasion of England, The 201
Ireland and Russia 265
Is Constantinople the Gate of Israel's Enemies? 401
India and Egypt 481
Israel Compared with Gentiles in War ... 117
Israel's Influence in Arabia 135
Israel's Empire 125
Israelism and War 169
Israel's Home Blossoms and Buds ... 16, 26, 205
Israel's Multitudinous Seed... 223
Israel's Capacity to Rule 224
Israel's Multitudes and Outland Empire ... 273
Israel's Wealth, and Power to Get It, &c. 274, 485
Israel's Volunteers 309
Israel's Isolation 353
Israel's Commercial Prosperity 369
Israel's Wickedness, British 388
Israel's Wealth and Enemies 406
Israel's Trade and Colonies... 429
Israel and Judah Portrayed in the Parables 376

PAGE

Israel One Hundred Years Ago and Now ... 544
Islam 385
Jabez's Prayer 401
Judah Portrayed in the Parables of our Lord 209
Judenhetze 245
La Belle Marine 253
Lawlessness in the House of Commons ... 81
Legislation of Atheism in the House of Commons, The 214
Lord's Census, The 440
Manasseh's Testimony 143
Manasseh's Return to Political Union with Ephraim 37
Missionary Nation, The 543
Moses and the Prophets 47
Multitudinous Seed, Israel's 223
National Growth and National Decay ... 289
"Octogenarius Evangelicus" ... 345, 424
Onus Probandi, The 62
Our Vexatious Opponents 240
Our Mission 303
Our Fifth Year 5
Our Opponents' Differences and Contradictions 206
Peace with Suzerainty 157
Policy of Dismemberment, The 457
Policy of Surrender and Effacement as to the Transvaal and Candahar, The ... 152
Political and National Prospect, The ... 221
Perfidious Russia and the Surrender of Candahar 101
Power of the Holy People Scattered, The 29
Potter's Earthen Bottle 134
Progress and Events 237
Progress of Lawlessness 542
Programme of the Rebellious Boers ... 105
Prospects in the Transvaal 213
Return, The 349
Revised Version of New Testament, The 246, 344
Rev. Canon Bell's Pamphlet 547
Rock, The, on Anglo-Israelism and the Great Pyramid 102
"Sea is His, and He Made It," The ... 419
Settlement of the Transvaal, The 267
Signs of the Times, The 69
Sin of their Blood-guiltiness and Peace, The 193
South Africa 85
Substitution 431
Supernatural, The 53
Syrophœnician Woman, The 343
The Argument from Numbers 409
The Ten Lepers 70
Toronto Opponent, A 210
The Two Resurrections 259
"The Same Yesterday, To-day," &c. ... 328
"Three Against Two," &c. 341
"Thou Shalt Not Borrow" 491
Trade and Empire 297
Travail of the Soul of Jesus, The 349
Wealth in Melbourne, &c. 342
"With All My Worldly Goods," &c. ... 474
Wickedness of the British Nation ... 484

Papers By

Anderson, J. S.

Blind Evidence from Nineveh 268

Aunt Lucy.

Our National Flag 103

A. R.—Mazzaroth 138, 154

A. T. F.—House of Pathways, The 469
Physical Causes of the Second Return... 417

Baxendell, J., F.R.A.S.

Great Pyramid Measures, &c. 363, 420, 432, 479

Beresford, Col.

Identity Acrostics 83, 92, 189, 195, 251, 260, 454, 531

Cachemaille, The Rev. A. J. J.

Israel and the Gentiles 258
The Rev. B. W. Savile's Defection ... 31
The Ascension and Return 322

Danvers, F. C.

Christian Names 311

PAGE

D.W.—"We Have a Little Sister" 513

East Anglian.

A Prayer of Israel 92
A Word in Edgewise ... 128, 139, 153
A Question of Numbers 363
Is it Morning? 251
The Higher Patriotism 319

Ephratah

A Reply to our Opponents 346

Farnall, H. W. (New Zealand).

The Elect 338

Gott, John T.

David's Throne 164
Jehovah's Witnesses... 214
Jonah, a Type of Ephraim-Israel 72, 79, 90, 104, 112, 120

Grant, Surgeon-General

An Identity 259

Granger, J. D.

Ephraim-Israel's Redemption 239
G. L.—The British Empire ... 226
G. L. R.—Rev. xii. 87
The Man Child 118
The Identity of the Two Women 165

H. E. D.

Great Pyramid Entrance Passage, &c. 373, 389

H. P. K.

"Ye are My Witnesses, saith the Lord" ... 47

Hope.—Voice from Sydney ... 354

Horner, C.

A Summons to Action 451
Great Pyramid's Vertical Height and 1881·6 389
The Second Coming of the Lord 111

Hadfield, Colonel

Spiritual Israel 279

Hanan, The Rev. D.

An Anglo-Israel Gardening Lesson ... 304
"As for Saul, He Made Havoc of the Church" 444
A Personal Anti-Christ 205
Bishop Ryle on Israel and Judah 91
"Ho, Every One that Thirsteth" 234
Israel and the Church 534
Melchisedec and Abraham 370
Notes of a Discussion ... 483, 497, 511
On Dan. xii. 7 52
Review (Reply to Mr. Hine) 262
"The Church's Hope" 49
The Identity and the Catholic Church ... 336
The Apocalyptic Seals and Trumpets ... 394
The Appearing of the Glory 528
Tu Quoque 55
1881·6 79
The Irish Police, &c. 121
The Census of B.C. 1017 and A.D. 1881 ... 159
The Sign of the Son of Man 225

Hickson, Rev. C. W.

"Identity Arguments," pro et con ... 163, 172
The Year, 1881 5
The Return (Observations noted by P. I.) 349
The Gate of His Enemies 466

J. G. T.

Rev. B. W. Savile's Pamphlet 142
The Gate of His Enemies 527

J.L.—Israel's Tribulation Shortened 123

Jezreel—The Bride of Christ ... 8

Keighly, H. P.

An Anglo-Saxon Concert 489
Dr. Bonar on the Literal Fulfilment of Prophecy 372
Israel in Egypt 414
Judah Recognises Israel 185
Jewish Colonisation of Palestine 542
The Seven Thousand in Israel, &c. ... 71
The Epistles of St. Paul 502
Who is Blind but My Servant? 86

Lamb, Robert.

Another Curious Coincidence 548
Israel and Media 321, 334

Larkins, Colonel.

Israel Separated from Judah 140
The Favoured People 300

Digitized by Google

PAGE

Lady Jane Ellice.

Let us Pray" 408

Leslie, Henry.

A Retrospect and a Testimony 233

L. P.—A Noble Band of Women ... 290

A Continuous Chord 209

Albany 271

Barren Fig Tree 486

Benjamin to the Fore 506

Cui Bono? 305

Daughters of Israel 442

"He Couched, He Lay Down as a Lion" 218

Into the Enemy's Camp 197

Literal Translation of the Mountainous Stone (1649) 463

On Acts iii. 22 22

Stray Suggestions 97

Stumbling on the Truth 350

Thistles 285

Tares 38

Whom did the Man Represent? 63

What Seed 129

Words from the St. James's Gazette ... 10

"Ye do Dishonour Him" 222

"Looker On."

The Stones in the Breastplate 335

L. G. A. R.

The Sealed Book 247, 256, 267, 277, 293, 299

Thoughts Suggested by a Sermon (Clifford) 441

"Who are the Irish?" 397, 408

Marriott, H.

The Rev. Goodhart v. "H. M." 351

The Rev. Goodhart's Views of Anti-Christ 376

Psalm xxxiii. and Our Identity 545

Major Nickle.

Have We a Right to Occupy Cyprus? Copied from Leisure Hour 11

Many-coloured Wisdom of God 187

The Sardonyx 311

The Colours in the Gems of the Breastplate 445, 488

McErin, Burnett.

Canaanites or Phœnicians 535

M. B.—The Babylonish Captivity ... 235

M.—Joseph's Birthright, &c. ... 310

M. M.—The Karens 291

"Nemo."—Passing Through ... 46

Nelson, J. E.

The Language of the Israelites 206

Oswald, H. W.

The Comet 371

P.

The Second Advent of the Messiah 158, 171

Pegrum, Robert.

Judah's Crown and Israel's Stone 150

Manasseh's Identification 298

Pre-Celtic and Celtic Craniology 196

Parsons, C. F.

A Voice from Natal 410

Pitt, T. T.

Jehovah's v. Men's Statements 94

R. B.

Why Was Mordecai Called a Jew? ... 18

Roberts, R. N. Commander.

Israel at School 73

Rea, H.

The Aaronic Priesthood 313

Shaw, H. R.

The Two Sticks in the Great Pyramid ... 494

Sampson, Samuel.

The Lord's Day 162

Smyth, Prof.

Poole v. The Great Pyramid ... 537, 547

The Sun's Distance 343

Teutonic Christianity 357

The Jews Made Envious 464

The Great Pyramid Inch, Yard, and Mile 504

Smith, J R.

Grand Gallery Step 88

Thomson, J.

A Parable Concerning the Identity ... 325

Dr. Bonar's Rules for Interg. Prophecy 453, 467

More Blind Evidence 167, 217, 234, 281, 286, 303, 400, 314

Periods of Mourning 82

Summarised Thoughts 476, 482

The Twenty-fifth of March 46

PAGE

Vestige of Baal Worship in the Scilly Isles 539

Young, J.

Israel's Alleged Mixture of Races 266

Westfield, T. C.

Peace and Goodwill 528

W. H. W.

Testimony of the British Triads ... 25, 30

"Watcher."

Pyramid Symbology 180, 203

Pedigree of the Hebrew Race 536

W.—Confederation 254, 270

The Great Pyramid.

Ark of the Covenant—Hall, C.E. 122

British Inch, The—Shaw 55

" " —Our Rest ... 283, 294

Christian World and the Great Pyramid, The 50

Census, The—Horner 306

Coins in the British Museum—Poole ... 235

Entrance Passage and Egyptian Cubit —H. E. D. 373, 389

Facts and Theories—Hickson 269

Grand Gallery—1881·6—Hanan 79

Grand Gallery Step—Smith 88

Great Pyramid's Measures and Sun's Distance, &c.—Baxendell ... 363, 420, 432

House of Pathways, The—A. T. F... ... 469

International Institute for Preserving and Perfecting Weights and Measures... 34, 59

"Is It a Revelation or Not?"—Rev. J. W. Ogden 251

Lecture—Hickson 277

Letters, forwarded by Prof. Smyth 161, 170, 208

Prof. Smyth's Reply to London Quarterly Review 97, 106, 113, 119

Prof. Smyth Explains Mr. Proctor's Egyptologic Date for the Great Pyramid ... 215

Prof. Smyth on "Science v. the Great Pyramid for Sun's Distance" 343

Prof. Smyth's Reply to Mr. Poole... 537, 547

Pyramid Symbology—Watcher 180, 203, 275

" Chronology—Demarara 421

" Inch, Yard, and Mile—Smyth ... 504

" Numbers—Shaw 491

Reported Discovery of More Pyramids in Egypt—Prof. Smyth 75

Step and Measurements—Demerara ... 24

Time in the Ante-Chamber Passages—J. Simpson 7

Top Corner-Stone—Hall, C.E. ... 122, 126

Three-Foot Rule 260

Two Sticks in the Great Pyramid, The—Shaw 495

Vertical Height and 1881·6—Horner ... 389

Year 1881, The—Hickson 74

Lectures, Speeches, and Sermons.

Allworth, The Rev. W.—N. S. Wales 65, 510

Anglo-Israelism—Horner 302

Ascension and Return, The—Cachemaille 322

Anglo-Saxon Race, The—Dr. Brown ... 355

British Sympathy 514

Boer Negotiations—Lord Cairns 217

British Are Israel, The—Sir A. Cotton ... 238

British Empire—Grant Duff 476

British Empire, The—Kane 516

Blind Evidence 515

Carlisle, Mr. B.—Lecture 52

Cheltenham, Sermon and Lecture—Hickson 268

Church of England Missions in India—Sir R. Temple 41

Confederation—Sir A. Galt... 56

Cumming, Dr., Thirty Years Ago 386

Cyprus—Grant Duff... 487

Desolate Heritages, Israel's—Salisbury ... 420

English Language, The 516

Evidences of Our Identity—Robinson ... 248

Ephraim and Manasseh—Archbishop of Canterbury... 504

Faithfulness of God—Rainsforth 282

Great Pyramid—P. Williams, Sydney 65, 89, 90

" , Lecture on—Hickson ... 277

"God's Chosen People"—Onslow ... 426

Heir of All the Ages, The—Stoddart ... 95

Imperial Federation... 203

Inconsistent Interpretations—Hickson ... 248

Israel Found in the Isles Afar Off—Young 94

Israel's Empire—John Bright 114

PAGE

Israel's Gates—Sir W. Jervois 136

Israel's Heathen and Colonial Empire—Times 146

Israel's Heathen Empire—Sir R. Temple... 179

Israel and Judah—Billington 285

"Lazarus" at Bangor 380

Lo-Ammi—Rev. G. Mackay 515

Lord Reay on Numbers xxiii. 9 22

Père Hyacinth Gives Blind Evidence ... 422

Our Identity—Dr. Grant 146

Ruling Race, The—Dr. Waldin 514

Selkirk—Lecture by Dr. Evatt 199

Sermon by the Rev. R. Hill 175

Seed of Isaac—Granger 219

Signs of the Times—Canon Falconer ... 127

Sunday Harvesting—Jex Blake 498

Ten Tribes, The—Rev. H. W. Peploe ... 465

"These Twain shall be One"—Collin ... 439

Times of the Gentiles, The—Hickson ... 27

Transvaal, Missionary on the—Rev. T. Cresswell 216

Waning Influence of France, The 423

Why am I an Anglo-Israelite?—Hickson... 81

General Articles.

Another Curious Coincidence—Lamb ... 548

An Identity 375

"Appearing of the Glory," &c., The 461, 506

British and Israel, The 468

Britain, To—Montgomery 411

Bible Standard (Quotations) ... 222, 224

Blind Evidence ... 155, 186, 198, 211, 337

Benefits Derived from the Identity ... 52

Bernatto S. Signor 93

Broken and Restored Tables, The 183

Californian Opponent, A 346

Census, The 306, 364

Census in Canada 455

Chronological Tree of the British Nation... 519

Chief Rabbi of N. S. Wales... 141

"Congress of Freethinkers, A" 34

Collect for Good Friday 155

Cui bono? 370, 385

Discussion: Canon Brownrigg v. the Editor of the Church of England Messenger 14, 23, 32

Decimal System, The 208

Distinction Between Israel and Judah ... 470

Double Acrostic 359, 362

English Language, The 334

Gibraltar 144

Good Done by the Identity... 143, 258, 518

Gardening Lesson by Dr. Grant 382

Glover, The Rev. F. R. A. 373

Great Earthquakes in Divers Places ... 155

Hall of Tara, The 416

How Gentiles Keep Sabbath in Funchal... 279

Identity Evidence—King of the Sandwich Islands 490

"Is England Superior to Other Nations?"—Skinner, Hastings 33, 39

Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union 19, 59, 67, 99, 147, 191, 235, 287, 331, 383, 471, 523

Israel's Gates—Lecture by Sir W. Jervois 136

Israel's Big Village 278

Israel's Great Gate 398

Israel's Evangelising Functions 478

Jews and Gentiles 326

Jewish Colonisation of Palestine, The—Capt. H. P. Keighly 542

Jewish Population in the World 423

Language, Spread of the English 164

London the Jews' "City of Refuge" ... 43

"Lord, How Long?" 38

Message From the City of the Great King . 494

Miracles, Our Lord's... 241

Prayer Union for the Jews, A New ... 74

Prayer of Israel for Help 505

Psalm xxxiii. and Our Identity—Marriott 545

National Fast and Humiliation Called For 135

National Special Prayers and Thanksgiving —Rev. Cachemaille 144

Oldham Parish Magazine 160

Our Opponents 470

Plea for Missions, A 226

Red, White, and Blue, The—J. B. 546

Sabbath Question, The—Greig 460

Savile, the Rev. B. W., and Philo-Israel 42, 54, 82, 114, 131, 183, 326

Digitized by Google

PAGE

Scriptures and the Reformation, The ... 518
Sailors' Home at Marseilles 320
Second Advent of the Messiah 305
Storm, and Jesus Asleep in the Ship, The 241
Stone of Israel, The—J. C. Kenworthy ... 549
Stranger's Rest—L. E. 16, 26
Sin-Eaters 382
Shepherds of Israel (Sterling and Selwyn) 468
Sunday Harvesting 498
Ten Commandments, The 207
"The Same Yesterday, To-day," &c. ... 328
Teutonic Theory, The 499
Tribute Receiving Land, The 343
Testimony of Two Clergymen, The ... 495
Traffic Through the Suez Canal 225
Wealth in Melbourne 342
Wealth in Australia 342
Why is Israel Favoured by the Lord? ... 323
Who Were the Ancient Britons? 159
Zenana Missionary Society 234

Extracts from the Press, and Comments Thereon.

Afghan-Israelism—Major Bellew ... 292, 301
Atheism in House of Commons—Wigan Examiner 214
Anglo-Saxon Nations—Chambers's Journal 364
Barleycorn, Long Measure — Bishop Titcomb 350
British and Foreign Bible Society—Times 281
Census of the House of Judah—Bristol Times 357
Celtic Antiquities—St. James's Gazette ... 10
Coming Earthquake — Western Daily Mercury 26
Coming Events and Their Shadows—Standard 137
Coming Earthquake Woe—Rainbow ... 196
Dr. Bonar Answered—Hastings Observer... 380
English is Not Hebrew—New Zealand ... 366
England Not Decaying—French Testimony 66
England's Mission—Bonar 284
Enemy Coming in like a Flood, The ... 329
English Language in the East, The—Rock 50
Christian Union 334
Evidence by Chief Rabbi, N. S. Wales—Daily Argus 35
Evidence from America—Celestial Empire and Pall Mall Gazette 348
England's Position Among the Nations—Christian 337
Federation of the Empire, The 446
Future of the English Language, The—Children's Messenger 53
Future of Israel and Judah... 271
Great Earthquakes in Divers Places ... 137
Judah Walking to Israel 207
Lawlessness in the House of Commons—St. James's Chronicle 81
Literature of the Identity 430
"Lord Beaconsfield: A Study" 66
News from Sydney, N.S.W. 174
Origin of British Parliament, The ... 424
Religious Festivals—Bishop Titcomb ... 335
Reply to Our Opponents 346
Revised Version, The—Publisher's Circular 291
Scattering the Power of the Holy People—York House Papers 96
Semites, The—"Endymion" 9
Settlement of the Transvaal, The—Times... 266
"Stones Cry Out and Witness, The" ... 463
Ten Tribes Found in the Caucasus, The ... 425
Testimony From China 348
Testimony From United States 377
"They Shall Hunt Them"—Freeman's Journal 531
Victorian Commonwealth, The 399
Weights and Measures—Cleveland Herald, Ohio 66
"Whittaker's Almanack" for 1880 ... 145
Wild, Dr.—Heir of the World 13
Year 1881, The—Hickson, in Bristol Times 74
Yorktown Centenary, The—Times... ... 495

The Head and Not the Tail, &c.

Art-work in Metal 75
Artillery 477
Beauty of British Children 378
Boots and Shoes 520

PAGE

Chief of Nations, The Very—Daily News... 57
Chess 433
Climate of the British Isles... 438
Commerce 48, 210
Courage and Noble Self-sacrifice 54
Cost of Israel's Navy 227
Colonial Empire 477
Home and Foreign Shipping Trade ... 194
Horticulture 243
Journalism—Dean Stanley 141
Manufactures... 48
Organ Building (Sheffield)... 379
Places of Worship 47
Proportions of Romanism and Protestantism Among English-speaking People ... 379
Riches 477
Sea-borne Trade of the World 357
Shipbuilding 111
Shipping Interests 48, 194
Suez Canal Returns 251
Trade with the Samoan Islands 357
Traffic Through the Suez Canal 171
Wheat Growing 498

Identity Difficulties Answered.

Conversion of the House of Israel—Hickson and Philo-Israel 7
Cui bono? 64
Did Israel and Judah Return from Babylon? 325
Teutonic Theory—Is It True? 159
Were the Samaritans the Ten Tribes? ... 451
Who Were the Lost Sheep of the House of Israel? 451
Was Ephraim-Israel Ever Uncovenanted? 312

Israel's Battles.

Abyssinia 51
Ashantee War, The 181
Inkerman 16
Magdala 51

Progress.

At Home, 63; Ardsley, 195; Bangor—"Lazarus," 380; Bath, 506; Brampton, Cumberland, 330; Brisbane, 375; Brooklyn Identity Church, 43; Bristol, 523; Cape, The, 344; Canada, 195; Cheltenham, 344; Ireland—Dr. Hanan, 365; Leamington, 454, 471; London, 344; Manchester—E. B. Wooodruff, 9; Manchester—A. Burrows, 479; Melbourne, 327; New South Wales, 351; New Zealand. 375, 529; Riddings, Derbyshire, 19; Selkirk 195, 345; Wiltshire, 195.

Anglo-Israel Associations.

Metropolitan 141, 147, 155, 205, 339, 499, 523
" Annual Meeting 228
Sydney, &c., Encouragement From ... 425

Correspondence.

Albany—L. P. 271, 358, 359
Arabs in Charge of the Pyramid 263
Badge for Israelites 315, 339
"Brith" and "Briton"—Roberts 27
Brown v. Horner—Richmond Times ... 356
"Canaanite then in the Land, The"—Rogers 455
Church Hymns 115
Christian Again, The 35
Cymri, Cimerii. &c. 107, 211
Conference at Manchester 130
Closing Days of Christendom 382
Craze, The 411
Cubit, The Length of the Profane—Col. Gawler 339
Curious Coincidence 522
Early Christians and the Identity ... 18
England and America 99, 167
England's Position in South Africa ... 235
English Tongue, The 471
Exhibition of Electricity at Paris... ... 190
French Budget 19
Fourth Date in the Second Advent, The ... 211
Fruit of Christianity, The 35
Gawler's Tara Fund, Col. 383
Gigantic Delusion, The 399, 340
"Go into all the World," &c.—Dr. Grant .. 131
Good Samaritan, The 18
Germany and the Jews 131
Grant, Dr., on "The Sceptre Shall Not Depart," &c. 367

PAGE

Good Done by Identity Truth 259
Jacob's Pillar—El Mar 435
Jews and Palestine, The 98
Life of Livingstone 131
Mango Tree, The 331
Missionary on Our Identity, A 174
New Version 307
Old and New London—Whittaker ... 147
Our Supplements 191
Missionary Visits to Emigrants 382
Pyramid Numbers—Shaw 491
Pleadings of Jeremiah, The 295
Profane Cubit, The—Colonel Gawler ... 315
Peter and the Stone Kingdom 471
Restoration, The, Millennial or Pre-Millennial—Dr. Grant 75
"Seven Thousand in Israel," &c.—Dr. Grant 107
Soli-lunar Epact 190
"Sydney" Association, The 175
"Tarshish" and the "Marbell Stone" 19
Three-foot Rule 315
Yule of August, The 427
Welsh Eisteddfod 219
Welsh Physiognomy—Lazarus 271
Wimbledon Association—Lawrence ... 83
Who Invented the Plough? 331
Word "Gentile" Use in Romans—Dr. Grant 359
Saluting the British Flag at Yorktown ... 551

Reviews.

Anglo-Israelism. True? or False? 520, 530, 538, 549
Anglo-Israel Almanac for 1882 531
Bible Teachers Taught 146
Chain of Ages, The—Cachemaille 330
Chain of Ages, &c., The—Galloway 211, 249
Chronology of the Bible and the Great Pyramid—Stuart 167
Chronological and Geographical Tree... 315
Continuity of the Church of God, The... 521
Coronation Stone—M. Rogers 447
Distribution of Shem, Ham, and Japheth 57
Egyptian Enigma, The—Shaw 262
England's Future 261
England, the Remnant of Judah, &c.... 507
Englishmen not Israelites ... 242, 249, 260
Fulfilment of Prophecy—Capt. Keighly ... 479
Further Scriptural Proofs—Dr. Grant 189, 295
Geography of the Gates 57
Good Tidings to Israel and the Church... 166
Great Pyramid, The—Minton 18
Great Pyramid—Private Badger 67
House of Joseph in England, The 58
Is Anglo-Israel Teaching Unscriptural?... 358
Israel's Wanderings 522
Nebuchadnezzar's Dream—Adams... ... 426
Principles of the Reformation, &c.... 166
Promises and Prophecies Relating to the Chosen People 146
Queen Victoria, the Royal Seed to David's Throne, &c. 57
Reasons Why Anglo-Saxons are Israelites—Poole 146
Reply to Mr. Hine—Hanan... 262
Seed of Isaac, The—Granger 83
Summary of Anglo-Israel Teaching ... 57
Throne of David, The—Young 435
Work of Charity, A 286

Index of Texts.

Gen. ix. 25—27 ... 281
Gen. xxii. 17 ... 466
Gen. xlviii. 30 ... 361
Num. xxiii. 9 22, 179
Num. xxiv. 9 ... 218
Deut. iv. 468
Deut. xxviii. 1—14 345
Kings xix. 18 ... 71
Psa. xlvii. 9 ... 435
Psa. lxxiv. 9, 10 ... 38
Psa. lxxv. 6 ... 463
Psa. lxxx. 506
Psa. lxxii. 8 ... 523
Psa. xcv. 5 ... 419
Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20 422
Prov. xxv. 25 ... 529
Isa. xliii. 10 47, 71
Isa. xxix. 10 ... 71
Isa. xlii. 19 86
Isa. lxiv. 8 92
Isa. xiv. 14 398
Sol. viii. 8 513
Dan. xii. 7 ... 29, 52
Ezek. xxi. 26, 27... 67
Jer. iii. 18 ... 185, 207
Jer. xvi. 16... ... 531
Amos ix. 9 411
Mal. iii. 10 119
Matt. xv. 21 ... 343
Luke xii. 52 ... 341
Luke xxi. ii. 137 151
Rom. xi. 4 79
Rom. xv. 8—13 ... 258
Titus ii. 12—14 ... 460
Rev. v. 247
Rev. xii. 87
Rev. xvi. 19 ... 418
Rev. xxi. 20 ... 311

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 210. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 5, 1881. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Our Fifth Year	5
Greece and Turkey	6
Identity Difficulties Answered.—Will the Conversion of the House of Israel Take Place Before or After Christ Comes? Part XII.	7
Time in the Ante-Chamber Passages. By James Simpson	7
"The Bride of Christ." "Thoughts on the Book of Revelation and the Church of Christ," by the Rev. Adolph Saphir. By Jexreel	8
Progress. By E. B. Woodruff	9
Extract from Lord Beaconsfield's New Work, "Endymion"	9
Words from the St. James's Gazette, and from a Circular of an Irish Society. By L. P.	10
Have We a Right to Occupy Cyprus? By Major Nickle	11
Ephraim's Message to Manasseh	12
Extract from The Churchman	12
Rev. Joseph Wild, D.D.	13
The Anglo-Israel Discussion between the Editor of the Church of England Messenger (of Melbourne) and the Rev. Canon Brownrigg, of Launceston, Tasmania. Part I.	14
Israel's Home "Blossoms and Buds." Part I.	16
Israel's Battles. No. XXVII. The Battle of Inkermann	16
Israel "Dwelleth Alone"	17
Why Was Mordecai Called a Jew? By R. B.	18
Review	18
Correspondence—The Early Christians and the Identity	18
Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union	19

OUR FIFTH YEAR.

THE opening of A.D. 1881 finds us in our fifth year, and in our fifth volume. Surely the Lord's hand has been with us during these past four years, and enables us now to commence our work for the coming twelvemonth with courage, high hope, and expectation, yet with dread for the terrible prospect which is shortly to open out for "yonder ill-consolidated Europe!" For in truth, January, 1881, tells us we are "within measurable distance" of the "great earthquake" woe, that unparalleled convulsion among the Gentile nations of the prophetic "earth," "such as there was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, so great" (Rev. xvi. 18). That great catastrophe, which Great Pyramid teaching leads us to expect in 1882, may, if the Rev. W. B. Galloway be correct as to the date of our Lord's Nativity, be looked for in May, 1882—that is, only sixteen months hence. We may now in truth take our blessed Lord's words to heart, and seeing "the things" which have already "come to pass" and are still transacting before our eyes, "look up and lift up our heads, for our redemption," our national restoration to God's favour, visibly before the whole world, "draweth nigh" (Luke xxi. 28).

The great portents which that passage predicts shall be the precursors of the restoration of Israel's favour with the Lord, have already been reported, and have partially come to pass. "Nation rose against nation and kingdom against kingdom" when the late Russo-Turkish war devastated yonder fair provinces in the East of Europe. There have lately been "great earthquakes in divers places," notably in Austria in November last, and we look soon for more of these terrible messengers from God to the inhabitants of the "earth" before the great unprecedented one such as the "earth" has never known, bursts upon afflicted Europe. We have had famines and pestilences in China and India, Persia and Brazil, Armenia and Central Asia, with "fearful sights" and great signs from heaven accompanying each of these troubles, as stated in Luke xxi. 10, 11. We expect this year more and more of these signs and portents, giving warning to British-Israel that the time of God's favour on them and on the House of Judah has approached; while to the earthly Gentile powers of Europe we look for their recognition—too late!—of the terrible "sign of the Son of Man in heaven" (Matt. xxiv. 30) "coming in a cloud with power and great glory." This will be the knell, we know, of Europe; but the harbinger to Israel of coming glories, of undeserved national consolations and of spiritual gifts and blessings. Looking around, we discern everywhere the signs of the coming One, the footfalls of the Son of God, returning for His people, but to pour out vengeance also on His enemies. The Eastern Question is unsettled, the political fabric there being in a state of unstable equilibrium is ready to fall. Further off we see commotions in South Africa, Afghanistan far from finally settled, European nations in arms everywhere waiting but the signal from on high to commence that terrible internecine conflict they now see with horror to be in store for them in the near future. Near home there is Ireland, in the West and South, seething with rebellion, and we find no steps taken by the Government of the day to grapple with the evil effectually. These are the alarming opening prospects of 1881. The sky is inky black; the political and prophetic barometers alike unerringly point to the coming hurricane and devastating "earthquake" woe. But in the midst of these commotions, Israel has every promise and every hope that for her the coming year will be one of blessing, spiritual and temporal blessings both, when possibly the masses will be baptized with the Holy Spirit, and the new covenant will be fully bestowed on a race to whom alone the Lord promised it in the Old as well as in the New Testament (Jer. xxxi. 33; Heb. viii. 10).

We trust the present year will see a great advance in Identity knowledge and interest throughout the United Kingdom, the Colonies and America. During the last twelve months the progress, though satisfactory, was not remarkable, in these islands, because, there having been a lull in the development of the Eastern Question, men's minds have been averse to entertain the idea that the present peaceful prospect might soon terminate in universal European collapse. The defection of the Rev. Bourchier Wrey Savile on the one hand, and the attacks of such notable opponents as the Rev. Horatius Bonar, D.D., on the other, doubtless have induced many, among the clergy especially, to suspend their judgments and to wait for more decisive proofs or indications of God's will in this matter, before they declare their belief. In the present year, however, we look for events pointing so clearly to the coming crisis in the world's sad fate that the unbelief of the clergy will be compelled to yield; the laity in their masses will admit that the Identity is true, the subject being one they must perforce study and make their own, to prepare them for the future. We begin the year, therefore, with sanguine hopes for our country. We never had so many readers as we have now. The BANNER never penetrated so far afield and to such distant places as it does now; and we never had such conclusive proofs as reach us now from time to time (and oftener recently than ever), that the tone of this journal is approved by our fellow-believers not only in these "islands of the West," but also in the United States, in Canada, in Australia, in New Zealand, in Tasmania, at the Cape, in India, nay, even in San Domingo! We thank God heartily for these signs of His approval. We ask our friends to aid us by their prayers that the BANNER OF ISRAEL may achieve yet greater things than these, and that in conjunction with The Comments on the Word of God (undertaken monthly by the editor as a separate publication), this journal may, during the currency of 1881, by the grace of God, bring many souls to Christ. This, indeed, is one of the chief aims and objects of our efforts, and, succeeding in that, as well as in the furtherance of the knowledge of our Identity with Lost Israel, we feel that we shall thereby be serving to promote God's glory, bound up as that is with Israel's discovery, Israel's joinder with Judah, and the Return of the two Houses of the Hebrews together to their own land, according to the prophecies (Jer. iii. 18; xxxii. 32, 41; Ezek. xxxvii. 19 to 28; Hosea i. 11; Amos. ix. 15, &c.).

GREECE AND TURKEY.

THERE is a lull in the Eastern Question, but the momentous issues are no doubt working out to their final disastrous catastrophe for all that. Men see that the trouble is only in abeyance, and that burning questions, like a volcano in a state of temporary inaction, are lying beneath the surface of Eastern Europe ready to burst forth and carry all before them, literally as by fire. Such was the language of the Times on December 11, 1880, when writing of the smouldering contention between the Porte and Greece regarding the territory assigned by recommendation to the latter by the Berlin Conference, the leader said :—

> Above all, it is the interest of Europe to devise and enforce an acceptable compromise, and thereby to extinguish, once for all, a standing menace to its tranquillity. The inevitable alternative is the overthrow of all that has been done in the last three years for the regeneration of South-Eastern Europe. A conflict between Turkey and Greece would revive all, or nearly all, the antagonisms between the Porte and its emancipated subjects which it was the main object of the Treaty of Berlin to appease. It would set the East in a blaze, and threaten Europe itself with conflagration. The time has gone by for sticking a plaster on a festering wound and striving to set the question aside for settlement at a more convenient opportunity. It may suit some of the Powers to believe that more risk is involved by moving on than by standing still ; but the futility of such a policy is demonstrated by the failure of the Berlin Conference and its consequence in the present attitude of Greece. The one and sufficient hope for the future, therefore, lies in the common desire of Europe for peace, and in the conviction that peace can be secured by a speedy settlement of the question so long debated concerning the Greek frontier.

It is plain from the above that the British Government of the day has set its heart on active interference, and sees (probably wisely) that the only safety is "to take the bull by the horns," so to speak, and to compel both Turkey and Greece to be reasonable, in view to settle a dispute which, if not soon hushed, is likely to result in a "conflagration in Europe itself," and is sure to "set the East in a blaze." This language is very striking, and remarkably responds to the words of Holy Writ, wherein God Himself declares "His determination to gather the nations, to assemble the kingdoms, to pour on them His indignation, even all His fierce anger ; for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of His jealousy" (Zeph. iii. 8). It points too, significantly to the great earthquake about to burst upon "yonder ill-consolidated Europe," "an earthquake such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, so great" (Rev. xvi. 18). The one remedy for all the ills of Europe, the Times, and we suppose Mr. Gladstone's Government, sees to be "the European Concert." Given that, and everything may come right—nay, nothing can go wrong. But will God allow that Concert to be revived ? Nay, did it ever exist to any practical purpose ? We think, for the future at least, neither Europe nor our Government can look for the help this Concert might afford them. For what says the Word of God ? "The Lord shall go forth as a mighty man ; He shall stir up jealousy as a man of war ; He shall cry, yea roar ; He shall prevail against His enemies" (Isa. xlii. 13). And what does the Lord mean to do ? The next verse tells us, and very awful is the message. "I have long time holden My peace ; I have been still, and refrained Myself. Now will I cry like a travailing woman ; I will destroy and devour (or swallow up, or sup up, margin) at once." The 15th verse shows the national destruction of Europe will be utter and complete. Such is the prospect. The Times wants the European Concert. The Lord decides for the stirring up of European jealousy and war. The Times talks of peace and safety if Europe will only do its duty. The Bible shows us that the Lord Himself has planned the whole matter out, and has resolved to frustrate all the combinations of the statesmen, and to bring confusion—nay, complete destruction upon the polities of Europe, and that as by the fiery flames of war. That the Times sees the danger of the crisis, if only the jealousies be stirred up and Europe decides "to do nothing," is shown by such sentences as the following :—

> Germany and Austria (it says) have acknowledged with England that the only way to secure the peace of the East is by exerting the moral weight of Europe with firm and persistent pressure, and they have co-operated with England in giving that policy effect. If the question is now to be re-opened, Europe, warned by a previous failure, and now apprised of its causes, will take care to avoid a similar result. If a fresh appeal is to be made to the mediation of the Powers, that appeal must be final. The question is no longer one which can safely be left to settle itself. To do so would inevitably end in an open conflict between Turkey and Greece, the very result which Europe has striven and is still determined to avert. The only way to avert it is to maintain the European Concert.

We are quite sure that the crisis about to come on the world will be sudden as well as disastrous. Up to the very moment, men will, like the Times, be dreaming of "peace and safety," if only the European Concert be maintained ; or if only some other event should happen which the Lord means shall not happen. For what said St. Paul in 1 Thess. v. 3? When writing of "the times and seasons," he declared the day of the Lord would come as "a thief in the night." "For when they shall say peace and safety," then "sudden destruction cometh upon them as travail upon a woman with child, and they shall not escape." Let us, then, thank God for our Identity and origin, since that day shall "not overtake us as a thief." We, brethren, are not in darkness, that it should do so. "We are the children of the light and the children of the day. We are not of the night, nor of darkness" (1 Thess. v. 4, 5). Israel, therefore, praise ye the Lord. For even the most ungrateful among us surely can see we have the most pressing cause to do so.

Digitized by Google

IDENTITY DIFFICULTIES ANSWERED.

(Continued from page 375, Vol. IV.)

PART XII.

WILL THE CONVERSION OF THE "HOUSE OF ISRAEL" TAKE PLACE BEFORE OR AFTER CHRIST COMES?

OUR friends are often greatly exercised by this difficulty, and our opponents make much capital of it. Mr. Wilkinson and others strenuously oppose us on the ground that the Scriptures declare Israel of the Ten Tribes are to "return" in an unconverted state, and be brought to the Lord after their gathering to Him in the Holy Land—ergo, the British cannot, they say, be Israel, since they are (everyone allows) a "Christian nation," conspicuous in good works for Christ (see p. 362, BANNER, No. 193). We have often opposed these arguments, pointing to Hosea i. 10, as showing that Ten-Tribed Israel are to be called "the sons of the living God," or a Christian, nay, "the Christian nation," in the very place where their Identity, or Hebrew origin was in Hosea's days destined in the then future to be denied. "In the place where it shall be said to them" (to the Ten-Tribed Israelites) "Lo-Ammi" (or they are NOT God's people, as Wilkinson, "Clericus," and divers others have said, and are repeating to-day) "there" (in that very spot) "it shall be said to them sons of the living God!" or "Christian Israel!" We have also pointed to Isaiah xxiv. 15, as proof of Israel's Christian character in exile; to Isa. xxvii. 6, and many other similar texts to prove that in exile, theirs is to be, by prophetic destiny, the function as to the evangelisation and amelioration of the condition of the whole earth; thus evidencing their "Christian" character, as the "redeemed" and "saved" portion of the Tribes of Israel.

We wish now to point to an argument adduced by the Rev. C. W. Hickson in his address at the monthly meeting of the Bristol Anglo-Israel Association, held at his own parish schoolroom on Friday, September 10, 1880. "In Acts v. 31," said Mr. Hickson, "the Lord Jesus is represented by St. Peter, speaking under inspiration, as "Him whom God hath exalted with His right hand to be a prince and a Saviour for to give repentance to Israel and forgiveness of sins." Here then is a fact stated, and the consequence. The Lord "hath been exalted with God's right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour." For what purpose? "To give repentance to Israel." Which Israel? The Jews? Nay! to this hour He has done nothing of the sort! To them "repentance" has not been granted. They have resisted grace! To whom then? To the British, "He hath given repentance and forgiveness of sins," as He has to no other nation under the sun, especially since our blessed Reformation. What then? Has He substituted Gentile British for Israel? Then the Scripture in question is broken! But as that is impossible, the proper conclusion is, that the British, to whom both the prescribed blessings have been given, "repentance and forgiveness of sins," are Israel of the Ten Tribes! Failing that, the conclusion to which we are shut up, is that the Lord hath been exalted, but has failed to fulfil the object He Himself proposed, which was to give to Israel, not to Gentiles, "forgiveness and repentance of sins." "But if our opponents are right," continued Mr. Hickson, "this repentance is to be accorded to Israel after the Lord returns to the earth. Then it is clear, the blessing in that case will not be granted as the promise states—namely, while the Lord is 'exalted' as a Prince and a Saviour by God's right hand (Acts ii. 33)—but after He leaves that position of exaltation, as a Prince and a Saviour, and comes down on earth again. This does not carry out the idea expressed in Acts v. 31, and we must reject the conclusion."

So far the Rev. C. W. Hickson. We beg to add an argument taken from Ephes. iv. 8, and Psa. lxviii. 18, which corroborates his, and shows its cogency. Therein the Lord is declared to have "ascended up on high," to have led captivity captive, and given gifts unto men. What gifts? Why the very same gifts St. Peter named, "repentance and remission of sins to Israel," and all the other blessings and benefits of His passion, which He died, rose again, and ascended up on high, to secure for His redeemed people, even for British-Israel. But let the reader observe, it was while the Lord was and is "ascended up on High," and not after His descent, He gave that catalogue of gifts which St. Paul mentions as among the purchases of His blood in Ephes. iv. 11, et seq. The Lord died for Israel, He came to redeem His people (Luke i. 68; xxiv. 21), and He who spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, "how shall He not with Him also freely give US all the things?" (Rom. viii. 32.) The chief among "all the things," connected with redemption are "repentance and remission of sins." These are very specially promised, as we know, to Israel only; and we British having received these gifts, nationally, but no other nation having done so, we must be Israel, or these Scriptures are not only all broken, but the Lord has ascended up on high, and failed to carry out the objects He set before Himself to do, when He so ascended, all which, God forbid! The statement of God's Word then accords with patent facts. The Lord is exalted up on high, thence He has bestowed on His people British-Israel of the Ten Tribes according to His promise, "repentance and remission of sins," and the present Israelite difficulty is solved by the conclusion that the Ten Tribes conversion is destined to take place before the Lord's coming, even NOW.

(To be continued.)

TIME IN THE ANTE-CHAMBER PASSAGES.

BY JAMES SIMPSON.

IN a late communication to the BANNER, I endeavoured to illustrate some geometrical properties belonging to the whole length of these passages, whereby a very exact expression both for the Coffer's contents and the earth's mean density number was obtained in two independent ways. The assumed floor-length = 329·97 Great Pyramid-inches, is precisely the length as measured by Professor Smyth, whose numbers are:—East side, 330·3; West side, 330·3, British-inches, =329·970 Pyramid-inches. His other measures, not of the floor, but taken near base of walls, are 330·3, 330·2, 330·3, and 330·3, whose only bearing on the matter is to shew that any minute alteration required upon the former should be rather on the minus than on the plus side. The two propositions attached to this floor-length were: (1) That when used as a divisor of the length of the Grand Gallery, the result is at once the ratio of the earth's density to that of water; and (2) That when divided by 7, 8, and 9, the product of the three quotients is the Coffer's contents, from which again the density number is directly derivable. Any alteration of the floor-length would operate by increasing the one result, while it diminished the other, or vice versâ; and, in order that the two results may agree absolutely, it will be found by a simple algebraic resolution that the length, when stated more accurately, must be= 329·9643; agreeing as perfectly with the measures as could be desired, or almost imagined. The density number represented by this length (pursuant, of course, to either proposition) is 5·702435; and the Coffer's contents, 71,280·44.

I find the following curious reference to this floor-length in the dimensions of the Ante-Chamber, which I do not remember to have seen noticed, viz.:—Sum of length, breadth, and height of Ante-Chamber, in whole inches=length of horizontal passages; while the sum of the odd fractions over and above whole inches, gives the elevation of the King's Chamber floor above the passage floor; a small quantity which we have shewn cause for considering = ·839 inches.

Length of Ante-Chamber	= 116·	+ ·260	Pyramid-inches.
Height of „	= 149·	+ ·440	„
Breadth of „ (at roof)	= 65·	+ ·139	„
Sums	= 330·	·839	„

This result is, at least, curious, when it is remembered that the length of the Ante-Chamber forms part of the floor-length, and that the remaining parts have their various lengths fixed independently.

In dealing with the geometry of these passages, it seemed proper to make use of the undivided length from the edge of the Step to the edge of the King's Chamber floor (and in passing it may be observed that, adding the said floor-length to the breadth of the Step at its edge, we seem to get precisely the length of the King's Chamber floor = 412·13. Thus: Breadth of Grand Gallery above South doorway = 82·2 British-inches; but at 1,800″ from North wall, 82·3; at Step edge, say 82·24; and 330·3 + 82·24 = 412·54—British-inches = 412·31 Pyramid-inches). But, in regard to chronology, the Step-length has already been taken account of, or should be allowed for in any estimate of the chronological length of the Gallery; leaving, therefore, only the portion beyond, or the two low passages and intervening Ante-Chamber, to be dealt with for subsequent time reckoning. Of the presence of Mr. H. G. Guinness's "Messianic Cycle" of about 33·6 years in the Gallery, both as a factor of its entire length and by individual representation at its North and South ends, we have already had evidence; and according to the same accomplished author, its reign is not confined to the present, or Christian, or Gospel age; but is to be traced as a governing period all along the strand of human history, from the very beginning of the Edenic dispensation down to the final consummation of the ages now fast approaching. If so, we may naturally expect to find the said period re-appearing in that final, and in part transitional, portion of human time figured as intervening between the Grand Gallery and the final Chamber, between the present expiring age and the advent of the millennial glory for which creation waits. In the premier portion of this interval—viz., in the first low passage, we do not find the 33·6 period, because the length of that has already been credibly shown by Mr. Hartwell A. Powers to be one-seventh of 365·242; or to have a significance in mathematical as well as in civil chronology. The next halting-place Southward is the South end of the Ante-Chamber. To this the distance from the Gallery is 168·44 Pyramid-inches, which, divided by the Pyramid 5, gives 33·688, not differing much from the number sought. There remains the second low passage, whose length = about 100·653, when divided by 3, yields 33·551; and the whole length, from Grand Gallery to King's Chamber, when divided by eight, gives again 33·636. This number 8, as Mr. Guinness's researches remind us, is connected in Scripture symbolisation more with redemption and the restitution of all things than with the first creation, of which seven was the proper and significant emblem. It is, therefore, I think, worthy of careful consideration that the Grand Gallery length of 1881·6 = 56 times 33·6, is immediately followed by a final or consummating portion of just one-seventh its own length—an eighth, or octave, portion following upon seven similar portions (and each of these consisting of 8 times 33·6), as the seven days of the creation-commemorating week, are followed by a redemption-celebrating Sabbath. And after that, the Great Pyramid's roll of progressive human history being ended, there shall, apparently be time of trial no longer, but the full fruition of Messiah's long-expected, glorious, terrestrial reign.

Edinburgh, December 13, 1880.

"THE BRIDE OF CHRIST."

"THOUGHTS ON THE BOOK OF REVELATION AND THE CHURCH OF CHRIST." BY THE REV. ADOLPH SAPHIR.

BY JEZREEL.

WE find him writing as follows, concerning the Church, both under the figure of the "body of Christ" and that of "His bride." Of the former he says:—

"Christ and the believers constitute the Church. As all the members of the body, separated from the Head, are lifeless, so believers, apart from Christ, do not form the Church. Christ and His people are one; He, the Head in heaven, and we, the members on earth, joined by the Spirit, are one man. Christ lives, speaks, and acts in us, and hence, though living on earth in the flesh and paying tribute to Cæsar, the congregation of Christ's disciples, in its nature and vitality, is an enigma to the world."

Thus harmoniously does this gifted teacher unfold the various and blessed truths conveyed in the diverse, but not contradictory, types and figures with which the Word abounds for our instruction in the deep things of God. The headship of Christ as the second Adam, the Lord from heaven, and the union of all believers to Him as their living Head, and to one another in Him, however blessed a truth, does not militate against the equally, if not still more, blessed truth typified by the marriage tie, so especially dwelt upon in Ephesians v., as the type of union in love rather than of life from the Head and union in service, through the one Spirit that pervades and animates the whole, as in the Scriptures concerning the Lord as Head of the Church, and we as "members of His body." For though this expression is introduced in one verse of Eph. v., it is not as intimating the union of the head and members in the man, but evidently union in the sense of the marriage relationship, shown by the distinct reference to it as instituted in Paradise, before sin and sorrow had marred the perfect fellowship between the man and his wife in communion with their God, and as intended ever to subsist, superior to every other relationship and claim (Eph. v. 31); as implied also in the preceding verse: "For we are members of His (the Lord's) body." For it is added, "of His flesh and of His bones," even as Adam had said of the woman taken out of his side during his sleep, typical of death: "This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh"—the companion God had given him as an helpmeet for him, even as the Father has given the Church to Christ, one with Him, through His death and resurrection. But can we be at a loss to decide whether this type of husband and wife pertains to Israel in the flesh, accepted of the Lord in the age to come, or to the Church of God?

Is not the inspired comment of the apostle unmistakably clear? "This is a great mystery, but I speak concerning Christ and the Church." Millennial Israel cannot surely be contemplated in so express a statement, however it embrace all believers, both of the present and past dispensations, whose faith and hope have been in the promised One, the seed of the woman, who should bruise the serpent's head.

Combining the testimony of the devout and deeply-taught Hebrew brother, from whom we have quoted, with your equally lucid and Scriptural statements as to the "identity of the prophetic and apocalyptic bride," what more can we desire to confirm us in the truth of our Israelitish origin?

"All who cannot easily consent to take from the Church the best and dearest and holiest title which the Lord has bestowed on her, that of His 'Bride,' 'the Lamb's wife'—a title, moreover, little suited, it appears to me, to a people who have denied and rejected Him in this dispensation of His long suffering grace, during which He is so appropriately symbolised (Rev. v.) as a 'Lamb that had been slain in the midst of the throne;' not His own throne, but that of the Majesty on high, connected with which the Church is also seen rendering homage and praise for her redemption, as symbolised by the adoration of the crowned elders and the living creatures 'in the midst of the throne and round about the throne,' aptly representing the place and calling of those 'whose life is now hid with Christ in God, waiting till He who is their life shall appear, that they may appear with Him in glory,' even with Him who 'loved the Church and gave Himself for it, that He might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the Word, that He might present it to Himself a glorious Church, without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish.' And what is here stated of the glory and purity of the Church? 'Subject to Christ, as the wives are to be to their own husbands in everything; for the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the Head of the Church,' is said also of the Bride of Psa. xlv. She is 'all glorious within, her clothing is of wrought gold,' signifying the divine holiness in which she stands at the right hand of her Lord, in the day of His power and glory and majesty. She had 'hearkened and considered, and inclined her ear' when called 'to forget her own people and her Father's house,' to share in the rejection of her Lord, when 'He came to His own, and His own received Him not.' But how strange would such an exhortation be if addressed to the Jewish nation on their return in the latter days, to seek the Lord their God and David their king. Quite applicable, however, to that portion of them who 'first trusted in Christ,' the Churches of Judæa that believed, persecuted by the children of the bondwoman, 'Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children' as 'the remnant according to the election of grace' have been throughout the age, up to the present day; and as all 'born of the Spirit,' whether Jew or Gentile, ever are by that which is born 'after the flesh.'

Digitized by Google

"The Apostolic Church, scattered by persecution, carried unto the Gentiles the blessings of the new covenant, and their testimony early reached their brethren of the house of 'backsliding Israel,' who had been cast out amongst the Gentiles; and there, in 'the North country,' 'the wilderness of the peoples' were they 'betrothed unto the Lord by faith,' whereas the Jews, as a nation, will only be converted unto Him by sight, when He whom they pierced comes forth in glorious majesty to reign on the throne of David, as 'David's son' and 'David's Lord.'

"Meanwhile, the 'Israel of God,' of both houses, have been 'His witnesses'—the witnesses of His grace to the ends of the earth; and the once 'barren and desolate wife,' the Abrahamic covenant of free and unconditional blessing, 'which the law that was 430 years after could not disannul, but which had remained, as it were, fruitless, whilst Israel was 'kept under the law, shut up to the faith that was afterwards to be revealed'—this covenant of free grace, represented by 'Jerusalem which is above and is free, and is the mother of us all'—has, indeed, had 'many more children than the married wife; and although this 'holy city' has been 'trodden down,' 'tossed and afflicted and not comforted,' persecuted by those that are 'born after the flesh' (compare Isa. liv., Gal. iv., Rev. xi.), the bright visions of apostles and prophets will yet be realised by her children when manifested in glory with Him for whom they wait from heaven, when 'He shall send the rod of His strength out of Zion, ruling in the midst of His enemies, and His people (millennial Israel) be made willing in the day of His power' (Psa. cx.)

"Yes; the prophetic and apocalyptic Bride are one; 'undeniably so, and may every scribe instructed unto the kingdom of God know how to bring forth out of his treasure things new and old,' unfolding in the light of the New the truths of the Old Testament, not only concerning their Lord, but concerning themselves. 'The Israel of God,' though one with all the redeemed family, partakers with them of 'all spiritual blessings in heavenly places,' can and should so read and understand the Scriptures as to rejoice in their peculiar privilege, as 'the appointed teachers of mankind,' not only in the past and at the beginning of this dispensation, but throughout the ages; the elect of Judah first; their brethren of Israel then taking up their inspired testimony, and made the heralds and exponents of it to all nations; whilst 'the children after the flesh, the Jewish nation in unbelief, continue to reject Him of whom Moses and the prophets testify. Israel and the Church are truly the key to the right solution of the Identity of the prophetic and apocalyptic Bride; not as viewed apart from one another, but as identified in the one glorious body of which Christ is the Head, as 'the husband is the head of the wife,' one with Him in life and love and glory, the object of 'a love stronger than death, and which many waters could not quench,' triumphing over sin, Satan, and the grave, to redeem His blood-bought bride, and to unite her for ever to Himself in the bonds of an everlasting love, a truth of all others most precious and which could only be adequately conveyed by that type par excellence of 'the bride,' 'the Lamb's wife.'"

[Extracted from the "Hebrew Christian Witness," 1873, page 430.]

PROGRESS.

By E. B. Woodruff.

I write to inform you that we are going on very well at Manchester, and that rapid progress has been made since the establishment of an Association here. Each member does his duty faithfully, and spreads the glorious news of our Identity with Lost Israel with vigour and untiring energy and zeal.

I may say that I am completely astonished at the rapidity with which the belief in our Israelite origin has spread, in spite of the bold opposition we have had to contend against.

Mr. Tudor (who works hard in the cause) and myself called on one of our ministers to see him on the subject, and to ask him for the use of his school-room. He refused at first, and spurned the idea of a "mongrel nation" like ours posing as Lost Israel. He afterwards consented, when we had discussed the subject of the Identity for about an hour with him, and informed us that he was only "born that morning," and had never heard of the subject in his life. At the lecture, which Mr. Tudor gave, the minister took the chair, and there before members of his congregation confessed that he had never correctly understood his Bible before, and showed how even language (particularly the Welsh) bore testimony to the fact of our being Israel. He is now foremost in the cause. Verily, "blindness in part hath happened unto Israel."

Another of my friends tells me that he would have been an atheist had it not been for W. Carpenter's work on the subject. Let this testimony be another incentive to labour patiently in the cause.

EXTRACT FROM LORD BEACONSFIELD'S NEW WORK, "ENDYMION."

"The Semites are unquestionably a great race, for among the few things in this world which appear to be certain, nothing is more sure than that they invented our alphabet. But the Semites now exercise a vast influence over affairs by their smallest though most peculiar family, the Jews. There is no race gifted with so much tenacity, and such skill in organisation. These qualities have given them an unprecedented hold over property and illimitable credit. As you advance in life, and get experience in affairs, the Jews will cross you everywhere. They have long been stealing into our secret diplomacy, which they have almost appropriated; in another quarter of a century they will claim their share of open government."—Chapter xx.

WORDS FROM THE "ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE" AND FROM A CIRCULAR OF AN IRISH SOCIETY.

By L. P.

"Not many years ago Celtic antiquities and Celtic philology seemed almost to rival the identification of the Ten Lost Tribes as an easy method for upsetting the balance of the human intellect. By some mysterious law, whoever devotes his attention to the missing Israelites is apparently doomed in the end to such confusions as to find the men of Dan in Aryan Ulster, and discovers the descendants of Manasseh among the Teutonic settlers of East Anglia. Similarly, a quarter of a century back, whoever undertook to investigate the early history of Ireland, Wales, or Scotland seemed predestined to wreck his intelligence over the claims of the Welsh language to be the original dialect of Adam in Paradise, and the futile attempt to deduce the English vocabulary from impossible Gælic sources."

Such is the commencement of an article in the St. James's Gazette, for November 20. We really do not wonder at the "upsetting of the balance of the writer's intellect" when he gets into such a muddle and mess of ideas as is here exhibited. His sense of possessing correct information leads him to pronounce dogmatically that Ulster men are Aryan, of which he gives no proofs, and he is so ignorant of the writings of those he attacks—as believers in our Israelitish origin—that he accuses us of believing "Manasseh to be among the Teutonic settlers of East Anglia." Now, the fact is, we hold Manasseh to be away beyond the "Western sea," and we deny that East Anglia is Teutonic!

The St. James's article is a notice of a work called "Celtic Scotland," and it says,—

"Mr. Skene begins with a survey of the condition of Scotland in the reign of Alexander III. The dynasty of Malcolm Canmore, of which that king was the last direct representative, had gradually consolidated the various scattered tribes—Pictish, Scottish, Cymric, Scandinavian, and English—into a single feudal monarchy; and under Alexander III. the consolidation was complete."

We should say wanderers with the Scandinavians, but no more Scandinavians than Teutons! The reviewer continues,—

"The Kings of the Scots had slowly absorbed the Picts, obtained English Lothian and Cymric Strathclyde as fiefs from the West Saxon overlords, conquered the semi-independent province of Moray, and incorporated the Scandinavian districts of Caithness and Sutherland, long held on a nominal tenure by the Norwegian earls of Orkney. By these successive steps the chieftains of a small Irish colony on the coast of Argyle had welded together a considerable feudal monarchy; and the war of independence, which put a family of Norman barons firmly on the throne, was destined to unite the various ethnical elements into a single nationality. By the period of that great struggle Scotland had, roughly speaking, attained the limits which she has ever since retained; but two races and languages still divided the country between them. The Picts and Scots had so far coalesced that they re-appear as a single Gælic people; and the Scandinavians had left no permanent mark upon the mainland; so that the whole of the Highlands might be considered as Celtic in stock and tongue. In the Lowlands, on the other hand, the English (whom Mr. Skene persists in calling Saxons, though no Saxon is ever known to have settled in Britain North of the Wash) had fairly colonised the Eastern half of the country; while Mr. Skene believes that in the Western half they had slowly ousted the Cymric race. At any rate, the English language—which Mr. Skene chooses to call Saxon—was spoken over the whole Lowlands, from the border to the Highland line, as well in Cymric Strathclyde as in English Lothian and Anglicised Fife. It is with the Northern or Celtic half of this heterogeneous kingdom that the author has henceforth to deal."

In the above quotation we read what fully bears out a remark of our own on an extract from M. Leon Fauchet—Banner 201, page 434—and shews how masses of apparently distinctly different tribal origin were incorporated one with another, never again, as yet, to admit any other people to be one with themselves, after they in later times became subject to little Benjamin, their ruler. The Jews are still to be joined with and to us; but that moment has not yet arrived.

The article in the Gazette, speaking of the book it is noticing, proceeds to say,—

"Mr. Skene begins by describing the seven ancient provinces of Scotland, with their Mormaers or earls; for there were always seven, however difficult to square the number might be; just as the early English kingdoms have to be twisted somehow into a heptarchy, whether the actual figures at any particular time were three or ten. Celtic schematism requires the sacred number, and it crops up almost as invariably as the three of the Welsh Triads. Mr. Skene then goes on to inquire into the nature and constitution of the old Celtic Tribe in Ireland, where the Brehon laws allow us to catch it in its purest form. He next looks for its traces in Wales, and finally works out its position in early Scotland. All this portion of his work forms a valuable contribution to the history of primitive Aryan institutions."

"Aryan" again! It is very easy to make a bold assertion, whether true or false, trusting to the ignorance of readers, or their modest deference to those who assume to know better than themselves; but let Mr. Skene or his reviewer give their reasons for the assertions concerning Aryan origins and prove their case; not resting satisfied with clapping a name over the mouths of questioners or opponents and supposing they can thereby silence opposition or convince doubters. In the passage just quoted it is remarkable that reference should be made to the attachment of the Celtic Scotch, to the sacred number seven, equally to be found amongst the early English. We are surprised that this singular coincidence of feeling connected with the widely separated "Aryan" peoples, as this writer calls them, does not lead him to pause and question how this comes to pass; but it is apparently deemed of no significance, at any rate by the reviewer.

We have heard it stated that the "sacred number" and seventh division of time were found amongst the earliest inhabitants of Britain, but with no other uncivilised nation. We are not competent to say if this be so, nor whether the sacred number held a prominent place among the Teutons and Scandinavians of old. But, even if this were so, we should suggest that it was the probable result of close and long continued contact and intercourse with the sacred nation of Israel. Sacred because elected by God to be His chosen people, His first-born Ephraim.

Just at the time the article we have been quoting from was attracting our attention, a paper came into our hands, published by the Irish Society for promoting the scriptural education of the Irish-speaking population through the medium of their own language. The appeal—for such it is—commences, "The ancient Church of Ireland was a missionary Church, and to it a large part of Europe was indebted for the knowledge of the Christian faith." Later on the paper says, "The gifted Dr. W. Pakenham Walsh, now Bishop of Ossory, has, in the following brief but eloquent sentences, reviewed that early history:—

"For three centuries after the time of St. Patrick, Ireland was the favoured abode of learning and religion. Historians of different creeds and countries agree in pointing her out as the University of Europe, to which multitudes of students flocked from various lands to receive instruction in Divine and human wisdom. Even so late as the eleventh century, we find the Irish celebrated as "a nation famous for the Word of God."

"But not only was Ireland famous as a depository of Scriptural truth, she was also the refulgent centre from which the beams of Gospel truth were diffused throughout a great part of the Continent. When the nations of Germany and Northern Europe were sunk in heathenism, it was from Ireland principally that they received the knowledge of God.

"It was by means of her missionaries that two-thirds of Saxon England, and a great part of Scotland were converted to the Christian faith.

"'Truth,' says Bishop Wordsworth, 'requires us to declare that St. Austin from Italy ought not to be called the Apostle of England, and much less the Apostle of Scotland; but that title ought to be given to St. Columba and his followers from the Irish school of Iona.'

"It was through the same instrumentality that all Belgium, Switzerland, and the chief parts of Germany were brought from serving dumb idols to serve the living God. Walk through Britain, from the Thames to the Tweed, from Lindisfarne to Iona, and ask from whom did it receive the Gospel? and you will learn that it was from Aidan, Finan, and Columba, the Irish missionaries. Cross over to France, and extend your journey to Cologne, and ask the inhabitants, 'Whence did they receive the Gospel?' and they will tell you it was from St. Kilian, an Irish missionary.

"Pass on to Wurzburg, and ask the same question, and you will get the same reply; and they will point out to you the tomb of St. Kilian, who was martyred in their midst for his fidelity to God, and whose ashes lie in their great cathedral. Extend your journey to Salzburg, and ask who built their noble church, and first preached to them the Word of life? and they will tell you of Virgil, the Irish Bishop, who, with seven others, went thither on a missionary journey in the eighth century. Traverse the banks of the Rhine; enter the depths of the Black Forest, where formerly dwelt the savage Alemanni, and ask from whose lips did they first hear the Gospel's joyful sound, and you will be told of Fridolin, who, on account of His fame as a missionary was called "The Traveller," and whose remains are buried in the Abbey of Sekingen, where he ended his labours. Pass on through Batavia, Friesland, and Westphalia, and you will find that they were converted to the faith by the preaching of Willibrord, who received his education in Ireland. Then mount the Alps, and climb into the heart of Switzerland; look down from the mountains upon Constance and Zurich, and inquire who it was that first preached Christ among these hills and valleys? and a thousand voices will tell you of St. Gall, who laid the foundation of that noble church among the everlasting mountains, and has bequeathed his name to one of the Swiss cantons. Go into Italy itself, that haughty land which would claim us as her children in the faith; and you will find that so far from being the source whence Ireland derived its religious teaching, she was herself indebted to those sacred fountains which welled up from the Irish soil, for the first rills of truth that flowed amongst her barren mountains. It was to Columbanus she owed the conversion of Lombardy, and it was he who planted the standard of the cross at Pavia, Tarentum, and Bobio, amongst the Roman Apennines."

We quote the foregoing to show that Israel, as represented by the Celts of Ireland, were early witnesses for God, and preachers of the good tidings of salvation to other nations, as well as to their more ignorant Israelitish brethren. Surely this is a glorious proof that they were indeed of those who God had appointed to bear amongst the heathen the knowledge of the Redeemer of the world (Micah v. 7; Isa. xxvii. 6; Matt. xxviii. 19).

We do not suppose the Canaanite portion of the population of Ireland to have borne part in these missionary efforts, and we would here take the opportunity of saying, we imagine there is confusion in some minds concerning those who are all equally styled Irish. Under that name we contend that there are two totally different peoples. One descended from the Celts and one or more of the Tribes of Israel. The other, the offspring of those nations whom Israel disobediently spared, and who were, in consequence, to prove in after times pricks and thorns. Doubtless, we suppose, there has been much intermingling of the two by marriage. Some Israelites, in all probability, casting in their lot with the ancient enemies of their House, and becoming by degrees part and parcel of the latter; degraded and bereft of the promised privileges of their ancestry. On the other hand, it is to be supposed that many of Canaan's sons and daughters became incorporated with Israel. We see provision to meet such cases, as in those of immigrants into our land of other strangers (Ezek. xlvii. 22, 23).

If these are facts, then the circumstances of the Celtic descendants having been less mixed up with the other Israelitish tribes than the latter have been with each other may, we consider, possibly account for marked peculiarites of character and disposition which seem to distinguish the Celtic descendants, more especially those of Ireland, from their English brothers.

As regards the Canaanite branch of the Irish, we confess we are glad to know that barbarians who can wreak vengeance for supposed injuries received at the hands of their generous masters, by cruelties inflicted on poor dumb animals, are no blood relations of ours, beyond the common claim of descent from Noah.

HAVE WE A RIGHT TO OCCUPY CYPRUS?

By Major Nickle.

"Queen Elizabeth and Cyprus.—It is of some interest to know that Queen Elizabeth once claimed the sovereignty of Cyprus. This has recently been brought to light by the discovery that the coat-of-arms of the island is incorporated with the arms of that queen on her monument in Westminster Abbey. History tells us that she contested the usurpation of the Turks when they took the island from the Venetians in the war of 1570—1573. It would be interesting to discover on what ground she based her title as potentate of the territory—probably on the conquest of the island by Richard I., whose Queen Berengaria is famous in story. Visitors to the North aisle of the chapel of King Henry VII. will see on the queen's tomb a paper indicating where the arms of Cyprus may be found. The frieze at the West end of the tomb has five shields, of which that in the middle contains the quartering of Cyprus. The whole shield has France and England impaling quarterly of six—viz., 1. Luxemburgh; 2. Old France; 3. Cyprus; 4. Ursius; 5. St. Paul; and (6) Widville. The blazon for Cyprus is barry of ten, argent and azure; over all a lion rampant gules, crowned or. Those who have access to the seven sheets of the beautiful drawings now in the British Museum, made by Wm. Camden, Clarencieux King of Arms, of the funeral procession of Queen Elizabeth, and which are engraved in Vetusta Monumenta, will see in the sixth sheet the funeral chariot, flanked by twelve gentlemen bearing heraldic banners of dominion and pretension, of which the fifth in the lower row contains the central shield at the head of the tomb, with the quartering for Cyprus as before indicated. This shows that the right of the Queen to the title of Queen of Cyprus was recognised and legalised by the College of Heralds of that day, at the head of which College were Sir William Dethick as Garter, and William Camden as Clarencieux King of Arms, under whose skill and taste were executed the forty-one shields of arms so beautifully carved by Maximilian Poutram, who was employed by King James I. to make the tomb. This interesting discovery is due to the industry and antiquarian research of Mr. Henry Poole, the Master Mason of the Abbey."

(Vide "The Leisure Hour," 1878, page 720.)

Digitized by Google

EPHRAIM'S MESSAGE TO MANASSEH.

To my Fellow-Israelites in Brooklyn,—

Dear Brethren,—Our friend, Mr. George W. Greenwood, has begged me to send you a few words of greeting and encouragement. I do so with the greatest pleasure. I am greatly delighted to hear you intend to build a church in your city, where Identity truths will be constantly advocated from the pulpit. That project will have my warmest support in the Banner; and I hope will be liberally responded to by our men of wealth in these "Isles of the West." And it is the least we can do!—for your project is one which we are not far enough advanced here even to think of. Your example puts us Ephraimites to utter shame. Here we are still fighting our way to convince the blind and the deaf that God's lost people, the Eleven Tribes of Israel, are not utterly annihilated. You are so many that you fill churches; your ministers dare to preach God's truth regarding His lost ones; and you propose to go to great expense to build a Christian temple, where it shall be proclaimed to the still blind and deaf about you, that "Lost Israel is found." All honour to Brooklyn Israelites! May God prosper your handiwork. May He give you great success in your undertaking; and may the new church, when built, be used for His glory.

My friends, you will have read and heard that Our Identity is still in its early stage of progress here. We are contending with many adversaries; and Satan is very active to prevent this truth having free course. The Rev. B. Wrey Savile, who has written an admirable work to prove our Identity, and who has contributed many papers to the Banner, has turned his back on himself, and now alleges "Our Identity is a delusion," one he has been under himself. May God open his eyes soon to perceive the great and terrible error he has fallen into.

In spite of these drawbacks, in which we see here Satan's hand plainly exhibited, we have much to encourage us, both in Great Britain, abroad in the great colonial empire of Israel, and in Manasseh, your own great country. The advance of our Identity—like the tide—never ceases. It is ever advancing, working underground and unseen, it is ever and anon appearing at the surface; and will soon blaze forth on all sides, and cause men to exclaim, "What hath God wrought?" Meanwhile, being in the thick of this great fight, with clergy frowning on us, the Bishops of the flock against us, the great ones of the earth smiling at us for our alleged folly, and the masses indifferent—we need and ask your prayers. We know victory is assured, and men shall, ere long, in all parts of this great empire, recognise their glorious pedigree; but till that moment arrive, we are struggling in what seems a failing cause, though the Lord Jehovah Himself is on our side. Brethren of America, pray for us, that our faith fail not. Hold up our arms, that the fight wax not faint and feeble.

I am glad to tell you, in return for the good news your Mr. Greenwood gives me of your progress, that much is being done here to further this great cause. Lectures and meetings are being held everywhere, and generally with success. The Banner and Israel's Hope and Destiny are advancing in public estimation and circulation. Infidels are being brought here, as with you, to give up their defiance of the living God. Godly men and women are finding God's Word a new Book, full of new and glorious light, beating right down on their own very selves as the "Israel of God." Military and naval men open God's Word now with delight, and find it is their own Book—the history of England and of America; the record of a people who are the chosen ones, the heritage of the great Jehovah, who is the Redeemer of Israel. The "Gates," the colonial and the heathen empires of Great Britain, the mighty house of your great and independent people (our elder brother, Manasseh)—all these are recognised now as the outcome of the Hebrew prophecies; and men take the Bible to their hearts as their own Book, and learn from it the deeper lessons of their own lost state as sinners, and the glorious remedy through the precious blood of Jesus. Many such testimonies have I had from those who live to thank God that they have been brought to read of our Identity, and to see that grand truth of God for themselves. One point connected with our glorious subject I hope you regard with the deepest interest and the most intense longing, as I do. I mean the approaching outpouring of God's Holy Spirit on our masses. Without that, the Identity were positively of no permanent benefit to our Anglo-Saxon races. Israel of old were never benefitted by their mere racial distinction as "God's chosen ones." It never made them godly. It never cured them of their rebellion against their Maker, their murmuring and their mad idolatry. Our origin, of itself, is positively hurtful, without the outpouring of the Spirit to convert our race's stubborn hearts to Christ. Given that, all is gained. Without it, all our Israelitish blessings, we should, by our perversities, turn to curses, as it has been in times past, and is greatly the case to-day.

Let us, then, earnestly pray that God will give our two nations at once, before the end of 1881, the mighty blessings promised to the House of Israel in Jer. xxxi. 33, and Heb. viii. 10. We pray for that in the Communion Service of the Church of England, in the final response, after the tenth commandment has been recited. But we do so in our ignorance, never dreaming it will be literally granted to us as a nation, or even desiring it. What it may be with you, I know not; but, nationally, we do not ever pray here for the universal outpouring; though sure I am we ought to do so. Our Associations are beginning the good habit. Let us urge on you and your societies in connection with our Identity, never to meet without putting up the petition that the "new covenant," as described by Jeremiah and St. Paul in identical words, may be granted to the American and British nations—to the whole Anglo-Saxon race in fact—for Christ's sake, in accordance with the promises.

Now, friends, I conclude. I have been asked to write to you a letter of encouragement, and I have best done so by asking you for your prayers, for the most stupendous boon man ever can hope to enjoy at the hands of his gracious Maker, and which our God has promised to the House of Israel only. May God abundantly bless all our efforts in His cause, and speedily grant us all our desires in reference to our Identity, causing thereby this best blessing to fall, not only on Israel, but on the House of Judah, and on the Gentile world as well. May American Manasseh and British-Israel be ever united in the bonds of love for Christ's cause and sake, and surely I can wish for no better national gifts than these.

I remain,
Ever yours in the bonds of fellowship and love,
Philo-Israel.

Nov. 1, 1880.

EXTRACT FROM "THE CHURCHMAN,"

No. 8, May, 1880, page 158.

"A pamphlet of 120 pages, 'Phoster,' a sequel to 'Luknon,' (Simpkin, Marshall & Co.) has for its full title, 'Light Cast on the Footprints of Israel, from Medea to the British Isles.' Its author, Mr. H. P. Keighly, has adduced evidence, direct and indirect, to prove that the Ten Tribes, erroneously called Lost, have at this present day a separate and distinct national existence."

[By the Editor.—Let the reader note what the reviewer says: "The author has adduced evidence, direct and indirect, to prove," etc. We commend the words to the Rev. B. Wrey Savile, with reference to his late pamphlet and its conclusions.]

Digitized by Google

REV. JOSEPH WILD, D.D.

JOSEPH WILD was born in Lancashire, England, Nov. 6, 1836, and received his early education in the common and higher schools of his native parish. The Wilds are of an old English family, contemporaneous with the Byrons, whose estates, when first granted by the Crown, joined each other.

The father of Dr. Wild was himself a minister of the Gospel, a man of generous impulses, of a genial and kind nature, and very popular as a preacher. It is, perhaps, worthy of note that the elder Wild, like the patriarch Jacob, gave to his first-born the name of Reuben; one of his sons was also called Benjamin, while the youngest, the subject of this sketch, was called Joseph —good names for a family of Israelites. Much of the early training and pious impressions made upon the mind of Joseph was due to the kind offices of an elder sister, who seems to have exercised a wonderful influence not only upon his early life, but even in maturer age. When quite a boy he accompanied his father to the house of God, often assisting his aged sire in conducting the religious exercises. In this way he became accustomed to public speaking at a very early age. When about fourteen he was articled to a civil engineer, and spent three years in the study of that profession, during which time he was licensed as a local preacher, and became widely known as the "boy preacher." After three years spent in the study of civil engineering, he became impressed with the idea that it was his mission to preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and he accordingly concluded to fit himself by a proper course of mental training for this higher profession. These studies were carried on at Carlisle and Edinburgh, in Scotland.

Joseph Wild

Upon attaining his majority Dr. Wild followed the example common among the younger members of families living upon entailed estates, and left the parental homestead. In 1855 the Doctor landed in New York, travelled through the Southern and Western States, and then paid a visit to some friends in Toronto, Canada. It was in this city that he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, was admitted to Conference, and commenced preaching in the city of Hamilton, where he remained one year, when he determined to obtain the benefits of a thorough theological education. For this purpose he spent some years at the Concord Biblical Institute, of which Institute he is a graduate. From Concord he went to Canada, and preached one year in the town of Goderich, devoting himself the following year to study and travel in Europe.

Returning to Canada he was stationed at Orono, and after remaining two years, removed to Belleville, the seat of Albert University, where he resided between seven and eight years, winning laurels as a scholar and orator. In Belleville he was pastor of the Methodist Church, and Professor of the Orientals in the University. By his lectures and labours there he paid off a debt of over 20,000 dollars, which had embarrassed the University, and hindered its prosperity.

His health being impaired by overwork, and feeling somewhat disheartened by the loss of his library and certain valuable manuscripts in a fire, he determined to seek rest by another visit to Europe. On the eve of departure he had the honour of being selected as the Canadian delegate to the General Conference of the Methodist Church of the United States, which was held in the city of Brooklyn in 1872. During the session he was invited to preach in the Seventh Avenue M. E. Church, the pastor of which had just been elected to the Episcopate. After hearing him preach the society determined to secure him as their pastor. They gave him a call, and he accepted it.

He remained in this Church for the regular term of three years, and then accepted a call from the Union Congregational Church of Brooklyn.

It was while pastor of this Church that the Rev. Dr. Wild commenced preaching the great truths of Israel's Identity, and it is through these discourses that he is so widely known throughout the United States. His sermons were published weekly, and widely circulated. Some of them are also published in book form; one volume under the title of "The Lost Ten Tribes" has already passed through four editions, and the second, "The Future of Israel and Judah," is selling very rapidly, and two editions have been called for.

The spread of Anglo-Israelism in the United States and the strong hold which it has obtained in the city of Brooklyn, is largely due to the instrumentality of Dr. Wild. His presentation of these truths possesses the charm of novelty; they please while they instruct, and his sermons betray a wide range of study, and an intimate acquaintance with the generally received scientific theories of the day. As a preacher, he is instructive, forcible and logical, and sometimes eloquent. He is by no means a rhetorician. In his writings as well as his oral discourses he appeals more to the head than to the heart, and seeks to instruct the mind rather than please the ear. His religion is a religion founded on reason rather than the effervescent gush of an excited imagination, and as a natural consequence, the good which he has been the means of effecting is of a permanent character.

In Brooklyn, where he has been labouring for the past eight years, he is highly esteemed both as a scholar and a Christian gentleman. He has recently accepted a call to the Bond-street Congregational Church, Toronto, Canada, and is now preaching to large congregations, whom we believe he is instructing in the great truths of Israel's Identity.

We have been induced to give a portrait of Dr. Wild, in belief that it would be generally acceptable to the readers of the BANNER, from the fact that the Rev. Doctor is the most popular and eloquent advocate of Anglo-Israel truths on the American Continent, and is also widely esteemed in this country.

We are indebted to the Heir of the World, published in New York for this sketch.

Digitized by Google

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL DISCUSSION

BETWEEN THE EDITOR OF THE "CHURCH OF ENGLAND MESSENGER" (OF MELBOURNE), AND THE REV. CANON BROWNRIGG, OF LAUNCESTON, TASMANIA.

*Containing the Editor's Article on "Anglo-Israelism," Reprinted from the "Messenger," and Canon Brownrigg's Reply Thereto, which was Suppressed by the Editor.

PART I.

EXPLANATORY.

READER,—In placing before you the following pages, some explanation may be necessary. A few months ago, a writer, under the initials of "S. P. G.," contributed two articles to the Melbourne Church Messenger against Anglo-Israelism, to which I was allowed space in that journal for reply. I replied. To my reply "S. P. G." should have given an answer if he had had aught to say, and so have "closed the discussion;" but he was silent. The editor then steps in with an article "to show at what point we consider that the case on which the advocate of Anglo-Israelism rests his theory hopelessly breaks down." To that article I sent a reply, but the editor suppresses it, and publishes the following "note" in the Messenger of August 3:—

"Canon Brownrigg forwards us another long paper in answer to our summing up in the July number of this journal; but much as we should like to oblige him, we have really given all the space we can for the present afford to the Anglo-Israelite controversy. Naturally, he thinks it fair that he should be allowed to reply; but if we inserted his article, we should have to insert a rejoinder to it, which would call forth, in due course, another protest from him, and so the matter would go on interminably. Someone must have the last word, and we are only following the usual custom in such cases in claiming it for ourselves. If anyone else had a right to it, it would be 'S. P. G.,' the opener of the discussion. As we do not publish Canon Brownrigg's communication, we shall only allude here to its contents for the sake of admitting that, with regard to the passage in Jeremiah, he convinces us that our explanation, hastily given, is incorrect. His own explanation we must, at the same time say, is far-fetched and extravagant."

To the above weak and unsatisfactory apology I have sent a few lines to the Messenger, objecting to the suppression of my reply on the following grounds:—

1. That the editor entered the lists as an independent opponent, as, in fact, "another man in," and was therefore to be replied to independently of "S. P. G."

2. That my views having been directly controverted by the editor, the right to reply was clearly mine, even though the right to "close the debate" by a rejoinder belonged to the editor.

3. That the discussion is not a private one. The editor's attack having been published, became public property, and his readers were, therefore, entitled to know what (if anything) was said in reply.

4. That his reason for suppressing my reply—viz., want of space, lest other replies should be offered, is quite insufficient. That my reply, in justice to myself, and to the discussion, should have been published, after which the editor could have closed his columns against further discussion, either by a rejoinder himself, or by simply declaring them closed, and this without injustice to myself or to anyone else.

To these I now add—

5. That the editor's course is the very opposite to that which is the "usual custom" in any discussion conducted on equitable principles, inasmuch as he publishes his attack, and suppresses the reply, thus claiming for himself the first, and the last, and the only word in the matter.

Being thus excluded from the Messenger, I make my reply public in these pages, and now leave my readers to decide for themselves upon these two points—

1. Whether it was fair or unfair to exclude the reply from the columns of the Messenger, and—

2. Whether it is the "theory" or the "attack" which hopelessly breaks down.

The following is the Editor's article from the Church of England Messenger:—

ANGLO-ISRAELISM.

Canon Brownrigg and our contributor "S. P. G." have argued the case for and against Anglo-Israelism in our columns with much ability and good temper. Direct controversy, however, there has been but little, "S. P. G." having attacked certain arguments used by Mr. Hine, and Canon Brownrigg having at once abandoned the positions attacked, and contented himself with resting his theory on grounds which "S. P. G." had not touched. So far, it must be confessed "S. P. G." has the best of it in the discussion. He has obliged the other side to change their bowler. He has forced the acknowledgment from his antagonist that the writer generally regarded as the father of Anglo-Israelism, whose works are industriously circulated by the Anglo-Israel Association, is untrustworthy in many of his assertions. We will now, however, examine the theory as stated by Canon Brownrigg—only trusting that no new teacher of this persuasion will rise to repudiate Brownrigg, as Brownrigg has repudiated Hine.

The case he lays before us is this: Certain promises were made by God to Israel, which, if God is true, must be now being fulfilled. They are not fulfilled in the Jews; therefore we must look for their fulfilment in the Ten Tribes. These promises are of such a nature that the people in whom they are fulfilled must be conspicuous and easy to find, for they include supremacy among nations, an immense population, the possession of strongholds in hostile countries, together with a belt of colonies encircling the earth and displacing the aboriginal inhabitants, the observance of the Mosaic Sabbath and Decalogue, and the exercise of missionary functions. There is not a nation in the world but the English that corresponds to the description. Seeking, then, to Identify the English people with the Ten Tribes, we learn that the Cymri, or Welsh, are identical with the Cimmerii, and the Cimmerii with Khumri, and these again with the House of Samaria, and that the ancestors of the Saxons were the Sacæ, who appeared first in the very place and century in which the Ten Tribes were deported, and whose name is identified with the Gimiri or Cimmerii, and therefore with Khumri, and so again with Israel. So much by the way of historical evidence. We have also, indeed, thrown in the statement of an "ancient historian," name unknown, that the Jutes were Jews of the Tribe of Dan (Dane), the origin of which precious piece of information is not far to seek. For philological evidence we have the assertion that the learned men of Wales up to the sixth century A.D., wrote in Hebrew (traces of Phœnician words and names are, of course, to be found in many parts of Cornwall, and in the sixth century a learned Welshman wrote in Hebrew, and boasted of it; but the important question is what did the unlearned men write in?); but as Canon Brownrigg is at pains to show that no argument from community of language can have any real bearing on the question of race, we may dismiss this curious statement, all the more readily that it is difficult to see how the Hebrew writing of the Welsh would prove the Hebrew origin of the Saxons.

To the historical portion of this case our answers must be brief. To identify Israel with the Welsh through the Cimmerii, or Gimiri, you must Identify Israel with the Khumri, the Khumri with the Cimmerii, the Cimmerii with the Cymri. The identification is, to say the least, doubtful, even at the Welsh end of the line—Cymri being believed by many scholars to be the plural Cyn Bro (common land), and to have nothing to do

* Respectfully dedicated to the readers of the Church of England Messenger, and the supporters of Anglo-Israelism. J. S. V. Turner, Launceston. Price Sixpence.

Digitized by Google

with Cimmerii—and has nothing but unverified assertion and conjecture at the Israelitish end. That Khumri was ever used as the national name for Israel, Canon Brownrigg has not attempted to offer even the shadow of a proof. With regard to the Sacæ, we are on rather more solid ground. The derivation of the Saxon from the Sacæ has high authority in its favour. Canon Brownrigg's argument, however, is that the Sacæ can be identified with the Gimiri, and these with the Khumri; so that we get back to the Ten Tribes by the same road as before, and break down again, of course, at the old place. The Khumri and Israel are as far as ever from being identified. It is no identification to tell us that a king of Israel is called on some monument Khumri—we know, of course, that there were kings of Israel named Zimri and Omri—or that the land (city?) of Samaria has been spoken of as the home of Khumri (Omri). All that Canon Brownrigg's argument would establish is that the Sacæ, having been identified with the Khumri, and the Khumri with the Cymri, the Saxons are satisfactorily identified with the Welsh.

Canon Brownrigg's real contention is for the identification from Scripture. It cannot be denied that the promises to Israel, as he describes them, fit the English people as if they had been expressly written for them. We do not hesitate, indeed, to say that if these promises can be shown to us unmistakably in the Bible, without qualification or condition, we should let history and philology go and be Anglo-Israelites with the best. But Canon Brownrigg has given us his texts, and we have been at pains to verify them, and all we can say is, that the texts are not at one with the preacher. To take one or two of the most striking features on which he rests the identification. The passages quoted to sustain the point that Israel was to possess the frontier towns or strongholds in foreign countries, such as Calcutta, Gibraltar, Hong Kong, or to girdle the earth with a ring of Colonies, are not found to bear the definite and particular meaning assigned to them. In each case the phrase used must be taken with its context, when it will be clearly seen that by possession of the Gate of its enemies, promised to the whole seed of Jacob, is meant mastery over their land (the land of Canaan), not occupation of fortresses in it; and that the very obscure expression (Jer. x. 16), "Israel is the lot (girdle) of His (the Lord's) inheritance," where Israel, by contrast with the heathen, who are to be "slung out" of the (holy) land (God's portion), is represented as holding it, or embracing it as a girdle, cannot by any amount of stretching be made into a prediction that the earth is to be belted with Israelitish settlements. Yet with these two texts disappear two of the most striking promises on which Canon Brownrigg relies. Again, the passage quoted in proof of the contention that the Ten Tribes must now be engaged in missionary work (Isaiah lxvi. 19)—"They shall declare My glory among the Gentiles"—is shown by the context to belong to a time, certainly not yet come, when the people of God shall have been "comforted again in Jerusalem," and the "Lord has come with fire," and "gathered all nations and languages together," and "pleaded with all flesh by the sword." Then He shall send "those that escape of them into the nations, and they shall declare His glory," &c.

Again, while Canon Brownrigg puts forward the possession by the English nation of the Sabbath (Lord's-day?) and the Decalogue, two promised signs of the covenant people of old, why does he omit all reference to circumcision, which was to be above all others for an "everlasting sign" of the covenant "in their flesh"?

The promises to Israel of supremacy among nations, and a multitudinous population are unquestionably found in Scripture, and we quite agree with Canon Brownrigg that they were made to the literal Israel, and were to be literally fulfilled. Where we differ from him is when he goes on to assert that they are being fulfilled now, and to one part of the nation without the rest. These promises were distinctly made, as Canon Brownrigg's own texts abundantly show, to the Twelve Tribes, as one nation. It is the whole people to whom the word came that they were to be "the head, and not the tail;" and to be "on high, above all nations." It is the whole people, Abraham's seed, and not one portion of it alone, that is to be as the sand, and as the stars for multitude.

But, further, these promises are made conditional upon the people's obedience. Dispersion and judgment are predicted for the whole nation, scattering and perishing among the heathen if they disobeyed God's commandment. Mr. Hine, we know, propounds the theory that the division of the people under Jeroboam was of God, that He might form one vessel (Israel) for honour, and one (Judah) for dishonour. But God's promises were to the whole nation, and are without recall. Mr. Hine's reference, indeed, is another illustration of the reckless way in which writers of his school quote from Scripture. The words quoted from St. Paul cannot be made to bear even remotely on the subject. Moreover, if selection was to be made of one of the two Houses for honour, it could not have been of the House of Ephraim. The history of the kingdom of Israel from Jeroboam downward, is incomparably darker than that of the sister kingdom. Jehoshaphat, for aiding Israel, is blamed for "helping the ungodly." Hosea expressed the Divine Mind on this subject—"Though, thou, Israel, play the harlot, let not Judah offend." So it is written in 2 Chron. xxv. 7—"The Lord is not with Israel—to wit, all the children of Ephraim." That the Ten Tribes fell under the punishment threatened in case of disobedience is clear from 2 Kings xvii. 20—"And the Lord rejected all the seed of Israel, and afflicted them, and delivered them into the hand of spoilers;" xviii. 12—"Because they obeyed not the voice of the Lord their God, but transgressed His commandments, and all that Moses, the servant of the Lord, commanded, and would not hear them, nor do them."

Out of that penal banishment they have never emerged. And it is to this branch of the people, which is actually in dispersion, and under judgment for their disobedience, that we are to believe that the transcendent blessings promised to the whole nation, conditionally upon their obedience, are now being exclusively fulfilled—to Ephraim, that "played the harlot," and "compassed God about with deceit," to the exclusion of Judah, who "was faithful with her saints!"

The Anglo-Israelite says that the promises must be in course of fulfilment now, or God is unfaithful. It is a dilemma of his own making. On the contrary, those promises cannot be fulfilled without contradiction of God's Word, except to the whole nation to which they were addressed, and after their return as a nation to obedience to God's law.

Of the promises relied on by Canon Brownrigg—some having been shown not to bear the interpretation he puts on them, and the others not to apply to the present time—his case for the identification must be considered to have broken down. In deference to the serious light in which Canon Brownrigg and his friends regard the theory, we have treated it with a respect to which it has really no claim, and have abstained from calling attention to several particulars incorporated with it of a very "fanciful and extravagant nature," which are not by any means confined to the works of Mr. Hine. But there is one "adduction" of Canon Brownrigg's on which we should like some light to be thrown. He tells us that the English and American nations are the kindred peoples, Ephraim and Manasseh, being derived from the same stock, and fulfilling respectively the parts assigned by those two Tribes. But surely Ephraim and Manasseh parted from their parent stock ages before the Christian era, and the English and American nations, at the earliest, not before the seventeenth century after it, when the colony of Virginia was established? What can Canon Brownrigg mean? If Ephraim, as his whole argument is meant to prove, is identical with the English nation, then the American nation—being an offshoot of the English—would be an offshoot of Ephraim, but could not possibly have anything to do with Manasseh.

(To be continued.)

Digitized by Google

ISRAEL'S HOME "BLOSSOMS AND BUDS."

PART I.

We propose to put before our readers from time to time some accounts (they must be short, and they shall be pointed) of the work now being carried on in the East of London, in various parts of our great metropolis, and in the country at large for Christ. We are satisfied few know what, for instance, is going on in Ratcliff-highway, London, E., to rescue the fallen, to protect the foreign and British seafaring men from the temptations which that dreadful neighbourhood presents to them on landing from the docks hard by. These good works, undertaken by British Christians, with British gold, and carried on by godly agents, male and female of all nationalities, are peculiar to Great Britain, are totally unknown as indigenous growths on the Continent of Gentile Europe, and are blossoms and buds brought forth as holy fruits to the Lord by His chosen ones, His people Israel. Viewed in this light, it seems right and proper the Banner should chronicle from time to time, as evidences of our Identity, of a precious and valuable sort, such work as Miss R. Child is doing in St. George's-street, Ratcliff-highway, in the East of London; such labours as those of the Rev. John Wilkinson—our mistaken opponent, it is true, in respect to our Identity, but an honoured workman in Christ's vineyard for all that—in the lanes and alleys in and near the same locality among the Jews, and such operations, too, as the City missionary, Mr. Marcus Bergmann is carrying on in the East of London. Miss R. Child's published circular now lies before us regarding her work in 173, St. George's-street, Ratcliff-highway. It was our privilege lately to personally inspect the premises called "The Sailor's Welcome Home and Cocoa House." It was a sight to gladden any Briton's heart. There in the midst of a degraded population and dens of infamy, "where public houses are open at nearly every step for the destruction of the passers by," "The Sailor's Welcome Home" stands also open to invite to its quiet rooms tempted British and foreign sailors, who abound in the neighbourhood of the river and docks. The windows of the Home and of the "Stranger's Rest" close by, are placarded with notices in French and German, Swedish, Dutch, Italian and Spanish, telling the foreign mariner that within he may enter free of charge, sit there with newspaper, paper, pens, and ink, supplied free gratis, remaining as long as he likes, within certain limits. Sleeping accommodation is also found for these wayfarers in the respectable rooms of the Home hard by, which we also inspected. The peculiarity of the "Stranger's Rest," however, has yet to be stated. The upper rooms are fitted up as meeting-rooms, where every evening men of different nations assemble in separate apartments, and are there addressed in their own native dialects by those acquainted with them. They thus hear the pure Gospel of the grace of God in a way they never have had it offered to them in their own distant homes. The Germans are each Sabbath day addressed by a British military officer whose heart is in the work, and is blessed therein. The Scandinavian seamen listen each night to a Swedish lady, who has a rare talent for preaching God's Word, and her services are wonderfully appreciated. The other nationalities are separately gathered, and prayer, praise, and exhortation are heard in each room, in various languages, to the praise and glory of God. Miss Child has been led "to go and live in the very centre of the sailor-world to watch for souls." "The tender heart of the Queen of Sweden heard of the pitfalls in Ratcliff-highway for her countrymen, and sent a sum from her private purse to furnish bedrooms for them. This Miss Child has done, and many have been helped and strengthened for "the next voyage." Refreshments of a non-intoxicating kind are always ready for the men who seek the shelter of the "Welcome Home." The place is indeed the "Sailor's Welcome Home," and we ask our Israelite friends if this is not a cause they would like to help? Let one fact suffice. We heard that no less than 30,000 Scandinavian seamen visit the East end of London every year, and receive Gospel ministrations from such agencies as we describe in Ratcliff-highway. Do not our readers see then that "Israel blossoming and budding" at home among these foreigners by helping and converting them, also by sending each man away with a supply of godly publications in a bag, is really doing an evangelising work for the outside world, which is truly Israelitish? (Isa. xxvii. 6).

N.B.—We have been requested to add that there are no refreshments provided at the "Stranger's Rest." This place is generally termed the "Rest," by those who frequent it. The "Welcome Home" is the place where refreshments are provided at a moderate cost. The "Stranger's Rest," at which no money is taken, is very much in want of funds to carry on the work. Mr. Mathieson of Mildmay-park, superintends it, and the Treasurer is our friend, Colonel Bentinck, 32, Portman-square, London, W., who will be happy to receive subscriptions.

(To be continued.)

ISRAEL'S BATTLES.

"For there is none other that fighteth for US, but only Thou, O GOD."

(Continued from page 473, Vol. IV.)

NO. XXVII.

The Battle of Inkermann.

November 5, 1854, will long be remembered by those who were then fighting Israel's battles in the Crimea against the power of Gog. The French and British as allies had landed their troops at Eupatoria, they had won the battle of the Alma on September 20; they had occupied Balaclava on Sept. 27, and forthwith commenced the famous siege of Sebastopol. The various sorties of the garrison, the opening of the trenches, the Balaclava charge on Oct. 25, 1854, the first action of Inkermann on the 26th; these events we pass over, and come to the great battle fought on Nov. 4, which is called the soldiers' contest, since it was fought and won by the British, or Israelitish pluck of the private soldiers chiefly, against enormous odds. It was in every way a typical Israelite fight, and one therefore that must be described in these pages. Over the valley of the Tchernaya, at the head of the great Harbour of Sebastopol, was an important position held by the British army. The ground rises in ridges from the valley, and at the top of the second, the view looks across the Harbour and on to the ruins of Inkermann on the right. Nov. 5, 1854, was a dark and foggy morning, the mists were cold and heavy above the plains, and the British in their camps on that plateau little suspected the terrible scenes through which they must shortly pass, when the alarm was spread at dawn that the Russians were upon them. During the night the enemy had crept up in immense force from the town of Sebastopol to the foot of the height between Inkermann and the harbour. The Russian artillery, numbering 60 pieces of cannon, had with muffled wheels been brought up to a level point of the road, and as soon as the British outposts had been driven in they occupied the top of the crest where the 2nd division was posted. The latter fell back on the camp behind, 1,200 yards in the rear. The British troops, as soon as the serious nature of the attack was really ascertained, were hurried up to defend the position, one vital to the whole British and French operations at Balaclava. The Russians' plans were to command the British position on the crest with their overpowering artillery fire, and then to launch their columns of infantry against the British, turning their right at the same time by a flank attack. The Russians succeeded in their plans exactly as they had laid them. They posted their artillery; "they swept the field selected with a tremendous fire, and they brought an enormously superior force to a vigorous and close attack. They were, according to all calculations, justified in deeming the day their own." There was only one item they did not allow to enter into their calculations. It was the stuff of which the British soldiers were made. There were in all only 8,000 British soldiers present on that field, and these for several hours bore the brunt of 60,000 attacking Russians, supported by 60 guns. Yet the immense force the latter brought to bear on the assault failed to penetrate the thin red line of defence which the scarlet coloured soldiers of Israel made good against them. "At every point alike," says Col. Bruce Hamley, "the assailants found scanty numbers but impenetrable ranks." The solid masses of the Russian attack was opposed by "a thin and scattered line," yet beyond that line the Russians could not go. Over and over again the Russians' columns were hurled against that weak red line, bravely led, but the British would not let them pass. The Russians were forced each time stubbornly to retreat. But how did the 8,000 British stem that awful storm of Muscovite soldiery which outnumbered them as nearly ten to one?

Digitized by Google

It was an Israelite battle. It was a downright soldiers' fight, when, without officers, without formation, "each private was his own general." "It was a confused and desperate struggle" on our side. "Colonels of regiments led on small parties, and fought like subalterns; captains as privates." "The enemy was in front, and must be beaten back." The crest of that plateau must be held at any cost! and nobly the British—helped, after some time, by the French regiments which came to their aid—stood their ground. "To stand on the crest and breathe awhile was to our men no rest, but far more trying than the close combat of infantry when there were human foes with whom to match and prove strength, skill, and courage, and to call forth the impulses which blind the soldier to peril or death;" for over the crest poured incessantly the resistless cannon-shot, in whose rush there seems something vindictive, as if each were bestridden by some angry demon, crashing through the bodies of men and horses, and darting from the ground on a second course of mischief. The ground to be defended was only about three quarters of a mile broad. That was the front of the battle-field. For nine hours, from early dawn till 3 p.m., did our devoted infantry have to endure, in defending that narrow face, an incessant violent cannonade by a superior force of artillery, besides infantry attacks by immensely-overpowering numbers. It was by God's mercy only that the battle was won by the sheer physical power, endurance, and bravery of the British who bore the brunt of that day's fight fasting. He gave His people the power to endure such a terrible ordeal as that field proved, and to emerge from it triumphant.

The two-gun battery at the edge of the cliff was rendered memorable by the defence of the Guards, who threw themselves into it, and with the bayonet, when their ammunition was wholly spent, attacked the Russian columns in their determined assaults on the position. Many of the latter were killed in the embrasures of the batteries. There Sir Robert Newman, of the Guards, was left wounded when the regiment retreated for a time, and was found murdered when the Guards re-took the sand-bag battery with a rush, and turned the Russians out. It was, in truth, a dearly-purchased victory—a gloomy, but a glorious triumph! The carnage was enormous on both sides. The Russians lay thick, dead and wounded, in all directions, especially before the battery which the Guards had so well defended.

This was, indeed, a battle where the Lord's protection of His people Israel was conspicuously manifested. He permitted the handful of His chosen ones to be attacked by ten times their number, and He gave them the victory as He did so often before when, by every rule of war, they ought to have been utterly destroyed. The Russians came against the British one way, but they fled before them seven ways, when at 3 p.m. their retreat was converted into a flight by the pursuit of the French battery and two battalions sent after them in their retreat across the Tchernaya. Their well-laid plans for the destruction, first, of the British division on the heights, and, after them, of the whole of the allied forces in detail on the plateau were defeated, and God gave to the British soldier a glorious victory to prove that He still fought for His people as He promised, and caused "those that warred against them to be as nothing, and as a thing of nought" (Isa. xli. 12).

NOTE.—"It is," says Notes and Queries, "curious that the Balaclava charge and the battle of Agincourt happened on the same day, and that nobody, except Notes and Queries, seemed to remember it."—Mortimer Collins's "Thoughts in My Garden."

ISRAEL "DWELLETH ALONE."

"FRASER'S MAGAZINE," which we quote below, testifies to our "separate" condition among the nations in rather a quaint and peculiar manner. The description is not quite true. For had it been so, the Frenchman would certainly have been the best colonist and the favourite abroad. But distinctly he is not. In India he is not. In Asia Minor he is not. In Egypt he is not. The coming man throughout Asia is the Englishman. In India, we see at Pondicherry, and wherever the French are masters, that they hold up no high standard to the natives; but stoop to their low level. The native drags down the European to his own debased standard, and as for righteous government and righteous dealing there is none anywhere in the East to compare with Israel's. The Englishman, it is true, is unbending and very proud of his origin. He does regard with aversion the lower civilisation of the native races. He cannot sympathise in the pleasures of the latter—in the immoral Nautches, and in those other ceremonies and modes in which his native friends seek their relaxation. These are foreign to his ideas of the propriety of things; and as to dress, and food, and drink, it is clear that the Englishman, if singular and unbending, at any rate thrives in India on his own mode of living. He rules the country entrusted to his charge with singular devotion, impelled by the sole desire to do the best he can for it, irrespective of all other considerations. Herein, of course, he seems to be a being "dwelling alone"—according to the prophecies concerning Israel. If the native races do not love him (many Englishmen, such as Nicholson, John and Henry Lawrence, and hundreds more were, and are, simply adored by the natives of India) they fear, respect, and readily obey, the ordinary Englishman who, on arrival in their midst, is at once called on to govern subject races, differing in manners, customs, religion, prejudices, and civilisation from himself. And he does it well, to the satisfaction of the subject peoples, as well as to that of the rulers of the land of his adoption. The quotation to which we draw attention, illustrating Numbers xxiii. 9, is as follows:—

THE FRENCH AND ENGLISH COLONIST.

When a Frenchman is forced to plant himself as a colonist in some corner of the globe (he does not like doing it), his mode of setting to work is very different to an Englishman's. He initiates himself into the customs of the natives, is not above mixing with them in a friendly, neighbourly way, and picks out any peculiarities of dress, living, or habit which appear more suited to the place than his own; little by little he assimilates himself with the people of the country, and in all points which he conceives will make him more comfortable or better able to resist the climate; while in return the natives copy his ways, so manifestly superior to their own, adopting them freely, and handing them down from father to son as an advantageous exchange. An Englishman, on the contrary, under similar circumstances holds himself aloof from the inhabitants, looks down on them and their customs as barbarisms, prides himself on remaining still an Englishman, wears a tall hat and frock-coat with the thermometer at 95°, and sticks to beer and spirits, even when light claret is the obvious drink of the country. He lives outside the world in which the natives dwell, and so they have to get on without him as best they can, while wondering at the eccentricities of so great a man.

Digitized by Google

WHY WAS MORDECAI CALLED A JEW?

By R. B.

Will you kindly allow me to say a few words on this subject? I have perused the history of Mordecai since I saw the remarks which J. Thomson made in the Banner of Israel, October 27, under the above heading. His way of expounding this part of Scripture strikes me as being novel, and not in accord with Scripture.

The Scripture says that "There was a certain Jew in Shushan, the capital, whose name was Mordecai." The question is, "Why was he called a Jew?" J. Thomson says, "He was called a Jew because he feared the Lord." Now, I fail to see why we should adopt the view, because it is evident that Mordecai was not known to be a Jew until he said so himself, neither was Esther known to be a Jewess until she acquainted the king of that fact (Esther vii.)—a long time, no doubt, after she had been made a queen.

If Mordecai was a Jew, owing to his "godliness," why was there need for him to say so? Would not that be evident to those people to whom he told this fact, and with whom he, no doubt, was acquainted? Again, if Mordecai was a Jew because "he feared the Lord," would not Esther be a Jewess because she also "feared the Lord?" If so, what reason can we give that her nationality was not known, for surely their religion was not kept under a bushel? And if they worshipped differently to the inhabitants of the country generally, and if those worshipping in their way were termed Jews, why did not the people find out that Mordecai and Esther were Jews?

Religion had nothing whatever to do with it. Esther, in speaking to the king, implores him to save her life and that of "her people"—that is to say, all the Jews (good and bad) that were under the king, Ahasuerus. Are we to understand that all "her people" were Jews because they "feared the Lord?"

I should think that both Judah and Benjamin were classed together whilst exiled as Jews; and, in fact, we find them, when returning from this captivity, described as such in Ezra iv. 12; therefore, it cannot be right to say that Mordecai was a Jew because of his religion. The fact is, he was classed as a Jew, because he was one of those in captivity.

Note by the Editor.—Our correspondent should read the remarks of a Jew recorded on this subject on page 193, vol. i. of the Banner, No. 23. He will find from such perusal that Mr. J. Thomson was right and himself wrong. That the religion and not the racial descent was intended in the book of Esther, by the use of the term Jew, is seen from chap. viii. 17, where we learn "many of the people of the land (i.e., Gentiles) became Jews." This would not have been in a tribal or national sense, but in a religious only. These proselytes were "Judaised," but were not racially changed at all. It is quite possible to imagine Mordecai and his ward concealed their religious belief, and so failed to let the Babylonians know they were "Jews" by religion.

Review.

The Great Pyramid. A lecture by the Rev. Samuel Minton, M.A., formerly of Worcester College, Oxford. London: Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster-row, E.C. Price 6d.

We are glad to find a clergyman (we presume of the Church of England) undertaking the rôle of a lecturer on God's great "sign, pillar, and witness in the midst of the land of Egypt, and at the borders thereof." What the Rev. B. Wrey Savile, M.A., derides and deprecates, the Rev. Samuel Minton, M.A., exalts and honours. The lecture is carefully prepared, lucidly arranged, and follows in all details the teachings of Professor Piazzi Smyth. Our only objection to the lecturer's treatment of the subject is the scant mention he makes of our British inheritance in the Great Pyramid. Not so does his model, the Professor. Only at pages 9 and 15 do we see that the Rev. Mr. Minton alludes to the Anglo-Israelites, and then only in a half-hearted way. "We make out," he says there, "a very strong case for our belief that the Anglo-Saxon race is descended from the Ten Tribes of Israel." He adds that we take up the question very warmly from finding a remarkable similarity between certain British measures and those indicated by the Pyramid—such, for instance, as the British quarter and the British inch. If this be all, our inheritance in the building would seem to be very small. The rev. lecturer, at page 15, had not time to enlarge on the wondrous fact he notices, that the British and their colonies are singular in their retention of the Great Pyramid measures, and their rejection of the atheistic metric standards.

Surely our lecturer cannot fail to see that the Pyramid speaks to British-Israel in the language they only can understand, since they only have its unit of mensuration, the British Pyramid inch? Hence, theirs is its sacred chronology; theirs the Divine warning as to the things, the judgments and terrors coming on "the earth," from which they alone are free. Hence, they, and they alone, have a share in the Messianic blessings the Great Pyramid indicates as the portion of God's chosen ones—namely, the glorious evangelising function typified by the Grand Gallery, the raised platform of the Step, their refuge above during the wild and dreadful times of God's wrath upon the nations, their millennial bliss of the Ante-Chamber, Judah's sanctuary in the Queen's Chamber, and the last glorious haven of the King's Chamber for the two Houses of God's people united. We believe Mr. Minton is a safe guide in regard to Great Pyramid teaching in general (see page 22 particularly), and doubtless, when he is able to speak out more boldly regarding the Identity, he will be better qualified to testify quite clearly how British interests are the objects of God's "sign and witness," and how we Western islanders have our inheritance in this wondrous building, as no other nation has on God Almighty's earth.

Correspondence.

THE EARLY CHRISTIANS AND THE IDENTITY.

To Philo-Israel, Bristol.

Dear Sir,—A clergyman of the Church of England, who takes a great interest in Identity matters, requests me to write to you to use your influence with Identity leaders and Associations at home, to induce them to have the works of "Justin Martyr," "Polycarp," and "Irenaeus," translated into English and published in a cheap form. His opinion is, doing so will remove many of the false impressions held by teachers and preachers regarding the teachings of the immediate successors of the apostles, and show that Identity and Millennial teachings are precisely the same as those held by the early Christians, with the exception of the British being Israel. The work is daily increasing, and progresses favourably.

I am, dear Sir,
Yours very truly,
Joseph Glenny.

Devonport, North Shore, Auckland, N.Z.,
October 22nd, 1880.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

Dear Philo-Israel,—Having just read (page 479, No. 205) "The Good Samaritan" (Luke x.), I had reference to my cottage Bible. It is dedicated, by permission, to the late Right Rev. Thos. Burgess, Lord Bishop of Salisbury, by Thomas Williams, author of "A New Translation of Solomon's Song," "An Historic Defence of Experimental Religion," "Daily Bread," &c. London: William Tegg & Co., 85, Queen-street, Cheapside; 1853. I copy the following from notes.

After dwelling upon the Christian treating his enemies with love, and so following our Saviour's example, in His exposition on Luke x. 25—37 he gives a note on verse 33, entitled "A Certain Samaritan." "From the benevolence of character here exhibited, the principal person in the fable has been distinguished by the epithet of 'good;' and a desire to honour the Saviour of mankind, no doubt, led the ancient fathers, and, from their time, the allegorical preachers of every succeeding age, to apply this character to Jesus Christ, though He was neither a Samaritan nor a sectary. To complete the allegory, the Jew is supposed to represent Adam; his going down from Jerusalem to Jericho, the fall; the thieves which attacked him, sin and Satan; and his being left half dead, the miserable state of man since the fall. The priest and Levite who passed him by, the moral and ceremonial law; the inn, the Church; the host, the ministers of the Gospel; the twopence, the two dispensations; oil and wine, the sacraments, etc., and the repayments, the rewards of another world. We shall cite no name to this interpretation, because we think it unwarranted ; but we believe it is ancient as Origen, and as modern as Wm. Huntingdon."

Digitized by Google

I could almost wish that the name had been given, for here is an exposition reaching as far back as the second or third centuries. Origen, born in Egypt 186 A.D., died probably at Tyre about 254. I wonder if Dr. Bonar could give a better explanation ?

W. W.

A Constant Reader of the "Banner," and a Scripture Reader.

Stoney Stanton, Hinckley, Leicestershire,
Dec. 11, 1880.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—If it has not been thought of before, a good way of disseminating your opinions would be for every one interested in the good cause to give away their old BANNERS, with a written request on the paper, written in a prominent place, that it may be passed on from one hand to another when finished. Your paper would thus get a much larger circulation, and no doubt this would do a great deal of good. If you think this worth trying, please publish my proposal—that is, if it has not been mentioned or tried before.

J. G. C.

Nov. 4, 1880.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—If you have a Cruden's Concordance, by Youngman, and will look at the Table of the meanings and significations of proper names, you will find it asserted that the name Tarshish means "contemplation, or examination of the marble, or of the joy ; or precious stone, the colour of marble."

Can there be any connection between this and our coronation stone, which, in Sandford and in the old Irish manuscripts, is called "the marbell stone" ?

C. C. G.

Tower of London, Dec. 10, 1880.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I have much pleasure in informing you how the cause is making progress at Riddings and the surrounding neighbourhood. During the last twelve months meetings have been held with the view of establishing our Identity with Lost Israel. And, chiefly, through the instrumentality of our president, Mr. Joseph Tomlinson, the neighbourhood has been canvassed for miles around us. Of course we have much opposition in our neighbourhood. There is the orthodox creed to contend against. We have the Church of England and six dissenting places of worship in our midst. Yet, after all, we have reason to thank God for the progress already made. We meet together fortnightly to discuss the question of our Identity with Israel. We believe that there is a goodly number of believers in our Identity who do not openly manifest their belief. We have a number who take regularly the BANNER and other Identity works. Lectures have been given, up and down the neighbourhood on the subject by Mr. J. Tomlinson, and the lecturer has been invited to go again. When once the people have tasted they desire more. We have in the neighbourhood two or three Bible, or Improvement classes, where the question of our Identity is discussed. Moreover, we have it taught by some of the teachers in the Sabbath school. In fact, some have said that if they must teach they must teach what they believe to be the truth. Our president, Mr. J. Tomlinson, is so earnest about the work that people have invited him to occupy the pulpit. So much impression has been made upon the minds of the people, that we believe the day is not far distant when the pulpits will be open for the propagation of Identity truths.

I remain, yours respectfully,

WILLIAM VARLEY.

Ridding, near Alfreton, Derbyshire.

THE ASTOUNDING GROWTH OF POWER AND PROSPERITY IN FRANCE.—The Budget prepared by the French Government for the current year, has been laid upon the table of the Chamber. The expenditure is estimated at a few thousands over 2754 millions of francs (£110,177,304), and the revenue at 2756 millions of francs (£110,242,812), thus leaving a satisfactory surplus. These figures show an increase over the revenue of the previous year of 54,990,356 francs (£2,199,612).

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

SINCE our last report, 24 members have been enrolled, the number now being 574. The greater number of these reside in England, the rest being scattered about in Scotland, Ireland, Wales, Jersey, British Guiana, the United States, and Italy. The only three English counties not represented are Berkshire, Hertfordshire, and Huntingdonshire.

A clergyman, writing to us not long since, says: "He believes more in the power of prayer for removing the blindness of others, as the most clear and convincing proofs seem to be of little avail." This, we think, answers the question of another correspondent, who asks if we can "suggest any plan for interesting clergymen of the Church of England!" We believe it is not God's intention that the shepherds of Israel should take the lead in this work (Ezek. xxxiv. 8—13), and we may safely leave it to Him to convince them of its truth in His own way, and at His own time. That the study of this subject is doing untold spiritual good to numbers, no unprejudiced person can doubt. One of our members writes: "I have long rejoiced (with all my household) to know that God is not slack concerning His promises, and that it is the glorious portion of the British to be His own peculiar people. . . . . I have been a diligent Bible-reader for thirty years, but I can honestly say that the discovery of God's wonderful faithfulness and truth to His ancient people, as identified in the British nation, has made the precious Book as a new-found treasure."

Another, writing to "Philo-Israel," says: "I, as one of the members, am much obliged to you for the pains you take. The Monthly Comments are so instructive, and it is so satisfactory to think there are hundreds banded together, and praying for each other that their lamps may be burning brightly. . . . . I wanted to suggest that if the 550 members were to subscribe one shilling a week, it might prove useful. I think most of us could do that. I am ready for one, and I feel sure the others will follow. I enclose my stamps, hoping the plan will succeed." Although we think many of our members are not in a position to follow exactly our kind friend's example, we gladly give publicity to the suggestion, in the hope that, if this plan is not adopted, some other may be devised to gather in the fragments, not only from our members, but from believers in our "Identity" generally, throughout the United Kingdom. We are quite ready to do our part, as we think it humiliating in the extreme to be obliged to confess, when asked to send lecturers to our colonies, that money is not forthcoming to pay even for our lectures at home. We shall be glad if friends willing to help, or having any suggestion to offer, will kindly communicate with us.

The Card of Membership will be forwarded on receipt of three stamps. The Comments sent post free monthly for 1s. per annum ; two copies, 1s. 6d.; three copies, 2s. Address, Miss Lawrence, Stoneleigh, New Wimbledon, Surrey. J. L.

Dec. 13, 1880.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PRAYER.

1. That our Monthly Comments may be used by the Lord to bring many souls to Christ.

2. That our Identity lecturers may never forget, in addressing their hearers, that the latter have souls to be saved, and should be urged to be "Christians first, and Israelites afterwards" (Matt. xvi. 26).

3. That viewing the state of public affairs in Ireland, the Cape, India, and the East, the Lord would be pleased to hasten the day when the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of His Christ (Rev. xi. 15).

4. That if it be possible, and according to God's will, the outpouring of the Holy Spirit and the New Covenant may be bestowed on the British Empire—as promised in Jer. xxxi. 33, and Heb. viii. 10, 12—within the year 1881 (Isa. lx. 21).

5. That the number of believers in our Identity may be greatly increased in 1881, and the belief itself greatly extended.

6. That the BANNER OF ISRAEL may, in 1881, be increasingly blessed to the conversion of sinners to Christ, and the spread of our Identity.

7. That the writers in the BANNER may be guided by the Spirit of God, and preserved from errors and harsh language.

PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE Fourth Volume of the BANNER is now ready, bound in handsome blue cloth, gilt. Price 8s., or by post 8s. 8d. Any Bookseller will gladly obtain it.

Digitized by Google

NEW WORK BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Now Ready, in handsome cloth, gilt, with Coloured Map, and several Illustrations, price 3s. 6d., by post 3s. 10d.

THE

GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS.

CHAPTER I.—The Gate and its Meaning. II.—The Gates—Israel's Leading Identification. III.—Captain Philip H. Colomb, R.N., on "The Gates." IV.—Gibraltar. V.—Malta. VI.—Cyprus. VII.—The Suez Canal. VIII.—Perim. IX.—Aden. X.—Socotra. XI.—Bombay. XII.—Madras. XIII.—Calcutta. XIV.—Peshawur. XV.—Rangoon. XVI.—The Straits Settlements—Singapore. XVII.—Hong Kong. XVIII.—The Cape of Good Hope. XIX.—Natal. XX.—Cape Coast Castle. XXI.—Sierra Leone. XXII.—Mombasa. XXIII.—The Mauritius. XXIV.—St. Helena. XXV.—Ascension. XXVI.—Sydney, New South Wales. XXVII.—Melbourne, Victoria. XXVIII.—Adelaide, South Australia. XXIX.—Perth, Western Australia. XXX.—Brisbane, Queensland. XXXI.—Hobart Town, Tasmania. XXXII.—New Zealand. XXXIII.—The Falkland Islands. XXXIV.—Jamaica. XXXV.—Sarawak. XXXVI.—Labuan. XXXVII.—Herat. XXXVIII.—The Gates of India. XXXIX.—British Guiana. XL.—"The Channel Islands." XLI.—The Persian Gulf an "English" Gate. XLII.—St. Jean D'Acre, a Gate of Palestine. XLIII.—Constantinople. XLIV.—Israel's Gates, and some Lapsed Ones. XLV.—Conclusion.

NOW READY, PRICE 3d.; POST FREE, 4d.

THE

ANGLO-ISRAEL ALMANACK FOR 1881.

Ready December 29th. Price 8s., post free 8s. 8d., bound in blue cloth, gilt, side and back.

THE FOURTH VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

CONTAINING 520 QUARTO PAGES.

Post Office Orders to be made payable to ROBERT BANKS, Racquet Court, Fleet Street; or, W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick Lane, Paternoster Row.

THE CHEAPEST IDENTITY VOLUME EVER PUBLISHED.

Now Ready, 384 Demy 8vo pages, in handsome cloth, gilt, price 3s. 6d, by post, 4s.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.

EDITED BY DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.

This Volume contains Papers on all Points of the Identity of the British People with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel, including Articles by the Editor, Philo-Israel, Rev. C. W. Hickson, Captain Keighly, Author of "Phoster," G. N. Walsh, Joseph Thomson; Revs. H. Marriott, A. J. J. Cachemaille, W. Barker, Dr. Joseph Wild; John S. Anderson, W. S. Cavill, James Catterall, and many others.

NEW VOLUME COMMENCES WITH THE JANUARY NUMBER.—Now ready.

ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY

Is published on the first of every month. 32 pages, in a neat wrapper, price 2d., Annual Subscription, 2s. 6d. Besides containing articles on the Identity of the Lost Ten Tribes, it gives Reports of Lectures, Discussions, Meetings, &c., given in connection with the subject.

With this number is commenced a series of papers by the Editor, entitled, "ANGLO-ISRAEL BIBLE TRUTHS." A very valuable paper by George N. Walsh on "THE CHRONOLOGY OF THE WORLD BEFORE THE FLOOD"—this article is Illustrated with Diagrams. Also articles by Philo-Israel, Col. Gawler, and other eminent writers on our Identity. Reports of Lectures, &c.

ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET;
W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK LANE, PATERNOSTER ROW.
And may be obtained, by ordering, of any Bookseller.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,

High-Class Tailor,

47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.

MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

Second Edition now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

AMMI; or, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham the "friend of God," and showing that true science history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

Just published, price 4d.

A COMMON-SENSE VIEW OF THE ANGLO-ISRAELITE QUESTION.

BY LIEUT.-COL. GUMM.

London:
Hamilton, Adams, & Co., 32, Paternoster-row.

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

Just published, Crown Octavo, cloth bound, gilt letters, 296 pages.

THE SEED OF ISAAC, BEING AN HISTORICAL REVIEW OF GOD'S DEALINGS WITH HIS CHOSEN PEOPLE ISRAEL.

BY J. D. GRANGER.

Post free, 4s., from THE AUTHOR, 34, Exeter-street, Plymouth, and ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just Published. Crown 8vo., 1s.

THE HOUSE OF JOSEPH IN ENGLAND.

BY A WATCHER.

Also by the same Author, Crown 8vo., 1s.

CHRIST IN JOSEPH.

A REPLY TO ANGLO-ISRAELISM in the Church Quarterly Review.

RIVINGTON'S, Waterloo-place, London, Oxford, and Cambridge.

Now Ready. Price 4d.

ISRAEL UBIQUITOUS: A Letter to an Inquirer. By REUBEN. With Diagram.

Price 2s. 6d., cloth gilt.

LINKS IN THE CHAIN OF EVIDENCE CONNECTING ISRAEL AND ENGLAND. By J. LEYLAND FEILDEN.

Price 1s. 6d., 2s., and 2s. 6d.

ISRAEL'S JUBILEE; OR, 1881. By the Author of "Links in the Chain," &c.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE GENTILES AND THE TIMES OF THE GENTILES. By the Author of "Links in the Chain," &c

London: W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, E.C.

Price 1s. 6d. post free to any address.

IS THAT ALL'S LEGACY. A TRACT FOR THE TIMES.

London: H. Broadbents, 39, High-street, Marylebone.

FEATHERS or DOWN CUSHIONS to be GIVEN AWAY. 5lbs. of Feathers, or one Down Sofa Cushion are sent gratis with all Lincolnshire Feather Beds or Down Quilts ordered of T. Smith, 15, Wine Office-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. Beds complete at 1s. per lb. Best Down Quilts, 1s. per square foot. Specimens shown. Send for Price List.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW.
WEDNESDAY, JAN. 5, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. NO. 211. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 12, 1881. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Disaster in the Transvaal	21
Lord Reay's Comments on Numbers xxiii. 9	22
The Anglo-Israel Discussion between the Editor of the Church of England Messenger (of Melbourne) and the Rev. Canon Brownrigg, of Launceston, Tasmania. Part II.	23
The Great Pyramid Step and Measurements. By Demerara	24
The Testimony of the British Triads. By W. H. W. Part I.	25
Israel's Home "Blossoms and Buds." Part II.	26
A Liberal Journal on the Coming "Earthquake"	26
"The Times of the Gentiles." A Lecture by the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A.	27
Correspondence	27

THE DISASTER IN THE TRANSVAAL.

HAVE our readers noticed how constantly disasters of precisely the same kind have lately occurred to our nation and race? They have been military in character, bringing national disgrace to a proud and sensitive people; and these disasters to our arms have been accompanied by deluges of blood, massacres of precious British fighting men, officers, and soldiers. In each case they were mown down like sheep, always dying gallantly; but their deaths, though not inglorious, bring into sad prominence the fact that the catastrophe might in each case have been avoided but for some stupid blunder of which British commanders had been unaccountably guilty. There was first the frightful massacre and defeat by naked savages of the hundreds of British soldiers who fell so needlessly on January 22, 1879, at Insandlwana, when every rule of South African warfare was neglected, and a gallant division of the British army was annihilated because the commonest precautions were not taken.

Next, in Afghanistan, on July 27, 1880, we saw, on the fatal field of Maiwand, in fair and open fight against a semi-barbarous foe, British troops, British guns, and British colours were destroyed, captured, and disgraced by errors of the same character as those which worked us such dreadful woe at Insandlwana. Six hundred European troops were almost to a man destroyed on that occasion, two Royal Artillery guns were taken by the enemy, the colours of H.M. 66th Regiment were captured, such reverses and disgrace being caused by the failure of the British commanders to realise the power of the enemy, and by a reckless surrender to him of every advantage which place and position gave the British, and that not once, but over and over again during that fatal action. And now, quite recently, we find a despised enemy, the Boers of the Transvaal, who could not hold their own against the naked savages of Secocoeni—men who were held to be so wretched a foe in the field that their opposition to annexation was lately derided and contemptuously set aside—boldly rising against a detachment of 250 British soldiers of the 94th Foot, and able to capture the convoy and detachment, 120 being killed and wounded on the British side, and 37 taken prisoners. The only comfort in this third catastrophe was that the colours happily were saved, and military disgrace was not super-added to military disaster, which we must hold to have been, to all appearance, a preventable misfortune.

How has it come to pass that the Lord has in these three instances so visibly corrected His people Israel with three such similar strokes, that the veriest babe in Bible knowledge must see that our God has a controversy with us, and desires to direct us into the path He wishes us to follow, but in which we perversely, as a nation, refuse to let Him lead us? Surely there are many and grievous causes why the Lord should be angry with our nation at the present time. He cannot have seen with approbation the appointment of the Papist Viceroy to represent Israel's Protestant Queen in the Eastern Empire. It cannot be according to His will that the presence of an infidel, who glories in declaring there is no God, should be tolerated in the Commons House of Israel's Christian Parliament? It cannot be pleasing in His sight that when His good gifts of the Gates in Afghan territory had, in such a marked way, been conferred upon our race by success in arms, our Government should have hastened to reject His gifts, cast them back in His face as worthless things, and repudiating the obligation to send the Gospel to North Afghan lands in obedience to Christ's commands, have evacuated not only Cabul and the Khyber Pass, with the neighbouring province, but should also be meditating to-day how best Candahar too may be safely thrown away as a Gate of no value to our Eastern Empire.

These things, and other national failings too numerous to mention, surely call for God's chastisements on our ungrateful race. But we do not think, after all, that these are strokes of vengeance inflicted on a people worthy of punishment by their angry God. He has told us, His people Israel, that "He will not be wrath with us, nor rebuke us." Henceforth, with everlasting kindness, He promises now "to have mercy on us." "The mountains may depart," He adds, "and the hills be removed, but His kindness shall not depart from us, neither shall the covenant of His peace be removed" from us, "saith the Lord that hath mercy on us" (Isa. liv. 9, 10). Why, then, has the Lord dealt with us as He has done, lo! these three times? Why has He brought down the stroke on our pride and our military glory, so that on each occasion we have been forced to vindicate our tarnished prestige, and make national efforts to recover our national losses? We seem to see in these events what we have noticed before, that preparatory to the overwhelming flood of fiery war and devastation destined to destroy the continental nations, our own is to be rooted to her own "chambers" and her own Empire "Gates," to prevent our interfering with God's purposes in yonder "earth," which is to feel the force of the Divine vengeance. How is Israel—meddling, imperious Israel—to be paralysed, made impotent and feeble as compared with her continental neighbours, so that as regards their affairs she may seem to have entered into "her own chambers," her "doors," or "Gates," closed about her, and herself in hiding? Surely, by rebellion in Ireland, demanding 30,000 troops to be stationed there, chained to the land and immoveable; surely, by the outbreaking of a furious insurrection, preceded by a massacre which would be certain to rouse the nation to instant action in the far-distant Transvaal; by war in Basuto-land, destined yet, it may be, to swallow up more and more of Britain's fighting strength, and locking armies up harmless as regards intervention in the fiery deluge ready to burst forth throughout the prophetic Earth.

Just as the disaster of Insandlwana forced the Empire to put forth its whole strength to conquer the armies of Cetywayo, and just as the massacre of Maiwand urged Sir Frederick Roberts to hasten to the rescue and stay the mad course of a Government which, but for that event, would doubtless by this time have surrendered Candahar, as well as the Gates of North Afghanistan, with Cabul and the Khyber, so we believe the horrors that have just been reported to us from near Pretoria, and the terrible state of anarchy which reigns in Ireland, are merely God's leadings to confine and occupy our military might within our own home and foreign "Gates," rendering it impossible for us at this crisis, when God directs "isolation," that we should, contrary to His will, meddle with the Eastern Question, or prevent the Powers of the earth from following out their own devices to their ruin and the destined collapse of Europe.

We urge our friends not to fear or lose confidence in the gracious purposes of our God towards His suffering people. Let us derive comfort from such passages as Zech. viii. 9—13, where, after the "affliction," the glorious promises of the prosperous return of Israel are so grandly guaranteed. The Lord tells us often in His Word to "fear not," and shall we faithlessly "tremble in the West," when "the Lord roars" in the world? (Hosea xi. 10, 11; Isa. xliii. 5, xliv. 8, &c.) Rather let us repent us of our national sins; get us right humbly to our God, and praying Him to give us nationally the new covenant that is to be ours, leave Him to work out His purposes towards us, knowing all shall be rightly ordered at the last. Israel, praise ye the Lord, even though you tremble at His power, who is the God of Israel, our Redeemer, Friend, Father, Husband, King (Isa. xlv. 15, xli. 9—14, lxiii. 16, lxiv. 8, liv. 5; John i. 49).

LORD REAY'S COMMENTS ON NUMBERS XXIII. 9.

Lord Reay at the Social Science Association's Congress, held at Edinburgh on Oct. 6, 1880, presided at the opening, and delivered his inaugural address. We find his lordship during his remarks was certainly unwittingly giving his hearers a comment on Numbers xxiii. 9, and showing how British-Israel "dwelleth alone." Let the reader note some of his sentences which we have extracted from his address:—

OUR ATTITUDE TOWARDS CONTINENTAL NATIONS.

Keeping our social system free from militarism and bureaucracy, what is to be our attitude towards Continental nations in their present suspicious and insecure condition? The regeneration of the Continent of Europe is quite as hopeless at present as its disarmament, and any attempt on our part to interfere may delay the very object we have at heart. Supposing, for instance, that we—from the best of motives and for the best of reasons—endorsed the policy of one or more of the great Powers, disarmament would not be the result, but a fresh stimulus would simply be given to the armaments of those Powers whose policy might be supposed to be uncongenial to ourselves. A policy of neutrality, of very strict neutrality, not tinged by hostility towards a single Power, but benevolent towards every one of them, friendly to the last degree to the smaller Powers, is the natural result of the existing state of things. It is obvious that no considerations can save us from the duty of keeping our military and naval strength in the very highest degree of efficiency. Our army and our navy must always be available at a moment's notice in any quarter of the globe. Our Colonial defences must, with the aid of the Colonies, be in an unassailable condition; the Imperial and the Colonial Legislature cannot afford to stint army and navy estimates. It is by no means a paradox that an efficient army and a powerful navy are our safeguard, not only against an invasion, but also against militarism, which the sense of insecurity following defeat would be sure to create. Take a situation which Englishmen must contemplate on a not very distant horizon—England, America, Australia, and India, united by free trade and by institutions which have no other object than to secure to the inhabitants all the blessings of good government, with a minimum of burdens and a maximum of free trade, and determined to maintain these institutions. What becomes of the conflicting interests of the armed Continent of Europe compared with the destinies of the English races? Is it conceivable that the sight of the great prosperity which must accrue from these relations will not produce results on the rest of the world? Certainly not. Meanwhile nothing should be done to weaken our power unnecessarily. To preserve the historic headship of the race that has sprung from her will require all the strength of England and Englishmen.

OUR ADVANTAGES AS COMPARED WITH CONTINENTAL NATIONS.

If a Continental statesman asks me whether England does not yield too much to the instinct of isolation, I give him this answer—Isolation from your quarrels is absolutely imperative to us, but it is also the best thing we can do for you. England and her colonies will be a refuge to all who are tired of State despotism and of militarism, and who wish to live under another economy. Power, no doubt, has a tendency to lurk in your big guns, but happily also in strong brains. In your social condition the army and the bureaucracy absorb the best forces of the country. We prefer to see our strong brains at work, not only in the political and military spheres, but also in solving scientific and social problems, in literary and artistic work, not to mention theology and philosophy. Whether, in the long run, your system will not prove weak as against ours remains to be seen. All we ask is to be left alone. You cannot expect us to put our brains at your disposal, to do the work which your own brains are quite as fit to perform. While you increase the number of your officials and of your soldiers, we open new channels for our trade; we remove all that cripples the advance of education or of prosperity in the nation. You assimilate your citizens to some abstract ideal which you call State. We strengthen our position by adherence to independent, self-developed principles, which constitute the natural links between the English races. Our State is nothing but the result of a living and healthy organism, which does not receive its inspirations from Government offices, but which is left to evolve its own destinies by a number of influences, all of which escape our control.

THE MISSION OF THE ANGLO-SAXON RACE.

The Anglo-Saxon world is a planetary system in itself. It moves in its own orbit. The great fact remains that the whole of Europe is inspired by the Prussian system, in the same way as the French "Code Civil" made its influence felt in a great part of Europe, and that we are now the only country whose original individuality has not been shaken either by the Prussian or French afflatus. To prevent our being drawn into this vortex is surely, in an eminent degree, a great problem of social science. To keep our social fabric undisturbed by the influences which are raising a social system diametrically opposed to our own all over the Continent of Europe, is a great and glorious work of self-preservation.

The instruction we derive from the above, and which we hope our opponents generally, and Messrs. F. White, C. Lyne, and others will derive too from his lordship's words is, that the British nation, being Israel, does, as a matter of fact patent to all men, "dwell" (as compared with the Continental nations) utterly "alone," and thus that it fulfils to the letter Balaam's prophecy in Num. xxiii. 9), "Lo! the people shall dwell alone."

Digitized by Google

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL DISCUSSION

BETWEEN THE EDITOR OF THE "CHURCH OF ENGLAND MESSENGER" (OF MELBOURNE), AND THE REV. CANON BROWNRIGG, OF LAUNCESTON, TASMANIA.

(Continued from page 15.)

Containing the Editor's Article on "Anglo-Israelism," Reprinted from the "Messenger," and Canon Brownrigg's Reply Thereto, which was Suppressed by the Editor.

PART II.

A Reply to the Editor of the "Church of England Messenger."

BY CANON BROWNRIGG.

THE expressed design of the editor's attack upon Anglo-Israelism, being to show in what points that "theory hopelessly breaks down," fairness demands that opportunity should be afforded me for reply, so that readers of this journal may judge for themselves whether it is the theory or the attack which "hopelessly breaks down;" but, in addition to this, I am editorially invited to throw some light on certain points, and am, therefore, under obligation to reply.

In proceeding to this, however, I express surprise that any person having read my articles, and Mr. Hine's "Lost Israel Found," could make such a glaring mistake as I find in the opening of the editor's article, wherein I am said to have "repudiated Hine." I am so satisfied the intelligence of my readers will not permit them to endorse that charge, that I dismiss it without further notice.

The editor's article, I observe, opens with an attempt to persuade readers that a triumph has been achieved against Anglo-Israelism. It is said I have "abandoned (? ignored, rather, as being weak and immaterial) positions which S. P. G. had attacked," and that our side has been "obliged to change their bowler." (By the way, may I pleasantly inquire what has become of my friend S. P. G.? Have his innings been closed by the changed bowler? for there is now another man in). And hence it is concluded that S. P. G. has the best of it in the discussion; but I venture to say that until the strongholds of the theory have been destroyed, such a decision is premature and delusive.

In the next place, the editor undertakes to "examine the theory as stated by myself." Dealing with the historical aspect of the case, the editor contends that "to identify Israel with the Welsh through the Cimmerii, or Gimiri, I must identify the Khumri, the Khumri with the Cimmerii, the Cimmerii with the Cymri." In my first article, so far as space would allow, I have already traced out that identification to the highest degree of probability; but now to impliedly demand positive evidence on this point, which the editor knows perfectly well it is impossible to obtain from the incompleteness of ancient records, is practically an admission of weakness on his part, and must be so regarded. But what if the editor does affirm that the identification is "doubtful, even at the Welsh end of the line. . . . . and has nothing but unverified assertion and conjecture at the Israelitish end?" Is that any proof that the identification is not real, or that the unverified assertion and conjecture may not, after all, be well founded? Again, it is said that I have "not attempted to offer even a shadow (?) of a proof that Khumri was ever used as the national name for Israel." Of course, not a proof positive. But what of that? Does the editor, however, know for certain that in that remote time Israel was never spoken of under such a title? It is not held by us that any positive historical evidence to this extent is, as yet, adducible in support of Anglo-Israelism. It is reasonably enough for the present, if even a probability of such Identity can be derived from the very dim light and confusedness of ancient records, and certainly the editor has advanced nothing to destroy that probability. But before leaving the historical matter, the editor will, perhaps, allow me to clear away some little confusion, which, through his imperfect understanding of the Anglo-Israel theory, he has introduced, when, in dealing with my reference to the Saxons, he informs his readers that all that my "argument would establish is this, that the Sacæ having been identified with the Khumri, and the Khumri with the Cymri, the Saxons are identifiable with the Welsh." "So far as their common origin is concerned," are just the few words required to give him the light which is evidently needed.

In the matter of philology, I am glad to find that the pains I have been at to "show that no argument from community of language can have any real bearing on the question of race" (it should rather have been said, "is not a test of race") have not been in vain; but it is quite his own mistake when the editor would lead his readers to suppose I have tried to show that the Hebrew writing of the Welsh proves the Hebrew origin of the Saxons. He will find no such absurdity in the articles I have written.

Accepting now the editor's implied admission, that history and philology present no insuperable obstacle to the truth of Anglo-Israelism (he "would let history and philology go"), I note with satisfaction that the editor is prepared to assign to the Bible its proper position as the best light in the settlement of the Anglo-Israel question. I have long ago said in a published pamphlet, "the light of Holy Scripture will be found the truest guide to the discovery of the kingdom of Israel," and I am of the same mind still. And now, hoping that the editor is still open to conviction, I will, as briefly as possible, reply to his opinion, that the identifications claimed are not supported by the texts adduced.

As the editor attempts no answer to the striking features of "lending unto all nations and borrowing from none," and the "pushing out," and the "Decalogue" identities, I proceed to deal with his attack as it relates to the Gates, the "ring of colonies," missionary work, and the Sabbath identities.

First, the Gates. The objection is rested on the following grounds—that "the passages quoted . . . . . are not found to bear the definite and particular meanings assigned to them;" and that the context determines the Gate to mean "mastery over their land (the land of Canaan), not occupation of fortresses in it." To this mere assertiveness I answer, (1) That the whole of a land is never called its Gate; (2) The term Gate, and not land, being employed, fairly marks that term as having a definite and particular meaning, and such a meaning as would be reasonably and properly expressed by the words, "strategic positions giving mastery over enemies' lands;" (3) If Gate means mastery, it may, and does, reasonably denote such mastery over the land as would be obtained by "occupation of fortresses in it," as largely evinced by our own nation; and (4) In context of passages where the Gate is promised, there is no land specified—nothing demanding a fulfilment limited to Canaan—and nothing forbidding, directly or indirectly, the extensive, definite and particular application of it we claim. Had it been intended to promise Israel such Gate-holding as is realised by our nation, such promise would be fairly and fully expressed by the words, "thy seed shall possess the Gate of his enemies;" hence, as our nation does hold such a position as is fairly expressed in those words, and no other such counterpart is adducible, the extensive, definite and particular meaning we contend for, is not only possible, but, other matters considered, is also most reasonable, legitimate and tenable.

Secondly, the "ring of colonies." Through incorrectly quoting Jer. x. 16, where Israel is called the rod (i.e., according to Gesenius, a measuring rod), and not the lot (or girdle), as the editor says; imagination has led the editor to depict Israel as a sling by which the heathen (?) are to be slung out of the Holy Land. This is, indeed, a very singular mistake. It so happens that the subject of the prophecy is the conquest of Judea by a foreign enemy (ver. 22), and the persons to be slung out are not heathen, but the Jews, who remained behind in the land from the Babylonian captivity. These are the persons to whom the prophet says, "Gather up thy wares, O inhabitants of the fortress (Gate?) for thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will sling out the inhabitants of the land at this once," &c. (ver. 18). Judea ceases to be an independent nation. Then follows a lamentation on account of the devastation of the land (ver. 19—22): "for the heathen have eaten up Jacob, and devoured him, and consumed him, and have made his habitation desolate" (ver. 25). This is noteworthy! But the passage to which I principally referred, is Deut. xxxii. 8, 9, concerning which the "Speaker's Commentary" thus remarks: "Whilst nations were being constituted under God's providence, and the bounds of their habitation determined under His government, He had then in view the interests of His elect, and reserved a fitting inheritance according to the number of the children of Israel"—i.e., proportionate to the wants of their population. Those wants would be necessarily growing or increasing wants. Ephraim's seed must become "a multitude of nations" (Gen. xlviii. 19), the "branches of Joseph's fruitful bough must run over the wall" (Gen. xlix. 22), hence fresh territories must be had proportionate to the wants of their population. The coasts (or sides) of the earth also are to be the habitations of Ephraim (Jer. xxxi. 8). Had it been designed to express for Israel that the earth should be belted with Israelitish settlements, that fact would be fairly expressed by the words just quoted from Deut. xxxii. 8, and Jer. xxxi. 8, and the exact counterpart thereof being now exemplified in our settlements which belt the earth as "bounds to the nations of the earth," supplies an Identity which is simply unanswerable. I submit now that the Identities relating to the Gates, and the "ring of colonies," have been fairly and reasonably established, and therefore, that the editor's assertion, that with these two texts disappear two of the most striking promises on which I rely, is conclusively negatived.

Thirdly, the missionary work. The editor asserts that the passage quoted in proof of this Identity, is shown by the context to belong to a time certainly not yet come. To fully review the context would too greatly extend my reply, but to this positivism I answer—(1) The context affirms nothing but what may be reasonably applied to, and be fairly deemed fulfilled by, the judgment upon the Jews, and the destruction of their city by the invading armies of Titus, and the known escape of certain who recognised the sign of which Jesus spake (Matt. xxiv. 15; Luke xxi. 20). (2) Leading commentators (e.g., Lowth, Henry, Barnes, Speaker's Com.) hold that the context relates to time past. (3) The text itself is intelligible only when referred to time past, for the method of imparting the intelligence of God's glory and fame as represented in Isaiah lxvi. 19, is too unlike the modern method of flashing intelligence, to be taken as representing an event yet future—the bow, moreover, was a war-weapon of the past, and not likely to be so again of the nation supposed to be referred to thereby. And where, now, I ask, are the nations and the isles afar off to be found which have not already heard God's fame, or God's glory which was to be declared? And now, in further support of the past applicability of the text, I adduce a matter of probability, and a matter of fact. First, of probability, that by those who escape, it is most probably intended escapees principally from Benjamin (a tribe which really belonged to Israel, but was, as it were, loaned for awhile to Judah), for then the brotherhood between Judah and Israel was broken (Zech. xi. 14), and these, as a type of Israel's subsequent missionary work, became the messengers unto the nations. Secondly, of fact—that to Europe, to Asia, to Africa, to the isles afar off, in the widest sense, God's glory and fame have been already declared, and as this was to be declared expressly by those who are of the seed of Jacob, and it has not been declared by the Jews, but by the British nation, it marks out the British nation as of that portion of the seed of Jacob called (in distinction from Judah) the kingdom of Israel.

Fourthly—the Sabbath. The editor, I observe, suggests with some apparent hesitancy, a difficulty in reference to the Sabbath Identity, because we keep the Lord's-day, and not the seventh day. This opens a very wide question, but I answer in brief (1) the fourth commandment is binding upon us in some sense; if not so, then the other nine are not. (2) The spirit of the fourth commandment includes the Lord's-day, otherwise there is no command to keep holy the Lord's-day. (3) The Old Testament Sabbath-day and the New Testament Lord's-day are substantially one, and (4) Judah, as still under the Mosaic law, observes the seventh day, but Israel, as the missionary nation, and therefore Christian, and no longer under the Mosaic law, must observe the first, or Lord's-day. Upon this point, I am prepared and willing to give full evidence in a future article, if permitted to do so, but being limited to space (other points remaining to be noticed) I can now only state the fact.

(To be continued.)

THE GREAT PYRAMID STEP AND MEASUREMENTS.

By Demerara.

I have read with much interest the Rev. Mr. Hickson's paper in Banner No. 198, and although unable to follow his figures, I gather from his comments that he seeks to show that if certain measures and positions are to be found in the Step at the South end of the Grand Gallery of the Pyramid, they would very closely verify the calculations of Mr. Gratton Guinness in his work on the "End of the Age," as to the date of the birth of our Lord, and the number of years He lived on earth. But why should we go to the end of the dispensation, or "the age," to look for such evidence, when we have the date of both proved by astronomy, and recorded in the Pyramid in proper sequence and at the required periods. It appears to me, from what I can understand of Mr. Hickson's figures, that if this agreement he seeks were arrived at, the evidence we have of the date of the building, 2,170 years B.C., would be shewn to be in error 5·282 years, and the significance of the "well hole" at 33·6 inches inside the North wall would be obliterated; on the other hand, were Mr. Guinness's calculations to be thrown back 5·282 years they would exactly coincide with the Pyramid record. Now if Mr. G.'s theory be based upon Egyptological data, reinforced by the proved errors of Petavius and Josephus, it is much more probable that his calculations require revision, than that the record of the Pyramid is incorrect.

That there is some deep meaning pertaining to the position and measures of the Great Step, there can be no doubt, and the interest now evinced in them may be taken as a proof of the fact, and that some discovery of great moment will ere long be made with respect to this peculiarly interesting point, referring as it does to our own immediate times. I have often thought that this mysterious block would one day or other be interpreted to shew its purpose and intention.

In the measures in and about the Step I have found many coincidences of a remarkable kind, which go to shew that this apparent obstacle may have been placed in order to give a number of measures within a given length, which would terminate at a given point; but varying according to the route taken to arrive at the end. In this way the various periods named by the prophet Daniel could be shewn in one continuous time measure. Readers of "Our Inheritance" all know that the floor-length of the Grand Gallery is measured by projecting the floor-line through the Step to the point where the line of the South wall projected downwards would meet it, and this measures 1881·6 from the North wall; this length, therefore, includes, by a day for a year reckoning, the 1,260 and 1,290 days of Daniel's prophecy, the 1,335 days being a prolongation of the time must be looked for in the after measures.

Digitized by Google

The floor-line measures 1,813 inches up to the foot of the Step, which rises 36 inches; the line along the ramps measures 1,813 inches, with a rise of 15 inches to the level of the Step; the Step on the level measures 61 inches to the South wall, which has been found there to impend 1 inch. The low passage to the Ante-Chamber measures 52 inches, and the floor-line, if projected through the Step to this level, would reach 11 inches beyond the bottom wall within the passage; the line upon the Step level through the passage to the Boss upon the Granite Leaf measures 75 inches from the South wall.

In the subjoined table I give the measures in various directions, from the sums of which respectively, by deducting the number of the days or years of Daniel's prophecy, we obtain periods in history, remarkable for their resemblance to the events described by the prophet with reference to the number of the days.

Grand Gallery measures in inches:—	A.D.
Floor-line 1881·6—1260	= 621
„ „ 1881·6—1290	= 591
Floor-line to Step 1813 + 36 + 62 = 1911—1290 .	= 621
„ „ „ 1813 + 62 + 52 = 1927—1335 .	= 592
„ „ „ 1813 + 62 + 52 = 1927—1290 .	= 637
Ramp-line to Step 1813 + 15 + 62 + 52 = 1942—1335	= 607
„ „ „ 1813 + 15 + 62 + 11 = 1901—1290	= 621
Along the Step through passage to the Boss from 1881 + 75 = 1956—1335	= 621

Here we have the date of the Hegira repeated four times—621. St. Augustine's arrival in England twice—591-2; the Pope's assumption of supreme power once—607; and the building of the Mosque of Omar upon the site of the temple once—637 A.D. The measures of the low passage into the Ante-Chamber are at a different angle from the floor-line of the Gallery. Would this warrant a change of significance in the true measures? 52 inches, if of one week each, would make the whole passage one year. Can Matthew xxiv. 22 apply to this shortening of the time?

All these may be merely coincidences, but as such they must be admitted to be of a very remarkable kind.

British Guiana, 1880.

THE TESTIMONY OF THE BRITISH TRIADS.

By W. H. W.

PART I.

The British Triads give particulars of twelve different peoples who from time to time came to this country; those referred to below as the second to the sixth both inclusive, were regarded as friendly to the original Britons, who came first. Those referred to as the seventh to ninth both inclusive, came as enemies and obtained a footing by means of conquest, and dispossessed the original Britons. Those referred to as the tenth to twelfth both inclusive, also came as enemies, and dispossessed the original Britons, but only for a time; they were either driven away by the Britons, or they left of their own accord. According to the Triads, therefore, the inhabitants, at the time of the arrival of the Saxons, consisted of the descendants of the peoples or tribes referred to as first to the eighth both inclusive. Let it be understood that the numbers one to twelve do not represent the order in which each of the peoples arrived.

1. The Britons who were led and brought to this country by Hu the mighty, from Deffrobani. At the time of their arrival it contained no other human beings, and Triad No. 1, series iii., claims this people or tribe to be the discoverers, or the first occupiers of the country.—Triad 4 and 5, series iii.

2. "Al y Llœgrwys" from the land of Gwasgwyn (?Gascony). —Triad 5, series iii.

3. Brython from Llydaw (Armorica, France); these were originally from the Briton stock.—Triad 5, series iii.

4. Celyddon, who settled in the North.—Triad 6, series iii.

5. "Al Wyddyl," who settled in Alban (Scotland).—Triad 6, series iii.

6. Men of Galedin (? Caledonians), when their country was inundated sought refuge with the Britons, who gave them "land-room" (to give the literal translation).—Triad 6, series iii.

N.B.—The fourth, fifth, and sixth peoples are stated to have had permission to settle in the country, and the protection of the Britons was extended to them.

7. Corranites, from the land of Pwyl (? Poland), who settled on the banks of the river Hymer (? Humber), near the "Hazy" Sea (German Ocean).—Triad 7, series iii.

8. Gwyddyl Ffichti (Picts), who came from the Hazy Sea and settled in Alban, Scotland.—Triad 7, series iii.

9. Saxons.

N.B.—The Corranites seemed to have been a somewhat disagreeable sort of people, not to say rebellious, for Triad 14 states that they joined the Picts to attack the Britons. Subsequently they joined the Romans and dispossessed the Britons (Triad 15); and again, when the Saxons came the Corranites joined them also, and helped to keep the Britons from what the latter considered their rightful possession.—Triad 45 and 50, series iii.

There is a remark in the Triads to the effect that only such of the Lloegrwys who did not become Saxons, were those in Cornwall and in "Deifr and Bryneich" (?Deira province), in Yorkshire. By Lloegrwys must be meant those who lived in that part called Lloegr—i.e., England. The inference is therefore that (with the above exception) the aborigines of England (in the language of the Triad) "became" Saxons, those who were driven over the Welsh borders retaining their origin.

10. "Llychlynwys." Judging from this name these people must also have come across what the Triads call the Hazy Sea. The actual number of them is given—viz., 63,100. Their arrival is said to have been in the time of Gadial ap Erin (Triad 14). Erin is the ancient name of Ireland. In the third generation after their arrival they were driven by the Britons out of the country, and are said to have gone to places called Galas and Avena in Greece.—Triad 8 and 14, series iii.

11. Lluveod Gaufal Wyddel—the Legions of Gaufal Wyddel. This was an incursion to North Wales of Irishmen, who remained there for 29 years, but who were afterwards driven to the sea, or more probably back to Ireland.—Triad 8, series iii.

12. Cæsarians (Romans), who remained in this country 400 years, and left to suppress disturbances in their own country. The Triad adds that only such Romans remained as were women, and children under nine years of age, and they became Britons.—Triad 8, series iii.

There is no doubt that the Triads regard those people referred to as first to sixth both inclusive, as being friendly tribes descended from the same stock. Triad 4 expressly states that part of the nation of the Cymry, led by Hu, settled in Brittany (France), and we have noticed already that the third people who arrived here came from Armorica or Brittany.

The place where the Britons came from was called Deffrobani —in the Summer country—and the Triad adds, "where Constantinople now stands." The word "now" in this statement appears clearly to show that it is an addition made by a later hand, and is therefore to be accepted (if accepted at all) with caution. The description, "the Summer country," would evidently point to a warm climate. If I am not mistaken, there is in ancient history a place referred to named Taprobana, which a classic writer said was in Ceylon, but it is impossible to say whether it would be the same as Deffrobani of the Triads.

Hu, who conducted the nation of the Cymru, is frequently mentioned in the Triads, and by the poets of Wales. He is described to be a man of peace and averse to fighting (Triad 5), that while in the Summer country he taught the Cymry the work of ploughing land (Triad 56), that he devised a method of movement and unity of array among the people (Triad 57), and that he applied vocal song to the preservation of memory, or memorial and invention (Triad 92). A poet of Wales, of the fourteenth century, applies attributes of Deity to him. This Hu, and Huon (another ancient name for the Deity), are to be identified with Hesus, who was worshipped in Gaul.

Digitized by Google

Dr. Owen Pughe (a celebrated Welsh Archæologist), writing on this subject in this "Cambrian Register," vol. iii. pages 164—166, published in the year 1818, said as follows:—"There appears so very singular a coincidence between Hu, Huon, or Hesus, and Hoshea, or Osee, king of Samaria, and the secession of the Ten Tribes having taken place at about the era of the probable colonisation of the part of Europe described by the ancients as the seat of the Cimmerians and Celti, that it well merits being exhibited to the reader's view." Then he goes on to show the points of coincidence—viz., Triad 5 notes of Hu that he would not obtain dominion and lands through fighting and pursuit, but through equity and peace, and we have observed already that Triad 1 claims that no human beings dwelt in this country when the Cymry arrived here.

Put these things side by side with the statement in 2 Esdras xiii., and a striking coincidence will be observed.

The Ten Tribes were carried away out of their own land in the time of Osee. "They took counsel among themselves that they would leave the multitude of the heathen and go forth into a further country where never mankind dwelt, that they might keep their statutes which they never kept in their own land."

(To be continued.)

ISRAEL'S HOME BLOSSOMS AND BUDS.

(Continued from page 16.)

PART II.

We have before us the report of an East London City missionary, labouring among the Jews, British and Foreign, in St. George's-street, also in Wellclose-square, at the "Stranger's Rest" in Ratcliff-highway, and elsewhere. At German services held in that language at the "Stranger's Rest," our Jewish missionary, who is a German by birth, has sometimes as many as twelve Jews surrounding him, some from Palestine, others from Roumania, Hungary, Austria, Russia, Germany, Holland, and Belgium. As he sits in the midst pointing out the various Messianic prophecies in his Hebrew Bible, he is reminded of the first preaching of the Gospel on the day of Pentecost, so many and so various are the languages of those to whom he ministers. Some of those our missionary comes across in his ministering in Providence-street, St. George's-in-the-East, are Poles exiled from their own land on account of complicity in the Polish insurrection against Russia. These (who also abound in Paris) are in London met by the London City Mission, and have the Gospel of the grace of God presented to them by Israel, acting in this case through the agency of a converted Jew who, being joined spiritually to Israel, is "blossoming and budding" and filling East London with blessed Gospel fruits. Our Hebrew London City missionary finds it sometimes a good passport to a Jewish family, who would be otherwise reluctant to hear the Gospel, or of the love of Jesus to their souls, to accost them with the facts of our Identity. He is himself a full believer in our descent from the Ten Tribes, and is not at all ashamed to avow his belief. "Do you know the news?" he asks of some Jewish friend to whom he wishes to say a word for Christ. "What news?" is the reply. "Why, the news that Israel is found." "Found!" exclaims the unsuspecting Jew, "Found! where, tell me, is Israel discovered to be?" "Oh," replies our missionary believer in the Identity, "They say the English people are the Lost Tribes, and that they are here; and I believe it!" Immense surprise is excited by this reply, and after that the missionary finds a ready hearing for the Gospel, and no doubt some account of the evidence on which our Identity depends is sought and given before the interview is ended. The London City Mission is doing incalculable good to the German, Polish, and other foreign seamen and strangers, who, in addition to the crowds of Jews, are found located near the London Docks, the Tower of London, and those parts in the East of our great city, which literally for the most part is "lying in the wicked one."

We thank God for such an agency as that we have described, labouring among the neglected, ignorant, bigoted sons of Judah there, and also striving hard through such a Hebrew-Christian, German-speaking London City missionary as we have pointed to, who is earnestly striving "to fill the face" of that part of the mighty capital with fruit for Jesus.

(To be continued.)

A LIBERAL JOURNAL ON THE COMING "EARTHQUAKE."

The Western Daily Mercury is a Liberal journal, one which "knows and can trust" Mr. Gladstone's foreign policy, and only regrets that the continental nations do not yet "love" him more than they do. We quote the words of the paper in question sent us by an admirer of our present Premier, because it so exactly echoes from a secular standpoint the words and sentiments of the Banner of Israel, which treats of politics and foreign affairs from that prophetic aspect from which we usually regard them. Our friend says he sends the article because it so entirely corroborates "all you have advanced, and shows how a non-Israelite can unwittingly give evidence of the value of the views you advance and the correctness of your teaching." The Western Daily Mercury, on Nov. 3rd, 1880, spoke as follows regarding—

CONTINENTAL GOSSIP.

Verily, there is a babbling in Europe. Everywhere the nations seem to be preparing for some dread and comprehensive catastrophe. Monarchs are grave; ministers are immersed in the manœuvres of diplomacy; the newspapers of the nations are magnifying political molehills into mountains of vast proportions, and the people scan their columns with an anxiety scarcely distinguishable from dread. Austria strikes the first note of present discord. Her Government has published a Red Book—an exposition of a policy—in some respects unsatisfactory, and in others amusing. Her position in the Naval Demonstration, as stated by herself, was of the most ridiculous description. She would contribute her share to the naval force; her ships should sail in company with the vessels appointed by the conjoint Powers; she would aid in the creation of such warlike phenomena as were calculated to frighten the Turks and bring the Sultan to submission. But Austria desires it to be understood that this was, on her part, a demonstration pure and simple—a demonstration not to be followed, under any circumstances, by decisive action. Indeed Austria, though participating in the demonstration, now deprecates the very object for which it was arranged, declined to call upon the Montenegrins to occupy Dulcigno, and objected to every detail which implied the use of actual pressure. And for this reason—that she feared that the Powers might possibly become responsible for whatever results might develop. The hesitation and half-heartedness of Austria ceases to be alarming when we consider that it has never yet been affirmed that more was required of her than simple acquiescence and passive assent. The plea that nothing should be done because the European Concert might be made responsible for its policy, is a political reason of an extraordinary type. Without a fragment of evidence tending to prove that that policy was in any way unsound, without any allegation of undue haste, of unnecessary extreme action, of national prejudices, or of the favouring of particular interests, Austria trembles at a possible responsibility. This is absurd, for that responsibility was not possible, but certain. That the Powers must abide by the outcome of their policy, and lose or gain as that policy was good or bad, was not merely a conceivable contingency, but an inevitable sequence. In addition to the diplomatic vacillation of Austria, we have the suspicions and forebodings of Germany. The Augsburger Allgemeine and the National Zeitung, both credited with official inspiration, are declaring loudly that the German Government will resist any international coalition which has for its object the subversion of the Turkish Empire. Those who imagine that this feeling in Germany is indicative of coming European disturbance forget that there is absolutely nothing opposed to it. What people, or what government, desires to destroy the integrity of the Ottoman Empire, so long as that nation will submit to, and abide by, those principles of international law which must be maintained? This empty thunder is perfectly uncalled-for; for it simply amounts to a disclaimer of a supposed object which has not been attempted, and which would never be resolved upon except by a practically unanimous vote of the European Powers, cast after long waiting, careful deliberation, and the repeated failure of less extreme measures; and truly there is babbling in Europe. There is one fact from which the international disquiet arises. England is a great power, to which much has been trusted, and from which much has been expected. The part taken by England in the Treaty of Berlin was executed by a Conservative Government, or a part of a Conservative Government. The performance of the decrees of that Treaty has been entrusted by the nation to a Liberal Government. A Beaconsfield has been supplanted by a Gladstone. This might have changed things for the worse, and Europe has not yet wholly learned that it has changed them for the better. That they are men of different stamp—that their policies are not alike—is everywhere known. The policy of Mr. Gladstone, however thoroughly appreciated at home, has been misrepresented, and is regarded with doubt abroad. By-and-bye, Europe will learn to know him, and to love him more. With that, and with healing time, the tumult will die away. Till then, we know him, and can trust him.

Digitized by Google

Coming from a Liberal quarter, and one so clearly favourable to the head of the present Government, the confession here seems rather palpable that the foreign policy of the Premier has been somewhat of a failure, that Austria and Germany are opposed to Mr. Gladstone's policy, the British nation being, in fact, "isolated" (Isa. xxvi. 20). "The nations are everywhere preparing for some dread and comprehensive catastrophe." Such is the opinion of a journalist who seems well informed. He clearly agrees with God's Word (Rev. xvi. 18), and with the teaching of the Great Pyramid besides; for the former tells of the "great earthquake," such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, so great," as presently imminent, and the latter records in its very structure an alarming fact regarding the sudden close of this dispensation of grace—namely, that in A.D. 1881-6 it may end with sudden and awful calamities, just such, in fact, as our journalist says men "everywhere" on the "Continent" are anticipating with "anxiety," terror, and grave dismay.

"THE TIMES OF THE GENTILES."

A Lecture by the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A.

We take the following from The Surrey Comet, of October 30, 1880. It speaks for itself:—

WIMBLEDON ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.—OPENING MEETING.

The first lecture of the season was delivered at the Lecture-hall on Tuesday evening, when the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., gave an interesting discourse on "The Times of the Gentiles." The chair was taken by Mr. Denzil Onslow, J.P., but in consequence of the inclemency of the weather the attendance was not large.

The Chairman, in briefly introducing the lecturer, said that his object would be primarily to show that the New Testament dealt with Israel as distinct from the Gentiles.

The Rev. C. W. Hickson, in the course of his remarks, said that the title of the lecture was taken from St. Luke xxi. 24, where "the times of the Gentiles" is spoken of. If that expression were accepted broadly, in the sense in which those who did not believe in Anglo-Israelism accepted it, as meaning the times of blessedness to those who were not Jews, then there was nothing inconsistent between the Anglo-Israel view that those times of the Gentiles were times in which it was God's purpose to bless a very important part of the Hebrew race, which is distinctly called Israel. As a rule, people spoke of the whole Hebrew nation extant in the world as Jews, but the Jews themselves admit that there is another part of the Hebrew race not included with themselves under this general title of Jews, which was the part commonly spoken of as the Lost Ten Tribes. These latter, therefore, must be found among the Gentiles, and there was nothing contrary to the contention that the last 18 centuries had been "the times of the Gentiles" when they saw that lost irrecognisable Israel, as distinguished from the Jews, were to be the principal benefit receivers during the Christian dispensation. Both the Old and New Testament proved clearly that this was God's purpose (Hosea i. and Romans ix. 24, 25). The first part of Isaiah xxiv was fulfilled at the time of the Babylonish captivity, and still more completely in A.D. 70, when Jerusalem was destroyed by Titus and the people were scattered all over the world. In the same chapter a remnant, or further portion of the same Hebrew race, was to be found glorifying God "in the isles of the sea;" a statement which involved Christianity. The New Testament threw still further light on the subject; Matt. i. 21, where "His people" are spoken of, could not but apply to the House of Israel. St. Matthew, being a Jew, would never have used so thoroughly an Old Testament expression if he meant it as applying to the Jews. St. John xi. 52, was also quoted as strengthening the assertion. The New Testament Gentile Church, therefore, was really in the bulk, a Church consisting of God's cast-off Gentilised Israelites brought back to Him in faith and repentance in Christ, together with a large ingrafting of non-Hebrew Gentiles, in accordance with Isaiah lvi. 3—8. It followed that the Gentile nation was to supply the main trunk of the Gospel Church, and was to be the principal benefit receiver in that when gathered together into one they should constitute a nation with which the Gospel Church should be in closest alliance. In conclusion, the lecturer said that Anglo-Israelism was not incompatible with New Testament Christianity. The Anglo-Israelites maintained all the articles of the Christian faith as firmly as any of the opponents of the theory. They saw no new way of salvation, and inculcated no reliance on Abrahamic descent for the salvation of the soul, nor held anything opposed to St. Paul's teaching concerning the Gentiles. They only contended that the term "Gentiles" included the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel, and that therefore they might claim in Christ the fulfilment of God's promise to Abraham and his seed.

After a few remarks from the Chairman, the meeting was brought to a close, a vote of thanks having been previously accorded to the Rev. C. W. Hickson.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

Sir,—The following extract from a work in my hands may be interesting, coming after Mr. Robert Pegrum's letter. You will see the word Brith is translated Briton, and also the compound word Britham. L. G. A. Roberts.

December 24, 1880.

Extract from "Suggestions on Ancient Britons."
By G. D. Barber, A.M., commonly called G. D. Barber Beaumont, 1854.

"Cases of direct and open evidence as to the fact of the Semitic language of the ancient Britons are very scarce; they were not scribes. In the Gwawd Uud, however, occurs a passage which has been generally given up as unintelligible to the Welsh, and from the translations, when attempted as of Welsh, it scarcely appears why they should have preserved what (by the introductory verse, 'Out of the sacred poems they cry aloud') was an antique at the fifth century.

"'Or anant oniant
O Brith y Brith oi
Neu oes ncuedd
Bryth y Brithan hai
Syched eddi curoi.'

"'Rise! woe to ye, and woe to ye,
Briton, Briton, alas!
Thou'rt wanderer of wanderings,
Britons! Britons! alas!
Wake! { misery and nakedness / know yourself naked.'"

This work is filled with Hebrew words, sayings, and derivations, and is especially interesting to those who see the reason why this should be in an inquiry of the kind.

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

	£	s.	d.
Agnes Maclean...	1	1	0
A Lady, per Mr. Brigden, Upper Norwood ...	0	2	0

During the month of December nearly 6,000 copies were distributed at the various London Railway Stations and Waiting Rooms. Donations towards the expenses of distribution will be received by R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street London.

Just published, Crown Octavo, cloth bound, gilt letters, 296 pages.

THE SEED OF ISAAC,

BEING AN

HISTORICAL REVIEW OF GOD'S DEALINGS

WITH

HIS CHOSEN PEOPLE ISRAEL.

BY J. D. GRANGER.

Post free, 4s., from THE AUTHOR, 34, Exeter-street, Plymouth, and ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just Published. Crown 8vo., 1s.

THE HOUSE OF JOSEPH IN ENGLAND.

BY A WATCHER.

Also by the same Author, Crown 8vo., 1s.

CHRIST IN JOSEPH.

A REPLY TO ANGLO-ISRAELISM in the Church Quarterly Review.

RIVINGTON'S, Waterloo-place, London, Oxford, and Cambridge.

Now Ready. Price 4d.

ISRAEL UBIQUITOUS: A Letter to an Inquirer. By REUBEN. With Diagram.

Price 2s. 6d., cloth gilt.

LINKS IN THE CHAIN OF EVIDENCE CONNECTING ISRAEL AND ENGLAND. BY J. LEYLAND FEILDEN.

Price 1s. 6d., 2s., and 2s. 6d.

ISRAEL'S JUBILEE; OR, 1881. By the Author of "Links in the Chain," &c.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE GENTILES AND THE TIMES OF THE GENTILES. By the Author of "Links in the Chain," &c.

London: W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, E.C.

Price 1s. 6d. post free to any address.

IS THAT ALL'S LEGACY. A TRACT FOR THE TIMES.

London: H. Broadbents, 39, High-street, Marylebone.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JAN. 12, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

TO OUR READERS.

WITH the number for January 5, THE BANNER OF ISRAEL commenced the Fifth Volume. This affords an excellent opportunity for the introduction of the work to NEW SUBSCRIBERS. We very earnestly ask every Reader of the BANNER, and Friend to our Identity cause, to make it a point to secure at least ONE NEW READER for the New Volume. Copies may be obtained, by ordering, of any bookseller or newsagent, or one copy will be sent weekly by post for 6 months for 3s. 9d.; 12 months for 7s. 6d.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL has rendered important service in the Identity movement, and is the recognised organ of that great and increasingly important body; as such, in increasing the circulation of the BANNER, the Identity cause is at the same time made more widely known, its important truths will become of increasing interest, and thus "our Identity with Lost Israel" will eventually become universally recognised.

NOTICE TO OUR CLIFTON AND BRISTOL FRIENDS.

WEEKLY NUMBERS OF "THE BANNER OF ISRAEL" can be obtained henceforth at CLIFTON, at FRANCIS TUCKER'S, Bookseller, 4, Boyce's Avenue; and in BRISTOL, at Mr. CHILLCOTT'S, 26, Clare-street; and of W. H. WITTS, 66, Colston-street, Bristol.

Just published. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA THE ROYAL SEED TO KING DAVID'S THRONE, AND ARE NOT HER SUBJECTS, THE BRITISH PEOPLE, THE TEN LOST TRIBES?

BY WILLIAM HOPTON, of Sutton Heath.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

NEW WORK BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

In handsome cloth, gilt, with Coloured Map, and several Illustrations, price 3s. 6d., by post 3s. 10d.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet court, Fleet-street.

PHILO-ISRAEL'S BOOK FOR CHILDREN.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth, gilt, 1s. Post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Third Edition.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST OR SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS AND TEACHINGS OF THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams. Price 4d., post free 5d.

A RESUME OF THE SCRIPTURAL ARGUMENT, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? An Inquiry establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 4d.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters."

Lincolnshire Farmhouse Feathers.

"As soft as Downy Pillows are."

NEW

FEATHER BEDS AT HALF PRICE.

Annual Sale over 3,000 Beds.

Branches:—LINCOLN & LONDON.

As an evidence of good faith, all Cheques or Post Office Orders may be post-dated ten days to ensure proper delivery of the Goods, and the Company guarantee to pay cost of Bed, and pay carriage both ways, if the Goods are not as described.

The cost of any sized Bed is 1s. per lb., including best purified Grey Lincolnshire Feathers, best bordered "Union" tick, making, packing, wrapper, and carriage to any Station.

Any sized Bed will be made to order; but the following Beds are on demand at the Factory, and could be sent off within a few hours of receipt of order by London Agent.

The "ROYAL" Double Bed, 6 ft. 6 in. long by 5 ft. wide, 65 lbs. in weight; two pillows, one bolster .. .. 65s.

The "WINDSOR" Double Bed, 6 ft. 6 in. long, by 4 ft. 6 in. wide, 55 lbs. in weight; two pillows, one bolster .. .. 55s.

The "PALACE" Double Bed, 6 ft. 6 in. long, by 4 ft. 6 in. wide, 50 lbs. in weight; two pillows, one bolster .. .. 50s.

The "COTTAGE" Single Bed, 6 ft. 6 in. long, by 3 ft. 6 in. wide, 40 lbs. in weight; one pillow, one bolster .. .. 40s.

PACKING AND WRAPPER FREE WITH EACH BED.

THOUSANDS OF TESTIMONIALS.

94, Wellington-street, Leeds.

SIR,—The Feather Bed to hand. Had the tick opened, examined the Feathers, and found them quite satisfactory. Shall have no hesitation in recommending my friends, as they are about 30s. less than what the same would have cost in Leeds.—Yours truly, A. WALKER.

BANNER OF ISRAEL COUPON.
Entitles the holder to 5lbs. extra Feathers or 1 Down Sofa Cushion, on ordering Bed.
12.1.81. T. SMITH.

Lincolnshire Down Quilts & Skirts.

THE LINCOLNSHIRE BEDDING COMPANY last season gave great satisfaction to the public with their celebrated Quilts, Dressing Gowns, Skirts, Vests, Chest Protectors, &c., &c., lined throughout with their best purified White Down.

Two qualities are made of Down Quilts, one in Washable Chintz with bright scarlet ground, woven in various designs and colours.

Price 1s. per square foot.

Also in splendid close-woven new Sateen, in beautiful and variegated patterns, designed for the present season. Each Quilt is reversible, and can be used on either side.

Price 1s. 2d. per square foot.

The most useful size for Double Bed is our specially made Quilt, 6ft. long by 5ft broad.

Price in Chintz, 30s., or Sateen, 35s.

For Single Bed we make a special Quilt, 6ft. by 4ft.

Price in Chintz, 24s., Sateen, 28s.

Prices of Unbleached Calico Slip Cases for Beds, Pillows, Bolsters, &c.; also prices of Quilts in Stock, Bed, Pillow, and Bolster Ticks, Chest Protectors, Toilet or Morning Jackets, Dressing Gowns, Skirts, Cushions, Cosies, Vests, &c., sent free on application.

BANNER OF ISRAEL COUPON.
Entitles the holder to 1 Down Sofa Cushion, free, on ordering either of above Quilts.
12.1.81. T. SMITH.

All Orders must be accompanied by Cheque or P. O. O. and Coupon, payable to London Agent, Mr. T. SMITH, 15, WINE OFFICE-COURT, FLEET-STREET, LONDON, E.C., where Specimen Beds or Quilts may be seen. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate Circus. Cheques crossed City Bank.

Price 4d., post free 5d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,

High-Class Tailor,

47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.

MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

ANGLO-ISRAEL AND HIS FIRST PRINCE FOR THE HOLY LAND.
SHEWN FROM SCRIPTURE PROPHECY. WITH STRAINS FOR PALESTINE.
And "Notes on the Enemy," 2s. 6d., cloth; separately, price 1s.

NOTES ON THE ENEMY;

In a Report of a Great Meeting in London, of Ritualists and Liberationists, to Elect Fit Representatives for Parliament. With Strains for Anglo-Israel in the Holy Land. By the Rev. HIBBERT NEWTON, D.D., Vicar of St. Michael's, Southwark, Author of "Israel Discovered in the Anglo-Saxons," &c.
W. H. GUEST, WARWICK LANE, PATERNOSTER ROW.

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 212. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 19, 1881. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The "Power" of the Holy People "Scattered" (Dan. xii. 7)	29
The Testimony of the British Triads. By W. H. W. Part II.	30
The Rev. B. Wrey Saville's Defection. By the Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille	31
The Anglo-Israel Discussion between the Editor of the Church of England Messenger (of Melbourne) and the Rev. Canon Brownrigg, of Launceston, Tasmania. Part III.	32
"Our Big Village"	33
The Rev. William Barker, of Hastings, and Our Identity. Part I.	33
"The Enemy Coming in Like a Flood"	34
Example of the Practical Use Being Now Made in the United States of the Great Pyramid	34
The Christian Again	35
Correspondence	35

THE "POWER" OF THE HOLY PEOPLE "SCATTERED."—DAN. XII. 7.

OUR readers, some of them, probably noticed the sub-leader of The Times, of January 6, 1881, wherein the writer lamented the sad condition of the British Empire to-day, and in accents disconsolate declared the outland possessions of Great Britain were worthless, expensive, burdensome. The editorial, in fact, was the work of a man in a thorough ill-temper at everything having gone wrong just when the Government would be brought to trial before the Parliament of the country, opening their second session the same day. The moral of what The Times preached on that occasion was clearly this: Our colonial possessions and heathen empire are expensive and burdensome already. The component parts of the former are virtually independent nations, but their independence leads the mother country into endless wars and terrible, as well as expensive, responsibilities, which do not injure the colonies, but constantly drag us back in our career of prosperity. What have we gained by these possessions? "Are we the weaker or the stronger, the richer or the poorer, the happier or the reverse, for our vast colonial possessions?" The Times's answer is, No, no, certainly no. And of course the logical conclusion is, "Do what Mr. Gladstone and some of his supporters in the Cabinet would do; let us not increase our vast dominions in any direction, but, if possible, get rid of any, or all if we possibly can, and we shall be very happy in our 'tight little island' home here, which would indeed be then the abode of the blest, were it not that Ireland is as bad as the rest of the outland empire, and as troublesome." The remedy, we suppose, must be to ask the Americans or the French to annex Ireland, and thus save us the trouble of governing and coercing them? That we may not be suspected of exaggerating the extraordinary character of the Times article, we quote its salient parts for our readers' benefit, leaving them to judge whether or no we have correctly described it. Speaking of our thirty-five millions in the British islands, the journalist says:—

Some of them are rich, many are fairly well-to-do, but the vast majority of our population consists of men and women who earn their daily bread by their daily work, and have little or nothing to spare. Can it be said that any one of these is benefited by the sacrifices that all have made on behalf of South Africa? We cannot but be proud of the heroism displayed by Englishmen at Rorke's Drift, or at Ulundi, but can we honestly say that a quarrel with Cetywayo or the Boers of the Transvaal is one in which it is worth while for a single English soldier to shed his blood? What have we gained in forty years spent more or less in fighting with natives in South Africa? It is surely time we asked ourselves where our obligations are to end, and endeavoured to frame some sort of an estimate of the relation between our resources and our ever-increasing responsibilities.

The Imperial instincts of the English people can certainly find more than ample satisfaction within the existing limits of the Empire. The South African colonists may dream if they please of a dominion extending to the Equatorial lakes, but it is for them to realise it if they can, for the dream is forbidden to a people who have already so much to do in all parts of the world that they can rarely find time for attending to their own immediate concerns. Are we, indeed, the weaker or the stronger, the richer or the poorer, the happier or the reverse, for our vast colonial possessions? The questions are not easy to answer, and we must be careful not to be misled by the analogy of territorial extensions like those of Russia or of the United States. Russian annexations are conterminous with the parent state, and subordinate to its policy. Wherever the United States extend, the policy and ideas of Congress and a single financial system are supreme. The British colonial empire, on the other hand, is virtually an agglomeration of co-ordinate and independent Powers, each, as we know to our cost, with its own conception of such foreign policy as pertains to it, of commerce, of tariffs, and the like.

Notwithstanding the vaunted rivalry of America, we are still the most enterprising and industrious people in the world, but our efforts at peaceful progress are constantly checked by wars we did nothing to provoke, and by quarrels in which we have no real share. We spend vast sums on armaments, and yet Europe smiles as it sees our legitimate and necessary influence thwarted by the perpetual dissipation of our forces on distant and profitless enterprises. Thus it comes to pass that the attention of Parliament is more and more engrossed with affairs which lie outside our special interests, and we are all of us forced to think of everything in the world except our immediate concerns. Foreign policy, finance, military and naval efficiency, the whole structure of our general policy, in fact, is affected by the recurring obligations of our vast and scattered Empire. If we wish to speak decisively in Europe, the force required to back our words is scattered in Asia or in Africa.

Digitized by Google

Do our readers notice these last words? "Our force required to back our words is 'scattered' in Asia or in Africa." This reflection brings to mind our leader in BANNER No. 211, where we ventured to suggest it was just by such dissipation of our forces we were intended by our God to be isolated and enfeebled what time God's judgments (now oh! so near at hand!) were ready to be launched against "yonder ill-consolidated Europe." It is in Europe the Times, and therefore the British wish to make their voices heard. No doubt! Israel was always meddling and interfering. But God's resolve is, they shall now at least "for a little moment, as it were," "hide themselves," enter into "their chambers, shut their Gates about them." Till when? "Till the indignation be overpast, till that great earthquake, such as there was not since men were upon earth, so mighty an earthquake, so great," have spent its terrific force (Isa. xxvi. 20, 21; Zeph. iii. 8; Rev. xvi. 18).

To contrast the ways of men, and the ways and purposes of God, we have only to refer to the text we have alluded to at the head of this article, and we see a remarkable announcement in the prophetic page of what God means to do with the holy people—British-Israel—and on the other hand what man, ignorant of our Identity and resolved to defeat God's purposes, desires should be the result of the events we see enacting before us. The Lord said by Daniel (xii. 7) that His purposes of grace towards His people Israel should have their end "when He had accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people." This very thing the Times with grief and anguish records, in the very words, is being done to-day; and then, in ignorance of our Identity, and of the fact that the British are that very "holy people," that chosen race, the journalist, in vexation of spirit, chafes under the ordeal, regrets the "scattering of the power," and would, like a wayward child, that everything done should be undone, and the Empire dismembered rather than God's will be done. Let us fall into the hands of God rather than into the hands of men like the writers in the Times.

We are God's people Israel, and by us the prophecies must be fulfilled. We are, thank God, visibly fulfilling them, the Times itself being our literal, true, and accurate witness. We, therefore, may rejoice at the fate, which "scatters" the British force to-day to India, to Basutoland, to the Transvaal, to Ireland, and to the British Gates throughout the world, since we know (God's Word testifying) that "when He shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people, all these things shall be finished." Israel, praise ye the Lord, and pray ye also that the Lord will "hasten the day" when the end shall come, since with it comes our blessed Master Himself, and our own national regeneration, and all that is promised us as Israel in Isaiah lx.; Jer. xxxi. 33, xxxiii. 9; Ezek. xxxvii. 26—28, and in many another glorious promise of the Word.

THE TESTIMONY OF THE BRITISH TRIADS.

By W. H. W.

(Concluded from page 26.)

PART II.

ANOTHER achievement of Hu is mentioned in Triad xcvii., which is given as one of the three principal achievements of the Isle of Britain—viz., "The ship of Nevyod Nav Neivion, which carried in it the male and female of all living when the lake of floods broke out, the prominent calves of Hu the mighty that dragged the Avanc of the lake to the land, so that the lake broke out no more." These calves are found in other accounts to be two in number, called "Ninian" and "Peibiaw." Dr. Owen Pugh mentions that many tales were up to his time recited in every part of Wales, which went to prove in what great veneration they were held even in Christian times, and that there was a curious piece of music preserved wherein was imitated the lowing of the animals, the noise of their chains, and other things connected with that feat. Until a late period there were in the Church of Llan Ddewi Brevi (St. David's of the Lowing) vast horns kept as relics, and shewn as the horns of these animals. They were also separated, and roamed in search of each other. Several lakes in Wales are also mentioned, whence the terrible Avanc was drawn.

Bearing these traditionary statements in mind, let us look at what is stated in 2 Esdras III.: "Thou didst ordain two living creatures, the one Thou callest Enoch and the other Leviathan; and didst separate the one from the other. Unto Enoch Thou gavest one part, which was dried up the third day. Unto Leviathan Thou gavest the seventh—namely, the moist." And also in 1 Kings xxii., and 2 Kings xvii.: "The children of Israel left all the commandments of the Lord their God and made them molten images, even two calves, and made a groove, and worshipped all the host of heaven, and served Baal."

"The children of Israel walked in all the sins of Jeroboam until the Lord removed all Israel out of His sight, as He said by all His servants the prophets, so was Israel carried away out of their own land to Assyria."

The Sepharvaites burnt their "children in fire to Adramelech and Anamelech, the gods of Sepharvaim." They feared the Lord and served "their own gods after the manner of the nations."

In Wales there are two places called Bala, which word is supposed to be derived from the name of the gods referred to—viz., Baal. Both places are on the banks of large lakes. The charge that the British Druids sacrificed human lives is well known, although in all probability such a thing was done only under exceptional or in extreme circumstances. Seeing that the Israelites had sunk so deeply into idolatry, and departed so far from God, as indicated in the verses quoted, and considering that the circumstances of their captivity in Assyria would only tend to alienate them still more, it would not be at all surprising if they had adopted Druidism, although it was a religion opposed in many points to the one they had forsaken.

Here is another extraordinary statement contained in Triad lxi., first series. The three knights in King Arthur's court who received the Greal (I am unable to translate this word; I conclude it represents some mark of distinction)—Galaad, the son of Launcelot du Lac; Peredur, the son of the Earl of York; and Burt, the son of Burt, the king of Gascony—the three were descended from David the prophet, as the stories of the Greal testify.

In Triad xcvii., third series, one of the three grand achievements of the Isle of Britain, is the stones of Gwyddon Ganhebon, on which are to be read the whole arts and knowledges of the world. Can this have reference to the Great Pyramid? In an essay called "Collbren y Beirdd," by Taliesin Williams, which gained a prize in Abergavenny Eisteddfod in 1840, there is a curious extract from an old manuscript which treats more at large of "Knowledges of the World"—viz., "Einigan Gawr saw three columns of light, and in them were shown the whole of the knowledges that ever were, or ever will be; and he took three gwydden gerdin (I am unable to translate these words, but I believe they mean some kind of wood), and he put (or marked) upon them pictures and signs (are not these like Egyptian hieroglyphics?) of all the knowledges to remember them, and shewed them; but those who saw them misunderstood and falsely interpreted them, and learnt false knowledges, and considered the 'gwydden' (or wood) as God, where only His name appeared."

"Einigan seeing this (that is, the misinterpretation of knowledge), became extremely sorrowful, so sorrowful that he broke the three gwydden, and died from the intensity of his grief, but with his last breath he prayed to God that mankind should have among them just knowledges, and a just understanding to utilise them; and after one year and a day after the death of Einigan, Menw saw three rods growing out of the mouth of Einigan, and on them were complete knowledges of the ten letters, and their mode of arrangement into knowledges of language and words; then the rods were taken, and the knowledges were learnt from them, the whole except the name of God. Then cyfrinach (secrecy) was adopted to prevent the NAME being falsified, and from that resulted cyfrinach of the bards of the Isle of Britain. God gave His protection to the cyfrinach, and to Menw He gave a thorough understanding of the protection and of the knowledges, and such understanding is called 'Awen from God.' Blessed is he who receives it. Amen. So be it."

The most cursory reader will be reminded of the Scriptural account of giving the ten commandments to Moses in looking over the extract. The sin committed by the early Britons according to this account was idolatry—"they considered the gwydden as God, where only His name appeared." Einigan was so grieved that he broke the gwydden. The knowledges were afterwards supplied of the ten letters, except the name of God.

The substance of the extract is given in the above three points, which very strikingly resemble the account of the Israelites worshipping the Golden Calf, Moses breaking the stones in consequence, and the subsequent giving of the Ten Commandments. It may be said that there were three gwydden, but only two stones. This corruption would be easily accounted for—the habit of the Britons to arrange their statements in threes, and the tradition as to Einigan beholding three pillars of light, would naturally give rise to the error.

One thing appears clear, that the points of resemblance between the tradition and the Scriptural account are so close and striking, that it may fairly be said that somehow the latter has found its way to, and been handed down in a corrupted form in the traditions of the Cymry.

How is it that this tradition is found among the traditions of the Cymry? The inference is not at all an unfair one, when we say that it is a remnant—corrupted it certainly is, but still a remnant—of a truthful statement of certain circumstances in the history of the Britons when they were part of the Israelitish tribes.

THE REV. B. WREY SAVILE'S DEFECTION.

BY THE REV. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE.

IN common with yourself and the great number of your readers, I regret the sudden and surprising defection from our ranks of the Rev. B. W. Savile. One is always sorry to see a champion who has done good service on one side, going over to the other to counter-work all he has done. Nevertheless, if the cause we advocate is truth, not even your own defection could destroy the truth; for it stands, not upon our feeble grasp and support of it, but upon the foundations of God. If it be not the truth, then I have little doubt that in due course we shall all discover our error, as I believe we are all sincerely anxious not to advance novel theories, but to argue only for that which we very decidedly believe, and which we consider of sufficient importance to urge with persistence and earnest effort.

Mr. Savile's latest work, which is one of recantation, has an uncomfortable feeling about it. It reads to me far more like the compulsory recantation of a man who, nevertheless, holds more to the facts against which he writes, than to those which he is now advocating; and one is carried back to similar transactions many years old, when a certain great man was obliged to make his celebrated recantation of the Copernican doctrine, but with additions which were not in the compact. Rising from his knees after this solemnity, he whispered to a friend, "E pur se muove!" I do not wish to attribute insincerity to my brother clergyman, Mr. Savile; I only say that his recantation reads somewhat in that fashion.

Two things I notice in the work by Mr. Savile. First, a going back to the old delusion about the Jews embracing all that now exist of the Twelve Tribes; that is to say, the argument goes back to those tribes and small patches of people who have some, or even many, lingering Jewish features, by which a Hebrew or semi-Hebrew connection is distinctly traceable. Now, this is precisely what we are not to expect in the matter of the Ten Tribes. There are to be indications and identifications which shall be sufficiently clear to guide the instructed (Dan. xii. 10); but, to expect to find the Ten Tribes as a Jewish people, is to try to find exactly what Holy Scripture leads us not to expect. The indications we are led to look for are of a different character, and are not all of them summed up, as some seem to think, in the rite of circumcision. If our arguments, which are founded upon God's clearly stated promises, not to the Jews, but to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, be read and studied with the salt of sincerity and common sense, it will be seen that there is a wide field which Israel is to fill, which cannot be filled by the theories of those who advance small wandering tribes in all parts of the globe as the present representatives of the House of Israel. Secondly, I notice an argument which Mr. Savile has used more than once in varying form, and which he states thus in "Anglo-Israelism and the Great Pyramid" (see preface, page 4): "And inasmuch as there are probably in this country upwards of 40,000 professed ministers of Christ amongst Churchmen and Nonconformists who have been set apart for the express purpose of interpreting the sacred oracles of God and preparing their flocks for the coming of the Lord, if you can find one hundred, or even fifty ministers out of that large number who accept your interpretation of Isaiah xix. 19, I shall be more than surprised." A similar argument is used in the BANNER, vol. iv., No. 189, p. 321.

But it seems to me that the argument goes really in precisely the opposite direction, and I say that these professed ministers are probably the least likely, if they are not actually the least capable, persons to admit so new an interpretation of any passage or passages. There is no groove so obstinate as a professional groove, and this obstinacy has always marked the persons "who have been set apart for the express purpose of interpreting the sacred oracles of God." In the earlier dispensation God frequently took His agent from without the ranks of these very people. It was so in the list of the prophets; but never more marvellously remarkable than in the selection by our Lord of His Apostles, clearly not from the established or regular ranks of those set apart to interpret. If fifty cannot now be found to accept your view of Isaiah xix. 19, could fifty have been found 2,000 years ago to accept Mr. Savile's view of Isaiah liii.? The fact is that God has frequently to go away from our ranks to find an agent willing and ready to do His will, and to speak His Word rather than that agent's own mind and will. It was this very difficulty which most effectually barred the Gospel to so many in our Lord's day. It was this fact which He so beautifully illustrated in the parable of the good Samaritan. Judged by the strict letter of the law, as expounded by the lawyers "set apart for the express purpose of interpreting the sacred oracles of God," the Priest and Levite were probably right; but our Lord shewed that what might there be considered the orthodox interpretation was unspeakably wrong. It was a case of "summum jus summa injuria." And so it may be with the established teachers of the "oracles of God," the interpretation may be perfectly orthodox, and may from that very cause miss the mark. At the very least, no argument is deducible in the way Mr. Savile brings it to bear, as the argument from the other side is stronger still.

One other point, not taken from Mr. Savile's pamphlet, I may add—namely, that much is argued against our contention because we, to some extent, take the two ends of the chain and leave the middle somewhat to connect itself. This is true in so far that we take God's promises at one end, and at the other their exact fulfilment; the middle part we are compelled to accept in a somewhat fragmentary connection at present, though this may not always be the case. But this argument is no more to be turned against us than the argument that because an article of any kind peculiar to the country, say of Australia, was in this country, and I did not know exactly how it had reached this country, therefore it could not have come from Australia. My first impression might be that the distance was so great, and the risks so unnumbered, that the whole thing must be an invention. I might say, too, that as this particular article had not come by the authorised mail steamer and by sea all the way, but partly by sea and partly by a circuitous land route, it was impossible to believe that it ever was in or came from Australia. The two ends of the chain are there, and in due course the connection of every link will come forth to establish the precise truth of every word spoken by God. In the meanwhile, and in humble yet decided opposition to any or all my brethren the clergy, I hold that the Anglo-Israel argument is the best, the most intelligent and satisfactory that has been produced, and I purpose holding it till a better appears.

January 1, 1881.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL DISCUSSION

BETWEEN THE EDITOR OF THE "CHURCH OF ENGLAND MESSENGER" (OF MELBOURNE), AND THE REV. CANON BROWNRIGG, OF LAUNCESTON, TASMANIA.

(Concluded from page 24.)

Containing the Editor's Article on "Anglo-Israelism," Reprinted from the "Messenger," and Canon Brownrigg's Reply Thereto, which was Suppressed by the Editor.

PART III.

A Reply to the Editor of the "Church of England Messenger."

BY CANON BROWNRIGG.

I PROCEED next to the editor's question respecting circumcision as an everlasting sign, and I answer (1) The expression, an everlasting sign, must not be strained, nor too rigidly interpreted, otherwise Jewish missions would (for various reasons which could be mentioned) be unlawful. (2) No nation could lose the knowledge of its ancestry if it retained its original rites; it could not, therefore, be expected that Lost Israel would be found practising circumcision. (3) Judah has never been uncovenanted, and hence it retains the sign of the old covenant; Israel was uncovenanted (Hosea i. 9), and has, therefore, lost that sign; but (4) Israel, though uncovenanted would be eventually restored to Divine favour (Jer. xxxi. 20; Hosea ii. 19—23), not, however, under the old covenant (which was to pass away), but under the new covenant, and must, therefore, be found with the sign of the new covenant—i.e., with baptism, and not circumcision; hence, the non-practise of circumcision by the British nation, instead of presenting a difficulty, helps to establish its Identity with Israel.

I come now to a portion of the editorial article, which, I fear I must say, is somewhat discursive and incoherent, as any one will discover who attempts its analysis; but I gather out of it the following particulars:—

1. A highly important admission which fitly represents the present position of the British nation. The editor admits that "the promises to Israel of supremacy among nations, and a multitudinous population," are unquestionably found in Scripture . . . . . and that they were made to the literal Israel, and were (are?) to be literally fulfilled. (The italics are mine.)

2. Certain conclusions founded in misconceptions.

The editor concludes for one thing—that these promises were made to the Twelve Tribes, and not to one portion of it alone.

Respecting the promise of supremacy, I answer (1) The promises in Deut. xxvi. 18, 19, and xxviii. 13 do not necessarily forbid a separate primary fulfilment in the case of Israel, apart from Judah, for (2) the supremacy among nations is promised especially to Israel as distinct from Judah (Jer. xxxi. 7). The context deals with Ephraim (Israel) as distinct from Judah, and the text determines Israel to be the chief of the nations. "Shout among ("because of," as rendered by the Dean of Canterbury in Speaker's Com.) the chief of the nations." And now,—

Respecting the multitudinous population, I answer (1) The promise in Gen. xv. 5 does not necessarily forbid a separate primary fulfilment in the case of Israel apart from Judah—for (2) the promise of a multitudinous population is made expressly to Ephraim and Manasseh, and not to Judah (Gen. xlviii. 19). The "nation and a company of nations" (Gen. xxxv. 11), and the "multitude of nations," is to descend from the side of the kingdom of Israel, as perfectly distinct from Judah (see also Hosea i. 10). Doubtless, when Israel and Judah shall be reunited, and become as one nation, that supremacy and that multitudinousness will fulfil to the letter the promises in Deuteronomy just noticed, as if there had not been in the meantime special promises to Israel apart from Judah.

For another thing, the editor concludes that "these promises cannot be fulfilled without contradiction to God's Word, except to the whole nation to which they were addressed, and after their return as a nation to obedience to God's law." To a part of this I have already replied, but to that which relates to the time when these promises are to be fulfilled, I answer (1) God's Word decides that before Israel and Judah are reunited, Israel must be a multitudinous seed. "The number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured or numbered," . . . . . then (when Israel is thus numberless) shall the children of Israel be gathered together, &c. (Hosea i. 10, 11). To this numberless seed the modern Jews present no counterpart whatever. (2) That as the prophecies concerning Judah (Jews) are in course of fulfilment, the logical conclusion is inevitable that those relating to Israel must be also in course of fulfilment, and (3) the consensus of opinion among prophetic students is, that the restoration of the Jews is very near at hand, and if this expectation is correct, which, perhaps, no one will deny, then Israel must be now a multitudinous people, which is precisely the case with our British nation at this very moment.

In the next place, the editor concludes that "if selection was to be made of one of the two Houses for honour, it could not (?) have been the House of Ephraim;" and on what does he rest this? On his unsupported and untenable assertion that out of that penal banishment they (Ephraim) have never emerged, and on selections from Scripture to the utter ignoring of such as show that "backsliding Israel hath justified herself more than treacherous Judah" (Jer. iii. 11), and passages from Hosea which show God's gracious mind towards Ephraim, reinstating that people in His favour; and, strangely enough, forgetting also that the kingdom of Judah brought its wickedness to a climax by crucifying the Redeemer, in consequence of which it is suffering to this day.

I think now it will be generally admitted that it is not the theory, but the editor's attack upon the identifications that must be considered to have broken down.

There remains but one point to be answered. The editor desires some light to be thrown upon the contention that the English and American nations are the kindred peoples, Ephraim and Manasseh. As I cannot possibly put this matter into plainer terms than will be found in my second article to "S. P. G.," I need not attempt to do so, I therefore limit myself to the seeming difficulty which somewhat perplexes the editor. He says, "But surely Ephraim and Manasseh parted from their parent stock ages before the Christian era, and the English and American nations, at the earliest, not before the seventeenth century after it, when the colony of Virginia was established."

The answer to this is, that as a matter of fact, after the Assyrian captivity, the tribal distinctions among the captured Tribes of Israel became lost. Israel's wanderings in this state (to the highest degree of probability which could reasonably be expected, short of the positive), have been traced from Assyria to Britain; and now the indisputable fact of the American and British nations presenting the exact counterpart of that which was predicted concerning Ephraim and Manasseh in Gen. xlviii. 19, suggests the only reasonable and very possible conclusion, that Ephraim and Manasseh were in Britain together, until Manasseh separated, appearing now as the American nation, and Ephraim's "multitude of nations," in the numerous and vast independent colonies of Britain. Call this mere conjecture if you will, but, can "S. P. G."—can the editor—can any other readers furnish any better, or, indeed, any other evidence of the fulfilment of that prophetic announcement?—for it must be fulfilled.

And now, in the words of Professor Max Müller: "What are called wild theories are in many cases very tame theories; students at first laugh at them, turn their backs on them, and try every possible exit to escape from them. But, at last, when they are hemmed in by facts on every side, and see that there is no escape, they tamely submit to the inevitable, and, after a time, the inevitable is generally found to be the intelligible and reasonable."

"OUR BIG VILLAGE."

From the City Press, of November 20, 1880, we take the following, part of an article on the value of that excellent institution, "The London City Mission," which we regret to know is in want of funds. Writing of our already enormous, but increasing Metropolis, the editor says:—

The appeal of the London City Mission for renewed support is grounded on the reasonable and incontrovertible argument of the enormous annual increase in the population of London. Figures are adduced in support of a statement which hardly needed such assistance, and it is shown that there were added to London in the year 1879 no less than "21,589 new houses, forming 401 new streets, and a total length of more than 71 miles." This increase proceeds steadily year by year, and shows no indication of being arrested. It is still going on in every direction. It is obvious that "to meet the requirements of such an increase of population a constant increase of missionaries is demanded." This is incontestable.

Have our readers noticed the wonderful increase, not only of London in respect of new houses, new streets, and new suburbs; but of almost every other city in the land? It does not appear in many cases that all these new houses are just now wanted. They are decidedly over building in and about Bristol and Clifton, and we hear it is the same also at Brighton, and perhaps in the neighbourhood of London. What can be the cause of this? May it not be, as a Brighton Israelite lady suggests, in order to provide houses in Great Britain for the enormous influx of continental Jews we expect to reach these shores ere long, driven out of Germany by persecution and Judenhetze, driven out of Russia by the military conscription, and attracted to Great Britain by the prophetic drawing which Jer. iii. 18, Hos. i. 11, and Ezek. xxxvii. 19, so clearly indicate and supply. This is a curious thought to set side by side with the forces now being brought to bear on the House of Judah in Germany and elsewhere to expel them from the continent. This may, in truth, be the fulfilment of the heavenly voice and warning conveyed in Rev. xviii. 4: "Come out of her, My people" (Judah), that "ye be not partakers of her (Rome's) sins," "and that ye receive not of her plagues." And, doubtless, the House of Israel (wandering, roving Englishmen) are included in the warning cry urging them to quit the continent in preparation for the great earthquake. Israel, praise ye the Lord for His sparing mercy.

THE REV. WILLIAM BARKER, OF HASTINGS, AND OUR IDENTITY.

PART I.

A just Nemesis has overtaken our late opponent at Hastings, the Rev. William Barker, and he has had to submit to the irony of fate! On a late occasion Mr. A. H. Skinner read a paper at the Wellington-square Baptist Chapel before the members of the Mutual Improvement Association, and the president of that meeting was our quondam opponent, the Rev. Minister of the chapel, Mr. Barker. The subject of the paper was, "Is England superior to other nations?" The debate was opened by statements on this topic by Mr. Skinner, which ought to have caused Mr. Barker to rush from the chair, and call upon the reader to desist; for he proved blindly and unwittingly that "England" was Israel. Almost every sentence he uttered went to prove some grand point of our contention, showing the absolute identity between the British and Lost Israel, as proved by Holy Scripture. While Mr. Barker was listening to the opener as he detailed his case, surely he must have thought of Philo-Israel's arguments in the late public discussion, and he must have felt he was supporting doctrines perilously near to the assertions of his late antagonist. Yet he was, as chairman, supporting them, and we do not read that he rose to move a vote of dissent from the opener's conclusions? Let us see where Mr. Skinner's and our views point in the same direction. He affirmed, and no one denied it,—

1. That the British, in a religious point of view, and as a people who respect God's Word, stand alone among the nations. Here he affirmed what God's Word does of Israel, that she is just now "the Christian nation," above only, and not beneath, in respect to national religion (Numbers xxiii. 9; Hosea i. 10; Deut. xxviii. 1, 13), "dwelling alone."

2. That in national power we are facile princeps. The lecturer attributed this not to our possession of the Gates (Gibraltar and the rest), but because the British are in personal courage before all nations! Another instance of Israelite superiority given us in Deut. xxviii. 1—14; Joshua i. 5—7).

3. That British battles are won with few troops as compared with the numbers of the enemy—an Israelite fact (Lev. xxvi. 7, 8; Joshua xxiii. 10, &c.)

4. That we hold our world-wide dependencies by our small handful of brave men. Which Empire, being God's gift to Israel, we hold by His power (Psa. ii. 8; Isa. xlix. 8).

5. That our equal administration of public justice in our Courts of Law is a point in which we are superior to all nations, which is only another way of saying we are "the righteous nation," alias Israel! (Isa. xxvi. 2; lx. 21, &c.)

6. That in physical power we are pre-eminent, living and thriving in all climates; succeeding in all as no other nation does; both being Israelite characteristics, as Deut. xxviii. 1, 13; Josh. i. 5—8; also Isa. xlix. 10, distinctly prove.

7. That the English language and customs are universally popular and supersede all others, destroying them and taking their place. Here again we have our Identity teaching adopted by Mr. Skinner, no doubt to Mr. Barker's consternation, (Deut. xxviii. 1—13; Zeph. iii. 9.)

8. That the British excel all other races in the inventive faculty and intellectual power, our nation having given to mankind all their chief blessings, such as are conferred by steam, by ocean navigation, by astronomical, geographical, and geological discoveries. Here Mr. Skinner distinctly affirmed we are Israel; for God said to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, that their race, and theirs alone, should be the instrument of "blessing to all the nations, to all the families, and to all the kindreds of the world" (Gen. xii. 2, 3, xviii. 18, xxii. 17, 18, xxvi. 4, xxviii. 14, xlviii. 15—22; Num. xxiii. 20, 21; Isa. xxvii. 6, xliii. 21; Acts iii. 25, &c., &c.).

9. That Americans are the brethren of the British, and their success is ours; another way of saying they are Ephraim's brother Manasseh, and blessed with us, though in an inferior degree (Gen. xlviii. 19).

10. That the religion of Britain and America is the only one in existence which has largely evangelised the world, improving its moral condition. But what is this but Israel's function, as Isa. xxvii. 6, and xliii. 21, with many another Identity text, declares?

11. That our British Parliamentary system of government is unequalled by any other power for excellence and political freedom, another instance of our Israelite distinction, on which we have so often dilated (Deut. xxviii. 13; Num. xi. 16; Exod. xviii. 17—24).

12. That our world-wide supremacy depends in great measure on the maintenance of our "wide and extensive interests," another way of declaring Israel's dominion rests on God's good gift to her of the Gates, with the "heathen and colonial empires" (Gen. xxii. 17, xxxv. 11; Psa. ii. 8).

13. That the British Empire, on which the sun never sets, has for its aim, "the elevation of the nations of the earth, now so immoral and enslaved;" words which in the name of our Identity we entirely endorse, and constantly used in our contention with Mr. Barker as pregnant proof of our Identity with Israel, as shown by the many texts we have already quoted above, and relied on so often in our discussions, not only with the Rev. W. Barker, but with all our other opponents.

We think even Mr. Barker must now cry Peccavi! and admit our Israelite origin. We feel that if he does not, he really secretly holds our views, since it does not appear he dissented from Mr. Skinner's conclusions, or that they were negatived in discussion. We now ask our readers to peruse what Mr. Skinner said, and leave him in our next issue to speak for himself. We quote from the Hastings and St. Leonard's Observer of Saturday, November 13, 1880.

(To be continued.)

"THE ENEMY COMING IN LIKE A FLOOD."

A CONGRESS OF FREETHINKERS.

THE sittings of the International Congress of Freethinkers have commenced. The attendance is numerous, and includes many ladies. M. Goffin, the president, in his opening speech, said that it was necessary for freethinkers to avow their opinions in public and in private life, and recommended the formation of a universal federation of freethinkers. A committee was appointed, consisting of M. Goffin (Belgium), Herr Büchner (Germany), Mrs. Besant (England), Mr. Bennett (America), M. Lemaitre (France), and M. Dablin (Holland). A demand was made that preference should be given to questions of practical interest to those of purely theoretical interest, but the original order of the day was maintained. Reports were then read on the historical development and present literature of rationalism in various countries. Mrs. Besant's report was much applauded. The second sitting was rather stormy, French orators speaking on the question of the separation of Church and State, contending that both ought to be suppressed, and proposing that the programme of this and future Congresses should be extended to political and social questions, while others eulogised the Commune. It was then resolved that the general council of the Federation of Freethinkers is to have its seat at London, Dr. De Paepe, a leading Belgian member of the Congress, observing that Brussels does not offer sufficient guarantees of political liberty for the purpose.

We understand these Congresses will not be held in London, as (1) The Protestantism of Israel's land is felt to be a fatal bar by these "unclean frogs;" (2) The public press of England is too respectable to report their doings; and (3) The foreign freethinkers do not like to cross the "silver streak."

We thank God we are not to be contaminated with their teachings. We can well afford to be without them.

EXAMPLE OF THE PRACTICAL USE BEING NOW MADE IN THE UNITED STATES OF THE GREAT PYRAMID,

And its Metrological system, as supporting Anglo-Saxon Weights and Measures in opposition to the Modern and Atheistic French Metric System.

INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR PRESERVING AND PERFECTING WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

OHIO AUXILIARY SOCIETY.—CHAS. LATIMER, PRESIDENT.

AT a meeting of the National Academy of Sciences, held in Washington, D. C., in Jan. 1866, a committee reported in favour of the adoption of a decimal system of weights and measures, and recommended Congress to legalise the use of the French Metric System—"though not without defects"—in the Custom Houses, Post Offices, &c. A law was subsequently enacted making the use of the metric system legal, though not obligatory. Since the passage of this law, which was introduced and urged forward by some earnest and mysterious influences, most desperate efforts have been made to make the use of this French system obligatory, to the exclusion of our own well-known system, based on that of England, and in use by English speaking people from time immemorial, and to the destruction of all our weighing and measuring apparatus (costing many millions of dollars), rendering useless all our engineering and mechanical tables and formulæ (the basis on which the various machines and engines made in this country have been constructed), and on which are founded calculations of strength of materials, sectional areas, steam pressure, power, velocity, capacity, and weight; "so that the mechanical engineer may be said to think in inches, calculate in inches, and work in inches."

The same secret influences which brought about the Act of Congress above mentioned has been strong enough to procure the adoption of the French system by the engineers of the coast survey, and our marine charts, tables, surveys, &c., have been for years made with the French Metre, working dire confusion in our coast service, which will result in compelling our navigators to go to England to buy their ocean charts in order to get something they can understand.

The same influences have been industriously at work ever since the first public Act in 1866 to induce Congress to pass an Act making the French Metric System obligatory in our custom houses, post offices, &c., and a bill is now before Congress to that effect, and will become a law unless vigorous efforts are made to defeat it.

The most prominent and almost the only advocates of this French system are to be found in a small society centered in Columbia College, N. Y., and organized in 1873, with the President of that College at its head, and one of its Professors at the other end. We say "small society," for although having a membership of about 160, its meetings are attended only by its wire workers. For example: At its meeting of Dec. 27, 1878, there were present only three members of its Council, and at the meeting of the Society same day only seven, including the three already named. At the next meeting, May 20, 1879, no quorum of Council present, though only three members were required, and but eight at the subsequent meeting of the Society. At the annual meeting of the Society, Dec. 29, 1879, no quorum of the Council, and only seven members of the Society, were present. These facts are from the last report published. There are no reasons for supposing that the attendance in May and December, 1880, was any better than 1878 and 1879. But this society makes up in activity what it lacks in workers; for there has not been for years a meeting of any learned society, or scientific or professional body of men, where the President or one of the satellites of the so-called "American Metrological Society" is not there with an essay, resolution, or speech, in favour of this French Metric System, with its jargon of Greek and Latin nomenclature, while the country has been flooded with documents advocating it. It has been said, whether justly or not, "that the President of Columbia College has so many metric bees in his bonnet that he eats, sleeps, talks and walks exclusively by the French Metre, and can think or talk of nothing else," in fact that he is out and out a metromaniac! But this is unimportant.

To meet the operations of this society, a society was organised in Boston, Mass., on November 8, 1879, called, "The International Institute for Preserving Weights and Measures," with prospective Auxiliary and affiliated Societies in all the States and larger cities of the Union. The first formed and most active of these Auxiliaries is the Ohio, located at Cleveland, O., with Charles Latimer, Chief Engineer of the N. Y., P. & O. R. R., at its head, with J. H. Devereux, the eminent railway manager, Henry Chisholm and Thos. R. Reeves, leading manufacturers, as Trustees, and W. H. McCurdy, prominent iron merchant, as Treasurer. The names of these men is sufficient guarantee that whatever they undertake will be pushed to a satisfactory conclusion. This Society has undertaken to bring such an influence to bear as will not only arrest any further legislation by Congress in favour of the French Metric System, but to cause a repeal of the laws already upon the statute book favouring in any way the French system, and directing our coast survey to be recorded in terms known and understood by our sailors and commercial men. With this end in view, the International Institute and its Auxiliary Societies ask the immediate and earnest co-operation of every engineer, manufacturer, mechanic, merchant, and business man in the United States.

GEO. C. DAVIES, Recording Secretary.
G. W. CROSSETT, Corresponding Secretary.
(For the Ohio Auxiliary Society.)

Cleveland, O., Dec. 1, 1880.

"THE CHRISTIAN" AGAIN.

WE owe an apology to "An Old and Enthusiastic Reader" of The Christian, for what we and L. P. said concerning him on September 22, 1880, at page 378, BANNER No. 195. We were misled by the words of The Christian. On the whole we are glad that the error has drawn forth so full and excellent a confession of zeal for our Identity as our friend has now put before us, and we publish below. We can only say we wish all our fellow-believers were like him. We have to say on part of our friend, that though for private reasons he is not now able to spend much money on the propagation of the grand truths he believes so heartily, and works for so hard, he is prepared, if any one who has money wants the articles, to supply such with trees, seeds, and roots to the extent of 20s. to 50s.-worth free; the purchaser sending Philo-Israel the money to disburse in any way he pleases in furtherance of our Identity. Our friend is a seed merchant and nurseryman.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

"DEAR SIR,—In the BANNER, No. 195, 'The Old and Enthusiastic Reader' is made to say what he never did say. I find in looking over my letter to The Christian, January 15, 1880, there is not a word about proved or disproved. How the Christian came to use these two words on my account I am at a loss to understand. I suppose, Mr. Editor, it was upon these two words, proved and disproved, that you see me to be a feeble advocate of our Israelite origin; also you say I cannot be a well-read Israelite, or 'he would not have spoken and written as he did.' Now this is rather too much for an old and enthusiastic reader after ten years hard fighting with all kinds of Christians on the subject, to be told he is not well up in Identity truths. For myself I am quite satisfied with the proved truth that we British are the Ten Tribes. The thought is so comfortable and consoling.

"You say I am a rather timid and feeble advocate of the Identity. Allow me to state, sir, that from the first I fully believed it, and neither spared time or money in advancing the cause. The first time Mr. Hine was in my native town lecturing I paid all expenses; I sold and gave away above 1,500 of Mr. Hine's pamphlets. In 1872 I started for America with quite a lot of Mr. Hine's books; they were read eagerly on the steamer, and many a combat I had with the passengers, especially a Church of England minister. I left the Identification at St. John's (Newfoundland), also at Halifax (Nova Scotia), Norfolk (in Virginia), Baltimore, Pittsburg, Philadelphia, Alexandria, Washington, and New York; quite sorry I had not a book left on my return to give away. I also left them in Holland, Rotterdam, Antwerp, Bremen, and Enfurt (in Russia). The fact is, business is quite suspended with me when I can get any one to talk about the Identity. When first I entertained the idea that we English people were the Ten Lost Tribes I wrote to the editor of The Christian, and in his reply (I have not the letter by me) I remember how he thanked God that he knew that he belonged to spiritual Israel.

"I think 'an Old and Enthusiastic Reader' has said enough to convince the readers of the BANNER that he is not so timid after all.

"I am, yours truly,
"AN OLD AND ENTHUSIASTIC READER."

"IN the Times of to-day (Dec. 24, 1880)." writes L. P., "I note that John Lawrence Gadd was brought before the magistrates in Liverpool. I wonder if Dr. Bonar could trace any connection between this man's name and that of a Tribe of Israel?"

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—The following I copied from the supplement of the Christian Herald, for June, 1880:—

"THE FRUIT OF CHRISTIANITY.

"A Christian native in South India has written a tract for circulation among his heathen countrymen, referring to the kindness of British Christians in relieving the people in time of famine. He says:—'The very same good Christian people who sent the missionaries to do your souls good, showing you the worthlessness of idols, and the true way to heaven, as soon as they heard of our distress collected thousands of rupees, which they sent to missionaries to expend in buying clothes and food for us. Thus you see, O friends, who have been our benefactors. They have not looked upon our faces; they have not seen our distress; they are not of our race; they do not worship our gods, or attend festivals like ours. Why did they pity us? Why did they pour out their charity upon us strangers? It was because their Bible bid them have such a mind; because their God and Saviour taught them to do so by His example, when He was incarnate. They did not give this great charity in the famine to bribe you to become Christians. They did not ask what your religion was before giving it; they do not require you to become Christians in order to obtain it; they desired to do us good, and to remove our hunger. As the fruit, so is the tree. Behold some of the fruit of their holy religion, and judge you of the tree. If this religion has been so good for them, changing their cruel disposition, and making them powerful and prosperous, generous and pitiful, will it not be good for us also? Consider among yourselves whether the religion which has done these things is a good religion or not. Judge for yourselves whether you should not embrace it, that your children and you may enjoy its benefits also.'"

When I read the above, I could hardly help shedding tears. It seemed so very touching, and I thought you would like to read it for yourself. I would to God we British people were really a godly Christian people, as this poor Hindu says we are; but, oh, sir, how sad it is to think that we go on in such a careless way, as many of us do, when God is so very kind to us, and has, I believe, favoured us above every nation on the face of this globe!

I cannot help telling our Father that we do not deserve these blessings, but I know the cause of them! It is because we are His chosen people Israel, and He delights to do us good for His Name's sake.

I do not know how you feel towards our Government for the sad step they have taken towards India; but my sorrow at the thought of it is almost too much for me to bear at times. The only thing we can do, I think, is to leave it in the hands of the Almighty, and ask Him to help us in these trying circumstances.

I remain, your sincere friend,
G. W.

June 4, 1880.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—The enclosed cutting from yesterday's Daily Argus shews that gradually our Identity grows here. We have a Chief Rabbi on a visit to our colony, preaching and giving prominence to Identity opinions, these are gradually growing, and it is astonishing to see how attractive they become.

Yours faithfully,
HERBERT J. HENTY.

The extract is as follows:—

"The Rev. Alexander B. Davis, Chief Rabbi of the Jews of New South Wales, who is at present on a visit in Melbourne, preached on Saturday last a stirring sermon at the East Melbourne Synagogue to a crowded audience. The rev. lecturer taking for his text the Biblical narrative of the patriarch Jacob's dream, proceeded to show that the promised land of the Jews was every country where they enjoyed religious liberty and social equality. He pointed to the great Jewish statesmen in European countries and the high positions the Jews occupied as State officials and in their social relations with the members of other creeds. During the sermon the rev. lecturer expressed his firm belief that her Majesty Queen Victoria was a descendant from a noble Jewish family of antiquity, thus accepting the theory of the lately formed Anglo-Israelite sect."

Rexeth, Kew, Melbourne, Nov. 16, 1880.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let- three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions--four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND. During the month of December nearly 6,000 copies were distributed at the various London Railway Stations and Waiting Rooms. Donations towards the expenses of distribution will be received by R. Fergusson Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

Just published, Crown Octavo, cloth bound, gilt letters, 296 pages.

THE SEED OF ISAAC, BEING AN HISTORICAL REVIEW OF GOD'S DEALINGS WITH HIS CHOSEN PEOPLE ISRAEL.

BY J. D. GRANGER.

Post free, 4s., from THE AUTHOR, 34, Exeter-street, Plymouth, and ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just Published. Crown 8vo., 1s.

THE HOUSE OF JOSEPH IN ENGLAND.

BY A WATCHER.

Also by the same Author, Crown 8vo., 1s.

CHRIST IN JOSEPH.

A REPLY TO ANGLO-ISRAELISM in the Church Quarterly Review.

RIVINGTON'S, Waterloo-place, London, Oxford, and Cambridge.

Now Ready. Price 4d.

ISRAEL UBIQUITOUS: A Letter to an Inquirer. By REUBEN. With Diagram.

Price 2s. 6d., cloth gilt.

LINKS IN THE CHAIN OF EVIDENCE CONNECTING ISRAEL AND ENGLAND. By J. LEYLAND FEILDEN.

Price 1s. 6d., 2s., and 2s. 6d.

ISRAEL'S JUBILEE; OR, 1881. By the Author of "Links in the Chain," &c.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE GENTILES AND THE TIMES OF THE GENTILES. By the Author of "Links in the Chain," &c

London: W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, E.C.

Price 4d., by post 4½d. Special terms for a quantity.

THE ISRAEL OF GOD.

A SERVICE OF SONG Upon the Career and Destiny of God's Ancient People Israel. WORDS AND MUSIC. By C. W. E.

Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JAN. 19, 1881. All Rights Reserved.

TO OUR READERS.

WITH the number for January 5, THE BANNER OF ISRAEL commenced the Fifth Volume. This affords an excellent opportunity for the introduction of the work to NEW SUBSCRIBERS. We very earnestly ask every Reader of the BANNER, and Friend to our Identity cause, to make it a point to secure at least ONE NEW READER for the New Volume. Copies may be obtained, by ordering, of any bookseller or newsagent, or one copy will be sent weekly by post for 6 months for 3s. 9d.; 12 months for 7s. 6d.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL has rendered important service in the Identity movement, and is the recognised organ of that great and increasingly important body; as such, in increasing the circulation of the BANNER, the Identity cause is at the same time made more widely known, its important truths will become of increasing interest, and thus "our Identity with Lost Israel" will eventually become universally recognised.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

NEW WORK BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES. By PHILO-ISRAEL.

In handsome cloth, gilt, with Coloured Map, and several Illustrations, price 3s. 6d., by post 3s. 10d.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet court, Fleet-street.

PHILO-ISRAEL'S BOOK FOR CHILDREN.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth, gilt, 1s. Post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Third Edition.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST OR SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS AND TEACHINGS OF THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams. Price 4d., post free 5d.

A RESUME OF THE SCRIPTURAL ARGUMENT. Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? An Inquiry establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 4d.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters."

Price 4d., post free 5d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

London: Robert Banks Racquet-court Fleet-street.

Price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome, cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES, AND 1882. BY THE REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD, Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Price 2s. 6d., post free 2s. 9d. Bound in handsome cloth, gilt, bevelled boards, gilt edges, and beautifully printed on toned paper.

THE SISTERS OF HARROWDALE RECTORY. By MRS. M. A. SEARSON, ILLUSTRATED WITH A BEAUTIFUL DOUBLE PAGE FRONTISPIECE.

"In this work, the leading arguments used in support of our Identity are woven into a pleasing story, which is both interesting and instructive. The description of the Rectory is a beautiful picture of the quiet sanctity and repose of an English Christian household, situated amid that charming pastoral scenery which has its grandest development in the Southern and midland counties of England. It will prove entertaining to young and old, and should have a wide circulation."—The Heir of the World

THE DISTRIBUTION OF SHEM, HAM, AND JAPHETH. ISRAEL AN ARIAN SPEAKING PEOPLE.

A Paper read before the Cheltenham Anglo-Israel Association.

BY MAJOR-GENERAL A. M. RAINEY.

This Pamphlet is strongly recommended to Identity Associations and Distributors of Anglo-Israel literature. Being a complete answer to many of our objectors.

Price 2d., or 10s. per 100 for distribution.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Just published. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA THE ROYAL SEED TO KING DAVID'S THRONE. AND ARE NOT HER SUBJECTS, THE BRITISH PEOPLE, THE TEN LOST TRIBES?

BY WILLIAM HOPTON, of Sutton Heath.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE JEW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL; Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Leeds, with an Introduction and Notes; to be followed, by a Review of Mr. Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes. By the same Author.

"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)," with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d.

"CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d., post free 3½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 3½d.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

This day. Price 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

SYMBOLICAL TREE OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE. By HARRY W. FARNALL, of New Zealand.

"The chart is in the form of an ancient oak-tree, on the stem of which are the words Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and further up the trunk the Twelve Tribes, with their presumed modern national descendants. The Jews are shown us, diverging from the Ten Tribes, on the two lower branches, leading to Palestine and Cyprus, but intermingling with other boughs of the tree. The kingdom of Israel passes further up the trunk to the British Isles, and thence spreads out to all the British dominions, which are represented on separate branches and boughs. Suitable quotations from Scripture upon which the Anglo-Israel theory is based are marked on separate parts of the Chart."—Evening Star (Auckland).

The Editor of The Banner of Israel says:—"We have had our copy carefully mounted and framed. The framed picture is now exposed in one of the busiest thoroughfares of Bristol in the window of the artist who framed it, and great is the wondering notice it receives from the passers by. We hope our friends will get copies for themselves, and let the public obtain a view of it in the way we indicate, if even only for a few days. Identity knowledge is thus taken in by the eye, and produces there a great impression. We trust that throughout England, too, this chart will be valued by Israelites, and help them to teach others that 'Lost Israel is found' in the mighty British Empire of to-day."

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET;

W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK LANE, PATERNOSTER ROW, E.C.

MAY BE HAD, BY ORDERING, OF ANY BOOKSELLER.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN, High-Class Tailor, 47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.

MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 213. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 26, 1881. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Manasseh's Return to Political Union with Ephraim	37
Lord, How Long?	38
Tares. By L. P.	38
The Rev. William Barker, of Hastings, and Our Identity. Part II.	39
Sir Richard Temple on Church of England Missions in India	41
Germany and the Jews	41
The Rev. B. Wrey Savile and Philo-Israel	42
Correspondence	43
The Identity Church at Brooklyn	43

MANASSEH'S RETURN TO POLITICAL UNION WITH EPHRAIM.

IT may seem strange that some men in the nineteenth century should contemplate with satisfaction, and with a measure of certainty too, that the day will soon come when the British and their brethren of the States of America will be united once more, if not under one earthborn sovereign, at least under their Prince David, who will be king to them both (Ezek. xxxvii. 22—28). We have lately been privileged to read some pages of the remarkable book about to be published by the Rev. F. R. A. Glover, and therein we find that that far-sighted Pyramidist and Anglo-Israelite lays it down quite as confidently as we are inclined to do, that Manasseh and Ephraim are destined to be, ere long, one in interests, commercial, and political, friends and brethren for ever, and with their kinsmen of the "sceptred House of Judah," rulers of the earth. Our Canadian daughter has lately been revolving thoughts like these in some of her serial publications. There is one now lying before us called The Bystander, published at Toronto, by Hunter, Rose, and Co., in October, 1880, in which the editor gives expression to opinions regarding the future of their international relations with the United States, which read strangely like some of the BANNER'S anticipations. They must, we think, be more widely circulated to the other portion of Israel's "out-land" Empire in the four quarters of the earth. As the BANNER goes to each of these the extract shall be given to our readers. It occurs at page 525, the passage being kindly marked for us by Mr. C. A. Oakeshott, who being, we suppose, an Israelite, desires us to attend to the editor's remarks. They are as follows:—

The author of "Tom Brown," a Briton of the Britons, chooses, as the site of his English settlement, Tennessee. People are surprised that he should prefer a foreign country. The answer is that to an Englishman America is no longer foreign, nor is England foreign to an American. International reviews and international boat races are symbols of the social and intellectual fusion which is going on. Intermarriages are becoming daily more frequent. An English Duke and an English Tory Minister send their sons into mercantile houses in New York. Aristocratic antagonism to Republican institutions, no doubt, is not extinct, nor will it be while political differences last; but with this democratic Canada has nothing to do; and the general feeling of the English people towards the United States differs not at all from their feeling towards any English colony. Even the aristocracy, since the victory of the Union, has been laboriously civil to the Republic, as a power. Just on this spot, where the refugees of the American revolution fixed their abode, the embers of the feud of last century are kept alive by assiduous blowing; otherwise they are cold. In spite of family law-suits about boundaries and fisheries, everything tends towards the effacement of the last vestige of a conflict in which, after all, the bulk of the English people had no part. Everything forebodes a perfect reconciliation of the English-speaking race. Even here, in spite of the United Empire tradition, the signs not only of reconciliation, but of fusion, are all around us. We have just seen the banners of the American mingling with those of the Canadian Odd Fellows in the streets of Toronto; and this is only one example of the organisations of all kinds, social, religious, commercial, and intellectual, which ignore the existence of the dividing line. The exodus to the States is not a very pleasant theme; but those who revel in the thought of "sending rifle-bullets through a Frenchman, a Russian, or a Yankee," will have to take care that their bullets know how to discriminate between a Yankee and a Canadian settled in the United States, to say nothing of the fact that a million of our people are Frenchmen. We lavish money in founding a Military College for the training of officers to lead us against American invaders; and the first thing we hear is that one of our cadets, after having completed his military education, has gone off to earn his livelihood as an engineer at Chicago. The fortification of Montreal was an essential part of the scheme of Confederation. What has become of the fortification of Montreal? Of a political federation, extending over the whole globe, it is absurd to dream; but a moral re-union of all who own Great Britain as their parent, and speak the tongue of Shakespeare is an idea which is fast, though silently, becoming a fact, and against which it is as useless to wrestle with angry denunciations and appeals to evil memories as it would be to wrestle against the diffusion of the morning light.

"A political federation extending over the whole globe." "A moral re-union of all the English speaking races." Strange words to come from Canada regarding Americans first, and the British Empire as a whole in the second place. This reminds one of the promise to Jacob—"a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee," repeated in the idea of the Times published in 1875, that the English speaking races promised ere long to exhibit the spectacle of "the greatest federation of States the world ever saw" (Gen. xxxv. 11). "Coming events cast their shadows before," said Campbell, and the constant repetition by men from all parts of the planet of the idea that the Anglo-Saxon races are about to combine in one grand political confederation which must carry all before it, is ample corroboration of the imminence of the coming fulfilment shortly awaiting God's promises to "our forefather Abraham and his seed for ever." From Canada the idea is presented to us, as we have seen, by our Toronto friends. In America the Anglo-Israelites are taking it up warmly, and welcoming it with joy. From Australia, Mr. Edward Dicey, in the pages of the Victorian Review gives wings to the splendid conception, writing in burning words of the prospects awaiting the federation of the now disjointed portions of imperial Anglo-Saxondom. "Cape and Australian federation" is the subject of Indicopleustes' able paper in the Daily Telegraph, on August 5, 1880. From Bombay the same cry comes, that "the Empire must be federated." Mr. J. Orpen, of the Cape Parliament, insists with grave and earnest words that the confederation of the British colonies and Empire must be effected if it is to be preserved. The day, in short, is at hand, when Israel's political union is to be accomplished; when the "two sticks"—that is, Ephraim and his fellows, with Manasseh and Judah are to become one splendid Empire in confederation. They will then return together to their own inheritance, apportion it among themselves (Ezek. xlviii.), and under the Divine sway of their own Prince David assume their lawful position under His guidance as the righteous rulers of the globe and the heirs of the world, to whom "the kingdom, and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven" is reserved and destined as "the saints of the Most High," even "the children of Israel, a people near to Him. Praise YE the Lord" (Dan. ii. 35—44, vii. 22—27; Psa. cxlviii. 14; Isa. xxvi. 2; Ezek. xxxvii. 24; Luke i. 32, 33; Rom. iv. 13).

LORD, HOW LONG?

THIS question is asked in Psalm lxxiv. 9, 10, by the distracted cast off ones of the Lord—British-Israel—the Ten-Tribed House of the chosen people. And it is a question relating to the adversary's reproach (ver. 10), the enemy's blasphemy (ver. 10), the defiling of God's sanctuary, pulling it down, disestablishing, and disendowing it (ver. 7); the whole being dependent on the "sign" given in verse 5, relative to "a man famous according as he had lifted up axes upon the thick trees." "The tumult of those that rise up against the Lord continually increases" as verse 23 describes it, and during all those troubles God's people put up the cry, "How long?" "How long" is this tension, this trouble, this vexation, these rebellions in Church and State in Ireland and elsewhere to last? If we are right in supposing the Psalm refers to our times and present complications, we should expect the secular journalists of the day to take up the language of the Psalm and literally to re-echo the cry, "How long?" Great was our surprise, and yet pleasure, to find in literal fulfilment of God's Word, that on Nov. 15, 1880, the Bristol Times and Mirror published an article headed by the very words prophecy demands —"How long?" and the burden of the article was the state of Ireland just now—the murders, the arsons, the brutalities, the outrages of daily occurrence in the West of that unhappy land. After detailing the circumstances now so notorious respecting Captain Boycott's case, and the horrible murder of the inoffensive youth Wheeler, in the Golden Vale of Limerick, in broad light of day, after describing the disgusting treatment a woman suffered who had been "carded" by the Irish peasants, men worse than Bulgarians and Turks, the editor, summarising the cry "How long?" appeals to our Premier, and urges him to remove the reproach now resting on this civilised country, and put down a state of things in Ireland which is nothing less than ANARCHY! We join in the editor's appeal and cry to our Master above, in pity for the Irish themselves, "Lord, how long?"

TARES.

WE have heard it said, we cannot tell with what truth, that one in high official position has confessed he does not understand Ireland. We can quite believe it, looking at the present state of affairs in that unhappy portion of the British dominions. Neither do we wonder at the perplexity of any who are not in the secret of the wherefore of the strange, cruel, unwise, and rebellious actions of a people sharing the freedom and enlightened treatment of a civilised nation with whom they are fellow subjects. The circumstances are the more perplexing as occurring now, when the rulers of the land have shown especial desire to be just, generous, and helpful. By this we do not mean to refer especially to the Government for the time being, but to the general kind and liberal treatment Ireland has received for many years past at the hands of the British, who were only desirous to see their fellow-subjects justify their position of equality with themselves, and the patient forbearance shown towards them by vigorous efforts at self-improvement, and by their elevation in the scale of civilization.

But all are not puzzled and perplexed by the present disastrous state of things in Ireland, for they see in it but the fulfilment of a prediction which was uttered over 3,000 years ago (Num. xxxiii. 55); and we would also now suggest the carrying out of another prophecy, spoken by Holy lips, and more than 1,800 years old (Matt. xiii. 24).

Assuredly the two races of the Canaanites and the Israelites, in the sister island, can in the present dispensation no more mix and become one in faith, principle, in aim, habits, and desires, than two antagonistic ingredients can amalgamate and become entirely sympathetic in a chemical solution. We are told that the troubles in Ireland are the fruits of past misgovernment, cruel injustice, harsh laws, and a false religion. But when a subdued people, living among the descendants of their conquerors, share their privileges and rights, and are no longer subjected to maltreatment; is it not exceptional that resentment should still be nourished, and burn fiercely for wrongs long past? We think it would surely not be so, if the Irish Canaanite were not in disposition, character, tastes, and natural antipathy to order, and the higher form of civilization, totally unfit to hold independent powers of rule and legislation, such as befit their masters.

As to their religion being the cause of their disloyalty and savagery, we are certainly no admirers of the false Church in which they have faith; but we think that English Roman Catholics, and those of European nations, might fairly be indignant did we attribute altogether to their faith the debased and degraded condition of the South and South-West natives of Ireland. A debasement and a degradation that is but too plainly carried with them when they visit other shores.

We deeply pity these people, both for their present condition, and because we believe a heavy chastisement awaits them. Surely the God of Israel will not allow Ephraim His firstborn to be dealt with treacherously and ungratefully with impunity; and while the latter may shrink from severity, may be He will oblige them to bring down a heavy hand on those who, by the tyranny of fear, and by a destructive, murderous conspiracy, are causing misery and ruin to innocent victims, while barbarously injuring harmless dumb animals.

At Matt. xiii. 24 commences a parable spoken by our blessed Lord, an interpretation of which lately struck us as so probable that, while aware that our conviction may startle some, we think it worth the consideration of those whose minds at present cannot but be greatly occupied by the distressful circumstances of a near portion of our home dominion. Our Lord refers to the kingdom of heaven, as He does also in the prophetic word-pictures that follow that of the tares and the wheat. Now we have been shown by Philo-Israel, that this kingdom of heaven undoubtedly refers to His Church, His peculiar people, His chosen nation, His elect, and we may therefore suppose that the great teacher and Saviour was in this case referring to the two races that were to grow side by side for a time in the land that He meant to give His people for "their own" (2 Sam. vii. 10), the one represented by the good seed, the other by the tares. These two crops could never become really one, or similar, just as tares could not become wheat, however well cultivated, nor wheat become tares, however neglected and degenerate, and for useful purposes as worthless. "While men slept," our Lord stated, "the enemy came and sowed tares" in the land; and while Israel's heathen, idolatrous, wandering Tribes slowly gathered into the isles of the West, asleep as to all knowledge of their origin, and unawakened also to the light and knowledge that was to come to them first by conversion to Christianity and afterwards by the casting off of the thraldom of an idolatrous worship at the Reformation; then the Canaanite was led by the evil one to Ireland, and planted on its soil, to grow up a thorny weed by the side of the good seed.

These ancient foes of Israel's House, by their marked difference of character and appearance shew unmistakably that centuries of intercourse with their old antagonists of the East have not changed their original natures, and that still they are but tares in Israel's land, and can never in this dispensation become transformed into wholesome wheat. If it is objected that the prophecy taught in this parable was intended to be understood in a spiritual sense, we ask how could that be so, whether applied to individuals or to nations? Some men are not all good, and others all evil. There is evil in all; there are tares in every mind and heart, even after the good seed has been sown and watered, and has brought forth fruit. Can we suppose that Christ Jesus meant to teach that destroying all evil in a man's heart would root out and destroy also what is good in him? Spiritually applied, tares can, by the grace of God, become good wheat, but then the parable fails, and tares and wheat become mixed, while the Teacher implies that to the end of the world they remain unamalgamated.

Nationally, we think, the same argument would hold good. The destruction of all evil men in a community would not cause the upright and holy to fall. Rather would the disappearance of the wicked be a source of unmitigated spiritual good to a nation, we should imagine, and remove from its midst temptation to wrong doing.

But taking the parable and its after explanation (Matt. xiii. 37—43) to mean what we have ventured to suggest, then we can understand how, in a temporal sense, the existence of tares in the land sown with wheat, being for a time permitted, may work out a destined good to the latter, while a contrary treatment, if brought about too soon, would in some temporal way be to the injury and hurt of the good seed.

If our conjecture is correct, and our at present law-defying fellow-subjects in Ireland are indeed the tares named in the parable, we think a time of hard trial is at hand for them; whether directly from the God of Israel or indirectly through human instrumentality, we cannot say, but sharper than any they have yet passed through. Many believe, as we do, that the end of the present order of things is nigh at hand. Then the harvest must be reaped, and Israel's grain be recognised, and safely garnered; while the tares are to undergo a fierce ordeal, such as that which we foresee, from God's Word, is to fall on and rouse the other nations of the earth to a sense of God's wrath against those who ignore or deny Him, despise His threatenings, or insult Him by idol worship, and by bowing the knee before a man who sits as God.

We are told (v. 40) that in the end of the world (by which we understand the end of this dispensation) all things that offend, and those which do iniquity, represented by the tares, shall "be gathered out" of God's kingdom, and cast into the furnace of fire. We have been led to expect that the nations of the earth are shortly to be visited by a fire, such as has never before afflicted the world, and we conceive that these who are to be gathered from "out the kingdom" of the Lord will be cast in amongst these godless nations, or at any rate share their lot, becoming in some manner annihilated as to possessions and power, by a process of fiery discipline, so that they shall never more hurt those whom God has under His especial protection—even His people, the descendants of His friend Abraham.

We have little doubt we shall be accused by Identity opponents of selfishly dooming others to woe, while claiming for ourselves every blessing, but in that case our reply would be, not so, we pronounce no doom, it was uttered by our gracious Saviour, who came to die for the sins of the whole world, but whose own people, the sheep of His pasture, were to be gathered as wheat into His barn.

We are looked upon by some as presumptuous. But is it presumption to believe, spite of our being individually and nationally steeped in gross sin, that we are Ephraim, whom God called His firstborn? But if we possess the birthright promises of Joseph, in their wonderful fulfilment, and exceptionally as regards all other nations, may it not, on the other hand, be fairly called wilful blindness and stiffnecked obstinacy, to deny we are his heirs? L. P.

December 28, 1880.

THE REV. WILLIAM BARKER, OF HASTINGS, AND OUR IDENTITY.

(Concluded from page 34.)

PART II.

THE following lately appeared in the Hastings and St. Leonard's Observer in November, 1880.

"IS ENGLAND SUPERIOR TO OTHER NATIONS?

"PAPER BY MR. A. H. SKINNER.

"At a meeting of the members of the Mutual Improvement Association, at the Wellington-square Baptist chapel, a paper was read by Mr. A. H. Skinner, on the subject, 'Is England Superior to Other Nations?' The Rev. William Barker occupied the chair, and there was a large number of members present.

"Mr. Skinner, in the course of his essay, said, What is the cause of England's greatness? inquired an Indian prince of her Majesty the Queen. Whereupon, without making a direct answer, she placed in his hands a copy of the Holy Scriptures, and left him to ascertain how a volume could influence to so great an extent the life of a nation. But the answer was a correct one, England is comparatively a religious nation. In nearly every village or hamlet may be seen a church or chapel, or at the least a room, in which the Scriptures are read and expounded; and if the principles therein contained are calculated to elevate the mind, to influence and improve the life, to give to those by whom they are acknowledged a higher sense of the moral and religious life, then must it follow that the nation composed of so many who are thus influenced, and who have a voice in the government of the same, will exhibit a tone unknown to the other nations of the earth. Man is unquestionably a religious being. Look where you may, go where you will, you will find a religion more or less corrupt, a belief in a supreme being more or less vague. But to argue equality in this respect is to place the religion of other nations on an equal footing with our own. The despotism of the Romish Church as acknowledged in France or Italy, or the Greek Church of the Russians, with the Czar as its leader and pictures for its gods, of the Mahommedanism of the Turk, or, in fact, any of the isms or beliefs—no one would presume to argue an equality or superiority in this respect. Then, as a nation, we are superior in power, not altogether because of our maritime advantages, though these contribute to a great extent to our greatness and superiority, neither can it be attributed to the fact of our possessing such strongholds as the Rock of Gibraltar, and other equally desirable military advantages, but because of the distinguished and unequalled courage so characteristic of the subjects of Great Britain. Our greatest battles have been fought and won by a very inferior force, as far as numbers are concerned. When have we carried into the field a force equivalent in number to that of the Powers with which we may be engaged? Notwithstanding the extent of our Empire, the number of our dependencies, we hold them with a comparative handful of men. Bravery is a quality with more than one aspect. There is a kind exhibited that arises from a natural inability to entertain fear; another and higher form of bravery is the deliberate acceptance of a post of danger, conscious of the existence of that danger, and of the fact that he will inevitably come in for a share of the influence thereby. And according to a man's temperament, so is his courage measured or ascertained. A man of weak or nervous temperament accepting a position of danger, is eminently brave. And instances are not wanting in which it has been exhibited in either aspect. And to such an extent do we enjoy this trait of character, that it is useless for others to assume it. Another point of superiority is the administration of justice in law courts. Although the lawyer and his client may rejoice in the glorious uncertainty of the law, and, in some cases, money and influence may get the advantage, yet none would care to have their rights ascertained in any other court than an English court. For, with the exception of comparatively few mistakes where the evidence has been peculiarly unfavourable towards the unfortunate individuals, and they have suffered wrongfully, justice and equity are to a great extent administered, our judges and administrators being, as a rule, unprejudiced and impartial. In physicial powers we are pre-eminent. Individual feats of strength do not necessarily prove the superiority of one nation or race, although instances are not wanting of feats of extraordinary physical powers. But, as a people, the English are capable of a greater amount of endurance than any other nation or people. It matters but little in what climate they may have to live, they soon become climatised, and live and thrive well. This is more especially manifested in our soldiers, who because of the extent of our Empire, are called upon to live in almost all the climes on the surface of the earth; and their ability to do so none would presume to question. And wherever the English go in mass, there their language invariably becomes popular, and seems to kill out, to destroy the previously existing dialect, and their customs override and supplant the previously existing customs, their ways and ideas evidently being considered superior. In intellectual and inventive powers, we undoubtedly take the lead. For the greatest blessings of which society can boast, and without which mankind could scarcely exist, it is indebted to us. It was an Englishman that first invented, or rather conceived, the power of steam as a motive power, and applied it as such. And to an Englishman is due the credit of the further progression of this mighty and indispensable element. I speak of Watts, and Stephenson, both of whom were self-taught, and their ingenuity was not cultivated and developed by educational advantages. Then, again, it was ascertained by Sir Isaac Newton that navigators might discover their longitude by means of an accurate timekeeper. Maritime nations promised rewards, prizes were annually awarded by the French Academy, for the most useful discoveries connected with the subject, and the English Parliament passed an Act granting a reward of £10,000 for a method by which the longitude of a vessel could be discovered to a degree, or sixty geographical miles, and a higher reward if found more perfectly. Long and intensely was the want felt for an instrument that would not vary with change of climate or temperature, and it is to an Englishman the whole world is indebted for the accomplishment of that method. John Harrison was the inventor and maker of the first marine chronometer, and although but in a rude and imperfect form, though improved by him in after years, the principles discovered by this self-taught genius are still retained, and though greatly improved, the principle of compensation in the metals used is still acknowledged to be the only one to secure accuracy in a change of temperature. The greater and more important astronomical, geographical, and geological discoveries have been made by Englishmen. It is to our own countrymen we are indebted for our knowledge of the different forces in existence. Such being the case, I argue it is not because of superior advantages, but because of unparalleled intellectual powers that such great, essential, and useful discoveries were made by them. But what of America, our cousin Jonathan? It is argued he is in advance of us. If, for the sake of argument, I admit in some points he surpasses us, that we are not so ready in bringing before the commercial world fresh and original pieces of mechanism, manufacturing to a greater extent by far than we are able to do at home, nothing coming amiss to them, from a phonograph down to a pin; it is not because of superiority on their part, but because they possess advantages we do not, facilitating in many different ways the task they may choose to perform. But I argue the discoveries and inventions recently made there, in fact, being made there, are by Englishmen, though designated Americans because they have left our shores, and acknowledged the independence or Republicanism of those States. Remove from thence the English, and what would it become? It is not, therefore, to be wondered at, that though governed by a constitution different from our own, that peace and uniformity existed there to so great an extent that manufacturing is ever and anon taking place, that civil and religious liberty exists, that it is, in fact, a facsimile of our own home, so far as its commercial life is concerned, and its religion becoming co-equal with our own, based, as it is, on the same principles. I select these, not as the only, but as the more important points of superiority over the other nations or people of the earth. I maintain that no other religion in existence has so prominently aided in Christianising both at home and abroad, and in improving the moral condition of those where its influence has been exerted, none can claim equality. That the Government of this nation, by a Parliament selected by the majority of its subjects, is free from despotism, and unequalled in constitution by any other Power; that as a nation we are the most powerful, partially because of our maritime advantages, but individual courage and fearlessness contributing to a greater extent, as that distinguished characteristic of our nation. That the administration of justice in our courts of law tends, to a great extent, towards our position as the first among the Powers. That our influence, as a people, having spread far and wide to a far greater extent than that exerted by any other Power indicates a distinguishment from them which I treat as a point of superiority. That in physical powers they surpass others, being capable of colonising and soon becoming climatised. That discoveries, from which the world at large reaps a benefit, being made by Englishmen, proves the existence of intellectual powers unparalleled by any other people. That the designation Cousin Jonathan is incorrect, Brother Jonathan being a more accurate appellation. Then as the superior, and consequently, most responsible Power, it is necessary beyond description, that the international relations and influence be of a nature calculated to promote the best interest of mankind, tending towards the progression and development of qualities that exist, though but in a dormant state. That, with an eye towards the protection of our wide and extensive interests (for with the loss of these we should lose our supremacy) the power awarded to us may be used, tending towards the elevation of the nations of the earth, now so immoral and enslaved; that the freedom may be enjoyed by them, that is the happy lot of the subjects throughout 'that Empire on which the sun never sets.'

Digitized by Google

"A debate ensued, which was taken part in by the Chairman,

Digitized by Google

Mr. Frederick Stone, Mr. Connold, sen., Mr. William Evans, Mr. Bruce, and Mr. Connold, jun.

"A vote of thanks was accorded to the opener, on the motion of Mr. W. H. Reilly, seconded by Mr. C. Weeks."

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE ON CHURCH OF ENGLAND MISSIONS IN INDIA.

THE Church Missionary Society's publication, The Record, for November, 1880, thus quotes Sir Richard Temple's speech at the Annual meeting of the Wolverhampton Auxiliary on October 11. He said:—

Were the Missions in India efficient? He (Sir R. Temple) was there as a witness that they were efficient. It had been the business of his life to inspect vast Government establishments upon an enormous scale—a scale the like of which was not seen in Europe—and therefore he ought to know, if anybody knew, what constituted an efficient establishment; and having served in all parts of India, from the North to the South, and from the East to the West of that great Empire, he would affirm that there were no Government establishments in the country more zealous, more devoted, more efficient, than the establishments of the Missionary Societies. If his hearers could see as much as he and others had seen, they would know that they were efficient.

How did they account for the large subscriptions given in India to Missions? There was no community that, according to its means, subscribed more largely to Missions than the Anglo-Indian community. This fact was a substantial proof that the Anglo-Indian opinion on the spot was, on the whole, greatly in favour of Missions.

Sir Richard's testimony was of course correct. The missionary establishments in India are efficient, and the work done there, true, honest work. And so it must and should be, if our readers will reflect. For India is God's gift to Israel (Psa. ii. 8) that they may bring her to Christ. The machinery for evangelising that Empire must, therefore, be fitted for the object proposed, and efficient. If it were not, God's will and purpose would not be effected, which cannot be supposed possible for an instant. We think, therefore, the whole of the Christianising agency in the Indian heathen Empire is under God's own care and direction, and He has provided that it shall be what Sir Richard Temple tells us it is—namely, thoroughly "efficient." The British residents in India being on the spot know what sort of missionary agencies are at work in their midst, and largely support the operations with local funds. This of itself is a fresh Identity; for the subscriptions paid in India testify that the work is genuine; and the genuineness of the work proves the Israelite origin of the race which sets it in motion. For "Israel is to blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6), and it is to the Hebrew seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob alone the promises were made—"In thee and in thy seed shall all the nations," "all the families," and "all the kindreds of the earth be blessed" (Gen. xviii. 18, xxii. 18, xxviii. 14; Acts iii. 25).

In what other part of the heathen world subject to Christian races will it be possible to find what we see transacting now in India in regard to the education, evangelisation, and elevation of the subject native races? Sir Richard Temple tells us "no community according to its means subscribes more largely to Missions than the Anglo-Indian community." Certainly, the French in Algiers, the Dutch in Java, the Spaniards in Manilla do not expend in money or kind a tithe of what British Christians do, for the evangelisation of North Africa, of the countries bordering the Straits of Sunda, and in the Spanish possessions throughout the world. Nay, of these countries two (France and Spain) have no Gospel at all to send, for they are under Papal bondage themselves, and the blind cannot lead the blind. We thank God then for Sir Richard Temple's testimony regarding Queen Victoria's heathen Empire, and for the great work going on there, beyond doubt for God's glory.

GERMANY AND THE JEWS.

IT is a wonderful rebuke to those among us who some time ago were loud in their protestations that Germany was also the land of a part of the Ten Tribes, to find that their favourite Teutons are persecutors and haters of the House of Judah in the nineteenth century. The schism ought now, in these latter times, to be healing up, so that Israel and Judah may come together and be friends (Isa. xi. 13). Such an approach between the two Houses is apparent enough between ourselves as the Lo-Ammi outcasts and the dispersed of Judah, as the paper we published on November 10, last (p. 446), clearly proved. Whether the Germans nationally love or hate the Jews let the outburst we are witnessing in the "fatherland" yonder demonstrate to all unbiassed inquirers. The Anti-Semitic League is proof positive that there is a deep-seated bitter enmity against our brethren of Judah in the Teutonic mind. "Truth, reason, humanity, and generosity have been," said the Times lately, "on the side of the advocates of the Jews, but prejudice, error, and disingenuousness have disfigured the logic of the leaguers." The problem now being worked out in Germany is "not a religious one," says the Times, "but a social one." The advocates for the suppression of the Jews did not fail to impart religion into the question, and contended that "Christianity was in danger of being altogether destroyed by the assaults of Judaism." We hope our readers have noted what the leaders of our secular public opinion on this side the water say to such a charge as this in the mouth of Germans? It is, in fact, another valid reason for denying the Israelitish origin of the Teutons, and shows that not only do they persecute God's people, and strive to drive them out, but that the Germans are as a nation utterly without Christian light themselves to-day. This is what the Times replied to the Anti-Semitic Leaguer's charge against the Jews:—

To those who know that Germany, from the Lutheran or Calvinistic point of view, is already the most unchristian country in Europe, rapidly surrendering itself to the paganism of modern culture, this reasoning will be taken at its true value; and if there were any truth at all in the statement that the present popular movement is directed against the foes of the national religion, its head would certainly not be pointed against the Jews, but against that ever-increasing army of rationalist writers and philosophers—nearly all of them of German race—who are riding full tilt against traditional beliefs with lances couched and Positivism written on their pennons.

Fancy Israel (if Germans are they) justly indicated by the secular press as nationally "the most unchristian country in Europe, rapidly surrendering itself to the paganism of modern culture." Such a statement is of itself enough, if just (which it doubtless is), to put all claim for German Israelism out of court, since Israel is God's chosen servant and instrument to evangelise the world, and that function can only be performed by a Christian nation (Hosea i. 10), but certainly not at all by one sinking back into unchristian rationalism and positivism, nay, into "the paganism of modern culture." God's promise to Israel was that "He showeth His words unto Jacob, His statutes and His judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation, and as for His judgments they have not known them" (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20). We may therefore positively conclude that the Teutonic nation, which goes back from Luther's glorious light into "the paganism of modern culture," and is, in point of fact, already "the most unchristian country in Europe" (!) cannot be Israel, nor, indeed, any part of Israel. The Teutonic theory, therefore, is, by what we see going on before us, by the "Judenhass," and by the "Judenhetze," now thoroughly discredited, and British-Israel of the isles stands forth still as the only nation answering to all the signs, not failing in one single one; therefore, logically, scripturally, and reasonably, Israel of the Lost House, the Ten-Tribed Ephraim, the "dead-alive" one, the Lost, now found, nation.

THE REV. B. WREY SAVILE AND PHILO-ISRAEL.

We have to draw our readers' attention to the following letters. The first, from the Rev. B. W. Savile, appeared in the Daily Western Press, of Exeter, on Dec. 28, 1880. Our reply, dated Jan. 6, 1881, was declined very courteously by the editor, on the grounds that Parliament had opened, and the pressure on his columns was too great to justify him in giving space to the Anglo-Israelite controversy. The attack was admitted, but the defence is declined. We propose to remedy the injustice, in some measure, by publishing both in the BANNER, without further note or comment. We hope our Devonshire friends will circulate the number of the BANNER in which these letters appear.

ANGLO-ISRAELISM.

To the Editor of "The Daily Western Times."

SIR,—"Treachery" is an ugly word to use in controversy. It is not usually employed by professing Christians, unless very clear evidence can be produced that one of the parties has been guilty of such misconduct. Permit me to explain my meaning. Some months ago a controversy took place in your columns between the Editor of the BANNER OF ISRAEL and myself, on the subject of "Speculative Prophecy," occasioned by the editor, in his work on the Great Pyramid, having declared that "the dispensation of grace, in which we are now living, will come to an abrupt and sudden close in May, 1882" (page 17).

Having been asked by the editor, about two years ago, to write a pamphlet on "Anglo-Israelism," I consented to write on the ethnographical branch of the subject, believing then that there were grounds for supposing the Saxon race could trace their pedigree to the House of Israel, which is always represented in the Cuneiform Inscriptions as Beth Khumri. In consequence of this controversy, and finding so many strange views broached by the Anglo-Israelite party, I was led to make a re-examination of the evidence, which I had before thought sufficiently clear to warrant belief in our supposed Israelitish descent. Discovering my error, I wrote to the editor to inform him of my change of opinion, and asking him to insert a brief letter from me in the BANNER, to inform his readers of the same. Had he been contented with letting my letter speak for itself, I should not have said anything more. I had ceased to read the BANNER, and probably should have heard nothing more on the subject, had not a friend sent me some recent numbers of that periodical; when I find, to my surprise, that my letter in the BANNER of October 20 is prefixed by a remark of the editor, that my acknowledgment of a change of views "almost tempts me to repeat the ejaculation of King Joram, in his encounter with Jehu, recorded in 2 Kings ix. 23"—the ejaculation being, "There is treachery." I would fain hope that the editor did not remember the exact meaning of the term he was employing, as I observe he did not boldly say, "I accuse you of treachery," but puts it suggestively, as one of our own poets expresses it,—

"Just hints a fault, and hesitates dislike."

The questionable taste which permits him to say, "almost tempts one," and the omission of the ugly word, "treachery," prevent me from saying anything more than that, if he means to accuse me of treachery, he is stating what is the reverse of truth, the proof of which is plain by what I have already said, that it is not necessary for me to notice the subject any further.

I cannot help lamenting the tone which the editor of the BANNER has adopted towards that eminent Christian clergyman, Dr. H. Bonar, who, perhaps, of all men living, as having for years edited the Quarterly Journal of Prophecy, is most competent to express an opinion on the Anglo-Israel theory. Yet because, in the Sunday at Home of last October, he had exposed some of its fallacies, the editor of the BANNER replies in the following way:—"The Rev. H. Bonar, D.D., may denounce our opinions as unscriptural. We can safely afford to let the Doctor do his worst, satisfied—this truth being of God—that He will take care what He causes to be published shall prevail, though all the bishops, all the doctors of divinity in the land, set their right reverend, very reverend, and reverend faces dead against it. . . We have Scripture warrant for our views, but Dr. Bonar has none for his. He has no reason either, no Scripture, no logic to uphold him. His opinions impugn God's faithfulness, declare God has broken His oath, etc. What can lead Dr. Horatius Bonar, in his compound of ignorance and false accusation, and unwarrantable accusation, published in the Sunday at Home? etc. The Doctor's charge is not true, nor anything like the truth. God's truth is confided to our keeping, and by His grace we mean to uphold it, even though our adversary be the Rev. Horatius Bonar, D.D."

It may be doubted whether the old man who proclaims himself the infallible Vicar of Christ, or Anti-Christ, to use the more Scriptural term, ever spoke with more confidence than does the editor of the BANNER OF ISRAEL in assuring his readers that "God's truth is confided to our keeping!" And, as a specimen of this truth, it should not be forgotten that one of the strongest asseverations in the programme of the Anglo-Israelite party in general is that the "stone" kingdom of the prophet Daniel, which Jews and Christians have alike understood of the Messiah's future kingdom, means nothing more or less than the British Empire, as representing the Ten Tribes of Israel. They are probably unaware that this is the revival of an old heresy, invented by Porphery, the noted infidel opponent of the early Christians, as Jerome, in his Commentary on Daniel ii. 31, etc., says:—"This stone the Jews and wicked Porphery erroneously refer to the people of Israel, whom they will have to be the mightiest of all peoples at the end of the world, and destined to break up all kingdoms, and to reign for ever." Such is one of the many extraordinary delusions connected with the Anglo-Israel theory in the present day.

There are, however, some hopeful signs that the upholders of the theory, as they see all their predictions come to nought, will be disposed to give up what appears to the vast majority of Christians so strange a delusion—e.g., the BANNER of July 31, 1878, predicted that before the expiration of two years England would possess "not only Cyprus, and all Asia, but Constantinople as well!" Again, our Anglo-Israelites declare that the Great Pyramid foretells the exact number of the population of the British Empire (33,950,000), when the census of 1881 is taken, so that we shall shortly be in a position to have another test of this wonderful theory! But perhaps the most extraordinary speculation of all is that which limits the present dispensation to a period not exceeding twenty more months, as the BANNER of April 7, 1880, assures us that "the true length of the Grand Gallery of the Great Pyramid absolutely fixes the approaching end of the age as not later than August 6, 1882." And this venturesome conclusion is confirmed by a writer in the BANNER of Oct. 2, 1878, because, as he says, "The Channel Tunnel, connecting England and France by railway, is to be opened for use in 1882. Perhaps this may be the last link of the then vast system of railway communication between those 'Isles of the West' and the land of our forefathers, by which a highway will be prepared and completed for Israel's return overland.—D. J." Need I say more?

Yours faithfully,

BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE,
Rector of Shillingford.

December 20, 1880.

To the Editor of "The Daily Western Times."

SIR,—Your issue of December 28 has only just been sent to me. Permit me a little space to reply to the Rev. B. W. Savile. For a man of peace, as he is, it appears to me he has thrown about a good many firebrands in his letter. I shall not follow his example, but defend myself.

Allusion to 2 Kings ix. 23, in the BANNER OF ISRAEL of October 20 last, is grievous to Mr. Savile. I am sorry for it; but the facts called for the allusion. The rev. gentleman, in 1877, 1878, and 1879, after the most careful laborious study of the question, came to the conclusion that Anglo-Israelism was true; and wrote, at my request, three admirable papers—two very long ones—to prove it. On July 12, 1880, without a word of warning to myself, Mr. Savile appeared in a Cheltenham paper as an avowed opponent of the subject, and of myself as its chief exponent; and only on October 12 last did he favour me with any notice of his new attitude towards Anglo-Israelism. Under the circumstances, what was the most natural inference? The same that King Joram expressed when he saw the state of mind of the impulsive Jehu.

I felt "almost tempted" to come to that conclusion, and expressed myself accordingly. I waited, however, for the rev. opponent's pamphlet, and even now am still at a loss to know on what rational grounds Mr. Savile, so long as three years a friend, has now become a bitter opponent of the views held by the BANNER, and of myself, its editor.

Mr. Savile's defence of Dr. Bonar I care not to notice. Dr. Bonar is quite big enough to defend himself. I wait his reply to my criticisms on our views with much composure. "God's truth," I repeat in editorial language, "is confided to our keeping;" and so it is to Mr. Savile's, and to every Christian's. I see a solemn trust confided to me in respect to Anglo-Israelism, as the conductor of the BANNER; and, by God's grace, I mean stoutly to defend what I believe and see to be God's own truth therein.

Mr. Savile hints that by such expressions I am assuming the position of a Pope. I am of a different opinion; and see nothing but my duty in defending a great truth which I know to be God's, and which circumstances have made it peculiarly incumbent on me to defend, in my paper, from all assaults.

That so-called heresy which Mr. Savile says that Jerome records that "the wicked Porphery," and the Jews as well, erroneously held, I know by the Word of God to be no lie, but simply a fact, now being accomplished in the world and destined to prevail. Mr. Savile may call the opinion "a delusion;" let him prove it to be so. Our proofs are before the world. His refutations are not convincing.

Allow me to point out to Mr. Savile that, when he quotes my words and proposes to fasten on me a damaging charge thereon, it is his duty to quote correctly and read carefully what he quotes, before he rushes into print. Will you permit me to point out to your readers that Mr. Savile, quoting my words from page 250 of the BANNER of July 31, 1878, has actually left out the word "perhaps," which totally changes the character of what he calls a "prediction" on my part; but which, in truth, was a friendly passage of ironical contention between the editor of the Rock and myself. Let Mr. Savile refer to the passage again, and he will see that he has done me injustice, and placed himself, till he explains, in a false position.

The Pyramid indication of the coming census, at which Mr. Savile pokes fun again, is an idea of Mr. Charles Horner's, who has made the Great Pyramid his special study. I published his views; but it remains to be seen if facts support Mr. Horner's deductions. These in no way belong to Anglo-Israelism, and will stand or fall as Mr. Horner's views on that one point are found to be correct or incorrect.

Mr. Savile laughs also at the statement of one D. J. (a clergyman of the Church of England, by the way), that the Channel Tunnel may be, "perhaps," "the last link of the overland return" of British-Israel to Palestine. The fun of the thing, I suppose, consists in "the Channel Tunnel" being part of an "overland" journey; and Mr. Savile asks in triumph, "Need I say more?" But I would ask Mr. Savile whether he ever heard of the "Overland journey" to India? and if he knows that the whole of that journey is by sea, saving (and not that to-day, now that the Canal is open) a little strip of land in Egypt, which divides the Mediterranean from the Red Sea? I think "I need not say more!"

Yours truly,
PHILO-ISRAEL,
Editor of the "Banner."

Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol,
January 6, 1881.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—In the BANNER, Nov. 3, 1880, you have a paper upon "Religion in the Army of Gentile Italy," as having "none." If you will refer to the November number of Sunday at Home, you will see "The Gospel in the Italian Army," in which there is an account of brave, earnest work being done by one Signor Capellini, which seems to promise much, for surely no good seed, devoutly sown, can ever be lost, and I cannot but trust that beautiful Italy may still bear good fruit, howsoever small it may be in quantity.

I am, dear sir,
Faithfully and gratefully yours,
A SINCERE WELL-WISHER TO THE GOOD CAUSE.

Chertsey, Surrey.

[NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—Having read the article in the Sunday at Home, by H. J. Piggott, on "The Gospel in the Italian Army," we do not see that the account published by the Times and that given by Mr. Piggott differ materially. Sig. Capellini is, no doubt, sowing precious seed, and it will result in many "coming out" of Papal darkness (Rev. xviii. 4), but the state of the Italian army must be as bad as can be as regards the Gospel, if what is stated on page 726 of the Sunday at Home be true. "No good seed, devoutly sown, can ever be lost," is our correspondent's view of the case. That, no doubt, is in one sense true. But the Parable of the Sower, who, being the Son of God, deals with the good seed, teaches us that the results depend on the soil wherein the "good seed" falls (Matt. xiii. 3—8. 18—23, and 37). We may trust and hope many things; but Italy is not the land of Israel, and Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20 stands on record that the Lord "sheweth His words unto Jacob, His statutes and His judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation, and as for His judgments, they have not known them." We are, therefore sure that, nationally, He does not deal with Italians as He doth with British-Israelites, and the testimony of the Times, as well as that of H. J. Piggott, goes to show that God's Word is literally true in this, as in all other respects.]

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR MR. EDITOR,—Having carefully read the Rev. B. W. Savile's new pamphlet, "Anglo-Israelism and the Great Pyramid," and your two reviews of the same in the BANNER OF ISRAEL of Dec. 22 and 29, 1880, I have formed my conclusion as to the cause of the rev. gentleman's late defection, which is this:—that, having failed to convince that "most distinguished statesman" of the day, the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone (vide page 62), by his twenty-six letters, followed also by his work "Are We Israelites?" that we, as the British nation, are "Anglo-Israelites," or portions of the lost Tribes, he has conceived the opinion that as the great man's eyes have failed to see the ethnological proofs that he puts forward, he must, therefore, as a matter of course, have been living and writing for the last three years under "almost a delusion;" and that now, at the eleventh hour, or fourth examination, he acts on the Rev. J. B. Clifford's advice, "and separates himself from the tents of these men!" (vide page 7, "Are We Israelites?")

His pamphlet, which you have so ably and unanswerably reviewed, seems to give no other explanation of his singular vacillation. An editor of a well-known weekly journal, reviewing a pastoral lately uttered in high quarters, says:—"Public men cannot be too careful in their utterances, for they are read by thousands who are interested in the special department to which attention is invited. It is, above all things, necessary that public men should be consistent with themselves. No man now-a-days can afford to practise the tergiversation humorously attributed to Boyle Roche, who had the peculiar gift of turning his back upon himself. An ordinary man may change his opinion as often as he likes, but as he enjoys the privilege of obscurity, no one troubles himself one way or the other about him." I think a simile may fairly be considered not inapplicable to the present case.

Faithfully yours, W.

Exeter, Jan. 3, 1881.

THE IDENTITY CHURCH AT BROOKLYN.

THE treasurer of the Fund now being raised to pay for a new church at Brooklyn, where Identity doctrines may be taught and preached, cannot report much progress yet. The following is a list of subscribers whose names and contributions have yet reached Col. H. Bentinck, 32, Portman-square, London, W.:—

	£	s.	d.
Mr. G. Wells	0	10	0
A Friend	0	10	0
The Lady Jane Ellice	5	0	0
Mr. Wm. Ogle	0	5	0
Miss J. Lawrence	1	0	0
"Philo-Israel"	1	0	0
	£8	5

It is to be hoped our friends, for the credit of Ephraim, will yet come forward with some liberality and help our Manassite relatives in their laudable object.

While we are on the subject of donations, we beg to acknowledge the receipt of two sums of 10s. and 5s. respectively, sent us by a friend in Glasgow (N.) and another. We were asked to make the best use we could of the money, and have accordingly paid the two sums, 15s. in all, to an Israelite in Sunderland, to help him in furthering our cause there. He has done good work in the town, and required aid.

THE following comes from an authentic source:—"What do the Jews commonly call London?" "They call it 'Ir Miglat,' 'The City of Refuge!'" pointing, doubtless, prophetically forward to the time when, impelled by Judenhass and Judenhetze, the sons of Judah will fly to the city of refuge, Israel's metropolis, preparatory to their majestic march of triumph in company with, and under the escort of, the Ten Tribes, towards their own land.

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

Just published, Crown Octavo, cloth bound, gilt letters, 296 pages.

THE SEED OF ISAAC, BEING AN HISTORICAL REVIEW OF GOD'S DEALINGS WITH HIS CHOSEN PEOPLE ISRAEL.

BY J. D. GRANGER.

Post free, 4s., from THE AUTHOR, 84, Exeter-street, Plymouth, and ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just Published. Crown 8vo., 1s.

THE HOUSE OF JOSEPH IN ENGLAND.

BY A WATCHER.

Also by the same Author, Crown 8vo., 1s.

CHRIST IN JOSEPH.

A REPLY TO ANGLO-ISRAELISM in the Church Quarterly Review.

RIVINGTON'S, Waterloo-place, London, Oxford, and Cambridge.

A SUMMARY OF ANGLO-ISRAELITE TEACHING, AND THE SCRIPTURE PROOFS ON WHICH IT RESTS.

Being a Reply to Opponents.

BY SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.

Price Twopence.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Now Ready. Price 4d.

ISRAEL UBIQUITOUS: A Letter to an Inquirer. By REUBEN. With Diagram.

Price 2s. 6d., cloth gilt.

LINKS IN THE CHAIN OF EVIDENCE CONNECTING ISRAEL AND ENGLAND. BY J. LEYLAND FEILDEN.

Price 1s. 6d., 2s., and 2s. 6d.

ISRAEL'S JUBILEE; OR, 1881. By the Author of "Links in the Chain," &c.

Price 6d., post free 7d.

THE GENTILES AND THE TIMES OF THE GENTILES. By the Author of "Links in the Chain," &c

London: W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, E.C.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JAN. 26, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

Just published. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA THE ROYAL SEED TO KING DAVID'S THRONE, AND ARE NOT HER SUBJECTS, THE BRITISH PEOPLE, THE TEN LOST TRIBES? BY WILLIAM HOPTON, of Sutton Heath.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 4d., by post 4½d. Special terms for a quantity.

THE ISRAEL OF GOD.

A SERVICE OF SONG Upon the Career and Destiny of God's Ancient People Israel. WORDS AND MUSIC. BY C. W. E.

Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES. BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

In handsome cloth, gilt, with Coloured Map, and several Illustrations, price 3s. 6d., by post 3s. 10d.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

PHILO-ISRAEL'S BOOK FOR CHILDREN.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth, gilt, 1s. Post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Third Edition.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST OR SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS AND TEACHINGS OF THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams. Price 4d., post free 5d.

A RESUME OF THE SCRIPTURAL ARGUMENT, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? An Inquiry establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 4d.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters."

Price 4d., post free 5d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

London: Robert Banks Racquet-court Fleet-street.

Second Edition now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

AMMI; or, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham the "friend of God," and showing that true science history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

Price 2d., post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

Price 8s., post free 8s. 8d., bound in blue cloth, gilt, side and back.

THE FOURTH VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

CONTAINING 520 QUARTO PAGES.

Post Office Orders to be made payable to Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or, W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

THE CHEAPEST IDENTITY VOLUME EVER PUBLISHED.

384 Demy 8vo pages, in handsome cloth, gilt, price 3s. 6d., by post 4s.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.

Edited by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.

This Volume contains Papers on all Points of the Identity of the British People with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 2s. 6d., post free 2s. 9d. Bound in handsome cloth, gilt, bevelled boards, gilt edges, and beautifully printed on toned paper.

THE SISTERS OF HARROWDALE RECTORY. By MRS. M. A. SEARSON, ILLUSTRATED WITH A BEAUTIFUL DOUBLE-PAGE FRONTISPIECE.

"In this work, the leading arguments used in support of our Identity are woven into a pleasing story, which is both interesting and instructive. The description of the Rectory is a beautiful picture of the quiet sanctity and repose of an English Christian household, situated amid that charming pastoral scenery, which has its grandest development in the Southern and midland counties of England. It will prove entertaining to young and old, and should have a wide circulation."—The Heir of the World

THE DISTRIBUTION OF SHEM, HAM, AND JAPHETH. ISRAEL AN ARIAN SPEAKING PEOPLE.

A Paper read before the Cheltenham Anglo-Israel Association.

BY MAJOR-GENERAL A. M. RAINEY.

This Pamphlet is strongly recommended to Identity Associations and Distributors of Anglo-Israel literature. Being a complete answer to many of our objectors.

Price 2d., or 10s. per 100 for distribution.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH. By REV. JOSEPH WILD, D.D. With a Portrait of the Author.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

ROBERT BANKS'S CATALOGUE on the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Lost Ten Tribes will be sent, post free, on application. Address, Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

Price 3s., in handsome cloth, gilt, post free, 3s. 4d.

LOST TEN TRIBES AND 1882.

BY THE REV. JOSEPH WILD, D.D.,

Pastor of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET.

ANGLO-ISRAEL AND HIS FIRST PRINCE FOR THE HOLY LAND. SHEWN FROM SCRIPTURE PROPHECY. WITH STRAINS FOR PALESTINE.

And "Notes on the Enemy," 2s. 6d., cloth; separately, price 1s.

NOTES ON THE ENEMY;

In a Report of a Great Meeting in London, of Ritualists and Liberationists, to Elect Fit Representatives for Parliament. With Strains for Anglo-Israel in the Holy Land. By the Rev. HIBBERT NEWTON, D.D., Vicar of St. Michael's, Southwark. Author of "Israel Discovered in the Anglo-Saxons," &c.

W. H. GUEST, WARWICK LANE, PATERNOSTER ROW.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,

High-Class Tailor,

47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.

MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 214. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1881. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Complications at the Cape	45
Passing Through.—A Modern Instance. By Nemo	46
The Twenty-fifth of March	46
"Ye are My Witnesses, Saith the Lord." (Isa. xliii. 10). By H. P. K.	47
Moses and the Prophets	47
Manasseh Gives Testimony to Israel's Supremacy	48
"The Church's Hope, Bigger, Nearer, Brighter." By the Rev. Denis Hanan	49
The Rock Quotes "Blindly" Good Evidence of Our Identity	50
The Christian World and the Great Pyramid	50
Israel's Battles. No. XXVIII.—The Expedition to Abyssinia	51
The Rev. Denis Hanan, M.A., on Dan. xii. 7	52
Identity Lectures and Meetings	52
The Testimony of Two British Working Men as to Benefits Derived from "The Identity"	52
The Supernatural	53
The Future Language of the Earth	53
"Of the Three Hundred Grant but Three to Form a New Thermopylæ"	54
The Rev. B. Wrey Savile's Inaccuracy of Quotation	54
Tu Quoque. By the Rev. Denis Hanan, M.A.	55
The British Inch in the Great Pyramid. By H. R. Shaw	55
Confederation of the Empire	56
Report of the Exeter Anglo-Israel Association Annual Meeting	56
The Head and Not the Tail, Nay, the Very Chief of Nations	57
Reviews	57
Correspondence	59
Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union	59

THE COMPLICATIONS AT THE CAPE.

SOME of our readers are anxious that we should stand more abreast of the events of the day, and state the views which Our Identity brings to bear upon current history without that delay which manifestly waits upon our BANNER notices of matters of moment occurring in India, Africa, the East, Ireland, and elsewhere. We cannot too often remind our readers that the BANNER is no "news" paper, in the ordinary acceptation of the term. Publishing as we do weekly, and for reasons which our geographical distance from the office of the publisher will supply to the reflecting reader, we cannot pretend to offer news. Our friends must look for that from those admirable purveyors of it, the daily journals of the metropolis, which are in their way the very best the world provides for such objects. Neither do we aspire to comment on the stirring events of the present time too soon after their occurrence. Our remarks so made would often be crude and incorrect, falsified by the rapidly passing history of the times. Comments such as it would be our duty to make, comparing prophecy with facts, would in that case be found to be what our opponents delight to call our "speculative prophecy," without solid foundation; and we therefore do wisely to avoid that snare. When events have matured, and facts of the day have become the history of the times, then we may with safer foundation point to British story as transacting before the reader, and appealing to faits accomplis, tell our friends with confidence that thereby prophecies hitherto inexplicable and uncertain, are found to be fulfilled and luminous. We have with these views waited till events more fully matured before noticing the outbreak of the Boers in the Transvaal, and of the Basutos nearer the Cape Colony. Both are serious enough, and seem to be fraught with peril enough to our Empire in South Africa. What light does Identity throw upon the facts, and what lessons should we Anglo-Israelites learn from the events thus transpiring before us?

We find that for the peace and security of the Transvaal, the British Government is directly responsible. There can be no doubt whatever what her Majesty's ministers have to do. They have, with the approval of the nation, annexed the territory, and the Boers, having risen without the least provocation against the Queen's Government, are at open war with her authority. They have defeated her troops, killed large numbers of her soldiery, set her power on one side, inaugurated a rebel government of their own, proclaimed it, and defied the British Empire to do its very worst. The stone, the crushing stone of Israel, must fall upon these foolish Boers, and the result will be what our Lord said it would ever be, in Matt. xxi. 44: "It will grind them to powder."

But to effect this will require some force, and though the effort will not be great to subdue the Boers, it is clear that to hold down these disaffected Dutchmen in their immense territories will require a large British army scattered over the widely separated districts, and that for a long time to come, to bring back peace. A certain portion of the British troops, then, must be constantly locked up in the Transvaal for some months or years.

In Basutoland, though at present the colonists declare they can do without the help of British troops, it is not certain the colonists are able to put down the native rebellion. More of her Majesty's forces, therefore, must be held in readiness to move at a moment's notice on to the scene of the disturbance. A further quota of the available power of the Empire will thus be shut up in those distant territories, hidden in the South African possessions, the "Gates" barred and bolted, nullified, so far as the ability is concerned of those so engaged to interfere effectively in the Titanic war about to embroil the Powers of Europe around the ever-pending Eastern Question. It is to bring about this very state of things, we think, that God has been so mysteriously working in the Basuto and Boer rebellions in South Africa.

Ireland we already see is seething with disaffection, and "the lawlessness which (to quote the Times of January 3rd, 1881) might have been checked by a few summary arrests in October and November, has now been organised throughout Munster and Connaught, and is making its way through Leinster and Ulster." It is said an army of twenty to thirty thousand British soldiers is now holding Ireland as a hostile land, and that force must be expunged from the total of the Empire's fighting strength should the Eastern Question immediately revive and make it desirable for us to put forth our influence to stay the angry passions of the continental combatants. The Lord is locking up, scattering our strength (Dan. xii. 7). In the Cape, in Ireland, in India, He has provided troubles which force us to hide ourselves from the European conflict, to shut our doors or gates about us, and to "enter into our chambers," or Colonial Empire, for a little moment, as it were, till the indignation be overpast (Isa. xxvi. 20, 21).

Digitized by Google

We do not look, therefore, for any speedy pacification at the Cape, for any sudden subsidence of the troubles in India, Ireland, the Transvaal, or Basutoland. Rather, we think, the complications will deepen, and the troubles will thicken, till men will admit that "the enemy has come in on all sides like a flood" (Isa. lix. 19), and the last hour of the Empire has arrived. But man's extremity will be God's opportunity; for this climax of evil will be just the very moment the Lord will choose, as we are told, to lift up a standard "against the powers of Satan," and the Spirit of the Lord being pitted against the spirit of evil, we know the Lord must conquer, and the fallen foe of His people must "go down" before Him.

With the immediate causes of the late and present outbreaks at the Cape we do not concern ourselves. We do not go with Sir Charles Trevelyan in his unjust and groundless denunciation of the policy which led to these events. We believe the Transvaal was righteously annexed to the British Empire, and that act never can safely be set aside or cancelled. We believe the policy which led the Cape Government to order the Basutos to be disarmed was, though wrongly carried out, a righteous and necessary policy as a measure of self-defence and protection for the European minority growing up in South Africa. These, however, are details which God has used, and is using, to bring about His purposes regarding our race, His people Israel; which, forcing our attention to be diverted to our own widely-planted Empire, chains our military strength within the limits of our own colonies and home domains, leaving us no time and no opportunity to interfere, even had we the wish, with those mighty convulsions which He is preparing for "yonder ill-consolidated Europe," as the great earthquake woe of prophecy.

Israel! let us thank God that He is at the helm, arranging all for us, and that right through the terrors of the coming times of trouble we may safely trust Him, since He tells us, as His people Israel, not once, but over and over again, "Fear not; fear not. I am with thee; be not dismayed, for I am thy God. I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of My righteousness" (Isa. xli. 10).

PASSING THROUGH.—A MODERN INSTANCE.

By Nemo.

It is incomprehensible to many that a people could pass through and come out from amongst another people, under the conditions which accompanied our forefathers during their wandering across Europe, a migration which occupied centuries, and which necessarily caused them to mingle amongst the other races.

It is argued that the peoples occupying the countries through which they passed must be of the same stock; and when Anglo-Israelites state their opinion, it is said that anything similar could not possibly occur in the present day.

It is necessary to ask, in the first place, what is meant by the people so passing through. Do we mean that in no instance an alien became incorporated, or that none of the emigrants caused their own alienation? Former examples would reply in the negative; for when Israel came out of Egypt there came up with them a "mixed multitude." Their law admitted proselytes, and enjoined the admission of even those who were bought as slaves. It also recognised the possibility of alienation, or "cutting off." Moreover, intermarriage did not necessarily denationalise. Ephraim, the inheritor of the birthright, was the son of an Egyptian mother. Ruth, the Moabitess, was the ancestress of our blessed Lord.

But having thus stated our position, the objection is yet urged; and although it is a legitimate answer to say, that if God said, "For lo! I will command, and I will sift the House of Israel among all nations, like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth" (Amos ix. 9), so He could work. Yet as we do not claim that what would be called a perpetual miracle was necessary, we cannot thus meet this particular statement. Again, it is a fair reply to instance Judah, and the present day exodus from Russia and Germany, where a people confessedly of unmixed race, in so far as is above stated to be necessary, are passing through and out from amongst the nations; but it is not convincing, for the Jews are rightly looked upon as being in an essentially peculiar and marked position. Can we, then, show what is required—namely, a similar modern instance, and this apart from any theory as to the descent of the passers through, or of those from whom they are separated?

It is admitted that Ireland is inhabited by two races. For centuries they have lived side by side; there have been intermarriages, there have been conversions and perversions, there have been political aspirations shared in alike by men of different creeds, many of the original settlers have become "more Irish than the Irish themselves." Could the one race be now winnowed from amongst the other?

The question is a most painfully practical one; for it seems as if it may become necessary to settle, once and for all, whether the law-abiding are to expel the lawless, or vice versâ.

Take, for the sake of the argument, the latter hypothesis. I have no hesitation in saying that, by an instinctive process, the Saxon would be winnowed from amongst the Celt, and that even renegade men of Saxon descent would have to follow; and that if the people so expelled escaped with their lives, and that a census were taken, it would be the record of an exodus without even the "mixed multitude."

But if, true to his history the Saxon does not fly before his enemies, a like severance would infallibly be made by the defeated Celt. It is true that creed would be a great element in the severance; but far behind would lie the radical difference to which creed assimilated itself—namely, that the one race is law-abiding, the other is essentially lawless. In the interests of peace, it is to be hoped that a modus vivendi may be found, and doubtless such can be found; but the fact remains, that the two races are distinct; they have not been, and they cannot be, fused together.

Grant that this is the position in Ireland to-day, and who can then say that it is impossible for a people to pass through, and be in a position to come out from among, or for our forefathers to have done so.

An English nobleman, on a visit to Irish friends, has been "Boycotted" because he stated his opinions in an English newspaper, and for obvious reasons I withhold my name.

THE TWENTY-FIFTH OF MARCH.

Mr. J. Thomson writes to us as follows:—

"Till the introduction of the 'new style' in A.D. 1752, the year in England commenced on March 25, answering to the same month in which the sacred or ecclesiastical year of the Hebrews commenced. If this has not been noticed as an Identity you may like to 'make a note of it.'" We do so accordingly.

Digitized by Google

"YE ARE MY WITNESSES, SAITH THE LORD."

(ISA. XLIII. 10.)

BY H. P. K.

IN addressing Israel as the Lord's witnesses there can be no doubt but the prophet Isaiah was, on such occasion of his so referring to God's people, alluding to the far off future when they should have cast away their idols, and have returned to their allegiance to the God of their fathers. They were then to be the witnesses of God's mercy and loving kindness, carrying into the utmost ends of the earth His "saving peace unto all nations." It was as witnesses of the Gospel truths, of the salvation proffered to all mankind in the blood of Christ, that Israel was to be the witness; and nowhere can we find a people so perfectly fulfilling the Divine purpose as the British nation at the present time. In proof of this we give the following carefully compiled general religious statistics of the various sects, numbering altogether about one hundred and seventy, in England and Wales alone. It has been ascertained, after careful inquiry, that these different religious bodies have altogether 45,000 places of worship, of which one-half have been certified, and recorded as such by the Registrar-General:—

"The total accommodation provided in these places of worship throughout the country is between fourteen and fifteen millions of sittings. The stated ministers of religion number 36,000, of whom about 23,000 are clergymen of the Church of England. In addition, there are, at the lowest computation, thrice that number of local and lay preachers, Scripture readers, &c., 36,000 of whom alone belong to the various branches of British Methodism. The Church officers in the various places of religious worship number 150,000; there are fully three millions of communicants. It is ascertained that the average attendance in places of worship in England and Wales on the Sabbath is about ten millions of persons; that every Sabbath there are preached no fewer than 80,000 sermons, making a total for each year of four millions of sermons. About three-and-a-half millions of children and young persons are at the present time attending British Sunday-schools, and upwards of 400,000 teachers are voluntarily engaged in imparting religious instruction. Independently of agencies for the moral and spiritual improvement of the people, such as Evangelists, Scripture readers, town and city missionaries, Bible women, tract distributers, &c., there is a stated minister for every 700 persons, comprising 140 families, a place of worship for each 500 individuals, or 100 families, and a communicant for about every eight of the population. The estimated annual cost of the various efforts for the social, moral, and religious reform is about £16,000,000."

From this statement there can be little doubt as to the steady progress which is being made throughout the kingdom, in the propagation of the Gospel, or of the deep sense of the great importance of religious instruction which pervades the nation. The large amount annually expended in "social, moral, and religious reform," affords conclusive evidence of how deep and lasting is the feeling of individual responsibility among those to whom the "talents" have been entrusted.

If to this we add the very considerable sum annually devoted to the propagation of the Gospel abroad, nearly all of which is derived from private or individual sources, there is no room left to question the fact that the British nation is performing the function assigned to Israel in the heading to this paper.

In this, as in every other respect, the Anglo-Saxon race bear witness that they are, as foretold by Moses, "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath," and that in this, as in everything else they are inheriting the blessings promised to Israel if they would "hearken diligently unto the voice of the Lord their God, to observe and to do all His commandments" (Deut. xxviii. 1).

MOSES AND THE PROPHETS.

A PASTOR of the Church of England, who takes a deep interest in our personal status as a Christian and a believer, being wholly unable to see our Identity as we see it, and, therefore, sincerely regretful that we are vainly, as he thinks, devoting time, health, and talents to a mere "craze" and purposeless hallucination, urges us to give up the especial study of the Old, and take to the earnest examination of the New, Testament. "Let the New," he says, "explain the Old; but never let the Old supersede the New, or take a more important place than the latter in the investigation of Divine truth."

Our answer to our kind-hearted, but, we believe, mistaken friend, is this:—God's Word is one, and indivisible. The Old and New Testaments are the work of the same Divine Spirit's inspiration; for "All Scripture," we read, "is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." Our Lord Himself told us to "Search the Scriptures." He said, besides (referring to the Old, but not to the New Testament, not yet then written), that the Jews did not believe in Moses: "If ye believe not his writings, how shall ye believe My words?" was the Saviour's attestation to the value of Moses and the prophets (John v. 46, 47). Again, in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, the Lord set His seal on the importance of the Old Testament writings, by saying, "If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded though one rose from the dead" (Luke xvi. 30, 31).

We argue, then, that the Old Testament, on the authority of our Lord's own words, and of the many other statements in the New, is neglected by us at our peril. The Old Testament writings are "they which testify of Christ" (John v. 39); and will anyone dare to close or neglect a portion of "the Holy Scriptures," which St. Paul told Timothy the latter had known from a child; and being, therefore, the Old, and not the New, Testament, were "able to make him wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus"? (2 Tim. iii. 15). The study, therefore, of the Old Testament, leads straight to Christ. "Moses and the prophets," if "heard," suffice to lead the penitent to eternal life through Christ Jesus; but, the same writers being neglected, the contemners of their writings will not yield, we are assured by the Lord Himself, though one rose from the dead; which probably means though the resurrection of the Son of God were to be offered as the object of their faith.

In St. Paul's speech before Festus and Agrippa, the great apostle declared that "he witnessed both to small and great, saying none other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come" (Acts xxvi. 22); and that reference, he added, led straight to the suffering and risen Christ, the One destined to show light to the people and to the Gentiles (Acts xxvi. 22, 23). Paul's appeal to Agrippa, too, was a personal one. "King Agrippa, believest thou the prophets? I know that thou believest!" And the result of that belief is contained in the King's answer, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian."

The testimony, therefore, is uniform. "Moses and the prophets" lead to Christ. The search of the Old Testament, which contains the testimony of "Moses and the prophets," is certainly to be encouraged; never to be deprecated or depreciated. We, therefore, do a good work, and not an evil one, when, appealing to the same "Moses and the prophets," we ask men and women not only to search there to find the precious Saviour of the world, and the Redeemer of His people Israel, but to look there too, for the evidences by which His "lost sheep of the House of Israel" may be discovered in the British races.

The testimony of witnesses so unutterably important that their bare rejection amounts to a rejection of the Saviour as well, cannot be otherwise than of vital moment when we ask men "to hear them" regarding our Identity. God has tied up our Identity to "Moses and the prophets," and we claim for the subject, at least, a very respectful hearing, because we tread here on most holy ground. Searching for the proofs of the Identity, we must find evidences of the truth of Christ's mission and salvation. Searching for "the people," we are sure to find ourselves face to face with the Husband, Father, Friend, Redeemer, Saviour, and Deliverer of that favoured race.

Digitized by Google

We urge our readers, then, never to desist from the careful study of the Old, as well as of the New Testaments, in investigating our Identity; and never to allow a minister, conforming or non-conforming, to recommend the postponement of the Old to the New Testament; or to suggest that the authority of the latter is greater than that of the former. For, in truth, that idea is erroneous. The Old and New Testaments alike are of co-ordinate, equal authority, as the Word of the living God. Both are now entrusted to us as God's people Israel, since they are "the oracles of God" (Rom. iii. 2); and we are bound to distribute, study, love, and venerate, both equally, as our Lord Jehovah's tender messages to us, His covenanted people Israel; "For the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy" (Rev. xix. 10).

MANASSEH GIVES TESTIMONY TO ISRAEL'S SUPREMACY.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I enclose you some more evidence from our neighbours, the Americans, that Great Britain is "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath."

Some of the extracts may be of interest to your readers, especially in view of the recent utterances of Mr. Read, the agriculturist, that America was destined to be the greatest country in the world.

These constantly reiterated assertions by such men as Mr. Gladstone and others, require some offset such as that I send you, to prevent a public, too ready to believe every pessimist, and too indolent to obtain information themselves, being deceived by specious sentences, and thus learning to doubt the glorious position of our beloved country, and the unimpeachable fact that she is the mistress of the earth as well as of the sea.

Yours faithfully,
A BENT OAR.

348, Notre Dame-street, Montreal, December 13, 1880.

The following, taken from an American paper, is what is referred to by "Bent Oar:"—

"AMERICAN PROGRESS UNDER PROTECTION.

"What is free trade? Many seem to think that it means the entire abolition of tariffs and custom houses. But it does not mean this at all. We have free trade in land, although land is taxed. We have free trade in domestic tobacco, although tobacco is heavily taxed. Free trade means that importations and exportations should be taxed only for the sake of raising the money which the Government needs, and that no tax should be levied for the sake of encouraging any particular industry. England has thorough free trade, and yet raises more money by duties on importations than any other nation except our own. But she levies no duty for the sake of protection to native industry.

"Our own country imposes a heavy duty upon blankets—so heavy that we only import 1,500 dols. worth, which pay 1,300 dols. duty, while 20,000,000 dols. worth of blankets are used every year, costing us at least 7,000,000 dols. more than we could buy them for abroad. That is protection.

"England lays no duty on anything which she makes at home, in excess of the tax, if any, which she levies upon the domestic article. She imposes a heavy duty upon imported whiskey; but she collects the same duty from the home manufacturer. She lays no tax upon domestic corn or iron, and therefore lays no duty upon foreign corn or iron. That is free trade.

"On all hands we hear that America is making giant strides in manufacture and commerce, and that England is losing her commercial supremacy. Without the slightest ill-will to England we should be glad if this were true—that is, that the rate of progress in America should exceed the rate in England. But is it true?

"It certainly is not true as to the shipping interests of the two nations. Twenty years ago we almost led the world. Our ships were nearly as numerous as those of England, and were even more numerous in proportion to population. Since then England has enormously increased her shipping, while ours has enormously decreased. Well, it is said, that is because of the depredations of the 'Alabama.' But this is too childish an argument to be seriously dealt with. Nearly sixteen years have passed since the 'Alabama' committed her last depredation. The whole wealth of the world is replaced every three years. We might as well say that the decline of our commerce was caused by the war of 1812.

"It is not true of our foreign commerce generally. We know that comparisons have lately been published which seem to indicate the contrary. But this is done by giving only the statistics for three years ending in 1879, during which the commerce of England decreased—a thing which never happened for three years continuously in nearly forty years. England has regained all this loss in nine months of the present year and has resumed her forward progress, though not quite at the old rate. Let us, however, compare the progress of the two countries, not for three years, but for twenty. We compare 1859 and 1879, because the returns for 1880 are not complete. In 1859 the foreign commerce of Great Britain amounted to 1,622,000,000 dols. In 1879 it amounted to about 3,000,000,000 dols. In 1859 the commerce of the United States amounted to 695,000,000 dols., and in 1879 to 1,222,000,000 dols.

"What is the result of this comparison? Our foreign commerce has increased at the rate of 75 per cent. in twenty years; England's at the rate of 85 per cent. The mere increase of British commerce in that time is more than the whole of our foreign commerce for the year. We started, twenty years ago, 927,000,000 dols. behind England; and we are now more than 1,700,000,000 dols. behind her. Yet the population of England has increased only 25 per cent. in twenty years; while ours has increased 55 per cent. Great Britain and Ireland have a population of less than 34,000,000. We have more than 48,000,000. Yet our foreign commerce is only two-fifths of Great Britain's. In 1859 our commerce amounted to 22·60 dols. per head; in 1879 to 25·20 dols. In 1859 British commerce amounted to 56 dols. per head; in 1879 to 88 dols. per head.

"It will be said, of course, that England starts with the advantage of large capital. True; but we started with a smaller business and ought to increase at a much greater rate per cent. than England, because the basis on which our per centage is reckoned is smaller. It is a great deal easier to double a business of 100 dols. than one of 10,000 dols. A nation that does not increase a small commerce at a ratio larger than that by which another nation increases a very large commerce is falling behind in the race for wealth. Many patriotic Americans have been exulting over statistics which led them to believe that our commerce was growing at the rate of 100 per cent. in twenty years, while England's was only growing at the rate of 75 per cent. Unhappily, the fact is not so; but what if it had been true? Even at that rate, we should need two centuries to catch up with England.

"Let us tell a little fable.

"A dry goods peddler sold 1,000 dols. worth of goods in 1878, and 2,000 dols. worth in 1879. He learned that H. B. Claflin & Co. had sold 20,000,000 dols. of goods in 1878, and 30,000,000 dols. in 1879. Whereupon our peddler rejoiced, and said to all his friends, 'See how rapidly I am supplanting the effete Claflin. My sales are increasing at the rate of 100 per cent. a year, while his are only increasing 50 per cent. Rejoice with me, my friends; for at this rate I shall soon be at the head of the trade. Indeed, I am already thinking that it will be my duty to be charitable to poor Claflin in his old age.'

Digitized by Google

"That is the fashion after which we are gaining upon British commerce. But was it always so? In 1850 our foreign commerce stood at 330,000,000 dols., and in 1880 at 762,000,000 dols., an advance of 131 per cent. in the ten years. British commerce gained only 40 per cent. in the same period. If we had continued to gain between 1860 and 1880 at the same rate as from 1850 to 1860, our commerce would have amounted to 1,750,000,000 dols. in 1870, and 4,000,000,000 dols. in 1880. Thus we should have far outstripped England, and have stood to-day at the head of the world's commerce.

"But, it will be said, no allowance is made for the effect of the war. Very well, we will start from the first year after the war—the year ending June 30, 1866—as the basis. But our commerce even then was 880,000,000 dols., and therefore should have been 1,280,000,000 dols. in 1870, and 2,950,000,000 dols. in 1880; whereas it is only half that amount.

"What is the matter? Not resumption; for we have gained more rapidly under resumption than we did before. Not especially inflation; for the wretched system of State banks which existed in 1860 was about as injurious as any inflation we have had since the war. Defective as is our present currency basis, it is the best we have ever had. Not the lack of 'protection to American industry;' for we have never had so much of it for fifty years past as we have had since 1860. Between 1850 and 1860 we suffered from all the 'disastrous effects' of a low tariff. It was far from being a free trade tariff, but gave a protection of 20 to 30 per cent. to our leading manufacturers. We increased our protection to 50, 60, and even 100 per cent. on the same goods between 1860 and 1867. England took off the last shred of protection between 1846 and 1860. The result of each system is shown in this comparison of the commerce of the two nations.—Thomas J. Shearman in Christian Union.

"THE CHURCH'S HOPE, BIGGER, NEARER, BRIGHTER."

By the Rev. Denis Hanan.

Many causes prevent the acceptance of what we believe to be the truth concerning our Identity with God's ancient and covenant people. Of these causes some are unworthy, and some worthy, and of the latter I would place in the forefront the objections of those to whom it has been given to realise most fully, and to look and long for, the fulfilment of the Church's hope—the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ for His people (1 Thess. iv. 17).

I fully sympathise with the thought expressed in the words which I have quoted, and placed at the head of this article. But I ask myself whether this hope is meant to overshadow, and practically exclude the prospect opened up by the knowledge of our Identity? or whether the one may not be the complement of the other? Whether those who admit the Identity as a fact with reference to the nation, are justified in treating it as beneath their interest, because of the hope which seems to be "bigger, nearer, brighter"?

It has been revealed that the Church has a glorious inheritance in her Lord, and that the Lord Jesus has an inheritance in His Church. All ought to long for the day when the sleeping and the living saints will be caught up to meet Him. It has also been revealed that the Lord Jesus has an inheritance in the nations, that "the uttermost parts of the earth are to be His possession," that Ephraim and Judah are to be re-united and restored, and that a rule fraught with peace and blessing is to have its centre of authority at Jerusalem. I feel assured that in the future development of God's purposes nothing can possibly clash; and therefore I ask how both hopes can be entertained, each in its own measure?

It is said that the one hope is spiritual and heavenly, and it is contrasted with the other, which is said to be national and earthly; but is it safe to make use of this contrast when referring to anything which relates to Him who is the God-man? The Church's hope and inheritance is nothing more than that of meeting Him, and of then being co-heirs with Him. Therefore that which He deigns to value, ought not to be beneath her ken, or be unworthy of her regard. If her Lord's kingdom upon this earth, for which she ever prays, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven," that kingdom of the stone, which is inseparably connected with restored Israel, is a development in which He is to be glorified, she ought to be full of interest when any light begins to break; and an opposite tendency must seem to manifest an unsuspected element of selfishness, which regards more earnestly her own joy than it does the full development of the travail of His soul.

His faithfulness is inseparably connected with His promises to Abraham, and his seed for ever. Is it nothing that faithfulness is marvellously manifested in the fact of His having guarded and blessed the outcast wanderers, fulfilled to them every promise, made them the chief of the nations, given to them and preserved to them the Protestant faith, and made them the custodians of His Word?

The Church's hope of translation may be "brighter," for the kingdoms of this world will not fall without a struggle; but who or what is to be the human instrument upon earth, by which witness is to be borne to Him?

The Church's hope may be "nearer," for the accomplishment of His kingdom may take time, but may not He need the patience and faith of those who can for His work's sake be contented to wait?

The Church's hope may be "bigger," but surely it cannot be more embracing than the great circle of His purpose; and as one part of that circle includes the Church of this age, so the other part, or complement, includes Israel on earth, blessed under the new covenant, in and through His saving power.

In Israel, identified by means of the blessings which God's truth and grace have given to her, we have the pledge of the complete accomplishment of all the prophecies of her glory. We may not be, we are not, able to see how it may be, that that portion of the Church which has met the Lord in the air, will be in a position to aid Him in the work which He will yet have to do on earth. We cannot say what exact relationship restored Israel, sprinkled, as Ezekiel tells us she will be, will bear to the "rapt" portion of the body. But can we imagine that the one will awake little or no interest in the other? And if not then, why should it be so now? If under our own eyes, and in our own nation, the way is being prepared for the manifestation of the wonder of the future—namely, when "they shall no more say, the Lord liveth which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt, but the Lord liveth, which brought up and led the seed of the House of Israel out of the North country, and from all countries whither I had driven them, and they shall dwell in their own land," we ought not to be indifferent or uninterested, even though we were certain that by rupture or by death a "nearer" and "brighter" vista was about to be opened up to us,

A friend puts this question:—"Is not the English custom of decorating churches and houses at Christmas the remains of the Feast of Tabernacles? No other nations observe Christmas in this peculiar manner."

Digitized by Google

"THE ROCK" QUOTES "BLINDLY" GOOD EVIDENCE OF OUR IDENTITY.

We take the following from The Rock of September 24, 1880, and have no doubt its editor will be greatly surprised that we look on his quotation as evidence of "the Israelitish origin of the British nation." Let the reader consider the matter for himself and judge. Our extract is as follows:—

THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE IN THE EAST.

The Lucknow Witness says: In an excellent paper on "Bible Colportage," read at the Bangalore Missionary Conference by the Rev. A. Theophilus, we find the following passage, which is of interest as one of many signs of the great importance of the English language in mission work: "From 1870 to 1878, 24,671 copies of the English Scriptures were sold in the Madras Presidency. The majority of the purchasers have been Hindus. This will be viewed as an important result by those who bear in mind that most of the educated Hindus derive their knowledge mainly from English books, that they adopt this language even in social intercourse among themselves, and that there is no other way of reaching them than through English. It is well known that they prefer the English to the vernacular Bible. They will not read it at all, or read it only in English. Perhaps some may be disposed to lament this state of things, but we must recognise the fact. There are pretty clear indications that the English Bible will become a great factor in the evangelisation of the higher classes in India." Dr. Murdoch also, in his paper on the Madras Religious Tract and Book Society, calls attention to the very marked increase in the English publications, on account of the increase of education in that language leading to a much larger demand. A still further indication of the onward march of the noble English tongue, even in countries not under English Government, is found in the recent adoption of this language in place of Arabic by the well-known Syrian Protestant College at Beirut, which, under the care of the American missionaries, is doing such grand things for that country. A fair trial had been made of the vernacular, the Faculty had mastered it, and text-books had been prepared in it, but it gradually became clear that for any thorough culture in after life the English must be made the most prominent. The change has not sprung from within the college, but was imposed upon it from without by the graduates and friends. It was seen that there must be full, free access to English literature. The English is the commercial and the Christian language of the world. Year by year it is rapidly gaining all through the awakening East.

What have we here?

1. The marvellous spread of the English language by means of the English Bible in India, and as the result of education in English.

2. The adoption of English in the Syrian Protestant College at Beirut, in place of the Arabic vernacular.

3. That English is the commercial and the Christian "language of the world."

4. That "year by year it is rapidly gaining all through the awakening East."

These are pregnant proofs of the fact that the British are Israel. For—

1. That race must follow the language; and where English is in the ascendant the British are sure to dominate. Universal ascendancy is promised only to Israel the heir of the world (Rom. iv. 13; Dan. vii. 27). Hence the British must be Israel.

2. That race which speaks the commercial and Christian language of the world must be the Christian nation, the chief of nations—that is, Israel (Hos. i. 10; Jer. xxxi. 7).

3. That race which carries the Gospel by the English Bible throughout the heathen empire of our Queen must be Israel, since to her only is that evangelising rôle entrusted (Gen. xxii. 18; Isa. xxvi. 6, lxi. 9).

4. That race which even in Palestine dictates that their language shall be adopted in a seat of learning must be Israel, since to Israel the inheritance is gifted, and no nation but Israel is so conspicuously blessed in language and literature as she who is "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath."

On the whole we thank the Rock for its quotation of a piece of evidence which goes directly to establish our contention; we would ask its worthy editor to consider "how the British can fail to be Israel if their Bible is to be the Lord's instrument in evangelising India? how, if their noble tongue is to predominate not only in Syria, but throughout the world? how he can reconcile these admitted facts with God's promises to the seed of Abraham, supposing we British are Gentiles pure? and how he can deny with reference to those facts, that we are in truth Israel of the Lost House?

We conclude our remarks by two anecdotes. When the Emperor of Russia and the Chinese Ambassador, the Marquis Tseng, lately desired to communicate personally in regard to the matter in dispute between the two empires, there was no language found in which the two could converse but the grand old universal English of God's people Israel (English Mechanic and World of Science, September 10, 1880, No. 807). It brought the ends of the earth together and formed the uniting link. Our other illustration has been given us by Mr. Edward Charles Bird, of the Indian Telegraph Service, now on leave in Europe. Two sub-inspectors of the Indian Telegraph Department, serving in Central India some years ago, were employed with himself in certain departmental work. One of these men was a native of the Panjab, and the other of the Southern Mahratta country. The Panjabi could speak only Hindustani and Pushtoo. The Mahratta only Canarese and Marathi. The two could not therefore comprehend each other's language, until they adopted English, with which both were slightly acquainted, as the medium of intercommunication. English is indeed becoming the common language of the heathen empire, as it is that of the whole world.

"THE CHRISTIAN WORLD" AND THE GREAT PYRAMID.

The Christian World, of October 28, 1880, contained the following notice of the Rev. Samuel Minton's pamphlet on "God's Sign, Pillar, and Witness in the Land of Egypt." When will our public writers learn the A B C of the Bible and learn to distinguish between the House of Israel, and the House of Judah, or the Jews? The vice has become inveterate, and cannot be eradicated.

The editor, it will be seen, states gravely that "attempts are now being made to prove that the Anglo-Saxon people are of 'Jewish descent.'" We were not aware of that. We thought the Ten Tribes had nationally nothing to do with the Jews since B.C. 740, when the men of the House of Judah were first called "Jews" in God's Word (2 Kings xvi. 6). We fear the editor of the Christian World has himself but "vague notions of these matters," and it would do him good to enter on a severe course of Identity study for six months. We hope he will then make the BANNER his vade mecum, and we are sure he will ever after cease to connect the British or Anglo-Saxon races with "the Jews;" but learn that they are "Israelites" who never were, are not now, and never will be of "Jewish descent."

The extract we alluded to is as follows:—

"Hundreds of our readers have doubtless heard of the attempts that are made to prove that the Anglo-Saxon people are of Jewish descent, and know that in connection with this subject appeals are made to Old Testament prophecies, and to the most remarkable of the Egyptian Pyramids. Those who have only vague notions on these matters, and would like to obtain clearer light without much searching for it, will do well to read a lecture, issued this week, on 'The Great Pyramid,' by the Rev. Samuel Minton. It is a very plain and popular explanation of the views of those learned men who hold that this wonderful structure was built by Melchisedek, under Divine inspiration, and that it stands as an unanswerable testimony to the truth of many statements of Scripture, while supplying dates for forecasting events yet to happen in relation to the Church of Christ and the future of mankind. The text which Mr. Minton puts as a motto to his lecture is Isaiah xix. 19, 'A witness to the Lord of hosts in the land of Egypt.' The pamphlet can be had from 18, Fleet-street, for sixpence, by post."

Digitized by Google

ISRAEL'S BATTLES.

"FOR THERE IS NONE OTHER THAT FIGHTETH FOR US, BUT ONLY THOU, O GOD."

(Continued from page 17.)

No. XXVIII.—THE EXPEDITION TO ABYSSINIA.

"THEODORUS, King of Ethiopia," as he called himself, was ruler in Abyssinia in 1861. He had usurped the throne, and his real name was Dejajmatch Kasai. The British Consul accredited to this monster of cruelty and rage was in 1860 Mr. Plowden, who unfortunately was that year murdered by rebels. The King, Theodore, avenged his death in a signal manner, and soon after, in 1861, when Captain Cameron was appointed to succeed Plowden, Theodore wrote a letter to our Queen, asking for her friendship and help, which letter was unfortunately laid aside by the then Premier, Earl Russel, and never answered. This supposed insult Theodore never forgave, but proceeded by way of retaliation to make prisoners of all the Europeans in Abyssinia who were unfortunate enough to fall into his power. This was in 1866. In 1867 efforts were made by the Armenian Patriarch in Constantinople, and by others to induce the merciless king to release the British Consul, Captain Cameron, the missionaries, as well as other Europeans he held in chains. In vain. The monster was deaf to all entreaties and there was nothing for it but to submit to the insult or to compel the all but inaccessible despot to act in accordance with national laws, by force of arms.

The British Government, being Israel, resolved, after all efforts had failed, to send an expedition into Abyssinia to compel the king to release his prisoners. The Commander-in-chief chosen for the force which was dispatched from India, was a godly officer of the Bengal Engineers, General Sir Robert Napier. In October, 1867, the troops began to arrive in Annesly Bay, whence the distant mountains rising peak after peak, thirty miles away, showed the route the army would have to take among almost inaccessible dangerous passes before Magdala, the capital of Theodore, itself almost impregnable to attack, could be reached. On January 3, 1868, the advance guard of the attacking force under General Merreweather began to move, and that day General Napier arrived at the scene of action. The invading army consisted of 11,770 soldiers, mostly native Infantry regiments of the Indian service, 14,000 followers, attached to the Land Transport Train, Commissariat Department, and Troops. The march of the force along those difficult mountains and highlands was, by God's mercy to our race, unopposed by Theodore. Had he held the passes and opposed us, surely nothing but defeat could have terminated the expedition. God disposed of the matter otherwise. He willed the ruin and death of Theodore, and He caused Him to act so as to ensure both. On Good Friday Colonel Phayre crossed the Baskilo river, near Magdala, and dividing his force approached Magdala by two routes, and there under the hill of Fahla met the attack of Theodore's army. The Panjab Pioneers, and the Naval Rocket Brigade were sent to help Colonel Milward near the Hill of Fahla, and there a hot engagement took place, in which Theodore's troops were literally mowed down with the far reaching Snider rifles and mountain guns of the British. Though the Abyssinians were pouring a hot fire into the British, not a single man of that force was killed, but only nineteen were wounded. But 500 of the enemy were lying dead on the field. Next morning, April 12, all the prisoners held by Theodore were unconditionally released and sent in to Sir Robert's camp safe.

On April 13, 1868, the British moved on to the assault of the king's stronghold, Magdala. It was a place of immense strength, utterly impregnable in the hands of a resolute disciplined force. But it was not defended at all. The place was abandoned by the king's troops. The miserable king with a few followers remained in the fortress, where they awaited the British assault. The king died by his own hand, and his followers were slain, fighting bravely to the last. The British loss in these operations was not a man killed, only ten men were wounded. Thus Sir Robert Napier, like Gideon and his army of old, with only about 10,000 men, by God's help surmounted unheard of difficulties in his march to Theodore's stronghold, achieved every purpose required of him by his Government, released all the prisoners, took an almost impregnable natural fortress, struck down all opposition, rid the country of an inhuman monster who had ruined his subjects by his misrule, and finally brought the force safely back to the coast without the loss of a single man in action. God, in fact, blessed Israel then in a marked and wondrous way, and the General who was selected to do this great deed, was not ashamed in his dispatches to record that he owed all his success "to the mercy of God."

A few sentences from Sir Robert Napier's address to the troops, dated April 20, 1868, will properly conclude our notice of these glorious operations; and we may add that Sir Robert was made a Peer, by the title of Lord Napier of Magdala, for these services. His address to the army, dated Camp Dalsola runs thus:—

"I congratulate you with all my heart on the noble way in which you have fulfilled the commands of our sovereign. You have traversed often under a tropical sun, or amidst storms of rain and sleet, 400 miles of mountainous and difficult country. You have crossed many steep and precipitous ranges of mountains more than 10,000 feet in altitude, where your supplies could not keep pace with you.

"When you arrived within reach of your enemy, though with scanty food, and some of you for many hours without either food or water, in four days you passed the formidable chasm of the Bahilo, and defeated the army of Theodore which poured down upon you from their lofty fortress in the full confidence of victory.

"A host of many thousands have laid down their arms at your feet.

"You have captured and destroyed upwards of thirty pieces of artillery, many of great weight and efficiency, with ample stores of ammunition. You have stormed the almost inaccessible fortress of Magdala, defended by Theodore, with the desperate remnant of his chiefs and followers.

"After you forced the entrance Theodore, who never shewed mercy, distrusted the offer of mercy held out to him, and died by his own hand.

"You have released not only British captives, but those of other friendly nations.

"You have unloosed the chains of more than ninety of the principal chiefs of Abyssinia.

"Magdala, in which so many victims have been slaughtered, has been committed to the flames, and remains only a scorched rock.

"Our complete and rapid success is due first to the mercy of God, whose hand I feel assured has been over us in a just cause. Secondly, to the high spirit with which you have been inspired.

"The Queen and the people of England will appreciate your services."

Such was this splendid episode in Israel's history. It was a complete success, and with a minimum of loss resulted in a maximum of effect. It was an Israelitish triumph, God given, in a just cause, and was carried out by a handful of brave troops, without loss of life, the leader being a truly pious, godly soldier of the House of Israel. Reflecting on such events as those we have described, we say, "Israel, praise YE the Lord!"

NOTE.—"Lazarus" asks, "Is there any means of ascertaining, or does anybody know, if the Normans were chiefly left-handed?"

Digitized by Google

THE REV. DENIS HANAN, M.A., ON DAN. XII. 7.

HAVING referred our view of Dan. xii. 7 to the Rev. Denis Hanan, as a divine in whose judgment, learning and godly reverence for the Scripture we might rely, we have received from him the following reply, which we publish with his permission:—

"Your reference," he says, "to 'scatter the power of the holy people' (Dan. xii. 7), as meaning 'troops,' or 'army,' is new to me. Its probable correctness is supported by the circumstance (which I daresay you are aware of) that the יָד yâhd, here translated 'power,' occurs about 1,600 times, and is almost invariably 'hand' in the Scriptures, except in Hosea xiii. 14, where 'hand' is given in the margin, and at 2 Kings xi. 7, where 'hands,' or 'companies' (i.e., 'troops') is the marginal rendering.

"The view that 'scattering the power' means the utter crushing of the power of the holy people, would of itself be of little comfort to the listening prophet, and is quite opposed to the view taken by the earliest commentators (Speaker's Commentary in loc). All this bears out your view."

So far, the Rev. D. Hanan. We would ask our readers to remember that the passage relates to events just before "the mystery of God is finished" (Rev. x. 7, compared with Dan. xii. 7). It must relate, therefore, to the last days—our times. In our days, the holy people, Israel, cannot be the Jews. They have no power, no troops to be scattered. It must, therefore, relate to the Ten Tribed Israel's, or British power or troops. Our troops and army, therefore, have to be scattered, as the last event before the mystery of Israel (the Identity) can be accomplished; and thus we have in this matter a new SIGN given us, to see where we stand in prophetic time, and to know how close we are to the end.

IDENTITY LECTURES AND MEETINGS.

A CIRCULAR now lying before us gives notice of a public meeting held at an outlying suburb of Bristol, on Wednesday evening, November 24, 1880, when our zealous and earnest fellow-labourer in the cause, Mr. B. Carlisle, of Stapleton, repeated his lecture on "An Epitome of the Identification of the British People with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel; Viewed in its Religious, Historical, and Political Aspects."

We observe that the admission to this lecture was by payment—"sixpence front seats, and threepence the back seats." As the hand-bills of the lecture were printed and pretty largely circulated, we have no doubt Mr. Carlisle was cheered with a large and enthusiastic meeting; one, further, which we hope paid its own expenses. We are induced to say a few words on this subject of the cost of Identity meetings and lectures, in consequence of the fact to which we have before alluded, that the lectures of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association have, instead of being self-supporting, been a constant source of expense and anxiety to the Association. This ought not to be. The meeting itself ought always to be called on to pay the cost attending the lecture, and the charge ought never to be thrown on the body or individual by whom the lecturer was sent to serve the cause. We think the arrangements made on the occasion of Mr. Carlisle's lecture are, on the whole, satisfactory. It was found so when our Cheltenham friends arranged for the lecture we were privileged to deliver there in February, 1880, before the Cheltenham Association was organised. The seats were then paid for by the larger part of the audience, and the consequence was there was a satisfactory nett sum in hand after all expenses were defrayed. On a recent occasion we understand, that as the result of different arrangements, the surplus was turned into a large deficit, which naturally discourages a young and not over rich society. We trust our friends all over the country will learn that, as in all matters affecting His glory and His service, so in respect to our Identity, the Lord puts upon His people the burden of working with Him, and He expects them to give of that which costs them something, and not to offer Him service which throws the pecuniary liability on every one but ourselves. We know this question of cost deters persons willing to come forward in support of our Identity from delivering or organising lectures and meetings. We know a large city where meetings ought to be of constant occurrence, since there are numbers of able Israelites in it; but the question of the cost discourages the zeal of many who know that enthusiastic meetings will probably come together, but when the question of the collection is submitted to them the response is in the smallest coins of these realms. Copper and small silver (the smallest coined indeed!) is the reply of those who appear willing to starve the cause rather than come to the help of the providers of their privileges. These things, we say again, ought not so to be. We hope to see the proverbial generosity and large-handed liberality of British-Israelites speedily vindicated by copious subscriptions flowing into the coffers of the Metropolitan Association, and generally by a liberal response being made at meetings to the appeals chairmen urge to enable the organisers to feel themselves free of the charges necessarily attaching to all public meetings of any sort, especially to such as have for their subject British Identity with the Lost House of Israel.

THE TESTIMONY OF TWO BRITISH WORKING MEN AS TO BENEFITS DERIVED FROM "THE IDENTITY."

WE beg to quote the words of two men of the working classes, one in the South of England, the other in the Midland counties, testifying to the personal good derived by one from study of the Identity, and to national benefit expected by the other. These instances are most gratifying to us, and are cause for thankfulness to God. We believe our readers will concur with us in this opinion.

One of the writers, addressing us, says:—

"I believe our cause is progressing in this town more rapidly than we sometimes are aware. To me it is the most blessed thing I have ever met with. The Bible is a new book to me now. I spend hours reading it, where I scarcely used to read it at all, and yet we are told sometimes our churches and chapels are becoming very cold in consequence of this subject engrossing the attention of our ministers. This statement I do not believe. What is good for me I believe and can testify to be true. It is good for my friends too."

The other, writing to the Secretary of the "Brooklyn Identity Church Fund," and enclosing 10s. towards it, added (addressing Colonel Bentinck):—

"Dear Sir,—When I read of this grand proposal my heart was filled with intense joy. I pray God the undertaking may prove a grand success. How I long for it to be proved to every one that the British are God's 'chosen people.' For then, and not till then, shall we truly become a righteous nation."

The writer apologised for not sending a larger sum (!); but explained he had been out of work nearly two months, which "caused him to be less liberal than he otherwise should be." His liberality puts us all to shame, we think, and we are glad to know from Colonel Bentinck that he has already received for our Brooklyn friends £6, a sum shortly, we trust, to be largely increased.

Digitized by Google

THE SUPERNATURAL.

On three occasions lately have we received communications from individuals purporting to have been commissioned from on high to impart to us some information connected with our Identity. Once the intelligence (so called) came to us from America, but we found it linked with opinions and published statements, which being grossly indecent, would not bear the light of day. Next came a message from nearer home, from one who believes in spiritualism, and desired to communicate to us intelligence, said to be important for us to learn, but which, apart from God's Word had, it was alleged, been reserved to the medium for transmission to us. We answered the correspondent with the assertion that if God's Word were silent on the matter proposed to be revealed, we were content to be in ignorance of the same, and for our parts declined to receive or entertain so-called communications from the other world which had not been revealed to us in the perfect Word of the great Jehovah.

On January 4, 1881, we were favoured with yet another message, and this time coupled with a threat. The writer of the statement in question, wholly different from the other two, informs us that he has the following message for us, and that it must be published in the BANNER:—"Think now of Ireland. Behold I have smitten them, and why? Because the ark is there in the hill of Tara." Such is the message, and we are informed that having been communicated to our correspondent so far back as January 11, 1880, a year ago, he held it back, and only now has been impelled by command to send it "to Edward Hine and Philo-Israel." We pause here to remark that the whereabouts of Mr. Hine was on Dec. 20 last, the date in question, unknown, and therefore if our mentor was directed to inform him as well as ourselves of the wondrous secret, the commission must have failed, for the message could not reach, and did it do so, the editorial functions of Mr. Hine having ceased, the news would be of no avail to him as a propagator of the truth. But what, after all, is the value of this so-called communication from the other world? We are directed "to think of Ireland." Everybody is doing that now, without the spiritualist's injunction. "Behold I have smitten them;" meaning, we presume, God has smitten the Irish people; a truism which the veriest babe has long since decided in his mind is such. "Why? Because the ark is there in the hill of Tara." This is, however, what Mr. Hine and many others have been constantly telling us for some time past as a fact, and we get letters continually from all parts of the earth asking us "why" Tara cannot be opened and presently examined? The wondrous message then we are threatened with "being smitten for our folly" if we fail to publish from motives of fear, amounts to simply nothing. We allude to the matter and make it known, because we see in this, as in so many other ways, the efforts of Satan to deter us in our work. Now it is the denunciations of good and pious men; anon it is the attacks and scoffs of worldly persons; presently it is the vile indecency of an American medium; then, the more refined self-authorised warnings of an English spiritualist are brought to bear upon us. To-day the threatening letter of one who asserts a Divine commission to tell us as a fact what a good many of us have long believed, but all would like to see proved by the examination of the hill of Tara, is received. The only question "of the ways and means" is exactly what our self-styled inspired authority leaves totally unsolved.

We had written thus far, when on the very same day, and by a different post, we received the following from our English spiritualist, which will give our readers just cause to reflect whether the writer of such is most to be pitied, or whether the unfortunate editor of the BANNER deserves commiseration more, as the recipient of shafts from so many armouries. The message he has now received is this: "The Messiah is on the earth, JUDGE, and KING (by command)." (The name and address being given in full.)

We publish the above in order that it may give us the opportunity of making the following statement, which we do with all earnestness.

1. We desire to know nothing, and learn nothing, but what God has revealed to all mankind in His Holy Word, the Bible, and His stone monument, the Great Pyramid.

2. Where those are silent, we desire to know no more, and shall refuse all other instruction, in spiritual things.

3. We resolve never to meddle with spiritualism and its teachings.

4. And as to alleged revelations such as we have last received in such mysterious terms, we reject the assertions, unproved and presumptuous, of sinful men, regarding facts that God's own Word declares shall be known when they occur, like the lightning's flash, and will be discernable from the East even to the West (Matt. xxiv. 27). We do not read there that these are secrets to be confided to a mortal man, and sent by him at his will to others by the British Penny Post.

THE FUTURE LANGUAGE OF THE EARTH.

We were lately discussing our Identity in the presence of two clergymen of the Church of England, one a converted Jew (a strong advocate of our Identity, by the way), and the other a member of the council of our Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association. The question was put to us what language we thought would eventually become the "language of the earth?" Our Jewish friend was of opinion that the Hebrew tongue would yet be the favoured one in future, as it had been in time past. Our own expectation we stated was that God would cause the English language to have the preference, since the language must follow the race, and to the British House of Israel the heritage of the earth was granted in God's Word (Dan. ii. 35—44; Rom. iv. 13). Just at the right time, an Israelite friend, in Forest-hill, London, has sent us the Children's Messenger, of November 1, 1880, where, on page 127, we have an article treating of the very subject. The sender hopes very properly that it will suit the BANNER. We are quite sure it will suit its readers, since it is a blind contribution to the proof of our Identity, which is of great cogency and force. It is to the following effect:—

THE FUTURE OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

The American missionaries have had for years a college at Beyrout, on the shores of Syria, a little to the North of Sidon. The professors not only learned Arabic that they might teach the young men who came to the college, but they translated books into Arabic for the use of the students. Recently the students have asked that the English language shall be used in their education, and the Arabic be given up. English has become the language of commerce, and the Syrian youth who wants to get a position in business must be able to speak it. A demand has also risen from this improved education for increased knowledge, and they want to have free access to English literature.

It seems as if the great work of carrying the Gospel to the heathen and Mahommedan, which is chiefly performed by English-speaking Christians, will in time make our language the language of the world. The Hebrew and Greek languages have disappeared as living tongues, and are, for the great work that Jesus committed to His servants, replaced by English. How important, with such a future opening before us, it is that our English Bible should be a good and faithful translation. It is well that the most learned scholars of our day are now engaged in revising it, so as to make it as perfect as it can be made.

Do our readers imagine that the Lord Jesus would have allowed the English to replace the Hebrew and Greek languages in the dissemination of the Gospel committed by Him to His Hebrew servants, unless He had designed it should be so as the best arrangement for the world? Already is our noble tongue the one chiefly used in the great work of Gospel propagation among heathen and Mohammedans. In India, with its 200 millions of British native subjects, the language of the conquerors is the avenue to preferment and progress. It is consequently eagerly acquired, and among the better educated natives so perfectly that their fluency in its use is truly surprising. Japan is teaching it in its 50,000 schools. Throughout Russia it is taught and readily learnt by all classes. It is the language of the entire continent of North America, of the vast British Australasian dominions, of New Zealand and Tasmania. It is increasingly used in France and Germany, and is the language of commerce throughout Africa and the world. Surely the Lord is preparing the earth for the rule of the House of Israel, and the British being destined to acquire the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom throughout the whole planet under the whole heaven, it is manifest He is causing our language to spread with rapidity to facilitate the acquisition by British-Israel of her destined sovereignty. Do we herein unduly exalt our race, and pander to its pride? How can that be? It is God who calls His people to occupy the throne, and to wield a sceptre in His Name which He is preparing for her to use. Shall we, when God's hand points so clearly and manifestly, pretend to be blind to the direction, and with false humility reject the greatness which makes for God's glory? Nay, let us rather, acknowledging our unworthiness as a nation, accept with thankful hearts those distinctions that He grants us, knowing they are the outcome of His oath and covenants with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, our forefathers, and realising that, let us, as Israel, "praise the Lord" (Gen. xii. 3, xviii. 18, xxii. 17, 18, xxvi. 3—5, xxviii. 13, 14, xxxv. 11, xlviii. 15—22.)

Digitized by Google

OF THE THREE HUNDRED GRANT BUT THREE TO FORM A NEW THERMOPYLÆ.

Byron's Don Juan.

BYRON was despondent regarding the ability of the modern Greeks to find three men with courage enough to emulate the deed of the Dannite Israelite Greeks, who, three hundred in number, died to bar the way against the hordes of Xerxes in the Pass of Thermopylæ. Greece cannot produce three heroes such as the poet needed to save the modern Grecian kingdom from contempt. But Israel of the British Isles brought forth one hundred (and if need be a thousand times a hundred would have been forthcoming) during a dark episode of her recent history in Afghanistan, when the disaster at Maiwand, on July 27, 1880, brought consternation and distress to the heart of this suffering nation. An excellent account of this gallant deed has appeared in the Sussex Daily News of Nov. 9, 1880, to which we ask our readers' attention. It tells the story of British bravery and devotion in a way which cannot be surpassed, and it proves once more that the British, being Israel, are "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath," also in courage and noble self-sacrifice," even unto death. The account is as follows:—

English courage may be badly betrayed to a cruel enemy, but it does not die. The only redeeming feature in all that dismal story of the Maiwand disaster—rashly provoked and made more deplorable by the panic of the Generals—is to be found in the records of personal bravery, which a poet might sing, but which General Burrows apparently thinks it beneath him to notice. A good instance was that of the soldier who walked forty miles to save a comrade. "He was riding on one of the guns during the retreat when the officer in command ordered him to make way for a wounded man. Well, this man got down without a word and limped into Candahar. When he arrived there it was found that one heel had been wounded. On being questioned why he did not say he was wounded, he replied that the other poor fellow was worse than he was. This is English courage, but there was Hindu courage too. Hear the story of the native Grenadier who was mortally wounded, but who refused to die in the rear. He asked that his cartridge pouch might be placed in front of him, and before his exertions brought the faint of death he had exhausted every cartridge save one in his possession. Then we hear of various other grand instances of death with heroic resolution. Colonel Galbraith was last seen on the nullah bank kneeling on one knee, colours in hand, officers and men rallying round him, and on that spot his body was found. Lieutenant Barr was shot dead over the colours; close by, Captains Garratt and Cullen were killed on the field in front of the nullah, up to the last moment commanding their companies, and giving orders with as much coolness as if on parade. Lieutenants Oliver and Honeywood were seen holding up the colours, the pole of one of which had been shattered to pieces at the rallying points, and Lieutenant Honeywood was shot while holding the colours high above his head, shouting to the men, "What shall we do to save this?" But the grandest event of the day of discredit was the stand of 100 men of the 66th. It has been fully described. Every one of that 100 perished. "When only 11 out of them were left they charged and died with faces to the foe, fighting to the death. Such was the nature of their charge and the grandeur of their bearing, that, although the whole of the Ghazis were assembled around, not one dared approach to cut them down. The 11 stood in the open, back to back, firing steadily and truly, every shot telling, surrounded by thousands, and not till the last man was shot down did the Ghazis dare to advance." Thermopylæ had its 300 victims, and their fame lives for evermore. This gallant stand of 100 doomed men at Maiwand will be forgotten in a few months, and will rest with a thousand other such stories in our military annals. Yet Thermopylæ showed nothing grander than the stand of the 100 of the famous 66th.

THE REV. B. WREY SAVILE'S INACCURACY OF QUOTATION.

WE should not have drawn attention to the fact that the Rev. B. W. Savile has in his pamphlet, recently noticed in the BANNER, inaccurately quoted our words, in order to bring disrepute on our subject, had we not seen the repetition of the same misquotation in a long letter published by our rev. opponent in the Western Times, of Exeter, under date Dec. 28, 1880.

At page 23 of his pamphlet, discussing "Constantinople the Gate of Gates," Mr. Savile, quoting from the BANNER of July 31, 1878, to prove that we "speculated on the time when we are to possess this great Gate," affirms that we said what follows as a matter of "prediction." The editor of the Rock will admit "the truth of our contention when he finds a few months, or a couple of years hence, the British are possessors not only of Cyprus and all Asia, but of CONSTANTINOPLE as well."

Let the reader note first that the capitals and italics are all supplied by Mr. Savile, and are not to be found in our words on page 250, vol. ii., No. 83, July 31, 1878. Next, that with the page before him, Mr. Savile deliberately expunged the word "perhaps," which we used in the sentence in question expressly to deprive the words of all pretension to prediction; but exhibiting the whole as an ironical reply to a bantering notice of the editor of the Rock addressed to one he deemed a too sanguine but angry Anglo-Israelite.

Let the reader compare our words and the passage in connection with which we used them, with Mr. Savile's strange rendering of them to suit his own purposes, and then let him ask himself why Mr. Savile omitted mention of the word "perhaps," which was plainly set out in print before him?

We wrote as follows: "On July 5, 1878, the editor of the Rock published the following notice to a correspondent who, indignant at the unfair treatment the Identity was receiving from that paper, had given it up. The editor said, regarding THE ANGLO-ISRAELITISH THEORY, 'We are sincerely sorry that our attitude towards this theory has lost us your support. According to your view, England inheriting the promise made to Abraham, that "his seed should possess the

Digitized by Google

Gate of his enemies," will become mistress of Constantinople; while, according to our view, she will never be anything of the kind. We trust that when you find, after the lapse of ten or twenty years, England is no nearer (but, on the contrary, further off) being mistress of Constantinople than she is now, you will begin to take in the Rock again.'"

To this we made the following reply, following up the Rock's notice in the same vein of irony, for, whereas, that paper talked of ten or twenty years hence finding the Gate further off than ever, we suggested to the over confident editor the possibility that "perhaps" the British in a few months, or a couple of years, would be in possession of not only Cyprus and Asia, but the Great Gate as well.

The words we used were these: "Now we think the editor of the Rock should bind himself in return, and promise that when he finds a few months or a couple of years hence (perhaps) the British are in possession not only of Cyprus and all Asia, but of Constantinople as well, he will admit the truth of our contention, favour us with an Identity article as a leader every week, and thus recover his retiring subscriber."

Again we ask, why did Mr. Savile omit the word "perhaps" in his quotation? Why did he describe what was a piece of pleasantry on our part as a grave prophecy, uttered by that speculating but deluded individual, as he deems him, doubtless, to be, the editor of the BANNER? It is this sort of conduct which gives point to our quotation of 2 Kings ix. 23. At any rate it is not fair or candid to use such tools in literary or any other warfare.

TU QUOQUE.

By the Rev. Denis Hanan, M.A.

THE idea that the Ten and the Two Tribes, Ephraim and Judah, were reunited during the Babylonian captivity, and that therefore the people known as the Jews represent the Twelve Tribes, is that which satisfies many who speak of further research as a "craze." Perfectly satisfied of the certainty of their theory, they accuse those who say that it is opposed to Scripture, tradition, and historic fact, of building their opinion upon assumption; and if in tracing the lost nation through the centuries "may be" is breathed, no matter how possible, probable, or in accordance with prophetic statements, the argument is by them regarded as a fond thing vainly invented.

Let us endeavour to examine the basis of the position which is supposed to give them this point of vantage. It is that adopted by the writer upon the Book of Ezekiel, in "The Speaker's Commentary." In the Introduction, section vi., and in the notes upon the text, we have a full statement of the opinion held by those who are responsible for its enunciation, and the acknowledged ability of the work may well justify the impression that better reasons cannot be given.

Upon what does the opinion rest? Mirabile dictu, absolutely nothing more trustworthy than a repetition of "may be," "may not," "may well," "may have," &c. The section is too long to quote in full, although I doubt whether, if given in full, even without note or comment, it would not prove a valuable "blind witness." It commences, "One of the immediate effects of the captivity was the reunion of the several Tribes of Israel. For although the place of Ezekiel's abode may not (italics are mine) have been identical with that of the exiles of the Ten Tribes," &c., &c. Again, "A common lot begat sympathy in the sufferers"—pure assumption. Again, the Ten "would not be unwilling to subordinate themselves to" Judah—no proof assigned. Again, "In the course of the years which had elapsed since their exile the number of the Ten Tribes may well have wasted away," "they would be more apt than the men of Judah, to be absorbed among the heathen;" "thus the exiles from Judah may have far exceeded in number, &c., the exiles of Israel."

Further on we find that the theory that the Ten may not have been unwilling to subordinate themselves to Judah "will account for the name of Israel being lost in that of Judah, for the decree of Cyrus being addressed to the fathers of Judah and Benjamin, and for the people's returning under the name of Jews, &c.

Ezekiel's sign of the two sticks is referred to as having been in fact accomplished at the restoration by the decree of Cyrus. And "according to the foregoing view we need not look forward to any discovery" of "THE TEN LOST TRIBES as a separate community;" and this strangely enough, "although the prophecy of Ezekiel had a further and fuller accomplishment," for (note on chap. xxxvii. ver. 21) "the full completion concerns yet later times, and indeed times still future, when all Israel shall come in to acknowledge the rule of Christ."

Surely, in the face of such incontrovertible "may-be's" it must be a "craze" which ventures to suggest (see BANNER of Dec. 22, page 507) that the "mountains of Israel," where the said union is to be effected, are not Babylon; that the "one king" has not yet been over them; that they have not since dwelt in the land "for ever," &c., &c.

The may be of the return from the Caspian to the Persian Gulf, in order to subordinate themselves to captive Judah, must altogether put out of court the evidence of their having journeyed to the Black Sea. That the Ten Tribes "may well have wasted away," ought once and for ever to silence all reference to Ephraim's blessing, "His seed shall become a fulness of nations," or to "Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit."

To those who are thus satisfied to settle the question, it may seem to be more likely that a Gentile nation may be the inheritor of all God's promises to Abraham, His friend, than that any evidence should be forthcoming of His faithfulness to His unconditional covenant. Anglo-Israelites do not need to base their contention on a may be, but they do not hesitate to connect all their arguments, whether Biblical or scientific, with the assumption that not one of His promises can fail.

In fairness to the writer of the paragraph, &c., criticised, it ought to be said, that there is nothing to shew that he had even heard of the Identity of the Ten Tribes with the Anglo-Saxon people, and he must not necessarily be looked upon as an opponent.

Vol. vi. of the "Commentary" was published before THE BANNER was first issued, and Identity evidence has been becoming more clear year by year. But experience proves that there are very many who are perfectly satisfied to-day to meet hard facts with an imperturbable "may be."

THE BRITISH INCH IN THE GREAT PYRAMID.

By H. R. Shaw.

I HAVE been much interested in the several articles that have recently appeared in the BANNER upon the subject of the Step in the Grand Gallery of the Great Pyramid, and I think, after attentively studying Mr. Simpson's latest contribution, it cannot be doubted that the Step's height is 36 inches.

But I wish to draw attention to another matter that appears to have escaped observation—viz., that the breadth of the Granite Leaf, as first visible on the North side and where the Boss is situated, is given by the latest measurement (see "Our Inheritance," page 210) as 41 inches exactly, which would be a combination of the British yard, with a sacred cubit fifth; or, if the width of the Boss be eliminated, we have the exact yard for the third time indicated. And this fact leads me to believe that the inch is to be found similarly indicated in some part of the Ante-Chamber; for if we first meet with the yard alone, then traverse the yard in combination with the cubit, and are immediately brought face to face with the yard and cubit fifth combined, we may reasonably look up somewhere and expect to see the yard and inch in one dimension not far off.

Digitized by Google

Would you kindly ask Professor Piazzi Smyth or Mr. Simpson to look for it amongst their measurements? The space above the Wainscot on West Wall, 149·4, less 111·8 = 37·6 inches, is something near, but not sufficiently accurate, and is, besides, one-sided, instead of being central, as the other combinations are. But what about the stones in the ceiling? The last one near the South Wall seems, on Plate XV., to be exceedingly near 37 inches in width.

Should you deem these suggestions of any general interest, you are welcome to the whole, or any portion of them.

30, Nutfield-road, Dulwich, S.E.,
Dec. 6th, 1880.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—If our friend desires an inch to be shown in the Ante-Chamber, he has it already in the one-fifth breadth of the Boss, in the one inch thickness of the Boss, in its one inch eccentricity. To look for the inch in one of the ordinary building stones of the Chamber, because it measures 37 inches, or 36 + 1, seems an assertion without weight, fanciful and untrue in Pyramidology. Such is also the opinion of others better qualified than ourselves to pronounce one on the subject, whom we have consulted in reference to Mr. Shaw's demand.

CONFEDERATION OF THE EMPIRE.

WE think Sir A. Galt, G.C.M.G., High Commissioner in England for the Canadian Dominion, had "confederation" in his mind when at "The Albion" he made his speech (being the guest of the evening), as reported in the Times of June 3, last year. His last few sentences deserve to be quoted, as they bear upon our subject, and especially point to the confederation of the Empire as the only remedy for an evil which is now robbing our company of nations of its wealth in men—the population its outlying Anglo-Saxon daughters want—but which for lack of due precautions is being absorbed by American Manasseh.

Sir A. Galt said he could not help referring to one problem. "British statesmen had spent 150 years, thousands of lives, millions of money, in creating the greatest colonial Empire ever seen. They had conferred constitutional government on the different sections of that great Empire, and, strange to say, after having completed their work to the point when the burden was over, and the return might be hoped for, the inventive genius of the statesman failed him, and he said, 'Let them go.' Was not that a reproach, that in the hour of England's need, when her agriculture failed, when her population had increased beyond her means, in her vast colonial Empire her statesmen should be unable to find the means of remedying these evils? The world could never again offer to England, or any other country, the opportunity of creating such an Empire as that day owned the sway of Queen Victoria. If the colonies were to slip away, as the child leaves the mother's side, the opportunity of creating such colonies would never recur. He trusted the able men who held office in England would see that a closer union with the colonies would better serve the interests of all." (Loud cheers.)

Here we see Sir A. Galt appears in the character not only of a statesman, but of a blind witness to our Identity. He certainly raises for us some clear Identity points, and refers to them with satisfaction. He declares, for instance, (1.) That British statesmen "had created the greatest colonial Empire ever seen." But this was Israel's destiny. She was to occupy the desolate heritages as her own, with her spawning broods, and to acquire the world's Gates besides. These together would confer on her the greatest Empire as colonies the world has ever yet seen. (Gen. xlviii. 16, xxii. 17; Isa. xlix. 8).

(2.) He stated further that "England's population had increased beyond her means," and saying that, what did he assert but God's repeated promises regarding Israel's multitudinous seed? (Gen. xxii. 17; Hosea i. 10; Zech. x. 8, 9.)

(3.) That "the world would never again offer to England, or any other country, the opportunity of creating such colonies" again, plainly showing, thereby, that Israel cannot appear in the future, but must have already come to light, and occupied her destined post as the mother of nations, the nation with a company of daughter-nations about her, all in loving bonds of federation (Isa. xlix. 8; Gen. xlix. 22; xxxv. 11). Sir A. Galt added that "if the colonies were to slip away" (an impossibility), "as a child leaves its mother's side, we could never create such an Empire again." Quite true! for in truth there would be no space on the earth for this nation, if Gentile, or for the coming Israel to take our place, to create another Empire larger than the British.

Our attention has been drawn to a pamphlet entitled "Our Relations with the Imperial Government, Considered as a Whole and to Confederation," by J. M. Orpen, Esq., a member of the Legislative Assembly of Cape Town. (London: Unwin Brothers, 109A, Cannon-street, E.C., 1880.) In this pamphlet of twenty-six pages Mr. Orpen has developed his views on the subject of the representation of the colonies in the British Parliament in a very clear and satisfactory manner. He cites H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the Earl of Beaconsfield, the Right Hon. W. Foster, Earl Carnarvon, Earl Grey, Judge Haliburton, Joseph Henn, and Sir Ed. Cressy as advocates of the principle he contends for—namely, that representation should be granted to the colonies, to appear in our Houses of Parliament, in either or both, with power to debate questions referring to their respective colonies, and on all Imperial questions with or without power to vote. Representation, in some form or other, he considers indispensable to preserve the unity of the Empire, and we are inclined to agree with him. Only by representation will the confederation of the nation, and company of nations become a fact. Such union, we believe, is nearer than most men suppose. We think the terrible times now close upon us, connected with the great earthquake, and fiery deluge of God's wrath upon the Gentile nations of the earth, will drive the component parts of the great Anglo-Saxon nation into the bonds of confederation as a matter of self-defence. It will be then a period of unparalleled disruption and dislocation of the oldest and most venerated nations of the Gentile world, and such circumstances of unheard of disaster and national upheaval among them will naturally tend to draw Israel, now dispersed and scattered beyond sea, to take all needful measures for self-defence and protection during "the day of vengeance of our God." Confederation will then be found to be the only security; the only measure to adopt, to safeguard the Empire, and to bring the State-ship safely out of the rapids. But confederation will do more than that. It will fulfil God's Word regarding Israel, and the British are Israel! It will give this nation (since union is strength) universal dominion, it will confer on her "the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, as the people of the saints of the Most High;" and such preponderance of power that the peace of the world must be the result of the decision of the Anglo-Saxon races on the subject; for they are, by God's appointment, "the heir of the world!" (Rom. iv. 18; Dan. vi. 27).

REPORT OF THE EXETER ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION ANNUAL MEETING.

THE annual meeting of the above Association was held at the Assembly Rooms, Fore-street, on Wednesday, December 15, 1880. A tea was provided for members and their friends at 6.30, which added considerably to the enjoyment of the evening; after which at 7.30 the business was commenced, W. H. Peters, Esq., J.P., in the chair. The first annual report was then read, showing that during the year four public lectures have been delivered, and at one of these about 600 persons listened very attentively to the Rev. C. W.

Digitized by Google

Hickson's able lecture on "The History of the House of Israel, and the British Nation Identified with It." In addition to these lectures twenty-five members' discussion meetings have been held, at which papers have been read by members in turn upon almost every branch of the Identity. During the Winter months the discussions are held every Tuesday evening at the Assembly Rooms, Fore-street. These weekly meetings have already proved very satisfactory and encouraging.

A great acquisition to the Association has been the recent formation of a library of Identity literature only, and which now numbers nearly 100 books. Many thanks are offered to the several authors and friends who have so kindly contributed books and money towards this very useful department. It is hoped that further contributions may be sent by those who are able to do so.

The report being adopted, the balance sheet presented showed that the Association was in debt to the amount of only 13s. 6½d.; this was accounted for by the public lectures given by the Association having in each case been free, thereby incurring great expense. But for the liberal subscription of £8 by Mr. W. H. Peters, the Association must have been completely crippled.

Election of officers.—President: Gerald de Courcy Hamilton, Esq. Vice-Presidents: W. H. Peters, Esq., J.P., L. J. Kennaway, Esq., J. Wills, Esq. Committee: Rev. E. H. Tuckett, Messrs. H. J. Weaver, G. Heath, R. Pike, W. Townsend, T. C. Reed, J. Pugsley. Hon. Sec. and Treasurer: Mr. W. J. Southwood. Librarian: Mr. A. Rowe.

The revision of rules being the next business, several alterations were made, but the alteration of rule 1, "That the name of the Association be changed from 'Anglo' to 'British-Israel,'" was agreed upon, subject to the approval of the Central Association, of which this is a branch.

THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL, NAY, THE VERY CHIEF OF NATIONS.

THE Pall Mall Gazette of June 20, 1880, quoting the Daily News, a Liberal paper, as everybody knows, cannot help bearing witness in the following terms that Israel is the very chief of nations. The short article is headed

"ENGLISH ASCENDENCY.

"The Daily News points out that 'in all combinations like that European Concert which Mr. Gladstone so often strove to bring about, and which we believe he has brought about at last, the guidance and force of any movement to be made must almost invariably rest on one central Power. One State has to be the soul and spirit and guiding force of the combination. It was more than once the destiny and the pride of England to hold such a central place in a concert of European States, not always, we are bound to say, formed for purposes as high and just as those which were set forth in the agreement of the Berlin Conference. It is England's part now once again to be the central Power of such a co-operation of States. The movement which is to be made to enforce the claims of Greece will depend very much on her initiative, her energy, and her determination. The more resolution she has and the more she inspires other Powers with the resolve the more certain becomes a peaceful settlement of the whole dispute. It is not possible to conceive that even the fatuous obstinacy of Turkish politicians could induce them to offer blind and determined denial to a demand made by the combined voices of the great European Powers.'"

Reviews.

Is not Queen Victoria the Royal Seed to King David's Throne, and are not Her Subjects, the British People, the Ten Lost Tribes? By William Hopton, Colliery Manager, St. Helen's. London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

WE welcome a pamphlet from a Cornish colliery manager, written to favour our Identity, and to show our beloved Sovereign's Jewish origin. Mr. Hopton has done his work well, and deserves our thanks. Doubtless his little work will have a large circulation among the honest Cornish men, many of whom, engaged in the mines there, we know, are deeply interested and well read in our subject. The reason why Mr. Hopton has published is the old one, the opposition of the ministers of religion. Mr. Hopton delivered a lecture in the Primitive Methodist School-room, St. Helen's, in May, 1880, to prove our Identity and the Jewish origin of our Sovereign. A Primitive Methodist minister, the Rev. T. Vaughan, of Earlstown, forthwith attacked the theory from the pulpit as "error." This called up Mr. Hopton, who asked Mr. Vaughan to give his reasons in writing why our Identity should be deemed an error. The answer was the old stereotyped one, which we all have had so often from clergy and ministers alike—namely, 1st., He had no time; and 2nd., he had not the ability to write, or lecture, or prepare an essay on this subject. He reserved, however, to himself the right, it seems, to denounce the belief from the pulpit, as entertained by one of his own congregation, without entering into details, and without giving his reasons. This roused Mr. Hopton (who was, by the way, an author before, having written on "Conversations on Mines"), and the pamphlet before us is his cartel to Mr. Vaughan, showing cause why the Identity is no error, but God's truth. There is much of value in Mr. Hopton's work, and we wish him a large circulation. We trust when he has gathered in a numerous body of Cornish Israelites in St. Helen's and its neighbourhood, he will ask them all to become readers of the BANNER, and thus give even a wider range to what he sees and knows to be God's truth.

The Geography of the Gates. By Philo-Israel. With Map and Illustrations. London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street. Price 3s. 6d.

WE are prohibited by reason of our connection with this journal from publishing in it any original notice by way of review of this work, but we think we are justified in recording facts concerning it. A conductor of a Bible class in a large Midland counties city tells us that he had just presented to seven members of his Bible class a copy each of "The Geography of the Gates," as a reward for steady attendance during fifty Sundays at the Identity class he conducts. "When one remembers," writes our friend, "that these men have been closely confined in manufactories during the week, there must be something in Anglo-Israel Bible lessons to compel even seven men to give up fifty Sunday afternoons to hear it. The books gave evident satisfaction to the winners, who are intelligent working men of this town, getting more interested every week in our Identity. In conclusion, may I be allowed to offer to you my heartfelt thanks for the very many splendid Sunday lessons the BANNER has furnished me with during the past two years, and also the valuable information you have, through its pages, conveyed to my own mind."

We thank our friend for his kind words, and trust other Sunday-school teachers and Bible class conductors may be inclined to follow his example, and by perusal of the BANNER weekly to qualify themselves to instruct others in Identity knowledge.

1. The Distribution of Shem, Ham, and Japheth. Israel an Arian Speaking People. By Major-General A. M. Rainey. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

2. A Summary of Anglo-Israelite Teaching, and the Scripture Proofs on which it Rests. Being a Reply to Opponents. By Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, M.D. London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane. Price 2d.

THE two papers we have described above were read before the Cheltenham Anglo-Israel Association last year. That association certainly, though hardly a year old, has been prolific in Identity literature; and Dr. Grant, the President, has given us all a good example, which the members of his own association have not been slow to follow.

General Rainey's pamphlet is an original carefully-prepared argument designed to prove that the ancestors of the British, being Israel, were cast out into an Asiatic country between Palestine and the Indus into an arable land, where they were called Arians (from ar, a plough), and the country Ariana. Their speech was, therefore, by contact with an Arian people, an Arian language itself, and has come down to our days as one classed in that category.

General Rainey reviews the three great divisions of the human race in their diversities, under the names of the Hamitic, Japhetic, and Semitic nations. These he finds are again distinguished by colour, the black, the yellow, and the white races; also by facial formation, showing again three varieties, the Negro Hamitic black, the Tartar Japhetic yellow man, and the Caucasian Shemitic white. He then asks, Is the Jew like the Negro, or Chinese, or Tartar? The answer being in the negative, the conclusion is the Jew does not belong to the Hamitic or Japhetic races, and must, therefore, belong to the Shemitic stock. If the Jew then the Israelite, too, must be Shemitic, Caucasian, European, white. Bringing phrenology to bear on the inquiry, General Rainey finds that the brain capacity of the Caucasian races is the largest, and that the British race comes nearer to the Jew, whose superiority is allowed, than any other Caucasian people in that respect.

Digitized by Google

Language is found to be another test, and the languages of the earth being divided into Semic, Arian, and Turanian, he quotes from Max Müller, the chief authority, and finds that the Semic tongues are the most insignificant as to numbers and race—namely, Hebrew, Arabic, and Syraic. Forty millions alone of Jews and Arabs represent the Semic languages of the earth, the rest of mankind numbering 960 millions. But God's special blessing promising the multitudinous seed, was conferred on Shem and his offspring through Abraham, and therefore, it is manifest that either Max Müller's theory of language indicating race is wrong, or the science of language itself is not yet perfect. Our author deduces from the premises that there are vastly larger numbers of the Semic races extant, speaking an Arian tongue, than the scientist imagines, and that the British Saxons are they.

This pamphlet is full of thought, and we recommend our readers to procure and peruse it.

In Surgeon-General Grant's larger pamphlet we have the Scriptural argument in favour of our Identity fully and ably stated. The author defends the cause against the attacks of the Rev. Dr. Bonar and the Rev. C. R. N. Lyne, of Cheltenham. Many points are clearly and originally brought out by Dr. Grant which we have not seen noticed so well before. God's call of "Abraham alone" (Isa. li. 2) is shown to have a bearing on the promises to the patriarch and his seed "for ever," proving that a transfer of the blessing to the Gentiles during the present parenthesis, as alleged, is out of the question.

While admitting the existence of the spiritual seed in Christ, our author insists on the literal seed according to the flesh as well, referring to Rom. ix. 3, 4, and xi. 1, as proof that St. Paul, at any rate, acknowledged both, and did not, as is the modern fashion, deny the one but uphold the other. Dr. Grant comments on Israel's Scripturally allotted functions, and to British response thereto, as proofs of our Identity, alluding to our international beneficence, and our witnessing character as evidence of the fact.

The gathering of Israel before, and not after, the Millennium is the subject of some of Dr. Grant's ablest observations. He refers, in establishing the contention, to Zech. xii. 10; Jer. xxxi. 20, 21, iii. 18; Isa. xlix. 5, 6, and lxi. He makes a fine point in this connection from Luke i. 68, 69, and ii. 29—32, showing that the people referred to in these last passages were those to whose fathers God had made covenant promises, that, therefore, they were Israelites, and as John xi. 49—52, says, they were then children of God scattered abroad, they must be Israelites, not Jews, who then were not, at that date, under the penalty of "scattering." They were also, as stated in Luke i., redeemed by the first advent, and their state of separation from God was, therefore, then cured. It does not await the millennial condition after the second advent to bring it about.

Dr. Grant makes wise and pertinent observations on "The Gates," on the birthright, on the earthly supremacy of Joseph, on Israel's chieftainship of nations, on her naval and military might, her geographical North-west island position, on her dwelling alone, her wealth, her mastery over foreign nations, her greatness after her captivity as compared to what it was before, her multitudes, her love of the Sabbath, on philology, as bearing on our origin, on the evidence of history, on physiology, as referring to the case, and many other points.

At page 19 we find Dr. Grant quoting the metrical translation of Psa. lx. to prove that Israel (the British) will eventually hold Constantinople (we hope the Rev. B. W. Savile will attend to the Doctor's arguments here); and we quote his last stanza because it illustrates our view that we have arrived at a stage in the history of the world when Dan. xii. 7 is coming into fulfilment, for God is "scattering our troops" (which is British "power") prior to blessing us exceedingly, giving us the strong city, and thus ending the whole drama of Israel's history, which begun at Gen. xxii. 17, and will end with the last word in the Eastern Question. The lines run thus:—

> "Ee'n Thou, O God, who hast disperst
> Our troops, for we forsook Thee first,
> Those whom Thou didst in wrath forsake,
> Atoned, Thou wilt victorious make."

We like Dr. Grant's pamphlet very exceedingly, and recommend it highly to our readers. We are thankful for the good opinion he expresses of our poor labours in the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and the high encomium he passes on this journal. But surely we may say of him, and say it with truth, that his nervous, able pen has, in the pamphlet before us, rendered our cause most valuable service, and has put our Israelite argument with a force, power, and an ability unsurpassed even by himself, into the narrow limits of a couple of dozen pages.

The House of Joseph in England. By A Watcher. Rivingtons, Waterloo place, London. One Shilling.

OUR friend, "A Watcher," has produced an excellent little pamphlet on the subject of "The House of Joseph in England," with which we have but one fault to find. It is much too short. Our author tells us why he designates Israel by the name of Joseph. He gives us three reasons:—

1. Because Shimei so distinguished the larger House.
2. Because, so named, the folly of amalgamating Judah and Israel cannot be perpetrated, as our clergy now will persist in doing.
3. Because the name proves that the prophecies favouring Joseph and Ephraim cannot be applied to the Church of Christ, since the Lord sprung from Judah, not Joseph.

"A Watcher" makes a capital point when he contrasts the way the Identity is growing with the mode in which Plymouth Brethren, Irvingites, the Salvation Army, and even Moody and Sankey, as well as Ritualists, constantly spread their views. These seek the aid of religious excitement, and of appeals to heated imaginations and sympathies to win the public; whereas the teachers of Anglo-Israelism have fought their way to the forefront simply by argument and calm and quiet reasoning, conducted without public bluster and noise, without trumpet-blowing and excitement, much in the way the Galilean fishermen worked in the early days. The "Watcher's" arguments begin with six questions put by a clergyman of the Church of England, and answered by himself. These are the usual stock questions put by inquirers or opponents, and well the "Watcher" has answered them.

We are glad to see reproduced at page 10 the anecdote told us by the Rev. F. R. A. Glover respecting the Rabbi of the Continent who, when told to express "England" in Hebrew, said he only knew one way to do so, and named Isaiah's designation for Israel's refuge—namely, Ï'ai Ï'yâm, "the isles of the West" (Isa. xxiv. 15).

In the general remarks (page 15) at the end of the "Watcher's" brochure, he has some stinging words for the provoking clergy who will insist on spoiling the simplicity of God's literal Word of truth by their own "ideal and typical" interpretations. These views he finds, most truly, are not for "God's glory," since they upset His plans, throw doubt upon His faithfulness, truth, and honour, and present us with a Bible inconsistent with itself, an easy prey, therefore, in their hands, to the better instructed infidel. The "Watcher" properly insists that God's promises to Abraham and his seed were for ever (Luke i. 55). He alludes to Deut. xxviii., xxix., xxx., as a clear historical résumé of the holy people's destiny, with nothing in it hypothetical, all answering to dry historical facts, embracing the prosperity of the nation under David and Solomon, the wretchedness in the captivity and exile, and the final return to obedience and restoration, therefore, to favour. Judah, it is shown, was more privileged than Joseph's House, and sinned deeper. Judah's punishments were literally fulfilled. The subsequent blessings and return from Babylon were literal facts. The death of Christ and the dispersion of the Jews were literal events, and why should Joseph be cast away for ever, when Paul said to the bare idea, "God forbid!" The "Watcher" says (truly and justly) that the commentators do not join St. Paul and say, "God forbid!" They calmly declare Joseph was annihilated, and what is this "but to make God a liar?" (page 18.).

"A Watcher" now turns to England, and draws her portrait, and shows us it is Joseph's, the Ten-Tribed House. His dwelling-place, his standard, his multitudes, his protection of Gentile races, his skill in archery, his Sabbath observance, his possession of the Gates (Philo-Israel's late volume is here honourably mentioned), his reversionary interest in the promised land under the Anglo-Turkish Convention; all these are noted as features in the likeness. This, says the "Watcher," is evidence you can "see," real evidence of existing facts, and suited to the material earth-born mind.

Our author next shows that Great Britain is not what Mr. M. Baxter says it is—namely, one of the ten toes of Daniel's metallic image, but a Stone Kingdom, an earthly kingdom, like the four preceding ones, not a religion only. "A Watcher," on page 21, asserts what we cannot quite readily accept, that this fifth kingdom "has not yet begun to break in pieces and consume the ten toes." We believe the process of disintegration began at the Battle of Waterloo, perhaps long before.

"A Watcher's" pamphlet ends with six puzzling questions for the clergy of the Church of England, which they ought to be able to answer easily; but to our certain knowledge they cannot, as our author says they confess to him, give any reply to the first; and as to the rest, they allege they have "no time" to think them out. Mother's meetings, tea-meetings, prayer-meetings, Sunday-schools, and a hundred other duties can be brought within the clergyman's day's work, but to discover from God's Word where that nation is gone to redeem whom Christ died, that is a subject for the elucidation of which His under-shepherds, with a smile and a pitying look at the questioner, "cannot find time!" Shall not the Lord God require for this the flock at their hands? (Ezek. xxxiv. 10).

Digitized by Google

Correspondence.

PYRAMID ISRAELITISH-BRITISH WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I should like to call the attention of your readers to a passage referred to in Mr. Cachemaille's paper in your last number (Dec. 22), on "The Great Pyramid and the Eighth Commandment." He refers to Lev. xix. 35—37. This passage is the last of a series of paragraphs, in all twenty-one, containing various prohibitions, and each one ending with "I am the Lord," or "I am the Lord your God;" but the last one ends thus, "I am the Lord your God, which brought you out of the land of Egypt." Now why is the land of Egypt thus mentioned in special connection with weights and measures? Does it not imply very clearly a reference to the Great Pyramid, wherein would be found God's standard of the weights and measures that were to be binding on Israel, and which were to be to them for all time the actual measurement of that which God calls "just balances" and "just weight."—Yours faithfully,

HEYWOOD SMITH.

THINGS OLD AND NEW.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—You are a prominent man in the search after truth, I was going to say in the exemplification or kingdom of truth; for king means (Heb.) exemplar; in this sense we are all to be kings, kings amongst men, pattern men. How does this bear in reference to the inscription on the cross? But first take Matt. xxvii. 11: Pilate said, "Thou art the King of the Jews?" Jesus replied, "Thou sayst it," or "Thou sayst so." He did not then claim it for Himself; the cross first, before the crown. He is yet to come as King, when all nations shall do Him reverence.

Now for the inscription. 1. Jesus, we all know, means Saviour. 2. Nazareth? why, it means pre-ordained; 3. King means exemplar, or pattern; and 4. Jews means re-engagers, because they will look on Him whom they pierced, and will mourn as one who mourneth for his mother. The whole inscription therefore is, "The pre-ordained Saviour, the Exemplar of the re-engagers." His very persecution and death were indications of what happened forthwith and all along these 1880 years of what should overtake the Jews. Josephus and their whole history tells the same story, and what of Russia, Bulgaria, Germany, now? But by-and-bye Messiah will indeed reign in Jerusalem, over all the earth, "All kings doing Him reverence." My object in writing you is especially to bring out this idea, this future fact; and in confirmation of it let me present you with an extract from a book printed in 1669 A.D., written by an enlightened woman, Jane Lead, and you will see what it says of the Lost Tribes:—

"There is a fourth sort that do suddenly expect the personal glorious reign of Christ, before He has accomplished His preparatory reign in spirit. These raise a mighty cry in the world, but are too hasty to fetch down Christ before He has a Church and bride prepared for Him. Such as stand gazing here must frequently be frustrated of their expectations. Another sign will be, that by and through the opening of the living testimony, which proclaims the approach of Christ's kingdom; and which shall be guarded and fenced with such power and authority from the Holy Spirit, as shall convince and invite the monarchs and nobles of the earth to hearken thereto, and look into the deep mysteries relating to it, and preparing for it; by whose countenancing and improving of all their power to promote this super-eminent kingdom they will be great presidents and leaders to their subjects. Hereby also there will be mighty stirring for the bringing in of the scattered Tribes of Israel, that will begin to come in at the hearing of this joyful sound to give a resurrection out of their deadness in unbelief, which will be marvellous and wonderful."

This appears to confirm the text, "He will (first) gather the wheat into His garner," &c. John prepared the way for His coming in the flesh; but by-and-bye we shall have the Spirit poured out and running over. "Your sons and your daughters shall prophesy: your old men shall dream dreams, and your young men shall see visions." Nay, it is to be upon "all flesh." We shall get the downpour by-and-bye; in the meantime you are assisting to sustain our hopes, not only that our personal redemption draweth nigh, but that of the entire universe; no more sin, no more death. We talk much of longevity now-a-days, but we shall even shame the ancients. When Messiah (which means "assumer"), the assumer of our humanity, comes again in our glorified nature we shall die no more; in a moment we shall be changed into it, and "because Messiah lives we shall live also." J. S. C.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I enclose five shillings' worth of stamps as a thank-offering to the Lord for all His loving-kindness to us His children. Will you kindly use them for the spread of our cause? May the Lord hasten the time of His coming. It is but a trifle I can send, but—

"Every little mite,
Every little measure,
Helps to spread the light,
Helps to fill the treasure."

I am, dear sir, M. T.

West-street, Bromley, Kent, Dec. 30, 1880.

[NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—We shall be happy to hand over this sum to an Israelite who has done much for our cause, and will use it to God's glory.]

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

"Look up to Jesus,
Whilst you watch with care:
He feeds God's altar best
Whose fuel is prayer."

THE number of members is now 608, 34 having been enrolled since our last report.

Mr. F. A. R. Winter, of George Town, British Guiana, whose name is not unknown to readers of the BANNER, writes for four cards of membership, and Monthly Comments for use and distribution. He says: "I am glad to see the members of the Union have increased so much, and hope in the coming year, instead of hundreds, we may be able to count thousands as having joined in this most useful movement." Mr. Winter had recently met with a clergyman believing in our Identity with Israel, and was able to supply him with some of our literature.

One suggests, "That all Israelites who are not members of the Union, or who may not care to become members, should send their names and addresses to us, per post card, and that a separate roll should be kept for all such." Our correspondent adds: "Not so very long ago the wonder was to meet with anyone in these parts (Perth) who knew anything of the subject dear to us; now the reverse is the case. I am convinced it only wants some great event to raise a new (?) nation in a moment, as the dry bones in the valley."

The Comments for February, on Ecclesiastes, The Song of Solomon, and Isaiah i. to ix. are, we think, especially good. We hope our members will bring them to the notice of friends who are studying the subject. Many such, we are glad to know, have already found them helpful, and they are still more likely to prove valuable as we read day by day the prophetical books.

The Comments are now printed early enough to send to Australia and New Zealand. In consequence of this the number of members will in future be omitted in the Comments.

Some of last year's numbers have been distributed, with other Identity literature, among our sailors through St. Andrew's Waterside Mission, Gravesend. We still have some to spare, and shall be glad if anyone having opportunities of circulating them will apply to us, stating the number required.

The card of membership will be sent on receipt of three stamps. The Comments will be sent post free monthly, for 1s. per annum; 2 copies, 1s. 6d.; 3 copies, 2s. Address, Miss Lawrence, Stoneleigh, New Wimbledon, Surrey.

FREE DISTRIBUTION OF LITERATURE.—Since August last we have received from many of our members extra stamps towards the expenses of the Union, besides four donations of 10s. each. Such, indeed, is the interest manifested in the progress of our Prayer Union, that we now have in hand sufficient to pay expenses up to the end of July. We, therefore, propose at once to devote £1 to the purchase of literature for free distribution, and hope our friends will enable us to repeat this as often as possible. Applications for grants of this literature may be made to us, stating the quantity required, and the proposed channel of distribution.

J. LAWRENCE
(Hon. Sec. I. S. and P. U.)

January 18, 1881.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	13	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.
Mrs. Geo. W. Cotten, per Philo-Israel... £1 0 0

THE GREAT PYRAMID
MR. W. ROWBOTTOM
will be pleased to hear from Secretaries of Anglo-Israel Associations, and others, desirous of arranging for Lectures during the next three months. Expenses only. Address: Journal Office, Alfreton.

THE REV. J. BILLINGTON, F.R.H.S., will feel obliged if all communications respecting Identity Lectures, Subjects, Terms, &c., be addressed to him, care of Mr. Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Just published, Crown Octavo, cloth bound, gilt letters, 296 pages.
THE SEED OF ISAAC,
BEING AN
HISTORICAL REVIEW OF GOD'S DEALINGS
WITH
HIS CHOSEN PEOPLE ISRAEL.
BY J. D. GRANGER.
Post free, 4s., from THE AUTHOR, 84, Exeter-street, Plymouth, and ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published, price 1s., post free 1s. 1d.
THE GREAT PYRAMID, IN, BUT NOT OF, EGYPT:
ITS CLAIMS TO BE FOR A SIGN AND FOR A WITNESS UNTO THE LORD OF HOSTS IN THE LAND OF EGYPT,
As announced in the Scriptures of His Holy Prophet Isaiah, B.C. 714.
BY H. W. BADGER,
Private in H. M. 40th Regiment, now serving in India.
INTRODUCED BY MRS. PIAZZI SMYTH,
London:
ROBERT BANKS, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.

FEBRUARY NUMBER NOW READY.
Price 2d.; Annual Subscription, 2s. 6d.
ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.
Editor: Douglas A. Onslow, J.P.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet street.

THE FEBRUARY MONTHLY PART OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. May be had, by ordering, of any bookseller, or newsagent. Price 7d.
London: W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, E.C.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW.
WEDNESDAY, FEB. 2, 1881. All Rights Reserved.

Just published. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.
IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA THE ROYAL SEED TO KING DAVID'S THRONE, AND ARE NOT HER SUBJECTS, THE BRITISH PEOPLE, THE TEN LOST TRIBES?
BY WILLIAM HOPTON, of Sutton Heath.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 4d., by post 4½d. Special terms for a quantity.
THE ISRAEL OF GOD.
A SERVICE OF SONG
Upon the Career and Destiny of God's Ancient People Israel. WORDS AND MUSIC.
BY C. W. E.
Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

WORKS BY PHILO-ISRAEL.
THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.
BY PHILO-ISRAEL.
In handsome cloth, gilt, with Coloured Map, and several Illustrations, price 3s. 6d., by post 3s. 10d.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

PHILO-ISRAEL'S BOOK FOR CHILDREN.
THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth, gilt, 1s. Post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Third Edition.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST OR SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS AND TEACHINGS OF THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams. Price 4d., post free 5d.

A RESUME OF THE SCRIPTURAL ARGUMENT, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? An Inquiry establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 4d.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters."

Price 2d., post free 3d.
THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.
London: Robert Banks Racquet-court Fleet-street.

Second Edition now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.
AMMI; or, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE
BY MISS BIRD.
Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham the "friend of God," and showing that true science history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

Price 2d., post free 2½d.
MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES.
An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

Price 8s., post free 8s. 8d., bound in blue cloth, gilt, side and back.
THE FOURTH VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.
CONTAINING 520 QUARTO PAGES.
Post Office Orders to be made payable to Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or, W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

THE CHEAPEST IDENTITY VOLUME EVER PUBLISHED.
384 Demy 8vo pages, in handsome cloth, gilt, price 3s. 6d., by post 4s.
THE FIRST VOLUME OF ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.
Edited by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.
This Volume contains Papers on all Points of the Identity of the British People with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel.
London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 2s. 6d., post free 2s. 9d. Bound in handsome cloth, gilt, bevelled boards, gilt edges, and beautifully printed on toned paper.
THE SISTERS OF HARROWDALE RECTORY. By
MRS. M. A. SEARSON,
ILLUSTRATED WITH
A BEAUTIFUL DOUBLE-PAGE FRONTISPIECE.
"In this work, the leading arguments used in support of our Identity are woven into a pleasing story, which is both interesting and instructive. The description of the Rectory is a beautiful picture of the quiet sanctity and repose of an English Christian household, situated amid that charming pastoral scenery, which has its grandest development in the Southern and midland counties of England. It will prove entertaining to young and old, and should have a wide circulation."—The Heir of the World

THE DISTRIBUTION OF SHEM, HAM, AND JAPHETH.
ISRAEL AN ARIAN SPEAKING PEOPLE.
A Paper read before the Cheltenham Anglo-Israel Association.
BY MAJOR-GENERAL A. M. RAINEY.
This Pamphlet is strongly recommended to Identity Associations and Distributors of Anglo-Israel literature. Being a complete answer to many of our objectors.
Price 2d., or 10s. per 100 for distribution.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.
THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.
By Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D.
With a Portrait of the Author.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet court, Fleet-street, E.C.

ROBERT BANKS'S CATALOGUE on the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Lost Ten Tribes will be sent, post free, on application. Address, Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

This day. Price 1s., post free 1s. 1d.
SYMBOLICAL TREE OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE.
By HARRY W. FARNALL, of New Zealand.

"The chart is in the form of an ancient oak-tree, on the stem of which are the words Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and further up the trunk the Twelve Tribes, with their presumed modern national descendants. The Jews are shown us, diverging from the Ten Tribes, on the two lower branches, leading to Palestine and Cyprus, but intermingling with other boughs of the tree. The kingdom of Israel passes further up the trunk to the British Isles, and thence spreads out to all the British dominions, which are represented on separate branches and boughs. Suitable quotations from Scripture upon which the Anglo-Israel theory is based are marked on separate parts of the Chart."—Evening Star (Auckland).

The Editor of The Banner of Israel says:—
"We have had our copy carefully mounted and framed. The framed picture is now exposed in one of the busiest thoroughfares of Bristol in the window of the artist who framed it, and great is the wondering notice it receives from the passers by. We hope our friends will get copies for themselves, and let the public obtain a view of it in the way we indicate, if even only for a few days. Identity knowledge is thus taken in by the eye, and produces there a great impression. We trust that throughout England, too, this chart will be valued by Israelites, and help them to teach others that 'Lost Israel is found' in the mighty British Empire of to-day."

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET;

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,
High-Class Tailor,
47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.
MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. NO. 215. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1881. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Cyprus	61
The Onus Probandi	62
Progress at Home	63
Whom Did the Man Represent. By L. P.	63
The Exclusive Promise of the Holy Spirit to Israel is Nationally Perpetual	64
Anglo-Israel Lectures at Bathurst, New South Wales	65
Extract from "Lord Beaconsfield: A Study." By Georg Brandes	66
The Approaching Attack in Parliament on Our Hereditary and National Weights and Measures. Forwarded by C. Piazzi Smyth	66
A Frenchman's Testimony to Israel's Greatness	66
Review	67
Correspondence	67
Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union	67

CYPRUS.

IT is always a good thing when we hear nothing of an outlying portion of Israel's Empire beyond sea. When such has no history, we know things are going well there. It is only when mischief or troubles are brewing that the name of the spot comes constantly before us as contemporary history. Of Cyprus one has heard little or nothing lately, and we judge it to be a good sign. Cyprus must be prospering. This is the opinion of Sir M. Biddulph, whose report on the island has just appeared. Commenting on the facts, the Standard, in its issue of January 15, 1881, made the following remarks:—

But there is a political, as well as an economical side to the value of Cyprus; and every day that passes serves to show more and more clearly that if England remains alive to its own interests, the island may serve as a valuable link in the long CHAIN of Empire with which we have GIRT THE WORLD. The Mediterranean must always remain of the first importance in a naval as well as a commercial sense, and the jealousy which two of the Great Powers are at present exhibiting concerning the exercise of mere influence in Tunis shows that the littoral of this inland lake has lost none of its value. Moreover, the Eastern Question, as the French Minister of Foreign Affairs has recently reminded us in such grave language, has not yet had pronounced upon it the final word. Greece is in arms ready for attack; Turkey is in arms preparing for defence. Europe beholds this menacing spectacle with uneasiness and displeasure; but it does not at present seem able to remove it. At any moment disordered ambition may make the Eastern shores of the Mediterranean the arena of conflict and bloodshed, and should there be a general war England cannot be too near the amphitheatre of strife. We may form what virtuous resolutions we will, but it is certain that this country will not be able to avert its attention from the East of Europe, should Crescent and Cross again flame against each other in sanguinary rivalry. The interest of Austria in the Eastern Question is well-known, and Prince Bismarck has recently discarded all affectation of indifference, and has a fulcrum for his long policy, both at Constantinople and at Athens. It is still as true as when Lord Derby made the observation, that the last word of the Eastern Question is, Who shall have Constantinople? Moreover, the future of Asia Minor is still shrouded in dangerous darkness. For these reasons the proximity to the seat of struggle given us by the possession of Cyprus is invaluable. At present it is an island of peace, and we hope it may long remain so. But should the hope be disappointed, it is eminently fitted to be, as Lord Beaconsfield more than two years ago described it, a place of arms of immense importance to this country.

There are several points in this extract which will prove interesting to Israelites, as confirming the views they tenaciously hold. The Standard admits that Cyprus is one of the Gates—"a valuable link in the long chain of Empire with which we have girt the world." It is the Empire of the world, then, we hold! and we have "girt" the world with our links. These are Israel's characteristics, as Deut. xxxii. 8, and Dan. vii. 27 tell us. And what are these empire-giving links? They are obviously "the Gates" (Gen. xxii. 17), another possession promised to Israel, and yet the distinguishing mark of the British race to-day. The editor speaks, too, of Constantinople. The Rev. B. W. Savile had better have a word to say to him, counselling caution. "Who shall have that great Gate?" somehow is "mixed" in the Standard's view with our possession of Cyprus! and we are congratulated on having acquired the island, as it brings us so near the arena of the coming strife, which will gather round "the last word in the Eastern Question." To us, who see the bearing of the whole thing on our Identity, these words are not puzzling; but to the Rev. Mr. Savile, we suppose they indicate something too terrible and ridiculous for contemplation, as his late pamphlet showed. The Standard had therefore better be wise.

St. James's Chronicle, however, of the same date, quotes the Standard's words with admiration and adhesion, and Liberal minds too can see, as well as the rest, that Cyprus is "a strong place of arms" of vast importance to this country in the coming times of trouble concerning the great Eastern Question. Also that when Israel has to say "the final word," and take Constantinople to herself, in fulfilment of God's promises to Abraham concerning "the Gate of his seed's enemies," Cyprus will operate as a great help towards that consummation, which we believe was the heart and kernel of the covenants of God with the seed of Abraham, His friend for ever!

To show how men's minds are advancing on the lines which have for their terminus the settlement of the Eastern Question, we have before us a letter from a friend to our cause, now in the Holy Land, who, speaking of that country, which should be a fruitful field, as a veritable desert, and the gold and silver mines as "the haunt only of the jackals and bats," declares his anticipation that "the whole country from the Euphrates to Aden might well be accepted by Israel as a discharge for the Turkish loans, and the Duke of Connaught appointed by the British Crown as Regent in perpetuity." "At present," he adds, "an Englishman can act as he likes here, and so great is the power of our consulate, that no one dares to interfere with our rights, assumed or otherwise."

Digitized by Google

We ask our readers, if these being the anticipations of a person on the spot, and "the last word in the Eastern Question" being one which must soon be proposed and answered, whether they fail to see the good hand of our God upon us in giving us now, through the instrumentality of Lord Beaconsfield, the gift of an island admirably situated to operate as "the Gate," naval and military, of the whole sea-board of Syria and Palestine—a Gate sure to dominate as such throughout the Levant, and to raise the power and prestige of Israel all over the Bible lands, so soon destined to be ours, in junction with Manasseh and Judah, our twin sisters in the glorious restoration. "Marvellous, indeed, is it," says a friend, "and deeply interesting to anticipate the peculiar manner in which the Lord Jehovah is Himself preparing to solve the Eastern Question;" and in that solution, we may be sure, a potent part will be played by the last new factor in the matter, the Mediterranean British "Gate," even Israel's latest acquisition, the now very prosperous island of the Levant, Cyprus.

THE ONUS PROBANDI.

MANY have been the failures of justice which have occurred from inability of judicial officers to apply the rules bearing on the question, "On which side rests the burden of proof?" The onus probandi remains in any contested question on that side which (no evidence being produced on the other), would fail, if proof were withheld by it. The party on whom the burden rests has thus the "labouring oar." In reference to our Identity, the facts undisputed are these:—Ten-Tribed Israel was cast out of their land 26 centuries ago, and has for 1,400 years disappeared from human history. She has to be found in these latter days, and her habitat is marked out in prophecy as the isles of the West. We allege that the British people are they. Our opponents deny this plea, but offer no evidence to refute the statement; and on us therefore rests the burden of proof to show that the British answer to the signs, tokens, marks, and identifications described in the Bible as the attributes and possessions of lost Israel in the latter days. This evidence has been produced in abundance on our side, and our opponents, if they desire to break down our case, must show either that the identifications do not fit the British nation, or that there is some other race extant which answers perfectly to the descriptions, while ours does not. This, however, is just what our adversaries never attempt. They admit just sufficient to throw on themselves henceforth the shifted burden of proof, and while our contention that the British answer in all particulars to the portrait of Israel drawn in God's Word, remains unchallenged, they fail to show cause why the claim should not be allowed, and make no attempt to set up a rival claimant for the honour of representing the expected "remnant of Israel." The argument of the Rev. B. W. Savile, in his late pamphlet, is a case in point which illustrates what we are endeavouring to set out. He admits our contention that the two chief ingredients of the modern British nation (the Cymry and the Sacæ) are derived from the same original Asiatic stock. He admits, further, that the Cymry of Wales are the same people as the Cimbri of the Romans, as the Cimmerii of the Greeks, and as the Cimmerians, Gomerim or Gimiri, of whom Tuespa was a chief among the Cymry of Mesopotamia in Central Asia in the seventh century B.C. (BANNER vol. ii., p. 234, No. 81). He also admits now and in the same letter (p. 234) that at that same epoch, in the same spot, there were located with the above, a people assumed by Professor Rawlinson to be of quite another race; that these were called by the name of Beth Khumri (or the Ten-Tribed House of Israel), to whom great promises of becoming a multitudinous people were given by God Almighty Himself. Mr. Savile allows besides that the race we represent now in Great Britain is possessed of all the chief promises and covenants God gave to the Beth Khumri, and finally, on Mr. Savile's own showing, it cannot be distinctly and clearly proved that the said Beth Khumri and the Cimmerians, of whom Tuespa was the chief, were 26 centuries ago two distinct and racially diverse people.

On whom now rests the burden of proof? On the Anglo-Israelites, who, relying on the presumption of identity of race, produce no direct evidence to show that the Cimmerians and the Beth Khumri were one and the same race in 740 B.C., or on Mr. Savile, who, in the face of his admissions and assertions in regard to the point he raises, fails to offer rebutting evidence, and advances also no proof? Surely he works the labouring oar? and because he fails to substantiate his plea of original racial diversity, which he now raises—(namely, that Tuespa's Cimmerians and the Beth Khumri were as different in origin as Japhetic and Semitic people can be), his contention must fail, his arguments must be put aside, and the presumption in favour of ours regarding our Identity must prevail. Why cannot Mr. Savile see that, admitting what he does, and averring what he now newly puts in plea, on him rests henceforth the burden of proof to show that Tuespa's Gimiri and the Beth Khumri Israelites were not one and the same, but two different races of the same name, but of diverse origins; the one the promisees of splendid Divine benedictions, the other the ancestors of a people who are the present actual enjoyers of those very same blessings; and yet that the two came of absolutely different stocks, as opposed as Japhetic Gentiles can be from Semitic Israelites? The onus probandi then rests on Mr. Savile of maintaining a proposition, which from the nature of things is (with reference to his own admissions and God's character) incapable of proof. As he does not attempt it we may deem him a defeated opponent, one who has not, and never had, a chance of success. Also in respect to the task he set himself to perform when he sat down to write his last pamphlet, we may pronounce that he has disastrously failed. And why? Because the allegation which he was bound to prove in order to succeed —namely, that the Cimmerians and Israelites of Mesopotamia were not (as we allege) one, but, as he avers, two distinct races, he has failed to establish, and on him, pro hac vice, rested "the burden of proof." In short, the "presumption" in our favour prevails, and the Identity is established. To illustrate the matter on hand, we narrate to our readers an anecdote which is true, and in which we personally were dramatis persona.

About five years ago we had occasion to call on a divine whose reputation is favourably known in evangelical circles, whose eloquence, forensic power, critical talent, and ability as a preacher, are admitted on all sides. We thought it a good opportunity to elicit such a man's opinion as to the evidence in support of our Identity (we knew he was favourable to our Great Pyramid belief). "Mr. ———," said we, "what is your opinion on the subject we call 'the Identity of the British with the Lost Ten Tribes?'" He answered us thus. Placing a newspaper flat down on the hearthrug before him, "This," said he, "shall represent Media and Assyria. Now I believe this. The Ten Tribes went in at this corner as captives, and we modern British trace our ancestry back, back, back from England till we come to this (opposite) corner of the Assyrian land. This is what I hold on this matter." Our reply to our rev. friend was this, "that he went indeed a long way with us." If he now holds, as we believe he does, that the British people possess to-day all Israel's promised blessings (a fact Mr. Savile cannot deny), then we know that on the reverend exponent of his belief, there rests by every rule of evidence "the burden of proof" (if he avers it) that "the ancestors of the British, being the Khumri, were not Israelites."

Digitized by Google

PROGRESS AT HOME.

THE instruction of the British nation by lectures, by letters, and notices in the public press, by meetings, public and private, by private and semi-public effort, is certainly going on apace. We receive letters, newspapers, pamphlets, and books on the subject almost by every one of our daily four postal deliveries, and sometimes the mere labour of digesting the vast mass of literature thrown into our hands, all pointing in the direction of Identity progress, is almost more than we can manage, with reference to daily editorial duties in connection with the BANNER.

We have just now before us Col. Bentinck's lecture at St. George's-road, we suppose in Wimbledon, published in the Surrey Comet, of December 11; a letter from an Anglo-Israelite, of Winchester, in the Observer, of December 4; Mr. P. Miller's (the blind Israelite's) successful lecture on the Great Pyramid, in Hull, on November 26; one on Cui Bono? by Mr. T. B. Barner, of the same place; the Rev. C. W. Hickson's elementary lecture in Clifton, on December 17; and various publications and newspapers, some for, others against, our glorious subject.

We give an extract from Col. Bentinck's lecture, and the best and most telling portions of our Winchester friend's reply to the Rev. John Wilkinson's stereotyped lecture against our views; regarding, 1st. "Where the Ten Tribes are not;" and 2nd. "Where they are;" Col. Bentinck said:—

Isaiah lx. commenced, "Arise, shine, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee; for behold the darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness the people." Such was the case now. If they went abroad and saw the national Churches there, which shone bright in the Reformation, and which stirred us up in these islands, what was their condition now? Infidelity was openly preached, the divinity of Christ denied, and very often the very existence of God also. Darkness did cover the earth. There was no true light in any of the Gentile Churches. In England alone was this light burning brightly. Then again, it was prophesied in the same chapter, "The nations that will not serve thee shall perish" (verse 12) and be "utterly wasted." Such could not but apply to England. The aborigines refused to serve us, and were dying out. The Maories did the same, and were almost extinct, although in both cases we had kindly cared for them, and had tried to act towards them in loco parentis. But, on the contrary, where a people did serve us, they increased. Go to India, and look at the Hindoos engaged as troops, judges, and schoolmasters, and in every capacity. They multiply, and must continue to do so. After giving many other proofs of our Identity with Lost Israel, the lecturer, in conclusion, said many people argued that England could not be Israel, because the physiognomy of the people had no resemblance to that of the Jew. There were many reasons why this should not be so, and one especially was that the Ten Tribes were absent at the crucifixion of Christ, whilst the Jews cried out, "His blood be on us and on our children." Certain it was that the Jews had a mark, and equally sure was it that Israel did not have the same difference of feature as the Jew had.

In reference to the Rev. J. Wilkinson's two points, the answer our Winchester champion gave was this,—

The lecturer answered his first question by stating, "The people should dwell alone and not be reckoned among the nations," and added that was true of the Jews, but not true of the Anglo-Saxons. On this first point I must differ with the lecturer, and say most emphatically that we British people do dwell alone, and that the Jews are still a dispersed race all over the globe, but soon, destined by God's good will, to be re-united with the Ten Tribes, and be taken by them safely to the land promised by the Almighty to our forefather Abraham. The second point, as to who are the Israelites? the lecturer gave it as his opinion that they were the Nestorians in the mountains of Kurdistan, and by the lake of Ooramia in Persia. When the Lost Ten Tribes are found (and I maintain they are already found in the British people and the Americans) they must comply with the following words of God:—They must have immense colonies (Isa. xlix. 8, liv. 3). The aborigines of their colonies must be dying out (Jer. xxx. 11). They must be the most wealthy nation (Deut. viii. 18). They must lend to other nations, but never need to borrow from them (Deut. xv. 6). They must be a missionary people (Isa. xxvii. 6), &c. Can the Nestorians or any other nation on the face of the earth comply with all the above save the British?

It is manifest to us, as well as to all who communicate with us, that the interest in our Identity is spreading immensely. In all directions, at home and abroad, men are actively pursuing and disseminating the knowledge; the clergy and the savants only oppose it, the latter languidly, the former with great warmth and animosity. We are glad to know that the opposition of such men as Dr. Bonar, the Rev. B. W. Savile, the Rev. John Wilkinson (the latter always our consistent opponent from the first), and others, is only giving wings to the subject, and spreading the good news far and wide, even to the world's end. Our clergy and opponents thought the idea would soon die out as a curious and vain speculation, a craze and silly conceit of a few "hare-brained" weak-kneed ones; but on the contrary, the belief gains ground more and more every day, till at last the secular press is forced to notice the strange doctrine to ridicule and denounce, but never refute it. When the clergy strike at it to destroy it, the effort ends in lamentable fiasco, like that of the Rev. Dr. Bonar and Mr. Savile. The blow recoils upon the assailant, for ours is God's truth, and theirs but man's weak attempt to put down what He resolves to carry out.

We praise God for the progress we observe, and urge our readers never to relax their efforts, but to continue to make these "good tidings" known far and wide, till all men shall discern that the "lost son," Ephraim, "is found," "the dead is alive again" (Hosea vi. 1, 2; Luke xv. 32).

WHOM DID THE MAN REPRESENT?

BY L. P.

THE parable which we find in the beginning of Matt. xxii. terminates with an incident which, we confess, has always been to us a matter of perplexity and mystery. When we believed the whole image presented by our Lord of the marriage feast to be a simple reference to the spiritual condition of all men, the episode of the "man not having on a wedding garment," and therefore being cast out into darkness was to us incomprehensible, though we accepted the general view of his being one who had not clothed himself in the righteousness of Christ, and was, therefore, unfit to be His guest.

But, then, how had he been admitted to a place at the festal scene? And, having been so admitted, why was he apparently worse treated than those who had been fully invited in the first instance; and had despised the privilege of attending the feast, preferring other lesser and altogether inglorious pleasures. We believe that if a sinner has but faith enough to touch trustingly the hem of our Lord Jesus' garment, it is sufficient to make him acceptable, through the blood and mediation of that same Lord. That blessed Saviour has said that He will cast out none that come unto Him, all such being drawn of the Father (John vi. 37, 44). Now, surely if the man in unsuitable garb came to the feast, he was shewing faith in the great king's hospitality and offer of grace and favour, and proving his expectant belief in the marriage of the Son, which was the event to be celebrated. Yet, when the king came in, the man was speechless, unable to plead any excuse for his conduct, and therefore was thrust out to woe and weeping. He had been called, but was not chosen; and yet he came with those who had been gathered in, and were feasted and honoured.

We now believe we have, in the past, misunderstood the whole narrative. The kingdom of heaven—that is, God's people Israel, received, in the person of the Jews, the first invitation to the wedding-feast. They scorned the message, and they do so still. They were—and they are—busy with their merchandise, their possessions, their home joys, and did not, and do not heed the voice of God's servants, bidding them come to the marriage. When they had maltreated the heralds of mercy, they were sorely punished; but the wandering sheep, the Tribes of Lost Israel, who were dispersed throughout the earth, were gathered in, the good and the bad, and made welcome at the board where the feast awaited them, filling up the empty places of those who had declined to come.

Digitized by Google

We do not speak now of the outsiders, the true Gentiles. We do not imagine that reference in this parable is made to the saved out of every nation of the earth, who, we know, are received unto life everlasting as fully and graciously, when accepting the terms offered them, as those who can call Abraham their forefather. But we would suggest—for we make no assertion, and we would fain write in a very humble spirit of our conjectural explanation—that the Master was speaking of the kingdom of heaven in the same sense as in Matt. xiii. 5, 24, 31, 33, and as representing only Israel, the elect, the redeemed nation, and not of those who are gathered in from amongst, doubtless, every nation of the world.

Amongst the favoured guests, of course, in accordance with Exod. xii. 49, Num. ix. 14, Isa. lvi. 7, 8, we may suppose are reckoned all those who, originally strangers, have become incorporated with Israel, forming an integral part of the nation, worshipping its God, sharing its privileges, honouring its laws, and favouring its interests.

Then, who can be the man without the wedding garment? on whom, though numbered amongst the guests, fell the wrathful eye of the King. Who, but the Canaanite, the alien people in our sister island, who oppose their rulers, have been ever rebellious against Israel's laws and government, return hatred for kindness, and scorn for forbearance, but who, being our fellow-subjects in the islands of the West, the land given to us for ever (2 Sam. vii. 10), rank in the eyes of the world as if they were Israel, no longer "strangers," but one with the chosen people. As such they come to the feast, and, under the garb of Israelites, they share Ephraim's blessings, and privileges, and are reckoned with him, and "not amongst the nations."

But they sit down at the table under a false pretence: they are idolatrous people, scorning the faith of, and hating the reformed Church of the other guests; and so we foresee they must be cast out from the presence of the King, and not share in the joy and coming glory of the Christian Israelites when the Bridegroom is at hand, and about to appear at the feast.

If it is said we are wanting in charity towards our neighbour, in our interpretation of the parable, we would ask if it is not true that while for centuries subject to us, the Irish are yet undeniably an alien people; and if so, we deem we may be excused for considering that, having refused to be one with us, they have no right to claim to stand on the same platform as Ephraim and Manasseh. In justification of our opinion, we quote the following from the St. James's Gazette of Jan. 10:—

> Ireland, again, has prostrated herself for centuries at the feet of the Roman Catholic Church, and owes to her religious training a distaste which has now almost become an incapacity for intellectual and political freedom. And, doubtless, to the same influence she owes those social habits which are always bringing up the numbers of her population to the point at which subsistence is on the verge of failing it. We do not count ourselves among those who use the easy key of race-theory to open every enigma of national character; but to some cause or other, which is certainly not the authority of Great Britain, the Irish are indebted for a quarrelsomeness of temper and heat of blood which are not to be matched in any other European community.

We believe it is thought that when the blessing of the new covenant is bestowed (Heb. viii. 10, 11), the Spirit will flood these foes of our own household, and cause them to be in reality and heart a part of ourselves, when the King cometh. But what right have we to expect that the promised glorious baptism of the Holy Ghost will include those who would rob us of our rights, who defy our laws, would desire to bring us to the shrine of false gods, enslave us to a foreign spiritual potentate, and doom us to perdition, if they cannot free themselves from our power, or bend us to their idolatrous worship.

Hereafter, they will doubtless come to Jerusalem to worship the Lord of hosts (Isa. lxvi. 23; Zech. xiv. 16) with the other peoples of the earth; but we do not at present see that we have any cause to expect a spiritual blessing will be poured down on those who are rebelling against the laws of those whom God has set over them.

If we seem to any to make too much of the enmity against Israel, we would reply that, in Moses' days, Israel was not particularly faithful, humble, obedient, or praiseworthy in conduct; and yet what did the Spirit of God dictate to Balaam, the unwilling prophesier of good to the then wandering Tribes? "Blessed is he that blesseth thee, and cursed is he that curseth thee" (Num. xxiv. 9).

January 13, 1881.

THE EXCLUSIVE PROMISE OF THE HOLY SPIRIT TO ISRAEL IS NATIONALLY PERPETUAL.

Another Answer to Cui Bono?

We are accustomed to rely upon the many gifts of the Lord to Israel as proofs of our Identity, because we possess the same. Thus, God promised His people national blessings of a special character—a multitudinous seed, the Gate of their enemies, the Gospel propagating function, wealth unbounded, the supremacy of the sea, a vast colonial and a mighty heathen Empire, a love of the Sabbath-day, and of the ten laws of God, and very specially a desire for the baptism of God's Holy Spirit.

Each and every one of these unique marks, tokens and identifications the British races possess, but the Gentile nations in comparison may be truly said to have not a single one. We argue, consequently, that we are the remnant of Ten-Tribed Lost Israel, and the Gentile Continental, African, Asiatic, and South American nations are not they. We desire now to put before our readers some considerations suggested to us in a measure by our fellow-helper Commander G. Roberts, R.N., having reference to the promised constant presence of God's Spirit with His people, guaranteed to the children of Israel only, but never to any other, and therefore Gentile, races whatsoever. The blessings given to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, which are the subject of Gen. xii. 2, 3; xiii. 14—17; xviii. 18; xxii. 17, 18; xxviii. 13, 14, and especially 15, plainly include the provision that God in some way would perpetually follow the seed of the patriarch with His presence and blessing; "for I will not leave thee," He said to Jacob (xxviii. 15), "until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of;" and up to this hour He has not done it. Therefore He is here. The promise that God "would never forsake His people," is the burden of Deut. xxxi. 6, 8; Josh. i. 5; 1 Kings viii. 57; Heb. xiii. 5, and it found full expression in the fact that the Lord Jesus Christ "took hold" of the seed of Abraham, but not of the nature of angels when He came into the world to die for sinners (Heb. ii. 16).

When in the wilderness the Lord dwelt personally with Israel. "Let them make Me" (He said) "a sanctuary, that I may dwell among them" (Exod. xxv. 8). But in Exod. xxix. 45, 46, we find the promise of God's tabernacling with Israel clearly and unconditionally set forth: "I will dwell among the children of Israel, and will be their God, and they shall know that I am the Lord their God, that brought them forth out of the land of Egypt that I may dwell among them. I am the Lord their God." In Numbers xi. 17, 25, we have an instance in the wilderness of the Holy Spirit of God dwelling in and on some of the children of Israel. The Spirit which abode on Moses was found also to rest on the seventy elders of Israel.

Solomon, in his prayer at the dedication of the temple, begged that the Lord would be with Israel as He was with their

Digitized by Google

Fathers: "Let Him not leave us nor forsake us" (1 Kings viii. 57). This prayer, as a whole, and therefore this particular petition (as part of it) was heard, accepted, and granted by God Almighty, and, therefore, He has never left us since, but is with British-Israel now (1 Kings ix. 3). The prophet Nehemiah (ix. 20) testified that God had even under the greatest provocation in the wilderness never forsaken His people. "Thou gavest them," he adds, "Thy good Spirit to instruct them" (ver. 20). In later Israelite times we find God's Spirit dwelling in a Hebrew, Daniel, to the exclusion of all the magicians, astrologers, and soothsayers among the Gentile Chaldeans (Dan. ii. 22, 23, 47).

In regard to Isaiah lxiii. 11, we find the prophet, recapitulating the history of Israel, states that the rebellion of the people vexed God's Holy Spirit, but that "He remembered the days of old, Moses and his people, saying, Where is He that put His Holy Spirit within him (Israel)?" The abode of the Spirit with God's inheritance was thus attested by the word of God as having been always a fact. The prophet Haggai in B.C. 520 adds his testimony in chap. ii. 4, 5, in the following words: "For I am with you, saith the Lord of hosts, according to the word that I covenanted with you when ye came out of Egypt, so MY SPIRIT REMAINETH AMONG YOU; fear ye not." God's Spirit, therefore, was promised from the first to be always abiding with the Tribes, and Haggai ii. 5, tells us that the Divine guest would never be separated from them. He is therefore now with Israel—the British nation—directing, supporting, correcting, sustaining, chastising, and comforting His people. This Presence, we presume, is not the indwelling, sanctifying, individual power which converts and draws men's souls to Christ, but the Spirit's governing influence on the national life; that directing power, in short, which was expressed in the words, "They shall be as though I had not cast them off" (Zech. x. 6), and "I will be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come" (Ezek. xi. 16)—even as heathen and Lo-ammi outcasts. Surely when the Ten Tribes where cast out of their land, and out of God's sight, His presence by the Divine Spirit was still, according to the covenant, with the discarded Tribes, for He promised "He would be to them as though He had not cast them off," that Ephraim was even then His first-born, and He would always follow them, even to the end, with His blessing (Zech. x. 8, 9; Jer. xxxi. 9). The outpouring of the Holy Spirit on God's people Israel is, as is well known, promised distinctly to the House of Israel (Joel ii. 28), and its first fulfilment in St. Peter's days is recorded in Acts ii. 17, 18.

The new covenant blessing involving also the operation of the Holy Spirit on the national mind of the Ten-Tribed House is the glorious promise awaiting fulfilment in our own British nation, by reason of her Israelitish origin (Jer. xxxi. 33; Heb. viii. 10).

It will be found that to no Gentile race is this promise given in God's Word; but to Israel only, and this fact, therefore, corresponds with the various intimations which the Scriptures give us respecting the Spirit's residence only with the chosen race. "He sheweth His words unto Jacob; His statutes and His judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation, and as for His judgments THEY have not known them. Praise ye the Lord" (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20).

Reader, take comfort from this subject. The Lord is constantly present with His people, British-Israel, and that Presence is covenanted to us like all the other blessings we enjoy (Hag. ii. 5). He has us by the right hand of His righteousness, and can that guidance err, or can it fail? (Isa. xli. 10, 13). Israel, praise YE the Lord!

SUNDERLAND.—Our good friend, Mr. John Greig, of Sunderland, gave an address on our Identity to his townspeople on Sunday evening. We wish we had many more such good, earnest workers.

ANGLO-ISRAEL LECTURES AT BATHURST, NEW SOUTH WALES.

WE take the following from the Bathurst Free Press and Mining Journal of August 28, 1880:—

ANGLO-ISRAELISM.

A very interesting lecture was delivered in the William-street Lecture Hall on Tuesday evening, August 24, 1880, by the Rev. W. Allworth, President of the Anglo-Israel Association in Sydney. The subject was "Anglo-Israel." The chair was occupied by Mr. W. C. Kelk, who briefly introduced the lecturer to the audience, which was a large and respectable one.

The lecturer commenced by alluding to the hold which this subject had taken of the public mind in all parts of the world, having received the earnest consideration of learned and devout followers of Christ of all sections of the Christian Church. The identity of the British nation with the ancient Israel of God was being recognised everywhere, and his remarks in one discourse could not possibly exhaust the subject. The evidence he should present would be in a condensed form. He then proceeded to sketch the history of the Israelites from the days of Abraham, emphasising the promise made to the patriarch that the land should be given to his seed for ever. Shewing that those promises were repeated in perpetuation, he passed down to the time of Solomon, and dwelt upon the entire severance of the House of Judah and the House of Israel, who became two distinct nationalities, the breaches then made never having been healed. Concerning Judah, they knew that after a short captivity they returned, but the Israelites disappeared from history and were known no more; yet the promises remained. God's covenant could not be overthrown, and it was therefore necessary that Israel should be found. He contended that the Anglo-Saxon people were Israel, for they had their origin in the exact spot, and came into existence at the precise time that Israel lost their designation. Quoting from prophecy, he showed that Israel was to go into the North-West; in exile was to grow into a multitude, and be blessed in population; was to be a nation with a large colonial empire; was to lend to all nations and borrow of none; was to be invincible to all foes; was to be a Christian and Sabbath-keeping people—all of which prophecies had been fulfilled in the case of the British nation. He combated the objections urged by opponents at great length, and furnished Scriptural statements in support of the ground taken by those who held that the Anglo-Saxons were the people of the Lord's inheritance. In conclusion, he answered the question put by those who were indifferent to the subject—what was the good of the inquiry, and what good would follow if the position were established—submitting that the inquiry would make men better acquainted with the Word of God, and would lead them to the Saviour therein revealed. Anglo-Israelism shed light upon much that was dark, and brought order and harmony out of confusion and discord; it furnished them with a refutation of infidelity, and satisfied them that England would never be eclipsed in the race of usefulness and glory, but that in her all the nations of the earth would be blessed.—The usual vote of thanks brought the proceedings to a close.

THE GREAT PYRAMID.

In accordance with previous announcements through the Press, etc., a lecture was delivered on Thursday evening, August 26, 1880, upon "The Great Pyramid of Gizeh," by Mr. Percy E. Williams, of Sydney. The lecture was illustrated by diagrams, showing a vertical section of the Great Pyramid, its various galleries, passages, chambers, etc. There were between 300 and 400 persons present, and the interest was maintained to the end, the auditors frequently testifying their pleasure by applauding the statements made by Mr. Williams.

The chair was taken by the Rev. Mr. Allworth, President of the Anglo-Israel Association of Sydney, who, in introducing the lecturer, stated that the Great Pyramid was engaging the attention of the leading scientific and learned men of the day, notably amongst whom was Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Astronomer-Royal of Scotland, who in 1865 spent three months at the Pyramid, and shortly after published the results of his investigations to the world, in two large works, "Life and Work at the Great Pyramid," and "Our Inheritance in the Great Pyramid." These works had startled the whole scientific world, and since their publication the subject had been thoroughly investigated by competent men of all nations, and now the Great Pyramid proves to be an inspired monument, containing a record of scientific truths of the past, present, and future history of man. He would not infringe further on the lecturer's time, but at once ask him to commence what he had to say on the subject.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Percy Williams, in rising, said he laboured under a great disadvantage. The subject was so extensive, and there were many branches of it, each of which would form the subject of a lecture, and to condense the whole into two hours, and yet dwell upon the principal features, and give a concise description of the monument, was a task the difficulty of which could only be known to those who had ever attempted to compress three lectures into one. He had divided the lecture into two parts, the first of which would treat of the history and construction of the Pyramid, and the second deal with the revelations, sacred and scientific. Mr. Williams opened the subject by referring to the ancient power and glory of the Egyptian kingdom, and the interest that had always been taken in its monuments by the scholars of all countries. After describing its geographical position, showing that it was built on the centre of the habitable globe, Mr. Williams, with the assistance of large diagrams, gave a clear and concise description of the building and its various passages and chambers. The peculiarities of the Grand Gallery, the King's, Queen's, ante and subterranean chambers, were all minutely described, and the lecturer commended the mysterious Coffer, which was the exact size of the ark of the covenant, and situated in the King's Chamber, beneath the five vaults above it, to the careful study of Freemasons. Quoting from Herodotus and Manetho and Scripture, Mr. Williams said there was little doubt that the architect was none other than Shem or Melchisedec, to whom many Freemasons attributed the founding of their craft. After referring to the discoveries made by various travellers in all ages, Mr. Williams closed the first part of his lecture with an enthusiastic and interesting account of the labours of Professor Piazzi Smyth and his heroic wife. The message of the Great Pyramid, Mr. Williams asserted, was two-fold—scientific and Messianic—and the keys for opening these messages were three, pure mathematics, applied mathematics, or astronomical and physical science, and the key of positive human history, past, present, and future, to be found by all the world, collected in the Old and New Testaments. Mr. Williams then explained how the height of the Pyramid, taken in connection with the length of the base sides, symbolised in inches the exact distance of the sun from the earth—namely, 91,840,000 miles, and that at the transit of Venus, in 1874, this was the exact distance discovered by the Government Astronomer at the Cape of Good Hope, and since verified by two of the most eminent astronomers in France. The number of days in the year, the precession of the equinoxes, the earth's mean density, were among the leading scientific facts shown by the lecturer to be symbolised in the lines and angles of the Great Pyramid. Proceeding to the sacred symbology, the various passages were shown to be symbolical of different epochs in the history of man, and were in length the identical number of inches as these epochs contained years. The first ascending passage, Mr. Williams showed to be typical of the history of the Hebrews from the Exodus to the birth of Christ; the Queen's passage and chamber, of the House of Judah from that event to the present time, and the Grand Gallery was typical of the Christian dispensation, or of the House of Israel, who, it was now thoroughly proved, were no other than the British nation. This dispensation would end in 1881-2, as the Gallery emphatically terminated at the 1881st and a fraction of an inch, and then would commence the pouring out of God's indignation on the Gentile nations, symbolised by the narrow passage beyond. Many other startling revelations were made by the lecturer, including the identity of the Hebrew and British weights and measures. The lecturer concluded with an eloquent defence of the truth of the Bible, and of the wonderful providence of God.—At the close of his lecture, Mr. Williams was awarded a cordial vote of thanks for his interesting and instructive narration.

EXTRACT FROM "LORD BEACONSFIELD: A STUDY."

By Georg Brandes.

(Translated by Mrs. Sturges.)

"Ambitious, then, he was. . . . He was unknown, he was a commoner. . . . England was a thoroughly aristocratic country, and full of prejudices, and he was the son of a Jew. . . . . One born a Jew the Prime Minister of a great Power! It was absurd! unheard of since Joseph ruled Egypt as the favourite of Pharaoh. England was ruled by aristocrats, and what was he? a pariah.

"A pariah—but why? And here query after query arose. Was, then, this mixed population of Saxons and Normans, among whom he had first seen the light, of purer blood than he? Oh, no! he was descended in direct line from one of the oldest races in the world, from that rigidly separate and unmixed Bedouin race which had developed a high civilisation at a time when the inhabitants of England were half naked, and eating acorns in their woods. He was of pure blood, and yet, strange to say, they regarded his race as of lower caste, and, nevertheless, they had adopted most of the laws, and many of the customs which constituted the peculiarity of this caste in their Arabian home. They had appropriated all the religion and all the literature of his fathers. They had acknowledged this literature to be inspired by God Himself, and this religion to be a revelation that might be supplemented, but never abolished. They divided their time by Jewish methods; they rested on the Sabbath, in accordance with a Jewish law, and it was observed by them scarcely less literally, or fanatically, than in the ancient land of the race. They considered it to be a virtue, even a duty, continually to study the history of his ancestors, and taught it to their children before teaching them the history of their own country. Week by week they sang in their churches the hymns, laments, and praises of the Jewish poets; and finally, they worshipped the Son of a Jewish woman as their God."—Page 40.

The friend who sends us the above adds for herself, "This is surely 'blind evidence,' that Dr. Bonar would be the better for reading."

THE APPROACHING ATTACK IN PARLIAMENT ON OUR HEREDITARY AND NATIONAL WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

Forwarded by C. Piazzi Smyth.

In the very short period which may intervene before the threatened attempt to introduce into the present Parliament a Bill for the compulsory adoption of French metric weights and measures, the following extract from the Cleveland Herald, Ohio, U.S., for Dec. 9, 1880, will be perused with interest:—

"The 'Cleveland Anti-Metric Society' met in semi-monthly session in the Republican League Rooms last evening, with Mr. Charles Latimer in the chair, and an encouraging attendance of members. The presiding officer read proofs of circulars in preparation for distribution throughout Ohio, explaining at length the disadvantages of the proposed French metric system, and inviting co-operation in the work of the Society for the preservation of the national and hereditary weights and measures of the United States, improved and perfected by reference to their original fountain-head in the Great Pyramid. The circulars were listened to with interest by the Society, and their publication approved. Mr. Latimer then read a petition prepared for presentation to Congress, praying that body to order the discontinuance of the use of the metric system in the Government Coast Survey. At the conclusion of the reading of this document, Mr. Latimer announced that he had just received information of a death resulting from the misplacement of a decimal point in the preparation of a prescription on the French metric system."

A FRENCHMAN'S TESTIMONY TO ISRAEL'S GREATNESS.

In the Nouvelle Révue M. Simonin continues his interesting and well-studied sketches of English ports, Liverpool and the Mersey being this time his theme. He winds up by saying:—

"Thus it is in the principal British ports—everywhere a struggle with the elements, everywhere the incessant labour of factories, everywhere the globe for a market. Who pretends, then, that England was decaying, that she was a Colossus with feet of clay? England is always progressing by her marine, her commerce, her agriculture, her manufactures. She is an unshakeable Colossus with her feet in the sea."

Digitized by Google

Those who wish to verify the above will find it published in the Times of January 15, 1881. The feet of clay belong not to Great Britain, but to the colossal metallic figure of Daniel, which British-Israel, as the stone, "breaks to pieces." Israel always increases and progresses as the stone did and does; and is destined to become a mountainous empire, filling the whole void earth. She is "the unshakeable Colossus," for her Empire is to endure for ever, and, as paramount on the ocean, she has both her feet in the sea (Dan ii. 35, 44, vii. 27; Gen. xxii. 17; Psa. lxxxix. 25; Rom. iv. 13).

Review.

The Great Pyramid. By H. W. Badger, Private in H. M. 40th Regiment. Introduced by Mrs. Piazzi Smyth. Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. Price 1s.

WE have here a remarkable book. It is the composition of a private soldier of H. M. 40th Regiment, now serving in India, and it bears the imprimatur of Piazzi Smyth, whose brave wife has introduced the soldier's words to the British public in some well-chosen sentences, conveying the approval, confirmation, and recommendation of our Great Pyramid leader himself. "For the last fifteen years," he said, when he read the treatise in manuscript, "I have waited for such testimony as this, with longing desire; and now it has come from a remarkable and most unexpected quarter with admirable force and cogency" (page 3). The summary of Pyramid facts that Private W. H. Badger has presented to the public in this little work has been carefully selected and clearly put together. We are glad to know that Private Badger is a reader of the BANNER, and we hope an approver of the views this journal constantly enunciates. We see the BANNER quoted at pages 15, 24, and 32; on which last we find our fifth "Great Pyramid Problem" series is embodied by the writer almost en bloc into his own treatise. This is flattering; and as Mrs. Piazzi Smyth, and doubtless the Professor, have approved the summation of the facts, we are glad of such high approval of a compilation that cost us some trouble to condense, as well as to express with mathematical accuracy.

We admire the tone of Private Badger's treatise; he is evidently a God-fearing soldier, and his remarks on pages 29—31 have our entire approval. We recommend this excellent effort to advance Great Pyramid knowledge; and trust Mrs. Piazzi Smyth's labour of love will meet with large response and support from the public; best of all, that it will lead to a great advance in the interest felt in our Identity, as well as in our inheritance in the Great Pyramid of Egypt.

Correspondence.

THE INFIDELITY AND LAWLESSNESS OF THE AGE.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—Reflecting Englishmen are just now asking how long this great Protestant nation can be expected to retain the guidance and blessing of the God of Israel while her leading statesmen are encouraging lawlessness and rebellion in Ireland, and infidelity in England, by sanctioning avowed Atheists to sit in Parliament, and Roman Catholics to occupy high positions in the State. They naturally say, should not English statesmen rather recognise at this crisis the vast responsibilities committed to them as legislators of God's chosen nation, with the view of securing them from the convulsions which are speedily to be poured out upon the Gentile races?

Although we have been warned in Scripture that lawlessness is to be permitted for a time at the latter end, in order that "the wicked one may be revealed, whom He will consume with the brightness of His coming," it is impossible that the vast power and prosperity which have been covenanted to this British nation, unconditionally, as being descended from the seed of Abraham, can ever fail. But let us be warned that the increasing calamities and disasters at home and abroad are sent as warnings and reproofs for our national backslidings. The great Architect of the Universe, who deposes one Cabinet in order to reinstate another for His own grand purposes, has lately replaced one in Great Britain, for the present; probably in order to make way for the great "falling away" at the end of this present dispensation, and is thus warning His people to "Come out of her, that they partake not of her plagues." All loyal Englishmen should at once forsake their worship of "golden calves and molten images," with the object of averting further national evils. They should seek for representatives of truth and justice at the next Dissolution, to support their Christian Queen, and should petition Her Majesty to restore around her sacred throne men well qualified before the world to steer the State ship through the intricate channels and who alone can conduct it in safety to the haven of security and peace.

Yours etc.,
W. H. PETERS.

Harefield, Lympstone, Dec. 29, 1880.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—In your BANNER dated January 5, 1881, there appears an article which I sent you, headed, "Have We a Right to Occupy Cyprus? By Major Nickle." My name being inserted as it appears, would lead your readers to imagine that I had written the article that appeared in the Leisure Hour, whereas I only copied it from that journal. I headed the extract, "Have We a Right to Occupy Cyprus?"

Sincerely yours,
R. W. D. NICKLE, Major.

11, Hamilton-terrace, Leamington,
January 13, 1881.

[BY THE EDITOR.—We are obliged for Major Nickle's correction. The fault was ours. The article should have been headed:—"Forwarded by Major Nickle."]

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

"Thus saith the Lord God; Remove the diadem, and take off the crown: this shall not be the same: exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high. I will overturn, overturn, overturn it: and it shall be no more, until He come whose right it is; and I will give it Him."—Ezek. xxi. 26, 27.

SIR,—One of the members of our Manchester and Salford Anglo-Israel Association read a paper on Friday evening on, "The British Race Identical with the Israel of Prophecy," and in the course of a discussion which followed, one of the objectors brought forward the above passage to show that the sceptre was to depart from the Jewish nation until Christ come again to reign on earth. One of our members, in reply, quoted Gen. xlix. 10, which the objector said was wrongly translated. I should very much like to have your opinion of the meaning of the verses in Ezekiel, and as others here are also interested, perhaps you will favour us with a reply in the BANNER. We are having several lectures in Manchester on the Identity question.

Yours faithfully,
W. HULL.

West Grove, Brookland, near Manchester, Nov. 14, 1880.

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

To the Readers of "The Comments on the Word of God."

MY FRIENDS,—Having volunteered to prepare The Comments which you have been reading since August last, I think it right to say that with July 31, 1881, a year's volume of such Comments will have been finished. I have written them, and they are now ready for press up to that date.

I am anxious to ascertain from those concerned whether, after August 1, 1881, the subscribers would desire me to continue editing these Comments: or if it is the wish of the readers that the preparation should pass into other hands. I am quite ready for either contingency. If it is the wish of my friends that I should go on preparing them, I will do so with pleasure. If it is thought, on the contrary, that a change is desirable, I shall be glad to be spared the labour which somewhat presses on me at times.

I hardly know how I am to ascertain the wishes of the majority; but it occurs to me that if each subscriber would be good enough to send a post-card at once to the Secretary, Miss J. Lawrence, Stoneleigh, New Wimbledon, Surrey, she would be able to inform me of the result within a reasonable time.

PHILO-ISRAEL.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.
Mrs. W. Larkins, per J. S. Anderson, Esq. 0 10 0

THE GREAT PYRAMID
MR. W. ROWBOTTOM

will be pleased to hear from Secretaries of Anglo-Israel Associations, and others, desirous of arranging for Lectures during the next three months. Expenses only. Address: Journal Office, Alfreton.

THE REV. J. BILLINGTON, F.R.H.S., will feel obliged if all communications respecting Identity Lectures, Subjects, Terms, &c., be addressed to him, care of Mr. Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Just published, Crown Octavo, cloth bound, gilt letters, 296 pages.

THE SEED OF ISAAC,
BEING AN
HISTORICAL REVIEW OF GOD'S DEALINGS
WITH
HIS CHOSEN PEOPLE ISRAEL.

BY J. D. GRANGER.

Post free, 4s., from THE AUTHOR, 34, Exeter-street, Plymouth, and ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published, price 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

THE GREAT PYRAMID, IN,
BUT NOT OF, EGYPT:
ITS CLAIMS TO BE FOR A SIGN AND FOR A WITNESS UNTO THE LORD OF HOSTS IN THE LAND OF EGYPT,

As announced in the Scriptures of His Holy Prophet Isaiah, B.C. 714.

BY H. W. BADGER,
Private in H. M. 40th Regiment, now serving in India.

INTRODUCED BY MRS. PIAZZI SMYTH,

London:
ROBERT BANKS, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.

FEBRUARY NUMBER NOW READY.
Price 2d.; Annual Subscription, 2s. 6d.

ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.
Editor: Douglas A. Onslow, J.P.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

THE FEBRUARY MONTHLY PART OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. May be had, by ordering, of any bookseller, or newsagent. Price 7d.
London: W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, E.C.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW.
WEDNESDAY, FEB. 9, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

Just published. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA THE ROYAL SEED TO KING DAVID'S THRONE, AND ARE NOT HER SUBJECTS, THE BRITISH PEOPLE, THE TEN LOST TRIBES?
BY WILLIAM HOPTON, of Sutton Heath.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 4d., by post 4½d. Special terms for a quantity.

THE ISRAEL OF GOD.
A SERVICE OF SONG
Upon the Career and Destiny of God's Ancient People Israel. WORDS AND MUSIC.
BY C. W. E.
Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.
BY PHILO-ISRAEL.
In handsome cloth, gilt, with Coloured Map, and several Illustrations, price 3s. 6d., by post 3s. 10d.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 8s., post free 8s. 8d., bound in blue cloth, gilt, side and back.

THE FOURTH VOLUME
OF
THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.
CONTAINING 520 QUARTO PAGES.

Post Office Orders to be made payable to Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or, W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

THE CHEAPEST IDENTITY VOLUME EVER PUBLISHED.
384 Demy 8vo pages, in handsome cloth, gilt, price 3s. 6d., by post 4s

THE FIRST VOLUME
OF
ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.
Edited by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.
This Volume contains Papers on all Points of the Identity of the British People with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel.
London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

THE DISTRIBUTION
OF
SHEM, HAM, AND JAPHETH.
ISRAEL AN ARIAN SPEAKING PEOPLE.
A Paper read before the Cheltenham Anglo-Israel Association.
BY MAJOR-GENERAL A. M. RAINEY.

This Pamphlet is strongly recommended to Identity Associations and Distributors of Anglo-Israel literature. Being a complete answer to many of our objectors.
Price 2d., or 10s. per 100 for distribution.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.
By REV. JOSEPH WILD, D.D.
With a Portrait of the Author.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Lincolnshire Farmhouse Feathers.

5 lbs. FEATHERS OR A DOWN SOFA-CUSHION GIVEN AWAY WITH EACH BED ORDERED BEFORE FEBRUARY 28TH, 1881.

"As soft as Downy Pillows are."

NEW
FEATHER BEDS AT HALF PRICE.
Annual Sale over 3,000 Beds.

Branches:—LINCOLN & LONDON.

As an evidence of good faith, all Cheques or Post Office Orders may be post-dated ten days to ensure proper delivery of the Goods, and the Company guarantee to pay cost of Bed, and pay carriage both ways, if the Goods are not as described.

The cost of any sized Bed is 1s. per lb., including best purified Grey Lincolnshire Feathers, best bordered "Union" tick, making, packing, wrapper, and carriage to any Station.

Any sized Bed will be made to order; but the following Beds are on demand at the Factory, and could be sent off within a few hours of receipt of order by London Agent.

The "ROYAL" Double Bed, 6 ft. 6 in. long by 5 ft. wide, 65 lbs. in weight; two pillows, one bolster .. .. 65s.
The "WINDSOR" Double Bed, 6 ft. 6 in. long, by 4 ft. 6 in. wide, 55 lbs. in weight; two pillows, one bolster .. .. 55s.
The "PALACE" Double Bed, 6 ft. 6 in. long, by 4 ft. 6 in. wide, 50 lbs. in weight; two pillows, one bolster .. .. 50s.
The "COTTAGE" Single Bed, 6 ft. 6 in. long, by 3 ft. 6 in. wide, 40 lbs. in weight; one pillow, one bolster .. .. 40s.

PACKING AND WRAPPER FREE WITH EACH BED.

THOUSANDS OF TESTIMONIALS.

94, Wellington-street, Leeds.

SIR,—The Feather Bed to hand. Had the tick opened, examined the Feathers, and found them quite satisfactory. Shall have no hesitation in recommending my friends, as they are about 50s. less than what the same would have cost in Leeds.—Yours truly, A. WALKER.

BANNER OF ISRAEL COUPON.
Entitles the holder to 5lbs. extra Feathers or 1 Down Sofa Cushion, on ordering Bed.
5.2.81. T. SMITH.

All Orders must be accompanied by Cheque or P. O. O. and Coupon, payable to London Agent, Mr. T. SMITH, 15, WINE OFFICE-COURT, FLEET-STREET, LONDON, E.C., where Specimen Beds or Quilts may be seen. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate Circus. Cheques crossed City Bank.

Second Edition now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

AMMI; or, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE
BY MISS BIRD.
Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham the "friend of God," and showing that true science history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

Now Ready, in handsome cloth, gilt, with Coloured Map, and several Illustrations, price 3s. 6d., by post 3s. 10d.

THE
GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.
BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

CONTENTS.

CHAPTER I.—The Gate and its Meaning. II.—The Gates—Israel's Leading Identification. III.—Captain Philip H. Colomb, R.N., on "The Gates." IV.—Gibraltar. V.—Malta. VI.—Cyprus. VII.—The Suez Canal. VIII.—Perim. IX.—Aden. X.—Socotra. XI.—Bombay. XII.—Madras. XIII.—Calcutta. XIV.—Peshawur. XV.—Rangoon. XVI.—The Straits Settlements—Singapore. XVII.—Hong Kong. XVIII.—The Cape of Good Hope. XIX.—Natal. XX.—Cape Coast Castle. XXI.—Sierra Leone. XXII.—Mombasa. XXIII.—The Mauritius. XXIV.—St. Helena. XXV.—Ascension. XXVI.—Sydney, New South Wales. XXVII.—Melbourne, Victoria. XXVIII.—Adelaide, South Australia. XXIX.—Perth, Western Australia. XXX.—Brisbane, Queensland. XXXI.—Hobart Town, Tasmania. XXXII.—New Zealand. XXXIII.—The Falkland Islands. XXXIV.—Jamaica. XXXV.—Sarawak. XXXVI.—Labuan. XXXVII.—Hera'. XXXVIII.—The Gates of India. XXXIX.—British Guiana. XL.—"The Channel Islands." XLI.—The Persian Gulf an "English" Gate. XLII.—St. Jean D'Acre, a Gate of Palestine. XLIII.—Constantinople. XLIV.—Israel's Gates, and some Lapsed Ones. XLV.—Conclusion.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,
High-Class Tailor,
47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.
MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 216. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1881. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Signs of the Times	69
The Ten Lepers	70
The "Seven Thousand in Israel" Overcome by "the Spirit of Deep Sleep," Awake to Become God's Witnesses. By H. P. Keighly	71
Jonah a Type of Ephraim-Israel. A Bible Discourse.—Part I. By John T. Gott	72
Israel at School. By Commander G. Roberts, R.N.	73
The Year 1881	74
A New Prayer Union for "Israel" (i.e., the Jews)	74
The Head and Not the Tail, Above Only, and Not Beneath, in Art-Work in Metal	75
Reported Discovery of More Pyramids in Egypt. By Professor Piazzi Smyth	75
Correspondence	75

THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

THOSE who accuse us of indulging in speculative prophecy ought to take into account the "signs of the times," now plainly apparent around us, and tell us in reference to them whether we are right or wrong in saying that the end of this dispensation is near at hand—nay, at the very doors. The question which Daniel the prophet heard asked of "the man clothed in linen," in chap. xii. 6, was one having reference to the end of the age, the termination of that critical scriptural period, called, "time, times, and half a time," or 1,260 years. What was the answer? "When He shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people, all these things shall be finished."

We have to find the "holy people who have power," or troops (2 Kings xi. 7, marg.). They are not the Jews; they have no troops, no "companies of guards" (v. 11). It must be, then, the other "Lost" House, Israel of the Ten Tribes, the British, God's dominion. These have power and companies. Our Identity has discovered their whereabouts. They are in "the isles of the West," as the "chief of the nations" (Isa. xxiv. 15; Jer. xxxi. 7). Men are satisfied the 1,260 years of prophecy are nearly run out. When the Lord has accomplished, then to scatter the British Army in the four quarters of the globe, then "all these things will be finished," said the prophet; and we find the "signs of the times" include this fulfilment, for the secular press, as we lately showed, prove that events to-day respond to the prophecy (see BANNER, vol. v., p. 29).

A further "sign of the times" has reference to "the voice," which has gone out on the continent of Europe, calling to the Jews first, "Come out of her, My people" (Rev. xviii. 4). The voice speaks of persecution for the sons of Judah in the German Empire, and the contrast between the treatment they experience here in Israel's land, and there in Gentile Germany, is another fact to prove that the Teutonic theory is false.

Hear what the Manchester Examiner and Times said on the subject, on January 21, 1881. Speaking of the Judenhass, which has lately disgraced the Vaterland, the journalist said:—

Only those who have faith in the long results of time are able at present to rest content with the protest of the Crown Prince, or feel confidence in the approaching end of the crusade against the Jews. Two incidents reported in yesterday's paper suggest a striking contrast between England and Germany in this matter which we cannot help pointing out. The same sheet that announced that the Prince of Wales was present at a Jewish wedding, which was attended by the ex-Premier and a large number of the aristocracy, announced that, in utter disregard of the friendly counsels of the German Crown Prince, there was another of the anti-Jewish demonstrations which have so frequently of late disgraced Berlin. If there was any occasion on which the Berlin students might have been expected to drop their fanaticism and animosities, it would be, one would have thought, at a meeting held to celebrate German unity, which Germans of the Hebrew race had done so much with pen and sword to promote. The Berlin students, however, were determined to show that their prejudices were greater than their patriotism. The celebration of "German unity" was taken advantage of for a demonstration of disunion. An appeal from the Rector of the University to the students to abandon their unworthy antipathies to the Jews was the signal for an outburst of fury that prevented even Professor Mommsen from making himself heard. The hall was turned into a bear-garden, free fights took place, and the celebration of German unity ended in a disgraceful riot.

The unreasonable hate which the Teutons are showing towards the Jews will possibly intensify to such an extent that the persecuted race will perforce have to come to "the isles of the West," when that quota of the House of Judah will have fulfilled the words of Jeremiah (iii. 18), and joined the House of Israel in Britain. This sign our Israelite nation had better watchfully observe, for it bears upon our subject, and on the coming of the Lord besides.

A third sign, which all may see, except the perversely blind, is the approach of the "terrible day of the Lord," when there shall be "an earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, so great" (Rev. xvi. 18). On this subject the press of the present day is constantly speaking out quite plainly. We draw attention to one of the latest expressions of public opinion, as stated in the St. James's Gazette, of January 21, 1881, We object to the use of the word "luck," and "lucky," in such a connection. The writer said:—

As a matter of fact, even the condition of Ireland is not more alarming than the state of our foreign relations, and the drift of the Eastern Question towards another and a terrible war. We have done our best on many occasions to expose these dangers (now admitted on all hands), and there has never been a moment, from the time of the Berlin Memorandum till to-day, when England's own position in the matter has been more critical than it is now; because at no time has she been so hated, so distrusted, and so helpless. All this the country will find out before long; but unless we have great good luck (and it has been a very lucky country so far), the discovery is likely to be made too late.

Digitized by Google

"We have fallen on dangerous and disastrous times," wrote Lord Beaconsfield lately to the Greenwich Conservatives; and as to the state of the Continent, it is said by Mr. Hyndman, our Israelite friend, and a writer in one of our magazines, that we are on the eve of a revolutionary period, like that which preceded the French revolution of 1793. "The Communism of France," says Mr. Hyndman, "is not as a whole so dangerous to the existing principles which govern society, as the Socialism of Germany." Besides these two centres where the unclean spirits, like frogs, are rampant, there are the Republicans of Italy, the Nihilists of Russia, and the Socialists of Norway, Sweden, and Denmark. "It is quite possible," says Mr. Hyndman, "that the Nihilism of Russia may be the spark to fire the whole European magazine of combustibles." "Excitement is now in the air" (Rev. xvi. 17), and even here, in Israel's land, a modified Communism is making head continuously. The old days of aristocracy and class privileges are passing away fast. With us British, Mr. H. thinks the impending revolution may be peacefully worked out. "We have to see in the approaching changes how we may benefit by the experience of others, and thus avoid the shipwreck which at the moment seems to threaten so many ancient and powerful States."

These words, "revolution," "shipwreck," "threatening ancient and powerful States," furnish us with a "sign of the times." Taken in conjunction with the fact that millions of men in arms are prepared for combat in the prophetic earth, they speak in no uncertain tones of "the great earthquake woe" about to devastate yonder ill-consolidated Europe, to wreck, destroy, and annihilate its polities, thrones, and institutions.

Such are some of the "signs of the times" which are confronting us to-day. They point unerringly to the coming crisis, to the great convulsion which will, we think, introduce the two Houses of Israel to God's returning favour; when in the midst of judgments poured out upon the earth, He will turn to us a pure language, give us the new covenant, and cause us to return to our land a righteous nation, "the heirs of the world," "the inheritors of the earth." Israel, therefore, praise ye the Lord (Zeph. iii. 8, 9; Jer. xxxi. 33, 34; Isa. xxvi. 2, lx. 21; Rom. iv. 13; Psa. cxi. 6, cl. 1—6).

THE TEN LEPERS.

At a meeting of the Clifton and Bristol Israel's Identification Association, held on January 28, 1881, Mr. B. Carlisle, of Stapleton, addressing the friends assembled, gave an explanation of the cure of the ten lepers by our Lord, as contained in Luke xvii. 11—19, which was original, striking, and, we believe, founded on truth.

In the first place, said Mr. Carlisle, mark the number of this diseased, sin-stricken company of suppliants to the Lord Jesus for health and recovery. Why were there not twenty? why not five? why neither more nor less than ten? Were any of our Lord's words, or teachings, or any of the incidents which befel Him the result of accident? The number ten was intended to teach us a great truth. There were Ten lost, outcasted, sin-destroyed, sin-defiled Tribes of the House of Joseph when our Lord worked this gracious miracle upon earth; and to correspond with them there were ten lepers, outcasts, yet Israelites by birth (with one exception) to represent their case. These stood afar off, banished from God's chosen people, Gentilised, Lo-Ammised, outcasted at the date in question, and they cried in deep want for cleansing. So the prodigal son in Luke xv., in the far-off country began to be in want. Loathing his degradation, he came to himself, desiring to be not a re-instated Israelite son in his father's house, but as a hireling Gentile servant; and he said, "I will arise, and go to my father." "Jesus, Master, have mercy on us," was the similar cry of the afflicted ten leprous representatives of the diseased House of Joseph. The Lord's work and word justified and cleansed them all. His death, vicarious sufferings, His resurrection and mediatorial work for them justified Lost Israel, and then and there reinstated them into God's favour. He was to them henceforth "as though He had not cast them off," He was to "them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they would come" (Zech. x. 6; Ezek. xi. 16). But mark: at that time but one Tribe only of the redeemed House of Joseph acknowledged Christ, believed in Christ, trusted in Christ, or returned to give Him thanks. That Tribe was Benjamin, the light-bearer and reflector, the loaned tribe, the one that was left to Judah "that David, God's servant, might have a light always before him in Jerusalem" (1 Kings xi. 13, 32, 36), to take the Gospel "to the ends of the earth," and to say to His people there, "The Lord hath redeemed His servant Jacob" (Isa. xlviii. 20). That tribe was the one who went forth of Babylon (ver. 20); that "came forth out of the waters of Judah" (ver. 1), and was thus appointed to evangelise the world, in the early days when the Redeemer's work on earth was done. The nine tribes, at that time, were not yet brought to Christ; "there returned not then to give glory to God, save the One Tribe of Benjamin only."

But here arises a difficulty. This leper, whose heart was touched with gratitude for the bodily cure he had experienced, representing Benjamin's restoration from the soul-destroying leprosy of sin, was, as the statement of the Gospel narrative tells us, "a Samaritan, a stranger" (Luke xvii. 16—18). That, no doubt, is true; because he was, as a believer then, an outcast, despised one in the estimation of the Jews. He was one with Jesus, and like Him. He was a Samaritan, and also a stranger to his brethren. And what was Jesus in the eyes of Judah? Let John viii. 48 tell us. The Jews said unto Him, "Say we not well that Thou art a Samaritan, and hast a devil?" As was the Master so was Christianised, leprous, restored Benjamin, the only one of the Ten Tribes who was brought then and there to Christ. He was a stranger just as Jesus was. "I was a stranger and ye took Me in," He will yet say of Himself (Matt. xxv. 35, 38, 43, 44), and His people must bear now the same reproach.

The story teaches us further that the Lord, seeing and blessing the faith of the one returning, thankful leper, asks the question that the Bible fails to answer; which 1,800 years have borne upon the ages, and have never hitherto furnished us with the reply. "Were there not ten (tribes) cleansed? but where are the nine? there are not found (in A.D. 33) that returned (then) to give thanks to God, save this stranger," this Samaritan, this Christian, Christ-like outcast. Where are the nine? Where were the lost Nine Tribes of Israel then? Are they never to be found? Is theirs to be always a condition of ingratitude and unconscious carelessness of benefits that the blood of Christ conferred on them, whereby they have been redeemed, saved, purged of sin, and blessed for evermore? No, clearly no. They have at the blessed Reformation hearkened to the Lord. Israel, wandering and outcasted, have become "Israel obedient," Israel grateful, Israel loving; and now the question can be answered. The Nine lost but redeemed Tribes, joined since by the Christ-like, Samaritan stranger of the Tribe of Benjamin, are found again in the British islands, in these happy isles of the West. The "dead is alive again;" the prodigal is returned to His rejoicing Father's home; and now, at last, Israel, as God's glory, praise Him for the healing she has received, crying, "Hallelujah, hallelujah, praise the Lord" (Isa. xlvi. 13; Rev. v. 9, 10, xv. 3, 4, xix. 1—8; Psa. cl. 1—6).

Digitized by Google

THE "SEVEN THOUSAND IN ISRAEL" OVERCOME BY "THE SPIRIT OF DEEP SLEEP," AWAKE TO BECOME GOD'S WITNESSES.

H. P. KEIGHLY.

"I have left me seven thousand in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him."—1 Kings xix. 18; Rom. xi. 4.

"For the Lord hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes."—Isa. xxix. 10; Rom. xi. 8.

"Ye are My witnesses . . . that . . . I, even I, am the Lord."—Isa. xliii. 10, 11; Acts i. 8.

AT first sight there does not appear to be any particular connection between the above three extracts from the historical and prophetical portions of the Holy Scriptures, or in the reproduction of the first two in St. Paul's epistle to the Romans: but a careful study of the history of the people to whom they all apply will, undoubtedly, convince us how intimately they are connected, and how complete became in due course the moral, religious, and intellectual blindness of the seven thousand in Israel, whom the Almighty had reserved to Himself to become the witnesses of His divine majesty and truth.

There are few of our readers but will at once recognise, in the first text quoted, the reply of the Almighty to the prophet Elijah, on his complaining to the Lord. "The children of Israel have forsaken Thy covenants, thrown down Thine altars, and slain Thy prophets with the sword; and I, even I, only am left; and they seek my life to take it away" (1 Kings xix. 10).

At this period of Israel's history, during the reign of Ahab, and when idolatry was rampant in the land, Elijah went in fear of his life owing to the resentment of Jezebel, the wife of Ahab, at his having slain 450 of the priests of Baal at the brook Kishon, after their failure to call down fire from heaven upon the sacrifice upon their altar erected on Carmel. The prophet believed that all Israel had forsaken their God, and that he alone was left of all His servants. Of this impression his mind was speedily disabused, and he learnt that there were yet seven thousand left in Israel who had not fallen away from the service of the God of their fathers.

To what end, it may not unnaturally be asked, had the Almighty reserved to Himself these seven thousand in Israel, if they were to be overtaken by "the Spirit of deep sleep," of moral and intellectual blindness, foretold by the prophet Isaiah? Or in what respect could they, under such circumstances of mental somnolency, be superior to their brethren who had already fallen into idolatry? Fortunately we find the answer to these questions in St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans. He there tells us "Blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in" (Rom. xi. 25); and we find a further illustration of his meaning as to the object with which this blindness was made to overtake Israel, in the eleventh verse of the same chapter, where we read that "through their fall salvation is come unto the Gentiles."

Christ has told us, "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the House of Israel," herein distinctly informing us that His primary mission was to redeem Israel; and this is confirmed by His reply to the woman of Canaan, who sought at His hands relief for her afflicted daughter. "It is not meet to take the children's bread and cast it to the dogs," signifying thereby that the salvation He brought to God's chosen people was not to be conferred upon the Gentiles. Blindness in part had, however, overtaken Israel, and they are incapable of recognising the divine interposition on their behalf, for St. John tells us, "He came unto His own and His own received Him not" (i. 11). Thus "the Spirit of deep sleep" into which Israel had fallen was the means of bringing salvation through Christ to the Gentiles, not to the exclusion of Israel, but as participators with them. Had this mental oblivion not overtaken Israel, they must have recognised the Messiah, have accepted His teachings, and so have obtained redemption to the exclusion of the rest of mankind. The reservation to Himself of "the seven thousand in Israel" by the Almighty, and the subsequent "Spirit of deep sleep" imposed upon them, was a work fraught with benefit to all mankind, not alone as regards their failure, owing to their condition of mental blindness to recognise the sacred mission of Christ, but in the work designed for them to perform at a later period of the world's history, when they should have awakened from their lethargic state.

The close connection between the first two texts which head this paper is plainly shown in Rom. xi., referring to the complaint of Elijah already alluded to, we read, "But what saith the answer of God unto him? I have reserved to Myself seven thousand men who have not bowed the knee to the image of Baal. . . . What then? . . . God hath given them the spirit of slumber, eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear unto this day. And David saith . . . Let their eyes be darkened that they may not see. . . . I say then have they stumbled that they should fall." "God forbid; but rather through their fall salvation is come to the Gentiles. Here we find it distinctly stated by St. Paul that the seven thousand were those upon whom the Spirit of slumber had come. It is, moreover, evident that the "remnant" mentioned by St. Paul in the fifth verse are the seven thousand, and that the seven thousand are Paul's "kinsmen according to the flesh," referred to in chap. ix. as being those "Israelites, to whom pertaineth . . . the covenants . . . and the promises," and of whom he writes, "If by any means I may provoke to emulation them which are my flesh, and might save some of them."

We thus find the first two of our texts closely allied by the apostle to the Gentiles, and we now have to consider the connection of the third with these two.

The condition of mental blindness which we see to have overtaken the seven thousand, was foretold by Moses; and Isaiah testifies to the awakening of Israel therefrom. "Sing unto the Lord a new song, and His praises from the end of the earth, ye that go down to the sea, and all that is therein; the isles, and the inhabitants thereof. Let them give glory unto the Lord, and declare His praises in the islands. . . . I will bring the blind by a way that they know not; I will lead them in paths that they have not known; I will make darkness light before them, and crooked things straight. They shall be turned back; they shall be greatly ashamed that trust in graven images, that say to the molten images, Ye are our gods. Hear ye deaf, and look ye blind that ye may see. Who is blind but My servant? or deaf as My messenger that I sent?" (xlii. 10, 12, 16, 19). "Bring forth the blind people that have eyes, and the deaf that have ears. Let all the nations be gathered together, and let the people be assembled; who among them can declare this, and show us former things? Let them bring forth their witnesses, that they may be justified; or let them hear, and say, it is the truth. Ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord, and My servant whom I have chosen, that ye may know and believe Me, and understand that . . . I, even I, am the Lord; and beside Me there is no Saviour. I have declared, and have saved, and I have showed, when there was no strange god among you; therefore ye are My witnesses, saith the Lord, that I am God" (xliii. 8—12).

In this we find a clear and distinct coupling of those to whom "blindness in part is happened" with "My witnesses that I am God," and therefore a most close and intimate connection between the whole three texts: How the seven thousand reserved by the Almighty to Himself, were for the purpose assigned by St. Paul, and foreshadowed by Isaiah, "The Lord who gathereth the outcasts of Israel, saith, Yet will I gather others to Him, beside those that are gathered unto Him" (lvi. 8), to be the means of bringing salvation to the Gentiles.

But from the quotation here given from Isaiah, we gather that not only has "the Spirit of deep sleep" which had overcome Israel to be the means of bringing salvation to the Gentiles in the first instance, but that their awaking from this slumber was to have still further effect in the same direction. "Yet will I gather others to Him, besides those that are gathered unto Him." Who can doubt that this refers to the purpose for which the Almighty reserved the seven thousand to Himself. Their slumber was the means of gathering unto Him the first converts to Christianity. Their awakening is their witnessing to God's truth in bringing the Gospel of Christ to all peoples. It was promised to Abraham, "In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." They were blest in the advent of Christ, they are blest in the propagation of the Gospel among them by the descendants of the "seven thousand in Israel," reserved by the Lord to Himself.

Digitized by Google

In these three texts we see ample evidence of the close connection of the seven thousand with the Anglo-Saxon race. How many years were the progenitors of this nation wrapt in the "spirit of deep sleep," while steeped in idolatry, and blind to the majesty and truth of the one true God? until the Gospel, having been first preached to the Gentiles, found its way to them, and awoke them from their mental lethargy. This done, we were not long in purging ourselves of the corruptions infused into the first draught of Gospel truth we imbibed, and having shaken ourselves free of the idolatry and superstition accompanying the faith promulgated from Rome, we became with one accord God's witnesses of the Gospel message of His Son. It was owing to no merit in ourselves, either nationally or individually, that we were selected by the Almighty to be His messengers to all nations; but in fulfilment of His promise made to our father Abraham, that in his seed should all the nations of the earth be blessed. For this purpose, for the propagation of the Gospel of Christ, were we reserved by God to Himself, and by His mercy and grace, all unworthy as we are, are we permitted to be His witnesses of the salvation purchased by the blood of His blessed Son, for all who will call in sincerity and truth upon His name.

JONAH A TYPE OF EPHRAIM-ISRAEL.

A Bible Discourse.

By John T. Gott.

PART I.

The book of Jonah has long been considered the most mysterious record in the Bible. Many in these latter days look upon it as mythical, question its historical truth, and deny the possibility of the miracles recorded.

Those who believe in revealed truth find a complete answer to these objections, in the reference which our Saviour made to Jonah, in which his "personal existence, miraculous fate, and prophetical office" are explicitely asserted. "No sign shall be given but the sign of the prophet Jonas: for as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's (or more correctly, the shark's) belly, so shall the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth."

The account of Jonah is history and not parable. In it is portrayed a characteristic outline of the history of Ten-Tribed Israel, and such we believe to be the divinely intended teaching and meaning of this mysterious book; a meaning that has been hidden during all the ages that Ten-Tribed Israel has been lost.

Hosea and Jonah belonged to the Ten Tribes. With Jonah written prophecy had its first commencement, and we have the authority of the Jewish Synagogue for saying that the book of Jonah is one of the oldest of the prophetic writings.

Some of you may remember, that when I last addressed you, my subject was, "Ephraim is like unto a silly dove." So said Hosea, who knew well the history of Jonah. Now the word Jonah means a dove, and in expounding his history, we shall only be telling you the old, old story of Ten-Tribed Israel over again—of Ephraim, the silly dove.

The great mission of the chosen people, the object for which they were raised up, and have been preserved, was to make God's Name a praise in the earth. They, and they alone, were to be a blessing to all the families of the earth. They, and they alone, were divinely intended to be the great ingathering people, the human instruments for conveying the glad tidings of the Gospel to the heathen.

Now Jonah is the only prophet we read of being sent with a message of mercy, a veritable Gospel message to the heathen, and in that mission we have an earnest of God's subsequent intention of opening the door of salvation to the Gentiles also, through the mission of His chosen people Israel.

The book of Jonah may be divided into two parts. Chap. i. and ii. relate his first mission, his disobedience and punishment. Chap. iii. and iv. the second mission, his success, and yet his discontent.

It now remains for us to consider how far Jonah's history is a sign or type of Ten-Tribed Israel, of Ephraim the silly dove.

"The word of the Lord came unto Jonah saying, Arise, go to Nineveh, that great city, and cry against it, for their wickedness is come up before Me." Nineveh was then the chief city of the Gentile world. It was larger than Babylon, and was distinguished for its magnificence and corruption, its careless merriment and licentious dissipation.

Such is the character of the world to-day, of which Nineveh is the type. As truly as these are the latter days, the days of the Son of Man, so truly do they correspond to the days of Noe. Only one prophet of old was commissioned to preach repentance to the heathen, and to one seed, the seed of Abraham, were the oracles of God committed, and to one portion of that seed, the lost sheep of the House of Israel, is the duty enjoined to preach the Gospel to all nations.

Now we notice a strange trait in the character of Jonah. He who was known as a prophet among the Ten Tribes, who had reproved them for idolatry, who had exhorted them to repentance, who had laid before them promises of blessing for obedience to the will of Jehovah, and threatenings of dreadful punishment if they disobeyed; he who had mourned over their impenitence and persistent wickedness, is sent to preach repentance to the Ninevites, that Israel may learn to know and acknowledge the goodness and mercy of the God of their fathers.

When lo! this prophet, so divinely honoured, rose up to flee from the presence of God! He went down to Joppa, found a ship going to Tarshish, paid the fare, and went down into it to go with them to Tarshish, from the presence of the Lord.

Disobedience is the foundation of all sin. Jonah is here guilty of the very same sin for which he had so long and so earnestly admonished the Ten Tribes.

Sin is folly. How it warps a man's judgment and blinds his eyes. Once the voice of the Lord in the Garden of Eden was sweet to the human ear, but when Adam sinned it sounded like the artillery of heaven, and he fearfully sought to hide himself among the trees of the garden. And Jonah, in his right mind, was well acquainted with the Psalms of David, as we shall hereafter see. He well knew that beautiful Psalm, "Whither shall I go from Thy Spirit? or, whither shall I flee from Thy presence?" (Psa. cxxxix.) His conduct is the conduct of the son in the parable, who refused to work in his father's vineyard, but afterwards repented and went. His folly is manifest in his attempting to do an impossible thing—to flee from the presence of God. He went down from the heights of Lebanon to the low seaport town Joppa. What a suicidal descent, from honour to humiliation; from safety to destruction; from Divine favour to Divine retribution. And you will observe how easy it is for man to be dishonest with God, yet prompt and conscientious in observing the laws of social justice and equity.

Digitized by Google

Jonah paid the fare, He was honest with the owner of the ship, but dishonest with the Owner of the universe.

So far, all was well. Jonah was bound for the most distant part of the then known world. As some think, this very island of Britain, which from the earliest times has been noted for tin. The ship is unmoored, the voyage is begun; Jonah's anxiety is ended, and, with a feeling of carnal security, he is soon fast asleep in the sides of the ship. So does God allow men to carry on their vain schemes, and sometimes almost to accomplish their ends, ere He lets His presence be felt, and then cometh sudden destruction on all their plans. It comes, as it came to Jonah, at an unexpected time, and in an unexpected way.

God cast out a great wind upon the sea, and so obedient were the elements, that a tempest arose of such a furious nature that the ship was like to be broken in pieces. Now was Jonah in imminent peril. A furious storm was raging without, and a storm of fear within, among the mariners, but Jonah was fast asleep. They cast their wares into the sea, and cried every man to his God, still Jonah sleeps on, all unconscious of His peril. What a contrast between the heathen mariners and the prophet of God! Whilst they pray he sleeps! Whilst they are all actively engaged in endeavouring to save themselves and their ship, he does nothing, who is the guilty cause of all the danger! Those who are the most dead to fear are often those who are nearest to destruction. But Jonah is not permitted to sleep the sleep of death. The heathen shipmaster is sent as a messenger to rouse him to consciousness, and to warn him of the danger that surrounds them all. "What meanest thou, O sleeper, arise, call upon thy God, if so be that God will think upon us that we perish not. He who was destined to call the heathen to repentance, is himself called to prayer by a heathen. And has it not been ever true that the "heathen in his blindness" shows far more religious zeal than the great majority of Christians?

Primitive tradition and natural conscience led men in very early times to believe that one guilty man would involve all his associates in punishment. Hence we read that these heathen mariners said one to another, "Come and let us cast lots, that we know for whose cause this evil is upon us." The casting of lots among the chosen people was a very solemn ceremony. Whatever happened to man by allotment was regarded as by God's appointment. The lots were cast into the cloak, cap, urn, or whatever the judge or umpire bear in his lap, and then were drawn forth in order. In this way inheritances were divided, guilty ones detected, kings elected and an apostle chosen.

(To be continued.)

ISRAEL AT SCHOOL.

By Commander G. Roberts, R.N.

Some of our friends tell us we are not to reason logically when we come to the Word of God; in fact, that our God, knowing how silly and foolish we are, treats us as such. And so in His Word, when He says Israel, we are to understand the Church (query, which out of the great number?); but when He says Jews He means Israel, and therefore the blessings promised to the Church are ours, because we nationally, we suppose they mean, represent the Church, and the curses belong to Israel, because they nationally, we are again to suppose, represent the Jews. No doubt our opponents have the wretched crazy band of Anglo-Israelites in their minds at the time, for they surely do not mean anyone to take their words literally and fully, and probably would not acknowledge them if told they had uttered them. At any rate this reasoning was forcible enough to convey to one mind at least on a late occasion, that the speaker did not agree with a logical interpretation of the Word of Truth. Our friend afterwards said that this dispensation was like a parenthesis; that God had given up Israel* for crucifying the Lord Jesus, and until they were again restored to favour, the gap was filled up by the dispensation of grace to the Gentiles. Is God a God of nature? Is He a Father? Does He not know how to bring up a child? Which of us having children would (if a son especially) keep him under our roof, and in the house all his days? Is it not true that the child is nursed at home, and when strong enough and advanced enough to go to school, he is sent out away from home to be tutored and governed until the time arrive when his father can again bring him home and allow him to share in the administration of his house? Will anyone say that because the father has sent his son away amongst the school-fellows, and follows him with favours of which his associates participate, that therefore the father has given up the son, and is favouring his school-mates instead of his own? Is he not his dear son? Is he not a pleasant child? Can the father give him up? Can a mother forget her sucking child? This all may be possible with an earthly parent, but not with Him with whom we have to do.

The child away from home in the public school may be lost sight of in the midst of so many; he, though an heir, may have to conform to the same discipline, and pass through the same trials and temptations as his comrades, and it is well he should not know in his youth too much of his high lineage and his grand estate, lest he should be exceeding proud, and so fall into a snare. Dare anyone argue that, looking for this young man and seeing nothing different in him from his fellows, he is not his father's son? Will not the father come and claim him at the appointed time? If the boy has been well taught and is unselfish, and has learnt to govern himself in a school of discipline, if he has been faithful in a few things, will he not be all the more suitable to occupy the post his father is about to bestow upon him?

Let us remember that God chose Abraham alone, and blessed him, and increased him. Israel alone has He known of all the families of the earth; and He has promised His Spirit should remain with them, and that He will lead them by a way they knew not, in paths they had not known.

Do we not see in this tutoring of Israel among the Gentiles, the Gentiles being blessed through Abraham? And whilst the Gospel is being preached to the Gentiles, it is in order to bring out from among them a people for His Name. This people is none other than the tabernacle of David, which was fallen down (Amos ix. 9, &c., Acts xv. 13, &c.). He had come to whom the promise was made, to confirm the covenant promised to the fathers. He especially told His disciples to go rather to the lost sheep of the House of Israel, and that they should not have gone through all the cities of Israel till the Son of Man come. How loving is our God; the people who were left of the sword found grace in the wilderness, even Israel. "I have loved thee with an everlasting love." His schoolmates may enjoy the favours poured upon him by being his friends and looking up to his father (Psa. xlv. 14; Isa. lvi. 8); but the son, and he alone, is in the position to say, "Doubtless Thou art our Father, though Abraham be ignorant of us, and Israel acknowledge us not; Thou, O Lord, art our Father, our Redeemer, Thy Name is from everlasting. O Lord, why hast Thou made us to err from Thy ways, and hardened our heart from Thy fear? Return for Thy servant's sake, the tribes of Thine inheritance. The people of Thy holiness (Thy saints) have possessed the land but a little while; our adversaries have trodden down Thy sanctuary. We are Thine. Thou never barest rule over them; they were not called by Thy Name."

* The Jews are given up for this dispensation; but they are not all Israel that are of Israel, and, the Word of God being true, we must find Israel still favoured.

Digitized by Google

Surely the Gentiles have no part or lot here; the parenthesis is all a myth; it is the heir under tutors and governors until the time appointed of the Father.

Believers in our glorious heir-loom, do not waver at the malignant opprobrium of those who, if they acknowledge us, fancy they will have to throw away all their former time and learning. Stand by the Word of God. Try every spirit; bring everything to that Word. Remember He has not dealt so with any nation, and the Gentiles have no knowledge of His laws. Witness the so-called Christendom on the Continent, and then contrast with it this land of Bibles and Sabbaths. Israel, praise ye the Lord! Remember whence ye are hewn, the hole of the pit whence ye are digged, and look unto Abraham your father, and to Sarah who bare you, and thank God that in His infinite mercy you are born of English parents, and have been brought up in a land where the true light shineth.

THE YEAR 1881.

THE following appeared in the Bristol Times and Mirror of Jan, 12, 1881, from the pen of the Rev. C. W. Hickson. It contains a good deal of curious information, and was excellent Identity Pyramid instruction for Bristol readers:—

1881.

GENTLEMEN,—Some correspondence has appeared in your columns calling attention to the figures in the number of the current year 1881.

I do not think that the ninish character of this number has been noticed.

The sum of the first two digits, the second two digits, the first and third digits, and the second and fourth digits is, in each of these four cases, nine. The first two digits give the product of two nines; the second two digits that of nine nines. The sum of all the digits is two nines. And lastly, the number itself, 1881, is equal to 99 tens plus 99 nines, or 19 times 99.

This last fact leads to the consideration of more important matter.

The number of years in the metonic cycle is 19; therefore, 1881 years are equal to 99 metonic cycles. This cycle is the period in which the annual excess of nearly eleven days of the solar over the lunar year accumulates to just seven lunations, to an error of only two hours, four minutes, four seconds on the 19 years. This small error, however, multiplied by 99, amounts to nearly 8¼ days; consequently the solar-lunar epact will not amount to 693 (i.e., 7 × 99) lunations this year, but in 1881, 776 years—i.e., in October 1882.

About October 3 of this year, however, the soli-lunar epact—reckoning from the beginning of the common account Anno Domini—will have accumulated to exactly 56 solar years; and this 56-year epact is itself just two solar cycles, the solar cycle being the period of 28 years in which the days of the week recur upon the same days of the month throughout the year.

The period in which the soli-lunar epact amounts to exactly one solar year is 33·585 years, which Mr. Grattan Guinness has shown, in his "Approaching End of the Age," was probably the exact length of our Lord's sojourn on earth.

Thus, 1880·753 years are a soli-lunar cycle, and are equal to 33·585 years (also a soli-lunar cycle, and the length of our Lord's life on earth), multiplied by 56, the number of years in two solar cycles.

Again, the difference between a solar year and a calendar year of 360 days is about 5¼ days. In 1881·16 years this soli-calendar epact amounts to just 27 solar years, and this latter period is itself approximately a soli-lunar cycle, since it differs from 334 lunations by less than 1¾ days. In 1881·48 solar years the soli-calendar epact amounts to exactly 334 lunations. The soli-calendar epact amounts to one year in 69·673 years; which, reckoned from A.D. 0, brings us to within five days of the exact date of the taking of Jerusalem by Titus—September 8, A.D. 70. Thus, 1881·16 years are a soli-calendar cycle, and the factors of 1881·16—viz., 27 and 69·673—taken in solar years, are respectively soli-lunar and soli-calendar cycles, the latter being also the period from A.D. 0 to the destruction of Jerusalem.

Once more, the difference between a calendar year of 360 days and a lunar year of 12 lunations is about 5 7-11 days. This calendo-lunar epact accumulates to 364 lunations in 1908·265 calendar years, which are equal to 1880·876 solar years.

Surely the year and a half ending October, 1882, must be regarded as a very remarkable period of time, seeing that within its limits these different ways of reckoning time—viz., by solar years, by calendar years, and by lunations—are all brought into harmony with one another, supposing all to have started together from A.D. 0; and that exactly 56 periods equal to the length of our Lord's life, and 27 periods equal to the interval from A.D. 0 to the destruction of Jerusalem, also terminate within it; or even within three-quarters of a year.

If there is any truth in Mr. G. Guinness's contention that there is a remarkable connection between astronomical cycles and the times and seasons of history and prophecy, then surely some great event in the world's history may be expected during the above-named brief period.

I will add that the length of the Grand Gallery in that extraordinary building, the Great Pyramid, is 1881·6 inches; and that not only is this the length as determined by Professor Piazzi Smyth's measurement, but as being the product of the number of days in the year multiplied by the number 5·15165, which is also a factor of several Pyramid dimensions. Most Pyramid investigators have long believed this length to indicate a period of time commencing with the birth of our Lord, or with the starting-point of the received Christian era.

May I conclude by putting down my facts and calculations in a brief form?—

A solar year = 365·242264 days.
A calendar year = 360·000000 days.
A lunar year = 354·367065 days.
A lunation = 29·5305887 days.
The annual soli-lunar epact = 10·8752 days.
The annual soli-calendar epact = 5·242264 days.
The annual calendo-lunar epact = 5·6329354 days.

1. In 1881·776 years the soli-lunar epact amounts to 693 (99 X 19 or 700—7) lunations.
2. In 1880·753 years the soli-lunar epact amounts to exactly 56 years, or two solar cycles *
3. In 1881·160 years the soli-calendar epact amounts to 27 years, which are a soli-lunar cycle †
4. In 1881·480 years the soli-calendar epact amounts to 334 lunations.
5. In 1880·876 years the calendo-lunar epact amounts to 364 lunations.

The average of these five cycles is 1881·209 years.

6. 1881·6 inches is the length of the Grand Gallery in the Great Pyramid.

I am, Gentlemen, yours faithfully,
WATCHER.

A NEW PRAYER UNION FOR "ISRAEL" (I.E., THE JEWS).

BY the above announcement the promoters of a new Prayer Union reported in The Christian of November 11, 1880, point to the "House of Judah" and request the formation of a Prayer Union for her. They are pleased to call that House "Israel," which they have a perfect right to do, as "the Jews are truly Israelites." The originators of this new Union, however, would not pray for the British nation as Israel; and, therefore, would on no account join our "Scripture and Prayer Union;" though we, as British-Israel, welcome with joy this new machinery for the incessant, importunate supplication of the Lord that He will have mercy, and that soon, on Judah. We Israelites would make this request for the Jews for two reasons:—

1. Because we know it is the Lord's will we should thus "inquire of Him" "to do" for the Jews what He promised in Ezek. xxxvi. 25—37; and,

2. Because, in blessing Judah, we know the Lord must bless us Israelites first; since the captivity of His people Israel and of Judah is to be brought back together; nay, Judah is "to walk to the House of Israel in order that she may return on Israel's strength," and Israel, with Judah, are to be restored to their land "together" (Jer. iii. 18; Ezek. xxxvii. 19); Jezreel being the chief (Hosea i. 11).

We hope the time will soon come when Christians will not be active in fomenting the jealousies and differences between the Houses of Judah and of Israel, as they are now; but that, instead of two Prayer Unions (one for the Ten Tribes of British-Israel, and another for Two-Tribed Judah), there may be one large and united Prayer

* The soli-lunar epact amounts to one year in 33·585 years, the probable length of our Lord's life.

† The soli-calendar epact amounts to one year in 69·673 years, the length of time from A.D. 0 to the destruction of Jerusalem.

Digitized by Google

Union for Israel and Judah—the Twelve Tribes combined—to the glory of God!

Meanwhile, pending the arrival of that glorious day, we wish well to the new Union, and desire its promoters "God speed!" We shall join them in their prayers for Judah; and, in return, we would ask them to unite with us, and seek God's blessing on the British Anglo-Saxon races, because they are the Lost Ten Tribes!

The circular put out by the Prayer Union for the Jews is as follows (we heartily unite in the prayer of the last sentence, taking the words literally, which our friends do not):—

"PRAYER UNION FOR ISRAEL.

"In compliance with the suggestion of some who are deeply impressed with the weighty responsibility which rests upon the Christian Church in respect of God's ancient and covenant people, a Prayer Union has been formed for the purpose of seeking faithfully to fulfil the inspired prophet's solemn charge:—'Ye that make mention of the Lord (margin: Ye that are the Lord's remembrancers) keep not silence and give Him no rest, till He establish, and till He make Jerusalem a praise in the earth.' To neglect so plain a command to unceasing intercession on Israel's behalf must assuredly cause loss to the Christian Church, as any lack of faithfulness will inevitably check the flow of blessing; while, on the other hand, loyally to observe it must, as assuredly, draw down multiplied blessing in accordance with the promise recorded by the Psalmist:—'Pray for the peace of Jerusalem: they shall prosper that love thee.' Let the Lord's people, then, unitedly arise to fulfil this their high and holy duty towards Israel, and in God's strength say, with His servant of old, 'God forbid that I should sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray for you.'

"All desirous of joining this Union should send their full names and addresses to Miss Phillips, 72, Mildmay-park, London, N. A stamped envelope must be enclosed, and a card of membership will be forwarded."

THE HEAD, AND NOT THE TAIL, ABOVE ONLY, AND NOT BENEATH, IN ART-WORK IN METAL.

THE TRINIDAD GOVERNMENT-HOUSE.—In the decoration of the Government-house at Trinidad it has been found necessary to have recourse, for art metal-work of a substantial character, to an English firm. During last week part of this art-work in metal was on show by the manufacturers, Messrs. Henry Greene and Son, of Cannon-street, City, to whom has been intrusted the task of fitting up the Government-house with gas. The works executed and shown consisted of ormolu and bronze chandeliers and brackets, the ormolu consisting of one magnificent twelve-light chandelier for the ball-room, with cut glass body and lapidary-cut "jewels" inserted in the arms, and with smaller chandeliers and brackets to match for the public and private drawing-rooms. The bronze chandeliers—also excellent specimens of English metal-work—are for the dining-rooms. The verandahs are to be lighted with globe lamps, and thirty of these are ready to be sent. The whole of this art workmanship in metals was from the designs of Mr. Sheriff Sandland.—Times, November 9, 1880.

REPORTED DISCOVERY OF MORE PYRAMIDS IN EGYPT.

BY PROFESSOR PIAZZI SMYTH, Astronomer-Royal for Scotland.

"NEWS from Cairo states that to the North of Memphis, near Saggarah, two Pyramids have been discovered which were constructed by kings of the sixth dynasty, and the rooms and passages of which are covered with thousands of inscriptions. The discovery is said to be of the greatest scientific importance."

The above passage is copied verbatim from that most respectable journal in science, Nature, p. 297, for January 27, 1881; and the question may occur to the readers of the BANNER, how will such a discovery bear on the "sacred and scientific theory of the Great Pyramid?" Supposing the whole statement is perfectly true, we answer, "most confirmatively." Saggarah, or Saccarah, being South of the Great Pyramid, structures there should, as set forth by the late William Osburn in his "Monumental History of Egypt," be taken in date; and accordingly these newly-discovered ones are stated to belong in time to the sixth dynasty, while all men agree in attributing the Great Pyramid, on its hill of Jeezeh, to the fourth dynasty.

Again, these later Pyramids are said to be covered with inscriptions inside, while the Great Pyramid had none. Therein the Great Pyramid set an example which was contrary to Egyptian taste; for they, the Egyptians, loved to decorate their monuments with Cainite glorifications of themselves. Wherefore, though they copied the general form of the Great Pyramid for a few generations, they soon found it not so suitable for their boasting inscriptions as their own invented tombic structures, to which accordingly Egypt returned, and to which it clung through all the rest of its historic existence (see p. 9, of the fourth edition of "Our Inheritance in the Great Pyramid.") These new Pyramids, therefore, in their multitudinous interior descriptions, show Egypt returned half way from the pure Great Pyramid on the North, to the idolatrously-lined temples of Thebes on the South.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—In meeting an objection raised by a friend of mine, an evangelical clergyman—that we "anticipate Israel's temporal greatness before the time which God has appointed for it, and that it is millennial glory on earth, not pre-millennial, that restored Israel is to have"—an argument occurred to me which I have not seen fully stated before, and which I place at your disposal. I referred my friend to Jacob's blessing on the two sons of Joseph, and the prophecy that each of them would be a great nation, and to Ezekiel xxxvii. 22, which declares that during the millennial reign of Christ Ephraim and Judah shall be one nation, and that they shall not be two nations any more at all; from which it follows that if the temporal greatness foretold by Jacob for the House of Joseph does not occur before the millennium, it can never occur at all.

I asked my friend also how his friend, but our opponent, the Rev. B. W. Savile, can say, in the face of these two Scriptures, that God's promise to enlarge Israel was fulfilled in the days of Joshua, and where the dual House of Joseph (both branches of mighty nations) was at that time? Perhaps Mr. Savile may be able to answer that question; but I hardly think he will.

Yours very truly,
J. M. GRANT, M.D.,
Surgeon-General.

Cheltenham, Jan. 5, 1881.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Whether the Rev. B. W. Savile's change of view on the Anglo-Israel question is just or no, I don't pretend to decide. But I desire to say that his letter to the Daily Western Times, which you quote in BANNER, of January 26th, with your reply, is weak, and unworthy of a minister of religion. When I came to the passage, "doubting whether the old man who proclaims himself the infallible vicar of Christ, ever spoke with more confidence than the editor of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, in claiming that God's truth was confided to his keeping," &c., I paused, asking myself, what reply should I make to such a question? and I beg to assure you my reply was just yours: that God's truth, formerly committed to Israel, is now equally a sacred deposit which every Christian editor or individual Christian, in his particular sphere, is bound to keep and defend (Jude 3). Surely, also, Mr. Savile, whatever his own gifts or calling, does not deny "the diversity of gifts of the Spirit" (1 Cor. xii.) "given to each to profit withal," and for which each is responsible. No doubt it becomes all to be modest, yet firm in contending for what he believes to be revealed to him as God's truth. You do so manfully; however, like others, liable to err. May God preserve you from error, and enable you to give an answer to every man that asketh a reason of the hope that is in you, &c.

Mr. Savile has no ground at all of complaint against you on account of your wise and Scriptural reply to Dr. Bonar's strictures. I am curious to see his reply. I value Dr. Bonar's writings and character equally with Mr. Savile, and only regret that he should have attacked you so inconsiderately.

I am, dear sir, yours truly,
CHARLES J. HADFIELD, Col.

P.S.—Whatever doubts I may entertain on all your views, such attacks as that of the Rev. W. Savile and Dr. Bonar rather assure me that you are in the main right. Error is not usually so attacked.

Lichfield, January 27, 1881.

ERRATUM.—Page 49. second column, last line but one, for "rupture." read "rapture."

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

TO MASONS.—AN OLD AND WELL-ESTABLISHED BUSINESS.—Wishing to retire, I will sell half to a competent person and give the other half to my son, who is young. By letter to G. W. C., Hirst House, West Moulsey, Surrey.

THE GREAT PYRAMID

MR. W. ROWBOTTOM

will be pleased to hear from Secretaries of Anglo-Israel Associations, and others, desirous of arranging for Lectures during the next three months. Expenses only. Address: Journal Office, Alfreton.

THE REV. J. BILLINGTON, F.R.H.S., will feel obliged if all communications respecting Identity Lectures, Subjects, Terms, &c., be addressed to him, care of Mr. Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Just published, Crown Octavo, cloth bound, gilt letters, 296 pages.

THE SEED OF ISAAC,

BEING AN

HISTORICAL REVIEW OF GOD'S DEALINGS

WITH

HIS CHOSEN PEOPLE ISRAEL.

BY J. D. GRANGER.

Post free, 4s., from THE AUTHOR, 34, Exeter-street, Plymouth, and ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published, price 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

THE GREAT PYRAMID, IN,

BUT NOT OF, EGYPT:

ITS CLAIMS TO BE FOR A SIGN AND FOR A WITNESS UNTO THE LORD OF HOSTS IN THE LAND OF EGYPT.

As announced in the Scriptures of His Holy Prophet Isaiah, B.C. 714.

BY H. W. BADGER.

Private in H. M. 40th Regiment, now serving in India.

INTRODUCED BY MRS. PIAZZI SMYTH.

London:

ROBERT BANKS, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.

FEBRUARY NUMBER NOW READY.

Price 2d.; Annual Subscription, 2s. 6d.

ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.

Editor: Douglas A. Onslow, J.P.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

THE FEBRUARY MONTHLY PART OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. May be had, by ordering, of any bookseller, or newsagent. Price 7d.

London: W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, E.C.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, FEB. 16, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

Just published. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA THE ROYAL SEED TO KING DAVID'S THRONE, AND ARE NOT HER SUBJECTS, THE BRITISH PEOPLE, THE TEN LOST TRIBES?

BY WILLIAM HOPTON, of Sutton Heath.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 4d., by post 4½d. Special terms for a quantity.

THE ISRAEL OF GOD.

A SERVICE OF SONG

Upon the Career and Destiny of God's Ancient People Israel. WORDS AND MUSIC.

BY C. W. E.

Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

A SUMMARY OF ANGLO-ISRAELITE TEACHING,

AND THE SCRIPTURE PROOFS ON WHICH IT RESTS.

Being a Reply to Opponents.

BY SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.

Price Twopence.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Price 8s., post free 8s. 8d., bound in blue cloth, gilt, side and back.

THE FOURTH VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

CONTAINING 520 QUARTO PAGES.

Post Office Orders to be made payable to Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or, W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

THE CHEAPEST IDENTITY VOLUME EVER PUBLISHED.

384 Demy 8vo pages, in handsome cloth, gilt, price 3s. 6d., by post 4s.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.

Edited by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.

This Volume contains Papers on all Points of the Identity of the British People with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

THE DISTRIBUTION OF SHEM, HAM, AND JAPHETH.

ISRAEL AN ARIAN SPEAKING PEOPLE.

A Paper read before the Cheltenham Anglo-Israel Association.

BY MAJOR-GENERAL A. M. RAINEY.

This Pamphlet is strongly recommended to Identity Associations and Distributors of Anglo-Israel literature. Being a complete answer to many of our objectors.

Price 2d., or 10s. per 100 for distribution.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

NEW AND IMPORTANT PAMPHLET ON THE IDENTITY OF THE LOST TEN TRIBES.

FIFTY REASONS WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES OF THE LOST TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. By REV. W. H. POOLE, D.D.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.; and all Booksellers. Price 6d., post free 7d.

Full particulars will be announced in our next week's number.

Price 8s., post free 8s. 4d. Handsome, cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES, AND 1882.

BY THE

REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD,

Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

PHILO-ISRAEL (in the BANNER) says:—"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome Identity volume. It contains twenty discourses of the well-known American divine, Dr. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, N.Y. We are glad to find from these discourses that Dr. Wild is quite one with us on this side the water with most, though not all, the views we entertain on our great and glorious subject.... We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and 'American' point of view, which is sure to interest, sure to be instructive, and may lead the thoughtless and inquiring to pursue the investigation till possibly conviction may be the result.'

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

By REV. JOSEPH WILD D.D.

With a Portrait of the Author.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE NEW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL; Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Leeds, with an Introduction and Notes; to be followed, by a Review of Mr. Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes.

By the same Author.

"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)," with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d.

"CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d., post free 4½d.

"GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 3½d.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Second Edition now ready, price 2d., post free 3½d., 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

AMMI; or, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE

BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham the "friend of God," and showing that true science history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

ROBERT BANKS'S CATALOGUE on the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Lost Ten Tribes will be sent, post free, on application. Address, Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

Now Ready, in handsome cloth, gilt, with Coloured Map, and several Illustrations, price 3s. 6d., by post 3s. 10d.

THE

GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET;

ANGLO-ISRAEL AND HIS FIRST PRINCE FOR THE HOLY LAND.

SHEWN FROM SCRIPTURE PROPHECY. WITH STRAINS FOR PALESTINE.

And "Notes on the Enemy," 2s. 6d., cloth; separately, price 1s.

NOTES ON THE ENEMY;

In a Report of a Great Meeting in London, of Ritualists and Liberationists, to Elect Fit Representatives for Parliament. With Strains for Anglo-Israel in the Holy Land. By the Rev. HIBBERT NEWTON, D.D., Vicar of St. Michael's, Southwark. Author of "Israel Discovered in the Anglo-Saxons," &c.

W. H. GUEST, WARWICK LANE, PATERNOSTER ROW.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,

High-Class Tailor,

47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.

MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 217. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1881. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Candahar	77
Jonah a Type of Ephraim-Israel. A Bible Discourse.—Part II. By John T. Gott	78
1881-6. By Rev. Denis Hanan	79
Lawlessness in the House of Commons	80
Rev. C. W. Hickson's Lecture in Clifton Church Room	81
The Rev. B. Wrey Savile Further Explains	82
Periods of Mourning. By J. Thomson	82
Review.—The Seed of Isaac	83
Correspondence	83
Identity Acrostic. No. I. By Col. M. Beresford	83

CANDAHAR.

ONE of the burning questions of the day, which will forthwith demand a final decision, is the disposal of Candahar and South Afghanistan. Will the British, who have occupied, and reconquered it after such occupation, abandon it to its fate, leave the town and country to be fought for by the rival factions of Ayoob Khan, of Herat, and Abdur Rahman, of Cabul, or will they retain possession of it by annexation? The other alternative of holding it for a native ruler of our own nomination appears to have no supporters, and may be placed outside the purview of practical politics. The Government of the day has resolved, and announced the resolution repeatedly, to abandon the place as soon as convenient, and retreat back again to the old boundaries they occupied before the Afghan war commenced in 1878. The conflict of opinion on the subject is just now very remarkable, and has been stated with so much ability and clearness by a provincial journal that we propose to quote the words for our readers' benefit.

Every consideration which weighs with military men, every consideration which weighs with statesmen, and every consideration which weighs with merchants and men of business all unite in one triumphant argument in favour of the retention of Candahar; and her Majesty's Ministers, without explaining the reasons upon which they are acting, announce their intention to relinquish Candahar at the first opportunity that presents itself. Sir Henry Rawlinson, Sir William Palliser, Sir Richard Temple, Sir Edmund Hamley, Sir G. Lawrence, Sir M. Biddulph, Professor Vambéry, Lord Strathnairn, Sir R. Egerton, Sir Henry Green, Sir Charles Reid, Sir G. Malcolm, General Massey, Lord Napier of Magdala, Sir Frederick Roberts, Sir F. P. Haines, and Sir Donald Stewart, one and all agree in holding that our grasp on Candahar ought never to be loosened, and independently of authority there are so many substantial reasons in favour of this view that it is hardly possible to comprehend the grounds upon which Mr. Gladstone and his colleagues have come to their decision to quit it without more ado the instant they can find a Sirdar to take it off their hands and to answer for order. But that is their resolution—and there is an end of the matter.

We do not think "this is the end of the matter." We believe the professional and commercial interests of the country, backed by the Indian experience of those who have to do with that Empire, will demand a full and fair consideration of this question before a step be taken, which we foresee will, if adopted, lead to consequences the most momentous and disastrous to our Empire. The advances of Russia toward India cannot be denied. The effect of Russia's approach to the Indian frontiers will, as we see by Lord Napier's minute, dated Gibraltar, October 12, 1880, greatly compromise our security in the peninsula of the heathen Empire. "Who can doubt," asks his lordship, "if we are timid, apathetic, or consenting to the course of Russian progress, that a few years will see them in possession of a fortress in Herat, which in their hands will be rendered impregnable, and will command the road to India with a facility for aggression, which may be measured by Ayoob Khan's rapid march to Candahar?"

The Times correspondent's report of the state of affairs, published on January 31, 1881, is clear and distinct, meeting the plan of the Government with the decided condemnation of the secular opinion on the spot, in words which for future use and record we must insert here. He says:—

Very possibly there will be a contest for Candahar between the two rivals, who are now established respectively at the important points of Cabul and Herat. Neither can afford to allow the other to continue in undisturbed possession of either of these bases of operations, and a successful initiative will probably decide the contest. It is most doubtful whether the British Government, its troops once withdrawn, can make any arrangements for a peaceful settlement of the country. Now that Geok Tepe has fallen, and the road to Merv is practically opened, Russian influence will have taken the place of ours, and, in all probability, next Summer will see us helpless spectators of a state of anarchy in Afghanistan, with both the contending parties looking to our great rival for help and not to us. It is difficult to over-estimate the effect which this will have on the British prestige, not in Central Asia only, but also in every native court and bazaar in India.

What, then, is likely to be the end of the present complication? Is it credible that the British Government, supported as it is by the Times, and probably the Liberal majority, will venture, in spite of the danger thus clearly pointed out by the military and political experts here and abroad, to throw up all the fruits secured by the late wars at so great an expense of blood and treasure? We think it very probable. For we know well that wars, and troubles, and commotions in India are the only way by which the Government of this country will be divinely impelled further to "scatter" its military forces. We foresee that with the resolution to reject God's good gifts to His people, of the Afghan Gates (those avennes by which the messengers of Christ's mercy to the Afghan nation might approach them), there will follow in India troubles, and commotions, and insurrections fomented by the Russians, which will force us, driven by dire necessity, to augment the large European force at present garrisoning the Indian Empire. This will help to "scatter the power of the holy people"—British-Israel—more effectually. We doubt not, then, that our present rulers are raised up just to carry out an apparently suicidal policy, the end and object of which will be the further dispersion of our already too scattered army. It is garrisoning Ireland to the extent of 30,000 men to-day. It is warring in the Transvaal, and is likely to be 15,000 strong there before we can afford to recall these troops home. India employs over 50,000 British troops even now; but with Russia thundering at the Gates, and the British hastening to get out of the way to save their pockets, we expect to hear of native risings caused by the natural conclusion which the Sikhs, Hindoos, and Musselmans of North India may be pardoned for entertaining —namely, that we have thrown up conquests that have cost us thirty millions sterling, and thousands of precious British lives, driven by the fear of the approaching Russian troops before whom Central Asia has fallen, and British troops are retreating. God's ways are past finding out! but judging by the mistakes of the Government of the day in Ireland, in the East, as well as with reference to their foreign policy in general, we cannot but anticipate that the Lord is using their timid and retrograde purposes to carry out the ends which were announced by Daniel, and are finding their fulfilment in the year of grace, 1881.

Digitized by Google

We have lately been asked how we were justified in speaking and writing of the Afghan Gates as permanently British possessions, as we did in our leading article in vol. iii. page 46.

We reply, that God has given us the Gates everywhere (Gen. xxii. 17). The Afghan Gates He especially transferred to our keeping by treaty and by conquest. Cabul, Candahar, Jellallabad, the Kurum Valley, the Bolan Passes, with the Khyber, He placed in our charge, with the injunction that by those doors the messages of mercy to the Afghan race might enter in the name of Jesus (Psa. ii. 10). "His gifts and His callings are without repentance" (Rom. xi. 29). We no more doubt, therefore, that these Gates, once given to us, will be permanently ours, in spite of the temporary relinquishment of them under a policy which seems right to Mr. Gladstone now, than we doubt that the Holy Land is now British-Israel's and Judah's (with Manasseh's) possession, though for 1800 years the alien has trampled on the soil, and the children of the chosen race have been outcasts from the inheritance. We think, therefore, that Candahar is a British Gate to-day, to all intents and purposes; and even if Mr. Gladstone should, for a time, force the House of Israel to cast aside a true gift of God, mercifully granted to the nation, we are content to know in the exercise of faith, that this Gate is really ours now, and will be ours FOR EVER, in pursuance of that ancient title-deed which recites, "Thy seed shall possess the Gate of His enemies" (Gen. xxii. 17). "Israel, praise YE the Lord."

WE are glad to report the delivery of a lecture by Mr. Wm. Moss, of Chorley, in the Wesleyan School, Eccleston, on Monday, November 8, 1880, on the subject of our Identity. The room was crowded; Mr. T. Norris was in the chair. The latter admitted that the subject was "attaining a deep and absorbing interest among the English-speaking races;" a fact patent to all men. The lecture, which was fully reported in the Chorley Standard of November 13, now before us, was a very excellent one, traversing our whole subject; and, no doubt, greatly advanced God's cause at Eccleston. We are unable to quote the report in our crowded columns, but we trust, ere long, as the result of Mr. Moss's able lecture, to hear that an Eccleston Branch of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association has been established there, and is flourishing to God's glory.

JONAH A TYPE OF EPHRAIM-ISRAEL.

A BIBLE DISCOURSE.

BY JOHN T. GOTT.

(Continued from page 73.)

PART II.

THE lots were cast, and Jonah was taken. In all this, none saw the finger of God more clearly than did the prophet. Guilty and condemned he stands before an eager group of questioners.

How his conscience must have been stung, and his heart smitten, as he answered one after the other. One thing we must observe, now that his spiritual feeling is roused, his confession is as unreserved as his sin had been openly monstrous.

What is thine occupation?

A prophet of the Most High God.

Whence comest thou?

From the mountains of Lebanon, where grow the fragrant cedars in all their kingly glory.

What is thy country?

Palestine, wherein is Mount Zion, the place which Jehovah hath chosen. It is the city of our God. It is the mountain of His holiness. It is beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth!

Of what people art thou?

I am a Hebrew, one of God's chosen people, one of the seed of Abraham. (Mark, he does not say he was an Israelite. That was a name used only among themselves. Among foreigners they were known as Hebrews.)

For whose cause is this evil upon us?

I am a backsliding Hebrew; a deserter from my country; a disobedient, runaway prophet, seeking, in great fear, to flee from the presence of Him who hath made the heavens and the earth, the sea and all that therein is (ver. 9).

Then the mariners were exceedingly afraid, and said unto him, Why hast thou done this? These heathen mariners were not slow to perceive Jonah's inconsistency. To them it seemed passing strange for a prophet to flee from his God, a God, through whose power such a terrible storm had arisen about them. Jonah sought the sea to aid him in his flight. God made the sea the instrument of his punishment. The storm grew more and more tempestuous, and the fear of the mariners waxed greater and greater. Therefore they said unto Jonah, What shall we do unto thee, that the sea may be calm unto us? And he said, Take me up and cast me forth into the sea. So shalt the sea be calm unto you: for I know that for my sake this great tempest is upon you.

This the mariners seemed reluctant to do, for they struggled hard to bring the ship to land, but could not. They show a more merciful consideration for one man's life than the prophet did, when he declined to preach repentance to the Ninevites, who were so many thousands, that knew not good from evil.

The fear of the God of the Hebrews fell upon these heathen mariners. Having offered up a prayer that innocent blood might not be laid upon them, they cast Jonah into the sea; and lo! the sea stood still. And we read that the men feared exceedingly, and offered a sacrifice unto the Lord, and vowed vows.

Now let us pause to consider in what respects this portion of Jonah's history resembles the history of Ten-Tribed Israel—of Ephraim the silly dove.

The mission of the chosen people was the same as Jonah's, and their wilful disobedience was also the same. The prophet Jeremiah makes this very plain. "As the girdle cleaveth to the loins of a man, so have I caused to cleave unto Me the whole House of Israel and the whole House of Judah, saith the Lord: that they might be unto Me for a people, and for a name, and for a praise, and for a glory: but they would not hear" (Jer. xiii. 11).

Digitized by Google

The flight of the prophet Jonah has its counterpart in the backsliding propensities of the Ten Tribes. The same impetuous, self-willed character caused the Father to hide His face from them, to withdraw from them His divine favour and protection, and to leave them to their own evil devices. Like Jonah, they departed from the land hallowed by so many sacred memories, without any signs of compunction. Their captivity in Assyria was no more a place of safety for them than was the ship in which Jonah took refuge. They might there have slept the sleep of careless indifference, just as Jonah did, but they were aroused from their lethargy in the same manner as Jonah was. A storm burst over Assyria, of such a furious character, that the empire suddenly "vanished from the earth" (according to Dean Stanley). This was all predicted. Ezekiel xxxi. describes the great glory of the Assyrian empire, and also her fall—a fall that made all the nations of the earth to shake. It was during this invasion of Assyria that the Ten Tribes were cast out.

As Jonah was cast out of the ship, so were the Ten Tribes cast out of Assyria.

As Jonah disappeared in the mighty deep, and virtually came to his end, so far as the mariners knew, so did the Ten Tribes disappear and become dead to all the nations upon earth.

We read that God prepared a fish to swallow up Jonah. It did not mean that this fish was a special object of creation, but that, in the order of Divine Providence, it was there for a special purpose. Now a certain class of thinkers, who, for decency's sake, shall be nameless, have made much capital out of this fish. In the New Testament the fish is called a whale. This is a mistranslation. Three or four hundred years ago the whale was known as a great fish, and the error is thus not an unreasonable one. In these latter days we have a greater knowledge of natural history. We now know that the throat of a whale is too narrow to receive a man. Now the question comes, Is there any fish in the mighty ocean that can swallow a man? In very early times the dog-fish was known to have that capacity, one having been caught in whose stomach was found a man clad in armour. The white shark is more likely to be the fish signified, as it has the capacity for swallowing a man, and has no choice between swallowing its prey whole, and cutting off a portion of it. There was a miracle in this, for Jonah entered into a living tomb. And thus the prophet became a sign, according to the testimony of the Son of God, a sign throughout all time. And if there is anything strangely miraculous in the disobedient prophet being buried out of sight for three days and three nights in that living tomb—the white shark's belly—how much more miraculously strange is it, that the Ten Tribes of Israel should be cast out of Assyria and buried in their graves for nearly three prophetic days, or 3,000 years.

Thus does the prophet Hosea predict that the Israelites will exhort one another to seek the Lord in the latter days, "Come, and let us return unto the Lord, for He hath torn, and He will heal us: He hath smitten, and He will bind us up. After two days He will revive us—i.e., after 2,000 years, or two prophetic days—In the third day He will raise us up, and we shall live in His sight (vi. 1, 2). Now you will observe that two days are spent in utter unconsciousness, or sleep. After that period Jehovah promised to revive Ten-Tribed Israel as He revived Jonah in his living tomb.

In computing this time, we must be careful to notice the difference between Eastern modes and our own. With us three days and three nights mean 72 hours. But it is not so in Eastern lands even to day. Dr. Robinson, the missionary, says that he found "five days" of quarantine really meant "three whole days and portions of two others." Among the Hebrews of old, the same method of reckoning time was adopted. Aben Ezra remarks that if an infant were born in the last hour of the day, such hour was counted for a whole day. A child born in the last week of December would be reckoned a year old on the first day of January, because he was born in the old year. Such methods of computing time always prevailed among orientals, and do so still.

Now although 3,000 years have not elapsed since Ten-Tribed Israel was buried in the earth, dead and lost to the ken of man, buried in a living tomb, the second prophetic day has passed when this same people shall have been revived, and the third day has dawned, the day that is to witness this people standing on their feet before the God of Israel, an exceeding great army, the living monuments of His great mercy. This is God's "strange work," "His marvellous work," the work that He has declared by the prophets of old, He will bring about in the midst of Israel in the latter days.

(To be continued.)

1881·6.

By the Rev. Denis Hanan.

"But it must be allowed just to join abstract reasonings with the observation of facts, and argue from such facts as are known, to others that are like them."—Bishop Butler's "Analogy."

When a body in motion—e.g., a railway train—is suddenly stopped, either by accident or design, the result is a shock, too often a catastrophe, and we instinctively recognise that there has been either a want of judgment on the part of the driver, or a combination of circumstances which were not foreseen. Appointed stations there must be upon a long journey, but because foreseen and provided for we arrive and depart, often without knowing that we do so.

So it is with the works of God in nature. The sun and moon are for signs and seasons, and for days and years; they mark them surely, evenly, without jar or break; the hands of the great dial move, but no clanging bell calls attention to the recurring periods. And so it is also with the history of God's dealings with man. Sudden breaks—catastrophes—have been so few, that it may be safely said of them that the exception proves the rule; the flood, and the destruction of the cities of the plain, are the apparent exceptions. God's punishments have been many and marked in other instances, but we can trace their gradual preparation and their natural sequence; when they had passed, they told off distinct periods, but during their infliction it needed the prophetic ear to recognise in them the stroke which noted that a day of grace had come and gone.

And this seems to be invariably true of God's times of blessing; no trumpet blast ushers them in; the promise was given in the germ, it grew and expanded gradually, the dew of God's blessing, the light of His truth, the development of His purpose, caused dispensation to pass into dispensation, and prophetic times to be fulfilled, surely, but without anything to mark the exact phase of change at the time of its occurrence.

History fixes on certain occurrences, and sharply marks the periods; fulfilled prophecy explains its own starting-points; but when the patriarchal age passed into the Mosaic, and when that developed into the Christian, those who were actors in the scene could only note what they observed, and ponder them in their hearts; no violent break occurred.

As in written history epochs are marked, so in that marvellous history or prophecy, expressed in unchanging number and imbedded in stone, the dispensations are told off in a way which would seem to imply that the transitions were and would be unmistakable; the change from a descending to an ascending passage, the transition from four-and-a-half feet high to twenty-six are sudden and definite, and if we forget the lessons which analogy gives, if forgetful of what the book of nature and the Bible teach, we may read false meanings from the pillar in the land of Egypt.

The inch chronology marks the transition from the low ascending passage to the Grand Gallery as A.D. 1; then the

Digitized by Google

Christian age began, "The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us;" but so little was there to mark the change, that the world's history has but imperfectly recorded the date.

The Grand Gallery ends as abruptly; and doubtless its ending marks an era. But many write and speak as if the clock of time was now to be furnished with a bell, and that,—

"All at once, with twelve great shocks of sound, the shameless noon," will be

"Clashed and hammered from a hundred towers."

So much so, that if the method of God's working hitherto be not departed from, and a marked change be not apparent during say 1882, A.D., the Pyramid witness will be disregarded by them.

It is well for us to think soberly and according to the analogy of that which has been already manifested. And, as if the Pyramid had been open at A.D. 1, the sudden change in height would have caused mistaken hopes and consequent disappointment, so now it may be impossible for us to say what the sudden change to the low 52-inch passage imports; or, if we can judge of its import, to tell where, when, or how the present age merges into the future.

The hope of the Church of Christ, as in St. Paul's day, so ever since, so to-day, has been, is, and is to be, the meeting with her Lord; but if He seems to tarry, wait, for He will surely come.

Hope is stimulated by the reasonable prospect that this age is near its close, but a mischievous excitement is checked, patience is permitted to have her perfect work, and disappointment is not courted, when the analogy of the past acts as a compensating balance upon the most legitimate conjectures concerning the hidden future.

Yet the future is so far revealed that we must look forward to a catastrophe similar in its suddenness to the woes that came in the days of Noah and of Lot. Our Lord's words make this certain. Then "the one shall be taken and the other shall be left;" then upon the "kingdoms of the earth" shall be poured out the "fierce anger" of the Lord; and the impending South wall is a silent beacon, warning God's people to come out, and it would seem that as the flood did not come until Noah was shut in, as the angels could "do nothing" until Lot had escaped, so the safety of God's people must be secured before the final vial of woe is poured out. That safety has a national and a spiritual aspect. Israel is to be shut in within her doors, nationally, and many of God's waiting people are to be called into that safe and blessed company which is "the first-fruits unto God and to the Lamb," rapt up to meet Him.

For this latter event our Lord and Master tells us to be ever ready, it has ever been imminent to faith; it is now impending, and we dare not say, or even imply, that it will be delayed until 1882, any more than we could say that it will not be imminent if unaccomplished when 1882 passes.

I have stated above what seems certain to me—viz., that the date 1881·6 marks an era. I see plainly that a catastrophe, a woe sudden and terrible, is to come. I know that the Lord Jesus will summon His waiting people to meet Him in the air. I understand that Israel is to be preserved, and is to be God's executive. I believe that our national blindness as to our covenant relationship is soon to be removed. Attendant circumstances will doubtless accompany each and all of these stupendous developments, we cannot expect them all to be brought about in a day, or a month, or a year. We cannot say which will come first; and most probably we shall not be able to tell at once which particular act will mark the first step in the transition from this age to the next; although I doubt not but that the historians of the future will see reason to take the Pyramid date.

The catastrophe coming upon apostate Christendom is awfully imminent. The chastisements that may be necessary to make Israel enter into her chambers and close her doors, may even now be upon us. The resurrection from among the dead, and the rapture of the saints is, we hope, blessedly near; it would be wilful folly to overlook the Pyramid warning, but far greater to permit our estimate of its import make us forget to-day, and until their accomplishment, the immediate application of the words, "Therefore be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh."

LAWLESSNESS IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THE scenes which occurred in the Lower House of Israel's legislature on Thursday evening, February 3, when the whole of the Home Rule Irish members had to be removed from the House by force, and open refusal to obey the rules and established procedure of the assembly was manifested by the rebellious Irishmen, are signs that the spirit of "the lawless one" has invaded the Commons as well as the Church of England and the sister island. The St. James's Chronicle, of February 4, says about the facts what follows:—

The Daily Telegraph says that no language can adequately describe the profound chasm which has been suddenly opened between the past and the future history of the great English House of Commons. The chain of noble traditional and recorded usages has been broken, and from last night a new era in our hitherto unsullied Parliamentary annals will begin. The causes which have produced events so ominous of coming trouble and division are many and complex. They may too surely be traced back, however, to rash words and an outburst of party spirit and ambition for place never exceeded; but the immediate cause is the presence in the House of a purely revolutionary faction, which came there for its own factious and selfish ends, which was organised for the purposes it has endeavoured to execute, which entered the arena determined to pervert the rules and disown the spirit animating the only possible conditions of parliamentary government. What the Land League is and has been in Ireland ever since Mr. Davitt set it on foot—a machine designed to upset or overbear the law—such the Land League has been in the British House of Commons.

The design, then, is "to upset and overbear the law." The very spirit of the lawless one has therefore invaded the country as well as our legislative assembly. And, such being the case, we accept it as a sign that the Lord is at hand (2 Thess. ii. 8). He, and He alone, will be able to consume and destroy this enemy, and He will do it "by the brightness of His coming," "by the Spirit of His mouth." Our longings, therefore, should be—and we are satisfied, are—for the speedy advent of the Lord. His return is the harbinger of the outpouring of His Spirit on His people, and the cure of all their woes. When He comes, the "lawlessness" of the senate, in the Church, and among the Irish, will dissolve and disappear. Ephraim's woe will not prevail any more at all. The social evil will be no more heard of, and will be eradicated from our body politic. Fraud and falsehood, theft and robbery, Sabbath-breaking, and vice of all kinds, will give place to godly and clean living among the masses, and the nation cleansed will be the righteous one (Jer. xxxi. 33; Isa. lx. 21; Heb. viii. 10).

THE COLONIZATION OF PALESTINE.—The Jewish Chronicle says:—In Mr. Laurence Oliphant's forthcoming work, "The Land of Gilead," he will, we understand, advocate a beginning of the "repatriation" of the Jews, by the settlement, under the auspices of a land company, of a considerable number of Jews from Eastern Europe and Asia in an agricultural colony situated in the territory which formerly belonged to the Tribes of Reuben and Gad. Mr. Oliphant had travelled in Turkey in 1855, 1860, and 1862; but last year he left this country in February for Syria, with the special object of acquiring the local knowledge which his previous experience in colonization showed him to be necessary. It is the result of these recent travels that he will give in "The Land of Gilead." A hundred families in Roumania have recently addressed letters to the editor of the Jewish Chronicle, in which they beg for assistance to settle in Palestine, and offer to provide themselves half the capital required, and repay the rest if lent.

Digitized by Google

THE REV. C. W. HICKSON'S LECTURE IN THE CLIFTON CHURCH ROOM.

On December 17, 1880, the Rev. C. W. Hickson lectured at the above rooms in Clifton, on the following thesis,—

"WHY I AM AN ANGLO-ISRAELITE."

After some preliminary remarks, the rev. lecturer, who had been introduced by the chairman, Philo-Israel, said that a syllogism was often accounted a bad way of proving anything, but he was of a different opinion, and thought if founded on truth a syllogism was a very good way of presenting the evidence of facts. He was himself led to believe in our Identity, not because history, ethnic sciences, and philology asserted its truth, but because the Bible did so. He ventured to think the following syllogism, then, accurately gave the reason why, as reasonable God-fearing men, we ought to receive the Identity:—

1. (As the major premiss.) "God gave exclusively to Abraham and his seed for ever certain promises and blessings.
2. (As the minor premiss.) "We British enjoy exclusively to-day all the said blessings and promises.
3. "Therefore, we British are the seed of Abraham."

Is there anything wrong in that logic? If so, he would like to know where the error lay. We are often referred, said the lecturer, to Gal. iii. 16, as evidence that our views are incorrect, since St. Paul tells us, "Abraham's seed is Christ." But reference to that text shows there was a contrast drawn there between Abraham's "seeds as of many"—his many sons, Ishmael, and the sons of Keturah—and the "one seed" by Sarah, of whom it was said to him by God Himself, "In Isaac shall thy seed be called."

The seed of Isaac was "headed up in Christ," who in this passage represents not the Man Christ Jesus alone, but the federal Head of a race—"Christ and His people" in fact. The lecturer then carefully examined the particulars of the Abrahamic covenants, showing how they all responded to, and had their fulfilments in, the British nation. He enumerated fourteen such benedictions recorded in the book of Genesis only. In regard to Gen. xii. 2 he pointed out what few observed—namely, that God Himself said Abraham's seed should develop into a "great" nation, and when He said so thus emphatically, the meaning surely was that that nation should be the very greatest of all nations. Commenting on Gen. xii. 2, 3, the lecturer pointed out that Israel was destined to be the honoured agent for the Gospel propagation in the Christian dispensation —our days—and not in the millennium, as our opponents allege. No abeyance in the function was provided for, nor any transfer of the agency between the two advents, in the Scriptures.

As Israel was "formed for Himself" by the Lord, and that race was "to blossom and bud, and to fill the face of the world with fruit," the lecturer held that the Hebrews must now be fulfilling the Abrahamic covenant, and propagating the Gospel to less favoured races.

He showed, from reference to Gen. xlix., that the promises given en bloc to Abraham were divided among Jacob's twelve sons, Judah having promise of the kingdom, the sceptre, and the Messiah; Joseph being endowed with the heirship to the birthright, or "double portion," and the temporalities. In reference to Gen. xv. 13, 14, and the detention of Israel in Egypt for 400 years, Mr. Hickson viewed this as a sort of recurring prophecy, and pointed to Ezek. iv. as a remarkable prediction, showing that this period of 400 years was very nearly fulfilled again after Israel was cast out into Media. The 390 years represented by the 390 days the prophet lay on his left side for the sins of the House of Israel, the lecturer said began to run in B.C. 721, the time when the kingdom of Israel was removed; and at the expiration of 390 years from that date, or in B.C. 331, the battle of Arbela was fought, giving Israel the desired opportunity, on the consequent destruction of the Persian Empire by Alexander, to escape from their captivity. From that time God's favour began to return to Israel, and the Lord was with them, blessing them increasingly, as their little Sanctuary, until He brought them in safety to these isles of the West. The forty years the prophet lay on his right side for Judah's iniquity, began to be fulfilled in the year that that House was carried captive to Babylon. In 2 Kings xxv. 27, the termination of the forty years punishment is recorded to have begun in the thirty-seventh year of the captivity of Jehoiachim, king of Judah, in the twelfth month, and the twenty-seventh day of the month; and the amelioration of the king's condition, answering probably also to his captive people's, is described in these words:—

1. "The head of the king of Judah was lifted up out of prison;"
2. "The king of Babylon spoke kindly to him;" and,
3. "He set his throne above the throne of the kings that were with him in Babylon."

The time thus answered to the prophecy in Ezek. iv. 6, and thenceforth the period of Judah's trial passed away. Mr. Hickson, further commenting on the prophecies favouring the seed of Abraham, pointed out that the objections of our opponents regarding our views as to the "Gate of his enemies" was groundless; since, by the genius of the Hebrew language, the word "Gate" embraced the plural "Gates," and so answered to our British position, which was that of the holder of many Gates of, and in, our many enemies' lands.

With reference to the objection of some that the promises cannot be fulfilled to Israel alone, without including Judah too, and that, in fact, they were for the Twelve Tribes in union, but not otherwise, the lecturer reminded his hearers that when Israel was deported and denationalised, men agreed that God's purposes of mercy to Abraham's seed were carried out (representatively of the Twelve) to Two Tribes only, as Hosea i. 7 and xi. 12 proved; for then "Judah yet ruled with God, and was faithful with the saints."

If, then, it is admitted that in Israel's absence Judah enjoyed the promises, why, said Mr. Hickson, are we wrong in declaring with reference to Jer. xxxi. 36, that now Judah is under the cloud, Israel must be standing in the sunshine of God's favour, and basking in the promises, to fulfil them also representatively?

The lecturer, finally, quoting from a pamphlet since published in the BANNER, and the work of Canon Blake Brownrigg, of Tasmania, pointed out that Israel, as separated from Judah, was the exclusive heir of many great and special promises. Gen. xlviii. 19 described some of these; so does Gen. xlix. 22 —26; and Deut. xxxiii. 13—17. These were not enjoyed by Ephraim (the head of the Ten Tribes), exclusively, before the disruption, as facts and the Bible testify, and they cannot be destined to be enjoyed by Ephraim after the joinder of the two sticks in millennial days, for then the Tribes will "all share and share alike" (Ezek. xxxvii. 22). We are tied up then, argued the lecturer, to the conclusion that in the interim between the two advents—that is, now—Ephraim must be found, as the British are found, fulfilling the special Ten-Tribe prophecies indicated in the above passages, and also in Zech. x. 7—10, etc., given only to them as apart and separated from the House of Judah.

Such are a few of the telling salient points of a very excellent lecture, listened to with great attention by an appreciative audience. Such lectures and lecturers are calculated to serve our cause very admirably; and we trust they may be multiplied not only here, but over the whole of the lands where the Anglo-Saxons are located, for we are confident such expositions of God's truth make, as they are bound to make, for GOD'S GLORY.

THE Rev. W. H. Poole's pamphlet, "Fifty Reasons Why the Anglo-Saxons are Israelites," is now ready. For particulars see advertisement on last page.

Digitized by Google

THE REV. B. WREY SAVILE FURTHER EXPLAINS.

THE Record newspaper of January 7, 1881, published the following explanation of his change of views, submitted to that journal by the Rev. B. W. Savile, in reference to some remarks on his late pamphlet by the reviewer. It is clear from Mr. Savile's letter, 1st. That his pamphlet did not give to the Record a satisfactory explanation of his tergiversation; and 2nd. That Mr. Savile really had no solid rational grounds for his change of sentiments when he wrote his late book, since the sole reason for his recantation now put forward was not so much as hinted at in the publication we recently reviewed. Mr. S., in fact, did not, we suppose, know it then himself! What is the cause, then, now newly alleged, of his change of views? The reader will with surprise peruse it in Mr. Savile's own words. They are as follows:—

ANGLO-ISRAELITISM AND THE GREAT PYRAMID.

SIR,—In reference to your notice of my pamphlet on the above subject, may I be permitted to explain that the chief cause of my changed views arises from having discovered the very serious mistake which I had originally committed when investigating the ethnographical branch of the theory. I supposed it possible that the Beth-Khumri on the Nimroud Obelisk in the British Museum, which all cuneiform scholars agree in identifying with the Tribes of Israel, deported by the kings of Assyria in the 7th and 8th centuries B.C. to "the cities of the Medes," might be the same people as "the Cimmerians," who are mentioned in a cuneiform inscription, also in the British Museum, as having been conquered by Esar-haddon when dwelling on the borders of Media. Rawlinson admits the identity of the Cimbri of the Romans, or Cimmerians of the inscriptions, with the Cymry of Wales, "as an historical fact upon the grounds stated by Niebuhr and Arnold." The letter y in Welsh sounds as u, except when final, when it has the sound of the Italian i; and hence the name of Wales might have been pronounced in ancient times as near as possible to the land of the Khymry, or Cymry. But it by no means follows, as I once thought, that the Khumri and the Khymry, or Cymry or Cimmerians, alike found in the cuneiform inscriptions, represented one and the same people. I have recently had an opportunity of obtaining a transcript from the British Museum, made by an experienced cuneiform scholar, of these two names, and find they have only one single letter in common —the letter a; hence there is less identity between the Khumri or House of Israel, and the Cymry or primogenitors of the ancient Britons, than there is between Persia and Russia, who are as distinct as a Semitic and Japhetic race necessarily must be.

Faithfully yours,

BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE
(Rector of Shillingford).

January 3.

It pleases Mr. Savile now to call the present name of the land of the Welsh the land of the Khymry or Cymry. But at page 22 of "Are We Israelites?" he declared "that the correct pronunciation of the country Wales, or land of the Cymry, in its ancient tongue, would be as near as possible to the names Kumree, Khumree, or Khumri," the very name of Israel, or the BETH-KHUMRI of the Assyrian monuments. The inspection, it seems, of the transcript of two words made by some third party (unnamed) from the British Museum, has shown Mr. Savile that the two designations which read, both of them, KHUMRI, are alike only in a single letter.

Is this a valid ground for upsetting an opinion founded on, 1st. The Scriptural argument; 2nd. On the admitted ethnic fact that the ancestors of the Welsh Khumri were contemporaries of the Hebrew Beth-Khumri in Assyria; 3rd. On the fact that the Khumri of Wales possess to-day all the blessings God Himself gave to Beth-Khumri in His inspired Word; and 4th. On the fact that Mr. Savile wholly fails to show if the Beth-Khumri of the Assyrian monuments were not the progenitors of the Khumri-Saxons of Great Britain to-day, what has become of the House of Israel? He does not show why the Gentile British have usurped all the gifts, promises, and covenants God swore to give exclusively to the Beth-Khumri of Samaria, or at least to that Semitic race alone.

Until these points are cleared up, we decline to accept Mr. Savile's newly forged shaft, and deem it just as unsatisfactory an explanation to emanate from a clergyman of the Church of England as anything that has yet appeared in his late pamphlet. For it comes finally to this. If Mr. Savile be right, and the ethno-philological reason, now newly assigned, suffices to prove the Japhetic origin of the modern British races, then it is clear God's oath "to Abraham and his seed for ever" has been abrogated; the unconditional covenant with the patriarch (unconditional because it was the reward of past obedience—Gen. xxii. 18) has been cancelled for no reason discoverable from the Word of God; and, in opposition to His attributes, God's gifts and callings are found to be with, but not without repentance; His promises are voidable; His purposes declared to Abraham and his seed under the Divine sanctions of the most solemn oaths "for ever" have changed; and what was once held out to the father of the faithful as the inheritance of his seed (the Beth-Khumri of Samaria), has been bodily transferred to the Khumri of Wales and to the Saxons their brethren, a race of the Japhetic Cimmerian blood, aliens from Israel, Gentiles, to whom God never gave a single national promise that we have yet been able to trace in the Holy Scriptures! We say to all this, "God forbid." Mr. Savile, then, as the result of all these considerations, must be wrong again; as we know he has latterly been wrong throughout in the matter of our Identity.

PERIODS OF MOURNING.

BY J. THOMSON.

IN this country it is an almost universal custom to mourn (or wear the habiliments of mourning) twelve months on the death of a near relative; sometimes the period is shortened, and sometimes lengthened, but these are exceptional cases, the average being, as just remarked, twelve months for nearest relatives, while a shorter period, proportionate to their consanguinity, is observed for others. How long this custom has obtained among us we do not know, probably from "time immemorial." Also what was its origin, seems equally conjectural. But from the "Talmud," we learn that this custom is at least as old as the time of Jacob, and probably Abraham, if not older. Thus we read:—

"When the lads (i.e., Esau and Jacob) were about fifteen years old, Abraham died at the age of one hundred and seventy-one years. And when the inhabitants of Canaan learned of his decease, they, with all its kings and princes, hastened to do honour to his remains, and all his relatives who lived in Charan, and the sons of his concubines came also to the funeral. And Isaac and Ishmael buried him in the cave of Machpelah, and all who knew him mourned for him a year." *

Again, when Jacob died, we read that he "was buried in the cave of Machpelah, and the sons of Esau witnessed the interment. For seven days Joseph and his brethren remained in their houses, mourning, and not attending to their usual avocations; and after this, though they discharged their daily duties, they mourned for twelve months; and since that time such has been the custom of the Jews on the death of a near relative." †

Thus, according to the testimony of the "Talmud," the custom of the Jews, in this respect, ever since the death of Jacob, is the same as that which is prevalent among us. If this does not point to identity of origin, to what does it point? Contact between the nations? But is it likely that we should borrow this custom from the Jews? If it is, when was it done? If a particular time cannot with certainty be fixed upon, a probable one, at least, should be found. And finally, has any other nation this custom in common with us and the Jews?—a query this, which we would like answered, for we confess it is beyond our present knowledge.

THE SUPERNATURAL.—In our article under this heading, in our issue of the 2nd inst., we stated that the startling message, "The Messiah is on the earth, Judge and King," was from a spiritualist. The sender, writing again, wishes distinctly and emphatically to repudiate the appellation of "spiritualist," and any connection with spiritualism whatsoever.

* Polano's "Talmud," p. 57. † Ibid. p. 117.

Digitized by Google

Review.

The Seed of Isaac. Being a historical review of God's dealings with His chosen people Israel. By J. D. Granger. T. W. Hoppins, 42, Southside, Plymouth; R. Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, and the author, 34, Exeter-street, Plymouth. Price 4s., post free.

BY THE EDITOR.

WE have refrained from noticing this remarkable book before, because as soon as it was published we inserted in our pages a very favourable review of it from the pen of our fellow labourer, Captain H. P. Keighly (vol. iv., p. 518), and we deemed it desirable to wait till the work had become better known before we noticed it ourselves. We consider the appearance of Mr. Granger's work most opportune, as it furnishes us with the very answer we wanted to refute the Rev. B. Wrey Savile's attack upon our Identity, as a pervert from our ranks. One of the objects of this book is to prove that the Gimri Sacæ of Media, mentioned by Rawlinson (Herodotus i. p. 411), were identical with the Beth Khumri, whose Hebrew origin is admitted. Mr. Granger works out this portion of the problem with the most admirable research and painstaking care. It is precisely that view of the case which interests us most. In Mr. Savile's refutation of himself, lately published, it will be remembered that he based his change of views chiefly on the assumption that the Scythians being Japhetic in origin, the Saxons and Cymry, who were derived from them, must be Japhetic too. Mr. Granger herein differs from him toto cœlo. He finds (and there is an immense deal of evidence adduced to prove the fact) that the European Scythians were not of the same race as the Sacæ (pp. 78—92); that the origin of the latter was Semitic, whereas that of the Scythians was Japhetic. The tables prepared by Mr. Granger on this point on pp. 86—92, are most instructive, and should be carefully perused by the reader. The result arrived at is that the term "Scythia, or Scythian, in the primary sense by which Herodotus defined it, is by no means applicable to the Sacæ of Asia, or to the exiles of Israel. The term Scythian was one under which Grecian ignorance sheltered itself. Whatever was unknown Northward was called Scythian" (p. 92). Our author identifies the Sacæ who overran Armenia, Bactria, &c., with the "Syrians of Palestine," of Herodotus, a people of Shemitic origin, as proved by their practice of circumcision; and, tracing their descent, he connects them with the Saxons, or, as Camden terms them, the "sons of the Sacæ," who came over into Britain. In his concluding chapters (xxii., &c.), our author gives us a résumé of the evidence, proving the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon and Danish ancestors of the modern British with the Israelites in respect to language, manners, customs, religious observances, time-reckoning, &c., all points in which, singularly enough, the Rev. B. W. Savile declares that our case is insufficiently fortified, though in truth, as Mr. Granger shows, it is therein particularly strong. The concluding chapter of our author's work is an admirable answer to the stupid "Cui Bono?" inquiry; and we are glad to see he replies to the question by appeal to God's Word, and thus gives the true and only response the case demands. We foresee that Mr. Granger's book will become a standard authority on the historical portion of the evidence on which our Identity is founded. We recommend, therefore, to our friends that they add it to their libraries, as a valuable vade mecum wherewith to arm themselves in dealing with our opponents, who, on their own favourite ground, the historical and ethnic arguments, are met and overpowered by Mr. Granger's prodigious research, and by his careful manipulation of the facts of the case, as that research presented them to him.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL, — It having been suggested that the Wimbledon Anglo-Israel Association should extend its operations into the surrounding neighbourhood, it has occurred to some that it might advantageously be formed into an Association for the county; local secretaries being appointed wherever friends of the cause reside. I hope soon to call a meeting to consider this. I may add, I know of believers in "our Identity," residing at Streatham, Tooting, Denmark-hill, Tulse-hill, Peckham, Mortlake, Richmond, New Malden, East Molesey, Guildford and Godalming. I shall endeavour to ascertain their views that I may have something definite to place before the meeting.

In the meantime can you afford room (the sooner the better) in the BANNER, to ventilate the idea, so that friends residing in any other part of Surrey may hear of it, and give us their opinion? I shall be very glad to hear from anyone on the subject, and also to give any information. Believe me, yours sincerely,

New Wimbledon, February 2, 1881. JESSIE LAWRENCE.

A CORRECTION AND A STATEMENT.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Will you allow me to correct a slight mistake in the BANNER for February 2. You make it appear as if St. Helens were a town in Cornwall, and myself a manager of some of the Cornish lead and tin mines. It is not so. St. Helens is in Lancashire, a town of some 60,000 people, situated twenty-one miles from Manchester, and eleven miles from Liverpool. I am not, and never was, a manager of the Cornish mines, but for thirty-six years I have had the management of Yorkshire and Lancashire coal mines. As you say, I am the author of a work entitled "Conversations on Mines between a Father and Son," the sixth edition of 20,000 copies (3s. each), is now in the hands of the mining public. I only became a convert a short time ago to the belief in our Israelitish origin. The theory appears not to have been known, except only to one or two persons, before I gave the lecture in St. Helens. The newspapers in the district all published a very favourable account at the time the lecture was given. When the people were informed they were all Israelites, the news came upon them like a thunderclap. No minister or clergyman, to my knowledge, raised his voice against it, except the Rev. T. Vaughan, and when I requested him to give proof, he had no time, he said, and also he had not the ability even to write, give an essay, or lecture against it (a good way to get out of a bad job). However, when I am fully satisfied truth is on my side, I am not a person to give back with only one blow on the head (I have had many blows on the head in fifty years spent in coal mines), I returned the blow by publishing his remarks, and the truthfulness of the theory, and now am sending the pamphlet out to the people of St. Helens, thick and fast, and converts everywhere are springing up. Shortly we hope to invite some of our fathers in Israel to come down and give us a few lectures, thereby to establish us in the faith. I hope we shall soon have the St. Helens Anglo-Israel Association formed, and a large number of members. Faithfully yours,

WILLIAM HOPTON.

Sutton Heath Collieries, St. Helens, February 4, 1881.

P.S.—Will you please send a few catalogues on the Identity, to give a few friends one each.—W. H.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—In reading the extract from The Bystander, of Toronto, which you have given this week, it struck me that I could give you two remarkable instances of the fusion of the Americans and our own nation—viz., the Hon. and Rev. T. W. Leigh, the brother of Lord Leigh, has married an American lady, and by her has a large estate in that country. Also that the Earl of Enniskillen, Imperial Grand-master of the British Empire of Orangemen, has likewise been elected as the Imperial Grand-master of the United States. Yours respectfully, B. G. M.

January 29, 1881.

IDENTITY ACROSTIC. No. I.

BY COL. M. BERESFORD.

SYNONYMOUS with Israel throughout the Book;
If you would find it, you should therein look.
Collected here God's kingdom once more rises,
And England wins the first of earthly prizes.

1. From him both Dathan and Abiram sprang,
   Nemuel too (who was not of that gang).
2. Of witness what, in Egypt's ancient land,
   Appears "the Pyramid" on Ghizeh's strand?
3. A minor prophet, who long urged the Jews
   To build the Temple, and yield God His dues.
4. When Judah shall with Israel fill the land,
   This must be their's by God's express command.
5. A mighty nation from my second sprung,
   With the same faith, same mission and same tongue.
6. An Hebrew word of love Hosea uses,
   To be Israel's cry when the Lord God chooses.
7. Twelve sixty (1,260) years this power shall have lasted;
   But within two more it shall be blasted.

N.B.—The correct answer to the above will appear in our next.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

Just published, Crown Octavo, cloth bound, gilt letters, 296 pages.

THE SEED OF ISAAC, BEING AN HISTORICAL REVIEW OF GOD'S DEALINGS WITH HIS CHOSEN PEOPLE ISRAEL.

BY J. D. GRANGER.

Post free, 4s., from THE AUTHOR, 34, Exeter-street, Plymouth, and ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published, price 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

THE GREAT PYRAMID, IN, BUT NOT OF, EGYPT:

ITS CLAIMS TO BE FOR A SIGN AND FOR A WITNESS UNTO THE LORD OF HOSTS IN THE LAND OF EGYPT.

As announced in the Scriptures of His Holy Prophet Isaiah, B.C. 714.

BY H. W. BADGER,

Private in H. M. 40th Regiment, now serving in India.

INTRODUCED BY MRS. PIAZZI SMYTH,

London:

ROBERT BANKS, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.

NEW WORK BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

In handsome cloth, gilt, with Coloured Map, and several Illustrations, price 3s. 6d., by post 3s. 10d.

PHILO-ISRAEL'S BOOK FOR CHILDREN.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth, gilt, 1s. Post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Third Edition.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST OR SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS AND TEACHINGS OF THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams. Price 4d., post free 5d.

A RESUME OF THE SCRIPTURAL ARGUMENT, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? An Inquiry establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 4d.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters."

Price 2d., post free 3d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS IN PROOF OF BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

London: Robert Banks Racquet-court Fleet-street.

NEW PAMPHLET ON THE IDENTITY OF THE LOST TEN TRIBES FOR UNIVERSAL CIRCULATION.

The Best Pamphlet to place in the hands of a person unacquainted with the subject.

Price 6d., by post 7d. 64 Demy 8vo. pages, in wrapper. One dozen copies sent free for a post office order for 6s.

FIFTY REASONS WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES

OF THE LOST TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL.

BY REV. W. H. POOLE, D.D.

"There is a principle which is a bar against all information, which is proof against all argument, and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance. This principle is, contempt prior to examination."—Dr. Paley.

A greater than Paley has said:—"He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is a folly and a shame unto him."—Prov. xviii.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET.

AND ALL BOOKSELLERS.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,

High-Class Tailor,

47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.

MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

Just published. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA THE ROYAL SEED TO KING DAVID'S THRONE, AND ARE NOT HER SUBJECTS, THE BRITISH PEOPLE, THE TEN LOST TRIBES?

BY WILLIAM HOPTON, of Sutton Heath.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 4d., by post 4½d. Special terms for a quantity.

THE ISRAEL OF GOD.

A SERVICE OF SONG

Upon the Career and Destiny of God's Ancient People Israel. WORDS AND MUSIC.

By C. W. E.

Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

A SUMMARY OF ANGLO-ISRAELITE TEACHING,

AND THE SCRIPTURE PROOFS ON WHICH IT RESTS.

Being a Reply to Opponents.

BY SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.

Price Twopence.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Price 8s., post free 8s. 6d., bound in blue cloth, gilt, side and back.

THE FOURTH VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

CONTAINING 520 QUARTO PAGES.

Post Office Orders to be made payable to Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or, W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

THE CHEAPEST IDENTITY VOLUME EVER PUBLISHED.

384 Demy 8vo pages, in handsome cloth, gilt, price 3s. 6d., by post 4s.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.

Edited by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.

This Volume contains Papers on all Points of the Identity of the British People with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 2d., post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES.

An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

Price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome, cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES AND 1882.

BY THE

REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD,

Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

PHILO-ISRAEL (in the BANNER) says:—"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome Identity volume. It contains twenty discourses of the well-known American divine, Dr. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, N.Y. We are glad to find from these discourses that Dr. Wild is quite one with us on this side the water with most, though not all, the views we entertain on our great and glorious subject.... We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and 'American' point of view, which is sure to interest, sure to be instructive, and may lead the thoughtless and inquiring to pursue the investigation till possibly conviction may be the result.'

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

By REV. JOSEPH WILD, D.D.

With a Portrait of the Author.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE PEW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL; Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Leeds, with an Introduction and Notes; to be followed, by a Review of Mr. Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes.

By the same Author.

"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)," with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d.

"CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d., post free 3½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 3½d.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just out, 8d., post free 9d.

ISRAEL NOTWITHSTANDING; Being the Second and concluding Part of the Earnest Appeal from the Pew to the Pulpit. By JOHN G. SHAW, Author of "Britain (or Israel)," &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

ROBERT BANKS'S CATALOGUE on the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Lost Ten Tribes will be sent, post free, on application. Address, Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW.
WEDNESDAY, FEB. 23, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 218. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MARCH 2, 1881. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
South Africa	85
"Who is Blind, but My Servant?" (Isa. xlii. 19). By H. P. Keighly	86
Thoughts upon Revelation xii. By G. L. R.	87
Foreign Workmen Give Blind Evidence that the British Are Israel	88
Israel's Returning Prosperity	88
The Grand Gallery Step. By J. R. Smith	88
The Future Language of the Earth	89
Progress of the Anglo-Israel Association of New South Wales. Mr. Percy Williams on the Great Pyramid	89
Jonah a Type of Ephraim-Israel. A Bible Discourse.—Part III. By John T. Gott.	90
The Lord Bishop of Liverpool on Israel and Judah. By the Rev. Denis Hanan, M.A.	91
A Prayer of Israel. By East Anglian	92
Answer to Identity Acrostic. No. I. By Col. W. Beresford	92
Signor Serafino Beruatto. WITH PORTRAIT	93
Jehovah's versus Men's Statements. Selected by T. T. Pitt	94
Lost Israel Found in the British Isles, "The Isles Afar Off"	94
"The Heir of All the Ages"	95
Cape and Australian Confederation	96
"Scattering the Power of the Holy People"	96
Stray Suggestions. By L. P.	97
The London Quarterly Review on the Great Pyramid, and Professor Piazzi Smyth's Reply. Forwarded by J. Thompson.—Part I.	97
Correspondence	98
Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union	99

SOUTH AFRICA.

THE South African States having refused lately to confederate, they have had recently to pass through a trial, and are yet destined, we believe, to learn more thoroughly a lesson which, taken together, will teach them that Anglo-Saxon confederation is a necessity of their very existence. It is in truth the only means available to stem the tide of native and Boer hostility which threatens them from Natal in the East to Cape Town in the West. There is a likelihood now, it would seem, that the Dutch population in the Orange Free State may make common cause with the Boers of the Transvaal; and the Burgher race throughout the Cape colony, it appears, sympathise so strongly with the Dutch Boers, that their aid in support of the British to put down the insurrection may be looked for in vain. It will perhaps ere long degenerate into a war of European races on the one hand, and into a struggle for mastery on the other, between the native African and the Anglo-Saxon races, which struggle is already being fought out in Basuto Land as it was lately in the Transkei and Zululand, to its bitter end.

What is likely to be the result? will Gentile Boers have the mastery over Israel? will the native Africans drive pushing, aggressive, supplanting Lo-Ammi into the sea, and seize on the inheritance at the ends of the earth, which is their own home, to the discomfiture of the aggressor? Then must God's Word be set aside, its promises be abrogated, His faithfulness be proved false, and the whole of the testimony of the Scriptures regarding Israel be cancelled. God forbid! None of these things can take place as God is true! The Lord gave to Israel the inheritance of the heathen. They are transferred to the House of Joseph to have and to hold for Christ, to bring them to the Lord. It cannot be that the heathen in South Africa can have the mastery over Israel, and drive them from those lands which the Lord gave them as His gracious gift under the Charter contained in Psa. ii. 8. It cannot be that a degenerate Gentile race like the Dutch Boers of the Transvaal, men who have revived the curse of domestic slavery, whose cruel, faithless, unchristian character is already clearly manifested by their treatment of their wounded prisoners, by their horrible murder of Captain Elliot, and of others who have unfortunately fallen into their power, can be allowed to defy the armies of the living God! Israel, whom the Boers have risen to destroy, are God's people, that race whom the Scriptures describe "as a lion among the beasts of the forest; as a young lion amongst the flocks of sheep, who if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and there is none to deliver" (Micah v. 8).

We look then for a victorious triumph sooner or later for the British arms over the presently insulting Boers. Whether they represent only the malcontents of the Transvaal, as at present, or the whole Dutch population in South Africa, as seems will probably be the case, the result must be the same. For the Lord having given the whole earth to Israel to subdue the heathen thereof, and the inhabitants of the uttermost parts of the same to the Lord Jesus, who shall dare to intervene to prevent that bequest from having effect? Not the Boers, not the Basutos, or the Pondomese! The Lord is fighting on our side, and we know that both Boers and native races are unequally matched against an Empire which is the richest in the world, the most widely spread and populous on the earth, which is struggling to maintain God's gifts to itself, and which has the great Jehovah, the God of Israel, for its Supporter, Friend, Ally, and Helper.

The glorious heritage, destined soon to be one of Great Britain's most powerful allied States, in South Africa, has recently been described by a master hand, Sir Bartle Frere, in the course of a lecture he delivered before the "Foreign and Colonial Section of the Society of Arts." We shall quote the report of the same, which appeared in the Times on February 5, 1881, because our readers may be able to judge therefrom how splendid the possession is, which our nation has acquired at the ends of the African earth, and how impossible it is that the foolish dream of the Dutch Africans can be realised when they declare, as they are said to do, that they will not desist till they have driven the Anglo-Saxons into the sea. The fact is, "the stone of Israel," the "shepherd, crushing stone" (Gen. xlix. 24), will fall upon them and grind them to powder (Matt. xxi. 44). The Boers' case further falls under another of the Scriptural penalties which God's Word enacts against the Gentile races who refuse service for His people Israel. "For the nation and kingdom (it says) that will not serve thee, shall perish, yea, those nations (or Gentiles) shall be utterly wasted" (Isa. lx. 12). This then is the Boers' fate if they continue to be rebellious. The report of Sir Bartle's lecture is as follows:—

Digitized by Google

Sir Richard Temple presided. Sir Bartle Frere, who was received with cheers, said that among the chief industrial resources of temperate South Africa was its mineral wealth, the first place being due to coal. The extent of its already known coal-fields was very inadequately understood in this country. There seemed no good reason to doubt that, starting from Beaufort West, in Cape Colony, coal was to be found on both sides of the great coast mountain ranges, from the Nieuwvelt chain, in lat. 32° S., at least as far as the Oliphants river, in lat. 24° S., and extensive beds were known to exist North-north-eastward from the Transvaal, cropping up to the surface at more than one part of the Zambesi Valley, and on that of the Ravooma River. As yet all these fields were but little worked, from want of cheap transport. With cheaper fuel, South Africa would not be dependent on foreign supplies, as now, for its iron, but would utilise the abundance of iron ore to be found close to its coal-beds. Interesting accounts were also given of its mines of manganese, cobalt, lead, copper, and gold. It was but fourteen years since the first diamond was discovered in South Africa, and the exports of them had so enormously increased that in one year more than two million pounds' worth had passed through the Cape post-office. Turning to the agricultural resources of South Africa, Sir Bartle Frere said that he had seen enough of South Africa to gain a very good general idea of its agricultural elements. He found it difficult to recall more than a mile or two at a stretch of barren and unfertile country. In parts, especially in the Transvaal and on the coast, the country was admirably adapted for sheep-farming. It was explained that the great river systems of the country readily lent themselves to a most effective method of irrigation. A brief description followed of the various breeds of cattle, and of horses, mules, sheep, and Angora goats, and a few words were added on ostrich-farming, a new, and already a very profitable branch of industry. The production of eggs and the hatching young chicks for sale formed already quite a recognised branch of industry in almost all parts of the Western province. After suggesting the possibility of the profitable rearing of buffaloes, camels, elephants, &c., and of game-preserving, the lecturer briefly glanced at the resources afforded by the fisheries of the South African coasts. Lastly he took a comprehensive survey of the harbours, the paucity of which, and neglect to make the best of those existing had so sadly restricted both the coasting and the ocean-borne trade of South Africa.

In vain do the Boers and the Basutos rage and strive to shake off Israel's hold of such a land as Sir Bartle here describes. It was given by God Himself to His blessed Son for "His inheritance," and "His possession," even for the Tribes of the House of Joseph, with other heathen heritages, lately desolations, to bring them to Christ. Is it likely the Lord will forget His oath and solemn promise in order to favour such Gentile races as those who barbarously and treacherously are fighting to defeat God's purposes? murdering the wounded, and foully slaying unarmed men they were bound to protect, and to care for with humanity? Israel, fear not! God's hand is over you, His eye is guiding you, and out of all your present complications and national difficulties He will assuredly safely bring you, so that you shall praise Him for His faithfulness, and rejoice before Him for ever! (Isa. xli. 10, et seq.)

Rev. Dr. Wild, in a recent sermon, said, "I find it necessary, in advocating the Identification of Israel, to convince my hearers that this theory is not a partial or selfish one. God's choice and covenant with Israel implied the best interests of all other people. Israel was chosen as a servant to be a divine executive among men. The allotment of favours implied a corresponding obligation of responsibility and toil."

WHO IS BLIND, BUT MY SERVANT?

(Isaiah xlii. 19).

By H. P. Keighley.

We have been forcibly reminded of the above quotation from the prophet Isaiah, by the perusal of an article in a small financial publication, issued by a Plymouth firm of stock-brokers. Who, indeed, is so blind as he who will not see? who will not recognise that the British nation is at this present time the recipient of the blessings of increase promised to Israel.

If an illustration be needed of the complete fulfilment of the promise of increase and prosperity made by Moses to Israel in ourselves, we could scarcely have it more plainly put before us than in the following extract. The words of the promise are: "Because the Lord thy God shall bless thee in all thine increase, and in all the works of thy hands, therefore thou shalt surely rejoice" (Deut. xvi. 15); and here we have the perfect accomplishment of these words fully, though blindly, acknowledged:—

"The first thing which strikes the inquirer into the monetary statistics of the country is the wonderful capacity exhibited by the people of the land for acquiring money. Roughly stated, the annual income from all sources is something like two thousand millions, while year by year we add to this a sum averaging two hundred millions. If we go on increasing our income at this rate, unless some new sources for its employment be discovered, or we contrive to lose a little of our wealth to bankrupt foreign states, money can scarcely fail to become a source of anxiety. It is almost superfluous to say that in no other country in the world are anything like such results as are here recorded arrived at; in no country does the national income at all assimilate to ours, nor does the increase bear anything like the same proportion. We Britons are unquestionably the chief money-grubbers of the world. With us everything turns to money. But, unlike the proverbial accumulator of wealth, when we have got our money we know what to do with it, though it must be owned that on occasions we have not placed it to that profit which the possessor of the 'ten talents' derived from his investment.

"We have, on occasions, been rather too prone to part with our cash to foreign States without examining sufficiently closely the worth of the security tendered. When, however, we consider that we have parted with our money to no less than twenty-nine impecunious foreign governments, lending to some of them not once or twice, but even seven, fifteen, and eighteen times, it is rather matter for surprise than otherwise that we have not more frequently burnt our fingers than is the case.

"Profitable, however, as some of our foreign investments have proved, it is not from them that our enormous national income has been derived; rather do we owe it to its judicious application in the development of the natural resources and industries of our own country. It is the annual receipt of this large amount of money requiring profitable investment that has promoted and brought to a successful issue various undertakings which have themselves been the means of still further augmenting our income. But for the vast sum of money annually accruing and requiring employment where would have been our railroads, our submarine and land telegraphs, our canals, all tending to facilitate intercourse, the transport of merchandise, and the accumulation of wealth resulting therefrom.

"The formation of joint-stock companies, resulting solely from the absence at the time of profitable means of investing capital, resulted, in the first instance, in the rapid development of every native industry. Our manufactures increased so rapidly that large fleets of merchant steamers had to be built for the conveyance of British industrial products into foreign markets. The railway system introduced by Englishmen was adopted by our foreign neighbours, and British ironworks and workshops had to provide the rails and locomotives.

Digitized by Google

"Mining in all its branches, at home and abroad, has felt the impetus given to it by the judicious and sometimes injudicious application of British capital; and this capital, whether sunk in the copper, tin, and coal mines of Great Britain, the silver mines of South America, or the gold diggings of Australia and California, yields to this country its steady and sure increase of income.

"In all these undertakings, yielding, as they have done and do, large and profitable returns, we see the result of the Englishman's natural aptitude for making money. With him money-making is a science, and into its pursuit he throws the same intelligence, the same unwearying industry that he does into every other undertaking, whether it be into researches in the fields of science, or into commercial pursuits. No other nation, save the Jews, show anything like the intelligence, diligence, and aptitude for making money that the Briton displays, and to him and to his appreciation of the position he holds are due the prosperity of many industries, abroad, as well as at home, which but for his long purse and his knowing how best to apply it, would languish and die."

Here, in the first instance, we find prominence given to the fact of the enormous wealth of the country, as promised by God to Israel, "for it is He that giveth thee power to get wealth" (Deut. viii. 18). But inasmuch as this wealth is undoubtedly given to us—Anglo-Israel—for a specific purpose, unless he fail to make the use of it we are to some extent doing, in promoting Christianity throughout the world, we need scarcely entertain the fears expressed by the writer, that it may "become a source of anxiety." We agree that "when we have got our money, we know what to do with it," but not in the sense in which the writer puts it.

Next, we find evidence of the fulfilment of another of the promises made to Israel: "Thou shalt lend to many nations, but thou shalt not borrow" (Deut. xv. 6), for we are told that the British people have lent "to no less than twenty-nine impecunious foreign governments." Blind evidence, this, of no mean order, that we are indeed Israel.

Then we are shown how the accumulation of this vast wealth has tended to foster and promote British enterprise, all tending to the advancement of the national importance, until indeed we are "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath" all other nations.

Finally, it is pointed out that in the "power to get wealth" the only people who at all approach us are the Jews. What wonder that it should be so? Are they not of the same race? For though the Israelites are not Jews, the Jews are Israelites.

THOUGHTS UPON REVELATION XII.

By G. L. R.

THERE appeared in the political heaven a great sign. The ancient Israelitish Church clothed with great power, and the lesser Powers under her feet crowned with twelve princes (Gen. xxxvii. 9). Benjamin the Norman came after.

At the time this sign appeared, the old Church was about to give birth to the Church under the new covenant. This Church, under the Old Testament, had forsaken her Husband and gone after other lovers, and therefore she was an adulteress; but when the fulness of time was come, God, in His great mercy, sent His Son—made of a woman, made under the law—and saved her by child-bearing (1 Tim. iii. 15). The Lord Jesus Christ laid down His life in order to redeem her; for while He lived it was impossible; but owing to His death, she is now no more an adulteress (Rom. vii. 2, 3). Her late Husband being dead she is free from the law, and is no more an adulteress, though she be married to another man. So the Lord created a new thing; the bride returned to her Husband, even Christ Jesus, now risen from the dead; the result of this is the figurative gestation of the Church, which lasts 280 prophetic days—i.e., from A.D. 33 to 313; the pains of persecution coming on in the reign of Diocletian, A.D. 303, lasted 10 prophetic days (Rev. ii. 10). This culminated in the birth of the new Israel of the covenant people (Britham, Isa. xlii. 6, xlix. 8), which child was caught up unto God and His throne—that is, placed under His protection and on the throne of his father David. When this "man-child" has been nourished, and is in his prime, he is to rule all nations with a rod of iron.

Meanwhile, and ere his birth, there appeared another "sign" in heaven; and behold the Pagan Power clothed in scarlet, a great red dragon, whose authority came from seven heads of government, and which eventually would be vested in ten kings, but whose empire was now represented in the seven-hilled city (Rome). At the time of the cruel persecution, his tail drew one third part of the whole extent of the original empire, casting their rulers to the earth. This horrible monster stood ready to devour the man-child as soon as it was born. Much to his indignation, the man-child was snatched away, and his mother fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God (2 Sam. vii. 10), that they may feed her there for 1,260 prophetic days, counting from the birth of the true Israel. Those who were of the faith of their forefather Abraham, were thus especially protected of God, as we see to have been the case in Rev. vii., where they are portrayed by the 12,000 of all the Tribes of Israel, Dan only excepted, as he was not within the influence of the Roman power.

This ancient people then escape into Britain, away from the Roman earth, and there they are nourished until 1573 (or 313 + 1260), when the man-child, or true Israel, weaned from the milk and drawn from the breasts (Isa. xxviii. 9) may, by being taught "precept upon precept, line upon line, here a little, and there a little," be sufficiently strong to do battle against the whole world.

When the dragon found the woman had fled, he stirred up a war in heaven, when Michael (who is as God) and his angels fought against the dragon. This is found to have been the case immediately upon the arrival of the Saxons in Britain. Heathenism was arrayed against the British Church, but prevailed not. It resulted in heathenism being cast out into the Roman earth with the dragon; neither was their place found any more in heaven.

Now salvation is come to Israel, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of His Christ. Therefore, rejoice, O Britain, and ye that dwell therein! Woe to the Roman earth, on account of the apostasy which the devil shall bring about; knowing, now that Israel is being again brought into favour, and his own time is but short.

When the woman had fled, aided by eagle's wings (Isa. xl. 27—31, xli. 1), leaving behind only a remnant of her seed, the dragon made war with this remnant, which "keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ."

The woman's flight into the isles of the West was assisted by the inroads of barbarians, who subverted the Roman pagan power.

The constant cry of "Come out of her, My people" (Jer. li. 5, 6, 45; Rev. xviii. 4), enforced upon them by the persecution of the little horn of Daniel, has caused the remnant from time to time to seek a refuge in Britain and Protestant countries; and the mountain of the Lord's host has thereby been established in "the top of the mountains," and the fifth empire in process of consolidation is realising the prophecy of Micah iv.: "The kingdom having come to the daughter of Zion," the whole world will soon become the kingdom of the Lord (Rev. x.), through the agency of the mighty messenger with his right foot on the isles in the sea, and his left on the earth, and there shall be no longer delay (Psa. cii. 13, etc.).

Digitized by Google

FOREIGN WORKMEN GIVE BLIND EVIDENCE THAT THE BRITISH ARE ISRAEL.

We take the following from The Methodist Recorder of December 17, 1880, sent us by a friend at Londonderry. In an article on "Temperance Sunday," the editor said, inter alia :—

"Continental workmen, too, swift to admit the English genius for thoroughness, add their tribute by grimly congratulating themselves on the fact that trade is gradually drifting into the hands of men who worship thrift, and who foreswear the maudlin rites of Saint Monday. 'It is a blessed thing for the world,' a foreigner once said, 'that you Anglo-Saxons are a drunken race. Such are your powers, and energy, and talent, that otherwise you would have become masters of the world.' In various languages that sentiment is being expressed in the ateliers of the Continent."

The conclusion is obvious: that if only the demon of drink, Ephraim's woe, were driven out of Israel's body politic, this nation would become "masters of the world." But this is just what is going to happen! The outpouring of God's Holy Spirit on the masses will change the heart of this nation, and cure it of drunkenness. When that occurs, the heritage of Abraham's seed will devolve upon the true heirs, and they will possess the world (Rom. iv. 13); for then "the kingdom and the dominion and the greatness of the kingdom, under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High;" and we have Scripture warrant for declaring that that people is none other than "the children of Israel, a people near unto Him," even to Jehovah. "Praise YE the Lord" (Dan. vii. 27; Psa. cxlviii. 14).

ISRAEL'S RETURNING PROSPERITY.

There has been a period of gloom in commercial circles for some time past, and wealth in Great Britain has not been realised with such rapidity, or such "jumps and bounds," as during some periods not far past. Yet the "power to get wealth" has not been removed by the Lord from His chosen people Israel. We have, all through the gloomy times, been making wealth and money according to the promise; although it has not been with such rapid strides. This we have often shown in these pages. Let us now point to some signs of an early revival, showing that ere long there is every hope of the depressing days having a speedy end, and national prosperity arriving. Let the reader consult the following facts set out for us by the Bristol Times and Mirror of January 10, 1881, on the signs of our early monetary revival. The writer says:—

It's a long lane that has no turning, and after the reduced profits of the past few years most classes of investors are to be congratulated upon the improved dividends they are getting or are promised from their investments. We summarised the other day the receipts for the past six months on many of the leading lines of railway, which are so satisfactory, aggregating over a million increase upon the corresponding six months of 1879, as to warrant the hope of a substantial increase to the forthcoming dividends. Shareholders in the leading banks are already reaping the benefits of the improvement in trade. The London and Westminster pays a dividend at the rate of 18 per cent. per annum, against 15 for the corresponding half of the previous year; the Union Bank of London 15, against 12½; the London Joint Stock Bank, 17 against 15; the Alliance, 6 against 5; the Imperial, 7 against 6; the National Discount, 13 against 12; and the Limited Discount, 6 against 5; while the City and Consolidated each pay the same, 10 per cent. In each case there has, at the same time, been an addition to the reserve fund, so that the extra dividends have been declared out of extra profits. The character of the business done is the explanation of this state of things. There have been no important failures to diminish profits, and the profits have been much larger in 1880 than in 1879, the average market rate of discount during 1880 having been £2 6s. 6d. per cent., against £1 15s. during 1879, and the average allowance on deposits £1 14s. 6d., against £1 8s., the profit margin last year thus being 12s. per cent. against only 7s. in 1879.

Here, then, are hopeful signs for those who have money, and symptoms that the "power to get wealth" reserved for Israel, and that race alone, is about to be exhibited again among us as in times past, for "God's glory." Deut. viii. 18, shows that the ability to increase in wealth is given to His people by the Lord only for a special purpose. Not that we may become rich and powerful, mighty and great. Far from that! But that "He may establish His covenant which He sware to our fathers, as it is this day." What that covenant was we all well know. It was not merely the propagation of the Gospel grace of God among all races of the earth. It was more than that. To enable Israel to do that, it was needful that she should acquire the dominion of the heathen world, and the desolations of the earth, wherein to establish the righteous rule of the Son of God; also to preach His Word. That could only be done by giving Israel "the Gates" of the world, a gift which implied also the maritime supremacy; the power to build her costly navies and ironclads. It meant, further, the ability to colonise, to found empires beyond sea, the outland heritages where Greater Britains are springing up, all in union with the parent stem, to acquire fresh dominions beyond, till all the earth shall acknowledge the sway, and bend to the influence of "the righteous nation," whose King is Jehovah Jesus.

The wealth gives the means to support Israel's multitudes; it empowers them to emigrate, and so fill the earth. It enables her to pay for the support of her many missionaries to foreign lands; and for the publication of those millions of copies of the Word of God, which, like the river of life, go out to water the earth. Wealth sanctified to the glory of God is Israel's heritage and gift from the Lord. We British have this sign, and thus know, not only by its possession, but also by the sacred use we make of it, that we are indeed His people, His chosen ones, His heritage and inheritance. Praise YE the Lord.

THE GRAND GALLERY STEP.

By J. R. Smith.

Having carefully and prayerfully considered the evidence in favour of the Divine origin of the "Great Pyramid," as exhibited in "Our Inheritance in the Great Pyramid," and the pages of the Banner, I am constrained to acknowledge its authority, and my obedience to its imperative requirements. To resist the evidence, would be to do violence to my conscience, and abuse my understanding; nevertheless the burden of conviction is not so overpowering as to render my own individual faculties incapable of discriminating between truth and error, original intention, and unwarrantable interpretation.

I employ the word advisedly, for a wilful departure from the plain obvious principle laid down by Professor Piazzi Smyth (inch to a year theory), and justified all along the line of interpretation, is most unwarrantable, injudicious, and is manifestly a sign of weakness. I think, without exception, all contributors to the diffusion of Pyramid prophecy adopt the inch to a month principle, in lieu of inch to a year, when dealing with the Ante-Chamber Passage-length. As if, forsooth, it were impossible for the architect to represent a diminished period of tribulation, without the introduction of some other principle of symbolisation. Sceptics sneer, and well they may, at the idea of having recourse to another mode of interpretation, in order to bridge over a difficulty which lies across the path of demonstration, but a brief consideration of that ominous Ante-Chamber Passage-length, viewed entirely in a different light, may suffice to establish the theory, that it was possible for the architect to typify this momentous event, without departing from the principle already adopted—viz., inch to a year.

Digitized by Google

The Grand Gallery Step has indeed proved itself to be a "stone of stumbling and rock of offence" to almost every person who has seriously decided upon ascertaining its object in relation to the Grand Gallery, symbolical of the "Christian dispensation." Now, there has been, in my opinion, no satisfactory reason assigned for the posing of this obstacle right across the path of the Grand Gallery Floor-line, nor am I astonished at this, seeing it has been the aim of all Pyramidists to insist upon the positive close of the present dispensation in the year 1881-2, regarding the impending wall as an indication of its absoluteness.

Now, I trust, you will bear with me while I endeavour to justify my non-acceptance of the inch to a month theory, when applied to the Ante-Chamber Passage, and assign to the Step its proper function. Why the hypothenuse of the Step, or more properly speaking, that part of the Step where the Floor-line of the Grand Gallery, if continued, would meet an imaginary vertical line let down from the South End Wall, is taken to compute the Floor-length of the Grand Gallery, and not, rather, the vertical height and horizontal length, I cannot make out, for its very interruption suggests its essential bearing on the Floor-length! But let us see how this operates.

If instead of 1881 (1881·6 is assumed) we take 1909·86 as representing the Grand Gallery Floor-line, which would be the case if the height and length of the Step were calculated, in lieu of the line through the Step, we apparently carry the "day of grace" far into the period of tribulation, this then would consequently shorten that period, just that amount the Grand Gallery is increased—viz., 28·865 inches or years.

Now, 52·117 Ante-Chamber Passage-length, minus 28·865 = 23·252, period of diminished tribulation. This, I think, is borne out by the fact, that the Ante-Chamber Floor-length, if divided by breadth of Boss on Granite Leaf (i.e., 5), produces at once the same result, or 116·26 ÷ 5 = 23·252. And 1881 + 28·865 = 1909·865 = diameter of circle having for its circumference 6,000.

There is no wresting or twisting required to produce the above result, and its simplicity therefore the more provokes my astonishment, and is in perfect harmony with the principle adopted throughout the entire structure.

THE FUTURE LANGUAGE OF THE EARTH.

In reference to this subject, the Rev. Denis Hanan sends us the following extract from the General Advertiser, published in Dublin in January, 1881:—

"Languages.—The progress of languages spoken by different peoples is said to be as follows: English, which at the commencement of the century was only spoken by 22 millions, is now spoken by 90 millions; Russian by 63 millions instead of 30 millions; German by 66 instead of 38; Spanish by 44 instead of 32; Italian by 30 instead of 18; Portuguese by 13 instead of 8. This is, for England, an increase of 310 per cent.; for Russia, 110 per cent.; for Germany, 70 per cent.; for Spain, 36 per cent., &c. In the case of France, the increase has been from 34 to 46 millions, or 36 per cent."

The same idea regarding the English supremacy in language comes out in a cutting from a review in St. James's Chronicle lately, wherein we read the following:—

"Mr. Shore has much to say about the Siamese, telling us, among other things, that the 'height of a young Siamese swell's ambition is to talk English.'"

We ourselves know that in South India the knowledge of English is eagerly sought by native youths; nay, even by children and girls, since its acquisition opens the road to preferment, advance in life and wealth. It is destined, no doubt, to spread wonderfully over the whole peninsula; and, in time, to be the universal medium for the interchange of thought throughout the planet.

PROGRESS OF THE ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

MR. PERCY WILLIAMS ON THE GREAT PYRAMID.

The July meeting of this Association was held last night in the new Temperance Hall. The first of two lectures on the subject of "The Great Pyramid" was given by the secretary, Mr. Percy Williams. The lecturer opened his subject by briefly alluding to the ancient power and glory of the Egyptian kingdom, and the interest that had always been taken in the history and monuments of the land of the Nile by the learned and scientific of all ages. After describing the geographical position of the Great Pyramid, Mr. Williams spoke of the numerous pyramids on the Western and desert side of the Nile, which were built for tombs by the Egyptians, and in comparison with the three large pyramids of Gizeh were of modern date, and possessed none of their purity of shape or excellence of construction. Of the three Gizeh Pyramids, there was one, however, which stood out, superior in age, size, beauty of form, and wondrous internal construction, which writers of all nations had unanimously called "The Great Pyramid," and from the time of Alexander the Great, it had headed the list of the seven wonders of the world, and was the only one of them left on the earth's surface. The many theories regarding the purpose for which it was built were then dwelt upon, and the lecturer stated that till within the last few years, no satisfactory theory had been expounded. Mr. Williams then proceeded to show from Herodotus, Manetho, Eratosthenes, Strabo, and other ancient writers, that the Pyramid was built during the reign of King Cheops or Suphis, about 2170 years B.C., under the direction of a shepherd king from Arabia, named Philitis, who had invaded Egypt, and subdued it without a battle, and forced the Egyptians to give their aid in building the Pyramid after his design; that, after the work was completed, Philitis left the country with his followers, numbering 240 thousand, settled in Palestine, and there built Jerusalem. Comparing tradition with the sacred record, Mr. Williams affirmed there was every reason to believe that Philitis and his subjects were identical with Melchisedec and the Capthorim; that they built the Pyramid after a Divine plan, to become in these, the latter days, an historic and prophetic record, and a testimony of exact truths and scientific facts, to serve as a witness of inspiration and of the truth and purpose of God. With the assistance of large diagrams, the lecturer then gave a clear and concise description of the building, and its various Passages and Chambers, and of the method of construction. The Pyramid, he showed, covers a space of over thirteen acres, contains upwards of five million tons of hewn stone, and stands in the exact centre of the habitable globe, for the quantity of dry land East of the Pyramid's meridian is equal to that West of it, and the land North of its latitude equals that South of it. The base is square, each side measuring over 760 feet in length, and its four sides sloping inwards and upwards, meet at a present height of 486 feet. The peculiarities of the descending, ascending, and horizontal Passages, the Grand Gallery, Queen's, King's, Ante and Subterranean-chambers, the Coffer and Portcullis were minutely described. Reference was made to the various explorers, from the time the Pyramid was broken into by the Caliph Al Mamoun in A.D. 820 down to our own times, including the labours and discoveries of John Greaves, Nathaniel Davison, the French Commission, and General Sir Howard Vyse. From the descriptions, measurements, and drawings of the Pyramid by these travellers, Mr. John Taylor, of the firm of Taylor and Hessey, of London, undertook to wrestle with the question—"Why it was built," and "Who built it?" Studying the subject in the light of history, religion, and science, he came to some surprising conclusions, and claimed to find in the shape, arrangements, measures, and various indications of the Pyramid, an intellectuality and numerical knowledge of grand cosmical truths which neither Egypt nor any of the nations possessed from a thousand years ago back to the origin of nations. In 1859 he published a small volume, and gave his processes and the results. The book resulted in arresting the interest and attention of many scientific men, and formed the basis of further investigations and discoveries by Professor Piazzi Smyth, the Astronomer-Royal for Scotland. The lecture concluded with an interesting and enthusiastic account of the labours of the Professor, who, in 1865, accompanied by his heroic wife, spent four months at the Pyramid, living in an empty tomb, and returned to England with the most thorough and exact set of measurements ever applied to any building in the world. The scientific and sacred discoveries resulting from the Professor's investigation, will form the subject of Mr. Williams's second lecture. The hall was well filled; and on the motion of Mr. Wright, seconded by Mr. Barnell, a hearty and cordial vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Williams, for his highly interesting and valuable lecture. The Rev. W. Allworth, the president of the association, closed the meeting by pronouncing the benediction.

SECOND LECTURE.

The usual monthly meeting of the Anglo-Israel Association of New South Wales was held last night, in the New Temperance Hall, Pitt-street; the president, the Rev. W. Allworth, occupied the chair. Mr. Percy E. Williams delivered his second lecture on the subject of the Great Pyramid. The attendance was large, and the audience seemed fully to enter into and appreciate the interesting address. For the benefit of those present who were unable to attend the first lecture, Mr. Williams explained the leading features of the Great Pyramid, and its peculiar internal arrangement of Passages and Chambers, which he made very clear with large coloured diagrams. The messages, he said, were evidently twofold, scientific and Messianic, and were to be read by the light of pure mathematics, astronomical and physical science, and the Holy Scriptures. The scientific symbology was first dwelt upon, and the lecturer showed how the vertical height of the Pyramid, multiplied by its own indicated numbers, gave the sun distance as 91,840,000 miles; and these figures had been recently verified by the astronomer at the Cape of Good Hope. Amongst other astonishing deductions were the precession of the equinoxes, the earth's mean density, and the number of days in the year. The standard of lineal measure was shown to be the tenth millionth part of the polar semi-axis, equal to twenty-five and a minute fraction of British inches, and is identical with the sacred cubit given to the Hebrews. The Coffer in the King's Chamber was also a standard of measure, and was equal in capacity to the Mosaic sacred ark of the covenant. Mr. Williams commended this curious vessel, situated as it was under the five vaults of the King's Chamber, to the attention of Freemasons. Passing on to the sacred revelations of the Great Pyramid, the lecturer affirmed that the various Passages represented epochs of the world's history, and were in length the same number of inches as these epochs contained years. The first Descending Passage was typical of the period from the Flood to the Exodus. The first Ascending Passage embraced the time from the Exodus to the birth of Christ, and the Grand Gallery symbolised the present Christian dispensation, which would close during the year 1881-2, as the Gallery emphatically ended at the 1881st inch. Then would arrive the time when God's wrath and indignation would be poured upon the Gentile nations, symbolised by the Low Narrow Passage beyond the Gallery; and the present armed state of Europe, and the prevailing anxiety amongst the nations of the earth, tended to confirm this view. Many other startling revelations were made concerning the symbology of the King's, Queen's, and Ante-Chambers. In reviewing all that had been discovered in the Great Pyramid during the past five years, both by scientific and other learned men, Mr. Williams said that but one conclusion could be arrived at—namely, that the monument was built after a divine plan, as much as the Ark, the Tabernacle, and the Temple; that it was a veritable miracle in stone, and the one prophesied of in the nineteenth chapter of Isaiah, which was to be a witness to the Lord of hosts in the latter days. The rev. chairman intimated that at the next meeting he would offer a reply to an attack which had been recently published upon the objects and aims of the Association, and closed the meeting by pronouncing the benediction.

We take the two reports above re-published, from the Sydney Morning Herald of July 27, and September 4, 1880 respectively. They prove, we think, that our New South Wales Israelites are in earnest. We are glad to welcome a clergyman as a lecturer and president of the Sydney Association, and wish his example were more extensively followed at home.

JONAH A TYPE OF EPHRAIM-ISRAEL.

A Bible Discourse.

By John T. Gott.

(Continued from page 79.)

PART III.

Just as Jehovah wrought great wonders in the land of Egypt, so that the heathen Egyptians might know that He was the Lord when He stretched forth His hand to bring out the children of Israel from among them, so is it predicted that when God "setteth His hand the second time to restore the remnant of His people" to the land promised to their forefathers, then the people of Israel shall know, and the heathen throughout the whole earth shall know, that He is the Lord.

While still within this living tomb we read in the second chapter of the book Jonah's prayer of faith and his deliverance.

So must it have been with Ten-Tribed Israel, as we shall see from a due consideration of the leading petitions in this prayer.

Jonah declares that God has cast him out of His sight, and has caused all His waves and His billows to pass over him. He recognises and acknowledges the hand of God in all the sufferings and calamities that have befallen him.

So was Ten-Tribed Israel "cast out." When the prophet Jeremiah was sent to reprove the Jews for their idolatry, this was one threatened punishment." "I will cast you out of My sight, as I have cast out all your brethren, even the whole seed of Ephraim" (vii. 15).

The same prophet also shows us that Ten-Tribed Israel should, at a similar time, and in similar circumstances to Jonah's, acknowledge and confess the hand of God present with them, when the waves of affliction passed over them. "I have surely heard Ephraim bemoaning himself thus: Thou hast chastised me, and I was chastised, as a bullock unaccustomed to the yoke: turn Thou me, and I shall be turned; for Thou art the Lord my God. Surely, after that I was turned, I repented; and after that I was instructed, I smote upon my thigh; I was ashamed, yea, even confounded, because I did bear the reproach of my youth" (xxxi. 18).

Another clause in Jonah's prayer exactly describes the condition of cast-off Israel: "I went down to the bottoms of the mountains: the earth with her bars was about me for ever: yet hast Thou brought up my life from corruption, O Lord my God." Jonah here implies that he is imprisoned for ever, so far as any human effort can bring about deliverance.

So does Isaiah speak of the blind people (xlii.), Ten-Tribed Israel. Mark the words: "Who is blind but My servant?" —i.e., "Who among all the heathen is so blind as Israel My servant?" If the blind lead the blind, shall not both fall into the ditch of error? The people who ought to know the will of God, the people who ought to hear the clear ring of prophecy which affects their own national welfare, the people who ought to see in the due fulfilment of prophecy the gradual accomplishment of the covenant promises made to the patriarchs, are declared to be a people "blind and deaf." "Who is blind but My servant? or deaf as My messenger that I sent?" As Jonah was the only messenger sent to the Ninevites, so was Israel, the blind people, destined to be the only messenger sent to proclaim the glad tidings of the Gospel throughout the whole world.

Digitized by Google

Of this people the prophet says, "This is a people robbed and spoiled. They are all of them snared in holes. And they are hid in prison-houses. They are for a prey, and none delivereth. For a spoil, and none saith, Restore." This description of Israel is but a paraphrase of Jonah's account of his prison-house.

Again, Jonah says, "When my soul fainted within me I remembered the Lord: and my prayer came in unto Thee, into Thy holy temple." For a time troubles shut out hope, but faith revived when Jonah remembered the Lord; what a gracious God He is, and how He now still preserves his life and consciousness in the dark prison-house.

So must Ten-Tribed Israel have remembered the Lord, and prayed the prayer of faith, as Jonah did, when God revived them on the second prophetic day, according to the word of the prophet Hosea.

One more remark on the concluding words of Jonah's prayer: "Salvation is of the Lord." The Hebrew is intensive, "Mighty salvation is of the Lord."

Jonah acknowledged that he could not deliver himself, nor could any human agency assist him. "Salvation is of the Lord."

And so may Israel now say! Thus spake Isaiah, "Who gave Jacob for a spoil, and Israel to the robbers? Did not the Lord, He against whom we have sinned?"

"But now, thus said the Lord, I have redeemed thee: I have called thee by thy name: thou art Mine" (xliii.).

"I, even I, am He that blotteth out thy transgressions for Mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins" (Ibid.).

"I have blotted out as a thick cloud thy transgressions, and as a cloud thy sins; return unto Me, for I have redeemed thee" (xliv). Truly may Israel now say, "Salvation is of the Lord."

Notice again, that when Jonah offered up this prayer he was in a state of continuous darkness, without a single ray of hope to dispel the gloom.

So was it with Ten-Tribed Israel, when the light of Divine favour was withdrawn from them. They were left in total darkness, a darkness so graphically described in that beautiful Psalm: "The Lord is my Shepherd." This Psalm is prophetic in character, and portrays the Lord's care for the lost sheep of the House of Israel, their safe guidance through the darkest trials, their deliverance from death itself, and the full realisation of the new covenant blessings to be poured forth in the latter days. The Psalmist thus describes that dark era in the history of the lost sheep: "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil." The shadow of death is a Hebrew idiom for the blackest darkness, and implies a position surrounded by great perils, and by death itself. Midnight darkness is the time when wild beasts are abroad seeking whom they may devour. The valley, surrounded by hills and forests, the coverts of wild beasts, is deeply expressive of the great dangers attending such a journey.

The same faith which Jonah expressed is found here. "For Thou art with me: Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me." The rod was used by the shepherd in counting the sheep. The rod is still to be used in counting the remnant of Israel. Amos thus predicts of the "sinful kingdom," Ten-Tribed Israel, "I will destroy it from off the face of the earth: saving that I will not utterly destroy the House of Jacob, saith the Lord, for lo, I will command, and I will sift the House of Israel among all nations, like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth" (ix.). That is, the Israelites were to be tossed about through all nations in such a way that the chaff (i.e., the wicked) should fall and perish ("all the sinners of My people shall die by the sword"—ver. 10), but the solid grains should be preserved. This good grain represents the remnant of Israel that is still preserved to be hereafter "a nation before God for ever" (Jer. xxxi. 36).

The staff is the shepherd's instrument for "warding off beasts hostile to the sheep." Thus, in Isaiah x. 24, the Lord is represented as lifting up His staff against Assyria in behalf of His people.

We now come to Jonah's second commission. "The prophet seems to have been in some settled abode when he received the command" (Fausset), and hence we may infer that some delay took place after he was cast upon the dry land.

"The word of the Lord came to Jonah the second time, saying, Arise, go unto Nineveh, that great city, and preach unto it the preaching that I bid thee. So Jonah arose and went unto Nineveh."

Like the disobedient son in the parable, at the first call, Jonah arose at once, but only to disobey the command, so now he arose as readily to obey. And truly he was "the fittest instrument for proclaiming judgment, and yet the hope of mercy, on repentance, to Nineveh; being himself a living exemplification of judgment in his entombment in the fish, and mercy on repentance exemplified in his deliverance" (Fausset).

(To be continued.)

THE LORD BISHOP OF LIVERPOOL ON ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

By the Rev. Denis Hanan, M.A.

A book entitled, "Coming Events and Present Duties," by the Rev. J. C. Ryle (second edition, published October, 1879), bears "blind witness" to Identity truth. The author is now Lord Bishop of Liverpool. Chapters v. and vii. treat respectively upon "Scattered Israel to be Gathered," "And so all Israel shall be Saved." It may not be unprofitable for either friends or opponents of the views advocated by the Banner to note the statements made.

In the preface, section viii., Dr. Ryle writes, "I believe that the literal sense of the Old Testament prophecies has been far too much neglected by the Church, and is far too much neglected at the present day, and that under the mistaken system of spiritualising and accommodating Bible language Christians have too often completely missed its meaning."

Again, chapter v.: "What I protest against is the habit of allegorising plain sayings of the Word of God concerning the future history of the nation Israel, and explaining away the fulness of their contents, in order to accommodate them to the Gentile Church. I believe the habit to be unwarranted by anything in Scripture, and to draw after it a long train of evil consequences. Against that system I have long protested, and I hope I shall always protest as long as I live." "To what may be attributed that loose system of interpreting the language of the Psalms and prophets? To nothing so much, I believe, as to the habit of inaccurately interpreting the word 'Israel,' and the consequent application of promises to the Gentile Churches, with which they have nothing to do." With much more to the same effect truly and clearly stated and proved.

Our author proceeds to define "the meaning of the word Israel," thus, "The word 'Israel' is used nearly seven hundred times in the Bible. I can only discern three senses in which it is used. First. It is one of the names of Jacob, the father of the Twelve Tribes, a name specially given to him by God. Secondly. It is a name given to the Ten Tribes, which separated from Judah and Benjamin in the days of Rehoboam, and became a distinct kingdom. This kingdom is often called Israel, in contradistinction to the kingdom of Judah. Thirdly, and lastly. It is a name given to the whole Jewish nation (the italics here are mine), to all members of the Twelve Tribes, which sprung from Jacob and were brought out of Egypt into the land of Canaan. This is by far the most common signification of the word in the Bible."

Digitized by Google

The meaning is plain. It is that the name "Israel" is only given to the Ten-Tribed portion, and to the whole nation consisting of the Twelve Tribes; but what confusion of thought is manifested in calling the whole nation by the name of the Two Tribes; and with all due respect to the highly esteemed author, I would venture to say that the name "the Jewish nation" is never in Scripture applied to "all-Israel," and that it never has been, and is not so applied by the Jews themselves.

The mischief of this fundamental misconception—for it is not a mere verbal mistake—affects the whole of what follows. So that instead of the clearness, which might have been expected from the opening statements, a constant confusion ensues, the words Israel and Judah being shuffled about as if convertible terms; the statements concerning the one and the other, which according to the canon of interpretation already quoted, ought to be literally and plainly understood, are indiscriminately applied to either or to both. The past, the present, and the future of the Two Tribes and the Ten, and all the prophecies relating to them, are confused and confounded, and, finally, exclusively appropriated to that portion of the dispersion which we now know as the Jews.

Thus, chapter vii., "And so all Israel shall be saved." "Israel shall be saved"—that means the Jewish nation and people. "All-Israel"—that means the whole people or nation of the Jews. Hosea i. 11 is quoted, "Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together," &c.; and chapter iii. 4: "For the children of Israel shall abide," &c.; and it is added, "I assert then that the Jews are at this moment a peculiar people, they fulfil the prophecy of Hosea." But again Zechariah's prophecy concerning "the House of David" and the "inhabitants of Jerusalem" is referred to "the future prospects of Israel," and so to the end, without an apparent suspicion of the inaccuracy. The application of the title, "the Jewish nation," as a fit name for "all-Israel," is thus indirectly explained: "Now what says our text about the prospects of the Jews? it says, 'He that scattered Israel will gather him' (Jer. xxxi. 10). That gathering is an event which plainly is yet to come. It could not apply in any sense to the Ten Tribes of Israel. They have never been gathered in any way. Their scattering has never come to an end. It cannot be applied to the return of the remnant of Judah and Benjamin from the Babylonish captivity. . . . . There is but one fair interpretation, the 'gathering' spoken of is a gathering which is yet to come, and is to be the gathering and restoration of the Jews." And this, although the preceding verse states, "I am a Father to Israel, and Ephraim is My firstborn."

In what way does Dr. Ryle seem to have arrived at his opinion? how is it that he is apparently unconscious of any difficulty? What argument satisfied his mind? It is almost incomprehensible, it is not easy to put it in proper form; but it seems fair to give his own statements thus:—

"Israel" means the Twelve, or the Ten Tribes in contradistinction to Judah. Then Israel and Judah are to be gathered. Israel has not been gathered; therefore Judah is Israel. I need not add non sequitur.

Oh, for a ray of Identity light to improve the bishop's logic, and shew the true deduction from the many prophecies quoted by him—namely, that Lost Israel is to be found, and blessed with scattered Judah. When the words of Zechariah and Jeremiah (quoted page 137) will be fulfilled, "I will strengthen the House of Judah, and I will save the House of Joseph. . . . . And they of Ephraim shall be like a mighty man. . . . . Place shall not be found for them. For, lo, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will bring again the captivity of My people Israel and Judah, saith the Lord, and I will cause them to return to the land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it."

The bishop's testimony concerning the literal interpretation of the prophecies is directly valuable; and the bishop's further statements are indirectly valuable also, for they show how self-contradictory is "the Jewish nation" theory, and how imperfect the closest study of the prophets must be, how little can be discerned of the purposes of Him who keepeth covenant, while the "blindness in part" shuts out Identity evidence.

A PRAYER OF ISRAEL.

By East Anglian.

"We are the clay, and Thou our Potter."—Isa. lxiv. 8.

As clay unto the potter, even so,
Oh, Lord our God, are we within Thy hand;
Oh, fashion us according to Thy will;
Oh, shape us to Thy purpose fore-ordained.
Grant us the consummation! for, of old,
Didst Thou not speak by holy men, and say,
"This people have I formed unto Myself;
They shall show forth My praise"? And we, who now
Behold Thy purpose manifest, that was
So long unseen, unguessed of by Thy sons,
Do pray Thee that, as even until now
Thou hast upheld our fathers and their sons,
And brought them by strange ways they had not known
To seek Thee and Thy glory, Thou wilt haste
The year of Thy redeemed, and clear away
The sad reproach of Zion; bid the hills
Of that most holy land of all the earth,
Still desolate and bare 'neath alien feet,
Put forth their branches, and yield up their fruits
To Israel, Thy people, that are now
At hand to come.
Oh, lift us from the deeps
Of fear, and set us on the high, white hills
Of patient faith, from whence the rising sun
Is earliest seen, and sudden gleams are caught
Of Thy pure city, shining far away.
So may we stand before Thee, watchmen, set
On Ephraim's heights, that wait but Thy command
To cry aloud, "Arise, let us go up
To Zion, to the Lord our God."
Hear us,
Oh, Lord our God, who will not give Thee rest
Until Thou stablish and make once again
Thy city holy in a holier earth:
From whence Thy people may send forth the Word,
Till earth's remotest sea and utmost isle
Have heard Thy law, and seen Thy glory rise;
Till out of darkness shine the nightless day,
And splendour of Thy thousand peaceful years.
Hear us, and answer us, O Lord our God!

ANSWER TO IDENTITY ACROSTIC.—No I.

By Col. M. Beresford.

E	LIA	B.
P	ILLA	R.
H	AGGA	I.
R	ES	T.
A	MERIC	A.
I	SH	I.
M	AHOMEDA	N.

Digitized by Google

SIGNOR SERAFINO BERUATTO,

"Italian Evangelical Pasteur at Venice, Believer, Writer, and Preacher of British Identity with the Ten Tribes."

SUCH is the description of a remarkable man—an Italian Protestant minister of the Evangelical Church at Venice—who believes in our British Identity with Israel, preaches it, teaches it, and has written an admirable treatise in Italian on it, which we noticed at page 331, vol. iv., No. 190 of the BANNER. Regarding Signor Beruatto's work in Venice, one who knows him well, and is following his career with interest, has just communicated to us the following details regarding him and his present proceedings:—

"His last letter from Venice," says our friend, "is full of hope and cheer. Many Jews are acquainted with our Identity, and not a few believers. These attend his place of worship, joining in the service, although not acknowledging themselves Christians. At a large meeting held in the Waldensian church, he brought forward the subject, and interested his listeners to the extent that a Jewish lady and her husband came forward, and, convinced of the truth of Christianity by British Identity, asked to be baptized. Prayer was publicly offered for British-Israel; and several English present thanked Beruatto at the close for speaking out boldly. Signor Beruatto is full of hope that God will permit him to preach 'the Gospel of the kingdom,' which he distinguishes from the Gospel of grace (Mat. xxiv. 14), all over the British Empire. If he can get over the difficulties of our language, his enthusiasm, eloquence, and emotion when speaking of the Identity, would certainly draw attention. I verily believe that foreigners, if given the opportunity, would believe in 'the Gospel of the kingdom' sooner than we ourselves; for the simplicity, and humanity, and suitability of this new and yet old 'Gospel of the kingdom' to all the wants of humanity, adapts itself to the foreign mind reading Scripture for the first time. It is, then, unprejudiced, and not blinded by the 'ologies' and 'isms' which, like cobwebs, cover our vision and confuse our natural reason, which we must always bring to the Bible as well as faith.

"Two Italian gentlemen, reading Beruatto's book, Britannia-Israele, the other week, did not even dispute it. They thought it the most reasonable and natural unravelling of the present state of world-wide affairs."

So far our friend now in Italy. On the 18th August, 1880 (page 331), we promised our readers some quotations from Signor Beruatto's book; and we redeem our pledge now by furnishing some extracts, kindly translated for us from the Italian by a friend at Bath, who, singular to say, still refuses to believe in our Identity, even after reading and enjoying the pasteur's book. In his preface the Signor says: "Mine is not an invention—merely a discovery, and I hasten to mention that I am not even its discoverer. To Cæsar that which belongs to Cæsar. The discoverer was John Wilson, of Brighton. He it was in the first place who, devoting himself to deep prophetical studies, had the good fortune to make the discovery. He himself presented it to the British public now thirty years since, in a series of discourses; but, as happens to every new discovery and discoverer, he was laughed at and forgotten. Wilson died praying that soon, for the good of humanity, might arise the day of the recognition of Israel in England; and only within the last five years Edward Hine, of Liverpool, and W. Bird (known by the pseudonym of Philo-Israel), of Bristol, have revived Wilson's idea, becoming its warm and successful propagandists. To them I send across the Alps and the Atlantic my most cordial thanks."

Signor Beruatto treats the subject of our British Identity under the following heads and chapters:—

1. The Eastern Question—what is it? 2. Do the Jews as known at the present time constitute the whole of the ancient Hebrew people? 3. The distinctions between Israel and Judah. 4. History, tradition, and monuments prove the Israelitish emigration from Assyria to England. 5. The Identity of Israel-England. 6. The Bible affirms that Israel should rise again 2,000 years after the captivity (Hosea vi. 1, 3; 2 Pet. iii. 8). 7. Israel risen again must be a Christian nation (Isa. ix. 1—7). 8. Israel must be found a missionary people (Isa. xxvii. 6, xxiv. 14, 15; Micah v. 7). 9. Israel must be found observing the day of rest (Ezek. xx. 20). 10. Israel must be found in islands to the North-west of the Holy Land (Isa. lxvi. 19, xlii. 12, lix. 18; Jer. iii. 18). 11. Israel must be supreme upon the seas, and immensely rich (Isa. lx. 8, 9, 17, xlix. 18—21; Deut. xxviii. 1—10). 12. Israel must be a people by itself; never conquered; but, on the contrary, at the head of the nations of the earth (Jer. xxxi. 35, 36; Isa. lx. 22, xli. 10, 15; Deut. xxviii. 1—13; Micah v. 9). 13. Israel must be a multitude of nations (Num. xxiii. 10; Jer. xxxv. 11). 14. Israel must possess the gate of her enemies (Gen. xxii. 17; Isa. lx. 11). 15. The power of Israel must extend itself as a blessing to all people; and its colonies must gird the earth (Psa. xcviii. 2—8; Deut. xxxii. 12; Gen. xxii. 18). 16. Israel must retain the characteristic custom of the Hebrews, lending but not borrowing (Deut. xv. 6; xxviii. 12). 17. Israel must be unknown by name, but must retain its emblems, its rites, customs, measures, &c. (Isa. lviii. 6; Jer. xxxiv. 15—17). 18. Cui bono? The Jews must return to Palestine. We are on the eve of a great transformation in society. The Eastern Question is the match that will explode it. Here it is that the nations will find their regenerating baptism; and, cleansing themselves from the prejudices and errors which still cling to them, will rise to a new life of morality, justice, and love. England itself, though the Israel of God, will then expiate her political sins, wash away her national crimes, purge herselffrom her pride, from her often-broken faith, and her accursed opium trade.

Digitized by Google

This and very much more is to be found in Signor Beruatto's little volume. We do not, of course, agree with all he sets out in his work; but we can well afford to give him, as a foreign Israelite by conviction, the right hand of fellowship, and heartily wish him "God-speed." His volume can be had of W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, London. Its Italian selling price is One Lira.

JEHOVAH'S VERSUS MEN'S STATEMENTS.

SELECTED BY T. T. PITT.

"HE that revealeth secrets maketh known to thee what shall come to pass."—Daniel ii. 29.

"Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but He revealeth His secret to His servants the prophets."—Amos iii. 7.

"Thus saith Jehovah; If My covenant be not with day and night, and if I have not appointed the ordinances of heaven and earth; then will I cast away the seed of Jacob and David My servant, so that I will not take any of his seed to be rulers over the seed of Abraham, Issac, and Jacob; for I will cause their captivity to return, and have mercy on them" (Jer. xxxiii. 25, 26).

"Thus saith the Lord God; I will take of the highest branch of the high cedar, and will set it; I will crop off from the top of his young twigs a tender one, and will plant it upon a high mountain and eminent; IN THE MOUNTAIN OF THE HEIGHT OF ISRAEL WILL I PLANT IT; and it shall bring forth boughs, and bear fruit, and be a goodly cedar; and under it shall dwell all fowl of every wing; in the shadow of the branches thereof shall they dwell" (Ezek. xvii. 22, 23).

"These great beasts, which are four, are four kings, which shall arise out of the earth. But the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever" (Dan. vii. 17, 18).

"In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed, and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever" (Dan. ii. 44).

"During the whole of this period (1,260 days) Israel has ceased to be an independent kingdom" (The Approaching End of the Age, pp. 348).

"As far as earthly government is concerned the Jews (or Israel) were now given up until the second man is brought in. With this long abandonment of the Jews commenced the times of the Gentiles—that is, the period during which the sceptre of earthly dominion is entrusted to the Gentiles instead of to Israel" (Israel's Watchman, October, 1880, pp. 304).

"There was indeed a remnant, according to the election of grace, even out of partially-blinded Israel; but the nation as a whole was cast off, while the Gentiles took the place of pre-eminence in God's thoughts. The Gentiles were the special objects of God's favour" (pp. 305).

"The stream of prophetic time ceases to run . . . . and will not again begin to flow till after the fulness of the Gentiles has come in, and God once more takes up the thread of His purposes concerning the earth" (pp. 305).

"After this the times of the Gentiles changed their nature; iron and clay mingled together, or the rule was divided among kingdoms of various origin and character" (pp. 304).

"Beyond preserving their nationality, for the purposes of His grace in the coming age, God has had no dealings in grace with the Jew (or Israel), nor will He have during this age" (January, 1881, pp. 22).

"I will not execute the fierceness of Mine anger, I will not return to destroy Ephraim; for I am God, and not man" (Hos. xi. 9).

"O Israel, return unto Jehovah thy God. I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely; for My anger is turned away from him. I will be as the dew unto Israel" (Hos. xiv. 1, 4, 5).

"Behold, I will allure her, and bring her into the WILDERNESS, and speak comfortably unto her. And I will give her the valley of Achor for a door of hope; AND SHE SHALL SING THERE as in THE DAYS OF HER YOUTH" (Hos. ii. 14, 15).

"After two days He will revive us; in the third day He will raise us up, and we shall live in His sight" (Hos. vi. 2).

"And I will sow them (Ephraim) among the people; and they shall remember Me in far countries; and they shall live with their children, and turn again" (Zech. x. 9).

"Jehovah also shall save the tents of Judah first, that the glory of the house of David and the glory of the inhabitants of Jerusalem do not magnify against Judah" (Zech. xii. 7).

"For, lo, I will command, and I will sift the house of Israel among all nations, like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth" (Amos ix. 9).

"From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia My suppliants, the daughter of My dispersed—viz., Israel—shall bring My offering" (Zeph. iii. 10; compare with Isa. xviii. 7).

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be in the midst of many people, as a dew from Jehovah, as the showers upon the grass" (Micah v. 7).

"And I heard the number of them which were sealed; and there were sealed an hundred and forty and four thousand of all the Tribes of the children of Israel. Of the Tribe of Juda, Reuben, Gad, Aser, Nepthalim, Manasses, Simeon, Levi, Issachar, Zabulon, Joseph, and Benjamin respectively were sealed twelve thousand" (Rev. vii. 4, 5).

"Now these are the names of the Tribes. From the North end to the coast . . . . a portion for Dan" (Ezek. xlviii. 1).

If our reading of prophecy be correct, Two Tribes alone return to Palestine. (See also Ezek. xlviii.).

"That it is the true Israel of God, and not the seed of Jacob after the flesh, which are here intended, should be manifest to the least spiritual discernment, as well as to the most superficial observer of prophecy" (pp. 22).

"We ask objectors, Where, when, how, as to time, space, or place, could such a work of evangelisation take place among LITERAL Jews (or Israel) as to convert 144,000, and especially 12,000 of each Tribe, when Two Tribes alone are restored?" (pp. 22).

"What are these various names but so many features of the one name expressive of the one nature in which all so endued shall presently be swallowed up and lost!" (pp. 22).

"In our New Jerusalem home, where failure will be no more, Dan, either as a serpent in the way, or as a lion's whelp, would be as much out of work as out of place" (pp. 22).

LOST ISRAEL FOUND IN THE BRITISH ISLES, "THE ISLES AFAR OFF."

An Outline of a Lecture delivered in the Victoria Hall, Norwich, and in the Albert Hall, Sheffield,

BY JOHN M. W. YOUNG

(Organist of Lincoln Cathedral, and President of the Lincoln Anglo-Israel Association).

THE lecturer began by stating that the foundation on which the Identity is built is, The Bible is true. That one part of Scripture cannot contradict another. That a literal interpretation be given to all passages of Scripture which refer to Israel and Judah as a nation. That this same rule be applied to other passages, unless, by doing so, we violate common sense, or make one part of Scripture contradict another. The necessity for studying this history of Israel and Judah is evident from the fact that seven-eighths of the Old Testament, and a great part of the New, refer to them. That Israel's history is our history. It did not end with the captivity. The stability of the British Empire depends on our being Israel. Hence its practical character. The Cui bono? objection answered. The various ways in which the subject may be argued. On this occasion it was principally from Scripture, in connection with British history. The various ways in which the theory was received when first made known to the people of Lincoln 10 years ago.

This grand truth, like all other great truths, opposed by the so-called learned. Instances of the unjustifiable language made use of by clergymen and others. The Identity having caused sceptics to believe in the Bible a sufficient answer to such opponents.

The lecturer then stated that there were two things which, above all others, had obscured prophecy—viz., the failing to see the distinction between Israel and Judah, and spiritualising all the prophecies relating to Israel. The difficulty in getting persons to see the difference between Israel and Judah. Examples given: one of a clergyman, who asserted that the Ten Tribes crucified Christ, and that this was the reason why the blessings promised to Israel were transferred to the Church. Also that "Israel and the Jews were all the same!" This blindness Paul called a mystery. The term "all Israel" explained. Israel's history until the Assyrian captivity; they never returned to their land again. A short outline of the history of Judah and Benjamin from the division of the kingdom under Rehoboam and Jeroboam. The prophecies concerning the two Houses contrasted. The contradictory assertions of the opponents of the Identity as to what became of Israel (some saying they ceased to exist, others that they were absorbed) considered and answered. The importance of Benjamin's mission—viz., left with Judah to be a light—the Tribe from which Christ took His disciples, His own Tribe, Judah, having rejected Him. This Tribe found in the Normans by Mr. Hine.

Digitized by Google

The lecturer next drew attention to the spiritualising of the prophecies concerning Israel, showing that all the promises, temporal as well as spiritual, had been appropriated by the Church, the consequence being that Israel, as a nation, had been lost sight of, until their very existence was denied. He said, No one ever attempted to deny the literal fulfilment of everything concerning Judah; nor could it be denied that Israel was literally banished from their land. Were we then to conclude that God would carry out His threats, but would not perform His promises? God's promises to Israel could not be transferred to any Gentile Church or nation. Israel was the people that God had formed for Himself, to show forth His praise. The command was given to Israel to preach to the Gentiles, not the Gentiles to Israel, and as we are doing it, we must be Israel.

Allusion was then made to the headings in our Bible, many of them being misleading; the book of Isaiah being mentioned as an excellent illustration. This appropriation, by what is called the Church, of what was promised to Israel, as a nation, was then argued at considerable length, and he attributed much of the infidelity existing to this tampering with the plain text of Scripture.

Some of the principal characteristics by which Israel was to be known in the latter days were next mentioned, and it was shown that no nation except ourselves answers to all of them. The time of the return apparently close at hand. The Pyramid indication. The drying up of the Euphrates; the 1,260 years of Turkish rule being up in 1881. This also the time of the end, but not the end of time. When Turkey collapses we, who have the protectorate of Palestine, will undoubtedly take possession of it.

The lecturer then took the following marks in order, and showed how they have all been fulfilled in the British nation—viz., "A multitude of nations;" "a nation and a company of nations;" "the isles afar off;" "the cord or measuring line round the earth." That they should be under a monarchy; should dwell alone. An undefeated nation with a small army. Mistress of the seas; the chief of the nations; possessing the Gates of their enemies. The most wealthy nation; lending to all nations, but never borrowing. Ruling over the heathen; reigning over many nations, but no nation ruling over them. A Christian nation. The destroyer of slavery throughout the world. The one nation keeping the Sabbath.

Reasons given why the Ten Tribes should lose all knowledge of themselves, lose their language and religion. Ezekiel's vision of the "dry bones" compared with Israel's (our) history after the captivity. Our Prayer Book a proof of our Identity. The remarkable Coronation prayer used by Ethelred II.

This terminated a lecture which lasted two hours, and which was listened to with the greatest attention from the beginning to the end.

"THE HEIR OF ALL THE AGES."

In the Glasgow Weekly Herald, of January 15, 1881, we have recorded the sketch of an excellent lecture delivered by Mr. J. H. Stoddart, in the Scots' Law Class-room of the University of Glasgow, to the members of the Dumfries and Galloway University Literary Society. Mr. William M'Dowall presided, and there was a good attendance of members. The subject of the lecture, "The Heir of all the Ages," was distinctly an Identity address, blindly delivered, since its theme was the heir of the world (Rom. iv. 13), the British Empire. We wish we had room in our too-small periodical for the whole address. We are unable to find that, but shall content ourselves with quoting, for our readers' benefit, Mr. Stoddart's peroration. After sketching in a masterly way the rise and progress of the British nation, the lecturer said what indeed are the sentiments of the BANNER and of its editor:—

It is not in the way of glorification that I recall to you the splendid fortune in your country, in your race, in your language, in your literature, and in your history to which you have the right of succession. It is rather to speak of the responsibilities which attach to such a great possession. The acknowledgment must be made that the succession is yours, and also the fact that it is a succession the like of which the youth of no other nation can succeed to. Look at the British Empire as it now exists, built up by the strong hands of our forefathers, and firmly cemented by their blood. What, gentlemen, is this British Empire? I will not say that it is one upon which the sun never sets, because that conveys little or no meaning, although it is perfectly true, for while it is setting on the loneliest isle of the Hebrides, it is rising on the highest peaks in the gold-mining region of Ballarat. A single colony in the Southern Seas might easily secure that somewhat hackneyed boast. But the British Empire includes great possessions in all quarters of the globe. Somehow or other, either from the Briton's love of conquest, which he has inherited, or from circumstances resulting from this love of conquest, a great portion of the world has come into our possession. I am not here, gentlemen, to justify the means by which these great possessions have been obtained. Upon the whole, I think, that it is for the advantage of civilisation that they have been acquired; but, rightly or wrongly acquired, here we are in possession of them, and we cannot get rid of them now without ignominiously shirking enormous responsibilities. Fortunately, there is no statesman of the present day who would dare to venture upon a policy the object of which was to reduce the limits of the British Empire by giving up the responsibilities which we have undertaken for the welfare of many a savage and semi-civilised race. If there is one idea which finds equal and enthusiastic support with all parties—with some exceptions, of course—it is that the British Empire shall be maintained intact. We do not know what is in store for us in the future; but, as far as I can see, I think it is probable that for many years yet to come the British people will take pride in their possessions abroad, and consider themselves as the mother race, and the born rulers and legislators of our great colonies and dependencies. Well, then, gentlemen, we have at the present moment what is comparatively speaking a small island and a small population, whose language and whose laws go forth to the uttermost ends of the earth. Why? Because the people of this small island have been able to govern and to colonise such as no other people in the world have been able to do. We hold our great position by a right which is natural, because it is the right of strength and of intelligence; and, sentimental views and feelings apart, that is the right, and the true right, which in present circumstances must govern the world. I can easily imagine another condition of things, and so can you, under which affairs would be entirely altered. But that is not the question. We have to deal with the world as we find it, and we have to look at our own position as it exists. What is that? It is that we are entrusted with the government of great colonies, whose future is almost infinite in expansion, and with the government of an Empire in the East, which contains within its borders one-fifth of the whole human family. Well, gentlemen, we cannot rid ourselves of the responsibility of the vast trust devolving upon us in the maintenance of this great colonial and Eastern Empire. If the stock fails here, in these our British islands, our Empire must fall to pieces. It is simply by the supply of thoroughly educated, trained, good men that our Empire can be maintained. We must look to our youths, to the students in our Universities, to the students who without University aid are nurturing themselves for the task of government, to keep up the prestige, the name and fame, and power to govern, of the British people. If we fail here, we shall fail everywhere. But I have no fear of that. I have no fear that any process of degeneration will take place among our people, or that as a nation we shall become incapable of adequately fulfilling the trust that has descended to us. Gentlemen, I hope you will regard these not as words of natural glorification, but rather as sober facts of our history and position, which you, a portion of the youth of the nation, ought seriously to lay to heart. You are to succeed those who at present are bearing the burden and heat of the day, a burden and a heat of no mean or ignoble kind. It is the heat and burden of a great Empire, the greatest that the world has ever seen. The greatest, I believe, in every sense, because never before did an Imperial people recognise the duties in the same high sense which Empire devolves upon them. The lecturer, who was frequently applauded, resumed his seat amid loud cheers.

Let the reader mark what Mr. Stoddart said, "A great part of the world has come into our possession." But the means by which we have acquired them are not to be justified in all cases. To say this, however, is only to admit the truth, that just as Jacob in his natural state before he was ennobled by his Maker, with whom he struggled for His blessing, was Jacob the mean supplanter, the robber of his brother's birthright first and afterwards of his blessing. So British-Israel, in her Lo-Ammi state, advances and has advanced to world-wide power by means which cannot always be justified or applauded. But Jacob, when he struggled with the angel, was granted his patent of nobility when he was named Israel, a prince of God—the very type of Christ, since "he had power with God and with men thenceforth, and prevailed" (Gen. xxxii. 28).

Jacob, after his change of name, was a better, nobler, more exalted man than he ever was before; a sanctified servant of the living God, and forthwith an inheritor of the glorious blessings God granted to the forefather of our race. Just so, the British race, degraded, sin-stricken, often mean and sordid now, will ere long be blest with the spiritual blessings which will make this par excellence the "righteous nation" (Isa. xxvi. 2, lx. 21), the God-honoured, dominant people of the Great Jehovah, whom to see will be to acknowledge they are the seed the Lord hath blessed, the rulers of the earth, the heirs of the world, to whom all races shall pay glad obedience (Isa. xliii. 12, Dan. vii. 27, Hosea i. 10, Isa. lxi. 9, Rom. iv. 13, Psa. cxi. 6, Zech. viii. 22, 23).

Mr. Stoddart bears true testimony that "the British is the grandest, greatest Empire the world has ever seen; the greatest in every sense." If so, then surely the Word of God must have some mention of it. The four great Empires of the world, now past and existing in its last stage of dissolution, are noted in God's Word. The Prophet Daniel, in chap. ii., gives us the details, for he names the Babylonian, the Medo-Persian, the Grecian, and the Roman, the last in its present state of its ten-toed disruption. What follows? What is ready to take its place? The kingdom of the stone, the kingdom of God over His own people, even Israel; and behold! the British Empire (Mr. Stoddart being our witness) stands up to confirm the words of inspiration, and to show that Israel's Empire, being that of Britain, is present in the earth to-day, to confound the sceptic, to confirm the faith of God's elect, and to prove the Bible literally true. Israel, praise ye the Lord.

CAPE AND AUSTRALIAN CONFEDERATION.

THE following appeared in the Daily Telegraph some months ago, and is a remarkable contribution to the literature now accumulating on the subject of the confederation of Israel's Empire in the four quarters of the globe :—

To the Editor of the "Daily Telegraph."

SIR,—The alarm which the defeat of General Burrows' brigade has not unreasonably caused brings into full relief the waste of Imperial resources and the political danger arising from the want of a system of military co-operation for the defence of our common Empire, between the United Kingdom and its outlying colonies and dependencies. Particularly with reference to India the natural concern of the moment enforces the necessity for the speedy confederation of the Cape and Australasian colonies. Ours is a commercial and not a military Empire. Since it began to grow up we have not carried on a single purely military war, and we were gradually led to the acquirement of our settlements in the Indian Archipelago and at the Cape, and at last to the conquest of India, by the requirements of our modern commerce with the East. We do not hold India so much for itself as for a security in our free trade with the East. Unfortunately, we have heretofore had to hold this great dependency exclusively from the distant base of the United Kingdom. Heretofore, indeed, we have been able to do so with ease, and without anxiety. But with the prodigious development in recent times of the military monarchies, which now dominate all the lines of our overland communications with India, it is only to be expected that the slightest reverse of our arms in the distant East, which is calculated to entangle or embroil us with the aggressive power of Russia, should excite alarm far beyond its intrinsic importance; and most in those who are best informed as to the conditions, and best understand the full significance of our possession of India. Hence the desirability of establishing bases of British power nearer to India than the United Kingdom. The Cape colony was indeed originally acquired for no other purpose than as a basis for our trade in the Indian seas; and were the Cape colonies now confederated in one South African dominion, and the Australian and New Zealand colonies, &c., in one United State of Australasia, they would become independent points from which India would be effectively held for the future safe from all dangers and alarms. The confederation of these colonies would give them the status of international powers of definite influence in the world. The sense of their importance and responsibility as such would develop their self-reliance. They would thus spontaneously learn to exact less and share more in the reciprocal service of the commonweal, and in any military emergency might be relied on affording prompt and solid aid against the common danger. The confederation of the Australasian colonies is still a comparatively remote question, but that of the Cape colonies ought to be pressed; and what has occurred on the Helmund should urge the authorities, both at home and at the Cape, to conclude the proposed arrangement as quickly as possible. Let us cease from arguing over the obsolete Zulu war. It has at least relieved the Cape colonists from their most disturbing local fear. The Government, it must be confessed, has been far too apathetic, or have allowed themselves to seem so, on the present, and as I believe, most urgent question. The Cape colonists attribute the temporary failure of the proposed scheme to the indifferent manner in which the present Government has appeared to view it, and they believe that the Government have only to show themselves in earnest about it, and to give whoever may be entrusted with the negotiations full powers in dealing with the different colonies in South Africa, to ensure their confederation.

The confederation of the Cape and also of the Australasian colonies should be completed as promptly as practicable, if only for the good of our commerce in the East, and to avoid alarms, which in themselves are commercial evils, over every petty repulse we may receive in our efforts to introduce orderly government and abiding peace among the lawless and warlike races who live on the North-west frontier, between India and the rapidly-advancing boundaries of the Russian Empire in Central Asia. INDICOPLEUSTES.

"SCATTERING THE POWER OF THE HOLY PEOPLE."

WE take the following from York House Papers of January 19, 1881, as illustrating the dispersion of the British army, and the necessity the Government are under of substituting for its services that of the navy as a land force. Thus, not only Israel's army, but her sea "power" also, is under process of "scattering," and then, when that is "accomplished," the destined "end" will come; Israel will "enter into her chambers," "shut her 'Gates' about her," and "hide herself," as it were, till the destined moment for her exodus towards the land of the inheritance shall have arrived. The York House Papers remarks as follows:—

The Army has so nearly disappeared under the experimental culture of recent years, that the Government is making a call for the services of the Navy in every possible way, both at the Cape and in Ireland. Admiral Hamilton, the Naval Commander-in-Chief at Queenstown, and General Steele, commanding the Forces in Ireland, have been directed to co-operate, and the Navy and Army are to work together wherever they can. Some directions have also been drawn up for the instruction of Naval officers in command of the various ships and gunboats round the coast, as to how far their men are to be at the disposal of the civil power if called upon. All leave has been stopped in the Irish ships, and those officers and men who are absent on leave have been directed to rejoin immediately.

As regards the Cape, it was the fact that it was most unadvisable to send any more troops out of England in the face of the Irish trouble that induced the War Office to make use of the Indian reliefs, sending them to the Cape instead of allowing them to come home to England, as they had anticipated. But there is a limit even to the number of troops that can be drawn from India when rumours of plots for the massacre of Europeans are about; so there being no more Marines available, and the battalions in Ireland being unable to be withdrawn, the Government bethought itself of trying a large Naval force in the field. Consequently, telegraphic orders were sent to Monte Video for the senior Naval officer in port to proceed at once to the Falkland Islands, and tell Lord Clanwilliam that he and the crews of the five ships under him were wanted at the Cape. There are some sixteen hundred souls in these ships, and although many of them are young hands, they will be of incalculable service in forming a Naval brigade. Meanwhile, too, more hands will be collected at the ports, and if it be possible to spare them, will be sent out to the Cape, more as troops than as sailors. This double use to which the British seaman has been adapted is the best possible excuse that can be offered for that new school of Naval officer which has been accused of turning the sailor into a half-soldier, in devoting so much of his time to the manual and platoon and field-battery exercises.

We hope our readers see how exactly facts fit in to prophecy, and how closely the fulfilments seem to be following what is declared to be the sign of the time of the end, when all the mystery of God shall be finished (Dan. xii. 7; Rev. x. 7). As we write, news arrives of another Ashantee trouble, which comes on our nation in a manner quite unprovoked by us. It is the result of our Israelite law of "asylum," which the bloody monster King Coffee Callalli resents, and hence the additional need of troops to be sent to Cape Coast Castle. Verily the Lord is "dispersing" our "power" rapidly, and "a short work is He making on the earth" (Rom. ix. 28). We see reason herein to "praise the Lord," because, when the "scattering is accomplished," God's purposes towards Israel will be graciously "finished" (Dan. xii. 7).

STRAY SUGGESTIONS.

By L. P.

A SIGN OF TWO LETTERS.

The following passage is quoted from "Studies in German Literature," by Bayard Taylor (American):—

"If the Gothic language be the legitimate mother of the old German, it must also be, through the Saxon, the grandmother of English, and of the Swedish and Danish. . . . . We see one of the lost stages of travel, whereby many of the words of our daily usage were carried from their far home in India, through Tartary, over the Caucasus, around the Black Sea, and so Westward until they reach history. It is a curious circumstance that the two sounds th in English are derived from the Gothic. The German race must once have used these sounds (?), and then lost them. But they were carried by the Visigoths to Spain, and still belong to Icelandic, after having been dropped out of Swedish and Danish. We might almost say that the Gothic of Alfilas (fourth century) is the point whence the elements which have become separated in English and German, began to diverge; but there are one or two later fragments wherein they are still blended."

ENGLAND "OUT OF THE RUNNING," AND "DWELLING ALONE."

In an article of the December, 1880, No. of the Nineteenth Century, on "Ireland in 1848 and Ireland Now," Mr. Justin McCarthy says,—

"As Mr. Mill well reminded Lord Sherbrooke, when Lord Sherbrooke was Mr. Lowe, the whole land system of England is peculiar and uncommon. The Irish circumstances and the Irish ideas as to social and agricultural economy," said Mr. Mill, "are the general ideas and circumstances of the human race. . . . . Ireland is in the main stream of human existence and human feeling and opinion. It is England that is in one of the lateral channels."

LOOK ON THIS SIDE AND ON THAT.

When meditating the destruction of a cutting sent to us some weeks back, headed, "The Anglo-Israel Craze," signed M. A., and being an attack on our "theory," and its principal advocate, Philo-Israel, our eye fell on the reverse side of the scrap of paper. We were then struck by the curious fact, before unobserved, that the fragment printed thereon bore indirect testimony in favour of the Identity, which was attacked on the other side of the cutting. It consists of only a portion of an article, being suddenly cut off in the middle of a sentence, to suit the shorter piece dealing with "the craze." It is headed, "A Busy Day at the Tract Society," describes the appearance of the capacious ground floor in Paternoster-row, now "known as the issuing department," the admirable organisation of the various sections, and mentions "that astounding array of figures which the Rev. Dr. Manning so smoothly presents, when he gives at every annual meeting the Society's total issues from its commencement in 1799 until now. Friends will remember that the number for some years has far exceeded a million of millions, and that last year (1879) when almost every Society was lamenting the depression of trade, the total circulation from the home depôt of the Religious Tract Society showed an increase of 5,274,940 upon the previous year."

Now what is all this about? What are these magnificent issues? Only the witnessing for Christ and God's Holy Word to all the corners of the earth, only appeals to forsake unrighteousness and to fall low at the footstool of the Saviour, to every sinner. Is this not Israel's special mission? (Micah v. 7; Isa. xxvii. 6; Matt. xxviii. 19; Luke xxiv. 47, 48). Is it carried out in like manner by any other people in the world? "To know," as the writer of the notice we have been referring to says, "that all this energy is being displayed simply and solely for a good object, and that there is not a bad book"—. Here the scissors have played their relentless part, and the end of the sentence remains unknown to us; but we feel assured that it asserted that not one injurious work passes out of this Society's printing office—and we may add a "thank God" that He has bestowed on us the immense privilege of thus sowing the good seed broadcast.

MATTHEW XXV. 34, 35.

We read the other day, in the Times, that at Windsor the text engraved on the monument of the lately deceased Prince of Abyssinia is, "I was a stranger, and ye took me in."

January 14.

THE "LONDON QUARTERLY REVIEW" ON THE GREAT PYRAMID, AND PROFESSOR PIAZZI SMYTH'S REPLY.

Forwarded by J. Thompson.

PART I.

[We have great pleasure in publishing the following correspondence, containing Professor Piazzi Smyth's reply to the attack lately made by the London Quarterly Review on the Great Pyramid and its measurer.—Editor.]

Dear Sir,—Your kindness in answering my former communication, urges me again to write you upon a question of great interest. I do not know whether you have seen Israel's Hope and Destiny or not? If you have not, I may say that last year there appeared in its pages an article by me on "The Symbology of the Great Pyramid." As I was thinking to follow that up, shortly, by a supplementary article, I thought, before writing anything further, it would perhaps be as well to write to you concerning an article on the Great Pyramid, a review on the fourth edition of "Our Inheritance," etc., which appeared in this month's number of The London Quarterly Review. The magazine was lent me by a friend, so I can only refer to it from memory. I thought that before this time you might have seen it, and would be making a reply to it in the BANNER, or elsewhere; and I should like to see that. If you have not seen it, it would, perhaps, be as well to do so the first opportunity. It is a pretty lengthy article, and is the first in the number, thus occupying the place of honour. In my opinion, it is a very good illustration of the rule always necessary to be observed by a reviewer—"above all things, impress your readers with the idea that you possess all knowledge upon the subject under consideration, and that from your judgment there is no appeal." Read with this axiom in mind, the review of your book becomes decisive and final; and in the eyes of most of his readers, I fear it will not be thought worth while studying "Our Inheritance" further.

Digitized by Google

The reviewer gives you a certain amount of credit for some scientific attainments; and if it were not for its peculiar theory, your book might be valuable, and even more readable, but for its style (which does not suit the reviewer's cultivated taste); and if it were reduced to about one-third of its size; but how this could be done, except by leaving out the most essential part—i.e., the peculiar theory—altogether, the writer fails to show. This theory concerning the Great Pyramid, he says, was a notion of the late Mr. J. Taylor, university printer; and it might have been passed by, and eventually dropped out of notice, as the harmless conceit of an eccentric old man, but for your taking it up; and, as you occupy a position in the scientific world, it has become necessary for so learned a man as your reviewer to condescend to show his readers the utter absurdities abounding in your book.

It would be impossible, even in a long letter, to give you a full detailed account of the many objections the reviewer brings against your theory. One is, I think, a very serious one, and one which no honourable man should bring against another, unless he has very clear proof in support of his insinuation. He says the asserted marks on the entrance passages have been placed there in modern days to fit the modern theory, for they would long since have been worn out by the passage of numberless hands during the past eight or nine centuries. Again, he asserts that nowhere in the Great Pyramid has the Architect left an indubitable standard of measurement by which he worked; and, in support of this assertion, he attempts to show that all your arguments founded upon the Boss—or Granite Leaf—are mere assumption. He says the fact is, anything can be read in the Great Pyramid that a theorist may choose to imagine; and he undertakes to show, with great plausibility, that the number 4 can be found in it quite as well as the number 5; or the Egyptian cubit of 20 inches quite as well as your so-called "sacred cubit" of 25 inches. He ridicules the idea of the squaring of the circle being found in it; or any astronomical discovery of modern times; for he says it is neither exactly square, nor are the measurements made identical; each differs from another; and your's must be altered and modified, here and there, to bear out even your own theory. If I remember right, he also asserts that the true angle of inclination has not been found; or, if it has, it does not bear out the results you claim in your theory; and the general conclusion arrived at, is that your whole book is only an illustration of the extent to which a delusion will sometimes spread, and carry with it even men of thought and understanding; every allusion to its grandest facts being pointed to in unmitigated scorn by the reviewer, with a note of interjection (!) as the extreme of absurdity and ignorance.

Though, as I above said, I have written from memory only, and a month nearly (i.e., just four weeks) after reading it, I do not think I have done the writer any injustice. Whether you may think of replying at length or not in public print, I do not know; but many who never will have an opportunity of reading your book, may read this and such like articles. The Review, if I mistake not, is a Wesleyan publication; and will, doubtless, have the bulk of its circulation in that body. I never saw the magazine before. For my part, I am chiefly interested in the symbology of the Great Pyramid. The measurements, and the marks, and the inferences therefrom, are legitimate questions to be settled by men of science, and by scientific means; and then, when that work is done, as near perfection as human fallibility permits, it is time to inquire into the meaning of it all. Should you think proper to answer this, you will place me under a great obligation; and if it throws any light upon the questions which have arisen in my mind, I may make use of it whenever I may write again on "Pyramid Symbology."

Another objection raised by the reviewer against the Great Pyramid theory is the position of the "well's mouth." If it is just 33½ inches from the commencement of the Grand Gallery, then its diameter—whatever it may be in inches, according to the inch to the year theory—signifies so many years after the death of our Lord, or that His death and resurrection occupied so many years, which is absurd. Now I would like to ask, What is its precise width? and how far is it from the commencement of the Grand Gallery? I have an answer of my own, were I replying to the reviewer, but as I am not, I thought I would like to know yours.

Apologising again for thus troubling you,

I remain, yours faithfully,

J. THOMPSON.

PIAZZI SMYTH, Esq., Edinburgh.

5, Market-avenue, Ashton-under-Lyne,
January 29, 1881.

(To be continued.)

Correspondence.

THE JEWS AND PALESTINE.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—May I for a moment direct the attention of yourself and your readers to a passage occurring in the article, "Another Link in the Historical Chain," which appears in to-day's issue of the BANNER, and reads thus: "It is Israel that is to bring back the Jews to Palestine; it is Israel that is to bring the present or thank-offering to the Lord; and what is the present? Nothing less than a nation, scattered and peeled; and this present is to be made by a nation terrible from its beginning, hitherto. 'My suppliant, even the daughter of My dispersed shall bring Mine offering'"? A little explanation will, I think, show that this passage is open to some slight criticism.

It is, of course, a reference to Isa. xviii., and is a summary of verses 2 and 7, as given in our Authorised Translation of the Bible. From verse 7, as there rendered, we understand that "in that time shall a people terrible from their beginning hitherto" bring the present unto the Lord of hosts, to Mount Zion, "of a people scattered and peeled, a nation meted out and trodden under foot;" and although Judah to-day is no nation, the conclusion appears to have been formed that Israel being the terrible people, Judah is a debased people, and as such is here spoken of as Israel's present to the Lord. According to the corrected marginal translation of verse 2, we should, however, read, "a nation outspread and polished, a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation that meteth out and treadeth down, whose land the rivers despise" (Micah v. 7, 8). Perhaps the clearest and most concise reference to British-Israel contained in prophecy.

This at once shows us that the first clause of verse 7 speaks only of one people, or nation, as such; the translators, by the use of the two case-words, "of" and "from," having made it apparently speak of two peoples. The verse should, therefore, evidently read thus:—"In that time shall the present be brought unto the Lord of hosts from a people outspread and polished, a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation that meteth out and treadeth under foot, whose land the rivers despise, to the place of the name of the Lord of hosts, the Mount Zion.

What the present is can only be told from other Scriptures, notably Isa. lxvi. 20; verse 1 (which the Rev. Charles Wellbeloved renders, "Ho! to the land of the winged bark," &c.) may be taken in connection with Zeph. iii. 10, and verse 3 with Isa. xi. 10—12.

I do not know whether this is a common understanding of the prophecy among Identity believers, but I have found it valuable in many ways, and shall be glad to find any confirmation there may be of it.

Thanking you for your kind attention to my letter of April last,

I am, dear sir,

Yours faithfully,

J. C. K.

Liverpool, December 15, 1880.

THE REPLY THERETO.

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—You ask me for a note on Mr. J. C. K.'s letter; I cannot do this better than by simply giving the translation of Isa. xviii. 2, 7, as given by Dr. J. A. Alexander, in his Commentary (invaluable so far as mere Hebrew criticism is concerned) on Isaiah.

Verse 2.—"Go, ye light (or swift) messengers, to a nation drawn and shorn, to a people terrible since it existed and onwards, a nation of double strength and trampling, whose land the streams divide."

Here the people referred to in verse 1 are told to go to another people, I believe the Jews, who are described both by reference to their present condition as oppressed and spoiled, and their past condition as a part of the once mighty nation of Israel, whose land the floods of Assyrian invasions divided. The words drawn and shorn, in their prophetic reference, seem to me to belong only to the Jews, the rest of the description to Israel generally, of whom the Jews had formed once a part. Accordingly, in verse 7 we find these elements of verse 2 clearly separated from one another.

Alexander thus renders verse 7: "At that time shall be brought a gift to Jehovah of hosts, a people drawn out and shorn, and from (N.B.) a people terrible since it has been and onward (or still more terrible and still farther off), a nation of double power and trampling, whose land streams divide, to the place of the name of Jehovah of hosts, Mount Zion."

On this Alexander himself remarks, "The most natural construction of the words would seem to be that the gift of Jehovah should consist of one people offered by another." He might have added, one Hebrew people offered by another Hebrew people, the "drawn and shorn" portion of the nation brought as a present to Jehovah by their brethren, who have recovered something of, or more than, their original terrible power and trampling, but whose land is still divided by Gentile streams. To my mind no interpretation will make any sense which does not explain verse 7 as meaning that mighty Israel shall be the means of restoring oppressed Judah to their own land. Fausset says, "The full accomplishment is probably still future, and refers to the restoration of the Jews by some friendly Gentile Power, after anti-Christ's overthrow;" and he evidently thinks England is the Gentile Power referred to. So do I; but the comparison of verses 2 and 7 shows that the "drawn and shorn" people and the terrible people are of one and the same race. Therefore, if the restored are Hebrews, the restorers are so too. If Gentiles, therefore, they must be Gentilised Hebrews—i.e., Lo-Ammi-ed Israel. Zeph. iii. 10 undoubtedly describes the same thing, as does also, I think, Isa. lxvi. 20.

Yours very truly,

C. W. HICKSON.

ENGLAND AND AMERICA.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Your readers are greatly indebted to your Montreal correspondent, "A Bent Oar," for the interesting American newspaper extract which appeared in your last week's issue. I must, however, object to some of the remarks with which your correspondent accompanies the extract. As I understand Mr. Read, his utterances referred to the agricultural prospects of America, and I scarcely think any of your readers would attempt to hold up England in opposition in that respect. England benefits largely by the abundance of American agricultural produce, whilst countries such as Russia are injured. Is not that Identity evidence?

"A Bent Oar" also refers to "such men as Mr. Gladstone and others" as pessimists, but gives no reason for thinking them so. Now, I cannot but think your correspondent is badly informed as to the views of "such men as Mr. Gladstone and others," for the extract sent is an eloquent proof of the correctness of the opinions of Gladstone, Bright, and others, as to the value of free-trade.

Yours faithfully,

H. W.

Hull, February 7, 1881.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Noticing in your valuable paper reports, from time to time, of meetings, lectures, &c., I thought you might like to hear that in this somewhat remote part of the country we have made a start in our Identity movement, by establishing at the post-office a depôt for the sale of the BANNER, Messenger, and other Identity literature; and in order to bring the subject under the notice of the people of this neighbourhood, a lecture was given in the National School-room, on Friday evening last, by Mr. G. Jones, of Birmingham. Subject, "The Promises of God to the Patriarchs Fulfilled in the British Race." The lecture was exceedingly interesting and instructive. The room was quite filled with an attentive audience. The vicar of the parish, the Rev. J. Knight, occupied the chair.

Believe me, yours sincerely,

M. KNIGHT.

Morland Vicarage, Westmoreland,
February 16, 1881.

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

DURING the past month 23 members have been enrolled, the number now being 631. We have had the pleasure of adding to the list the name of one residing at Launceston, Tasmania. In a postscript to his letter, dated December 17, 1880, our friend says, "A thousand thanks for the parcel of Comments I received by yesterday's mail; they are the first that have been seen here. All my friends were so delighted with them that I have not even kept one for myself."

Another member writes: "The Comments are a great assistance to me, showing the meaning and beauty of many passages that, unaided, I should pass over. I am delighted with Philo-Israel's remarks on the Song of Solomon."

A third says, "I hope shortly to send you some more names to be inscribed upon the roll, which I am glad to see surely, if slowly, increasing. I send the Comments to three of our clergy, one of whom I know to be a believer. Another is a reader, but timid; the third preached at me a short time ago. I replied, referring him to the Book which he ought to have been better acquainted with. I have had no rejoinder as yet, nor do I expect one."

Another: "I find it a comfort to feel there are so many who, some time every day, read the same chapter, and pray that beautiful prayer. The Comments are, of necessity, short, but Philo-Israel has done them so well and simply. I find them much valued by those poor people to whom I have given them. I have been, I feel thankful to say, able for many years to bring the subject before numbers, and I find on all sides the glorious truths are spreading faster and faster every day, both at home and abroad."

We very gratefully acknowledge the receipt of another donation of 10s., as well as some smaller sums, towards the fund for the free circulation of Identity literature. One who has recently joined the Union writes: "I am a believer in our Identity, and a reader of the BANNER OF ISRAEL. I have taken some pains to spread it about in this town (Worthing), and it is invariably acceptably received. If you have any Identity literature to spare, and will send it to me, I will willingly distribute it." We shall be glad to hear from other friends able and willing to do likewise. Please state if pamphlets by any particular author are desired. Two auditors will shortly be appointed to assist us in purchasing this literature, and to examine the accounts at the end of the year.

The Card of Membership will be sent on receipt of three stamps. The Comments will be sent post free monthly for 1s. per annum; 2 copies 1s. 6d.; 3 copies 2s. Address, Miss Lawrence, Stoneleigh, New Wimbledon, Surrey.

J. LAWRENCE
(Hon. Sec. I. S. and P. U.).

February 12, 1881.

DR. WILD is now preaching to overflowing audiences in the Bond-street church, one of the largest in Canada.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	13	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

	£	s.	d.
L. W., per "Philo-Israel"	0	10	0
Fanny A. Brake, per "Philo-Israel"	0	10	0

Just published, Crown Octavo, cloth bound, gilt letters, 296 pages.

THE SEED OF ISAAC,
BEING AN
HISTORICAL REVIEW OF GOD'S DEALINGS
WITH
HIS CHOSEN PEOPLE ISRAEL.

BY J. D. GRANGER.

Post free, 4s., from THE AUTHOR, 34, Exeter-street, Plymouth, and ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published, price 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

THE GREAT PYRAMID, IN, BUT NOT OF, EGYPT:

ITS CLAIMS TO BE FOR A SIGN AND FOR A WITNESS UNTO THE LORD OF HOSTS IN THE LAND OF EGYPT,

As announced in the Scriptures of His Holy Prophet Isaiah, B.C. 714.

BY H. W. BADGER,

Private in H. M. 40th Regiment, now serving in India.

INTRODUCED BY MRS. PIAZZI SMYTH,

London :
ROBERT BANKS, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.

NEW WORK BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.
BY PHILO-ISRAEL.
In handsome cloth, gilt, with Coloured Map, and several Illustrations, price 3s. 6d., by post 3s. 10d.

PHILO-ISRAEL'S BOOK FOR CHILDREN.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth, gilt, 1s. Post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Third Edition.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST OR SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS AND TEACHINGS OF THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams. Price 4d., post free 5d.

A RESUME OF THE SCRIPTURAL ARGUMENT, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters."

Price 2d., post free 3d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

London : Robert Banks Racquet-court Fleet-street.

NEW PAMPHLET ON THE IDENTITY OF THE LOST TEN TRIBES
FOR UNIVERSAL CIRCULATION.

The Best Pamphlet to place in the hands of a person unacquainted with the subject.

Price 6d., by post 7d. 64 Demy 8vo. pages, in wrapper. One dozen copies sent free for a post office order for 6s.

FIFTY REASONS
WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES
OF THE LOST TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL.

BY REV. W. H. POOLE, D.D.

"There is a principle which is a bar against all information, which is proof against all argument, and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance. This principle is, contempt prior to examination."—Dr. Paley.

A greater than Paley has said:—"He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is a folly and a shame unto him."—Prov. xviii.

LONDON : ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET.
AND ALL BOOKSELLERS.

ANGLO-ISRAEL AND HIS FIRST PRINCE FOR THE HOLY LAND.
SHEWN FROM SCRIPTURE PROPHECY. WITH STRAINS FOR PALESTINE.
And "Notes on the Enemy," 2s. 6d., cloth. Separately, price 1s.

NOTES ON THE ENEMY;
In a Report of a Great Meeting in London, of Ritualists and Liberationists, to Elect Fit Representatives for Parliament.
With Strains for Anglo-Israel in the Holy Land. By the Rev. HIBBERT NEWTON, D.D.,
Vicar of St. Michael's, Southwark. Author of "Israel Discovered in the Anglo-Saxons," &c.
W. H. GUEST, WARWICK LANE, PATERNOSTER ROW.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,
High-Class Tailor,
47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.

MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

Just published. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA THE ROYAL SEED TO KING DAVID'S THRONE, AND ARE NOT HER SUBJECTS, THE BRITISH PEOPLE, THE TEN LOST TRIBES?
BY WILLIAM HOPTON, of Sutton Heath.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 4d., by post 4½d. Special terms for a quantity.

THE ISRAEL OF GOD.

A SERVICE OF SONG
Upon the Career and Destiny of God's Ancient People Israel. WORDS AND MUSIC.
BY C. W. E.
Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Price 8s., post free 8s. 8d., bound in blue cloth, gilt, side and back.

THE FOURTH VOLUME
OF
THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.
CONTAINING 520 QUARTO PAGES.
Post Office Orders to be made payable to Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or, W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Price 2d., post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES.
An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? An Inquiry establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 4d.

MARCH NUMBER NOW READY.
Price 2d.; Annual Subscription, 2s. 6d.

ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.
Editor: Douglas A. Onslow, J.P.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

THE MARCH MONTHLY PART OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. May be had, by ordering, of any bookseller, or newsagent. Price 7d.
London: W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, E.C.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 4d. Handsome, cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES
AND
1882.
BY THE
REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD,
Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

PHILO-ISRAEL (in the BANNER) says:—"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome Identity volume. It contains twenty discourses of the well-known American divine, Dr. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, N.Y. We are glad to find from these discourses that Dr. Wild is quite one with us on this side the water with most, though not all, the views we entertain on our great and glorious subject.... We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and 'American' point of view, which is sure to interest, sure to be instructive, and may lead the thoughtless and inquiring to pursue the investigation till possibly conviction may be the result.'

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.
BY REV. JOSEPH WILD, D.D.
With a Portrait of the Author.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Just out, 8d., post free 9d.

ISRAEL NOTWITHSTANDING; Being the Second and concluding Part of the Earnest Appeal from the Pew to the Pulpit. By JOHN G. SHAW, Author of "Britain (or Israel)," &c.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

BANNER OF ISRAEL, NOS. 27 AND 36. Any person having copies of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, Nos. 27 or 36, and will forward same to Mr. R. Banks, Publisher, Racquet-Court, Fleet-street, payment for same will be sent by return of post.

ROBERT BANKS'S CATALOGUE on the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Lost Ten Tribes will be sent, post free, on application. Address, Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW.
WEDNESDAY, MARCH 2, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 219. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MARCH 9, 1881. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Fresh Disaster in the Transvaal	101
Perfidious Russia and the Surrender of Candahar	101
The Rock Again, on Anglo-Israelism and the Great Pyramid. By the Editor	102
Our National Flag	103
Jonah a Type of Ephraim-Israel. A Bible Discourse.—Part IV. By John T. Gott	104
The Programme of the Rebellious Boers	105
The London Quarterly Review on the Great Pyramid, and Professor Piazzi Smyth's Reply. Forwarded by J. Thompson.—Part II.	106
Correspondence	107

THE FRESH DISASTER IN THE TRANSVAAL.

THE afflicting news which reached us on Monday, February 28, 1881, regarding the defeat and destruction of hundreds of precious troops in the Transvaal, and of the death of Sir George P. Colley, the British Commander-in-Chief, himself at Majuba Mountain, or Spitzkop, on February 27, has sent a pang of sore distress through the whole nation.

It was only on January 12 last, in BANNER No. 211, that we wrote of a "disaster in the Transvaal," when the 94th Foot was decimated; but to-day we have to record a defeat and a national disgrace which pales all that has gone before. On February 2 we stated, at page 46, that we did not anticipate any speedy pacification at the Cape; but rather that "the complications would deepen and troubles would thicken till men would admit that the enemy had come in like a flood, and the last hour of the Empire had arrived."

The present terrible reverse will have, as all can see, this effect. It will check the effort our Government was making to patch up an inglorious peace with rebels who had beaten our troops often in the field. Surely the Prime Minister cannot now, when the Commander-in-Chief has been shot, whole companies of British soldiers have been killed, and the entire Cape Colony is to-day reduced to the extremest peril by reason of the loss of prestige this succession of defeats has necessarily produced, venture still to think of "peace with dishonour," while such disasters remain unavenged. We cannot believe it; therefore we conclude, further and larger reinforcements must be sent to the Transvaal; troops from India must be hurried there, and the prophecy of Dan. xii. 7, regarding the scattering of the British forces must be carried into further effect in a still more marked manner.

We beg our readers, then, not to despond nor to lose their faith in the lovingkindness and tender mercy of our God, now that His hand is apparently pressing heavily on His people Israel. Mercy is behind these dark clouds of seeming angry visitation. The Lord is afflicting us for our good, and ere long we shall see that it was in very faithfulness He brought this trouble upon the nation. We have had blessings at His hands, and we have praised Him. Shall we now meet with a reverse (recognising that these reverses are merely fulfilments of the prophecies), and fail to praise Him? Nay, Israel, praise ye the Lord, even in this trouble; and look, through the tears of sorrowing nature, to the loving Father's face beyond, who is perfectly reconciled to us in Jesus, and will restore to us the joy when He sees it will be best for His chosen ones to smile again.

PERFIDIOUS RUSSIA AND THE SURRENDER OF CANDAHAR.

THE production of the Afghan papers, and their publication to the country, ought to open the eyes of the British nation, if it does not those of the British Cabinet, regarding the treacherous character of the Russian Government, whose plot to disturb the peace of India after the Berlin Treaty was signed, is now plainly disclosed to the eyes of all who can read and reflect. Will the revelation make any difference in the action of the Government now in power, regarding the fate of Candahar and the Pishin Valley? Will the infatuated resolve to throw these two Gates after those of Cabul, the Khyber, and the Kurum Valley, be persisted in? The St. James's Gazette, of January 27, has written some strong words on this subject, which we quote with satisfaction, for they state the simple truth.

> There is something (it says) well-nigh tragic about the dogged obstinacy with which the Government are pursuing their fatal policy in Afghanistan. We might almost think that one of those Powers of ancient myth which beguiled men to their ruin was working its will upon Mr. Gladstone and his colleagues. There is a touch of the Greek drama about the judicial blindness to the plainest dangers, the "divine" deafness to the loudest warnings, with which they are moving forward to their object.

What is the character of the Power which they are trusting with childlike simplicity? The Afghan papers tell the tale with startling emphasis. The very day the Russian and British Plenipotentiaries met in Berlin, in 1878, to discuss the Treaty of Peace between the Powers, General Stolieteff left Samarcand for Cabul, to raise Afghanistan against a Power at peace with Russia, and to bring on war between Shere Ali and our Indian Government. Was this the act of a nation that can ever again be trusted? It was the secret treachery of a thoroughly faithless people, which surely never can be relied on at all by any British statesmen with reference to the safety of the Indian Empire committed to our trust. Russia covets that; and as we now know, she was prepared to foment war with us in India, though we were at peace with her, and deliberately instructed her agents to kindle it to serve her own sordid ends. After this, will the Liberal Government, now in power, venture to throw up the key of the position, and in spite of the almost unanimous decision of the experts as to the absolute necessity of our retaining Candahar and the country around it, abandon the whole to the treacherous grasp of Russia, who, once in possession, will be sure to make the place impregnable? We cannot believe the country will allow it. Regarded from the stand-point of the Identity, we believe, further, these Afghan papers have been published at this critical moment to turn the Government from its purpose, and to prevent a fatal mistake taking place, which in the end would be excessively costly and probably irreparable.

Digitized by Google

We believe God has given us the Candahar Gate, and that His gifts are without "change of mind" or "repentance." To renounce and abandon what God has once given us as lightly as we have done North Afghanistan, is to provoke Him to visit us with His chastisements. We shall thus merely delay the final transfer of these Gates of the Afghan territory, which we believe God means us to possess, not only to safeguard our Indian Empire, but also to enable us to give the Gospel to the Afghans, who sorely need it, and to the races beyond, who, but for us, would never hear it. Whatever happens in respect to the Gate of Candahar, we know God's eye is over His people Israel for good, and we are therefore content to leave the disposal of this matter to Him, knowing all will be safely and advantageously arranged for us. It is enough for us to know that the Times is at last awake to the danger, and admits what is surprising, coming from that quarter—namely, "that the publication of the correspondence makes it clear, beyond a doubt, that the invasion of Afghanistan, in November, 1878, was an inevitable consequence of a real, a pressing, and a growing danger upon the frontier of our Indian Empire."

Is that danger, arising then as now from Russia, less real, less pressing, or less growing? All men know that it is rather more than less, since, within recent days, quite lately, the victorious career of Russia among the Khanates at Geok Tépe and elsewhere brings Russian legions within measurable distance of Herat and Candahar, with power thence to menace India itself. We are only anxious that the Government should be roused from their strange lethargy, and thus avoid the danger they fell into in Ireland, of putting off the inevitable adoption of the principles of action of their predecessors in office, merely because they have once recorded their decision that those principles were wrong and ought to be set aside. They have had to admit the error in the matter of coercion in Ireland, and they will, if they retain office long enough, have to admit, too, that the abandonment of ground occupied by the British in foreign lands, such being God's gifts by victory in war to Israel, is effected at our proper peril, and a heavy price has to be paid sooner or later to re-occupy what ought never to have been given up at all. In regard to that point, as it effects Candahar, the Calcutta correspondent of the Times telegraphed on February 13, 1881, as follows:—

> It is generally felt here that the only one argument for the withdrawal, which will stand a moment's examination, is that of the cost of the occupation. The anwer given to this is that such a cost will be but a trifle compared with that which must be incurred in watching the whole frontier, and guarding against internal risings when once the Russians have gained a commanding influence in Afghanistan, which our retirement from Candahar will leave open to them.

These are, we believe, words of wisdom, and we trust Mr. Gladstone's Government will have it laid upon them to act in accordance with their recommendation.

"THE ROCK" AGAIN, ON ANGLO-ISRAELISM AND THE GREAT PYRAMID.

By the Editor.

At page 38 of the Rock of January 14, 1881, we have a column devoted to the laudation of the Rev. B. Wrey Savile's last pamphlet, contra the truths he once believed, and some remarks of a nameless writer, which being directed against the Banner of Israel and its editor, are aimed at the Identity, in the hope it may be destroyed thereby. Let us see what these remarks are—arguments there are none. The writer does not condescend to tell us wherein we are wrong, but holds up our views to public derision and attaches to them epithets which we must describe as nothing higher than abuse. Here are some of the latter:—"The Banner, it seems, speaks with the usual confidence of those who combine ignorance the most profound with dogmatism the most presumptuous; and in its issue of August 28, 1878, says of the kingdom mentioned in Dan. ii. 35, 44, 'that kingdom, reader, is the British Empire.'"

The expression occurred as the last words of a demonstration by L. G. R., a writer well known to the Banner, proving that the British Empire was the fifth monarchy of the metallic image of Daniel. Our friend L. G. R., quoting Gibbon, Hume, and other authorities, came (whether rightly or wrongly) to the conclusion stated. He is entitled to be heard; and his arguments, if wrong, should be calmly refuted. Does the Rock do anything of the sort? Certainly not! Like nearly all the rest of our opponents he takes refuge in abuse; calls ours "the usual confidence of those who combine ignorance the most profound with dogmatism the most presumptuous," and so condemns L. G. R., and all who consider his reasoning cogent. Is this reasonable or fair? On what grounds does the Rock deem L. G. R. so utterly and hopelessly wrong? Because Daniel's prophecy, he says, has been acknowledged by every Christian writer for the last eighteen centuries, to be the "kingdom of the Messiah, which is yet to be developed in a way which the earth has never yet seen, in its coming glory."

Supposing this to be the fact (it is not accurately so, in the sense the Rock puts on the words), but granting it to be true, what then? We Israelites absolutely concur in the opinion of "every Christian writer." We, too, hold this kingdom is Christ's, who will, when His kingdom comes, reign gloriously on this earth, in and by His people, who are Israel—the British. The Rock means "the Church" as "His people." We differ, and say, that "the people of God," "the children of God," and those who are always termed in the Word of God "His people," are, and ever have been, the children of Israel; and these are in truth "the Church"—the chosen ones of Christ—the British Anglo-Saxon races. It comes then to the old question of evidence. Is the evidence sufficient to prove the fact we allege, that the British are in truth "the remnant of Israel?" This is a subject for calm and Christian discussion. But earnest men are not to be abused by their brethren, clerical or lay, in the hope that the world, accepting such condemnation, will fail to investigate our facts. Anyone can abuse. Anyone can say of another, "he is profound in ignorance, and presumptuously dogmatic." These be "hard speeches," which no one condemned once, more than the Rev. B. W. Savile. Yet, in his service, his brethren the clergy, some bishops, many laymen, with a multitude of godly women, are to submit to be regarded as "despicable dogmatics," and "profoundly foolish ones," because, for reasons stated, we believe that the British are Ten-Tribed Israel.

Again, the Banner of April 7, 1880, is quoted as showing that we have the "hardihood" to write that "the true length of the Grand Gallery of the Great Pyramid absolutely fixes the approaching end of the age." Such "hardihood" being in contravention of the Lord's warning, that of His future advent "no man knoweth the day nor the hour." We beg to point out to our readers (by way of showing the inaccuracy of our mentors) that the words quoted from the BANNER of April 7, 1880 (page 145), are Philo-Israel's, and therein we referred (would our readers believe it?) not at all to the Lord's advent (!) but to the great earthquake now imminent in Europe, and we stated that its date (not that of the Lord's coming) "was absolutely fixed" as an epoch "by the Great Pyramid, as a date not later than August 6, 1882, for the terrible events we anticipate." Whether the Rock's treatment of us, and its quotations, are fair and candid, let our readers judge! We repudiate these strictures with indignation, and our readers will, we are sure, take note of the terribly false position the writer in question is shown to have assumed.

Digitized by Google

The Rock further treats us to the argument from majority in numbers. "There are 23,000 clergy of the Church of England (it says), and not one of these of any reputation has given his adhesion to this gigantic craze." If the argument of counting heads and majorities is to be followed, and resorted to, some of the conclusions we must arrive at will be surprising. For example: In our Lord's time, not one of the Scribes, Pharisees, rulers, or lawyers believed on Him. His disciples "all forsook Him and fled." Majorities, it appears, rule. The Saviour, therefore, was an impostor, and rightly put to death! God forbid! Why then are we now to submit to the rule of counting heads? Even if not a single cleric, not a single bishop, not a single man or woman of repute, believed in our Identity, what then? Would it therefore be false? The Christian religion is in a minority as regards its adherents throughout the world at this moment. Is it therefore untrue? In Christendom, Protestantism is decidedly unpopular, and its followers the few. Is it a false view of the religion founded by the Nazarene? The Evangelical party in the Church of England seems to be vastly outnumbered by the other two parties, the Broad and the High. Is the Low Church party therefore wrong ab initio? By Mr. Savile's and the Rock's arguments it must be so; or, those arguments founded on majorities are absurd. We deem them to be so. We value at the same estimate another reason the Rock puts forward why we should be suppressed; and this we shall give in the writers own words:—"We happen to know well (he says) an experienced Evangelical clergyman, now in his ninth decade, and who long ago was a Cambridge prizeman, who has looked into the subject, and who thus expresses his opinion on the theory, "I most profoundly agree in your view of the Anglo-Israelite craze. The contemptible monstrosity is to my mind not only logically a fiasco, but in one sense an abomination. The proper name for it is swagger. But its impudence is pettifoggingly paraded by an amount of playing fast and loose with Holy Scripture at which I fairly stand aghast. If I may individualise the thing itself, I should say it was one of the 'false prophets,' that were to arise before the consummation of all things."

We hope our readers are edified at the language indulged in by this very aged servant of Christ. We, however, cannot find in the Word of God any justification for a minister of the Lord to use towards his brethren in the ministry, and towards his lay fellow-believers in Christ, such words as those which appear above. "Contemptible monstrosity," "abomination," "swagger," "impudence pettifoggingly paraded," "false prophets," and the like, seem to us to be coarsely abusive words, and poor replies to the arguments with which the BANNER bristles, but with which our old Evangelical clergyman, late Cambridge prizeman, very wisely shrinks from grappling.

In conclusion, we invite that godly and aged servant of the Lord, whose revilings we pray Him to forgive, to answer us the following, and prove us to be wrong. Is it true or is it false:—

1. That God gave "to Abraham and his seed for ever" certain very unique precious promises, and gave them to them exclusively?

2. Is it true, or is it false, that we British have now in possession exclusively those same promises?

3. If the facts are so (and no one has yet had the "hardihood," to deny it), we wish to know why, with reference to Numb. xxiii. 19; Rom. xi. 28; Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20; Amos iii. 2; Haggai ii. 5, the British are therefore not the Ten Tribes of Israel, entitled to all that such nationality promises them in God's Word?

4. If the Word of God and the facts of the day are on our side, why does God's aged servant sit down to revile his clerical and lay brethren, and not rather pray that his own eyes may be opened to see the truth?

OUR NATIONAL FLAG.

BLIND EVIDENCE FROM "OLD JONATHAN."

"The flag that's braved a thousand years
The battle and the breeze."

COULD there possibly be a more touching tribute paid to our national flag than the dying request of our late dearly-beloved and deservedly deeply-lamented Princess Alice? We are told that she asked that an English flag might be laid upon her coffin, with a modest expression of a hope that no one in the country of her adoption could take umbrage at her wish to be borne to her rest with the old English colours above her. Did we need a deeper love and reverence than we already have for our national flag, surely this graceful tribute—a tribute worthy of the noblest and proudest of England's brave old warriors—would endear it more than ever to our hearts and homes.

It is interesting to call to mind how very ancient the use of the flag or banner is; and each nation we find from its earliest history displays a distinct emblematical device. The Eagle is associated with Rome, the Dragon with China, the Fleur-de-Lys with France, the Crescent with Turkey, and with our own beloved England, the Lion. Banners were in use in the middle ages at sea as on land; and, in addition to regular ensigns, it was a prevailing custom to emblazon the sails of ships. Banners, ensigns, and standards have been used in all countries by warriors, Christians, prophets, and Churches.

The national Banner of England is the Cross of St. George; that of Scotland, the Cross of St. Andrew; and that of Ireland, the Cross of St. Patrick.

The first "Union Jack" consisted of the Cross of St. George of England, and that of St. Andrew of Scotland. These two crosses were united together, and declared to be the national flag of Great Britain by King James I., 1606.

The "Union Jack" of the present day is composed of the three crosses combined, namely, the Cross of St. George of England, that of St. Andrew of Scotland, and that of St. Patrick of Ireland; and its era dates from the commencement of the present century.

Where is there an Englishman who does not love that national flag? Why, from his boyhood the very sight of it has given a thrill of pleasure indescribable! Only let an old sailor catch one glance of the "colours" waving aloft, off will come his hat, and intuitively he will shout a proud hurrah for "the flag of Old England for ever!" Aye, many a touching tale could he tell of the triumphs of the flag he loves. Depend upon it, under his old blue jacket there beats as loyal a heart as ever yet responded to our grand old national anthem, "God Save the Queen."

We think there is ever a sacredness of feeling associated with our English flag, and especially so, when we notice that, wherever that flag is unfurled, there is a way made for the Bible, the Word of the living God. Into how many different versions has the Bible already been translated, and how widely is it now circulated. Well may we desire to see the flag and the Bible go forward hand in hand.

As early as the date 1490 B.C., we have the "standard" and the "ensign" mentioned in the Bible. When the children of Israel, God's ancient people, were commanded to take their march through the wilderness, God told His servant Moses, "Every man of the children of Israel shall pitch by his own standard, with the ensign of their father's house" (Num. ii. 2). There were four distinct squadrons of the Tribes of Israel of old, and three Tribes in each squadron. The standard was the banner under which every three tribes were united. This union of three is worthy of notice, as it is still retained in our own national flag.

Digitized by Google

Their devices may have been different, but their interests were the same. "Union is strength." They were strong and victorious, led on by an invisible Guide, subduing proud kings and mighty men of valour; and, when taking a review of their march, we read that Joshua told them: "For the Lord hath driven out from before you great nations and strong; but as for you, no man hath been able to stand before you unto this day. One man of you shall chase a thousand; for the Lord your God, He it is that fighteth for you, as He hath promised you" (Josh. xxiii. 9, 10).

The same God ever lives. He is King of kings, and Lord of lords. He is the God of the armies of heaven, as well as of the inhabitants of this earth, "and none can stay His hand." And, while we rejoice in the honour paid to our national banner, we would ever remember the words of David in Psalm lx. 4: "Thou hast given a banner to them that fear Thee, that it may be displayed because of the truth;" and again in Psalm xx. 7: "Some trust in chariots, and some in horses; but we will remember the name of the Lord our God." "We will rejoice in Thy salvation, and in the name of our God we will set up our banners" (ver. 5). AUNT LUCY.

JONAH A TYPE OF EPHRAIM-ISRAEL.

A BIBLE DISCOURSE.

BY JOHN T. GOTT.

(Continued from page 91.)

PART IV.

So Ten-Tribed Israel professed to obey, but not obeying, were doomed to exile. Like Jonah, they were buried in a living tomb. Then they remembered the Lord. Then they were revived. From that tomb of death they were delivered. And now they stand upon their feet before the Lord, a nation, the British nation, the only nation on the face of the earth which can be said to have obeyed the Divine command to preach the Gospel to every creature throughout the wide, wide world. In the prophetical Word there is only one messenger sent to the heathen, and that one is Ten-Tribed Israel; just as Jonah was the only prophet sent with a Gospel message to the Ninevites.

King David was deeply impressed with God's promise respecting the establishment of His seed in the kingdom for ever. Psalm cxxxii. makes this plain: "The Lord hath sworn in truth unto David: He will not turn from it: of the fruit of thy body will I set upon thy throne. If thy children will keep My covenant and My testimony that I shall teach them, their children shall also sit upon thy throne for evermore."

This condition was not kept by David's descendants, consequently the promise was suspended, but not abrogated for ever. "Zion's welfare and David's throne are inseparably connected." The promise is, "In Zion will I make the horn of David to bud, I have ordained a lamp for Mine anointed" (ver. 17). That is, the light of Divine grace and favour is again to shine upon David's seed, after the darkness that has enveloped them, not for their own sake, but for the sake of David "Mine anointed."

Thus the raising up of the long-lost Ten-Tribed Israel is God's own work, His strange work, His marvellous work, for He alone can give the will and the power to keep His covenant. And herein do we see that Ephraim-Israel is like Jonah, a living monument of mercy.

When Jonah was first sent to Nineveh, his commission was, "Cry against it." His second commission was, "Preach unto it." The Son of God came to preach the Gospel, and He charged His disciples to preach the Gospel to every creature. They were of the seed of Abraham; and their descendants to-day must bear the characteristic feature of being Gospel messengers. The British claim that feature in a very eminent degree.

As a Gospel messenger, Jonah occupied the same position to the Ninevites, that British-Israel does to the world to-day.

His history had travelled before him. To the Ninevites he was something more than a prophet, he was a veritable wonder in the earth. He had "tasted of death and had not seen corruption," and now he had returned to witness among them for God. Thus did Jonah become "a sign." He who concealed the message of mercy in his bosom, became an outcast, was buried out of the sight of the living, but on his repentance he returned with the message of mercy, being himself a living symbol.

In the same manner, the history of the British people is travelling before them to the ends of the earth. They had not their origin in this island. They have nothing in common with the nations around them. They are an isolated people, and a peculiar people. They are a mixed people, and ever have been, from the days of Abraham, because Jehovah destined them to be a great ingathering people. And surely the people who are filling up the waste heritages of the earth, the people who are supreme on land and sea have the greatest capabilities for sowing the Gospel seed.

As it was with Jonah, so is it with British-Israel. The Bible fact is now going forth to the ends of the earth, that long-lost Israel is found, that the dead are alive again, and have not tasted of corruption. This Bible fact is only gainsaid by those who cannot comprehend the Abrahamic covenants, or understand how God's faithfulness is bound up in them.

Jonah's history was "an embodied lesson" to the Ninevites, and so will the history of British-Israel be when Jehovah shall accomplish His strange work, and the whole world shall know the long-lost House of Israel.

By Jonah's preaching, Nineveh was saved; by British-Israel's preaching, the world is saved from destruction.

Men grumble now at missionary enterprise, and say, It is a failure! Let them remember that it is sowing-time still. Our national commission is to go on sowing. By-and-bye the gentle rain will fall, and the bright beams of Divine blessing will be poured down, and then the shocks of corn will appear, when, according to the predictions of holy men of old, "Nations shall be joined to the Lord." We must go on sowing the seed, doing the work assigned to us as the world's Gospel messenger, however imperfectly it may be done, until the Holy Spirit be poured forth, and the time arrive when God shall make His new covenant with the House of Israel and with the House of Judah.

The strange history of Jonah, who so strikingly displayed the mighty power of the God of the Hebrews, exercised convincing power among the heathen Ninevites. So when the remnant of Israel and the Jews shall return and colonise the Holy Land under British rule, they shall return not "in haste," nor "by flight," but in peace, when the strange story is, by this sign, convincingly demonstrated to all peoples of the earth; then will the time have arrived when the result of this long season of sowing the seed, which is the Word of God, will begin to appear. Sowing-time has been long, because the field is large, "for the field is the world."

Nineveh was an exceeding great city. It took Jonah three days to pass through it. In the same way it is nearly three prophetic days, nearly three thousand years, since God began His "strange work" of "scattering" the great bulk of His chosen people, of "gathering" them out again, and "calling" them by a "new name," of adding unto them and blessing them with every one of the covenant promises, of branding them in the sight of all nations as the objects of His special care, and of making them a multitudinous nation, swarming about the earth as fishes do in the sea. Once the command went forth to mankind to spread abroad and replenish the earth, then the earth was of one language and of one speech. That generation commenced to build the Tower of Babel that they might abide together, but God scattered them by confounding their language. Then God called Abraham, and raised up from him the chosen people. To one portion of them, Ten-Tribed Israel, the prophet Hosea predicts the multitudinous seed. The British nation to-day bears this characteristic feature, and it is a sign that the remnant of Israel is hidden, like leaven, in this great mixed people. No other nation has ever exhibited this great multiplicity of seed; no other nation has ever spread abroad to the same degree; no other nation has ever had the facilities, or known the necessity for this constant flood of emigration, which is resulting in the desolate heritages of the earth being filled. Thus, the Divine decree, in spite of man's rebellion, has become almost an accomplished fact. As it took Jonah three days to pass through Nineveh, as Jonah is a type of Ten-Tribed Israel, and Nineveh of the world, so, under the providence of God, has it taken nearly 3,000 years to bring about, through the agency of British-Israel, that state of things in the world, that will speedily uproot infidelity, scatter scepticism, demonstrate the truth of God's Word, and vindicate the faithfulness of Jehovah to His covenant promises, and to rebellious, outcast, Ten-Tribed Israel.

Digitized by Google

We have said that by Jonah's preaching Nineveh was saved. "The people of Nineveh believed God, and proclaimed a fast, and put on sackcloth, from the greatest of them even to the least of them." What the people of Nineveh were doing reached the ears of the king, and he "laid aside his robe, and covered him with sackcloth and sat in ashes." And following the custom of heathen nations in the East, the very beasts of the field, seeing that they share in the evil effects of man's sin, were included in the same fast, and were covered with sackcloth.

And God saw their works, and repented of the evil He had said He would do unto them, and He did it not.

Now the very same thing is predicted of Israel's mission to the whole earth, and the British-speaking people of these latter days may be looked upon as the only people carrying on that work in a very remarkable way.

(To be continued.)

THE PROGRAMME OF THE REBELLIOUS BOERS.

If a Reuter's telegram published in the Times of February 19, 1881, may be credited, the so-called Government of the South African Republic, of which "Kruger" is the vice-president, has nailed its colours to the mast and announced its programme in defiance of God's people Israel. It is war to the knife to the Anglo-Saxon Race. Gentile Dutch Boers mean to have South Africa to themselves, and drive the chosen people of God, to whom South Africa has been given by their Father in heaven, out of that territory into the sea. In vain the threat! God's Word shall stand for ever, boast the "Africander" as he may. A few short weeks, perhaps days, from the date on which we write (February 19), we expect to see the Boer rebellion put down by God's blessing on Israel's arms, and the authority of the British established, not from the Zambesi to Simon's Bay, as Kruger boastfully declares, but throughout the vast expanse of the British possessions in South Africa where God has already made Israel dominant. The telegram we allude to runs as follows:—

From Bloemfontein, dated February 18.

A lengthy document has been published here, addressed to the Volksraad and signed "Kruger, Vice-President of the South African Republic." It sets forth the grievances of the Boers, and concludes by declaring that, whether they win or lose in the struggle with England, the result of the war will be freedom for Africa such as is enjoyed by America. "Africa will be for the Africander from the Zambesi to Simon's Bay."

We trust those among us who sympathise with the Boers in their uprising and rebellion, note the extent of the Dutchmen's claims. They do not modestly aspire only to recover their independence in the Transvaal; they look now to hold Africa itself for the "Africander," and that from the Zambesi to Simon's Bay—the latter a British possession. If that be the lofty ambition excited by this rebellion, and the gauge of the efforts of "Kruger" and his fellows, he is no patriot, but a traitor to his Queen and country, who dares still to wish well to men who aspire to destroy Israel's power in South Africa, and substitute for it a miserable, effete, slave-driving, cruel, semi-civilised government, unfit for dominion, without wealth, resources, religion, or power; without any quality whatever which would make it safe to entrust to their rule even their native region, the Transvaal.

What the purpose of the Government of the day may be in regard to the present complications we know not. We trust it is not true they have been in treaty to secure a peace from successful rebels with arms in their hands; but that Sir Evelyn Wood's forward movements and operations betoken that before a decisive blow is struck the Government will scorn to patch up a peace which, being dishonourable to this nation, could not last. We trust, rather, that a lesson may be speedily taught to the inferior race now daring to measure strength with us which will show all men that in South Africa, as elsewhere, "the kingdom, and dominion, and greatness of the kingdom" is reserved by the Lord Himself for His people Israel, the British. Again we find the power of this nation fully representing the "remnant of Jacob among the Gentiles, in the midst of many people" (at Newcastle and Mount Prospect Camp), as a lion among the beasts of the forest, solitary in his grandeur, surrounded by the hostile beasts of the forest, many in number; "as a young lion among the flock of sheep, who, if he go through"—as Sir Evelyn Wood is causing him to do, both will tread down the opposition of the Boers—"and teareth in pieces, and there will be none to deliver" (Micah v. 8).

In adapting the prophecy in question to our present circumstances, we do not deem that we are acting in the spirit of "speculative prophets." For, in very truth, since we are God's people, the remnant of Israel, we are fulfilling prophecy; and we cannot dishonour God's word and His promises to our race, "His chosen ones," by doubting for a moment the result of the present hostilities. These have been prepared for us by our God to try us, and to carry out His own purposes, announced by Daniel the prophet so far back as twenty-four centuries ago, that He would, at this very crisis of the world's history, "scatter the power of the British nation."

The "crushing shepherd-stone of Israel," which comes from Joseph (Gen. xlix. 24), will fall, we believe, sooner or later, on the Boers, as it did on the French at Waterloo, on the Sikhs in the Punjab, on the Afghans, the Zulus, the Ashantees, the Russians, the Abyssinians, the Chinese, and the Indian Sepoy mutineers. Though all seemed lost over and over again in each of these campaigns, God gave us always His help, and maintained our cause. The same God has the disposal of the present complications, and He will, we are sure, give us, as He did before, according to His promises, the final victory over the Boers, as over all our previous national foes. And, such being the case, we urge our friends never to distrust our God's power, His love, His grace, and His intentions of mercy towards us, His people Israel; but now, as always, to praise Him. What He said once to the children of Israel, He says now again to us: "Wherefore criest thou to Me? Speak unto the children of Israel, that they GO FORWARD" (Exod. xiv. 15).

Digitized by Google

THE "LONDON QUARTERLY REVIEW" ON THE GREAT PYRAMID, AND PROFESSOR PIAZZI SMYTH'S REPLY.

FORWARDED BY J. THOMPSON.

(Continued from page 98.)

PART II.

THE PROFESSOR'S REPLY.

DEAR MR. J. THOMPSON,—In answer to your important letter of the 29th ult., I have to say that I have not yet seen any numbers of Israel's Hope and Destiny. Somehow or other it has not come in my way, or I in its; and though it may be doing very good work, yet I never heard there was anything to expect from it, either very different from, or much better than, the other and older Identity journals edited by the longer known names of Edward Hine, E. W. Bird, or the late John Wilson; and so it came to pass that I have lost the opportunity of seeing in Hope and Destiny your Pyramid symbology article, which was doubtless, from what I have seen of others of your writings, both good and sound.

As to the review of "Our Inheritance" in the January number of the London Quarterly Review, I have seen that, a copy having been sent to me by my London publisher. I can testify, therefore, to your having given a very sober, truthful, and able account of it, though only from memory of several weeks old.

But though it be as bad as you indicate, I am not going to answer it in any public journal, having long since come to the conclusion that the Great Pyramid subject is not intended so much to convert men to one belief, as to make divisions already existing among them more apparent; for there are many who never will be persuaded of the truth; and who, the more it shines out, the more they will persist in remaining in their previous prejudices; they must, therefore, take the consequences, both in this world and the next. Neither is it my business even to try to persuade anyone; though it is, I humbly hope, my calling to do all I can, year after year, in setting forth the Great Pyramid subject in and for itself alone: but then to leave all men to accept or reject accordingly as they may be predestined to do. Those who attack and condemn unreasonably may mislead weaker brethren, but will chiefly injure their own souls; especially when they apply to them the flattering unction, that by writing anonymously they may do almost anything they like in the way of perverting the subject, and making known men look ridiculous, or worse, before the public; and, indeed, they do take those licences so persistently, in spite of everything that can be written, that I have for several years past, sheerly to prevent utter waste of time, put myself under a general rule to answer no anonymous attacks; and it has brought the good fruit with it ere long, of seeing some of the most unprincipled of the blows answered involuntarily by other assaults just as bad, but from directly opposite quarters, so as to neutralise each other.

But your present application for explanatory help, both in strengthening your own vision, and perhaps writing something thereon for those who are likewise asking for more light, stands in a very different position. Wherefore, in the first place, I have asked my Edinburgh publishers to send you a copy of "Life and Work at the Great Pyramid," the book of 1867, and wherein you can look up for yourself many original mensurations of the monument, necessarily free from the influence of subsequently formed theories.

Next I would remark that the London Quarterly reviewer has not added anything to the stock of knowledge concerning the facts of the Great Pyramid, either from his own observations or those of any other persons; he has merely dealt with numbers contained in my own book; but by misplacing some, suppressing others, misquoting sentences, and insinuating things not there, he shows how much havoc the perverse spirit of man can easily produce, almost anywhere or in anything, by the application of what I believe they call "literary exegesis and scholarly criticism." Nor does the reviewer seem to have in reality any practical knowledge of the higher mensurational sciences; but possesses in abundance untiring power of dreary, wordy, sneering misrepresentations, sometimes ingenious, but so generally unscrupulous, that it would be waste of time for either you or me to follow him up through every one of them.

Nor was there any occasion for the reviewer to have imported absolute falsities into his work to condemn mine; for he lays down, at his page 268, a theory before hand, which would have, in itself, given him hundreds and hundreds of findings of error in my books, by its legitimate application thereto; leaving, however, the question still to be inquired into, whether his theory be true or not.

Unhappily for him, he begins this very theory of his with a falsity, when he says, "the sole evidence of the inspiration of the Pyramid architect is said to be mathematical and scientific," whereas I have most abundantly held forth the religious and prophetic indications as far higher claims to that magnificent character. But, however, the reviewer having said what he has said as above, then goes on to assert—1. That everything about the building, if erected by a Divinely-inspired architect, ought to be or "shall be mathematically correct and scientifically perfect;" a thing which has not been realised or attained to by any practical work of modern science, even in its most exact and recent developments. For proof, behold the whole world's efforts for the sun distance at the last Venus transit in 1874, resulting in such discrepancies and contradictory variations that the nations generally are ashamed of them. 2. That the work of an inspired man, even of primeval pre-historic antiquity, ought still to be or "shall be in such a state of preservation, that whatever truths were embodied in it 4,000 years ago, may still be read therein without liability to serious error."

Such is the anonymous reviewer's theory out of his own head of what a monument built by a Divinely-inspired architect, in the beginning of the world, ought to be. But surely Divine inspiration is not to be ruled, regulated, and limited by any modern man's fancy or invention; and the only practical conclusions to be drawn by weak, fallible human nature, of something so far beyond its own sphere, is rather to note well what are the characteristics of the only other thing on earth to which the wondrous term of "Divine inspiration" to its immediate authors or producers can be, and is, applied by the general consent of the majority of mankind, throughout the ages—viz., the Bible.

How, then, do the reviewer's anti-Great Pyramid theories of Divine inspiration apply to the Bible? Was everything therein written down in absolute verbal, literary, and caligraphic perfection? Were even the greatest of its inspired writers—Moses, David, and others—perfect men, who never sinned or fell short in any of the topics or doctrines taught in the Bible? Is not every language more or less an imperfect instrument for conveying the fulness of possible thought and intention? and especially imperfect in its written forms, which can be considered only as distantly approximate; while no one language generally lasts longer than about 1,000 years as a living tongue, and its written expressions after that become more or less hazy.

And next, are the original MSS. of each prophet still well preserved, so that the exact words he used, with the orthography of them, can be seen anywhere by a studious inquirer? and are all learned men agreed perfectly together as to their meaning, both in the language of that day and ours too?

Of course, the facts are the very reverse; for the oldest known existing MSS. of any part of the Bible do not go back to within 2,000 years of the time of Moses, and have so many flaws, that scholars declare there are 30,000 various readings in the whole Scriptures as now known. While from nominally one and the same book, fifty or more different forms of religion are conscientiously made out by different men: but with all the terrible divergencies from Roman Catholic to Unitarian, and from Ritualist to Rationalist. Yet, for all that, the Bible is the most precious heirloom to man from God; and man must accept it with the imperfections on its head of all the human media, by means of which alone it has reached us at all in these days. Exactly so, then, is it, mutatis mutandis, with the Great Pyramid.

Digitized by Google

Yet, on his page 270, this unabashed London Quarterly reviewer, who would regulate Divine inspiration through all the ages of human history, by his own present-day ideas, actually brings it up as a crime against the Great Pyramid, that there cannot be found there "the Divine pattern, or the heaven-inspired workmanship"—i.e., such things as are said to have been given to, or manufactured by, the working men, Bezaleel and Aholiab, in the time of Moses, for the framing of the tabernacle in the wilderness. But then, again, where can anyone now find "the Divine pattern and the heaven-inspired workmanship" of the same Bezaleel and Aholiab? According to the reviewer's requirements of inspiration when supplied to the Great Pyramid's architect, these tabernacle works ought to have lasted for ever, by some mysterious, miraculous mode of perfect preservation from both the action of weather and the injuries of man; whereas, so far as is known, they have long since entirely perished; although, too, they were not so old as the Great Pyramid by many centuries.

On his page 276, the reviewer declares roundly, "nor is it likely that anything determined the choice of the site (of Great Pyramid), except its immediate connection with Memphis." "Immediate," indeed; why Memphis is a long day's journey to the South of the Great Pyramid; all the other principal Pyramids are nearer to Memphis than is the Great Pyramid. But none stand between the Great Pyramid and the Northern edge of the Jeezah hill, which is on the opposite to Memphis, is so close to the Great Pyramid as to be almost under its Northern base side, and is essential in that manner to give that one building the peculiar characteristics of Isaiah's monument (xix. 19).

(To be continued.)

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—With the exception of the remarks on your review of his last work with which it commences, the letter of the Rev. B. W. Savile, published in The Daily Western Times, and republished by you in your last number, is almost identical with one which appeared in The Rock for December 10, 1880, with the signature "M. A."

It may therefore be interesting to your readers to know that I wrote to the editor of The Rock to protest against important controversy being carried on in the manner adopted by "M. A.," but he did not insert or take any notice of my letter. I enclose a copy of it with this, and am,

Yours faithfully, J. E. NELSON.

Dunmore-house, Stanwell, Staines, January 31, 1881.

[COPY.]

To the Editor "The Rock."

SIR,—Thinking that questions, in which the meaning of large portions of the Word of God are involved, should be considered calmly on their merits, and kept separate from side issues and personal recriminations, I ask space for a few remarks in connection with the letter of your correspondent "M. A.," on the Anglo-Israel question. The essential points of the inquiry are:—

1. Is it, or is it not, true, that God has promised blessings, exceeding those enjoyed by all other people, to the descendants of Abraham in the line of Isaac, Jacob, Joseph and Ephraim; and that the seed of the latter patriarch was to become "the fulness of the nations," whose "coming in," which was to take place subsequently to the date of the Epistle to the Romans, was to be as life from the dead?

2. Is it, or is it not, true that the prophecies concerning that youngest son of Joseph are being fulfilled in the English people?

3. Is it, or is it not, true that the Assyrians called the Israelites Khumree, that the Persians called the Khumree Saks, that historians say the Saks were the ancestors of the Saxons, and that our own descent from the Saxons is notorious?

These are questions that can only be decided by a careful and unbiassed examination of texts and authorities, and it is according to the results so obtained that the theory must stand or fall eventually.

Whether the editor of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, or any other writer on the subject, be right or wrong in his views as to the nature of the Great Pyramid, or the length of the Christian dispensation, or whether the advocates or the opponents of the theory have used the most judicious or polite language, are matters altogether distinct from the main issue, and to mix them up with it only serves to involve it in confusion, and hinder our judging of it clearly and correctly.

I am, Sir, yours faithfully,

J. E. NELSON.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—In the article under the heading, "The Anglo-Israel Discussion," in this week's BANNER, there is an extract from the Church of England Messenger (Melbourne) in the following words:—"The editor contends that to identify Israel with the Welsh through the Cimmerii or Gimiri, I must identify the Khumri, the Khumri with the Cimmerii, the Cimmerii with the Cymri."

The question raised as to identity of the Cimmerii with the Cymri, may be, at all events, partly cleared on reference to Herodotus. "And there are now in Scythia Cimmerian fortifications, and Cimmerian porthmia (porthmia meaning passages or ferries), there is also a district named Cimmeria . . . . . The Cimmerians evidently appear to have fled from the Scythians into Asia, and settled in the peninsula in which the Grecian city Sinope now stands."

The single word porth, to one acquainted with the Welsh language, is very significant, for it means in these days precisely what it did in those of the Cimmerians—viz., ferries over estuaries, arms of the sea, or straits. The name is retained in that sense in North Wales to this day. Mia, or, as it is written in another part of Herodotus, "Meia," may be, and not unlikely is the same as the Welsh word "mwya," signifying large or important ferries.

In this week's BANNER also, in the article, "The Testimony of the British Triads," Deffrobani is mentioned as the place whence the Britons arrived in this country. Query? would Deffrobani and Sinope be the same spot? W. H. W.

January 13, 1881.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—I see in to-day's BANNER a carefully thought out article by H. P. Keighly, on "The Seven Thousand in Israel Overcome by the Spirit of Deep Sleep, Awake to Become God's Witnesses." I do not accept this interpretation, because I think that of the Rev. C. W. Hickson is much better, and my object in writing now is not to criticise the one, but to call attention to the other, which cannot be too generally known.

Mr. Hickson proves, from Rom. ix. 22—26, that St. Paul applies the term Gentile to Israel of the Ten Tribes, and to himself as one of them, as shewn by the reference to Hosea ii. 23. This application of the term runs through the whole epistle; and the term Israel, when used as an antithesis, is applied to the Jews (see Rom. ix. 31, xi. 7). The references from this verse to Isa. xxix. 10; Psa. lxix. 23, show that Judah is spoken of, and that it is upon the Jews, not the Israelites, that the Spirit of slumber has fallen. We do not read in the Bible of any awakening as yet.

With the key supplied by Mr. Hickson, all obscurity vanishes, and the argument of the apostle comes out clearly. That the unbelief of the Jews was a blessing to Israel (Gentiles), inasmuch as the kingdom of God was taken from them (the Jews) and given to the "other nation;" and that the other nation (Israel) will in turn be a blessing to Judah, as the means of restoring her to her own land, and probably converting her to Christianity, after that event. We know that the Jews will be restored to Palestine in unbelief; but there seems to be ground for believing that Israel will be instrumental in converting them, "provoking them to jealousy" there.

Yours truly,

J. M. GRANT.

Cheltenham, February 16, 1881.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

	£	s.	d.
Mrs. Fayle, per "Philo-Israel"	0	9	0

We are greatly indebted to our friends for the assistance they render.

Just published, Crown Octavo, cloth bound, gilt letters, 296 pages.

THE SEED OF ISAAC, BEING AN HISTORICAL REVIEW OF GOD'S DEALINGS WITH HIS CHOSEN PEOPLE ISRAEL.

BY J. D. GRANGER.

Post free, 4s., from THE AUTHOR, 34, Exeter-street, Plymouth, and ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published, price 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

THE GREAT PYRAMID, IN, BUT NOT OF, EGYPT:

ITS CLAIMS TO BE FOR A SIGN AND FOR A WITNESS UNTO THE LORD OF HOSTS IN THE LAND OF EGYPT,

As announced in the Scriptures of His Holy Prophet Isaiah, B.C. 714.

BY H. W. BADGER,

Private in H. M. 40th Regiment, now serving in India.

INTRODUCED BY MRS. PIAZZI SMYTH,

London:

ROBERT BANKS, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.

New ready, bound in cloth, 2s. 3d., cloth gilt, 2s. 9d.; post free 3d. extra.

SERMON I.,

Containing Seven Parts of Extracts from the

"FLYING ROLL,"

FOR THE

"INGATHERING" OF ISRAEL.

May be had of Joseph Head, John Rogers, George Moore, Edward Rogers, 5, Trafalgar-st., New Brompton, Kent; Joshua Rogers, 151, Great Titchfield-st., London, W.; and, by ordering, of any bookseller. May be had also in parts, 4d each; post free 4½d.

"Who are Israelites, to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises."

PHILO-ISRAEL'S BOOK FOR CHILDREN.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth, gilt, 1s. Post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Third Edition.

A RESUME OF THE SCRIPTURAL ARGUMENT, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100.

NEW PAMPHLET ON THE IDENTITY OF THE LOST TEN TRIBES FOR UNIVERSAL CIRCULATION.

The Best Pamphlet to place in the hands of a person unacquainted with the subject.

Price 6d., by post 7d. 64 Demy 8vo. pages, in wrapper. One dozen copies sent free for a post office order for 6s.

FIFTY REASONS WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES

OF THE LOST TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL.

BY REV. W. H. POOLE, D.D.

"There is a principle which is a bar against all information, which is proof against all argument, and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance. This principle is, contempt prior to examination."—Dr. Paley.

A greater than Paley has said:—"He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is a folly and a shame unto him."—Prov. xviii.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET.
AND ALL BOOKSELLERS.

Now Ready, in handsome cloth, gilt, with Coloured Map, and several Illustrations, price 3s. 6d., by post 3s. 10d.

THE

GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,

High-Class Tailor,

47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.

MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

Just published. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA THE ROYAL SEED TO KING DAVID'S THRONE, AND ARE NOT HER SUBJECTS, THE BRITISH PEOPLE, THE TEN LOST TRIBES?

BY WILLIAM HOPTON, of Sutton Heath.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 4d., by post 4½d. Special terms for a quantity.

THE ISRAEL OF GOD.

A SERVICE OF SONG Upon the Career and Destiny of God's Ancient People Israel. WORDS AND MUSIC.

BY C. W. E.

Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Price 8s., post free 8s. 8d., bound in blue cloth, gilt, side and back.

THE FOURTH VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

CONTAINING 520 QUARTO PAGES.

Post Office Orders to be made payable to Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or, W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Price 2d., post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? An Inquiry establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 4d.

MARCH NUMBER NOW READY.
Price 2d.; Annual Subscription, 2s. 6d.

ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.

Editor: Douglas A. Onslow, J.P.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

THE MARCH MONTHLY PART OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL. May be had, by ordering, of any bookseller, or newsagent. Price 7d.

London: W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, E.C.

Price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome, cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES AND 1882.

BY THE REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD

Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

PHILO-ISRAEL (in the BANNER) says:—"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome Identity volume. It contains twenty discourses of the well-known American divine, Dr. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, N.Y. We are glad to find from these discourses that Dr. Wild is quite one with us on this side the water with most, though not all the views we entertain on our great and glorious subject.... We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and 'American' point of view, which is sure to interest, sure to be instructive, and may lead the thoughtless and inquiring to pursue the investigation till possibly conviction may be the result."

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

By REV. JOSEPH WILD, D.D.

With a Portrait of the Author.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Just out, 8d., post free 9d.

ISRAEL NOTWITHSTANDING; Being the Second and concluding Part of the Earnest Appeal from the Pew to the Pulpit. By JOHN G. SHAW, Author of "Britain (or Israel)," &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published, price One Shilling, post free.

PROMISES, PROPHECIES, and DECLARATIONS relating to GOD'S CHOSEN PEOPLE ISRAEL.

London: F. Norgate, 7, King-street, Covent-garden.

ROBERT BANKS'S CATALOGUE on the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Lost Ten Tribes will be sent, post free, on application. Address, Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW.
WEDNESDAY, MARCH 9, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 220. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MARCH 16, 1881. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The European Earthquake	109
"Bring Ye all the Tithes into the Storehouse" (Malachi iii. 10)	110
The Second Coming of the Lord. By Charles Horner	111
Israel the Head and Not the Tail in Shipbuilding	111
Jonah a Type of Ephraim-Israel. A Bible Discourse.—Part V. By John T. Gott..	112
The London Quarterly Review on the Great Pyramid, and Professor Piazzi Smyth's Reply. Forwarded by J. Thomson.—Part III.	113
A French Journalist Gives Blind Evidence of Our Identity, and that the South Irishman is Not of Israel	114
Mr. John Bright on Israel's Empire	114
Correspondence—The Rev. B. W. Savile Again Explains	114

THE EUROPEAN EARTHQUAKE.

WHILE our attention has been directed for some time past to Afghanistan and South Africa, the crisis has been gradually growing nearer and nearer in the East. The Turkish Empire is drawing nigh to its final fall, and that fall will, as God's Word assures us, drag into the vortex of its dissolution the nations of Europe, who will be gathered to the partition of the prey, and be involved in those internecine wars destined to be their utter destruction.

The Manchester Guardian, of February 24, 1881, writing on the situation, states in words partly Scriptural and greatly prophetic, what follows:—

War in the next few weeks may, in fact, shatter Turkey to pieces, and who then will prevent the gathering of the eagles for the prey? The Turkish troops in Epirus are, by all trustworthy accounts, in such a state of squalor and disorganisation that a Greek success is by no means an impossible event. And what effect would such a success, even if only temporary, have upon Eastern Roumelia, Albania, and Macedonia? The attitude of Albania, at all events, is already far more than doubtful. The Turkish Governor has been driven from Pristina and Kossovo, and the Albanian mollahs of Pristina, Prisrend, and Djakova have openly preached a holy war against the Sultan. The Albanian delegates, who were sent to Constantinople to demand Albanian autonomy, were sharply answered by Assym Pasha, and left in a fury, vowing that they would have not only their autonomy but something more besides. Still more serious is the fact—vouched for by a correspondent of the Cologne Gazette—that the Albanians have taken forcible possession of the important town of Uschkub. The state of Macedonia, again, is as threatening as it can be. Recruiting has been carried on under great difficulties, and when troops were used to force compliance, the Wallach and Bulgarian population in one part of the country took up arms and compelled the Turkish troops to retire. What is particularly noticeable is that these men were good Mahometans. Such are a few signs, picked out at random, of the many that are darkening the horizon on every side. It would be well for Turkey and for Europe that the former should agree with her adversary quickly; otherwise there is every reason to think that we are standing on the threshold of great events.

"The threshold of great events" is doubtless the exact spot whereon Israel nationally is now standing. The Grecian spark of war, which the British Government hoped once to extinguish before the European magazine blew up, has to all appearance burst out into a vivid flame; and if, as we suspect, God means to use it to bring on the Eastern Question in an acute form, we stand on the threshold, not so much of great events, as of a cataclysm and catastrophe the like of which this world of misery has never witnessed, "an earthquake such as there was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, so great" (Rev. xvi. 18).

There are other warnings too of the coming tempest visible in the political horizon, which cause us to thank God He has just at this juncture rendered us, by the scattering of our forces and by the multiplication of our trials in Ireland, India, and South Africa, powerless to interfere in the Eastern Question and in the troubles it is sure to cause to all those who meddle with it.

The St. James's Gazette, of February 23, truly asserts, regarding the present crisis, that there are wars and rumours of wars about us; disaffection in various parts of the United Kingdom; strikes and agitation in the mining districts; hourly anticipation of Fenian raids and outrages; secret societies actively at work in all directions; Ireland within measurable distance of civil war; authority of Government superseded by that of the Land League; Russia advancing with rapid strides towards India; England retreating; all the nations laughing at us; not an ally left in the world; no army worth mentioning; no prestige left; and no gleam of sunshine to brighten the prospect.

This is a catalogue of troubles which seems unbearable; but we who are instructed in the purposes and gracious promises of God to our nation, know that some of these are mercies in disguise, and that all tend to isolate and hide this perplexed nation what time God's fearful judgments shall be loosed against "yonder ill-consolidated Europe," which is destined to suffer "all the fierce anger and the indignation of their offended God, whose jealousy will destroy them as by fire" (Zeph. iii. 8; 2 Peter iii. 7—10, &c.). How these matters are regarded in Vienna has been clearly stated by the Daily Telegraph's correspondent there, under date February 21, and very serious are the words he uses. He says, regarding the war-cloud in the East:—

Digitized by Google

There are different stories current respecting the motives of General Skobeleff's return to St. Petersburg. According to one of them it is to be attributed to illness. Another asserts that it is the result of intrigue. But the most likely version is that he is wanted at home in view of the threatening state of affairs in the East. It would be hazardous to conjecture what Russia will do in the event of complications; but it is not to be expected that she will remain quiet. The activity that has prevailed during the past week at the Austrian War Office tends to show that this Government's faith in the maintenance of peace is not very robust, and that the intentions of Russia do not inspire unlimited confidence. There has been much idle talk about the localisation of hostilities in case of war. That idea has been bandied about in certain public speeches, and in a portion of the press, almost to the same extent as its Utopian predecessor, the European concert. It is one of those delusive themes which serve to avert public attention from the true dangers of the situation. I cannot too earnestly invite your readers not to be led astray thereby. The eventual localisation of hostilities is quite as improbable as the maintenance of peace itself. The antagonism between Austria and Russia, which, notwithstanding all rumours to the contrary, continues to increase, is perhaps the worst feature in the present situation; but there are other rivalries connected with Eastern affairs of scarcely less evil omen.

It is clear that the aspect of affairs is in the last degree critical, and that the great outburst of the European convulsion is at the doors, and may any moment take place. What are our consolations, as Israel, under the circumstances? The same we have always and at all times urged on our readers' consideration. The Lord is fighting for us. These commotions and national upheavals are all brought about to further God's plans of mercy toward Israel, to facilitate their return with Judah to their own land, to give them the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven on the ruins of the polities of the Gentile earth, and to place them as God's people on the pinnacle of power as His righteous nation, blessed with the Holy Spirit nationally, and designated for the honour of succeeding to the heirship of the whole world. A passage of God's Word, little hitherto suspected of relating to these times and the present crisis, has been pointed out to us by our fellow-helper, Commander Roberts—namely, Jer. xii. 14, wherein God's vengeance against those "His evil neighbours that touch (the Holy Land) the inheritance which He has caused His people Israel (the Ten Tribes) to inherit," is announced, and He declares, "Behold, I will pluck them (the Gentiles) out of their (Israel's) land, and pluck out the House of Judah (not Israel at all) from among them." And why not the Ten-Tribed House of Israel? Because they have long since been safely gathered into Great Britain.

We do not expect the outpouring of the Spirit on our race nationally just yet, because the Lord goes on to say (verse 15): "Behold it shall come to pass after I have plucked them (Judah) out (not before), that I will return and have compassion on them, and will bring them again every man to his heritage, and every man to his land." With these hopes and aspirations we call on all our friends to look calmly and cheerfully on the gathering storm in the East, knowing that our God is at the helm, that He will steer our national state-ship safe into her expected haven, and give us a glorious resting-place, even our own inheritance, at last. Israel, praise ye the Lord.

"BRING YE ALL THE TITHES INTO THE STOREHOUSE."

MALACHI III. 10.

OUR readers know what promise is attached to the rendering by Israel of her tithes to the Lord's service. Malachi iii. 10 tells us, "Bring ye (addressed to British-Israel) all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in Mine house, and prove Me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." The Lord is blessing us now beyond all conception. The trade of our nation is enormous. Her annual income is stated by Mr. Gladstone to be 1,000 million pounds sterling; her capital laid by, 200 millions per annum. Her influence throughout the world is inconceivable; her territorial possessions, already very great, are increasing every year. She is the chief missionary Power in the earth, and aims at taking the Gospel to all the nations, to all the families, and to all the kindreds of the earth (Gen. xviii. 18, xxviii. 14; Acts iii. 25).

The Lord, in fact, is "emptying out" to us His blessings, so that even now there is hardly room enough to receive them. Our multitudinous race is increasing so fast (a doubling rate of 14 per cent. per annum, or once in 55 years, being ours to-day), that we literally cannot contain that blessing in our narrow and strait British limits. What is the inference then? We believe from the facts that we must indeed at this moment be paying into the Lord's storehouse "all the tithes" according to the words of the promise in Malachi iii. 10. Can this be so? Let us look into the matter. If the income of this nation be 1,000 millions, as Mr. Gladstone believes (others have estimated it much higher, page 478, vol. iv.), then the whole tithe would be a sum equal to about half of the capitalised amount laid by year by year. Whether the tithes given by this noble nation to the Lord be £100,000,000 sterling, more or less, no one can know, and no one can estimate. But we strongly suspect, from the facts of the case, and by reason of our enjoyment of the promised blessings, that we do indeed come up to the required sum, even now. Let the following be one testimony to the fact, being an extract from recent London papers regarding

THE CHARITIES OF LONDON.—The City Press states that the gross annual income of about eight hundred of the London charities amounts to a sum approaching four millions and a quarter sterling.

This refers to the charities of one city only of the great British Empire. It is restricted to the sums paid freely as gifts to only 800 of the charities of London. What is the volume of the private charities of London alone? what the volume of gifts to those large number of smaller charities which are never publicly reported? What the immense total of the whole of the charities, not of London only, but of all the cities, towns, villages, and hamlets of broad England, of bonnie Scotland, and the sister isle? What the vast additions we must make for the colonial empire, for Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Tasmania, the Fiji Islands, the Cape, the vast number of British Gates and settlements of the British folk throughout the world, East, West, North, and South? And lastly, how great an amount must we not add for the charities of British subjects in India, where men are liberal after a fashion not dreamt of in the isles of the West, where a good cause is never grudgingly supported?

Besides all this, it seems right and fair to calculate as part of the sums paid as tithes into the Lord's storehouse, the gigantic sums this nation spends on international beneficence and objects beyond sea, also on the maintenance of her own poor (over 14 millions sterling a year) under the Poor Laws. "Whoso hath pity on the poor, lendeth to the Lord" (Prov. xix. 17); and, mark! the promise to the lender is, that "what he hath given, will He pay him again." The Lord surely hath done this to the British nation in every possible imaginable way, till the wealth of this race is the wonder of the nations; and so great is its volume that we know not what to do with it, nor how to best employ it.

Adding all these various items together, of gifts to the Lord expended at home and abroad, in our colonial and in our heathen empires, in the metropolis and throughout the land, by the operation of the Poor Laws, and through the incalculable channel of private, unknown, unsuspected charities; can any one say that 100 millions sterling is too large a sum to place to the credit of the gifts, directly and indirectly, paid to the Lord by His people Israel, in accordance with a promise which we see the God of righteousness has already performed to us His people?

Digitized by Google

We believe we do pay the tithes already; and therefore the Lord, whose eye hath seen it, is blessing us as He said He would. But we readily acknowledge, for all that, that our returns to Him are not commensurate with His gifts to us, as a nation. We are, as ever, ungrateful, vile, and grudging, in our payments to Him. But, thank God, the hour is rapidly approaching when, the new covenant being ours, He will give us, with all His other precious gifts then promised, the spirit of a nobler liberality, which will disdain to limit our renderings to the Lord to the mere tithes; but will think we only do what is due from us, and what is, indeed, His rightful claim, when we give Him, not the tenth part, but ALL.

THE SECOND COMING OF THE LORD.

BY CHARLES HORNER.

THE Richmond and Twickenham Times, for January 15, reports a conference on this important subject in connection with the Surrey and Middlesex Baptist Association. The meeting was held on Tuesday, 11th, in the Baptist chapel, the Rev. E. H. Brown, pastor of the Twickenham Baptist chapel, presiding. Towards the conclusion of a very able paper, Mr. Brown proceeded as follows: "The effects of Christianity in its civilisation are most marked, and shadow feebly out what we may expect in millennial days, when real godliness will cover the earth as the waters do the sea; and all Isaiah's glorious prophecies will be performed, first to literal Israel, and also, I believe to us, the spiritual Israel. But did not our Lord command us to go? Yes, certainly; and it is for us to obey. In Matt. xxiv. 14 it is said that the Gospel is to be preached to all nations; but, solemnly mark, 'for a witness, and then cometh the end.' I consider this to be one of the sure signs of the near approach of our Lord, because He says so, and I have yet to learn of any nation which has not had the Gospel preached to it, or the Gospel translated into its often previously unwritten language, and if there be some hidden away tribes in the centre of some continent, I think the present strenuous efforts of missionary societies will pierce even the Dark Continent, in a few months, through and through. Now, further on in the chapter, we have given us for a type of our success in preaching, and of the world's state before Christ's return, 2 Peter ii. 5. Noah is described as a preacher of righteousness. How was it with him? His preaching was the means of the salvation of seven persons and his own (Matt. xxiv. 37—39). As in the days of Noah, so shall it be when Christ comes. You know how exceeding great was the world's sin then, even so must it be now. Expect it not to mend until He comes, whose right it is to reign; and moreover, like comfort, the present evil state of the world is no barrier, but rather the reverse, to our Lord's return at any moment. Now, I have just kept to the two main divisions, and I trust shown that the Scriptures teach the advent of Christ to be the hope of the Church, and then the millennial glory. On another occasion it would be very profitable to consider the reasons for firmly believing that the time is at hand, from a simple understanding of the declared historical facts of Daniel, and of the times stated therein, and their wonderful agreement with those of St. John in Revelation. Also, from a look round at the present state of the world, and to compare it with the revealed truths of the Word. I, for one, am not prepared to despise the mystery of the 'Great Pyramid,' though many who have not really read the book through are fully prepared to call it rubbish. If you and I be spared or not, this glorious day is drawing on when we shall see Him whom the Lord loveth. We shall be caught away from this world of sin and sorrow to join the redeemed throng; we shall be lifted up from our present low state to reign with Christ on this very earth, where we are accounted as the offscouring of all things, and should we be called to pass the gloomy portals of death, yet we shall come again to fetch those who remain unto that day. Let us then be up and doing. Surely His chariot wheels can even now be heard. His last promise cheers us—'Surely I come quickly'—and His waiting Church answer back the oft-repeated prayer, 'Even so, come, Lord Jesus.'"

We are very rejoiced to recognise that Mr. Brown appreciates the marvellous teachings of the Great Pyramid, which are now so actively developing. We would, indeed, that more shepherds in Israel were up and doing, and making known its wondrous truths. They are, without exception, the most extraordinary revelations which the Spirit is making known to the Anglo-Saxon race, and this very fact ought to be sufficiently phenomenal to cause inquiry as to the origin of a people so mightily privileged. Nevertheless, the progress of Anglo-Israelism remaineth sure. "The Scriptures cannot be broken," and the House of Israel must be discovered whilst the last streams of Euphrates are drying up. Here are two historic phenomena side by side—the decay and breaking up of Turkey, the spreading of the news of Israel discovered in Anglo-Saxondom.

As to the Great Pyramid discoveries, which go hand in hand with Israel's lifting up, how devoutly thankful should we Christian Israelites feel for the magnificent light which is shining with ever-increasing effulgency on His blessed Book. And truly I believe with Mr. Wilson, of Chicago, that this year will prove to be the most memorable epoch in Pyramid development. Just before the Master comes, just before the midnight hour strikes, a further message of love and warning shall be sent to Israel in Britain and afar off.

ISRAEL THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL IN SHIPBUILDING.

WE take the following from the Evening Citizen of Glasgow, of December 18, 1880, giving us Mr. S. Williamson's (M.P.) views regarding British supremacy over the nations in the matter of shipbuilding, sailing and steamships both included. The article is headed,

"THE PROSPECTS OF THE SHIPBUILDING TRADE.

"Mr. Stephen Williamson, M.P., who presided at the annual social meeting in connection with the Mersey Shipbuilders' Benevolent Fund on Thursday evening, said, in the course of his address, 'I must refer with satisfaction to the fact that the craft in which you are engaged, or at least that of iron shipbuilding, is now in a more prosperous position than it has been for some years past. In constructing sailing vessels and steamships very cheaply England can beat the world. I understand that, while our building yards are full of work, the trade of building wooden ships on the continent of Europe, in the Mediterranean and in our own colonies, as well as in the United States, is in a very languishing condition. Our supremacy is undoubted, and we are ready either to be the carriers of the world, or to provide vessels for neighbouring countries not so favourably placed as we are for their construction. It has been said that iron shipbuilding has taken away all your trade, but you cannot help that. Iron ships can be built so much cheaper than wooden ships, and do their work so well, that it is useless to hope that men will begin again to build the latter. There is no doubt that the day for wooden ships has passed; but I hope that the docking of iron ships—the making of the cabins, ceilings, and decks, as well as the execution of ordinary repairs—will supply plenty of work for the men of the Association, and I have no doubt that will be so.'"

ERRATA.—No. 219, page 102, 1st col., 12th line from end, for "effects Candahar," read "affects Candahar;" also page 103, 2nd col., 3rd line, for "Romans xi. 28," read "Romans xi. 29."

JONAH A TYPE OF EPHRAIM-ISRAEL.

A Bible Discourse.

By John T. Gott.

(Continued from page 105.)

PART V.

But we read that Jonah was sorely grieved, and desired to die and not live. The messenger of mercy sorely grieved, because mercy was bestowed. Before we censure Jonah's inconsistency in this respect, let us remember the cause of his grief. Hosea (ix. 3) and Amos (v. 27) had predicted that the Assyrians should be the destroyers of Israel. The preservation of Nineveh was an indication to Jonah's mind of the due fulfilment of prophecy, that Nineveh would rise up in due time as the destroyer of his own people Israel. Jonah's grief is but an instance of "man's inhumanity to man." That Israel might be safe in the future, he would have Nineveh destroyed. He who had been most of all indebted to the mercy of God, quarrels with the mercy of God because it is bestowed upon Israel's enemies.

Whilst we condemn Jonah, let us remember that nationally and individually we are guilty of the self-same sin. When our country has been assailed by foreign foes, or any of our world-wide dominions threatened by an invading force, do we not naturally desire the speedy overthrow of all our enemies, and rejoice when that object is achieved? And, individually, has there never been a time when we have indulged in repining at God's providence? when we have thought that our way would have been better than God's? when we have forgotten that God, who made the world, is the only One who can rightly govern the world? To us may that gentle reproof be administered, "Doest thou well to be angry?"

Jonah's mission having been finished, he went to the East side of the city, made a booth, and sat under the shadow till he might see what would become of the city. And the Lord God prepared a gourd, and made it to come up over Jonah that it might be a shadow over his head, and to deliver him from his grief. So Jonah was exceeding glad of the gourd.

But God prepared a worm when the morning rose the next day, and it smote the gourd that it withered. And it came to pass, when the sun did rise, that God prepared a vehement East wind; and the sun beat upon the head of Jonah, that he fainted and wished to die.

Now notice, God prepared the gourd. It is commonly called the palm-christ, and grows from eight to ten feet high. Only one leaf grows on a branch, but that being often more than a foot large, the collective leaves provided good shelter from the heat. Hence the cause of Jonah's gladness. The palm-christ is of rapid growth, and is rapidly destroyed. God made the booth and the gourd that sheltered it, a "school of discipline" to the prophet, wherein he might learn more enlightened views. Jonah enjoyed the gourd one day. Gladness was in his heart; but God prepared a worm, and when the morning light shone on the booth, the worm had done its work. Little things, like so-called little sins, often produce huge results. A miserable little worm at the root destroys a large gourd. "Black caterpillars often, in one night, strip the palm-christ of its leaves, and leave only the bare ribs."

When the sun rose, God prepared a vehement East wind—i.e., a still, silent, burning sirocco. The booth was there, the gourd was gone, and the heat beat upon the head of Jonah, that he fainted, and wished in himself to die. Now, if Jonah be a type of Ten-Tribed Israel, what is the meaning of this gourd, which filled the prophet's heart with so much gladness, which came up in a night and perished in a night? The leaves of the gourd were large, the branches were many, and the shelter afforded by them complete.

Granted that the remnant of Israel are in the midst of the British people, the hand of God in history distinctly proves that Britain, with all her colonies and dependencies scattered over the wide world, has been resting under the shadow of the Almighty, and that He has ever afforded a gourd of protection over His people.

Jonah's gourd of shelter lasted but a day. As part of a day stood for the whole in Jewish reckoning, as it is now 2,600 years since Israel was cast out and lost sight of, so the third prophetical day of Hosea has arrived when Israel, the nation, must be known, must be recognised by the whole world, and must stand upon their feet an exceeding great army, and must have been nationally blessed by this gourd of protection. The worm and the wind destroyed Jonah's gourd; and there is a worm gnawing at the root of the British Empire to-day, and a burning sirocco setting in from the East that threatens to break up the Empire, and strip the nation of all her colonies.

Ireland is in open rebellion, The ancient Canaanites are now, if they never were before, veritable "thorns in our sides," and "pricks in our eyes." The people in Britain are uneasy; a spark may set Europe in a blaze, with its ten millions of armed men ready for the awful struggle at the shortest notice. The whole world is in a state of great unrest, anticipating an evil day, and trying by human means to avert it. The burning Eastern Question still awaits some sort of definite settlement. The worm is at work, and the burning wind is blowing. Our national gourd, the shadow and protection of Almighty God, seems to be vanishing away. Helpless to curb rebellion at home, we are impotent to resist it in our colonies. On all sides of us national danger and disaster seems to abound. Like Jonah of old, we are called to remember that though our gourd seems to be gone, our God is not gone.

If there be a nation in the world that does not desire to be embroiled in the battles of the future, it is the British nation. Once the first in every fray, she now advocates a policy of utter isolation; and this policy, dictated by statesmen of the present day, is declared by prophets of old to be the policy to be carried out by the people of Israel in the latter days.

They are commanded to come out from among them, to hide themselves for a little moment (Isa. xxvi. 20—21). They are told that the enemy shall come "like a flood;" but are encouraged by the promise that then "the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him" (Isa. lix.) And Isaiah thus predicts the woe of Israel's enemies. The signs of the times seem to indicate that we are entering upon the days predicted. "Woe to the multitude of many people, which make a noise like the noise of the seas; and to the rushing of nations, that make a rushing like the rushing of mighty waters" (Isa. xvii. 12). "The nations shall rush like the rushing of many waters; but God shall rebuke them, and they shall flee far off, and shall be chased as the chaff of the mountain before the wind, and like a rolling thing before the whirlwind; and behold at eveningtide trouble, and before the morning he is not. This is the portion of them that spoil us, and the lot of them that rob us" (Isa. xvii. 13, 14).

So far as the history of the Jews is concerned, this prophecy had an awful and a literal fulfilment in the sudden destruction of Sennacherib's army. But the Jews are and were but a fraction of all the Tribes of Israel. This prophecy awaits a further fulfilment, not in that restricted sense which applied to the Jews, but in a world-wide extent, which must apply to a people in danger of sudden annihilation, to a people holding possessions, chambers, colonies, call them what you will, from one end of the earth to the other.

Where is there such a people? There is but one—the British-speaking people—who are to-day the representative nation of ancient Ten-Tribed Israel. They possess the signs, the manners, the customs, the tokens, and the blessings alone promised to God's chosen people. This latter fact many of our opponents readily endorse.

(To be continued.)

Digitized by Google

THE "LONDON QUARTERLY REVIEW" ON THE GREAT PYRAMID,

AND

PROFESSOR PIAZZI SMYTH'S REPLY.

FORWARDED BY J. THOMSON.

(Continued from page 107.)

PART III.

BUT to refute at length every blunder, mis-statement, and perversion of the reviewer throughout his whole article, would be to write a much bigger book than "Our Inheritance," edition 4; and yet he objects to that as being too long, though, for the high and most unique subject in the whole globe (to take it only in its popular acceptation of), "the greatest of the seven wonders of the world in the time of the Greeks, and the only one of them still existing."

Behold, however, a short example or two of really malevolent insinuations. On his page 303, the reviewer, after alluding to Rev. Mr. Cachemaille's finding that the well-measured double-tier portion of the Entrance Passage of Great Pyramid, seemed to give 2743 B.C. for the Deluge date, says that Professor Piazzi Smyth, seeking to confirm that date, added together the dates of eleven authorities, and got 2741 B.C., meretriciously, of course. But that date was both obtained and published by me in "Life and Work" whole years before Mr. Cachemaille entered into the subject; and it depended on the difference mainly of the Septuagint, and the Hebrew texts of the Bible itself, according to the best theological writers, who cannot be harmonised in any other manner.

On his page 290, the reviewer sneers at my conclusion of the Earth density being given by Great Pyramid as 5·70; and says: "We suppose that, after this, our scientists will regard the question as finally settled, and inquire no more."

Now who would imagine from this that the very same page of my book which gave that 5·7 Pyramid deduction, describes that scientists have been again, since my first publication of the Pyramid number, repeating their experiments, and have brought out the very closely accordant number, 5·69; their last two previous measures having given the discordant results of 5·316 and 6·575. How comes it, too, that the reviewer, if he is so mighty in modern science as he pretends to be, did not know, from other sources, something of this re-measurement of high modern science, for it is printed and published in the "Proceedings" of the chief scientific society of the whole country?

Again, on page 299, the reviewer says that I estimate the weight of Great Pyramid at 5,273,834 tons, and then multiply by the 15th power of 10, "in order to arrive at the weight of the globe." Yet my book shows the several steps for computing the weight of our earth-globe, entirely independent of Great Pyramid, and honestly in accordance with modern science. And then it is that a certain harmonious commensurability is discovered between the weight of the earth-globe, so obtained, and the weight of Great Pyramid, not as estimated merely, but very carefully computed, and the computations thereof given at length.

At page 302 it is said well enough that the centre of Well's mouth has its place in Grand Gallery floor-distance at 33 inches; the first side of the Well being 19, and the second 47 inches from the North Wall, or beginning of said floor. But from that, the reviewer will draw the preposterous conclusion that the Great Pyramid teaches the Messiah's death to have lasted 28 years, in place of three days only, according to the New Testament. If, however, the monumentalisation of the greatest event in all human history, the descent into the grave and the triumphant resurrection therefrom of the Son of God, was to be typified by a well-mouth at all, such well could not have been much less than 28 inches across; while the place or date of its centre was still as exactly recoverable by measures of both sides as if it had been marked only by a perforation representing the three days, so important to all Christendom, accurately, on the proportion of one inch to a year. Such perforation would be a microscopic puncture, only 1-122 part of an inch in diameter; and could such a mere pin-hole possibly have given to the world the sublime idea of the descent of our Divine Saviour into the grave of men, as a man? or of His glorious resurrection therefrom, forming the only pathway of ascent for all mankind from their otherwise lost condition, up to the realms of the saved, the pardoned, and the blest?

At page 304, the reviewer feels satisfied, out of the inner powers of his own mind alone, that the two ruled lines of the Entrance Passage, which presented to me such safe indications of extreme antiquity, are quite recent. But he ought to travel, and learn by visiting Egypt (the monumental country of the earth, according to Baron Bunsen), and by examining crucial parts of the Great Pyramid, how wonderfully certain markings on certain kinds of stone, and in particular positions, do last; and all those conditions are found combined to favour the lasting preservation of these particular lines of the Entrance Passage.

Had they been so strongly incised there as to call general attention to them, they could soon have been hammered or chiselled out of existence; but they escaped such mischief positively by their shallowness, by the darkness of that part of the Passage, and by the steepness of its floor, which causes all ordinary visitors to be looking after their own safety, lest they should slide down dangerously, rather than trying to examine the walls for two faint markings which had never been published on previous to 1865 A.D.; while the effects of the weather thereabouts on the peculiar mineralogy of the stone, has been only to make many very little perforations in the surface, not to remove the whole superficies as it does in some other kinds of stone, similarly exposed; and especially in granite.

The granite, moreover, of the Great Pyramid, partly, perhaps, by its rarity, seems always to have attracted more attention from mischievous persons than the lime-stone; so that wherever a granite line, or edge of peculiar sharpness, had been left by the primeval architect in a very visible position, it has been hammered and destroyed out of shape by some modern Goths; and evidently, from the colour of the fractures, in very recent times. Yet, though these are facts which any visitor may test for himself in the most simple and direct manner, the caustic reviewer, while he either ignores or derides the successful perpetuation of the sacred cubit of the builder, by the colossal masonry of the Queen's Chamber, and its unique and grand so-called Niche, and the confirmation with perfected precision by the whole structure of the King's Chamber, in a manner which never struck the ignorant as likely to contain the precious unit and standard record of the monument of number, weight, and measure—the London Quarterly Reviewer, we repeat, exclaims with impatience: "Why did not the builder have the cubit scale in its full length, and also divided into 5ths, and 25ths, or inches, clearly engraved on the granite wall, so that everyone could see it easily, and no mistake occur?"

And the answer given forth by the marred visage of all the best granite edges in the Pyramid is, because it would have been certainly hammered out of existence years ago. While even if such a nicely engraved scale as the reviewer calls for, and on a conspicuous part of the wall, had been preserved by some mysterious influence to these days, would not the reviewer himself have been prominent to say of it, as he has done of the lines in the Entrance Passage, that mere markings so very superficial as these, "must have been put in very recently, by someone with a theory to support"?

(To be continued.)

N.B.—We regret that Mr. J. Thomson's name has been misspelt in previous issues.—ED.

Digitized by Google

A FRENCH JOURNALIST GIVES BLIND EVIDENCE OF OUR IDENTITY, AND THAT THE SOUTH IRISHMAN IS NOT OF ISRAEL.

We recommend to our readers' attention the following article on Ireland, published by Le Petit Journal, of Paris, February 5, 1881. We look on the statement of the journalist as full corroboration of British-Hebrew origin, but equally as good evidence that the South Irishman is not of that race. There is some injustice, of course, in the Frenchman's remarks, for he attributes the Irishman's squalor and wretchedness to English oppression; whereas we all know it is caused by his own inherent sloth and inferior civilisation. He is not of Israel, in short, and his origin is Canaanitish, which accounts for his continued poverty, and his becoming to Israel thorns in their sides and pricks in their eyes, according to the prophecy (Num. xxxiii. 55). Our extract is as follows:—

THE MARTYRDOM OF A NATION.—WHAT IS GOING ON IN IRELAND.

(From "Le Petit Journal," Paris, February 5.)

A most abnormal and lamentable fact offers itself at present to the attention of Europe. We are at the end of the nineteenth century, a century which may, more than any other, boast of having spread liberty and justice. To it civilisation owes the abolition of slavery, the emancipation of the Russian serfs, and the elevation of men from the position of subjects to the rank of free citizens, and the law equal for all, and voted by all—that is, by the representatives of the nation, prevails in and rules over all the States of Western Europe. There is a country in that Europe, in this centre of modern civilisation, which stands foremost amongst the others. It extends its domination to every part of the world, and rules over 297,500,000 souls; 35,000,000 of them are in Europe, in the mother country, 245,000,000 in Asia, and the others in Africa, America, Oceania, and Australia. It possesses a fleet of 249 war vessels, the largest of all national fleets, the most powerful that ever covered the sea, and it proudly takes for its motto, "Wherever my flag waves liberty rises." This powerful and civilising people is also the wealthiest in the world. A learned statistician, Mr. Robert Giffen, has calculated that its annual saving—that is, the excess of its production over its consumption, exceeds 240 millions of pounds sterling. The total of its imports and its exports exceeded in 1878 600 millions of pounds for the metropolis, and 960 millions of pounds for the whole empire. Its capital is the most important financial mart in the world, and its seaports the greatest emporiums of merchandise. This people has been the pioneer of industrial and social progress; it is they who first condemned, stigmatised, and pursued fifty years ago, in 1833, the slave traders, and under their action slavery has been abolished, and no civilised people dares now to maintain it. Well, by a curious anomaly, this English people, so liberal in their island of Great Britain, so liberal in their dominions all over the world, so rich by their intellectual and productive power, this people maintains under the most odious oppression a people of slaves, a nation of five millions of human beings, Ireland! Writing on Ireland, Gustave de Beaumont said, "I have visited the pariah in his forest and the chained negro; I thought I had witnessed the lowest stage of human misfortune, but the misery of the Irish people is a special sight of which nothing seen in any other part of the world can give an idea." On this soil, where a people as happy as the British people could thrive, the Irish peasant dies of hunger, cold, and misery. His food, without bread, meat, or even milk, is reduced to a few potatoes, and when the potato crop fails, it is death for those poor miserable wretches, if they cannot secure sufficient means to emigrate. From 1851 to 1871 the number of emigrants which misery drove out of Ireland exceeded two millions, and on December 31, 1878, it amounted to 2,494,605. According to the last census, there are in Ireland 250,611 poor in the workhouses, and 47,019 in the hospitals. By premature death and emigration the population of Ireland, which in 1845 amounted to 8,295,061, has been reduced on an extraordinary scale. In 1851 it counted 6,514,473 inhabitants; in 1861, 5,788,415; in 1871, 5,386,706. According to the recent official census, Ireland contains now hardly five millions of inhabitants. What is the cause of this evil? Who are the guilty, or at least the responsible, parties? It is a sad, a very sad story—it is the martyrdom of a people oppressed for the last two centuries. An end must be put to it, for the state of Ireland is as much a disgrace to modern civilisation as to England.

The French journalist should ask himself why, in the midst of such an imperial race, in the blaze of such civilisation and wealth, the South Irish peasant only is found starving, miserable, degraded? Why, in the midst of a teeming population, the Irishman only is decreasing in numbers, and forced by sheer wretchedness to emigrate? It is because he is of a different race from the Hebrew Saxons and Celts who occupy the rest of the British islands. The idea that the British oppress, or are guilty of any sort of injustice towards their Irish fellow subjects is absurd on every ground, and it is false besides. There is only one cause to be assigned for the phenomenon, and that is the old one. The lower orders of the South and West Irish are Phœnician Canaanites, a race of inferior civilisation placed there by God Himself to be "thorns in the sides, and pricks in the eyes" of Israel, and there can be no manner of doubt but that they have for a long while past, and are pre-eminently now to-day fulfilling that portion of the prophecy to the very letter.

MR. JOHN BRIGHT ON ISRAEL'S EMPIRE.

We do not pretend to be an admirer of Mr. John Bright or his opinions; but the enclosed extract from one of his speeches, given us by a Birmingham paper, is interesting, as showing what Mr. Bright anticipated might one day be realised in North America as a development of the Anglo-Saxon race located there. We disapprove of the great Tribune's utterances so far as it is clear he desired and expected a great Republic to be formed in the American continent at the expense of Israel's Empire in Canada. But as we believe that the Anglo-Saxon Republic there now will, ere long, before Israel's return to the land, become a federated Empire with British-Israel's "nation and company of nations," we think Mr. Bright's anticipations will certainly be realised, though not quite as he expected. Manasseh will have to return to Ephraim, but Ephraim will certainly never suffer disruption in order that its members may swell the territorial greatness of Manasseh. The quotation is as follows:—

"A proposition has been made to the President of the United States of America that some admirers of Mr. Bright should be permitted to perpetuate, on a marble tablet to be erected in the Capitol at Washington, an extract from a speech delivered by Mr. Bright on December 18th, 1862—at once a memory of John Bright, and a link binding the two great nations in friendly brotherhood. The following is the extract:—

"'I have another and far brighter vision before my gaze. It may be a vision, but I will cherish it. I see one vast confederation, stretching from the frozen North in unbroken line to the glowing South, and from the wild billows of the Atlantic Westward to the calmer waters of the Pacific main; and I see one people and one language, and one law and one faith, and over all that wide continent the home of freedom and a refuge for the oppressed of every race and of every clime.'"

Correspondence.

THE REV. B. W. SAVILE AGAIN EXPLAINS.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

Dear Sir,—Having accidentally seen the Banner of February 23, I observe, at page 82, some remarks on what the writer is pleased to term my "tergiversation." I am sorry he should think it necessary to use so harsh a term. I am not, however, surprised, nor do I complain; but as he does not appear to understand the point at issue between us, I ask leave to give the following explanation:—When I discovered weightier evidence and stronger reasons for rejecting the theory of the Identity between the House of Omri, or the Ten Tribes, as the name is written on the Assyrian monuments, and the supposed ancestors of the British nation, than I once had for accepting it, I thought it right publicly to say so. And although the writer appears to say that I did not give the real reason for this change of opinion, if you will refer to p. 13 of my pamphlet on "Anglo-Israelism," you will observe that I say: "Upon reconsidering the question, and carefully weighing the evidence which has been produced by Oriental scholars . . . I am inclined to think it must be given up. And if this conclusion be correct, I do not see how the theory of any connection between the Beth Khumri . . . and the ancient Britons can be maintained." All Cymric scholars of the present day ridicule the idea I had broached in my pamphlet, "Are we Israelites?" in which I had committed the mistake of identifying names on the mere strength of similarity of sound, of there being any connection between the Beth Khumri and the Gimiri, or Cymry (both of which names appear contemporaneously in the cuneiform inscriptions), the undoubted ancestors of the ancient Britons.

Digitized by Google

After the publication of my second pamphlet, in order to confirm the opinion I had formed, I asked my learned friend, Dr. Birch, head of the archæological department in the British Museum, to send me a transcript of the two names, as they are written in the original inscriptions in the Museum. This he was kind enough to do, and I have now before me the two names written in both cuneiform and Roman characters. I do not trouble you with the first, as your publisher has probably no cuneiform type, but the other reads as follows:—

1. The House of Omri—mât bit Hu-um-ri-a.
2. The House of the Cymry—mât Gi-mir-ra-a-a.

I will only add that if any of your readers are interested in seeing this question ably treated, as far as regards the Cymric branch, if he will consult Bunsen's "Philosophy of History," or Max Müller's "Survey of Languages," or Rawlinson's "Origin of Nations," especially the chapter on "Ethnic Affinities," he will find ample reasons against the possibility of identifying the Gimera, or Cymry, with the Ten Tribes of the House of Israel.

Yours faithfully,

BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE.

March 4th, 1881. Rector of Shillingford.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—If the reader will refer back to page 82 of the BANNER, he will find our remarks on the Rev. Mr. Savile's "explanation" of his change of views to the readers of the Rock. We have in the above his statement showing to the readers of the BANNER why he has "turned his back on himself." It will be observed that our rev. opponent has nothing new to allege; that he repeats his acknowledgment of a mistake in regard to the ethnic argument; produces the two names as reported to him by Dr. Birch, of the British Museum, read from the inscriptions there of the House of Israel and the House of the Cymry respectively; depends on them for his justification; but has not a word to say regarding the Scriptural argument, which was our main point in page 82, above referred to. What are we to say to all this? Surely that the Scriptural argument which connects the Mât bit hu-um-ri-a (or House of Khumri, or Israel), with the descendants of the Mât-gi-mir-ra-a-a (or modern Welsh and Sacæ) is too strong for the Rev. Mr. Savile, and he wisely leaves that point, as he found it, untouched. Let our readers note the facts. Here is a clergyman of the Church of England, for forty years in orders, thoroughly read in the Holy Scriptures, as we know he is from his writings in the BANNER. He is challenged to meet us on the Scriptural platform, and not only does he shirk that contest, but he actually transfers the dispute to a philological phonetic argument which certainly, on his own showing, does not fully convince his own mind; for he talks of "being inclined to think," and "if his conclusions be correct," he "does not see how the theory" he once advocated from Scriptural and other grounds "can be maintained." We think we might leave Mr. Savile to our readers' judgment; and we do not think they would deem his position either a strong one, or satisfactory to himself and to those who depend on his judgment. We mean now, however, to take Mr. Savile on his own ground, and to challenge him on the phonetic value of his two names, now paraded for our confusion. Israel of the Ten Tribes, it is admitted, are called on the inscription, Mât bit Hu-um-ri-a, or, as Mr. Savile admits, Omri. This word Omri commences, in Hebrew, with a gutteral hard letter, and reads—as Mr. Savile also allows—Khumri. However we may account for it, this is the very value, phonetically, of the name the Welsh descendants of the Mât Gi-mir-ra-a-a insist on calling themselves to-day, Mr. Savile being our witness ("Are We Israelites?" page 22). How does Mr. Savile account for that? Now it is admitted the ancestors of the present Cymry, or Khumri, were contemporaneous in the cuneiform inscriptions with the Israelite Mât bit Hu-um-ri-a. What says God's Word shall be outcast Israel's patronymic? Hosea i. 3 connects them with "Gomer, the daughter of Diblaim," of the Japhetic race (Gen. x. 2); a fact which the inscriptions responding to prophecy proclaim as the name of the ancestors of the modern British folk. The Bible points to the ostensibly Japhetic origin of the future outcasts—and the inscriptions do the same; deceiving Mr. Savile and the Cymric scholars, who, we are shocked to see plainly, are ready to throw over the testimony of God's Word and depend on a phonetic dissimilarity, which, after all, amounts to nothing. For we believe, even on Mr. Savile's own showing, the difference between Hu-um-ri-a (or Khum-ri-a) and Gi-mir-ra-a-a, or Gomri, is not nearly so great as many other phonetic changes which names of people and places have undergone in the course of six and twenty centuries. In this case, the miracle is that the modern Welsh call themselves by the very name which, admittedly, the cuneiform inscriptions assign and ascribe to the House of Israel. This is Mr. Savile's crux. Let him extricate himself if he can.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

MY DEAR SIR,—I am glad to rank myself amongst your supporters. It is but within the last few months that I have been led by a friend to study the subject of the Identity; and I must confess that I never read the pages of Holy Scripture with such increasing interest as I do now. Your BANNER is a most welcome visitor every Wednesday morning. Could you not find a corner in it for notes and queries? Perhaps some friend to the Identity might undertake it for you. I cannot help thinking it would be a great boon to the many inquirers who find difficulties as they read.

Pray go on with the Comments; now that we have come to Isaiah they are doubly interesting. With my earnest prayers for your success,

Believe me,

Very faithfully yours,

WILLIAM R. CAPEL,
Vicar of Bickenhill, Warwickshire.

46, Montpelier-road, Brighton, February 21, 1881.

[NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—We trust all other clerical friends who are satisfied of the truth of our Identity will follow the Rev. W. R. Capel's example, and manfully appear in the BANNER, by name, to testify to the fact. God's truth seems to us to demand this self-sacrifice, and the time has come when men must boldly take their stand in this matter.—PHILO-ISRAEL.]

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I have taken the liberty of sending you a copy of a hymn which I noticed in the hymn book ("Church Hymns") used at a Church I attend here, presuming you might think it worthy of a corner in your valuable paper, THE BANNER. It is, I think, the best Identity hymn that I have seen. You will no doubt recognise my name, as having written you a short time back with regard to a Bank of England loan of two millions from the Bank of France. I must apologise for having troubled you on the matter, but I only needed the explanation you gave, for which I thank you. I am happy to say that Anglo-Israelism is steadily growing in our city. Hoping the hymn will be of service to you,

I remain, yours respectfully,

E. P. D.

76, Sandstone-road, Stoneycroft, Liverpool, January 4, 1881.

"For what nation is there so great, who hath God so nigh unto them, as the Lord our God is in all things that we call upon Him for?"—Deut. iv. 7.

Praise to our God: whose bounteous hand,	(Psa. cl. 1—6.)
Prepared of old our glorious land;	(2 Sam. vii. 10.)
A garden fenced with silver sea,	(Isa. v. 2—7.)
A people prosperous, strong and free.	(Isa lxi. 9.)
Praise to our God: through all our past	(Psa. cxlvii. 20.)
His mighty arm hath held us fast,	(Isa. xlii. 6.)
'Till wars and perils, toils and tears,	(Isa. liv. 11.)
Have brought the rich and peaceful years.	(Isa. liv. 13.)
Praise to our God: the vine He set	(Rev. xix. 1—3.)
Within our coasts is fruitful yet;	(Isa. xxxv. 1.)
On many a shore her seedlings grow,	(Num. xxiv. 7.)
'Neath many a sun her clusters glow.	(Isa. xlix. 10.)
Praise to our God: His power alone	(Psa. cxlvi. 1.)
Can keep unmoved our ancient throne;	(1 Kings viii. 25.)
Sustained by councils wise and just,	(Deut. iv. 6.)
And guarded by a people's trust.	(Josh. i. 9.)
Praise to our God: who still forbears,	(Psa. cxvi. 19.)
Who still this guilty nation spares;	(Mal. iii. 6.)
Who calls us still to seek his face	(Psa. cxlv. 19, 20.)
And lengthens out our day of grace.	(2 Peter iii. 15.)
Praise to our God: though chastenings stern	(Psa. cxvii. 1—2.)
Our evil dross should throughly burn;	(Jer. xxx. 11.)
His rod and staff, from age to age,	(Psa. xxiii. 4.)
Shall rule and guide His heritage.	(Deut. ix. 26, 29.)

Church Hymns.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

	£	s.	d.
Mrs. Birkbeck, per "Philo-Israel"	0	10	0
A Lady, per Mr. Brigden, Upper Norwood ...	0	2	0

GREAT & INCREASED SUCCESS of the Rev. E. J. SILVERTON'S READY RELIEF REMEDIES for DEAFNESS and ILL-HEALTH.

Since MR. SILVERTON removed from Nottingham to Hackney, London, in November last, the applications for help have been so great that he has found it absolutely necessary to seek more commodious premises. These he has obtained in the City, at 17, St. Bride-street, Ludgate Circus, where patients may be seen daily, free of charge, from 11 a.m. till 7 p.m. (Saturdays excepted), and where all communications should be addressed.

Mr. Silverton's celebrated Ear Trumpet literally gives hearing at once to the deaf. During the past twelve years no less than 12,000 of these instruments have been sold, and in every case have given the greatest satisfaction.

But Mr. Silverton has also a medicine which removes deafness, noises and offensive discharge in the ears. His Aural Remedy goes to the root of the disease, and removes the cause.

When, however, the tympanum of the ear is broken, an artificial "drum" has to be introduced, and this marvellous surgical operation Mr. Silverton accomplishes repeatedly. The ears are also examined without pain or inconvenience by the Silver Illuminated Speculum.

As with deafness, so with other ailments. In every case of ill-health there is a cause; and, generally speaking, a cause that can be removed. In his Medical Energiser and Nutrient Food of Food, Mr. Silverton has two powerful and popular Remedies which go at once to the evil. The Energiser may be said to be an almost infallible remedy for all diseases that arise from Weakness, Lassitude, Cough, Colds, and general Ill-health; whilst the nutritive properties possessed by the Food of Food are so great that it is astonishing to see how it builds up the muscle and flesh, and increases the strength and weight of the patient.

Persons who cannot see Mr. Silverton should send for his Book of Health, and Treatise on Diseases of the Ear and Affections of the Eye, of which 250,000 are in circulation. Price 6d., but free to the readers of the Banner of Israel.

Note the Address—17, St. Bride-street, Ludgate Circus, London, E.C.

NEW PAMPHLET ON THE IDENTITY OF THE LOST TEN TRIBES
FOR UNIVERSAL CIRCULATION.

The Best Pamphlet to place in the hands of a person unacquainted with the subject.

Price 6d., by post 7d. 64 Demy 8vo. pages, in wrapper. One dozen copies sent free for a post office order for 6s.

FIFTY REASONS
WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES
OF THE LOST TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL.

BY REV. W. H. POOLE, D.D.

"There is a principle which is a bar against all information, which is proof against all argument, and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance. This principle is, contempt prior to examination."—Dr. Paley.

A greater than Paley has said:—"He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is a folly and a shame unto him."—Prov. xviii.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET.
AND ALL BOOKSELLERS.

Now Ready, in handsome cloth, gilt, with Coloured Map, and several Illustrations, price 3s. 6d., by post 3s. 10d.

THE
GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.
BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,
High-Class Tailor,
47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.
MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

Just published, Crown Octavo, cloth bound, gilt letters 296 pages.

THE SEED OF ISAAC,
BEING AN
HISTORICAL REVIEW OF GOD'S DEALINGS
WITH
HIS CHOSEN PEOPLE ISRAEL.

BY J. D. GRANGER.

Post free, 4s., from THE AUTHOR, 34, Exeter-street, Plymouth, and ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published, price 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

THE GREAT PYRAMID, IN, BUT NOT OF, EGYPT:
ITS CLAIMS TO BE FOR A SIGN AND FOR A WITNESS UNTO THE LORD OF HOSTS IN THE LAND OF EGYPT,
As announced in the Scriptures of His Holy Prophet Isaiah, B.C. 714.

BY H. W. BADGER,
Private in H. M. 40th Regiment, now serving in India.
INTRODUCED BY MRS. PIAZZI SMYTH,
London:
ROBERT BANKS, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.

New ready, bound in cloth, 2s. 3d., cloth gilt, 2s. 9d. post free 3d. extra.

SERMON I.,
Containing Seven Parts of Extracts from the
"FLYING ROLL,"
FOR THE
"INGATHERING" OF ISRAEL.

May be had of Joseph Head, John Rogers, George Moore, Edward Rogers, 5, Trafalgar-st., New Brompton, Kent; Joshua Rogers, 151, Great Titchfield-st., London, W.; and, by ordering, of any bookseller. May be had also in parts, 4d each; post free 4½d.

"Who are Israelites, to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises."

Price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome, cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES AND 1882.
BY THE
REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD
Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

PHILO-ISRAEL (in the BANNER) says:—"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome Identity volume. It contains twenty discourses of the well-known American divine, Dr. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, N.Y. We are glad to find from these discourses that Dr. Wild is quite one with us on this side the water with most, though not all the views we entertain on our great and glorious subject.... We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and 'American' point of view, which is sure to interest, sure to be instructive, and may lead the thoughtless and inquiring to pursue the investigation till possibly conviction may be the result.'

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA THE ROYAL SEED TO KING DAVID'S THRONE, AND ARE NOT HER SUBJECTS, THE BRITISH PEOPLE, THE TEN LOST TRIBES?

BY WILLIAM HOPTON, of Sutton Heath.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just out, 8d., post free 9d.

ISRAEL NOTWITHSTANDING; Being the Second and concluding Part of the Earnest Appeal from the Pew to the Pulpit. By JOHN G. SHAW, Author of "Britain (or Israel)," &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published, price One Shilling, post free.

PROMISES, PROPHECIES, and DECLARATIONS relating to GOD'S CHOSEN PEOPLE ISRAEL.

London: F. Norgate, 7, King-street, Covent-garden. London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 16, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 221. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23, 1881. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Assassination of the Emperor of Russia	117
Israel Compared with Gentiles in War	117
The Man-Child. By G. L. R.	118
The London Quarterly Review on the Great Pyramid, and Professor Piazzi Smyth's Reply. Forwarded by J. Thomson.—Part IV.	119
Jonah a Type of Ephraim-Israel. A Bible Discourse.—Part VI. By John T. Gott..	120
The Irish Police and English Constable Give True Testimony to Our Identity. By the Rev. Denis Hanan, M.A.	121
The British Nation	121
The Great Pyramid. By Sydney Hall, C.E. Part I.	122
Israel's Tribulation Shortened. By J. L.	123
Correspondence	123

THE ASSASSINATION OF THE EMPEROR OF RUSSIA.

"The stars shall fall from heaven."—Matt. xxiv. 29.

THE awful event just announced, we feel, is but the beginning of the end. A star has fallen from the political "heaven." But the Lord did not confine the fall to one star. He said, "The stars." This success of the devilish conspirators who are bent on the destruction of the thrones of Europe, will give a great impetus, we fear, to the vile operations of "the three unclean spirits like frogs," preparing men for the WAR (not battle) of that "great day of God Almighty" (Rev. xvi. 14). This event, we may be sure, will have a most sinister bearing on the peace of Europe, and with this ushering in of verse 29 of Matt. xxiv. we fear we must bid adieu to all confidence and peace in the "earth" till the frightful convulsion, now imminent, has passed away. We look, after the great earthquakes in divers places, and the fall of the crowned heads, for the SIGN of the Son of Man in heaven; next for His coming in the air; and then for the proclamation of our Identity; Israel being at the same time blessed with the NEW COVENANT outpouring of God's Holy Spirit.

ISRAEL AS COMPARED WITH GENTILES IN WAR.

THE Continental papers have it at present all their own way. Our severe defeats on the frontiers of the Transvaal, where a handful of Boers, helped by their mountain passes, have kept the smaller handfuls of British at bay for so many weeks, are causes for the finger of Gentile scorn to be pointed at our military system. The Germans are making sure that "if we are to hold our own at all," we must give up the "hireling army" we employ, and copy their enforced military service, seeing our Empire is world-wide and universal, also that we are vulnerable at all points. This is quite true. But the German forgets one great fact. We are Israel! and Israel's God is our ally. Nay, "There is none other that fighteth for us but only He." The Times, on March 1, published a report from Paris of the public opinion reported there from Berlin, and what the correspondent said was this:—

PARIS, FEBRUARY 28.

To-day's edition of the Allgemeine Zeitung contains an article by the Viennese Professor of Political Economy, Dr. Lorenz von Stein, entitled "Hannibal in England, from the Continental Standpoint," in which he comes to the conclusion that England cannot long continue to fight her battles with hireling soldiers. Never, he says, was there a greater contradiction than that displayed by the present situation of England in comparison with the rest of Europe. On the Continent, peoples whose armaments number millions; in England, a few miserable regiments, which are to keep whole quarters of the globe in obedience; on the Continent, general obligatory military service; in England, an army of hirelings, whose incapacity for war their own General Roberts has openly declared; on the Continent, countries whose only wish is to keep their boundaries; in England, a people whose territories are unbounded, without its even defending them. Afghanistan and the Transvaal have shown, he says, that England cannot long maintain her position in the world unless she adopts compulsory military service for the defence of her highest interests.

Do our readers notice here the testimony of the foreigner that Israel dwelleth alone? Mark the points of difference between us and our Gentile Continental neighbours. On the Continent are millions of peoples in arms; in England, "a few miserable regiments." The millions of armed peoples, however, are preparing for their great earthquake woe; and we, happy British, whose defence is only a few "miserable" regiments, have an outwork or first line of defence which will suffice us when even the remaining "miserable" remnants of our power are scattered at the ends of the earth—namely, the "right hand of the righteousness of the God of Israel." He has guaranteed our defence, as may be seen by reference to Isa. xli. 10—15, and why should we take notice of such scornful allegations as our faithless Gentile critics direct against us in this time of our temporary eclipse under the prophetic destiny Isa. xxvi. 20 reserves for us? The German military expert rightly declares our few regiments are expected to hold in obedience an Empire which for territory is unbounded, and that our force, scattered and few as it is, is quite inadequate to the object proposed. True! but what then? Being Israel, we are thus fulfilling our destined prophetic rôle. Our Lord calls us "Ye few men of Israel," "thou worm Jacob" (Isa. xli. 14). God provides for us as He does not for the Gentile nations, and we rely on an arm that is omnipotent, even on that God who deigns to call Himself "the God," not of the Germans or of the other Gentiles, but "of Israel." It appears from our critic's words that "Afghanistan and the Transvaal have shown that England cannot long maintain her position in the world, unless she adopts compulsory military service for the defence of her highest interests." We reply that confederation of the Anglo-Saxon races will ere long be forced on us by the very consideration the Gentile writer puts before us; and this effected, will supply such a power and strength to the apparently feeble Empire of God's chosen ones, that the Gentile world, with its self-doomed millions of armed peoples will be as nothing, and "as a thing of nought," "confounded and ashamed at our might," which, upheld by the Almighty, will be found more than a match for all the world in arms united. But we would ask our readers to reflect where the boasted power of the millions of armed peoples of Europe will be after they have been submerged under the waves "of all God's fierce anger," and of His terrible "indignation," after, in short, "the fire of His jealousy has devoured them?" This fate awaits them what time the Lord turns to the "worm Jacob," and to the "few despised men of Israel a pure language, that they may all call upon the Name of the Lord to serve Him with one consent" (Zeph. iii. 9). These facts, arising from our Identity, furnish us with a complete and sufficient reply to all our sneering Continental detractors, who doubtless are gloating over the decadence of England, her loss of prestige and power, and who argue from the defeat of a handful of troops, done to death not once but thrice, by a thoroughly incompetent General, that our last hour has come. God works in a mysterious way. He caused, no doubt, Sir George Colley to commit those acts of egregious folly, which have apparently all but ruined our power and prestige in South Africa, in order further to scatter our forces at the ends of the earth, and to cause over 15,000 of our best troops to be removed from the British Islands, lest we should be tempted to interfere in the Continental cataclysm about to break out there. Isaiah xxvi. 20 has to be fulfilled. How could it have been brought to pass that we should have been compelled (with our present Government in power), to sit by in silence, and allow Europe to destroy itself, were we not denuded of our strength, chained to our island home, and to our foreign Gates and possessions, our troops scattered here and there in distant wars, and ourselves impotent to influence the Continent in the coming times of awful trouble? These thoughts should comfort us in our present grievous tribulations. Reader, let us rest in the living God. His we are, and Him we serve. All these trials He has brought upon us, but in the midst of all He wears to us a smiling face, and bids us even in our tears to "Fear not, fear not!" for He is with us, and "never, never, no never will leave us nor forsake us!" Therefore, Israel, praise ye the Lord, even though He now chasten us for our good (Josh. i. 5, 9, 17; Deut. vii. 24, xxxi. 8; Isa. xli. 10, 15, xliii. 2, 5; Heb. xiii. 5, 6).

THE MAN-CHILD.

By G. L. R.

In a former paper, entitled "Thoughts on Revelation xii.," the idea intended to be conveyed was that the British nation, Lost Israel of the Ten Tribes, was the "seed of the woman," predestined, through Christ, to bruise the serpent's head, and to rule all nations with a rod of iron; overcoming through the blood of the Lamb, and sitting in Christ's throne. This Man-child was born to the woman whilst she laboured, "pained to be delivered," as we there showed, under the final persecution of Diocletian. The woman in this picture is clothed with the sun, the moon under her feet, and crowned with twelve stars. We may here see the Church in her suffering, crowned with glory, exalted to the imperial sun-power (Constantine, her defender); the former ecclesiastical systems under her feet; and the rulers (secular and ecclesiastical) attending on her. Or, taking another view, we may see Israel clothed with the "Sun of righteousness;" the law under her, through the blood of the covenant; and the Twelve Tribes gathered to her (see the dream of Joseph).

But now our attention is drawn to the Man-child of Isaiah lxvi. Here, "before she travailed she brought forth;" before her pain came "she was delivered of a Man-child."

Here we notice, first, in reference to the word male (or son) that it seems used to denote the character of this offspring; not feeble or effeminate, but vigorous, active, and energetic. Nations rise by degrees, and are long in coming to maturity, as we saw in Rev. xii., where the Man-child is lost sight of until He again appears as the "mighty Angel" in Rev. x. But, in this instance, "as soon as Zion travailed she brought forth her children"—that is, without the ordinary delay and pain of parturition. In a single day the new Jerusalem is brought forth. We beg our readers now to remember the words of our blessed Lord to His disciples, that when they should see Jerusalem surrounded with armies they were to flee. They were not to be saved out of the overthrow, nor to pass through that ordeal; but from the warning they had received, and seeing the sign, they knew "the desolation was nigh at hand." We will now turn to history, and see and hear what took place.

"By the special providence of God, after the Romans under Cestius Gallus made their first advance towards Jerusalem, they suddenly withdrew again, in a most unexpected—and, indeed, impolitic—manner; at which Josephus testifies his surprise, since the city might then have easily been taken. By this means they gave, as it were, a signal to the Christians to retire; which, in regard to this admonition, they did, some to Pella, and others to Libanus, and thereby preserved their lives."—Doddridge.

"Josephus tells us that when Vespasian was drawing his forces towards Jerusalem, a great multitude fled from Jericho into the mountainous country for their security."—Bishop Porteus.

Thus we see how exactly was fulfilled the vision of Isaiah, nor can we read this chapter (lxvi.) without noticing a résumé therein of the whole dispensation, and likewise that the nations are exhorted to rejoice with Jerusalem, as St. Paul puts it in Rom. xv.: "Rejoice, ye Gentiles, with His people." These escaped ones, "the children the Lord had given" to Christ, were for signs and wonders; and proceeded to the ends of the earth proclaiming the glorious tidings of salvation, and the burden of their cry was, "The Lord hath redeemed Israel" (Jer. vi. 1; Isa. xliv. 21—23). Here we find, when Judah was punished for her sins by being carried captive into all nations, God remembered His promise, and delivered Benjamin, and sent him to the nations. For His Spirit could not leave Israel, according to the word He had covenanted with them (Hag. ii. 5).

The next thing, therefore, we hear of, is the epistles to the seven Churches of Asia, which Churches we notice were created in the very region of the dispersed strangers (1 Peter i. 1). These can be only "the dispersed of Israel," the Ten Tribes, re-nationalised, as recorded in his second chapter, 9, 10. Paul himself was a Jew of Tarsus, a city of Cilicia, the very region in which these dispersed strangers were located.

There can be no doubt that a careful examination of the words of Peter lead us to the conclusion that "the nation born in a day" is none other than the Ten-Tribed people (1 Pet. ii. 9); "elect according to the foreknowledge of God, through sanctification of the Spirit;" thus the Spirit was conveyed to Israel of the Ten Tribes prior to its leaving Israel of the Two. An attentive reading of the epistles of Paul to his own countrymen in Asia Minor—viz., Galatians, Ephesians, and Colossians; and his work also in Phrygia and Galatia; and his call into Macedonia; all lead us to understand the way in which this people were prepared for this new birth. Some of the Churches were found blameless, and many promises were held out to them. We cannot agree with those who would have us believe that the descendants of these Churches were cast away from the grace of God.

Digitized by Google

Knowing that our God "has mercy upon thousands in them that love Him and keep His commandments," we, therefore, are strengthened in our belief that these Churches were composed of Abraham's seed; and that His Spirit, e'er passing away from Judah, came to Joseph; so that now, in this dispensation, the latter has possession of the birthright; with him is found the Shepherd, the Stone of Israel, and thus the British, or Anglo-Saxon people (being the descendants of these Churches, and of Abraham), the Spirit of God has not left us, but has remained with us, and will be with us for ever (Hag. ii. 5; Exod. xxix. 45).

A point of analogy between the circumstances of the birth of the Man-child in Isa. lxvi. and Rev. xii., may be seen on referring to the date of the apostle Peter's epistle, wherein he addresses the Lo-Ammi people as now a NATION. In our Bibles the date is A.D. 60, about TEN years before the final destruction of Jerusalem—that is, keeping in view the symbol used, that of a woman who TEN days before her time is suddenly relieved, without the ordinary process; represented in the figure by the destruction of Jerusalem. In Rev. xii., the woman suffers in pain, having tribulation TEN days (Rev. ii. 10); here, as we believe, the persecutions of the reign of Diocletian are clearly alluded to (A.D. 303—313), and spoken of concerning the Church of (myrrh and bitterness) Smyrna of the second apocalyptic period.

THE "LONDON QUARTERLY REVIEW" ON THE GREAT PYRAMID, AND PROFESSOR PIAZZI SMYTH'S REPLY.

FORWARDED BY J. THOMSON.

(Concluded from page 113.)

PART IV.

AT page 283 the reviewer states that the mean of all the best measures extant, though varying from 9,168 to 9,110 British inches, given by me for the Base-side length of Great Pyramid, as measured by other explorers, is 9,147 inches; and then he insinuates of me, "but my theory required 9,140, so I took it," most unconscientiously, of course. Now I had explained at length in my books that a simple arithmetical mean of these measures cannot be truthfully taken, because they are not of equal value and merit with each other, intrinsically; and that the most likely, though not certain, attribution of weights, would make the mean quantity 9,142 inches; but with large uncertainty hanging about it. And, in fact, it was not until the reactions of the better preserved interior of the Great Pyramid, on the now dilapidated exterior, came to be understood, several years after my first publication of those divergent quantities given above, that I had any confidence in, or assigned any high probability to, what the length of the Base-side of the ancient Great Pyramid might be. But when the measures of the King's Chamber, accurate to 6 places of figures, did give out, on the new hypothesis, just the same quantity which I had deduced so long before, as being the central result pointed to by all the known direct respectable measures of the exterior, of course I printed that most remarkable confirmation at full length in my last book—but all this the reviewer omits.

Also does he omit to inform his readers that the particular length so obtained and confirmed proves the Great Pyramid to have an absolute size, and a harmonious relation to both the magnitude of the earth and the times of its rotation round its own axis and revolution round the sun—in marvellously correct accordance with the latest developments of modern science—and form a result which cannot be even approached to, or pretended to be claimed, for any other Pyramid, monument, or building of any kind, all the world over.

Now the original measures of the King's Chamber, from which alone the finishing touch of highest accuracy was derived, had been published by me in my "Life and Work" several years before either I, or anyone else, had the smallest idea of their containing the elements of such results. But when the thought did at last arise in my mind of trying those measures; by applying to them "the sacred and scientific theory," behold, they gave out at once 365·242 as the length of a side of the Great Pyramid's Base, in terms of a cubit of 25 such inches, as measure the rotation diameter of the earth by the Pyramidal number of 500 millions, equal to 500,500,000 British inches of the present day. Admirably and most exactly confirming, therefore, the best conclusions previously deduced from all the best mens' best measures of the exterior of the grand monument.

Yet the "reviewer" (supposed to be a Wesleyan clergyman) has actually the effrontery to say, at his p. 309, this 365·242 is a theoretical measure "of an ideal pyramid which is the creation of the author's own fancy;" and again he declares (prompted by what, or whom?) "the original base (of the Great Pyramid) was laid out by Professor Smyth in imaginary inches and cubits to suit the number of days in a year."

So, too, I could go on through multitudes of similarly immoral cases, heaping up coals of fire against the day of judgment on the head of this most unscrupulous anonym; but is it worth while? I rather doubt it. As, however, you indicate serious fear, lest many of the innocent sheep of his too confiding flock may be misled by this dangerous London Quarterly reviewer, I will give you just two more examples.

At his p. 309 the reviewer sets forth a strong remark, sound in itself, as to certain mensurational quantities being mere necessary sequences of others in a given geometrical figure. But the case he applies it to is not an error of that kind; for the point alluded to by me was, that a certain voluntary mark had been inserted by the ancient builders at a particular height up the side of the Great Pyramid, where the measures—if taken in Pyramid sacred and scientific inches, and not in the measures of idolatrous Egypt — give forth the numbers belonging to, or accurately expressing, (as does, on another proportion, the general base of the whole monument,) certain cosmical and physical quantities, some of which have only been known to modern science during the present century. That most important primeval mark, then, is the very signal one, conspicuous now to the whole country round about, of the whole of a certain horizontal course of the constructive masonry of the Great Pyramid being made very much thicker than the rest; and that course turns out, further, to be the 35th from the Base upwards; and 35 is composed of 7×5, which are symbolical numbers in the Great Pyramid's sacred and scientific theory, but in no other. While again, in no other Egyptian Pyramid is the same proportion of its whole height—viz., $\frac{1}{7}$, either marked upon it in any known way, or known to contain 35 courses; or to have such an absolute size as to give off, in any known units of measure the physical numbers rendered as above by the Great Pyramid, and proved by modern science to be so accurately descriptive of the present size, shape, and human life-suiting qualities of that earth-globe, whereon it has pleased God to place man for a limited time of trial. But this, unique and intellectually glorious character, in his usual manner, the reviewer omits to notice.

Finally, on p. 298, this same reviewer quarrels with the Coffer, or Ark-box of the Great Pyramid, for being placed where the primeval architect did place it—viz., in the King's Chamber. The reviewer would rather have had it anywhere else than there.

Digitized by Google

because, as he quotes with mock pretended respect, "the King's Chamber typifies the final state of blessedness;" whereupon he asks, sneeringly, "shall we need the teachings of the Great Pyramid even in heaven itself?"

To which demand I beg to answer, that if the Great Pyramid be, as accumulating proofs appear to indicate it can be no less, a monument built in the beginning of human history by Divine inspiration, instruction, and help, and for prophetic purposes of testimony to Almighty God, in the latter days, we may be sure that it will not be ignored, or despised in heaven. But I would rather request you to turn to Rev. xi. 19, and read at the close of the seventh trumpet announcing the end of earthly, human rule, "that the temple of God was opened in heaven, and there was seen in His temple, the ark of His testament." Whatever the final and complete fulfilment of this prophecy may be, the only proximate illustration of it on earth now to be seen, is precisely the Great Pyramid and its Coffer, or Ark, standing in that very Chamber therein, which typifies, in the actual words adopted by the reviewer, "the final state of blessedness;" and I remain, dear Mr. Thomson, Yours ever very truly,

PIAZZI SMYTH.

JONAH A TYPE OF EPHRAIM-ISRAEL.

A BIBLE DISCOURSE.

BY JOHN T. GOTT.

(Concluded from page 112.)

PART VI.

WELL, now, here is a people, a mighty nation, with one of the smallest land forces in the world, whose possessions are far away, whose people look to the motherland for help in time of danger, for food in times of famine, for assistance in times of sickness. Here is a nation whose power is threatened at home, threatened in Africa, India, Asia, and Europe. Dangers are hovering around of so imminent a character, that the press —the voice of the people—is beginning to foresee that we shall be utterly unable to cope and sternly grapple with so many foes, in so many places, so far distant. We seem to be on the very verge of the time when the enemy shall rush in upon the Empire to destroy it, when they will rush in like a flood. But, being the representative nation of the Lost Ten Tribes, we have sure and faithful promises to abide in. We are commanded to "fear not." We are told that God will "deliver us."

Jeremiah thus prophecies of a day that is yet to come: "A noise shall come even to the ends of the earth, for the Lord hath a controversy with the nations, He will plead with all flesh. An evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and a great whirlwind shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth, and the slain of the Lord shall be at that day from one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth" (xxv. 32, 33).

The worm is at work. The burning sirocco is setting in. The signs of the times are ominous with dark, threatening clouds of trouble and danger. We are called upon by the voice of prophecy to watch those ominous signs, which, like a storm, will burst out in one place, and sweep round the whole earth. Just as Jonah fainted when his gourd was gone, when in helpless despair he wished to die; just as Jonah's extremity was God's opportunity, and his God brought him safety and deliverance, so do we think that Jonah's history teaches us that God will deliver Anglo-Israel in these latter days, because all the prophets bear testimony to the same fact.

The various phases of Jonah's character are somewhat extraordinary; but if carefully analysed they will be found not more so than Jacob's, whose name was changed into Israel; not more so than in the history of Ten-Tribed Israel while in the Holy Land; not more so, in its widest application, than in the modern history of British-Israel. We are as supplanting as was Jacob, as unscrupulous in our national career as he was in his private career, and equally as inconsistent as he was, and as Jonah was.

The history of Jonah terminates abruptly. Doubtless the Divine instruction he received in his booth, wore off the rugged flaws in his character; but what his after-life was, how long it lasted, and how it was spent, we know not. Doubtless if the ominous signs increase, the marvellous year 1881, spoken of by prophets, commentators, and astronomers, and strongly and pointedly indicated in the Great Pyramid, may bring about an abrupt termination to our national British history, as it is now written. The history of the future of this great people will be different when the restoration of the remnant of Israel and all the Jews takes place. The cord is snapped. The veil still hides the vision of the future; but beyond the veil we can hear the sweet notes of prophetic song, which promise happier times for this sin, sorrow-laden world, and a millennium of blessedness, happiness, peace and safety, such as was enjoyed in Eden of old.

Jonah was chosen to be a prophet of God. To his own people, Ten-Tribed Israel, he was faithful, and sternly denounced their idolatrous practices. Sent with a message of mercy to the Ninevites, for the instruction of his own kindred, he is unwilling and wilfully disobedient. In his folly, for he could not have been in his right mind, he sought to do an impossible thing—viz., to flee from the presence of God. The wind and the sea, and the ship that he trusted in, were all too weak to avert his punishment. His entombment brought about a penitent spirit, speedily followed by a happy deliverance. A time for quiet meditation followed, and then Jonah went forth to Nineveh, one of the strongest, one of the most powerful, successful missionary preachers the world had ever seen. The Ninevites were convinced. They repented, from the king on the throne to the very beasts in the field. All wore sackcloth and ashes. Jonah's work is done. He is discontented, dissatisfied with the result. The old murmuring, rebellious spirit is rising again; but his God is merciful. The prophet builds a booth, but God gives the gourd of protection, which delights Jonah's heart so much. This inconsistent chosen prophet is but human in his feelings and aspirations, and has much to learn. In order to teach him what the Divine will is, Jonah's gourd is taken away. Then follows hopeless despair. Jonah's gourd is gone; but Jonah's God is still faithful and merciful.

Now this is just a bird's-eye view of the history of Ten-Tribed Israel, exemplified in our own national career. The mass of all the Tribes of Israel were destined to be the messengers of mercy, Gospel messengers to the whole world. But they became rank idolators, and flatly refused to do the work for which they had been specially raised up. Prophets like Elijah were unable to bring Ten-Tribed Israel to the worship of the true God; and the prophet gave up in despair, and fled for his life, deeming himself to be the only one left. But the still small voice came to him in the cave, saying, "Yet have I left seven thousand in Israel that have not bowed the knee to Baal." That is the nucleus of the remnant of Israel. The Ten Tribes were cast out and buried in the earth. All nations have sought them, but none have found them. The people have literally found and identified themselves. Like one who has become demented, and has fancied for a time that he was some great personage, when the fit of madness has passed away, he comes to his right mind, knows and understands his own personal identity, relationship and character. So of Ten-Tribed Israel. Like the prodigal son, he must come to his "right mind," and return to his father and to fatherland. So has it been with British-Israel. They have found themselves. Their Identity has sprung up in their own midst. They are strangers here, have wandered from the far East, have become Gospel messengers to the whole world, are filling up the desolate heritages thereof; and to-day, as a people and a nation, are standing on one side, like Jonah of old, thoroughly dissatisfied and discontented with their missionary work. And the still small voice came to them as it did to Jonah, "Doest thou well to be angry?"

Digitized by Google

Jonah, taught by Jehovah's own plans, learned a lesson in the booth he had made that was life-lasting. We are about to learn somewhat of God's dealings with us, as a nation, a lesson that will doubtless give us a full realisation of Jehovah, as the God of Israel, the God of our forefathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, demonstrated by the deliverance He will work for us when our Empire is threatened on all sides, when our palma-christi is withered, and when we begin to fear, and finally faint, as Jonah did. Then the Holy One of Israel has promised that He will come in and save His people Israel.

Many in the past have prophesied the ruin of the Empire. It never was nearer than it seems to be now. We are, therefore, called upon with unflagging zeal to watch the signs of the times, and to mark well the literal fulfilment of prophecy, as viewed in the light of our Identity as a nation with the Lost House of Israel.

December, 1880.

THE IRISH POLICE AND ENGLISH CONSTABLE GIVE TRUE TESTIMONY TO OUR IDENTITY.

By the Rev. Denis Hanan, M.A.

The Nineteenth Century review for February, 1881, contains an article on "The Irish Police." It contrasts the duties which have to be performed by the Irish "policeman" with those which are required of the English "constable," and to make the contrast more marked it shows the modern establishment of the Irish force, and the very early origin of the English office.

The quotation which I make directs attention to one more of those many identifications which lie imbedded in our national life. It is as follows:—

"The origin of the English constable dates back probably five hundred years before the Norman Conquest. 'Constable' is a compound name of comparatively modern date; but the 'borseholder, or borough elder,' has preserved his title unchanged from the early Saxon times; the Saxon word borge, borrow, or borhoe signifying a pledge, and ealder the chief or head man of the pledges. This Teutonic police system of guild, or tithing, is so well known that it requires but a passing mention. The male inhabitants were joined in sections of ten men, who became mutually security for the good conduct of each other. The section, or 'tithing,' elected one of their number to answer for them, and probably invested him with a certain amount of authority over them in arranging the proportion to be paid by each of the amercements that might be imposed upon the tithing for murder or robbery committed by one of their number. This man so elected was called the borrow-elder; or, in other words, the chief of the pledge. Each group of ten tithings then became a hundred, which was in a lesser degree responsible, in so far that a fine too large to be paid by a tithing was chargeable to the hundred. Any man not enrolled as a member of a tithing became an outlaw, and for his murder no fine could be exacted by his relatives. This system of peace-pledge is admirably traced by Pike in his 'History of Crime in England.'

"The English parish constable thus represents the principle of minute local Government, carried down from days long anterior to the Norman Conquest. The police system of Ireland has not so grown with the growth of the people."

The date brings us back to the period when, according to Greene, "English history begins"—viz., the period of the Saxon Conquest—and as the English system of to-day would connect the people with the Saxon emigrants, even if direct historical records were wanting, so the Saxon system of A.D. 500 points so plainly to the source from whence they received it, that the burden of proof lies with those who deny their Israelitish origin.

One other quotation only need be given. Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, said unto him, "Thou shalt provide out of all the people able men," &c. "So Moses hearkened to the voice of his father-in-law," "and Moses chose able men out of all-Israel, and made them heads over the people, rulers of thousands, rulers of hundreds, rulers of fifties, and rulers of tens" (Exod. xviii.).

That this Anglo-Saxon and Israelitish system was peculiar to the Tribes who introduced it into England, is blindly witnessed to by the statement that "the police system of Ireland has not so grown with the growth of the people;" and by the further statement that "there is as much difference between the police needs of one county and another in the North and South of Ireland, as between the police necessities of Kerry and Norfolk."

February 19, 1881.

THE BRITISH NATION.

We take the following from a paper called the Bible Standard, which gives a very fair statement of what Israel's Empire is, and the character of the nation which has built it up. The writer of the article said:—

To no other modern race than ours has such honour been granted as this—to be the pioneers of colonisation and civilisation. France is great, but barren beyond her immediate limits, for "Algeria languishes; whilst her settlements in Lower Canada and Louisiana are being lost in the Anglo-American vortex. Cayenne is a prison; and Cochin China and New Caledonia are mere notes of impotence alongside India and Australia." Germany is a powerful factor on the Continent of Europe, but her thousands of migrating Germans do not form new colonies, but, landing on the shores of America, are lost in the English element. Scandinavia, Spain, and Italy, whilst possessing at home space and means for great development, affect not the world's flowing tide of new life. Russia, whilst all-powerful in the North, is but a geographical expression beyond the bounds of ice and snow. Amongst Asiatics, China also sends its teeming life abroad, but with this peculiarity, that it is not for purposes of settlement, to found new homes, but for mere gain, to be spent amidst the crowded masses of the old home. Thus, Britain alone appears as the modern pioneer of colonising life. She has founded a mighty nation in the United States of America; is forming a second in the Dominion of Canada; has created a third in Australasia; is bringing forth a fourth in Southern Africa; has provided a governing class for India; and is making her influence felt in every trading post the wide world o'er.

Since, then, the Anglo-Saxon tongue is the tongue of colonisation and civilisation, what a wide empire it opens up for the work in which we are engaged!

Our readers will agree with us that the above is a very remarkable statement of our case; and is a fair specimen of blind testimony in proof of our Identity. The British are, the author states, the "pioneers" of colonisation and civilisation—thus "the head and not the tail" in those two departments of national advancement (Deut. xxviii. 13). The English element further absorbs Germans who emigrate to Anglo-Saxon settlements in America and elsewhere. This peculiarity we noticed in our leading article in Banner, Vol. ii. No. 91, page 309, as tied up to Israel, the stronger race, which absorbs and assimilates, but is not itself absorbed by any (Amos ix. 9).

Again, our observant journalist tells us that the world's "new life" is not affected by Spain, Italy, Scandinavia, or Russia, for these are not roving and colonising races. The Anglo-Saxons only are—for they are the wanderers (Hosea ix. 17); and they only occupy the desolate heritages, and found empires there (Isa. xlix. 8). They, therefore, are Lost Israel. As to the Chinese and Asian race, the paper we quote tells us truly these wander and emigrate, but it is merely to acquire wealth, to serve other races, and to return home to spend their gains, but never to colonise new lands—never to found empires and nations beyond sea. That is Israel's function; and such failures prove the Gentile origin of the Chinese and Asiatics. There is one last touch which the artist gives us which settles the question, and proves our Hebrew origin. The writer records the fact that Britain is the mother of nations, for she has founded one in the United States (Manasseh), another in the Canadian Dominion, a third in Australasia (the land of Sinim, or bushes), a fourth in South Africa. A nation and a company of at least four nations is thus revealed. And when, and where, we ask, has such a federation of States been ever seen before? also to whom is that unique promise made of development into "a nation and a company of nations," except to Israel of the Ten Tribes?

Digitized by Google

The Anglo-Saxon tongue, or speech, is further noticed to be "the speech of civilisation and colonisation." It is ubiquitous; and as the race must necessarily follow the language, the prophecy appears likely sooner to be fulfilled than we at first believed. "The kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, is given to the people of the saints of the Most High," and those people are British-Israel. What their duties are in respect to the evangelisation of the world, the author of the sentiments we have quoted further tells, in these words:—

> Christian brethren, this message we must send forth by our willing and liberal gifts, lest He, whom we profess to love and serve, set us aside as unfaithful stewards. With the Master almost on the threshold of His near return, let there be no holding back of what we can, and, therefore, should give and do.

Here is another premonition of the near advent of our great King and Master, of which we hear so much in these days. The cry is already raised, "The Bridegroom cometh." We have to wake up, see to our lamps and oil therein, preparing for the momentary return and appearing in the air of our glorious Redeemer—whom, not having seen, we love (1 Peter i. 8). Being Israel, the advice applies most clearly to our nation, for the Israel of God—the British nation—is bound for Christ's sake to take the Gospel at once to the most degraded of their fellow-creatures throughout the earth; and, with God's Word before us, it is not safe to do less than our bounden duty as God desires us to perform it.

Reader, let us praise our God for making our likeness to Israel of old so exact, that even the secular writers of the day are forced to paint us as if Israel were the object of the picture.

THE GREAT PYRAMID.

By Sydney Hall, C.E.

PART I.

The Top Corner-stone and Ark of the Covenant.

The subject of the possible size and character of the missing top Corner-stone of the Great Pyramid, can hardly fail to be one of much interest to all who accept the structure as having been built by inspiration, and declared to be for a sign and witness unto the Lord of hosts in these latter days. This interest is much enhanced by the special allusion made to it in the Psalms of David (cxviii. 22); but more particularly by the reference which the Lord Jesus made to it, and His application of it to Himself (in Matt. xxi. 42; Mark xii. 10; Luke xx. 17) as recorded in the three first Gospels, and in the repetition of the same truth by St. Peter, in his statement to the council, as recorded in Acts iv. 11, 12. St. Paul, in the Epistle to the Ephesians (ii. 20), and St. Peter in his 1st general Epistle (ii. 6) distinctly refer to a building having a top corner-stone, the rejection of which by the builders during the construction of the edifice, was a clear and distinct symbol of the rejection of Him who was the Builder of the spiritual edifice of the Church, which was His body.

Hitherto all attempts to give a substantial character to this top Corner-stone have been fruitless; partly, perhaps, from mistaken views respecting it, but principally from failing to appreciate the information which has lain ready at hand. It can be owing to no "fortuitous concurrence of adventitious circumstances" that we are indebted to two heathen writers for the information thus afforded. The Great Pyramid, in its mystery and sublimity, has been from the remotest ages a riddle, for which no solution appeared possible; but what could have induced the Greek historian, Diodorus Siculus, sixty years before Christ, to give the dimensions of the little platform on the summit of the Pyramid; or Pliny, the elegant Roman letter-writer, seventy years after Christ to again state the dimensions of the same platform as it existed in his day.

The marvel is as to what became of this stone, which for upwards of 2,500 years has not been visible. Professor Piazzi Smyth, in his first edition of "Our Inheritance," has hazarded a suggestion that it may have been removed by the Israelites at the Exodus. Moses could hardly have been unaware of its typical importance, and it is quite possible that it may remain in some place of concealment—even in Egypt—ready to be brought forth at the appointed time, when the witness will speak in no doubtful language.

If in this top Corner-stone we were to look for any representation of the Coffer, it could only be, I imagine, by its being some definite multiple thereof, having other Pyramid commensurabilities; but with the exception of 6 and 10 Coffer-capacities there is no multiple between 3 and 15, which appears to have any such, and in neither of these is there sufficient character or consistency to justify their adoption. It is stated that the Pyramid Arabs of the present day find no difficulty in ascending to the summit of the second Pyramid, notwithstanding the obstacle opposed to such ascent by the overhanging masonry, and the casing stones now in situ. There could, therefore, have been little difficulty in reaching that of the Great Pyramid at a time when, with the exception of its topmost stone, it was in a perfect state. It would appear, therefore, that we may be justified in assuming that both Diodorus Siculus and Pliny had good grounds for stating the platform at the summit of the Great Pyramid to have been of the dimensions assigned to it by them; and as an interval of 130 years occurred between the eras of these writers the difference in the dimensions of the sides, as given by them, would be equivalent to the thickness of a course of stones removed below the top Corner-stone during that interval. Professor P. Smyth, at page 331, vol. ii., "Life and Work," extracting from Mrs. Poole's "Englishwoman in Egypt," gives the length of side of the platform according to Diodorus Siculus as 108 inches, and 170 inches according to Pliny; and although the Pyramid commensurabilities arising out of the juxtaposition of these two numbers are very curious and confirmatory of each other, yet as some doubt hangs over the latter dimension I do not propose to deal with it, tempting though it looks. There is no particular doubt arising out of the former dimension of 108 inches. The only possible question is as to what cubit Diodorus Siculus makes use of. But he was a Greek writing to Greeks, and would no doubt employ the measure best recognised among his countrymen; and on referring to the author himself, when we find that he gives his other dimensions in Greek measures, as Plethra and Stadia, there can be no manner of doubt, that when he states that the "sides of the Pyramid converge towards the top-end in a peak of six cubits in extent," he refers to the ordinary Greek cubit, which we find, from Sir Isaac Newton's dissertation on cubits, to have been a foot and a-half long. We are not, however, to suppose that this measure was taken with mathematical accuracy; but to have been rather of the character assigned by Professor Piazzi

Digitized by Google

Smyth to those of Colonel H. Vyse—good honest measures to the nearest division on the scale.

We consider, therefore, that we have a good solid basis of 108 inches to work upon. On examining this quantity in the light of possible Pyramid commensurabilities we find at once that an area of 11626· inches has its square root 107·8440, and this is in every way a most satisfactory result; in an inquiry into the structural relations of a building in which lineal, superficial and square numbers, with their multiples, decimal parts, and reciprocals are found to be interchangeable in every variety of combination.

The height of the top Corner-stone, with a side of 107·8440, in the proportion of 1·570796 to 1, is 68·6429. The diagonal of the base of same is 152·48. The side of square of equal area, or

$$\sqrt[2]{107{\cdot}8440 \times 68{\cdot}6429} = \sqrt[2]{3700{\cdot}6770} = 60{\cdot}8326$$

In 152·48 we have exactly the total height of the Ante-Chamber to the bottom of the little hollows, and in 60·8326, exactly the mean distance of the face of the Great Step to the South Wall of Grand Gallery. So that we may say that the first dimension which is found on the level approach to the King's Chamber bears the same relation to the assumed top Corner-stone, that the most important dimension in the King's Chamber, when multiplied by 10, does to the whole Pyramid. For

$$\sqrt[2]{\frac{107{\cdot}8440^2}{\pi}} = 60{\cdot}8326 \text{ and}$$

$$\sqrt[2]{\frac{9131{\cdot}056^2}{\pi}} = 5151{\cdot}6461$$

(To be continued.)

ISRAEL'S TRIBULATION SHORTENED.

By J. L.

I HAVE read the short article by J. R. Smith in this week's BANNER, No. 218, on "The Grand Gallery Step," with interest. May I venture to trouble you with a few remarks thereon? It seems to me Mr. Smith has missed the truth somewhat; because, like all previous writers, he fails to distinguish clearly the two tribulations. The "great tribulation" spoken of in Matt. xxiv. 21, commenced at the destruction of Jerusalem. This has to do with Israel only; and we see clearly it is this one that is shortened for the "elect's sake." It seems also clear that it ends before the Gentile troubles begin, and before the elect are gathered (Matt. xxiv. 29—31; Mark xiii. 24—27). It therefore follows that if the low passage next to the Grand Gallery symbolises the troubles about to come upon the Gentile world, that this last is another tribulation altogether, and is not the one that is "shortened" for the "elect's sake;" the latter having ended with the Grand Gallery.

If we add to 622 A.D., the date of the Hegira, 1260 (Daniel's time, times, and a half), it brings us to 1882, when the "times of the Gentiles" are fulfilled; the "great tribulation" ends; Israel is restored to God's favour, and the Gentile troubles commence. Now, if this be the case, we must look for the shortening, not in the low passage, but in the Grand Gallery itself. And I think this is exactly where we find it. It seems to me, by measuring through the Step, we reach the end of the Grand Gallery in 1882 (the end of Daniel's 1260 years); whereas, by measuring up the front and along the top of the Step, we do not reach the end till 1910. Here, then, we have the "shortening," and there is no necessity to "adopt the inch to a month principle, in lieu of the inch to a year, when dealing with the Ante-Chamber Passage length." It is the application of the "shortening" to the Gentile troubles that causes such confusion.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—I enclose an extract from Dean Milman's "History of the Jews," which I came across this afternoon. It struck me as being particularly applicable to the Lost Ten Tribes. It seems to show so well how they were lost, that I at once decided to send it to you. Perhaps the quotation has previously appeared in the BANNER, but if it has, I think you might do well to re-publish it, for it seems almost as if it were written on purpose to refute Dr. Bonar. All will agree that Dean Milman is as good an authority as Dr. Bonar. I have been taking in the BANNER for the last twelve months, and enjoy reading it very much. The English mail generally arrives toward the end of the week; and I look upon the BANNER as a special treat for Sunday; I do wish you could increase the size—I always feel so disappointed when I have come to the end.

The Identity has not made the progress here which I should have wished. I believe, however, that there are a great number of persons who privately believe in it. A short time ago I read a paper on the "Great Pyramid" at a meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association. It was somewhat severely criticised; and I stood quite alone, but since then I lent Smyth's work to one of my greatest opponents, and the other evening he whispered to me, "It bears conviction stamped on every page."

Being in the book trade, I have done my best to place the literature within reach of the public, but I cannot say that I have been able to circulate any quantity. Mr. Slatter (with whom, I believe, you occasionally correspond), I think, does a good work by privately circulating copies of the BANNER and other works on the Identity; it was from his recommendation that I became a subscriber to the BANNER.

We are having a great deal of trouble in South Africa. It is a remarkable fact, whilst there have been troubles all around us—in Zululand, Transvaal, Pondoland, and other portions of South Africa, that war has not been brought into Natal—we have been exempt for the last 15 or 20 years at least (the little rebellion in '73 excepted). I hope, however, that these troubles are but the harbingers of a bright day soon to dawn, when peace will reign supreme in this much distracted land. You may make any use you wish of this hasty letter.

And believe me, yours very truly,

F. PEARSE.

Maritzburg, Natal, January 23, 1881.

P.S.—We sadly want a standard work on the Identity. I mean a work something after the style of "Our Inheritance"—a work which will embrace all branches of the subject, and argue them out fully. At present, one has to read a dozen or more pamphlets in order to get even a fair knowledge of the standard arguments. This is also a difficulty with those in the trade, and is likely to deter all who are not specially interested in the subject from keeping the literature. Could you not write a book? it would be a boon.

THE following is the extract from Dean Milman's "History of the Jews" (Murray's Reprint), page 144, book viii.:—

"Thus closes the first period of the Jewish history; and, in the ordinary course of human events, we might expect the national existence of the Israelitish race. The common occupancy of their native soil seems, in general, the only tie that permanently unites the various families and Tribes, which constitute a nation. As long as that bond endures, a people may be sunk to the lowest state of degradation; they may be reduced to a slave-caste under the oppression of foreign invaders; yet favourable circumstances may again develop the latent germ of a free and united nation; they may rise again to power and greatness, as well as to independence. But when that bond is severed nationality usually becomes extinct. A people transported from their native country, if scattered in small numbers, gradually melt away, and are absorbed in the surrounding tribes; if settled in large masses, remote from each other, they grow up into distinct commonwealths; but in a generation or two the principle of separation, which is perpetually at work, effectually obliterates all community of interest or feeling. If a traditionary remembrance of their common origin survives, it is accompanied by none of the attachment of kindred; there is no family pride or affection, there is no blood between the scattered descendants of common ancestors. For time gradually loosens all other ties; habits of life change; laws are modified by the circumstances of the state and people; religion, at least in all polytheistic nations, is not exempt from the influence of the great innovator. The separate communities have outgrown the common objects of national pride, the memorable events of their history during the time that they dwelt together, their common traditions, the fame of their heroes, the songs of their poets are superseded by more recent names and occurrences; each has his new stock of reminiscences, in which their former kindred cannot participate."

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let three lines	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	13	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

SURREY ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.
A LECTURE will be given at the
VICTORIA BATHS, HIGH STREET, PECKHAM,
On Tuesday, March 29th, by
D. A. ONSLOW, ESQ., J.P.
Subject—
"The Anglo-Saxons God's Chosen People Israel."
To commence at 8 o'clock.

Just published, second thousand, price 6d., post free 7d.
THE GREAT PYRAMID. A Lecture by Rev. SAMUEL MINTON, M.A.
"A witness to the Lord of Hosts in the land of Egypt."
"Most able and instructive, and at the same time deeply interesting—it exhausts the subject."—Church Review.
London: Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster-row, E.C.

Price 4d., by post 4½d. Special terms for a quantity.
THE ISRAEL OF GOD.
A SERVICE OF SONG
Upon the Career and Destiny of God's Ancient People Israel. WORDS AND MUSIC.
BY C. W. E.
Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Price 2d., post free 2½d.
MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES.
An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? An Inquiry establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 4d.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.
THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.
By REV. JOSEPH WILD D.D.
With a Portrait of the Author.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST OR SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS AND TEACHINGS OF THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams. Price 4d., post free 5d.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters."

Price 2d., post free 3d.
THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

PHILO-ISRAEL'S BOOK FOR CHILDREN.
THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth, gilt, 1s. Post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Third Edition.

A RESUME OF THE SCRIPTURAL ARGUMENT. Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100.

NEW PAMPHLET ON THE IDENTITY OF THE LOST TEN TRIBES
FOR UNIVERSAL CIRCULATION.
The Best Pamphlet to place in the hands of a person unacquainted with the subject.

Price 6d., by post 7d. 64 Demy 8vo. pages, in wrapper. One dozen copies sent free for a post office order for 6s.

FIFTY REASONS
WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES
OF THE LOST TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL.
BY REV. W. H. POOLE, D.D.

"There is a principle which is a bar against all information, which is proof against all argument, and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance. This principle is, contempt prior to examination."—Dr. Paley.

A greater than Paley has said:—"He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is a folly and a shame unto him."—Prov. xviii.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET.
AND ALL BOOKSELLERS.

Now Ready, in handsome cloth, gilt, with Coloured Map, and several Illustrations, price 3s. 6d., by post 3s. 10d.
THE
GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.
BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,
High-Class Tailor,
47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.
MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

FURTHER SCRIPTURAL PROOFS.
A Sequel to SUMMARY OF ANGLO-ISRAELITE TEACHING.
Being a Paper read before the Cheltenham Anglo-Israel Association,
BY SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.
Price 2d.; post free 2½d.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Just published, price 1s., post free 1s. 1d.
THE GREAT PYRAMID, IN,
BUT NOT OF, EGYPT:
ITS CLAIMS TO BE FOR A SIGN AND FOR A WITNESS UNTO THE LORD OF HOSTS IN THE LAND OF EGYPT,
As announced in the Scriptures of His Holy Prophet Isaiah, B.C. 714.
BY H. W. BADGER,
Private in H. M. 40th Regiment, now serving in India.
INTRODUCED BY MRS. PIAZZI SMYTH,
London:
ROBERT BANKS, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.

New ready, bound in cloth, 2s. 3d., cloth gilt, 2s. 9d. post free 3d. extra.
SERMON I.,
Containing Seven Parts of Extracts from the
"FLYING ROLL,"
FOR THE
"INGATHERING" OF ISRAEL.
May be had of Joseph Head, John Rogers, George Moore, Edward Rogers, 5 Trafalgar-st., New Brompton, Kent: Joshua Rogers, 151, Great Titchfield-st., London, W.: and, by ordering, of any bookseller. May be had also in parts, 4d each: post free 4½d.

"Who are Israelites, to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises."

Price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome, cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.
THE LOST TEN TRIBES
AND
1882.
BY THE
REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD
Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

PHILO-ISRAEL (in the BANNER) says:—"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome Identity volume. It contains twenty discourses of the well-known American divine, Dr. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, N.Y. We are glad to find from these discourses that Dr. Wild is quite one with us on this side the water with most, though not all the views we entertain on our great and glorious subject.... We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and 'American' point of view, which is sure to interest, sure to be instructive, and may lead the thoughtless and inquiring to pursue the investigation till possibly conviction may be the result.'

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.
IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA THE ROYAL SEED TO KING DAVID'S THRONE, AND ARE NOT HER SUBJECTS, THE BRITISH PEOPLE, THE TEN LOST TRIBES?
BY WILLIAM HOPTON, of Sutton Heath.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

SEE NEW IDENTITY QUARTERLY MAGAZINE. Editor, Rev. R. DOUGLAS, M.A., Vicar of St. Stephen, Sheffield. Articles by Piazzi Smyth, Col. Gawler, &c. Price 6d.; post free, annually, 2s. 3d. James Nisbet & Co., London.

Just published, price One Shilling, post free.
PROMISES, PROPHECIES, and DECLARATIONS relating to GOD'S CHOSEN PEOPLE ISRAEL.
London: F. Norgate, 7, King-street, Covent-garden.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW.
WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 222. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MARCH 30, 1881. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

PAGE
Israel's Empire 125
The Great Pyramid. By Sydney Hall, C.E. Part II. 126
The Rev. Canon Falconer on the Signs of "The End of the Age" 127
The "Monthly Comments" on the Word of God 127
A Word In Edgewise. By East Anglian. Part I. 128
What Seed? By L. P. 129
Correspondence—The Anglo-Israel Conference at Manchester—The Coming Census—Germany and the Jews—The Rev. B. Wrey Saville's Inaccuracy of Quotation—Letters from J. M. Grant, M.D., George Bayly 130

ISRAEL'S EMPIRE.

UNDER the title of "Her Dominions" the Globe newspaper, of November 16, 1880, has published an admirable résumé of Israel's Empire, showing in a nutshell (as we have tried to do more at large in our papers on "The Geography of the Gates") how her Majesty's dominions have grown, what was the origin of each of its component parts, and the result of the acquisition. It strikes us that the Globe's article furnishes us with a capital epitome of our collected papers on the "Geography of the Gates," and if the reader, perusing the Globe's article, desires for more information, it can be had readily in the volume in question, regarding every quarter of the earth where "her dominions" exist. We mean to reproduce the Globe's article entire, as every letter, every sentence, supports our Identity, and speaks of a world-wide, noble, latter-day empire, which only can be Israel's. That dominion, it was promised in God's Word, should be in extent "under the whole heaven" (Dan. vii. 27), and the accomplishment finds "her dominions" in the four quarters of the earth. The promise to Israel was that Abraham's seed should hold the Gates (Gen. xxii. 17), and the fulfilment tells us that "her dominions" had their origin in "the Gates" as we hold them now. The promise to Israel was that the "desolate heritages" should be her Colonial Empire (Isa. lxix. 8), and the facts of our day tell us that "her dominions" are splendid nations, growing up in their giant strength in America, Australia, New Zealand, Tasmania, the Cape of Good Hope, the Fiji Islands, in literally the four corners and ends of the earth where desolation once existed. Seeing this correspondence between God's promises to Israel and the fulfilments in the British Empire to-day, knowing that God's sworn promises to Abraham's seed were without any conditions of abeyance, the entail being to his seed for ever (Luke i. 55), we cannot understand how a vigorous intellect like the Rev. Dr. Potter's, can see the glories of "England's" past, present, and future with her place in the prophetic programme, and yet talk of her being a "substituted Israel." Where does he find mention in God's Word of substituted Israelism? It is a fancy of his own brain. There is not a hint of it in God's Word, where His promises are yea, yea; but not yea and nay. For such an idea as Dr. Potter entertains there is not a scintilla of evidence, not a shadow of a shade of proof of any sort or kind. The idea being discredited as opposed to the letter and spirit of the Holy Scriptures, and what is known besides of the faithfulness of Jehovah, we come to the conclusion, that a nation which has all Israel's promises, now that ten-twelfths of the Hebrew nation are lost, must be "Lost Israel," since Judah-Israel, who are not lost, but known to all, have not in enjoyment even one of the blessings God promised to the seed of Abraham. We commend now the article written by the editor of the Globe to our readers' attention, knowing they will derive from its perusal pleasure and profit. It is called—

"HER DOMINIONS."

Of those who daily, "out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation," offer prayer for "the safety, honour, and welfare of our Sovereign and her dominions," it would be curious to speculate how many of them are acquainted with the extent and condition of the dominions in which they are concerned, or have any knowledge of the mode by which they were severally acquired. Everybody of average education is aware that the possessions of the English Crown are to be found in every region of the earth, that their area is close upon ten million square miles, and that their population is close upon three hundred million souls. But at what times and by what means it has come to pass that the people of a small island on the European coast have built up for themselves an empire unparalleled for its dimensions, is known only imperfectly even by those who should know well.

At the present time, when some would apparently have their country renounce the providential functions she has hitherto exercised as a civilising agent, it is well to be reminded that Englishmen have in no period of their history shrunk from the perils and obligations involved in the process of adding to her dominions, and that the growth of her colonies and dependencies has not been due to chance. The policy disparaged and depreciated as "Imperial," has ever been the traditional policy of England, even when it had to be maintained in the teeth of danger. There is nothing new in it. When our interests were centred in the conflicts waged in Spain, England occupied Gibraltar; when our interests were centred in the conflict waged in Italy, England occupied Malta; when, the other day, there was a prospect of our interests being centred in Egypt or Asia Minor, England occupied Cyprus.

"Her dominions" have been acquired in a variety of ways—by colonisation, by conquest, by treaty. With the exception of the islands off the coast of France, which have belonged to the Crown since the Conquest, Newfoundland is our oldest possession. Discovered in 1497, by Sebastian Cabot, it was formally taken over by Sir Humphrey Gilbert, in 1583. This was the beginning of our empire beyond the seas. No sooner had Columbus made his great discovery than the Western nations of Europe manifested an eager desire to benefit themselves by it. The inheritance of the New World was the contention. At first the Spanish and Portuguese seemed masters of the position. Then the French and Dutch became formidable rivals. But in the end victory lay at every contested point with the English. The occupation of Newfoundland was the prelude to their acquisition of the North American continent from near the Tropic of Cancer to the Pole. In the same way the occupation of Barbadoes, in 1605, two years after the death of Elizabeth, was the prelude to their acquisition of the West India Islands. Although the victory, often doubtful, was complete, the struggle was always severe.

Digitized by Google

In the Old World the same rivalry existed, and with the same result. Five years after the passage to India was discovered, in 1497, by Vasco de Gama, the Portuguese made a footing at Cochin. This was the first European settlement. A century later the Dutch arrived. A Dutch captain in the Portuguese service, Cornelius Houtman, taken prisoner by the Moors, applied to the Portuguese authorities for his ransom. This they refused. Thereupon Houtman appealed to some Amsterdam merchants. In return for his ransom he would show them the way to India. This was a bad day for the Portuguese. Houtman was to them what Count Julian was to Roderic, the last of the Goths. Companies—consolidated in 1602 into the Dutch East India Company—were formed, and by allying themselves with the natives, began to monopolise the trade of the East. They acquired settlements on the Coromandel coast. They drove the Portuguese from Malacca, in 1640, and from Colombo, in 1658. Cochin, Calicut, Cananore, and other marts on the Malabar coast, were taken by them in succession. It seemed as if the contest for supremacy in the East had been left to these two nations. But the English soon followed in the steps of the Dutch. Drake was the first Englishman to sail to the Indian Archipelago. This was in 1579-80. In December 1599, a charter was granted to an English East India Company. Thus, as the Portuguese were slowly succumbing before them, the Dutch found new rivals in the English. In 1664, again, a French East India Company was formed, which settled at Pondicherry. The story of the struggle between the four rival nations and its result need not be here recited. In 1641 the English possessed only Fort St. George, at Madras. To-day 240,000,000 of Asiatics acknowledge the Queen of England Empress of India, while the French and Portuguese occupy only insignificant spots on the fringe of this great dominion. And the English occupation is not confined to the Indian Peninsula. Ceylon, the ancient Taprobane, invaded by the Portuguese in 1505, and by the Dutch in 1603, was seized by the British in 1795, to whom it was formally ceded, in 1802, by the Treaty of Amiens. Again, in December, 1837, a British ship, wrecked on the Arabian coast near the entrance to the Red Sea, was plundered by the natives. The Sultan refused compensation. A naval and military force was accordingly despatched to the place, and Aden became a British port. In the same year Captain Elliott took, in the name of the Queen, the island of Hong Kong, off the coast of China, so that England has two outposts to her Asiatic dominions, one in the extreme West and the other in the extreme East.

In Africa the same process is observable. The history of the Cape of Good Hope begins in 1650, when Van Riebeck, a ship's surgeon, who had pointed out the strategic importance of the place in support of the Dutch commerce to India, was entrusted with the formation of a colony, in which one square league of land would be allotted to every emigrant. This was the origin of what in time may become the English dominion of Africa. At the time of the first French Revolution the official predominance of Cape Town became odious, and two of the three other provinces declaring themselves independent, proclaimed a Republic at Swellendam. As Cape Town had now risen to be an important naval station the action of the Boers was resented by the English, who accordingly took possession of the whole colony in the name of the Prince of Orange, who had been expelled from Holland. At the Peace of Amiens it was restored to the Dutch; but on the renewal of the war, the English, in January, 1806, again seized it to retain it.

"The history of the acquisition of 'her dominions,' by settlement, is generally known. The first colonisation on the mainland of the New World was effected at what is now known as Jamestown, founded by Lord Delaware. This was in 1607. The French in the following year settled at Quebec, on the St. Lawrence river. For a long time it was doubtful which of the two conquering races would prevail. There was a New France, as there was a New England, and the question at the beginning of the seventeenth century was, Which would predominate? In colonisation, as in arms, the English proved themselves superior, and when New England successfully revolted and so divided the race into two sections, Old England recuperated herself by taking New France. Then there was a newer world to be peopled in the Southern seas, and England was equal to that work also. In 1787 New South Wales was settled, in 1803, Van Diemen's Land; in 1834, South Australia; in 1840, New Zealand; and so late as 1850, Victoria. Thus, in our own day, new Englands have been added to 'her dominions,' which promise in the future to rival in prosperity 'the MOTHER of EMPIRES' herself. With these facts before him, who can say that an Imperial Policy, now sometimes discredited, and in abeyance, is new? It began when Edgar made seven Englands into one, and there is every sign it will hereafter re-assert itself, with greater vigour than ever."

THE GREAT PYRAMID.

By Sydney Hall, C.E.

(Concluded from page 123.)

PART II.

The Top Corner-stone and Ark of the Covenant.

We failed to find any satisfactory commensurability between the Coffer and the top Corner-stone. We think, however, that a very conclusive one can be established between that stone and the Ark of the Covenant; and when we bear in mind What the latter was, and Who the former symbolised, we are led irresistibly to the conclusion that this connection existed. If we take the cubical dimensions of the Ark of the Covenant and multiply the same by 3, we have $87890{\cdot}625 \times 3 = 263671{\cdot}875$.

Throwing this into the form of a Pyramid, we obtain 107·50685 for base, and 68·441 for height, quantities not very widely different from those already found for the top Corner-stone.

The top Corner-stone $107{\cdot}8440 \times 68{\cdot}6429 = 266013{\cdot}4526$.

3

Then $266013{\cdot}4526 - 263671{\cdot}875 = 2341{\cdot}577$, which divided by 3, gives 780·528.

We have, therefore, a difference between the top Corner-stone and three bulks of the Ark of the Covenant representing a quantity of 780·528 cubic inches in one Ark bulk.

In dealing with the cubic dimensions of the Ark of the Covenant, we have taken only the lineal dimensions as recorded in the Scriptures, or the size of the Ark itself. We have, however, to bear in mind that the Ark was to be overlaid with gold inside and outside, and to have also a crown of pure gold surrounding it, and to be supplied at the four corners with rings of gold, two on each side thereof (Exod. xxv. 11, 12).

This was the Ark proper complete; for though the staves were directed to be passed through the rings, and were not to be removed from the Ark, it is expressly stated to be so directed that the "Ark may be borne by them." They form, therefore, no part of the Ark proper, any more than did the mercy-seat and cherubim.

The question now arises, What was the thickness of this overlaying of pure gold? We have an indication of this also in the Scriptures; for we read in 2 Chron. iii. 8, that the amount of gold required to overlay the Holy of Holies was 600 talents, and 50 shekels of gold for the nails. If we take the surface of the Holy of Holies as $20 \times 20 \times 6 = 2{,}400$ square cubits $\times 625 = 1{,}500{,}000$ square inches of surface; and reducing 600 talents of gold to grains, we shall have—assuming with Captain Tracey (see BANNER, Nov. 13, 1878), that a talent of gold weighed 64·4 lbs. × 7000 × 600 = 270,480,000 grains of gold, which quantity, when divided by the number of square inches, 1,500,000, gives 180·32 grains per inch of surface for the six sides of the Holy of Holies. We know that a cubic inch of pure gold weighs 4,970 grains; dividing 180·32 grains, therefore, by 4,970, gives ·036282 as the thickness of overlay of gold on the Holy of Holies, if the six sides were so overlaid, which thickness would be slightly in excess of the blank used in stamping a half-sovereign, the thickness of which is ·0309 of an inch. We have an indication of the division between the Holy and Most Holy place being formed by a partition in Chron. iv. 22, the entry of the house, and the "inner doors" thereof, of the Most Holy place.

Digitized by Google

It is, however, possible that the Holy of Holies had only five sides overlaid with gold, the sixth being formed in the same manner as in the Tabernacle, with a curtain or veil. If this were the case, the quantity of gold per square inch would be proportionately increased, and the weight per inch would be 216·376 grains, and the thickness increased to ·0435364 of an inch, which is rather less than the thickness of the blanks used in stamping sovereigns, which are ·04777 of an inch, so that on either view of the subject we obtain a conclusive proof that the overlaying of the Holy of Holies with pure gold was a substantial one, and are justified in drawing the inference that the overlaying of the Ark of the Covenant and the sacred vessels of the sanctuary, was of a similar character.

We have, therefore, in the Ark of the Covenant's external surface, and that of the top edges, 10190·24 superficial inches; which, if covered on the latter assumption, would require 443·6463 cubic inches of gold, which deducted from 780·5280, leaves 336·8817 cubic inches for the crown of gold and the four rings as described.

Respecting the crown of gold we have no information whatever. It must, however, have been of a substantial character, as must necessarily have been the Mercy-seat and the "Cherubim which, lifting up their wings on high, covered the same," in order to bear the weight of the veil which divided the Holy Place from the Most Holy (Exod. xxvi. 34), which was directed to be taken down when the camp setteth forward, and the Ark of the testimony covered with it; and this to be further covered with a covering of badgers' skins, and a cloth of blue over all (Num. iv. 5, 6), the weight of all of which must have been considerable, and would require all the parts of the Ark of the Testimony, which were thus liable to be injured to be sufficiently strong to withstand the strains they would be subjected to.

Looking, therefore, upon the evidence we have of the actual size of the "peak" of the Pyramid as it existed 60 years before Christ, of the earth-commensurability which that dimension affords, and the testimony which the Scriptures give as to the high symbolisation of the top Corner-stone, we may be justified in claiming that the Ark of the Covenant, in its completed state, when overlaid with gold and supplied with its golden crown, furnished the cubical quantity required to co-ordinate it with such top Corner-stone, when three times that cubical quantity is taken as symbolical of the Triune Jehovah, and thus supplies the most important link which connects this most sacred vessel of the Tabernacle with the Great Pyramid, through the medium of the top Corner-stone thereof.

London, July 27, 1880.

THE "MONTHLY COMMENTS" ON THE WORD OF GOD.—We have received with great thankfulness a large number of replies to the notice we published in the BANNER of February 9, 1881, page 67; and as these are unanimous in the request that we should continue to edit The Comments after August 1, 1881, we have much pleasure in continuing a work for which we feel our personal unworthiness and unfitness; but for which He can make us able, whom we serve. "Brethren, pray for us" (1 Thess. v. 25).

THE REV. CANON FALCONER ON THE SIGNS OF "THE END OF THE AGE."

THE Rev. Canon Falconer, vicar of Stockton, has lately given a lecture in St. Thomas's School-room, Stockton, in connection with the Stockton Parish Church Christian Workers Association. The account of the lecture which we find in the Stockton Journal of January 29, 1881, is very interesting, because consisting of a good deal of blind testimony unwittingly given by the learned Canon that we British are Israel.

The rev. lecturer said the title of the subject he proposed to take was, "The Signs of the Times in which We are Living as an Incentive to Christian Effort." He explained that he meant to treat his subject in connection with the coming, the personal advent of our blessed Lord and Saviour—the personal advent of our Saviour being always set before us in the Word of God as the great incentive to Christian action, and Christian watchfulness, and Christian zeal. He wanted to draw their attention to some of the more prominent signs of the times in which we were living, and which signs were indicative of the near approach of our Saviour's advent, and of the termination of the present age or dispensation. When he spoke of the coming of our Lord he did not mean for a single moment that that coming would end the world, it would be merely the end of the present age, or the present dispensation, and the introduction of another and an entirely different state of things. The earth we lived in was destined not for destruction but for renovation, and he believed it would be hereafter the residence of Christ and of His redeemed and ransomed people. Therefore, when we spoke of the coming of our Saviour, we meant His coming to establish His kingdom here upon earth, that reign of righteousness which was spoken of so much in the Word of God, from one end of it almost to the other. Now, when our Lord taught His disciples with reference to the things that were about to happen, He mixed with the signs He gave of the destruction that was coming upon Jerusalem, and the dispersion of His people Israel on account of their sins, the filling up of the cup of their iniquity, being the crucifixion of the Lord of glory. With these signs were mixed up others that also had allusion not merely to the destruction of Jerusalem but to the coming of the Lord Himself. It was difficult to distinguish these signs the one from the other, but there was no question that there was an analogy to a certain extent between the signs of the times preceding the destruction of Jerusalem and the signs of the times preceding our blessed Lord's own personal advent. Now, the signs of the times which our Lord gave with reference to the destruction of Jerusalem and the overthrow of the Jewish people by the Roman Power, and the signs that were to take place immediately before that were just precisely the same signs that we were to look for according to the Word of God previous to our Saviour's own second coming. One of the signs was with regard to wars and rumours of wars. Anyone who was accustomed to read over cursorarily the news of the day must know that Europe was armed to the very teeth. In fact, it was like a great powder magazine, almost a single spark would be enough to ignite it, and then one of the most horrible and bloody wars that had ever been witnessed would take place. After referring to the enormous armaments maintained by the various nations of Europe, he said he considered that was proof, at least, that our lot was cast in a time of wars, and certainly of rumours of wars. Another sign was the prevalence of famine and pestilence. Of late years there seemed to be, as it were, something in the very elements themselves that carried diseases of various kinds to all men. And then again, only a very short time ago a most dreadful famine prevailed in the Empire of China, carrying off, it was supposed, many hundreds of thousands of our fellow-creatures, but on account of the distance we had thought very little, or next to nothing about it. And then, with regard to earthquakes, it was well known that during the last 13 months, particularly December, 1879, to the end of the last year there had been a period in which a great number of earthquakes had taken place in almost every part of the world. The city of Agram, in the South-west of Austria, had almost been destroyed by earthquakes. Earthquakes had also taken place in Switzerland, in Italy, in other parts of Europe, and also in various parts of Asia, and the Phillipine Islands, and even in Japan, and then again in the States of America. Central America particularly, and even in our own country. Another of these signs was the spread of infidelity and unscriptural principles. St. Peter told us in the third chapter of his second Epistle that in the last days scoffers should come walking after their own lusts, and saying, "Where is the promise of His coming? for since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." Some of them might not perhaps be aware of the fact that the character of much of the literature of the present day—the magazine literature of the higher classes—was most sadly tainted with infidel principles and infidel teaching. Some, perhaps, believed in a golden age, to be brought about by the agencies already at work. Well, he spoke of a golden age, and he spoke of a good time that was coming, but he could not see himself, from the Word of God, that we had any right to believe that that good time would be brought about through the agencies that were at work in the world at the present day. It was sometimes said that never was there a period in which there was more activity displayed in philanthropic and religious movements than in the present day, and this was true. But at the same time, and alongside of this, as it were, there was a very sad departure in the way of superstition, and in the way of infidelity. After alluding to the state of the anti-Christian apostasies, and the decline of the Mahommedan and Papal Powers—that of the Turks especially, facilitating the restoration of the Jews to their land, in other words, Palestine—as another sign of the approaching end, the reverend gentleman said he wished to direct their attention to the two other signs which he had put down as indicative of the near approach of the last days. One was the wonderful spread of knowledge and of scientific discovery, and the other was the Gospel witness to the nations. In Rev. xiv. 6, 7, they read of an angel flying into the midst of heaven, having the everlasting Gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, "Fear God, and give glory to Him, for the hour of judgment is come." He reminded his hearers that that declaration was almost universally applied to, or represented, as it were, by the great missionary institutions that were in existence at the present day, and that were carrying the Gospel to the ends of the earth. The rev. gentleman concluded his address by repeating that all these signs which he had given indicated the near approach of the end, and the reign of righteousness upon earth.

Digitized by Google

Our readers will see that Canon Falconer, saving the one subject of British Identity with Israel, has in the above accurately described the condition of things which we are always warning our friends is to be the precursor of our blessed Lord's appearance and the restoration of Israel and Judah. Denying that the end of the dispensation now approaching is the end of the world, he maintained, as we do, that Christ is coming to reign on this very planet "the residence of His redeemed and ransomed people"—that is, of Israel (Isa. xli. 14, xliii. 1, xliv. 21—23, xlviii. 20; li. 11; lxii. 12; Luke i. 68—75, ii. 38, xxiv. 21; Rom. xi. 1; Matt. i. 21; Psa. lxxvii. 14, 15, cxi. 9, cxxx. 7, 8, &c.). He pointed out the near approach of the mighty convulsion expected soon in Europe—the great earthquake woe of Rev. xvi. 18. Famines and pestilences he showed were common now, as well as earthquakes in divers places. Religious activity and international beneficence, he pointed out, were never so great as at the present time, concurrently with the inroad of evil like a flood. Missionary zeal, he remarked, carried the Gospel (from the British islands, of course) to the ends of the earth; knowledge of all kinds was increased, while the great anti-Christian apostasies (the Mahommedan and Papal Powers) were declining and ready to perish. These signs, the lecturer told his hearers, were indications of the nearness of the end, and also of the approaching "reign of righteousness upon earth."

There was only one ingredient in the programme Canon Falconer left out. He omitted the discovery of Israel of the Ten Tribes, and their joinder with Judah before the final scene of the drama can commence (Jer. iii. 18; Hos. i. 11; Ezek. xxxvii. 16—28, xlviii., &c.). He tried to enact "Hamlet" with the part of Hamlet himself omitted, and therefore was bound to mislead his hearers.

We are content, however, to point out to our readers, and especially to such opponents as the Rev. B. W. Savile, that so discreet and learned a divine as Canon Falconer, the vicar of Stockton, sees, as we do, and as the Great Pyramid declares, that the end of the age is close at hand, that the great earthquake woe is at the doors, and that, therefore, the discovery, or Identity of the Ten Tribes is positively the next event to be looked for, preparatory to the final consummation of all things leading up to our blessed Lord's return to reign in Mount Zion and Jerusalem on His throne of glory, which is David's, over His ancients gloriously (Isa. xxiv. 23; Luke i. 32. 33; Matt. xxv. 31; 1 Chron. xxix. 23). Knowing that the British are Lost Israel of the Ten Tribes, we call on our fellow-countrymen everywhere to praise the Lord.

A WORD IN, EDGEWISE.

By East Anglian.

PART I.

Anglo-Israelism a Necessity of the Age.

Five years ago I had little hope that I should ever be able to read the prophetic Scriptures with wonderful and strange interest. I despaired of ever understanding them; could not grasp their relevancy, seeing that they ought to have been all about the Church, instead of Israel, according to the doctrines I had received. I grew weary of the constantly-reiterated "Israel," notwithstanding the old headings of the chapters, which I could see were false; and read the Old Testament simply for its poetry; read it as I would read my Shakespeare, Milton, or Tennyson. It had lost all its real value for me, and my esteem for the New Testament suffered in consequence. Then, by a lucky chance, I came upon "Israel in Britain," by "Philo-Israel" and Cockburn-Muir, and before I had finished the latter's preface to the same, I saw that I had found a clue, which, if the right one, would enable me to read the Old Testament as the Word of God; and, more than that, saw that this was really the only visible—or, rather, thinkable—human means that, under Divine guidance, could ever stamp out and destroy the atheism of ignorance and science.

Who has been able to suppress altogether his doubts as to the utter and everlasting truth of those old Hebrew Scriptures? I have not. But I determined not to throw away the only real hope of immortality which we possess, without examining its foundations with an honest and impartial mind; for I have long seen that if you once invalidate the Old Testament, if you destroy this foundation, its beautiful and grand superstructure, the New Testament, must surely fall to the ground. And, therefore, I investigated this subject, which is now commonly called Anglo-Israelism, and which seems to me the most useful study I know for the clear understanding of the Old Testament, and my studies have resulted in a settled conviction that "Israel in Britain" is no figment of the imagination, but a sturdy truth, and that they are not wise men who simply make of us Anglo-Israelites a target for their shafts of scorn. We have expected much opposition, and have not been disappointed; but we are often sorry to find what an ill-tempered and uncharitable—not to say narrow-minded—opposition it is. Nevertheless, we will not budge for that, but stand, shoulder to shoulder, until we find (what I think we shall not) that a logical examination of our position shows us we have neither an inch of ground nor a leg to stand upon. At present, however, we need not be ashamed of the positions we have taken, nor of the manner in which we have silenced the masked and open batteries of the enemy, and put to flight their storming parties. And though we have had traitors in the camp, or rather, for that is too hard a word to use, deserters from our ranks, the thousands that have flocked to our Banner far, far exceed, and altogether obliterate, any small loss of that description.

"Anglo-Israelism a necessity of the age." Is it so? Let me show you in what way. A young friend of mine, for whom I entertain much esteem, has suddenly become a follower of a certain Republican M.P., and leader of atheists. The young fellow has just arrived at the thinking age, and having thought and studied for some time (without the knowledge of Anglo-Israelism) has come to the unhappy conclusion that the Bible is a mere book—nothing more—written by men uninspired, except, perhaps, as a poet is inspired, and that we have no direct revelation from the God in whom, strange to say, he believes. Now mark, this is what we are coming to. The age is, perhaps, too genteel, it is too sentimental to go direct to atheism. It believes in a God, but it does not believe that He has ever spoken to man; certainly not to "those old barbarians," the Israelites. Then can we not see this, that Israel's identity proven means God's identity proven; for "Ye are My witnesses, saith the Lord, that I am God."

Digitized by Google

Our teachers make light of our Identity; but it is chiefly God's identity that we seek. This is undoubtedly the want of the age. We are blown about by every wind. We want something stable in these conflicting seas of theological and scientific doctrines and opinions; something stable as a rock that stands immoveable, while far around it heaves and tosses the restless sea.

The Founder of Christianity directs us as plainly as possible to "Moses and the prophets" for the foundation of our faith. Why, then, are we accounted blasphemers, and what not, if we follow His teaching? But since we have come upon the truth, we will not be silent, and harsh words shall not daunt us.

Meanwhile, there is a feeling about that the trial of religion is at hand, an impression that the time is near when the truth or falsity of the Bible must be settled for ever. We seem to be moving swiftly onward to some great crisis in the great drama of life; and we believe that the plot is near its dénouement.

To show that this unravelling of the plot of prophecy is needed for the identity and recognition of God, I copy a couple of verses from the National Reformer, edited by C. Bradlaugh, M.P., and it will be seen what food is given to supply the spiritual wants of the modern Radical world, the great masses of the people, who are willing to be "rationally reformed" into French revolutionists, atheists, and followers generally of the "gospel of dirt."

"The Christian host envelopes us,
It's red cross in the van;
Shoulder to shoulder, infidels,
And meet it man to man.
Have we not leaders at our head,
To hold the world in awe?
More noble ne'er wore Grecian glove,
And old Rome never saw.

Of him we are the volunteers,
With all our Freethought bands,
And theists, if you'll have a god,
Hail one where BRADLAUGH stands.
Assail us as we rank around
The hero of our choice,
And all your steeple-houses rock
And tremble at his voice."

We find that Anglo-Israelism is a necessity of the age, when, for instance, we read the reviews of such works as Mr. Oliphant's on the colonisation of Palestine, and see that journals of all shades and opinions are most anxious to show that they do not care a rap for the vindication of the Biblical utterances respecting the Holy Land; but that, from a secular point of view, they are not unwilling to support his plans for the prosecution of that object. Anglo-Israelism is a standing protest against the implied, if not outspoken, contempt of prophecy which we find in the columns of most journals now-a-days, and it is the only hope at present visible that we have for the full and complete vindication of prophecy, which constitutes the chief claim of the Old Testament to be the Word of God.

(To be continued.)

OUR friends in the South of London are reminded that Mr. Onslow will lecture on Tuesday, 29th, at the Victoria Baths, High-st., Peckham.

WHAT SEED?

By L. P.

WE presume that the parable contained in Mark iv. 26—29, has been generally interpreted as conveying a spiritual meaning, and in such a sense it is commented on by the Bishop of Liverpool (Ryle), and also in the paragraph Bible; but we take exception to such interpretation for the following reasons, which are rather of a negative than positive character.

We would object to the seed, in verse 26, meaning the truth as it is in Jesus; and the ground representing the heart of an individual, or the conversion of a nation or nations to Christianity; on the score that in this parable the upspringing of the plants, after the sowing of the seed, was a long, slow process, shewing no valuable results till the time of the end. Now, the work of saving faith in a heart is, we have reason to suppose, instantaneous, even when we cannot point to the exact period of a man's second birth. In many cases the actual time of change is marked and distinct. The gift from on high, which can alone produce it, being a portion of that Spirit that is heavenly and perfect, at once produces the fruit of death to old things, and birth to what is new and holy. It is true that with some individuals the light seems feeble at first, and to grow very gradually in strength and brightness. Nevertheless, the aspect of all things is at once altered. If the results seem small in acts, scarcely perceptible at first to the onlooker, yet never again is the soul as it was before, and fruit has been produced by the very sowing of the spiritual seed, and without any watching and waiting for the blade and the ear.

The perfection of the spiritual gift does not consist in the fruit men shall bring forth, but lies in the gift itself, though the result, where there is opportunity, must sooner or later show itself in good works, active or passive. If a man is to bring forth fruit from the possession of holy seed in his soul by his life and conversation, he must not sleep and let the plant grow unwatched, unweeded, untended, leaving it to the soil of his heart to carry on the necessary process of cultivation unassisted. To the Christian, life is a battle to the end; his soul must be watered by prayer, his natural dispositions fought against till brought into subjection, the weeds of evil suggestions watched and plucked away, and the daily help of the Spirit of God sought for.

Again, there are many who, happily for their fellow-creatures, live years after the seed of grace has borne beautiful fruit. They were not reaped, the sickle was not immediately put in, though their blade was well nigh bent under the weight of grain in the ear. On the other hand, some who have passed years in open sin, in contempt of their Master's laws, and total indifference to their loving Saviour's invitations, through some miraculous spiritual process, receive the seed into their sin-seared hearts; and lo! the heavenly plant springs up at once to apparent maturity. There may be no time or opportunity given for fruit-bearing in this life, beyond the unmistakable clutch at the Saviour's outstretched hand, the sense of self-abhorrence, and the putting on by faith of Christ's righteousness; but the sickle is put in, and the grain is reaped without delay.

As regards nations, we do not see how the parable can apply to the histories of those who are called Christian. Their conversion was comparatively rapid. Since then, for centuries, though the seed spiritual has been scattered in many countries, no nation, as a whole, has brought forth the fruit of even normal Christian faith, save where it has been itself a fresh formation, created out of an ancient Christian people, who carried their belief with them to a new land.

Has the seed grown of late in the nominally Christian lands, save where the Anglo-Saxon rules? What do we find in many of them, even in those where martyrs have in past times bled for their holy faith, and agonised in war for their pure religion? We see rampant idolatry, raging infidelity, or a deathly indifference. Men have slept there, and risen night and day carrying on the work of inventive, scientific, and mercantile progress; but it is to find now that the earth is choked with noisome weeds spiritually, and bearing little fruit to the glory of God. We do not, therefore, believe this parable will bear the usual spiritual interpretation, but imagine it applies to the seed of Abraham, God's chosen, planted by Him in the ground where He intended it should grow and thrive unto the fulness of a glad harvest-time. In that land where He has sown it, we believe it has lived and flourished, spite of dark and dreadful times and many evil doings, putting forth frequent signs of vigorous life—first the blade, then the ear. The growing crop has had internal and external foes to contend with; many weeds have striven to choke it; the blight, the rust, the cankerworm. Storms, and hail, and fierce tempests have assailed it, but yet slowly and distinctly the plant has grown in power, the heads have been lifted up, the grain has swollen and been richly nourished, and now, we doubt not, the harvest-time is close at hand, when the sickle shall be thrust in, and the Angel shall reap the corn to God's glory, Israel's redemption, and to the enlightening of the Gentiles.

It is to be remarked that our Lord afterwards (verse 34) expounded all things to His disciples; yet the explanation is not recorded for our instruction in this case, as if the interpretation of the Master's teaching was not to be revealed for the instruction of mankind generally till some future period.

February 10, 1881.

Correspondence.

THE ANGLO-ISRAEL CONFERENCE AT MANCHESTER.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—On the 28th ult. we had an excellent lecture in Manchester by Mr. A. K. Robinson, the President of the Anglo-Israel Association at Leeds. Yesterday we had a well attended conference in Manchester, and I enclose a cutting from the Manchester Courier of to-day, which gives a very correct account of the proceedings, which passed off very pleasantly. Perhaps you will be able to find room for it in the BANNER. On the 21st we shall (D.V.) have a lecture by Mr. Douglas Onslow.

Yours truly,

Brooklands, near Manchester, March 10, 1881. W. HULL.

"ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATIONS.

"The Anglo-Israel Associations of Manchester and neighbourhood held a conference on March 9 in the lecture room of the Young Mens' Christian Association, Peter-street, there being a fairly numerous attendance. The object of the Association is the 'acquisition and diffusion of information on the subject of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race (including the Anglo-Saxons of the United States) with the Lost Tribes of Israel, as established by the Holy Scriptures.' The Rev. R. Park, M.A., curate of St. Philip's, Salford, presided; and the Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille, M.A., vicar of St. Mary's, Oldham, read a paper upon "The Lost Ten Tribes of Israel and the British Nation." Expressing his pleasure at being supported by a brother clergyman, Mr. Cachemaille said he was generally left alone by his brethren when dealing with that subject, and although he did not mind upon his own account he was very sorry for them, because he felt more and more that the question was one which deserved the very serious consideration of every Christian man. He hoped the clergy would not force themselves into the position of having to be taught by the laity upon that matter, but that they would be sufficiently patient and painstaking to examine without prejudice the questions brought before them. He should like to see more opposition to the opinions of those who believed in the Identity of the British nation with the Ten Tribes of Israel, because, were a thoroughly good opposition raised, the question would be more examined, and would then take a deep hold of the nation.

"Dealing with the subject of his paper Mr. Cachemaille said that God's promise to Abraham involved, first, multitudinousness of seed; second, the possession of the land; and third, the Messiah. The Messiah descended through Judah, the multitude through Joseph, and the land through all the twelve sons of Jacob. It was necessary to distinguish carefully between the kingdoms of Judah and Israel, for this was a distinction very clearly maintained in Holy Scripture. The House of Judah never had been lost, and was known at this day; the House of Israel was lost and unknown, and the general impression was that it still remained unknown, but this he questioned. (Hear, hear.) It was quite certain that the House of Israel was to be found again, and that it would be known by certain marks. These marks led them to fix upon the British nation as alone fulfilling the destiny appointed to the House of Israel. Quoting the promise to Abraham, and its repetitions and amplifications, Mr. Cachemaille dwelt upon the words, 'Thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies,' and 'a nation and a company of nations shall be of thee.' The first of these was, he said, fulfilled by the British in their possession of such important ports as Gibraltar, Malta, Aden, &c.; and the second in the existence of the British nation and its colonies, and of the United States. The character of the nation to whom the promises were vouchsafed was that of an island nation, a great naval power, a nation always conquering, even against overwhelming numbers, possessed of great wealth, lending to all nations, but borrowing of none, and it was to be the chief of nations. Many quotations of Scripture were made to show what was declared by the lecturer to be the strangely close identity which the British bore to the nation which was the subject of these various prophecies; and to this part of the question he confined his remarks, omitting all reference to history, ethnology, and philology.

"Several speakers followed Mr. Cachemaille, and a vote of thanks was accorded him for his address.

"A public meeting took place in the Association Hall during the evening, the Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille being chairman. Deputations were present from all parts of the kingdom. Mr. Caterall (Liverpool) desired those present to consider how they could best spread a knowledge of the Identity of the British with the Ten Tribes of Israelites. They must carefully guard against making it a party question, but must make it a grand national question. He knew its Conservative tendencies, and did not wish to exclude them; but in order to reach the great mass of the people they must keep clear of party lines. Mr. Collinge (Manchester) maintained that in the light of the Identification the Bible became more luminous, more delightful, more profitable, and more interesting in all its parts. Mr. Robinson, President of the Leeds Association, considered that since the Reformation there had been no theological question which had so much attracted the attention of earnest-minded men and women, and no question had so opened up the pages of the Bible. He dwelt upon the glorious future in store for the nation. Mr. Unwin agreed with what had been said concerning the Identification question being one of no party, but said that if they found any party in Parliament which was not carrying out the promise of God, it was their duty to protest. They were to have 'the uttermost parts of the earth' for their possession; and when territory was given up, or soldiers allowed to be shot in the Transvaal, it was clearly their duty on Scriptural grounds to protest. In the course of his remarks Mr. Unwin said that Her Majesty the Queen was a direct descendant of David. Mr. Jones (Birmingham) asserted that their cause was growing rapidly. Being Israelites they had great responsibilities and great privileges, and except they acted up to them they would endure many sorrows. What they believed in was not a theory, it was a long chain of facts from one end to the other. (Hear, hear.) Mr. Tudor and other gentlemen also addressed the assembly."

The following are the points dealt with in the paper read by the Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille on March 9, 1881:—

I.—God's promises to Abraham involved, 1, a multitudinous seed; 2, The possession of the land; 3, The Messiah.

II.—This was developed after Jacob's death—thus, 1, The Messiah through Judah; 2, The multitude through Joseph; 3, The land to the Twelve.

III.—It is essential that the distinction carefully preserved in Holy Scripture between the kingdoms and Houses of Judah and Israel should be equally observed by us. Their kingdom, their prophets, and their history being perfectly distinguished.

IV.—It must be noted that the House of Judah never has been lost, and is known at this day; whereas, the House of Israel was and is still (?) lost and unknown.

V.—But, in the next place, it is equally certain that the House of Israel is to be found again, and will be known, 1, By certain marks; 2, After a certain date; 3, With a certain destiny.

VI.—Lastly, those marks lead us clearly to fix upon the British nation as alone fulfilling the destiny appointed to this Lost House of Israel.

Digitized by Google

THE COMING CENSUS.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—Ought we not in some way to declare ourselves in the coming census? I hope to write myself, "An Anglo-Israelite and Member of the Bible Christian Connexion;" unless some better form can be agreed upon. I am, dear sir, yours, &c.,

G. F. TREVERTON.

[NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—We do not know if the census returns will give an opening for the declaration of our Israelite views; or, if they be entered by our fellow-believers, they will be noticed by the census officers. Should it be feasible, we see no objection to each Anglo-Israelite recording in the returns the fact that he is a believer in his own Hebrew origin, and that there are so many Anglo-Israelites under his roof, naming the number.]

GERMANY AND THE JEWS.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Referring to your article under this heading in the last issue of the BANNER. May we not discern in the persecution of the Jews a "sign of the times"? for before the House of Israel and the House of Judah can come together out of the land of the North to the land that Jehovah has given for an inheritance to our fathers (Jer. iii. 18), the remnant of Judah are to return unto the children of Israel (Micah v. 3).

As dwellers in the metropolis are daily reminded, large numbers have already returned, drawn by the prospect of civil and religious liberty, and the means of earning a livelihood. In other words, the work of the "many fishers" God has put in motion, pursuant to His promise. The probability seems to be that many more will shortly assemble; as the result of persecution, not only in Germany, which has taken the initiative, but also from every other mountain (or kingdom). As we read: "Behold, I will send for many fishers, saith Jehovah; and they shall fish them; and AFTER I will send for many hunters, and they shall hunt them from every mountain, and from every hill, and out of the holes of the rocks" (Jer. xvi. 16).

Yours faithfully,

T. THORN PITT.

15, Harrowgate-road, South Hackney.
January 27, 1881.

[NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—Judenhetze, or Jew baiting, is very like Jew "hunting;" and we doubt not Mr. T. Pitt has indicated a true "sign" of our times, to which we do well to take good heed.]

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—On my pointing out to an Anglo-Israelite lady yesterday that "the House of Israel" is referred to as the Gentiles in the New Testament, her friend, who is not yet convinced, objected that Christ told His apostles not to go into the way of the Gentiles. The answer did not occur to me at the moment, but on referring to the passage in Matt. x. 5, it became quite clear; and I have sent the following reply, which I place at your disposal, in case you may think that it may be useful to others:—

"Will you kindly tell your friend from me, with reference to our conversation of yesterday, that Christ's injunction to His apostles not to go into the way of the Gentiles, or Samaritans, applied to the first mission through Judea, on which He sent them, and from which they returned to Him. This confirms our contention that HE came as a minister to the House of Israel only. 'He came to HIS OWN,' etc. His latest instructions after His resurrection were that they should 'Go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature;' and this commission the apostles, and the converts that they made among the Jews, to whom, during Christ's three years' ministry, their mission was confined, have carried out from that day to this; and the seed of Abrahaim have become the evangelisers of the world. All nations are blessed in them." Yours truly,

J. M. GRANT, M.D.,
Surgeon-General.

Cheltenham, February 21, 1881.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—Have you met with the "Life of Dr. Livingstone," by Dr. Blaikie, of Edinburgh? If not, the following extract from one of the Doctor's letters, when on his journey from Linyanti to Loanda, in 1853-54, may interest you.

After commenting on the great fact that missionaries are being sent to all quarters of the world; that as pioneers they were working in the thick gloom, the only rays to cheer them being such as flow from faith in God's promises, and arguing from the results of the preaching of Noah, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, that the amount of success attained must not be reckoned by the number of converts made in proportion to the masses acted upon, the Doctor goes on to say:—

"Yet the cause of God is still carried on to more enlightened developments of His will and character, and the dominion is being given by the power of commerce and population unto the people of the saints of the Most High. And this is an everlasting kingdom, a little stone cut out of a mountain without hands, which shall cover the whole earth. For this time we work. May God accept our imperfect services." Yours always sincerely,

GEORGE BAYLY.

5, Kempshott-road, Streatham-common,
February 15, 1881.

THE REV. B. W. SAVILE'S INACCURACY OF QUOTATION.

ON page 54 of the present volume of the BANNER, our readers will find a short article on the subject which is described above. It had reference to the omission by the Rev. B. W. Savile of the word "perhaps" from a sentence of ours in BANNER, No. 83, of July 31, 1878, whereby what was a mere ironical statement on the part of the writer of these lines was magnified into a "prophecy" by our opponent. Mr. Savile now sends us an explanation of this strange omission of the word on his part, which it seems, though we were not aware of it, was published by him in the Daily Western Times, so far back as about February 5, 1881. We publish the same in justice to Mr. Savile without comment on our part, preferring to leave the matter to our reader's judgment. The good taste of the heading to Mr. Savile's letter will probably be deemed defective, and the reasoning of the second paragraph seems to us rather to halt. It amounts to this: "Words used by one of the Anglo-Israelites can be forced to mean that he predicted the British nation would acquire Constantinople by July 31, 1880." The nation did not annex that place on that date. Ergo, the writer was a false prophet. Mr. Horner thinks that the census about to be made this year will show our people to be 33,950,000 in number. This prediction will, as likely as the other, prove to be a failure. The Great Pyramid is held by these Anglo-Israelites to declare that the "end of the age" will be not later than August 6, 1882. The anticipation will also probably be falsified. And then? "Why, then, Anglo-Israelism is a delusion." All we can say is Non sequitur, and Mr. Savile ought to know it. Let Philo-Israel be a false prophet, let Mr. Horner be a deceived man, let Piazzi Smyth be in error. What then? What have these three fallible men got to do with God's infallible Word? with His promises to Abraham and his seed for ever? and with the patent fulfilments of the day in the British Anglo-Saxon nations?

We now ask our readers to give Mr. Savile their attention, and to form their judgment of the matter he puts before them according to the merits of the case. He wrote as follows:—

"THE ANGLO-ISRAEL DELUSION.

"To the Editor of the 'Daily Western Times.'

"Sir,—A friend of mine informs me that the editor of the BANNER OF ISRAEL complains that I have done him great injustice in my letter to you of December 20, 1880, by omitting the word perhaps in a sentence which I quoted from the BANNER of July 31, 1878, to the effect that before the expiration of two years England would possess 'not only Cyprus and all Asia, but Constantinople as well!' As I have no wish to do the editor any injustice, and not having the BANNER of that date to refer to, I readily accept his correction, and regret having omitted the 'perhaps' which he says was there; though, at the same time, I am unable to see it is of the importance which he seems to give to it.

"In my letter I had adduced three apparent predictions in order to show what little reliance could be placed on the Anglo-Israel theory; and inasmuch as some months had elapsed since the prediction that we were to possess 'perhaps all Asia, and Constantinople as well,' by July 31, 1880, and the incontrovertible logic of facts proved that we did not then obtain the coveted inheritance, to which we had no more right than Ahab, King of Israel, had to Naboth's vineyard, and no Englishman in his senses ever supposed we had, or were ever likely to have; we are warranted in thinking that the other two predictions will be equally falsified by time. One is that the census of this year 1881 will show that the population of the British Empire amounts to 33,950,000, the truth of which we shall soon be able to test. The other is, that the Great Pyramid 'absolutely fixes the approaching end of the age as not later than August 6, 1882.' In the event of both these predictions failing, it is to be hoped that our Anglo-Israelite friends will then return to their right mind. "Yours faithfully,

"BOURCHIER WREY SAVILE
"(Rector of Shillingford).

"February 5, 1881."

"A MEMBER of the Scripture and Prayer Union suggests as a subject for united prayer, that the more than 110,000 members who are now reading the book of Isaiah, a chapter daily, may be taught the true meaning of those prophecies that are now in course of fulfilment." One who has taken in the BANNER from the beginning thinks the above paragraph may be suitable for it.—M. S., Sunnylawn, Burnham, Somerset, March 10.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let - three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	5	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

384 Demy 8vo pages, in handsome cloth, gilt, price 3s. 6d., by post 4s.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF
ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.

Edited by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.

This Volume contains Papers on all Points of the Identity of the British People with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel.

Price 4d., by post 4½d. Special terms for a quantity.

THE ISRAEL OF GOD.

A SERVICE OF SONG

Upon the Career and Destiny of God's Ancient People Israel. WORDS AND MUSIC.

By C. W. E.

Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Second Edition now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

AMMI; or, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE

BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham the "friend of God," and showing that true science history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Price 2d., post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES.

An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

Just out, 8d., post free 9d.

ISRAEL NOTWITHSTANDING; Being the Second and concluding Part of the Earnest Appeal from the Pew to the Pulpit. By JOHN G. SHAW, Author of "Britain (or Israel)," &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? An Inquiry establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 4d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST OR SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS AND TEACHINGS OF THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams. Price 4d., post free 5d.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters."

Price 2d., post free 3d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

By REV. JOSEPH WILD D.D.

With a Portrait of the Author.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

NEW PAMPHLET ON THE IDENTITY OF THE LOST TEN TRIBES
FOR UNIVERSAL CIRCULATION.

The Best Pamphlet to place in the hands of a person unacquainted with the subject.

Price 6d., by post 7d. 64 Demy 8vo. pages, in wrapper. One dozen copies sent free for a post office order for 6s.

FIFTY REASONS
WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES
OF THE LOST TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL.

BY REV. W. H. POOLE, D.D.

"There is a principle which is a bar against all information, which is proof against all argument, and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance. This principle is, contempt prior to examination."—Dr. Paley.

A greater than Paley has said:—"He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is a folly and a shame unto him."—Prov. xviii.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET.
AND ALL BOOKSELLERS.

Now Ready, in handsome cloth, gilt, with Coloured Map, and several Illustrations, price 3s. 6d., by post 3s. 10d.

THE

GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,
High-Class Tailor,
47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.

MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

FURTHER SCRIPTURAL PROOFS.

A Sequel to SUMMARY OF ANGLO-ISRAELITE TEACHING.

Being a Paper read before the Cheltenham Anglo-Israel Association,

BY SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.

Price 2d.; post free 2½d.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Price 2s. 6d., post free 2s. 9d. Bound in handsome cloth, gilt, bevelled boards, gilt edges, and beautifully printed on toned paper.

THE SISTERS OF HARROWDALE RECTORY. By

MRS. M. A. SEARSON,

ILLUSTRATED WITH A BEAUTIFUL DOUBLE-PAGE FRONTISPIECE.

"In this work, the leading arguments used in support of our Identity are woven into a pleasing story, which is both interesting and instructive. The description of the Rectory is a beautiful picture of the quiet sanctity and repose of an English Christian household, situated amid that charming pastoral scenery, which has its grandest development in the Southern and midland counties of England. It will prove entertaining to young and old, and should have a wide circulation."—The Heir of the World

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

New ready, bound in cloth, 2s. 3d., cloth gilt, 2s. 9d. post free 3d. extra.

SERMON I.,

Containing Seven Parts of Extracts from the

"FLYING ROLL,"

FOR THE

"INGATHERING" OF ISRAEL.

May be had of Joseph Head, John Rogers, George Moore, Edward Rogers, 5, Trafalgar-st., New Brompton, Kent; Joshua Rogers, 151, Great Titchfield-st., London, W.; and, by ordering, of any bookseller. May be had also in paris, 4d each; post free 4½d.

"Who are Israelites, to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises."

Price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome, cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES
AND 1882.

BY THE

REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD
Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

PHILO-ISRAEL (in the BANNER) says:—"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome Identity volume. It contains twenty discourses of the well-known American divine. Dr. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, N.Y. We are glad to find from these discourses that Dr. Wild is quite one with us on this side the water with most, though not all the views we entertain on our great and glorious subject.... We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and 'American' point of view, which is sure to interest, sure to be instructive, and may lead the thoughtless and inquiring to pursue the investigation till possibly conviction may be the result.'

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA THE ROYAL SEED TO KING DAVID'S THRONE, AND ARE NOT HER SUBJECTS, THE BRITISH PEOPLE, THE TEN LOST TRIBES?

BY WILLIAM HOPTON, of Sutton Heath.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

SEE NEW IDENTITY QUARTERLY MAGAZINE. Editor, Rev. R. DOUGLAS, M.A., Vicar of St. Stephen, Sheffield. Articles by Piazzi Smyth, Col. Gawler, &c. Price 6d.; post free, annually, 2s. 3d. James Nisbet & Co., London.

Just published, price One Shilling, post free.

PROMISES, PROPHECIES, and DECLARATIONS relating to GOD'S CHOSEN PEOPLE ISRAEL.

London: F. Norgate, 7, King-street, Covent-garden.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 30, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—PSA. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 223. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, APRIL 6, 1881. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Gathering Storm	133
The Potter and the Potter's Earthen Bottle. Suggested by Commander G. L. Roberts, R.N.	134
Israel's Influence in Arabia	135
Sir W. F. D. Jervois, Governor of South Australia, on Israel's Gates	136
"And Great Earthquakes Shall be in Divers Places"	137
Coming Events and Their Shadow	137
"Mazzaroth." By A. R., of Funchal, Madeira.—Part I.	138
A New View of the Future of the British. By the Editor	138
A Word in Edgewise. By East Anglian.—Part II.	139
Lieut.-Col. W. H. Larkins on the Separation of Judah from Israel	140
The Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association	141
The Chief Rabbi of New South Wales	141
"The Head and Not the Tail," Even in Regard to Public Journalism; Dean Stanley Being the Witness	141
The Recent Pamphlet of the Rev. B. Wrey Savile. By J. G. T.	142
In the Place Where it Shall be Said to Them, Lo-Ammi—There it Shall be Said Unto Them, "Sons of the Living God" (Hosea i. 10)	142
Manasseh's Testimony That the British are Israel	143
Fresh Instances of Spiritual Good Derived From Belief in Our Identity; With Reports Also of Progress	143
Gibraltar	144
National Special Prayers and Thanksgivings	144
Whitaker's Almanack for 1880 Gives Blind Evidence to Our Identity	145
The Jew. By A. J. Johnman, of Perth	145
Surgeon-General Grant, of Cheltenham, on Our Identity	146
Israel's Heathen and Colonial Empires	146
Reviews	146
Correspondence—Old and New London.—Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union.—Subscriptions to the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association	147

THE GATHERING STORM.

WE fear the signs are gathering thick around us, showing that the Eastern Question is about at once to become active, and that matters will soon be in a flame on the frontiers of Greece. From all sides the same dread warnings come. The correspondents of the Times, as well as those of the Standard, of March 19, 1881, report from Constantinople that the negotiations make no progress, and that "war is, in a word, almost inevitable." The question that men ask themselves is, "Can it, if it breaks out, be localised? Can it be prevented spreading?" Men are saying to one another, "Peace, peace;" but they know in their hearts that "sudden destruction" and terrible war is more likely than not to spread around throughout the East. In our leader of March 16, No. 220, we pointed out on apparently good authority that "the eventual localisation of these hostilities is quite as improbable as the maintenance of peace itself." The aspect of affairs since those words were written has not changed for the better; but rather for the worse, and we believe the crisis is rapidly approaching. We find a summary of the situation in an able paper called Money under date March 2, 1881, and quote a portion of the article to show how things are viewed by men acting quite outside practical politics, and certainly without even a distant reference to God's Word or to prophecy. The editor said, regarding the cloud in the East:—

The view we have all along expressed that European diplomacy would be unable to prevent Greece and Turkey from engaging in hostilities, appears now likely to be speedily justified by events. It is possible, even at the eleventh hour, that the influence of Europe may keep the foes apart for a while, but the interval between peace and war cannot be very broad, and the day is not far distant when the fertile region of South-East Europe will once more be drenched with blood. As we have more than once asserted, the causes of strife lie too deep to be removed by diplomatic conversations and bits of scribbled parchment. Europe, at the Berlin Congress, gave Greece, wisely or unwisely, a certain portion of Turkish territory, and hence created a claim which only utter foolishness on the part of the Great Powers could have induced them to have attempted later on to clip or suppress. The Greeks know as well as everybody else in Europe that the rule of the Sultan is dying out, and that if they do not assert their nationality manfully Austria and Russia will annex all that is left of the European possessions of the Turks. Were there any prospect of a Turkish regeneration, and with it a cessation of Austrian and Russian annexations, Greece might give heed to the voice of diplomatic timidity and accept the reduced scraps of territory the Porte is willing to give her; but she knows there is no hope of cure for the "sick man," and that if she does not show herself valiant the Czar and Francis Joseph will advance right up to her frontier and reduce her to the condition of a diminished Denmark. Having made costly preparations for a contest with the Turks, it is undoubtedly better policy for the Greeks to fight at once than to wait till their armaments get old and rusty. On many sides they are warned of the greater advantages of peace, but these are based mainly on the supposition that if the Greeks engage in war with Turkey they are sure to be severely thrashed. Events may prove otherwise, and even if they do not Greece is conscious that Europe will not allow her to be conquered beyond a certain point. Deliberately weighed, we doubt whether Greece would be any the better off for a withdrawal of her claims than if she pursued them to the bitter end. As a matter of fact, she has gone too far with her preparations to draw back. If she decides on peace she is sure to lose heavily; if she ventures on war she stands a chance to win something, even if only a little. But in either case a period of impoverishment is sure to follow.

Such is the forecast of an impartial witness, and very dreadful is the outlook. For what does the coming contest involve? First the fall and destruction of Turkey. That "fall" we know from God's Word (Turkey being the prophetic Edom) will be terrible to herself and fatal in its consequences to all the Gentile nations around. Ezek. xxv. 14, and Jer. xlix. 17—22 draw a terrific picture of that nation's undoing; and Matt. xxiv. 28 with Luke xvii. 37 seem to point to the gathering of the Gentiles to partake of Edom's spoil, which gathering again has, we believe, for its objective what is detailed in Zeph. iii. 8 and Rev. xvi. 18. The "fall" of Turkey collects the eagle powers to the "feast." "The gathering" of the nations is by the Lord then used to accomplish His purposes of vengeance against His enemies, for His determination (He tells us) "is to gather the nations, that He may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them His indignation, even all His fierce anger; for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of His jealousy;" since there will then be "an earthquake such as there was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, so great." The anticipations of the mere secular writers of the day thus concur, we see, with the premonitions of the Word of the living God. The Great Pyramid of Egypt being God's stone record of His proposed dealings with the world tells the same awful tale, and points more definitely still to A.D. 1881·6 as a period of great collapse, terror, and affliction for the nations of the earth. It thus agrees with the anticipations of mankind, and their own expectations regarding their near future. The point of interest to ourselves, as a nation, in the coming woe, is whether or not we shall be involved in the approaching destruction, and how we shall escape? The Word of God tells us plainly. So does the Great Pyramid. For Israel will be hidden and kept in safety during the time of trial so near at hand. She is directed "to enter into her chambers, to shut her doors (or Gates) about her, and to hide herself, as it were, for a little moment" (to efface herself politically and otherwise, in fact) (Isa. xxvi. 20, 21), what time "the Lord cometh out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the "earth;" but NOT those of Israel's land. God's Word thus makes a clear and marked distinction between the "Gentiles of the earth" and Israel's favoured race (Zeph. iii. 8, 9, &c.). The very element that destroyed the world in Noah's day saved him and his family. So now the very destruction which devastates "yonder ill-consolidated Europe" will be the means of saving British-Israel with their brethren of Judah and Manasseh. For our Lord expressly says regarding that very time, "When these things begin to come to pass, then lift up your heads! for your redemption draweth nigh" (Luke xxi. 29). Israel, praise ye the Lord.

Digitized by Google

THE POTTER AND THE POTTER'S EARTHEN BOTTLE.

SUGGESTED BY COMMANDER G. L. ROBERTS, R.N.

WE are indebted for the following brilliant light on our Identity—one which clears up a vast number of doubtful points, and answers many opponents—to Commander Roberts, R.N., our energetic, active fellow-labourer. We give his ideas in our own words, but the discovery is his.

In the year B.C. 605, being about 115 years after the kingdom of Israel had been destroyed, and the people carried away to Assyria and the cities of the Medes, the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah, our prophet. He was directed by the God of Israel to deliver two messages, one to the House of deported Israel, the other to Judah, still inhabiting the land. These messages will be found detailed in Jer. xviii. 1—17, and again in chap. xix. 1—13. Let us examine these passages, recollecting the date when they were recorded, and to whom they related.

In chap. xviii. the message is—as distinctly stated in verses 5 and 6—to the House of Israel, as distinguished from the men of Judah (ver. 11). What was the message? The Lord told our prophet Jeremiah "to go down to the potter's house, and behold, he wrought a work on the wheels." Who has not seen such work in operation in our own day? What happened? The potter made a vessel of the clay; in making it he marred it (ver. 4). Did he throw the clay away? Not so. He made of the same clay (mark that) "another vessel again, as it seemed good to him." What was this? Ver. 6 tells us. It was a picture of God's dealings with the Ten Tribes. He made the House of Israel; but in making He marred the work; He unmade the work, deported the Tribes, and then He proceeded afresh, or again, to make "another vessel" from that clay, as seemed good to Him as its Potter to make it. "As the clay in the hand of the potter, so are ye in Mine hand, O House of Israel" (ver. 6). We have, then, distinctly to look for another Power rising from the same clay as was cast out of God's inheritance into Media, and discover resulting from it another nation, as it seemed good to the Divine Potter; and note—this newly constructed nation must be separate and distinct from the House or men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. Why do we say this? Verses 9—11 tell us. God said there, regarding such a nation as the Jews, whom He built and planted, that "if they do evil in His sight, and do not obey His voice" (Deut. xxviii. 15, to end) then "He will repent of the good wherewith He said He would benefit them." The following verses are addressed by name to Judah, and the moral is applied to them. God said He would make their land desolate, banish and scatter, and utterly disgrace them (ver. 15—17).

But this is not all. Chap. xix. 1—13 carries on the story, and adds to the judgment pronounced on Judah. The Lord told Jeremiah to take a potter's earthen bottle, and go and speak to the inhabitants of Jerusalem (ver. 3). After denouncing against them (Israel of the Ten Tribes not being so much as once mentioned) the prophet was directed (ver. 10) to break the potter's earthen bottle before the people, the Jews, in practical, but figurative, demonstration of the treatment to which God was going to subject them. And note ver. 11, wherein the fact is recorded, that such fracture of the earthen bottle was not like Israel's marred vessel, which, as wet clay, could be re-made—this breakage "cannot be made whole again," said the prophet (ver. 11). Such was to be Judah's fate. How different Israel's! The latter was to be re-made into a vessel unto honour, "afore prepared unto glory" (Rom. ix. 23), whereas Judah was a vessel "unto dishonour," a "vessel of wrath, fitted for destruction" (Rom. ix. 22; 1 Thess. ii. 16).

St. Paul, in writing Rom. ix. 20—24, had the Lord's enacted parable before him, as detailed in Jer. xviii. and xix., and accurately described the two separated Houses, Israel and Judah, when he spoke of the two vessels of the potter, one being Israel, to honour, the other, Judah, to dishonour. And who did he say were the vessels unto honour? "Even us" (Benjamite Paul and the Hebrew Christians), besides those "Gentiles" mentioned by Hosea, who were Hebrews in disguise, Lo-Ammi-ed Israelites, whom alone Hosea described, but pure Gentiles never.

In connection with these passages Commander Roberts would have us read the Lord's description of Judah in His day, also an enacted parable, to be found in Matt. xxi. 17—20; Mark xi. 12—14, 20—22. The Lord coming from afar, even from His heavenly glory, saw a fig tree (Judah). "He came to His own, but His own received Him not" (John i. 12). He came looking for fruit, but He found only leaves, since it was not yet the time of figs (Mark xi. 13). Why, then, did He look for it? To show that the time of Israel's, not Judah's, fruitfulness would be in the end of the dispensation, not in His own day. "Israel was to blossom and bud," not Judah, at all, in this dispensation, or "Aión." What said the Lord to Judah, as represented by the fig tree? "No man eat fruit of thee hereafter, during the dispensation or age"—in other words, the earthen bottle was broken, so that it "cannot be made whole again." The destruction of Judah was fatal, and for this Christian dispensation final. God's treatment of Judah was marked by "severity" (Rom. xi. 22).

What are the lessons, then, these passages teach us? They are many and valuable.

1. The separation, during this dispensation, of the Ten Tribes from Judah.

2. The construction from the ruins of Israel's deportation, of

Digitized by Google

another Israel out of the same materials—a nation according to God's heart; "a vessel of mercy."

3. Judah's utter and final disintegration in Titus' time. "Their breaking cannot be mended."

4. The certainty that during this dispensation the Jews will bear nationally no fruit for Christ.

5. But that, as fruit has to be produced, "Israel will blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6).

Where is the re-constructed Israel—the Mât-bit Hu-um-ri-a, or "Beth Khumri"—unless in the British Empire?

Why will men, in the face of such Scriptures as these, tell us Israel is destroyed? or is not to-day a vessel of mercy? or bid us look for Israel among the Jews? or pretend that the Jews nationally can bring forth fruit for Christ now? or do for the world what the Lord Himself has reserved to be done, and is actually effecting by, BRITISH-ISRAEL.

We thank God for the above splendid light, and Commander Roberts also, for enabling us to see it.

ISRAEL'S INFLUENCE IN ARABIA.

WE have just seen a remarkable paper by Mr. W. Robertson Smith, describing his journey in the Hejaz, being that portion of Arabia of which Mecca, Jeddah, and the Western parts of that land bordering the Red Sea, form the chief places of interest. His descriptions of the growth of British popularity and power, especially in the neighbourhood of our great Gate Aden in Yemen is so apposite to our subject that we feel bound to quote the passage. We found the paper in an old copy of The Scotsman of March 3, 1880. The interest of the matter does not lose by its long-keeping. What was true last year is true to-day; and aptly illustrates our contention that Israel's power grows about and around Israel's "Gates," of which the instance of Aden and the province about it is one in point. Mr. Robertson Smith said :—

"The Arabs are immensely impressed by the kind of power embodied in our industries and trade, by the power of English knowledge to control the forces of nature for the service of man. 'There is nothing stronger than the English, except God.' It is not our ships of war in the Red Sea that draw out this acknowledgment. The Arabs, at least in the uplands, are not greatly afraid of any military power—partly from ignorance, and partly from a just sense of the impossibility of a substantial conquest of the desert. It is steamers, the telegraph, the diving-bell, and things like these that raise our name, or rather the possession of these inventions in connection with the faculty of organisation on a great scale, in which the Arabs are altogether lacking. The regular visits of such a line of steamers as the British India are a more forcible lesson than any display of martial strength. Respect thus obtained contains no germs of hatred, if those whose power is admired use it in justice, honour, and kindliness. In this respect it cannot be said that Europeans always act up to their reponsibilities. But England, one is proud to say, has a good name in Arabia, a far better name than some other Christian countries. Our national reputation has been greatly raised by the prosperity of Aden, and by the admitted excellence of the government there. In Jeddah, where many of the influential merchants and other inhabitants are Indian Mohammedans, the advantage of being a British subject is thoroughly understood. These indeed are considerations which appeal mainly to the more intelligent classes. The prejudices of the ignorant masses are only to be conquered by actual experience in contact with the foreigner, and thus every Englishman in a place like this bears on his shoulders something of national responsibility. In Jeddah this responsibility has, on the whole, been well discharged. The labouring man knows the advantage of being employed by Englishmen. Personal relations, too, are gradually formed, especially in times of sickness, when all manner of people have learned to come for advice and treatment to the 'English House' of Messrs. Wylde, Beyts & Co., who formerly held the Consulate of Great Britain, and are still the real representatives of our country in the eyes of the people.

"Such relations break down much of the old jealousy, especially when backed up by the really liberal spirit in which the government of the Shereef—far more than that of the Turks—meets the advances of foreigners. A little incident that took place last Christmas may not seem important at first sight, but is really a sign of the times. There were two English gunboats in the harbour, and a Christmas dinner in the 'English House,' after which the whole company marched down in order to the quay, preceded by the band of the Philomel, playing marches and the English national air. The British Consul, who is of recent appointment, and does not know the Arabs, was greatly alarmed, but throughout the town there was not one murmur of disapproval at the act which a few years ago would certainly have produced a serious riot. Of course there is a great deal of prejudice still to conquer, and it is only little by little that the most unreasonable suspicions give way. From time to time one foolish step throws everything back, as, for example, when the English Consul lately excited the derision of the whole community by hoisting the Consular flag in honour of the arrival in town of the wife of his dragoman, a woman of notoriously spotted character. But there is no doubt that English influence is gaining ground, and the best informed natives themselves declare that with a wise and energetic Consul it might soon become paramount, and engage the affections of the whole people. In Yemen the influence emanating from Aden is still stronger, and my native informants tell that if England chose to follow the ancient path familiar to the Arabic mind, by which strong and just States have always attracted the voluntary homage of adjacent tribes, acting as arbitrators, and maintaining justice in causes referred to them, all Yemen in a few years would be English without one blow struck.

"The Arabs are at this moment deeply interested in the impending fall of the Turkish empire, of which no intelligent man entertains a doubt. They hate a foreign yoke, but they know their tribes cannot be saved from anarchy and constant strife without the presence of some arbitrator. The idea is certainly gaining ground that England is the country whose protectorate would be most acceptable and most fruitful in good results. You must remember that I am not writing as a politician. I express no opinion as to the duties which the course of the next few years may lay upon us in the Red Sea. I have simply tried to explain to you as accurately as I can the present position of the question, and the influence that is inevitably exercised by the extension of our commercial relations with Arabia."

A NATIONAL FAST AND HUMILIATION CALLED FOR.—"Canon Jelf, preaching at Rochester Cathedral last Sunday, said that it would not be denied that the British Empire is passing through a sort of furnace of adversity. At home, widespread disaffection and lawlessness, mysterious and awful crimes, fearful accidents, desolating floods, and the most terrible storms on record; while abroad we have suffered a series of defeats, called by the heathenish name of disasters. We have been humiliated in the three things on which we prided ourselves—our agriculture, our trade, and our arms; and though our Lord's words warn us against saying, 'These sufferings are God's judgments,' when individuals are afflicted, He does not forbid it where a whole nation is concerned. To say the least, we must suppose that we are being heavily chastened for our many national sins; and bishops, clergy, and laity ought alike to move towards a national humiliation, as is required of us."—From Graphic, March 12, 1881.—J. T. G.

Digitized by Google

SIR W. F. D. JERVOIS, GOVERNOR OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA, ON ISRAEL'S GATES.

A FRIEND at Devonport has sent us the Cape Argus of December 28, 1880, giving Sir W. F. D. Jervois' lecture delivered in Adelaide, South Australia, on "Great Britain's Maritime Stations," which, being the utterances of the Governor of the colony, and late Governor of the Straits Settlements (Singapore), are peculiarly valuable as blind evidence of our Identity, and a singular testimony to the truth which we endeavoured to illustrate in our recently published volume, "The Geography of the Gates."

The reader, after perusing the report of the gubernatorial lecture which we quote below, should ask himself what other nation on the face of the earth has possession of such unique strategic positions all round the world as those we, the British nation, are thus proved to hold? How can the fact be accounted for? Why should we have the Gates of the trade routes of the globe, and why should our maritime stations be just those which throw into our British-Israelite hands the control of the sea-borne commerce of the whole earth? Was it an accident did this for us? Was it a chance, further, which gave our race in the possessions we have thus acquired, the additional blessing of those "coal fields inexhaustible," which are, in truth, the foundation of our political and national power? We, for our parts, see the hand of God in all this; and knowing we are the Lost House of Israel, the Ten Tribes, we recognise in the possession of the "Gates," the blessing God Almighty promised to Abraham, our forefather (Gen. xxii. 17). In the gift of the coal fields, and of the splendid wide-spread Empire the Gates have conferred upon us, we find the incipient fulfilment of those other promises which will make this nation ere long "the heirs of the world," the owners under Christ of "the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, as the people of the saints of the Most High" (Dan. vii. 27).

We now ask our friends to attend to the Governor of South Australia, his Excellency Sir W. Jervois.

BRITISH MARITIME STATIONS.

We are indebted to the Australian reports of a highly interesting lecture on "The Defences of England and Her Colonies," by his Excellency Sir W. F. D. Jervois, Governor of South Australia, delivered in Adelaide, for the following account of the maritime stations of Great Britain:—

"Turn for a moment to the map of the world to see the course taken by the mercantile marine in carrying on the stupendous commerce of the British Empire. 1. To the Mediterranean, and thence to India, China, and the East—by the Suez Canal, the Red Sea, the Arabian Sea, the Bay of Bengal, the Straits of Malacca, and the China Sea. 2. Branching from the first-mentioned line there are two routes to Australia—one from Ceylon, by the Indian Ocean and viâ King George's Sound; the other from Singapore viâ the Java Sea and Torres Straits. 3. Again, there is the line of communication from the Eastern part of Australia to China and Japan. 4. There is the route to India viâ the Cape of Good Hope—a route which must be used in the not improbable event of circumstances occurring during war to prevent our vessels passing through the Suez Canal. 5. Branching from this line at the Cape of Good Hope is another route to Australia and New Zealand, viâ King George's Sound. 6. Next there is the route to these colonies of Australasia viâ Cape Horn. 7. There are the important lines across the Atlantic—(1) to Halifax for North America; (2) to Jamaica and the West Indies. 8. Lastly, the route from Vancouver's Island to Australia viâ the Fiji Islands.

"Next, see the positions which we hold upon those maritime lines of commerce. Common to the first and second lines referred to are Gibraltar, Malta, Perim, Aden, Bombay, and Ceylon. Gibraltar was taken in 1704 by Sir George Rooke, and, strange to say, so little was the acquisition then prized, that not only was he not rewarded for this service, but he was refused even a formal vote of thanks. It is now in our hands impregnable, and British people here and everywhere are naturally proud of the success of their forefathers in resisting efforts for its capture in former days. Malta was taken by Great Britain in 1800 from Napoleon, to whom the island had capitulated when he was en route to Egypt two years previously. The Maltese rose against the French, and this led to a blockade and occupation by the British. Malta is now a splendid maritime fortress, within which are fine harbours, docks, and naval stores and establishments. The defences there embrace nearly the whole island. I should mention that Cyprus is well situated as a naval station—only about a day's fast steaming from the Mediterranean entrance to the Suez Canal. I need not tell you when that possession was acquired. Next, Aden, which is a strong fortress, holds a most important position as one of the chain of coaling stations between England, India, and Australia. Its position with reference to the Red Sea is somewhat analogous to that of Gibraltar with respect to the Mediterranean. Aden, however, is about 100 miles from the Straits of Babelmandeb, whereas Gibraltar is at the very entrance to the Mediterranean. The Island of Perim, however, which is in our possession, and is actually at the mouth of the Red Sea, possesses an excellent harbour. Unfortunately, excepting about once in four years, there is scarcely any rainfall at either of these places, and consequently they are dependent for their water upon tanks, which are, I may observe, generally empty, upon distillation, and upon supplies, brought on camels from inland. About 1,700 nautical miles nearly Eastward of Aden is the magnificent harbour of Bombay, with its docks, and naval and military establishments. Bombay was acquired by Charles II. as part of the dowry of the infanta Catherine of Portugal, on the occasion of his marriage with that princess in 1661. It is the only considerable harbour on the Western coast of India, and the importance of the great town which has arisen there is such that it has at times been much discussed whether it should not be made the seat of Government for all India. Its defence is provided for by a combination of forts and floating batteries. Ceylon was taken by us in 1795 from the Dutch, who had previously dispossessed the Portuguese. When a breakwater, which is now being constructed at Colombo, the commercial capital of the island, is completed, it is probable that place will supersede Galle as a coaling station. There is a splendid harbour on the Eastern coast at Trincomalee, and this is the naval station for the Imperial squadron in the Indian seas. The fortifications of Trincomalee are not of modern type, though during the last few years some powerful ordnance have been mounted there. Proceeding Eastward we come to Singapore, which was taken possession of in 1819 by Sir Stamford Raffles under a treaty with the Malay Prince who then ruled in the Southern part of the Malay Peninsula. Situated as it is at a converging point of several routes, and possessing a fine harbour, with docks and marine establishments, it is a position of extreme value. Consider, also, how important this station is with reference to the trade with Northern and Eastern Australia, and as a focus for trade with British India, Netherlands India, and the Eastern Archipelago. I am glad to say that Singapore is now fortified. Before I left the Straits I had the honour of proposing the general scheme of defence which has since been adopted. Hong Kong, which is the chief naval station of our Fleet in the China seas, was ceded to Great Britain at the time of the war with China in 1841. It possesses a very fine harbour, with naval establishments, which are now defended by fortifications. See the position which Hong Kong holds as regards our trade with Japan, the Phillipine Islands, and the East generally. Near the route to India and Australia, viâ the Cape of Good Hope, are Ascension and St. Helena. The latter was captured from the Dutch in 1673. Ascension was taken possession of by the British when Napoleon was a prisoner at St. Helena. The Cape Colony was finally taken by Great Britain in 1806, and there we have a naval station at Simon's Bay, Table Bay being the chief commercial port. About 2,500 miles from the Cape, and about mid-way between it and Bombay, the Island of Mauritius lies, on the track of vessels proceeding to India round the Cape of Good Hope. During the wars at the beginning of this century Mauritius was used by the French, who then possessed it, as a station whence armed cruisers and privateers used to issue and cut off our merchant ships trading with India and the East. The losses sustained by us in consequence amounted to several millions sterling, and led the British Government to determine on capturing the island. This was accordingly effected by an expedition fitted out for the purpose in 1810. It will be seen that Mauritius is a most important position for the security of our commerce with India round the Cape; it should, moreover, be noticed that being as it is on the flank of the passage from the Cape to Australia, its possession by Great Britain is of great importance to Australian commerce. Port Louis, the principal harbour at Mauritius, is fortified. I should also mention that works of defence have been constructed at St. Helena, Table Bay, and Simon's Bay. The naval station of Ascension, it will be observed, also lies near the track of vessels proceeding to New Zealand and Australia vid Cape Horn; and on this line, nearly opposite the Straits of Magellan, we also have the Falkland Islands, which were occupied by the British Government in 1833, with the immediate object of protecting the whale fishery in the adjacent seas. Turning now to the important lines of communication with North America and the West Indies, we have on the shore of Nova Scotia, which was ceded to us by France in 1714, the splendid fortified harbour of Halifax, our head-quarters naval station on the American side of the Atlantic. About 800 miles to Southward of Halifax, in mid-ocean, and about 600 miles from the coast of America, are the Bermudas, which were first colonised by Sir George Somers, who was wrecked upon them in 1609. These islands are, in fact, relics of the old North American colonies of Great Britain (now the United States), in the same manner that the Channel Islands (Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark) are relics of England's French possessions. The Bermudas, or, as we now call them, Bermuda, is a strongly fortified naval station, and you will see from its position on the map that it is of incalculable value to us. Next, about 1,200 miles South-west of Bermuda, is Jamaica, which has been occupied by us since 1655, when it was taken from the Spaniards by an expedition despatched by Cromwell against St. Domingo. There is a naval establishment and a fine harbour at Port Royal, on the Southern side of Jamaica. See the importance of the position of this island with reference to trade with the West Indies. Notice the value it will be as a naval station for the protection of the trade of Australia and New Zealand with Great Britain by the Panama route, if, as seems likely, the project of Lesseps for a ship canal, or any other project for passing ships through the isthmus, be carried out. It is almost directly in the line of communication from England to New Zealand and Australia. At the Island of Antigua, one of the discoveries of Columbus in 1493, and first inhabited by the English in 1632, is another important harbour about 900 miles to the Eastward of Jamaica, well situated for the protection of British commerce in the West Indies. Passing over to the Pacific, we now have, near the route from Vancouver's Island to Australia and New Zealand, the Fiji Islands, which were handed over to us by King Thakombau some six years ago. The Fijis occupy a most important position for the defence of Australian commerce, not only with reference to the route from Vancouver's Island, but also to that from Panama to Australia. Vancouver's Island, long in the possession of the Hudson's Bay Company, was taken over by the British Government in 1838, and forms part of British Columbia, which is the Westernmost State of the Dominion of Canada. A trans-continental railway, having its terminus in British Columbia, and which will connect the Pacific with the Atlantic, is now being constructed. There is a splendid harbour at Esquimault, the British naval station at the Southern end of Vancouver's Island. I have chiefly referred to those parts of the dominion of Great Britain which are on or near the lines of our maritime commerce, and which are therefore more especially relevant to the subject of my lecture. In any case time would not permit my entering into the history of the acquisition of her great possessions in India, North America, South Africa, and Australia. Suffice it to say that it was on the last day of the sixteenth century that the first East India Company received its charter; it was in 1759 that Quebec was taken by the illustrious Wolfe; it was in 1806 that we finally took the Cape, and in 1843 that we occupied Natal. I need scarcely tell you how these magnificent colonies have grown within the last 90 years. It is most important to observe that in most of the British possessions there is a local supply of coal, and so situated as to be available for marine and naval purposes. In North America, on the Western side, excellent coal is found in Vancouver's Island, whence supplies are obtained for ships navigating the North Pacific. On the East there are extensive coal fields in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, from whence Bermuda, Jamaica, the West Indies, and, of course, the naval station of Halifax, can be supplied. It should be noticed, also, that the carboniferous formation occurs in the Island of Trinidad. Turning to the East we find abundance of coal in India. That of the Nerbudda, and of another coal field about 120 miles from Calcutta, is used in working the railways adjacent thereto; and that obtainable in Eastern Bengal and Assam is said to be well fitted for the use of the naval and commercial marine. Again, in Labuan, distant about 800 and 1,000 nautical miles respectively from Singapore and Hong Kong, there are rich coal deposits. In South Africa, also, coal, as yet unworked, is found both at Natal and in a district some 500 miles from Table Bay. I need scarcely mention that the coal-fields of New South Wales and of Queensland are of enormous magnitude, indeed, they are practically inexhaustible, and are sufficiently near to the seaboard to render them available for our naval and commercial marine. Coal, also, and of good quality, is found in Victoria, at Cape Howe and Cape Patterson, and in Tasmania. New Zealand, too, possesses incalculable stores of coal. I wish we could discover a coal-field in South Australia. When you consider the degree of material prosperity which has accrued to Great Britain owing to her possession of vast supplies of coal within easy reach of her harbours, it is difficult to form an estimate of the importance of the coal-fields of Australia to the future of these colonies. Already New South Wales supplies large quantities of coal to San Francisco, Petropaulovski, Japan, the ports of China, Singapore, Mauritius, and other places. The fact that Australian coal competes with English and American coal in California, in spite of the distance, proves it to be of very high quality. It is, indeed, rapidly superseding English coal in the markets of Eastern Asia and Western America, and, in conjunction with the coal of Vancouver's Island, supplies the fuel required for steamers navigating the Pacific Ocean. The fact that coal, to an extent which affords inexhaustible supplies for our steam vessels in every portion of the globe, is found throughout the British possessions, especially in Great Britain herself, in North America, and in Australia, is of incalculable importance to our world-wide commerce, and for the supply of our naval stations on the lines of communication."

Digitized by Google

"AND GREAT EARTHQUAKES SHALL BE IN DIVERS PLACES" (LUKE XXI. 11.)

WE take the following from the Times of Nov. 10, 1880:—

TERRIBLE EARTHQUAKE IN AUSTRIA.—Vienna, Nov. 9.—An earthquake occurred this morning throughout Southern Austria, from Vienna to the Adriatic and the frontiers of Bosnia. In the capital a rather violent shock was felt at a quarter to 8 this morning. Numerous telegrams have been received by the Meteorological Bureau here, stating that shocks were felt at Serajevo, Derwenta, Brod, Pola, Trieste, Zilli, Klagenfurt, Fünfkirchen, Odenburg, Marburg, Laibach, and Gros-Kanischa. In Agram, the capital of Croatia, three shocks of earthquake occurred, a period of an hour intervening between the second and third. One of them, which lasted 10 seconds, was so powerful that not a single house remained uninjured. Walls, chimneys, and roofs were precipitated into the streets, causing the deaths of several persons, and injuring many others. The walls of several churches and towers were cracked, the cathedral was seriously damaged, and many buildings were rendered unsafe, and will have to be pulled down. A general panic reigns in the town. Many of the inhabitants, including the cardinal-archbishop, have taken to flight. The burgomaster of Agram has requested the authorities at Laibach, by telegraph, to despatch masons and building materials to restore the buildings destroyed by the earthquake; and a train consequently left Laibach this evening with the necessary workmen and materials. It is impossible to estimate the whole extent of the damage. The number of persons injured is at present estimated at 30. The authorities at Agram are taking all the precautionary measures in their power. The Emperor has requested the Ban of Croatia to furnish him with further particulars.

COMING EVENTS AND THEIR SHADOW.

WE take the following from the Standard newspaper of February 1, 1881. The facts being true appear to show clearly that the preparations of the Prince of Rosh to carry out his prophetic programme laid down for him in Ezek. xxxviii. and xxxix. are being hurried forward apace. "One hundred thousand horse" from one portion only of the Czar's dominions, will go far to realise the prophecy in Ezek. xxxviii. 15: "A great company and a mighty army, many people, all of them riding upon horses," are the terrible descriptions of the future invaders and foes of Israel in the land. We are thankful (knowing who we are) that we have Ezek. xxxix. to console us. For the destruction of Russia and her hosts shall be complete. Our quotation is as follows:—

"THE CAPTURE OF GEOK TEPE.

"Berlin, Monday night.

"The Russian statement that the Tekkes had to be put down to protect the Russian trade to Khiva is untrue. No Russian caravans have ever proceeded to Khiva from or through those Southern regions. The motive in subjugating the Tekkes is very clear. German military men estimate the Southern Turcomans at five hundred thousand souls, or, what is equivalent, nearly one hundred thousand horse. With money and other benefits showered upon them, according to the plan entertained at St. Petersburgh, they promise to make Russia invincible in her long contemplated move to the Persian Sea.

Digitized by Google

"MAZZAROTH."

By A. R.

(Of Funchal, Madeira.)

PART I.

WHO that has read "Mazzaroth," by the late Miss Rolleston, can fail to be struck by the strong evidence she gives, as a blind witness, to the truth of the Anglo-Israel cause? The names of the zodiacal signs, with their thirty-six decans, or accompanying constellations, together with the names of the chief stars forming them, whether sought out in the Hebrew, Arabic, Syriac, Coptic, Greek, Latin, or Persian languages, all bear distinct reference to the great scheme of redemption thus recorded in the skies by Adam, Seth and Enoch, who were inspired to name these heavenly bodies once for all. Taking a hasty glance at this deep work of patient research, let us mark a few of the most striking nomenclatures, beginning with Virgo, in which sign the primitive years commenced, that constellation being in full view when the sun entered Aries.

VIRGO AND ITS DECANS (Coma, Centaur, Bootes).—The Virgin, who bears ears of corn, two ears of corn, the branch, the desired, the twin, the united, the glorious, who shall have dominion, the deliverer, who cometh, the despised, the sin-offering, the heretofore and hereafter, the pierced, the mediator, the king smitten who cometh. In short, the promised seed.

LIBRA AND ITS DECANS (Cross, Victim, Crown).—The scales, weighing, purchase, redemption, gain, swept away, the purchase which covers, raiment, heaped up high, limit, boundary, to be slain, destroyed, crown encompassing, ornament or jewel.

May not this have reference to the God-given weights and measures, and not merely typifying the price of redemption? "The emblem of the balance is found in all the Eastern zodiacs. In some it is said to have been held in the claws of the scorpion. The scales should be uneven, the Northern exalted, the Southern depressed."

SCORPIO AND ITS DECANS (The Serpent, Ophinchus, Hercules).—The scorpion, conflict, wounding, the accursed, the reptile, holder of the serpent, who kneels, who cometh to labour, to suffer.

SAGITTARIUS AND ITS DECANS (Lyra, Ara, Draco).—The archer, the going forth or sending forth, the gracious who strives, sent forth to smite, triumph, the lyre or harp, the completing. Evidently the missionaries of the Gospel.

CAPRICORNUS AND ITS DECANS (Sagitta, Aquila, Delphinus).—The kid, the atonement, cut off, bowed, the Lord Judge cometh, swiftly running water.

AQUARIUS AND ITS DECANS (The Southern Fish, Pegasus, Cygnus).—The rising up and pouring forth of water. Coming quickly, joyfully. Circling, returning. The pouring out of the Spirit upon all flesh.

PISCES AND ITS DECANS (The Band, Cepheus, Andromeda).—The fishes, multitude, lengthened out (as posterity), spread, the united, the upheld, redeemed, the chained, the afflicted, the weak, the bound, delivered from the grave (sheol), the assembled, the abundance, the set free from death.

This sign has always been held to typify the multitudes of the Church; but can we not find in it Israel and Judah bound together, with heads turning different ways as yet, but their band held by the fore-foot of the Lamb?

ARIES AND ITS DECANS (Cassiopeia, Cetus, Perseus).—The lamb, gentle, merciful, bound, bruised, exalted, chief, head of the triangle. Throne, beauty, liberty, the branch, bound and chained enemy, the rebel thrust down, the breaker who assists.*

Here we see the Lamb, the chief Corner-stone, the triangle being said by the ancient Greeks to contain the name of the Deity. Cassiopeia, the throned woman, setting free her hair, may well remind us of our gracious Queen on David's throne. The branch she bears, Caph (Heb.), is the same word used in Isa. lx. 21: "Thy people also shall be all righteous; they shall inherit the land for ever, the branch of My planting, the work of My hands, that I may be glorified."

The rebels have yet to be thrust down, and the Perseus who assists, to appear. Miss Rolleston remarks that ancient authorities unanimously assert that Reuben bore Aquarius, Joseph Taurus, Benjamin Gemini, under the emblem of the wolf, and Dan Scorpio, under that of an eagle, or a crowned serpent, or Basilisk. She translates Gen. xlix. 17: "There shall be for Dan a serpent by the way," etc., and in verse 22: "Joseph, branch of fruitfulness by the fountain. The daughters walk before the bull. Daughters, as in the English margin and the Vulgate, appears to be the Pleiades which precede the constellation Taurus, the bull, which is known to have been the ensign of Joseph, and afterwards of Ephraim."

This explains what has often puzzled me with regard to that verse so variously rendered. In the Portuguese Bible, translated from the Vulgate, it stands literally thus: "Joseph, son that grows, son that increases and beautiful of aspect, the daughters walked on the top of the wall." In Luther's translation from the Hebrew direct, it runs in German: "Joseph will grow, he will increase like a stream; the daughters stand forth in the government." This is certainly true of the English nation, and is perhaps a stronger point in the Identity than that of branches (female) running over the wall; the very word, bull, signifying rule and dominion to come, while the sign is depicted in the act of rushing on, as if over-throwing and dispersing his adversaries.

(To be continued.)

* The Shepherd bruising stone of Joseph (Gen. xlix. 24).—Ed.

A NEW VIEW OF THE FUTURE OF THE BRITISH.

By THE EDITOR.

THE Rev. C. R. N. Lyne has just sent us a post-card, according to the custom of some of our opponents, giving us the following interesting information. As Mr. Lyne sends us the report of the lecture in question with adhesion and approbation, we conclude he concurs in the probability of our nation's alleged future. We commend the view to the Rev. B. W. Savile, who, we are aware, is Mr. Lyne's friend, and suggest that these two gentlemen should consult, and favour us with a list of scriptural texts, which we may accept as the proofs of the various views of prophetic destiny reserved for this most unfortunate British-Gentile-Japhetic nation. Mr. Lyne, dating from Cheltenham, Wednesday, March 9, 1881, wrote us on his post-card as follows:—

> Mr. Joseph, a converted Jew, a good and holy man, lectured on Monday night here in the Corn Exchange. He proved conclusively that we are of Japhetic origin. He says, moreover, we are to lose all our possessions, but as we shall be the means of restoring the Jews to the Holy Land, they—the Jews—will pray to Almighty Jehovah for us, and that then God will raise up a saviour (probably Germany, he says) who will conquer our enemy Russia, who will have deprived us of India. We must expect punishment, being a Christian-Gentile nation, which has neglected its great privileges. There were present about 300 persons, a contrast to the last Anglo-Israel meeting, which was attended by thirty. Yours faithfully,
>
> C. R. N. L.

Our readers can see by the latter part of the above what actuated the communication. It was Mr. Lyne's almost passionate desire to destroy the belief in our Identity; to effect which he is willing to sink patriotism, love of country, national greatness, world-wide power, and Gospel usefulness. Were the Word of God on Mr. Lyne's side, one might give him credit for a sorrowful conviction that his nation is destined to be ruined. But since there is not a single text, nor part of a text to be found in the four corners of the Bible to support even one of Mr. Joseph's lugubrious predictions regarding this nation of ours, one does wonder with great amazement, that an Englishman like Mr. Lyne can be found in these realms so ready to take comfort in the fouling of his own national nest, so ready to rejoice in his people's discomfiture and disgrace, when for the shameful statement there is not a shadow of a proof in holy writ, and not a sign abroad that the matters alleged are likely to take place. Mr. Joseph, it appears, is a Jew. He is a "good and holy man." So, we believe, is Mr. S. Bergmann, and so, we know, was the late Rev. Dr. Margoliouth, both converted Jews. Mr. Joseph thinks this British nation is Japhetic. Mr. Bergmann and Dr. Margoliouth, on the contrary, both held, as we all know, the conviction that we are Shemitic and Hebrews. Who shall decide when converted Jews thus disagree? The matter is at large, and Mr. Joseph must prove his case before he can expect we British shall swallow his doleful, but happily unsupported prophecies, which (being, we suppose, a German Jew) he utters with a "light heart." He says, and Mr. Lyne greedily seconds the prophecy, that the British are to lose all their outland possessions, and that Russia is to take India from them. Is there Scripture warrant for these ideas? Not a shred. How dare then Mr. Joseph pose as a prophet, and why does Mr. Lyne favour us with his post-cards to publish his venomous statements, except it be simply to annoy? "But," Mr. Joseph adds, "this despoiled nation is to be the means of restoring the Jews to their land." Granted! Then by the sure Word of God, as we have often shown, the British must be Ten-Tribed Israel (Isa. xviii. 1, 7; Zeph. iii. 9; Jer. iii. 18; Hosea i. 11; Ezek. xxxvii. 1—28; John xi. 52, etc.).

Digitized by Google

Where do Messrs. Joseph and Lyne find that Israel is to "lose her possessions," and be despoiled of her heathen empire? Obad. 17, and Psalm ii. 8 tell a very different tale. Who then are these two false prophets who venture to speak evil of God's people, regarding whom the Lord has not spoken evil?

As to the German rescue of India from Russia, what part of God's Word supports Mr. Joseph's statement in this respect? and where does he or Mr. Lyne find any record of God's threatened punishment of Israel (or of the British as a Gentile Power) in the Holy Scriptures? If there be none such, how do they dare to promulgate that for which they have, as simple men, no authority from on high?

It is very possible Mr. Joseph's lecture may have been attended by a large audience, while the previous Anglo-Israel meeting may have drawn but few together. What then? Is that a test of the truth of any subject whatsoever? We all well know it is not. Audiences in such a place as Cheltenham depend on many influences. The weather is a potent one. The attraction of the title of the lecture, the novelty of the subject, a hundred things may cause this fickle British public to patronise one man, and leave the other, from ignorance, apathy, or other cause, without encouragment. Mr. Lyne leaves the matter just as he found it, uninjured by his evident desire to do our Identity harm. It will survive his poor attempt to hurt it. For, in fact, this is God's truth, and Mr. Lyne has about as much chance of prejudicing it by his post-cards, and his reiterated attempts to discredit it, as St. Paul had (to contrast a great man with one of a very small repute) when he went armed with legal processes to persecute the Church of Christ, and to commit men and women to prison for their alleged heretical opinions regarding the identity of the humble Nazarene with the Son of the living God. We have noticed Mr. Lyne in this instance in order that we might derive a lesson from his effort to injure the truth as it respects God's inheritance, but in future we think we shall do well to consign his post-cards where scores of other letters and post-cards are weekly deposited, torn, namely, to the editor's waste-paper basket.

BANNER SUPPLEMENTS.—During the month of April we hope to publish gratis the first of a series of Supplements. We trust our readers will endeavour to extend our circulation.

A WORD IN EDGEWISE.

BY EAST ANGLIAN.

(Continued from page 129.)

PART II.—BIBLICAL.

THIS is the age of little faith. For, although there is a deal of professed Christianity about, the Bible, as a whole, seems to be "out of date." Put on a sober look of high morality before the infidel; but don't commit yourself to any visionary theories or interpretations of prophecy, it will all come right in time, something is "sure to turn up" before long. Keep always a dignified silence. "There are so many things in the Old Testament, you know, that cannot be altogether explained—"patriotic wishes," &c.—that one must not mistake for the Word of God. The aspirations of the old Hebrew prophets have "distorted" the prophecies of God's grand purposes with reference to this world, to make one believe that the world will be a great Hebrew kingdom rather than the Christ's kingdom which is foreshadowed in the New Testament. In this manner the Word of God in the Old Testament has to be apologised for, because the Ten-Tribed House of Israel has been utterly ignored. But let us not be a party to this. There are many things in the Old Testament which we, perhaps, cannot explain; but that which is so plain that children can understand must command our implicit belief if Christianity is to retain its high estate; and those things which seem hard to the understanding must not be thrown aside until after our earnest and continual meditation has proved unavailing, and not then if we desire to retain anything; but we must ask for "more light."

One of the first facts to be noticed on commencing our search for Lost Israel is their "scattering" after the captivity. This is very plain from many Scriptures. One will suffice for our notice: "And they shall be wanderers among the nations" (Hos. ix. 17). I find that this statement is absolutely contradicted by the Rev. John Wilkinson; for in the report of a lecture by him, which lies before me, it is stated that the Israelites are the Nestorians, who are very snugly hidden in the mountains of Kurdistan, and by the lake Ooroomiah, in Persia. Of course the Bible is no authority beside the statement of a Doctor Somebody, who has "been to see, you know." But does it not seem strange that, during all the restless Westward movements of the Asiatic peoples just after the captivity, they (the captive Israelites) should, as it were, set their backs against this "whirlwind of nations," and hardly move from the place of their captivity? Does it not seem more in harmony with common sense, as well as with the Bible, that they should be carried away in the general current?

When we have once recognised the truth of this "scattering," we shall find it easier to accept the historical arguments; we shall wonder less at the apparent conglomeration of Tribes, which has resulted in the British nation of to-day.

We have been taken to task concerning our view of the "boasted mission of Christ"—viz., that He was "not sent but unto the lost sheep of the House of Israel." This is astonishing when we stand by the very plain declaration of Scripture. At the same time we do not lose sight of the larger issues which His coming involved. But we must not ignore the lucid statements of the Bible. It is written in Isa. liii. 8, "For the transgression of My people was He stricken." This is the prophetic forecast of the object of His sufferings, and Christ's own words confirm the prophecy. It is said that there is nothing in the New Testament about Anglo-Israelism. If there were not I should be ready at a moment's notice to throw up my belief in this theory. For although this subject is not exactly mentioned in the New Testament as "Anglo-Israelism," yet I am certain that our deductions from Old Testament promises and prophecies are not contradicted, but verified and confirmed in the New. There is no need for any bungling in the matter. We must not falsify the Old Testament by throwing away the promises made to the fathers, or by looking for some spiritual fulfilment only. For is it not true that Christ came to confirm the promises made to the fathers, to fulfil, in fact, the law and the prophets? It is plain from the New Testament that the promises made to Abraham and the fathers were to be fulfilled through the seed of faith. It is also plain from the Old Testament that Abraham's literal seed must be the inheritors of the promises. The latter proposition, however, is not allowed by our opponents, who thus falsify the Old Testament, in order, as they think, to verify the New. Let us then state our position. God chose a people from all the families of the earth, making certain unconditional promises to them through their forefathers. Now in order that they might not be only nominally, but really His people, God entered into a covenant with them, which covenant resulted in the promulgation of the Mosaic laws; and these laws must necessarily make of Israel God's witnessing people, which seems to have been the great aim of God's choice of them. But this was not the final or full covenant; this was but the preparation for another and better covenant. It was but the lane that led to the high road, the river that led to the sea, or as the Bible says, the schoolmaster to lead to Christ—that is, to the new covenant ("I will preserve Thee, and give Thee for a covenant of the people"—Isa. xlix. 8). For the covenant of the law was broken, and the curses overtook the disobedient; but the promises must be fulfilled, therefore came the new covenant. There was but one way: man of his own strength could not keep the law, therefore God sent His Son ("I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the House of Israel") to fulfil the law, and to bring the uncovenanted chosen once more into the bond of the covenant, the covenant that Christ keeps for them. It is, therefore, only as a Christian nation that Israel can be indeed God's chosen people, and inheritors of the promises. The Old Testament, then, explains the covenant of the Mosaic law, its observance by Israel, and at last its failure, with the consequent estrangement, for a time, of the greater part of the chosen race from God. The New Testament heralds and explains the new covenant, the Christian covenant, the covenant of faith. Our position is that the promises can only be fulfilled in the chosen people under Divine favour; that, as far as the Mosaic covenant is concerned, the chosen people are not under Divine favour; therefore, as taught in the New Testament, they can only be fulfilled under the new covenant. And if the New Testament is studied in this light, I do not think anyone will say that there is nothing about our theory there.

Digitized by Google

The next, and last point that I wish to consider in this paper is, that according to the Old Testament the chosen race must be a "righteous nation" before entering into possession of Palestine, which means, according to the New Testament, a "Christian nation;" and therefore if a Christian nation, in possession of the blessings of the promises. The Bible is full of proofs of this point, but we will mention one: "Open ye the gates (Judah's) that the righteous nation which keepeth the truth may enter in" (Isa. xxvi. 2). In verse 15 the position of this nation is very clearly stated: "Thou hast increased the nation, O Lord, Thou hast increased the nation; Thou art glorified; Thou hast removed it far unto all the ends of the earth." All these points so plainly indicate that the British nation, if not indeed of Hebrew origin, is enjoying the blessings of the promises, and we can only say that if the Ten Tribes of the chosen race are not to be found in Britain and her colonies, they are nowhere, and must have been swallowed up during some great cataclysm in Asia of which we have no record, to appear perhaps at some future time as Lord Lytton's "Coming Race," which exists only in imagination.

I wish, in my next, to say a little upon the "historical" argument.

(To be continued.)

LIEUT.-COL. W. H. LARKINS ON THE SEPARATION OF JUDAH FROM ISRAEL.

A MEETING of the British-Israel Association of Hastings was held at 26, Cambridge-road on Friday evening, March 4, 1881, when a paper, contributed by Col. Larkins, was read by the hon. sec., Mr. Mitchell.

The paper was entitled, "The Separation of Judah from His Brethren" (Deut. xxxiii. 7). Col. Larkins stated that a conclusive argument against the view maintained by some, that the fusion of the Tribes had already taken place, and the modern Jews were the only representatives of the Twelve Tribes, was the text, "Hear, Lord, the voice of Judah, and bring him unto his people; let his hands be sufficient for him, and be Thou an help to him from his enemies." Moreover, the Jews did not entertain that view, and they did not claim to be other than the Two Tribes of Judah and Levi. It would be well to bear in mind that Judah had to return to his brethren, and the point they had to look to was, had this taken place, and if so, when and where? He maintained that the prophecies referring to the return of Judah to his brethren had not yet been accomplished, and their fulfilment was still in the future. It might be urged by some that the separation of Judah took place on the disruption of the kingdom after the death of Solomon; but they must remember that when God rent the kingdom from Solomon, He said that He would not rend the whole kingdom, but would give his son one tribe—that tribe was Benjamin. Again, on the captivity of the Ten Tribes it was stated "there was none left but the Tribe of Judah only" (2 Kings xvii. 18); but on that occasion also Benjamin remained with Judah. After the space of seventy years those three Tribes—Judah, Levi, and Benjamin—returned to their own land; but the Ten Tribes were still in exile, and had never returned. After some further remarks, the speaker went on to say that the Jews on their return from captivity were never restored to their former state of prosperity; they were few in number and without a king. The main links which connected the two Houses of Israel, might be said to be broken on the separation of the Tribes after the death of Solomon; one link only remained; for as long as one of the Ten Tribes remained with Judah, the separation of the two Houses was not complete. He mentioned the fact that when Christ approached Jerusalem for the last time, the people cried, "Hosannah! Blessed is the King of Israel that cometh in the name of the Lord." They there found Him termed King of Israel. But when the brotherhood between Judah and Israel was broken, and the Accused brought before Pilate, they no longer met with the term, King of Israel. Pilate asked Him, "Art Thou the King of the Jews?" The brotherhood was broken, but the separation of the Two Tribes did not take place then, for there was work left for the apostles and disciples of our Lord, who were chiefly of the Tribe of Benjamin. As St. John was the beloved apostle, so there was the beloved Tribe; and they had every reason to believe that St. John and the other Galilean fishermen were of the Tribe of Benjamin. Now came the question, Was that Tribe implicated in any way with the crucifixion? Decidedly no. Judas, the betrayer, was a Jew of the Tribe of Judah. It was the Jews who were the opponents of the Gospel, and persecuted the disciples even to the death. It was impossible to believe that the Benjamites could have taken any share in the crucifixion, when they saw that after the death of the Lord they were carrying on the work of evangelisation, of which they had ample proof in the Acts of the Apostles. That duty they carried out until shortly before the destruction of Jerusalem; but when they saw "evil appearing from the North," as warned by the prophet Jeremiah, "Jerusalem encompassed with armies," as warned by our Lord Himself, they left the city; and historians said that after the first attack on the city by the Romans, when they fell back to Ptolemais, all the Christian inhabitants of Jerusalem, who were chiefly Benjamites, left the city and fled to Pella, East of the Jordan, in the province of Decapolis; then, and not till then, was Judah separated from his people, and the prayer of Moses for the return of Judah to his people was still unfulfilled.

Digitized by Google

The paper concluded as follows:—Since the above was written, there has appeared in the pages of the BANNER of the 29th December, the "Prayer of Judah for all Israel, to which I would call considerable attention, as a further proof that the Jews do not consider themselves the representatives of the Ten Tribes." The prayer is as follows:—"May the Omnipresent have mercy on our brethren, the whole House of Israel, who are in trouble and captivity, whether between (or by) sea or between (or by) land, and bring them forth from oppression to enlargement, from darkness to light, and from bondage to freedom, now, speedily, and in a short time, and let us say, Amen." It would be well to observe the term applied by the Jews themselves to their lost brethren—viz., the whole House of Israel, agreeing exactly with that applied in Ezek. xxxvii. 11, xi. 15. This prayer was forwarded to the BANNER by Mr. Marcus Bergmann, a Christian Judah-Israelite. It was translated from the Jewish Prayer-book, and is offered up continually by the Jews for their brethren of the whole House of Israel. Let our opponents in Hastings take note of this.

[From the Hastings Observer.]

THE METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

WE are glad to report that the above Association is at work, and if not as vigorously as during last year, yet as actively as its funds will admit. Lectures were delivered under its auspices by Mr. Douglas A. Onslow, at Manchester on March 21, and at Preston on March 22, besides two by the same gentleman previously at Leamington. It is hoped that lectures will be resumed at the offices of the Association, in the Strand, London, ere long; a proposal to that effect being, we understand, under consideration. We are glad to know that the debt pressing on the Society is now nearly liquidated, and we trust a course of usefulness and activity is commencing again, for an association which, being the Metropolitan, ought to be the leader in Identity work. Provincial associations, however (especially that at Oldham) are now showing greater vitality than our London Israelites, and this in all earnestness, we think, should not be allowed by our Metropolitan friends.

THE CHIEF RABBI OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

ONE who watches eagerly for the progress of our cause throughout the world, takes exception—justly, we think—to the reported sentiments of the Chief Rabbi of New South Wales, as published, on Mr. H. J. Henty's authority, at page 35 of this year's BANNER. Our friend says that the Rabbi's preaching cannot be deemed a proof of the "growth of Identity views," "for the central idea is nothing of the kind. It is something totally different, and shows that Jews, Chief Rabbi and all, to be Jews only outwardly—not religiously—men who require the present Judenhass and Judenheitze, and all the persecutions which can be raised against them, to make them go to their only one and really promised land. For what did the Chief Rabbi set forth? That 'the promised land of the Jews was every country where they enjoyed religious liberty and social equality.' Is that how the words of all the prophets are to be fulfilled, beginning with Ezekiel and the rebuilding of the temple on the very hill of Zion at Jerusalem."

We hope our Melbourne correspondent knows better than the Chief Rabbi, and can point out to him his foolish error.

"THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL," EVEN IN REGARD TO PUBLIC JOURNALISM;

DEAN STANLEY BEING THE WITNESS.

THE following from the Daily Telegraph of January 11, 1880, introduces Dean Stanley to the reader in a new character—namely, that of a witness to our Identity; since he adds his testimony to all that has gone before, to prove that in reference to public journalism, we are, compared with other nations, nay, even with America, "the head, and not the tail, above only, and not beneath;" "the Eternal being still our strength and refuge." The quotation is as follows:—

DEAN STANLEY ON THE ENGLISH PRESS.—Dean Stanley, in the course of an eloquent sermon on Sunday morning, from the text, "God is our refuge and our strength," spoke of the Press as "that mighty engine which is wielded as it never before has been wielded in this or any other country." "We may often and justly complain," he continued, "of the vileness and folly and vice which a section of the public journals foster and favour . . . and of the bitterness with which the so-called religious journals of the day address themselves to inflame, pervert, and exaggerate every topic of personal and party rancour. But I speak of the great organs of public opinion in all their branches, and I assert that in the reasonableness, in the purity, and in the moderation of their utterances, there is, amidst all these shortcomings, a ground of hope for the future of the English people that will require generations to shake. Compare them with the like journals of other nations, notably with those whose language and utterances are so unworthy of the great Republic of the West, and we must admit that even in those transitory things the Eternal is still our strength and refuge."

Let the reader reflect! Here is a dignitary of the English Church, very capable of speaking with authority on this one point, and he pronounces that in regard to public journalism this British nation, compared with all others, is facile princeps. In other respects and particulars we have accumulated evidence of the same fact from scores of sources, and our pile of articles ready for the BANNER on this one point, each producing testimony, ab extrâ, to prove that the British are in all respects "the head and not the tail" of nations, grows in magnitude daily.

There cannot be two nations each pre-eminent in all matters. There cannot be two heads of nations, two nations always the chief. God's Word assigns that enviable post of pre-eminence to "Israel obedient," Israel hearkening to the word of the Lord after a period of disobedience. On the other hand, facts now show that the ostensible people of Israel, who are to-day the Jews, so far from being the head, are the tail of races; and so far from never being the tail, are, in truth, the most despised and hated of peoples (Germany and other lands witnessing the fact); and constitute, in truth, the most down-trodden and contemned of all the races of the earth. What then? The fact is, that the consent of mankind—that of leading statesmen, British and foreign, of divines like Dean Stanley, of scientists and literary men—all point to the British as pre-eminent in all walks and branches of national life, such pre-eminence dating distinctly since this nation "Reformed" its national religion in the sixteenth century; since, in short, it became "Israel obedient," "Israel hearkening to God's Word."

Will not our opponents—Dr. Bonar, Mr. Savile, and that band of clergymen and non-conforming ministers who oppose our Identity—tell us calmly why this test should not, added to all the rest, suffice to close the case, and prove to their satisfaction, as it has to ours, that the British are indeed Ten-Tribed Israel? Here is a clear prediction of God's Word found in Deut. xxviii. 1 and 13, and in many other portions of the Book. It is fulfilled exactly as written, in the British nation. So many facts concur in proving this case, that the very superabundance of the evidence compels the submission of the judgment, and demands assent to the truth of God's Word, and the fulfilment of His spoken will. For here we have combined

1. The declension of the favoured nation into disobedience.

Digitized by Google

2. Their loss of God's blessing in that state.
3. Their return to a condition of obedience and submission.
4. Followed by the immediate appearance of the nation indicated, supreme in all branches of national life, incomparably superior to their surrounding Gentile competitors, "the head (in fact) and not the tail" in all things, as predicted.

The facts, as they bear upon the British races, exactly fulfil the prophecy, not one iota is wanting; there is not a pin's point of discrepancy; not a hair's-breadth difference. Why must this evidence, then, be put aside? Wherein is it defective? What is the element of weakness it contains to destroy its probative value? To these questions we receive no answer. And therefore we reiterate, for the thousandth time, that our case is proved, our contention is established; God's Word is literally true; Israel is found; Israel of the Ten Tribes, long lost, is now discovered in the British; exactly responding in all particulars to the prophecies; and erect among the nations, "the head and not the tail, above only, and not beneath," as God Almighty said they should be. Israel, praise ye the Lord.

THE RECENT PAMPHLET OF THE REV. B. WREY SAVILE.

By J. G. T.

In your No. for February 23, you re-publish a letter addressed to the Record by Rev. B. W. Savile, in which the ex-Israelite informs the world in general that he has just learned the chief cause "of his late secession." As a rule the cause precedes the effect, but this being an urgent case the laws of nature were, no doubt, reversed in order to allow the effect to precede the cause. And the cause—when it has come—is certainly astonishing, even more astonishing than the effect. Mr. Savile says, "I supposed it possible that the Beth Khumri might be the same people as the Cimmerians;" and further on, "It by no means follows, as I once thought, that the Khumri and the Khumry, or Cymry, or Cimmerians, represented one and the same people. I have recently had an opportunity of obtaining a transcript from the British Museum of these two names, and find they have only one single letter in common—the letter a." This is a very transparent sophism. It may satisfy the editor of the Record, but those who are acquainted with Mr. Savile's writings will know that he never held any such theory as that the names Khumri and Cimmerian were identical. His words are these: "In this inscription, there is a notice of one Tiuspa, chief of the Cimmerii, and Esarhaddon mentions having destroyed this Tiuspa, and all his army. It is more than probable that these Cimmerians were gradually absorbed by the Beth Khumri. And in course of time it is not unreasonable to conclude that the one dominant race of Israel, to whom was promised the multiplicity of seed, should give its name to that portion of the Celtic tribes now known as the descendants of the Cymry, pronounced Khumri by the Welsh." Mr. Savile's opinion, therefore, was that the Cimmerians proper were almost exterminated by Esarhaddon, and that the remainder were absorbed by the Beth Khumri, and, in process of time, lost their name. Consequently, the question is not, Are the terms Khumri and Cimmerian identical? but, Are Khumri and Khumry identical? No one can deny that they are, and Mr. Savile himself, in "Are We Israelites?" not only shows clearly that the names are the same, but he proves on altogether independent grounds, that the two peoples are the same also. Mr. Savile makes another attempt to delude the editor of the Record. After dilating on the disagreement in the spelling of Cimmerian and Khumri, he remarks that, hence, there is "less identity between the Khumri and the Cymry than there is between Persia and Russia, who are as distinct as a Semitic and Japhetic race necessarily must be." This, as usual, is an exaggeration, for if the Persians and Russians are as distinct as any two races can be, it is hard to understand how there can be a still greater distinction between the Cimmerians and Khumri. But as exaggerations and distortions are essential to an anti-Anglo-Israel effusion, we may overlook them. What Mr. Savile wishes to impress on the editor of the Record is, that the Cymry were radically distinct from the Khumri, that while the latter were Semitic the Cymry were Japhetic. By Cymry, of course, is meant the Cimmerians, but instead of this racial difference being a new and important discovery on his part, it is simply what he laid down in his first pamphlet: "These Cimmerians were descended from Japheth, and necessarily distinct from the Semitic race of Israel" (p. 19). To put the most charitable interpretation on these tactics, it must be said that the rev. gentleman is in a state of mental confusion. But Mr. Savile's argument is of a double nature, and he will have to make a double recantation before his change of views can be justified. He proves the Sacæ to be Israelites from many sources, and especially from the Behistun rock. "Over the head of the last figure in the row, which is surmounted with a high-peaked cap, exactly like that worn by the ancient Israelites, and a cast of countenance totally unlike the rest, is seen the following sentence, 'This is Iskunka, the chief of the Sacæ.'" Is Mr. Savile able to obliterate this, and the many other decisive facts he gives regarding the Sacæ? If not, they are Israelites to-day as surely as they were in 1879, and Rawlinson declares that "in the Babylonian transcripts of the Achæmenian inscriptions, the term which replaces the Saka of the Persian and Scythic columns is Gimiri, a term which elsewhere always means 'the Tribes.' The ethnic name of Gimmeri (the equivalent of the Cimmerii) first occurs in the cuneiform records of the time of Darius Hystaspes as the Semitic equivalent of the Aryan name of Saka" (p. 20). Again, on p. 29, we are told that "all Welsh antiquity agrees in naming Hu the Mighty to have led the first band of colonists among the Cymry to the white Isle of Albion from the Summer-land of the Crimea, which, as an ancient book called 'Varaka' states, was 'then possessed by the Sacæ or Saxons.' This supports the opinion of Rawlinson of the close connection of the Cymbric Celts and the Sacæ." Mr. Savile is evidently anxious for us to believe that the Welsh have sprung from these Gimiri, and there is no reason why we should object to do so, seeing it unites them with the Israelitish Sacæ, and thus, in addition to proving that the Welsh are not descended from the Khumri, he has to prove that the English are in no way descended from the Sacæ. On p. 10, Dr. T. Nicholas is ridiculed for asserting that "we are not Anglo-Saxons at all," but there is really not much to choose between the two gentlemen, except that Dr. Nicholas has the courage to adhere to his convictions.

Newcastle.

IN THE PLACE WHERE IT SHALL BE SAID TO THEM, LO-AMMI — THERE IT SHALL BE SAID UNTO THEM, "SONS OF THE LIVING GOD."—HOSEA I. 10.

One who, being nameless, anonymously delights to keep us constantly reminded that we are fallible and mortal, as well as foolish and perverse, has sent to a friend a condemnation of what we once wrote regarding the true reading of Hosea i. 10. The gist of his objection, which now lies before us, is that in that matter we have been guilty of nothing less than forgery. The words are these :—

"He (Philo-Israel) says, that Hosea i. 10 states that 'in the place where it shall be said to them, Ye are not My people,' etc., whereas it says nothing of the kind, but 'where it was said,' etc. As he gives the words in italics he must know that they are not a mistake, but a forgery of his. How dare he so alter God's Word? Further, as the promise, 'Ye shall be called sons of the living God,' etc., is to be fulfilled in the place where it was said, 'Ye are not My people,' it must be after their return to Palestine, for it was there where Hosea said it, nearly fifty years before their exile."

We are prepared, of course, for a good deal of obloquy as editor of one of the leading Identity journals of the day; but we were, of course, startled, that the charge of forgery in respect to God's Word should also be laid upon us. That is a serious matter, as Rev. xxii. 18, 19 will testify. In order, however, to set ourselves right, we thought it proper to send the accusation and our admission that we had interpreted the passage as alleged, to a learned Jew, a Jewish teacher of his own Hebrew language, and to ask him for his candid opinion on the disputed point. His answer, now before us, is to the effect following:—

"I have read the letter you send me, and I think before charging you with forgery, by altering God's Word, the writer, if he is a Christian minister, as you say he is, ought to be acquainted with the text in the original. If he will look at Isaiah iv. 3, he will find the same word used, קרוש יאמר (Kādôsh Yêâmêr) 'Shall be called holy.' The word יאמר (yêâmêr) is the one employed in Hosea i. 10, in both places, and is future in both cases ('Shall be called'). The ignorance of the Christian minister ought to be exposed."

We hope now the traducer of his brethren will henceforth hide his diminished head. We allude to the matter, not so much to put our foolish, self-satisfied adversary to shame, as to inform those unaware of it that the passage is not correctly translated in our Bibles, and should be read as follows, "Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured, nor numbered, and it shall come to pass (that) in the place where it shall be said unto them, "Ye are not My people" (Lo-Ammi!) (there) it shall be said unto them, "The sons of the living God." Hosea was therefore speaking of a far distant time, and far distant place (Great Britain and 1880-81 A.D.), when he prophesied that it should be (in the then future) said to the Ten Tribes that they were "the sons of the living God" in the very spot where it should, also in the same time (then future, too, in Hosea's day) be declared of those same Israelites that they were Lo-Ammi, or "not My people."

The fulfilment is not far to seek to-day. Dr. Bonar, and those like him, never tire of crying out of the British, "Lo-Ammi! Lo-Ammi!" and the time where that prophetic cry is raised is the present day of nineteenth century grace; the place, the United Kingdom of Israel's home! In regard to the other part of the prophecy it is to-day the testimony of every opponent we have, that whatever opinions men may entertain regarding the British folk, it is clear and obvious that they are a Christian nation; nay, the most Christian nation extant on the face of the earth. The prophecy, then, is completely fulfilled, or is in complete course of fulfilment. In these very "Isles of the West," where Israel is now located (Isa. xxiv. 15), men who oppose our Identity (like our present libeller), are saying, we are "NOT Israel"; but in that very habitation of the Tribes, men are all united in the declaration that "after all is said and done," the Christian nation "par excellence" is also here. Israel, praise ye the Lord! not only for giving us, nationally, repentance, and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, but also for sending men like our revilers, who make it their mission, in fulfilling their contemptible prophetic destiny, to tell us to our face that we wrest and forge the Word of God to suit our own purposes, but that as for our Identity they have no interest in it, since the Anglo-Saxons are not God's people, but only a mongrel, Gentile, Japhetic race, who cannot be Israel, since they are the most godly, upright, righteous, truthtelling, honourable nation, of whom it may be truly stated that they are "CHRISTIANS." (John i. 12; 1 John iii. 1, 2; Rom. viii. 19; Phil. ii. 15.)

MANASSEH'S TESTIMONY THAT THE BRITISH ARE ISRAEL.

WE have received the following from a friend in Edinburgh, who states that one of the quotations comes from a Canadian Israelite as proof that the "British nation is identical with the Ten Lost Tribes of Israel;" the other as part of the contents of a New York paper, bearing testimony to the brotherhood between Ephraim and Manasseh. The first extract is what the Canadian forwards:—

It is quite clear that destiny, Providence, or whatever else we may please to call the supreme power which controls events, intends the Anglo-Saxon race to people the greater portion of the earth. The trouble in England is steadily promoting that end. For many years the Western States were mainly peopled by New England men, and to this day the influence of New England is predominant there; but in twenty years it is likely that the English element, which is so pronounced to-day in Virginia that Queen Victoria's birthday is a regularly observed fête day in Richmond, will become potent. In fact, it has been so in San Francisco, to some extent, for many years. The Irish emigration has for some time diminished, while the English has increased, and the land difficulties in England will undoubtedly have the effect of sending hitherward a class of English quite above the ordinary run of emigrants. Such men are planting themselves in Texas already, and there are many in Colorado.

The following appeared in a New York paper some time ago:—

THE ENGLISH RACE IN GREAT BRITAIN AND AMERICA.

To the Editor of "The Tribune."

SIR,—I send you a short extract from a letter lately received from a leading member of the London Bar, now holding an important official position under the British Government. From an extensive intercourse and correspondence with cultivated Englishmen, I am satisfied that the sentiments of good-will and friendship expressed in this communication are, in large part, shared by the countrymen of the writer; and you will, I am sure, agree with me that the publication of such expressions, evidently from the heart, and evidently typical in their character, will have a strong tendency to hasten the result, so ardently to be desired, to which my friend points in the conclusion of his letter:—

"Referring to the late International Prison Congress, I do not know whether the same thing struck others beside myself; but I was impressed with the absolute identity, to all essential purposes, of the English and Americans. It seemed to me impossible not to feel that the delegates from these two countries belonged to simply one and the same nation, and our continental visitors to other nations. I rejoice to think that it was so. The two nations have been kept apart, perhaps mainly by our fault, much too long. It is high time—if you, as an American, will allow me so to express my own feelings—that the absolute identity of the race, divided only by an accidental political distinction—for which England is responsible—should be as generally expressed as I believe it is at bottom generally felt. For myself, I look upon an American as simply a brother. But there is a strange tendency on each side, I think, to misunderstand the other, which I hope and believe will in time pass away. The Congress has, no doubt, in its degree, helped towards this."

E. C WINES.

FRESH INSTANCES OF SPIRITUAL GOOD DERIVED FROM BELIEF IN OUR IDENTITY; WITH REPORTS ALSO OF PROGRESS.

WE have been favoured by Mr. John Greig, of Sunderland, and by another friend in Canada, whom we shall name directly, with letters reporting joyful news of progress, and also of the Lord's blessing on Identity teaching to the souls of men. We take Mr. Greig's testimony first. He tells us that after one of his lectures he was visited by a member of his audience to learn more of the subject. His visitor, an old man, never enters a church or chapel, it appears, and has been a thorough Republican hitherto. The discussion in respect to David's throne has seemed to be the point which took firm hold of this individual; for he spent an hour with Mr. Greig searching the

Digitized by Google

Scriptures, intensely interested in the discovery of the truth in regard to this part of our evidence. May the impression deepen, and the Republican learn to value the Scriptural truth that British-Israel's polity can never exist as a Republic, but must always be linked to a monarchy.

Another of Mr. Greig's visitors had been an infidel and blasphemer; but hearing the truths of the Identity from Mr. Greig's lips they were blessed to his soul, and he thanked him with tears for leading him to the knowledge of them. The result was that he was himself rejoicing in the truth as it is in Jesus. He had set up the worship of God in his family, and declared that his own case was that of hundreds who could, if they would only speak out, tell a similar tale.

Mr. Greig mentions the case of a third person pointed out to him, in whom a similar change had been effected by contact with our Identity. This person was formerly a most desperate character, and the terror of his own family; but he, like the other, was now rejoicing in his soul's salvation. "I do not think it right to conceal the truth," writes Mr. Greig, "but desire to let it be known that the Identity, prayerfully and fully proclaimed is, under God, a mighty power in bringing to Christ even the most unpromising classes of our fellow men." Such testimony as this is invaluable, and should disarm those of our opponents who, being godly men, should recognise the Lord's hand in blessing His own work.

Our other correspondent, the Rev. George T. Harding, of Kirkdale, P. Q., Quebec, Canada, sends us most comforting, cheering news, which, by his permission, we hand on to our readers for their encouragement in turn. Sympathising with us in the amount of labour and discouragement we have experienced in pursuance of our editorial work, he tells us rightly, that a word now and then from a sincere but distant friend, might by God's blessing help to strengthen our hands. "On the whole," he writes, "I think there is everything to encourage us. Identity knowledge is spreading rapidly all over the world, and the progress towards a general belief is real and marked; quite as much so, in fact, as any of us ought to desire, seeing that it is the truth we proclaim, and that we wish it to take a deep hold of Society; for too quick a growth would not be a sign of health. I am thankful to say that this year past I have been much encouraged in my own efforts to win people to a belief in the Identity. Many to whom I lent pamphlets on the subject have joyfully acknowledged their belief in it, and some who, when I first tried to influence them in its favour, actually opposed it, have since been convinced, and given their assent to its truth. One instance of the latter kind I may notice, from the encouragement it is calculated to give. The person to whom I refer, when I first spoke to him about the Identity two years ago, seemed quite indifferent, and would not take the trouble so much as to read the pamphlets offered to him. I had very little hopes of him at that time. Afterwards he read something on the subject, but then began to argue against it whenever it was mentioned. About two months ago, however, I was rather startled one day by his saying, 'It is too good to be true,' and I was still more surprised a few weeks ago by his telling me that he had taken the trouble to go over all the chief passages in the Bible relating to the question, carefully examining them with their contexts and references, and had come to the conclusion that the Identity was absolutely true, and could not be overthrown. This surely is a triumph for the truth, and should make us take courage and have patience."

Our friend, Mr. Harding, gives us instances of clergy in his neighbourhood who are more or less favourably inclined to accept our views, and alludes to lectures he has himself given, and sermons he has himself preached with success and acceptance, advocating the Identity. He adds what pleases us greatly, that "he is quite at one with ourselves on the interpretation of Psa. ii. 8, which has been met in England by such severe animadversion in clerical quarters. "I cannot see," he says, "why your view should have caused so much disturbance, and so many unkind and unchristian words."

No more do we. We are sure our fellow believers throughout the world will be thankful to the Rev. George Harding for his kind and cheering message. Such encouragement is greatly needed by the sometimes desponding writer of these lines; for the bitter opposition of clerical opponents, and the indifference of the world at large in regard to our subject, is a trial to faith, as our friends everywhere well know by experience; but such cheering facts as Mr. Harding's letter gives us, send us back to the foundations of our glorious belief, and recall us to the recollection that our Identity is based on our God's faithfulness to His covenant, and His oath; and that however impatiently we may regard the slow devolution of His designs, God will certainly work out His purposes, and in His own good time, and in His own good way, bring all to pass which He faithfully promised to His people Israel. Israel, praise YE the Lord.

GIBRALTAR.

WE had published our volume on "The Geography of the Gates" before the subjoined record of a little known fact had reached us. It comes from authentic sources and proves how miraculously that "Gate" was reserved for our nation at a critical moment. Its surrender to Spain again was trembling in the balance in A.D. 1782, when lo! the Spanish ambassador elected to have back for Spain the two Floridas, instead of "The Rock," although that election was contrary to his instructions! So wonderfully does God overrule "the lot of His inheritance," and reserve for them the means to dominate the earth, in spite of all obstacles in the way! Our information comes from the Public Record Office, London, and is to the effect following:—

The anecdote about D'Aranda, whose full name was Don Pedro Pablo Abaraca y Bolea, Count of Aranda, is to be found in Gaetan de Raxis de Flassan's "Histoire Générale et Raisonnée de la Diplomatie Française," vol. vii. p. 350. His words are given as follows:—"Il est des momens où il faut savoir offrir sa tête à sa patrie. J'accepte les deux Florides à la place de Gibraltar, quoique ce soit contraire à mes instructions; et je signe la paix." This appears to have taken place in August 1782, at Versailles. Flassan gives a detailed account of the negotiations, and if any further extracts will be of service, I can send them.

NATIONAL SPECIAL PRAYERS AND THANKSGIVINGS.

OUR friend the Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille, the vicar of Oldham, has been at the pains to collect from the records of his Church-chest at Oldham a list of the occasions between the years A.D. 1665 and 1783 when special forms of prayer, with or without thanksgiving, were issued by authority of the Crown of these realms, and used accordingly in his parish. The occasions amounted in number, as we find by counting them up, to no less than 78, besides the prescribed services set out in our Book of Common Prayer for "Prayer with Thanksgiving," such as the 5th of November, the 3rd of January, and May 29 (1660, the Restoration, after the martyrdom of King Charles I.).

These many national observances, prescribed by order of the ministers of the Crown, were in recognition of national wants, and national dangers, arising from war, by sea or by land; for deliverance from invasion intended by the French; for protection from war and tumults; for peace restored; for preservation of the Protestant faith; for those suffering persecution abroad on account of their faith; for help in war against France and Spain (A.D. 1702); to humble the nation with reference to a late dreadful storm and tempest (1703); for a late glorious victory over the French and Bavarians at Blenheim (1704); for preservation from the Plague (1723), &c.

Digitized by Google

Some of the proclamations are of a character which offers blind evidence to our Identity. Such was one dated 1707, where the object of the prayer and thanksgiving is stated, inter alia, to be "for beseeching Almighty God to give all Her Majesty's subjects hearts disposed to become one people," and to render Him most hearty thanks for the wonderful and happy conclusion of the treaty for the union of Her Majesty's two kingdoms of England and Scotland.

The rev. vicar of Oldham, in sending us the list of the above proclamations, observes that the forms themselves are very interesting, and speak of this nation constantly as "Thy people." "But it has struck me," says Mr. Cachemaille, "in reading them over, and in making the list, that,—

"1. This nation used to recognise the providence of God both in prosperity and adversity far more nationally than it does now.

"2. In some of the instances in this list the fast and humiliation very narrowly precede the triumph, deliverance, and thanksgiving, showing the answer almost as soon as the prayer.

"3. Such constantly occurring occasions of public fast and thanksgiving kept the national Church before the nation as a living engine and a working reality.

"4. We have had successes and reverses frequently during the last 50 years, and more especially quite lately in Africa and India. Where are our prayers and thanksgivings?

"5. Would it not encourage our soldiers and sustain generals if they knew we were praying for them (Exod. xvii. 9, seq.)?

"6. We have troubles in Ireland, as they had in 1689 (see list), but we have no prayers.

"7. I do not remember when the last special form of prayer was issued to this present generation, but I remember that the fact was ridiculed, and the archbishop accused of bad grammar —the idea of prayer seemed foreign to people.

"8. The German Emperor was ridiculed for special prayer and thanksgiving during the Franco-Prussian war.

"9. Either all war and fighting is wrong, in which case we ought to utterly desist from it, or war is a necessary element in our political world, and is both just and right. If so, there is very good reason for public fast and public thanksgiving.

"10. The BANNER might remind the nation that we are prayerless—hence reverses, troubles, chastenings, and lack of peace."

So far Mr. Cachemaille. We do indeed confirm his last written sentiments. "The enemy is coming in upon us like a flood," and surely the Lord has permitted this inroad on His people by allowing us to fall into a nationally careless, prayerless, unthankful condition from which there would certainly be no recovery unless we had been Israel; and unless, being Israel, the promise of the Spirit of the Lord and the banner of the Holy One and Deliverer had been ours. Of final recovery we are sure; but meanwhile our national state is very critical; but Jesus is at the helm, and we may look to Him for certain help.

WHITAKER'S ALMANACK FOR 1880 GIVES BLIND EVIDENCE TO OUR IDENTITY.

AT page 202 of Whitaker's Almanack for 1880, under the head of The British Empire, occur the following statements, which support our case in reference to British Identity with Lost Israel in many particulars. The British Empire is (Whitaker declares) "grander than those of Greece or Rome," or "any other," "it is more beneficent," it "brings freedom," it is a "righteous empire" for it brings "justice," it "frees religion," its polity is the truest "commonwealth the world has yet seen," and the figures added support the description. If all this together does not describe the House of Israel, as set forth in the prophecies of the Word of God, we are at a loss to know what language means. An empire with 287,000,000 of souls for subjects, with a revenue of £163,000,000 per annum, a commerce reaching to £932,000,000 a year, being a little under the whole national debt, must be the "chief of nations" and "Lost Israel" found. We think so! and we ask our readers after study of the facts to say whether we are not right. Whitaker's statements are these:—

"THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

"In the following brief table an abstract is given (approximately) of the area, population, revenue, public debt, and commerce of the British Empire. The figures given are near enough for the purpose, although it is to be regretted that the precise amounts cannot be procured. The table, short as it is, presents a result unparalleled in this world's history. The British Empire is grander than those of Greece or Rome, or any other, and it may be safely asserted that its rule is more beneficent. Wherever the flag of England floats there is freedom. Justice is impartially administered, and no man can be punished except for infringements of the law. Religion also is free. With all its anomalies, the British Empire under its present Sovereign presents the nearest approach to a true Commonwealth that the world has yet seen. It would be well if schoolmasters would impress this upon their pupils, and at the same time make them better acquainted with the geography, productions, and capabilities of the various countries owning obedience to English rule."

Name of Country.	Area in sq. miles	Populat'n.	Revenue.	Public Debt.	Imports and Exports.
			£	£	£
Great Britain and Ireland ...	121,115	35,500,000	83,000,000	778,000,000	614,000,000
Indian Possessions, etc.	1,568,254	241,000,000	52,000,000	140,000,000	103,000,000
Other Eastern Possessions ...	30,000	3,700,000	2,600,000	1,800,000	39,000,000
Australasia	3,173,319	2,500,000	16,000,000	60,000,000	88,000,000
North America	3,620,500	4,000,000	5,000,000	27,000,000	39,000,000
Guiana, &c.	100,000	200,000	375,000	500,000	5,000,000
Africa	270,000	1,500,000	2,100,000	5,000,000	12,500,000
West Indies, &c.	12,707	1,140,000	1,260,000	1,050,000	10,000,000
European Possessions	120	160,000	220,000	250,000	2,000,000
Various Settlements.....	96,171	200,000	550,000	650,000	2,000,000
Totals	8,982,177	287,400,000	163,105,000	1,014,250,000	£932,500,000

THE JEW.

BY A. D. JOHNMAN, OF PERTH.

I EXTRACT the following from the Insurance Agent for November last, and submit the same to you, in the hope of getting some information or explanation from yourself or some of your "knowing" readers:—

"Dr. S. Gibbon, medical officer of health for the Holborn district, in his report for the past year, states that whatever may be the cause, there is no doubt but that a Jew's life in London, is, on an average, worth twice as many years as a Christian's. The Hebrews (Jews) of the Metropolis are notoriously exempt from tubercular and scrofula taint. It is very rare that one meets with pulmonary consumption amongst them. The Medical officer of one of the largest schools has remarked that their children do not die in anything like the same ratio as Gentile children, and in the district of Whitechapel the medical officer of health has reported that on the North side of High-street, occupied by the Jews, the average rate is 20 per 1,000, while on the South side, occupied by English and Irish, it is 43 per 1,000."

Such is the extract; it would be a curious calculation, and might afford satisfaction to know whether the Irish make up the odds against us, or if the happy result in favour of the Jews is a consequence of their strict Levitical habits.

"THE TIMES" ON THE "GATES."—On January 27, 1880, the Times, in a leading article on the trade of India, writing of the seaport towns on the coasts, such as Goa, Kurrachee and Bombay, made use of the following words, showing that the idea of a seaport being synonymous with a "Gate" is familiar to our public writers now. Let our opponents note this fact. The editor wrote as follows:—"Goa would appear to be indicated by nature as another emporium on the long line of coast stretching to the South, but it is in Portuguese hands, and the merchants of Bombay would probably regard with jealousy any attempt to make it an open port. After the great project of the abolition of all import duties except on salt and liquors, which was entertained at the India Office in the happier days of Indian finance, the removal of the impediments which practically block some of the best trade-gates of the peninsula must rank next in importance."

Digitized by Google

SURGEON-GENERAL GRANT, OF CHELTENHAM, ON OUR IDENTITY.

THE following is a short résumé of the lecture delivered by Dr. Grant, President of the Cheltenham Anglo-Israel Association, at the Corn Exchange, Cheltenham, on Monday, November 29, 1880. The object of the lecturer was to answer some objections raised to Our Identity; and, omitting some preliminary observations, was to the following effect :—

"In his address that afternoon, what he purposed (he said) was simply to give them the result of his own study on the subject. Dr. Grant then proceeded at some length, and with many Bible references, to speak of the special promises which God had made to Abraham, and repeated to Isaac, both of a temporal and spiritual nature. Those promises were, undoubtedly, spiritual in their reference to Christ alone, but he contended that they also contained the assurance of blessings that had not yet been granted to those in whose seed the promises were to be fulfilled. They were to be fulfilled in the latter days, which were the present days, and accordingly they had begun to be manifested. The question was frequently asked, What did it matter whether or not the British people were the Ten Tribes of Israel. St. Paul answered this question in the Epistle to the Romans, by saying that unto the Jews were committed the oracles of God. It was idle and unjust on the part of their opponents to say that in making the claim they did they exhibited the righteousness of the Pharisees. There was a pride that aped humility, and they were not the best friends of England who were continually complaining of its profligacy, instead of acknowledging that in spite of all its unworthiness, it was the most righteous nation in the world, and kept and blessed as such by the inspiration of God. Israel was called a holy nation, not because of her righteousness, but because it was consecrated by God to His own special purpose—just as the vessels of the temple were called holy; and in that way only could they apply the epithet to themselves. All that they asserted was that the Gospel was to be carried all over the world by God's own chosen people, and that the Gentiles were to be partakers in all its benefits. Then there was the promised possession by Israel of the lands and Gates of her enemies. He maintained that the prophecies and promises as to the Gates were separate and distinct from those relating to the land, although in the promise that Israel should possess Canaan the Gates were included. Yet, in the promise of the Gates the land was not included. In this argument he was supported by Scripture against the mere personal opinion of those who objected. In Deuteronomy xiv. 2, it was declared that Israel should be the chief of the nations of the earth, and other prophecies clearly showed that she was to be a great military and naval nation, in all these points resembling England at present, which, although in herself but comparatively a small island, yet had become the cradle of a strong naval power, that from earliest times had been victorious against her enemies, as well also had her armies. Having referred to the points of alleged identity with the Lost Tribes, Dr. Grant advised a study of the language of the Israelites and of the causes why it had changed into the present British language, and having answered several of Dr. Bonar's arguments, he concluded by remarking that the whole subject was one which ought to commend itself, not to ministers only, whose general kindness be admitted, but also to all laymen who were anxious about the history of their country and its prosperity, and the Word of God. He recommended them all to search out the truth from that Word, omitting the annotations or headings of chapters as forming no part of the inspired Word of God. The lecture was listened to very attentively, and the lecturer was awarded a vote of thanks.

ISRAEL'S HEATHEN AND COLONIAL EMPIRES.

THE following dates three years ago, November, 1879. The numbers, even then, of population, and the area of the colonies and India, were so enormous that the mind almost fails to realise how vast is our Empire beyond the sea, and how it is aiming at that universal dominion God solemnly promised He would provide for His people Israel in the latter day. The following appeared in the Times, of November 29, 1879 :—

"AN IMPERIAL DOMAIN.—The annual 'Statistical Abstract' now issued for British India, following that which relates to the colonies, passes our possessions one by one before us. Three great territories overshadow all the rest. British India is described as having an area of 897,004 square miles, with a population of 189,613,238 (the colonial volume put it at 190,663,923 in 1871), and 37,041,259 inhabited houses. The area of the Native States is estimated at 589,315 square miles, with a population of 50,325,457 souls, bringing the area up to 1,486,319 square miles, with 239,938,695 persons living upon it. There are also in India 196 square miles of French Possessions, with 259,981 inhabitants; and 1,610 square miles of Portuguese Possessions, with their 527,517 people, showing for all India 1,488,125 square miles, and 240,726,193 souls. British India has, in round numbers, 98 million males and 92 million females; 67 million children under 12 years of age, and 123 million older persons. There are in British India 139 million Hindoos, 41 million Mahomedans, three million Buddhists and Jains, above a million Sikhs, and 900,000 Christians. Passing to another Continent, we find the Dominion of Canada estimating its area at about 3,500,000 square miles, more than half this vast country having been acquired by purchase from the Hudson's Bay Company. About 375 million acres of this purchase are said to be agricultural land, which is outside the federated Provinces of Canada, and yet to be brought under cultivation. The population of British North America is stated at 3,748,858 in 1871, exclusive of Indians. There remains to be added the 'fifth continent'—Australia—with a population described as only 2,233,100 in 1874, but with an area of 3,116,042 square miles. Our other colonies raise the total area of our possessions beyond the seas to an amount approaching 7,900,000 square miles."

Reviews.

Fifty Reasons Why the Anglo-Saxons are Israelites of the Lost House of Israel. By Rev. W. H. Poole, D.D. Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C. Price 6d.

WE can highly recommend this work, which, we believe, comes to us originally from Canada. It is written clearly, carefully, and convincingly. The subject is divided by Dr. Poole into fifty sections, regarding each of which he has much to say, and says it well. We have received from friends to our cause notices of this work, and the good it is calculated to do, which we cannot re-produce for lack of room, but which testify, as we do, to its usefulness. The work does not profess to be exhaustive; it errs on the side of brevity and terseness. We highly admire Dr. P.'s argument at page 11, under the head of "Objection," which we do not recollect to have seen so well brought out before. It meets the often repeated statement that the promises we British arrogate to ourselves were made to the Twelve Tribes, and cannot be limited to the Ten Tribes only, said to be now the British Anglo-Saxon races. "True," replies Dr. Poole, "so was the promise to David regarding 'the kingdom' (2 Sam. vii. 16); it was 'over Israel and over Judah' (1 Kings i. 35, ii. 12), and that arrangement was 'from the Lord' (1 Kings ii. 15). But God fulfilled that promise by constituting the Ten Tribes 'the kingdom,' and that kingdom was removed from David's heir, leaving the latter One Tribe of it only to save the promise. All the blessings, therefore, followed 'the kingdom,'" and our Lord (we add) confirmed this view by telling the Jews that "the kingdom of God," in a spiritual sense, just as the true literal regal kingdom in its literal aspect, had been removed from them, and should be transferred and given to "a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." All blessings promised to the Twelve Tribes, therefore, were by two separate acts of the Divine Promiser Himself made over en bloc to the Ten-Tribed kingdom; and our Lord in New Testament times we see confirmed the conveyance (Matt. xxi. 43; Rom. xv. 8). This is a fine and solid argument, for which Dr. Poole deserves all commendation, and we trust it will be found irresistible by the adversaries.

We wish Dr. Poole's pamphlet every success, and welcome it as a valuable contribution to the ever-increasing list of Identity works. This list, we are glad to know, proves the increase of Identity readers, a fact which ought to put to silence our already attenuated number of opponents. May they continually grow less and less, till none but convinced Israelites are left.

Promises, Prophecies, and Declarations Relating to God's Chosen People Israel. London: F. Norgate, 7, King-street, Covent-garden, 1881. Price 1s.

THIS book, without pretending to be an Identity advocate, is, in fact, a very useful help to those studying the subject. It consists of a selection from Scripture of almost all the more important texts (given at full length) relating to God's dealing with Israel, their future and present destiny. We are glad to recognise that the compiler reads the BANNER diligently, since we see in his preface "to his reader" several quotations from our pages. We should have been glad had he named the source whence Dr. Lightfoot's and the late Bishop Selwyn's testimony, for example, had been derived, but we must, we suppose, acquiesce in this kind of borrowing since the cause is thereby served. The texts quoted are judiciously chosen, and we hope they may produce a large crop of believers in our Identity.

Bible Teachers Taught; or, How to Read the Bible. By A Layman. Ashton-under-Lyne.

THE above is the title of an unpretending little manual, founded on Mr. Hine's teachings, and calculated to be of service to students of our Identity. The "Layman" points out the early difficulties of most of us as prophetic students, and declares that ignorance of the Scriptural distinction between Israel and Judah is the prolific cause of confusion in the study of the Bible. Had our author given to Mr. John Wilson, of Brighton, the credit due to him as the first teacher of this vital truth, we should have been better pleased with his work. He lays down, however, valuable rules for the study of the prophecies, and of those the chief are the following:—

Digitized by Google

1. Ascertain to whom the prophet speaks.
2. The time when he speaks; and
3. The location and condition of the people to whom he speaks.

The major portion of the pamphlet is occupied by "A Chronological History of the Kingdoms of Judah and Israel," in parallel columns, followed by "A Chronological Arrangement of the Prophecies of the Major and Minor Prophets"—which "A Layman" considers indispensible to the due intelligent comprehension of the prophetical books. The price of the pamphlet is not given on its cover, which we consider a defect.

Old Moore's Almanac for 1881. Wm. Walker & Sons, London and Otley.

We have again an Identity hieroglyphic depicted in this almanac for 1881. We hope on this occasion we shall have so sufficiently described it, that we shall not be suspected again of inventing the picture.

"Old Moore" considers 1881 will be a year of prosperity for the British workman, but one of war, calamity, ruin, and destruction for Russia, France, and the outside world in general. At the top of the picture we have the cheap loaf, the horn of plenty pouring out its blessings, the British workman enjoying a bountiful harvest and going into the bank to lodge his money. The county franchise is depicted as his property now, and looms and furnaces are at full work.

So much for British-Israel. What of the continental nations? Nothing but disaster! France is very sick in bed; Russia is fighting the Chinese; and while the rose, shamrock, and harp, or thistle, are dancing and playing as England, Scotland, and Ireland, for very joy, a tremendous fight of troops on land, and ships and ironclads in "troubled waters," is going on at the same time below. Russian towns are blown up, and the foreground is occupied by a fearful fight between a rampant lion, representing Great Britain, and a monstrous bear—a Power we all too easily recognise as Israel's "enemy." We do not, of course, place much stress on the hieroglyphic, since it may have been the work of a believer in our origin and a reader of the Banner. But we may point to this picture as a further proof of what is the thought uppermost in men's minds now, that which the Rev. B. Wrey Savile calls "speculative prophecy," but which seems very like the solemn anticipation of mankind—namely, that in 1881, or soon after, the "great-earthquake-woe" of Europe will take place, what time Israel shall be "in rest and be quiet, and none shall make him afraid" (Jer. xxx. 10).

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

Sir,—I was very much struck with the following notice in "Old and New London," and venture to draw your attention to it, as I think it would interest very many readers of the Banner. It is from the 27th chapter, giving the history, etc., of the Aldersgate, one of the four original gates of the city of London:—

"It was damaged in the great fire, but soon afterwards repaired and beautified. Originally, like Temple Bar, it had an arch in the centre for general traffic, and two posterns for pedestrians. Over the arch was a figure in high relief of James I., but the building was heavy and inelegant. The imperial arms surmounted the figure; for through this gate the Stuart first entered London when he came to take possession of the crown; on the Eastern side was an effigy of the prophet Jeremiah, and these lines from his prophecies: 'Then shall enter into the gates of this city kings and princes sitting upon the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, they and their princes, the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and this city shall remain for ever.'

"In the Western niche was an effigy of Samuel, with this inscription: 'And Samuel said unto all Israel, Behold, I have hearkened unto your voice in all that you said unto me, and have made a king over you.' On the South side was a bas-relief of King James in his royal robes. The gate was taken down in 1761."

It is, at the least, a striking coincidence, that such an adaptation of prophecy should have been made in regard to the king who (if Identity views are correct), stands in the royal line of succession, as the first on the English throne in the direct line of the royal House of Judah.

Please make what use you like of my communication, if you think it worth while. I remain, dear sir, yours sincerely,

E. J. Whittaker,
"An Israelite."

The Vicarage, Falfield, R. S. O. Gloucestershire.
February 3rd, 1881.

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

The number of members is now 656, 25 having joined the Union since our last report. One of our members, Capt. H. P. Keighly, writes: "If I may be allowed to do so, I would suggest that a form of prayer for each day of the week, to precede our reading of the portion of Scripture for the day, would be of great assistance; as we might, by raising our voices in unison to the throne of grace, hope for the Divine Presence as promised when 'two or three are gathered together,' and the granting of our petitions."

This suggestion "Philo-Israel" has very kindly carried out, and we feel the best thanks of the members are due to him. The prayers are short, and simply written, and we trust they may prove of service to many believers in our Identity, as well as the members of the Union. The price will be one penny each copy, or nine-pence per dozen, postage extra. One copy will be sent free of charge to each member subscribing for the Comments, with the April or May number, very little extra cost for postage thus being incurred. We hope the members will do their best to make them known among friends. They can be procured from Mr. Banks, our publisher, and from ourselves. We gratefully acknowledge a donation of £1 10s., received per "Philo-Israel," towards the expense of printing.

We have received a very cheering letter from Mr. Percy E. Williams, Hon. Secretary of the Anglo-Israel Association of New South Wales. He writes for seven cards of membership, and says: "I am directed by the president (Rev. W. Allworth) and the officers of the Association to tender their sincere thanks to you for the copies (1 to 5) of the Monthly Comments, and to remit the sum of one guinea, asking you to forward me as many copies of the Comments each month during 1881 as that sum will cover. These will be distributed amongst the members to promote unity in prayer and daily Scripture study. We feel the greatest sympathy with 'Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union,' and earnestly pray that our Father's richest blessings and grace will rest upon the members and their labours."

Mr. J. Bowers Janion, writing from the Cape, says: "The Identity is spreading out here, and I am constantly being asked for pamphlets and information about it and the Great Pyramid. Please place my name on your list of members of 'Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union.' Many thanks for the Comments, they are very good, short and striking, I cannot rouse people out here to earnestness in prayer and Bible study."

Packets of literature for free distribution have been sent to Worthing, Walton-on-Thames, Durham, and South Africa.

The card of membership will be sent on receipt of three stamps. The Comments will be sent post free monthly for 1s. per annum; 2 copies, 1s. 6d.; 3 copies, 2s. Address, Miss Lawrence, Stoneleigh, New Wimbledon, Surrey.

J. Lawrence.
(Hon. Sec. I. S. & P. U.)

March 19, 1881.

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED BY THE METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

From January 1, to March 9, 1881.

	£	s.	d.		£	s.	d.
Lionel N. Bonar	0	12	6	Mrs. W. F. Larkins	0	10	0
J. Hope Wallace	1	0	0	Miss E. Docker	0	10	0
F. A. Hyndman	0	10	0	Mrs. C. Fox	2	0	0
General Hill	1	11	6	Col. The Hon. Legge	0	10	0
C. N. Bayly	1	1	0	Douglas A. Onslow	0	10	0
Dr. Corbould	0	10	0	Dr. Rugg	0	10	0
The Lady Jane Ellice	2	0	0	L. Biden	0	10	6
Mrs. Butterworth	1	1	0	Miss E. Pearse	1	0	0
Miss A. Darwell	0	10	0	W. H. Guest	0	10	0
Colonel Bentinck	5	0	0	C. Stubbs	0	10	6
Mrs. E. Man	1	0	0	Eight of 5s. each	2	0	0
E. W. Bird	0	10	0	One	0	3	0
W. H. Peters	2	2	0	Thirty-four of 2s. 6d. each	4	5	0

March 11, 1881. J. S. Anderson, Hon. Sec.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let - three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions--four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	13	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

384 Demy 8vo pages, in handsome cloth, gilt, price 3s. 6d., by post 4s.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF ISRAEL' HOPE AND DESTINY.

Edited by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.

This Volume contains Papers on all Points of the Identity of the British People with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel.

Price 4d., by post 4½d. Special terms for a quantity.

THE ISRAEL OF GOD.

A SERVICE OF SONG

Upon the Career and Destiny of God's Ancient People Israel. WORDS AND MUSIC.

BY C. W. E.

Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Second Edition now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

AMMI; or, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE

BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham the "friend of God," and showing that true science history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Price 2d., post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES.

An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? An Inquiry establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 4d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST OR SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS AND TEACHINGS OF THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams. Price 4d., post free 5d.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters."

Price 2d., post free 3d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

By REV. JOSEPH WILD D.D.

With a Portrait of the Author.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

SEE NEW IDENTITY QUARTERLY MAGAZINE. Editor, Rev. R. DOUGLAS, M.A., Vicar of St. Stephen, Sheffield. Articles by Piazzi Smyth, Col. Gawler, &c. Price 6d.; post free, annually, 2s. 3d. James Nisbet & Co., London.

NEW PAMPHLET ON THE IDENTITY OF THE LOST TEN TRIBES

FOR UNIVERSAL CIRCULATION.

The Best Pamphlet to place in the hands of a person unacquainted with the subject.

Price 6d., by post 7d. 64 Demy 8vo. pages, in wrapper. One dozen copies sent free for a post office order for 6s.

FIFTY REASONS

WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES

OF THE LOST TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL.

BY REV. W. H. POOLE, D.D.

"There is a principle which is a bar against all information, which is proof against all argument, and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance. This principle is, contempt prior to examination."—Dr. Paley.

A greater than Paley has said:—"He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is a folly and a shame unto him."—Prov. xviii.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET.

Specimen Copy post free for 2½d.

THE ONLY MONTHLY IDENTITY MAGAZINE.

Price 2d., Annual Subscription, 2s. 6d. Yearly Volume, 3s. 6d. Bound in cloth, gilt. Postage 6d. extra.

ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.

EDITED BY DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.

CONTENTS OF APRIL NUMBER :—

Anglo-Israel Bible Truths.—No. 4. "Call her name Lo-Ruhamah : for I will no more have mercy upon the House of Israel; but I will utterly take them away."—Hosea i. 6.
The Testimony of Scripture Respecting the Date of Our Lord's Nativity. By Geo. N. Walsh.
The Chief Dates of the World.
The Hastings Controversy, Between the Rev. W. Barker, Baptist Minister, Hastings, and Philo-Israel, Editor of the "Banner of Israel."—Part XII.
"The Necessity for the Redemption of Ephraim-Israel." By the Editor.
"The Reputed Descendants of Ten-Tribed Israel Residing near Lake Ooroomiah, in Persia."
Correspondence.—Pyramid Chronology. Review.
Meetings, Lectures, &c.—Conference of Anglo-Israel Associations held at Manchester, March 9, 1881.—Morland, Westmoreland.—South Africa.—Perth Anglo-Israel Lectures.—Manchester and Salford Anglo-Israel Association.—Leamington Anglo-Israel Association.—Wimbledon Association.—Norton (Sheffield) Israel's Identification Association.—Preston Anglo-Israel Association.

ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET. AND ALL BOOKSELLERS.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,

High-Class Tailor,

47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.

MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

FURTHER SCRIPTURAL PROOFS.

A Sequel to SUMMARY OF ANGLO-ISRAELITE TEACHING.

Being a Paper read before the Cheltenham Anglo-Israel Association,

BY SURGEON-GENERAL J. M. GRANT, M.D.

Price 2d.; post free 2½d.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

New ready, bound in cloth, 2s. 3d., gilt, 2s. 9d. post free 3d. extra.

SERMON I.,

Containing Seven Parts of Extracts from the

"FLYING ROLL,"

FOR THE

"INGATHERING" OF ISRAEL.

May be had of Joseph Head, John Rogers, George Moore, Edward Rogers, 5 Trafalgar-st., New Brompton, Kent; Joshua Rogers, 151, Great Titchfield-st., London, W.; and, by ordering, of any bookseller. May be had also in parts, 4d each; post free 4½d.

"Who are Israelites, to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises."

Just published. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA THE ROYAL SEED TO KING DAVID'S THRONE, AND ARE NOT HER SUBJECTS, THE BRITISH PEOPLE, THE TEN LOST TRIBES?

BY WILLIAM HOPTON, of Sutton Heath.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published, price One Shilling, post free.

PROMISES, PROPHECIES, and DECLARATIONS relating to GOD'S CHOSEN PEOPLE ISRAEL.

London: F. Norgate, 7, King-street, Covent-garden.
London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE NEW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL; Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Leeds, with an Introduction and Notes; to be followed, by a Review of Mr. Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes.

By the same Author.

"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)," with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d.

"CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d., post free 3½d. GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 3½d.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, APRIL 6, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 224. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, APRIL 13, 1881. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone and Israel's Great Gate	149
Judah's Crown and Israel's Stone. By Robert Pegrum	150
The Policy of Surrender and Effacement as to the Transvaal and Candahar	152
A Word in Edgewise. By East Anglian.—Part III.	153
"Mazzaroth." By A. R., of Funchal, Madeira.—Part II.	154
"And Great Earthquakes Shall be in Divers Places"	155
The First Collect for Good Friday—More Blind Evidence	155
Correspondence—Surrey Anglo-Israel Association—Census Offerings	155
Dr. Bonar Gives Blind Evidence	155

THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE AND ISRAEL'S GREAT GATE.

ONE whose leanings are entirely with the Liberal Government now in power, and who has dissented on occasions rather sharply from the views which have from time to time appeared in the BANNER on the political aspect of public affairs as they touch on our Identity, has recently proposed to us a view of matters which we consider exceedingly interesting; and, as emanating from an admirer of our Premier, remarkable. These views connect our future "Gate," Constantinople, with Mr. Gladstone and his Government. This strange joinder is so singular, and, we may say, so ominous, that we hasten to put before our readers a sketch of what has been suggested to us, adding our own hearty desires that God's purposes in respect to the Gate may be speedily accomplished; but whether it be by the instrumentality of Mr. Gladstone or of Lord Beaconsfield, we are not concerned to inquire, nor feel very anxious.

The whole matter hinges, our friend thinks, on the recent deplorable event which has sent such a pang of horror and regret throughout Europe—the assassination of the late Czar of Russia. "This event," he says, "is likely to result in a speedy development of those incidents which are to precede 'the end of the age.' Alexander III. is no friend of Germany. He always held himself aloof from his father's policy regarding that country; and though he did not oppose openly, he made no secret of his sentiments on the subject. He had always said the true policy of Russia was to ally herself with England; and I believe we shall speedily see the end put to Russia's advance in Central Asia, and a warm support given to England in the settlement of the Eastern Question (!). The feeler that was put out some months past regarding the expulsion of the Sultan and the establishment of an European ruler in Constantinople, under the joint protection of Russia and England, with the Duke of Edinburgh as the head of the State, emanated from him. I am much mistaken if we do not see this brought about before the year is out. Then Israel will veritably possess her 'Great Gate' (La Porte Sublime), and once in the lion's grip who shall dispossess him? This could not have been brought about with the late Government in power, owing to the hostile attitude then assumed towards Russia; but with Mr. Gladstone at the helm it will not be difficult of execution. It seems now evident the Lord's hand has been manifested in all this. The overthrow of the late administration, the advent to power of the Liberal Government, who are not opposed to Russia; the Emperor's death, and his successor's known desire for close alliance with British-Israel, all point in one direction. With a British prince at Constantinople, the protectorate of Asia Minor and Armenia will become real, and will inevitably be extended to Syria, Palestine, and the Levant. Then comes the Return of the Jews, under the ægis of British-Israel's powerful support; and the result will be glorious!"

Such are the day-dreams of a Liberal Israelite. We have nothing to say against them but this—That the settlement of the Eastern Question will not be given either to Mr. Gladstone or to any man living now to effect (teste the Great Pyramid); that so far from the British being active in that work, God assigns to her the rôle of quiescent self-effacement, in the words, "Come, My people, enter thou into thy chambers, hide thyself," &c.; that before the Gate can be ours, with Russia's consent, or without it, the Turks must be beaten out, probably by war, and that is just the position God has decided in Isa. xxvi. 12, 20, 21, the House of British-Israel shall not assume; lastly, that it will be an evil day (humanly speaking) when we see Israel in alliance with her prophetic foe, Russian Gog; nor do we find in God's Word that any such alliance is even hinted at as a condition precedent to the outbreak of the "great earthquake woe." We do observe, however, that Israel's hand shall cause the beginning of the struggle which terminates in Edom's (Turkey's) fall (Ezek. xxv. 14); and this seems probable enough, without assuming any warlike alliance between this nation and the Czar.

Putting those objections aside, we allude to our friend's speculations as remarkable, since they are the conceptions of one who is a strong supporter of Mr. Gladstone's Government, and the views he enunciates are singularly at variance with those of the Rev. B. W. Savile, who, being equally an ardent admirer of the Premier, considers our anticipated occupation of "the Gate" to be no better than the unprincipled ravings of foolish or crazy ones, led astray by the delusion he once held himself. Of one thing, however, we are sure; the "Great Gate" is certain to be Israel's; and it will fall to our race in connection with the collapse of the Turkish Empire. This cannot now be long delayed. Whether "the pear" will fall ripe from the tree into Israel's lap under Mr. Gladstone's administration, or with the help of Lord Beaconsfield as Prime Minister again, is a matter of mere detail; and one which need give us no great solicitude. The important point is the fulfilment of the prophecy. And once the Gate is ours, God's word is sure to be established as sworn to Abraham our forefather (Gen. xxii. 17, 18). The mystery of Israel will be finished (Dan. xii. 7); the Identity will be announced (Hos i. 10, 11); the Return of Israel and Judah together will take place (Jer. iii. 18); and the Lord's coming to reign over His ancients gloriously, will be at the doors (Isa. xxiv. 21—23).

Digitized by Google

We thank our friend for his "speculative prophecy," from which it will be seen we have derived some lessons, and obtained some comfort. In the midst of many discouragements it is good to see that men's minds are generally drawing to the conclusion we have long since arrived at—namely, that Constantinople will be a British Gate of the first magnitude ere long, and that from that moment God's promises to His people will be finally fulfilled.

It may be freely conceded to the Rev. B. W. Savile and those who agree with him, that the fact is most unlikely, and our right, humanly speaking, if a Gentile people, does not exist. But, being Israel, God promised that Gate to us; and we have, therefore, as great a certainty to rely upon that we must surely possess it, as we have already that, in consequence of our Identity, we have acquired all the other chief Gates of the world and our heathen and colonial Empires, in consequence thereof. Israel, praise ye the Lord!

JUDAH'S CROWN AND ISRAEL'S STONE.

By Robert Pegrum.

If we would establish the Identity of the British with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel, we must prove that a sovereign who has descended from King David is now the occupant of England's throne (2 Chron. xiii. 5). The Rev. A. B. Grimaldi, M.A., and the Rev. F. R. A. Glover, M.A., have produced various kinds of evidence relating to this subject. We know that the Saxon kings traced themselves back to Odin, who was proved to have descended from David. Irish historians also state that the Eastern Princess, Tephi, married the Irish king, Heremon, from whom we have, in an unbroken line, our present Queen Victoria, through King Fergus and King James VI. of Scotland.

But there are several difficulties which arise when we turn to the sacred Scriptures for explanation and for confirmation. One of these difficulties was suggested by Mr. W. Hull's letter in Banner, vol. v. p. 67. With a view to make this matter clear, we intend to consider—first, Judah's crown; and secondly, Israel's stone.

I. The Crown of Judah.—By connecting several Scriptural passages—in Ezekiel, in Genesis, and in Chronicles—we will endeavour to prove that the crown and the sceptre will not depart from Judah until Christ come again to reign on the earth.

1. Ezek. xxi. 26. Literally, "Thus saith the Lord Jehovah, Remove the turban (or tiara), and take off the diadem (or fillet); this shall not be the same; exalt her that is low, and bring low him that is high."

Note.—The word which we have translated turban, or tiara, is derived from a Hebrew root signifying to bind, or wrap round. The root of the original word for diadem, or fillet, means to surround, to cover. The Rev. John Parkhurst, M.A., the eminent Hebrew lexicographer, says: "The diadem is a circle or fillet of gold worn by princes. Even at the present day, Eastern sovereigns have a fillet; or, as they call it, a Sirpeach, which is worn round the tiara, or turban." Xenophon, describing the royal apparel of Cyrus, remarks, "Εἶχε δὲ διάδημα περὶ τῇ τιάρᾳ," He had a diadem round his tiara. This confirms Parkhurst's comment. But the most striking portion of the verse is the last clause: "Exalt (Heb. הגבה) her that is low (Heb. השפלה), and bring low (Heb. השפיל) him that is high" (והגבה). The Hebrew word for "her that is low," is השפלה; but the word for "him that is low," would be השפל. Hence the prophet uses the feminine form instead of the masculine in order to express his meaning. Therefore he intended to convey the idea that a woman was to be exalted after a certain man had been brought low. The man referred to was the Jewish king, Zedekiah, who is, in the preceding verse, styled "the profane and wicked prince." He was brought low, for the king of Babylon "put out the eyes of Zedekiah, and the king of Babylon bound him in chains and carried him to Babylon, and put him in prison to the day of his death" (Jer. lii. 11). His sons were destroyed; for "the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes" (Jer. lii. 10). But King Zedekiah had daughters who were not slain. "The king's daughters . . . came into the land of Egypt" (Jer. xliii. 6, 7). So that there were still those who were entitled to the Jewish crown and to the Jewish sceptre. These daughters were under the protection of the prophet Jeremiah, to whom God had said, "I have this day set thee over the nations, and over the kingdoms, to root up and to pull down, and to destroy, and to throw down, to build and to plant" (Jer. i. 10). And in the book of the prophet Ezekiel (xvii. 22, 24), we read, "Thus saith the Lord God, I will also take of the highest branch of the high cedar and will set it; I will crop off from the top of his young twigs a tender one, and will plant it upon a high mountain and eminent; in the mountain of the height of Israel will I plant it; and all the trees of the field shall know that I the Lord have brought down the high tree, have exalted the low tree." Jeremiah was, then, commanded not only to root up and to pull down, but also to build and to plant. The Lord took a tender twig from the high cedar and planted it in the mountain of the height of Israel; so that the high one was brought down, and the low one was exalted. The high cedar was evidently King Zedekiah; and, therefore, the "tender" twig taken from him must have been one of his daughters. The Eastern princess Tephi (probably a daughter of the last Jewish king) landed in Ireland shortly after that time, with a learned prophet for her companion. Irish history proves that Tephi and her husband (Heremon) flourished as king and queen of that country in B.C. 580. Hence the words of Ezekiel were exactly fulfilled, "Exalt her that is low, and bring low him that is high."

2. Ezek. xxi. 27. Literally, "An overturning, an overturning, an overturning I will make it; yet this shall not come to pass until He come to whom the right belongs, and I will give it Him."

Note.—This verse refers to a different subject from that of the twenty-sixth; for the prophet says, "This shall not be the same." In the former verse events are mentioned which almost immediately took place. The crown was changed from one to another. Zedekiah was brought low, and Tephi (his daughter) was exalted. But in the present verse we read of a final overturning of the kingdom prior to the coming of Christ Himself to take the sceptre and to wear the crown. Parkhurst observes, "This word, overturning, occurs thrice in Ezek. xxi. 27, where it seems to be spoken of the kingdom of Judah." There will be an overturning, and the threefold repetition denotes the certainty of the event; "yet this shall not come to pass until He come to whom the right belongs." "Yet this shall not come to pass until," etc., is a literal and correct rendering of the Hebrew. The first word of the clause occurs also in Psa. cxxix. 2, and is there translated "yet." "More" is not in the original, and there is no need for us to insert it. There is a great difference between "This shall not be until," etc., and "This shall be no more until," etc. The phrase, "I will give it him," refers not to the crown, but to the right. The Hebrew words for "turban" and "diadem" are both feminine, and would require a feminine pronoun; but the pronoun "it," in this passage is masculine; and therefore it agrees with the masculine noun, "right." Hence the clause signifies, "I will give the right to him." A crown is referred to in ver. 26; but the right is alone mentioned in ver. 27. This supports what we said just now, that the two verses refer to different subjects. Cocceius says, "The Hebrew word translated right has a very extensive signification, including all distinction, regulation, ordering, right, custom." All these privileges will, therefore, be Christ's at His second advent.

Digitized by Google

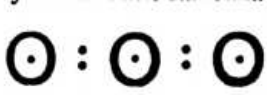
We readily grant that this verse admits of various renderings. We have given one of those renderings—a more literal one than that of the authorised version—and we will support our translation by quoting two or three passages which require no alteration.

3. Gen xlix. 10: "The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a law-giver from between his feet, until Shiloh come."

NOTE.—The meaning of the Hebrew word, "Shiloh," has been disputed; but the correct signification of it is, doubtless, "he whose it is," being compounded of two words, one meaning "which," and the other "to him." Gesenius, the most celebrated of modern Hebrew lexicographers, says, "Perhaps Ezekiel (xxi. 27) had reference to this passage in Genesis, and gives the true interpretation of Shiloh, he to whom the right belongs." This view is taken by the Septuagint, by the Jerusalem Targum, and by most of the ancient versions. The verse teaches us, therefore, that the sceptre will not depart from Judah until Christ—"whose it is"—shall take possession of it, and shall reign universally. The opinion which we have advanced is still further confirmed by the following quotation:—

4. 2 Chron. xiii. 5: "Ought ye not to know that the Lord God of Israel gave the kingdom over Israel to David for ever, even to him and his sons by a covenant of salt?"

NOTE.—It is important to observe the exact terms which are employed in this question. God "gave the kingdom over Israel to David for ever." We believe that a descendant of David—one of the House of Judah—is now reigning over British-Israel, and that this state of things will continue "until He come to whom the right belongs." Hence we have seen that our view of Ezekiel xxi. 26, 27, is strongly supported by at least two clear passages of the Word of God; and therefore we maintain that the sceptre and the crown will not depart from Judah until Christ come again to reign on the earth. Before passing to the second division of our subject, we will give an interesting extract from the "History of Ireland" (by Jeoffry Keating, D.D., translated from the original Irish by Dormod O'Connor, 1723), relating to an Eastern crown which was found in that country:—



"We are informed by Hector Boetius that the kings of Scotland, from the time of Fergus, used a plain crown of gold, militaris valli forma (in the form of a military trench); and it is more than probable that in this practice they followed the Irish monarchs from whom they derived their descent and customs. And this is rendered still more reasonable by a golden cap, supposed to be a provincial crown, that was found in the year 1692, at Barnanely, Tipperary, about ten feet under ground, by some workmen who were digging up turf for firing. This cap or crown weighs about five ounces. The border and the head are raised in chase-work, and it seems to bear some resemblance to the close crown of Eastern empires, which was composed of the helmet (or tiara) together with a diadem. The Irish are inclined to believe that it belonged to the Irish monarchs before the planting of Christianity in that country; and they give this reason, because it is not adorned with a cross, which was the common ensign of Christian princes."

Mr. O'Connor gives an engraving of this crown or tiara. The ornamentation of it is of two kinds:—

(1.) About a dozen PYRAMIDS surround the top of the crown; thus:—

(2.) Several rows of CIRCLES also surround the crown: thus:—

The two figures with which the crown is decorated are the pyramid and the circle. Judah and Israel could not have used more suitable emblems; for the Great Pyramid is their altar, pillar, and sign in the land of Egypt (Isa. xix. 19, 20); and the circle well represents the world-wide dominion which the children of Abraham are destined to possess. If this crown be in reality a Jewish one, it connects Queen Victoria of England with Queen Tephi of Ireland; and it also identifies that Irish Queen with one of the daughters of King Zedekiah. We simply mention this as a matter which is worthy of our consideration, and not as an article of faith. We believe, however, that future evidence will confirm our present suggestions.

II.—THE STONE OF ISRAEL.—Bishop Titcomb, in his recent sermons, proved that Joseph's birthright—increase of power and of population—is now in the possession of England. The description of the blessings which "shall be on the head of Joseph" is to be found in Gen. xlix. In verse 24 of that chapter we read, Joseph's "bow abode in strength, and the arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob (from thence is the shepherd, the stone of Israel)." The last clause of this verse is by no means clear. We will therefore refer to the actual Hebrew words which Moses wrote. They might be rendered as follows: "Thence he is taking care of the stone of Israel," or "From that time he kept the stone of Israel."

NOTE.—The word translated "thence" means either from that place (as in Gen. iii. 23), or from that time (as in Hosea ii. 15). It has, of course, the latter meaning in the passage under consideration. The word רֹעֶה is rendered "shepherd," but, more correctly, "he is keeping," or "he kept." It is the masculine singular, present participle of a verb which signifies to take care of, to tend, to keep. This present participle also occurs in Gen. xxix. 9: "And while he yet spake with them, Rachel came with her father's sheep; for she kept (Heb. רֹעָה) them." Both these passages are in the book of Genesis, and precisely the same word is employed in each case. We understand, then, that Joseph, after having been strengthened "by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob," took care of a certain memorial stone which had belonged to Jacob or Israel. "From that time he kept the stone of Israel." The "stone of Israel," otherwise called "Jacob's pillow," was to remain in Joseph's possession. In Westminster Abbey there is a wonderful stone which is still called "Jacob's pillow," or the "coronation stone." Dean Stanley says, "The chief object of attraction, to this day, to the innumerable visitors to the Abbey is, probably that Irish monument of the Empire, known as the coronation stone." We have seen that the care of such a stone was included in Joseph's birthright. We, the English, possess that stone to-day; and therefore we must be the descendants of Joseph. According to the old Irish Celtic rune (as rendered by Mr. Glover):—

"Unless the fates are faithless grown,
And prophet's voice be vain;
Where'er is found this sacred stone
The wanderer's race shall reign."

We have referred to the crown of Judah, and we have proved that the crown and the sceptre will not depart from Judah until He come to whom the right belongs.

Digitized by Google

We have also given certain reasons for asserting that our Queen Victoria has descended from King David, and that our English sovereigns have been crowned upon "the stone of Israel." We have not only the line of David, of the House of Judah, reigning over us; but we have also possession of the memorial stone which Joseph—the representative of the Ten Tribes of Israel—was to take care of. Therefore, seeing that we have both the crown of Judah and the "stone of Israel," we must have descended from Jacob; or, in other words, the British nation is identical with the Lost House of Israel.

THE POLICY OF SURRENDER AND EFFACEMENT AS TO THE TRANSVAAL AND CANDAHAR.

THE sudden termination of the war with the rebellious Boers of the Transvaal, and the final decision arrived at by the Government, supported by the decisive majority of 120 in the House of Commons, that Candahar must be abandoned, and the last shreds of the Conservative policy of Lord Beaconsfield in India and the Cape upset, are facts which call for comment, and, from our point of view, some notice. Our opponents have made capital out of these events already, to their hearts' content. One who has not communicated with us for very many months has broken silence now (March 23), and writes to the following effect:—

"I am not at all disposed to triumph over you in regard to the lamentable state of affairs in Afghanistan and the Transvaal. I deeply regret that the destinies of our unhappy country are swayed by such men as —— and ——. But we cannot shut our eyes to actual facts. And what are the facts? During the past two years England has sustained more and greater disasters than any other European nation. At home we have disaffection and veiled rebellion; abroad we have defeat, disaster, and dishonour. And yet you go on deluding your readers that they, being Israelites, are safe and secure, while all continental nations are doomed to perdition. Sir, facts are against you. Every intelligent man in Europe can see that the sun of England is nearly set. At the present time the British Empire exists only on sufferance. We dare not go to war with any of the great Powers; for if we were to do so, we should be utterly annihilated."

So far a real pessimist; one who believes that, being a Gentile race, the British nation exists, not by the sufferance of God (which is true), but only by the sufferance of other Gentile nations, which is a palpable falsehood; seeing no other nations wish so much as to lift a finger against us. If they did, there is not the slightest chance, protected as we are by God Himself, and by His splendid gifts to us of men, and ships, and money, that they could do us the very slightest harm. Another pessimist and doubter in our origin, greeted us a short time ago with the taunting words: "We have not 'gone through,' 'trodden down,' or 'torn in pieces,' in regard to the Transvaal; and, therefore, what now about our Israelite origin?" Our reply to these, and all other such faithless words, is this: The Transvaal episode is not concluded yet, nor have matters in Afghanistan been settled in such fashion that we may consider our concern in that affair concluded. We thought as our opponents now do, regarding the Punjab; when the first campaign was decided, we dreamt of lasting peace. But God, having the means in His own hands to compel us to annex the country of the "five rivers," raised up first Lalla Moolraj, then Shere Sing and Chutter Sing, sent us a defeat which ought to have ruined us (humanly speaking) at Chillianwalla, and made those very disasters the means soon after of compelling us to annex the territory, and thus win it for Christ and for His Gospel. So now, we may, and probably are, counting the results as final before we see what God means yet to do, and therefore may be utterly mistaken as to the bearing of the events we have just been witnessing. In our view, doubtless, the results of the Boer campaign are sufficiently inglorious. We have been thrice badly beaten by untrained farmers, whose verdict, proved true by facts, is, that "our soldiers cannot shoot a bit."

The peace secured for us by sufferance of the Boers is one without honour, and therefore, as far as we can judge, cannot last or produce results which will be satisfactory. It may be that a war of races will intervene, or such tremendous dangers to our people in South Africa may arise from the late events, that in very shame our Government may be forced to vindicate this nation's honour, and the British colonies in South Africa may be forced to confederate in pure self-defence. We are quite willing to wait the outcome of the fact, being sure of one thing, that God's hand is working in all these events, and that what seems to us at present dark, mysterious, and disastrous, may lead, in God's good providence, to the very objects we have at heart, and the establishment, in His due time and in His own way, of Israel's power, not only over the Transvaal, where the "suzerainty" is already guaranteed; and where once established, we well know by experience in other lands, that British interference is sure to end, not only in British true sovereignty, but in world-wide dominion as well (Dan. vii. 27). We shall not, therefore, be tempted, like some, to despair of our country, and to inveigh against our rulers because their politics happen to differ from our own, or because present events seem to point to results opposed to our expectations of Israel's future. On the contrary, our faith in our Identity is so firm and so sure that we fail to see that our late inglorious proceedings in the Transvaal are disastrous to our claim to Hebrew origin, and that because the policy of effacement in Afghanistan is obstinately maintained by the present Government, we have, therefore, for ever lost those Gates God once gave to Israel.

It is not so. Mr. Gladstone and his colleagues may be wrong; and the future will, we are confident, prove them so. Sooner or later (at what a cost of blood and treasure who can tell?) Israel will again have to advance and re-occupy the Gates of Afghanistan. Of this we entertain no manner of doubt. The Gospel has to be offered and freely given to the Afghan races; and there are none qualified, capable, or willing to carry it but God's messengers, British-Israel.

Cut off from the land by voluntary effacement, we cannot take the good news there; but ere long, we are as sure as God's Word can make us, that to Afghan territory Israel must return in power, and again be so placed as to be able to give that race the blessings we only can administer as the people formed and authorised to dispense them (Isa. xliii. 21). The "time of the end" is close at hand; and the period, therefore, is imminent when a policy of effacement, isolation, and hiding is prescribed for Israel (Isa. xxvi. 20). In conformity therewith it may well be God's will that such acts of self-surrender as we see our Ministry just now are voluntarily subjecting our afflicted nation, are parts of God's plan before He calls us to our glorious inheritance as heir of the world. However that may be, we resolve to trust Him, even though He slay us in the perfect confidence that His purposes towards us are dictated only by pure love (Isa. xli. 10—15; Job xiii. 15).

It is for such dark dispensations as these we are now traversing, that the Lord has so often told Israel to "Fear not;" and shall we, who have tasted that the Lord is gracious—oh! so often!—lose heart, and faith, and hope at the very first breath of an apparently frowning providence, forgetful that in far worse and more terrible circumstances the Lord rebuked His trembling people for their faithless want of confidence, saying, "Wherefore cryest thou unto Me? Speak to the children of Israel that they GO FORWARD" (Gen. xiv. 15; Hosea xi. 10).

Digitized by Google

A WORD IN EDGEWISE.

By East Anglian.

(Concluded from page 140).

PART III.—Historical.

In searching for a little light on the historical evidence of our Hebrew origin, I read that an incident is related by Plutarch to the effect that when the Cimbri invaded Italy, in the time of Marius, it was found, on their being opposed by the Ligurians, that each side had the same war-cry, thus proving their common origin. Now, as both these peoples were afterwards represented in Britain, and lived there peaceably together as brethren, "for," says Yeatman ("Shemitic Origin of the Nations of Western Europe," &c.), "it is admitted they were of the same race originally;" I thought that if the Ligurians could be traced to Palestine, our contention that the Cymry are the descendants of the House of Beth-Khumri would be verified beyond dispute. This is the very thing that Mr. Yeatman has done for us; though, possibly, with no intention of helping us; for he says (page 49): "The Spartans colonised Liguria," and (page 33) speaking of the letters which passed between the Spartans and the Jews, "as the Spartans were, in fact, the very race from whom the Llogrians of England derive their origin, every fact relating to them is of interest to us." Mr. Yeatman is content to find in these letters—so valuable to us—a proof of the Shemitic origin of the Greeks; although he says (page 34): "It seems very probable that Dan, the son of Jacob, was one of the fathers of the Greeks, and gave his name to the Danai, as well as to the river Danube, by which they traversed Europe towards Scandinavia and the West, so that whatever may be the origin of the Lacedemonians (Spartans) they have left their name through Europe, and especially in the South of England and Ireland."

But we are not content with "It seems very probable." We proclaim our belief that it is indeed truth that Dan was one of the fathers of the Greeks, for the Lacedemonian seal on the "letter" was "an eagle with a dragon or serpent in its claws, the symbol of the Tribe of Dan." Moreover, Jonathan says, in his answer to King Arsus: "We remember you in the sacrifices that we offer, and in our observances, as it is meet and becoming to remember brethren." Did the Jews sacrifice in the name of every Shemitic family, then? No! but they, the Two-Tribed people, did sacrifice in the name of the Twelve Tribes, and, therefore, in the name of these, their Hebrew brethren. Let us mark well how these three peoples, so linked together—Lacedemonians, Ligurians, Cimbri—are, as it were, focussed at last in Britain. There is no denying that: and I do not see very well how one can break the link which binds them, one and all, to Palestine. Is there anything so very crazy about our belief in our Israelitish origin, when we have history to back us up so well?

It is, moreover, strange and interesting to find that one of the principal tribes or families of the Ligurian race was named Levi, which certainly has a Hebrew "ring" about it; and we may note that this tribe was the most Northerly, and would most probably be first to bear the brunt of the Cimbric invasion. Whether this "Levi" had any affinity to the Tribe of Levi I cannot say; although I know that there were many priests in the "portion of Dan," and it is quite feasible to believe that they would escape if possible, with escaping Dan, from the Assyrian invasion.

Let us now see how we stand. I think we may say it is fairly beyond dispute that the Spartans, or Lacedemonians, contained the "escaped Israelites" — Danites, perhaps, principally. These Spartans, it is said, colonised Liguria—therefore, "escaped" Israel was represented in Liguria; and, as in confirmation, we find one of the Ligurian families bearing the name of an Israelitish tribe or family. Next, when the Cimbri invade Italy, it is found that they, and the Ligurians who opposed them, have the same war-cry, thus proving their common origin—namely, Hebrew. In this manner the arguments which have been used to prove the Welsh are Hebrew, are fully confirmed; and we see how this portion of "scattered," although "escaped" Israel, has been "gathered" into Britain.

We have no need to believe that the people with whom the "scattered" Israelites were associated were necessarily Israelites themselves. This leads us into the Teutonic theory; and if we had not the Bible, I should certainly believe in the Teutonic form of the Anglo-Israel theory; but then it would have little or no interest for us, for the "prophetic" and "divine" element in it would be wanting. With the Bible, however, before us, it is necessary to bear in mind that the "gatherer" of Israel is God; and, therefore, that no Hebrew emigration to Britain has been by chance, but under Divine direction.

So, whatever intermixture of races—certain, when we remember the "scattering" of Israel—may be found in Britain, whatever "rifts and remnants" of Israel may be found in different parts, it must be true that Britain and her colonies contain the bulk of "Ephraim, and the Tribes of Israel, his fellows." So that when we hear it said that there is the Gael of the British Isles, and also of the continent, we need not believe that this is in favour of the "Teutonic theory," for the "Gaelic race," which evidently came into Europe from Galilee and the adjacent lands, contained many Shemitic people, other than Hebrew, and surely the "Gatherer" of Israel knows His chosen race from another, and has brought to pass that which He ordained in the past.

That the Gaelic race contained some of "scattered" Israel is proved by St. Paul's Epistle to the Galatians; who, it can be seen, are Israelites; and we know from history that these Galatians had been in the West of Europe under the name of Gauls, or perhaps Cimbri—which, after all, is one and the same thing.

Yeatman says (page 152), "In later times the Cymric stream, fed, doubtless, by the same route from Asia, increased so abundantly that the receiving powers of the British Islands became exhausted, and then they encroached upon the Gauls, and streaming through their country, once more returned to the Summer country, as the Triads call the sunny South, covering not only Italy, Thrace, and Greece in their career, but actually crossing the Euxine, and under the name of Galatians, invading the very cradle of their race, the beautiful and prolific Asia Minor." At page 164 he says the same thing of the Gauls. This, perhaps, occurs through imperfect revision of the almost innumerable historical facts which that gentleman has crowded into his very interesting book. Mr. Yeatman also, at page 165, and elsewhere, proves the Gaelic, Cimbri, and Scythian races to be really one. This admirably chimes in with our theory that the backbone of them all was Hebrew.

There are many statements in the book from which I have been quoting that are favourable to Anglo-Israelism, some of which I lay before the readers of the Banner, who may not have seen the work, believing that much food for thought may be found therein. In a former article (Banner, March 3, 1880), I stated Mr. Yeatman's position with reference to the Lost Tribes, but I will repeat it. He says "the Lost Tribes are certainly in existence, but that no one, without the gift of prophecy, can tell which nations represent them." But it is in the "gift of prophecy" that we place our reliance—namely, the prophetical books of the Old Testament. That is the only "gift of prophecy" we know and can rely on, and without which the historical arguments were valueless and unprofitable.

Page 41: "The first settlers of Gadis were probably Gadites, as the first settlers of Denmark were said by their traditions to have been of the Tribe of Dan. The prophets relate that the whole of the Tribe had taken to ships—i.e., had become Phœnicians."

Gadis—Cadiz.

Digitized by Google

Page 144: "Vetelpandus, in his commentary on Ezekiel, after quoting Philo, Josephus, Seneca, and Cicero, on the fact of the Hebrew colonisation of Spain, mentions that there was a stone at Saguntium with Hebrew characters, as follows:—'This is the tomb of Adoniram, servant of King Solomon, who came to collect tribute, and died here.' This person is mentioned in 1 Kings iv. 6."

Ireland was colonised by emigrants from Spain. So here, again, there is nothing improbable in the "gathering" of Israel into the British Isles.

Page 89: "General Vallancy asserts that there are 2,000 words in Irish similar to the Chaldean, Hebrew, and Hindoo languages."

Page 91: "Le Brun, 'Voyage to the Levant,' asserts that Jacob's Tower, near Bethlehem, was twenty feet high, and exactly resembling the Irish towers."

Page 249: "The books of Leccun and Ballymote assert that the Tuatha de Dannans brought the harp into Ireland 719 B.C."

Page 250: "It is in the construction of the Irish harp that the greatest stress is to be laid. It is constructed on true harmonic principles."

Page 250. "The only other people who are known to have possessed the harp at this early period, and who, too, are the only other musical people in the world, besides the Kelts and the Scythians, are the Jews and their Shemitic relations."

Mr. Yeatman occupies six or eight pages of his work in enthusiastically advocating the truth of Professor Piazzi Smyth's facts concerning the Great Pyramid.

Page 73: "The Four Masters assert that the Tuatha de Dannan left Greece after a battle with the Assyrians, and went to Norway and Sweden, then to Ireland."

Such are a few of the links in the chain of evidence connecting Britain with Palestine and Israel.

"MAZZAROTH."

By A. R.

(Of Funchal, Madeira.)

(Concluded from page 138.)

PART II.

TAURUS AND ITS DECANS (Orion, Eridanus, Auriga).—The bull coming to rule, who saves mightily, wayfaring, pleiades, the heap, congregation of the judge or ruler, centre or foundation, leader, governor, counsellor, coming forth as light, the prince, the branch, the mighty, the ruler, bound together, stoopeth after the river, the shepherd, wounded in the heel.

Miss Rolleston says that the Jews brought back with them from the Babylonish captivity the beautiful square character of the Hebrew writing, which, wherever found, preserves some attempt to represent the horned head of the bull, the leader, the aleph. The European A is the head and horns inverted. One of the Egyptian hieroglyphics, read as A, is the head of apis, the bull, with the globe between the horns, which to Anglo-Israelites is intensely suggestive. Here, under Ephraim's sign, we find the first mention of wayfaring men; here, too, are "the sweet influences of the pleiades," of which the star, Alcyone, is proved literally to be the centre, round which our sun and system roll. "In the Book of Job, mention is twice made of Chesil, translated and generally considered to be Orion; but as the word occurs in the plural, Chesilim, and as there is but one Orion, this name must have a different intention (?). It always, however, is attributed to Orion, and in its radical meaning of bound together, well applies to the nebulæ so remarkable in this constellation." May it not equally apply to all the Tribes united under their prince?

GEMINI AND ITS DECANS (Lepus, Sirius, Procyon).—Twins, united as in brotherhood, wayfaring men, appointed, the palm-branch, ruler or judge, hurt, afflicted, bearing an arrow, coming to suffer, the enemy of him who cometh, the mad fool, the deceiver, the prince or chief of the right hand, the bright, the prince or chief of the left hand, the burdened, loaded, bearing for others.

I cannot agree with Miss Rolleston in thinking that Gemini simply typifies the divine and human nature united in our Lord. In some ancient forms of this sign, they are said by Hyde to have been two kids. Elsewhere they are always twin brothers; they are travellers, appointed; pollux, ruler; castor, hastening after; but bearing an arrow, with which he may be said to have wounded the rejected Saviour. The one bears a palm-branch, while the other comes to suffer. In a Buddhist zodiac there is a woman bearing a golden cord. In the ancient Egyptian Planisphere of Dendera, the twins figure as a youth leading a woman by the hand, suggestive of "the married wife," which Israel brings back as a present to the Lord. In Sirius and Procyon, chief of the right hand, chief of the left, seem to point to Ephraim and Manasseh, which the following items from an alphabetical table in "Mazzaroth," appear to confirm. The names of the Hebrew letters agree in signification with those of the constellations of which names or descriptive epithets they are the initials, thus :—

Sign.	Name of letter.	Noun	Verb.
Taurus	Aleph	Bull	To lead
Gemini	Beth	House (two storied)	Contain
Sirius	Resh	Head	Be first
Procyon	Shin	Tooth	Be second

Can one avoid thinking here of the whole House of Israel and Judah, as also of the words, "he set Ephraim before Manasseh"?

Miss Rolleston objects to the hare, in some zodiacs substituted more appropriately by the serpent. But why should not Lepus, beneath the feet of Orion, represent anti-Christ, that "mad fool," "the enemy of Him who cometh"? "Arnebeth, the hare, coming to rend or tear the vegetable (growing) crops," is no unfit representative of that insidious uprooter of all that is holy, the advancing scourge of infidelity.

CANCER AND ITS DECANS (Ursa Minor, Ursa Major, Argo).—Crab (or Scarabæus), holding the possession, cattle-folds encircling the possession, multitude of offspring, the sheltering hiding-place, assembled thousands, the lesser fold, waiting Him who cometh, the pole star, the turned or ridden on, the travelling company, the sheep-fold and sheep, wealth, strength, many assembled daughters, separated, visited, guarded, numbered, separate, protected, covered, redeemed. Argo, the ship, the company of travellers.

A glance at the meaning of these stars shows our firm grasp of our ever-increasing possessions, ending with the assembled thousands amid the cattle-folds of the Holy Land, the travelling company transported by the ship Argo. The great and little bear are supposed to be corrupted from the sheep-fold, and greater and lesser flocks, owing to the similarity between the Arabic dubhah (flock), and Hebrew dubhé (a she bear). I take the lesser flock to be Judah, still awaiting Him who cometh; the larger flock, Israel, blest with wealth, strength, numerous offspring, and safe guardianship. "The crab has apparently been corrupted from the Scarabæus of the Egyptians, but preserving the idea of holding fast a possession, as the beetle holds fast its progeny even in death. By some it has been held to typify the immortality of the soul. It is seen in Egyptian remains ascending with expanded wings, with human figures below, in attitudes of admiration." Who does not think of the catching up of the elect?

LEO AND ITS DECANS (Hydra, Crater, Corvus).—The lion, the separating, who rends, who wasteth, coming vehemently, the treading under foot, the shining forth, the joining, wrapped together, the punishing, the exaltation, the judge cometh who seizes, the enemy put down, the abhorred, the cup, piercing of the raven.

Digitized by Google

The "lion of the Tribe of Judah" leaps forth as a flame pouring out the cup of wrath on the evil one crushed beneath his feet, and summoning the bird of prey to rend his flesh. And now we must look forward to the new heaven and the new earth, for He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly.

"AND GREAT EARTHQUAKES SHALL BE IN DIVERS PLACES" (LUKE XXI. 11).

THE terrible earthquake which has just followed those at Agram and Switzerland will, we fear, be the precursor of many more, for the Lord predicted the fact, and it must come to pass. It is one of the signs of the last times, and we must pass through many more of such troubles before the Lord Himself appears in glory.

The following appeared in the papers of March 8, 1881, describing the frightful calamity in the Bay of Naples which had just occurred:—

THE EARTHQUAKE IN ITALY. GREAT LOSS OF LIFE.

Painful accounts have been received here, says a Roman telegram of Sunday, of the earthquake that has overwhelmed the Island of Ischia. The shock took place at five minutes past one on Friday afternoon, the hour at which the village clock of Cassamicciola remained standing. It lasted seven seconds, and was accompanied by a noise like subterranean thunder. Then came the crash of falling houses, mingling with the shriek of the victims. Many were killed instantaneously, mothers being found crushed with infants still clinging to their breasts. At Villa Canetti two girls out of three playing on a doorstep were struck dead by the falling of the architrave. The third escaped as by a miracle. The extent of the damage is still unknown. Some 300 houses are reported to have fallen at Cassamicciola, and 102 dead bodies, it is said, have been found. At Ameno five persons were killed, and thirteen houses have fallen.

Another account gives details of earthquakes literally in "divers places."

A strong earthquake shock has affected the greater part of Switzerland. It was especially severe at Neuchatel, rousing people from their sleep.

Several shocks of earthquake are reported in France from Puy de Dome and the surrounding country. At Saint Jean des Ollieres, Thiers, and Billom the shocks were distinctly felt, the oscillations being from East to West. Articles of furniture were moved or shaken, and at the last-named place many of the inhabitants were for a few moments in a state of the utmost panic.

Another shock of earthquake has been felt at Cassamicciola. That which most impresses one in reading the latter and more detailed accounts of the catastrophe is its fearful suddenness. The first and most destructive of the two shocks lasted less than a quarter of a minute. The dead extracted from the ruins already number 120. At Lacco Ameno thirteen houses were thrown down, five persons were killed, and two were wounded.

THE FIRST COLLECT FOR GOOD FRIDAY. — MORE BLIND EVIDENCE.—"Almighty God, we beseech Thee graciously to behold this Thy family, for which our Lord Jesus Christ was contented to be betrayed, and given up into the hands of wicked men, and to suffer death upon the cross, who now liveth and reigneth with Thee and the Holy Ghost, ever one God, world without end. Amen." How, apart from our Identity, are we to understand the words, "this Thy family"? Being found in the authorised formulary of the national establishment, they must be understood as referring to the nation. Therefore, everyone using this collect, if they attach any sense to the words used, therein acknowledge that this nation is God's "family." And yet, God Himself, speaking by the mouth of Amos the prophet, says to the Israelites, "You only have I known of all the families of the earth" (Amos iii. 2). To be consistent, we should, as a nation, either give up or alter this collect in this point, or acknowledge our descent from the Lost House of Israel, and that our history and present position is an undeniable proof of the unchangeable faithfulness of the All-wise Jehovah—the covenant-keeping God of our forefathers Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.—J. THOMSON.

Correspondence.

SURREY ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—In consequence of many communications having been received from believers in the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Lost Tribes of the House of Israel, suggesting that an association for the county of Surrey should be formed to carry on a more active propaganda on this most important subject, a meeting was held at Wimbledon on February 25, and it was decided to enlarge the sphere of the Wimbledon Association, the name to be changed to the Surrey Anglo-Israel Association. The head-quarters of the society, which is affiliated to the Metropolitan Association, will remain for the present at Wimbledon, in order to take advantage of the existing organisation; and gentlemen residing at Mortlake, Putney, Surbiton, Stoughton, East Molesey, Clapham, Denmark-hill, Upper Norwood, and Wimbledon, have already kindly consented to become vice-presidents. All believers in our Identity with Israel are earnestly invited to become members, and assist the committee in arranging for lectures to be given in all parts of the county. I shall be happy to give every information concerning the Association, its rules, and objects. Begging your kind insertion of this letter in your valuable paper,

I am, sir, yours faithfully,

J. LAWRENCE, Hon. Sec.

Stoneleigh, New Wimbledon, April 1, 1881.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

MY DEAR SIR,—Will you not, in your next number of the BANNER, call the attention of Israelites to Exod. xxx. 12, and following verses? Ought we not especially to make an offering on the occasion of the census next Monday? Our shilling is about half a shekel.

Yours truly,

ELLEN S. S. JOSE.

Churchill, near Bristol, March 28, 1881.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—We think our correspondent's suggestion a good one; and if each of our Israelites would send one shilling (or half a shekel) to the nearest Association secretary, to be used for the spread of Identity knowledge, there would be great good done. We suppose there are 36,000 to 40,000 readers of the BANNER, at least; the gift of one shilling by each would come to £1,800 to £2,000, and much might be done with that sum.

GREAT EARTHQUAKES SHALL BE IN DIVERS PLACES (Luke xxi. 11).—On Sunday, April 3, there was a terrible earthquake at Chio, in Asiatic Turkey. Five thousand persons were killed or injured. The shock was also felt in Karysto, in Euboea, Tinos, Syra, Tseesme and Smyrna. Nearly the whole town of Chio was destroyed, and also many neighbouring villages. Let the reader count up "the great earthquakes" which have occurred recently "in divers places," and say if our Lord's words are not literally being fulfilled? "When these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up YOUR heads, for YOUR redemption draweth nigh" (Luke xxi. 28). Israel! now "look up" and praise YE the Lord.

DR. BONAR GIVES BLIND EVIDENCE.—The following is an extract from a note inserted by Dr. Bonar in the preface to his work, "The Everlasting Righteousness." He says: "One who knows the 'religious world' well, and passed through its hollowness, thus writes . . . 'I know the kind of intercourse I had with many who pass for as good Christians as are to be found; and I know this, that very many who could talk hotly about doctrine, who would laugh and make merry, smile at my foolish jesting, showed no inclination whatever to join in speaking of the personal living Lord Himself, after He came by His strong arm of power, and made me wish more to speak of Him. I think it is well that you should be told such things. Cry aloud, spare not; show to the House of Israel their sins.'"

NOTICE.—The Annual Meeting of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association is fixed for Friday, May 20 next, in Exeter Hall. The Right Hon. Viscount Folkestone, M.P., will (D.V.) take the chair.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

384 Demy 8vo pages, in handsome cloth, gilt, price 3s. 6d., by post 4s.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF ISRAEL' HOPE AND DESTINY.

Edited by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.

This Volume contains Papers on all Points of the Identity of the British People with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel.

Price 4d., by post 4½d. Special terms for a quantity.

THE ISRAEL OF GOD.

A SERVICE OF SONG

Upon the Career and Destiny of God's Ancient People Israel. WORDS AND MUSIC.

BY C. W. E.

Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Second Edition now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

AMMI; or, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE

BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham the "friend of God," and showing that true science history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Price 2d., post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES.

An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? An Inquiry establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 4d.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST OR SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS AND TEACHINGS OF THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. 56 pages, Illustrated with Diagrams. Price 4d., post free 5d.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters."

Price 2d., post free 3d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

By REV. JOSEPH WILD, D.D.

With a Portrait of the Author.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C

SEE NEW IDENTITY QUARTERLY MAGAZINE. Editor, Rev. R. DOUGLAS, M.A., Vicar of St. Stephen, Sheffield. Articles by Piazzi Smyth, Col. Gawler, &c. Price 6d.; post free, annually, 2s. 3d. James Nisbet & Co., London.

NEW PAMPHLET ON THE IDENTITY OF THE LOST TEN TRIBES

FOR UNIVERSAL CIRCULATION.

The Best Pamphlet to place in the hands of a person unacquainted with the subject.

Price 6d., by post 7d. 64 Demy 8vo. pages, in wrapper. One dozen copies sent free for a post office order for 6s.

FIFTY REASONS

WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES

OF THE LOST TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL.

BY REV. W. H. POOLE, D.D.

"There is a principle which is a bar against all information, which is proof against all argument, and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance. This principle is, contempt prior to examination."—Dr. Paley.

A greater than Paley has said:—"He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is a folly and a shame unto him."—Prov. xviii.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET.

Specimen Copy post free for 2½d.

THE ONLY MONTHLY IDENTITY MAGAZINE.

Price 2d., Annual Subscription, 2s. 6d. Yearly Volume, 3s. 6d. Bound in cloth, gilt. Postage 6d. extra.

ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.

EDITED BY DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.

CONTENTS OF APRIL NUMBER :—

Anglo-Israel Bible Truths.—No. 4. "Call her name Lo-Ruhamah : for I will no more have mercy upon the House of Israel ; but I will utterly take them away."—Hosea i. 6.
The Testimony of Scripture Respecting the Date of Our Lord's Nativity. By Geo. N. Walsh.
The Chief Dates of the World.
The Hastings Controversy, Between the Rev. W. Barker, Baptist Minister, Hastings, and Philo-Israel, Editor of the "Banner of Israel."—Part XII.
"The Necessity for the Redemption of Ephraim-Israel." By the Editor.
"The Reputed Descendants of Ten-Tribed Israel Residing near Lake Ooroomiah, in Persia."
Correspondence.—Pyramid Chronology. Review.
Meetings, Lectures, &c.—Conference of Anglo-Israel Associations held at Manchester, March 9, 1881.—Morland, Westmoreland.—South Africa.—Perth Anglo-Israel Lectures.—Manchester and Salford Anglo-Israel Association.—Leamington Anglo-Israel Association.—Wimbledon Association.—Norton (Sheffield) Israel's Identification Association.—Preston Anglo-Israel Association.

ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET. AND ALL BOOKSELLERS.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,

High-Class Tailor,

47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.

MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

Ready Shortly.

A CHRONOLOGICAL AND GEOGRAPHICAL Shewing the DEVELOPMENT of the British Power and the Affinity of the British Nation with the Ten Lost Tribes.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

London: W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, E.C.

New ready, bound in cloth, 2s. 3d., gilt, 2s. 9d. post free 3d. extra.

SERMON I.,

Containing Seven Parts of Extracts from the

"FLYING ROLL,"

FOR THE

"INGATHERING" OF ISRAEL.

May be had of Joseph Head, John Rogers, George Moore, Edward Rogers, 5, Trafalgar-st., New Brompton, Kent; Joshua Rogers, 151, Great Titchfield-st., London, W.; and, by ordering, of any bookseller. May be had also in parts, 4d. each; post free 4½d.

"Who are Israelites, to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises."

A RESUME OF THE SCRIPTURAL ARGUMENT, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d. ; 6s. per 100.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published. Price 2d. ; 12s. 6d. per 100.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA THE ROYAL SEED TO KING DAVID'S THRONE, AND ARE NOT HER SUBJECTS, THE BRITISH PEOPLE, THE TEN LOST TRIBES?

BY WILLIAM HOPTON, of Sutton Heath.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published, price One Shilling, post free.

PROMISES, PROPHECIES, and DECLARATIONS relating to GOD'S CHOSEN PEOPLE ISRAEL.

London: F. Norgate, 7, King-street, Covent-garden.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Just out, 8d., post free 9d.

ISRAEL NOTWITHSTANDING: Being the Second and concluding Part of the Earnest Appeal from the Pew to the Pulpit. By JOHN G. SHAW, Author of "Britain (or Israel)," &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

ROBERT BANKS'S CATALOGUE OF WORKS ON THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH PEOPLE WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL will be sent to any address, post free, on application Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, APRIL 13, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 225. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, APRIL 20, 1881. [WITH SUPPLEMENT, ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Peace with Suzerainty, and Mr. Donald Currie on the Dominant Power in South Africa	157
The Second Advent of the Messiah. By P.	158
The Census of B.C. 1017 and of A.D. 1881. By the Rev. Denis Hanan, M.A.	159
Identity Difficulties Answered. Part XIII.—The Teutonic Theory. Is It True?	159
"The Oldham Parish Magazine."	160
The "Dying Out" "Identity"	160
An Interesting Pyramid Letter, just Received from an Officer—well acquainted with Palestine. Forwarded by Professor Piazzi Smyth	161
The Lord's Day; or, New Creation Sabbath Shown to be Identical in Spirit with the Fourth Commandment. By Samuel Sampson	162
The Identification of the British Nation with the Lost Tribes. Arguments Pro and Con. with Remarks by the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., of Bristol	163
David's Throne. By J. T. Gott	164
The Lincoln Anglo-Israel Association	164
The Identity of the Two Women. By G. L. B.	165
Reviews	166
Correspondence	167
More "Blind" Evidence	167

PEACE WITH SUZERAINTY, AND MR. DONALD CURRIE ON THE DOMINANT POWER IN SOUTH AFRICA.

MR. DONALD CURRIE, the representative in England of the Orange Free State in South Africa, and the friend of its President, Mr. Brand, of whom we have been hearing so much now, has lately been speaking regarding South Africa in general and the Transvaal war in particular, on board his splendid Cape steamship, "The Garth Castle." A notice of what he said appeared in the Edinburgh Courant, on March 17, 1881, from which we take the following:—

At an entertainment to South African merchants, given by Mr. Donald Currie to-day, on board his new and magnificent Cape steamship, the "Garth Castle," in the East India Docks, that gentleman referred to the course he had taken with regard to South Africa, and remarked that he should at the proper moment be ready and able to justify it. He trusted that ere long South Africa would become a ground on which both Dutchmen and Englishmen might meet to discuss their common interests, though he believed that no foreign flag could ever dominate the country so long as England was England, either by sovereignty or protectorate.

These be brave, patriotic, Israelitic words, for which we honour the speaker, and greet him as one who holds the truth of our Identity, though doubtless yet blindly. In spite of the late accidental defeats we have suffered at the hands of the Boer farmers, Mr. Donald Currie, while wishing the latter well, declares what is only true of us, because of our identity with Israel, that "no foreign flag could ever dominate that country (meaning South Africa, including the Transvaal) so long as England was England, either by sovereignty or protectorate.

Why should Mr. D. Currie be so confident of this? He has no good reason to give. But we Israelites have. To us as God's saints, His chosen, His selected ones, "the kingdom and dominion, and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven (therefore in South Africa) is given, as the people of the saints of the Most High, even the children of Israel, a people near unto Him. Praise ye the Lord!" (Dan. vii. 27; Psa. cxlviii. 14).

It seems strange that politicians may freely use the language Mr. Donald Currie employed on that occasion regarding the British nation, and no one thinks of questioning its truth or applicability to our race. But if one reflects, what ground can anyone possibly have, viewing the British as a purely Gentile nation, for declaring of it that its flag must dominate a great part of a savage Continent because "England is England?"

Apart from God's allotment of sovereignty to some races, and subjection to others, no valid reason can be assigned for this assertion. It has no ground to stand on. Were not England Israel, what possible right would she have had to India, Australia, Canada, the Fijis, and, finally, to supremacy, or even suzerainty, in South Africa? Would her wealth confer it? She gets that in virtue of God's gift to Israel (Deut. viii. 18). Is it because she has large and powerful armies? She has the smallest in the world, and the Boers have taught us they can be defeated and made to fly. Is it because of her nobility of character? Whatever is good in her (and it is but little) she derives from her connection with Israel. Is it because of her supremacy at sea that she is so exalted among the nations? It may be so; but that supremacy clearly depends on the possession of the Gates, a gift of God to the race of Israel alone. England, therefore, is England, because she is Israel of the Ten Tribes under another name (Isa. lxv. 15). A dominant, victorious, usurping, "conquering and to conquer" Power, yet one whose conquests tend to pour blessings on the vanquished nations of the earth, since she exists "to blossom, and bud, and to fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6). God has "formed her for Himself, that she may shew forth His praise" (Isa. xliii. 21). Seeing her character in the broad light which is exhibited to the world, no wonder that Mr. Donald Currie, who reasons correctly, cannot but perceive that a nation so obviously blessed from on high must be the only one which "could ever dominate the country of South Africa," be the Boers as madly defiant as they may be, and victorious over the British soldiery in a hundred skirmishes where rashness commands, and every advantage modern science gives, is thrown to the winds to snatch at an impossible victory.

As we write, the news comes of peace concluded with the

Digitized by Google

Boers on March 22, 1881. The terms support Mr. Donald Currie's expectation. Though the peace patched up is attended with no particular honour to the British, it saves the "flag." Dominancy, or suzerainty, is reserved for the British, with such control(?)over the Boers' Foreign Policy, and such protection(?) of the British settlers, friendly Boers, and native races, as Messrs. Kruger, Joubert, and their valiant, conquering farmer coadjutors will allow. The Boers, at any rate, will not be allowed to assume the position of protectors of the British Settlements, though consistently with the motto "Væ Victis," that were not a point outside the bounds of practical conclusions. We must be thankful British supremacy is nominally conceded. The British lion, in truth, cuts a very poor, very sorry figure indeed in this matter, even if the Boers pose grandly. The nett result is that British troops must remain on guard, 12,000 strong, near the Transvaal for some time to come, thus "scattering the power" (Dan. xii. 7); and if we do not mistake, the question will yet have ere long to be decided, "Which flag shall be supreme in South Africa, the Boers' or Israel's?" We think we can guess the result of that contest, and can appreciate at its true value the temporary peace Mr. Gladstone has just concluded with anarchy—and, shall we say, dishonour in its train? (Isa. liv. 15).

THE SECOND ADVENT OF THE MESSIAH.

By P.

The end of the dispensation being, as supposed, so near, and the second coming of the Messiah being inseparably connected with that event, it behoves all the faithful in the Christian world to carefully examine the grounds of their convictions, to ascertain whether they understand fully all utterances bearing upon the second advent, and whether they really are in possession of all that is revealed by the twin witnesses—the Bible and Great Pyramid—on that momentous subject. Especially is this both the duty and the privilege of those who recognise themselves to be of Israel; for to Israel was the Messiah promised; through Israel the Messiah came; they were chosen His peculiar people; they claim Him as peculiarly their own; and it should be to them, therefore, at least probable that, as with the first, so with the second advent, a peculiar manifestation of His presence may be made in their midst.

Divine utterances, embodiments of Divine wisdom and foreknowledge, have often many meanings and applications, some of these remaining latent until the time pre-determined for their interpretation. "Progressive revelation," "progressive interpretation," are the two keys to the complete understanding of God's Word.

It is a trite but true saying that history repeats itself. The Jews had their inspired Scripture, which their most learned men studied line by line and word by word; yet they totally failed to understand the Word of God concerning the first advent. There is grave danger that the Christians of to-day fall into the same error for which they blame their despised brethren, the Jews. That such would be the case is clearly indicated by our Lord Himself in the parable of the virgins. In the general the virgins represent the various branches of the Christian Church; in one particular sense they represent the Ten Tribes of Israel. The Ten Tribes, bodily, are in the sound sleep of ignorance of even their own Identity, unawakened as yet by the cry that is going forth to rouse them; and those individuals among them who are awake to their Identity are in their turn asleep as to much that is revealed concerning the how and the when of the second coming—that coming which they believe so near. A few considerations on these momentous questions are here offered.

1. When?—During the period of the first advent the time of the second was held by the Father in His own keeping; but to us, in our day, He has given—first, by the course of events in fulfilment of chronological prophecy; secondly, by the unsealed revelations of the Pyramid—an approximation to the exact date. An approximation only, in a sense, it is; because what is termed by some the overlapping of sequences of events, and the intervention of the Great Step in the Grand Gallery of the Pyramid, give a seeming ambiguity to the determination of the length of the dispensation. Historical periods, or the great divisions of time in human history, are not sharply defined, but seem to merge one into another—thus, like the colours of the rainbow, rendering it difficult to determine with precision where one ends and another begins—e.g., for the times of the Gentiles various limits have been assigned—all with apparent reason, as is well shewn by Mr. Guinness in his admirable book, "The Approaching End." (Parenthetically, it may be said here that the principal limits will be found to be determined for Pyramidists by the Great Step. In A.D. 1813-15 the last and most formidable danger that threatened the national life of England was surmounted, and Israel completed her uphill journey; planting her feet firmly on the level table-land of national security and easy progress; healing by lasting peace the wound of separation between herself and her powerful offspring on the other side of the Atlantic; and thus beginning, with God's direction and assistance, the restoration of that kingdom which, under the Messiah, is to embrace the world).

As different events and dates can be assigned for the commencement and termination of the times of the Gentiles, so also with the Christian dispensation, which may be said to begin

1. With John the Baptist.
2. With the birth of Jesus.
3. With His public and official work.
4. With His death or ascension.

The first two, if not the third of these events, may be said to belong to both the Mosaic and Christian dispensations. They belong to the Mosaic, for John lived entirely under the law, though preparing the way for Christ; and Jesus came "to fulfil the law and all righteousness." (To realise what is meant by "beginnings" of the dispensation—a term simply used for want of a better, the effects of the different events must be kept in view. Thus, the birth of the child Jesus, and His subsequent public life, extending over 30 years, had apparently no outward influence whatever, the Mosaic dispensation remaining undisturbed and continuing in full force during the whole of that period.) The Mosaic and Christian dispensations then, merge into each other; and the latter may be said to begin earlier or later, according to the indications perceived and selected. Further, the Divine plan is so constructed that there are private beginnings for the few (instance, the parents of John and Jesus, the shepherds, and the magi), and the public beginning later for the many. May it not be so also with the termination? That there are indications to this effect, both in the Scripture and in the Great Pyramid, seems indubitable, although, like those of the Identity, they have remained latent during many centuries.

In the latter the Great Step serves more than one purpose. If the length of the dispensation be determined by measurement up the Step, taking the Step in feet (altered direction, altered unit) it will be 1877 years. If the Step be taken with unaltered unit, as 36 inches, the length will be 1910 years. If the measurement be carried along the floor-line it is said to be 1881·6. (The writer cannot help thinking that there may be an error of about an inch too much here, and would suggest the inquiry whether the inspired architect has dated from John the Baptist.) And if the measurement be taken along the ceiling, as, from the phenomenon of the impending South wall, is evidently intended by the Divine designer, a fourth date results—namely, 1847. The Pyramid being God's Word in symbol, every feature has its definite meaning—the indications just mentioned shew that there are four endings, corresponding to the four beginnings, of the dispensation; and time will doubtless show that the close, as well as the opening, will have been marked by a series of events merging into one another with unbroken continuation.

(To be continued.)

Digitized by Google

THE CENSUS OF B.C. 1017 AND OF A.D. 1881.

By the Rev. D. Hanan, M.A.

The numbering of the people ordered by King David was most displeasing to the Lord God of Israel. Can we from the record of that event discover reasons for believing that our present census is according to His will and pleasure?

In the first place the provision made in the law Exod. xxx. 12, for taking "the sum of the children of Israel," shows that a reckoning for civil or religious purposes was approved of; and it is most probable that our blessed Lord submitted to this enumeration at the time that He provided for the payment of the half shekel (Matt. xvii. 27). In the second place, the numbering of the men who were able to draw sword, which David required with such obstinate self-will, shewed that his mind was bent upon a career of conquest, which whether successful or unsuccessful would have diverted his and the nation's mind from that which was God's purpose—namely, the preparation for the temple, and we cannot doubt but that the grievous punishment inflicted was absolutely necessary; it effectually weakened the power of the nation, and in the manner, etc., of its merciful removal pointed out the temple site, and chastened David's spirit so that he thenceforth devoted himself to the work which was after God's heart.

Thus a civil census was permitted to Israel; a purely military census was not; and we need only contrast the purpose of the reckonings made by the nations of the European continent, with that which influences ours, to learn how widely different are the conditions of national life which require one or the other. The one, enforced military service, the army a burden to the State, and a cause of fear to all neighbouring peoples; the other, voluntary enlistment, the army virtually a police for the protection of commerce at home and abroad; and no cause of fear to other peoples, unless they force us to defend ourselves.

A British census made for the purpose of establishing the continental system of military service, forgetful of the deliverances that have been wrought for us hitherto, would import a leaning upon an arm of flesh, would drag us out of the path pointed out for us; and now as of old would doubtless bring weakness upon the nation; while a census made in the purposes of peace, is a means to help forward the development of our true strength, and a preparation for the purpose after God's heart, which it is our high privilege to execute, and which in His own good time and way He will enable us to perform; when by our hands a more glorious temple shall arise, when over us the Greater than Solomon shall reign, when through us, as His executive, the heathen shall be His inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth His possession. For this end may the Lord God of Israel add unto the people, how many soever they be, an hundred fold, and prepare for His work, according to His promise, willing hearts among the ten thousands of Ephraim and the thousands of Manasseh.

April 3, 1881.

IDENTITY DIFFICULTIES ANSWERED.

(Continued from page 7.)

PART XIII.

The Teutonic Theory. Is it True?

What is the so-called Teutonic theory? and is it as held by some among us true? These are stumbling blocks many feel, and a short statement on the subject seems now called for, as one of our "Identity difficulties answered." The best exposition of what is meant by the Teutonic theory is given by the daughter of the late John Wilson in her "Answers to Sixty Anglo-Israel Difficulties." It occurs on page 75. It is there asked, "Where are the Ten Tribes?" and the reply is "Not among the Anglo-Saxons alone," "but the Israelitish origin of the modern nations of Europe" is also allowed. "Christianised portions of ancient Israel on the Continent" are declared to hold some of the Ten-Tribed Israelites, and it was distinctly affirmed that the Anglo-Saxons sprung from "that one Tribe (Ephraim) from which a multitude of Gentiles were to proceed." This was the first rudimentary idea. It soon grew; and finally resolved itself into one which found Ephraim and another Tribe or two, perhaps, in the British Islands, but the other seven or eight Tribes, quâ Tribes, among the Teutonic, or as they are now called, the Gothic nations of Europe.

"A second view is that which regards the British Islands as the home of Ephraim, of Manasseh, of Dan, and Benjamin, but assigns the remaining six Tribes, as Tribes, to the Teutonic, or Gothic, and Scandinavian nations on the Continent." One writer boldly declared that "the Germans, as the Teutonic adversaries of Latinism, are the Tribes of Israel destined to be restored to their own land, Palestine, to defeat the Prince of Rosh, Mesech and Tubal" (Ezek. xxxviii., xxxix.) "to publish the glad tidings of salvation, to destroy Latinism and the Romish apostacy, when, and when only, the antagonism between Rome and Israel will cease" (Standard of Israel, vol. i., p. 148; vol. ii., 69). Such is the theory. But as in all cases of error so here, those who hold it do not agree in assigning to the various continental nations indicated identity with the same Tribe of Israel in all cases. Thus, the Tribe of Gad is held to be identified in the German or Prussian empire by most Gothic theorists, while others say that Gad is to be now found in the Caucasus and Tartary. Some that Dan is represented by Denmark, and by part of Ireland; others that he is in Turkey (!) and so on. That being the view taken, how is it shown that the Gothic idea is incorrect, and that which restricts the Ten Tribes (in fusion) to the United Kingdom, and to the British Empire exclusively, the true one? The following seem to be the salient points in the argument:—

1. There is no other nation or nations on the face of the earth which respond to ALL the prophetic promises and covenants made by the Almighty "to Abraham and his seed for ever," but the British nation. We possess them all. The continental Gothic or Teutonic nations have not in possession so much as one.

2. The seed of Israel, it is prophetically declared in Jer. xxxi. 36, shall never cease to be a nation. The prophecy negatives the idea of the Hebrews of the House of Joseph breaking up into many nations, as demanded by this theory.

3. "The kingdom of God" is declared by our Lord to be the inheritance of "A nation bringing forth the fruits thereof," in supercession of the House of Judah, and that nation being, no doubt, the "House of Israel," or "Joseph," the view that that House is tribally divided into various nations in Gothic Europe is discountenanced (Matt. xxi. 43).

4. "The time of the end," and the period when Israel and Judah must return to their land is now near, as almost all men allow. Only two nations are to return together—namely, Israel and Judah (Jer. iii. 18; Hosea i. 11; Ezek. xxxvii. 22). But the Teutonic theory insists on the many continental nations returning to Palestine as Israelites with Judah, which is absurd and contradictory of God's Word.

5. Jeremiah xxxiii. 26 declares that David's seed is always to furnish dynastic RULERS over the whole seed of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob: each occupant being in succession a single individual—"a man" (ver. 17—21). This of course cuts to pieces the Teutonic theory, since that demands many rulers over separate Tribes, occupying many distinct thrones at the same time, an idea opposed to Scripture.

6. The promises of the "Gate," "the multitudinous seed," "the great wealth," and the "ruling functions over many Gentile nations, were granted to the Tribes of Israel in common; but the Teutonic theory, which admits that the Tribe of Ephraim alone enjoys these promises now, disinherits the Tribes which, on their showing, occupy parts of Europe among the Gothic nations. This is contrary to Scripture, and therefore fails to stand the test.

Digitized by Google

7. Ten-Tribed Israel was, in banishment, to be known as "the sons of the living God," or "the Christian nation," in the very land where they should be also styled "Lo-ammi," or "not God's people" (Hosea i. 10). But the Germans, or chief of the Gothic nations, are not a Christian nation at all, teste the Times; nay, that paper declares "it is the most unchristian country in Europe, rapidly surrendering itself to the paganism of modern culture" (BANNER, vol. v., p. 41). The Teutonic theory therefore is wrong, and the Germans, nationally, cannot now be Israel, or any part of Israel.

8. God promised Israel a resting-place in banishment which should be "their own," and whence "they should move no more;" where the children of wickedness should afflict "them no more as before time." This clearly promised them immunity there from foreign invasion, a fact realised by British-Israel in "The Isles of the West" for a thousand years, but utterly untrue of Germany, Austria, France, Spain, Portugal, Italy, Turkey, Denmark, Sweden, Hungary, Russia, etc., in fact of the whole continental nations who have, times out of number, been invaded, defeated, and humbled, each of them, with every mark of indignity (2 Sam. vii. 10).

9. Ten-Tribed Israel were constituted in God's Word the dispensers of the grace of God, the propagators of the Gospel to all the nations, to all the kindreds, and to ALL the families of the earth (Gen. xxii. 17; xviii. 18; Acts iii. 25). The British alone fulfil this function. Not one of the continental nations, certainly not the Gothic, attempt it in its universal significance.

10. Israel were as God's "inheritance" to possess the heathen (Psa. ii. 8; cxi. 6). The Teutonic nations fail to do this, while the Anglo-Saxons fulfil the prophecy to the letter.

11. Israel was to be a truly Sabbath-keeping race, nationally (Exod. xxxi. 13—17). The British are so, the Teutonic races are notoriously just the reverse. They keep not God's entire day holy.

12. Israel were destined to respect the ten commandments of God. The British do this, the Gothic races do not (Deut. vi. 4—9).

The above represents an outline of the argument which tends to prove the fallacy of the Gothic or Teutonic theory. Enough has been said to give the clue to the inquirer, and to teach him how to amplify it at pleasure. It suffices, we think, utterly to discredit the theory which seeks to identify with some of Israel's Ten Tribes the Gothic nations on the Continent, and to lead to the conclusion that the House of Joseph, which was never dealt with in God's prophetic Word as anything but a corporate body (certainly not as Tribes now in separation) must to-day be where Ephraim, Benjamin, and Dan, (according to most of the Teutonic theorists) now reside; that is, in the British Islands. In conclusion, we hope that what has been now written may give the coup de grace to any remnants of a fallacy which dishonours God and His Word, now existing among Israelites; and that we shall hear very little more of the Gothic or Teutonic theory.

(To be continued.)

"THE OLDHAM PARISH MAGAZINE."*

THE Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille, M.A., Vicar of Oldham, and his excellent band of Church helpers, issue monthly an admirable parish magazine, the first copy of which now lies before us. We draw attention to its introductory article for the New Year, 1881, and beg for it the careful consideration of the Rev. B. Wrey Savile, and others who think with him, that we have exceeded the limits of propriety in insisting that (teste the Great Pyramid), we are living in the very dregs of the present dispensation. Mr. Cachemaille and his curates evidently are of our opinion; and if we have erred, they have erred too. We are on sure ground, however, in this matter; and so we are convinced Mr. Savile believes, too, seeing that he has himself, in his work, to which we have often referred (vol. i. No. 15, p. 131, "Turkey; or, the Judgment of God," &c.), declared the probability of the years 1881-2 seeing the end of the Mohammedan as well as of the Papal Anti-Christian systems. We are glad to see Mr. Cachemaille, in the article we quote, boldly announcing his belief in our Identity by calling this great (British) nation "God's people Israel." It is only by plain speaking the clergy can hope in this matter to secure the respect of the Church, and we are grateful to Mr. Cachemaille that his trumpet at least gives no uncertain sound. The opening address to the parishioners at Oldham is as follows:—

THE NEW YEAR.

Eighteen hundred and eighty-one! We are drawing out the last threads of the present dispensation of grace! It cannot be a matter of mere superstition nor one of infatuation which leads us to think so. When we remember that all the converging lines, sacred and profane, Christian and heathen, point to within a year or two of this present one as the completion of a period beyond which no one can tell exactly what is to come,—it is no fancy that leads us to say that we are drawing out the last threads of the present dispensation.

If nothing else were there to lead our thoughts into so serious and so gladdening a channel, the very activity of the Christian Church would lead us to feel that she was preparing and making herself ready for the advent of her Lord. When we consider the vastness of the operations and the intensity of the zeal that has sprung up, even in the last fifty years, in the Christian Church, one cannot fail to be struck by it as meaning something more than activity, it is activity in the near prospect of some great and far-reaching event. We never see such activity in the secular world without knowing that some special event is near at hand. So in the Church, we are awaking and trimming our lamps that they may light the Bridegroom to the feast. If this is so, we must more than ever be on the watch this year. "Who shall abide the day of His coming?" Not those who are careless, sensual, godless: "Blessed is the servant whom his Lord shall find watching when He cometh."

Watch ye, brothers and sisters; this great nation—God's people Israel—has a destiny in the near future full of glory. A Happy New Year will soon set our discords and difficulties at rest, and unite us in the immediate service of Christ the King. "Lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh."

We need not say we highly approve of the Oldham Parish Magazine, and recommend all our Identity incumbents to go and do likewise.

THE "DYING OUT" "IDENTITY."

WE take the following from the Times, July 7, 1880. It is a complete vindication of our position that Jer. xxx. 11 is true of the New Zealand aborigines among whom God has scattered British-Israel. He is making a "full end" of the Maories; but of Israel He is not making a "full end." He has merely "corrected us in measure." He has destroyed the former to make room for His chosen people. Our extract is as follows:—

"THE MAORIES OF NEW ZEALAND.—A recent census of New Zealand has revealed the fact that the Maories are rapidly decreasing, and it is quite possible that a generation or so may find them exterminated altogether. The causes given for this national decay are love of drink, bad food and clothing, unwholesome dwellings, neglect of cleanliness, and generally low social habits. In 1861 the Maories were estimated to number 55,336, but since then they have decreased to 43,595, or about 20 per cent. in seventeen years. The natives of Hawaii, however, are showing a still more rapid destruction, for they have decreased from 57,125 in 1866 to 44,088 in 1878, or at the rate of 23 per cent. in twelve years, or 32·4 per cent. for seventeen years. In their case the mischief is hastened by the prevalence of leprosy. The Registrar-General of New Zealand is not very sanguine as to the recovery of the Maories from their downward career, for, apart from their deficiency in moral qualities necessary to arrest the process of decay, the history of aborigines invariably shows an inability to graft the habits of civilisation on native habits and customs."

* January, 1881. Price One Penny.

Digitized by Google

Supplement to The Banner of Israel.

Vol. V. No. 225.] WEDNESDAY, APRIL 20, 1881. [Gratis.

AN INTERESTING PYRAMID LETTER,

JUST RECEIVED FROM AN OFFICER—WELL ACQUAINTED WITH PALESTINE, ANCIENT AND MODERN—RETURNING TO INDIA; DATED CAIRO, FEBRUARY 27, 1881.

FORWARDED BY PROFESSOR PIAZZI SMYTH.

MY DEAR SIR,—I went yesterday to the Great Pyramid and spent the day there. Going round the base, I found Mr. W. M. F. Petrie gauging the angle of Colonel H. Vyse's Casing-stone with a set square. Upon mentioning your kind recommendation to see him, he immediately pointed out the features of the Casing-stone and its excessively fine joints. The angle, he stated, corresponds with wonderful exactness to the theoretical angle. We had a discussion as to the object of the close joints. I think Mr. Petrie agreed it might be to make the Casing present the appearance of an unbroken slab. Nothing shews in stone so clearly as a joint or crack. I scarcely know a building which looks like a sheet of stone. The immense pains taken with the Casing, with the result of leaving only two or three stones was next noticed.

Mr. Petrie is at present triangulating round the base and site to connect the whole group of pyramids, tombs and other objects, as well as to ascertain the real length of the Base-sides of the Great Pyramid. He hopes to prolong the Casing-stone direction on to the socket, and observe where the line falls. Possibly there may be a stray Casing-stone under the rubbish on the East face to furnish an intersected point; but much excavation would be required, beyond the power of an individual explorer, I should say.

Mr. Petrie was kind enough to come inside the Pyramid with me, a very great advantage. We both went down the Well and below the Grotto. At one side of the top of the Well was a "return," which we decided must have been to allow of the Cap-stone being fixed. The Well itself, below its square-built top, was a forced winding cut in the solid Pyramid masonry, made after it was all erected; of no regular section but ample everywhere for a man to pass. The rock seemed to begin near the summit of the Grotto. Originally, Mr. Petrie considered, the Grotto was one of those holes in limestone which floods have filled with shingle. When the excavators came to it, they "steined" a square well through to the solid again. The "steining" is flimsy work, small squared blocks, about half a cubic foot each, in mortar, contrasting forcibly with the rest of the Pyramid. The walling is only one stone thick. The walled portion of the Well is about a tall man's height, and the section is continued square for six feet lower in the solid, and then branches off in a steep descent much filled with earth. The Grotto thus presents a very complicated problem. It was seemingly a cave in the rock, filled up solid with detritus, and this pierced by a somewhat rude and weak "steined" square well. It has struck me before that the phenomenon of the Deluge had a terrestrial origin not yet admitted, and the shingle in the Grotto certainly called the Flood to mind. That the Grotto was filled from the first, need not alter the signification, but makes it more difficult to trace.

We went through the Upper Passages and Chambers of the Great Pyramid. I was greatly struck with the view from the Step, down the Grand Gallery. There was something peculiarly striking and expanded in the dimensions, as if a definite idea was intended to be conveyed. One appears to be looking back on a noble roll of history. Forward it is not the the same; there is only the Narrow Passage. The King's Chamber was pervaded by a different, though a magnificently regal sentiment. It had uniform solidity and symmetry, as if of that of a renovated world; one that must be, but no more durable than other forms of matter. The Queen's Chamber had quite the aspect of a peculiarly Jewish dispensation. The Niche at one side was a brief, but singular reflection in miniature of the Grand Gallery. There was a ledge all round the Floor, but the heart was composed, Mr. Petrie said, of the ordinary Pyramid course. We examined one or two of the marked crosses (your "let-in, cruciform stones") opposite, or immediately above, the rampholes in the Grand Gallery. I have not yet seen any conjecture with regard to either of these. The crosses may refer to certain of the martyrs. They are of very peculiar construction, the single stone in the centre of each being let into the wall, which is bevelled all round, and then packed flush with cement. Mr. Petrie pointed out crosses in the Israelitish first Ascending Passage in which the Side-stones (forming the arms of the cross) were separate, and no grooves were cut in the wall; I hope he will note the exact measurements, if these have not already been taken.

I asked him what he thought about the Head-stone, and he said that was what so many were desirous to know more about. Was the stone ever there? It may have been, and since broken up. But there was a stone the builders rejected. In 1 Peter ii. 6, Διο και περιεχει εν τη γραφη Ιδου τιθημι εν Σιων λιθον ακρογωνιαιον is distinct. Is it possible that the Pyramid will be again cased, and that the stone the builders refused is still to become "the head of the corner" (Psa. cxviii. 22)? The stone was placed in Zion for a reason given in Isaiah xxviii. 15, 16; and may be there to this day.

I was surprised that the Great Pyramid was known to the people about, in Arabic, as "El Haram," simply. Three Bedouins were with me all day, and I got on pleasantly with them. They were very shrewd, intelligent people, exactly like some classes of Indian natives; so much so that I could really, except in their language, trace no difference. One thing struck me very much. I asked them what made the Caliph think of breaking into the Pyramid at the spot he did; and they said, "he was guided by the stars, for if there was one thing more than another the Arabs understood and cared for, it was the stars; they watched them sitting out in the clear nights."

When I passed last through Egypt in 1872, I did not think the country particularly flourishing—I have not been in Cairo since 1860. This time I am quite surprised at the advanced state of the whole country, so far as I have seen; and at the comfortable, well-found condition of the people. They all seem highly fed and respectably clad, and have a free, independent bearing. The markets also are better supplied than those of any Eastern country I know; and the land has the look of being in good order, and widely cultivated. Cairo has made extraordinary progress. This is most remarkable when the surrounding Oriental principalities, Turkey, Asia Minor, and Persia, and indeed other places, are perfect wrecks all round. I have been at a loss to account for the immense improvement of Egypt and the Egyptians. I am told the settled taxation, the public works, and the investment of British capital which is going on, is the cause in the main. I cannot see a trace of oppression at present. At the same time the country is one that would be readily injured if the Nile were diverted. They (the Egyptians) are able, which no other country in the world is, permanently, to dispense with manuring for their crops. Assyria, I imagine, has not equal resources; it had a grand expansion while the fertility lasted, but they ran their land out; then their prosperous times departed and their civilisation was scattered. I do not however see the people of Egypt yet in the position denoted as "blessed" (Isaiah xix. 25). There are several races, not fused into one. But I think I can see that they are getting into such a condition, that any strong sentiment would spread with extreme rapidity; and they are, in a manner, detached, or in process of being, from neighbouring Orientals. European civilisation is acting upon the country with greater force than in perhaps any other part of the East; but I think that local rule is weaker at the present moment than it has been for a long time, although better.

Digitized by Google

I intend making another excursion to the Pyramid to-morrow, and writing again before I leave Egypt.

Your sincerely, ———.

THE LORD'S DAY;

Or, New Creation Sabbath Shown to be Identical in Spirit with the Fourth Commandment.

By Samuel Sampson.

"The law is spiritual" (Rom. vii. 14); and let it be attentively considered that there is a unity in the words which "God spake at Mount Sinai, when giving what has justly been termed "the moral law;" so that he that shall offend in one point is guilty of all (James ii. 10); for He that said, "Thou shalt not take the Name of the Lord thy God in vain," said also, "Remember the Sabbath-day to keep it holy." Observe, further, that the commandment sets forth much more than bodily rest or cessation from ordinary labour, "If thou turn away thy foot from the Sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on My holy day; and call the Sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honourable; and shalt honour Him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words" (Isa. lviii. 13).

It is noteworthy that different nations are said to have set apart for public worship one day out of the seven, and thus each day of the week is so occupied: Sunday, by Christians; Monday, by Grecians; Tuesday, by Persians; Wednesday, by Assyrians; Thursday, by Egyptians; Friday, by Turks; Saturday, by Jews.

We have often felt amazed that so little consideration appears to have been given to the expressive facts of the broken and unbroken tables. Concerning the first table we read, "And it came to pass, as soon as he (Moses) came nigh unto the camp, that he saw the calf, and the dancing; and Moses' anger waxed hot, and he cast the tables out of his hands, and brake them beneath the mount" (Exod. xxxii. 19). Read attentively the entire account, as there given, of Israel's great sin. Moses was never reproved for this very significant act. Judgment, however, immediately followed upon the breaking of the tables, "Moses ground the calf to powder, and strewed it upon the water, and made the children of Israel drink it" (ver. 20). In the riches of sovereign grace, the tables were RENEWED (not mended), and deposited in the ark: "At that time the Lord said unto me, Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first. . . . And I will write on the tables the words that were on the first tables which thou breakest, and thou shalt put them in the ark. . . . And He wrote on the tables, according to the first writing, the ten commandments, which the Lord spake unto you. . . . And I turned myself and came down from the mount, and put the tables in the ark; and there they be, as the Lord commanded me" (Deut. x. 1—5).

And there they be! Yes, there they be, blessed be God. Never have they been broken, they have been fulfilled, made honourable in the person and work of our Surety, the Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the ark was a figure (see Dan. ix. 24; Psa. xl. 7, 8; Heb. x. 7, 9, 10; Luke xxiv. 44; Isa. xlii. 21).

From the different or distinct positions of these tables, the broken and the unbroken, we deduce the following conclusions:—

1. The law is holy, and the commandment holy, and just and good, whether written on broken, or unbroken tables, the writing being precisely the same on each (Rom. vii. 12).

2. That all who are under the broken tables are under guilt and condemnation, and that judgment on such will most assuredly follow (Gal. iii. 10; Rom. iii. 19, 20).

3. That those who are in Christ Jesus, and only such, have the law of God written in their hearts (Rom. vii. 22, viii. 1, 2; Heb. viii. 10).

4. That those who attempt to diminish, neutralise, or make void any one of the commandments, cannot be said to have the law of God written in their hearts; consequently they are yet in their sins.

1. Further observe, that the word "Sabbath" does not of necessity limit itself to either Saturday or Sunday, and a reflecting mind cannot but admire the wisdom manifest in the framing of the fourth commandment.

2. The meaning of the word "Sabbath" is rest or cessation from working (Heb. iii. 18, 19, iv. 9); much more, however, than physical rest is here set forth. Under the Mosaic dispensation the word "Sabbath" was not confined to the seventh day, or Saturday; it is used for all the Jewish festivals indifferently (see Lev. xix. 3, 30). Concerning the day of atonement, it is expressly stated, "And it shall be unto you a Sabbath of rest" (Lev. xxiii. 32).

3. That the holy Sabbath was instituted before the giving of the moral law is clear from Exod. xvi. 22, 26, and from Gen. ii. 2, 3; it has been considered coeval with creation, and the word "remember" at the commencement of the fourth commandment may be a confirmation thereof.

4. We sometimes hear it argued that the Lord's-day is not a Jewish Sabbath. True, it is not. The Jewish Sabbath terminated when the Lord of the Sabbath lay dead and buried in the earth, and certainly there can be no Sabbath where the Lord is not.

5. On the first day of the week the glorious resurrection took place, it was the first day of the new creation, the new creation Sabbath, and, as such, it has ever since been commemorated with the Divine sanction of the risen Lord, and with the Divine authority and example of inspired apostles (see John xx. 19, 26; and Acts xx. 7). "And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them" (see also 1 Cor. xvi. 2). (It is only in these last days of "the approaching end of the age," that "modern thought," sometimes named "advanced thought," has found out that all has been a mistake!)

6. The Lord on sundry occasions was pleased to make certain alterations, as to period, as in the case of Num. ix. 10, 11; 2 Chron. xxx. 18, 20. The month Abib was in fact the seventh month of the year, but it was changed to be the first (Deut. xvi. 1); and so Tisri, which was the first month of the natural or civil year, became the seventh month of the sacred year.

7. In like manner the first day of the week became commemorative of the new creation, and this seventh portion of the seven days has been kept up in the Churches as a holy convocation to the Lord our God. Thus we have six days' labour, and one holy Sabbath, according to the commandment.

8. The Lord gave this reason for keeping holy the Sabbath day; because He had brought them out of Egypt, "therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day" (Deut. v. 15).

9. We thus have this beautifully harmonious sequence. The Lord ordained a day of rest after creation; He renewed it after redemption from Egypt, and He changed the Jewish seventh day to the new creation first day of the week, after redemption by Christ. The first day of the week is the Lord's-day. "Will a man rob God?" (Mal. iii. 8).

10. It is worthy of notice that in circumnavigating the globe, a day is lost or gained, as we travel from West or East. How, then, is the Sabbath to be regulated if the attempt be made to adhere to the letter and slight the spirit? How, again, in the arctic circle?

Brighton, March 1, 1881.

Digitized by Google

THE IDENTIFICATION OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TRIBES.

ARGUMENTS PRO AND CON, WITH REMARKS BY THE REV. C. W. HICKSON, M.A., OF BRISTOL.

PART I.

[IN publishing the following paper, we are requested to say that the first part of it, dealing with the pros and cons of our Identity was prepared by an inquiring student of the subject, and by one firmly holding it, respectively. These being shown to our friend, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, he prepared his "Replies," which were not intended, or written for publication at first. Being sent to us as an afterthought, we deemed they were deserving of BANNER-room, and present them to our readers accordingly.—ED.]

Pro.—Israel, after 975 B.C., is a distinct and separate nation from Judah and Levi (the Jews), and there are promises in Scripture to Israel distinct and apart from those to Judah, or the Jews.

1. Con.—This is denied, as promises to Israel must include the Jews, but promises to the Jews cannot include the Israelites, the Jews being Israelites, but the Israelites not Jews.

Pro.—The Ten Tribes of Israel are lost, and are to be found, therefore they must exist.

2. Con.—Where?

Pro.—By discovering peoples who fulfil the requirements of Scripture, as conveyed in the promises and prophecies.

Pro.—The British nation fulfil these conditions in more numerous and remarkable instances than any other nation that has existed since the Tribes were lost.

Pro.—Gen. xii. 2. Great Britain enjoys greater blessings than any other nation.

Pro.—Gen. xxii. 17. Possesses Gibraltar, Malta, Cyprus, Aden, Bombay, Calcutta, Madras, Singapore, Hongkong, Bermudas, Barbadoes, New Zealand.

Pro.—Gen. xxviii. 14. British the most prolific nation of the world; the population of Great Britain will double itself in from 50 to 60 years, at present rate of increase.

Pro.—Gen. xxxv. 11. Great Britain and her colonies and dependencies; possibly most European kings are Israelites.

3. Con.—Why not Great Britain and all the European kingdoms, all of which must contain Israelites, more or less, especially Germany (meaning Central Europe), through which all the people passed before reaching England? To what countries has England furnished kings, unless through inter-marriage? The same might be claimed by countries with whose royal families our kings have married.

Pro.—Gen. xlviii. 19. Great Britain and America and the Colonies fulfil this.

Pro.—Lev. xxvi. 7, 8. Most British victories have been gained by very inferior forces.

4. Con.—This is applicable to the ancient wars, in the conquest of Canaan, as they were won by the sword, and modern battles are not.

Pro.—Deut. xxxiii. 17 shows that Ephraim will be discovered numerically stronger than Manasseh. The unicorn is an insignia of Great Britain. Deut. xxxiii. 29. Great Britain is the most religious and happy nation.

5. Con.—This applies to spiritual Israel, Christians.

Pro.—Deut. xv. 6. True of Great Britain only in the present day.

6. Con.—Equally applicable to the Jews, therefore they are enjoying that promise.

Pro.—Isa. xli. 1.

7. Con.—Don't see anything in this except in the word islands, which conveys nothing.

Pro.—Isa. liv.

8. Con.—It is very questionable, if righteousness was employed in the establishment of British power.

Pro.—Isa. liv. 17. True at present. Isa. liv. 3, and xlix. 20.

9. Con.—See nothing bearing on the subject of importance (Jer. xxxiii. 17).

10. Con.—If the British nation are Israel, a man is wanting on the throne at present, and has been before (Jer. xxxi. 35—36).

11. Con.—Only shows that Israel is in existence still (Hos. xiv. 5, 6).

12. Con.—Israel, when found, will be found all over the world.

13. Con.—Epistle to Galatians all, especially the third chapter. You will find it distinctly laid down that the promises were fulfilled in Christ, and that the Gentiles are adopted into the family of Israel, and equally inherit the promises (Gal. iii. 27, 28, 29). The Israel to be found complete will be Christians of all nations and countries, and not exclusively the lineal descendants of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

Gal. iii. 29. "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise."

REMARKS ON THE ABOVE BY THE REV. C. W. HICKSON.

In the first con there is a fallacy couched under the word "Israel." True, promises to Israel as a whole—i.e., Twelve-Tribed—include the Jews; but promises to Israel Ten-Tribed —i.e., made to the separate kingdom of Israel when it was in existence, side by side with Judah, MUST BE fulfilled to Israel as distinct from Judah, and therefore MUST BE fulfilled before the re-union of Judah with Israel takes place.

Such distinct promises to Ten-Tribed Israel are Hos. i. 10, ii. 14, 23, xi. 8, 9, xii. 9, xiii. 4, 9, 14 (comp. vi. 2, where a day almost undoubtedly means 1,000 years; see 2 Peter iii. 8) and xiv. 1, 8. All these promises are made concerning the separate kingdom of Israel, or Ephraim, and to that specific and separate "Israel" they will be fulfilled. So also Amos ix. 9, 15. Even after the very partial return of Judah from Babylon, a future for Ephraim as distinct from Judah is predicted. See Zech. x., where verses three and four refer to Judah, verse six to Judah and Israel (called "Joseph" here) together; and verses 7—12 to Israel or Ephraim only, and as distinct from Judah; verses 7—12 must therefore be fulfilled to Ephraim-Israel before the union with Judah-Israel takes place. After that union has taken place it is emphatically predicted that there will be no division of interests between Judah and Israel (see Isaiah xi. 13; Ezek. xxxvii. 22), therefore I repeat, for it is a point of great importance, the promises made to Ephraim—i.e., Ten-Tribed Israel as distinct from Judah—must receive their fulfilment before the re-union of Judah with Israel; in other words, before the expiration of the times of the Gentiles, and therefore during the present Christian dispensation.

2. Con.—The answer to the second con is to be found in Isa. xi. 11, last clause, the other clauses, all, I think, refer to Judah. Isa. xxiv. 14; Jer. iii. 18, "land of the North;" Hos. xi. 10, "the West." [N.B.—Egypt, in ver. 11, must be figurative, denoting the place of Israel's exile and prolific increase, since in ver. 5 it is said he shall not return into the land of Egypt, in flat contradiction to viii. 13, and ix. 3, if literal Egypt be meant in all these passages. Though it is true that God brought up all the Tribes out of Egypt, yet it is remarkable that Ephraim are specially connected with that event—e.g., Amos ii. 10 (where the context shews that Israel, not Judah, is addressed), and Zech. x. 10. The Egypt and Assyria of the historic past are literal; but clearly those of these promises of the future are figurative, though it is not impossible they may turn out to have a literal significance as well.] Also Jer. xxxi. 7, "Shout (b'rôsh haggôyem) in the head of the nations."

It is in that nation which is the head of the nations that the shout is to be raised. The answer then to the question, Where? must be one which will combine all these: where the head nation is, in the islands, in the North, in the West; in other words, in the North-Western island home of the head nation. Is there any difficulty in defining the place thus indicated?

3. Con.—"All the European kingdoms must contain

Digitized by Google

Israelites, more or less." Perhaps so now; but this is not to continue. European nations are in heart "our enemies." But God says Israel shall be gathered into their own land, and none of them be left any more in their enemies' lands (Ezek. xxxix. 28). By their own land cannot be meant only Palestine, as Palestine will not hold all Israel after the return (Zech. x. 10, last clause), Israel (backsliding Israel distinguished from treacherous Judah) are not to return en masse, but only representatively, one of a city, two of a family (Jer. iii. 14). Their North-Western island home and colonial possessions will be "their own land" still. But none will be left in their enemies' lands.

Further, the European kingdoms are the last form of the great world power symbolised in Nebuchadnezzar's dream, of which Babylon was the head. Therefore called Babylon in the Revelation. Out of this Babylon God's people—i.e., such of Israel as may be there—are called just before her doom takes place (Rev. xviii. 4).

Whilst God predicts the shaking up of Israel (Ten-Tribed) among all nations, as of corn in a sieve, He at the same time declares His purpose to keep them distinct (Amos ix. 9).

God does not say that Jacob's seed should supply kings to other nations, but that out of Jacob's loins kings should come—i.e., that his seed should be a monarchial race, ruled over by a succession of kings. A line of kings, surely, not a number of co-existing sovereigns, is what is meant.

4. Con.—Surely a mere glance over the passages cited in any good concordance under heading "sword" would suffice to show that it is frequently employed as the symbol of war, and not to denote the literal implement of warfare so named. See for instance Ezek. vii. 15, where sword is clearly a synonym for "war," or "battle." Matt. x. 34, where it means "contention," as opposed to "peace." Also Isa. ii. 4, which relate to these latter days, when battles are not "won by the sword," nor are spears used except by Zulus and such like. Common sense must be employed, and comparing Scripture with Scripture to determine when language is literal, and when symbolical, figurative, or metaphorical. No hard and fast rules can be laid down on this point.

5. Con.—What right has anyone to say so? Where is there any indication whatever of transition from the literal Israel of Deut. xxxiii. 1—28, to some other so-called spiritual Israel in ver. 29? If the Israel of ver. 29 is to be interpreted as something different from the Israel of ver. 1, 5, 10, 28, or the Jeshurun of ver. 5, and 26, then there is an end of all consistency and certainty in interpreting Scripture language. Did David mean the spiritual Israel in 2 Sam. vii. 23, 24? By every law of exegesis, not to say by every consideration of common sense, the Israel in ver. 29 must be the same people whose Tribes are separately blessed in all the verses from 6—25. The closing verses refer to the Twelve-Tribed nation as a whole.

(To be continued.)

DAVID'S THRONE.

By J. T. Gott.

In reply to your note, asking for explanation, I think it is only the very captious, or those who have a very meagre knowledge of the biblical foundation of Identity truth, who would infer from my contribution on Jonah (part iv., page 104, pp. 2 & 3), that God's promise to David was "conditional." He must be a very superficial student of the Bible who does not know that it was certainly unconditional with David. There was a condition laid down, but not with him. The text in the paragraph referred to, is taken from the Psalms, and, as it stands, is correct. In 2 Samuel vii. we read that David desired to build a house for the Lord. It was then that the unconditional promise was made. "Thine house and thy kingdom shall be established for ever before thee; thy throne shall be established for ever" (v. 16). David's son, Solomon, was to build the temple, and the condition was made with him. "If he commit iniquity, I will chasten him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men; but My mercy shall not depart away from him, as I took it from Saul," &c. (v. 14).

Referring now to the paragraph in question, it will be seen that the condition was not made with David, but with his children. They did not keep the covenant and the testimony, and the promise was suspended. The glory of David's throne became dimmed. When the unconditional promise was made, David ruled over all Israel. For many years Solomon's descendants ruled over a mere fraction of all the Tribes of Israel. When the Jewish dynasty came to an end, then David's seed must have passed over, and must be ruling to-day, over Lost Israel. (British-Israel, as we believe.)

David's prayer of thanksgiving (v. 18—29) is enough to convince any unprejudiced mind of the unconditional character of Jehovah's promise.

David's seed and throne must be in existence still, for after the second and final return, it is predicted, "David My servant shall be king over them; and they shall have one Shepherd" (Ezek. xxxvii. 24). "My servant David shall be their prince for ever" (ib. 25).

THE LINCOLN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

We take the following from the Lincolnshire Chronicle, of March 18, 1881:—

"A lecture on 'The Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel' was delivered in the Masonic hall, Lincoln, on Tuesday night, by Mr. J. M. W. Young, organist of Lincoln cathedral, and president of the above association. The chair was occupied by Mr. John Unwin, of Sheffield, editor of Israel's Prophetic Messenger. There was a fair attendance, and the lecture was listened to with marked attention. Mr. Young, in his opening remarks, said the object of his lecture was to prove the Identity of the British nation with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel. The subject could not fail to be of great importance to them individually, while it was of such vital importance nationally that it could not be over estimated. Their very existence as a nation depended on it. Mr. Young then proceeded with his lecture, which he divided into three heads, showing that David's seed must be ruling over Israel at the present time; that the British nation is Israel, consequently our Queen is a descendant of David; and that the coronation stone in Westminster Abbey is Jacob's pillow, the stone of Bethel, a proof that the British nation is Israel, and that Great Britain is the fifth and last Great Empire, tho Stone Kingdom spoken of in Daniel ii. The lecturer handled the subject in a masterly manner, and was frequently applauded. Votes of thanks to him and to the chairman closed the proceedings."

Spread of the English Language.—Twenty-six years ago an American or Englishman in Paris could scarcely find a Frenchman who could talk any language but his own, and travellers were equally restricted to one dialect. The Paris shops were sealed books in 1851-2 to English and Americans; and a valet de place, or "guide," that could talk English was as rare as a silent monkey or a yellow crow. Now all is changed. You can go to Rome and back to England for less than it will cost you to live at an English watering-place the same length of time. The Frenchman acquires English not nearly so generally as the Englishman does the French, but the two get on very well together, and every day practice is making both more perfect. Every French shop, almost, and all the best hotels, have English attendants; and at the Exposition you were helped through by a number of good people who talk to you and for you. English is the quicksilver that simplifies the polyglot mixture, for while the man who knows English tries to master German and French, the two latter grapple English at the same time. English is a part of polite education in the best French and German schools. How will it be in twenty-two years, between now and the opening of the twentieth century? The spread of the English language is among the marvels of the present; other tongues stay in schools and sections, or grow in the soil where they took root, dying out, as in America, where they were transplanted more than a hundred years ago. But the English is the tongue that travels and discovers, lights, controverts, and converts.

Digitized by Google

THE IDENTITY OF THE TWO WOMEN.

By G. L. R.

In regard to the former papers dealing with the subject of the birth of the Man-child, some of our readers might say, "How do you account for the fact that sometimes you represent the Israelitish Church under the aspect of two different women?" The answer must come from the Word of God. Jerusalem is a name common to Israel under the law, and also to Israel under the Gospel. In other words, it belongs to Judah historically until the rooting up of her polity; but to Israel (Ten-Tribed) prophetically, or during this dispensation. Let us turn to the prophet Jeremiah, and compare chap. xxxiii. 16 with chap. xxiii. 6. In the latter chapter the Lord Jesus Christ is called the Lord our Righteousness, and Israel is the name of the Ten-Tribed House; in the former, the Lo-Ammi people is called Jerusalem—that is, "the holy city," "the Mount Zion," "the Church of the living God." She has apparently lost her name of Israel in the grander and more honoured epithet of "Jerusalem, the mother of us all" (Gal. iv. 26, 28); and when her dear Lord shall come, being joined to Him, "reigning with him," "one with Him," "this is the name wherewith she shall be called, 'The Lord our Righteousness'" (Jer. xxxiii. 16). "Who shall separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord;" then shall the body be in living union with its Head, and when He appears we shall be like Him. Is this language too strong? Is not our life now hid with Christ in God? and do we not now dwell in heavenly places? We look forward with joy to the time when, the Holy Spirit being poured upon us from on high, we shall be constituted "the righteous nation," God dwelling in the midst of us.

But now to our point. In Ezek. xxiii. we have our key; the second verse represents two women, the daughters of one mother, and whilst looking at these two we see Aholah has the birthright position. Again, in Jer. iii. 7, Israel and Judah are sisters. On investigating this latter chapter we find backsliding Israel hath justified herself more than treacherous Judah, and is exhorted to return unto God; for though He had put Israel away (ver. 8), yet treacherous Judah dealt feignedly, she in effect said, "I go, sir, but went not;" whereas Israel said, "I will not, but afterwards repented and went" (Matt. xxi. 28, 31). In this parable the two nations are represented as sons, for the repentant one was zealous, vigorous, energetic, in fact, a "man-child," bringing forth the fruits of the kingdom (Ephraim). Being justified in Christ Jesus, looking upon Him as her Saviour, she became free from the law, he being dead from whom she had by her sin separated herself (Rom. vii. 1—4; Hos. ii. 14—23). This betrothment is now going on, and will be consummated by the marriage union described in Jer. iii. 14.

We ask our friends or our opponents whether the Lord may not have in view throughout the vista of ages the one woman, calling her Jerusalem, whilst the union of the two nations was still in existence, but after the separation He had mercy upon that one of the two, her offspring whom He had fore-ordained to be a witness to the law (Hos. i. 7), and that, in order to show that by the deeds of the law no flesh should be saved, He exemplified this in the destruction (as a nation) of her who was under the law. During this time Judah, as the heir, in that she prevailed over her sister (1 Chron. v. 2), was called and recognised by her mother's name, Jerusalem, and of her came the Chief Ruler, the Lord Jesus Christ. This Jerusalem is now in bondage with her children. But in Isa. liv. she is addressed who had been put away—viz., the Ten-Tribed House, the other daughter of this one woman, and as the result of that finished work, recorded above in chap. liii. (where Christ is said to see His seed, ver. 10, 11), she is exhorted to "Rejoice, thou barren that barest not, break forth into singing, thou that travailest not, for more are the children of the desolate than the children of the married wife, saith the Lord."

Thus under the Gospel comes forth that other daughter, the one to whom the birthright pertained (1 Chron. v. 2), and the Tribes represented under "Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and all the House of Israel his companions," the people that had not obtained mercy, they who were denationalised (Hos. i. 9), to whom Judah had said, "Get you far from the Lord." But God had promised to be a little sanctuary unto them, and although "cast out," "dispersed," yet were they not cast off. This people (Rom. ix. 21), made from the same lump as Judah, born of the same woman, are received again into blessed fellowship (Rom. ix. 25, 26), "For the Lord hath called thee as a woman forsaken and grieved in Spirit, and a wife of youth, when thou wast refused, saith thy God (Isa. liv. 6, with context). By sovereign grace this people (once Gentiles, in that they had ceased for a time to be "Ammi," "My people," and consequently, the whole world being regarded under two classes, Jews and Gentiles, as they were certainly not Jews, they must have been Gentiles), this wandering, outcast, dispersed people, by the infinite love and mercy of God, in the fulness of time is brought nigh through the blood of Christ. "Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump to make one vessel unto honour and another unto dishonour?" (Rom. ix. 21—24). What if God, willing to show His wrath, and to make His power known, endured with much longsuffering the vessels of wrath (the nation of Judah) fitted to destruction; and that He might make known the riches of His glory on the vessels of mercy, which He had afore prepared unto glory, even us whom He hath called not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles. "Even us." Who does St. Paul mean? himself a "man of Benjamin," a "Hebrew of the Hebrews." To analyse these expressions would take up too much space, we leave them to others, merely asking who the Hebrews were to whom He referred? and taking into consideration Heb. iv. 1—3, as spoken of those Hebrews who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ; and ver. 6, as alluding to the Jews nationally. Again, these Hebrews (Heb. xi. 21) were come unto Mount Zion, unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem (chap. xii. 22), and are placed in contrast with those other Hebrews, who, like Esau, sold their birthright, and had "come to the mount that might be touched and that burned with fire," and "unto blackness, and darkness, and tempest" (ver. 18). It does not occur to us that anyone has attempted to interpret this epistle other than literally.

St. Paul also came from Asia Minor, Cilicia, the region of the location of the "strangers" (in that they were not Jews), scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia (proconsular), and Bithynia, whom St. Peter addresses as "elect according to the foreknowledge of God, through the sanctification of the Spirit unto obedience, and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ." Being elected unto obedience, they come into the promise made unto Israel in Lev. xxvi. 12, also into all these glorious attendants in the context, and are constituted "a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people," that they might show forth His praises, who had called them out of darkness into His marvellous light (1 Peter i. 1—4, ii. 9, 10, 24, 25; Isa. liii. 6, 10, 11).

Thus we see, on studying these portions together with Rom. iv. 16, with context, Gal. iv. 22—31, and Eph. i., that the Church under the New Testament, is of the same family with Judah, agreeing with so many Old Testament utterances, such as "You only have I known of all the families of the earth." The two families which the Lord has chosen. The last family being the elder daughter (Samaria) of the one mother, and fore-ordained of God to be the other witness—viz., that one loved with an everlasting love, therefore drawn with loving-kindness (Jer. xxxi. 2).

And so the Identity of the two women lies in their being seen as God's two witnesses, the one proclaiming EL, and the other JAH. The Lord He is the God. The EL of the law, the same as the JAH of the Gospel. "The just God, and yet the Sanctifier of all that believe on Jesus" (Mal. iv. 5, 6); the effect being the glorious reunion of Judah and Israel under one Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

Digitized by Google

Reviews.

A Lecture on the Principles of the Reformation, as Developed Both in the Old Testament and Apostolic Times. An argument from Analogy. By the Rev. W. Butler Doherty, vicar of St. Matthew's, Kingsdown, Bristol. Hamilton Adams & Co., 32, Paternoster-row; I. E. Chillcott, Bristol. Price 4d.

WE commend the above pamphlet very strongly to our readers for two reasons. 1st. It affords excellent blind testimony to our Identity; and 2nd. It is a new and original light thrown on our glorious Reformation, connecting it distinctly with all previous reformations of God's inheritance by means simply and solely of His own Word.

The author, who is the successor of our late adversary, the Rev. J. B. Clifford, in St. Matthew's, Kingsdown, Bristol, sets out to show that the Reformation of the sixteenth century was brought about by the operation of two principles—1st. That God Himself addressed man on the subject of religion; and 2nd. That He has so spoken that man can understand Him. God thus spoke, says Mr. Doherty, to Adam in Eden, to Cain and Abel after the fall. The elder brother practised a religion devised by his own thoughts, the younger what God prescribed. He dared to differ from his elder brother, and God honoured him. For Abel heard and obeyed God's word. So did Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, and finally the children of Israel. All these heard the words of God, obeyed, and thus carried out the principles of our own later Reformation, which was founded on obedience and submission to the Scriptures of truth. At page 7 Mr. Doherty points out how the Church life of the people of Israel exhibited a "movement exactly similar in all essential respects with our own Reformation." His examples he takes from the histories of Joshua, Samuel, Moses, David, and the prophets, all of whom insisted on conformity to God's Word written. Hezekiah's case, as described in 2 Kings xviii. 4—7, and King Josiah's in 2 Kings xxii., when "the book of the law was found," are relied on as showing a parallel Reformation to our own in Jewish times, arising from the self-same cause. The Word of God was newly rediscovered and there followed amendment of national life, and, above all, God's blessing and favour. The Reformation in Ezra's days, brought about by the same cause (the appeal afresh to God's Word), is dwelt on by Mr. Doherty as a fresh case in point, showing by analogy that our own Reformation was a God-blest one, grounded on His own Word. All through this excellent pamphlet the "analogy of parallelism," between the facts of the God-blessed history of Israel and Judah of old, and our own sixteenth century Reformation are insisted on, to prove that the latter was of God, "with world-wide results of blessing, lasting and still extending to this day." The honour put on the Scriptures by our blessed Lord Himself, and by His apostles and disciples, furnishes Mr. Doherty with strong arguments in support of his contention—namely, that God's means to reform His people are the exhibition to them of His Word, teaching them to live thereby. The Scriptures were the means used, and they were addressed to the people in such wise that they could understand them. Fallen themselves into gross darkness and national sin, the Word of God was given to them all through the times of declension from the first, as the means of restoring the people to godliness, and it was always and at all times (says Mr. Doherty) "BY THE WORD" (Eph. v. 26).

So far our author. We have the pleasure now to show our readers how unconsciously and blindly our respected teacher has riveted the links which bind the Gospel and Reformation light to God's people Israel, the inhabitants of these Isles of the West.

All Mr. Doherty's arguments are directed (as they must be) to the effects of the Reformation among the British people and Church. Yet Reformation light was given by the Lord to Germany, Italy, France, Belgium, Spain, and Austria. What has caused it to die out there? Where is the Huguenot Church? Killed. The German Protestantism of Luther? It is only living as a name. Its vitality is gone. Italy, Spain, Belgium, Austria are sunk in Papal darkness without a hope of revival. Why is it living, flourishing, growing, increasing, only in these isles of the West? Why is God's Word a living power here as it is nowhere else? and while it has lost its vitality as a reforming agent on the Continent, why is it powerful here among the Anglo-Saxons alone, to revive, strengthen, sanctify, and restore spiritual life among a recreant race, whose tendency is, and always has been, to let that life die out and perish? Mr. Doherty does not answer these questions, and he does not pause to consider the wondrous fact of the continuity of the blessed Gospel and of the Word of God to these islands. We find, in the facts of our case, and in the wondrous original "argument from analogy," Mr. Doherty has brought before us in his pamphlet a clear testimony to our Identity with Israel, for God's own word is that "He showeth His words unto Jacob, His statutes and judgments unto Israel. HE HATH NOT DEALT SO WITH ANY NATION. And as for His judgments, THEY have NOT known them" (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20). Because of God's choice of the British as His lost people Israel, the analogy with Israel of old is seen to come out with force here as Mr. Doherty proves, and because of our Identity He favours us with reformation on reformation for He showeth us His Word, His statutes, and His judgments. He never has dealt and never will deal so with any other nation as He did with Israel of the olden days, and as He does with us. His choice of Israel is proved by many portions of the Word, and "God is not a man that He should lie, nor the Son of Man that He should repent." "He hath commanded to bless Israel, and He hath blessed, and none can reverse it" (Numb. xxiii. 19, 20; Deut. iv. 1—9, vii. 6—9, xxvi. 18; 2 Sam. vii. 23, 24; Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20; Amos iii. 2; Matt. i. 21; Rom. xi. 1).

We hope Mr. Doherty will have many readers, and will in time himself see how strong an argument he has furnished us to help us to prove our Identity with God's chosen ones, His people Israel. At present, no doubt, his is blind testimony.

Good Tidings to Israel and the Church. A quarterly magazine, edited by the Rev. Robert Douglas, M.A., vicar of St. Stephen, Sheffield. Price 6d., 2s. 3d. per annum. Jas. Nisbet, 21, Berners-street, W.

THE new Identity magazine above described, the first number of which has just issued from the press, has for its object the dissemination of the Gothic or Teutonic theory, with the addition of some spiritualising views, peculiar to the editor, Mr. Douglas, himself. We have no sympathy with this effort. If we do not feel called on to oppose it, we do exceedingly regret that such an apple of discord has been thrown into the Israelite camp. We trust none of our friends will co-operate with it. The three papers written by the editor—viz., "Our Creed," "The Outlook, Our Apology," and "How I Found Israel"—plainly show what the object of this magazine is.

The authoress of "The Heir of the World" has a Teutonic, or Gothic article in it, called "The Company of Nations," re-asserting the error that the European nations are of Israel. We find however Professor P. Smyth has contributed a paper to the magazine, which must be very distasteful, we think, to Mr. Douglas, since it plainly preaches coercion against the Boers of the Transvaal, and that the British are the Ten Lost Tribes. Col. Gawler's article, "Scyths and Scots," is colourless.

We thought that the Gothic error had died with the death of the Standard of Israel, but as we are disappointed in that hope, we propose to do our best to expose the misconceptions of this serial, and are thus forced to revive disputes which we had hoped were dead and buried long ago. Mr. Douglas declines to call himself an Anglo-Israelite, but simply an Israelite, because he considers that "mere natural descent goes for absolutely nothing either to the individual or nation, except to increase the condemnation of the unbelieving." Yet, in contradiction of himself, he adds that his view is, that "only those are Israelites who have the spirit of Christ now, as well as the natural generation." It comes, then, to this: according to Mr. Douglas, Israelism consists in being a "true believer"—that is, a child of God, plus the natural birth as one of Abraham's seed. That man who combines both has a claim on the Abrahamic blessings; but the condition of the man who has the Spirit of Christ without the natural generation, or only the latter without the former, is not described. Both, we conclude, must be outside the covenant. We are landed here in scores of absurdities, which facts show to be such. For instance, there is tied up to the Abrahamic covenant the multitudinous seed, the Protestantism as a nation, the national possession of the Gates, and the evangelising world-wide function (Gen. xxii. 17, 18; Isa. xliii. 12). Our nation exercises and enjoys all these blessings, but only a mere small percentage, it must be admitted, of our race are yet true believers in Christ. How, then, do we all actually as a nation enjoy the Abrahamic covenants? The fact is, Mr. Douglas's belief is a contradiction, and is upset by the views of his own contributors in the first number of his magazine; for at pages 24—27 we find A. S. declaring that the European nations, qud nations, are that "company of nations" promised by God to Jacob (Gen. xxxv. 11), and therefore Hebrews or Israelites. While the same writer asserts that the "fulness of nations," promised by Jacob to his son Ephraim (Gen. xlviii. 19), finds its fulfilment in the exceeding fulness, even to repletion, of this land, as compared with others, a fact which results in her throwing out colonies (these must be Hebrew and Israelites), and the "latter are fast becoming nations" (page 26). We exceedingly rejoice in this slip, for here this incautious writer admits (contrary to her own argument) that the British, being Israelites of One Tribe only, are not only possessors of the "fulness of nations," but that the said "fulness" is bringing on the other fulfilment—namely, "the company of nations."

Digitized by Google

The final outcome of the theory Mr. Douglas is encouraging by leaving the paths of prophetic truth is reached at page 26, where A. S. asserts that Jacob, while separately blessing his sons, showed thereby that "their future, each as head of a Tribe, will eventually be, that each will be found TO BECOME A NATION." (The capitals are A. S.'s.) Israel of the Ten Tribes, therefore, must be ten nations now, according to A. S., though God's Word always speaks of "Ephraim and the Tribes of Israel his fellows" as one nation with A king of the seed of David to rule over them ALL, according to the promise of God to the sweet Psalmist regarding the throne of his posterity over the one nation "Israel for ever" (Jer. xxxiii. 17, 26; 1 Kings viii. 25; 2 Sam. vii. 24—29; Ezek. xxxvii. 19).

A magazine founded on Identity error, embracing contradictory and perplexing spiritualising teaching, which revives the exploded follies of the Teutonic and Gothic theories, cannot be acceptable, one would think, to British Israelites. We therefore do not think the Rev. W. Douglas's venture is likely to be successful; and we are resolved that in the interests of God's truth it shall be resisted, as far as we are able lawfully to do so, by means of the BANNER OF ISRAEL.

The Chronology of the Bible Identified with that of the Great Pyramid of Egypt from Adam to A.D. 1881. By Donald Stuart. Mauritius: General Steam Company, 6, Government-street, Mauritius, 1881.

THE above is the title of a small pamphlet of ten pages which we have just received from the Mauritius, and which, we believe, is not procurable in this country. It is a remarkable and original publication, having for its object to build up a scheme of sacred chronology from the Bible alone, commencing with Adam and ending with the present year, A.D. 1881. Mr. D. Stuart takes his terminus a quo from the fall of Adam, not his creation. Then, he holds, Adam became mortal, and his true history belongs to us from that time. Starting with his chronological data, Mr. Stuart links the Scriptural dates with the Great Pyramid's, and finds them both fit accurately. He reckons the Great Pyramid chronology thus:—

The Entrance Gallery is	985 inches long	=	985 years.
The first Ascending Passage is	1542 "	=	1542 "
The Grand Gallery is	1881 "	=	1881 "

The chronological period, measured by the Great Pyramid, therefore, is 4408 years.

From these conclusions he turns to the Bible, and there finds, by reckoning the dates and periods given us, that, for reasons he states, there were—

From Adam to the announcement of the Deluge 1591-2 years.
To the accession of Pharaoh, before Exodus, 2577 years from Adam.
To the birth of Christ, 4119 years from Adam = A.D. 0.

Summarising his results, Mr. Stuart brings out these analogies and coincidences:—

	Bible dates.	Pyramid dates.	Dates after Adam.
From Adam to announcement of Deluge ...	1591-2	0	1591
From announcement of Deluge to accession of Pharaoh, before Exodus...	985-6	985	2577
From accession of Pharaoh to birth of Christ	1542	1542	4119
From birth of Christ to A.D. 1881.	1881	1881	6000
Years from Adam to A.D. 1881	6000	4408
Add unrecorded period in Great Pyramid ...		1592
Years from Adam to A.D. 1881, according to dates		6000

The reasoning on which Mr. Stuart grounds the above results we are unable to furnish for want of space; but we think his pamphlet, which is written with special reference to Freemasonry, and for the good of his fellow-craftsmen, ought to be circulated to the public; and we should be glad to hear that Mr. Stuart (who we believe to be a searcher after truth in respect to our Identity) has thought it proper to bring out an edition in London for the benefit of those who want to know more of a system which harmonises the Bible chronology with that of the Great Pyramid, and brings Free masonry, also, to bear upon the question.

Correspondence.

ENGLAND AND AMERICA.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Your correspondent, "H. W.," takes me to task in your issue of the 2nd inst., for referring to the words of Mr. Read and Mr. Gladstone. I did not accuse the former of anything except the attempt to make America appear the greatest country in the world, which she is not, in any sense of the word.

I cannot now lay my hand upon Mr. Read's lecture; but as regards my "being badly informed" as to Mr. Gladstone's views, perhaps I may be allowed to quote a few of that gentleman's remarks from his article in the North American Review, entitled "Kin Beyond Sea," in justification of my former letter which you were good enough to publish in your issue of February 2, last.

He says, "America will probably become the head-servant of the great household of the world, the employer of all employed because her service will be the most and the ablest." That "while we have been advancing with portentous rapidity, America is passing us by in a canter;" while "England is to fall to the condition of Genoa, or Venice, or Holland." That "their self-command, self-denial, and wise forethought for the future, have been, to say the least, eight-fold ours." That "as between the America and England of the future, that the daughter at some no very distant time will, whether fairer or less fair, be unquestionably yet stronger than the mother." He "supposes the very next census in the year 1880 will exhibit America to the world as certainly the wealthiest of all the nations."

All this adulation of America fell very wide of pleasing her, as the following extract from a New York paper will show: "Like all Mr. Gladstone's utterances, this is sonorous, fluent, and pleasing, delivered with an air of superior insight and wisdom; and it is specially commended to American readers by a dash of patronising compliment. Possibly a good many persons will think a sincere respect might have been better attested by a careful study of our history and institutions, and by an avoidance of misconceptions and blunders, some of which are so extraordinary that they cannot be passed over."

Of course, I can only be informed of Mr. Gladstone's views as he is pleased to express them, and I beg to recommend to "H. W.'s" attention "Kin Beyond Sea," and "American Facts," &c., in Blackwood's Magazine, November, 1878, from which I have quoted.

I thought that the extract I sent you was a capital answer to the former, and I think so still.

Yours faithfully,
"A BENT OAR."

Montreal, March 17, 1881.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—With the above letter the correspondence on the subject will close in the BANNER.

MORE "BLIND" EVIDENCE.—On pp. 214—218 of the "Old Church Clock," fifth edition, 1880, is an account of the ceremony of laying the foundation stone of the new tower of the Manchester cathedral, by Dr. J. P. Lee, the late Bishop of Manchester, on August 4, 1864. After a sermon, preached by Dr. W. Thomson, Archbishop of York, a procession of the clergy and ecclesiastical officials present, from the chapter-house through the centre aisle of the church, and a processional hymn sung, "the refrain of which being taken up by the long line of clergy and laity," we are told, "was peculiarly appropriate:—

"'Oh, 'twas a joyful sound to hear
Our Tribes devoutly say,
"Up, Israel, to the temple haste,
And keep your festal day."'"

In the light of our Identity with the Lost House of Israel, we can see a great "appropriateness," but not much otherwise; though we suppose the writer meant the "Tribes" of our "spiritual Israel."—J. THOMSON.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	13	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

OUR FREE CIRCULATION FUND.—A Working Man, employed in one of our largest works in England, writes us an offer to circulate the Banner of Israel in the works. He says "many in the establishment are taking an increasing interest in the Identity cause," and he finds a "great demand" for information on the subject, as many are listening and becoming inquirers. But there are Six Thousand hands employed on the works and we are asked to send them Banners to circulate which will be anxiously read. We have dispatched a parcel to-day, containing 2,000 Banners, and some other Identity literature. Here is a splendid opening for spreading Identity truth. We shall next week send a further supply of at least 2,000 more Banners. Should our friends feel these opportunities ought not to be lost, and are willing to aid in the effort, they can send either to the Editor, "Philo-Israel," or to the Printer.

Price 4d., by post 4½d. Special terms for a quantity.

THE ISRAEL OF GOD.

A SERVICE OF SONG

Upon the Career and Destiny of God's Ancient People Israel. WORDS AND MUSIC.

By C. W. E.

Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Second Edition now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

AMMI; or, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE

BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham the "friend of God," and showing that true science history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE PEW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL: Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Leeds, with an Introduction and Notes; to be followed by a Review of Mr. Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes.

By the same Author.

"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)," with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d.

"CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d., post free 3½d.

"GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 3½d.

London:

ROBERT BANKS, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

By REV. JOSEPH WILD D.D.

With a Portrait of the Author.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C

SEE NEW IDENTITY QUARTERLY MAGAZINE. Editor, Rev. R. DOUGLAS, M.A., Vicar of St. Stephen, Sheffield. Articles by Piazzi Smyth, Col. Gawler, &c. Price 6d.; post free, annually, 2s. 3d. James Nisbet & Co., London.

B. SCOTT'S ESSAY on NATURAL MEDICINES. "Should be read by every one afflicted."—So writes a Clergyman in Lancashire. Post free five stamps. B. V. Scott, 121, Kensington, Liverpool.

NEW PAMPHLET ON THE IDENTITY OF THE LOST TEN TRIBES

FOR UNIVERSAL CIRCULATION.

The Best Pamphlet to place in the hands of a person unacquainted with the subject.

Price 6d., by post 7d. 64 Demy 8vo. pages, in wrapper. One dozen copies sent free for a post office order for 6s.

FIFTY REASONS

WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES

OF THE LOST TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL.

BY REV. W. H. POOLE, D.D.

"There is a principle which is a bar against all information, which is proof against all argument, and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance. This principle is, contempt prior to examination."—Dr. Paley.

A greater than Paley has said:—"He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is a folly and a shame unto him."—Prov. xviii.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET.

Specimen Copy post free for 2½d.

THE ONLY MONTHLY IDENTITY MAGAZINE.

Price 2d., Annual Subscription, 2s. 6d. Yearly Volume, 3s. 6d. Bound in cloth, gilt. Postage 6d. extra.

ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.

EDITED BY DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.

CONTENTS OF APRIL NUMBER :—

Anglo-Israel Bible Truths.—No. 4. "Call her name Lo-Ruhamah: for I will no more have mercy upon the House of Israel; but I will utterly take them away."—Hosea i. 6.

The Testimony of Scripture Respecting the Date of Our Lord's Nativity. By Geo. N. Walsh.

The Chief Dates of the World.

The Hastings Controversy, Between the Rev. W. Barker, Baptist Minister, Hastings, and Philo-Israel, Editor of the "Banner of Israel."—Part XII.

"The Necessity for the Redemption of Ephraim-Israel." By the Editor.

"The Reputed Descendants of Ten-Tribed Israel Residing near Lake Ooroomiah, in Persia."

Correspondence.—Pyramid Chronology. Review.

Meetings, Lectures, &c.—Conference of Anglo-Israel Associations held at Manchester, March 9, 1881.—Morland, Westmoreland.—South Africa.—Perth Anglo-Israel Lectures.—Manchester and Salford Anglo-Israel Association.—Leamington Anglo-Israel Association.—Wimbledon Association.—Norton (Sheffield) Israel's Identification Association.—Preston Anglo-Israel Association.

ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET. AND ALL BOOKSELLERS.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,

High-Class Tailor,

47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.

MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

Ready Shortly.

A CHRONOLOGICAL AND GEOGRAPHICAL MAP. Shewing the DEVELOPMENT of the British Power and the Affinity of the British Nation with the Ten Lost Tribes.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

London: W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, E.C.

New ready, bound in cloth, 2s. 3d., gilt, 2s. 9d. post free 3d. extra.

SERMON I.,

Containing Seven Parts of Extracts from the

"FLYING ROLL,"

FOR THE

"INGATHERING" OF ISRAEL.

May be had of Joseph Head, John Rogers, George Moore, Edward Rogers, 5, Trafalgar-st., New Brompton, Kent; Joshua Rogers, 151, Great Titchfield-st., London, W.; and, by ordering, of any bookseller. May be had also in parts, 4d each; post free 4½d.

"Who are Israelites, to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises."

A RESUME OF THE SCRIPTURAL ARGUMENT. Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100.

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA THE ROYAL SEED TO KING DAVID'S THRONE, AND ARE NOT HER SUBJECTS, THE BRITISH PEOPLE, THE TEN LOST TRIBES?

BY WILLIAM HOPTON, of Sutton Heath.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published, price One Shilling, post free.

PROMISES, PROPHECIES, and DECLARATIONS relating to GOD'S CHOSEN PEOPLE ISRAEL.

London: F. Norgate, 7, King-street, Covent-garden.

London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Just out, 8d., post free 9d.

ISRAEL NOTWITHSTANDING; Being the Second and concluding Part of the Earnest Appeal from the Pew to the Pulpit. By JOHN G. SHAW, Author of "Britain (or Israel)," &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

ROBERT BANKS'S CATALOGUE OF WORKS ON THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH PEOPLE WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL will be sent to any address, post free, on application Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, APRIL 20, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 226. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, APRIL 27, 1881. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Death of the Earl of Beaconsfield	169
Israelism and War	169
A Second Pyramid Letter. Received from an Officer—well acquainted with Palestine. Forwarded by Professor Piazzi Smyth	170
"The Head and Not the Tail" in Respect to Traffic Through the Suez Canal in 1879	171
The Second Advent of the Messiah. By P.—Part II.	171
The Identification of the British Nation with the Lost Tribes. Arguments Pro and Con, with Remarks by the Rev. C. W. Hickson, M.A., of Bristol.—Part II.	172
News From Sydney, N.S.W.	174
Correspondence—A Missionary on Our Identity	174
Special Sermons on Our Identity, by the Rev. Richard Hill, B.A., Oxon	175

THE DEATH OF THE EARL OF BEACONSFIELD.

WE record with deep sorrow the death, at early dawn on April 19, 1881, of the Earl of Beaconsfield. With him has passed away a great man, whose loss is almost irreparable, who has nobly filled a conspicuous part in his country's history during the late eventful years, and whom we, as Israelites, shall ever remember with respect and gratitude, for the service he has done to our beloved country.

Some of us had thought that to him God had reserved the honour of inaugurating the events leading to the glorious return of Israel and Judah to their own inheritance. But He has seen fit to disappoint that expectation. The Lord's will be done. He is not restricted by want of fit and proper agents for carrying out His will when the proper time arrives.

Deeply lamenting as we do the loss of one of Israel's greatest statesmen, we trust Him, in whose hands are all events, to supply his place, and to bring about the fulfilment of those promises on which all our hearts are fixed and our eyes are turned.

ISRAELISM AND WAR.

SOME of those who read the BANNER find our views respecting war exceedingly repugnant to their own ideas of what is right and proper for Christian men to follow. They say that they perceive in our articles, especially pointing to recent papers and leaders on the Transvaal war, "an absence of that spirit of meekness and of peace which a follower of the Lord Jesus should possess." "For a so-called religious paper," says one of our mentors, "to join with blood-loving Jingoes in hounding on your countrymen to war in the spirit of vindictive revenge, shows me your paper is not according to the mind of the Spirit. You may be a follower of Joshua the son of Nun, but not (in this matter) of Jesus, Son of God."

This is, of course, as trenchant and incisive a charge against the editorial views set out in this journal as we could possibly meet with anywhere; and as it emanates from a minister of religion, we think the cause of truth is best served by bringing the words of accusation straight into the light, calmly looking the thing in the face and asking ourselves, Whether war is indeed against the mind of the Lord Jesus; and whether a nation or an individual of this nation—being Israel—ought or ought not under any circumstances to engage in war?

In regard to the personal charge, that in certain articles the Editor of this journal has exhibited the spirit of a "blood-loving Jingo" (whatever that may mean); that we have hounded on our countrymen to war in the spirit of vindictive revenge; and that we, personally, have not the spirit of Jesus (in this matter), we do not propose to offer any defence save the plea of "Not guilty." We are not aware to what particular words or expressions our unfriendly monitor meant to refer us; and we are sure that as far as our own mind and bent is concerned we love peace and hate warfare and bloodshed with the best. But we wrote, and always do write, with reference to the picture God draws in His Holy Word of His people Israel.

We have always maintained, do maintain, and shall in future ever assert that war is always represented in God's Word as a means whereby His purposes towards Israel are to be carried out; and that we cannot expect it to be otherwise now, when the drama is about to close. Is it a fact, or is it not, that our Lord Jesus Christ, being Jehovah, the God of Israel, led His people by means of war to the position they occupied in Palestine when the Gospel found them there? Who was the captain of the host of the Lord, who, with sword drawn in hand, came to the help of Joshua against Jericho, unless it was the Lord Jesus, the Son of God? Was it by His instruction, or was it not, that by war Jericho was taken, and its inhabitants utterly destroyed through the instrumentality of Israel? Was it not the Lord Jehovah, nay, the Lord Jesus Himself, by whom Joshua was instructed how to make war on Ai, and succeeded (Josh. viii. 1, x. 8, 14, 42, &c.)? The spirit of Joshua the son of Nun, which our opponent taunts us with possessing, was a spirit which emanated straight from Jesus Christ, the God and King of Israel; and if the Lord Jesus of the New Testament had no part in the terrible scenes which gave the land of Canaan to our forefathers, then in truth He is not Jehovah, but another Being altogether, which God forbid!

Taking the New Testament for our guide, while we freely admit that He said in Luke ix. 55, 56, that "He had not come to destroy men's lives but to save them," we must also notice what the Lord said on another occasion (Luke xii. 49—53; Matt. x. 34), "that He was come to send a sword, fire, division, but not peace upon the earth." Had the Lord's testimony been different, then had the New differed strangely from the Old Testament, for there we read that the same Jehovah-Jesus' "determination is to gather the nations, that He may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them His indignation, even all His fierce anger, for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of His jealousy" (Zeph. iii. 8). But how? By the wars and rumours of wars, the distress of nations, the perplexity, the sea and waves roaring, by the hearts of men failing them for fear and for looking after those things coming on the earth, all which He Himself predicted should come before He appears to save and redeem His people.

Digitized by Google

So far from war being foreign to God's purposes, He Himself tells us that He, being Jehovah—therefore the Lord Jesus, God personified—"shall go forth (ere long) as a mighty Man, He shall stir up the jealousy like a Man of war, He shall cry, yea, roar, He shall prevail against His adversaries" (Isa. xlii. 13). And His "battle-axe" in all these operations is ever Israel (Jer. li. 20—23). "Men shall strive and war against her (He says), but they shall succumb to Israel" (Isa. xli. 10—15). "They that WAR against thee (He says) shall be as nothing, and as a thing of nought." Why? Because the Lord fights for—nay, by—Israel's side, as His ally, and who can stand against the God of glory? (Isa. liv. 15—17, xvii. 12—14).

The fact is, our opponents on this subject have not an atom of support in God's Word! The spirit of Jesus, as applied to the believer, is doubtless a spirit of meekness and of peace. But the Lord's dealings with the nations, and His dealings with individuals, are perfectly different, and cannot be judged by the same rule. The Christian believer is not to resist even injustice in certain circumstances (Matt. v. 38—44); but in regard to nations we see that the same Lord has arranged that Gentile races are to be destroyed—nay, annihilated—in their wars with Israel (Isa. xli. 11, 12); and that when they rise against Israel they must without fail be undone (Isa. liv. 15—17; Micah v. 8).

We write as we have done in no blood-thirsty, vindictive spirit; but simply to bring out the truth. War we believe to be one of God's instruments for the accomplishment of His purposes in the government of this fallen world; and we are sure, from our past history, as well as from what we see to be plainly before us, that by war we have attained our present position of command in the world; and that by war, chiefly, we shall maintain it until our King, having come down to reign, all wars shall cease at His command, and peace shall prevail instead (Isa. ii. 2—5). May that day soon be here! and then shall Israel praise the Lord as she has never praised Him yet. Even so, come, Lord Jesus! come quickly!

A SECOND PYRAMID LETTER.

RECEIVED FROM AN OFFICER—WELL ACQUAINTED WITH PALESTINE, ANCIENT AND MODERN—RETURNING TO INDIA. FORWARDED BY PROFESSOR PIAZZI SMYTH.

MY DEAR SIR,—I went out to the Great Pyramid again yesterday, and found Mr. Petrie occupied with his attendant, Alee Dobree, in searching the site for fragments of diorite, &c. He kindly asked me to go round with him, and we examined the entire immediate neighbourhood of the three Pyramids, specially noticing the excavation round the second Pyramid, and the mode in which the builders cut out the stones of the size and shape they desired by parallel trenches in the solid rock. The evidences of stone chipping and preparation were clear, and we even made out the rounded sites of the overseers' huts. The undisturbed condition of the ground, and abundance of vestiges much surprised me, for some looked so recent I could scarcely credit them at first with an antiquity of thousands of years. At present I am told there is some doubt as to the material of the tools employed by the workmen; Mr. Petrie suggested some hard alloy of brass, but I am under the impression they must have had iron, and do not see how the granite could have been smoothed without the use of steel. (This is precisely the conclusion arrived at by Mr. St. John Vincent Day—see "Our Inheritance in the Great Pyramid," appendix, third edition.—ED.)

I have rather a good opinion of the second Pyramid. It does not seem built either to rival or injure the Great Pyramid. Mr. Petrie remarked, if it had been its builders would have made it higher. At the same time, to my mind, it does take away from the effect rather, but overlaps only on the desert side, from which no one views the Great Pyramid. The masonry of the second is poorer, but the mass is immense; and I cannot imagine so much labour having been gone through in servile imitation for a mere king's tomb. The small tombs about the Great Pyramid are said to be of nearly the same age as itself. This is singular, and shows that detestation of the principles of its architect and founder had not set in at once, and that it was, on the contrary, revered at the time.

Before I left, I went inside again with Alee Dobree, and passed once more through all the Great Pyramid chambers and passages. I saw then that the top of the well is distinctly square. The character of the masonry is much more apparent on a second visit, and its refinements came out more. There was nothing absolutely new in what I then saw, but I was more able to get clear ideas of the interior than in going over it rapidly. It seems, however, nearly to have served its purpose; but I expect an increased interest to be taken in the structure, and this by the Egyptians themselves. They will see its attractiveness as a monument and power of bringing visitors to Cairo; and there will probably be other forces and motives put all of a sudden in operation, such as I cannot conjecture at present; and we shall perhaps have cloth of gold where now there are dust and bats. But this will come from the Egyptians themselves, I think, if it comes at all. For one thing, the realisation of the iconoclastic character of the Great Pyramid will approve it to the Mahommedan mind, the astronomical properties to the Arab. But they have to catch the idea, and Pyramid facts have yet to be put into Arabic.

I asked the Bedouins if they went to school, and they said, No; but I think they would go if one were established. For some reason or other the Pyramid is left in Arab hands. The immediate custodians appear to me to be very sharp for illiterate people, and to deserve being made better acquainted with the real nature of the Great Pyramid. Below the clatter and extorting mannerisms—which they drop when they notice they are seen through—there is, as with all Arabs, and most Orientals, a good deal of curious thoughtfulness. But they require to have the information in their own language, to ponder over slowly at leisure.

I have not, however, been able to ascertain in any way what Egyptian race will take the lead in Pyramid resuscitation. The Arab most likely, as they are intense opponents of the principles of the great secret societies of this earth. I intend calling on Dr. Grant to day, and note these passing impressions, such as they are. I remain, yours sincerely,

Cairo, March 1, 1881.

P.S.—Having returned from a third day at the Great Pyramid, I add this, before leaving to-morrow for India. I found Dr. Grant at home yesterday, and heard his opinions on several branches of the question with great interest. He showed me a long roll of the masonry of the first ascending passage drawn to a large scale; I suppose Mr. Dixon's work, and most clearly executed. We had some conversation on the possible meaning of several of the smaller features, also about the cubit, the actual existence of Koufu and Cephren, and other matters.

Digitized by Google

I went out to-day very much to examine the second Pyramid. The general impression given by the whole of the interior I saw was, that the passages and chambers were used for successive initiation into an elaborate ritual of some sort, which extended to the two sets of temples outside. Whether this ritual was good or bad I don't know; but Mr. Petrie allowed there was nothing idolatrous in the remains. The traces are so distinct, that I think a restoration of the whole group of structures would be easy, if the second Pyramid had any connection with the Great Pyramid. It is possible that if the ritual was pure, it will be revived as an evidence; and what was once taught there will be inculcated for a brief time anew.

Mr. Petrie is now triangulating and taking levels round the Great Pyramid in order to arrive at a close estimation of the length of the Base-sides, and the dimensions of the pavement which encircled the base. He is alone at present, as his father, whom he expected, has not yet joined him. He observed, with justice, on the slow progress made single-handed in triangulation. If I had the time, I should like to have waited a month on the spot, and done some of the work with him. Less than that would hardly make much impression. He appears to be encouraged in the minute character of his measurements by the extraordinary accuracy of the masonry, which does not show to the eye, but comes out in the levelling.

Some persons are evidently perplexed a good deal in the chronology of the Great Pyramid by the four or five years the Christian era is supposed to be out; as well as from certain prominent events being to all appearance unnoticed. It does not, however, follow, that the occurrences to which we commonly attach importance are those that have been really critical. To my mind, the real motive power in history is seldom related; a great deal is suppressed, we could easily understand; while other things, if they were stated, would lie outside our ordinary experience. For instance, the extinction of the Turkish Empire is dreaded by all statesmen, and is probably the most significant event that could occur in modern times, and is felt to be so for Church and State. And yet in what the gravity consists, few could state in definite terms. With this scanty account of what I have seen, I must remain once more, Yours very sincerely,

March 2, 1881.

"THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL" IN RESPECT TO THE TRAFFIC THROUGH THE SUEZ CANAL IN 1879.

We take the following from the Times of January 28, 1880, being a portion of a letter from an Alexandrian correspondent of that paper, writing on the 19th idem. He said what our readers will be prepared for—namely, that Great Britain was "the head and not the tail" in regard to the traffic in 1879 through the Suez Canal. His statement was as follows:—

"The traffic returns of the Suez Canal for the past year are interesting to Englishmen. Out of 1,460 vessels that made the passage, 1,127 were English, while France comes next with 83; Holland with 60; Italy, 52; Austria, 40; Russia, 7; and America and Japan close the list with a vessel apiece. Egypt and Turkey combined contributed 17, and Denmark, Greece, Spain, Servia, and Norway supplied the rest (72). The numbers are a fair guide to an estimate of the proportionate advantage of the Egyptian Bosphorus to the various countries of the world."

The numbers exhibit the magnitude of Israel's trade with the heathen empire, now become by far her largest consumer of British produce. Some declare that India is worthless to our nation. She is, on the contrary, our best customer. She employs an enormous fleet to supply her wants, and gives us in countless ways much of our wealth and material prosperity. Her soldiery would give us supremacy in European war.

THE SECOND ADVENT OF THE MESSIAH.

By P.

(Concluded from page 158).

PART II.

In the midst of the Jews, and in the midst of their complete ignorance of it, as a people, one of the chief events of all time (no less than the birth of the Son of God) took place; and they were allowed to remain in ignorance for more than a quarter of a century. Similarly, unknown to modern Israel as a people, some great though silent occurrence may have already taken place in their midst, which will be revealed in due course as marking the beginning of the end. The idea, of late partly ventilated in the columns of the Banner, that the period of our Lord's earth life will be found repeated in symbol at the South end of the Great Gallery, is correct; and if there, it is a fact of most eloquent suggestion.

All these circumstances must be well weighed by those who would understand fully concerning the time of the Lord's coming.

But how? This is partly indicated by the features of the Pyramid touched upon above. Leaving the Pyramid, we will now turn to the written Word, and briefly examine a few of the passages given for our enlightenment.

I.—"Behold, I come as a thief" (Rev. xvi.). This remarkable expression stands in the most remarkable manner alone—having at first sight no connection whatever with the subject matter of the chapter. It steals in itself, like a thief, upon our notice—a sudden and unlooked for apparition! so that we are, as it were, compelled to ask how or why it got there. It startles by its abruptness; it compels attention by its accompanying warning. Let us look into it and around it. "Behold, I come as a thief." How does "a thief" come into a house? Does he come in the light? Is his entrance visible? Does he come to the front door, and with a numerous accompaniment and a flourish of trumpets? or with sounding knock and ring announce his arrival? Is it known when and how he enters? When actually in the house does he proceed to rouse the inmates and reveal himself? Is his presence known, or even suspected? All these queries must be answered in the negative; the exact opposite of all these is the truth. It follows, then, that if one phase of the Advent be correctly described by the expression, "I come as a thief," our Lord will be mysteriously amongst us ere we are aware, while we are in total ignorance of the fact; for He will have come without a retinue of saints and angels, without the sound of the archangel's trump, without a public entry into His world—without, in short, coming in state and glory, but once more in humility and retirement, unnoticed and unknown, save perhaps by a very few. The text either means this or nothing; for the phase of the Advent in state, with the glorious accompaniment of saints, angels, and archangels, is not the coming as of "a thief." The wisdom of the Spirit is in the employment of the expression, and the wise shall understand. The remainder of the verse, "Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame"—i.e., lest his shame be visible—clearly bears out this interpretation: our Lord in the midst of His people, unperceived by them, but Himself observing, and clearly perceiving their condition. The preceding verse determines the time, the time of the three unclean spirits, the deadly isms of our day, which are fast gathering peoples and classes for national and social war. And this is confirmed by the verse following. The position of the passage, again, between these two verses, is exceedingly remarkable, being evidently designed by the Spirit to arrest attention, and to give to the watchful the necessary indication to fix the time of His appearance. Nothing is accidental in God's Word. (It may be necessary to meet a possible objection here—the use of the same simile by Paul in the Thessalonians and by Peter; but while they both apply it unmistakably to the final end, or consummation of all things, in the present case it is as unmistakably applied to a point of time considerably antecedent to the end of all things).

Digitized by Google

II.—"They that were ready went in with Him to the marriage, and the door was shut," &c. Here, again, the coming is in the night, when men are asleep. (Is it necessary to say here that men may turn their day into "night" by simply closing their eyes? It was night to the Jews during the entire period of the first coming). The virgins, waiting and watching for Him, both wise and foolish, were asleep; they were all roused by the cry, but only a limited number witnessed the Bridegroom's approach. It is distinctly implied that spiritual illumination is indispensable to enable the individual Christian to see the arrival, which condition would necessarily limit the number. Those whose oil was exhausted, who were not in attendance at the approach of the Bridegroom, who were not "ready," failed to participate in that joyous phase of the advent, and were "shut out" to await the next phase. (The adjective selected by our Lord Himself to characterise these virgins, shows that they were not shut out from heaven, at least, finally; they were "foolish," not "wicked"). A partial manifestation is therefore again indicated.

III.—"Ye men of Galilee, this same Jesus shall so come in like manner" (Acts i.). The principal query here again is, Was the ascension public or private? Was it in view of the whole world, or the whole nation, or even of all the inhabitants of the neighbouring city, Jerusalem? or even still of all the disciples, or a considerable number of them? Or was it beheld only by a few? Here there is no possibility of mistake. The apostles alone beheld the ascension. The world did not see; the Jewish people did not see; even the multitude of the disciples did not see the departure of the Lord. If He come again in like manner, will the world, will the multitude of His disciples see this return? or only a few? Again, He did not depart in visible glory; He was not even transfigured; and this is a point of very great importance in the consideration of our subject. He was with them at the time as a man amongst men! If He return in like manner, how must He be looked for—"watched" for?

IV.—"To them that look for Him, He shall appear the second time without sin unto salvation" (Heb. xii.). Divine expressions being frequently designed for more than one meaning and application, the apostle Paul is here carried by the Spirit beyond the context. "To them that look for Him;" therefore, again, not to all, "He shall appear the second time;" the expression, the second time, indicating a time similar to the first. To make fully clear the grounds for this interpretation would require too much space.

V.—"Ye shall not see Me henceforth until ye shall say, Blessed is He that cometh in the Name of the Lord" (Matt. xxiii.). Here is a distinct assurance of a local coming, with a local limitation—viz., the Messiah's personal entry into Jerusalem, and His personal acceptance by its inhabitants!

VI.—"Watch! for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh." All Anglo-Israelites think the Lord's coming will be about A.D. 1881·6. The words just quoted of the Lord Himself are therefore conclusive that they have missed, or will miss, the initial time. Be it observed, further, that the warning is given to the faithful—not to the world. "In such an hour as ye think not!" Can that hour be sooner or later than the present moment? (Remember the various lengths shown in the Grand Gallery). If sooner, in what manner alone can the assurance be fulfilled?

It is manifest that all these, with many other widely differing descriptions do not refer to one and the same particular event and point of time; for in that case they would be totally irreconcilable. Wherefore, from these and other utterances of the Spirit in both the Old and New Testaments, which there is not space to notice (e.g., Ezek. xxxiv. 23, 24; Zeph. iii. 14; Zech. ii. 10, 11; Mal. iv. 2, 5); the inference seems indubitable that there is more than one phase of the second coming; and, particularly that the initial phase, like as with the first advent, will be of a quiet, unobtrusive character; that in some mysterious way (what is impossible to the Divine? "God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform"); the Son of Man will enter "as a thief," and stand again unperceived in the midst of sleeping Israel, revealed, as if emerging from a cloud, to the sight of the truly ready, and that the close, like the opening of the dispensation, will have begun unperceived by the unready and unwary, who will await (like the Jews) that latter phase of the coming when He shall appear in visible glory, and every eye shall behold.

The Gallery of the Pyramid, as we have seen, gives indications to the same effect—indications in their turn supported by those of the passages and chambers beyond, which unmistakably refer to still later phases. Did the Scripture stand alone with these indications we might hesitate at the interpretation; but the Word in stone gives ample corroboration; and by the mouth of God's own two witnesses the truth will be established.

THE IDENTIFICATION OF THE BRITISH NATION WITH THE LOST TRIBES.

ARGUMENTS PRO AND CON, WITH REMARKS BY THE REV. C. W. HICKSON, M.A., OF BRISTOL.

(Concluded from page 164.)

PART II.

6. Con.—Deut. xv. 6 is not equally applicable to the Jews. "Thou" means the people as a people, not isolated individuals among them. Individual Jews, such as the Rothschilds and others, lend sometimes to nations, no doubt—that is, they make very temporary advances of money as bankers. But the Jews as a people do not lend money to other nations in the form of such loans as are quoted on change—Russian loan, Turkish loan, and so on.

But even if the statement be allowed, it is not a con, for it only shows that the Jews, as well as ourselves, are enjoying a distinctly Hebrew blessing, and would so far suggest that both alike must be parts of the Hebrew race; if, then, the Jews are Judah, we must be Israel.

7. Con.—Unless the objector intends to contend that the Hebrew language had no word at all to express what our geography books call "an island," it must be conceded that אִי has that meaning; I fail to see, then, how the word "conveys nothing." Thus, Isa. xli. 1, taken in connection with the preceding verse, shows that the said islands are the locality of "waiting on the Lord," and "renewing strength," a double process remarkably fulfilled in us in these islands since the Reformation.

8. Con.—GOD'S righteousness is often exhibited in unrighteous acts on man's part—e.g., Christ's crucifixion. In righteousness (as regards God) He was wounded as our sin-bearer; but in unrighteousness, as regards His crucifiers, He was murdered. So the righteousness of God is "employed in the establishment of British power," though some of Britain's own acts may be unrighteous on her part. Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right?

9. Con.—Isa. liv. 3. The "barren" that did not bear had been God's wife of youth (ver. 6), but was forsaken, only, however, for a small moment (ver. 7). Her Maker is her Husband (ver. 5). This cannot refer to a Gentile Church. Believing Gentiles are grafted into God's spouse, but could by no possibility be spoken of as having been His wife prior to such ingrafting, and then for a little moment forsaken. The language must refer to some part of the Hebrew race. But it does not refer to Judah, for she is the married wife, never divorced, kept united to God under the law all the time. Here, then, we have God's two wives, Judah and Israel. See Jer. iii. 8—14, which prophecies that Israel would justify herself, by accepting Christ, more than Judah. Hosea i. and ii., under Gomer, represents the cast off, but afterwards re-married, Israel. Hosea iii., under another unmarried woman, represents Judah, abiding for the Lord, yet in unbelief. This very Isa. liv. 1 is quoted in Gal. iv. 27, showing that "Jerusalem which is above" —the New Testament Church—is identical with Israel; while Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage—i.e., the Jews—are, of course, Judah. This passage, then, shows that Christianised Israel will break forth on all sides; "inheriting the Gentiles," another expression intimating that those spoken of are not themselves Gentiles. So far from there being nothing here of importance bearing on the subject, this passage is one of the plainest proofs that Israel, not Judah, are to be a Christian and colonising nation. Isa. xlix. 20 is a strictly parallel passage, as showing that Israel when, after a time of chastisement, they again rise under God's favour, will become too numerous for the land in which they will be dwelling, and will be driven to colonise.

10. Con.—The force of this criticism is entirely destroyed by the fact that אִישׁ (ish) though primarily it means a man, as distinguished from a woman—like ανηρ in Greek, or vir in Latin—yet has also the signification of a man in the sense of "a mortal," as opposed to a divine being—e.g., Job xii. 10, breath of all mankind, Hebrew, breath of all flesh of man—i.e., of all human flesh. Accordingly, ish is also used to denote "anyone," "everyone," "one," "someone," without reference to male or female—"if a man can number" (Gen. xiii. 16)—i.e., if anyone can number; "Let no man go" (Exod. xvi. 29) —i.e., let no one go, whether man or woman; "Formerly in Israel thus said the man in his going to inquire of the Lord" (1 Sam. ix. 9)—i.e., thus said the person, whether man or woman, who went to inquire, &c. So in Jer. xxxiii. 17—"There shall not be cut off for David a man—i.e., a person, not necessarily a male—sitting upon the throne of the House of Israel." Had a man—i.e., a male—been intended specially, I think gēbhēr rather than ish would have been used, as in Zech. xiii. 7, "The man (gēbhēr) that is my fellow;" though even gēbhēr is used in the wide sense of a human being, as in Psa. xxxiv. 8: "Blessed is the man" (surely this does not mean men only, as distinguished from women) "that trusteth in Him."

11. Con.—Jer. xxxi. 35, 36, shows more than "that Israel is in existence still;" it shows that Israel exists, not merely, as is the case with the Jews, as a scattered people, but as a nation גּוֹי (ghòy), the proper notion of which word is that of a body, a corpus, a body politic, an incorporated unity.

Further, the whole passage is clearly predictive of not mere existence, but of happy existence, national life, and prosperity. It would, therefore, be absurd to say that what is here promised is fulfilled in the case of the Jews for the last 1,800 years. Hence, this promise of perpetuation of national existence and prosperity must have been receiving its fulfilment in Ten-Tribed Israel; otherwise, there has been a great hiatus, or gap, in its fulfilment, sufficient to justify the infidel in asserting that God has broken His word.

12. Con.—How is this a con? is it not rather a pro? Is it not a common remark that, Go where you will you will find Britons, or Englishmen, as foreigners, I believe, invariably call them? Is it not our boast that the British drum-beat follows the sun in his daily circuit of the world? That the sun never ceases to shine on some part or another of the British dominions? Israel, when found, will be found all over the world. Britons are already all over the world. Hence some presumption, at least, arises that Britons are Israel. It is pro, not con.

13. Con.—I am very familiar with this argument, but do not see, and never could, how it touches the question.

Gentiles were admissable to incorporation with Israel under the Old Testament; they are so, and more freely so, still. All who believe in Christ, not being of Abraham's blood, become Abraham's seed by spiritual ingrafting. There is nothing in all this trite truth to oppose the much over-looked other truth that it is still ABRAHAM'S seed which are the special people of God; not, observe, as the apostle points out, Abraham's seeds (Gal. iii. 16), for Abraham had several seeds, literal seeds (Gen. xvii. 20, xxv. 12—16, also 2—4); but his seed, also literal seed—viz., that one seed only—named in Gen. xvii. 21, xxi. 12. This is clearly affirmed in Romans ix. 7, 8. The seed of promise is Isaac's seed, a spiritual seed truly, headed up in Christ ("Thy seed, which is Christ"); but none the less consisting of Isaac's literal descendants. And the apostle's argument in Romans ix. goes to show that at this present time (the Gospel dispensation) even among Isaac's seed there is a selection. The Jews are not, for the time being, the seed of promise; but others whom He calls (ver. 24) "Gentiles;" but in reference to whom, strangely enough, he quotes Hosea's prophecy of the restoration to favour of the Lo-Ammied Ten-Tribed Israel. This plainly shows that the Lost Ten-Tribed people, reduced in all outward appearance to the condition of Gentiles, were to form no inconsiderable portion of the Gentile Church. That others should be incorporated with them in that Church was plainly foretold in Old Testament Scripture (see Isa. lvi. 8, in connection with the two preceding verses).

In Romans iv. 16 St. Paul speaks of all the seed of Abraham, and then divides that seed into two parts. Now these two parts must be homogeneous. They are either both Abraham's blood descendants, or they are not. Two parts of one "all" cannot be of totally different natures, especially when the one "all" spoken of is "a seed." The two parts are—(1) That which is of the law, and (2) that which is of the faith of Abraham. By (1) every one knows Paul meant the Jews. The Jews are Abraham's literal seed. Therefore (2) must be Abraham's literal seed too. Accordingly it is said, "He is the FATHER of us all." That part of the seed which is "of the faith of Abraham," not circumcised (ver. 11), is, I feel quite sure in my own mind, a body of people believing in the Lord Jesus Christ, mostly consisting of, and in God's mind as a body identical with the Lost Ten-Tribed Israel, but including also other believers gathered from all nations. And just as Isaac himself seemed to Abraham to be a most unlikely acquisition (ver. 17—21), so the resuscitation, re-nationalising, and Christianising of the Lost Ten Tribes was an event for which we had no grounds to look, except the sure and certain promise of God that it should happen (Hosea i. 10, ii. 23; Amos ix. 11 to the end).

Our Lord said the kingdom of God—i.e., the privileges attaching to being the especial recipients of God's revelation, and being God's special people—should be taken from the Jews and given to—whom? No other nation at all; but diffused generally and vaguely all the world over? No! but A NATION bringing forth the fruits thereof (Matt. xxi. 43). But God has repeatedly declared His unfixed purpose to deal with no NATION in the way of special privilege, except the HEBREW people. The nation, therefore, of which our Lord spoke MUST BE a HEBREW nation. The British nation is that nation. Therefore the British nation, not being the Jews, must be the Lost Ten Tribes. In short, to sum up all this, it is clear to me that the Church itself must be, consistently with God's promises, mainly Israelite; and the particular nation with which the Church or kingdom of God stands in closer relationship than with any other nation, must be Israelite too.

See Rev. vii. 8—10, xiv. 1, xix. 1, 3, 6. Alleluia, a Hebrew word; xxi. 10, "holy Jerusalem" (Jerusalem represents Israel as a whole) (12, 14; Matt. xix. 28). Surely the apostles are the heads of the Church. If, then, the latter will be, as so many say, a far higher and more spiritual body than the literal Israel, how come the apostles to be ruling the literal Israel and not the Church? Are they to be degraded from the higher to the lower? But if the Church and Israel eventually turn out to be the same thing, all is plain.

Digitized by Google

NEWS FROM SYDNEY, N.S.W.

We take the following (alluded to in Mr. Percy E. Williams's letter below) from the Sydney Morning Herald of Dec. 1, 1880 :—

"ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

"The annual meeting of the Anglo-Israel Association of New South Wales took place on Monday evening last in the new Temperance Hall, and was largely attended. The president, Rev. William Allworth, in his opening address congratulated the members on the flourishing condition of the Association, and briefly reviewed the work of the past three years. Starting in 1877 with only eight members, the Association now numbered 200, and branches had been planted in the interior. The great movement was steadily and silently spreading all over the United Kingdom, America, India, and the colonies; and he rejoiced to see the intense interest taken in the subject by all classes of society.

"The General Secretary then read the following report:—'In presenting the annual report for 1880, your committee have much pleasure in congratulating you on the progress of the Association since the last annual meeting; and also on the amount of work that has been done during the past twelve months. The session has been marked by the delivery of several excellent lectures and readings, and also by the large circulation of literature to all parts of the colony. In August last your President and Secretary visited Bathurst, and found the branch Association in a very flourishing condition, and Identity knowledge spreading in all directions from that centre. Two lectures were given there to large audiences, and the officers mentioned were welcomed everywhere with profuse hospitality and gladness. Your President visited Bega in July, and gave there a series of lectures, which have brought the subject prominently before the residents of that district, and the seed sown there will, we hope, bring forth good results. Reports from the branch at Kempsey, under the management of Mr. E. W. Rudder, show that the movement is rapidly increasing throughout the Macleay district, and many prominent colonists are members of the Association. The Rev. Frederick Gough writes that the Identity is making rapid way in the Gunnedah district, and that his churches are always filled when preaching on the subject. During the year over 2,080 books, pamphlets, and periodicals have been distributed over the colony, in addition to 50,000 leaflets, which cannot but increase the knowledge of the Identity to a very considerable extent. Periodicals and leaflets have also been distributed amongst the men-of-war on the station; and we have been assured that there is no class of literature so welcome to our loyal blue-jackets as that bearing upon our Identity with Lost Israel. It is worthy of remark that the opposition from the clergy has not been so bitter the past few months; and there are many Protestant clergymen who are seriously studying the matter, the result of which, we earnestly hope, will be to make them champions in the cause. In conclusion, we would impress upon the members the necessity of earnest co-operation. Up to the present time the working of the Association has been left too much in the hands of a few. We are now on the eve of 1881, the year we are looking forward to for great blessings to Israel, and the most momentous events in the history of the world. Let us strive, then, one and all, with money, time, and influence to spread this grandest, this most glorious, movement throughout this land, of which we are so justly proud, and by doing so bring peace, comfort, light, and happiness to the homes of our fellow-men, and proving ourselves thereby to be Israelites indeed. Let us, one and all, make this a subject of special prayer each day, and then God, even our own God, will give us His blessing.'

"The Treasurer's statement showed that £109 14s. 3d. had been received during the year; the expenditure amounting to £106 10s. 8d., leaving a credit balance of £3 3s. 7d.

"Number of meetings held during the year: general meetings, 12; council meetings, 10. Lectures: Rev. W. Allworth, 8; Canon M. B. Brownrigg, 1; John Plummer, 2: J. F. Castle, 1; Percy E. Williams, 5. Total, 17. Addresses: Rev. W. Allworth, 2; John Plummer, 1; Percy E. Williams, 2. Total, 5. Papers read: Rev. W. Allworth, 3; Percy E. Williams, 2. Total, 5.

"Mr. John Plummer moved the adoption of the reports in congratulatory terms, and touched upon the early days of the movement in England, where he had been associated with the pioneers of Anglo-Israelism.

"Mr. William Wright seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.

"The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:—President: Rev. W. Allworth; Vice-president: H. C. Burnell; Committee: Miss Ebsworth, Messrs. Alexander Gordon, George Campling, A. E. Evans, W. J. Weatherill, Benjamin Selkield, W. Williams, and W. Speer. General Treasurer: C. G. L. Boyce; and General Secretary: Percy E. Williams.

"A vote of thanks to the retiring officers having been presented, the President introduced to the members the well-known advocates of the cause in New Zealand, Mr. and Mrs. Glenny, who had left their homes to assist in promulgating Anglo-Israelism throughout the colonies. Mr. and Mrs. Glenny, who were received with cheers, and cordially welcomed, gave very interesting accounts of the progress of the movement in New Zealand; and the meeting closed with the benediction."

Correspondence.

A MISSIONARY ON OUR IDENTITY.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

My Dear Sir,—Having read with great interest your work, "The Geography of the Gates," I venture to send you some emendations of the chapter on Hong-kong, where I have resided as a missionary of the Church Missionary Society since 1871, and whither I propose returning (D.V.) in the Autumn. The Island is now strongly fortified on the South, the harbour side, by some six forts, earthworks, constructed in 1878, commanding both approaches to the roadstead. Some of these mount twelve-ton guns. The Northern side owes its defence more to nature than art, the heavy swell prevailing during the greater part of the year rendering landing a matter of great difficulty. Our best defence is undoubtedly our men of war, the forts being meant to protect the important and wealthy city of Victoria from surprise. The temperature is highest in August and September, the eight Summer months being most trying, owing to the rain. Malarious fever is almost unknown. It used to prevail in the wet season, owing to ignorance on the part of those building; the freshly opened soil being wetted, gave rise to malaria. Now ground is opened chiefly in Winter. There is very little level ground to be cultivated. November, December, January, and February are very healthy months. There are many beautiful roads on the sea level, and about 250 feet above the same, and also around and across the hill tops. The peak may be ascended easily at almost any hour (except just in the hottest season), without any fear of results. During the Summer many merchants and officials reside there, having their bungalows, which answer for country houses; coming down in the morning to business, and returning in the evening to their wives and families.

The granite dry docks at Aberdeen, to the West of the island, are an important feature. They can receive the largest ironclads. I have there walked under H.M.S. Iron Duke, and sister ship Audacious. I believe they are the only docks of the kind out of Europe. The population is from 135,000 to 140,000 at the present time, principally Chinese, though about 7,000 are Portugese. It is singular that the Western entrance to the harbour is called the Cap-Sing-Mun, and the Eastern, the Lyee-Mun, or the Capsing Gate and the Lyee Gate. In a lengthy paper, against the blockade by Chinese, read before the Chamber of Commerce in 1877 or 1878, by Granville Sharp, Esq., he specially alluded to the names as names of "Gates which should not be shut day nor night," "Gates of Heaven's appointment," for the free port of Hong-kong. The paper was published in extenso in the China Mail of that date. I mention the fact as a curious coincidence. You are quite at liberty to make use of these remarks, only I must not be understood to commit myself to the acceptance of a doctrine which, although I cannot controvert it, yet does not carry conviction to my mind. That all the promises of God to Israel are yea and amen, I firmly believe, both spiritual and temporal promises; and the temporal cannot, and are not, to my mind, to be viewed as being abrogated or converted into spiritual promises because the seed is a spiritual seed. I lean on Rom. iv. 16, specially, and the whole chapter generally as the charter of the Church, handing on to us the spiritual seed and the promises made to Abraham our father. But I must not now attempt to discuss so great a question; should health and time permit I may venture to recur to it.

Yours, &c.,

A. B. Hutchinson, C.M.S.

Exeter, April 2, 1881.

Note by the Editor.—We are very thankful to the Rev. A. B. Hutchinson, Church missionary to Hong-kong, for his notes on our remarks on that great Chinese Gate which Israel holds. We hope to make use of his welcome corrections should a second edition of our volume be issued. We are glad to note that our friend, if he cannot yet see with us in reference to our Identity, at any rate confesses "he cannot controvert it!" Note that, opponents! Here is a godly, clear-headed, well-read man, whose recent work on "The Mind of Mencius," respecting the doctrines of that great Chinese philosopher, marks him as a man of culture and thought, is constrained to admit that "he cannot controvert" our arguments on the Identity. In reference to Rom. iv. 16, to which Mr. Hutchinson points as a difficulty, we must reiterate what has been said before, that that chapter is one of our strong supports. It relates (ver. 1) to Abraham "our father as pertaining to the flesh," precluding the idea of the spiritual seed. Verse 16 plainly shows the natural seed according to the flesh is two-fold—namely, Judah, "which is of the law," and Israel, which is "of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all," belonging to the two families. Israel (not Judah) was to be outcasted, re-married, and brought under the covenant of faith, as Hosea ii. 14, 16, 20, plainly teaches. Abraham became "the father of many nations," when the Melo-hag-goim of the Ephraim-Israel seed of Gen. xlviii. 19, and Rom. xi. 25, was developed in the Colonial Empire of British-Israel. Our righteousness as the Christian nation (Hos. i. 10) is of Christ alone (Rom. iv. 22—25), and therefore Rom. iv., instead of being against our claim, proves it, and establishes the fact that Lost Israel is found, and found as "Abraham's seed," the Anglo-Saxon "heir of the world" (Rom. iv. 13, ix. 7). We hope Mr. Hutchinson, accepting this reasoning, may now be able to see with us, and no longer doubt.

Digitized by Google

"To the Editor of the Banner of Israel."

DEAR MR. EDITOR,—I am, in common with many readers of your pages, deeply grieved and pained by the revilings of "an aged minister of Christ," quoted by the editor of the Rock newspaper. But an apology is due for the old man; and had the circumstance which renders that apology due been known to your readers, that stinging language of invective would not have fallen with such effect upon their feelings. The fact of the matter is, that the words were written in the confidence of friendship to the editor of the Rock, and he was certainly never authorised to ventilate them in his columns. But I am very anxious to avail myself of the display of animus by the opponents of the great fact that Jehovah, the God of our fathers Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and Joseph, has fulfilled His great and precious promises to them in the persons of us, their children, to our great comfort and joy, in order to impress upon my fellow believers in our Identity, the invitation which is addressed to them by our prophet Jeremiah. We acknowledge with humble and profound gratitude that we are the daughter of Israel; to us then, so believing (but not to Englishmen destitute of this well-grounded faith) is this invitation addressed: "Turn again, O virgin of Israel, turn again to these thy cities!"

In this land of our hope, there is a free scope for the development of our desires, and here, undisturbed by the unhappy element of abusive adversaries of our knowledge and faith, we may even now form a colony of happy believers in a common covenant, whose delightful privileges will continually, more and more, refresh those who accord an implicit faith to the inspired record. I cannot help believing that the stinging reproaches of those who, however well versed in the New Testament, are lamentably in the dark as to the contents of the Old Testament, are intended as a stimulus to move our tents to this land afar off, wherein our eyes shall yet see our King in His beauty. Meanwhile, I no less firmly believe that those who reject the light of Jehovah which we proffer them, will suffer chastisement for their sin at the hands of such prepared scourges as infidelity in high places, and Puseyism in our solemn assembly.

With much Christian esteem, I remain,
Yours faithfully,
HERBERT MARRIOTT.

Beyrout, March 22, 1881.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

MY DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—I enclose herewith an account of our annual meeting, including the Association report, which may not be uninteresting to the numerous readers of the BANNER. A great pressure of business has prevented my sending it before. A short time after its publication the following paragraph appeared in the columns of the Church of England Record, under date January 1, 1881:—"The Anglo-Israel Association has held its annual meeting. We were somewhat surprised to find that it was still in existence. We thought that the craze had died out. Still more surprised were we to find that two hundred persons had committed themselves to the principles of this society. Our astonishment has also been excited by the revelation of the report presented, that upwards of £100 have been raised and expended in carrying out the object of the Association. More than this, we find that prominent members are busy in endeavouring to extend the faith of the Anglo-Israelites. Bathurst has been visited and enlightened upon the subject of the Identity. Some have come all the way from New Zealand as propagandists. But, after all, should we be surprised, for the Scripture of Truth declares that the time would come when men 'should be turned unto fables.' We have lived to witness this." Although many replies were written to the misguided and ignorant editor, he neither deigned to publish them, apologise for the insult, nor to justify his remarks. Comment on such conduct as this is superfluous.

We are rejoicing at our affiliation with the Metropolitan, and look upon the event as an important bond between the lion and one of the young lions. Great and glorious work is being done by our good friends, Mr. and Mrs. Glenny, in the North of the colony, an account of which I hope to be able to send you on their return to Sydney.

The mail is just about to close. I hope to report further progress in my next, and remain,

Dear Philo-Israel,
Yours faithfully and fraternally,
PERCY E. WILLIAMS,
General Secretary.

185, William-street, Sydney, February 7, 1881.

SPECIAL SERMONS ON OUR IDENTITY, BY THE REV. RICHARD HILL, B.A., OXON.

(Special Preacher at the Parish Church of St. Giles, Camberwell.)

WE are thankful to report to our readers that that gifted preacher, the Rev. Richard Hill, B.A., Chaplain to the Fever Hospitals (Metropolitan Asylum Board), is engaged to deliver a course of eight sermons on alternate Sunday evenings, commencing with April 24, 1881, at St. Barnabas church, Guildford-road, South Lambeth-road, Stockwell, S.W. We trust that all readers of the BANNER who can by any possibility attend this course of sermons will do so. Large assemblies to support the preacher will not only greatly aid our cause with the congregation of St. Barnabas and its neighbourhood, but will stimulate those who hear Mr. Hill to investigate and propagate our Identity for themselves, by proving to them that cultivated minds like the rev. preacher's have earnestly taken up the subject, and are proclaiming it. We subjoin a syllabus of the proposed sermons, which certainly are very attractive, from an Identity point of view, and we are sure will prove deeply interesting. For those who desire to know something of the preacher's antecedents, we commend a sketch of his career to be found (with portrait) in the Christian Globe, of March 25, 1880. It will be seen that the Rev. R. Hill is a finished classical and ethical scholar, a brilliant orator, a very attractive, powerful preacher, one who proclaims "Christ and His redeeming blood as, above all things, the passport through the gates of heaven." The syllabus of the series:—

1. April 24, 1881.—The Origin of Religion and Civilisation; From Whence Cometh Our Learning and Faith?
2. May 8.—God's Great Family Upon Earth; the Kingdoms of Israel and Judah; God's Promises Sure.
3. May 22.—The Revolt of the Tribes; Its Effects Religiously, Politically, and Socially Upon the Hebrew Nation.
4. June 5.—The Captivities of Israel and Judah; Seeking "The Lost."
5. June 19.—The Escape of Jeremiah with the King's Daughters; The Early History of Ireland.
6. July 3.—The Anglo-Saxon Race, Whence Came They? Considered Scripturally, Historically, and Scientifically.
7. July 17.—God's promises to the Ten Tribes of Israel Fulfilled in the British Nation.—Religion, Politics, and Law.
8. July 31.—The Restoration of the Holy Land, and the Possession Thereof by the Anglo-Saxon Race, Together with the Jews.

TO THE READERS OF THE "COMMENTS."—April 21st. chap. lxi. (Isaiah), for 1882-6, read 1881-6.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

Price 4d., by post 4½d. Special terms for a quantity.

THE ISRAEL OF GOD.

A SERVICE OF SONG Upon the Career and Destiny of God's Ancient People Israel. WORDS AND MUSIC. BY C. W. E.

Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Second Edition now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

AMMI; or, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham the "friend of God," and showing that true science history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH. By REV. JOSEPH WILD, D.D. With a Portrait of the Author.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C

SEE NEW IDENTITY QUARTERLY MAGAZINE. Editor, Rev. R. DOUGLAS, M.A., Vicar of St. Stephen, Sheffield. Articles by Piazzi Smyth, Col. Gawler, &c. Price 6d.; post free, annually, 2s. 3d. James Nisbet & Co., London.

B. SCOTT'S ESSAY on NATURAL MEDICINES. "Should be read by every one afflicted." —So writes a Clergyman in Lancashire. Post free five stamps. B. V. Scott, 121, Kensington, Liverpool.

New ready, bound in cloth, 2s. 3d., gilt, 2s. 9d. post free 3d. extra.

SERMON I.,

Containing Seven Parts of Extracts from the "FLYING ROLL," FOR THE "INGATHERING" OF ISRAEL.

May be had of Joseph Head, John Rogers, George Moore, Edward Rogers, 5, Trafalgar-st., New Brompton, Kent; Joshua Rogers, 151, Great Titchfield-st., London, W.; and, by ordering, of any bookseller. May be had also in parts, 4d each; post free 4½d.

"Who are Israelites, to whom pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises."

A RESUME OF THE SCRIPTURAL ARGUMENT, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100. London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA THE ROYAL SEED TO KING DAVID'S THRONE, AND ARE NOT HER SUBJECTS, THE BRITISH PEOPLE, THE TEN LOST TRIBES?

BY WILLIAM HOPTON, of Sutton Heath.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

NEW PAMPHLET ON THE IDENTITY OF THE LOST TEN TRIBES FOR UNIVERSAL CIRCULATION.

The Best Pamphlet to place in the hands of a person unacquainted with the subject.

Price 6d., by post 7d. 64 Demy 8vo. pages, in wrapper. One dozen copies sent free for a post office order for 6s.

FIFTY REASONS WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES

OF THE LOST TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL.

BY REV. W. H. POOLE, D.D.

"There is a principle which is a bar against all information, which is proof against all argument, and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance. This principle is, contempt prior to examination."—Dr. Paley.

A greater than Paley has said:—"He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is a folly and a shame unto him."—Prov. xviii.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,

High-Class Tailor,

47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.

MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING OF THE METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION

Will be held (D.V.) in the LOWER ROOM AT EXETER HALL, ON FRIDAY, MAY 20TH, AT 7 P.M.

THE RT. HON. VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P., IN THE CHAIR.

The following Gentlemen have been asked to Address the Meeting:—

MR. E. W. BIRD (PHILO-ISRAEL).
MR. DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.
MR. W. H. PETERS, J.P.
THE REV. C. W. HICKSON, M.A.
THE REV. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE, M.A.
MR. F. C. DANVERS.
THE REV. R. HILL, M.A.

All Identity believers are earnestly solicited to attend and to bring their friends.

NO CARDS WILL BE ISSUED. ADMISSION FREE.

The General Meeting of the Association for MEMBERS ONLY and DELEGATES FROM AFFILIATED ASSOCIATIONS will be held at the BOARD ROOM, 331, STRAND, at 3 p.m. on the same day.

JOHN S. ANDERSON, Hon. Sec.

384 Demy 8vo pages, in handsome cloth, gilt, price 3s. 6d., by post 4s.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.

Edited by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.

This Volume contains Papers on all Points of the Identity of the British People with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel.

Price 2d., post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

Price 2d., post free 3d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters."

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES AND 1882.

BY THE REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD, Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

PHILO-ISRAEL (in the BANNER) says:—"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome Identity volume. It contains twenty discourses of the well-known American divine, Dr. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, N.Y. We are glad to find from these discourses that Dr. Wild is quite one with us on this side the water with most, though not all the views we entertain on our great and glorious subject. . . . We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and 'American' point of view, which is sure to interest, sure to be instructive, and may lead the thoughtless and inquiring to pursue the investigation till possibly conviction may be the result.'

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

THE SISTERS OF HARROWDALE RECTORY. By MRS. M. A. SEARSON, ILLUSTRATED WITH A BEAUTIFUL DOUBLE-PAGE FRONTISPIECE.

"In this work, the leading arguments used in support of our Identity are woven into a pleasing story, which is both interesting and instructive. The description of the Rectory is a beautiful picture of the quiet sanctity and repose of an English Christian household, situated amid that charming pastoral scenery, which has its grandest development in the Southern and midland counties of England. It will prove entertaining to young and old, and should have a wide circulation."—The Heir of the World.

Price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome, cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth, gilt, 1s. Post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Third Edition.

Price 2s. 6d., post free 2s. 9d. Bound in handsome cloth, gilt, bevelled boards, gilt edges, and beautifully printed on toned paper.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? An Inquiry establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. Price 4d.

ROBERT BANKS'S CATALOGUE OF WORKS ON THE IDENTITY OF THE BRITISH PEOPLE WITH THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL will be sent to any address, post free, on application Racquet court, Fleet-street, London.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 27, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 227. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MAY 4, 1881. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Colonies, the Gates, and Confederation	177
Israel's Empire According to the Standard Newspaper	178
"The People Shall Dwell Alone" (Numbers xxiii. 9)	179
Lismore Young Men's Christian Association	179
Sir Richard Temple on the Value of Israel's Heathen Empire	179
Pyramid Symbology.—Part I. By A Watcher	180
Israel's Battles.—No. XXIX.—The Ashantee War	181
The Broken and the Restored Tables	183
"The Scriptural Argument" According to the Rev. B. W. Savile	183
Judah Recognises Israel. By Henry P. Keighly	185
Sunday at Home Gives Blind Evidence to Our Identity	186
The Two Sons	187
The Many-Coloured Wisdom of God. By Major R. W. D. Nickle	187
The Church Times on our Identity	188
Identity Acrostic.—No. 2. By Col. M. Beresford	189
Review	189
Correspondence—The Forthcoming International Exhibition of Electricity at Paris —The Soli-Lunar Epact	189
Subscriptions Received by the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association	191
Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union	191
Our Supplements	191

THE COLONIES, THE GATES, AND CONFEDERATION.

IT is pleasant to us to find that the secular journals of the day are writing in language which runs exactly on the lines of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and which could not more clearly point to our Identity if the editor of that well-abused journal had been its author. We particularly allude to the leader of the paper called England, of March 5, 1881, from which we take a few extracts for our readers' information.

We have received already two or three copies of this remarkable paper from ardent Israelites, and no doubt shall receive several more; for, in truth, the language is ours, the sentiments are the BANNER'S, and the writer of the article fulfilled, in an extraordinary way, the function of a blind witness to our Identity, without, in the least, being aware that he was proving, by his words, the Israelitish origin of the British nation. Let the reader judge if what we state be not the fact, after reading the following :—

Of what, we would ask, does our colonial Empire consist? The official list comprises the names of fifty places, many of which, unlike Canada, Australia, South Africa, &c., are only nominally, not really, colonies—such, for example, as Gibraltar, Malta, St. Helena, Bermuda, and Cyprus. These, although under the Colonial Office, are, properly speaking, naval and military posts, the maintenance of which is essential to the security of our maritime supremacy. Such stations contribute, it is true, little or nothing to their own support.

The expenditure incurred, erroneously termed colonial, has led some political sciolists to regard our colonies as a source of weakness, instead of strength, as points of attack which must be defended in war, and therefore they advocate their abandonment. They do not pause to reflect that these isolated stations could not remain independent, that they must fall into the hands of some greater Power, that instead of securing to England the dominion of the seas, they could transfer it into the hands of our rivals, and would thus become sources of danger to us, as they are now of safety.

The keys of the world have been indeed placed in our hands. Bermuda in the centre of the North Atlantic, with Halifax to the North, the Bahamas and West Indies to the South, command the whole of that ocean. St. Helena, the Father Islands, and Simon's Bay complete our supremacy in the Southern Seas. Australia and New Zealand on the West, with British Columbia on the East, and Fiji in the middle of the Pacific, ought to make us masters of that ocean, while our highway to the "gorgeous East" is secured by the naval stations of Gibraltar, Malta, Aden, the Mauritius, Singapore, and Hong Kong.

The maintenance of all these lines is essential to protect our commerce with our great possessions in India, America, Australia, and Africa. The time has come when we must cease to think of our nation as being confined to the shores of these islands. The Earl of Beaconsfield has well said that England is an Asiatic as well as an European Power. He might, with still greater truth, have added that her mission is world-wide, that her laws and her language are becoming predominant in the four quarters of the world, that under her ægis her sons, carrying with them their religion and civilisation, are dwarfing the growth of any other nationality; that the possession of the best portions of the temperate zone and of a boundless coast-line, with magnificent harbours, give a scope for growth exceeding belief; that in those lands there are sources of countless wealth so great that a future age may possibly yet see an English-speaking Zolverein.

So far it is easy to prophesy. How far this great edifice may be welded together is, as we have said, the problem of this or of the next generation; how 30,000,000 of our fellow-countrymen in Canada, as many in Australia, a large number of them in South Africa, and some millions in New Zealand and other islands, can be empowered to share in our responsibilities; how they are to have a voice in the government of an empire, of which they will form three-fourths; how far they are to be consulted before entering upon wars, for which they do not pay, in the conduct and glory of which they do not share, but which endangers their trade, are questions which must be met and solved, and that without delay.

The writer talks, it will be seen, of "the keys" of the world being in our hands," and then he enumerates "the chief Gates," as God's Word better and more accurately describes them. The Gates of the North Atlantic, of the South, of the Eastern seas, of the middle Pacific, those that make us masters too of the "gorgeous East," by our possession of such naval stations as Gibraltar, Malta, Aden, the Mauritius, Singapore and Hong Kong, all are enumerated, just as the BANNER does, as proof that to us is entrusted the commerce of India, America, Australia, and Africa, giving us also the mastery or supremacy of the ocean.

Digitized by Google

Our readers well know that the one race to whom the Gates were promised in God's Word is "the seed of Abraham for ever." The journal in question, then, certifies for us—blindly, it may be—that the British are they. But this is not all. The writer declares, in the words of the late Lord Beaconsfield, that this nation "is an Asiatic as well as an European Power," which is only a paraphrase of Isa. lix. 19, xlv. 6, where Israel and Jacob are, by the Lord Himself, connected with the West and with the rising of the sun as well.

Again, England points to British influence, and their mission, as world-wide, that being Israel's destiny (Isa. xxvii. 6), while it is confidently anticipated that we may "possibly yet see an Empire of boundless wealth, an English-speaking Zolverein." What is that, we ask, but the realisation of Deut. viii. 18; Gen. xxxv. 11; Dan. vii. 22—27; Rom. iv. 13? Finally, the writer of the article in question enters on the subject which so often occupies our thoughts, and asks how, and when, and under what conditions it will be possible to confederate this great Anglo-Saxon company of nations? How the thirty millions of Canada, the thirty millions of Australia, the multitudes of South Africa, and the nations of Anglo-Saxons in New Zealand and the islands of the distant seas can be induced to unite their giant strength and form with the little island of the North, one mighty Empire to rule the earth? To these questions we can ourselves, however, give no detailed answers. But we can affirm that God's Word tells us it shall come to pass, and that, sooner or later, the British race, being the seed of Abraham, will become "a nation and a company of nations," united, strong, dominant, God-fearing, imperial; the glorious Church of the triumphant Redeemer, the true sons of the living God (Gen. xxxv. 11; Rom. iv. 13; Hosea i. 10). Israel triumphant! Praise ye the Lord!

ISRAEL'S EMPIRE ACCORDING TO THE STANDARD NEWSPAPER.

ON March 3, 1881, the Standard newspaper, repaying the Continental journals in their own coin, preached a sermon on the British Empire, which a friend, who noticed it, declared was "entirely on BANNER lines." "He reigneth, and will reign, and all will see His sceptre in His day," is the remark thereon of our clerical friend, an Israelite by conviction, and one who is not ashamed of his belief that the British are they. The Standard's article is a very remarkable "blind" contribution to our Identity literature. We mean to quote a portion of it for our readers' benefit, and for future use and record. Writing of our late misfortunes in the Transvaal, and the palpable fact that our Continental allies are not sorry for them, the Standard lectures them in the following way—inter alia:—

In Central Asia we are perplexed, and cherish divided counsels. In South Africa we have been badly beaten by a foe we were foolish enough to rate too cheaply; and the incompetence of our commanders has not been redeemed by any extraordinary courage or pluck on the part of our troops. This has happened; and we have published it to the world, after our fashion, without attempting to minimise in any degree the nature or the extent of our reverses. Forthwith a cry is raised on the Continent that either England is not what it used to be, or that its burden has grown beyond the capacity of its back. We are told that we lack our ancient spirit, that our military organisation is contemptible, that our soldiers are inferior, that we have not enough of them, and that if we mean to maintain our position in this world we must alter our system, alter our army, and alter ourselves. Now, in so far as these reproaches are true, we are glad to have them uttered. We are not a particularly thin-skinned race, and as we allow ourselves daily to criticise every people and every Government, we should be wanting in ordinary manliness if we resented the exercise of the critical faculty upon ourselves. Yet, we seem to detect a little exaggeration in the lectures pronounced for our benefit; nor do we feel sure that the lecturers themselves quite understand the conditions of the problem with which they attempt to deal. The British Empire is a very different thing from the German Empire, from the Russian Empire, from the Italian Kingdom, or from the French Republic. It is very much more complex, and, if we may be pardoned for saying so, it is very much bigger, and, in the ordinary sense of the word, greater. Any one can run off at once the geographical boundaries of the German Empire. It all lies in a nutshell, though the shell may be a big one. The English Empire has no boundaries. It cuts into every continent, and juts into every sea; and its government is as various as its territory. It is impossible for England to lead a quiet life long together; its engagements are too numerous, its ventures too universal. We must deal with it according to our lights. No one understands it but ourselves, and we ourselves understand it but imperfectly. It came to us by degrees, unintentionally for the most part, with accretions continually attaching themselves to possessions already acquired and to responsibilities already accepted. Sometimes it embarrasses us; it always occupies us, it is always exacting our time, our money, our solicitude. Like people with a large family, England has always one or other of its numerous children ailing in some way or other. We lead a greater, a more active, a more splendid life, than other nations; and we have to pay forfeit accordingly in the shape of multiplied anxieties and commensurate trials.

There is one thing, however, about which our foreign friends may make themselves quite easy. Whatever may be the anxiety or the sacrifices our Empire costs us, we intend to keep it. The Boers will be brought to their senses as the Afghans have been brought to their senses, and as the discontented portion of the Irish people are being taught to understand that the authority of England will be upheld in that country as in every other portion of the territories of the Queen.

There is much Identity truth compressed into the above short extract which our readers will do well to note. The same may be thus described:—

1. The British Empire is a thing sui generis, different from all the other empires of the Gentile races. Israel, in fact, "dwells alone" (Num. xxiii. 9).

2. This British Empire is the biggest and greatest of them all. Israel's likeness (Gen. xiii. 2, xviii. 18; 2 Sam. vii. 23, 24; Deut. iv. 7).

3. This Empire has no boundaries. It is in all continents, all seas, and its governments are as various as its territories; a description of Israel's dominion (Dan. vii. 22, 27; Isa. xlix. 8—10; Deut. xxxii. 8, 9; Micah v. 8; Rom. iv. 13).

4. This British Empire, further, has many offshoots, many children, just like Israel's "company of nations" (Gen. xxxv. 11).

5. This Empire of Britain has grown by degrees, unintentionally, with continual accretions, God-given, in fact, not man-desired, but just like Israel's (Isa. lx. 12, 14; Psa. ii. 8, 9, cxi. 6, xviii. 48; Isa. liv. 2, 3, &c.).

6. The British, troubled as they are by their enormous imperial responsibilities, mean, nevertheless, to keep the whole, like Israel, for they are the heirs of the world, by God's promise (Rom. iv. 13; Dan. ii. 35, 44, vii. 22, 27).

7. That the British will bring the Boers to their senses as the Afghans and Irish have been brought to theirs, and shown that Israel is "above only and not beneath," masters, and not their slaves (Deut. xxviii. 1, 13; Isa. lx. 12, xli. 10—16, &c.).

On the whole, the Standard is like the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and since both write regarding Ten-Tribed Israel, the kingdom blessed of God, we find a wonderful uniformity of testimony; the one, a blind recognition of Israel's future, asserted really without logical grounds of support; the other, the true evidence of facts, based on the words of the living God, testifying that His people are the British Anglo-Saxons, answering now most clearly to the prophecies. Israel, praise ye the Lord!

Digitized by Google

"THE PEOPLE SHALL DWELL ALONE."
(NUMBERS XXIII. 9.)

A FRIEND has drawn our attention to the following article, in the Daily Telegraph of October 8, 1880, as containing a fairly accurate portrait of British-Israel "dwelling alone." We reprint a few extracts from the statement, and leave our readers to say whether or not the picture is correctly drawn. The editor said:—

In many important instances our manners and customs differ widely from those of our neighbours. With us, for example, the bodies of the dead are kept above ground for four and five days, and even for a whole week after dissolution. On the Continent, "dans les vingt-quatre heures"—within four-and-twenty hours—is the irrevocable rule. We may justly pride ourselves on maintaining an unarmed police and civilian fire-brigades; but we are the only nation in civilised Europe—with the exception of Russia—that inflicts capital punishment by hanging. In every other country, Russia always excepted, the gallows has been superseded by the guillotine, or the immediately effectual sword, or garote, is used. We are the only people in Europe whose criminal code sanctions flogging with the cat-o'-nine-tails, not only as a disciplinary infliction in prisons, but as a punishment for crime. In another and a grotesque instance are our judicial usages at variance with those of foreigners. It is only by British judges and advocates that wigs are worn. We are the only people in Europe with an hereditary Chamber and an unpaid county magistracy; and we are alone in withholding stipends from the members of the Lower House of Legislature; although three hundred years ago English members of Parliament received regular "wages" from their constituents, and were entitled by law to sue for them. We are the only people in the world who maintain intact the systems of primogeniture and entail. We are the only people in the world who know how to fight with the clenched fist, and who can give "three cheers" in properly hearty unison, and without the hysterical American supplement of "tigers." We are the only people with a well-defined Poor Law, which recognises, as it has done since the time of the Statute of Elizabeth, the right of existence, and under the provisions of which casual paupers are repulsed from the workhouse gates, and left to die in the gutter in full view of the police, who stalk by in municipal meditation "fancy free." We are the only people in Europe that prohibits the opening of theatres on Sunday; which utterly withholds State assistance from theatrical managers; which declines to allow private soldiers in uniform to sit in the boxes at the playhouse; which systematically discourages public cafés, or establishments of the "Volksgarten" order, or places where the people can dance in the open air. When it is added that we are the only European people who still decline to adopt the decimal system in our currency and our weights and measures, and which has no order of chivalry for the honorific reward of merit in art, scholarship, or science; that we have no School of Historical Painting; that the metropolis of our Empire is destitute of a homogeneous municipal government; that we allow half-a-dozen noblemen to blockade the parishes of the metropolis with gates and bars; that we smilingly tolerate the abominations of Covent-garden market; and that we have not yet erected a national monument to the memory of William Shakespeare, just the slightest inkling, perhaps, has been given of that insularity of England which so perplexes foreigners, and which might even perplex us to decide whether we ought to glory in or to be ashamed of it.

The lines above, which we have italicised, our readers will recognise as distinct identifications of Israel; and the whole article shows, on the evidence of a secular writer, that the British, being Israel, "dwell alone" (Num. xxiii. 9).

LISMORE YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.—A meeting of the above society was held on Thursday evening last, the Rev. H. Brougham, D.D., in the chair, on which occasion a very interesting lecture was delivered by the Rev. Denis Hanan, M.A., on "The Lost Ten Tribes of Israel." The subject is one to which a great deal of attention has lately been attracted, in consequence of the numerous pamphlets which have been written on the matter, advocating that the people of Great Britain are the descendants of the Lost Ten Tribes. The learned lecturer elucidated his subject in a very able manner, proving conclusively, by prophetic statements and historic facts, that the people of Great Britain are the descendants of the Lost Ten Tribes.—Waterford Standard, March 9, 1881.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE ON THE VALUE OF ISRAEL'S HEATHEN EMPIRE.

SPEAKING before the Birmingham Conservative Association in the Town Hall on January 6, 1881, Sir Richard Temple answered the question, "Why should we keep India?" after the following admirable fashion:—

It is an important question, he said, "Why Keep India?" and it may be well, if you will allow me for one moment, if you are not fatigued—(cries of "Go on")—that I read to you some reasons. (Loud applause). I may be allowed to read you, then, with your kind permission, the answer to the very pertinent question as to why England should keep India. I read that answer from a book which I have just now published myself. (Applause.) To that question I answer thus: "England must keep India because during more than a century she has assumed the government of a vast population, rescued by her from anarchy, revolution, and internecine strife, and now living in loyalty, contentment, and prosperity under her sway (hear, hear); because, in the face of British power being permanent, immense interests have arisen, which depend on the security of rights, under fixed laws, with a competent executive, and would be imperilled by the withdrawal of the paramount authority, letting loose the destructive elements that the British Government now restrain; because the abnegation by England of responsibility persistently taken up by her, would leave her friends, allies, and supporters in India, and all who have there prospered under her shield, to become the prey and sport of disruptive forces; because the influences of Western civilisation, especially education, have called into being new schools of thought and belief, comprising men who have sacrificed social interests, and broken ancestral ties, in order to follow the light of European guidance, and who ought not now to be deserted by England (hear, hear); because a vast amount of British capital had been sunk in the country on the assurance of British rule being, humanly speaking, perpetual (hear, hear)—the said capital being invested in railways and canals, or in industrial and commercial enterprises; because the British Government has incurred a considerable debt by issuing securities, of which a large portion is held by Europeans, and a considerable part by natives; because under the British flag a great trade has sprung up, which, though European, does yet wholly depend on the maintenance of order in the interior of the country, and would languish if British power were to cease; because extensive markets have been, and are being, opened for British manufactures, and which must be more or less closed if the country should revert to disorder on the retirement of the British authority; because the Indian Empire is self-supporting financially, has borne the cost of all its wars without imposing any charge or burden upon the United Kingdom, and has, on the other hand, rendered assistance in British wars waged beyond its own limits in Persia, Abyssinia, and China (applause); because England does not incur any expense for maintaining the communications to the far East by way of Egypt and the Red Sea, and because the intermediate stations of Gibraltar and Malta are held in force for guarding British interests on the shores of the Mediterranean, besides protecting the overland route to India: because the Indian Empire does not cause any real drain upon English people, inasmuch as all who go there proceed upon service which they have voluntarily undertaken for their own benefit, and because, on the contrary, such service affords employment to the surplus of a vast, growing population; because India offers to England an unequalled scope for giving effect to the purest philanthropy, the noblest ideas, the loftiest aspirations by which the English people can be moved and actuated (applause); and lastly, because England herself is elevated morally by the obligation of caring humanely and unselfishly for the good of a vast population which providence has committed to her charge." (Loud applause.) This, then, gentlemen, is my answer to that question, and this is my appeal to you, British electors.

In respect to the question what the British have done for India Sir Richard was equally clear in his testimony; and his statement may be read with pride by everyone who loves his country. He said:—

India is well able to pay the interest upon the capital which is borrowed for her improvement. It is a fact that during the last few years there has been an equilibrium between income and expenditure, and, indeed, there has been a small surplus. (Hear, hear.) Therefore, I am justified in saying that the current finance of India is perfectly sound. (Applause.) But, gentlemen, you may say, What has the Government done in the way of public improvement to develop this vast, this mighty estate, and this great national heritage? It has spent 97 millions sterling upon guaranteed railways, 25 millions upon State railways, 20 millions upon canals for irrigation and navigation, 3½ millions upon electric telegraph, 6 millions, municipal, upon waterworks and drainage; the total amounting to 151 millions sterling in one generation of men. (Applause.) That, perhaps, you will consider as a total worthy of the British name (hear, hear), an outlay of truly imperial proportions. But you will also say, Does this outlay pay? Gentlemen, it does pay. (Hear, hear). For this reason: that the railways, being now tolerably developed, are paying 5 per cent., and the canals, although they are not perfectly developed, are still paying 6 per cent. (Hear, hear.) But besides this outlay on improvements within the last five years, the Government has spent 16 millions sterling for the relief of famine, for the purpose of saving your famishing fellow-subjects from the most dreadful of deaths. (Hear, hear.) Whilst we are touching on finance, I should mention that there is a Government paper currency, which is a note circulation valued at twelve millions sterling. India, also, is a great absorbent of the precious metals, especially gold. She takes and hoards seven millions sterling annually of gold, and she generally has a cash balance in her treasury of fifteen millions sterling, so you see that although India is a very poor country, no doubt, for her size, still she has something solid and substantial about her.

Digitized by Google

Lastly, you may fairly ask, How about the interest on the national debts. Well, now, the national debt consists of 150 millions sterling of regular debt, and the 97 millions sterling which I have already mentioned to you as the outlay upon guaranteed railways. So that, in round numbers, you may say the debt is about 250 millions sterling, which is not an excessive debt for a country which has a revenue of 67 millions. (Hear, hear.) Consider now the interest upon that debt. It used to be 5½ per cent., then the Indian financiers reduced it to 5, and then to 4½. When I was Finance Minister we got it down to 4; now the Indian Fours in India are standing at a premium; and I saw it stated in a leading London paper, a few days ago, that the Indian Government is now borrowing at 3½ per cent. (Hear, hear.) Now, gentlemen, bear with me whilst I state another matter about this interest. You see we have got it down to 3½ per cent., but a great portion of the debt, as I have just shown you, has been laid down upon reproductive and remunerative works, which are giving income, and paying more than the interest upon the capital that was borrowed for them. Therefore, when all this is taken together we ascertain that the Government paid last year only 2½ per cent. upon the whole debt, and is now virtually paying less than 2 per cent. Taking all these things together, we are entitled to say that the Indian Empire has a credit which stands higher than any other nation in the world, except England herself. (Applause.)

Such is the noble heritage the Lord has given Israel in the East; and such is the not unworthy use the nation, as stewards for the Divine Giver, have made of their opportunities. We have not done all we could or should by India. We have not always acted in the acquisition of the noble provinces given to our charge as a Christian people were bound to have done. But, taking it as a whole, the gift has been carefully utilised and unselfishly governed for the benefit of the subject races in such wise, that all Asiatic lands, far and near, the whole of the Turkish Empire included, have recorded their deliberate conviction that this is a righteous nation, and themselves desire to be ruled by the mild and beneficent sceptre of the Empress of the East.

We thank Sir Richard Temple for his timely lecture, and trust that those who heard him, and those who have read his burning words, will henceforth learn that India is a sacred trust, a gift of God, through His beloved Son, to His inheritance and heritage, the children of Israel (Psa. ii. 8), while the sole object of the gift is that the Eastern nations, under Israel's Christian guardianship, may be brought in repentance and in humility to Christ. "Be wise now, therefore, O ye kings: be instructed, ye judges of the earth. Serve the LORD with fear, and rejoice with trembling. Kiss the SON, lest He be angry, and ye perish from the way, when His wrath is kindled but a little. Blessed are all they that put their trust in Him" (Psa. ii. 10—12).

PYRAMID SYMBOLOGY.

By A WATCHER.

PART I.

How alarmingly fast the last eighteen months of this Christian age are speeding away from us! Four of them gone already! This should make us think deeply on our actual position in the history of the past and the prevision of the future. The state of things in England, Ireland, and Europe, the destruction of our armies abroad, and the contentions of our distracted Church at home, are all suggestive of a great culmination in history, and the Pyramid declares a corresponding crisis in prophecy.

Surely it is time to lay aside all the thoughts, pleasures, frivolities, and even innocent amusements of this world, and to concentrate our whole souls on the serious work of preparing for this great event. When we do this the first thing we shall long for is peace. Rest from the turmoil, excitement, contradiction, enmity, and hatred which continually meet us here. Let us, then, turn away from the opponents of Anglo-Israel, with their bickerings and contentions, and devote ourselves to a contemplation of the exquisite symbology of the Grand Gallery of the glorious old Pyramid, which is our only sure guide as to the times and seasons of the quick coming future.

To begin at the beginning, what can more truly express the opening of the Christian dispensation, and the substitution of grace for the narrow ceremonial law, than the sudden ascent of the Roof to seven times its original height, at the very time of Christ's incarnation, as shown by the Rev. W. B. Galloway? It seems as if the world itself became higher and nobler the instant it contained its Divine Lord, even before His teaching began to affect its inhabitants.

Then we have the Level Passage, along which the Jews, who had been ascending through the Mosaic dispensation, are supposed to depart into banishment, disgrace, and dispersion as soon as they rejected and crucified their expected Messiah.

The Well is a perfect symbol for our blessed Lord's descent into death and the grave (the rock-cut Tomb), and on to the abode of fallen angels in the bottomless pit. The abstraction of the Ramp-stone over its mouth shows the rending of the power of death and the grave, which, we are told, should accompany His resurrection.

Is it quite clear that those joist-holes were ever filled? or the floor ever laid upon them, to cover the entrance to Judah's prison? It seems to me that the symbol would be truer if the preparations were made for all Israel to ascend together in Christ, but the Jews, by their rejection, failed to provide a way for themselves upwards, and opened a road into exile. They broke off some of the olive branches, and left the Gentiles to ascend with Israel, vaulting over their heads, just as at the Exodus all Israel vaulted to the Roof of the Descending Passage.

Then we come to the seven-fold Roof. It's emblem of the body of believers in Jesus Christ, in all ages and countries, holding on their steady heavenward way, is far too exquisite to have been designed by mortal genius. It reminds us of the many mansions in heaven, and the many degrees of holiness of those who, on earth, are preparing to occupy them. The upper tier seems ready for the saints and martyrs, the "narrow way" in its perfection, and we seem to hear them singing, while the lower tiers join according to their power,—

"Onward, Christian soldiers,
Marching to the war,
With the cross of Jesus
Going on before.
Like a mighty army
Moves the Church of God;
Brothers, we are treading
Where the saints have trod."

But I fear we dare not finish that verse in these days, when, as I will show, we have passed out of that heavenward road.

Digitized by Google

Each tier gets broader, trodden by greater numbers, as we get farther from our Lord and nearer to the world. This should make us strive to set ourselves a rigidly high standard of perfection as our aim in life; to get as far as possible from the earthiness of the world, and to soar as high above it as we can. Never mind stumbles and falls, they make us more cautious next time. But, at the same time, it teaches that there are many mansions, and that it is not for us to say who will, or who will not, attain the highest or the lowest.

It seems to me that the widest part, between the walls, expresses the state of the House of Joseph and sceptre of Judah, which received Christ in the first century. Tradition says from St. Paul himself, preaching "to kings and the children of Israel" (Acts ix. 15) in Ireland, and that Church, Sceptre, and State were there and then united, to journey together up the Gallery until 1878.

No theory seems to have been broached for the Ramp-walls and their very curiously constructed holes; but one object for them may be to confine the floor of this Gallery to the same narrow dimensions as the previous Mosaic passage. This seems to represent the passage of the anti-Christian Powers in parallel lines with the true Church; tares rankling beneath the wheat, yet allowed to grow together until the end of the age. It is, however, ended by the Step in 1813, a time when there was no crisis in anti-Christian history.

I cannot accept the mission theory for the perpendicular Step. On my own knowledge that was neither the beginning, nor the height of missionary zeal and enterprise in the Church. The two venerable societies were founded in 1701-2, and they planted American and Indian missions before that date. The Church Missionary Society also began work in 1801, and there was no other great revival until 1838, when the Church began to send out colonial bishops, and the funds of all the societies increased greatly for 20 years. I do not think we have yet discovered its meaning, or why the yard standard should be intruded there.

The Level Platform, 61 inches (or years) long, is one of the truest emblems of all. Church and State have hitherto travelled in parallel lines, with anti-Christ below them. In 1820 this is changed. The Church continues to ascend; the woman in the wilderness still bears her children on the eagle's wings of Holy Scripture, and draws them heavenward. But the State makes common cause with anti-Christ, and departs from her on the level, as the Jews did before. History shows a complete fulfilment of this. It was about 1820 that Roman Catholic emancipation began to be discussed, and after a severe contest, this first step towards the separation of Church and State was taken in 1839. Since that the progress has been rapid. Hitherto the Church militant—i.e., clergy and laity together—governed and educated the nation. But as Parliament gradually admitted Romanists, Jews, Quakers, and finally atheists—enemies of the Church—it became unfit to govern her. A course of spoliation began. Instead of giving her the means of providing spiritually for her flock, as King Alfred and the Tudor kings did, her cathedral endowments were robbed for the purpose; then tithe commutation deprived her of all participation in the prosperity of the nation. They threw open her universities, so preventing her training her youths in her own faith. Then this alien Parliament destroyed the ecclesiastical courts, by which her bishops had kept uniformity in her Churches, and they have failed to substitute even secular courts for the purpose. The Queen is no longer the nursing mother of the Church.

About half-way along this platform the Roof also begins to descend at each overlapping. Possibly this shows the gradual loss of that unity among Church members which our Lord declared should be the sign by which the world should know that the Father had sent Him. It may also mean the Church and her hierarchy (or stars) gradually losing their hold on their people, and letting them "wander through all the mountains, and upon every high hill" (Ezek. xxxiv. 6), because the shepherds of Israel were not seeking for the lost sheep of the House of Israel.

The lowest overlapping was reached, we are told by Professor P. Smyth, in June, 1878 (or 1878·4*), and we then passed out of the seven-fold Church Roof, and may be said to stand on the brink of another dispensation.

The next great point in the building, which we are rapidly approaching, is the Impending dead Wall, which abruptly ends the Grand Gallery and the Christian age. This is conclusively proved to demonstration by the fact that the two principal dates in Daniel's prophecy, taken from the Hegira, fit the two most remarkable points in the Pyramid—this dead Wall and the Granite Leaf in the Ante-Chamber. All commentators agree that Mahomet was to run a course of 1,260 years, therefore his end is certain at, or before, 1881·4. It seems, also, that the sixth vial began to be poured out, and the Euphrates, or Ottoman Empire, to recede in 1820—the edge of the Step.

Clearly a great crisis in this Eastern Question took place in June, 1878·4, just when we passed out of the Roof of the Gallery. At that moment the Russian army sat at the gate of Constantinople. The Sultan was bound hand and foot by the Treaty of San Stephano. He was signing away the protectorate of all his Asiatic possessions to the only Power who interfered to keep him from utter annihilation. Newspapers called him the sick man, the dead man, and the carcase, and four imperial eagles gathered together to divide his European territory. His life since has been only a living death, a life of obstruction more than action; and all things seem closing round him to ensure the extinction of his Empire, certainly not later than 1881·4.

(To be continued.)

ISRAEL'S BATTLES.

"FOR THERE IS NONE OTHER THAT FIGHTETH FOR US, BUT ONLY THOU, O GOD."

(Continued from page 51.)

No. XXIX.—The Ashantee War.

In February, 1873, three armies of the Ashantee nation, near the West Coast of Africa, East of Cape Coast Castle, suddenly invaded the territory of a protected race, the Fantees. The cause of the invasion, and of the defiance offered by the Ashantees to the British was not very deeply hidden. The British, by treaty, acquired the rights and privileges of the Dutch along the Gold Coast, and with these the duty of protecting the Fantees. The Ashantees despised the Fantees, refused to accept the British payment of a stipend made annually by the Dutch, unless it took the form of a tribute; and having no dread or experience of British power, resolved to bring matters to a climax, and so invaded British territory to drive the lion of the House of Israel into the sea. Vain hope! God had given the Gate of that land to His people, and with the Gate the countries beyond. The Ashantee armies were at first successful. They routed the Fantees, and advanced to Effiatu, a place twelve miles from Cape Coast Castle, on June 5.

Col. Harley then commanded at Cape Coast Castle. On June 13, the Ashantees having ventured to attack the British post at Elmina Castle, were repulsed by the force under Col. Festing, being chiefly marines and seamen. After this defeat the Ashantees were cowed. They retreated to their camp, and stopped there. The home Government, however, resolved to teach the Ashantees a lesson which they should not soon forget, and took steps accordingly to carry the war into the enemy's country, and to reduce Coomassie, the capital.

* See "Our Inheritance," &c., fourth edition, p. 546.

Digitized by Google

Sir Garnet Wolseley was appointed Administrator of the Gold Coast, and Commander-in-Chief in the African settlements. A military road towards Coomassie was begun at once by Lieut. Gordon, 98th Highlanders. A large staff was sent out to drill the natives into efficient troops, and lastly two British regiments—the 42nd Highlanders (the Black Watch), and 23rd Welsh Fusiliers—were held in readiness to proceed to Cape Coast Castle, should Sir Garnet find it needful to invade the enemy's territory. Subsequently, in December, 1873, the above two regiments, with some volunteers from the 79th Foot, and a battalion of marines, beside the 1st West India Regiment, assembled at Cape Coast Castle just too late to catch the armies of King Koffee Calcalli on the Coast side of the Prah. In consequence, Sir Garnet was forced to march into the Ashantee country straight towards Coomassie, to strike terror by dictating peace there before returning to the Coast in time to avoid the rains of the end of February.

Prior to the march, Sir Garnet issued an order to the troops, dated December 23, 1873, encouraging them under the conditions of the strange warfare they were about to carry on, telling them what is true only of Israel—that "English troops are accustomed to fight against immense odds in all parts of the world," and that with his Snider rifle each British soldier was on an equality with, and fully a match for twenty Ashantee warriors.

The British marched on January 6, 1874. Col. Wood led with native levies. The Prah was passed; the Adansi Hills, which is the boundary of the Ashantee kingdom, were reached; the frontier villages were seized by Lord Gifford, and fortified by Russell and Wood. The roads were widened, and bridges made, by Major Horne, of the Engineers. The force advanced without serious opposition to Fourmanah on January 24, and after some doubtful messages tending to peace, sent by the king to Sir Garnet, it was found by the end of January that the former meant "war to the knife." At Amoaful, twenty miles from Coomassie, the Ashantees made their first serious stand. They had a fine position for defence, but the natives were only armed with old-fashioned muskets of the era of Napoleon I. They were 20,000 strong, however; but Sir Garnet, with his 3,000 troops handling the far-searching Snider, was more than a match for the dusky warriors. The thick wood, in which the enemy were concealed, gave them the greatest advantage, of which they were not slow to avail themselves.

The Black Watch formed the main attacking force. Passing Agamassie, a village close to Amoaful, the Highlanders were furiously attacked, and were held at bay for an hour by the enemy in the jungle. The 23rd came up in support, the Rifle and the Naval Brigades gave efficient help, and the enemy was steadily pushed, with great losses on both sides, out of the jungle towards Amoaful, which was reached by the 42nd with a rush. The place was taken by noon. On February 1st, Lord Gifford succeeded in driving the Ashantees out of Becquah, and on the 2nd Sir Garnet reached Agemammu, fighting all the way. On February 3, the British, leaving tents and baggage at Agemammu, in the fortified post erected there, pushed on to Coomassie. At Ordahsu, near Coomassie, the king made a vigorous stand. He fought Sir Garnet at that spot for six hours. At nine o'clock the Rifle Brigade carried the place. The 42nd advanced at once towards Coomassie, six miles off; "empty powder-casks, barrels, umbrellas, and corpses marked the path." At 5.30 p.m. on the same day Coomassie was occupied by the British.

These operations, in which only 2,217 British troops were engaged, and during which 300 officers and soldiers were killed and wounded, brought the war to an end. Coomassie was destroyed. Though the king never appeared to make his submission, or to sign a treaty, his capital was captured, the surrounding nations learnt that he had been subdued, his palace and chief city were destroyed and burnt, and himself a refugee in the jungles around.

On February 6, 1874, Sir Garnet marched toward the Coast. He halted at Fourmanah, where messengers from the king followed him with 1,000 ounces of gold, and requests to be allowed to sign the treaty of peace. There Sir Garnet received Capt. Sartorius and his twenty heroes, who, sent on by Capt. Glover (son of our Pyramidist and hearty supporter, the Rev. F. R. A. Glover), rode through Coomassie after the British had evacuated it, followed them for fifty miles alone, and rode his ride of fearful risk and danger, protected by the God of Israel, in perfect safety.

Capt. Glover followed in the track of Sartorius, and joined Sir Garnet's forces at Fourmanah. On February 19, 1874, the British re-entered Cape Coast Castle in triumph, and early in March the British troops safely landed again in England, their expedition gloriously successful, their object fully secured. It was, indeed, a unique expedition, undertaken to establish Israel's power on the West Coast of Africa. It had God's favour throughout. The troops "went forth out of their own land to battle against their enemy," and the Lord who sent them forth "maintained their cause" (1 Kings viii. 44, 45). The enemy "came against them one way, and they fled before them seven ways" (Deut. xxviii. 7). The British being the remnant of Jacob, were on that occasion, as on so many previous ones we have described, the Lord's chosen ones "among the Gentiles, in the midst of many people as a lion among the beasts of the forest, as a young lion among the flocks of sheep, who, when he went through, trod down, tore in pieces, and there was none to deliver" (Micah v. 8). The Lord's deliverance of His people was never so marked as when Sir Garnet Wolseley took his handful of valiant men into Coomassie, and brought them back in safety, the objects of the expedition accomplished, and the enemy signally punished. Israel, praise ye the Lord.

Our task is now nearly accomplished. What we set ourselves to do in the first number of the BANNER (pages 7 and 8, vol. i., January 3, 1877), we have now, however imperfectly, performed. We began with the wonderful story of Crecy, Poictiers, Agincourt, and detailed the exciting times of the Spanish Armada. We glanced at the battles of Blenheim, Ramilies, Oudenarde, and Malplaquet. We passed in review the salient points of the Peninsula war, dwelling especially on the typical battle of Albuera. We narrated the facts of Quatre Bras and Waterloo, and spoke then of the wars in Hindostan with the native princes, assisted sometimes by the French. We glanced at the battles of the mutinies, and did not omit mention of the chief contests of the Crimea, and now we have passed in review the high-handed expeditions in which Israel was engaged in Abyssinia first, and lastly in dealing with the Ashantees in 1874. We have also, as our readers know, described the more recent battles of the Zulu and Afghan wars; and the lesson which the whole of these wondrous scenes are calculated to teach us is, that the Lord our God has always, and at all times, fought for His people Israel, and "maintained their cause as the matter, in each instance, required." He has been with us in all our troubles, He has not failed us, nor forsaken us (Josh. i. 5). All those that were incensed against us have been ashamed and confounded; they have been as nothing. They that have striven against us have perished. Those that have warred against us have been as nothing, and as a thing of nought. And why? Because the Lord our God hath held our right hand, saying unto us, "Fear not; I will help thee." He hath helped us verily, for He is our Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel (Isa. xli. 10—14). Israel, again we say to you, Praise ye the Lord.

With a description of one more "battle of Israel," yet to be fought, we shall conclude our series.

(To be continued.)

NOTICE.—The Editor acknowledges, with thanks, 5s. from H., Southport, and proposes to credit the BANNER Supplement Fund (for August) with the amount.—PHILO-ISRAEL.

Digitized by Google

THE BROKEN AND THE RESTORED TABLES.

MR. SAM. SAMPSON'S thoughtful paper on the Lord's-day, published on page 162 of this year's BANNER, has suggested to us an idea, which carries out Commander L. G. Roberts' view of the meaning of the parables of "The Potter's Vessel," and "The Broken Earthen Bottle." It has appeared to us, that the broken and the unbroken restored Tables of the Law, the story of which is told in Deut. x. 1—5, Exod. xxxii. 1—19, xxxiv. 1—4, and 1 Kings viii. 9, represent in figure to us God's dealings with the two Houses of Israel. The one, Judah, was depicted by the broken tables as by the broken earthen bottle, which "cannot be made whole again" (Jer. xix. 11); and Israel was portrayed by the newly-hewn tables existing to this day in the ark (Deut. x. 5), as also by the potter's newly made earthen vessel, re-fashioned from the "marred clay." (BANNER, vol. v., page 134). The story of the tables is well known, but it will be profitable to review it again in the aspect in which we desire to present it to our readers.

In Exodus xxxi. 18 it will be seen that when Moses was in Mount Sinai "The Lord gave to him two tables of testimony, tables of stone, written with the finger of God." While Moses was away, the children of Israel, the whole of the Twelve Tribes, fell into gross idolatry; they made the molten calves by the hand of Aaron, and said, "These be thy god's, O Israel, which brought thee up out of the land of Egypt" (Exod. xxxii. 4). Moses hastened down, by God's command, to plead with His people, having in his hands the first tables of commandments, "tables which were the work of God, the writing, the writing of God graven upon the tables" (Exod. xxxii. 16). Here was a figure, like the "earthen bottle" (Jer. xix. 1, 10, 11), of God's dealings with Judah-Israel under the law. The law, indeed, was "holy, and just, and good" (Rom. vii. 12); but its end was condemnation. "It was ordained to life, but it was found to be unto death" (Rom. vii. 10). It found God's people in open, flagrant, rebellious sin; and Moses, expressing the Lord's sense of the enormity of His people's guilt under that law, evidently with God's approval, "cast the tables out of his hands, and broke them beneath the Mount" (Exod. xxxii. 19). Here was Judah's condemnation, that part of the nation being the representatives of God's people while under the Mosaic law. Let us note that these tables were never, as Mr. Sampson reminds us, permitted to be mended, or used again. Like the earthen bottle, the first tables were so broken that they "cannot be healed or made whole again." The condition of Judah-Israel under the broken tables, therefore, is hopeless. For Judah during this dispensation there can be no recovery, no "healing" as a nation.

But the narrative does not stop there. Blessed be God, there was hope in Ten-Tribed Israel's end. For the mass, the ten-twelfths of the nation, "the remnant according to the election of grace" (Rom. xi. 5), there is recovery provided. The Lord caused two new tables of stone to be hewed out by Moses, like the first, and on them He himself again "wrote the words of the covenant, the ten commandments" (Exod. xxxiv. 28; Deut. x. 1—4). The Lord Himself, with the finger of God, wrote the ten laws on the tables; and the writing was an exact counterpart of what appeared on the first tables, broken by Moses under the Mount. What was this in figure to represent? Surely the "new covenant" laid up in the ark (the Lord Jesus Christ) which God Himself has promised to confirm to the House of Israel first (Jer. xxxi. 33; Heb. viii. 10).

These tables were newly fashioned. They were like the Divine Potter's "marred" work, which "He made again as seemed good to the Potter to make it" (Jer. xviii. 4). They were not "mended tables," but tables newly cut out (Dan. ii. 34), hewn; like the former tables as to the contents, the materials being the same; but the stone tables were themselves new. The outward fashion was different, but the contents were the same; nay, the materials were exactly similar, for they both were of "stone." So God marred His own work (1 Kings xii. 24) in regard to the House of Israel, established by Him in Samaria in B.C. 975. He banished and cancelled His work; only, however, to recast and remake it into another nation (Jer. xxxi. 36) with the same materials. The laws written in the old tables were repeated in the new. There was no change in that respect. But in the last case the Surety for the people, even Christ Jesus, kept those laws for the House of Israel (Matt. i. 21; Acts iv. 12; Gal. iv. 4, 5), and, therefore, in the figure these tables were laid up in the ark for the Christian House of Joseph, Ephraim, Isaac (that is, Israel), as it is this day. These tables are destined never to be broken, for they are Ephraim-Israel's; nay, they are secure, fulfilled, guarded, and perfectly satisfied, by Israel's Daysman and Surety, their Deliverer, Redeemer, Friend, and Husband. That Law is destined for His merit's sake to be written in this nation's heart, put into their minds, that they may thereby become His people, and He their God (Jer. xxxi. 33).

The unbroken tables at last will be Judah's safety too; for though now they are under the condemnation of the broken tables, "which cannot be made whole again, or healed" (Jer. xix. 11), the time, nevertheless, is coming soon for Judah, blessed be God, when Israel's covenant, and their unbroken tables will be made available for them; when "they shall look on Him whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for Him as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for Him as one that is in bitterness for his first-born" (Zech. xii. 10). Oh! may that day soon arrive. May Judah, "the remnant of his brethren," "return unto the children of Israel" (Micah v. 3); and may there be "one fold, and one Shepherd" (John x. 16), the unbroken tables being the joy of Judah's, as well as of Israel's hearts; and one Lord be the ruler of them all (Ezek. xxxvii. 22, 25—27; Matt. ii. 6).

"THE SCRIPTURAL ARGUMENT" ACCORDING TO THE REV. B. WREY SAVILE.

WE have had our attention directed on two or three occasions lately to a statement regarding the present belief of the Rev. B. Wrey Savile as to the Scriptural argument bearing on the Identity, which has appeared in the Daily Western Times, of January 1. We have hesitated to notice the matter, because the argument is not Mr. Savile's own; but is put into his mouth by one who vouches he is able to answer for him—one whose name is not unknown to BANNER readers—the Rev. C. R. N. Lyne, of Cheltenham. The inconvenience of noticing such a vicarious statement as that we publish below, purporting to be Mr. Savile's belief, is, that the latter may at any moment, if convenient, repudiate his henchman's account of his views on the Scriptural aspect of our Identity. And as Mr. Savile in his writings in the BANNER, and in his first pamphlet ("Are We Israelites?") has pretty fully told us what he believes in regard to the points in issue, we are required by the nature of the case to accept, with some reserve, Mr. Lyne's description of Mr. Savile's present tenets, differing as they do from what the latter published before, as the East does from the West. We put before our readers now, however, what Mr. Lyne says that Mr. Savile believes (acting as his apologist), and we propose, after reciting his statement to add a few remarks by way of comment on the views, not newly or originally put before us now; but which, since they are so often reiterated, as if they were novelties, it behoves us now and again to bring to light in order that we may more conveniently refute them for the benefit of the recent converts to our Identity. Mr. Lyne, then, wrote as follows:—

Digitized by Google

To the Editor of "The Daily Western Times."

SIR,—In the BANNER OF ISRAEL for December 22, 1880, the editor in his review of Rev. B. W. Savile's excellent pamphlet on "Anglo-Israelism and the Great Pyramid," charges Mr. Savile with "almost entirely" ignoring "the Scriptural argument in favour of our Identity." Now, I would beg to remind the editor of the Banner that the special object Mr. Savile had in view when he wrote the pamphlet in question was to expose the excesses to which Anglo-Israelism had gone with reference to "the Great Pyramid," "the claims of her Majesty Queen Victoria to the throne of David," and lastly, "the reasons for fixing the end of the age in 1882." This being so, I am at a loss to discover how he could bring Scripture to bear on the subject. Nevertheless, having had frequent communications with Mr. Savile on the Scripture argument against Anglo-Israelism, I am enabled to state that the following are his reasons for believing the theory has no Scriptural warrant:—

1. All God's promises to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob respecting their seed were fulfilled before Christ came, consequently it cannot with any fairness be argued that we are Israelites because God may be granting to us similar blessings. What were these promises. In Gen. xxii. 17, God promised Abraham that his seed should be as the "sand" and "stars" in multitude. The proof that they were so is to be found in 1 Kings iv. 20: "Israel and Judah were many, as the sand;" in Neh. ix. 23: "Their children also Thou multipliest as the stars of heaven;" and in Heb. xi. 12: "There sprang of one (Abraham) . . . . so many as the stars of the sky . . . . and the sand which is by the sea shore." In Gen. xxviii. 14 God promised Jacob that his seed should be as "the dust of the earth." This is a very strong expression, and yet even this was fulfilled, as we see in 2 Chron. i. 9. Here we find Solomon thus addressing Almighty God: "Thou hast made me king over a people like the dust of the earth in multitude." The next promise to Abraham was (see Gen. xxii. 17) that his seed should "possess the gate of his enemies." The proof that this was fulfilled in the days of Joshua and Solomon has been so thoroughly dealt with by Mr. Savile in his pamphlet—the editor of the BANNER, notwithstanding—that I need not enter into it here. The promise (Gen. xxii. 18) that in Abraham's seed all the "nations of the earth should be blessed," although applied by Anglo-Israel writers to the Ten Tribes, clearly had reference to Christ, and to Him alone. In proof of this see Gal. iii. 16. It is worse than futile to say we are Israelites because we "lend to many nations but do not borrow," for Deut. xxviii. 44 makes it clear that Israel was only conditionally to do so, for they might have to "borrow" from the "stranger;" and this was said of the Twelve Tribes, not of the Ten Tribes only. It is difficult to imagine how Anglo-Israel believers can reply to the above.

2. St. Paul, in Romans xi., distinctly states that "Israel," except the "Election," is to be "blinded" in this dispensation; but we are not blinded, therefore we cannot be Israelites. Again, he tells us that in the "Gentile" or "wild olive" times (in which we are living) Israel's "unbelief" is to bring "mercy" to "Gentiles," in like manner, as by-and-by in the millennium, Israel is to be converted through "Gentile mercy." Then, perhaps, Israelites may increase and "multiply," but till then they are to be "scattered" and a "remnant" (see Isa. xi.).

3. Finally, it is clear from Noah's prophecy respecting his sons that our position exactly corresponds with what it was foretold the posterity of Japheth should occupy. What will the editor of the BANNER reply to this?

Kindly insert this letter, from your old friend,

C. R. N. LYNE

(Formerly Rector of St. John and St. George, Exeter).

15, Sydenham-villas, Cheltenham, January 4.

So far Mr. Lyne, as the exponent of Mr. Savile.

In primis we demur to Mr. Lyne's assertion that Mr. Savile was under any difficulty in respect to bringing forward the Scriptural argument in his recent pamphlet. His object was to inform us why he had changed his belief regarding our Identity, and magna pars of that belief, as every one is aware, is the Scriptural testimony that "the British are Israel." Mr. Savile knew that well enough when he was arguing with Messrs. Cornall, Clifford, and other opponents. But it was needful to explain why, having changed his own views he had joined their ranks, and the Scriptures were found an impediment to his case. They were, therefore, conveniently put on one side. Mr. Savile, however, has, Mr. L. tells us, strong views on the Scriptural argument, as we exhibit it, and they are these:—

1. All the Abrahamic promises were *ful*filled before Christ came. For example:—

a. The multitudinous seed to come of the patriarch was granted, and the covenant fulfilled, as stated in 1 Kings iv. 20; Neh. ix. 23; Heb. xi. 12; 2 Chron. i. 9.

b. The Gate blessing was fulfilled in Joshua's days, as Mr. Savile has thoroughly (?) demonstrated.

c. The promise, that in Abraham's seed all nations should be blessed, was fulfilled in Christ, and in Him alone.

This is, then, Mr. Savile's belief. Was it his always? Not so! At page 312, vol. ii., of the BANNER, he did not think the multitudinous character of Israel's promised seed was *ful*filled before Christ came. On the contrary, he pointed out that "the distinguishing marks of outcast Israel appear to be revealed in Scripture as follows," inter alia. "6. That in number it would fulfil the conditions promised to the seed of Abraham." "Look," reader, "on this picture and on that." Where is Mr. Savile's consistency? How is one to deal with a divine who, for every occasion, has a different doctrine, and who deals with Scripture after a fashion that makes it speak just what he demands to suit his own purpose?

With reference to the fact in dispute, we submit to Messrs. Savile and Lyne the following consideration:—

If the passages quoted from Kings, Nehemiah, 2 Chronicles, and Hebrews go to prove that the promise of the multitude was *ful*filled before Christ's first advent, how comes it that St. Paul declared in Heb. xi. 13, 39, 40 that the patriarchs and Hebrew worthies all died "not having received the promises?"

How is it that Hosea, in chap. i. 10, speaks of Israel during the period of her Lo-Ammi outcast condition—admitted by Mr. Savile to be NOW (see supra)—as a people "like the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered?" and how is it that Zechariah, a prophet who lived long after Hosea (i.e., in B.C. 487) declares of Israel (not Judah) that "they shall increase as they have increased" (chap. x. 8), that "place shall not be found for them" on account of their numbers (ver. 10)? and St. Paul, in A.D. 60, still spoke of the multitudinous blessing of Ten-Tribed Israel as a matter yet future even then (Rom. ix. 27).

The fact is, Mr. Savile, as a divine learned in God's Word, has not the least support for his present contention, and knowing that, we suppose he has found it better to put forward his weaker follower, Mr. Lyne, to advance absurd pleas on his behalf, which are opposed to Scripture facts and common sense.

In regard to the Gate blessing, we find nothing to argue against in Mr. Lyne's summary of Mr. Savile's belief. We have already, at page 297, vol. iv., &c., of the BANNER, said all we need say to refute the latter's views, and we only add that in Joshua's days the children of Israel acquired their own, not their enemies' Gates, since the land they possessed was their own by gift (Gen. xv. 18).

The last point has reference to the allegation that Christ fulfilled the promise that Abraham's seed should be a blessing to all nations; Gal. iii. 16 being advanced as proof of the fact. We reply that Christ indeed fulfilled this promise; but it was only as the federal Head of the one seed, Isaac (not of the many seeds, Ishmael, &c.), specified in Gal. iii. 16. In Isaac the seed was called, and that seed was "headed up" in Christ. He came to confirm this and all the other promises (Rom. xv. 8), and the fulfilment consists in the fact that "Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6). The Lord works by His people Israel, and through them blesses the world. This is in progress even now, as Mr. Savile clearly admitted at page 312, 2 col., sec. 5, Vol. ii., BANNER, when he said, "outcast Israel" would be "Protestant" and "missionary."

Mr. Lyne is correct when he adds that Deut. xxviii. 44 shows that, as a consequence of disobedience, Israel was to borrow of the stranger. The Jews have fulfilled this sad prediction now; but why does not Mr. Lyne notice as the condition of national "obedience" such as the British exhibited at, and since the blessed Reformation, that Israel was "to lend to many nations, but never to borrow of them" (Deut. xv. 6)—a prophecy the British nation only of all races has ful-filled?

Digitized by Google

Mr. Lyne says we British are not blind. He is himself a specimen of a man "blind" to his origin, "blind" to the plain meaning of God's Word as regards seven-eighths of its contents, and blind to his Master's will regarding Israel. We have not far to search for a refutation of that dictum. In regard to Rom. xi., we venture to tell Mr. Lyne that St. Paul never once speaks there of these being "the Gentile" or "wild olive times," or that "in the millennium Israel is to be converted" through "Gentile mercy." The words "millennium," "Gentile mercy," "wild olive times," don't occur in the chapter at all, and are simply supplied by Mr. Lyne's own too exuberant fancy. Finally, we answer Mr. Lyne's third point by declaring that it is NOT "clear from Noah's prophecy respecting his sons, that our British position exactly corresponds with what it was foretold the posterity of Japheth should occupy." Our position corresponds with that of Shem's posterity, on the contrary. For God promised to "dwell in the tents of Shem," and He manifestly dwells exclusively with our favoured Protestant Christian nation to-day (Gen. ix. 27; Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20).

We cannot congratulate the Rev. Mr. Lyne in his defence of Mr. Savile's Scriptural belief. We admire his devotion in coming to his friend's assistance; but if we were Mr. Savile we should certainly exclaim, even in his dilemma, "Defend us from our friends."

JUDAH RECOGNISES ISRAEL.

By Henry P. Keighly.

"In those days the House of Judah shall walk with (margin, to) the House of Israel; and they shall come together out of the land of the North to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers."—Jer. iii. 18.

In foreshadowing the return of Judah and Israel to the land of promise, as the prophet Jeremiah has done in the above passage, it is not to be supposed that he intended to convey the impression that every individual soul of the combined Tribes would necessarily find a location in the house of his forefathers. The very words made use of by the prophet imply but a partial migration of God's chosen people, for we are told that "they shall come together out of the land of the North." There can be no doubt but the land here referred to is Great Britain, which contains but somewhere about a third of the total of the two peoples combined. Moreover, taking the Anglo-Saxons and Jews scattered throughout the world at about a hundred millions of souls, the land of promise—even giving to it the utmost proportions anywhere ascribed to it in the sacred writings—viz., from the Euphrates to the Mediterranean, and from the river of Egypt even to the Mount Taurus range on the North—could not possibly receive such an overwhelming multitude. We are not, however, driven to make our deductions of the probable numerical return of Israel and Judah from this one allusion of the prophet to the subject, for he gives us distinctly to understand how, and in what proportion, the immigration into the land of promise is to take place. At verse 14 the prophet records the words of the Lord thus: "I will take you one of a city and two of a family, and I will bring you to Zion," thus clearly showing that the return of the Houses of Judah and Israel is to be but partial in its character.

That the return of Judah and Israel is to be no distinct or separate occurrence, but a combined movement on the part of the two peoples conjointly, is further made clear by the prophet Ezekiel, where (in chapter xxxvii.), in reference to the two sticks representing Judah and Israel, the Almighty, after saying, "they shall be one in Mine hand," and "I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel, and one king shall be king to them all."

There can thus be no doubt as to the true and perfect meaning of both these men of God; Judah and Israel are to return together, Judah walking to Israel for that purpose. This decided, the question naturally arises—Are there any signs of the near fulfilment of these prophetic words? We think there are, and for the following reasons:—

For the perfect accomplishment of this prophecy it is seen that Judah cannot return alone. She must first "walk to" Israel; and to enable her to do this, she must recognise the descendants of those Ten Tribes who separated themselves from her when Rehoboam sought to ascend the throne of his father, king Solomon.

Has Judah recognised Israel, or is she in the course of doing so? is the first point for inquiry; and in prosecuting this we find the first glimmer of light thrown upon the subject in a number of the Jewish Chronicle, published in the Autumn of 1877. We therein read: "We do not know in whose hands the Jews would be so desirous of seeing placed the land of their forefathers as that of just, beneficent, and liberal England. . . . Under England's protection we should have no fear for the safety of the Jews. England has proved by her rule over the multifarious races and religions in India that she knows how to govern people of different nationalities and creeds. We could then as warmly advocate Jewish settlements in the Holy Land as we are now doubtful about their success. . . . We could then trustingly leave history to work out its course in the land which God promised to the seed of the patriarchs in perpetuity. If it were the will of Providence that such colonies should, in the course of time, result in the restoration of the Jewish polity, we should hail such a prognostication with delight. England, we know, would throw no obstacle in the way. . . Thus much we may, however, say, the hearts of thousands of orthodox Jews beat high at the bare anticipation of such an event as the possession of Syria and Palestine by England, sending a thrill of unspeakable joy through their frames."

Herein it is clearly shown that the Jews anticipate returning to the Holy Land under the beneficent auspices of England. The prophet Jeremiah has recorded that before they can hope to accomplish this return they must "walk to" Israel, that Israel may afford them the protection and assistance her great power and strength command to secure to them their hearts' desire. Is not the acknowledgment on the part of the Jews, that England, of all the Powers of Europe, is the only one under whose protection they can with safety return to the land of their forefathers, evidence of the light that is gradually dawning upon them that in the British nation Israel may be recognised?

It was in the Autumn of 1877 that the above extract from the Jewish Chronicle saw the light. In the Autumn of 1880, three years later, we see that the light gradually dawning in 1877 was slowly but steadily increasing, promising ere long to develope into the glorious refulgence of mid-day. In the Banner of Israel of November 10, last, appeared an extract from a letter addressed by a Jew, who had evidently made deep research into the subject, to a contributor to that journal, on the identification of the Anglo-Saxon race with Israel. He writes: "With regard to the literal fulfilment of prophecy, I am at one with the Anglo-Israelites. As a rule, those Jews who have studied the subject see also that prophecy is now in course of fulfilment in the British nation, in some respects, in a very marked degree." The writer then proceeds to enumerate those cases in which he and his co-religionists recognise the fulfilment of prophecy in the British people, and then proceeds: "We recognise that on our ultimate return to the land of our fathers, we must be accompanied by representatives, at least, of all the Twelve Tribes of Israel, and unless some most material and unlooked-for change takes place in the Jewish people now scattered among the nations, it must be under the auspices of some powerful and kindred State." The conditions under which the Jews can alone hope to return to the land of promise are then detailed; showing that under the guidance and protection of England these can only be fulfilled. The writer then affirms the belief of the Jews generally that their return is near at hand, and that the existing complications in Europe will necessitate the extension of England's protectorate to Syria and the Levant; and the consequent emancipation of the people of Palestine from Turkish misrule and oppression, which they themselves regard as near at hand. He then proceeds: "Seeing as I believe I do, the hand of God in the raising up of so comparatively insignificant a people as the British once were, into the great and powerful nation it now is, so favoured by Him, and possessing so many of the attributes of His chosen people, a recognition by Him of those He once cast off; in this I find reason for believing that the Anglo-Saxons are Anglo-Israelites."

Digitized by Google

Here we have reliable testimony that the Jews are beginning to recognise their fellow Israelites, and if we glance abroad we cannot but see how fast events are following on events, which cannot but end in causing "the House of Judah to walk to the House of Israel" (the British nation). In Russia, Poland, Roumania, Servia, Turkey, and Persia, we find the condition of the Jews becoming day by day more and more deplorable; while in Germany the feeling against them has risen to such a height as to be all but incontrollable. Many thousands of Russian and Polish Jews have sought permission of Turkey to settle in Palestine, offering to pay the Porte handsomely for the concession; though, unless the return be in company with Israel, no good can come of any attempt at colonisation in Palestine by the Jews. Failure will as surely result from any such attempt as has hitherto overtaken every like endeavour on their part. The scheme elaborated by Laurence Oliphant, for establishing a considerable Jewish settlement in the Hauran flat land, once the scene of occupancy of Reuben and Gad, and subsequently of the descendants of Jetur, the son of Ishmael, who were conquered and converted to Judaism by Aristobulus, B.C. 106, and who became so absorbed into the Jewish nation as to have totally lost their distinctive individuality, has proved as abortive as every other has, and must do, until that prophetic period arrives when the "House of Judah shall walk to the House of Israel," and the two become "one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel."

That the fulfilment of this prophecy is near at hand, who can doubt? Everywhere the popular cry is raised against the Jew, with the one object of causing his expulsion from continental Europe. His superior intelligence, his indefatigable industry and sobriety have made him a formidable competitor in any and every industry to which he has turned his attention. There is scarcely a Power in Europe which has not among its most prominent statesmen, military commanders, and leaders in education and the arts and sciences, members of the Tribe of Judah. That he is qualified to occupy the position he holds, who can deny? but the inability to dispute his qualification is the only cause for that jealousy which calls for the Jew's removal from his sphere of action.

The Jew, moreover, is the monied man in every State. It is he who lends alike to Governments and to individuals, and as his wealth accumulates, he gradually, but surely, acquires possession of the soil. This is the cause of the great outcry against the Jew in Hungary and in Roumania; while in Germany and in Russia his elevation to positions of trust and emolument in the State is his great cause of offence unto those who, intellectually unable to cope with him, seek his expulsion, not only from office, but from the soil. It is for his best, not for his worst qualities, that the Jew is hated among the populations of foreign lands. In most continental countries the Jew is denied the social rights of citizenship; he is regarded as a legitimate object for persecution and spoliation, and what he enjoys in the way of exemption from the latter he has to pay for. His life is one of constant suffering and continuity of increasing anxiety; but this, we are told, is the fate decreed by an outraged God—doubtless it is; but nevertheless it is all working for the accomplishment of the prophecy which heads this paper. It is causing the Jew to look to that one land, "the isles of the West," where he sees his brethren enjoying a freedom they possess in no other portion of the globe, where they live at peace and in security.

What wonder, then, that we hear of so many descendants of Judah turning their steps to that "land of the North," whence the Lord has said He will bring them with Israel, "to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto their (your) fathers." They recognise, if others do not, that to reach the land of promise their footsteps must be directed to the quarter where Israel is now located, and from whence they will, in their company, journey to the promised goal; and in this we see an unmistakable sign of the near approach of the end of the age, and the dawn of a fresh dispensation.

"SUNDAY AT HOME" GIVES BLIND EVIDENCE TO OUR IDENTITY.

THE Rev. Dr. Bonar used the pages of Sunday at Home, last October, to attack our Identity; but the December number of the same serial, at page 806 (1880), in treating of the Nazareth Orphanage, bears plain testimony to the fact that our Queen is regarded with affection and loyal regard by the children of Nazareth, and our national standard is reverenced and respected there. "Our Queen," "my Queen," say the native girls in Nazareth, speaking of our sovereign, Queen Victoria; and why, we ask, should there be this longing expectation of British sovereignty unless the fact is yet to follow, in the Providence of God, in the near approaching return to their land of Israel and Judah, under the royal standard of the Queen of Israel; "for great shall be the day of Jezreel" (Hos. i. 4—11).

Writing of the orphanage at Nazareth, under the superintendence of an English lady (mark that, friends!—Isa. xxvii. 6, xliii. 21), the writer in Sunday at Home says:—

> The view from the balcony of this hall takes in many places seen from the summits of the hill at the back of the building, "The Nazareth Orphanage," for such it is. Many cases of books are in this hall, its walls adorned with texts in Arabic, and over the principal entrance is a portrait of the Queen—"our Queen," "my Queen," these little orphan girls are proud to say; dear children, would it were so; happy would it be for them, their people and their land! The private rooms are comfortably but simply furnished, kept clean and in order by the girls of the Home, now but fifty. . . One girl was busy in making a flag—the design, our Union Jack—such being hoisted on the top of the building every Lord's-day, and upon other suitable occasions. There is, too, one other flag in Nazareth, at the convent, the red Jerusalem cross on white ground. At once my thoughts fled to Jerusalem and England. These two flags seem to be a strange coincidence; I must remember it, and perhaps some day shall know more about it than I do now. One of the good-tempered-looking native teachers asked me to see their best flag, saying, with such a sunlit face: "This was sent us a present from a lady; it was floating over the Albert Memorial the day it was uncovered at Edinburgh; we only hoist this on great occasions."

The writer of the above interesting account is evidently an unwitting searcher after the Identity. The "strange coincidence" of the blending of the two flags, those of Jerusalem and Great Britain, is explained by our Identity; and nothing else does. If we knew her address, a copy of the BANNER should go to this lady. Perhaps some friend to our cause might advantageously direct one to her, "to the care of the Religious Tract Society," and the editor of Sunday at Home might thus learn that if he vainly tries to destroy our Identity, his correspondent at Nazareth is clearly puzzled to account for strange circumstances there, for want of knowledge of that very subject.

Digitized by Google

THE TWO SONS.

THE parable of the two sons, detailed in Matt. xxi. 28—31 by our Lord Himself, has been the subject of comment already in the BANNER. Our fellow-helper, the Rev. G. A. Rogers, vicar of Christ Church, Dover, wrote upon the subject in vol. iii., p. 79, No. 112, and he wrote well. We hope our readers will peruse Mr. Rogers' remarks on the passage in connection with what we are about to bring before them in respect to the subject.

The first son in the word-picture was, as Mr. Rogers represents, the Lord's first-born, Ephraim. "I am a Father to Israel," He said, "and Ephraim is My first-born" (Jer. xxxi. 9). The younger, because disinherited son, was Judah (1 Chron. v. 1, 2). "Judah prevailed above his brethren, and of him came the chief ruler, BUT the birthright was Joseph's." What does our Lord say of these two sons, the sons of one father? The latter came to the first—to Ephraim the first-born—and said to him, "Son, go work to-day in My vineyard." He answered and said, "I will NOT;" but afterwards he repented and went.

Here was contumacy, repentance, confession (Luke xv. 21), and obedient action. This son did the will of his father (Matt. xxi. 31). The younger son, Judah, when called on by his Father to obey in like manner, replied, "I go, Sir," and went not. Here was outward feigned obedience, wicked disobedience, with the total absence afterwards of either repentance or confession, or submission to the Father's will. What was the result? The case was nationally applied by our Lord Himself to the Jews then present, and He told them to remember "the stone rejected by the builders," the stone, the crushing Israelite stone of Joseph (Gen. xlix. 24), and bade them note that the kingdom of God, the Stone Kingdom, should be taken from them and given to A NATION, the "fruit-bearing" one, even to Ephraim (Gen. xli. 52) the first-born (Matt. xxi. 43; Dan. ii. 44, vii. 27).

So far, the explanation of the New Testament parable given us so clearly by the Rev. G. A. Rogers, with which we are most of us quite familiar. We now take as our guide Commander L. G. Roberts, R.N., and proceed to show the connection between the teaching of the Old and of the New Testaments in respect to the two sons, their dispositions, conduct, and final destinies. Commander Roberts asks us to turn to Jer. iii. 6—11, and there find an exact parallel to the story of the two sons in the detail of the Lord's two Houses, Israel and Judah. In ver. 6 the appeal is made to the prophet whether he had ever seen worse conduct than that of Israel (Ephraim, the eldest first-born son of Matt. xxi. 28)? The Lord had said to the nation, "Turn thou to Me, but she returned not." Here is the parallel to the New Testament words, "Son, go work to-day in My vineyard." He answered and said, "I will not." Now, in Jer. iii. 8, 9, the turn of Israel's treacherous sister, Judah, comes. Seeing backsliding Israel's spiritual adultery and fornication, Judah, with the warning before her eyes, turned not to the Lord with her whole heart. Her obedience was a feigned one. It was a half-hearted, false service she rendered (ver. 10). Here was the second son's case aptly portrayed. The New Testament son replied, "I go, Sir;" but he went not. The acquiescence was feigned, and the alacrity put on. But what saith the Lord? Hear His judgment in Jer iii. 11: "The backsliding Israel hath justified herself more than treacherous Judah." "The kingdom of God shall be taken from you (Jews) and given to a nation (backsliding Israel) bringing forth the fruits thereof" (Matt. xxi. 43). What was the cause of Judah's, the second son's, obduracy and refusal to obey his Father's voice? Jer. ii. 35 tells us. Judah refused to confess her sins, to repent or turn to the Lord—nay, she maintained she had not sinned. This is the account of the matter, "Yet thou sayest, Because I am innocent, surely His anger shall turn from me; behold I will plead with Thee, because Thou sayest I have not sinned." So it ever was with Judah. When the prodigal Ephraim returned, repentant and confessing his sins, the elder son (elder by birth but not by the birth-right), hearing the music, dancing, and rejoicing, refused to go in. He was consumed by envy, and dared to say to his loving, entreating Father, "Lo! these many years do I serve Thee, neither transgressed I at any time Thy commandments." "I have not sinned," then, is the hard, stubborn attitude of Judah towards God; an attitude He cannot, will not bless. He failed to do his Father's will, and what will be the end? "The publicans and harlots (of outcast Israel) go into the kingdom of God before him" (Matt. xxi. 31).

We trust our readers recognise by this comparison of Jer. iii. 6—11 with Matt. xxi. 28—31, the unity of Scripture. The two portions, one in the Old and the other in the New Testament, explain each other, and each bears testimony that the histories of Israel and Judah, pictured and foretold in Jeremiah, were yet future in our Lord's day, when Matthew wrote the portraits painted by the same divine Author, the Spirit of the living God, and are absolutely one.

Reader, let us thank God for all His blessings promised to the House of Israel, to Ephraim and to Manasseh too, for both are of the House of Joseph.

THE MANY-COLOURED WISDOM OF GOD.

By MAJOR R. W. D. NICKLE.

"To the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known to the Church the manifold wisdom of God" (Eph. iii. 10). To those who are interested in the subject of light and colour so constantly referred to in the sacred written Word of God, it is much to be regretted that the Greek word poikilos has been translated "manifold," whereas the correct translation of the word signifies the "MANY-COLOURED" WISDOM OF GOD. The many-coloured wisdom of God was conspicuously displayed upon the hangings and curtains at the entrances of the tabernacle. These inherent colours were seen particularly upon the person of the High Priest of Israel, and were intended to direct the attention of the children of Israel to the Lamb of God, the Great Mediator betwixt God and man (1 Tim. ii. 3—5).

God, who is the Source of all light (James i. 17; 1 John i. 5) arranged the Mediatorial group of colours, and delivered them to Moses (Exod. xxxix. 43); who must have made known to his brother Aaron their beautiful significance of the love of God for His chosen people.

The wisdom of God directed that the first stone (the Alpha) of the breast-plate should be the Sardius, significant, from its primary colour, of the Second Person in the Trinity, and that the last stone (the Omega) should be the blood-red Jasper (called bloodstone), and from its remarkable significance termed "most precious" (Isa. lx. 18,19; Rev. xxi. 11, 18, 19). Thus throwing, as it were, a more intense light upon the Mediatorial group of colours which were so intimately connected with the jewelled breast-plate, in which was placed the mysterious Urim and Thummim—i.e., light and perfection. "And he made the breast-plate of cunning work, like the work of the ephod; of gold, blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen (white). It was four square, they made the breast-plate double, a span was the length thereof, and a span the breadth thereof being doubled. And they set in it four rows of stones (Exod. xxxix. 8—10).

The many-coloured wisdom of God directed that Ephraim, Manasseh, and Benjamin should have their names engraved upon certain gems, whose expressive colours were to be in perfect harmony with the numerous prophecies regarding these Tribes of the House of Israel. We observe, regarding the gem upon which the name of Ephraim is engraved, that it is called a ligure. This stone is of a reddish hue; but it is the opinion of many that the jacinth is the proper name of this stone upon which the name of Ephraim was engraved. The Jacinth was held in high estimation by the Arabs and Egyptians.

Digitized by Google

Now when we know that the jacinth was of a fiery or orange colour appearance (the first of the secondary colours), we see how applicable it is to the name of Ephraim, which name so often stands in Scripture for the whole of the Ten Tribes of the House of Israel. The colour of this gem signifies the love of God, the warmth of Divine affection, according to the doctrine of colour; it is, therefore, seen to be applicable to Ephraim as the acknowledged representative of the House of Israel, according to the following statements:—

"I am a Father to Ephraim, and Israel is My first-born" (Jer. xxxi. 9). "The Lord loved Israel for ever" (1 Kings x. 9). "Jacob have I loved" (Romans ix. 13; Gen. xxxv. 9—13). "I am the Lord, Thy Saviour and Redeemer" (Isa. lx. 16, liv. 5).

Here it may be remarked that the peculiar appearance and regularity of the lines of the agate are suggestive in many respects of the state of Manasseh in these latter days; who, from his position in the breast-plate, shares with his brother Ephraim what the jacinth signifies, both being attached to the amethyst in what that gem signifies.

Benjamin's name, as it appears upon the amethyst, that wonderful gem significant of royalty and redemption, is applicable to that distinguished Tribe which was chosen by the Lord to be a witness and a light-bearer to the House of Judah of the Saviour, who should redeem His people (1 Kings xi. 13, 32, 36, xii. 21), and it appears from the various statements in Scripture of this Tribe, so beloved by the Holy One of Israel, that nearly all the followers of the Lord Jesus Christ, when He appeared on earth, came from the Tribe of Benjamin. This Tribe, having fulfilled its office as light-bearer, took the warning and escaped from Jerusalem previous to the close investment of that city under Titus, A.D. 70.

Thus through the evidence of these three gems of the breast-plate, the Great Shepherd of Israel leading Joseph like a flock (Psa. lxxx. 1—3), and in accordance with those prophecies that have been fulfilled by the Anglo-Saxon race, and by no other nation, the House of Israel is found to be a Christian people at the present time, and not, as many suppose, an anti-Christian nation, who will not be converted until they have again occupied the Holy Land. It may be perplexing to some minds to follow out the subject of light, with all its diversities of tones, hues, and tints, displayed by some of the gems; but those that present the primary and secondary colours are easily understood. There is one gem which particularly attracts our attention, and when we come to examine it we shall find that it is indeed the most precious of gems, from what it alludes to, as mentioned in the following passages:—

"Wherefore art thou red in thine apparel?" (Isa. lxiii. 2). "And their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments" (Isa. lxiii. 3). "And He was clothed with a vesture dipped in blood" (Rev. xix. 13). "And He that sat on the throne was to look upon like a jasper and a sardine stone" (Rev. iv. 3). The reader will here observe what is stated regarding "the city of the Lord, the Zion of the Holy One of Israel." The walls of it are called salvation (Isa. lx. 18). "Salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks" (Isa. xxvi. 1). Now compare the city of the Lord with what is mentioned regarding it in the Revelation, and we find that the walls of the city are of jasper, and the first foundation stone is likewise of jasper. "Having the glory of God; and her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone, clear as crystal" (Rev. xxi. 11, 18, 19). This gem is the last stone of the breast-plate, the sardine being the first, significant of the second person from its primary colour. Jasper is the first foundation stone of the holy Jerusalem, the royal amethyst being the last. From these passages it is obvious that the blood red jasper signifies protection from the power of evil, and salvation through the blood of the Great Mediator, the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, the Alpha and Omega (Isa. xliv. 6; Rev. i. 8). From what is stated in Isaiah lxiii. 2, red is first of all mentioned, then the juice of the vine, which alludes to purple, the royal colour of the House of Judah, from whence the Saviour came, and who said, "I am the true vine, and My Father is the Husbandman" (John xv. 1—8; Gen. xlix. 11). As we examine Ephesians iii. 10, we cannot help asking, How is it that the Church in these days does not appear to know anything about this many-coloured doctrine mentioned as the many-coloured wisdom of God? It is observed that some decorate their religious ceremonies with many colours, including the very opposite—viz., black and grey—in their temples of worship; but are their coloured ceremonies in accordance with what the vii. harmoniously teach us—that is, the three primary and the three secondary that come from and retire into white light? Those colours which are mentioned as the appearance of the glory of the Lord, and which adorned the head of the Mighty Angel whose face shone as the sun (Ezek. i. 28, Rev. x. 1—3).

These transient colours, that emanate from the presence of God, "the Father of lights" (James i. 17), guide and direct us to understand the meanings attached to the many-coloured gems mentioned in various parts of Scripture, and which from their significant hues and tints are found to be in perfect harmony with the Divine Word, and with what the celestial sign teaches us, which is the key that unlocks many mysteries and strengthens our finite minds sufficiently to understand the infinite wisdom of God as revealed in that glorious and brilliantly coloured chapter, the Revelation of St. John iv.

Leamington, February 21, 1881.

THE "CHURCH TIMES" ON OUR IDENTITY.

An Israelite who announces himself also to be "A Ritualist," supplies us with the following notice, which appeared in the Church Times of February 18, 1881, and it will be found, as our friend says in introducing it to us, a "very startling and astonishing statement." It is as follows:—

C. E. W.—There is no foundation whatever in Scripture or elsewhere for the Anglo-Israel craze. No competent scholar accepts it in any part, and its votaries are chiefly such people as returned Indians, retired officers of the army and navy, and self-educated men who have read at random, all of them belonging to classes with no solid knowledge, and apt to run after mere will-o'-the-wisps. The Jews themselves do not believe in the existence of any Lost Tribes. Their view is that the idolatrous Jews of the captivity did not retain their separate national existence, but were soon merged by intermarriage with the Babylonians, and that all who remained as Jews returned with Ezra and Nehemiah to Palestine. And, considering how extraordinarily persistent the Jews are in type, race, and creed, it is incredible, if they were ever numerous enough in Britain to be in truth the forefathers of all Englishmen of to-day, that no trace, however faint, should remain in the language, grammar, religion, laws, or physical appearance of the Anglo-Saxons to suggest, not to say attest it. The Afghans do give themselves out as Beni-Israel, and something could be said for their claim, which is at least not ludicrous on the very face of it.

In respect to the above our correspondent says:—

I have for some time been a reader of the Banner, and also the Church Times, and must say I felt somewhat startled and astonished at the statements therein contained. I am, yours, &c.,

A Ritualist.

No wonder our friend was surprised, for in truth, this notice by the Church Times contains some statements which could only emanate from the wilfully blind. Who are those who accept this "craze," according to our opponent?

1. "Returned Indians." A shaft directed, of course, against the editor of the Banner and a very few of his staff of writers.

2. "Retired officers of the army and navy." Men in "active service," of course, would not embrace this fallacy and folly?

Digitized by Google

and yet we think Col. M. Beresford, J.B.R., and others we wot of, are in active service, and in the full possession of their faculties?

3. "Self-educated men who have read at random." How men can be "educated," and yet have read at "random" does not seem clear, but such is our Church Times' dictum.

4. "Men who belong to classes with no solid knowledge, and apt to run after will-o'-the-wisps." A general sweeping condemnation this, which must be unjust and absurd, since the writer in the Church Times surely cannot be aware of the varied attainments of all the writers in the BANNER alone, or be in a position to gauge the separate intellectual depth of such scholars as Prof. Piazzi Smyth, the Rev. C. W. Hickson, the Rev. Denis Hanan, Mr. Sydney Taylor, Capt. H. P. Keighly, L. P., and others, some of whom are, personally, strangers even to the conductor of the BANNER, and most probably are so to the editor of the Church Times. The next statement of the writer we notice is the astounding one which we hope Mr. S. Bergmann and our other Jewish friends will indignantly deny —namely, that the "Jews themselves do not believe in the existence of any Lost Tribes." Let the editor of the Jewish Chronicle note that, and inform the Church Times how crass is his darkness regarding Judah's hopes and expectations, since, in truth, the Jews are looking for the Restoration of Israel (see Judah's prayer, BANNER vol. iv., No. 209, p. 512).

The next point the Church Times enters upon is one wherein the inveterate error of the clerical mind crops up and betrays the hand that probably has penned those astounding lines now under review, which are as full of absurd mistakes as of infatuated opposition to what is truly God's own truth. He says, "Considering how extraordinarily persistent the Jews are in type, race, and creed, it is incredible, if they were ever numerous enough in Britain to be in truth the forefathers of all Englishmen of to-day," &c. Who said the Jews were the forefathers of Englishmen? Did our readers ever come across so marked an instance of perversity and ignorance as that which prompts a writer to denounce our views as a "craze," with every expression of contempt and detraction, and yet betrays so clearly the fact, that of the very A B C, and rudiments of our belief, he knows absolutely nothing? A very babe in Israelite knowledge could tell the writer of this notice that the British claim the Ten-Tribed Israelites as their progenitors, not the Two-Tribed Jews, and yet the Church Times, who sees not the difference between Jews and the Israelites of the House of Joseph, ventures to call ourselves and fellow-believers weak-minded "returned Indians," "retired officers of her Majesty's services," "crazy" folks, "incompetent scholars" "without solid knowledge," and the like. Verily, the tables are turned, and the ignorance, folly, and superficial knowledge are proved, and found to be the attributes of the writer in the Church Times, not of the despised Israelites.

Finally, the soi-disant learned author of the notice in question declares that our Anglo-Saxon race contains "no trace, however faint, in language, grammar, religion, laws, or physical appearance, not merely to attest, but even to suggest," identity with the Hebrews. Yet our philologists, Cockburn-Muir, Bishop Titcomb, Canon Lysons, the Rev. B. W. Savile, and others, find linguistic and philological affinities in abundance between the modern British and the Hebrew tongues. "Our laws are founded on those of Sinai," as we are told by our jurists, and our religion is certainly a development of the Hebrew-Mosaic, since its divine founder was a Jew, whose appeal always was to Moses and the prophets of the Hebrews. We hope our readers will observe the perversity of the clerical mind.

As a final outburst of impotent objection to the truth, it expresses its readiness to accept Afghan Israelism (which has not a shadow of a shred of evidence to support it, and is in truth ludicrous on the very face of it, as our pages have proved), in preference to our Identity. Surely such opponents as we have now before us, who are wrong in all ways—wrong as to facts, as to history, as to philology, as to ethnic questions, and as to prophetic scriptural truths as well, are raised up by the Lord on high to prove to the world how fatuous is the opposition to His Word, as it bears on our Identity, and how utterly incapable all the wisdom of the world is to show that the British, not being Israel, the Mohammedan conquered Afghans are.

IDENTITY ACROSTIC.—No. 2.
BY COL. M. BERESFORD.

The elder in the younger's place
Maintains the credit of the race;
A nation great by God's decree,
Which greater yet will surely be.

1. When Mary washed the Saviour's feet,
This other served the Lord at meat.
2. With sunny locks of flowing hair,
Caught in an oak and stabbed there.
3. A man of Nazareth, see Holy Writ,
To other region no such name would fit.
4. The son of Jacob, born of Leah's maid,
Of whom but little in the Book is said.
5. A title borne by Persia's chief,
As "Pharoah's" was in Egypt, to be brief.
6. Sudden and quick, by fits and starts;
Pains of this nature rupture hearts.
7. On Jew's return to Zion's city,
By whom is record of nativity.
8. One with Israel we shall see
Gentiles, these although they be.

Review.

Further Scriptural Proofs. A Sequel to "Summary of Anglo-Israel Teaching." By Surgeon-General J. M. Grant, M.D. London: W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row. 2d.

DR. GRANT, in this pamphlet, comments on the Rev. B. W. Savile's letter which appeared in the BANNER (vol. v., page 82), as well as on the Rev. C. R. N. Lyne's defence of Mr. Savile, addressed to the Daily Western Times, which will be the subject of some remarks we have to make thereon. The replies to these two letters which Dr. Grant gives us in his pamphlet are trenchant, clever, and clear. There is no mistaking what he means, and he says it without ambiguity of expression. We have ourselves gone over the ground traversed by our author, and need not, therefore, expatiate or quote at length Dr. Grant's arguments. We recommend our readers, however, to peruse his replies to our two opponents, as they will find much that is newly and vigorously stated, for Dr. Grant has a knack of vanquishing his adversaries in a very complete and decided way.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Although I have not entirely committed myself to Anglo-Israelism, as you hold it, I, nevertheless, fully agree with you in much; and especially do sympathise with you in having, in addition to your manifold labours in an interesting, and I trust I may say, a righteous cause, to combat not only the ignorance and prejudice (and I apprehend oftentimes wickedness) of opponents who, without reference to Anglo-Israelism in particular, seem sometimes neither to "understand what they say, or whereof they affirm," as regards the prophetic Scriptures. I refer now more particularly to the taunts, &c., of your antagonists, and which you meet in your last number of the BANNER; who, you say, argue that because a majority of the House of Commons have (for the moment only, perhaps) succeeded in upsetting the Conservative policy of Lord Beaconsfield in India and at the Cape, that, therefore, "every intelligent man in Europe can see that the sun of England is nearly set." Or, again, that "you are deluding your readers as to Israel's hopes," &c.; hopes which you justly, I think, identify with this nation (Ezek. xxxvii. 10). All who walk by faith, in hope of the promise made of God to our fathers, whether taking them literally or spiritually, are, no doubt, beset by like sarcasm when, for the moment, "the vision tarry" (Hab. ii. 3), or the enemy may seem to triumph. "As the crackling of thorns under a pot, so is the laughter of the fool" (Eccles. vii. 6). But, as you contend, happily the faith which standeth not in the wisdom of such men, but, on the contrary, which rests "in the power of God the Spirit" (1 Cor. ii. 5) does not altogether fail God's people because God does not work quite when and where they are wont to expect. Christians "walk by faith, not by sight." Happily so, I say; or else where would have been the promises of God to Abraham and his seed, when he offered up Isaac, &c.? and where, I may say, the great salvation which on Good Friday we commemorated as "finished" for us on the cross? Apparently, even there, the wicked triumphed, so to speak, in effecting their evil purpose, and there was a temporary desertion of the perfect manhood of our Lord amid the sneers and jeers of the Church (Jewish) and world; while even that Man, under the burden of the "sin of the world," was constrained to cry, "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken Me;" and again, "Thou hearest not." Yet he continues, "But Thou art holy;" or, as it is in our Prayer Book version, "Thou continuest holy"—i.e., the faithful God, "whose counsel shall stand" (Isa. xlvi. 10). The will of the Triune God in connection with the "perfect Man" was immutable, hence the latter "remained not silent," but continued "trusting and crying" to His Father. As did His "forefathers," so He "trusted and was not confounded" (Psa. xxii.). Critics like yours would stumble at once in the "disobedience" of unbelief, not only as to prophecy and the work of fulfilment in course of Providence, but as to the work of grace in the hearts of Christians and the Church, which stands upon the sure promises of God. Their names will scarcely be recorded in any future lists of worthies, such as are recorded for our example in Heb. xi.; nor, I apprehend, will their faith be hereafter honoured by many "mighty works" (Matt. xiii. 58).

Digitized by Google

I am, dear sir,
Yours truly,
CHARLES J. HADFIELD, Colonel.

Lichfield, April 16.

THE FORTHCOMING INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION OF ELECTRICITY AT PARIS.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

"And shall not be reckoned among the nations."—Numbers xxiii. 9.

SIR,—In the current issue of the English Mechanic, No. 834, pp. 25, is an article under the above heading, from which I have taken the following extract, as showing that as the "time of the end" approaches we nationally are to be kept out of contact with the nations of Europe, and that we are literally in fulfilment of the above quoted text, "to dwell alone," &c.

Yours,
T. WHITMORE, JUN.
(Leamington Anglo-Israel Association).

EXTRACT.

"The different European nations, with the marked exception of 'England,' have, nearly all of them, expressed their willingness to take part in the exhibition. . . . It will be fresh in the memories of our readers, that in reply to a question put by Sir Henry Tyler, in the House of Commons, a few days back, Lord F. Cavendish declared it would be impossible to appoint a commissioner for England, nor can our government take part officially in the forthcoming exhibition. The determination arrived at by our Government has caused much surprise and vexation in Paris," &c.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Your contributor, P., errs in the matter of the Grand Gallery's length of roof. It was measured in 1878 by His Excellency Dr. Grant, Bey, who found it to be equivalent to 1842·405 Pyramid inches, which agrees with my theoretic quantity of 1842·4.

Yours truly,
CHARLES HORNER.

THE SOLI-LUNAR EPACT.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—I was greatly interested in the letter of the Rev. C. W. Hickson, which you reproduced in the BANNER, of February 16, from the Bristol Times and Mirror, of January 12, on the subject of the solar, lunar, and metonic cycles.

I have been expecting to see a communication from Mr. Charles Horner, respecting some peculiar coincidences therein. For instance, Mr. Hickson says: "About October 3, of this year, the soli-lunar epact—reckoning from the beginning of the common account, Anno Domini—will have accumulated to exactly 56 solar years, and this 56-year epact is itself just two solar cycles—the solar cycle being the period of 28 years in which the days of the week recur upon the same days of the month throughout the year." Again, "In 1881·16 years the soli-calender epact amounts to just 27 solar years, and this latter period is itself, approximately, a soli-lunar cycle, since it differs from 334 lunations by less than 1½ days."

These observations brought to my mind the measurements of the little passage leading to the mouth of the well, at the opening of the Grand Gallery in the Pyramid, which is 56 inches long, and 27 high; also the measurements of the square of the well's mouth, and the entrance of the passage at the East top corner of the South impending wall, both of which are 28 inches each way.

Mr. Horner's remarkable ideas connected with these measurements appeared in the BANNER some months ago. Mr. Horner pointed out that each letter of the Greek alphabet had a numerical value, while in the English alphabet only some of the letters represent a number. He further showed that the Greek word for REVELATION, with the numerals added together, gave a total of 1512; and that the length, 56 inches, and height, 27 inches, of the little passage multiplied together gave a result precisely the same—1512. He also stated that the only English word which contained only the letters that would give 56 was likewise REVELATION (lvi.).

The length of the little passage, therefore, represents the 56-year epact, and its height the soli-calendar epact of 27 years, which reveals an event—the first advent of our Lord—while the measurements of 28 inches on each side of the apertures leading from below, as well as from above, represent a solar cycle, and signify REVELATION. These coincidences seem to have escaped the notice of Mr. Hickson and Mr. Horner.

It should be noted that the Greek language was not in existence when the Pyramid was erected, and the modern English farther off than the Greek by many centuries; but in both languages the architect spoke and foretold the first and second advents of the Messiah. The Greek became a language in general use by the time Christ was revealed in the flesh; and the English has become so at the present time. Evidently the solar and lunar cycles, and the measurements referred to, have a close relationship to each other. May it not likewise be the case with the 28 Ramp-holes on each Ramp of the Grand Gallery? Do they speak of the revelation of the saints in "the first resurrection?"

Yours very truly, J. S. LOWE.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

SIR,—In No. 219 of the BANNER is a letter from Dr. J. M. Grant, in which, after alluding to a paper of mine, which appeared in No. 216 of that publication, he calls attention to the Rev. C. W. Hickson's interpretation of Romans xi. 8, which he prefers to that I have given.

I have not seen the Rev. C. W. Hickson's view of this subject; but I gather from Dr. Grant's letter that he contends that the spirit of slumber, which St. Paul mentions to have overtaken Israel, had fallen upon the Jews, and not upon the Israelites. Not being acquainted with Mr. Hickson's work on the subject I am not in a position to question the accuracy of his views, and from Dr. Grant's exposition of them I can quite understand that they may recommend themselves to many; but if he be right, then I maintain that the Jews, and not the Israelites, must be God's witnesses.

It appears to me that St. Paul's argument is, that inasmuch as in Elijah's day God had reserved to Himself a remnant of Israel, according to the election of grace, as represented by the "7,000 who have not bowed the knee to the image of Baal," so had He, when St. Paul addressed the Romans, a remnant according to the election of grace, still reserved to Himself to be His witnesses before "all the nations."

I do not think a just appreciation of St. Paul's reasoning can be arrived at apart from the teachings of the prophet Isaiah; and if we carefully study the Book he has left us, as it appears to me impossible to disconnect the 7,000, whom the Almighty told Elijah He had reserved to Himself from those on whom Isaiah says, "The Lord hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes" (chap. xxix. 10). Of these whose eyes are closed we read again in Isa. xlii., in connection with "the isles," and of whom, at ver. 19, the Lord says, "Who is blind but My servant? or deaf as My messenger that I sent? who is blind as he that is perfect, and blind as the Lord's servant?" Again, in the following chapter, we read, "Bring forth the blind people that have eyes, and the deaf that have ears. . . . Ye are My witnesses, saith the Lord, and My servant whom I have chosen;" and at the first verse of the preceding chapter we are told what the "chosen servant" is to accomplish—"He shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles."

Is the Jew to bring forth judgment to the Gentiles? Are the Jews those addressed by the Almighty and told "Ye are My witnesses?" and yet these blind and deaf, who are there addressed, are evidently those on whom Isaiah says, "The Lord hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes."

But St. Paul himself, I think, proves clearly that he did not refer to the Jews as those on whom the spirit of slumber had fallen, for he says (Romans xi. 8): "(According as it is written, God hath given them the spirit of slumber, eyes that they should not see, and ears that they should not hear), unto this day." The whole passage within parenthesis is a quotation from the prophet Isaiah; but the final words, "unto this day," are St. Paul's own. Take these words in connection with the quotation, and it appears evident that St. Paul was alluding, not to the Jews of his days, but to that remnant of Israel, the 7,000, whom the Lord had reserved to Himself to be His witnesses at a yet distant future; otherwise there is no meaning in the words, "unto this day."

Dr. Grant says, "We do not read in the Bible of any awakening as yet." Do we not? Did not Moses foretell when the awakening should take place, "Even in the latter days"? (Deut. iv. 30) and did Israel not fulfil this when, at the Reformation, "we cast aside our idols and turned to the Lord our God?" Since then has not Israel, as represented by the British nation, been in receipt of all the blessings promised to "Israel obedient"? and have not the people been God's "witnesses to all the nations;" that, as He proclaimed, "I, even I, am the Lord; and beside Me there is no Saviour"?

HENRY P. KEIGHLY.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—We think Captain Keighly is partly right and partly under misapprehension in what he states above. Surely Judah, as well as Israel, are God's witnesses? In Romans xi. 5 "the election," we have always thought, was Benjamin out of "Judah-Israel," and the "rest" of ver. 7 were "the rest of Judah," who were blinded—slumberers, stumblers, and fallen (ver. 8—12). In Isa. xlii. 19, we believe "the blind" are Israel, "the deaf" Judah; and both were, verily, "God's witnesses" (Isa. xliii. 10, 12, xliv. 8) to prove that "He is God." For the one House (Israel) were "the vessels of mercy" "unto honour;" the other (Judah) "the vessels of wrath fitted to destruction;" both "making known" or "witnessing" to His Divinity. That the Jews (as well as Ten-Tribed Israel) were "blind" and "deaf" is amply shown by Isa. vi. 9, 10; a passage applied by the Lord Jesus Himself to the Jews in Matt. xiii. 13, 14; and Mark iv. 11, where He speaks of "them" as "without," in distinction to the Christian Benjamite disciples who were "within" the circle of "the remnant according to the election of grace" (Rom. xi. 5). "Unto this day," of ver. 8, would apply, we think, equally to Judah as well as Israel in St. Paul's time. Both were then "sleeping," saving the "elected remnant" of Benjamin. The British slumberers are still half asleep, though waking up now to witness to God through the truths of the Identity. But Judah, too, though fast asleep still, is silently witnessing in her misery that God exists and is a true and faithful God; since she responds to His curses on her disobedience. But her's will yet be a joyful awakening to praise His name, and to bear joint testimony with Israel to His Godhead, what time the mercy reaches that House, as promised in Jer. xxxi. 31, and Heb. viii. 8. Then the new covenant will be made with the Jews, as well as with the House of Israel. (We think the discussion of this subject should now be allowed to drop.)

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED BY THE METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

From March 10, to April 15, 1881.

	£	s.	d.
The Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille, M.A.	1	1	0
Mrs. Lawrence	1	1	0
Miss Lawrence	1	1	0
Mr. H. Lawrence	0	10	0
The Surrey Anglo-Israel Association	1	1	0
Mrs. Birkbeck	1	1	0
Mr. F. W. Mount	1	1	0
Miss Mount	0	10	6
Mr. T. Stewart (for literature to Natal)	0	10	0
Beni Ephraim	5	0	0
Four of 5s. each	1	0	0
Nine of 2s. 6d. each	1	2	6

April 15, 1881. JOHN S. ANDERSON, Hon. Sec.

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

"Have we trials and temptations?
Is there trouble anywhere?
We should never be discouraged,
Take it to the Lord in prayer."

DURING the past month 18 persons have joined the Union, the number of members now being 674. Mr. Winter, of George Town, British Guiana, writes for two more cards of membership, and expresses the hope, on behalf of himself and others, that "our friend Philo-Israel" will continue to give us his help by means of the Monthly Comments.

We are glad to learn that the "Prayers for Daily Use" are very much appreciated. The following are a few extracts from letters received:—"Please send me one dozen 'Prayers.' I am delighted with them. I intend to give them to friends, and hope their use will be blessed by God to the advancement of our glorious cause." "Will you kindly send me four more 'Prayers.' I do hope sincerely the Comments will continue to be edited as at present. I do so enjoy reading my Bible with them." "Please send me one dozen copies of the 'Prayers for Daily Use;' we like them so very much." "I am so very pleased with the Comments and 'Prayers' that I send a trifle towards the funds of the Union." "I am so glad they have been written. They will, I trust, be highly appreciated by the members." "I trust we shall prove how much we value them by our earnest and constant use of them." "The 'Prayers' are very beautiful." The following, from a lady 73 years of age, shows that the idea of our Identity with Israel was grasped by some many years ago. She says, "My father and mother were great Bible readers, and always saw the Lost Ten Tribes must be found in a Christian nation. They held the opinion that Britain contained them, because we possessed all the blessings promised to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. So from seven years old I have been conversant with the theory of the Ten Tribes being the British." We beg to acknowledge with thanks the receipt of a parcel of Identity literature, for distribution, from an anonymous donor at St. Leonards. We earnestly beg the prayers of the entire Association and Union, for all engaged in the work, that the compiler of the Comments, and those who help in the work may be blessed, and made a great blessing to others. The Card of Membership will be sent on receipt of three stamps. The Comments will be sent post free, monthly, for 1s. per annum; 2 copies, 1s. 6d.; 3 copies, 2s. The "Prayers" are 1d. each copy, or 9d. per dozen, postage extra. Address, Miss Lawrence, Stoneleigh, New Wimbledon, Surrey.

J. LAWRENCE
(Hon. Sec. I. S. and P. U.).

OUR SUPPLEMENTS.

WE are thankful to say a supplement for the BANNER, of May 18, No. 229, and another for June, are provided for, and will be issued accordingly. We have received for the purpose £1 from Miss D. W., besides 1s., her "half shekel" census gift, and placed both sums to credit of the "Supplement Fund;" Mrs. F., of Clifton, has kindly presented the fund with 16s.; and Mrs. J. H., late of Exeter, has just sent us £2, with a promise to make the gift annual, if it be so long needed (which we believe will not be the case in 1882); and finally a friend at Portsea has given £4 towards the fund. It is thus seen that the £4 wanted for May 18 supplement, also that for June, are already secured; also that about £1 more is in hand towards the cost of a supplement for July 13. Since the above was written we have received a further sum. which provides for the publication of the July supplement; and that for August is also promised.

Our readers will understand that the money is required to enable the owner of the BANNER to incur the extra expense attendant on the publication of these supplements, and that in stating the object we have no personal motives to serve. As editor of the BANNER we desire more space for the mass of MSS. in hand. And that space cannot be secured without cost.

One of our friends, in corresponding with us on this subject, writes as follows:—"I read the BANNER as far as my weak state of health allows, and with very deep interest. The signs of the times surely point to the great consummation of this dispensation, and it is a very strong argument that the Divine truth and faithfulness to covenant, promise, and oath necessitates the manifestation of the far larger portion of the Abrahamic seed, now that the end of this age is at hand, through every sign and token given by our Lord; and nowhere but in our own nation can we possibly find the requisite solution of this long concealed truth."

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	13	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING

OF THE

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION

Will be held (D.V.) in the

LOWER ROOM AT EXETER HALL,

ON FRIDAY, MAY 20TH, AT 7 P.M.

THE

RT. HON. VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.,

IN THE CHAIR.

The following Gentlemen have been asked to Address the Meeting:—

MR. E. W. BIRD (PHILO-ISRAEL).
MR. DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.
MR. W. H. PETERS, J.P.
THE REV. C. W. HICKSON, M.A.
THE REV. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE, M.A.
MR. F. C. DANVERS.
THE REV. R. HILL, M.A.

All Identity believers are earnestly solicited to attend and to bring their friends.

NO CARDS WILL BE ISSUED. ADMISSION FREE.

The General Meeting of the Association for MEMBERS ONLY and DELEGATES FROM AFFILIATED ASSOCIATIONS will be held at the BOARD ROOM, 334, STRAND, at 3 p.m. on the same day.

JOHN S. ANDERSON, Hon. Sec.

IN MEMORIAM.

THE DEATH OF LORD BEACONSFIELD.
THE MEDALLION BROOCH (REGISTERED).

WITH Likeness and Dates of Birth and Death, encircled with a wreath of olive (PEACE) and myrtle (HONOUR), surmounted with the Earl's coronet.

Prices, bronze or plated 2s. 6d.; solid silver 7s. 6d.; gold 17s. 6d.

Specially constructed for the centre of a rosette or badge.

Address, Messrs. Humphrey & Co., Wholesale Jewellers, 15, London-road, Liverpool.

Price 2d.; Annual Subscription, 2s. 6d.

ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.

Editor: Douglas A. Onslow, J.P.

The following is extracted from a letter from Mr. G. N. Walsh, of Sheffield, to the Editor of Israel's Hope and Destiny, in reference to the last number of that monthly: "I must congratulate you on your second paper in this (April) month's Hope and Destiny. It is clear, argumentative, concise, and telling and puts the true character of redemption in the clearest light. I consider the present number one of the most readable—perhaps the most readable—of all that have been issued."

The May number is now ready, and may be obtained of any bookseller, or of the Publishers.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.
W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Just published, price 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

THE LATE SIR CHARLES REED. A Life-Sketch as a Business man, a Citizen, a Statesman, an Educationist, and a Philanthropist. To which is added his Decease and Funeral. With splendid Photographic Portrait.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,

High-Class Tailor,

47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.

MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

Now Ready, in handsome cloth, gilt, with Coloured Map, and several Illustrations, price 3s. 6d.

THE

GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET.

To be had of the Author, Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

PHILO-ISRAEL'S BOOK FOR CHILDREN.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth, gilt, 1s. Post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Third Edition.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST OR SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS AND TEACHINGS OF THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. 56 pages. Illustrated with Diagrams. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d., post free 5d.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? An Inquiry establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d.

Price 2d., post free 3d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated. By PHILO-ISRAEL.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters." By PHILO-ISRAEL.

A RESUME OF THE SCRIPTURAL ARGUMENT, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100.

By PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE BRITISH CONSTITUTION AND ISRAEL'S POLICY (Foreign and Domestic). Followed by "A NECESSARY CONSEQUENCE," by L. P. Part I.—"The British Constitution."—A Sign. Part II.—Our Home and Foreign Policy as the House of Israel. Part III.—The Constitutions of Gentile Nations. Price 3d., post free 3d.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION. 1 to 9; 1s. per 100.

London:
ROBERT BANKS, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.

ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE NEW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL; Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Leeds, with an Introduction and Notes; to be followed by a Review of Mr. Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes.

By the same Author.

"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)," with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d.

"CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d., post free 3½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 3½d.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Visitors to London, and all persons interested in Religious and Benevolent Institutions, should procure a copy of the

ABC CHURCH AND CHAPEL DIRECTORY,

AND

MAY MEETING HAND-BOOK FOR 1881.

Containing the most complete list of May Meetings published. Also a List of Protestant places of Worship in and around London. Price 2d., post free 3d.

The Record says: "A well-arranged list of all the London and Suburban Protestant places of Worship, with the clergy who officiate, services, &c. Exceedingly useful."

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

B. SCOTT'S ESSAY on NATURAL MEDICINES. "Should be read by every one afflicted."—So writes a Clergyman in Lancashire. Post free five stamps. B. V. Scott, 121, Kensington, Liverpool.

Price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome, cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES AND 1882.

BY THE

REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD,

Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

PHILO-ISRAEL (in the BANNER) says:—"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome Identity volume. It contains twenty discourses of the well-known American divine, Dr. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, N.Y. We are glad to find from these discourses that Dr. Wild is quite one with us on this side the water with most, though not all the views we entertain on our great and glorious subject.... We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and 'American' point of view, which is sure to interest, sure to be instructive, and may lead the thoughtless and inquiring to pursue the investigation till possibly conviction may be the result.'

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

334 Demy 8vo pages, in handsome cloth, gilt, price 3s. 6d by post 4s.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF ISRAEL' HOPE AND DESTINY.

Edited by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.

This Volume contains Papers on all Points of the Identity of the British People with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel.

SEE NEW IDENTITY QUARTERLY MAGAZINE. Editor, Rev. R. DOUGLAS, M.A., Vicar of St. Stephen, Sheffield. Articles by Piazzi Smyth, Col. Gawler, &c. Price 6d.; post free, annually, 2s. 3d. James Nisbet & Co., London.

THE ISRAEL OF GOD.

A SERVICE OF SONG

Upon the Career and Destiny of God's Ancient People Israel. WORDS AND MUSIC.

By C. W. E.

Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Second Edition now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

AMMI; or, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE

BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham the "friend of God," and showing that true science history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

By REV. JOSEPH WILD, D.D.

With a Portrait of the Author.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Price 2d., post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES.

An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

Price 4d., by post 4½d. Special terms for a quantity.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW, WEDNESDAY, MAY 4, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 228. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MAY 11, 1881. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Sin of Sheer Bloodguiltiness, and Peace	193
A Result of the Government Policy of Surrender in Afghanistan	194
Israel the Head and Not the Tail, Above Only and Not Beneath, in Regard to the Home and Foreign Shipping Trade	194
Progress	195
Answer to Identity Acrostic.—No. 2. By Col. M. Beresford	195
Pre-Celtic and Celtic Craniology. By Robert Pegrum	196
Into the Enemy's Camp. By L. P.	197
Blind Evidence	198
Israel's Little Wars	198
"Our Identity" in Selkirk, North Britain	199
The Cheltenham Anglo-Israel Association	199
Correspondence—Ill-Consolidated Europe	199

THE SIN OF SHEER BLOODGUILTINESS, AND PEACE.

OUR concluding sentence in the leading article of our recent issue, No. 225, is deemed, in some quarters, to be needlessly irritating to Liberal minds, because we came to the conclusion that the peace just concluded with the Boers was a peace likely to end in anarchy, to our minds a synonym for "dishonour" to Israel.

Why is this opinion entertained? Because, as we are informed, "peace made to spare blood-shedding (not bloodguiltiness, which is quite another thing), and to yield to the demands of an opposing people, is not dishonourable." This is, of course, the "peace at any price" doctrine. A nation, according to this idea, is always wrong when blood is shed by it. We have already said something in opposition to this view, in our article on "Israelism and War" (No. 226). In reference to this more extreme notion, that it is national sin and dishonour to fight in any national quarrel, and that it is right to cease to contest with an opposing people (!), in a national point of view, because bloodshed is likely to ensue, we think these are as unwise doctrines as any we have yet known to proceed from those who, being Israelites, have studied their Bibles, and know what God's purposes have always been towards Israel. How He has led our nation hitherto, through what torrents of blood, through what wars, what fightings, and what slaughter; and what Ezekiel (xxxviii. and xxxix.) tells us is yet in store for us when the last and greatest war this earth of suffering, sin, and woe, ever yet endured, shall have come upon our race, the Book distinctly informs us, and history past and present reveals. As regards the question just now in issue—namely, the honourable character of the peace made by Mr. Gladstone's Government with rebellious farmers, while standing victorious on the Queen of England's territories, lording it over and robbing her subjects, conquering her attacking armies and killing her commander-in-chief, all we can say is, that if the idea be that under those circumstances it was humane to stop the war because there was likelihood of further effusion of British and other's blood, then it seems to us the repentance came too late. More than a thousand of Her Majesty's soldiers had already fallen, or been captured in the operations, vainly endeavouring to vindicate her outraged authority.

It appears to us that peace should have been made before these hapless soldiers had died, or shed their blood, rather than after they were sacrificed, and after they had thrice suffered defeat. What has been the consequence? Is British bloodguiltiness averted by the peace now made? "It is believed a native war is inevitable in the Transvaal," is the report from Durban, dated April 21, 1881, sent home to the Liberal Times. Is peace and safety the consequence? Nay, "English residents of all classes are leaving Pretoria; the country can but retrograde," says the same report. Is peace with and after such defeat, and, therefore, after such national disgrace and military shame, likely to lead then to absence of "sheer bloodguiltiness" in this nation? We trow not. For this nation, be it noted, withdraws from a protection solemnly promised, before God and the world, to the unoffending British colonists, and to the defenceless native population of the Transvaal, and that because there is an immediate prospect of bloodshed at the hands of the Boers, if the Queen's authority be maintained, and her troops' honour (now sadly tarnished) be vindicated.

Not thus was India recovered from the mutineers. Not thus Europe freed from the tyranny of Napoleon. If our proceedings were originally wrong and wicked as respects the Boers, that might make a difference. But it was notoriously otherwise. When the Government of the day came into power no such idea was entertained. Military reverses, and the slaughter of our own soldiery, is what has evidently appalled our rulers; and "sheer bloodguiltiness," we suppose, deters the vindication of national right and military honour, because the bare effusion of blood is held to be a national crime. Israel's Empire was not so acquired. Our history of "Israel's Battles," our "Geography of the Gates," tells quite a different tale. The Empire was built up by hard fighting, and by the stubborn maintenance of the territories God let us win for Christ. The Punjab cost us, in nine battles, deluges of blood. India was won by the sword of a warlike race, to whom God gave it (Isa. xli. 2). The Cape was no exception. By stern contests, costing this nation her best sons—sons who spared not their own lives for Fatherland; whose motto was ever, dulce est pro patriâ mori—by such fields as Waterloo, the Alma, Inkerman, and the battles that won us India from the mutineers, the Empire has been retained. We know and feel that a different spirit now actuates our Government; and the people, it seems, are content that its will shall be their law. We see a reason for all this, and are content, if it be God's will, that even by national dishonour and national disgrace the bidding that shuts this nation into her destined hiding-place, during the approaching outbreak of the great earthquake woe, shall be performed.

Digitized by Google

The experience is not nationally pleasing—nay, it is bitter, very bitter to every lover of his country, to every respecter of her name, and fame, and reputation. But we see that it may be God's will, for all that, so to bring Isa. xxvi. 20, 21, to pass; and we are glad and thankful to know that the national eclipse can only last, "as it were, for a little moment." As a patriot, as an ardent lover of his country, of her honour and good name, the writer of these lines thanks God for that. But it may be permitted us, even then, to cry, in dejection of spirit and in anguish of heart, "O Lord, how long?" (Psa. lxxiv. 9, 10). How long?

A RESULT OF THE GOVERNMENT POLICY OF SURRENDER IN AFGHANISTAN.

EXTRACT from the "Proceedings of Committee of the Church Missionary Society," London, March, 1881:—

The Rev. W. H. Barlow having stated that an offer had been made through him to provide the salaries for three years (£640 per annum) of two missionaries for Afghanistan, and as it appeared in the present state of Government policy that there was no likelihood at present of any opening in the interior of Afghanistan, the committee, in view of their minute of October, 1879, on the subject of frontier missions, requested Mr. Barlow to suggest to his friend that the sum so kindly offered by him might advantageously be employed by sending two of the men, now kept back for lack of funds, to Peshawar and Multan, with the understanding that if any opening should hereafter appear in Afghanistan itself, and the Society's funds should allow of the establishment of a mission there, the two men should be sent forward.

What have we here? Simply this. Afghanistan sorely needs Christ's Gospel. The money to send it is ready. The messengers, being Israelites of the Saxon race, are ready. But the Government policy forbids Christ's mercy to penetrate the land; and Israel abashed is forced to refrain from proclaiming the free salvation. "O Lord, how long?" (Psa. lxxiv. 9, 10).

ISRAEL THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL, ABOVE ONLY AND NOT BENEATH, IN REGARD TO THE HOME AND FOREIGN SHIPPING TRADE.

OUR readers, probably, have not carefully noted a wonderful article on the late alleged depression of British export trade, published in the Times last year. The matter deserves attention, since it seems to show that the late complaints of the depressed condition of the British foreign trade, and of the shipping interests in particular, were much exaggerated, the volume of commerce all the while increasing with extraordinary strides without a pause. To make the matter intelligible, we must quote some of the figures we find in the Times leader, taken in turn from "The Annual Statement of the Navigation and Shipping of the United Kingdom, for 1879," and from a "Report from Mr. Giffen to the Secretary to the Board of Trade."

The reader must recollect that trade in this kingdom was greatly depressed generally previous to the end of 1879 for several years, and at that time only did a revival take place. What, then, are the figures which tell us of the condition of the foreign and coasting trade of the United Kingdom during this time of declension? They are these:—

In 1879 there were entries into British "Gates," in the foreign and coasting trade of the United Kingdom, amounting altogether to 65,159,573 tons. In 1878 they were only 63,186,548. The increase was, therefore, 3 per cent.

In 1879 the "clearances" out of the British "Gates" for the same trade were 60,192,459 tons. In 1878 they were 59,121,151 tons, an increase of 1½ per cent. But these increases were progressive. The entries and clearances of 1878 were in excess of those of 1877.

In the foreign trade alone the same appears. In 1879 the "entries" into British "Gates" were 26,032,592 tons; but in 1878 they were 25,293,721 tons, an increase of about 3 per cent. In 1879 the "clearances" out of British "Gates" were 26,682,858 tons, while in 1878 they were 26,301,358 tons, an increase of also 1½ per cent.

Comparison of the results of 1879 with those of 1873, when our foreign trade was at its maximum, proves the fact that the progress of our advance was, and is, real and remarkable In 1879 the "entries" and "clearances" into British "Gates" of vessels with cargoes only were 43,948,701 tons; but in 1873 they were 37,934,422 tons, an increase of 16 per cent. The comments of the Times on these figures are to the point, and must find a place in the BANNER. It said:—

Such has been the progress of the shipping business of the United Kingdom during the time of depression in our foreign trade. What makes the figures still more striking, amid all that is said of foreign competition, is the fact that the whole of the increase is exclusively in British shipping. The entries and clearances of foreign ships with cargoes in the foreign trade of the United Kingdom were the same in 1879 as in 1873—viz., 11,800,000 tons—so that the whole of the above increase was exclusively in British shipping, in which, in fact, the increase was from 26,127,942 tons in 1873 to 32,134,725 tons in 1879—an increase of very nearly 24 per cent. Such figures are certainly a valuable commentary on the talk of depression in the shipping trade which has so long been prevalent. We have no doubt that there was depression, and that the times were bad; but probably some people made money all through, and many who complained loudest must have been strongly confident of a speedy change for the better. Nor does the story of progress end here. English shipping is much engaged in the trade of other countries than the United Kingdom, and although we cannot show for such countries how the employment has increased, we can exhibit at least the steady growth of the shipping tonnage itself. Since 1875 alone it amounts to about 7 per cent. The tonnage of shipping belonging to the United Kingdom was 6,088,000 tons in 1875, and 6,521,000 tons in 1879; while, if we compare steamers alone, this being now the important part of the English mercantile fleet, we find that the increase is from 1,943,000 tons in 1875 to 2,508,000 tons in 1879, or 29 per cent.! In 1879 alone the steamers built in the United Kingdom, exclusive of those built for foreigners, amounted to 298,000 tons, or more than 10 per cent of the existing steam tonnage. These are certainly astonishing figures, if we are to regard them as the figures of a depressed or declining trade. If depression is like this, what sort of figures are we to expect when the revival has made progress and the times are such that shipowners and shipbuilders admit them to be prosperous?

We ask our friends to note the above statements, and to reflect whether any other nation on the face of the globe has such statistics to show regarding its foreign and domestic trade, and its abnormal and unprecedented increase both in ships and tonnage, employed in carrying its import and export trade. We obtain this, however, simply as one of the gifts of our God in fulfilment of His promise that He would give us, as His people Israel, "the power to get wealth." Why? To spend it on our own selfish purposes? Nay, not so; but "that He may establish His covenant which He sware unto our fathers as it is this day" (Deut. viii. 18).

Our enormous shipping, foreign, and domestic trade, then, is God's gift to us, His chosen people; a gift that redounds distinctly to His glory. For it fills up a part of the portrait and history by which He has arranged that His people Israel shall be known, and thus identified, He acquires us as "His witnesses" to the nations of the world that He is God (Isa. xliii. 10, 12, xliv. 8). Wondrous thought! God, the great Creator requires evidence to establish His Identity as Jehovah to convince the heathen nations that He is God, and He deigns to declare of us that we are His appointed witnesses to prove that fact! What honour thus is put on our British history, character, and present condition. For these things constitute "our Identity with lost Israel," and point us out as "God's witnesses" to prove that He is God, and thus we British become a factor in the case which He Himself declares is needful to establish and demonstrate before all the universe—God's glory!

Digitized by Google

PROGRESS.

We are glad to be able to report decided progress in various directions. From Canada, from Scotland, from London, from Ardsley, from Wiltshire, the same account reaches us, and the tale is of progress, decided and wonderfully rapid. Our readers have seen that the Identity is to be the subject of the Rev. Richard Hill's able advocacy from the pulpit of St. Barnabas Church, South Lambeth-road, Stockwell, London, for eight alternate Sunday evenings, beginning with April 24.

From Montreal, Canada, our friend and energetic supporter there, Mr. Herbert Wallis, writes to us that Canon Evans, of St. Stephen's Church, Montreal, has promised to take the Identity as his theme, during a series of six sermons, from his pulpit; and further urges the distribution at his church doors —after the sermons, we presume—"of readable matter bearing on the subject." We admire Canon Evans' liberality; and, as a contrast, wonder with extreme admiration when we shall find a clergyman of the Church of England in any place with which we are acquainted, liberally minded enough to suggest, or even to contemplate, what would be deemed the enormity in this land, of distributing the literature of Israelism to a congregation just separating after listening to the clerical exposition of God's Word? Verily, our clergy in the colonies are less prejudiced than the shepherds in Israel's home. For surely in the former we should not be shocked, as we have been ourselves quite recently, by learning that a clergyman of the Church of England has described our pamphlets on the Identity as "works emanating from men who are devil-inspired," "which they would care to propagate as little as the undoubted works of Satan."

From Wiltshire we have news from a working man that he, and a band of inquirers, have at heart a project for pushing the Identity in a factory, where they have between five and six thousand fellow-workmen, and they ask for help in Identity literature to enable them to make the effort on a large and efficient scale.

In Selkirk, Dr. Edward Evatt writes to us that there is quite an important shaking of the dry bones there, and that in the United Presbyterian Church in the place, he himself was going to deliver a lecture, at which he expected over a thousand listeners. He wished for over a thousand copies of BANNERS, Comments, leaflets, and other literature to enable him to disperse the information far and wide after his own statement had been made. The Rev. Edmund Lane, D.C.L., was to preside at Dr. Evatt's lecture, and we look on this beginning at a new centre of Identity operations as a most healthful sign, giving promise of an abundant harvest if the Lord will bless the means to make His own truth known.

From Ardsley, near Barnsley, in Yorkshire, we have received a letter, extract from which follows. This we deem most hopeful. Our readers will be glad to see it. Mr. J. Harper, the writer, is a working man, and writes as the representative of a small cluster of working men, who long to be up and doing to spread the Identity. They ask for help in advice as to the best way to proceed wisely and efficiently as regards the opponents. Our counsel is to depend on help from on high, to master the arguments in favour of our Identity as fully as they can, and never to neglect an opportunity of defending or pushing the cause. Their lack of knowledge will be supplied by the BANNER, or by the many cheap pamphlets dealing with the subject in its various aspects, and with these they should, we think, always be armed. Passages of Scripture bearing on the controversy should be committed to memory, and a reference to leading texts on the chiefly contested points be always at hand. With these aids we guarantee to our friends, Mr. J. Harper and his fellow-Israelites, that they shall be more than a match for all their opponents in Ardsley. They may be sure that God will help them as He has done us from the first, and will never let them be "ashamed" when a reason is demanded of them as to the hope that is in them (1 Peter iii. 15).

Mr. Harper's letter was to the following effect:—

DEAR SIR,—I noticed in the Barnsley Chronicle, of April 9, that Mr. A. K. Robinson, of Leeds, president of the Leeds Anglo-Israel Association, had been giving two lectures on "The Promised Land; or England's Inheritance in the East." The lectures, which were deeply interesting, were for the Mapplewell Mutual Improvement Society. A friend of the cause defrayed the expenses. Now, sir, ours is a small village, about four miles distant, and we have a few working men who are deeply interested in the BANNER OF ISRAEL, wishing to extend its circulation, and that of the Identity movement generally. We consider it of the utmost importance so to do. Our means are very small, but we have added to the circulation of the BANNER by lending them to friends after we have perused them through carefully ourselves. We have found by so doing that we have gained a few, and hope that the Anglo-Israelite question in this part of the country may be wider spread; also that your cause here may make progress, so that in a little while we may be able to send for some one of our glorious cause to give us more information on the subject by a lecture, if by any means we can. You will not, we expect, dear sir, be surprised to hear that the movement here meets with a great deal of opposition, as it does everywhere else where it has been proclaimed. But we feel that it is a right cause, and that ere long men everywhere will have to adhere to its teachings. I wish your cause every success, for it is a valuable help in explaining the Bible in its literal meaning—a question, or subject, which ought to commend itself, not to ministers only, but to all thinking men. We know that with this difficulties arise; but Scripture unfolds to those who advocate it answers abundant to overcome those difficulties, and shews us the right interpretations thereof. From time to time these appear in your valuable paper, the BANNER OF ISRAEL.

Could you, dear sir, kindly suggest any method to us by which to make the cause better known or interesting to those who do not exactly see eye to eye with the movement, because we believe in our heart of hearts that it is a right one and true one.

Hoping to receive your kind reply, we remain, yours faithfully in the cause of the Anglo-Israelite theory,

JOHN HARPER
(on behalf of a few friends and himself).

Ardsley, April, 1881.

ANSWER TO IDENTITY ACROSTIC.—No. 2.

BY. COL. M. BERESFORD.

MANASSEH—AMERICAN.

M ARTH A
A BSALO M
NAZARENE
A SSHE R
S OPH I*
SPASMODIC
E ZR A HEATHEN

* See "Dictionary of Dates."

Digitized by Google

PRE-CELTIC AND CELTIC CRANIOLOGY.

By Robert Pegrum.

In the Banner, vol. iv., p. 454, we introduced "craniology" as an aid to the identification of the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel with the British nation; and we then endeavoured to prove that although the British cranium (skull) differs materially from that of the Irish and of the French, yet it has a striking resemblance to that of the Hebrews; for craniology teaches us that the Celtic Britons, the Anglo-Saxons, the ancient Danes, and the Normans had skulls of the same shape as those of the ancient Hebrews.

It is our present intention to continue the study of "British craniology;" but, in this paper, we restrict ourselves to pre-Celtic and Celtic crania. The additional evidence which we now offer will confirm the brief outline of this branch of the subject which we gave in November last. We quote from two articles: (1) "The two principal forms of ancient British skulls," and (2) "Further researches and observations on the two principal forms of ancient British skulls," both by John Thurnam, M.D., F.S.A., F.A.S.L., and published in vols. i. and iii. of the "Memoirs of the Anthropological Society of London."

Professor Dr. D. Wilson holds that "the earliest population of Britain was a pre-Celtic one, with a peculiarly dolichocephalic cranial conformation, tapering equally towards the forehead and occiput. Ignorant of metals, these people, rude workers in stone, raised those remarkable tombs in the crypts and galleries of which the bony remains of their noble and royal dead are found. Upon these, he maintains, a race intruded, having skulls of marked brachicephalic proportions, with prominent parietal tubers, and truncated and often flattened occiput, in whose smaller earthen tumuli the first traces of bronze implements and weapons are met with." Dr. Thurnam, referring to this, makes the following statement:—"The brachicephalic form of skull described by Dr. Wilson as that of his second race, is the form usual in the least ancient of the pre-Roman tumuli of the South of the island, as well as in the rest of Britain, and is, therefore, doubtless, that of the Celtic (Cymric-speaking) inhabitants; in fact, that of the Britons of the times of both Julius and Claudius Cæsar. . . . . In England, in the long barrows, there are no bronze or other metallic objects, but only those of flint, or some kind of stone; the skulls are dolichocephalic, and the stature below the average. There are rare exceptions to this rule, but these are clearly to be referred to some casual admixture, or to the earlier tombs having been used by the later race; whilst as regards the later barrows, it is evident that unless the earlier race had been suddenly exterminated by the succeeding one, a mixture of interments and of the two types were to be expected. There are, then, two distinct cranial types from the barrows, one of which must be Celtic. To assume that both are Celtic can scarcely be reconciled with the idea of permanence of type, or with that of ethnic unity. The brachicephalic and sub-brachicephalic skulls from the round barrows must be regarded as those of the bronze-using Celts; and the dolichocephalic skulls from the long-chambered barrows, as those of a pre-Celtic stone-using people. Such seems to have been the order of succession of these two races in Britain; and such, it is believed, was also the order of their succession in Gaul. . . . . The evidence before us appears to favour the conclusion that whilst in Britain the chambered long barrows were erected by a dolichocephalic race, in Gaul such tombs were raised by a brachicephalic as well as by a dolichocephalic one, though especially by the former. Hence the inference that the two races came into contact in Gaul at an earlier period than in Britain. In this country it has been shown that the evidence is in favour of the dolichocephalic race having preceded the brachicephalic, by whom it seems to have been absorbed or extirpated. The dolichocephalic skulls of the long barrows, I have assigned to the most ancient inhabitants who were conquered and displaced by the Belgic (Celtic) invaders, and are described by Cæsar (B. G. v. 12, 14) under the name of Interiores Britanni, as forming the aboriginal population. We are not without historical ground for regarding this last population as of quite a diverse origin from the former. . . . . . In conclusion, I am content with having established from archæological and osteological data, at least to my own satisfaction, the existence in this island of the West, of two distinct races in pre-Roman times. . . . . . The views I have been led to adopt have been forced upon me after long inquiry, and after many years of original investigation of the most ancient tumuli of this country."

From Dr. Thurnam's papers we learn several lessons:—

I.—Craniology teaches us that two totally different races existed in Britain prior to the Roman times. They are spoken of in the above extracts as "of two distinct cranial types," as "two distinct races," and "the last population is of quite diverse origin from the former."

II.—Craniology teaches us that the earliest population of Britain was a pre-Celtic one. The inhabitants were then ignorant of metals, and were simply workers in stone.

III.—Craniology teaches us that the second was the Celtic race. The Celts used bronze implements and weapons.

IV.—Craniology teaches us that the pre-Celtic and the Celtic races came into contact in Gaul at an earlier period than in Britain. Hence, the Celts must have been travelling from the South or the South-east towards the North; and, consequently, they had met with the aboriginal inhabitants of Gaul before they saw those of this country.

V.—Craniological teaching is confirmed by both the sacred Scriptures and secular history.

The opponents of Anglo-Israelism often remark that we are, according to Scripture and history, a Japhetic race. It is perfectly true that the earliest inhabitants of Britain belonged to that race; for Moses (Gen. x. 2, 5), says, "The sons of Japheth. . . . . by these were the isles of the Gentiles divided in their lands." But it is also true that a race "of quite diverse origin from the former" succeeded them; for "the most ancient inhabitants were conquered and displaced" by the powerful Celts. Professor Rawlinson informs us that "the Celts, who were the first to arrive in Europe from Asia, their birth-place, pushed out the original inhabitants to remote places, so that only a few stragglers were left in the extreme North." Other eminent historical authorities confirm Professor Rawlinson's opinion.

Therefore, the suggestion that the original inhabitants of Britain were of Japhetic origin, is not a weak point, but it is one of our strongholds, it is one of the best fortified positions of our citadel. Scripture states the fact, and both craniology and history confirm that statement. We do not claim to have descended from the Japhetic or aboriginal occupiers of this land, but from the Eastern Celts "who pushed out the original inhabitants to remote places."

In harmony with this, we read that the glory of Joseph—the representative of the Ten Tribes—"is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the horns of unicorns; with them he shall push the people together to the ends of the earth" (Deut. xxxiii. 17).

THE COMING EARTHQUAKE WOE.

"Germany purposes contracting a loan of 45 million marks, for naval and military improvements." "Herr Krupp has received from Russia an enormous order for cannon." "Greece has contracted a loan to keep a force of 80,000 soldiers in the field for a year." When will Christian men awake from their dreams of a regenerated and peaceful world? and realise that Infinite Wisdom has declared that "evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse," until He shall come whose right it is to beat the sword into a ploughshare."—The Rainbow.

INTO THE ENEMY'S CAMP.

By L. P.

In The Christian, of March 24, there appeared a passage relating to a question that had been asked by "A. P.," "upon what authority a writer bases the assertion that there is no chosen nation at the present time, as there was under the old dispensation, and that there is now no covenanted nation to protect." The editor thereupon remarks: "A. P. refers to Jer. xxxi. 35, 39, and asks if the nation must not still exist somewhere, a perpetual nation under God's perpetual covenant? We would submit," the editor proceeds to say, "that this question lies outside the range of Mr. Pitter's article. The latter only treated of nations in a political sense—that is to say, nations sending forth armies, and having, therefore, an established government on a defined territory, which is not the case with the Jews at the present time."

Now, on reading the above, we asked ourselves, what opinion then does the editor of The Christian hold in connection with the promise referred to by "A. P."? Does he accuse the great God of Israel of breaking His covenant, and causing Israel to cease as a nation, though the sun still shines, the moon and the stars shed their light, and the sea yet roars? If he does not, then where is the chosen nation that has not ceased to be such? If he points to the Jews, we deny that he can correctly rank them as a nation, because they have been such, and may be such again. What has been, and what may be, is no proof of what is. Under the head nation, this is what we find in our "Johnson," published 1806: "A people distinguished from another people, generally by their language, origin, or government. . . . . A nation properly signifies a great number of families derived from the same blood, born in the same country, and living under the same government.—Temple." Jews are certainly not born in one and the same country now-a-days, neither are they under the same government. They possess none of their own. They have to submit to the laws of every country where they dwell in these days of their dispersion. They have no representatives at foreign courts, for they have no country to be represented. By conscription they may be forced to enter the armies of the lands where they reside, and be obliged to wage war against their Jewish brethren serving as soldiers in an opposing force, without such warfare bearing the character of civil strife.

We think the editor of The Christian is in a cleft stick. God says Israel is a nation, according to the terms of His covenant; the Jews are not a nation in a "political sense" (we are at a loss to understand in what other sense we are to interpret the term), then either the editor must deny God's truth and faithfulness, or he must point to the nation which is fulfilling His Word.

We know of old that the belief the British are that nation fills this gentleman with scornful wrath. It is irreverent, blasphemous, absurd, and so forth, according to him. Can no one persuade him to stay our folly by enlightening us as to where we should look for the nation that must be still existing as such, since, as we said before, we yet enjoy daylight, and the moon continues to shine by night. Does our opponent refer to a spiritual nation? What is that? One consisting of Christians, of any and of all countries? But that is open to the same objections as the belief that the Jews are a nation, for Christians may be found under every species of government, and certainly do not consist of "families derived from the same blood." Surely it is ridiculous to speak of a spiritual nationality.

The indignation that has been expressed by our adversaries at the belief we are literal Israel strikes us as intensely childish and unreasonable. Let them find another nation fulfilling by their possessions, their career, or their mission in the world, the promises and prophecies of God more fully than we do, and we will confess our error; but while they deny our claims, yet can bring forth none having greater, we assert they are dishonouring God and playing into the hands of sceptics. God gave (Exod. xxix. 45, 46; 2 Sam. vii. 23, 24) a glorious promise, indicating no limit to it, in time; our opponents say it ended centuries ago. God said He would dwell separate from others, but with His people Israel (Exod. xxxiii. 16). Our adversaries sneer, and urge that this undertaking of the God of Israel ceased when the Tribes became captive a second time, and no longer dwelt in Palestine.

How miserably our opponents minimise God's glorious promises. Well may unbelievers mock and say, "Look at the outcome of your God's promised special favour." Some centuries of misgovernment, quarrels, fightings internal and external, while dwelling in the land of promise, and then according to yourselves, defeat, dispersion, heathenism, obscurity, with probable poverty, ignorance, and misery. Vainly might our opponents point to a spiritual Israel, the infidel's reply would be, "Then why was it not so said? Did the Israel of old, do you suppose, so interpret the promises? Were they purposely misled? Can you imagine Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, and Moses being satisfied with such a picture of the condition of their descendants, on whom God bestowed the wealth of His promises? Would they have accepted your interpretation, could it have been told our forefathers, that in a spiritual sense their descendants would be found anywhere and everywhere,—

> "From Greenland's icy mountains,
> From India's coral strand,
> Where Afric's sunny fountains
> Roll down their golden sand," belonging to no nation in particular, and that by Israel would be meant every child of Shem, Ham, or Japhet, who believed in the Lord Jesus Christ?"

What reply would our antagonists give to such remarks? We maintain that they accuse the great God of using language intended to deceive His own chosen friend Abraham and His servants of old, if He did not intend to bestow on their descendants the earthly blessings and privileges which they must have understood to be meant by His promises to them. Awful thoughts! as abhorrent, we know, to our opponents as to ourselves. But how do they escape from the dilemma in which their own views place them?

It may be said that generation after generation of earnest, prayerful Bible students have interpreted the Scriptures as do our opponents, and were uninjured thereby. We think that till God says let there be light, darkness, and even error may be comparatively harmless. But when daylight comes, if the eyes are closed to it, the voluntary blindness becomes full of a danger that was warded off by an Almighty hand, as long as the seeing was not in the man's power. Just as good men could be slave-holders, yet prayerful and holy in their lives, before the veil was lifted up which showed slavery to be a wickedness and a curse, inconsistent with Christianity. Now that the darkness that hid the face of Israel is giving place to light, those who prefer the former expose themselves to dangers from which an involuntary ignorance had previously preserved them, and they blunt their own weapons with which they would assail our common foe, the scoffer at the Word of God.

April 6, 1881.

BANNER SUPPLEMENTS.

We acknowledge, with thanks, towards the August Supplement:—

	£	s.	d.
From N. Betham, of Sark, Channel Islands ...	0	2	0
From H., of Bridge of Allan	0	1	0
From Captain H. P. Keighly...	0	1	0

Our next Supplement will be issued with the Banner for May 18th. Will our readers kindly bring this number under the notice of all persons interested in our Identity with Lost Israel?

Digitized by Google

BLIND EVIDENCE.

"The Working Men's Protestant League," which is itself an Identity, resolved to issue a paper on and from November 1, 1880, price one penny, entitled, "The Protester Against Romanism, Ritualism, and Infidelity." All honour to the working men who resolve thus to become "witnesses" for God, therefore Israelites, whose function alone it is so to testify (Isa. xliii. 10—12, xliv. 8).

But why have the working men headed their prospectus as they have? At the top of the page occur these words, taken from Dent. vi. 4; Mark xii. 29: "Hear, O Israel! The Lord our God is one Lord." The words are addressed to the British public by the working men. Are they aware the British are Israel? It would seem so, unless the working men are blind, and are testifying blindly to the British Hebrew origin.

Again, why in the body of the prospectus are the words, to be found in Zech. iii. 5, 6, entered? "The Angel of the Lord stood by, and the Angel of the Lord protested unto Joshua." These were the words of a Hebrew prophet writing to the Jews (chap. i. 2—6, 19, &c.), and we should be glad to know how the "Working Men's Protestant League" think they are applicable to modern British folk apart from our Identity? We Israelites know they do apply, but we much question if our "blind" friends could explain how.

ISRAEL'S LITTLE WARS.

The Times is in despair about this country's constant troubles at the ends of the earth. On February 7, and again on March 23, 1881, the leading journal enumerated a list of our petty wars, which it says drain away our resources. The countries for which we have successively to fight, it was admitted in these articles, constitute an "Empire grand and enormously advantageous to her subjects;" but then, as they are a perpetual anxiety to ourselves, the unexpressed but suggested alternative is just the one we have always attributed to Mr. Gladstone and his Government of the day—namely, that the burdens of this extended Empire are greater than the accruing profits, and we were better without, than with its responsibilities. Let any one read the first article we allude to, and say if that be not the gravamen of the leader? We quote a few sentences from the same to enable our readers to judge. They are as follows:—

> Are we for ever to be pestered with these little useless wars? We can gain nothing by them, not even the credit of a military success. They stand simply for so much waste of our national strength. Singly, they are not much; it is the number and the regular succession of them that make them a real nuisance which we should be glad, if possible, to get rid of. That we should be engaged in them from time to time at some part of the world or another, seems one of the conditions on which our extended Empire must be held. The effect of them is to fritter away our resources in doing what is nothing worth. Africa has been the fruitful mother of wars of this kind. In South Africa we have had very lately the Transkei war; the Zulu war with its appendages in the form of expeditions against individual native chiefs; the Basuto war; and now the war in the Transvaal. Things on the Gold Coast have been quiet for some time. Since Coomassie was burnt we have been free from any other drain than that involved in the retention of the coast. We may now have again to fight for our position there. India is not yet quiet. The latest news from the Sonthal district is said to be favourable—a statement which we must so interpret as to agree with another telegram to the effect that troops which were about to be sent to South Africa, have been retained by the Indian Government with a view to their service in Sonthalistan. We have, it is clear, so many vulnerable points that we should do well not needlessly to add to them. They grow as our Empire grows. This is not after the fashion of the United States or of Russia. These countries grow and spread conterminously. Their extension is by the incorporation of new districts into a main body, which is homogeneous throughout. All come under the same military rules. There is the same Custom-house system for them all. They form, in short, old and new together, one State. England grows in another way, by taking on patches of territory, divided from one another, and far distant from herself. She thrusts out, as it were, her tentacles into all parts of the world, and she is very sensitive at each point to which they reach. Her Empire, grand as it is, and enormously advantageous to her subjects, is thus no small source of perpetual anxiety to herself. At any moment the horizon may be clouded in some quarter, and a storm may gather from causes which are neither to be foreseen nor guarded against. She is apt thus to be diverted from attention to her own affairs by the constant need of attending to the affairs of other people, for whom she has been kind enough to make herself responsible. Her entire strength can never be brought to bear on a supreme effort near home. Her stroke can be weakened, and her fire, so to say, can be drawn by a hostile demonstration, or by the talk of a hostile demonstration at her extreme distant possessions.

The testimony of the leading journal is in accordance with the prophetic destiny of Israel in the latter day. The Lord declared He would in the last times—our day—scatter the power or forces of the holy people, British-Israel (Dan. xii. 7), and what means so well adapted to that end as to raise up petty wars, and commotions requiring our troops to move out against the insurgents in the Transkei, in Zululand, in Basutoland, in the Transvaal, in Ashantee, in Afghanistan, in Sonthalistan, in Ireland? In each and all these places British supremacy was lately, and is, threatened, and Israel's "power" is required to be used to maintain the Empire God has given her, and which—grumble about, or resist it as we may—we shall be forced to uphold to carry out His purposes. The Times compares the compact empires of Russia and the United States with our own, and with envious, earthborn, sordid jealousy wishes ours had been an empire like theirs, and would willingly renounce the glorious world-wide tactically-placed possessions, surrounding the Gentile world (Deut. xxxii. 8), God has given us, that we might be like them, that our pockets might be saved the expense, and that we might not be vexed with the petty warfare we have to wage to-day, according to the will of God. The Times does not see or wish to know that this nation, being Israel, she has to acquire just the sort of empire we have in the four quarters of the globe, in order that we may fulfil the prophecies; that seizing the distant possessions by our outstretched "tentacles" we may establish there our "Gates," the pledges of our further, and yet further conquests, till the world itself shall be our own, and the promise to Abraham and his seed of the heirship of the planet be fulfilled in us as the Ten-Tribed remnant of his seed, now living under grace, and in the prescribed righteousness of the faith of Christ (Rom. iv. 13, 14, 16).

The Times desires as the acme of human political bliss and well-being that we should have our attention concentrated on our home, parochial affairs, without the distraction which outland empire in Europe, Asia, Africa, America, and the islands of the sea necessarily entails. But God, we may be sure, has given Israel her Empire, such as it is; and with growing territorial extent He has granted her also increasing population to fill it, enormously enlarged wealth to pay for it, the heart, and power, and wisdom to administer it; and the courage in our men, both in the Cabinet and in the battle-field, to fight for and maintain it intact. And why? That He may establish His covenant, which He sware unto our fathers, as it is this day" (Deut. viii. 18). We may be sure then that we must fulfil our destiny, and continue to fight our battles bravely and faithfully till the Lord gives us rest from our enemies and establishes His covenant with us as He promised, to enable us to inherit the earth.

The Times complains of God's providence, which dissipates the nation's strength abroad in such wise that it "can never be brought to bear on a supreme effort near home" (meaning, of course, the Eastern Question). But this is just what God (for our good) means to prevent us doing! He tells us to enter into our chambers, shut our Gates about us, hide ourselves for a little moment, as it were, till the "indignation" be overpast (Isa. xxvi. 20). By this means we shall effectually be hindered from meddling in the Eastern Question what time the nations of yonder hapless Europe are locked in their deadly mortal strife wherein God means to prevent Israel interfering in the slightest degree. We thank God then that the state Craft is under the Lord's direction, and not in the keeping of the editor of the Times, for had the latter now the power to carry out his will, our nation would be, if not without our colonies and foreign Gates, at least without honour or authority there. Our troops would be involved in the destruction about to fall upon the nations of the continent of Europe; and instead of world-wide dominion, prosperity, and honour, which are to be Israel's portion in the closely approaching future, ours would then be the ruin, and destruction, which God's sure word says shall be that of the kingdoms and nations of the earth; and we had missed those glorious, gracious promises, which after the present trials are over, are guaranteed to God's people by their omnipotent covenant Head (Zeph. iii. 9; 2 Peter iii. 13; Isa. xlii. 16; xli. 8—16). Israel! praise ye the Lord, even for the petty wars, peace with dishonour, and other troubles through which you are passing now!

Digitized by Google

"OUR IDENTITY" IN SELKIRK, NORTH BRITAIN.

In the old U. P. Church, Fleshmarket, Selkirk, a lecture was delivered by Dr. Edward Evatt, on the evening of April 21st, on "The Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes of the House of Israel." The chair was occupied by Rev. Edmund Lane, D.C.L. The lecturer commenced by pointing out the carefully-drawn distinction which the Bible sets forth as existing between the Ten-Tribed House of Israel and the Two-Tribed House of Judah. Isa. lxv. 13—15 was then quoted as one of many passages in the Scriptures which prove that the blessings upon the House of Israel and the curses upon the House of Judah were to take place contemporaneously. The ancestors of the British were then shown to have come from the very parts where the Assyrians carried the House of Israel captive in the eighth century before Christ. The House of Judah did not go into captivity until the sixth century before Christ; their captivity was partial, and only lasted 70 years, whilst that of the House of Israel was complete, and they have never yet returned. The shepherds of Israel of the present day were then compared to the House of Judah in the days of Christ. The latter had Christ walking amongst them, and they knew Him not: whilst the former have in fulfilment before their eyes almost all the glorious promises of things both spiritual and temporal which God made to Abraham, and they likewise cannot see that the British are God's chosen people, Israel of the Ten Tribes. Some of the promises to Abraham's seed were then mentioned—viz.:—

1. The sign of the multitudinous seed.
2. The possession of abnormal wealth.
3. Lending to all nations and borrowing from none.
4. Possessing the Gates of their enemies.
5. Sabbath-keeping people.
6. A missionary nation.
7. The only successful coloniser among the nations.
8. In possession of the ends, the uttermost parts of the earth, the sides and coasts of the earth: all which were shown to be in actual possession by the British nation to-day.

Hosea i. 10 was then quoted as proving that Israel could only become as the sand of the sea-shore for multitude during their outcast, Gentilised condition, and also that at this time was being fulfilled that prophecy which declares: "And it shall come to pass that in the place where it shall be said unto them, Ye are not My people; there it shall be said unto them: Ye are the sons of the living God." Amongst the foremost of those who cry out at this time that the British are not Israel is Dr. Horatius Bonar, the blindest of all the blind shepherds of Israel. The Tribe of Dan was then traced to the North of Ireland. The Normans were proved to be the Tribe of Benjamin. The stone in Westminster Abbey, under the coronation chair, was shown to be none other than the veritable stone upon which Jacob pillowed his head outside the gates of Luz, and which was converted into a seal of witness between God and Jacob. Many other points were dwelt upon, which space does not permit us to record.

The lecturer concluded by drawing attention to the numerous pamphlets, leaflets, &c., which were distributed throughout the pews, amongst them being the leading Identity journal, entitled the BANNER OF ISRAEL. The lecture occupied one hour and five minutes in delivery, and was listened to throughout with rapt attention. At the close a vote of thanks was proposed to both lecturer and chairman.

THE CHELTENHAM ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

THE monthly meeting of the Cheltenham Anglo-Israel Association was held on Monday, February 28th, when the President, Surgeon-General Grant, read a paper entitled "Further Scriptural Proofs," being a continuation of his former lecture on Anglo-Israel teaching. The present lecture, like the former, was in reply to strictures which had appeared in the public press in connection with the secession of the Rev. B. W. Savile. Dr. Grant maintained that the reasons given by that gentleman for his secession were altogether invalid; and combatted, from Gen. xlviii. 19, the statement that all God's promises to the seed of Abraham were fulfilled before the coming of Christ. He also dwelt at length upon the fact so clearly established by the Rev. C. W. Hickson, that the word "Gentile" is frequently applied to Israel of the Ten Tribes in the Scriptures; and showed, from Matt. xv. 24 and Mark vii. 27, that the Gentiles have not been constituted propagators of the Gospel, to the exclusion or casting away of God's people; and that as the Jews have not accepted Christ, the children who must be filled with the blessings which He came to communicate first—that is, before the Gentiles, as represented by the Greek or Canaanite Gentile woman—can be no other than the Ten-Tribed House of Israel.

A correspondence was afterwards read, in which the President defended some of the Anglo-Israel leaders, and the body generally, against the attacks of an unknown correspondent at Hull, who had naïvely remarked, inter alia fulmina, that he had sold a hundred pamphlets in Cheltenham which would, no doubt, put a stop to the spread of the theory there. A vote of thanks to the lecturer having been proposed by General Ford, and a benediction pronounced by the Rev. W. Miller, the proceedings terminated.

Correspondence.

ILL-CONSOLIDATED EUROPE.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—The news of the Czar's death, by cable to-day, will have a very marked effect upon public opinion in regard to the Identity and Pyramid dates, as prophesying the forthcoming war in yonder "ill-consolidated Europe," and will, I trust add many to our belief.

There is a very general belief in Germany that the heir to the throne of Russia was determined to crush them; and shortly after the Franco-German war, a German friend of mine told me that when the Czarewitch was destined for some Southern point (I forget which), the most direct route to which lay through Germany, went a roundabout way through France, saying to his suite, that he "would never tread on German soil unless as a conqueror." This saying has been confirmed to me by other Germans since, and they all look for war as the result of his elevation to the throne.

Now let us look at the consequences. Europe is armed to the teeth. Russia, to free herself from Nihilism (and she is not ready yet to grant their terms) must engage in a war to keep things quiet at home. She will have to fight Germany, and her natural ally, Austria, would have to help her even if no alliance existed. France is not likely to lose such a chance of recovering her lost territory, and Italy will be not less backward in attacking Austria for hers—i.e., "Two against three, and three against two;" the two will get worsted, and the three will be not much better off. My modest opinion is that contemporaneously Turkey versus Greece, Bulgaria, and Roumelia, will be fighting like the Kilkenny cats, and with a similar result.

After the storm, Europe will awake to find Asia Minor in possession of England, and Constantinople also. Then the rage will begin in earnest, and all continental Europe will join forces against her. The result of this will be the battle of Armageddon. If such be the case, we know what the end will be.

By that time let us hope that England and her colonies will be firmly united, with the United States, in firm alliance, for the forces will be the Anglo-Saxon race against the world; and who can doubt the result?

A BENT OAR.

Montreal, March 14.

WE understand that Mr. W. Greig, of Toronto, brother of our friend Mr. John Greig, of Sunderland, will shortly publish a pamphlet on the Lost Ten Tribes. It will be issued in London by Mr. Banks.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING

OF THE

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION

Will be held (D.V.) in the

LOWER ROOM AT EXETER HALL,

ON FRIDAY, MAY 20TH, AT 7 P.M.

CHAIRMAN:

THE

RT. HON. VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.,

President of the Association.

SPEAKERS:

MR. E. W. BIRD (PHILO-ISRAEL), Bristol.

MR. DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P., London.

THE REV. C. W. HICKSON, M.A., Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, Bristol.

THE REV. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE, M.A., Vicar of Oldham.

MR. F. C. DANVERS, London.

THE REV. R. HILL, B.A., London.

All Identity believers are earnestly solicited to attend and to bring their friends.

NO CARDS WILL BE ISSUED. ADMISSION FREE.

The General Meeting of the Association for MEMBERS ONLY and DELEGATES FROM AFFILIATED ASSOCIATIONS will be held at the BOARD ROOM, 334, STRAND, at 3 p.m. on the same day.

JOHN S. ANDERSON, Hon. Sec.

Stiff paper cover, price 6d., by post 7d.

THE NEW OLD STORY; With a Slight INTRODUCTION TO A MARVELLOUS PUZZLE.

BY A E I.

A Book specially written for Children on our Identity with Lost Israel.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Price 2d.; Annual Subscription, 2s. 6d.

ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.

Editor: Douglas A. Onslow, J.P.

The following is extracted from a letter from Mr. G. N. Walsh, of Sheffield to the Editor of Israel's Hope and Destiny, in reference to the last number of that monthly: "I must congratulate you on your second paper in this (April) month's Hope and Destiny. It is clear, argumentative, concise, and telling and puts the true character of redemption in the clearest light. I consider the present number one of the most readable—perhaps the most readable—of all that have been issued."

The May number is now ready, and may be obtained of any bookseller, or of the Publishers.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street. W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Just published, price 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

THE LATE SIR CHARLES REED.

A Life-Sketch as a Business man, a Citizen, a Statesman, an Educationist, and a Philanthropist. To which is added his Decease and Funeral. With splendid Photographic Portrait.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet court, Fleet-street.

NEW PAMPHLET ON THE IDENTITY OF THE LOST TEN TRIBES FOR UNIVERSAL CIRCULATION.

The Best Pamphlet to place in the hands of a person unacquainted with the subject.

Price 6d., by post 7d. 64 Demy 8vo. pages, in wrapper. One dozen copies sent free for a post office order for 6s.

FIFTY REASONS

WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES

OF THE LOST TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL.

BY REV. W. H. POOLE, D.D.

"There is a principle which is a bar against all information, which is proof against all argument, and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance. This principle is, contempt prior to examination."—Dr. Paley.

A greater than Paley has said:—"He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is a folly and a shame unto him."—Prov. xviii.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,

High-Class Tailor,

47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.

MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

PHILO-ISRAEL'S BOOK FOR CHILDREN.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth, gilt, 1s. Post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Third Edition.

AN ELEMENTARY DIGEST OR SKETCH OF THE CHIEF FACTS AND TEACHINGS OF THE GREAT PYRAMID OF EGYPT. Adapted to the Unlearned and Unscientific. 56 pages. Illustrated with Diagrams. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d., post free 5d.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? An Inquiry establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d.

Price 2d., post free 3d.

THE HISTORICAL, ETHNIC, AND PHILOLOGICAL ARGUMENTS in PROOF of BRITISH IDENTITY with the TEN LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL, clearly and simply stated. By PHILO-ISRAEL.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters." By PHILO-ISRAEL.

A RESUME OF THE SCRIPTURAL ARGUMENT, Proving the Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 1d.; 6s. per 100.

By PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE BRITISH CONSTITUTION AND ISRAEL'S POLICY (Foreign and Domestic). Followed by "A NECESSARY CONSEQUENCE," by L. P. Part I.—"The British Constitution."—A Sign. Part II.—Our Home and Foreign Policy as the House of Israel. Part III.—The Constitutions of Gentile Nations. Price 3d., post free 3d.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION. 1 to 9; 1s. per 100.

London:

ROBERT BANKS, Racquet Court, Fleet Street.

Visitors to London, and all persons interested in Religious and Benevolent Institutions, should procure a copy of the

ABC CHURCH AND CHAPEL DIRECTORY,

AND

MAY MEETING HAND-BOOK FOR 1881.

Containing the most complete list of MAY Meetings published. Also a List of Protestant places of Worship in and around London. Price 2d., post free 3d.

The Record says: "A well-arranged list of all the London and Suburban Protestant places of Worship, with the clergy who officiate, services, &c. Exceedingly useful."

London: ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

B. SCOTT'S ESSAY on NATURAL MEDICINES. "Should be read by every one afflicted."—So writes a Clergyman in Lancashire. Post free five stamps. R. V. Scott, 121, Kensington, Liverpool.

Price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome, cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES AND 1882.

BY THE

REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD,

Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

PHILO-ISRAEL (in the BANNER) says:—"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome Identity volume. It contains twenty discourses of the well-known American divine, Dr. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, N.Y. We are glad to find from these discourses that Dr. Wild is quite one with us on this side the water with most, though not all the views we entertain on our great and glorious subject.... We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and 'American' point of view, which is sure to interest, sure to be instructive, and may lead the thoughtless and inquiring to pursue the investigation till possibly conviction may be the result.'

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

384 Demy 8vo pages, in handsome cloth, gilt, price 3s. 6d by post 4s.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.

Edited by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.

This Volume contains Papers on all Points of the Identity of the British People with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel.

Second Edition now ready, price 2d., post free 2½d., 12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

AMMI; or, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE

BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham the "friend of God," and showing that true science history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

By REV. JOSEPH WILD, D.D.

With a Portrait of the Author.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Just out, 8d., post free 9d.

ISRAEL NOTWITHSTANDING: Being the Second and concluding Part of the Earnest Appeal from the Pew to the Pulpit. By JOHN G. SHAW, Author of "Britain (or Israel)," &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, MAY 11, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 229. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MAY 18, 1881. [WITH SUPPLEMENT, ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Invasion of England	201
The God of Israel	202
Pyramid Symbology.—Part II. By A Watcher	203
Israel's Home Blossoms and Buds	204
Report of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association	205
The Question Concerning a Personal Anti-Christ. By the Rev. Denis Hanan, M.A.	205
Our Opponents' Differences and Contradictions	206
The Language of the Israelites. By J. F. Nelson	206
The House of Judah "Walking towards" the House of Israel (Jer. iii. 18)	207
The Ten Commandments	207
The Decimal System	208
An Indian Letter on Grand Gallery Interpretations in the Great Pyramid	208
Judah Portrayed in the Parables of our Lord	209
A Continuous Chord. By L. P.	209
A Toronto Opponent	210
The Head and Not the Tail in Regard to the Commerce of the World	210
More "Blind" Evidence	211
Review, Correspondence	211

THE INVASION OF ENGLAND.

IT has already come to that! This haughty Israel, whose lead and supremacy the nations in 1878 fully admitted, and who welcomed him who brought them "peace with honour," when the late lamented Lord Beaconsfield returned in triumph from the Berlin Conference, is already threatened with a German invasion and conquest by a captain of the Austrian army—a Captain Kirchhammer. This officer has been writing in one of the British magazines to explain to us how worthless in effect our army is, how weak our navy (otherwise superb) has really become, by reason of our outland, distant, world-wide scattered Empire; and how easy it will be by-and-bye, when Germany desires to annex or humble England, to land 50,000 troops and destroy our total available 49,000 regular soldiery, the only defence Great Britain has. When foreigners begin to write like this we perceive that the nation's prestige is falling low; but when they insult the majesty of the Empire's power by presuming to publish their follies in an English magazine, it is a sign that they believe, at any rate, the decadence of this nation has commenced, that she has fallen from her lofty position as the "chief of nations," and that even Austria or Germany, which have no navy at all to speak of, can with impunity administer to this presently much-enduring race the last aggravation of insult due to those who prefer "peace with dishonour," and are willing to dismember the Empire rather than by risk of expenditure of blood and treasure to defend it. Captain Kirchhammer admitted that "our ironclad fleet is one-third stronger than that of France, our only serious rival in European water; the tonnage of our steam merchant fleet is equal to that of all the other naval Powers combined, and no other country has an equal capacity for building, equipping, and manning a navy at short notice. But great as is the navy of Great Britain taken absolutely, its tasks are far greater than its power, called upon as it is to contend with foreign fleets, to protect British and capture foreign merchant vessels sailing upon every sea, to secure our communications between the single parts of the United Kingdom, and between the United Kingdom and its colonies, to support the land troops in protecting the mother country and its foreign possessions, as well as, finally, to carry on offensive warfare, and, therefore, in comparing foreign navies with our own, we must compare them not with the entire navy of Great Britain, but with the particular portion of our navy that can be spared to defeat the particular object which this or that other Power may have in view. Thus, in the Mediterranean, France is far stronger than Great Britain, and the Mediterranean is the English high-road to India. Yet to guard this road, Great Britain has, in time of peace, only seven ironclads. On the whole expanse of the Atlantic Ocean we have only one ironclad. So long as the navy of the United States remains as weak as it is, this may be sufficient; but Captain Kirchhammer tells us that during the War of Secession the Americans raised themselves in one year to the first rank among naval Powers, while 'at the end of the war their fleet consisted of no fewer than 761 ships of war, including 71 ironclads.' In the Pacific Great Britain is equally weak, and throughout the whole extent of Chinese, Australian, and American waters we have only two ironclads. The result of this deficiency of ships of war would be that in the event of a maritime war we should find it necessary, as the Americans did during their war, to denationalise our merchant fleet and to look after our own shores. Captain Kirchhammer believes that we should have all our work cut out for us to do even this, because the excessive diversity of the services which the English navy has to discharge might easily reduce the ships available for home defence at a given moment to a number less than that which an invading Power could equip as an escort to her transports. And supposing these available ships to be defeated in action, Captain Kirchhammer thinks that fourteen days 'would suffice for 50,000 German troops not merely to be embarked, but also to be landed in England;' and where should we be then? Captain Kirchhammer dismisses the volunteers and militia off hand as unfit for a campaign, and in dealing with the regular army and reserves stationed in England, he deducts 44 per cent. as from various causes unfit for service, thus arriving at 49,000 men as the total number that would be available, 'leaving out of consideration the reinforcements of the garrisons of Scotland and Ireland,' and 'admitting even, what is practically impossible, that the entire existing force should be concentrated on one point.' Thus the invading army would have the advantage of numbers, and, by a single victory, might command London, Woolwich, Chatham, and Portsmouth."

Digitized by Google

This, and a good deal more, is Captain Kirchhammer's outlook for this country, and no doubt if this nation were a Gentile Power, he has facts, probability, and everything else, on his side. We are not armed as other nations are. Given favourable circumstances, and a landing effected by 50,000 German troops on Israel's shores, then our boasted soldiery who "cannot" (the Boers tell us) "shoot a bit," might fare very badly, and the nation be undone. Everything is possible for a Gentile nation if God wills its destruction. But what Captain Kirchhammer proposes for our consideration in England is just as impossible as the destruction of God's own throne in heaven, because of the fact which the Austrian captain never dreams of, and our British opponents and clergy deride and ridicule—namely, our Israelitish origin. God has guaranteed our safety in these islands, and has bade us rest assured that here, in our own "heaven-appointed place," we shall "dwell in safety"—the children of wickedness afflicting us no more, as once they afflicted us in the Holy Land (2 Sam. vii. 10). For British-Israel, then, there shall be no invasion by foreign German Gentile foes, for ever more. It matters not for the purposes of defence, whether our fleets be ready to prevent a landing and be absent from the home station at the supreme moment; or whether our soldiers can shoot or not. "He that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep" (Psa. cxxi. 4), and our "keeper" is not the British army, not the British navy, nor the British volunteers; but solely and simply the God of Israel, the living God, our covenant Jehovah. We fear not Captain Kirchhammer's threats, then; nor believe in the day dreams of a German invasion, which the Spanish Armada and Napoleon the Great found impossible, and which for a thousand years has been just the one thing unattainable by our Gentile enemies, because God has declared it shall never be. God being our Defender, we know that all things have worked, are working, and will yet work for Israel's advancement in the national course God has marked out for His chosen people.

For the present, it may be that, by reason of our rulers' operations, this nation is debased, humbled, and lowered in the eyes of Gentile Powers, the object being that she may be so depreciated and so contemned that when "the great earthquake woe" breaks out in "yonder ill-consolidated Europe," Israel may be disregarded by the European nations, forced by circumstances to hide herself for very shame in her own chambers; to shut and bar and lock her Gates behind her, what time the floods of fiery vengeance from the God of heaven are justly poured out upon the earthly ones who, despising God's own people, thought and think to rob and spoil them. Little will such then reck of injuring God's heritage and inheritance! for the heavy hand of our God's "determination" will be then pressing on their own bodies politic, and no time will be given them in that dread hour to carry out designs which now it pleases them to contemplate as easy to Israel's disadvantage (Zeph. iii. 8; Isa. xxvi. 20, 21; 2 Peter iii. 4—14; Rev. xvi. 18). Israel, fear not! Our God is with us, and He will be our exceeding great reward. Let Isa. xvii. 12—14 and xli. 10—14 be our comfort and our consolation; for these words were written to sustain us now in our national depression, and the burden of them all is, "Fear not;" "Fear not, ye men of Israel, I will help thee, saith the Lord; and thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel." Praise ye the Lord!

BANNER SUPPLEMENTS.—We acknowledge, with thanks, the following sums: Henry Leslie, Esq. £2; Mrs. F. P., London, £1 1s.; C. M. G., Londonderry, 1s.; Miss Sharpe, Brighton, 1s.; Three Friends at Lymington, 5s.

THE GOD OF ISRAEL.

WE are too apt to forget that the Lord Almighty, our God and Father in Jesus Christ, has consistently through the divine record of His Word, deigned to call Himself, and desires always to be known, by the name of "the God of Israel." He is not desirous to be known as "the God of the Gentiles," or "the God of the Jews." His name always has, and always will be, as selected and appropriated, and published by Himself, "the God of Israel." It is worth considering how this has come to pass, and why the selection has been made, and how it can be an appropriate name for the Being "who changeth not," if the nationality of Israel has been lost or merged in that of the modern Jew, or transferred as a fact, with all the attendant blessings, to a body called "the Christian Church," whose name certainly is not "Israel," as described in the Word of God, nor one which in common parlance can be said to be so called or known. The expression occurs about twenty-eight times in the Scriptures, and the enumeration of these passages will be instructive.

The first appears to be Exod. xxiv. 9, 10, a solemn occasion, when God Himself appeared to Moses, Aaron, and the seventy elders of Israel. The God they saw then was "the God of Israel." (Compare Gen. xxxii. 30, Exod. iii. 6).

2. In Numbers xvi. 9, Moses described the Lord Jehovah as "the God of Israel."

3. In the matter of Achan we find that wretched man adjured by Joshua (chap. vii. 19) to give glory to Jehovah, "God of Israel."

4. Glory is again prescribed as due to "the God of Israel" (1 Sam. vi. 5).

5. "Jehovah, the God of Israel," is declared to be the inheritance of the Tribe of Levi in Josh. xiii. 33.

6. "The God of Israel" is plainly stated to be "Jehovah" in Joshua xxii. 16, 24.

7. Joshua told the people to turn to "Jehovah, God of Israel," in chap. xxiv. 23.

8. "Jehovah, the God of Israel," is described in Judges xi. 23, as He who had dispossessed the Amorites.

9. In Ruth ii. 12, "the Lord God of Israel" is again declared to be Jehovah.

10. In 1 Sam. i. 17, "the God of Israel" is said to be the hearer of prayer.

11. The Philistines described the ark as that of "the God of Israel" (1 Sam. v. 11).

12. Solomon, in his prayer (1 Kings viii. 23, 25, 26, &c.), called on the LORD as "the God of Israel" (2 Chron. vi. 14).

13. Jehovah is described as "the God of Israel" in 1 Kings xiv. 13.

To avoid tedium we ask our readers to refer to the following additional passages to prove the uniform testimony that the Scriptures constantly recognise the Lord Jehovah as "the God of Israel:" 1 Chron. iv. 10, xvii. 24; 2 Chron. xv. 13; Ezra vii. 15, ix. 4; Psa. xli. 13, lxxii. 18, cvi. 48; Luke i. 68; Isa. xli. 17, xlv. 3, xlviii. 2; Ezek. viii. 4; Matt. xv. 31.

The evidence, therefore, is complete. In the Old, and also in the New Testaments, God is known, and delights to be known by the blessed and glorious name of "the God of Israel." Is He the God of a dead nation? of a lost and forgotten people? of one He knows no more? Nay, nay! that were impossible! For the Lord Jehovah changeth not (Num. xxiii. 19; Mal. iii. 6; Rom. xi. 29). Besides, the Lord Jesus, who was Jehovah, was Himself called "the King of Israel" (John i. 49; Matt. xxvii. 42), in addition to the title He claimed, and which was the accusation and alleged crime that caused His cruel death—namely, "the King of the Jews" (Matt. xxvii. 11, 37).

Being then "the God of Israel," He remains Israel's God for ever, a fact which carries with it Israel's national existence for ever (2 Sam. vii. 24). With this deduction the Word of God perfectly agrees, for it repeats in every form of assurance that the House of Israel has never perished, nor been really lost, nor been amalgamated either with the Gentiles, or with the Jews. It asserts, on the contrary, that in these "latter days" Israel is fulfilling her destinies, and answering to the prophecies (Gen. xlix.; Jer. xxx. 24, xxxi. 1, &c.), that she is hidden among the Gentiles, buried, concealed, but ready to be revealed (Hosea viii. 8; Ezek. xxxvii. 1—15; Psa. lxxxiii. 3; Luke ii. 32); that she is in the Isles of the West (Isa. xxiv. 15), in her "house in the North country" (Jer. iii. 18), in the West (Hosea xi. 10; Isa. xlix. 12), in the wilderness (Hosea ii. 14). It plainly declares to us also, that the House of Israel is now an "innumerable," multitudinous race, called in its present domicile by some of its persistent enemies "Lo-Ammi," (not God's people), but at the same time admitted there to be "the Christian nation" (Hosea i. 10). God's Word speaks of Israel existing "in the place of God's appointment," secure from its enemies, invincible there, dominant, mistress of the seas, holder of the Gates of the world, with an immense heathen, and a grand colonial Empire, developing rapidly into "a multitude of nations," a Sabbath-keeping, missionary people, lovers of the Decalogue; generous; inconceivably wealthy, "blossoming, and budding, and filling the face of the world with fruit" (2 Sam. vii. 10; Dan. vii. 27; Gen. xxii. 17; Psa. ii. 8; Isa. xlix. 8; Gen. xxxv. 11, xlviii. 19; Rom. xi. 25; Exod. xxxi. 13, 17; Deut. vi. 7—9, viii. 18; Isa. xxvii. 6).

Digitized by Google

Where can we find a nation answering in all ways to the above wondrous portrait? Nowhere but in the British Empire. There alone is Israel perfectly represented, and there Lost Israel is now discovered exactly responding to all the marks and tokens God put upon her 3,000 years ago. Of such a race God Almighty, our blessed Jesus, the great Jehovah deigns to be called "the God." His name, which He Himself has taught us to know Him by, and call Him, is "the God" of this very "Israel." When God puts such honour upon a people, is it right for us to contemn and despise the name, or the race who bears it? Is it right for our opponents, in their passionate desire to destroy our faith, to speak evil of that favoured race, whose very name is so honoured that God Himself is not ashamed to be known by it to all Intelligences, and all created beings? We thank God for the testimony He Himself gives us in His Word regarding the inexpressible importance of the very name of Israel. How then must the God of Israel love His people! They are His people, and He their God. He is about to give them His new covenant (Jer. xxxi. 33; Heb. viii. 10), and enter into new espousals with His beloved, His elect one, His Church, Israel. "For I am married to you," He says, and this nation, and this alone, is Jesus' Bride. Israel, praise ye the God of Israel, the Triune God of your redemption! (Jer. iii. 14; Isa. liv. 5; Rev. xix. 7; Hosea ii. 14—16; Eph. i. 22, 23; v. 27—33).

PYRAMID SYMBOLOGY.

By A Watcher.

(Concluded from page 181.)

PART II.

No prophecy is ever fulfilled in an instant, and in most of the fulfilled prophecies it seems difficult to decide the exact point of its completion. The 1,260 years of the Papal power ran out in 1867, and probably the fiat against it went forth at an early stage of Victor Emmanuel's conquests. If Dr. Cumming had named "the end of the Pope," instead of the world, he would have passed for a true prophet; but, like all other expositors, he concluded that the Roman anti-Christ was the principal one, and ruled all prophecy. The Pyramid, on the other hand, deals with Mahomet alone, and has no points for any of the Papal crises.

If we think this out we shall see the meaning of it. First, we must compare these two enemies. Rome has all the outward semblance of a true Church. She worships the Holy Trinity, trusts to Christ's sacrifice for salvation, receives the three creeds, apostolic orders, and the Holy Scriptures. She has overlaid most of these truths with grievous traditions and superstitions, has closed the Scriptures, and intruded human mediators between the Saviour and His flock; but still she names Christ as her salvation. We cannot doubt that Thomas à Kempis, Pascal, and multitudes besides, have been saved by faith in His atoning blood. Many more, like Wickliffe, Luther, &c., have seen the truth and left her communion.

But can we say the same of Mahomet? Whilst Rome has exalted the blessed mother of Jesus into a demi-god, Mahomet has reduced Christ into a second or third-rate prophet. We are never told that "all generations shall call" Moses blessed, but the Moslems make him equal with the Son of God. They have rejected Him as completely as the Jews, for they know Him, but will not worship Him. Look again at the way they impede the progress of Christianity on the earth. There must be at least two Mahomedans and ten square miles to each one of Romanists. Half Africa, and all Central Asia, as well as the Ottoman dominions are peopled by them, and they are much scattered in other parts. Missionaries tell us that no creed is so hopeless to assail as that of Mahomet, and amongst no class are conversions so rare. No wonder, for they obey Mahomet better than Christians obey Christ, and have ample ground for despising us as empty professors.

Again, Scripture deals fully with the Roman heresy. Daniel (vii.), St. Paul (2 Thess. ii.), and St. John (Rev. xiii., xvii., xviii.) give such full descriptions that no candid mind can fail to see the likeness. But Mahomet is but lightly touched upon, and indistinctly described. It is this which has thrown commentators wrong as to the "end of the age;" but it is most suitable. Another of those exquisite fitnesses which charm us in the prophecies. Rome is the great enemy of the Scriptures and the truths they declare, so she is dealt with therein. She is the enemy of Israel's pure Church, so she is carefully contrasted with the woman in the wilderness, with the crown of twelve stars. But Mahomet was the enemy of Christianity itself. It swept the early Churches, the seven stars which Christ held in His hand (Rev. i. 16), clean off the face of the earth, and it swept His name out of Africa to the very foot of the Pyramid. That Pyramid was the most perfect emblem of the faith thus destroyed. Its pure white, polished casing-stones were "fitly framed together, growing unto a holy temple in the Lord;" a pillar of witness at the border of Egypt; little knowing that it contained the death warrant of the empire of their descendants, the Caliphs ruthlessly tore off and destroyed the emblem of Christ's Church, together with its reality and existence in the East. We cannot then wonder that it is the Building which prophesies of Mahomet, and the Book of Rome.

It is clear, then, that the end of the Gallery Roof, in 1878, was a great premonitory crisis in the Eastern Question and the Church of Anglo-Israel. The Sultan received his death blow from Russia, the eagles met over his carcase, and the lion of Judah placed his paw on Jerusalem and the Gate of gates. See Matt. xxiv. 28. Verse 29 was as distinctly fulfilled in the history of the Church. It describes the robings of the woman in the wilderness and the change which took place in them "immediately after" the gathering of the eagles. Her duration was to be 1,260 years, as well as Mahomet's. Their fall, described under the sixth seal (Rev. vi. 12, 13) and the sixth vial (Rev. xvi. 12) began at the edge of the Step in 1820; but increased in violence, joined by the sixth trumpet (Rev. ix. 13, 14) when we passed out of the Roof. Church and State are now only tied together by a bit of Parliamentary red tape, which must be severed very soon; and the utter disunion now tearing the Church will cause her to crumble up into many bodies. The candlestick of the English Church will be removed. This is symbolised by the fall of the stars of the angels of the Churches (Rev. i. 20), their glory departs and their purity is turned into blood, and "the powers of the heavens shall be shaken." Thus, we see, we are now confronting that impending South wall of the Grand Gallery, which threatens a crisis in the history of Christianity, as great as the incarnation of the Son of God; but in the opposite direction. The lowest overlapping is three and a-half inches, but another half inch is gained by the impending of the wall. This will bring us to June, 1882, as a probable time for some division of wheat from tares, righteous from wicked. But let us ever remember that we are not to know "the day or the hour," and that God works out His "bright designs" slowly and surely, though not always as man would have Him work. Also that the world knew nothing of that grand expansion of its light and glory which the Pyramid indicates at Christ's incarnation, neither will it be aware of the sudden loss of that glorious light when it passes into the low, level passage, which it is now rapidly approaching. Who is to go into it no man can predict. Certainly all who, when the crisis comes, have not got on the wedding garment, and whose eyes are not so strengthened by constantly looking at, and for their Lord, that they are able to endure the brightness that will surround the Sun of righteousness when He appears.

Digitized by Google

For those who are able, provision is made in a rough-hewn escape passage, leading out from the top of the Gallery roof. This rough hewing everywhere denotes something spiritual; but this the indestructable Church of Christ will be when it meets its Lord on Mount Sion. I do not see that the height of the doorway of this passage implies its being inaccessible to mortals, because the height of the Gallery does not denote distance so much as spiritual elevation, and the idea of escaping there would be the same as at the Exodus, and over the Jew passage. In each of these cases mortal men passed, in the flesh, to a higher and holier dispensation than what they were in before. Would not a restoration to the holy city, and a meeting there of Israel and Judah with their Lord and Master, be enough to satisfy the higher vault to the spiritual passage? Will not a life there of peace, rest and holiness—when Joseph and Judah have chosen themselves one head, who will rule them by just laws; a theocracy as complete, and a purity as perfect as paradise before the fall—be exactly what we may expect from that escape doorway? There are seventy-five years for those who escape to effect the restoration of Jerusalem, to prepare it for the millennium, which is beautifully represented by the granite Ante-Chamber. Possibly this will be directed by Elijah, or Abraham, or by Melchizedek himself. It is no use speculating on these things; only let us strive with all our energy to be found worthy to take part in this glorious work.

It has long appeared to me that the sealing of the 144,000 of Israel, and an innumerable multitude of all nations and tongues, has been going on for many years. It comes under the sixth seal (Rev. vii.), therefore on the platform, and I observe that most of those who accept Joseph in England readily have been prepared for the idea, by having been allowed to perceive the want of it. Either the light of their own reason, or some given light from above, has shown them that the interpretation which commentators put on God's promises to the patriarchs, as fulfilled in a spiritual Israel of the seed of Japheth, is utterly untenable by those who have any regard for the justice, truth, and faithfulness of Almighty God. It is curious, too, that I have never met with anyone who has puzzled himself into infidelity on this point, as thousands have done on more trivial difficulties in Scripture history and facts. It seems as if this clear-sightedness was a gift, and with it came strength to watch and wait till light was granted. Therefore I suspect it was a mark of the seal, and a sign of selection to partake of the blessing of escape to Jerusalem.

It has been suggested by admirers of "The Approaching End of the Age" that Mr. Elliott and Mr. Grattan Guinness are those appointed to raise the cry, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh." But all Pyramidists and Anglo-Israelites must admit that the cry came on higher authority when it was drawn out of that mighty building which had stored it up for thousands of ages, that it might now peal forth to us with accumulated power. Beware of trusting to blind guides who think to interpret prophecy without an inspired key. Mr. Guinness tells us that as 1848 and 1870 have brought trouble to the Pope alone, we must wait till 1919 for any further manifestations. If the catastrophe of 1882 is to be as sudden and terrible as Rev. Denis Hanan warns us it is to be, in his admirable paper in the BANNER of February 23. 1881, where will those be who have postponed their cry till 1919?

ISRAEL'S HOME BLOSSOMS AND BUDS.

(Continued from page 26.)

PART III.

HAVE our readers ever heard of "The Theatrical Mission?" We had not, till August, 1880, when we saw its hon. secretary, Mr. C. Edward Todd, of 118, Grove-lane, Camberwell, S.E. The mission is purely Israelitish, having for its object the evangelisation of actresses and theatre children. The mission is British, the agents are British, the objects sought to be influenced are British, and the modus operandi is as follows:—1. By mission letters, addressed by lady correspondents to actresses or children connected with the theatres. For two years, at the commencement, there was but one lady so engaged; now there are two hundred! 2. By giving the children teas, whereat two hundred and seventy sometimes attend and hear the Gospel taught. 3. By a theatrical branch of a Children's Scripture Union, which had one hundred and sixty members in 1880. 4. By a free lending library. 5. By afternoon teas for actresses of a higher class, "which gives an opportunity for much personal conversation and kindly Christian counsel." 6. By occasional visitation by ladies.

The mission, therefore, has a wide work before it, and its agents are godly Israelite ladies. It is distinctly a female mission, calling for much wisdom, discretion, and Christian charity in those who carry it on. Particulars regarding this singular, yet useful work, may be obtained from Miss A. S. Eives, 2, Wellington-villas, Cintra-park, Upper Norwood, London, S.E., and from Mr. Courthope E. Todd, its honorary secretary.

We notice this effort to serve Christ's cause because of its singularity, and yet its righteousness. Actresses and theatre children have souls to save, and they are in great spiritual danger. Are these reasons to try and succour them? or reasons to abandon them to their own courses? Surely Israel's mission is to take to these "lost sheep" and "lost lambs" the Gospel, which is suited to the heathen abroad and Israel at home. The lost sheep of the House of Israel clearly have the first claim to be fed with the bread of life, which the Lord Jesus died to provide for His people. The Theatrical Mission is a "home blossom and bud" of Israel, which deserves to be noticed. We hope our slight sketch of its operations may send to Miss Eives and Mr. Todd some timely help in money, or books for the library, or personal aid in missionary work as "lady correspondents." And there is also another way, highly valued by the leaders in this work, by which all Israelites may co-operate, and that is by prayer to the Lord for the outpouring of His Spirit on a class of Israel's flock, sadly neglected, and little thought of; but who are, we may be quite sure, precious to the heart of Him who said, "Suffer little children and forbid them not to come unto Me" (Matt. xix. 14), and who also declared that His mission was "to seek and to save that which was LOST" (Luke xix. 10).

Digitized by Google

REPORT OF THE METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

FOR PRESENTATION AT THE ANNUAL MEETING TO BE HELD ON FRIDAY, MAY 20, 1881.

THE Council of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, in presenting their Third Annual Report to the members of the Association, feel that they have great cause for thanks to Almighty God for the success that has attended their efforts during the past twelve months to spread the tidings of the discovery of the long-lost Tribes of God's chosen people.

Owing to the limited amount of funds at their disposal, your Council have not been able to take such active steps during the last twelve months as they were otherwise prepared to do. During the first and second years of the existence of this Association, a large amount of work was done in the distribution of literature, and in giving lectures. This was only accomplished by the liberal expenditure of money placed at their disposal for that purpose. The work thus performed laid the foundation of many Branch Associations throughout the country, which are now actively engaged in spreading Israel Identity knowledge.

There yet remain many districts and towns where similar Associations might be established, and all that is required to enable the Metropolitan Association to take the necessary steps for this purpose is increased funds to meet the expenses that would be entailed thereby.

During the past year, besides a liberal distribution of books, pamphlets, &c., lectures have been delivered in various parts of the metropolis, and in the provinces, under the auspices of the Association. Addresses and lectures have also been given at the rooms of the Association in the Strand, besides several in drawing-rooms of private houses.

In consequence of the restricted sphere of the labours of the Association, owing chiefly to a want of funds, your Council deemed it advisable to introduce changes in the organisation of the executive staff; and accordingly the Rev. James Billington, formerly Honorary Secretary, and subsequently Organizing Secretary to the Association, tendered his resignation, which was, under the circumstances, accepted, accompanied by a due acknowledgment of his past services.

Your Council are of opinion that some diminution may also with advantage be made in the numbers of the managing body of the Association, which they propose shall be reduced from twenty-five to thirteen members of the Council, inclusive of the President, but exclusive of Vice-Presidents.

By a resolution recently passed by your Council, it was decided that the President be appointed, ex-officio, Treasurer, instead of a separate officer being nominated to that appointment.

During the past year this Association has again been indebted to one of its members for an act of liberality, which your Council desire to acknowledge; and they wish publicly to record their thanks to Mr. Hope-Wallace for a generous contribution to the funds of the Association.

The present number of names on the books of the Association is 374.

There are 43 local and Branch Associations, known to this Association, in various parts of the world—namely, in the United Kingdom 33; in America; in Canada, South Australia, New South Wales, Victoria, &c., 10. Of these, 11 have affiliated with the Metropolitan Association—namely, The Surrey (which your Council are pleased to report is an extension of the Wimbledon Association for the whole county), The North London, the Portsmouth, the Hull, the Bristol and Clifton, the Leamington, the Cheltenham, the Exeter, the Sheffield, the Liverpool, and the New South Wales (Sydney) Associations.

The receipts for the past year, including the balance in hand of £19 from the previous one, amounted on April 30th to £290 3s. 2d., and the expenditure to £248 18s. 2d.; which, after deducting the liabilities on that day of £26, left a nett balance to the credit of the Association, as shown in the audited accounts, of £15 7s. 5d.

JOHN S. ANDERSON, Hon. Sec.

THE QUESTION CONCERNING A PERSONAL ANTI-CHRIST.

BY THE REV. DENIS HANAN, M.A.

THE prevailing opinions respecting "the lawless one" may be classed under two heads—namely, that he has been developed, and that he is yet to come. The latter opinion includes that of those who say that an admitted historical development does not preclude a personal and final manifestation. The knowledge of our Identity gives light on very many parts of the prophetic Word. Can it enable us to judge as to the truthfulness or error of one or other of these opinions?

Space would not permit, nor would it be consistent with the aim of the BANNER, or my present purpose, to state the various arguments for and against. I must assume in this paper that those who would form an opinion know them, at least in outline; and I take two books that have been lately published, as representatives—namely, "The Approaching End of the Age," by H. Grattan Guinness, as representative of the former opinion; and "The Coming Prince," by R. Anderson, LL.D., as representative of the latter.

The key of the position is rightly held to be the interpretation and fulfilment of the seventy weeks (Dan. ix. 24—27). Mr. Guinness, and those who agree with him, think that the entire period has had its fulfilment. Dr. Anderson, and those with whom he is in accord, allow that sixty-nine weeks have run their course, but that the seventieth week, and the events in connection with it, are as yet unaccomplished. All the able arguments in the latter work are avowedly directed towards the establishment of this opinion respecting this particular prophecy, and to the refutation of Mr. Guinness's opinion that the seventieth week ended A.D. 34; and that there was not, and has not been a cessation, gap, or parenthesis, of eighteen hundred and odd years.

The argument in support of the parenthesis proceeds upon the supposition that when Judah was finally cast out, and God ceased to deal with His people, the fulfilment of prophecy ceased, and cannot be again resumed until the covenant people are restored. But manifestly there is no place for this supposed gap, if God never ceased to deal with Israel.

Now we are convinced that God never left Himself without the witness of the chosen race; that Israel has been ever a nation; that she received the Gospel, and that she adopted the faith of Christ at the very period when Judah was cast away; and that, therefore, there was no place or reason for the assumed hiatus. Thus, supposing the opposing arguments to be fairly balanced, our Identity becomes a means by which we are enabled to select the true interpretation.

Further, if the events of the seventieth week be yet unaccomplished, it follows, according to the argument stated in "The Coming Prince," and also in the work of the earliest promulgator of the theory—namely, the Jesuit Lacunza in his work on "The Coming of the Messiah," &c., that the ten-toed, ten-horned division of the Roman earth has yet to be developed; that it must be some time before the "Man of sin" can be revealed; and, therefore, some time longer before the Stone can fall and become great. Whereas to Anglo-Israelites the history of the prophetic earth, and of this nation, tells unmistakably of a steadily growing power that has already commenced to fulfil its office; and the signs of the times (independently of the testimony of the pillar of witness in the land of Egypt) warn us of a fast coming European woe. Thus, it seems to me, we must be led to judge that the explanation which assumes that the foretold Anti, or Vice-Christ has been developed, is more probable to be correct.

Digitized by Google

A pamphlet lately issued from the press of "The Operative Jewish Converts' Institution," entitled, "The Mystery Opened of the Secret Chambers," is worthy of perusal. It states concisely what has often been shewn before, that there are two Anti-Christs foretold by the prophet Daniel (vii. and viii.), an Eastern and a Western. The Eastern says, "Behold, he is in the desert," he arose there, &c. The Western says, "Behold, he is in the secret chambers," which contain the consecrated host, &c.; and our blessed Lord's words of warning, "go not forth," "believe it not," are thus invested with great present significance (Matt. xxiv. 26); for the foretold lawless ones have appeared and exist.

Thus we would learn to look not for Anti-Christ, but for THE CHRIST; not for a further development of anti-Christian or infidel world power, but for the overthrow of that which now exists. Not for the return of Judah under the ægis of a usurper, but hand in hand with Ephraim and Manasseh.

I know of believers in the Identity who look for the development of a personal Anti-Christ. I write this for their consideration, and ask them whether this assumed gap in the fulfilment of prophecy, a parenthesis of eighteen hundred years between the fulfilment of Daniel's sixty-ninth and seventieth week, which can only be assumed on the understanding that God has for that period totally ceased to work through the covenant people, is compatible with what we know concerning our national position?

OUR OPPONENTS' DIFFERENCES AND CONTRADICTIONS.

WE are much struck, as no doubt our readers are, with the wonderful antagonism which our opponents exhibit in respect to their own different views, as against each other, with reference to our Identity. For instance: the Rev. E. H. Brown, pastor of the Twickenham Baptist chapel, whose respectful language regarding the Great Pyramid and its mysteries we quoted at page 111 of this year's BANNER, is so afraid that men may imagine he holds the "Identity craze," as well as the belief in the Great Pyramid, that he has published in his paper, The Richmond and Twickenham Times, a disclaimer, "repudiating" "Israel" as "contemptible, foolish, mischievous." We are informed that the above is the purport of the rev. gentleman's observations. Each one to his taste. We make no objection. We desire, however, to contrast with this the language of another reverend divine, a clergyman of the Church of England, our old friend and recent opponent, the Rev. Bourchier Wrey Savile, of Exeter, and read what he has recently published concerning the Great Pyramid in the Daily Western Times, under date (we suppose) April 3, 1881. "The Great Pyramid myth," he says, "is exposed from a scientific point of view in an able article in the last number of the London Quarterly Review, where this specimen of nineteenth century folly is cut to pieces as it deserves. . . . Mr. John Hampden declares the shape of the earth is not globular, but it may be doubted if his hallucination equals that of the believers in the myth of the Great Pyramid." Yet this is the gentleman who for three years was a firm believer in the truth of our Identity, and even now has never upset the arguments or the evidence he himself showed us exists in its favour. The Rev. Mr. Brown scoffs at our Identity, but swallows the Great Pyramid; the Rev. Mr. Savile derides the Great Pyramid, but has most ably proved by arguments, which he cannot himself destroy, that the Identity is true. What are we to say to these things? Surely it appears therefrom that our enemies by their opposition mutually destroy each other, and that their collision leaves the matter at large, untouched, unharmed, erect, and free from doubt. All that can be said is, that the Rev. Mr. Brown may be left at leisure to show the Rev. Mr. Savile that the latter acts very foolishly, and indeed unreasonably, in rejecting the testimony of a book ("Our Inheritance," &c.) which he calls rubbish, while it is, in fact, the record of science and Divine wisdom of the very highest order. And the Rev. Mr. Savile's work, "Are We Israelites?" may safely be put into Mr. Brown's hand to teach him that when he calls a subject he does not fully understand "contemptible, foolish, and mischievous," he is acting an unwise part, since the evidence he rejects without due examination is conclusive, as shown even by Mr. Savile, and has Scriptural warrant for it besides, throughout.

If our readers will inquire, they will see that all our opponents resemble the two we find opposed to us in the instance we have given. They unite in attacking the Identity, but in their arguments against us they mutually destroy each other. While they assail us together they discover that they have differences which are more vital still, and the result generally is that they end by attacking one another, and leaving us alone. Thus, no doubt, if Mr. Brown and Mr. Savile could meet we should witness a wondrous scene. For Mr. Brown would maintain that Mr. Savile, in calling Pyramid literature "rubbish" (page 111, BANNER, vol. v.), was dealing "with what he had not read through," and, therefore, did not truly understand; while Mr. Savile would lavish on Mr. Brown those clerical amenities which we know by experience he is so able to pour on our Israelitish devoted heads, and tell him, as he does us (in the recent letter to the Daily Western Times), that the "Great Pyramid is a myth; that the believers in it are like Joanna Southcote's followers, and Mormonites; that they are crazy lunatics; Pyramid idealists," and what not, because they rely on the supposed authority of the prophet Isaiah, that "the altar to the Lord in the land of Egypt" is the same as the mausoleum of "old King Cheops," &c.

Our satisfaction in the midst of all this violence and misrepresentation is, that we fight not for self, nor for gain, nor for our personal reputation, but for God's truth. We care not for the obloquy which these mistaken ministers of Christ delight to heap on us, knowing the evidence we ground our faith upon is firm and true, and based on the Word of God.

We turn from Mr. Savile's harsh and unbecoming language to the facts which Mr. Brown so clearly attests—namely, that the evidence in favour of the Great Pyramid is only rejected by Mr. Savile because he has not given the subject the attention requisite to grasp it. And we appeal from Mr. Brown's uncharitable and trenchant condemnation of us as believers in our Identity to Mr. Savile's most admirable treatises published in support of our contention, and are quite prepared to pit Mr. Savile against Mr. Brown in the one case, as we do Mr. Brown against Mr. Savile in the other. And having so done, we go on our way rejoicing in the truth which is God's, and not man's, and we thank Him for it.

THE LANGUAGE OF THE ISRAELITES.

BY J. E. NELSON.

As it now appears, the Rev. B. W. Savile rests the change of his views as to our descent from the Israelites mainly, if not entirely, on the opinion expressed to him by Dr. Birch, that the name by which the Israelites are called in the earlier Assyrian inscriptions should be read "Hu-um-ri-a," instead of "Khumri," as it had been read by some Assyriologists.

The difference is not so great as it appears at first sight; for, according to Sayce's Assyrian Grammar, the second of two similar letters is usually silent, merely serving to indicate the pronunciation and accentuation of the signs which precede it, and, therefore, Hu-um-ri-a would be pronounced Humri, which only differs from the name, as given by earlier translators, in the substitution of our ordinary soft h for the stronger sound, which corresponds with the Hebrew ח and German kh. But Mr. Savile, who had thought the similarity between the Khumri of the earlier, and the Gimri of the later inscriptions, an evidence of our connection with the Israelites, now thinks that the substitution of h for the kh makes the dissimilarity so great as to prove that no connection can exist.

Digitized by Google

Difference of name, however, cannot disprove connection, although similarity of name may make it probable, for most people are known by more than one name, and these have often little or no connection with one another. And, therefore, even if we allow that Humri is right, and Khumri wrong, and if we assign the greatest possible value to the difference between the h and g, it could only amount to the loss of one out of many indications of the connection.

Mr. Savile does not deny the identity of the Humri with the Israelites, nor that of the Gimri with our ancestors, nor does he deny that the latter lived in the same district in which the former had but recently been located. Neither does he say anything that at all affects my identification of the Arsareth of Esdras ii. with the city and river Sereth in Moldavia and Galicia, and, consequently, of the Israelites, who were placed in Media, and thence migrated to Ar-Sareth with the Daci, who were established on the Sereth soon afterwards, and who, according to the general agreement of ethnologists, were closely connected with ourselves. He adopted this identification, and arguments by which I had supported it, in the first paper that he wrote to your journal; and it would be interesting to know whether he has since thought or heard of any reason that could be alleged for doubting it. It in no way depends on the connection between the Humri and Gimri.

If the Israelites, with their language altered by long residence in Media, settled on the banks of the Sereth, as the Low-Dutch speaking Daci, and the Anglo-Saxons, whose language was almost identical with, and the nearest known to theirs, and who had been supposed to have emigrated to Dacia under Odin, are for that reason—supported, as it is, by much collateral evidence—supposed to be Israelites, those who, like Mr. Savile, have once accepted and written in support of that conclusion, ought to have some better reason for rejecting it afterwards than that of its being doubtful whether the Welsh have a similar descent.

Reverting to the substitution of H for Kh in the name of the Humri or Khumri, does it really lessen the probability of their being identical with the Gimri? The first letter of the name, however it be read, was, as is allowed on all hands, a substitute made by the Assyrians for the ain of Omri, which, like many other people, they were probably unable to pronounce. Now, as appears from many Hebrew names which occur in their inscriptions, the Assyrians, besides various other letters, sometimes used k, sometimes kh, sometimes g, and sometimes h for this purpose. All those letters are also substituted for ain by the authors of the Septuagint and Vulgate translations of the Old Testament, and these letters were also frequently changed for one another both in Assyrian and Welsh writings. Examples of this, and that too in connection with the very name that we are considering, are familiar to all of us. From the original name of the Welsh—Cimbri—are derived Cymry, pronounced Kumree, Cambria Humber—formerly written Chumber — NortHumberland—formerly North-Cumriland—and, if Latham be right, Umbri, and Ambrones. The latter name exactly answering to Omri, which the Septuagint translators write "Ambri," inserting a b after the m, which probably represented the pronunciation of m before the r in Hebrew and Assyrian. Whether one of these letters or another be substituted for ain is, therefore, a point of not the least consequence in an ethnological investigation.

The above has been written on the supposition that Mr. Savile has understood Dr. Birch correctly as spelling Hu-um-ri-a with h; but, strange as such a mistake would be, it seems more probable that the former has omitted to notice a dot under the h, as written by the latter, which would have indicated that it represented kh, or the German ch.

I have looked at a great many translations and references to the word, in which it is spelt either with kh or a dotted h; and though I did not make a note of it, and cannot speak positively, I think I have seen it spelt with a dotted h in a work written or edited by Dr. Birch himself.

Norris in his Assyrian Dictionary gives—

Humri . . . . The land of Israel
Bit-Humria . . . idem

And he says that the territory is certainly denoted rather than the city. In connection with which it should be borne in mind that the same names in Assyrian signify people or country, according to the determinatives that precede them.

If Dr. Birch's reading of the word be not really different from that of Norris and other Assyriologists, would it be too much to hope that Mr. Savile should candidly acknowledge that his change of views has been founded on a misconception, and should revert to the belief he has so hastily abandoned?

THE HOUSE OF JUDAH "WALKING TOWARDS" THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL (JER. III. 18).

WE take the following from page 59 of the Jewish Intelligencer, of March, 1881, being a part of an article on the "Ethnological Position of the Jews," by Dr. R. Andree. We conclude we may rely upon the facts stated as authentic, coming from such a source. The writer says:—

The increase of the Jews in Germany is, however, to be explained not only by the just mentioned favourable circumstances, but also by immigration from the East. This last point has often been contradicted; notwithstanding, it is undeniably certain, that a gradual advancing of the Jews in the direction from the East to West is taking place. So in Austria, the Galician Jews press towards the West; and the Jews living in Roumania at the present time have almost all of them come over from Western Russia. The decrease of Jews in Prussian Poland, for instance, corresponds to their increase in Berlin. In the year 1875, 2,551 Jews lived in Leipzig; of these, only 527 were born there; 201 had come to Leipzig from Prussian Poland, 237 from Russia, 241 from Galicia, 92 from Bohemia—altogether 771 from the East. In all Saxony there lived in 1834 only 850 Jews; that is, 0·05 per cent.; in 1875, no less than 5,360, that is, 0·2 per cent.

Dr. Andree says the total number of Jews in Europe may be estimated at 5,225,000. The number of those in other continents at not quite one million. Total, about 6,200,000. That is, supposing 3,000,000 of Jews existed in A.D. 70, they have doubled only once in about 1,800 years. The British double once in 55 years.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS.

A CORRESPONDENT at New Herrington writes to us his desire that copies of the "Decalogue," in an attractive picture form, should be printed and published for use in the cottages and hamlets of our homelands, in conformity with the injunctions contained in Deut. vi. 7—9, xi. 18—20.

We quite approve of the idea, but believe it has already been carried out by an Israelite publishing company in London, and can be procured from W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row. Should that effort be unsatisfactory to the public, we hope someone else will succeed in bringing out a cheap, yet elegant copy of the "Decalogue," which would be acceptable in workmen's homes or schools.

We are glad to find from our correspondent, Mr. W. Ragg's, letter, that Mr. Craig, of Sunderland, was instrumental in opening his eyes to the truth of our Identity. Being a Sunday-school teacher, Mr. R.'s testimony is very valuable. It goes to show that the Bible is now a new Book to him, and that he finds the New Testament especially is full of references to Israel of the Lost Ten Tribes.

Digitized by Google

THE DECIMAL SYSTEM.

THE House of Commons and the country have for the time given the quietus to the attempt to alter our present God-given system of British weights and measures, and to substitute for them the French-born, infidel metric weights and measures. The object of Mr. Ashton Dilke's motion in the House, on March 29, 1881, was to introduce changes also in our coinage, making ours assimilate with the continental and American mode of reckoning and commercial dealing. We are glad to know the result was an entire failure. The House of Commons received the proposal with indifference, and the country, it was shown, does not desire the change.

The President of the Board of Trade opposed Mr. Dilke's motion as likely to be enormously expensive to the nation, as certain to lead to "great confusion in all established forms and usages in the country, while Mr. Gladstone, though at heart favourable to the motion, was against it, because he desired to retain our present unit of money, the penny. Its abolition, he thought (very justly), would cause immense hardship on the poor, who "neither clamour for the change, nor understand its merits." A proposal was made that a fresh commission should issue "to inquire;" but even this was refused by the Government and the House, as such inquiry could do no good, since previous commissions had investigated the matter, and brought everything to light which can be known on the subject. A large majority of the House decided that no basis is at all likely to be found whereby the advantages of the system will neutralise the disadvantages certain to follow in its train. Our colonies, which commenced the world unhampered by traditions, have not adopted it. Canada for a long time kept its accounts in pounds, shillings, and pence, and only substituted dollars and cents for the old country currency, when the growth of its commerce with the neighbouring United States rendered the change almost imperative. But the West Indies, Australasia, and the South African colonies still cling to the "unscientific" coinage.

We are glad that the matter has been discussed in the House, and after full inquiry the nation, as heretofore, so now, deliberately resolves to have nothing to do with the ungodly project of the decimal coinage and the metric system, resolving rather to hold fast to its ancient weights and measures and coinage, which have their roots and origin in God's sign, pillar, and witness—the Great Pyramid of Egypt.

We should, however, as soon expect this Empire to give up its Sabbath as its weights and measures. The one is as impossible to sever from Israel as the other. Both are tied up to God's people to testify to their origin, and never can be parted from them as signs or marks of their true Hebrew descent. The Sabbath is, by God's own express command, stamped and sealed upon the body politic of Israel as the Divine proof that they are His people, and He their God (Exod. xxxi. 13—17). The weights, measures, and coinage in use among us are the unique signs of our origin, showing not only that we dwell alone in this respect, apart from all the nations, but that we conform, and shall conform to the end, to that system which God built into the Great Pyramid of Egypt as the only true, and just, and honest one, a system which He has Himself appointed and sanctioned by His approval for all mankind. Israel alone follows, obedient to the Divine command, and retains the God-given system almost throughout her world-wide Empire; even Manasseh, not being Israel of the Ten Tribes, has for the present swerved from the right path, though we believe she will yet retrace her steps.

On the whole, we record the decision of the House and of the Government, on March 29, with a sense of relief, and hope the early declaration of our Identity will prevent further proposals of revolutionary changes in Israel's weights and measures. Such never can be adopted by the nation, since to do so would be to denationalise us, and to affirm what is impossible truly so to do—namely, that we are not God's people, not Israel.

AN INDIAN LETTER ON GRAND GALLERY INTERPRETATIONS IN THE GREAT PYRAMID.

FORWARDED BY PROFESSOR PIAZZI SMYTH.

MY DEAR SIR,—You asked me in your last whether I had any other suggestions to make than those we had discussed, in Pyramid interpretation of the spiritual and religious order. Now I have been thinking a good deal about the thirty-six Roof-stones in the Grand Gallery, and the thirty-six inches of the Great Step.

Mr. T. Septimus Marks, in his little book on the Great Pyramid, p. 75, says, "That there is some spiritual signification in the thirty-six Roof-stones of the Grand Gallery, I doubt not, but I can offer no solution of their meaning; nor am I able to give any explanation of the meaning of the Great Step thirty-six inches high, which," &c.

On p. 557 (fourth edition) of "Our Inheritance," you suggest that thirty-six may mean the English standard measure, which with the sacred cubit of twenty-five inches, makes up the sixty-one of the Great Step, &c. I do not think this sufficiently accounts for the thirty-six which is twice repeated in the Grand Gallery; but the following seems to me, perhaps, the true signification.

The Roof-stones, thirty-six in number, from the way in which they are arranged, attract attention even at the commencement of the Gallery, for they foretell declension and apostacy, six being the number of imperfection and apostacy, $6 \times 6 = 36$. Upon approaching the Great Step the number thirty-six faces one, calling attention to the fact that an hour of testing, trial and ultimate apostacy is at hand—viz., $1813 + 36$—i.e., up to the foot, and then to the top of the Great Step, so pointing to the year 1849. That was the time immediately after the great revolution, when possibly the hour of "testing," or "temptation," mentioned in Rev. iii. 10, began for Christendom. Certainly, then, a great religious upheaval took place, but, alas, in the midst of dreadful perversions of the truth, such as Tractarianism, which had then become known beyond Oxford.

Now the length of the Step is sixty-one inches—that means, perhaps, the union of Christianity in apostacy (36) with Judaism (twenty-five inches); which brings about the great apostacy of 2 Thess. ii. 3; so that the thirty-six points to the falling away which was foretold by the Holy Ghost through the apostles in their later epistles. The Great Step may mean the hour of temptation, out of which the Church is to be taken up to meet the Lord, ἐκ τῆς ὥρας του πειρασμοῦ, κ.τ.λ (Rev. iii. 10). Notice the force of the ἐκ, they are in it, but are to be saved out of it.

Again, measuring along the top of the Step thirty-six inches, you get $1813 + 36 + 36 = 1885$. I fancy the vertical axis of the Pyramid would intersect the Step at this point. Judaism (25) will, from that date, come more prominently upon the scene; and the rise already of the "Judenhass" in Germany may be preparing them for it.

We who love the Lord Jesus Christ are longing for His return to call us away (1 Thess. iv. 15—18). It rejoices me to think of all who are true disciples of Him who shed His blood for us.

Though I think it very likely the English people may take a prominent part in bringing about the return of the unbelieving Jews, I would earnestly beg Christians to have nothing to do with vain, human pretenders. Our plan is to watch for the Morning Star.

With kindest Christian regards, I remain,

Calcutta, February 19, 1881.

Digitized by Google

JUDAH PORTRAYED IN THE PARABLES OF OUR LORD.

(Continued from page 479, Vol. IV.)

We consider the passage in Matt. xii. 43—45 to be a true parable of our Lord, a word-picture, addressed to the Jews who heard Him prophetically telling them their future, a warning carrying to its ultimate conclusion a fate brought upon themselves by their grievous departure from their God. The story is a peculiar one, repeated in Luke xi. 24, but without its special application to the Jews recorded there, as it is in Matt. xii. 45: "Even so shall it be also, unto this wicked generation." The "wicked generation" was the House of Judah then before our Lord, "His own," to whom "He came," and who promptly "received Him not," who crucified Him, and cried, "His blood be on us "and on our children," on whom the wrath came, consequently, even "to the uttermost" (1 Thess. ii. 16). Matt. xii. 38—42 plainly shows that our blessed Lord meant throughout the passage to distinguish the Jews as "the evil and adulterous generation," as the generation condemned by "the men of Nineveh," and by the "Queen of the South." Now what was the condition described by the Lord, which was to be the exact parallel of that of the Jews in future, as "that wicked generation?" The following: "An unclean spirit, when he is gone out of a man, walketh through dry places seeking rest and findeth none. Then he saith, I will return into my house whence I came out; and when he is come, he findeth it empty, and swept, and garnished. Then goeth he, and taketh with himself seven other spirits, more wicked than himself, and they enter in and dwell there, and the last of that man is worse than the first." What is the application meant here by our Lord to the status, then, present and future, of the Jews? This: the "man" and the empty house both represent the House of Judah, or the Jews. An unclean spirit possessed that House nationally in our Lord's day, and it therefore fell into all sorts of sin and wickedness. It crucified the Lord, slew His prophets, persecuted His saints and His Church, drove them out and caused the wrath of God to come down upon their nationality. But the time has now come when the unclean spirit has gone out of "the man." The Jew is now a different being to what he was in our Lord's day. He is a peaceful, order-loving man, noted for his benevolence, public and private charities and beneficence, noted in literature, in science, in political life, well spoken of in most civilised countries, and fast losing that evil reputation that has been his sad inheritance for ages. His house is clean, swept, and garnished, but alas! it is also empty. The unclean spirit has gone, but Christ is not admitted there. Satan has vacated the house, but the Redeemer and Deliverer of Israel is not a Guest welcomed there yet. What happens? What is yet in the future and must take place ere Judah becomes free? The unclean spirit must return to the House he lately left, but this time accompanied by a company of other spirits—a perfect seven in number—terrible in power and in evil might, more wicked even than the original possessor of the tenement, and they all eight enter in, and the last state of the Jews will be even worse than the first. Hence the treachery of Judah to the last. Hence when Russia invades Palestine, we shall find treacherous Judah sides with the enemy of God and of Israel, and fights against Jerusalem at first (Zech. xiv. 14), hence their salvation and repentance will be deferred till the Lord Himself comes down, and sight, not faith, will save them (Zech. xii. 10), and hence they will be an "afflicted and poor people" in the midst of rejoicing Israel, what time the Lord turns the captivity of Israel and Judah (Zeph. iii. 12, 19, 20). We shall therefore require to see this tremendous and awful change for the worse in Judah's spiritual condition ere we can hope to see the Lord. For, driven to wicked desperation, it seems to us they will flock back to Jerusalem before the Lord's authority is given for the Return, and, in presumptuous unbelief, alleging that the capital reserved for Israel will be allowed to fall to them. Thence they must be beaten out by a European or universal coalition, which seems to be the subject of Zech. xiv. 1, the first siege of Jerusalem. That city the Lord will allow to fall to the aggressors, but the siege will differ utterly in results from the last one described in Zech. xii. 2—14. Then the Lord shall defend the place and fight personally for British-Israel (as we believe), then the garrison of the Holy City, while Judah, the treacherous, is encamped in tents outside, fighting against it before the Lord sends her repentance.

Such is our view of Matt. xii. 43—45, a view, as far as its chief outlines are concerned, we heard the Rev. J. Bennett, incumbent of Park chapel, Chelsea, London, enunciate at a crowded meeting, held in the interests of the Jews' Society. The speaker, though no believer in our Identity, strongly advocated the necessity for the literal interpretation of Scripture, and though greatly in favour of the evangelisation of the Jews, felt, as he told us, that a terrible declension into national wickedness awaited that people before their final and national recovery. He added that while Matt. xii. 43—45 plainly proved that fact, there was in the events of the day enough to encourage us to work hard for their conversion, since the Gospel would only avail for them as for the rest of the world before Christ came "as a witness," that such as are ordained to eternal life may repent, turn to the Lord and live, during this period of probation before the second advent of our blessed Saviour.

A CONTINUOUS CHORD.

By. L. P.

We trust many were as thankful to accept the beautiful thought contained in the article at page 64 of Banner, No. 215, as we were; and welcomed the light which therein shone upon promises that assured us that God would ever be with His people. It now appears to us that the latter part of the last verse of St. Matthew's Gospel confirms the carrying on, to the end of time, the precious promises referred to in the article in question.

Our Lord bids His apostles teach and baptize all nations, and adds, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." To whom does the personal pronoun, "you," relate? Not, we may presume, to the individuals Christ was then addressing, as they were not to continue on the earth to "the end of the world," and the terms used would scarcely apply to men who were to pass away from earth by death, after the ordinary length of time of man's life. "You" cannot be supposed to bear reference to all the nations who were to be taught and baptized, as "them" would then be the fitting expression, or "you all," which would thus include teachers and all those taught.

We would suggest that our Lord, in using the word, "you," intended to refer to His people Israel, of whom the apostles were the representatives at that moment. This chosen people, when gathered again together and become a Christianised nation, were to be the witnesses for God throughout the earth; carrying on to the utmost limits of the world the work about to be begun by those commissioned by our Lord in the first instance to convey the Gospel to His lost sheep of the House of Israel.

If our view be correct, we see how our blessed Master would seem to renew the promise of the God of Israel, that He would not forsake or fail His people (Deut. xxxi. 6—8). It is true that in verses 16, 17, 18, of the same chapter, He appears to alter His avowed intention, according to the behaviour of His people; but this is explained in Isa. liv. 7, where the forsaking is but for a moment; even as the King of heaven forsook for a little moment, to all appearance, the Lord Jesus Christ Himself (Matt. xxvii. 46), laying on Him at that instant the punishment of our sins, which He voluntarily took on Himself; so, in like manner, He punished Israel for his iniquities, by an apparent temporary forsaking of us.

Digitized by Google

We have heard of one who, arguing against our Identity belief, urged that with the incarnation of Christ our Lord the old promises vanished, their fulfilment being swallowed up in the redeeming of that greatest of all pledges—of sending into the world One who should bruise the serpent's head. But this last verse of Matthew's Gospel surely annihilates such a view, which we hold to be dishonouring to God's faithfulness and truth.

It appears to us that here our Lord Jesus takes up the unbroken strain, in the same key-note of wondrous love and patient, watchful care, which has rung through ages its glad and glorious promise, though unheeded by those most deeply concerned in its fulfilment. The risen Saviour renews that promise in His own Person, He and the Father being One, He bids Israel believe He is, and ever will be, with them to the end of the world,* after which those who have made their robes white in the blood of the Lamb, will have, if we may so express it, the reverse blessing, and "ever be with the Lord."

March 1, 1881.

A TORONTO OPPONENT.

IN The Evangelical Churchman, of January 27, 1881, No. 246, published in Toronto, Canada, we have the arguments of an opponent, who takes the ethnic and historical questions as levers wherewith to demolish our Identity. We propose to advance a few reasons why "An Anglo-Saxon," as he styles himself, should not be deemed to be a victor in this contention. The first point our critic raises is the apparently hopeless mingling of Tribes which constituted finally the British races. The "dark-visaged" Iberians, the Celtic British, or Cymric, Gaelic, and Caledonian peoples; the Belgæ, Scoti, Picti, "who were all those?" asks our questioner. Not Lost Israelites? Yes, we reply, we deem all these were Hebrews; some men belonging to the Tribes known afterwards as lost, some to the Two Tribes of Judah, who early came to these islands as the advanced guard of the rest, to prepare the House, the Jewish colonists sent on here by Solomon, and by the kings of Israel before him, to work the tin mines of the Cassiterides, the I'ai Iyam of Isaiah. But these were followed, as our friend reminds us, by the Saxons, Angles, Jutes, Frisians, Danes, Northmen, and, finally, by the Normans. These, all, we believe, were parties, tribes, and remnants, of "wandering Israelites, converging to these Western isles according to the prophecies; and we see nothing improbable in the fact, if we allow, what we suppose The Evangelical Churchman of Toronto should admit, that the great God of Israel could accomplish what we admit was an ethnic miracle. But all these various races (says our mentor), with a mixture of Roman blood, have intermarried and mingled in such wise, that to call the outcome in the present day "Anglo-Saxons," is "a mere convenient commonplace." That may be so, but if the ingredients of the mixture were all originally "sons of Isaac," we do not see how the opponent can hold his ground, or deny that we still remain Anglo-Saxon, though the Tribes which contributed to form the nation are, humanly speaking, in inextricable confusion. "Ah, but," says our opponent, "God kept His people, His chosen ones, apart, and so preserved the seed of Abraham as children of the promise." Quite true. But the same God also declared that "Israel should be swallowed up among the Gentiles" (Hosea viii. 8), "wanderers among the Gentiles" (Hosea ix. 17), "sifted among all Gentiles" (Amos ix. 9), "buried in graves outside their own land" (Ezek. xxxvii. 1—14), "outcasted as Lo-Ammi" (Hosea i. 9, 10), "scattered abroad" (John xi. 52), "dispersed among the Gentiles" (John vii. 35), and yet "God's people" all the time (Jer. xxxi. 9; John xi. 52; Hosea i. 10). Our opponent, therefore, is wrong, and forgets God is almighty, and that He can just as easily pick out and restore Israel, apparently lost, as He can raise the dissolved and corrupted bodies of His saints at the resurrection, or "recover the waters of the St. Lawrence in mid-Atlantic." This last, our "Anglo-Saxon" considers, we suppose, an impossible thing even for our God. But we remind him nothing is impossible with Him who calls Himself "the God of Israel."

The friend who sent us the Toronto paper, and who, although a clergyman of the Church of England, is a believer in our Identity (often preaching it), remarks on the objections of this opponent as follows:—

"I notice that all combatants go over the same ground. The one in the paper of January 27, 1881 ('An Anglo-Saxon'), needs to be reminded that mixture does not deteriorate or materially alter the dominant race of Israel. Joseph's children were half Egyptian, but Jacob claimed them as his, and bestowed blessings of inheritance on them.' The case the opponent puts is this: 'A converted Jew marries a Gentile wife, their son marries a Gentile wife, and they have a son. How much of a Jew is he? Why only one-fifteenth of his ancestry is Hebrew.'"

We reply to our scoffing opponent that the issue of the first marriage was as pure Hebrew as that child which Rahab, the Gentile harlot, bore to Salmon, our Lord's ancestor, and the child of the second Gentile alliance was Jewish too, just as purely as was Obed, the son born to Boaz, a Hebrew, by Ruth, the Moabitess, another Gentile ancestress of the great son of David. We ask our opponent, "aye or no," if Jesus of Nazareth was purely sprung of Judah? (Heb. vii. 14). And if shame will forbid him to deny the fact, then we claim from him that he no longer dare to use an argument against our Identity which God's truth forbids him to employ to invalidate our Lord's purity of pedigree, for in truth the two cases stand and fall together.

THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL IN REGARD TO THE COMMERCE OF THE WORLD.

MANASSEH bears testimony to British supremacy as regards the commerce of the world, while asserting his own forward position as the greatest "mineral nation." We take the following from The Mining Record, of New York, being part of a letter written by Judge Hamilton to a member of the Bullion Club, under date March 26, 1881:—

The estimated wealth of the United States in 1870 was 30,068,518,507 dols., since that time the increase has been very great; at present it exceeds 50,000,000,000 dols., and this large increase, this large accumulation, is in a great measure due to the mineral resources of the country. England is, unquestionably, the greatest commercial nation on the globe; England is the maelstrom which swallows up the commerce of the world, and the United States is the great mineral nation, exceeding all others as much in this as England does in commerce; but while Europe has, during the past fifteen years, nearly doubled its indebtedness, the United States has decreased hers about one-third, and this decrease of indebtedness is attributable to the richness and inexhaustible character of her mines. But while I do not claim this achievement from the absolute productions of the mines, it is traceable to them in the stimulus they have given to every branch of industry; they have reclaimed large portions of our territory from the aboriginal natives, wild, untutored savages, transformed it from a wilderness to a country of wealth and population, the home of a thriving, prosperous, Christian people; it has built cities which boast of magnificent churches, hotels, institutions of learning and charity, the pride of the people and the ornament of the realm; it has turned water courses, dug canals, tunnelled mountains, established the China and Australian steam ship lines, built the great Pacific Railroad with its branches, and it has brought, and continues to bring, merchant vessels of all nations, bearing rich cargoes of foreign products to our shores; for, without the impetus given to trade by mining, these enterprises would not have been begun, their necessity would not have been created; it has covered the far Western prairies, and filled the distant valleys with flocks of sheep, herds of cattle, and droves of horses; and more and beyond all this, it has led up to the magnificent enterprise, a highway for all nations, the Panama canal.

* The end of the age, or dispensation, would be the preferable rendering of Matt. xxviii. 20.—ED.

MORE "BLIND" EVIDENCE.

PREACHING at Albion-street Independent chapel, Ashton-under-Lyne, on Sunday evening, February 20, the Rev. Mr. Armitage, of Waterhead, near Oldham, said, "Britain has been the Israel of the latter days. As a favoured chosen people, she has been the herald of the cross, and sent the Word of God to every land. She has also peopled with her sons a new world, and established colonies, now fast becoming nations, at the antipodes, and in many other desolate places of the earth. The great Anglo-Saxon race has had, and must have in the future, because of this expansion, a mighty and vital influence upon the history of the world, and we cannot be indifferent to the moral and religious character of our countrymen."

This is not bad evidence for a "blind" witness, one who, we understand, has travelled in the East, and been to the Pyramids; but does not think there is anything in Anglo-Israelism, or the "peculiar" theory connected with the Great Pyramid, as held by Professor P. Smyth and other Anglo-Israelites. But the wonder to us is, how anyone can give utterance to such testimony, with the Bible in his hand, and not see that this is exactly the prophetic rôle of the literal Israel in the latter days. "This people have I formed for Myself; they shall shew forth My praise" (Isa. xliii. 21). "Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii. 6). J. THOMSON.

Review.

The Chain of Ages Traced in its Prominent Links by Holy Scripture. By the Rev. W. B. Galloway, M.A. Sampson, Low, & Co. Price 14s. One vol. octavo.

WE propose to refer frequently to this most valuable volume. We urge our friends to add it to their libraries at once, and each Association to order it. Mr. Galloway, who clearly has given his adhesion generally to the doctrine of our Identity, has a very valuable chapter (vi. pp. 228—275) entitled, "What Has Become of the Ten Tribes?" He also discusses the Great Pyramid (p. 31—80) in a masterly manner, throwing original light on the subject, besides settling by convincing proofs in chaps. xiii. and xiv. (pp. 520—626) the vexed question of the date of Christ's nativity, in favour of our current reckoning. This early notice we hope to make only the prelude to a more extended review of Mr. Galloway's standard and most learned work, hoping our readers will not fail to obtain and keep the volume as an invaluable help to their study of our glorious cause.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—Being an ardent searcher after Identity knowledge, it has just struck me that you could, in the way I will describe, do an immense service to many of your readers, and thus to our sacred cause. You could open a space in the BANNER for the insertion of those people's addresses, who, like myself, are eager for discussion, and thus gain more information. If any persons wanted help, or there was a point they wished to discuss, they could write to one whose address was given, and thus secure at least a free interchange of opinion. In fact, a sort of a society would thus be formed, without any rules and regulations, for the purpose of placing Anglo-Israelites in private communication with one another. A small charge for the insertion of each address the following week might be made, say 1d. It would be a great comfort to many of your readers to be able to communicate with persons who think as they do concerning Anglo-Israelism, and an undoubted help to the cause by preventing many from growing lax in their search after truth, for want of sympathy.

If you should think well of this proposal you could either insert my letter in the BANNER, or invite the addresses of anyone who approves of it. In such an event mine would be the first sent for publication. Trusting you will think over this,

I remain,

THOS. H. TYSON,

A JOYFUL ISRAELITE AWAITING ARMAGEDDON.

12, Mill-street, Whitehaven, April 26.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—The Rev. B. W. Savile says that all Cymric scholars ridicule the idea that there is any connection between the Cymry and the House of Israel, a statement which is not quite correct.

I have before me (through the kindness of Mr. J. L. Wood) a book entitled "Higgin's Celtic Druids," and if the rev. gentleman should ever meet with it, I trust that he will give it his careful attention, and he will find that its author was a man of no mean ability or industry.

The author first shows that the Cymry and Sacæ were one and the same people, called by different names. He then goes on to argue that these people were descended from the Chaldeans, and to prove his argument he frequently shows the remarkable similarity there was between the customs and language of the Cymry and the Hebrews. But the Hebrews were a Chaldean people, therefore I think that we have a perfect right to say that this author is on our side, and the reason that he has missed this point is, that he seems to have held the views so generally held then, and even now, that the Jews were the sole representative of Israel. This author also supports our views with regard to the origin of the Irish, as the following quotation will show. He says, in chap. vi. sec. xxix.:—

"These Pelasgi were Canaanites, and were the people who settled Carthage, Gades, Spain, Ireland, and they are only NOT called Pelasgi in these latter places, because there were no Greek Herodotuses in those countries, by their mistakes to convert the term sailors into the name of a nation."

This book was published in 1829, and the author could not have known anything whatever of the Anglo-Israel question; but for all that it is full of valuable information supporting our cause, and I much regret that it is a book which, from its very nature, is not easily accessible to Anglo-Israel students.

Yours very truly,

C. RABLIDGE.

4, Dunedin-villas, Finchley, March 24.

P.S.—I would just say that the author in his contention that the Sacæ and Cymry were the same people, agrees with Sir H. Rawlinson and others in the present day.

THE FOURTH DATE IN "THE SECOND ADVENT OF THE MESSIAH."

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—In reply to Mr. Charles Horner, the expression in my article, "measurement along the ceiling," is not quite correct. It should be "parallel to the ceiling, and on the level of the lower edge of the outlet (inlet) at the South end of the Gallery," which will give the number or date mentioned, and which coincides exactly with Mr. Horner's of "Revelation" at that point—and what revelation! P.

P.S.—At request of some friends I ask to subjoin calculation of "The Times of the Gentiles" referred to in the article. The initial date is obtained, by comparison from Sir Isaac Newton's Chronology.

THE TIMES OF THE GENTILES.

The Divine decree for breaking of Israel (Isa. vii.)	A.C.	789
To be executed within 65 years —
Bisected, or taken in mean 32½ years —
739 — 32½	=	706½
Top of Great Step	A.D.	1815
706½ + 1815	=	2521½

The overthrow of Napoleon, the last Gentile that threatened Israel's national life, occupied three years—from the invasion of Russia to Waterloo.

This period bisected = 1½ years

2521½ — 1½ = 2520

i.e., The Times of the Gentiles. The Times of the Gentiles, therefore, end with the overthrow of Napoleon, and the end is indicated in the Pyramid by the Great Step.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	3
Four " " " " ...	1	3	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING

OF THE

METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION

Will be held (D.V.) in the

LOWER ROOM AT EXETER HALL,

ON FRIDAY, MAY 20TH, AT 7 P.M.

CHAIRMAN:

THE

RT. HON. VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, M.P.,

President of the Association.

SPEAKERS:

MR. E. W. BIRD (PHILO-ISRAEL), Bristol.
MR. DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P., London.
THE REV. C. W. HICKSON, M.A., Vicar of St. Bartholomew's, Bristol.
THE REV. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE, M.A., Vicar of Oldham.
MR. F. C. DANVERS, London.
THE REV. R. HILL, B.A., London.
W. H. PETERS, Esq., Exeter.

All Identity believers are earnestly solicited to attend and to bring their friends.

NO CARDS WILL BE ISSUED. ADMISSION FREE.

The General Meeting of the Association for MEMBERS ONLY and DELEGATES FROM AFFILIATED ASSOCIATIONS will be held at the BOARD ROOM, 331, STRAND, at 3 p.m. on the same day.

JOHN S. ANDERSON, Hon. Sec.

NEW WORK BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

In handsome cloth, gilt, with Coloured Map, and several Illustrations, price 3s. 6d., by post 3s. 10d.

PHILO-ISRAEL'S BOOK FOR CHILDREN.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL:

How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth, gilt, 1s. Post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Third Edition.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL?

An Inquiry establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d.

BRISTOL LEAFLETS ON THE IDENTIFICATION.

1 to 9; 1s. per 100.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE EW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL;

Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Leeds, with an Introduction and Notes: to be followed by a Review of Mr. Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes

By the same Author.

"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)." with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d

"CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d., post free 3½d.

"GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 3½d.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

NEW PUBLICATIONS ON OUR IDENTITY.

Now ready, price 6d.. post free 7d.

WHERE ARE THE TEN TRIBES?

BY WILLIAM GREIG, OF MONTREAL, CANADA.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.;
And may be had, by ordering, of any bookseller.

FOR UNIVERSAL CIRCULATION.

The Best Pamphlet to place in the hands of a person unacquainted with the subject.

Price 6d., by post 7d. 64 Demy 8vo. pages, in wrapper. One dozen copies sent free for a post office order for 6s.

FIFTY REASONS

WHY THE ANGLO-SAXONS ARE ISRAELITES

OF THE LOST TRIBES OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL.

BY REV. W. H. POOLE, D.D.

"There is a principle which is a bar against all information, which is proof against all argument, and which cannot fail to keep a man in everlasting ignorance. This principle is, contempt prior to examination."—Dr. Paley.

A greater than Paley has said:—"He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is a folly and a shame unto him."—Prov. xviii.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,

High-Class Tailor,

47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.

MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

Remarkable Results from the Rev. E. J. Silverton's Nutrient Food of Foods and Medical Energiser.

MR. SILVERTON has certainly been very successful in his manner of treating cases of broken down health. The idea of supplying a Nutritious Food with his Energeen, or Energiser, is exceedingly happy: the two things going together act splendidly on the delicate constitution. Thousands of sufferers not ill enough to be confined to their room, and not well enough to be out find in this double remedy the means of health. This has been proved over and over again in cases of the most hopeless character. After a short course the patient begins to improve, and goes on improving until well. It is not too much to say that in several cases where death seemed inevitable the patient has been raised, as it were, from the grave. Mr. Silverton holds letters of the most convincing nature from persons who have taken the remedies with unmistakable success. There are few ailments which do not succumb to the power of these remedies. Local complaints frequently disappear as the general health and tone of the system improve Indigestion, constipation, sick-headache, decline consumption, asthma, coughs, colds, and a thousand other ills are removed by a course of the Food of Foods and Medical Energiser; indeed, no person out of health should fail giving these marvellous restoratives a fair trial. It is true to say that they do not cure all who take them: but it is scarcely possible for any one to do so without benefit. Mr. Silverton will be happy to give further information to any persons calling on him at 17, Saint Bride-street Ludgate-circus, London, E.C., any day, except Saturday from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. No charge is made for the interview. A box of the Food of Foods and a bottle of the Medical Energiser can be obtained through any chemist for 5s. 6d the two, or ordered direct from the above address. The cheapest way, however, is to obtain the five weeks' course, which Mr. Silverton recommends as a fair trial. This, to buy it box by box, and bottle by bottle would cost £1 15s. 9d., but may be obtained from Mr. Silverton direct for 21s. Thousands would find a guinea so spent the best money they ever laid out. Original letters may be seen at 17, Saint Bride-street, by any person who wishes for further confirmation. The Rev E. J. Silverton will send his "Book of Health and Treatise on Diseases of the Ears and Eyes," price 1s., free by post, to the readers of the Banner of Israel.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL.

Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters." By PHILO-ISRAEL.

"As Soft as Downy Pillows are."

New Feather Beds at Half-price.

Over 5,000 Beds sold in Two Years.

THOUSANDS OF TESTIMONIALS.

Theatre Plain, Yarmouth, Feb. 4, 1881.

DEAR SIR,—I had six beds from you last summer, and I have great pleasure in testifying to their excellence. I am recommending them to my friends, for the feathers are the cleanest, and the ticks the best made, I have ever seen, while each bed weighed more than the advertised weight.

Yours truly, GEORGE ISAAC.

The cost of any sized Bed is 1s. only per lb., including best purified Grey Lincolnshire Feathers, best Bordered "Union Tick," making, packing, wrapper.

Any sized Bed will be made to order; but the following Beds are on demand at the Factory, and could be sent off within a few hours of receipt of order by London Agent.

	£	s.	d.
The "ROYAL" Double Bed, 6ft. 6in. long by 5ft. wide, 65lbs. in weight; two pillows, one bolster	3	5	0
The "WINDSOR" Double Bed, 6ft. 6in. long by 4ft. 6in wide, 55lbs. in weight; two pillows, one bolster	2	15	0
The "PALACE" Double Bed, 6ft. 6in. long by 4ft. 6in. wide, 50lbs. in weight; two pillows, one bolster	2	10
The "COTTAGE" Single Bed, 6ft. 6in. long by 3ft. 6in. wide, 40lbs. in weight; one pillow, one bolster.	2	0	0

Price list post free.

BANNER OF ISRAEL COUPON.

On receipt of Coupon or P.O.O. for either of above amounts, we agree to redeem this Coupon by forwarding Bed specified, carriage free, to any address, and to pay carriage both ways, as well as return purchase money in full if goods are not approved when received.

All Orders must be payable to Mr. T. SMITH, 15, WINE OFFICE-COURT, FLEET-STREET, LONDON, E.C., where Specimen Beds may be seen. P.O.O.'s payable at Ludgate Circus, may be post-dated ten days if desired. Cheques crossed City Bank.

Just published. Price 1s., post free 1s 1d.

THE EGYPTIAN ENIGMA.

A Plea for the British Yard: Its Antiquity and High Authority Proved by the Great Pyramid. By H. R. SHAW.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW.
WEDNESDAY, MAY 18, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 230. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, MAY 25, 1881. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents

PAGE
The Prospects in the Transvaal 213
The Legalisation of Atheism in Israel's House of Commons 214
Jehovah's Witnesses. By John T. Gott 214
Mr. Proctor's Egyptologic Date for the Great Pyramid Explained. By Professor Piazzi Smyth 215
A Wesleyan Missionary on the Transvaal 216
More Blind Testimony. By J. Thomson 217
"He Couched, he Lay Down as a Lion, and as a Great Lion; Who shall Stir him up?" By L. P. 218
Mr. J. D. Granger on the Seed of Isaac 219
The Right Rev. Bishop Titcomb, of Rangoon 219
The Welsh Eisteddfod and Our Identity. By Henry Leslie 219

THE PROSPECTS IN THE TRANSVAAL.

THE Times gives us constant warning that the arrangements made, and making for the pacification of the Transvaal, are beset with the most serious dangers; and that the hopes of permanent peace are not very re-assuring. How can they be so? Given an ignorant peasantry, into whose power on three separate occasions British troops were rashly led and abandoned by a hasty and mistaken estimate of the enemy's capacity for injury; given also, just as the means were accumulated for a decisive blow, the British Government surrendering at discretion to rebels exultant with their fancied victory over the whole force of Israel's Empire, what would or could be the only consequence of such a fatal combination of adverse circumstances? We read what they were by the message sent to the Times, by the correspondent of that journal, from Durban, on May 4, and published on the 5th, in London. "The news from the Transvaal," he reports, "is disquieting: the Boers at a meeting at Pretoria are reported to have declared that they would never submit to less than the return of the whole territory and the republican rights as before the annexation." They deem themselves the victors in the late warfare (as doubtless they were), and naturally demur to the loss of any territory, or to the restriction of any of those rights they exercised before the British annexed their land; rights whereby they maddened the native tribes around them into revolt and insurrection, almost precipitated a war with the Impis of Cetywayo, of Zululand, and carried on a system which cannot be distinguished from open slavery as regards the natives within their power. The treachery of which these interesting belligerents were guilty, was gross, when by a trick they concealed from our unfortunate garrison at Potchefstroom the fact that the armistice had been concluded, and food was within a day's march of the starving British within that place. By false concealment they induced them to surrender guns, ammunition, and fortified posts, which now they are unwilling to restore; and it is stated by the Times' correspondent that "the guns are reported to be lost." It is ominous and plainly indicative of the expected outcome of the recent surrender of British interests by the Government of the day, that the Times publishes to the world the following: "Sir Evelyn Wood has six months' provisions at the camp, and everything is in readiness against any emergency." In York House Papers, of May 4, we read, "Consequent upon the almost more than probability that the services of Major-General Sir F. Roberts will yet be wanted in South Africa, we hear he is to make some stay in England, and not proceed at once to Madras."

Joining these two pieces of information together, we think we see that God's hand is working in Israel's affairs in South Africa; also that as in the Punjab, long ago, so in the Transvaal now, the Lord of the whole earth has resolved that His people shall fulfil His designs regarding the extension of His kingdom and His Gospel over the whole of South Africa, and will not permit the renunciation of dominion He has once conferred. It is clear that to carry out God's purposes the British must yet assume the sovereignty, not the suzerainty (a mere nominal euphuism for surrender and effacement) in that country. "At present," says the Times' correspondent, "all appears to be dark and doubtful"—and no doubt it is. For the tendency of events has been retrograde as regards the extension of the Saviour's kingdom, and the policy we have pursued has been to extinguish the light of Christ's Gospel among the Boers, and also among the native Tribes around them. It has, besides, the direct consequence of lowering our prestige everywhere, of loosing the bands of an Empire, which rests more upon influence and reputation than upon brute power and bayonets. A nation which defeated and put to open shame before its adversaries therefore abandons its acquisitions to anarchy, war, and heathen darkness, which refrains from asserting its God-given power lest such assertion should lead to its own bloodshed, or injury to her own treasure, is surely on the downward path, and is unfit to hold the place which God intends it for, as "the head and not the tail, above only and not beneath." As regards the native races whom we thoughtlessly abandoned by our retreating policy, the Times informs us, by its correspondent, that on May 4, last, it was apparently certain that the natives in the Transvaal will rise. One chief, whose tribe lived in the country before the Boers took possession, says he will fight for aboriginal rights." No doubt! The heathen at least perceives that national rights are worth retaining, and worth even fighting, to secure. Israel only, in the Transvaal, by her new born policy, abandons her subjects to loss and injury, flings to the winds the rights of the aborigines, based on her own solemn pledges, and to save "blood-guiltiness"—that is, effusion of her own blood in a righteous cause—makes no stand against an enemy whose object is to trample on all around, to continue a course which ended once in bankruptcy and national ruin, and must do so again. In confirmation of these views, on May 6 we had reported to us from the same sources that the Boers hesitate to restore Potchefstroom to the British, or to consider the capitulation cancelled, while the Caffre chiefs decide to sink all differences, and to unite to drive the Boers out of the Transvaal if the commission abandons the country, as they must do under the inspiration of Downing-street. The native rulers seem to have a high appreciation of British, as compared with Boer, rule—an appreciation which places the former on a pinnacle of greatness truly Israelite in its character. "Under the English," they declare, "they enjoy the blessing of liberty and justice" (Isa. lviii. 6, lx. 21). "Under the Boers they were treated like serfs." Here, then, is a condition of things that has resulted from that course of surrender and self-effacement which is being tried in the Transvaal. It will end, we believe, not in peace, but in a state if not of war, yet of strain and costly preparation for war, which will "scatter Israel's power" (Dan. xii. 7), render us weak and powerless in Europe (where our rulers want our strength to be felt when "the great earthquake woe" shall have burst upon that hapless continent), and which, thank God, will bring us safely (secure in the hidings of His hand) through the times of distress and tribulation coming upon the whole Gentile EARTH (Isa. xxvi. 20, 21). Israel, even in your tears, praise ye the Lord!

THE LEGALISATION OF ATHEISM IN ISRAEL'S HOUSE OF COMMONS.

IT will be, humanly speaking, a bad day for Israel when in her national popular assembly she passes a law to make it possible for a man like Mr. Charles Bradlaugh to take his seat as a member of Parliament. This man, when elected twice by Northampton, was not a qualified person under the laws of the land to represent a British constituency. Had that town returned a cleric, a female, a minor, or an alien, he would have been disqualified, and his election void. In this case a man has been returned who has no moral sense at all of responsibility, for an oath has no hold upon his conscience, and he denies the existence of the Being to whom the appeal is made in the oath. He asserts the oath involves a lie, and is not binding on him. Such a man is utterly disqualified by the laws of the land for the position he has been elected to fill.

When he was elected "he paraded his atheism, and refused the oath." He offered to affirm; but in its essence the affirmation is equivalent to the oath. His rejection of the one barred him from taking the other. This the House of Commons confirmed by a resolution adverse to the ministry. Under pressure from Mr. Gladstone, the majority cancelled the resolution and carried the Premier's motion "to allow Mr. Bradlaugh to take his seat and vote at his risk and peril." The courts of law appealed to decided that Mr. Bradlaugh's position was illegal, and he has been mulcted in costs and penalties. Then he resigned his seat, was re-elected by Northampton by a narrow majority, and now "offers to take the oath, the oath which he ridiculed and despised." The House will not permit this profanity; but Mr. Gladstone has prepared a Bill to alter the law to enable this atheist to enter the Parliament, and thus to benefit him, make an inroad into the constitution of the Parliament of the Lower House, which will set this nation at once into a position of violent antagonism to her Maker.

In our above remarks on this case we have been quoting the words and sentiments of an excellent article on the subject published in the Wigan Examiner, on May 14. The editor, in his further comments, writes as follows—words which we trust our readers will carefully consider (we do not quote them all, some harsh expressions we have softened; but we give the gist):—

A principle is at stake. This man proclaims that the question at issue is between free thought and Christianity. That being so, is Christianity or infidelity to win? By what law of ethics is Mr. Gladstone, a Christian Prime Minister, of a Christian sovereign, of a Christian country, justified in his present action? The House of Commons rejected this man, and that rejection has been sustained on several appeals to the courts of the realm. Why should the Premier override these decisions? If it be urged that the privileges of Parliament are violated, as Sir Wilfred Lawson alleges, by his exclusion, let the question be relegated to the constituencies—let the nation decide it. If this be too much for those whose seats would thereby be lost, why should not Mr. Gladstone follow his friend Mr. Bradlaugh's example, and submit himself once more to the suffrages of Midlothian? In the dawn of manhood, when his heart was full of elevating emotions, Mr. Gladstone demonstrated the importance and necessity of a national recognition of religion. Up to the prime of his career he cherished his first and best politics—religious principles—and gave practical expression to them, before jails were blown in and policemen assassinated. In the eve of life he has turned his back on his earlier and truer convictions, and has wasted his splendid powers in succumbing to his country's enemies. The last and worst phase of his fatuity is lending himself to the schemes of an atheist and a Republican who is under the ban of the law, whose principles are subversive of truth, honour, and justice. Oh! what a fall is here. Samuel Drew, a working shoemaker, is the author of an irrefutable essay on the "Immortality of the Soul." If the cobblers of Northampton would read the book there would be a chance of their regaining common sense, and returning a fit and proper person to represent them in Parliament, which Mr. Bradlaugh is not.

We trust our friends will all be active in promoting petitions without delay against Mr. Bradlaugh's claim to relief by legislation, to enable him to break up the constitution of the House of Commons. If it should be found that, after all, this nation is resolved to fly in its Maker's face, and do Him the last dishonour of permitting those to legislate for Israel who openly deny His very existence, then we may verily conclude that the "enemy has come in like a flood," and there will be but one step to the bright moment when the "standard of the Lord will be lifted up" to put him down for ever (Isa. lix. 19).

But we may be sure that in such a case suffering will accompany the rescue of our infatuated people, and God will in "measure correct" us, and not let us go altogether unpunished (Jer. xxx. 11). In love will the rod be sent to us, but the terrors of that rod may yet be widely felt, and commensurate with the enormity of the offence.

We trust and hope for the best, and pray the Lord that some way may yet be devised by which Mr. Charles Bradlaugh's hateful presence as an atheist may not defile our British Senate; but rather that, by his true conversion to Christ, he may yet take his seat and his oath of allegiance to his sovereign in the true faith of a Christian Israelite.

JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES.

BY JOHN T. GOTT.

NOAH'S ark and the Great Pyramid, Biblically considered, are types of God's chosen people—the Lost Ten Tribes and the Jews.

Noah's ark typifies the Lost Ten Tribes.

The Great Pyramid typifies the House of Judah.

I.—Noah's ark was made of indestructible wood—gopher wood. It was pitched inside and out, thus rendering the indestructible wood harder and more durable. "Rooms" were to be made in it. The word "rooms," literally translated, signifies "nests." The ark was a place of salvation for men and women, and for every living thing of all flesh, clean and unclean, two of every sort (Gen. vi.). The flood of God's anger was poured forth, although the world believed not the warning voice for one hundred and twenty years. After the "dies iræ" the ark rested on the top of Ararat, and its living freight went out to behold a new heaven, and a new earth. Terrestrial changes have taken place since then. Ararat is above the snow-line, and the wonderful box is safely hidden and admirably preserved in its ice-bound coat. Many have tried, but all have failed, to catch a glimpse of Noah's ark, that lies between the lofty peaks of Ararat.

Digitized by Google

Noah's ark is lost! Modern science cannot explain, and therefore does not countenance, either the possibility or the probability of a universal flood. Hence men, now-a-days, deny the fact, and look upon Noah's ark as a myth. Thus does Noah's ark become a type of one portion of God's chosen people—Ephraim-Israel.

It is predicted that the seed of Israel shall never cease from being a nation for ever (Jer. xxxi.). The Jews of the present day, dispersed and despised, are not a nation, and do not pretend to be one. Then, if the oracles of God be true, Ephraim-Israel must now be a nation somewhere. Herein is demonstrated the indestructible character of the seed of Israel, typified in the "gopher wood."

The abominable sins of Ephraim-Israel tarnished their national character, like the pitch that blackened the ark, inside and out. "For all this His anger is not turned away, but His hand is stretched out still" (Isa. ix. 12, 17, 21).

Rooms, chambers, or nests, were made in the ark; and the people—who, in these latter days, represent Ephraim-Israel—must be a people possessing "colonies," chambers, or nests of refuge, open to all who will take shelter therein. Such a nation is the British nation, and there is no other.

The animals that entered the ark were not searched out and driven in—"They repaired to it spontaneously." So must it be with those who will be moved by some sudden impulse to seek protection in Britain and her colonies.

The people who disbelieved in the Flood are the people who ignore the Biblical prediction that, in these latter days God will have a controversy with the nations; that then the slain of the Lord shall be from one end of the earth to the other, and that the horrors of some terrible wars will literally make the earth empty (Isa. xxiv. 1).

Ominous are the signs of the times that we are drawing near to some crisis of this nature. The whole earth bubbles in a state of unrest; wars and rumours of wars abound, and of all nations in the world, the British, to-day, are the weakest, in point of human strength, to defend themselves at home, or to protect and defend their children in their world-wide colonies (nests).

With these thoughts, we behold the signs of the times, and await the fulfilment of the prediction, "Come, My people, enter into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee," &c. (Isa. xxvi. 20, 21). Noah was divinely called into the ark, and God shut him in, and kept him safe during the Deluge. In like manner God calls His chosen people, and all who will hear, to enter into their chambers—i.e., to seek shelter and find safety in Britain and Britain's colonies, during the time that God cometh out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth.

Animals clean and unclean were admitted into the ark. So of British-Israel, the great ingathering, missionary nation—all are invited, all are welcome.

The world believed not the warning voice of Noah. His was an idle tale. So now. Christian men and women, watching the signs of the times, see the gradual approach of predicted times, and the near prospect of the literal fulfilment of prophecy. But to the masses of the people they sound as "idle tales." "As it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be in the days of the Son of man."

Terrestrial changes are predicted to take place in the East. That being so, there is nothing unreasonable in supposing that the remains of Noah's ark may yet become visible to human eyes, as an irresistible witness to the truth of Revelation.

It has been long lost, like the Ten Tribes. God has promised to "gather out," in the latter days, "the remnant" of His people Israel, and to restore them to their own land. That remnant is, at present, hidden, buried in the midst of the British people. Their manifestation in due time may be taken as a token that the remains of Noah's ark may yet be called forth to confound the sceptic and the infidel.

After the Flood, God made a covenant with Noah. After the controversy with the nations will come the time when God will make a new covenant with the House of Israel and with the House of Judah (Jer. xxxi. 31).

II.—Very little reflection is required to convince anyone that the Great Pyramid is a true type of that other portion of God's chosen people—the Jews. Mankind, during thousands of generations, have marred and spoiled it; but have been unable to destroy it, and it stands to-day, "God's pillar of witness in the midst of the land of Egypt."

When we consider the tortures and persecutions the Jews have suffered in the ages that are passed, and the wrongs they suffer in some countries in the present day, it is a miracle that they have not been utterly annihilated. But such could never be the case. They are Jehovah's living witnesses, known throughout the whole world, even as the Great Pyramid is known. There is a reason for the present existence of each, whether men pause to consider it or not.

As the predictions concerning the Jews have been literally fulfilled, so must those concerning the long-lost House of Israel. God's inanimate witnesses are Noah's ark and the Great Pyramid. His animate witnesses are British-Israel and the Jews.

February, 1881.

MR. PROCTOR'S EGYPTOLOGIC DATE FOR THE GREAT PYRAMID EXPLAINED.

By Professor Piazzi Smyth,
Astronomer-Royal for Scotland.

How very many Great Pyramid students have been disturbed by Mr. Proctor's article in the Contemporary Review, just before he sallied forth on his lecturing tour round the world? What it was exactly that frightened them, I have seldom been able to ascertain; and have, therefore, abstained hitherto from writing much against a paper which did not seem to me endued with any particular force; and which the public ought to be able to judge of for themselves, and doubtless will do so when everything that the opponents of the sacred and scientific theory can possibly say has come before them without hindrance.

But a letter of three closely-written sheets of supplication has just reached me by the Australian post, from a very good man there, the author of a most thoughtful pamphlet—"The Pharaoh of the Exodus"—earnestly requesting me to write forthwith, at least, to resolve his doubts on one part of the question; because that is a part which, in his mind, touches the whole value of astronomical evidence. For, says he, after copying out a large part of the said Contemporary Review article, "We had been told by one astronomer (I believed him) that the stars made the date of the Great Pyramid 2,170 B.C.; but now another starts up and says that the true date they give is 3,300 B.C. Which of them are we to believe? and is there no astronomical certainty within such wide limits?"

The immense divergence between these two dates depends, as I wrote back to my Australian correspondent, upon which of the two occasions of the ancient circumpolar star, α Draconis, being at the Pyramid's entrance passage angle from the Pole be adopted. I had discussed them both in my Pyramid books long before Mr. Proctor entered into the subject at all; and found the evidence, as I believed, in overwhelming favour of the 2.170 B.C. occasion. Now Mr. Proctor enters the arena, and declares for the 3,300 B.C. occasion; whereupon you ask, "How can two astronomers possibly differ upon anything; and least of all by such an amount?"

Let us see. And, as a beginning, please to understand that there is no need just now to consider differences of two or three minutes of the passage angle, leading, perhaps, to 30 or 40 years, plus or minus, in the dates, when the real, broad question is one of 1,200 years. My reasons for adopting the 2170 B.C. were:—

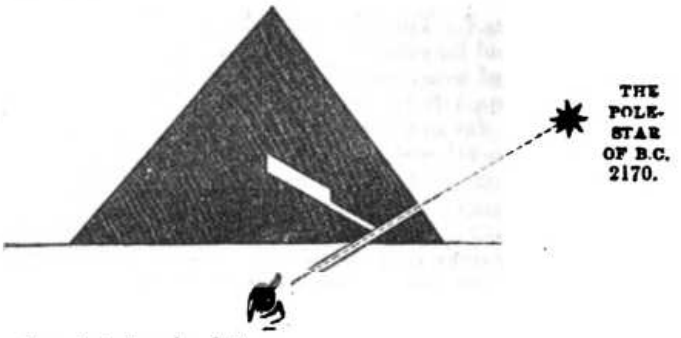
1. A polar star for position, combined with a zodiacal star on the Meridian, for time, are a wise and good combination in modern science; and the Zodiac has a special importance in ancient astronomy.

2. Such combination was obtained by α Draconis for Pole-star, with the Pleiades for zodiacal star, both of them on the Meridian at the same time; one above, and the other below the Pole.

3. The Pleiades were not in the altitude-direction of the axis of the Grand Gallery, but were in the Azimuthal-direction of that axis when the Pole-star was being observed by eye through the entrance passage; and that is as good, seeing that the Grand Gallery was a closed passage Southward, closed in there by 300 feet thick of solid masonry; an affair, therefore, for the mind and faith to judge of, not the eye; the eye, on the contrary, was to look in the other direction, or to serve the polar point alone, where the Pole-star, or entrance passage, is open still, and always was the only communication for man between the interior of the Great Pyramid and the external air.

4. A vast number of primæval traditions of aboriginal peoples, touching the Pleiades, are traceable to their Pyramid appearance at the date 2,170 B.C.; and their traditions form, in fact, just as important a kind of evidence—in these days—as the corporeal existence of the Jews still does to the truth of Scripture history.

How, then, does Mr. Proctor get a conclusion in favour of 3,300 B.C.? Thus:—



1. He abuses dreadfully, not me, but a Mr. Blake, for having erroneously said that the Pleiades were in the altitude-direction of the axis of the Grand Gallery, in or about 2,170 B.C.

2. He finds a star that was in that direction at the other date—namely, 3,300 B.C.; such star being a Centauri. Whereupon he kindly ignores that it is not a zodiacal star, but so much as 30 degrees right away from the Zodiac; was never a good star for time purposes; and is dubbed with an untrue, impossible, fabulous name, not Scriptural at all. But the date satisfies some of the Egyptologists in their investigations among profane Egyptian curiosities; so he thinks, or desires to make out, that it must be correct, overlooking that others of the Egyptologists want 5,000 B.C., or 6,000 B.C.; in fact, that they are "a broken reed to lean on."

3. He further overlooks all my No. 4, just as if neither Pleiades, year traditions, nor Hebrew people, had any existence in this world.

Why, then, should I write expecting to convince such a man, and those who will persist in sacrificing everything to follow him? So far as mere dates and places of the stars are concerned, you see there is no material difference between him and me; we differ only in what weight to give the attendant circumstances; such as the extra importance of a star being in a zodiacal constellation; I holding it to be extreme; he, nothing at all, at least, when discussing the Great Pyramid's date.

He, too, knows as well as anyone that the Grand Gallery was not, and is not, an optical observing tube, for the very good reason that it is a dark cavern, closed in against the light by 300 feet and more of masonry to the South, totally preventing any eye-observing of stars in that direction, of the kind that can be performed in the opposite direction on the Polar star; thus:

So what does he do?

He assumes the Great Pyramid half-built; in the state in which no unlearned persons should be allowed to see anything. And though Herodotus, the only historical authority, tells us how rapidly its immense mass was run up by its myriads of workmen—he, Mr. Proctor, declares out of his own imagination that everything must have stood still in the very middle of the building operations to allow of someone observing his star, α Centauri, in the then open and fragmentary condition of the Grand Gallery, before the monument had become a Pyramid indeed, or at all. When giving his fancy such reins as that he might just as well have dispensed with any existing Pyramid, and assumed everything out of his own head; and then to what he should thereby evolve in place of fact, credat Judæus, or anyone else.

15, Royal-terrace, Edinburgh, April 4, 1881.

A WESLEYAN MISSIONARY ON THE "TRANSVAAL."

We have received the following from a friend in Birmingham, and have great pleasure in giving it publicity in the Banner of Israel. The lecturer having been long a resident missionary in the Transvaal, seems to have had good opportunities of knowing the facts regarding the Boers. Our readers will be able to judge whether the surrender of such a country once acquired by Israel, to a people apparently so unfit to govern, or even to deal with it as a Christian people, was an act likely to be for the good of the Boers, or of the surrounding native races. That it will only end in disorder and trouble, probably additional bloodshed, for the British colonists, who as a race are not usually willing to submit to the dominion and arrogant pretensions of a weak handful of ignorant, fanatical farmers, seems more than likely. We leave our readers now face to face with the Rev. T. Cresswell, and beg for him their serious attention :—

In connection with the anniversary services held in aid of the Wesleyan Foreign Missions, the Rev. T. Cresswell, for many years a Wesleyan missionary in the Transvaal, delivered a lecture on Thursday evening, in the Bondgate Chapel, Darlington, the subject being "The Transvaal." Mr. Hedley occupied the chair. There was a fairly numerous attendance.

The lecturer first treated the subject of his address from a geographical point of view, and then spoke of the climatic conditions of the Transvaal. From his own experience, and according to the statement of many who had travelled over the globe, it was one of the finest climates in the world. The range of the thermometer in the Summer was from 65 to 77, and in the Winter from 62 to 71. It was a land exceedingly rich in minerals, there being found lead in abundance, coal, gold, silver, iron, copper, and cobalt. The soil of the Transvaal was excellent, and suitable in every way for agricultural purposes. It was covered all over with a swath which produced the richest pasture needful for horses, cattle, and sheep. Every year was regularly obtained two good crops of cereals. It might be asked, what then could be wanted besides a splendid climate, with hills and mountains rich with minerals, and the soil so good. There were required English hearts, heads, and hands to win from the virgin soil the rich crops, and to rouse the drowsy

Boer into energy. According to Sir Theophilus Shepstone—and he knew of no more reliable authority on South African matters than Sir Theophilus, who had lived there since he was a lad, and could speak the language of the Zulus like a Zulu—the native people numbered 800,000, many of whom lived under their own chiefs, thousands worked upon the farms of the Dutch, and were what were termed squatters, while a great number were found in towns in the capacities of domestic servants, &c., who did all in their power to ape the manners of the British. The Boers of the Transvaal numbered something like 40,000. For the most part they were ignorant people, and in their habits they were by no means clean. They seldom took off their clothes, going to bed in them regularly. He very much doubted whether they were a courageous people. That they were splendid marksmen when under shelter, was indisputable, but when they were not under cover, the nervous system of the Boer was quickly wrought upon, his hand became unsteady, and if there was a chance to flee he would do so. After speaking with reference to the religious customs of the country, Mr. Cresswell expressed a desire to say a few words on the political and historical aspect of the subject. (Hear, hear, and applause.) The Dutch people, as his hearers must be aware, had a strong republican sentiment. They did not, at any rate, believe in crowned heads, whether kings or queens; and he apprehended that all the Boers would readily say "Amen" to the prayer of the American who, when asked to pray for George III., said, "May the Lord comfort his soul, and take him to heaven; but let us have no more of them." (Laughter.) They looked upon themselves as the Israelites, and the Transvaal as the land of Canaan, while the English stood in the position of the Hittites, &c. They considered that the Lord had given the land into their own hands, and the people of every other nation were to submit or be driven out. The English Government prohibiting slavery there, the Boers, in 1856, passed what they styled the Apprentice Law, the ostensible object of which was that native children should be apprenticed till they were twenty-one years of age. The poor people, however, as a rule, had no more idea how long they had been in the world, than had the cattle that grazed on the hills, and their Boer masters withholding all information on the point, the Apprentice Law was simply a "blind" to slavery. (Hear, hear.) He believed every Englishman in South Africa would like to see the British flag wave from Simon's Bay to the Zambesi. (Hear, hear.) The flag that had so long battled with the breeze they believed to be the best in the world; and if they (the congregation) were over in South Africa they would be of the same opinion. (Applause.) The history of the country was by no means an ancient one. There were many men now alive, who were personally acquainted with its history from the beginning. For many years the country was like the boiling sea, in which the big fish ate up the little. The Boers represented the big fish; and they conquered the native occupants of the country. Up to 1877 there had never been anything like a continued peace in the Transvaal. In that year Sir Theophilus Shepstone appeared on the scene. The country was in a bankrupt condition, and the President resigned. Sir Theophilus took the helm, and nobody at that time said anything against it. True, a kind of formal protest was entered against it, but Pretorius having resigned, there was no one else to assume the position. The British Government paid the debts of the Boers, and extricated them from their almost hopeless state. On April 12, 1877, the British flag was hoisted at Pretoria. He was present, and, rightly or wrongly, he was one of many who shouted "Hoorah!" (Applause.) He was really glad, not merely for his own sake, but because he believed it would be better for the Boers, better for the English residents, better for the natives, and better for the world. As a matter of fact, the Boers had been benefitted by it, as had also the natives and the English residents in the Transvaal. After the British flag was raised, every head of cattle in the colony was worth 100 per cent. more than it was previously. (Applause.) It was essentially necessary, in order that the prosperity of the Transvaal might be ensured, that there should be good government, and a lasting peace. All the world could see what sort of government it was now proposed there should be. What "suzerain" meant he did not know, and there were many people who were similarly ignorant. Without faith in the government of the country, there would be little if any emigration. Faith was as needful in commerce as in the Gospel—without it, the world would soon be at a standstill. (Applause.)

Votes of thanks terminated the proceedings.

The peroration of Lord Cairns's speech in the House of Lords on March 31, 1881, upon the Boer negotiations, will form a fitting sequel to Mr. Creswell's lecture. It was as follows. We do not quote it all, of course.

It is just one hundred years since a page of the annals of England was darkened by the surrender of Burgoyne and Cornwallis. Those were surrenders made by generals at a distance from, and without communication with home, on their own responsibility, in a great emergency, and without any alternative. They were events, however, which deeply touched our national pride. But it will be recorded hereafter that it was reserved for the nineteenth century, and for the days of telegrams, to effect a surrender when reinforcements were at hand, and where other means existed for vindicating the authority, and restoring the power of the Crown—dictated word for word by a Government at home. I observe that this arrangement is somewhere described as the peace of Mount Prospect. I doubt whether it will not rather be handed down to posterity as the capitulation of Downing-street. You (said the earl, addressing himself to Ministers opposite) have administered a bitter cup for Englishmen abroad, and Englishmen at home to drink, and you have made the draught unduly and unnecessarily bitter. I wish you could have selected for the conclusion of a capitulation like this some other agent than one of the bravest, most intrepid, and most promising of the generals that have served us of late. I wish you could have spared our troops the intense mortification of being paraded in order to witness the half-civilised army of the Boers marching on in triumph with the arms which they had captured from British soldiers. I wish that the moment when you are weakening our power in the East had not been selected for dismembering our Empire in South Africa. These are the aggravations of the transaction, and you have made that which was already a real shame, a burning shame.

MORE BLIND TESTIMONY.

By J. Thomson.

The late Rev. Richard Parkinson, D.D., F.S.A., Canon of Manchester, was the author of a volume of "Poems, Sacred and Miscellaneous," published first in 1832, and revised and enlarged in 1845: and from this volume is quoted the following in the "Old Church Clock"* (also by Canon Parkinson; a book that will please anyone to read). It is entitled, "The Host of God," and is a paraphrase upon Gen. xxxii. 1, 2: "And Jacob went on his way, and the angels of God met him. And when Jacob saw them he said, 'This is God's host.'" The "blind" testimony of the second line in the third stanza is very clear, while the lines themselves are not destitute of poetic fire:—

"THE HOST OF GOD.

"The host of God!" from whence came they?
And whither are they bound?
Are they of those who watch by day,
And keep their nightly round?
Come they from realms celestial, sent
On God's high mission here?
Guard they the mighty firmament?
Guide they the rolling year?

'The host of God!' how seemed that show,
In heavenly pomp arrayed?
March'd they in bright angelic row,
With glittering wings displayed?
Or were they clad in flesh and bone,
Like children of the earth;
While but their stately step and tone
Betrayed their glorious birth?

'The host of God!' how did they greet
Our faint and wand'ring sire?†
Pass'd they his train with flying feet,
And chariot wheels like fire?
Or did they cheer his spirits there,
Amid that desert lone—
Tell him that granted was his prayer,
His secret sorrows known?

'The host of God!' how wild the thought
That lowly man should meet,
'Mid the drear realms of wolf and goat,
The step of holy feet!
Whence came they—whither go—is dark;
Their purpose all unknown:
Yet shine they, as a meteor spark,
Through midnight darkness thrown.

Still they may wheel their bright career,
By lonely rock or tree,
Had we the patriarch's ear to hear,
His holy eye to see!
The desert wild, the crowded way,
By heavenly step is trod;
Through earth and air—by night—by day—
Walks still 'The host of God!'"

No "Israelite" can fail to respond, in his inmost heart, to the sentiments expressed in this last stanza.

* London: Simpkin, Marshall & Co. 1880. Fifth edition.
† The italics are ours.

Digitized by Google

"HE COUCHED, HE LAY DOWN AS A LION, AND AS A GREAT LION; WHO SHALL STIR HIM UP?" —NUM. XXIV. 9.

BY L. P.

"LORD, Thou wilt ordain peace for us," is written in Isa. xxvi. 12, and we believe the sunrise glow of that glorious promise to Israel is deepening, brightening, and broadening over the horizon, though when the full sunshine of it is to appear none can tell who is not in the secret councils of our God. It may be yet far ahead, but also, may be, it is nigher than some dare to hope. Notwithstanding the possibility of fresh enforced struggles in Africa, unavoidable renewed warfare in India, or outbursts of hostilities elsewhere and nearer home. Paradoxical as it may appear, we cannot but feel that the beginning of the end of fighting with carnal weapons distinctly commenced some thirty-three years ago; and this opinion we hold, in spite of the mournful fact of the hideous Crimean struggle, the awful bloodshedding in India, and a fierce but noble civil war in America, which swept down many of the bravest of its sons, and filled numberless homes with grief and desolation.

Yet, we repeat, we think the first stroke on the bell was struck, which was to toll the death-knell of Israel's wars, when a peace convention was gathered together, at the summons of Ephraim and Manasseh, to consult over the means of staying all future fightings between nations. The aim was, doubtless, far too wide-spread; it was grounded on an apparent ignorance of the awful times predicted to be approaching for many peoples, and on a disregard of the exclusiveness of a prophecy applicable to Israel alone, till that time—we know not how near nor how distant—when all the nations of the earth, converted to a pure faith in the Lord Jesus, shall lay aside their weapons for ever, and glorify the King of kings throughout the world.

The Peace Congresses held in Brussels, Paris, London, &c., emanated from a grand hope, and a strong belief that by arbitration war could be made to cease, on the principle of an universal and united "Brotherhood," and were the fruit of the Christian zeal of an American, Elihu Burritt, and of various Englishmen not endowed with the power that springs from inherited wealth, titles, or lofty positions, but whose greatness consisted in their mental gifts, honesty of purpose, moral courage, and Christian love for their fellow men. We read, with a thrill of respectful admiration, in the "Life of Elihu Burritt," of the first peace gathering, held in Brussels in 1848, as the result of his labours and those of his English coadjutors. Mr. Burritt says:—"At the second session the first resolution upon the iniquity, inhumanity, and folly of war was read to the meeting. It was a moment of intense interest. The Congress, composed of about an equal number of Continentals and Englishmen, were called to express its opinion of war, within a few miles of Waterloo. . . . Henry Vincent next mounted the tribune. . . . In a minute or two his voice arose into the ruddy energy which distinguishes him, and the whole assembly began to respond to his power. On and upward he soared, and his imprisoned thoughts burst forth like jewelled meteors, and flashed with dazzling brilliance. Many seemed half raised from their seats, as if borne bodily by the power of his towering genius. It was eloquent almost to inspiration, and when he ended his short speech with the exclamation, 'The Lord God Omnipotent reigneth! Hallelujah!' there was an explosion of applause, in which every being in the house seemed to join. . . . In a subsequent speech Mr. Vincent observed:—I maintain what I have before said, it is public opinion that will slay war; not that vicious and vacillating public opinion which has been described to us, but the public opinion impregnated, as it were, with the holy truths of Christianity, armed with the conquests of science, emanating from the glorious perfectionment of the human understanding, and based upon eternal justice. . . . Great and glorious will be the nation which shall take the initiative in the cause of peace. Its name shall be handed down to posterity as that of the first people which understood the mission of humanity."

"The Peace Congress of 1849, in Paris"—again we quote from the "Life of Mr. Burritt"—"was the most remarkable assembly that had ever (sic) convened on the continent of Europe, not only for its objects, but for its personal composition. The English delegates numbered about seven hundred. . . . They not only represented but headed nearly all the benevolent societies and movements in Great Britain. . . . There was a goodly number of delegates from the United States."

The hopes that these events, together with the great first international exhibition raised, were destined to be crushed, though not annihilated. They embraced too large an area, they anticipated a time probably yet far ahead; but the seed sown then, we verily believe, has taken root in the heart of Israel, and the plant has grown, and the belief is silently gathering strength, that for us God will ordain peace, let other nations do what they will (Psa. cxx. 7), and that He will make us "to lie down safely" (Hosea ii. 18).

The very fighting that followed close upon our Peace Congresses have deepened in Israel the hatred of battles, while the wonderful discoveries of science and consequent inventions, have strengthened the feeling by causing the horrors of war to be better realised than they were before, by those absent from its actual scenes. We are not a cruel people; we are not indifferent to the shedding of blood, though it must be confessed, history proves we have not, by any means, been always humane, and our laws have been harsh and severe enough to justify the belief that Simeon did not leave his instruments of cruelty behind him in Palestine, and that the other Tribes learnt too readily to use them.

In past times, meddling in the wars of others, when not fighting on our own account, seemed to be our destiny; now it is all changed. We refuse to intervene with our arms in the struggles of others, and we are even willing to bear the insolence of opponents, if by so doing we can sheathe our swords and unload our guns. We cannot endure to hear the groans from battlefields of our brave men, or to look upon their wounds and witness their suffering; and this is what telegraphy, and the marvellous rapidity of printing and circulating news and illustrations amongst the masses, in a manner, enables us to do. We live, as it were, in the presence of any war we may be carrying on, however far away. The wound that is inflicted in the conflict stabs us at home, and the murderous shells seem to explode at our very feet, tearing our hearts. Distance and time are well nigh annihilated, as regards knowledge of what is going on; and this knowledge, we think, is killing the last lingering love of war-won glory in our land.

When weeks elapsed before news reached us of what had occurred, we would dare to hope that the present was improved, that a change had come for the better in the distant country. Sufferings that were endured in a time that has so long past that they are, when we hear of them, mere painful memories to many of those who shared in them, can be dwelt on with a calmness that abandons us when we are, by imagination, all but taking part in the woeful scenes as they actually occur. We hazard the doubt, whether even Sebastopol would have ever fallen had science at the time enabled us to realise, day by day, the intense sufferings of our brave soldiers, and their awful dangers and privations. The thought would have so agonised the nation, we venture to think, that "peace at any price" would have been concluded. It was not to be so, by God's decree, and science had not then lifted up the veil from events occurring at a distance, as it has done now; but let those who are too young to remember that dreadful time thank God that He will ordain peace for us—Israel.

There may be fightings yet in store for us. This He alone knows who knows all things. They may be like the relapses of a patient, when yet in reality recovering from a fever; or as sharp flashes of lightning, which may have power to blast trees, or destroy human life, though the fury of the storm is well nigh spent. But we dare to hope that for us the glad time is at hand when we may lay aside the shield and the buckler, while keeping them untarnished and ready for use, lest the Master should bid us rise up and meet a foe. For He who has made all things, and whose we are, can ordain war, or ordain peace for us, and it is our part to obey.

Digitized by Google

Though we no longer can hear His voice with the hearing ear of the body, when simply seeking to follow His behests, we believe we are enabled to interpret His will by the light of circumstances. God's will be done, let it be what it may; but let us pray that peace may be to His glory, and decreed for us.

MR. J. D. GRANGER ON THE SEED OF ISAAC.

REPORTED BY H. P. K.

A LECTURE was delivered before the Plymouth Identification Association, on the 4th inst., by Mr. J. D. Granger, author of "The Seed of Isaac." He took for his subject the oft-repeated question of our opponents, "How is it you appeal to the Old and not to the New Testament in support of your theory?" and started by showing that in appealing to the Old Testament he had obeyed the mandate of our Lord, who directed us to "search the Scriptures," that we might obtain knowledge on all subjects. Christ often referred to the prophetical books of the Old Testament, not only with reference to the promises made regarding His own advent, but to the law promulgated by Moses, and led the search for those of God's chosen people, who were sifted among the heathen, by declaring, "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the House of Israel." In pursuing the search for these missing Tribes we are, therefore, but seeking to establish the Identity of those to whom our Lord declared Himself to be specially deputed, and to whom St. Paul chiefly directed his ministrations. The lecturer proceeded to point out that there was much of the New Testament, more especially in the Epistles, which needed light from the Old Testament to enable us to read aright; and that in many respects the former would be incomplete without the latter. He said that if we read the Epistles of Paul by the light afforded by the prophets we shall find as much Identity evidence in the New as in the Old Testament, and he gave several very apt illustrations in support of his argument.

Mr. Granger concluded a very able lecture by pointing out the special benefits accruing to the British nation as lineal descendants of the Ten Tribes, both temporal and spiritual; that we were without question in full enjoyment of the former at this present time; while under the latter we should become "the sons of the living God."

In conclusion, Mr. Granger asked, Is it nothing that we should be Israel? is there no advantage to us, nationally and individually, that we should be God's chosen people, His inheritance, His sons, and the inheritors of those blessings promised by the Almighty to Abraham and his seed for ever?

THE RIGHT REV. BISHOP TITCOMB, OF RANGOON.

OUR readers will join us in expressing the great concern we feel at hearing that the good Bishop of Rangoon met with what might easily have been a fatal accident, on his return from Tounghoo, in February last. His valuable life was, however, by God's blessing preserved; and though he could not walk without support, we are thankful to learn that he is not now in danger. The account of the accident we give below is taken from the Mission Field of May 2, 1881. The editor said:—

"We have received from his lordship a letter, dated February 6, which he wrote from Tounghoo, where he was visiting the Mission, the condition of which he described as 'marvellously flourishing.' The accident occurred on his return from this place. The Indian Church Gazette gives the following account of the occurrence:—'His accident has been a very serious one, and he has had a narrow escape of his life. His fall down a khud of twenty feet, into the bed of a mountain torrent, while he was walking up hill towards a village where he was to hold a Confirmation, was due to the slipping of his staff. He was terribly cut and bruised, and is not now able to walk without support. He had not completed his Confirmation tour, having confirmed 250 out of 1,000 candidates waiting for him. There is no longer any danger to be apprehended, but he will have to be quiet for some time, as the shock to his system has been severe. His elder son has been his companion on this journey. Mr. Windley, who was also with him, had an equally narrow escape. Seeing the Bishop fall, he threw himself after him, and must have lost his own life in his effort to save the Bishop, had he not caught at a shrub which grew on the side of the precipice. Thanks for the preservation of the Bishop were returned in the churches on Sunday, February 27. The escape of the Bishop has been almost miraculous, and the consequence has been exceedingly serious. Mr. Windley returns with the Bishop.'"

Correspondence.

THE WELSH EISTEDDFOD AND OUR IDENTITY.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR PHILO-ISRAEL,—Quite lately, in reading the first book of Esdras, I was greatly struck, in chapters iii. and iv., with the description of a public competition in oratory, at Babylon, in the presence of King Darius, his nobles, and people, some 2,400 years ago. The selected subject was, "What is the Strongest?" Three orators displayed their powers, their themes being, respectively, first, "Wine is the Strongest;" second, "The King is the Strongest;" third, "Women are Strongest, but, above all things, Truth beareth away the Victory." The people, having heard the three, gave the palm to the last speaker, shouting and saying, "Great is truth, and mighty above all things"

Here is an exact description of what takes place numberless times during every year in Welsh localities, and it is nothing less than the portion of a genuine Eisteddfod, an institution of Wales, most assuredly Druidical, lost in the mists of antiquity, the earliest recorded example being, I believe, in the fourth century of the Christian era. The building in which an Eisteddfod is held is decorated with flags, and mottoes in accord with the aims of the promoters, but chief amongst these, and one that is hardly ever absent, is, "Y gwir yn erbyn y byd;" in English, "The Truth against the World." The prize was a great one, for the victor claimed and secured the fulfilment of the vow of King Darius to rebuild Jerusalem.

All this reads very like a link in our long chain of evidence; but, though a staunch Anglo-Israelite, I forbear to do more than call attention to a very remarkable similarity, leaving to more learned and competent persons the unravelment of the mystery.

I am, yours faithfully,

HENRY LESLIE.

Bryn Tanat, Llansaintffraid, Montgomeryshire,
May 7, 1881.

THE HORSFORTH ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.—On Tuesday evening last the inaugural meeting of the above newly-formed Association was held in the National school-room, when there was only a small attendance, about sixty or seventy persons being present. The chair was occupied by Dr. Libbey. The Association, which owes its existence to a course of lectures given by Mr. A. K. Robinson, of the Leeds Anglo-Israel Association, on "The Identity of the British Race with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel," which were largely attended, and in which great interest was manifested, has been formed on a basis similar to other Anglo-Israel Associations in existence in various parts of England. A room adjoining the Temperance Hall has been secured for the meetings of the Association, which will be held fortnightly, for the advancement of the Anglo-Israel theory, and for mutual intercourse amongst the members. A committee and officers have been elected to manage the affairs of the Association, and to enroll persons as members who wish to join the movement. Addresses on the Anglo-Israel question were given by Mr. A. K. Robinson, Mr. J. G. Shaw (Leeds), and other friends, and but for the obstruction caused by a Mr. G. H. B., who created much annoyance to the speakers by his continual interference, and much uproar amongst the audience (who were not slow to show their disapprobation of such conduct) would have been highly interesting and very instructive. The proceedings were brought to a close by the passing of the usual votes of thanks to the speakers and to the chairman.

BANNER SUPPLEMENTS.—We acknowledge, with thanks, the following sum: Mary Bradley (Barlow) 4s.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let three lines	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

ELECTRO-PLATE! ELECTRO-PLATE! Old goods repaired and replated equal to new, and returned on the shortest notice. List of prices for replating sent on application. E. HAYLLAR, 185, Brookhill, Sheffield.

Price 8s., post free 8s. 8d., bound in blue cloth, gilt, side and back.

THE FOURTH VOLUME OF THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

CONTAINING 520 QUARTO PAGES.

Post Office Orders to be made payable to Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; or, W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Just out, 8d., post free 9d.

ISRAEL NOTWITHSTANDING; Being the Second and concluding Part of the Earnest Appeal from the Pew to the Pulpit By JOHN G. SHAW, Author of "Britain (or Israel)," &c.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

NEW WORK BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.

BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

In handsome cloth, gilt, with Coloured Map, and several Illustrations, price 3s. 6d., by post 3s. 10d.

PHILO-ISRAEL'S BOOK FOR CHILDREN.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth, gilt, 1s. Post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Third Edition.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? An Inquiry establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters." By PHILO-ISRAEL.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

ROBERT BANKS'S CATALOGUE on the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Lost Ten Tribes will be sent, post free, on application. Address, Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

384 Demy 8vo pages, in handsome cloth, gilt, price 8s. 6d. by post 4s.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.

Edited by DOUGLAS A. ONSLOW, J.P.

This Volume contains Papers on all Points of the Identity of the British People with the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel.

Stiff paper cover, price 6d., by post 7d.

THE NEW OLD STORY; With a Slight INTRODUCTION TO A MARVELLOUS PUZZLE.

BY A E I.

A Book specially written for Children on our Identity with Lost Israel.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

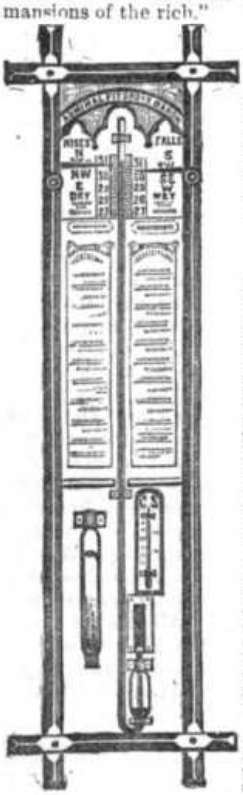
TO BE GIVEN AWAY,

A SELF-REGISTERING THERMOMETER,

WITH ALL BAROMETERS ORDERED BEFORE JUNE 24.

SPECIAL OFFER TO THE Readers of the "BANNER OF ISRAEL."

A GENUINE IMPROVED



"Admiral Fitzroy" Barometer

FOR 21s.!!!

Size 3 ft. 6 in. long by 7 in. wide.

Guaranteed equal to those sold retail at £5 5s.

The CHRISTIAN AGE says :—"A beautiful adornment for the walls of any home, or in the mansions of the rich."

TESTIMONIAL.

Villa Medina, East Cowes, Dec. 24, 1880.

DEAR SIR,—I beg to acknowledge the safe arrival of the Barometer. I think it very cheap at the price. I have compared it with Barometers supplied to H. M. Service, and find it is quite correct.

Your obedient Servant,
Lieut. the Hon. FOLEY C. P. VEREKER, R.N.

The patent having now expired, arrangements have been made to produce these wonderful Barometers at a price never dreamed of by the inventor. It is a well-known fact that Admiral Fitzroy's celebrated Barometers are usually sold at prices ranging from £5 5s. to £21. These really beautiful instruments are fitted in a polished American Ash Case, contain two burnished brass Indicators, and full Directions for use, together with Admiral Fitzroy's special remarks on the Atmosphere and the use of the Barometer.

In addition to the BAROMETER, there are given a FAHRENHEIT THERMOMETER and a specially prepared STORM GLASS, together with a DIAGRAM of the ATMOSPHERE, all fitted in an elegantly made case, forming a distinguished ornament for any home.

Cheques or P. O. Orders may be post-dated ten days, and money will be returned if goods are not approved.

BANNER OF ISRAEL COUPON. 25,5,'81.
Special Coupon.
Entitles the holder to one "Self-Registering Thermometer," free, on ordering Barometer before June 24, 1881.
THOS. SMITH.

All Orders must be payable to T. SMITH, 15, WINE OFFICE-COURT, FLEET-STREET, E.C., where specimen Barometers may be seen. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus. Cheques crossed City Bank.

CANVASSERS and Colporteurs wanted to sell from house to house the CHRISTIAN HERALD, a well illustrated penny religious weekly journal containing always as much by the Rev. C. H. Spurgeon and Dr. Talmage, Biographies, Stories, many Anecdotes, Sunday-school Lesson expounded, Temperance narratives, Prophetic article, Serial stories, Pictures &c. Its popularity is shown by its sale every week being 220,000 copies. Any man, woman, or youth may earn a few shillings in spare hours every week by selling it from house to house, or in the thoroughfares. A halfpenny edition (half the size of the penny edition) is issued for such canvassers who think they can sell it best. One man has sold 200 on a Saturday. Address, Mr. Andrew, Christian Herald, 3, Bakehouse-court, St. Paul's, London.

Price 3s., post free 3s. 4d. Handsome cloth, gilt, printed on toned paper and illustrated.

THE LOST TEN TRIBES AND 1882.

BY THE REV. DR. JOSEPH WILD, Of Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N.Y.

PHILO-ISRAEL (in the BANNER) says:—"We have much pleasure in directing attention to this handsome Identity volume. It contains twenty discourses of the well-known American divine, Dr. Joseph Wild, of Brooklyn, N.Y. We are glad to find from these discourses that Dr. Wild is quite one with us on this side the water with most, though not all the views we entertain on our great and glorious subject. We promise our readers that if they procure this work, and will peruse it, they will find 'our Identity' discussed in a clear, novel, racy, and 'American' point of view, which is sure to interest, sure to be instructive, and may lead the thoughtless and inquiring to pursue the investigation till possibly conviction may be the result.'

Price 2s., post free 2s. 3d.

THE FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

By REV JOSEPH WILD D.D.
With a Portrait of the Author.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Price 2d., post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.

Price 4d., by post 4½d. Special terms for a quantity.

THE ISRAEL OF GOD.

A SERVICE OF SONG

Upon the Career and Destiny of God's Ancient People Israel. WORDS AND MUSIC.

BY C. W. E.

Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Just published. Price 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

THE EGYPTIAN ENIGMA. A Plea for the British Yard: Its Antiquity and High Authority Proved by the Great Pyramid. By H. R. SHAW

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

AMMI; or, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham the "friend of God," and showing that true science history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Now ready, price 6d., post free 7d.

WHERE ARE THE TEN TRIBES?

BY WILLIAM GREIG, OF MONTREAL, CANADA.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.;
And may be had, by ordering, of any bookseller.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,

High-Class Tailor,

47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.

MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, MAY 25, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 231. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JUNE 1, 1881. [DOUBLE NUMBER, TWOPENCE.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
The Political and National Prospect	221
"Ye do Dishonour" Him. By L. P.	222
Israel's Multitudinous Seed	223
The Rock Quotes Identity Evidence from The Lucknow Witness	224
Israel's Capacity to Rule	224
The Traffic Through the Suez Canal in 1878, 1879, and 1880	225
"The Sign of the Son of Man." By the Rev. Denis Hanan, M.A.	225
A Plea for Missions	226
The British Empire. By G. L.	226
The Head and Not the Tail, Above Only and Not Beneath, in Respect to the Cost of Israel's Navy	227
Annual Meeting of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association	228
A Retrospect and a Testimony. By Henry Leslie	233
"Ho, Every One that Thirsteth." By the Rev. Denis Hanan, M.A.	234
The Church of England Zenana Missionary Society bears Witness We are Israel	234
More Blind Evidence. By J. Thomson	234
Mr. R. Stuart Poole, Keeper of Coins in the British Museum, Pronounces on the Great Pyramid	235
The Babylonish Captivity. By M. B.	235
Correspondence	235
Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union	235

THE POLITICAL AND NATIONAL PROSPECT.

MATTERS seem on all sides to be hastening to a crisis with our country, politically and nationally. At home Ireland is still disturbed, discontented, unsettled; torn by demagogues, restless with misery; crime is rampant, the Queen's Government is only maintained by a large force of soldiery quartered in the Southern and Western provinces; and there seems no near prospect of matters brightening.

In the House of Commons the question of Mr. C. Bradlaugh's right to a seat in a Christian assembly is again coming up for discussion, and, if possible, for decision. The flagrant denial by this gentleman of his belief in a God, and his present avowed willingness to take an oath the sanctity of which he cannot regard, since he does not believe, and openly glories in his unbelief in the very existence of his Creator, are facts which make it certain that his admission to the seat for which Northampton has twice chosen him will legalise atheism, and reduce the British Parliament to an assembly where the bare admission that a God exists is no longer needed as a qualification. The British Constitution—which is Israel's—requires as a sine quâ non the recognition by her representatives in Parliament assembled of the existence and sovereignty of God Almighty. The want of such recognition, which Mr. Bradlaugh disavows quite openly, and, consequently, once refused the oath, disqualifies him, and he is, one would think, under the circumstances as ineligible to sit as if he were an alien, or a dead corpse, or a female, or in any other way legally disqualified. We trust, ere these lines are published, the matter may be settled, so as to avoid an insult to our loving Father in heaven, which He cannot but resent from His ungrateful children. But if it be perpetrated by the Commons House of Parliament, and recognised as the law of the land, that a downright atheist, such as Mr. Bradlaugh is, holding views on the subject of the royal succession, Christianity, marriage, property, our blessed Lord's mission, character, teaching, and atonement, which he openly avows, then we shall consider that the "enemy has indeed come in like a flood," and shall welcome that fact as the harbinger of the glorious times when "the Lord shall lift up a standard against him" (Isa. lix. 19).

Such is the state of things at home. Lawlessness pervades the Church of England. Lawlessness has invaded the Senate, and scenes have been witnessed there in regard to Irish debates of late such as we have not heard of during the times of living men. If things look black in our own island home, how do they appear elsewhere? There are indeed ominous signs abroad that our blessed Lord has "gone forth" already (a phase probably of His coming to judge the earth) "to stir up the jealousy" in "yonder ill-consolidated Europe," and "like a man of war to cry, yea, roar, and prevail against His (Gentile, continental, Teutonic, and Latin) enemies" (Isa. xlii. 13).

The conduct of the French in regard to Tunis is inexplicable, and is puzzling the statesmen and journalists of the world. She has unjustly invaded the territory of a friendly State, forced her protectorate on the Bey of Tunis and his territories, and thereby sowed the seeds of "jealousy" and discord between herself and Turkey, herself and Italy, and herself and Great Britain. And this is not the only ground of offence lately observable between France and this country. This is what the Times of May 13, 1881, said upon this delicate point:—

> On every ground there ought to be a cordial friendship between the two countries; and yet it must be admitted that France has lately been submitting our friendship to tests of some severity. In all the difficult negotiations which have marked the latest stages of the Eastern Question, this country has received no help from France, but rather the reverse; and the Greek Question, which was hers pre-eminently, was dangerously compromised by her withdrawal at a critical stage. Commercially, too, our relations seem likely to enter upon a less agreeable phase. The new tariff, on which Mr. Forster has been commenting at Bradford, is justly regarded with great disfavour by our manufacturers. We sincerely hope that diplomatic and commercial friction of this kind will lead to no permanent unfriendliness between the two countries. But there is no denying that France has done herself harm with English public opinion by this Tunisian affair. It is not a feeling of jealousy, mercantile or political, that produces this result, it is rather a feeling of concern that a nation which seemed to have entered upon a better path should allow itself to be turned aside by fancied commercial interests into a course that is not in accordance with the best traditions of public law.

At the same juncture, while mischief is thus brewing between two or three of the great Powers of Europe, through the laches of the French Government in this miserable Tunisian business, Alexander I., the Prince of Bulgaria, the newly-elected sovereign of a baby State, has taken a step which bids fair to lead to serious results. He demands that the Constitution he swore to obey quite recently must be voluntarily amended in the direction of autocratic power, or he will himself abdicate. His high-handed act may not lead to a re-opening of the Eastern Question. We do not believe it will. But it raises an uneasy feeling that troubles will arise in Bulgaria, and that the Lord is engaged in sowing seeds of jealousy and discontent in that principality, which will ere long bear bitter fruit for Europe.

Things again in Russia are not bright. The Czar and his Empress are in terror of their lives. They live a living death, and their crowns are no light burdens to them both. Yet the Czar has adopted a reactionary policy, and Nihilism is not killed, or nearly killed. Jew-hunting and Jew-baiting have broken out (Jer. xvi. 16) on Russian territory in an acute and violent form, which leads one to believe that God's hand is working there as well, and forcing poor Judah—restless, wandering Judah—further and further West, till at last he will find rest for his weary foot only in one haven of repose—the British Empire and in America.

From the Transvaal, as we write, comes news of hostilities begun, and, therefore, of "sheer bloodguiltiness" as the result of the cessation of British influence in that country. Two native tribes, one favoured by the hostile Boers, the other by the loyal Boers and the Europeans, are at open war. The latter were victorious; but Kronje, the traitor of Potchefstroom, it is said, has raised a command of 500 Boers to go to the help of the defeated native forces under Montesia. What is the result? The situation on May 18, 1881, was said to be "serious, and in the face of the probability of civil war (!) it may be necessary," said the correspondent of the Standard, "for the British troops again to re-occupy the Transvaal to preserve peace." Surely here is the irony of fate; here the Nemesis of a foolish policy. We gave up the Transvaal after severe defeats, to avoid further "bloodguiltiness" to Mr. Gladstone and his Government. We shall be forced, in all probability, to re-occupy it to avoid the "bloodguiltiness" our own want of manliness occasioned. Should the old forces of Boers oppose us again in our re-occupation, the Government will hesitate again, we presume, to carry out such venturesome proceedings, and thus a policy of shuttlecock-play will commence, which will place our nation in a very miserable, unenviable position.

Verily, the affairs at home and abroad are in a critical, disjointed condition, and it requires all our faith as believers in our Identity to see God's hand guiding us. But it is doing so; and we do well to remind our readers to "Fear not." The Lord is with us, arranging all, providing for all events, and resolved to restore Israel to her first estates, to give her the promised new covenant, and to settle her at last in the land of the inheritance, what time that on the Gentile nations His determination is to pour out the fiery deluge of all His fierce anger (Zeph. iii. 8), His indignation, and His wrath. Israel, praise ye the Lord!

"THE DISSOLUTION OF THE TURKISH EMPIRE."—Had we the power to stay that event we would not. Above all things we desire our Master's presence; that cannot be whilst Islam bars the way against the return of His people to the land to which for eighteen centuries they have been strangers.—Bible Standard.

WHETHER true or false, there can be no question the belief in our Israelitish origin is spreading; the latest contribution to its literature being an Italian work, bearing the title, "Britannia-Israel."—Bible Standard.

"YE DO DISHONOUR" HIM.

BY L. P.

WE venture to suggest that these words may well be addressed to those of our opposers, who allow that they cannot deny our national possession of the earthly blessings promised to Israel: but who, nevertheless, maintain that they were withdrawn from the latter and bestowed on us, who they declare to be a Gentile nation. What a wretched appreciation this presents to our minds of the greatness of God's birthright privileges promised to Joseph (1 Chron. v. 1). Surely, if such is the outcome of a God-bestowed birthright, Esau would seem to be scarcely so exceedingly irreverent, ungrateful, and unwise, as we are led to suppose from the Bible he was considered to be, for selling his birthright for food to sustain his fainting body. We may almost count him weak for his after repentance, and for shedding the tears, with which he endeavoured in vain to wash away his error. He had a blessing bestowed on him after all by his father, and a promise that his brother's yoke should be broken from off his neck, and we believe that an after career of success and prosperity awaited his posterity, and has been run under the name of the conquering Turk. So why should he have lamented for his lost birthright, which brought so little earthly prosperity to his brother?

Joseph, on the other hand, whose was the birthright (1 Chron. v. 1), never despised or sold it. Yet, after all, the blessing, according to our opponents, turned out to be fruitful in no privileges at all! Ephraim, the representative of Joseph, and all his Israelite brethren, was to wake up, after a time of subjection, trial, and obscurity, to find his promised wealth, power, multitudinous seed, and the glorious evangelising mission, monopolised by another people, with whom they had had nothing to do by origin.

We are told our belief dishonours God's gracious gift of salvation through Christ; but surely if a loving hand bestows on us the highest possible blessing, and at the same time strews our path with lesser ones, which brighten and ennoble our lot, and may be instrumental in promoting the permanent well-being of others, we should shew ingratitude and folly in trampling on such, or speaking lightly of them, as being unworthy of our high estimation.

We point to our vast national privileges and blessings, and we say they are the undeserved gifts of God the Father and the Son, in accordance with their ancient promises, and we assert that they who put aside these promises as worthy of small regard from Christians, do dishonour to the Maker of them. It is lightly esteeming them to believe they passed away unfulfilled, and shame is upon those who think to exalt the Saviour by declaring the prophecies of what was to gladden and glorify the future of His chosen servants' offspring, did but deceive with delusive hopes.

To those who try to escape from the difficulty by saying the promised earthly advantages are to be Joseph's (Ephraim's), when, rejoined to Judah, they shall dwell as Christians in Palestine, we would say, how, when every Israelite shall be equally blessed, shall Joseph possess birthright privileges? And, if he can stand then no higher than his brethren, Judah and Levi, where has that especial blessing been? Where is it now? Where and what can it ever be?

But there is another point to which we would draw attention. God said, "Israel is My own, even My firstborn" (Exod. iv. 22), and "Ephraim is My firstborn" (Jer. xxxi. 9), and He gave forth the law (Exod. xiii. 2) that every firstborn should be sanctified to Him, set apart, consecrated, but redeemed by offerings made to Him (Num. xviii. 15). And God took the Levites instead of all the firstborn of Israel (Num. iii. 12, viii. 16, 18).

But for God's own firstborn, what redeeming offering can be made? and to whom? To Himself, for His own firstborn?

Digitized by Google

That assuredly cannot be. To whom else could it be made? Is there any higher than God? None. Then we argue, Ephraim is consecrated, set apart, sanctified for ever. His lot can never be the same, or on an equality with that of any other nation. He can never cease to be "set apart."

In a speech of Lord Rosebery's, reported in The Times, of April 12, he is reported to have said, referring to the Jews, that they are, "after all, a sacred race." Aye, my lord, true of them, and no less true of "Ephraim, My firstborn." Let those who deny we are they, seek for, and find them, if they can, elsewhere. Are they not doing dishonour to Christ the Lord, by neglecting to search for His consecrated ones, God's firstborn? Do our opponents forget that what God set His seal on as His sanctified ones, must be Christ's also, since He is one with the Father from the beginning. And though individuals amongst them may lose life everlasting by their sins and their faithlessness, Israel is, and must be, a nation apart, distinct from all other nations, by the will of Him who said, Israel is My son, even My firstborn.

April, 14, 1881.

ISRAEL'S MULTITUDINOUS SEED.

We wonder if many of our readers paid attention to the sub-leader of the Times, of March 9, 1881, on the subject of British emigration and immigration? It was a paper deserving great consideration, as being the very heart and kernel of our Identity, and one God has linked with our Israelite origin. His Word promised to "our forefather Abraham and his seed for ever" the peculiar, unique, and unmistakable gift of fecundity and increase right through their earthly career, from the time when the nation first was consolidated in Moses' days (Dent i. 10, 11) down to the end of time (Hosea i. 10; Rev. xix. 1, 6).

Such being the case, we have put upon us the necessity of finding Israel in our own present day, exhibiting this mark of their origin, a wonderful growth in numbers, pointing them out as a people sui generis on this very account; unquestionably Israel because of their increase in numbers, with power to double their population in incredibly short periods of time. What says the Times on this very point respecting the British, so lately as March 9, 1881? It said what follows:—

The returns of emigration and immigration lately published remind us once more that, whatever the reasons, the inhabitants of these isles are the most increasing and multiplying in the world. No political community ever contained so abundant a fountain of that strength which is among the essential elements of power, wealth and progress. Our population has to bear all the drains borne by our neighbours, and some that they are spared. We have not only to sustain and to protect our peaceful dominion over the sea, and to feed numerous colonies with that labour which is the first requisite; we have to supply the vast republic rapidly occupying the vast regions of North America with the hands necessary for adapting a continent to the wants of civilised man. As fast as the aborigines recede, or disappear, the children of our towns and villages take their place. Without such outlets, the prolific habits of our race assume even an alarming aspect. A school of economists has thought it a duty to check increase by enactments of an almost penal character, and that were even ostentatious interferences with nature. They denounced as presumptuous rashness the old saying that "Heaven never sends mouths but it sends meat;" and certainly, if England had had to be content with its own small area, something in the nature of a revolution or a miracle would have been wanted to feed so many. We have lived, however, to see what is neither a revolution nor a miracle, but which more than answers the end once thought impossible. The British races, since they began to outgrow their narrow home, have been peopling that Greater Britain which extends round the world, and in which we may fairly comprehend the States that prefer a new dynasty every four years to a new Parliament every seven. By even too many common characteristics we cannot doubt they are of our kith and kin, and we may hail them as members of an ever-widening family circle. Once a year we are reminded of our immense, and, no doubt, necessary contributions to these and other relations, who would be poor indeed without them. Before we state the figures, it may be as well to remind our readers of the emotions with which we receive the accounts of other drains on our population. War, pestilence, severe winters, shipwrecks slay their thousands, and even their tens of thousands. They suggest a momentary fear whether we can stand the call on the reproductive powers of the nation. But it must be a very disastrous year in which all these causes together mount up to the loss of twenty thousand lives. What is this to the totals before us?

For the sake of simplicity we exclude at once the immense number of foreigners who simply pass through our ports on their way to the rest of the world. It is no slight tribute to our character and institutions, as well as to our position, that the greater part of the Continental people consult convenience, speed, and safety, and no doubt economy too, by throwing themselves into the lines of our national emigration. They are, indeed, casting in their lot with us and our children, and are wise in so doing. What we are most concerned with is our own annual outpouring. It amounted last year to 227,542 Englishmen, Irishmen, and Scotchmen, being an increase of 63,268 on the year before. The immigrants, however, are to be deducted, and they amounted last year to 47,007, leaving a net emigration of 180,535. The corresponding excess of emigrants over immigrants, or net emigration, was 126,338 in the year 1879; 57,958 in 1878; 31,395 in 1877; and 38,065 in 1876. Last year's net emigration was, therefore, exceptionally high, and that in one direction. To the United States there went 140,052—that is, twice as many as in the year before, and seven times as many as in the year before that; while in the two previous years—viz., 1876 and 1877—the going and returning streams between this and the States about balanced one another. It is remarkable that the greater part of the excessive emigration of last year to the United States took place in the first six months of the year—a fact so exceptional, that it has to be accounted for. The net emigration to British North America was 16,214—an advance of about 2,000 on the year before. That to Australia was 18,274, only about half that of the year before—a fact that seems to show that, whatever the other merits of the colonial policy fashionable in that quarter, it fails to draw emigrants, possibly even is not intended to draw them. The net emigration to all other parts was 5,995—about 2,000 more than in the year before. The respective contributions of the different parts of these isles show that emigration can no longer be regarded as an enforced expatriation of a class flying from its oppressors. Of the net emigration of last year 111,845 were English, 22,056 were Scotch, 93,641 were Irish. The English superabundance is as much driven to seek homes elsewhere as the Irish.

The Times does not know, it seems, why the inhabitants of these isles are the most increasing and multiplying in the world. We Israelites do know, if the Times does not. It is because God is faithful to His promises to Abraham, our forefather. "Population is the strength of Empire," and God knew that when He endowed the seed of Abraham, as He did, with "the increasing faculty" through all time. It is, the Times admits, "the essential element of power, wealth and progress," just the three qualities God gave the chosen seed of Israel to qualify them for "their heirship of the world." He gave them "power to get wealth" (Deut. viii. 18). He constituted them ever the victors in all their wars with their human earthly foes (Isa. xli. 10—15), and He made them the pioneers of all mundane progress, the benefactors of the human family (Gen. xii. 2, 3, xviii. 18, xxii. 17, 18; Isa. xxvii. 6; Acts iii. 25, &c.).

The Times notices further the peaceful dominion over the sea our race has acquired, our colonial power, the dying out of the aborigines everywhere to enable our redundant population to surge over and occupy their "waste places and desolations." Britain's "Greater Britain," the Times sees, extends round the world, and it claims American Manasseh as, after all, a part of the British off-shoots, our kith and kin, our brother Jonathan. Then follow the figures, the astounding figures which call forth all these reflections.

The annual outpouring of Israel's increase, literally like the fishes spawning (Gen. xlviii. 16), amounted last year to 227,542, which is as though two large towns (Bristol and Clifton, for example) had taken ship and left the shores of Great Britain for foreign parts. The whole subject deserves the candid, careful prayerful consideration of our opponents. We do put it to such men as the Rev. B. W. Savile and others to sit down and judge whether such a stupendous sign as that we are considering (one which God Himself gives us all through the Bible as the test mark of His people) is not certainly an indication that we are Israel? Also, whether all the doubts of the Cymric scholars, with the difficulties of phonetic differences in the names of ancient races added to them, suffice to prove that the people who alone possess (note the Times) the God-given identification of "population" are not the Lost Ten Tribes, whose discovery must now be so close at hand to fulfil the prophecies!

"THE ROCK" QUOTES IDENTITY EVIDENCE FROM "THE LUCKNOW WITNESS."

In The Rock of November 12, 1880, we found a piece of Identity evidence quoted from a North Indian newspaper, The Lucknow Witness, which must be reproduced in the Banner. It compares the French with the British as colonists, and decides that while the former have utterly failed, the British have a monopoly of this mission, and notices it, as a "very significant fact full of meaning for the future."

We can tell both The Lucknow Witness and The Rock why this is. But we suppose neither will yet heed the information we give. It is because the French, being Gentiles, have no prophetic destiny calling on them "to raise up" and "establish" the "desolate heritages" of the earth as colonists (Isa. xlix. 8). That function is reserved for Israel alone. But as this British nation is Israel, we perform the prophetic duty allotted to us, and shall thereby acquire what God said we should have, "the heirship of the world" (Rom. iv. 13). The article we allude to runs as follows:—

"The Lucknow Witness says, It is just fifty years since Algeria came under the dominion of France, and the French are reviewing the situation. They are not very well satisfied with it. Their failure as colonists in whatever part of the globe they take up the business, has been, so far, very decisive. This is a mission of which the Anglo-Saxon race seems to have a monopoly; and it is a very significant fact, full of meaning for the future. The French will not leave home in any great numbers; and when they have left, they do not know how to get along. Algeria is only thirty-six hours by steam from the ports of Southern France; but in fifty years only about 200,000 native Frenchmen have gone there. The rule is military, and autocratic. Settlers want freedom; and if they get even less abroad than at home, they will not go."

Reader, let us thank God we are British Israelites, and for God's good gift to us British of the blessings promised to Abraham's seed (Gen. xxviii. 14).

ISRAEL'S CAPACITY TO RULE.

We have received from some North of England paper the following quotation from a leading article, which must find room in the Banner of Israel. The whole runs so exactly on the lines of the Banner, that we imagine, from the bare perusal of the view set forth by the writer, that he must be a believer in our Identity. The article advocates, just as we do, that Candahar should be retained, and certainly deprecates what most men see is sure to end in disaster—namely, that we should leave the Afghans of Candahar and its neighbourhood to the tender mercies of the native rulers, or of the Russians when they arrive there. The article, which is rather long, is to the following effect:—

"The reasons which are adduced for the abandonment of Candahar, and for leaving the Afghans to the tender mercies of native rulers, would be admirably cogent if addressed to France, or even to Germany. Neither of these countries has had much experience in the subjugation of militant races; the genius of our neighbours has not lain in the redemption of millions of oriental subjects from barbarism, or worse, to civilization. To Frenchmen or to Germans it might well be appealed that difficulties of Empire should induce retirement and concentration; that timidity and irresolution should rule in the face of contingencies which would certainly be expensive and troublesome, and might even be dangerous. One could well understand such suggestions being received with gladness, even by Englishmen ignorant of their country's history, indifferent to their country's progress, or sceptical as to its latent strength. But that timid counsels should prevail with a people who remember what our Indian Empire was a short century and a half ago—who note the quality and capacity of the noble races who have in their turn challenged our supremacy, and owned our rule after we had proved ourselves the stronger—who remember with what insignificant resources our position has been won and maintained, who bear in mind the individual courage and resource which have reared the superstructure of that vast Eastern dependency; who are cognizant, above all, of the croakings by which those devoted men of Empire have been obstructed in their mission of light and healing—that to such people timidity should now be exalted to a public virtue, and faith and courage denounced as sentiments which have little or no part in 'policy,' is to our mind a very significant, and withal, deplorable sign of the times. 'Nothing can live which cannot grow and change.' Why should a natural law like this—as old and eternal as the everlasting hills—have application in all the other concerns of life except that most important concern—the strength and maintenance of race supremacy? Proportionately to the increase of our population, our increase in the qualifications for rule and governance, within the last half century, has been in a degree which can be measured by nothing so accurately as our great advance in mental activity. This country never had a more numerous, a more zealous, a more intelligent governing class. The difficulty is not so much where to find the instruments as to find the work for the instruments. Whether it is to go to death at Cabul, to explore the secret fastnesses of Central Asia, to fight for supremacy with the Boers in the Transvaal, to forge a way through the pestilent swamps of Ashantee, to encounter a thousand perils in Central Africa, in Australia, or the 'isles of the sea;' to encounter Zulus for honours' sake, or the volcanic giants of the Andes for science sake; in every direction, for every conceivable reason, with a thousand varieties of purpose and design, enterprise never calls in vain upon our people. Our Empire is, in fact, too small to satisfy the burning zeal and courage of our sons. Dangers do not come thick enough, the opportunities for the display of the qualities of endurance and intrepidity come too infrequently to satisfy us. For every duty there are hundreds of fitting hands anxious to perform it. No peril demands volunteers for its remedy or prevention, but thousands desire to be enrolled to satisfy the demand. The more perilous the service, indeed, the more willing servants are found. With all our luxuries at home, foreign service is never mentioned but that many more are desirous of leaving the inglorious ease at home for the privations and the chances of distinction abroad. It is notorious that the same surplusage of hands and minds—capable and cool and full of resource—is to be found at home when it is a question of filling an appointment either of the highest or the lowest grade. The difficulty is here how to choose the best. Capable young men in all directions and in all classes are crying for suitable employment, and the efficiency of every branch of our public service testifies to the capacity which must perforce run to seed in many directions through lack of suitable employment. These do not seem to be days when the designs and duties of Empire can be safely or prudently curtailed. The central Government of this country fondly imagines itself the depository of all or most of its capacity. It has great burdens to bear, and hesitates to weight itself with more. The ease and facility—the absolute smoothness and accuracy with which the multiform demands upon our great departments are met and satisfied, should suggest the capability of extension rather than the contrary. There is room for extension in every direction, and means without end. Finality is the last plea in the world which English Governments ought to preach. They overload themselves with petty details which parish sextons ought to be trusted to do, and then grumble and fret under the responsibilities of Empire. Let them shuffle out of the centralising coil in which they have been throttling themselves for this last century, and give themselves up solely to the great concerns of Imperial policy. If this is done, we shall hear far less than we do of the limit of our capacity to govern. That limit will only be reached when Ministers fail to find executive officers to do their bidding. We are far enough off such a sign of decline yet. The hour never comes without the men. Less than a century and a half ago it was thought as hopeless to attempt the civilization of the Highlanders as it is now thought hopeless to subdue the Afridis. But the Highlanders now go forth to conquer and subdue, in our name, races not less intrepid and fiery than their own. The power of the Rajpoots, the Mahrattas, and the Sikhs has been subjugated, not without peril and grievous trouble and expense, it is true, but with infinite success and satisfaction. Civilization, we opine, is not the less advanced because the gallant Sikh and the noble little Ghoorka, once our dread enemies, are now our best allies in the work of amelioration. With such memories of the past, such experiences, such rewards, we cannot conceive why the prophets who preach the doctrine of limitation and timidity to-day, should be any more reliable in their calculations than those who indulged in the same profitless occupation a hundred years ago."

THE TRAFFIC THROUGH THE SUEZ CANAL IN 1878, 1879, AND 1880.

We have just seen a return giving a comparative statement of the traffic through the Suez Canal for the years 1878, 1879, and 1880. It is a remarkable document, and one which brings out in high relief the fact that Israel is the head and not the tail even there. The figures prove British supremacy among the nations, and therefore our possession of an Israelite, nay, an Ephraim-Israelite blessing, destined to be developed in the "last days" (Gen. xlix. 1, 25)—namely, "the blessings of the deep that lieth under." For instance, we find that in 1878, there passed through the Suez Canal 1,598 steamers, of which 1,268 were British; in 1879, there were 1,477, of which 1,144 were British; while in 1880, there were 2,026 steamers which passed through the canal, and of these 1,592 were British. In the first week of February last, out of 39 steamers which used the canal, 29 were British. In the second week, of 54 steam vessels 47 were British. These facts and figures, taken quite ab extra, and not from Identity sources, are very remarkable indications of our power and supremacy at sea, which is another way of asserting that we are Ten-Tribed Israel, gifted with the blessing of the Gate of our enemies (Gen. xxii. 17).

The Jew-baiting system continues in Germany in undiminished force, and has also spread to Austria. It is likely to prove a serious evil in the latter kingdom, seeing that, probably, it contains a fourth of the Jewish race. God is thus thrusting His people back to their own land. "Even so, come quickly, Lord Jesus."—Bible Standard.

"THE SIGN OF THE SON OF MAN."

By the Rev. Denis Hanan, M.A.

Many conjectures have been hazarded as to what this "sign" (Matt. xxiv. 30) may be. Thus: "The sign of the Son of man:—(1) Chrysostom, &c.: The sign of the cross in the heaven. (2) Olshausen: The star of the Messiah. (3) Ewald, Fritzsche: The Messiah Himself. (4) Schott: No other than that described in ver. 29. (5) Hoffman: An appearance resembling a man, which was seen in the Holiest during the siege of Jerusalem. (6) Meyer: A glorious appearance, the forerunner of the δόξα of the Messiah, a kind of Shekina. (7) But why not the Shekina of the δόξα of Christ itself? There is a distinction between the shining of the manifestation, and the personal manifestation itself" (Lange: Comment on Matthew).

It may be allowable to make a further suggestion, founded upon the word used by our blessed Lord, and the use of the same word in the Prophetic Scriptures, which He was evidently quoting and adapting at the time, as appears from a comparison of the original with kindred passages in the Septuagint.

Our Lord used the word σημεῖον, the word by which the LXX. render נֵס nēhs, and which our version translates Standard.

I quote from an article in the The Expositor for April, page 298:—"In those passages of the Old Testament where Isaiah speaks of a standard the Septuagint renders the word נֵס by σημεῖον no less than four times (xi. 12, xiii. 2, xviii. 3, xxxiii. 23). By σημεία once (xxx. 17), and by συσσημον three times (v. 26, xlix. 22, lxii. 10). The word is only found in Isaiah in two other places (xi. 10, xxxi. 9), and there the Septuagint has quite missed its meaning, as it has in three out of the five passages, where it is found in Jeremiah; while in the two remaining ones (li. 12, 27), it is rendered by σημεῖον. It is not fair to conclude from this that the word which the Lord actually used (if He spoke in Aramaic) was נֵס or אָתָא, both of which are used in the Targum for 'standard,' and that when He spoke of the 'sign of the Son of man' appearing in heaven, He was alluding to such passages as these. 'In that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentile seek; and his rest shall be glorious. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall set His hand again the second time to recover the remnant of His people, which shall be left, from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the islands of the sea. And He shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth' (Isa. xi. 10—12). 'Behold, I will lift up Mine hand to the Gentiles, and set up My standard to the people, and they shall bring thy sons in their arms, and thy daughters shall be carried upon their shoulders' (Isa. xlix. 22). 'Go through, go through the gates; prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up, the highway, gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people' (Isa. lxii. 10)."

The article proceeds to state that "all these passages refer to the establishment of a Catholic Church," and arguing upon what appears to me to be a petitio principii, concludes that in the establishment of the Church upon the ruins of Judaism the Sign has appeared.

To those who recognise in the passages quoted, distinct prophetic statements concerning the ingathering of Israel, the interesting question may be suggested—viz., If, when our Lord spoke of "the sign," He was quoting or adapting words which foretold the national ingathering, that gathering may not be the immediate precursor and sign of His own manifestation?

The identification of the covenant people of the Ten Tribes, their ownership of the Holy Land, and their power therein shewn, would be a portent in the political heavens, would cause mourning to the nations, and would be an unmistakable sign that the Son of man was about to be revealed with power and great glory.

April, 1881.

A PLEA FOR MISSIONS.

THE object of a card with the above heading (to be purchased, we believe, of the Church Missionary Society, at its various branches throughout the kingdom; price one shilling) is to show, at a glance of the eye, the frightful need this miserable world labours under of the help of the Gospel of Christ. The population of the globe, as estimated by the late Mr. Keith Johnston, the eminent geographer, in 1879, is taken in this card at 1,424 millions of souls.

The way the matter is put before the observer in this ingenious publication is as follows:—A parallelogram, four inches by three, is cut out of the material, and a piece of canvas is let in in its place. On the canvas there is worked, in tent stitch, 44 rows, containing 32 stitches each (with 16 over), representing, in six colours of Berlin wool, the various religions of the world. The number of stitches, therefore, is $44 \times 32 + 16 = 1,424$. Counting each stitch as a million souls, the result is 1,424,000,000, as the total number of mankind this world contains.

But how are they divided as regards religious light? The card tells a very sad tale. The bottom of the canvas parallelogram is covered with 27 rows (less eight) of stitches of black wool, representing 856,000,000 of heathen. Above them are the comparatively small number of 170,000,000 of Mohammedans worked in green. In the middle of these is the very ridiculously minute number of eight brown stitches, or 8,000,000 of the House of Judah. Above them 190 stitches of scarlet wool shows there are but 190,000,000 of Roman Catholics in the world. Succeeding them are 84,000,000 of the Greek Church, shown by a small patch of blue wool, worked into three rows; and, last of all, at the top of the canvas, are the 116 stitches of yellow wool, indicating the very few in comparison with the immense mass of the other inhabitants of the world, who, being Protestants, or "witnesses" for God, represent Israel of the isles—Manasseh in America, and, we suppose, also Protestant Germany.

We fear 40 of the latter stitches ought, by rights, to be removed from the yellow portion, leaving but 76,000,000 out of 1,424,000,000, as the sole representatives of true Protestantism, and of the witnessing functions of the nation Israel. The latter, therefore, are in a terrible minority in the world, and, judged by the rule the Rev. B. W. Savile desires to bring to bear on our Identity, has no pretence to represent true, God-given religion, since majorities, with this divine, are held to rule. "The majority of the clergy reject our Identity; therefore the Identity is false," is our clerical opponent's wise argument. Protestantism is in a ridiculous minority, therefore the Protestants are wrong; but the grand mass of heathendom, in their black, horrible majority of 856,000,000, are, beyond doubt, perfectly in the right as to their God-favoured religion.

We know this conclusion is absurd; but it is not one whit more absurd than Mr. Savile's, who, counting heads, condemns our Identity because only a handful of the under-shepherds of Israel have yet been given eyesight to see it from on high. We hope our friends will each endeavour to secure one of these cards (whose price, by the way, we deem to be excessive). They teach us Israelites several serious lessons, of which the following are the chief:—

1. That Israel's evangelising work yet to be done in the world is enormous, and requires instant and persistent evangelising effort.

2. That the 1,800 years during which the Gospel of Christ has been preached in the world has hitherto yielded but the most trifling results, according to the prophecies, since the converts are to be but witnesses to the truth before the end (Matt. xxiv. 14).

3. That the sole hope for the salvation of the heathen, Mohammedan, Roman Catholic, Greek, and Jewish races is the Identity, since the promise of the conversion of "many nations and strong people" to the Lord is attached to times after Israel is discovered, but not otherwise (Zech. viii. 22).

4. That our Identity is the only means God's Word opens for the salvation of mankind in their masses; and that even thus, the end is to be attained (under God) by Israel's national conversion first (Jer. xxxi. 33; Isa. lxvi. 19), and after that by their preaching of the Word to God's glory (Isa. lii. 7; Gen. xviii. 18).

THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

By G. L.

I HAVE only recently become aware of the existence of your periodical, the BANNER OF ISRAEL, and of the pamphlets in connection therewith; and I am afraid that I am greatly in arrear. But I am quite certain that the Old Testament contains not a word of prophecy, however minute, that is not of almost infinite significance. There are no idle words, no patterns of things to come that are irrelevant or unmeaning.

There is a phrase of strange import—"not a people"—repeated three times in Holy Scripture. Take Deut. xxxii. 21: "They have moved Me to jealousy with that which is not God; they have provoked Me to anger with their vanities, and I will move them to jealousy with those which are not a people. I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation." Now turn to Isaiah vii. 8: "And within three-score and five years shall Ephraim be broken, that it be not a people." Then Romans x. 19. But, I say, did not Israel know? First Moses saith, "I will provoke you to jealousy by them that are no people, and by a foolish nation will I anger you."

These descriptions indicate the same people, and they exactly describe the condition of the inhabitants of the islands of Great Britain and Ireland before the Christian era. They consisted of the Phœnicians and Israelite settlers, who colonised the South of Britain to work the tin, lead, copper, and calamine mines, and collect the ore and smelt the metals, so as to have them ready for shipment on the arrival of the ships. They had no unity, no body politic, no laws, no administration, no towns. They had degenerated into rude savages, broken into innumerable factions under petty chiefs, and all subject to a priest-caste called Druids, who had originally sprung from the priests of Moloch, or Baal, in Palestine. They also had a mixture of the landless and lawless bands, or crews, who came from the opposite shores of Gaul and Belgium—mere outlaws, or pirates. It would be sickening to go into further detail. It is sufficient to say they were not a people, and had no idea of nationality or unity—mere hoards, or clans, of savages, dwelling in cells or hovels concealed in woods and wilds; and practising mutual warfare to collect captives for the Druid priests, to be sacrificed, and cattle for their own subsistence.

Now God had said (Jer. xxxi. 9): "For I am a Father to Israel, and Ephraim is My firstborn;" and at verse 10 we have, "Hear the Word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him and keep him as a shepherd doth his flock." This points to the influx of the Anglo-Saxons, who were the successive arrivals of the flocks to be gathered and kept in Britain and Ireland.

Now, they are further described in the first parable (Matt. xxi. 28): "A certain man had two sons; and he came to the first (Ephraim), and said, Son, go work to-day in my vineyard (29). He answered and said, I will not; but afterward he repented and went (30). And he came to the second (Judah), and said likewise; and he answered and said, I go, sir, and went not. Whether of them twain did the will of his father? (31). They say unto him, The first." This is just what has happened—the Ten Tribes, who, from the death of Solomon, refused to work in God's vineyard, have repented; and are now the zealous labourers in God's vineyards in these isles and the Gentile world.

Now let us take the second parable, in the thirty-third and following verses of the same chapter, and specially applicable to the House of Judah: "There was a certain householder which planted a vineyard, and hedged it round about, and digged a winepress in it, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, and went into a far country." Then, after describing the wicked conduct of those husbandmen to their Lord's servants and Son: "Christ said to the Scribes and Pharisees, When the lord therefore of the vineyard cometh, what will he do unto those husbandmen? They say unto Him, He will miserably destroy those wicked men, and will let out his vineyard unto other husbandmen, which shall render him the fruits in their season (43). Therefore say I unto you, The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." Now turn to the facts of history, as they illustrate this second parable.

Digitized by Google

Vespasian, having sprung from a family of respectability and public confidence, and having been a cadet in a Roman legion, came in A.D. 54 to Britain, and there, in a few years, completed his military education, and became entitled to high command. He had approved himself to his superiors, and all others, by his personal courage and aptitude to command, his strict discipline of his troops, and his skilful leadership of them, and his righteousness and moderation towards, and his consideration for the native Britons, who treated him with confidence and reverence, and perhaps love.

At the next periodical distribution of the provinces, he obtained from Nero the Governorship of the Province of Syria, and brought with him an additional military force. He very soon found that however paternally disposed towards the Jews in Palestine, their rebellious and lawless conduct compelled him to go to war with them, and he and his son Titus, in A.D. 74, were, under the force of circumstances, and with the greatest reluctance, compelled to what virtually was an execution of the doom pronounced by the Scribes and Pharisees against the wicked husbandmen—namely, their miserable destruction.

Then, in A.D. 78, he remembered the inhabitants of Britain, and he sent Agricola to govern them, and to commence a firm and paternal rule over them; which was, in fact, the anointing them to be the successors of the wicked husbandmen, and the transfer to them of the vineyard (the kingdom of God). He suppressed the clans and factions, and began to train them into unity, to transform them into an united kingdom, and instruct them in the arts, and in the enjoyment and laws of civilisation. The Gospel also found its way into Britain and Ireland, and in the latter isle it shone with peculiar purity and splendour.

But, your readers may say, this is 1,800 years ago. Shew us some proof that the substituted husbandmen really worked in the vineyard, and rendered the fruits in due season. To this I say that the kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard-seed, which a man took and sowed in his field (Matt. xiii. 31, 32). It requires time, and by the time-tables or horologies of eternity 1,800 years are but as yesterday when it is past, or as a watch in the night. The ante-Christian vineyard, which commenced with the call of Abraham, was 1,800 years before the chief Corner-Stone was set in its place (Matt. xxi. 41); and if 1,800 years have elapsed since the transfer to the new husbandmen, we must remember that the transferees were not a people at the date of transfer. The whole population of the isles, considered in the aggregate, were a foolish nation for ages after the time of Agricola. They had to undergo some preparatory training, and to wrestle, not against flesh and blood only (Eph. vi. 12), but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. The strife has been long, and the progress slow; but it has not been without its advantages in its illustrations of the depth of the wisdom and power of God, and the unsearchableness of His ways. It was designed (Eph. iii. 10) to the intent that now unto the principalities and powers in heavenly places might be known by the Church the manifold wisdom of God. The arch-enemy might hover like a bird of prey to seek the blood of saints; but his petty and occasional triumphs would turn out to be disastrous defeats. He had waged an anti-Christ warfare ever since the fall of man, and he had kept a sharp eye upon the workers in the vineyard, but his counsels were turned to foolishness against him; and the strife sets forth the wisdom and knowledge and power of God.

It was wonderfully cunning to retard the unification of what is now Great Britain and Ireland, and to set the Highland Scotch and the Irish against England to terrorise her, and intimidate her by hostile alliances with her bitterest enemies, and affording landing places for their forces against us. But that time is past, and our missionary work began as soon as the union between Great Britain and Ireland was effected. Since then a great Empire has begun to spring up, and our means of preaching the Gospel to every Gentile are vastly increased; so much so as to excite the mad rage of that old lawless one, the devil; and now the policy is to mangle and break into pieces the British Empire.

We are not to do anything so bad as to preach the Gospel to the poor benighted natives of heathendom, lest we should transgress international law, and offend against the comity of nations. But we are to ignore the poor natives altogether, and make terms for the surrender of them to the tyrants who have got them in their power; which tyrants we could, if they oppose our mission and attempted to bar our rights of way, as easily crush, as we are empowered to do by Christ Himself. He has commanded us to preach the Gospel to every creature. This commission carries with it all necessary rights, powers, and means, rights of way and free access, power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy, so that nothing by any means shall hurt us, and He has promised to be with us always, until the end of the world.

We have been denounced as seeking only Empire, like those Empires of the ancient world; whereas we seek only the kingdom of God and His righteousness. We are told Ireland is to be separated from Great Britain, all our colonies and dependencies are to be abandoned, and every monster in human form, petty savage chiefs, are to be invited to fight for their possession, and commit universal slaughter in contending for them. The Irish, being very near to us, are to be utilised in the Fenian mode of torpedo warfare—that is, by destroying everything valuable by gunpowder and other explosives. There is the peace-at-any-price party with their scuttle-off-and-cut-and-run policy. It reminds me of that remarkable crisis in the history of the Israelites narrated in Num. xiii. and xiv. I only hope that they will meet the fate of the ten spies, and the leaders who wanted to scuttle back to Egypt, first having stoned Moses and Aaron to death.

THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL, ABOVE ONLY AND NOT BENEATH, IN RESPECT TO THE COST OF ISRAEL'S NAVY.

That England obtains more for her money spent on the navy than other Powers do, seems, at first sight, a startling proposition, but it is perfectly correct, as a reviewer in the current number of the Edinburgh shows by most interesting figures. Dividing the annual expenditure of the navy by every ton of armoured or unarmoured shipping, we find that in Russia the sum spent is nearly £100 per ton; in France, £54 6s.; in Germany, £50 6s.; and in England, £43 18s. Italy and Austria, without foreign squadrons, cost respectively £40 4s., and £31 18s. A ton of shipping cannot be maintained and repaired in France for less than £3 13s., whereas in England the cost is £1 4s. Coals and engine-room stores cost 18s. 7d. per ton in France, and 12s. 1d. in England. In simply keeping up the naval dockyards a French Admiral says the French pay £258,000 for what we get done for £147,000. Supposing the chief object of a navy to be the protection of the mercantile marine and ocean trade, to protect every 100 tons of merchant shipping costs, annually, in France, £778; Russia, £694; Austria, £256; Italy, £187; England, £115. To protect every £1,000 worth of seaborne imports and exports costs, in Russia, about £35 18s.; Austria, £28 10s.; France, £26 16s.; Italy, £25 8s.; Germany, £22 16s.; England, £17 5s. These are very striking and suggestive figures, and they should be remembered when economists are hungry or reformers are dissatisfied.

Straws, Showing which Way the Wind Blows.—The Daily Express, Dublin, March, 1881, says:—"The men employed at Krupp's manufactory are working night and day in supplying orders for guns from abroad. Roumania ordered a hundred; Greece, seven hundred; Sweden, fifty; Holland, a hundred and twenty; Italy, four hundred guns.

Digitized by Google

ANNUAL MEETING
OF THE
METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

THE third anniversary of this Association was celebrated in the lower room of Exeter Hall on Friday evening, when the President, THE RIGHT HON. VISCOUNT FOLKESTONE, took the chair. The proceedings were opened with prayer, after which,

The CHAIRMAN said it was with great pleasure he attended this meeting, and was glad to see so large an attendance. He was afraid that it did not appear in the BANNER OF ISRAEL that the Association had been so energetic as previously. The reason was that since the last meeting the financial aspects were not so good as was hoped, because they had been almost too energetic, and spent more money than their finances warranted. The Council had, however, very nearly cleared off all the liabilities, and individual members had been about the country delivering lectures, and upholding the objects of the Association, and their labours had been crowned with a great amount of success. He hoped the result would be a larger number of people being convinced of the truth the Association desired to propagate. His lordship then referred to the discussion which had taken place at Mr. Stevenson Blackwood's house with some opponents of the views of this Association. After the first meeting many, if not convinced, were at least interested in the subject; but it was obvious that many came there with preconceived notions, and were determined, in spite of all reason and argument, to remain opponents. The removal of these preconceived notions was one of the first difficulties the Association had to encounter. Their opponents were in the position of the brothers of the rich man in the parable, of whom our Lord had said they had Moses and the prophets, and if they would not hear them, neither would they though One rose from the dead. Nothing that could be shown them would induce them to touch even the fringe of the subject. He hoped, however, that, supported by truth and right, means would be found to eradicate those preconceived notions; and he wished the clergymen and teachers of the Church of England would take up the question more earnestly, and in a more charitable spirit than they had hitherto done (hear, hear), and they would then, no doubt, arrive at a satisfactory conclusion. A well-known clergyman in London had been argued with upon this vital truth, and his verdict was, "Well, but your views may be all right—I do not say they are not—but if I accept them, believe in them, and preach them, I shall have to unsay all the sermons I have preached during my clerical career;" and, therefore, he put the question aside. Another clergyman was spoken to, and, after a long discussion, the gentleman arguing with him said, "You must believe in the inspired words of the prophets, set forth in the Old Testament." The clergyman's reply was, "I don't believe that the Prophet Jeremiah was a bit more inspired than Thomas Carlyle." These were only specimens of the bigotry and opposition they had to encounter, but they must go on steadily as before, spreading abroad their views so that they might be thoroughly discussed and investigated. While this meeting was assembled to declare their belief that the Almighty was able to do that which He had promised, to fulfil the prophecies which had not yet been fulfilled literally, in another room in that very building a meeting was being held to declare dissent from the opinions of—a gentleman, he was going to say—but of a man who came forward to avow not only that he does not believe in the Almighty, or His power to fulfil His promises, but that there is no Almighty at all. One of the objects of the Association was to combat such atheistic views, and he (the Chairman) suggested that a resolution, signed by him as Chairman, on behalf of the Association, should be passed, and conveyed to Earl Percy, the Chairman of the other meeting, to this effect, "The third annual meeting of the Anglo-Israel Association, to the public meeting convened for the purpose of protesting against the admission into the Parliament House of Commons of an avowed atheist,—We are heartily and cordially with you, and thoroughly concur in your object." This was carried by acclamation, signed, and transmitted to Earl Percy.

PHILO-ISRAEL then rose, and after proposing the first resolution, "That this Meeting approves the Report and Financial Statement put forward by the Council, and published in the BANNER of May 18, No. 229," said: For the third time I have the privilege to appear before you on the Exeter Hall platform, and to stand up for the truth of our Identity. My friends, why should I defend this cause? this much denounced, derided, reviled, abused cause? Because I believe it to be God's own truth, founded on the holy Scriptures. Because it is, I believe, that portion of the Truth which our God means to depend on to prove His own identity as the great Jehovah. "Ye are My witnesses," He said by His prophet Isaiah of Israel and Judah, "that I am God" (chap. xliii. 12). And, finally, because I believe our Identity to be the "condition precedent" to the glorious appearing—or appearing of the glory (Isa. xlvi. 13)—of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ (Titus ii. 13), "who is coming to occupy the throne of His father David" (Luke i. 32), "and to reign in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem, and before His ancients gloriously" (Isa. xxiv. 23). My Lord, can I keep silence? can I refrain from bearing my humble testimony? Whatever others do, I am resolved, even if all men abandon this cause and turn to be its enemies, I will, God helping and supporting me, stand by and defend it till this slumbering, drowsy, lethargic nation of ours rouses up to its nobility, and "sees," only "sees," that it is Israel. My Lord, our opponents say that our views of the Ten-Tribed kingdom are low and grovelling—carnal, earthly, and terrestrial. Christ came to establish a kingdom which is heavenly and spiritual, and Israel is not the literal earth-born race derived from the patriarch by generation, but the spiritual Israel of St. Paul's epistles to the Romans and Galatians. My friends, I would ask, Do these objectors ever repeat and pray the Lord's prayer? What mean they by these petitions: "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in EARTH as it is done in heaven"? Do they do wisely or safely to speak as they do, when the Lord they love is man as well as God? when He declares His delights were with the sons of men? (Prov. viii. 31). When He says that "with His whole heart and His whole soul" He means to restore and plant His Twelve-Tribed people again in their inheritance (Jer. xxxii. 41), coming to reign over them on earth as His people for evermore? But our opponents declare the words of Scripture are against us, and that St. Paul's statements in Gal. iii. 7, 28, 29, shiver our argument to pieces, and prove that we have to expect, not a "literal," but a "spiritual Israel." (Philalethes' words on the subject, at pages 102, 103, being read, the passages in question were referred to, showing his doctrine to be that literal Israel is rooted out and the Church of Christ substituted in its place). What can be made of Gal. iii. 9, 29, than this: that those that are of faith, and those that are in Christ—that is, the believing children of God, outcast Israel (Hosea ii. 20), the Church of Christ, His bride (Hosea ii. 16), are ipso facto "the seed of Abraham"? What was Abraham? A Hebrew. Then these, the seed of Abraham, are Hebrews too; literally, by human descent, or, as an alternative, by adoption; which last, by its operation, embraces the whole Gentile nations of the earth. None are excluded. All are welcome. But the nucleus, the central body into which the Gentiles are engrafted, must always be Hebrew and Israelitish. Henceforth none are excluded. In Christ there is neither Jew nor Greek debarred; differences of sex, differences of condition form no obstacle, all are admitted, all invited and welcomed through faith; but the sine quâ non is that all accepting Christ are henceforth "Abraham's seed," therefore Hebrews, and heirs, Hebrew heirs, according to the promise. St. Paul, therefore, in Gal. iii. 7, 29, was referring only to Hosea ii. 16, 20 after all; and his argument, taken from horticulture and arboriculture, to be found in Rom. xi. 17—24, is precisely to the point and to the same effect (see revised translation). It proves that the Gentile branches (not tree) are engrafted on a standing Hebrew Isaac-Israel stock, and by that operation are changed from Gentile into a Hebrew nature. If you ask me, my lord, how that can be? let me invite you to reflect how, when even among ourselves we adopt a child into our families, such child becomes one in name, status, position, and rank with the adoptive parents; is supported, bred, educated, and maintained as if born in the house. There is, in short, no difference whatever between the adopted and the naturally-born child. Precisely is this, mutatis mutandis, God's plan respecting the adoption of Gentiles into the ever standing Abrahamic Hebrew family of Christ. They are incorporated into that Hebrew family, and become in Christ "the seed of Abraham by faith" (Hosea ii. 20), and heirs according to the Hebrew promise, being adopted, engrafted, incorporated "sons," esteemed by the Lord Himself as one with the flesh and blood offspring—the Ten-Tribed family. So literal Israel is found to be, in fact, spiritual Israel. The argument of the Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille, vicar of Oldham, on this subject, was then introduced by the speaker to illustrate his case. The rev. vicar of Oldham, alluding to Rom. xv. 8, points out that Christ Jesus is declared by St. Paul to be a "minister of the circumcision," therefore of the Hebrew race, not of the non-Israelite Gentiles. Why? To confirm the promises made unto the fathers—i.e., the Hebrews, not the pure—Gentile fathers. Then is Christ's mission of no avail to the non-Israelite Gentiles? Nay; read on, friends. Verses 9 and 10 tell you He came to bless the Gentiles, to make them rejoice "with His λαος," His people, the Hebrews. But mark! "His people" exist previously. They are not "eradicated, rooted up," as the opponents say, and the Gentiles have to joy and rejoice with, but not in separation from them. Again, in ver. 12, St. Paul, quoting Isa. xi. 1, says, "There shall be a root of Jesse," therefore a Hebrew root, therefore from it a Hebrew stem, Hebrew branches, Hebrew fruit, Hebrew leaves, altogether, root and stem, Hebrew; and He that shall rise to reign over the Gentiles, and in Him shall the Gentiles trust." Now, Mr. Cachemaille says Christ is not alone. He is a federal Man. He and His people Israel are one. It is Christ and His people." Therefore His people rule with Him; and, consequently, "the kingdom, and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, are given to them over the whole earth, and over all the Gentile world, as the people of the saints of the Most High" (Dan. vii. 27), and Christ's kingdom is, as it were, merged with theirs over the non-Israelite Gentiles. There is no separate existence, then, for Christian Gentile Churches, or a Christian Gentile nation, as distingnished from Israel. We British are a Christian nation and a Christian Church, witnessing independently for Christ, and therefore, says Mr. Cachemaille, most logically, we British must be Israel, and the purely Gentile Churches we have raised up are our mixed multitude. In quoting from Rom. xi. 17—24, "Philo-Israel" read from the revised translation, issued that week, and said how glad he was to find that the emendations of the new translators were entirely corroborative of our Identity views, and that in the passage in question the misleading error regarding the wild olive tree, to be found in the "authorised version," was exploded in the revised one, and proved the "old Hebrew tree" was never removed, much less eradicated, as alleged.

Digitized by Google

The Rev. Mr. Hickson, in seconding the resolution approving of the report and accounts, congratulated the Association on this, its third anniversary. Outside the Association he continually came in contact with people who took an interest in its objects, but a large number, for reasons of their own, did not come forward and avow themselves Anglo-Israelites. He had met with the secretary of a society for evangelising the Jews, who appeared to be not thoroughly in accord with Anglo-Israelism, but admitted that the arguments in its favour had much force; and in America, Canada, Australia, and other colonies, the principles of Anglo-Israelism were widely spreading. Its effect in counteracting sceptical opinions was of great value, and that alone was a good answer to the question, Cui bono? If for no other reason than this it was worth standing up for, and it was well known that through the influence of this Association men who had previously held sceptical views were now sitting at the feet of Jesus, and in their right mind. (Hear, hear.) The reverend gentleman also mentioned the instance of a young man to whom he had spoken, and induced to attend a lecture which he (Mr. Hickson) gave on Anglo-Israelism, and some time afterwards the young man's mother said she was glad he went to the lecture, as previously he entertained very loose views about the Bible, but his opinions had become more settled. Within a few weeks that young man, gentlemanly and intelligent, presented himself for the first time in his life at the Lord's table, and ultimately became a Bible teacher. A bugbear seemed to hang before some clerical men, that if they accepted the Anglo-Israel view, they must unsay all they had said before. He (the speaker) should now say precisely as he had said before; from his youth he had always regarded the prophecies relating to Israel as referring to a literal Israel, and had never preached that Israel mentioned in the prophecies meant a spiritual Israel. As to the necessity for Israel being found, and of her being joined with her brethren of Judah, and returning to her own land, the best answer was to prove that the prophecies were literal. Referring to "Brook on Prophecy," in which it was stated that the Lost Ten Tribes had been searched for in almost every part of the world, and inasmuch as they had not been found, and most probably never will be found; therefore, all the prophecies regarding Israel must be interpreted spiritually; his answer was that we had found Lost Israel, and, therefore, the prophecies must be interpreted literally. An argument against the spiritual view, not put forward so often as it ought to be, was that we must be consistent in the interpretation of the Holy Scriptures. If a certain term, or expression, occurred in one chapter or verse, where it was admitted to have a certain meaning, and the same expression occurred in another chapter, some very good reason should be adduced to show that it there meant something quite different. In Isa. xlii. 24 there was the expression, "I will give Jacob for a spoil, and Israel to robbers." If Dr. Bonar were present he would ask, Is it spiritual Israel or literal Israel that was given as the spoil to robbers? He would, no doubt, say, "Oh, yes! it is literal Israel, undoubtedly." The reverend gentleman then referred to various other passages in the prophecies referring to curses on and blessings to Israel, which, he contended, conclusively showed that it was to be a literal Israel that should receive the blessings, and that any other rendering would be a tampering with the Word of God, and nothing but prejudice would account for men saying that the promises made to a literal body applied to a spiritual body. Their opponents were for ever harping on one string against the literal fulfilment of prophecy, because Israel, as they alleged, had not been found. If Israel were not found the prophecies could never be fulfilled, and God would be proved to be false; but could that ever be? He (Mr. Hickson) next referred to the literal prophecies enunciated in Hosea i., to which the argument strongly applied, as it showed clearly that it was the literal Israel that was spoken of. In the middle of the chapter occur these words: "I will avenge the blood of Jezreel upon the house of Jehu, and will cause to cease the kingdom of the House of Israel." He thought no one would be bold enough to say that referred to a spiritual Israel. Further on—"Then said God, Call his name Lo-Ammi." That undoubtedly referred to a literal Israel. The next verse says, "Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be numbered for multitude; and it shall come to pass that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not My people, there it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God." What are these people? A totally different set of people, was their opponents' view, but he contended they must be the same people, as the previous context showed that it meant not the whole of the Twelve Tribes, but Israel as distinct from Judah; because the next verse is, "Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together and appoint themselves one head, and they shall come up out of the land, for great shall be the day of Jezreel." He had pointed this out to many clergymen as a proof that it did not refer to a Twelve-Tribed nation, but to that part of the nation now called the Ten-Tribed people. The promise made to them separately and distinctly must have its fulfilment before the Ten Tribes and the Two can be united, because they would be all one people, without distinction. This was specially dwelt upon by the prophet Ezekiel, who said, "They shall no more be two people, but one people." He therefore came to the conclusion that this Ten-Tribed people must become firstly a multitudinous people; secondly, sons of the living God; thirdly, united to Judah; and fourthly, before the joint return of the two takes place, it was plain, taking the Scriptures literally, before the return of the Jews to Palestine could happen, we must find the people with whom, and under whose protection and prestige they are to return, and the Ten Tribes must be that people. Zechariah x. might be cited as an instance of literal explicitness. In verse 6 were these words: "And they shall be as mighty men;" that could only refer to Judah, because they were the last Hebrew people mentioned in the context: "They (Judah) shall be as mighty men which tread down their enemies in the mire of the streets, and they shall fight, because the Lord is with them, and the riders on horses shall be confounded." That is about Judah. Verse 6 refers to Judah and Joseph together, "I will strengthen the House of Judah, and I will save the House of Joseph, and will bring them (the united people) again to place them; for I will have mercy upon them, and they shall be as though I had not cast them off." Then followed, what might be expected, a verse about Ephraim: "And they of Ephraim shall be like a mighty man . . . . . yea, their children shall see it and be glad; their heart shall rejoice in the Lord. I will hiss for them and gather them, and they shall increase as they have increased. I will sow them among the people; they shall remember Me in far countries, and they shall live with their children and turn again. I will bring them out of Assyria; and I will bring them into the land of Gilead and Lebanon, and place shall not be found for them." In these two sets of verses there was a group of promises relating to Ephraim solely, which must be fulfilled before the union spoken of takes place, and he (the speaker) believed that union and return were not far distant. (Hear, hear.) "They of Ephraim shall be like a mighty man," and the might of Israel was not a thing of the past as yet, and though at times dragged into war and trouble, and afflicted with national disasters, the British nation have more reason to rejoice than any other nation on the face of the earth. (Hear, hear.) It was an accomplished fact, that we have been gathered out of all lands in these islands of the West, and we declared ourselves a redeemed people in our national capacity. One of the promises was, "They shall increase," but that could not apply to Judah who, since they were scattered, had simply doubled their number in eighteen centuries. The progress of the British nation was such that it doubled its number in our own islands once in fifty-six years, and in the colonies once in every twenty-five years. Although concentrated in these islands, they were scat ered all over the world, not as a curse but as a blessing. "They shall remember Me in far countries, and return to Me again." We see this with our own eyes, and it was certain that the fulfilment of the remainder of the promise was not far off. He would like Dr. Bonar to go through these passages clause by clause, and show their application to a spiritual Israel as clearly as he (Mr. Hickson), by taking them literally, their application to our own people. (Applause.) The two passages he had shewn might be taken in their obvious literal sense to have been fulfilled in a most marked manner, and Lost Israel had been found. He did not know when, but the time would soon arrive when they would not be the only people that acknowledged the fact, but when the spirit had been poured out we shall see it eye to eye, know whose we are, and then we shall know whom we ought to serve. (Loud applause.)

Digitized by Google

Mr. W. H. Peters, of Harefield, Lympstone, Devonshire, J.P., in supporting the resolution, said the clear and authentic testimony at present proceeding from our Colonies and distant shores, and the gradual withdrawal of opposition, proved the rapid advance of the great truths which led to the discovery of the Ten Tribes of Israel within the British dominions. In publishing these opinions, the Association had been accused of interfering with the salvation of souls through "the Intercessor," whereas their earnest desire has been to enlighten not only individuals but nations, with this new "Reformation" light, being taught to pray, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven;" and that the kingdoms of this earth were to become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ. It was most improbable that the great Architect of the universe who, at the Creation, pre-ordained the animal and vegetable kingdoms for the use of man, did not also pre-conceive the future destiny of mankind on earth, and the succession of his races. The same immutable love which dictated the salvation of souls at the beginning, pre-ordained "Judah to become His sanctuary, and Israel His dominion" on this earth. It was through their instrumentality that His laws and His hatred of idolatry had been manifested throughout the world. Idolatry had led to their casting away, but no sooner were they restored to His favour than they were led by Divine inspiration to seek a refuge from idolatry in these islands in "the North and the West," in order to become the guardians of the "one seed" of Judah covenanted to Abraham; and from the time of the Reformation had been cradled on British soil, hallowed by the blood of martyrs. The first race of mankind failed through the disobedience of Adam; and, for the great wickedness of his offspring, all flesh was destroyed from the face of the earth, Noah and his family excepted—to whom were given the same blessing and command to be faithful, and multiply, and replenish the earth. No sooner had the Flood subsided, and the covenant rainbow appeared in the heavens, than this race also failed, through their infidel attempt to build the Tower of Babel, to reach the skies, and raise them above any future deluge—through this unbelief their immediate dispersion, with confusion of tongues, ensued. Divine love again taught them repentance, and restoration to His favour, and it was not until their refusal to have Him to reign over them, that God gave up His immediate sovereignty over mankind. To prevent further failures, He called Abraham, with whom He made a covenant, saying: "I will multiply thy seed exceedingly, and it shall not be numbered for multitude, and I will make an end of all nations whither I have driven thee." Israel and Judah, "the one seed," "the multitudinous seed," had thus been made His instruments and witnesses before all nations from their wanderings in the wilderness down to the present time. During their sojourn in Egypt, Joseph alone was enabled to interpret Pharaoh's dream, and afterwards King Nebuchadnezzar found it necessary to call forth Daniel to decipher the handwriting on the wall and interpret the king's vision, which predicted the destruction of the Babylonian and other godless empires of the East. These were to be dashed into pieces by the fifth, or Stone kingdom, "cut out without hands," the emblem of which was the coronation-stone in Westminster Abbey, upon which had been crowned all the Sovereigns of England down to Queen Victoria, whose descent had been traced from King David (applause). The more immediate approximation between Israel of old and the British nation had been manifested by the evil consequences which always followed those kings of Israel who encouraged the sin of idolatry, just as their obedience to the Divine command invariably brought them national prosperity and victory over their enemies. Had it not been the same with the British nation from the time of the Reformation and our national protest against Popery (the idolatry of the present age), since which England had been blessed beyond all other people? Ireland, however, had been a constant thorn in our side, because the Canaanites were never driven out of the land; Papacy was still rampant there, and consequently confusion and bloodshed paralysed the Imperial Government. Ritualism, the spurious offspring of Popery, was now blinding the eyes and searing the consciences of the people of England, who did not now, as formerly, realise the vital necessity of upholding the Protestant constitution, or returning to Parliament representatives who might avert from us as a nation the judgments of an offended God (hear, hear). In like manner as God's ancient people Israel were deprived of their leader—Moses—on the very borders of the promised land, we also had lost our great Israelitish leader at the great Gate. The Gentile nations who sought our guidance stood aghast at the present perilous position of the British State ship, rolling and tossing about without a pilot, because they discern not the Word of God, "that He sheweth His Word only unto Jacob, and His statutes and judgments to Israel;" neither do they know that upon the return of the Jews to their own land increased prosperity will be restored to British-Israel. In the meantime, we, as believers, were re-cautioned "to shut ourselves up in our chambers for a little while," to escape the judgments of the "great earthquake" which would shake the apostate nations of Europe to their very foundation, as God's ancient people Israel of old were His witnesses before the whole world of God's dealings with mankind. The great sin against which they witnessed was the sin of idolatry, which was represented by the sin of Popery in the present day. It, therefore, behoved Anglo-Israelites to speak out openly, definitively, and courageously before the public; then, perchance, some leader of the House of Israel would arise to unfurl the banner, run it up to the mast-head in conjunction with the royal standard of our beloved Queen, the lion and unicorn of Judah, and sing, "Victoria, Victoria rules the waves!" (Loud and continued applause).

Digitized by Google

The resolution was carried unanimously.

THE CHAIRMAN called upon the Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille to propose the second resolution, during which a collection would be made. He (the Chairman) hoped this would be kindly and liberally responded to, and enable the Council to proceed with their labours in a more energetic way in the ensuing twelve months than they had been enabled to in the past.

The Rev. A. J. J. CACHEMAILLE accordingly proposed "That this meeting, recognizing the hand of Providence as guiding all the events of this world, and knowing that the gifts and calling of God are without repentance, desire earnestly to impress upon their fellow-countrymen the duty of carefully studying the holy Scriptures, that they may be able to realise for themselves, with the help of God's Holy Spirit, as true-born Israelites, they are entitled to the inheritance they possess in the Abrahamic promises and blessings." He had great pleasure in addressing this the first meeting of the Anglo-Israel Association he had had the privilege of attending. He always stood up with a certain amount of trepidation in what were to him foreign parts of the country. The clergy of the Church of England met with a good deal of hard treatment whenever this question came to the front. He believed the clergy were a very good body indeed, and it was not wise to frighten them away. It was not every clergyman who had the advantage of being consigned to the blackness of a manufacturing town in which the independence of the people would protect him. He could for himself say it was of no use being frightened of anything in the good manufacturing town of Oldham. Therefore he intended to give a few good hard knocks, but he did not care a bit for what resulted. Although the clergy had had a good deal of scourging, he had had a very nice amount of stroking down the back from "Philo-Israel," whom he had for the first time met that day. All their arguments were founded upon God's Word, and he meant to stand by its literal interpretation. He was a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, and claimed to be a participator in all the blessings of the Abrahamic promises, and it did not matter whether, in that respect, he was an Englishman or a Zulu, or of any other nationality. He had still to learn that this material world was nothing at all, or that he was composed only of a spirit or soul, and not of a body combined in them. He had also to learn that the so-called spiritual Israelites consistently and always negatived the comfort and sustenance of their bodies. Those people who complained that the members of this Association were devoted to political arguments were just those people who always neglected the public affairs of this great nation, and never took any interest in the discussions in our great legislative assemblies. The Association were not going about all over the country arguing politics, and dwelling almost entirely upon them; and when he found their opponents giving their time and money to advance spiritual things, he should believe a good deal more in their arguments. He had found, however, that many spiritual Israelites were not prepared to become spiritual beings. Leaving this earth and entering into the spiritual world was the last subject they wished to think about. He drew a great distinction between the House of Israel and the House of Judah. Many people admitted this distinction, but when asked to apply it for themselves they raised many questions with regard to what resulted from the revolt of Absalom, and alleged that the Ten Tribes had already claimed and received their share of the promises. Now it had been clearly said by God Himself to Solomon that He would rend that portion of the kingdom from him. That had been repeated to Rehoboam, when he was told not to fight and try to bring back the kingdom, because the thing had been done by God Himself. Yet people had the brass to say there was no distinction between the two Houses, or that if there were any at all, it was only a very small and religious distinction. (Hear, hear). As to the prophecies relating to Israel and Judah, let people who talk about prophecy, and say it was a sort of machinery by which the future might be foretold; but the fact was, it was intended to be a witnessing to the truth of Almighty God after the event predicted had happened, and not before it. (Hear hear). A very real promise of this kind was given to Moses when he was disinclined to deliver the children of Israel out of Egypt. God said to him, when thou hast delivered them out of Egypt certain results should follow. Now, if this promise had not been given by Almighty God Himself, the people would have said, "God did not deliver us out of Egypt, we went out ourselves, or we escaped by a lucky chance." The sign then given by the Almighty was, "After I have delivered thee, ye shall come and worship on this mountain." The whole of the prophecies of Balaam were of that kind, and it was no use trying to foretell the future by human reason; but we frequently see history fulfilling the Word of God. Many mistakes had been made, and a great deal too much had been foretold as to what was going to happen. We ought to be satisfied with what God had revealed, and wait patiently until it was accomplished in His own good time; they could assuredly trust God's Word for the fulfilment of that which was not yet accomplished. Prophecy must be regarded as a great whole; though separated and divided they would ultimately be united and fulfilled, just as there were certain parts of the universe now revolving in space, but yet those particles would, in due time, combine and form a whole. Prophecy must be taken and distinguished by whom spoken, of whom spoken, and when spoken, by which prophecy would frequently be found tolerably plain. Prophecy was like a lock. They had the key and were turning it, but the lock would not turn round all at once. Some good locks, to secure valuable records and property, were so designed by men that three keys were required to open them, keys kept by three different men, who must all be present, because one key would turn the lock a certain distance, the second a little further, but the third was still required to complete the unlocking. With regard to prophecy, they were now using three keys—evangelical energy, history, and philosophy—and he believed they would soon open the safe of God's Word. He (Mr. Cachemaille) next referred to the Scriptures cited by Mr. Hickson, and said it surpassed his comprehension, how any man of common sense could say these two people were one and the same, or that the fulfilment of the promises was the same in the two cases, for they were as different as possible. (Hear, hear). God divided the nation into two parts, and was going to reunite them and bring them into their own land again; but by the interpretation of their opponents, how was it possible to make any sort of sense out of it? They paid no attention to what were the actual facts; they resorted to an artificial interpretation, and raised up imaginary facts to fit the interpretation, consequently the whole of their argument broke down with regard to the prophecies relating to these two peoples. (Hear, hear). As regarded the actual position of the two branches of the nation, it came to this: that the present condition of the Jewish half of the nation was the best guarantee for the necessity that the House of Israel should be found within the United Kingdom. If Judah were not already there we should have to look again for both Houses, and might think that both were lost. A gentleman in America had written a letter, in which he said, "God has wonderfully blessed the study of this Identity to my soul, and I know others who I believe have been saved by the same agency." That was the statement of one who had benefited, spiritually as well as nationally, by this belief. (Hear, hear). They were said to be ignorant people who advocated this principle of Identity. He was perfectly willing to concede he was ignorant, and that we were people of no reputation. There was some comfort even in that, because our opponents could not say we are people of bad reputation. (Laughter). They say also we are a people devoid of scholarship and science. He said, be it so; nevertheless they knew that God cannot lie, and that the Spirit of God only knoweth the mind of God. With no further scholarship than that they were perfectly able to be led by God to understand His Word, and he was determined to advocate and agitate this question whenever and wherever he had an opportunity. (Loud applause).

Digitized by Google

THE CHAIRMAN called upon a gentleman whom he introduced as a recent convert, to second the resolution. He, the Chairman, had made a few remarks about the clergy of the Church of England not taking up the study of this question, but they were now doing so, and the Rev. Mr. Hill was a proof of this.

THE REV. MR. HILL said when he first studied the question a great many things staggered him, and he was reminded of Washington's memorable words, "States, in order to prosper, must go back to their first principles." He had, therefore, traced to its first principle the religion the Church professed—its actual reality, and to test those arguments which had been advanced, whether there was not something spiritual behind what was regarded as material prophecy. There were scientific men of great intellect and great power of argument who asserted that our world was the product of a grand system of evolution, and existing man was the result of a kind of spontaneous combustion of individual eccentricities; that the creation of the world is certainly mythic, that its formation occupied, if not countless ages, thousands and thousands of generations; and that the Word of God, as set out in the Old Testament, was simply figurative; that man, when he goes to "that bourne from which no traveller returns," is not likely to have an after existence. The great system of evolution which declared that man was merely an atom in the universe, and had no hereafter, was contradicted by the great difference between civilised and savage nations, for savages, by themselves, never rose to civilisation. He, the speaker, was proud of being an Irishman, because in this kingdom, in political, civil and social life, Irishmen were holding some of the highest positions in England, and the Government placed the greatest confidence in their zeal, ability, and integrity. The British nation owed a great deal to Ireland. There were, no doubt, many Canaanites amongst them, but there were unhappily many black sheep even in the Church of England, and many planets were wandering away from their orbits. The great system of the Anglo-Israel Association started with the idea that Jeremiah went to Ireland first of all with Zedekiah's two daughters, one of whom married a king of Ireland, and propagated the race which was still dominant in the Northern part of that land. Therefore Ireland, in place of being so dark as had been implied, was really the first people that brought the true light to the British nation. (Applause.) Civilisation could not spring from nothing. If we looked back to the days of William the Conqueror (from whom so many were proud to claim descent), it would be found that when he came here he found he had to contend with a nation well skilled in arms, that used horses in war, and that he had frequently to combat against great commanders, and skilful military tactics. There were the facts that the people possessed arms, a certain amount of government among them, and a certain system of religion; another proof was the wonderful similarity between the Hebrew root and the Irish language—if the latter could not be traced to Hebrew, there was no other language to which it could be traced. The early religious institutions of Ireland were not known in their tendency, and the Irish people were the first to raise the banner of true Protestantism in the midst of great infidelity, doubt, and Romanism. Had Ireland the natural advantages of England, she would have far outstripped many nations which have shone so brightly in history; and had she not also permitted Canaanitism to degrade her fair name. Originally, the language and even the superstitions of Ireland, were such that they could be assigned to no other nation but the Hebrew. The conclusion was that the Irish were either instructed by the Hebrews, or by the posterity of some of the Lost Ten Tribes, who first settled in Ireland, and spread her knowledge and institutions to England, and afterwards to America. He had taken up the question of Identity in the Church in which he preached, and intended to give a series of lectures throughout London. To render these lectures attractive, he would illustrate, by the lime-light lantern, scenes from the Old Testament, to indicate what he taught. He (Mr. Hill) was certain that no practical aid could be expected from the clergy of the Church of England until an Identity Church was established in London. (Loud applause.) Some people were very good—in theory—but to find out a man's real nature you must touch the strings of his purse. If everyone interested in the work were to give one penny a week, fifty-two pence in the year, that would start and maintain a Church where the teaching and singing, and the entire service would all tend to carry out the object in view—the extension and development of the great object of bringing in the children of Israel to the one great Stem of Jesse—this would propagate the truth in England, the colonies, and the world at large, more than anything else. (Applause.) Atheism, infidelity and Romanism were prevalent, and the best way to eradicate them was to instil into the minds of our countrymen the doctrines of the Old Testament, and prove that Christianity was not entirely a new system, but that it was a great and noble edifice built on an old and solid foundation. Their duty was to raise the banner of Israel, place it on the highest pinnacle, and to sweep away the obstacles which the Church of England put in their way. It was said they ought to be thankful, as Gentiles, for the mercies they enjoyed, but they looked for more than Gentile mercies—they looked for the fulfilment of the promise to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and their posterity; they looked not only to the Saviour of the New Testament, but also to the Messiah of the Old Testament. He urged his hearers to bring this home to their minds, and to form a practical resolution upon it They must not rest satisfied with arguing and thinking about it, but determine to establish Identity Churches in London and the suburbs.

Digitized by Google

Mr. DANVERS, in supporting the resolution, after referring to the distinction between temporal and spiritual blessings, and the rapid multiplication of the Anglo-Saxon race compared with other nations and the Jews, as a partial fulfilment of the promise, said that race would ere long number more than any other nationality on the earth. The red lines on the map shewed the wide ramification of the British possessions which, in many instances, were literal Gates, giving to the British power to enter the countries on which they bordered. The great mission of Israel in the world was to preach the Word of God to the heathen, and no other nations than England and America were doing that part of God's work in the world, and planting the standard of Christ. They were a glory to God among the nations. (Hear, hear.) Millions of colonists had proceeded from this little island, and had made some of the waste places of the earth to blossom as the rose. The speaker then referred to the abolition of slavery, and the statement in Isaiah that Israel should lend money and receive interest. It was the fact that England had lent to almost every civilised nation on the earth. He gave statistical details as to the amount of these loans, the extent of territory subject to British sway, and the enormous development of shipping, trade and commerce, as proofs that the British nation was in fact the long lost Israel.

This resolution was also carried unanimously.

Mr. ONSLOW moved, and Mr. H. Leslie seconded a cordial vote of thanks to the noble Chairman for the admirable way in which he had presided that evening, which was carried by acclamation.

The CHAIRMAN, in acknowledging the vote of thanks, said he had the pleasure to announce that the collection had realised sufficient to defray the expense of the meeting and leave a surplus. A friend was ready to subscribe £5 to the funds of the Association, provided nine other persons believing in the Identity would come forward with a similar sum.

The hall was crowded with a sympathising audience, whose interest in and attention to the proceedings manifested the increasing growth and influence of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association. The meeting was closed with prayer by the Rev. A. J. J. Cachemaille.

A RETROSPECT AND A TESTIMONY.

By HENRY LESLIE.

THE testimony which follows is part of a private letter to the editor of the BANNER OF ISRAEL, to whom I had sent a communication on the subject of Welsh Eisteddfodau. At his earnest request the matter of that letter is hereby made public. Though against my own private feelings, in the first instance, consideration of what I owed to him made me think it a simple and plain duty to acquiesce in what he asked.

I must take this opportunity of offering the editor of the BANNER my most grateful thanks for having been the means of commencing a new era in my life; not only new, but beyond measure pleasant; for the BANNER has opened my eyes and my mind to a realisation of the distinction between Israel and Judah, and the momentous results that must evolve therefrom.

I have always been greatly interested in the study of prophecy; but, on two occasions, I had been so seriously posed by friends with whom I conversed on the subject, that, after long and serious reflection, I was obliged to admit my inability to reply to their objections to the position I took. Their argument was this: "The prophecies of the Old Testament could have nothing to do with this age, otherwise there would have been some mention of two such countries as Great Britain and America." In no way could I solve this difficulty, and I had given up those prophecies as dead, and done with, with their unintelligible admixture of curses and blessings. Also, I could not see why the Church was to answer to the names of Israel, Jacob, Joseph, and Ephraim, and to claim all the blessings; yet I perfectly well understood the reason for the Jews suffering the curses, for they were visibly undergoing their great punishment. But after my return from the International Exposition in Paris, in 1878, some kind friend sent me the BANNER'S account of my choir having taken the only great prize offered for an international competition; and, in that same number of the BANNER (vol. ii., page 365) I was startled by reading of the distinction between Israel and Judah. A great gleam of light suddenly illumined my mind. In a moment all that had been dark had become clear, and perfectly intelligible. I had only to read the Scriptures in a natural and literal sense, and I found ample mention of Great Britain and America. That which had previously been chaos was transformed into most beautiful harmony. There has not been the shadow of a doubt since that moment.

I have worked hard in the great cause. Many and many a convert have I made. Anglo-Israel publications I have distributed far and wide; and I have spoken on the subject with some of our Churchmen of highest degree. I have not found any great prejudice against Anglo-Israelism; but, from men of high education, objections must be expected. One cannot see the theory from a philological point of view; another from the ethnological. Again, one is asked how the Tribes got here from Nineveh. Light will break out in God's own good time. Meanwhile, the way is being most ably prepared by the BANNER, and by the little army of earnest and zealous workers, whose writings appear so frequently in its columns.

I fully believe that the time is rapidly approaching when the whole of the clergy will find the doctrine of Anglo-Israelism a very powerful one, that can be used for influencing their flocks, for it fully proves the complete unity of the Bible, from first to last. It also makes thoroughly clear, 1. The faithfulness of God to His promises; 2. The coming of the Jews to Israel, and the joint return to the Land of Promise, never again to be uprooted; 3. The approaching second advent of our Saviour; 4. That the Anglo-Saxon race is enjoying every blessing promised by God to Israel obedient; 5. And that as responsibility accrues from favours received, so ought our whole nation and company of nations to begin to comprehend that we are the veritable Israel of God, and so should not fail in the duties attendant on a position of such grandeur. Then will follow the great promised outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and every one shall know the God of Israel from the least to the greatest.

Anglo-Israelism induces a study of the Bible, and, if it did no more, would be a great gain. But its influence reaches far beyond that. It gives to those who have endeavoured to master its fascinating details, and have concurrently examined, and taken heed to, the objections of opponents, a splendid confidence in the continuity of God's providence to that race which He, in time past, chose from among the families of the earth to be His witnesses among the nations of the world.

Bryn Tanat, May 7, 1881.

ERRATA.—To the readers of the Comments. May 25th, Jer. xxix., second line, for "Jeremiah," read "Jehoiachin."—BANNER, No. 229, page 202, second column, first paragraph, line sixteen, for "about twenty-eight," read "a great number of."

Digitized by Google

"HO, EVERY ONE THAT THIRSTETH."

By the Rev. Denis Hanan, M.A.

To whom were these words (Isa. lv. 1) addressed? Two replies will, doubtless, be given. One by the Gentile Church, which takes all the favourable utterances of the prophet as having been spoken to her. The other by the House of Israel, to whom both promises and warnings were immediately given. One reply, based upon the theory that the Gentile Church is now the root; the other upon the statement that the original root bears the wild olive graft. The one says it is presumptuous to limit the "every" to Israel; the other replies, we do not limit it, we gladly recognise its universal application; but in the way in which the prophet stated that it embraces all.

Let it be remembered that our division into chapters is but for convenience of reference, and that chaps. liv., lv. and lvi., are one message. Now, if the every of chap. lv. 1 was meant to be all-embracing, why add the also of chap. lvi. 6? And does not the promised admission of strangers limit the text (lv. 1) to those who were already of the household? In fact, it is the promised admission of the wild branches that justifies us in giving a universal application to the every, and not the essential force of the every, which enables us to include the strangers; if otherwise, the mention of the strangers would have been superfluous.

Nor is this a mere question concerning words, or without practical use; for we believers of to-day, thirsting and receiving, receive either under the every of chap. lv. 1, or as the "sons of strangers" who have been brought in (chap. lvi. 6). Supposing this to be granted, it will be said, What does it matter? All are one; all are joyful in God's house of prayer; all receive abundantly of the living water without money and without price.

True; but the distinction exists nevertheless, and it is a distinction not of man's devising. That it means something, is shown by the instinctive repugnance of the ingrafted wild branches to admit it. "Thou bearest not the root, but the root thee," is as practically ignored as if it had never been Divinely recorded; nay, rather it is contradicted flatly, for one of the ingrafted Gentile branches infallibly proclaims, "I am the stem, and I alone; out of me there is no life, no salvation; to me are given the promises; let the sons of the stranger join themselves to me."

If the difference between the stem and the graft matters not, why this ambition to reverse the position? Truly, the distinction is one not to foster pride, but to humble because of failure. Great responsibilities are honourable, but they are overwhelming. Judah, a natural branch, has been broken off (Rom. xi. 17). The Gentile wild olive scions have been grafted upon, and Judah can and will be grafted in again, upon what? Upon the wild scion that, contrary to nature, was brought in, and now boasts itself to be the root? Surely not; but upon the original Abrahamic covenant which the superincumbent Levitical law could not set aside, and upon those who now, IN CHRIST, represent that covenant, the stock which can never have been lost to the knowledge of Him who swore to Abraham.

It follows, that if the Gospel has come, or (for the present argument) when it shall come to this original stock, it cannot be correctly said that it was, or will be grafted in as a branch; rather it, the stem, "thirsting" and revived, causes, or will cause all to blossom and bud; it living by faith, and receiving grace is, or will be, the means whereby the world will be blessed, a birthright verily not to be despised.

Have the Gentile wild grafts been favoured for eighteen hundred years, and the seed of Abraham been hidden and unblessed? The Gentile Church, the wild olive, replies with one voice, "Yes, we alone are the true seed of Abraham;" and partial blindness having happened unto Israel, the self-contradictory assertion has for centuries passed unchallenged; but now that the promise of the bringing in of Ephraim's fulness of nations draws near to its accomplishment, the blindness is being removed, Israel gives signs of awakening and claiming her position which has been usurped; and as she awakes, she replies to our question, to whom was Isa. lv. 1 addressed? "It was addressed in a peculiar and pre-eminent sense to me;" and she begins to pray that the nation may receive the promised Spirit, so that the lawless may forsake his way, the unrighteous man his thoughts, that the people may know God, from the least to the greatest, that God's faithfulness in Christ may be fully manifested, and that because of His manifested glory and truthfulness the sons of the stranger may join themselves to the Lord in a way in which they never hitherto have done, and that, with her, every thirsting one may receive abundantly. For "even them will I bring to My holy mountain, and make them joyful in My house of prayer; . . . for My house shall be called an house of prayer for all people," a promise which yet awaits its fulfilment.

NOTE.—The Establishment of the British Church, before the destruction of Jerusalem, a historical fact gathered from the British Triads, is not without importance. The kingdom taken from Judah was then given to "a nation," which was no wild graft, but the original stock.

THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND ZENANA MISSIONARY SOCIETY BEARS WITNESS WE ARE ISRAEL.

IN their "plea for one hundred millions of women, our fellow subjects in India," the above Society, having reference to "Census morning, April 4, 1881," puts forward the following appeal:—

"The Committee of the above Society plead earnestly to every woman in England, realising the inestimable benefits conferred by the grace of God on us as a nation, through the possession of the Bible and the knowledge of Christ, will, in thankfulness for these mercies, make an offering of one penny or upwards on 'census morning,' to send the like blessings to the one hundred millions of India's women, who possess them not." (The italics are ours.)

We ask, in all earnestness, what is the meaning of "our possession of the Bible, and the knowledge of Christ," but our possession of "the words" of Jehovah, which He Himself declared He only "sheweth unto Jacob, His statutes and His judgments unto Israel," and that He hath not dealt so with any nation? (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20). We are admitted to be entrusted with the "oracles of God," and these we know were once in Judah's possession; but being taken from them as part of the kingdom of God, were to be given to "a nation" bringing forth the fruits of the same kingdom (Matt. xxi. 43). In "the word of explanation" which follows the above plea, the committee of the Zenana Missionary Society declare the lady missionaries sent out are witnesses for Jesus. But Isa. xliii. 12 declares Israel and Judah to be these, and therefore the missionaries in question must be Hebrews, which we believe they are.

This appeal is addressed to "English Christian sisters," showing that the English are Israel, and the writer of it affirms that those English who present the thankoffering to the Lord, say thereby to the heathen, "Lo, this is our God, we are His people and the sheep of His pasture," terms which the Scriptures distinctly apply to Israel, but never to Gentiles nationally (1 Kings viii. 51; 1 Peter ii. 25; Psa. c. 3; lxxix. 13).

MORE BLIND EVIDENCE.

By J. Thomson.

EVERY one, in the course of his reading, cannot but be struck with much that, in the light of our Identity, must be put in the class of blind evidence to a very apparent fact. Thus, in the Argosy for March, 1881, pages 208, 209, we read—"The refinement and luxury of Rome herself was not carried by her people into the countries they conquered and laid waste. Yet it was all productive of good in the end, no doubt; fulfilling the world's plan, taking her on her course, carving out the destiny of nations—a fate which gives to each its time and place, its rise and fall, its day of power and wealth, its time of change and decay. Favoured England has had a long spell of this wealth and power, and universal sway. Will she have it for ever? The lot is cast into the lap of each, but there comes a time when the lap, full to overflowing, begins to reject its blessings, and in time collapses" (Mr. Charles W. Wood on "Salisbury and Stonehenge")

Digitized by Google

We cannot agree with this writer that it is fate which rules the destiny of nations—that is the old Pagan idea, and is unworthy of anyone who believes in a superintending Providence. But the beautiful testimony borne to the position long held by "favoured England" commands our admiration; and the warning illustration of the full lap rejecting its manifold blessings points out a threatening national danger which we, as Israelites, should do all we can to avert, notwithstanding all our faith in our Identity forbidding us to think that, as a nation and a people, we should ever collapse and utterly fall. "The God of Israel is He that giveth strength and power unto His people" (Psa. lxviii. 35). "The secret of Jehovah is with them that fear Him; and He will show them His covenant" (Psa. xxv. 14).

MR. R. STUART POOLE, KEEPER OF COINS IN THE BRITISH MUSEUM, PRONOUNCES ON THE GREAT PYRAMID.

In the Illustrated London News, of March 19, 1881, we have a report of a lecture by Mr. Reginald S. Poole, on the subject of "Ancient Egypt, Science, and Art," delivered on March 12 at the Royal Institution, London. Regarding the Great Pyramid, what he said was this:—

"We know that the Egyptians held the doctrine of the movement of the earth as well as the sun, and they appear to have combined the theory of the earth's annual revolution with that of the combined movement of the sun and the whole solar system in space. The orientation of the Great Pyramid and most of the others is correct; and the reckoning of time was complicated and minute. For mechanics our best information is derived from the Pyramids, the tombs of kings. The astronomical and other purposes for which Professor Piazzi Smyth imagined the Great Pyramid was erected, the lecturer showed to be fanciful and unsound. The angle of the inclined passages was, as Sir Henry James, R.E., had proved, very nearly 'the angle of rest,' and obviously intended to make the moving of the king's sarcophagus as easy as possible. The skill shown in all the construction of the Pyramids was marvellous, far surpassing that observed in the works of any other ancient nation."

Sic volo, sic jubeo! No grounds are assigned for the dictum of Mr. S. Poole. But so it is. Professor Piazzi Smyth is finally discountenanced, and must henceforth hide his diminished head. Mr. Poole condemns his book as "fanciful and unsound." What we feel about it is this: Mr. Poole is an Egyptologist of a pronounced type, an Assyriologist and Biblical date man, and he declares his own views are correct, but that those who differ from him are wrong. So a Roman Catholic lecturer would say to a Roman Catholic audience, that all Protestants were in error; a Protestant lecturer that all Roman Catholics were mistaken; but a Russian Priest, that Western Europeans, both Catholics and Protestants, were in grievous error, and were anti-Scriptural besides. The mere saying a thing is nothing. We must have proofs, and then ascertain if these have not been answered dozens of times before.

We repeat, therefore, that Mr. Poole must give us his reasons before he can be attended to; and, as we hear that his lectures are to be published in the Contemporary Review, we shall wait with patience to see what grounds the lecturer gives us there for throwing to the winds the confidence we have now in Professor Piazzi Smyth.

THE BABYLONISH CAPTIVITY.

By M. B.

We are all, I hope, agreed that everything which we set forth ought to be Scripturally correct in the minutest particulars. Now, by carefully examining Jer. xxix. I am of opinion that the date hitherto given by Identity writers as the date of the return should have been B.C. 536, and not B.C. 518, which agrees with Usher, and the marginal date given in most Bibles to the enumeration of the company of Zerubbabel in Ezra.

Jer. xxix. 4 tells us that the message sent "to all those who had been carried away" was "that after seventy years they should return." Consequently, the seventy years were to commence from their exile, and not from the date of final exile of those left with Zedekiah, who are distinctly spoken of in ver. 16 as not then gone into captivity, and are threatened and cursed in ver. 17, 18.

Again, at ver. 20, "All ye of the captivity whom I have sent from Jerusalem to Babylon." Hence I gather that the captivity must count from about B.C. 606, and not from B.C. 588, and would terminate B.C. 536, and not B.C. 518.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

Dear Sir,—Annexed is a cutting from the Standard newspaper, of 26th ult., which you may deem of sufficient importance to fill up a corner of the Banner. I send it as several articles have appeared from time to time in your journal on the position of "England, the Head and Not the Tail."

Wishing further success to the Banner. M.

"England's position in South Africa.

"The Dean of Cape Town, preaching in York Cathedral on Sunday, on behalf of South African Missions, said:—Our deceased statesman, Lord Beaconsfield—lamented by the Queen and kingdom, partisans and political foeman—jealously guarded England's honour. Our present Premier has protested against the policy of Transvaal annexation. Great Britain dare not surrender possession of a pre-eminently important position, such as the Cape and her coast—priceless for strategical safeguard—military and naval considerations—and for the permanent progress of our national commerce. The Transvaal outbreak, armistice, and political complications have embittered the relations between the English, Africander, Dutch, and European denizens of the whole land. Society is driven asunder, jealousies are engendered, and suspicions aroused; anarchy and civil war are not by any means remote contingencies. England's prestige is lowered. In the words of the prophet Moses, in the Pentateuch, 'The head has become the tail;' the ancient and honourable England has become a bye-word, and hissing, and astonishment, and reproach amongst the natives and the Dutch."

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

The number of members is now 691; 17 having been enrolled during the past month.

We have received several very cheering reports of progress, and have sent packets of Identity literature to Swindon, Gravesend, and Maidenhead. Three hundred Comments were also distributed at Dr. Evatt's lecture at Selkirk, and are, we understand, greatly liked. One of our members, who is doing his best to spread the good news, says:—"I write to thank you for the packet of Identity works which I received quite safely, and am delighted with them. There are several capital things there which I had not seen before, and we like the Comments very much. The 'distinctions' are indeed necessary, Israel and Judah are sadly confused. There are many believers here, and among them some energetic workers, and I am glad to say the subject is awakening general interest. I have some two dozen works which I keep lending to one and another, and I am now having three Banners weekly, two for giving away."

We intend at once to devote a further sum to the purchase of Identity literature, and shall be glad to hear from any friends to whom a grant will be useful. In answer to several inquiries, we beg to state that we shall be happy to send the Comments to any person forwarding the subscription, whether a member of the Union or not. One copy will be sent post free, monthly, for 1s. per annum; 2 copies, 1s. 6d.; 3 copies, 2s. The card of membership will be sent on receipt of three stamps. Address, Miss Lawrence, Stoneleigh, New Wimbledon, Surrey.

J. Lawrence
(Hon. Sec. I. S. & P. U.).

May 14, 1881.

Several Articles and Papers have been crowded out to make way for the Report of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association Annual Meeting.—Ed.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d.
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d.
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

	£	s.	d.
A Thank-Offering from W.	0	5	0
"A Watcher"	0	2	6

Price 2d.; Annual Subscription, 2s. 6d.

ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY.

Editor: Douglas A. Onslow, J.P.

Contents for June, 1881: Anglo-Israel Bible Truths No. 6, "But he shall have one Tribe for My servant David's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake, the city which I have chosen out of all the Tribes of Israel" (1 Kings xi. 32) — The Mission of the Chosen Seed, by W. S. Cavill—Judah and Israel—"The Church and Nation"—Persecution of the Jews—Poetry, "Beaconsfield." Died April 19, 1881—Correspondence: The Redemption of Israel; Note by the Editor, &c.—Meetings, Lectures, &c.

The June number is now ready, and may be obtained of any bookseller, or of the Publishers.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

ISRAEL! AN EARNEST APPEAL FROM THE EW TO THE PULPIT IN FAVOUR OF OUR IDENTITY WITH GOD'S ELECT PEOPLE, ISRAEL; Being a Letter from JOHN G. SHAW to his Pastor, Rev. Eustace R. Conder, of Lee is, with an Introduction and Notes; to be followed by a Review of Mr. Conder's Papers on the Lost Tribes

By the same Author.

"BRITAIN (OR ISRAEL)," with Map. Price 8d., post free 9d

CHRONOLOGICAL CHART." Price 3d., post free 3½d.

GOD'S LOVE FOR ISRAEL." Price 1d., 3 copies sent post free for 3½d

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published. Price 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

THE EGYPTIAN ENIGMA. A Plea for the British Yard: Its Antiquity and High Authority Proved by the Great Pyramid. By H. R. SHAW.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Order of your Bookseller.

DR. JOSEPH WILD'S WORKS:—

THE

FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

WITH PORTRAIT OF THE AUTHOR.

Handsome cloth gilt, price 2s., by post 2s. 3d.

ALSO

THE LOST TEN TRIBES.

Price 3s., by post 3s. 4d.

Dr. Wild is one of the most eminent American preachers; and the above works are written in a clear, novel, and racy manner and will be read with great interest by all persons. New editions of each work have just been issued. They are bound in a style that will make them attractive gift books. "Philo-Israel" strongly recommends that all persons should obtain these books.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 6d.; post free, 7d.

CARDINAL PROOFS THAT THE BRITISH ARE THE LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

THE ABRAHAMIC COVENANT.

By F. W. PHILLIPS.

With Two Chapters by PHILO-ISRAEL.

By the same Author.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

In neat coloured cover, price 2d., post free, 2½d.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

NEW WORK BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.

By PHILO-ISRAEL.

In handsome cloth, gilt, with Coloured Map, and several Illustrations, price 3s. 6d., by post 3s. 10d.

PHILO-ISRAEL'S BOOK FOR CHILDREN.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth, gilt, 1s. Post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Third Edition.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? An Inquiry establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters." By PHILO-ISRAEL.

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

ROBERT BANKS'S CATALOGUE on the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Lost Ten Tribes will be sent, post free, on application. Address, Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

Price 2d., post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES.

An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York

London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Now ready, price 6d., post free 7d.

WHERE ARE THE TEN TRIBES?

BY WILLIAM GREIG, OF MONTREAL, CANADA.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.;

And may be had, by ordering, of any bookseller.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,

High-Class Tailor,

47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.

MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

EXTRAORDINARY OFFER!

THE SHEFFIELD MANUFACTURING COMPANY have just appointed Mr. T. SMITH their London Agent for Sale (through advertisements only) of their Special Articles on cash terms. No shop rent or bad debts being incurred, the agent is able to sell all goods at a small profit over cost prices. Mr. Smith has been long and intimately known to the readers of this paper as agent for the Lincolnshire Bedding Company. It is believed this fact will be quite sufficient guarantee as to the bonâ fide of this advertisement.

Mr. SMITH begs to inform his old and new customers that he is now prepared to offer a very handsome, full size, strong, well-made Tea and Coffee Service complete, consisting of four pieces—viz., Tea-pot, Coffee-pot, Sugar Basin, and Cream Jug plated with Pure Silver (Sugar and Cream lined with Gold) and brilliantly burnished, for 25s.; and to every Purchaser will be PRESENT, without any extra charge whatever,

1 doz. Silver-Plated Teaspoons.

TESTIMONIAL.

Branksome Vicarage, Jan. 25, 1881.

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of Tea and Coffee Service, which gives me great satisfaction; and I have had the pleasure of recommending the like to a friend.

REV. CHAS. M. WETHERALL.

"BANNER OF ISRAEL" COUPON.

On receipt of this Coupon, together with P.O.O. for 25s., I agree to send one complete Tea and Coffee Service, together with a Free Gift of One Dozen Spoons.

T. SMITH, 15, Wine Office-court, Fleet-st., London, E.C. 21-5-81.

All orders must be accompanied by Cheque or P.O.O. and Coupon, payable to London Agent Mr. T. SMITH, 15, Wine Office-court, Fleet-street, E.C., where Specimen of Goods may be seen. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus. Cheques crossed City Bank.

GREAT & INCREASED SUCCESS of the Rev. F. J. SILVERTON'S READY RELIEF REMEDIES for DEAFNESS and ILL-HEALTH.

SINCE MR. SILVERTON REMOVED from Nottingham to Hackney, London, in November last the applications for help have been so great that he has found it absolutely necessary to seek more commodious premises. These he has obtained in the City at 17, Saint Bride-street, Ludgate-circus, where patients may be seen daily, free of charge from 11 a.m. till 7 p.m. (Saturdays excepted), and where all communications should be addressed.

Mr. Silverton's celebrated Ear Trumpet literally gives hearing at once to the deaf. During the past twelve years no less than 12,000 of these instruments have been sold, and in every case have given the greatest satisfaction.

But Mr. Silverton has also a medicine which removes deafness, noises and offensive discharges in the ear. His Aural remedy goes at once to the root of the disease, and removes the cause.

When, however, the tympanum of the ear is broken, an artificial "drum" has to be introduced, and this marvellous surgical operation Mr. Silverton accomplishes repeatedly. The ears are also examined, without pain or inconvenience by the Silver Illuminated Speculum.

As with deafness so with other ailments. In every case of ill-health there is a cause; and, generally speaking, a cause that can be removed. In his Medical Energiser and Nutrient Food of Food, Mr. Silverton has two powerful and popular Remedies which go at once to the evil. The Energiser may be said to be an almost infallible remedy for all diseases that arise from Weakness, Lassitude, Coughs, Colds, and General Ill-health; whilst the nutritive properties possessed by the Food of Food are so great that it is astonishing to see how it builds up the muscle and flesh, and increases the strength and weight of the patient.

Persons who cannot see Mr. Silverton should send for his "Book of Health and Treatise on Diseases of the Ears and Affections of the Eye," of which 250,000 are in circulation. Price 1s., but free to the readers of the Banner of Israel.

Note the Address: 17, St. Bride-street, Ludgate-circus, London, E.C.

CANVASSERS and Colporteurs wanted to sell from house to house the CHRISTIAN HERALD, a well illustrated penny religious weekly journal, containing always sermons by the Rev. C. H. Spurgeon and Dr. Talmage, Biographies, Stories, many Anecdotes, Sunday-school Lesson expounded, Temperance narratives, Prophetic article, Serial story, Pictures &c. Its popularity is shown by its sale every week being 230,000 copies. Any man, woman, or youth may earn a few shillings in spare hours every week by selling it from house to house, or in the thoroughfares. A halfpenny edition of half the size of the penny edition is issued for such canvassers who think they can sell it best. One man has sold 200 on a Saturday. Address, Mr. Andrew, Christian Herald, 3, Bakehouse-court, St. Paul's, London.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY, JUNE 1, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 232. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JUNE 8, 1881. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Progress and Events	237
Sir Arthur Cotton, K.C.S.I., Testifies that the British are Israel	238
Ephraim-Israel's Redemption. By Joseph D. Granger	239
Our Vexatious Opponents	240
The Storm, and Jesus Asleep Within the Ship	241
Our Lord's Miracles	241
Review—"Englishmen Not Israelites." Part I. By the Editor	242
The Head and Not the Tail, Above Only and Not Beneath, even in Horticulture	243
Subscriptions to the Anglo-Israel Association	243

PROGRESS AND EVENTS.

WE are gratified, but not surprised, to find that one after another of our clergy and teachers are becoming convinced that our Identity is true, and cannot be gainsaid. We have just received the testimony of one who tells us frankly that, like many others, he dismissed the theory from his mind when he first heard of it some years ago. "In my folly and arrogance," he says, "I regarded it as unworthy of serious thought. I am now, thank God, thoroughly convinced, and there is no personal labour I would not cheerfully undertake if, by any exertion of mine, I could see my way to help in dispelling the blindness in part which is happened to Israel."

These indeed are encouraging words to come from a clergyman of the Church of England, and we thank God for the testimony they bear to the truth of what has long satisfied our own mind. But this is not all. We have a case lately reported to us of another minister, an evangelist in the fold of Christ, who, being brought into contact with the Identity, was struck with it, startled; retired to study it; was convinced; is now a teacher of this truth, and is rejoicing in his position as a son of Abraham, joined by faith to his Lord, and through Him to his brethren of the House of Ephraim-Israel. "I now believe the Identity," he says, "as firmly as I do my own soul's salvation."

A lady's case is made known to us, too, who has been brought to the knowledge and belief of our Identity by the perusal of the Rev. B. W. Savile's twenty-six letters on this subject, addressed to the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, published in the BANNER two years ago.

A gardener, and therefore one in humble circumstances, we are told, rejoices in the knowledge of our Identity, finding the instruction given by the BANNER opens to him the meaning of the Bible in a wonderful degree.

The work in Selkirk, under the impetus of the energetic Dr. Edward Evatt's exertions there, is advancing; and the latter, attacked as usual by Mr. F. Swinden, of Hull or Leeds, has sent to our persistent opponent a cartel of defiance, offering to "discuss the Identity with him in a public building, the larger the better, placing Mr. Swinden at one end and himself at the other, the audience between them both." We trust Mr. Swinden will accept this challenge (though we doubt if he will), and let us thus see of what material his opposition is really made. It is easy to write offensive post-cards in all directions, slandering and abusing one's brethren in Christ, but not so easy to maintain your ground face to face with your adversary, a critical public meanwhile placed as judges between the two opposing advocates.

On the whole we are satisfied that real, solid progress is taking place all along the line. The Lord is working besides for the cause in the public, political, and national events of the day. The recent action of the French in openly establishing their protectorate over Tunis, in defiance of the public opinion of Europe, in insolent and outrageous opposition to the rights of the Bey, as well as to those of the latter's so-called Suzerain, the Sultan of Turkey, are matters which we expect will bear evil fruit when "the great earthquake woe" bursts upon "yonder ill-consolidated Europe." It will very likely then be one of the causes of it. In Russia the Lord is at work, forcing an antagonism between the new Czar and the Nihilist conspirators, his subjects. The monstrous return to a reactionary policy at this juncture, and the employment by the Emperor of General Ignatieff as Prime Minister to form a "united ministry," are fatal signs that quem deus vult perdere prius dementat. The Czar, led by his terror-stricken consort, vainly hopes to put down his disappointed, groaning subjects, by a policy of repression; and there again materials to expedite the violent cataclysm and earthquake woe, prepared for 1881·6, are being by the Lord stored up in ample abundance. And do not our readers see how the high-handed acts of the French at Tunis have cut the ground from under themselves, should the force of circumstances compel the Government of British-Israel to secure her national interests and way to India (perhaps next year) by the acquisition, not only of Egypt as a protected State, but of Palestine too, as her own inheritance? France will not be able to demur then, since she has acted, it appears, in respect to Tunis, without a thought as to the interests and wishes of the British. Do not our friends take note, too, that the unhappy condition of Russia, almost hopeless as it is, must result in desperate remedies to save the nation from disruption. And what so certain to prove successful as foreign war, in which, we suppose, it may be God's will to give Russia wonderful and marked successes? Encouraged by such, aided by France, we think that Russian Gog, under Gen. Ignatieff's direction, will speedily forget her internal miseries in the intoxication of foreign victories, and in the valuable acquisitions which, destroying Europe, will aggrandise France and Russia at the expense of the German-speaking nations.

Digitized by Google

What part the Italian, Latin, and Scandinavian races may play in these terrible events, time alone must prove. But we have to-day enacted before us the first scenes of a tragedy destined to have a climax soon, in what God's Word terribly describes as an "earthquake such as there was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, so great" (Rev. xvi. 18). We thank God for our Israelite origin, which shields us from all these horrors nationally, and places us securely safeguarded and at rest in our own chambers, in our Israelite Gates, and in our own inheritance, where none can hurt and none can molest us, since the God of Israel will then be our Defence and our Covert from the storm, our Helper and our Shield (Isa. xxvi. 20, 21; Jer. iii. 18, xxx. 10; Psa. xci. 1—8, lxxx. 1—19, cxliv. 2).

SIR ARTHUR COTTON, K.C.S.I., TESTIFIES THAT THE BRITISH ARE ISRAEL.

We take the following from the April number of the Church Missionary Intelligencer and Record, vol. vi., No. 64, page 241. It will be seen Sir Arthur Cotton, if not an Israelite, yet testifies in the clearest manner that as regards India, and England too, this race has blossomed and budded, and is filling the face of the heathen Empire with fruit, that we have here witnessed for Christ, fulfilled the promise of Isa. xlii. 4: "The isles shall wait for thy law;" also that this favoured land is now the headquarters of God's truth, as Palestine once was, and shall again be before long (Gen. xxii. 17; Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20). Here we have the Rev. W. Butler Doherty's "argument from analogy" presented to us again, and proof afforded that we verily are God's people Israel, those to whom He hath shown His words, His statutes, and His judgments in such fashion as He hath not done to any nation.

We ask our readers now to attend to Sir Arthur, promising them an interesting statement. The following speech was delivered at the anniversary meeting of the Church Missionary Society at Oxford on February 7, on which occasion he took the chair.

"My claim to take the position that you have offered to me, and that I have presumed to occupy to-day, is that, having been sixty years connected with India, I can speak from my own experience of the effects of Church of England and other missions in that vast country. Let me first say something about India's outward state. It contains now upwards of 260 millions of people in a state of perfect peace, and under the most upright, merciful, and wise government in the world, or that ever was in the world, and that beyond all comparison, though there are still many things amiss in it. I may mention a proof of the wonderful progress of ideas among its present rulers in respect of its material welfare. Fifty years ago I proposed a work to cost a lac of rupees (£10,000), and it was treated with utter derision, as if it were likely that the Government would go to such an expense for such a work. Since that 200 millions (20,000 lacs) have now been spent on works of material improvement, irrigation, railways, roads, harbours, buildings, &c. Such has been the amazing expansion of our own ideas of our management of our vast charge.

"Let me also speak of the change in our ideas of our moral duties there. For years after I went to India the Government of Madras used to send the heads of police in state to present a grand dress to the principal idol of Madras, and a collector of a district would go out in full state, attended by his peons, at the annual drawing of the idol-car, and dismounting from his horse, put himself at the head of the thousands of poor degraded creatures, to take hold of the great rope by which the car was dragged, himself by far the most degraded of the whole assemblage. Such was the state of things long after I went to India. Compare the state of things of late years, when Governors-general have not been ashamed of their God and Saviour, and have publicly declared themselves most anxious to lead the natives to turn from their idols. And what has been a prime cause of this blessed change? Undoubtedly the missions so despised at first have been principally instrumental in shaming the rulers into conduct more becoming their position as Christian men. And what has been the effect of their labours on the ruled? I read in Hough's "India" that in 1823 the number of Christians in Tinnevelly under the Church Missionary Society was 100; it is now 53,000, increased 530-fold; and the whole number of converts of this mission alone is just 100,000, and under all the missions more than 500,000, and the increase in the last two years has been about 100,000; and to give a more distinct idea of what is now going on there, there have been repeated instances of large bodies of natives, several thousands in a single locality, coming to the missionary to beg for instruction, who, upon careful investigation, have shown that without the help of any missionary they have, from tracts and Scriptures, become so well grounded in the great fundamental truths that the missionaries could not refuse to baptize them at once. There are now large tracts of country where there are thus scattered through the villages real little native Churches. I could give several instances of this sort. In one place in the Madras Presidency the missionary on first visiting it found a little knot of ten or fifteen who met regularly to read the Scriptures together, and there are there now, partly in the Hydrabad State, and partly in our own, about 100 native Churches in so many villages round that place. India is thus now in a most intensely interesting state, and there is an apparent certainty of multitudes coming forward to put themselves under Christian instruction within the next few years. But what has been the source of all this blessing to India? How comes it that there are now some 800 missionaries scattered through the country, besides all the admirable and most effective native ordained ministers? This number includes the female missionaries, for I, at least, ought to acknowledge prophetesses as well as prophets; though, by some strange defect, it is not the fashion to acknowledge in mission reports those whom God has ordained, though they don't wear hats and coats. Let us, then, just look to the source of all this wonderful increase of Christian work, the state of the Church in England. What was the state of things in England when I was born? There were things occurring among men calling themselves Christian ministers that could not be mentioned before this assembly. But no more effective and true barometer of the state of the truth in England could be found than the funds of the Church Missionary Society. The average annual income at the time of my birth was £500; it is now more than £200,000, an increase of more than 400-fold. This is an unmistakable proof of what God has done for England within my own day. But one thing impresses itself more and more every year I live, and that is the inconceivable mercy of God to England when He laid that solid foundation of truth, in the rooting of the glorious Liturgy in every parish of the land. Who can estimate what God did for our most favoured land in this one act? By this, whatever foolishness or falsehood any minister may utter from the pulpit, he is under a blessed necessity of uttering from the reading-desk the purest exhibition of every one of the great truths of God that ever was composed by uninspired men, a Liturgy every word of which affords the clearest, most full and unflinching exhibition of the truth. Thus the whole atmosphere of England is kept redolent with the revealed truths of God's Word; and the very Papists and infidels of England are very different men from what they would have been if they had not, in spite of themselves, breathed this air of life and truth. And what has been the fruit? Will you bear with me in speaking of what my heart cannot but be full when I return to a place in which for more than sixty years I have had a home ready for me. In the late Provost of Worcester you have lost a man of whom I can only say that in all my long life I have never met with one who I felt more truly and simply walked with God from his entering Oxford as an undergraduate. But what thousands of such faithful men there are now in the Church of England. Not a word about them in the Times or the Record. They never commit murder, nor incite to murder, nor rave in the House of Commons, nor even stand on a heap of vestments and crow as if they had done some great feat. How can the columns of important journals be occupied by notices of such insignificant people? But are their words not reported? Are there no heavenly newspapers, whose reporters are here on earth? Of these men it may literally and truly be said, as of the heavenly bodies, No voice, no language; their sound is not heard; their voice is gone throughout all the earth, and their words to the end of the world. Their pleadings, and the effects of them, go beyond their parishes. They are opening Africa, and pouring light upon China and the Hudson Bay Company's territory. And are they unsupported by the laymen of the Church? and lay-women? Do let us look back upon England, and see out of what depths of stupidity and ignorance she has emerged in my time, that we may not dishonour God by forgetting what He has wrought for this land, so raised above all the earth that now we see fulfilled the prophecy, 'The isles shall wait for Thy law.' Nothing can be more certain than that this favoured land is now the head-quarters of God's truth, as Palestine once was, and shall again be before long. A gentleman said to me, 'These are terrible times; I am continually asked by friends to help them in trying to find for them godly curates, and they seek in vain.' I replied, 'What glorious times we have fallen upon! In spite of the vast increase of godly young candidates for the ministry, such is the amazing increase of godly incumbents that the demands for such curates far exceed the supply, though since my boyhood they have certainly increased fifty-fold.' Nay, now there has been such an answer to prayer for more labourers for the dark places of the earth, that the supply at this moment quite exceeds the funds for their support, so that we have now chiefly to ask for the gift of liberality to God's people, although their givings have, as I said, increased 400-fold. Compare this with the time when we had to send to Germany for two or three missionaries, because England could not supply one."

Digitized by Google

EPHRAIM-ISRAEL'S REDEMPTION.

By Joseph D. Granger.

In the numbers of Israel's Hope and Destiny for April and May are the first and second parts of an article, by the editor, entitled, "The Necessity for the Redemption of Ephraim-Israel." Through the entire of this paper, the writer insists upon the validity of the theory he enunciates, that Israel of the Ten Tribes, or, as he styles them, Ephraim-Israel, alone needed and obtained redemption. For my part, I cannot agree with or adopt Mr. Onslow's view of this question, and there are others in this town who would much like to have your opinion on the subject. In the first place, Mr. Onslow maintains that Israel's offence against their God was, as described by the prophet Hosea, similar to that of the unfaithful wife towards her husband, and that to reconcile Israel with their God, or the unchaste wife with her husband, redemption from sin was essential. Why, I would ask, was this the case? Not so much, I think, because of the offence, as because, in either case, a commandment of God had been broken. Israel had gone a whoreing with idols, and had broken the second commandment in the decalogue, or as in the case of the adulterous wife, the seventh. But was not Judah's offence even greater, for in their case the sixth commandment was broken, and in an unmitigated form? Was there not then as great, if not a greater, need for Judah's redemption as for Ephraim-Israel's? But I look upon it, in the matter of redemption, we are not justified in separating the two nations. Both Houses were God's people. Both committed offences in the first category against their God, and redemption was therefore as needful to one as to the other.

Mr. Onslow further states that St. Paul, in his epistle to the Galatians (iv. 4, 5), confirms his view, inasmuch as he there read, "God sent forth His Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law," from which he argues that this applies to Israel only, as, had He referred to Judah, He would have written to redeem them that "are" under the law, not "were."

I have referred for a rendering of this passage to "Darby's Translation of the New Testament," and I there find the equivalent passage thus translated, "redeem those under law." This quite cuts the ground, I think, from under Mr. Onslow's feet, for "those under law, at Christ's advent, were the House of Judah, and not the House of Israel, who were in a Lo-Ammi condition, or not My people, divorced from the law, in fact, but nevertheless under "the curse of the law," or its punishment until their redemption by Him who was "the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth." This surely included the House of Judah as well as Israel, and harmonises with the teaching of St. Paul, "glory, honour, and peace, to every man that worketh good, to the Jew first" (Rom. ii. 10).

Judah, at the time of Christ's advent, though under the law, was not wholly under the curse. Their measure of iniquity was not quite full until after the rejection of their Messiah. The redemption spoken of by Zechariah, Simeon, and those who looked for it in Jerusalem, was the same which the two disciples, in their journey to Emmaus, expressed to the risen Saviour: "We trusted that it had been He which should have redeemed Israel" (Luke xxiv. 21). Here the term Israel did not belong to Ten-Tribed Israel to the exclusion of the House of Judah. It was not the Redeemer's intention to have excluded Judah from the merits of His vicarious sacrifice. He saw that they required it as much as Israel, for after denouncing the Scribes and Pharisees, He exclaims, in pathetic words, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not" (Matt. xxiv. 37).

Judah, by her rejection of Christ, committed the greatest sin on record. Her apostacy in the past required to be condoned as much as that of Israel. She had, on various occasions, broken the law. She had apostacised from the true worship. Her sin is recorded in the Old Testament as treacherous. "The backsliding Israel," saith God, "hath justified herself more than treacherous Judah" (Jer. iii.11). By that perpetual shame, the rejection and crucifixion of Christ, Judah not only stumbled and fell, but accomplished the purpose of God and the unfailing forgiveness which Christ prayed for, when He said, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do" (Luke xxiii. 34); her own redemption, subject to her humbling herself, and accepting, like Israel, the only provision made for all sin, whether rejection, uncleanness, or disobedience, crimes which St. Paul charges upon the Jews (Titus i. 16). In no other name, by no other means, can salvation, the outcome of redemption, be obtained for Judah. This is her only hope. She still refuses. No other scheme is promised, or provided, and as long as she rejects it, she cannot attain to her legitimate position in the councils of Israel, nor reap the reward of that influence which shall benefit the world.

I quite agree with Captain Keighly in his view, as given in his reply to Mr. Thomson, on page 158 of the May No. of

Digitized by Google

Israel's Hope and Destiny. Mr. Onslow disagrees with Captain Keighly, and says, "The redemption of the House of Israel was effected completely by the incarnation and vicarious sacrifice of their Redeemer upon the cross of Calvary," but surely it was then that the price of their "redemption" was paid by Christ Himself for all Israel, and on the same occasion, and by the same sacrifice, He purchased "salvation" for all mankind. Their redemption was then, without question, paid for, but Israel no more obtained it then than Judah did. Israel, however, did obtain it, when, as Captain Keighly says, in compliance with the mosaic prophecy, "they—at the Reformation—cast aside the idolatrous worship and meretricious doctrines of the Church of Rome, and opening their hearts to their God, worshipped Him in sincerity and in truth."

Judah's redemption, I believe, has yet to be obtained, but it will be conferred upon them when, with Israel, they become one nation, under one king, on the mountains of Israel.

NOTE BY THE EDITOR.—We agree, on the whole, with our correspondent's views, and fail to see the matter as does the respected editor of Israel's Hope and Destiny. The argument from Gal. iv. 4, 5, certainly hopelessly fails; for the words ἵνα τους ὑπο νόμον ἐξαγοράση ἵνα τὴν υἱοθεσιαν απολάβωμεν most distinctly fail to show that those the Lord redeemed "were," or "are," under the law. The words simply stand indefinitely for "to redeem them under law." We look on the matter in this light:—

1. Redemption was a spiritual benefit for a spiritual lapse and fall.
2. Both Israel and Judah were guilty, and both departed from God.
3. Both must therefore be redeemed to enable God's promises to have effect upon the whole seed of Abraham (Israel and Judah together).
4. Christ "visited and redeemed His people" (Luke i. 68).
5. Judah are His people as well as Israel (Deut. ix. 26, 29; Jer. viii. 7, ix. 7, xv. 7, xxxii. 88, &c.).
6. Therefore the Jews needed redemption as much as Israel.
7. The price was paid at Calvary for both Houses.
8. But Israel's redemption incipiently begun at the Reformation, is not completely effected even yet (Luke xxi. 28).
9. Judah's redemption is sure to follow, as God is true, in due time, for reasons our friend, Mr. Granger, has stated.
10. Mr. Onslow we think is in error in supposing Israel was "uncovenanted" by being "outcasted." She was not! Otherwise we could not now be enjoying, or have enjoyed before Christ came, the covenanted blessings of Abraham. The captivity only divorced us from the Mosaic dispensation and covenant. The curses of the law still follow Israel, as well as Judah, into banishment.

OUR VEXATIOUS OPPONENTS.

WE have opponents, and opponents. Learned and respected opponents like Dr. Bonar, and others of his stamp, are wrong, and sometimes say sharp things, but they do not mean to be offensive. We have received the following anonymous letter from a correspondent. We publish the communication, because the views expressed, wrong ab initio though they are, are held by many, and are thought to damage our cause. We desire to set the matter right without particularly noticing the flowers of speech in which the writer indulges. We are, according to this nameless author, "sadly and hopelessly ignorant of Holy Scripture." Our "ignorance" is denounced, because we deny that Israel returned with Judah from the Babylonian captivity, and our fellow citizen and neighbour (a highly respected clergyman of the Church of England) is termed a "blinded" one. Finally, the writer, fancying himself a Gentile of St. Paul's wild olive tree (St. Paul, by the way, never once mentioned that tree as graffed into Israel), hugs his chains, and rejects his glorious birthright as a free son of Abraham, according to the flesh. The letter, or statement, received on March 4, 1881, is to the effect following :—

SCRIPTURE TRUTHS.

Those who say the Ten Tribes were lost and dispersed amongst the heathen from their captivity until they were found "in these Isles of the West," are sadly and hopelessly ignorant of Holy Scripture. Turn to Jeremiah l. 3—5. Here we find God decreeing His great and sure judgments against Babylon, and with what result? Why, at this very time, "saith the Lord, THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL shall come, THEY AND THE CHILDREN OF JUDAH together, going and weeping, they shall go and seek the Lord their God. They shall ask the way to ZION with their faces THITHERWARD; saying, Come, and let us join ourselves to the Lord in a perpetual covenant, that shall not be forgotten." Then read verse 20; this verse, equally with the former, refers to the return from the captivity of Babylon and Assyria; Assyria is mentioned in verse 17. "In those days, and in that time, saith the Lord, the iniquity of ISRAEL shall be sought for, and there shall be none; and the sins of JUDAH, and they shall not be found; for I will pardon them whom I reserve" (ver. 20). Verse 19 expressly states that ISRAEL (meaning the Ten Tribes) "shall be satisfied upon Mount Ephraim and Gilead."

Out then upon the ignorance of those who deny that both Israel and Judah DID return from captivity. Let your blinded neighbour, Mr. ——, read this note, it MAY open his eyes.

Your obedient servant,

A PART OF ST. PAUL'S GENTILE WILD OLIVE TREE.

St. Paul's epistle to the Romans was certainly written to Gentiles.

The question arising from the above is, Does Jeremiah l. 3—5, 17, 20, prove that the Ten-Tribed House of Israel returned with the Two-Tribed House of Judah when the Babylonian captivity returned? The passage, on the face of it, as quoted by the writer, denies the alleged fact. The Ten Tribes, if they returned, never for an instant after such return occupied, or "were satisfied" on Mount Ephraim. Neither did that House occupy Bashan and Carmel. Mount Ephraim, in our Lord's time, and for centuries before, was held by the Gentile Samaritans who were violently opposed to the Hebrews, and permitted them not so much as to pass through their land (John iv. 9; Luke ix. 53). Even the commentators on Jeremiah l. knew better than our self-opinionated opponent, for Dr. Blayney in loco (ver. 4) says, the words "in that time" will denote "during the time of Babylon's desolation, which, destined to be perpetual, will comprehend as well the time of the general restoration of Israel and Judah in the latter days as that of the more immediate and partial return from Babylon." (The italics are ours). The result is that the commentators see what our opponent is unable to comprehend—namely, that verses 4 and 20 have a prospective fulfilment in the "latter days," or A.D. times—they have to do with "the everlasting covenant" (ver. 5) or Gospel times—our days—a fact which shatters our weak opponent's bitter triumph, and sends his petty condemnation of his more able brethren into the regions of darkness and oblivion from which he issued to fulminate them, and where we advise him to remain till the light reaches him.

The presence of the Israelite Tribe of Benjamin with the Jewish Tribes of Levi and Judah, would make verse 4 accurately correct, if applicable to the Babylonian captivity, without the need of the foolish hypothesis of the opponent, which brings Ten-Tribed Israel with Judah out of Babylon together. To suppose such a thing possible is to cut to pieces such texts as these: Jeremiah iii. 18, Hosea i. 11, Ezekiel xxxvii. 1—28, Romans xi. 25, 26, &c., and to cast ridicule on Josephus and Jerome's writings. We do not notice our opponent's last words, regarding the epistle to the Romans, further than to say, that if the apostle was not addressing Israelites as well as Gentiles pure in that epistle, then chapters ii.—xi. are quite incomprehensible.

BANNER SUPPLEMENTS.—Received 2s., from "Two Constant Readers at Leicester;" Six Census half Shekels and "In Memoriam," 7s.—ED.

Digitized by Google

THE STORM, AND JESUS ASLEEP WITHIN THE SHIP.

BRETHREN, let us read a portion of God's Word together, and see if we can derive therefrom a lesson for these days of storm and tempest which have come upon us all. Let us read Matt. viii. 23—27; Mark iv. 35—41; and Luke viii. 22—25. It is the simple narrative we all know so well of one of Jesus's miracles, when He accompanied His disciples across the Sea of Galilee in a ship, and stilled a tempest that arose, by His mere word, after He had been aroused from His sleep by His disciples, who cried to Him, in agony, "Lord, save us, we perish!"

The three versions of the narrative given us in the three first gospels should be carefully studied and compared by the reader before we proceed further. It will be found that the circumstances were these:—On a certain day, at evening, after the multitudes were sent away, Jesus and His disciples, by His desire, proposed to cross the sea, and embarked. The Lord retired to the hinder part of the ship, and there reclining on a pillow, fell asleep. While He was asleep, "a great storm of wind" arose, the sea became violently agitated, the waves beat into the ship, so that it was now full, and they were all (including Jesus, as the disciples thought) in jeopardy. They went to Him, therefore, in haste and terror, and roused Him, saying, "Master, Master, we perish!" "save us, we perish!" "carest Thou not that we perish?" Jesus arose, and saying first one word of encouragement to the terrified disciples, asking them "why they were so fearful, ye of little faith?" He rebuked the winds and the sea. These obeyed Him as their Creator, and "there was a great calm." After that stupendous act, and in the midst of their wonder at His power, He again said to them, "Why are ye so fearful? how is it ye have no faith? where is your faith?" Such was the miracle, such the conduct of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ, when He was journeying with His little Church, asleep, and assailed by a fearful earth-born storm.

What have we to learn from this interesting narrative in the light of our Identity? Commander Roberts tells us we have much to be taught in this simple story. Let us hear what he says to us about it. This voyage "to the other side" was the type of Jesus, journeying with His Church, through this long and trying dispensation, when He set out with His Church to reach the happier times of the dispensation yet to come, on "the other side." "Lo! I am with you always, even unto the end of the age." Be sure of that. "Amen" was His steadfast promise (Matt. xxviii. 20). The dispensation advances, it draws on towards the end, it is eveningtide. But Jesus retires from view. He is, or seems to be, asleep. His active visible interference in the affairs of men is not manifest to them, and they forget Him. He is asleep upon a pillow in the hinder part of the ship, though still with Israel. The winds and the sea, the raging powers of the world and Satan, these being the Gentile nations of the earth led on by their ruler, the god of this world, see this to be their opportunity, and rise up against the Lord and His anointed ones, His people Israel. The great earthquake woe, the time of the upheaval of the nations draws nigh. There are "signs in the sun, the moon, and in the stars." On earth there is distress of nations with perplexity, "the sea and the waves roaring," roaring against Israel in the ship, because Christ is there. Christ is apparently asleep, and the hearts of the terrified disciples are failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming "on the earth" (Luke xxi. 25, 26).

Then the people of the Lord do that which they should have done at first. They go with their trials and distress to their hidden Redeemer, their sleeping Jesus, and tell Him their sorrows and fear. They beg Him to save them, "for they perish." This, no doubt, is faithless weakness, but "the Lord will be inquired of by the House of Israel to do this for them" (Ezek. xxxvi. 37), and they do well to go to Him. Their fear and tremblings were wrong. For Jesus was in the ship, and is security enough. But realise the danger, and who can blame their little faith if they thought Jesus asleep, could not help Himself or them? "The ship was covered with the waves," "it was filled with water," and "they were in jeopardy." We see not yet the British Empire brought to this most dreadful pass. But let us be sure we shall. We shall be in jeopardy, the State craft "water-logged," ready to go down, in awful peril, and yet Jesus asleep, Jesus doing nothing, Jesus permitting this extremity of peril to His people. Will not that be the day when "the enemy will come in like a flood"? (Isa. lix. 19). Will not that be the time when "Israel shall tremble from the West" at the mighty roarings which the Lord permits to try His nation's faith, and to show His own almighty power? (Hos. xi. 10). Surely the Lord will rise in that day, though now He is hiding Himself, asleep on a pillow in the ship, letting the storms, and winds, and waves of Satan arise till all seems lost. In Zech. ii. 13, He describes Himself as "raised up," as awake out of His slumber; and what is the result to be? "Be silent, O all flesh, before the Lord, for He is raised up out of His holy habitation." "Be silent!" "There was a great calm." The Lord rises to rebuke the Gentile nations, among whom the terrible storms arise. And how does He rebuke them? Let Zeph. iii. 8, and Isa. xlii. 14 tell us. "I have long time holden My peace, I have been still, and refrained Myself." (He has been asleep in the hinder part of the ship upon a pillow). "Now will I cry like a travailing woman. I will destroy and devour at once." "His determination is to gather the nations that He may assemble the kingdoms to pour upon them His indignation, even all His fierce anger. For all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of His jealousy." There shall be a great calm. And then mark His love. He will at last gently rebuke His people's want of faith for fearing that they and their Empire could suffer shipwreck or loss during the terriffic hurricane of Satan's wrath; for they ought to have considered, and should have known that Jesus, being with them, as He promised them in Matt. xxviii. 20, no harm could possibly occur to them, since He was present with, and ever safe-guarding them. Reader, let these thoughts comfort us in our present national trials and deep distresses. Jesus is with us in the ship. He seems now to be asleep. He fails to rouse Himself to help us. He allows troubles, trials, distresses, to overwhelm us. We are in great peril, and the water is filling the ship. Soon it will be full. Let us, then, go to Him and fill His patient ears with our incessant, importunate cries for help, and be sure of this, He will rise. He will rebuke and destroy our national enemies, spiritual and temporal, and there shall be at last "a great calm," such a calm as Jesus only brings and Jesus only gives. Israel, praise ye the Lord!

OUR LORD'S MIRACLES.

WE think there may be much instruction in the facts and circumstances surrounding our Lord's miracles seen in the light of the Identity, which, from the mode we have hithero regarded them, we have missed. We have had our minds drawn to this subject lately, and propose to give our readers some of those suggestions which have occurred to us; not pretending that these are obvious from the narratives themselves, or are indeed the teaching intended to be conveyed to us by them. We throw these suggestions out as the result of our own personal reflections, and ask our friends, reading the story afresh in the light of our glorious Identity, to take the former for just what they are worth. We advert now to the healing at Bethsaida of a blind man, and miraculously effected by our Lord (Mark. viii. 22). The man was, we presume, an Israelite of Galilee, and he was "blind;" so blind that he was obliged to be led by the hand. This man, mark, was the subject of intercession. His own countrymen and friends, men not blind, but seeing, interceded with the Lord for him. We question whether any blessing, spiritual or temporal, is ever granted by Him, unless there be first a desire implanted in some human heart to pray for the very blessing the Lord has determined to grant. It was so in this case. "They besought Jesus to touch him." Let the reader search the Scriptures, and he will find that in every instance human intercession has "moved the arm that moves the world," and obtained the blessing the blood of Jesus has been shed to buy. Think of Moses, Hannah, David, Solomon, Daniel, Jonah, Paul, each prayed for spiritual or temporal gifts, according to the will of God, and each obtained the boon and blessing they sought. The miracle in question was no exception. Intercessory prayer by the fellow countrymen of the blind one preceded his being brought to Christ. Those who prayed brought him they loved to Jesus, and asked Him to grant him what they possessed—sight. He yielded at once. Before they called He answered, while they were yet speaking He heard (Isa. lxv. 24).

Digitized by Google

Now mark the Lord's procedure. He led the blind one "out of the town," He "separated" "the blind," and "severed" him from those among whom he had usually resided, before He gave him sight. The cure could not be effected while the blind one was resident with his life-long companions, and therefore he is taken to a place where he is alone with his Lord, and there He touched him, put His hands upon him, and gradually, not at once, but after twice laying His hands upon him, effected the desired cure, and let him "see." When cured, the now "seeing," but lately blind man, is suffered to return to his "home." That "home," remember, was not the "town" whence he was lately led, but quite another spot, for in "returning," the now cured and seeing man was charged on no account to tell those in the "town," and, further, not to go into the "town" at all. During the process of cure the blindness, it must be noted, did not disappear at once. At first the cure was only partial; he saw men as trees walking; a little further light was granted, and he was restored, "seeing every man clearly."

Now, studied in the light of the Identity, the thoughts which have come unbidden into our mind, while reading the story of this miracle, are these:—Israel is God's "blind" people. They are afflicted with a disease, in that they cannot "see." They are sin-stained, and they have lost their "paths," in that, being British, they know not how they possibly can be Lost Israel. Some of their fellow countrymen, whose eyes have been opened, or who have seen their origin from their youth, bring the nation to the Lord for cure. They know He hath said, regarding a portion of this very afflicted people, "Thus saith the Lord God, I will yet for this be inquired of by the House of Israel, to do it for them," and they pray the Lord to open the nation's eyes, to give them the new covenant, and let them see their origin. Some with knowledge, others without it, pray Sunday by Sunday for the nation, that it may be blessed with the "new covenant," in the words, "Lord, have mercy upon us, and write all these Thy laws in our hearts, we beseech Thee!" Human intercession, therefore, brings this blind people first to the Lord, and He so orders it. It is His own plan. He then undertakes the cure. What is His arrangement? He keeps the nation "separated" from those among whom they always dwelt from the time they were cast out into Medea till He brought them into the Western Isles. As Semitic people, He caused them to be in association and domicile with Aryan stocks for thirteen centuries, till in the fulness of time the Hebrew race was withdrawn, prior to the cure of their blindness, into the isles—outside the town—away from the Aryan peoples, among whom they had so long lived, blind as to their origin, ignorant of their noble pedigree, and fancying in blindness they were Aryans, not Hebrews; Gentiles, and not God's people Israel. Then having at last, in the solitude of their separation, "found" at the Reformation in the sixteenth century Him they sought not, and sought Him they asked not for (Isa. lxv. 1) their cure began. It is not effected at once, as we all see and know. Some here and others there perceive and "see." The lesson is learnt "here a little, there a little," "line upon line, line upon line," but we know that ere long the "blind people," in the act of being brought forth at this very moment, will soon universally "see," be restored to sight, and clearly comprehend their Identity.

Then, but not till then, will the patient be permitted to return "home." "I will place them in their houses, saith the Lord" (Hosea xi. 11). The "return" will be to "their inheritance," their ancient home in Palestine, the "Promised Land;" and mark, in "returning," the instruction to Israel is to go back, not to Denmark, Germany, Spain, Norway, or the other parts, whence they came, but to go straight home. "Go through, go through the Gates," is the injunction, "prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people" (Isa. lxii. 10). In thus returning to their "homes," the Tribes of Israel are directed not so much as to speak to the nations of the earth, their policy respecting the latter is to be one of "non-intervention, and non-interference;" they must, as God's people, hold entirely aloof from these Aryan races; for their fate is then to be engulfed in "the great earthquake, such as there was not since men were upon earth, so mighty an earthquake, so great," while Israel's rôle is to "return" in perfect isolation, and also in "perfect peace" (Jer. xxx. 10; Rev. xvi. 18). "Come, My people," saith Jehovah, "enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself, as it were, for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. For behold, the Lord cometh out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the 'earth' for their iniquity, and the 'earth' also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain" (Isa. xxvi. 20, 21).

Review.

Englishmen not Israelites. By John Wilkinson, a friend of Israel. Second edition, with appendix. Price 6d. Houghton and Co., London.

BY THE EDITOR. PART I.

AT page 167 of vol. i. of the BANNER, our friend "L. P." dealt with the Rev. J. Wilkinson's first pamphlet, calling it "sounding brass," and administered some heavy blows, which, as far as we are aware, have not been answered. Mr. Wilkinson has now gone into a second edition, with an appendix, at a reduced cost, which we hope will also have a large sale, because we find cause to decide therefrom that the Identity is advancing. We judge thus for this reason. The clergy, who are the bulk, we opine, of Mr. Wilkinson's readers, take the opposition pamphlets first, in order therewith to be able to beat down the assertions of those increasingly numerous "erring sheep" of their respective flocks, who, insisting on judging for themselves, are reading the BANNER, or some work in favour of the Identity. It seems to us, therefore, that in order to attract notice to the character of Mr. Wilkinson's attack on the truth, it will be well if we now pass in review the "testimony to Lo-Ammi," which, in obedience to Hosea's prophecy (i. 10), Mr. Wilkinson, some years since, brought out, and which, to fulfil the contemptible part of those destined to fight against God, he has now, in a second edition, reiterated. We propose to notice his appendix first, printed at page 39. Here Mr. Wilkinson calls ours "this unscriptural theory," and supplies the opponent with certain passages, as the hammer of "the Word," to deal out deadly "blows against all error of this kind."

The "hammer," however, in this case, turns out to be our old friend Rom. iv. 16, 17; and Gal. iii. 29, which we have so often found to be arguments in our own favour, and fatal to the antagonist (see vol. v. page 173, 175; page 228, also in reference to Gal. iii. 29). Mr. Wilkinson says, regarding Rom. iv., that St. Paul quoted the promise to Abraham "as referring to a spiritual seed."

On the contrary, ver. 1 shows he was speaking of a human progeny, owning Abraham as our father pertaining to the flesh (ver. i.); "all the seed" of ver. 16, is shown therein to be the seed of the two Houses—viz. (1), that which is of the law, Judah; and (2), that which is of the faith of Abraham, Israel (Hos. ii. 20). Gal. iii. 29 merely testifies to the great truth conveyed to Abraham regarding his seed, that, "if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed"—i.e., in the bulk, literally Hebrew believers in the Lord, but with the large addendum of the children by adoption from the purely Gentile world, who are also counted for the "seed" (Isa. lvi. 6, 8). The "many nations" were clearly those referred to in Gen. xvii. 4, xlviii. 19—namely, the Gentilised Hebrew offspring of the grandson of Jacob, who were to develop into milo-hag-goim, "the fulness of the Gentiles" of Rom. xi. 25, and nothing else can be made of these texts.

Mr. Wilkinson's hammer, therefore, does not strike us down, but demolishes his own spiritualising views, on the contrary, since he cannot bring his faithful believers, pure Gentiles, out of Ephraim's loins, without also admitting that the "many nations" must be Hebrews, the offspring of that Israelite boy of Joseph's House. We point to the British colonial Empire and say, "Behold the many nations!" but Mr. Wilkinson would be puzzled to show us his purely Gentile nations now, or by any existing likelihood hereafter, as Christian converted nationalities (see Zeph. iii. 8, for their fate).

Mr. Wilkinson's statement that our views would consign "all Gentile nations to extermination" is simply a non sequitur. Their polities in Europe will, we think, be overturned and overwhelmed, but the nations will remain, and when Israel and Judah are blessed with the Spirit, nationally (Jer. xxxi. 33; Heb. viii. 10), we can see for the Gentile world everywhere glorious Gospel times, when moved by the Lord, and not by the missionary operations of the Jews, as Mr. Wilkinson fondly hopes, "many people and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lord" (Zech. viii. 22).

A second hammer, which Mr. Wilkinson promises his readers shall conquer the wicked Anglo-Israelites, is to be found in Deut. iv. 26, 27, and xxviii. 62—66. He asks, "Do the judgments there described and threatened against all the Twelve Tribes in case of future rebellion, apply as marks to the Anglo-Saxons? (page 40). We reply, "not now, but long ago, when they were disobedient and rebellious, yes." Those two chapters, if honestly read through, would disclose what Mr. Wilkinson cannot—namely, that disobedience was to be visited, repentance and obedience to be rewarded by restoration (Deut. iv. 30—40, xxviii. 1—14). We contend that the Ten Tribes (our British Khumri and Sakai ancestors) were, while wanderers among the nations, disobedient, and during all that time were tasting of every plague God set in these two chapters as His mark upon "Israel disobedient." But from the sixteenth century A.D., when the glorious Reformation became nationally ours, thenceforth, this nation being "Israel repentant and obedient," has, as a matter of fact, obtained all those blessings particularised as Israel's exclusive property in Deut. xxviii. 1—14, iv. 20—40. Unless they were Israel, how could such transfer be possible, and God be righteous? Further, since Judah is still obstinate and unrepentant, what can we expect but that she shall still abide under the heavy hand of the Divine displeasure?

When Mr. Wilkinson asserts roundly that "as long as the Twelve Tribes are out of Palestine they are under national ban and chastisement," he says what the Scriptures do not corroborate, and is thus "adding to the Word of God." He conveniently forgets that as soon as Israel-Ephraim were banished as God's "Lo-Ammi," Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Hosea, and Zechariah were all commissioned to send after them, but not after Judah, words of mercy and compassion. Such will be found in Jer. iii. 12, 15; Ezek. xi. 16; Hosea i. 10, ii. 14; Zech. x. 6—10.

Mr. Wilkinson cannot hope to hoodwink Christian men and women by the simple device of refusing to see or quote these texts. The Bible is happily in our hands, and whatever Mr. Wilkinson does himself, we all can read. There we find God regarded Ten-Tribed Israel as His bride, His wife; that He promised to be "as a little sanctuary to them in the countries where they should come," that as "Lo-Ammi" they should be "the sons of the living God," His Christian nation, and that He would be to them, "His saved, His redeemed ones, as though He had "not cast them off." Precious promises to Israel as distinct from Judah. How dare Mr. Wilkinson pass them by? How dare he pretend by silence that God's Word has no place in it for them? When Mr. Wilkinson adds (page 40) that the blessing of "the multitudinous seed" was promised to Israel "after restoration," but not before, he says what is directly opposed to God's own Word, and surely he must know it? Hosea i. 10 distinctly predicts that the increase shall be before Israel is joined by Judah, and the return takes place (ver. 11). Zech. x. 9, 10, distinctly reiterates the promise that the people shall so multiply in far countries that when they return to their land "place shall not be found for them." St. Paul, quoting Isa. x. 22, says (chap. ix. 27) that Israel's numbers, before the blessing of salvation (or restoration, see Isa. x. 22) reaches the remnant, shall be as "the sand of the sea." Mr. Wilkinson disingenuously hints that Jer. xxx. 19 limits the increase to the time after the return. The passage says nothing of the sort. God's Word cannot contradict itself, and the texts we have named being positive and precise, Mr. Wilkinson must be wrong, and we are sorry to add, wilfully so. The same remarks apply to Mr. Wilkinson's mere dictum that only after restoration is Israel to seek and fear the Lord (p. 40). Hosea iii. 4, 5 says nothing of the kind. The whole chapter, as we have often had shown us in the BANNER, refers to God's other wife, "Go yet, love a woman" (ver. 2), addressed to Judah, and not to Israel, and even if Mr. Wilkinson persists in applying the passage to the latter, the days of Israel's disobedient wanderings find them literally fulfilling Hosea iii. Mr. Wilkinson is perversely tied to a long hiatus of 1,800 years in God's dealings with His people to enable him to harmonise the Scriptures. There is no authority whatever in the Bible for such a monstrous idea, and it is cut to pieces by such texts as Luke i. 55; Gen. xvii. 9, where the covenant is stated to be "for ever," "for everlasting," and the promise cannot therefore be held in abeyance, much less abrogated by the transfer of the covenants bodily for a time, even for a moment, to a mongrel, Gentile, wicked, unworthy race, such as the British, in Mr. Wilkinson's view, certainly is. Mr. Wilkinson's sneering allusion to circumcision as the mark of true Israelism, and its absence in the British, has been answered usque ad nauseam in the BANNER. We shall not go over that weary ground again. But we would ask Mr. Wilkinson this, Do converted Jews adhere to circumcision? Did St. Paul, in his teaching, recommend it to Gentile, or even to Jewish converts? (Gal. v. 2; Acts xv. 5, 10, &c.) If not, then by Mr. Wilkinson's argument these uncircumcised ones are cut off from the promises, and cannot be followers of Jesus Christ, "the Minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, who came to confirm the promises made to the fathers"—that is, the Hebrew fathers. Our answer to Mr. Wilkinson is that British Israelites are circumcised in Christ (Col. ii. 11). Mr. Wilkinson ends his pamphlet with a suppressio veri, and hints that Anglo-Israelites deny that "Jews are Israelites." In a second edition this is shameful; and conduct such as his, when his error has once been pointed out, is simply unpardonable. We do not deny, but always loudly assert the Jews are Israelites.

(To be continued.)

THE HEAD AND NOT THE TAIL, ABOVE ONLY AND NOT BENEATH, EVEN IN HORTICULTURE.—The Hon. G. C. Brodrick, in his late work on "English Land and English Landlords," has the following remark on England of the present, and of the future, in respect to some modifications and reforms of the land laws he proposes:—"The population of an English village community will be less stationary and more fluctuating than heretofore, for the new race of English landlords will not be so deeply rooted in the soil, while tenants will transfer their capital more readily from one farm to another, and enterprising labourers will be constantly draughted off by emigration. But the motives for remaining, and for settling, in the country will also be stronger than ever, and England, already the garden of Europe, will more fully deserve that title, if the charms of its picturesque scenery and the supervision of its varied agriculture shall come to be shared by a more numerous proprietary."

SUBSCRIPTIONS RECEIVED BY THE METROPOLITAN ANGLO-ISRAEL ASSOCIATION.

From April 15, to May 16, 1881.

	£	s.	d.
Mrs. Owen Pell	5	0	0
Sydney, New South Wales, Association	2	2	0
Mr. F. C. Danvers	0	10	0
Mr. Thomas C. Westfield	1	0	0
Mr. John T. W. Goodman	1	1	0
Miss Kelly	1	0	0
Mr. J. Jenkin, Lecture Fund	0	10	0
Mr. Alex. MacPhail	0	10	0
Mrs. Elliot Macnaghten	0	10	0
Mr. Samuel Woods	2	2	0
Mr. Joseph Simpson	1	0	0
Ditto, Lecture Fund	1	0	0
Miss Sibly	1	10	0
Eight of 5s. each	2	0	0
Six of 2s. 6d. each	0	15	0
Books from a Friend at Tunbridge valued at	0	14	0

May 16, 1881. JOHN S. ANDERSON, Hon. Sec.

Digitized by Google

Scale of Charges for Advertisements

(PREPAID).

	£	s.	d
Servants Wanted, and Wanting Places, Property and Articles for Sale, Apartments Wanted, and To Let—three lines...	0	1	0
Each additional line	0	0	4
Books, Lecture Announcements, Public Companies, Institutions—four lines	0	2	0
Each additional line	0	0	6
Births, Marriages, and Deaths—four lines ..	0	2	6

All Advertisements to be sent to ROBERT BANKS, Printer, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. P.O.O. payable at Ludgate-circus.

All Communications intended for the Editor to be addressed :—"Philo-Israel," Woodcot Villa, Tyndall's Park, Bristol.

The Editor cannot undertake to return rejected MSS. unless stamps for the purpose be sent. Parties requiring an answer should enclose a stamp.

SUBSCRIPTIONS	£	s.	d
Annual Subscription for one copy weekly (including the Twelve Double Numbers) post free	0	7	6
Two copies (including Double Numbers) ...	0	12	4
Three " " " " ...	0	18	8
Four " " " " ...	1	6	2
Six " " " " ...	1	17	4

Post Office Orders to be made payable at the head office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, to W. H. GUEST, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, London.

BANNER FREE CIRCULATION FUND.

	£	s.	d.
A Lady, per Mr. Brigden, Upper Norwood Depository	0	2	0

A GENTLEWOMAN, reduced, seeks a SITUATION as Helpmate or Companion. Address, M. P. E., 60, Whitcomb-street, Leicester square, London, W.C.

ANGLO-ISRAEL BIBLE TRUTHS.—No. 4. By the EDITOR.—See "ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY," for June. 32 large pages, in coloured cover, 2d.

THE MISSION OF THE CHOSEN SEED. By W. S. CAVILL, Author of "The Promises to Abraham"—See "ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY," for June. Price 2d. Specimen copy post free 2½d. "Israel's Hope and Destiny" is published regularly on the first of every month.

Price 2d.; Annual Subscription, 2s. 6d.

ISRAEL'S HOPE AND DESTINY. Editor: Douglas A. Onslow, J.P. Contents for June, 1881: Anglo-Israel Bible Truths, No. 6, "But he shall have one Tribe for My servant David's sake, and for Jerusalem's sake the city which I have chosen out of all the Tribes of Israel" (1 Kings xi. 32)—The Mission of the Chosen Seed, by W. S. Cavill—Judah and Israel—"The Church and Nation"—Persecution of the Jews—Poetry, "Beaconsfield." Died April 19, 1881—Correspondence: The Redemption of Israel; Note by the Editor, &c.—Meetings, Lectures, &c.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet street.

Just published. Price 1s., post free 1s. 1d.

THE EGYPTIAN ENIGMA. A Plea for the British Yard: Its Antiquity and High Authority Proved by the Great Pyramid. By H. R. SHAW.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Order of your Bookseller.

DR. JOSEPH WILD'S WORKS:—

THE

FUTURE OF ISRAEL AND JUDAH,

WITH PORTRAIT OF THE AUTHOR.

Handsome cloth gilt, price 2s., by post 2s. 3d.

ALSO

THE LOST TEN TRIBES.

Price 3s., by post 3s. 4d.

Dr. Wild is one of the most eminent American preachers; and the above works are written in a clear, novel, and racy manner, and will be read with great interest by all persons. New editions of each work have just been issued. They are bound in a style that will make them attractive gift books. "Philo-Israel" strongly recommends that all persons should obtain these books.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Price 6d.; post free, 7d.

CARDINAL PROOFS THAT THE BRITISH ARE THE LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

THE ABRAHAMIC COVENANT.

By F. W. PHILLIPS.

With Two Chapters by PHILO-ISRAEL.

By the same Author.

BLESSINGS AND CURSES, AND THEIR RELATION TO ISRAEL AND JUDAH.
In neat coloured cover, price 2d., post free, 2½d.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

NEW WORK BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

THE GEOGRAPHY OF THE GATES.
By PHILO-ISRAEL.
In handsome cloth, gilt, with Coloured Map, and several Illustrations, price 3s. 6d., by post 3s. 10d.

PHILO-ISRAEL'S BOOK FOR CHILDREN.

THE HISTORY OF THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL: How They Were Lost, and How They Were Found. Told for the Children. Price 6d., cloth, gilt, 1s. Post free 7d. and 1s. 1d. Third Edition.

ARE THE ENGLISH PEOPLE THE LOST TEN TRIBES OF ISRAEL? An Inquiry establishing the Identity of the British Nation with the Lost Ten Tribes. By PHILO-ISRAEL. Price 4d.

OUR IDENTITY WITH THE HOUSE OF ISRAEL. Price 4d. Reprinted from "Clifton Chronicle Letters." By PHILO-ISRAEL.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

ROBERT BANKS'S CATALOGUE on the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon Race with the Lost Ten Tribes will be sent, post free, on application. Address, Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London.

Price 2d., post free 2½d.

MANASSEH AND THE UNITED STATES. An important Essay delivered before the "Lost Israel Identification Society," by the Rev. JOSEPH WILD, D.D., at Union Congregational Church, Brooklyn, New York.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Now ready, price 6d., post free 7d.

WHERE ARE THE TEN TRIBES?

By WILLIAM GREIG, OF MONTREAL, CANADA.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

LONDON: ROBERT BANKS, RACQUET COURT, FLEET STREET, E.C.;
And may be had, by ordering, of any bookseller.

JOHN T. W. GOODMAN,

High-Class Tailor,

47, ALBEMARLE STREET, LONDON, W.

MILITARY AND NAVAL UNIFORMS, LADIES' RIDING HABITS, HIGHLAND JACKETS, DEERSTALKERS, AND KILTS.

Gentlemen paying cash, and wishing to be dressed in the best materials and with good taste, will find all they need at this establishment, with the prices based upon the "Stores" system for cash payments.

Patterns and Prices sent free by Post.

New Lincolnshire Farmhouse Feather Beds at half price. Over 5,000 beds sold in two years. Price only 1s. per lb.

A complete bed, bolster, and 2 pillows, 50lbs., carriage paid, for 50s. Union Bed Tick, 6 ft. 6 in. by 4 ft. 6 in., two pillows, one bolster, carriage paid 12s. 6d.

Send for Price List of other sizes and Testimonials from the London Agent, T. SMITH, 15, Wine Office Court, Fleet Street, London. Money returned if not approved.

Send for a Complete Admiral Fitzroy's Barometer for One Guinea. Size 3 ft. 6 in. long by 7 in. wide, equal to those sold at £5 5s. Nearly 2,000 sold in eight months by Thos. Smith, 15, Wine Office Court, Fleet Street, London. Agent for the Lincolnshire Bedding Company. Send for price list of Beds and Ticks. Money returned if not approved.

GREAT and INCREASED SUCCESS of the Rev. E. J. SILVERTON'S READY RELIEF REMEDIES for DEAFNESS and ILL-HEALTH.

SINCE the Rev. E. J. SILVERTON removed from Nottingham to Hackney, London, in November last, he has been obliged to find more commodious premises. He may now be seen daily (Saturdays excepted) from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m., in the city (free of charge). He will be happy to send his Book of Health and Treatise on Diseases of the Ear and Affections of the Eye, price 1s. each, or free to the readers of this paper.

Note the Address—17, St. Bride Street, Ludgate Circus, London, E.C.

CANVASSERS and Colporteurs wanted to sell from house to house the CHRISTIAN HERALD, a well-illustrated penny religious weekly journal, containing always sermons by the Rev. C. H. Spurgeon and Dr. Talmage, Biographies, Stories, many Anecdotes, Sunday-school Lesson expounded, Temperance narratives, Prophetic article, Serial story, Pictures, &c. Its popularity is shown by its sale every week being 230,000 copies. Any man, woman, or youth may earn a few shillings in spare hours every week by selling it from house to house, or in the thoroughfares. A halfpenny edition of half the size of the penny edition is issued for such canvassers who think they can sell it best. One man has sold 200 on a Saturday. Address, Mr. Andrew, Christian Herald, Bakehouse-court, St. Paul's, London.

Stiff paper cover, price 6d., by post 7d.

THE NEW OLD STORY: With a Slight INTRODUCTION TO A MARVELLOUS PUZZLE.

By A E I.

A Book specially written for Children on our Identity with Lost Israel.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street; W. H. Guest, 20, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row.

Just out, 8d., post free 9d.

ISRAEL NOTWITHSTANDING; Being the Second and concluding Part of the Earnest Appeal from the Pew to the Pulpit. By JOHN G. SHAW, Author of "Britain (or Israel)," &c.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street.

Just published. Price 2d.; 12s. 6d. per 100.

IS NOT QUEEN VICTORIA THE ROYAL SEED TO KING DAVID'S THRONE, AND ARE NOT HER SUBJECTS, THE BRITISH PEOPLE, THE TEN LOST TRIBES?

By WILLIAM HOPTON, of Sutton Heath

Price 4d., by post 4½d. Special terms for a quantity.

THE ISRAEL OF GOD.

A SERVICE OF SONG

Upon the Career and Destiny of God's Ancient People Israel. WORDS AND MUSIC.

By C. W. E.

Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

12s. 6d. per 100 for distribution.

AMMI; or, THE CHOSEN PEOPLE

BY MISS BIRD.

Tracing the descent of the British people from Abraham the "friend of God," and showing that true science history, philology, and ethnology, are on the side of the Identity of the Anglo-Saxon race with the Ten Lost Tribes.
London: Robert Banks, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Printed for the Proprietor by ROBERT BANKS, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, London, E.C. PUBLISHED BY W. H. GUEST, 20, WARWICK-LANE, PATERNOSTER-ROW. WEDNESDAY JUNE 8, 1881. [All Rights Reserved.

Digitized by Google

"HEAVEN'S LIGHT OUR GUIDE."
(Motto of Her Majesty's Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.)

"And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a LION among the beasts of the Forest, as a YOUNG LION among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver."—MICAH v. 8.

"His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the HORNS OF UNICORNS: with them he shall push the people together to the ENDS of the EARTH."—DEUT. xxxiii. 17.

THE BANNER OF ISRAEL.

"Thou hast given a BANNER to them that fear Thee, that it may be DISPLAYED BECAUSE OF THE TRUTH. Selah."—Psa. lx. 4.

VOL. V. No. 233. Entered at Stationers' Hall.] WEDNESDAY, JUNE 15, 1881. [ONE PENNY.

EDITED BY PHILO-ISRAEL.

Contents.

	PAGE
Judenhetze	245
The Revised Version of the New Testament	246
The Sealed Book.—Revelation v.—Part I. By L. G. A. R.	247
Inconsistent Interpretations	248
Mapplewell Mutual Improvement Society	248
Reviews—"Englishmen Not Israelites."—Part II. By the Editor. "The Chain of Ages."—Part I.	249
Correspondence	250
The Suez Canal	251
Is it Morning? By East Anglian	251
Identity Acrostic.—No. III. By Col. M. Beresford	251

JUDENHETZE.

THERE is hardly any fact of the present day which strikes men as being so remarkable as the strange persecution and trouble which is the hard lot of the House of Judah to-day, not only in Germany, but in Russia, and in Roumania. The name given to it is "Judenhetze,"—"Jew-bating," or "Jew-hunting." The word aptly describes the process. The Jewish populace of the Western provinces of Russia are persecuted, attacked, robbed, till forced to fly from parts where, from racial causes, they are despised and not allowed to live in peace. All over the Southern provinces in Russia, for a month past, the anti-Jewish movement has lasted, causing grave anxiety.

"Thousands of Jews," said the Times correspondent on May 22, 1881, "are ruined and homeless; the poorer families seeking relief and protection from the authorities, the rich taking refuge in flight abroad. Many rich Jews in Moscow have received threatening letters, and have abandoned their country-villas, hired for the Summer. In St. Petersburgh Jews who have Summer residences in the interior, are afraid to go to them. Since the 15th instant the number of arrests made in the Kieff districts alone for attacks on the Jews, amounts to 1,227."

Such are the sad accounts which continue to arrive in this country regarding the condition of the Jewish race in the localities where God has planted them in order to their suffering the vengeance to the full. The subject has become so serious in all respects that the Times newspaper, on May 24, devoted a leading article to the consideration of the phenomena, in view to explain to us here in free and happy Britain, why it is the Jews are so tried, and what the proper remedies are for so miserable a state of affairs. The Jews, it seems, are usurers, who grind down the rural population in Russia, as elsewhere, when they have a chance; but the fault is Russia's, which confines their race to that one avocation, and prevents the Jew developing his talents in other and safer channels. The people, on the other hand, hate the Jew, not so much because he is a Jew, a man whose religion they do not understand or regard, but rather because he is a foreigner "with a religion which, it is suspected, leads him to use the Synagogue for sacrificial purposes." They are encouraged to persecute him, because they see their government, with the Czar at its head, lending itself to acts which, like the case of Mr. Lewishon, amount to a breach of international obligations, banishing a British subject because he is a Jew, and under the pretence that being a Jew, and a foreigner, he may be a Nihilist in disguise! All these causes combined are at present operating to produce the most intense and bitter hatred to fall upon a race which is being persecuted out of Russia, is being hunted in Germany, and is being ill-used and generally outraged throughout those countries and Roumania. What is the true reason of this state of things, as seen in the light of our Identity, and why are the Jews so treated now? We think Jeremiah xvi. 16 explains the whole thing very clearly. For after promising in verses 14, 15, that the Lord will again bring the captivity of "the children of Israel," i.e., that of the House of Israel from the land of the North, and that of the House of Judah, "from all the lands whither the Lord had driven them," God declares regarding Judah (we believe), "Behold, I will send for many fishers, saith the Lord, and they shall fish them; and AFTER, will I send for many hunters (Judenhetze), and they shall hunt them from every mountain (or nation: Russia and Germany), and from every hill (or smaller State: Roumania, &c.), and out of the holes of the rocks." But hunt them whither? Where have the Jews to go just before the captivities return? Surely to the House of Israel! (Jer. iii. 18). To "the Isles of the West," where Ephraim dwells (Isa. xxiv. 15). "Westwards," therefore, from their present habitations, till they reach the only safe resting-place God has provided for them ere they are succoured by their brethren of the House of Israel, and united with them, set out for their glorious inheritance whither the Thirteen Tribes are bound. The condition of the unfortunate Jews in Roumania, as reported on May 24, in the Standard, may be judged by the following quotation, the report being from Vienna by the "own correspondent" of that paper of the day before:—

"The Jewish inhabitants of Roumania have been thrown into a state of great terror by the announcement of the Roumanian Government that no Jews seeking to escape from Russia will be permitted to cross the Roumanian frontier. The anti-Semitic agitation in Roumania is becoming every day more violent, and it is feared that brutal excesses may be perpetrated against persons of the Hebrew faith. The leaders of the anti-Jewish party declare that as soon as the approaching festival of the coronation shall be over they will stir up the popular prejudices against the Jews with redoubled vigour."

Digitized by Google

The sufferings of our brethren of Judah cannot but fill us with compassion for their terrible fate. We trust the Judenhetze may speedily send them to their only haven of safety, where we see by the condition of our towns and cities, and the vast number of houses lacking inhabitants (in consequence of the overbuilding which has been taking place everywhere), that God has prepared for the comfortable reception of the millions of Jews who shortly will seek refuge among us. These, driven by Judenhass and Judenhetze from their foreign habitations, will come to these secure shores where Israel "dwelleth safely," and "is in rest, is quiet, and none can make him afraid" (Jer. xxx. 10).

Apart from the suffering which these violent proceedings must entail on the Jews, we are rejoiced to see in the Judenhetze another proof that Israel's Identity is soon to be proclaimed. For Israel and Judah are "together" to return at no distant date. Humanly speaking, nothing but the "hunters" and "Jew-baters" would or could have driven the Jews from their continental domiciles. But, true to prophecy, the Lord's hand is working to fulfil His own and our prophet Jeremiah's words (xvi. 16) and so the House of Judah, "hunted" out of the mountains and the hills, and the holes of the rocks, are travelling Westward (as we lately showed), and will do so now, no doubt, with additional celerity, as the time approaches. Welcoming these good signs of the close approach of the Bridegroom, we joy and rejoice exceedingly, and bid our readers in praising the Lord, to do the same.

THE REVISED VERSION OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

THE admirable article in the Times newspaper of May 25, 1881, on the revised version of the New Testament, drew from our friend, "L. P.," the remark: "I must say it is very striking, as compared with foreign papers, to read in Israel's first newspaper, the Times, a long article—clear, fair, and just—on the revision of the New Testament." In what nation would such a work be undertaken at all? What nation among the Gentile races could possibly produce, or would care to produce, such an admirable result as was presented to us on the memorable Tuesday morning, May 17, 1881, when the precious volume came into our possession? It is the most splendid, accurate, glorious edition of "the words of the great God of Israel" given to His people since they were written for our learning 1,800 years ago; and we thank Him for them, from our Identity point of view, as a new illustration of Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20. He hath verily now "shewed His words unto Jacob, His statutes and His judgments unto Israel. He hath not dealt so with any nation; and as for His judgments, they have not known them."

It is not our intention on this occasion to go over the ground traversed by the Times in its excellent article, or to treat at length of the history of the revision and the manner in which the translators have done their work in regard to the New Testament. Suffice it to say that the changes made in the revised version, though many, are entirely in favour of our Identity; "the style of the language employed in the authorised version has been closely followed in the revision;" "the minimum of innovation has been combined with the maximum of accuracy of rendering, of authenticity of text, and of perspicuity of language. The Times has well said, "the revised version is not only a great advance in accuracy, but it is simply the most accurate and scholarly rendering of the Greek Testament extant in any language" (thus proving again the British are "the head and not the tail"). "It is the first and only attempt to make a translation which shall be a true copy and transcript of an original text, itself the most authentic, which the scholarship of the age can construct from all the materials extant."

The point of interest to our readers who are studying our Identity, is what the translators make of those texts in the New Testament on which we have usually relied in proof of our Hebrew origin. We say that they have wonderfully helped our cause, and vindicated our opinions.

Let us take a few examples as illustrations of our meaning. In Luke ii. 32, where the authorised version has a mistranslation which has veiled a glorious Identity truth by making "Christ a Light to lighten the Gentiles," the revision gives us the beautiful view that He is "a Light for revelation to the Gentiles;" or, as marginally also rendered, "a Light for the unveiling of the Gentiles"—which shows there was something to reveal or unveil among the Gentiles, and Christ came to do that, and to be "the glory of His people Israel."

In verse 14 of the same chapter we have the true rendering given, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men in whom He is well pleased," or, "men of good pleasure;" God's chosen people, in fact, and for them alone. In verse 10 we have the article "the" inserted, correctly limiting the "good tidings of great joy to all the people," "for there is born to YOU this day," &c.—a very different (but true) rendering of what the authorised version has hitherto presented to our minds of the glorious message. In verse 38 the revision suggests to us that a part of Christ's work He came to do was "the redemption of Jerusalem," a change, indeed, from the authorised version's words.

In Zacharias' song, verse 68, we have the Identity view maintained by our revisers, in the words, "Blessed be the God of Israel, for He hath visited and wrought redemption for His people, and hath raised up a horn of salvation for us in the House of His servant David. . . . Salvation from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us. To show mercy towards our fathers, and to remember His holy covenant, the oath which He sware unto Abraham our father," &c. Thus proving that the redemption of Christ was wrought for Israel only, in order to enable the oath to Abraham to have effect.

In John vii. 35 we have, in the revised version, our views clearly stated, as the inquiry of the Jews, "Whither will this Man go that we shall not find Him? Will He go unto the Dispersion among (or "of," margin) the Greeks, and teach the Greeks?" showing the (Ten-Tribed) Dispersion was not distinguishable to the Jews from those people they called the Hellenes or Greeks; and that a Dispersion of hidden Hebrews was among the Greeks, who were not Jews, since these could not be mistaken or hidden.

In Rom. xi. 17—24 the revision makes it clear that it was not the "wild olive tree," but a "wild olive" (fruit) or graft, which was introduced into the still standing good olive Israelite tree, never cut down at all, as alleged by our opponents. Verses 17 and 24 make that quite plain. In verse 25 the word "blindness" is rendered "hardness," which suits our British case well, and gives good hope that as soon as "the fulness of Gentiles" or "Melo-hag-goim" of Gen. xlviii. 19 shall have come in, the outpouring of the Holy Spirit will be granted to British-Israel; and "All-Israel" shall be saved. Then will be the appearance of "the Deliverer" (not of a Deliverer, as some fondly imagine), and "the Deliverer, even Jehovah-Jesus, shall take away ungodlinesses (margin, revised version) from Jacob, according to the covenant from Me"—alluding, doubtless, to Jer. xxxi. 33.

The revised edition brings out 1 Peter i. 1 very clearly, and proves that the epistle was addressed by St. Peter to the Ten-Tribed Dispersion. It runs thus: "Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the elect, who are sojourners of the Dispersion in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, Bithynia, according to the foreknowledge of God the Father," &c. That this Dispersion was Christianised Israel is clear from chapter ii. 9, where the revised version reads thus, pointing back to God's chosen nation, "Lo-Ammi" Israel, now redeemed, "But ye are an elect race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a people for God's own possession, that ye may show forth the excellencies of Him who called you out of darkness into His marvellous light, which in times past were no people, but now are the people of God, which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy" (Isa. xli. 8, xliii. 7, 21; Exod. xix. 6; Psa. ii. 8; Hosea i. 6, 10, ii. 23, &c.).

Digitized by Google

Our space forbids us carrying on the examination further. But we may truly say that, as far as we have gone in the comparison of the revised with the authorised version, we do not find a single alteration of reading which places a difficulty in the way of our Identity, its hopes and prospects. On the contrary, the revision helps our cause, as we fully expected it would; since it brings us nearer to the mind of the Spirit which dictated the New Testament; and the testimony of Scripture is, that God's promises are true, and that the nation which is in enjoyment of all the blessings promised by covenant and God's oath to "Abraham and his seed for ever," must be no other than Lost Israel, since the House of Judah, or the Jews, have not so much as even one of them in possession. Israel, praise ye the Lord! (Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20).

THE SEALED BOOK.—REVELATION V.

By L. G. A. R.

PART I.

THE task we have assigned ourselves is to endeavour, by the help of the Holy Spirit, to elicit some new light in the interpretation of Rev. v. and vi., and this because we do not feel satisfied with former comments, and mainly because we think that the book of Revelation deals in the first instance with the setting forth of Christ and His people, and deals, in the second place, with their enemies.

The sealed book on the right hand of Him who sits upon the throne is carefully closed with seven seals; this we take to denote the darkness that rested upon the then future, not partial, but complete. The seven seals we take to be rather theological, so to speak, than material. This view is confirmed by the fact that, whenever a seal is broken, some portion of the contents is revealed.

This book has been shut—even to the understanding of God's own dear people—so effectually, as God Himself had foretold, until the time of the end (Dan. xii. 4, 9; Isa. xxix. 10—12), that though many earnest men have striven to make known its contents, they have all partially failed.

We are encouraged, however, by Daniel's experience in chapter ix., where we find that it was not until within two years of the return of the captive Jews from Babylon that Daniel, "the greatly beloved," was given skill and understanding "to understand the matter," and consider the vision. Let the reader refer to Jer. xxxii., where he will find two books, one sealed and another open; the latter, probably, is the one described in Ezek. ii. 9, 10. The sealed one contains, we believe, the substance of what is alluded to in Jer. xxxii. 36—44, and is the prototype of the one under consideration.

It does not appear to us reasonable to suppose that the sealed book in Rev. v. contains merely a revelation of the future, or that it comprises the whole book of Revelation. The seven seals are all broken in Rev. viii. 1, and verse 2 begins a new view of the subject, or a fuller insight into the operations contained between the sixth seal and the seventh. If this be so, then the culminating point is attained in chapter vii., which records the sealing of the 144,000 out of all the Tribes of Israel—Dan only excluded, since he was away from the scene of the sealing vision, which was the Roman earth, or mystical Babylon. Dan had already found his way into the "isles of the West." The same chapter reveals also the "great multitude" which no man can number; glancing at the margin we find reference to Rom. xi. 25, which "fulness of Gentiles" again carries us back to the original promise that Ephraim should become a multitude of nations (Gen. xlviii. 19); when, God's promise having been fulfilled, then all Israel shall be saved—the Ephraim-Israel first, the Judah-Israel at last.

This view leads us to limit the time of the sealing of the 144,000 to the destruction of the Pagan Roman Empire, since Dan is not there, and also that Ephraim's name is not mentioned, although he appears as Joseph, being in the land of forgetfulness; Manasseh being mentioned, for said he, God hath made me forget all my father's house (Gen. xli. 51), the spiritual Egypt; and it is not there that he is to bring forth fruit. This fruit-bearing (Ephraim-Israel) appears in verse 9. In Rev. vi. we shall have brought before us Israel represented as a horse in the field, going even to Babylon; and finally, in their sealing, being redeemed from thence (Micah iv. 10).

Looking at history we should find a people who had been once a military Power in Europe, escaped out of it into the place where Dan already had come; these escaped ones—the Twelve Tribes—reconstituted as a redeemed nation, forming a nucleus, and growing, in time, by reason of constant accretion, into a multitude which no man can number, and bearing fruit to the glory of God (Isa. xl. 31, xli. 1, 8, 9).

The sixth chapter contains the opening of the six seals, and what transpired in consecutive order. Now, if this book is to be taken literally, then it would have been impossible to read anything therein until the seventh seal had been broken; whereas, if we look upon it as a purely figurative mode of expressing its secrecy, we may say (now that we have arrived at the "time of the end") that, as in Zech. xi. 10 God's covenant under the law had been broken with all the people, and since He had said, "I will never break My covenant with you," and as Christ was a Minister of the circumcision (not made with hands) to confirm the promises, this book must be a NEW COVENANT, made with that same people, which we shall term, "the New Covenant dedicated with blood." This expression we take from Heb. ix. 15—17, where the TWO covenants are compared: the New Covenant is made with the House of Israel and with the House of Judah (Heb. viii. 8—13; Jer. xxxi. 31—34). We cannot spiritualise the one without the other.

This reasoning leads us to enter more fully into the feelings of the beloved disciple, as he saw this book with the writing on the back or outside, "the New Covenant dedicated with blood;" and when hearing the challenge of the mighty angel, he saw there was no one able to open the book, nor to look thereon, "He wept much."

Let us try to place ourselves in John's circumstances—he, the last of the apostles, saw the cause of Christ persecuted, himself in banishment, the whole terrible power of the Roman Empire thrown upon his people had crushed them; the name of Israel was, as it were, blotted out; and their remembrance was likely to cease from among the nations.

Had God forsworn Himself? Was He man, and not God? Where was "His Name's sake," of which of old He had been so jealous? The kingdom of God had been visibly taken from the Jews, but as yet not manifestly given to a NATION. The present was despaired of, the future was dark. What is to be the end of these things? How was John's faith to be built up? Had he believed in vain? The words would still sound in his ears, "There be some standing here which shall not taste of death until they see the kingdom of God come with power." Were all his cherished hopes concerning this kingdom, God's promises to Abraham, never to receive confirmation? Is this new covenant to remain sealed to him whom Jesus loved? Then how could others have their faith buoyed up when the Anti-Christ should appear, the perilous times in the last days of which John himself had written (1 John ii. 18—24); and how could they believe in "that which they had heard from the beginning"?

Digitized by Google

The apostle is, then, greatly relieved on seeing the "Lion of the Tribe of Judah," the root of David had prevailed to open the book, and the enraptured ones around the throne burst out into the new song—that song which no one could learn "save the 144,000 which were redeemed from the earth;" these are the first-fruits unto God and to the Lamb.

These, "the elect who are sojourners of the Dispersion in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, Bythynia," "the Twelve Tribes which are of the Dispersion," "the elect race," "royal priesthood," "holy nation," these redeemed ones once in dispersion are in the scene before John, represented as gathered in an anticipatory vision, and their song is: "Worthy art Thou to take the book, and to open the seals thereof, for Thou wast slain, and didst purchase unto God with Thy blood men of every tribe and tongue, and people, and nation, and madest them to be unto our God a kingdom and priests; and they reign upon the earth" (compare 1 Pet. i. 1—5, ii. 9, 10; James i. 1, 18; Rev. iv., v. 9, 10, revised version).

This House of Israel was scattered among all nations as "wanderers" (Amos ix. 9; Hos. ix. 17), and is to be found gathered in these "islands of the West" (Isa. xxiv. 13—15, xlii. 10—12), there singing that beautiful song it is their especial privilege to sing, Psa. cvii. 2, &c.

And so the beloved disciple sees in vision what Daniel the greatly beloved had foretold, "the kingdom given to the saints of the Most High," and what he had been led to expect from Old Testament prophecies (Dan. vii. 22—27; Micah iv. 8; Psa. cxlvii. 19, 20, cxlviii. 12, cxlix.).

Such, in brief, is the preparatory vision; and now we purpose laying before the readers of the BANNER a new scheme of interpreting the "white horse" and his fellows. Enough has been said to lead the reader to see that this book concerns primarily God's own dear people, and Rome only incidentally; as in former times it was found necessary to bring in Babylon as the great instrument for evil at the head of the Gentile world, amongst whom Israel was thrown.

(To be continued.)

INCONSISTENT INTERPRETATIONS.

THE Rev. C. W. Hickson in his speech at the annual meeting of the Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association, on May 20, last, made some excellent observations on the need of consistent interpretations in dealing with connected passages of God's Word. He then pointed out how our opponents have always fallen into this error; no greater delinquent in the matter of inconsistency existing than the Rev. Dr. Horatius Bonar.

Were we to ask him in regard to Isaiah xlii. 24, to whom the Lord was referring as "given to the spoil," and as "abandoned to the robbers;" whether Jacob and Israel in the passage meant literal Israel or spiritual Israel, doubtless Dr. Bonar and his school would unhesitatingly reply at once, "Literal Israel, of course." On literal Israel they would, as something bad predicted, consign "the fury of God's anger, and the strength of battle" of verse 25. Also the suffering from "the fire round about," the burning, and yet the callous indifference to the punishment in the chastised sinner, "literal Israel." Turn next to the next chapter (xliii. 1—7), which in the original follows chapter xlii. 25, without a break, and ask Dr. Bonar again to whom the good things promised there belong? to spiritual Israel (the Church) or to literal Israel, the chastised? and the answer, as we know, is invariably "To spiritual Israel," Christ's Church, without doubt.

Herein is a great and unjustifiable inconsistency of interpretation. For by no valid reason can the sudden change of application in consecutive passages, where the same words, Jacob and Israel, occur, from one to a totally different object, be justified. Either spiritual Israel and spiritual Jacob—the Church, is first the object of God's fury, anger, fiery wrath and burning punishment, but after that of His blessing (which our opponents will not and cannot allow)—or the literal Israel and Jacob, punished first, as our opponents admit, are afterwards comforted, saved, and blessed, since they are the same literal Israel Christianised. It must be one or the other. Our opponents must take their choice, they cannot inconsistently change their interpretations arbitrarily without sufficient, or indeed any valid cause.

Isaiah liv. 6, 8, are treated also in the same inconsistent manner by our opponents. Mr. Hickson observed that the woman, forsaken, grieved in spirit, and a wife of youth refused, no doubt Dr. Bonar could apply to "literal Israel," because the facts point clearly that way. But why is verse 8 interpreted inconsistently with verse 6, though manifestly treating of the same object, when our opponents persistently declare that "the everlasting kindness, and mercy," and Redeemer's pledge, are all for "spiritual Israel" (being something good) but is not for literal Israel at all? Either both are for the latter, which is the truth, or both are to be applied to the Church, meaning "spiritual Israel," without reference to the Hebrew nation at all, which our opponents cannot allow, since then "the Church" would have manifestly some time or other to be "forsaken," "grieved in spirit," and "refused" as a wife, after the manner the passage declares Israel is to be. Similarly Mr. Hickson instanced the opponents' treatment of Hosea i. 4—9, and 10, 11. The former being bad is the portion of the Ten Tribes, according to the opponents. But verses 10 and 11 being something good and pleasant, is inconsistently denied to the same Ten Tribes, and allotted to the "Church," which is, forsooth, to be multitudinous, called not My people, just where she turns out to be "sons of the living God." The inconsistency in this case becomes glaring, when verse 11, with Judah's joinder with Israel, and the return of the two Houses to "the land," are taken into account. In regard to Zechariah x., another case of inconsistent interpretation, Mr. Hickson pointed out how verses 5—10 distinguish Israel from Judah—Judah is strengthened, Joseph (Israel) saved—both brought back again, both subjects of mercy at last, treated as though "not cast off." But verse 7 gives Ephraim mercies separately, and these must be under fulfilment now before the union of the two Houses; since then, and thenceforth, Ezekiel xxxvii. 22 teaches us, there will be no separation of blessings, but the Twelve Tribes will share, and share alike in all. "Ephraim," therefore, has now, as literal Israel, to be gathered, (a fact accomplished), to increase (under accomplishment in the British), to be sown among the people, or Gentiles, dispersed in far countries, to "live" in Christianity with their children, and "turn again" to God, all which must nationally be, and is nationally fulfilled in us British, but is not, and cannot be, as a fact, accomplished in the Church of Christ, or, as our opponents term her, "spiritual Israel."

MAPPLEWELL MUTUAL IMPROVEMENT SOCIETY.—On Monday evening a public lecture was given in connection with the above society by Mr. A. K. Robinson, of Leeds, on "The Scriptural Evidences of the Identity of the British race with the Ten Tribes of Israel." The lecture was a very able and interesting one, and was delivered in an excellent style. The subject was handled in a masterly manner. The expense of the lecture, &c. (which was free to all), was kindly defrayed by Mr. John F. Wood, of Barugh Green, who is a zealous advocate of the Identity theory. There was a large and respectable audience, including many ladies and visitors from Barugh and Darton. Mr. Robinson lectures again on Monday next, on "The Promised Land; or, England's Inheritance in the East."—Barnsley Chronicle, April 2, 1881.

Digitized by Google

Reviews.

Englishmen not Israelites. By John Wilkinson, a friend of Israel. Second edition, with appendix. Price 6d. Houghton and Co., London.

BY THE EDITOR. PART II.

WE beg our readers to notice how, on the very title-page of his pamphlet, Mr. Wilkinson ostentatiously fulfils Hosea i. 10. In the place where Israel of the Ten Tribes was to be spoken of as a Christian nation—"sons of the living God"—there wilfully blinded men would, the prophet said, cry out regarding them, "Lo-Ammi!" they are "not God's people." Such is Mr. W.'s testimony regarding the race of Englishmen. The nation whom we lately heard an Ojibway Indian Chief, Pahtahquahong Chase (a Christian minister), declare in our hearing from the pulpit, "was the great Christian nation of the earth," Mr. W., in fulfilment of a despicable destiny, shouts out loudly is "not Israel," "not His people," therefore, "Lo-Ammi." Mr. W. is verily a blind witness, and by denying God's people he dishonours Him. We have not time, nor room, nor patience, to pass in review all Mr. W.'s statements in the 38 pages of his pamphlet. He commences with untruth; and, as we showed before, he ends his second edition, after being plainly told his error, by untruth wilfully repeated. He declares Anglo-Israelism, as represented by Mr. Hine's first volume, called, "The Twenty-Seven Identifications," asserts "that the Jews are not Israelites." The pamphlet in question, as has often been proved, and anyone can satisfy himself of the fact by reading, says no such thing. On the contrary, Mr. Hine, and all Identity writers since, have openly, largely, fully, and unreservedly admitted that Jews are Israelites, and always were; but the House of Israel was and is distinct from the House of Judah or the Jews; because, while "all Jews are Israelites, not all Israelites are Jews." Mr. W. most disingenuously repeats the error over and over again, even in his second edition, and thinks by such repetition to stifle inquiry, whereas he only proves thereby that his own animus is great, and that prejudice has blinded him, even when God's truth and Christian candour are in question. In his preface, page iv., Mr. W. makes the statement we have so often refuted—namely, that Anglo-Israelism hurts the cause of Jewish evangelisation. It is not so. Our own position as a treasurer of the Jews' Society for twelve years past is proof positive against Mr. W.; and we tell him that, so far from doing or wishing injury to Jewish conversion, Israelites, if true to their principles, must heartily work for them, because they are brethren; and the Lord taught us to take the Gospel (our own mission) to the Jew first. In regard to our alleged application of all the curses to Judah and all the blessings to Israel (page iv.), we deny again that such is the fact. We say that, pro tem, God is giving us, as the House of Joseph obedient, their promised blessings now; while, pro tem, Judah, disobedient still, is under curses. But the time is soon to come (and the sooner the better, for us and for the world) when Judah shall be blessed with us—share and share alike with us, in all God's good gifts; and even in this time of their eclipse we proclaim that the Jews are not wholly without their good things. For, first, a member of that race occupies the throne of British-Israel, the greatest sceptre this world has ever seen. Second, the wealth of the world is largely in their hands. Third, God's blessing is on them still in preserving them—giving them power and intellect, and aptness for many pursuits in life wherein they excel all Gentile nations; and fourth, after all—as God's ancient people were separated from Him—they are markedly His chosen ones, "His present" (Isaiah xviii). Mr. W.'s pamphlet then is founded on error and misconception. What wonder that his conclusions are erroneous, and his arguments lame? The whole of Mr. W.'s arguments, indeed, against our Identity are founded on the plain but fundamental error which he hugs—that our views as to the Scriptural distinction between Israel and Judah are fallacious and unscriptural. He calls this our "fundamental error" (page 8), but until he sees his own he cannot possibly view correctly the truth of God's Word, on which the whole of the two Testaments is built. But the wonderful part of Mr. W.'s blindness is that while he with great energy attacks our belief regarding this vital point, he holds himself quite as distinctly as we do that Israel is one thing, but Judah another. At pages 21 and 38 he seems, for instance, to admit that the Ten Tribes exist, but with remarkable want of candour he denies it is his purpose to show who and where they are, but merely that it is his to prove that the English are not they. He seems to admit that the Nestorians, the Falashas, the Afghans, and North American Indians may be the Ten Tribes (thus admitting their separate existence), but claims to assert that the English certainly are not. While Mr. W. very properly denounces the spiritualising robbery of our clerics, which takes all Israel's Scriptural blessings and confers them bodily on the Christian Church as "spiritual Israel," he equally denounces the teachings of the Identity because the blessings of Israel—that is, of the House of Joseph of the Ten Tribes—are properly reserved by us for that House only, and are not (unjustly) appropriated, as he would have it, to his favourites, the Two Tribes, or the Jews. Not so says God's Word. There the distinction is as clear as the day. Israel and Judah, two nations, now in separation, destined to be one; both Israelites, but one, Ephraim-Israelites, the other Judah-Israelites; the one presently under blessing, the other under the temporary hidings of God's face; the one a nation, the other a scattered people; the one a multitude of nations, Christian in religion, but mistaken for a Lo-Ammi Japhetic race; the other few and scattered, Jewish in religion still, known everywhere as God's ancient people, the Hebrew remnant of the House of Judah. All this Mr. W. cannot or will not see. He maintains that we say that "the Jews are not Israelites," whereas we declare they are, and that we wickedly rob them of the blessings God's Word promises to Israelites, whereas we say that God's Word promises certain blessings to the House of Joseph, which is Ephraim-Israel, and those blessings were never meant for, and cannot be grasped by Judah-Israel, in detriment of the true heir, Israel of the Ten Tribes. This in a nutshell is the contention between Mr. W. and us. We have no hesitation in saying Mr. W. is "blind" regarding the distinction, and being so, has missed the true meaning of eight-tenths of God's Word, and the scope of the New as well as of the Old Testament. His whole pamphlet, by its utter confusion of details, by its application of promises made to Israel of the Ten Tribes to Judah, by taking Judah to mean the House of Israel, and the House of Israel to mean the Jews, produces confusion worse confounded, sets the cart before the horse, makes muddle where God's Word is clear, and mystifies the whole of the prophetic teachings of the Bible. We propose, in our next and concluding notice, to give a few instances of Mr. W.'s strange inability to see distinctions where God has plainly drawn them, and his determination to shut his eyes to truths which are written in the Word as with a sunbeam.

(To be continued).

The Chain of Ages, &c. By W. B. Galloway, M.A. Sampson Low & Co., 188, Fleet-street, London, E.C. Price 16s.

PART I.

"WHAT HAS BECOME OF THE TEN TRIBES?"

THE Rev. Mr. Galloway, at page 228 of his work, chapter vi., gives us an intensely interesting account of what he sees and knows regarding the question of the Ten Tribes and their whereabouts. He starts with a decided assertion, which will put to flight a host of our opponents. He declares, "From their captivity the main body of the Ten Tribes never returned to Palestine" (page 228). Differing from our author in his supposition that some of Ephraim and Manasseh returned with the Jewish captivity, and for which we find no support in the texts he quotes, we agree that the land of the Ten Tribes having been allotted to foreigners, and these not having been dispossessed, the Ten Tribes could not have returned if they would. The testimony of Josephus and Jerome, in the first and fifth centuries, A.D., is quoted by Mr. Galloway in proof of his position, and he finds the ignorance of the Jews as to any such return a bar to the belief in the alleged fact. "It is becoming important to inquire," says Mr. Galloway, "what has become of the Tribes" (p. 230), and we quite agree with him, and thank him for the help he gives us in trying to find them. Supposing 200,000 of them to be in the mountains of ancient Media to-day as Nestorian Christians, "where are the rest?" The probability is hinted by Mr. G. that before the dispersion the Israelites of the Ten Tribes traded for tin, and settled in Cornwall, Ireland, Greece, Spain, and elsewhere, taking Baal-worship with them. Dan's connection with Sparta and the Lacedemonians is noticed, and the connection between the name of Sakas, or Sakian, with "the House of Isaac" (saac, laughter) is plainly indicated as probable (page 234). Mr. Galloway notices Wolff's conjecture that the Ten Tribes had gone to "the land of darkness beyond the Sabbatical Zion," as indicating the land of the Cimmerii—Cimmerian darkness being proverbial (page 236), and thinks the spot described was the Tanais river, or the Straits of Yenicale. Our author draws much instruction from Hos. i., as indicating a Cimmerian or Japhetic transformation, destined for the Hebrew Shemitic Israelites; showing that we must look for these Ten Tribes as a European Gentile race, dried figs (Jer. xxiv.), dry bones (Ezek. xxxvii.), unlike Israelites as possible. Noticing that traces of the wanderings of

Digitized by Google

Israel are found in the Crimea, it is probable that Israel succeeded to the very name of the Cimmerians when they occupied their territory (page 240), and the latter were driven back into Asia, Mr. Galloway records that outcast Israel, or the House of that name, was known as Sakai, or Saaks (Hebrew, saak, to laugh). The Greeks knew them as Gelæ, meaning also to laugh; also Cadusii, or the holy people (Hebrew, Kedushim). He finds the Saaks and Israelites were probably identical, for the reasons following (page 243):—There was, soon after Israel was carried captive and located in Media, a strong pressure of Getæ and Messagtæ, Huns and Alani brought to bear on them, forcing them Westwards (p. 245). A West and Northerly course, to avoid the Roman armies, drove the retreating Israelites towards Northern Europe, in the direction of "The Hyperborean Islands (Britain), of which they had doubtless heard from former traders in Palestine, and from their ἄγγελοι (Angli—English), sent out to pioneer" (page 248). Driven by Charlemagne's conquests, the Saxons and Danes—the descendants of the Sacæ—forced out of their European Continental settlements, were gradually pressed into their last asylum, Britain. Mr. G. clearly traces the Saxons from the Sacæ, and produces evidence that the latter were located where the House of Israel was carried captive (page 250). The Cadusii, neighbours of the Sakai were thought by Fuller to be Israelites—their name, Kedushim, in Hebrew, means "the holy people." Their neighbours, the Calchians, practised circumcision. But Pliny (says Mr. Galloway) called the Cadusii, Gelæ—which, if Greek, means to laugh (γελᾶν), having the same signification as Saak, or Isaac, "laughter" (Gen. xxi. 6). Mr. Galloway clearly suggests that the names Gelæ and Gélöi are Greek renderings for the "House of Isaac," which are of the same meaning as Sacæ and Saaks—and he thinks a reference to Israel mingling as potter's clay with the iron men of the Roman Empire is concealed in Dan. ii. 41 and Isa. lxiv. 8, pointing to a Western immigration of Israel from Asia into the Roman Empire. Mr. Galloway points out the probability of Israel in her wanderings falling low in the matter of the corruption of her religion, though it is clear the Saxons, Danes, and other Northern nations never lost their belief in a Supreme God. The Cymry of Wales, Mr. Galloway traces to Central Asia as the Gomerim, or Gimiri of the Assyrian monuments (page 263), and he connects the name (quoting Philo-Israel) with Hosea i. 4. The architecture of the Sacæ when settled down as Gothi-Saxons, strikes Mr. Galloway as singular, since it points—not to a Roman or Grecian, but to a Hebrew origin (page 266). Tracing the various bands of wandering Israelites, as Celts and Gothic Sacæ, to Great Britain, Mr. Galloway thrice fully and freely admits (pp. 269, 274, 275) that "here, converted to Christianity, they have largely experienced the fulfilment of the promises made to Israel." He finds the Saxons' time-reckonings were Israelitish, their constitution and judicial customs Hebrew; even their weights and measures those of the chosen people of God; and he observes that in numerous instances the modern race have fulfilled the promise of fruitfulness, as well as that unique blessing connected with "their possession of the Gate of their enemies" (page 275). We have in this hasty review merely touched upon a variety of points which Mr. Galloway has worked out with great research and much learning, and consummate critical ability. We have said enough to attract all our friends and readers of the BANNER to a work which must deeply interest them; and which plainly proves that if the Rev. W. B. Galloway is not an avowed Israelite, we have in him, at least, a divine of the Church of England who is in general sympathy with the BANNER, and cannot speak disrespectfully of views which surely he knows, as a learned and a pious man, well-read in the Holy Scriptures, will soon prevail, to God's glory and to this nation's good.

(To be continued.)

Correspondence.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

MY DEAR SIR,—In "Smiles' Account of the Huguenots in France," published 1873—which I have just been reading—at p. 100 is a foot-note containing a statement of so remarkable a character that I have thought it likely it would interest you, in the light of Our Identity. I applied to Mr. Smiles for some further particulars respecting the work in which the statement might be found, and the date of its publication; but he replies that he has quite forgotten the book from which the remarks were quoted, but tells me that he thinks there was a review of Heine's works in the Times about a year ago, which, if you care to inquire further, you may probably be able to refer to. The foot-note is as follows:—

"Whether it be that Calvinism is electic as regards races and individuals, or that it has (as is most probably the case) a powerful formative influence upon individual character, certain it is that the Calvinists of all countries have presented the strongest possible resemblance to each other—the Calvinists of Geneva and Holland, the Huguenots of France, the Covenanters of Scotland, and the Puritans of Old and New England, seeming, as it were, to be but members of the same family. It is curious to speculate on the influence the religion of Calvin (himself a Frenchman) might have exercised on the history of France, as well as on the individual character of Frenchmen, had the balance of forces carried the nation bodily over to Protestantism (as was very nearly the case) towards the end of the 16th century. Heinrich Heine has expressed the opinion that the Western races contain a large proportion of men for whom the moral principle of Judaism has a strong elective affinity; and in the 16th and 17th centuries the Old Testament certainly seems to have exercised a much more powerful influence on the minds of religious reformers than the New. The Jews, says Heine, were the Germans of the East; and, nowadays, the Protestants in German countries (England, Scotland, America, Germany, Holland,) are nothing more nor less than ancient Oriental Jews."

Heine, no doubt, characterised all of the Hebrew race under the name of Jews, as so many in the present day persist in doing.

Yours very truly,

SYDNEY HALL.

34, Lansdowne-road, Notting-hill, W., May 4, 1881.

SPIRITUAL BENEFIT TO MEN'S SOULS

IN CONNECTION WITH IDENTITY PROGRESS IN THE UNITED STATES.

WE have received, through a friend, the following testimony from Salem, Oregon, U.S.A., showing that in the United States not one but several souls have been saved by the instrumentality of Our Identity. The testimony in this case is not sought, and comes to us quite spontaneously. We know it is a genuine case, and are not surprised. The Identity is God's truth; and it leads straight to the Bible, where God's Spirit works, and the Son of God, Israel's Redeemer, is seen face to face with the poor, lost, sin-stricken Israelite, searching for rest, and finding none; inquiring for the facts of his alleged Identity with Israel, and discovering not only that that is truth, but that also Jesus is the sinner's Friend, therefore his; and able, as He is willing, to give repentance and remission of sins, redemption, sanctification, and eternal life to the saved. Our letter, giving proof such as we describe, is as follows:—

DEAR SIR,—You will remember I subscribed to the BANNER OF ISRAEL and Israel's Hope and Destiny through your sending sample copies; I intend to spend £10 a year in Identity literature. God has wonderfully blest the study of this subject to my soul; and I know of others connected with me who have been saved, I believe, by the same agency.

I am truly thankful to see an advance along the whole line at home and in the Colonies. Providence is raising up valiant witnesses in defence of His truth; we can afford to lose many such men as poor Mr. ———; the loss is his, not ours; therefore, I pity him; and, like Samson of old, he slew more enemies of Anglo-Israelism at his death than during all his life. You see I regard him as dead, for evil or good, as far as we are concerned. With best wishes,

I remain, yours very truly, T. C.

Salem, Oregon, U.S.A.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

MY DEAR SIR—Acting on Mr. Hill's suggestion at our Annual Meeting on the 20th inst., Miss Harris, of Upper Clapton, has sent me 4s. 4d., as her subscription of a penny per week for a year towards the erection and endowment of an Identity Church in the metropolis. Pending any other arrangements, such as the appointment of a Committee, or other steps which it may be considered advisable to take, I will be happy to receive contributions.

If kind friends will therefore send their subscriptions by letter to me at Woodstock, Camden-hill, Upper Norwood, London, S.E., I will acknowledge receipt and pay the money into the City Bank (Ludgate-hill Branch) to the credit of the Association, which would then, of course, be accountable for the same.

Yours sincerely,

JOHN S. ANDERSON,

Hon. Sec., Metropolitan Anglo-Israel Association.

Digitized by Google

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

DEAR SIR,—After hearing the remarks made by several of the speakers at the Annual Meeting as to the desirability of making known the Anglo-Israelite doctrines amongst the clergy of the Established Church in this land, it occurred to me that it might be a good plan to send a copy of some one pamphlet—say "Cardinal Proofs" (to my own mind a most convincing work), or any other you may consider better suited to the purpose—to every one whose name is found in the Clergy List, and to invite subscriptions to defray the expenses of postage, &c. Should this suggestion approve itself to you, I should be happy to send one guinea, and to endeavour to procure some from other friends for this purpose.

I remain, dear sir,
A CONSTANT READER OF THE BANNER.

30, The Common, Upper Clapton,
May 22, 1881.

THE GREAT PYRAMID.

To the Editor of the "Banner of Israel."

MY DEAR SIR,—"The Great Pyramid of Egypt: Is it a Revelation or Not?" The above was the title of a lecture delivered on Monday evening by the Rev. J. W. Ogden, of Tunstall. His worship the Mayor of Barnsley presided, and, in introducing the rev. lecturer, spoke of the pleasure it gave him to be present that evening, and expressed the belief that the lecture would prove an instructive one, as the subject was of a grand character, and noted for its ancient and sacred associations. Its architectural beauty could not be surpassed, and thousands of persons, as pilgrims, went thither yearly from all parts of the world.

Mr. Ogden, who was received with applause, which was frequently repeated throughout the lecture, opened by referring to the various opinions that had been given by travellers as to the number of monuments of colossal masonry to be found, shewing the apparent reason for the difference in the computation, and stated that his remarks only applied to the Great Pyramid, for the account of which he relied upon what was furnished by the Astronomer-Royal for Scotland, who, with his wife, in 1864 visited the country, and during a four months' residence there, employed himself in surveying, and had astronomical instruments for the purpose. Mr. Ogden went on fully to describe the situation, height, surroundings, peculiarities, etc., in which he was greatly assisted by diagrams, and which contributed to make the matter more discernible to the audience.

