QUOTE OF THE MONTH

Dragons in dark caves are far more fearsome than in daylight.
—Oliver Wendell Holmes

THERE'S AN old proverb stating that no matter how much things change they remain the same. A case in point is the purported "Pharaoh's Curse" that doomed members of the expedition that discovered King Tutankhamen's tomb in 1923.

This curse has been a matter of controversy among occultists, Egyptologists, scientists and just plain sensible people all these years. They point out that as time passes members of an expedition as large as Lord Carnarvon's are bound to die. One skeptic, with his tongue in his cheek, has pointed out the curse must be true because by the end of this century every single member of the expedition will be dead.

Nonetheless, the controversy continues as to whether some of the earlier deaths may have been due to the "curse." And now, more than 50 years after the event, Dr. George Dean, a Dublin medical specialist, proposes that at least three of the key deaths soon after the tomb's discovery could have been due to a fungus infection contracted from the dust of dried bat droppings which was stirred up after the tomb was opened.

Dr. Dean proposes in World Medicine Magazine that Egyptologist Lord Carnarvon, sponsor of the expedition, Arthur Mace, assistant director of the New York Department of Egyptian Antiquities, and George Benedite of the Louvre, Paris, may have died from this disease. The latter two died suddenly after visiting the tomb. Carnarvon contracted a fatal disease shortly after it was opened.

Dean says that the passage to the tomb was so heavily infested with bats that Howard Carter, in charge of the expedition, had to order them cleared out each

Some authorities question Dr. Dean's theory, claiming that most Egyptologists live to a ripe old age. But Dean insists that his symptoms, which are on record, seem to indicate Lord Carnarvon died of a disease caused by breathing the fungus histoplasma from the dried bat droppings.

There is no evidence, however, that the disease was related to the "Curse of the Pharaohs."

A NEW LOOK AT MARIJUANA

UNTIL RECENTLY scientific studies of marijuana smoking purported to show that it caused chromosome damage, loss of immunity to disease, brain damage and loss of motivation. As recently as last July, Dr. Gabriel Nahas and others at the Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons listed the following hazards in a letter to the New York Times:

"Hormonal imbalance, inhibition of spermatogenesis, lung damage, impairment of immunity, increased formation of chromosome deficient cells with possible damage to the offspring, interference with memory and speech and impairment of driving performance."

All this is seriously questioned by the publication of a federally-contracted study of marijuana smoking in Jamaica where there are more pot-smokers than non-smokers and they may use from 10 to 25 times as much cannabis as do American users. The only significant difference between smokers and nonsmokers appears to be a reduced ability of the smokers' bloodstreams to deliver oxygen to their tissues. However, it is thought this may be due to the fact that the pot-smokers also smoke tobacco.

Smoking marijuana in Jamaica is not frowned on; in fact, the nonsmoker is considered strange. Some of the specific findings are:

- Smoking does not cause lethargy. It does not diminish the work drive or the work ethic in Jamaica. In fact, it is used as an "energizer." Workers perform better when using it than when not using it.
- There is no evidence that the use of cannabis causes mental deterioration, insanity, violence or poverty.
- Under certain conditions the drug reduces the level of testosterone, the male sex hormone. The meaning of this is uncertain.
- Possible health hazards may be identified in the future. There is the possibility of genetic damage but not much is known about this. "Since marijuana easily crosses the placental barrier, the use of marijuana by pregnant women is especially unwise," according to the report.

- There is no natural transition from marijuana to hard drugs. In Jamaica the incidence of the use of hard drugs is low.
- There is positive evidence that using marijuana cuts down on alcoholism. Alcoholics make up less than one percent of all admissions to mental hospitals in Jamaica compared with admissions of over 50 percent in some Caribbean islands where marijuana use is low.
- A great deal of research remains to be done. Many of the reported effects of pot smoking on Americans may be due to their social expectations. Few Jamaicans reported such effects as a sharpening of taste or hearing or a loss of the sense of time passing.

A WORD OF CAUTION

THE JAMAICAN study "not only exposes but demolishes many emotional and fright-symbolic" dragons regarding the use of marijuana, says Raymond Philip Shafer, who headed President Nixon's National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse. In 1973, according to Walter Sullivan in the New York Times, Shafer's drug abuse commission recommended abolition

With Just One Phone Call From My Home

My name is Alan Feinstein. I write a syndicated newspaper column on ways to make money.

I'm forever examining all kinds of so-called money-making opportunities. Most of them turn out to be gimmicks. Or lots of hard work.

Then, out of the blue – a bombshell! Something so different, so outstanding I could hardly believe it was true.

I just had to put up $1,000 to try it for myself. The next morning my $1,000 was worth $1,500.* That's 50% gain on my money. Overnight!

"Damn it, you can't make money this easily," I told myself. "There has to be a catch." And I threw myself into a study to find it.

But the more I studied, the more excited I got. Why, this was just the beginning! Oh, what an opportunity I'd found . . . A fantastic easy way to make money . . . From just a few minutes a week, without even leaving your home . . .

But don't take my word for it. I want you to see this for yourself– without your risking a penny . . .

Here's what I've done:

- I've laid out exactly what this is and how to profit from it–right now!
- I've gotten coupons (worth $54.00) which will bring you everything you need to make this discovery work automatically for you.
- I've put this together into a simple 24 page Guide. So easy to read and understand . . . you can finish it in 20 minutes and put it right to use!

And I mean "right to use." If it's long learning or hard work you want, this isn't it. There's no study or sweat here–all you have to do is let This Work For You! And, remember, everything you need is right here in this Guide!

I know it's hard to believe. It was for me, too. And that's why I want you to see it and examine it, free, for yourself.

The cost of this amazing Guide, including all the coupons, is $12.95. But, as a special pre-publication offer it is now only $9.95. And, as I said, you don't risk a single penny to get this, to see its value for yourself! You have this iron-clad, money-back guarantee:

The Treasure Chest

of Outstanding Opportunities

by Alan Shawn Feinstein

If you don't find this to reveal the most unique and worthwhile opportunity you've ever seen, you may return it, at any time for an immediate full refund. That's right, at any time absolutely guaranteed.

That's how valuable I'm sure you'll find it.

I wish I could show you the letters people are already writing me about this . . . And I'm not asking you to buy this–just to see it, at my risk. If you don't find it totally different from anything you've ever seen . . . more valuable than anything you've ever read–simply return it and it hasn't cost you a penny . . .

Now, could I ever make such an offer unless I knew how valuable this was? . . . Unless I knew that most people, after seeing this, wouldn't part with it for anything . . .

Don't take my word for it. See for yourself!

But act now. I don't know how long this free examination offer can last. I've promised that if the number of readers of this Guide ever reach a point where they may start diluting its value, I'll immediately end these free examinations of it on the spot. Don't let this pass you by.

A wise man once said: "There is so little that's really new and worthwhile in the world that if you do find something, don't let it get away."

The opportunity is here. Now. To see and judge for yourself. Without your risking a penny.

Mail this coupon below today.

Sincerely yours,

Alan Shawn Feinstein

of penalties for private use and possession of marijuana. President Nixon rejected this conclusion. Shafer, incidentally, was a law school classmate of President Ford, a former governor of Pennsylvania and now is an aide to Vice-president Rockefeller.

This is another classic case of prejudice overruling facts. We are not promoting pot in FATE Magazine but we are promoting truth. We continually try to pinpoint bad thinking, bad research and bad attitude, all of which negate fresh ideas and new theories. The United States does not need another narcotic. But before we blow our stacks and our money fighting this particular bogey let us face up to these facts:

The biggest drug problem in the United States by far — with millions of Americans affected — is alcoholism. Would you rather be a pot-smoker or an alcoholic?

And another of the big health problems is tobacco smoking — each year it kills tens of thousands of Americans by its indirect effects. It ill becomes drinkers of alcohol or smokers of tobacco to be up-tight about pot!

HUMAN NARCOTIC

SURPRISING findings from several research projects are giving us new explanations for the effectiveness of acupuncture in anaesthesia and for the ability of severely injured persons to shut off pain. The research is detailed in the New York Times.

A report from the Addiction Research Foundation at Stanford University tells us the body itself spontaneously manufactures substances which seem to deaden pain and stress. In chemical form they are much like morphine. These substances are produced in the pituitary gland and Dr. Avram Goldstein, head of the Foundation, suggests they may be the mechanism that shuts off pain on the battlefield, for example, or controls the anaesthesia induced by acupuncture. The report further proposes that release of this substance into the body in times of crisis may produce a calming effect that has survival value.

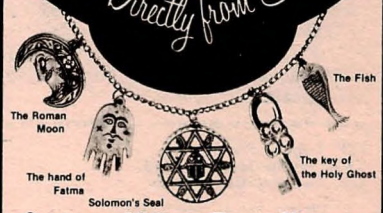

Similar although not identical substances have been discovered in the brain tissues and the spinal fluids of persons in great pain.

It is hoped that further investigation may make it possible to synthesize the material which then might be used to treat morphine addiction.

Scores of similar exciting studies underway all over the world dramatize our ignorance of how our bodies function.

AN ALTERNATIVE AGRICULTURE?

IN RECENT years there have been increasing criticisms of modern agricultural methods by ecologists and sociologists. They grant that modern farming seems enormously productive. There is no doubt that our yields per acre, aided by fertilizers, careful breeding of new crop strains, insecticides and power equipment, are far higher than ever before in history.

But the criticisms seem valid. First, this tremendous production is made possible largely by cheap fuel. In one sense, oil from Arabia is converted into low-cost American wheat because that oil drives the tractors, makes the fertilizers and generally powers technology that grows wheat.

What will happen when fuel is no longer cheap? In actual fact, it takes many more calories of energy to produce our crops than the crops themselves provide.

Critics of modern agriculture point out that our present farming methods are endangering soil fertility, water, wildlife, public health and a viable rural economy. There is no doubt that huge machines are destroying our traditional rural way of life. Nor is there doubt that by crowding former farmers into our cities we are creating problems for which at present we have no solution.

New 19th HEAL YOURSELF! Printing

Over 80,000 men and women have read this amazing book . . . it gave them priceless information on Spiritual-Mental Healing . . . helped many of them where their doctors failed.

The author, widely known in this country and in England, offers HEAL YOURSELF! to a "suffering humanity which knows not why it suffers." He demonstrates and proves there is a definite law of mental healing. He also shows how anyone, regardless of who or what he is, may heal himself and even be instrumental in healing someone else — in some instances of ailments which do not respond to medical treatment.

"MAN DOES NOT DIE," he warns, "HE KILLS HIMSELF!" Of all the dangerous habits that man is heir to, the worst is bad-will thinking. At death's door in his forties, the author discovered how sickness and health are controlled by the mind. But only because of his monumental suffering was he able to refine the technique which healed him of heart and lung trouble.

The author also had the great joy of seeing near-miraculous healings of stomach, liver and kidney ailments through good-will thinking. He demonstrates how he "doctored" his thinking to bring him back his health and happiness, and to release himself from fear, worry and hard luck. He tells you how you can do it also in exactly the same way he has shown to thousands of others.

His readers buy HEAL YOURSELF! in lots of 100 to give away to suffering friends. A New York MEDICAL doctor gave 100 copies to patients! A real estate man in Miami gave 100 copies. An advertising woman in Dallas gave 100 copies to employees and friends.

TYPICAL COMMENTS FROM READERS: "HEAL YOURSELF! has done me more good than all the doctors and hospitals I've been to." — C.G.G., N.Y., N.Y.

"Worth its weight in diamonds. HEAL YOURSELF! is an eye-opener." — Rev. H. Knott, Boston, Mass.

PARTIAL CONTENTS: The real causes of illnesses — How to stimulate the healing process in our bodies — Why angry irritation is one principal cause of sick spells and nervous breakdowns — The conquest of fear — Tested healing methods that have produced results: authentic case histories of healings — Dr. Alexis Carrel's witnessing the healing of a large cancerous sore on a workman's hand before his eyes.

Be sure to read HEAL YOURSELF! It will make you a new person. You will agree with the author that "THERE IS NO NEED TO BE SICK EVER AGAIN!"

THE HIDDEN BIBLE by William Leary

Secret Revelations Never Before Made in Biblical History

Now in its new 11th edition THE HIDDEN BIBLE is the most widely read of all books written on the secrets of the Bible. It will give you Jesus' simple, practical, scientifically exact formula, based on a principle never before explained, for completing your spiritual evolution. It will give you a commonsense explanation of WHY and HOW you enter into a higher life after death.

THE BIBLE CODE: The author's exhaustive research produced a remarkable discovery of a simple code embodied in the literal wording of the Bible that deciphers its hidden meanings. You now will know how the ancient prophets acquired the spiritual knowledge that brought them great wisdom and powers.

SPIRITUAL KNOWLEDGE ONCE WIDESPREAD and accessible to many, was withdrawn when it became abused.

JESUS IMPROVED ANCIENT METHODS of spiritual awakening making them simple enough to be understood by unlettered fishermen. You will read in THE HIDDEN BIBLE how Jesus instructed his disciples to awaken their dormant higher faculties. The formula for this lies hidden in the Gospels

NOW YOU WILL KNOW WHAT JESUS meant by saying we can be "born again of water and the spirit and inherit eternal life."

BIBLICAL SECRET OF REJUVENATION. Learn Abraham's real covenant with God and the secret of his rejuvenation, long life, youthful vigor and increased mental power.

Everything you read in THE HIDDEN BIBLE will daily help you to develop greater spiritual power and illumination. Large 7½ x 10¼ size. Gold stamped. Tinted edges. $6.95

It is with this background that we report the experiments under way at the New Alchemy Institute of Falmouth, Mass., which aim to restore a sane balance to what they believe to be our present insanities. In fact, the new alchemists expect American agriculture as it now exists to collapse, possibly within the next 10 to 20 years, because of the increasing costs of fuel and fertilizer and because of accumulating biological damage caused by agricultural chemicals.

THE NEW ALCHEMY INSTITUTE

THE INSTITUTE is not run by crackpots or ignoramuses. It was founded in 1969 by two marine biologists, John H. Todd and William O. McLarney, who seek to develop a radically different method of food production. They want to use renewable sources of power such as the sun and wind, instead of depending on fossil fuels. They aim at natural biological cycles instead of biocides and chemical fertilizers.

In the words of Nicholas Wade, reporting on the Institute in Science Magazine, they want agriculture "to be based on a diversity of crops and varieties, not on genetically vulnerable monocultures; to select plants for their taste and nutrition, not on trucking and packaging qualities; to require little capital investment and encourage people to come back to the land instead of driving them off it."

The Institute has a 12-acre farm near Falmouth on Cape Cod with greenhouse complexes, solar heating devices and brightly painted windmills. It has more than 1,000 supporting members and has received grants from the Rockefeller Brothers Fund and other foundations.

Many allied activities are under way at the Institute. One experiment is called an "ark" because it might serve as a lifeboat if conventional agriculture collapses. The ark consists of three greenhouse-covered ponds built one below the other on a slight incline. Water is pumped by a windmill from the lower pond to the top pond, passing through a solar heater en route. In the top pond the water passes through a bed of crushed shells where bacteria detoxify wastes and convert them to nitrites and nitrates, to be used as nutrients by the algae in an adjacent compartment of the pond. The algae-laden water from this top pond flows to the middle pond which contains small algae-eating crustaceans such as water fleas. Then this same water arrives back in the bottom pool purified and laden with algae and daphnia which provide a complete diet for the food fish growing there. The water cycles continuously through the system. At present yields of fish from this system exceed those obtained in the most intense forms of Chinese aquaculture.

Science points out that the new alchemists have a long way to go before they match their record to their rhetoric but credits them with fresh ideas and seriousness of purpose.

THE OZONE PROBLEM

THE OXYGEN we breathe to sustain life consists for the most part of molecules containing two atoms. But there is another kind of oxygen molecule that contains three atoms. This is ozone. Ozone is concentrated in the stratosphere between eight and 30 miles above the earth's surface. Scientists believe that life became possible on earth only after the atmosphere developed this layer of ozone that cuts off the ultraviolet radiation from the sun. Without the ozone layer present life would be endangered.

Therefore, dear readers, you should all be warned that man is tinkering with our ozone layer and if his infernal meddling continues all the other familiar problems we bother about will be taken care of. Because most life on earth will be very, very dead.

Scientists are concerned. They don't believe all the numbers are in but they fear our life-protecting ozone layer is threatened by three different technological developments:

(1) High altitude atomic bomb explosions, many of them conducted for research purposes in the past, generate large amounts of nitric oxide. Tests between 1952 and 1962 caused a marked depletion of stratospheric ozone. The various oxides of nitrogen act as a catalyst to break down the ozone. They continue to work, destroying it "indefinitely."

(2) High flying supersonic transport planes — the SSTs — work in the same way. Get enough of them and they cause the same problem.

(3) Most important are the aerosols used in refrigeration and air-conditioning systems — and to activate aerosol cans. The particular aerosols that create the threat are the fluorocarbons, principally manufactured by DuPont under the trade name Freons. They are used as spray propellants and although stable at sea level, are constantly rising into the stratosphere. When exposed to ultraviolet light there they break down, releasing chlorine that then acts as a catalyst to break down the ozone.

Money is hard to get

Everybody is dishonest
I'm too old to start new
Everybody is trying to "do" me
Why can't I get ahead like other people?

The reaction of the Freons on the ozone is six times as fast as that of the oxides of nitrogen. World production of Freon gases in 1972 was about 500,000 tons and is increasing 8.7 percent annually, according to Walter Sullivan in the New York Times.

Dr. Ralph J. Cicerone of the University of Michigan states that even if Freon production were halted at once the serious depletion of the protective layer of ozone would continue, reaching a maximum in 1990. A Harvard group estimates that if Freon consumption continues to grow at 10 percent annually the world's ozone could be depleted by 16 percent by the year 2,000.

Studies are now under way. Manufacturers such as DuPont and Boeing, and other people involved in the space shuttle, point out how large their industries are, how many people would be thrown out of work, and claim not enough is known about the damage they supposedly cause.

Concerned scientists respond that by the time sufficient evidence has been gathered to satisfy the manufacturers, it well may be too late to do anything to avert the coming catastrophe.

insect repellent produced by a milliped, Polyzonium rosalbum. Perhaps some day this repellent will be commercially synthesized and will replace other insect repellents in the human armory. But for the present the Polyzonium rosalbum has a monopoly and produces within its body a highly volatile substance that repels ants and other insects.

The substance has been isolated, identified and synthesized by teams from Cornell and Duke Universities. It is exuded by the millipeds from glands which exist in pairs in each body segment. When seized or pinched the millipeds discharge a sticky whitish secretion which seems to act as a serious irritant.

Ants disperse within a few seconds after attacking the millipeds and even the presence of the repellent drives them away. How it works is not known except that it seems to act as an irritant. Exposed to the fluid, an ant usually tries to clean it off, wiping antenna and body for long periods of time. Cockroaches start to scratch themselves almost immediately, even when in the proximity of the fluid, without being touched by it.

For Adepts Only

Franz Bardon's unique second and third books on magic are now available in accurate English translations for the first time! They make up a progress course for adepts only. Beginners should start with Bardon's earlier book:

Initiation into Hermetics

. . . a course of instruction of magic in 10 stages, its theory and practice plus the mystery of the first Tarot card.

The Practice of Magical Evocation

. . . describes the little known subject of conjuratory magic — one of magic's darkest corners. It demonstrates that wonders and supernatural things exist only for humans deprived of the basic laws of nature — and thus incapable of penetrating into its supreme laws. The book includes the mystery of the second Tarot card.

The Key to the True Quabbalah

. . . is the cosmic language in theory and practice. To speak in the quabbalistic way means to create things out of nothing. Through the ages the one who was called the "master of the word" was always the highest initiate, the highest priest and the true representative of God. The secret of the third Tarot card is always included.

been studied in detail and about which comparatively little is known although it first was introduced to Westerners in 1928. Its Latin name is Pan paniscus, which means pygmy chimpanzee.

Besides being smaller than other chimpanzees, it has a higher and more domed forehead; its face is flatter with less of a snout and its ears are smaller. Its teeth are less apelike and more human. It walks on its hind legs more than do ordinary chimps. Added to all this is the fact that it is friendlier to humans, less nervous, apparently more intelligent, vocalizes much more and seems remarkably alert and quick to learn.

Five of these three-foot-tall animals were captured in nets in Zaire in April 1975 and flown to the Yerkes Regional Primate Research Center in Atlanta, Ga. Two of the five, both babies, died of parasitic infections contracted before they left Africa. The other three, two females and a male, are doing well. They are on lend-lease only, by the way, and must someday be returned to their homeland.

Pygmy chimps already reside in two United States zoos, in Fort Wayne, Ind., and in San Diego, Calif., which has six. But they never have been studied scientifically although it now is thought

"Let me show you the secrets of WHITE WITCHCRAFT"

—secrets that have helped others:

- Bring money and prosperity!
- Gain power and control !
- Attract and hold a lover! • Win at gambling!
- Ward off the hex and stop the "evil eye"!
- Get rid of demons!

My Name Is Al G. Manning. I Run The E.S.P. Laboratory In California, And Whether Or Not You Believe In Witchcraft, I've Seen Things Like This:

• A Chef in a big restaurant, who sprinkles a salt and herb mixture around the building whenever business slows down. In minutes, the place is full of people! It always works . . .

• A girl whose boyfriend has been avoiding marriage, who feeds him a Witch's formula, and he suddenly proposes!

• A married woman, who burned some Love Attracting incense in the presence of her very old stud cat. She was amazed at the effect it had on him—and later on her husband, as well!

• Another woman, who, planning a trip to the races, used bread crumbs, prosperity oil, incense and a special money chant—and won $150 at the track!

All Of This Is Witchcraft . . . Real Witchcraft. And It Works! Don't Let Anyone Tell You It Doesn't.

I use Witchcraft myself, and I can tell you it works. But I'm not here to convince you of anything. I simply must tell you the facts of my six years of research at the E.S.P. Laboratory.

And the plain fact is: Witchcraft is here. . . . Witchcraft is real . . . and the powerful spells of Witchcraft really work . . . bringing love, prosperity, personal power, security, protection, and more for all who use them!

Believe me, it's a sobering experience to discover how many ordinary people, from all walks of life, are using Witchcraft—spells, chants, incantations, potions—real Witchcraft, to get what they want. And they swear it works!

HOW TO USE RITUALS AND SPELLS TO ATTRACT MONEY & PROSPERITY!

There are many better ways to make money than an 8 to 5 o'clock job—in fact, you never heard of a millionaire who got there by saving it all out of his wages. In my book, you'll discover. . . . . how Cynthia S., a young housewife, used two candles, incense, some salt, water, and earth, and a special incantation to receive money and new prosperity. She reports:

"I waited a full month to see if it was all just a lovely dream, but it is reality indeed! During the first week . . . my husband got an unexpected promotion with a $100 a month raise, the kids suddenly became 'dolls' and have stayed healthy, and both of my neighbors who had seemed so hostile have been most friendly . . ."

• OFFICE WORKER GETS RAISE!—You'll see how Sam O., who seemed constantly "on the carpet" at work for making too many mistakes, used this ritual and spell . . . Within a month the criticism from his boss had turned to praise and a $25 a month raise. Three more months brought Sam a promotion!

• RECEIVES $950 INSURANCE WINDFALL!—W. G. reports: "I used the Prosperity Chant at the end of my Nature Spirit Friendship ritual for three straight evenings. The morning of the 4th day I received a call from my insurance broker telling me that he had a check for $950 for me. I don't really understand it yet, but . . . yesterday it was worth nothing, and today . . . $950. That chant is great!"

• ELDERLY MAN NOW RICH!—You'll see how an elderly gentleman, barely able to make ends meet, selling office supplies, used the Prosperity Chant and ritual. Now, he says: "I have all I want in a wardrobe, beautiful home and a new car, but best of all a richer, happier life. I don't tell many people about this . . . But it works! Every night now, I have an extra ritual just to say thank you to the wonderful forces that are obviously helping me."

• WINS THREE $50 BETS!—Still another user, R. S., reports, in just two weeks, "I won three different $50 football pools . . . got an unexpected raise . . . and an annoying wart dropped off the back of my hand."

The powerful Spells of Witchcraft can, indeed, produce wonders for you and your loved ones. Your neighbor may already be using Witchcraft in secret . . . if he seems to be leading a charmed life . . . if everything seems to be going his way . . . while others no better, no smarter . . . are still having an uphill struggle.

HOW TO USE RITUALS TO GAIN POWER OVER OTHER PEOPLE!

Had a run of bad luck lately? Are you having trouble with your marriage, your love life, your job? Are other people forcing you to knuckle under to them, agree with them, do things for them against your will? Any psychic attacker who wishes you evil can use Witchcraft to make you suffer. Your neighbor may already be using Witchcraft on you in secret.

If a cloud of "bad luck" seems to follow you, it's time to learn to protect yourself with the secrets of White Witchcraft. The "evil eye" and psychic attack may seem ridiculous in the 20th Century, but they are real. It is altogether possible for a person to sit quietly at home and make your life miserable.

Why let these people push you around? If you can follow a few simple instructions, in plain English, I'm going to show you how to use ordinary, everyday items like salt, candles, water, incense, dirt, and stones set yourself free from the "evil eye"—and from the people who have been bothering you, once and for all.

RITUAL TO DESTROY YOUR ENEMY'S POWER TO HARM YOU

When Mrs. Sharon D. tried to talk her son out of dating a certain girl—she didn't realize that the girl knew Witchcraft. And when her son innocently told the girl—that's when trouble really started!

All manner of ridiculous things seemed to happen to Mrs. D.—dishes would break in her hands, she had five flat tires in two weeks (the tires were almost new!) and the people on her job became hostile. Her son moved in with the girl and refused to come back.

That's when Sharon D. realized it was not coincidence. It was Witchcraft. Fighting fire with fire, she began using the Ritual to Destroy Your Enemy's Power to Hurt You. Little by little, the girl's hold on her son began to slip—and after a week, the manifestations of psychic attack slowly subsided. A week later, her son broke up with the girl and apologized to his mother.

SPELL TO BIND A LOVED ONE TO YOU!

Do you feel lonely and unwanted? Is the romance slipping out of your life? Are you worried that your mate doesn't love you anymore? In my book I give A Complete Love Attracting Ritual that has worked for scores of people.

Here's a typical comment: "I have lived alone for ten years now. It has been a dull, lonely life from my empty apartment to my dull job and back. Nobody ever even called me on the phone. I decided to use your love ritual. By the third day, people at the office who had never noticed me were coming up to chat and invite me to lunch. I have made ten wonderful new friends in just one week, and one of them looks like a real love interest!"

But don't take my word for it! It works for anybody! I have prescribed it for many people who have come to me with similar problems. All are now happily married!

that a pet chimp owned 50 years ago by Dr. Robert Yerkes, for whom the research center is named, may have been a pygmy. Known as Prince Chim, the ape always was regarded as exceptionally intelligent, quick to learn and having a "cheerful and happy disposition."

Dr. Elwyn Simons and Dr. David Pilbeam of Yale University have suggested that the pygmy chimp may be the closest living analogue to the extinct ancestors and relatives of early man known as Ramapithecus, according to the New York Times. Already the personnel at the Center is commenting on how much more human the newcomers seem than do ordinary chimps.

The whole study is quite surprising because pygmy chimps have been known for nearly 50 years but no one ever took an interest in them.

If confusion about man's nearest living relatives seems prevalent, consider the chaos paleontologists face in evaluating the conflicting evidence about man's ancestors that is surfacing these days. Evidence for the existence of intelligent human beings has now been extended backward to at least three million years — more than twice as old as any previously identified remains. If man used stone tools and lived in complex societies that long ago, it must be inferred that human origins began at least four to six million years ago.

Recent findings are so numerous and contradictory that Dr. F. Clark Howell of the University of California at Berkeley told Boyce Rensberger of the New York Times that "we ought to throw away a lot of ideas and try to start anew. . . . In due course we might get a very very shadowy picture about human emergence and what evolution was all about."

No Room for ATLANTIS

Wegener's theory of continental drift, now almost universally accepted, clarifies puzzling features of the development of our world — and explodes a legend.

By David Henry

MOST READERS of FATE need no detailed review of the origin of the Atlantis legend. Undoubtedly they have at least heard of Plato's dialogues Critias and Timaeus in which Atlantis is named and described and its ultimate fate recounted. Plato makes clear that his information was handed down by word of mouth after the destruction of Atlantis in 10,000 B.C. Many critics therefore argue that the story has a basis in fact but has been garbled over the centuries. Some writers conclude that Atlantis was in fact the ancient Minoan civilization in the Mediterranean Sea. But Plato described its location as "beyond the Pillars of Hercules," the ancient Greek name for the Strait of Gibraltar. Consequently the traditional story places Atlantis in the Atlantic Ocean and the commentaries by Donnelly, Cayce, Berlitz and others have accepted this location as have the majority of believers in Atlantis.

In his classic volume Atlantis: The Antediluvian World, Ignatius Donnelly collected similarities of languages, legends and histories on both sides of the Atlantic in an attempt to show that Atlantis was a necessary connecting link. Alas for Donnelly's method, these same mysteries and legends and similarities have since been used to prove the existence of Lemuria, Inner-Earth dwellers, extraterrestrials and colliding worlds, all reconstructed atop the very same "evidence."

Edgar Cayce gave Atlantis further credibility. In his past-life readings Cayce often spoke of prior incarnations on Atlantis.

Before the Atlantic Ocean was formed the Americas fit into Europe and Africa like pieces of a gigantic jigsaw puzzle.

Greenland
North America
Europe
Mediterranean Sea
South America
Africa

Cayce fans defend his theories of reincarnation and Atlantis on the basis of the efficacy of his medical prescriptions, a blatant non sequitur. Reincarnation and Atlantis ought to be subject to independent verification. Atlantis especially should be amenable to proof or disproof.

For purposes of this article I will bypass hoary legends, trance statements, philologies based on five pairs of words or less, and other evidence subject to different interpretations. Let us concentrate instead on concrete evidence.

The ultimate palpable evidence is not mysterious relics of Sumer or spherical stones in Central America. Look at this logically: If there once was a continent in the Atlantic Ocean that sank overnight as the result of a violent catastrophe, as Plato said, or even after thousands of years, as Cayce claimed, ample geological evidence ought to exist on the Atlantic sea floor. We need not seek submerged artifacts of the Atlantean civilization. The basic question becomes: What have modern earth sciences discovered about the history of the Atlantic Ocean?

In 1915 the German meteorologist Alfred Wegener published a book in which he pointed out a curious fact: If you took a map of the world and cut out the Atlantic Ocean you could fit the Americas into Europe and Africa as if they were a jigsaw puzzle. To explain this Wegener proposed that at one time there was a single continent that later split into present-day landmasses. This primeval continent he named Pangaea (from the Greek pan, all; and gaia, earth). Scientists of that time could not bring themselves to believe that continents could plow their way through the solid rock of ocean bottoms and Wegener himself could not explain the mechanism of the hypothesized continental movements. So the theory gained little favor among geologists and the neat-fitting outlines of the continents remained an interesting curiosity. The theory was not forgotten but simply shelved as having little proof. Even my third-grade teacher mentioned Wegener's theory in 1962.

The relationship between certain plant and animal species on North America and Europe long had been known and was not discovered by Donnelly. Other scientists, leery of the wholesale sinking of continents, hypothesized "land bridges" to explain such similarities. Such a land bridge actually is covered by the water of the Bering Straits. Only a small lowering of the sea level, such as occurred during the Ice Age, could have exposed it, permitting the passage of Pleistocene animals and of the men who hunted them. However, no such land bridge, submerged or otherwise, exists between Canada and the British Isles via Greenland and Iceland, the likeliest location. Only sheer ocean bottom lies there.

Within this century geologists discovered their own analogue of the biologists' findings. They discovered similar rock formations of equivalent age on the Atlantic shores of South America and Africa. Some geologists noted that if you fitted the two continents together jigsaw fashion (as Wegener proposed) then these rock formations of known similarity were adjacent. The same similarity was noted between rocks found on the southeastern coast of Africa and on the Indian coast of Gondwana. Wegener's theory of drifting continents began to look more plausible.

Next the discovery of the Mid-Atlantic Ridge caught the attention of geologists. What was the origin of this great submerged mountain system stretching from the far north Atlantic southward almost to Antarctica? Why did it lie equidistant from the continents on either side?

At about this time the results of paleomagnetic studies were coming to a head. The molecules of iron and iron compounds align themselves with the magnetic poles, so that on solidification a permanent record of the direction, strength and polarity of the magnetic field is "frozen" into the rocks. Such records indicate that the magnetic poles have wandered throughout the ages. But records of the same age from different continents give different positions for the magnetic poles! Clearly it is absurd to argue that each continent had a different magnetic pole. And if there were only a single pair of magnetic poles at a given time in the past, then the continents must have moved in relation to one another since the magnetism was "frozen" into the rocks. When scientists shifted the positions of the continents to make the magnetism line up with a single pair of poles, they found that the continents must have been a single landmass about 180 to 200 million years ago.

Thus by 1969 the theory of continental drift loomed large in the minds of scientists researching the earth's geological past. In that year a team of paleontologists in Antarctica discovered the fossil remains of Lystrosaurus, an aquatic reptile that lived about 200 million years ago. The startling thing was that skeletons of this same creature had been found in freshwater beds in Africa and in India. Only two theories could explain this scattered distribution. Either the freshwater aquatic reptile had been able to swim the hundreds of miles of ocean separating the three locations, or at the time Lystrosaurus flourished there was only a single landmass which since has divided and its parts drifted apart.

As a result of these and other findings, geologists now almost universally accept the theory of continental drift. In our present state of knowledge this picture emerges: About 250 million years ago at the beginning of the age of dinosaurs, only a single continent existed, called Pangaea (in deference to Wegener). Pangaea then split in two, creating a northern continent, Laurasia, from which North America, Europe and Asia developed, and a southern continent, Gondwanaland, consisting of present-day South America, Africa, India, Australia and Antarctica.

Then North America split off from Laurasia and South America from Gondwanaland. Both drifted westward causing their western coasts to buckle and form the Rockies and the Andes. Gondwanaland split further, Antarctica drifting slightly southward before stabilizing. Africa shifted northward to form the Mediterranean Sea with the coast of Europe. Australia moved eastward to its present isolated position. India, in a spectacular journey, moved rapidly northward and rammed the southern coast of Asia — forming the Himalayas.

This new explanation for mountain building is only one of the results of the acceptance of the theory of continental drift. (The formation of the Urals and the Appalachians must have resulted from earlier continental shifts which led to the formation of Pangaea.) The theory also explains past climatic changes, clarifies many puzzling features of evolution and zoological distribution, explains many known mineral deposits and predicts where undiscovered ones might be located, and provides a triggering mechanism for many earthquakes. Continental drift is to geology what relativity and quantum theory are to physics and the DNA helix is to biology.

What about the original objections to the theory? What causes the drifting? Our new knowledge of the earth's interior provides most of the answer. Billions of years ago as the molten earth cooled the heavier elements settled down into an iron-nickel core while the lighter elements floated upward to form a thin scum that solidified into the earth's crust. Between the crust and the core lies the mantle, a layer of rock that is plastic, a solid with properties that allow it to flow. The mantle is heated by the hotter layers beneath it so that it rises against the bottom of the earth's crust. This basically causes the drift, although scientists still are uncertain of the exact dynamics involved. Possibly the new material welling up at the ridges (the previous splits in the earth's plates) pushes the continents farther apart. After rising the material in the mantle flows underneath the crust until it cools and sinks again; perhaps the flow drags on the crust and moves it. Either way, the continents drift, moved by currents in the mantle below. They do not plow through solid ocean bottom because continents and ocean bottom alike float on the earth's mantle.

In this manner the earth's crust has been split into many sections called "plates," each following its own path. Plates may split apart as did Pangaea and as the Arabian Peninsula now is splitting from Africa. They may fuse as did India and Asia. Plates may collide, one of them being bent down into the mantle as in the Marianas Trench off Japan, or plates may slide past each other in opposite directions as is happening in California's San Andreas Fault.

In scientific jargon the large-scale earth movements are known as "tectonics." Thus continental drift is known as plate tectonics. This scientific phrase is more accurate as the plates and the seven continents do not exactly coincide. For instance, the Pacific Ocean bottom consists of several plates, all of them in motion.

What is the Atlantic Ridge? It is a line of undersea volcanic mountains where the Americas split off from Europe and Africa. As the continents drift farther apart, new volcanic material arises from the interior of the earth at approximately the original line of separation. This ridge lies almost exactly in the middle of the Atlantic because the continents are moving apart at the same speed. Indeed, this very splitting and drifting caused the formation of the present Atlantic Ocean.

And where does this history of the Atlantic Ocean, now known through scientific research, leave the Atlantis legend? Plato gave the size of Atlantis as the same as Asia Minor. Cayce described it as being the size of "Europe and Europe in Asia," which I suppose refers to the area west of the Ural Mountains. We now know such a continental landmass cannot have existed in the Atlantic because of the close fit of the continental plates. There simply is no room for Atlantis.

When the volcanic nature of the Mid-Atlantic Ridge first was publicized, believers in Atlantis hoped this might be evidence of the fiery volcanic disaster that destroyed the lost continent. But aside from the fact that the volcanic rocks are not confined simply to the north Atlantic, examination of the physical and chemical nature of the volcanics proves they erupted underwater and stayed there. Further research refutes the supposition that Atlantean remains lie buried under mud and sediment. Sedimentation is universally least at the middle of the ridge and greatest near the coastal areas farthest from it, exactly what we would expect if new material is appearing at the Ridge and the opposite of what we would expect if the Atlantic Ocean were the site of a sunken continent.

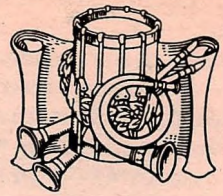

Cayce claimed that Bimini is a standing remnant of Atlantis. In support of this his followers cite the continental granite that underlies the Caribbean Sea. But this presents no mystery. Bimini, as part of the North America plate, drifted westward with the rest of the plate. But between Bimini and the Azores there is no continental bedrock, which there ought to be if Atlantis had its greatest mass there.

The geological facts are plain and implacable. No large continental mass could have existed between the Caribbean and the Strait of Gibraltar. The evidence cited by Donnelly must find another explanation. Plate tectonics can explain some of it but much of his "evidence" is speculative and pseudoscientific. Even more untrustworthy are Churchward's arguments for the existence of Mu or Lemuria in the Pacific. Geological evidence indicates that the Pacific Ocean basin has lain underwater through most of geological history.

The science of plate tectonics also brings a bit of good news: California will not sink despite the doom predicted by the majority of psychics. Major earthquakes will continue, to be sure, brought on solely because the area west of the San Andreas Fault is part of a plate rotating counterclockwise, unaffected by materialism or spirituality.

I realize I am attacking cherished beliefs; I too once believed in Atlantis and Edgar Cayce. But I reached the point where I had to choose between the hard facts of geology or continue to believe in the rambling statements of a trance sensitive and believers who wrote without benefit of the knowledge available today. In the end legend must give way to facts.

The Tragic Story of a

BRITISH SPY

The Anglican curate paled as he recognized his young visitor — the very man he had seen hanged in his dream.

By Patricia Beatty

JOHN ANDRE, British spy! For nearly 200 years his role in our history has been taught to American schoolchildren and related over and over in books written by distinguished scholars. No history of the American Revolution ignores John André — but in the United States, as an enemy spy, his memory is without honor.

The British people, however, greatly revere André. When he was executed in 1780 the entire British army went into mourning for him. A monument in his honor stands in Westminster Abbey where many English kings and queens lie entombed. In 1821 his remains were transferred from his grave in America to London to be interred in the Abbey among England's greatest heroes.

Any student of 18th-Century American history knows Major André's tragic story. Sir Henry Clinton, the British commander in America, employed the 29-year-old André as a contact with Benedict Arnold, the American commander who was holding West Point for the Continental forces. Clinton was aware that Arnold (whose name in America has become a byword for treachery) was plotting to betray his strategic command to the British, a deed that would strike a cruel blow to the hopes of Gen. George Washington.

On the night of September 21, 1780, Major André, wearing his scarlet coat as an officer of King George, was taken up the Hudson River by a British naval vessel and set ashore. Here he met Arnold at a secret rendezvous. At this meeting Arnold gave André papers containing the details of the defenses of West Point.

Leaving the rendezvous with the American traitor Major André found that the ship that had brought him up the Hudson had retreated downriver. The boatmen who had rowed André from the ship refused to take him back to it. Stranded, André made his way to the house of a Tory, an American who sympathized with the British. Here André discarded his uniform and put on civilian clothing. He had to pass through American-held lines to get back to the British. As a "civilian" he intended to trust to a "pass" Arnold had written for him permitting him to go through the American lines. Arnold was not as yet suspected by the Americans.

While attempting to make it through to the British, André was accosted by three Continental Army militiamen. They were suspicious of him and their search turned up Arnold's damning papers relating to West Point which were concealed in André's boots. André tried to bribe the trio to set him free but instead they took him to their commanding officer. Andre was held prisoner while the Arnold papers were sent on to George Washington.

While André, the little fish, was held fast in the net, Benedict Arnold, the big one, got wind of the capture, made good his escape and later served in the British army fighting against the Americans.

General Washington convened a military court of high-ranking American officers (among them Lafayette) on September 29. The court found John André to be a spy and sentenced him to death. On the second of October 1780 he was hanged. And thereby a dream an English clergyman had had some 10 years previously was fulfilled.

THE CLERGYMAN was Peter Cunningham, curate of St. Lawrence's Church in the village of Eyam in Derbyshire. Eyam was known throughout England — in a horrible sense — as the community that had conducted itself with enormous courage during an outbreak of the Bubonic plague in 1665-1666. Little else had happened since that time to distinguish it from any other Derbyshire village.

Certainly the Reverend Cunningham had no great distinction in 18th-Century England. He was a minor poet with the usual literary tastes and pretensions of his day. Naturally, he was a member of a little clique of literary figures in his county in the 1760's and 1770's.

One of the most important of the county's literary luminaries was Ann Seward, a poetess known as the "Swan of Lichfield." A member of a prominent Lichfield family, she was a forceful woman who made protegés of talented young men with poetical leanings.

One of the young men she took an interest in was John André, the son of a merchant from Geneva, Switzerland, who maintained his trade in London. André, who had been educated in Switzerland, returned to England when he was 19 or 20 and about 1770 met Miss Seward. Through the poetess André met the girl who historians believe was the one love of his life — Honora Sneyd, the daughter of another prominent Lichfield family.

While John André was staying in Lichfield near Honora and Miss Seward, a strange event concerning him took place in Eyam — although André himself would never know of it.

One day Miss Seward took young André on a visit to Eyam to meet the Reverend Cunningham. Miss Seward had lived in Eyam as a child and Cunningham was a friend of long standing. They found the curate in the company of another guest, William Newton, a would-be poet and a protegé of Cunningham.

The story involving the Reverend Cunningham and André does not tell us what happened when the maidservant ushered André and Miss Seward into the sitting room of the old stone house next to St. Lawrence's Church. Did Cunningham's face show the shocked, horrified surprise he must surely have felt or did he greet his visitors with a mask of calmness put on the instant he saw the young stranger, André?

Minutes before Miss Seward and André were announced, the Reverend Cunningham had finished telling Newton his dream of the night before. It had been a nightmare and totally baffling to the clergyman.

In the dream he had found himself in a forest he did not recognize — although he was thoroughly familiar with heavily-wooded Derbyshire. While he stood bewildered in the strange forest he spied a horseman riding toward him at great speed. Then while he looked on, wondering at the breakneck pace of the rider, three other riders came darting from an ambush along the road. They galloped down on the lone horseman and took him prisoner.

All at once, as happens in dreams, the scene before Cunningham's eyes changed. The three riders had disappeared but the lone man was still present and much nearer the clergyman-dreamer. To Cunningham's horror, he was dangling from a gibbet, a hanged man. In this sequence Cunningham had taken an unwilling but very good look at the dead man's face. It was the face of John André, the youth Miss Seward now was introducing to him, a face Cunningham never had seen in his life before his previous night's terrible dream.

Certainly Cunningham didn't relate his nightmare to André. But after Miss Seward and the young man left, the shaken Cunningham must have told Newton that this young visitor was the hanged man of his dream. It was a tale Newton would repeat many times — particularly after André's spectacular death.

John André was rejected by Honora Sneyd and perhaps because of this disappointment in love, André quit the world of London business in 1771 and took a commission in the British army. In the American Colonies he served the British commander-in-chief, Sir Henry Clinton, as confidant and spy.

In 1780 John André's death by hanging fulfilled Cunningham's decade-old prophetic dream.

BLOCK OF TWINS

FIVE OUT of the six families living in the 8700 block of Arrowood Drive in Mentor, Ohio, boast a set of twins. Instructors at Lakeland Community College in nearby Kirtland calculate the probability of five out of six mothers having twins is about one in 550 million.

Latest parents on the block to have twins are Linda and Gary Fay, in their late 20's. The twinning was already well under way when the Fays moved into one of the six colonial-style houses in the suburban city east of Cleveland. "Don't move in here unless you are prepared to have two babies at the same time," joked the neighbors. But Mrs. Fay found it was no joke; her twins were born in May 1974.

The pattern was set by William and Dolores Phillips who were the first residents in the brand-new homes. They already had twins Loretta and Lynn, who are now 12, when they moved in. Elaine and Ed Spondike also had their twins — nine-year-old Darrin and Mike — when they moved onto the block. The Langes with brother-and-sister twins moved in next.

When Bob and Judy Calkins moved in, they joined in. One trip to the hospital produced twins Ted and Ahrea. Like the other parents they began to search their family tree to see if twins ran in their ancestry. "In the end," jokes Bob, "we decided to blame it on the neighborhood."

Conchyhenaudition: PLAY YOUR ESP BY EAR

For a new clairaudient experience, simply relax, settle into a quiet state and tune in the "teacup telephone."

By Ruth Knight

HAVE YOU ever used the "teacup telephone"? That's what our grandmothers called it. Its scientific name is conchyhenaudition — or shell hearing.

Conchyhenaudition is a kind of clairaudience, the reception of sounds beyond actual hearing range. Just as crystal-gazing, or scrying, uses an instrument to focus clairvoyance, a teacup or shell can be used to concentrate sound. If you are already gifted with clairaudience the "teacup telephone" will enhance and help control your experiences.

When you were a child, did anyone ever tell you a shell holds the memory of the sound of the sea and if you put it to your ear you could hear the waves? It was one of the wonders of my childhood although I learned later in school that the shell simply amplifies normal body noises.

When you first try conchyhenaudition you'll get the same pleasant rushing or roaring sound of the sea. Then you relax and wait. After a while comes the clairaudience.

Some persons practice conchyhenaudition sitting in a dark closet with their eyes closed and their hands cupped over their ears to screen out extraneous sounds. Others hold small boxes over their ears — but handiest to use are shells or teacups. I prefer to hold them over both ears but you may get results with just one.

It is best to experiment in 30-minute sessions. You may not get results in any less time but longer than 30 minutes is difficult unless you are used to long periods of meditation and concentration.

Persons who have tried conchyhenaudition report all sorts of results: music, faint conversation as on a long-distance telephone call when the connection is faulty, voices of both living and dead relatives, of friends and even of strangers. Others hear ringing bells, ticking clocks, singing birds and foghorns. One boy said he distinctly heard the howl of a coyote, although he was alone in an apartment in western Pennsylvania. A woman once told me, "I hear this wee childlike voice saying, 'Hello.' Sometimes he says other things like 'How are you?' and 'Can you hear me?' "

Conchyhenaudition does not involve long preparation. You simply relax, empty your mind of speculation and concentrate on something to keep your thoughts from wandering. Thus you settle into a quiet state something like presleep. Remember, the sense of hearing is the last to go to sleep and it is sound that wakes you first. Think about those fleeting pictures (called hypnagogic) that you get while you're partly awake before the real dreams come. Now you are going to try to achieve this state of reverie without the pictures; sound will take their place.

It is well to hold a mental picture of one simple beautiful object: a crystal goblet, perhaps, or a plain gold ring — any such uncomplicated familiar thing. An alternative is to concentrate on some part of the body that is duplicated bilaterally — the lobes of both ears, both elbows, the crests of your cheekbones. Or you might concentrate on two opposite walls or corners of the room, anything that is duplicated. The object is to avoid a succession of mentally created pictures that would interfere with the intensification of your sense of hearing.

You may consider that you are receiving only mental impressions; thus you may say, "It is as if I hear a voice saying . . ." Or, "I seem to hear someone playing a violin." This is the beginning of clairaudience.

Conchyhenaudition in no way resembles the auditory hallucinations psychiatrists mean when they say, "Do you hear voices?" The difference is that you are controlling the experiment. The sounds are not delusional and they stop when you remove the shells or teacups.

I have merely outlined the basic steps for experimenting to develop clairaudience. What variations you try are strictly up to you. I might say, however, that I don't try for a specific voice or sound; it is far more fun seeing — or hearing — what will come.

Maybe the conch shell your grandfather brought back from the Philippines has a story to tell. Why not listen in?

INESCAPABLE PREDICTION

By Charles Lloyd Tuckey

Adapted from OCCULT REVIEW, February 1905

AMBROISE AUGUSTE LIEBEAULT, the country physician who pioneered in the medical use of hypnotism in France, wrote that in 1886 he was consulted by Paul D., a young man seeking relief from great nervous agitation and despondency. In 1879 Paul had gone to a palmist in Paris who told him he would lose his father in exactly a year, that he would enter the army but would soon leave it, that he would marry young and have two children and that he would die when he was 26 years old.

Paul thought little of it at the time but when his father died in exactly one year to the day he remembered the prediction. When he had to leave the army after only seven months' service he was correspondingly impressed. He soon married and had two children, so that now only the last part of the prophecy remained to be fulfilled. Liebeault, knowing prophecies have a way of fulfilling themselves by acting on the subject's fears, endeavored to remove the obsessive idea of death by hypnotic suggestion but Paul proved quite insusceptible. Then the doctor called to his aid Jules, an old somnambule who was called "the prophet" because he had foretold the date of his own cure of rheumatism.

The old man was hypnotized and put in rapport with the patient, who eagerly demanded of him when he should die. Slowly and impressively Jules replied, "You will die in 41 years!" Immensely relieved, young Paul went away a different man and dismissed the foreboding from his mind. But the original prediction was fulfilled. Within a few months Dr. Liebeault had news that Paul had died from peritonitis at the age of 26.

The Merveilleux Veilleux
THEIR PSYCHIC PHOTOGRAPHY

"We point the camera at different objects and persons and we cannot predict what will come on the photo . . ."

By Jule Eisenbud

PART ONE

ON AUGUST 1, 1967, a strange thing happened in the town of Waterville, Me. Some members of a blue-collar family of French ancestry (both sides of the family had the name Veilleux, pronounced vay-yuh, a common one in this part of New England) got a picture on a Polaroid camera of a little neighborhood child who had been murdered several years before. This, as it turned out, was just the beginning. And there is probably no better word for what has been happening in the Veilleux family since then than merveilleux (pronounced mare-vay-yuh), the French word for marvelous.

I first became aware of the Veilleux almost a year later when, at the end of June 1968, I received a letter from Richard, then the 24-year-old spokesman for the three closely knit families that make up their remarkable clan. He had been given my name by the American Society for Psychical Research as someone who might be able to give them an opinion on some baffling and presumably psychic pictures that had been coming from their cameras for almost a year. They had about 60 in all. "We have gone for many months without taking a single one," he wrote, "then all of a sudden they start again. Whether it depends on certain conditions of the body or what, this is what we are not sure of. We would like your opinion. . . . I may sound like a nut, writing this letter . . . (but) I assure you I am not."

I reassured Richard in my reply and mentioned my work with Ted Serios.*

In his next letter about 10 days later Richard wrote that he had heard of Ted but did not have my book and had not connected my name with him. They did, however, have the book about the psychic photography of John Myers, He Walks in Two Worlds, and knew something about the subject. He enclosed pictures obtained several weeks earlier by him and his brother who is four years older (Figures 1 and 2) and introduced me to the Veilleux family "so you will not be confused as to who they are when they are mentioned" — Fred Veilleux, brother, Dorothy Veilleux, Fred's wife, Joseph and Violet, the mother and father, Richard and "my wife" Judy.

* Although I didn't fully realize it at the time, Ted's "thoughtography" had already passed the first year of what was to be an enduring blackout. The Veilleux pictures, as a matter of fact, had begun just a few weeks after Ted's eclipse had been foreshadowed in the last witnessed paranormal photograph he ever obtained, a picture, ominously enough in retrospect, of curtains.

I gathered the men are stonemasons and cement finishers and that Richard's and Fred's wives also work. "The people, the members of my family," Richard wrote, "are usually present when (the pictures) are taken . . . sometimes one, sometimes all. We do not all have to be present. The takers of the photographs are usually Fred and I." But others it turned out — father, mother and the two wives — had each on occasion been the "taker," meaning that each had held the camera, always I gathered in the presence of Fred or Richard. He then hinted at something he was reluctant to get into. "By reading this you will find still many questions not answered. . . . I do not wish to be mysterious but it is just that I have not had the permission to give all of the information out as yet."

In response to questions in my next letter Richard described the picture-taking procedure but no elucidation of the "mystery" was offered. "We point the camera at different objects and persons. . . . We focus on the wall, person, etc., (but) I would say that it makes no difference what object we point the camera at . . . . If anything comes out, it does, if not we wait for another time. . . . We do not control what we receive . . . (and) we cannot predict what will come on the photo before it does."

Not until his letter of August 10, following another interchange in which I had the impression I was being tested in a very studied way, did Richard reveal to me what was behind the dark hints in his earlier letters. "We felt it best to wait awhile before sending . . . the explanation of how (the pictures) were taken (as) we didn't want to sound foolish altogether." The mystery, it seems, lay in the fact that the strange Veilleux picture-taking activity had begun on "instructions" from a Ouija board which the Veilleux had begun to fool around with in 1966 during one of their all too frequent slack working periods.

During the year before the first paranormal picture was taken many messages had been obtained, purporting to come from a number of alleged communicators whom the Veilleux were far from accepting at face value. "We were directed to many locations in the cemeteries to locate tombstones. The messages would state where, the names on the stones, etc. The better part checked out but we still were not convinced seeing we had walked through the cemetery on many occasions (Fred and Joseph had held jobs there in the past) and it might be locked in our minds without us knowing about it." On August 1, 1967, "the board" instructed them on how to take their first picture. It turned out to be of the little girl in the neighborhood who had been strangled by her sitter.

In September 1968 I journeyed to Waterville to meet the Veilleux. They turned out to be, as I had begun to suspect, a warm intelligent (although not highly educated) close-knit group who seemed, now that the preliminaries were over, entirely undefensive and sincere. The sense of natural honesty they conveyed was overwhelmingly positive.

They gave me a broadened picture of activities in the Veilleux "circle." It seems the family had become the center of varied psychic occurrences in addition to the Ouija board communications and the pictures. From time to time they held seances in a bare garret room in the parents' house where Richard experimented with trance and "astral projection." There had been raps, at times associated with temperature drops and strange odors, and occasionally, on directions from "the board," things like the fizzing of stale water occurred. I didn't witness a seance but sat in on several Ouija board sessions. The darting bug-like movements of the planchette were marvels of speed and precision, even when the "players" were blindfolded.

Our attempts at picture-taking, with and without the go-ahead from one or another of the self-professing communicators, were disappointing. But I did not go away empty-handed. I was lucky enough to witness the shooting of at least one extraordinary picture under conditions I was unable to fault. This took place in the town cemetery to which I finally persuaded the Veilleux to move their operations, as many of their best results seemed to have been obtained there in the past. In the cemetery Richard and Fred got busy on the Ouija board on the rear seat of Richard's car while I took notes and Father Joseph acted as lookout — we must have been a suspicious-looking group of characters. Within a few minutes a "communicator" purporting to be a William D. Gittings came through. He claimed to have hung himself at the age of 13. "He" indicated that "something unusual" would happen if pictures were attempted at his gravesite, to which he duly directed us. The grave was marked by a simple one-by-two-foot stone embedded flat in the ground, bearing the chiseled legend: William D. Gittings, 1943-1956.

I loaded the model 100 Polaroid camera I had brought and handed it to Fred who volunteered for the first series of tries. Neither he nor the others used anything like the small cylindrical "gismo" that Ted Serios frequently placed in front of the lens and that became the object of such universal suspicion. Fred simply pointed the camera in the general direction of the Gittings marker and, without a trace of effort (again unlike Serios), pushed the small red shutter release button. Hand and fingers, so far as I could see, were nowhere near the lens; but I had to make certain there was no opportunity to change the setting (from the 3000 black and white speed to the much faster 75 used for color) or to put anything (like a finger) in front of the camera's electric eye, as each of these maneuvers could have produced a bleached-out "whitie" of sorts.* Fred understood he had to keep his hands in full view so long as he held the camera.

The first four shots of the little grave marker produced perfectly normal prints. On the fifth (Figure 3) Fred apparently had allowed the camera to drift upward so that only a small shrub at the upper edge of the Gittings marker was caught (lower border, right) but not the marker itself. The print, however, was certainly "something unusual." Not only was it inexplicably bleached out (I had watched Fred intently during the shooting and was certain nothing had come near the camera's electric eye) but it showed a peculiar bark-like mottling along its left border. There was no tree in immediate camera range in this location and to this day I have been unable to duplicate this effect under similar conditions. As far as I could judge, this picture was paranormal. Another shot taken by Fred immediately afterward, in an attempt to duplicate the view framed by the bleached shot, was once more normal (Figure 4). The small shrub at the upper edge of the Gitting's marker again can just be made out to the right on the lower border of the print. The grave marker seen in Fred's control shot is that of Gittings' maternal grandmother.

* The Veilleux had shown me examples of this type of result in their print collection. It had been one of Ted Serios' specialties.

Later inquiries revealed that the coroner's report of the cause of death of 13-year-old William D. Gittings was suicide by hanging.

That fall, November 1968, I received a phone call from William Cook, then with North American Rockwell in California and in charge of photogrammetry for the upcoming Apollo VIII moon shot, asking if I could induce Ted Serios to try for something on the moon before Apollo got there. Since Ted for all intents and purposes was on the dark side of the moon at the time I put the matter to the Veilleux. Richard, whom I phoned, was anything but hopeful as target shots were not in the family repertoire. A couple of days later, however, I received in the mail from him three prints which looked like different blowups of one scene although each was taken separately (Figure 5). As fast as I could I had these attested to, copied and shot out to Cook, to make sure they got to a review board before Apollo's pictures started coming in.

Whether they are anything like the photos beamed back by Apollo VIII or resemble any other moon shot apparently will remain one of NASA's most closely guarded secrets. But Cook, who says he got them shown around at NASA, assured me that at least they were not copied from some book or magazine, as they showed the stereoscopic effects to be expected from a "live" scene.

Fig. 5: "Target" shots are not family's forte but they tried for "moonscape" before Apollo VIII pictures were released.

The Veilleux claimed Fred simply went outside his house on an overcast night and pointed the camera at the sky. No terrain in Maine, even along the shoreline, could provide a picture of this sort.

Shortly thereafter, Richard, Fred and Father Joseph met me in New York City to try their luck with whomever among the working parapsychologists I could dig up during the flu epidemic raging at the time. The trip (the first time on a plane for the Veilleux) was totally unsuccessful. The one interesting paranormal-looking effect, obtained during a stroll through the American Museum of Natural History, unfortunately came through under conditions I was unable to certify as rigorously controlled. The Veilleux sadly agreed. The negligence, however, was mine, not theirs.

In the spring of 1969 Walter Uphoff, professor of economics at the University of Colorado at

Fig. 6: Clarity of detail on either side shows that semistructured cloud could not have resulted simply from interference with camera's electric eye.

Boulder, who has a long-standing interest in psychic photography, managed to work in a visit to the Veilleux in Waterville. The Veilleux obtained five interesting bleaching effects in his presence. One (Figure 6) was a semi-structured cloud that plainly could not have been the result simply of interference with the camera's "electric eye" light sensing system and another was a somewhat more sculptured "white cliff of Dover" effect that obscured Uphoff's head and part of his upper torso as he sat looking straight at the camera. In a third, Uphoff's head, neck, shoulders and part of his face were bleached out while the rest of him, the bench he sat on (again facing the camera) and furniture on either side of him were perfectly exposed. I have seen such results with Ted Serios and a couple of years earlier with a Californian who claimed paranormal photographic abilities.

In the following months the Veilleux kept sending me pictures accompanied by descriptions of the circumstances under which they were obtained.

Unfortunately, no witnesses outside the family ever were present to validate these efforts.* They also sent pages and pages of transcribed Ouija board dialogue with a host of communicators who sermonized, none too enlighteningly, about "astral planes" and "etheric vibrations" but who also came up with detailed and sometimes tragic accounts of how they had met their deaths (e.g., during the Salem witchcraft trials; starved or frozen to death with General Arnold's army in the wilds of Maine during the disastrous winter of 1775; while going for a doctor in a blinding snowstorm). Some of these checked out upon investigation (as had the Gittings story) but most, I suspect, could well have been manifestations of what the old French investigators of hypnosis and automatic writing used to call the "mythopoetic" aspect of the unconscious.

(This is Part I of a two-part article.)

* During my September 1968 visit with them I had made a plea for assistance to the head of a department at Waterville's Colby College but was rewarded only with an icy stare and no acknowledgement of my follow-up letters.

BURIAL DELAYED

LATE IN 1970 an elderly migrant farm worker named William Bryant died near Spartanburg, S.C. No one claimed the body at Spartanburg General Hospital, explains Associated Press, so it was transferred to the Woodward Funeral Home where it was embalmed. Officials from the funeral home tried through newspaper and radio announcements to get someone to claim the body but no one did.

When no relatives appeared the body of the 80-year-old man — dressed in a black suit, white shirt, black tie and hat — was moved to a second-floor storeroom. For three and a half years the embalmed body stood upright under a sheet in the corner of the room.

In April 1974 Mrs. Martha Evans accompanied a beautician friend to Woodward Funeral Home where she was to do the hair of a deceased friend. Mrs. Evans had heard the story of the corpse in the storeroom and asked if she could see it.

Mrs. Evans took one look at the body and shrieked, "Oh, my God, it's Bellhouse!" Bellhouse was the family nickname for her brother-in-law James Evans, who had been missing for 27 years. Evans was a migrant worker in the peach and apple orchards along the east coast. His wife Lulia Mae and other family members had been seeking him in vain for years. Because Evans had been using an assumed name his family had not known of his death.

THOU SHALT NOT

By Louis Carballo

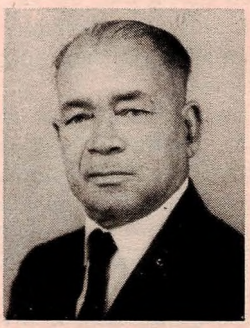

I WAS about 10 years old when I was sent in 1919 to spend part of my Easter vacation with my 80-year-old Granduncle Romulo Medina. This worthy gentleman was born in Venezuela, was a serious-minded member of the Catholic church, a confirmed bachelor and something of a recluse. I since have learned that he enjoyed a local reputation for his ability to heal by the power of prayer.

One day he took me for a walk to show me some of the countryside. We had come to a place where there were no trees or houses when it started to rain. I was upset at the prospect of a soaking but he drew me to him and began to pray in Spanish. I stood astounded as the rain fell heavily all about us but although we had no place to shelter, not a drop of rain fell on us.

Another episode that has burned itself into my memory occurred a few days later. Again we were out walking and we came upon one of the most venomous snakes known here in the West Indies. It is called a mapepire. I took up my machete to deal the snake a fatal blow when my granduncle restrained me with an upraised hand.

"Thou shalt not kill," he said. "When Almighty God commanded us to refrain from killing he made no exception for any particular species. Killing is killing and is always wrong."

I put my hand down and he started to pray. At this the snake stretched out to its full length and we left it.

Many were the stories which we, his grandnieces and nephews, thrilled to while sitting at his feet. Most of them involved his exploits with enraged tigers and other wild beasts in the forests of Venezuela, his homeland. None of us ever thought it proper to doubt him.

In retrospect they all may not have been true but my own two experiences with him certainly were. — Trinidad, W.I.

THE HAND OF DARKNESS

By Rose Jarrett

"MOTHER!" I called frantically from the darkness of my bedroom. "Mother, something's happened to Bob!"

My mother Mary Foster came quickly from the living room and sat on the edge of my bed. She patted my shoulder and said, "Nothing's wrong with Bob, honey. You had a bad dream. It's 11 o'clock and your husband will be home in an hour, safe and sound. You'll see."

Perhaps Mother was right. It was the spring of 1955 and this was my first night home from the hospital after my miscarriage. My nerves were pretty well worn but I knew I hadn't had a nightmare, for I wasn't even asleep. Neither was it my imagination. The hand that spread across my eyes, leaving me in black darkness, was real. As I had felt the big heavy hand over my eyes my husband's face came into my mind. Something was wrong. Something had happened to him at the Dupont Chemical Plant where he worked. I knew it — but I tried to erase it from my mind. Bob would be home in an hour, just as Mother said, but I couldn't wait.

"Mother," I called, "will you telephone the plant and ask to speak to Bob? I have to know he's all right."

Mother called to satisfy me and returned to my room smiling. "See, honey, Bob is fine. He said for you to relax and try to sleep. He will be home soon."

I felt better but I couldn't sleep. The uneasiness wouldn't leave me. I kept seeing and feeling that hand over my eyes.

The clock struck midnight. At 12:30 I heard another chime. Bob should have been home 15 minutes after the hour. Just then I heard a car pull into the driveway and I breathed again. My husband was home.

Next I heard strange voices in the living room and the doctor's orders to remain in bed were forgotten. In the living room I found two strange men supporting my husband, leading him to a chair. Bob's eyes were bandaged and he was white and shaking.

"Bob had a minor accident," the men explained. About 11:30 he had taken off his goggles and some chemicals had splashed into his unprotected eyes. "He'll be all right," they said. "We got to him in time. Nothing serious. A week or so and he'll be fine."

Bob did regain his sight after three weeks of living in the darkness I had experienced when the big hand closed over my eyes. — Pennsville, N. J.

ESP IN TRIPLICATE

By Roland J. McMahan

THE SECOND half of World War II took me to Manila as a captain in the United States Signal Corps. When I checked in my CO asked, "What can you do, especially?"

It was an unexpected question. He had my personnel records. He must know I had been a Task Force Signal Officer, had completed the Command and General Staff School, had served in the Pentagon and had been highly trained by AT&T. These things flashed through my mind.

Then to my own amazement I heard myself saying, "Sir, I am a specialist at establishing communications with stations that are almost impossible to hear." But captains don't operate telegraph keys. It was as if a doctor answering the same question said, "I'm good at lifting patients who have the backache!"

The colonel sputtered, "Why are you telling me this?"

The terrible die having been cast I relaxed and just let the next words come out, "Because I have a hunch this is an ability you will need desperately at some point."

Months later, in June or July of 1945, about 10:00 A.M., I was working at my desk when I noticed some unusual activity. The telephone rang and the colonel answered, "No, not yet; no word."

His assistant walked over to him and pointed to me. The colonel glanced at some notes on a personnel record, then fairly bellowed. "McMahan!"

"Yes, sir!" I replied, wondering what terrible thing I had done.

"You said when you arrived here you could establish communication with hard-to-get stations?"

"Yes, sir," I said, puzzled.

"How do you do that?" the tone of his question left no room for doubt. He was dead serious.

"Well, sir," I said, "I don't really know, but I think it is due to an extra power of concentration." I could have mentioned years of amateur radio experience, plus numerous occasions in the north country when I had been called in to copy "unreadable" signals from my own stations.

"Well, we have a problem," said the colonel who evidently was resigned to using me as a last resort but with no confidence in the result. "General MacArthur and a task force are invading an island and we were to begin communicating with the command ship at 6:00 A.M. but have been unable to hear them. We don't even know if they're still afloat or if they need air support. The General Staff is on my back. We have to contact them!"

"Ye gods" I exclaimed, "I'll try right away, sir." As I walked to the operations room my mind was occupied with the emergency. The dream that had been bugging me for about a week was wiped out. In this dream I walked into the colonel's office holding up my right hand with the thumb and forefinger together in the okay gesture. That I would do such a thing was unthinkable. The colonel and I barely spoke. However, sometime later, after establishing the contact and arranging for a change to a better frequency, I did walk into the colonel's office making that okay gesture.

"McMahan!" the colonel thundered angrily. "What the hell does that mean?"

"Sir," I had stopped at my desk.

He interrupted, "Come over here and stand at attention! Now, what happened in there?"

"Sir," I was stiffly at attention now although feeling weak and slightly faint from the strain I had been under, "I contacted the ship. We're changing frequencies and will be receiving messages in 10 minutes."

"How do I know you're telling the truth?"

His question stumped me a few seconds. Then I remembered, "It's in the log and will be in the ship's log at the same time or you can court-martial me."

The colonel and his assistant rushed from the room to check the log, then on returning the colonel made a phone call.

There are three unusual occurrences involved in this incident. First, the statement that I could make a difficult contact, the dream with the okay sign, and the actual contact under impossible conditions when I pulled up a signal which, according to the men at the receiving station, did not even exist. All of these things were beyond chance, paranormal and connected. — Hayden Lake, Idaho.

I PAINT THE FUTURE

By Kitty Kaufman

EVERY ONCE in a while I get an urge to dash off an oil painting, an urge I cannot ignore. My last paintings have either looked into the future or they have triggered future events. I do not know which.

In the winter of 1973 I painted a picture of a woman who seemed to be in a very thoughtful mood and who was obviously pregnant. As I set the painting on top of my secretary-desk to dry the thought flashed across my mind that I would learn of a pregnancy in the family. And I did, from a most unexpected source. My daughter-in-law Suzi, whose older son soon will be ready for college and whose younger son is 16 years old, informed me in January 1975 that she was three months pregnant. Well, I said to myself, you can't blame the painting for that.

Several Saturdays ago I put the finishing touches to the painting of a big orange cat. This, too, went up on the secretary-desk to dry and less than five minutes later Yip and Buddy began to bark insistently to let me know there was someone at the door. It was raining relentlessly but a lady collecting for the March of Dimes had not let this deter her. I opened the door to give her some money and an orange cat, drenched and forlorn, came running in. Since then he has taken over our home and gets along beautifully with Yip and Buddy. Reds is a beautiful intelligent cat with a lot of Persian in him. But how strange that he should appear just as my painting of an orange cat was completed!

My younger daughter-in-law Marlene, who has two little boys, one three years and the other six months old, has given me strict orders to desist from painting pregnant women.

"Do a painting of money," she urged.

Tongue in cheek, I did an oil painting of a huge bill and put dollar signs all over the rest of the canvas. I received a check for a manuscript from FATE while this painting was still wet. It will be interesting to see what else happens. — Philadelphia, Pa.

NIGHTMARE COME TRUE

By Janet R. Stage

A FRIEND of mine called early one morning in the summer of 1957 and asked me if I would take a kitten or two. The mother cat had been hit by a car the day before and her kittens were only two days old. They had to be bottle-fed and my friend had her hands more than full. I took two kittens and purchased a doll bottle. The kittens thrived and after a few weeks I began to take them out onto the front lawn to play each morning.

One night I went to bed much earlier than my husband who often stayed up to watch the late movies. When he finally came to bed he reached over and stroked my temple, whereupon I sat straight up in bed screaming. Only partly awake, I explained to him rather incoherently that each time he stroked my temple a large orange cat jumped through the porch screen and killed my kitten. The tomcat in my dream was the same one that roamed our neighborhood raiding the trash cans. He was huge, scarred and ugly. Our porch ran across the front of our house but actually had no screens on it.

The following morning, my dream forgotten, I took the kittens out to play in the warm morning sun. As they played one kitten wandered close to the porch and before I realized what was happening a large orange paw reached out from between the slats below the floor of the porch and grabbed the kitten.

Just at this time my husband and a friend came home and they and a neighbor with a hose drove the tomcat out from under the porch and retrieved the kitten. But he was dead; his throat had been slit. — Minneapolis, Minn.

PREDESTINED ENCOUNTER

By Jerry Wayne

WHEN MAJ. Albert M. Lea and his son Edward chose opposite sides in the Civil War, Major Lea joined the staff of Confederate Gen. J. B. Magruder in Virginia, while Edward, a naval officer, was assigned to Admiral Farragut's Union forces at New Orleans. The Leas were certain they never would meet in battle but the forces of destiny proved too strong for them.

Late in 1862 a Union expedition backed up by warships captured the vital island seaport of Galveston, Tex. General Magruder was ordered to Texas to recapture it. On New Year's Day 1863 the Confederates attacked.

While Magruder's forces besieged the town Major Lea led a makeshift fleet of steamboats against the Union ships. His men stormed aboard the gunboat Harriet Lane and captured her in hand-to-hand fighting that left the captain and executive officer dead. The executive officer was Lt. Comdr. Edward Lea.

The next day the fallen Union officers were buried ashore. Major Lea read the funeral service.

PHILIP . . .
the imaginary GHOST

By Iris Owen and Margaret Sparrow

Eight Toronto researchers first created a fictional character, then set about conjuring up his ghost — with astonishing results.

IN SEPTEMBER 1972 eight members of the Toronto Society for Psychical Research were discussing the nature of ghosts and speculating as to whether a ghost might be an artifact conjured up in the mind of the beholder. If this were so, they reasoned, why couldn't they deliberately construct a ghost?

"Philip" lived at Diddington Hall, 17th-Century manor in Warwickshire.

The group consisted of five women (Adrienne Henwood, Bernice Mandryk, Dorothy O'Donnell, Iris Owen and Margaret Sparrow) and three men (Lorne Henwood, Sidney Korman and Albert Peacock). They agreed to sit for an hour, perhaps more, at least once each week and try by various methods to produce an apparition. They decided their ghost would be an imaginary character, a product of their own invention, so that there could be no question that any manifestation that occurred could be due to a real spirit (in the spiritualistic sense). In other words, the appearance of the character they invented would prove, to the group's satisfaction at any rate, that the ghost arose from their collective minds. No one in the group claimed to be psychic or mediumistic — the whole theory rested on the assumption that if any manifestation could be produced it could be done by anybody, not only by persons with special abilities.

The character they invented was Philip, an English aristocrat who had lived in the middle 1600's at the time of Oliver Cromwell. They posited that Philip had been a supporter of the King, that he was a Catholic and married to a beautiful but frigid wife Dorothea, the daughter of a neighboring nobleman. One day when out riding the boundaries of his estates Philip came across a gypsy encampment and saw there a beautiful dark-eyed raven-haired gypsy girl, Margo, and fell in love with her. He brought her back secretly to live in the gatehouse near the stables of Diddington Manor, his family home.

For some time he kept his love nest secret but eventually Dorothea, suspecting he was keeping someone there, found Margo and accused her of witchcraft and stealing her husband. Philip was too afraid of losing his reputation and his possessions to protest at Margo's trial and she was convicted of witchcraft and burned at the stake. Subsequently Philip was stricken with remorse for not having defended Margo and he took to pacing the battlements of Diddington in despair. Finally one morning his body was found at the bottom of the battlements where he had cast himself in a fit of agony and remorse.

The story continues that Philip has been reincarnated several times since then, but once every century or so his ghost is seen on the battlements at Diddington. The group decided that the early 1970's was a period between incarnations and therefore his ghost would be active. They theorized that if he could be materialized and reassured that Margo has forgiven him, then he would be at rest.

The group spent considerable time elaborating the story of Philip, fixing in their minds a picture of him and bringing together all their individual ideas of him as a person. In fact, Adrienne Henwood drew a picture of him and all were agreed on his appearance.

The venue of the story, Diddington Hall, is a real place in Warwickshire, England. Margaret Sparrow had lived there briefly and she has an aunt who lives only a few miles away. Subsequently Iris and Dr. George Owen visited there and brought back pictures of the manor house, the stables and surrounding countryside.

Three participants are (left to right) Margaret Sparrow, Dorothy O'Donnell and Adrienne Henwood. With fingertips on tabletop they felt rather than heard the fictional ghost's first manifestations.

Following the lead of British researchers in a similar experiment Toronto group decided to conduct sittings in atmosphere of jollity.

The group knows nothing of the history of the house but there is no evidence whatever that any such persons as Philip and Dorothea existed. Now somewhat familiar with the locale of their invented story, the group at this stage familiarized themselves with the customs and ideas of the times.

THE SITTINGS started in the spring of 1973 with the group in a circle around a table meditating in silence, initially for periods of 10 minutes and later up to half an hour. Sometimes they sat in a circle meditating without a table and not always in the same place; they met in various homes. After the period of meditation they would discuss their experiences and feelings during meditation and also the story and personality of Philip.

During this initial period some members had difficulty realizing that Philip was a group entity. They related individual impressions which showed that his character and personality were not yet unified — not yet a product of their collective minds, as it were.

Also at this stage, an observer was stationed outside the group to witness any unusual phenomena that might occur. (Early in the planning everyone realized that other types of phenomena might occur and the possibilities of collective telepathy, collective hallucination, etc., had been discussed.) The observer, an "aura-viewer," frequently described auras around the heads of the participants and also energy fields passing from one member to another and around various persons. On occasion all members were aware of a certain mistiness in the room or around the center of the table — although the atmosphere was quite clear. (Smoking was not allowed until after the period of meditation.)

The group met in this way every week for a whole year and during this period the members came to relate to each other extremely well. They were completely relaxed in each other's company and a strong bond of affection and friendship was evident.

IN THE summer of 1973 work which had been done in England during the previous 10 years came to the attention of the Toronto group. This experimentation by K. J. Batcheldor, C. Brookes-Smith and D. W. Hunt* had begun in 1964 and continued with some intermissions until 1972. However, the members of the group who had read about this work previously had not realized its relevance to their current experiment. Batcheldor and later Brookes-Smith and his associates were specifically interested in producing physical effects such as table levitation and raps. The Toronto group wondered if the Englishmen's approach might also work in the creation of Philip. In any case they felt that they needed a new approach, for the effects so far produced had been minimal.

Batcheldor, Brookes-Smith and Hunt recommended an approach to physical phenomena which approximated the atmosphere of seances performed during the Victorian era. Instead of quiet concentrated meditation, they recommended an atmosphere of jollity and relaxation — singing songs, telling jokes and exhorting the table to obey the sitters' commands. In their papers they gave a completely reasonable explanation for why this method works: Given the establishment of good rapport among the sitters, which is facilitated by jollity and relaxation, everyone in the group believes that something will happen and then it will happen.

The Toronto group decided to try this method. Consequently, at a meeting in late August 1973 at Al Peacock's home the group changed to this approach. At first they found it a little difficult to dispense with the meditation they had become accustomed to and they were somewhat inhibited about producing an atmosphere of "jollity." Apart from a feeling of "vibration" in the table nothing happened at this session.

However, at the following session and on subsequent evenings extraordinary things did happen. The first experience was the "feeling" of raps in the table. At this stage "feeling" is the right word because the raps were felt rather than heard.

The year's buildup of rapport now paid off. After the initial hesitation the members found no difficulty in relaxing, singing jolly or sentimental songs, telling jokes and generally creating the kind of atmosphere recommended by Batcheldor and Brookes-Smith. When they sang particular songs, especially songs associated with the period in which Philip had lived, the table began to respond by producing raps which became louder and more obvious as time went on.

The group adopted the procedure of addressing the table as "Philip" and Philip took to using one rap for yes, two for no and slight hesitant knocks when the answer was doubtful or the question apparently not understood. "He" also would give a loud series of raps for a song of which he approved and even began to beat time to favorite songs.

At the beginning of each session each member of the group would say, "Hello, Philip," and under each hand in turn there would be heard a loud and definite rap. Again, at the end of the session each member would say, "Good night," and get an individual response. They asked Philip about himself, his likes and dislikes, his habits and customs, and the "Philip" of the table responded as the group expected him to. In other words, the table recreated the personality of Philip. However, on occasion the table would rap out an answer inconsistent with the story and this created an intriguing situation. For instance, he twice denied quite vigorously that he had loved Margo — and this was the keystone of the story!

The initial sessions were held in the Owens' home where an ordinary plastic-topped metal-legged card table was used. After two or three sessions the group moved to the home of another member where a room was set aside for the sessions. A similar card table was used — in fact, several tables were impressed into service, all with similar results. The floor was thickly carpeted and in ordinary circumstances it was difficult to push the table across this floor. Needless to say, the raps could not be produced by someone tapping his feet on the floor.

The raps became louder and were clearly audible in quiet moments during the sessions. They moved around the table, often seeming to come from within or underneath it. They were equally audible and prolific if the members stood around the table with their hands in view, fingertips resting lightly on the tabletop. Later it was found that it did not matter whether everyone touched the table. Various combinations of members could produce the phenomena — on the last occasion when only four members of the group were present and another member of the Toronto SPR who had not been aware of the work took part.

One night in September, after some four weeks of sittings, the table suddenly started to move around the room randomly. The sitters were forced to vacate their chairs to follow it. It would move into corners, forcing most of the sitters to relinquish their contact. Then it would shoot across the room at great speed. When it came to rest the sitters near the table would continue their questions and the raps would come forcibly and apparently intelligently as before, thus demonstrating again that no one was tapping from underneath.

The table developed quite a personality and the sitters were enjoying the whole thing immensely. At times the situation was hilarious. "Philip" was showing preferences for certain members, likes and dislikes, and an aptitude for mischievous pranks. He was apt to chase a particular person. On one occasion a member had left the room, having said good night, then had to come back for her jacket. "Philip" made a definite, obvious attempt to prevent her getting the jacket and finally whooshed across the room in chase! Then at other times he showed a tendency to "sulk" as if something he did not like had happened, but usually he was noisy and appreciative of songs or jokes he approved of. He particularly liked drinking songs, as befitted a cavalier!

One very hot evening the table had been particularly vigorous and the group had been trying to persuade "Philip" to lift it. (They were unsuccessful and to date there has been no real levitation.) Dorothy O'Donnell said, "Well, Philip, if you are not hot and tired, we are. We would like a rest. Why don't you just flip right over and then we'll all have a glass of lemonade and a rest?" Whereupon the table immediately tilted and despite all the hands resting lightly on the tabletop, it gave a curious little flip and landed upside down.

At this point, while the table was still upside-down, the Owens' son Robin came into the room. He was a member of the Society but he had not been associated with the experiment in any way and he was quite skeptical of the whole matter. The group righted the table and introduced the visitor. "Philip" responded with a slight tap.

"That's not loud enough," said one of the group. "You can do better than that. Whereupon a very loud rap was heard from the center of the table. Later Dr. Owen came into the room and again the table produced raps in greeting and in reply to his questions. Such raps could be heard at some distance and many persons, not connected in any way with the initial group and somewhat skeptical, have heard the raps and seen the table movements. All are satisfied that these are produced paranormally and not by the group members themselves.

THE PHENOMENA are continuing. The Toronto group has not lost sight of their original objective — to try to create an actual manifestation of an apparition.

We are tremendously indebted to the detailed descriptions of the work done by Batcheldor and later Brookes-Smith and Hunt. It is not only relevant that their method of working produces results but the reasoning as to why it works is most important. The Toronto group had not seriously looked at the English experiments until after they had a whole year of meditation and group work and this clearly paid off when the method of approach was changed, for they already had the rapport they needed.

Batcheldor and Brookes-Smith were concentrating on actual physical phenomena, the Toronto group on an invented entity, but both fit the philosophy that if everyone in the group believes that something will happen, then it does indeed happen.

Several basic points emerged. One must believe implicitly that the phenomena can and will happen; and one cannot be surprised when something unexpected happens. A. K. Talbot* says, ". . . the psychical researcher, while carrying out his investigation, cannot afford the luxury of a neutral and unbiased attitude if he wishes to advance beyond the vicious circle of endless repetition of half-satisfactory experiments which are the usual reward of the half-convinced experimenter. He should identify himself and become at one with the psychical situation by adopting, in the way of a working hypothesis, as it were, a wholehearted acceptance of the phenomena at their face value, regardless of how much this deliberate act of acceptance may outrage his intellectual convictions."

Talbot qualifies this advice with the admonition: "While thus acting as a wholehearted believer, keep a corner of your mind alert, watchful and unemotional, avoiding all partisanship. A pretty little piece of mental acrobatics!"

The attitude which Talbot thinks appropriate is illustrated by the reaction of the Brookes-Smith and Hunt group when a chair moved telekinetically. The watchers did not react with astonishment but rather with speculation on how to use the force then manifested (which was gentler than they had experienced with their table) in order to have better-controlled experiments. Brookes-Smith says that group exhibited psychological "poise" and that such poise appears to be necessary for this type of experiment.

The Toronto group found that if they became too intense in their questioning or too concentrated, the raps became feebler and more erratic. Also it seems that, speaking metaphorically, just as one can create a positive "thought form" one can as easily dispel it. Our group on one occasion demonstrated Philip's unstable nature. Answers to questions were somewhat erratic and the phenomena were slow in coming one particular evening. Philip would not respond to commands and Sydney Korman said, "Well, Philip, if you won't cooperate we can send you away, you know." After that the phenomena disappeared almost completely and the group had to reinforce their belief in Philip and the phenomena before the raps and movements returned.

The Toronto group has not been working as long as the Brookes-Smith group and as we have said it was specifically laid down that no member claimed to have psychic power or ability. This group has not reproduced all the phenomena demonstrated by the Brookes-Smith group. However, many things that have happened in Toronto strikingly resemble those that the two English groups report so that we may say with certainty that here is, in fact, a repeatable parapsychological experiment — unlikely as it may seem.

It is clear that in some way that we cannot yet understand a group of people can create a thought-directed force which can be expressed in a physical way — i.e., produce noise and move objects. I think we have proved this can be done by any random group of people, provided they can condition themselves psychologically to produce this effect.

ROBOTS HAVE ARRIVED

By Ruby M. Lee

IN 1973 the Japanese firm of Hitachi, Ltd., announced it had developed a robot that "sees and feels." The first order for Hitachi's "Robot No. 1" was from the Japan Concrete Industry Co. in Iboraki, northeast of Tokyo. The robot tightens bolts of frames for concrete piles, judging shapes and positions with television-camera eyes.

Robot No. 1 confirms the shape of objects with its finger-like tactile sensor. It can find bolts of different lengths within 2.5 seconds. Control elements are used instead of computers to reduce the robot's operating cost.

Hitachi expects such robots eventually to usher in an era of unmanned factories.

MONEY DOES GROW ON TREES

By M. Dewey Bogart

SEVERAL YEARS ago my family and I were taking a summer drive in a rural area between Needham and Dedham, Mass. Our two sons, then about seven and 10, were remarking on the family finances when my wife in the back said, "You boys must think that money grows on trees."

No sooner had she gotten the words out of her mouth than I spotted something in a wooded area along the road. I stopped the car, got out and walked over to a maple tree nearby. Reaching up about six feet, I plucked a one-dollar bill off a branch of the tree. The bill had caught my eye just as my wife spoke the familiar phrase.

My sons exclaimed, "See, Mommy, money does grow on trees!"

MY DREAM

An Early Warning System

I stood speechless staring at the corpse in the coffin. It was ME lying there! I was really dead.

By Coraine A. Brown

I NEVER have gone to funerals, cemeteries or mortuaries in my entire life. Just to think of them made me ill. No doubt it was a psychological problem but I don't know what caused it unless it's due to a submerged memory of having looked at the dead faces of my father or mother who both died before I was old enough to remember them. I've never believed in expensive funerals and never will. I think the living, not the dead, should have the money and flowers. Up until six months ago death was a horrifying thought to me. Not that I was afraid I wouldn't go to Heaven if I died, but I love life even when the sailing is rough and it's been rough most of my life. I love getting up in the morning to start another day.

On December 20, 1973, we made plans to go to Portland, Ore., for Christmas. The following day I got out of bed feeling so weak and dizzy I could hardly stand. I had chills all day. We canceled our plans and spent Christmas at home and it was a sad lonely day for me. I couldn't understand why I felt so depressed and miserable. My husband Bill telephone a doctor in Grants Pass and made an appointment for me the following week.

Then on January 1, 1974 — my birthday — I had one of the most horrible dreams I've ever had in my life. I dreamed Bill took me to Medford, 32 miles from Grants Pass where we live, to a clinic. When we got there he drove down a street named M Street. When we came to a large building he stopped the car and parked. In my dream we got out and went into the largest waiting room I'd ever seen. It was filled with many women and a few men. I noticed that they all seemed nervous and most of the women looked frightened and frail. Some of the men had sores on their lips. Bill told me to go and register but when I got to the window I couldn't find a form to fill out. A beautiful girl with long hair and a sweet smile handed me one and told me to put my social security number on the form and sign it. But I couldn't remember my name.

Still in my dream we left that building and drove a few miles on Barnett Road which is northeast of Medford. When we came to a huge gray building that I knew was a hospital I told Bill to stop the car. Suddenly I saw a flashing light which read: EMERGENCY. I tried to think what that sign meant but couldn't. After entering this building we didn't stop at the lobby desk but walked down long corridors carpeted in green until we came to an elevator. I pressed the "B" button and suddenly we found ourselves in a huge basement. I opened a door that had "Radiation Therapy" printed on it and I wondered what that meant. In this new waiting room many people were sitting, deep pain written on all of their faces. A secretary came over and I told her that I couldn't remember my name. She just looked puzzled.

A nurse came through one of the doors and nodded at one woman who instantly got up and followed her. When the door opened I could see lights everywhere and also saw two doctors dressed in white coats. I was so nervous I wanted to scream but instead we turned and walked out. Bill looked serious but never said a word. In seconds it seemed we were in our car and on our way home.

My dream then shifted to the next morning. I had an urge to go to a funeral home to look at coffins because I wanted to buy a cheap one. I drove to a funeral home in Grants Pass where a polite young attendent met me at the door. I asked him to show me a cheap coffin and tried to explain that I didn't believe in expensive funerals and wanted a coffin that didn't cost more than $500. I told him I wanted the coffin for myself. We walked down a hall to a large room filled with coffins — in shocking pink, blue, white and beige. I saw one in an adjoining room that looked nice. I walked over to it and it actually felt soft, like velvet. I asked the attendent to open it for me and he looked at me and smiled, saying, "This one suits you fine, since your husband paid only $500 for it. Five hundred dollars will be the complete cost of your funeral and we will give you one red rose."

I didn't know what he was talking about but I soon found out. I looked inside that coffin and got the surprise of my life for a woman, dressed in a pale green negligee, was lying in it. I stood there speechless, staring at the corpse and shaking like a leaf. Finally, when I was able to speak I said, "It is ME lying in that coffin. I'm really dead."

"Yes, I know it's you," the young man said.

I stood there looking at myself and thinking I looked so beautiful, peaceful and calm. I felt proud of myself, for I looked better dead than I did alive. As I walked away from the coffin I was trying to decide how many pallbearers I would need. I started counting on my fingers, naming only my family because I was going to have a private funeral.

I said aloud, "Jim, Gary, Glen, Hank, Cal, Mike, Frank, Gordon . . ." and that was as far as I got for at that moment I woke up screaming.

I tried to stand but sank to the floor still screaming. Bill attempted to calm me but I told him I was dead and in my coffin. He talked to me for hours telling me it was only a nightmare but we didn't sleep anymore that night. The next day I tried to tell my daughter about it but she told me I was okay and not to talk about it because it was making her nervous. I tried to dismiss it from my mind but I was sure it was a warning of danger.

I became depressed and irritable; I lost my appetite, felt listless and sick in body and spirit. I kept wondering what was going to happen to me.

On January 11, 1974, I awoke with a very sore throat and the next day went to see our doctor in Grants Pass. He gave me a prescription for penicillin for a strep throat but after I took all the medication my throat was no better. I went back and he gave me another prescription for a different antibiotic. After three weeks I was still no better and my son-in-law Abner Wall advised me to see his doctor, an ear, nose and throat specialist, in Medford.

The following morning Bill drove me to Medford to consult the specialist. When we turned off Main Street onto Myrtle my dream came back to me for this was the street with the letter "M." Everything began to look familiar. Bill parked the car in the same place he had parked it in the dream. We went into the same building, into the waiting room with the sad-looking people. The same sweet girl was sitting at the registration desk. I filled out a form and went back to my chair. The secretary motioned me back to the window. "I can't read your name," she said.

"Last time I was here I didn't know it," I told her. She gave me a startled look but said nothing.

The specialist cut two little pieces of skin from my throat to send to a pathologist and told me he would phone as soon as he got the results. I waited two agonizing days for that call. When the doctor did call he said in a very low tone, "Mrs. Brown, you have a malignant tumor in your pharynx."

"Oh, no, no," was all I could say in the first few minutes. Then I told him I didn't want to die. I know he tried to console me but I don't know what he said. Bill talked to him and he told Bill to take me to the Rogue Valley Memorial Hospital near Medford on February 6 at 10:30 A. M. to be examined for cobalt treatments. I cried all afternoon and all night after learning that I had cancer. I really didn't want cobalt treatments but the doctor said he couldn't operate; the growth was too near my spinal cord.

When we arrived at the hospital that Wednesday morning in February I found it was the one I'd seen in my dream. As we walked up those steps I felt as if I were going to the gas chamber. When we approached the lobby desk a little woman in a pink uniform asked if she could help us. I told her I was going to radiation therapy and I knew how to go to get there.

Bill looked at me as if he thought I was crazy for this was the first time I'd ever been in that hospital — except in my dream. But everything was familiar to me, even the green carpet on the hall floor. We went directly to the basement, to the door that said "Radiation Therapy" and entered the waiting room. I asked one nice-looking young girl if she had cancer. She was too hoarse to speak but nodded her head yes.

Before I went into the treatment room a radiologist took me into a small room and for about 20 minutes explained the procedure and the treatments. He told me I'd have to have 35, since the tumor was discovered at an early stage before it grew large. He said it was fortunate that I had consulted a doctor when my throat first got sore and told me to cooperate with the staff and be cheerful. All the time he was talking I was remembering the dream and realizing it was the reason I'd gone to a doctor in time.

The first treatment scared me stiff. It all still seems like a nightmare that really didn't happen but of course it did. I was given a brochure and I read every word of it. The treatment room cost $300,000. The machine cost $50,000 and the cobalt energy source within it cost $13,000. The walls surrounding the machine are 36 inches thick. But all I knew on that first day was that I was alone in that room with the door closed. I was too frightened to move a muscle. I'm really ashamed to say this but at that moment I actually wished I were lying in that casket instead of on that table. Two technologists and two radiologists watch you while you're on the treatment table. They have a monitoring system. My throat was marked with marking ink which I couldn't remove until my treatments were over.

The doctors, nurses and technologists were kind to me and after a few treatments I wasn't afraid of the cobalt and began to feel it was getting rid of the cancer.

We had to drive 64 miles each day at a time when the gasoline shortage was at its worst. On March 22 I took my last treatment and the doctor said to me, "Mrs. Brown, we have given you 93 million units of cobalt. The tumor is 95 percent gone. We all think it's a miracle but you helped by cooperating."

I didn't speak for a moment but then I poured my heart out to him, telling him how scared I was, first of the dream, then of the cobalt. When I finally stopped talking he smiled and said, "You had a biopsy before the cancer spread." And he told me it can almost always be cured if found in time.

I'll always remember how I looked in that coffin but the dream doesn't worry me anymore for I realize it saved my life.

Last month when I went to the hospital for my checkup the doctor told me the tumor is completely gone but it will be some time before my throat heals. The normal cells were damaged at the same time the abnormal cells were broken down. Therefore, my throat will be sore until the cells heal.

I don't worry about graveyards, funeral homes and death anymore either. I thank God for letting me continue to get out of bed every morning to enjoy life. I think my dream, horrible as it was, has prepared me to face my death with dignity but I also feel I may celebrate my 105th birthday.

POLICE ASLEEP ON THE JOB?

ACCORDING to the Wall Street Journal for February 6, 1973, sleeping on the job pays off for members of the Winter Park, Fla., police force. The officers use self-hypnosis as an aid in recalling details of investigations and use hypnosis to help cooperative witnesses answer questions. One woman who used the technique was able to remember her attacker's license plate number.

Millions of demons, arranged in a dazzling hierarchy, monitor the sins of mortal men.

WHO'S WHO IN HELL

By Ken Nahigian

PART TWO

RELIGIOUS writers and mystics always have had their own concept of the infernal regions.

Dante Alighieri in particular had some clever notions. He described hell as a series of nine concentric circles extending from the surface of the earth to its center, each layer more hellish than the last. In the outer circle dwell the virtuous heathens, such as Homer and Socrates, after departing this life. Heretics, tyrants, murderers, suicides and blasphemers live a successively more unpleasant existence in the lower spheres, while at the very center repose the traitors. Surprisingly, two famous characters whom Dante depicts as receiving the worst punishment of the lot in this nine-layered hell are Cassius and Odysseus, both reasonably fine fellows in popular tradition.

Some modern occultists, such as the French writer Eliphas Lévi, apparently have taken their cues from Dante and characterize hell as having seven geographic regions called planes or spheres, each under the dark authority of an infernal monarch. According to Lévi, these seven monarchs are: Chabajoth, the enemy of the archangel Michael; Belial, the demon of evil science, who is opposed to Gabriel; Sachabiel, the foe of the archangel Raphael; Adrameleck, who destroys all beauty; Samgabiel, the enemy of the angel Zachariel; Nahemah, a female demon who opposes Archangel Anael; and Moloch, devourer of children and foe of Oriphiel.

According to the Scottish occultist MacGregor Mathers, a member of Lévi's magical school, we have not seven infernal monarchs but 10 — the counterparts of the 10 "devine sephiroth" of cabbalistic mysticism. They are under the supreme command of Sammael, demon of poison and death, and their names are Moloch, Beelzebub, Lucifuge, Ashtaroth, Asmodeum, Belphegor, Baal, Adrammelech, Lilith and Naamah.

Some writers and demonologists, imitating the Gnostics of early Christian times, favored a further classification and distributed the demons of hell into three hierarchies encompassing nine orders. Each order has a name, a special function, eight ruling princes and one supreme chief.

Christian leaders censured this classification because it paralleled their own angel cataloguing system. The system prevailed, however, and scholars spent a great deal of time determining to which order specific demons belonged. Lucifer, for example, was found to be of the order of the Seraphim; Agares, Belial and Barbatos were found to be of the order of the Virtues; Purson, remarkably, was of the orders of both the Virtues and the Thrones, and Murmur belonged to the Thrones and the Angels.

Many religious writers, taking their cue from passages in the Bible, further divided the orders into the smaller "legions." Weyer numbered the legions at 6,666 with exactly 1,111 demons in each legion, making a formidable demon army of 7,405,926. Other demonologists felt there were only about 2,400 legions. Alphonsus de Spina in 1459 would only say that the specific number of demons was 133,306,668. A 16th-Century demonologist counted 66 prince-devils commanding a population of 6,660,000 demons. The most impressive estimate was that the hosts of hell number more than half the population of the world. Whatever the correct number, the demonologists and grimoires were fond of stationing many legions of fiends under a single demon of inferior rank who in turn was ruled by still more powerful devils. These ranks were settled with heraldic complexity and again with very little consistency. According to the Lemegeton, for example, several legions were ruled by a knight, several knights by an earl or count, several counts by a president, presidents by marquises, marquises by princes or prelates who are ruled by dukes who in turn serve under kings.

Johan Weyer in his Pseudomonarchia Daemonum contradicts this hierarchy, insisting the ranks of the infernal court are: (1) kings, (2) ministers, (3) ambassadors, (4) justices, (5) princes and (6) lesser pleasures. Under the authority of the "Lesser Pleasures," presumably, are the separate legions.

John Milton's demonology departs radically from all of these. Milton portrays demons as the usual principles of rebellion, with most of the usual powers — he felt, for example, that demons could assume any sex or form but like Dante, he was not very interested in endless catalogues of the names and ranks of demons. However, unlike Dante, Milton was the first to give the Devil his proverbial due. To Milton the demon is an individualist who aspires toward freedom, knowledge and self-mastery. He is the noble rebel who would rather suffer eternal damnation than accept humiliation and servitude and his glory is perfect because it is utterly without hope. There is beauty, poetry and majesty in Milton's concept of Satan and hell and even Milton's critics must admire his sense of tragic idealism.

The saints and mystics were more unkind. In a Latin poem dated 1238 Saint Bernard describes demons as being black as pitch, having teeth like lions, nails like wild boars and with no higher business than that of carrying away condemned souls. Saint Catherine caught a glimpse of a demon once and said she would rather walk barefoot across hot coals than be forced to look upon another. Swedenborg is even less kind. He robs demons even of their sense of lost divinity, portraying them not as fallen angels but merely as fallen humans who wander forever through the netherworld of marshes and wastes, gloomy hamlets and brothels, repelled by a violent hatred from one another. They are proud and loathsome creatures but hardly satanic.

As to precisely what kinds or species of demons exist, one medieval tradition, inspired no doubt by aspects of Hermetic mysticism, specified a variety for each alchemical element: salamanders for fire, sylphs for air, undines for water and gnomes for earth. Michael Psellus, an occult writer of the 17th Century, added two more varieties of demons and tallied the following species: (1) fiery demons who live in the upper air and have little to do with humans, (2) ariel demons who live in the atmosphere around us and produce rainstorms, (3) subterranean demons who live underground and cause earthquakes and cave-ins, (4) aqueous demons who live in water and cause tempests at sea, (5) heliophobic demons who dwell in the fiery core of the earth, rarely come up, hate all light and sound and kill with their touch and (6) terrestrial demons who live on the surface of the earth and manifest as ghosts and spirits.

Since most traditional religious writers such as Dante tend to describe demons as all of the fifth sort, apparently this is the best-known variety.

Saint Augustine, on the other hand, apprehended all fallen angels as terrestrial demons.

Other demonologists suggested other classifications. Alphonsus de Spina found 10 varieties of devils: (1) fates who really have no control over destiny, (2) poltergeists who perform mischievous pranks at night, (3) incubi and succubi who seduce men and women and bring them into sin, (4) marching hosts who appear in isolated places and like hosts of men make a tumult, (5) familiar demons who live with men and serve them, (6) nightmares, who frighten men in their sleep, (7) demons formed from semen and its odor when men and women copulate, (8) deceptive demons who appear sometimes as men, sometimes as women, in order to mislead humans, (9) clean demons who assail only holy men and (10) demons who deceive old women into thinking they fly to sabbats.

Traditionally the fifth variety, the familiar demon, is an imp in the service of a sorcerer or witch. Also called magistellus, it sometimes assumes the shape of a human being but appears more frequently as some sort of animal. Oliver Cromwell supposedly had a familiar called Grimoald. A sorcerer or witch received a familiar demon when he sold his soul to the Devil for magic power and the familiar lived by drawing a kind of milk from a witch-mark, which the Devil places on the sorcerer's or witch's skin for that purpose.

Demons also may be classified according to which of the seven deadly sins they are most efficient in provoking among humans. The demonologist Binsfield made one such list in 1589: Lucifer-pride, Mammon-avarice, Asmodeus-lechery, Satan-anger, Beelzebub-gluttony, Leviathan-envy and Belphegor-sloth.

So much for the general information to be had from the major demonologists, religious writers and Christian mystics. More interesting details can be filled in if we examine the conceptions of popular European folklore.

The folk tradition often tends to sympathize with the plight of the demons, although in a more earthly and rustic manner than did Milton. They portray the average demon merely as the affable author of small wickednesses and minor mischiefs — sometimes even as the victim of perjury and slander.

One folktale tells of a monk in a Dominican monastery who found his Lenten fasts so burdensome that he smuggled fresh eggs into his cell to cook each morning over the bed lamp. One morning, however, the abbot entered unexpectedly and caught him frying eggs instead of saying rosaries. The monk weepingly apologized for his sin, saying that Lucifer had tempted him to commit it. Suddenly Lucifer sprang out from under the monk's cot and angrily denounced him for a thumping liar, insisting that the monk had conceived the artifice himself and that he, the Devil, only recently had learned it from him.

Most European folktales grant demons little real satanic wit or ingenuity, protraying them as closer to guileless idiots than to lords of treachery. In one widespread folktale Beelzebub, resolving to engage in the agricultural business, offered to do manual labor on a farm for one year in exchange for half the crop. The farmer agreed on the condition that his helper keep that half which grew beneath the ground. Then he gave Beelzebub a sack of corn to plant. At harvest time Beelzebub got only the roots which he found unpalatable. He returned in a huff, demanding that next harvest he be given that part of the crop which grew above the ground. Once more the farmer agreed and planted potatoes.

As witless and maligned as demons may be, even European folklore recognizes that on occasion they are dangerous fellows. So it provides a variety of counteragents to be used against them. Even transformed demons may be recognized, for example, by their lack of a shadow or reflection in water. Holy relics, incense, ash tree bark, human spittle or blessed water repels them. Certain natural objects are also effective; gems such as chrysolite and agate, plants like garlic and rue, silver, salt and the mandrake root all can be used. Demons cannot fly over a surface spread with lime or flour; the words "Xilka, Xilka, Besa, Besa" supposedly summon the most stubborn devils and any man with a stone called diadochus in his mouth may command their activities.

Devils may be male or female. A male demon is an incubus and the chief of the incubi is Azael or Damon. In other languages they are called follet (French), Alp (German), duende (Spanish), and folletto (Italian). European folklore believed them to be angels who fell from heaven principally because they lusted after human women. A female demon is a succubus or succuba and some authorities say their leader is Lilith; others call her Nahemah. Presumably these were female angels who fell because of lust for human men. The incubus often was identified with the nightmare demon; in fact, the Latin word for nightmare is incubo. Since women were allegedly more licentious than men demonologists felt that the incubi outnumbered the succubi nine to one. Both species, as is well known, have the distressing habit of consorting with sleeping humans, producing curious offspring called "monstra." The archangel Michael is the enemy of all such hybrids.

Saint Augustine believed in incubi and succubi and in The City of God he wrote: "The number of incubi and succubi is so great that it is difficult to know how to destroy them. They have a great deal of power."

The existence of incubi was first hinted at in Genesis 4:1-4, and referred to at length in an apocryphal religious text called the First Book of Enoch: "And it came to pass when the children of men had multiplied that in those days were born unto them beautiful and comely daughters. And the angels, the children of heaven, saw and lusted after them, and said to one another: Come let us choose wives from among the children of men and beget us children."

These angels were called the Watchers, and their leader was Semjaza or Azazel; the offspring of their union with mortal women was a race of giants who devoured normal men.

Historical examples of children generated by the union of a human woman and an incubus were, supposedly, Plato, Merlin the wizard, the Antichrist and the entire race of Huns.

Churchmen believed Catholic nuns were especially vulnerable to incubi and Alphonsus de Spina described how nuns often would wake in the morning and "find themselves polluted just as if they had commingled with a man." Especially vulnerable to succubi were the monks, anchorites and shepherds. High churchmen also were vulnerable apparently, for according to the Dominican Johannes Nider (1435), of all the many harlots who offered their services at the famous Council of Constance the most sought-after call girl was a succubus.

In 1801 the occultist Francis Barrett suggested that a succubus was, after all, just a kind of wood nymph but few demonologists concurred. They were inclined to believe rather that incubi and succubi were the same kind of demon which could assume either male or female form. The demonologist Guazzo in his Compendium Maleficarum (1608) wrote that a demon "can assume either a male or a female shape; sometimes he appears as a full-grown man, sometimes as a satyr."

Another 17th Century demonologist, Sinistrari, tells us how a demon may possess a physical body: "If we seek to learn from the authorities how it is possible that the devil, who has no body, yet can perform actual coitus with man or woman, they unanimously answer that the devil assumes the corpse of another human being, male or female as the case may be, or that, from the mixture of other materials, he shapes for himself a body, endowed with motion, by means of which he copulates with the human being."

Apparently incubi and succubi are extremely difficult to discourage. Like poltergeists they seem unaffected by exorcism and show no reverence for holy things at the approach of which they may laugh openly. Still, one folk tradition suggests a way to ward off either an incubus or a succubus. Combine some Saint-John's-wort with vervain and dill, it says, and place this in the victim's room. The victim soon will be free. The magical recipe does not tell us how incubi and succubi may be attracted, which no doubt will be a disappointment to some people.

In Jewish tradition Lilith and Nahemah, the two empresses of the succubi, throttle newborn babies, seduce men in their sleep and then suck their blood. Lilith, called "Queen of the Stryges," tempts to debauchery and destroys maternal desire while Nahemah presides over illicit and sterile caresses. Lilith probably is the "terror by night" mentioned in Psalm 91. A curious medieval and Jewish legend tells us that Adam was visited by various succubi for 130 years, among them Lilith who became his first earthly wife. It was from their primal union that many of the supernatural races of antiquity originally sprang — the elves, dwarfs, fairies and djinn.

That each demon has his own grotesque and horrifying shape is an old tradition going back to the days of Babylon. They would appear as fierce warriors or old men, as a terrible king riding a pale horse, a gryphon, a dragon — or perhaps as a composite with the face of a lion and the tail of a scorpion. The demon-locusts in the ninth chapter of Revelation have the bodies of war-horses and human faces, long hair and golden crowns, huge clashing wings and stinging tails. Asmodeus has the feet of a rooster and three heads. Astaroth looks like a beautiful angel but has bad breath.

Traditionally, also, each demon has his own adversary in heaven who will defeat him on the day of the Last Judgment.

Leviathan, for example, is opposed by Peter the Apostle, Astaroth by Saint Bartholomew, Sonneillon by Saint Stephen, Lucifer by Archangel Michael, and Obizuth by Archangel Raphael. Knowing which saint or angel opposed a given devil had practical use, not only in attempts to banish the devil but in trying to summon and control him. Demons could be dealt with more easily if prayers were first offered to their heavenly adversaries.

We've noted that each demon rules his own individual sin. In early writings and grimoires the demon's function was merely to commit that sin himself; in the Testament of Solomon, a very early grimoire of magic, Onoskelis is a demoness who strangles men, Asmodeus destroys the beauty of virgins and it is Tephros' function to bring darkness and set fire to fields. It later became the duty of the demons to entice humans into committing the sins also. Thus Beelzebub is the source of gluttony and idolatry, according to Weyer; Abaddon tempts men to war and unjust destruction; and Asmodeus, according to Francis Barrett, is the demon of vengeance. In more recent times Aleister Crowley gave us the demon Choronzon who rules leprosy, pox and plague.

Still other fiends preside over less diabolical matters. An abbreviated list of the functions of the more important of these devils follows:

Demons of the Alchemical Elements: fire — Samael, water — Azawl, earth — Mahazael, air — Paymon.

Six Demons Who Rule Over All Troubles, (1) Aectus, (2) Megalesius, (3) Ormenus, (4) Lycus, (5) Nicon, (6) Mimon.

The Ambassadors of Hell: to France — Belephegor; to England — Mammon; to Turkey — Belial; to Russia — Rimmon; to Spain — Thamuz; to Italy — Hutgin, to Switzerland — Martinit.

Demons of the Army of Hell: high commanders, Satan, Moloch and Baal; prime minister and archfiend, Lucifuge Rofocal; subordinates, Baal, Arages and Marbas; commander-in-chief or grand general, Put Stanachia; subordinates, Pruslas, Aamon and Barbatos; another commander, Agaliarept; subordinates, Nathim, Pursan and Bilgor; brigadier major, Sarbatanas; subordinates, Zoray, Valbfar and Faraii; field marshal and inspector general, Nebiros; subordinates, Ayperos, Nabberas and Glassyalabolas.

Demons of the Days of the Week: Monday — Lucifer; Tuesday — Frimost; Wednesday — Astaroth; Thursday — Silchard; Friday —

Bechard; Saturday — Guland; Sunday — Surgat.

Actually these represent only the bare outline of the doctrines of demonology, for if we are to accept the reports of all the major authorities, including the early Christian church, the hierarchy of hell must be a dazzlingly complex matter, rife with paradoxes and ambiguities. But these are the basics. You can pursue the subject in the library with the appropriate texts. In point of fact, since most of us are unrepentent sinners anyway, it would be practical to know who will be monitoring our coal-shoveling quotas in our future in the underworld.

NORBU CHEN HEALS SINGER

CONTROVERSIAL HEALER Norbu Chen (see August 1974 FATE) drew high praise from stage and screen star Yul Brynner, according to National Enquirer. In December 1974 Brynner was appearing in preview performances of his new musical "Odyssey" when he contracted severe laryngitis. Dr. Walter Maloney of University Hospital, Cleveland, Ohio, examined the singer, prescribed antibiotics and other drugs and told him to rest his voice for about two weeks.

Faced with the Broadway opening of the show on December 19, Brynner flew to Houston to visit Norbu Chen. Chen treated the singer with acupuncture and laying on of hands and in an hour and a half Brynner's voice returned. The next day the singer flew to Washington, D.C., and participated in full rehearsals of the show without difficulty. Brynner was so delighted that he sent his jet plane to Houston to fly Chen to New York so that he might attend the show on opening night.

LOTTERY DREAM COMES TRUE

RUTH CONNOLLY of South Dade, Fla., dreamed one night in March 1975 that she was riding in a car and someone asked her what her number was. In the dream she replied and the voice then told her she was a big winner in the lottery.

On the following Thursday Mrs. Connolly had a long-distance call from Massachusetts. Dave Ellis of the Massachusetts Lottery Commission was calling to tell her that the $25 lottery ticket her sister-in-law had given her last spring had paid off to the tune of $500,000. Mrs. Connolly, the lucky winner, had moved from Boston with her husband and eight children just the previous year. A deeply religious woman, Ruth Connolly went straight to church to offer a prayer of thanksgiving.

FLOWERS FOR ANNA

By Edward H. Cain

MY WIFE Nellie and I formerly ran a swimming resort one mile outside of Grand Rapids, Mich. But the strain was too much for Nellie and in September 1947 a Chicago physician told me that if I wanted her to live I should get her away from the business. Consequently we decided to sell. Strange as it may seem, a week after returning home I received a call from a childhood friend, Bill Haynes, whom I had not seen for several years. He asked if I ever considered selling the resort. I explained our plight, told him we would sell and named a price. He came right over to talk business, made a down payment and we closed the deal as quickly as possible.

During the next two years Bill and I renewed our old friendship and often had long discussions about our mutual interest in psychic phenomena. Bill's wife Anna had had a strict orthodox upbringing and never participated in our conversations. Bill often said that someday he hoped she would come to accept some of the things he believed so firmly. Then in the fall of 1949 Bill suffered a fatal heart attack while raking leaves at the resort.

Nellie and I had become interested in psychic matters after witnessing the mediumship of my father Edward Cain. As a result of our interest we often used the Ouija board to contact persons who had passed on, always maintaining an open mind while trying to avoid gullibility. A few weeks after Bill's death we rereceived the following Ouija board message: "Hi, Ed. This is Bill Haynes. Tell Anna the flowers on my dresser are from me with my love."

I replied that I was sure Anna would not accept such a message. Frankly I was reluctant to call her for fear she would laugh at me. But Bill persisted, saying, "Please do this for me."

Edward H. Cain

I called Anna and asked her if there any flowers on Bill's dresser. She answered, "I don't think so." When I explained about the Ouija board message, she said, "In that case I will check and see."

When she returned to the phone her voice was shaking. "This is the strangest thing that ever happened," she admitted. "Yesterday was my birthday and in the mail there was a picture of a beautiful bouquet of roses. I don't know where it came from, since there is no advertising or name on it. It's so pretty I decided to keep it for framing — and it's sitting on Bill's dresser!" — Grand Rapids, Mich.

ANNIVERSARY CARNATIONS

By Olive Bertram Peabody

EVERY YEAR for 14 years on April 16 I have received a message from beyond in the form of one or more carnations. My husband died on April 6, 1960, just before our anniversary which is April 16.

The beautiful Colorado carnation is my favorite flower and while he was alive he always sent me a bouquet of them on our anniversary. The first year after his death when I received carnations on our anniversary I didn't think much about it. They came from close friends and I thought they had chosen this charming way to respect his memory instead of sending flowers to the funeral. The next year on April 16, however, I was startled when I came from a meeting at the American Legion Hall to find, in one of the bare planters in front of the building, a beautiful red carnation, apparently discarded there by someone. Gratefully I picked it up and clutched it to me.

Olive Peabody

Shortly after my husband died I went back to work because I still had children in school. My work was hard because I was employed by a large church and there is never enough money in a church budget to hire the number of people really needed. Even with the help of volunteers every employee does double or triple duty.

About quitting time in the third year of my widowhood Edna Johnson, the lady in charge of altar flowers, came to the doorway of my office holding a beautiful bouquet of carnations of variegated colors. "These were not sent with the others to the hospital for some reason," she said, "and the preacher said to give them to you. They are a 'thank you' for all of the extra work you have been doing lately."

My eyes misted as I looked at the date printed on the calendar hanging beside the door. It was April 16. Now I was sure this was some kind of unearthly communication. It was frightening and at the same time reassuring. My contact with my husband had not been broken.

The fourth year I attended a convention in Scottsdale, Ariz. An exquisite luncheon was given on my special anniversary date. The centerpiece on each table was a ceramic head of a lovely lady filled with big pink carnations to form a hat or headdress. After the luncheon the president of the group announced that the centerpieces would be given away in a unique manner. She said, ★ Amazing fact: Your dollars can be earning interest on weekends . . . after you've already withdrawn them.

How on Earth are these things possible? Simply by following the easy-to-understand plan I've outlined in what I believe is one of the most informative, useful money-making books ever published.

This is the book that tells it all. All the important proven financial secrets you need to stay ahead of inflation. Many of these secrets are so fantastic you won't believe they're possible until you put them into practice.

Just to give you an idea:
You can actually pay bills by check from your savings account and still earn interest on money that isn't there.

And did you know: If you know how, you can actually make more money banking by mail than you can in person?

Now in case you're worried about the banks. Please don't! Believe me they can afford it. Banks make billions with depositor's money. They make far more lending your money to commercial borrowers and mortgagors than they ever pay to you, their depositors.

It's that fat cushion between what the banks get and what they pay that enables banks to offer you "inducements" such as compound interest, high rates in special issues, day-of-deposit-to-day-of withdrawal accounts, bonus days, bank gifts, and so on.

Earn $100,000 or more with deposits of less than $20.

All you have to do is know how to take advantage of these "inducements" and the fine print in banking laws (and believe me I show you how easy it is!). You can pile up a fortune – actually $100,000 or more, on what amounts to weekly deposits of less than $20. And, the beautiful part is: You're not speculating! You're not gambling! You're not risking one red cent! Because you're putting your money in the safest place in the world: An American bank. And, even if it should fail (which is almost impossible today), your savings are protected by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

The only question that remains is: How long can you afford not to do something about it? All you need to know is How! And it's all right there in my book. The information, the methods and techniques, the step-by-step game plan. It's all there for you! In simple straight forward language, complete with illustrations. Easy to understand for anyone with a fifth grade education.

Powerful interests would love to "Coverup" this information.

Obviously this is a book the banks would love to prohibit. Many powerful interests would love to suppress and "coverup" this information if they could. But fortunately it's still a free country. And if there's a way you can fight inflation with much bigger returns on your savings, you're entitled to know about it.

Now at last, I've made this inside information available to you through THE INSIDER'S MAILBOX. The cost to you is only $10.00, and you don't risk a single penny of that.

NO RISK GUARANTEE. YOU CAN'T LOSE ONE PENNY.

If my book, How To Rob Banks. Legally., hasn't more than paid for itself many times over in just 30 days, return it to me for a full money back refund.

"Whomever the lady is looking at will be the recipient of the floral arrangement on each table." The lady on our table was looking straight at me.

And so it has happened year after year, in one way or another, I have received a token.

This year, in 1974, my little granddaughter Luann and I entered a large parking lot full of cars to look for ours. When we found it there was a white carnation under the windshield wiper. I looked around. No other cars had flowers.

My granddaughter said, "Grandma! You have a secret admirer."

I answered, "Yes, honey, I know I have." — Denver, Colo.

HOSPITAL VISITOR

By Patricia Smith Kawakami

MY HEARING always has been acute and although the nurses whispered at the door of my four-bed ward I could hear enough to know I was very ill. Two bottles of fluid were draining into my arms intravenously. A severe kidney infection was taking its toll. The nurses took my blood pressure every five minutes. I had had infections before but never as serious as this bout in April 1962.

I shared the room at Salem Memorial Hospital, Salem, Ore., with a very ill older woman. Her moans upset and worried me.

One nurse asked, "Did you call her husband?"

"Yes, but he's not in his office," answered the other nurse.

"Well, try again. He needs to be here."

They left the room together. I tried to move my feet. It was about the only part of my body I could move without pain. But there was an obstruction on the side of the bed. I turned my head. Someone was sitting on my bed!

I saw a young girl perhaps 10 or 12

HOW I MADE A FORTUNE AT THE TRACK

The true story of Jimmy Davis, gambling pro who discovered the first proven method for winning at the track—INVESTMENT WAGERING

As told to Ken Martin

My interview revealed a fascinating—and highly successful individual. Jimmy D's story gives inspiration to millions!

Until 12 years ago I was one of the country's biggest Welsh gypsy "high rollers." I won big, lost big, went from rags to riches bet after bet. Then I discovered a method so fantastic, my winnings speak for themselves. Since I began investment wagering more than 12 years ago, I've made more money on some races than most professional gamblers make in a lifetime. What's more . . . it's so simple, I could teach investment wagering to you—in a short time!

Back in the old days, I had a ball! Loud clothes, flashy jewelry, gorgeous gals. What a life! I played every racetrack you could name. And I knew them all; the big stars, famous gamblers, names that still set your ears on fire! One thing about us high rollers—you could always trust another to come through when the chips were down. And believe me . . . when you gamble high and lose—you're really broke.

"Jimmy (King of the Hill) Davis, a colorful character from Atlanta who has become a millionaire through supremely judicious and intelligent wagering, was back at Miami race tracks last week." The Miami News May 14, 1974

So it was inevitable. I got tired of always being days away from my next loan. Win or lose, I had a family to support. My kids got older, needed more. Those high roller days started losing their spell.

But 12 years ago—lucky for me—things dramatically changed! I combined my 40 years racing experience and the secrets the pros leaked out, with the smarts of an old college friend. Our two brains . . . his computer . . . a couple of years testing . . . and I knew I had it. The method of betting that's made me a fortune. The one I call investment wagering.

FANTASTIC WINNINGS YEAR AFTER YEAR

• In Gulfstream, during the last year of the twin doubles, I won the International Twin Double Handicap Championship by hitting 9 twin doubles in 23 days, for profits that ranged from $642 to 17,000—National Police Gazette.

• On March 31, 1973 I won at Aqueduct with Passen Mood ($55 to win) in the fourth. With investment wagering this winner practically hit me between the eyes—it was that obvious.

• On October 5, 1974 at Calder in Miami on a $2.00 Trifecto . . . I won $1397.00! Investment wagering made it seem easy.

WHAT IS INVESTMENT WAGERING?

The first proven method that works at the track . . . any track, any time. You're actually investing your money like a financial manager. Only the profits are greater. And your money can be safer than in stocks. What's more, you bet what you want . . . earn as much as you need . . . week in, week out. What you make depends on how much you can bet. (This is a progressive method—based on best bets. But the best bets I mean are MY bets, not somebody elses'.) I have two main methods . . . for two kinds of action.

#1 FOR LIFETIME INCOME

That's for guys like me—retired or ready to retire (whether you're 25 or 65) who want to make a living at the track. You get a high constant profit on your betting investment . . . every week. Plus lots of action–7 horses every 2 days. And it's simple!

In fact, the beauty of this system is its simplicity. A good friend of mine said, "Sure it works for you, but an amateur would lose his shirt." So I sent this man's brother to Gulfstream last winter—with $5,000 and my method. He'd never bet on a horse in his life. He left Miami with $9,300—a profit of 86%. You get my point?

But #1 is no giveaway method. You have to spend some time—getting it down pat. Believe me—it's worth the time. From then on you'll need 1 minute a race to make whatever you want.

#2 FOR SAFE, STEADY EARNINGS

That's for guys who want even more safety —and a bit less action. It's for "saturday warriors" . . . out for a good time, and no chance of losing. If #2 is your choice, you're assured a safe, steady return . . . every week you play.

The Real Reason I'm Offering INVESTMENT WAGERING to You . . . Almost As A Gift!

Using INVESTMENT WAGERING has made me rich. And when a man comes to the end of this life, he likes to leave something behind that will be useful to other people. I love horses and racing, and INVESTMENT WAGERING made it possible for me to make big profits from something I love doing. Could any man ask for more out of life? I don't think so. Well, I got some bad news about my health recently; it turns out that I have a terminal illness and I'll be cashing in my chips soon. At first, I was shocked, but when I realized that I've made more money and had more fun in my life than most people, it made this tough news a little easier to take. It also made me want to leave a legacy of good luck to all you fellow horse players who haven't had my INVESTMENT WAGERING methods to help you enjoy life more. I've seen too many guys lose their shirts on systems they thought would win. I know my INVESTMENT WAGERING system works and will show up all those other so-called "winning systems". I'm sure of this because you can prove my methods are winners—before you bet a cent!

I'll take you by the hand (like a newborn babe) and show you—step by step—how to use both my methods. Play them on paper for a week or two—check them out before you make a bet. You must average 36% returns. Or else, send my methods back and I'll refund your money in full!

I'm confident you'll be convinced right away. Like me, you'll quickly discover how to use INVESTMENT WAGERING to live a happy, successful life. I don't need INVESTMENT WAGERING anymore, but you do! I think everyone deserves the best out of life . . . and the time to start is right now!

UNCONDITIONAL ONE-YEAR GUARANTEE

Investment Wagering Method #1 and Method #2 must bring you an average return of 36%. Otherwise, return the two methods within the next year for a full, unconditional refund. No questions asked.

I swear that all my statements made here are true.

James W. Davis

HERE'S WHAT AN EXPERT SAYS:

"In my forty years, I have never met a finer man nor found a better betting method. It's the best!"

JOHN KERNEY: Ex-editor Turf Magazine, Police Gazette, professional handicapper, racehorse owner and consultant.

HOW TO ORDER

My publishers didn't want me to make this offer. But now that I've got a terminal illness (Cancer) and only a short time to go, I want to share my secret of winning with you. You see, I only plan to sell a limited number of books. And I'll agree to send you my system only if you promise to give 10% of your first $1,000 of winnings to the Cancer Society.

6 Commercial St., Hicksville, N.Y. 11801

I enclose $ 9.95 plus .55 postage & handling) for Jimmy D's INVESTMENT WAGERING METHODS (#1 & #2). I must be completely satisfied with both—or I will return them within the next year for a full refund.

years old. She had long blonde hair drawn back behind her ears and wore a calico dress that came about halfway to her ankles. Her face was lightly freckled and her eyes were an intense green with black lashes. Her ankles were crossed and she swung her bare feet over the edge of the bed. I knew who she was; she was my paternal grandmother May James Smith, who had died many years before. As I looked at her I felt an ineffable sense of peace descend on me.

The door opened and the nurse returned. "Your husband is on his way to the hospital," she said. She came to the side of the bed and proceeded to take my blood pressure. She didn't seem to notice my visitor.

The figure sitting on the bed didn't move but sat serenely, still swinging her feet. The nurse left. The moans of the older woman no longer upset me. I knew somehow I would get well and go home to my five children.

In a few moments my husband Stanley Turner entered the room. I wanted to tell him about my visitor — but she was gone! I cautiously moved my feet to that side of the bed. Yes, she was gone. But I was all right; now I would get well.

"How are you feeling?" asked Stanley.

"I'm going to be well soon," I answered, knowing this was so and that it was connected in some way with my grandmother, in the figure of a child, sitting on my sickbed. — San Jose, Calif.

THEY WERE WAITING

By Anna L. Easterling
as told to Amy McNabb

WHEN MY husband John was hospitalized in June 1972 his symptoms indicated a heart attack. The tests were negative, however, so he was to be released from Santa Fe Hospital in Los Angeles the next afternoon at four o'clock.

That night I went to sleep thinking how well he looked and how happy I would be to have him home again. I had a dream in which I saw John's mother, father, brother and sister-in-law, all of whom are deceased, standing at the foot of my bed. They were smiling and seemed to beckon with outstretched arms to someone I could not see. Startled, I awoke and could not sleep till almost time to get up to go into Los Angeles to get John.

While I waited for his release the dream kept nagging my memory but I put it aside. John's papers did not come by four o'clock as expected and he insisted that I head for our home in Highland, Calif., before the freeway traffic got bad. I kissed him, left the room and drove the 60 miles home.

The phone was ringing when I got out of the car. Hurriedly I opened the door and rushed to the phone. The hospital was calling: John had died suddenly about the time I had entered the freeway!

I shall always believe I was forewarned of John's impending death. — San Bernardino, Calif.

IN HEAVEN AFTER ALL

By Dorothy McCamant

IN 1958 my sister Pauline was ill with cancer. After her condition was discovered her husband became quite religious. In fact, most of us thought he had become fanatical. He talked about religion constantly and was apt to get argumentative about it. Pauline became quite exasperated with him and finally, one time when I was visiting them, she told him so. He answered her by saying that if she didn't change her beliefs she would never get to heaven. She was really quite ill and this upset her and led to tears.

About a year from the time it was discovered she had cancer she died.

As children we always had gone to church and taken part in all church activities. She and I had attended many many meetings and I knew she was sincere. Her husband's attitude toward her had aggravated me to say the least. But after she passed away I could not forget the mean things he had said to her and I didn't really believe she was lost — yet there was that little doubt which I couldn't seem to shake off.

On the particular night in August 1959 that my strange experience took place I had put my three children to bed in the back bedroom and gone into the front room to my own bed. I always left a light on in the dining room which reflected faintly into my bedroom. I was lying on my side facing the wall with my back to the room when I suddenly felt someone tap me on the arm just below the shoulder. I had been in bed about 20 minutes, was still wide-awake and thought one of the kids had come into my room. I turned over expecting to see one of them and there was my sister hovering in the air at my side. I could see her only from the waist up as a sort of oval picture hanging in midair. There was a beautiful halo of all colors around her, beautiful beyond compare.

She did not speak aloud, as I remember, but somehow she told me she was happy where she was. I got the message that she was saved and had come back to let me know it. Perhaps where she is she knew there was a doubt in my mind and wanted to erase it. I felt very contented to see her there and I had no fear of her. She looked so real I reached out to touch her and she immediately vanished into thin air.

But I had the feeling she had given me the answer. Her smile, the sweetest I have ever seen on anyone's face anywhere, was proof that she is in heaven after all. — Wichita, Kans.

NEWS and REVIEWS

David Techter

FIGHTING BACK

IN THE September 1975 issue David St. Clair reported somewhat negatively on the attempt of California psychics to organize and fight the "fortune-telling" laws. The Rev. Barbara Bacon writes to say that the movement, renamed the International Association of Metaphysicians, is continuing and is in the process of drafting model legislation to permit the licensing of psychic practitioners and spiritual healers. I disagree with the precise tack they are taking and I think their new name is ridiculous but at least they are doing something (other than wringing their hands, which is what psychics usually do). The Reverend Bacon will be grateful for any help she can get, whether membership, legal assistance or fianancial aid. Interested readers may write her at 5655 Cedros Ave., Van Nuys, Calif. 91401.

During my recent visit to Minneapolis to address the Unitarian Universalist Psi Symposium (the UUPS will reprint my talk in forthcoming copies of their newsletter) I met Isaac Bonewits, until recently the editor of Gnostica. Isaac pointed out that I never have plugged his Aquarian Anti-Defamation League (Box 3720, Minneapolis, Minn. 55403). This organization is concerned with protecting the civil rights and reputations of pagans and followers of Wicca throughout the country. I always have felt he would get more support if he made more effort to appeal to the embattled members of the psychic community but apparently he has his hands full with what he is trying to do. (Not many psychics have had to fight off armed bands of Klan members as some inoffensive pagans in eastern Wisconsin have had to do recently!) Various attorneys cooperating with Isaac's AADL have succeeded in overturning fortune-telling laws in a number of communities and with more help I'm sure a lot more could be accomplished.

HAPPENING '75

FRANKLY, THE next big psychic fair at Chicago's McCormick Place is an experiment. I always have thought it should be possible to present a successful fair without exploiting either the public or the psychic readers and without paying excessive fees to "name" speakers brought in from outside. This is precisely the philosophy behind Happening '75 (P.O. Box 284, Highland Park, Ill. 60035). In addition to myself, the fair will feature a number of the reviewers on FATE's staff: J. Gordon Melton, Michael Zaeske, John Bisaha, Donald J. Mueller, Carole Doss and Richard Crowe (and a few more likely recruits). At least three different "tracks" of lectures will be presented continuously during both Saturday and Sunday (November 8 and 9, 1975) and all are included in the admission fee of $2.50 a day. To broaden the interest beyond the usual psychic fair offerings Happening '75 will present lectures on Fortean phenomena, UFOs and ancient astronauts, astrology, Eastern religions and yoga, humanistic psychology and spiritual healing. I shall let you know whether the experiment is successful.

COMMUNICATORS VIEW PSI

FOR ONLY the third time that I am aware of, a "conventional" scientific journal (that is, one not primarily concerned with parapsychology) has devoted part of an issue to a special symposium on psychic phenomena. (Previous instances have been special issues of the International Journal of Neuropsychiatry and of Corrective Psychiatry and Journal of Social Therapy.) The Winter 1975 issue of the Journal of Communication features a symposium on "Paranormal Communication" along with more conventional papers on such things as art photography and media coverage of Danish elections. (Reprints of the special section are available separately for $1.50 from: Journal of Communication, P.O. Box 13358, Philadelphia, Pa. 19101.)

All but two of the symposium papers are by prominent parapsychologists. After a brief introduction by Gardner Murphy, Charles Honorton sketches the controversy following Rhine's early research at Duke. Gertrude Schmeidler, Rex Stanford and William G. Braud discuss various factors that influence success (or lack of it) in laboratory experiments. Montague Ullman and Stanley Krippner report on the Maimonides dream experiments and Robert Van de Castle describes ESP among "primitive" peoples. Robert Morris discusses "Building Experimental Models;" essentially this is the same material contained in his presidential address to the Parapsychological Association.

The two contributors from the communications field both accept the reality of psi but differ in their approach. Philip Keezer points out the similarities between normal and paranormal communication despite the mystery of how the latter operates. Larry Gross disputes the claim that ESP is communication. His argument boils down to: "I define communication as the use of language and ESP does not involve language; therefore ESP is not communication." The effect is like the appendix on structural analysis at the end of Castaneda's first volume on Don Juan — an abrupt switch from interesting material to "academese" to impress fellow colleagues in the social sciences.

FATE readers may be familiar with most of the material from this symposium but it strikes me as rather nice coverage of the field for the intelligent layman. Also the symposium could be a useful way of sneaking parapsychology into more traditional social sciences courses. The journal notes that reprints are available "while the supply lasts." I suspect they will find the demand larger than they expected and perhaps the symposium material will be published in a more permanent form for classroom use.

OTHER REVIEWS

UFOs FROM BEHIND THE IRON CURTAIN by Ion Hobana and Julien Weverbergh, Bantam Books, New York, N.Y., 1975, 308 pages, $1.95 (paperback).

This carefully-done book performs a much needed service in surveying the UFO situation in eastern Europe, replacing sensational rumors. The authors demonstrate that UFO phenomena are universal. Russian, Polish and Hungarian sightings are not different from those in the United States or England except that after reading story after story of unexplained lights in the sky, one must ask: where are the landings, the contacts, the truly significant encounters?

I cannot believe there are no landings, contacts or encounters over there. Perhaps because of the hostile social and political climate it takes tremendous courage even to admit to seeing a puzzling light, let alone a piloted craft on the ground. Western UFOlogists will find most of the book rather old-fashioned but we must thank the authors for putting it together against considerable opposition. It is worth reading. — Jerome Clark.

Ever since the 1893 World Parliament of Religions in Chicago, Eastern religions have been making an impact on the American scene. In 1945, however, a new religious invasion from Japan began. Spurred by Japan's declaration of religious freedom, new peasant-led movements arose, mostly led by visionaries and psychics/mediums offering a message of hope for the coming New Age.

Ellwood's book selects five prominent "new religions" that now

WORDS FROM THE SOURCE compiled by Brad Steiger, Prentice-Hall, Englewood Cliffs, N.J., 1975, 168 pages, $6.95.

Louis Gittner of Orcas Island, Wash., is the psychic through whom comes the soft-spoken trance voice which identifies itself merely as the Source. The entity describes itself as a collective energy or force field whose express purpose is to teach Louis' followers how to expand their awareness and attain joy, harmony, peace and tranquility.

The subject matter of this "metaphysical anthology" covers a broad spectrum — the God concept, psychic abilities and development, meditation, visualization, astral travel, education, auras, cosmic color, reincarnation, Lemuria, health recipes, sex and preparing for the New Age.

The chapter on meditation is particularly good, describing and explaining different types of meditation. Where one method may not work for a given reader another method may be exactly what he needs. The health remedies also are interesting and contain primarily ingredients obtainable in any good grocery store. Most of the advice given seems sound, practical and easily applied.

disagree on many points. The Source flatly contradicts Jeane Dixon on the matter of the anti-Christ and the chapter on Jesus disagrees in part with other well-known psychics. Apparently until mankind reaches a state of full illumination such discrepancies are inevitable.

PARAPSYCHOLOGY, A CENTURY OF INQUIRY by D. Scott Rogo, Taplinger Publishing Co., New York, N. Y., 1975, 319 pages, $12.50.

Scott Rogo's latest book presents a scientific review of 100 years of research in the field and laboratory and of the men who made parapsychology what it is today. His excellent historical summary of psychic research covers many of the classic studies, cases, views and theories. In addition to the many aspects of ESP and PK — clairvoyance, precognition, retrocognition, mental and physical mediumship, psychokinesis, poltergeists and paranormal healing — he includes a chapter on "Psi, Death and Survival," which mentions hauntings, apparitions and out-of-body experiences, and one on "New Horizons in ESP Research," which deals with meditation, dreams, drugs and hypnosis.

The magnitude of the areas covered within the space of the book permits only a brief summary of each topic and only a mention of each investigator and theory but Rogo does an unbiased job of presenting the core of psychic research. I find the book an excellent introductory text for the student interested in traditional parapsychology and especially for use in the many

Do you have these gifts?

Are you different from the rest?

The world's games have always been meaningless for you. Although you've played along you never really fit in and enjoyed them like the others. Intuitively, without even realizing it, you've always been searching — longing for something more. Something the average person never thinks of. Ordinary answers are not enough to satisfy . . . your questions are deeper, more profound.

Many times you've wondered why this difference existed — at times even suffered because of it.

All evolved, advanced souls have felt the same at one time or another. Monastery of the Seven Rays, an ancient secret brotherhood of the Andes, numbers many among its members and friends. Your "differences" may in reality be a wonderful gift, one which has inspired you to seek out the real answers — to read this.

DEMON SPIRITS
Threaten the World?

In a gripping book describing 30 years of research, Dr. Claude A. Wickland has concluded:

- Many spirits possess the living demonically, causing much of the world's troubles.
- We are surrounded by thought influences of millions of discarnate beings who have not yet realized life's higher purposes.

BUT THERE IS HOPE!

Trained psychics can rescue victims of spirit possession — exorcising evil entities and helping confused spirits.
Dr. Wickland's book, "30 Years Among the Dead," was almost unobtainable here until we managed to import supplies from England.

PSYCHIC EXPLORATIONS by Edgar Mitchell, G. P. Putnam's Sons, Ney York, N. Y., 1974, 708 pages, $17.50.

To cover each of the 29 articles by leading psychic researchers would take an inordinate amount of space, so I must settle for a broad general survey of the book as a whole. Former astronaut Mitchell has performed a monumental task from his excellent introduction to his thought-provoking conclusion. Editor John White has provided an extensive glossary as well as a reference index to serve the student and researcher as well as the general reader.

In his introduction Mitchell pleads for a "cosmic consciousness" that will move man from his self-centered image to a more universal one. Psychic research with its many challenges, Mitchell declares, "is an avenue to the unconscious, a means of building greater wholes, that will make our knowledge wisdom, our love of power the power of love, and the universal man can then emerge."

The volume is organized into four sections. In the first, the history and current status of psychic research are mapped out by Martin Ebon, Alan Vaughan, Gertrude Schmeidler, Stanley Krippner, Rex Stanford, Douglas Dean, Helmut Schmidt and Rhea White. In the second part, the more adventurous aspects of current research are described by Robert Morris, Montague Ullman, Robert Van de Castle, Marcel Vogel (a replication of Backster's research), Jule Eisenbud, Henry Puharich, Charles Tart, Scott Rogo and William G.

Roll. (This last article was reprinted in two parts in the October and November 1974 issues of FATE.)

The last two sections cover trends which are of particular interest to Mitchell. "The Emergence of Paraphysics" includes articles by Thelma Moss, William Tiller, Harold Puthoff and Russell Targ, while the transpersonal psychology movement is discussed by Lawrence LeShan, Jean Houston, Robert Masters, Charles Honorton and Willis Harmon. What a heady, sumptuous mental menu!

In his conclusion Mitchell argues, "The preceding chapters have convincingly demonstrated that the psychic event is a reality and the work of psychic researchers is careful and credible. . . . These chapters present a challenge for science that can no longer be ignored, avoided or denied. . . . The remaining resistance to acceptance of the evidence is strictly a matter of entrenched belief structure."

This important book of psychic exploration is recommended for everyone interested in the farther horizons of thought. Mitchell and his colleagues will help others to learn more of the infinite potentials of man's mind and spirit. — James Cope Crosson.

terest is in some unfamiliar European UFO reports and in Rehn's outspoken prejudices.

Rehn cheerfully takes on Nobel laureates who disbelieve in extraterrestrial life, flatly disagrees with the theories of John Keel ("This new view of UFOs is a mixture of mysticism, magic and metaphysics. . . ."), says UFOs are spacecraft and their occupants either living entities or "biological robots," believes the governments of the world know UFOs are spacecraft but are conspiring with the USAF and/or the CIA to suppress this knowledge and calls for an international interdisciplinary UFO study program (funded of course with lots of money).

Unfortunately none of this is new. We've heard it all before and most of the book simply replows ground familiar to American and English researchers. It is all dreadfully dull, although this could be the fault of the translator.

Despite my negative remarks, the book might have value for persons just becoming familiar with UFOs, just as Keyhoe's pioneering works served us old-timers 25 years ago. For this reason your library should acquire a copy. — George W. Earley.

Tucked away in Texas is a spirited and intelligent group of explorers who have developed the AUM around resident psychic Ray Stanford. I find Stanford's talents as exciting and encouraging to an inner-oriented individual as Darwin's theories were to seekers of universal order 100 years ago. A modern-day Cayce-type mystic, Stanford has attracted many fine talents interested in such topics as UFO communication, psychic archaeology, archetypal psychology and interpretation of the Marian apparitions. Much of the knowledge, prediction and counsel come through either Stanford's "Source" or some dozen evolved Brothers, each with a distinctive personality, message and dialect. Tapes include the Source, Kuthumi and Archangel Michael as well as Stanford (not in trance) and AUM president Dwight Pryor. The easiest way to order is to write AUM for its list. The best deal is the complete set with a saving of 20 percent.—Donald Mueller.

THE MOTHMAN PROPHECIES by John A. Keel, Saturday Review Press, New York, N. Y., 1975, 269 pages, $7.95.

Those readers familiar with Keel's previous books on UFOs and related topics are aware that his theories/conclusions are quite controversial. This present volume is not different. In the main it deals with Keel's 1966-67 investigators in West Virginia. In addition to UFOs and "Men in Black" Keel has collected reports of "Mothman," a winged man-like figure seen by numerous witnesses in the Ohio River Valley.

Going beyond the appearances of unearthly objects and beings, Keel narrates a journey through what he terms "manipulated reality." He sees "no evidence of any kind to support the idea that we are entertaining shy strangers from some other galaxy." To him, UFOs are not "real in the sense that a 747 airliner is real. They are transmogrifications of energy under the control of some unknown extradimensional intelligence." This "ultradimensional" intelligence wants us to believe in magnificent extraterrestrial craft and god-like beings from the stars, says Keel. Belief, then, is the great enemy. Divorce yourself from beliefs of all kinds — angels, devils, fairies, spacemen or whatever — in order to comprehend the workings of "The Phenomenon."

Perhaps Keel's ideas and admonitions have some merit as a philosophical exercise. But anyone familiar with the bulk of UFO evidence must have serious reservations about such musings. They somehow seem far removed from the "patterns" evident in UFO reports. Of course I will be accused of "reinforcing my belief structure" by making such comments but I am not convinced Keel has "psyched out" The Phenomenon.

OTHER WORLDS, OTHER UNIVERSES edited by Brad Steiger and John White, Doubleday & Co., Garden City, N.Y., 1975, $7.95.

Steiger and White have rendered a valuable service to the interested reader by collecting the various viewpoints contained in this volume. The 16 known scholars in philosophy, science fiction, astrophysics, parapsychology and yoga include Luis Navia, Timothy Leary, David Spangler, D. Scott Rogo, Arthur Ford, Rudolf Steiner and Ivan Sanderson. A rare combination of orthodox science and metaphysics gives us an exciting holistic view of our ever-changing reality.

In a succinct thought-provoking introduction Steiger and White set the proper framework for understanding each section of the book as part of the total search. The five main divisions deal with the search for extraterrestrial life, the prehistory of the earth, a look at UFOs, the astral plane and beyond, and return to the Godhead.

This book is for everyone unafraid to push back the limiting boundaries of our history, reverse the direction of scientific determinism and open their minds to impossible possibilities. As new breakthroughs come rushing at us from all sides we must learn to welcome alterations in our reality structure rather than panic or withdraw. With the volume of published material flooding the market distillations of this kind are invaluable to explorers of human knowledge. Steiger and White are just the right authors to compile such collections and I sincerely hope we will see more. — Paul Severson.

NEW "OBLIQUE WING" CRAFT

The ancient Egyptian "bird model" discussed by Ivan T. Sanderson ("The Ancients Had Airplanes" May 1975 FATE) may be related to the conception that the Pharaoh was a manifestation of Horus, the sky god. Horus took the form of a falcon, a bird characterized by its long pointed wings and its capacity for achieving high speed in flight.

The downward-pointing nose and the pointed wings of Sanderson's bird model not only are reminiscent of the falcon but also have some features in common with the unusual "oblique wing" aircraft now under NASA's consideration (see cut). The wing can be inclined at an angle to the body for flight at speeds up to about Mach 1.2 (1.2 times the speed of sound). For takeoff and landing and for flights at relatively low speeds the wing would be set at right angles to the body as in the bird model.

At a latitude of 30 degrees (the latitude of Giza and Cairo, Egypt) an aircraft flying due west at Mach 1.37 would exactly pace the rotation of the earth and its atmosphere but in the opposite direction so that the sun would appear to be fixed in the sky when viewed from the aircraft. Do we have here the foundation of the ancient Egyptian conception that the sun crossed the heavens in a boat and the association of the Pharoah with the sky god? — Stuart W. Greenwood, College Park, Md.

ton wrote, ". . . his mental faculties were unimpaired. He recovered completely, except for the loss of the sight in one eye."

In my mind's eye I saw a troubled Phineas Gage, a grotesque face and a mouth shouting profanities. This bothered me so much that I did some research. Learning that the doctor who treated Gage after the accident was J. M. Harlow, I searched the medical records for the year 1847, the date given by Remington. It turned out that the accident actually occurred on September 13, 1848. Dr. Harlow wrote a lengthy description of the case titled "Recovery from the passage of an iron bar through the head," published in the Massachusetts Medical Society journal in 1868. Dr. Harlow's comments are at variance with Mr. Remington's in the following excerpt:

"He (Gage) is fitful, irreverent, indulging at times in the grossest profanity (which was not previously his custom), manifesting but little deference for his fellows, impatient of restraint or advice when it conflicts with his desires, at times pertinaciously obstinate yet capricious and vacillating, devising many plans of future operations which are no sooner arranged than they are abandoned in turn for others. . . . His mind is radically changed, so decidedly that his friends and acquaintances said he was 'no longer Gage.' "

I never have considered myself psychic before this experience but it seems I can "see" things better in my mind than some can in their research. — Joel R. Cunningham, Mifflintown, Pa.

NOT SO GOOD AT PHYSICS

No doubt FATE editors are good at metaphysics but maybe not quite so good at physics.

In David Techter's article "Sunken Treasure!" in the June 1975 issue of FATE an amazing statement appears — that gold and silver are poor conductors of electricity. If you check that with any electrical engineer you will find that silver has the highest conductivity of any metal. — George Wilton, New York, N.Y.

THE AUTHOR REPLIES:

Nowhere in the paragraph Mr. Wilton criticizes is there reference to electrical conduction. While silver may be an excellent conductor of electricity, it does not respond to a magnetometer, being a poor conductor of magnetism. — David Techter.

THE SOUND OF ECTOPLASM

During May 1975, Wesley Frank and I succeeded in recording low-amplitude raps under conditions which exclude both fraud and error. Some time ago I postulated the existence of raps which by their nature would be of such low amplitude as to demand extremely high amplification and a tape recorder to reveal their presence. I also assumed that these raps were related to low-amplitude tape-recorded voices. I consider that these raps are created by an "ectoplasmic mechanism" and are just as objective in their nature as are the tape-recorded voices. It is gratifying that experimental studies have verified my theoretical "prediction."

I might also predict that the "official" world of parapsychology will ignore the existence of these raps just as it has ignored low-amplitude tape-recorded voices. — Raymond Bayless, Los Angeles, Calif.

pori Ling" nor am I, Roy Alexander, the Director of the Mission, any relation to Chen.

We deplore the use of the Holy Dharma by Chen, et al., for their own profit and benefit and we hope that the public will not be misled into judging Tibetan Buddhism by the actions of these persons.

A true lama never would charge for aid given to the sick and suffering. Also, needless to say, he would never possess firearms.

In answer to Kenneth S. Gusé's letter (June 1975 FATE) the Red Cap sect was founded by Guru Padma Sambhava in the Eighth Century, not the 14th, and it was the Gelug-pa under the guidance of the reformer Tsong-ka-pa that broke away. The Red Caps (i.e., Nyingma, Kargyut-pa, Sakya-pa, etc.) have not degenerated into Bön practices. To the contrary, the Bön-pa have adopted some of the humanizing influences of Buddhism.

Finally, the Dug-pa are not sorcerers. Mr. Gusé is confusing the Tibetan word Dub-thob with Dug-pa. Dub-thob, in some instances, may be translated as "magician" but normally it means "enlightened one."

Anyone desiring further clarification of our position on these matters or Buddhism in general may write to me.— The Rev. Roy C. Alexander, Director, American Buddhist Mission, P.O. Box 536, Atlantic Beach, Fla. 32233.

WITCH POWER

I am told that during World War II, when Hitler planned to invade England, the English Wicca gathered and by joining their psychic strengths psychically willed Hitler not to come. This was also said to have been done during the reign of Queen Elizabeth I when England was faced with imminent threat of Spanish invasion.

Now, in our time, the world's weather patterns are changing. The rainfall belts have begun a southward drift. Most of the continental masses are in the north; the farther south, the less land. This means as the months go by that more rain is falling at sea, less on land. The result has been massive drought in Africa and consequent famine. People are dying of starvation by the thousands.

Now, weather magick is an old art. I hear many occultists claiming they are able practitioners of magick but I have yet to see it. I propose that all students of magick and master practitioners join together (a) to work a change in the weather patterns so Africa once more has rain, and (b) to bring in cash, food and medical supplies to the peoples of famine-stricken lands to tide them over until better crops come in.

Until the day I see so-called occultists working together to do something to better the world, I will remain quite cynical about both the efficacy and reality of magick. — Yael Ruth Dragwyla, Santa Barbara, Calif.

THE TELEPATHY GAME

Telepathy can be practiced and played as a game. During World War II my sister met a soldier who was interested in ESP. He would stand behind a person with one hand on that person's back and with the other hand he would point in some direction. The person he was touching would try to guess in which direction he was pointing. My daughter, who was about 10 years old at that time, would hit four times out of five. — Micky Lee, Kerens, W.Va.

THE WEEPING MADONNA

A strange thing happened after a fire occurred in my home. You know how fires are. They attract folks. Neighbors were all over the place helping the family check damages after the firemen had left.

When I asked about a statue of the Virgin Mary of which I am very fond a neighbor girl went in to find it for me. When she came out and handed the Madonna to me, I saw immediately that a tear was rolling down the tiny cheek. I cried, "She is weeping!"

I turned her and saw another tear standing in her other eye. The neighbor girl and I were astonished. If moisture somehow got onto the statue why would it have come only from her eyes in the form of tears? And why were the tears so tiny, so appropriate to her size? — Jessie Hindman, Kelso, Wash.

UFOs IN CAPTIVITY

On a Saturday morning sometime between October 1974 and January 1975 there was a news report that the air force had one or two UFOs in a hangar where they were being studied. The news came over the radio in the Shippensburg, Pa., area.

If any FATE reader knows anything about this I would like to hear the details. — Richard P. Stark, R.D. No. 4, Box 270, Shippensburg, Pa. 17257.

DIFFERENT FROM "NORMAL"?

As psychics and serious seekers of occult knowledge we would like to enlist FATE's aid in putting an end to a potentially dangerous theory: that people who have a pronounced degree of psychic ability are either in the control of some unspecified alien power or are a separate race, evolving in a different manner than "normal."

We cannot overemphasize the derogatory effect that a widespread acceptance of this concept would have. — James Dahlquist, TEM — The Evolving Mind, Woodland, Calif.

UFO CHASE OVER NEW MEXICO

A few minutes after 7:00 P.M. on January 16, 1975, radar units at Kirtland Air Force Base south of Albuquerque, N. Mex., picked up a UFO approaching from the south. Traveling north at 800 to 1,000 miles an hour, the UFO would pass over Albuquerque within a few minutes.

A jet took off from Kirtland AFB at 7:15 P.M. and as it lifted off the runway the pilot hit its afterburners (which is prohibited in peacetime except in an emergency). At that moment the UFO was passing over the southeasternmost limits of Albuquerque. The jet pulled in behind the UFO and immediately the UFO executed a right angle turn and changed to a westerly course. The pilot executed as tight a turn as the jet would make, then cut back onto the course of the UFO. Together they passed over downtown Albuquerque, the UFO gradually outdistancing the jet.

At the time the jet was leaving the runway I was coming out of the recreational center at Four Hills Mobile Home Park which is located near the end of the Kirtland runway. I heard the jet cut in its afterburners and knowing this is prohibited, I was alerted that something unusual was happening in the sky.

I looked up to see a white light with a pale yellowish cast traveling at high speed on a northerly course over the eastern part of Albuquerque. As I watched, the jet pulled in behind the UFO and I saw the UFO execute the right-angle turn which carried it out of reach of the jet.

The UFO was smaller than the pursuing jet and its pale yellowish white light was in marked contrast to the brilliant red flashing light on the jet's underside. From the ground the UFO looked like a spherical light while the jet was easily identifiable by its array of lights.

I watched the two objects until they vanished over the western horizon. I have no idea what the object was but I know the air force was immensely interested in its presence in the skies over New Mexico.—Randall C. Hecker, Sandia Park, N. Mex.

IN THE BUS STATION

One night several months ago a friend came to our house weeping. She told us that her mother and dad had had a fight and her mother had left and no one knew where she was.

While she was talking I sort of "went inside me" to get a "feeling" about her mother. The only thing I could get was a feeling of "quiet" so I said, "She's O.K. Forget it." When I told the daughter this she calmed down a little but about five minutes later she became agitated again. I repeated the "going inside" and came up with the same feeling. Our friend soon left and a few days later her mother was located, safe and sound.

REPORT FROM THE READERS

But what flipped me is what happened when the mother came home. She related that she had gone to a bus depot, one that I didn't even know about. While she was waiting for the bus to leave she said that I had walked in, looked at her, turned around and gone out again. She sat for about five minutes and then I came back in, looked at her again, then left.

The woman who ran the bus depot had her back to the door and couldn't possibly have seen me; yet she asked my friend's mother, "What did that gentleman want?"

I knew nothing of all this until the mother and daughter told my wife and me. The mother correctly described the clothes I was wearing and the time she had seen me coincided with her daughter's coming to our house.

Is it possible for someone to do this sort of thing and not know it? Is there anyone who can explain it or help me remember what I do and where I go? — Ray E. Goodwin, Fernley, Nev.

LIFE IN OTHER WORLDS

Trying to prove that life goes on in other worlds and times is worthwhile but one can only know this if one remembers. As a small child I remembered my past life, particularly my death at the age of 10. Furthermore, I had a boy cousin who remembered the same things I did and we both wanted to go back. He did return — he died — at the age of nine after telling me he was going.

After he died I forgot much of this but when I grew up and was practicing yoga I found the way back again and remembered things I had forgotten. I wrote this poem at that time:

There was a gulf when I was three.
It stood between the world and me.
The bridges roundabout
Were always out.
I found a place where fairies passed
And I was learning magic fast;
Then Papa fixed the gate
I couldn't ever break.
I was nettled by the fact of me
Being not the me that I should be.
I was so small,
I should have been so tall.
Knowing things and places, I could have talked for long
But they said, "Hush, Baby," and turned their talking on.
My notions
Were lost motions.
Mamma sometimes cried when I told
of Jot and Tittle.
I learned to treat her easy because

THE HIERONYMUS MACHINE

The Hieronymus machine is a remarkable piece of psionic instrumentation which combines electronics and one's psychic abilities to analyze substances, exterminate insects and influence matter in many ways. The device was constructed and patented in 1949 by Thomas Galen Hieronymus.

Can any FATE reader tell me where I might purchase a preassembled Hieronymus machine? — Anthony Bragaglia, 3118 King St., Endwell, N.Y. 13760.

TELEPORTATION, ANYONE?

I am working on a research project involving teleportation. The end result will be a definitive book on the subject.

I believe it is likely that some men and women have a peculiar psychic makeup which permits them to teleport, or travel instantaneously, between points on this plane of reality. There have been numerous well-authenticated cases of both objects and people disappearing only to reappear thousands of miles away.

I would like to hear from any FATE readers who have had personal experiences with teleportation. — Steve Yankee, P.O. Box 361, Decorah, Iowa 52101.

WHICH CAME FIRST?

The May 1975 issue of FATE contains an article by Dr. Bernard Green titled "Create Your Own Future." Throughout his writing I find no reference to material that has been on record for at least 25 years. Why does he not give credit to the author who originally brought forth this data, L. Ron Hubbard? I am not a Scientologist but I have followed these writings since Dianetics first came out. The theories, technologies and postulates in Dr. Green's article are much like those taught by Hubbard and his schools. Why not give credit where credit is due? The statements of Dr. Green are almost word for word the material I have read before. — Howard R. Darling, Williamstown, Mass.

MUTILATIONS IN PUERTO RICO

In the western and northern part of Puerto Rico we have been experiencing mysterious deaths of chickens, cattle, pigs and other animals. They are bled to death expertly by something or someone who makes no noise and leaves no trace.

I recall that you have made repeated references to similar killings and that usually some part of the anatomy of the animal is missing. Here in Puerto Rico, an ear or some other part has been cut off. You have mentioned that no clues have been found to the killings in the United States. So far no clue has been found here in Puerto Rico. — Mickey Miranda, Hato Ray, P.R.

FASTER THAN OUIJA BOARD!

Smooth-rolling ball bearings speed flow of automatic writing—without awkward pauses.

THE PLANCHETTE

Beautifully hand-crafted of smooth wood. Wood-resin polish gives high lustre.

Many experienced automatic writers learned with a planchette, and still find it the only way to obtain manifestations. Once you have acquired the gift, you will agree that the planchette is far superior to the Ouija Board. It is particularly favored by those who prefer to work in meditative solitude.

HOW THE PLANCHETTE WORKS:
Specially-fitted pencil forms one leg of planchette, the other two rolling free on ball bearings. These ball bearings permit the slightest indication of movement to take effect, the tiniest wisp of pressure transmitted through your hand. Only a superior product, an authentic psychic appliance, could have this expensive ballbearing feature. Complete instructions for use of the planchette, as well as for its care and protection, are included with this advanced psychic instrument.

∞ Even terminal cancer can be cured, claims Dr. Carl Simonton, whose treatment involving attitude and meditation has produced an impressive number of healings.

∞ Kundalini is the driving force behind human evolution and human genius, asserts Gopi Krishna. John White reviews this Indian mystic's 40-year search for evidence that supports his theory.

∞ Has Kirlian photography lost its halo? An active researcher explains why he is skeptical of most of the claims made for this electrophotographic technique.
