OUR SIXTEENTH VOLUME.

A FEW remarks may not be considered out of place in our present number. We have this week entered on our Sixteenth Volume, and as the horizon before us seems tolerably clear, we have no reason to doubt that, so far as human anticipations appear to be realisable, we shall, in due course, bring it to a completion, and with it the eighth year of our existence. The period of that existence has not been entirely uneventful. It embraces nearly the whole of the Prince of Wales's Grand Mastership, and, as far as the activity and numerical strength of the Craft are concerned, the most prosperous period in the annals of our Fraternity. It is no doubt due to the great interest exhibited by all classes in the memorable Installation at the Royal Albert Hall of His Royal Highness as Grand Master that Freemasonry is indebted for its greater popularity, its large accession of strength, and above all, the increased resources which have been placed at the disposition of our three Institutions. As regards ourselves, the more immediate consequence of this prosperity is that, while our progress has not been unattended by difficulties, we have nevertheless found it easier than we can imagine it would have been in ordinary circumstances. As we have said on previous occasions of a similar character, we have the satisfaction of knowing that we have been able to retain the support of a majority of our earliest friends and constituents. We have largely added to the number of those friends, and though, as in the usual ups and downs of journalism, we have failed to give satisfaction to all our readers, we have a consolation for this inevitable failure, that we have been able to go as far as other journals in accomplishing the impossible. As regards the future, we shall strive to follow in the path we have laid down for ourselves from the beginning. We shall observe the same rigid impartiality in dealing with questions as they may arise. If we think a particular policy is wholly objectionable, or should be modified, we shall not hesitate to say so firmly, but we trust, with that courtesy which it behoves a Masonic journal in particular, to observe on all occasions and towards everybody. We shall continue to lay the same stress, as heretofore, on the necessity for keeping up our Institutions at their present strength, and in their present state of efficiency. We believe it will be well for them if they are content to remain, for some time to come at all events, at their present strength; but if other counsels prevail, and that strength is increased, we shall simply exert ourselves with, if possible, a greater amount of zeal on their behalf. In short, our policy will remain unchanged; and, that being so, we feel we may, not without reason, look forward to a continuance of that approval and support which has been so kindly extended to us in the past.

A COMPLEX QUESTION.

OUR opinion has been asked as to one or two questions which have arisen out of a case of some delicacy, and even greater complexity. The facts are as follow: At the installation meeting of the Doric Lodge, No. 316, Toronto, on the roll of Grand Lodge, Canada, a certain brother proposed for initiation a gentleman with whom, for eight years, he had been in almost daily intercourse, and who had been nearly ten years in his then position. The proposition was, in due course, submitted to the Committee of General Purposes, and reported upon favourably. When, however, the next regular meeting of the Lodge was held, the candidate in question was one of three out of four gentlemen who were blackballed, and our correspondent suggests that this may have happened either because he had refused to lend money to a certain brother of the Lodge, who had borrowed two separate sums of a third brother and not repaid them, or because the said brother to whom he had refused the loan had had a candidate of his own blackballed at a previous meeting. With these surmises, however, which never can be anything else than surmises, we have nothing whatever to do. What made the rejection of our communicant's friend the more conspicuous was the fact that, as the W.M. of the Doric Lodge remarked, the Worshipful Master of the St. George's Lodge, Toronto, No. 367 on the roll of Grand Lodge, Canada, had asked permission to initiate the candidate. So far all is clear; but henceforth we find ourselves in some difficult circumstances. It happened about this time that the W.M. elect of St. George's Lodge, Montreal, which stands No. 440 on the roll of Grand Lodge England, and is one of three Lodges which since the separation of Canada and England, have elected to remain under the banner of the latter, took up his residence at Toronto, whence, at the appointed time, he travelled to Montreal—a distance of 333 miles—in order to be installed in the chair of K.S. This brother and another had both been present in the aforesaid Doric Lodge, Toronto, at the blackballing of our friend's candidate, and we presume in consequence of this, the rejected of the Doric Lodge, Toronto, made application to St. George's, Montreal, English Constitution, for initiation, being supported by "the recommendation of the Worshipful Master" of the latter. Our correspondent was applied to as to character, and his report being considered satisfactory, the applicant was balloted for and accepted, and on the 25th April was initiated into the First Degree in the said St. George's Lodge, Montreal. So far again, all is clear, and so likewise is the next step in the proceedings, namely, that the newly-initiated member of St. George's, Montreal, No. 440, English Constitution, presented himself for acceptance into the degree of Fellow Craft at the next regular meeting of the St. George's Lodge, No. 367, Canadian Constitution, but was notified by the Worshipful Master that the District Deputy Grand Master had advised him not to pass the newly-fledged English E.A.P. without "very careful consideration" of the circumstances.

These are the facts of the case. Let us now pass to the questions on which our correspondent requests us to give him information. These questions he bases on certain extracts from the Constitutions of the Grand Lodge of Canada, and for greater convenience, as well as to place matters in the clearest possible light before our readers, we shall combine, in the order of their occurrence, extract, question, and our answer.

(1) Our correspondent, quoting Article 7, "Of Proposing Candidates," from the said Constitutions, points out that "No Person shall be made a Mason or admitted a member of a Lodge, if, on the ballot, two black balls shall appear against him"; and he asks, "Do the words (a Lodge) refer to all the Lodges of every jurisdiction, or only to those in the particular"—that is, the Canadian—"jurisdiction?" To this our answer is to "those of the Canadian jurisdiction only," and our reason for this is clear; the Grand Lodge of Canada has no authority whatever outside its own jurisdiction.

Digitized by Google

(2) He then quotes from Article 17, "Of Private Lodges": "No Lodge shall, on any pretence, make more than five new brothers in one day, nor until they have been balloted for and approved; nor can a rejected applicant for admission be balloted for again in the same or any other Lodge within twelve months from the time of such rejection." On this he asks, "Do the italicised words refer to any other Lodge in another jurisdiction?" to which, and for the same reason as before, we reply, "Most decidedly not."

(3) Article 23, "Of proposing Members," he tells us, lays it down that, "No Lodge shall initiate a candidate whose residence is nearer the jurisdiction of another Lodge, unless by dispensation of the Grand Master," and he explains, "the jurisdiction extends in every direction halfway to the nearest Lodge." With reference to this he is desirous of knowing if "the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Canada extends to the jurisdiction of a Lodge in this country working under a warrant from the Grand Lodge of England?" to which the only reply it is in our power to give is, "Certainly not." Grand Lodge of Canada has already formally and officially recognised the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of England over certain Lodges in Montreal, of which the St. George's, No. 440, is one.

(4) Passing over the next query, which is virtually the same as the one immediately foregoing, only expressed in somewhat different language, we come to Article 4 "Of Proposing Members," which is to the following effect: "In cases of emergency, the following alteration as to the mode of proposing a candidate is allowed. Any two members of a Lodge may transmit, in writing, to the Master the usual declaration of any candidate whom they wish to propose, and the circumstances which cause the emergency; and the Master, if the emergency be proper, shall issue a notice to every member,—appoint a Committee—summons the Lodge to meet at a period of not less than seven clear days from issue of summons for the purpose of balloting for the candidate; and, if the candidate be then approved, he may be initiated in the first degree of Masonry." Premising that we are not responsible for the accurate wording of this or previous or following excerpts from the Canadian Constitutions, we may state that our correspondent's inquiry in this case takes the form of a statement to the effect that what was required was duly carried out, and our one and only remark in consequence is, that this compliance with a law which appears to be common to both the English and Canadian Constitutions is obviously a matter for sincere congratulation.

(5) The query that follows is substantially the same with No. 2, and concerns the time that must elapse between the rejection of a candidate and the renewal of his application form.

(6) We are told that Article 7, "Of Members and their duties," is to this effect: "All differences between, or complaints of, members that cannot be accommodated privately, or in some regular Lodge, shall be reduced into writing and delivered to the Grand Secretary, who shall lay them before the Grand Master, District Deputy Grand Master, or Board of General Purposes. After investigation, adjudication shall be made, as shall be authorised by the Bye-Laws and regulations of Masonry. We are here told that nothing, as laid down by this article 7, has been done, and, we are asked—if we rightly understand the wording of the question—whether, in the event of its not not being completed within a given time, anything can be brought up or done to debar the brother, to whose rejection in a Toronto Lodge, Canada Constitution, and initiation in a Montreal Lodge under the English Constitution, we are indebted for the origin of these difficulties, from the exercise of his rights and privileges as a Mason. We reply, (a) "As far as we can judge from the premises, there is nothing whatever in the shape of an obstacle to the Brother's exercise of his rights and privileges in his own Lodge." (b) "Canada has formally recognised the English Lodge of which he is a member, and among his rights and privileges is that of visiting other Lodges, if properly vouched for;" but (c) "A Brother who has, even unintentionally, slighted the self-respect of the Grand Lodge within whose territorial jurisdiction he resides, by offering himself as a candidate for acceptance into a Lodge outside that jurisdiction, cannot, in reason, expect to be made welcome, much less to have degrees conferred upon him, in one of its subordinate Lodges."

Before quitting the subject we will remark that the circumstances as laid before us appear to be most unfortunate, nor can we imagine any thing more calculated to promote the elements of discord between the Lodges in two contiguous, but independent, jurisdictions than for a candidate who has been rejected in one to apply for admission into another, especially when he resides in the former, and at a distance of over 300 miles from the locality of his Lodge in the latter. We will not go so far as to say that, in the circumstances, he has been guilty of a legal wrong—the answers we have given to our correspondent's questions are sufficient to dispose of any intention on our part to lay down such a proposition. Yet we cannot but express our belief that he has been guilty of a very grave indiscretion, more especially when we take into account the extreme sensitiveness with which the American Grand Lodges regard this question of jurisdiction.

MUNICIPALITY AND MASONRY.

THE walls of the grand old City Guildhall and its precincts have resounded with unusual scenes of festivity and happiness within the past few days; but we question if any of them have afforded more solid and abiding satisfaction to our worthy Bro. the Lord Mayor, and Grand Junior Warden of England, than that in which he participated on Monday evening last at the Guildhall Tavern. It is not long since the laudable idea was conceived that, taking into consideration the number of brethren who are, in a variety of ways, connected with the work of the Corporation of the City of London, nothing could be more conducive to their fraternal comfort and convenience than to establish a Lodge within hail of the grand historic precincts from which radiate the powers and functions of the local government of the City. Accordingly, steps in this direction were taken, and we believe we are correct in stating that amongst those who assisted most zealously in the initiatory stages were the present Grand Secretary, the President of the Board of General Purposes, and other prominent and distinguished members of Grand Lodge. Under such robust auspices, it was no wonder that the Alliance Lodge, No. 1827, should have made rapid and healthy progress, and have taken its stand so proudly and prominently amongst the Lodges in the metropolis. Nor can we be surprised that, having regard to the aspirants for office, among the pick and cream of the professional and legal elements which hover around the Guildhall, the working of the Lodge should have attained a standard of excellence but very rarely approached elsewhere. It is not our province, however, here to speak, even in general terms, of the perfection attained by a united band of brethren whose "local habitation" may be said to be yet hardly matured. The immediate occasion for these lines is to congratulate them upon the pre-eminent success which crowned their efforts on Monday evening, when they received within their hospitable circle the eminent Brother who now so ably and so happily fills the post of the highest dignity in the City of London. Seldom has a Lodge been so profusely honoured by the attendance of Grand Officers as on the occasion to which we refer. The daïs of the Lodge-room and the upper tiers at the banquet table were ablaze with a wealth of purple, and resplendent with jewels, and the whole scene was one of the most gratifying nature. But most pleasing of all was it to observe the hearty unity and cordial sentiment which actuated the brethren in their reception of the Chief Magistrate of the City, on whom our beloved Sovereign has recently conferred such proud distinctions. We venture to believe that Sir J. Whittaker Ellis will not soon forget the hearty grip of the hand with which he was received by the brethren of the Alliance, and that he was actuated by no mere after-dinner courtesy when he remarked that "amongst the many honours I have had poured upon me during the last few months there is not one I value more highly than that of being elected Junior Grand Warden of the Grand Lodge of England." The hearty and spontaneous welcome accorded to his Lordship was a charming feature in a gathering which was very much more numerous than could reasonably have been expected on a sultry afternoon in June. Even with the more than ordinarily adequate accommodation afforded at the Guildhall Tavern—the home of so many Masonic families—its resources were taxed to the utmost in order to find room for the large and distinguished company who sought admission to the Lodge-room. It was necessary, in consequence of many of the brethren having other engagements later in the evening, that the meeting should be called for an early hour, for in addition to the work set down on the "emergency" agenda, the Lord Mayor and several of his friends were to take part in scenes of fresh enjoyment, for which the preparations had been just completed, within the Guildhall itself. A grand ball given by the Chief Magistrate of London to the Mayors and Mayoresses of the provincial towns, without the Lord Mayor being present, would have afforded a striking illustration of the play of Hamlet, minus the Prince of Denmark. Accordingly, Bro. Frank Green, who has the honour of presiding over the Alliance Lodge as its Worshipful Master this year, fixed four o'clock as the time for labour, which consisted of electing, as a joining member, Bro. the Rev. Joseph Henry Smith, P.M. 279, Past Provincial Grand Chaplain of Leicestershire and Rutland, who had been proposed by Bro. Sir John B. Monckton P.M. and Town Clerk to the Corporation. The only other item on the paper was that of passing Brother Edward Thomas Rodney Wilde to the sublime degree, and it would be only fulsome adulation on our part to say that the work performed by the Master, assisted by his excellent Wardens (Bros. H. Wildey Wright, the well-known barrister, and G. W. Brown), was of the most perfect and satisfactory character. At six o'clock there was a whisper that the Lord Mayor had arrived, and presently his Lordship entered the Lodge-room, and advancing to the Wor. Master, shook hands with him heartily and took his seat on the right of the chair upon the daïs. He was saluted with due honours as Junior Grand Warden of England, and the business portion of the meeting concluded with an extraordinary number of hearty good wishes.

The banquet, which took place subsequently, in the gilded throne-room of the hotel, was a pattern of culinary excellence, brightness, and elegance. With such a number of visitors as to warrant the observation which fell from the Worshipful Master later in the evening, that they so "bewildered" the Tyler that he was unable to give a complete record of them, it was a difficult task to dispose of them satisfactorily; but with the utmost tact and ability, the worthy Secretary of the Lodge, Bro. Joseph E. Turner, contrived to put all the square men into square places, and thus accomplished the almost impossible task of pleasing everybody. Under such circumstances the remainder of the evening was a continued period of quiet, happy enjoyment. Amongst the many distinguished brethren who occupied positions near the chair may be mentioned Bro. R. H. Giddy D.G.M. of Griqualand, who, we were informed, had discharged vastly important duties in Grand Lodge, and indeed in every part of the world in which it was possible for him to perform Masonic work. Then there was that hearty and zealous Mason, the Rev. C. W. Arnold Past Grand Chaplain, Bros. Alderman and Sheriff Hanson, Shadwell Clerke Grand Secretary, Horace Jones, the eminent City Architect and Grand Superintendent of Works, Sir John B. Monckton, one of the founders of the Lodge, J. A. Rucker P.G.D., Frank Richardson P.G.D., Sir Albert Woods (Garter) P.G.W., Peter de L. Long P.G.D., Thomas Fenn P.G.D., Captain Bedford Pim, Alderman Staples, John Messent G.S.B., W. T. Howes P.G.P., W. H. R. Skey P.G.J.W., the Hon. Mark F. Napier, Deputy Edmeston, and a host of others, as the auctioneer would say, "too numerous to mention." The post-prandial speeches, though abundant in heartiness of spirit, were brief and to the point, and were a refreshing set-off to the long-windedness too frequently the bane of Masonic banquets. The "Queen and the Craft," of course, took precedence, and in giving the toast, Bro. Green observed rightly that Freemasons were amongst the most Loyal of Her Majesty's subjects, as had recently been shown in a memorable and very interesting manner. He referred, of course, to the deputation of Grand Officers, headed by the Most Worshipful the Grand Master, who waited upon the Queen a short time since to present her with an address, voted unanimously at perhaps one of the greatest gatherings ever assembled in the Masonic Temple, congratulating Her Majesty upon her providential escape at the hands of a mad would-be assassin. There was an enthusiastic outburst of loyalty following these remarks which fully endorsed the sentiments so ably alluded to in the Worshipful Master's opening speech. Then came the healths of the Rulers of the Craft, to each of whom fraternal reference was made, with a well-earned tribute of praise to all for the zeal and ability they displayed in promoting the best interests of the Institution. The toast of the evening was inevitably that with which the principal and honoured guest was associated, and in a few happily chosen sentences, Bro. Green extended to the Grand Junior Warden a sincere and fervent welcome in the names of all the brethren of the Alliance Lodge.

Bro. Sir J. Whittaker Ellis, Lord Mayor and Junior Grand Warden, must have been himself delighted and surprised at the ovation which greeted him on rising to respond. He said there were many distinguished positions which a man might occupy, and sometimes when one looked around him, and found with whom he was associated, he felt it somewhat difficult to respond for them. On the present occasion he felt, as Bacon expressed it, he was "young in hours," and that he was surrounded by a distinguished body of Officers who for a length of time had borne the brunt and heat of the important affairs of that great Institution—the Grand Lodge of the Freemasons of England. When he looked around he saw near him Bro. Sir Albert Woods, who occupied so prominent a position, and was so esteemed by the whole of the Brotherhood; and near him was Brother Sir John Monckton and other distinguished members of Grand Lodge, with their excellent Grand Secretary, who was so zealous and ubiquitous—in fact he (the Lord Mayor) wished he was like him, for he seemed to be able at any time to be in two places at once. No sooner had he done a good office for one Lodge than he was, almost before they could imagine it possible, doing a good office for another. His Lordship went on to say he felt himself placed in a very distinguished position by the good offices of his friends, and by the kindness and condescension of Bro. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Most Worshipful Master of Grand Lodge. He was also pleased to think that, amongst the brethren who surrounded him, and allowed him to be their mouthpiece on this occasion, he could claim so many good and tried friends, in whom, even long before he entered into the happy state of the Brotherhood, were those whom he could look up to with respect. He felt it would have been well if the names of some of his brother Grand Officers had been associated with the toast, so that they might have spoken after him, and have dwelt, with that florid eloquence which they heard in G. Lodge at the Quarterly Communications, upon those useful and difficult questions which the Grand Registrar so eloquently and so conspicuously rendered to them. But on this occasion he could only repeat that amongst the many honours he had had poured upon him the last few months, there was none he valued more highly than that of being elected Junior Grand Warden of the Grand Lodge of England. Their Worshipful Master had referred to the Deputation that recently waited upon Her Majesty, and presented her with an interesting Address. He believed that was the first time on which the Freemasons of England had tendered an Address in person to Her Majesty, and it certainly was a very imposing and very instructive sight. Bro. Sir Albert Woods, who had seen more than any one present of the ceremonials that had been exercised in the world, because he had been called upon by Her Majesty to invest the most illustrious of potentates with that much-desired appendage, the Garter, was much struck with the dignity and the imposing character of the event, which afforded Her Majesty such evident satisfaction. In conclusion, his lordship again expressed his deep sense of the honour which had been conferred upon him by the brethren of the Alliance Lodge. Amongst the Visitors it was an arduous task for the W.M. to select one who should answer for such a galaxy of Masonic stars; but with courtesy and tact he contrived to bridge the difficulty, and to pay a graceful compliment to Bro. Alderman and Sheriff Hanson, who, although not a Grand Officer, is nevertheless a true and zealous promoter of the interests of the Craft. The remaining speeches were necessarily of a complimentary character, but all must admit that the accents of praise that were showered upon the Worshipful Master and his Officers, and especially his indefatigable Secretary, Bro. Joseph E. Turner, were as deserved as they were freely and sincerely bestowed. The scene throughout was pregnant with hearty goodfellowship and urbanity, and the company only reluctantly withdrew when the cadences of music, wafted from the Guildhall, spoke of the opening of festivities on a larger and more magnificent scale, in which "fair women and brave men" had been invited by Bro. Ellis to participate in the warmth of his Civic munificence and generosity.

PROV. GRAND LODGE OF MARK MASTER MASONS, BENGAL.

A REGULAR Communication of the Mark Provincial Grand Lodge was held at Freemasons' Hall, Lahore, on the 25th February, under the presidency of R.W. Bro. Lieut.-Col. A. Stewart P.G.O. England, Prov. G.M.M.M., and from the copy of the proceedings which has reached us we learn that he was supported by the following Prov. Grand and acting Prov. G. Officers, namely:—Bros. W. Adlard P.D.G.P.M. P.G.O. of England as D.P.G.M.M., Captain George Blake P.M. 219 P.S.G.W., Major H. Studholme Brownrigg P.G.O. England as P.J.G.W., Geo. Wallace as P.G.M.O., William Bull P.G.S.O., J. R. B. Fitzherbert P.G.J.O., R. B Nightingall P.G.R., H. W. Warmington acting P.G.S., James Carswell as P.G.S.D., W. Jones as P.G.J.D., Capt. G. W. M. Turnbull P.G.D.C., Major A. H. Turner P.G.A.D.C., H. J. Walker P.G.S.B., E. J. Coates P.G.O., D. G. D'Rozario P.G.I.G., R. B. Teeling P.G. Tyler; together with representatives of Lodge No. 98, and several visitors. After the confirmation of the minutes of previous meetings, the P.G. Master delivered his address, in which he congratulated the brethren on the progress the degree had made during the last half year. There were, he said, twenty-three Lodges on the roll of the Province, one of which had been opened on the 24th January, and was already in good working order. The brethren had increased in number from 380 on 30th June 1881, the date of the previous return, to 402 on 1st January of this year; but though this increase was comparatively small, there had been ninety-two brethren advanced as against seventy-one and sixty-two respectively, in the two previous half-years. On the other hand, there had been as many as eighty-five resignations, caused by the large number of transfers among military brethren. Having congratulated his predecessor, R.W. Bro. Hon. H. T. Prinsep, on the prosperous state of the degree during his last half-year of office, Bro. Lt.-Col. Stewart went on to state that the degree of Royal Ark Mariner, which numbered only seven Lodges, was not quite in the same satisfactory condition, there being only ninety-nine members on 1st January 1882 as against 117 on 30th June 1881, but as he had received that evening a petition for a provisional warrant for a new R.A.M. Lodge, he trusted that matters would improve in the course of the half-year then commencing. The Treasurer's account, which showed receipts, including balance from previous half-year, amounting to over 1304 rupees, disbursements over 906 rupees, and balance 397 rupees and upwards, was received and passed, after which a resolution recommending a donation of 100 rupees to the Bengal Masonic Association, and one of a like amount to the Punjab Masonic Institution was unanimously agreed to. The Prov. G. Master having announced that Bro. Adlard, their then Prov. Grand Treasurer was not desirous of being re-elected, by reason of his absence from Lahore during the hot season, Bro. J. H. Sullivan was unanimously chosen his successor. The following brethren were then appointed and invested as Prov. G. Officers for the ensuing year, namely:—

Bro. Captain George Blake, with the permission of the Provincial Grand Master, then expressed regret for the part he had played in endeavouring to bring about the separation of the Punjab from Bengal, and its erection into a separate Mark Province, and requested that his recantation might be made known to Bro. Hon. H. T. Prinsep I. Past Prov. G.M.M.M., and apologies for non-attendance having been read from several brethren, Prov. G. Lodge was closed in the usual manner.

The Monthly Meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence was held on Wednesday evening, at Freemasons' Hall. The three chairs were occupied by Bro. Joshua Nunn P.G.S.B. President, James Brett P.G.P. Junior Vice-President, and Rev. A. F. A. Woodford P.G.C. Amongst the other brethren present were C. A. Cottebrune, C. Atkins, W. Mann, H. Garrod, Thomas Sanders, Charles Dairy, J. H. Matthews, A. E. Gladwell, E. F. Storr, H. Massey, H. G. Buss Assistant Grand Secretary, A. A. Pendlebury, W. Dodd, W. Stephens, and H. Sadler Grand Tyler. The brethren first confirmed grants to the amount of £240, recommended at the last meeting in May. The new list contained the names of twenty-eight applicants, eighteen of which were country and eleven town. The brethren were engaged over three hours in considering these cases, and at the termination the following was found to be the result:—Two cases dismissed, and one deferred; two cases relieved with £50 each, three with £40 each, five with £30 each, six with £20 each, two with £15 each, five with £10 each, and two with £5 each. The Lodge was then closed.

The following arrangements have been announced in connection with the Festival, at the Royal Pavilion at Brighton on Wednesday next, of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. A special train of first-class carriages will leave London Bridge at 10·45 A.M., calling at East Croydon at 11 A.M., in order to take up passengers with special tickets by the ordinary train from Victoria at 10.15 a.m., and Clapham Junction at 10.20 A.M. The party will be landed at Brighton at 12.15 P.M., and are requested to assemble at the Royal Pavilion not later than 3.30 P.M. The Dome, in which the banquet and subsequent proceedings will take place, and the entire lower suite of rooms, have been reserved for the guests, and Stewards, ladies, and brethren will meet in the large rooms on the ground floor, an ante-room being specially arranged for the use of the Stewards. Wands will be borne only by the special Stewards, who will have charge of, and distribute the badges to the rest of their colleagues. The Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, Sir John Whittaker Ellis, Bart., Grand Junior Warden, who is the chairman of the day, will be received on his arrival by the Officers of the Board of Stewards, and conducted by them to the room at the back of the orchestra in the Dome, entering by the door marked A, while the Stewards and their friends will enter the banquet room by doors marked B, and seat themselves at Tables 1 to 13. When the company are seated, the Chairman will enter, accompanied by the House Committee of the Institution, the Officers of the Board, and the Grand Officers, for whom seats will be provided at the Dais Table. Private drawing-rooms will be set apart for the exclusive use of the ladies, and light refreshments, such as tea, coffee, &c. &c., will be served throughout the evening. Smoking is forbidden in the Dome. There will be attendants in the rooms adjacent to the entrance, who will take charge of hats and coats. The Band of the School will be in attendance under Bandmaster Wbare, and will play a selection of music on the arrival of the visitors and during the afternoon. The special return train leaves Brighton punctually at 8.30 P.M., and at East Croydon will set down passengers for Clapham Junction and Victoria; but those visitors who may wish to remain over night may return by any train, except express, on the day following, instead of by the special train. Tickets, including railway fare—gentlemen 21s each, ladies 18s each. Brethren—morning dress without Masonic clothing or jewels; Ladies, morning dress, with or without bonnets.

St. James's Church, Clerkenwell, which is about being restored, will shortly, through the generosity of the Crusaders' Lodge, be enriched by the addition of two large painted windows, the work of the well-known artist in stained glass, Bro. Charles Evans, of Warwick-street, Regent-street, W.

ORIGIN OF THE ROYAL ARCH.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I thank you and Bro. Q. for the complimentary notices of my letter under the above heading. With regard to my not having proved every thing from records, this I admitted, by stating that "this is but a theory of my own," subject to disproval. I maintain, however, that it is the most logical conclusion I could come to, and whenever any one shall produce a better theory or explanation, I shall cheerfully acknowledge it.

It is certain that William Leslie, and other Scotch brethren, obtained from the Ancients a Dispensation in the month of March 1763, and that the said organisation was constituted on the 20th April ensuing. There is a list of the names of the members of that Lodge, headed by William Leslie. Preston's name is the twelfth on the list, and as Preston was the second person initiated in that Lodge, the original founders consisted of ten brethren. About twenty on the list paid one shilling each to the G.L.; about twenty remaining members are marked on the list as having paid two and sixpence, or five shillings. I suggested to Bro. Buss that the difference in the fee to the G.L. may have been owing to those who joined the Lodge, while, under dispensation having paid one shilling, while, after the constitution of the Lodge, its candidates paid a higher fee; this theory may be confirmed or disproved, but any how, there are about (as far as I can judge) forty names on the said list. The Ancients observed the Evangelist's day, 27th December, as their annual feast, when the Masters or Secretaries of Lodges had to furnish the G.S. with lists of the members of their respective Lodges; and as No. 111 was a new Lodge, it was probably prompt upon that occasion in furnishing its list of members, &c. It may seem incredible for the membership of the Lodge to have increased fourfold in less than ten months. This, however, is confirmed by Bro. Stephen Jones in 1795, who says, "The Lodge was soon after" [after it had received a Dispensation] "regularly constituted by the Officers of the Ancient G.L. . . . . Having increased considerably in numbers, it was found necessary to remove to the Horn Tavern, Fleet-street," &c. How many members joined the Lodge before the November following, when it seceded from the Ancients, I know not. I know that Preston left it in the interim, and joined a modern Lodge; probably others may have seceded with Preston, but supposing that the new initiations equalled in number those who seceded, the Caledonian Lodge must have numbered forty brethren when it was re-constituted by the Moderns in November 1764, a number of whom were doubtless R.A. Masons. And if this was the first Ancient Lodge converted into a Modern, then it must have been the first time when the Modern G.L. dignitaries held social and fraternal communion with a number of Chapter Masons. If so, we may readily suppose that curiosity prompted the Grand Officers to learn about the Lodge work of the Ancients, and more especially about the R.A. degree. Finally, some of the G.L. dignitaries probably ventured to receive the degree in the "Caledonian Chapter," and reported favourably upon the sublimity of the ceremony, &c. But as the social position of the Caledonians may not have come up to the standard of the Grand Lodge dignitaries, the said dignitaries, therefore, decided to form a Chapter of their own. Hence, in January 1765, the R.A. Chapter of Jerusalem was inaugurated, and its membership was kept sufficiently select, so that even the Grand Master, and other noblemen, were induced to join it. I again admit that this is but a theory, which I cannot prove from records; but my friends here are of my opinion, that it is the best conclusion I could come to. Bro. Charles L. Woodbury (whose theory on Egyptian Masonry I assailed in your journal some two years ago), after carefully reading my communication to you on "The Origin of the R.A.," said, "Well! I cannot see how you could come to any other conclusion."

I must not, however, omit to inform you that, at the suggestion of the R.W. G.Sec. of England, I inquired of Bro. J. Nunn, a prominent member of the Caledonian Lodge, regarding the old records of his Lodge and Chapter, who replied, that the oldest Lodge records were destroyed some years ago in a fire, and that the Caledonian Chapter was of recent formation. Subsequently, upon further inquiry of my friend in the G.S.'s office, I was informed that the old Caledonian Chapter ceased to meet soon after 1813.

I am always ready and willing to acknowledge an error; and I shall now take the opportunity of acknowledging a very curious oversight of mine. About a year ago I came across the Freemason's Magazine 1795, wherein I found the memoir of Preston by Stephen Jones, which furnished me with a clue to the history of the Caledonian Lodge, and of Preston's initiation therein. As Bro. Jones received his information from Preston verbally, he made a muddle about the period of the Lodge's Constitution under the Ancients, and its subsequent Constitution by the Moderns. Thus much, however, I learned. 1st. That the Lodge was first constituted in, or soon after, 1760, and 2nd. That it met at the White Hart in the Strand. To ascertain the exact date, I scanned over the Lodges in Bro. Gould's "Atholl Lodges" from 1760, till I came to No. 111, which met at the White Hart, Strand. Having identified the Lodge, I put the book aside without perusing the comments thereon. Bro. Buss first called my attention to that part of the note where it is stated that Preston was the second person initiated in the said Lodge. I naturally assured him that I had not read the note, &c. I then merely noticed that fact, without troubling myself to read the remainder of the note. Last week I had again occasion to hunt up a Lodge in the "Atholl Lodges," when I came to Lodge No. 111. I thought that I would just read the whole note, and to my surprise I found therein all the facts about the Caledonian Lodge, which I took so much pains last year to hunt up. True, Bro. Gould furnishes no authorities for his statements, but the facts are there. And now I will give you some information, which caused me to re-examine Bro. Gould's work last week.

During a visit to New York, about six weeks ago, I stumbled upon a ritual of the Royal Arch, said to have been sent to Hayti in 1802, for a Chapter that worked there under the jurisdiction of the Grand Chapter of England. The said ritual was either originally written in English or in French. But be that as it may, in 1833 it found its way to New York, where Bro. Marconnay copied it. It is the same Bro. Marconnay who made a great stir among the A. and A. Riters in 1833, by asking the Three Globes G.L. at Berlin, about whether Frederic the Great was a high degreer, and whether he sent a Charter for 33 degrees to Charleston, South Carolina, &c., to which the Three Globes Grand Lodge replied, that Frederic the Great was not a high degreer, and that the Charleston Charter was a fraud. Well, to be brief. Last week I was again in New York, and the owner of the document kindly allowed me to take it with me to Boston. Brother S. D. Nickerson P.G.M., now Grand Secretary, of Massachusetts, will translate it into English in a few weeks, but in the meantime I send you the introduction, as translated by Bro. Nickerson.

ROYAL ARCH.

"7th Degree of the ancient York Rite, as it is worked in England and the Chapters under the jurisdiction of the Grand Chapter of England. Copied from the original and official ritual deposited with the Sovereign Chapter of Heureuse Union of Aux Cayes, [Hayti]. Constituted by the Grand Chapter of England in 1802.

"This copy was made by the undersigned, at New York, in 1833, from the copy of Brother the Count de Saint Lawrent,—— Leblanc de Marconnay 33°."

It must seem strange to English Masons to see the R.A. degree styled "seventh degree of the York Rite." The R.A. degree was made into a seventh degree by Thomas Smith Webb, the great American tinker of rituals and degrees; and then, again, our profound American Masonic luminaries have somehow taken a notion into their wise heads, that the Blue degrees, the R.A. degrees, and the K.T. degrees, a baker's dozen in all, ought to be called "York Rite," hence Bro. Marconnay styled the R.A. the "7th degree of the York Rite."

After perusing Marconnay's introduction, doubts suggested themselves to my mind. 1st. Whether there was ever any Chapter at all in Hayti? And 2nd. As there were two Grand Chapters in England in 1802, to which of these Chapters did the Hayti Chapter belong? To find this out, I had to wade again through Bro. Gould's Lodge lists (for I have no Chapter lists to consult). First I went, one by one, through the "Atholl Lodges," but found no Hayti there. Next I went through the lists of the Lodges of the Moderns up to 1802, but still could not find a Lodge at Hayti. I was about to give up the hunt; but thinking that persons are apt to make mistakes in copying, I went on from Lodge to Lodge, until I came to page 81, where I found—"604. La Loge de La Heureuse Reunion aux Cayes, Hayti."

This Lodge was not granted in 1802, but in 1809. I have, however, no doubt (though I have no record evidence to prove it) that the Union Chapter, to whom the ritual belonged, was a branch of No. 604 Lodge at Hayti.

I shall only add, that as soon as the ritual is translated into English, a copy will be sent to the Grand Secretary of England, when there will be an opportunity of comparing it with another old ritual recently discovered in London, as well as with the present one.

Fraternally yours,

JACOB NORTON.

ELECTRICITY v. GAS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Of all the letters written to bolster up the electric light, I think few can compare with that published in the Times of Friday, signed "C. M'L. M'Hardy." The writer begins by stating that an incandescent lamp gives a light of from 16 to 20 candle power; and afterwards, to compare it with gas, he states that an ordinary burner consuming from 5 to 8 feet of gas per hour gives from 6 to 8 candle power. Now this is simply reversing the candle power of the two lights. Five feet of London gas will give from 15 to 17 candle power, and this is periodically stated in the JOURNAL and other papers, when giving the reports of the Metropolitan Gas Examiners.

Mr. Hardy favours us with his estimate for plant for 2000 incandescent lamps, at from £4,200 to £5,200 (the margin of £1000 being on one item—the dynamo machine). With respect to the cost of the engine and boilers, it is a pity he did not consult an engineer as to the cost of such articles; he would then, perhaps, have been surprised at the very low figures he has named as the cost. But, taking his own figures, he has forgotten to state that, for safety, in case of a breakdown, and to provide for heavy repairs, he must have duplicate machinery and apparatus; and as the engine-house is put down at the low sum of £200, and the lamps are not included in the total for plant, we have simply to double his amount for plant—say £10,400—for 2000 incandescent lamps. Even these figures melt into insignificance when Mr. Hardy comes to the (purely imaginary) cost for working expenses. I say imaginary, because he does not say, "I find from experience that during so many months' work at the Crystal Palace the working expenses have been found to be so and so;" but he gives his own idea of what he considers they should be. Well, he gives certain mysterious figures as to the cost of working expenses for the 2,000 incandescent lights, making a total of £2,500 per annum. Now, if any one will add up the figures given, he will find that an error has been made of £1,000 per annum, the total being £3,500. In these figures, on the annual cost, Mr. Hardy states the time for burning to be from dusk till midnight. Why he stops at midnight is best known to himself, as the public lamps burn from dusk till dawn; but perhaps it is to keep down the working expenses on machinery running on till dawn. He then goes on to compare the cost of the electric light with gas; and to do this he starts with the price of gas at 3s 4d per 1000 feet. Why 3s 4d? Why not 2s 10d, the price charged to the Brush Electric Light Company for lighting their premises in Belvedere Road? However, he compares the cost of gas light (3s 4d per 1000 feet) with the incandescent lights at the imaginary illuminating power of from 16 to 20 candles, with plant some thousands of pounds below the actual amount required, a mistake in the total working expenses of £1,000 per annum, and the machinery running till midnight instead of till dawn; and by these means he arrives at the unwarrantable conclusion that incandescent lights are cheaper than ordinary gaslights.

It may be said that, as I am connected with gas companies, I must be strongly biassed in favour of gas. Well, so I am; but I am also biassed in favour of truth, and of facts as to the real cost of electric lighting. I will ask this question: If electric lighting is so much cheaper than gas, why do the Brush Electric Lighting Company light their premises with gas? their gas bill for last quarter being more than £40.

With regard to increasing the light of the London streets by night, I hold, perhaps (for one connected with gas companies) peculiar views on this subject, as I think it a folly and a shame to waste more money on the artificial illumination of public thoroughfares than is absolutely necessary to enable the public to find their way about, and the police to do their duty. Artificial illumination in any form is, and to me it appears as if it ever will be, a costly process; but, if we are determined to turn night into day, in the face of Nature's opposition, we can only do so at the cost of health and by heavy money expenditure. If, in this electric light excitement, there are those who like to blaze up the interior of their houses with a flood of garish light for their midnight entertainments, let them do so; but I respect and admire the thrifty vestryman who desires to keep down extravagant lighting for public thoroughfares, and who will not tax the overburdened tradesman to meet the luxurious wishes of the rich, nor make free with other people's money to aid electric light companies to advertise their speculations.

Arrangements have been made for the customary visit of the Festival Stewards and annual distribution of prizes on Tuesday next, the 27th instant. The R.W. Bro. the Lord Mayor, Sir John Whittaker Ellis, Bart., G.J. Warden, who will preside, the day following, at the Festival, has kindly undertaken the duty of occupying the chair, and we doubt not there will be a merry and numerous gathering of the brethren and ladies interested in the success of the Institution. The proceedings will commence at one p.m., and the band of the Institution will contribute towards the entertainment of the visitors. After a Part Song by the Choir, a Debate will take place on the question, "Are the Mental Capacities of the Sexes Equal?" two farces, "The Man with the Carpet Bag," by Mr. S. A. A'Beckett, and "B. B.," by Messrs. M. Williams and F. C. Burnand, will be played, and several Part Songs will be given at intervals. Nor will the "inner man" be overlooked, as a cold collation will be served in the Hall at 4.30 p.m. We have great pleasure in noting that R. Head, who took second class honours, Seniors, in the Cambridge Local Examination last December, has been awarded nine prizes, of which six were first; while A. R. Parker, third class honours same Examination, has secured eleven, one being the silver watch and chain given by the Supreme Council A. and A. Rite for good conduct. H. P. Palmer, silver medallist (good conduct) and V. J. Lee, Canonbury gold medallist, have been awarded six and four prizes respectively. Bro. Captain Wordsworth's prize of two guineas for elocution has yet to be adjudged.

Barrett W.M. 945, and about eighty other members of Lodges in the Province. The Prov. G. Lodge was opened at the Foresters' Hall, West-street, when the Prov. Grand Secretary called over the roll of the Lodges in the Province, and it was found that all were represented. With but one exception the Provincial Grand Officers of the year were in their several places; this speaks well for the zeal displayed by the Craftsmen of the Province. On the motion of the Deputy Prov. G.M. the minutes of the last Prov. G. Lodge, held at Aylesbury, on the 20th June last year, were taken as read. The Prov. G. Secretary reported that Bro. the Rev. J. S. Brownrigg D.P.G.M. had, on the 14th September 1881, consecrated the Herschel Lodge, at Slough. He further stated that, on the 3rd May, a Masonic Hall was dedicated by the Prov. G.M. at Aylesbury. From the financial statement it appeared that the receipts for the previous year amounted to £208 10s 2d, the present balance in hand being £101 8s 3d. The Charity Committee's Report was next read, the total receipts, including a balance in hand from last year, were £163 10s, the sum of £74 5s being the amount of the present balance. On the proposition of the Prov. G. Master it was unanimously resolved that the sum of £26 5s be voted from the Provincial to the Charity Fund, and that £105 be appropriated from the Charity Fund to the various Lodges who had contributed. The Prov. G. Master then briefly addressed the brethren: he congratulated them on the steady progress Freemasonry had made during the year. He hoped other towns in the Province would follow the example of Aylesbury, and have Lodge-rooms of their own, thereby avoiding the necessity of meeting at public establisments. He was also gratified at being able to offer them his congratulations upon the prosperous state of the Charity Fund. The report as to the condition of the Lodges in the Province came next; this showed the following membership:—Etonian 75, Union 63, Hope 61, Buckingham 52, Methuen 16, Windsor Castle 62, St. Johns 19, Scientific 62, Abbey 42, St. Barnabas 39, Grey Friars 28, SS. Peter and Paul 41, Alma Mater 11, Wycombe 31, Ellington 7, Watling Street 29, Vale of White Horse 28, Grenville 19, St. Hilda 19, Herschel 22, and Wellesley 18. The re-election of Brother Stephens, of Reading, as Prov. G. Treasurer, was then proposed by the D.P.G.M. The Prov. G. Master seconded the nomination, remarking upon the satisfactory manner in which Brother Stephens had always performed his duties. The election was unanimous, and Bro. Stephens, replying, thanked the brethren for the honour done him, assuring them that to fulfil the duties of the office was a pleasure to him.

The Provincial Grand Master referred to a letter that had been received from the Grand Secretary, as to Brother Clabon's proposal to increase the quarterages to the Benevolent Fund. A discussion followed, the D.P.G.M. expressing himself as decidedly opposed to any increase; he feared it would interfere with the flow of benevolence which was being carried on successfully throughout the Province by the contributions to the Charity Fund. On motion of the Provincial Grand Master, it was resolved that the different Lodges in the Province should be asked for an expression of opinion, and a letter was ordered to be sent to each Lodge by the Provincial Grand Secretary. The following brethren were invested with the Charity jewel:—Bros. Joseph Andrews S.D. 209, Charles Stephens P.M. 414, F. J. Ferguson S.W. 414 I.G. 1899, Walter B. Wilson W.M. 574, F. H. Lyon P.M. 574, Gust. A. Charubin 591, Andrew McDowell W.M. 918, Charles M. Footit Steward 1566.

The Officers for the ensuing year were then invested:—

The announcement was made that the next meeting of Provincial Grand Lodge would be held at Windsor, and Provincial Grand Lodge was closed in due form.

A capital banquet was most bountifully supplied by Bro. W. C. Flanagan, of the Great Western Hotel, Reading, at the Old Town Hall. The tables were laid for a party much beyond that which presented itself. The floral decorations by Bro. Dick Radclyffe were in excellent taste. Great praise was awarded the caterer for his exertions. The customary toast list followed, and the proceedings were enlivened by some capital singing, Bros. Dyson (Windsor), Shartan (Westminster Abbey), and Becket and De Lacey (St. Paul's), being the artistes engaged.

Those who are interested in the new system of Electric Lighting, will be pleased to hear that the Electric Sun Lamp, which was invented by MM. Louis Clerc and Bureau and was adjudged the Gold Medal at the Paris Exhibition of 1881, is now on view in the vaults beneath the Royal Exchange. The private view is fixed for to-day (Saturday), and it will afford us the utmost pleasure to give full particulars of the new lamp is our issue of next week.

MARK MASONRY.

PRINCE LEOPOLD LODGE, No. 238.

A WELL-ATTENDED meeting of the brethren of this Lodge was held on Tuesday evening last, at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, under the presidency of Bros. Thomas Richnell Prov. G.S.B. for Middlesex and Surrey, who was supported by Bros. T. C. Walls P.M. G.S.B., Colonel Wigginton P.M. P.G.S.W., Alfred Tisley I.P.M., Sir Charles Palmer S.W., John H. Dodson J.W., W. Farrington S.O., Groves acting M.O., J. Farrington J.O., Harding I.G., F. Clemow, Dodd, Webb, Saunders, Skelton, Harrison Tyler, and others. Lodge was opened in accordance with ancient rite at six o'clock, when the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed, and, there being no practical business on the agenda, the brethren proceeded to certain matters of finance connected with the Lodge. Several new candidates were proposed for advancement, and during the evening the Worshipful Master announced that, in accordance with a resolution passed at a previous meeting, a congratulatory address had been forwarded to Bro. His Royal Highness Prince Leopold, upon the occasion of his marriage with Her Serene Highness the Princess Helen of Waldeck-Pyrmont, with which was coupled an expression of loyalty and attachment to the Throne. To this a gracious reply had been received from His Royal Highness, which he (the W.M.) would request the Secretary to read. Bro. Colonel W. Wigginton Secretary then read the Address, which had been beautifully illuminated and engraved on vellum, in the finest style of the art. The text ran as follows :—

THE PRINCE LEOPOLD LODGE OF MARK MASTER MASONS, No. 238.

Bro. Thomas Richard Richnell, P.G.S.B. Middlesex and Surrey W.M.

To His Royal Highness Prince Leopold, Duke of Albany.

We, the brethren of the Prince Leopold Lodge of Mark Master Masons, No. 238 on the Register of Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons of England and Wales and Dependencies of the British Crown, by resolution proposed by Bro. Colonel W. Wigginton, founder and first Master, seconded by Bro. T. C. Walls, founder and Past Master, and carried unanimously, beg most respectfully, sincerely, and fraternally to tender to your Royal Highness the expression of our love and staunch fidelity to our beloved Sovereign, Queen of England and Empress of India, your ever-to-be revered mother, whose whole life has chastened and sanctified those of an entire people, and created a vivifying power, the force of which can never be fully gauged, even when the present age and generation shall have passed away.

To your Royal Highness we offer our most heartfelt congratulations upon your marriage with her Serene Highness Princess Helen, the estimable daughter of his Serene Highness the Prince of Waldeck, and our most fervent prayers that the Great Architect of the Universe may be pleased to pour down upon you both Heaven's richest earthly blessings, that as Victoria and Albert, so Duke and Duchess may always be as truly united together, ever mindful of your country's good, in its best and purest sense, and ever secure in its loyal, loving, strong protection.

Permit us further, your Royal Highness, to welcome your illustrious bride, and to tender to her—now one of England's daughters—that loyalty and devotion which you, your Royal Highness, well know is the bounden duty and high privilege of every Free and Accepted Mason. God bless you both.

Signed on behalf of the Lodge,

THOMAS R. RICHNELL,
P.G.S.B. Middlesex and Surrey, W.M.

W. WIGGINTON P.M. Secretary.

To this a gracious reply had been received from his Royal Highness, as follows :—

"Claremont, Esher, Surrey,
12th June 1882.

"DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I beg you will yourself accept, and will convey to the members of the Prince Leopold Lodge of Mark Master Masons, No. 238, my most cordial thanks for the resolution they have passed congratulating me upon my marriage, and for their kind wishes for the future happiness of the Duchess of Albany and myself.

I remain, Dear Sir and Brother,
LEOPOLD."

Bro. T. R. Richnell, W.M.

It was ordered that the address be entered on the minutes, together with the Duke of Albany's reply. At the close of the Lodge the brethren dined together, Bro. Clemow catering in his well-known excellent style. The Worshipful Master (Bro. T. R. Richnell) presided, and at the conclusion of the repast, gave the customary Loyal and Mark Masonic toasts. In proposing the Queen and Mark Masonry, he said the toast was one that was always received with enthusiasm in all Masonic gatherings. It was his good fortune to preside as their Master to-day, being the forty-fifth anniversary of Her Majesty's accession. Forty-five years since a maiden Queen ascended the throne; a few years more she became a fond wife and mother, and her career would stand as a bright example to the daughters of Britain. The future mothers of England would never weary of telling their children that the life of Victoria was one of purity and chastity. The interest she felt in Freemasonry was manifested by the fact that most of her sons were distinguished members of the Craft, and ever ready to promote its interests. The toast was enthusiastically received, the National Anthem being sung by Bros. Farrington and Saunders. The next toast was that of the Officers of Grand Mark Lodge Past and Present; and, in proposing it, the W.M. said they were peculiarly fortunate in having their Lodge named after that illustrious and distinguished Mark Mason Past Grand Master Prince Leopold, who was the only member of the Royal family belonging to the degree. They all knew how great had been the interest His Royal Highness had manifested in the Prince Leopold Lodge since its formation. He associated with the toast the name of Bro. Prince Leopold, and would ask Bro. Col. Wigginton to respond. Bro. Col. Wigginton, in an eloquent speech, referred to the valuable services rendered to Mark Masonry by the Officers of Grand Lodge, and spoke of the rapid advance which had been made in the degree, especially of late years. In proposing the health of the Officers of Prov. Grand Mark Lodge, the Worshipful Master referred to the great services and ability of the Provincial Grand Master Bro. Col. Sir F. Burdett, who presided over the two counties of Middlesex and Surrey, to the great advantage of both. He (the speaker), as a Prov. Grand Officer, knew something of the work thus performed, and assured the brethren it could be no easy task. The other Officers were equally zealous and able; he would couple with the toast their friend and Prov. G. Senior Warden, Bro. Sir Charles Palmer, who was a Past Officer of Prov. Grand Mark Lodge. Bro. Sir Charles Palmer, in responding, spoke of the progress of Mark Masonry, which he was glad so see so flourishing in the Province. The immediate Past Master, Bro. Alfred Tisley, then proposed the health of the Worshipful Master, alluding, in a few happily-chosen sentences, to the straightforward and energetic manner in which he discharged the duties of his high position, and which gave universal satisfaction to the brethren. Bro. Richnell, in responding, acknowledged the compliment paid him, and said he was proud to occupy so exalted a position amongst brethren who had been associated with him so many years in his Masonic career. He should ever exert his utmost power to maintain that prestige which the Prince Leopold had gained amongst Mark Lodges of the Province. Several other toasts were honoured, including the Past Masters, the Officers of the Lodge, &c., and a very enjoyable evening was brought to a close with the Tyler's toast.

NORTH AFRICA.

INSTALLATION OF THE PROVINCIAL GRAND MARK MASTER.

THE installation of R.W. Brother Thomas Fellowes Reade 33, P.D.D.G.M. of Egypt, Her Majesty's Political Agent and Consul General at Tunis, as P.G.M.M.M. for North Africa, took place at the Masonic Hall, Tunis, on the 10th June. R.W. Broadley D.G.M.M.M. of the Mediterranean opened District Grand Lodge in ample form at 7 p.m. He was supported by a goodly attendance of District Grand Officers, and of the members of the Kingston and Saint Louis Mark Lodges. The District Grand Master having briefly explained the object of the meeting, and the dispositions adopted by the Most Worshipful Grand Mark Master Mason as to the division of the district over which he had ruled as District Grand Master, and as P.G.M. of Malta and Tunis for three years, took leave of the brethren in affectionate terms. Brother Broadley's concluding remarks were heartily applauded, and he then proceeded to install in an impressive manner Brother Reade in the chair of A. This ceremony accomplished, Brother Reade was duly presented, and his patent having been read, he was obligated and installed as Provincial Grand Master. Bro. Reade then appointed and invested his P.G. Officers as follow :—Bros. Dr. A. Perini P.M. 222 D.G.M., Professor Souiller, Officier d'Académie, S.W., L. Carletto J.W., Prof. Clément, Officier d'Académie, M.O., A. Blanch S.O., P. Q. Puliga, LL.D., J.O., Rev. T. Robinson P.G.M. Kent Hon. Member 222 and 254 Chaplain, G. Barsotti Treasurer, A. Andry Secretary, Dr. Pace, M.D., Registrar, General E. Musalli Supt. Works, J. E. Gessel S.D., A. Attard J.D., G. B. Cassar D. of C., J. Monge Assistant Secretary, N. D'Amico Assist. D. of C., Capt. R. A. Johnstone Organist, F. Michel Sword Bearer, J. Catalano Standard Bearer, J. Barsotti, J. Souiller, S. Angelica Stewards, L. Chevallier I.G., A. Villareale Tyler. Bro. Reade then addressed the brethren at some length, and expressed his determination to support the Mark Degree throughout his Province, and to follow in the steps of his excellent friend and predecessor Bro. Broadley, from whom he had received the gavel. He invited the brethren to mark their high appreciation of their P.D.G.M. by helping him in his office of Steward at the coming Festival of the R.M.I.B., when he would represent the Mark Province of North Africa. At the proposal of Professor Souiller, seconded by Bro. Reade, a vote of thanks to the P.D.G.M. was placed on the minutes of P.G.L. The brethren then adjourned to the Grand Hotel, where they were entertained by the P.G.M. at a banquet provided by Bro. F. Michel. The usual toasts were honoured, and a most harmonious and agreeable evening spent.

METROPOLITAN CHAPTER OF IMPROVEMENT.

PRESENTATION TO COMP. F. BROWN, THE PRECEPTOR.

THE last meeting for the session of 1881 and 1882 was held on Tuesday evening, 13th June, at the Jamaica Tavern, St. Michael's-alley, Cornhill, and the occasion being one of more than usual importance, it drew together a large number of Royal Arch Masons, to show by their presence the interest they felt in the cause that had drawn them together. The ceremony of installation was worked as usual, the Principals and Officers being as follow :—Comps. Lardner Z., J. S. Fraser H., Webb J., F. Brown S.E., W. H. Postans S.N., W. Fraser P.S., Bentley Haynes candidate ; and the rest of the Companions were—Comps. N. Loveland G.J. Herts, J. E. Le Feuvre Prov. G.S.E. Hants, Lilley, Abel, Cull, Thompson P.Z. 519, M'Dowell, Pounceby, Mickley, Veal, Chicken, Rowe, Daniel, Dottridge, G. Darcy, G. Brown, Grabham, H. Halford, and Henry Darcy. The ceremony of exaltation was gone through in a most painstaking manner, and there appeared to be a desire on the part of all to make this a meeting that should be long remembered. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the M.E.Z. (Comp. Lardner) said that a most important duty devolved upon him as chairman at that, the last meeting of the session, to present a testimonial to Comp. Brown, their Preceptor, as a token of their sincere regard. The matter had originated with him, about seven weeks ago, and had been readily taken up by the Companions, and he (Comp. Lardner) must say that, having communicated with many of the Companions, in every case he had received a satisfactory response, accompanied by letters most cordially approving of the proposition for presenting Comp. Brown with a suitable testimonial. The Committee had met and agreed to purchase such a testimonial as they hoped would be satisfactory to him, and also to the subscribers, which they presented to Comp. Brown as a mark of their respect and esteem for his zeal and ability in furthering the interests of the Metropolitan Chapter of Improvement ; wishing him long life and happiness to enjoy the esteem of those Companions who had so largely benefited by his instruction. The testimonial was then uncovered ; it consisted of a very handsome clock, with two side ornaments. The centre of the clock-stand bore the following inscription :—

"METROPOLITAN CHAPTER OF IMPROVEMENT.

"Presented to Comp. F. Brown, by the members of the Chapter, as a recognition of his valuable services, and for the zeal and energy he had displayed in maintaining its interests as Preceptor.

"June 1822."

Comp. Brown, in acknowledging the gift, said he hardly knew what words to use to express his feelings for the kind remarks which had fallen from the M.E.Z., although he was not usually bashful in giving utterance to them. When he joined the Chapter four or five years ago, he did not know much about the ceremony, and he felt anxious to know more fully about it ; and he might say that from the time he joined he had never been absent from more than two meetings. When he joined the Chapter there was but a very small attendance, and Comp. Boyd, with one or two others, used to attend occasionally to give instruction. It was at that time he had learned the ritual, and he also learned the manner in which he could deliver it the most impressively. He took a liking to the ritual, and pursued it in a manner that he might almost call an infatuation, for he threw aside the Craft, and made it his most complete study. In the course of time, the Companions called upon him to give them instruction, and by some means or other, that he did not then recollect, he acceded to their desire, and became the Preceptor of the Chapter. Since then the Chapter had increased in numbers, and the attendance had so far improved that for the last three years the average attendance at each meeting had been sixteen. He was gratified to find that the Chapter was prospering so satisfactorily, and that the work that was done there was appreciated by the Companions. As far as his abilities were concerned, and his love for the Royal Arch, it would be an inducement for him to come there to continue his duties ; but there was a much greater incentive to him to do so, as he thereby became acquainted with very many worthy Masons ; and amongst all who attended there was not one whom he could not number amongst his friends. His reward was priceless, for to enjoy the friendship of his fellow-men was of a value beyond price, and would be an incentive to him as long as he lived to continue with them, and he should always consider that on every Tuesday evening he was pledged to be in his place at the Metropolitan Chapter of Improvement. When, on his return home, he saw the handsome testimonial before him, and he gazed on the face of the clock, his wife would know that he had been amongst men engaged in a good cause, and he was quite sure she would then never murmur at his absence. He heartily thanked the M.E.Z. for his kind expressions, which had been endorsed by the Companions ; he must say that he never met with anything but kindness from them. He wished them all health and happiness, and as that was their last meeting for the session, when they met again in October, he trusted that their future meetings would be as successful and happy as they had been in the past. He added, what he had omitted to state before, that during the last three years they had been enabled to contribute twenty-one guineas to the Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons. The M.E.Z. said there was a balance standing over of the subscriptions, which it was suggested should be placed in the hands of Comp. Brown to present some little testimonial to Mrs. Brown. Companion H. Thompson moved the thanks of the Chapter to Companion Lardner and the other members of the Committee engaged in getting up the testimonial, which was seconded and unanimously agreed to. Companion Lardner returned thanks, and the proceedings, which throughout were of a highly gratifying description, were brought to a close.

THE MAURITIUS.

ONE of the finest Masonic gatherings in Mauritius, within the memory of man, took place on the 13th April, in the splendid temple and banqueting hall of the Triple Espérance. The occasion was the voting an address of congratulation to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales Most Worshipful Grand Master of the United Grand Lodge of England, on the providential escape of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen from the attack of an assassin.

The brethren assembled in the Temple by 8 p.m., when H.E. the Lieut.-Governor accompanied by his Private Secretary Mr. W. W. West arrived, and was met at the door by the Directors of Ceremonies Bros. Smith and Bewsher, the Military band in the Court playing "God Save the Queen" and was conducted by them to the Temple, where H.E. was received under an arch of Steel, the band in Lodge taking up the National Air. Lodge was then opened in the usual form by Bro. de Caila, who acted as W.M. The ritual was the English, and to do especial honour to the occasion, every office, both in Lodge and at the banquet, was filled by actual reigning Masters or Past Masters. The business of the evening was opened by Bro. de Caila moving the following address, which was read by the Secretary :—

To HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES M.W. Grand Master of the United Fraternity of Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons of England.

May it please Your Royal Highness.

We, the undersigned W.M.'s, P.M.'s and Masons, belonging to the several Masonic Lodges of Mauritius, under the English, Scotch and Irish Constitutions, and the "Grand Orient de France," beg most respectfully to approach Your Royal Highness as Grand Master of the English Lodges, praying that you may be pleased to lay at the feet of Her Most Gracious Majesty the expression of our Loyal and Masonic devotion to Her throne.

It was with feelings of horror and indignation that all the true Masons in the Colony received the news of the cowardly attempt made on the life of Her Majesty, and our hearts united in thanksgiving to the G.A.O.T.U. for having saved our Queen and Empress from the dastardly blow of an assassin. May He continue to defend Her from every latent foe, and long preserve our dearly beloved Sovereign for the wellbeing of Her faithful and devoted subjects scattered over the four quarters of the Globe.

We unite in making vows for the welfare of all the Royal family, more especially we pray that the G.A.O.T.U. may grant your Royal Highness health and happiness, and for many years to come, may we see your Royal Highness, as Grand Master of English Freemasonry, uphold the genuine tenets of our Order.

Bro. de Caila then rose and said :—Brethren, I have now to inform you of the object of this grand reunion ; and to propose to you the adoption of this address to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales Grand Master of English Masons, conveying through His Royal Highness to his Royal Mother, the Queen of England, the expression of our feelings at her happy deliverance, by the special interposition of the G.A.O.T.U. You know that the statutes of our Order remind its followers that one of their chief duties as Masons and as citizens is to respect the laws of the country they inhabit. Well, these laws, the laws of all civilised countries, have just been violated in the attempt against the life of our Gracious Sovereign. You know that we are the protectors of all those who suffer unjustly, wherever they may be found. Well, in this address we declare our principles. You know that, as Brothers in Masonry, we are, in consequence, the Brothers and Friends of all humanity, from the king on his throne to his meanest subject. Our mission has no other limits than those defined by duty and love of Truth. This, my brethren, is why I invite you as Masons, one and all of you, to place your names at the foot of the Address that we are going to send to the Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of England, our Royal Brother in Masonry, to be presented by him to Her Majesty the Queen. Our Brother, E. Didier St. Amand, Past Master of the Lodge of Harmony, in seconding this motion, will explain to you more fully our motives in sending this Address.

Bro. Didier St. Amand, in seconding the motion, said : Brethren, I rise to second the Address which has just been read to you. The W.M. of the Triple Espérance has addressed you in French, and you have heard what true feelings of devotion to the Throne he has expressed. It is now my turn to say a few words, in the language of the mother country so dear, so justly dear to all of us who are far away from home.

Brethren, when the attempt made on the life of Her Majesty and her providendential escape became known, the voices of all her faithful subjects united and ascended to heaven in one common Hosanna, returning thanks to the G.A.O.T.U. for having preserved our beloved Sovereign, and the several notes, as it were, in that great hymn of joy and gratitude were the several languages spoken by the many devoted subjects of Our Queen and Empress.

Brethren, when we think of the loss which England might have suffered, it seems to bring back vividly to our minds the whole spotless life of our Queen.

In 1821 King William was too old, and in too indifferent a state of health, to see children born unto him. Our Queen was then twelve years of age, and, all unconscious of her future greatness, she was being carefully brought up by her widowed mother within the homely brick walls of Kensington Palace. It became then necessary to make her acquainted with her future destiny, and Baroness Lezben, her governess, tells the following touching story about the manner in which her place in the succession was made known to her. With the consent of the Duchess of Kent, she placed in her historical book the genealogical table ; the Royal child opened the book and looking at the table said : "I am nearer the Throne than I thought." "So it is," replied the governess, and our Queen, giving her hand to the Baroness, said : "I will be good ; I understand your advice now, I will be good!" Brethren, you can picture this touching scene—the Royal child looking into the eyes of her governess and saying, I will be good; and, brethren, was it not like a revelation? For, what has been the life of our Queen but one series of good and noble deeds? When William IV. died, our Queen was eighteen years of age, and to a King, who had sided with the opposition, and often obtained with difficulty the reluctant homage of England's children, succeeded a Queen, in all the freshness of youth, whose graceful modesty and propriety raised among all a new sense of loyalty, mingled with feelings of chivalry. For, brethren, England ever loved a Queen! No doubt some of you have seen, and you have heard, of the picture in the corridor of Windsor Castle which is called Her Majesty's first Council. The girl Queen sits with grave simplicity among the veterans of England's statesmen. She has a pensive and straightforward look ever present in her face, and history tells us that she presided over that first Council with natural ease; but, at the same time, with that calm dignity and firmness which ever after characterised all her actions. This, brethren, was the first act of that long reign of prosperity of which we English are so justly proud.

Royal domestic life in the past generation had been far from edifying; but what could be more touching than the Royal romance of our Queen, terminating in a happy marriage which the whole nation fully approved of? Buckingham Palace and Windsor Castle became the abode of love and harmony; the young pair were artistic; they had mutual tastes; and their Royal house, full of stately gaiety and sober pomp, offered to all the brightest example of a happy English Home. Our Queen and Prince Albert gave to all the example of purity and virtue; she ever cheerful in her exterior, and he ever tender, and watchful to please her; both encouraging everything that was good, and showing that the higher the station in life, the greater its duties and responsibilities. Children came, and the Royal Palaces echoed their innocent mirth; and when the Welsh nurse, answering a great ambassadress said, that at the Castle the living for the children was poor; only a bit of roast meat, and perhaps a plain pudding, and added that our Queen was as fit to be a poor man's wife as well as a great Queen, little did she know what great compliment she was paying the best of women, and the highest lady in the land.

If the private life of her Majesty was sympathetic, her political career offers the example of good and able work transacted day by day, with unceasing diligence and love of her people, keeping in view that the great parties in England, Whigs and Tories in the beginning, and Liberals and Conservatives now, have always had at heart the prosperity and happiness of the nation, our Queen has always accepted loyally the choice of the people, whatever may have been her private feelings. And such was her influence over all those who approached her that the several political leaders who in turn have been at the head of affairs have all become her staunch friends. Exempted by right from all taxes, our Queen came forward, and, as an English woman, claimed to contribute her share to the revenue of the nation. In happy contrast with the careless habits of a past generation of Kings shone the economy of our Queen. When King Louis Philippe and the Czar visited England, Sir Robert Peel, then Minister, was enabled to state to Parliament that these receptions, though worthy of England and of our Queen, would not cause any increase of expenditure. The student of History follows with admiration and respect the action of our Queen during the effervescence caused by the Corn Laws, the Irish Famine and the Chartist Demonstration. Then came the first Great Exhibition, giving a new impetus to trade and art in their several branches, and due to the untiring energy of Prince Albert, who displayed great powers of mind and a true love of England's greatness. Then came the Crimean war, where the tricolour floated by the side of our national ensign; and may the two great pioneers of civilisation ever remain friends. Then came the terrible Indian mutiny of which we English cannot speak without a shudder, and both of which ended, as usual, in our complete victory. Then the American War: and during all these important events, history tells us what amount of business the Royal worker transacted, with unswerving devotion to the best interests of England; and, brethren, we have seen with what happy results for our country.

Then came a terrible blow. Prince Albert died, and a shadow passed over the life of our Queen; and though the country has often grudged her mourning so long, yet we have all been proud, justly proud, of her faithful sorrow. And yet, during those long years of grief, deep grief, her attention to state affairs and business never failed her, and the stamp of her hand is visible on every act of the ministry. The happiness of her children, and the springing up of a new generation of children about her, restoring hope and cheerfulness to the Royal Castles of England, England saw with joy and gratitude our Queen once more taking her wonted place in all state ceremonials.

Such is the pure spotless life which for the fourth time the hand of an assassin has attempted, but an all seeing Providence has each time preserved our Queen, and thus secured the happiness of England.

Brethren, the most remarkable feature about these dastardly attempts is, that political ideas had nothing to do with them. Insanity or a morbid desire for notoriety alone prompted the mean and starving creatures who had raised their hands to our beloved Sovereign. Thrones on the Continent have tottered and crumbled to pieces. King Louis Philippe left Paris and died in exile under the shelter of British hospitality. Nicholas of Russia died of failure and of a broken heart; and the man who had helped to ruin and crush him, Napoleon the third, came back to that England where he had been received with all the honours due to a mighty potentate, to lay himself down and die. The late Czar of Russia has been cruelly and cowardly murdered by the hand of the Nihilist. Revolutionis rife all over the Continent; but our Institution stands firm in the midst of it all. Our Girl Queen, if I may be allowed the expression, is now one of the most experienced Statesmen of Europe, and the greatest protection of her Throne is that great love which we all bear Her Majesty. The Queen has kept the word of the Royal Child—"I will be good." England is at the head of nations: Our Queen gives the world the example of a loyal constitutional Sovereign, and her private and public life are the pride of all Englishmen. I have no doubt that you will with joy sign the Address, which has just been read to you, and that you will say with me, one and all, and from the bottom of your hearts,—May Her name be blessed, and her days be long for the greatest happiness of England.

The usual collection was then made, and on the proposition of Bro. Bewsher, was handed to Lady Barker for distribution as she might think fit.

The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren proceeded to sign the address.

A dinner followed, whereat 150 Masons took their respective places, and did ample justice to the repast prepared for them.

THE OLD FOLKS AT HOME.

ON Wednesday afternoon, the Summer Entertainment, which is now annually given to our dear old friends at Croydon came off. The Clerk of the weather was sufficiently considerate, the Railway Company (L. and S.E. Company) laid themselves open to accommodate visitors to the best of their ability, and Bro. Lieut. Cole, with his wonderful ventriloquial powers, kept the Old People and their friends in a perpetual state of excitement—perhaps it would be better to state, in the condition in which, at the close of the marriage service, the newly-wedded couple find themselves — namely, "in amazement." Bro. Cole's engagements, however, did not admit of his staying the whole evening, and when his part of the entertainment had been brought to a conclusion, amid enthusiastic applause, the Misses Terry and Strong—names intimately familiar to all lovers of the Benevolent—took his place, and played and sang, in a style which proved them to be excellent musicians, several choice selections of music. Miss Berrie Stephens, likewise, who has a good soprano voice, met with hearty and well-deserved applause for her vocal contributions to the evening's enjoyment, her duet, "No, Sir!" with Bro. H. Prenton, being not only vocally, but dramatically, a great success. Our "musical inmate," Mrs. Bonorandi, by her tasteful performance on the pianoforte, is equally deserving of thanks for the part she played in entertaining her co-inmates and their friends. Nor must we overlook the claims upon our regard of Bro. Harry Sullivan, who is ever ready and equally capable of entertaining any gathering of folk, be they Masonic or non-Masonic ladies or brethren, or of Miss Owen, whose services were greatly appreciated. As a matter of course, the Festival, if we may term it such, was not allowed to pass without the drinking of sundry toasts, and equally certain is it that that of Bro. Terry's health was the most conspicuous amongst them. Of course, Bro. Terry was happiness itself in his acknowledgments, and he pointed out how, formerly, the inmates of the Institution at Croydon hardly knew anything of each other, and even went the length of occasionally indulging in those jars from which even old and experienced Masons and their widows are not exempt. He further explained how this had all been changed, and how, out of a friendly "tea fight," the now regular half-yearly entertainments had sprung into actual existence. Bro. Raynham Stewart P.G.D., who takes a leading part in all that relates to the Benevolent Institution, spoke in his usually complimentary terms of everything and everybody, while the venerable Warden, Bro. Norris, and his respected daughters, were most cordially thanked for the persistent attention they had paid to their "ancient charges." We trust it may never be our fortune to spend a less enjoyable evening.

We understand that His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales M.W.G.M. will, at an early date, be installed W.M. of the Royal Alpha Lodge, No. 16, and that the ceremony will be performed by H.R.H. Prince Leopold, Duke of Albany, P.G. Warden England and Prov. Grand Master Oxon. It will be in the recollection of our readers that some time back H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught was installed Worshipful Master of this Lodge by the Deputy Gaand Master of England, the Earl of Lathom.

BERRY.—On the 13th inst., at Arbour-square, Commercial-road, E., Miss MARY ANN BERRY, the beloved sister of Bro. J. J. Berry P.M. 554, &c., after a long and painful illness.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Old Wounds, Sores, and Ulcers.—Daily experience confirms the fact, which has triumphed over opposition for more than forty years viz., that no means are known equal to Holloway's remedies, for curing bad legs, sores, wounds, diseases of the skin, erysipelas, abscesses, burns, scalds, and, in truth, all cases where the skin is broken. To cure these infirmities quickly is of primary importance, as the compulsory confinement indoors weakens the general health. The ready means of cure are found in H. Holloway's Ointment and Pills, which heal the sores and expel their cause. In the very worst cases the Ointment has succeeded in effecting a perfect cure after every other means has failed of giving any relief. Desperate cases best display its virtues.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

Antiquity Lodge, No. 148.—A meeting was held on Wednesday, 14th inst., at the Bull's Head Inn, Bradshawgate, Bolton, at six o'clock p.m. Bros. George Taylor W.M., Richd. Buxbury S.W., Hy. Broughton J.W., W. Nicholson Prov. G.S.B. Treasurer, John Morris P.M. Secretary, John W. Skelton S.D., Joshua Galloway J.D., John Wild P.M. D.C., N. Tyldesley as I.G., Thos. Higson Tyler; P.M.'s Bros. Thos. Collins, Wm. Carter. Visitor—Bro. G. P. Brockbank P.M. and Secretary 37 P.Prov. S.D. Lodge opened at 6.30 and minutes were read and confirmed. Bro. James Newton P.M. 37 and Hon. Member 170 offered, through the Secretary, his manuscript history of the Lodge from its formation, with lists of its members and Officers to the present time, on condition of its being published by the Lodge for the use of the members of the Lodge and the Craft generally. Bro. Brockbank addressed the brethren, earnestly desiring the Lodge to accept the offer, and publish the work so ably edited and compiled by Bro. Newton, which contained so many interesting records of the past, and evincing, as it did, the great interest the early members took in the prosperity of Ancient Masonry, and how diligently and efficiently they performed the manifold duties imposed upon them. He stated that Deputations were given to the Officers of this Lodge to consecrate or open four Lodges in Lancashire under the Ancient Institutions, notably his mother Lodge 303, now 231, of which he had written and published a history from all the facts at his command, and in the compilation of which he was much indebted for a perusal of the old records of this Lodge, which gave a well written and lucid account of the consecration of the Lodge now meeting at the Commercial Hotel, Bolton, as well as of a Lodge at Wigan, now No. 178 (Antiquity) of which a very excellent and readable account had been written by Brother Joseph Brown Secretary, and published by Brother R. Platt, of Wigan, also of a Lodge at Chorley, but this Lodge ceased to exist soon after 1832; together with the details of opening of a Lodge at Blackburn, but which now meets at Littleborough (Benevolence, No. 226), this being the last warrant granted to Lancashire under the Ancient Grand Lodge. These facts would show that the Lodge had a good reputation in bygone days, and it ought to be a source of gratification to the present members to be able to peruse the records of the past, and in the future to emulate the good work of their predecessors. Bro. Morris Secretary undertook to bring the matter before the brethren at their next meeting, when he expected a more numerous attendance. Bro. W. Nicholson Prov. Grand Sword Bearer received the congratulations of the brethren on his appointment to office. Bro. Thomas Higson, who was elected on the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution as an annuitant in May last, warmly expressed his thankfulness for the interest taken by the brethren in obtaining assistance to secure his election, and his gratitude to the Craft generally in providing for himself and other aged Masons the means of subsisting in comfort "in the decline of years." Hearty good wishes having been expressed from the Provincial Grand Lodge of East Lancashire, the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and other Lodges, business was concluded in peace and harmony, at 8 p.m.

Royal Union Lodge of Instruction, No. 382.—Meeting held on Wednesday, 21st inst., at the Chequers' Hotel, Uxbridge, Bros. Taplin W.M., Brooks S.W., Gray J.W., Andrews P.M. S.D., Bailey J.D., Nicholson I.G. and Tyler. The work comprised the rehearsing of the ceremony of initiation, Bro. Cotton candidate. Bro. Andrews P.M. acted as Preceptor, and worked the fifth section of the first lecture Bro. Brooks S.D. was elected to the chair for next meeting. Lodge was closed and adjourned until Wednesday, the 28th inst.

United Pilgrims Lodge of Instruction, No. 507.—A meeting was held at the Surrey Masonic Hall, Camberwell New Road, S.E., on Friday evening, 16th inst. The attendance of members on this occasion was not so large as usual, but a good evening's work afforded useful instruction to those present. Amongst them were Bros. J. Bate W.M., H. M. Williams S.W., G. W. Knight J.W., C. H. Phillips S.D., A. Blank J.D., J. W. Watts P.M. I.G., J. S. Terry P.M. Secretary, James Stevens P.M. Preceptor; and others. Lodge was opened in first and second degrees, and proof of proficiency given by candidate for raising. Lodge opened in the third degree, and the ceremony, with traditional history, was ably rehearsed by the W.M. Lodge was then closed down to the first degree, for discussion on points of ritual, and subsequently was closed in due form, and the meeting adjourned to the 23rd inst., when the entire lectures on first and second tracing boards will be given by the Preceptor. On Friday, 30th inst., the ceremony of installation of W.M. will be rehearsed by Bro. Stevens, who has been elected W.M. for that occasion.

Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, No. 860.—Met on Tuesday, 28th instant, at Brother Smyth's, Sisters' Tavern, Pownall-road, Dalston. Present—Bros. Catling W.M., Edwards S.W., Glass J.W., Christian S.D., Corble J.D., A. J. Clark I.G., F. Carr Secretary, Wallington P.M. Preceptor; also Bros. Brasted, Wardell, Jones, Banker, Smyth, Gosling, Forss, Young, &c. After preliminaries, Bro. Banker offered himself as candidate for raising; he was interrogated and entrusted, and duly raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason. The Lodge was called from labour to refreshment, and afterwards resumed its Masonic duties, when Bro. Forss worked the second, and Bro. Christian the third section of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. The Lodge was closed to the first degree, when Bro. Edwards was elected W.M. for the ensuing week. Bro. James Stevens P.M. P.Z. will deliver his Lecture Explanatory of the Rituals and Ceremonies of the first degree, in the above Lodge of Instruction, on 11th July proximo.

Grey Friars Lodge of Instruction, No. 1101.—A regular Lodge meeting was held on Wednesday, 14th June. Present—Bros. E. J. Blackwell W.M., W. Ferguson I.P.M., R. Dowsett S.W., H. Margrett P.M. acting J.W., Stransom Treasurer, Ivey P.M. Secretary, Hawkes S.D., Prickett J.D., Hickie Organist, Ravenscroft I.G., Hemmings Tyler; Bro. J. E. Danks P.P.G.S. of W. Berks and Bucks P.M.; Bros. Hukins, Rhind, Whitfield, Creed, W. Blackwell, Greenaway, Bailey, Slaughter. Visitors—Bros. Tarrant 1158, Butler M.C. 414. Lodge was opened in the first degree, when the minutes of last regular Lodge were read and confirmed. The ballot was taken for Mr. W. Margrett, who was declared to be elected. The Lodge was opened in the second degree; Bro. Slaughter, a candidate for raising, gave satisfactory proof of his effeciency in the former degree; he was entrusted and retired. Lodge was opened in the third degree, and Brother Slaughter was re-admitted and raised. The ceremony was admirably performed by the Master and Officers, the effect being considerably heightened by the vocal and instrumental parts, under the able direction of Brother Hickie Organist. The W.M. gave the charge and the traditional history in a masterly manner. Lodge was resumed to the first degree. The sum of ten guineas was voted to the R.M.I.B., to be added to the list of Brother Margrett P.M., who will represent the Lodge at the forthcoming festival of that Institution, the amount was ordered to be placed in the name of the S.W. of the Lodge. Brother Stransom was nominated as Treasurer for the ensuing year. The labours of the evening being ended, Lodge was closed according to ancient form, and adjourned to the second Wednesday in October.

Brixton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1949.— This Lodge met as usual on Tuesday evening, 20th inst., at Bro. George Monk's, Prince Regent, Dulwich-road, East Brixton. Present—Bros. Hy. Baldwin W.M., George Millen S.W., H. Goodwin J.W., C. H. Phillips Treasurer, Hy. M. Williams Secretary, E. A. Francis Preceptor, G. W. Knight S.D., R. R. Johnstone J.D., J. Perry I.G., John A. Danks, Walter Millen, G. Monk, and others. Lodge was opened in the first degree, and the Secretary read the minutes of the previous Lodge meeting, which were duly confirmed. The Lodge was opened in the second degree, and the ceremony of passing ably rehearsed by the W.M. with Bro. Millen as candidate. The Lodge was opened in the third, and closed to the first degree. The Secretary proposed, the Treasurer seconded, and it was resolved unanimously, that Bro. John A. Danks, of the Royal Leopold Lodge, No. 1669, be elected a member. Bro. Danks suitably responded; as likewise did Bro. Monk, who was elected at the previous meeting. The remaining business having been transacted, and Bro. Geo. Millen elected as W.M. for the ensuing week, the Lodge was closed in due form.

OXFORD AND MILITARY COLLEGE, OXON.

THE Annual Speech Day of this Institution, which prepares candidates for Woolwich, Sandhurst, Home and Indian Civil Service, took place on the 21st instant. Lord Waveney, in the absence of His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, who wrote to express his regret at not being able to attend, gave away the prizes to the successful competitors for military proficiency. Letters of regret were likewise read from Lords Hertford and Jersey, Colonel Sir Robert Loyd Lindsay, Bishop Claughton, and many others. His lordship was supported by General Burnaby, M.P., and Colonel F. Duncan R.A. The proceedings opened by an inspection of the students on parade; after the riding, sword, lance, and carbine exercises had been gone through, the reports of the Governor, General Desborough, and the Disciplinarian, Colonel Macarthy, on the military studies, were read. The Sword of Honour, given by Colonel Sir Robert Loyd Lindsay to the student passing highest into Sandhurst or Woolwich, was awarded to Mr. Reade, and another sword, given for military proficiency, by Lord Waveney, was awarded to Mr. Hibbert. His lordship addressed the students at some length, and said that he was glad to find so much stress was laid by the College authorities upon the study of modern languages, the importance of which could not be well over-rated now-a-days; he complimented the students upon the able manner in which they had performed the various military exercises. General Burnaby, M.P., said he too attached the greatest importance to the study of modern languages by military men, particularly that of French and German. Colonel Duncan said he was sure that if marks were given by the Examiners for physical training, the students from the College would have a great advantage over those coming from other Institutions. After an excellent luncheon, General Burnaby proposed the usual complimentary toasts.

THE FESTIVAL OF THE R.M.I.B.

THE Anniversary Festival, at the Royal Pavilion, Brighton, on Wednesday, of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, passed off satisfactorily in most respects. There was a genial and energetic chairman in the person of the Right Hon. Brother Lord Mayor Sir John Whittaker Ellis, Bart., Grand Junior Warden, who was loyally supported by Sir W. W. Burrell, Bart., M.P., the Grand Master of the Province of Sussex, the Grand Secretary, Brother Marriott, Q.C., M.P., one of the Parliamentary representatives of Brighton, and a goodly company of ladies and brethren. The weather was everything that could be desired, the catering and accommodation excellent, and the enthusiasm considerable. It will be seen that, under these circumstances, one thing only was needed to complete the satisfaction of the guests, and that was a subscription list filled to overflowing. The amount which Bro. Binckes announced in the course of the evening was £11,588, which, it must be conceded, was a goodly sum, but not exactly in correspondence with what we had hoped for. Perhaps it is not altogether surprising that this Festival of Wednesday should have yielded only what it has. The year began very successfully, with an aggregate of subscriptions to the R.M.B.I. amounting, as announced at the time, to £12,237, afterwards increased to £12,500. The Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls in May yielded still more abundantly, the total being £13,232, with, as usual, more lists to follow. The £11,588 of Wednesday exhibits the reaction, which is but natural perhaps after the prodigious exertions at the previous Festivals, but which, in respect of the Boys' School, is none the less lamentable. Be this as it may, we know that the year 1882 at its triad of Anniversaries has yielded a grand total of £37,057, or an average per Anniversary of £12,352.

But to resume our narrative of the actual doings at the Festival. We have said already that the Lord Mayor presided, and that he was loyally supported by the Prov. G. Master of Sussex, Bro. Marriott, Q.C., one of the members for Brighton, and the Grand Secretary. Among others present were the Lady Mayoress, Bro. Hallet Mayor and the Mayoress of Brighton, Bros. J. Wordsworth President of the Board of Stewards, J. M. Case P.G.D., Dr. Jabez Hogg P.G.D., Charles Greenwood P.G.S.B., Raynham W. Stewart P.G.D., John S. Scott P.G.D. D.Pr. G. M. Sussex, George Plucknett P.G.D. Treasurer of the Institution, Horace B. Marshall, C.C., Acting President of the Board of Stewards, Matthew Clarke P.G.D., Baron De Ferrieres, M.P., John Messent G.S.B., C. W. Thompson Hon. Treasurer, E. C. Davies P.G.S., Rev. Dr. Morris Head Master of the School, H. G. Buss Assistant Grand Secretary, D. M. Dewar, Adlard, Grabham, Terry Sec. R.M.B.I., Hedges Sec. R.M.I.G., S. Rosenthal, Sir John Bennett, J. H. Cohen, Geo. Kenning, W. R. Wood, Wyndham Burrell, G. P. Festa, F. W. Otter, C. R. Burrell, Mather, Edgar Bowyer, C. F. Matier, &c., &c. On removal of the cloth the loyal toasts were disposed of with the accustomed warmth, and then the Mayor of Brighton gave that of the Chairman, in doing which he paid a high compliment to his Lordship, as well as to a former Lord Mayor of London, who had likewise during his mayoralty presided at the Festival of the Boys' School. The Lord Mayor cordially acknowledged both the manner in which the toast of his health had been proposed, and the reception it had experienced. The health of the Grand Officers was given by Bro. Marriott, Q.C., M.P., who remarked that, while he did not know how many Provinces were represented on the occasion; of this he was quite certain, that if the others were as well off as Sussex in possessing such a chief as Sir W. W. Burrell, they must indeed be exceedingly fortunate. The toast having been suitably acknowledged, the Lord Mayor gave the toast of the day, and having quoted a saying of the late Earl of Beaconsfield to the effect that while it was individuals who formed communities, it was institutions that made a nation, went on to appeal to those present, but especially to the ladies, to support the School. "Is there," he said, "any object that can be more moving to their hearts and souls than that the little children who are left in unfortunate circumstances, by reason of the death of their parents, or by reason of some misfortune that has overtaken them—can there be any object more dear to their hearts and souls than that these children should have fatherly and motherly care extended to them by this Institution? Ladies and brethren, I say that that ought to stir the heart of every Freemason, and it is by such means that great ends are attained." Then, he added, great sums may be given by those who are in prosperous circumstances, but a far better plan is for the general body to act together, each contributing what he can afford to give. Having paid a high compliment to our Rev. Bro. Morris, the Head Master, his lordship sought to impress on those present the necessity of contributing liberally towards a School which was so well conducted, which had thus far been so successful, and which at the same time stood so much in need of support. With the toast was associated the name of Bro. Plucknett, the Treasurer of the Institution, who briefly responded to the compliment. At this period of the proceedings, owing to the Lord Mayor being under the necessity of leaving, Bro. Binckes read out the list of contributions, which is appended at pp 20 and 21, and Sir W. W. Burrell having taken his lordship's place as Chairman, the other toasts were drunk. Bro. Baron de Ferrières, M.P., briefly acknowledged that of the Vice-Patrons, Vice-Presidents, Trustees, and members of Committee, while Bro. the Mayor of Brighton responded to a similar compliment proposed by the Grand Secretary, the Health of the Ladies concluding the proceedings. Bro. W. Ganz had charge of the musical arrangements, and the band of the School, under band-master Whare, was also in attendance, and contributed successfully to the general entertainment. Having thus far reported, in brief, the proceedings, let us betake ourselves to our accustomed task of analysing the subscription list.

Taking the Metropolis first, we find that ninety-seven of its Lodges were represented by one hundred Stewards, a Knight Templar Preceptory, and the Dinner Committee of the Institution, together with thirteen Stewards unattached, making up a total of 115 Representatives for this district. The total of the lists, so far as they have been received, amount to £5,646 17s 5d, the following being among the most considerable:—Temple Bar Lodge, No. 1728, sends up, per Bro. T. W. C. Bush, £291; the Earl of Carnarvon, No. 1642, per Bro. Samuel Smout, being a good second with £261 9s to its credit. Next in order is the Montagus Guest Lodge, No. 1900, with £182 18s 11d, of which £177 13s 11d belongs to Bro. Festa's list, and the other £5 5s to that of Bro. W. H. Dean. The Creaton Lodge, No. 1791, with Bro. John Williams for its Steward, contributes £164, and the Metropolitan, No. 1407, per Bro W. M. Stiles, £153 11s. Bro. Frederick Brewer, acting on behalf of the Kilburn, No. 1608, figures for the very respectable total of £142 16s, the London Rifle Brigade Lodge, No. 1962, per Brother Neville Green, for £130 12s 6d, and the Aldersgate, No. 1657, per Brother Alfred Brookman, and the Islington, No. 1471, per Brother D. Pound Holness, for £115 10s and £112 7s respectively. Felicity Lodge, No. 58, on whose behalf Bro. W. J. Crump did duty as Steward, is close at the heels of the two preceding, with £110 5s. Royal Athelstan, per Bro. E. B. Grabham, has given £105 16s, and the Duke of Edinburgh, No. 1259, per Brother Edward Jex, £105, while Friends in Council, No. 1383, per Brother K. R. Murchison, with £103 8s, and Brother Goodall, for Dinner Committee R.M.I.B., with £102 18s, bring the three-figure lists to a close. Corinthian, No. 1382, per Brother J. Delves, contributes only a fraction short of £100, namely, £98 3s 6d. The Lodges which are always to be found on the lists on these occasions are also represented. Thus, while the older Lodges are to the fore, as usual, we find the younger Lodges entering into honourable rivalry with them, and, indeed, in this instance, even taking the lead. On the whole, the Metropolis may congratulate itself on having done so well.

Of the Provinces three-fourths were represented, the absentees being Bedford, Cambridgeshire, and Herefordshire, as usual; Bristol, Cornwall, Cumberland and Westmoreland, Lincolnshire, Monmouthshire, Norths and Hunts, Northumberland, Nottinghamshire, Guernsey, Isle of Man, and the Channel Islands, the last two, like Beds, having no Provincial Organisation; but unlike that county being remote from the headquarters of Masonry, and consequently not expected to contribute like the Provinces and Lodges in England itself. The majority of the foregoing absentees, however, are very far from being unmindful of their duty towards our Institutions, and if they are not represented regularly, they are so frequently, and to good purpose. But to pass on. Taking in their alphabetical order the thirty Provinces, which, by the hands of their Stewards, contributed amongst them £6,081 0s 7d, we find that Berks and Bucks, with its twenty-one Lodges, four of which were represented, by half a dozen Stewards, contributes £176 18s. In February, at the Benevolent Festival, it gave £243 14s, and at that of the Girls in May £198 13s 6d. This gives a total for the current year of £619 5s 6d, and an exceeding good total into the bargain. Cheshire, with its thirty-eight Lodges, figures for the comparatively small sum of £56 10s, by the hands of three Stewards, acting for as many Lodges. In February, one of its Lodges gave £45 to the Benevolent, while in May seven of its Lodges worthily upheld its reputation, by raising amongst them £321 6s; the three amounts making together £422 6s. It must, however, be recollected that in this Province there is a very flourishing Educational Masonic Institution, which expends every year not far short of £200 in educating and advancing the children of distressed and deceased brethren, and has a snug little nest-egg of its own in the shape of over £4,000. Derbyshire (19 Lodges) contributes £176 14s 6d, five Stewards, representing as many Lodges, having charge of its interests. It had already contributed £53 11s to the Benevolent, and £459 16s to the Girls' School, so that it has given this year to our Institutions a sum total of £690 1s 6d. Devonshire (50 Lodges) gives £241 10s, in addition to £318 5s in May to Our Girls, and the nominal sum of £5 5s to the Benevolent in February, but here again we have a local Charity, which has been only recently established, and, of course, diverts to its own use some of the moneys raised by the Craft in the county. Dorset (thirteen Lodges) sends £84, one list being yet outstanding, and this, in addition to £36 15s in February to the R.M.B.I., and £73 10s to the R.M.I.G. in May. This makes up a respectable total for so small a Province, but doubtless it would have been greater still, but for the heavier efforts of previous years. Durham (twenty-seven Lodges) sends up, per two Stewards, £286 15s; at each of the previous Festivals it gave £63, making for the year £406 15s. What it did last year, when its chief, the Marquis of Londonderry, K.P., presided at the Festival of the Boys, held in the same locality, is still fresh in the recollection of our readers. Essex (nineteen Lodges) began the year with a contribution of £93 10s to the Benevolent. This it followed up with £15 15s (one other list being still due) to the Girls', and now "Our Boys" benefit to the handsome tune of £243 9s 1d. Gloucestershire, under its popular chief, Bro. Sir M. Hicks-Beach, Bart., M.P., has been doing capitally of late, its contributions at the three Festivals of the current year being, in the order of their occurrence, £115 10s, £137 11s, and £279 6s, making together £532 7s, which is satisfactory for its fourteen Lodges. We have seen larger totals sent in by the Province of Hants and Isle of Wight, with its thirty-six Lodges. Still, having regard to what has been done on former occasions, and its subscription of £290 10s to the Benevolent in February, and £278 5s to the Girls in May, we cannot be otherwise than satisfied with its present contribution to the Boys of £186 7s 6d. "Little Herts," with its eleven Lodges, began the year splendidly, with £533 14s to the Benevolent. It followed this up in May with £325 11s to the Girls, and now it hands over to the sister Institution no less than £190 9s 6d, making a grand total for the year of £1,049 14s 6d. We need hardly be at the trouble of repeating a former exclamation of ours when the same Province similarly distinguished itself. Kent (46 Lodges) is entered for £248 16s, which, with £370 9s 6d in February, and £356 13s 6d in May, make up £975 19s.

We must now betake ourselves northward, and have a glimpse at the Lancashires; the Eastern Division (ninety-one Lodges) contributing £273, and the Western (eighty-one Lodges) £367 13s. In February the former raised £414 19s 6d for the Benevolent, and in May £84 for the Girls, while the latter at the same Festivals contributed £237 19s and £84 respectively. These amounts, of course, sound small for our two largest Provinces, and especially if we compare them with those that are smaller. Yet we must keep in mind that on the two occasions on which the Earl of Lathom has been Chairman he has had the liberal support of the Western Lodges, while Colonel Starkie, P.G.M. of the Eastern Division, when he presided at the Benevolent Festival, experienced an equally loyal support from the members. Leicester and Rutland (ten Lodges), another small Province, supplements its subscription to the Benevolent in February, of £152 15s, with £89s 5s on the present occasion—or together £242, no bad sum for so few Lodges. Middlesex (32 Lodges) invariably shows to advantage. It began the year with £408 2s for the Benevolent. In May it followed this up with £408 6s 6d to the Girls, and now it completes its work with £359 6s 6d for "Our Boys." A total of £1,175 15s needs no comment. Norfolk (16 Lodges) gave a modest £36 15s in February; in May its contribution, per Lord Suffield, its P.G.M., reached £102 7s 6d; on Wednesday it increased these by £61 19s. Oxfordshire (10 Lodges) has contributed this year £176 18s to the Benevolent, £149 2s to "Our Girls," and £78 18s 6d to "Our Boys," in all £304 18s 6d, or an average per Lodge of about £30 10s. Somersetshire (22 Lodges), which gives £118 13s, has not figured before at either Festival this year, but it has liberally supported all our Institutions in turn when it has found a convenient opportunity. Staffordshire (26 Lodges) started with a contribution of £26 5s in February. In May it raised £289 16s for the Girls, and now it crowns its previous labours with a handsome sum of £348 1s 6d, in all £664 2s 6d. Well done, Staffordshire! Suffolk (20 Lodges) contributes £110, in addition to £130 3s in February, and £71 12s in May, or, in all, £311 15s.

Passing thence to the Province of Surrey, we find ourselves near home again. It has twenty-four Lodges, and in February contributed £162 1s 6d, in May £242 0s 6d, and on Wednesday £90 13s, the sum total of the three being £494 15s. Sussex also has twenty-four Lodges, and like Gloucestershire has a popular chief—Sir W. W. Burrell, Bart., M.P. Last year, when the Boys' Anniversary was for the first time held out of the Metropolitan district, Brighton was chosen as the scene of the Festivities, and the Province gave over £700 to this School. It could hardly be expected to repeat this year so handsome a sum, yet it has done well in raising £179 11s, in addition to £162 9s in February for the Benevolent, and £577 10s for the Girls in May: grand total £919 10s. We congratulate Sussex accordingly. Warwickshire (30 Lodges) raised £810 10s for the Girls' School in May, and now gives "Our Boys" £187 19s, or together only a few shillings less than £1000. Wilts (19 Lodges) gave £89 5s in February, and £56 3s in May, or together £145 8s. On Wednesday, it made up a total of £161 14s, thus carrying its contributions beyond £300. Worcestershire (eleven Lodges) has bestirred itself of late, and figures this year at all three Festivals, its February contribution being £176 8s, that in May £42, and that on Wednesday £169 1s, or, together £287 9s. North Wales and Salop (27 Lodges) began the year with £160 7s 6d towards the R.M.B.I., and in May it made up a total of £352 10s. On Wednesday it contributed only £24 3s, but its total for the year is considerably in excess of £500, which is by no means an unworthy result. South Wales, Eastern Division (15 Lodges), figured for £200 in May, and on Wednesday handed over a total of £374 6s 6d, while its Western neighbour, with nine Lodges, raised £360 3s at the Benevolent Festival, the Chairman of the day being none other than Col. Lloyd-Philipps, its Prov. Grand Master. This time it has sent up a Steward, but as yet there is no return. North and East Yorkshire, with twenty-seven Lodges, supplements its £42 of February, and £500 of May with a comfortable £103 2s on this occasion, while its powerful Western neighbour, with sixty-six Lodges, contributes £603 15s, making, with £350 to the Benevolent, and £650 to the Girls, a total of £1,603 15s. Very much bravo, West Yorkshire. Two contributions from abroad, one being Bro. Broadley's list of £90, and the other Bro. Windrieur's of £31 10s, with Bro. Matier's, as representing the Mark Degree, to the tune of £74 1s, completes our survey.

To sum up these results. The amount announced was £11,588, but as invariably happens, other sums drop in almost immediately after the Festival, and the figures as we publish them elsewhere give London, £5,646 17s 5d; Provinces £5,885 9s 7d; Foreign Stations and Mark Degree £195 11s; total, 11,714 5s. We congratulate Bro. Binckes on having so nearly approached £12,000, though we could have welcomed for him even better fortune still.

THE CHESHIRE EDUCATIONAL MASONIC INSTITUTION.

WE have before us the Nineteenth Report of this admirable Provincial organisation for the education and advancement in life of the children of distressed and deceased Freemasons. It contains no features of especial interest, there having been in the course of the twelve months to which it relates no efforts made out of the ordinary course, either by Lectures or other entertainments, to increase the funds of the Institution. Yet it is satisfactory to note that the whole of the current expenditure has been defrayed out of the income derived from invested moneys, so that it has been unnecessary to trench upon the sum received in fees, donations, and subscriptions. The property of the Institution consists of £3,720 6s 3d, invested advantageously in various approved securities, and there are balances in the North and South Wales Bank and hands of Treasurer, amounting together to £401 2s. It is to be regretted, however, that the Committee should have felt themselves under the necessity of inserting in the Report the following paragraph:—

"It is a matter of extreme regret that the majority of the Lodges and Chapters in the Province do not contribute to this Institution. Surely the Worshipful Masters do not bring its importance sufficiently before their Lodges. Why they do not do so is an enigma. From experience your Committtee find that it is only when a Lodge has a candidate that they make any special exertion to augment the funds of the Institution, whereas, Masonically speaking, the whole of the Lodges in the Province ought to contribute to this, their special home Charity."

We do not doubt that it must have been painful for the Committee to write in such forcible terms, but there are occasions on which it is as well to be outspoken. It is within the general experience of all Masons that, as there are some Lodges and brethren who make a point of regularly, or, at all events, frequently subscribing to our Charities, whether local or central, so are there others which are as regularly conspicuous by their absence from subscription lists, or, if they contribute at all, do so but very seldom. In this respect, therefore, Cheshire does not stand alone. Yet, if there are in its ranks, as there are in London and the other Provinces, a number of members who are indifferent to the claims of Charity, those who are otherwise minded have every reason to be proud of this Institution.

The audited statement of accounts shows receipts for last year amounting to £586 16s 9d, of which £10 10s 9d was the balance brought forward from last year; fees, donations, and subscriptions from Lodges, Chapters, and brethren to the extent of £244 9s, including £7 from Lord De Tabley P.G.M. and Lady De Tabley; interest on investments £181 17s; and £150, being the amount received in respect of a Mersey Dock Bond, expired 1st July 1881. The Expenditure reached the sum of £185 14s 9d, £135 3s 8d being for the education of twenty-two children, and £10 10s for the advancement of two, leaving only a fraction of over £40 for all the expenses incidental to printing, audit and committee meetings, stationery, postages, &c. The Balance in North and South Wales Bank at the close of the year was £301 17s 5d, and in Treasurer's hands £99 4s 7d, making together, as already stated, £401 2s. Adding this to the £3,720 6s 3d invested in different securities, we find the available resources of the Institution amount to £4,121 8s 3d, a goodly sum, it must be admitted.

Having in previous years described at length the qualifications and privileges of Governors, and the qualifications which candidates for the benefits of the Institution must possess, we need not be at the trouble of repeating them. We shall merely add, therefore, to the foregoing remarks our congratulations to Lord De Tabley and the brethren of the Province who support him, on the efficiency and success of the work they have been doing during past years, and the expression of a hope that those who have not hitherto done anything towards advancing the interests of this Institution will take the words of the Committee to heart, and pluck up courage to lend a helping hand in the future. Let them follow the worthy example, mentioned in the report, of the Lodge of Instruction attached to the Lodge of Industry, No. 461, Hyde, which has just contributed the sum of £5 5s to the funds in order to constitute its Preceptor a Life Governor.

Colonel Creaton presided at a meeting of the General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, held on Thurday, 29th June, when there were also present Bros. E. Letchworth, F. Richardson, J. H. Matthews, H. A. Dubois, Joshua Nunn, P. de L. Long, R. Grey, J. A. Rucker, E. H. Finney, Edgar Bowyer, A. E. Gladwell, F. W. Ramsay, H. Phythian, J. Terry, C. H. Webb. R. W. Stewart and E. C. Massey. After the minutes of the last General Committee had been verified, and the minutes of the Special General Court and the House Committee had been read for information, the sum of £1000 was, on the recommendation of the Treasurer, ordered to be invested. On the recommendation of the House Committee, Louisa Broadbent, the "next pupil," was appointed at a salary of £20 a-year as an additional assistant in the clothing department. Sixteen petitions were considered, of which fifteen were approved, and the names ordered to be added to the list of candidates for election.

The Secretary to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys acknowledges a contribution of one hundred and fifty guineas, from a member of the Court of Common Council, at the Anniversary Festival, presided over by the Rt. Hon. the Lord Mayor.

We have already drawn attention elsewhere to Bro. Festa's List of £177 13s 11d for the Boys' Festival. We are glad, however, to note further that he was one of the Reception Committee at Brighton on Wednesday, and what is still more to our purpose, as illustrating the keen interest he takes in our Institutions, that he gave a special prize at Tuesday's prize distribution at Wood Green for Short Hand.

We are very much pleased to find that the Royal Victoria Lodge, No. 1013, Liverpool, has, after a long absence, reappeared in a list of Festival contributions. The amount raised is entered as £40, and we trust that Bro. Tomlinson, who acted as Steward, and who is taking great interest in his Lodge, will induce it to repeat this effort on future occasions with praiseworthy regularity.

The installation meeting of the Cornwallis Lodge, No. 1107, will take place on Wednesday next, at the Lullingstone Castle Hotel, Swanley, Kent, Bro. H. Cleverly is the W.M. elect.

BRO. RAYNHAM STEWART'S MOTION.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I can hardly bring myself to imagine that any attempt will be made at the September Communication of Grand Lodge to non-confirm so much of the June minutes as relate to the grant of £800 to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution out of the Fund of General Purposes. The proposal, when first submitted to Grand Lodge, last December, was agreed to unanimously. Then in March it was held over for a Committee of inquiry into the income of the said Fund of General Purposes to report. In June that Committee reported that the Fund had a net income, which had better have been described as a clear balance to the good, of £4,000. On this Bro. Stewart re-submitted his motion, which was carried over a rival proposition that the grant should consist of no more than £400 by a respectable, if not a particularly large, majority. Surely, in the face of these facts, no brother will have the hardihood to suggest that Grand Lodge, having ample funds at its disposal, should again commit itself so egregiously as to rescind a motion which has been twice agreed to by the brethren. Still it is quite as well that a note of warning should be sounded, so that the supporters of the motion may rally in sufficient numbers to prevent the catastrophe which has awakened the fears of "OLIM, 474."

Approving, as I do, this portion of your correspondent's letter, I the more regret that he should have singled out for condemnation the mover of the amendment on the ground that, though he "professed his willingness to do what he could for the Charities," his name was not to be found in the subscription lists issued by the Institution. "OLIM, 474" should remember, as has been remarked by another of your correspondents, that a man may do a great deal of good without giving money.

Fraternally yours,

M. M.

THE DEGENERACY OF FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Various articles have from time to time appeared in your valuable paper (which I am glad to observe is attracting increasing attention in my Province) upon the subject of Masonic impositions, and the questionable uses to which Freemasonry is put as a medium for pushing trade. The matter is one upon which all true Masons must feel deeply, as they are constrained to preserve the integrity, and to maintain the honour, of our beloved Institution. But there are two sides to every question, and there is no rule without an exception. I am not fond of rushing into print, and do not purpose in this letter to touch upon the vexed question of "Trading on Masonry," which was so ably dealt with in a recent article in the CHRONICLE, and which has excited no small amount of comment here. But in conversing with a brother the other day on the subject of charity—the keystone of all our Masonic professions—the remarks turned upon the wisdom or otherwise of putting too freely into practice the "distinguishing characteristic" of which we are so forcibly reminded at the North-east corner.

Now, I have painfully observed, in the columns of your own and other Masonic journals, explicit "cautions," and, indeed, somewhat ostentatious ones, exhorting the brethren to "beware of Masonic impostors," and one can hardly hardly help entertaining a shrewd idea that these monitions do not spring from the charitable strata of the writers' hearts. Unquestionably, there are many amongst us who, from unforeseen circumstances of calamity and misfortune are reduced to the lowest ebb of poverty and distress, whom it is our bounden duty to relieve if within the bounds of possibility. Are we then to leave all our humane and noble inspirations and all our benevolence at the North-east corner, where we have nothing to bestow? There may be a few, and it strikes me very few, who adopt the nomadic profession in Freemasonry, who levy their black-mail continually on the indiscriminating benevolent. Such an unworthy brother would surely be detected; and, without publishing his name and his doings to the world, there should be a means of cutting short his career of imposture. But, on the other hand, how many brethren have we amongst us who, though utte[illegible]down and overwhelmed by adverse circumstances, would fain, like [illegible]ther poor man we read of, stretch forth a grateful hand for the crumbs that fall from the rich man's table, but dare not? To work he cannot; to beg he is ashamed.

I have been told such scenes in this regard as would make an angel weep; nor do I descend to maudlin sentimentality when I use the expression. For instance, not long ago a poor wayworn brother, once in comparative comfort, and a willing supporter of his Lodge, but now utterly broken down, was seen shivering in the cold and wet, outside a brilliantly-lighted hotel, within whose sumptuous walls the voices of mirth and fraternal greeting resounded merrily. The poor fellow, by some instinct, or information, knew there were in that jovial company those who professed to hold charity as a most cardinal point of the Masonic profession; and so, heart-sick and weary—and hungry—he waited in hope that brotherly love relief and truth might find exemplification in some at least of those who joined in the after-dinner sentiments which usually hover round the banquet table. The Tyler had concluded the "official programme" with his prayer for "all poor and distressed Masons," and the few lingerers, who are ever to be found on such occasions, were enjoying a "last glass" at the bar before parting for the night. Hesitatingly—for he had not been accustomed to supplicate—the destitute brother approached, and enquired whether there were any Freemasons present? In an instant, as though a thunderbolt had fallen, every tongue was silent, and all the loud expressions uttered upstairs of charity vanished into thin air! The dejected one was too faint and exhausted to be importunate, and with a despairing look around, he withdrew, into the cold and rain, unrelieved, hungry, and homeless!

This is not a fancy picture, but a fact; and when we are so glib in talking about, and cautioning the would-be benevolent against, presumed impostors—for, mind you, the genuine ones may speedily be detected—let us pause and consider how many there are who, having seen "better days," shrink even in the dire hour of need from looking askance at the hand of charity, to whom a little aid would be the revival of hope, if not the raising of life. We are too apt, I fancy, to be a little Pharisaical in our dispensation of alms. What if even an unworthy brother extorts a few shillings from the Lodge funds or from individuals? Better that than allow one genuine case of distress to go unrelieved, and a libel perpetrated on the professions of the Craft. If a little more discretion were observed in the Fourth Degree, we should have the wherewithal to be a little more real in our practice of charity, and it would be to the lasting credit of the Craft if the figures in our balance-sheets, under the respective heads of "house expenses" and "benevolence" were a little more equalised. I could multiply instances such as the one I have quoted, but must not trespass on your space.

I remain, Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

A CONSTANT READER.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—This cooling Medicine has the happiest effect when the blood is overheated and a tendency to inflammatory action is set up in the system; one Pill taken shortly before dinner does away with the indigestion, fullness, and flatulency—indications of a weak stomach, or disordered liver. A few Pills taken at bedtime act as alteratives and aperients; they not only relieve the bowels, but regulate every organ connected with them, overcome all acrid humours, and encourage a free suppy of all the secretions essential to our well-being. Holloway's Pills thoroughly cleanse and perfectly regulate the circulation, and beget a feeling of comfort in hot climates and high temperatures, which is most desirable for preservation of health.

PORT ELIZABETH.

LODGE OF GOOD HOPE, No. 863.

THE Masonic Temple of Port Elizabeth was, on Thursday, 20th April last, attended by an unusually large number of the brethren, fully a hundred from various parts being present. The occasion was the installation of Bro. A. C. Wylde (C.C. and R.M.) as Worshipful Master for the ensuing year. In addition to the Officers and others of the Goodwill and Southern Cross (Uitenhage) Lodges, Brother W. Wedderburn P.M. of Grahamstown, and many others made homage to the worthy and accepted Master elect. The installing Officer was the District Grand Senior Warden, Bro. C. W. Mouat P.M., and he was assisted by Past Masters Bros. Wheelwright, Smythe, Blakeway, Dickinson, James Kemsley, Wedderburn, J. W. C. Mackay, S. White, and others Before proceeding with the business, the District Grand Senior Warden said he had been requested by the members of the Lodge of Good Hope to invest Bro. Mackay P.M. with a jewel, in recognition of his services in the years 1879-80, and he had much pleasure in doing so, bearing his own testimony to the appropriateness of the presentation. The recipient, who evidently had not anticipated this, replied in a few chosen words, and the ordinary business of the meeting was proceeded with. The various offices were filled by Past Masters Bros. James Kemsley S.W., Wheelwright J.W., White I.G. After prayer by Bro. the Rev. Dr. Wirgman, Bro. Alfred Carrington Wylde was, in a most impressive manner, installed as W.M., and he then proceeded to invest his Officers, as follow:—Bros. C. Dickenson I.P.M., E. Cohn S.W., Rev. A. Grant Chaplain and J.W., C. T. Wheelwright P.M. Treasurer, E. R. Smyther P.M. Secretary, A. W. Rowsell S.D., H. Light J.D., E. H. Gunning I.G., J. Bredell Organist, W. Henderson Tyler. Due honour having been paid to the W.M. elected, Lodge was closed, and the brethren present were invited to attend a banquet given by the Lodge of Good Hope in the Leidertafel Hall, which had been kindly lent for the occasion. Here a most sumptuous repast was provided, and at about half-past nine the guests sat down, the chair being taken by A. C. Wylde W.M., his two principal Officers serving as croupiers. Messrs. Duncan Brothers, who acted as caterers, needed no better proof than they received of the hearty appreciation by all present of their efforts to afford satisfaction, and the Stewards of the Lodge were indefatigable in attending to the wants of their brethren. After ample time had been allowed in the Junior Wardens' department, the Chairman proposed first the Queen and the Craft, and next H R.H. the Prince of Wales M.W.G.M., at the same time expatiating upon the beneficial influence exercised by Royalty in upholding the dignity of the ancient Craft, when supported by such worthy brethren as the members of the English Royal Family. The health of Bro. Egan Deputy Grand Master was heartily received, and his regret at not being able to attend was shared by all present. The toast of the W.M. of the Lodge of Good Hope was happily given by Bro. Mouat, and responded to by Bro. Wylde, who expressed his warm attachment to the principles of Freemasonry, and his heartfelt desire to advance the Order here during his term of office. He then, in turn, proposed the health of Bro. C. T. W. Mouat the Installing Officer, and bore testimony to the many obligations the Lodges were under to him. In a speech of some length, and much eloquence, the D.G.S.W. responded. He exhorted his hearers to a more active interest in Masonry and the study of grand truths underlying it, and gave his own case as one in proof of the distinction one can rise to in the Craft. The other toasts proposed—were, by Bro. Mackay, the Newly Installed Officers, responded to by Bro. Cohn; by Bro. J. Kemsley, the Immediate Past Master, responded to by Bro. Dickinson; by Bro. S. White, the Retiring Officers, responded to by Bro. Josling; by Bro. Wheelwright, the W.M. Good Will Lodge, responded to by Bro. Blakeway; by Bro. Reade, the Southern Cross Lodge, responded to by Brother Smythe; the Visiting Brethren, responded to by Bros. W. Wedderburne and Disney Roebuck; by Bro. Rev. Grant, Past Masters, responded to by Bro. Wheelwright; by Bro. Rev. Bennetts, Sweethearts and Wives, responded to by Bro. C. J. Barber; by Bro. Blakeway, the Banquet Committee, responded to by Bro. Simpson; All poor and distressed brethren, by the Tyler. The National Anthem, sung by Bro. Smerdon, brought the proceedings to a close. During dinner, and the intervals between the speeches, the Theatre Royal Band (which had been generously lent for the occasion by Captain Roebuck,) favoured those present with some choice selections of music, exquisitely rendered, and added much to the pleasures of the evening. The arrangements throughout were perfect, and reflected great credit on all who were instrumental in carrying them out. The jewel presented to Bro. Mackay is a handsome gold and inlaid Past Master's, and bears the following inscription:—"Presented to Bro. J. W. C. Mackay P.M. by the members of Good Hope Lodge, No. 863, Port Elizabeth, South Africa, as a token of esteem, on his retirement from the office of Worshipful Master, 1879-80."

"OUR BOYS" AT WOOD GREEN.

ONE of the finest days that have been vouchsafed to us during this veritable "dripping month of June" smiled upon the pupils who are fortunately cared for by the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, at Wood Green, on Tuesday, the day set apart for the annual visit of the Stewards, and the distribution of prises that had been gained in the various branches of study during the year. The sun shone gloriously the whole day through, from what Tennyson would call a "blue unclouded sky," whilst a gentle breeze was astir, modulating the otherwise sultry atmosphere into a refreshing temperature. As the trains arrived, groups of visitors followed each other in rapid succession towards the Institution, until the gymnasium was crowded by a fashionably-attired company, amongst whom the ladies preponderated, and evinced the liveliest interest in the proceedings. In one corner of the hall a stage had been erected, with proscenium, wings, and all the necessary accessories of a histrionic performance, and the manner in which the lads acquitted themselves reflected the utmost credit upon their preceptors, whilst at the same time bringing their latent elocutionary powers into full and effective play. Near this was a gallery in which the pupils sat, in tiers, and their smart robust appearance gave the best possible proof that their physical, as well as their mental, faculties are most judiciously studied. Bro. Raynham Stewart, as Chairman of the House Committee, occupied the chair, and was supported on the platform by a large number of the executive, together with many of the prominent supporters of the Institution. Bro. Frederick Binckes, the indefatigable Secretary, to whom so much of the success of the School is due, succeeded with ubiquitous tact in making all the arrangements go along smoothly, whilst his urbane manner elicited the remark, by no means in apropos to the occasion, that although he strove with the utmost triumph to please everybody, he was "as much a boy as any of them." The interior of the hall, with its trophies of flags, evergreen decorations, and little bannerets depending from the rafters of the roof, presented a picturesque and animated spectacle, when filled with the hundreds of visitors who were induced by the brilliant weather and an attractive programme, to spend a happy afternoon at Wood Green. The entertainment opened with a part-song, "Britons, arise," arranged from Bellini's "Norma," very nicely sung by the choir, and the manner in which it was sustained gave evidence of careful and efficient training. It was then announced that, in consequence of another engagement, the Lord Mayor, Bro. Sir John Whittaker Ellis, Bart., Grand Junior Warden, P.G.S., and W.M. of the Grand Masters' Lodge, No. 1, would be unable to attend until later in the afternoon, and the prizes presented by the Institution and by private donors were given away by the Chairman of the House Committee, who was in an exceedingly happy vein, and accompanied each award with a few characteristic and humorous observations. The presentations were judiciously divided into sections, and in the intervals the choir sung several selections, including "O hush thee, my baby," (A. S. Sullivan); "'Mid the Golden Corn," (J. L. Hatton), sung for the first time in public, and received with genuine expressions of approbation; "Now is the month of Maying," (Thomas Morley); "Hearth and Home," (Ciro Pinsuti); "The Cuckoo sings in the poplar tree," (G. A. Macfarren); and the "Song of the Vikings," (S. E. Faning); all of which were capitally rendered. Alternating the vocal essays were matches of elocutionary skill, and the way in which the lads debated the somewhat delicate question, "Are the mental capacities of the sexes equal?" afforded not only intense amusement to the audience, but evinced considerable talent and keenness of perception on the part of the "hon. gentlemen" who took part. It is almost unnecessary to say that the decision of the conclave was most flattering to the ladies, whose "busy fans" and arch smiles betokened their entire appreciation of the common sense and judgment of those who took part in the sketch, and whose unanimity on the point was wonderful! The original farce, "B.B.," by Messrs. M. Williams and F. C. Burnand, was capitally enacted, V. J. Lee delineating in capital style Bob Rattles, the ex-chicken and retired prizefighter, while little F. F. Godfrey provoked intense fun by the way in which he sustained the part of Joe, waiter at the Percy Arms. R. Keddell—who had been voted by the ladies as the champion elocutionist, on account of the part in which he took in the opening debate—personated Mr. Benjamin Bobbin, the agent; while C. King made up into a buxom Mrs. Puncheon, the landlady of the hostelry, which formed the head-quarters of the "P.R." W. P. Cooper figured as Dorothy, the housekeeper, and H. P. Pulman, as Squire Greenfield; and the piece went with a smoothness and precision highly creditable to the juvenile actors. Equally good was the farce, by S. A. A'Beckett, "The Man with the Carpet Bag," which was thus cast:—

V. J. Lee was irresistibly droll in his sustentation of the principal character, and came in for repeated outbursts of applause, which were spontaneous and genuine, whilst all the minor parts were well filled in.

Soon after three o'clock there was a general move on the part of the executive on the platform, and the interest of the occasion increased when it was known that the Lord Mayor had arrived. On entering the building, his lordship was received with every expression of welcome, both from the visitors and the boys, and he seemed to evince the liveliest interest in the proceedings.

Bro. Frederick Binckes, addressing the company, said the Lord Mayor, in the midst of his numerous duties, had kindly spared a short time that afternoon to come amongst them, and their thanks were due to him for the interest he thus displayed in the Institution. There had been a large number of prizes distributed, but several of the most important had been reserved for his lordship to give. The first was that which was looked upon as the "blue riband" of the Institution, the silver medal awarded many years past to the pupil who manifested the greatest good conduct, which was regarded by the executive as an essential element amongst the various branches of instruction imparted in the School. He had pleasure in introducing Henry Percy Pulman, the winner of this prize, and the Lord Mayor congratulated him upon the distinction he had won. The next was the Canonbury gold medal, presented by Bro. Edward Cox, Vice Patron, P.M. 657, with the express provision that the boy should be elected by the suffrages of his fellow schoolfellows. While there had been extraordinary differences of opinion as to the policy of awarding a prize under such circumstances—because the boy might be popular amongst the boys, and yet most troublesome to the masters, no one would begrudge Vincent John Lee the distinction he had gained. He (Bro. Binckes) only hoped Lee would be as popular in after life as he had been in the School. Lee was then decorated with the medal and blue ribbon, amidst the cheers of his comrades. The silver watch and chain for general good conduct, presented by the Supreme Council 33° to the pupil leaving the Institution, was then presented to Alfred Ramsay Parker, who was greeted with ringing cheers. They had been fortunate in the Cambridge Local Examinations, and it was a source of intense satisfaction to the management of the Institution that the pupils had reflected honour upon it and upon themselves by the success they had thus gained. Bro. W. Winn P.M. 657, Vice Patron, had presented £525, from the interest of which had been apportioned £23, which sum is divided among those who had taken honours in the senior and junior classes (nineteen candidates passed), and the fortunate winner was deservedly applauded. When the prizes had all been given away, Brother the Lord Mayor said: I must apologise for not spending quite so much time here as I should have desired, but you are aware that there are certain duties that I have to perform—public duties—which I must without fail fulfil. Upon this occasion, however, it certainly is a matter of the deepest interest to me to again be present at a School gathering. Nothing could be of more importance to the country at large than that our youth should be brought up in a manner which shall afterwards make them faithful citizens. I have seen a great number of Institutions in which philanthropic men and beneficent women do that which they thought would be beneficial to the youth of this country, but I have never seen anything more perfect or more complete, or more bold in its design, than this great establishment which I have the honour of visiting to-day. It is another proof of what strength love and affection have, when brought to bear in any benevolent project. There is no more important charity than that those who have lost their parents, or who from various causes could not have afforded to them by their natural protectors that education which they require in youth, should have it provided for them by those who have been more successful and more happy in the world in which we have been placed. I am sure this great Institution is the glory of the Freemasons of England. I have been present at several of the Festivals, and have seen the great interest which the Freemasons take in matters of education; but until I saw the completeness and perfection of this Institution I could not so well apprehend and understand why they took so deep an interest in this place. As regards the boys, I would say to you now, you have all the world before you, and as you sow so must you reap. The "boy is the father of the man," and it is for you now to take advantage of the opportunities which are offered to you, and which will make you in future times happy and wealthy; or, if you disregard them, from the seeds which you now plant will grow up your unhappiness, and in all probability a difficulty even in obtaining your living. I can only say it was these views which filled my own mind when I was at school, and I hope they will fill yours. If you do, it will lead to success and happiness, for depend upon it the world will value the worth you place upon yourselves in the future. In a meeting like this, you cannot ignore the great importance of the masters who have the management of such an establishment as this; and, from what I have been told by the Committee who aid in this undertaking, it is quite clear there is not only talent and learning and ability, but there is a noble sympathy of character, which links the boy to the master, and makes him feel he is not only his teacher but his friend. I should have been pleased if I could have been here earlier and partaken in all the entertainments and pleasures which are connected with prize-giving, and if I could have dealt more at large with this great subject which has been placed in my hands. But I feel you will sympathise somewhat with me in what I have to undertake, or when I tell you how much I should have liked to see the athletic sports. I have only to say, I have to be present this evening at an entertainment to Her Majesty's judges at the Mansion House, so that I am obliged to leave you at an earlier hour than I should otherwise have desired. I thank the Committee for the kindness and courtesy I have received at their hands, and hope success will attend this undertaking, and that there will always be the same amount of sympathy and generosity to carry it on, not only with the great success which has hitherto attended it, but with far greater. I would add one more word to the boys. You must remember it is not possible for all to succeed, and to those who have been successful I only give one word of advice—Never allow one success for a moment to interfere with your continued effort for another success. As soon as you have achieved one success, endeavour to look forward for another. The greatest element of success in life is "courage, courage, courage," or, as the great Athenian orator said, "action, action, action." Never let a stone be unturned, never let an opportunity pass you, always seize every opportunity, look about you, be on the alert, be alive to every occasion, whether in school or out of it, and prizes will come to you when you least expect them. To the unsuccessful boys I would only say, the world is before you; the field has never been trampled by your feet; and you should exert yourselves in such a way as to ensure success in the future, and never be discouraged.

Bro. Raynham Stewart, in the name of the House Committee, tendered to the Lord Mayor their sincere thanks for presiding over the meeting, and the proceedings, which had been of a very interesting character, terminated with the singing of the National Anthem.

The visitors then repaired to the dining-hall and school-room, where a substantial collation was partaken of by nearly 500 guests, after which they proceeded to an adjoining field in which a number of foot races and athletic sports were contested, in the presence of a vast assemblage of spectators. The band of the Institution, under the leadership of Mr. W. Whare, performed an excellent selection of music, and the pastimes were watched with genuine and lively interest. Mr. H. Bowler officiated as starter, Mr. E. V. Gardner as judge, Mr. S. Donovan, clerk of the course, and Messrs. H. P. Pulman, V. J. Lee, R. G. Head, H. J. Percy, E. Hair, and R. Keddell Committee. The events were thus decided:—

At the conclusion of the sports the prizes were distributed by Mrs. Edgar Bowyer, for whom hearty cheers were given, as well as for the Lord Mayor, Bro. Raynham Stewart and the other members of the House Committee, Bro. Frederick Binckes, the Secretary, and the Head Master Bro. the Rev. Richard Morris. Afterwards there was dancing in the schoolroom, and a most enjoyable evening was passed, up to the latest hour of the returning trains for town.

YORK CASTLE.

FROM THE KEYSTONE.

ONE of the most picturesque of our numerous York ruins is what is left of the old Castle of York, and strangers should make a point, in fine weather, of getting a view of the ancient tower from the Bail Hill, or part of the old fortifications on the opposite side of the river. Of the stout pile which for so many centuries alternately guarded and threatened the good burgesses of York, little now remains, but the remnant is both characteristic and interesting. As York was always the key of the military roads, north and south, so, from the very earliest recorded days, its castle was an important stronghold, and so remained until the age which saw the demolition of the mediæval fortresses, the advent of battering artillery, and the substitution of earthworks for high stone walls. For many years York Castle has been used as a county prison, and a modern battlemented wall with massive towers now takes the place of the former moat, but inside this wall is enclosed the old keep, known as Clifford's Tower, whose interior has been the scene of some of the most tragic episodes in England's history. The ancient family of Clifford were appointed Wardens of this tower during the reign of William the Conqueror, and from that date until 1684, when the tower was gutted by fire, it remained a military stronghold. It was the scene, in the reign of Richard I., of a horrid massacre of Jews, rivalling in atrocity those which are now taking place in Russia. A conspiracy against these unfortunate people, many of whom, possessing great wealth, resided in York, was formed by the inhabitants of the city, and most of them in alarm begged to be admitted into the tower for safety. Here they would have been secure, except for a misconception on the part of the governor, who imagined the Jews had taken possession of the fortress, and appealed to the sheriff, who instantly called out his whole posse comitatus to besiege the castle. When the Jews saw that they were certain to be destroyed, they resolved to cut the throats of their women and children, and then set fire to the tower, which they did. Those who escaped the knife or the flames were murdered by the bloodthirsty mob outside, to whom the last remnant of the Jews had opened the gates under a promise of safety. Thus, on the 11th March 1190, perished about 2000 of the chosen people, men, women and children.

Perhaps the criminal records and associations of the Castle as a jail are as interesting as anything to most people, and this county prison could tell some terrible stories of the captives who have lived and died within its walls, or been dragged out to suffer a terrible death. The first record we have of its use as a jail is in 1569, when its governor or jailer Oswald Wilkinson was taken to London, tried as a traitor, and hanged, drawn and quartered, at Tyburn. This same method of doing to death was as common at York as anywhere else, for the assize records show that between 1370 and 1879 about five hundred and sixty-four people were beheaded or hanged here. Up to the former date the power of life and death had been in the hands of the Abbot of St. Mary at York, whose ancient prison-house is still to be seen, but subsequently this terrible authority was usurped by the government, and a new gallows was built on the Knaves Mire, a low-lying and level tract of land outside the City, and now the race course, and there men were hanged and quartered, and women guilty of "petty treason" (which included husband murder) were burned. All sorts of prisoners were held here in promiscuous bondage, and frequently enough the judges were spared the trial, and the hangman the despatch of many wretched individuals, by the diseases peculiar to prisons, which then raged without hindrance, and often decimated the crowd of unhappy wights. The parish register of St. Mary, the nearest church to the castle, gives sickening proof of this, for "natural death," in those days, was held to be synonymous with every form of fever, bronchitis and other ailments connected with cold and starvation, which were wont to be contracted by those confined in the wretched apartments of a prison in the good old days. All sexes and ages were bundled together into one set of rooms, and the condition of their lives was so horrible that misery became converted into desperation, and fights were frequent. As often as not the results of these scrimmages were fatal, and the governor seldom cared to interpose unless the noise interfered with the comfort of the garrison, in which case a few of the jailers would make a raid upon the prisoners, armed with enormous keys fastened to heavy chains, which they swung round and round, and which coming in contact with a prisoner's head would undoubtedly knock his brains out, or at any rate leave him senseless, upon the floor. Under such circumstances it is not to be wondered at that attempts to break prison were frequent and desperate. In 1653 six prisoners got away, and in 1761 when some one hundred and twenty-one French captives of war were confined in York Castle, they cut away the bars of a window, and twenty escaped, of whom only six were re-captured.

There was a great difference in the respective accommodations of the first, second and third-class debtors and of the criminals. The two former were, up to a very late date, allowed the run of the grass lawn, in the centre of the prison, where a herd of deer were kept. Both sexes were allowed to mix together, and hold high jinks if they were so minded. Gay and festive was the scene when these privileged folks met at nice little dinners prepared by the fair hands of some of the debtors and midnight revels broke the stillness of the grim court yards. For the third-class debtors, however, there were no such delights. They were made to feel the pinch of their poverty and inferiority, and had to sleep on rushes in cells with unglazed windows, and subsist on prison fare. Occasionally members of our own Brotherhood found themselves in this unpleasant predicament, for in some of the older minutes of the Grand Lodge of York, I have noticed entries of sums voted for the relief of poor Brethren languishing in the debtors' prison.

When the unhappy debtors were admitted, they had to pay fees technically known as "garnish" and "obummage," and when they were discharged, they were again mulcted in various sums before they were suffered to depart.

In our York prison records are many incidents closely bearing upon the history of this country. In 1291 the Welsh rebel Rees, of Meredith, was hanged here. During the great struggle between the Red Rose of Lancaster and the White Rose of York, this prison alternately held the prisoners of both parties. The head of the Duke of York was stuck upon Micklegate Bar, the southern entrance of the city, and his face was turned towards York, in order that he might look upon the spot whence he derived his title. Soon afterwards Shakespeare's "Sun of York" having turned the tables at Taunton Field, rode into York and substituted the heads of the Earl of Devon, the Earl of Ryme, and other titled foes, for that of his father. After the suppression of the Yorkshire rebellion against the land tax of Henry VII., the leader of the canny Yorkshiremen, John á Chambre, was hanged on a "gibbet raised a stage higher than ordinary in the midst of a square gallows, as a traitor paramount, and a number of his men that were his chief accomplices were hanged upon the lower storey round about him." Next amongst the prominent victims of the political struggles of those days came the Yorkshire leaders of the Pilgrimage of Grace, Robert Aske, Lord Hussey and William Wade, who also suffered the last penalty in the same place. In the great civil war of the Stuarts, York was loyal almost to the last. In 1640, one Thomas Stafford, was clapped in the Castle for saying that "souldgeares were all rogues," and that the King was "fitter to be hanged than to be a King," and two years later, one, John Trontbeck, was also sent to durance vile for the expressed opinion that the King was "halfe French, halfe Germaine, and that he could live as well without a King as with a King." But later on, things were changed, and Colonel Morris and Cornet Blackburn, who were suspected of being concerned in the death of Colonel Rainsborough, at Doncaster, were executed at York after a smart attempt to escape from the Castle. In 1663 there came a time when the old Puritan spirit broke out again in Yorkshire, and there was a rising against the merry monarch, which cost twenty-two lives on the scaffold and many other living deaths in the cells of the gloomy castle. In the rebellion under Prince Charlie, York remained steadfast to the House of Hanover, and on the return of cruel Cumberland from the fatal field of Culloden, he rewarded the citizens for their constancy by leaving to their disposal a large collection of prisoners, most of whom were executed in the revolting manner peculiar to the age. As for the immense numbers of persons immured in the place because they had the misfortune to be Roman Catholics, Protestants, Quakers, Methodists, or what not, at the wrong time, their name is legion, to say nothing of women accused of witchcraft. Most of these poor people, however, were guiltless of any crime that in these days would be visited by more severe penalties than a short imprisonment, and many of them were void of offence either towards God or man. Far otherwise was it with some others, who were the perpetrators of desperate crimes, such as Eugene Aram, whose wretched story is so romantically told by Lord Lytton; Nevison, who was the hero of the feat attributed to Turpin, of riding from London to York on his mare in fifteen hours, a distance of 200 miles. Dick Turpin was simply a wretched murderer, who was executed in 1734, whereas Nevison flourished many years before. About 1676, he committed a robbery in London, and at daybreak (4 a.m.) mounted his mare and rode into York at 7 p.m. He was arrested and tried, but managed to prove an alibi, and Charles II. nicknamed him "Swift Nick." Finally, Nevison met his deserts and was hanged on the Knavesmire, in 1684.

Our last titled prisoner was a Lord Eglinton, who managed to kill a Mr. Maddox, in a gambling quarrel, in 1816, but who was afterwards reprieved.

Some portions of the interior structures, and especially the old debtors' prison, are exceedingly fine examples of architecture, of the style of Wren, and the frowning heights of the mediæval walls, laved by the waters of the river Foss, carry the thoughts back to an early period of our history. I am looking forward to meeting some of your friends this summer, as we are told that a great number of Americans will visit us, and I hope that any Brother Masons who come to York will send me notice of their visit, and give me the pleasure of greeting them in old Eboracum.

ANGEL LODGE, No. 51.

THE members of this Lodge celebrated their annual festival of St. John the Baptist, at Colchester, on 22nd ult.; the proceedings passed off with considerable eclat. Bro. James Round, M.P., for the second time very kindly granted the use of the Castle Library, and about 4.30 between forty and fifty brethren assembled in that handsome apartment to witness the installation as W.M. for the ensuing year of Bro. Wm. Sowman, the S.W. This ceremony was performed by the Worshipful Bro. Fred. A. Philbrick, Q.C., P.G.D. (Recorder of Colchester), in a most impressive manner, and at its close the W.M. appointed and invested his Officers for the year as under:—Bros. William Richey P.M. 700 I.P.M., Chas. E. Denton S.W., Charles Osmond P.P.G.O. J.W., W. P. Lewis P.M. P.P.G.D. Treas., Thos. J. Ralling P.M. P.G.Sec. Sec., R. Haward Ives S.D., Joseph Grimes J.D., E. Hennemeyer P.M. P.P.S.G.W. M.C., A. S. B. Sparling Org., W. P. Hubbard I.G., R. Little and Charles E. Bland Stewards, Simon Munson Tyler. Hearty votes of thanks were passed, and ordered to be recorded on the minutes, to Bro. Fred. A. Philbrick, for his kindness in attending and performing the ceremony of the day; to Bro. James Round, M.P., for the use of the Castle Library; and to Bro. Joseph Grimes J.D., for kindly presenting to the Lodge a handsome oak altar pedestal. On the motion of the W.M., seconded by Bro. J. J. C. Turner P.M. P.P.G.O., Bro. Charles Cobb P.M. P.P.G.S. of W. was unanimously re-elected to represent the Lodge at the Provincial Charity Committee. The Brethren subsequently dined together at the Cups Hotel, an elegant banquet, at which the new W.M. presided, being well served by Bro. Besford, the host. In returning thanks for the Earl of Carnarvon Pro G. Master, the Earl of Lathom D.G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers, Bro. Philbrick gave an interesting sketch of the principal alterations which have been made in the Book of Constitutions, and which are to be considered at an Especial Grand Lodge, on the 26th inst. No alteration had been made in any fundamental principle of the laws of the Craft; the work of the revisors, which had been very laborious, had been mainly devoted to assimilating the many inconsistencies which had crept into it, through motions which had from time to time been made in Grand Lodge, and in rendering it clearer as a Book of reference for Masters and Secretaries of Lodges, and for the Craft generally. He had himself, with the Grand Registrar, and several distinguished members of Grand Lodge, cheerfully devoted considerable time to the work—and he trusted when the Book came before Grand Lodge it would be found that they had done some good in their day and generation. The health of the Lord Tenterden P.G.M. having been heartily drank; that of the P.G. Officers was toasted, and was responded to by Bro. Fred. J. Wiseman P.J.G.W. The health of the W. Master was given in felicitous terms by Bro. Richey I.P.M.; and Bro. Sowman, in responding, expressed the pleasure and honour he felt at being elected to preside over his mother Lodge. The W. Master then proposed the installing Master, thanking him for his kindness in coming down to Colchester, to perform the ceremony—which he had done so ably. In addition to the interest they all felt in the D.P.G.M., as Installing Master, they claimed him both as a member of the Lodge and a native of the Borough. The D.P.G.M. responded in a happy speech, in the course of which he said he was sorry he could not come oftener amongst his Colchester brethren. The Visitors was proposed by the W.M., and responded to by Bro. W. Buck W.M. 453, and Bro. W. A. Weston P.M. 1536; the Masonic Charities, proposed by Bro. Chas. Cobb P.M. and responded to by Bro. J. Terry Sec. R.M.B.I.; the I.P.M. and P.M.'s No. 51, proposed by the W.M., and responded to by Bro. W. Richey I.P.M.; the Wardens and other Officers of No. 51, proposed by the W.M. and responded to by Bros. C. E. Denton and C. Osmond; the Musical Brethren; the Tylers' Toast bringing a pleasant and successful meeting to a close. During the evening, the proceedings were enlivened by some excellent vocal and instrumental music by Bros. J. J. C. Turner, C. Osmond, A. S. B. Sparling, and E. Gowers. Another pleasing feature of the evening's proceedings was the offer of Bro. Hennemeyer P.M., in reply to a suggestion made by Bro. Terry, to act as a Steward for the Benevolent Institution at its Festival in 1883, when Prince Leopold is expected to preside. Bro. Hennemeyer headed his subscription list with five guineas, and in a few minutes thirty-three guineas was subscribed, including £10 10s from the D.P.G.M. Letters expressing regret at their inability to attend were received from the Right Hon. the Lord Tenterden, K.C.B., P.G.M.; Bro. Joshua Nunn, P.G.S.B. President of the Board of Benevolence; Bro. F. Binckes Sec. R.M.I.B., Bro. F. B. Hedges Sec. R.M.I.G., and several other distinguished brethren.

P.P.G.A.D.C., J. R. Lord P.M. P.P.G.S.B., Robert G. Bird P.M. and S., and Richard G. Tippet P.M., in a Board of Installed Masters, amongst whom were Bros. L. D. Westcott P.M. P.P.G.S.Wks., Robert B. Twose P.M. P.P.G.S., J. G. Kevern P.M., Thomas Goodall P.M., L. I. Webber P.M., all of 1550; E. Aitken-Davies P.M. 1099 P.P.G.S. Works, James Griffen W.M. 70, Charles Croydon W.M. 189, Captain J. R. W. Quinn P.M. and James Osborne P.M. of 954, E. Roseveare P.M. 1099, Thomas Gibbons P.M. 1205, James Rendle P.M. and S., and Byron Elliott P.M. 1247, S. J. Hearle 1255. The following were then invested as the Officers:—Bros. M. C. Lakeman I.P.M., C. H. Sellick S.W., William Stanbury J.W., J. Phillips Chaplain, Charles Philp Treasurer, Thomas Goodall Secretary, G. C. Dimier S.D., Job Maton J.D., D. Roy D.C., W. G. Redman A.D.C., J. B. James O., R. Burnard I.G., T. Watson S.S, G. F. Watson J.S., W. H. Phillips Tyler. Bro. J. G. Kevern was again elected as the Steward for the Masonic Charities, and Bro. R. G. Bird was re-elected the representative on the Committee of Petitions Prov. Grand Lodge. The Lodge having been closed, the brethren adjourned to the Farley Hotel, Union-street, for the banquet. About forty-five sat down, including, amongst other Visitors, Bros. Wm. Derry P.M. 156 P.P.G.S.D., C. Spence Bate P.M. 189 P.P.G.R., Captain M. Tracey P.M. 1247, &c., and letters, regretting their inability to attend, were read from Bros. J. P. Metham P.M. P.D.G.P.M., W. J. Hughan P.G.D. Eng. P.G.S.W. Egypt, &c., Chas. Godtschalk P.M. 70 P.P.G.S.D., J. J. Avery P.M. 70 P.P.G.R., J. Y. Avery P.M. 156, and from Mr. Charles F. Burnard, the Mayor of Plymouth, who expressed himself as highly gratified with the attention shown him; but most important engagements in London prevented him accepting the invitation. The tables were arranged very tastefully, the floral and other decorations reflecting great credit on the resources of the Farley. The menu comprised every delicacy of the season, was abundant in quantity, and the attendance all that could be desired. Bro. Charles Walters was congratulated upon his generous catering. Bro. Dawe presided, proposing the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts. An especial feature of the evening was the health of Bro. R. G. Bird, who, from the nature of his public duties, was unable to give the necessary time to the Secretaryship, and had resigned. This had been known for only a few days, but a small committee was formed, of which Bro. R. G. Tippett was chairman, and he, in proposing the toast, had the pleasure of presenting, as the result of his exertions, a handsome oak case containing a dozen pairs of silver dessert knives and forks, and of expressing how grateful the members were to Bro. Bird for his past services as the first Master of the Lodge, and since for many years as Secretary. Bro. Bird replied in suitable and feeling terms, thanking the brethren for their kind remembrance, and for the uniform courtesy with which he had been treated. The musical programme was varied and good, Bros. Goodall, Gibbons, Joyce, Roseveare, Tracey, Dimier, and others taking the most prominent part.

Brixton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1949.—The usual meeting was held at Bro. Monk's, Prince Regent, Dulwich-road, East Brixton, on Tuesday, 27th ult. Present—Bros. H. Goodwin W.M., Richard Poore S.W., C. H. Phillips J.W., Henry M. Williams Secretary, R. R. Johnstone S.D., G. W. Knight J.D., H. Hooper I.G., E. A. Francis Hon. Preceptor, John A. Danks, J. Perry, Wm. Croucher, B. Wolff, and others. Lodge was opened in the first degree, and the Secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were unanimously confirmed. Lodge was opened in the second and third degrees. The W.M. most ably rehearsed the ceremony of raising, Bro. J. Perry candidate. Lodge was closed to the first degree, and it was proposed by Bro. J. A. Danks, seconded by Bro. Henry M. Williams Secretary, and resolved—That Bro. Wm. Croucher, of the Polish National Lodge, No. 534, be elected a member. Bro. Croucher thanked the brethren, and hoped he should be able to attend regularly, so as to be able to profit by the excellent working of the Lodge, under the able Preceptorship of Bro. E. A. Francis. Bro. Rd. Poore having been elected W.M. for the ensuing week, Lodge was closed in due form.

ROYAL ARCH.

Sir Hugh Myddelton Chapter, No. 1602.—A regular Convocation of this Chapter was held at the Old Cock Tavern, Highbury Corner, on Friday, 23rd June. Present—M.E. Comps. J. Weston M.E.Z., Osborn H., Cogan J., J. W. Hobbs P.Z. Soc., Hollidge Treas., Greenfield S.N., Hirst 1st A.S.; also Comps. Dillon, Bird, and Pearcy. Visitors—Comps. T. J. Cusworth P.Z. New Concord, No. 813, R. W. Goddard, Sincerity, No. 174. The first business was to elect Comp. R. Pearcy, S.N. of the United Strength Chapter, as a joining member. The ballot was unanimous in his favour. Bro. A. Trewinnard P.M. Kingsland Lodge, No. 1693, was then exalted, the ceremony being excellently well rendered, Comp. Pearcy on this occasion acting as P.S. The election of Officers for the ensuing year was then proceeded with, when the following were appointed: Comps. Osborn M.E.Z., Weston H., Pearcy J., Greenfield S.E., Hollidge S.N., Bird P.S., Cogan Treasurer. The Chapter was closed and adjourned, and the Companions sat down to a banquet, admirably served by Bro. Baker. The usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were given. Comp. Trewinnard, in responding to the toast of the Exaltee, expressed himself much gratified and impressed with the ceremony. Comp. Goddard replied in appropriate terms for the Visitors. An enjoyable and pleasant evening was brought to a close with the Janitor's toast.

During the recent visit of the M.W. the Grand Master H.R.H. the Prince of Wales to Bradford, Lieut. Colonel Sir Henry Edwards, Bart., Provincial Grand Master West Yorkshire, read an address from the seven Bradford Lodges. It was an address of loyal Masonic welcome, and it associated the present flourishing condition of the Craft with the Prince's Grand Mastership. To this address his Royal Highness handed in the following document:—

Brethren,—I have received with feelings of the deepest satisfaction your loyal and fraternal address, and I can assure you that I am much gratified by the welcome which has been accorded to-day by all classes of the inhabitants of Bradford. I sincerely appreciate the compliment which you are good enough to pay me, as Grand Master of the Freemasons in England, by your references to the satisfactory condition of the Craft and to the flourishing state of the Charitable and Educational Institutions in connection with the large body of which I am proud to be the head. I need hardly assure you that the interest which I take in Freemasonry continues unabated, and I shall ever do my best to extend the principles on which it is founded to the utmost of my power. The Princess and I are much touched by the kind words in which you mention us, and it affords us both sincere pride and gratification to experience so cordial a reception as that which we have met with to-day from our fellow-countrymen.

THE BOYS' SCHOOL FESTIVAL.

THERE were one or two points we omitted noticing in our article last week, chiefly owing to the length to which our remarks were protracted. It would be unjust, however, if we omitted notice of them altogether, for so, comparatively, indifferent a reason. For instance, it would be extremely unjust to two worthy men if we omitted to state that Bro. Alderman and Sheriff Sir Reginald Hanson and Sheriff Sir J. A. Hogg were prevented by reason of their engagaments from taking part in the Festival. Yet they were so far from forgetting "Our Boys" that each of them constituted himself a Life Governor by subscribing the sum of ten guineas, the two sums being included in the list of £105 of Brother Edward Jex, Duke of Edinburgh Lodge, No. 1259. Then the West Yorkshire list, by the omission of three contributions of ten guineas each, should stand as £635 5s instead of £603 15s, and it is further noticeable that the total for the Province includes fifty guineas from Bro. John Wordsworth in his capacity of President of the Board of Stewards.

It is also well worthy of note that the Railway arrangements were of the most satisfactory character. Not only were the visitors conveyed to Brighton punctually and comfortably in accordance with the arrangements, but for their convenience three special trains were arranged for, and by the first of these the Lord Mayor, whose numerous, and, indeed, overwhelming engagements compelled him to leave before the close of the banquet, was enabled to reach London in time to fulfil his engagement. It has been suggested, we know not on what grounds, that his Lordship left early of set purpose. We are in a position to state, that the early departure was due entirely to the peremptory demands on his valuable time, and likewise that he expressed himself thoroughly satisfied with all the arrangements made, both for the distribution of prizes on Tuesday and the Festival on Wednesday.

We may add, firstly, that the list, as announced in our last week's issue, has been considerably increased up to the present time and, in the next place, that the School has received, or will shortly receive from the executors of the late Marmaduke Levitt, of Mark Lane, the sum of £500, less duty. Lastly, of the thirty-five guineas presented by the Chairman, Sir J. W. Ellis, Lord Mayor, the sum of twenty-five guineas was the gift of the Lady Mayoress, who has thus constituted herself a Vice-President of the Institution.

We trust that, when the time comes for summing up the results of last Wednesday's Festival, Bro. Binckes will not be found very far behind the Benevolent in the aggregate of contributions. He is already well on the way to £11,800.

At the General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, on the 1st inst., there were present the following brethren, in addition to Bro. A. J. Duff-Filer, who presided:—C. H. Webb, William Stephens, C. F. Matier, E. B. Harding, J. L. Mather, S. B. Wilson, Thos. Entwisle, A. M. Broadley, Edgar Bowyer, E. C. Massey, Wm. Paas, W. H. Saunders, Edward Baxter, George Motion, and F. Binckes Secretary. From the minutes read for information, it appeared that the days of election are not to be altered unless Good Friday occurs at the specified date, in which event the day of election is to be postponed for a week. This will be formally reported to the General Court in October. Upon the recommendation of the House Committee the Bandmaster's salary was raised to 30s per week, and an honorarium of Fifty Guineas was voted to Dr. Hall for his unremitting care during the outbreak of epidemic at the School in the spring of the present year. Bro. Raynham Stewart, who was absent, sent a notice of motion, under cover, to the chairman, which was read, viz.—

> That considering the increase of the number of the subscribers and of the contributories to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, thereby entailing considerably increased labour upon the Secretary of the Institution, his salary be raised £100 per annum, in recognition of his valuable services, rendered for the past twenty-one years.

Eight petitions were considered, of which five were approved. With these additions, and allowing for candidates withdrawn or ineligible from lapse of time, there are now sixty-two candidates. The vacancies are only fourteen in number. A vote of £30, in instalments of £15 each, was passed to assist a former pupil—Date—to enter upon the study of medicine. Date had been highly commended by Dr. Morris, and won considerable distinction while in the Institution. A vote of £5 was awarded to Leonard Wain, also a former pupil, who is now a junior clerk in the Secretary's office. A legacy of £500, left to the Institution by Bro. Levitt, was reported by the Secretary.

THE GRAND LODGE OF INDIANA.

OWING to the amount of its indebtedness, the Grand Lodge of Indiana, very wisely we think, determined on postponing its next Grand Communication till the present year, and in accordance with this arrangement the Sixty-fourth Stated Communication took place on Tuesday and Wednesday the 23rd and 24th May, under the Presidency of Brother Calvin W. Prather M.W.G.M. All the Grand Officers were at their posts, and there were also present Past Grand Masters Bros. William Hacker, Martin H. Rice, Christian Fetta, Lucien H. Foote, Daniel McDonald, Frank S. Devol, Andrew J. Hay, Robert Van Valzah and Bell. S. Sutton; also Past Deputy Grand Masters Bros. Mahlon D. Hanson and Elijah Newland, and over five hundred representatives of subordinate Lodges.

When Grand Lodge had been declared open, Bro. W. H. Scott, M.W.G.M. of Illinois, and W. H. Meffert M.W.G.M. Kentucky were introduced and received with the accustomed honours, which were gracefully acknowledged by both brethren. The Standing and other Committees having been appointed, and the Grand Master having delivered his address, in which he set forth all the important events of the last two years, the Grand Treasurer and G. Secretary submitted their reports for the year ended 23rd May 1882, from which it appeared that the Receipts had been, in round figures, 31,962 dollars, and the Disbursements 24,188 dollars, while the Balance in the Treasury was 10,182 dollars. The Trustees of Grand Lodge also presented a Report as to the condition of Grand Lodge property and its financial condition. From this it was seen that since the 25th May 1880 its indebtedness had been reduced by 31,333 dollars, there being still outstanding 63,000 dollars. Consequently the Trustees recommended that there should again be an adjournment for two years, by which the remaining debt would be still further reduced to the half of its then amount. These Reports and recommendations were unanimously adopted at Wednesday's sitting. The Committee on Credentials reported that 532 Lodges were represented, and 25 unrepresented. The following are the Grand Officers for the ensuing year, all of whom were formally installed and invested on Wednesday, namely:

| Charles Fisher ... ... | Grand Treasurer |
| Wm. H. Smythe ... ... | Grand Secretary |
| Calvin W. Prather and Robert Van Valzah | Trustees |

CHESHIRE AND THE WIRRAL CHILDREN'S INFIRMARY.

SATURDAY last was a gala day with the good people of Birkenhead. Thirteen years since a Children's Infirmary for the Hundred of Wirral was established, and such has been the extent of its usefulness that it has latterly been found necessary to erect new premises sufficiently large to meet the additional demands which are constantly made on its resources. Hence the ceremonial of Saturday last, when, in the presence of a numerous gathering of the inhabitants of Birkenhead and neighbourhood, as well as visitors from remoter districts, the first stone of the new building was laid with Masonic ceremonies by R.W. Bro. Lord de Tabley P.G.M. Cheshire, assisted by his Officers, and supported by the brethren of the Province of West Lancashire. Indeed, even the Masonic annals of Cheshire can hardly afford a parallel to the occasion we are about to record.

As our readers are aware, there is no county in England—not even excepting Yorkshire itself—that is so calculated to arouse the enthusiasm of the Craft as Cheshire. It was at Warrington, in the memorable October 1646, that the enlightened antiquarian, Elias Ashmole and his connection by marriage, Colonel Henry Mainwaring, of Kermincham, was received into Freemasonry. The later researches of Bro. Rylands and others have shown that the good city of Chester was a home of Freemasonry at or about the same period, and we need only refer to the earlier official lists of Lodges issued under the authority of the Grand Lodge of England in order to ascertain, that within a very few years of its establishment there were existing in the county several Lodges. Ever since it has held a foremost place in the ranks of the Craft, though, in evidence of this proposition, we need do nothing further than cite its position under its past chief, the late Viscount Combermere, and its present the R.W. Lord de Tabley. The position it occupies among our Provincial Grand Lodges is in all respects assured, and its work is admirable.

But to revert to Saturday's interesting ceremonial. As is not unusual at Masonic gatherings, the Clerk of the Weather showed he was in complete sympathy with the object of the gathering—how indeed could it be otherwise, when provision for the ills that feeble little children are heir to was in question. At all events, the bright sunshine brought together a vast concourse of spectators, while, on no former occasion has there been so large a muster of the Craft in this particular county, and certainly not in Birkenhead, which is a town of but yesterday's growth, as it were. About 3 p.m. Prov. Grand Lodge was opened in the Music Hall, there being present some 400 brethren, among whom may be mentioned the following, namely:—Bros. the Hon. Wilbraham Egerton, M.P., H. S. Alpass, J.P., R. Wood, H. Finch, J. Hibbert, T. Clark, R. Washington, J. Banning, J. Siddeley, H. A. Tobias, Rev. J. C. Macdonna, Rev. R. Hodgson, C. Dutton, T. Chesworth, J. Bratton, H. Collier, J. Beech, Henry Holbrook, J. K. Digges, J. Wood, H. Bulley, T. Simcock, J. Hordern, J. Sillitoe, T. E. Tomlinson, E. H. Griffiths, W. Horner, W. S. Sutton, F. Jackson, T. Lockett, A. Cockayne, J. P. Platt, W. Nicholls, T. M. Lockwood, E. Friend, E. Pierrepoint, H. Crosby, H. Jackson, H. Firth, W. Booth, F. Preston, G. Balfe, W. Marquis, E. A. Coveney, H. Matthews, W. Bayliss, S. Wylde, Thomas Shaw, W. C. Fleming, C. S. Dean, W. E. Clayton, J. Jones, S. Hikins, W. Price, T. H. Kirk, S. Marwood, T. G. Parker, John Atkinson, Joseph Wood, &c., &c.

In due course a procession was formed under the direction of Bro. H. Finch P.G.D.C., its progress from the Hall along Oxton-road being watched with interest by crowds of spectators. At the site of the proposed building was gathered together a brilliant assemblage of ladies and gentlemen, a guard of honour of the 1st Cheshire Engineers, under the command of Lieut.-Colonel Walker, being drawn up close by. The Prov. Grand Master and his Officers having taken up a position on a raised dais at the east end of the enclosure, and the 100th Psalm having been sung, the Mayor of Birkenhead, in a lengthened speech, invited Lord De Tabley to carry out his part of the day's proceedings. Alderman Roper then handed to his lordship a silver trowel, bearing the following inscription:—

and the Prov. Grand Master, after suitably acknowledging the gift, proceeded, with the assistance of his Officers, to lay the stone with Masonic honours. A vote of thanks was proposed, and carried unanimously, and most courteously acknowledged, the procession moved off in reverse order to the Music Hall, and Provincial Grand Lodge was closed. The following is a copy of the illuminated scroll, which, in addition to the silver trowel, was presented to his Lordship:—

The Wirral Hospital and Dispensary for Sick Children was founded in the year 1869, for the relief of little children in the hundred of Wirral who might unhappily be suffering from disease or injury. The manner of working in this cause has been by giving surgical and medical aid at their homes, and by receiving those who had the greatest needs into the house, and there nursing them and healing them so far as might be done. This surgical and medical work has been freely and graciously done by skilful surgeons and doctors of medicine, without any reward save those of the good deeds themselves; and the expenses have been provided for by many persons concerned for the welfare of sick children. The work has from the first prospered, and the benefits of it have year by year greatly extended, so that from time to time an increase in the means of doing it has become needful. At the end of the year 1872 a house in the Oxton-road was bought, and the hospital was removed thither from the small house in Wilkinson-street, holding six beds, where it first began; and again since the beginning of the year 1881 a small house in Barton-street has been hired and used as an addition to that in Oxton-road, and has been worked with it. But even so, the need of a larger and better house has become so great that at last it was resolved that such a house should be built. And now, on this 1st day of July A.D. 1882, through the charity and generosity of many persons dwelling in Wirral and in neighbouring places, a commencement of this building has been made, in the sure hope that when safely completed it will nobly serve a great and good work.

The marriage of Mr. Douglas James Hamilton, of the Coldstream Guards, and son of Bro. Lord Claud Hamilton Past Grand Warden, with the Lady Margaret Hely-Hutchinson, sister of Bro. the Earl of Donoughmore, Past G. Warden, was celebrated at the Church of St. Peter, Eaton-square, on Thursday morning. A feature in connection with the happy ceremony was the absence of bridesmaids, their place being supplied by a page, Lord Scirdale, who was dressed in yellow satin brocade, with stockings and shoes of the same colour, and an old gold coloured satin hat with yellow feather. Among those present were the Duke of Aberdeen G.M. Ireland and the Duchess of Abercorn, the Duke of St. Albans P.G.M. Notts and the Duchess of St Albans, the Marquis of Hamilton Past G. Warden and the Marchioness of Hamilton, the Earl of Donoughmore P.G.W. and the Countess of Donoughmore, Lord Claud Hamilton P.G.W. and Lady C. Hamilton, Lord Balfour of Burghley P.G.W. and Lady Burghley, &c., &c.

THE DAYS WHEN WE GO GIPSYING.

FROM THE MASONIC MONTHLY MAGAZINE.

WHEN the hawthorn blossom thickens on the hedge rows, and the evenings lengthen out into the purple and gold of summer sunsets, it is not unnatural that the brethren of "ye mystic tie," like other sensible folk, should hie away to fresh fields and pastures new, and seek those healthful enjoyments in which all rational people who have the time and means at their disposal indulge at this season of the year. Thus it is that when the labour of the Lodge has ended for the term, and the period of the summer recess is announced, brethren cast about them for some sequestered spot at which they may spend "a happy day" in the combination of Masonic work and pleasure, the society of those whom no mortals more heartily adore, and companionship of friends whose presence has not yet been felt within the sacred precincts of the Lodge. At the fag end of the season it is only to be expected that indoor operations should grow somewhat irksome and monotonous. It goes against our sense of cosy comfort, when brilliant gleams of sunshine pierce through the chinks in the shutters and between the folds of the curtains, blending strongly with the Masonic lights to which our eyes have been so accustomed all through the winter. The atmosphere of the Lodge-room, too, becomes stuffy and oppressive; while the brethren, earnest as they may be in their Masonic vocation, find it preferable to spend the cool hours of evening at the country-side, amongst the flower-besprinkled fields or on the sea-shore, where the balmy breezes invigorate and refresh both body and mind after the fatigues of a heavy day of business-life in the city.

It can be no matter for surprise, therefore, that when the "leafy month of June" sets in, and smiling Nature tempts people of every class to revel in her charms, we, too, should feel disposed to share the delights and participate in the opportunities afforded for out-door relaxation. On these grounds, amongst others, the summer excursions of our Masonic brethren must be regarded as an excellent institution. There are many, we know, who hold adverse views to our own upon these points, but we are content to differ with them. To our mind Freemasonry should not be maintained in the old and selfish grooves which characterised it in years gone by; and in saying so, we trust the very "strict observance" section of our readers will not accuse us of revolutionary tendencies in our espousal of these very agreeable "innovations" into Masonic life. We have our Masonic balls, of which the fair sex form an essential and charming part, adding grace to our pleasures by their winning smiles and manners, and relieving, in the too brief interval, the monotony of our arduous year of duty. True, these reunions are ostensibly in aid of the Charities of which we are so justly proud, and many of them yield good fruit in behalf of those grand institutions which are the landmarks of the Craft. Our bazaars produce a like effect; but because the summer excursions are scarcely so ambitious in their aims, and have recreative enjoyment as their simple recommendation, we yet believe they act as a wonderful tonic to the health and temper of those who have all the year through to transact the business within tyled doors. We are fortified in these views by recollections of enchanting drives through hedge-land and across moor and heath, along by peaceful villages, and the uphill and down which undulate the country side, to some secluded nook which considerate Stewards have "booked" as the scene of the day's festivities. Some affluent brother, whose fair demesne is at other times shut out from the vulgar gaze, graciously permits the brethren an opportunity of taking their wives, sisters, and sweethearts to a sylvan corner of his estate, where the pic-nic can be heartily enjoyed; and while the veterans hold sweet converse on those hidden mysteries with which they are so familiar, the younger branches may ramble through flower-carpeted dells, or dance upon the closely-shaven greensward, or join in all those merry gambols in which most hearts delight when in the vigour of youth and health. Or, perhaps, the scene is at the waterside, where the merry company muster on the landing-stage, and, after the bustle of getting "under way" has subsided, the steamboat glides swiftly and gladly along the silent highway of the river, bound for some bowery haven on the banks, where a round of pleasure has been devised for the assembled guests. On a fine day such a trip is, to our mind, more enjoyable than by road, for we escape the dust and noise; and, moreover, the party is all together, which is rendered impracticable in the arrangement of a procession of conveyances. Moreover, the ripple of mirth competes with the cadences of music on board, while jewels and eyes, strings of pearls, and laughing rows of teeth, vie with each other for the palm of lustre and purity—and who need say which are the winners? Arrived at our destination, there is a fresh and agreeable surprise in the considerate care which the Stewards have evidently bestowed upon the arrangements.

In the case of an inland trip such as we have pictured, there is invariably selected an hostelry at which the regular business can be transacted before entering upon the more lightsome pleasures of the day; whilst if the river is taken this routine of duty is provided for by due notice given to "mine host" near the chosen locale, or we have even known it gone through in one of the saloons on board. It must be confessed that such labour is brought within the lowest reasonable limit, and the Junior Warden is not slow to pronounce his welcome "call." Then beneath some snowy tent, with bright faces and sunny smiles adding abnormal zest to the Fourth Degree, all goes "merry as a marriage bell," amidst those social amenities it is so immensely to the advantage of society to cultivate, and especially those, part of whose profession it is to promote and increase the happiness of all around us. And if the Worshipful Master, who presides so urbanely, has the prudence to advise—and to set the example to the Past Masters who support him—as little verbosity in the post-prandial speeches as is consistent with the comfort of his guests, there follows ample opportunity for the exercise of those pleasantries which happy folks of either sex and every age know how to improvise and enjoy when placed in similar circumstances. A cheery sight indeed it is when a couple of hundred or more of joyous beings are brought together under auspices such as these, when hearts beat happily in the enjoyment of wholesome and refined hilarity. There is seldom a cloud to darken the sunshine of such scenes, and at the close of the day, when the company return, with visages freshened by the country breezes and lighted up with the smiles of sweet contentment, begotten of cordial companionship all round, need it be doubted the effect will be to cement old friendships, to create new ones, and to knit together in the bond of common amity all who are either directly or indirectly connected with the Lodge? We are reminded that—and it has been proved incontestibly that those Lodges which lay themselves out for an occasional day like this, "within the limits of becoming mirth," are not only more prosperous, but contain within themselves more of the elements of fellowship and good-will, which are so essential to the wellbeing of the Fraternity, than those which do not. We therefore hail with pleasure the announcement by many of our Metropolitan Lodges of their intention to repeat those summer excursions which in times gone by have been productive of so much social and fraternal amenity; and whether the road is taken, or the Maria Wood bears her gladsome freights to some judiciously-selected spot by the margin along the banks of the Thames, they may be equally fortunate both as regards weather and attendance. We hear of the contemplated amalgamation of certain Lodges in this happy and beneficent entertainment during the ensuing summer months; and let the old croakers say what they will in opposition to them, we still believe the occasional admission of the fair sex into some of the "privileges"—not to say the "mysteries"—of the Order, so far from militating against the interests of the Craft, will invest it with additional vigour and inestimable advantage in every respect.

> A little nonsense now and then
> Is relished by the wisest men,

It will be seen from the notice we publish elsewhere of the business to be transacted at the Quarterly Court of the Boys' School, on Monday, that it is proposed to submit a motion giving Bro. Binckes, the Secretary, an addition of £100 per annum to his salary. Such a testimony as this to the value of his indefatigable exertions on behalf of the School he has been connected with since 1861 is no more than might have been expected, and, we may add, no more than the said exertions justify. The services of both Bro. Terry and Bro. Hedges have received similar recognition, and Bro. Binckes's connection with "Our Boys" exceeds, by several years, the more limited periods over which the Secretaryships of his fellow labourers jointly extend. To Bro. Binckes, moreover, with all deference to the other two, the Craft undoubtedly owes the prominence which its Charities have enjoyed of late years. All work hard; but, being the oldest official, he certainly has led the way in the accumulation of big subscription lists. We hope and trust the resolution will experience that hearty and unanimous reception it so richly deserves.

---

The French Government has awarded, through the medium of our Foreign Office, a gold medal each to the first and second coxswains, and a silver medal to each of the crew of the Albert Edward lifeboat, Clacton-on-Sea, in recognition of their gallant services in rescuing the crew of the French fishing lugger, Le Madelaine, of Boulogne, which was lost on the Gunfleet Sands, on 23rd October last. It will doubtless be in the recollection of our readers that this is one of the two lifeboats presented by Grand Lodge, in commemoration of the safe return from India of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales M.W.G.M.

We are desirous of drawing the attention of those of our readers who may visit Belgium during the present holiday season, to the fact that on landing at Antwerp, and during their stay there, they will find excellent accommodation at the Hotel de Hollande, proprietors Messrs. Stroobants and Son, 2 and 4 Stoof-straat, close to the Quay, where passengers disembark from the Harwich, Hull, Grimsby, and London steamboats. The catering leaves nothing to be desired, and the charges are most moderate, while the civility and attention of Messrs. Stroobants, who both speak English fluently, are worthy of all praise. One other feature deserves mention. The proprietors are careful that the guests who honour them with their patronage, and are desirous of being guided through the city and shown its principal attractions, shall suffer none of the troublesome, and oftentimes extortionate charges which that chief of the pests of the modern traveller, the Commissionaire, knows so well how to levy. Having some experience of the Netherlands and Belgium, we have all the greater pleasure in noticing the Hotel de Hollande, and its genial and obliging hosts, the Stroobants, father and son.

THE BOYS' SCHOOL FESTIVAL.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The following passage in the opening paragraph of your account of the Boys' School Festival has struck me as being worthy of general consideration. It reads thus:

"The amount which Bro. Binckes announced in the course of the evening was £11,588, which, it must be conceded, was a goodly sum, but not exactly in correspondence with what we had hoped for. Perhaps it is not altogether surprising that this Festival of Wednesday should have yielded only what it has. The year began very successfully, with an aggregate of subscriptions to the R.M.B.I. amounting, as announced at the time, to £12,237, afterwards increased to £12,500. The Festival of the R.M.I.G. in May yielded still more abundantly, the total being £13,232, with, as usual, more lists to follow. The £11,588 of Wednesday exhibits the reaction, which is but natural perhaps, after the prodigious exertions at the previous Festivals, but which, in respect of the Boys' School, is none the less lamentable."

Now I am quite ready to admit that Bro. Binckes has had his fair share of success as compared with the Secretaries of the other Institutions. It cannot be expected, nor is it indeed desirable, that the largest subscription list should always be in respect of one particular Institution. At the same time, it is impossible to deny that the Boys' School is heavily handicapped in the race for the post of honour for the year. When the Benevolent Festival takes place in February, the Craft has had a seven months' rest, if not from Masonic labour, at all events from the anxieties entailed by the canvassing for subscriptions to our Charities. It is usually in a happy frame of mind, and has its energy for the work of the new year, almost—I might well nigh say entirely—untrenched upon. In May when the Girls' School Festival is held, there is still plenty of ground remaining to be worked upon, and quite willing to be turned to good account. But, when we arrive at the end of June, a very large proportion of the Craft's surplus cash has found its way into the coffers of the Benevolent and Girls' Institutions, and the field available for Bro. Binckes's labour, having been commensurately circumscribed, cannot in reason be expected to yield so profitable a result. That it has done so on more than one occasion during the last eight years gives Bro. Binckes an additional claim on the consideration of Brethren, and it is probably owing chiefly to his great energy that the School with which he has been officially connected for some twenty-one years has been able to hold its own.

My purpose in troubling you with this letter is to suggest that each Institution in turn should hold its Festival at the commencement of the year, taking the second place the next year, and the third place in the year following. Thus, if the Benevolent takes the lead in 1883, let it come third in 1884, and second in 1885; the Girls' School being second in 1883, first in 1884, and third in 1885; and the Boys' third in 1883, second in 1884, and first in 1885, and so on. By this arrangement, each of the three would have in turn such benefit as must attach to being first in the field and the Craft rested for half a year from the importunities of canvassers. I do not say this is the best or the only way by which the three Festivals could be arranged, but it has at least the merit of being a fair and equitable arrangement.

It will be said, perhaps, that Lodges and Provinces give each Institution a turn, and therefore the dates when the Festivals are held are immaterial—as shown by the returns, in which each Institution will be found to have had the honour of securing the highest amount. Yet I think a reference to the tables you have published from time to time will show that the Boys' School has only headed the list once in the last five years, while the Benevolent has done so twice, if not three times. At all events the question is a fair one to consider, and the time is favourable for its consideration. In the hope that others more competent than myself will express their views, I remain,

Fraternally yours,

L. C. D.

PROVINCE OF DEVON AND THE R.M.I.B.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Referring to the Analysis of the several Stewards' lists for the Provinces, in respect of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys' in your last issue.

After giving the amount subscribed by Devon to the late Festival as £241 10s 0d, you remark, "But here again we have a local Charity, which diverts to its own use some of the moneys raised by the Craft in the county."

If, by the foregoing you would have it inferred that a portion of the funds of the Province, i.e. (the Funds at the disposal of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Devon), have been taken, used or voted for the local Charity, viz., the Devon Educational Fund, and by reason of same the amounts given to our Great Central Charities are diminished thereby,—you are in error.

As one of the founders of the local fund—the "Devon Educational"—I may state, as a matter of fact, not one penny of the funds of the Province have, up to the present time, been given to the local fund—the "Devon Educational," that fund being wholly supported (as it should be) by voluntary subscriptions and donations of individual brethren. Looking at the very large amount of money received by Devon annuitants annually, male and female, with the many boys and girls elected by Devon into the great Masonic Schools, I trust it will be long before any portion of the small amount of Provincial funds proper, annually at the disposal of the Provincial Grand Lodge, will be diverted from their legitimate use, namely, to aid and help support our Great Charities in part return for the many benefits received by Devon through its numerous annuitants and orphans elected by Devon into and upon the Great Charities.

Yours fraternally,

CHARLES GODTSCHALK,

Representative of the Committee of Petitions of Devon at the Great Charities.

107 Devonshire-road, Holloway, London.

[Our worthy Bro. Godtschalk must forgive us for pointing out that he is in error in supposing that in our statement, "But here again we have a local charity, which diverts to its own use some of the moneys raised by the Craft in the County," we had the slightest intention of suggesting that any portion of the Prov. Grand Lodge funds were diverted from the Central Charities to the Local. What we were anxious to point out was this. Devon has fifty Lodges, and its contribution on this occasion was a little over £240—not so very large a sum for so considerable and influential a Province, in spite of the fact that it has given most liberally at other Festivals. But we knew there had been latterly established a local educational charity, and that it had already done serviceable work. We knew further, that a Province which has an institution of its own, like Cheshire, which we also singled out, and Devon, cannot, in reason, be expected to contribute so freely to the Central Institutions, for the simple reason that they are already, by means of their local charity, doing a vast amount of good, and are constantly relieving those central Institutions of a considerable portion of the pressure which is brought to bear upon their resources. A Province which promotes the education of its own impoverished children cannot possibly be expected to contribute as liberally as we feel assured it otherwise would contribute to a Charity that is common to the Metropolis and all Provinces. In this sense only must we ask Bro. Godtschalk to interpret our remark, nor had we, at the time of making it, the slightest idea it could have been interpreted in any other sense.—ED. F.C.]

MASONIC MENDICANCY.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I should not have considered it worth while to notice the letter of your correspondent "CONSTANT READER," who apparently desires to constitute himself the champion and apologist of Masonic tramps had it not been that two or three brethren have expressed to me their apprehension that such opinions as his might, if not met with a reply, have a prejudicial effect on the minds of young and inexperienced Masons. I much regret that "CONSTANT READER" should have refrained from publishing his name and address, which might possibly have added force to his letter. As it is, I think most Masons will come to the conclusion that the author is either very young indeed in the Royal Art, or that he is himself the hero of the veracious story he relates of the "destitute" brother who unsuccessfully tackled the brethren at the bar of some imaginary hotel. Probabilities seem to point to his being the identical "way-worn" gentleman in question, for in any other case I fail to see how he could have arrived at his touching "facts." If this be the correct rendering of "CONSTANT READER'S" letter there is no more to be said, but if he is only a very young brother, unacquainted with the subject concerning which he writes so fluently, then the sooner he makes himself acquainted with the real facts the better.

Living as I do in a city that occupies a central point for travellers, and on the high road between North and South, I have had, perhaps, unusual opportunities of seeing specimens of the Masonic mendicant, and when your correspondent expresses his belief that there are "very few who adopt the nomadic profession in Freemasonry," he only convinces me that his experiences are of a very limited character. The almoners of the two Lodges in this city could tell a very different story. But your correspondent says, "Such an unworthy brother would surely be detected, and without publishing his name and his doings to the world, there should be a means of cutting short his career of imposture." I should be glad to know of a simpler means than the very simple one of exposing him in the Masonic press. It unfortunately happens that Masonic tramps have a cunning way of finding out newly made brethren, and, being plausible fellows, usually manage to work upon their feelings and get at their pockets. For some time there has been an understanding in this city that the almoners of the Lodges shall be the media for dispensing charity, and that all beggars are to be referred to them. The result of this arrangement has been the detection of a large number of professional beggars, and the sensible diminution of unworthy applications, which, a few years ago, were unpleasantly frequent. In no case has a worthy brother in distress been refused, but, as it is the practice to give all applicants the benefit of the doubt, when any can be thought to exist, a number of cases have been relieved which have subsequently been found to be utterly unworthy. Your correspondent seems to think that every Masonic beggar should be at once relieved, for fear he should be better than he seems or looks. Perhaps this might be the pleasantest and easiest way to settle the charity question. At any rate, it would no doubt save the donor any fear of such torrents of blasphemous abuse as I have had directed at me by begging blackguards to whom I have declined to give money. But that such a plan would be promoting the interests of Masonry I refuse to believe. I have on several occasions considered it a duty to expose, in your columns, unworthy and plausible brethren who I knew were making a living out of the good nature of the Craft, and my only regret is, that I have not more often adopted a similar course. The reluctance to damage even the faintest prospects of reform has alone prevented me from so acting. At this moment I have a case before me of a brother who arrived here a short time ago, in undoubted distress, and craved assistance. He got it. His board and lodging was paid for a fortnight, until work in his own line of business could be obtained for him. Proper clothes were provided, so as to enable him decently to undertake his work, a situation at 30s a week was secured for him, and he was presented with a railway ticket and two pounds in cash to enable him to secure lodgings in the town to which he was recommended. Result—this "heart sick and weary" brother never turned up at his destination, but got drunk on the way, and cruised off to some fresh pastures, where by this time he may be fleecing another section of the Craft. My observations have led me to the belief that the everyday charities of the brethren are very numerous, and that the genuine cases soliciting relief are very rare.

I shall not publish my name on this occasion, but, of course, I enclose it for your own satisfaction. If "CONSTANT READER" chooses to declare himself in your columns, you are perfectly at liberty to give my name also.

I am, &c.

"HONOUR TO WHOM HONOUR IS DUE."

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I thank "609" for his kind appreciation of my former letter. I must still hold to my opinion that Freemasonry and its Institutions are entirely distinct from one another. Freemasonry is a system of morality; morality includes charity, and charity almsgiving, while almsgiving may take the form of subscription to a school or asylum for the aged. In this sense there is, of course, a bond of union between Freemasonry and our three Institutions, and he who subscribes to the latter puts in practice one of the fundamental principles of the Craft. But I cannot shut my eyes to the fact that there is a growing belief that Freemasonry was made for our Institutions, and not the Institutions for Freemasonry. I maintain that, if our Institutions were swept entirely away to-morrow, Freemasonry would remain what it always has been, the grandest system of morality ever propounded by man, while the principle of charity would still remain, as heretofore, one of the bases on which it rested. It must always be borne in mind that Freemasonry is not, and never was intended to be, what I fear too many nowadays look upon it as being,—a mere benefit society. In its present form, it was invented, if I may use the word, as offering a common ground on which men of all religious and political creeds might meet together and grasp the hand of good-fellowship. It was started at a time when religious and political animosities were very bitter, and men in the opposing camps were inclined to regard each other as personal enemies. This, of course, had the effect of weakening the influence of that charity—in its fullest sense—which is innate in the majority of men, while, at the same time, it was gradually undermining that sense of loyalty by which all men should be animated towards "the powers that be." It is in this sense, and also because our Institutions were a kind of afterthought, due to the spread of the Craft, that I still maintain that Freemasonry and its Institutions are distinct from one another.

Fraternally yours,

A READER.

SOME PECULIARITIES OF LODGE MANAGEMENT.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have before me the balance-sheets of two rather important Metropolitan Lodges, the figures in which present a contrast which appears somewhat striking and singular. It is not necessary to mention names, nor would it serve any useful purpose; but it occurs to me that the figures present an anomaly in Lodge management from which a lesson may be drawn. Apparently they possess a muster roll of about equal numerical strength, but whereas the Secretary of one is enabled to come up at the annual meeting and present a healthy financial statement, the other appears in almost a helpless state of arrears. In the former a balance remains in the Treasurer's hands of nearly £50 at the end of the year, whilst in the latter there stands to the account of the Lodge nearly £170 in subscriptions due. It is inexplicable how in a Lodge of fifty members so great a falling off could have been brought about. Either there must have been an extraordinary amount of laxity on the part of those who have the financial control, or the members themselves must have very shallow ideas as to their responsibilities in regard to the Craft. Of course, it is a proud thing for any Secretary or Treasurer to come before his Lodge and submit such a report as testifies to the sound position in which it stands; and we can scarcely quarrel with such an Officer for putting on a little pressure just before the annual meeting, to secure such a happy result. It may be argued that no true-hearted Mason should need the stimulating reminder of the Secretary to rouse him to a sense of his duty in this respect, but I suppose we are all more or less affected by circumstances, and do not too promptly recognise the necessity of keeping our accounts "close up," in these depressed times. But it is a sad comment upon Lodge management when, in a body of fifty members, arrears should be allowed to accumulate to the tune of £170, because the question naturally arises, how are these recalcitrant brethren to be brought to the "scratch?" It looks very much, on the face of it, that these subscriptions may never be realised in full, and the consequence upon such laxity in management is either an unpleasant nudge on the part of the executive, or a weeding out of the members who have not sufficient interest in their Lodge to keep themselves clear upon the books. I merely allude casually to these facts to impress upon Secretaries the urgent desirableness of putting into practice the maxim that "short reckonings make long friends;" for the Lodge that keeps itself within due bounds of solvency is always happier than that which is allowed to drift into irretrievable arrears, and there is much more likelihood of maintaining an esprit de corps amongst the brethren when the financial atmosphere is clear than when it is clouded by debt. While giving the hint to Secretaries to be a little more active in the discharge of their duty in the collection of dues, it may also serve to incite tardy subscribers to relieve the Lodge executive of a considerable amount of anxiety and trouble.

I remain, Dear Sir and Brother,

Fraternally yours,

EX-SECRETARY.

26th June 1882.

The Annual Meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Surrey will be held at Woking on Friday next, the 14th instant, under the banner of the Wayside Lodge, No. 1395, Woking, and the presidency of the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master General Brownrigg, C.B. The business will include the consecration to Masonic purposes of a new Hall, the roll call of Lodges, the reception of the Report of the Financial and Audit Committee, the election of a Provincial Grand Treasurer, and the appointment and investiture of the Provincial Grand Officers. The reference of Grand Lodge as to the propriety of increasing the fees to the Fund of Benevolence will likewise be taken into consideration, and we are not without hope that the proposition will meet with a successful opposition. There are strong reasons why the Lodge of Benevolence should keep its expenditure within its income; there are no reasons, in our opinion, why it should allow the one to exceed the other, and consequently there are no reasons why it should propose an increase of contribution from the members of Lodges. The moment this is done there will be an increase in the number of applicants for relief.

The duties which devolve on the Lord Mayor of London are the reverse of light, as instanced by the engagements our Worthy and Worshipful Bro. Alderman Sir John Whittaker Ellis, Bart., has had to fulfil only since last Tuesday. On that day he attended the distribution of prizes at the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, Wood Green, in the afternoon, and in the evening entertained Her Majesty's judges at the Mansion House. On Wednesday he presided at the Festival of that Institution, at Brighton, leaving by special train, at 7 p.m., to keep another appointment at his official residence. On Friday there was a Rose Show in the Egyptian Hall, and banquets have also been given to the Bar of England, and on Wednesday to the Chairman Bro. Sir J. M. G. Hogg, Bart., M.P., and the members of the Metropolitan Board of Works. These, it must be remembered, by no means represent the whole of his labour during the brief period referred to.

The members of the Domatic Lodge, No. 177, will celebrate their Summer Festival, on Tuesday, the 11th July, at the Star and Garter Hotel, Richmond Hill. Arrangements have been made for an open air concert, at three o'clock; the banquet will be served at 4.30 punctually, while, at seven, the votaries of Terpsichore will have an opportunity of indulging in their favourite exercise. Given a fine day, and we prognosticate a successful gathering. The members of the Domatic spare no pains to make these meetings of an enjoyable character.

Thursday was fixed for the meeting of the Trinity College Lodge, No. 1765, under the presidency of Bro. W. J. Stark, W.M. The work was to include three joinings, two initiations, three passings, and a raising. Refreshments and music will follow.

REVIEWS.

All Books intended for Review should be addressed to the Editor of The Freemason's Chronicle, 33 Great Queen Street, W.C.

The Masonic Monthly. Vol. I., No. 1. London: George Kenning, 16 Great Queen-street.

THIS is our old friend the Masonic Magazine in a new and far more business-like and attractive garb, and to judge from the contents of the first number, the new series will prove a worthy supplement, as it were, to its very readable companion, the Freemason. The object in establishing a new series in lieu of continuing the old is, as set forth by the editor in his introduction, to make the Masonic Monthly generally as well as particularly attractive. There will be papers that will interest the more abstruse student of Masonic lore, together with others of a lighter character, such as will prove entertaining to those brethren—and indeed, to the public generally—who least affect the study of Masonic literature. We heartily congratulate editor and proprietor alike on the successful accomplishment of their purpose as regards the current number. The lover of the abstruse will find much that will satisfy his particular craving in Bro. R. F. Gould's paper on the "Origin of the Royal Arch," brief as it is; and the first of a series of "Documenta Latomica Inedita," giving the "Contract for building the Nave of Fotheringay Church, 22 September 1434," and in the "Craft Customs of the Ancient Stonehewers, Masons, and Carpenters," as translated, with notes, by Bro. G. W. Speth P.M. 183. "The Days when we go Gipsying," and "Early Haunts of Freemasonry," represent in an agreeable manner the lighter portion of the contents. As regards size, type, and other minor, but yet important, points, the Masonic Monthly is most creditable to all who have had a share in its production.

Little Folks. Cassell, Petter, Galpin, and Co. London, Paris, and New York.

THE current number of this admirable serial for the young is unusually excellent as regards both the literary matter and its illustrations. Among the former we have noticed with pleasure "Pen's Perplexities," "Magnus and the White Bear," "How a Daily Newspaper is produced," and "About our Summer Songs and Songsters." Among the latter must be mentioned the Frontispiece, entitled "How do they suit me?"—a coloured illustration of a charmingly pretty girl, who has just made for herself a pair of ear-pendants consisting of cherries, while the cuts which illustrate "Magnus and the White Bear" are exceedingly well done. In short, the number is one of the best we have seen for a long time, even of this most justly popular, because so meritorious, a periodical.

Great Eastern Railway. East Coast Watering Places. Fares and Summer Train Service.—The seaside resorts to which access may be obtained by means of the Great Eastern Railway Company are of well-established reputability as regards accommodation and health. During the summer season the Company make every endeavour, by means of cheap fares and frequent train service, to meet the demands of the excursion public, and we are confident—speaking from the experience of many visits to Yarmouth, Lowestoft, Harwich, &c., that those who have not yet made up their minds as to the locality they shall visit will do well to avail themselves of the excellent opportunities placed in their way by the Great Eastern Company. The fares are cheap, and the facilities for travelling unsurpassed. The Time Tables of the Company will confirm these statements.

Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, No. 860.—Held at Bro. Smyth's, Sisters' Tavern, Pownall-road, Dalston, on Tuesday, 4th July. Bros. Jones W.M., Wardell S.W., Corble J.W., Catling S.D., Robinson J.D., Bunker I.G., F. Carr Secretary. Lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed. The ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Hammond acting as candidate. Bro. Jones then vacated the chair in favour of Bro. Christian, who rehearsed the ceremony of passing, Bro. Hammond being the candidate. The Lodge was resumed in the first degree. Bro. Forss worked the third, and Bro. T. Clark the fourth section of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. Bro. Wardell was elected W.M. for the ensuing week. Lodge was then closed and adjourned.

North London Chapter of Improvement.—A meeting was held on 6th July, at the Canonbury Tavern. Comps. Osborn Z., Higgins H., Gregory J., Sheffield S.E., Hookey S.N., Gilham P.S., Edmunds Preceptor, &c. The ceremony of exaltation was rehearsed, Comp. Fenner candidate. Comps. Higgins, Gregory, and Sheffield were elected to occupy the three chairs at the next two meetings. Comp. Hookey, St. Martin-le-Grand, No. 1531, was elected a member.

CANONGATE LODGE, KILWINNING, No. 2.

THIS Lodge observed the Summer Festival of St. John in their Lodge room, St. John's Chapel, Edinburgh, 26th June. After the installation of office bearers for next year—Bro. David S. Lowson, M.A., being installed as Right Worshipful Master of the Lodge, in place of Dr. B. C. Waller, of Musongill—the members of the Lodge celebrated the Festival of St. John the Baptist, in which they were assisted by deputations from other Lodges in the Province.—Glasgow Herald, 27th June.

On Monday H.R.H. the Prince of Wales was installed W.M. of the Royal Alpha Lodge, No. 16, in succession to his brother, H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught P.G. Warden, who about this time last year was inducted into the chair of K.S. by the Earl of Lathom D.G. Master. In the absence of the Duke the ceremony of installation was performed by R.W. Bro. Lord de Tabley P.G.M. Cheshire, after which, and the usual greetings and salutations, the following were appointed Officers for the ensuing year, namely, Bros. H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught P.G.W. I.P.M., Lord Balfour of Burleigh P.G.W. S.W., Earl of Limerick P.G.M. Bristol J.W., Rev. E. Moore P.G.C. Chap., Sir Albert W. Woods, Garter P.G.W. and G.D C. Treas., Col. Shadwell H. Clerke G.S. Sec., Rev. C. J. Martyn P.G.C. S.D., Sir John B. Monckton P.B.G.P. J.D., Rev. J. Studholme Brownrigg P.G.C. I.G. Lord Carrington G.S. Warden having been elected a joining member, Lodge was closed and the banquet, at which H.R.H. the W.M. presided, followed in due course. There were present, in addition to those we have named, the following members of the Lodge, namely—Bros. the Earl of Lathom Deputy Grand Master, Lord Suffield P.G. Master Norfolk, Gen. Brownrigg, C.B., P.G. Master Surrey, Sir Michael Costa, P.G.W., Æneas John McIntyre, Q.C., M.P., G. Registrar, and Jno. Havers P.G.W.

Kent is one of the most active of our Provinces at all times, but especially now. On the 28th ult., a new Lodge was consecrated by Lord Holmesdale P.G. Master. On Saturday next H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, assisted by the Grand Master and Grand Officers of the Province, will lay, with Masonic ceremonial, the first stone of the Home for Little Boys at Swanley, and the Princess of Wales will be present to receive purses of Five Guineas and upwards. A short time hence will be held the annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge, so that, within the limited space of a few weeks, Kent will be the scene of three unusual events. To resume, however, the matter that calls for immediate notice, viz., the consecration of the Beacon Court Lodge, No. 1967, New Brompton. This event, as we have stated, happened on Wednesday of last week, the ceremony being performed by Viscount Holmesdale P.G.M., assisted by Bro. J. S. Eastes D.P.G.M., Rev. T. Robinson G.C., the Rev. R. Jamblin P.G. Chaplain, H. Ward P. Prov. Grand Warden Wilts, and others, the scene being laid in the Military Gymnasium, which had kindly been placed at the disposal of the Craft by Major General Sir Evelyn Wood, V.C., K.C.B., &c. for the occasion. On the conclusion of the ceremony, Bro. W. J. Blakey P. Prov. Grand A.D.C. Kent was installed as W.M., and after the accustomed formalities and congratulations, appointed and invested the following, amongst others, as his Officers for the year, namely:—Bros. T. Watson as I.P.M., F. T. Butler S.W., J. Parker J.W., Smith Treasurer, and H. J. Price Sec. Votes of thanks having been unanimously passed to Major General Sir Evelyn Wood for the use of the Gymnasium, the Prov. G. Master for consecrating the Lodge, and Bro. Rev. T. Robinson Grand Chaplain for installing the Master, Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet, at the Ghuznee Fort Hotel, which will henceforth be the meeting place of the Lodge.

Members of the Craft will not readily forget the interesting ceremony at the Royal Albert Hall, on the 28th of April 1875, when H.R.H. the Prince of Wales was installed M.W.G.M. of England. Brethren will doubtless be glad to have a souvenir of that memorable event, so we call the attention of our readers to Bro. Norris's Advertisement. Bro. Harty's picture contains lifelike portraits of those Craftsmen who enjoyed the privilege of being present.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Essex will hold its annual meeting on Thursday, the 3rd August, at the Forest Hotel, under the auspices of the Chigwell Lodge, No. 453, on which occasion it is expected that Bro. the Lord Mayor Grand Junior Warden will be present.

On Wednesday H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught reached Madrid on his return home to England. Though travelling incognito, His Royal Highness was met without ceremony at the Railway Station by the King of Spain, with whom he spent the day, renewing his journey in the evening.

MASTAI FERRETTI.

THAT the late Pope of Rome was regularly initiated, passed and raised a Freemason is beyond question. We have conversed with those who sat in a Lodge, with him and have given to our brethren, through the Corner Stone, the substance of these facts; further, at a semi-annual communication of the Grand Lodge, sitting at Palermo, Italy, on the 27th day of March 1865, Pope Pius IX—Mastai Ferretti—was expelled from the Order.

The decree of expulsion was published in the official Masonic paper at Cologne, Germany, and is preceded by the minutes of the Lodge in which he was initiated, and is as follows:

A man named Mastai Ferretti, who received the baptism of Freemasonry, and solemnly pledged his love and fellowship, and who afterwards was crowned Pope and King, under the title of Pio Nono, has now cursed his former brethren and excommunicated all the members of the Order of Freemasons. Therefore, said Mastai Ferretti is herewith, by the decree of the Grand Lodge of the Orient Palermo, expelled the Order, for perjury.

The charges against him were first preferred in his Lodge at Palermo, in 1865, and notification and copy thereof sent to him, with a request to attend the Lodge for the purpose of answering the same. To this he made no reply, and, for divers reasons, the charges were not pressed until he urged the Bishops of Brazil to act aggressively against the Freemasons. Then they were pressed, and, after a regular trial, a decree of expulsion was entered and published, the same being signed by Victor Emanuel, King of Italy, and Grand Master of the Orient of Italy.—Exchange.

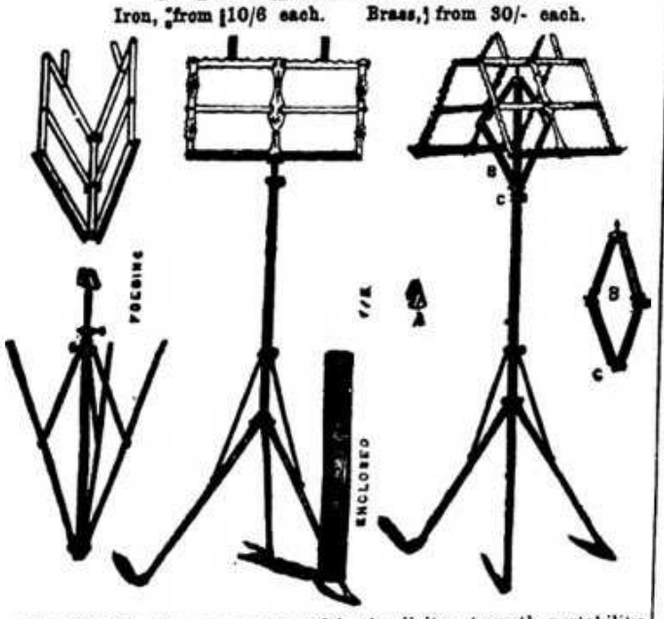
On Saturday last H.R.H. the Duke of Albany laid the foundation stone of a new parish church for Hammersmith, among those present being the Bishop of London and the Vicar, the Rev. J. Hampden Snowden. In addition to the usual offertory, a number of purses collected by ladies and children were placed on the stone towards the expenses of building.

---



At the meeting of the Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, No. 860, to be held at the Sisters' Tavern, Pownall Road, Dalston, E., on Tuesday evening next, Bro. James Stevens, P.M. P.Z., on the invitation of the Lodge, will deliver his Lecture explanatory of the Rituals and Ceremony of the First Degree. Lodge will be opened at 7.30, for 8 o'clock precisely, when the attendance of Craftsmen is invited.

THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE

23 GREAT QUEEN STREET, W.C.

BRO. DR. BENJAMIN FRANKLIN,

PENNSYLVANIA'S THIRD GRAND MASTER.

FROM THE KEYSTONE.

THE two most distinguished Americans in all our history were Benjamin Franklin and George Washington, and both of them were Freemasons. They were, too, not only Freemasons in name—they were active Masons, Masters of their Lodges, while Franklin was twice Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania. They were active, not only in the heyday of youth, when men usually aspire after distinction, but also in the ripe period of middle life, and in the declining years of old age—they never lost their respect and affection for the Craft, its principles and its brethren. The Masonic life of Washington is comparatively well known, but not so that of Franklin, and, concerning it, it is our purpose to give some interesting details. These will be the more acceptable now, since the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania is upon the eve of her Sesqui-Centennial Celebration, and Franklin was her third Grand Master.

Franklin was by birth a Boston boy, and came of a race of blacksmiths. He was brought to the light of the world in the year 1706, but, strange to say, the year in which he was brought to Masonic light is not known. His father was Josiah Franklin, who deserted the forge of his ancestors, and became a tallow chandler; and little Ben Franklin was the fifteenth of seventeen children, and the youngest son of the youngest son for five consecutive generations. His mother was Abby Folger, whose father was a poet; and probably it was through his mother that he derived his literary ability. He was born on a Sunday, and the same day taken over to the famous "Old South Church" in Boston (which is still standing), and baptized. At ten years of age he was a leader among boys, and often led them into scrapes. At this time he became an errand boy in his father's store, but he did not fancy the duty, and thought of running away to sea to escape it. To give him more congenial employment, his father indentured him to his brother James, a Boston printer, and forthwith young Ben became a "printer's devil," which service seemed quite to his liking, so that in a little time he proved what some would term devilish smart, and destined not merely to make his mark in the world, but also to write his name high up on the roll of fame. But his brother and he could not agree. James Franklin was a strict master and a passionate man, and Ben thought him a harsh and unfraternal taskmaster, since he beat him, although he was his brother; so, when he had reached seventeen years of age, and became well versed in the art and mystery of printing (an art and mystery with which the devil and Dr. Faustus are said to have had something to do in its beginning), Ben ran away from his brother, and made what proved the most fortunate move of his life—he came to Philadelphia, which was at once the mother city of his fortunes, and also, and partly through his instrumentality, the mother city of Freemasonry in America. Philadelphia at that time was a grassy, country town, of seven thousand inhabitants. Wolves, bears, and deer were then shot within four miles of it, and Indians often swarmed in its streets.

His advent to Philadelphia was the farthest remove from a brilliant one—he came literally afoot, and alone. But he had a firm reliance on his own ability to get on in the world. He had had comparatively little education, but then he was, as Lord Brougham said, a young man of most uncommon common sense. Our own Emerson fitly described him as one of those whom if planted on a marble slab, would take root. We all are familiar with the figure he made, as he walked up from Market-street wharf, with his pockets stuffed with shirts and stockings, a roll of bread under each arm, and a third roll that he was diligently carrying from hand to mouth. In such a plight was he seen by the girl who afterwards became his wife—Miss Deborah Read, as he passed her father's door, and heartily did she laugh at him, little dreaming that she was to be, shortly, his Dulcina, and her gladly accepted lover. Such is life—it is the unlikely that happens.

Ben's first sleep in Philadelphia was amid the most peaceable surroundings—it was in a Quaker meeting-house, that stood at the corner of Second and Market streets, into which he strolled when wearied with walking the streets, and where the spirit moved none to speak, so that the printer boy's dreams were undisturbed until the meeting closed. Franklin soon secured employment as a journeyman with a Jew printer named Keimer, and, singularly enough, he secured board at Mr. Read's, the father of Debbie, who was to become his wife. The next year he courted Miss Read, and was accepted, and soon after, at the age of eighteen, sailed for London to secure type and presses to set up an office for himself. He took abroad with him little money and numerous letters of introduction, but found very quickly that the exchangeable value of good words was not great in London. As a result he was reduced to great straits to keep himself from absolute want. Finding little to do, he often went swimming in the Thames, and acquired such skill in handling the water that he seriously thought of becoming a professor of swimming, and opening a swimming school. And he not only loved to swim in water, but also to drink it, and it exclusively, so that among his companions he was known as the "water American," because he refused to drink beer with them, and at the same time claimed to be twice as strong as they. Fortunately an engagement as journeyman printer, soon after obtained, made a landsman of him, and the world in consequence can boast one less professor of swimming, and one more scientist, philosopher and statesman. During the year that he was abroad he wrote but a single letter to his betrothed, Miss Read, and that was to tell her that she would not likely see him soon. His hard fortune appears for a time to have unmanned him.

In 1726 he returned to Philadelphia with an empty purse, and to his deep chagrin he found that Miss Read was no more, for she had deeply felt his neglect and had married—but mistaken her man, for she was already deserted, a grass widow. Her husband proved a worthless fellow, and it was even said that he had a former wife living. At all events, he forsook Deborah Read, left the colonies, and was reported dead.

Franklin struggled along for two years, and in 1729, with the aid of some friends, started a printing office. Soon after, he purchased the Pennsylvania Gazette, and forthwith became its editor and proprietor, and continued such for thirty-six years, until 1765, making it one of the best known and most valued newspapers in all America. In the early issues of this newspaper there is contained much Masonic history, which can be found nowhere else, and to which we shall shortly advert. The Gazette continued to exist for one hundred and seventeen years, until 1845, when it was merged into the North American, in which it still lives.

In the Pennsylvania Gazette of 8th December 1730, we find the earliest published mention of the existence of a Lodge of Freemasons in America. The first article in that paper reads as follows:—

"As there are several Lodges of Freemasons erected in this Province, and people have been lately much amused with conjectures concerning them, we think the following account of Freemasonry from London will not be unacceptable to our readers."

Then follows a recital that "By the death of a gentleman who was one of the Brotherhood of Freemasons, there has lately happened a discovery of abundance of their secret signs and wonders, with the mysterious manner of their admission into that Fraternity, contained in a manuscript found among his papers."

At this time we do not think that Franklin was a Freemason, for if he had been, he would not have printed in his paper anything that partook of the character of an exposé. It is not now known either when or where Franklin was made a Mason, but we think it highly probable that it was in Philadelphia soon after the issue of this paper, say early in the year 1731. His curiosity, doubtless, was stimulated, just as that of his readers was, and he was hence led to seek Masonic light. Be that as it may, we know that in the year following, 1732, he was a Mason, and that he was elected, at the age of 26, Junior Grand Warden of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, as we learn from a news item in Franklin's paper of 26th June 1732.

An event that was portentous of good, in the year 1730, to our brother's future career, was his marriage, on 1st September, to Deborah Read. She was a finely formed and handsome woman, and proved a most excellent wife, and the twain lived together in the happiest possible wedded life for the period of 44 years.

We now reach the first authentic fact in Franklin's Masonic history. His newspaper, the Pa. Gazette of 26th June 1732, contains this important item:—

"Philadelphia, June 26.

"Saturday last, being St. John's Day, a Grand Lodge of the Ancient and Honorable Society of FREE and ACCEPTED MASONS, was held at the Tun Tavern, in Water-street, when, after a handsome entertainment, the Worshipful, W. Allen, Esq., was unanimously chosen Grand Master of this Province, for the year ensuing; who was pleased to appoint Mr. William Pringle Deputy Master. Wardens chosen for the ensuing year were Thomas Bond and Benjamin Franklin."

This is the earliest known reference to the meeting of a G. Lodge in America. Freemasonry was first established in America in Philadelphia in 1730, when Bro. Daniel Coxe, of New Jersey, was appointed Prov. Grand Master for two years; and in 1732 the first election was held for his successor, when Bro. Benjamin Franklin was elected Junior Grand Warden. Thus early in life, at the age of 26 years, did he become prominent in the Craft. In the same year he published the first number of his famous "Poor Richard's Almanac," the great serio-comic almanac of its day. He was its author, under the nom de plume of "Richard Saunders," and continued to publish it annually for twenty-five years. It attained a circulation of 10,000 copies a year, and a single original number of it has since been sold at public action for 52 dollars. What gave these almanacs their immense popularity was not their value as almanacs, but the wise and witty maxims with which they were filled. We mention a few of these, so that the reader may understand why "Poor Richard's Almanac" was so popular:—

"God heals, and the doctor takes the fee."

"Three may keep a secret, if two of them are dead."

"Let thy maid-servant be faithful, strong, and homely."

"Keep your eyes wide open before marriage, half shut afterwards."

"If you would have your business done, go—if not, send."

"Laziness travels so slowly that poverty soon overtakes it."

"One to-day is worth two to-morrow."

"A fat kitchen makes a lean will."

"What maintains one vice would bring up two children."

"Dost thou love life, then do not squander time, for that is the stuff that life is made of."

"Handle your tools without mittens—remember, that the cat with gloves on catches no mice."

"A ploughman on his legs is higher than a gentleman on his knees."

"Those have a short Lent who owe money to be paid at Easter."

Digitized by Google

"If you would know the value of money, go and try to borrow some; for he who goes a borrowing goes a sorrowing."

Such are a few of Poor Richard's maxims. Their popularity provoked the jealousy of some of his rivals. In 1736 Franklin wrote: "They say, in short, that there is no such man as I am; and they have spread abroad this notion so thoroughly that I have frequently been told it to my face, by those that do not know me. . . . I need not have taken any notice of so idle a report, if it had not been for the sake of my printer, to whom my enemies were pleased to ascribe my productions; and who, it seems, is as unwilling to father my offspring, as I am to lose credit for it."

Here we may remark that Franklin was a born humourist, as well as a born philosopher. He was ever ready to illustrate great truths by grotesque similes. Wit always mingled with his wisdom. We will give a few examples.

When he was 27 years old, a noted Quaker lawyer of Philadelphia said to him:

"Friend Benjamin, thou knowest everything: Canst thou tell me how I am to preserve my small beer in the back yard? My neighbours, I find, are tapping it for me."

Franklin replied:

"Yes, I can tell you how to preserve it—put a barrel of old Madeira along side of it."

On another occasion, when the town of Franklin, Mass., was named in his honour, and he was solicited to present it with a bell, he sent, instead, a gift of books, because, he said, "sense is preferable to sound."

When Franklin was general of the militia forces of Pennsylvania, during the Indian and French war, the Rev. Mr. Beatty, the zealous chaplain of his forces, complained to him that the men were remiss in attending prayers. Franklin replied: "It is perhaps below the dignity of your profession to act as steward of the rum, but if you were only to distribute it just after prayers, you would have them all about you." The chaplain acted on the hint, and after that never were prayers more generally or punctually attended.

At the age of 80, Franklin published, in the Pennsylvania Gazette, an article which humourously suggested the transportation of American felons to England, as English felons were formerly transported to America. "No due returns," said he, "have yet been made for these valuable consignments. We are, therefore, much in her debt on that account, and as she is of late clamorous for the payment of all we owe her, I am for doing what is in our power. The felons she planted among us have produced such an amazing increase, that we are now able to make ample remittance in the same commodity."

When he was in his 82nd year, Franklin wrote to a friend in France, characterising as absurd the sentiment that prevailed in Europe that a family was dishonoured by the punishment of one of its members.

"On the contrary," wrote Franklin, in his opinion, "a rogue hanged out of a family does it infinitely more honour than ten that live in it."

It it well known that Franklin was famous for his electrical discoveries, but it is not so well known that he infused humour into his exemplifications of several of them. For example, he devised the "electrical kiss," which ever since his time has provoked much hilarity. He also invented the "Counterfeit Spider," made of burnt cork, with legs of linen thread, and by means of electricity he made it so lively, that it jumped around, to the unitiated, like a crazy spider.

In 1752 the merchants of Philadelphia held an assembly for dancing, and one of its rules was: that "No mechanic or mechanic's wife or daughter should be admitted on any terms." The rules being shown by the manager to Franklin, for his opinion, he remarked that "one of them excluded God Almighty." "How so," said the manager. "Because," replied Franklin, "He is notoriously the greatest mechanic in the universe, having, as the Scripture testifies, made all things, and that by weight and measure." The gentlemen became ashamed of their rule and struck it out. Thus was Franklin true to the G.A.O.T.U.

In 1778 a large cake was sent to the American Envoys in France,—Franklin, Lee and Deane. Upon it was this inscription: Le digne Franklin, signifying, the worthy Franklin. Mr. Deane said, "As usual, Doctor, we have to thank you for our accommodation, and to appropriate your present to our use." "Not at all," said Franklin; "this must be intended for all the Commissioners, only these French people cannot write English. They mean, no doubt, Lee, Deane, Franklin—the names of the three commissioners."

It was, perhaps, because Franklin was so widely known as a humourist, at that time of fifty years standing, that he who wielded the ablest pen in America, was appointed by Congress second on the committee to draft the Declaration of Independence, Thomas Jefferson being made Chairman of the Committee. If Franklin had written it, it is more than likely that he would have inserted a joke in our great American State paper.

In the year 1734 Franklin reprinted Anderson's Constitutions of Freemasonry. This was the first Masonic book printed in America. The same year he wrote a letter, as Grand Master of Pennsylvania, to Bro. Henry Price, Grand Master of New England, saying, that he understood, from the Boston prints, that Price's Masonic jurisdiction had been extended over all America (which, however, was a misstatement), and asking for proof of this fact, and authority from him, as Prov. Grand Master of all North America. He also mentioned that some false Brethren in Philadelphia had set up a clandestine Lodge, pretending to make Masons for a bowl of punch; and, in a postscript, he added, "If more of the Constitutions are wanted among you, please hint it to me." It is worthy of note that this letter from Franklin to Price is the first Masonic letter written in America of which any record remains.

In the year 1737 a quasi-Masonic event occurred, which raised a great excitement in the usual quiet "green country town" of Philadelphia, and Bro. Benjamin Franklin was quite innocently mixed up in the affair.

At the corner of Market-street and Letitia-court was a drug store, of which Dr. Evan Jones (who was not a Mason) was the proprietor. There was considerable public curiosity excited about this time concerning the mystery of Freemasonry as it was exemplified in the Lodges of the town, and among those who were most curious was a young man named Daniel Rees, an apprentice to Dr. Jones, the apothecary. Now Jones was fond of a practical joke, and determined to enjoy one at the expense of his apprentice. For this purpose he persuaded John Remington, a Philadelphia lawyer (who also was not a Mason) to aid him, and further, a man named Tackerbury. These three agreed to make the credulous Rees their victim. They pretended that they were Freemasons, and authorised to confer the degrees upon whomever they would, and they offered to make Rees a Mason. He jumped at the bait, and caught the hook. The profane trio, who were self-initiated and self-appointed Masonic Officers, met their candidate one dark night in the rear of Dr. Jones's dwelling. Remington wrote out the oath, which was ridiculously absurd; Tackerbury directed the details, and Jones was head-centre of the imposture. Poor, blind Rees, in all simplicity, submitted to whatever was required of him, and the indignities offered were not a few. Among the rest, while blindfolded, he was compelled to take a strong dose of purgative medicine, and finally he was instructed in certain ridiculous signs. He was then informed that he had received the first degree, and that his first duty was to treat the members of the Lodge, after which all made merry over the ready simplicity with which he obeyed all demands. Daniel Rees solemnly believed that he had been made a Mason, although, in point of fact, no Mason had taken any part in his making.

Now we come to Franklin's alleged part in the affair. In the month of June of the same year (1737) Franklin and two others were appointed by the Court of Common Pleas auditors, or referees, to settle and adjust a matter in dispute between Dr. Jones and Armstrong Smith, Mr. Remington being Jones's attorney. While the referees were awaiting the arrival of Smith, Jones and Remington, understanding that Franklin was a Freemason, told him of the practical joke they had played on Rees. Franklin laughed heartily at it until they mentioned having given the candidate a purge, and administered to him the diabolical oath, when he grew serious, and told them that when the young man came to learn how he had been imposed on, he would never forgive them. Both of the other referees also deprecated the affair. Dr. Jones and Mr. Remington, nothing daunted, continued, that they intended to have some further sport, under the pretence of raising young Rees to a higher degree in Masonry. Remington said that they would introduce him blindfold and naked into a room, where each of the party would be armed with a switch, and whip him briskly all around the room. Dr. Franklin opposed this.

Soon after this conversation Rees came into the room to speak to his master, when Dr. Jones pointed to Franklin, and said:

"Daniel, that gentleman is a Freemason—make a sign to him."

At this remark Franklin turned his head and looked out of the window. Having a respect for the father of the young man, he followed Rees after he had left the room, to tell him of the deception practised on him, but he was gone.

Such was Franklin's knowledge of the affair. But Jones's and Remington's connection with it did not cease here. The evening of that very day, the 3rd of June 1737, had been selected for the subsequent imposition upon Rees. He was taken into the cellar of Dr. Jones's house, where there were present Jones, Remington, and a tailor, whose initials were "E. W.," but whose name is not now known. A pan of spirits was prepared, which they set on fire. In this, raisins were placed, and the three conspirators amused themselves by picking them out, as practised in the game of snap-dragon. One of the company was disguised in a bull's hide, with full head and horns, to represent the devil. The bandage was then taken from the young man's eyes, and he was made to gaze upon the strange, ghostly spectacle. But, contrary to expectation, he did not exhibit any alarm. Dr. Jones, fearing that they themselves would be fooled, instead of their intended victim, rashly threw the contents of the burning pan over Rees. The unfortunate young man at once exclaimed:

"Master, I'm killed! I'm killed!" and fell down enveloped in flames.

The three conspirators, the actors in this unhappy tragedy, made every effort to extinguish the fire, but before it was done Rees was fatally burned, and after lingering for three days, died in great agony.

This occurrence naturally raised a tremendous excitement throughout the city. A coroner's jury was summoned, and in their verdict they severely censured Jones, Remington, and E. W., although acquitting them of wilful design to take Rees' life. All three of the participants in his death were at once arrested and imprisoned, and the excitement against Freemasons and Freemasonry ran very high. A personal attack was made on the character of Franklin in a rival newspaper of the city, Bradford's Pennsylvania Mercury, accusing him of conniving at the outrage. This he promptly and publicly denied, and verified it by the oaths of those who were referees in the case before alluded to, and cognizant of the whole affair. So great and mistaken, however, was the harsh feeling against Freemasonry, that the Grand Officers of Grand Lodge felt called upon to issue the following official statement:—

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—A frequent cause of gout and rheumatism is the inflammatory state of the blood, attended with bad digestion and general debility. A few doses of the Pills taken in time are an effectual preventive against gout and rheumatism. Any one who has an attack of either should use Holloway's Ointment also, the powerful action of which, combined with the operation of the Pills, must infallibly effect a cure. These Pills act directly on the blood, which they purify and improve. Having once subdued the severity of these diseases, perseverance with the Ointment, after fomenting the affected joints with warm brine, will speedily relax all stiffness and prevent any permanent contraction.

HELD on Saturday, the 1st inst., at Harewood House, Croydon, their regular meeting. The Lodge was opened by Bro. E. M. Lott P.P.G.O. (Surrey), P.P.G.J.W. (Jersey), P.M. 245 and 1765, assisted by his Wardens and brethren. Minutes of previous Lodge were read and confirmed. At this part of the meeting the R.W. Bro. Gen. Studholme Brownrigg, C.B., Provincial Grand Master (Surrey) entered, and was received in every way becoming his exalted position. It being election night, and candidates for raising not being present, ballot was taken, and showed the following result, being in each case unanimous—Bros. Edwin Moss S.W. for W.M., H. J. Lardner P.M. 1745 for Treasurer, Harrison Tyler. Bro. Moss, on being officially informed of his election, expressed his best thanks and gratitude for the favour conferred on him. The W.M. inquired for the good of Freemasonry, and received the usual acknowledgments from the Visitors. After which Bro. Moss, being the Senior Officer of the Lodge, after some excellent introductory remarks of the highest character concerning the Worshipful Master, moved, in consideration of the eminent services rendered by him to the Lodge, that £10 10s be taken from the Lodge funds, and the same be spent in purchasing a suitable mark of their esteem, intimating that the brethren might add further to the gift, and make it more intrinsically valuable if they so desired. Bro. Phillips J.W. seconded the same, and in so doing bore testimony in confirmation of the S.W.'s address, and wished to say, further, they were all deeply grateful to their W.M. for having piloted them through the many breakers which successfully ended in obtaining their present warrant, after unsuccessful attempts on three former applications. The motion was duly confirmed by the Lodge, for which Bro. Lott thanked the brethren. The business of the meeting being now completed, the Lodge was duly closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet, ably served by Bro. Rhodes, the host. The cloth being cleared, and grace said, the W.M. proposed the toast of Queen and Craft; also that of the Grand Master H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. This was followed by the Grand Officers of England Past and Present; the whole of which were well received, and fully demonstrated to. The W.M. next proposed the health of the Prov. G.M. General Brownrigg, and P.G. Officers Past and Present, enumerating the distinguished services rendered by their Provincial Grand Master to the Craft. It was through his unerring kindness that a warrant was obtained for them, to meet at Croydon. He had made himself not only popular, but had engrafted himself in the hearts of every member of the Mozart Lodge, and he begged personally to thank him on behalf of the Lodge for his numerous visits, and the deep interest he had taken in the welfare of the Mozart Lodge. Their Prov. G.M. objected to long speeches, but he (the W.M.) was sure their exalted brother would forgive him on this occasion, as most likely it might never occur again for him to address him as the W.M. of a Lodge? He would not detain them longer, but called on them to charge bumpers, and give him a welcome fire, which the brethren fully acknowledged. The Right Worshipful Brother at once rose, and after tendering the Lodge some excellent advice, thanked them for the kind reception he had received, and said he should pay them another visit. His Grand Lodge would assemble before long, when he hoped to see them well represented. In the meantime he trusted they would go on and prosper. Here the brethren all rose, and gave the General a hearty cheer; a similar demonstration took place a few minutes later, when the Right Worshipful Brother rose to leave. The other toasts followed in quick succession, the W.M., Wardens, Officers, Secretary, and lay members each responding to their various toasts in order. Then came the Tyler's toast, thus ending a most pleasant meeting. The following members were present:—Bros. the P.G.M., Dewar

POLITICS IN FREEMASONRY.

HOW foolish it is that some brethren cannot understand the fact that Politics are entirely foreign to Freemasonry, and that the subject must never be discussed within the walls of the Lodge-room. No sooner, however, does an election loom up in the distance than some ignorant Masonic canvassers try to make use of the fact that Brother John Smith is a Freemason, and his opponent, old Jones, holds views of rather an unflattering character to the Order, consequently all his Masonic friends, regardless of their proclivities, are bound to support Bro. John Smith, BROTHER, on each occasion he is mentioned, being spelt in large capitals.

Never was there a greater fraud practised in the name of Freemasonry. The man that so debases our noble Institution, as to endeavour to make it a stepping stone for SELF, never could have understood the nature of our society, or, if he did understand it, should be tried and suspended. "Mercenary, or other unworthy motives"—surely every Hiramite can at least remember the period when he answered a certain expression of that character. If so, he knows in his heart he is falsifying his pledges, made voluntarily at that time, if he attempts to drag Freemasonry into all the turmoil and strife attendant upon the political arena.

What would become of our Brotherly love, our Charities, our teachings of an immortal God, if we changed our whole Institution into a political convention? Is it probable there would be much harmony or peace in a Lodge or Grand Lodge, if an edict were to be issued by the Grand Master that the eighteen thousand Masons under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Canada were to vote for the Conservative party on next election, perchance another edict that for certain political purposes they must exercise their franchise in favour of the Reformers. Of course we are imagining an extreme case, it might be said an impossible case, but the attempt has been made to thus debase Masonry in continental Europe. Who does not remember the French Lodges traversing the ramparts of Paris during the Franco-Prussian war, with banners and in full Masonic regalia? and there equally absurd action in passing condemnatory resolutions regarding their Most Worshipful Brother, the Emperor William. We could give other examples, where European Supreme Masonic organisations have forgotten their Masonry and rushed headlong into the arena of politics, thus totally ignoring the true principles of the Craft.

Masons, as Masons, should know each other as such alone. Our whole system depends upon being particular in this respect; the thousands of incidents that have proved such grand examples of the true meaning of this, and have caused men to forget the heat and fury of passion on the battle field, would never have occurred if political passions were to be permitted amongst us. During the fearful fratricidal strife that a few years ago waged "on the other side," how grandly Masons, during that heated and furious ontburst of political agitation, proved that they were brothers, where necessity demanded it,—yes, even at the cannon's mouth and outside the pestilential prison doors of Libby and Anderson.

It has ever been the proud boast of Anglo-Saxon Freemasonry that she stands aloof from all entanglements of the kind. It is this that elevates her to the exalted height upon which she now stands. In our ranks are to be found men of extreme political views, who are always to be found ready to aid a "brother" no matter what his political proclivities may be—it is only the puny-pulling thing called the "ward-politician," who appeals to the worst passions of an ignorant mob in preference to the intelligence of the man who has by some mischance crept into some careless Lodge that attempts sometimes to debase Freemasonry by using it for his own little political purposes. Such creatures, it is needless to say, are hardly worthy of the name of men, and certainly not of Freemasons.—Canadian Forester.

HOMES FOR LITTLE BOYS.

ONE of the most interesting ceremonies of these later years is arranged to take place to-day (Saturday) at the pleasant little hamlet of Swanley, near Farningham, Kent. We allude to the laying of the first stone of the new Homes for Little Boys, in which his Royal Highness the Grand Master has graciously consented to play the leading part. The Prince will be received by the Earl of Aberdeen, Chairman of the Committee, Mr. W. H. Willans, Treasurer, and the Stewards, on behalf of the Institution, and, Masonically, by Viscount Holmesdale, Prov. G. Master, and the Grand Officers and brethren of the Province of Kent. The escort will consist of a detachment of the West Kent Yeomanry Cavalry, under the command of Colonel Fitzroy Maclean. A brief description of the ceremony as arranged may not be out of place. The Earl of Aberdeen having explained the objects and plans of the Home, and requested His Royal Highness to lay the stone, an address will be presented by the Prov. G. Lodge of Kent. In due course, the Prince having signified his pleasure, will be conducted to the site where the stone is to be laid, and will address those present in the following terms:—

"Be it known unto you, that we, being lawful Masons, true and faithful to the laws of our country, although not ourselves operative Masons, have from time immemorial been associated with the erection of buildings raised for the benefit of mankind, and the glory of the Great Architect of the Universe. We have amongst us secrets concealed from those who are not Masons, but they are lawful and honourable, and are not opposed to the laws of God or man. They were intrusted to Masons in ancient times, and have been faithfully transmitted to us, and it is our duty to convey them down to our posterity. We are met here in the presence of you all, to erect a Home for those left Orphans, which I pray that God may prosper as it seem good to Him. And as the first duty of Masons in every undertaking is to invoke His blessing, I call on you to join the Provincial Grand Chaplain in an address to the Throne of Grace."

A prayer will follow, and the stone will be laid after the usual custom among Masons, after which the architect will be presented, and, having submitted his plans for inspection, will be desired to proceed to the completion of the work. Her Royal Highness will next receive purses in aid of the Home, and the prizes having been distributed to the youthful recipients, the Prince and Princess will take their departure, and the proceedings will be brought to a close. The Bands of the Royal Horse Guards and the Home will contribute much to the pleasure of the meeting.

Having briefly set forth the ceremony which will be observed, let us give attention to the object and principles of the Institution. As to the object, it is that most charitable one of feeding, clothing, educating, and training to industrial work, homeless and destitute little boys, as well as those in danger of falling into crime, whether orphans or not, who are disqualified by poverty or other circumstances, for admission into Orphan Asylums or other Institutions. Candidates for admission must be under ten years of age. As regards the principles on which the Institution is conducted, in the first place, the basis is scriptural, but unsectarian. In the next, the Committee must always consist of members of various Protestant denominations; and lastly, without introducing any Catechism, the children are to be educated in the fear of God and a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures.

Turning to the Institution and the work it has done, we may state that it was established at Tottenham in March 1864, but two years had barely elapsed before the premises rented by the Committee were full, the number of the occupants being ninety, while the number of urgent cases pressing for admission was considerable. Under these circumstances, the Committee resolved on proceeding with their good work, and having purchased the freehold site on which the existing premises stand, Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales was invited, and accepted the invitation, to lay the foundation of those premises. This happened in 1866, and now, the need for extension having arisen, our M.W. Grand Master will, as already described, proceed this day to lay the first stone of additional Homes, so that the requirements of the necessitous may be more amply met.

The Seventeenth Annual Report shows more clearly the class of children that are received into the Homes, and the nature and extent of the work that is being done. Of the last fifty boys received, six had been deserted by their fathers, three by both father and mother, the fathers of four were in prison, and those of five others were hopeless drunkards, sixteen were fatherless, seven parentless, and six had never known their fathers. In respect of the work done, it appears from the Report of Her Majesty's Inspector of Schools, who examined the inmates, that "of 228 boys presented for individual examination as having made the requisite attendances, 219 passed in Reading, 198 in Writing, and 127 in Arithmetic, being equal to 90 per cent. in the whole school." The Industrial Departments of the Home are "necessarily varied," we are told, "and are also greatly regulated by the requirements of the Institution. The growth of vegetables for home consumption; the making of bread for all the boys; the making and mending of their Clothes and Boots; the Carpenters' work and the builders' work—these seem essential; while to do all the painting for the Home seems scarcely less so. These, therefore, with Upholstering and the Engineers' work form the main Industrial occupations; to which must be added such domestic duties as fall to the lot of those who are selected House Boys." The number thus employed is about one-half of the total inmates, full particulars being given in the Report. Then as to numbers; there were in the Home, at the close of the previous year, 308 Boys, the total with the forty-six received during the year being 354. Of these fifty-one left, 32 being placed in situations, 9 returned to friends; 4 entered Regimental Bands, 4 went abroad, 1 was sent to the Union, and 1 to College.

It should be added that each of the Homes is placed in charge of a man and his wife, who are to all intents and purposes the father and mother of the family of children entrusted to their charge. Consequently, the title of the Institution is something more than nominal, and it supplies what the poor little inmates have never had the opportunity of knowing. This, with the other advantages offered, make the Institution a real blessing to the class for which it is intended.

The financial arrangements seem to be admirable, economy being the order of the day. For the moral control we have a guarantee, not only in the worthy officials, who loyally carry out the intentions of the Committee, but also in the strength of the Committee, which includes among its Vice-Presidents such philanthropical gentlemen as Earl Cairns, Bro. the Earl of Shaftesbury, Sir Stafford Northcote, M.P.; Bro. Abel Smith, M.P.; Mr. Samuel Morley, M.P.; Lord Enfield, Sir Charles H. Mills, M.P.;

Digitized by Google

Lord Napier and Ettrick, Earl Sydney, and Mr. John Walter, M.P.; Mr. Robert Hanbury being the President. The Earl of Aberdeen is, as already stated, Chairman of the Committee proper, among whose members we note with pleasure Bro. Horace B. Marshall, C.C., who is so loyal a supporter of our Charitable Institutions.

We will merely add, by way of conclusion, that we trust the occasion of to-day's ceremonial will pass off in all respects most satisfactorily, and that an Institution which for seventeen years past has been doing so much good will in the future have increased opportunities for proving its worth.

OUR INSTITUTIONS.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR GIRLS.—The Quarterly Court of this Institution was held at Freemasons' Hall, on Saturday last, under the presidency of Bro. Col. Creaton, Grand Treasurer, there being present Bros. Joshua Nunn, Frank Richardson, A. E. Gladwell, Lt.-Col. Peters, Robert Grey, P. de L. Long, Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, H. Massey, H. A. Dubois, and others. Outside the usual business of such a meeting, there was a protracted discussion in the case of a motion submitted by Bro. A. H. Tattershall with a view to the amendment of Rule 56, so that it should read in future thus: "No girl shall be eligible for election or for admission by purchase or otherwise who has a sister in the Institution, unless the number of vacancies is in excess of the number of candidates." Among those who took part in it were Bros. F. Binckes, Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, Joshua Nunn, and Walter Hopekirk. In the result the motion was carried by twelve votes to nine. Bro. Hedges having announced that Her Majesty had been pleased to accept the position of Chief Patroness of the Institution, and had sent a donation of £50, a motion was unanimously carried to the effect "that this Court desires to record its grateful appreciation of the high honour conferred on the Institution by Her Majesty's gracious acceptance of the office of Chief Patroness." The proceedings then closed.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.—The Quarterly General Court met on Monday, at 4 o'clock, at Freemasons' Hall, Colonel Creaton, Grand Treasurer, presiding. The other brethren present were A. M. Broadley, L. Ruf, Arthur E. Gladwell, William Roebuck, C. J. Perceval, Thomas Cubitt, E. C. Massey, and F. Binckes Secretary. The minutes of the General Court of 10th April last were read and verified, and the proceedings of the General Committee meetings held since that date were also read for information. The only business before the meeting was the closing of the list of candidates for next election. The list presented by Brother Binckes showed that, deducting names of candidates withdrawn or become ineligible through lapse of time, and adding the names of approved petitions received since last election, there were now 62 eligible candidates, and on the notice of Bro. Roebuck, this list was now declared approved and closed. The number of boys to be elected is twelve.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION. — Colonel Creaton presided at the General Committee held at Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday last, when there were also present Bros. W. J. Murlis, G. Bolton, C. A. Cottebrune, James Willing jun., J. J. Berry, W. H. Goodall, Raynham W. Stewart, J. H. Matthews, A. H. Tattershall, W. Clarke, Jabez Hogg, Edgar Bowyer, W. Hilton, Thomas Cubitt, James Brett, G. L. Moore, Frederick Adlard, E. C. Massey, and Bro. Terry Secretary. Four deaths of annuitants since last meeting were reported—one had received £673, another £351, and another £10. The fourth was Bro. J. H. Jones, who was elected in May last, and had not received anything at the date of his death. Following the custom in such cases the Committee ordered the name of Bro. Caffé—the next highest unsuccessful candidate at last election—to replace the name of Bro. Jones. The Secretary submitted the report of the Finance Committee, which showed the following balances to the credit of the various funds: — Male Fund, £1,338 4s 2d; Widows' Fund, £1,059 12s 7d; Sustentation Fund, £46 7s 7d; together £2,444 4s 4d. The Secretary read a letter from the Provincial Grand Master of West Yorkshire, suggesting that the votes of the subscribers resident in that Province should in future be sent in a batch to the Grand Secretary of the Province, in order that he might obtain the necessary signatures, as was done by Bro. Binckes in regard to votes in the Boys' School. Bro. Terry explained that the books of the two Institutions were differently arranged; the subscribers to the Boys' being arranged under Provinces, while in the Benevolent Institution they were kept in alphabetical order, and that on this account, the suggested alteration could not be properly carried out without making new registers. The Committee having considered the question on its merits, decided to inform the Prov. Grand Master for West Yorkshire that they did not see their way to complying with his request. Four petitions were considered, of which two were approved, one deferred for further inquity, and one for the attendance of the petitioner. The Secretary reported that contracts had been received for the alterations and repairs to the stone work at the Institution, and that the lowest (£149) had been accepted. Bro. Terry further reported that a box containing donations of tea and sugar to the inmates had been received; that the contracts for coals had been executed, and that Bro. Matthew Cooke and his wife had entered upon residence at the Institution.

MALTA.

PROVINCIAL GRAND MARK LODGE OF THE MEDITERRANEAN.

THE first meeting of this Provincial Grand Lodge, as now constituted, was held on the 27th ult., at the Masonic Hall, Valletta, Malta. By a recent decision of the G.M.M. the Province will, in lieu of being styled the "District of Tunis and Malta," be designated the "Province of the Mediterranean," now consisting of the three Mark Lodges in Malta, two Lodges in Gibraltar, and one in Sicily; the Lodges in Tunis forming the Province of North Africa, under the government, as Prov. G.M.M., of R.W. Bro. Thomas Fellowes Read 33 P.D.D.G.M. of Egypt.

An emergency meeting of the Keystone Lodge, No. 107 was called at 7.30 p.m., to receive Provincial Grand Lodge, at which hour there was a very large muster of Mark Masters resident in Malta, together with many Brethren from Sicily and Egypt. The Keystone Lodge having been opened, the Prov. Grand Senior Warden, acting as Prov. G.M.M., together with the Officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge, was received in the customary manner, and Provincial Grand Lodge was opened in ample form.

W. Bro. W. Watson Provincial Grand S. Warden having assumed the gavel, the minutes of previous communications of Prov. Grand Lodge, together with a very comprehensive report from the Board of General Purposes, were read and adopted.

The patent of the M.W. Grand Mark Master, appointing Chevalier Edward Rosenbusch, Knight of the Royal Order of the Crown of Prussia, Knight of the Royal Order of the Crown of Italy, P.D.D.G.M. of Malta, P.Z., P.M.W.S. 18, &c., &c., to the distinguished position of Prov. G.M. Master of the Mediterranean having been read, he was admitted and presented, by W. Bros. Glenday and Stilon, for installation, to the acting Prov. G.M. Master W. Bro. W. Watson P.G.S.W., who addressed him as follows:—

"R.W. Bro. Rosenbusch—I must congratulate you on having been selected to fill the exalted and honourable office of Pro. G.M.M. of the Province of the Mediterranean—an office from which the power and prerogative may depart, on the expiration of your term of office, but the dignity and honour, except by your own act, never.

"You cannot be insensible to the obligation which will devolve on you as the ruler of this extensive and important Province, nor of your responsibility for the faithful and efficient discharge of the duties appertaining to the office. The honour, reputation, and prosperity of the Province will, to a considerable degree, depend on the integrity, skill, and assiduity with which you may administer its affairs; and the unity, peace, and happiness of the members of the Province will be generally promoted in proportion to the zeal, ability, and determination with which you uphold, maintain, and propagate the genuine and sublime principles of our noble Institution. In inducting you, therefore, into your chair of office, and investing you with the symbols of authority for the government of this Province, I am performing a most solemn duty, because, in committing to your hands the superintendence and welfare of the Province, I invest you with powers and prerogatives of a very high order.

"The good resolutions which, no doubt, you have formulated in your own mind, that these powers and prerogatives shall not be either abused or perverted in your hands, I would gladly strengthen by a few words of admonition.

"The very consciousness of the possession of power will make a generous and properly constituted mind cautious and gentle in its exercise. To rule has been the lot of many, but to rule well has been the good fortune of comparatively few. To rule well should, therefore, be the continued aim of your honourable ambition. But always bear in mind that it is not by the strong arm or iron will that obedience and order, the two chief requisites of good government, are secured, but by holding the key to the affections and hearts of men. Be it, therefore, your honest endeavour to obtain and hold this key by ruling the Province with integrity, impartiality, and justice.

"It will be your duty to uphold and maintain firmly the ancient landmarks of our order and resolutely oppose any infringement of them and all attempts at innovation. But in performing this duty avoid ostentation, or undue assumption of superiority. Seek the confidence and co-operation of your associate Officers. Be accessible and amiable to all, for although elevated, for the time, above the rest of the brethren, you must remember that you are elevated by them and are under obligations to promote, as far as lies in your power, the interest and welfare of each and all. Be deliberate in judgment, prompt in execution, patient with the restless or ambitious, and ever ready to award merit; and, above all, cultivate and exercise the golden tenets of brotherly love, relief, and truth. By such a course of action you will secure the respect, confidence, and esteem of your constituents, and, in consequence, your rule will be an easy and pleasant one.

"Thus it is evident that the office of Prov. Grand Master is a very important and responsible one and requires to be inaugurated by solemn and special sanction."

At the conclusion of the address, which was loudly applauded, R.W. Bro. Rosenbusch was duly obligated and installed into the chair of A. in a most impressive manner by W. Bro. Watson. The acting Prov. Grand Director of Ceremonies. Bro. A. O. Giles, having made the necessary proclamation, the newly installed Prov. Grand M.M. was saluted by the assembled brethren in the ancient manner, receiving hearty congratulations from all on his elevation.

The R.W. Prov. Grand Master then appointed and invested his Officers as follows:—

Bro. Rosenbusch then addressed the brethren at some considerable length, expressing a hope that the members of the several Mark Lodges under his jurisdiction would assist him to the utmost of their ability in furthering the interests of Mark Masonry in the new Province, and stating it to be his wish and intention, so far as lay in his power, to cause the Province of the Mediterranean to compare favourably with any other Province under the auspices of Grand Mark Lodge. He said he had reason to believe that application would be made at an early date for the formation of Mark Lodges at Palermo and Messina.

The Right Worshipful Prov. Grand Mark Master then proposed that a Past Prov. Grand Mark Secretary's jewel should be presented to Bro. A. B. Truefitt 18 P.P.G.M. Secretary, as a mark of appreciation of Grand Mark Lodge of the manner in which he had discharged the arduous duties of his office for the past two years; this having been seconded by the D.P.G.M.M. was carried unanimously.

Congratulations and thanks were tendered by the P.G.M.M. to those Mark Masters from Syracuse and Egypt who had honoured the meeting with their presence.

The business of Prov. Grand M. Lodge being concluded, it was closed in ample form, and the brethren subsequently adjourned to the refreshment-room to partake of an excellent cold collation which Bro. Beck had provided in most recherché style, affording entire satisfaction to the executive, the only regret expressed being that, consequent on the excessive heat, a number of the brethren who attended the Lodge did not take part in the festive proceedings, which although somewhat prolonged, were greatly appreciated by all present.

The Province of Mediterranean being now fairly started, we wish it, and fully anticipate for it, a long course of continued prosperity.

On the 28th July, and subsequently, there will be a very novel Exhibition at the Art Furnishers' Alliance, Limited, 157 New Bond-street W., consisting of a series of examples of Wall Decoration, produced by the exclusive use of ordinary brown paper, sugar paper, soap paper, and other cheap materials, the desire being to demonstrate that true art effects can, by these means, be harmoniously introduced. This novel adaptation is not unlikely to effect a considerable revolution in the internal decoration of our homes.

REVIEWS.

All Books intended for Review should be addressed to the Editor of The Freemason's Chronicle, 23 Great Queen Street, W.C.

The Uselessness of Vivisection upon Animals as a Method of Scientific Research. By Lawson Tait, F.R.C.S., &c. Birmingham: The Herald Press, Union-street. 1882.

THOSE who take an interest in the battle that is being waged between the supporters and opponents of Vivisection, will find the case of the latter stated very fully by Mr. Tait in this pamphlet. The article it contains was read before the Birmingham Philosophical Society on the 20th April, and has been reprinted, by permission, from the Society's Transactions. Vivisection, of course, is not one of those subjects with which it is the Province of a Masonic journal to deal. We must content ourselves, therefore, with saying that, as far as it is possible for us to form a judgment, the case of the anti-vivisectionists, as set forth by Mr. Tait, is argued clearly enough and with much ability. We note, however, that he is apt to speak at times very dogmatically, a practice by no means calculated to advance the cause he has at heart. Here is a case in point:—

"Take the case of the alleged discovery of the circulation of the blood by Harvey, and it will be clearly shown that quite as much as Harvey knew was known before his time, and that it is only our insular pride which has claimed for him the merit of the discovery. That he made any solid contribution to the facts of the case by vivisection is conclusively disproved, and this was practically admitted before the Commission by such good authorities as Dr. Acland and Dr. Lauder Brunton. The circulation was not proved till Malpighi used the microscope."

We fancy it will take the authority of some one of higher authority than Mr. Tait to shake the national belief in the justice of Harvey's claim to be regarded as the discoverer of the circulation of the blood.

Celebrities of the Day: British and Foreign. Part 13. London: W. Poole, 121 Paternoster-row, E.C.

THE memoirs contained in this periodical are well written, but what will make this number for the current month more particularly acceptable to Craftsmen is, the fact that of the half-dozen worthies whose lives are described, two were Craftsmen, namely, the late General Garibaldi, Honorary Past Grand Master ad vitam of the Grand Orient of Italy, and the Earl of Zetland Prov. Grand Master of North and East Yorkshire. The latter is especially interesting, as it gives a full and detailed account of the Dundases, of which family his Lordship is the representative.

Bro. Harry Tipper, Conductor of the Criterion Hand-Bell Ringers and Glee singers had the honour, of performing Selections on the Hand Bells, and rendering some Part Songs on Thursday afternoon at a Garden Party given by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales at Marlborough House, to meet Her Majesty the Queen.

At the bombardment of the Alexandrian forts on Tuesday, the British fleet fully sustained the reputation of the country as the first maritime power in the world. Yet of all the big and little ships that took part in the fight, there is not one which has covered itself with so much glory as the gunboat Condor, Commander Bro. Lord Charles Beresford P.M., Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar Lodge, No. 1903, Portsmouth. This tiny little vessel for the term of an hour singly engaged one of the most formidable of the Egyptian forts—the Marabout—in a manner which aroused the enthusiastic admiration of those who witnessed it and elicited from the Vice-Admiral in Command Sir Beauchamp Seymour the congratulatory signal, "Well done, Condor!" To which we add "Bravo, Beresford!"

Bro. Baron de Ferrieres, M.P., for Cheltenham, has announced his intention to resign his seat at the next general election through failing health.

Bro. Carl Rosa has engaged Drury Lane Theatre for a spring season of English Opera, which will commence on Easter Monday next year, and will be, as heretofore, under his sole management.

The Lord Mayor will preside at a meeting at the Guildhall on Wednesday next, to further the movement which has for its object the erection of a tercentenary memorial to Sir Francis Drake on the Hoe.

The final meeting of the Board of Stewards of the recent Boys' School Festival will be held at Freemasons' Hall on Monday, the 24th instant.

It is proposed to form a new Journalists' Club, of which Bro. G. A. Sala has consented to become the President. The Honorary Secretaries pro tem. are Mr. R. S. Chant and Mr. H. Wright.

ON MY BACK.

(By a Sick Brother.)

YES; here I am, my editorial friend—not of my "own free will and accord," but by the advice of a medical practitioner, whom my friends consider "eminent." All that I can say is, that his physic is as nasty as any I ever purchased at a chemist's shop; that the oil of the liver of the cod, by which he orders me to be nourished, makes me almost twist my head off my shoulders with nausea; and that his twaddle about diet and regimen is "eminently" absurd. But I am admonished to be passive and obedient, as though these skinny fists and arms could floor a seventeen-stone policeman! "Then," says my tormentor, "you may have a change of air and scene"—a remedy, it strikes me, these "eminent" gentlemen always fly to when they are convinced they cannot cure you, and that, if the patient must die, it is just as well, and perhaps better for them, if he performs that operation at a distance from home.

However, I gulp down my fishy, oily draught, wriggle after it like a skinned eel, and sink into a fitful half-slumber. But in my dreams the fairies whisper in mine ears the magic promises of "a change of air and scene," and in the crannies of my brain there open out, like port-holes in a three-decker, panoramic reminiscences that follow each other in rapturous succession, flushing the cheek, and calling forth involuntary ejaculations, which seen passing strange, as coming from the parched lips of an invalid.

I have read your sketch on "The Days when we go Gipsying," and it brings to mind pleasant and fanciful recollections.

Do you remember the dear old times, when the heart was young, and budding success in life enabled us to enter upon the many pleasantries, as well as the duties, of the Craft? When the "predominant wish of our heart" was granted to us by a worthy brother, whom we then gazed upon with astonishment almost bordering on adoration—and for whom a filial love still beats within our heart—how we longed to bound along the chequered floor, like a school-girl at her music, rushing into fantasias almost before she had mastered her gamut! How the genial Past Master pulled us up by his parental wisdom, and reminded us of the caution which so impressed us in the initiatory stage, but which, in our excess of zeal, we had well-nigh forgotten! How, when we had proved ourselves worthy, we were advanced through the gradations of our Lodge, and felt the flush of pride, at successive "visits," by reason of the growing dignity bestowed by the jewel depending from our collars. Can you easily forget the overwhelming sense of honour, and of responsibility, which pulled upon you when you at length reached the goal to which all true Masons aspire, and you were "duly greeted and saluted," as you first sat in the chair of King Solomon? With what timid, but earnest, pride you instructed the brethren "below the chair," and aired your eloquence (!) at the banquet table? And with what a sense of relief you transferred the gavel to your successor, and passed into the serried ranks of "veterans," with the Past Master's jewel glistening on your breast? I need not recount, to those who know, the varying sensations of pleasure experienced in the various grades beyond, and who will all agree with me what a succession of agreeable surprises Freemasonry is. O tempora mutantur!

But of "summer outings" I began to write; and pardon my digression. If Demosthenes junior lamented the increase of books as tending to deprive the scholar of his literary omniscience, holiday-makers of the present day may with much better reason complain that the multitude of trips and excursions offered to the public have been the means of robbing him of much statute-made importance. Half a century ago, before such opportunities were afforded of pleasant excursions into the country or the seaside, before the "Maria Wood" was, or the grounds of our great Palaces spread their allurements before the holiday crowds, the brethren of our Lodge thought themselves mighty swells indeed when they started off upon their summer pic-nic! What a flutter of excitement among the wives and sweethearts, in anticipation of their share in the "privileges of the Order," the "mysteries" of which they are ever longing to discover. Such a packing-up of savoury viands, such a clatter of knives and forks, such a careful handling of dainty dishes, prepared by loving hands—none of your wholesale caterers in those days—and such a buzz and stir among the dear creatures in view of showing their devotion to the Craft, to say nothing of the rivalry always inevitable in the matter of millinery! Down among the shady dells of Epping, the sylvan groves at Hampton, over the furzy slopes of Boxhill, the forest glades of Deepdene, and a score of Elysiums I could name, now rise before me, and I can almost hear the "ripple of mirth," of which you speak, and see the "jewels and eyes," &c., you so eloquently describe.

But, as I have said, here I am, "cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd," by "eminent" order, and can only toss from side to side, and dream of past delights.

One "summer outing," however, I remember distinctly, above all the rest, where the happiness of my life, Masonically and otherwise, was sealed; and here a comely dame nestles close up and calls me "a dear, old sentimental thing!" for recounting the event. It had been decided to run down by boat as far as Gravesend, and what an undertaking it was in those days, on board a snorting tug, as we made our way along the windings of the busy Thames, and landed at the queer old jetty which served as a pier and promenade all rolled into one. How cosy the quaint old hostelry near the Customs House, which looked upon the tumbling waters of the Reach, and what a bounteous repast was spread before us by the jolly old brother who presided over the inn and its greensward leading down towards the margin of the river. I have been there many times since, but never did the place appear so serenely happy as it did that day. The banquet was held in a balcony facing the river, and at our feet the rippling wavelets of the Thames beat merry music against the old piles, in unison with our happy pulses. We had no "speeches" there, believe me, for the day was too short for "post-prandial" dallying. A drive, "over the hills and far away" over the Wrotham mount, and away to Farningham, with a specially-prepared tea at the old Red Lion—who reigns over the historical house now I wot not—a dance upon the lawn, and homeward-bound again to Gravesend, to tender hearty good wishes to the landlord, who treated us right royally, and even fired a salute from the little cannon in his garden, as our "gallant bark" snorted her way back again en route for London-bridge.

Those times have changed; we are too important now to content ourselves with primitive Gravesend, and its frugal afternoon teas of shrimps and watercresses. Leaving Masonry for awhile, and speaking of modern holiday-making, is it not a fact that fashion and self-importance have stepped in, and humble resorts so prized years ago, succumb to breezy Brighton or mangey Margate? Bro. Smithers is successful in business, and takes his family to some London-on-the-Sea for a month. We, also, are prospering, and must follow suit; otherwise what will Bro. Smithers think? The boys, too, have grown bigger, and can help us to row out upon the bounding sea; they can vie with us in hauling up the shiny soles and grunting gurnets. No wonder that Brighton and Margate have become favourites since they have been brought so near home by contending railway companies; but they are too "loud," too rollicking and boisterous, for those who delight in enjoyments far from the madding crowd. Yet, after all, I question whether we extract more real happiness out of our wider and more expansive range of travel than we found in the simple enjoyments of "Ye olden time," all the more relished because they were the best we could afford.

All said and done, to me Gravesend is the place to spend "a happy day." Now that the cheap trains are so frequent, and the river boats so swift and pleasant; when a half-day may be utilised in combining the business of home with the healthful recreations of the country, nowhere, according to my idea, can these advantages be so happily blended as at Gravesend. And I will prove my right to say so.

I have paced the shingly foreshore as the moon has cast her silvery pathway across the Thames, whilst the dulcet strains of music have kept time with the flashing wavelets as they whispered a lullaby to declining day. I have watched the devotees of fashion—or would-be such—who, in their brief, butterfly span of holiday, strut along the terrace walks, apeing the greater swells in their incessant caprices in the matter of costume. Simple trades-folk, who look uncommonly well in their accustomed prints and hollands in the forenoon, with the bronze of health upon their visages, are trussed up with marvellous and incongruous taste for the afternoon promenades; while the evening hours, still raw and chill, even in the middle of this abnormal summer time, call into requisition a nameless variety of wraps and overalls, as the young folks draw closer together and whisper on subjects the purport of which it is not my business to inquire. One amongst the group stands prominently forth in my remembrance—that girl with the pork-pie hat, out on one side of which peeps the white wing of a pigeon, emblematical of the dove inside the hat, which exposes one pinion and declares itself to be at peace. I afterwards find that the pork-pie hat is only an advertisement, and that its loud-talking owner (a countess could not be made more fuss about) "serves behind the counter" at a pork-pie shop in Bermondsey, where they do a "roaring buz'ness" after the pubs and music-halls are closed!

But, entre nous, there are a great many others who could be spotted in the same way, if we were only inclined to play the amateur detective. We have all our foibles, and when you go to Rome you must do pretty much as the Romans do.

Fancy takes me to the offing of the Nore, where white-winged yachts gyrate amongst the cumbrous barges and bigger craft which are toiling, with wind and tide all in their favour, towards the docks; whilst 'longshore the would-be sportsmen fire gaily, but without effect, upon the wild sea birds as they skim the waves in joyous freedom. Visions of gleeful hours passed upon the rippling river, as we follow in our natty launch the yacht club gatherings from the pier, down past Erith and Southend to the Nore; with our al fresco luncheon, as the swan-like beauties slant away and around the buoys. See the sturdy spritsail barges, in all the glory of their summer paint and ochre, and listen to the boisterous mirth of the "bargees," with their wives and sweethearts, as they foot it to the cadences of gleeful music on board the committee steamer! This is a glorious time, spent once a-year by the hard-worked toilers on the Thames, and only a week or two back I read of the continued success of an institution which will, I hope, be long maintained. Who has not seen them sallying forth, dressed in their "best bibs and tuckers," fully bent on pleasure and relaxation on the great carnival of the year? Nor will I be too censorious over their conversation, by the way, when, after the silver cups had been awarded, amidst complimentary speeches, and the champagne had flowed freely—in which a party of "young ladies," under the chaperonage of a stout mamma, had moderately participated—I detected a certain levity of style, a want of "feather," only to be expected, just as when you catch a moth and examine the unfortunate insect after having crumpled it in your fist. Mincing maidens and sedate shop girls sometimes forget their reserve when on holiday bent; and the Miss Tomkins's on an evening's cruise, and the Miss Tomkins's on the next afternoon on the Terrace-walk, could surely never have been the same individuals! Ah, me!

In my days, Gravesend was to me the dolce far niente of peaceful enjoyment. No rude, rollicking cockneys, with their eternal passion for equestrian exploits, to the utter disregard of the quietly-disposed; no hawkers of indigestible whelks or shyers at cocoa-nuts; no immodesty or rough horseplay such as shock the senses at every turn, at some "resorts" I could mention, where there is scarcely a redeeming feature in the way of refinement. In the gardens of the Clarendon, or at the windows of the Falcon and other good hotels on the river-side the visitor may sit and listen to the near vibrations of the band upon the Terrace pier; can watch the coming and going of smartly-handled yachts, the scudding about of rowing and pleasure boats, the passage of great ships as they go lumbering up with the tide towards the busy docks. Out upon the river, and alongside the beach are boats innumerable—for rowing and sailing can here be enjoyed at an exceedingly moderate tariff—whilst the moonlight and other trips are to be pleasantly remembered by thousands besides myself amongst those who have selected Gravesend for their summer outing.

How fitful are the reminiscences that hover around the sick couch! Off at a tangent to the dancing waters of the Solent, where yachts are slanting to the glorious breeze, and the darkling hills of the Isle of Wight frown out upon the sea, as if in envy of us who are afloat on so magnificent a day. On to the pier at Ryde, where the band plays so sweetly in the deepening twilight, and where gay parties are moving briskly to and fro in the enjoyment of the summer evening air. Pleasant are the day trips to Sandown, Ventnor, and the Chines, where al fresco dinners are "the thing," between delightful drives, with which the island abounds. How brimful of mirth are the trips around the Needles—how exhilarating and pregnant with interest the imposing naval spectacles at Spithead, where Southsea is extravagant with the gaiety of thousands of visitors.

Again, there come back recollections of fine yachting cruises along the southern and western coasts, from Dover to Plymouth, putting in here and there for rest and recreation; quiet rowing along the sunny Thames—past Richmond, Twickenham, and Kew, with pic-nics in the Hampton Gardens. All these come welling up before me as I recline by the open window of this most salubrious of all watering-places—Torquay. Dear in memory is the old spot—long before it grew into the "forest of villas" it now is, when the Beacon Hill, just opposite my quiet lodging, was intact; before the new harbour had spread its arms to embrace the increased shipping of the port; before the wide tracts of green fields around Torre Abbey and the "Warren" had been disturbed by the operations of the builder. Edging the calm, still waters of the bay are pictures of natural beauty unrivalled in all my journeyings; while on the tide snowy-sailed yachts are borne in luxurious ease and grace, and from the villa-speckled hills—if one has the strength to mount long flights of steps and climb zigzag paths—there can be commanded a stretch of scenery, both land and sea, equalled only, so far as I know, by the classic Bay of Naples itself.

I have travelled much, and the pages of memory are adorned with many glowing pictures of pleasantry, and interest suggested by your article on "The days when we go Gipsying." They may come again some day; and this echo from the sick couch is uttered in no complaining mood. I envy not those who, in robust health and spirits, are now away upon the wings of holiday keeping. But even in this warm sequestered spot, this home of the zephyrs, I must close my windows early, and wish to one and all bon voyage, though I am still lying

"TRADING ON MASONRY."

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I "should not have considered it worth while" to notice the letter of your correspondent "CARITAS CUM DISCRIMINE" were it not to point out how common has become the odious custom of indulging in personal vituperation amongst men. You have yourself deplored the accident, and I notice in your contemporary the Freemason, of the 24th ult., an exclamation of which note should be made by Masonic writers. "Is it not a wonderful thing that Freemasons can never write upon any subject whatever, apparently, without at once degenerating into obvious personalities?" It will be my aim to leave unsatisfied the latent curiosity of my Brother with the Latin cognomen. Very likely it would not have enlightened him much, or have "added force" to my letter, had I not "refrained from publishing my name and address." Suffice it to say his vision must be oblique if he imagined from my letter that I desire to constitute myself "the champion and apologist of Masonic tramps," or that his conclusion is any more well-founded when he imagines I am "either very young indeed in the Royal Art," or that I am myself the hero of the veracious story I relate "of the destitute Brother who unsuccessfully tackled the brethren at the bar of some imaginary hotel." You, Bro. Editor, know I am not the "identical wayworn gentleman in question;" and, indeed, had I been, the "touching facts" would hardly have gained any additional force by choosing to "declare myself in your columns." Our classical Brother should recollect that the amenities of journalism have not yet quite disappeared, and that to open rebutting evidence by a declamation against your opponent's presumed character is not the most Masonic or gentlemanly mode of argument. I will only add, on this part of the subject, that the galled jade always winces, and I can but come to the conclusion that my correspondent is a "very young Brother, unacquainted with the subject concerning which he writes so fluently," otherwise he would not have been "successfully tackled" by one who fleeced him out of a suit of clothes and two pounds to secure lodgings in a place to which he was recommended, who "never turned up at his destination," but who "got drunk on the way and cruised off to some fresh pastures, where by this time he may (sic) be fleecing another section of the Craft!"

Pardon me quoting so freely from the diction of my friend: it is as amusing as it is classical, and cannot be improved upon. But even a better point in the effusion is that he does not in the slightest sense touch the principle involved. In the first place, he evades the leading distinction between Masonic charity, which every Hiramite is bound to uphold, and turns off at a tangent upon "Masonic Mendicancy," which nobody mentioned, and which nobody can more abominate than my friend's "very young brother!" I entirely sympathise with "CARITAS CUM DISCRIMINE" in the position into which he has been thrust. "In a large city that occupies a central point for travellers, and on the high road between North and South"—upon my word I cannot for the life of me refrain from quoting again—he has undoubtedly had "unusual opportunities of seeing specimens of the Masonic mendicant;" yet, methinks his experience must have been unfortunate, or "very young," when he finds hurled at him "such torrents of blasphemous abuse," by "begging blackguards" to whom he has declined to give money. The alliteration is unique, but such epithets applied to Freemasonry are not gentle. He has had his temper ruffled, or he would not—have written that letter!

After all, my brother so benignly shows he has a large heart, and that his only object is to advocate discrimination in the giving of relief, that I mentally shake hands with him, and may some time or other give him my "name and address." I cordially agree with him in the belief, and I could strengthen that belief by reciting many instances, that "the every day charities of the brethren are very numerous." It is the glory of the Craft that this is so; but that it should be turned into an inquisitorial machine, and follow in the vein of a Charity Organisation Society, would be lamentably destructive of the high-minded and holy principle of Charity as defined in the Royal Art. As I hinted in my last letter, there are hundreds of worthy Masons to whom a practical illustration of the sentiments so freely uttered in the banquet hall would be as a heaven-sent blessing—who are too sensitive to appeal, but who, if discriminately relieved, would instinctively reflect the real Charity of Freemasonry a thousandfold more than does all the glitter and glare of our preaching at the dinner table.

Let us draw the distinction between the deserving object of our Charity, and the "Masonic mendicant" of whom your correspondent speaks. A simple means of checking the latter would be to endorse his certificate with a record of the date on which he was relieved, and the amount granted. How could such an unworthy brother long exist on ill-gotten aid? But to tar all with the same brush is not charitable, and the farthest idea from my mind was that "every Masonic beggar should be at once relieved, for fear that he should be better than he seems or looks." I am no stickler for any curtailment of the amenities of the Fourth Degree, for I believe they tend to generate the true spirit from which generosity flows; but when we find so much of what our American brethren call "high falutin'" over the charitable achievements of the Craft, compared with what is devoted to its pleasurable accompaniments, the world must draw its own conclusion as to the sincerity of our professions.

In a word, let "CARITAS CUM DISCRIMINE" agree with me that to inflict an inquisitorial examination upon a deserving brother who needs our assistance would be to drive him to desperation and to destitution before he would accept a gift ungracefully bestowed, while, on the other hand, to hand the certificates of known mendicants with the badge of their profession would be to banish them from the harvest fields of their illegitimate calling, and in a short time make their game not worth the candle. With hearty good wishes to my "very young brother," and to you, dear Sir, I remain,

Yours fraternally,

12th July 1882. "CONSTANT READER."

MASONIC MENDICANCY.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—There is no doubt much truth in the remarks, published by you last week, of "CARITAS CUM DISCRIMINE." Every now and then cases of Masonic imposture are made known to the Craft in the columns of the Masonic journals. These have the effect of making Lodge almoners more wary, and the result is a decrease, as your correspondent says, in Masonic Mendicancy. But without endorsing all "A CONSTANT READER" has said on the subject, let me just point out that this extra caution may oftentimes be exercised to the detriment of really deserving applicants. Your earlier correspondent mentioned the case of a wayworn brother being sent empty away, and we have his assurance that the circumstances, as narrated by him, did occur. On the faith of that assurance, I say the facts are not creditable to the brethren of the locality in which they took place, and furnish one more apt illustration that caution may be carried too far. Let me mention a case of which I learned the particulars a few months ago, and in which this excessive caution would have been equally to be deplored. A brother from one of the remoter Provinces had occasion to visit London on a matter of business. On arrival he unfortunately fell into the hands of the Philistines, was hocussed, and when he came to his senses next morning found himself without his money and valuables. Of course, he had no business to fall into the hands of the Philistines, no business to allow himself to be hocussed, and therefore no business to be next morning minus his property. Nevertheless that was the predicament in which he found himself, and but for the timely loan of a few shillings he must have remained a good twenty-four hours houseless and foodless. As it was he was able to telegraph to his bankers, and the needful reached him the following morning. Let me ask "CARITAS CUM DISCRIMINE" if, in the case cited by a "A CONSTANT READER," it would have been a serious departure from proper Masonic caution had the brethren mentioned dismissed their "wayworn brother" with the price of "glasses all round" in his empty pocket. I fancy, as a rule, your true Masonic Impostor lays himself out in a business-like way, to pocket large sums, and would curse you if you gave him the price of a bed and breakfast, just as the true London beggar will curse the passer by if the latter gives a loaf of bread instead of the price of a quartern of gin.

Moral: Extreme caution in bestowing alms must be avoided quite as much as extreme laxity.

Fraternally yours,

LONDONER.

PROVINCE OF DEVON AND THE R.M.I.B.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—It may be some consolation to Brother Godtschalk if I, who read your late analytical article quite independently of all considerations save of those interest in what I was reading, and impartially as between one Province and another, assure him that, in what you said respecting Devon, I understood you to write in the sense you have since explained. I had no idea you were doing anything else than endeavour to account for the Province which, with its fifty Lodges, ranks in respect of numerical strength next after the two Lancashires and West Yorkshire, contributed what, seemingly, was so small a sum. I have noted these articles of yours with especial interest ever since they were begun, and I have remarked with satisfaction, not only how generally accurate they have been, but how careful you have been to offer what seemed to you to be a reasonable explanation for any apparent shortcomings on the part of this or that Province. If a Province has been absent from the subscription list to a Boys' Festival, you have accounted for that absence on the ground that it had figured at the preceding Girls' or Bene-Benevolent Festival. If its contribution is only a small one, you point out, where possible, that more could not have been expected, as it had already given liberally the year previous, or that, instead of giving one fairly large amount to a single Institution, it had preferred distributing its favours impartially among the three. When, therefore, I read your remarks about Devon in the present instance, I saw at once as I have already explained, that by the sentence—"But here again we have a local Charity, which diverts to its own use some of the moneys raised by the Craft in the county"—you intended nothing else than that, as it had a local Charity of its own, it could not in reason be expected to give as liberally to our central Charities as doubtless it would otherwise be desirous of doing. I recognised that the local fund which, I believe is an educational one, was doing good service, by relieving the Schools of a certain proportion of the pressure upon their resources, and under such circumstances, I felt with you that it would be unjust to expect its contribution should have been as large as if there had been no such Devon Fund or Institution.

We all know how hard Bro. Godtschalk works for his Province, and none know better than he and Bro. Curteis how great are the difficulties which brethren circumstanced as they are, must encounter in "raising the wind." I trust, therefore, after the full explanation you appended to his letter in your last week's issue, that he will see clearly, at all events not less clearly than your humble servant and brother, and independent reader, that nothing was further from your mind—if I may take the liberty of attempting to interpret it—than to suggest that, in what you said, you had any idea that the Provincial funds were diverted from the central Charities to the local.

I ask you to find space in your columns for this letter, simply because I imagine the independent testimony of one who is not a Devon Craftsman will go some way towards strengthening your explanation, should any doubt still linger in the mind of Bro. Godschalk.

I remain, Dear Sir and Brother,

Faithfully and fraternally yours,

OUTSIDER.

OUR GIRLS' SCHOOL AND ITS RULES.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

To amend Rule 56 as follows:—

"No girl shall be eligible for election, or for admission by purchase or otherwise who has a sister in the Institution, unless the number of vacancies is in excess of the number of candidates."

8 Thurloe-place S.W.
8th July 1882.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—At the Quarterly Court held this day, at Freemason's Hall, the above motion was brought forward by Bro. Tattershall, and carried by twelve to nine. The question was well argued on both sides, but as far as I could judge, the pith of the discussion was,—What is the proper definition of the word qualification in contradistinction to the word eligibility? On referring to the rules laid down for our guidance, we find that some of them are slightly contradictory the one of the other; for instance, Rule 56 says: "No Petition shall be received on behalf of any Girl who has a sister in the Institution unless the number of vacancies is in excess of the number of candidates," while Rule No. 63 says: "Any person may place a properly qualified Girl in the Institution, provided such Girl can be conveniently admitted, upon payment of 170 guineas in one sum, without voting in respect of any part thereof." Now, what I deduce from this last rule is,—that if the Girl can be conveniently admitted, and is properly qualified, there is nothing to prevent her—after payment of the above sum—being placed on the roll, whether she has a sister there or not. Now, we will imagine that the necessary qualifications are duly complied with, viz., that the father is, or was, a Mason of seven years' standing, or had suffered death from fire or shipwreck, or had become incapacitated from earning his livelihood from blindness or other infirmity, "that he was duly registered, and had paid his quarterages," "that he was lawfully married to the mother of the candidate," "that the certificate of his death or incapacity were in proper form," "that a certified copy of the register of birth of candidate, or other proof thereof, was produced," and "that the certificate of her health was satisfactory," then the child is eligible for admission, whether she have a sister or not. On the other hand, according to "Rule 56," no girl, whose admittance depends upon the number of votes she obtains, and whose support is received from the funds of the Institution, is eligible (though in other respects duly qualified) if she has already a sister in the School on the same terms.

My contention is, that when a petition is presented for the admission of a candidate (in all respects duly qualified), at the cost of extraneous friends, that she is a fit and proper child to be admitted, whether she has a sister or not, always provided that she can be conveniently admitted, that is, there is room for her in the Institution. One argument brought forward was, that where one girl had been brought forward in the usual way, and another by purchase, it might have been done in the former case; but a little thought will prove the fallacy of that, for who has not heard of favourites in a family, or one child having a more fairy godmother, or wealthy godfather, than the other? I am still further of opinion that no two sisters should be on the funds of the Institution at one time, for though at one election there may be a vacancy, yet at the next there may be, and generally are, more candidates than vacancies, and the two sisters may be in the School for three or four years, to the exclusion of other single candidates; but where the funds come from other sources, I can see no objection. After all, the rules at present admit sisters if there are vacancies, and candidates by purchase if they can be conveniently accommodated. So that you may have perfect qualification without eligibility, but not eligibility without the necessary qualification. This may be a subtle distinction, but there is a difference. For instance, it might so happen that the funds of the Institution did not admit the filling up the vacancies. Is, then, the girl to be disqualified where friends supply the funds because she has a sister in the School? I trow not. Again, it was brought forward that a petition in a purchase case was not necessary, but I opine that a petition is as necessary in the one case as the other, in order that proof of the necessary qualifications under any circumstances may be duly ascertained. According to my reading, I am of opinion that no sisters should be supported and educated out of the funds of the Institution for the same period, or any part thereof, but that there can be no objection to two or more, provided that only one is dependent on the general Fund, and the other or others from private sources.

Yours fraternally,

CONSECRATION OF THE WALDECK LODGE.

THE principal Masonic event of the week has been undoubtedly the Consecration of the new German Lodge, which took place at Freemasons' Hall, on Monday evening. Although there are so many Germans resident in England, and particularly in London, where there is a strong German element in the mercantile and trading community, there has, down to the present time, been only one Lodge essentially German in its character. That one Lodge, however, is German to the backbone, for in it the ceremonies and the whole of the transactions are carried on in the German language. The Lodge is called the Pilgrim, but one Lodge is insufficient to satisfy the Masonic requirements of the German portion of our metropolitan population; and a petition was presented to the Prince of Wales, as Grand Master of English Freemasons, to grant a warrant for a new London Lodge specially devoted to the promotion of Freemasonry amongst Germans resident in London. In drawing up their petition a happy thought appears to have struck the gentlemen interested in the matter, and they seem to have won the sympathy of the Duke of Albany, Provincial Grand Master for Oxfordshire, by a compliment they paid to his bride, by asking permission to name the new Lodge the Waldeck Lodge, and to adopt as the insignia of the Lodge the arms of the house of Waldeck. The Grand Master, although he has of late years very wisely hesitated to grant warrants for additional new Lodges in London, and has for the most part only granted such warrants when the Lodges sought to be established have been of really representative character, was graciously pleased, under the circumstances of the case, to grant the requisite warrant, and the Duke of Albany consented to become one of its honorary members, and formally, through his Secretary, gave his sanction to the adoption by the Lodge as its insignia of the arms of the House of Waldeck. On Monday evening the new Lodge was consecrated, and the founders left nothing undone to secure for it an honourable position amongst London Lodges. Behind the Master's chair was displayed a very handsome banner bearing the Waldeck arms, which were also displayed upon the Master's collar. The ceremony of consecration was performed by Colonel Shadwell H. Clerke Grand Secretary of England, and it may with confidence be asserted that that solemn ceremonial was never conducted in a more impressive manner. The Grand Secretary was assisted by Bros. Dr. E. E. Wendt, D.C.L., Grand Secretary for German Correspondence as S.W., John Messent Grand Sword Bearer as J.W., H. G. Buss Assistant Grand Secretary as Inner Guard, the Rev. Thomas Cochrane, M.A., as Chaplain, and Frank Richardson Past Grand Deacon as Director of Ceremonies. There was also a very large number of Grand Officers and Provincial and District Grand Officers present, to witness the ceremony and grace the occasion. Bro. Julius Quitman, a Past Master of La Tolerance Lodge, is the first Master of the Waldeck. Bros. H. L. Wolters and Gustav Paul Weblen, both of whom are Past Masters of other Lodges, occupied the principal chairs. During the course of the ceremony the Rev. Thomas Cochrane delivered an admirable oration upon the principles and objects of Freemasonry, which was listened to with profound attention. The musical arrangements were entrusted to Bro. Fred. H. Cozens, who was assisted by Bros. Lawler, Carter, and Ashton, and the manner in which they sang the anthems, &c., added not a little to the impressiveness of the proceedings. When the ceremony was concluded, and after the new Master and his Officers had been installed and invested, the Duke of Albany was elected an honorary member, which honour was also conferred on the Consecrating Officer Colonel Shadwell H. Clerke, and the Grand Officers by whom he had been assisted. Bro. Quitman, the Master, in thanking Col. Clerke for the assistance he had given him, presented him, as Consecrating Officer, with a handsome jewel as a souvenir of the occasion. This is believed to be the first occasion on which a jewel has been presented to a Consecrating Officer.—Evening News.

FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE

23 GREAT QUEEN STREET, W.C.

GRAND LODGE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

THE SESQUI-CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION.

AT a very early hour of the morning of the 24th June, the incoming trains brought into the city of Philadelphia delegations of Masons from all localities, principally within a radius of 100 miles, to join in the public as well as secret commemoration of the sesqui-centennial of the founding of Masonry in this State, for although a number of Masons met as early as 1730, at the old Tun Tavern, in Water-street, it was not until St. John's Day, 1732, that the G. Lodge was formed.

Great preparations had been made for the celebration, and it was looked forward to with joyal anticipation. Although the orders of Chief Marshal Hartranft directed the assembling of the Lodges at 8 o'clock, it was fully thirty minutes after before the first one put in appearance; but from this time until quarter after nine they came into column rapidly.

There was a prodigal supply of music, and, what was matter for general comment, an entire absence of banners of any kind. To the lookers-on there was an impressively funereal aspect to this body of 6,000 men, marching without a bit of colour overhead. The flash of jewels and swords, and the sturdy blare of the trumpets, in a bright morceau from some popular opera, were the only reliefs. Broad-street, along the entire route was filled with people, and here and there a flag was thrown to the breeze; but, as a rule, the lookers-on exhibited a blending of admiration with awe, as though they were under the spell of mystery which clothes this Order. In the vicinity of the Temple, however, the thoroughfare was densely packed, and along the northern front of the Public Buildings, from which a splendid view of the march and countermarch could be obtained, thousands upon thousands of people were ranged.

The Eighth Division, which marched in the van of the procession, formed on the east side of Broad-street, with the head of the column resting on Chestnut-street. It was marshalled by Robert P. Dechert and the following aids:—O. C. Bosbyshell, P. L. Goddard, Louis J. Ladner, and C. W. Schuellerman. The Division included Lodges Nos. 498 to 558 and a number of visiting Lodges.

The Seventh Division, marshalled by J. P. S. Gobin and aids, Benjamin Kauffman, C. N. Brower, George Valentine, and N. H. E. Marter, came next. The Division formed on the west side of Broad-street, with the head of the column on Walnut-street. It comprised Lodges from Nos. 445 to 496, and several Lodges from the interior of the State.

The Sixth Division formed on Spruce-street, east of Broad. The head of the column rested on Broad-street. Lodges Nos. 392 to 444 were in line. The Division was marshalled by C. W. Batchelor and aids.

The Fifth Division, marshalled by William B. Smith, formed on Spruce-street, west of Broad, the head of the column resting on Broad-street. The Marshal's aids were:—William A. Whitherup, L. S. Prince, William H. Clothier, Peterson B. Calvert, James P. Malseed, Charles E. Wright. A number of Visiting Lodges marshalled with this Division.

The Fourth Division, marshalled by John W. Scholl, formed on Locust-street, east of Broad, with the right of column resting on Broad-street. The Division included such Lodges as chose to participate from Lodge No. 289 to No. 339. Marshal Scholl was assisted by the following aids:—P. M. Washabaugh, E. D. Sparks, J. H. Hooven, and G. P. Dennis.

Presley A. Guthrie marshalled the Third Division, including Lodges from Nos. 233 to 288. The Division formed on Locust-street, west of Broad, with right resting on Broad-street. Major J. W. Ryan and T. J. Henderson acted as aids.

The Second Division, under the marshalship of General George R. Snowden, assisted by E. W. Patton and G. W. Fox aids, formed on Walnut-street east of Broad, with right resting on Broad-street. The Division included such Lodges as desired to participate from No. 232 to No. 75.

The First Division, under James W. Latta Marshal, brought up the rear of the column as the command moved up Broad street, and took the head of the column as it countermarched down from Columbia avenue. The Divison formed on Walnut-street, east of Broad, and included Lodges from No. 2 to No. 72, and visitors who were not the guests of any particular Lodge.

Marshal Latta was assisted by Charles Watson, Nathan H. Pennypacker, H. G. Schoemaker, and Hiram Fisher.

Among the Visiting Lodges were No. 21, from Harrisburg, J. C. Hesaman Marshal; No. 75, from Phœnixville, F. B. Rhoads Marshal; No. 310, from West Chester, George R. Hoopes Marshal, and No. 420, from Conshohocken, Charles A. Maxwell Marshal. There were also Lodges from Chester, Norristown, Reading, and Lancaster, and representatives from the Grand Lodges of New Jersey, Maryland, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Delaware, Ohio, and the District of Columbia in line While the procession, under General Hartranft, was marching out Broad-street, the Grand Lodge went into session in the Temple, to which none but members were admitted. After the opening, the Hon. Samuel B. Dick, Grand Master, made an address, stating the purpose of the ceremonies of the day, and tendering a fraternal welcome to the Visitors. Then followed—

An address by Past Master of Lodge No. 408, Brother of the Hon. Pearson Church, Presiding Judge of Crawford county. Subject:—"The growth of the Grand Lodge."

An address by Past Master of Lodge No. 71, the Hon. Thomas J. Clayton, President Judge of Deleware county. Subject:—"The Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Masons of Pennsylvania."

An address by Brother Past Master Samuel Harper, of Lodge No. 219, at Pittsburg. Subject:—The Relation of Our Subordinate Lodges to Our Grand Lodge," and the anthem, "Ad Primum," music and chorus being under the direction of Brother Aaron R. Taylor.

After the benediction and closing of the Lodge, the doors were opened, and then the members, with distinguished visiting brethren from abroad, awaited the approach of the head of the column, by the countermarch between ranks, down Broad-street, which brought the 1st Division to the front. A brief halt was then made, when the march to the Academy was taken up in this order:—

John F. Hartranft Chief Marshal.

George H. North Chief of Aids.

Russell Shayer, Silas W. Pettit, Aaron K. Dunkle, B. K. Jamison, William Baldwin, James C. Wray, Theo. E. Weidersheim, S. Bonnaffon jun., James D. Keyser, James M. Cox, E. G. Martin, M.D., B. Frank Eshleman, and Otto Schaettle, Aids.

George W. Wood Grand Marshal of Grand Lodge.

William W. Allen, J. Parker Martin, and Arthur Thatcher, Aids.

Harrison G. Clark Grand Tyler of Grand Lodge.

Henry H. Haynes Grand Pursuivant.

Louis N. Chasteau Grand Sword Bearer.

Samuel B. Dick Grand Master.

Conrad B. Day Deputy Grand Master.

E. Coppee Mitchell and Joseph Eichbaum Grand Wardens.

Thomas R. Patton Grand Treasurer.

Michael Nesbit Grand Secretary.

Rev. Dr. Robbins, Rev. J. F. C. McConnell, and Rev. Richard H. Allen Grand Chaplains.

John S. Graham and Oscar R. Meyers Grand Deacons.

Spencer C. Gilbert and William Broadbent Grand Stewards.

District Deputy Grand Masters, the Trustees of the Grand Lodge Charity Fund, the Trustees of the Girard Bequest, and various Committees, the almoners of the Grand Lodge, Charity Fund, and finally the members of Grand Lodge.

Among the Visiting Grand Lodge Officers from other jurisdictions who have accompanied the Grand Lodge were William Hardacre R.W. Grand Master New Jersey; Joseph W. H. Watson R.W. Grand Master Delaware; John S. Tyson R.W. Grand Master Maryland; Jacob H. Medary Grand Secretary Maryland; James D. Mason Grand Treasurer Maryland; W. Abrahams R.W. Deputy Grand Master Maryland; Edward M. L. Ehlers Grand Secretary New York; Albert G. Goodnall Grand Lodge New York; Zachariah Deddrick Trustee Grand Lodge New York.

Although the arrangements were such that the line of procession would not reach the Academy of Music, where the public ceremonies were held, until half-past 12 o'clock, a great throng of people had assembled in front of the house fully two hours before that time. All the hotels and other public places on Broad-street and many private houses were decked out in national and Masonic colours. As the hours wore on the spectators increased in number, and at noon, when the Academy doors were opened, the ingenuity of the police was put to the test in opening a channel for the passage of the line into the Academy.

When the members of the Grand Lodge reached Broad and Locust-streets, they marched to the stage door of the Academy, were the Officers and Committees took seats on the stage. Among the prominent men were Judge William Donaldson, of Pottsville, the oldest member of the Grand Lodge in Pennsylvania; Sam. C. Perkins, a Past Master Philadelphia, lawyer, and President of the Public Building Commission; and Bro. Clifford P. McCalla, a prominent worker in the Bi-Centennial cause, and the man who introduced the resolution in the Grand Lodge under which authority was first granted for the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary.

In the distribution of tickets the authorities of the Grand Lodge restricted their patronage to the members of the Masonic Order. When the line reached the Temple on the return march the subordinate Lodges scattered for their respective headquarters instead of assembling in the Academy. The consequence was that there was scarcely more than 200 persons in the auditorium when the Germania Orchestra, under the direction of William Stoll jun., opened the exercises with Weber's overture, "Jubal."

There were no decorations in the house except three rectangular tablets of white immortelles, upon the centre of which were the Grand Lodge initials "G. L. of Pa.," and on the others the Masonic years 5732 and 5882. At the conclusion of the first orchestral rendering, Bishop Whitehead invoked the Divine blessing.

A very interesting feature of the morning exercises at the Temple was the presentation of a gavel to the Grand Lodge, the gift of the Masonic Veterans' Association. The gavel is made from one of the columns that stood in the old Masonic Hall, on Filbert-street, which has been recently torn down. The column was of hard wood, and from it were made two gavels, one to be used by the Veterans at their meetings and the other presented to the Grand Lodge. The latter is very handsomely mounted with bands of silver, and on the outer rim is affixed a Veteran's badge. Upon the silver band is the following inscription:—

"The Masonic Veterans of Pennsylvania, on the occasion of the Sesqui-Centennial of the first Grand Lodge in America, formed at Philadelphia, 24th June 1732, present this gavel, made of wood of the Pennsylvania Freemasons' Hall, erected in 1802, on Filbert-street, above Eighth-street, Philadelphia, to the R.W.G. Lodge of Pennsylvania Free and Accepted Masons, 24th June 1882."

The Presentation was made by Brother Charles E. Meyer, President of the Veterans' Association, in a neat address, and received on the part of the Grand Lodge by R.W. Brother Samuel B. Dick Grand Master.

[We are, unfortunately, compelled by pressure on our space to hold over, till next week, the remainder of this very interesting article.—Ed. F.C.]

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF SUFFOLK.

STOWMARMET was en fete on Friday last, the 7th inst., on the occasion of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Suffolk holding its annual meeting and Lodge there, under the R.W. the Provincial Grand Master Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Waveney, and Officers of the Province. The town was decorated with flags and banners. At the Railway Station a string of banners stretched across the road, and flags were displayed on the steeple of the church. At the station, the band of the S.R.V., under Bandmaster Gooding, met the trains bringing in the visiting Brethren, and played in excellent style, and the church bells rang out merrily. The Lodge in the Assembly Room at the Corn Exchange, and its approaches, was profusely decorated with flowers, and some fine potted specimens of the Phomium variegatum (New Zealand flax). The baloony outside was draped with scarlet, with yellow fringe, with good effect. The Corn Hall was laid for banquet, and elaborately decorated in white and crimson, and the stencil-board festooned with fringes and tassels. A trophy of flags, with banners, and elaborate star, was displayed at each end in the centre, and banners were also displayed on either side, and there were also elegant trophies at each window. Each banner, of very handsome character, had an appropriate motto, in gold on a blue ground. The tables were choicely decorated with flowers, and ice pedestals with flowers were conspicuous and elegant. The tout ensemble was light, cheerful, and elegant in the extreme, and reflected great credit on those gentlemen who superintended them. These were the worthy W.M. Bro. F. Long, Bro. S. H. Wright Secretary, Bro. J. Mackney P.M. Master of Ceremonies, assisted by Bros. Peddar P.M., Simmonds S.D., F. Betts S.W., the latter kindly providing reception rooms for the Provincial Grand Officers at the entrance to the ball, where light refreshments were laid out. Bro. Gooding also rendered good assistance. The able decorator was Bro. Chas. Holborn, Norwich. Bros. Andrews and Read received the Provincial Grand Officers. The banquet and refreshments were catered for by Bro. E. Bridges, in his well-known excellent style. The trains brought in a large number of visiting Brethren time after time during the morning. The Board of General Purposes met at eleven o'clock, for the transaction of business. Bro. Clarke, Past Grand Pursuivant of England, was, as usual, the Director of Ceremonies of the Province, the duties of which office, it is needless to say, were performed with his well-known efficiency. Bro. W. H. Lucia was also the able Secretary, whose onerous duties always seem to sit lightly upon him. Procession being formed, the M.W.P.G. Master opened the Lodge, which was admirably decorated with trophies of flags and banners, with Masonic emblems and mottoes, the banners of the several Lodges represented being also placed round the walls. After the Lodge had been properly opened, the Worshipful Prov. Grand Master appointed his Officers for the ensuing year, as follow:—Bros. Dakin Registrar, Youell Treasurer, F. Long P.G.S.W., Woolnough P.G.J.W., Rev. Griffith P.G. Chaplain, Mann P.G. Organist, Baines P.G. Pursuivant, Chapman, Woodward, and Ecclestone, P.G. Stewards, Brown S.D., Annes J.D., Tennant P.G. Director of Works, Clarke P.G. Director of Ceremonies, Hartcup Assistant Director of Ceremonies, Barber P.G. Sword Bearer, Syer Tyler. The P.G. Secretary read the minutes of the last meeting, referring especially to the loyal address sent by the Province to Her Most Gracious Majesty, on the dastardly attempt made upon her life, and the gracious reply in acknowledgment. Procession was then made, headed by the Stowmarket Rifle Band, to church, where the brethren attended divine service. Prayers were read by the Rev. W. Wright curate, and Bro. the Rev. A. Tighe-Gregory, first lesson (King's dedication of the Temple), by the P.G. Chaplain, and the second lesson by Bro. the Rev. A. Tighe-Gregory, Vicar of Bawdsey, both lessons being appropriate to the occasion. The anthem was Hopkins', from Psalm xxiv., "Lift up your heads," the P.G. Chaplain reading the concluding prayers. The service was choral, and well rendered by a surpliced choir. There were also two special hymns sung, copies of which were distributed in the church. The sermon was preached by the P.G. Chaplain, from 1 Peter ii. 5, and was a thoroughly Masonic discourse, "sermons in stones" being the idea carried throughout, comparing ourselves to stones in the great building of life. He traced mankind to the time of flint implements, when our forefathers had nothing better to work with, up to the present period of high civilisation and skill, and drew lessons for the guidance, warning, and comfort of his hearers. The preacher referred indignantly to the odium brought on Masonry on the Continent by the wretched apostasy of some members who violated, not only their oath as Masons, but their very allegiance to their country. He said he considered that Christianity was the highest form of Masonry, and Masonry he looked upon as St. Paul did the Mosaic law, as a "Schoolmaster to bring us to Christ." He referred to the universal bond of fellowship amongst all peoples, of all religious opinions, to be found amongst Masons, such as made the fiery Afghan spare his powerless enemy. He trusted they all, initiated and uninitiated, were "Living stones" being built upon the chief corner stone, our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. The P.G. Organist presided ably at the organ. After service the brethren reformed and marched back to the Lodge. A resolution was carried in answer to a communication from the Grand Lodge, suggesting that all Lodges (except military ones) should pay 1s 6d quarterly, instead of 1s as heretofore, to the Fund of Benevolence. After some formal business was gone through, the M.W.P.G.M. announced that the offertory amounted to £6 10 2½d, which was given to the Stowmarket Schools, with thanks to the Rector of Stowmarket for kindly placing the church at their disposal. A vote of condolence and sympathy was passed to the V.W. the D.P.G.M. the Rev. C. J. Martyn, Past Grand Chaplain of England, on the great bereavement he had sustained in the loss of his amiable wife, and expressing an earnest trust that the Great Architect of the Universe would afford him consolation and support under his heavy loss. The M.W.P.G.M. made some very feeling remarks on this subject, and the resolution was carried in solemn silence. P.G. Lodges were represented, from Norfolk by B. P. Soman G.S. of Norfolk, Essex, and Hertfordshire. The Grand Master expressed his deep regret at the absence of the Deputy P.G. Master, whom he might say was from home, seeking from the Great Architect of the Universe that consolation which He never refuses to those who "seek him faithfully."

The banquet was admirably served in the Corn Hall by Bro. E. Bridges, to which a large company of brethren sat down, under the presidency of the Prov. Grand Master, supported by his Officers. The following were the Prov. Grand Officers present:—Bros. W. P. Mills P.P.G.S.W. 376, H. C. Casley P.P.G.J.W. 114, W. H. Lucia P.G. Sec., W. Clarke P.G.P., W. Boby P.P.G.S.W., Rev. A. On Saturday last the Prince and Princess of Wales visited Twickenham, for the purpose of opening the new wing of the Metropolitan and City Police Orphanage, at Strawberry Hill. This ceremony having been carried out, the awards made in the exhibition of works of art and utility, contributed exclusively by members of the Police force, were presented by Her Royal Highness, who also signed the certificates of merit, among the fortunate recipients being Sergeant Ward, for plans of Yalding and neighbourhood, in connection with the mysterious disappearance and murder of the girl Georgiana Moore; Inspector Wells, for a plan and sketch of Knoll Villa, Kingston, where Police Constable Atkins was murdered last autumn by an unknown burglar; and Inspector Moser, of Scotland Yard, for three drawings, in black and white, two of them being of exceptional merit.

We hear that their Royal Highnesses the Princesses Louise, Victoria, and Maud, of Wales have enrolled themselves as members of the Humane Society, established in connection with Little Folks. The July part of this magazine, in addition to the names of their Royal Highnesses, contains the names and addresses of between four and five thousand new officers and members. The Little Folks Humane Society, which was inaugurated at the commencement of the present year, now numbers nearly twelve thousand officers and members, and a large number of children are daily joining its ranks.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS are the best, cheapest, and the most popular remedies: at all seasons, and under all circumstances, they may be used with safety and with the certainty of doing good. Eruptions, rashes, and all descriptions of skin diseases, sores, ulcerations, and burns are presently benefited and ultimately cured by these healing, soothing, and purifying medicaments. The Ointment rubbed upon the abdomen checks all tendency to irritation in the bowels, and averts diarrhœa and other disorders of the intestines frequently prevailing through the summer and fruit seasons. Heat bumps, blotches, pimples, inflammations of the skin, muscular pains, neuralgic affections, and enlarged glands can be effectively overcome by using Holloway's remedies according to the instructions accompanying every packet.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

SUMMER FESTIVAL OF THE DOMATIC LODGE, No. 177.

RICHMOND is a place of all others to visit, both by the initiated and uninitiated, when pleasure is the object. There is no place within easy reach of metropolitans which offers so many attractions. There is the Park, there is the river, and to the visitor who needs alimentary and spiritual comfort there is, above all things, the Star and Garter Hotel, a famous hostelry, which, we were on the point of saying, has been for centuries past the central attraction of the royal hamlet of Sheen. There is no place within the precincts of the metropolis which offers the same attractions as Richmond. Its Park is magnificent, its historical and personal associations only need to be referred to, while the magnificent hill and the meandering Thames, with its enticing eyots, offers a scene which, for its picturesqueness, it will be difficult to surpass. No wonder, then, that it should be selected as a resort by the cultivated holiday-maker, as well as by his lowlier fellows; and no wonder, in consequence, that a Lodge of Freemasons, which has, so to speak, the whole world to choose from, should select this particular spot for the celebration of its Summer Festival.

We have more than once been asked—What is the good of a Summer Festival? It does nothing to advance the cause of Freemasonry, and there are those who think it might be dispensed with. We are of a different opinion. We believe in Festivals, as promoting good-fellowship; and in Summer Festivals especially, because they afford an opportunity for the fair sex to take part in the celebrations. Thus it came about on Tuesday that, in spite of the deplorable weather, that the brethren of the Domatic Lodge found much to reconcile them to the fate (fête) arranged for them. Neither rude Boreas nor any other Ruler of the winds, not even old Æolus himself with all his bags deranged, had the slightest influence in deterring our Domatic friends from the essential purpose of the day, to wit, that of enjoying themselves and establishing firmly the enjoyment of their guests. The Star and Garter, moreover, is, as we have said, an acceptable hostelry, where even a "Heathen Chinee" might find it a matter of difficulty not to enjoy himself. And further, there were genial spirits in charge of the arrangements, to wit, Bros. Maclean W.M., G. Everett Treasurer, Morris Secretary, and the Stewards generally, who made it their business to meet, even by anticipation, the requirements of those present. The banquet, or by whatever name else it may be described, was in all respects commendable; there was abundance, and of the best quality, both as regards edibles and potables. The service, likewise, was of a satisfactory character, and none rose from the table who had not been fully satisfied in all respects. On the removal of the cloth, grace was sung, the toast list was attacked, and due honour was paid to that of the Queen and the Craft. Brother Kent followed with the toast of the Prince and Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family. He spoke at length of the services rendered to the Craft by His Royal Highness, and the amazing progress it had made since his installation. He referred, in graceful terms, to the interest taken by the Princess of Wales in all good works, and likewise to the Masonic zeal of the Duke of Connaught, as well as to the interest exhibited by Prince Leopold Duke of Albany, not only on things Masonic, but likewise in matters scientific and literary. Bro. Ferguson proposed, in cordial terms, the health of the Worshipful Master, who acknowledged the compliment with equal cordiality. "The Visitors" found an able advocate in Bro. Ferguson and two capable respondents—shall we say co-respondents?—in the persons of Bros. Webb and T. C. Walls. Bro. Everett paid a high compliment to the Press, of whose welfare and even necessity they had had an illustration that day, and Bro. W. W. Morgan responded in suitable terms. The merits of "the ladies," and the value of their presence on this and similar occasions were set forth with becoming grace and ability by Bro. Herbage, and Mr. W. G. Kent, as representative of the Fair Sex, expressed his thanks on their behalf most warmly, and be it added, most appropriately. Terpsichore then appeared on the scene, and at her bidding the brethren and guests most willingly set themselves to the agreeable task of illustrating her mysteries. The series of movements in her behalf were at last brought to a conclusion, and the Lodge and Visitors dispersed for home, after, even in spite of the weather, one of the most agreeable meetings in which it has been our privilege to take a part. Amongst those present we may mention Bro. James Maclean W.M. and Mrs. Maclean, Bro. George Everett P.M. and Treasurer and Mrs. and Miss Everett, Bro. White P.M. and Mrs. White, Bro. W. P. Webb W.M. 1381 and Mrs. Webb, Mr. G. L. and Mrs. Everett, Mrs. Hugall, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Manley, Bro. A. and Mrs. Gidding, Harry Price, W. Wilkinson, Bro. W. M. and Mrs. Foxcroft, W. Day and Miss Foxcroft. J. Sidney Tomkins C.C., G. A. Garratt and Miss Garratt, Bro. W. Mann P.M. 1381, Mr. and Mrs. James Ringwood, Bro. F. Kent P.M. C.C. and Mrs. Kent, Mr. W. G. Kent and Miss Shepherd, Bro. E. Storr and Mrs. Storr, Bro. T. Morris, T. Morris jun., and Miss Morris, Bro. R. Harvey, Bro. G. W. and Mrs. and Miss Knight, Bros. G. and W. and Mrs. Millan, Bro. and Mrs. Perry, Bro. W. W. Morgan, Bro. G. and Mrs. Gardner, Bro. and Mrs. Rippin, Bro. T. C. Walls, Bro. Ferguson P.M., Bro. Wade (Mayor of Kingston) and Mrs. Wade, Bro. and Mrs. Herbage, Bro. and Mrs. Welch, Bro. Birch, &c. &c.

Bro. James Stevens P.M. P.Z. then delivered his lecture explanatory of the rituals and ceremonies of the first degree, to the great pleasure and satisfaction of all the brethren assembled, who afterwards conferred upon him the only honour they could, that of making him an hon. member of the Lodge. Bro. Stevens showed his appreciation of this compliment by some very kind remarks, and a promise to visit the Lodge again. A vote of thanks was given to our respected Preceptor for occupying the chair on this occasion. W. E. Gray, of Lodge No. 1158, and Bro. B. Stewart, of 1278, were elected members. After a W.M. was elected for the ensuing week, the Lodge was closed, and adjourned.

CORNWALLIS LODGE, No. 1107.

THE installation meeting of this Lodge was held at the Lullingstone Castle Hotel, Swanley, on Wednesday, 5th instant, on which occasion Bro. H. Cleverly was installed as W.M. The business of the day commenced at 3.30, when Bro. J. J. Michael the W.M. of the past year opened the Lodge, and in due form obligated the W.M. elect. A board of Installed Masters having been formed, Brother Cleverly was duly placed in the chair, and in customary form appointed his Officers, as follow:—Bros. Daniels S.W., Morgan jun. J.W., J. Storey P.M. Treas., C. Reuter P.M. Sec., Hubbard S.D., Edwards I.G., Knight P.M. M.C., &c. The installation ceremony being completed, the W.M. proceeded to close his Lodge. Previous to doing so, several items of business, including a discussion regarding the entertainment of Prov. Grand Lodge on the occasion of the special meeting to be held in the neighbourhood on the 15th, were disposed of. A Committee was appointed to arrange what the Lodge should do in reference to the meeting referred to. The brethren afterwards sat down to a banquet, under the presidency of the new W.M., who, in due course, gave the usual toasts. A special feature of the meeting was the presentation to Bro. Michael, or rather to his wife, of a handsome tea service, as some recognition on the part of the brethren of the services he had rendered to the Lodge during the past year, which was the second during which he had acted as W.M. of the Lodge. The customary jewel having been presented to him on the former occasion, the testimonial he was now deemed worthy of took the form mentioned. He was, however, presented with a miniature jewel as a personal memento. The toasts were interspersed with songs and recitations, and altogether a most enjoyable day was spent.

Brixton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1949.—The usual meeting was held on Tuesday evening last, at Bro. Monk's, Prince Regent, Dulwich-road, East Brixton. Present—Bros. R. R. Johnstone W.M., H. Hooper S.W., E. M. Money J.W., E. A. Francis Preceptor, H. M. Williams Secretary, T. C. Edmonds S.D., G. Monk J.D., A. W. S. Hoare Organist, R. Poore I.G., and others. Lodge was opened in due form, and the Secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were unanimously confirmed. The ceremony of initiation was ably rehearsed by the W.M., with Bro. Francis as candidate. Lodge was opened in the second degree, and the ceremony of passing was rehearsed by the W.M., with Bro. Williams as candidate. Lodge was opened in the third, and closed to the first degree. It was proposed by the W.M., seconded by Bro. Secretary, and resolved, that Bro. A. W. S. Hoare, Trinity College Lodge, No. 1765, be elected a member. Bro. Hoare thanked the brethren, and trusted he should be able to profit by the excellent working of the Lodge. The thanks of the brethren were accorded to Bro. R. R. Johnstone W.M. for the admirable manner he had that evening rehearsed the ceremonies, especially on occupying the chair for the first time in his Masonic career. Bro. H. Hooper was elected W.M. for the ensuing week. Lodge was closed in due form, and the meeting adjourned, after a most enjoyable and profitable evening.

CLAREMONT LODGE, No. 1861.

THE installation meeting of this young and improving Lodge was held on Monday, 10th inst., at the School-room, Park-road, Esher. Lodge was opened at 3.15 by the W.M. Bro. J. M. Collins, and after the minutes had been read and confirmed, the ceremony of passing Bro. Fisher was efficiently performed by the W.M. The W.M. then vacated the chair in favour of that indefatigable Mason Bro. H. E. Frances P.M. P.P.G.S.D. Surrey. Bro. F. A. Manning P.M. was then presented by the W.M., and the ceremony of installation was most impressively performed by Bro. Frances. On re-admission of the brethren, the W.M. appointed his Officers as follow:—Bros. F. W. T. Goddard S.W., B. Williams J.W., J. Snowden S.D., S. Ward J.D., J. M. Bastone I.G., A. Fisher W.S. The addresses to the W.M., Wardens and Brethren were most impressively given by the I.P.M. Bro. Collins, Bro. Vincent P.M., and Bro. Frances P.M. The new W.M. then presented his banner to the Lodge, and this having been accepted, a very handsome P.M.'s jewel was placed by the W.M. on the breast of his predecessor, Bro. Collins, who gracefully acknowledged the same. Business of the evening ended, the Lodge was closed in due form, with solemn prayer. The brethren afterwards reassembled and partook of a most récherché banquet, which did great credit to the caterer, Mr. Bartholomew. Banquet over, the W. Master, in a few well-chosen words, proposed the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts, which were duly honoured. The W.M. then proposed the toast of the R.W. the P.G.M. for Surrey, General Brownrigg, C.B., and the P.G. Officers, coupling with the toast the name of Bro. Vincent P.M. P.G.S. for Surrey. This toast, we need hardly state, was drunk in the most cordial and enthusiastic manner. Bro. Vincent in responding said: "W. Master, I beg most sincerely to thank you for the very flattering terms in which you have proposed the toast of the Prov. G. Master and his Officers; and you, brethren, for the cordial manner in which you have responded to the same. I assure you, W. Master and brethren, that I feel highly complimented—nay flattered—at having my name associated with this important toast, more especially when I see around this festive board so many high and distinguished brethren. Really, W. Sir, I hardly think myself deserving of such an honour, and I feel a diffidence in replying in the presence of so many of the Stars of Masonry. I am but an humble member of the Craft, and I think the toast might have been left in far abler hands. W. Sir, as you have called upon me, I will, to the best of my ability, respond. I will take this opportunity of saying to my younger brethren that Masonry is far more than a name, and that the higher they advance in the Craft the more they will be convinced of this. Masonry is the very essence of all that is good; having for its basis brotherly love, and the greatest of all Christian virtues—Charity. Yes, my young brethren, you have only to make yourselves acquainted with our noble Institutions, the Boys' and Girls' Schools, where so many of the children of our deceased brethren receive the greatest boon man can give—a good liberal education. Many a poor widow, even while I am speaking, is blessing the day when her departed husband was admitted to our noble Fraternity, because she feels that we are acting, not only as brothers, but as fathers to her dear ones, and we as Masons will continue so to do whilst the Great Architect of the Universe blesses us with means. Then I would also call your attention to the Asylum for Aged Freemasons, and the widows of our departed brethren, where the aged ones are passing the remainder of their days in peaceful happiness, free from all care, and sheltered in their old age from the storms of life by the kind and thoughtful bounty of their more fortunate brethren. May these noble Institutions meet consideration at your hands, my young brethren, and you may rest assured that what you give will be returned to you threefold, and you will have the happiness of feeling that you are doing good to those who need it. I again thank you, Worshipful Master and Brethren, for the kind manner in which this toast has been received. The W.M. then entrusted his gavel to Bro. Collins I.P.M., who proposed the health of the W.M., stating that he felt sure that the brethren had made a happy choice in placing so excellent a brother in the chair, and trusted that Bro. Manning would long be spared to Freemasonry. The toast was honoured with a true Surrey fire. The W.M. in reply said he thanked the I.P.M. very sincerely for the kind and flattering terms in which he had proposed the toast, and also the brethren for the cordial manner in which they had responded. He had always taken a great interest in the Craft, and to the best of his ability would carry out the duties of his high and important trust. The next toast was one that, in the Claremont Lodge, is always received with enthusiasm—that of the Visitors. The W.M. remarked that he was pleased to see amongst his guests a member of Grand Lodge—Bro. Magnus Ohren, and also a Past Provincial Grand Officer—Bro. Robbins. To both these worthy brethren, and also to the other Visitors, he extended a most hearty welcome, and hoped that they would again favour the Lodge with their presence on some future occasion. The toast was most ably and gracefully responded to by Bro. Ohren and Bro. Robbins, both of whom gave some excellent advice to the brethren. The other toasts were those of the Past Masters and Officers, which again were duly responded to. The Tyler's toast brought to a conclusion a very happy evening. The Visitors were Bro. M. Ohren P.M. P.G.D.C., Robbins P.M., W. H. Bosswell P.M., Steele P.M., Porcheron 12, Hitchins, T. Charlton 1702, J. G. Willett 1178, &c.

THE FISHERMAN'S ANEROID BAROMETER.

IT is now more than twenty years since the National Lifeboat Institution undertook to supply first class Barometers to its Lifeboat Stations and to some other places. The result has been most encouraging in every way. 1st. The coast population of those places have numerously watched the indications of the Barometers, with the aid of the daily registered chart usually attached to them; and 2ndly, they have come to the determination at most places to be guided in their business movements by the indication of the Barometers. By means of those Barometers and their timely warnings, the National Lifeboat Institution has no doubt contributed to the saving of the lives of a large number of fishermen.

The Institution has now taken another important step in this matter by offering to supply an Aneroid Barometer to owners or masters of fishing vessels at a small cost, which, considering that it is of a superior and reliable character, must make this useful instrument a welcome addition to every decked fishing boat's equipment.

The value of the weather warnings of an Aneroid or a Mercurial Barometer cannot be disputed. Mr. Birkbeck, M.P., in suggesting that the Institution might take this step, stated that it had come to his knowledge that during the fearful gales of last winter, when so many fishing vessels were lost, those of them which had Aneroids on board were, by observing previously their indications, saved from peril, while many which did not posses them were lost, involving the loss of scores of valuable lives. It will thus be seen what beneficial results are likely to accrue to life and property if this importana step of the Institution is appreciated and encouraged by the owners and masters of fishing vessels. At present it is notorious that small fishing craft hardly ever carry with them an Aneroid, and thus, when in mid-ocean, they are without the most hopeful means of forecasting the disasters which too often overtake them when gales of wind suddenly spring up.

It may be mentioned that the National Lifeboat Institution has spared no effort to obtain a good instrument, and one that will not easily get out of order on board fishing smacks, or require repairing at frequent intervals. In short, if taken ordinary care of, one of these Aneroids may confidently be expected to do its work for many years.

As the sole object of the Lifeboat Institution in this matter is to benefit fishermen, the Aneroids can, of course, only be supplied to owners or Masters of fishing vessels, and applications for them are received by the Honorary Secretaries of the Branches of the National Lifeboat Institution on various parts of the coast.

Bro. Benjamin Webster, Past G. Deacon England, and a Life Governor of our three Institutions, was buried in Brompton Cemetery, on Thursday. Our deceased brother was born in 1798, and had consequently attained the ripe age of eighty-four. He was a prominent actor and theatrical manager, having, in the latter capacity, presided over the fortunes of the Haymarket and Adelphi Theatres, for a period extending in the aggregate to close on forty years. He was an encourager of the drama in the further sense that, during his lesseeship of the Haymarket, he offered a prize of £500 to the author of the best drama sent in for the competition. The result, however, was not encouraging, as the play to which the prize was awarded, when it came to be acted, was hissed off the stage. Bro. Webster leaves a widow and child, and also a son and daughter the issue of a previous marriage.

Le Monde Moçonnique for June is a capital number, two of its articles being lectures or discourses, one delivered by Bro. Dr. Barré, in the Lodge Les Admirateurs de l'Univers, of which he is the Venerable or W. Master, and the other on the subject of Toleration, by Bro. Maréchal, in the Lodge of Besançon. Bro. Grimaux's remarks on a proposed Convention between the Grand Orient of France and the Symbolic Scotch Lodge we have thought worthy of being reproduced in English.

FREEMAN'S CHLORODYNE.

The Original and only true.

HUNDREDS of Medical Practitioners testify to its marvellous efficacy in immediately relieving and rapidly curing Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Neuralgia, Spasms, Colic, Whooping Cough, and all Nerve Pains. It acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. It rapidly relieves pain, from whatever cause, soothes and strengthens the system under exhausting diseases, and gives quiet and refreshing sleep.

Lord Chancellor Selborne, Lord Justice James, Lord Justice Mellish decided in favour of FREEMAN'S ORIGINAL CHLORODYNE, and against Brown and Davenport, compelling them to pay all costs in the suits. See Times of July 24th, 1873. Bottles 1s 1½d, 2s 9d, 4s 6d, 11s, and 20s. Sold by all Chemists.

TESTIMONIALS.—Head Quarter Staff, Cabul, May 31st, 1880. Mr. R. Freeman, Dear Sir,—It is with much pleasure I am able to state that your Chlorodyne has been of special service to me in alleviating the wearisome spasms of Asthma, which is here existent in an aggravated form. Many of my patients now come and beg me to give them that medicine which always relieves them, and which I need hardly say is your Chlorodyne. Yours faithfully, CHARLES W. OWEN, L.R.C.P. Lon., M.R.C.S. Eng., the Divisional Head Quarter Staff and Civil Surgeon, Cabul.

The Times, August 13th, 1877. From our own Correspondent with the Russian Army. Osman, July 25th, 1877. The want of sanitary arrangements in the Russian Camp was dreadful, and had we remained there a few weeks longer, dysentery and typhoid fever would have played more havoc in our ranks than the bombs of the Turks. I myself acquired an unenviable reputation as a doctor, owing to my being provided with a small bottle of CHLORODYNE, with which I effected miraculous cures.

PROPOSED CONVENTION.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE AND THE SCOTCH SYMBOLICAL GRAND LODGE.

WE mentioned, last week, that Le Monde Maçonnique for the month of June contained a full sketch of a proposed Convention between, or fusion into one body, of the Grand Orient and Scotch Symbolical G Lodge. The terms of such Convention do not appear to commend themselves to our contemporary, and it occurs to us likewise that the project is not one of a character to meet with approval from those most intimately concerned in the wellbeing of the Craft in France. There is, however, unfortunately, at the present time, a wide gulf between Freemasonry, as it is understood in this country, and as it is interpreted in France, and for reasons we have before explained, this gulf is just now impassable. Without, therefore, entering into the merits of the proposed Convention or fusion, we will give, in full, the views expressed by our contemporary, by the medium of its able exponent Bro. A. Grimaux. In their English garb they read as follows:—

It is not long since that France could boast of three Masonic powers or jurisdictions which lived in harmony one with the other. True, there were clouds which from time to time arose between two of them, but six months had not passed away ere the temporary differences were entirely forgotten. The brethren and Lodges almost everywhere interchanged visits, worked in unison, and gave practical illustration of their sense of fraternal feeling. Then appeared on the scene a fourth Masonic power, whose guiding principle was declared to be the fusion of rites and jurisdictions, uniformity in place of diversity, and, in short, a single supreme Masonic authority for the whole of France. Naturally enough, the Grand Orient, having its origin in mind, and likewise the goal at which it had been constantly aiming, approved of the principle of union. What necessity, in fact, was there at all for a Rite of Misraim and a Scottish Rite? An idea, on which for years Le Monde Maçonnique had laid the greatest stress, was all of a sudden revived, and enlisted the sympathies of every one, to wit, that the Lodges of the three degrees should range themselves under the banner of the Grand Orient, and that the latter should hand over to the Supreme Council all control over its other bodies and its rights in connection with the High Degrees. This was a simple proposition, easy of execution, and one the success of which could not be doubted. The General Assembly, however, being somewhat distrustful of the Council of the Order, pressed for and obtained a special Committee, charged with full authority to negotiate with the other Masonic powers.

The zeal with which the Committee fulfilled its duties is well known, but in matters of this kind, something more than zeal is necessary to ensure success, and the Committee were not slow to discover this. The Supreme Council of the Scottish Rite and the Grand Council General of the rite of Misraim politely refused to enter upon a discussion of the terms of Union; upon which the Committee, being anxious to repair this double check, and, at all events, to bring about at least a partially successful result, as a last resort arranged with the representatives of the Grand Lodge (symbolical) the terms of the Convention already described.

Contrary to general opinion, the Grand Lodge appears from the very first to have laid down, in respect of this fusion, conditions in excess of what it had itself set forth in its programme. At least, we are driven to adopt this view from the fact that those acting in the interests of the Grand Orient—whose devotion is justly appreciated, and admits of no manner of question—did not see their way, save under compulsion, to accept, as a minimum, demands which would most likely give rise to lively disputation in the General Assembly, and which were calculated to prevent the ratification of the Convention.

The first impression which presents itself on studying the terms of the proposed arrangement is, that the twenty Lodges of the symbolical Grand Lodge make it a sine qud non of carrying it out, that, in order to unite with the 276 Lodges of the Grand Orient, the latter shall entirely subvert its constitution. This assumption will appear perhaps to be exaggerated, and, under any circumstances, not a little singular; for the Lodges of the Grand Orient can hardly be expected to bring themselves to recognise that up to the present time, they have shown themselves wanting in capacity for self-organisation, and for legislating for their own good. That would be offering a rare opportunity for including the humility of the Christian among the virtues of Freemasonry.

It is said, and with truth, that previous Assemblies of the Grand Orient have already rejected very many of the proposed reforms, and that it is contrary to reason to suppose that the approaching Convention would accept them with enthusiasm. But the brethren and Lodges which called for these reforms belonged to the jurisdiction, and though it may have been an error, still it was well known that they would submit to the decision of the majority, while still retaining the hope, more than once justified, of bringing over such majority to their way of thinking. In any case, however, it would have been a protracted business, and one unworthy of the present progressive age. The new method may fairly claim for itself the merit of originality, and will doubtless commend itself to future minorities.

There is no doubt the Legitimists would have no difficulty in rallying to the support of the Republic if the Presidency were made hereditary, and entrusted to M. Henri de Bourbon. In like manner, the Clerical Party would become forthwith the warmest possible champion of Republican Government, if the selection of ministers were submitted for the approbation of His Infallible Holiness Pope Leo XIII., and one can readily see what would be the outcome if such a method were adopted, namely, more intestine divisions and struggles, and perhaps even more wars; and the golden age dreamt of by our fathers would once again reign upon the earth. This is all very fine, but it is not practical.

To return, however, to the Convention. The fusion is fixed for the 16th September next, on which day the representatives of the Symbolical Grand Lodge and those of the Grand Orient of France will formally meet together, and the union will be definitively settled next year when the Constitution has been revised in accordance with the principles laid down in Article 4. This no doubt would be complete enough, were it possible to proceed with such rapidity. But the project of Convention offers, at every line, modifications of the Constitution of the Grand Orient. True, such Constitution is constantly liable to revision, and has frequently been modified, but never without the observance of certain formalities which are the guarantee of the rights of minorities and which protect even the majority itself from ill-advised proposals. Until the law has been changed, all brethren under the Grand Orient of France owe it the most absolute respect; the oath they voluntarily take constitutes this a duty, from the consequences of which no one would wish to extricate himself.

The procedure to be observed in every proposed modification of the Constitution is governed by Article 171 of the Statutes, and Chapter 5 of the Constitution. At the meeting last year, some doubts were raised as to the true interpretation of those Articles; and, after a discussion, in which Bros. de Saint-Jean and Poulle on the one side, and Bros. Ernest Rousselle and Grimaux on the other side, took part, Bro. Belat, orator of the General Assembly of the Grand Orient, with the approval of the Assembly, fixed the sense and bearing of Article 171, as formulated in clear and precise terms on the minutes of the session of Thursday, 13th September.

(1) Submission of motions to the Council without discussion.

(2) Those motions which bear twenty-five signatures to be read to the Assembly and voted upon forthwith without discussion.

(3) Those motions which propose modifications of the Constitution, to be submitted to the Council of the Order without being read.

Such is the law, before which all must bow. It is impossible, therefore, that the Grand Orient of France can ratify this treaty, as is demanded, within the first half of September at the latest, and it is equally impossible for a duly constituted meeting to be held the last day of the session of the Assembly.

It is no answer to these arguments to say that it is a question of a proposed fusion, and that the final vote will not take place till 1883. The important feature in this project, from the first time to the last, are the important modifications which are proposed to be made in the present Constitution. Very many of the reforms are excellent, and we have invariably urged their adoption, though, as invariably, confining ourselves distinctly to strictly legal grounds. If formalities which, though somewhat tedious, are necessary, must be observed in changing a single article, is it to be endured that such must be dispensed with when it is a question of preparing an entirely new Constitution?

Even the limited fusion which is now in question is certainly a good one, and we hope it may be effected. But we hold that it can and ought to be carried out without conditions, and by leaving to a time not very remote the duty of providing those changes in the Constitution which appear to be useful, and which will secure the assent of the great majority of the Lodges.

For the present we shall rest contented with these preliminary observations, but the Project of Convention suggests other objections, to which it will be our duty to call attention in a future article.

SOME OF THE USES OF FREEMASONRY.

IT is an admitted axiom that whenever the bugle-call of charity is heard, the brethren of "ye mystic tie" are to be found in the foremost ranks, illustrating both by precept and practice the grand doctrines of the common brotherhood of man. There are few claims upon human sympathy in which they do not share, and it is their privilege, as well as their duty, to help forward every scheme which patriotism or benevolence may suggest to alleviate the sufferings of those whose lines have not fallen in pleasant places. But there is a reverse side to the picture, and it is unfortunately not rare that the influence of the Craft is sought for and obtained for purposes outside their own especial sphere, and by those who are unable to appreciate the generosity which springs from the warmth of Masonic hearts. Philanthropists of every grade know well that, in the inauguration and carrying out of any useful work, our Institution is seldom called upon in vain to lend a helping hand; and the cheerfulness with which the brethren acquiesce is but one more proof of the principles of sympathy and love by which they are actuated. It comes, therefore, as a greater rebuff when, after having been stirred to generous impulses, and fired by the effort of others to put their "principles to the test," there should be men who would bite the hands of those who feed them, and fling back into their faces aid that was proffered with the best intentions. Seldom has such a case come under our notice, however, as that which occurred last Saturday; and, judging from the numerous letters we have received upon the subject, there can be little doubt that a considerable feeling of disappointment, not to say of indignation, was aroused when it was ascertained that the interesting ceremony of which we gave notice in our last had been unexpectedly, and indefinitely, postponed.

As mentioned in our last issue, Saturday had been set apart for laying the foundation stone of a "Home for Little Boys," at Swanley, the scheme being an extension of the great philanthropic work of "clothing, feeding, educating and training to industrial work, homeless and destitute boys, as well as those in danger of falling into crime, whether orphans or not, who are disqualified, by poverty or other circumstances, for admission into orphan asylums or other institutions." We took occasion then to explain the beneficent objects of this most excellent form of charity, and our readers are too familiar with the subject to render any farther dilation on it necessary. Our aim and duty here is to show how the powerful influence of Freemasonry may, and sometimes is, unworthily used by persons who have not the grasp of mind to appreciate it, or who are unscrupulous and cavalier in their estimate of favours received. Having said so much, we can only add that, in anticipation of the event to which we refer, the aid of our Most Worshipful Grand Master was graciously conceded, his Royal Highness condescending to undertake, what it is hardly necessary to say would have been to him, the pleasing duty of laying the corner-stone of the new building. With that confidence which all who know him would unhesitatingly repose in the Provincial Grand Master of Kent, the Prince of Wales left to Bro. Viscount Holmesdale the responsibility of making the whole of the arrangements, and we have reason to know that the manner in which the noble lord was supported by the Grand Officers of Kent could not but have redounded infinitely to the credit of the Province. An escort of the West Kent Yeomanry, under the command of Colonel Fitzroy Maclean, was turned out as an escort, and the Earl of Aberdeen and many other distinguished leaders in philanthropic enterprise had kindly signified their intention of supporting our Most Worshipful Grand Master on the auspicious occasion. Elaborate plans were made for the reception of his Royal Highness and his lovely Consort, who takes so deep an interest in works of this kind, and who had also promised to grace the ceremony with her presence, and invitations were sent out broadcast, not only to Masons and their families, but generally, to witness one of the most imposing and interesting ceremonies it is possible to contemplate. It is a trite saying that the sources of pleasure are in anticipation rather than in realisation; and so far as this event is concerned the aphorism was harrowingly true. Never was disappointment so keen, or indignation more justly provoked, than over the "miserable fiasco" which will cling like a wet blanket around the memories of the new "Homes for Little Boys," at Swanley, if ever they are raised and inhabited.

Flushed with pleasurable anticipations, ticket-holders in the City repaired to the Holborn and Victoria Stations, where they had been informed special trains would be in readiness to convey them to Swanley. There conveyances had been chartered to take them on to Hextable Farm, about a mile distant; and luncheon had been set out in a large marquee, at which the Earl of Aberdeen had consented to preside. With such a programme before them, the Visitors were in the highest possible spirits, looking forward to a pleasant trip into the "garden of England," so lovely at this time of year, and on such a brilliant day as last Saturday turned out to be. But just as the guests had assembled, and were on the point of embarking on their joyous excursion, countenances fell and angry looks were exchanged, when it was found out that the Prince was "not coming," the whole affair had fallen through. Why? and wherefore? was depicted on every face, but the answer came tardily and shamefacedly. "The rain in the morning," it was said, "had converted the ground into such a swamp that the carriages provided for the conveyance of the guests would be unable to proceed through it!" Was ever such an abject subterfuge resorted to? If that was the impression conveyed by telegram to the M.W.G.M., we have only to ask, Was it true? We are assured by many of the brethren who visited the spot, and purposely went over every inch of the ground, that only in a few places was there mud, ancle deep, and a few planks thrown over them would have obviated any personal inconvenience. On the other hand, if the statement of the apologists could be at all borne out by facts, what a delightful and salubrious site upon which to erect an orphan asylum, where sanitation should be, above all things, a matter of studious consideration! Seeing that the site of the proposed buildings is on a hillside, there could scarcely have been such a slough of despond on it as to warrant the frustration of a royal visit, to say nothing of the audible slap in the face inflicted upon the Masonic Fraternity of the county, whose assistance had been invoked. It surpasses our comprehension, how, after having made use of Freemasonry as the one great means of bringing Royalty and the influence of the Craft to bear upon the success of their inaugural rite, the promoters of the affair could have had the adaucity to withdraw, snail-like, within their shell, and to snub and insult some hundreds of visitors whose only purpose was to help forward the charity. We cannot conceive that the "rain of the morning" was the real cause for the postponement of the visit; if it was, the excuse was the most paltry and abject we ever heard of. We understand that, having received a telegram "not to come!" their Royal Highnesses waited till a few hours later, and then telegraphed somebody in authority to the effect that "The weather is fine now; shall we come?" To which generous and gracious enquiry a curt "no" was returned; the ceremony had been put off indefinitely! No intimation was given to Lord Holmesdale or any of the Grand Officers of the Province, who came great distances—from Maidstone, Ashford, Dover, Canterbury, and other places—to do honour to the event, and to show their respect for the Most Wor. G. Master; and then, after they had gone to great trouble and inconvenience to do the Homes for Little Boys "a turn," the officials of the Homes turned round upon them, and having deferred the ceremony, had not the common courtesy to inform the brethren of the fact. That was bad enough, but to treat the Prince of Wales as a mere shuttlecock, to be used at will, and at the whim of somebody, "dressed in a little brief authority," was an unwarrantable insult to the Heir Apparent, and an unpardonable snub to the Craft. It is very likely (?), of course, that, as soon as it shall suit the caprice of these local nobodies, they will have only to hold up the finger, and beckon to our Grand Master's Masonic following, when the latter will scamper off to Swanley to do homage to the magnates of the "Homes!" We opine that, in the event of any future design of making use of Freemasonry for such a purpose, measures will be taken to prevent the bitter disappointment felt by hundreds of ladies and men of business who had sacrificed their time to assist in a work of charity; and if the ears of those who caused so much chagrin by their blundering incapacity tingle one-half so much as did the public indignation on Saturday, all we can say is, that they are not utterly devoid of susceptibility. But in case they are too obtuse to have discovered the fact already for themselves, we do not hesitate to remind them that, by their unblushing effrontery and consummate stupidity of last Saturday, they have offered a gratuitous and unpardonable insult to Freemasonry, and one that will be recollected when they come cringing to the Craft for further favours.

The Camp, at Wimbledon, was honoured, on Tuesday, with a visit from the Prince and Princess of Wales, who not only fulfilled their original intention of witnessing the finish of the contest for the Queen's Prize, but made a point of seeing everything of interest in the Camp. After lunch, at the Cottage, with the Earl of Brownlow, President of the National Rifle Association, and the Countess of Brownlow, the Royal visitors, accompanied by their host and hostess and several members of the Association, proceeded to the camp of the Canadian team, which, to the number of twenty-one, was drawn up for inspection. Here they were received by Colonel Gzowski, A.D.C., and Mrs. Gzowski, by whom Major Tilton, commanding the team, and Adjutant, Captain Magnachton, were introduced to their Royal Highnesses. Lieutenant Mitchell, winner of the Prince of Wales's Prize, was then called to the front, and the Princess pinned the badge of victory on his breast. The Prince having addressed a few graceful words of compliment to the Canadians, and having alluded to the pleasure he had derived from his tour in Canada, went off with the Princess to see the running deer, electric target, &c., &c. They then joined Sir Bartle Frere's garden party, and proceeded thence to the firing points where the competition for the Queen's Prize at a thousand yards was being brought to a close. The next move was to the Council Tent, where they awaited the arrival of the winner, who proved to be Sergeant Lawrence of the 1st Dumbarton R.V. When the customary formality of testing his rifle had been completed, the victor saluted and advanced to the Princess, who fastened the badge on his arm, and then their Royal Highnesses left. Among the other contests they witnessed was that for the Challenge Shield given by Messrs. Brinsmead, to encourage field firing. No fewer than twenty-five teams of six men each entered for this competition, representing as many battalions of regular or Militia Infantry, Rifle Volunteers, or from any ship of the Royal Navy or division of the Royal Marines Light Infantry. Here the Prince and Princess entered the mantlets for the purpose of seeing how the targets were worked, and remained while volleys of bullets were rained upon the iron coverings. In the result the Royal Marines Light Infantry headed the list with a score of 22, Her Majesty's Ship Excellent being next with 21, and then 1st Middlesex, 2nd Highland Light Infantry, and 3rd Battalion Rifle Brigade, in the order named, with scores of 20, 18, and 17 respectively.

The holiday season is well on its way, if, in many cases, it has not already commenced. More important still, as regards our present purpose, the 12th of August, the day consecrated to St. Grouse, is not very remote. Those, therefore, who have resolved on visiting Scotland during the autumn will do well to bethink themselves of the route that will most commend itself to their views of comfort and convenience. It is a matter of course that in our Masonic peregrinations we should obtain a closer insight into the various railway and other systems of travel than the average traveller. We speak, therefore, with a certain confidence when we suggest that no more convenient service is furnished as regards the Highlands of Scotland than that arranged by the London and North Western and Caledonian Railways. It is, in the first place, all that can be desired as respects comfort, convenience, and speed. It is punctual and it is frequent, and it is in regular communication with steamers to the west coast of Scotland. The trains are fitted most luxuriously and in a manner to satisfy all reasonable expectations. In fact, a mere reference to the Companies' Time-tables will show this to be the case, and with every confidence we advise our readers who may be going Scotlandwards during the present holiday season that they cannot do better than avail themselves of the facilities and conveniences afforded by the Directors of the lines under notice.

BRO. DR. BENJAMIN FRANKLIN,

PENNSYLVANIA'S THIRD GRAND MASTER.

WHEREAS, Some ill-disposed persons in this city, assuming the names of Freemasons, have for some years past imposed upon several well-meaning people who were desirous of becoming true brethren, persuading them, after they had performed certain ridiculous ceremonies, that they had really become Freemasons; and have lately, under the pretence of making a young man a Mason, caused his death by purging, vomiting, burning and the terror of certain diabolical, horrid rites; it is thought proper, for preventing such impositions for the future, and to avoid any unjust aspersions that may be thrown on this ancient and honourable fraternity on this account, either in this city, or in any other part of the world, to publish this advertisement, declaring the abhorrence of all true brethren of such practices in general, and their innocence of this act in particular, and that the persons concerned in this wicked action are not of our Society, nor of any Society of Free and Accepted Masons, to our knowledge or belief.

Signed, in behalf of all members of St. John's Lodge, in Philadelphia, tenth day of June 1737, THOMAS HOPKINSON, Grand Master.

WM. PLUMSTEAD, Dep. G. Master.
JOSEPH SHIPPEN } Wardens.
HENRY PRATT }

The knowledge of the outrage that had been perpetrated in Philadelphia in the name of Freemasonry, together with the personal attack on Franklin, in connection with it, soon reached his parents in Boston, and his mother, with true maternal feelings, induced his father to write to him on the subject, and make inquiry as to the character of the Masonic Society with which he appeared to be connected. To this inquiry Franklin filially replied in a letter, dated 13th April 1738, in which he said:

"As to the Freemasons, I know of no way of giving my mother a better account of them than she seems to have at present, since it is not allowed that women should be admitted into the secret Society. She has, I must confess, on that account, some reason to be displeased with it; but for anything else, I must entreat her to suspend her judgment till she is better informed, unless she will believe me when I assure her, that they are, in general, a very harmless sort of people, and have no principles or practices that are inconsistent with religion and good manners."

In January 1738, Dr. Jones was placed on trial, and so freely had Freemasons denounced his unwarranted act, that he peremptorily challenged every Freemason who was known to be on the panel of jurors. After an impartial trial Jones was found guilty of manslaughter, and sentenced to be burnt in the hand. Remington was also found guilty, but pardoned, and "E. W." was acquitted. Thus ended this unfortunate affair, although the excitement consequent upon it continued for some time afterwards. In the month of April 1738 Bradford's Mercury published a caricature of Masonry, which was equally aimed at Franklin and his brother Masons. In spite of all this Franklin's popularity continually increased. He was at the time postmaster of the city, and clerk of the Provincial Assembly, and continued to hold these offices for many years.

In 1749 Franklin was appointed Provincial Grand Master of Pennsylvania a second time, on this occasion by Bro. Thos. Oxnard Prov. Grand Master of all North America, appointed such by Lord Byron Grand Master of the original Grand Lodge of England, the so-called "Moderns." Dr. Mease, in his "Picture of Philadelphia," published in this city in 1811, says: "So far as the minutes of the 'Modern' Grand Lodge (of Pennsylvania) go, Dr. Franklin was never absent from a meeting." This statement testifies most strongly to Franklin's active interest in Freemasonry. Those old minutes have been long missing, and are probably destroyed, so that we are not able now to turn to the original records.

It was in the same year that Franklin was appointed Grand Master of Pennsylvania for a second term, in 1749, that he first suggested the possibility of explaining thunderstorms upon electrical principles, and conceived the grand idea of drawing down the lightning from the clouds. It was not, however, until the summer of 1752 that he proved the correctness of his theory by experiment. Then, one summer's day, when a thunder-gust was rising in the west, he and his son, William Franklin, proceeded out to the commons near the city, the exact locality being, it is thought, the lot on which the new Post Office building is now being erected, at the corner of Ninth and Chestnut-streets. The philosopher had prepared two light cedar sticks, fixed cross-ways, with a silk handkerchief tied to the four corners, and properly appareled with loop, string and tail. To the top of the kite thus formed was affixed a sharp pointed iron wire, rising about a foot above it. Armed with this kite Dr. Franklin proceeded out in the face of the storm, accompanied only by his son, in order to avoid the ridicule that would attend his experiment should it prove unsuccessful. He then raised his kite, and stood under a cow-shed to avoid observation, as well as the approaching rain. His string was a common hempen one, with a key fastened at its lower end, and a silken string extending from it to his hand. A thunder-cloud passed over the kite. His excitement was intense. In a few moments he observed that the fibres of the string moved. He then placed his knuckle to the key, and noted a small spark. How exquisite must have been his sensations. His kite was lost for a moment in a thunder-cloud. He continued his experiments and drew repeated sparks from the key, and finally charged a Leyden jar with electricity, and received a shock. His success was complete—he had proved that lightning and electricity were identical. He had five years previously made the grand discovery that electricity was of a positive and a negative character, and he pursued his experiments all through his life. One of the most valuable results is the lightning-rod, which is now placed upon the majority of our houses.

By the way, many persons mistake the practical working and value of a lightning rod. It generally acts, not by conducting the flash, but by preventing it. The sharp points of its extremity produce what termed a silent discharge. They repel and scatter the electricity. Franklin's successful experiment made him famous at once over the entire civilised world. He was elected a member of the Royal Society of England, and by command of the king of France, his royal thanks and compliments were returned to Benjamin Franklin, of Pennsylvania, "for his useful discoveries in electricity, and the application of pointed rods to prevent the terrible effects of thunderstorms."

Franklin described his electrical kite in a letter dated "Philadelphia, 19th October 1752, "written to his friend, Peter Collinson of London, which was read at the Royal Society the next month, and his friend Dr. Stuber, of Philadelphia, published at the time a history of Franklin's kite experiment and discoveries, which was apparently written from minute and accurate information derived from Franklin himself. Both accounts may be read in full in "Spark's Works of Benjamin Franklin," Vol. V., pp 178 and 295. In consequence of this great discovery, the Philosopher Kant styled Franklin "the modern Prometheus, who had brought down fire from heaven.

Arago, the celebrated French astronomer, has said that King Solomon's Temple was, by chance, provided with a lightning conductor, somewhat similar to that discovered by Franklin. Solomon's Temple stood nearly 400 years, in a situation peculiarly exposed to the frequent and violent thunderstorms of Palestine, and yet we find no mention, either in the Bible, or Josephus, that it was ever struck by lightning. The explanation is, that the roof was covered with thickly gilt wood, connected by metal pipes with large cisterns, beneath the court of the Temple, into which the water from the roof was conveyed, so that here were a multitude of lightning conductors, well calculated to preserve the Temple against destruction or injury from this cause. The moral of which for us seems to be, cover your house with a tin roof, and have numerous pipes leading from it down into the sewer, and you will need no other lightning rod.

At the Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts of 11th October 1754, P.G.M. Bro. Benjamin Franklin was present, and his name is recorded in full at the head of the list of visitors on that occasion.*

Franklin's interest in the subject of education is well known, and also his instrumentality in founding the University of Pennsylvania. There still exists a correspondence between Christopher Sowers, a printer of Germantown, and Conrad Weiser, in which the former bitterly complains of the efforts of Franklin, and the Freemasons generally, to establish public free schools. Sowers says:

"The people who are the promoters of free schools are Grand Masters and Wardens among the Freemasons—their very pillars."

How much contempt did he endeavour to throw into this indictment, but in reality how great praise did he embody in its words.

We shall now mention several other interesting facts in Franklin's Masonic career.

He served for a second term as Grand Master of Pennsylvania, as we have stated, from 1749 to 1750. In the latter year he was succeeded as Grand Master by William Allen, Recorder of the city of Philadelphia, and the same year appointed Chief Justice of the Province. Allen had been previously Grand Master in 1732, when he was elected, but now he was appointed directly by Lord Byron Grand Master of England. G.M. Allen at once appointed Benjamin Franklin his D.G.M.

In the year 1754, Franklin visited the Provincial Grand Lodge of Massachusetts at its Quarterly Communication held in Boston, on 11th October.

During this year the first Masonic Hall in America was erected at Philadelphia, the site being on Lodge-alley west of Second-street. It was projected in 1752, and completed two years afterwards. The original subscription list for this Masonic Hall is still in existence, and on it appears Benjamin's Franklin's signature, with his subscription of £20, and his son William's signature, with his subscription of £15. At that time there were three Lodges meeting in Philadelphia.

In the year following, 1755, the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, on St. John's Day, attended Divine Service at Christ Episcopal Church, Second-street above Market. Among those present were Benjamin Franklin Deputy Grand Master, and his son William Franklin Grand Secretary.

Five years later, in 1760, Franklin, accompanied by his son, visited the Grand Lodge of England, at its Quarterly Communication in London, held in November of that year, and Dr. Franklin was received and honoured in accordance with his rank as P.G. Master of Pennsylvania, and both his name and that of his son are recorded as visitors on the minutes of the Grand Lodge of England.

While Franklin was in France in 1778, he was elected an honorary member of the Grand Orient of France, and honorary Worshipful Master of the Lodge of the Nine Sisters, or Muses of Paris. This Lodge struck a medal in his honour, the only copy of which is now in the possession of the Grand Lodge of Mecklenburgh. On the one side of this medal is the following inscription, in French: "The Masons of France to Franklin, Master of the Lodge of the Nine Sisters, Orient of Paris 1778." Franklin took a prominent part, during this same year, in the initiation of Voltaire (when he was eighty-four years of age), on 7th February, in the Lodge of the Nine Sisters; and on the 30th November following, he served as Senior Warden of the Lodge of Sorrow, held in honour of Voltaire's memory, he having died in May, but three months after his initiation. Franklin, as Senior Warden, deposited the sprig of acacia upon the catafalque of the deceased Voltaire.

DECORATION OF OUR LODGES.

THE subject we have chosen for our present remarks is undoubtedly one which offers some considerable difficulty in its treatment. We are aware that the mere mention of a proposal to add to the "ornaments" of a Masonic Lodge would call forth strong expressions of opinion from very many brethren who would view such a proposal as little short of treason. We are prepared to admit that the very title we have selected is, from one point of view, un-Masonic, for an assemblage of true brethren, properly clothed, and with the recognised "ornaments" of a Lodge in their proper positions, should require no decoration. Still, Freemasonry, in common with all other human Institutions, is open to decoration, provided the means made use of are consistent with the general teachings of the Order. The collars of the Officers, as well as the jewels we are accustomed to see bestowed on worthy brethren, and many other matters, are decorations in the truest sense, and are so recognised throughout the Masonic world; but it is not alone in the adornment of the person that decoration may be called to aid in the enjoyment of Freemasonry. The halls in which our meetings are held may, by a judicious display of Masonic decoration, be made much more comfortable for the brethren themselves, as well as much more impressive to the newly-admitted member. During our journeyings in one part and another, as representative of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, it has been our lot to take part in Masonic meetings held in all varieties of buildings, from the hastily-erected tent, with nothing in the way of adornment to distinguish it from an ordinary rick covering, to the handsomely-furnished hall, replete with every comfort, with floor, walls, and ceiling adorned in every part with Masonic emblems, pictures, certificates, or curiosities. We have, on several occasions, pointed out the advantage we thought would accrue to Freemasonry if some more general desire was shown by Lodge members to possess a few, at least, of the relics of Freemasonry. We feel sure that all who witnessed the magnificent display at York some time since will bear with us in this respect, while not a few will doubtless regret that it was not possible to retain that collection under one roof for all time. Still, all things must have a beginning, and we are afraid the beginning of a desire to possess a Masonic collection has not yet found its way into many quarters—a circumstance which, in a measure, may be accounted for from the fact that the majority of our English Lodges are held in what may really be termed temporary homes. Still there are many which can boast a hall, while not a few of the Provincial Lodges may almost claim a kind of freehold in the room they have been accustomed to use, and which in more than one hotel we have visited bears the designation of "the Mason's room." We think that in all such cases it would be possible to place a few Masonic relics—for, as a rule, anything of a Masonic character which might be deemed worthy of exhibition by brethren would be no discredit to the room in the eyes of non-Masons, and in this respect we think some further decoration of our Lodges might be attempted.

Having explained, we hope satisfactorily, the legality of ornaments other than those stipulated for in the Constitutions, it next becomes necessary to say what articles are really open for immediate service. First, perhaps, may be mentioned the warrant of the Lodge. There are, doubtless, many who will object to that being framed and displayed anywhere but in a Masonic hall, but we think such objectors are wrong. The home of a Masonic Lodge, for the time being, should be worthy of displaying its warrant, and that is a very good decoration for a start. We may remark here, that we do not approve, on the same principle, of framing and displaying a Grand Lodge certificate, which should have no interest but to the Brother whose property it is. Next we might suggest, as we have seen done in some of the Lodge quarters we have visited, the collection of all the "votes of thanks" which have been presented by the Institutions to members of the Lodge in recognition of their services as Stewards at one or other of the Festivals, as well as other testimonials of a general character belonging to the Lodge members. After these there are of course endless subjects, with more or less Masonic bearing, from which a goodly array might be selected, but there is one in particular to which we think we may make some special reference, viz.:—Bro. Harty's Picture of the Installation of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales at the Albert Hall. As a work of art we think this production worthy of a place in any collection; but when taken in connection with the event it represents, it has special claims upon us. Produced after considerable labour, it has now stood the test of some six years, and still remains the only work which may be quoted as a memento of the event we, as Masons, all refer to with pride. Under the rule of His Royal Highness, whose Installation is here depicted, Freemasonry has made the most rapid strides ever known in its history, and advances which we think will materially affect its future for all time. When the picture was completed the event was comparatively recent, while the majority of the then rulers of our Lodges, having been present, somewhat naturally looked upon the picture in the form of an unnecessary reminder of what they felt they would never forget; but now it is different. Very few, we imagine, of the Masters who now hold sway in the Lodges over which H.R.H. rules, had the opportunity of witnessing that grandest of Masonic assemblies, and therefore we think it not unlikely that the picture which so faithfully represents the scene may with justice be again brought under the notice of the Craft, and we think somewhat more generally taken up than hitherto. In addition to the general idea conveyed by the picture as a whole, the fact of its containing portraits of some hundreds of brethren who were present, may be an additional inducement for Craftsmen to possess themselves of it. For ourselves, we can speak highly of it and refer such as may think of securing a copy to Bro. W. R. Norris 29 Southampton-buildings, London, W.C.

REVIEWS.

All Books intended for Review should be addressed to the Editor of The Freemason's Chronicle, 23 Great Queen Street, W.C.

Supper Dishes for People with Small Means. Price Sixpence. London: Simpkin, Marshall, and Co., Ipswich: Pawsey and Hayes, Ancient House.

WE believe it was the late Alexis Soyer who first gave his culinary mind to the publication of a work on Cookery which was both cheap in form and commended itself, by the simplicity of its recipes, to persons of small means, though, at the same time, it was of considerable value to those who were affluent. Within the last few years—thanks to the initiation of Mr. Buckmaster and his supporters—still greater attention has been paid to the subject of cheap and wholesome Cookery, and there are now several schools in London, and elsewhere, where the provident housewife may be initiated into the mysteries of preparing toothsome dishes for her husband and children. It was, indeed, high time that something of the kind should be set on foot. A vast number of Englishwomen, especially those living in the metropolis and large cities and towns in the Provinces, were lamentably ignorant of the very first principles of cookery. Even the wives of middle class men of good means had few ideas of providing dinners, which we specify as being the principal meal of the day, beyond the eternal joint of roast or boiled, with the pastry and cheese to follow, varied on festive occasions by poultry, with soup or fish, and a more elaborate display of sweets, &c., &c. As for anything like a well-versed exponent of the culinary art, beyond the limited number of professional cooks, you might search all England through and hardly find a score of them. And as for the cooks themselves—with favourable exceptions—they were, and we regret to add, still remain, a sorry lot. Even in the case of the more competent among them, the little knowledge they possessed was oftener than not a source of danger to their employers. Cookie's domain was sacred from invasion by the mistress, who found she had no voice in the arrangements for provisioning her own household. Cookie's word, too, in all things which she was appointed to deal with, was law, and woe to the housewife who, with more courage than discretion, dared to call it in question. As for the "good plain cook" who figures so prominently in the columns of our daily newspapers, from time immemorial she has been, in the majority of instances, the disturbing element in the domestic circle, and has probably provoked more anathemas from hungry husbands than all the rest of the class of household servants put together. Descending to the artisan and mechanic class, we find matters still worse. As a rule, the artisan or mechanic's wife hardly knows the difference between beef and mutton, while, as to cooking either, in a manner that shall satisfy the palate as well as the appetite of her husband and children, she is simply incapable. What makes matters still worse is, that this ignorance is productive of frightful waste, and the bread winner loses his money as well as his temper. Perhaps, however, the most lamentable case of all is furnished by the poor married clerk, with a rising family, whose income, all told, is £100 or £150 per annum. He must cut a respectable figure as to dress, or the desk or counting-house and he would very soon part company. If his wife is of a domestic turn of mind, and is not above doing her own housework, he stands a chance of rubbing along comfortably. But such a wife is unfortunately the exception. The majority have been brought up in ignorance, and even, if they are willing, are incapable of managing or carrying out the duties of a cook. But we need not extend the picture. There is no reason, of which we are aware, why it should be so, but nevertheless it is the fact that English men and women are very incompetent cooks. Give a French man or woman a few bones, some bread, hot water, and the simplest condiments, and he or she will place before you a potage considered far from despicable by a hungry person; but even with the best food materials that money can purchase, the result with us is oftentimes total and discreditable failure.

As to this little book which has led us to indulge in these remarks, it is excellent of its kind, and, so far as it goes, it fulfils the promise of its title, and contains exactly 105 recipes for "Supper Dishes" for the class of persons to whom it addresses itself. As no name appears on the title page, we are not in a position to make known to our readers to whom it is we are indebted for this cheap and well-prepared manual of Supper Cookery. But we think those of our readers who will be at the pains of investing sixpence in the purchase of a copy will very soon find that we have by no means over-estimated its merits. Moreover, though it is intended for people of small means, it contains recipes for dishes which even those in good circumstances will not be slow to introduce frequently at table when they have once made trial of them—it is only ridiculous pride which rejects a good thing because it is cheap, or made of cheap materials. Here, for instance, is the prescription for making a "New Indian Pillau," when it is desirable to use up "odds and ends of meats and puddings." It strikes us as a great improvement on the regulation "Resurrection Pie:"—

"Cut up into pieces the size of a nut, cold meat, Yorkshire, batter, or suet puddings, cold vegetables of all kinds; a little rice pudding broken up is a great improvement. Mix up with a large teaspoonful of curry powder, one each of currants and sultana raisins, and salt, a quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper, ditto onion, and a quarter of a pint of water. More or less of these ingredients, according to the size of your dish. This quantity will do for a two-quart pie dish. Put your ingredients into a well-greased pie dish, and pour over a batter made of two large tablespoonfuls of flour, one egg, half-pint of milk, a piece or two of butter on the top; bake for an hour. Baking powder is an improvement to the batter, but it must be quickly made and put into the oven at once."

Or, let us take "Curried Maccaroni," which is to be made in the manner following, and from our experience of maccaroni generally, should be very appetising:—

"Cut up one or two onions, fry them in some fat, add one small tablespoonful of curry powder, ditto vinegar, ditto sugar, and a teaspoonful of salt; add one pint and three quarters of water, and boil in it slowly half a pound of maccaroni till quite tender, and serve very hot."

There are those who dislike cold meats—we are not of this opinion—and to set before a guest a cold shoulder of mutton has passed into a proverb, to give any one "the cold shoulder" being equivalent to slighting him, or making him feel unwelcome. To these we commend the following recipe for "Maccaroni and Cold Meat;" it will prevent, in toothsome fashion, any occasion for their dislike arising:—

"Stew half a pound of maccaroni in a pint and a half of water and a quarter of a pint of milk (all milk can be used), a piece of mace, a small onion chopped fine, half a teaspoonful of salt, and a pinch of pepper, pour it into a well-greased baking dish, place over it three-quarters or one pound of slices of cold meat, well peppered or dusted with dry mustard, a few pieces of fat must be put on the meat if it is very lean. The meat can be put in the dish and the maccaroni on the top, if preferred, but it quite alters the flavour of the dish. Bake in the oven or before the fire, for half an hour."

However, we need not add to the array of passages quoted, which will certainly suffice to prove what we have said already, to wit, that this cheap manual of "Supper Dishes for People of Small Means" will not only be welcome to those for whom it is written, but likewise to those to whom the expenditure of some pounds or shillings, more or fewer, is of comparatively little moment.

We have very great pleasure in announcing that the Summer Festival of that highly deserving and most assiduous Lodge of Instruction, the Metropolitan, No. 1507, will take place on Saturday next, the 22th instant, at the Bell Hotel, East Moulsey. There will doubtless be a gathering in all respects worthy of the occasion, and judging from past experience, we are inclined to think the brethren and their friends who constitute the party will most thoroughly enjoy themselves. The Lodge has our heartiest good wishes for the success of its Summer Festival.

MASONIC MENDICANCY.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Allow me to thank your "CONSTANT READER" for his kind condescension in replying to my letter, as also for his scholarly and learned criticisms thereon. Doubtless, their value would be vastly increased if one could discover the force or the fun of any of them. I shall not, however, allow myself to be thrown off the real scent by any red herrings that my brother may choose to drag across the trail. It matters not in the least to me if he prefers his own high falutin' to my plain English, and I shall not permit him to escape from his position, after the manner of the cuttle-fish, by an extensive display of inky matter.

In the letter of your correspondent, dated 28th June, he advanced the following opinions, to all of which I took, and still take, exception:—(1) That the publication of the names of Masonic impostors is an uncharitable act. (2) That there are very few Masonic mendicants. (3) That unworthy brethren would surely be detected. (4) That there should be a means of cutting short their career of imposture without publishing their names and doings to the world. (5) That Masons are Pharisaical in their dispensation of alms, and (6) That it is better that unworthy brethren should succeed in their swindling practices than that a genuine case of distress should go unrelieved.

"CONSTANT READER" himself seems to me to supply answers to his own arguments. He tells us that there are "hundreds of worthy Masons" wanting relief, "who are too sensitive to appeal." If this be so, although I should be very sorry indeed to think that our Order was in such an unhappy condition of pauperism, we are furnished at once with a powerful reason against dealing out indiscriminate charity, for according to my friend, the really worthy and genuine cases are to be found amongst those who do not apply for relief in the role of beggars. This I am quite prepared to believe, but at the same time the only reasonable conclusion to be arrived at is that relief accorded to mendicants should be administered with great judgment, since the sooner dishonest mendicity is stayed the better it will be for the genuine cases, and therefore for real Charity.

I again assert that there are a great number of Masonic mendicants in this country. Not a week passes in this town without applications being made for Masonic relief, and in most cases those who seek it are found to be arrant impostors, or utterly unworthy of any assistance. The detection of such persons is sometimes easy, but occasionally their plausible stories and manners deceive us. These tramps do not as a rule bring documentary proofs and evidences of much value, and their general appearance is of such a character that for years it has been a standing joke with my children, whenever a peculiarly shabby-looking individual makes his appearance at the gate, to say, "Papa, here is another of your brothers coming to see you."

As to the means of cutting short their imposture, of course there is the nearest policeman, but such a measure appears to me to be somewhat summary and harsh, to say nothing of the nuisance and loss of time involved in attendance to prosecute, as well as the public scandal to the Order. On the other hand, the columns of the Masonic press seem to offer a most appropriate medium for the purpose of exposing a system of roguery that is detrimental to the welfare of the Craft.

I am glad to see that your "CONSTANT READER" agrees with me that the everyday charities of the brethren are very numerous. He thereby qualifies his previous statement that we are Pharisaical. In the matter of our "Three Great Charities," I think, perhaps, his accusation might have held a little water, for the publication in the press of the world of the large amounts collected at the Festivals is, I think, very injudicious, and is having, I am sure, a prejudicial effect upon us by inducing persons to become Masons for the sake of the benefits they imagine they may thereby acquire.

With reference to the instance recorded by me of a brother who was substantially relieved, and who turned out undeserving, the matter is perpaps scarcely worth further notice, but as my friend appears to think it was a weak action on my part to aid him, I may just say that the matter was not in my hands at all, but in those of the standing committee of one of my Lodges, to several members of which the brother had been known in former days. He, too, was a man who had been "a willing supporter of his Lodge," but had come down in the world, and it was vainly hoped that he would have gladly taken advantage of an opportunity for a fresh start in life. It would be wearisome to record the many instances within my own knowledge of disappointment resulting from the too hasty giving of relief. I can quite understand that Masonic tramps are not equally dispersed over the face of the country, and a provincial town, where members of the local Lodges are easily to be found, probably offers a better field for their operations than the wilderness of the metropolis.

I must beg a small portion of space to notice the letter of "LONDONER," on the same subject. I agree with him that the conduct of the brethren at the hotel, where the "wayworn" brother asked help, seems, at first blush, very discreditable. Before condemning them, however, it would be well to know precisely how the advance towards their fraternal notice was made. If the unhappy man flourished a Masonic sign, for instance, in the public bar (a not unusual practice with Masonic beggars), I am not surprised at their decision. On the other hand, if the request was modestly made, the duty of the Masons present was not to have clubbed for him the price of "glasses round," and so carelessly disposed of the case, but to have given him what would have paid for his night's rest and refreshment, and to have investigated his case in the morning, with a view to some more substantial assistance. It is just this easy and indiscriminate relief that I hold to be so objectionable. The instance of the brother who fell into bad hands in London, and got small temporary help, only shows how easy it is for a Mason suffering from genuine difficulty to obtain the assistance he may need. It is a mistake to suppose that the Masonic impostor looks for large sums. Nothing of the kind. He will take as much as he can get, as long as it is in the form of money. He usually carries with him a filthily dirty Scotch or American certificate, how or where obtained Heaven only knows. He is very glib. He has a pitiable tale about a long series of misfortunes, and his tears are always on tap, until he finds out that you are not to be done—then look out for polite language.

I regret that my casual selection of a Latin nom de plume should have so deeply offended the sensibilities of your "CONSTANT READER," as to force him into a display of temper, and to avoid further annoyance to his feelings, I will ask your permission to subscribe myself on this occasion

HOMES FOR LITTLE BOYS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—At a special meeting of the Committee, held this day, it was resolved to express to the many friends and subscribers of the Institution the very sincere regret which they feel at the disappointment caused on Saturday last by the postponement of the Swanley fete.

The Committee wish to assure their friends that this postponement was caused by circumstances entirely beyond their control, and that every preparation had been made for carrying out the ceremony in accordance with the printed programme.

Early in the morning the site of the new Homes was visited by a heavy downfall of rain, such as is seldom seen during the summer; and this continued for several hours. The consequence was that the marquees erected for the ceremony were flooded, while the new road was rendered almost impassable.

At the time it became necessary to decide what course to pursue the rain still continued; and under all the circumstances, the members of the Committee who were present felt they had no alternative but to postpone the ceremony. Telegrams were accordingly forwarded to the railway stations to stop the booking of passengers, and all was done that was possible to avoid inconvenience to those who intended to be present.

The Committee feel bound to add to the above the statement contained in the Court news of to-day's papers, that it was "Owing to the state of the weather that the Committee requested their Royal Highnesses to postpone the ceremony to a future day."

The Committe will announce at the earliest possible moment what steps they propose to adopt.

A. O. CHARLES, Secretary.

FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE

23 GREAT QUEEN STREET, W.C.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF SURREY.

THE Freemasons of this Province assembled on the 14th instant, at the Masonic Hall, Woking Station, under the presidency of the R.W. Bro. General Studholme Brownrigg, C.B., the Provincial Grand Master. There was a very large attendance of the Craftsmen of the District, the whole of the twenty-four Lodges being represented. After the formal opening of Provincial Grand Lodge, the first business of the day was the consecration to Masonic purposes of the new Hall, which has just been erected by the members of the Weyside Lodge, No. 1395, which meets at Woking Station. This was done, with the ceremonial usual on such occasions, the proceedings being conducted by the Provincial Grand Master, assisted by the Rev. C. W. Arnold, M.A., Deputy Prov. Grand Master Surrey, Past Grand Chaplain of England, who officiated as Consecrating Chaplain. After the roll of Lodges in the Province had been called—which, as already stated, were fully represented—the Report of the Finance and Audit Committee was presented. This showed there was a balance of £162 5s 5d at command of Provincial Grand Lodge, and the Committee recommended the following grants:—To the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, Fifteen Guineas; to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, Ten Guineas; to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and the Widows of Freemasons, Ten Guineas. The Committee likewise recommended that Ten Guineas be voted to the St. John's Church (Woking) Enlargement Fund. These recommendations received the universal support of those members of Prov. Grand Lodge who were in attendance, and the Report was unanimously adopted. Bro. J. M. Clabon's proposal to increase the fees to the Fund of Benevolence, was next, on reference from Grand Lodge, brought under consideration, but the opinions gathered were decidedly in opposition to any such increase being made. Amongst other matters that claimed attention, was the circular issued from Grand Lodge as to the precedence of Grand Officers, and some suggestions were elicited as to the desirability of the status of Prov. Grand Officers being more adequately defined at headquarters. On the proposition of the Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Geo. Price was re-elected Grand Treasurer, and graceful recognition was made of the zeal he displayed in the fulfilment of his duties. The services of Bro. C. Greenwood, who for upwards of twenty-five years has held the office of Prov. Grand Secretary, were also acknowledged, the Prov. Grand Master announcing that he had decided to appoint this zealous brother to be the Senior Grand Warden, being the only honour it was in his power to confer. General Brownrigg announced that he would continue to avail himself of the services of Bro. Rev. C. W. Arnold as Deputy Prov. Grand Master. The investments were then made, the following being the list of those appointed to the several offices for the year ensuing:—

| Bro. Rev. C. W. Arnold P.G.C. | ... | Deputy Prov. Grand Master |
| Charles Greenwood P.G.S.B. | ... | Senior Warden |
| James E. Barton 1395 ... | ... | Junior Warden |
| Rev. Richard Milner 1616 | ... | Chaplain |
| W. A. Barrett 1920 ... | ... | Registrar |
| Charles Greenwood jun. 410 | ... | Secretary |
| J. B. Boucher 1872 ... | ... | Senior Deacon |
| W. Youldon 1638 ... | ... | Junior Deacon |
| A. E. Taylor 1851 ... | ... | Superintendent of Works |
| H. E. Frances ... ... | ... | Director of Ceremonies |
| J. H. Askham 1564 ... | ... | Asst. Director of Ceremonies |

General Brownrigg then briefly addressed the brethren. The condition of Freemasonry in the Province was satisfactory; true, they had lost one Lodge during the year—the Studholme—which, for the convenience of its members, had shifted into the Metropolitan district. Personally, he had no desire to lose any Lodges; at the same time, he thought the twenty-four they possessed was amply sufficient. With respect to the Charity Organisation of the Province; hitherto they had co-operated with the adjoining Province of Berks and Bucks, but it was now deemed advisable that the two Committees should manage their own affairs, and though the most amicable relationship would continue between the two Provinces—and each would render to the other every assistance in its power—the joint organisation would cease, and each Committee confine itself to its own operations. The Prov. Grand Master in conclusion urgently pressed the claims of the Institutions, which it was most desirable should be sustained in their present efficiency. The business was completed by the re-appointment of the Audit and Finance Committee, and Provincial Grand Lodge was closed.

The brethren attended divine service at Christ Church, Woking Station, where the Rev. C. W. Arnold officiated. The sermon was preached by the Worshipful Brother the Provincial Grand Chaplain, the Rev. R. Milner, who took his text from 1 Kings vi. 12:—

"Concerning this house which thou art in building, if thou wilt walk in My statutes, and execute My judgments, and keep all My commandments to walk in them; then will I perform My word with thee, which I spake unto David thy father."

Brethren, to us Masons, and it is you whom I specially address to day, "uninitiated" is not an infrequent word. But speaking here, in the house of the Great Architect of the Universe, and before a mixed congregation, it is right that I should especially bring before you, and before them, how the one object of Masons, initiated, and the one object of the other part of the congregation, who do not partake with us in what we call the mysteries of Freemasonry, are really so closely allied, that when brethren first become acquainted with the mysterious secrets which more especially belong to our Order, they learn that the chief object of Freemasonry is but the greatest object of our mortal existence, namely, to serve God better, and to bring the whole course and tenour and actions of our life into closer relationship with Him.

For myself, this is my experience of Freemasonry. I confess, brethren, hearing of the luxury too often associated in the popular mind with the word Freemason, that it was with a certain amount of misgiving, and some hesitation, that I entered the Order, which hitherto to me had been a sealed book. But, once past the safeguards which always surround a Masonic Lodge, the atmosphere was one of reverence, of peace. I found men, who five minutes before were busying themselves with all the affairs and anxieties of the world, now standing in solemn silence, thinking of something higher, something better. They seemed to have left behind them, more completely than any other body of men I have ever encountered, for the moment at any rate, the anxieties, and the difficulties, and the dangers of the world. The atmosphere was an atmosphere of peace. Charity—or as we have it now in our revised version, Love—was present in strong force; Charity towards man, and love and reverence towards God. This was the principle that ruled them. This the lodestone on which their contemplation was fixed.

Yet, brethren, there is, I fear, a danger in this, as in all other mundane affairs. There is too much tendency to follow the lead of fashion, because it is the fashion, and because the greatest in the land give countenance to our Order, to lose sight of the first grand principles on which it is founded; to forget that it was without the hope of earthly advantage that we entered its ranks, to forget that the essence of it is the glory of God; and the earthly manifestation of it, the noblest work in which man can engage—Charity.

And with Charity we unite Fidelity. Brethren, Fidelity does not only mean that because a man can show you that he is a Mason, that he is to be fed with bread and relieved with money, but it does mean that you are to be his friend—to be his friend in the very highest sense; that to you he can communicate those thoughts which have given so great a power to superstition in all ages—that with you he can be perfectly frank; that from you, he, the weak brother, can demand strength and counsel, and so prevent that torture of mind and agonising self examination which might otherwise have rendered his inner life, his spiritual life, every part in him worthy of the name of life, from being a continual misery.

Brethren, we Masons are peculiarly members of a body one of another; and when one member suffers, all the members suffer with him; or one member be honoured, all the members rejoice with him.

Such being the feeling of Freemasonry, it is very necessary that its highest aspect, and its highest aspiration, should not be lost sight of. And in this Province it is not lost sight of.

By request, we are met together to-day, in this church, to show our love and reverence towards God, and our love and fellowship towards man. For concerning this house which thou art in building, if thou wilt walk in My statutes, and execute My judgments, and keep all My commandments to walk in them; then will I perform My word with thee, which I spake unto David thy father.

The good thought of King David was bearing fruit, the great temple was silently rising in all its glory, and the word of the Lord came unto King Solomon to teach him that the reward would only be the result of perseverance; that his labour would be lost unless in him and in his people the great Architect of the Universe was continually building the house.

I have chosen this text, on which time does not allow me to enlarge, because your alms and offerings, the tangible expression of your charity, are desired concerning a house of God which is in building, dedicated to St. John, in this large and scattered parish, that so it may become a parish church with a parish of its own. God builds with those who build in Him and for Him. This is the day for joining our work and His. This is the day in which each one of us conscious of our personal responsibility, must do his part and leave the result with God.

At the close of the service a collection was made, which realised £3 18s, and was appropriated to the Enlargement Fund. The banquet was served at the Goldsworth Hall, the arrangements being carried out under the direction of Bro. C. T. Tyler. The Provincial Grand Master presided, and on the removal of the cloth gave the usual toasts. The first, the health of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen and the Craft, was heartily received. In speaking of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, General Brownrigg stated that the Grand Master devoted a vast amount of attention to the business of the Craft; with the toast he would associate the names of the Grand Officers, and would call on Bro. Rev. C. W. Arnold P.G.C. to reply. Bro. Arnold, after thanking those present for the kindness they had exhibited in their reception of the toast, regretted the absence of many Grand Officers who he had hoped would have joined them. The Lord Mayor, Bro. Sir John Whittaker Ellis, Grand Junior Warden, was a resident in the neighbourhood, but other engagements prevented his coming. Again, Lord Onslow was a member of the Lodge, and they had hoped he would be able to attend on the occasion. The health of General Brownrigg was proposed by the D.P.G.M., who stated that under the rule of its present Provincial Grand Master Freemasonry had made rapid strides in Surrey. Each of the Lodges was vieing the one with the other to maintain a state of efficiency. This showed that they had a chief who knows how to govern men. All trusted General Brownrigg would have health and strength for many years to continue to preside over them. In reply, the Provincial Grand Master acknowledged the kindness evinced by the reception he had met with. They were assembled in greater numbers that day than for some years past. This was gratifying. The first duty of the day had been a pleasant one, that of consecrating a new Hall for Masonic purposes. This was a sure sign of progress. Ten years ago there were but nine Lodges in the Province, but now, with twenty-four Lodges, he found great difficulty in knowing how to distribute the purple. He was well aware many brethren might think they did not get it when they most deserved it, but he could assure one and all he gave the question his serious consideration. Naturally, however, there were one or two offices which were paramount, such as that of Deputy Prov. G. Master and Prov. G. Secretary. In conclusion, General Brownrigg again tendered the brethren his thanks. In replying to the toast of the Prov. G. Officers Bro. Arnold remarked that in previous years he had made it a rule to visit—once during the year—each Lodge in the Province. Owing, however, to the vast increase in the number, he found this rule a very hard one to carry out. At the same time he assured the brethren he took a continued, and, if possible, a still greater interest in the work they were doing. Bro. Greenwood likewise referred to the increased labour entailed upon the executive. He had been Prov. Grand Secretary for 27 years, and though it had pleased General Brownrigg to place him in a somewhat more exalted position, that of Senior Warden, he must confess his heart yearned for his old post, and his old duties. The other toasts comprised the W.M.'s of Lodges in the Province, coupled with that of the entertaining Lodge; the Visitors, who were responded for by Bro. Richard Eve P. Prov. G.S.W. Hants and the Isle of Wight; the Charities, for which Bros. Binckes and Terry replied. Some capital musical selections and songs enlivened the proceedings throughout, Bro. William Sexton (of Westminster Abbey) especially distinguishing himself. It was an exceptionally late hour, for a Provincial meeting, when the Tyler was called on for his toast.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF KENT.

THE annual assembly of Masons of this Province was held on Tuesday, 18th inst., at Sandwich, under the Presidency of the R.W. Provincial Grand Master Viscount Holmesdale. The business on the agenda was of a purely formal nature except, perhaps, that referring to the presentation of a testimonial to Bro. the Rev. Thomas Robinson, M.A., Grand Chaplain of England, &c. Bro. Robinson has been known in the Province of Kent for some years past. The fact of H.R.H. the M.W.G. Master having appointed him to an office in G. Lodge, gives evidence that his efforts have been appreciated outside the district with which he has been more particularly associated. The brethren of the Province subscribed most liberally to the testimonial, and, as a consequence, the Provincial Grand Master was enabled to hand to Bro. Robinson, on Tuesday last, a purse containing a goodly amount, and in addition to present him with his clothing for Grand Lodge office. The following brethren were appointed as Officers of the district for the coming year:—

At the conclusion of the meeting of Prov. G. Lodge the brethren proceeded to St. Clement's Church, where, by permission of the Vicar, a special service was held. The customary banquet followed, Lord Holmesdale presiding. The brethren of Sandwich had been fortunate in securing, by kind permission of Capt. Mate, the spacious Volunteer Drill Hall, and this had been decorated in a very elaborate manner. The general appearance of the hall on entering was most pleasing, and the arrangement reflects great credit on those by whom it was carried out. The banquet was well served, and the table most liberally supplied; indeed, it was the general opinion that the members of the entertaining Lodge had equalled, if not excelled, the previous efforts of the Kentish brethren. Lord Holmesdale in due course proposed the toast of the Queen, which having been honoured with true Kentish enthusiasm, was followed by that of the Grand Master H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. In giving the toast, Lord Holmesdale referred to the disappointment experienced by the brethren of his district, and others, in the unfortunate postponement of the intended ceremony at Swanley. He thought it would be unwise to blame anyone for the unfortunate fiasco of that day, but at the same time he very much regretted the termination of the matter. The ceremony was adjourned, he was afraid, sine die, for he thought it very unlikely that the Prince of Wales would find it possible to devote another day to it. He felt sure that had the brethren of Kent had their Grand Master among them on that occasion they would have drunk the toast with much greater enthusiasm than they ever had before, and yet they were not usually remiss. He could only now ask them to honour it with the usual heartiness, and assured them that H.R.H. was as much disappointed as any one at not having had the opportunity of meeting the Masons of Kent who, he was sure, would have done themselves honour. The toast of the Grand Officers followed. The brethren of Kent were at all times pleased to recognise this toast, but, doubtless, the fact of their now numbering one of their own members among them would lend additional attraction to it. He trusted that Bro. Robinson, to whom he referred, and who they had been pleased to honour with a testimonial that day, would live long to enjoy the position conferred on him by the Grand Master, and that he would have many opportunities of wearing the clothing presented him. Bro. Robinson considered it a very high honour to return thanks for the toast of the Grand Officers of England. Their chief had, in proposing the toast, described the duties of the Earl of Carnarvon, and he hoped that the same eulogistic remarks applied to the Officers of Grand Lodge. He felt he might say, on behalf of one and all, that they desired to fulfil the duties of their respective offices to the satisfaction both of the Grand Master, and also the brethren generally. Bro. Eastes, the Deputy of the Province, then assumed the gavel. It appeared to him hardly possible that twelve months had elapsed since Provincial Grand Lodge was assembled at Rochester, when he had the pleasure of presenting, in the name of the Province, a testimonial to the worthy Grand Master, after a most successful term of office extending over twenty-one years. He was now once more permitted to propose the toast which he ventured to think was nearest and dearest to the brethren of Kent. He felt there was no Province or District where the brethren had greater reason to be proud of their ruler than they of the county of Kent. They could safely challenge any other, and really had reason to be proud of having such a Prov. Grand Master. Lord Holmesdale had recently given evidence of his zeal in the office he held in Freemasonry, for he ventured to think that no one worked harder in preparing for the contemplated meeting of the previous Saturday than did his lordship. Had the ceremony been carried out, he felt it would have been the most successful ever held in the Province, and very much of the success would have been due to the way in which Lord Holmesdale had arranged the details. He could refer with pleasure to the prosperity of the Craft in the district, very much of which prosperity was due to the way in which the Master of the Province carried out his share of the work. The toast having been most heartily honoured, Lord Holmesdale replied. It was always a very pleasing duty to him to respond to the toast of Provincial Grand Master, which the brethren of Kent always received so well and heartily. He trusted as years went on the heartiness of his reception might never decrease, but that he should always receive as genuine a welcome as was now accorded him. They had had a very busy time in the Province of Kent during the past year; he hoped their prosperity might continue. If they were to keep on increasing and multiplying in the future as they had done in the past, he really began to wonder how they were to be entertained; looking round the elegant hall in which they were then assembled, and which was not a small one, he could but think there was little room for any more, and yet but a few years since such a gathering in connection with the Provincial Grand Lodge would have been considered enormous. He really thought they would have to devote some portion of the funds of Provincial Grand Lodge to purchase tents, so that they might be enabled to encamp in the wilderness. He felt there was not one member present but would rather put up with a little inconvenience than be in a large hall, nearly empty. With regard to what had been said in reference to his share in the arrangements for Swanley, he did not see the use of a Provincial Grand Master if he did not work on such occasions. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales had sent for him, and was good enough to say he would entrust the Masonic part of the proceedings to him; he had, therefore, done what he considered necessary, and repeated that he felt sure all would have been well had it not been for the unfortunate postponement. He hoped the brethren of Kent would have an opportunity, on a future occasion, of entertaining their Grand Master. The toast of the Deputy Prov. Grand Master was next given. They must all be aware that while the Master of a Province got all the tinsel and the gilt, his Deputy got all the work and all the kicks. In a large Province such as this, the work was very great; he had been particularly fortunate in having brethren as Deputies who had faithfully discharged their work. Bro. Eastes was really all that could be desired in that respect, and the way in which he fulfilled the trust reposed in him gave him great credit. The toast was well received and acknowledged by Bro. Eastes. With regard to the duties of his office, they were comparatively light so long as he had the confidence of the Provincial Grand Master, and the support of the brethren. While the good feeling which had characterised them in the past existed, he was sure his office would be a gratifying one. Last year there were forty-five Lodges in the Province, with a membership of 2,520, now they had forty-eight, with another to be consecrated in ten days, with 2,588 members—a gratifying increase, and one of which they might justly be proud. The Provincial Grand Master was very pleased to propose the toast of the Provincial Grand Officers, all of whom in the past had fulfilled their duties satisfactorily. He was especially indebted to the Grand S.W. of the past year for the attention he had paid to Masonic duties, and pleased to be able to publicly thank him. He might say the same also of the Grand J.W. and other of the Officers; indeed, his thanks were due to all. He hoped those who accepted the purple in years to come would follow in the steps of those who had gone before, and would bear in mind there are other duties appertaining to an appointment than the wearing of a collar. The newly-appointed Grand S.W. replied; a somewhat difficult task devolved upon him, as he was called upon to respond to the toast both for the present and past Officers; he thanked the brethren on behalf of those who had gone through their work, and hoped those appointed that day would give equal satisfaction. The exigencies of the train service necessitated the practical breaking up of the meeting at this stage, most of those from other than the home Lodge being obliged to leave.

While we do not approve of all day meetings, we yet think longer time should be allowed for the after proceedings of Provincial meetings in particular. They often afford the only means of a general reunion of the Officers of past years, and the latter part of the proceedings, if looked upon from that point of view, are really the most interesting to a large number of those present. Had the service at the church been before, instead of after, the meeting of Grand Lodge, this drawback would have been prevented, a fact we commend to brethren who may have the arrangement of future gatherings. We do not wish this to be considered as applying particularly to the arrangements of the Sandwich brethren—which were first-rate in every respect—but to the Craft generally.

MARK BENEVOLENT FUND.

THE Annual Festival in behalf of the Mark Benevolent Fund was held at the Crystal Palace, on Wednesday, under the presidency of the Earl of Kintore D.G.M.M.M. A numerous company were present, including, as usual, many of the fair sex, and Bros. Bertram and Roberts are to be congratulated on the excellent manner in which they provided for the wants of the inner man. In fact, the Festival of 1882 was, in all respects, a great success. It was compact and harmonious as regards those present—so much as this goes, almost without saying—while the result may be said to have fully realised the general expectation; only on one previous occasion has it, if we remember rightly, been exceeded, and even the excess of that Festival over this is slight.

Banquet over, the more serious, and at the same time, the more jovial part of the proceedings was entered upon, the Right Honourable Brother in the chair inaugurating the combined business and chief pleasure of the meeting by proposing the customary Loyal and Mark Masonic toasts. In presenting that of Lord Henniker Grand Mark Master Mason, Lord Kintore spoke in terms of well-deserved encomium of his Lordship's interest in whatever was likely to prove of interest to the Degree. His absence, he remarked, was undoubtedly a loss to the company, though to him (Lord Kintore) personally, it was a gain, for otherwise he would not have been able to occupy the position of chairman. The enthusiasm evoked by these remarks having subsided, Bro. Baron de Ferrieres, M.P., gave the toast of the Past Grand Masters, and congratulated those present on having had the services in that capacity of so many distinguished Craftsmen. As a matter of course, reference was made to the accession to their number of Prince Leopold Duke of Albany, and also to the fact that a fund was in course of being raised in order to present His Royal Highness with some mark of their esteem and respect on the occasion of his recent marriage. A kindly reference to Bro. Rev. G. Raymond Portal M.W.P.G.M.M.M., who had lately returned home from his late tour, in restored health, brought the Baron's remarks to a conclusion.

On Bro. C. F. Matier devoted the agreeable duty of proposing the Chairman's health. We had known his Lordship, he said, for a long time, and had watched his Masonic career with the greatest interest and satisfaction. There had been a time when the Supreme Grand Chapter of Scotland, of which his Lordship was one of the Principals, and the Grand Mark Lodge, of which he was now the Deputy Grand Master, had not been on the best of terms. In those days his Lordship had demeaned himself most kindly and courteously, and had used his best efforts to bring about happier relations between the two bodies. That his Lordship's efforts had not proved futile was shown by the fact of his being, at the present time, Second Principal of the Supreme Grand Chapter of Scotland and D.G.M. of the Mark Grand Lodge. That his Lordship might occupy still higher positions was his (Bro. Matier's) sincere wish. Lord Kintore, in reply, acknowledged with much satisfaction not only the kindly terms in which his health had been proposed by Bro. Matier, whom he had known for many years, but also the exceedingly handsome manner in which it had been received by the company present. He acquiesced in the correctness of Bro. Matier's statement as to the differences formerly existing between the Grand Chapter Scotland and the Mark Grand Lodge England, and was fully prepared and delighted to admit that the twofold position he at present occupied, as Second Principal of the former and Deputy G. Master of the latter, was evidence that peace, a strong peace, and peace with honour, prevailed between the two bodies.

The toast of the "Past and Present Grand Officers" having been proposed in appropriate terms by Bro. R. P. Spice, and most genially acknowledged by Bro. Rev. R. P. Bent Grand Chaplain, the Chairman rose and gave the toast of the evening, "Prosperity to the Mark Benevolent Fund." In doing so, he said he felt no anxiety as to the result. He did not mean to say that his powers of oratory were likely to affect materially the fortunes of the Fund, but he had noticed his worthy friend opposite to him, Bro. Dewar, with a satisfactory roll of paper of considerable length in his hands, and he considered it great advantage that the work he was commending to their notice had already been to a great extent accomplished. As to the Fund itself, in the fourteen years that had elapsed since its establishment, in 1868, no less a sum than £3,180 had been raised, of which £1,500 had been invested in the Fund itself, and £700 in the Education Fund, while grants amounting to £750 have been made to sundry necessitous and worthy Mark Masons. At the present time seven boys were being educated, at an annual expense of from £67 to £70, while the total cost of management, collection, and distribution had not exceeded the latter sum. This he considered to be in the highest degree creditable to the Executive; while, as regards the Fund itself, he could not speak too highly of the value of the good work it was doing, and consequently could not speak too strongly in commending it to the notice and support of the ladies and brethren present.

Bro. Binckes, in an eloquent speech, expressed the obligations which all Mark Masons were under to his lordship for having taken the chair on the occasion. He could have wished that some one else had been chosen to respond, as it was hardly possible for him to speak in terms that were otherwise than stereotyped. He pointed out, however, the great interest which members of the Mark Degree took in the great Masonic Institutions, and also that the Mark Grand Lodge had not inaugurated a new degree, but had merely been conserving the old. The Mark Degree was as authentic as any other, and was equally, with others, stimulated by the principle of Charity. Hence the Fund, which subsidised, as it were, what was being done by the Craft. As to the Festival, it was the Fifteenth Anniversary, and he thanked the brethren for having tendered their services on the occasion. He also alluded to the differences that formerly existed, which had been the subject of comment by Bro. Matier, and concluded by expressing his heartiest good wishes in behalf of the Degree in England, Scotland, and Wales, and wherever else established.

Bro. Dewar then read out the following list of Stewards' contributions, amounting to £528 11s 6d, namely:—

Be it added, that Bro. W. Ganz, P.G. Organist, had under his direction the musical arrangements, which gave the utmost satisfaction, and in which he was assisted by Bros. Collins, Thompson, Kift, and Egbert Roberts.

SUMMER BANQUET OF PROSPERITY LODGE, No. 65.

THIS event was celebrated at the Star and Garter Hotel, Richmond, on Wednesday, and passed off with the same success as in former years. The weather was delightful, and a muster of one hundred ladies and brethren seems almost small under the circumstances, especially if we keep in mind the great and well deserved popularity of the Lodge. However, leaving the mere numbers out of the question, beautiful scenery, bright sunshine, and a popular Master, were conditions favourable to the day's enjoyment, and, thanks to the kind and fraternal offices of Bros. Roberts W.M., and G. T. Brown Secretary, with their aids, there was not even a single moment's break in the day's enjoyment. As a matter of course the W.M. presided at the banquet, and—especially as a matter of course—he was supported by his Wardens, Bros. Schadler and Rich. Little need be said of the menu, beyond the fact that it was in all respects worthy of the proprietors of this famous hostelry, and was appreciated by the guests. When justice had been done to the good things provided, sundry toasts were honoured, the most prominent among them being those of the Master, the Past Masters, the Visitors, and the Ladies. Each of these in turn elicited hearty shouts of approval. Dancing, later in the evening, brought the festive gathering to a close, and the brethren and their friends returned to town, after having spent a most agreeable day.

ALEXANDRA PALACE.

AN unusual large number of persons attended the Palace last Wednesday evening, to witness the first representation of Mr. Pain's latest novelty, the Bombardment of Alexandria. The Egyptian Forts are first seen; the ships of England are then discovered, and a fierce cannonading ensues, accompanied by a perpetual rattle from the Gattling Guns. The Forts and Batteries are soon reduced, and a tremendous explosion of Magazines forms a very effective and appropriate termination. Previous to the engagement, an extensive display of fireworks, and illumination of the Park, with variegated lights and Magnesium Balloons, attracted general admiration, and comprised flights of Rockets with floating lights forming Aerial Bouquets, Great Golden Clouds, Girandoles, Tourbillions, and flights of Shells, &c. including the latest introduction of Pyrotechny, the Rayour d'Or rockets.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

CAMDEN LODGE, No. 704.

THERE was a goodly assemblage at this Lodge on Tuesday evening, at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street, to witness the installation of Bro. Dr. Nathaniel Goodchild as Worshipful Master for the ensuing year. Lodge was opened with the customary formalities soon after three o'clock, under the presidency of the retiring W. Master Bro. Frederick William Rogers, who was well supported by his Officers. Amongst the Past Masters present were Bros. J. N. Frost, A. Pocklington, H. C. Soper, and W. Gray. The Visitors included Bros. S. M. Lazarus P.M. 539 P.G.W. Wilts, J. D. Collier P.M. 1366, H. E. Coffin 167, G. J. Reynolds 1524, K. Wyland 706, H. E. Kirby 554, Henry Preston 1319, Henry Parker 1319, A. Vogri, and many others. The minutes of last meeting having been confirmed, Lodge was advanced, and Bro. Rintoul having proved himself worthy, was raised to the sublime degree by the Wor. Master, who performed the impressive ceremony with his accustomed ability. Having lowered to the second degree, Bro. Rose was passed, the same remark applying to the work here as in the former rite. Resuming in the first, the ballot was opened for Mr. Francis Izant, of High Holborn, whose sponsors were Bros. Sayers and W. H. Kehl. The voting unanimously in favour, Mr. Izant was duly initiated into the privileges and mysteries of the Order, the ceremony being admirably gone through. Bro. Dr. Nathaniel Goodchild was then presented as the Worshipful Master elect; and, having assented to the various interrogations, a Body of Installed Masters was duly constituted, and he was inducted with all honours into the chair of K.S. On readmission of the brethren he was proclaimed and saluted with the customary honours, Bro. Rogers acting most efficiently as Installing Officer, and delivering the solemn charges with much effect. The newly-installed Worshipful Master then invested his Officers for the ensuing year, the collars being thus bestowed:—Bros. W. F. Rogers I.P.M., T. Blank S.W., F. Ince J.W., Edward Wm. Young P.M. Sec., G. Britten P.M. Treasurer, F. Trinder S.D., J. Bindon J.D., W. H. Kehl I.G., H. Howe M.C., Geo. Osborn Organist, J. Very Tyler. After the transaction of some formal business, Lodge was closed in form, and the brethren and visitors adjourned to the throne-room of the hotel, where a sumptuous banquet was provided by Messrs. Ritter and Clifford, the arrangements, under the personal superintendence of Bro. Henry Mills, eliciting unbounded expressions of appreciation. The usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, the health of the newly-installed Worshipful Master being received with special enthusiasm, testifying to his deserved popularity amongst all the brethren of the Lodge. The proceedings, which were of the most harmonious and enjoyable description, were enlivened by some excellent vocal and instrumental music, in which several professional ladies and gentlemen took a prominent and effective part.

The lecture on the tracing board in the second degree was delivered by the Preceptor, and gave general satisfaction. Lodge was closed to the first degree, and the brethren received some useful instruction in the proper mode of entering an open Lodge in the several degrees. Bro. Henry Baldwin was elected W.M. for the ensuing week, and will be encouraged by a good attendance on the 21st, when working the ceremony and lectures of the third degree. The Lodge was then closed in customary form.

UNITED SERVICE LODGE, No. 1428.

ON Friday afternoon, in the presence of a number of W.M.'s and other members of the Craft, Bro. J. Laverty was installed W.M. of this Lodge. A handsome P.M.'s jewel was presented to the retiring W.M. The jewel bore the following inscription:—

"Presented by the members of the United Service Lodge, No. 1428, to Bro. G. P. Arnold P.M., on his retiring from the chair, as a token of esteem and regard. 1881-82."

St. John's Lodge of Instruction, No. 1564.—A meeting was held at the Prince of Wales Hotel, Knaphill, on 12th instant, when the first two sections of the first lecture were worked by the Preceptor and six brethren of the Lodge. The Preceptor (Bro. J. Webster P.D.G.J.W. Gibraltar) having stated in an address that perhaps there were some brethren present who were not acquainted with the qualifications necessary for members of Provincial Grand Lodge, proceeded to read extracts from Oliver's "Jurisprudence" on the subject, which were listened to with great interest by the brethren. This Lodge of Instruction is in a flourishing condition, and has proved of great service to members of the regular Lodge.

Lodge was then opened in the second and third, and resumed to the first degree. The W.M. ably rehearsed the ceremony of initiation, with Bro. Moss as candidate, giving the charge. He also rehearsed the ceremony of raising, with Bro. Albert as candidate. Lodge was closed in the third and second degrees. The following brethren were unanimously elected members of the Lodge:—Bros. James Hill Skelmersdale 1658, J. Bate Jubilee 72, Thomas Harris Stockwell, H. C. E. Hill Skelmersdale 1658. Bro. T. C. Edmonds was appointed W.M. for the ensuing week, and Lodge was closed in due form. We are gratified to see the progress this new Lodge of Instruction is making. As many of our readers, by reason of this being "recess" season, are unable to attend their regular haunts, we can cordially recommend them to pay the Brixton Craftsmen a visit.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Any dyspeptic sufferer aware of the purifying, regulating, and gently aperient powers of these Pills should permit no one to cloud his judgment or to warp his course. With a box of Holloway's Pills, and attention to its accompanying directions, he may feel thoroughly satisfied that he can safely and effectually release himself from his miseries without impairing his appetite or weakening his digestion. This most excellent medicine acts as a nervine and bodily tonic by aiding nutrition, and banishes a thousand annoying forms of nervous complaints. An occasional resort to Holloway's remedy will prove highly salutary to all persons, whether well or ill, whose digestion is slow or imperfect, a condition usually evidenced by weariness, languor, listlessness, and despondency.

HARBOURS OF REFUGE.—A Society has been formed for the promotion of Increased Places of Safety on our Coasts for Fishermen and Mariners. The splendid Society, the Royal National Life-boat Institution, saves 500 lives per annum; but, in spite of this, there are about 800 lives lost each year. It is desired to save as many of this latter number as possible. An influential Committee has been formed to carry out this object, and it is supported by the Duke of Teck, by fifty Peers, the Archbishops, twelve of the Bishops, and nearly 200 Members of Parliament. The purpose of the Society is to direct public attention to the existing national calamity, to arrange deputations and public meetings, and to carry out the work arranged by the Committee. The Prince of Wales, on his recent visit to Hastings, in reply to an address from the fishermen, expressed great sympathy with the movement, he himself having a brother and two sons exposed to the perils it is sought to mitigate. The Rev. James Weller, of Amersham, and the Rev. G. Roy Badenoch, LL.D., Whitehall-gardens, have been amongst the earliest workers for this object; and Mr. F. Johnson, of St. Leonard's-on-Sea, the Hon. Secretary, was the original organiser. It is hoped that the public will subscribe liberally in support of so noble and patriotic an undertaking, a work which cannot fail to enlist the warmest sympathy of the English people. If energetically supported, the Committee have every hope and prospect of success. Subscriptions should be forwarded to Mr. F. Johnson, the Hon. Secretary. Cheques crossed London and County Bank, Hastings Branch.—Illustrated London News, 15th July 1882.

SCOTTISH FREEMASONRY IN INDIA.

THE Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge of All Scottish Freemasonry in India was held, according to the Masonic Record of Western India, in Freemasons' Hall, Nesbit lane, Byculla, Bombay, on the 22nd April 1882, under the presidency of M W. Bro. Mackintosh Balfour, Grand Master, who was supported by Bros. Captain Henry Morland Immediate Past Grand Master, Manocjee Cursetjee Hon. Past Dep. G. Master, Khan Bahadoor J. D. Wadia Hon. Past Dep. G. Master, Khan Bahadoor M. C. Murzban Hon. Past Sub. G. Master, J. Y. Lang Sub. G. Master, Darasha R. Chichgar Grand S.W., J. R. Johnson Grand J.W., C. D. Furdoonjee Grand J.W., R. V. Reid Grand Senior Deacon, D. B. Metha P. Grand S.W. as Grand J.D., W. Rodger Grand J.D., A. B. Anderson G. Chaplain, Capt. Babington Peile Asst. G. Chaplain, E. Freeborn G. Secretary, Darasha S. Sarapoorwalla G. Treasurer, H. B. Mactaggart Asst. G. Secretary, D. D. Shroff G. Jeweller, D. Bhicajee G.Z A. Bearer, M. Cowser G.K. Bearer, H. R. Lacey G. Organist, Meerza Hoossein Khan 1st Grand Marshal, Meer Abdool Allee, Khan Bahadoor, 2nd Grand Marshal, N. M. Panday as G. Inner Guard, J. C. Houghland Grand Tyler, and others. Grand Lodge having been opened, and the minutes of the previous Quarterly Communication read and confirmed, the G. Master announced, with great regret, that the office of Deputy Grand Master was vacant, Bro Maxwell having left India not to return. He therefore appointed Bro. Lang, the Sub. G.M., to be Depute Grand Master, and Bro. M. C. Murzban to be Sub Grand Master. Bro. N. M. Panday was appointed Grand Inner Guard, the former occupant of that office having resigned in consequence of inability to attend to his duties. These brethren and Captain Babington Peile Asst. Grand Chaplain having been duly invested, the Grand Secretary then read his annual report, from which it appeared that there were thirty-one, instead of thirty, Lodges on the roll of the Grand Lodge, but of these three were in abeyance, though it was possible and he was in hopes, that one of the three would once again be in working order. With these exceptions, the Lodges were doing fairly, those in Bombay especially having prospered during the year. The statement of the work done by each Lodge showed that last year there were on the roll members amounting in number in the aggregate to 654, whereas in 1880 there were but 619; in 1879, 613; and in 1878, 524. There had consequently been an increase of 130 members in the brief period of four years. The accounts also were sstisfactory. The General Fund showing an excess of 200 rupees in the cash balance, while over 1642 rupees had been received in the shape of donations from Masonic bodies and brethren for the Fund of Benevolence. To be more precise. The General Fund showed receipts, including a balance brought forward from last year of over 3,520 rupees, amounting to over 6,021 rupees. The expenditure was over 2,309 rupees, so that there remained in hand at the end of the year just a slight fraction over 3,719 rupees. As to the Scottish Freemasons' Benevolent Society, the year was begun with a balance to the good of upwards of 6,279 rupees, which, with the donations, &c., received, gave a total in round figures, of 8,297 rupees on the Dr. side of the account. Only 520 rupees had been disbursed, so that the balance at the close of the year was 7,777 rupees. As to the receipts and disbursements on account of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, the former, including the balance from previous year, amounted to 1,522 rupees, and the latter to 1,511 rupees, over ten rupees remaining to carry forward to 1882. Grand Secretary further submitted a statement of account of the Freemasons' Hall Committee, from which it appears that the Balance of the previous year was, in round figures, 3,502 rupees, and the receipts 8,408 rupees, making a total of 11,910 rupees, while the expenditure amounted to no more than 6,409 rupees, leaving a balance in bank and Treasurer's hands of 5,501 rupees. On the motion of the Immediate Past Grand Master, seconded by the Grand Master, the Report was unanimously adopted.

G. Master Balfour then rose and addressed the brethren. At the outset he congratulated them on the satisfactory report which had been just read to them and especially on the flourishing condition of the Scottish Freemasons' Benevolent Society. He alluded to the dastardly attempt which, since the last Communication, had been made on the life of Her Majesty the Queen, and explained the reasons that had induced him not to call them together specially to offer their congratulations, in the form of an address, to Her Majesty at her providential escape from the hands of the assassin. He had considered that the Grand Lodge of Scotland would act, as she had done, on behalf of the whole body of Scottish Freemasons. Bro. Balfour next alluded to his intention of moving a resolution inviting R.W. Bro. Manockjee Cursetjee, the Father of Freemasonry among the native gentlemen of India, to sit for his portrait, his object in so doing being to fulfil a promise he had announced, at the great National Festival of the Parsees, to the many brethren who were present on that occasion, of presenting a portrait of that R. Worshipful and respected Brother to be hung up in their Freemasons' Hall as a perpetual memorial of his excellence. Not many years have elapsed since the reception into Freemasonry of members of the Hindoo community had become possible. The prejudices of caste had been strong, but, thanks to the kindly spirit and zeal of Bro. Cursetjee, those prejudices and the difficulties they had entailed had been overcome, and now the members of the different creeds were able to meet together and formed a very happy family. Bro. Cursetjee had been initiated in Paris, and in Bombay had been a contemporary of and collaborator with the late Bro. Burns, the first Grand Master in India under the Scottish Constitution. He had introduced a kind of free trade in Masonry, and what was more to the purpose free trade in female education on that side of India at least. All knew the interest he took in the Alexandra School, and his (Bro. Balfour's) wish in presenting the portrait, and having it hung in their Hall, was, to show that Grand Lodge knew how to honour those who deserved honour at its hands, and that years hence, when they had all passed away, the picture might be pointed out as exhibiting the counterfeit presentment of the Brother who had introduced Freemasonry among the native Indian gentlemen. By way of concluding his address, the G.M. announced that, as his term of agreement with the Bank of Bombay would expire next year, he should quit India, and return to his native land; and as he conceived it to be imprudent to leave everything to the last, it was his intention at once to resign his office, so that the brethren might have ample time to make choice of a successor, the reins of office being held in the interim by his immediate predecessor in the chair. Bro. Balfour then moved that Right Worshipful Brother

Manockjee Cursetjee be invited to sit for his portrait, and that it be hung up in Freemasons' Hall. The proposition having been seconded by Bro. Captain Morland I.P.G.M., and carried by acclamation amid great enthusiasm, Bro. Manockjee Cursetjee rose and said it would be affectation on his part not to feel extremely gratified for the honour done him — an honour which was all the greater because it had come upon him unexpectedly, and he considered it a great privilege that that honour had been conferred by the M.W. Grand Master in a manner so gratifying. Bro. Morland next rose for the purpose of expressing the mingled feelings of regret and happiness he experienced at the announcement by the M.W. Grand Master of his resignation of office. It was, he said, much to be regretted that they were about to lose the personal presence and personal friendship of one whom they had learnt to esteem and respect for years past. At the same time it was a happy circumstance that he was about to be restored to his family and to his friends, and to the land of his birth, where he would be able to recruit his health, in a measure injured by a long residence in an Indian climate. He hoped that the Most Worshipful the Grand Master would soon be restored to his pristine vigour, and enjoy his old age amongst his friends and relations. As to his (Bro. Morland's) resumption to the Hiram, he was by no means anxious to hold it. They all knew the old saying, "Uneasy is the head that wears a crown," and the honourable position of Grand Master was not without its anxieties. He would not shirk the honour if it were bestowed upon him, for it had been his great aim ever since he had been a Mason under the Scotch banner to do all in his power to promote the integrity and honour of the Scottish constitution. He trusted, however, they would, in the exercise of their unbiassed judgment, select the brother they considered fittest for the office. Letters of thanks from Bros. the Earl of Haddington and Sir James Fergusson for the votes of condolence with them in their bereavement were read, and directed to be recorded on the minutes, after which the report of the Standing Committee was read and confirmed, and other business of purely local interest having been dispatched, Grand Lodge was closed in ample form, and the brethren separated.

A QUIET DAY IN THE COUNTRY AMONG THE ROACH AND DACE.

By a Non-Professional Brother.

THAT there are spots of surpassing loveliness in the county of Surrey I had always understood; and of the truth of the assertion I have now no reason to doubt, having had confirmation of the fact in the most agreeable and unexpected fashion. To a man such as I am, "in populous city pent," a whiff of the pure country air, and a peep at green fields and luxuriant woods, are in themselves a treat; but when the pleasure is enhanced by the addition of good sport and unbounded hospitality, it leaves an impression upon the mind not easily to be forgotten.

I am not going to indicate the precise locality of which I am about to speak, for it is certain I could not place my finger upon the exact spot upon the map if I tried. But this I will say, that although, when the days were young, I have revelled amongst some of the finest scenery of which the country can boast, I had never discovered a spot so full of quiet romantic beauty, so exquisitely lovely in its serenity and isolation from the world as that upon which I feasted my enraptured gaze last week.

"Come down and have a day's fishing," was the terse invitation I received that brilliant Wednesday afternoon when quitting my musty chambers in Lincoln's Inn Fields for a breath of air on a day when the birds were chirruping and Nature seemed donning her brightest livery. "I can't promise you much sport; but what is wanting in that respect we will endeavour to make up in other ways."

It needed no second invite, for London was unbearable, and one could scarcely reconcile oneself to the soft warm winds and the pellucid skies which seduced one away to the fresh woods and pastures new which must needs be found within a few miles' ride from the monotonous hum of the metropolis. So, putting hastily together my old friend Rod, which had not been used for I am afraid to say how long, and trusting to my host to supply the rest, I took train early next morning for Redhill, previously announcing my advent by telegram.

We had just an hour to inspect the pretty little town—grown out of knowledge since I had visited it twenty years ago—and to note the signs of increasing prosperity it presented on all sides. Instead of a few houses dotted about here and there, commanding streets have grown up, with shops as natty and thriving-looking as one could wish to see in any flourishing suburb of ever-outstretching London; whilst the surroundings are fringed with pretty villas and gardens such as the City man loves, when the din and bustle of office work are over.

'Cute and business-like as I found those of the tradesmen and others with whom I conversed to be, there appeared to be a creditable absence of that "sticking it on" principle in the prices charged to strangers that often renders country towns so devoutly to be avoided.

On resting a-while at the Railway Hotel—reminding one very much of a recherché little Swiss cottage, only that the tariff and cuisine are very much to be preferred here—we found in mine host, Bro. Laker, the very personification of a bluff, good-humoured English landlord; and, but for the fear that he may read these lines, I might be tempted to say much more about his charming little villa-like hotel, close by the railway, and belted with pretty gardens and flower beds, whilst the interior scenery of the establishment presents an air of quiet luxury and ease. I can only in this brief sketch say this much, and advise any who are seeking country retirement and real enjoyment to "put my principles to the test."

After smoking a quiet cigar at the prettily embowered window, from which the rising sand-hills and heavily-wooded landscape around Redhill can be seen to perfection, our dog-cart was ready, and off we started.

Right on, past the villa-terraced slopes, and over the undulating country, through the stately old town of Reigate and far out beyond the heath, where the windmills were flinging their gaunt arms around, as if in gleeful welcome to summer breezes, until we reached my friend's abode. The village hostelry, from which the aforesaid invitation had come, stands a little aside from the highway, and is literally in itself a sylvan retreat. But more of that anon.

Our tackle had been all got ready, and there was no time to waste, for the slight showers of the few preceding nights had just coloured the water and given our finny friends an appetite.

Winding our way through some tangled underwood, amidst which huge trunks of trees lay ready for the sawyer, in order to relieve the almost forest growth, a broad expanse of ornamental water burst suddenly upon our view in a scene of almost entrancing loveliness. But so completely had it been shut in by the thickly-tangled branches of the trees that no passer along the public road adjacent would ever have dreamt of the existence of so splendid a scene—fit theme for the pencil of an artist.

On the glassy bosom of the lake, in which were reflected a myriad fantastic forms and shades of green from the surrounding foliage, water lilies lay like a thick carpet, rosetted with gold, the swans sailed round and round in their majestic circles, whilst from the recesses of the mossy banks, shaded by boughs which bent over to lave in the cool water, moorhens and other wild fowl gambolled in all the gladness of their tranquil freedom.

"This is about the best spot, I fancy," observed my host, whose name by the bye is Bro. Bill, and by which cognomen he be henceforth known. "The water is over ten feet deep, and the old gardener tells me, now that the pike are spawning, up in the shallows yonder, the roach and dace have leisure to grow fat, under their own oak and elm-tree, none daring to make them afraid."

So saying, we stepped into the boat which was moored under the rustic boat-house, just as the sun was rising over the tree-tops, gilding the edges of the light green buds and leaves, and glistening down upon the tiny wavelets that the wind raised upon the surface of the water.

"Rather slow," quoth I, as the first quarter of an hour passed without a nibble, "and the fellow was right who described a fishing-rod as having a hook at one end and a fool at the other."

"Patience, my boy," rejoined Bro. Bill, "is one of the lessons inculcated by old Izaak Walton. You should couple that maxim with another, imputed by Charles Dickens to Squeers, the Schoolmaster, when he enjoined upon his hungry pupils to 'moderate their transports.'"

Ah! bob goes the float, sailing gently out from the shore. Now strike! Aye! how the little rascal fights, turning his finny broadside in a curve to the water. Gently, now, for the tackle is very fine, and the least turn of the wrist may do it. Here she comes, in graceful rings, until close by the side, and in a twinkling a half-pound roach is beating a merry tattoo upon the floor of the boat, making a sound that is music in the angler's ear.

"My turn next," says Bro. Bill, as the float was bobbing up and down at a furious rate. "They're at it now. You see the value of patience, my boy!" Confound the tough little urchin, he has got underneath a sunken branch in the water, and means to break my line! No; here he comes again, and by an adroit twist the capture was soon made, in the form of a handsome perch.

There you are again, both at once this time. Now, be very careful, for yours is a big one. Heigho! how he resists. Give him plenty of line. That's it. Now he comes, and sure enough we presently had a quartette of as pretty fish, though small, as ever gave a whet to the angler's appetite.

A short lull, during which old friendships and old adventures were recounted, recalling the pleasantries of schoolboy days, when away goes the float again; the line tightens and the wheel whizzes round. By Jove! a shark this time, old man! Steady, or you'll lose him. Twice as he neared the boat we could see his silvery sides glistening in the sunlight, but he does'nt mean to capitulate without a tussle. Off again, into the unseen depths, only to return and wink at us in mischievous glee, and then with a plunge away he goes, carrying the hook and a yard of gut with him.

"Lost! by all that's blue!" we shout in unison. "It must have been a whacker."

By the bye, it always is a "whacker" when you lose a fish.

Never mind, there is no good in moralising. "There you are again, Bill!" and away goes the line on the other side, my companion, more dexterous than I had been, landing a rotund dace, in splendid condition.

Thus the game went on, with alternate luck and quiet, the scene all bathed in the golden sunny hues, and affording ample time for reminiscences and cheerful reflection, mingled with not a thought of business care or moody melancholy. On the gentle breeze came wafted the sweet country odours, almost overpowering in their delicious fragrance, and we could scarcely help repeating the old lines, slightly varied :—

"Sweet, sweet is the scent of the newly-mown hay,
Gently borne by the breeze on a bright summer's day;
And cool is the sound of the musical plash
Of the fish, as he plays with a dart and a dash.
'Tis joy then to linger in gay golden hours,
And dream 'midst the hues of the bright-tinted flowers."

At such a time as this, though the sport, as my old friend promised at the outset, "wasn't much," there is such a charm in the surroundings as induces in the mind of the town-worried man a happy knack of forgetting the petty passages of life, which, by the way, taken as a whole, are seldom worth remembering. The warmth and stillness of the day reminded me—perhaps from the mere force of contrast—of the pitiless buffetings of the whirl of business life. I roused myself to listen to the deep coo of the wood-pigeon in the neighbouring copse, to admire the thrush in the full tide of love and song, to marvel whether the fortunes men are so eternally striving after are really worth all the care, anxiety, and long laborious hours that scrape capital together, coin by coin, perhaps never to enjoy it after all. Thence once more, mechanically, I fall into the old luxurious position, watching my float through the wreaths that curl upwards from my fragrant pipe, and take up the thread of my cogitations, precisely where I left it. A rustling in the adjacent bushes, and a voice calling from the green recesses of the wood, reminds us that dinner is ready; and even amongst such philosophic meditations as I have shadowed forth, the inner man will insist upon his share of attention. I really believe with Byron that a man

"When hungry just then would take,
Like Esau, for his birthright, a beefsteak!"

If the difference between your stuffy London streets and offices and the open-spaced country is so marked and welcome, none the less so is the bill of fare at a rustic roadside inn, and at your restaurant, broiling hot, and savouring of a thousand odours from the lower regions of the culinary department underground.

Here we have perfect little mountains of roses, freshly gathered from the gardens just outside, whilst the summer breeze blows in at the open window the long green tendrils of the creeping plants which sport about the casement, and give room for coy peeps every now and then at the bright parterre of flowers outside, whilst the air is redolent of a myriad delicious scents. The poultry and the joints, the peas, potatoes, and asparagus, are all of "our own rearing," for mine host is a little bit of a farmer in his way, besides a professional caterer for the inner requirements of man and beast. And, moreover, at the head of the table, smiling cheerily on the assembled group of visitors, is one "Who can mix a lobster salad,

Or troll out the latest ballad;
Who can flirt or pull a pair of sculls, all equally with ease!"

And so, with hilarious happiness the cosy little dinner was discussed; and, by the bye, it was served as I had seldom seen a dinner served before. None of your stiff, starchy waiters—half gardeners, half flunkies—but by sedate maids, dressed in cleanly prints, and moving about noiselessly, with no impertinent "Duck, sir? Yessir!" "Peas, sir? Yessir!" and the like, which come in as the inevitable katsup to a City luncheon. Whether it was the admirable quality of the feast or the ripple of sparkling conversation that made it so difficult to get away from that table, I am in a quandary to say; but I know the lobster salad was delightful, and the Cliquot, with which we washed it down, was by no means to be despised.

Back again to our fishing ground, to find both floats gone below, the reason of which we soon ascertained to be a fish that had wily intentions of nibbling our bait whilst we were away; and so on through the cool evening into twilight, with just enough exercise to break the monotony, with nothing to tire or over excite.

"This is just the sort of day I enjoy," observed Bro. Bill, after counting up the basket, and finding we had just one hundred and seventeen, of all sorts and sizes; and in his view of the matter I most heartily concur.

The man came to "pack up," and though the spoil was scarcely worth the trouble of lugging all the way to town, I could not resist the temptation, and having laid them aside, with orders to be taken to the station in time for the first train up in the morning. It was now some two hours since dinner, and we were glad to plead one of the many excuses for drinking—

"A friend, good wine, or being dry—
Or lest we should be, by and bye—
Or any other reason why!"

Just then a sound of rough, though pleasant, melody came stealing through the house, and the clinking of glasses, followed by applause, told of a festive gathering not far off.

"Just come round and see the rustics enjoying themselves," was the invitation of mine host.

"With all my heart!" and as we entered the room, the company, almost invisible at first, through clouds of smoke, respectfully made way for the "guv'nor" and myself, and the harmony went on as gaily as before.

There is the "Chairman," sitting on the seat of honour, and preserving "order" by frequent raps on the table with the butt-end of a large corkscrew, whilst the "gentleman" on whom he has called gazes fixedly on the ceiling as he relates in song how that somebody's bright eyes haunt him still, for which he is rewarded with a unanimous nod all round, and the exclamation in unison, "Your health and song, sir." Whereupon the complimented one rises and expectorates before delivering himself of the profound but magnanimous sentiment—"A leg o'mutton in Reigate Union, and nobody there to eat it." The joke is rewarded with genuine guffaws, and the gentleman, who then sits down with all his blushing honours thick upon him, is "entitled to a call." He accordingly picks out somebody who has "a singing face," but the gentleman thus adulated blushes and declares he has a "terrible cold," and, "never sang a song in all his life!" After a little coaxing, however, he looks very fixedly and solemnly at nothing, and trolls out "Come to your Martha, do," in the course of which he gives some very pathetic reminiscences of the bathing season at Margate, at which the company laugh consumedly. Then there is another toast, something about having "those in our arms whom we love in our hearts," which evokes a general murmur of satisfaction; and in turn another gentleman and yet another is "called," the penalty for non-compliance being "glasses round."

The penalty, so far as I could learn, is seldom incurred, and it has never yet been known to have been paid.

Thus, in alternation of song and sentiment, the "natives," who appeared to be a steady, easy-going set of working men—a pleasant contrast to the sottish, rollicking fellows of their ilk whom you find in town—enjoyed themselves "within the limits of becoming mirth," and at ten o'clock, the hour fixed by the licensing justices for closing in the country, they withdrew, amidst mutual expressions of friendship and anticipations of their "next merry meeting."

"Nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep," came with kindly stealth that night, and it was not until the swallows twittered around my little window, through which the sun was shining gloriously, that I arose, buoyant and refreshed, and started for town, but not without the distinct avowal that I would "come again," which decidedly I mean to do as soon as possible.

It may be said that, although we had enough sport to keep us alive, the "fishing wasn't much." But, true to his promise, Bro. Bill and his friend, "made it up in other ways."

And, as I sit by my own window, with the setting sun lighting up the distant spires and chimney pots, which are my only panorama, I often think how the "poor angler" is vilified by those who take no pleasure in the pursuit.

Let them! When I hear them scoffed at for being unlucky, I have a shrewd idea that, somehow or other, they always get safely out of their troubles, and in the end usually spend a merry evening in very agreeable society.

A meeting of the General Committe of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls was held on Thursday, at Freemasons' Hall, under the presidency of Col. Creaton, when there were also present Bros. Woodford, Tattershall, Letchworth, Rucker, Dubois, Gladwell, Caney, C. G. Brown, Webb, Barton, Spooner, Hedges Secretary, E. C. Massey. The minutes of the General Committee of 29th June were read and verified, and the minutes of the Joint Committee as to proposed alteration of the days of election, the Quarterly General Court of 8th instant, and the House Committee of same date, were read for information. The expenditure of £241 recommended by the House Committee for inside painting of the School buildings and the Infirmary, was authorised; also some alterations for improving the ventilation of the Dining and Committee rooms. The Secretary reported that the work of examining the system of drainage at the Schools had been commenced. Bro. Col. Leach's offer of further assistance in the matter had been accepted, and the House Committee had made arrangements so that no unnecessary delay could occur in completing the work. The opinion of the Grand Registrar, Bro. Æneas McIntyre, Q.C., upon the question, whether a girl who has a sister in these Schools, could be admitted by purchase. Bro. McIntyre's opinion is that, according to the rules as they now stand, there is nothing to prevent such admission by purchase; he is also of opinion that in cases of purchase a petition is unnecessary, and that if her birth qualification is established, she can be admitted. This opinion having been read and ordered to be entered on the minutes, it was proposed by Bro. Dubois, seconded by Bro. Letchworth, that the opinion be acted upon in the case of Fanny Wright, who had been brought forward by Bro. Molesworth; whereupon it was moved by Bro. C. G. Brown, and seconded, that the question be deferred until after the next meeting of the Quarterly Court. On being put to the vote, the amendment was lost; and the original motion was afterwards carried by a large majority. Bro. Rucker gave notice of motion for the Quarterly Court, that a gratuity of thirty-five guineas be given to Miss Griggs, one of the assistant governesses, who had been appointed mistress of the Dublin Masonic Female School, after having been in the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls for a period of twenty years.

The Last Punic War. Tunis, Past and Present, with a narrative of the French Conquest of the Regency. By A. M. Broadley, Barrister-at-law, correspondent of the "Times" during the War in Tunis. In Two Volumes. With illustrations. William Blackwood and Sons: Edinburgh and London, 1882.

It is a trite old saying that there is no rule without an exception, and from the rule indicated by Shakespeare in the oft-quoted passage, "What's in a name"? A rose by any other name, would smell as sweet, we must take the liberty of excepting this work of Bro. Broadley's. We do not mean to say it would have proved more or less agreeable reading had he contented himself with his second title of "Tunis, Past and Present" or that it would have been a subject more or less worthy of study. We do say, however, that it was a happy thought, indeed the happiest of happy thoughts, which inspired him to bestow upon it the title of "The last Punic War." Not so much because it brings vividly to our recollection early studies of Roman history and the often far from agreeable reminiscences associated therewith. It is, of course, a pleasant task to renew our acquaintance, as it were, with the story of Regulus, the stern old Roman General, who voluntarily gave himself up to what he knew was certain and a painful death, in order he might serve his country; to follow Hannibal through his grand campaigns in Spain and Italy to his ultimate overthrow at Zama by Scipio Africanus the elder; to recal the stern dictum of Cato, the Censor, uttered in the Senate on every occasion, whether seasonable or unseasonable, "Delenda est Carthago;" to recal the treacherous conduct of the Romans in the last years of the doomed city—conduct which throws into the shade that habitual treachery of its people which has passed into a proverb; the patriotism exhibited by the Carthaginian women when it became apparent that all the yielding on the part of their countrymen would not suffice to save the city from destruction; the gallant fight they made in the final struggle, and the ultimate destruction of the city by Scipio Africanus the younger. All this it is a pleasant task to recal, nor is the story of Marius sitting amid the ruins of the ill-fated city, an appropriate illustration of fallen greatness, a whit less impressive now than it was in the days of our boyhood. Equally agreeable is it to recal the fabled story of fair Queen Dido, her hospitable reception of pious Æneas and his Trojan following, the sorry return he made for that hospitable reception, and the tragic end of the abandoned Queen. These reminiscences are, we repeat, most pleasant, even where the circumstances which surround sundry of them are calculated to excite our sympathy or even anger, for they carry us back to the pleasantest period of life, when as yet we had known no care or anxiety of any serious moment. Not for this reason, however, do we congratulate Bro. Broadley on the selection of his title, but because it is suggestive of the once commercial importance of this part of Africa, and leads to the reflection that a country, which centuries since was the chief commercial state in the world, might, under a stable government, resume some of that greatness. Carthage, was of Phœnician origin, and the Phœnicians were the great colonisers of ancient times, the people to whom, next to the Egyptians, we are chiefly indebted for the spread of commerce and the attendant blessings of civilisation. The story of the "Last Punic War," as told in the pages of the Roman historian, tells us of the end of the great Phœnician colony. The story of "The Last Punic War," as told by Bro. Broadley, reminds us that the country about Tunis and the site of Ancient Carthage possesses even now all the advantages of a grand emporium of commerce, fully as much as it did in the days of the Hasdrubs, the Hamilcars, the Hannos, and other Carthaginians of eminence. No doubt the French were influenced, by a knowledge of this fact, as much as by their desire to extend their influence in North Africa, and strengthen their position as a Mediterranean power, to embark in the expedition which has virtually done away with the Turkish régime; and it is this which should influence the Government of the greatest commercial empire of ancient and modern times and induce her to watch with a wary eye the proceedings of our Gallic neighbours. However, if we trespass further on this part of the Tunisian question we shall get ourselves involved in the intricacies of an important political problem. Without further preface, therefore, let us betake ourselves to a consideration of Bro. Broadley's valuable and interesting work.

The great charm of Bro. Broadley's style is its simplicity and conciseness. Many an author would have been tempted by the numerous historical associations connected with the country to enlarge upon his subject and write discursively. Bro. Broadley, however, to his credit be it said, has refrained from such a course, and following the good old Horatian maxim, has plunged at once into the question which has led to his writing at all, only so much introductory matter being dealt with as was necessary in order to make clear the tenour of his story. Thus, in the opening chapter, he treats of the "Topography of Tunis," and in the course of his remarks makes clear, what never for a moment can have been in doubt, the commercial importance of the country. Thus he quotes Commandant Villot to the effect that "if the Tunis lake were only dredged and deepened, and the coast fortified, and if a powerful navy were stationed in the Tunisian roadstead, not only the path to Egypt, but the road to India through the Suez canal would once more be closed to the people of the West." He further quotes Mr. Perry as responsible for the statement: "Tunis has the finest position in North Africa. Commercial preponderance and the control of the Mediterranean are the attractions for the Powers which dispute with each other for its possession or its neutralisation." Of the country itself, he observes that "its mineral wealth is almost unequalled. The rocks of Tunis yield nearly all minerals except gold." Again, "the coast is generally low and sandy, but the land which immediately borders it is almost invariably fertile and productive. The salient features of the Tunisian Tell are vast expanses covered sometimes with esparto grass and sometimes with a layer of thin soil. In the winter the vegetation is abundant and luxuriant; in the summer everything is scorched up by the pitiless African sun."

A Chapter on the "Dwellers in Tunisia," is followed by a short sketch of the Moslem history of the country from A.D. 648 to A.D. 1535. This he divides into three periods, the first being the "Period of Power, the second that of Piracy, and the third that of Decay." The "Conquest of Tunis by Charles V." forms the subject of Chapter IV. The story is well told, but the great feature in connection with this section of the work is the series of five photographs representing as many out of the ten pictures taken by Jan Cornelis Vermeyen, who accompanied the expedition. Six of the ten were discovered by the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, and were subsequently restored and brought to England by the late Prince Consort. These photographs have been reduced from larger ones in the possession of Her Majesty, and constitute a highly interesting feature of this portion of the work. They represent severally "Christian Slaves at Tunis," "Siege of Goletta by Charles V.;" "Landing of Charles V.;" "Battle between Tunis and Goletta;" and the "Taking of Tunis by Charles V." We have the assurance of Bro. Broadley to the effect that "the localities depicted in them can be easily recognised by any one well acquainted with the principal features of the country." However, the Spanish hold on Tunis was not of long duration, and the year 1573 once again saw Tunis under Turkish rule.

Chapters VII. and VIII. treat of the "Domination of the Deys (A.D. 1590-1705)" and the "Beys of the Eighteenth Century," while Chapter IX. contains an account of the country from 1800 to 1837, and the two Chapters that follow bring us up to what Bro. Broadley very appropriately describes as the "Beginning of the End."

336 Menus and Recipes of the Baron Brisse. In French and English. Translated by Mrs. Matthew Clarke. London: Sampson Low, Marston, Searle, and Rivington, Crown Buildings, 188 Fleet-street, 1882.

Last week we noticed a modest little manual of supper dishes for "People of small Means," though we took occasion to observe that some of the recipes it contained would be found not unacceptable by those who were fairly circumstanced. This fresh work, by one of the ablest of French chefs, is, of course, a far more elaborate one, the present edition, which Mrs. Clarke has been kind enough to set before us in an English version, having ben rendered more complete by its French author. It contains dishes, arranged in their proper seasons, for both rich and poor. The recipes have been collected from different schools of cookery, and it is claimed for them that they are clearly and concisely explained. Baron Brisse further states that, as in his previous editions, he has not attempted to give recipes for using up scraps, his reason for this being that "this art is only needful when you run short of provisions;" that "it is quite a mistake to imagine that warming up" cooked meat is economical, as all good transformations must be expensive; and, lastly, that "the only way to use up scraps of meat is to warm them in any of the principal sauces," for which recipes are given. From this last, however, must be excepted "scraps of fowl or game," because all salmis and marinades must be made from fowls or game that have been previously roasted. The translator, having explained how it was she came to translate and publish Baron Brisse's book, offers a few words of advice and explanation as to where certain fish and vegetables, not usually met with in bills of fare, are to be obtained, and as to the meaning to be attached to certain meats and wines mentioned in the translation.

Some very useful hints are given by way of introduction as to the "Order of Dinner." The first of these relate to the "Decorations of the Dinner-table, and describe what should be provided for each guest, the comparative merits of the French and Russian ways of serving dinners, and the order in which, first, the dinner should be served, and, secondly, the order in which the wines should be handed round. Useful hints are also given as to the duties of the host to his friends as well as those of a guest to his host, great stress in the case of the latter being laid on the necessity of punctuality. Following these is a "Provision Calendar," in which is noted the Provisions in season in each of the twelve months of the year. This is, of course, a great assistance to understanding the bills of fare and recipes which constitute the whole of the work.

As to the menus furnished for every day of the year, and the recipes explanatory, where thought desirable, of certain of the items of those menus it is impossible for us to give more than a general idea. That it must have called for the exercise of great ingenuity to arrrange the former is beyond question, and it is certain that only an experienced and skilful chef like the author could have accomplished the task. We are prepared also to say that from a careful test examination of parts of the work, great judgment has been shown in the preparation of the menus, while the recipes are clearly and concisely described, references, in all cases where necessary, being made to other days in the year. Thus, in the directions under 17th January, for dressing "Chump of veal à la bourgeoise," some Spanish sauce is required, and the reader is referred to 3rd November, where is given the recipe for making this Spanish sauce. Again, on 25th February, is a recipe for "Purée of Chicory with Cream," and we are referred to 17th February for directions how to prepare "purée of Chicory." This shows that the author has taken the utmost pains to explain what he deemed necessary, so that the work might be complete as a whole. But apart from these constant inter-references from one day or one recipe to another, we have a carefully compiled Index, so that if a cook or housewife is desirous of knowing how a particular dish or a particular essential to a dish must be prepared, all he or she has to do is to refer to this Index, and the number affixed will indicate the page at which the recipe is to be found. Perhaps, however, the best plan will be to give one or two menus, and one or two recipes, so that our readers may be able to judge for themselves of the merits of the book, the recipes, as far as they go, corresponding with the menus.

Our first menu is set down for 22nd February, and, in English, is as follows, with the recipes for two of the dishes:—

"Curry soup with rice.
Broiled shad and sorrel.
Braised breast of mutton.
Roast wild duck.
Stuffed eggs with cream.
Open apple tart.

BROILED SHAD AND SORREL.

"Thoroughly clean and wash your fish, make several slits down each side, and warm for a quarter of an hour in a saucepan with olive oil, salt, pepper, and a laurel leaf; fill the slits with butter mixed with finely-chopped herbs, bake in the oven, and serve on a purée of sorrel. You can also boil it on a gridiron, in which case the slits must not be filled with butter.

STUFFED EGGS WITH CREAM.

"Shell some hard-boiled eggs, cut them in half, lengthways; scoop out the yolks, and pound with the same quantity of butter as there are yolks, a lump of bread-crumb soaked in milk, finely-chopped parsley and chives, salt, a pinch of grated nutmeg, the same quantity of mixed spice and two or three raw yolks of egg; when well pounded, pass through a fine sieve, spread a layer of this stuffing on a dish, fill the empty whites of egg with the remainder, and brown in the oven, pour some béchamel sauce (see 16th of August), made with double cream, over them, and serve.

The second is for the 4th August, and with its corresponding recipes reads thus:—

Pickled pike, remoulade sauce à la cosaque.
Braised pullet with white sauce.
Roast young rabbits.
Green peas à l'anglaise.
Whipped raspberries and cream.

REMOULADE SAUCE A LA COSAQUE.

"Take two hard-boiled yolks of egg, a blanched eschalot, and a handful of chopped chervil, tarragon, pimpernel, and chive leaves, pound in a mortar; season with salt, pepper, grated nutmeg, a teaspoonful of mustard, and a pinch of cayenne pepper; stir in two tablespoonful of olive oil, and a teaspoonful of vinegar; pass through a tammy, and serve.

BRAISED PULLET WITH WHITE SAUCE.

"Lard the pullet with bacon and ham, braise in milk with carrots and onions, and leave until cold. Take a lump of butter, a little flour, salt, pepper, two yolks of egg, and a teacupful of milk; stir over the fire until thick, and add the pullet sprinkled with bread-crumbs; place the stew-pan in the oven until the pullet is browned, and dish it up garnished with thick poivrade sauce.

GREEN PEAS A L'ANGLAISE.

"Boil the green peas in boiling salt and water; when cooked, drain and pour them into a vegetable dish over a large lump of fresh butter. Sprinkle the peas with a little finely-chopped parsley, and serve very hot. Hand powdered sugar separately."

These speak for themselves, and, in our opinion, compare well with the menus and recipes we have seen in other works on Cookery. As for Mrs. Matthew Clarke, we congratulate her on the manner in which she appears to have achieved her task, and also on having placed so excellent a manual within reach of the general public.

A Method of Prayer. Compiled and arranged from Matthew Henry. By George Palmer, Captain Royal Navy, London. Samuel Bayster and Sons, 15 Paternoster-row, 1882.

A RELIGIOUS work is not one which, as a rule, comes within our province to remark upon. The chances are, if we do so, that while, we please some, we offend others. In this case, however, we see no reason why we should hesitate to express our satisfaction with the contents of this little volume, albeit the author's views are in accordance with those of a thorough going and earnest Christian. A prayer addressed to the Supreme Being forms a part of our ceremonies, so that, for all that may be said to the contrary, Prayer comes distinctly within the duties of every Mason. Hence, though it is beyond all question that members of other than the Christian religion will not take very kindly to Captain Palmer's compilation, it is not to be doubted that it will prove acceptable to those for whose immediate use it is intended. The work of compilation has been extremely well done, and the arrangement of the matter is equally to be commended. In fact, subject to the limitations which are necessarily imposed upon us in the case of a work of this description, we can venture without hesitation to recommend it to at least those of our readers who believe in Christianity. Moreover, it has a good purpose in view, in that it is intended to enforce the desirability of Prayer among naval and military men, whose duties are for the most part of a non-religious character.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—This cooling medicine has the happiest effect when the blood is overheated and a tendency to inflammatory action is set up in the system; one Pill taken shortly before dinner does away with the indigestion, fullness, and flatulency—indications of a weak stomach, or disordered liver. A few Pills taken at bedtime act as alteratives and aperients; they not only relieve the bowels, but regulate every organ connected with them, overcome all acrid humours, and encourage a free supply of all the essentials to our well-being. Holloway's Pills thoroughly cleanse and perfectly regulate the circulation, and beget a feeling of comfort in hot climates and high temperatures, which is most desirable for the preservation of health.

THE MASONS' ARMS, &c.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I beg to call your attention to the following work, viz.:—

"A treatise of architecture, with remarks and observations necessary for young people who would apply themselves to that noble art. By Sab. Le Clerc * * * Printed and sold by Richard Ware at the Bible and Sun, in Amen-corner, near Paternoster-row, 1732."

The first volume contains the Treatise, the second is filled with engraved plates. Its first four pages are respectively headed with the Arms of the London Companies of Masons, of Bricklayers, of Carpenters, and of Joiners, and under each of the said Arms or Crests, the work is dedicated to each of the said guilds. As the paragraph devoted to the Masons' guild contains some historical allusions, I shall therefore give it in full.

"May it please your Worships,—This Company was incorporated Anno 1410. Having been called Freemasons: a Fraternity of great antiquity, being honoured by several Kings, and very many of the nobility and gentry being of their Society. And for a body of workmen which have advanced their art to such a height, that they out-do all their brethren in Europe both in number and art, to the glory of their nation. This Treatise on Architecture by the most correct designer and architect, Sabastion Le Clerc, that has yet appeared in the world, whose rules and propositions well followed may advance yet further, is most humbly dedicated by your Worship's Obedient Servant, John Sturt."

Whether the said Masons' guild was chartered in 1410, and whether the English Masons excelled all the Masons in the world in numbers and in art, Bro. Gould will have to decide. But one thing astonished me greatly, viz., ever since 1764, when the second edition of the Ahiman Rezon was printed with the Masons' Arms facing the title page, Masons took it for granted that the said Masons' Crest was genuine, but on comparing the Masons' Arms or Crests in the work before me with the one in the Ahiman Rezon, I found they differ. The question is, did Dermott alter the Masons' Crest? or have the Masons' Company itself altered their Arms between 1732 and 1764?

Having disposed of the Masons' Arms, I must now come to the "&c," which astonished me even more than the former. I always supposed that America, and America alone, was blessed with a Mackey who could illuminate all the Masonic symbols in creation, who knew every thing about all the gods and goddesses of antiquity, and especially about the significances of the Tau and Triple Tau of the R.A. degree; but on looking over the 12th volume of The Republican, by Richard Carlile, London, in the September number, 1825, page 403, I found a letter by J. A. Mackey, of Norwich, England, full of sublime interpretations of the Tau, Triple Tau, Egyptian gods, &c., &c. Nay more, he claims to have discovered a key to all the Masonic mysteries, and in the said letter he refers to his former work. Now, can any Masonic student inform me about the said Mackey and his wonderful works?

Respectfully and fraternally yours,

MASONIC MENDICANCY.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—When, in the case quoted by "A CONSTANT READER," of a worthy as well as wayworn brother who, after application for help to the members of a Lodge, was sent empty away, I spoke of the price of "glasses round," I did not wish it to be thought that that, in my opinion, was the extent to which they should have relieved him. I was merely anxious to point out by how slight a self-sacrifice from each of those present the poor fellow's appeal might have been temporarily met. He was in, sore straits, and the few shillings thus contributed would have satisfied his immediate needs. Then the almoner could have stepped in, and more materially assisted him. I allow that the professional Masonic mendicant deserves, and should have no sympathy, but even to him, I presume, the casual ward of the poor-house is open. In this case we are assured the brother was worthy, and, in his better days, had supported his Lodge freely. Therefore, I argue, he should not have been left to the alternative of the poor-house or nothing. He was a brother in distress, and should have been tested, not sent away abruptly.

It is in Masonry, as in ordinary life, very easy to condemn indiscriminate relief, but there is this much to be said in connection with the case in question: Masons profess to relieve brethren in distress if they can do so with justice to themselves. Then why the refusal indicated by "CONSTANT READER?" I think even a vagabond brother should not be left without food and with no better shelter than an empty outhouse.

Fraternally yours,

"LONDONER."

SOME OF THE USES OF FREEMASONRY.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The remarks in your article bearing the above title, though severe, are not unjustly so, nor are they, I think, uncalled for. The failure of the arrangements brought no inconvenience or disappointment to me personally. I am not a member of any Kentish Lodge, nor was I going to Swanley, either as a visitor or spectator. I am not qualified to offer an opinion as to the justice of the excuse telegraphed to the Prince and Princess of Wales, but, as regards the Provincial Grand Master of Kent, Lord Holmesdale, and his Grand Officers, it must be obvious that, assuming your statement to be correct, his Lordship and they were treated with scant courtesy, and the executive who had charge of the proceedings deserve the castigation you have administered.

This is not the first time the services of the Craft have been invoked by the local authority and then those brethren who attended cavalierly treated. At p 42 Vol. VIII. FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE is an account of the formal inauguration with Masonic honours of the Masonic Lifeboat Albert Edward at Clacton-on-sea by the Earl of Lathom—then Lord Skelmersdale—Deputy Grand Master. Then the brethren assembled from all parts of Essex, and having met in Provincial Grand Lodge took part in the Ceremonial. When that was ended, we are told in your report "Provincial Grand Lodge was closed, and the brethren separated. A luncheon was afterwards served, at which Lord Skelmersdale presided." Following this statement are some very mild yet significant comments by your reporter, which read as follows:—

"We are not aware whether the arrangements of the day were conducted by the Lifeboat Association or not; for the credit of the Institution, we hope otherwise. But whoever may have had the appointment of the Committee can scarcely be congratulated on their selection, either for the ability or courtesy displayed by that body, especially with regard to the Masonic Visitors. For ourselves, we attended but to report the proceedings; still, we cannot understand why Provincial Grand Officers, who travelled many miles in order to officiate on the occasion, should be made use of, and afterwards, so to speak, ignored. Such was the treatment accorded those who represented the donors."

There is, of course, a difference between the two cases. The Clacton-on-sea ceremonial came off as arranged, the Swanley did not. In both, however, the brethren were invited to lend lustre to the occasion. This is no more than might have been expected at Clacton, where one of the Masonic Memorial Lifeboats was Masonically inaugurated; yet the ceremony over, the Prov. G. officials and members of Essex Lodges were sent to the right about most unceremoniously. At Swanley, the Prov. Grand Officers and brethren of Kent were, it seems, put to the trouble and expense of journeying thither only to discover the whole thing to be a complete fiasco. Jupiter Pluvius, I know, is a "demn'd unpleasant" personage, but it rarely happens that he deters Englishmen from carrying out their arrangements.

Faithfully and fraternally,

"Q. E. D."

SUMMER FESTIVAL OF THE NEW CONCORD LODGE.

WE are not of those who think it beneath the dignity of man to visit what is known as a cockney watering place. People who belong to the school of æsthetic—muffs, to use the least objectionable epithet, or who fancy they are members of the fashionable world, may question the possibility of spending even a portion of a happy day in Gravesend and its vicinity. Yet Gravesend and the surrounding country form one of the prettiest and most interesting parts of Kent. There is, for instance, the Thames, with its constant traffic, and none will gainsay the statement that here it is a noble stream, of which any Englishman may well be proud. Tilbury, on the Essex side of the river, calls up associations connected with grand old Queen Bess, thr Earl of Leicester, her favourite, and the days of the Spanish Armada. Hard by, and, indeed, forming as it were a precinct of Gravesend itself, is Milton, renowned for its shrimps, while within easy reach by rail are Rochester with its cathedral and grand old ruin of a castle, and Chetham, one of our busiest and most notable garrison towns. Inland are Meopham, and Wrotham, and Cobham, where is Lord Darnley's seat. Nor must the claims of Northfleet, with its fine old church, and Springhead, dear to all lovers of "watercresses," be overlooked in the survey. In fact, we know of no better place within a radius of thirty miles of London that is better worth a visit than Gravesend, and, under these circumstances, we take it upon ourselves to congratulate the Worshipful Master, the Stewards and the brethren generally on their selection of this well-known watering-place as the scene of their Summer Festival. Not only, to use a common mode of expression, might they have gone further and fared worse, but we doubt much if, had they gone elsewhere, they would have fared so well. Our own personal experience is, that having regard to the hospitality of the Lodge, the pleasant company that was assembled, the weather, and the unusual excellence of the entertainment provided, we have never enjoyed ourselves more thoroughly on any similar occasion. Our business, however, is to record what took place, and how the Lodge and its guests fared. As a matter of course, Bro. Lewis C. Haslip W. Master was the presiding genius of the day, though we regret to say he was by no means in the best condition as regards health. Among those present were the following brethren:—Bro. W. Pierpoint I.P.M. and Mrs. Pierpoint, Bro. R. R. Harper P.M. and Secretary and Mrs. Harper, Bros. W. Stead and S. George P.M.'s, Bro. H. T. Tiddiman S.W. and Mrs. Tiddiman, Bro. J. W. Stillwell J.W. and Mrs. Stillwell, Bro. Boulton Steward, Bro. August and Mrs. Perl, Bro. F. and Mrs. Peel, Bros. Hubbard, Rose, Tidman. Visitors—Bros. Baker P.M. 834 and 1828, L. Lichtwitz 1642 and St. Ambrose, Moss 907, Davis 1309, Meed 382, Jas. Kift, W.W. Morgan Secretary 211. Of those some found their way to the rendezvous by boat, and some by rail from Fenchurch-street or the termini of the South Eastern Railway Company. But by what means soever they may have reached their destination, which was the well-known Rosherville Hotel, there they found and availed themselves of the many and varied opportunities of enjoyment placed at their disposal by the kind and courteous manager, Bro. W. T. Warren. We are using no mere stereotyped expression when we say that the banquet was truly excellent, more excellent of its kind, indeed, than many that are served at more ambitious and more aristocratic hostelries. As may well may be imagined, the fish, of which there were eight varieties—and some of them dressed in different ways—was the principal feature of the dinner. But the whole entertainment was so genuinely good, and so admirably served, and was, moreover, supplemented by wines of such excellent quality, that we are persuaded no words of ours can do it the justice it deserves. The dessert too that followed included a choice selection of fruits, and Bro. Warren, the aforesaid manager, deserves the highest possible commendation for his successful efforts in catering for his guests. A short, but well-chosen programme of music followed, in which Miss Lizzie Evans, Bro. A. Hubbard, and Bro. James Kift took part, and each and everyof the three materially contributed, by their happy selection of songs, and the artistic manner in which they sang them, to the pleasure of the gathering. But the satisfaction of the inner man and a short, though select, after-dinner concert, were not the only available means at hand by which to spend a happy day. As a preparation for the important function of dinner, the aid of the local flymen was invoked, and an hour or two was spent perambulating some of the beautiful country in the neighbourhood. Then Lodge and its guests were photographed by Bro. August Perl, who, though not a professional photographic artist, is a capable representative of his art, and the photograph he took—measuring fifteen inches by twelve—will constitute an interesting memento of a most enjoyable epoch in the history of the New Concord Lodge. Lastly, the proximity of Rosherville Gardens was turned to account, and in them—forming as they do one of the most beautiful and most tastefully arranged spots in England—the brethren and ladies whiled away an hour or two before starting on their return homewards. In fine, we heartily congratulate the Lodge, the Master and Stewards, host Warren, and all who were privileged to be present, on one of the most successful Festivals of the year. Nor would it be just to omit mention of the indefatigable endeavours of Bro. Harper, the Secretary, who took his share of the duties of the day, and in a manner which did him infinite credit.

We are desirous of rectifying a slight mistake, and supplying an omission which occurred in our notice, last week, of the Summer Festival of the Prosperity Lodge. The guests, ladies and brethren all told, were 109, not 100 as stated, while, after the banquet, the party adjourned to the lawn and were photographed in a group, after which the members separately, and then the Officers, were taken in like manner. We regret this omission all the more because Bros. Bedford and Lemere, of the Strand, went down to Richmond especially for this purpose, and on their own responsibility. We may add that Bro. Walker acted as M.C., and rendered valuable assistance in that capacity to the Worshipful Master, Bro. J. Roberts.

We learn from a statement published in the columns of the Masonic Record of Western India that the total School fees paid by the Punjab Masonic Institution from its formation to the 31st December 1881 amount in the aggregate to close upon 26,990 rupees. This sum has been expended on thirty-one children, of whom twenty-one are still receiving the benefits of the Institution. The ex-officio President and Vice-President are the R.W. Dis. G. Master (Lieut.-Col. A. Stewart), and the Dep. Dis. G. Master (Bro. W. Adlard), the Hon. Secretary being Bro. R. B. Nightengall, Freemasons' Hall, Lahore.

The annual speech day and distribution of prizes at Christ's Hospital took place in the great Hall of the Institution, on Wednesday afternoon, among those present being the Right Hon. Lord Mayor, Grand Junior Warden, and the Lady Mayoress, Bro. Alderman and Sheriff Sir Reginald Hanson, Sheriff Sir W. Ogg, Bro. J. Derby Aldcroft, Bro. Rev. E. Lee, Headmaster, Bro. Dr. Brette, Head French Master, &c., &c.

FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE
23 GREAT QUEEN STREET, W.C.

CONSECRATION OF A MASONIC HALL AT DEVIZES.

A PROVINCIAL Grand Lodge of Emergency was held at Devizes, on Wednesday, 19th July. The R.W. Prov. Grand Master, Lord Methuen, was in the chair, and was supported by Bros. F. H. Goldney P.G.S. P.G. Treas. as D.P.G.M., R. Stokes P.P.S.G.W. as P.S.G.W., Thomas Graham P.P.J.G.W. as J.W., Rev. J. A. Lloyd P.G. Chaplain, F. Ponting P.G. Registrar, Henry C. Tombs P.G.D. P.G. Sec., Col. Magrath P.J.G.D., John Chandler P.P.S.G.W. P.G.D.C., Dr. W. D. Lovell P.G.A.D., Henry Simpson P.G.S.B., James Sparks P.G.D., A. J. Beavan P.G.P., and G. W. Collen P.G.A.S. Amongst the Visitors were Sir F. Burdett P.G.W., Prov. G.M. Middlesex, Robert Bradley P.G. Sec. Berks and Bucks, Geo. F. Tuckey P.P.S.G.D. Bristol, W. H. Dill P.P.G.P. Somerset, &c. There were present a large number of Past Grand Officers of the Province, including T. H. Chandler P.P.S.G.W., W. Nott P.P.J.G.W., Rev. G. E. Gardner P.P.G. Chaplain, J. L. Whatley P.P.S.G.D., S. Gauntlett P.P.J.G.D. E. B. Merriman P.P.G.S. Works, A. Browne P.P.G.S. Works, J. Carter P.P.G.S.B., W. S. Bambridge P.P.G.O., W. H. Brinkworth P.P.G.O., S.M. Bradham P.P.G.O., Edwin Eyres P.P.G.P. and W.M.'s and P.M.'s and brethren of the various Lodges in the Province. The Devizes Lodge, the Wiltshire Lodge of Fidelity, No. 663, having been opened in the three degrees, the R.W. P.G.M. and the P.G.L. were received with the customary honours. Lord Methuen having assumed the chair, at once opened the P.G.L. The first business, according to the summons, being the consecration and dedication of the new Masonic Hall for the Wiltshire Lodge of Fidelity, No. 663, Devizes. Before proceeding with the ceremony, his Lordship remarked that it gave him great pleasure to be present on such an occasion, and to recognise the liberality and zeal on the part of the Devizes brethren, without which the beautiful Hall in which they then were could not have been provided; and it showed how much the true Masonic feeling was extending in Wiltshire. The Devizes district was always amongst the foremost in that Masonic feeling, and he congratulated the Province on the fact that so many of the Lodges had already provided themselves with homes of their own, and he trusted that the distinguished example this day set would not be lost on the other Lodges who had as yet not been able to provide buildings of their own. His lordship thanked the brethren for asking him to consecrate this new building, but wished to apologise to them for leaving early, as he would be obliged to do, in consequence of being called to London on matters connected with his military duties. His lordship then called upon the Provincial Grand Chaplain to deliver an oration, as was usual on such occasions. The Provincial Grand Chaplain, the Rev. J. A. Lloyd, in response, commenced by congratulating the energetic brethren of Devizes on having brought to so satisfactory a termination their endeavour to secure a building in Devizes, which should be devoted solely to Masonic purposes, and hoped that Hall would long continue the home and centre of true Masonic principles. Masonry, he said, was confessedly a universal system, teaching the relative and social duties of man upon the broad basis of general philanthropy, nor might it be concluded that Masonry contained no religion. It assumed as a foundation a belief in the existence of God, and in a future state of reward and punishment, and the necessity of moral purity as a qualification for future happiness. There were many popular errors about Freemasonry, but Freemasons ever indignantly repudiated the reproach that because they are a secret Society, their existence was inimical to good government. In the last century, when an outburst of sentiment forbade the existence of any secret society, Freemasonry was especially exempted, and in these days much less could any imputation be cast when we have two Royal Dukes holding high office in the Craft, and the future Heir to the Throne as our Worshipful Grand Master, and when Her Most Gracious Majesty herself has become a Patron of one of the Benevolent Institutions of the Order. The fact was, that Masonry left us almost on the threshold of religion, no man could be a true Mason who was not earnestly seeking after truth, and who did not believe in the existence of a God. Masonic symbolism led us from the contemplation of His glorious works to adore the Great Architect himself. The reverend brother then drew attention to the special moral and religious teachings of the several degrees in Freemasonry, deducing therefrom the conclusion that Masonry, which has virtue as its aim, and the glory of God for its object, is the handmaid of religion, and if practised with this fundamental principle in view may assist us in profitably running the race which is set before us on this earth. Before concluding, he ventured to impress upon the brethren the great caution which ought continually to be shown in the selection of new members of the Order, for at the present time, as Freemasonry is able to offer great material advantages, many seek to become Freemasons very much with a view to what they can get out of it. It therefore behoved us all, as Masons, to watch carefully that none should be accepted for initiation except such as seemed likely to reflect credit and lustre on the Craft. The responsibilities of a conscientious Mason were not light, but he was convinced that the older we grew the more we should find that Freemasonry had a meaning and importance to us all alike that it increased kindly sympathy, that it gave us many an hour of profitable pursuit with happy and innocent companionship, and that it gave us hope and cheered us in time of sorrow. And if we must look back (as we must sometimes do) regretfully on vacant places, and vanished forms; if we recalled with a sigh some who had often been at our side in Lodge, and cheered us with a genuine and unfailing welcome, but who had then passed away from our sight—and amongst others the recollection of one whose memory was thus bright and happy, must rise before them that day, their recently deceased brother, John Toomer, a P.G.S.W. of the Province, whom they had all thought and hoped to have seen among them at that interesting ceremony—if, he said, regretful memories would come, such we knew were over the accompaniment of mortal life and mortal strivings, and we who had learnt wisdom from our Masonic lore would ever remember, that though, in the good Providence of the G.A.O.T.U. such things were, they but added to, they seemed only to increase, the individual sense of our own present privileges, the value and lasting character of Masonic association, and the kindliness and genuineness of true Masonic friendship.

An anthem having been sung, it was followed by the Consecration Prayer by the Provincial Grand Chaplain, who afterwards carried the censer thrice round the Hall.

The Elements of Consecration were then borne round by three P.M.'s, the corn being carried by Bro. R. Stokes P.P.G.S.W., the wine by Bro. Thomas Graham P.P.G.J.W., and the oil by Bro. William Nott P.P.G.J.W., after the first round the Provincial Grand Master, sprinkling the Hall with Corn, dedicated it to Masonry; after the second round, sprinkling it with Wine, he dedicated it to Virtue; and after the third time, receiving the ewer of Oil, and anointing the Hall therefrom, he dedicated it to Universal Benevolence. The usual collection of alms took place, followed by the P.G.M. scattering salt as an emblem of Hospitality and Friendship.

After the Dedication Prayer, by the Provincial Grand Chaplain, the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master declared the Hall consecrated and dedicated to Masonry according to Ancient form. An anthem was then sung; this, followed by the Benediction from the Provincial Grand Chaplain, closed the proceedings so far as the consecration of the Hall was concerned. It was resolved that the alms (which amounted to £5 5s) be given to the Devizes College Hospital.

The Provincial Grand Master then rose, and stated that the time had come for him to leave, but, before doing so, he would congratulate the Province on their being honoured by the presence of such a distinguished Mason as Sir Francis Burdett the P.G.M. of Middlesex. Referring to the duty he (Lord Methuen) had just performed, he trusted the Lodge would forgive any want of knowledge which he might have displayed, but again assured them of the great pleasure it had given him to come there. He hoped the Devizes Lodge would long continue in its present state, and that he should have the pleasure of frequently meeting them again in that Hall. He then requested the Provincial Grand Treasurer, Bro. F. H. Goldney to take his place, and retired.

Bro. Goldney, on assuming the chair, expressed his regret that Lord Methuen had been bound to leave them, and called attention to the next business on the agenda paper, which was the consideration of the circular from the Grand Secretary, requesting to have notified to him the views of the Provincial Grand Lodge with reference to Bro. J. M. Clabon's proposition that all members of Lodges not within the London District should pay quarterly ninepence each to the Fund of Benevolence instead of sixpence as at present.

Bro. Henry C. Tombs P.G.D. P.G. Sec. Wilts, introduced the subject, and reported the action he had taken in Grand Lodge upon the proposition of Bro. Clabon being made. He had opposed it. 1st. Because such an increased tax upon the brethren seemed unnecessary. 2ndly. It would seriously interfere with the financial arrangements of every Lodge in Wiltshire. 3rdly. That the large grants made by the Board of Benevolence were undesirable, as tending to induce many Masons to consider the Fund of Benevolence as a kind of insurance—and he instanced a case which had come to his knowledge where a Mason had made no provision for his widow, stating that Masons would do that. He commented also upon the inexpediency of the Board of Benevolence spending any part of its capital, and urged that the income should be alone applicable for grants. He referred to the action of the Board in pressing on Grand Lodge, last December, a vote, when it was objected to by a brother who stated he was a member of the Lodge of which the brother in whose favour the grant was made belonged. Notwithstanding the brother objecting made the most serious charges as to the integrity of the brother proposed to be assisted, yet the Board pressed the vote on Grand Lodge instead of at once withdrawing it for further inquiry, and for half an-hour Grand Lodge was in a state of unpleasant confusion. Such conduct was most unwise, for the Board should be looked upon as "Trustees," whose duty it was to guard with a zealous eye the funds under their control, instead of endeavouring to force on Grand Lodge a grant about which it was quite clear further inquiry as to the applicant was needed. It seemed to him, as a man of business, that if votes were to be recommended and pressed in that way, it was hardly desirable to put greater funds under the power of such trustees. With regard to the hardship on the Lodges in this Province, it appeared to him that Bro. Clabon was unaware of, or had overlooked the fact, that in addition to the fees paid by the Wiltshire Lodges to the Fund of Benevolence, they paid, to their Provincial Grand Lodge, 3s per member. And nearly every Lodge now contributed some 4s or 5s per member to their own special Charity Fund, besides supporting the newly-established Provincial Fund of Benevolence, so that really the contributions to Charity in Wiltshire amounted to some 9s or 10s per member, as against the four shillings per annum, paid by the London brethren, and therefore the country Lodges were doing vastly more than the Metropolitan Lodges, or than Grand Lodge gave them credit for, or perhaps knew of. He could not help thinking, knowing how experienced Bro. Clabon was, not only as a gentleman of great business acquirements, but also as the late President of the Board of Benevolence, that his object in making this proposition was not so much with the hope of carrying it, as to raise a discussion on the subject of the recommendation of the Board of Benevolence, and to check, if possible, the system of making such enormous grants as had recently been made. He therefore proposed the following resolution, and in doing so, said he had no intention of interfering with the proposition, as affecting the Metropolitan Lodges, but only the Lodges of Wiltshire, and incidentally other Provinces:—"This Provincial Grand Lodge having considered the circular of the Grand Secretary relative to Bro. Clabon's proposition to increase the contributions of the Lodges in this Province to the Fund of Benevolence, is of opinion that such increase is very undesirable, as it would occasion great financial inconvenience to such Lodges, and that measures be taken to oppose such proposition on its being brought forward in Grand Lodge."

Bro. Stokes, the acting P.G.S.W. seconded the motion, which was briefly supported by the Rev. J. A. Lloyd, Bro. Chandler Treasurer 355, Powell W.M. 1295, Hannan W.M. 586, Nott Provincial Charity Secretary and Secretary 663; and also by Sir Francis Burdett, who entirely agreed with the opinions that had already been expressed. He thought if we wanted to increase our charitable contributions, let us do it amongst ourselves, and let us have the money to spend. He thought a great mistake had been made in calling for this increase, and believed that it would be opposed by his own Province.

The resolution on being put to the meeting was carried unanimously.

The Past Grand Registrar, Bro. Ponting, drew attention to the next business on the agenda paper, namely, the consideration of the Draft New Book of Constitutions which had been issued by Grand Lodge for the consideration of the Provinces. He had been through such Draft, and had made certain notes thereon. These notes he had embodied in a short report he then read to the meeting, but he suggested that the better plan would be that a small Committee should be appointed to go more thoroughly into the matter, and report thereon to the next meeting of that Provincial Grand Lodge. This suggestion was adopted by the meeting, and a Committee appointed accordingly, consisting of Bros. F. H. Goldney P.G. Treasurer, T. Ponting P.G. Registrar, Henry C. Tombs P.G. Sec., and Bro. W. Nott Provincial Charity Secretary.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was then closed, and the acting P.G.M., with the other members thereof, retired, followed by the closing of the Wiltshire Lodge of Fidelity by Bro. J. A. Randell W.M.

After the proceedings at the Hall had terminated, the brethren sat down to a cold collation at the Bear Hotel, under the presidency of Bro. F. H. Goldney, when the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and duly responded to.

The Devizes brethren have long felt the want of a home of their own, and at last an opportunity offering of purchasing the building in Morris's-lane, formerly occupied as a girls school, the Devizes Lodge became the purchasers, and the building, under the direction of, and after plans prepared by, the W.M. of the Lodge, Bro. J. A. Randell, has been transformed into a most complete and elegant Lodge-room. The walls have been allowed to remain intact, each end wall being raised, so as to allow of the substitution of a much higher pitched roof than the former one. The roof timbers spring from solid foundations on the ground, thus bearing the greater part of the weight of the roof, and rendering the old walls adequate for their purpose. The Lodge is approached through an entrance lobby, inside which is the Tyler's room, there being doors from the latter into the Lodge room itself, and also into a good sized room, which will serve as a committee-room, preparation-room, &c. The walls of the Lodge-room are painted in two colours, the wood-work of the open roof being varnished. There is a pointed geometrical window in each end wall, filled in with semi-opaque and tinted glass. The floor has a slightly raised dais on either side, with a still higher elevation at the east end, the sunk central portion of the floor being tessellated in black and white.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF MARK MASTER MASONS OF MIDDLESEX AND SURREY.

THIS Provincial Grand Mark Lodge held its summer meeting at the Clarence Hotel, Teddington, on Wednesday, 26th July, when, the weather being all that could be desired for the time of year, a large number of Present and Past Provincial Grand Officers and other Mark Masons connected with the twenty-three Lodges which are on the roll of the Province were in attendance. Previous to the assembling of the members of the Provincial Lodge, the Francis Burdett Lodge of Mark Master Masons, No. 181, was opened by Bro. W. Taylor P.M. as W.M., in the unavoidable absence of Bro. J. W. Saunders; E. Hopwood S.W., W. Hammond J.W., James Stevens P.M., T. C. Walls M.O., Briggs I.G., G. Harrison Tyler, and a large number of brethren, and at the hour appointed, five p.m., prepared to receive the Provincial Grand Lodge. The R.W. Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Sir Francis Burdett, Bart., was unfortunately prevented from attending as arranged, and consequently the Very Worshipful Bro. Frederic Davison Grand Treasurer Deputy P.G.M. officiated as Prov. G.M. The present Officers who attended were Worshipful Bros. F. C. De Crespigny Chaplain, C. Hammerton Treasurer, J. M. Klenck Secretary, T. W. Adams S.D., E. Hopwood Supt. Works, H. J. Lardner I.G., J. V. Willis, C. Kipling, E. Florence, and J. Inglis Stewards, and J. Gilbert Tyler. The Past Grand Officers were represented by the Very Worshipful Brothers D. M. Dewar P.G.M.O. and Assistant Grand Secretary, James Stevens P.G.J.O. and P.P.G. Secretary, S. Lambert P.P G.S.D., and S. C. Dibdin, and Worshipful Bros. W. Taylor P.P.G.D., E. Gilbert, H. Baldwin, J. Rhodes P.P.G. Org., B. H. Ridge P.B.G.I.G., T. C. Walls P.G.S. Many brethren omitted to sign the attendance book, which contained the names of Bros. Goodenough J.O. 223, W. Hammond P.M. 181, E. Whittaker J.O. 139, G. Blackman W.M. 251, T. Driver J.O. 171, W. Holloway S.W. 251, S. G. Redfearn 251, Johnston S.D. 234, R. Clutton W.M., C. P. McKay P.M. 234, W. C. Brasher 223, G. R. Ousey M.O. 239, G. J. Dunkley S.O. 234, G. B. Brodie 197, J. Proffitt J.W. 3, T. F. Ravenshaw P.G.C., W. Stephens W.M. 1, Edward Mitchell S.W. 139, J. W. Sanders W.M. 181, H. Fuja I G. 144. The Provincial Grand Officers having been received by the Francis Burdett Lodge, and duly saluted, the Lodge was closed, and Bro. Davison Deputy P.G.M., as Prov. G.M., proceeded to open the Prov. Grand Lodge, assisted by Bros. Ravenshaw as Deputy P.G.M., Walls G.S.W., Dewar G.J.W., De Crespigny G. Chaplain, J. W. Adams as M.O., E. Hopwood S.O., Lardner J.O., Klenck Secretary, Hammerton Treasurer, J. Stevens as D.C., H. Baldwin as I.G., and Gilbert Janitor. The minutes of the previous Provincial Grand Lodge meeting, held at Richmond, on the 2nd July 1881, were read and confirmed, and a report from the General Committee as to the changes in places of meeting was read for information. The roll of Lodges was called over, and each Lodge was fairly represented. The number of Lodges in the Province is now 23 as against 21 last year, and the members have increased from 403 to 443. The R.W. Bro. Sir Francis Burdett, Bart., was unanimously nominated as Provincial Grand Mark Master for the ensuing period, and the following Officers were appointed, and in most instances invested with their collars of office, viz.:—

| Bro. F. Davison | Deputy P.G.M. |
| Ralph Clutton | P.G. Senior Warden |
| Dr. Brodie | P.G. Junior Warden |

| C. Hammerton | P.G. Treasurer |
| E. P. Florence | P.G. Registrar |
| W. G. Brighten | P.G. Secretary |
| — Inglis | P.G. Master Overseer |
| — Hammond | P.G. Senior Overseer |
| — Lewis | P.G. Junior Overseer |
| E. Mitchell | P.G. Senior Deacon |
| C. P. McKay | P.G. Junior Deacon |
| F. W. Driver | P.G. Supt. of Works |

| G. R. Bussey | P.G. Inner Guard |
| J. W. Sanders, W. C. Brasher, C. F. Goodenough | P.G. Stewards |
| John Gilbert | P.G. Tyler |

Brothers Lambert, Klenck, Lardner, and Walls, were elected on the Committee of General Purposes, to which Committee was referred a proposition for the purchase of a Standard and Sword of State. Bro. Hammerton Prov. Grand Treasurer presented his balance sheet, which was of a highly satisfactory character. The thanks of Provincial Grand Lodge were unanimously accorded to Bro. Hammerton, and also to Bro. Klenck P.G. Secretary, for services during the past year, and after some minor matters had been disposed of, the Provincial Grand Mark Lodge was closed in due form. Subsequently a banquet was provided, which a large proportion of the brethren attended, but the want of "good service" detracted from what might otherwise have been greatly enjoyed, and in this respect, at least, the usual good repute of the Clarence Hotel was not upheld. The customary toasts were briefly given, and met with equally brief response, and, partaking of nothing beyond the ordinary character, such compliments and acknowledgments do not require lengthy notice. The evening was made agreeable by the vocal and instrumental efforts of the Provincial Grand Organist, Bro. Dunkley, assisted by able volunteers in the persons of Bros. Walls, Dibdin, and Stevens. An early train conveyed the company to London, rejoicing in the continued prosperity of their Provincial Grand Mark Lodge.

BRO. DR. BENJAMIN FRANKLIN,

PENNSYLVANIA'S THIRD GRAND MASTER.

In 1785, when Franklin left France, his French brethren bid him an affectionate and fraternal adieu, the Lodge at Rouen especially honouring him as a great Statesman and a Freemason. Thus did three great countries—America, England and France, and the highest Masonic authority of each of them, delight to do honour to Bro. Benjamin Franklin, the Philadelphia Freemason. In France especially does he appear to have been idolised. John Adams wrote from Paris to his wife in 1778: "My venerable colleague, Dr. Franklin, enjoys a privilege here that is much to be envied. Being seventy years of age, the ladies not only allow him to embrace them as often as he pleases, but they are perpetually embracing him. I told him, yesterday, that I would write this to America."

In person Franklin was well formed, five feet ten inches in height, with light complexion and grey eyes. In manners he was affable and winning. In early life he formed the excellent habit of speaking ill of no one, and as much good as possible of everybody. This course made the number of his friends legion. While a boy his father often repeated to him the proverb of King Solomon: "Seest thou a man diligent in his calling, he shall stand before kings." Franklin did stand before five kings, and with one of them, Christian VII. King of Denmark, he had the honour to sit down to dinner. George III. of England, in one of his Note Books, applied the following quotation from Shakespeare's "Julius Cæsar," to Franklin:

> "O, let us have him, for his silver hairs
> Will purchase us a good opinion,
> And buy men's voices to commend our deeds."

The name of Franklin is everywhere in America. There are twenty-two States in the Union that have a Franklin county, while Ohio has nineteen towns called Franklin. His name is applied to Masonic Lodges, colleges, banks, hotels, insurance companies, streets, squares, and, in fine, for all purposes for which a good name is needed.

Franklin died in the city of his choice, the only home he ever knew, where he was married, where his children were born, and his wife died—in Philadelphia. This event occurred on 17th April 1790, when he was in the eighty-fifth year of his age. He left a fortune of £30,000, all honestly gained, and a reputation which was great in his lifetime, greater at his death, and which has ceaselessly grown ever since. It belongs not to the eighteenth century only, but to all time, and not to America exclusively, but to the world.

On Franklin's death, the Congress of the United States ordered that badges of mourning should be worn by the members for one month; and even the Legislature of France, on motion of Mirabeau, unanimously resolved that mourning should be worn in his memory for three days.

Although Franklin was so distinguished a Mason, his remains were interred without Masonic ceremonies. Twenty thousand of his fellow-citizens attended his funeral, but his brethren were not there in a body, as Masons. There was a reason for this—it was the result of Masonic schism. Franklin had been Grand Master of Pennsylvania under the earliest Grand Lodge of England, nicknamed the "Moderns," and a rival Grand Lodge of England, self-styled, and miscalled, the "Ancients," had grown more popular, and finally had supplanted the earlier one, so that when Franklin died, there had not been, for nearly twenty years, a Lodge of the "Moderns" in Philadelphia. During much of this period Franklin had been abroad, in England and France, and unacquainted with Masonic matters at home, where many of the old Masons, when they found their Lodges decaying, had given them up, and either remained unaffiliated, or petitioned for admission into a Lodge of their schismatic, but unsuccessful rivals, the so-called "Ancients." Franklin, in his old age, was not inclined to seek new Masonic affiliations. He respected and loved the sinking ship of the "Moderns," and never deserted it. This is very far from being to his discredit. He had been twice P.G.M. of the old Craft which introduced Masonry on this continent, and that in the "City of Brotherly Love," and it would have been eminently unbecoming in him to haul down his Masonic colours, and when nearly eighty years of age to petition a rival, but successful Masonic Lodge, to be heled, and received among its membership. Franklin was not given a Masonic funeral, because, in the lingo of the day, he was a "Modern" Mason, which was greatly to his credit.

Franklin is represented at the present day by numerous descendants. In the year 1863 they numbered 110, represented chiefly by such families as the Baches, Duanes, Hodges and Sergeants. But the pilgrims to his tomb, in the venerable graveyard of old Christ Church, at the corner of Arch and Fifth-streets, comprehend citizens of all the States in the Union, and visiting strangers from all climes of the world; and all tread with reverent steps as they approach the sepulchre of him who was one of the fathers of this free republic, and also of our great American Masonic Craft.

In a work recently published, "The Life of the Rev. William Smith, D.D., by his grandson Horace W. Smith," there are contained a number of reflections upon the character of Franklin that are unworthy alike of the biographer and his subject, and which we feel impelled to notice. Dr. Smith, as well as Dr. Franklin, was a Mason, but they were diametrically opposed in politics, and Dr. Smith, during his lifetime, on several occasions allowed his zeal to outrun his discretion, as well as the fraternal feelings he owed Dr. Franklin. Dr. Smith's character in this regard was justly outlined by Robert Jenney, in a letter to the Archbishop of Canterbury, under date of Philadelphia, 27th Nov. 1758, in which the writer refers to "the practice of some clergymen intermixing what is their true and real business with politics in civil affairs, and being so zealous therein as to blame and even revile those brethren who cannot approve of their conduct in this particular," and, he adds, "I am sorry to be forced to name William Smith who, 'tis said, is gone to England with this view, and without doubt will wait upon your Grace." (Life of William Smith, Vol. I., p 185). There was certainly no love lost between Smith and Franklin, but the latter was usually discreet in what he said and wrote, while the former was not.

On the day that Franklin died, a great thunderstorm passed over the city, and the Hon. Thomas Willing, Dr. William Smith and others, were dining with Governor Mifflin at the Falls of Schuylkill. When Franklin's death was announced, the biographer of Dr. Smith tells us, Mr. Willing wrotes these lines:

> "What means that flash, the thunder's awful roar—
> The blazing sky—unseen, unheard before?
> Sage Smith replies, 'Our Franklin is no more.'
> The clouds, long subject to his magic chain,
> Exulting now, their liberty regain."

Bro. Rev. Dr. Smith, at the request of the American Philosophical Society (of which Dr. Franklin was President), pronounced a commemorative oration on the deceased in the German Lutheran Church, Fourth-street, above Arch, Philadelphia, on 1st March 1791, in the presence of President and Mrs. Washington, Vice-President and Mrs. Adams, the Senate and House of Representatives, the Governor and Legislature of Pennsylvania, and others, in the course of which he paid the following glowing tribute to Dr. Franklin:

"He had a delight in communicating his discoveries to his friends, and such was his manner of communication that he appeared rather seeking to acquire information himself than to give it to others . . . From the beginning to the end of his life he observed the same modest and cautious method of communication . . . . . Speaking of his 'electrical' labours he said: Although Von Kliest had discovered some properties of the Leyden phial, and Muschenbrook to his cost had experienced others, it remained for Dr. Franklin to discover its true principles, and how by means of it, to accumulate, retain and discharge any quantity of the electrical fluid with safety. . . . . He was the first who fired gunpowder, gave magnetism to needles of steel, melted metals, and killed animals of considerable size, by means of electricity. He was the first to inform electricians, and the world in general, of the power of metaline points in conducting the electric fluid, acknowledging at the same time, with a candour worthy of true philosophy, that he received the first information of the power from Mr. Thomas Hopkinson. . . . . Amid this general admiration Dr. Franklin continued to communicate his knowledge and discoveries, under the humble appellation of conjectures or guesses. But no man ever made bolder or happier guesses, either in philosophy or politics. He was likewise a bold experimenter in both."

This was a noble tribute from a political opponent, but that opponent's biographer belittles his ancestor by relating this anecdote: "After the conclusion of the oration, on Dr. Smith's return home, we are told that his daughter Rebecca told him, 'I don't think you believe in more than one-tenth part of what you said of old Ben Lightening-rod. Did you?' The doctor, without either affirming or denying, laughed heartily.

Such stories, perhaps, may do for the privacy of home, but should never appear in serious print, and we take it Dr. Smith regretted the unwise assertions he had made during Dr. Franklin's lifetime.

In conclusion, we would say that Philadelphia has honoured the memory of Franklin by naming one of its Lodges for him—Franklin Lodge, No. 134—and it will not be invidous to assert that there is no Masonic body in the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania held in higher esteem than it, or that has a larger number of distinguished citizens included in its membership. It was constituted on St. John's Day, 24th June 1812; a great grandson of Bro. Benjamin Franklin—Bro. Capt. Richard Bache—being its first W.M., and another great grandson, Bro. Dr. Franklin Bache, afterwards affiliated with it. Franklin Lodge has given three Grand Masters to the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, viz., Bro. George M. Dallas Vice-President of the United States, Bro. John M. Read Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, and Bro. Peter Williamson, the last of whom alone is left for the Brethren to honour.

Such was Franklin as a Mason, and such were his Masonic descendants. Mirabeau said of the great Philosopher: "Antiquity would have raised altars to this mighty genius, who compassed in his mind both the heavens and the earth, and was able to restrain, alike, thunderbolts and tyrants." Franklin Lodge has reared an altar to his memory, and we trust that the lights around it may never be extinguished. There is also an altar raised in his honour in the heart of every Pennsylvania Mason, and the entire fraternity in this jurisdiction must disapear before the name of Benjamin Franklin will cease to be revered. During our Sesqui-Centennial celebration glowing and eloquent tributes will, no doubt, be paid to his Masonic character, for his achievements for the Craft. We have now done what we could, in The Keystone, to lay a sprig of Acacia upon his tomb.

GRAND LODGE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

After the orchestra had played "Meditation," by Gounod, the Grand Master Hon. Samuel B. Dick, delivered the address of welcome. After referring to the event which the day celebrated, the Grand Master said that it was a singular anniversary. "A century and a-half of Masonic history of Masonic life, demands of us all our earnest admiration. The forerunner of organised Masonic institutions in this land, the Grand Lodge of Pensylvannia points to its history as the highest evidence of the justice of its claim to the love and obedience of its members and to the respect of the Craft round the globe.

"The mysteries, virtues, and teachings of Freemasonry come out of the ages, as forming one great light to illumine the human mind, so that it can understand the truth. Centuries have confirmed these teachings, and tradition has transmitted them to the present age. The high mission of Freemasonry is to preserve and maintain them, so that the generations that are to come may receive them unchanged. The duty is positive, but not onerous, for as truth is alike indestructible and eternal, this duty demands fidelity and honesty for its full discharge. Our proceedings to-day have been based on an earnest faith in our Institution, an earnest love of the principles it teaches and exemplifies, and an earnest determination to preserve and maintain them, which animates every brother of our Craft. History, since she began to chronicle the events which mark the passing time, has gathered on her pages the evidence of the moral grandeur of Freemasonry. There, too, may be found the utterances of men whose attachment to the principles of Freemasonry was among their distinctive characteristics. In the Old Testament and the New are found some striking references to the existence of the Institution which, in later days, has been best known by the term Freemasonry. The relations of our Institution to society, its members, and the history of our Grand Lodge, will be given you by distinguished citizens who are our brethren."

A well-trained chorus of male voices having given a sample of their vocal powers, Governor Hoyt was introduced and delivered an address on "Masonry and its Relations to the Outer World." The Governor held that fraternity was not confined to those who meet in the Lodge-room. Masons proposed to help their brothers and fulfil the new and heightened demands of human fellowship. They do not usurp the rights of the Church; they invade no ecclesiastical domain; they usurp the franchises of no sect or Church or their ministers ordained under other and higher credentials, whose exhortations are to be enforced under higher sanctions. They have no political dilemmas except the quality of men as children of a common Father, and no theological dogmas except only the daily prayer and precept that 'we may practise outside of the Lodge the principles of religion and morality we are taught in it.'" Without insisting on the antiquity of Freemasonry, Governor Hoyt said he was insisting upon the antiquity or the reasons underlying it and the identity of its doctrines and methods with right humanity. These have come streaming down the centuries, the central ideas of rightness and the measures of justice which have saved us.

"For my part I fully believe that mankind will finally triumph over the destiny which now seems so grievously to encompass them. They have well held their own. Step by step humanity has climbed nearer the heavens whence we came. The charity and art and democracy with which the Olympian games glorified the Hellenic race ought not to be anachronisms to us. Our contensions are in the arena of ethics and morals. Rewards for victory in achievements more or less precious than the wreath from the sacred olive tree in Olympia awaits successful competitors. They are for those who can 'best work in the best degree.' Our beatitudes terminate not upon the individual, but upon the family, the State, and the race. We shall yet reap the harvest.

"And it shall come to pass in that day, I will hear, saith the Lord, I will hear the heavens, and they shall hear the earth, and the earth shall hear the corn and the wine and the oil, and they shall hear Jezral."

The remainder of the programme in the Academy consisted of a "Chorus of Pilgrims" by the vocalists, an address by the Honourable Henry W. Williams, President Judge of the 4th District of Pennsylvania; a cantata "To the Sons of Art," and an address by J. Simpson Africa, of Huntingdon, Pa., on "History of Freemasonry in Pennsylvania."

Lieut.-General Sir Garnet Wolseley will command in chief the expeditionary force that is being sent to Egypt, while Major-General H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught P.G. Warden, will have under him the First Brigade of the First Division, consisting of the three Battalions of the Grenadier, Coldstream, and Scots Guards respectively.

The meeting at Wimbledon concluded on Saturday last with the customary distribution of prizes. Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Albany presided, it being the first occasion on which Her Royal Highness had taken part in any public ceremonial since the death, a few days after her marriage, of her sister.

The Lodge was called off, and afterwards resumed its Masonic duties when Bro. Gray answered the questions leading to the second degree and Bro. T. Clark worked the first and second sections of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. Bro. Smyth was elected W.M. for the ensuing week. Lodge was closed and adjourned.

Finsbury Park Lodge of Instruction, No. 1288.—On Wednesday evening last, at the Cock Tavern, Highbury Corner, there were present Bros. Pearcy (Preceptor) as W.M., Cooke S.W., J. Osborn J.W., Matthews S.D., Freeman J.D., Marks I.G., T. Goode P.M. Secretary, and several other brethren. Lodge was opened in the first and second degrees, when the W.M. stated it was his intention to rehearse the ceremony of the third degree. A candidate duly presented himself, and passed examination. Bro. Pearcy then opened the Lodge in the third degree and carried out the ceremony in a painstaking way, giving the traditional history and explaining the tracing board. Bro. Endean, S.W. of No. 9, was elected a member. Other business having been transacted, Lodge was closed and adjourned till Wednesday next.

City of Westminster Lodge, No. 1563.—An emergency meeting was held on Thursday, 20th instant, at the Regent Masonic Hall, Air-street, Regent-street, W., when there were present:—Bros. J. Waugh W.M., A. J. Hammond S.W., T. Eastgate J.W., J. Jones S.D., W. Lee J.D., J. E. Shand I.P.M. Treasurer, E. J. Scott P.M. Secretary, W. C. Smith I.G., Potter P.M. Tyler, Thos. White P.M., B. E. Swallow P.M. P.G.D. Middlesex; Bros. Kobler, Hill, Newman, and others. After Lodge had been formally opened, the ballot was taken for Messrs. W. H. Bolt, E. O. Ashby, W. J. Smith (a son of the Inner Guard). The result in each case being unanimous, these gentlemen were duly initiated. The next business was to pass Bro. Walter Howard; the next to raise Bro. Bates and Armstrong. Each of these brethren having shown proficiency, the ceremonies were duly performed. The brethren afterwards dined together, when the usual toasts, harmony, and music by Bro. Howard (Messrs. Moore and Burgess Minstrel Troupe) on banjo, brought the evening to a happy close. The Lodge now stands adjourned until September next.

Kingsland Lodge of Instruction, No. 1693.—This successful Lodge of Instruction held its 114th meeting on Monday, 24th July. A noticeable feature as regards this Lodge of Instruction is, that since its foundation, it has had numerous attendances, and never missed any of its meetings. While other Lodges of Instruction have adjourned through the summer months, this Lodge continues its work with great success. The meetings are held at the Canonbury Tavern, Canonbury-square, at 8.30, every Monday, and Lodge closes punctually at ten. The Preceptor, Bro. Trewinnard P.M. is a very energetic Craftsman, and we should advise young Masons who want instruction to join this Lodge. The fourth Monday in the month is devoted to the rehearsal of the installation ceremony. Last Monday, Bro. P.M. J. Osborn, of the Sir Hugh Myddelton Lodge, rehearsed this ceremony in a very able manner, giving very great satisfaction to a large number of brethren, amongst whom we noticed P.M.'s Gillham, Pearcy, Fenner; Bro. Forge W.M. 1950, Bro. Dignam W.M. 1524, and a great many brethren of other London Lodges.

Brixton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1949.—The usual meeting was held on Tuesday last, the 25th inst., at Bro. Monk's, Prince Regent, Dulwich-road, East Brixton, where there was a good attendence of brethren, including Bros. H. Hooper W.M., Richard Poore S.W., G. W. Knight J.W., E. A. Francis Preceptor, H. M. Williams Secretary, A. E. Albert S.D., R. R. Johnstone J.D., Jos. Perry I.G.; also E. Storr, George Monk, G. Millen, W. Millen, G. Flint, H. Durham. After preliminaries, the ceremony of initiation was rehearsed by the W.M., in a most efficient manner, with Bro. Storr as candidate. By the permission of the W.M., Bro. E. Storr rehearsed the ceremony of the first degree, with Bro. Flint as candidate, to the great satisfaction of the brethren. Lodge being closed in the second degree, the following brethren were unanimously elected members, and returned thanks:—Bros. Hy. Durham Domatic Lodge, No. 177, Geo. Flint Great Northern Lodge, No. 1287. A resolution was unanimously passed, and ordered to be inserted on the minutes, to the W.M. Bro. H. Hooper, thanking him for the able manner in which he had conducted the Lodge that evening, for the first time in his Masonic career. Bro. Richard Poore having been elected W.M. for the ensuing week, and formal business being concluded, Lodge was closed in due form.

MASONIC MENDICANCY.

THERE is an ugly sound in the title of some correspondence we have recently had addressed to us, and of which it would be scarcely palatable to give our readers a more plentiful dish. The subject has been handled from various points of view; and we suppose if arguments pro and con were adduced at ever such great length, they would hardly do much to afford a solution of the problem of what to do with the poor whom, we are told, we shall always have with us. Whilst, therefore, recognising that truth, and our responsibilities towards those on whom the hand of misfortune has been laid heavily, the question very largely resolves itself into that of discrimination, whether on the part of individuals, or collectively. We confess we do not like the words "mendicant" and "tramp," as applied to the Institution of whose interests we are so jealous, and for whose welfare all true Masons must ever be solicitous. But that such genus homo exist, either through misfortunes and calamities over which they could have no control, or else through their own improvidence, we are bound painfully to admit. The question is not merely confined in its application to our own Order, for we find these social pests levying their blackmail on all sorts and conditions of society; and our philanthropists and social reformers in every age have sought in vain for an effectual remedy for the evils of professional mendicity. In a country like our own, where the competition amongst men of every calling and profession is so keen, there must of necessity be a certain number of the weak who will always "go to the wall," and whose deplorable condition it is hopeless to redress, in spite of all our private and public benevolence. These people must be, however, divided into the two classes of which we speak, and between them is a disparity as marked and as wide as that 'twixt light and darkness. There is very little doubt in our mind that if discrimination is necessary in doling out relief to the many applicants who are ever looking askance at the hand of Charity, it is equally valuable in the selection and admission of candidates into Freemasonry. The Order has made such huge strides of recent years that it is often a difficult matter to foretel how many of those who are initiated join the Institution from "no mercenary or other unworthy motives," or with an eye to some ulterior benefit. We do not hold strictly to the opinion expressed by some of our correspondents, that none but men of affluence should be enlisted in our ranks, because it is a matter of every-day experience that many who may be to all external appearance in comfortable circumstances, are not so just and upright as they seem to be when standing in the North-east corner, and who may have sinister motives for uniting themselves with the Craft, but which it is, of course, impossible for the brethren to instantly detect. On the other hand, there are many who, though known to be not blessed with too large a share of this world's goods, are nevertheless good men and true, and have shed lustre upon our profession by their probity and upright conduct. But returning at once to the class of Masonic tramps—who, by-the bye, are vastly more numerous than one of our correspondents seems to imagine—we say at once that such persons have forfeited all claim to the consideration of the brethren, and with regard to whom there must be no sentimental sympathy. We have often pointed out that there is somewhat too much sermonizing in Freemasonry, and if in their honest zeal some brethren are too lavish in their praise of the charitable work wrought by our Ancient and Honourable Institution, others appear unduly biassed in the other direction, and say, "if we boast so fluently of our good deeds in this respect, how is it that so many of our members are to be found in needy circumstances?" They seem to forget that ours is not a friendly benefit society, of which there is such plenteous selection for those who seek a reward for their forethought and providence. It is a painful fact that at all times, and especially at this season of the year, the country is overrun by a class of persons who never desire or strive to earn an honest living, but who are constantly traversing the kingdom from end to end, pleading every pitiable excuse for filching from the purses of the benevolent and kindly-disposed. With such individuals no right-thinking person can sympathise in any way; and it is our duty, whether Masons or not, to employ every effort to arrest the spread of imposture and mendicity in this most common form. All the means hitherto adopted to check the great and increasing evil have failed to bring about the desired results; and, as long as the public continue to relieve the whining supplicants for alms who "play the old soldier" at their doors, all hope of suppressing such professional frauds must be abandoned. It is scarcely necessary to point out that these impositions are daily practised, not only upon Masonic benevolence—although our almoners, especially in large centres, which afford a convenient halting-place for beggars, could no doubt "a tale unfold" such as might well startle us—but upon the nobility, clergy, and every other source from which philanthropy is known to emanate. We have only to read the daily prints to see to how vast an extent the "begging-letter" system is adopted by unscrupulous cadgers; and we can but come to the conclusion that it is their very success which leads them into such audacious boldness as to entangle them alternately in the meshes of the law. Of this we have witnessed numerous cases within the last few weeks in our metropolitan and provincial police-courts, and it is the invariable experience of our detective force that the difficulties in the way of bringing such scoundrels to justice are almost insuperable. Their appeals for aid are so adroitly worded, and posted in such a variety of channels, that they very often succeed in covering their knavery in a way which renders detection impossible. No doubt the Charity Organisation Societies have done much in their sphere to place salutary obstacles in the path of the professional tramp, though we could scarcely apply the same system to our own Fraternity. The one deals with a public pest; whilst we have to deal with men who, though unworthy of our sympathy, are still brethren, and appeal to us as such. There is very little difference in the depravity of both; but they have to be dealt with in a different way. The Charity Organisation Societies have cumbrous machinery, with paid officials, and we fear a large proportion of the funds collected for the purpose of reliving the necessitous finds its way into the well-lined pockets of salaried servants. We have known of many really deserving applicants to them for relief subjected to the most harrowing and inquisitorial process of enquiry and surveillance; the heart has grown sick with hope deferred, and ruin has inevitably set in before the ostentatious dispensers of public alms have thought proper to advise that they are satisfied with the genuineness of the appeal. And even after all, when the dole has tardily and grudgingly come, it has been so spare and slender as to afford no substantial assistance. The poor-boxes at our police-courts give, as near as we can cite, a humane and ready means of aid, for promptitude in such cases is rendered imperative by their very urgency. If a family is in need of the common necessaries of life, they cannot afford to await the result of a prolonged, and often an inexcusable, "enquiry" at the hands of a "circumlocution party," to whom the pangs of hunger are unknown. "While the grass grows the horse starves" is a motto bearing much truth; and if a man needs ready help, it is valueless when delayed for a month. We understand the method adopted by the Lord Mayor and other magistrates is to grant such aid as the condition of the poor boxes will admit—unfortunately they are, by all accounts, at a very low ebb just now—upon the recommendation of one or two respectable householders; and this is a step which in nine cases out of ten frustrates any attempt at imposture. In the event of a distressed brother applying to any Lodge, the practice usually adopted is for one of the brethren—generally the almoner—to visit the applicant and, by kindly enquiry, ascertain the real condition in which he is placed. This is only a wise and just precaution, for the safety of the Lodge funds; and we imagine that no brother so reduced as to prompt him to ask for aid would object to an examination so fraternally and privately conducted. Nor do we believe there are many cases in which such applications made by the deservingly necessitous have been overlooked by the brethren of our Lodges. On the contrary, we have observed that, if an error has been made, it has been invariably on the side of leniency, and the amount granted as large as the benevolent fund of the Lodge could possibly bear. It is earnestly to be hoped that a large proportion of the money which is now lavished upon vagabonds who live upon the good nature and indiscriminate kindness of the public may be diverted into proper channels. Our chief aim should be, whilst extending the hand of Charity "with no bounds save that of prudence," to those who need it, to banish from our midst those lazy, skulking mendicants who fasten like leeches upon our social system, and divert the flow of true philanthropy from its legitimate and proper channels. The correspondence lately appearing in our columns may have some effect in impressing upon brethren the positive necessity of discrimination in the granting of relief, and, if so, our object in drawing attention to it will have been accomplished. Still that caution should not degenerate into the persecution delineated by Dickens in his satire upon Bumble, the "porochial" beadle, or the "gentleman in the white waistcoat"; and we feel assured that if on the one hand a tight-rein is drawn upon the unscrupulous persons who would, if they could, live in idleness upon the generosity of their more prudent but often, in the matter of Charity indiscreet, brethren there will be a reduction in the number of that undesirable section of the Fraternity, and a by no means diminished solicitude towards those who are deserving of our Masonic help and commiseration.

We have to thank Messrs. Bedford Lemere and Co. for copy of their photograph of the members of the Lodge of Prosperity, No. 65, and their friends, taken on the occasion of the summer banquet, held at the Star and Garter Hotel, Richmond, on Wednesday, the 19th ult. Knowing, as we do, so many of those present at the meeting, we can bear testimony to the excellence of the several portraits, while, as regards the difficult question of grouping together so many subjects, the artists appear to have been more than usually successful. We trust the photograph will find an honoured place on the walls of the Lodge. One other matter we must notice, and that with an apology for our excusable error. The artists are not "Messrs. Bedford and Lemere," of 147 Strand, as stated by us recently, but "Messrs. Bedford Lemere and Co." of that address. We have great pleasure in making this rectification.

The following is the text of Bro. James Stevens's proposed motion:—

"That, having regard to the great increase, during the past twenty-five years, in the number of 'Lodges within the London District,' (see Book of Constitutions, page 72), this Grand Lodge desires to respectfully represent to His Royal Highness the Most Worshipful Grand Master the desirability of subdividing the said London District into Subordinate Grand Lodges, to be constituted in like manner to Provincial Grand Lodges."

AFTER THE SESQUI-CENTENNIAL.

THE Keystone asserts that the recent St. John's Day celebration by the Pennsylvanian Craft, in commemoration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the formation of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, was enjoyed in all its great features by the thousands of brethren who had the privilege of participating in it.

The gathering was of a remarkably comprehensive character, including features grave and gay, dignified and entertaining. The historical idea was at the foundation of the celebration, and ample justice was done to it, as was most becoming. We commemorated a notable event—the origin of Masonic Grand Lodge Government in America, with the exercise of the electoral privilege to choose a Provincial Grand Master to preside over the Craft in the then province of Pennsylvania. In the ceremonies of both the Grand Lodge and the Academy of Music, the history of this leading event in American Masonry was correctly and ably given, and the records thus made by the different distinguished brethren who prepared the historic papers will be preserved in our annals as valued additions to American Masonic history. The mists that obscured the past have been scattered, the truth that was before discovered has been officially promulgated, justice has been done the early fathers of the Pennsylvanian Craft, and the antiquity of our Fraternity in this jurisdiction has been placed beyond a peradventure. No more will it be pretended that any Lodge, or Grand Lodge, antedates those first constituted in the city of Philadelphia, in the good old Keystone State. And, as Bro. Hughan pointed out in his valuable communication in our last week's issue, the first Lodge ever constituted in America by the Grand Lodge of the "Ancients," as well as by the Grand Lodge of the "Moderns," was located in Philadelphia. We have heretofore shown, in these columns, that the same priority may be justly claimed for the introduction of Royal Arch and Templar Masonry in America, the "city of Brotherly Love" in every instance being the Masonic pioneer, the premier or mother city of Freemasonry. The pages of Masonic history written for the Sesqui-Centennial celebration, will remain for the instruction of posterity, and be a lasting monument to the ability and industry of their several compilers. All of these we shall present in full.

We have read in the local press, that the author of this celebration was a certain brother, who originated and introduced the resolution in the Grand Lodge providing for the Sesqui-Centennial celebration, which was on Saturday last so fully and enjoyably observed. In a certain sense this is true; but there is a higher sense in which another is entitled to the honour, and we desire to name the Brother whom we consider the author of the celebration, and to whom, in this connection, a sufficient tribute has not yet been paid. Brother Benjamin Franklin was the "father" of our Masonic anniversary, for it was he who reported in his newspaper the Pennsylvanian Gazette, the first meeting of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, only two days after it occurred. Without this cotemporaneous record, we should have had no specific information of this important fact. All honour, then, to Bro. Benjamin Franklin, who was wiser than he knew when he penned and published that small item of news concerning the first meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, and its election of Bro. William Allen as its first Grand Master. Without this act, we should at this time have been unable to sufficiently ascertain the facts whereon to base the historic claim to precedence of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, and the notable events commemorated in our St. John's Day celebration. So much for the historic features of our Sesqui-Centennial. But there were others.

The procession of the Craft was of a remarkable character. Over five thousand brethren were in line, and all of them were representative men. They were not decorated with regalia—they wore no distinguishing emblems, save a lambskin apron, and the Officers and Past Officers each the jewel of his office. They were only the ornaments of exalted personal character, native dignity, manliness and moral worth. Many of our best citizens were in the ranks. And these ranks are seen so rarely in public, that they always attract public attention. They were filled by those who do not court applause by display, by men of knowledge, intellectual, financial and social status. The Masonic Fraternity was demonstrated to be not a refuge for persons of impaired character, nor a hospital for the cure of diseased reputations, but a Temple composed of living stones, all plumb, level and square. The hundreds of rejected applicants did not appear in that procession to disfigure it with their fragmentary moral, social and intellectual characters. Masonry demands for its spiritual Temple perfect ashlars, and that its demand has been complied with, is evident whenever a procession of the Craft appears on a great anniversary occasion.

It will doubtless be a number of years before there is another demonstration by the Freemasons of Pennsylvania akin to that which was made on St. John Baptist's Day 1882. Such celebrations should not be frequent. Their impressiveness and value depend upon their infrequency. They are red-letter days in the history of the Craft, to be looked forward to after long intervals of every-day work and refreshment. When thus observed they stimulate healthy Masonic action, gratify the brethren, and emphasise great principles and leading Masonic events. They draw together visiting brethren from neighbouring and even distant jurisdictions, all of whom sit together as members of a common Craft, and rejoice with their brethren in their local celebration. No one, we are sure, regrets our Sesqui-Centennial celebration, while every one who participated in it will bear through life the recollection of a most enjoyable Masonic anniversary, one well planned, well executed, and that reflected credit upon all the Grand Officers and sub-Committees that for months were busily engaged in perfecting its details. Long live the R.W. Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of Pennsylvania, whose Sesqui-Centennial has just been so fitly and gloriously commemorated!—

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF ESSEX.

THE Freemasons of the Province of Essex may be congratulated on the success which attended their Annual Meeting. This took place on Thursday, the 3rd instant. The place selected for the gathering was the Forest Hotel, Chingford, on the borders of Epping Forest, and the arrangements made by the members of the Chigwell Lodge, to whom had been conceded the honour of entertaining Prov. Grand Lodge, were of the most complete and satisfactory character. The weather was all that could be desired, and many of the guests availed themselves of the opportunity of driving to their destination through the beautiful scenery which surrounds this charming spot. The Prov. Grand Master, the Right Honourable the Lord Tenterden, K.C.B., opened his Grand Lodge shortly after the hour appointed, he having been detained some little time in consequence of missing a train. He was supported by the Rt. Hon. Lord Waveney, Provincial Grand Master Suffolk; the Rt. Wor. Sir Francis Burdett, Bart., Prov. G. Master Middlesex; R. W. Bro. Sir John Whittaker Ellis, Bart., Grand Junior Warden; Sir Charles Bright D.P.G.M. Middlesex; Matthew Clark P.P.D.G.M. Essex; Lieut.-Col. Creaton Grand Treasurer, Col. Shadwell H. Clerke G. Secretary, Rev. T. Cochrane G. Chaplain, and a very large number of Present and Past G. Officers of Essex and other Provinces. After the Provincial Grand Master had been saluted, the distinguished guests entered the Lodge room, and were received with the honours due to their rank. The minutes of the last Provincial Grand Lodge, held at Southend, on Tuesday, the 9th of August 1881, were read and unanimously confirmed. Several letters were read, expressing regret at inability to be present, from, amongst others, the R.W. Bro. T. F. Halsey, M.P., Prov. G. Master Hertfordshire, the R.W. Viscount Holmesdale Provincial Grand Master Kent, the Rev. C. J. Martyn P.G.C. D.P.G.M. Suffolk, Sir J. B. Monckton, Sheriff Hanson, Justice Cave, F. Wilson Iles D.P.G.M. Herts, Rev. F. B. Shepherd, &c. The roll was next called, and the representatives were in attendance from each of the nineteen Lodges which constitute the Province. The numerical strength of the members showed a slight falling off during the year as compared with 1880 and 1881, but the Financial Statement showed the condition of the Province was in every way satisfactory. On motion made and duly seconded, the Auditors' Report was unanimously adopted. In the course of his address Lord Tenterden remarked that the brethren of the Province might congratulate themselves on what had occurred during the past year. He commented on the vast increase that had taken place both in Lodges and in membership since H.R.H. the Prince of Wales had filled the office of Grand Master of the English Craft. He stated, on the authority of the Grand Secretary, that, though there was no official census, the number of subscribing members to Grand Lodge might be taken at 100,000, and when to this was added the list of honorary members, and Craftsmen who did not subscribe to any Lodge, some idea might be arrived at as to the magnitude of our organisation. With respect to their own Province, it was true they were not quite so strong this time as they were in the two latter years, but their number was still in excess of what it was in 1879. Moreover, this decrease could be accounted for; the Province embraced an agricultural district, and it was fully recognised that matters were not so prosperous as they could wish. During the year he had received proposals for two new Lodges, but in one case he had felt it incumbent on him to refuse the request. However, a third proposal had just been brought under his notice, and this he felt justified in encouraging. He impressed on the members of Provincial Grand Lodge the necessity of discountenancing any fictitious or ricketty bantlings. The Prov. Grand Master next referred to the late visit of the Duke of Connaught in attendance on Her most Gracious Majesty. On that occasion the brethren of the Chigwell Lodge had asked him to present an address to the Queen, and this he had much pleasure in forwarding through the prescribed channel, and to which a most gracious reply had been received from the Duke of Connaught. Reference was then made to the zeal displayed by the Duke of Connaught in all Masonic matters. He (Lord Tenterden) had had the honour of installing him as Master of a Lodge; he was a good Mason, and a good soldier, and would doubtless render a good account of himself in the duties he had just undertaken. Speaking of the Charity Organisation, just adopted in the Province, it was satisfactory to know that at the last Elections they had secured the return of one boy, one girl, and one old lady candidate. The Charity Committee were to be congratulated on this result. However, still more had to be done; it was requisite that there should be united action, and that there should be a good pull, a strong pull, and a pull altogether. In speaking of those who were unable to be present, Lord Tenterden remarked that all would regret the absence of Bro. Philbrick, the D.P.G.M., who had been compelled to go to Bury St. Edmunds on some urgent, though disagreeable, business. He trusted, however, they might see him later in the day. He intimated that it was his intention of continuing the services of Bro. Philbrick as Deputy Prov. Grand Master, and paid that worthy brother a well-merited compliment for the zeal he displayed in the conduct of the business, and heartily thanked him for the assistance he rendered him personally. He congratulated the members of Prov. Grand Lodge on the honour conferred on them by the visit of two Prov. Grand Masters, and threw out a hint that some united action might be initiated for mutual assistance in securing the return of their respective candidates. Bearing all these matters in mind, it could scarcely be asserted their history was a stagnant one. With respect to the proposed amendment in the Constitutions of the Order, on the principle that two many cooks would spoil the broth, he had suggested to Bro. Philbrick that he should prepare a résumé of the suggested alterations. This request had been complied with, and the following circular is the result of Bro. Philbrick's labours.

The revisions made in the Book of Constitutions may be thus generally summarised:—

(1) The whole of the Laws have been collated and re-arranged, grouping the Rules under their proper heads, and in consecutive order.

(2) The discrepancies in the wording of Laws dealing with the same subject have been altered, so as to make one uniform language run through the whole Book.

The alterations, other than those merely verbal or necessary for the sake of clearness, have been studiously kept to the smallest number, and may be classified as under:—

(3) Expansions of the existing Laws where the present wording wanted explanation to make the meaning clearer—or

(4) The statement of the Laws, which have long obtained practice and are universally acted on, it being deemed desirable to express plainly on the face of the Book of Constitutions the construction and interpretation which have been accepted for years.

N.B.—It will be noted that no new Law, or Rule, and no alteration of substance is involved under any of the foregoing heads.

(5) NEW RULES—The introduction of which has been avoided as far as could be. The principal new matter will be found in the regulations as to the official conduct of the records of private Lodges and their returns to Grand Lodge; in the increased fees for warrants for new Lodges, which the present position of the Craft, as contrasted with 1813, when the table now in force was adopted, is thought to justify; in bettering the status of serving brethren in certain cases; in extending the powers of the appeal to all cases; and in making due provision for the business to be brought before the Grand Lodge.

It is believed that the Rules as now framed are of a clear nature, explaining themselves, and such as the Craft is fully enabled to form its judgment upon, when attention has been directed to them. Great pains have been taken to adhere to the frame and substance of Masonry as contained in the ancient landmarks of the Order.

Lord Tenterden, in concluding, referred to our Charities as the golden columns and bright jewels of the Order. He impressed on all the necessity of a solemn and efficient working of the Craft. There was a vitality in Freemasonry; it was a true system of morality; and its teachings were something real and tangible; not to be cast aside as dreams Freemasonry afforded a common ground, for all who belong to it, to advance the best interests of humanity, and he urged one and all to sustain it in its integrity.

The W. Bro. Andrew Durrant P.M. 276 was re-elected Provincial Grand Treasurer, and special recognition of the value of his previous services was made. The investment of Prov. Grand Officers for the next twelve months resulted as follows:—

After the new Prov. Grand Officers had been saluted, Bro. Andrew Durrant brought forward the motion which stood in his name:—

"That every Lodge in the Province add to the present payment to Provincial Grand Lodge a contribution of sixpence for each Subscribing Member per annum; the amount to be forwarded with the Annual Return, and to be applied towards making as many Lodges, in the name of the Worshipful Master for the time being, Life Subscribers of the Masonic Charities as the Funds will admit, not less than £10 10s being subscribed to each Charity, and the Lodges to have precedence according to seniority."

This elicited a considerable amount of discussion, several changes being suggested, but all—to our mind—leading to the same end. Eventually the motion was carried in the terms expressed above.

W. Bro. E. H. Debane proposed the following:—

"That four Provincial Grand Officers be now added to the Masonic Charity Committee, three Past and one Present; and that one of the Past Provincial Grand Officers retire by rotation at the yearly meeting of Provincial Grand Lodge, when a Present Grand Officer shall be elected to fill the vacancy," and after ample consideration this also was assented to, and the additional members of Committee were nominated and appointed. The other business comprised the consideration of Bro. Clabon's proposed addition to the amount payable to the Fund of Benevolence, but this met with no support, and consequently was negatived. Shortly after this Provincial Grand Lodge was closed.

A capital banquet was supplied by Messrs. Alex. Gordon and Co., the Proprietors of the Forest Hotel, who must be complimented on the success of their efforts to make the proceedings pass off agreeably.

The Provincial Grand Master brought under the notice of Provincial Grand Lodge the subject of the contributions to the Fund of Benelence, proposed by Bro. John M. Clabon P.G.D., at the Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge, held on the 7th June, on which occasion the question was postponed in order that an opportunity might be afforded to the Provincial Grand Lodges of considering whether any increase should be made to the Quarterages at present paid to Grand Lodge. After some discussion a resolution was proposed, approving the increased payment by Provincial Grand Lodges suggested by Bro. John M. Clabon, whereupon an amendment was moved, and subsequently carried, to the effect that the matter be referred to the respective Lodges in the Province for an expression of opinion thereon, in order that the Provincial Grand Master might be in a position to communicate to Grand Lodge the feeling of the Province on the subject. The report of the Board of Finance was presented by the Provincial Grand Treasurer and adopted, and the following resolutions were passed:—(1) On the motion of Brother T. S. Carter, "That twenty guineas be voted from the funds of Provincial Grand Lodge to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls." (2) On the motion of Bro. J. Terry, "That £10 be voted to the Hertford Lodge towards defraying the expenses of entertaining Provincial Grand Lodge." (3) On the motion of Brother J. E. Cussans, "That ten guineas be voted from the funds of Provincial Grand Lodge to the General Infirmary at Hertford. (4) On the motion of Bro. F. Sumner Knyvett, "That the sum of £30 be voted from Provincial Grand Lodge to refund to Bro. George Lambert the amount he advanced to the late Bro. Thomas Thomas, the Provincial Grand Tyler." (5) On the motion of Bro. John E. Dawson, "That the publication of the Provincial Calendar be continued," the usefulness of which was strongly referred to by the Provincial Grand Master. W. Bro. James Terry Prov. Grand Director of Ceremonies moved, pursuant to notice, the desirability of establishing a Charity Organisation for the Province, which was favourably received, and a Committee, composed of the Prov. Grand Master, Deputy Prov. Grand Master, Grand Treasurer, Grand Secretary, and the various Worshipful Masters of Lodges and Principals of Chapters in the Province, was appointed to frame rules for carrying out the proposal. The Prov. Grand Lodge having been closed with the usual ceremonies, the brethren afterwards partook of an excellent banquet in the Assembly Room, the evident forethought displayed in the arrangement eliciting the hearty appreciation of the brethren. Brother T. F. Halsey, M.P., Provincial Grand Master, presided. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bro. G. T. Carter 183, who was assisted by Bros. H. W. Schartau 1549, and E. J. Bell 1319. Bro. Malcolm Heywood 403 P.P.G.O. ably presided at the pianoforte. The dinner, which was of a first-class description, was supplied by Mr. Campling, of the Dimsdale Arms, and gave great satisfaction. Dinner having been served, and grace, "To Thee alone," (Hobbs) sung, the Provincial Grand Master proposed "The Queen and the Craft," saying that this toast was always received with cordiality, and even enthusiasm by every assemblage of loyal Masons. He sincerely trusted that for many years to come the Queen would continue to reign over a loyal and devoted people, and that a very long time would elapse before the health of their Most Worshipful Master would require to be given with the toast of the reigning Sovereign. The toast was received with great applause, and was drank, as all the succeeding toasts were, with Masonic honours. "God Save the Queen," was sung, the company joining in the chorus. The Provincial Grand Master said that time was going on, and as he knew that some of the brethren had to leave by an early train, he thought it was advisable to press on with the toasts, which included the health of those whom they delighted to honour. He begged therefore to propose "the Health of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Most Worshipful Grand Master." He felt convinced that he had only to mention the name of the Most Worshipful Grand Master to ensure that the toast would be received with the enthusiasm which it so much deserved. During the period—a long period now—he had presided over the Grand Lodge, Masonry, as they all well knew, had made great strides, and some of them also knew that on the occasion of Grand Lodge meeting to congratulate her Majesty on her escape from the attack of a would-be assassin, the crowd of Masons who attended was so great that many brethren from this Province were unable to obtain admission. They had heard something during the day of a proposal to increase their payments and subscriptions to the Fund of Benevolence, but the large attendance on the occasion in question made one almost fear that they would shortly be called upon to face the question of whether it would not be necessary to erect a larger Masonic Hall. But he would not go into that question at that time, it being one for the future rather than the present moment, but they must all rejoice at the continued prosperity which is marking the progress of the Craft, not only in its numbers—for an increase merely in numbers was not the best test of its prosperity—but in its increased efficiency, the largely increased amounts given to their Charitable Institutions, and the good feeling and enthusiasm that seemed to pervade all the brethren, from Grand Lodge to all the private Lodges. They must all hope and trust that spirit would continue and prosper still more, and that the Most Worshipful Grand Master would be spared for very many years to come to preside over a body whose welfare he knew His Royal Highness had very much at heart, and in whom he was very greatly interested. Ode, "Hail to thee, Albert" (Hobbs)—solo by Bro. G. T. Carter. The Provincial Grand Master said he had next to propose a toast which came nearer home to them, inasmuch as they had some of the brethren present to whom it referred. He begged to propose the Most Worshipful the Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers, past and present. He said it was not necessary for him to say much respecting the Most Worshipful the Pro Grand Master. They all knew how efficiently the Earl of Carnarvon discharged the duties of the Office when it was necessary for him to preside in the absence of the Most Worshipful Grand Master. They were acquainted with the great interest he took in the progress of the Craft, and the command of language he possessed in which to clothe his thoughts when he addressed them. They also knew the ability of the Earl of Lathom, the Deputy Grand Master, who was a true Mason, and in every respect well calculated to uphold the interests of the Craft. The merits of the rest of the Grand Officers were well known to those to whom he was speaking, and they were also acquainted with the zeal and enthusiasm they displayed, as well as the courtesy with which they met the members of the various Lodges. They were honoured with the presence of the Grand Secretary, on whose shoulders most of the labours of the Grand Lodge fell. It gave them very great pleasure to have this Officer present, and he could not but remember that on the last occasion the Provincial Grand Lodge met in Hertford, the Grand Secretary's predecessor in his office installed him as Provincial Grand Master. It must be gratifying to them all that on the next occasion of visiting Hertford they were honoured with the presence of the present Grand Secretary. Bro. Lambert, whose name was a household word amongst them, was also present; and Bros. Raynham Stewart and Clark, who were well known, were also present. He (the P.G.M.) felt sure that when such brethren came to visit them, they would give them a hearty welcome and they would be induced to come again. He coupled with the toast the name of the Grand Secretary. Song, "The Love Chase," (Watson), by Bro. E. J. Bell. The Grand Secretary (Bro. Lieutenant-Colonel Shadwell H. Clerke), on rising to respond to the toast, was received with great applause. After returning his thanks for the very kind way in which the toast had been received, he said the Provincial Grand Master had referred to the more important Grand Lodge Officers in such a manner that it was quite unnecessary, and would even be presumptuous, for him to say anything about them. He might, however, just be allowed to state that they looked up to Lord Lathom for assistance and guidance in all matters of doubt and difficulty, and it was very much in this way that they maintained the prestige of the Grand Lodge of England. He was sorry that all the Grand Lodge Officers were not there on that occasion. The brethren of Hertfordshire would doubtless have been very happy to have received them all, but as they were unavoidably absent he must speak for them, and in their name assure the company that it was a very great honour and pleasure to be present. All the Officers of Grand Lodge felt it to be a very high honour to be appointed to their respective places, and they might be looked to in the future, as in the past, to put their shoulders to the wheel to further the interests of Freemasonry. It was exceedingly gratifying to them to find that their merits were appreciated, and that they were always so cordially received. Personally, he thanked them for their cordial reception; this was the first time he had visited Hertford; this had not arisen through the default of the Provincial Grand Master, but from the fact that his engagements being so numerous, he had hitherto been unable to accept an invitation. He experienced a great deal of pleasure in coming to Hertford, and this partly arose from the fact that he had a personal acquaintance with many members of the Provincial Grand Lodge, whom he was happy to meet. He congratulated the Provincial Grand Master on the position he held. The Province was not large—it was far from that; but numbers, as the Provincial Grand Master had said, was not a test altogether of prosperity. There was in this Province a strong fraternal feeling, a bond of unity, which was unsurpassed in any Grand Lodge in England. They were fortunate in having to preside over them in this Province a gentleman who was beloved and esteemed by every one, but while this was the case, he had to turn to the Provincial Grand Master, and congratulate him on presiding over such a Province as Hertfordshire. In concluding, he again thanked them for allowing him to respond to such an important toast. The Deputy Prov. Grand Master, Bro. F. H. Wilson Iles, M.D., said the pleasing duty devolved on him to propose the next toast, which was the health of the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master. He said the Province was fortunate in being presided over by a gentleman who took the greatest possible interest in Masonry in all its branches, and in addition to his intimate knowledge of the Craft and ability in it, he was possessed of a large share of courtesy and kindly feeling, which was shown to every brother in the Province. He trusted he would be enabled for very many years to come to preside over them. When the Provincial Grand Master was installed eight years previously, eight Lodges in the Province were handed over to his care, and now the number of Lodges had increased to eleven. He ventured to think that the example set by the Provincial Grand Master had had a great deal to do not only with this increase in the numbers, but with the increased general efficiency of the Craft. Eight years ago the Worshipful Master in some Lodges was little better than a lay figure, and the members were quite satisfied with him if he could open and close the Lodge; but a very different spirit prevailed now, and this, he believed, was entirely owing to the example set them by the Prov. G. Master, whose health he now asked them to drink with the greatest cordiality. Song, "When Nell and I were young" (Smith), Bro. H. Schartau.

The Provincial Grand Master said he had to thank them most cordially for the very kind reception they had given to the toast of his health. He could only say that he felt this kindness very deeply, and he ventured to hope that the Provincial Grand Lodge, coming back to Hertford after an absence of seven or eight years, would entitle him to say that he had some degree fulfilled the promises he made—that he would endeavour to do his duty—when last he had the honour of addressing them, and returning thanks in that room as their Provincial Grand Master. He specially thanked them for their cordial reception on this occasion, but he was afraid that he must have given the local brethren some considerable amount of trouble. He could assure them it was unavoidable. At the time when it was originally appointed that the Provincial Grand Lodge should meet, he was reduced to a diet of beef tea; he could hardly swallow, and was only able to make his wants known by means of the deaf and dumb alphabet, with which fortunately he was acquainted. He knew how inconvenient it was to postpone a meeting at so short a notice, and his first thought was to ask his Deputy to take his place; but he found that Bro. Wilson Iles would be unable to be present on the day originally fixed, and therefore there was no alternative but to postpone the meeting. He knew by experience that postponed meetings sometimes turned out failures, but he was happy to say that that result had not followed on this occasion. He had to thank the local brethren for what they had done, and to sympathise with them in the double trouble that had been inflicted upon them. He desired to thank them very much for the most kind and cordial manner in which they had received him, and he sincerely trusted that as long as he had the honour to preside over the Provincial Grand Lodge they would go on prospering in the future as they had done in the past. Bro. Iles had mentioned the increase of Lodges in the Province, and, although they never could hope to see their numbers so large as in some Provinces in the North of England, he ventured to think that for a small country Province they stood in a remarkably good position, and he hoped that before long at least one more Lodge would be added to their roll. He also ventured to think that although they were small in numbers, they stood second to none in a true Masonic spirit, as was shown by their contributions to the various Institutions belonging to them. That, however, was not the subject on which it was his duty to enter at the present time; it would be brought before them at a later part of the proceedings. He had only to repeat that as long as he had the honour to preside over the Province, he should endeavour faithfully to do his duty in maintaining its efficiency; and he not only trusted that it would continue to prosper, but he was sure it would do so. Glee, "Fair Flora" (Danby). The Provincial Grand Master said he was sure the next toast would be well received. It was the Worshipful Deputy Provincial Grand Master, and the rest of the Provincial Grand Officers, present and past. It had been his good fortune that ever since he had the honour of presiding over the Province, he had been most ably and efficiently supported by the Provincial Grand Lodge Officers who had served under him, and he trusted that would always be the case. As to their Worshipful Deputy Provincial Grand Master, he did not think it was necessary for him to say much about him; he was known to all in the Province; but he would venture to say that no Grand Master ever had been better served or had more useful work done for him, nor had there ever been a more efficient Deputy. He was most indefatigable in visiting the Lodges in the Province, and even those Lodges that were situated at a distance from his home were not forgotten. He was also diligent in reporting to him the condition of the Lodges, and in maintaining their efficiency. In fact, he looked on Bro. Iles as a model Deputy, and as to his efficiency, he did not think there was a brother in the Province who could hold a candle to him in respect to the excellent manner in which he conducted their various ceremonies. He trusted that the newly-appointed Officers would look up to him, and frame their conduct according to the example he set them; if they did that, and took him as their model in everything, the cause of Masonry would prosper and flourish in the Province in the future, as it had done in the past. The Deputy Provincial Grand Master Bro. F. H. Wilson Iles, M.D., on rising to return thanks for the toast, was received with great applause. He said that by attending there in such large numbers the past Officers of the Province were showing that their zeal for Masonry had not gone out with their term of office, but that they were still to the front. There were many present on whom the Provincial Grand Master had conferred the purple, but there were also present many on whom his predecessor had conferred it, and he wished particularly to call attention to their distinguished and esteemed Brother S. Austin, who was in the room. They had heard something that night about old members, and they might well look up so and esteem a brother who was a father in his Lodge. Brother Stephen Austin had been for fifty-three years a subscribing member of his Lodge, and although he was not now as physically able as he had once been, he was as zealous as ever in the cause of Masonry, and he came there that night to welcome the Provincial Grand Master on this his second official visit to Hertford. He desired to return thanks on behalf of the Officers who had been appointed that day; they were all very well known to him, as he had occasion from time to time to meet them in their various Lodges, where he had seen them conducting their ceremonies in the most able manner. It would be found that they were not unworthy of receiving the purple from the Provincial Grand Master, and that they would still more promote Masonry in the Province. The Prov. Grand Master had been pleased to speak of him in very favourable terms, but he was afraid he had overdrawn his merits. It was true he had done his utmost to carry out, as he thought, the wishes of the Provincial Grand Master, and he had gone about visiting the Lodges, making himself acquainted with the brethren, but at the same time this had been a labour of love to him; he had always been so very kindly received that visiting the Lodges had been a source of the greatest possible pleasure to him, and sufficient always to induce him to desire to visit them again. As long as they honoured him with their confidence, and he was blessed with good health, he hoped to fill his office with satisfaction to every one. The Provincial Grand Master next proposed the Visitors, and said this Province was second to none in dispensing the duties of hospitality, and in giving visitors such a cordial reception that they were sure to see them again. Many of those then present were no doubt in a technical sense visitors, for although they resided in this Province, they were not members of the Provincial Grand Lodge. It was their duty, however, to persuade them to become members. They were honoured by a visit from many distinguished brethren. To the Grand Secretary he had already alluded, and he therefore did not require to say more respecting his merits; Bro. Raynham Stewart was another of the visitors, and Bro. Ramsay had honoured them by coming as his guest, and Bro. Clark, and several others of very distinguished rank in the Craft. Bro. Paul, a Provincial Grand Officer of another Province, was also with them; and he trusted they would all receive such a hearty welcome that they would come on future occasions. He begged to couple with the toast the name of Brother Raynham Stewart. Bro. Raynham Stewart, who was received with great applause, returned thanks on behalf of himself and the other Visitors, and expressed a hope that this would not be the last time they would have the pleasure and gratification of partaking of the hospitality of the Hertfordshire brethren. Song, "Tell her I love her so" (De Faye), Bro. G. T. Carter. The Provincial Grand Treasurer, Bro. F. Sumner Knyvett, next proposed the Masonic Institutions, and expressed a hope that their endeavours to support these Charities would be largely increased. At the same time, he said he felt proud in a small Province like Hertfordshire to appear as their representative, for during the last four years it had three times headed the list with its contributions. That was a proud position for them to hold. They had two representatives of these Institutions present—Bro. Binckes, Secretary of the Boys' School, and Bro. Terry, Secretary of the Benevolent Institution for Old Men and Women—to whom, as they were so well known to them all, he need not further allude. Bro. Binckes, in returning thanks for the toast, expressed his gratification at having his name coupled with it. He often saw an analysis of the amounts sent up from various Provinces on behalf of their Institutions, and "little Herts" compared most favourably with them all. The county had been called "little Herts," but it was very gratifying to find that the Masons in the Province were men who were possessed of very large hearts. But, after all, what wonder was it that they did so much? It was noted for its spirited, able and distinguished Grand Master, who was beloved by every one who was under his rule, and of whom not one word could be used which would be too eulogistic. He was, he might be allowed to say, one of the most able and accomplished Masons to be found anywhere; and others gained their experience in the Metropolitan districts, and brought it to bear on the Province of Hertfordshire. One of their Officers was the able representative of one of their Institutions, and with all these various advantages, which were increased by their propinquity to the metropolis, there was their great agricultural wealth. They had many distinguished individuals in the Province, and what wonder was it, he again asked, that they earned from the editors of their organs a certain amount of congratulation for what they did? He said the Province ought to do its duty under all these favourable circumstances, and from his own point of view he was happy in being able to say that he believed it did. But how could it do otherwise? The name of the Past Grand Sword Bearer of England was well known in connection with their own Institutions, but he had also a world-wide reputation for the great interest he took in all charitable work, and he thanked God for it. He also thanked Bros. Dr. Wilson Iles, T. S. Carter, Edgar Bowyer, and others, for what they had done in this respect. The Province of Hertfordshire had justly earned its reputation, and he felt sure that under the rule of their experienced Provincial Grand Master it would never fail in its duty. He looked back with gratitude on its past history, and confidently relied on what they would do in the future. He had always received a hearty welcome from this Province, and he hoped his conduct in the past had been such as to justify him in looking forward to a renewal of their kindness at no distant date. Bro. Terry, who was loudly called upon, said that after the complimentary and exhaustive speech of Bro. Binckes, nothing remained for him to do but to thank them, which he did very heartily, for all they had done for their Institutions during the last eight years. Let them consider what they were before that time. They had no voting power, or very little, but now they had 2000 votes in connection with the three Masonic Institutions. The day would come, and must come, when the Prov. G. Master would preside at the annual meeting of one of these Institutions, and when that day came, it would be found that Hertfordshire, "little Herts," had maintained its reputation by coming forward at the head of the list. Song, "I fear no foe" (Pinsuti), Bro. E. J. Bell. The Provincial Grand Master said the next toast referred to the foundation of their success. It was the Worshipful Masters of the Lodges of the Province. It must be self-evident to every one that it was owing to the exertions of the Masters that the Lodges were kept in a state of efficiency, and that in this way the Province was kept in the same position. These were the kind of men who held, and he trusted always would hold, high office in this Province. For the second time in the course of his rule, he had been entertained by the Hertford Lodge, and this Lodge, like all the others in the Province, had done its duty well, and as long as that was the case, they need have no fear of their efficiency being maintained. He had had much pleasure in appointing the W.M. of the Hertford Lodge to the highest office in his power, and he begged to couple the toast with his name. The Master of the Hertford Lodge (Brother J. E. Cussans) said he ought to have known, but he did not know, that he was to be called on to respond to this toast, or he should have prepared a very nice speech, but had he had weeks of preparation, he could only have said, "I thank you for myself, and for the other members of the Hertford Lodge; they all most heartily thank you, not only for the position to which you have more directly raised me, but for the courtesy and ability you always have shown at the head of this Province." A great deal had been said, and said with truth, that this Province had sent a great deal more money than some others, and if he were asked to account for that fact, he would say it was because they had such a good Provincial Grand Master and Deputy Provincial Grand Master, and such good Provincial Lodge Officers to rule over them, and keep the subsidiary Lodges up to the mark. They required some one to keep them up to the mark, and they had that in their Provincial Grand Master. A good man was wanted at the helm, and another good man at the sheet, and a boat thus cared for was sure to sail well. They had a good man at the helm, and another good man at the sheet, and it thus happened that they went on famously. He thanked them on behalf of the Masters of the various Lodges of the Province, and for himself personally he thanked the Provincial Grand Master for conferring upon him the highest honour it was in his power to bestow. Glee, "King Canute" (Macfarren). The Tyler's toast was then given, and shortly afterwards the company separated.—Hertford Mercury.

A warrant for a new Lodge, under the title of the Saint Mary Abbott's Lodge, has been granted to the under-mentioned brethren, and will be consecrated on Thursday, the 10th inst., in the Town Hall, Kensington:—W. Bros. Capt. A. Nicols, Col. Martin Petrie, Sir George Readleshaw Prescott, Bart., Francis Charles Compton, Edwin M. Lott; Bros. Capt. H. S. Andrews, Capt. C. F. Compton, and F. H. Cruggen. Bro. Col. Shadwell H. Clerke Grand Secretary will perform the consecration ceremony.

ANOTHER Lodge has been added to the roll of Lodges under the rule of the Grand Master for the Province of Kent. The consecration of the Saye and Sele Lodge took place, on the 25th ultimo, at Essenden House, Belvedere, Brother Dr. Spurrell, to whom the house belongs, and who is well known throughout and beyond the Province as a most enthusiastic Mason, giving the use of his dining-room, a saloon of noble proportions, for the transaction of the Lodge business on the occasion. It will not surprise our readers under these circumstances to learn that it is the wish of the founders to keep the Saye and Sele Lodge eminently select. Notwithstanding that it was some time since laid down as a rule by Grand Lodge that the number of members of a Lodge cannot legitimately be limited, it is still, no doubt, a fact, that a Lodge can, in framing its bye-laws, limit the number of members to be admitted. In fact, like any other society or club, so long as the members are agreed amongst themselves, they may make any rules they please, provided that these rules are not inconsistent with law and order. The number of members of the Saye and Sele Lodge, as indicated by a notice of motion given by the Junior Warden, is to be limited to thirty. It is a small number, and to the outsider may appear too small, but still the founders must be supposed to know what is requisite for the true interests of the Lodge; and they have, no doubt, good reasons for fixing the small limit which they have placed on the numbers to be admitted. Taking the number who signed the petition, and are, therefore, members ab initio, and the others who were proposed either for initiation or joining, the number above stated is already very nearly, if not quite, complete. The ceremony of consecration was performed by Lord Holmesdale, the Provincial Grand Master, and the ceremony of installing the Worshipful Master was entrusted to Bro. Lucas, a Past Master of the Lion and Lamb Lodge. The first Master is Bro. J. Gleaman Chillingworth, and his principal Officers are Bros. F. Wood S.W. and A. H. Bateman J.W. After the ceremony was completed, the company dined together in the large room of the Institution for Decayed Merchant Seamen. Lord Holmesdale presided, and the whole proceedings passed off in the most agreeable manner.—Evening News.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Though good health is preferable to high honour, how regardless people often are of the former—how covetous of the latter! Many suffer their strength to drain away ere maturity is reached, through ignorance of the facility afforded by these incomparable Pills of checking the first untoward symptoms of derangement, and reinstating order without interfering in the least with their pleasure or pursuits. To the young especially it is important to maintain the highest digestive efficiency, without which the growth is stunted, the muscles become lax, the frame feeble, and the mind slothful. The removal of indigestion by these Pills is so easy that none save the most thoughtless would permit it to sap the springs of life.

ST. HILDA CHAPTER, No. 240.

ON Wednesday night, 19th ult., the annual Chapter was held at Freemasons' Hall, Fowler-street, South Shields, when there was a large attendance of Companions. The Chapter was opened in due form by Most Excellent Companion Thomas Coulson Z.; and after the transaction of the ordinary business Most Excellent Companion Benjamin Levy P.Z. and P.P.G.H. was conducted to the installing chair, and performed the interesting and imposing ceremony of installing M.E. Comp. J. S. Wilson as Z., M.E. Comp. J. T. Wilson as H., and M.E. Comp. M. Dodds as J. The First Principal then invested his Officers, as follow:—Comps. J. Hunter E., G. S. It was resolved that the Chapter subscribe £9 9s to the Province of Durham Charity Education Scheme, after which the Chapter was closed in proper form. It may be mentioned that for the occasion of the installation, opportunity was taken of the flourishing condition of the funds of the Chapter to renew most of the furniture and to renovate the remainder, and the effect of the newly-painted cloth, handsome new silk banners, candlesticks, sceptres, &c., was exceedingly striking, and drew forth the ready and hearty commendations of the Companions. The Companions, after business, adjourned to the pleasantly-situated Marine Hotel (Mr. W. Armstrong's), at the head of the South Shields Pier, from which a fine view of the entrance to the Tyne, and extensive sea beach is obtained, where the annual banquet was served up in excellent style. The chair was occupied by Most Excellent Comp.

Not long since we had an opportunity of inspecting an illuminated address on vellum that was presented to Mr. Alfred Curry, a Past Trustee of the Incorporated Society of Licensed Victuallers, on his retirement from the post of Treasurer. The address in question was the handiwork of Bro. J. H. Oppenheim, Draughtsman, Illuminator, and Heraldic Artist, of 15 Basinghall-street, E.C., lately of Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, and we take upon ourselves to say that a finer piece of workmanship could not be produced. In style it was most artistic, and in the best of taste, while the manner in which the design had been carried out was admirable. It is no unusual thing for an illuminated address or vote of thanks to be presented to some meritorious brother, and we feel sure those of our friends who may call in the services of Bro. Oppenheim will be promptly and skilfully served.

Obituary.

THE LATE BRO. ELLIS JONES.

ON Thursday afternoon the remains of our late Bro. Ellis Jones, Immediate P.M. of the Old King's Arms Lodge, No. 28, and late senior partner in the firm of Messrs. Ellis Jones, Son & Co., Manchester warehousemen, of Fore-street, City, were laid lovingly to rest in the pretty little cemetery at Ealing, in the presence of a large and sorrowing circle of friends. The circumstances attending the death of our brother were peculiarly distressing. On Wednesday evening in last week he left the City by his usual train for Mill Platt Hall, Isleworth, where he had for some time resided, and on his arrival at the station, at about a quarter to seven o'clock, he found his carriage awaiting him, in the ordinary course. Accompanying him was an old friend, Brother George Reynolds, merchant, and an ex-Mayor of Grahamstown, South Africa, and his groom. Driving down from the station, and just as he was passing into the main road, Brother Jones observed a cab standing at the entrance gates, on which he shouted to the driver in charge of it not to move, as we was coming out. The man took no notice of the caution given to him, however, but deliberately came through the gateway, the result of which was that Bro. Jones's carriage had to be suddenly pulled up by the side of the kerb, when, cannonading against a post, it was overturned, and its occupants thrown violently into the road. Fortunately, Bro. Reynolds and his groom escaped unhurt; but Bro. Jones was shot out a distance of five or six feet from the vehicle, falling heavily on to the hard road, and it was speedily found he had sustained severe internal injuries. He was conveyed home as speedily as possible, and Dr. Bott, a resident surgeon, having been called in, did all he could to alleviate the sufferings of his patient, pending the arrival of Sir James Paget, who was telegraphed for from town. Sir James, however, was not at home, and Dr. Savory, the eminent surgeon, of Brook-street, attended in his stead, when it was found the unfortunate sufferer had sustained a fracture of three ribs, in addition to a severe shock to the system. Pleurisy set in, and about five o'clock on Sunday morning, much earlier than had been anticipated by his medical advisers, death ensued. The sad event has caused a deep sense of sorrow and regret, not only amongst the deceased's immediate relatives, from whom he has been taken at the comparatively early age of fifty-six, but amongst those also in commercial circles who knew him, and appreciated his great force of will and his indomitable perseverance in matters of business. Coming up from Wales when he was but sixteen years of age, he was apprenticed for eight years at Brentford, only a mile and a-half from where he lately resided. After that he was for twenty years in the employ of Messrs. Cook, Son and Co., drapers, of St. Paul's Churchyard, where he passed through all the grades before reaching the highest responsible post, under the proprietors; and subsequently he was for ten and a-half years associated with Mr. T. J. Thomas, formerly of Watling-street, and of late years of Queen Victoria-street. A few months ago that partnership was dissolved by mutual consent, and Bro. Ellis Jones and his son started in Fore-street, where they have already reared an extensive and thriving business. Deceased was for many years an active and zealous member of the Wesleyan Methodist connection, amongst whom his name is as "a household word," especially in the Hammersmith circuit, whilst his large-hearted sympathy and unstinted benevolence are known only to the grateful recipients of his bounty. He leaves a widow, his son and partner, and two daughters to deplore their loss. On Tuesday an inquest on the remains of our lamented brother was held at Isleworth, before Dr. Diplock, the coroner for the district, when the jury, after hearing the evidence, returned a verdict of "Accidental Death," at the same time suggesting that the attention of the railway company should be directed to the very dangerous condition of the entrance to the station yard, and requesting that some alteration be made as soon as possible, in the interest of public safety.

The long and mournful procession left Mill Platt Hall at half-past three o'clock on Thursday afternoon, proceeding through Isleworth to Brentford, in both of which places shops were closed and blinds drawn, in respect for the deceased. The hearse was an open one, and the polished oak coffin was literally buried in beautiful wreaths of white roses, pelargoniums, and other flowers. Following the bier, which was drawn by four horses, came eight mourning coaches, conveying the son, Mr. Ellis James Jones and his two sisters, and the intimate relatives and friends of the deceased, the rear of the procession being brought up by nearly forty private carriages, filled with representatives of the leading mercantile, shipping, and legal firms in the City, who thus testified their esteem and regard for the deceased. Amongst the sorrowful company were also many members of the Old King's Arms Lodge, in which, as W. Master last year, he won such sincere respect for the manner in which he conducted its affairs; and many also of the Wheelwrights' Company, of which he was a Past Master. At the Brentford Town Hall, a large body of the workmen employed in the Fore-street warehouses fell in, four abreast, and followed to the grave the master whom they had learnt to love and respect, having come down from town in a body for that purpose. The scene was a very imposing one, as the inhabitants of the little town crowded to the doors and windows in sorrowful admiration, and silent regret for one who had done so much for the district. There was a vast crowd at the cemetery, and the little chapel could not contain one-half the friends who sought to be present at the service. The opening prayers were said by the Rev. J. Ingram, pastor of the Wesleyan Chapel, Brentford, who also read the 90th Psalm, after which the Rev. John Baker, M.A., an intimate friend of the family, read the beautiful service for the dead from 1 Cor. xvi. The service at the graveside was most impressive, and amidst the large concourse of sorrowing spectators there was many an eye bedewed with tears, testifying the universal love and respect borne by so many in every rank of life towards our deceased brother. The funeral arrangements were entrusted to Mr. J. H. Studley, undertaker, of Brentford, who executed his duties in a very satisfactory manner.

A BATCH OF QUESTIONS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—From the very clear and admirable way in which you have hitherto placed the statistics of our Institutions before your readers, I am inclined to ask your assistance in solving the following questions relative to our Institution for Girls. How many pupils are there in the School? Does the income exceed the expenditure? if so, by how much? and is that excess sufficient to justify the Committee in keeping the Institution up to its present strength? Again, if there are vacant beds, on what grounds do the Committee of Management limit the number of vacancies to be filled in October next?

Whilst I am writing about one of our Institutions, I may as well jog your memory with a view to inducing you to remind Craftsmen that, unless the Grand Lodge wants to stultify itself a second time on Bro. Raynham Stewart's motion for the extra £800 for the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, they must muster in force on the first Wednesday in September, to ratify what they fought for and carried in December 1881, and again in June 1882.

Yours fraternally,

P.M. 1607.

[Our correspondent is searching in his inquiries, and not unnaturally. Taking his queries in the order in which they occur, we may state that there are 238 girls on the establishment; that, as a reference to the published accounts will show, there is a considerable excess of income over expenditure, but whether, having regard to such excess, it is wise, or will be possible, to maintain the present strength is a matter of opinion. As to the vacant beds, we must refer our correspondent to the Secretary. We presume, however, that the number of vacancies to be filled up in October will be governed by the number of vacancies that have occurred since the last Election. With reference to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, we shall only consider it our duty "to jog" the memory of the brethren in the event of its becoming apparent that an hostile resolution to non-confirm the minutes of the June Communication is in contemplation. We have no desire to anticipate, though we feel it our duty to be provided against, difficulties that may present themselves.—Ed. F.C.]

SUBDIVISION OF THE LONDON LODGES.

To the Editor of the Freemason's Chronicle.

Dear Sir and Brother,—I hope Bro. James Stevens is not losing sight of his proposal to the Grand Lodge for the subdivision of the London Lodges into Metropolitan Grand Lodges. There are very many brethren of my personal acquaintance who have expressed their surprise that his intended motion at the last Quarterly Communication was intercepted, and who not only entirely agree with his proposal, but were pleased to hear him resent the interference which gave rise to his question of privilege. If only for his championship of free discussion at our Grand Lodge meetings he deserves support, to say nothing of the merits of the question he has raised. As to that latter, you may be assured it has the agreement of a large body of Metropolitan Masons in its favour, and these desire that Bro. Stevens should not let the matter drop because of his having been misinterpreted on the last occasion. If he sees this letter perhaps he will let us know, through your pages, whether or not he proceeds with it.

Yours fraternally,

Delta.

REVIEWS.

All Books intended for Review should be addressed to the Editor of The Freemason's Chronicle, 33 Great Queen Street, W.C.

The Last Punic War. Tunis, Past and Present, with a narrative of the French Conquest of the Regency. By A. M. Broadley, Barrister-at-law, correspondent of the "Times" during the War in Tunis. In Two Volumes. With illustrations. William Blackwood and Sons: Edinburgh and London, 1882.

With the political aspect of this Punic War we have no concern, but some of its occurrences, as well as some of its descriptive accounts of places and people, are well worthy of being noticed. Here, for instance, is a sketch of Sy Ali Bey and his surroundings when visited by the author at Sidi Salah. "The tents," writes Bro. Broadley, "were very large and difficult to move, and those occupied by the Bey and his suite were ponderous marquees. If a strong wind happened to be blowing, twenty or thirty men usually struggled for an hour at least with the canvas of the Bey's pavilion before it could be got into shape. The baggage was even more cumbersome than the tents. The heir apparent's own luggage consisted of a number of wooden trunks, covered with brown leather, and thickly studded with brass-headed nails. One of them was devoted to syrups, sweetmeats, and zoedine, the orthodox nature of which was duly certified by the Bey's imám, or chaplain, who found it necessary to make several trials of the drink before he pronounced his definite opinion. The Bey's personal cortège was as miscellaneous and remarkable as his baggage. At its head was Dr. Stresino, his physician-extraordinary, whose duties were of a very varied nature. In the first place, he had to administer harmless and agreeable coloured potions to cure imaginary ailments; he was expected to make himself pleasant whenever the prince was dull, and to play chess whenever required, always contriving to be the loser. The Bash-Kábwajee or 'head coffee man' was certainly the next in importance. His tent immediately adjoined that of his Highness, and in it a large pot of water was continually kept boiling over a charcoal fire. He was expected to produce cups of coffee at a moment's notice. During the march he was always close to his master's heels, with all his paraphernalia in saddle-bags, and ready whenever called on to perform his duty. After the Kabwájee came the chaplain, the water-bearer, the gun-bearer, the pipe-bearer, and the sword-bearer. The jester was a very important personage indeed. He was privileged to say what he liked, and the coarser his jokes the more they were appreciated. Whenever the camp was moved Ali Bey mounted his charger for a few minutes, and then betook himself to a gilt coach, drawn over the roughest ground by four mules. Beggars abounded, and some of the Bey's trunks contained linen and cloth to enable him to indulge freely in the virtue of almsgiving."

The Khamirs, who figure so conspicuously in the events which have led to the occupation of Tunis are described as "agriculturalists and cattle dealers, and the country offers many and exceptional facilities for their pursuits. Springs of excellent water are plentiful, the pasture is luxuriant, and the dense forests afford good shelter. They manufacture their own gunpowder, are very clannish, but submit without a murmur to the authority of their chief. Some live in huts, others in tents, but these latter are not nomadic. The Khamirs are frugal, but perhaps fare better than their brethren of the plain. The women spin a superior kind of woollen bernous (cloak) and weave blankets. A large quantity of tobacco of an excellent quality is grown, but nobody smokes. Every one, on the contrary, takes snuff. It is generally calculated that there are from fifteen to twenty-five thousand fighting men in the range of mountains. All the adults are for the most part armed with flint-lock guns about seven feet long, and made without any idea of balance. It consequently generally requires a strong man to keep the muzzle level. The mountains are very steep, and the only passes are very narrow paths, in most places not more than two or three feet wide. Dense forests often cover the heights, and the richness of the vegetation adds considerably to the extreme beauty of the scenery. Oak and cork trees, the thorn and 'locust-bean' trees, wild vines, and giant ferns all grow and thrive together in one luxuriant tangle. Men born under such accidents of nature as these are, of course, hardy, fearless, and capable of enduring extraordinary fatigue."

The first three chapters in the Second Volume, headed respectively "A Revolt in the City of Cucumbers" (Sfax), "The Shelling of Sfax," and "Loot," are very interesting. The Arabs made a good fight of it, but it was impossible they could withstand the heavy artillery of the French fleet, and the wonder seems to be that they should have been able to withstand it so long and so bravely. "The resistance," says Mr. Galea, as quoted by Bro. Broadley, "was as brave as it was hopeless, but no amount of personal courage can compensate for the use of weapons fit only for old metal dealers or curiosity shops. In the narrow streets of the native town, house after house was only occupied after a desperate hand-to-hand conflict." As to the scenes depicted in the chapter in "Loot," there is no need to describe them; a state of pillage can easily be imagined. But the occupation by French troops of Sfax and other places by no means put an end to the opposition of the Arabs, and it is not surprising that the account of the "Loot" should be followed immediately by one headed "Alarms at the Capital." The French protectorate of M. Roustan had been established, and the Bey had accepted the inevitable, but the whole of Southern and Central Tunis was in a state of revolt, and Europeans were everywhere being put to death by the enraged Arabs. On the appearance of a band of insurgents at Rades, which is equally visible from Tunis and Goletta, the bridge between the latter and Rades was ordered by the Bey to be broken down and the passage guarded by artillery. But so great was the excitement that "people in Tunis decided to fly to Goletta, and persons in Goletta determined to take refuge in Tunis! A crowd of Tunisian fugitives arrived by train at Goletta, but only to meet another mob of refugees waiting impatiently to take the return train to Tunis." We can well understand that the meeting of the two crowds formed an "amusing"—though a somewhat painful—"tableau."

We have already spoken of the pluck shown by the Arabs during the French attack on Sfax. We have a further instance of this in the repulse of Colonel Corréard's column, which had made an attempt on Hammamet, but had been compelled to fall back on Hamman-el-Lif, whence it had started, in order "to revictual and complete its munitions before recommencing its march." Says Bro. Bradley: "The French troops had already sighted Hammamet, when they found the surrounding olive groves alive with Arabs. While the latter checked their progress by a sharp fire, other bodies of insurgents collected in their rear, and threatened to cut off all communication with Tunis. In this predicament Colonel Corréard asked the co-operation of a troop of 500 Tunisian irregulars encamped in the neighbourhood, but, as the commanding officer declined to comply with the request in the absence of instructions, it was decided to fall back to 'revictual and complete munitions.' During the retreat the Arabs made constant attacks on the column, notwithstanding that it was protected by artillery and mitrailleuses, and in spite of the heavy loss they necessarily sustained in each assault. The French at length regained their old camp, after a most harassing and perplexing march." No wonder it should be added, "In no country does news spread with more mysterious rapidity than amongst the Arabs, and the consequences of Colonel Corréard's retrograde movement were soon felt; the position of the Zaghouán column became critical, and even the Bizerta road was no longer safe for foot passengers. "In this difficulty, troops were sent by sea to Hammamet, which was at once occupied," but even then we are told, "matters can hardly be said to have mended; the Arabs devastated the country up to the very walls of the town, and Colonel Corréard did not think it prudent even to attempt a junction with the garrison."

Of subsequent events, the march and capture of the Holy City of Kairwan are the principal, their description by Bro. Broadley being extremely graphic. The expedition, which was under the command of General Forgemol, appears to have been well planned and well executed, and reflects credit on the force engaged. The Arabs, too, fought bravely as usual. But worthier far of notice than the mere military operations are the particulars of the Holy City itself, which was founded about the year A.D. 675 by the Emir Okhbah Ben Nafi Ben Abdullah Ben Kais el Fahri. Its history has exercised a strong influence on the fortunes of Europe. From out of its gates the gallant Tarik set out on his Conquest of Spain. In A.D. 756 its Emir Abd el Rahman was strong enough to send an expedition against Sicily. Later, the Caliph el Reschid appointed Ibrahim Ibn el Aghbad hereditary Emir, who became the founder of the Aghlabite dynasty and proclaimed himself Caliph of the West. It was here he received "the ambassadors of Charlemagne, who asked for the remains of St. Cyprian." His sons waged war on Italy and Sicily, and one of them conquered Malta. In A.D. 877 Ibrahim Ibn Ahmed founded most of the towns on the Tunisian littoral, and successfully besieged Tunis after it had been captured by some of the insurgents. The first of the Green Caliphs, who reigned after the Aghlabites, by name Obeid Allah, "ravaged Lombardy, took Genoa, and ruled in Sicily." From the eleventh century, however, its history has been one of decay.

The principal building is the Great Mosque in the Northern suburb. Several illustrations are given of it, and a full description and an authentic plan of the building made by the French engineering department. The South-eastern end, we are told, measures 85 yards, there being a single porch in its centre exclusively for the entrance of the Bash-Mufti. In each of the sides, which are 143 yards in length, are four entrances, the finest of them facing the ramparts. Mr. Rae describes it thus: "It has an outer horse-shoe arch, and an inner one which contains the door opening direct into the prayer-chamber. The exterior is a finely proportioned piece of Saracenic work: it has a row of arched panels along the upper portion of its sides, and the dome and interior of its arches are in plaster fretwork." Midway, on the same side, is the sacred well of Kefâyat (Plenty) fenced in by a low wall, and having its aperture lined with different coloured marbles. "Tradition asserts that it communicates directly with the spring of Zemzem at Mecca." The north-west end is only seventy-five yards across, and the Minar rises in the centre. In the interior are the prayer-chamber, forty yards long by eighty-five yards broad, the vestibule adjoining it, and a great cloistered court. In the first are 296 columns, in the vestibule are 34, and in the covered arcade, surrounding the cloister, which is a "vast quadrangle paved with white marble," are eighty-six on either side, and twenty-seven at the end, making it no less than 439. The Minar, which has three storeys, and is about one hundred feet high, is ascended by means of a marble staircase, having one hundred and twenty-nine steps, and the view from its summit is described as magnificent. But even more important and more beautiful still are the tomb and mosque of Abdullah Ben Wadib el Belawi, the companion of the prophet who founded Islamism. Bro. Broadley tells us that he was "the first European who ever entered this Moslem sanctum sanctorum."

From his description, we gather that the tomb itself was surrounded by a high grating of bronze, and is shut in by four marble columns about seven feet high. "From a rod, on a line with the grating, hung festoons of ostrich eggs and golden balls. The catafalque above the grave is covered by two elaborately embroidered palls; the first, of black and white velvet, adorned with Arabic inscriptions in silver, was the gift of the late Ahmed Bey; the second, of pink and blue brocade, was a votive offering from Mohammed es Sadek"—the present Bey. "Over them hung thirteen banners, rich in gold, silver, and needlework—the tribute of the successors of Hussein Ben Ali."

There is much else in these volumes we should like to notice, especially the mystic rites, witnessed by the author, of the members of the Confraternity of the Aïssaouia, but we have already gone the full length of our tether in respect of space. It is unquestionably a work of importance, valuable from a political point of view, and interesting from the graphic sketches it gives of the war of last year, as well as from the description of places of importance in the Regency. It is written in an easy, fluent style, and with its excellent illustrations, plans, and maps, will well repay the reader for the time occupied in perusing it. Moreover, the narrative has the further advantage of having been written by one familiar with the country, and the habits and customs of its people. In short, of its kind we have seldom read a better or more ably written work.

Father Mathew. A biography by John Francis Maguire, M.P., author of "Rome: its Ruler and its Institutions." People's Edition. London: Burns and Oates, 17 and 18 Portman-street and Paternoster-row. 1882.

It is a capital idea which has led Messrs. Burns and Oates to publish a people's edition of Mr. Maguire's biographical sketch of Father Mathew, who, in his lifetime and during future ages, will be known as the "Apostle of Temperance." Temperance, whether it is used in the more limited sense of moderation in the use of strong drinks or in its general application as expressing moderation in the use of all things, is a virtue which evokes the admiration of all true Masons, as it does of all true men. Personally, we are no advocate of teetotalism. We believe that wine and other liquors were intended by the Creator of the Universe for the use of men, and teetotalism is only excusable in the case of those who cannot control their appetite, those, in fact, whom it has latterly become the fashion to speak of as dypsomaniacs; and it was to counteract the sin of drunkenness and the terrible effects it exercises on its votaries that Father Mathew laboured so zealously, and we rejoice to say, so successfully. Many and many a poor wretch has been weaned from an excessive indulgence in drink by the influence of his teaching and example. But little more than a quarter of a century has elapsed since he passed away gently to his last long sleep, and the cause he preached so eloquently has been taken up by others. Yet his name remains a tower of strength, and will continue to exercise its weight for generations yet unborn. The name of the high-minded, self-denying minister of abstinence from a degrading vice will always be a household in the family of every right-thinking Irishman and Briton, and that it may so continue, while the English language lasts, is or should be the prayer of every lover of humanity.

Father Mathew, to judge from the account given of him by his biographer, appears to have possessed especial qualifications for the office he undertook. He was a man of good family—people may sneer at rank as much as they please, yet it has its influence on the multitude. He was handsome in person, of singularly engaging manners, and a model of gentleness in his demeanour towards others. "From his earliest years," says Mr. Maguire, "the desire to afford pleasure to others, to be the means of conferring happiness on some one human creature, was his most marked characteristic." As a boy he had an aversion for the sports in which boys ordinarily delight, though he was always gay and cheerful. He had a strong attachment for his mother, but though this was "a source of constant ridicule to his brothers who called him 'the Pet,' addressed him as 'Miss Molly,' and accused him of being 'always tied to his mother's apron strings,'" still "he acquired an influence over them which they never attempted to dispute or resist, and which he retained and they felt to the last moment of their connection in this world." Notwithstanding, however, that he was thus devoted to his mother, he was, we are told, not unmindful of his brothers' interests, or "indifferent to their marked partiality for good things; for he employed the influence he derived from his mother's love to coax from her the materials for a little feast, of which he was to be the proud dispenser, and with which it was his delight to surprise them, as they returned home, rosy with health and exercise, and with the appetites of young wolves. To procure a feast—to preside over it—to witness the relish with which the sweet things were, not to say despatched, but devoured—this was a kind of passion with this mere child. Not that he was by any means personally indifferent to such delicacies—what healthy boy ever was—but that he derived more pleasure from bestowing them on his brothers than in sharing them with them. In after life, we are told, he was remarkable "for his love of order, his neatness of dress, and the propriety which, in spite of his voluntary poverty, distinguished the arrangements of his modest dwelling." To find anything out of order was an offence against his "sense of order and regularity," and an instance is mentioned how, on one occasion, happening to see in the breakfast parlour at Thomastown—where he was born—a pair of silk stockings being aired on the back of a chair before the fire, he was so annoyed that he threw them into the fire, and, on being asked why he had done so, boldly replied that it was because they had no business to be there.

Theobold Mathew, or Toby, as he was familiarly called, was born 10th October 1790, at Thomastown, the seat of his relative the second and last Earl Llandaff, and there spent his early years under the kindly offices not only of his parents—his father had been adopted by the Earl—but also of Lady Elisabeth Mathew, sister of that nobleman. Five years later his father, then married, and with a young family growing up round about him, removed to a house called Rathcloheen, close by Thomastown, and prospered famously. Having resolved on becoming a priest, and gone through the preliminary course of instruction, he was entered at the College of Maynooth when barely seventeen years of age, but having broken one of the rules, by giving an entertainment to some of his fellow students, he voluntarily quitted the College in 1808, and some time later placed himself under the care of the V. Rev. C. Corcoran, of Dublin, with a view to becoming a member of the Order of the Capuchins. On Easter Sunday 1814, he was ordained by Dr. Murray, and preached his first sermon in the parish chapel of Kilfeacle, in his native county of Tipperary. His first mission was in Kilkenny, where he joined the small Capuchin community, and soon won for himself a high reputation. His labours for the poor were incessant, and his generosity most conspicuous. In April 1838, when he was in his forty-eighth year, he resolved on advocating the cause of temperance, and thenceforward to the end of his life worked, as few other men could have worked, to promote the good cause. Wherever he went his reception was most cordial, and the results magnificent. High and low, rich and poor, took the pledge at his instigation, and he passed away with the satisfaction that he had striven his best to promote the happiness of his fellow-creatures. Nor were his labours confined to Ireland. He visited England, and won numberless adherents to his cause, the value of his labours being recognised by the highest and mightiest in the land. Be it added, that father Mathew was no sectarian, there was no taint of bigotry in his mind. He worked with Protestants of every denomination as readily and harmoniously as with members of his own creed, and if ever a man had his reward in the love and respect of his fellow-men, it was Father Mathew, "the Apostle of Temperance." He died in Queenstown, on the 8th December 1856, but the memory of his virtues still flourishes, and for ages will so continue, like the green bay-tree.

The second number of the new series of this Magazine fully sustains, if it does not surpass in excellence, the character of No. 1. "Art and the Builders of Monte Cassino," &c. by Bro. George F. Fort, "Craft Customs of the Ancient Stonehewers, Masons, and Carpenters," translated, with notes, by Bro. Geo. W. Speth P.M., and the "Legend of the Introduction of Masons into England," by Bro. Rylands, F.S.A.—to say nothing of the lighter material—are most praiseworthy contributions, and would do credit to any periodical.

REMINISCENCES OF A SECRETARY.

ONE night, as the Worshipful Master was about to commence "work," an announcement came that Bro. Brown, from Lodge No. 999, England, wished to be examined. The W.M. cast an inquiring look upon me, and I retired to examine the stranger. I found in the ante-room a very handsome young man, dressed genteelly, but clothes rather worse for wear, who began by apologising that he was rusty, and that this was the first Lodge he had attempted to visit in America. He had never made himself known as a Mason, although living more than six months in New York. He spoke a good grammatical English, with a decided English accent —that is, the accent of the better class—and I soon found him by his conversation to be a man of very good education. He produced the ponderous certificate in use by the Grand Lodge of England, half Latin and half English, by which I found that he had been a Mason about two years. I proceeded with the examination, until I found that he was legally entitled to visit my Lodge, and brought him inside. When he found that I was the Secretary, he came up near my desk, and remained near me until the Lodge closed. There was something so sad, so suppressed and subdued in the man's manner and speech, that I could not make it out. He looked poor enough, yet the stamp of the gentleman was unmistakably upon him. Before closing I mustered up courage to ask him if the Lodge could do anything for him. He looked startled, blushed, thanked me very kindly, and said no, not now; and when the Master, in the words of the beautiful old ritual, asked, is any brother of our Lodge, or a sojourning brother, in need of our aid or sympathy? I looked sharply at him. Again the blood mantled his face; he bowed his head as if in meditation, but said nothing. After Lodge closed I gave him one of our visiting cards, and cordially invited him to call again. This he did several times, looking paler, sadder, and poorer each time.

One day a letter was brought to my house requesting me to call that day upon Bro. Brown, my pale English friend; but as I only got the letter late in the evening, and it being Lodge night, I resolved to call before going to the Lodge, even at the risk of letting the brethren wait for me—which by the way, they seldom had to do. I found the address given me to be in the most crowded east side tenement district, and as I mounted stair after stair, I felt indeed that I was in the home of that greatest monster of our present civilisation—Poverty.

I knocked at the door of room No. 46, and it was opened by a beautiful young woman of scarce eighteen years, who, much confused, bade me enter. Upon a miserably fitted up bed, or cot, lay dressed, my friend the English brother Mason. He asked to be forgiven that he had troubled me, but he now wanted my aid. He would be dispossessed on the morrow if he did not pay the rent by 10 o'clock in the morning. It was an enormous sum, the whole of six dollars. I promised to bring his case before the Lodge that evening, and also that I would surely call before 10 o'clock the next morning, and that he might rest easy, he being able to keep his rooms. I hastened to the Lodge, where I reported his case, and was appointed a committee of one with power. Early next morning I again went to see my man, determined this time to find out more about him—as I had now the funds of the Lodge to dispose of, I felt in duty bound to see that these funds were well, and worthily bestowed.

I first satisfied the clamouring landlord, so as to make the young people easier in their mind; and when I entered their room with a receipt for their rent, their thanks were profuse and hearty. I then broached the subject of his history; told him it was not idle curiosity that prompted my inquiry; but that I might intelligently aid him. I would like to know something of his former home and life. It was then that he revealed to me, under Masonic seal, his true name.

Bro. Brown had held an important position in a large commercial house in England, where he had the entrée to his employer's house and home, where he met and loved the merchant's daughter, which love was not only returned, but fostered and encouraged by the young girl. It never entered the minds of the young people that they could not obtain the sanction of the rich and proud father to their union, but they kept right on, holding secret meetings and pledging eternal love and fidelity to each other, when their dream was suddenly ended by the young man receiving his instant dismissal from the house, and preparations being made to send Miss M—— to London.

The ardent lovers frustrated this plan by a hasty marriage, and flight to America, there to strike out for themselves. In youth everything looks rosy, especially to those who have never been brought face to face with that powerful fiend, Poverty; and so with these people. The funds hastily gathered before leaving home soon melted, and he found every avenue of life overcrowded, and he had to acknowledge to himself that he had not the "push" and "vim" to crowd in and crowd on and onward. They soon became poorer and poorer, until they brought up in this miserable abode, a room seven ft. by nine ft., and even here he could not stay, as there was no hope for him.

There was something very sad in his voice that struck me as particularly strange in one so young, but I saw it was remorse —deep, sincere remorse—for having induced his wife to come with him to America, to leave a home of plenty, and luxury, and refinement, to share this abject poverty with him. He further stated that he knew he was going to die, and asked me would we give him decent Masonic burial, and made me promise as a brother Mason to notify the British Consul, tell the true name of his wife, and see that she was sent home to her kinsfolk in old England, there to forget the foolish youth who had cast so deep a shadow across her young life.

He seemed exhausted by his long talking, and I tried to encourage him—spoke of his youth and of better things yet in store for him—but he faded fast away, and grasping my hand he whispered faintly:—

"I shall be dead within the hour. Keep your promise, send Julia back to her father. The British Consul will pay you back the money, and God will pay you in kind."

He then began to whisper the Lord's Prayer, faintly but distinctly, word by word, the young wife, stricken, dazed, and mechanically joining with him and myself, and when the last words were reached, "for ever and ever," we listened, with our heads bowed low, for the "Amen." It did not come. The brother had passed to the realms beyond. May the Amen come to him from the throne of glory, "for ever and ever."

After the brother had been buried by the Lodge, I found that the widowed girl could not then be sent home. Through the goodness of old Dr. Muhlenberg, late of St. Luke's Hospital, she was placed in that excellent institution, where she gave birth to a little girl, and gave her young life with it. Again the grave opened, and the child-wife, widow and mother, was laid beside her lover husband.

I now had to take care of the tiny little orphan, which a brother of a sister Lodge, who knew some of the circumstances, consented to adopt; but death had also put his relentless stamp upon the little one. The trials and vicissitudes through which the mother had passed, and the inadequate food before being admitted to the Hospital, along with her suffering, could not fail to have its effect upon her offspring. The child was born suffering with marasmus, and could not be cured. It lingered, however, through good and careful nursing, for three months, when it also died, and for the third time the yawning grave opened and received the last of this unfortunate family, united in death as they had been on earth.

I never notified the British Consul, never wrote to the harsh old father, and the secret of those lives and the secret of their names, lies buried in the triple grave at Greenwood Cemetery, there to remain until all secrets are revealed, all hearts laid bare, and the final judgments will be passed on all—rich and poor, weak and strong, alike—all measured by the standard of the great Jehovah, by the scale of the ever-righteous Judge.—Canadian Craftsman.

Viscount Holmesdale presided at the meeting on Wednesday of the Provincial Grand Chapter of Kent. His lordship was well supported by his P.G. Officers and the Companions, every Chapter in the Province being represented.

FREEMAN'S CHLORODYNE.

The Original and only true.

HUNDREDS of Medical Practitioners testify to its marvellous efficacy in immediately relieving and rapidly curing Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Neuralgia, Spasms, Colic, Whooping Cough, and all Nerve Pains. It acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. It rapidly relieves pain, from whatever cause, soothes and strengthens the system under exhausting diseases, and gives quiet and refreshing sleep.

Lord Chancellor Selborne, Lord Justice James, Lord Justice Mellish decided in favour of FREEMAN'S ORIGINAL CHLORODYNE, and against Brown and Davenport, compelling them to pay all costs in the suits. See Times of July 24th, 1873. Bottles 1s 1½d, 2s 9d, 4s 6d, 11s, and 20s. Sold by all Chemists.

TESTIMONIALS.—Head Quarter Staff, Cabul, May 31st, 1880. Mr. R. Freeman, Dear Sir,—It is with much pleasure I am able to state that your Chlorodyne has been of special service to me in alleviating the wearisome spasms of Asthma, which is here existent in an aggravated form. Many of my patients now come and beg me to give them that medicine which always relieves them, and which I need hardly say is your Chlorodyne. Yours faithfully, CHARLES W. OWEN, L.R.C.P. Lon., M.R.C.S. Eng., the Divisional Head Quarter Staff and Civil Surgeon, Cabul.

The Times, August 13th, 1877. From our own Correspondent with the Russian Army. Okoum, July 25th, 1877. The want of sanitary arrangements in the Russian Camp was dreadful, and had we remained there a few weeks longer, dysentery and typhoid fever would have played more havoc in our ranks than the bombs of the Turks. I myself acquired an unenviable reputation as a doctor, owing to my being provided with a small bottle of CHLORODYNE, with which I effected miraculous cures.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

LODGE OF FRIENDSHIP, No. 206, AND MOUNT LEBANON CHAPTER, No. 435.

IN accordance with a time-honoured custom the Brethren and Companions of the above Lodge and Chapter held their Annual Dinner, on Thursday, the 27th ult. The place chosen was the historic and picturesque hamlet of Wrotham, in Kent. The arrangements made by the W.M. Bro. Samuel Gamman, and the M.E.Z. Comp. Francis Harrison, were carried out to perfection in every detail. The brethren and companions were requested to meet, as far as practicable, at the Blackwall Pier, to leave by the 11.30 a.m. boat for Rosherville. The trip down the river was most enjoyable, the weather being everything that could be desired. At Rosherville breaks were in waiting to take the party to their destination—about eleven miles, through some of the most charming parts of the "Garden of England," which was reached about three o'clock, dinner being ordered for four. The interval was pleasantly enjoyed in inspecting the many points of interest in Wrotham, more especially the grand old church, which to members of the Craft possessed more than ordinary interest from its architectural beauty and great antiquity. The rendezvous was the Bull Hotel, where every preparation was made for the reception of the visitors by Bro. J. E. Shrubsole, who was most assiduous in his endeavours to make the visit one of real enjoyment. We may here remark that it was in this hotel, 110 years since, that the Lodge of Friendship was consecrated; as the following extract from the Bye-laws of the Provincial G. Lodge of Kent, testifies:—"Lodge Friendship, No. 206, now held at the Ship and Turtle, Leadenhall-street, was originally consecrated at the Bull Hotel, Wrotham, in the Province of Kent, on the 19th June 1772. Brother Fuljames was the first Worshipful Master, Lord Petre being Grand Master of England at that time. It was removed to Deptford (date unknown), from thence to St. Katherine Dock Hotel in 1846, then to the George and Vulture Tavern, Cornhill, in 1849, and to the Ship and Turtle in 1855." At this hotel it is still located. The dinner was served punctually at the hour named. It has been our province to attend many such pleasant gatherings, but we have seldom the good fortune to sit down to a more récherché spread. The Bull Hotel is noted far and wide for the care which is taken of the requirements of the "inner man," but surely on this day it eclipsed itself, and the wines were of the choicest, of the best and well-known brands. After ample justice had been done, and thanks to the G.A.O.T.U. given, the W.M. gave the Loyal and Masonic toasts usual on such occasions, which were duly responded to. In proposing Success to the Lodge of Friendship and the Mount Lebanon Chapter, the W.M. specially referred to the fact that 110 years ago the Lodge of Friendship was consecrated in that building, and probably the room in which they were assembled was used for the ceremony. The toast having been duly honoured, Bro. Collier, in very felicitous terms, proposed the health of the W.M., and the M.E.Z., thanking them for the arduous labours they had bestowed in order to render the day's enjoyment complete. He therefore on behalf of himself and the brethren tendered his sincere gratitude for the great treat they had experienced that day. The W.M. and M.E.Z. briefly returned thanks; if the brethren were satisfied with what they had done, they felt themselves amply repaid. Bro. Samuel Smith replied on behalf of the Visitors. Amongst those present we noticed Bros. S. Gamman W.M., F. G. Harrison M.E.Z., H. M. Collier Treasurer, A. R. Ramsey Secretary, S. Stuart, J. J. Stephens, H. A. Jacobs, C. T. Scrivener, W. Gowland, J. M. Rooney, C. Smithers, Moore, J. M. Collins, H. Caton, Fred. Dunn, E. Dodson, H. Webb, Gehlekeu, L. Conbro, J. Badkin, R. Sindell, P. Clay, Myers, T. Smith, A. Gamman, &c.

Royal Union Lodge of Instruction, No. 382.—On Monday last, at the Chequers' Hotel, Uxbridge, Bros. Brooks W.M., Rowles S.W., Cotton J.W., Taplin S.D., Nicholson J.D., Duffin I.G. and Tyler. After the usual formalities, the ceremonies of passing and initiation were rehearsed, Bro. Taplin being the candidate for the latter, and Bro. Nicholson for the former degree. Bro. Rowles S.W. was unanimously elected to fill the chair at the next meeting. Lodge was closed and adjourned until Monday, the 14th August.

United Pilgrims' Lodge of Instruction, No. 507.—At the meeting of this Lodge of Instruction, held at the Surrey Masonic Hall, Camberwell, S.E., on Friday, the 28th ult., there were present—Bros. J. Bate W.M., R. Poore S.W., G. W. Knight J.W., A. R. Cranch S.D., Smith J.D., G. Hubbard I.G., John S. Terry P.M. and Sec., J. W. Watts P.M., James Stevens P.M. Hon. Preceptor; and others. A very instructive evening resulted from the able working of Bro. Bate, who rehearsed the entire ceremonies of the three degrees, opening and closing his Lodge respectively in each. It was a sufficient evening's work, and the brethren expressed their satisfaction with Bro. Bate's zeal and capacity. Bro. J. B. Sargeant is the W.M. appointed for the ensuing meeting.

Eboracum Lodge, No. 1611.—A regular meeting of this Lodge was held at York on 24th ult. The W.M. Bro. G. Simpson presided. The business consisted of the passing of Bro. Waters to the second degree. In the absence of the Deacons, through indisposition, Bro. C. G. Padel P.M. conducted the candidate. Before closing the Lodge Bro. Stubbs presented a very curious old apron, which has come into his possession from the descendants of a very old deceased brother in the East Riding. This apron is covered with emblems of various degrees, and is a veritable antique. Bro. T. B. Whytehead presented a framed photograph of Masonic emblems, and a bound volume of the "Voice of Masonry." Business over, a pleasant party met round the social board, when an agreeable evening was passed, enlivened by songs and recitations.

Brixton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1949.—The weekly meeting was held on Tuesday evening last, the 1st instant, at Bro. Monk's, Prince Regent, Dulwich-road, East Brixton, where there was a good attendance of brethren, Bros. R. Poore W.M., G. W. Knight S.W., R. R. Johnstone J.W., E. A. Francis Preceptor, H. M. Williams Secretary, C. H. Phillips (Treasurer) S.D., H. Hoopes J.D., Joseph Perry I.G., Thomas Poore P.M. and P.Z. joint Preceptor, James Warren S.D. Ebury Lodge 1348, John A. Danks 1669, E. Bye jun., H. Stokes, George Flint, C. G. L. Kipling, and others. The Lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of the previous meeting, read by the Secretary, were duly confirmed. The W.M. proceeded to rehearse the ceremony of initiation, Bro. Flint as candidate, in a masterly manner. The Lodge was opened in the second degree, and the W.M. ably rehearsed the ceremony of passing, with Bro. Kipling as candidate. The Lodge was closed in the second degree. The following brethren were unanimously elected members:—Bros. James Warren Ebury No. 1348, E. Bye jun. Faith No. 141. Bro. G. W. Knight was elected W.M. for the ensuing week, and appointed his Officers in rotation. After hearty good wishes from the brethren, the Lodge was closed in due form, and the meeting adjourned until the 8th instant, at eight p.m. The after proceedings were as enjoyable as ever, all the brethren remaining, when the Lodge was closed, for the usual musical and social entertainment. The toasts of the Visitors, New Members, Bro. E. A. Francis, Preceptor, were given with enthusiasm and duly responded to. Bro. H. M. Williams Secretary, in giving (by permission of the W.M.) the health of Bro. Thomas Poore P.M., &c., welcomed him on behalf of the brethren once more to their Lodge, expressing their pleasure on his renewed health and vigour, and their hopes that he would long be able to attend the Lodge as often as his other engagements would allow. Bro. Thomas Poore, in acknowledging the toast, thanked the brethren for their good wishes, and stated how pleased he was to attend their Lodge once more. He was much gratified to hear of the progress of the Lodge as regards new members, the weekly attendance, to witness their earnestness, and the good working of the Lodge. He hoped the brethren would attend regularly, and thereby profit by the excellent instruction of Bro. Francis. Bros. R. R. Johnstone and Monk delighted the brethren with several songs and vocal duets, while Bro. Williams, the Secretary, presided as usual at the pianoforte. Bros. Kipling and Thomas Poore likewise favoured the brethren with recitations. The Lodge offers a hearty welcome to all brethren.

Bro. Jefferies, No. 720, has recently been appointed manager of the Granville Hotel, Ramsgate. Since his occupation of that post, he has made numerous improvements, and the attendance of visitors has wonderfully increased. Our worthy brother has had a large experience, and doubtless this will be exercised in his new quarters.

The Metropolitan Beer and Wine Trade Charity lately held its forty-eighth annual excursion, at Margate. Many of the visitors dined at Bros. G. Chapman and George's establishment, the New Imperial Hotel, High-street. The Mayor dined with the committee.

Bro. Captain H. E. Davis, of the Royal Assembly Rooms, has provided a very excellent programme for the amusement of the visitors. Bro. C. Frewin's band, with several artistes from the Theatre Royal Covent Garden, perform some artistic selections. Last week a juvenile ball was given, with great success. Bro. R. Coote is the able M.C.

The Hall by the Sea, under the proprietorship of Bro. George Sanger, and the able management of Bro. Arthur Reeve, is nightly filled. The band, under the direction of Mr. White, is excellent. Great improvements have been made in the Hall, which is lighted by the Electric Brush Light. A new ceiling is a feature to be noticed, while artistic medallions adorn the walls. In the menagerie there is a splendid collection of animals. Crowds flock in by night and day. The artistes engaged are the charming Sisters Mario (who nightly receive deserved applause), the Brothers Wemm, and a wonderful Contortionist, named "Vonare." Mr. Tubbs caters in the grounds, where swings and outdoor amusements receive a fair share of patronage. Messrs. Wright, Barringer, and Gus Foster are acquisitions to this vast and popular place of amusement. Bro. J. Arnold makes a very efficient M.C. Bro. George Sanger has just completed the purchase of a large plot of ground in the High-street, Ramsgate, for the purpose of erecting an Assembly Rooms and Amphitheatre.

DISTRICT GRAND LODGE OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

BY reason of the conduct of certain brethren in attempting, for unwise purposes of their own, to set up an independent Grand Lodge, the District of New South Wales has acquired, during the last year or two, a certain amount of unenviable notoriety. The majority of the brethren—English, Irish, and Scotch, are loyal to the backbone to their respective Grand Lodges. But human nature is human nature, and there are always heaps of people who never know when they are sufficiently well off. The discontents—we should be sorry if we had written, as we originally intended, the word "malcontents"—cannot possibly fare better under an organisation of their own than they fare now in their connection with the Grand Lodges to which they are indebted for their existence. In our opinion, indeed, they would be in a worse position. To be connected with the oldest Grand Lodges in the world is an honour not lightly to be regarded, and an honour against which absolute, in place of comparative, independence weighs nothing. For these reasons it is that we welcome, all the more heartily, the appearance in New South Wales, of a legitimate organ of Masonic opinion in the shape of the Sydney Freemason's Chronicle, while all the greater is the pleasure we experience, not only in bearing testimony verbally to its merits as such, but likewise in giving all the publicity in our power to its notice of the meeting of District Grand Lodge, held on Monday, the 15th May. R.W. Bro. J. Williams, J P., D.G.M., presided, and was supported by Bros. H. Westcott D.D G.M., F. A. Whyte Moore D.G.S. Warden, Rev. W. M. Whyte Moore D.G.J. Warden, and a strong muster of D.G. Officers, present and past, and other brethren. The minutes of the previous Communication having been read and confirmed, the reports of the Board of General Purposes and Board of Benevolence were submitted and adopted, after which the District Grand Master addressed the brethren present in the following terms:—"Worshipful Brethren, we have every reason to congratulate ourselves on the great progress and extension of English Freemasonry in this colony during the past year; indeed, I can unhesitatingly say that it is unparalleled in the history of Masonry in New South Wales. No less than five new Lodges have been formed, and of a class of brethren that will do honour and credit to the Order. The names of the Lodges are as follow:—St. George, Paramatta; Glebe, Glebe; Cobar Cobar; Prince of Wales, Muswellbrook; and Lodge of Peace, Uralla. I need not say how gratifying it must be to you, brethren, as well as to me, to mark the steady advancement of our Constitution, notwithstanding the subtle efforts that have been made from time to time to break the bonds of unity that bind together the Lodges here under the Grand Lodge of England. One act has been effected by this District Grand Lodge, of vital importance to the welfare of English Masonry, viz., the laws passed for the relief of indigent Freemasons and their widows (which laws will be forwarded to the Grand Lodge for its approval) and this has been done without any extraneous aid from either Lodges or brethren, our own benevolent funds being ample to meet any case that comes before the Committee. Our financial position, as our worthy Treasurer's balance sheets show, is most prosperous. The amount expended in benevolence has been £215 10s 6d. We have issued during the past year 383 certificates, and would have issued upwards of 400 if we had had blank certificates to meet the demands of the Lodges. These are the proofs, brethren, of our progress during the past year, and for them we have reason to thank the Great Architect of the Universe." The R.W. D.G.M. having explained how, on learning the dastardly attempt on the life of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, he had taken upon himself to cable immediately to the M.W.G.M. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales the sympathy of the Craft E.C., and had received within twenty-four hours a reply from H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, thanking them for their loyalty and Masonic feeling, the proposal to hold the annual D.G.L. Festival was discussed. Some were in favour of a ball, others of a banquet. Bro. Whyte Moore D.G.J.W., LL.D. thought a banquet was most suitable. He did not propose this because his sacred calling prohibited his visiting a ball; yet, at a banquet, worthy brethren could give expression to their feelings, and many Masonic honours might be accorded which, at a gathering composed of ladies and strangers, would have to be omitted. Wor. Bro. S. Hodge said his experience was that when a banquet was given D.G. Stewards had to put their hands in their pockets to make good the deficiency in the expenses, whereas last year the ball left a surplus of £37. The R.W. D.G.M. reminded D G.L. that the ball last year was an exceptional case, as the anticipated presence of the Royal Princes tended to make it the success it proved to be. The R.W. D.G.M. then spoke of the honour it was considered in England to hold the position of a Grand Steward, and gave a very lucid and interesting account of their origin. In conclusion, he remarked that he was at a loss to know why one of the greatest Masonic events of the year, viz., St. John's Day, was no longer celebrated in New South Wales, as formerly. Application has been made for dispensation under the English Constitution for three new Lodges, viz.:—Royal Albert Lodge, Esk Bank; Ballina Lodge, Richmond River; Moorabin Lodge, Wilcannia; making in all fifty Lodges. After some routine Masonic business District Grand Lodge was closed.

IS MASONRY REALLY FLOURISHING?

THIS is a question we are continually being asked, and taking all the facts, we scarcely feel ourselves in a position to answer so satisfactorily as could be desired. That the Order has made huge advances, especially within the last eight or ten years, is an undoubted fact, and were numbers of themselves any recommendation, we might be able to congratulate the Craft upon the progress it has made. But, unlike the friendly benefit societies, numerical strength in Freemasonry is not an unmixed good. With those the accession of "financial members" is a great point to be gained, for therein lies the secret of their success and the stability of their existence; whereas, in Masonry unwieldy Lodges are a source not only of anxiety, but a positive disadvantage in every sense. To this cause may in no small measure be attributed the unsatisfactory condition of many Lodges, both in the metropolis and the provinces; for in their desire to see the numbers increase, some brethren, in their excess of zeal, seem to lose sight of the principle which should guide them in admitting candidates for the mysteries and privileges of the Institution, and to lack discrimination in the selection of persons who seek a participation in its benefits. That the subject is one not unaccompanied with difficulties we readily admit; still, when we hear certain brethren exult over the ever widening extent and popularity of the Craft, it would be well to pause and consider how far the quality of our Lodges is affected by the quantity. It is well known that many Lodges, by the freedom with which candidates are admitted, have become too large to be manageable with any degree of satisfaction either to the Master or the members. The inevitable consequence is, that brethren aspiring to office, and seeing their chance, in the face of so large a number, very remote, reason together with the view of starting an offshoot of the mother Lodge, and, of course make it a proviso that they shall fill the chairs from the outset, and thus enter into competition so to speak with the parent branch. We have known Lodges in which young brethren yearning for prominence, and unable to find it within their own circle, have strained every feeling of disinterested love for the Craft in their ambition to grasp a collar; and have pledged seats of honour to those who would combine with them in applying for a warrant to establish a new Lodge in which they themselves might lay claim to offices which they had failed to earn in the Lodges into which they were initiated. Herein has lain the cause of many a strife and much bitterness of feeling, and Lodges so formed have not unfrequently struck among the shoals and quicksands of jealousy and heartburning only when those who had been most active in their formation, actuated by personal motives, have either supped full of their self-sought honours, or grown tired of Freemasonry altogether, and retired—as so many do who are unsuccessful—disappointed with the "hollowness" of the profession, as they are pleased to designate it. The profusion with which warrants for new Lodges have been granted till within the last two years was, in our opinion, not altogether well-advised; and we are by no means disappointed that, of late, the "progress of Freemasonry" has been more steady and subdued. Had it gone on at the ratio it assumed prior to 1880, the consequence must have been to cause such a degeneracy of the Craft as to have shorn it of much of its influence and importance. As it is, how many men do we know who, having sought admission to our ranks with ulterior motives of benefit and gain, have seceded when they found their prospects of mercenary or personal aggrandisement fall short of their anticipations? These are the men who shrug the shoulder when the praises of Masonry are sung by those who really love the Craft for its own sake, and who fail to see any of its sublime professions borne out by practice. These are the malcontents who, having failed to gain honours by merit and the purity of their motives, stand aloof, and with bated breath malign the Institution they once professed to admire and promised to support; who ultimately descend from one point to another, until we find them in the ranks of those who look askance at our Benevolent Funds, and ask in alms what they could not gain by avarice. We have known men, even after they have assisted in breaking away from their mother Lodge, and in building up an offshoot, in the ruling (!) of which they could take a share, going back to their original, and obtaining a petition for presentation to the Benevolent Fund for aid, which in some cases they need not have required but through faults of their own. In the country this is even a worse evil than in London, because few Provincial Lodges possess benevolent funds, having quite enough to do to meet the necessary expenses of the Fourth Degree, and to pay Grand Lodge fees. In such cases, when brethren appeal for relief, all they can do is to send up a petition to the Lodge of Benevolence in the hope of obtaining some help for the needy brother, and thus we find the number of applicants for assistance at each successive meeting of the Committee absolutely overwhelming, and impossible of being fully met. Apart from all other considerations, this is one of the ill effects of a too ready admission of candidates into Freemasonry. of men who fall into arrear, at first with their subscriptions then lapse altogether into a state of apathy and discontent. and finally fall into the ranks of those who have to ask for charity. With young Lodges formed in the way we indicate, it is imperative that initiates shall be found, in order to keep up the balance in the hands of the Treasurer: though, unfortunately, in some Lodges we could mention, in spite of an average share of admissions the balance-sheet tells a woeful tale of laxity on the part of the members, and a hopeless state of arrears, so far as contributions are concerned. Far better it would be if instead of gratifying personal vanity, and endeavouring to "keep up appearances" before the world, members would remain alive to a sense of their individual and collective responsibilities, and maintain in their integrity those motives and impulses which first prompted them to enrol themselves under the Masonic banner. Initiation fees are necessary, and naturally acceptable, but if the vitality of a Lodge depends upon these, and permits a laxity in the regular and constant support it has a right to expect from its older members, disasters must follow as an inevitable consequence. Another source of weakness is when we find brethren, after they have fought their way, with more vigour than discretion, through the chairs, and at last are decorated with a Past Master's jewel, sadly retiring into the background, either because they think they have achieved all they can hope for, or because they may have aspired to the purple, and found it like the "sour grapes" in the fable. Such men should never become Masons, whose zeal and enthusiasm are damped by every little trial of their fortitude and patience. This is another undesirable result of the inflation of the Craft by the too rapid creation of Lodges, and we think, all things considered, we shall best answer the question propounded at the commencement of this article by concluding that, much as we rejoice to see the Craft widen in its influence and importance, the mere increase of numbers is not all that we can wish for, and that in this very rapid augmentation of numerical strength there is danger of deterioration in point of the quality of the brethren admitted. Better far to have a reasonably workable Lodge, without drones, and in a sound financial position, than a crowd of apathetic members whose only aim is for office, whether they are qualified or not, and who sink into gloomy discontent, if "vaulting ambition" happens to "o'erleap itself and fall on the other side." If it were possible to weed out the hundreds of dissatisfied ones into whose outspread laps honours have not fallen, or deserved to fall, our Lodges would be freed from the trammels by which many are so sorely tried, and the wheels of Masonic prosperity would revolve with a far less grating sound. The query put to us, and which we have endeavoured in some way to open, is one which is exercising the minds of a considerable section of the Craft just now, and we shall be glad if any of our correspondents can, by their thoughts or experience, throw any additional light upon it. By the interchange of thoughtful opinions much good is wrought, and we trust we may receive the expression of many views upon the momentous and most important question under consideration.

BANK HOLIDAY.

EACH of the four Bank Holidays which, thanks to the initiative taken some ten years since by Sir John Lubbock. Bart., M.P., occur annually, has its special recommendations. Boxing-day enables the hardy sons of toil to extend their Christmas festivities over two days, while it further stimulates the chemist to extra exertion by promoting the sale of antibilious pills in order to counteract the dyspepsia that follows invariably the consumption of too many rich viands. Easter Monday, so dear to our Volunteers, falls in the early spring, when the trees are just beginning to bud, and the breadwinner, wearied by labours protracted through months of dull and musky weather, is looking forward to a little sunshine. Whitmonday falls later, when, for better or for worse, the weather is more settled; when cricket, and athletic and aquatic sports are in full swing; when visions of gooseberry tart and gooseberry fool loom in the by no means remote future; when our school children are counting the days to the Midsummer vacation, and bethinking themselves where they shall go, and what they shall do to enjoy themselves during that blissful period of the year; and when working men—by no means limited to the artisan and mechanic classes—have begun to feel more acutely than ever the heavy strain on their mental and physical powers. The August Bank Holiday comes in the full tide of summer, and is most enjoyable if the weather has about it anything of summer. The days are still long, and the air generally warm—occasionally even a little more so than is pleasant. The corn crops are beginning to look their brightest, and the attractions of the sea-side resorts have not yet had time to become stale and unprofitable. Thus, as we said at the outset, each of the four Bank Holidays has its special recommendations, while, to speak generally, Bank Holiday, without reference to differences of season, may be looked upon as being almost as sacred in the eyes of loyal Britons as Magna Charta or the Bill of Rights. No wonder, under these circumstances, that those who cater for the convenience or entertainment of the public should lay themselves out to meet the varied tastes and requirements of their patrons. On this occasion the Railway Companies, as usual, provided any number of excursion trains, at cheap rates, to all parts of the country. Steamboat Companies followed their example, while the programme set forth by the theatres left nothing to be desired.

The weather, if not exactly the brightest and sunshiniest we have had this year, was extremely pleasant, and from a very early hour the principal railway termini were crowded with people who, like famed John Gilpin, "on pleasure bent," had resolved on taking that pleasure either by the "sad sea waves," or at some quiet pleasure-resort inland. Thus, very heavy complements of holiday folk travelled by the London, Brighton, and South Coast Railways to Brighton, Hastings, Eastbourne, Portsmouth, Southampton, Isle of Wight, and other favourite seaside towns, while some, making shorter stages on the same lines, were content with roaming among the Surrey Hills, &c. The South Eastern and London, Chatham, and Dover Companies were under the necessity of putting their best legs forward in order to keep pace with the well-nigh overwhelming demands made on their resources by those who think Margate and Ramsgate are the only places of their kind which offer the requisite quantum of pleasure. The Great Northern not only despatched a heavy load of excursionists to St. Albans, where there was an additional attraction to the nice country round about in the shape of a combined Foresters' and Odd Fellows' Fete, but conveyed some 2,000 visitors from Cambridge, Hitchin, and other stations on its line to the Alexandra Palace; vid the London, Chatham, and Dover to the Palace of Crystal. The London and North Western, notwithstanding the heavy demands on their resources, found means to dispatch sundry excursions to Harrow, Sudbury, Wembly Hill (all of them great favourites with holiday-seeking folk), St. Albans, to which we have referred in connection with another line, and Watford, &c. All this traffic was so arranged that it did not in the slightest degree interfere with the regular traffic of the Company—a feature in railway management on which the Directorate is to be congratulated. The Midland ran a cheap train to Bedford, where there was a fire brigade competition; and the Great Western, besides dividing with the South Western the onus of filling Royal Windsor to an overflow with excursionists, bent either on enjoying a stroll on the banks of the Thames, or in the beautiful country round about, or visiting the State Apartments at the Castle, despatched an early and heavily-laden train to Swindon, Bath, Bristol; and a somewhat late, but equally well-filled one to Reading, Pangbourne, &c., &c. The Great Eastern did a heavy passenger traffic, not only in close proximity to Epping Forest, but to the remoter centres of resort with which it is connected—Walton-on-the-Naze, Clacton-on-Sea, Harwich, Dovercourt. The London, Tilbury, and Southend line, though it had its power severely taxed, was fully equal to the occasion, and by its means thousands of bread-winners with their families spent a happy day at Rosherville, Gravesend, or Southend. The Steamboat Companies also had a good time of it, and did their part in the day's traffic, by conveying some thousands to Margate and Ramsgate, Gravesend, Southend, and Sheerness, or up river to Kew, Richmond, and Hampton Court.

To attempt anything like a full and particular description of the entertainments provided for these multitudes would be out of the question, even if the space at our disposal were more considerable. Those resorts which are accessible all the year round cannot complain they had not their share of the public patronage. Kew Gardens, with its rare botanical collection, had some 40,000 visitors, and fully as large a number made or renewed acquaintance with the lions of Royal Hampton. The British Museum, the Zoological Gardens, South Kensington Museum, and the Royal Horticultural Gardens, one and all were more or less crowded with holiday folk, while others gravitated about the Tower of London and saw the lions—not your real live F. Leones, such as were to be seen there half a century since, but the Regalia, the Horse Armoury, the axe and block, Traitors' Gate, &c., &c. As for such vast open spaces such as Hampstead Heath, they, we may be sure, were not neglected. Some 50,000 to 60,000 visited the Heath we specified, the only drawback to their enjoyment being the intrusion of the Salvation Army. As to the Alexandra Palace and Crystal Palace, the enterprising management had in each case good reason to congratulate themselves on the grand programme they had prepared for the occasion. Thousands upon thousands of people sought admission at one or other of these abodes of pleasure, and enjoyed themselves till further enjoyment had become well nigh impossible. Moreover, as the railway arrangements in connection with the two Palaces were admirably regulated and controlled, these said thousands upon thousands were conveyed thither and home again, expeditiously under the circumstances, and without misadventure of any kind that we have heard of since. Lastly, those who returned early to town, or being in town as visitors, were not making homewards till the night was well advanced had something still to fall back on to make their day's pleasure, if possible, still more complete, that something being the theatres and music halls, the Christy and Mohawk minstrels, &c., which, one and all, made abundance of hay of a kind that is never disappointing long after the sun of their August Bank Holiday of this year of Grace 1882 had disappeared below the horizon.

ORGAN RECITAL.

ON Saturday the 29th. ult. Bro. Dr. Spark, the borough Organist, assisted by the Yorkshire St. Cecilia Quartet, gave his last free organ recital for the present season in the Leeds Town Hall, which was crowded by an overflowing audience. This was the fiftieth organ recital the Doctor had given since 3rd January, besides having played at six other meetings of a different character. In the course of those recitals two new pieces have on an average been introduced at each recital, so that the frequenters have had brought under their notice the best current music of the day. It is calculated that no fewer than 60,000 persons have attended the recitals, and listened to about 400 of the best compositions of living and dead authors, including excerpts from Herold, Mozart, Schubert, Bach, Guilmant, Wely, Lemmens, the Wesleys, Romberg, Handel, Wagner, Mendelssohn, Marandi, Spark, Dussek, Merkel, the Hepworths, and others. From this it will be seen that the Music-loving people of Leeds have had exceptional opportunities of making the acquaintance of the composers of music for the king of instruments, including not a few of the organist's efforts. That Dr. Spark has thoroughly gauged the tastes of his audience has been proved by the attentive hearing he has always received, and the unstinted marks of appreciation that have rewarded his efforts. He has rarely played before a larger or more appreciative audience than that of Saturday evening, and the programme selected for his final appearance this session was one calculated both to please his hearers and to show off to the best the capabilities of the magnificient organ of which he has so long been the able custodian. Auber, Rossini, Merkel, Gounod, and Romberg, had each been drawn upon to provide music fitting the occasion, and the selections must in every way have commended themselves to the audience. The vocal part of the entertainment included "The soldier's love," "Banish, oh maiden," "The dance," and "The three chafers," compositions which it is needless to say were rendered in an admirable manner by the quartet who had so kindly volunteered their assistance. The Rev. Canon Ormsby, of St. Patrick's Cathedral, who is at present officiating at St. Martin's Church, Potternewton, felicitiously proposed a vote of thanks to Dr. Spark for the musical treats he has from time to time provided to his hearers. The rev. gentleman expressed the personal enjoyment he had received from the recitals he had been enabled to attend, and said that they must be doing a great deal to educate the musical taste of the people of the town. He congratulated the people of Leeds on having such a hall, and such a splendid organ. Their thanks were due to the Corporation for providing such a means of education, but principally and chiefly were their thanks due to Dr. Spark, to whom he had pleasure in moving a vote of thanks, which he called upon the audience to accord in true Yorkshire fashion. The vote having been carried with acclamation, it was briefly acknowledged by Dr. Spark, who said that so long as he lived he should devote himself to the organ for the edification of the people. He hoped to resume his free concerts on the second Saturday in September, which he trusted would be the beginning of an equally successful session as the one which was now over.—Yorkshire Post.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF DEVON.

THE meeting of the Grand Lodge of Freemasons of the Province of Devon was held at Newton Abbot, on Tuesday, 1st inst., and, as is usual, was preceded by various Committees. The auditors V.W. Bros. J. E. Curteis P.M. 70 P.P.G.S.W. and W. S. Pasmore P.M. P.P.G.R., having performed their duties, the Huyshe Memorial Committee met at the Devon, 1138, Lodge room. There were present W. Bros. John Brewer P.G.S. Chairman, J. E. Curteis, W. E. Elphingstone Stone P.P.G.J.W., Rev. W. Whittley P.P.G.C., C. Godtschalk P.M. 70 P.P.G.D., R. H. Rae P.P.G.D., J. Stocker P.G.T., J. Jerman P.P.G.S. Works, and J. B. Gover P.M. 70 P.P.G.A.D.C. The accounts having been gone through and verified, the following report was adopted:—

The Huyshe Memorial Fund beg to report that the subscriptions received, a summary of which is annexed, amounted to 551 10s. Of this sum £525 was appropriated in payment of the purchase of a life presentation in the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and £7 15s 10d in expenses for printing and postages, leaving a balance of £18 14s 2d, which your Committee recommend should be presented in the name of the Provincial Grand Lodge to the same Institution on the Steward's list of Bro. Godtschalk, who in August 1881 moved the resolution in the Prov. Grand Lodge that the John Huyshe Memorial should take the form which is now consummated. The presentation has been filled by the nomination of Sidney Sowden, son of the late Bro. Sowden, of Lodge 372, Budleigh Salterton. Your Committee further recommend that this Report, together with the summary before referred to, be printed and forwarded to each Lodge and Chapter in the Province.

The next meeting was the important one of the Committee of Petitions. Here the V.W. Bro. J. E. Curteis presided, and there were present W. Bros. J. B. Gover Secretary, C. Powell P.M. and S. 1205, S. B. Harvey P.M. and Sec. 1255, Henry G. Beachy P.M. 1138 P.P.G.T. A letter was read from the chairman, the R.W. Bro. W. Goddard Rogers D.P.G.M. stating his inability to attend. The minutes of the last meeting having been read, were confirmed. The Secretary read his report as follows:—

The number of votes received from the Provinces for the past year have been for October 1881, 253 boys' and 184 girls'; for April 1882, 267 boys' and 184 girls'; for May 1882, 434 men's and 444 widows', showing an increase over the number received last year of 214 votes. This improvement clearly demonstrates the utility of widely circulating the Reports of the London representative, in which Reports will be found many wholesome truths and undeniable facts. There are, however, still some Lodges who persistently withhold their support. This must be because the brethren who are appointed to represent them on this Committee fail in their duty. The Lodges who have neglected during the past year have been Nos. 106, 489, 710, for the eleventh year 1135 and 1753. The Chapters are 106, 444, 710, 90, and 1284. The disposal of the votes will be shown in the Report of Bro. Godtschalk, as also the position of the Province, which is highly favourable.

The report of the London representative (Bro. C. Godtschalk) having been printed and circulated was in the hands of each member of the Committee of Petitions, and is abridged as follows:—

The Annual Report referred first to the fact that at the half-yearly Report, Devon owed to other Provinces a total of 2,204 votes, whilst there were due to Devon 1,949 votes. The first election of the year was that of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, 8th April 1882, and a peculiar feature of this election was that at a Quarterly Communication, held immediately preceding the election, a motion was carried that all the candidates (twenty-seven) should be admitted without a ballot. Hence, the thousands of votes collected with so much care, became waste paper, and Devon was enabled to pay their liability of 626 votes. Of course arrangements had been made to pay in full if it had been required. The next election was for the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, 10th April 1882; the Devon votes received by Bro. C. Godtschalk from the Province were 267 Boys', with 816 repaid by Warwickshire, 197 borrowed, and fifty from a private source. These 1,330 votes were disposed of as follows:—Repaid Worcester 457, Cheshire 29, Bro. L— 33, lent Cheshire 500, to Warwickshire 257, and to South Wales 54. At the election of the Royal Masonic Institution for Widows, 19th May, there were received from the Devon Province 444 votes; add to these the following votes obtained by your representative from Warwickshire 816, from Monmouthshire 535, from Cheshire 1,000, from South Wales 108, borrowed from Cornwall 239, and from Exmouth, exchange for men 47. These 3,189 votes are thus accounted for: The candidate selected by the Committee, the widow of an Exeter brother, had, during two previous elections polled 22 votes, 1,381 votes were polled for her, and she was elected with 1,403 votes. Then selecting the widow of the Plymouth brother whose friends had previously guaranteed to poll for her some two or three hundred votes; 1381 votes were polled for her by me, and she was elected by a total of 1,841 votes; 427 were then lent; this accounts for all received. The exceptionally high polling at the election of widows, at which only thirteen were to be elected out of sixty-three candidates, meant that the highest candidate polled 2,096 votes, and the lowest elected 1,372. At the Election for Aged Freemasons, on the 19th May, the Devon votes were 434; borrowed from Cornwall 207, from Wiltshire 50, repaid by Cumberland 104. These 795 votes were thus dealt with, including sixteen rejected coloured votes, because three Lodges and two Chapters had neglected to pay their dues to Grand Lodge, to a brother of Exmouth. In exchange for 100 Widows' votes, lent Exmouth 175 votes, and in exchange for twenty-five guineas to be paid to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys on the list of Bro. C. Godtschalk, 504 votes were handed to Bro. Carter, and he was enabled to elect a duly qualified Devon candidate with 988 votes. Thus at four elections, the total number of Devon votes received by your representative were 1329; whilst the elections of Devon candidates during same elections a total of 3,541 votes more had been used, and yet our Province has no future liability, other than can be repaid by votes lent to other Provinces. Devon has now on the London Charities seven Aged Masons, seven Widows, and three others receiving half their late husbands' annuities, six Devon orphan boys, and eight girls in the Schools. Bro. Godtschalk's Report concluded with a regret that the duties were so manifold, and with less time at his disposal, he should not seek re-election at the expiration of his term; his successor, however, would find the Province under no liability for a single vote in connection with the elections.

An animated discussion arose hereon as to the disposal of some of the votes, and the independent line of action adopted by Bro. Godtschalk at the several elections, as shown by this and other of his reports.

In reply, Bro. Godtschalk said evidently two or three of the Committee were labouring under a mistaken notion. They must bear in mind in every case since he had represented the Province at the Great Masonic Charities, he had first, from his own efforts, supplemented the small number of Province votes placed at his disposal, and with these votes at once elected the candidate, whether man, woman, boy, or girl that had been selected by this Committee. Had these poor candidates been left to reap the benefit of what the Devon Province votes would have done for them, it is certain they would not have been elected, but been left out in the cold, and by now probably be hungry. Not only had he, without a single exception, elected the candidates selected by the Committee, but had, with surplus votes obtained entirely outside the Province, elected other duly qualified Devon candidates, for which the Province of Devon is under no liability whatever. He also pointed out to the two or three brethren who cavilled at this independent action, that had he used the large number of votes obtained wholly outside Devon, by electing candidates not belonging to the Province, then there might be something in their objection, but they well knew such had never been the case. He failed to see, looking at the fact that his action had been to relieve the Province, by electing duly qualified Devon candidates, whose cases must sooner or later have come before this Committee, who not having the power to elect the same would have had a burden to deal with, which, by his action, to the extent of the candidates elected, this Committee is relieved from dealing with. Moreover, let it be noted that in two recent cases of Devon candidates elected, they not being selected by this Committee, monies have been paid to the respective Institutions, for which Devon gets the credit, and future votes, through her Steward. Thinking thus, it would be well if certain brethren, before giving vent to the very crude objections expressed, were to throw a little light thereon, and endeavour to post themselves with a knowledge of some of the features of a contested Masonic election; they would learn that during the two hours of the poll being open, and after previous well-arranged plans have been made for the election, and the ultimate disposal of votes, many contingencies arise; by having to depend on others for votes, which have to be allotted, repaid, marked, and polled, and to the brother whose word is good for the prompt return at a future election within the last hour of the poll being open, large parcels of votes are sometimes offered; this requires instant decision, with the knowledge of what number he wants to elect his candidate, and not to poll at random, and so waste votes; and also to know that he will be in a position to repay the borrowed votes at next election; to do this requires a representative, not a mere go-between who must needs wire his Province for instructions over every small transaction. For some years he had been, in the sense first-mentioned, their representative, and the large number of Devon candidates—Aged Masons', Widows', Boys', and Girls'—carried by him, with only a small moiety of Devon votes to do so, placed him in a position to say to carping brethren, "In the interest of our Province, and for the benefit of our unfortunate and necessitous poor,—Go thou and do likewise." At the conclusion of these remarks, Bro. Godtschalk's report was received and adopted by the Committee, for presentation to the Provincial Grand Lodge.

The following Report was likewise adopted for presentation to the Provincial Grand Lodge:—

The Committee of Petitions, in submitting their annual statement to the Provincial Grand Lodge, have the pleasure to report that the result of their efforts has been as successful as in former years. The total number of votes for all the Charities received by the Committee from Devon for the year have been 1766, an increase over the former year of 214. With these at their disposal the Committee have succeeded in securing the election of one aged Mason, two widows, and one girl, and for this purpose 4851 votes have been used. Where and how the enormous balance of over 3000 votes were obtained is shown in the Reports of Bro. Godtschalk, to whom the Province is largely indebted for his indefatigable energy and skilful arrangements. It is still, however, a subject for regret that many Lodges do not support the Committee. Those who have neglected to do so in the past year are Lodges 106 Exmouth, 489 Bideford, 710 Totnes, for the eleventh year 1135 Ilfracombe, for the fourth year 1753 Okehampton, and Chapters 106 Exmouth, 444 Staverose, 710 Totnes, 954 St. Anbyn, 1284 Topsham. There are at least 600 votes annually lost to the Province, either by being given to candidates outside Devon, or not being utilised. It should be remembered that the pink coloured votes sent to Lodges and Chapters are rejected by the scrutineers if the Grand Lodge and Chapter dues are unpaid. And at the elections a black list is issued by the Grand Secretary, and the Lodges who figure therein lose their votes. At the meeting of the Committee in Exeter, on 24th January, the following sums were granted:—£5 to the widow of a late brother of Lodge 112 Exeter, being a fifth donation, £5 to a brother of Lodge 159 Stonehouse, £5 to the widow of a brother of Lodge 280 Devonport, £5 to the brother of Lodge 248 Brixham, £5 to the widow of a brother of Lodge 328 Torquay, £5 to the widow of a brother of Lodge 1125 Tiverton, £5 to the widow of a brother of Lodge 1205 Stonehouse, the sum of £2 10s to the widow of a brother of Lodge 1247 Plymouth, and £5 to the widow of a brother of Lodge 1550 Plymouth. At the meeting held at Newton Abbot this day, the Committee have granted the sum of £5 to the widow of a brother of Lodge 489 Bideford, and they recommend the Provincial Grand Lodge to grant the following sums:—£5 to the widow of a brother of Lodge 280 Devonport, £5 to a brother of Lodge 248 Brixham, £10 to the widow of a brother of Lodge 1125 Tiverton, £10 to the widow of a brother of Lodge 1205 Stonehouse, £5 to the widow of a brother of Lodge 156 Plymouth, £10 to a brother of Lodge 328 Torquay, and three guineas to a widow of a brother of Lodge 1181 Seaton; and in accordance with the resolution of the Provincial G. Lodge, the Committee recommend that the sum of one hundred guineas (the available balance of the funds) be given to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, and that it be placed on the list of the W. Bro. J. E. Curteis P.P.G.S.W., as Steward representing the Province.

The Provincial Grand Lodge was held in the Alexandra Hall, under the banner of Devon Lodge, No. 1138, and the room was well arranged and decorated by the zealous members of that Lodge.

The Secretary's Report, showing the returns of the Lodges in the Province, the number of members and amount of dues, which will be printed and circulated amongst the Lodges, was received and adopted.

The Treasurer's Report showed the amount received for the past year, and beyond small printing and postal expenses, the balance will be found to be satisfactorily expended by the Committee of Petitions. The Report of the Fortescue Fund was not presented.

The Report of the Committee of Petitions was read by W. Bro. Gover, and it was unanimously resolved that it be received and adopted, and the sums therein recommended be paid.

The Bye-Laws Revision Committee reported that they had met, and having regard to the fact that the constitution of the Order was also to be revised, and having the advice of the higher authorities, the Committee would wait for the settlement of the general laws.

The Report of the Huyshe Memorial Committee was received and adopted.

The Report of the Committee for purchasing Collars and Jewels was read. They had been unable to find exactly how many would be really wanted, and there was a large difference in the Masonic drapers' and jewellers' prices; but after the meeting, when they proposed to retain the collars, they would be able to decide and carry out the arrangement. Bro. Gover suggested that it would be better to adopt the principle of Grand Lodge, and let the brethren who were appointed to office come provided with their regalia. He had had several experiences of new collars being bought for Grand Lodge, and could scarcely understand how these were lost; a Brother distinguished by high official rank ought to be able to recollect to whom the jewel lent him for a year really belonged. The Report was received and adopted.

The following communication from the Grand Lodge was submitted for consideration:—"That at the Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge, holden on 7th June, it had been proposed that, for the purpose of maintaining and extending the Fund of Benevolence, all the members of the Lodges in the London district (except Military Lodges) shall pay quarterly 1s 6d each to the fund, instead of 1s, as fixed by the Grand Lodge held on the 2nd March 1814. And that all members of Lodges not within the London district (except Military, Colonial, and Foreign Lodges) shall pay quarterly ninepence each to the fund, instead of sixpence, as fixed by the Grand Lodge." But, "after some discussion, the following resolution was passed:—'That the further consideration of this motion be postponed until an opportunity be given to Provincial Grand Lodges to consider whether any increase should be made to the quarterage at present paid to Grand Lodge.' I am, therefore, directed to request that you will be so good as to take the necessary steps to ascertain the views of your Provincial Grand Lodge on the question, and to notify the same to me before the Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge on the 6th December next, at which meeting the consideration of the motion will be resumed." The brethren generally were opposed to this proposition, and it was proposed and seconded by W. Bros. Samuel Jones and Perry that no increase in the quarterage should be advised. The only brother that spoke in behalf of the Grand Lodge proposition was Wor. Brother Charles Godtschalk, who sought to show that one of two courses must be followed: either the quarterages must be increased, or the relief afforded by the Lodge of Benevolence must be limited. At present that Lodge had a reserve fund of £45,000, but the calls upon it had increased so much of late that the expenditure exceeded the income, and at the present rate that reserve fund must be annihilated in about twenty years unless the brethren came in some way to its aid. Lodges were always applying to the Board of Benevolence for aid when they had any distress, somewhat too frequently, he feared, from want of caution and circumspection in their Lodge management. Yet they thought nothing of how that fund was to be replenished. By the reckless increase of Lodges during the past few years, whether wanted or not, many had been brought into the Order who had better have been left out; with them Masonry had made a bad debt. This debt must now be paid by increased quarterages, or it must be liquidated by diminished grants from the Fund of Benevolence. The proposition against the increase of the quarterage was carried with scarcely another dissentient. W. Bros. John James, J. W. Cornish, and Walter Bradnee were proposed for the office of Treasurer. Bro. Cornish was elected. W. Bro. J. E. Curteis and W. S. Paemore were re-elected Auditors.

R.W. Brother Rogers then invested the following brethren as the Officers for the ensuing year:—Worshipful Brothers Captain W. Elphinstone Stone, R.N., 372 P.G.S.W., Wm. Derry 166 P.G.J.W., the Rev. Roger Granville 489 and Rev. H. B. Grimaldi 164 Prov. Grand Chaplains, W. Vicary 1138 P.G. Registrar, J. W. Cornish 223 P.G.T., John Brewer 251 P.G. Sec., W. B. Colston 248 P.G.S.D., Mark Farrant 112 P.G.S.D., W. H. Goodridge 797 P.G.J.D., Thomas Sanders 421 P.G.J.D., George Merrifield 282 P.G.S. Works, James Murray 1402 P.G.D.C., H. L. This concluded the business, and in the evening a large number of brethren dined together at the Globe Hotel, R.W. Bro. Rogers presiding.

A committee has been formed with a view to raising by public subscription sufficient funds to enable Mr. J. T. Wood to resume his exploration of the remains of the famous Temple of Diana at Ephesus. It was as far back as 1863 that Mr. Wood began his labours, and after continuing them for six years he was fortunate enough to discover the site of the building some twenty feet below the surface of the ground. For the five following years he prosecuted his task under the auspices of the Trustees of the British Museum, by the aid of government grants, amounting in the aggregate to £12,000. Since then circumstances have not been favourable to his wish to carry his searches further, and hence the present movement, which is under the patronage of H.R.H. the Duke of Albany.

On Tuesday afternoon the Princes Albert Victor and George of Wales were confirmed at Whippingham Church, Newport, Isle of Wight, the ceremony being performed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, with whom were the Dean of Windsor and Canon Connor. The Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, with their daughters the Princesses Victoria, Louise, and Maud of Wales, the Princess Beatrice, the Duchess of Connaught, Prince Leopold Duke of Albany, the Duge of Hesse, and the Princesses Sophia and Margaret of Prussia occupied seats in the chancel, which was beautifully decorated with flowers, while on the Communion Table was an exquisite display of white lilies. The young Princes wore their naval uniform, and by special desire of Her Majesty, every rank on board the Bacchante was represented, Captain Lord Scott and the other officers being in full uniform.

HOLIDAY TIME.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—At a time when the sun is broiling us all in London, and rendering life almost unbearable to us who are "chained to the desk" it is pleasant to think of so many of our brethren who are away on the wings of holiday-making, and who will return to their duties full of renewed health and vigour, when the recess is over. I hear, too, that the summer banquets which have taken place in connection with many of the metropolitan Lodges have turned out an unqualified success, and that one or two others are on the point of drawing together goodly parties of brethren and their lady friends during the next few weeks. I only regret that your columns are not thrown open more freely to a description of these happy réunions, for independently of the pleasure such accounts would give to the unfortunate, but unselfish, ones who have to stay at home, the records of trips and enjoyable excursions by road, river, or rail, always possess some features of interest which may be read with pleasure during our hours of relaxation. I have just received a missive from an old friend of mine, who is now enjoying a flying visit to the land o' cakes and it is positively charming to hear his recital of the benefit and pleasure he is deriving from the change. Our brother, before crossing the Tweed, wrote and asked, which was the most convenient hotel in the locality for which he was bound? and received what must have been to him a very welcome hint. "My house would be as good an hotel as any I know of, and so you had better come here." It is not often an invitation comes so frank and hospitably, and I should have wondered had Brother O—— needed a repetition of it. So away he speeds on a 350 miles journey, which he says, gleefully, was got over in eight hours and twenty minutes; and, he adds, "we did rattle away over some parts of the journey!" There is a tantalising chuckle about that style of reminder which makes one almost rush in desperation and pack up one's portmanteau instanter! He goes on further to tickle the fancy by saying, "This is a beautiful place. The house is situated in a large park of over a thousand acres, with a splendid trout stream running through it, and surrounded by very high hills, the scenery of which is splendid. I long to be at the top of them, which I shall be in a few days." My correspondent,—let me whisper in parenthesis,—always seems to hold "Excelsior!" as his motto, whether in Lodge or in his business and pleasure; and that is one reason, perhaps, of his having attained the enviable means of scudding off every now and then on a 350 miles journey! "The air is singularly pure and bracing, and it is considered one of the most healthy places in Scotland." Even in the midst of all this delicious revelry, with mountain-climbing and trout-fishing on the brain, he does not, however, forget home, for he hopes some kind brother was found the other night to "scratch down" the minutes of the Lodge of which he is Secretary, and if the substitute is too indolent to make them into "fair copy" for the next meeting, he asks me to "keep them in the rough till he comes home." Of course, the worthy old fellow need not make himself anxious at all on that score, nor allow the thought of it to interfere for a moment with the rural felicity he is now enjoying. In the postscript are the words, "We are off for a drive directly after dinner. Remember me to the brethren all, and say, I am enjoying myself and forgetting all about Masonry, so I shall have to rehearse to myself while fishing." Lucky dog! the only harm we wish you is, that we could join you on the banks of your lovely stream, and hear your merry prattle, as the trout rise to the fly, to enhale your mountain breezes, and to "rehearse Masonry" (?) instead of spending the next few sultry weeks on a high stool amongst the bricks and mortar of this eternally hard-worked city. Cannot you get a few more of our brethren who are floating about in charming holiday ease to send us a few little bits of such gossip. It would enable them to give vent to their joyous feelings, and do a little to make us at home forget the worries of an involuntary imprisonment in the durance vile of our offices.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Fraternally yours,

GRUMBLER.

JEWS IN ENGLAND.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—All English historians agree that Jews settled in England during Cromwell's time; E. H. Lindo, in his "Jewish Calendar," page 127, says, that in 1656, "The first Portuguese synagogue, Duke's Place," was opened, also their burial ground, in Mile End, and their hospital, where it now stands. I was, therefore, surprised to find in "The England of Shakespeare," by Edwin Goadley, published by Cassell, Petter, Galpin and Co., chapter ix. page 138, an intimation that Jews lived in England during Shakespeare's time.

The said chapter is devoted to an imaginary ramble, by the author, through various parts of London. On page 138 he says, "Our route is by Cornhill, then anything but a corn place, full of old clothes shops, and familiar Jewish physiognomies. If you have been robbed of a hat, a cloak, or a rapier, in a brawl over-night, it is here you may find it hanging next morning, with a good price on it in English money." On the next pages he says, "To the right is the Jewerie, the abode of the persecuted, but useful tribe."

Now, if there is any truth about the old clothiers in the days of Elizabeth or James I. in Cornhill having bought stolen goods, these old clothiers could not have been Jews. I hope you will call the publisher's attention to the blunder of Mr. Goadly, so that it may be corrected in the next edition of that otherwise very interesting little book.

Respectfully and fraternally yours,

SUBDIVISION OF THE LONDON LODGES.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The letter of your correspondent "DELTA" gives me great encouragement. I have not lost sight of my proposal, and, as a proof of intention to promote it, I may, perhaps, be allowed, through your pages, to inform him and the brethren generally, that I have forwarded to the proper quarter another notice of motion, which I trust will not be affected by any technicality rendering it unacceptable to the Board of Masters, to whom it, as well as all other notices of motion for discussion in Grand Lodge, must in accordance with our rules and constitutions, be submitted My motion now is as follows:—

"That, having regard to the great increase, during the past twenty-five years, in the number of 'Lodges within the London District,' (see Book of Constitutions, page 72), this Grand Lodge desires to respectfully represent to His Royal Highness the Most Worshipful Grand Master the desirability of subdividing the said London District into Subordinate Grand Lodges, to be constituted in like manner to Provincial Grand Lodges."

There is not the least doubt that the question I desire to have discussed is one in which a majority of the members of the Metropolitan Lodges take great interest; and I conscientiously believe that, if the suggestion I make can be carried out without interference with any prerogative whatsoever, their votes will be given in its favour. I have no personal desire to give the slightest occasion for interference with duly constituted authority; but, on the contrary, am loyally disposed to submit thereto in all matters consistent with firm principle and freedom of discussion. Being, therefore, undesirous of promoting any debate which cannot be to the interests of Freemasonry, I have sought advice and information as to whether any, and, if any, what reasons can be advanced against this notice of motion as a fair question for the decision of the Grand Lodge, which body "alone as the inherent power of enacting laws and regulations for the government of the Craft." But it has been intimated to me that it is no part of the duty of others, notwithstanding official position, "to advise private members of Lodges either as to the form or substance of resolutions they may desire to bring forward in Grand Lodge."

Consequently the action I have taken is on my sole responsibility, and I must stand or fall accordingly as the members of the "Lodges within the London district" may afford or withold their support. The "championship of free discussion," to which your correspondent alludes, although a very taking and complimentary expression, does not carry with it that freedom from anxiety which is essential to comfort, unless there be a corresponding effort on the part of those who agree with the principle. If that assistance be given, not only by perfect agreement out of Grand Lodge, as it is, but by open endorsements within its portals, the task of securing a "fair hearing" for an important question will be made easy, and the result give satisfaction.

On the merits of the question to which my notice of motion refers, I will not now enlarge. There will be proper time and place for full explanation of my views. They may not accord with the general sentiments of the brethren; on the other hand, they may. I am content to take their opinion in either case; but as to any interference with the ordinary course of procedure in respect of "notices of motion" the "question of privilege" still remains as a "dernier ressort," unless indeed the "cloture" should become a standing order of Grand Lodge procedure.

Yours fraternally,

JAMES STEVENS P.M. P.Z.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—No one admires Bro. James Stevens more than I do, and no one would more gladly see his efforts at any reasonable reform crowned with success. I do not doubt, as your correspondent of last week "DELTA" is pleased to remark, that Bro. Stevens's proposal for "the subdivision of the London Lodges into Metropolitan Grand Lodges," already "has the agreement of a large body of Metropolitan Masons in its favour," and, such being the case, it does not surprise me in the least to hear that they "desire that Bro. Stevens should not let the matter drop because of his having been misinterpreted on the last occasion." I think it was quite beneath the dignity of the Board of Masters, even though they were fortified in what they did by the opinion of so learned an authority as our respected G. Registrar, to employ a mere quibble in order to defeat Bro. Stevens's motion, and Bro. Stevens was perfectly justified in bringing the matter under the notice of Grand Lodge as a question of privilege. I will go further and say, that in my humble opinion, Bro. Stevens's plain and unadorned explanation showed advantageously by the side of that offered by Grand Registrar, and I am considerably more than half inclined to believe that our Pro G. Master, though he felt it his duty to justify—as he did on grounds which, as his lordship was pleased to remark, were most trivial—the action of the Board of Masters, was of the same mind. But, though I think the Board of Masters was in the wrong in rejecting Bro. Stevens's motion, and that the latter was not only fully justified, but acted most pluckily in bringing his question of privilege before Grand Lodge, that is quite another affair from having faith in the virtue of the proposal Bro. Stevens was desirous of submitting. I do not, in the first place, think the Lodges in the Metropolitan area have the slightest reason to complain of not having their due share—if there be a due share, where merit alone is, or should be, the ground for promotion—of Grand Lodge honours. In the next place, the line which separates the Metropolis from the contiguous Provinces of Kent, Surrey, Essex, Herts, and Middlesex, is so absolutely nominal that a London brother who is anxious to win for himself Prov. Grand honours need not experience the slightest difficulty in satisfying his ambition. Lastly, the proposition, if carried, would, by encouraging still further the already too prevalent love of tinsel, still further detract from the simplicity of the Craft.

Yours fraternally,

"JOD."

MASONIC MENDICANCY.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have little doubt that your readers have by this time had well nigh enough of this discussion. The question of the bestowal of alms, and in what cases it is justifiable, in what the reverse, is one in respect of which there will always be found a large number of people who are of one mind only in one particular—they agree to differ. But this hardly affects the point as originally raised by a "CONSTANT READER." He cited a particular case, in which a "wayworn" brother applied for help to the members of a Lodge who were in the act of enjoying the final bout of conviviality at the very moment he made his request, and was sent away unrelieved. He remarked on the hardship of the case, but was rebuked by "CARITAS CUM DISCRIMINE" for his pains. I followed, with a suggestion that no harm could possibly have been done if the poor fellow had been temporarily relieved with the price of "glasses round," meaning of course, as I subsequently explained, that that would have met the immediate necessities of the brother's need till proper inquiry had been made into the circumstances. The discussion continued, and at length culminated in the article which appeared in your number of last week. Now there is nothing in which the observance of a hard-and-fast rule is so likely to be injurious as in the distribution of alms. The man who makes a point of giving indiscriminately to every applicant has his charity again and again abused by loafing vagabonds. If you remonstrate with him, all he probably says is, "Well, it can't be helped; at all events, there were some worthy people among those I helped." On the other hand, the man who on principle refuses every applicant for help, acts with equal unwisdom. But in Masonry there is some difference in the administration of help to needy brethren. We are invited—or rather I should say it is enjoined upon us—to help those of our fellows who are in distress—within the just limit of prudence. Therefore, though it is the duty of every Mason to whom application is made by a brother for help to exercise the necessary caution, so as not to encourage the vagabond in his wanderings, it is not his whole and sole duty. If he can afford it, he ought to give him sufficient for his immediate necessities, so that, to use your own quotation, it may not be a case of "While the grass grows the horse starves." It is better to waste a little on some unworthy object of your sympathy than to run the risk of driving a worthy one into the workhouse. If, on inquiry, you find your applicant is little else than a vagabond going about the country for the purpose of seeking whom he may devour, you can then advertise him as such in the Masonic journals, and you have expended no more than you would have spent, if, in company of half-a-dozen friends, you had paid for "glasses round." If, on the other hand, he turns out a worthy fellow, you not only have the immediate satisfaction of having helped him in his immediate distress, but you can leave him with the almoner of a Lodge with far better grace, and therefore be of greater service to him ultimately, than if, in doubt of the justice of his case, you had dismissed him unrelieved.

I have no wish to prolong the discussion, but these few remarks may possibly help to illustrate your article of last week.

Fraternally yours,

"LONDONER."

The Prov. G. Lodge of South Wales, Western Division, will hold its annual meeting at Haverfordwest, on Wednesday next, the 16th instant. There is sure to be a very considerable gathering of the Craft, as there is, unquestionably, no more popular Masonic Provincial chief than Lieut.-Col. Lloyd Philipps, who is Grand Master of the Province. We anticipate that the meeting will prove a great success.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Pure Blood.—When the blood is pure, its circulation calm and equable, and the nerves well strung, we are well. These Pills possess a marvellous power in securing these essentials of health by purifying, regulating, and strengthening the fluids and solids. Holloway's Pills can be confidently recommended to all persons suffering from disordered digestion, or worried by nervous fancies, or neuralgic pains. They correct acidity and heartburn, dispel sick headache, quicken the action of the liver, act as alteratives and gentle aperients. The weak and delicate may take them without fear. Holloway's Pills are eminently serviceable to invalids of irritable constitution, as they raise the action of every organ to its natural standard, and universally exercise a calming and sedative influence.

At the Mansion House on Thursday the Lord Mayor, at the request of the Local Committee of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution, presented gold and silver medals and certificates to the crew of the Freemasons' lifeboat, Albert Edward, stationed at Clacton-on-Sea. The awards had been forwarded by the French Government, through the Board of Trade, in recognition of the rescue of the crew of the French fishing vessel Madeleine, of Boulogne, which was wrecked on the Gunfleet sand, near Clacton, in October last. Since the placing of the lifeboat at Clacton, four years ago, it has been instrumental in saving seventy-six lives. The Lord Mayor complimented the men for their gallant conduct, and after Sir E. Perrot had thanked his Lordship, the proceedings terminated.

23 GREAT QUEEN STREET, W.C.

LAYING THE CORNER STONE OF A NEW MASONIC TEMPLE AT NASSAU.

THE ceremony of laying the Corner Stone of the Masonic Temple at Nassau took place on Monday, 17th July, in the presence of an enormous concourse of people of all religious denominations and grades of society in this city. A procession was formed at the Lodge room in Bay-street soon after four p.m., which moved to the Cathedral, headed by two Tylers with drawn swords, the Friendly Society's Band, the Members of the Lodges and Masters thereof, the two Grand Lodges, the Deputy Grand Masters, the Grand Masters with the Grand Deacons on either side of them, two Grand Stewards and the Grand Tyler bringing up the rear.

In this order the march was continued till the Cathedral was reached, when a halt was called, and the brethren opened to the right and left, facing one another inwards, so as to leave a lane for the Grand Masters to pass up the centre; thus the Church was entered by inverting the order of the procession.

The service was begun with the appropriate hymn, "Pleasant are Thy courts," &c., which was sung most heartily. The Rev. R. Swann, rector of the parish, read the prayers; the Rev. R. Saunders, rector of St. Matthew's, read the first lesson; and the Rev. W. W. Duncombe, rector of St. David's, the second lesson. The sermon by the Right Rev. the Bishop was a practical and eloquent exposition of the words: "In whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord,"—Ephesians ii. 21.

The Cathedral choir on the occasion was increased by many of the singers of St. Andrew's Church, which added much to the music both in volume and effectiveness. The Anthem selected was "The Marvellous Work," from Haydn's Creation. The solo was very finely sung by Mrs. Spence, in a clear, brilliant, and well-sustained manner, and the whole service was most hearty and joyous. When the last notes of the organ were pealing out the Hallelujah Chorus the procession reformed, and proceeded to the grounds of the present Lodge, in front of which the new Temple is to be erected, where preparations were made for laying the corner stone. A platform had been constructed for the members of the Grand Lodges; and as soon as order could be obtained, the Hon. J. H. Webb, District Grand Master for the Bahamas under the English Constitution, announced the purpose of the occasion, and offered a short prayer. The Provincial Grand Master, under the Scotch Constitution, F. J. Aranha, Esq., then inquired of the Treasurers and Secretaries of the Grand Lodges what coins, papers, or written documents had been prepared to place in the cavity of the stone. These Officers responded, and Bro. Butler read the scroll, which contained the names of the Grand Masters and Officers of the Grand Lodges, &c. Coins of the period and newspapers were also deposited under the stone, the cement was spread and the stone lowered, making three distinct stops, while the band played "Rule Britannia." Bro. Grand Master Aranha then presented to the Deputy Grand Masters, Bros. Captain Lightbourn and A. Thurston, the Square; to the Grand Senior Wardens the Level, and to the Grand Junior Wardens the Plumb, and the following colloquy ensued:—The Deputies were asked, "What is the proper jewel of your office?" To this they replied, and stated the moral and Masonic use of the Square. Similarly the Senior and Junior Wardens stated the jewels of their respective offices, and their uses in Masonry; the Level to remind the brothers of equality and to lay horizontals, and the Plumb to indicate rectitude of conduct and to try perpendiculars. All these several Masonic uses were applied to the Corner Stone, and the Deputy Masters reported it "square," the Senior Wardens "level," and the Junior Wardens "plumb." The District Grand Master then said:—

"This Corner Stone has been tested by the proper implements of Masonry, and we find that the Craftsmen have skilfully and faithfully performed their duty. We do, therefore, declare the stone to be well formed, true and trusty, and correctly laid according to the rules of our ancient Craft. Let the elements of consecration now be presented."

The Deputy Grand Masters then scattered corn as an emblem of plenty, and said:—

"May the blessing of bounteous heaven be showered upon all like patriotic and benevolent undertakings, and inspire the hearts of the people with virtue, wisdom, and gratitude."

The Senior Grand Wardens produced wine, and, pouring it on the Stone, said:—

"We pour this wine as an emblem of joy and gladness. May the Great Ruler of the Universe bless and prosper our Empire and City, and may Friendship and Brotherly Love endure throughout all ages."

The Junior Grand Wardens poured oil on the Stone, and said:—

"We pour this oil as an emblem of peace. May its blessings abide with us continually, and may the Grand Master of heaven and earth shelter and protect the widow and orphan, shield and defend them from trials and vicissitudes of the world, and so bestow His mercy upon the bereaved, the afflicted, and the sorrowing, that they may know sorrowing and trouble no more."

An Invocation, pronounced by the District Grand Master, followed: in these words:—

"May the all-bounteous Author of Nature bless the inhabitants of these Islands with an abundance of the necessaries, conveniences, and comforts of life; assist in the erection and completion of this building, protect the workmen against every accident, long preserve the structure from decay, and grant to us all a supply of the Corn of Nourishment, the Wine of Refreshment, and the Oil of Joy."—Amen.

An Address by the Provincial Grand Master Aranha followed:—

Men and Brethren here Assembled: Be it known unto you, that we be lawful Masons, true and faithful to the laws of our country, and engaged by solemn obligations, to erect magnificent buildings, to be serviceable to the brethren, and to fear God, the Great Architect of the Universe. We have among us, concealed from the eyes of all men, secrets which cannot be divulged, and which have never been found out; but these secrets are lawful and honourable, and not repugnant to the laws of God or man. They were entrusted, in peace and honour, to the Masons of ancient times, and having been faithfully transmitted to us, it is our duty to convey the unimpaired to the latest posterity. Unless our Craft were good, and our calling honourable, we should not have lasted for so many centuries, nor should we have been honoured with the patronage of so many illustrious men in all ages, who have ever shown themselves ready to promote our interests and defend us from all adversaries. We are assembled here to-day, in the face of you all, to build a house, which we pray God may deserve to prosper, by becoming a place of concourse for good men, and promoting harmony and brotherly love throughout the world, till time shall be no more. Amen."

At the conclusion of this Address, the District Grand Master (Bro. J. H. Webb) rose and delivered an eloquent and extempore oration, in a clear, comprehensive and happy style, of which the following is a summary:—

"Brethren and Friends,—At this stage of our proceedings, it is usual for some learned and eloquent brother to deliver an oration, embodying the salient principles of our Order, and their adaptability to the exigencies of modern thought and the requirements of Society. I at once admit my incapability of properly performing this duty, but I feel somewhat relieved from any embarrassment by the sympathy and interest so clearly manifested in the vast assemblage of persons of all ranks and walks in life here gathered to assist in the ceremony of the day. I look upon the joyous faces of my brethren, this surging crowd, this glorious weather and brilliant tout ensemble, as an oration in itself—more eloquent than any language of mine can illustrate. We cannot paint the lily nor adorn the rose, any more than can any words of mine add to the poetic beauty and grandeur of this interesting occasion. However, I will occupy your attention for a short time with a few points in the history of Ancient and Modern Freemasonry, the Secrets of Masons, and the universal principle of Charity and Brotherhood, which is the glory of our Order. Laurie's "History of Freemasonry" contains the most succinct and graphic history of the Craft. I will read a passage or two from this work, and then leave this part of my subject, which, like all other traditional histories, is involved in a certain amount of obscurity, but has still enough of the sunlight of truth and fact to connect it with modern Speculative Freemasonry. (Extracts were here read, tracing the origin and progress of this ancient and venerable Institution.) In the West Indies Masonic history can be traced to its first Charter, about 130 years ago, and in our own sea-girt island we have data for nearly a hundred years. In the records of the vestry of Christ Church in 1785 it is stated that the Freemasons attended Divine Service on St. John's Day; and in 1810 the foundation stone of St. Andrew's Kirk was laid by Freemasons. In 1830 they assisted at the laying of the foundation stone of the tower of Christ Church, and in 1837 they were again present when the corner stone of the new church was laid. In 1844 the first efforts were put forth by Bros. Sir George Anderson, Cooke, Jarrett, Dillett, and Smith (whose son I now see present), to obtain funds for the purchase of the present Lodge site, and the erection of the building for which to-day we are met to lay the Corner Stone. It is peculiarly gratifying to me to assist at this ceremony, because I believe the building to be erected will be an ornament to this City as well as a home for Masons, where in mutual brotherhood meetings for intellectual culture and social recreation may be had. It will be the fault of Masons alone if the arts and sciences[1] are not therein discussed and cultivated, and I rejoice in the knowledge that all good men and true may there receive educational advantages. Of the secrets of Masonry it only becomes me to say, that they are not at variance with either the laws of God or man. In ancient times the Operative Mason used them as signs of brotherhood, and in modern times the Speculative Mason uses them in the same way to discover the bond which makes all within its mystic pale one in universal charity. Whether our wives approve or not, one fact is certain, that many a widow's heart has been cheered, and orphan's life made happy through the very secrets which some despise and contemn. The magnificent schools, almshouses, and retreats for the elder brethren of the Order scattered throughout the mother country fully corroborate what I state; and there is hardly a brother present who cannot testify to the fact that some young man or woman has had the first start in life through the influence which these traditional secrets impose on the conscience of the brethren. A good Mason will sure to be a good man, and a bad man cannot be a good Mason. Freemasonry, let us bear in mind, "is not a plaything or a sensation. It is a very useful, unassuming, benevolent, and valuable Order; a friend to true progress, and improving civilisation, which asks for and obtains the warm support of the intellectual, the moral, the kindly disposed, and the honest-hearted. It is an institution, around which we may freely rally, amid many opposing schools of thought and sympathy to-day, as offering us a standpoint on which we ourselves can plant, as on a firm basis, its goodly standard of toleration, honour, loyalty, and charity." Let me urgently advise its use, and recommend its principles. It seems to me to say to-day, in convincing tones, Our Order is one within whose peaceful portals you may learn useful lessons, without dwelling upon hurtful, puerile contentious—lessons of forbearance, love, truth, without condemning one another. Amid all the noise of angry combatants and the turmoil of sectaries Freemasonry offers a rendezvous for toleration, concord and brotherhood. Of the great fundamental principles of the Order, I will only say that they appear to me like the grand old Atlantic Ocean spread out before us in dazzling beauty and sunlit streaks. Its vastness is only limited by the globe we inhabit, though its waters merge into other oceans and seas which lave the continents and islands which give them names. So is the universal bond of Masonic charity. It knows neither Confucian, Buddhist, Islam, nor Christian, by symbol or creed, but embraces all in its universal girdle of charity and brotherly love. It only asks for the sign, to at once extend the fraternal embrace. I commend this Order to your wise consideration and enlarged sympathies, and thank you, on behalf of my brethren, as well as myself, for your kind presence here to-day to assist in laying this stone."

Digitized by Google

The Benediction was then read as follows:—

"Glory be to God on high, and on earth peace and goodwill toward men! O Lord, we most heartily beseech Thee with Thy favour to behold and bless this assemblage; pour down Thy mercy, like the dew that falls upon the mountains, upon Thy servants engaged in the solemn ceremonies of this day. Bless, we pray Thee, all the workmen who shall be engaged in the erection of this edifice; keep them from all forms of accidents and harm; grant them in health and prosperity to live; and finally, we hope, after this life, through Thy mercy, wisdom, and forgiveness, to attain everlasting joy and felicity, in Thy bright mansion—in Thy holy temple—not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.—Amen."

The brethren here responded earnestly, "So mote it be!" and gave the grand honours and a hearty huzza.

Refreshments were afterwards liberally supplied in the lower hall of the Lodge room, which had been beautifully and lavishly decorated with flowers, and the ceremony of laying the Corner Stone of the Temple closed.—Nassau Guardian.

[We are indebted to a correspondent for the paper which contains this interesting report. Bro. J. H. Webb, the District Grand Master, is well known to, and deservedly esteemed by, many of our readers, inasmuch as he is a brother by birth of Bro. W. P. Webb, the popular Worshipful Master of the Kensington Lodge, No. 1381.—Ed. F.C.]

On Saturday last there was a meeting of the General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, at Freemasons' Hall, Bro. Edgar Bowyer presiding. The following brethren were also present:—Bros. A. Williams, C. F. Matier, J. L. Mather, R. W. Stewart, A. E Gladwell, L. Ruf, Jas. Terry, Rev. A. F. Woodford, Dr. F. W. Ramsay, E. C. Massey, and the Secretary. After the usual business of confirming the minutes of the Committee's previous meeting, and reading the minutes of the House and Audit Committees for information, a sum of £250 was voted to be transferred from the General Fund to the Sustentation Fund, which had been overdrawn. Three petitions were presented, and of these two were approved and the other deferred for further information. An outfit allowance was voted to A. E. Breary, a former pupil, who was certified to be giving satisfaction to the employers to whom he has engaged himself. Bro. Raynham W. Stewart's motion, of which due notice had been given, then came on for consideration. Bro. Binckes having withdrawn, Bro. Stewart briefly stated his proposal that the Committee should add the sum of £100 a year to the Secretary's salary. He had originally proposed to ask them for an addition of £150, but to this Bro. Binckes had himself objected. Although the subject of discussion precludes any detailed report being given of what was said by the different speakers, the unanimity of the vote will sufficiently indicate that there was no opposition offered to the motion, which was seconded by Bro. Matier, and carried without a dissentient voice. It is desired, however, that the Craft generally may be informed exactly as to the following facts:—Seven or eight years ago Bro. Binckes's salary was fixed by the Committee at £400 a year, in addition to which he was allowed a sum of £200 as compensation for the discontinuance of the per centage he had previously received upon the sums collected for the Institution. On his completing his twenty-first year of service, the sum of £100 was voted to him as a gratuity, to commemorate the occasion, but from the manner in which this payment had been entered in the published accounts it is feared that some brethren may imagine that it is an annual payment, which is not the fact. In short, now that Bro. Binckes's salary has been raised to £500, his whole emoluments from the Institution do not exceed £700. On being informed of what had been done for him, Bro. Binckes thanked the Committee for the compliment they had paid him, and said that though his faculties had lost some of the vigour they possessed when he was a younger and stronger man, the resolution that had been passed was an indication that the Committee did not consider that he was as yet failing in his efforts on behalf of the Boys' School. There was no other business, and a vote of thanks to the chairman closed the proceedings.

The monthly meeting of the Committee of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution was held on Wednesday, at Freemasons' Hall, when there were present Bros. Colonel Creaton Grand Treasurer (in the chair), Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, James Brett, Edgar Bowyer, George Bolton, Raynham W. Stewart, J. March Case, Thos. Cubitt, A. H. Tattershall, William Stephens, J. G. Gordon Robbins, H. McPherson, Thomas W. C. Bush, C. H. Webb, Robert P. Tate, W. Hilton, Charles Godtschalk, W. J. Murlis, and James Terry Secretary. The chairman signed cheques for the quarter's annuities £1,570 to the men, and £1,355 to the women, besides cheques for office salaries, expenses, &c. A widow was granted half her late husband's annuity, and four male and two female candidates were placed on the list for the May 1883 Election. Bro. Terry informed the brethren that G. Lodge would hold its next Quarterly Communication before the Committee met again, and as Bro. Raynham Stewart's motion for granting £800 a year to the Benevolent Institution would be again mentioned there, it was desirable that all the brethren should attend to support it. A vote of thanks to the chairman closed the proceedings.

On Saturday afternoon, H.M.S. Bacchante, with the Princes Albert Victor and George of Wales, took up her moorings off Cowes. Its arrival had been expected much earlier in the day, and at 8 a.m. the Prince and Princess of Wales, on board the Royal Yacht Osborne, had started to meet the good ship on which their sons had been voyaging round the world. But for some reason, whether barnacles or other is of little moment, it was not till the afternoon was well advanced, that the approach of the Osborne followed by the Bacchante was signalled, and as there were yachts and other small craft innumerable sailing about, and as the Hector guardship, Cowes, the Prince of Wales's yacht Aline, &c., became all of a sudden quite gay with the bunting they displayed, the scene was a very lively one. The Prince and Princess on meeting the Bacchante had boarded her, and greeted their sons most affectionately, and, having inspected the ship, returned with them to the Osborne. When the latter, therefore, had taken up her moorings, the Royal party left in a steam pinnace for the purpose of visiting the Queen at Osborne. About seven o'clock they returned on board the Osborne, where the Prince and Princess entertained at dinner a number of guests, among them Lord Charles Scott, Captain of the Bacchante, and several of his officers. The young Princes afterwards returned to their vessel. On Sunday the Prince and Princess of Wales attended divine service on board their sons' ship. As the Bacchante sailed from Portland on 20th September 1880, the Royal midshipmen have been absent only a few weeks short of two years.

Wales and Shropshire was then announced, and received in proper form, and the same with Prov. Grand Master of Surrey, and they were saluted accordingly. The W.M. then asked W. Bro. D. P. Owen P.M. to ascend the pedestal, and the candidate being present was admitted and initiated into the mysteries of Ancient Freemasonry. The Masonic services were conducted musically. Bro. D. P. Owen's Masonic Service of Scriptural Extracts being ably rendered by the aid of Bro. R. Lewis Andrew, presiding at the harmonium, assisted by Bros. John Owen, Ed. Owen, and W. Francis. On the conclusion of the ceremony, the W.M. resumed the pedestal, when the R.W. Grand Junior Warden was announced, and a deputation consisting of W. Bros. Collender and Spraggon Past Prov. G.A.D. of Cer. awaited upon his Lordship, and conducted him to the dais, when he was saluted in due form. A petition to the Board of Benevolence was sanctioned by the Lodge on behalf of an old member, and a cheque of £5 was ordered to be sent to meet his present necessities. Lodge afterwards was closed, and the brethren adjourned to the Royal Oak, where a sumptuous banquet was served in Mr. Rowland's usual excellent style. Great credit is due to the brethren of the Lodge for the very handsome manner in which they had furnished their Lodge room.

The following was the

W. Bro. Edmund Field Robinson, M.B., W.M., said the first toast he had to propose was one of unusual interest—that of the most illustrious Lady in the land, the Queen. They all knew how she had endeared herself to the Brotherhood by permitting her son to take the sincerest interest in the welfare of the Order.

"God Save the Queen," by the Band.

Bro. Robinson said the next toast he had to propose was that of the Prince of Wales—a name that was dear to all as the noble patron of the Order and the Worshipful Grand Master of England. His geniality and thoughtfulness were so proverbial that he need not say more on that point, and it gave him great pleasure to couple with the toast the name of the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor of London, with sincere thanks for the honour he had done Lodge 998 by accepting their invitation to advance the interests of the Craft, and if he (the Speaker) were not going beyond the bounds of propriety, he was quite sure that the Most Worshipful Grand Master would give him absolution if he said on his behalf that there was nothing which gave him greater satisfaction than to feel that the Freemasons appreciated the work he did on their behalf. He begged to connect the toast with the R.W. Bro. Sir John Whittaker Ellis, Bart., Grand Junior Warden of England.

The Lord Mayor, in responding, said he hardly knew how to reply for the Most Worshipful the Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of England, but they all knew how exceedingly gracious and condescending His Royal Highness was, and how he was always anxious to promote the interests of Freemasonry. The objects and ends of Freemasonry were so worthy that upon several occasions he had freely and with the most open heartedness explained the real and true principles upon which Freemasons act, and he was assured that those principles were the principles which His Royal Highness highly approved. He believed that the basis of all Freemasonry was goodwill towards men. Justice, truth, honour and virtue were the words that were inscribed, not upon their banners, but on their hearts. They believed that the happiness of mankind was made up by behaving to each other as they would be done by, and that those virtues should be practised by Freemasons, not occasionally, but universally—at all times. With them emulation was one of the first principles, but they desired to succeed not to the disadvantage of others, but that their success might be a benefit to all who were associated with them. Those were the sentiments which he believed should emanate from every true Mason. Having the honour on the present occasion of answering for the toast, he had great pleasure in doing so. He felt it a most distinguished honour and a pleasure, and a gratification beyond expression. He felt also very great satisfaction in being associated with such excellent company. Perhaps he could hardly speak amongst Welshmen of his friend Sir Watkin Williams Wynn in terms which would be equal to what he knew animated their breasts; in fact, no language could describe the position which Sir Watkin held in the Principality. He hoped and trusted that some more able orator than himself would yet propose the health of Sir Watkin Williams Wynn. But speaking of Bro. General Brownrigg, he was the P.G.M. of the County of Surrey, which was the county in which he had long resided. He could say that they were very proud of their county. It was a metropolitan county. They believed they had the advantages which a great town affords in civilising and educating the people, but they also possessed some of the most beautiful scenery in the world—the river Thames, in its beauteous course—the Surrey Hills, full of grand scenery, and almost as poetic as the hills of Wales; but the beauty and grandeur of the scenery of Surrey would not create envy, because envy never entered the breast of a Welshman. But they esteemed Bro. Brownrigg on account of his knowledge and skill in the Craft of a Freemason. His Lordship concluded by returning their heartfelt thanks to the brethren for the manner in which they had received the toast.

"God bless the Prince of Wales," by the Band.

W. Bro. D. P. Owen said that it gave him the greatest pleasure to propose the next toast, viz., the health of the R.W. Prov. Grand Master of North Wales and Shropshire Sir W. W. Wynn, and the Officers of the Prov. Grand Lodge. He (Bro. Owen) had peculiar pleasure in so doing, as he was one of the very few who were present eighteen years ago, when Sir Watkin came and consecrated the Lodge. The pleasure of Sir Watkin's presence was enhanced by the knowledge that he always expressed his great delight whenever he honoured the old town with a visit. The able manner in which Sir Watkin governed his Province was evinced by the fact that Masonry was dull in the Province previously to the establishment of No. 998, the Masons of the Province sprang into activity in 1864, since which time Sir Watkin had consecrated eighteen Lodges, and in the Province, in addition to the twenty-seven Blue Lodges, five Chapters were flourishing as well. As regards the other Provincial Grand Officers it was well known how assiduous they were in the performance of their duties.

"Sir Watkin's Delight," by the Band.

Bro. Sir Watkin Williams Wynn said he rose to return thanks to his old friend, Bro. Price Owen, for the kind way in which he had proposed his health. He begged to thank them all for the kindness they had shown to him. It gave him great pleasure to be amongst them again, for in no town in North Wales had he received more kindness. He was glad of the present opportunity of being there, and very glad to see one in particular coming amongst them. One who occupied a very high position in this country. One presiding over the largest municipality in the kingdom. In that position the Lord Mayor had done all he could to keep up the prestige of that high office. He felt sure that they were glad to have the opportunity of welcoming one who held one of the highest offices in Grand Lodge as well as the responsible position of Lord Mayor of London. He would not trouble them with any further remarks, but they all knew, especially the old Officers, how interested he was in their success, and he concluded by thanking the Officers and their predecessors for their kindness.

Bro. Sir Watkin Williams Wynn said he had to give them a toast which he thought ought to be given, the health of the Worshipful Master, with thanks for the trouble he had taken in receiving the Right Worshipful the Lord Mayor in the way which he had done, and also to propose prosperity to this Lodge.

"For he's a jolly good fellow" (Band).

Bro. E. F. Robinson W.M., in responding, said he thanked them sincerely for the manner in which his health had been drunk. It was a great honour to him to receive such distinguished company that day, and it would afford pleasing reminiscences to him and the Lodge.

Bro. Pryce Jones said that the next toast, that of the Immediate Past Master and the Officers of the Lodge, had been placed in his hands, why, he assured them, he knew not, save that it was simply because he was an inhabitant of the county of Montgomery, and also a member of the Welshpool Lodge. It was his mother Lodge in Masonry, certainly, and the Masonry which had taken root throughout the county was initiated by the Lodge at Welchpool. The Immediate Past Officers, and its present Officers must certainly, therefore, have managed the affairs of Masonry at the Welchpool Lodge in such a manner as to merit their thanks. They had formed a Lodge not only at Newtown, but at Llanidloes, and he also knew that the Welchpool Lodge had a considerable sum of money at its bankers, which spoke a good deal for its management by its Officers. He also knew that they were continually making life votes, year after year, for the good cause of Masonry. In conclusion, he said he would now venture to propose the toast which had been placed in his hands, and that was the Immediate Past Master and Officers of the Lodge of Welchpool.

Bro. Rev. A. Whitlow I.P.M., in responding, said it was his duty to return thanks. He confessed it was the most auspicious occasion upon which he had been at a banquet. It was no doubt a grand red-letter day in the history of the Lodge, and he ventured to express a hope that it would encourage them to work harder and make Masonry prosper here and everywhere else.

Bro. E. F. Robinson W.M., said he wished to give the next toast, the Visitors, with great heartiness. They had honoured and distinguished guests, and old friends, and he was very pleased to see them, and hoped that they might long be spared to meet them again. He thought that those visits did a great deal of good—infused new ideas, and introduced influences which would tend to the prosperity of the art. He coupled with the toast the name of R.W. Bro. General Brownrigg P.G.M. Surrey.

Bro. Brownrigg, in responding, said he felt sure that all those who were, like himself, visitors, would entirely agree with him in thanking the Lodge of Welchpool most cordially for the hospitality they had shown them that evening. He was very pleased with their surroundings, and particularly struck by the arrangement of the draperies, and the artistic and very charming appearance of the Lodge room. It was much better that Masons should hold their meetings separately from any hotel—there was a certain sanctity about their meetings and customs which made it far better to have a temple dedicated to Masonry in which to hold them. But what struck him very much was the admirable way in which the initiate passed his trial, and the solemnity in which he went through it. Very often, sometimes through nervousness, sometimes from other causes, there was an appearance of carelessness. But he believed the ritual of the Order was thoroughly impressed upon the mind of the initiate that day. He concluded by returning thanks on behalf of the visitors, and said it was a matter of great congratulation to him to meet them, and to see that they were flourishing and doing such good work.

Bro. D. P. Owen then gave the Masonic Charities. He stated that it ought to be known that their distinguished guest, the Lord Mayor, had a few days before presided over the Boys' Festival, and his exertions in the cause of charity evidenced itself in the fact that almost £12,000 was put down on the dinner table. As regarded the Charities and the Welchpool Lodge, they were supported by making a Life Vote every year, and if every Lodge followed this example it would add about £10,000 per annum to the funds of the three Charities.

The Tyler, Bro. John Barnard, gave To all Poor and Distressed Masons.

The string band performed a nice selection of music during dinner, and was conducted by Sergeant Drummer Whittingham, 4th Battalion South Wales Borderers.

ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.

ST. PETER'S CHAPTER, ROSE CROIX.

A MEETING of this Chapter was held on Saturday, the 29th July, at the Commercial Hotel, Bolton, at four o'clock in the afternoon, when there were present Comps. J. W. Taylor M.W.S., James Horrocks 1st General, W. J. Thomson 30 2nd General, C. S. Lane Grand Marshal, J. M. Sinclair Raphael, Thomas Mitchell Recorder, Thos. Entwisle 30 Treasurer, G. P. Brockbank 32, W. Nicholl, R. G. Brook, W. M. Wylde, Arthur Middleton, W. A. Byrom, John B. Lees, A. H. Jefferis, J. D. Glendinning, Rooke Pennington, Thos. Higson, F. A. Hust, George Ferguson, Thomas Morris P.M.W.S., C. J. Banister 33 S.G.I.G. Northern District. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The resignation of two members of the Chapter were tenderrd, but not having complied with the requirements of the Bye-laws as to contributions due, could not be accepted. Bro. John Barrett, of St. George's Lodge, Bolton, was ballotted for and unanimously elected. Bro. Barrett being away from home for the benefit of his health, was unable to be present for perfection. Apologies were read from several of the Officers who were unable to attend. S.P. James Horrocks was duly presented to Ill. Bro. C. J. Banister 33 for installation as M.W.S. for the ensuing year, and the beautiful ceremonial was rendered with great dignity and precision. Ill. Bro. Banister announced that the Supreme Council would visit Lancashire in the month of October, and hold a Chapter of Grand Elected Knights K.H. in Liverpool during the visit. Bro. Banister, in the name of the Chapter, presented to Bro. J. W. Taylor, the retiring M.W.S., a very handsome P.M.W.S.'s jewel, with a suitable inscription engraved thereon, as a mark of the approval of his year's presidency by the brethren of the Chapter. Bro. Entwisle 30 presided at the third point, after which the Chapter was duly closed at six p.m. Banquet was served immediately after business had concluded, but owing to the great heat and the desire of many of the brethren who resided at some distance, the proceedings were speedily brought to a close. A very cordial and hearty vote of thanks was awarded to Bro. Banister for his kindness in attending the installation, and for the great interest he has at all times manifested in the prosperity of the Chapter, from its formation. The accounts of the Chapter, duly audited, were presented and passed, and thanks given to the Auditors, Ill. Bros. Brockbank, Ferguson, and Nicholl. ## PROPOSED CONVENTION.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE AND THE SCOTCH SYMBOLICAL GRAND LODGE.

A FEW weeks since we gave, at some length, the purport of an article on this subject from Le Monde Maçonnique for the month of June. The writer, Bro. A. Grimaux, expressed his intention of noting sundry objections to the project, and in the July number of the same journal he has carried his intention into effect. Be it our present task to reproduce in general terms, and in their English garb, these same objections of Bro. Grimaux.

Having noted in the first place his unwillingness to wound the feelings of brethren who express it as their opinion that the Grand Orient may reckon on the symbolical Grand Lodge to aid it in bringing about the unification of French Freemasonry, and that their confederation was created for no other purpose than to realise that grand idea, Bro. Grimaux points out that, in December last, he laid it down that such a result would be quite possible when the Scotch Symbolical Grand Lodge recognised that the surest and easiest method of securing a unification was to enter purely and simply into the Confederation of Lodges holding under the Grand Orient of France, without pretending to claim privileges which did not belong to the old Lodges. While believing that the proposal for unification was honourable to those from whom it emanated, Bro. Grimaux points out that other Scotch Masons, fully comprehending that, in spite of its goodwill, the Supreme Council would never be in a position to give full effect to its democratic aspirations, had regularly and in a friendly spirit separated themselves from that body, and had ranged themselves under the banner of the Grand Orient of France. There they had found Lodges which had received them most cordially, and in a spirit of rejoicing at the influx of so many excellent brethren. No distinction was made between the old and the new members of the Order. The most perfect equality, so far as was possible in accordance with the democratic traditions of the Grand Orient, was established between them. Why, then, asks Bro. Grimaux, have not the members of the Symbolical Grand Lodge followed this wise example? Why, if they were so desirous of bringing about the fusion of the two bodies, did they create a fourth Masonic power? Why, in short, did they and do they still refuse to effect a union on a footing of equality with the French Lodges? We know not, adds our worthy brother, though we deplore that, in lieu of adopting so natural and so fraternal a course, they should have thought it possible to dictate terms which, in the form in which they were presented, appear to be wholly inacceptable. Is it the régime of the Grand Orient which is at fault, and does not appear to be sufficiently democratic in the eyes of those Scotch Lodges and brethren who have separated themselves from the Supreme Council, only after having been for years subject to the aristocratic Scotch system. It has been often so maintained; but invariably without proof, for obvious reasons.

There are many young Masons who, from constantly hearing it said in season and out of season, and under every variety of expression, that the Grand Orient is an absolute power, and ought to be reformed, arrive at the conclusion that such accusations are well founded, and, unintentionally, make common cause with the clever adversaries of the Grand Orient of France. It may not, therefore, be out of place to set before such brethren clearly and succinctly, some idea of the organisation of that distinguished body. In the first place, its Lodges nominate all their officers for one year. Such officers must be Master Masons, and must have belonged to the Lodge for the space of at least six months. The President or Venerable—our Worshipful Master—must have been a member for at least a year, and a Master Mason of two years' standing. These are the only restrictions imposed on Masons in making their choice, and no one will venture to say they are not necessary. As in all other Societies, the chiefs or Venerables are the legal representatives of the Lodges which have elected them by ballot for their annual term of office. The bond which holds the Lodges together is the Grand Orient, which is composed of the Masters of all the Lodges in the jurisdiction, and of the Council of the Order. Every year the Grand Orient holds a General Assembly, comprised of (1) all the Venerables, or, in case of necessity, delegates from the Lodges, and (2) the Council of the Order. The Assembly nominates its President, and for the future, will also elect its other officers in the same manner as is provided in the subordinate Lodges. This system, which is absolutely unobjectionable on the ground of principle, involves no other inconvenience than the loss of some valuable time.

The Assembly, albeit truly representative of the Masonic Lodges, is unable to sit permanently, though it did so when the Provincial Lodges were represented by Parisian brethren. Hence its administrative powers are entrusted to a permanent Commission of thirty-three members, who constitute what is known as the Council of the Order—one-third being elected every year. This Council, in its turn, elects its Officers annually. It is the official representative of French Masonry, renders accounts of all its acts to the General Assembly, and is the defender of the principles and statutes of the Institution. The judicial power is distinct from the legislative and administrative powers. The Lodge decides cases in the first instance, and the Provincial or local Chambers, composed of juries chosen by the Lodges, in all cases of appeal. The Worshipful Masters and Orators of Lodges can be provisionally suspended by the Council of the Order, but judgment in first and last instance is passed upon them by the Chambers or Courts of Appeal. As regards the Lodges, the disciplinary powers belong to the Council, subject to the approval of the General Assembly. Such is the organisation, which is attacked as being the reverse of democratic, though everything depends on the system of election, while all the Officers are temporary and all the powers vested in the Masters of Lodges, and in the Council of the Order, are distinctly limited.

But there is something further to take into consideration than the organisation of the Society, and that is the spirit which animates it and the ideas it propagates. Moreover, without speaking here of what is distinctive of the Grand Orient in common with all other Masonic bodies, we can judge for ourselves, without difficulty, what it has done for the development of liberal and democratic ideas. A few instances will suffice. The Grand Orient of France signalised its birth by abolishing the privileges of the Masters of Lodges, who were in truth owners of the charters, by virtue of which those Lodges existed. The watchword was "No more Privileges, No more life offices," and periodical election by the free and unbiassed choice of one's peers made its appearance instead:—in other words universal suffrage was introduced into Freemasonry eighty years before it was established in our public life. To the Grand Orient belong the honour and happiness of having promulgated this system which so perfectly expresses, in the present day, our ideal of justice, a system which, later on, was adopted by the French Revolution, because itwas unable to discover any other formula that answered so nearly to the generous aspirations of the men of that grand old epoch. From the very outset it had imposed on it the truly arduous task of re-uniting the scattered forces of French Masonry, which, owing to its division into innumerable systems, presented the appearance of an absolute chaos. By patience and labour this result had been happily attained, when the Scottish system re-appeared in France (having been introduced from America by the Count de Grasse-Tilly) under a new name and increased, in its transoceanic journey, by eight new degrees. Resuming forthwith its labours, the Grand Orient in 1804 concluded with the hardly-then-established Supreme Council a treaty which was very soon broken by the latter. Since then, all its efforts have been unceasingly directed towards effacing all traces of division and antagonism, and hence it is that, at a period not very remote, it has absorbed the rite of Memphis with its ninety-five degrees.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF SOUTH WALES (WESTERN DIVISION.)

THE annual meeting of this Prov. Grand Lodge took place on Wednesday, 16th inst. The brethren assembled under the banner of the Cambrian Lodge, No. 464, at the Masonic Hall, Haverfordwest. The Right Worshipful Bro. Colonel Lloyd-Philipps, Prov. Grand Master, presided, and was supported by a goodly assembly of the brethren of the Province, the Prov. Grand Officers of the year, with but one exception, being in attendance. After Prov. Grand Lodge had been formally opened, the roll of Lodges was called over, and it was found each one in the Province was represented.

The minutes of last Provincial Grand meeting, held in New Milford, in July of last year, having been read and confirmed, the Provincial Grand Treasurer's accounts for the past year were submitted. These showed a balance due to Provincial Grand Lodge of £32 19s 7d.

The election of Prov. Grand Treasurer resulted in the re-appointment of Bro. J. Jenkyn Jones, who was complimented on the zeal he had hitherto displayed in the welfare of the Province and thanked for services rendered.

Before proceeding to the appointment of Provincial Grand Officers for the next twelve months, Bro. Colonel Lloyd-Philipps expressed his gratification at the way in which the Officers of the past year had fulfilled their duties, and thanked them heartily for their services. He announced that he had received a letter from Lord Kensington, in which he regretted his Parliamentary duties precluded him from the hope of being present at the meeting, and expressing the disappointment he experienced at being compelled to absent himself. The collars of office for the next year was then distributed as follow:—

The Report of the Prov. Grand Lodge Committee which met at the St. Peter's Lodge, Carmarthen, on 7th July 1882, was next presented. This stated that from the Reports sent in by the Lodges for the past year, the general state of Freemasonry in the Province is highly satisfactory, and in a prosperous condition. The Committee recommended that Wor. Bro. J. Beavan Phillips P.M. 671 P. Prov. S.G.W., be re-elected as the Charity Commissioner for the ensuing year, and Wor. Bro. Aaron Stone P.M. 671 P. Prov. J.G.W., as Assistant Charity Commissioner. It advised that votes of thanks be accorded them for their valuable services and for the great zeal which they have displayed in the cause of Freemasonry in the Province. These recommendations received the unanimous approval of the members. The Committee also recommends that Wor. Bro. Aaron Stone be elected Steward to represent this Province at the Festival of the Boys' School for 1882-3, and that a Jewel be presented to Wor. Bro. Edwin Thomas P.M. 378 Prov. J.G.W., at the next meeting of Prov. Grand Lodge, in acknowledgment of the services he has rendered to the Province as Charity Steward; also that the best thanks of Prov. Grand Lodge be tendered to Bro. Thomas for his great exertions in furthering the cause of Freemasonry in the Province.

When the consideration of the Committee's recommendation that the sum of twenty-five guineas be voted from the funds to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys came on, Bro. G. Griffiths made an urgent appeal on behalf of a distressed brother, a man who was well known and deservedly respected throughout the Province. Unfortunately, this worthy Mason had been stricken down by paralysis, and it was deemed essentially necessary he should undergo a lengthened period of cessation from labour as the only chance of regaining his strength. Before Prov. Grand Lodge voted the sum named above for the Boys' School, Bro. Griffiths begged they would consider the urgency of this case; he had no wish to oppose the proposed vote, but he feared the funds at their disposal would not enable them to do what was required if the twenty-five guineas was thus absorbed. Bro. J. Llewllyn Davies supported; what he thought it desirable to do was, that the Provincial Grand Lodge should undertake to provide a substitute who would perform the clerical duties of the afflicted brother for a period of six months. This would entail an outlay of say £50. Some discussion followed, and several practical suggestions were made as to how this amount could be realised. The claims of the Boys' School were fully recognised, and in view of the effort that must be made at the election in October next, when the candidate supported by the Province—Geoffry Stuart Jones—will stand his last chance of admission, it was thought imperative that the proposed grant of twenty-five guineas should be made. On the question being put, the amount was unanimously agreed to. Later on, however, £20 was voted from the Provincial Fund of Benevolence, and a Committee was formed to collect the additional £30 requisite to carry out the suggestion of Bro. Llewellyn Davies. The appeal was heartily responded to, and the brethren were enabled to return to Milford with the assurance that if repose would enable our afflicted brother to recruit his strength the means for enjoying it were secured. The next business was to receive the report of the Charity Commissioners. This directed attention to the fact that the resources had been exhausted by the efforts made to elect a child into the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls in 1881, consequently last year they started without any reserve of votes.

At the meeting of Provincial Grand Lodge a candidate from this Province was adopted, a youth brought forward by the Pembroke brethren, the promotion of the interests of this Boy—Geoffrey Stuart Jones—has been the sole care of the Commissioners during the past year, and they had not yet succeeded in securing his election. The delay is unavoidable—it arises in the first place from this lad having been placed in charge so soon after efforts in favour of other candidates had placed the Province in a weak position in regard to votes, and in the second place from the fact of an election of a candidate for the Boys' School being very much more difficult than the election of a candidate for either of the other Institutions connected with Freemasonry. To make it clear it was pointed out firstly, that at each election only some 150 Boys' votes and 120 Girls' votes were forthcoming from the Province, which had succeeded in polling 1,134 votes for the Boy. The candidate has one election more before him, that in October, when he must be elected, or be disqualified by age from gaining admission at all. The Commissioners promised they would make every effort, and confidently hoped to succeed.

PROV. G. LODGE, HANTS AND ISLE OF WIGHT.

THE Prov. Grand Lodge of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight held its annual meeting in the Town Hall, Bournemouth, on Thursday, the 10th instant, R.W. Prov. G.M. W. W. B. Beach, M.P., presided, and was supported by the following, among other brethren, namely, Bros. W. Hickman P.D.G.M., J. E. Le Feuvre 130 P.G.S.W., Dr. J. R. O'Connor 257 P.G.J.W., J. The minutes of the last regular Provincial Grand Lodge and of an especial Lodge was read and confirmed. A letter was read from the P.G. Treasurer Bro. Mark E. Frost, resigning his office. He had carried out the duties for many years, but owing to failing energy he was desirous of being relieved of the duties. Bro. Frost's resignation was accepted, but as the new Bye-Laws of the Province provided for the modification of the duties of the Prov. Grand Treasurer, the election of his successor was postponed. The Report of the Committee appointed to consider the Provincial bye-laws was read, and the new bye-laws as submitted were passed after some slight modifications. A committee, consisting of the Prov. Grand Officers and the Worshipful Masters of Lodges, was appointed to consider the proposed revision of the Book of Constitutions for the government of the Craft. The Prov. Grand Master then appointed and invested the following brethren as Prov. Grand Officers for the year, namely:—

The banquet which followed was presided over by the R.W. Provincial Grand Master who, on the removal of the cloth, gave "The Queen and the Craft," followed by "The Most Worshipful the Grand Master of England, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales." In proposing the latter toast, the P.G.M. said His Royal Highness was always engaged in useful pursuits, and particularly in the cause of charity he was always anxious and ready to fulfil his Masonic duties. He hoped that ere long they would see him again presiding in the Grand Lodge of England. He was sure there would be a large concourse of brethren who would be glad to have the opportunity of testifying their Masonic loyalty. In proposing the third toast, "The Most Worshipful the Pro Grand Master of England, the Earl of Carnarvon, and the Officers and past Officers of the Grand Lodge," the Chairman alluded to Lord Carnarvon's connection with the county of Hampshire. The Deputy Prov. Grand Master Bro. Hickman then proposed the toast of "The R.W. P.G.M.," referring to Bro. Beach's great ability as a Mason, to the indebtedness of the P.G.L. for his many services, and to his having attended the present proceedings at great inconvenience to fulfil the duties of his high office. He was always most assiduous in his efforts to please the brethren, and in his anxiety to execute the duties of his office to the advantage of the Craft. The Prov. Grand Master, in responding, said it was with peculiar gratification he attended on the present occasion, because Bournemouth was situated in the most extreme part of the Province, and he and the other Provincial Grand Officers were anxious to show their active interest in the prosperity and working of the Lodge Hengist. He regarded intercourse between the Provincial Grand Lodge and the Lodges in the Province as having a most salutory influence. During his tenure of office he had always done his best to fulfil the duties adequately, and he believed, though he could not say, to some extent successfully. In the present day it was doubly important to reflect on the nature and meaning of Masonic duties, and it was especially incumbent on them to prove themselves worthy members of the Craft. Masonry was no light matter. Neophytes were not invited into their ranks to gratify curiosity, but to learn to fulfil great and important duties with regard to social life. For himself he could say that he esteemed it both a duty and a pleasure on all suitable occasions to advocate true Masonic sentiments and practices. In conclusion, he referred to the advantage to the Provincial Grand Lodge from the renewed acceptance of the office of Prov. Grand Secretary by Bro. Le Feuvre. He then proposed the health of Brother Hickman, the Deputy Provincial Grand Master. Bro. Hickman, in reply, said it always gave him the greatest pleasure to support the Provincial Grand Master, whose earnest desire was to uphold Hampshire and the Isle of Wight as foremost among the Provincial Grand Lodges of England. It was not quantity but quality that was desirable in the Lodges, and in this respect Hampshire had always been prominent. Brother J. Druitt jun., Bournemouth, also responded for the Officers of the Grand Lodge, and returned thanks for the honour and distinction which had that day been conferred on him—an honour as much prized at it was unexpected—of being appointed P.G.S.W. He esteemed it as an individual honour, as well as honour to his mother Lodge. Referring to the fact that his father was the oldest member of Lodge Hengist, Bro. Druitt said he could not help feeling that the position in which he found himself that day was in some degree the result of his father's long service to the Lodge. Bro. Le Feuvre P.G.S. &c., expressed the pleasure he felt at being again associated with the active Masonic working of the Province, the Masonic circumstances of which were now quite different from what they were at the time of his resignation. The toast of the Masonic Charities was then given, and duly honoured, Bro. E. T. Budden, of Wimborne, in connection therewith, singing a charity song compiled and arranged by him.—Portsmouth Times.

GREAT WESTERN TOURIST ARRANGEMENTS.

FOR some days past fashionable London has been preparing to seek refuge in the country, from the hurly-burly of the season while strong contingents of middle class folk have already found a resting-place where the cares and troubles of business or professional avocations are momentarily forgotten. But there are thousands, both of fashionable and middle class people, who have not yet adventured on their summer holiday, and to whom a few words of advice as to where they should go and what do with themselves during their absence from London will be very welcome. One of the great advantages of our railway system is, the intercommunication that exists among the different lines which constitute it. There is now no difficulty whatever in making your way from one part of the United Kingdom to another. You may live in the West of England, but you will easily find through communication with East, South, and North. The Londoner may wish to make the circuit of England, taking the western districts first, and gradually making his way northwards into Scotland, and thence in due time returning by the east, to resume once again his labours in the calling he follows. All this, however, is so well known to our readers that without further circumlocution we will enter on our present task of drawing their attention to the special facilities which are afforded to intending travellers by the Great Western Railway Company. The line itself traverses some of the finest parts of the country, and for convenience sake may be sub-divided into three districts, the West of England, the South Wales, and the North Wales. The first named includes the counties of Gloucester, Somerset, Dorset, Devon, and Cornwall, and there is no gainsaying the fact that some of the loveliest of our English scenery is to be found in these counties. If a residence at the sea-side is preferred, there is the choice of such well-known resorts as Weymouth, Barnstaple, Ilfracombe, Lynton, Clevedon, Weston-Super-Mare, Minehead, Dawlish, Teignmouth, Torquay, Dartmouth, Plymouth, Newquay, Falmouth, St. Ives, Penzance, &c. If the tourist prefers some inland resort, there are Cheltenham, Clifton, Bath, Malvern, Leamington, and other places innumerable, which, in their several ways, are almost equally attractive. The South Wales district embraces Abergavenny, Monmouth, Chepstow, Tintern, Neath, Swansea, Carmarthen, Tenby, &c.; while the North Wales (which is reached viâ Birmingham, Shrewsbury and Ruabon), includes Llangollen, Corwen, Bala, Dolgelly, and Barmouth, and viâ Ruabon and Chester, Rhyl, Abergele, Llandudno, Conway, Bettws-y-coed, Penmaenmawr, Bangor, Carnarvon, &c., on to Holyhead. In addition, between Bristol or Milford there is communication, by a regular service of steamers, with Cork, Waterford, and the Lakes of Killarney, while from Holyhead, passage may be taken across St. George's Channel to Dublin, Belfast, &c. From Manchester it is an easy transition by rail to Scotland—Edinburgh, Glasgow, and the Highlands being equally accessible, and then turning once again in a southerly direction, communication is easily had with the Yorkshire watering-places, Scarborough, Whitby, and, by working on through other lines, with the Eastern coast, with attractions such as Hunstanton, Yarmouth, Cromer, Lowestoft, &c., &c. Then we have the Lake District, and the Isle of Man; Buxton, Matlock, and the lovely country in their neighbourhood. The Channel Islands are readily accessible from Weymouth, as likewise is Cherbourg, and thence to Paris; while with but little trouble all the favourite places on the South coast, the only District we have passed over, can be reached with the greatest facility. In short the Great Western Company, either by the lines it has under its own immediate control, or by those with which it has established relations, is in a position to convey the tourist to all parts of the United Kingdom as well as to the Continent.

In the foregoing remarks we have contented ourselves with indicating, in general terms, the wonderful facilities for travel which are offered by the Great Western Railway. We will now more precisely note the advantages the directors submit to the public during the holiday season now current. As a rule, two months is the outside limit which the tourist can ordinarily compass for his holiday, and hence tickets available for that period, but renewable on most reasonable conditions, are at the service of the public. The tickets will be issued as late as the 31st October, and they can be renewed as a rule to the 31st December. They are to be obtained at the Company's headquarters at Paddington, at Westbourne Park, Notting Hill, Uxbridge Road, Shepherd's Bush, Hammersmith, Kensington, Earl's Court, Westminster Bridge, Charing Cross, Blackfriars, Mansion House, Victoria, Kings Cross, Farringdon-street, Moorgate-street, Bishopsgate, and Aldgate Stations on the Metropolitan and Metropolitan District Lines, and at Cook's Tourist and Excursion Offices, Ludgate Circus, E.C. The fares are remarkably moderate, and every opportunity is afforded the traveller for breaking and deviating from the direct line of his journey. For North and South Wales and Valley of the Wye, circular tourist tickets are issued for no less than five different routes. By the first of these passengers go by rail to Tenby viâ Whitland or New Milford, and back to Carmarthen, thence viâ Pencader, Manchester, &c.; and Milford and Cambrian lines to Dolgelly, returning from the last-named place viâ Bala and the Vale of Llangollen to Ruabon, and thence to Shrewsbury, or vice versâ. As the journey may be broken at frequent intervals, the tourist will have the opportunity of visiting Gloucester, Chepstow, Newport, Swansea, Tenby, Aberystwith, Dolgelly, Bala, the Vale of Llangollen, &c., &c. The second route is to Dolgelly viâ Ruabon, the Vale of Llangollen and Bala, returning from Dolgelly by way of Barmouth junction, Machynlleth, and Oswestry, or Welshpool and Shrewsbury, or vice versâ. Route three differs from Route two in that the journey, after continuing by Barmouth and Afon Wen to Carnarvon, returns by way of the Chester and Holyhead Railway to Chester, or vice versâ. The fourth and fifth routes traverse the Valley of the Wye, and the tickets are available for travelling only once over the same ground, except the fourth route tickets from Pontypool Road to Monmouth and back. The routes, according to the point selected for starting, are described at full length in the Company's Time Tables and Tourist Programmes.

Though these two-monthly tickets are the principal feature of the arrangements, it must not be imagined that they are the full extent of the train service for the extra holiday traffic of the season. Short return tickets to all the principal places on the line, or with which the line is in communication are issued at moderate fares, while facilities are afforded for those who may wish to avail themselves of other excursions which are not immediately included in the programme issued by the Company. Those, however, who are desirous of obtaining fuller particulars than we, having regard to the limited space at our command, are able to furnish, will do well to consult the Great Western Time Tables issued for July, August, and September. They will there find all needful information as to times, fares, possible breaks in the journey, steamboat communications in connection with the line, &c., &c. As to the comforts afforded to passengers en route, the Company is too well known for us to go out of our way to enlarge on them. They may be equalled, but they cannot be surpassed on any other line in the kingdom.

A HOLIDAY RAMBLE.—RICHMOND AND THE THAMES.

By Our Roving Brother.

OUR Summer Banquet at the Star and Garter was a great success. We all went down in the orthodox fashion, in "brakes" and waggonettes of the most approved fashion; the weather was splendid; and the ladies were beaming with smiles from the moment we started until dewy eve brought us home again. The dinner in the gilded pavilion, the tennis and other pastimes on the lawn, the delightful scenery from the terraced walks, all combined in settling my resolve that, instead of undergoing all the bustle and fatigue of a lengthy journey to the seaside, I would just drop down to Richmond for a modest fortnight, where, if need be, I could run up to town occasionally, and rejoin the "better half" and her troop of little chicks in the cool of the evening. It was the pleasantry of our Summer Banquet that settled the inevitable question that year, as to "Where shall we go for our annual holiday?"

With the approach of the autumn season is associated a programme of alluring trips and excursions into the country, or to the seaside, where a respite from the monotony of business can be enjoyed, and the physical powers fortified for the stern duties of life to which we must all ere long return. And were it not for these pleasant breaks in the journey, life would indeed be but a realisation of Mr. Mantalini's sage opinion that it is only "one dem'd horrid grind."

When Parliament is on the eve of rising from its labours, and the dusky grouse already dangle from the poulterers' hooks, the momentous question "Where shall we go?" always crops up. Paterfamilias scratches his head, and gravely calculates the cost, and mamma sees to the packing of the boxes; while the girls scan the tourists' handbooks and lay their plans for flirtation and conquest. And so the world—i.e. those who can afford it—soar away, with the home-returning swallows—some to the Highland moors and forests, others to Norwegian fjords and Mediterranean islands; to the fells and mountains of Switzerland; to Belgium, Germany, and the Rhine; whilst others still, with shallow purses, have to content themselves with stuffy lodgings at one or other of our own watering-places and the motley attractions of the "Spa."

However, before the "harvest moon's begun," the autumnal exodus is in full swing. Cook and Caygill could wondrous tales unfold of Continental cities which lay themselves out to entertain—and fleece!—the "distinguished foreigners" who patronise the "personally-conducted tours;" whilst at home excursion trains are hurrying to and fro with freights of pleasure-hunters whom economy, or necessity—compels to spend their holiday, if they have one at all, in their native land.

But there is a class, and one to which I may just as well at once confess I belong, who can afford neither the time nor the money to go far afield for relaxation or health. I mean the hard-worked City "hand"—the clerk, the shop assistant, and the thrifty artisan, who has enough to do in these hard times to feed, clothe, and educate the little olive branches which blossom so thickly around his hearth. And who has a keener relish for emerald meads and the fair open country than he who drudges away from year's end to year's end at the everlasting counter and the desk?

Thus, as I said at starting, and with the most agreeable recollections begotten of our summer Masonic réunion, the writer, measuring both his leisure and the length of his purse, decided upon staying near at home this summer; and reflection based on experience consoles him with the thought that he might have gone farther and fared worse. Perhaps the most pleasant day amongst those mapped out for our tour was that spent in the "royal" atmosphere of Richmond and the Thames, which just at this season of the year presents an attractiveness not surpassed by any of the favourite resorts on the "Continong." There is, moreover, no anxiety or fussiness in the packing of huge trunks requisite for a long journey and a protracted stay; the classic ground, so fertile in historical associations, so replete with the beauties which Nature has lavished upon it, lies within easy hail by the practical and prosaic "iron road."

Bright were the beams of the morning sun as we left smoky, din-distracted London behind us, and the district railway trundled us down in half-an-hour to Richmond. How altered since our last visit, twenty years ago! Alongside the dingy old South Western station others have sprung up, connecting the town with a network of diverging lines, and the traffic must have assumed proportions which were little dreamt of in the philosophy of the inhabitants half a century since.

Signs of progress abound on every hand. In and around the Quadrant handsome buildings and shops have been erected, in bold and pleasing contrast with the irregularly-designed houses elsewhere, and which look as though they had been pitchforked into all manner of impossible places, with an utter disregard to uniformity, at various periods; whilst outside the town villas and terraces appear on the hillsides, giving to the suburbs an aspect of opulence and gentility quite gladsome to behold.

But as I am pledged only a bird's-eye-view of things in my day's ramble, I have no time to expatiate on the enterprise which has helped to induce so many "City gentlemen" to take up their quarters in this favoured locality. If we would see the "lions" of the place we must be quick about it, for they are many.

Threading an out-of-the way passage, we come to the parish church, surrounded by thickly-grouped tombs and gravestones, and completely shut in by buildings of a by no means aristocratic description. Inside there is nothing architectural to invite a lingering stay; but we must pause before memorial to James Thomson, the poet, whose "Castle of Indolence" is well known to all who are on quotation terms with the gifted bards of England. His residence in the Kew-road is mentioned to us, where, we are told, are still the parlour in which he lived, and the furniture he used—the garden in which he basked in the sunshine, "slipper'd and with hands each in waistcoat pocket." And there come back to us memories of poor Savage and of Collins, who loved to meet in that old summer house, and to converse with their genial and hospitable friend.

Returning by way of Richmond Green, on which the boys play merrily at cricket and other games, we are shown an ancient gateway, bearing an escutcheon of King Henry VII., and some scanty relics of a famous Royal palace, in which so many memorable scenes were witnessed. We trace back the pages of history to the palmy days when Charles I., the Duke of York and lords lived here and hunted in the New Park, when the judges and lawyers fled here to conduct their business, away from the horrible Plague in London. The imprisonment and death of Elizabeth—that impetuous creature who longed to learn the secrets of ye mystic tie!—the founding of the palace of Henry VII., by whom the name of Richmond was bestowed on Sheen; the grand tournaments that enlivened the Green in those old Tudor days; the refuge of Wolsey, and the doings of the old Carthusian monks—are they not all written in the pages of the history of England?

Passing through George-street, which is, I suppose, the oldest portion of the town, we proceed past the bridge which spans the river, up the hill towards the magnificent terrace, and the Star and Garter, now of European fame. What a sublime prospect is here presented! The river meanders along for miles, like a winding strip of silver, amidst glimpses of lawn and garden, and woodland, and meadows of many-tinted green, whilst from the embowering glades peep here and there handsome old villas and mansions, whose gardens slope down to the water's edge, and which look like exquisite vignettes in one of Nature's title pages. Barges glide up and down, behind snorting steam tugs or panting teams; steam launches scud briskly along amidst a crowd of boats, which skim about like gay water birds; while from punts and river banks the disciples of old Izaak Walton calmly pursue the "gentle art," and form portion of the manifold pictorial effects.

We shall descend the hillside presently, but meanwhile we will saunter through the labyrinths of salons in the Star and Garter, where the requirements of the inner man may be satisfied at as reasonable a cost, and in as sumptuous a style, as in the very heart of London. We pass through the pavilion, with its gilded columns and artistic arcades, whose walls ever and anon resound with echoes of revelry and mirth; we gaze out upon the terraced gardens so trim and neat, and speculate upon the number of wedding parties that have sported on those slopes, and celebrated the dawn of happy married lives since the days when the "Lass o' Richmond Hill" was first sung.

We should like to ramble awhile in the Old Park, where the ear and tail of the deer "twinkle innumerably," and there is the sequestered little hamlet of Petersham, close by; but tempus fugit! We hear something of a "wishing tree" in the park, but cannot find it. I wonder whoever has! 'Tis said that, sitting under a certain tree, Lady Russell, forty years ago, wished she might some day come to reside in this delightful locality, and that her desire was gratified. I presume that is the origin of the term "wishing-tree," and many there be who enquire, but few who find it. Here and there, on rustic seats, little groups of visitors are clustered, deliberating over al fresco luncheons, whilst the frequent passing of carriages tell of resident aristocrats who love to sniff the morning air as they bound along over the well-kept drives which intersect those once royal haunts. But you who are wont to luxuriate in an occasional carriage-drive must read the rules before entering the Park, for no hackney coach "badge" is permitted within those historical precincts.

As we descend the hill we find the streets populous with visitors, whose baskets and satchels speak of considerate sisters and spouses who believe not in jaunting about on empty stomachs; while itinerant bands fill the air with dulcet strains of the most popular music. Richmond is decidedly lively on a bright summer day, and the means of enjoyment are included in a lengthy bill of fare. Enterprising caterers stand at the doors of eating-houses, and politely ask you to walk into their parlours—an invitation which is stimulated by savoury odours from steaming joints; moreover, the principal hotels, the Castle, the Talbot, the Greyhound, and others hold out tempting allurements to visitors who have brought their purses with them, and whose delight it is to fare sumptuously. Byron reminds us that—and having so appeased the unfortunate gnawings of hunger, and feeling at peace with ourselves and all mankind, we sally forth towards the river side, passing the curious obelisk on the bridge, which informs us in a strange conglomeration of numerals and figures how many miles and a-quarter it is respectively to ever so many places round about. This monolith, whereon the public is peremptorily and in divers spots admonished to "stick no bills," also informs the visitor that the foundation-stone of the bridge was laid over a century ago—in the year 1774—and that it was completed just three years later, doubtless opened in the presence of royal and other distinguished persons, if the local records are extant and one had time to hunt them up.

> "Man's happiness—the hungry sinner—
> Since Eve ate apples, much depends on dinner;

Beneath the bridge we select one from amidst a crowd of pleasure-boats which are let for hire—"a shilling first ower, and sixpence an ower arterwards, sir" and row away up the calm sunny waters in the direction of Twickenham. On either side the banks are glowing with rich sylvan scenes—old mansions, in the façades of which grow sturdy ivy and the more graceful creepers which depend in festoons from overhanging verandahs and terraced walks; great oaks and cedars and elms rear their stately forms above closely shaven lawns and zig-zag walks, blending into a scene of unsurpassed boldness and beauty. On the river lie moored saloon barges, whose decks are adorned with choice selections from the conservatory, and a peep into whose windows reveal an aspect pleasantly suggestive of cosy pic-nics up the river, away from the busy haunts of "the madding crowd." The boat-builders on the towing paths are brisk with the business of the rowing clubs, of which there are several in the locality, and whose regattas attract considerable attention from aquatic men in London and the suburbs.

On past the Eyot, with the meadows of Petersham on the left, well-trimmed gardens and slopes leading up to the comparatively newly-created Cambridge Park Estate on the right, we come in view of the avenues of Ham, through the openings of which we catch sight of a melancholy mansion, with red-bricked front and high-pitched roof, well known as the celebrated Ham House, the principal legend attached to which is that Charles I. here concealed himself when pursued by Cromwell and his Roundhead crew. An old gardener made much of the story that there is still the room in which the fugitive monarch was bidden, and that the "breakfast-things" are still on the table as Charles left them when he escaped by one door at the precise moment that Cromwell entered by another. There remains also a chamber, the man said, in the state that the old Duchess of Lauderdale left it in—her desk, great chair and cane remaining as though for her Grace's return. We are not allowed to enter the gaunt old mansion, which stands grim and silent amidst its well-kept flower-beds, great trees and balconied terraces; but we can spare time to roam under the magnificent arenue towards Ham Common, where flocks of geese browse about amongst the gorse and furze, and in the pellucid atmosphere of that open spot breathe a host of poor little orphans who are cared for by Royal bounty.

On our return, we find little pic-nic parties squatted in idyllic fashion under the spreading chesnut trees by the river margin, and the whole place is alive with the rippling laughter of children who gambol about on the emerald sward, sheltered from the garish sunbeat by lines of huge trees. On the opposite bank we see another, but less antiquated, residence, once occupied by Queen Anne, when Princess of Denmark, and further distinguished by its having been the residence of Louis Phillippe during the period of his first exile in England. Orleans House derived its name from the late King, when he lived there as Duke of Orleans, and up to within a recent date has been occupied by members of his family who survived his second exile, but who, since the fall of the French Empire, have returned to their native soil. Having undergone great improvements, the mansion and its ground are now the head-quarters of the Orleans Club, where gay parties may be seen disporting themselves upon the lawns during the summer months. The Four-in-Hand and Coaching clubs awaken the echoes of the kingly demesne at intervals during the season, and when garden parties and the festive doings of the "Upper Ten" are at their height.

"I suppose the existence of the club is appreciated by Twickenham people as a great source of attraction and profit?" I asked of our cicerone; to which, with a laconic grin, the old man replied, "Well, they say as it don't bring in much, but Twickenham folk is never 'appy unless they're grumblin'. However, so many grand swells, always a-comin' and goin' must bring some good to the place." So I should say, for Twickenham has not been what it was before the princes left, some years ago.

We rejoin our boat and paddle gently past the ferry, catching a view of the handsome residence of Mr. Grant Duff, M.P., formerly the temporary home of the Comte de Paris, and on to the Eel Pie Island, where parties erstwhile congregated to enjoy that popular viand; wherein that comfortable hostelry pleasure-seekers regale themselves at frequent intervals, and brethren of the mystic Craft enjoy refreshment after their "speculative" labour. Once upon a time, when our Summer Banquet was celebrated on this charming island, a facetious Brother, whose forte was the compilation of impromptu verses, sang a song which I believe has never yet appeared in print, and which he entitled "The Cowan's Retreat." One recommendation of it is that it may be sung in any Lodge and made local, by merely substituting the names of brethren in the place of the asterisks which I have inserted where the names of our members appeared in the original. The ditty was well received, to the tune of "The Captain with his Whiskers," and ran as follows:—

IMPROMPTU SONG.

Written and Sung at the Summer Banquet of the Anonymous Lodge, No. 0.

By Bro. O. Fully Greene, Esq., W.M.

Air: "Captain with his Whiskers."

I'm a simple little country lad, as doubtless you may see,
But, with all your so-called "mysteries," you don't come over me;
Oh! I know your signs and passwords—and the "secrets" every one,
So if you try to gammon me, you'll find it can't be done.

Oh! I am so very "fly!"
And I give you leave to try,
So "take your time from me,"
And I'll prove that Masonry
Is a very pretty plaything for old fogies such as thee;
But I'm the little country lad—you don't come over me.

A friend of mine once said to me, "I'll show you every dodge
By which you may bamboozle 'em and get into a Lodge;
There is not half the difficulty that you may suppose;
So march up boldly to the door, with your finger at your nose."

Oh! I am so very "fly!" &c.

"Then," said my friend, "Outside the door a Tyler you will find;
Just whisper 'Bacon' in his ear, and he'll prove very kind;
When he asks you for the other pass, just whisper to him 'Greens';
And, sure as fate, he'll let you have a peep behind the scenes."

Oh! I am so very "fly!" &c.

So, according to my friend's advice, and knowing well the dodge,
I made my way, with gladsome heart, to the * * * * Lodge;
I first came to this banquet hall, was asked to go inside,
When * * * * standing at the Lodge door I espied.

Oh! I am so very "fly!" &c.

Now this man had an apron on; he looked so very grand;
With a fine blue sash around his neck; a big sword in his hand;
But I march'd up to him boldly, and said "'Bacon,' my dear sir;"
But he couldn't understand the "Greens" I whispered in his ear!

Oh! I am so very "fly!" &c.

Then he gave three loud raps at the door; I heard a voice inside,
When a man, I think called * * * * out the little trap door spied.
"Now, who comes here?" I heard him say, the Tyler says to he,
"I fancy 'tis a cowan; you had better come and see."

Oh! I am so very "fly!" &c.

Then straightway came the Inner Guard—look'd very fierce at me,
And the questions that he ax'd I'm sure were rude exceedingly;
He ax'd how old my Mother was, and the year that I was made;
I can hardly tell you all the stuff that cheeky fellow said.

Oh! I am so very "fly!" &c.

Then he spoke about some Architect, and how I was prepared;
I really thought the man was mad—so hard at me he stared;
He wouldn't have my pass-words, but he turned and said, quite cool—
"Now, Tyler, get the poker hot, we'll frizzle this poor fool."

Oh! I am so very "fly!" &c.

You may depend I didn't wait to have the test applied,
So I bolted off and very glad to find myself outside;
And if you think I'll try again, you'll find I'm no such fiat,
For I'm the little country lad, so mind what you are at!

Oh! I am so very "fly!" &c."

We cannot quit the sequestered spot, however, where the little Duke of Gloucester was wont to drill his young playmates in mimic war, without patronising the Island Hotel; and having satisfied ourselves of the excellence of the interior economy of that establishment, we ply our oars again, rowing away a little in the direction of Teddington Lock, passing the delightful grounds of the late Countess Waldegrave at Strawberry Hill, and others of as nearly picturesque aspect, returning past the boathouses of the Twickenham Rowing Club, and over the shallow Middlesex side to the landing-place. Of course, we visit the church with its ancient greystone tower, disfigured by a red brick nave, but there is little in the heavy-galleried interior which strikes the visitor with admiration. Here, too, we find among the mural tablets one of more than ordinary interest, of a man who would not be buried in Westminster Abbey, though he well deserved a niche in that resting place of national greatness—I refer of course to Alexander Pope, whose house once stood a short way off. The site is now covered with a house of modern structure—one of the most extraordinary specimens of architecture which the vagrant taste of the present day in such matters can possibly conceive. Pope's willow is also gone, and so is the obelisk he raised to his venerable mother, but the grotto still remains, and is visited by the curious.

But the afternoon is growing apace, and the river is low, so that if we are to have a turn at the "gentle art" we must lose no time in getting into our punt, which the waterman has stationed in mid-stream. As we sit there, and with many more besides, and the silvery roach and dace come flickering into our creels, the twilight deepens into dreamy softness, and from the returning river craft comes wafted the harmony of songs from pleasure-parties who are sharing with us the glories of a summer's evening on the Thames.

My advice to "the likes o' me," who can only afford a day now and then to enjoy a holiday, and to inhale the fresh and invigorating country air, is "go to Richmond and the Thames;" and perhaps this little passing sketch may help them to see as much as can be comfortably crowded into one single day.

The Board of Masters meets on Wednesday next, the 23rd instant, for the purpose of settling the business to be transacted at the next Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge, and among the notices of motion that will be submitted will be the one notified by Bro. James Stevens in his letter which appeared last week in the columns of the Freemason's Chronicle, namely:—

"That, having regard to the great increase, during the past twenty-five years, in the number of 'Lodges within the London District' (see Book of Constitutions, page 72), this Grand Lodge desires to respectfully represent to His Royal Highness the Most Worshipful Grand Master the desirability of subdividing the said London District into Subordinate Grand Lodges, to be constituted in like manner to Provincial Grand Lodges."

We see nothing in this notice to evoke anything like an objection to its being inserted in the agenda paper, though, as a matter of course, opinions as to advisability of passing the motion in Grand Lodge must divided. Bro. Stevens writes in a hopeful strain, and though we cannot shut our eyes to the reasonableness of "Jod's" letter, we see no very grave objection to his proposition. At all events he has, we understand, a large number of brethren who sympathise with him in his movement.

A GOOD MASON.

ONE Brother remarked to another, in our hearing the other day, that a third person, to us unknown, was "a good Mason." We did not ponder the remark at the time, but afterwards it occurred to us, What did our Brother mean? What is "a good Mason?"

Is "a good Mason" one who is present at his Lodge meetings regularly and punctually, never failing to obey a summons or notice to attend, unless for a good Masonic reason? Is he one who shows that he is ever ready to counsel his Lodge by being present at each communication so as to make it possible for him to render service? In our view the importance of this duty can scarcely be over-estimated. "Absent in body, but present in spirit" does not amount to anything in Masonry. It is all very well to say, "I wish the Lodge success," "I hope it is growing," and all that sort or thing, but if a Brother habitually fails to attend the meetings of his Lodge, or worse still, dimits therefrom and remains unaffiliated, no matter how much prosperity he wishes Masonry, it will owe whatever lack of success it has, in part directly to his neglect. It is too true that the majority of Lodge members are, at every Lodge communication "conspicuous by their absence." This is an old complaint in another connection, at least as old as Tacitus, who was the first one, so far as the records of language show, to use this expression. We have no hesitation, therefore, in saying that "a good Mason," whatever else he is, is a regular attendant at his Lodge—that such an attendance is a necessary ingredient of goodness in Masonry. But it is not the only ingredient.

"A good Mason" regularly and promptly pays his dues to the Lodge. This financial quality is the sine qua non of "a good Mason." There is the highest authority for this duty, for our first Great Light directs us to "render to all their dues." Money is as necessary to a Lodge as it is to an individual—it cannot live without it. There are only two ways in which a Lodge can legitimately make money—one is by making Masons, and the other is by collecting dues from its members. To accomplish the latter, the members must each be possessed of a willing mind and a liberal hand. Masonry does not go to law for its dues—the most that it does is to suspend for non-payment of dues, and it never does this where the Brother is unable to pay. Brotherly Love forbids it. Poverty may prevent a man from becoming a Mason, but it never causes him to be cast out of Masonry—on the contrary, a Mason in distress is the ward of the Craft. "A good Mason" pays his dues as long as he is able, in order to enable his Lodge to pay its debts, and dispense needed charity to the distressed.

But a regular and punctual attendance at the Lodge, and the prompt payment of dues, although Masonic virtues of a high order, will not alone constitute "a good Mason." There are material parts of both the letter and the spirit of the law that yet remain to be fulfilled. The spirit of Masonry is the spirit of Brotherly Love. "Love is the fulfilling of the law." It is not too much to say that the main purpose of the Masonic Fraternity is to evoke and continually exhibit in action this divine principle of Brotherly Love. It is that which draws us together; which unites us into one band or society of friends and brothers; which enkindles our hearts, and opens our hands in charity; which creates that unmatched social feeling which ever distinguishes Freemasons. The "good Mason" is a good lover of his brethren, a good lover of humankind, tender-hearted, open-handed, and unselfish in the largest degree. He loves both Masonry and Freemasons. He is a good man, and par excellence "a good Mason."

There are other qualities that distinguish "a good Mason," which, if minor, should not be overlooked in a general view of the subject. "A good Mason" takes, reads, and promptly pays for a good Masonic newspaper. He loves knowledge, and is a continual seeker after "more Light." He likes to read the news of the Craft, to know what is said and done in the world of Masonry. In this age of the printing press, when "that angel, knowledge," is abroad in the land, the Freemason who does not have this "angel" for a regular visitant at his home, has only himself to blame. What operative Mason would think of erecting a material arch without inserting in it a key-stone? And analogously, what Freemason should think of living an enlightened Masonic life, more especially in the Masonic jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, without the stated presence, aid and assistance of the Keystone? Its purpose is to instruct and entertain, to diffuse lawful knowledge throughout the entire circle of its readers, to be a supplemental light in Masonry, and by every thought, word and work to add to tha number of "good Masons."

Having thus recalled to mind the constituted elements of "a good Mason," let us build every one of them into the temple of our lives, for they constitute the life of the building. Freemasonry is a shadow without them. Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth are the living stones of the fabric, and failing to exemplify these, we fail to be 'good Masons."—Keystone.

CORNER STONES.

IT is almost an impossibility to ascertain at what date this custom of laying corner stones was first introduced. After considerable research, we shall endeavour to give, as near as we can find out, the origin. There can be very little doubt that the original idea or form emanated from the Eleusinian and Bacchic mysteries, over three thousand years before Christ. We learn from Festus that the Estrinians had forms concerning the ceremonies observed at the founding of cities, altars, temples, walls, and gates. Plutarch tells us that Romulus before he laid the foundation of Rome, sent for men from Etruria, who informed him in all the punctilios of ceremony which he was to observe. According to Dionysius, they began with offering a sacrifice. They then dug a ditch, in which they threw the first fruits of all things that served for human nourishment; at the same time they consulted the gods to know if their offering would be acceptable, and asked if their enterprise would be successful, and if they approved of the day chosen to do the work.

They then chalked out the boundary (exactly as we do at the present day) by a score of white earth, which they called Terra pura. While they were forming this boundary, they stopped at certain intervals, and placed within the excavation the first fruits, corn and oil, and the symbols of the religious belief at that period. In these sacrifices they invoked, beside the gods of the country, the gods to whose protection the new temple or city was recommended. In those days it was done secretly, because it was necessary that the titular gods should be unknown to the vulgar. (We do it more openly, but our form is nevertheless a sacrifice). Among the Romans, when they were to (build a temple, the Aruspices were employed to choose the place as our architect does), and the time when they should begin work. This place was purified with great care, and was encircled with garlands and fillets (we have seen flowers on a corner stone in this country and in Europe). Fow notice: then he touched the corner stone that was to be first laid in the foundations, which was bound with a fillet, when the people, animated with enthusiastic zeal, threw it in with some pieces of money or metal, which had never passed through the furnace. (We do the same thing, only the money has passed through the mint).

When the edifice was finished there was also a consecration of it with grand ceremonies. Myth. vol. 1. p. 297. When the fruits of the earth were the only food of men, care was taken to reserve a certain portion for the gods. Sometimes water was poured over the heads of the victims, sometimes honey, sometimes oil; but generally they were sprinkled with wine, and then the wood of the fig tree, the myrtle, the vine was burnt upon the altar. There was no erecting of any altar, temple, or wall, without the use of corn, and more particularly barley, as it was the first sort of corn used by the Greeks after their diet of acorns was given up. In the dedication of Mason's halls the corn, wine, and oil are poured upon the Lodge, the processions three times around the foundation and the hall when finished, the three lights, striking the stone thrice, &c., are in conformity to the customs of the Elensinian Bacchic mysteries.

We think, however, that the real origin of the laying of the corner stone was from India, that cradle of civilisation—some of their majestic temples prove this. The Temple of Elora is considered the most curious. No one can regard without astonishment a whole mountain of porphyry, covering nearly six miles of superficial measurement, converted into a mysterious succession of halls, chambers, anti-chambers, vestibules, courts, saloons, &c. In the midst of these apartments is the great Temple of Elora, a single apartment of five hundred feet in circumference, hollowed out of the solid granite.

Its galleries are supported by sculptured pillars; its walls are polished, into which are cut thirty-three niches, extending from floor to dome, in which are thirty-three gigantic statues of Hindoo divinities. During some convulsion of nature these statues were partially removed, and underneath them, and some columns of gigantic size, about forty feet in diameter, were found some curious coins and symbols, and grain of a character which seemed to have passed through some process for preservation.

Discoveries of the same character have been made at different periods in India. We think, therefore, that the custom is far ahead of the Egyptians, or Greeks, or Romans. We do know for certain that 715 B. C. the (collegia fabrorum) or Roman constructors, always performed this ceremony. We leave our readers to decide for their own part on the explanation we have endeavoured to make but bearing in mind whatever metals, coins, or articles of whatever description were placed by the ancients under their corner stones, they were purely symbolic of the religion of the age, and we do not think intended for the use of posterity; for the construction of their temples was, like their religion, intended to last for ever.—New York Dispatch.

The ceremony of exaltation was rehearsed, after which the Chapter was closed until Thursday evening, the 24th inst.

MOZART LODGE, No. 1929.

THE Installation meeting of the above Lodge was held at Harewood House, High-street, Croydon, on the 12th inst. Lodge was opened in due form by the W.M., E. M. Lott, assisted by Bros. Edwin Moss S.W. W.M. elect, Phillips J.W., and a numerous gathering of members and visitors, among whom were Bros. Col. Shadwell H. Clerke Grand Secretary, and Buss Assistant Grand Secretary. Minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed. The audited accounts were then submitted and passed, showing a balance on the right side. The W.M. courted the able assistance of Col. Shadwell H. Clerke to work the installation, and that worthy brother, to the delight of all present, assented and occupied the chair of W.M., appointing as his S.W. Bro. H. G. Buss Assist. Grand Secretary, Bro. E. M. Lott following J. T. Phillips in the J.W. chair. Bro. Frances P.G.D.C. Surrey acting D.C. presented Bro. Moss as the W.M. elect for the benefits of installation. Bro. Moss having applied in the affirmative to all inquiries prior to his appointment as a ruler of the Craft, received the benefits of Masonic prayer, brethren not eligible to remain in Lodge retired, and the distinguished brother in the chair gave the necessary degree, and placed Bro. Moss in the chair of K.S. The Board of Installed Masters was then closed, and the brethren of the different grades were admitted and saluted the chair in formal manner. Bro. Moss appointed his Officers for the ensuing year as follows:—Bros. Phillips Senior Warden, H. J. Lardner Treasurer, E. M. Lott Secretary, J. King Senior Deacon, W. Ainsly Junior Deacon, R. Palmer Thomas Inner Guard, F. Compton P.M. M.C., H. P. Jones Assistant M.C., J. W. Simonn Steward, J. Holdgate Assistant Steward, J. H. Liepold, Organist, J. Kift Director of Ceremonies, C. Grundtirg Std. Bearer. The installing Master then delivered the final addresses in a most impressive manner, the whole of the ceremony being worked without a fault or the slightest hesitation, and the worthy brother received a Masonic ovation. There being two brethren for raising, Bro. Moss was enabled to prove to the members of the Lodge that they had selected a brother to preside over them of true merit, the ceremony being worked in a perfect manner. Lodge was resumed. Bro. E. M. Lott I.P.M., after a highly and justly complimentary address to the Installing Master, in which every one joined, moved that a vote of thanks be recorded on the minutes to that worthy brother; the motion having been unanimously confirmed, Bro. the Grand Secretary paid a high compliment to the excellent working of the Lodge, and wished them progress and prosperity. Other minor subjects were brought before the Lodge, and disposed of as business matter. Lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to an excellent banquet, prepared by Bro. Rhodes (host), to which justice was done, grace being sung by a talented company of professionals. The Loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and responded to—that of the Grand Officers being ably responded to by Bro. Colonel Shadwell Clerke Grand Secretary. The health of the W.M. was fully acknowledged by Bro. Moss. Bro. Moss proposed the toast of the I.P.M., at the same time fixing on his breast a valuable jewel of elegant design and great intrinsic value, being of fine massive gold. Bro. Lott returned his acknowledgments to the members for their handsome gift, and promised to be among them whenever he could. The Officers followed next, to which Bro. Phillips S.W. observed that the Officers felt and esteemed the neat compliment paid them by the W.M., and that they would one and all endeavour to show him they were worthy of his estimation, they had now entered on the second year of existence, and he himself hoped the W.M.'s project for supporting the Charities would be carried out, and thanked him for the Officers' toast. Next followed that of the Visitors. Bro. Le Resche, Mechanics Lodge, No. 245 (Jersey), replied for the Visitors. The Tyler's toast followed, and the brethren separated after a most enjoyable gathering. Part songs during the evening were rendered by the following brethren:—Bros. E. M. Lott, T. Tremere, Kift, A. Thompson, A. James, E. Collins, Schartau, and Simons.

23 GREAT QUEEN STREET, W.C.

ST. MARY ABBOTTS LODGE, No. 1974.

ANOTHER addition has just been made to the list of London Lodges in the form of the St. Mary Abbotts Lodge, No. 1974, which was consecrated on Thursday, 10th inst., at the Town Hall, Kensington, by V.W. Bro. Col. Shadwell H. Clerke Grand Secretary, assisted by W. Bros. Captain N. G. Philips P.G.D. as S.W, Robert Freke Gould P.G.D. as J.W., V.W. Bro. Rev. A. F. A. Woodford P.G. Chaplain as Chaplain, W. Bro. Frank Richardson P.G.D. as Director of Ceremonies, and W. Bro. H. G. Buss Assist. Grand Secretary as I.G. The ceremony of Consecration was conducted by Bro. Clerke in his usual able manner, and the Lodge having been formally dedicated, the W.M. designate—W. Bro. Captain Adolphus Nicols P.D.G. Sup. of Works Punjab—was presented and installed. W. Bro. Col. Martin Petrie having been unanimously elected Treasurer, the W.M. invested the S.W. designate—Captain Henry Smith Andrews—with his collar of office. The J.W. designate—Francis Henry Gruggen—was unable to be present in consequence of having met with an accident. The W.M. stated that as the brother who would fill the position of Secretary was not then a member of the Lodge, he proposed to make the appointment to that office, as also to the other minor offices, later on; he should, however, be obliged to Bros. Petrie, Capt. Chas. Francis Compton and Francis Charles Compton if they would fulfil for a time the duties of Secretary and Senior and Junior Deacons respectively. Bro. Austin was elected, and invested as Tyler. Before closing the Lodge, the Secretary pro tem. announced the receipt of letters of regret from various brethren who had been invited, but who were unable to attend. Five propositions for joining, and one for initiation, were made. A vote of thanks to the Consecrating Officers was, on the proposition of the W.M., seconded by the S.W., unanimously passed, as was also one to the brethren who had carried out the musical portion of the day's programme. Bro. Grand Secretary acknowledged the compliment on behalf of the Consecrating Officers. A Committee having been appointed to draw up the Bye-Laws, Lodge was closed, and the brethren proceeded to banquet, which was well served by Bro. Ward. At the conclusion of the banquet, the W.M. proceeded with the customary toasts; first on the list was that of the Queen and the Craft, it was one, the W.M. said, which needed no preface from him. Noble and good herself, Her Majesty the Queen had always been the Patroness of institutions established for the welfare of her subjects, or for the relief of distress, and although it was not possible for her to take any part in the mysteries of Freemasonry, she had given her support to it by becoming Patroness of the Charitable Institutions connected with it. With the toast of her health they, as Masons, were always pleased to couple Success to the Craft. The toast having been honoured, the National Anthem was sung, and then the toast of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales M.W.G.M., together with that of the Earl of Carnarvon, the Earl of Lathom, and the rest of the Grand Officers, present and past, was given. Masons generally, were proud to honour the Grand Master, who, since he had become their ruler, had shown them he had the power of reigning well. The founders of the Saint Mary Abbotts Lodge had especial cause to be thankful to him from the fact of his having granted them a warrant of Constitution after having expressed his opinion that he considered London Lodges were sufficiently numerous. Of the Earl of Carnarvon, the Earl of Lathom, and the other Grand Officers, he could say much, but they were so well known to all who were then present, that he would simply dismiss them with the best of his wishes for their future. With the toast he had the pleasure of coupling the name of the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford Past Grand Chaplain, and that brother in due course replied. The brethren had heard his voice so very frequently that day that he almost wished the Master had given them an opportunity of listening to some other of the Grand Officers present. But being called upon by the W.M. he must first tender his thanks on behalf of the Grand Officers for the way in which the brethren had replied to the toast. The rulers of Freemasonry were men they were bound to reverence and admire, and it would always be so, as long as they fulfilled their duties as they did at present. They had that day among them several Present and Past Grand Officers, and he felt sure they were one and all animated by a desire to benefit the English Craft. Very much of the success of Freemasonry at the present time was due to the care bestowed upon it by the Grand Secretary, who had shown by the way in which he had carried out the ceremonies that day how much interest he took in the Craft. He must not forget to refer also to the Assistant Grand Secretary, Bro. Buss, whose work in the Craft had met the approval of all with whom he came in contact; more especially was this the case some time since, when the bulk of the work devolved on him. Speaking of Freemasonry generally, he could remember how, forty years ago, when a very young man, he first saw the light of Freemasonry at Gibraltar. The longer he lived the more he appreciated it, and he could but say to those around him if they only make as many friends, and spent as many pleasant evenings in it as he had done, they too would know the advantages of Freemasonry. The Worshipful Master next submitted the toast of Very Worshipful Bro. Shadwell H. Clerke, the Consecrating Officer. Were it possible for him to enjoy speechmaking, he should have very much to say in praise of their Grand Secretary, to whom he and the founders generally were greatly indebted for assistance rendered them in the formation of their Lodge, both before and after the issuing of the warrant for its consecration. He trusted the Lodge might prosper and never forfeit the respect and regard of the brother to whom they were so much indebted for what he had done towards starting it. Bro. Clerke thought he might fairly echo the remarks of Bro. Woodford so far as what he had said as to his having spoken so often before that day was concerned. It was a great pleasure to him to reply to the toast, more especially after the way in which the W.M. had alluded to the small services he had been able to render in connection with the establishment of the Lodge. It had been a great pleasure to him to be present that day, and he had felt it his duty to assist the W.M. as far as lie in his power. He had felt from the first that the Lodge would be a successful one, and had done his best to get the needful authority from the Grand Master as early as possible. He must congratulate the founders on the successful start that had been made, and trusted that the future of the Lodge would be all they could desire. Before resuming his seat he would ask them to honour another toast—to use an oft repeated expression, the toast of the evening—that of their W.M., coupled with Prosperity to the Saint Mary Abbotts Lodge. As he had said in Lodge, the W.M. was a very old and experienced Mason, having passed the chair some years since in India. He (Bro. Clerke) had seen him on many occasions in Freemasonry, and was sure he was the right sort of man to put at the head of a Lodge. He could but congratulate him and the Lodge generally on the favourable auspices under which they assembled, and had little doubt but that the first Master and the Lodge itself would prove a great success. The Worshipful Master tendered his heartfelt thanks. He assured the brethren that the present was the one period in the whole day's proceedings he had looked forward to with diffidence and misgivings. The man who could gracefully say, I thank you, under such circumstances was, in his opinion, a masterpiece. So far as he was concerned, he should do his very best for the welfare of the Lodge. He invited his brother visitors to come and see him when there was work to do in the Lodge, as if he could do his duty there, he felt they would excuse him at the toast list, and then proceeded to propose the health of the guests. The Visitors who were present must remember they were assembled that evening at a new Lodge, whose machinery had only just been set in motion. He was at present unable to say how it would work, so would not promise too much; all he could hope was that the St. Mary Abbotts Lodge would eventually attain a reputation both for hospitality and good working. With the toast he had the pleasure of coupling the name of Bro. Rev. W. Francis; that brother, in responding, felt the Master could hardly have selected any one less able to reply than himself, but at the same time he could not have chosen one who had enjoyed himself more than he. He thought he might say that the Visitors had all enjoyed themselves; that each did really wish every success and prosperity to the Lodge and its founders. What was more, they felt convinced from the way in which it had been started, and the ability of the brother at its head, that the Lodge must succeed. The W.M. next proposed the health of his Officers. Of course as he had not seen them work he could not yet say anything of them; he hoped, however, the brethren would unite with him in wishing them good health and trusting they might keep up the reputation that had been established that day. He coupled with the toast the name of Col. Petrie, the Treasurer and acting Secretary. Bro. Petrie acknowledged the toast. The W.M. had said he could not say what his Officers were like as he had not tried them, but under so distinguished a master, he (the speaker) felt convinced they could hardly fail to do well. Masonry was often spoken of as an institution which created good fellowship and charity among its members, but he thought it had a much higher aim. It taught its members to prepare themselves for another world and that their aim should be to make themselves fit stones to be selected by the Great Architect of the Universe to be added to the great temple above. Brother Gould followed. The brethren had paid him the compliment of asking him to act as Junior Warden of the Lodge and to retain that position during the remainder of the day's proceedings; he thanked them, in a position which he did not think he should be able to occupy again—as one of the Officers of the Lodge. One thing had struck him which had not yet been mentioned by any of the speakers—the number of military men who had taken part in the day's proceedings. As an old soldier he felt very pleased to meet so many members of the profession. He felt there was no better class of men to be found in the world than those who had passed a military life; and he felt that the large number of military men associated with the Lodge would ensure success. The Tyler's toast was then given, and the proceedings were brought to a conclusion. The W.M. took occasion during the evening to specially thank the musical brethren for the part they had taken in the day's work. An excellent programme of music was set down to intersperse the various toasts, and the songs were most deservedly applauded. Bro. Lott undertook the direction of the music, being supported by Bros. J. Tremere, E. Moss, A. James and H. Ashton.

The Lord Mayor, who is the present G. Junior Warden of England, has given five guineas to the John Hervey Memorial Fund.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Diseases of Advanced Years.—The grand climacteric being passed, mankind passes to old age. Then the digestion becomes impaired, the nervous system grows feeble, and the physical powers become enervated. Now arise congestion of the liver, lungs, or head, followed by dropsy, asthma, or apoplexy, which frequently afflict and often destroy the aged. As the liver usually becomes torpid, its activity may speedily be revived by rubbing Holloway's Ointment thoroughly over the pit of the stomach and right side at least twice a day, and taking the Pills at the same time. This treatment also disperses all other congestions by varying the parts rubbed according to the situations of the mischief.

Bro. Sir John Bennett, speaking at a gathering of hop and fruit growers, and land cultivators, held in London, on Monday, to promote the abolition of extraordinary tithes, contended it was high time such an impost should be abolished. He knew something about hop cultivation, and would say that he never grudged the manure nor their labour, but that he did the money which from time to time the parson received from him for tithes.

The installation ceremony of the High Cross Lodge will be rehearsed on Wednesday next, the 23rd inst, at four o'clock.

Bro. Sir John B. Monckton, President of the Board of General Purposes, Town Clerk of the City of London, is spending his holiday in Switzerland.

OUR EARLIEST CRAFT LODGES.

FROM THE KEYSTONE.

I HAVE received from our indefatigable Brother, the Rev. W. C. Lukis P.M., F.S.A., some more jottings from his investigations of the Stukeley Papers, and this time they are of unusual interest. They are extracts from Dr. Stukeley's Diary, and are valuable as being very early references to Masonic work in London. The question of where the doctor was made a Mason, is settled by the first entry, as follows:

"January 6 1721.—I was made a Freemason at the Salutation Tavern, Tavistock-street (London), with Mr. Collins and Captain Rowe, who made the famous diving engine.

"[I was the first person made a Freemason in London for many years. We had great difficulty to find members enough to perform the ceremony. Immediately upon that it took a run, and ran itself out of breath, through the folly of the members.]"

It would have been interesting if the writer had told us how many members were required in those days to perform the ceremony. It is evident that a strict form was observed.

"June 24 1721.—The Masons had a dinner at Stationer's Hall. Present—Duke of Montague, Lord Herbert, Lord Stanhope, Sir Andrew Fountaine, &c. Dr. Desaguliers pronounced an oration.

"The Grand Master Pain pronounced an old M.S. of the Constitutions, which he got in the West of England 500 years ago. He read over a newset of articles to be observed. The Duke of Montague chose Grand Master next year, Brother Beal Deputy."

Beal is mentioned in the list of Lodges appended to the first Book of Constitutions as W.M. of Lodge No. 12. Pain (or Payne) had been re-elected Grand Master in 1720, and Dr. Desaguliers was the Immediate Past Grand Master—a brilliant meeting.

"December 27 1721.—We met at the Fountain Tavern, Strand, and by consent of the Grand Master present, Dr. Beale constituted a new Lodge there, where I was chosen Master."

Nothing is named about the qualifications for the Chair, and as Bro. Stukeley had not been twelve months a Mason, it is manifest that any Brother could be chosen to preside, as also that the verbal consent of the Grand Master or his Deputy was sufficient to authorise the formation of a Lodge.

"May 25 1722.—Met the Duke of Queensborough, Lord Dumbarton, Hinchinbroke, &c., at Fountain Tavern Lodge, to consider of Feast on St. John's."

The Fountain must have been one of the leading Lodges to have made the rendezvous of these distinguished brethren.

"November 3 1722.—The Duke of Wharton and Lord Dalkeith visited our Lodge at the Fountain."

The Duke was Grand Master in that same year, and was followed in the chair by Lord Dalkeith.

"October 4 1723.—I read my discourse of the Dorchester Amphitheatre at the Lodge, and delivered to every brother a copy."

Stukeley was a great antiquarian, and one of the best classics of his day, and although his theories on various archæological subjects are now known to be erroneous, he was a leader of thought in his time, and even yet his correspondence and close observations are of great value. Bro. Lukis is at present engaged on a volume of his writing for the Surtees Society.

"June 1726.—Being sadly plagued with the gout, I retired to Grantham, &c. Here I set up a Lodge of Freemasons, which lasted all the time I lived there."

To this Lodge at Grantham I referred in a note a few weeks ago.

"1728.—Died, my landlord, Lambert, of the Fountain Tavern, Strand, where I was Master of a new Lodge of Masons."

In his autobiography, Dr. Stukeley gives his reasons for becoming a Freemason. He says:

"His curiosity led him to be initiated into the mysteries of Masonry, suspecting it to be the remains of the mysteries of the ancients; when, with difficulty, a number sufficient was to be found in all London. After this it became a public fashion, not only spread over Britain and Ireland, but of all Europe."

It will be observed that for some three or four years after the "revival" of Masonry, very little progress, if any, was made in the Craft, which seems to have carried on a very feeble existence until the year of the Duke of Montague's Grand Mastership.

There are two entries in the Diary, which are still more remarkable. They are as follows:

"Nov. 7 1722 —Order of the Book instituted."

"Dec. 28, 1722.—I din'd with Lord Hertford, introduced by Lord Winchelsea. I made them both members of the Book, or Roman Knighthood."

Does any one know anything of this Order? Was it Masonic, or or simply a literary Brotherhood? If Masonic, it shows how very soon our brethren began to hanker after more degrees.

IS MASONRY REALLY FLOURISHING?

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Your article, under the above heading which appeared in the last issue of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, opens up a very wide, and as you rightly observe, a momentous issue in relation to the Craft. And, although I fear I shall be able to add very little to the deductions you make, yet I have reason to fear there is considerable weight in them, unpalatable as their acceptance might be to us, and all who are jealous for the interests of our Ancient and Honourable Institution. It would be invidious to point to any especial cases in which members have been indiscriminately—I was almost going to say recklessly—admitted into Lodges; but it can hardly be gainsaid that instances are neither few nor far between in which by far a too large a proportion of some Lodges "lose heart" after the first few years, and either resign or grow careless and indifferent as to their responsibilities to the Craft. I wonder how many Masons there are who, though fired with enthusiasm at first, would now be unable to work themselves into a Lodge? I do not mean to insinuate that all these have fallen into the ranks of the inactivity through necessary avarice or disappointment in obtaining honours; as there may be a variety of causes to actuate men—business or private engagements—in abstaining in greater or less degree from active participation in the working of their Lodges. I do not see that such men are to be blamed entirely for this; although there can be very little doubt that some brethren, seeing there is but a remote chance of promotion, wax faint and shrink from that enthusiastic action in connection with the Craft which they evinced at the outset. One feature of your remarks must commend itself to all thinking Masons, and there can be little question that many Lodges have swollen to such unwieldly dimensions as to preclude many who aspire to office the possibility of advancement; and thus in the face of a hopeless case, nothing can be expected on the part of members but a desire to overflow into an "offshoot" Lodge, where in a short period, at all events, they might reasonably anticipate a realisation of their hopes. I can hardly see how the curb is to be put on in the matter of restricting the increasing the number of men who are solicitous of joining the ranks of Freemasonry, and, as you point out in your article, the selection of candidates is a matter of the utmost difficulty, if not impossibility. When candidates appear to all external appearances just and upright men and Masons, it is absolutely impossible for anyone not possessed of "second sight" to fathom the mind and intentions of those who are admitted, as to whether their motives are mercenary or otherwise, or whether they will after a time lapse into a state of apathy, or even eventually fall back upon the Benevolent Fund. Although there may be in some cases "an excess of zeal," such as you seem to indicate, on the part of brethren to see the numbers of their Lodges increase, yet I do not think the remark applies to anything like a large proportion of them, either in the metropolis or the Provinces, and considering the number of applicants for admission, who are either withdrawn or "pilled," one can hardly doubt that there is a very large amount of discretion exercised in the selection—that is, so far as selection can be exercised—of candidates for initiation. You cannot judge of the quality of nut until it is cracked, and it is equally impossible to say how a man will turn out until you have watched his actions, and estimated the genuineness of his professions after his admission. Much, therefore, as we must all deplore the number of "drones" which exist in our Lodges, I for one cannot see how a remedy is to be found for the increase of individual Lodges, and its inevitable consequence in the multiplication in the applications for new warrants. I hope some other correspondents will express their views upon this question, which is one of considerable interest to the Craft, and that some remedy for the evils of which you so justly complain may be the outcome of their collective thought.

I remain, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

A YOUNG MASON.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am glad you have mooted this question. As far as mere numbers go, we have, unquestionably made huge advances since the memorable day when H.R.H. the Prince of Wales was installed Grand Master of England in the Royal Albert Hall, South Kensington. But, as you have frequently remarked, mere numerical increase is no just criterion of increased strength. Freemasonry is popular with all classes of the community and is respected by those who understand its precepts for the immense amount of good it does as a practical philanthropic Institution. A society, which annually raises over £40,000 in order to provide for the maintenance and education of orphan girls and boys and to make comfortable the declining years of its aged indigent members and their widows, is not likely to be at a loss for eulogists, and there is fair reason to suppose that its influence may be so far contagious as to secure a number of imitators. There is, however, this danger to be considered, that in addition to the eulogists and the imitators, it also has a large number of admirers who, being as it were, a kind of beasts of prey, have no other thought in seeking admission to its ranks than to make profit out of its benevolent propensities. These people adopt different modes of procedure in order to secure the object they have in view. Some obtain entrance into the Craft by means of friends, who are also brethren, in the hope and belief that, by so doing, they will extend the sphere of their custom as tradesmen, while others, finding their commercial status becoming somewhat cranky, are only too glad to speculate to the extent of a few pounds in the shape of initiation fees and subscriptions, in the hope that, when the crisis in their affairs has arrived and their means are exhausted, they may obtain substantial help from Grand Lodge and, if they are married men, equally substantial help in bringing up their families. It may appear very un-Masonic to say so, but there is no doubt that the large accession of mere numerical strength during the past few years has brought with it a very considerable accession of weakness. This is borne out by the fact that, only a short while ago, the Fund of Benevolence was under the necessity of selling out a portion of its capital in order to make good its excess of expenditure over income. It is further demonstrated by the still more conspicuous fact that, though our Institutions have, since the Prince of Wales was elected Grand Master, enlarged the sphere of their operations to an amazing extent, and have on their books from forty to sixty per cent more recipients of their bounty than they had eight years ago, the number of applicants is still out of all proportion to the number of vacancies. This circumstance alone deserves to be recognised as an unhealthy symptom, and as showing that, however grand may be the outward proportions of Freemasonry in this country, it is not as sound as it ought to be at heart.

The multiplication of Lodges has had a great deal to do with bringing about this result. Men spend money in the Lodge, which, if they were right-minded and conscientious, they would spend at home. What need is there for a brother to be a member of several Lodges? It gives him no additional status in the Craft. It does not prove that he possesses exceptional merits, and, in nine cases out of ten, it involves him in a needless burden of expenditure. I admit there are some who, having proved themselves worthy and able Craftsmen, are fully justified in their endeavours to promote the welfare of Freemasonry by starting new Lodges, but the number of these is, in the nature of things, limited. For instance, it was understood a year or two since that warrants for no new London Lodges would be granted, yet warrants have been granted even in the course of the present year, and the cases in which the grant of a new warrant seems justifiable are few indeed. For instance, if I take only a figure view of the case, I find that London, with its population of four millions, has over 300 Lodges, or one Lodge to every 13,000; while in the Provinces there are some 1,000 Lodges to nineteen millions, or one Lodge to every 19,000. But then one half of the population are females, and from the male half of 11,500,000, we must at least deduct three-fifths who are not adults, the result being, in these circumstances, that we have one Lodge to some 2,650 male adults in London, and one to every 3,800 in the country. Let me take one step further. Quite four-fifths of these male adults are unwilling or unable pecuniarily to join the Craft, the result being that there is one Lodge to every 500 competent male adults in London, and one to every 760 in the country. Clearly, therefore, and apart from the fact that the area of the Metropolitan District is more limited, and the Lodges in closer contiguity to each other, it must be evident that no new warrants for London Lodges are needed now or for some time to come.

There are other points in your article I should like to notice, but time presses, and I must subscribe myself,

Fraternally yours,

"ALIQUID."

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Next Wednesday fortnight, 6th September, Grand Lodge holds its Quarterly Meeting, at which, amongst other business, Grand Lodge will be asked to confirm a proposition which it has already carried twice, viz., Bro. Raynham Stewart's motion for an extra grant of £800 per annum towards the above Institution. It may not be known to all the members of Grand Lodge that there is already a grant of one £800 a year to the Aged. How did that grant come about? Many years ago, 1854, when our Lodges numbered about 800, G. Lodge agreed to give to the Institution £800 a-year on condition of receiving three votes (two male and one female) annually for every Lodge under its Constitution. Since that time our strength in numbers has increased to 2,000 Lodges more or less, so that we now give 6,000 votes for the same consideration as we previously gave 2,400. On these grounds I believe the Institution is justly entitled to the extra £800 per annum; especially as since the motion, which was carried in December last, though non-confirmed in March, was then held over to know whether what the Grand Secretary read out, and the Auditor's Report confirmed, was correct, namely, that there was a handsome annual surplus on the Fund of General Purposes from which the extra grant could be well spared. At the meeting in June, it was given out that this surplus revenue was about £4,000, and the proposition was again carried. It now remains with the brethren to confirm what they have twice agreed to; to show their zeal and fidelity to the cause they profess to admire; and by a large majority endorse their previous records.

Yours fraternally,

REVIEWS.

All Books intended for Review should be addressed to the Editor of The Freemason's Chronicle, 23 Great Queen Street, W.C.

The Political Summary. Containing the chief interesting events, and a List of the principal Bills passed in each year of the present Reign, with Tables showing Income and Expenditure in each year, &c. Also List of Administrations from 1837 to 1882. Complete in two Books. One Penny Each. Published by H. W. Allen, Ave Maria-lane, London, E.C.

A SUMMARY of this kind possesses a very considerable value for purposes of reference, provided it satisfies certain conditions, the principal of which are (1) clearness and conciseness of arrangement; (2) accuracy. The compilers specify among the sources from which they have taken their information "Hansard" and the Times newspaper, and better sources than these for ensuring accuracy it would have been impossible to select. The arrangement of a summary depends on the ability of the compiler, and Mr. Hime and Bro. Littelton Wilday have proved in this instance that they possess the requisite qualifications for such a task. Their method is excellent. Each year has its interesting events ranged under it on the days of their occurrence, and over each is placed the particular administration that was in power during its, or a part of its continuance. Nothing could have been better save in one respect. There should have been uniformity in superscribing these Administrations. For instance, during the first eight months of 1841 the late Lord Melbourne was Prime Minister, and during the remaining four months the late Sir Robert Peel, Bart., and to the heading "Melbourne and Sir R. Peel's Administration," no objection need be taken. In 1846 Sir Robert Peel resigned, and the late Lord John, afterwards Earl Russell, succeeded him. For the sake of consistency, therefore, the heading should have been "Sir R. Peel's and Lord John Russell's Administrations," whereas, it is "Sir R. Peel's Administration," which is true only of the first half of the year. In 1852 the description accords with that of 1841 and so it does again in 1855, when the late Lord Aberdeen was Prime Minister for a brief period and the late Lord Palmerston for the rest of the year. The next change of Ministry occurred in 1858; Lord Palmerston being succeeded by the late Earl of Derby in February, yet the whole of this year is assigned to "Viscount Palmerston's Administration." Similarly 1859 was divided in about equal parts between Lord Derby's and Lord Palmerston's Administration, yet the year is wholly assigned to that of the former. In 1866, a better, and what we hold to be correct, system is adopted. The late Earl Russell was Minister for the first half and the late Earl of Derby for the second half, and the year accordingly is divided between the two. There is no objection to the heading "Lord Derby's and Mr. Disraeli's Administrations" for 1868, because the two were virtually one and the same Ministry, and Mr. Gladstone did not take office till 9th December, while again in 1874 and 1880, the former of which was divided between Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Disraeli, and the latter between the late Earl of Beaconsfield and Mr. Gladstone, what we have expressed our opinion is the proper arrangement is adopted. We consider this threefold variety is a mistake. With this exception the plan adopted is a good one, while the events of each year are clearly and concisely described.

We have not, of course, been at the pains of examining all the events that have been deemed worthy of note with a view to testing their accuracy—we could not have spared the time for such a purpose. We have, however, glanced here and there at hazard, and though we have found the majority of the entries correct, we have also lighted on some which do not quite explain themselves and which, in future issues, it will be as well to rectify. Thus we have in 1842 against "August 26" the following "Treaty of Peace concluded with China," &c., &c., and on "December 8" again, "Peace with China." In 1843 against "February 17" stands "Sir Charles Napier's victory over Scinde chiefs at Meeanee," and later in the year this was followed up by a second victory at Hyderabad, yet on "December 20" we are told that the "Scinde War commenced."

Again, as regards the eventful years 1857-8, the commencement of the Indian Mutiny is set down for "Jan. 23," and is said to have been caused by the belief formed by the Sepoys about the greased cartridges. This was, no doubt, one of many pretexts for the revolt; but the Mutiny proper dates from the outbreak at Meerut, in May—we do not remember the exact day—and the subsequent march of the mutineers on Delhi, where they massacred the English and set up the Mogul as their sovereign. The recapture by Sir Archdale Wilson, of the city of Delhi, after a six days' fight in September, is unnoticed, but in 1858 against "Sep. 11," we have the Battle of Delhi, though the mutiny was virtually at an end on the latter date. Then the second relief of Lucknow, in November 1858, when Sir C. Campbell secured the ladies and children and other non-combatants, and retired till re-inforcements arrived, is omitted. In 1867 "April 18," we have entered "Withdrawal of Mr. Gladstone from leadership of Liberal party." Of course, our memory may be at fault, yet we confess we do not remember anything of the kind having happened, nor, as the Liberal party were in a majority, do we think it likely it could have happened, especially as, in 1868, "Apr. 30," we read, "Government defeated by 65 on Mr. Gladstone's Irish Church Bill." The only resignation of his leadership by Mr. Gladstone of which we have any knowledge took place after his defeat in 1874, when he was succeeded by the Marquis of Hartington. Some other errors of little moment should also be noted. The late Princess Alice was married in July 1862—she was engaged at the time of her father's death—not in 1863, and the Parliamentary grant to the Prince of Wales on the occasion of his marriage was £40,000, not £100,000 per annum. The Revenues of his Duchy of Cornwall raise his income, no doubt, to the latter sum, but Parliament has no control over these, which are his property, so long as he remains Prince of Wales and Duke of Cornwall, which will be till he becomes King.

We have noted these errors of omission and comission in no unfriendly spirit, but rather at the invitation of the compilers. There is no doubt their "Political Summary" has been well conceived, and well carried out, but errors in a compilation of such a character are inevitable, and we have no doubt that in future issues—which we shall heartily welcome—they will have disappeared.

The Alphabet of Gardening. By Shirley Hibberd, F.R.H.S., Editor of the "Gardeners' Magazine." Published at the Office of the "Gardeners' Magazine," 4 Ave Maria Lane, E.C., and at Manchester, Birmingham, Sheffield, Edinburgh and Glasgow.

OUR horticultural readers are no doubt aware that one of the principal authorities in gardening is Mr. Shirley Hibberd, whose numerous works on the subject have long since established themselves firmly in the estimation of those for whose special behoof they are written. This "Alphabet of Gardening" is essentially practical in its character, and will be equally an assistance to those who do their gardening within modest limits, and those who aspire to the higher and more ambitious flights of the art horticultural. It is written in a pleasant style and the information it contains will be found most serviceable.

A new local metropolitan journal has recently been started in the shape of the Clapham Free Press. It is issued weekly, and a circulation of 5000 is guaranteed. It contains news chiefly of local interest, but it has one distinguishing feature in its Masonic column, which gives the principal Craft doings in the district in which it circulates, as well as those that are likely to prove noteworthy to Craftsmen generally.

The remains of Mrs. Thomas, wife of Bro. J. T. Thomas, G.C., of Queen Victoria-street, were interred, on Tuesday last, at Erith Cemetery, in the presence of a circle of surviving relatives and friends. Mrs. Thomas had been ailing some time, and on the night of the 8th inst. she was taken seriously ill, at her residence, Bryn Towy, Lewisham High-road, remaining unconscious till she died, on the following day, the immediate cause being apoplexy. Much sympathy is felt for Bro. Thomas and his family at this sad and unlooked for event.

PROPOSED CONVENTION.

IN further consideration of its views, our worthy contemporary Le Monde Maçonnique continues in the following strain.

Is it not the case that our Grand Orient took the initiative in abolishing the Grand Mastership, an office which still exists in all the other countries of the world? Has it not, as a means of conciliating the supporters and opponents of the High Grades, and with a view to putting an end to the struggle which for years has divided French Masonry into two hostile camps, has it not, we ask, granted to the so-called superior Bodies the right to be represented in its general assemblies? Has it not, during the last fifty years, strenuously upheld the rights of the Jewish brethren in Germany, and those of the Negro and Mulatto Craftsmen in America, thus creating for itself, by this determined appeal to justice, a host of implacable enemies? Is it not the case that, single-handed against all the other Masonic powers in the world, it has dared to affirm the absolute freedom of man's conscience—an affirmation which has resulted in the excommunication of our Grand Orient by the whole of Anglo-Saxon Freemasonry? All this is forgotten, and much else that we might refer to, such as the struggle against Prince Murat, or the campaign against recognition by the State, both which proved to demonstration how jealous were the brethren of the Grand Orient of their independence, and how deeply they were animated by the spirit of toleration, without which Freemasonry would not exist. Yet, in spite of all this, there are people who pretend to believe that the Grand Orient is a retrograde and anti-Masonic body. Worse still, there are those who charitably propose to infuse new blood in it, by bestowing upon it an entirely new Constitution, endowed with every imaginable good quality. Admitting for the moment that this Constitution, which it is desired to force on the Grand Orient as a condition sine quâ non of the fusion, should turn out to be unobjectionable in its effects, and realising on the instant all the hopes and aspirations of those who love justice, in that case, how perfect soever may be the new Constitution framed by the project of Convention, we do not hesitate to say, and we trust the Assembly will proclaim it aloud, that such Convention is impossible of acceptance, inasmuch as, in its most essential feature, so far from being progressive in its character, it will throw us back, and that, too, to a very considerable extent, as compared with the Constitution actually in force.

That the Constitution we live under at present is imperfect is a question that admits of no doubt, and it is equally recognised that those who have assisted in working it from 1865 till the present time have been no more than ignorant and incapable brethren. Meanwhile, however, this Constitution, notwithstanding its many defects, has at least one recommendation, which alone will suffice to wipe out the blots which people are pleased to attribute to it; it is capable of revision, and that, not only at remote intervals as those which preceded it, but constantly, whenever the majority of the Lodges have brought themselves to recognise the necessity for further modifications. During the last eleven years the General Assemblies of the Grand Orient have largely availed themselves of the opportunity thus afforded them, as is evidenced by the fact that of the forty-four articles contained in the Constitutions of 1865, no less than twenty-five have been modified, amended, or replaced by others. Would such a result be possible with a Constitution which provides not for any revision, and the essential features of which will have been settled in a definite manner? How will it fare with the treaty of Union between the Symbolical Grand Lodge and the Grand Orient, if the latter should rashly put its hand to the work that is submitted to the ratification, pure and simple, of the approaching Convention? Who will have the right to tear up this contract, seeing that the two contracting parties will have ceased to exist? Thus, for the rest of all time, the French brethren will be condemned to admire the profound wisdom of their settled Constitution!

Such a course as has just been indicated would be quite out of the question, and the Assembly should never associate itself with proceedings so reactionary. The Constitution of 1865, which showed a great advance on that of 1854, allowed a revision to be made only at the end of nine years, and it necessitated a concatenation of circumstances that could hardly be anticipated—such, for instance, as the refusal of General Mellinet to accept re-election, the difficulty of enlisting on the spur of the moment another Grand Master, &c., &c.—in order to afford the party of progressists the opportunity of demanding in 1870 and obtaining the reunion of a constituent Assembly, which put an end among other things to the clause fixing revision at periods of time too far removed and by means of a special meeting.

The Constituent assembly which it is expected will be held with a certain amount of illegality on the 16th of September next, might insert in the new Constitution a clause providing for periodical revision in the future; but is it likely the Scotch Symbolical Grand Lodge, which is one of the contracting parties, will be prepared to ratify a convention, the essential basis of which may be modified or destroyed at any moment? It cannot shut its eyes to the fact that it will always be found in a minority in the Assemblies, and it is only natural that, as it attaches certain conditions to its re-union with the Grand Orient, it should require those conditions to be scrupulously observed.

In a report on this question to the Symbolical Grand Lodge, Bro. Grumain-Cornille says distinctly: "I am desirous of pointing out that the actual proposition, even when it has been adopted by the Symbolical Grand Lodge, and ratified by the approaching Convention, is nothing more than a preliminary step, which in no way binds the contracting parties. Everything remains subject to the vote of the entire constituent body, to which shall be entrusted the Constitution of Symbolical French Masonry, once again restored to its sovereign jurisdiction. If, then, which is most unlikely, the representatives of the Symbolical Grand Lodge should find themselves in the Constituent Assembly in the face of a majority hostile to the principles of liberty as formulated in the project of Convention, it would still be in their power to reject, in its entirety, the new organic law as proposed, and, in a formal declaration explanatory of its reasons, to cancel the signature of the Symbolical Grand Lodge, with a view to maintaining its present independence, and so reserve an asylum for its liberty."

This language is clear, and sufficiently indicates that the Symbolical Grand Lodge is too much attached to its principles not to insist on formal guarantees in making a treaty such as is proposed. And, in a matter of this kind, what other guarantee can possibly be had than a Constitution which is unchangeable, albeit such a guarantee is in truth of but little account, seeing that, with the most perfect good faith on both sides, one may adopt to-day certain ideas and principles which to-morrow will appear so much more intolerable that it would be difficult, or even impossible, to amend them? Here then is a difficulty, the solution of which is evidently not simple, but on which the project of convention throws no light. Either the Grand Orient loses its power to modify its Constitution when and as it pleases, or the Symbolical Grand Lodge, content with its present victory, admits the right of revision, and is prepared to run the risk of seeing its principles at some future time replaced by others diametrically opposed to them. In such a case, which is by no means an improbable one, there will remain open to the malcontent Lodges no other resource than the final one of separating themselves from the jurisdiction, as they have separated from the Scotch system, and setting up a separate jurisdiction of their own. Yet when a case of fusion is on the carpet, it would be ridiculous to establish a position, which could only be put an end to by a schism. Whatever happens, it will be the duty of the General Assembly of the Grand Orient, before ratifying the proposal, to insist on the insertion of a clause under which the right of revising it will be included among the fundamental bases of the new Constitution.

THE DULL SEASON.

"WHEN the swallows homeward fly" we suppose that we shall hear the sound of the gavel calling the brethren in from all points of the compass, and they will come trooping back from their holiday trips with visages bronzed by the country sun rays, and with bodies and minds strung up with renewed vigour for the work of the coming session. With those whose misfortune it has been to have no holiday, this stagnation in Masonic circles, and the deprivation of those little amenities which go far to sweeten life, has become almost intolerable. To spin away for a couple of days on a visit to some Provincial Grand Lodge, and there to fraternise with brethren whom one has not seen for years; to hie away with a gladsome and happy group to a summer pic-nic; or to drop in at one of the cosy little Lodges of Instruction, which we are happy to see abounding on every hand, is the most that any man having Masonry at heart can hope to indulge in for the next month at least. However, we suppose that, like all mundane affairs, rest is as essential in Masonry as in any other condition of existence; and were it not for these breaks in the "annual round" perhaps even the most assiduous and enthusiastic Craftsman would grow to look upon his labours as monotonous. "All work and no play," has its moral and physical effect, alike in making "Jack a dull boy" or the student heavy-eyed; and thus, just as when the school-boy throws aside his books, and flings his cap high into the air in joyous exultation over the arrival of the holidays, so do most men—and especially those who work hardest with head and brain—hail with singularly happy complacency the time when they can lock up the desk, be it for ever so short a period, and indulge in a respite from the ordinary duties and worries of life. By and bye our brethren will be home returning, like doves to their cotes, wherein there will be renewed those loving and fraternal associations which have been broken by a short and pleasant spell. Then will be recounted the agreeable scenes witnessed and enjoyed on the holiday tours; the visits to country Lodges—for there is nothing more common than for our hearty and hospitable Provincial brethren to hold a special réunion at a time when they know there are numbers of Visitors about, and who would be glad of a fraternal hour or two away from home, and all those topics which go to make up the sum of friendly conversation. Friends will compare notes, illustrated by panoramic mental sketches of the scenery through which they have passed, the old friendships that have been renewed, and the new ones that have been gained; they will relate how little minor annoyances and disappointments were overcome, and generally "how things in general" were managed. At home, and in the midst of all this stillness to which we allude, we can only ponder upon the extensive area over which the brethren are just now scattered, and the various pleasantries in which they are respectively participating. Some are flitting round the coasts in white-winged yachts, dancing over summer waves, and inhaling the life-giving ozone of the breezes off the sea. They will tell us of the varying beauties of the foreshore, ever changing from one picture of quiet grandeur to another, of spanking breezes and "slanting" craft which take the lead in the regattas that now delight the dwellers by the sea; of deep line fishing and the hauls which may well make the inland disciple of Izaak Walton sigh with envy; of the saunterings upon the esplanade and pier, where bands play softly, and music mingles its sweet cadences with the ripple of the sea. Others have been far away upon the moors, and will return with cheeks as russet as the heather over which they have trampled, gun in hand, and with trusty spaniels and retrievers at their heels. What tales they will have to tell, and tactics of manœuvres "under cover," while blazing away amongst the speckled grouse, just as our brave fellows "out East" are peppering the deluded followers of Arabi! The idea is suggested by an expression which burst forth the other day from a burly brother who at almost his first shot brought down a brace of "brown beauties," and who only wished our "jolly red coats" could in like manner pop off the rebels "two at a time?" How they will account the heavy trudges over moor and heath land, the merry tales told along the way, the visions of sport, and the realisation of health-giving exercise and hilarity, of kilted attendants, and bonny Highland whisky! All these things have been recounted before, but they come fresh every year, dressed up in new fashion, and with a flavour of novelty in them quite mellow and refreshing. Others, again, have been by the lakes and streams, amidst the "finny friends" of whom our correspondent, the "non-sporting Brother," spoke so eloquently in a recent article in our columns; and it will be whether the "red soldier," the "palmer," or the "blue dun" has proved the most seductive in bewitching the silvery trout and other denizens of our streams into their creels. Down by the sea-side, at aristocratic Brighton or Scarboro', at more refined Eastbourne, Bournemouth or Ilfracombe, in shady beautiful Clovelly, and such like haunts of loveliness, never invaded by the noise of boisterous mirth; there are our brethren, with thousands more, enjoying their well-earned repose—too short a span, alas! they think—from the wear and tear, the hurry and bustle of business, and the ordinary routine of duty. We shall welcome them all home in a week or two, with many a hand-shake of congratulation upon their improved appearance and spirits, and shall all go forward again together along the paths of our favourite research. 'Tis little we have to say as yet in prospect of the coming session for the simple reason that as the knife grinder in the story, so aptly and so frequently alluded to by some of our Masonic orators, "we have no story to tell." But this we know, that when the brethren come back and enter once more upon their allotted tasks, the square men will drop into their square holes with all the steadiness and regularity of veterans, for the whole of the Masonic machinery will revolve as smoothly and as gaily as ever. Already the evenings are "drawing in" apace, and we shall have autumn and winter upon us almost before we are aware of their approach. The most must be made of the few remaining weeks—or days!—of a dull season, if we have not already gone upon our holiday escapades, for in a trice we shall be glad of cosy fires in our grates, the closed curtains, and the gladdening society of friends. Then from their hidden recesses will come forth the emblems and insignia which have been so carefully laid aside by considerate Tylers; the lights will reappear, and the brethren will again repair to their respective homes—for where can the word home be so thoroughly and perfectly find exemplification as within the precincts of our Masonic Lodges. To finish these simple platitudes, which in the absence of more stirring themes we are content to present as a sort of side-dish to our readers, we can only repeat, in pleasant recollection of the evenings we have spent together, "happy may we meet again." One thing is certain: the same joyous faces, the same impulses of hearty good fellowship and fraternal greeting, will soon again adorn the haunts of "ye mystic tie," when, with heart and hand our friends and neighbours will cheer the winter evenings, and dissipate for another year the solitude which inevitably accompanies the dull season through which we have happily so nearly passed.

Mills Master William Sutton Lodge, A. T. Stocker S.W., George Parsons J.W., Harmon Hall Member, Henry A. Brown P.M. Star King Lodge, Benj. Dean Past G.W.

At fifteen minutes past eleven o'clock a.m. Grand Lodge was opened in ample form, at the residence of our deceased Brother, in that part of his library called the "Masonic Room," where he had passed so many happy hours, surrounded by the portraits of brethren whom he so dearly loved, and by the interesting and suggestive souvenirs of his sixty years of Masonic life.

The M.W. Grand Master announced the purpose of the Communication. He gave a rapid sketch of the chief incidents in the history of our Brother, especially those connected with his Masonic career. He described in appropriate and graceful terms the debt we owe him for firmness and fidelity in time of obloquy and persecution, for aid and support in time of poverty and need. His kindly, modest, and affectionate devotion to the Craft in all its branches, and to all the brethren with whom he came in contact, was set forth in language which happily expressed the thoughts and recollections of those present. The Grand Master summed up this brief but feeling tribute to the memory of our departed Brother by reading the following Sacred Roll, to be placed on perpetual record :—

R.W. BROTHER WILLIAM SUTTON,

Past Senior Grand Warden of the M.W. Grand Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

BORN IN SALEM, MASS., 26TH JULY 1800.

His life was one of busy and varied usefulness,—in every sphere full of honour, frankness, and truth. A patriotic citizen, a gallant soldier, a sincere friend, and a devoted Mason, to whose unselfish labours the Craft is largely indebted.

DIED IN PEABODY, MASS., 18TH APRIL 1882.

He has left behind him the record of a well-spent life, rendered beautiful by genial manners, generous friendliness, and active good works, and his brethren rendered grateful homage to the memory of one who served Masonry so faithfully and so well.

The Grand Officers took their stations around the body, in an adjoining room, which was fragrant with the many floral tributes offered by numerous civil, military, and Masonic organisations with which our friend had been connected. His pastor, the Rev. John William Hudson, conducted a fitting service in the hall above, after which the family and near relatives joined the Masonic circle, and the appropriate portions of our ritual were recited by the Grand Master and the Grand Chaplain, the responses being rendered most beautifully and effectively by the Temple Quartette.

The Grand Chaplain, Rev. Fielder Israel, then delivered the following parting words of affection, sympathy, and sorrow :—

Dear Brethren and Friends,—I will protract these services of commemoration and fraternal love but a moment longer, to repeat the Scripture : "This man, after he had served his generation, by the grace of God, fell on sleep." This is Bro. Sutton's best eulogy. His life of more than fourscore years was spent in doing good. He had a genius for benevolence. Kindness was the law of his life. He was absorbed and controlled by it. In him it was a principle and passion. He lived for others, and pleased not himself. He was a true Mason, "made on the good old plan of truth, obedience, and love." He was exalted to the sublimest degrees because of the fidelity of his conduct and the fulness of his charity.

He was concerned in everything pertaining to human welfare. The best interests of society always found in him an advocate and a supporter. Master and model to the Craft, he studied its principles, understood its purposes, and practised its virtues. He was a cordial, confiding, generous brother, full of love "that believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things." He went in and out among his brethren like one who serveth." In him and by him the ancient word was fulfilled : "A man shall be a hiding-place from the wind, a covert from the tempest, as rivers of water in a dry place, and as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land."

To-day, dear brethren, we have come to fill his grave with our love, to plant the verdure of an everlasting spring upon his new-made sepulchre and then to go our way, to our duty and destiny, full of immortal hope ; so living ——"that Death, come when he may, shall find Us busily engaged in something which Shall cast a blessing on the world, rebound

With one to our own breast, and tend to give
To man some benefit, to God some praise."

At the conclusion of this most touching and impressive service, which brought tears to the eyes of many besides the near relatives, the Grand Officers and the family of the deceased took carriages, and proceeded to the family tomb in Harmony Grove Cemetery. After a brief prayer and benediction by the Grand Chaplain, the mortal remains of our venerated brother were safely deposited in the silent tomb, and, with their hearts filled with sweet remembrance of his virtues, the brethren returned to the place of opening, and the Grand Lodge was closed in ample form at ten minutes past one o'clock p.m.

Messrs. SPOONER & CO.'S ANNUAL EXCURSION.

THE annual excursion of the employés of Messrs. Spooner and Co. and Bro. J. E. Fells (Worshipful Master of the Confidence Lodge, No. 193), wine coopers and bottle merchants, of Laurence Pountney-lane, and Tooley-street, took place recently, Ightham, Kent, being again selected as the scene of the day's festivities. The weather was all that could be desired, and with an excellent programme before them, the men, numbering nearly 150 in all, assembled in high spirits at the Elephant and Castle station at 9.20 a.m., whence they proceeded to Wrotham, the journey down being enlivened with harmony and song. A pleasant walk over the Kentish hillside was enjoyed, the country now appearing in its summer luxuriance, and the hops, in full growth, adding much to the attractiveness of the landscape. On reaching Ightham, the party made at once for the George and Dragon Hotel, where "mine host," Mr. W. Mist, had made ample preparation for their comfort ; a substantial luncheon being laid ready for the visitors, whose appetites had been sharpened by a brisk walk after the railway journey. Luncheon having been discussed, the party adjourned, some to inspect the grand old church of St. Peter, in which are some beautiful monuments of the Selby family, one of which is to the memory of Dame Dorothy Selby, who is believed to have discovered to her husband the Gunpowder Plot, and many memorial brasses to the Moultons and others. There is also a handsome window in the north aisle, facing the east, dedicated to the memory of Demetrius Grevis James, J.P., and of Mary his wife, placed there by "their affectionate children." The Mote also was visited, and other places of interest inspected, whilst the main body of the company repaired to Mr. Mist's field, where a number of athletic and other sports were well contested. At two o'clock dinner was served in a spacious marquee in rear of the hotel, and which had been decorated in such a manner as fairly to entitle it to the appellation applied, of the "little floral hall." Bro. J. E. Fells, the acting partner of the firm, presided, supported by Mr. H. Grose, Mr. A. C. Hartley, Bro. Morris 193, Bro. Diplock, Mr. J. J. Candlish, of Seaham Harbour (son of one of the Prov. Grand Officers of Durham), Mr. Provost, and representatives of several wine firms in the City. The arrangements made by Mr. Mist elicited expressions of unqualified satisfaction, and at the conclusion of an excellent dinner the customary loyal toasts were honoured, followed by Success and Prosperity to the Firm of Messrs. Spooner and Co., coupled with the name of Mr. H. Grose, who referred in felicitous terms to the steady growth of the business that day represented, and its increasing importance in the City of London. He alluded in flattering terms to the excellent management of Bro. J. E. Fells, and expressed the hope that the good understanding subsisting between the various departments of the firm might long continue. Bro. J. E. Fells, in a few happily chosen sentences, responded, extending to all a cordial welcome, and expressing the pleasure it afforded him of meeting them all once more under such very agreeable auspices. This was the twelfth anniversary of their "outing," and seven of these pleasant days had been spent at Ightham, which was their favourite resort. He then spoke of his twenty-six years' connection with the firm, and added a few words of encouragement and advice, especially to the younger members, exhorting them to emulation in all they saw was good and likely to conduce to their happiness and success in life. He bade a hearty welcome to the Visitors, whose health was cordially acknowledged by Bro. W. W. Hughes, of the Victoria Wine Company. Several other toasts were honoured, and later in the evening tea was enjoyed ; and the cool of the evening pleasantly wiled away with singing and a variety of out-door amusements, until the time for the departure of the train for home, when all assembled and returned to town highly satisfied and delighted with the agreeable and admirably-arranged treat which had been provided for them.

BRO. W. W. WOODROW.

THIS week the painful task of recording the death of Bro. Woodrow, Royal Arthur Lodge, 1360, unfortunately devolves upon us. He was, indeed, a worthy working Mason, and therefore an honourable man, and, as such, adorned the Order in the faithful discharge of all the relative duties of life. For upwards of twenty-five years he filled the arduous and responsible position of assistant cashier at Nine Elms Railway Station, Vauxhall, in connection with the London and South Western Company, during which long period, by the assiduity he manifested in discharging the duties of his office, and the frank, genial, and amicable manner of his daily converse, "won golden opinions" from all those with whom he came in contact. Our brother was a guest at the Sphinx Lodge 1329 on the 15th ult., when he was in the enjoyment of health and strength. On his return homeward from that Lodge, however, he caught cold, of which, at first, no particular notice was taken, it being regarded as but of a transitory nature. Quinsy, however, afterwards exhibited itself, and ultimately dropsy supervened, the result being that speedy dissolution ensued. Thus, peacefully and resignedly, passed away from among us, in the prime of life, at the age of forty-four, surrounded by sorrowing relatives and dear friends, the soul of one who has entered into rest; the mortal has put on immortality, and the corruptible incorruption. As a matter of course, inasmuch as Bro. Woodrow was well known in South London, the suddenness of his death caused a gloom among the residents generally, and it was resolved that an expression of respect should be manifested at his burial. On Wednesday, the 16th inst., his remains were interred at Woking Necropolis, in the presence of an unusually large number of brethren, associates, and friends, the Directors of the South Western Railway Company providing a special train for the occasion. In addition to being a member of our Craft, deceased was a Forester and Volunteer. His life had been an active and useful one. "He had not lived for himself, neither did he die for himself"—

> "For the actions of the just, > Smell sweet, and blossom in the dust."

As regards the Volunteer element, the Fifth Surrey Rifles, to which deceased had belonged for several years, were represented by a squad and firing party, whose presence lent a martial and imposing effect to the mournful cortège. Lieutenant Hyde Edwards, and Sergeants Hunt, Warwick, and Nesmyth, and Sergeant Instructor Fisher represented the brother officers and non-commissioned officers of the deceased, whilst among his old associates, with whom he had been united for so many years in unbroken harmony and goodwill, in his official capacity at Nine Elms, were Mr. H. B. Terrill (cashier), Mr. Charles Hagreen (chief accountant), Mr. Richard East, Messrs. Page, Grimsdick, Hornsby, Dobby, Gaiger, Aubler, Ponton, Lambert, Nicholls, G. Dunne, H. Dunne, Wells, Penny, Borwell, Burton, Ransford, Lewis, Jackson, Venables, Doig, Turner, Cousens, Parsons, Hyde, A. W. Wall, Chittenden (senior and junior), Bennett (London and South Western Railway Friendly Society), and Coward. The City receiving offices were represented by Messrs. Fletcher, Mortlock, and Hicks, and, in addition, Mr. Pain, from the Southampton Dock Company. Mr. Glover, Station Master at Woking, and Mr. Reider, of Brookwood, were also present, and last, though by no means least, were Bros. H. Forbes, Lodge 1329, Fletcher Royal Savoy Lodge 1744, and A. Hall 1329. Owing to the fact that no ostentatious display was deemed advisable, and also that many brethren are away from home at this season of the year, the cortège was not so numerous as it would otherwise have been. There were, however, many Masons present whose names we could not ascertain. To the above brethren the task devolved of depositing sprigs of acacia on the coffin, which was placed on a catafalque, preceded by a firing party of the Fifth Surrey Rifles, the pall-bearers being non-commissioned officers of that corps. Following these were the mourners, headed by the bereaved widow—for whom evident sympathy was felt—and a long retinue of friends. On the pall being removed, choice wreaths and emblems wrought in flowers mingled with the acacia on the coffin, which was literally covered therewith. The exceedingly impressive and appropriate service for the dead being ended, three volleys were fired over the grave, and thus ended a solemn ceremony, which will be long remembered by those who were present. We are aware of the fact that a man cannot be a good Mason without being a good man. That is an impossibility, but as regards Bro. Woodrow, his religious principles shone forth in all his actions. Without parade, honour, or ostentation, he was a "living stone" in the earthly temple, and is now within the portals of that unseen temple to which every Mason is directing his eye of faith, and the steps of his daily pilgrimage.

BRO. OCTAVIUS DEAN.

We regret to announce the death of Bro. Octavius Dean, P.M. Humphry Chetham Lodge, 645, Manchester, which took place on 14th August 1882. For some time past Bro. Dean had been suffering from a complication of disorders, which prevented his taking that amount of interest in the Craft he had done in previous years, but his purse was always at the disposal of the Steward who desired his donation. He was respected and beloved by the members of his Lodge, and is sincerely regretted by its Past Masters.

BROTHER WILLIAM PLATT.

This worthy Craftsman, a well known member of several Metropolitan Lodges and Chapters, died on Friday, the 18th inst., at Walham Green, and was interred at Brompton Cemetery on the 24th, in the presence of his sorrowing family and a number of Brethren and Companions of the Lodges and Chapters to which he was attached. The "last sad tribute of respect" was paid to our deceased brother in usual significant manner observed amongst Freemasons.

THE OATH OF OFFICE.

BEFORE being installed as Worshipful Master of a Lodge, a brother elected to that position is required to take a solemn obligation to support and maintain the constitutions, laws and general regulations of the Grand Lodge under which it holds its charter; also the by-laws of the Lodge over which he is elected to preside, and that he will discharge all the duties pertaining to his official position to the best of his ability. The other Officers are also required to join with him in this obligation, so far as pertains to their respective positions. The engagements thus entered into on their part would seem to be sufficiently strong and binding to secure good government in every Masonic Lodge, and strict obedience to Masonic law. The line of duty is plain, and of all men Masons should be the most reliable in the performance of it. We believe they are, and as a rule no code of laws are more faithfully executed than those enacted for the government of Masonic Lodges.

How unfortunate it is that there can be no rule without its exception. Even in Masonry obligations sometimes are not strong enough to control some men. There is occasionally a W.M. who will permit his Lodge to violate a regulation of the Grand Lodge. This is sometimes done through ignorance, which is scarcely less excusable than a wilful violation, for he whose duty it is to execute laws should make it his business to know them. He should always have a copy of the regulations in the Lodge-room for reference, and require all actions to be in accordance with them. Unless he does this he is not discharging the duties of his office to the best of his ability. He disregards his oath of office, and shows himself to be unworthy of the high honour conferred upon him in his election.

In all Masonic bodies in this State, in the several departments of Masonry, a similar obligation is administered to the presiding Officer and his associates in office before their installation, and hence all that we have said applies with equal force to them. It was not the purpose of this article to present individual instances of violations of official obligations, although quite a number of them have come to our knowledge during the term of Officers now presiding. They may have occurred through ignorance (a very poor excuse), and we hope, by calling attention to the fact, that their repetition may be avoided. We would suggest, too, that we are not the proper party to whom complaints should be made. Make them to the proper Grand Officer who has authority to investigate offences, and place on trial any one charged with violating his official obligations. —Masonic Advocate.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—This cooling medicine has the happiest effect when the blood is overheated, and a tendency to inflammatory action is set up in the system. One Pill taken shortly before dinner does away with the indigestion, fullness, and flatulency indicative of a weak stomach or disordered liver. A few Pills taken at bedtime act as alteratives and aperients; they not only relieve the bowels, but regulate every organ connected with them; overcome all acrid humours, and encourage a free supply of all the secretions essential to our well-being. Holloway's Pills thoroughly cleanse and perfectly regulate the circulation, and beget a feeling of comfort in hot climates and high temperatures which is most desirable for the preservation of health.

MASONRY AND ITS RELATIONS TO THE OUTER WORLD.

THE following Oration was delivered at the late Sesqui-Centennial Celebration of the Pennsylvania Grand Lodge, by Bro. Hon. Henry M. Hoyt, Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:—

An organisation which can project itself before a discerning public, confidently, modestly, and effectively, as the Masonic Lodges of Pennsylvania have this day done, will everbear every question of its right to exist, and will safely challenge an analysis of its "reasons for being." This well-ordered display of external power, without blazonry or frivolous trappings, may well lead the student of social science to explore those abiding and essential principles of human nature upon which Masonry in its esoteric philosophy is grounded. No fraternity of such proud, self-respecting citizens as have to-day countermarched upon the streets of this great city could be incorporated, and hold its integrity for generations, if its underlying polity was conceived in any wide or serious departure from the laws of God or of humanity. It were absurd to assume that its motive began and terminated in mere pageants or street parades, consciously strong, dignified and imposing as this one has been. For one hundred and fifty years, at least, this particular guild has gone on with its functions, overseeing and ordering an organism which has to-day, not for the first time, made an exhibit of its power outside the Lodge-room, and this Grand Lodge is only one among many, and you thousands are only part of other tens of thousands. Does any suppose that all this pre-arranged order and adjusted co-operation is the outgrowth of whim, or curiosity or intrigue, and launched upon the public for mere vulgar display? Here is a vast gathering of sedate, judicious, and well-to-do citizens. They come from all callings in life. I hazard little in saying, that seated along these aisles are the foremost of the men who are making modern life what it is, in all its best phases and tendencies. They are not fanatics, nor are they conspirators. They pretend to no inspiration. They affect no supernatural mission. They are simply a body of plain, practical men, intent upon a plain common purpose. Their ministrations lie about the home and threshold of every Brother—nay, of every fellow-being. Fraternity with them is not limited to those who sit in the Lodge-room. They take up the first awful question addressed to the first wrongdoer. "Where is thy brother?" They put it to every exclusive, oppressive, and corrupting person or community. They propose to reverse the melancholy philosophy of the Italian, who thought "that no man in God's wide earth was willing or able to help any other man." They propose to gather up all the glorious examples of their predecessors, and the ennobling tradition of the family of man, and as best they can, illuminated by the best light of natural reason, and in gathered strength and widened experience, fulfil the new and heightened demands of human fellowship. They invade no ecclesiastical domain. They usurp the functions of no sectary or church, or their ministers ordained under other and higher credentials, whose exhortations are to be enforced under higher sanctions. They have no political dilemmas, except the equality of men as children of a common Father, and no theological dogmas, except only the daily prayer and precept that "we may practise out of the Lodge, the principles of religion and morality we are taught within it."

Think you, Brethren, that with your great and extended membership, with your compacted unity, your generous enthusiasm, your indoctrination in right morals, that your influence and impress can be confined within the jurisdiction of the Tylers of your Lodge-rooms? The force generated within the dead walls will be borne out by living men in beneficent streams, well typified by the stream of living men which has flowed through these streets to-day. The "principles of religion and morality" we are taught within the Lodge are not complicated riddles beyond the comprehension and solution of the plainest member.

Under the government of a Supreme Being we find ourselves mortals here, with multiplied rights and duties to each other. The natural man may apprehend and observe these rights and duties. 500 years B.C., Socrates formulated the conclusion upon which the process and the expectation of final success is predicated.

Man has, no doubt, strong self-preserving, self-asserting, and self-advancing instincts, which, if left without counter-action, would lead to isolation, or mutual hostility and ultimate extermination; but these instincts, of isolated individualism are met by stronger instincts of sympathy, love and fellowship, in the ascendancy of which the true humanity of man, as distinguished from tigerhood and spiderhood, consists. The function of reason is the recognition and the realisation of truth. Truth recognised in speculation is science; truth realised in action is a moral life and a well ordered society.

Without insisting upon the antiquity of Freemasonry, I am insisting upon the antiquity of the reasons underlying it, and the identity of its doctrines and its methods with right humanity. There have come streaming down the central ideas of rightness and the maxims of justice which have saved us. In the prehistoric mists of the race, in the earliest types which blind Homer sung, anterior to the first Olympiad, amid the jealousies and struggles and even barbarities of the Grecian chieftains and kings of men before the walls of Troy, we come upon the full apprehension and exercise of the same essential qualities of manhood, whose definition has neither been lost nor essentially enlarged. From that day to this it has continuously included honesty, courage, love of country, loyalty to persons, faithfulness to convictions, respect, fidelity, and love for woman, whether maiden or wife, cherished with tenderness "from the bloom to the ripening of the grape." Among the soundest of ideas got from all this past we may reckon the power of opinion and persuasion as opposed to force; the sense of responsibility in governing men; the hatred of tyranny and all unlimited power; the reconciliation and harmony between the spirit of freedom on the one hand, the spirit of order and reverence on the other, and a practical belief in right as relative and in duty as reciprocal, and that the rights of human nature are unitary.

This body of doctrine which you hold—directed and adapted to no special calling, no sect, no clique, but to all men, energised by organisation, and more or less perfectly developed in the daily life of a picked body of men—selected citizens—must overflow the confines of Masonic temples. These temples become the depositories of moral capital, out of which all drafts made by charity, morality, religion, and even death, may be honoured at sight. They are the enacted law of the Ahiman Rezon—logically grown out of a reasonable legend and supported by a cultus and a ritual which can offend neither the conscience nor the common sense. Therein the helplessness of the individual is supplemented by the power of fellowship. Hopeless would be our condition if we struggled each for himself through the mazes and perplexities of life. In the whirl and attrition of the awful machinery in motion all about us, in the successes and disasters, in the hopes and woes, in the gladness and bitterness which hedge us round about, the individual is an inconsequential unit. Organisation and fellowship rescue him from the unequal conflicts in which single-handed he would go down before the Craft and evil combined against him. They are the scaffolding from which the complete harmonious social structure can be raised.

> "God loves from whole to parts, but human soul
> Must rise from individual to the whole;
> Self-love but serves the virtuous mind to wake,
> As the small pebble stirs the peaceful lake.
> The centre moved, a circle straight succeeds;
> Another still, and still another spreads;
> Friend, parent, neighbour, first it will embrace,
> His country next, and next all human race."

For my part, I fully believe that mankind will finally triumph over the destiny which now seems so grievously to encompass them. They have well held their own. Step by step humanity has climbed nearer the heavens whence we came. Not alone by the maxims current with Agamemnon and Achilles, Socrates and Marcus Aurelius—not, perhaps, unaided from the Empyrean heights, whence Prometheus snatched the sacred fire, and not without enduring some of the tortures with which that vicarious sufferer for his race endured, chained to the rocks of Mount Caucasus—not without the pregnant formula of the Apostle of the Gentiles: "Now abideth faith, hope and charity, these three—but the greatest of these is charity"—not without the external and Divine help of Him who, eighteen centuries ago, spoke the Sermon on the Mount and taught us "the Lord's Prayer."

The chivalry and art and democracy with which the Olympian games glorified the Hellenic race ought not to be anachronism to us. Our contentions are in the arena of ethics and morals. Rewards for victory and achievements now, no less precious than the wreath from the sacred olive tree in Olympia awaits successful competitors. They are for those who can "best work in the best degree." Our beatitudes terminate not upon the individual, but upon the family, the State and the race. We shall yet reap the harvest. "And it shall come to pass in that day I will hear, saith the Lord, I will hear the heavens, and they shall hear the earth, and the earth shall hear the corn, and the wine, and the oil, and they shall hear Jezral."

The monthly meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence was held on Wednesday, at Freemasons' Hall. The three chairs were occupied by Bros. Joshua Nunn, James Brett, and the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford; there was a very large attendance of Grand Officers and other brethren, for the season of the year. The Board of Masters was first held, and the paper of business for Grand Lodge of 6th September was submitted. The Lodge of Benevolence first confirmed grants to the amount of £240 recommended at the July meeting. There were twenty-five cases on the new list. The Lodge sat nearly four hours, in the course of which the brethren deferred two cases, and dismissed one. The remainder were relieved to a total sum of £735, which was composed of one £150, one £100, two £50, one £40, four £30, five £25, two £20, one £15, four £10, and one £5.

A Special Grand Lodge of the Province of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight will be held on Monday evening next, at seven, at the Masonic Hall, Albion-place, Southampton, under the presidency of the Provincial Grand Master, Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P., for the purpose of giving a welcome to those members of the British Association who are Masons, as well as to other visitors to Southampton, on the business of the Association, who are members of the Order. The same kindly Masonic feelings was, it will be remembered, exhibited last year by the Yorkshire brethren when the British Association held its meeting at York.

THE EVENING NEWS ON THE ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I invariably look out for the Masonic column of the Evening News. It contains mostly some interesting items of news, and, generally speaking, the views it expresses are sound. But a paragraph I have just read about the additional grant to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution and other matters has completely staggered me. The writer first of all points out that the anxiety that is felt as to the confirmation of this further grant is needless. But has he already forgotten that Bro. Raynham Stewart's motion was brought forward in the first instance last December, and though it was passed unanimously, and amid loud applause, yet in March, an eminent Brother, Deputy Prov. Grand Master of one of the home counties, a Past Grand Deacon, and a member of the Board of General Purposes, moved the non-confirmation of so much of the December minutes as related to the said motion, and the motion was carried, a Committee of Inquiry into the funds at the disposal of the Board of General Purposes being appointed with a view to ascertaining if Grand Lodge could afford the additional outlay? In June, Bro. Stewart's motion was again submitted, and, it having been shown that the Board had a surplus income of £4,000 per annum, was carried by a small majority, a counter-proposition to give £400 having been first negatived. Now, what happened in March with reference to the December minutes, may—I hope it will not, for the sake of Grand Lodge consistency—happen in September with reference to the June minutes, especially as the attendance at the last Communication, when the rival motions were discussed, was a small one, and the majority for Bro. Stewart's motion only about fifteen. Hence, I think, it is very natural that the supporters of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution should bestir themselves, and that its Secretary should second their efforts.

As to the latter part of the paragraph, so far as I can undertand it, it strikes me as being written in a tone which, to say the least, is the reverse of Masonic. The writer says there is this in favour of the Benevolent Institution, "That the recipients of its bounty did not come into Masonry at a time when it was thought there was something to be got out of Masonry. They joined Masonry, it is true; and, what is as true, they never did anything for Masonry besides belonging to it and working up in it, and the support of the Charities was never part of their practice. Still, they were Masons, and they fell into bad circumstances, and the doctrines of Freemasonry have been carried into effect by placing them on the annuitants' list." But he goes on to say, "With the other Institutions there is a difference. The children who are admitted are the children of younger Masons, who, there is no room left to doubt, in a large proportion had an eye to the future when they joined the ranks, and the great majority of whom never contributed a halfpenny to either of the Institutions. Very few men join Masonry late in life, and so there is no suspicion that the annuitants of the Benevolent Institution saw in the not far distant future an annuity of £40, when they went through the ceremonies of initiation, passing, and raising."

Now, these assertions are far too sweeping in their character. There is reason to believe that many join the Craft for what they can make out of it, but such brethren are the exception, not the rule. Moreover, to my knowledge, very many men of mature age join the Fraternity, and if they, or any of them, have an eye to the main chance, why may they not just as well regard an annuity of £40 as "in the not far distant future," as the election of one of their children to the Boys' or Girls' School? A man of fifty may argue with much reason that to lay out a few pounds per annum for ten years to secure a life annuity of £40, if circumstances should go hard with him, is by no means a bad investment, just as a younger man with a quiver full of olive branches growing up around him may think it profitable to join our ranks in order that when the time comes he may get one or two of them maintained and educated at the expense of the Schools. It unfortunately happens that there is much truth in what the writer to whom I am referring says with so much apparent unction; a glance at the lists of candidates will show this; but, as I have before suggested, his accusation is directed against the whole of the Craft, instead of against an unworthy minority. Lastly, I submit it would be in better taste to make a charge of this sweeping description in the columns of one of the Masonic papers, not in those of an evening contemporary which furnishes only once a week a modest dose of Masonic news.

Fraternally yours,

"Q."

[We quote the paragraph referred to in the above letter in full in another part of our columns.—ED. F.C.]

IS MASONRY REALLY FLOURISHING?

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I quite agree with what you said in your recent article bearing the above title, especially when you remark of the increasing number of applicants for relief from the Fund of Benevolence that "Apart from all other considerations, this is one of the ill effects of a too ready admission of candidates into Freemasonry, of men who fall into arrear, at first with their subscriptions, then lapse altogether into a state of apathy and discontent, and finally fall into the ranks of those who have to ask for charity." It is also unfortunately true that, owing to the number of young Lodges which are springing up in all directions, they find it imperative to beat up for recruits, "in order to keep up the balance in the hands of the Treasurer," though, as you are pleased to add, "in some Lodges we could mention, in spite of an average share of admissions the balance sheet tells a woeful tale of laxity on the part of the members, and a hopeless state of arrears, so far as contributions are concerned." These are great evils and seriously affect the fair fame of Freemasonry. But they are not irremediable. If Lodges will only follow the advice of our late worthy Bro. John Hervey and be cautious in their reception of candidates, they will very soon put an end to the admission of comparatively pauper members, or those whose only care in joining Masonry is to make out of it as much profit as possible. Leaving the Colonial out of the reckoning, there are quite 1300 Lodges in England, and these are fairly well distributed throughout the country. Let greater care be exercised in issuing fresh warrants, which can be absolutely wanted only in very rare cases. Then, and by strictly following Bro. Hervey's advice, we shall hear but little of joining Masonry for profit and living upon its Charity.

I remain,

Faithfully yours,

M.M.

London, 23rd August 1882.

Commenting on this subject, the conductor of the Masonic column in the Evening News writes as follows:—

The FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE has start d a subject of great importance to the Craft, and which it is a pity has not been taken up in print before this. In a leading article last Saturday week the whole matter is succinctly, yet thoroughly, gone into whether Masonry is really flourishing. Admitting the large increase in numbers within the last ten years, it is suggested that numerical strength is not an unmixed good. The unsatisfactory condition of some Lodges is attributed to the large number of their members and the lack of discrimination which some brethren exhibit in introducing gentlemen into the Order. One of the consequences of this is, that many of the newly-introduced have a strong desire to achieve honours in Masonry, and as they cannot do so for several years in their own Lodges, because of the large number, they petition for new Lodges. The writer of the article in question believes that if the progress of Freemasonry had gone on to the present time in the same ratio as it assumed for the seven or eight years prior to 1880 the consequence must have been to cause such a degeneracy of the Craft as would have shorn it of much of its influence and importance. What the writer says also of the ambition of brethren to get honours is perfectly true. Those who seek honours only in Masonry are not the true Masons, but rather those who love it for its own sake, and strive to carry out its principles in practice. There is no doubt that the reason the calls on the Fund of Benevolence are so numerous is that men are admitted into the Order whose position in life never warranted the expenditure of the initiation fee. As mentioned above, the subject is one of great importance, and it is highly satisfactory to know that but few warrants for new Lodges are being granted at the present time by the Grand Master. The granting of warrants does not appear to be fully understood. In former years very few warrants were granted. For instance, in 1849 there were but 8, in 1850 there were 12, in 1851 11, in 1852 11, in 1853 13, in 1854 11, in 1855 15, in 1856 23, in 1857 34, in 1858 32, in 1859 30, in 1860 36, in 1861 45, in 1862 34, in 1863 45, in 1864 48, in 1865 36, in 1866 48, in 1867 59, in 1868 37, in 1869 50, in 1870 46, in 1871 41, in 1872 35, in 1873 55, in 1874 43, in 1875 66, in 1876 68, in 1877 73, in 1878 66, in 1879 54, in 1880 38, and in 1881 56. The increase has really occurred between 1860 and the present time, and not between the Prince of Wales's Grand Mastership in 1875 and the present time, as some have erroneously supposed.

BRO. WILLING'S CHOIR.—The prospectus of this new musical association has just been issued, and from it we gather that, in view of the dissolution of the Sacred Harmonic Society, some members of the chorus determined to resolve themselves into the above Association, under the presidency of the Earl of Lathom and an influential committee, with Bro. Willing (sub-conductor of the late society) as conductor. A series of four subscription concerts is announced to take place in St. James's Hall, at the first of which, on 12th December, will be produced, for the first time in London, Niels Gade's cantata "Psyche" (written for the Birmingham Festival) in conjunction with Handel's "Acis and Galatea." The Princess of Wales has accepted the dedication of "Psyche," and it is expected that Her Royal Highness will be present at this performance. At the remaining concerts, Mendelssohn's "Elijah," Handel's "Messiah," and a Miscellaneous Concert, including a new work, will be given. The orchestra, entirely professional, complete in every department, with Messrs. Carrodus, Doyle, Howell, White, &c., as principals, will together with the chorus (including many of the most efficient members of the late Sacred Harmonic Society) number about 250 performers. The principal vocalists announced include Mesdames Marie Rose, Anna Williams, Mary Davies, Orridge, Rosse, and Patey; Messrs. Edward Lloyd, Vernon Rigby, Joseph Maas, Frederic King, C. Henry, and Lewis Thomas. Exeter Hall has been secured for rehearsals, which will be shortly resumed.

BRO. JAMES STEVENS'S PROPOSED MOTION.

BRO. James Stevens has favoured us with the accompanying memorandum, from which it will be seen that the Pro Grand Master has ruled against his proposed motion on the subject of subdividing the Metropolitan District into Sectional Grand Lodges, possessing the same powers and privileges as those enjoyed by our Provincial Grand Lodges, on the ground that such motion seriously infringes on the prerogative of the Grand Master. Brother Stevens's idea is, as our readers are well aware, that the London brethren are worse off by comparison with those residing in the Provinces, by reason of the fact that Provincial Grand honours are closed against them, and that, considering their numbers and influence, but, above all things, the vast increase in their numerical strength which has been made during the last five-and-twenty years, the apportionment of Grand Lodge honours which is accorded them is less than they are entitled to. We are inclined to think Bro. Stevens has acted injudiciously in pressing forward this motion. We do not question his statement that the London brethren would be mightily pleased if his motion were carried. There are those who think themselves happy when they can tack on to their names sundry initial letters signifying that they are Past Grand Blunderbusses or Past Provincial Grand Directors of the Sun and Moon, with the Milky Way thrown in by way of regulating the centre of gravity. Our own opinion is, that we have already enough of Grand and Provincial Grand titles. Still, legitimate ambition is admirable in its way, and we cannot venture to blame those who feel they will be so much the happier if they can write "Post Meridiem" or "Ante Meridiem" after their names.

Seriously, we hold it to be a most unwise thing on Bro. Stevens's part to question the ruling of the authorities, and especially of one so thoroughly conversant with Craft jurisprudence as the Pro Grand Master. Doubtless, no harm would have resulted either to the prerogative of the Grand Master or the welfare of the London brethren, had the Pro Grand Master ruled that the notice of motion might stand, with a view to the question being discussed in Grand Lodge. Still the laws, both written and unwritten, must be observed, especially by Masons, and as it is, undoubtedly, the prerogative of the Grand Master to nominate representatives of himself in such Provinces and Districts as he may think proper, we suggest, with all deference to Bro. Stevens, that he will benefit the Craft and himself more by letting matters rest as they are, than by taking further steps to promulgate his latest nostrum for the edification and amelioration of the Craft in England.

Extract from a letter received, 24th August, from Grand Secretary.

"The proposed Notice of Motion, &c., was submitted to the Board of Masters at their meeting last evening, when the following communication from the Earl of Carnarvon, &c., was read:—

"Bro. James Stevens's Notice of Motion, dated 25th July 1882, has been duly laid before me by the Grand Secretary, and having carefully considered its purport, I am clearly of opinion that the Motion is one which cannot be placed on the Agenda Paper for Grand Lodge, inasmuch as it might lead to interference with, and encroachment on, the undoubted prerogative of the Grand Master, and with his freedom of action in the performance of the important duties of his high Office as set forth in the Constitutions of the Order,"—and consequently the Chairman of the Board of Masters ruled the Notice of Motion could not be received, &c.

In response to the invitation of the Committe of th R.M.I. for Boys, for designs for the proposed Preparatory School, no less than seventeen sets of plans were submitted, to the following three of which were awarded the premiums offered, of £35, £25, and £15 respectively, namely: 1st premium to Messrs. ## PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF SOUTH WALES, (WESTERN DIVISION.)

LAST week we carried our report of the meeting of this Prov. Grand Lodge to the point at which the Committee were earnestly pressing on the notice of the brethren the necessity there was for supporting the candidature of their protegé, the boy Geoffrey Stuart Jones, who, if he does not secure a place at the election in October will have his name removed from the list on the ground of age.

Digitized by Google

They would, of course, be under the necessity, in order to obtain the end in view, of contracting obligations which would have to be fulfilled at some future election, and this fact would make it apparent that they will have to exhibit the greatest care in adopting new candidates. However, as the voting power of the Province increases, so would their ability to secure for poorer brethren or children of deceased or indigent members a share in the benefits of the Institutions. It followed, therefore, as a corollary, that their power to command this share for them must depend on the amount of support given to the Charity by the Province. Having said this much by way of preface, we continue our narration of the proceedings from the point at which we closed in our last Saturday's issue.

The Report in question was adopted unanimously, and Brother J. Beavan Phillips P. Prov. S.G.W. was re-elected Charity Commissioner for the year ensuing, and W. Bro. Aaron Stone P.M. 671 Assistant Charity Commissioner for the same period. In the absence of Bro. J. Beavan Phillips this compliment was acknowledged by Bro. Stone, who pledged himself and his colleague to renewed efforts for the welfare of the Province. The Prov. Grand Master next formally presented Bro. Edwin Thomas with the Charity jewel, and referred to the energy that brother had displayed—under especially trying circumstances. He congratulated Bro. Thomas on his happy recovery from what at one time was thought to be a most serious and disastrous accident. He trusted he might have health and strength for many years to continue the work he carried on so efficiently. After Bro. Thomas had expressed his acknowledgments, the communication from Grand Secretary as to whether any increase should be made in the quarterages paid to Grand Lodge was discussed; again, however, this met with no support, and we should imagine that by this time Bro. Clabon must see the desirability of withdrawing his proposition for an increase in the payments. In view of the re-arrangement of the Book of Constitutions now pending, Colonel Philipps deemed it advisable that the consideration of any change in the Bye-laws of Prov. Grand Lodge should still further be postponed. Shortly after this the brethren formed in procession, and proceeded to St. Mary's Church, which had been kindly lent for the occasion by Bro. the Rev. J. B. Wrenford. The service was conducted by the Prov. G. Chaplains, the Revs. James Lewis and J. Parkin Morgan, the former brother preaching a most eloquent sermon. At the conclusion a collection was made, and the amount thus realised was devoted to the local charities. The procession was then reformed, and the members re-entered the Masonic Hall, and the other business of the day was completed. The banquet was served at the Castle Hotel; ample accommodation had been provided for those who, according to request, had intimated they should be present. These amounted to between sixty and seventy; but when the guests began to take their seats, it was found that between 110 and 120 desired to refresh the inner man. This necessarily created some confusion, but mine host Bland exerted himself, successfully—we think—under the trying circumstances in which he found himself placed. On the removal of the cloth the Prov. Grand Master gave the Loyal toast the Queen and the Craft, which was done full justice to, the brethren joining in the National Anthem. In speaking to the toast of the M.W. the Grand Master, Col. Lloyd-Philipps remarked that the toast list had been necessarily curtailed on account of the demands that had already been made upon their time; moreover, many of the brethren would speedily have to take their departure. With the toast he would associate the names of the Grand Officers. Bro. T. J. White proposed the next toast. This was an easy and pleasing duty. He felt assured all the brethren of the Province appreciated the energy Col. Lloyd-Philipps displayed for their welfare. In reply Col. Philipps thanked one and all most heartily. He had now been their Provincial Grand Master for over nine years. He had visited in that time, the whole of the nine Lodges which constituted the Province. They had assembled that day for the second time at Haverfordwest, and he anticipated a second peregrination of the Lodges in the Province, if his health permitted, that would be equally pleasant. He might tell them that, as an old adjutant, he knew what was required to make a subaltern of service, and by the same rule he thought he knew the qualities that were requisite to make a good Master of a Lodge. The Prov. Grand Master then alluded to the request that had been made to him on the occasion of their last Provincial Grand Lodge meeting at Neyland, when he was invited to preside at one of the Annual Festivals of our Great Institutions. He gave the proposition serious consideration, and, in consenting, he was actuated but by one motive, that was to sustain the honour of the Western Division of South Wales. He was proud to acknowledge the support his Province had vouchsafed him, and heartily complimented the members on what they had done. He was also much gratified at what had been done in Prov. Grand Lodge that day on behalf of their afflicted brother of St. David's Lodge. He had already referred to the regret which the D.P.G.M. felt at being compelled to be absent, and announced that in addition to the letter he had read, he had just received a telegram from Lord Kensington, wishing them an agreeable meeting. The Visitors was the next toast; all those present received a hearty welcome. Bro. the Rev. C. W. Lukis and others acknowledged the compliment. Bro. Lukis stated that he was a temporary sojourner at Haverfordwest, and was much gratified at having presented himself at their meeting, where he had enjoyed himself immensely. Bro. Morgan also addressed the brethren. He had had the pleasure of attending the meeting last year at Neyland, and had agreeable recollections of having then spent a most enjoyable time. He, in some small degree, felt he had assisted in inducing Colonel Lloyd-Philipps to undertake the duties of Chairman at the Festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, and he thought the result was eminently satisfactory to all concerned. During the last seven years and a half, a period during which what was being done in Freemasonry had come more directly under his notice, he found that the brethren of the Western Division of South Wales had subscribed a total sum of £608 14s to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys; to the sister Institution, the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, they had given about £536, while in the seven years he was referring to the Benevolent Institution had benefited to the tune of £335 10s. In February last, however, when the Provincial Grand Master presided at the Festival of the youngest of our Institutions, he was right loyally supported, and the nine Lodges of the Province subscribed between them, in round figures, £350. It was most gratifying to know the interests of the Central Institutions were so well looked after, and on behalf of Bro. Binckes—who had looked forward with pleasurable anticipations to meeting the brethren that day, but who unfortunately was confined to his bed through severe illness—he thanked the brethren for their vote to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. The other toasts that received attention were the Present and Past Provincial Grand Officers, Colonel Philipps making happy allusion to their duties, and the relative value attached to the several collars. He especially referred to the Stewards, and remarked that in appointing them he was actuated by a desire to have opportunity for still more closely watching their career. After a reply from Brother Russell S.W., the W.M.'s of the other Lodges in the Province were complimented, and special thanks were tendered the brethren of the Cambrian Lodge for the exertions they had made in carrying out the arrangements of the day. "The Masonic Charities," and the zeal of Bro. Edwin Thomas on their behalf, was a theme which was eloquently dwelt upon, and after suitable response had been made, the proceedings were formally closed.

ALLIED MASONIC DEGREES.

A MEETING of the Grand Council was held at the Mitre Hotel, Hampton Court, on Saturday, the 12th August, when there were present Bros. Charles F. Matier D.G.M., Samuel Rawson G. Treas., D. M. Dewar G. Sec., H. Martin Green G.S.D., A. M. Broadley P.G.M. Tunis and Malta, Alfred Williams, Rev. A. W. Hall, C. H. Driver, R. Berridge, T. Cubitt, W. Roebuck, J. L. Mather, Thomas Poore, F. W. Driver, F. W. Ramsay, M.D., John Ramsey, R. L. Loveland, J. Moon, J. E. Anderson, Geo. Mickley, M. Mildred, John Smith, T. O. Harding, G. Lambert, H. C. Lambert, and many other brethren.

The Grand Council was opened by the D.G.M. in ancient form. The minutes of last Grand Council were read, confirmed and signed.

The following report was then read by the Grand Secretary:—Since the constitution of this Grand Council it is gratifying to be able to report that satisfactory progress has been made. The subordinate Councils are as follows:—

|---|---|---|
| The Metropolitan Council | T.I. | London |
| The Escuria Council | ,, | Havant |
| The Matier Council | ,, | Manchester |
| The Ebor Council | ,, | York |
| The Portal Council | No. 1 | Liverpool |
| The St. Cyprian of Carthage Council | ,, 2 | Tunis |
| The St. John and St. Paul Council | ,, 3 | Malta |
| The St. George | ,, 4 | Wigan |
| The Great Orme | ,, 5 | Llandudno |
| The Excelsior | ,, 6 | Calcutta |

There are also Councils at Bolton, Rochdale, and Hull, from which no returns have been received. The number of registered members is 290, of which 100 belong to the Metropolitan Council. In that Council the work has been carried on most energetically, and the various ceremonies performed in the most correct and creditable manner.

The Holy Order of High Priest being so beautiful and so reverential, it is recommended that it should be conferred only on Installed Principals of the Royal Arch Degree, and only once a year, on the occasion of the installation ceremony, or some other suitable day. Considerable expense has been necessarily incurred in the Constitution of the Grand Council for printing Warrants, Certificates, Circulars, and in providing Books and other requisites, but the receipts have been nearly sufficient to meet the outlay.

The Grand Master has much pleasure in re-appointing Bro. C. F. Matier as his Deputy, to whom many thanks are due for his able and energetic services whenever required.

It was resolved, that the report now read be received, adopted and entered on the minutes, and that the recommendation with reference to conferring the Holy Order of High Priest be added to the Constitutions of Grand Council.

The D.P.M. then by command of the Grand Master appointed and invested the following Grand Officers:—

|---|---|
| Bro. Alfred Williams ... ... ... | G. Senior Warden |
| Capt. C. Hunter ... ... ... | G. Junior Warden |

BRO. JAMES MILNOR, GRAND MASTER OF PENNSYLVANIA.

PENNSYLVANIA has had few Grand Masters whose lives were of more varied interest than that of Bro. James Milnor, and the Grand Lodge honoured him above his Brethren by electing him to fill the Oriental Chair for eight successive terms. First elected Grand Master in 1805, he served continuously in the Grand East until 1813, a period longer than that of any Grand Master, since the Grand Lodge ceased to be Provincial, and became independent, in 1786. Bro. Milnor's ability as a man, and zeal as a Freemason, entitle his memory to be held in perpetual respect, and in order that our readers may judge of his high character, Masonic services, and varied achievements, we spread this brief and interesting biographical sketch before them.

Bro. Milnor came of honoured parentage. His father was the friend of both Washington and Franklin, and a Quaker and patriot. During the Revolutionary era, he drove a chaise with an ingenious false bottom, in which he conveyed intelligence, and furnished supplies to the patriot army, and was often suspected therefore, but never detected. His conduct gave great offence to "the heads of meeting," and he was "read out" by the Friends; but a few years prior to his death he became reunited to them, and died in the Society's connection at the age of seventy-three.

Bro. James Milnor was born, raised, and spent the first half of his life in the city of Philadelphia. 20th June 1773 was the date of his birth, and 8th April 1845 that of his death. He received his education at a grammar school in his native city, and afterwards in the University of Pennsylvania, which, however, owing to his father's straitened circumstances, he was compelled to leave before r ceiving his degree. He then commenced the study of law, at the age of sixteen, with Mr. Howell, an eminent Quaker Attorney of Phil delphia. That gentleman dying during the yellow fever scourge of 1793, he completed his studies with Mr. Rawle, and was admitted to the bar in 1794, before he had attained the age of twenty-one years.

The Masonic career of Bro. Milnor began in August 1725, when he was made a Mason in Lodge No. 31, Norristown. In a diary, which he kept for many years, the following record appears of several leading incidents in his Masonic life:—"I was elected Master of Lodge No. 31 while I resided at Norristown; but since my return to Philadelphia I have been a member of No. 3, and am now Treasurer of the latter." "On St. John's day, 27th December 1798, I was elected Senior Grand Warden of the Grand Lodge; and on St. John's Day 1790, was unanimously re-elected to the same office." In 1801 he was elected W.M. of Lodge No. 3, of Philadelphia. In 1805 he was elected R.W. Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, and was re-elected for seven successive terms, filling the station with great credit to himself and honour to the Fraternity. His annual addresses were replete with sound Masonic views. On St. John Baptist's Day, 24th June 1811, as Grand Master, he dedicated the first Masonic Hall erected on Chestnut-street. Thirty-one Lodges and seven hundred and fifty brethren were present; and after the dedication services, a procession of the Craft was made, proceeding to St. John's Lutheran Church, on Race-street, where Grand Master Milnor pronounced a graceful and eloquent oration. At its conclusion, his legal friend, Thomas Bradford jun., playfully remarked to him, "Why, Right Worshipful, you were cut out for a parson." Three years later this prediction was fulfilled.

Bro. Milnor at this period took an active interest in municipal and national affairs. He was a member for a number of years of the Resolute Fire Company, served as a member of both branches of City Councils, and was elected a President of Select Council. Like his father, he was a Friend, and like him, also, he was "read out of meeting." The cause of this was his marrying a lady who was an Episcopalian, and being joined in marriage to her by a clergyman who received therefore a wedding fee. The record of his disownment still exists, and is so curious that we reproduce it:—

"At a monthly meeting of Friends of Philadelphia, held 29th of 11th month 1799, the following testimony was agreed to, and a copy directed to be given to the party, namely:—

"James Milnor, of this city, attorney-at-law, who had a birthright among us, the people called Quakers, disregarding the order of our discipline, has accomplished his marriage with the assistance of a hireling minister, to a woman not professing with us; and in his dress and address deviating from that plainness and moderation consistent with our religious profession; for which deviations he hath been treated with, but without the desired effect. We, therefore, no longer consider him a member of our religious society; nevertheless we desire he may become duly sensible of his errors, and seek to be restored."

A Committee even waited on him to "treat" with him, but he wouldn't treat, and this ended his career as a Friend.

An anecdote of his relation to Bro. Stephen Girard well illustrates the character of both these brethren. Bro. Milnor represented, professionally, a claim against Bro. Girard, which the latter stoutly contested, but at last agreed to submit to arbitration. The result was in favour of Bro. Milnor's client; and when Bro. Girard handed the former a check for the amount awarded, he observed: "You have proved yourself, sir, a lawyer who will never desert a client. If I had not an attorney whom I very much respect, you should be my man."

The political career of Bro. Milnor was no less distinguished than his legal one. In the year 1800 he was elected a member of Common Council, and in 1805 a member of Select Council, in which body he served for five years, and during one year as President. In 1810 he was elected to Congress as a member of the House of Representatives from the city of Philadelphia, were he served with distinction for three years. On his departure for Washington, in 1811, he was accompanied by a number of his political friends as far as the Blue Bell Tavern, on the Chester-road, where they paid him the compliment of a public dinner. One memorable event in his congressional career was the receiving a challenge to fight a duel from Bro. Henry Clay, for words spoken in debate. Bro. Milnor had the courage to decline the challenge in a manly written reply; and years afterwards, when the latter was a Doctor of Divinity, he was invited by Bro. Clay to dine with him; and ever afterwards each cherished for the other the greatest respect.

In the year 1810 Bro. Milnor became impressed with deep religious views, which resulted in his resigning his practice at the bar, and his high political honours, and entering the high Episcopal ministry. He was ordained a deacon by Bishop White in 1814, and in 1815 a presbyter, in St. James' Church, Philadelphia. In 1816 he accepted a call to the rectorship of St. George's Church, New York, which he continued to hold for twenty-nine years, until his death in 1845.

After declining a re-election as Grand Master of Pennsylvania, Bro. Milnor, when ordained a clergyman, was elected Grand Chaplain of the body he had so long ornamented as Grand Master; and he had a beautiful and costly Past Grand Master's jewel voted him by the Grand Lodge, as a token of their fraternal regard.

Bro. Milnor had the honour of having a son, the Rev. William H. Milnor, D.D., who served with distinction as Grand Master of New York in the year 1851; and the latter related the following anecdote of his father during the era of anti-Masonry.

A brother clergyman from the country called to consult him as to the propriety of his withdrawing from the Fraternity. Bro. Milnor inquired if he desired to renounce Freemasonry. He replied, "No, I love Masonry too well." "Then, do as I do," was the rejoinder, "put down your foot firmly, and say, 'I am a Mason, and proud of it,' and if any ask you what Masonry consists in, tell them, 'Love to God and good will to man.'" The brother followed his advice, and continued in the Fraternity, and preserved the esteem of his parishioners.

Upon Bro. Milnor's death, Lodge No. 3 of Philadelphia, of which he was a Past Master and member for so many years, adopted a glowing tribute to his lofty character as a Freemason, a citizen and a divine.

Such was the career of Grand Master Milnor. Pennsylvania has reason to be proud of his long and distinguished services rendered to the Grand Lodge, and of his entire Masonic life, the leading incidents of which we take pleasure in thus spreading before our readers.—Keystone.

We are glad to be in a position to state that Bro. Binckes, who is compelled to absent himself from his duties through illness, is somewhat better, and we sincerely trust that he will be shortly in a position to resume his labours on behalf of "Our Boys."

The Provincial Grand Master of Hants and the Isle of Wight (Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P.) has appointed Tuesday next, the 29th inst., for the constitution of the Hundred of Bosmere Lodge, No. 1958, at the Masonic Hall, Havant, and the installation of the Master designate, Bro. H. Martin Green P.M. The ceremony will begin at 3.30 p.m., and will be succeded by a dinner at the Town Hall, Havant, at 5.30.

Some brethren who are strong supporters of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution feel a great anxiety with respect to a grant of £800 made by Grand Lodge at its last meeting, and in order to secure a confirmation of this grant, are soliciting the members of Grand Lodge to be in their places to support the confirmation next Wednesday week. At the last meeting of the Committee of the Institution, on the 9th instant, the Secretary also reminded the brethren that the grant would come up for confirmation on the 6th of September, and asked the Committee to attend to support it. The anxiety that is felt about this grant is really needless. Grand Lodge does not begrudge the £800, Grand Lodge can afford it, and Grand Lodge is always pleased when it can do anything which will further the ends of Masonry. The confirmation of the grant is a foregone conclusion. The £800 is a very small sum to Grand Lodge, and the Benevolent Institution, to which it is granted, has this to be said in its favour, that the recipients of its bounty did not come into Masonry at a time when it was thought there was something to be got out of Masonry. They joined Masonry, it is true; and what is as true, they never did anything for Masonry besides belonging to it, and working up in it, and the support of the Charities was never part of their practice. Still they were Masons, and they fell into bad circumstances, and the doctrines of Freemasonry have been carried into effect by placing them on the annuitants' list. With the other Institutions there is a difference. The children who are admitted are the children of younger Masons, who, there is no room left for doubt, in a large proportion had an eye to the future when they joined the ranks, and the great majority of whom never contributed a halfpenny to either of the Institutions. Very few men join Masonry late in life, and so there is no suspicion that the annuitants of the Benevolent Institution saw in the not far distant future an annuity of £40 when they went through the ceremonies of initiation, passing, and raising.—Evening News.

HIGH CROSS LODGE, No. 754.

THE installation meeting of this Lodge took place on Wednesday, at the Seven Sisters' Tavern, Page Green, Tottenham. Lodge was opened at four o'clock by the W.M. Bro. James Garrod, who was supported by his Officers and the following Past Masters:—Bros. W. Dance (Treasurer), T. Cunningham (Secretary), J. Wells, H. Stephens, Thos. Jones, J. Linzell, H. Clements, G. Burford, G. Townsend. After the minutes of last meeting had been read and confirmed, the ballot was taken for Mr. James Barnes, who was proposed as a candidate for initiation by Bro. Dance P.M. and seconded by Brother Maller P.M. The result was in favour of the candidate. The report of the Audit Committee was read and adopted, and then the event of the day was brought on. Bro. Clements P.M. introduced Bro. William Martin Tegg the W.M. elect, and Bro. Garrod carried out the ceremony in a most praiseworthy way. On the readmission of the brethren below the rank of Installed Master, Bro. Tegg was saluted and the following were invested as Officers for the ensuing year. Bros. E. J. Lewis S.W., Geo. Rowe J.W., W. Dance P.M. Treasurer, J. Linzell P.M. Secretary, A. G. Fidler S.D., W. S. Cooper J.D., H. Burkin I.G., W. J. Meek M.C., Thos. Jones P.M. Wine Steward, J. L. Lorn Assistant Wine Steward, J. Very Tyler. Bro. Tegg was soon called upon to prove his capacity for office; Mr. Barnes, the candidate for initiation named above, presented himself, and the ceremony of initiation was ably performed by the W.M. Routine work followed. A notice of motion was given by Brother Maller affecting the welfare of the Lodge. This will be considered at the next meeting. Reference to the death of Bro. Smart was next made; he had left a widow and large family unprovided for. Bro. P.M. Maller solicited the co-operation of the brethren in order that one of the six orphan children should be provided for at the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. The W.M. endorsed Bro. P.M. Maller's remarks as to the esteem in which their late Brother Smart was held by the members, and he felt that by a little exertion the necessary support to carry the election of the lad might be secured. Brother Stephens P.M. stated that he had been requested to bring under the notice of the Lodge the impoverished condition of a late member. The fortunes of this brother through illness and other causes, were at very low ebb; he had a family dependent on him, and on their behalf he (Bro. Stephens) brought the case forward. Some discussion followed, as to the merits of the applicant, and reference was made to previous appeals for assistance. Brother Dance P.M. and Treasurer said there was a substantial balance in favour of the Benevolent Fund of the Lodge, and to bring the discussion to an issue he would propose that a sum of £3 be voted. This was seconded by Bro. Garrod I.P.M., and unanimously agreed to. Hearty good wishes were tendered, and the Lodge was closed. A most elegant banquet was supplied by Bro. Oddy, who always exerts himself to promote the comfort of this Lodge. When the cloth had been cleared, the W.M. gave his attention to the toasts, and full honour was done them. Bro. James Garrod proposed the health of the W.M. Bro. Tegg appeared before them in that capacity for the first time that evening. However, he had performed his duties most efficiently; the way he addressed his Officers was eminently satisfactory, and the ceremony of initiation which followed left nothing to be desired. Bro. Tegg had passed through the several offices in the Lodge, and it was anticipated he would perform the duties of the chair in an efficient way. He (Bro. Garrod) had great pleasure in calling on the brethren to honour the toast. After the ever popular duet—"All's Well," by Bros. Stephens and Barford, came the reply of the W.M. He was much gratified at what had been said of him by Bro. Garrod. He had looked forward to the time when he might achieve his present position, and would continue to do his best for the welfare of the Lodge. The health of the Initiates was next brought under notice, and after a song by Bro. Macknev, whose energy is as unflagging as we remember it—well, we will not say how many years ago, came the reply of Bro. Barnes, who hoped he might become a good and an old member amongst them. He was much gratified at what he had seen that evening. The Installing Master was the next toast brought before the meeting. Bro. Garrod had ably sustained the dignity of the Lodge, and well deserved the jewel which the W.M. had now the privilege of placing on his breast. At this stage of the proceedings Bro. R. W. Henev favoured with a musical sketch—The Italian Opera. Herein Bro. Heney's wonderful vocal powers were afforded full scope for development, while his artistic mastery of the pianoforte was heartily applauded. In reply to the toast Brother Garrod remarked that the past year had been a most pleasant one. He had had the honour to initiate several candidates, who he looked upon as likely to prove a credit to the Order. He trusted Bro. Tegg might have an equally successful time of it, and heartily thanked the brethren for the jewel, and for the way in which they had complimented him. The Visitors of whom there were upwards of twenty present, received a hearty welcome, and Bros. Driscoll, Longhurst, Macknev, Brinjes, and Lovering acknowledged the compliment. In speaking to the toast of the Masonic Charities, the W.M. stated he had received a letter from Bro. F. Binckes, regretting his inability to be present. Time was getting short, and with the permission of the brethren, he would associate with the toast the name of Bro. Morgan, as representing the Masonic Press, and doubtless Brother Morgan would offer a few remarks in reference to the Institutions. Brother Morgan, after thanking the Worshipful Master for acknowledging the services rendered by the Press, regretted the absence of the official representatives of the Institutions. Brothers Terry and Hedges were away recruiting themselves. Bro. Binckes—who for the present he might designate the official in charge—was seriously indisposed, and he (Bro. Morgan) feared they could scarcely hope to see "our Hercules" up to his standard point for a time at least. He had seen Bro. Binckes a few days back, and was gratified at being able to state that he found him better than on a visit he had made a week earlier. With respect to the Institutions, the results for the year might be taken as satisfactory. The first Festival, that of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, presided over by Colonel Lloyd-Philipps, Prov. Grand Master South Wales (Western Division), realised about £12,500; His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught did duty for the Girls' School, and was supported by a very large body of Stewards, the amount raised being somewhere about £13,250. The Lord Mayor of London presided at the Festival of the Boys' School, the last of those held, and the result achieved might be considered satisfactory—nearly £12,000 being the outcome of the Stewards' exertions. Bro. Morgan then complimented the brethren of the High Cross Lodge on their zeal in behalf of the Institutions, and felt they might rely on the assistance of Bro. Binckes and the other Secretaries in carrying the election of the lad Smart. He thanked the W.M. for his promised services as Steward for the Girls' School, and felt the interests of their candidate would be well looked after by the Senior Warden Bro. E. J. Lewis, who would act in a similar capacity at the Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys in 1883. The remaining toasts comprised the P.M.'s, the Officers, &c. It was a late hour before the Tyler gave the signal for departure. The following brethren were present as Visitors:—James Hammett 861, C. C. Pearce 1237, P. H. Willson 861, J. Driscoll 30, Hyde Pullen P.G.S.B., J. H. Brinjes 309, E. W. Macknev 134, George Collier 1237, H. A. Bird 1567, W. W. Morgan Sec. 211, C. F. Smith Prince Leopold, T. F. Lee 862, R. Leaman W.M. 1707, R. W. Heney 144, J. Longhurst 138, J. E. Pinder 1707, J. H. Thompson 1471, R. George 1524, T. Wigglesworth 15, W. B. Lovering 1579, G. Perry P.M. 1110, R. Wallington gave the addresses to Master Wardens and brethren, and was complimented and thanked by all present. Bro. Steele, of the Chapter Lodge, No. 1365 was elected a member. Bro. Carr, the energetic Secretary of this Lodge of Instruction, will preside on Tuesday next. Before the Lodge closed Bro. P.M. Wallington rose; he stated that a desire had been expressed by several of the members that Bro. W. W. Morgan should be invited to deliver one of his lectures at this Lodge of Instruction. He had a lively recollection of the visit paid them by Bro. James Stevens, when he gave his lecture on the Masonic Rituals of the First Degree. The brethren had derived great benefit and instruction from Bro. Stevens's visit; he (Bro. Wallington) had not hitherto had an opportunity of listening to Bro. Morgan, but he was informed the lectures he gave were of an instructive and entertaining character. He would avail himself of the opportunity offered by Bro. Morgan's visit to request him to attend on that day fortnight for the purpose, provided his other engagements permitted. Bro. Morgan in response thanked Bro. Wallington, and stated he would attend on the evening mentioned, viz., the 5th of September. Lodge was then closed, and adjourned till Tuesday next.

UNITED G. LODGE AGENDA PAPER.

WE publish elsewhere in our columns the programme of the business to be transcted at the meeting on Wednesday next of our United Grand Lodge. From this it will be seen that notice of motion has been given by Bro. E. T. Budden, P.M. No. 622, to the effect that so much of the minutes of the June Communication as embody Bro. Raynham Stuart's resolution granting an additional £800 to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, namely £300 to the Male and £500 to the Female Fund, be non-confirmed, and that a series of resolutions be adopted instead, by the first of which the addition is reduced to £200, to be paid out of the Fund of General Purposes, so that the annual sum payable to the Male and Female Funds shall be the same, namely, £500. By the second, it is proposed to raise the grants to the Schools from £150 each, as they are now, to £500, and the third lays it down that a Committee be appointed for certain purposes, with which we have nothing to do at present.

The proposal to increase the Schools is by itself unobjectionable. Differences may, and no doubt will, exist as to the amount to which they should be raised, but Bro. Budden cannot be charged with having suggested too large a sum. To his proposition, however, that the minutes relating to the grant to the Benevolent Institution be non-confirmed, and its amount set down at £1,000 instead, we feel it our duty to offer our most strenuous opposition. Our Masonic Parliament, unless it wishes to become the laughing stock of men of intelligence, cannot afford to be guilty of such flagrant inconsistency as Bro. Budden, by his present motion, invites it to commit. It has done so before in the case of Bro. Stevens's Uniformity Resolution, and whatever our opinion may be as to the merits or demerits of Brother Stevens's proposition, it cannot be said that Grand Lodge gained much in reputation by adopting it at one meeting and cancelling it at the next. In this instance, the result will be the more deplorable if Grand Lodge should take a backward step. Bro. Stewart's motion was accepted unanimously when it was brought forward for the first time in December last. In March, at the instance of Bro. Philbrick, Q.C., the resolution was non-confirmed, and a Committee was appointed to inquire into the income of the Fund of General Purposes. In June the Report was delivered, and was to the effect that the annual surplus income was about £4,000, and on the strength of that, Bro. Stewart's motion was again submitted and carried, though in a thin house, by a sufficient majority, over a rival proposition to grant only an additional £400. Thus Grand Lodge on two occasions has committed itself to the policy of increasing the grant to the Benevolent Institution. It has been shown that Grand Lodge can afford the extra £800 out of its surplus income of £4,000, and the only point of difference in June was whether the sum should be £400 or £800, a small but, as we have said, a sufficient majority determining the scale in favour of the latter. Under these circumstances, Grand Lodge will commit an amazing act of stultification, if, after having solemnly accepted Bro. Stewart's motion for the second time, it should now turn round and accept Bro. Budden's idea, which, in its turn, will have to be confirmed in December, before it becomes law. The policy of increase has been acquiesced in universally. It has been shown that Grand Lodge has money and to spare, not only for this additional grant to the Benevolent, but also for further grants, if they should be found necessary, to the Schools as well. Lastly, Bro. Stewart's motion has been twice approved, once unanimuosly, and the second time by a majority. If Bro. Budden has at heart the interests of the English Craft, the wisest course for him to adopt will be to let the motion drop.

GRAND LODGE OF INDIANA.

WE have received copy of the Proceedings of the Sixty-fourth Annual Communication of the Grand Lodge of Indiana, and from it we learn that the meeting was held in the Masonic Hall, Indianopolis, on the 23rd and 24th May, under the presidency of Brother Calvin W. Prather M.W.G.M., there being present to support the following Grand and Past Grand Officers, together with the representatives of 475 Lodges in the jurisdiction, namely:—Bros. Bruce Carr D.G.M., Albert P. Charles S.G.W., Mortimer Nye J.G.W., Charles Fisher G. Treasurer, William H. Smythe G. Secretary, Rev. John K. Pye G. Chaplain, Francis W. Hauss G. Lecturer, Milton L. Humston Grand Marshal, Isaac P. Leyden S.G.D., Frank E. Gavin J.G.D., William M. Black G. Steward and Tyler. Past Grand Officers:—Bros. Thomas R. Austin P.G.M., William Hacker P.G.M., Martin H. Rice P.G.M., Christian Fetta P.G.M., Lucien A. Foote P.G.M., Daniel McDonald P.G.M., Frank S. Devol P.G.M., Andrew J. Hay P.G.M., Robert Van Valzah P.G.M., Bellamy S. Sutton P.G.M., Mahlon D. Manson P.D.G.M., Elijah Newland P.D.G.M.

After the usual preliminaries and the appointment of the different Committees, Bros. W. H. Meffert M.W.G.M. Kentucky, and W. H. Scott M.W.G.M. Illinois, were introduced, and greeted with the honours due to their rank. The Grand Master then delivered his address, in which he dealt at length with the principal events that had transpired during the biennial period then about to close. From this it appears that four new Lodges had been constituted, and eight dispensations granted for new Lodges, while thirteen Lodges had surrendered their charters. The appointment of sundry brethren as representatives of foreign Grand Lodges having been notified, and a tribute of respect paid to the memory of distinguished members of the Fraternity recently deceased, resolutions to refer the address to a Committee were adopted. The Grand Treasurer's Reports showed Receipts, including Balance brought forward, to the extent of 34,371 dollars, and disbursements, of which 12,000 dollars were in respect of "Bonded Debt" amounting to over 24,188 dollars, thus leaving a Balance in hand of, in round figures, 10,182 dollars. These figures concern only the year 1881-2, but for the financial period 1880-2 they are as follow: Balance brought forward 15,202 dollars, Receipts 61,032 dollars—total 76,235 dols. Expenditure 66,053 dols., leaving to Grand Lodge balance to credit, as aforesaid, of 10,132 dollars. It further appears from the same Report that the Debt, which in May 1880 amounted to over 94,333 dollars, had been reduced in May of the current year to 63,000 dollars, a very gratifying achievement, and one for which our Indiana brethren deserve great credit. We learn also that during the same period of two years the Receipts in respect of rents have exceeded the expenses by over 4,651 dollars.

After a brief adjournment Grand Lodge met again in the afternoon, when, among other business transacted, the following were elected Grand Officers for the year, namely,

|---|---|
| Bros. Bruce Carr ... ... ... ... | Grand Master |
| Albert P. Charles ... ... ... | Deputy Grand Master |
| Mortimer Nye... ... ... ... | Senior Grand Warden |
| Isaac P. Leyden ... ... ... | Junior Grand Warden |
| Charles Fisher ... ... ... | Grand Treasurer |
| William H. Smythe ... ... ... | Grand Secretary |

The above were installed the day following, and the rest of the Grand Officers appointed and invested, to wit:—

|---|---|
| Bros. John K Pye ... ... ... ... | Grand Chaplain |
| Willis D. Eagle ... ... ... | Grand Lecturer |
| Thomas B. Long ... ... ... | Grand Marshal |
| Jacob J. Todd ... ... ... | Senior Grand Deacon |
| Francis W. Hauss ... ... ... | Junior Grand Deacon |
| William M. Black ... ... ... | Grand Steward and Tyler |

The Reports of the different Committees having been submitted, and a vote of thanks to the retiring Grand Master having been passed unanimously, the proceedings came to an end. The Appendix contains a complete list of the Grand Officers from the foundation of Grand Lodge in 1818 till the present time, and an interesting report by the Committee on Correspondence.

GRAND LODGE OF IOWA.

THE Thirty-ninth Annual Meeting of the Grand Lodge of Iowa was held at Moor's Opera House, in the City of Des Moines, on Tuesday, the 6th June and two following days. Bro. Van Saun M.W.G.M. presided, and among those who were present were the following Grand and Past Grand Officers, together with a strong array of representatives of foreign Grand Lodges, as well as of the daughter Lodges of the jurisdiction, namely, Bros. William W. Douglass R.M. Grand Senior Warden, Christopher S. Binkley R.W. Grand Junior Warden, Horatio G. Cilley R.W. Grand Treasurer, Theodore S. Parvin R.W. Grand Secretary, Lafayette Young Deputy Grand Master, E. K. Young Grand Chaplain, Newton R. Parvin Dep. Grand Secretary, C. T. Granger Grand Senior Deacon, J. E. Johnston Grand Junior Deacon, Theodore Schreiner Grand Tyler, G. B. Swan Grand Marshal, J. R. Jones Grand Senior Steward, G. W. Wilson Grand Junior Steward, F. W. Dance Grand Pursuivant; and P. Grand Masters Bros. T. S. Parvin, A. R. Cotton, J. R. Hartsock, E. A. Guilbert, John Scott, O. P. Waters, Joseph Chapman, H. W. Rothert, Z. C. Luse, J. W. Wilson, J. N. McClanahan.

Grand Lodge having been opened in ample form with the accustomed ceremonial, Bros. Newton R. Parvin, Willis Davis, and George M. van Leuven jun. were announced as having been appointed, in advance of the session, to serve as a Committee on Credentials, and their report was delivered in the afternoon of Tuesday. Other Committees were then appointed, and the Journal of Proceedings 1881, having been distributed in printed form, was taken as read. The Grand Master then delivered his address, in which he reviewed at considerable length the events of the past year, and congratulated the brethren on the prosperity of the Craft in his jurisdiction, the memory of the late Bro. President Garfield being, as a matter of course, duly honoured. The financial report of the Grand Treasurer showed that the Receipts, including Balance brought forward, amounted, in round figures, to 17,751 dols., while the Expenditure reached 12,321 dollars, leaving a handsome balance to the good of 5,430 dollars. In the evening the work of the first and second degrees was exemplified, and Grand Lodge adjourned.

On Wednesday morning, the Committee on the Grand Master's address was handed in, the majority of his recommendations being cordially endorsed. In the afternoon, the election of Grand Officers was proceeded with, the result being as follows:—

|---|---|
| Bro. George Banta Van Saun ... ... | Grand Master |
| Charles Trumbull Granger ... ... | G. Senior Warden |
| James De Kalb Gamble ... ... | G. Junior Warden |
| Philip Schaller ... ... ... | G. Treasurer |
| Theodore Sutton Parvin ... ... | G. Secretary |

the rest of them being appointed and invested on Thursday, namely:—

|---|---|
| Bro. Crom. Bowen ... ... ... | Grand Master |
| Newton R. Parvin ... ... ... | Deputy Grand Master |
| Emerson K. Young ... ... | Grand Secretary |
| S. Mills Fowler ... ... ... | Senior Grand Deacon |
| M. J. Curtis ... ... ... | Junior Grand Deacon |
| Theodore Schreiner ... ... | Grand Tyler |
| A. T. Drinkle ... ... ... | Grand Marshal |
| O. E. Aldrich ... ... ... | Senior Grand Steward |
| Frank E. Hamilton ... ... | Junior Grand Steward |
| James W. Fletcher ... ... | Grand Sword Bearer |
| Fred. Merck ... ... ... | Grand Pursuivant |

The rest of the business having been transacted, the Communication was brought to a close in the utmost harmony.

From the statistics presented on the occasion it appears there are on the roll of this Grand Lodge as many as 383 Lodges, with a total membership of 19,342, giving an average per Lodge of 53. Only eighteen Lodges sent in no returns in time for the meeting, and of these but four failed to comply with the requirements of the law in this particular. The statistics appended to the Report have been most carefully and elaborately compiled, and the correspondence is most voluminous and interesting. Moreover, there are several illustrations, some in memoriam of deceased Masonic worthies, and others, portraits of those happily still preserved to the Grand Lodge.

One point deserves to be singled out for special notice, namely, that this Grand Lodge passed a resolution authorising the officials to purchase the valuable library of the late Bro. Bower, either in its entirety, or to the extent of so much as might seem desirable, the only condition imposed on the said officials being that under no circumstances should the sum of four thousand dollars be exceeded. Certainly, our Grand Lodge, in the matter, might take a leaf out of the book of the Grand Lodge of Iowa. Here the magnificent sum of £25, equal to 125 dollars American currency, is allowed annually for the purchase of Masonic literature, while in Iowa, a lump sum, thirty-two times as great, is voted in order to secure, if possible,—and we believe it has been secured—one of the best collections of Craft literature which has been ever known. Golden Square has a unique collection, but at Great Queen Street there is a library, and that is about all that can be said.

We take the opportunity of announcing that, in accordance with the promise given, as reported in the notice of last week's meeting of the Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, Bro. W. W. Morgan will give one of his lectures in the said Lodge on Tuesday next, the 5th inst. As the choice was left open to him, Bro. Morgan has resolved on giving the one on the Masonic Institutions, which has already been delivered in more than one Lodge, and has invariably been well received. We trust, therefore, there will be a strong muster of the brethren on the occasion. We will further note, and we do so with a great deal of pleasure, that it was at Bro. Wallington's request that Bro. Morgan was induced to promise this lecture. Bro. Wallington is a most able and assiduous Preceptor; he has been associated for several years past with the Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, and thus has been the means of imparting much sound knowledge of Craft ritual to the younger members of the Fraternity, and his recent action is only one more illustration of the zeal and interest he displays in all that relates to Freemasonry.

We are in a position to state that Bro. Alfred Best, who for the past few years has been lessee of the Freemasons' Tavern, has disposed of the goodwill of the said Tavern to the well-known firm of Messrs. Spiers and Pond, who will take possession on Tuesday next, the 5th inst. Bro. Best, by his energy and attention, has won the respect of the many Lodges and brethren for whom he has catered, and his departure will necessarily be the subject of regret. At the same time, the business could not have passed into better hands than those of the firm which has under its management so many large establishments in the metropolis and elsewhere. We rejoice to say the services of Bro. E. Dawkins will be retained as manager.

CONSECRATION OF A NEW LODGE AT HAVANT.

ON Tuesday afternoon the Provincial Grand Master of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight (Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P.) accompanied by the Very Worshipful the Deputy Provincial Grand Master (Bro. W. Hickman) and several of the Provincial Officers, took part in the Constitution of the Hundred of Bosmere Lodge, No. 1958. The ceremony was performed at the Masonic Hall, Waterloo-road, Havant, the Lodge being close tyled at two o'clock. The following brethren signed the attendance book:—Bros. W. W. B. Beach P.G.M., W. Hickman D.P.G.M., A. J. Miller, J. E. Le Feuvre, J. Ridd Hayman, G. H. Barclay, W. Quickfall, W. H. Jacob, Charles Travess, J. G. Mason, John Laverty, V. S. Freeman, Thomas Francis, W. Miller, George P. Arnold, George S. Lancaster, R. W. Beale, C. F. Matier, William Dart, Captain William H. St. Clair, R.N., James E. Buck, Charles W. A. Jellicoe, Eugene E. Street, James Weeks, J. Harrison, J. W. Willmott, George Bond, Joseph Ogborn, William King, James Lintott, Mark E. Frost, Thomas Page, S. R. Ellis, G. L. Green, Richard Lansmere, J. C. Arlidge, T. D. Askew, F. J. Hunt, R. J. Rastrick, J. W. Biggs, Joseph Exell, W. Blackmore, William Gamon, William Royston Pike, Frederick M. Stringer, Thomas A. Bramsdon, Thomas R. Williams, G. T. Cunningham, W. D. Parkhouse, Silas Dove, H. W. Townsend, and F. Rutland. The founders of the Lodge are Brother H. M. Green, H. R. Trigg, J. Purnell, J. Weeks, J. Harrison, J. Lintott. After the Grand Master had taken the chair and appointed Bros. A. J. Miller and G. S. Lancaster Wardens pro tem, the impressive ceremony was proceeded with, and at the appointed time the Provincial Grand Master, who was heartily greeted by the brethren, addressed them on the nature of the meeting. The interesting occasion, he said, naturally led them to reflect on the importance of the work in which they were engaged, and on the length of time during which it had existed. It was difficult, indeed, to estimate this time. Those who had been students of antiquity could carry back their thoughts a very long period, and of this they might be sure, that whenever knowledge existed and was preserved, in any portion of the world, there Freemasonry existed. They traced back their traditions, and in the most learned nations of the past they had evidence that Freemasonry prevailed. They had many proofs that where building and architecture existed, where it was necessary to arrange men in order and carry out work in a methodical and proper way, there Freemasonry was found. They knew that in many of the great buildings of the past, which were connected with ancient history, and which were the pride and admiration of the world, indications were to be found that Masons were engaged in their construction. As in the past Masons were engaged on those mighty works, so in the present day they did not withhold their interest from the construction of buildings, and though they did not act as operative builders, yet they imparted, in connection with the construction of buildings, those lessons of morality which they desired to communicate to all their votaries. In the history of their own country Masonry could extend its researches back a very great length of time. For at least a thousand years there were records of the meetings of Masons. They had met with more or less encouragement, and also with more or less opposition, but yet Masonry had continued to exist in England, and had become a great fact. Now that its magnitude was so great, and it was increasing on every side, it was indeed necessary for those connected with it to reflect more than ever on the work in which they were engaged. The lessons of morality which were impressed upon them were most important, and no one who took those lessons to heart ought to be unmindful of their teachings. Most of the virtues which could be named were brought to their notice, and they impressed them upon all those who joined their ranks. Of those virtues none was more strongly impressed or more actively practised in Masonry than that of Charity. If they saw that Masons were entirely unmindful of the great lessons which were impressed upon them they would think there was something very far from solid in the construction of their Order. But he thought they could confidently assert that it was otherwise, and that they had ample proof that Masons everywhere strove, as far as they could, to act up to the dictates and in the spirit of the lessons they received. Thus they saw they were engaged in no light work when they tried to extend the sphere of their operations, and to give others an opportunity of becoming members of their Craft. In doing this they were satisfied that they were trying to make them better citizens and better men, more affected to the laws of their country, more loyal subjects of the Queen, still worthier of the religion which they professed than they had hitherto been. They did not try to inculcate the lessons of any particular system of religion, but what they said was that those who joined their ranks and acted up to their principles could not fail to be better men. He hoped that this new Lodge might be productive of great good and assist in propagating those principles which they desired to inculcate, and it was because he believed that this new Lodge would be a force for good in the future that he had great pleasure in acceding to the request that had been made to him, and should now proceed to constitute it into a regular Lodge. The Provincial Grand Registrar (Bro. Hayman), who at the request of the Provincial Grand Master officiated as Chaplain, in the unavoidable absence of Brother the Rev. G. H. De Fraine, then offered the introductory prayer, and subsubsequently read the portion of Scripture selected for the occasion. The ceremony of consecration, dedication, and constitution was then completed in due form, and the P.G.M. installed the W.M. Bro. H. Martin Green P.M., who appointed his Officers as follow:—Bros. J. N. Hillman P.M. S.W., H. R. Trigg P.M. J.W., Aldridge S.D., J. Harrison J.D., J. Purnell Secretary, W. King Treasurer, Lintott I.G., G. Blackmore Tyler. At the conclusion of the ceremony a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to the Provincial Grand Master and his Officers for attending, on the motion of the W.M. of the newly-constituted Lodge, seconded by Bro. Hillman. Subsequently a banquet was served in the Town Hall by Bro. J. Purnell, of the Dolphin Hotel, whose catering was most satisfactory. The chair was occupied by the W.M. Bro. H. Martin Green P.M., who was supported by the Provincial Grand Master and his Craft. After the Queen and the Craft had been duly honoured, the W. Master gave the health of the M.W. Grand Master, referring to the progress which Freemasonry had made under H.R.H.'s rule, as was evidenced by the fact that since 1874, the year in which he became ruler of the Craft, no less than 500 Lodges had been established, or about one-fourth of the whole number of those owing allegiance to the Grand Lodge of England. The Wor. Master next gave in eulogistic terms the health of the Provincial Grand Master, which was received with great cordiality. Bro. Beach, in reply, said he had the honour of ruling over a Province of very extensive dimensions, though, perhaps, in point of members, not to be compared with some in the north of England, and for this reason, however much he might desire to assist all the Lodges, his public duties rendered it impossible to do so. At the same time, he was always pleased to come amongst the brethren whenever his engagements enabled him. Since the year he succeeded to the government of the Province, no less than thirteen Lodges had sprung into existence, or one-third of the entire number; and this was in itself sufficient evidence of the growth which Freemasonry was making in the Province. Throughout the entire country, it was making equally rapid strides, and so long as they remained true to their principles, so long would Freemasonry flourish, and so long would it remain a power for good. They must not abjure these principles for a moment, but zealously and strenuously uphold them through evil and through good report. They must remember that they were not mere ephemeral ideas of the day, but had been handed down to them through distant ages, and they should on this account be very chary of permitting any deviation from the landmarks. They had seen the danger of doing this from a neighbouring country, and they had seen the melancholy result. When they saw how Freemasonry flourished in every other part of the world, and how ready their brethren were to hail them as Masons, it behoved them to be very careful how they altered one jot or tittle of those forms and ceremonies which had been handed down to them, or did anything to disturb the universal bond of brotherhood which existed. He was exceedingly glad to see this new Lodge spring into existence, because he believed that those who had taken it in hand would do their utmost to promote its welfare; and so surely as they selected suitable officers year by year to succeed those who now so worthily filled the chairs, and practised the principles of Freemasonry, so surely would the Lodge continue to flourish. Bro. Triggs P.M., the Senior Warden of the Lodge, proposed the Deputy Provincial Grand Master and Officers of Provincial Grand Lodge. Bro. Hickman, in reply, said that the Grand Officers were one and all deeply interested in the welfare of the Province, and they viewed with a great deal of pleasure the progress which Freemasonry was making. They endeavoured to discharge their various functions to the utmost of their abilities, not only from a sense of duty, but also because they delighted to work under such an able and genial Grand Master as Brother Beach. As an illustration of this he referred to the resumption by Bro. Le Feuvre of the arduous duties of Provincial Grand Secretary. He wished prosperity to the new Lodge, and trusted many Masonic friendships would be formed and cemented within it. Bro. Beach proposed the health of the Worshipful Master, whom he had had the gratification of installing in the chair that day. He was sure he would preside over the Lodge with great ability and courtesy, and that he would consult the best interests of all the brethren in its government. The toast having been received with great enthusiasm, the Worshipful Master, in responding, said it was his earnest desire to discharge the duties of the office efficiently, and if he succeeded in any degree in meriting their approbation, he should feel himself amply rewarded. Other toasts followed. The proceedings were agreeably interspersed with a varied selection of vocal and instrumental music by Bro. F. J. Hunt P.P.G. Organist of Surrey, and Mrs. Hunt, Bros. R. Lansmere and J. Churchill Arlidge, the latter brother s flute obligato to Bishop's "Echo Song," which was sweetly rendered by Mrs. Hunt, being much applauded.—Portsmouth Times.

ORIGIN OF THE ROYAL ARCH, &c.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—About two months ago I learned that a reply to my communication printed 6th May, in your journal, would appear in the Masonic Magazine. It did not, however, appear before July—that number did not reach me before 7th August, and, the most unpleasant part of all, it found me on a sick bed. I was unable to write or even read, and I am yet unable to leave the house. However, I have since then read it, but found in it no reply at all. It neither proved, nor disproved, anything; and, upon my word and honour, it is not worth analysing and showing up its shortcomings, and even its misleadings.

And now for the R.A. ritual mentioned in the Chronicle of 24th of June. The ritual, as I then stated, was sent by the Moderns Grand Chapter of England to Hayti during the first decade of this century; and in 1833 it was copied in New York by Bro. Marconnais. It is in the French language, and P.G.M. Nickerson, now G.S., promised to translate it into English. But after waiting a few weeks, and finding him still overloaded with work appertaining to his office, I began to look out for another translator, and was fortunate in being introduced to Dr. De La Granges, who performed the task without fee or reward. But, "thereby hangs a tale." The said Dr. has made a stir in High Degreedom, and, as the whole subject is still unknown on your side of the big pond, I shall here give the origin and cause of that high degree squabble.

About fifteen or twenty years ago there was a rage here for studying the science of Masonic jurisprudence, and any number of pretenders published books, and set themselves up as professors of that so-called science. At that time our jurisprudence-mongers, without exception, sincerely believed that all the Masonic laws, written and unwritten, have descended from Solomon, Nimrod, and older Masonic worthies, and consequently were Masonic laws all over the world. It has, however, since then been demonstrated that what is Masonic law in America is not, nor ever was, Masonic law anywhere else. The phrase has, therefore, been altered. It is now called "the science of American Masonic jurisprudence." I shall, however, here refer to one branch only of that science, viz., "Masonic jurisdiction." And now for a few specimens of that branch of the science. Thus, a citizen of one State must not be initiated into Masonry in another State. When such a thing occurs, and it does occur sometimes, the Masonic jurists of all the States raise up a great hue and cry against the offending State, as if it had committed a crime of the greatest magnitude. This crime is called "Jurisdictional invasion."

You might, perhaps, suppose that the object of that law was protection of the Fraternity for keeping out wrong materials, because a candidate's character is better known to the brethren of his own State than to those of another State. But nothing of the kind. The top and bottom of the reason is—the dollars. To prove my statement, I will give you a case that happened within my recollection. A young man from Massachusetts, after living two years in California, visited his native village, and during his stay among his old associates and schoolmates, he was initiated, and then returned to California; his first attempt to visit a Californian Lodge exploded a bomb shell. Some indignant letters were received by the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts; a Committee was appointed to mollify California, or to argue some legal points. I do not now remember what the result was, but I know there was a good deal of powder wasted. Now, in this case, no complaint was made against the moral character of the young man. Indeed, it must be conceded that the brethren of and in his native village must have known more about their candidate's character than the Californians could have known about him. But, as already said, it was not the character of the man California cared for, but the dollars. But while these worthy American Masonic jurists invariably fly into a rage when their jurisdictions are invaded, they have not a word to say when Englishmen, Turks, or any countrymen are initiated in their Lodges. It is only a very few years ago when some Turks were initiated in Connecticut, and I have met with any number of Englishmen, employed on the Cunard steam ships, who were initiated in East Boston or in Jersey City. If their law had been designed to keep out suspicious characters, why did they not tell those foreigners—your characters are better known in your own countries than here? &c. But, as already said, character is not the motive, but dollars.

But though the motive and aim of that law is obvious, the fanaticism for the necessity of that law is so ingrained in their minds that some of them were quite astonished at the audacity of the King of Sweden in initiating the Prince of Wales, at Stockholm, and at the temerity of the Grand Lodge of England for not having made an American Masonic fuss about it.

I will now give another illustration of the science with regard to jurisdiction. The law saith a man must be initiated in the nearest Lodge to his residence. Now, as there are some towns and villages which have no Masonic Lodges, a resident of such a town, if he wishes to be initiated, must consult a civil engineer in order to ascertain which Lodge in his surroundings is nearest to the village he resides in. True, this would-be Mason is acquainted with brethren belonging to the Lodge at village A, and is not acquainted with any one belonging to the Lodge at B. Yet if the Lodge at B is a little nearer to his residence than that of A, he must either be proposed in the Lodge at B, or must obtain its sanction to be initiated in the Lodge at A, or not be initiated at all. Should the Lodge at A, however, initiate him without being sanctioned by B, then begins the tug of war. The Lodge at B lays a complaint before the Grand Lodge. The Grand Lodge appoints a committee of jurists; sometimes counsel are hired by the contending parties to attack and defend. The jurists draw up a verbose report, enumerating at great length the opinions of other Masonic jurists, and the thousand and one precedents. This report sometimes recommends to censure the offending Lodge, or suggests some compromise; but in either case the new-made brother cannot again enter a Lodge without being first healed. And here again it is obvious that dollars was the main object of the law.

One more illustration of the science of the jurisdiction law will suffice at present. "No new Lodge can be formed (says the law) without the sanction of the Lodge located at the nearest distance from it." In 1855, there were five Lodges in Boston, all of whom met at the Boston Masonic Temple. A number of young men organised a new Lodge, but neither of the five Lodges would give its consent to it. A Lodge at East Boston, which is separated by a channel from Boston proper, was willing to endorse the brethren's petition. A certain part of Boston, situated just opposite East Boston, was found by measurement to be somewhat nearer than the Boston Temple was from that locality. The whole neighbourhood was covered with nothing but warehouses and storehouses, so the brethren actually made an arrangement to hire a loft in that neighbourhood for holding its Lodge there. When, however, the leaders of the Boston Lodges found they were outwitted by the youngsters, they made a virtue of necessity, and Joseph Warren Lodge was finally consecrated in the Boston Temple. In this case, dollars was also the object of the law. Our American Masonic jurists are evidently protectionists, not only in trade and commerce but in Masonry too.

With such Masonic science it is no wonder that our Grand Lodges are always in hot water with each other, with their own Lodges, and their members too. During the Grand Mastership of the Earl of Zetland the Grand Lodge of England was startled by a long-winded official communication from the Grand Lodge of Maine, the purport of which was that a Lodge in New Brunswick initiated a man who lived a short distance from it on the Maine side of the border. The Earl of Zetland explained the nature of the long document, and told the brethren of the Grand Lodge, if any of them wished to have it read, to make a motion to that effect. But no such motion was offered, and the Maine Grand Lodge learned, probably for the first time, that what is law in Maine is not law in England. A similar hubbub was raised in Missouri not many years ago. A Scotch brother, residing in Missouri, while on a visit to his native place received there the Royal Arch degree; thereupon the Grand Chapter of Missouri charged the Grand Chapter of Scotland with violating its jurisdiction. It is really fortunate for Masons and Masonry that our American Grand Lodges, Grand Chapters, and other kinds of American Grands, own neither armies nor navies; for otherwise there would have been any number of fights, both with outsiders and insiders too. I hope the reader will now be prepared to understand to what length American Masonic jurists would go if the rights of their sacred jurisdictions (for so our Masonic luminaries style it) were invaded. And now I must go back to the anticipated new trouble.

Dr. De La Granges is a native of Spain. Besides his mother tongue he is master of Latin, French, English, &c. In short, he is a linguist and scholar, well versed in science and history,—except Masonic history. He received the Blue Degrees in Spain, in accordance with the Scotch Rite fashion. When he first tried to visit a Boston Lodge he was told that he could not be admitted unless he was initiated in the York Rite. So he paid the usual fee, and was re-initiated. Being by nature ardent, enthusiastic, and impulsive, and money being no object with him, he rushed pell-mell into the Royal Arch, the Council or Cryptic degrees, Templarism, and finally got the thirty-second degree of the Scotch Rite. Our Doctor was very much elated with the high honours he received, and believed himself to have become a veritable Sir Knight, Prince, and very Illustrious. About a year or two since, he made up his mind to re-visit Spain, when he was furnished with letters of high recommendation from our American Sir Knights, Princes, &c. His old friends in Spain were very glad to meet him, and showed their appreciation of his high merit by conferring upon him the thirty-third degree. Upon his return to Boston, previous to entering one of the High Concerns, he appended to his name in a book in the anteroom the mysterious two threes, with the little ring, thus 33°. As soon as this was learned by the Grand Commander, after he entered the grand sanctum, the high degree volcano exploded. The Sovereign Grand Commander lost his temper; he was enraged with the Grand Orient of Spain for invading an American sacred jurisdiction, and was no less enraged with the Doctor for presuming to style himself a 33°. The Doctor tried to defend himself. The Grand Commander would not listen, and ordered him to be silent. But the Doctor's blood was roused, and he would not be silent. The Grand Commander rapped his gavel. But, lo! he might as well have tried to stop the Falls of Niagara with his gavel as to stop the Doctor's talking. The fact is, the faster and louder the one rattled with his gavel, the faster and louder did the other talk. Of course, all this produced an excitement, but many of those present thought it as good as a comedy. Such scenes are not at all uncommon in the history of High Degreedom; but whenever such an event takes placed, it is always denounced as unprecedented. The upshot of all this fracas was the expulsion of the Doctor; he, however, has appealed to the Supreme Council of the Northern Jurisdiction, which will meet in Boston during the next month, when I expect there will be some more jolly fun.

I said before that Bro. De La Granges is a very enthusiastic and ardent Mason, this I discovered at a glance as soon as I entered his room. The walls of his parlours are decorated with about half a dozen elegantly framed pictures, probably bought in France. Each picture contains a group of High Degree Princes, Knights, &c., attired in all kind of fashions, of all ages and nations, scattered all over with swords, belts, symbols, and all kinds of crosses; and as already remarked, my new friend, like most of the new High Degreers I have met with, actually believed himself to be one of the greatest of the Masonic Illustriouses. It did not take me much time to shake his faith in all his illusions.

But however great a sinner Bro. De La Granges may be deemed among the High Degreers, I found him a very obliging man, a perfect gentleman, and enjoyed his conversation on various topics. The scene above described, and other information given, I did not receive from the Doctor. He at once consented to translate the ritual of the R.A., and the R.A. Companionhood ought to be very thankful to the Doctor for what I may call a new R.A. Revelation. The Doctor's copy I presented to Bro. Nickerson, but a copy I took therefrom I sent to the R.W. Bro. Shadwell Clerke, G.S. of England.

I shall only add that those who have access to Bro. Clerke's sanctum, and are willing to devote half an hour to the perusal thereof, will learn more in that half hour about the origin and history of the R.A. than all the Grand Preceptors in your Chapters of Instruction will teach them during their lifetime. Indeed, after perusing it, you may with a good conscience tell the great Preceptors that they don't know anything at all about it.

Respectfully and fraternally yours,

Boston, U.S., 15th August 1882.

THE EVENING NEWS AND FREEMASONRY.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Upon what data the Masonic writer for the Evening News founds his assertion that the confirmation of the minutes, carried in June, is a foregone conclusion, I am at a loss to understand. With the facts before him that the minute of December 1881 relating to the additional grant of £800 to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution was non-confirmed, in order that the Board of General Purposes might have time to ascertain their financial position, or ability to make the grant;—the answer to which very inquiry and the Auditors' verification of it, would in a few minutes have been read out by the Grand Secretary. If, upon one occasion, because members of Grand Lodge are too negligent, or careless, to listen to statements to which they are asked to assent or dissent they are to delay the carrying out of an important item on the agenda paper for six months, some other equally reasonable cause may be found for a further delay of six months. Grand Lodge, as at present constituted, is a great, unwieldy body, without any consistency; and how can it be otherwise? Let us for a moment analyse its component parts. There are in England and the Channel Islands some 1200 Lodges, more or less, under the English Constitution. Now, the W. Master, two Wardens, and all the Past Masters of each and every one of these Lodges is entitled to attend at the Quarterly Communications, and if we take the very low average of three Past Masters for each Lodge, we have the enormous number of 7200 as having a voice, and a right to a vote, personally in the framing of our laws and our government. "In the multitude of councillors there is wisdom;" but I take it, you can have too many, as well as too few. Again, the utmost that can be massed into our legislative Temple is about 700. At one of these meetings a resolution is carried, and at the next it is asked to be confirmed by the same number, but not one-half of whom were present on the previous occasion, and the large majority of the others are unacquainted with the facts of the case, or the reasons adduced which caused the said motion to be carried. The numbers I have previously mentioned are exclusive of the brethren who wear the purple, who may be reckoned at another 400 or 500, and also all the qualified brethren of colonial Lodges under the English Constitution who may be staying in town. Now, while not for a moment doubting that the groundwork for a remedy to this grievous evil—which I venture to suggest—will meet with strenuous opposition by some, as well as warm support by others, it will at all events open the ball and invite discussion, out of which some plan may be shaped which will meet the object I have in view in broaching the subject.

1st. Though not approving of the mode in which Bro. Jas. Stevens has endeavoured to bring about a division of the Metropolitan district, which no one can deny is immeasurably too large, I am still in favour of his principle, and am of opinion that its division into four or more districts would be of great advantage to the Craft in general, besides giving opportunities for those desirous of the honours of the purple and scarlet, and a better chance of attaining them.

2nd. That it should be the duty of every Province at its annual meeting to ballot for and elect a certain number of representatives to attend the Quarterly Communications of G.L. on behalf of their several Lodges.

3rd. That every Province should send up the same number, and not in proportion to its strength, otherwise Provinces such as West Yorkshire, East Lancashire, &c., would have the power of carrying all before them.

4th. The dais should be represented by a certain number appointed by the M.W.G.M., besides the Officers of G.L. necessary to conduct the business thereof.

Thus there would be, including Jersey and Guernsey, forty-two Provinces, or with the proposed four London districts—forty-six in all; add to this the G.L. itself, would make forty-seven; allow ten representatives for each Province, and an extra ten for G.L., and you have the comparatively manageable number of 480, or in round numbers 500, which is more than enough to transact all the business, ordinary and extraordinary, appertaining to Grand Lodge.

As to the other charitable assertions of the Evening News writer, they are not novel, for certain dyspeptic individuals have uttered them before; but they partake of the nature of a novel,—they contain a modicum of fact and a large amount of fiction; of this I shall be pleased to try to convince him and his readers in a future letter.

Yours fraternally,

P.M. 1607.

P.S.—Since writing the above, I have seen the agenda paper for the next meeting of Grand Lodge, and find that so far from the confirmation of Bro. Raynham Stewart's motion being a foregone conclusion, that there is actually a notice of motion, by Bro. E. T. Budden, P.M. 622, St. Cuthberga, to non-confirm that special minute which was carried in June and December last, and substituting another, reducing the extra grant from £800 to £200. I appeal to the brethren to attend on the 6th September, and not let it be said that Grand Lodge does not know its own mind from one quarter to another.

Referring to the remarks in the Evening News (made out of place, I maintain, in a general daily paper), about the recipients of our Charities, the following tables are about correct, and confirm, more nearly than I had hoped, the writer's statements. They are taken from the polling papers of the Old People's election in May last, and the forthcoming ones of the Boys and Girls in October next:—

| | Number of Candidates. | Average Years Subscriptions have been paid. | Contributors to the Institutions. | | |
| Aged Masons | 47 | 21 nearly | 5 | or not quite | 10 per cent. |
| Widows | 63 | 20 1/12 | 6 | or about | 10 per cent. |
| Boys | 62 | 9 | 14 | or nearly | 22 per cent. |
| Girls | 20 | 10 1/2 | 3 | or | 15 per cent. |

Of course there may be some contributors among the foregoing whose light is hid under a bushel, but it is very improbable, for candidates naturally try to make their claims as strong as they can; and what they had done for others in their time of prosperity would surely be one, and that a strong one.

IS MASONRY REALLY FLOURISHING?

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—To this query, recently put in an article in your columns, with an invitation for an expression of opinion, I had hoped some more comprehensive correspondence would have taken place, as certainly the issues raised are worth careful consideration at the hands of all who are anxious for the welfare of the Craft. The tendency of your article, and that also of the recent interesting correspondence in the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE relating to Masonic Mendicancy, is to show the undoubted existence of an undesirable element in the Craft, which, though it might be impossible to eradicate, may, as "M.M." so pertinently observed last week, be guarded against in the future. It is hardly within the province of individual members to suggest even as to the discretion of Grand Lodge in the issue of new warrants, though, as your correspondent points out, the number of Lodges now on the roll should suffice for the reasonable necessities of the Institution for some time to come. We may be perfectly certain that our Grand Officers, much as they may desire to meet the wishes of the brethren who aspire to found new Lodges, are well advised, and carefully weigh the nature of the requests made to them before they accede to the prayer of petitions. On this score, it appears to me they are equally at no option, as are the members of Lodges, in following "the late Bro. Hervey's advice" as to their being "cautious in the reception of candidates." The latter, as one or two of your correspondents rightly remark, cannot fathom the hearts of those who seek to participate with us in the mysteries and privileges of the Order; neither can Grand Lodge at all times gauge the feeling locally prevailing, and which animates brethren in praying for a new warrant. More than one instance might be recorded of men who, being ambitious for office, and not seeing their way clear to the attainment of their desire for perhaps a considerable time, gather around them chosen friends, and privately concoct a design for the establishment of a new Lodge. It is perfectly true such a petition must be supported by a certain number of signatories from the mother Lodge, but are these not sometimes influenced by a personal desire for the advancement of those who are striving after distinction, and in others by an equally urgent wish to rid the Lodge of troublesome and officious malcontents? When a servant leaves your employ, you do not always refuse him a "character," though he may not have been all you could have desired in him. He may have done his work in a manner such as would not justify you in withholding from him the means of obtaining other employment, but still you are "glad he is gone," and you would rather aid than impede his progress by giving him a recommendation. Thus it has been found that in many cases where Lodges have become too strong numerically there have grown up amongst them—from the "infusion of new blood" as we are apt to say—young and enthusiastic men who aspire for, and may be deserving of, office, but who from the very fact of the Lodge being so full see their chances very remote indeed. The consequence is that they hold a tête-à-tête with the view of starting an offshoot of the Mother Lodge, and the Mother Lodge is only too glad to get some of her obstreperous children off her hands. Is not this the true explanation why so many new warrants were applied for, until the "brake" was put on a few years ago? I quite agree with the comments made upon your recent leading article, contained in the Evening News—a paper which is devoting some judicious attention to the affairs of the Craft—that this is "a subject of great importance, and which, it is a pity has not been taken up in print before this." Still, now the matter is broached, it will be well for all of us to consider that "the evils which affect the fair fame of Freemasonry are not irremediable. Let the late Grand Secretary's advice be seriously taken to heart by individual Lodges, and let every care be taken not to admit into them "comparatively pauper members, or those whose only care in joining Masonry is to make out of it as much profit as possible." This sentence of "M.M.'s" may be in some degree construed to mean that affluence should be the only royal road to Masonry; but I am certain he does not wish to convey any such an idea. It is difficult, of course as you have all along pointed out, to dive into the hidden recesses of a man's mental structure, and to prove his intellectual integrity, still, in a majority of cases, those who propose and second candidates should be in some measure acquainted with those whose sponsors they become, and should not willingly introduce to the brethren those who are not, so far as can be, humanly speaking, judged fit and proper persons to become Masons. Hoping to see this matter still further dealt with in your valuable columns,

I remain, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

J.D.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—All who study the interests of the Fraternity will be glad that you have opened up the question above asked, and that other Masonic writers are devoting their attention to a subject of such vital importance to the Craft. For a long time it has been a prevailing opinion amongst Masons that the Order was too rapidly extending its borders, and that, in your own words, merely numerical strength in Freemasonry is not an "unmixed good." Since you have invited an interchange of views upon the matter, may it not be suggested that in many cases more than due influence is exercised in order to induce men to become Masons? I know it is an accepted maxim amongst us that we shall not persuade any one to join the Brotherhood, and indeed the candidate at his initiation avows that he has been impelled to do so of his own "free will and accord," and from a favourable opinion preconceived of the Order. And yet it has been not infrequently known that without stopping seriously to consider whether their status or means are likely to give stability to those who are virtually asked or encouraged to join our ranks, many brethren are only too eager to precipitate the entrance of their friends into Lodges by the implied benefits which they are likely to derive from their connection with Freemasonry? That is a principle which cannot be too rigidly discouraged by those who would rule wisely and well, and who are jealous for the prestige and good government of their Lodges. The old saying no doubt holds good that—

Angels are bright still,
Altho' the brightest have fallen;

and, though many who "pass well" at first have lapsed into the serried ranks of those who reflect no credit upon the Craft, yet the great principles we hold so dear are by no means affected by such declensions. But, on the other side of the question, I am disposed to believe that in a great number of cases men are practically led to seek admission into the Institution by the "improper solicitation of friends." I do not mean to say dishonestly, or with any wilful intention of bringing in unworthy members, but out of an excess of zeal, and a desire to draw into their society those acquaintances whom they may have learned to respect in other walks of life. This is merely a passing opinion, which may fit in with others which your correspondents will suggest in helping to elucidate information on this momentous question.

I am, Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

GAVEL.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—There are so many phases of this question that, in order fully to ventilate it, even a word from so humble an individual as myself may be acceptable. I leave it to older and wiser heads than mine to solve the difficult problem of remedying that which you and your correspondents consider a great and increasing evil to the Craft, namely, the too rapid increase in the number of its members. But there is a case I could mention of a warrant being applied for and obtained by a coterie, who saw no hope of attaining to honours in their own Lodges, and who were assisted by Past Masters who either sought after a second reign, or some Provincial honours. This was prior to the year you mention when a curb was placed upon the "indiscriminate granting of warrants," and the circumstances attending it were, to say the least, not very meritorious. Several brethren were invited by one most anxious to achieve distinction (as is only natural where one has occupied a Warden's chair, but has been passed over by an incoming Master who disbelieves in the strict order by rotation method of advancement) to meet at his private residence, when the "grievances" of those who had hoped for, but did not receive collars, found full vent in sympathetic company. The "leader of the opposition," if I may use the term, lost no opportunity of expatiating upon the "slight" they had received, and urged upon each and all to strive their utmost to obtain a new Lodge. Of course, the leader was to be first Wor. Master, and those who supported him were to be his chosen Officers for the year. On that they all agreed, with wonderful unanimity, and it was furthermore made a condition that promotion should go by strict rotation, that is to say, each Officer should move one "peg" up at the close of each successive year, until all had passed the chair. I never heard the precise modus operandi by which that warrant was obtained, but it was obtained; the Lodge was founded, and in order to make a "good start," several persons were more than persuaded to become members, with the obvious view of obtaining funds by means of the initiation fees. The result has been that at least a dozen of the first initiates have since lapsed, proving that they could not afford, if they had been candid enough to admit it, to pay their initiation fees; and if they are not actually a burden upon the Craft, many, I know, have long since found it impossible to keep up their payments, or discharge their responsibilities to the Lodge. As an almost inevitable consequence of the secret conclave I have shadowed forth, the "plot" leaked out very shortly after the Lodge was founded, and most unpleasant recriminations ensued, which I will not here revive. I believe the Lodge has at last sailed from turbulent waters into a substantial calm; but its early days will be long remembered by those who watched the launch, and knew the circumstances under which it was arranged. I do not see how any blame can be attached to Grand Lodge for granting the warrant; but the responsibility is a grave one that rests upon those who, for the sake of snatching at honours which have been denied them in their own Lodges, were not over scrupulous as to whom they persuaded to join, and afterwards admitted into their Masonic circle.

I remain, Dear Sir and Brother,

Fraternally yours,

A YOUNG MASON.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF CORNWALL.

THE Provincial Grand Lodge of this Province was held on the 29th ult., at the Public Rooms, Truro, under the presidency of the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe Provincial Grand Master. Lodge was formed shortly after ten o'clock, the room being well filled. The Provincial Grand Master at once proceeded to business, which throughout the whole day he conducted in his usual efficient manner. The Secretary, W. Bro. E. D. Anderton, having read the minutes of the preceding Grand Lodge, they were confirmed. The Treasurer W. Bro. William Tweedy presented the balance-sheet, by which the sum of £223 10s 7d was duly accounted for, and a balance of £28 15s 4d was shown on hand. The Secretary reported that the number of brethren in December was 1,522 against 1,551 in December 1880. One new warrant had been issued during the past year, but from unavoidable circumstances the consecration had not yet taken place. It was also right to mention the great obligation of the Province to W. Bro. W. J. Hughan, for the excellent Masonic Directory he had compiled. The balance-sheet and report having been adopted, the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe moved that a cordial vote of thanks be given to W. Bro. W. J. Hughan, for his connection with the Directory. This being carried, W. Bro. Hughan responded in a few suitable words.

The report of the Cornwall Masonic Annuity and Benevolent Fund, the recommendations of the Committee of Relief, the report from Bro. Charles Truscott respecting votes for Masonic Charities, the making grants to the Cornwall Masonic Annuity Fund, and the great Masonic Charities, and the report of the Truro Cathedral Fund Committee, after being duly considered, were accepted or decided upon. The consideration of the Revised Book of Constitutions was then proceeded with. A Committee had been appointed to report thereon, and a printed form of the various matters which had commended themselves to their notice was submitted and circulated. On one or two points a debate arose, but ultimately the whole were arranged to the satisfaction of the Lodge. Bro. W. J. Hughan next proposed some alterations and additions to the Cornwall Masonic Annuity and Benevolent Fund; and these, with one slight alteration, were carried. The brethren now formed in procession and proceeded to the temporary church, erected alongside the Cathedral, where a very eloquent sermon was preached by the Prov. Grand Chaplain, Bro. P. H. Newnham, from 1 Cor. iii. 9. "We are God's fellow-workers . . . . Ye are God's building"—The Rev. Brother said, meeting there as they did that day, in a place which must for ever be connected with the memories of a day unique alike in the annals of their Craft and in the history of religious work in that Province of Cornwall, it was only natural that he should endeavour to connect what he desired to say to them with the associations of that day, and also with that growing work which they saw close by. That work would be viewed very differently by different minds, according to their natural power of appreciating the beautiful in the lines of architecture, and their knowledge of the rules which have governed the ideas of the builder. Where one man will see only a heap of stones and a few pillars and arches rising, another would be able to appreciate the beauty and understand something of the general plan of the work, while a third would be able, by the help of technical knowledge, already to foresee the general appearance of the finished structure. Even so had God built up the religious structure of the world's faith from the earliest days until the present time. The existing system of Freemasonry combined into one many of the earliest religious symbols and rituals by which the spiritual instinct in its earliest infancy sought to embody its faith in one living God, and its hopes of a future immortality. Out of the darkness of the past God had built up the edifice of its present stage of completion. But the grand Cathedral of the world's worship was still like their present building far from complete. And yet hearts that had given themselves to its study could even now foresee the shape its arches would assume, and could give a good guess of the kind of roof that would rest upon them. And, as God had thus built up the religious life and thoughts of the world, so did He build up their individual lives. Every thought, word, deed, accident, coincidence of their lives was a stone, often apparently shapeless and unhewn, but which, worked into form by the chisel of time, was found to fit into its place in building up the plan of their lives. And that plan was, as the first clause of the text affirmed, that they would become "God's fellow-workers" in the scheme of His future building. Freemasonry had fulfilled its destiny in the past in bringing materials for the foundations, and building the crypts of God's destined World Temple. It must now claim its share in completing its own alloted portion of the work. And that it could do by smoothing down social asperities in a way that no other institution was capable of doing, for no other institution could bring together hundreds of men to unite in a common work and share in a common ritual, and yet never jar upon the social, political, ar religious susceptibilities of one of them. So that Freemasons work on still, looking forward to the time that shall come when the "Lost Name" shall be found again by the patient delvers in darkness; when the roof of God's World Temple of Worship shall be placed on its appointed supports; and He that is for ever shall be known no longer by the cold abstractions of Great Architect and Grand Geometrician, but the Father of all shall be revealed in His own true name of Love.

On the return to the Lodge Brother W. J. Hughan proposed that the sermon be printed and inserted in the next Directory. The Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master said he would, as usual, offer a few remarks, which he hoped would be found of some use and service. He then alluded to the great importance of the returns being sent in not later than 31st January, and intimated that he could not, in any case, grant a dispensation for a Masonic procession or any similar exhibition if the object was only display. For purely Masonic ceremonies it might be granted, and only for such a purpose. Having then alluded to a matter which concerned the admission of candidates, and to the Lodge at Wadebridge, which is awaiting consecration, he said his next duty was a most pleasant one, namely, the presentation of a token of respect to Bro. E. T. Carlyon. That worthy brother's genial kindness and worth in Masonry were well known to all in the Province. Some nine years ago they sustained a very heavy loss in Bro. Augustus Smith, and from that time to the present Bro. Carlyon had earned feelings of deep gratitude for his help and service to himself as Provincial Grand Master, and to the whole Province. The presentation consisted of a magnificent silver salver, a P.M.'s jewel, and a heavy gold bracelet for Mrs. Carlyon. On the salver was inscribed:—

"Presented to Edward Trewbody Carlyon, by the Freemasons of Cornwall, as a mark of their sincere regard and grateful recognition of his active exertions in the cause of Masonry, and of his invariable courtesy during the sixteen years he held the office of Provincial Grand Secretary.—1882."

W. Bro. Carlyon responded, saying he had been over twenty-five years a Mason, and had served under three Provincial Grand Masters, one of whom was Sir Charles Lemon, and he was made Prov. Grand Registrar in Sir Charles's reign. Afterwards he served under one whom he might call a personal friend, Bro. Augustus Smith, and he could recall many happy days spent with him at Truro. Of the present Provincial Grand Master it was difficult to speak, he being present, but his kind and courteous manner and the forbearance which his Lordship had always shown, made him respected by them all. It was a feeling of pride, pleasure, and thankfulness that he from the bottom of his heart, cordially accepted this salver. He should value it exceedingly, and he hoped one of his own name would cherish it for many years to come. He was also sure Mrs. Carlyon would accept with pleasure the bracelet, and think the better of Freemasonry for the future. It was with a feeling of deep regret that he retired from office, but in Bro. Anderton he had a good successor who would give satisfaction. The Officers for the Cornwall Annuity and Benevolent Fund were next elected as follow:—W. Bros. W. Tweedy Treasurer, Thomas Chirgwin Secretary, J. C. R. Crewes Assistant Secretary, W. D. Rogers Falmouth, and J. H. Sampson Truro, Auditors.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Nervous Irritability.—No part of the human machine requires more constant supervision than the nervous system—for upon it our health—and even life—depends. These Pills strengthen the nerves, and are the safest general purifiers of the blood. Nausea, headache, giddiness, numbness, and mental apathy yield to them. They dispatch in a summary manner those distressing dyspeptic symptoms, stomachic pains, fulness at the pit of the stomach, abdominal distension, and regulate alike capricious appetites and confined bowels—the commonly accompanying signs of defective or diminished nerve tone. Holloway's Pills are particularly recommended to persons of studious and sedentary habits, who gradually fall into a nervous and irritable state, unless some such restorative be occasionally taken.

ALWAYS ONE VACANT CHAIR.

From the "PROCEEDINGS OF THE GRAND LODGE IOWA.

"There is no fireside, howso'er defended,
But has one vacant chair.
* * * * *
"The air is full of farewells to the dying
And mournings for the dead.
* * * * *
"If thou dost bid thy friend farewell,
But for one night though that farewell may be,
Press thou his hand in thine.
How canst thou tell how far from thee
Fate or caprice may lead his steps
Ere that to-morrow comes?"

The angel of death has repeated his visits oftentimes among us during the past Masonic year, calling hence no less than six Past Grand Officers of this jurisdiction—one of them at the head of the Royal Craft in the great republic, and the "first among his equals" in all good words and kindly deeds; and another aged pilgrim whose trials began during the long, dark crusade inaugurated in the Morgan times, which tried men's souls in that day of sore trial; beside many of lesser note, as useful and deserving in their humbler spheres of life.

The nation, too, and the world, has been called to weep, with our sister jurisdictions, the loss of their "illustrious dead," "falling at their post of duty."

It is seldom we are called upon to pen so sad a page as this must be in our records of the year.

"The year
Has gone. * * *
* * * "In its swift course,
It waved its sceptre o'er the beautiful,
And they are not. It laid its pallid hand
Upon the strong man, and the noble form
Is fallen."

Yet in all this the wise may read a lesson, as in an open book ever in sight, for our instruction. Let the living profit by the noble examples set us in the lives of the departed. They were Christian men, followers of Him who "spake as never man spake," and heeded His words. With them Masonry was a living reality, and they comprehended its mission to make men better in this life, bind them more closely together in the Brotherhood of man, and afford them the means and opportunities for greater usefulness among men. Now that they have "Gone across the dark river,

And into the land of shadows,"

May we so treasure the memory of their good deeds that they may not have lived in vain.

Of those of our own jurisdiction, all save one, the patriarch Gillis, were our associate Officers in the past, going in and out with us before the brethren whom we served. All were our friends, and we prized and valued the friendship of such men; but

"One there was above all others,
Well deserved to be our friend."

The brethren of this jurisdiction, and of all jurisdictions, have long known the friendship which existed between Brother Bower and ourself, and the love that bound us together as brothers. That we may not be thought to mould our words in the form of over-wrought friendship, we quote the language of another, who says: "Brother Bower was faithful in the discharge of every Masonic duty. Nothing was too great for him to undertake, and yet he undertook it with such apparent gentleness, and carried it out with such precision and poise—with such smoothness—that hardly any one realised the overmuch he was attempting and the overwork he was doing. But suddenly the long-strained chord has snapped like brittle glass, and as noble a human life as ever possessed a human body was released from its sufferings. He is gone, but has left us his example of a faithful worker, a good citizen, and an upright Mason."

In his closing address to his brethren, on retiring from office in the Grand Chapter, Brother Bower remarked, "I never like to say farewell, but with a gentle pressure of the hand glide silently away." His prayer was granted, for so he passed away, speaking no farewell word. God took him, and he is not. But his "example of strict integrity, honesty of purpose, and purity of intention through life is worthy of imitation by all of us" who survive him. He has "fallen with his armour on," and gone to receive his reward.

"Ne'er to the mansions where the virtuous rest,
Since their foundation, came a worthier guest;
Nor to the bowers of bliss was e'er conveyed
A nobler spirit or a gentler shade."

Brother Judge James L. Gillis, after a long and eventful life, died at the house of his son, who had been a short period before shot down in his own home by an unknown assassin. This so worked upon the mind of the aged and bereft father that he soon followed the son. He had lived seventy years a just and upright Mason, and eighty-eight as a useful and honoured citizen. A man of remarkable energy, intelligence, and perseverance, he made a good and permanent record in his public and private walk in life. He was a man of dignified and commanding appearance, which prepossessed strangers in his favour, and led them to seek a more intimate acquaintance with him. We met him last at the Grand Conclave in Chicago, in the summer of 1880, he being drawn thither in his old age to meet some whom he had met in his younger years. We remember his interest in the great gathering, and the courtesy shown him by the Sir Knights favoured in meeting him. The attempt upon the life of the President plunged him into the deepest anxiety, without the thought that the taking off of a well-beloved son would be so soon and in the same way.

He had forgotten the world of care and the battle of life which had furrowed his earlier years, and drawn closely around the hearth of his children and grandchildren, and in their loved presence awaited the hour when he should be summoned to meet his beloved partner in the mansions of rest. That hour came suddenly and unheralded. But he had so lived, and was so prepared for the reaper, that we need not ask,

"Can it be truth,
That there is no eloquence in death,
No voice beyond the passing breath,
For thoughtful man?"

Joseph Curtis Knapp, an old, useful, and prominent citizen, died 27th April 1882. He was made a Master Mason during the Annual Communication at Keosauqua, where he lived (almost thirty years, and died) in the year 1855, and was Grand Orator at Iowa City in 1857. He was a leader among leaders at the bar and in politics, a worker in good works, in his town, county, and state, leaving an honourable record for manly devotion to the public interest, a Christian's faith in his Master's service, and devotion to the Fraternity whose welfare he sought to promote. When such men die, the Fraternity, the church, and the world are the losers.

"Shall the clos'd eyes,
Once filled with light, and the pale lips
That spake for oth'rs good and friendship's
Gold'n tie, ne'er wake?"

Brothers Watson Emery Webster Senior Grand Warden in 1878, Norman Chipman Junior Grand Warden in 1853, Horace Tuttle Junior Grand Warden in 1856, and Thomas Mercer Grand Treasurer in 1865, were all past elective Grand Officers and permanent members in the Grand Lodge. But their true merit and worth was not obtained by election, nor did it follow—it preceded; and their election to those high offices was only the public recognition of that merit which recommended them as Office-bearers in the courts of the Temple. Brother Webster, at the time of his death, 8th January 1883, was a member of the General Assembly in session, and died in office, with his "honours thickly blushing on him." He was a devoted Christian, superintendent of his Sabbath School, and an active Mason, conscientiously performing his duty in whatever sphere called to labour. The purity of his private life well qualified him for the discharge of his public duties, and his services as an experienced legislator were properly testified to by the body of which he was a member in the memorial service it held in honour of his memory.

"His work is done—
The fleeting sands of life are spent:
A beautiful smile from heaven sent Plays o'er his brow."

Brother Norman Chipman—Father Chipman, as the boys were accustomed to call him—belonged to a generation of Masons of whom but few are left to recount his services and his worth. We knew him long and well, and a most deserving man he was. In his younger years active and devoted to the cause, he laboured to advance it among men, and in his declining years ever fondly remembered his "first love." Living and dying, in official and private life he set before his brethren an example worthy of imitation. The record of a long and useful life he left as a legacy to his brethren who kindly ministered at his bedside in his last hours of earth. He has "Gone to the land of peace;

Gone where the tempest has no longer sway,
The shadow passeth from the soul away;
The sounds of weeping cease."

Brother Horace Tuttle, immigrating to Iowa at an early day, and lending his services to start and build up Masonic bodies of various grades in Iowa City, then Muscatine, and finally Dubuque, usefully and actively engaged as a citizen and Mason, he raised a family, and leaving a son to carry on his work, he in his declining years returned to the place of his nativity to spend his later years and be gathered home among his kindred in an eastern state (Connecticut). We knew him well as a plain, humble, and unassuming, yet most active and useful, man among men and with his brethren. The memory of his many virtues—we never knew that he had any vices—are treasured in the faithful breasts of his early associates, who always speak of Horace Tuttle as one of nature's noblemen.

"Whoever, amidst the sons
Of reason, valour, liberty, and virtue,
Displays distinguished merit, is a noble
Of Nature's own creating."

Brother Thomas Mercer, coming to Iowa many years ago, took an active part in County affairs, and made himself very useful in the Lodge and Grand Lodge as a ritualist of a superior order. His activity in the Grand Lodge of 1865, at Marshalltown, where he then resided, in his efforts to maintain in its purity from the touch of unholy hands the work he taught, will long be remembered by those present on that occasion. Honest in the discharge of every duty, he was a useful man, in whatever field he laboured. Removing to California, he withdrew his membership from Iowa, and there struggled with faith and hope against fate, and only lately came the tidings of his decease far away, borne on the breeze from the Pacific shore. Few of to-day knew him, but we who did remember him the more kindly, and now that he is gone, exclaim:

"Brother, we mourn for thee
We call upon thee to answer us.
Dost thou hear the call?
Our brother answereth not our call.
Angels ever bright and fair,
Take, O take him to your care."

In Europe, Prince Frederick of the Netherlands, Grand Master of Masons in Holland, died at the age of sixty-five, having served the Craft long and well. He was styled "the Nestor of the House of Orange," whose history and liberty-loving ancestry have become household words through the brilliant pages of Motley, one of our own most celebrated historians. The great ancestor of his house, William the Silent, fell in the midst of his great career by the hand of an assassin, and in this becomes the more endeared to the American people.

Brother and President James Abram Garfield. When the pens of historians, orators, and poets have become silent in praise, how shall we essay to write of this great and national bereavement? The sentiment to the "memory of the dead" is ever drunk in silence. If we speak, then, let us

> "Mournfully, chant mournfully, the requiem for the dead:
> Mourn for our brother fallen, his lofty spirit fled;
> Yet let it not be hopelessly, for the pathway that he trod
> While in life —Our faith is strong—hath led him up to God."

Doctor James M. Austin and Tracy P. Cheever, Grand Secretaries respectively of the Grand Lodges of New York and Massachusetts, died in office, 'mid their active duties and with honours thickly clustering about them. The one had long served the Craft in its most useful field of labour, bringing to his aid a well-trained mind, methodical habits, and a love for his work. These, added to his long experience and service of more than a quarter of a century, made him a prominent figure in the nation as well as in the body of which he was the central object. He was also the Grand Representative of this Grand Lodge near that of his own. The other, while but recently called to his post, was a man of ripened experience, great culture, and superior usefulness in whatever line of duty he laboured. A Mason of prominence at home, he was fast becoming known throughout all jurisdictions as a leader among men. Both have been called to labour on high, removed from the cares and petty vexations ever attending the Secretariat, in which they were bright and shining lights.

Doctor George Stodard Blackie, of Tennessee, a Past Grand Officer and a Mason of great learning and varied attainments. He made his mark as a reporter on correspondence by his learning and zeal, and by his able and courteous discussions of the numerous subjects ever coming in review. He was an educator of men and of youth, in which latter vocation he devoted his active life. Coming from old Scotia's land to young America, he blended in his personal character the good qualities of both people, and lived a useful life and died regretted by the Masonic world of letters.

R. H. Thomas, Librarian of the Grand Lodge of New York, died during the Annual Communication of his Grand Lodge, which called off to attend and conduct the ceremonies of his funeral—an honour well merited. Brother Thomas was one of the most genial men and most interesting correspondents we ever found. He was a very useful and liberal contributor to our stock of Masonic literature. As Master of Kane Lodge, he founded and built up the largest and best Lodge library in the land. As Librarian of the Grand Lodge of New York, he systematised its collections, infused new life into its enterprise, and was about publishing its catalogue, which he had prepared, when death interposed and stopped the work. Brother Thomas was widely known over the land as a collector more liberal and generous in giving than in receiving, and had made a host of warm friends, drawn to him by the chords of love which so thoroughly dwelt in his noble heart. How have the good, as well as the mighty, fallen during the past year, leaving green memories behind on which we may dwell.

Others, too, have departed, of whom we would like to speak, but we must not prolong this list.

Albert Gallatin Mackey, M.D., the Masonic writer par excellence of this and of all ages. The great light among a thousand lesser lights, his character and labours shone forth, and his great and valued services were read and known of all men. Thirty years have passed since first we met our genial Brother (now no more) and Dr. Austin, and then began the warm friendships closed only when death closed them from our sight for ever. They were friends, as well as brothers and co-labourers, and the record they have left behind in good deeds and worthy examples the living will do well to follow. Brother Mackey's labours have been dispersed wherever Masonry is known, and his reputation as a master workman is world-wide. Honoured as a ruler, revered as a teacher, he was beloved as a man. Good, kind, and true in his friendships, his removal leaves an "aching void" in every heart beating to impulses of truthfulness and love.

> "We who survive, and knew him most and best,
> Can truly say, how deeply dear was he > Whom now we sadly mourn."

Though the hand become weary, the heart saddened, and life become dreary, let us all so live and wait

> * * * "Till the angels
> Open wide the mystic gate.
> Let us listen for their footsteps,
> And their voices far away;
> When they call us, we are waiting,
> Only waiting to obey."

The Companions of the North London Chapter of Improvement met on the 31st ult., at the Canonbury Tavern, St. Marys-road, N. Comp. Higgins filled the chair of Z., Speedy H., Pearcy J., John Evans Sheffield S.E., Osborn S.N., Fraser P.S. The ceremony of exaltation was rehearsed, after which the Chapter was closed and adjourned until Thurday evening, the 7th instant.

THE EXETER ALBERT MEMORIAL MUSEUM.

WEDNESDAY was quite a gala day at Exeter on the occasion of laying the foundation-stone of a wing in connection with the Albert Memorial Museum. Those interested in taking part in the ceremony met at noon, at the Guildhall, and marched in procession to the site. Among those present were—The Mayor of Exeter (Mr. T. Andrew), the Sheriff of Exeter (Dr. Henderson), the Mayor of Plymouth (Mr. C. F. Burnard), the Mayor of Devonport (Mr. G. Bolston), the Mayor of Barnstaple (Dr. Harper), the High Sheriff of Devon (Mr. W. H. Halliday), the Right Hon. Earl Devon, the Right Hon. Lord Coleridge, Sir John Phear, Mr. J. Dixon, Mr. S. Bencroft (Town Clerk of Barnstaple, &c.) The Freemasons were represented by Deputy Provincial Grand Master of Devon W. G. Rogers P.M. 39, and a large gathering of members of various Masonic Lodges. Mr. D. Urban, Hon. Sec. of the Extension Committee, explained the object for which they were assembled. He said, although they had not yet sufficient for the completion of the whole undertaking, the necessity of securing the legacy of the late Mr. Kendall, left on condition that the buildings should be erected within five years of his decease, had prompted the Committee to make a commencement with the one wing, which was intended to comprise a library, reading-room, and art gallery, and two other large rooms for the museum, the whole covering an area of the present building. The Rev. P. Williams, the Provincial Grand Chaplain offered up a prayer suitable for the occasion, after which the Mayor of Exeter laid the foundation stone, observing that he did so in the name of the Great Architect of the Universe. He remarked how pleased he was to see such a large and influential gathering, and said that the courtesy of that day would, he was sure, not be the last in the city of Exeter. They would regard the occasion lastingly, and thankfully remember the presence of those distinguished persons who had favoured them with their presence and support. He was also impressed by the large number of his Masonic brethren, who were there to do them honour.

On Saturday afternoon the memorial stone of a new place of worship for the Beith Free Church congregation was laid with Masonic honours by Mr. Cochran-Patrick, M.P. A large representation of Freemasons of Ayrshire took part. The Masons having paraded the principal streets, proceeded to the church, where a large concourse of ladies and gentlemen had assembled to witness the proceedings. Mr. Cochran-Patrick having laid the stone, delivered an interesting address on the history of Freemasonry, and, in conclusion, said: "That largeness of heart which belonged to our original founder has given to Masonry a proud position which is not claimed or is not conceded to any other organisation. We recognise no social distinction or position. We equally welcome within the Order the peer and the peasant, so long as he performs in the state of society in which he has been placed by Providence the duties which are understood to belong to it. We recognise no political distinction. We welcome every man who holds before him the good of his common country, no matter how we may differ as to the means by which that good faith is to be attained; and while we acknowledge one common God, we look to one common futurity, and we know that in that futurity to which we are all bending, for that last Grand Lodge in which all must stand, there will be no room for many of the distinctions which we hope we can see on earth below."—Evening News.

FREEMAN'S CHLORODYNE.

The Original and only true.

HUNDREDS of Medical Practitioners testify to its marvellous efficacy in immediately relieving and rapidly curing Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Neuralgia, Spasms, Colic, Whooping Cough, and all Nerve Pains. It acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. It rapidly relieves pain, from whatever cause, soothes and strengthens the system under exhausting diseases, and gives quiet and refreshing sleep.

Lord Chancellor Selborne, Lord Justice James, Lord Justice Mellish decided in favour of FREEMAN'S ORIGINAL CHLORODYNE, and against Brown and Davenport, compelling them to pay all costs in the suits. See Times of July 28th, 1873. Bottles 1s 1½d, 2s 9d, 4s 6d, 11s, and 20s. Sold by all Chemists.

TESTIMONIALS.—Head Quarter Staff, Cabul, May 31st, 1880. Mr. R. Freeman, Dear Sir,—It is with much pleasure I am able to state that your Chlorodyne has been of special service to me in alleviating the wearisome spasms of Asthma, which is here existent in an aggravated form. Many of my patients now come and beg me to give them that medicine which always relieves them, and which I need hardly say is your Chlorodyne. Yours faithfully, CHARLES W. OWEN, L.R.C.P. Lon., M.R.C.S. Eng., the Divisional Head Quarter Staff and Civil Surgeon, Cabul.

The Times, August 15th, 1877. From our own Correspondent with the Russian Army. Oleum, July 25th, 1877. The want of sanitary arrangements in the Russian Camp was dreadful, and had we remained there a few weeks longer, dysentery and typhoid fever would have played more havoc in our ranks than the bombs of the Turks. I myself acquired an unenviable reputation as a doctor, owing to my being provided with a small bottle of CHLORODYNE, with which I effected miraculous cures.

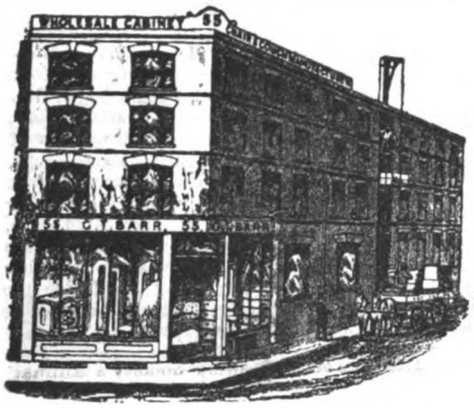
A special musical service has been composed by Brother Broadbridge, the Worshipful Master, for the opening and closing, and for the three ceremonies; it can be obtained at 2s 6d each copy, the profits being devoted to the Masonic Charities. The Worshipful Master gave the Traditional History and the charge, to the satisfaction of the brethren and visitors. A letter was read from Bro. Gibson S.W., who was unable to attend through indisposition. The W.M. and brethren wished him a speedy recovery. The W.M. informed the brethren that Bro. Hawkes P.M. had just lost his son, and it was unanimously resolved that a letter of condolence be sent to him on his sad bereavement.

Eboracum Lodge, No. 1611.—The regular monthly meeting of the above Lodge was held on Monday, 21st ult., the W.M. Bro. G. Simpson in the chair, supported by Bros. J. T. Seller I.P.M., T. B. Whytehead P.M., J. S. Cumberland P.M., J. S. Rymer W.M. 236, J. Kay S.W., M. Millington J.W., and many other officers, brethren, and visitors. The business consisted in the raising of Bro. Waters to the third degree. Notice having been given to Bro. Cumberland of some proposed alterations in the Bye-laws, Bro. Whytehead presented, on behalf of Bro. Stead, of the Lodge, No. 236, a handsomely framed chromo-lithograph of the City of York, lately published by that brother. A hearty vote of thanks was passed to Bro. Stead, and the Secretary was ordered to convey the same by letter. Bro. Cumberland presented a framed copy of Bro. Stevens's Masonic Map of England, and a large framed photograph of a rare engraving of York City. Bro. Pearson Tyler presented an old mezzotint engraving of Bro. Francis Drake, the author and reviver of the ancient G. Lodge in York, in usually good condition. The W.M. read an extended series of notes made by him during a residence in Scotland for some weeks, and relating to Masonry in that country. The notes were of great interest and were intended to describe the difference in the working of the Scotch and English Lodges. The W.M. commented, also, upon the ridiculously low fees and subscriptions, as tending to the introduction of a class of men who were likely to be a burden rather than a strength to the Order. After the close of the Lodge the members assembled at the festive board, when some capital speeches were made, and a most harmonious evening was spent.

Atlingworth Lodge, No. 1821.—The members of the above excellent working Lodge met on the 25th ult., at the Masonic Rooms, Royal Pavilion, Brighton. Bros. G. S. Godfree W.M., Newsome S.W., S. Peters J.W., B. Burfield Secretary, J. B. Hannay S.D., Berry D.C., Anscombe I.G., W. A. Tooth Chaplain, J. Woodhead Organist; also Bros. Chargirs, Fielders, Deane, Hart, Metherette, Williams, and Woodhead. Lodge was opened, and the minutes were confirmed. By the courtesy of the W.M. Bro. V. P. Freeman P.G. Secretary Sussex passed Bro. W. H. Dean to the second degree in a very impressive manner, and also initiated Mr. W. C. Newsome into the Order. Bro. Eborall P.M. P.P.G.P. Sussex gave the charge in the first degree to the candidate very perfectly. The election for W.M. then took place, and Bro. W. Newsome S.W. was unanimously chosen. Bro. G. Smith P.M. was unanimously elected Treasurer, and Bro. Hughes jun. Tyler. The initiation fee was raised from the sum of seven to ten guineas. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to Bro. Daniel's, the Pavilion Hotel, where mine host provided one of those good and substantial suppers for which he is so celebrated. The brethren spent an agreeable hour. The visitors were Bros. V. P. Freeman P.G. Sec. Sussex, G. Smith P.M. 732, E. Broadbridge W.M. 1636, Eborall P.M. 315.

Brixton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1949.—On Tuesday, evening, the 29th ult., at Bro. Monk's, Prince Regent, Dulwich-road, East Brixton. Bro. Phillips W.M. was supported by a fair attendance of brethren. Lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of the previous meeting read and confirmed. The ceremony of initiation was most efficiently rehearsed by the W.M. Lodge was opened in the second degree, and the ceremony of passing rehearsed. Lodge was closed in the second degree. Two new members were elected, and other formal business transacted. Bro. Knight being appointed W.M. for the ensuing week. After hearty good wishes, the Lodge was closed in due form, and adjourned in perfect harmony.



Brighton has ever been considered "the Queen of watering places, and will be, in spite of the rumours that the drainage is imperfect. But, as regards this latter statement, the report of Sir John Bazalgette has clearly proved the contrary, as likewise has the Registrar General's report. There are ample facilities for those who favour the train service, while the road, as of yore, to many offers special attractions. The notice boards "Apartments to be Let" are conspicuous by their absence, while smiling faces of old habitues meet one at every turn.

The Brighton Pier is crowded nightly. The Aquarium is under the supervision of Bro. Alderman Cox, the Chairman, whose efforts are ably seconded by the manager, Mr. Wilkinson. Constant changes and novelties are kept up, and an excellent band plays. A truthful and gigantic map of Egypt is here exhibited, and forms a great attraction. Mrs. Nye Chart's charming little theatre commands good houses, Mr. Charles Kelly's company, with "Far from the Madding Crowd," being the attraction. Hamilton's Panorama, and the Oxford also put forth their claims. In short every kind of attraction is available for the townsfolk and visitors.

A meeting was held at Fasola's, on Tuesday evening, by the Russo-Jewish Committee, for the purpose of making a presentation to Bro. Councillor Wood P.P.G.D. Sussex, Assistant Grand Pursuivant Grand Lodge of England, and Bro. J. R. Taylor, his nephew. Mr. Henriques presided; he called on Bro. J. H. Cohen to present Bro. Wood with a very elegant and artistical address on vellum (the work of Mr. Leggatt). In the course of some eloquent remarks, Bro. Cohen said this movement was promoted and carried out solely by members of the Hebrew faith, notwithstanding the eagerness of the Christian brethren, who wished to co-operate. Bro. Wood, in an eloquent and characteristic speech, acknowledged the handsome testimonial. Bro. Cohen then presented Bro. Taylor with a very elegant silver cigar case, with appropriate inscription, which was also suitably acknowledged. Amongst other speakers were the Rev. A. Jacobs and J. Szapira. An elegant repast followed, over which Bro. J. H. Cohen presided. Several loyal and complimentary toasts were given and responded to. A very agreeable evening was passed.

A Birthday Club is held at Bro. G. Smith's well-known hotel, the Star and Garter. On 29th ult., Bro. Godfree celebrated his natal day. Many of his friends, men eminent in the Craft, were present to wish him, his wife and children long life, health, and prosperity. Among those present were many Past and Present Provincial Officers, P.M.'s, and brethren of the Brunswick, York, St. Cecilia, Southdown, and other Lodges.

IS FREEMASONRY REALLY FLOURISHING?

TO this question, recently asked in our columns, several esteemed correspondents have ventured their opinions, many of which have elicited, as they deserved, a considerable amount of thoughtful respect and attention. Other sections of the Press, too, have, we are glad to observe, caught the spirit of the remarks contained in our first article, and have added to the stock of information adduced upon the point. It is agreeable to find other Masonic writers coinciding with us in many of the points we ventured to put forward on a subject of vital interest to all who are solicitous for the good and welfare of the Order; and our hope is that in the session now rapidly approaching the matter may be made to occupy the place of much of the stereotyped pabulum which serves to engage the attention of the brethren, in Lodge and at the banquet table. The chief points brought out by the correspondence that has appeared in our columns tend, in the first place, to prove that the rapidity with which Masonry had advanced of recent years was of value only as to numerical strength, which, as regards the Craft, is not "an unmixed good." Undoubtedly, if we compare our own with many other "Orders," such as are dubbed "spurious" in ordinary parlance, the cases stand very widely different. To the Oddfellows, the Foresters, and the many other friendly societies which exercise their influence for good in various ways, strength in numbers means to them the unity and stability of their very existence. But in Freemasonry this is not so. In the various friendly benefit societies to which allusion has been made, the larger the roll of financial members the better, because the greater the number who pay into the common fund for the relief of sick and needy members the higher becomes the standard of those "mutual" principles for which they were constituted. Comparisons, according to the old saw, are odious, and in referring to the many benefit and other clubs which have sprung into existence within the last half a century, we do not for a moment speak of them in terms of disparagement; on the contrary, all must admit the vast amount of good they have accomplished in ameliorating the condition of the necessitous and the sick, throughout the length and breadth of the land, in times when they most required the succour of some friendly hand. But what we wished to point out was that the motives which impelled men to join the other societies, and to seek a participation with Freemasonry, were totally and widely distinct. The one enters his club on a mutual principle of self-help, and with the direct and avowed prospect of obtaining for himself and family some assistance in the hour of need, or, as they are fond of putting it, when the "rainy day" comes. In this he comes as an independent claimant for the benefits for which he has directly paid, and which he demands as a right, scorning the very mention of the word "charity." On the other hand, he who seeks to join the Masonic ranks is justified by no principle to anticipate ulterior benefit—as a claim; he is actuated by a desire to make himself more extensively useful to his fellow-creatures. True, he is enjoined by one of the fundamental principles of the Craft, and which is impressed upon his mind in the earliest stages of his Masonic career, that charity is the "distinguishing characteristic of a Freemason's heart," and that he is bound not to disregard his responsibilities in repect of a brother whom he may find in distress. But there is no fund to which he is entitled to come as a right, and to demand the fruits of his "prudence and forethought." What he receives in the period of distress is the free-gift of his brethren, and is to all intents and purposes charity. We think we have said quiet enough on the distinction to be drawn between the only Order we recognise and those others which exert their influence for good in other spheres around us; and, as the various writers have also pointed out, the mere numerical increase of Masonic Lodges is not a matter of supreme moment to those who would see Freemasonry really flourish.

Another phase of the question was the unweildiness of Lodges, which resulted in the lapse of many good men and true, who "did run well," in consequence of so many competitors for the few prizes to be gained, and the overflowing of the surplus membership into "offshoot" Lodges, the motives prompting the formation of which were not always of the purest. There was an expression employed by one of our correspondents last week, of which we have no doubt the experience might be multiplied, when he says:—"There is a case I could mention of a warrant being applied for and obtained by a coterie, who saw no hope of attaining to honours in their own Lodges, and who were assisted by Past Masters who either sought after a second reign, or some Provincial honours." True, as he is careful to observe, "this was prior to the year you mention, when a curb was placed upon the granting of 'indiscriminate' warrants;" but nevertheless that does not take away from the fact that the circumstances attending the affair were, to say the least, "not very meritorious." Several "brethren were invited by one most anxious to achieve distinction (as is only natural where one has occupied a Warden's chair, but has been passed over by an incoming Master who disbelieves in the strict order by rotation method of advancement) to meet at his private residence, when the 'grievances' of those who had hoped for, but did not receive, collars, found full vent in sympathetic company. The 'leader of the opposition' lost no opportunity of expatiating upon the 'slight' they had received, and urged upon each and all to strive their utmost to obtain a new Lodge. Of course, the leader was to be first Wor. Master, and those who supported him were to be his chosen Officers for the year. On that they all agreed, with wonderful unanimity, and it was furthermore made a condition that promotion should go by strict rotation, that is to say, each Officer should move one 'peg' up at the close of each successive year, until he had passed the chair." We believe many of our readers will make a shrewd guess at the Lodge for which the warrant alluded to was obtained, nor need the modus operandi, of which our correspondent is ignorant, be inquired into. When these little exploits are planned they are usually so conceived and carried out that it would be impossible to arrive at the actual moving and propelling power, and it would be equally difficult for Grand Lodge to see the animus locally astir. But in such cases—for the example quoted by a "Young Mason" is not a solitary one—the result is uniformly the same. The writer observes:—"The Lodge was founded, and in order to make a 'good start,' several persons were more than persuaded to become members, with the obvious view of obtaining funds, by means of the initiation fees. The result has been that at least a dozen of the first initiates have since lapsed, proving that they could not afford, if they had been candid enough to admit it, to pay their initiation fees; and if they are not actually a burden on the Craft, many have long since found it impossible to keep up their payments, or discharge their responsibilities to the Lodge. As an almost inevitable consequence of the secret conclave shadowed forth, the 'plot' leaked out very shortly after the Lodge was founded, and most unpleasant recriminations ensued." As a rule, Lodges so formed contrive, after a time, to "sail from turbulent waters into a substantial calm;" but it only goes to show that Lodges become unwieldy by the too promiscuous admission of candidates into the Order, that they may become a source, not only of anxiety, but a positive disadvantage in every sense, and lead to the formation of offshoots under circumstances "not very meritorious."

To carry on the thread of the argument, there can be no doubt that the expression of another correspondent, "Aliquid," contains great force, when, after pointing out that "a society which annually raises over £40,000, in order to provide for the maintenance and education of orphan girls and boys, and to make comfortable the declining years of its aged, indigent members and their widows, is not likely to be at a loss for eulogists," points out the danger that, "in addition to the eulogists and the imitators, it also has a large number of admirers, who, being as it were, a kind of beasts of prey, have no other thought in seeking admission to its ranks than to make profit out of its benevolent propensities." This very fact supports us in the opinion we have all along expressed, that the large accession of mere numerical strength during the past few years has brought with it a very considerable accession of weakness. Sufficient allusion has, perhaps, been made to the numbers of men who are persuaded to become Masons, but who, either through mental incapacity or failing means, lose heart and ultimately find themselves bound to apply for aid to the charitable funds of the Craft. This is proved by the number of candidates at the elections to our respective Institutions, although, for the matter of that, there is scarcely a Charity election of any kind in the country from which deserving candidates are not reluctantly sent empty away. On the other hand, it can hardly be gainsaid that if brethren were more discriminate in the admission of candidates, the secretaries and governors of our Charities, and the dispensers of our Benevolent Fund, would have considerably less anxiety and disappointment than they every year experience in this respect.

Whilst, therefore, we could have desired a larger number of contributions of opinion on the question, we can come to no other conclusion than that Freemasonry is really flourishing, in spite of the many contingencies that have been alluded to. The vast influence for good which the Order exerts is admitted, on all hands, by those even who do not come within our ranks; and that it will continue to do so is a matter beyond all question. The judicious restriction within the last two or three years in the granting of new warrants has, we believe, infused into most Lodges a wholesome respect for the trust they are privileged to hold, and a greater care in the admission of candidates for the mysteries. The exposure, also, of some of the systems of trading upon Masonry, which were fast growing into a serious evil, has had the effect of curbing the recklessness and effrontery of many who were succeeding in making capital out of the Craft; and the comments which have from time to time appeared on the mendacious operations of a section of those "drones" who would live upon the benevolence of the unwisely large-hearted, has brought that problem within measurable distance of solution. It is by the free and dispassionate discussion of these subjects that the status of the Craft will be improved and strengthened, some of its objectionable features obliterated, and the real prosperity of our glorious Institution safeguarded and enlarged in future years.

QUARTERLY COMMUNICATION OF UNITED GRAND LODGE.

ALTHOUGH there was not a very large attendance at Grand Lodge on Wednesday (as is usually the case at this season of the year), yet the proceedings were diversified by several questions which will be studied attentively by the Craft. In the first place, Bro. James Stevens, who, it will be recollected, advocated at the June meeting the subdivision of the London District into a number of District Grand Lodges, rose immediately after the confirmation of the minutes, for the purpose of raising a question of order and privilege, consequent upon his notice being refused a place upon the agenda paper. It was, however, soon made clear by the Provincial Grand Master for Surrey, Bro. General Brownrigg, who occupied the Throne, that the whole matter had been made perfectly clear, and he substantiated the ruling of the Earl of Carnarvon that the motion would be an interference with, and encroachment upon, the undoubted prerogative of the Grand Master, and therefore that no further discussion upon it was advisable. It is perfectly evident that the Grand Master is supremely competent to take his own course, without receiving suggestions from any one, or any interference with his prerogative. Bro. Stevens at once gracefully accepted this decision, and we are very pleased he did so, for though sometimes impetuous he may be, we are certain he has no desire other than for the good of Grand Lodge, least of all to militate against its interests, or encroach upon the prerogative of the Grand Master. With respect to Bro. Perceval's question, as to giving more time to the revision of the Book of Constitutions, it was evident that it was a matter that the Craft at large did not feel they were in a position to take upon themselves. There will be, of course, those who are always ready to advocate alterations in the form of our constitutional laws, but whose suggestions are not of much practical utility, or such as would be readily accepted. Moreover, it should be borne in mind that a competent Board has been appointed to carry out what was stated in the report to be a "laborious work," and it is only natural that that body should have an opportunity of completing their arduous task, with which they have already made substantial progress. Upon this point Bro. Thomas Fenn answered, as we think, most sensibly, that the Board had no desire to hurry the matter, although it had been a long time before them. The only reason he could assign for their proceeding so rapidly as they had done was about the best that could be given, namely, that the old edition had "run out." The whole matter would be thoroughly thrashed out in debate, and a special meeting of Grand Lodge would be convened to consider it. Apropos of this matter, we may refer our readers to some cogent remarks that fell from Bro. Lord Tenterden at the Prov. Grand Lodge of Essex (vide pp 99 of our current Volume), in which he said, with respect to the proposed amendment in the Constitutions of the Order, "on the principle that too many cooks would spoil the broth," he had suggested to Bro. Philbrick, who is a member of the Revision Committee, that he should prepare a résumé of the proposed alterations. His Lordship paid a tribute of deserved praise to Bro. Philbrick for his compliance with this request, for the guidance and information of the brethren. Bro. Philbrick set forth that the whole of the laws had been collated and re-arranged, giving the rules under their proper heads, and in consecutive order. The discrepancies in the wording of Laws dealing with the same subject had been altered, so as to make one uniform language run through the whole book. The alterations, other than those merely verbal or necessary for the sake of clearness, had been studiously kept to the smallest number, and were classified thus:—Expansions of the existing Laws where the present wording wanted explanation to make the meaning clearer; or the statement of the Laws, which have long obtained practice are universally acted on, it being deemed desirable to express plainly on the face of the Book of Constitutions the construction and interpretation which have been accepted for years. It was thus pointed out that no new law or rule, and no alteration of substance, was involved, and the introduction of new rules had been avoided, as far as could be. Bro. Philbrick added:—"The principal new matter will be found in the regulations as to the official conduct of the records of private Lodges and their returns to Grand Lodge; in the increased fees for Warrants for new Lodges, which the present position of the Craft, as contrasted with 1813, when the table now in force was adopted, is thought to justify; in bettering the status of serving brethren in certain cases; in extending the powers of the appeal to all cases; and in making due provision for the business to be brought before the Grand Lodge." In conclusion he said it was believed that the rules as now framed were of a clear nature, explaining themselves, and such as the Craft were fully enabled to form its judgment upon, when attention had been directed to them. Great pains had been taken to adhere to the frame and substance of Masonry as contained in the ancient landmarks of the Order. All this was so far satisfactory, and really when a man of Bro. Philbrick's position goes out of his way to give his experienced opinion, and that opinion is not gainsaid by any one else, the remarks of Lord Tenterden as to the superabundance of "cooks" was not without justice or significance. No member of the Craft has yet, to our knowledge, put forward anything different to what has been decided by the Board, and it can hardly be said that the brethren had not been able to consider the alterations fully, as they could only be seen at Freemasons' Hall, or in the hands of the Provincial Grand Secretaries. At all events, copies can be inspected at any time at Freemasons' Hall and the Prov. G. Secretary's offices, and there every facility is given for inspection by those who desire to make themselves acquainted with the matter. Bro. Fenn was justified in pointing out that the new edition should be produced as soon as possible; and, seeing that the old edition is exhausted, and that the brethren may suffer serious inconvenience by not being able to obtain copies, it would not be a great deal for so wealthy a body as Grand Lodge to produce sufficient copies of the old edition, pending the revision, which will not be ready until the next year. Bro. Perceval's amendment was carried in the following terms:—"That the consideration of the revision of the Book of Constitutions be postponed until February next, or until such time as the Most Worshipful Grand Master may appoint, and that amendments and additions be required to be delivered to the Grand Secretary on or before 28th January 1883; that a copy be sent to each Lodge, and that every member be enabled to purchase a copy, if he so desires it, at a price not exceeding two shillings, notice being given within six weeks from the present time." An amusing incident in the meeting was when Bro. Edwin Budden found he was too late in proposing the motion of which he had given notice—the Grand Lodge's contributions to the Institutions. The purport of these resolutions has been given in our columns, and will come on for consideration at some future time. No doubt his intention in the matter was genuine and well meant, and there is much to be said in their favour; but, from some unaccountable reason, Bro. Budden was not possessed of his accustomed promptness in bringing them forward. The question may be briefly summed up thus. It has been shown by the last Quarterly Report that the income of Grand Lodge is in excess over the expenditure by about £4,000 a year; and feeling that the Benevolent Institution should not derive the whole of the benefit of the additional £800, according to the motion of Bro. Raynham Stewart at the June meeting, he desired that the Grand Lodge contribution to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution should be raised from £800 a year to £1,000 a year—£500 a year to the Male Fund, and £500 a year to the Female Fund; the £200 a year now added to be paid from the Fund of General Purposes; and that the Grand Lodge contributions to the Royal Masonic Schools be raised from £150 a year to each School (the present amount) to £500 a year to the Girls' School, and £500 the Boys' School, to be paid from the Fund of General Purposes. This could be successfully done by presenting, say £1,000 or £2,000 to the Preparatory School, the establishment of which is now exercising the minds of the Craft. We would urge it as a matter of imperative necessity that consideration should be given to this subject, because of the drain upon the parent fund—whether the efforts now being made to raise the sum of money required for the Preparatory School will not entrench upon the actual capital of the Boys' School proper. The Committee of the Institution have already invested a lump sum of money, about £1,000, from the special fund that has been contributed towards the Preparatory School. But suppose that out of the £12,000 realised by the Festival this year, and, consequent upon the special advantages offered, the subscribers desire to apportion £3,000 for the Preparatory School Building Fund, would this not so seriously affect the efforts of the executive that they might find a difficulty in providing funds for the Boys' School proper? We only advance this as a note of warning; it is no use killing the mother to save the life of the infant. There have been special privileges accorded to donors to the Preparatory School, which might, however, become a sort of monster, and after it has been created, may sap the life blood of the older Institution. Bro. Budden's only intent was that the Benevolent Institution should not get all the money, and he must have been "very young" indeed not to have been ready at the opportune moment to propose the resolution of which he had given notice.

The General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys met on Saturday, 2nd inst., at Freemasons' Hall. The brethren present were Bros. Alfred Williams (in the chair), J. Mason, John L. Mather, Wm. M. Dewar, C. F. Matier, Frederick Adlard, H. Massey, Rev. Richard Morris, D.D., Head Master, W. Pass, John M. Stedwell, Edgar Bowyer, Raynham W. Stewart and W. H. Saunders. The names of two boys were removed from the October list, one by the wish of his friends, whose circumstances have improved, and one other by reason of the boy's death. One candidate was added to the list for April, and one was approved for admission by presentation of the Marquess of Ripon, subject to the production of some further papers. Bro. C. F. Matier, who acted for Bro. Binckes, stated that Bro. Binckes's health was improved, and that his medical adviser gave it as his opinion that he would be able to be out in a fortnight. The Committee ordered a minute to be recorded expressing their gratification at the intelligence, and then adjourned.

REVIEWS.

The History of Freemasonry; its Antiquities, Symbols, Constitutions, Customs, &c. By Robert Freke Gould, Barrister-at-Law, P.G.S.D. of England. London: Thomas C. Jack, 45 Ludgate Hill.

We have just received the First Volume of what it is evident will prove a most recherche and valuable addition to our Masonic literature, inasmuch as it departs from the ordinary style of similar works in the beauty of its elaboration and embellishment, in addition to the vast amount of information contained in the letter-press, which will be of interest to the general reader as well as those who are most intimately concerned in the subjects treated. Time precludes us this week from giving more than an outline of the work, embracing as it does an investigation of the records or organisations of the Fraternity in England, Scotland, Ireland, the British Colonies, France, Germany, and the United States; but we shall have the pleasant duty of entering more fully into the merits of this comprehensive work at an early date, when we shall have had time to consider a little more fully the character of the beautiful volume which our zealous Brother Gould has just introduced to the Masonic world. For the present let it suffice if we say that as a work of art it is one of the most superbly got up we have seen of recent years, and reflects the highest credit upon the publisher, who newly figures in that role so far as Craft literatur. is concerned. We scarcely understand why the old Masonic publishers did not deem it worth their while to undertake the task; but, at all events, it speaks vastly to the credit of the firm by whom his History has been produced, and who cannot be too highly complimented upon their spirited enterprise, and the admirable manner in which they have carried it out. The illustrations, if we except the first, which in the copy we have received is blocked with a little too much colour, are very fairly executed, and will secure to the possessors of the series the most faithful portraits they can obtain of the rulers of the Craft. In spite of the trifling fault we name, the likeness of our Most Worshipful Grand Master is faithful to the life, and amongst the others are the Dukes of Connaught and Albany, the Earls of Carnarvon, Lathom, Ferrers, and Mar and Kellie (M.W. Grand Master Mason of Scotland), and Sir Michael R. Shaw-Stewart, Bart., Right Worshipful Past Grand Master Mason of Scotland. Treated in exhaustive and masterly style are chapters on the ancient mysteries, dealing with the Essenes, the Roman Collegia, and the Culdees; the old charges of British Freemasons; the Stonemasons (Steinmetzen) of Germany; the Craft Guilds (corps d'Etat) of France; and the Companionage, or Les Compagnons du Tour de France. It will thus readily be seen that even in his inaugural volume the author has traversed a very wide area of archæological research, and the chief recommendation of his work is that it is trammeled with no secondary opinions or crotchets respecting Masonic history, but all his matter, written in the most scholarly and brilliant diction, bears the impress of originality of thought and depth of research. We purpose dealing more fully, at an early date, with the literary merits of a work which is certain to command the earnest and keen attention of Masons everywhere, as well as of those who do not number in our ranks; and here we shall content ourselves with saying that if the succeeding volumes keep pace in point of beauty of compilation and excellence of their contents—which no one who knows Bro. Gould will for a moment doubt—the series will form not only a splendid ornament to the library, but a mine of untold wealth to those who do not merely follow the beaten track of our old traditions, but who are ever striving to illumine them, and to render them more sublime, by the light derived from a deeper study of the hidden recesses of nature and science.

OUR HOLIDAY JAUNT.

FROM THE MASONIC MONTHLY.

THAT it will do us all good to have a holiday is an undoubted fact; but whether we shall all get one is quite another question. Let us hope that we all may, and that, as the poet sings, it may do us all good, and send us back to work and duty strong, cheery, and contented.

From meadows dappled o'er with daisies,
Or sweet with scent of new-mown hay,
From woods amid whose tangled mazes
The laughing sunbeams dart and play,
From rippling brooks and river reaches,
From haunts of heather and of fern,
From giant cliffs and pebbly beaches,
Glad-hearted wanderers return.

The Summer holiday is over—
The few short weeks, or days, or hours—
And homeward goes each happy rover
Beside the sea, or 'mid the flowers.
Once more for all the path of duty;
But hand and brain are now made strong;
And, steeped unconsciously in beauty,
The heart retains its Summer song.

Thus richly blessed, have we no pity
For those whose lives are sad with care,
Who herd in valleys in the city,
And cry aloud for God's pure air?
Surely the Summer days will darken,
Earth will not be one-half so fair,
Unless with willing hearts we hearken,
And of our pleasures yield a share.

Still there seems to be one or two warnings for us all, which it may do us some little good to remember and to realise. If our holiday jaunt has led us abroad among the "parlez-vous" or "ausgezeichnets," as some one has said, let us hope that we have not been ashamed to speak a foreign language. There are many John Bulls who seem to dislike conversing in what they term "outlandish lingo." But how foolish, and worse than foolish, is such a feeling, such a prejudice. The acquisition of a foreign language increases not only the possibility of extending our own knowledge of things, men, bodies and countries, but raises us in the scale of ruminating, thinking, and conversable beings. Formerly far too little attention was paid in our schools and colleges to the study of foreign languages; now, let us trust, we are bent on removing this serious defect, and strengthening this patent week point in our general system of national education. But let none of us suppose that we can travel in foreign parts and rely on dictionaries, vocabularies, railway guides and books of conversations. All who do so sooner or later inevitably break down, and sometimes when it is most inconvenient for them to do so. And as we may always be taught, even as the schoolmen say, "ex converso," we lighted the other day on a good little story of a German's confidence in a dictionary which brought him to great grief, and which many of us, all who talk to foreigners from books and vade mecums, may well keep in memory and apply to our practice.

A German, whose English education had been somewhat neglected, obtained an interview with an English lady, who, having recently lost her husband, must (as he in his single German condition took for granted) be open to new offers, and accordingly opened his business thus:

"High-born madame, since your husband have kicked de bucket—"

"Sir," said the lady, astonished and displeased.

"Oh, pardon, madam—nine, ten thousand pardons! Now I make new beginning—quite oder beginning. Madame, since your husband have cut his stick—"

It may be supposed that this did not mend matters, and, reading so much in the lady's countenance, the German drew out an octavo dictionary, and, perspiring with shame at having a second time missed fire:

"Madam, since your husband have gone to kingdom come—"

This he said beseechingly; but the lady was past propitiation this time, and rapidly moved towards the door. Things had now reached a crisis, and, if something were not done quickly the game was up. Now, therefore, taking a last hurried look at his dictionary, the German flew after the lady, crying out, in a voice of despair:

"Madam, since your husband—your most respected husband—your never-enough-to-be-worshipped husband—have hopped de twig,—"

This was his sheet anchor, and as this also came home, of course the poor man was totally wrecked. It turned out that the dictionary he had used, a work of one hundred and fifty years back, had, from mere German ignorance, given slang translations from Tom Brown, L'Estrange, and other jocular writers—has put down the verb sterben (to die) with the following worshipful series of equivalents: 1. to kick the bucket; 2. To cut one's stick; 3. To go to kingdom come; 4. To hop the twig—to drop off the perch into Davy's locker. This was the only equivalent he had not been able to introduce.

Neither when we are on our holdiday jaunt should we forget the needful rules of caution and common sense. Many a pleasant journey has been a painful experience, and has left unwelcome memories, because we forget our habitual care in the selection of friends and acquaintances. Some of us will recall Bro. Anthony Trollope's amusing stories of a "Ride through Palestine," and of "The Man who kept his money in a Box," and will fully grasp the point of the following amusing little bit of pleasant American satire:—

A short time ago a Detroiter seated his dear wife in a car on the Michigan Central to make the journey to Chicago alone; he took a look around him, and said to her:

"Now, my love, if you should want the window raised, here are a dozen gentlemen who will break their necks to accommodate you."

"Yes, my dear," she said.

"If you feel lonesome, and want some one to talk to you about affairs in Egypt, Noah's Ark, or the ice period, don't hesitate to call upon any of these gentlemen."

"I understand you, my dear."

"You won't know enough to leave the car at noon and get your dinner, and you had better ask some of them to accompany you. If they offer to pay for your meal, don't be squeamish about it."

"Of course not, my dear."

"You may want to read to pass away the time. If so, any of these gentlemen will be only too happy to purchase you a half bushel of the latest books and magazines. Be careful to save 'em for me to read when you get home. They can pay for them."

"I'll be certain, love, to attend to what you say."

"And you can say to them that we have been married four years; we do not live happily together; I am a domestic tyrant; you have strong thoughts of procuring a divorce; you feel that you could love the right sort of a husband; you like oranges and peanuts; you are innocent and confiding; you have never travelled; you are afraid of getting lost in Chicago, and you will be ever so much obliged to any one who will get you a hack, see to your trunk, and pay all expenses. Good-bye, love."

"Good-bye, my darling."

And wasn't it strange that not one single man in that car even spoke to that lady in a ride of three hundred miles?

A few rules of common sense, a kindly and considerate temper, a good-humoured determination to put up with small inconveniences, and an avoidance of grumbling, querulous and fidgetty temperament will do much and go far to make our holiday jaunt pleasant and ourselves agreeable to the company we meet, and the fellow-travellers we stumble upon. The writer of this little paper has travelled as much as most people, and he has always found this, that, except in very rare cases indeed, the troubles and worries travellers suffer are more or less imaginary, and can easily be borne or even avoided by pleasant and unfailing courtesy. Some good folks seem to revel in difficulties and vexations; to be always unfortunate, ill-treated, and oppressed. In nine cases out of ten such disturbances of the situation spring from our great insular weakness, a forgetfulness that other people have ideas, tastes, and customs of their own, and that though English normal life and views are very good for England, they do not always suit France or Belgium, Switzerland or Germany, Holland or Italy; and that we must always be on our guard against that vulgar tendency to depreciate or ridicule everything foreign, all that does not exactly tally with our home ways and habits, our insular tastes and notions. We have to be "citizens of the world" if we wish to enjoy our holiday jaunt, especially abroad; and if nothing will satisfy us but English food and English hours, if we are unsociable and miserable because the dinners we eat, the language we hear, the life we lead, because all these things, I say, are different from our own at home in our "tight little island," then, in the name of all that is sensible and reasonable, let us put by Baedeker and the Continental Bradshaw, our Murray and our travelling maps, and let us make no further or longer expedition than that which will land us at Herne Bay or Richmond, Erith or Broadstairs, the Isle of Thanet, or the Isle of Dogs!

MASONIC WELCOME TO THE MEMBERS OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.

ON Monday evening, 28th August, a special assembly of the Prov. Grand Lodge of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight was held at the Masonic Hall, Albion-place, Southampton, for the purpose of tendering the right hand of fellowship from the Province to the Masonic members of the British Association, and, as will be seen below, was attended by brethren from all parts of the kingdom, as well as by some beyond its borders. The chair was taken by Wor. Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P., the Provincial Grand Master, who was supported on his right by W. Bro. W. Hickman, his Deputy, and the attendance of members of Prov. Provincial Grand Lodge having been opened in due form, the Prov. Grand Master said he assembled the brethren that evening for the purpose of giving a welcome to those distinguished brethren who were visiting Southampton in connection with the visit of the British Association to that town, and he was very glad to have the opportunity of welcoming them. It was a fortunate thing that in Freemasonry they were able to bring men together who could not perhaps meet in any other way. The British Association met last year at York, the ancient capital of the north of England, and now they met at Southampton, a distinguished seaport of the south. Coming as they did from so many parts of the world, they were led to reflect on the universality of Freemasonry. He was told that two years hence the members of the British Association were to assemble in a distant colony, and as he visited that colony himself he could assure them they would receive a Masonic welcome there, as they had always done in their own country. In the name of the Province of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, which did not number so many Lodges as the provinces of the north, but yielded to none in zeal for Masonry and a desire to promote its principles, he tendered to the visitors present a hearty and fraternal welcome, accompanied with a hope that they would be gratified with their visit to Southampton.

Bro. Hyde Clarke expressed, on behalf of the Masonic members of the British Association, their thanks, and said that while the P.G.M. had said that wherever they went they would be sure of a hearty welcome, he had not represented the whole relations between the British Association and Masonry. Yesterday, at St. Mary's Church, the members of the Association and its President were welcomed, he might say almost as warmly welcomed, as they had now been in Grand Lodge; but he could remember, as could many other members, when the Association was very different, and when, instead of being thus welcomed, they were made marks to be preached at. That was never the case in Masonic Lodges, whose attitude towards the Association was of more importance than they would at first perceive. Some would remember that within the British Association itself there was prevalent a vein of thought that was exceedingly unfavourable to Masonry, and those members of the Association who adhered to the Craft consequently felt themselves much strengthened when they had been within the walls of the Lodge. One principle which Masonry had always upheld was that of devotion to the G.A.O.T.U. As regarded the welcome afforded that night, he said, and others would confirm it, that it had been as remarkable as any they had received in the various Masonic centres they had visited. He spoke of the remarkable structures and collections of Masonic works which they had had the opportunity of seeing, adding that last year, at York, the muniments of the old Royal York Lodge were exhibited to them, and said it had seldom been allowed them to come into a hall in which were so well preserved the traditions of those who had been rulers of the Craft, and which in so striking a manner showed the continuity of Masonry and the good feeling that prevailed among the members. After dwelling on the principles of Freemasonry in reference to the work of the Association, saying that having exercised the functions of the Grand Master in three quarters of the globe, including the region where dwelt King Solomon himself, and holding rank likewise in a fourth, he could accept the Provincial Grand Master's statements as to the universality of Masonry, and said he was sure the members of the Association who belonged to the Craft would highly appreciate the welcome they had received in so distinguished a Masonic centre as Southampton.

W. and Rev. Bro. Pickard, Bros. Roebuck (Middlesex), Tate (Ireland), Kyshe (Mauritius)—who said he returned from the Mauritius only a few weeks since, and he should ever remember that the right hand of fellowship was extended to him for the first time since his arrival in England by the Provincial Grand Lodge of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight—and others also spoke, "hearty good wishes" being afterwards tendered from the Dublin University, and the Province of Somerset. Bro. Bamber, No. 3. bis, an ancient Scotch Lodge, speaking as Secretary to Dr. Siemens, said he was sure the President of the British Association would be glad to hear of the hearty welcome the Masonic members of the Association had received from the Province.

W. Bro. Hickman D.P.G.M. assured the brethren that the action of the Provincial Grand Master, in calling the Grand Lodge together for this purpose, was heartily appreciated by all the Lodges in Southampton. The members viewed with great interest the visits of the British Association, nearly forty years having elapsed since it came to the town. Among the members of the Southampton Lodges were many who had taken a great interest in the arrangements for the reception of the Association in Southampton; he believed those arrangements had been eminently successful, and he saw before him some holding office in Provincial Grand Lodge, as well as Officers in the Craft generally, who had taken a leading part in them, and had devoted much time and attention to the making them as perfect as possible. Their whole desire had been to promote the comfort and convenience of the Association; he hoped it would be said they had been successful, and that the members would leave Southampton with many pleasing recollections of their visit.

Bro. Hyde Clarke said he always found where the Association went that those who took a leading part in the arrangements were Freemasons.

Bro. Barford (Sheriff of Southampton) expressed on behalf of the municipal authorities, a few words of welcome to those coming from a distance, and said he trusted the efforts of the local Committee had succeeded to an extent which the importance of the British Association deserved.

The Provincial Grand Master said it had been interesting to him to hear the expressions of fraternal regard which had fallen from brethren coming from distant parts. They had had a Brother who had represented the Grand Master in various parts of the world; a Brother from Middlesex, another from Somerset, another from Scotland, and another from Ireland. The expressions from these Provinces were especially gratifying, as he had been more or less associated with them. In the Province of Somerset it was his privilege a good many years ago to instal the present Grand Master before he had the honour of being a Grand Master himself, while from Oxford there came his old friend Bro. Pickard, with whom he had been associated more years than he cared to remember, and with whom he had up to now been on terms of intimate Masonic friendship.

Grand Lodge was then closed in ancient form. Light refreshments were afterwards served in the ante-room.

IS MASONRY REALLY FLOURISHING?

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Statistics as a rule are dry and uninteresting, but I hope in this communication to make them as little so as possible; if not, on the contrary, interesting and satisfactory, as well to your correspondents on this subject as to your Masonic readers in general. For this purpose I have gone back seven years and more, and have therefrom compiled a table, which I trust will explain itself; it has been taken chiefly from the "Freemason's Calendar and Pocket Book." At the same time, I beg to acknowledge the courteous treatment I have received from the officials in the Grand Secretary's office.

ENGLISH CONSTITUTION.

So much for the large increase during that short period, but to prove that Freemasonry is really flourishing, though there are 132 Lodges of the total 1975 which have ceased to exist, not one in the foregoing list but has held its own, and the numbers are complete from No. 1528 to No. 1975, I therefore argue that if Freemasonry was not on a sound basis, such would not be the case; again, it is now some twenty years since the Lodges were renumbered, and the fact that only 132 out of nearly 2,000 should—through having been formed into District Grand Lodges, amalgamations, pecuniary difficulties, or other causes—have been struck off the roll, speaks well for the genuine success of Freemasonry; another argument in its favour is the very large increase in the monies received for the three different Institutions, and the extra number of applicants we admit at each of the Elections, as well as the larger pensions we are enabled to give to the annuitants of both sexes. The particulars of my second argument I will give in a future letter, as I desire to be very exact in my statements.

I have referred to the renumbering of the Lodges some twenty years ago. I think it would be very desirable if it were done again. At present we are sailing under false colours, and our strength, which appears to be nearly 2,000, is really but 1,843. I am of opinion that no better opportunity could be afforded than the time when the Book of Constitutions is undergoing its long-needed revision.

Yours fraternally,

P.M. 1607.

If a list of the defunct Lodges would be acceptable to your readers, so that they might know what alteration it would make, I shall be happy to supply you with a copy, for the general information of your readers.

The famous Royal American midgets are now to be seen and heard every afternoon and evening at the Piccadilly Hall, the establishment they appeared at when they first came to London. General Mite and Miss Millie Edwards are amusing little folks, and well worthy a visit. In short, they fully justify the interest they have excited.

THE MORALS OF THE HUMAN EAR.

MOUTH to ear is an impressive attitude in Masonry, whose mystic significance is well known to the brethren. He who has not the attentive ear is but a mutilated member of our Order; since for him the instructive tongue speaks in vain, and the repository of the faithful breast remains empty of those precious secrets in which all the beautiful uses and hidden wealth of our ancient Craft are garnered.

The ear is the sentinel of the soul. Unlike the eye it has no power to close itself and shut out the reports addressed to it. It is more universal and automatic, less individual and volitional, than the eye. There are creatures who have ears but are not yet developed far enough to have the supplement of eyes. Before the inhabitants of the light arose, the spawning earth teemed with life, and ears were evolved in the darkness. And, thus older and deeper than our visual orbs, they still continue to have this advantage, that they act as well in the night as in the day. Sleeplessly open at their post, which connects the circumference of the garrison of life with its centre, they can neither exclude from their own perception the tidings revealed by vibratory bodies, nor withhold their signals of guidance and of warning from the mind enthroned within.

The ear is the deepest inlet of sympathy and antipathy, through the revelations made to it by the voice, alike in the words articulated and in the tones and inflections employed. The ear is the door, while the eye is only the window, of the soul. Deafness is well known to shut its subject up within a wall, hardening the egotism, and, unless neutralised by an extraordinary native sweetness and generosity, filling it with suspicions, dislikes and resentments. What an immense significance there is, therefore, in the words of the Master, "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."

By hearing we learn directly a prodigious proportion of all that we learn. By hearing we receive indirectly a vast part of the influences which control us, change us, and make us what we become. By hearing we enter most profoundly into communion with our fellow-beings, to give and take good and evil. By hearing we are brought most effectually into that weird realm of spiritual suggestion, whose bodiless entities claim kindred with our spirits, and touch us with wondrous intimations of immortality; for, when we hearken to sounds so fine that nothing lives between them and stillness, the ear leads the soul forth upon the outermost confines of materiality, where, in mystic listening it feels that silence itself is the infinite language of God. In short, wherever we look with apprehensive thought on our nature and position, we shall discern that the ear plays a most momentous part in our training, in our experience, and in our fate.

He that hath ears to hear, then let him hear. It is well, it is well often to hush every wish and sound of our own, and go forth and listen to things which are not ourselves nor belong to our poor evanescence. Sometimes to steal away from the cares and noise of the city's bustling traffic into the still and holy recesses of nature, and there recline in the great mother's lap, surrendering the soul to a religious mood of rapt and happy listening, where the thick moss of ages covers the rock, and no profane step intrudes, where a glimpse of the distant ocean peeps through the foliage of the waving woods, and a sound of the mighty murmur of its surge faintly reaches, while the harsh scream of the hawk sailing overhead contrasts with the sweet chirp of the ground sparrow that hops by your foot! Sometimes to pause amidst the thronging multitudes of the city itself, and listen to the dread or joyous tramp of events, and gather up the deep lessons they drop as they pass! Sometimes to retire into the lonely chamber, and, shutting out all the earth, listen to the solemn talk of the heart, hear what the soul says, and in prayer and aspiration be closeted with God, to catch the mystic councils His presence gives, whilst the spirit and the bride say, Come! Sometimes, at evening's russet hour, or midnight's solitary vigil, in a hush of reverent meditation and love, to send out our yearning sympathies over the wide world, and brood in hallowed and listening imagination on the innumerable sounds that mingle in the eternal babel of life, and think of ONE who high over the jewelled firmament, with mercy to prompt and omnipotence to dispose, distinguishes every tone, from the sigh of the penitent sinner whose heart is breaking within him, to the shock of embattled nations, from the widow's cottage lullaby, sung where evening shoots its parting radiance across the peaceful village, to the oath of the pirate, shrieked as he besmites his victim to the slippery deck when tempests are hiding the moon and rending the sea! Sometimes, in thought's chastened mood, to lean over the dizzy verge of death and listen to the mysterious roar that rises from the unfathomable gulf where time falls into eternity, and attempt to wrest from the supernatural obscurity some secret of the crisis at the end of earth, some clue to the unforeshadowed destinies beyond! To such things as these it is useful for us to listen. He who listens well to their varied tones will perforce grow wiser and better.

Take heed how ye hear! This exhortation is so impressively enforced by one incident in the career of the Master, that I will conclude my utterance by narrating it, and then leave you to listen to the worthier voices ever speaking to sensitive souls in silence and solitude.

On the brow of a hill in the outskirts of Nazareth sat the great Teacher at the close of the day. A throng of hearers, astonished at his celestial doctrine, and entranced by the divinity of his air, stood around. "Blessed are they who do the will of my Father, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven," says the voice whose tones must for ever haunt those who have once heard them. Two thieves at this moment approach and catch the words. One of them is of a milder mien and younger than the other, whose rugged and brutal face seems to mark a long career of crime. The former listens intently, and is strangely moved and melted. The latter, indifferent to all, rudely jeers at him. The Teacher rises to depart, and as He passes the robbers, bends a pitying look upon them and says, "We shall meet again." Months roll on. A dense crowd sways around Calvary, on whose summit the crucified Jesus is dying. And lo, lifted up in execution one on each side of him, the two thieves who were his auditors afore-time! The one who had listened and understood, turns up his face, streaming with penitent and trustful tears, and exclaims, "Lord Jesus, remember me when Thou comest into Thy kingdom!" The other, who hearing, had heard not, defiantly taunts the Saviour, saying to that bleeding piece of divinity, "If thou be the Christ save thyself and us!" The circling hours had not closed the day when the spirit of one who was walking with his Lord in Paradise and the spirit of the other—had entered its doom. Take heed how ye hear.—Liberal Freemason.

THE PRESTON GUILD.

THE great Lancashire town has been the scene of high carnival during the present week, in connection with the ceremony of laying the foundation-stone of the proposed Harris Free Library, which was performed with Masonic honours by R.W. Bro. the Earl of Lathom, Deputy Grand Master of England, in the presence of the Duke of Cambridge and a numerous and distinguished company. It was, indeed, one of the largest and most important assemblages of Freemasons that have ever been witnessed in the North of England, and thus becomes of interest, not only locally, but to the Craft generally. Shortly before noon the Craft Masons formed their procession, walking four a-breast, the junior Lodges coming first. They all wore their aprons, collars, and gauntlets, many of them having in addition various decorations. They were preceded by the band of the 5th Lancashire Artillery Volunteers, and the procession, which extended the whole length of Fishgate, was watched by a large concourse of spectators. When the procession arrived at the site for the intended building, the brethren divided right and left, and faced inwards, forming an avenue through which the members of Grand Lodge passed. The Prov. Grand Master, the Deputy Prov. Grand Master, the Grand Officers of England, and the Prov. G. Officers followed in succession from the rear, so as to invert the order of the procession. The arrival of the Earl of Lathom at the site was announced by a flourish of trumpets, and the procession entered the marquee. The officiating brethren took positions assigned to them by the Prov. Grand Director of Ceremonies and his assistants, and deposited the silver vessels borne in the procession on pedestals placed for their reception. The Mayor and some distinguished guests had previously arrived, and the latter took up their position on a dais on the north-west corner. The Guild Mayor, who had returned to the Town Hall, made his appearance directly, accompanied by his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge and many other noblemen and titled ladies. Cheer after cheer rent the air when all the illustrious personages had entered the large marquee containing the grand stand, and in which the interesting ceremony was to take place. The scene was truly imposing, and all those who were so fortunate as to have a good view of the brilliant spectacle will not soon forget it. On the eastern side of the market place, where were also assembled the Duke of Cambridge, the Earl of Sefton, Lord Lathom, the Earl of Derby, Lord Winmarleigh, the High Sheriff of the county, the Mayor and Corporation of Preston, and various Provincial Mayors. After the preliminary Masonic ceremonial, Mr. C. R. Jacson, one of the trustees of the late Mr. Harris, out of whose estate the library and museum are being founded, delivered a short address, and presented a silver trowel to Lord Lathom, who laid the foundation stone in accordance with Masonic rites. In doing so, Bro. the Earl of Lathom R.W.P.G.M. said—Men and brethren here assembled to behold this ceremony,—Be it known unto you that we be the lawful Masons, true and faithful to the laws of our country, and engaged by solemn obligations to erect handsome buildings to be serviceable to the brethren, and to fear God, the great Architect of the Universe. We have among us, concealed from the eyes of all men, secrets which may not be revealed, and which no man has discovered; but these secrets are lawful and honourable, and not repugnant to the laws of God or man. They were entrusted in peace and honour to Masons of ancient times, and having been faithfully transmitted to us, it is our duty to convey them unimpaired to the latest posterity. Unless our Craft were good, and our calling honourable, we should not have lasted so many centuries, nor should we have had so many illustrious brothers in our Order, ready to promote our laws and further our interests. We are associated here to-day in the name of Him who is the Wisdom and the Light, to lay the foundation stone of a building, the primary object of which is to impart knowledge and sound instruction to our fellow men, which we pray God may prosper as it seems good to Him; and as the first duty of Masons in any undertaking is to invoke the blessing of the Great Architect of the Universe on their work, I call upon you to unite with our Prov. Grand Chaplain in an address to the throne of grace. The G. Chaplain (Bro. Rev. T. B. Spencer) recited an eloquent prayer, and after a hymn had been sung, the architect, Mr. J. Hibbert, of Preston, presented a design of the edifice to Lord Lathom, who expressed his approval of it, and expressed a hope that the work of erection would be duly proceeded with. A procession to the Town Hall followed. At three o'clock in the afternoon there was a grand banquet given by the Guild and Mayor, in the new public hall at the Corn Exchange. Between 600 and 700 ladies and gentlemen were present. Amongst those at the banquet were the Duke of Cambridge, the Lord-Lieutenant of the county, the Bishops of Manchester and Carlisle, Lord Lathom, Lord Derby, Lord Winmarleigh, Sir R. Cross, and a number of provincial mayors. In the course of the after proceedings, the health of the Duke of Cambridge was duly honoured.

The Duke of Cambridge, in responding to the toast of his health, regretted the absence of the Duke and Duchess of Albany, and said he was himself present in response to a wish of the Queen, who had telegraphed to him from Balmoral on the subject. He came amongst them as a soldier, and he had asked himself whether a soldier had anything to do with such a municipal gathering as the Guild, and he ventured to think that the soldiers were as much citizens as any of the persons sitting before him. With the stability and peace, and prosperity of this great Empire our soldiers were intimately connected. He appeared before them under peculiar and difficult circumstances. His duties really called him to head-quarters, but though there was disquietude abroad there was peace at home. Preston and all the rest of the Empire was in a state of profound peace. There were complaints as to the costliness of the institutions and the general government of this country, but when they remembered the advantages they enjoyed, he thought they would consider them an equivalent of an ample kind. He contended that the high position occupied by this country was due to the brave and indomitable spirit she had manifested, and he was perfectly convinced that this spirit remained unchanged so far as the navy and the army were concerned. In both the army and navy they might have perfect confidence: the same spirit which imbued their ancestors, the spirit which had made this country great, still existed, and would, if occasion needed, be available to the fullest extent now. It had been said in respect to the war in Egypt that it was a great mistake to send out the Household Cavalry. He could not see this. He did not believe that the men who had served her Majesty at home should not go out when needed, and that they could do their duty when called out had been proved by their achievements thus far in Egypt —in spite of the greatest difficulties which, of course, must attend an army when landing on such an inhospitable shore as that of Ismailia. The troops in question had shown that they were made of the same stuff as the rest of the army, and he hoped they would never hear any more after this as to their troops being simply kept up for the honour of her Majesty, and to ride about in St. James's Park. After further alluding to the bravery and reliability of the army and navy, the Duke concluded amid applause. The Health of the Guild Mayor was then given and duly responded to. At about six o'clock a move was made to Avenham Park, on the eastern side of which an oak tree was planted, by the Duke of Cambridge on behalf of the Duchess of Albany. During the ceremony a silver spade, beautifully carved and bejewelled, was presented by Mr. Alderman Benson, the Chairman of the Parks Committee. The spade was accepted by the Duke on behalf of the Duchess. Mr. Benson delivered a short address to the Duke of Cambridge, and the latter was "thoued" by the former, who is an old member of the Society of Friends. The "thoning" to a Royal Duke caused some surprise and amusement. During the ceremony the adult scholars of the Church of England Sunday Schools sang the National Anthem. The proceedings were very short, but very interesting, and during their enactment the ground was kept by the depot of the Royal North Lancashire Regiment.

Various other festivities have followed during the week, bringing into the town an enormous influx of visitors from all parts of the surrounding counties.

QUARTERLY COMMUNICATION OF UNITED GRAND LODGE.

THE Quarterly Communication of United Grand Lodge was held on Wednesday, at Freemasons' Hall, General Brownrigg, C.B., Provincial Grand Master for Surrey, presiding. Brother Samuel Rawson, P.D.G.M. China, acted as Deputy Grand Master, and the Hon. Bro. Justice Prinsep, D.G.M. Bengal, as Past Grand Master. The minutes of the June meeting having been read and confirmed, Bro. James Stevens stated that he rose with very considerable diffidence to raise a question of order and privilege. On the last occasion it was declared by the Pro Grand Master ——. General Brownrigg said that as Brother Stevens was about to refer to something which occurred at last meeting, he might state that the Pro Grand Master had written a memorandum to the effect that Bro. Stevens's notice of motion, which had been laid before him, had been considered very carefully, and he was clearly of opinion that it was one which could not be placed on the agenda paper of Grand Lodge, inasmuch as it might lead to an interference with, and an encroachment upon the undoubted prerogative of the Grand Master and his freedom of action in matters appertaining to his high office, as set forth in the Constitutions of the Order. Under these circumstances, he was afraid he could not do otherwise than stop any further discussion on the subject. This announcement was received with cheers. The Report of the Lodge of Benevolence for the last quarter was read, and the recommendations therein contained were confirmed. Bro. Thomas Fenn P.G.D., in the absence of Sir John B. Monckton, brought up the Report of the Board of General Purposes, which stated that—

Grand Lodge having at its last Quarterly Communication accepted the draft of the proposed revision of the Book of Constitutions, as prepared by the Board, and having approved of its suggestion that the same be considered at a Special Grand Lodge, and that in the meantime copies be circulated amongst the Provinces for the information of the Craft, which has accordingly been done, the Board now beg to recommend that Brethren desiring to propose any amendments or additions to the said Revision of the Constitutions should be required to transmit the same to the Grand Secretary on or before the 25th September next, in order that they may be considered and reported on by the Board before the meeting of the Special Grand Lodge, which it is believed will be held about the middle of October next.

Bro. C. J. Perceval P.M. 1607 objected that, in a matter of such importance to the Craft, more time should not be given for the due consideration of the alterations. He thought every Lodge should be presented with a copy, and that every brother who desired to purchase one should be enabled to do so at an expense of two shillings. Moreover, by the 25th September many of the Provincial Grand Lodges would not have met, or been able to decide on the new Constitutions, he therefore moved an amendment embodying these views. Bro. Arthur E. Gladwell P.M. 172 seconded the amendment, which was supported by the Hon. Bro. Justice Prinsep, who said he had visited a country Lodge a few days ago, where he heard the matter considered, but he had not had an opportunity himself of considering the amended Constitutions. Bro. T. Fenn said the Board had no desire to hurry the matter, although it had been a long time before them. The only reason for getting on quickly was that the old edition had run out. The debate would take a long time, and could not be held in one of the regular meetings of Grand Lodge. A Special Grand Lodge would have to be summoned to consider it. After a short discussion Bro. Perceval's amendment was carried in the following form:—

> "That the consideration of the Revision of the Book of Constitutions be postponed until next February, or until such time as the Most Worshipful Grand Master may appoint; and that amendments and additions be required to be delivered to the Grand Secretary on or before the 28th of January; and that a copy be sent to each Lodge, and every member be enabled to purchase a copy if he so desires it, at a price not exceeding two shillings, notice being given within six weeks of the present time."

Bro. Budden next rose, he wished to bring on the following motion:—

> "That the minute of the last Grand Lodge (7th June 1882), containing the Resolution proposed by Brother Raynham Stewart to raise the Grand Lodge subscription to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution from £800 a year (its present amount) to £1,600 a year be not confirmed; but that instead thereof the following Resolutions be adopted, viz.:—
> (I.) "That the Grand Lodge contribution to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution be raised from £800 a year to £1,000 a year; £500 a year to the Male Fund, and £500 a year to the Female Fund. The £200 a year now added to be paid from the Fund of General Purposes."
> (II.) "That the Grand Lodge contributions to the Royal Masonic Schools be raised from £150 a year to each School (the present amount) to £500 a year to the Girls' School, and £500 a year to the Boys' School, to be paid from the Fund of General Purposes."

General Brownrigg said this motion ought to have been brought on before the minutes were confirmed, as it was set down as an amendment to the minutes. Bro. Budden said he thought the Grand Master put the minutes for confirmation rather too sharp. General Brownrigg, with reference to this observation remarked, that he had presided several times in Grand Lodge, and never in his life had he made so long a pause as he had made that evening when putting the minutes for confirmation. He expected Bro. Budden to get up, but he could not keep Grand Lodge waiting. His ruling of Bro. Budden as out of order did not however refer to his motion—

> "That a Committee be appointed":—
> (b) "To revise the Scale of Fees payable by Lodges to Grand Lodge, and report to Grand Lodge, so that the revised Scale of Fees, if adopted, may be incorporated in the revised Constitutions, now under the consideration of Grand Lodge."

Bro. Budden said he should postpone this motion.

LET THERE BE LIGHT.

By Bro. J. Caven.

1. In the beginning God created the Heaven and the Earth.

2. And the earth was without form and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.

3. And God said, Let there be Light, and there was Light.—Gen. i.

"Let there be Light," Jehovah said,
Creation's vaulted dome resplendent shone.
Old Chaos all affrighted fled
From off his dark and gloomy throne;
The waters rolled away, the earth was born,
And smiling, glowed beneath creation's morn.

"Let there be Light!" The Sun began
Its mighty march across the bended sky;
And then it seemed to wondering man
A glance from God's all-seeing eye,
As thus it flung its blazing beams abroad,
And whelmed in light the universe of God.

"Let there be Light!" The Moon arose,
And hung on high its sheen of dazzling light,
And myriad gleams of glory threw
Across the darksome brow of night;
And clouds that through the sky in blackness rolled,
Are robed in white and crowned with gold.

"Let there be Light!" The Stars that throng
The sky in constellations bright and grand
Burst forth in one undying song,
That trembling swept o'er sea and land.
Their mighty anthem still shall grandly pour
Till time shall cease, shall cease to be no more.

The morning stars together sang,
Encircling wide the great all-central throne,
And Earth and Heaven together rang
With that triumphant music tone,
As echoing through the gloomy shades of night
That choral strain sublime, "Let there be Light!"

"Let there be Light!" Huge comets came,
And forth upon their mighty mission went,
With forms of fire and wings of flame
To Heaven's remotest battlement,
The realms of deepest, darkest, furthest night
They bore that great command, "Let there be Light

"Let there be Light!" Fierce lightning flashed
With bolts of flame that awful gloom was rent,
And peal on peal the thunder crashed
Across the blackened firmament,
As though Omnipotence in anger spoke,
And thus primeval night and silence broke.

But silent now that thunder-tone,
And, lo! in beauty o'er the sky unfurled
That grandly stretched from zone to zone,
An arch of promise to the world;
Glowing midst the clouds so pure and hoary,
Is traced the rainbow's path of glory.

All glowing from the sacred page,
Whose beams divine the human soul illume,
That burn undimmed from age to age,
Dispelling fast earth's moral gloom,
Behold a greater light than all is given,
Whose radiance lights the path that leads to heaven.

When comes the Horse and Rider pale,
And death's dark film shall close this mortal sight,
When past the dark and shadowy vale,
All shall be brought to further light
Within that dome that's builded on the sky
And lighted by our God's all-seeing eye.

Omniscient truth shall light the soul,
When lost the Sun, and Moon, and every Star;
And whilst eternal ages roll,
In mighty cycles sweeping far,
No sorrow-cloud shall dim that Lodge above—
'Tis lighted by our Master's smile of love.

THE LATE BRO. JOHN WEEDON, P.M. 382.

This brother carried on the business of a house painter for many years in Uxbridge. He was initiated on the 1st April 1831, in the Royal Union Lodge, was W.M. of the Lodge in 1836, and during his year of office he initiated, passed, and raised his father, rather an uncommon experience in Freemasonry. Bro. Weedon again filled the chair for two years, in 1840 and 1841, and for many years after this he undertook the duties of Secretary. Some years back he had misfortune to fracture one of his legs, and soon afterwards had a fall and broke the cap of the other; these accidents rendered him totally unfit for business, and for the last ten years he has been annuitant on the Royal Masonic Benevolent Fund. He passed quietly away early on the 1st August. We understand the expenses of the funeral will be defrayed by the Lodge of which he was for over 50 years a member.

MASSEY—On the 5th instant, at 29 Lowden Road, Herne Hill, EDWARD, the dearly loved youngest child of HENRY and SARAH MASSEY, aged fourteen months.

FASHIONS IN MASONRY.

FROM THE KEYSTONE.

THERE should be no fashions in Masonry, but that there are, few experienced Masons will deny. Shakespeare justly called fashion a deformed thief, that giddily turns about all the hot bloods between fourteen and five-and-thirty! It is a tyrant, and the parent of folly; it favours the science of appearances. All the new fashions are old, and yet, while every generation laughs at the old fashions, it religiously adopts the new. We clothe even our minds as we do our bodies, after the latest educational style. An old clergyman, who had an old tailor for his beadle, once said to him pensively, "Thomas, I cannot tell why it is that our church should be getting thinner and thinner, for I am sure I preach as well as ever I did, and have far more experience than I had at first." "Indeed," replied the worldly-wise Thomas, "old ministers now-a-days are just like old tailors, for I am sure that I sew as well as I ever did, and the cloth is the same; but it's the cut, sir, the new cut." That's it, the world over—it is the new cut that many people want.

Shall we have a new cut in Masonry? Shall we admit that the ancient and honourable Fraternity of which we are members has a "glass of fashion?" Shall we allow Masonic man-milliners and dressmakers to set up their shops among us? Shall we offer a premium for ritual-mongers, or, frown them down when they presume to arise and proclaim, "presto, change?" We think there is but one answer to all these interrogations—legitimately there are NO fashions in Masonry. If we find traces of them in the past, they were frauds upon the Craft, it may have been legalised frauds, but frauds, nevertheless.

What is the theory of Masonry? It is a system of morality? Do morals change? Is it wrong to steal, to commit adultery, to kill to-day, and right to-morrow? But, it may be said, you may change the allegories that veil the truth of Freemasonry, and the symbology that illustrates it. May you, can you change these without imperiling the truth of Masonry itself? We trow not.

We speak, familiarly, of the Lodge below and the Lodge above, the earthly Lodge and the heavenly Lodge, intimating thereby, that he who practises out of the Lodge the sublime principles of religion and morality he is taught within it, will, when he passes through the gate of death and knocks at the portal of heaven, be received and welcomed to a place therein by the Great Architect of the Universe. But the First Great Light in Masonry expressly says, that "the fashion of this world passeth away," and we are inclined to think that those who are fashionables in Masonry will pass away with it. If we would preserve the kernel of truth, we must preserve the shell that originally covered it, for to change it is to imperil everything.

Our distinguished Brother, Sir Christopher Wren, the greatest architect of the seventeenth or eighteenth centuries, once said of his art, "Building ought to have the attribute of the eternal, and be incapable of new fashions." So ought Freemasonry. It is the art of building. It was originated by operative builders; it is now perpetuated by speculative builders. We raise edifices, spiritual edifices; we build arches, royal arches. We should be ABLE master-builders, wise Master Masons. In its essence Freemasonry antagonises the spirit of the age and the world; it says, Raise your voice to God, extend your hand to your Brother. All things else radically change, Freemasonry should stand fast, immovable from its Ancient Landmarks.

But what are some of the facts that stare us in the face. Some brethren—the few, not the many, those who are ambitious to remodel the Craft, and leave upon it the impress of their own little individuality, seek to change the usages and customs of Freemasonry. They aim to "improve" its work; sometimes they even do this under the pretence of "restoring" it. We know the opinion of "restorers" that prevails amongst sages in the world of art—they are generally regarded as peddlers in disguise, who seek to vend their own wares under fraudulent names. Out upon them! Let us have no change, for every change must be for the worse. Freemasonry is not a kaleidoscope, it is not a play-house. Let all things else change, but Freemasonry never.

Let us state an example of an ephemeral fashion or novelty in Freemasonry. Not only anciently, but modernly, it has been the custom of the Craft, from the very nature of that Craft, to perform its work in secret. This work includes the opening and closing of the Lodge, the election and installation of its Officers, and the initiation, passing and raising of candidates. All of this work, according to the genius, the law and custom of the Craft, must be in secret, with no profane present. And yet, in our day there are those who boldly assert, and among them Past Grand Masters, that Lodges may instal their Officers in public, may make a show of a purely Masonic Lodge ceremonial. Mark you, this is not a ceremonial that from the circumstances of the case must be performed in public. It is not a funeral, nor a corner-stone laying, that must take place outside of the Lodge, but it is a pure Lodge ceremony, including an official covenant. With it the public have nothing to do, and whoever makes a "Jumbo" of it, belittles the Craft and himself. The whole of it cannot, dare not, be performed in public. The installation ceremony must be emasculated before it can be so profaned. We have a "Manual" before us that favours public installation—Morris's edition of "Webb's Freemason's Monitor," and what does it say? "Installation is performed in an open Lodge, opened in either degree, OR AFTER A SLIGHT PREPARATION, it may be done in public." It is then stated to consist of five particulars, and it is added, "All these, EXCEPT THE THIRD SPECIFICATION, may be performed in public." We assert, without fear of successful contradiction, that whoever mutilates the Lodge ceremonies of the Craft, or dismembers its offices so that they may be performed in public, is a fashionable Freemason, that every lover of genuine Freemasonry should pity and avoid. And yet we hear one Brother, and another Brother, asserting, "I originated public installations." Freemasonry cannot now be originated, and could not have been originated at any period in this nineteenth century. It is not a science of to-day, or yesterday. It has no fashions, nor fashion-mongers, and if there be any claiming the designation, let them quickly say:

> "O you mortal engines, whose rude throats
> The immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit,
> Farewell! Othello's occupation 's gone!"

A Mason's wife, half in fun, half in earnest, writes as follows to Past Grand Master Simons, of the N.Y. Dispatch:—

"I see at the head of your Masonic column, after your name, the letters P.G.M. If this means Past Grand Master, I sincerely pity your wife, if you have one. Pray, sir, when you were Grand Master, did you ever go to bed? Where you ever at home? When the year had passed, I hoped I would be released and relieved, but my husband explained that it was customary in his Lodge, if a Master had faithfully served for a year, and had done his duty, to compliment him with a re-election. So he was re-elected; then he became a High Priest, an Eminent Commander, an Illustrious Somebody of the Council. And so year after year this kept on, and the funerals he had to attend to; I thought the Masons were dreadfully fast dying, and it takes so long to bury them. I have known my husband to come home late at night, returning from a brother's funeral, and with all the widows that had to be seen and looked after, he had no time to look after his own wife and family. Now, my husband is Past Master, Past High Priest, past everything, past all hope. But the measure of my trouble was not full until now. He had gone and joined the Veterans. This is the worst of them all. In Lodge, Chapter, and Commandery I did sometimes have some fun. They had balls, pastics, excursions, and other social gatherings; but these horrid old Veterans have banquets and good times, but 'No Ladies Need Apply.' The old fellows keep all the good things to themselves. I have now become resigned to my lot as

Our readers will be gratified to know that His Royal Highness the Duke of Albany Provincial Grand Master Oxfordshire is recovering from the effects of his recent illness. On Wednesday the Duke and Duchess left Osborne House about one p.m. to take a cruise in the Admiralty yacht Lively, the tender of Rear Admiral the Duke of Edinburgh. Their Royal Highnesses drove to Trinity Wharf, East Cowes, to embark in the Royal yacht Alberta, which conveyed them to the Lively, which laid at anchor in the roadstead. At the Trinity Wharf a deputation from the inhabitants of East Cowes met their Royal Highnesses, and presented an address of welcome and congratulation to the Duke and Duchess. The Duke accepted the address, and gave a written reply, as follows:—

Mr. Robertson, Mr. Burnaby, Ladies and gentlemen,—I beg to thank you most cordially, both on the Duchess of Albany's and on my own behalf, for the kind and hearty welcome you have extended to us on our arrival at East Cowes, and for the good wishes which you express for our future happiness. The reception which the inhabitants of East Cowes have given us will serve to strengthen the interest I have always felt in a neighbourhood in which I have spent so many years of my past life, and which we hope we may frequently revisit in future."

It is believed that the destination of the Lively is the Scotch Coast, and our Royal brother with the Duchess will afterwards visit Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen at Balmoral. In reference to Prince Leopold's illness the Lancet says:—

"The Prince is known to suffer from constitutional weakness, with liability to hæmorrhage—hæmatophilia. Of this malady he has recently had an attack. Hæmatophilia ten years ago had no place in the College of Physicians' 'Nomenclature of Diseases.' The malady is interesting for several features other than the tendency to spontaneous hæmorrhage, or to bleeding from slight traumatic causes; such, for example, as the great proclivity to painful swellings of the joints, dependent or not upon injury, the fact of the morbid condition being in many cases congenital, and its hereditary transmission to males especially. It may be hoped that the present indisposition of the Duke of Albany is not of a serious character, and that His Royal Highness will make a good recovery; but it is abundantly evident that the avoidance of any considerable exertion must be continued for some time to come, and the Duke will need regard himself as an invalid. Since his marriage His Royal Highness has made a laudable and highly appreciated effort to assume a full share of those toils of State which in England have for many years devolved on the younger members of the Royal Family. The state of His Royal Highness's health clearly necessitates more than ordinary caution in the expenditure of strength. The care which the Duke of Albany is receiving from those about him is likely to carry him safely through the present trouble, and such self-restraint as he must be enjoined to practice rigorously in the future will, it is hoped, be successful in preserving a life which, like that of every other member of the reigning family, is dear to the heart of a loyal people."

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS are the best, cheapest, and the most popular remedies at all seasons, and under all circumstances they may be used with safety and with the certainty of doing good. Eruptions, rashes, and all descriptions of skin diseases, sores, ulcerations, and burns are presently benefited and ultimately cured by these healing, soothing, and purifying medicaments. The Ointment rubbed upon the abdomen checks all tendency to irritation in the bowels, and averts diarrhœa and other disorders of the intestines frequently prevailing through the summer and fruit season. Heat lumps, blotches, pimples, inflammations of the skin, muscular pains, neuralgic affections, and enlarged glands can be effectively overcome by using Holloway's remedies according to the instructions accompanying every packet.

WHAT IS THE REMEDY.

FROM THE FREEMASON'S REPOSITORY.

GREAT stress is justly laid upon the secrecy and inviolability of the ballot as used in passing upon the applications of candidates. It is a well understood law of Masonry that every member of a Lodge possesses the right to interpose an effectual bar against the entrance of an unworthy applicant, and that he is not to be questioned for his exercise of this right through the secret ballot. Great care is needed in the selection of new material, and the safeguards and tests which have been provided are, perhaps, none too many or severe. When a Brother casts an adverse ballot it is quite possible that he is performing a most important service to his Lodge and to the Craft. Brethren who have the courage of their convictions, so that they do not hesitate to bring about the rejection of unworthy applicants, are entitled to special honour. May the number of these watchful and conscientious brethren never grow less.

The fact, however, is nevertheless evident, that the secret ballot is liable to abuse, and sometimes occasions a good deal of trouble. In this country, where the rule of strict unanimity prevails in passing upon the names of petitioners for the degrees, a vast power is entrusted to the individual member, who, if ruled by a narrow, selfish, or malignant spirit, may wield this power in ways that are as base as their results are sad and disastrous. For some insufficient reason, influenced, perhaps, by some improper motive, a Mason bars the way of a deserving applicant, thus causing injury to his feelings if not to his reputation, while very likely the course taken introduces an element of confusion into the Lodge and tends to bring reproach upon the Institution.

Who does not know how ungenerously and offensively the ballot is sometimes used? A brother becomes aggrieved with his Lodge for something done or left undone, and straightway he resolves that the Body shall do no more work until the wrong is righted. Perhaps a friend of his has been rejected for good cause, other members of the Lodge must now have their friends rejected, cause or no cause. Perhaps the trouble is a personal difficulty with the Master, or some of the officers or members, and the casting of a negative ballot on every application is the method of retaliation adopted by a mean and cowardly nature. Perhaps the opposing Brother has failed to carry some measure on which his heart was set, and the failure has moved him to antagonise the Lodge by making his power felt through the exercise of the secret ballot. We have been cognisant of several instances where the best of material was rejected, evidently not on account of any personal feeling against or objection to the candidates, but rather because there was a desire to block the wheels of the Lodge and prevent all work until something was conceded or changed. Other motives may govern—those equally unjust and unmasonic—all tending to sad and disastrous results. Surely nothing can be more pitiable and vexatious than to have the harmony of a Lodge disturbed and its good reputation affected by the practices of a single obstructionist, perhaps, who seems determined that no work shall be done. Such an abuse of the ballot not only inflicts an injury upon the feelings and characters of good men outside the Fraternity, but it cuts deeper, and grievously wounds the Institution itself.

What is the remedy? In what way can the improper use of the ballot be checked? How can the wilful obstructionist be restrained in his purposes of evil? To attempt to answer these questions brings us face to face with several difficulties. Whatever is done, there must be no infringement upon the right of the ballot—no attempt to remove the secrecy which ought always to attend the exercise of this right. If therefore a member of a Lodge shall persist in casting a negative ballot whenever the names of candidates are proposed, having no sufficient reasons for such a course, but acting from caprice, resentment, or some other unworthy personal feeling, we do not see how such an obstructionist can be restrained in his use of the ballot, or disciplined, so long as he keeps his lips closed and plants himself upon the ground that the absolute freedom and secrecy of the ballot are assured to every Mason. It may be a defect of the system that Masonry cannot deal with an undeserving member holding this position, but it is to be remembered that only in exceptional cases is any gross abuse of the privilege of the ballot manifested—that the governing law in this matter works well in the great majority of instances where it is applied.

It will often happen, however, in a condition of things such as we have indicated, that the Brother casting an adverse ballot will voluntarily avow his act, and very likely boast of what he has done, or of what he proposes to do in making his power felt. If he thus lifts the veil of secrecy in which it is his prerogative to remain hidden, the Lodge acquires the right of passing upon his cause,—of inquiring into the motives by which he is evidently acting, and of administering a severe discipline should it be found that he has been making use of the ballot to gratify personal animosity or to secure some selfish benefit. The Lodge should not hesitate to proceed against any obstructionist when the proof is available that he acted from so base a spirit. Expulsion is the proper penalty to be imposed upon a Craftsman who is proved to have persisted in systematic and indiscriminate blackballing. Brethren have been excluded from the rights and benefits of Masonry for exercising the right of the ballot in an unjust and offensive manner, and few will be found to deny that they were treated according to their deserv.ings. Make examples of those who persistently abuse the ballot, and boast of what they are doing—those who avow their intention of preventing all work in the Lodge or other organisation—and in a little time the evil complained of will be abated, whilst Masonry will stand more firmly for having resolutely applied so stern a remedy.

RETURNING TO WORK.

DULL days and raw chilly evenings are bringing back our friends and neighbours from the country and the seaside, and London is beginning to assume once more its normal aspect of busy industry. The respite has been too brief to many, for mind and body alike require needful rest; a tonic which shall sweep away the cobwebs left by hard and continuous exertion; an oil which shall ease the cogwheels and bolts of a machinery that will go all the more swiftly and effectually after its "closing for renovation and repairs;" and an impulse gained to its motive power by the life-giving influences of health-invigorating exercise. As in other spheres of life, so it is with Masonic action; and, much as many would decry a cessation of work for ever so brief a recess, we are of opinion that an "interregnum," so far from militating against the interests of a Lodge, or proving a drag upon its movements, is to all intents and purposes a fillip which must end ultimately in adding sinew and strength to the means by which good work is to be achieved. It is a wise impulse, therefore, which prompts most of our Lodges, especially in the metropolis, to cease from labour during the summer months; for, although this season has certainly been marked by an absence of anything like the continuously brilliant weather that might have been expected, yet there are abundant reasons why the regular working of Lodges should be suspended for a time, when all who can spare the time and money are out of town, in the enjoyment of fresh scenes and "pastures new," and the companionship of friends as happy as themselves, all "on pleasure bent." He would be a bold man indeed who would assert that a Masonic gathering is all that could be desired when the evenings are bright, and the sunshine invites him away to outdoor pleasures that are so attractive, and must be taken advantage of ere the opportunity is lost. There is a certain degree of secrecy in Masonry which requires the exclusion of all exterior light; and the ventilation of many of the homes of our professional avocation is often defective, so that for a number of brethren to meet in the oppressive atmosphere of a Lodge frequently becomes irksome. The inevitable consequence is that the attendances at those Lodges which persistently pursue an unbroken session becomes sparse, and the proceedings uninteresting; and there can be no doubt these circumstances tend to form a habit of non-attendance on the part of members, from which Lodges must of necessity suffer. This should not be the case, but unfortunately it is so. If one attends a church, and experiences the sense of comparative indifference and sees the empty benches, the mind is imbued with a feeling of heaviness, which if strained, might develop into profound laxity, and ultimately into apathy. And so it is in a Masonic Lodge. If by the tenacious and obstinate whim of the rulers there is no rest allowed to the members, they become recalcitrant, in spite of their good intentions and motives; and the consequence is, that the work flags, and the interest of the "faithful few" who make a point of upholding the Master in all he does, is necessarily blunted. We must, therefore, commend the plan adopted by most London Lodges—and many in the country, too, so far as that goes—of making it an understood thing that during the heated term of summer there shall be no labour to be performed, but that, like all other classes and interests, we shall have a holiday, by which to recruit both the physical and the mental faculties, and thus fortify ourselves for the work to which we must ere long return. If this is an understood maxim, that all the business shall be suspended during a month or two at this season of the year, all will gladly hail the respite, and none can be disappointed. As boys at boarding-school whose parents or guardians will not be "bothered" with them during the vacation ply themselves half-heartedly to the lessons they are compelled to learn, whilst their buoyant and happy-hearted fellows are away on the wings of holiday-keeping, so our brethren who are not happy any longer than they are hard at work, have their Lodges of Instruction, at which they can figure in the most prominent positions congenial to their thoughts, and make progress which may do them good suit and service in after days. It remains to be seen how these plodders progress in after years; but to our mind there is nothing like a span of leisure now and then to invigorate the faculties and brace the man to any amount of hard work which may be required of him. Thus it is that our zealous brethren who have been basking in the sunshine of the moors, indulging in a sturdy tramp across the stubbles where has been heard "the frequent gun," skimming over dancing waves on sea and river, or toiling up the mountain side, come home with the keenest and most pleasant anticipations of a resumption of labour, strengthened to it by the consciousness that nothing has been required of them during the vacation, and that they will start afresh in a line with all the rest of their brethren.

We are just now at the commencement of another session, and already the welcome summonses are reaching us of Lodges meeting for the first time after the recess. Already the gavel has sounded in one or two of them, and we have assisted at gatherings wherein brethren have reassembled, with visages bronzed by a sunnier clime than we have enjoyed in London, and listened to their accounts of pleasant "accidents" by road, river, and rail. Presently our Lodges will be in full vigour of work, and the anticipation, "happy may we meet again," will have been realised to the full. There will be the officers posting themselves to the work of campaign, a spirit of healthy emulation inspiring them to renewed assiduity in the interests of the Craft, and the discussion of important questions blended with the amenities of fraternal life such as are only found within the precincts of our Masonic Lodges. We commend to them much that has been said and written at various times, and especially during the recess, as to the judicious application of funds, the secret of the prosperity of Freemasonry, and the various subjects to which attention has been directed in these columns. It must be remembered that Masons are, in every sense of the term, gentlemen, and form a society which has within it no actual kind of opposition, even in the sense in which it applies in a Parliamentary signification, although in many phases it approaches it in the consideration of certain matters. For instance, a Lodge which is swayed entirely by one section is not unfrequently found to drift into discord and difficulties, and the parties who have had it all their own way for a lengthened period receive a check, when changes occur in the rulers of a Lodge. There is in many Lodges a rivalry, not always of a hostile nature, between the "old blood and the new," and it will be well if the former do not forget that they themselves were young at one time, and had their own views and ideas as to progress. We are continually hearing our Past Masters and others advocating the infusion of this "new blood," and it is but fair that they should bear in mind that as intelligence is imported into any society it is bound to rise, Saul-like and shoulder high, above some of the rest, and assert its power. They must not therefore be surprised that when new members grasp the enthusiasm and love which are engendered by a close study of our mysteries, they should desire to push into the leading ranks, even to the discomfiture of some who had hitherto been shining lights and unapproachable by those by whom they were surrounded. We know of Past Masters who, because they have performed the installation ceremony for ten or twenty years in succession, feel personally injured by the very suggestion to take the responsibility off their hands, if but for a single occasion. It is on the principle "Once an alderman, always an alderman." But this is a principle which has long since exploded, so far as Masonry is concerned; and the wish expressed now-a-days at almost every Lodge that lays claim to excellence of work is, that each Master on his retirement shall have gained sufficient confidence and culture to instal his successor. Such a practice should become universal, and would, if striven after in all cases, be productive of an infinity of good. We sincerely trust that the remarks that have fallen from our correspondents, and on which we have commented during the last few weeks, may be taken to heart in connection with the work which is about to be undertaken in the various Lodges, both in London and the provinces. We are aware that all the sentiments which have been uttered are but the outcome of those previously advanced, over and over again, and we do not care always to be harping on the same string. But now that the opening of the session is fairly upon us, it may not be inopportune to direct the attention of Masters and Officers once more to the various suggestions which have been thrown out relative to those points to be observed for the benefit of the Craft and the advantage of their respective Lodges, and trust they may derive at least some advantage from the remarks that have appeared in our columns. A consideration of the questions lately raised upon the various points connected with our system, the correction of irregularities, and the means to be adopted by which to safeguard and protect the interests of the Order, may well supply food for meditative thought and friendly debate amongst the happy gatherings of Masons in which we hope ere long to be in full participation.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

WE are very pleased to observe that the fund which is being raised under the patronage of our Most Worshipful Grand Master, having in view the establishment of a Royal College of Music, is being brought prominently under the notice of the Craft. It is well known in the City and elsewhere that through the exertions of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales an elaborate scheme has been founded for the cultivation of the refined tastes in music, and that it has received the heartiest support of all who desire to promote the higher education of the masses, and to place within the reach of all the opportunities of hearing, or taking part in, the practice of the music of the great masters. As a result of a communication from Sir Philip Cunliffe Owen, Past Master of the Marquis of Dalhousie Lodge, No. 1159, a circular letter has been addressed to all the Lodges and Chapters on the roll of United Grand Lodge and the Supreme Grand Chapter, stating that His Royal Highness the Grand Master allows him to suggest that each Lodge and Chapter should be asked to contribute in their corporate capacity, and that individual Masons should be also asked to contribute a guinea each to the object which their Grand Master has so much at heart. Colonel Shedwell Clerke, in his letter says, as the matter is not a Masonic one, the suggestion cannot well be submitted to the Craft in a formal or official manner; but as it seems only right and proper that the brethren in general should become acquainted in some form with his Royal Highness's sentiments and wishes on the subject, he forwards a copy of Sir P. Cunliffe Owen's letter, and adds that he will be happy to take charge of any subscriptions which Lodges, Chapters, or individual Masons may feel inclined to contribute towards the Royal College of Music. There can be little doubt that the significance of the movement, apart from the spirit of loyalty which moves the hearts of Masons towards their Most Worshipful Grand Master, will prompt them liberally to respond to the invitation, when the Lodges are once more in full working operation. The movement has received the heartiest and most spontaneous support from all the City companies and guilds, the traders, merchants, and the public generally, and is one which we shall gladly see the Craft upholding with all the influence and liberality it is known to possess.

MASONIC LITERATURE.

From the Voice of Masonry.

"ON entering upon the study of our art, the Masonic student will find it indispensably necessary to read the current Masonic literature of the day," says a model secretary of one of our southern jurisdictions in one of his annual reports.

While reading the report from which the above extract is taken, this question presented itself: How many Masons are there who enter upon the examination of our art as a study? For Masonry is an art when taken in its true character and bearings. Yes, it is an art peculiar to itself, not only embracing the various forms of literature, but the arts and sciences, which are symbolised by "Geometry, which is the basis of our art."

Unfortunately for the Institution of Freemasonry, there are Masons who, although they are within the portals of our Temple, yet are not of us, only as far as numbers are concerned. We may well call them pleasure-day Masons, who, enjoying as they do all the pleasures of the Craft, and reaping all of its benefits, are unwilling to perform any of its labours, or endure any of those privations which befal us.

While in attendance at our Grand Lodge at its last Communication, a brother sitting at my side listlessly turning over the pages of the printed transactions of that body at its previous Communication, turned to me and remarked, "What does all this amount to?" In reply I took the book from his hand, opened it at the foreign correspondence report, and requested him to read a little in that part, and see if he could find anything interesting. He did so, and became so interested that he did not hear his name read at the roll-call of Lodge, and lost his vote. After the session I found him again, and asked if he found anything interesting in that book, and if it amounted to anything? His reply was to the point, to say the least, and was: "What a fool I have been! I had no idea there was anything in it except dry correspondence, interesting only to parties concerned. You won't catch me making any such foolish statements again," and when I saw him the next day trying to beg from our Grand Secretary a few copies of our Grand Lodge Proceedings of previous years, I made up my mind that I never should. Now that brother is not the only one who has had, or still has, the erroneous idea that Grand Lodge proceedings are worthless, or that Masonic literature is senseless stuff; either from the fact of never having read it, or being incapable of appreciating it.

The brother referred to is a splendid ritual worker. There is not a position in the Lodge which he cannot fill with skill, and as a ritualist he is as near perfection as it is possible for any man to be, yet in the one thing needful, a knowledge of Masonic literature, he is an ignoramus; but, if appearances are not deceitful, in one year from now that cannot be said of him.

The reports on foreign correspondence of those Grand Lodges which issue them, and fortunately the most of them do, are gotten up with a great deal of care, and involve a vast amount of hard work. In fact they are the cream of all the transactions of all other Grand Bodies condensed. The arguments and ideas presented embrace all there is of any importance, and in fact some things that are not. If one wishes to soar into the heavens of rhetorical effect—gush—some call it, he finds it somewhere in them. If he wants sound logic, substantial facts, wit, sarcasm, explanations on any of the mooted questions of the day, and diversity of opinions on various subjects pertaining to the welfare of Masonry, they give it to him. In fact, it is but seldom that one finds such a variety of reading in any one book, as is found within the covers of a report on foreign correspondence, yet, how many of them are read? Perhaps, not one in ten. Now, who is to blame? Certainly not the authors, for they do their level best, nor the Grand Bodies themselves, for they issue them for the purpose of having them read. Then, it must be in the brethren themselves; and why is it so? Because those who have never taken the pains to read them think they are void of interest, but let me assure that class, if they will read only one of them they will be anxious enough for others, provided that they are inclined to sound reading, not trash.

Now, there are some brethren who call themselves Masons, who make want of time an excuse for Masonic ignorance. I suppose street Arabs have the same excuse for their ignorance. That class, though, find plenty of time to read every silly, love-sick story that comes in their way, where blood and thunder are the predominating feature, but they have no time to devote to the perusal of the literature of an Institution that stands without a peer, except the church of the Deity.

Such a state of affairs is deplorable in the extreme. It is a burning shame, as well as a lasting disgrace, that there are so few of the Masons in America who take interest in Masonic literature. Every little while we hear of some Masonic periodical succumbing to the pressure of want of patronage. New Jersey, for instance, with her 11,772 Masons, failed to give adequate support to even one Masonic journal; and she is not the only jurisdiction having a large membership that fails to do her duty towards extending Masonic knowledge. The New England States, for instance, with a membership of 78,170, support, if I am not mistaken, only four Masonic periodicals. What a showing that is for the intellectuality of New England Masons! Yet it is no worse for them than for those of the rest of the country, and, to use a Yankee phrase, "guess not quite so bad." It galls, yet it is an undeniable fact.

We have seen many brethren who could prefix "Sir" to their names, who were as ignorant as new born babes as to the real origin of Masonry, aside from the traditions and allegorical illustrations of the degrees through which they had passed, and who expressed the utmost surprise, and, I may say, indignation, when told that "Masonry is a system of morality, veiled in allegory and illustrated by symbols;" also, that there are many excellent periodicals published, devoted to the interests of Masonry. Their views of Masonry seemed to be concentrated in the one idea of work, work, WORK, WORK. I almost tire of the sound of the name, as if the whole aim, intent and purpose of Masonry were in conferring degrees, increasing membership, and attending feasts, parades and G. Lodge Communications. I tell you, my brethren, the bare ritualistic work of Masonry is but one of the least of its fundamental parts. Its principles are subjects of endless thought. Its symbols are well worth the serious contemplation of the brightest talent. Its history, from its formation through the dark ages, to its transformation from Operative to Speculative Masonry in 1717, is yet mere guess work, with twelve distinct theories to guess upon. Perhaps the word "guess" may be a strong one to use, but what is not proven must be guess work. Were it not for such authors as Mackey, Morris, Hooper, Hughan, Moore, Fort, and others equally talented, who realise the vast importance of Masonic literature, we might well say that we are in perfect darkness, and have no choice but that of accepting the ritualistic work of Preston, Webb, Cross, and their disciples, as literal facts. Are they literal facts? Can they be proven as such? If so, when, where, and by whom? But, bear in mind that every act of Freemasonry's esoteric and exoteric work presents to the mind truths and principles which are the very acme of perfection, and which are best impressed upon our minds by the numerous traditions of its degrees.

Mackey's Encyclopædia of Freemasonry is a library of itself. Procure it, and you will be well repaid for the money invested in it. Bro. Fort, too, in his "Early History and Antiquities of Freemasonry," throws light upon many subjects, and last, but by no means least, the reports on foreign correspondence of our various Grand Bodies are replete with good things that make an intellectual feast worth thousands in comparison to the flash literature that is so prevalent.

When such brethren as Drummond, Parvin, Wheeler, Singleton and others with equal ability, let fly their trenchant pens, then we who are less informed stand aside and profit by their experience and learning. Were it not for that class of brethren who realise the vast importance of their work, we should remain in ignorance and lose many a dainty morsel of intellectual food. For ourselves, we read all that we can get hold of, and then form our own conclusions. We read Masonic literature because we crave for more light. We comment upon the literary productions of others, because we find that it puts a fresh impetus into our sluggish brain. We try to profit by our readings, and we think we do, whether others think so or not. We find time, too, although we have to scratch to find bread and butter for the mouths dependent upon us. "Where there is a will there is a way;" and having a will we are bound to have the way. We read all the Proceedings of our Grand Bodies that we are able to beg, borrow and —; well, we sometimes forget who we borrow of. We read them because we would not be ignorant of what is going on in other jurisdictions to promote the best interests of our Institution. Although we find many things said and written that we wish were not; many resolutions and bye-laws passed that do not coincide with our views, and which in our opinion do not follow out the ideas of brotherly love and unity, yet they present other men's ideas, and many of them show the Yankee cuteness of their framers to carry out their points.

In reading the reports on foreign correspondence we find many good points for or against important questions that have sprung up. We find too, a vast diversity of opinions, and are enabled to form our own with a greater degree of correctness than we otherwise could. Now, if the brethren would only think as we do, there would not be many copies of the Grand Lodge Proceedings unused and unstudied, but unfortunately for themselves many of them do not. Again, we have many periodicals published in the interests of Masonry, which are "good to have in the house." They not only give us Masonic news before it is stale, but contain many choice bits of Masonic literature, history, facts, and the doings of our brethren in other places. We have many times heard brethren say that they could not afford it, or had not time to read them. "Can't afford it!" Stop a moment and let us see whether you can or not. Now, the expense is from nine to twenty-five cents a month, not quite a cent a day, for a first-class periodical, which will give more sound, substantial reading than two-thirds of the trash that you do take, and that is published at a greater price. "Can't afford it!" What a flimsy argument! To illustrate. A short time since we asked a prominent brother Mason how many Masonic publications he was taking, and met the hackneyed answer, "None; can't afford it." Now for the sequel, and we pointed it out to him afterwards too. Before he passed out of our sight his cigar bill would have paid for a good Masonic monthly for one year. He could afford to "stand treat," but could not afford the same amount of money invested in something that would have been of lasting benefit to him. "Standing treat" gratified his appetite and diminished his pocket book, while good, sound Masonic literature would have been the means of enlightening his befogged brain, and have furnished him with an intellectual treat. One passed off in smoke and nothing was left but the ashes, while the other would have brought to his mind new ideas and facts that he had never before even dreamt of. Now, which kind of treating is the best? Surely there can be but one answer.

We reminded him afterwards that that "can't afford it" nonsense was "played out." He admitted it, and to-day has several Masonic periodicals on his table. We have not the means at hand of knowing just how many publications there are devoted to Masonry; but this much we do know, that any one of them is well worth double the amount of money asked for it.

Now, the brethren who say they cannot afford the price asked for any one of the Masonic publications, in the majority of instances, can, or at least do afford as much, if not more, for flash literature, which is devoid of either fact or principle. Yes, they can afford that, but cannot afford to take a Masonic paper which has in it good, sound, substantial brain food on topics in which every Mason has the most vital interest. That class can afford to stand treat now and then, and to have a jolly good time with the boys, but are too awfully poor to subscribe for a Masonic journal. Fie upon such Masons; they do not know what Masonry is. They never go further than the outside shuck—never penetrate beyond the mere surface.

Nine-tenths of the questions our Grand Masters are called upon to answer come from that class who would, if they could, appear to be learned Masons; yet they are too poor, or too lazy, to read even the constitution and bye-laws of their own jurisdiction.

Then that nonsensical plea comes in "haven't time." Plenty of time to do anything your inclinations desire, but no time to read of Masonry; plenty of time to retail choice bits of gossip, and to have a good time, but no time for the perusal of Masonic subjects; plenty of time to air your profound(?) learning in the Lodge-room, but no time to back up your theories with facts or history; plenty of time to devote to any other recreation that presents itself, but no time to improve the mind and store it with knowledge.

Although much has been said and done within the past twenty years to bring the Craft to a higher state of intellectual culture, there is plenty of room yet for improvement. One way to bring about that improvement is to patronise our Masonic publications to a greater extent than we do, and thus gladden the hearts of publishers by larger subscription lists, and consequently secure even a better class of Masonic publications. We are quite that Masonic editors have not the faculty of living without money, and must have cash as well as others. I trust the readers of the "Voice of Masonry" will not think I am writing in the interest of any particular publication, for I am not. It is for all of them if they wish it.

If any of the "can't afford it," or "haven't time" class should, through some mysterious dispensation, happen to read this, we are quite certain they will be as "mad as March hares." Now, that is just what we want. If we can only get them mad they will give the subject some thought. Then we shall have gained a point, and as one point gained leaves the field open for more, perhaps in the end this continual cant of "can't afford it" and "haven't time" will cease.

A word, now to you, editors. Keep on in your good work. Give us who do crave for more intellectual light that for which we crave. Give us good, sound, substantial Masonic literature. Do not get discouraged because your subscription lists do not increase in the proportion that you wish, but "keep a stiff upper lip." Remember that all Masons are not drones. There are many who receive benefit from your publications and look forward to their coming with pleasure. Advocate those principles of our Institution that stand without peers. Uphold the right, and frown down the wrong, whether it be inside or outside of our mystic circle. All that the Craft want is to be woke up. Wake them up. Keep on in your work until the happy end is accomplished, and then, and not until then, can you rest upon your laurels.

LODGE HISTORIES.

ANCHOR AND HOPE LODGE, No. 37, BOLTON.

IT is always a source of profit, as well as of pleasure and gratification, to the members of any society when, as a result either of individual or collective industry and research, they are placed in possession of the earliest records concerning its origin, or the salient points of interest which have marked the career of the institution from the period of its birth. The antiquarian and the archæologist find their chief delight in raking out from among dusty and hidden archives some gem of folk-lore, some long-forgotten occurrence, some allusion to, or doings of, those who took the initiatory stages in the body, and whose names are revered by surviving members, as the personages they represent are seen only through the dim vista of remote years. They say a country is happy that has no history, but it is different with the institutions which so many of us hold dear, and whose traditions, as they are revived, scrap by scrap, are treasured amongst their most cherished heirlooms. It is for this reason that we are always pleased to receive the histories of our Masonic Lodges, for they form the most reliable data we can possess for the comparison of dates, for identifying individualities, and shedding new light upon thoughts and opinions expressed in modern times upon the antiquity of the Craft, and the changes that have marked its progress down to our own time. We have therefore perused with a considerable degree of pleasure the history, which has been furnished us, of the Anchor and Hope Lodge, of Bolton, now standing No. 37 on the United Grand Lodge of England, which has been compiled by Bro. George Parker Brockbank, Secretary of the Lodge, and P. Prov. S.G. Deacon East Lancashire, and Bro. James Newton P.M. in 37, and also a Past Prov. S.G. Deacon of East Lancashire. This is not the first time that Bro. Brockbank has entered into the arena of Masonic research, and we have much to thank him and his coadjutors for in placing within our reach another valuable addition to Craft literature. This history has been written in commemoration of the Sesqui Centennial of the Lodge, which will be attained on the 23rd of next month, and it will be read with peculiar interest, not merely by the brethren of the Lodge itself, but by many others also who desire to add to their stock of Masonic knowledge by a study of those links which bind the present with the past, and who find relaxation in comparing the manners and customs of "ye olden time" with those of more modern date. A glance at the little volume under consideration reveals a vast amount of careful and painstaking research, seeing that the old records have become so scanty, through a variety of accidental causes, that it must have involved considerable labour and sagacity on the part of the compilers to have framed the materials at their command into so reliable and comprehensive a whole. The records from the year 1836 to the present time are all complete; but prior to that date the doings of the brethren of the Anchor and Hope are enshrouded in comparative mystery. We are informed that according to an inventory taken in 1843, there were then existing, in adddition to the records prior to 1836, possessed by the Lodge, books of records from 1786 to 1792, from 1799 to 1825, from 1825 to 1836; and a cash book from 1786 to 1843. We are told that about 22 years ago, these latter books were negligently or culpably destroyed by fire by a clerk of the then Secretary, possibly under the impression that they were so much waste paper; and the oldest record book of the Lodge (the old minute and cash book of 1765 to 1776) was only saved from a like ruthless fate by the timely intervention of Bro. Brockbank, who accidentally entered the room and prevented its destruction. It is obvious that had the whole of these records been preserved, as they should have been, the compilers would have been spared much anxious search among contemporary records, and been able to write a much fuller account of the career of the Lodge since 1765. They seem to have, however, had the benefit of the minutes, &c., of the Royal Arch Chapter of Concord, attached to the Lodge, which are extant from its commencement, in 1785, an account of which was given by Bro. Newton in the fourth volume of the Masonic Magazine; and also those of the Lodge of Antiquity, No. 146, from 1786, which were also sketched by Bro. Newton in the Christmas number of the same periodical, in 1878. Moreover, they had the benefit of the records of the St. John's Lodge, No. 221, dating from the year 1797, some very interesting facts concerning which were recently published by Bro. Brockbank. From these a vast amount of valuable and interesting information has been obtained, and many missing links have been supplied, though not to the extent desired, or may possibly be subsequently obtained. In their introduction, the compilers feel bound to make these explanations, and express the modest hope, in thus submitting the result of their united labours, "that any imperfections therein may be attributed to their lack of information," over which they could have no possible control, "rather than to any desire to shirk their self-imposed duty." All who know the zeal and unwearied assiduity of those who appeal for the indulgence of their readers will at once acquit them of any approach to the last-named imputation, and be the first to applaud the vast amount of labour and the judicious care which have evidently been lavished upon this "labour of love." The writers acknowledge, with especial thanks, the invaluable assistance and information on many points afforded by Bro. W. J. Hughan Past Grand Deacon, and Bro. H. G. Buss Assistant Grand Secretary, the former of whom has "kindly read and revised the whole of these pages," while the latter "has been at considerable pains in tracing a complete list of members from 1765," which list is appended to the history just published. They also acknowledge their indebtedness to Bro. Hughan's "Masonic Memorials," and "Masonic Register," and Bro. Gould's "Four Old Lodges," and "The Atholl Lodges," which they designate as mines of wealth to diligent Masonic students.

Having thus briefly referred to the difficulties experienced by Bros. Brockbank and Newton, and the help they have received in the production of their history, we turn to the work itself, and endeavour to give a bird's-eye outline of its very entertaining contents. After referring to the secession of numerous brethren, about 1788, from the parent Grand Lodge of English Masonry, which they averred had adopted new, and departed from the old, landmarks, resulting in the distinctive epithets of "Ancient" and "Modern" Masons, we are brought to the successful union of these two rival bodies in 1813, when His Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex was elected Grand Master of the United Grand Lodge. The warrant for the Anchor and Hope Lodge was granted on 23rd October 1735, by Lord Viscount Montacute, Grand Master of the "Moderns" Grand Lodge, a copy of which is given, signed by Thos. Batson D.G.M., Geo. Rook S.G.W., and J. M. Smythe J.G.W. From this document it appears that "our Rt. Worshipful and well-beloved Brother, Mr. Edward Entwisle," is impowered and authorised to convene "our brethren at Bolton-le-Moors," who had signed the petition, and to constitute them into a Regular Lodge in due form. Mr. Entwisle was to take special care to admit none but those who had been regularly made Masons, and the Lodge was to be constituted "with like privileges as all other duly constituted Lodges," and that those admitted "be required to conform themselves to all and every the rules and regulations in the printed Book of Constitutions, and observe such other rules and regulations as shall from time to time be transmitted to them, by us or Thomas Batson Deputy Grand Master, or the Grand Master or his Deputy for the time being. And shall forward to his Deputy a list of the members of their Lodge, together with a copy of the regulations to be observed, to the end they may be entered in the Grand Lodge, and upon the due execution of this our said Dispensation the said Mr. Edward Entwisle is hereby required to transmit to us or our said Deputy a certificate under his hand at the time and place of such constitution, in order that it may be entered in the Book of the Roll of Lodges." At this date there were two other Lodges in Lancashire, at Salford and Leigh, both of which were subsequently erased by Grand Lodge, since which time (probably about 1700) the Anchor and Hope has held the distinguished position of being the premier Lodge in Lancashire, although another Lodge, "Unity," then No. 32, warranted in 1732, met at Werath, near Oldham, and continued there about twenty years, when it became extinct. It is claimed also for the Hope and Anchor that it has at the present time the especial distinction of being the oldest of the Lodges originally warranted in a Province and remaining on the roll from its constitution till now. This is a matter referred to with pardonable pride by the compilers, seeing that the Lodge has remained on the roll from 1742 to the present day, "being thus the Premier Provincial Lodge, having preserved its continuity as such from its constitution in 1733 to 1882, a period of one hundred and fifty years, never having been removed from the town for which it was first of all granted, and never having lapsed or apparently been liable to erasure from any cause whatever throughout that long period." The Mr. Edward Entwisle named in the Warrant appears to have been a mercer at Bolton, and died unmarried in June 1744, his remains being interred in Bolton parish churchyard. In the earliest records found, the Lodge, which was originally numbered 105, was called to meet in a private room in Bolton-le-Moors, in Lancashire, "on the next Wednesday to every full moon," though the locality of this room cannot now with certainty be given. However, on the authority of Mrs. Fielding, into whose hands some of the relics left by Mr. Entwisle fell, it is stated that it was "in Churchgate, opposite to the "Man and Scythe" Inn, graphically adding that "the brethren assembled in white gloves, with long cuffs or gauntlets, and white leather aprons, and at the making of a Mason the brethren would strike their aprons with their hands three times, which was to make a loud report, the Tyler parading an adjoining room with a drawn sword to keep guard." This description is characteristic of the feminine curiosity in a gathering then quite novel, and to her, as a matter of course, inexplicably interesting, and therefore indelibly fixed upon her attention; and the record is sufficiently significant to fix the early trysting place of the Bolton Masons. Bro. Entwisle, the first W.M. of the Lodge, was also the first Prov. Grand Master of Lancashire (1734), receiving a patent from the Earl of Crauford, the Grand Master, and was succeeded by five other Prov. Grand Masters, whose names and armorial bearings, together with the dates of their appointments, are elaborately painted on an old banner in the possession of the Lodge, "which is treasured by its members as one of its greatest curiosities." From the extract we have quoted, and others forming the context, it may be safely assumed, in spite of the loss of the records prior to 1765, that the Lodge continued to meet in a private room for the first thirty-three years of its existence.

There will be a regular meeting of the City of London Lodge, No. 201, at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham Street, on Monday evening next, and as there are some rather important questions on the agenda, in addition to working in the three degrees, a goodly attendance of the brethren may be anticipated.

Bro. Fenner, W.M. of the Kingsland Lodge, No. 1693, P.M. Upton Lodge, No. 1227, will rehearse the ceremony of installation, at the Finsbury Park Lodge of Instruction, on Wednesday next, at the Cock Tavern, Highbury. Lodge will be opened at 8·30.

Bro. W. Wright, Organist of the Citadel Lodge, 1897; Finsbury Park, 1288; United Strength, 228; Sir Hugh Myddelton, 1602; has been appointed Organist and Choir Master to St. John the Baptist Church, Hoxton.

REVIEWS.

The Story of the Preservation of Epping Forest. By John T. Bedford. London: W. H. and L. Collingridge, City Press Office, Aldersgate-street, E.C.

In a neat little brochure Mr. John T. Bedford, who is well known as a prominent member of the Corporation of London, presents to us a lecture delivered by him to the members of one of the City clubs, beyond whose precincts it is well so admirable and interesting a treatise should find readers. Since the date on which this discourse was listened to with pleasurable attention in Fleet-street, where it was uttered, it is well known that Epping Forest has been secured to the public for ever as a place for recreation and enjoyment, the ceremony having been most graciously presided over by our beloved Sovereign, amidst a scene of royal splendour but rarely witnessed in modern times. There is a special interest in this event to us as Freemasons, inasmuch as it was commemorated by the Queen's conferring the distinction of a baronetcy upon Bro. John Whittaker Ellis, the present Lord Mayor of London, and Grand Junior Warden of England. In his chatty and admirable discourse, Mr. Bedford tells the story of the means adopted by the City to secure for its inhabitants the possession of the magnificent Forest as the "people's playground" for ever; and it is hardly necessary for us to recount the praises which have been showered upon the Corporation of London for their patriotic zeal in persevering, against stupendous odds, in claiming this priceless boon for so many millions of all classes of society to whom the opportunities for healthful recreation and pleasure are so few and far between. The writer begins by relating how the resolution of Mr. Cowper Temple in the House of Commons—"That it is the duty of the Government to preserve Epping Forest for the recreation and enjoyment of the people," was opposed by Mr. Robert Lowe (now Viscount Sherbrook), the then Chancellor of the Exchequer (1871), who said that "Epping Forest belonged to the lords of the manors, and was vested in them to do as they liked with," and who afterwards, although the resolution was carried by a majority of nearly one hundred, informed the people of Glasgow that "It was treated by the Government with stupendous indifference!" This seems to have aroused Mr. Bedford's eager attention to the subject, impelled to the task of "mastering all the facts of the case" by Mr. Cowper Temple's allusion, in his speech in support of the people of the metropolis. He then goes on to state how that originally all Essex was a forest, the pleasures of which were mainly reserved to royal hunters after venison, and how, under that prescient King, Edward I., the boundaries of the Forest were perambulated, and its boundaries settled for some centuries. Following the chronological events which occurred from that period up to 1871, the writer reminds us that he proposed in the Court of Common Council the following resolution:—"That a committee be appointed to seek a conference with her Majesty's Ministers to ascertain on what terms and conditions the Corporation can secure to the people, for purposes of public health and recreation, those parts of Epping Forest which have not been enclosed with the assent of the Crown or by legal authority." That motion was seconded by Mr. Pedler, whose name is never mentioned without respect in the important ward of Farringdon Without—at that time Chief Commoner of the Corporation; was warmly supported by Mr. Deputy Fry, to whom we owe the Holborn Viaduct, the grandest City improvement of modern times; and was carried unanimously.

Mr. Bedford then calls to mind the Chancery suits, the details of which are ever green in the memories of the citizens of London, and the "red-banded" injunctions which were obtained to plough up some of the most glorious spots in the Forest; the depredations of the London roughs in cutting down the holly bushes; and the costs imposed upon the Corporation by a "shabby Government" in the prosecution of the suit; and imparts considerable humour into his narrative by relating how that at one time half-a-dozen Common Councillors were "nearly starved to death," whilst engaged in perambulating the Forest in company with the Epping Forest Commissioners. We will not spoil the readers' interest by anticipating the succeeding chapters in which Mr. Bedford describes the troubles through which the Corporation passed, the result of which is now so generally known, and will be remembered so long as Epping Forest lasts. It is sufficient here to state that the battles waged so long and so unwearyingly ultimately resulted in complete success for the people; and we are told who were the leaders who took prominent part in the various legal battles fought on behalf of the City. Mr. Bedford, with commendable modesty, conceals the part which he himself took in those memorable campaigns, but his deeds are nevertheless none the less known and recognised, for they appear in letters of gold whenever the subject of Epping Forest is mentioned. In rhapsody, however, he exclaims:—"During the many years that have elapsed since the memorable 25th of May 1871, seldom has a fortnight passed, except in the depth of winter, without my visiting Epping Forest. It is fairyland to me—always fresh, always beautiful, always interesting. I gaze upon its many lovely spots with a kind of mental rapture difficult to explain. I constitute myself a willing guide to the wanderers I meet there; and on great occasions, such as Bank Holidays, I have my abiding reward in witnessing the enjoyment of tens of thousands of those who, but for Epping Forest, would scarcely know how beautiful God made the world." This is a very pardonable piece of modest exultation and pleasure, after all the writer has done to help forward the great work which has been accomplished; and the thanks due to him on that account are only intensified by his placing before the world this brief but thoroughly comprehensive record of the means by which the Forest has been secured to the people. The work is got up in the most approved style of the typographic art, as all may expect who are acquainted with the very eminent firm from which it emanates.

REVISION OF THE BOOK OF CONSTITUTIONS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have read your remarks on the discussion which took place on the above subject at the last meeting of G.L., and, in reply, will quote an extract from the Constitutions of Freemasonry, for which I am indebted to my excellent friend and Brother, John Newton, F.R.A.S., P.M. 174, 1607.

MEMO.

At a Grand Lodge assembled on the 27th December 1813, it was resolved:—"That the Laws and Regulations which existed in the two Societies (York and London) previous to the reunion, should be referred to the Board of General Purposes, with directions for them to form one system for the future government of the United Craft."

The Board having attentively considered all the laws then existing, as well as those of most of the other Grand Lodges in Europe, prepared a code of Laws, which was submitted to the consideration of a Special Grand Lodge on the 1st of February 1815, whereupon it was ordered that copies should be made and left at two convenient places for the perusal of all the members of G.L. for one month. During this month the Board of General Purposes met weekly, to receive and discuss any alterations or amendments which might be suggested. The Laws thus approved were again read and discussed at a Special G.L. on the 31st May, and were then ordered to lie open for another month for the perusal of the brethren. At a Special G.L., held on 23rd August, these Laws were a THIRD time read, discussed, and unanimously approved, and it was resolved that they should be in force for three years from 1st of November 1815, and then be subject for revision. In order to make these Laws as perfect as possible, and to enable the G.L. to avail itself of the best experience, it was further resolved that any Brother who can suggest any useful alterations or amendments be requested to transmit his opinion to the G. Secretaries, and when the Laws are revised such suggestions will receive due consideration.

W. WILLIAMS P.G.M. Dorset.

By the foregoing, you will perceive that so far back as 1813, or nearly seventy years ago, it took the Board of General Purposes from 27th Dec. 1813 to 1st Feb. 1815 to revise the Laws. Another month was allowed for any members of G.L. to suggest alterations; and it was another two months before they were again submitted to a Special G.L., and it was only in August, or yet another three months, before they were unanimously approved, and then another two months before they were to be in force,—even then only for three years,—at the end of which time they were to undergo a final revision. So that from the time when the question was first mooted, in December 1813, till the time when they were finally adopted, was a matter of five years, during which period any member of G.L., of the Craft, or any Brother, had a right to a voice in the framing of the Laws, and yet now objection is taken because a desire is expressed to grant time for allowing Provincial Grand Lodges—to say nothing of private Lodges or individuals—time to consider this long-wanted revision of our Book of Constitutions. In the paragraph in your article p 179, lines 7 to 12, "No member of the Craft has yet, to our knowledge, put forward anything different to what has been decided by the Board, and it can hardly be said that the brethren had not been able to consider the alterations fully as they could 'easily'* be seen at Freemasons' Hall, or in the hands of the Prov. G. Secretaries." Now, Sir, brethren cannot easily inspect the new alterations, not from any opposition by the officials, for they are always most courteous and obliging, but because the brethren are for the most part men of business, and they cannot afford to spend the most valuable part of two or three days on the matter, and no cursory glance would suffice for an opinion worth having. Whereas, by discussing the matter in a regular Lodge or a Lodge of Emergency, or, better still, purchasing and taking a copy home for perusal of an evening, any member could easily make himself acquainted with the whole matter, by comparing it with the book now in use, and so, when the Special Grand Lodge was held, he would be in a position to speak, and that with weight and authority. I do not attach much weight to Bro. Fenn's objection, "because the old copies have run out," as that can be remedied at a very small cost, by having 1000 or more struck off, with the present slips and alterations—as in page 104, section 16—inserted in their proper places. This will have to be done I feel certain before the new laws have been definitely decided upon. When I have had the opportunity of ascertaining the status of Freemasonry in 1813, as compared with what it is now, you will most probably hear again from,

Yours fraternally,

C. J. PERCEVAL.

1 Cecil-street, Strand, 9th September 1882.

P.S. If any zealous Mason, whether a member of Grand Lodge or not, has wailed through my letter, this is to remind him to make an application to the Grand Secretary's office for a copy of the proposed revised laws, and every W.M. should see that his Lodge is supplied with one.

P.P.S.—Since writing the above I have made inquiries at the Grand Secretary's office, and find that so far from the edition of 1873 of the Book of Constitutions having run out, there are at least 2000 copies on hand. Still, as the annual sale is about 6000, I suppose Bro. Fenn considered 2000 as a mere nothing, or he was unaware of the fact.

IS MASONRY REALLY FLOURISHING?

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—According to promise I send you a tabular statement which I think will prove satisfactory to your readers, and show that Freemasonry is really flourishing. Before doing so, however, let me express my thanks for the assistance I received from the Secretaries and staff at the offices of the three Institutions. I have carefully gone through the official reports for the last seven years. Had the financial statements of the Boys' and Girls' been ready for this year, the result would have been still better, but as it is, I think the success of Freemasonry is marvellous; indeed, I believe it is a long way better off than any similar society. If we take into consideration the average receipts the three Institutions have received we find the enormous income of nearly £47,000 per annum. The Girls head the list, as under:—

| Year | Amount received £ | s | d | | Pupils |
| 1875 | 13,360 | 7 | 1 | | 152 |
| 1876 | 13,705 | 2 | 10 | | 161 |
| 1877 | 17,636 | 10 | 1 | | 189 |
| 1878 | 20,202 | 17 | 1 | | 200 |
| 1879 | 13,911 | 0 | 1 | | 204 |
| 1880 | 19,433 | 16 | 11 | | 228 |
| 1881 | 14,388 | 3 | 3 | | 231 |
| Total for 7 years | 112,637 | 17 | 4 | Increase of pupils | 79 |
| Average per year | 16,091 | 2 | 4¼ | | |

The Boys next:—

| Year | Amount received £ | s | d | | Pupils |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1875 | 13,246 | 9 | 0 | | 181 |
| 1876 | 16,990 | 6 | 6 | | 186 |
| 1877 | 16,782 | 0 | 1 | | 211 |
| 1878 | 15,292 | 14 | 5 | | 215 |
| 1879 | 14,480 | 14 | 6 | | 217 |
| 1880 | 17,016 | 14 | 6 | | 218 |
| 1881 | 14,235 | 5 | 7 | | 218 |
| Total for 7 years | 107,995 | 4 | 7 | Increase of pupils | 37 |
| Average per year | 15,427 | 17 | 9¼ | | |

Aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons:—

| Year | Amount received £ | s | d | | Annuitants | Annuities Male £ | Annuities Female £ |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1875 | 10,099 | 0 | 1 | | 208 | 36 | 28 |
| 1876 | 11,907 | 6 | 9 | | 240 | 40 | 32 |
| 1877 | 14,328 | 6 | 8 | | 270 | 40 | 32 |
| 1878 | 15,143 | 8 | 2 | | 280 | 40 | 32 |
| 1879 | 15,290 | 4 | 9 | | 290 | 40 | 32 |
| 1880 | 20,202 | 6 | 2 | | 305 | 40 | 32 |
| 1881 | 20,135 | 16 | 8 | | 315 | 40 | 32 |
| Total for 7 years | 107,106 | 9 | 3 | Increase of Annuitants | 107 | — | — |
| Average per year | 15,300 | 18 | 5¼ | | | | |

The financial year of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution ends in March of each year. I could have shown a very much larger average, as the handsome receipt for this year was £18,336 8s 5d, but as the two other Institutions make their annual statements up to the end of the year, it would not have been a fair estimate, but the above Tables show that not only are the finances in a most healthy state, but that during the seven years the annuitants have increased by 107, the Girls by 79, and the Boys by 37, making a total increase of 223, so that we are now supporting 764 as against 541 in 1875; in addition to the large staff necessary for carrying on the work. I have now materially strengthened the argument in my former letter. Long may this noble work continue, and may its shadow never grow less. If what I have written should prove interesting to your readers, and beneficial to the Order in general, I shall be amply repaid for any trouble I have taken in collating the figures and facts. I had nearly forgotten to call attention to the fact that not only have the number of the annuitants increased, but their annuities also, and the brethren have likewise been enabled to evince their sense of the untiring assiduity and zeal the respective Secretaries and their assistants have displayed in furthering the interests of these Institutions by substantial acknowledgments.

I remain, yours fraternally,

THE PROPOSED PREPARATORY SCHOOL FOR BOYS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Although as you pointed out in your leading article last week, on the Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge, Bro. Budden's proposition in reference to the Grand Lodge's contributions to the Scholastic Institutions fell through, it is well that the subject should not entirely be lost sight of. As you observe, the Committee have already invested a lump sum of £1,000 from the Special Fund which has been contributed towards the Boys' Preparatory School; and in all probability sufficient means will, in course of time, be forthcoming to erect the building, the advantage and utility of which is universally admitted. We are all aware the scheme has not been entered upon hastily. But the question arises whether, if sufficient funds are raised to build the School where are we to find the additional £3,000 per annum which will be required to manage the Institution?

According to the prospectus, any present Life Governor of the General Fund, or any donor who may qualify up to the 31st December 1883, will receive 2 votes, instead of one, for life, for every five guineas contributed to the Special Fund; and that Lodges, Chapters, &c., similarly qualified may secure two votes, instead of one, for every ten guineas to the same Fund. In that case will not men say they will go in for the Preparatory School instead of the parent Institution, because they will thus double the number of their votes? They might say, "I can give a hundred guineas now to the Boys' School proper, but with the special privileges offered I shall transfer my contribution to the new School." In such a case will not the parent Institution suffer, and the funds which should naturally flow to it be diverted into the channel for the support of the new Preparatory School? If this be done to any extent, would it not drain and weaken the parent Institution, and tend to bring it into a state of collapse?

I do not wish to be an alarmist, but it is desirable that all the circumstances should be fully considered before the matter is carried any further. If I recollect rightly, Grand Lodge made a grant towards the building of the present Boys' School, though I do not for the moment recollect the amount, but considering the state of their funds at the present time, it might be well considered whether they would not be doing good service by contributing largely, even up to the full amount of the £2,000 mentioned by you last week, in promoting the interests of the new scheme, when no doubt the action would be seconded and supported by the Craft generally, with that liberality which always characterises it. It would also strengthen the hands of the executive, and enable them to make an energetic start without any apprehension as to their future position.

I remain, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

AN OLD BOY.

17th September 1882.

The Committee of Management of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution met on Wednesday, at Freemasons' Hall. There were present Bros. Dr. Jabez Hogg P.G.D. (in the chair), Charles John Perceval, C. A. Cottebrune, John Sampson Peirce, Frederick Adlard, James Brett, Robert P. Tate, Edgar Bowyer, A. H. Tattershall, J. M. Case, H. Massey, Thomas Cubitt, G. L. Moore, J. E. Gordon Robbins, and James Terry (Secretary). The minutes having been read and confirmed, Bro. Terry reported that, at the last Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge the grant of £800 a year to this Institution was confirmed, and he had hoped he should have received before the meeting of the Committee a cheque for the first quarter's instalment of the grant. Bro. Terry next reported that five of the annuitants had died. The Committee granted to the representatives of some deceased annuitants the current quarter's annuity, where the annuitants had died a day or so before the quarter's annuity was payable. The Committee also voted half their late husbands' annuities to the widows of two deceased brethren. Authority was given to transfer to the current account £500, part of £2,500 at interest on deposit at the London and Westminster Bank. Two petitions were received and examined, and the petitioners placed on the list for election next May, and it was afterwards resolved to paint the Institution and central hall, at Croydon, at a cost not exceeding £250, next spring. A vote of thanks to the Chairman closed the proceedings.

A considerable amount of sympathy will be felt towards Bro. Montem Smith and Mrs. Smith, who within the last few weeks have lost two children, the younger, who was but eleven months old, dying on the 4th instant, and the elder, who was little more than two years of age, on the 6th instant. Bro. and Mrs. Smith have our sincere condolence in their very painful affliction.

Bro. Sims Reeves is still in North Wales, and has recently been on a visit to Canon Tarver, at Chester.

Bro. Major Terry, correspondent of the Army and Navy Gazette, in Egypt, had his horse shot under him last week.

Bro. Sir John Whittaker Ellis, Bart., Lord Mayor, and Junior Grand Warden of England, has been invited by the Mayor of Liverpool to a banquet in that town. His lordship, however, owing to his numerous engagements, has been unable to accept the invitation.

LODGE OF LOYALTY, No. 1607.

THE installation meeting was held at the London Tavern, Fenchurch-street, on Saturday, 9th instant, on which occasion there were present Bros. Beedell W.M., T. Jones S.W. and W.M. elect, Carr J.W., F. Brown Treas., J. Newton Sec., Roberts S.D., Giller J.D., Gaylen acting I.G.; J. Terry (Hon.) P.P.G.J.W. Norths and Hunts, C. G. Hill (Hon.) Visitors—Bros. E. Bowyer P.P.G.S.W. Herts, Escott, Puck, Bourne, T. Maidwell, &c., besides several other members. The Lodge was opened in form, and the minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. The W.M. then raised Bro. T. V. Jones to the sublime degree, after which he installed his successor, Bro. T. Jones. Certainly the manner in which the ceremonies were performed reflected great credit on the outgoing Master for his ability in the execution of his work, and to the Lodge to which he belongs, for it was as near perfection as possible. During the installation, Bro. Bowyer kindly took the S.W.'s chair, and Maidwell the J.W.'s, while Bro. J. Terry fulfilled the duties of M.C. in his usual efficient manner; he was assisted by Bro. C. H. Webb, one of the P.M.'s of No. 1607. All Masonic business being ended, the Lodge was closed in usual form, when the brethren adjourned to the banquet room, and partook of the good things of this life which had been provided for them by the well known caterers of the London Tavern. After the cloth was removed, the usual loyal and other toasts were given and duly responded to. These were interspersed with some very excellent singing by Bros. C. Stevens, Tinney, Thompson, &c. It is invidious to make distinction, but the gem of the evening was the ably rendered "Meeting of the Waters," which was rapturously encored, and "Flow, Flow," substituted. Great praise may be given the W.M. for the manner in which he invested his Officers.

Clarendon Lodge, No. 1769.—The annual audit meeting of this Lodge was held on Tuesday evening last, at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street, under the presidency of Brother Charles Thompson W.M., who was supported by Bros. H. W. Mayes S.W., Soaper J.W., and other brethren. After the transaction of business, which was purely of a formal and routine character, the brethren partook of an excellent repast.

Brixton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1949.—The usual meeting was held on Tuesday last, the 12th inst., at Bro. Monk's, Prince Regent, Dulwich-road, East Brixton, where there was a good attendance of members, including Bros. Richard Poore, W.M., Moss S.W., H. Baldwin J.W., E. A. Francis Preceptor, C. H. Phillips Treas., Johnstone S.D., Knight J.D., H. Stokes I.G.; E. Bye, Meade 1321, H. Goodwin, and others. The Lodge was opened to the third degree, and the ceremony of raising was rehearsed by the W.M. in a most efficient manner, Bro. Bye as candidate. Bro. Moss was appointed W.M. for the next meeting. Lodge was closed with the usual formalities, and adjourned till Tuesday next, the 19th inst.

MASSACHUSETTS AND THE RITE OF MEMPHIS.

AT the Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, held on 14th June, in the Masonic Temple, Boston, the following resolutions were almost unanimously adopted:

Add to Part Fifth Miscellaneous Regulations—the following:

Sect. 24.—Whereas, this Grand Lodge recognises no degrees in Masonry except those conferred under the regulations of the Grand Lodges of the various States and Territories of the United States, and the Governments throughout the world, and whereas, it admits the following named organisations to be regular and duly constituted Masonic Bodies, namely:

The General Grand Royal Arch Chapter of the United States, the Grand Royal Arch Chapters of the several States and Territories of the United States, and the Royal Arch Chapters and other Bodies under their jurisdiction, the General Grand Council of Royal and Select Masters of the United States, the Grand Councils of Royal and Select Masters of the several States and Territories of the United States, and the Councils under their jurisdiction, the Grand Encampment of the United States, the Grand Commanderies of the several States and Territories of the United States, and the Commanderies under their jurisdiction, the Supreme Councils of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite for the Northern and Southern Jurisdictions of the United States, of which Henry L. Palmer and Albert Pike are M.P. Sov. Grand Commanders, respectively, and the various bodies under their jurisdiction;

Now, therefore, it is hereby declared that any Mason who is hereafter admitted in this jurisdiction, into any other Orders, as Masonic, whether called the Rite of Memphis or by any other name, is acting un-Masonically; and for such conduct shall be liable to be expelled from all the rights and privileges of Masonry, and shall be ineligible to membership or office in this Grand Lodge.

Sect. 25.—Any Mason in this jurisdiction who shall hawk and sell any of the degrees, so-called, hereinbefore forbidden, calling them degrees in Masonry, may be expelled from all the rights and privileges of Masonry.

Prior to taking the vote, remarks were made by a number of eminent brethren, and the following letters were read from distinguished Masons of other jurisdictions.

These letters are interesting in themselves, and contain information worthy of permanently being placed on record:—

Letter of Brother E. T. Carson.

I thank you for calling my attention to the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts in relation to spurious Masonic systems, grades, &c. Your Grand Master puts the case in most elegant and forcible style, and I hope you may succeed in adopting the proposed rule, though I anticipate that you will encounter stubborn opposition.

Our Grand Lodge adopted a resolution, more than thirty years ago, against the conferring of side degrees in Ohio, and that resolution has kept out of Ohio all those Masonic charlatans who peddle the "Eastern Star," "Heroine of Jericho," "Master Mason's Daughter," &c. &c.

Then our Grand Commandery has substantially such a law as the one proposed, and it has done us a "power of good." It is the duty of the Grand Bodies to protect the less-informed brethren from being preyed upon by those Masonic buzzards, who are continually on the alert to turn an "honest penny" by selling so-called Masonic degrees.

If Massachusetts adopts this rule it will give the idea a start, and a standing that will ultimately result in much good to genuine, honest Masonry.

Truly and fraternally yours,

E. T. Carson.

Letter from J. P. C. Cottrill, Past Grand Master of Wisconsin.

The first difficulty we had in Wisconsin concerning these outside Bodies, claiming to be Masonic and yet out of the pale, was in 1870. Then certain Knights Templar concluded to unite with the Rite of Memphis. It is, of course, a perfectly spurious concern, not Masonic or known to Masonry. I was offered their rituals free several years ago by Harry J. Seymour, of New York, he understanding that I was a 32° Mason. I declined his offer. The action of our Grand Commandery about it is found on page 46, Proceedings of 1870. Further action was had.' See Grand Commandery Proceedings, 1872, pages 53 and 56; 1873, page 12. This squelched the Rite of Memphis business.

In 1875 the Eastern Star business broke out here while I was Grand Master. I effectually broke that up. See my Address to the Grand Lodge, in its Proceedings for 1875, page 11. You will observe that I reported that your Grand Lodge, in 1871, took similar action, and my decision was based in part upon that action. I hope you will suppress all these spurious concerns, and that your constitutional amendment may be adopted. A Masonic Grand Lodge has in my opinion, the clear right to prevent, by discipline, if necessary the uniting by Masons with spurious Masonic Bodies, or Bodies calling themselves Masonic without authority, and to declare and determine just what are, and just what are not regularly constituted Masonic Bodies.

Yours fraternally,

J. P. C. Cottrill.

Letter from Bro. R. F. G Gould, author of "The Four Old Lodges."

Here in England, we, i.e., the Grand Lodge, affect not to know anything about degrees outside the Royal Arch. No Mason can wear any insignia in Lodge or Chapter beyond that of Royal Arch.

Of late years the influence of "high degree" Brethren has increased, owing chiefly no doubt to the Prince of Wales being one of that class, but although our Craft rulers are nearly all (i.e., in the leading positions) members of what is termed the A. and A. Rite, the avoidance of public displays, processions, &c., in this country results in no clashing occurring.

For my own part, though opposed very strongly on principle to any extension of the Masonic system, I must admit that our leading 33° men are most earnest and devoted Masons.

D. Murray Lyon gives some facts respecting the introduction of the "high degrees" into Scotland. See his invaluable "History of the Lodge of Edinburgh (Mary's Chapel), No. 1."

In Ireland I believe, the Grand Master is always the head of all kinds of degrees.

For my own part I have been ever of opinion that if we can adopt Masonic children, so equally can we adopt Masonic ancestors, and if the thirty-third degree by any process of reasoning can be termed Masonic, so in similar fashion can the Ancient Mysteries.

According to my view the so-called "high degrees" are pernicious. Still, many people think otherwise, and ours like yours is a free country!

In great haste,

Yours truly and fraternally,

R. F. Gould.

Letter from Brother J. G. Findel, author of the "History of Freemasonry."

Your friendly communications and the amendments to your Grand Lodge Constitutions I have received, and was very much rejoiced. It is a step in the right way. Under the present circumstances I must also approve the moderate, prudent and careful mode in which the Grand Lodge is moving.

Relating to your questions, I can inform you that there is no Grand Lodge in Germany, except the Grand Country Lodge of Germany (Swedish Rite), at Berlin, which has as such any control over higher degrees. The Grand Lodge of the Sun at Bayreuth (Bavaria), that of Concord at Darmstadt, the Eclectic Union of Frankfort, that of Saxony, of Hamburg and Royal York at Berlin, i.e., six Grand Lodges of Germany, do not acknowledge at all any higher degree or practice any. They are only Symbolic Grand Lodges, and their subordinate Lodges work only in the three blue, or ancient degrees, in which, to our conviction, Masonry is contained and finished. There is no step higher than to be a Master Mason.

The Grand Lodge of the three Globes at Berlin, has, besides the Grand Lodge, a Scottish Directory, with some so-called Scottish degrees. But these higher degrees, separated from Grand Lodge, have not the significance of higher degrees, but serve only as a mode of information and instruction. Many subordinate Lodges of the Grand Lodge of the Three Globes do not cultivate these Scottish degrees.

The essence of the Swedish Rite (Grand Country Lodge of Germany), with nine degrees, you may find described in my "History of Freemasonry." Till now it was the only Rite practised in Sweden, Denmark, and Berlin, but at present there is a movement going on in Norway to put it aside, and to come back to pure ancient Masonry, with its three degrees. The Grand Lodge of the three Globes, which has some instructing Scottish degrees, has, nevertheless, concerning the so-called Grand Constitutions of the Scottish Rite of thirty-three degrees, declared that they are "the grand lie of the Fraternity."

I suppose you have in your Library the English edition of my "History of Freemasonry." There you may find all you want. No higher degree of any name can prove its usefulness, or any legitimate historical source from which it has sprung. All higher degrees are a pious fraud and humbug. Your Grand Lodge will do a great service to the Craft when it stops the movement for higher degrees.

The Grand Lodge of Switzerland, "Alpina," has also none of these degrees, and works only in the three degrees, also the Grand Lodge of Hungary.

Hoping that these notes may be in some way useful to you, I send you, for your Grand Lodge, the best wishes, and I am,

Most fraternally yours,

J. G. Findel.

Letter from Bro. William James Hughan, Past Senior G. Deacon of the Grand Lodge of England.

I see that your Grand Lodge is to consider the question of the "higher degrees," as they are sometimes called, on the 14th prox.; so I send you a brief account of the laws and customs in relation thereto, prevalent in England, Ireland, and Scotland.

1. The Grand Lodge of England, established in 1717, recognised no degrees beyond the "Master Mason" until December 1813, when, for the sake of harmony and union, it agreed to adopt the "Royal Arch," as the concluding part of the third degree (not as a fourth), which was so warmly adopted by the seceders or "Ancients," from their origin, about 1750, and, as you know, united them with the latter Body. Thereafter we have had but the one Grand Lodge in this country, the York Grand Lodge, and its offshoot in London, having previously expired.

The "Articles of Union" provided: "II. It is declared and pronounced that pure Ancient Masonry consists of three degrees, and no more, namely, those of the Entered Apprentice, the Fellow Craft, and the Master Mason, including the Supreme Order of the Holy Royal Arch. But this article is not intended to prevent any Lodge or Chapter from holding a meeting in any of the degrees of the Orders of Chivalry, according to the Constitutions of the said Orders." (Hughan's Masonic Register 1878, p 15).

The first part of this declaration is to be found in the present "Book of Constitutions" (1873), as introductory to the first of the Rules. The second portion it is not easy now exactly to understand, and I must say it is rather feebly explained to mean all the degrees termed Masonic, other than the first three and the Royal Arch, which were working in A.D. 1813.

Taking the example set by our chief brethren, or at least very many of them, there are virtually four Masonic organisations quasi recognised by the Grand Lodge, but not actually so, and nothing is allowed to be worn in the Grand Lodge, or any subordinate Lodge which appertains to degrees, other than those allowed by the Grand Lodge, viz., the three degrees, including the Royal Arch. I much lament the puerile rage after useless pseudo-Masonic decorations.

(a) Grand Lodge Mark Master Masons,* of whom the Lord Henniker is the Grand Master, and of its Past Grand Masters may be named the Earl of Carnarvon Pro G.M. of England, the Earl of Lathom Dep. G.M. of England, and several Provincial Grand Masters, the

* The Mark is not adopted by the Royal Arch in England, which is the only country that drops the degree, and so is the only country that has a Mark Grand Lodge.

Digitized by Google

present Grand Secretary of England being a Past Grand Mark Warden, and just lately H.R.H. Prince Leopold has been enrolled as a Past Grand Mark Master.

Other degrees are included in a "Grand Council of the Allied Masonic Degrees," under the wing of the Mark Grand Lodge, such as the Royal and Select Masters, and other still more modern arrangements.

(b) The Supreme Council of the A. and A. Rite, 33° &c. Of this Body the Grand Master of England (H.R.H. the Prince of Wales) is a Grand Patron, and his two Royal and Masonic Brothers are Honorary Members. The Earl of Carnarvon Pro Grand Master is a Past Grand Commander, the present chief being the Dep. G.M. the Earl of Lathom, and I believe all the members of the Supreme Council are Past or Present Officers of the Grand Lodge.

(c) The United Orders of the Temple and Malta. H.R.H. the Grand Master of England is the Grand Master of this Body for England, Ireland and Canada. The subordinate Bodies, as you are aware, are called "Great Priories," that for England having the Earl of Lathom for its Great Prior, and Grand Secretary the next in rank as Great Sub-Prior. Many Grand Lodge Officers (Colonel S. H. Clerke is one of its Provincial Priors) are connected officially with it, as in a and b.

(d) Grand Imperial Council of the Knights of Rome and Red Cross of Constantine. This Society has Sir Francis Burdett, Prov. G.M. of Middlesex and Past G. Warden of England, as its Grand Sovereign, and the Earl of Lathom Dep. G.M., and other Provincial G. Masters, are among its members and Officers.

2. Scotland.—The Grand Lodge does not recognise any degrees but the three first and the Mark, though many of its chief members are connected with Bodies similar to the foregoing. Past Grand Master Sir M. R. Shaw-Stewart is First G. Principal of the R.A, and the Grand Master the Earl of Mar is Second G. Principal. Past Grand Master J. Whyte Melville is Grand Commander of the Supreme Council 33°, Governor of the Royal Order, and Grand Master of the Temple; the Earl of Kintore a Provincial Grand Master, being at the head of the Red Cross.

The recognition of the Mark degree is a late affair, but chiefly owing to so many old Craft Lodges working the ceremony.

3. Ireland.—This Grand Lodge differs from the other two, in actually recognising the Royal Arch, the Temple, the Rose Croix (which is a separate Body) and the Supreme Council 33°, and allows of no other organisation save its own.

"28. The Grand Lodge strictly prohibits, as unlawful, all assemblies of Freemasons in Ireland, under any title whatever, purporting to be Masonic, not held by virtue of a warrant or constitution from the Grand Lodge, or from one of the other Masonic Grand Bodies recognised by and acting in Masonic union with it."—Laws 1875, page 11.

It also provides that any Brother under its jurisdiction who shall take part in such illegal assemblies "shall be liable to suspension, or such other penalty as Grand Lodge may think fit.

Although it thus admits the legality, so to speak, of the R.A., K.T. and A. and A. Rite, it enacts that "no member of the Grand Lodge, or visitor thereto, shall be permitted to wear any jewel, medal, or device, belonging to any Order or Degree beyond that of Master Mason, in which, however, the jewel of a Past Master is considered to be included" (page 6), just as, I may say, it is in England and Scotland.

Now surely these Bodies are enough, and in fact too much in many respects, as the Supreme Council 33° might fairly be worked to include them all. As to the "Swedenborgian Rite," the "Rite of Memphis," and the ancient and Primitive Rite," and other absurd and pernicious organisations, I wish they were all decently buried.

Yours fraternally,

Wm. J. Hughan.

We understand that Bro. Sir John Whittaker Ellis, Bart., Lord Mayor, and Grand Junior Warden of England, has consented to preside at the festival of Ye Rahere Almoners, to be held at the Cannon-street Hotel, on the 20th October, on which occasion it is expected his lordship will be accompanisd by the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, Bros. Sir Reginald Hanson, and Sir W. A. Ogg. A very attractive programme is being arranged, and a large attendance is anticipated.

---

It is gratifying to note that a testimonial of esteem and regard has been presented to Bro. Inspector Foulger by officers and men of the First, or Moor-lane Division of Police, with whom he has been connected for upwards of forty years. This expression of kindly feeling on the part of his comrades in the force will be heartily reciprocated by many members of the Craft, to which Bro. Foulger has lent so much valuable instruction and assistance. He was the first W.M. of the Cripplegate Lodge, which is known as one of the most successful in the metropolis, and to which Bro. Foulger contributed substantial aid as Preceptor and in other ways. We trust he may be spared many years to retain the love and confidence of the brethren, and all who have appreciated his true worth and sterling character.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

PRINCE LEOPOLD LODGE, No. 1445.

THE annual installation meeting of this very energetic and popular Lodge was held on the evening of Thursday in last week, at the Mitford Hotel, Sandringham-road, Dalston, when there was a very gratifying attendance of brethren and visitors, under the presidency of Bro. N. D. Partridge, the retiring Worshipful Master. The members had held an emergency meeting on the preceding Monday evening, when, after all the preliminaries had been observed, the report of the Audit Committee was submitted, and was found to be of a most satisfactory character. On Thursday the brethren assembled at four o'clock, when Lodge was opened in accordance with ancient rites, and the minutes of the last regular meeting and Lodge of emergency were confirmed, as also was the report of the Audit Committee above referred to. At the conclusion of some other routine business, Bro. S. Lewis, who had received the reward of his assiduous performance of his duties in the Senior Warden's chair during the preceding twelve months, and who had been unanimously elected as the Worshipful Master for the ensuing year, was presented for installation, and having assented to the responsibilities of the position, a Board of Installed Masters was formed, and Bro. Lewis was formally installed into the chair with the usual ceremonial. On the re-admission of the brethren who had temporarily retired, he was saluted in the three degrees in a manner which fully testified to the respect and esteem in which he is held by the brethren. Bro. W. H. Myers, P.M. of the Lodge, of whose ability as Master of Ritual we have had frequent occasion to speak in past years, officiated as Installing Officer, and the manner in which he discharged the functions of his responsible office elicited, as indeed is invariably the case, the genuine encomiums of both brethren and visitors—of whom there was a large muster present. Bro. George Edward Walter P.M., the excellent and indefatigable Secretary of the Lodge, acted as Master of Ceremonies, and the proceedings went off in a way that left nothing to be desired. The addresses were most impressively delivered by Bro. Myers, who seemed to be in his happiest vein, and the manner in which the ceremony was performed afforded the utmost profit and pleasure to all present. The newly-installed Master, after having received the salutations of the brethren, inv. sted his Officers for the ensuing year, the collars being thus bestowed:—Bros. N. D. Partridge I.P.M., W. McDonald S.W., James Robson J.W., W. H. Myers P.M. Treasurer, George Edward Walters P.M. Secretary, J. MacGregor S.D., F. Kimbell J.D., G. S. Young Organist, H. Seymour-Clarke D.C., T. Marsh Tyler. In the course of the proceedings a handsome Past Master's jewel, subscribed for by the whole of the members of the Lodge, was presented to Bro. N. D. Partridge, the retiring W.M., as a token of esteem, and in recognition of the valuable services he had rendered to the Lodge during his term of office. Bro. Lewis in making the presentation, made allusion to those services in most felicitous terms, and expressed his sense of the judicious care and attention which Bro. Partridge had bestowed upon the affairs of the Lodge, and his solicitude for its future welfare and prosperity. Bro. Partridge had studiously endeavoured to do his duty in the position in which he had been placed by the unanimous desire of the brethren, and it would be his (the speaker's) duty and pleasure to emulate the excellent example which had been set him by his predecessor. In fastening the jewel to Bro. Partridge's breast he could only express a hope that he might long be spared in health and strength to wear it, and to enjoy the respect, confidence and esteem of the brethren, which he now enjoyed to so full an extent, having won it by his assiduous attention to duty, and his uniformly urbane and generous conduct towards all with whom he was associated. Bro. Partridge, in a few happily-chosen sentences, acknowledged the high compliment which had been paid him, and observed that although he now passed into the ranks of the Past Masters, his interest in the prosperity of the Prince Leopold Lodge would continue unabated, and he should in the future, as he had done in the past, exert his utmost to sustain its prestige and assist in its truest advancement. He need hardly say, that if in any way he could assist, either by counsel or otherwise, his successor, whom he was glad to see attaining to the highest honour the Lodge could confer upon him, he should only be too happy to do so; and he felt sure his brother Past Masters were all actuated by the same desire. He should value the magnificent jewel with which he had been presented for its intrinsic value, but far more for the generous motives which had prompted it, and he hoped, if he had deserved any of the affection and regard it reflected, during his term of office, he might equally succeed in retaining the good opinion of all by whom he was surrounded, and with whom he hoped long to labour in furthering the real interests of the Lodge. At the conclusion of the business, the brethren adjourned to a récherché banquet, where they were joined by several distinguished visitors, including Bros. H. G. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary England, and Bro. W. T. Howe, Past Grand Pursuivant, &c. The customary Loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, the health of the newly installed W.M. being most enthusiastically received, and responded to in suitable terms by Brother Lewis. Interspersed with some excellent vocal and instrumental music, the proceedings were of a thoroughly agreeable and harmonious description.

BURRELL LODGE, No. 1829.

ON the afternoon of the 7th instant, a meeting of the brethren o the above Lodge took place at the Royal George Hotel, Shoreham. Among those present were Bros. T. Packham W.M., J. Harrison S.W., E. Bridges J.W., G. Rose Johnson Chaplain, H. Cheal Secretary, T. Hardy S.D., R. W. Higham J.D., T. Holloway I.G., K. Smith Organist, W. T. Giles and W. Swales Stewards, J. Harman Tyler, A. J. Carpenter, H. Packham, G. Courtney, J. Parnell, W. Gill, W. Bodle, A. Brazier, R. G. Webb, W. Horne, G. Fieldus, E. New; while the visiting brethren included Bros. J. Balwinkle S.D. 1421, E. Broadbridge W.M. 1636, W. Anderson S.D. 315, W. Smithers J.D. 1636, J. Curtis P.M. 315 and 1797, S. M. Leleu W.M. 1821, A. Greenyer 80, A. Burrowes 186, J. C. Buckwell 1797 and 1821, F. Wiseman P.M. Trinity 1784 and 180, and H. Anscombe I.G. 1821. The chief business of the meeting consisted of the initiation of a new member, and the election of W.M. for the ensuing year, the choice of the latter falling unanimously upon Bro. J. Harrison. The Lodge being closed, those present sat down to a complimentary banquet given by the brethren of the Lodge, in honour of Bro. T. Packham W.M. and P.M. 315. The newly-elected W.M. occupied the chair, the vice chairs being filled by Bros. E. Bridges and T. Hardy. Ample justice having been done to the spread supplied by Bro. Gates, the Chairman opened the toast list by proposing H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and the Officers of Grand Lodge, Present and Past, each of which was well received. He then gave the R.W. Sir W. W. Burrell Prov. G.M. of Sussex, and the Officers of Provincial Grand Lodge, Present and Past. He regretted the absence of Sir W. W. Burrell nd the Provincial Officers, who were unable to be present. Bro. J. Curtis, in responding, remarked that if rumour were correct, the Burrell Lodge would soon be honoured by the appointment of their W.M., Bro. T. Packham, as one of the Provincial Grand Stewards. The election would, he felt, be well deserved. The Chairman proposed the W.M. Bro. Packham P.M. 315, and bore testimony to his sterling qualities, his zeal on behalf of Masonry, and the excellent manner in which he carried out the duties of the various offices entrusted to him; the longer they knew him the better they liked him, They would all hope with him (Bro. Harrison) that their worthy guest that evening would rise even higher in the Craft. Bro. Packham, in responding, said he never anticipated such on occasion as that on which they were gathered together. If he had been successful as their W.M., it must be remembered that he had had excellent Officers to assist him, and each had carried out his duties faithfully. To his Secretary (Bro. Cheal) he was especially indebted, and he took the opportunity of referring to the blame that had been attached to one of their secretaries on a previous occasion, and of stating that that Officer was not to blame, the neglect really being on the part of his senior Officer, whose duty it was to see that he had been in receipt of the return papers, over which the neglect had occurred. He (Bro. Packham) referred in feeling terms to the losses during his year of office of their late Bros. Captain Sinclair and Mitchell. He was proud that the brethren had been enabled to assist the widow of their late Bro. Mitchell, and those outside the pale of the Craft might be reminded that Masonic Charity had no bounds but prudence. Concluding his remarks, Bro. Packham said he should never forget that day's meeting, and he should always remember with feelings of gratitude, respect, and love all those present with him. He then proposed the W.M. elect, Bro. J. Harrison--a Mason who had worked assiduously in the Craft, and had on many occasions rendered him valuable assistance. He trusted he would experience a happy year of office, for he regarded him as one of the most energetic Masons he had ever met. Bro. J. Harrison, in responding, said the brethren might deem him an inveterate "beggar," but he should continue his utmost in aid of the Masonic Charities. The Chairman proposed the Entered Apprentice. Bro. Horne responded. The toast of the Visitors, given from the chair, was acknowledged by Bros. Broadbridge and Wiseman. The Tyler's toast brought the pleasant gathering to a close. During the evening some excellent songs and recitations were given by several of the brethren present.

Prosperity Lodge of Instruction, No. 65.—On Tuesday, 12th inst., at Bro. Maidwell's, Hercules Tavern, Leadenhall-street, there were present Bros. Roberts W.M., Shadler S.W., G. H. Stephens J.W., Clements S.D. and Sec., Oxley I.G., Moss Preceptor; also Bro. Mallett. Lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed. The ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Mallett acting as candidate. Bro. Mallett answered the questions leading to the second degree, and was entrusted; Lodge advanced, and Bro. Mallett passed to the degree of F.C. For the purpose of practice Lodge opened in the third degree, and closed to the first, when it was proposed by Bro. Moss Preceptor, and seconded by Bro. G. H. Stephens, that Bro. Mallett, of the Clapton Lodge, No. 1365, be elected a member. Bro. Shadler was elected to fill the chair for next Tuesday evening, 19th inst., when the Lodge will be opened at 7 o'clock, and on this occasion Bro. Webb P.M. has kindly consented to rehearse the ceremony of installation; brethren who attend will undoubtedly be rewarded by spending an instructive evening. We may add that this Lodge has almost entirely devoted itself to the rehearsal of ceremonies, therefore those brethren who are more anxious for this working will do well to place themselves under the able Preceptor, Bro. D. Moss. Lodge closed and adjourned.

Joppa Lodge of Instruction, No. 188.—It is seldom our pleasurable duty to record such steady progress and so eminently satisfactory a result in connection with a Lodge of Instruction as it becomes our duty, after visiting the Joppa Lodge, which was held on Tuesday evening last, at the Champion Hotel, Aldersgate-street. Although established scarcely two years, this Lodge has attracted to itself a goodly circle of thorough working members, whose heart is in the cause, and whose Masonic zeal finds tangible and frequent expression. As one proof of the thoroughly good work done, and the right direction given to the efforts of the members, it is only necessary to mention that within the very short period of its existence, and with only the nominal fees common to most Lodges of Instruction, this Lodge has already created two life subscribers to the Masonic Charities—one to the Royal Benevolent Institution, and another to the Boys' School; and on Tuesday evening it was announced that the funds in hand were sufficient to admit of a ballot for the third life subscriber at the next alternate meeting. This is a state of things reflecting the highest credit upon so young a Lodge of Instruction, and is deserving of being extensively copied. Another feature of this little conclave at the Champion is the excellence of the work that is being carried on, under the guidance of Bro. A. G. Dodson P.M. as Preceptor, and the no less admirable arrangements which have been made by Bro. R. Chillingworth P.M., the esteemed proprietor of the hotel, for the comfort and enjoyment of the brethren. The Lodge room is fitted up in cosy, and even luxurious, fashion, with every possible convenience, whilst the urbanity of Bro. Chillingworth, his readiness to take any position in the Lodge when required, and to render good service in the working, in which he is so proficient, as well as for his general arrangements for promoting the welfare of the Lodge and the happiness of its members, add greatly to the pleasure of a visit here. On Tuesday evening last, the chair was occupied by Bro. J. Hughes, who acquitted himself most creditably as Worshipful Master, supported by Bros. Thomas Agutter S.W., H. L. Phillips J.W., Samuel Pardoe S.D., Isaac Botibol I.G., A. G. Dodson P.M. Preceptor, R. J. Chillingworth P.M., J. Hicks Secretary, F. Deering, Nightingale, A. R. Green, G. H. Cobb, C. J. Dunlop, E. Davy, E. H. Tyrrell, J. Pigé, W. Gardner, and others. Lodge having been opened in due form, the questions for passing were put to Bros. Deering and Cobb, both of whom answered satisfactorily, and were entrusted. Bro. Deering then retired, being the initiate. The ceremony of passing was rehearsed, with Bro. Cobb as candidate, Bro. Pardoe as S.D. The questions before raising having been put to Bro. Cobb, Lodge was opened in the third degree, and Bro. Hughes then vacated the chair, which was taken by Bro. A. G. Dodson P.M., who rehearsed the ceremony of raising. The impressive and accurate manner in which the Preceptor delivered the charges was decidedly an intellectual treat, and afforded the utmost gratification, as well as edification, to the brethren and visitors who were fortunate enough to be present. At the close of the ceremony Brother Hughes resumed his position, and Lodge was closed in form, after two members had been accepted, and other matters of business transacted. Bro. Thomas Agutter was unanimously elected as W.M. for the next meeting. We may add that these enjoyable gatherings for instruction are held every Tuesday evening at the Champion Hotel, at half past seven o'clock, and that visitors are always most cordially welcomed.

Royal Union Lodge of Instruction, No. 382.—At the Chequers Hotel, Uxbridge, on Monday, 11th inst., Bros. Taplin W.M., Rowles S.W., Cotton J.W., Nicholson S.D., Taylor J.D., Fleming I.G. and Tyler, Brooks Secretary, and others. The Lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of the previous meeting read, confirmed, and signed. Lodge was opened and closed in the second. The evening was occupied with the following official business. The committee reported the result of their audit of the accounts; and also made an inventory of Lodge furniture. Bro. Brooks Sec. read the Bye-laws, also the following short summary of the work of the past session. A retrospect of the whole course of meetings of this Lodge of Instruction is exceedingly interesting and satisfactory to all concerned; it can boast of having been visited by the Right Worshipful Grand Master of the Province, Brother Sir Francis Burdett, Bart. The Lodge has received valuable presents, from Bros. H. E. Tucker Preceptor, and Nicholson, of a volume of the Sacred Laws from the former, and a velvet cushion from the latter. The Lodge consists of sixteen subscribing, and nine honorary members. The meetings commenced on the 31st October 1881, and closed on 28th August 1882, so that thirty-nine meetings have been held. The number of attendances for the whole course, including visitors, has been 377, an average of nearly ten per meeting; the largest attendance was on the occasion of the presentations being made by Bros. Tucker and Nicholson, on the 9th January 1882, when 41 were present; the smallest number during the summer has been five, when the brethren found other enjoyment than that of a Lodge indoors. The ceremonies have been rehearsed as follow:—Initiation 29, Passing 15, Raising 6; total 50. The brethren have only met twice without rehearsing a ceremony, and have never assembled without a sufficient number to open the Lodge. In addition to the ceremonies mentioned above, Bro. C. Andrews P.M., honorary member, has worked one or more sections of the first lecture at four meetings, and given a lecture on the first tracing board twice. The Lodge is also indebted to Bro. W. W. Morgan honorary member, for twice delivering Lectures during the course. The following list gives the names of those who have filled the chair, and also the number of times each has filled it:—Bros. C. Andrews P.M. honorary member 1, E. H. Sugg P.M. honorary member 1, C. E. Botley honorary member 1, F. Botley honorary member 1, Gray 1, H. E. Tucker Preceptor 2, Rowles 4, Nicholson 5, Brooks 7, Taplin 8, Cotton 8; total 39. This short report of the first course of meetings will be sufficient to prove the necessity for the Lodge, and we hope the work of the future may be even more satisfactory than that of the past. Bro. Cotton Treasurer reported upon the financial position as follows: Receipts £6 12s 10d, Expenses £3 16s 6d, balance in hand £2 16s 4d. The consideration of the disposal of the balance was adjourned for a fortnight; the Secretary and Treasurer were reappointed. Bro. Rowles S.W. was unanimously elected to fill the chair at the next meeting. Bro. Cotton S.W. intimated his intention of presenting the Lodge with a new set of collars. This brought a long evening's work to a close, and the Lodge was closed with the usual formalities, and adjourned until Monday, the 18th September.

United Pilgrims Lodge of Instruction, No. 507.—The meeting on Friday, the 8th inst., at the Surrey Masonic Hall, Camberwell, was presided over by Bro. C. H. Phillips W.M., who was supported by Bros. R. Poore S.W., J. N. Bate J.W., J. Hill S.D., W. J. Newland J.D., H. Stokes I.G., James Stevens P.M. Preceptor, E. A. Francis, S. C. Hill, H. S. Biggs, &c. Lodge was opened and minutes confirmed. Bro. Biggs, as candidate, was proved and entrusted. Lodge was opened in the second degree, and the ceremony of passing rehearsed. The F.C. charge was given by Bro. Bate. The explanation of the tracing board was rendered by the Preceptor, Bro. James Stevens, who was assisted by Bros. Francis and J. Hill. Lodge was closed down, and called off. "Entry drill" was practised, and the Lodge called on. Bro. R. Poore was elected W.M. for the ensuing week, and then Lodge closed in perfect harmony.

Royal Alfred Lodge of Instruction, No. 780.—On Friday, 8th instant, at the Star and Garter Hotel, Kew Bridge, Bros. F. Botley W.M., Gunner S.W., C. E. Botley J.W., Goss P.M. S.D., Blasby P.M. J.D., E. Monson I.G.; Bros. Dorey, Hewlings, Sperring, Maton, Turner. Lodge opened in the first degree, and the minutes of meeting held on 25th August were read and confirmed. Lodge was opened in the second and third degrees, and the ceremony of raising rehearsed, Bro. Sperring candidate. Lodge closed in third and second degrees. Bro. Gunner was elected W.M. for 29th September. Bro. Sidney Turner, of the Lodge of Agriculture, 1199, was elected a member. Lodge was then closed and adjourned until 15th September (Officers' night).

Star in the East Lodge, No. 650.—At the monthly meeting of this Lodge, held at Harwich, Essex, on Tuesday evening, 12th inst., the election of W.M. for the ensuing year took place, when the choice of the brethren unanimously fell upon Brother Richard Clowes, a most hardworking member of the Lodge, who has filled the chair of S.W. during the past year with great credit to himself and benefit to the Lodge.

Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, No. 860.—A meeting was held on Tuesday, the 12th inst., at Bro. Smyth's, Sisters' Tavern, Pownall-road, Dalston. Present—Bros. T. Clark W.M., Christian S.W., Smyth J.W., F. Carr Secretary, A. J. Clark S.D., Glass J.D., Bunker I.G. P.M. Bro. Wallington Preceptor; also Bros. Brasted, Steel, Baker, Edwards, Marsh, Forss, Darnell. Lodge was opened in due form, the minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. Edwards offered himself as a candidate for passing and was interrogated and entrusted. Lodge was opened in the second degree, and the ceremony was rehearsed. Lodge was called off, and on resuming its Masonic duties Bro. Christian gave the lecture on the tracing board. Bro. Forss worked the first section of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. The Lodge was opened in the third degree and regularly closed to the first. Bro. Forss worked the fourth section of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. Bro. Christian was elected W.M. for the ensuing week, and appointed his Officers in rotation. Lodge was then closed and adjourned.

Islington Lodge of Instruction, No 1471.—On Monday, at the Crown and Cushion Tavern, London Wall, Bro. D. P. Holness W.M. of the mother Lodge presided; he was supported by Bros. Cuthbertson S.W., Thompson J.W., Medwin S.D., Hawksley J.D., Conchman I.G., Hunter Acting Preceptor, Sparrow Secretary. Lodge was opened in due form, and after the minutes had been read and confirmed, the ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Petley candidate. Bro. Bedington answered the questions leading to the second degree. Lodge opened in second degree. Bro. Wall answered questions leading to the third. Lodge was advanced and the ceremony of raising rehearsed, Bro. Wall candidate. On resuming the Lodge to the first degree, Bro. O'Brien, of Perseverance, No. 1748, was elected a member. Bro. Cuthbertson was appointed W.M. for the ensuing meeting. A cordial vote of thanks was passed to Bro. Holness for attending to preside on this occasion, and special reference was made to the interest he had taken in this Lodge of Instruction.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—More Precious than Gold.—Diarrhœa during summer and autumn is very fatal to the young, as the winter's cold destroys the aged. In the most acute cases, where internal medicines cannot be retained, the greatest relief will immediately result from rubbing Holloway's soothing Ointment over the abdomen. The friction should be frequent and brisk, to ensure the penetration of a large portion of the unguent. This Ointment calms the excited peristaltic action, and soothes the pain. Both vomiting and griping yield to it; where fruits or vegetables have originated the malady, it is proper to remove all undigested matter from the bowels by a moderate dose of Holloway's Pills before using the Ointment.
