THE OLD YEAR AND THE NEW.

NOW that the "seasonable" festivities of Christmastide are over, and a New Year opens up fresh hopes and expectations and renewed activities to the work-a-day world, we may be allowed to pass on to our readers the compliments we have heard echoed at every street corner and in many a home within the last few days of "A Happy New Year." We are accustomed now-a-days—at any rate since we have become familiar with the stern realities of life—to hear men of almost every grade give a "parting kick" at the Old Year, as he goes out with the dirge of muffled peals, carrying with him all the joys and sorrows, the hopes and disappointments, which have marked his "tenure of office." He is not like our invariable Worshipful Master, who retires from the scene of his year of labour "with all his blushing honours thick upon him," and receives a jewel "in recognition of services well and faithfully fulfilled." True, the departure of the Old Year is heralded by the sounds of mirth and the festive clinking of glasses all round, and in every grade of society: yet everybody seems to heave a sigh of relief when the old fellow has fairly gone from us amidst the "wild bells" that are rung out "to the wild sky," and has given place to the New Year, with all its maiden and hopeful anticipations. The past year, if we may judge from the expressions we hear so universally around us, has been anything but the "prosperous" one we all of us wished for each other when we stood upon its brink, just twelve months ago. In almost every department of trade, commerce and industry there have been complainings of depression and stagnation without precedent for many years; and that there has been a vast amount of suffering and hardship, not merely amongst the chronic poor, but in the ranks of those who are conventionally designated the "well-to-do"—the tradesman, and the industrious professional classes—there can be very little question. We are perfectly aware that in every season of the year—and "out of season," too, for that matter—there are always grumblers and people to whom the cry of "hard times" is perpetual. But Eighteen Hundred and Eighty-five, which has been gone from us only a few brief hours, has undoubtedly been one in which more than ordinary justification has been furnished for "complaining in our streets." Every department of trade and finance has been subject to an abnormal strain, and though probably failures in business have been equalled, if not surpassed, in some preceding years, yet the effect of the depression has been more universal and homefelt in the past year than many of the oldest of us recollect for many a long day. It may be that political complications, both at home and abroad, have had much to do with this unpleasant state of things, of a mixing up of national interests which have proved so general a source of perplexity with regard to foreign countries, and a change of Government in our own: though, as Masons, we trouble ourselves comparatively little with politics, pure and simple. With respect to our Fraternity, there has been little to record except that it has pursued the even tenour of its way, adding to its strength and gradually gathering to its numbers; and, although probably the vicissitudes of life have thrown more than usual upon our charitable and benevolent resources, nevertheless, like the widow's cruise and barrel, the compensating results have not altogether failed, albeit the demand may have far outstripped the charitable desires and intentions of the Craft. Many new Lodges have sprung into vigorous existence, testifying to the ever-increasing vitality of our Order, and our older ones have by no means relaxed their efforts, or diminished in their power of rendering them more extensively useful to our fellow creatures. Let us hope that this spirit will continue to become more consolidated in the year on the threshold of which we now stand, and that the era which has just been ushered in may witness the increasing solidity, usefulness, and stability of those principles which we so deeply love and practise. May the principles of Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth continue to exert themselves over the whole of the human race, and particularly over those who are ranged under the banner of Freemasonry. We feel assured that they will do so, and that even should discords and difficulties arise in other mundane institutions, harmony and progress will be the predominant characteristics of "ye mystic tie." It may be that to many of us the "Compliments of the Season" are but remote probabilities of the aspiration being fulfilled—to whom in a retrospect of the dead year there is little to gladden the heart; and though there may be faint glimpses of dawning light, a small rift in the overhanging clouds, yet these are hardly sufficient to make "the bosom's lord sit lightly on his throne." But if they cannot rejoice with a light heart, still they may have the consciousness that they have borne up manfully against an almost overwhelming tide of evil; they have striven bravely in the face of difficulties, and never given way to despair, even in the most hopeless circumstances. To them at least there is the consciousness that they have done their best, and have only been conquered by the irresistible force of events. Happily the hand of Charity is never closed in this blessed England of ours, and more particularly amongst Masons, and so let us hope that the tide may now have turned at last with the departure of the Old year and the advent of the New. We cannot leave the subject without expressing an earnest hope that the year now commenced will bring forth more prosperity for all classes than that which has just drawn its last breath, and that when another twelve months have passed away we shall be able to wish our readers a "Merry Christmas" with some likelihood of its becoming a reality.

For ourselves it is only becoming that we should recognise the many acts of kindly interest and support displayed towards us in the past year, and to assure our many readers that no effort shall be wanting on our part at least to deserve a share in the greater prosperity which we wish for all. In the past year it has been our duty and privilege to acknowledge many additions to the roll of our patrons and friends, and it is our aim ever to do so, whilst still retaining the confidence and respect of old acquaintances. We are conscious of many shortcomings in our endeavours to make the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE a faithful reflex and repertoire of all the most important events in connection with the Craft, but to these our friends have been "a little blind," whilst to what virtues we may have displayed they have been "ever kind." In the spirit of amenity which pervades all classes at this season, we reciprocate the many kindly wishes we have received for the future prosperity of our journal, and with genuine sincerity wish to each and all our readers—

A Prosperous and Happy New Year.

OUR TWENTY-THIRD VOLUME.

AT the commencement of a new year the journalist claims for himself the indulgence and privilege of saying a few words of a personal character which may be considered out of place at other seasons; and, having wished our readers all the "happiness and prosperity" they can desire for themselves, we feel at liberty to make one or two observations respecting the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, with the current issue of which is commenced our Twenty-Third Volume. It is a trite saying amongst many of the brethren that, as a rule, Masons are not particularly assiduous in their study of the literature of the Craft, but this, in our opinion, is a verdict which must be taken cum grano salis. Our experience, extending over the many years during which the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE has ranked amongst the leading and recognised organs of Freemasonry is, that a growing spirit of inquiry and desire for interchange of thought and information on matters of interest to Masons generally—not only in this country but on the Continent and our Colonies—pervades a very large section of the Fraternity. "Constant readers" of the pages of this journal will not have failed to observe that such is the case, and we regard it as a very healthy sign of the times. In former days the publication of any of the doings of Masonic Lodges was considered not only highly improper, but, to some minds, almost amounting to a violation of the Book of Constitutions. Now, however, a much broader and more cosmopolitan view is taken of the case; and Masons are fully alive to the fact that, so far from there being anything derogatory or injurious to the welfare of the Craft, by recording the most important events in connection with it, or the exchange of ideas and criticisms on salient points, quite the reverse is the fact. Of course, in the hands of indiscreet or injudicious writers much harm may result, and not a few instances of this might be found in the amateur reports that one comes across from time to time in the columns of non-Masonic newspapers. The case is quite different when it rests in the hands of those who have made the Craft a study during the greater portion of their lives. That useful adjunct to the editorial sanctum sanctorum, the waste paper basket, could "a tale unfold" were the whole of the debris that is cast into it allowed to see the light of day. But in Masonic, as in all other branches of journalism, the eye of experience and the hand of constant discrimination have to be brought into play, so that the safeguards of the Craft may not be unduly exposed to the attacks of the insidious and the profane. This is a point we have always striven to observe ourselves, and to inculcate in the minds of our numerous correspondents; and to the credit of the latter it must be said that they appear anxious to inflict as little unnecessary work on the revisers of their "copy" as possible. We observe a growing tendency on the part of those who favour us with their communications to avoid personal quibbles and that friction of opinion which formerly disfigured the pages of Masonic journals, and, whilst calmly and dispassionately discussing questions in which all Masons are in common interested, they abstain from the errors committed by many contributors to the Press in former days. Thus a happier spirit is cultivated amongst the writers themselves, whilst the reading section of the brethren have much less to complain about than hitherto of heartburnings caused by the "undue publicity" of Masonic matters.

At this period of the year, when there is by tacit consent a comparative cessation of activity in Masonic circles, forming a break in the routine of work whilst the festivities of the season are in full swing, there is little to record in the way of Lodge reports; whilst the course of Masonry runs on so smoothly and harmoniously that the difficulty we experience is to find anything worth criticising. There is always plenty of scope, however, for intercommunication of ideas and opinions respecting the general aspect and the increasingly useful operations of Freemasonry, in all parts of the world, for the subject is simply inexhaustible in its interest to those who have the cause most thoroughly at heart. In these columns we are studious to record the spread of those principles of charity and benevolence which are the boast of our Institution, and whenever they are presented to our notice; and in doing so there is no greater satisfaction to the mind of the Masonic journalist than to convey the intelligence of such noble efforts to the ear of every member of the Order. Whilst overlooking many minor details, and eliminating from reports sent to us such extraneous matter as may be superfluous or undesirable, it has been our aim to give a reflex of the work of the Craft over as wide an area as the space at our command permits, and thus to keep the brethren in all parts within the scope of our circulation au courant with the most important events in Masonry as they transpire. A diary of Lodge meetings may be unattractive reading, taken as a whole, but every line in it has an interest somewhere, and this is a necessary and useful adjunct to a Masonic paper. We venture to hope that by a perusal of the pages of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE a very wide circle of Masonic readers have derived a certain amount of satisfaction and instruction; and we can only promise that in the future we shall endeavour to pursue the same consistent course as that which during the past eleven years has characterised the management of this journal. That course, we are gratified to say, has won for us a large, and still increasing, number of friends, to whom we can only promise a punctual and regular supply of the best budget of news possible under varying circumstances, together with kindly, yet impartial, criticism of events that are passing around us. To those who have assisted and encouraged us in the past in the uphill work which necessarily attends the establishment of a class journal we return our heartfelt thanks; and, looking hopefully on the new year just opened, we may confidently anticipate a substantial addition to the number of our subscribers, advertisers, and friends. In dedicating to them our TWENTY-THIRD VOLUME we assure them of our determination to preserve the character of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE for the completeness of its record of Masonic intelligence, and with undiminished energy to promote the best interests of the Craft to which we one and all are so deeply and sincerely attached.

UNDUE PUBLICITY.

UNDER this heading we last week published an extract from our American contemporary the Freemasons' Repository, in which somewhat pointed allusion is made to "foreign Masonic periodicals that make a practice of publishing the names of applicants for the degrees;" who print in full "the names of candidates initiated or advanced . . . . also the names of officers, regular or otherwise, performing the work; while the manner in which the ceremonies are rendered is likewise described." These, and similar acts, our contemporary stigmatizes, "undue publicity—a practice alike unwise and un-Masonic." We should be very dull of comprehension if we did not assume that some, at least, of the remarks to which we last week gave a place in our columns were intended for us. The cap fits, and we are prepared to wear it. In doing so we think a few words may not be out of order on this subject of "Undue Publicity." In the first place we would impress on the Editor of the journal in question, and on all who would write as he has done, that there is a very wide difference between English Freemasonry and Freemasonry as practised in the United States, Canada, and other countries outside our "tight little island." What we do here we are not ashamed of publishing to the world, and we fail to see that any harm can come, either to the brethren in particular or to the Order in general, by any reference to Masonic actions in a public newspaper, while we may also say that the outside world reaps no benefit from the information thus vouchsafed. Freemasonry in this country is so essentially a society for extending the principles of Brotherly Love, Relief and Truth, that we incline to the belief that the more the actions of its members are published the better it will be for mankind in general. We know nothing of politics, of differences of religion, or of the thousand and one controversial subjects on which men disagree; and the fact of our publishing to the world reports of our meetings—even "literal copies of the official records of Secretaries" though they be—is evidence of our desire to challenge contradiction on these points. If the reports were not true they would—at least once now and then—be challenged by some of those who are ever anxious to pick a hole in the Masonic organisation, but we believe they have always been allowed to pass unquestioned—perhaps unnoticed, as being too trivial to call for even passing comment. Our contemporary and our foreign brethren generally must understand, when we say we are not ashamed of publishing our doings to the world, that we consider them equally straightforward, and if they differ from us in their ideas as to what part of our doings should be recorded in the public press we do not for one moment imagine it is from any unworthy motive, or because they are afraid of any part of their doings being known outside the precincts of their Lodges. We assume the question is simply a matter of opinion, and no doubt we each feel that our own view of the case is the correct one.

There is no doubt that the publication of the doings of Freemasons in public papers could be carried too far, as by going to extremes our secrets might become intelligible to the outside world, but is there any fear of existing "Masonic periodicals," foreign or otherwise, going to that extent, or is there any risk of a respectable journal outside of Freemasonry lending itself to the publication of details which would be detrimental either to Freemasonry or Freemasons? If Freemasonry is used for its legitimate objects only; if what is done in the Lodge-room is done solely for the benefit of mankind, on the principles recognised by Freemasons, no harm can follow the publication of the names of those who were present, those who were advanced, or those who presided as Officers; it is only when Freemasonry is made the cloak for some unworthy or unholy action that any fear is justifiable that publicity is dangerous. We may, then, dismiss the charge that the publicity to which our contemporary refers is unwise, on the ground that it being so or otherwise entirely depends on individual opinion, and that we know is as variable as the wind. But our contemporary says it is un-Masonic! Here we have ample official evidence to prove the contrary, unless our contemporary desires to assert that its view is the correct one and the recognised action of almost every Grand Lodge wrong. There are very few exceptions throughout the world where the grand bodies of Freemasonry do not periodically publish reports of their Proceedings, wherein appears everything to which our contemporary takes exception, so far as is possible, in connection with a Grand Lodge as compared with a private one. These reports, or whatever they are termed, are certainly not issued to the world through the medium of the newspapers, but they are usually printed, and widely circulated, without any obligation, we believe, that the Masons into whose hands they fall are to keep them sacred from outside eyes. Our private Lodges have not the means, or the inclination, to follow the example of their rulers, and publish periodical reports of their doings, but they are often as anxious to be able to send details of their work to friends as are the Grand Lodges, and for this reason they avail themselves of the Masonic periodicals, or of such local and other papers as may be willing to afford them the opportunity of gratifying their desire. They are fully justified in doing so, and if the reports are so worded that the essential secrets of Freemasonry are not disclosed, no harm can possibly arise from the publication, and we fail to see on what ground, unless it be one of mere sentiment, the charge of un-Masonic action can be maintained. We shall be pleased to hear the views of our contemporary on the issues we have raised if it deems them fit subjects for friendly controversy.

AN INTERESTING OLD MASONIC DOCUMENT.

BRO. the Rev. Charles M. Stock, of Bedford Lodge No. 320, Pa., in writing to the Keystone, says:

"Two years ago, while in the city of Brunswick, I visited its famous old Cathedral founded by Henry the Lion, in the twelfth century. My attention was attracted to the tombs of Duke Charles William Ferdinand, and his son Duke Frederick William. The latter is marked by small black flags suspended above the coffin. These were placed there, and are renewed from time to time, by the matrons and maidens of Brunswick, as memorials of his valour and patriotism. The father, Duke Ferdinand, was killed at the battle of Jena, on the 14th day of October 1806, while at the head of the Prussian army, numbering 70,000 men. The French Army was under the command of Napoleon in person, and numbered 90,000. The son, Duke Frederick William, having united with the English in common cause against the French, fell, nobly avenging his father's death, in the battle of Quatre-Bras on the 16th of June 1815, two days before the battle of Waterloo.

Yesterday I buried a man who had a remarkable history. Born in the city of Prague, in the year 1799, and spending many years as a student and professor at its university, he remembered distinctly concerning the Napoleonic wars, and the events of those times. Among his papers is the following, which I think well worth publishing. Any scholar understands the difficulty of a proper translation of such material. With this as an explanation, I append the document in full:

The following address was delivered at Brunswick, by Duke Ferdinand, Grand Master, upon the occasion of the initiation of his son, Count Frederick:

I congratulate you on your admission into the most ancient and the most respectable society of the earth. To you the mysteries of Masonry have been, and shall further be revealed; and so bright a sun never heretofore shed lustre upon your eyes. In this awful moment, when before this holy altar, may you shudder at the thought of any crime, may you have confidence in every virtue, may your reflection inspire you with noble sentiments, may you be permeated with a religious abhorrence of every vice that degrades human nature, and may you feel the elevation of soul which shuns a dishonourable action, and ever seeks the practice of piety and virtue. These are the wishes of a father and a brother conjointly. Concerning you the greatest hopes are entertained; let not our expectations be disappointed. You are the son of a Mason who glories in the Fraternity; and for your zeal and attachment, your silence and good conduct, your father has already pledged his sacred honour. You are now a member of this illustrious Order, introduced a subject of a new Country whose extent is boundless. Pictures are now exposed to your view wherein true patriotism is exemplified in glowing colours, and a series of transactions recorded which the rude hand of time can never efface. The obligations which influenced the first Brutus and Manlius to sacrifice their children to their love of country, are not more sacred than those which bind me to support the honour and integrity of this venerable Fraternity. This moment, my son, you impart to me the joy of a second birth; and should your conduct in life correspond with the principles of Masonry, my remaining years will pass away with pleasure and satisfaction. Contemplate the great example of our ancient masters; peruse our history and Constitutions. The best, the most humane, the bravest and most civilised of men have been our patrons. The vulgar are strangers to our work, but the greatest geniuses have sprung from our Fraternity. The most illustrious characters on earth have laid the foundation of their most amiable qualities in Masonry. Solomon, the wisest of princes, framed our constitution by the raising of a Temple to the Eternal and Supreme Ruler of the Universe.

Swear, my son, that you will be a true and faithful Mason. Know that from this moment I combine the affection of a parent with the endearment of a brother. May your heart be susceptible of love and esteem, and may you burn with the same zeal your father possesses. Convince the world by your new alliance that you are deserving of our favours, and never forget the ties which bind you to honour and justice. Do not contemplate with indifference the extensive connection you have formed, but let universal benevolence regulate your conduct. Exert your abilities in the service of your country and the knowledge you have this day attained—the happiest acquisition of your life. Recall to memory the ceremony of your initiation; learn to bridle your tongue, and to govern your passions; and ere long you will have occasion to say: "In becoming a Mason, I truly became a man; and while I breathe will never disgrace a jewel that kings may prize."

If I live, my son, to reap the fruits of this day's labour, my happiness will be complete; I will then meet death without terror, close my eyes in peace, and expire without a groan in the arms of a virtuous and a worthy Freemason.

THE WHITE APRON.

OPERATIVE Masons, when at work, wear an apron to protect and preserve their garments from spot or stain. A white apron is therefore very appropriately used in Masonic ceremonies as an emblem of purity and innocence, and is intended as such to impress upon the wearer of it the duty of bearing a pure and spotless character, unstained by corruption and free from vice. When we see an operative Mason whose clothes are all spotted and stained with mortar and dirt, we knew he does not wear an apron at all, or is unconcerned about the appearance of his clothing. So it is when seeing a speculative Mason indulging in intemperance, or hearing him take the name of God in vain, or otherwise living in violation of the moral law, we think at once he has never learned the use of the Masonic apron, and that his soul is spotted and coloured with violations of his obligations as a Mason. What must be the feeling of a profane, intemperate, or immoral Mason when his mind reverts to the time when first as an Entered Apprentice he was presented with the white apron, and taught that it was an emblem of innocence and the badge of a Mason, and was told to wear it with pleasure to himself and honour to the Fraternity.—*D. THE MASTER'S HAT.

WE have heard the question asked many times, "Why does the Master wear his hat?" and this question very likely arises in the mind of every brother who witnesses for the first time the ceremonies of Installation; especially so where this custom prevails.

Before us is a letter of inquiry concerning this, and by it we are prompted to make a brief notice of so conspicuous a covering.

Within the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, the Master, on being installed, is usually told by the officer officiating that it is his privilege in the Lodge to remain covered; so he wears his hat, as Master, without giving any special thought to it, or if he does, he regards it as a symbol, significant of his high office and of privileges limited to the Master, whose duty is to rule and govern his Lodge; as it is the duty of the brethren to obey.

As a symbol, the hat denotes freedom not servitude—it was worn among the Romans as a sign of freedom, and from the high antiquity of Freemasonry, it need not excite surprise, if the custom so long established in all English and American Lodges, was borrowed by the Freemasons to denote their own freedom, and later, to confine the wearing of it to the Master, as a special privilege in order that it might be better seen who was to rule and who obey.

In the Western world people uncover their head when received by, and while they remain in the presence of high rank, or as Mackay puts it, "the king remains covered, the courtiers standing around him take off their hats."

Freemasons, being also Free men, and bound together by voluntary association, select their ruler or Worshipful Master, and as a symbol of the authority vested in him, by reason of office under their gift, they crown him according to their own custom and proclaim it for their own convenience and government.—Liberal Freemason.

MEMORIAL TO THE LATE PRINCE LEOPOLD, DUKE OF ALBANY, K.G., &c.

IT may be remembered that at the time of his death his Royal Highness, who took his title of Earl of Clarence from Clare, in Suffolk, was Worshipful Master of the Royal Clarence Lodge of Freemasons in that town, and that the brethren assembling there proposed to erect a memorial to their lamented Royal Master in the parish church. The project was originated by the popular owner of Moyns Park, W. Bro. Major-General Cecil Ives, Prov. S. Grand Warden of Suffolk, whom the Prince had appointed Deputy Master of the Lodge, and it was cordially supported by Lord Waveney and the Provincial Grand Lodge and Chapter. A Committee was appointed, with General Ives as Chairman, the other members being the V.W. Bro. the Rev. C. J. Martyn P.G. Chaplain of England, and Deputy Grand Master of the Province, W. Bro. N. Tracy Prov. G. Secretary, and W. Bro. C. H. Vincent Prov. G. Registrar, the hon. secretary of the fund. A brass tablet was ultimately determined upon, the design for which was entrusted to Bro. Vincent, who is a P.M. of the above Lodge, and has evidently fulfilled his task con amore. The tablet has a foliated border of acacia, intersected by quatrefoils and trefoils, containing the armorial bearings and Masonic jewels borne by the Prince. In the upper border we observe the Master's jewel, with the Royal Arms and the insignia of the Garter; and in the lower are the R.A. jewel of the Grand Third Principal of England, with the Prince's arms and those of Clare; the right and left centres showing the jewels of the Prov. Grand Master of Oxfordshire, and the Junior Grand Warden of England. Beneath the open volume of the sacred law, which bears the emblems of the Craft, is the following inscription, in Gothic characters:

"In fraternal memory of H.R.H. Prince Leopold, Duke of Albany, Earl of Clarence, K.G., Provincial Grand Master of Oxfordshire, Past Grand Junior Warden of England, Grand Third Principal of the Royal Arch Masons of England, fourth son of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, who was born 7th April 1853, and died 28th March 1884, H.R.H. being at the time Worshipful Master of the Royal Clarence Lodge of Freemasons in this town, No. 1,823, this tablet is erected by the officers and members of the above Lodge, and other brethren in the province of Suffolk."

The initial letters are illuminated, the arms being emblazoned, and the jewels enamelled in Masonic colours. The whole work is beautifully conceived, and is perfect in every detail, while the execution is faultless—indeed, the utmost credit is due to the engraver, as well as to the designer, who is an amateur in art, and the Committee may be heartily congratulated on the result of their labours. The Lodge and Province are specially indebted to General Ives for having not only superintended the work, but also for very kindly defraying its extra cost beyond the amount of the original estimate. The memorial has been fixed in a commanding position, and we understand that the Rev. R. Sorsbie, vicar of Clare, besides giving the Committee the choice of its site, generously declined the fee to which he was entitled for its erection. An excellent photograph of the tablet has been taken by Bro. T. Stokoe the W.M. Elect of the Lodge.

INSTALLATION MEETINGS, &c.

IMPERIAL GEORGE LODGE, No. 78.

THE regular meeting of this Lodge, falling on Christmas Eve, was, by special dispensation, held on the previous evening. It was wisely decided, we think, by the Officers of the Lodge not to hold their meeting on the Christmas Eve, as in previous years, it having been found inconvenient for many of the brethren and visitors to leave their homes and families on such occasions. Lodge was opened in due form and with solemn prayer at three o'clock, by the W.M., Bro. Richard Burtles; the minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed. The letter of condolence which had been sent to the family of the late Bro. Samuel Lawton, and the reply thereto, was then read, and both were listened to by the members with the greatest veneration; this was testified in a very marked degree by the Lodge being draped in black, and the brethren wearing black rosettes on their aprons. The Lodge was then opened in the second degree, and the Installing Master, Bro. Peter Lawton P.M., took the chair; the outgoing W.M. presented the W.M. elect Bro. W. H. Withington S.W. The opening portion of the ceremony was delivered by the Installing Master in a most pathetic manner, he evidently struggling with some strong inward feeling, doubtless caused by the reading of the letter of condolence referring to his late father. However, as Bro. Lawton proceeded he nobly mastered his feelings, and completed his work in a most able manner, and to the delight of the brethren present. The Secretary having recited the usual questions put to a W.M. elect, Lodge was raised to the third degree, and the ceremony of installation proceeded, almost without a hitch, and in a manner that may fairly be described as word proof to the form and ritual of Lodges in this Province. The address to the Master was most ably delivered by Bro. Harvey Heywood, J.P., P.M., who has filled the post of Treasurer of the Lodge for many years. The address to the Wardens was impressively recited by another very old P.M. of the Lodge, Bro. Dr. Garlick, and he also acquitted himself in a manner that brought many marks of approbation from the brethren assembled. The address to the brethren was given by the Installing Master in a manner which, later in the evening, was described by Bro. Nathan, one of the oldest Past Masters in England, as truly efficient, and as far as his recollection went it had never been better done. The working tools were presented to the W.M. by the Installing Master in brief but emphatic language. The following Officers were then formally invested:—Bros. R. Burtles I.P.M., T. G. Marsh S.W., E. Dodd J.W., H. Heywood P.M. Treasurer, F. Entwistle Secretary, J. W. Lees S.D., C. L. Hartley J.D., P. Lawton P.M. D.C., W. Fielding Organist, R. Hilton I.G., J. Kent Tyler, W. Harlow Assistant Tyler. One omission was nearly being made, the investment of a Director of Ceremonies; but even if this duty had been overlooked, it would scarcely have mattered, inasmuch as this old Lodge had learned to value the important services of Bro. Peter Lawton, and in all probability no other D.C. will ever be appointed whilst he is willing to fulfil the duties of that office. The usual questions from the chair elicited hearty good wishes from twenty-four visiting brethren, and the Lodge was then closed in due form and with solemn prayer, at five p.m. Half an hour later the brethren sat down to a banquet catered for by the host of the Assheton Arms Hotel, Middleton, who supplied the tables in a sumptuous manner. Handsome decorations lent a lustre to the scene; the cookery was of the choicest, while the waiters were well up to their work, and most obliging in their manner. The usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were given by the W.M., Bro. Withington, with neat introductory remarks, and if space would permit our reporting them, it would make somewhat paradoxical Brother Withington's oft-repeated assurance that he could not make speeches; however, if he cannot make speeches (which we are not prepared to admit), he can and did look well after the Visitors, and in this respect the W.M. was aided by his Wardens and Officers. Some Lodges would do well to follow in this regard the example of this old Fireside Lodge. Doubtless much of this foresight is due to Bro. Lawton, who seems never tired of working to carry out the teachings of our highly respected Prov. Grand Master, Bro. Colonel Le Gendre N. Starkie, whose innermost wish is to see uniformity of ritual in Lodge working, attention to visitors at the festive board, and the practice of every social and moral virtue. The musical programme was under the baton of Bro. J. H. Greenwood, and Worshipful Masters will do well in taking every opportunity of securing the services of this brother. He is a host in himself; he is a splendid accompanyist; he sings well, gives character sketches, and never says no to an encore. Enthusiastic speeches were delivered by some of the visiting brethren, amongst whom may be mentioned Bro. William Harris, W.M. of the Wolseley Lodge, who in eloquent terms referred to the fact that Bro. Withington was a member of the Wolseley Lodge, and had always been ready to perform any ceremony when called upon; also that the Imperial George Lodge deserved, and had, his best thanks for having elected one of his members as their Master. Bro. Withington he believed was the youngest Master in the Province, and he (Bro. Harris) could fearlessly say would be considered one of the most efficient Masters, and a truly good Mason. From experience he had found that Bro. Withington practised out of the Lodge what he preached in it, and a brother who thus far practised Freemasonry was indeed a man to whom much honour was due. In conclusion, he opined a happy and prosperous year for the Imperial George Lodge, and he trusted that for many years Bro. Withington would occupy a seat by his side on the dais of the Wolseley Lodge. He had much more he could say about Bro. Withington, which would not only be a treat for him, but a pleasure to the brethren to hear; but he was being nudged on the arm by his D.C., Bro. Darbyshire, who was making suggestions to him to cut it short; so he felt he must conclude, but promised to again visit the Lodge, when he would tell them how Bro. Withington first introduced him to the Masonic world in the Province. Bros. Roger Walker W.M. Callender Lodge, Schofield W.M. Strangeways Lodge, Bottomley W.M. Tudor Lodge, Irving Virtue Lodge, Russell Strangeways Lodge, Nathan P.M. Zion Lodge, also made excellent speeches, all expressing their delight and gratitude at being present. The toast of the Officers was ably responded to by Bro. Marsh, the Senior Warden, who although suffering from hoarseness, was so carried away by the enthusiastic character of the meeting that he made a neat and impressive speech, pledging his own, and that of his brother Officers, intention to right loyally support their Master. The toast of the Past Masters was responded to by Bros. Harvey Haywood and Dr. Garlick, the latter of whom reminded Bro. Heywood that he was some years wrong in saying his connection with this Lodge dated twenty-one years back; in point of fact he (Bro. Garlick) had been connected with the Lodge twenty-five years, and Bro. Heywood was a member when he joined. Both these Past Masters spoke in eulogistic terms of the Installing Master, and in a most confident manner of their belief in the ability of the newly-elected Master to add to the prosperity of the Lodge under his rule. The evening's proceedings were brought to a close at ten o'clock by Bro. Greenwood singing the National Anthem.

DORIC LODGE, No. 81.

THE anniversary meeting of this Lodge was held at Woodbridge, on Tuesday, 29th December, when Bro. E. Smith was installed Worshipful Master for the ensuing year. There was a large muster, amongst those present being Bros. Major General W. H. Hessey W.M., Past Masters Brothers Alfred Barnes, B. Gall, W. P. T. Phillips, Ernest St. George Cobbold, F. A. Kent and Thomas Grimwood; Brothers E. Smith S.W., Frederick Horsey J.W., W. H. Page Phillips S.D., J. Stidolph Organist, J. Parrett I.G. Amongst the members present were Brothers George Booth, C. D. Girling, D. Jackson, A. S. Gross, William Hawes, W. Sheppard, and William Cook. The Visitors included Bros. W. Clarke P.G.P., James Terry P.M. 228 (Secretary to the Masonic Benevolent Institution), C. G. Hayward W.M. 516, N. Tracy P.M. 376 P.G.S., F. C. Atkinson J.D. 376, &c. The installation ceremony was ably performed by Bro. Clarke, assisted by Bro. Terry, who acted as D.C., Bro. Gall taking the Senior, and Bro. Thomas Grimwood the Junior Warden's chairs respectively. The newly-installed Master invested his Officers for the year as under:—Bros. Frederick Horsey S.W., W. H. Page Phillips J.W., George Booth S.D., Joseph Parrett J.D., B. Gall Treasurer and D.C., F. Whisstock Secretary, Rev. R. C. M. Rouse Chaplain, J. Stidolph Organist, A. S. Gross I.G. The installation banquet was subsequently held at the Bull Hotel, where between thirty and forty brethren sat down to an admirably-served repast. The W.M. presided, and in addition to the brethren already mentioned, there were present—Brothers E. C. Moor, J. Collins, J. Grant, J. C. Fisk, R. Allen, &c. The toasts of the Queen and the Craft, the Grand Master his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and the other members of the Royal Family, and the Pro Grand Master and Present and Past Grand Officers, were proposed from the chair, Bro. W. Clarke responding for the Grand Officers. The Chairman next proposed the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master Lord Waveney; the Deputy Provincial Grand Master the Rev. C. J. Martyn, and the Present and Past Provincial Grand Officers, to which Bro. N. Tracy P.G.S. responded. The I.P.M. Major General W. H. Hessey proposed the health of the Worshipful Master, and expressed his indebtedness to Bro. E. Smith for having kindly consented to forego the claims he had to his present position during the two years he (Major General Hessey) had occupied the Master's chair. That large gathering was sufficient testimony of Bro. Smith's popularity amongst the brethren, and he was sure from what they had already seen they might look to their W.M. to raise the working of the Lodge to a higher degree of excellence than it had hitherto reached. During the past year many brethren had, through the influence of Bro. Smith, been initiated or admitted as joining members of the Lodge—they had now about fifty members on the books—and he hoped the time was not far distant when the Doric would be one of the strongest Lodges in the Province. In conclusion, Major General Hessey expressed his regret that the Deputy Provincial Grand Master was unable to be with them, because he said it was his particular wish to be present to do honour to Bro. Smith. The toast was drunk with full Masonic honours. The W.M., in a few well-chosen words, responded. He thanked the brethren and the Past Masters for the great kindness they had shown to him, and expressed the hope that the Officers of the Lodge would, during the coming year, afford him every assistance in carrying on the work of the Lodge. Bro. W. P. T. Phillips proposed the Masonic Charities, and alluding to the fact that he should have the honour of representing the Province at the Girls' Festival, expressed the hope that he would be well supported. Bro. Terry, who on rising to respond was received with loud applause, said the Benevolent Institution this year required more than usual support, because it had overdrawn its banking account by some £1500 during the past year. The number of candidates was largely in excess of the vacancies, and unless great help was accorded to the Institution, it would be impossible for the Committee to find room for an additional number, or even fill up the vacancies which already existed. At the present time there were 130 candidates, while there were only fourteen vacancies. Having alluded to the fact that Bros. Tracy and Wright were going to represent the Province at the Benevolent Institution, and Bro. Phillips at the Girls' Festival, Bro. Terry referred to the success which had attended the scheme for the insurance of the life of Brother the Rev C. J. Martyn, which would secure for the Province a large number of votes in perpetuity. The Chairman proposed The Visitors, to which Bro. C. G. Hayward and others responded. Bro. Major-General Hessey proposed the health of the Installing Master, and alluded to the fact that Bro. W. Clarke had kindly undertaken and ably discharged the duties for the past eight years. Bro. W. Clarke responded. The Chairman then proposed The I.P.M. and the Officers of the Lodge, to which Bro. Major-General Hessey and the officers responded. The Senior Warden proposed The Treasurer and Secretary, and having expressed his regret at the absence, through illness, of Bro. Whisstock, said the Lodge was especially indebted to Bro. Gall for the way in which he had undertaken the duties of his present office. Bro. Gall responded, and a very pleasant evening was brought to a close with the Tyler's toast.—East Anglian Daily News.

PHŒNIX LODGE, No. 257.

THE annual meeting of this Lodge, held at Portsmouth, on Monday, the 28th ultimo, was well attended. Brother Colonel Crease, C.B., R.M.A., having been elected as the Worshipful Master of the Lodge for the ensuing year, was duly installed, the ceremony being impressively performed by Brother Ernest Hall P.M. P.G. Superintendent of Works. Colonel Crease appointed and invested his Officers, as follow:—Bros. Arthur Jolliffe I.P.M., W. G. Gilbert S.W., Major Campbell, R.M.A., J.W., Rev. G. H. DeFraine, M.A., P.M. P.G. Chaplain and Rev. T. Fitzhardinge Morton, M.A., P.G. Chaplain Chaplains, J. R. O'Connor, M.D., P.M. P.P.G.W. Treasurer, H. Drummond Secretary, S. B. Darwin S.D., A. O. Bayly J.D., James Griffin, J.P., I.G., T. R. Williams P.M. Director of Ceremonies, Ernest Hall P.M. P.G. Supt. Works Assistant Director of Ceremonies, Captain Kennedy and C. W. Long Stewards, G. D. Lovegrove Organist. A vote of condolence with the family of the late Brother George Rake P.M. P.P.G.W. was unanimously agreed to. After the close of the business the brethren adjourned to the dining-room, where an excellent banquet was served. The proceedings were of an unusually interesting character, as this is the centenary year of the Lodge, which was founded in May 1786. Amongst the Visitors present were the following Prov. Grand Officers of Hants and the Isle of Wight:—Bros. W. W. B. Beach, M.P., Grand Master, J. E. Le Feuvre Deputy Master, Edgar Goble Secretary; also R. Barnaby Main W.M. 1593, Lord Henry Lennox, General Sir George Willis, K.C.B., P. Vanderbyl, M.P., Captain St. Clair, R.N., W.M. St. Clair Lodge, &c.

LODGE OF UNION, No. 414.

THE December meeting of this Lodge was held on the 15th ult., at the Masonic Hall, Reading. Bro. M. J. Withers W.M. presided, and there were also present Bros. Witherington S.W., Blackwell J.W., Mount P.M. Treasurer, Parry Secretary, Martin S.D., Hawkes J.D., Sherwood I.G., Walters D.C., Hayward Organist, Tirbutt Steward, S. Wheeler I.P.M., Robert Bradley P.M. P.G. Sec., F. J. Ferguson P.M., Chas. Ouden P.M., Samuel Bradley P.M., Bracher, Albury, Galt, Knill, Millar, and others. After the minutes of the previous meeting had been confirmed, the ballot was taken for Mr. Alexander Livings, and Mr. William Bonny, who were duly elected and initiated into Freemasonry. The brethren then proceeded to elect a W.M. and Treasurer for the ensuing year. Bro. Frederick Blackwell Junior Warden was elected Worshipful Master, and Bro. R. C. Mount P.M. was re-elected to the office of Treasurer. The Tyler, Bro. Hemmings, was also re-elected. The W.M., S.W., J.W., and Bro. R. Bradley P.M., were appointed as an Audit Committee. On the motion of the W.M. a sum was voted from the Lodge Funds to provide a portrait of the late Bro. W. W. Moxhay P.M. P.P.S.G.W., to be placed in the reception room of the Lodge. A Past Master's jewel was voted to the retiring W.M. The W.M. expressed his thanks to the Officers for the courtesy they had extended to him during his occupancy of the chair, and asked the Lodge to accept a new set of tracing boards which he had placed in position. On the proposition of Bro. R. C. Mount P.M. thanks for these gifts were voted. Business ended, the Lodge was closed in due form, and adjourned to the third Tuesday in January.

YARBOROUGH LODGE, No. 551.

ON the 15th ult., at the Masonic Hall, High-street, Ventnor, Bro. F. Topham Jones was installed as the W.M. for the ensuing year, in the presence of a large number of the Craft from various Lodges in the island, including Bros. M. Linfield, T. H. I. Petherick, A. Houston, A. Greenham, A. H. Brown, T. Saunders, Wheeler, Brannon, Wacell, J. Conner, A. J. Firth, G. Pack, E. Groves, Brockington, Tolman, F. P. Ansle, J. Webber, H. B. Ribbands, &c. The ceremony of installation was performed by Bro Alfred Scott P.M. P.P.G.S. Bro. the Rev. J. Alloway was appointed to the office of S.W. At the close of the proceedings the brethren adjourned to the Crab and Lobster Hotel, where a banquet was served in capital style by the proprietress, Miss Ciss.

WHITTINGTON LODGE, No. 862.

THE members of this Lodge met at Freemasons' Hall on Monday, 21st December. The brethren present were the W.M. Bro. John Collinson in the chair, Bros. D. J. Ross S.W., W. Hill J.W., K. Kingston P.M. Treasurer, I. Irvine S.D., H. Brocklehurst J.D., A. T. H. Pannecefort I.G., V. Day Steward, Past Masters Brown, Packer, Bolton, Richardson I.P.M.; also Bros. Sharp, Bentley, Guanzerulli, and Thrower. The following Visitors were present: Bros. Higgins P.M., Colls, Baildon. After the minutes of the November meeting had been confirmed, the ballot was taken for Mr. Jaspord James Nannetti; it being unanimous, that gentleman was duly initiated by the W.M. Bro. Sharp, who had been initiated at the previous meeting, was then passed to the second degree, Bro. Pannecefort officiating as Organist, Bro. Anderson, who was also a candidate for passing, was unavoidably absent. Bro. Packer P.M., acting as Secretary pro tem, in the absence of Bro. J. Weaver P.M., brought several matters before the Lodge, which were formally dealt with. Bro. Brown P.M. then gave notice that at the next meeting he would ask the members to discuss the propriety of altering one of the bye-laws of the Lodge. After the termination of the business the brethren and visitors retired to the Holborn Restaurant, dinner being prepared for them there. During the evening the usual Masonic toasts were proposed and responded to. A very pleasant evening was the result, there being no scarcity of the Masonic talent provocative of harmony. The members and their Visitors dispersed at 10 p.m.

YORK LODGE, No. 236.

A meeting of this Lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Duncombe-place, York, on Monday, the 21st ult. There were present Bros. Dr. Draper W.M., Dr. Henry Foster S.W., T. G. Hodgson J.W., the Very Rev. A. P. Purey-Cust, Dean of York, P.G. Chap. Chaplain, J. Todd P.P.G.T. Treasurer, Wm. Smith Secretary, P. Border S.D., C. Anderson D.C., C. Forbes I.G., S. Crumack Steward, W. G. Calvert Tyler; P.M.'s Bros. G. Garbutt, A. H. M. Gachen, J. Sykes Rymer, Mark Rooke, A. Buckle, G. W. C. Lee, R. W. Hollon, G. Kirby and J. E. Macnay; Bros. Dr. J. Ramsay, Tom Archey, J. Toes, E. Houlden, Lambert Hick, Rev. C. Linley, J. Biscombe, E. Carter, Dr. Mungo Bryson, W. G. Thomas, and E. W. Purnell. Visitors—Bros. J. M. Blenkin P.M. 1611, F. Smith P.M. 837, W. B. Smith 837, G. W. Hudson 566, R. Hodgson 566, W. H. Beverley 200, W. H. Cowper 1848, W. G. Watson 602, R. C. Faulkner 1555, J. W. Woodall G.T. 200, J. Brookes Parkin 837, L. A. W. R. Barnes 113, H. Allison 1001, F. Bateman 837, and others. The Lodge was opened by Bro. W. Draper W.M., and after the reading of the minutes, Bro. J. Todd P.M. P.P.G.T. took the chair, and proceeded to instal Bro. H. Foster W.M. elect, the Wardens' chairs being occupied by Bros. A. Buckle P.M. P.P.G.D. and J. Sykes Rymer P.M. P.G. Registrar. The W.M. appointed and invested his Officers, as follow:—Bros. W. Draper I.P.M., T. G. Hodgson S.W., W. Smith J.W., the Dean of York P.G.C. Chaplain, J. Todd P.M. Treasurer, E. W. Purnell Secretary, S Border S.D., C. M. Forbes J.D., H. S. Hopton D.C., A. Sample Org., J. B. Sampson I.G., S. G. Crumack and T. Watkinson Stewards, and W. G. Calvert Tyler. The Secretary read letters of apology and regret from Bros. Dr. Bell D.P.G.M., Peck P.G.T., Tew P.G.M. West Yorks, Hon. W. T. Orde-Powlett P.P.G.S.W., Sir F. Milner P.G.S.W., T. B. Whytehead P.P.G.W., and several others. The Lodge being closed in peace and harmony, subsequently a banquet, to celebrate the Festival of St. John the Evangelist, was held in the Lodge-room, and presided over by the W.M., supported by a great number of brethren, the room being quite full. The usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, and the rest of the evening spent in characteristic harmony and brotherly love.

United Mariners' Lodge of Instruction, No. 30.—The closing meeting of the year in connection with this Lodge of Instruction will be recollected as one of the happiest and most harmonious in the "annual round." In spite of the dreary weather there was a capital muster of the brethren at Bro. Pusey's, Lugard Tavern, Peckham, and most appropriately on the last gathering for the year Bro. Walter Martin, the esteemed and able Preceptor of the Lodge, was unanimously asked to preside. He was supported by Bros. W. Wimble as S.W., W. Dutton J.W., S. J. Lampen Treasurer, C. L. Tokely Secretary, Garland S.D., Morgan J.D., D. Thomas I.G., Axford, Nightingale, Amphlett, Eadle, Wilkinson, A. Pusey, Briley, and others. Having opened in the first degree, and the minutes of the last meeting been read and confirmed, Lodge was advanced to the second and third degrees, when the ceremony of raising was rehearsed, Bro. Eedle personating the candidate. The working of Bro. Martin, especially in the traditional history, was much admired, and elicited frequent expressions of approbation. The brethren, after having been called from labour to refreshment, and vice versa, saluted the W.M. in the three degrees, after which Lodge was closed in form and amidst the heartiest good wishes for a prosperous New Year. Bro. Martin, in reviewing the work of the Lodge during the past twelve months, congratulated the brethren upon the many successful and happy meetings they had enjoyed; and though he could not expect them to be more so in the year which was so nearly approaching he trusted that the attendances might be even more numerous in the future than they had been in the past. In accordance with annual custom the remainder of the evening was devoted to harmony, to which every brother present contributed his quota. Interspersing the excellent songs some complimentary toasts were proposed, and honoured with "good old United Mariners' fire." Especially well received was the health of the Preceptor; Bro. Wimble, in proposing it, alluding to the able and intelligent manner in which Bro. Martin had discharged his duties in that capacity ever since the Lodge of Instruction had been established. Bro. Martin responded in a few happily chosen sentences, thanking the brethren for the kindness and consideration they had ever extended towards him, and for the assistance they had rendered in promoting the interests and welfare of this Lodge of Instruction. It would be his duty and pleasure in the ensuing year, as it had been hitherto, to welcome any brethren who might consider it to their advantage to attend their meetings; he would endeavour to aid them to the utmost of his ability in their Masonic researches. The health of the Treasurer and Secretary followed, reference being made to Bro. Lampen's recovery from a recent illness, and a hope being expressed that he might long be spared to discharge his duties to the Lodge, of which he was one of the founders, and a most active and consistent supporter. The services of the Secretary were also duly acknowledged, and suitable replies to the compliments paid to them were made by Bros. Lampen and Tokely. The health of the worthy host, in recognition of his admirable arrangements for the comfort and enjoyment of the brethren, was also proposed and cordially received, and Bro. Pusey in response said, it would be his continued study to merit the approbation of the brethren. One or two other toasts were honoured, interspersed with singing and recitations, a ventriloquial sketch by Bro. Wilkinson being much applauded. At a seasonable hour, after singing "Auld Lang Syne" in true Masonic fashion, the brethren separated, amidst the heartiest wishes for a "Happy and Prosperous New Year."

Justice Lodge of Instruction, No 147.—On Thursday, 31st inst., at the Brown Bear, High-street, Deptford. Present—Bros. Hunt jun. W.M., Pitt S.W., Thomas J.W., Speight P.M. Sec., Stringer S.D., Penrose J.D., Ingram I.G.; P.M.'s Bros. Hutchings Preceptor, Bolton; also Bros. Prior, Greener, Dandridge and Emblin. After preliminaries, the usual questions were answered by Bro. Prior, and Lodge was advanced to the third degree, when the ceremony of raising was rehearsed, including the traditional history. Lodge was resumed in the first degree, and Bros. P.M.'s Hutchings, Banks and Speight were respectively re-elected Preceptor, Treasurer and Secretary for the ensuing year. The report of the Audit Committee was read, and Lodge of Instruction was then closed in due form.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 193.—On Wednesday, 23rd ult., at Bro. Lashbrook's, Hercules Tavern, 119 Leadenhall-street, E.C., Brothers Campbell W.M., L. De Costa S.W., D. Moss J.W., Fernley J.D., Belchamber Preceptor, B. De Costa I.G., J. K. Pitt Secretary, J. Lashbrook, &c. Lodge opened in due form, and the minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed. The ceremony of initiation was rehearsed by the W.M., Bro. Pitt acting as candidate. The first and second sections were worked by Brother Moss, assisted by the brethren. Brother L. De Costa was elected W.M. for ensuing week. It was arranged that Bro. Moss should work the ceremony of installation on Wednesday, the 6th of January 1886. Members of the Craft are invited to assist.

Royal Alfred Lodge of Instruction, No. 780.—On Friday, 18th ult., at the Star and Garter, Kew Bridge, at 8 p.m. Bros. C. E. Botley W.M., Bailey S.W., Norton J.W., Cammell S.D., Monson J.D., Pearce I.G.; P.M.'s Andrews Preceptor, Rev. P. G. Pickering; Bros. Brnell D.C. 1818; also Bros. F. Botley, Earl, Francis, Coningham, Turner, Sugg, Maton. The minutes of the last meeting having been confirmed, the ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Francis candidate. Bro. Francis answered the questions leading to the second degree. The W.M. worked the first section, Bro. Botley the second, and Bro. Andrews the third sections of the 1st lecture, assisted by the brethren. Bro. Brnell was elected a member. The Lodge meetings were adjourned till Friday, 8th January 1886, when Bro. Bailey will occupy the chair. Lodge was closed, and adjourned till Friday, 8th January 1866, at 8 p.m.

At the December meeting of the Board of Benevolence, Bro. J. Brett P.G.P., Senior Vice President, occupied the chair, supported by a large attendance of brethren. Several letters of thanks were announced as having been received from recipients of relief at the November meeting, and recommendations made on that occasion, amounting in the aggregate to £410, were confirmed. The new list contained the names of fifty-three petitioners, resident in various parts of the country; but of these five were deferred, being incomplete, and one petitioner had died since the name was placed upon the list. The remaining forty-seven cases were relieved, in amounts ranging from £100 to £2 each, the total relief granted being £1,512. The sum voted in benevolence by the Board during the past year was £10,153.

A Convocation of the North London Chapter of Improvement was held at the Alwyne Castle Tavern, Canonbury, on Thursday, 31st ultimo. Comps. W. H. Dean M.E.Z., W. Radcliffe H., T. C. Edmonds J., J. E. Sheffield S.E., H. Jenkins S.N. The Companions mustered well for the last Convocation of the Year. We trust the New Year may prove as successful as the declining one.

The Freemasons of Sussex are about to present Lady Burrell with a portrait of Sir W. W. Burrell, as a token of the esteem in which Sir Walter, who is the Provincial Grand Master of Sussex, is regarded by the brethren of the Province.

The following Festivals were held at the Freemasons' Tavern during the week ending Saturday, 2nd January 1886:—

Tuesday—Grand Master's Lodge. Friday—Fidelity Chapter.

TOUTING FOR OFFICE.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The remarks contained in your issue of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE on 12th December embody a principle which is often discussed by the members of Lodges, and which cannot be too widely canvassed. I refer to the practice of asking for "votes and interest" in view of elections in connection with the Craft. If the transference of the office of Grand Treasurer from a permanent to an annual one was a step in the right direction—which most of us venture to opine it was—the effect of that reform will be grievously stultified should it be the means at the same time of inaugurating a system of touting for votes, or as you rightly point out, of "overstepping the bounds of prudence in connection with the annual fight" for the only elective collar at the disposal of Grand Lodge. There can be no question that there is a growing tendency in that direction, which the brethren will do well to discountenance and check by every means in their power; otherwise it will develop into an annual splitting up of Freemasons into sections and cliques, which cannot but be injurious to the Craft in more senses than one. The canvassing which recently took place on behalf of the various candidates for the office of Grand Treasurer has been properly stigmatised as unseemly, and gave rise to many arguments and discussions happily of rare occurrence amongst Masons.

It has always, so far as my experience of Freemasonry is concerned, been considered infra dig, and utterly opposed to the rules of etiquette, to make a personal canvass on behalf of or even to insinuate the claims, supposed or real, of any brother who might be desirous of filling the chair, or any other office in the Lodge. Moreover, when such has been found to be the case the "knavish tricks" of coteries have invariably been frustrated by the action of other brethren whose aim it is to maintain an esprit de corps amongst the general body of the members. Not long since I heard of an instance in which a Past Master, anxious for a second taste of the sweets of office, passed the word round amongst a select circle of his friends to that effect, and a vigorous effort was made by the few voluntary canvassers in his behalf, no doubt anticipating their reward for services rendered in the shape of a more speedy advancement to position in the Lodge. But the stratagem was discovered in time, and, much to the chagrin of the too zealous Past Master and his hirelings, it was met with a sufficient amount of opposition to prevent its being carried into effect.

There are many brethren who will think with me that the re-election of a Past Master to the chair of his Lodge is undesirable, except under very exceptional circumstances, for it not only retards the whole of the oncoming Officers for a year, but frequently begets a spirit of disappointment and discontentment amongst the whole of the following members, who might have been looking forward, as all should do, to appointment to office. If therefore, as you observe, all canvassing, either personal on the part of the candidate for the office of Grand Treasurer, or by his intimate friends, should be forbidden by the Grand Master, the same wholesome and salutary rule should be applied to the ordinary Lodge elections, and no touting for support permitted either for Worshipful Master or any of the other offices. A serious contemplation is raised by the very idea you foreshadow of candidates for admission to the mysteries and privileges of Freemasonry being "interviewed," and their promise of support ascertained for either one faction or the other. Such a process would revolutionize the whole principles of the Craft, and make the ballot only a mockery and a delusion. Many a Mason—indeed all who are solicitous for the well-being of the Craft—will re-echo your sentiments when you say that when once the system of canvassing becomes recognised in connection with other offices than that of Grand Treasurer, Freemasonry will be split up into factions, and harmony will be banished from our midst.

I remain, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

P.Z.

Painless and Perfect Dentistry. By Dr. G. H. Jones, F.R.S.L. London: 57 Great Russell-street, W.C.

LIKE many other branches of study bearing upon the health and comfort of humanity, the dental art has undergone prodigious manipulations and improvements within comparatively recent years, and in this popular treatise on the teeth, Bro. Jones shows that instead of its being delusive to speak of "painless dentistry," it is as much an accomplished fact as the swift locomotive engine, the electric light, or the telephone. That the author does not "speak without the book" may be gathered from the fact of his being the inventor and patentee of dental improvements in our own country, as well as in America, France, and Belgium, having taken gold medals at the various great international exhibitions. These successes have been recognised by his appointment as honorary surgeon-dentist to the Reedham Asylum for Fatherless Children, the British Asylum for Deaf and Dumb Females, the Licensed Victuallers' School, and other institutions, whose authorities are evidently alive to Bro. Dr. Jones's eminent status in his profession. It is not our province to enter copiously into the great variety of subjects which concern the physical and mental condition of future generations, and the real danger to which lies in neglecting necessary precautions, and in disregarding the means at our disposal for the preservation of sound health. The various matters connected with the beneficial inventions of science to promote and preserve good health are happily treated by the author, whose homely little brochure should be perused by all who are in any way afflicted or distressed, in consequence of the defective condition of the teeth.

Little Folks. London; CJsselle', La Belle Sauvage Yard, Ludgate Hill, E.C.

IT will hardly be necessary to remind heads of respectable families of the attractions of this admirable work for children, which has run through we scarcely know how many years, and is to be found on many a nursery bookshelf, well thumbed by the hands of tiny readers. Every new issue of this publication is as fresh and even more replete with interest to our "little folks" than its predecessor, and the series which makes its appearance with the new year is in every respect superior to anything we have yet seen emanate from this old and respected firm. Mrs. Molesworth, the well-known writer for children, leads off with a new serial story, called "The Palace in the Garden;" the second story is entitled "The Bravest of the Brave," by the author of "Doddlekins," and a novel series of anecdotal papers, with striking full-page illustrations, is commenced, under the title of "Baby Birds and their Ways." Mr. Henry Frith contributes the first of his "Little Stories of Earth and Sky," which seek to explain many curious facts and legends possessing peculiar interest for young people. An important new departure is made in this number, and will be continued, by the introduction of several novel features which are specially designed for the benefit of very small children, amongst which may be mentioned four pages of pictures, with stories printed in large type, in addition to simple tales, a story of words in one syllable, and numerous jingles and amusing rhymes. The miscellaneous papers are of great variety and of uniform excellence, and the editor announces a large number of special competitions for the year 1886. These are prepared for children of varying tastes, and are so arranged that by means of three divisions for competitors of different ages all—even the little ones in the nursery—who compete have an equal opportunity of winning prizes. Among the competitions is one for the best coloured copies of a painting book, called "A Book of Fruits and Blossoms;" and a special feature in them all is that the whole of the coloured books, articles of work, toys, scrap albums, dressed dolls, &c., &c., sent to the Editor are afterwards distributed among the inmates of our Children's hospitals. The January number of "Little Folks," contains about fifty pictures, by Gordon Browne, Lizzie Lawson, E. J. Walker, E. Scannell, C. T. Garland, Ernest Griset, H. G. Rhodes, W. S. Stacey, A. Barraud, and other well-known artists; and it is adorned with a Picture in Colours, called "The New Pet," by M. E. Edwards.

The Housewife: a Practical Magazine, concerning everything in and about the Home. London: 5 Ludgate Circus Buildings, E.C.

HERE we have a new venture, by another eminent firm of publishers; and the title above will be sufficient to convey to the minds of thousands of heads of families how valuable an addition this will be to our stock of useful standard literature. In his—or her—preface, the editor expresses an intention of gathering a large family around her, every member of which will be expected to assist in the entertainment and instruction of every other member. Whatever comes within the scope of the word "home," from the cellar to the garret, between the front gate and the extreme end of the kitchen garden at the back, will be open for discussion and elucidation. Certainly in the opening part now before us there is ample promise of this prolific programme being well sustained, for we have the opening chapters of a treatise on "Our Country Home, with its trials and triumphs of housekeeping," by E. Harcourt Burrage; chatty hints and information on "Cookery for the People," by Mary Jewry; on "Modern Embroidery," by B. C. Saward; and a host of others on knitting, dress of fashion, family medicine, music, dress making, food, and household management, all of which must be of paramount interest to the thrifty housewife. It needs no very great stretch of imagination to predict that a work of such universal and practical importance will find ready acceptance at the hands of the vast audience to whom it is addressed; indeed it is difficult to limit the scope of such a publication, which lays its useful treasures at the feet of every section of the community.

The Revised Book of Constitutions; Critically Considered and Compared with the Old Edition. London: Simpkin, Marshall & Co. 4 Stationers' Hall Court, E.C. Sent on receipt of stamps, One Shilling, by W W. Morgan, Freemasons' Chronicle Office, Belvidere Works, Hermes Hill, Pentonville.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—During every break of wintry weather exertions should be made by the afflicted to recover health before unremitting cold and trying storms set in. Throat ailments, coughs, wheezings, asthmatical affections, shortness of breath, morning nausea, and accumulations of phlegm can readily be removed by rubbing this fine derivative Ointment twice a day upon the chest and neck. Holloway's treatment is strongly recommended with the view of giving immediate ease, preventing prospective danger, and effecting permanent relief. These all-important ends his Ointment and Pills can accomplish, and will surely prevent insidious diseases from fastening on the constitution to display themselves afterwards in those disastrous forms that will probably embitter life till death itself is almost prayed for.

A SPLENDID BALANCE SHEET.

THE closing of the year is a time when business men apply themselves to the balancing up of their accounts and taking stock, so as to ascertain correctly the result of their past twelve months labour. In this respect the body of Masons are most heartily to be congratulated upon the amount of benevolence they have been enabled collectively to bestow, the figures showing a vast and gratifying excess over that of the preceding year. It may be urged that this is in a measure to be accounted for by the steady increase in the number of Masonic Lodges; yet, taking into consideration the wide-spread depression of trade, and the exceptional calls upon the purses of the large-hearted during the past year, there remains ground for sincere and solid gratification in the tables which have just been made at the end of the financial period. A perusal of these tables, which we subjoin, will show that whereas in the year 1884 the total amount subscribed to the three Institutions was £48,823 17s 7d, last year it was swelled to £54,416 2s 7d; giving an increase of £5,592 5s. The Benevolent Institution continues to head the list, with £21,374 7s 1d in 1885, as against £19,901 7s 8d in the preceding year: being an increase of £1,472 19s 5d. Probably this may be attributed to the exertions of the collector appointed by the Benevolent Institution, and may suggest to the executive of the other Charities the desirability of a similar agency for the gathering in of contributions, of which they have not lately availed themselves. It is a matter of experience amongst charitable societies of every class that the results are invariably more substantial when entrusted to the care of a duly accredited and paid official than when the duty of collection is relegated to the hands of honorary and comparatively inexperienced members of the staff. It may, therefore, be not inopportune to point out to the heads of the Boys' and Girls' Schools that it would probably be useful to consider whether, by the zealous and pertinacious applications of a collector, such as he by whom the "Old People" are represented, a still greater amount of grist might not be brought to the mills of those Institutions than is at present the case. With respect to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls a still greater advance is to be recorded, the increase in last year over that of 1884 being no less than £1,849 0s 6d. The receipts for the year just ended were £16,768 19s 6d, as against £14,928 19s in 1884. More satisfactory than all is the increase to the funds of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, the totals of 1884 and 1885 being respectively £13,993 10s 11d and £16,272 16s, or an advance upon the preceding year of £2,279 5s 1d. Statistics are proverbially "dry reading," but in these figures we opine that the brethren generally will take a vivid and satisfied interest, showing as they do "how the barometer" stands with respect to the robust activity that continues to be displayed in all the ranks of Masonic life. The vast increase received by the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution last year must be in a great measure attributed to the almost superhuman efforts put forth by its zealous Secretary Brother James Terry, in arranging for the Festival in February last, when, under the presidency of Brother Sir Michael E. Hicks Beach, M.P., Provincial Grand Master of Gloucestershire, the splendid total of £17,636 6s 8d was announced as the united exertions of the three hundred and fifty Stewards who undertook to represent the various Lodges in London and the Provinces. In like manner, probably, must the increase of the Boys' total be set down to the indomitable exertions of Brother Frederick Binckes, through whose persistent and well-directed appeals in behalf of the Preparatory School Buildings a very substantial amount was raised. The past year's receipts by this Institution include, of course, the special grant from Grand Lodge of £1,000, voted at the June Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge, on the motion of Brother Raynham W. Stewart P.G.D. Brother Binckes, it must be remembered, still requires a little more help to enable him to place the Preparatory School on the basis which its advocates and well-wishers would be gratified to see it; and seeing that the next Festival in aid of the Boys' School will complete a quarter of a century of his exertions in that direction, it is to be hoped that it will resolve itself into a kind of "silver wedding," at which the silver—and gold too—will roll in plenteously in order that Brother Binckes may see the desire of his heart fulfilled, and the top-stone placed on the splendid superstructure he has so ably designed and assisted to a successful issue. The occasion of this Twenth-Fifth Anniversary in Brother Binckes's Festival career should be an incentive to all the brethren to aid him in the accomplishment of his laudable scheme, and we have no doubt such will be the case. In the Girls' School list it must be specially noted there is a munificent gift of a thousand guineas, presented by the Province of West Yorkshire, through its late Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Sir Henry Edwards, Bart.; and there are good things in store for Bro. Hedges, as Secretary of that Institution, as we are reminded that at last month's Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge a grant of £1,000 was made towards the purchase of the additional land at Battersea Rise, though the committee have acted wisely in keeping that sum as a nest-egg for next year, instead of including it in the current balance-sheet. Respecting the prospects of the coming year, it is gratifying to note signs already of increasing activity in the cause of charity. The Province of Cambridgeshire has made a noble start, by voting out of its Benevolent Fund one hundred guineas to each of the three Institutions,—a graceful act, which will be duly appreciated by the Craft at large.

Subjoined are the returns furnished to us officially from headquarters, in the order of the respective totals:—

Taking a prospective glance at the prospects of the Festivals for the current year, we have first to consider that of the Benevolent Institution. Bro. Terry has secured the services of the Marquis of Hertford, Senior Grand Warden, as Chairman for his Festival, and although the noble Marquis will not be backed up by a Province, the Institution is so high in the esteem of the Craft that we may anticipate a brilliant result from the gathering next month in aid of its funds. For the Girls' Festival Bro. Hedges has enlisted the sympathy of the popular Provincial Grand Master of Surrey, Bro. General J. Studholme Brownrigg, C.B., and we are assured that his Province will use even greater exertions than were shown on the occasion this respected chief presided at the Festival of the Benevolent Institution in 1883. The Chairman for the third Festival of the year has not yet been announced, but we have heard a whisper; he is likely to be one of the most popular heads of the Craft. Moreover, the Festival of the Boys' School will, so to speak, mark the silver wedding of Bro. Binckes in his association with the Institution, this year's Festival being the Twenty-Fifth held since he has filled the office of Secretary. Doubtless his many friends and supporters will seize the opportunity to do him special honour on the occasion.

It is to be hoped that other Provinces will emulate the magnificent example set by Cambridgeshire, and that by this time next year we may be able to announce an equally satisfactory advance as is our pleasure to record at the opening of 1886.

Bro. Frank Richardson P.G.D. presided over a regular meeting of the General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, held at Freemasons' Hall, on Thursday last, when, amongst other business transacted, the sum of ten guineas was voted towards a "Twelfth Night" entertainment to the pupils at Battersea Rise, and a further sum of £50 was granted for the purpose of providing a paling for the boundary of the grounds of the Institution. Ten petitions were placed on the list for the April election. It was resolved to recommend to the Quarterly Court, on Saturday, that the list of candidates should include thirty-seven applicants, and that the number of vacancies to be filled shall be twenty-two. Three notices of motion, the terms of which will be found in our advertising columns, were given by Bro. J. H. Matthews, Vice-Patron, P. Grand Std. B., and the proceedings closed with a vote of thanks to Bro. Richardson for presiding.

CRYPTIC MASONRY.

A Historic Address given by Brother Henry W. Rugg, at Freemasons' Hall, Providence, on 30th Oct. 1885, on the occasion of the Observance of the Twenty-Fifth Anniversary of the Grand Council of Royal and Select Masters of Rhode Island.

TO trace the rise and progress of the Cryptic Rite is no easy task. The search has to be made along an often obscure way. There are no reliable sign-posts to point out the exact time and place when and where this part of the Masonic system originated; at the best its early history appears fragmentary and uncertain. The scanty records available are often most disappointing in what they lack to make some of their statements clear and conclusive.

It is an additional cause of perplexity that such various and conflicting theories are put forward by earnest advocates, whose inferences sometimes seem to be exceedingly far-fetched and illogical. Of course there would be no difficulty if only ancient legend were accepted as authoritative, and mere tradition received as true history. Everything might at once be settled by affirming that the degrees of Royal and Select Masters were instituted at Jerusalem, as the present rituals of these degrees would suggest. But no intelligent Craftsman entertains this thought. He knows very well that Freemasonry in all of its departments has been subject to long-continued processes of evolution, and that what we have to-day in the Masonic system and organisation is of comparatively modern presentation. Hence, he is quite prepared to believe—according to what is a plain inference in the nature of things—that the Cryptic degrees were produced at a period far more recent than that from which we date the establishment of Freemasonry in its present form.

It does not come within the scope of this address that I should make any extended reference to the questions relating to the origin and first manifestations of Cryptic Masonry. I may only attempt, in as brief a manner as possible, to summarise certain opinions and conclusions which seem to me worthy of acceptance.

I find no trace of the existence of either of the two leading degrees in the Cryptic Rite until the latter part of the eighteenth century. Possibly they were associated with the Rite of Perfection, introduced into this country in the year 1766, by Henry A. Francken, a Deputy Inspector General, commissioned as such by Stephen Morin, who is often spoken of as the founder of the Scottish Rite in America. Morin, who derived his authority to establish and propagate the higher degrees from the "Grand Council of Emperors of the East and West," at Paris, made Francken his representative and agent in the doing of such work. Francken conferred similar powers on Moses M. Hayes, of Massachusetts, who in turn gave like authority to Moses Cohen, who went to Jamaica, established a Consistory there, and conferred various degrees on that body and elsewhere. A certificate from Cohen, dated 9th November 1790, represents that Abraham Jacobs had been initiated into the degree of "Select Masons of Twenty Seven." It is claimed there is no earlier written record of the Select Master's degree than this, though there are numerous incidental references supposed to point to its having been known both at Paris and Berlin. Whether the degree originated with Cohen or Jacobs; or was manufactured at Charleston, S.C., or brought there from Berlin, in the manner described by Holbrook, who says a certified copy of the original ritual of the "Royal Select Degree" was deposited, in 1788, in the archives of the Grand Council of the Princes of Jerusalem, at Charleston; or yet was produced from some other source, does not appear altogether clear. There is no doubt, however, that Jacobs conferred the degree of Select Master in various parts of the country, about the year 1790. It is also a well established fact that a year or two previously, Joseph M. Meyers, Deputy Inspector for Maryland, had begun to confer, and authorise the conferring of, the Select Master's degree in connection with the Rite of Perfection. There is likewise evidence to show that Henry Williams, of Baltimore (who lived in that city as early as 1790), a prominent Craftsman, referred to in several well authenticated documents as "Grand Inspector General," and having exalted rights and powers supposed to have been derived from the Grand Lodge of Berlin and Bremen, authorised the working of the degree of Select Masons, and also the establishment of a Grand Council, representing the same, in the city of Baltimore. This was in 1792.

The degree of Royal Master was hardly known at that date, if it were in existence. It made its appearance in New York in the first decade of the present century, and not unlikely may claim that city as its birthplace. However this may be, the two degrees became closely associated, and were conferred together, under various authorisation, more or less regular, in separate Councils and in Chapters of Royal Arch Masons, from about the date of 1804-6.

Thus early in the century the Cryptic Rite had gained some sort of recognition in Baltimore, Charleston, New York city, and several other places. It was not, however, very widely known, or generally regarded as of much importance. It had but a feeble organic life, and occupied at the best only a sort of semi-detached position to the Masonic system and organization.

In 1816, Jeremy L. Cross became interested in the Cryptic Rite, receiving the degree of Select Master from Phillip P. Eckel, of Baltimore, and also (probably) a commission to confer the degree upon Royal Arch Masons wherever he might meet them. Cross soon ascertained that a "Grand Council of Select Masters," in New York city, was granting charters to subordinate bodies. He asked authority to established Councils and grant warrants, and was empowered to do this by a commission issued by Eckel and Niles in 1817. Two years later, having in the interim received the degree of Royal Master, Cross was given augmented powers; for on the 29th September 1819 acting in the name and under the authority of the "Grand Council of Royal and Select Masters," of the State of Maryland, he gave a charter, "without expence," to Providence Council of Royal and Select Masters, the first organisation of Cryptic Masons in Rhode Island.

* * * * *

Coming now, after so extended a preface, to the establishment of the Cryptic Rite in Rhode Island, I call attention to a meeting held at Masons Hall, Providence, 28th March 1818. This was a gathering of "Royal Arch Masons, who have from time to time received the degree of Royal Master." Samuel Jackson, Caleb Earle, William Wilkinson, Asa Bosworth, and other prominent brethren of that olden time, were among the earnest Cryptic Masons who took counsel together for the establishment of a new organisation. At an adjourned meeting, held 19th May 1818, it was decided that "the degree of Select Master be attached to this Council." The first gatherings only recognised "Royal Masters." The organisation was perfected, and under date of 27th September 1819, it is recorded that "Companion Jeremy L. Cross presented this Council with a Charter free of all expense." The charter begins as follows: "By the high powers in me vested by the Grand Council of Royal and Select Masters, of the city of Baltimore, in the State of Maryland, North America,"—and the document is signed by Jeremy L. Cross D.G.P.

Providence Council flourished greatly for a time and gained large additions to its membership. It suffered almost total annihilation from the Anti-Masonic storm; and for a time, while it had a name to live, delegated its powers to Providence Royal Arch Chapter, which conferred the degrees according to its convenience and the desires of Companions to receive them. In 1841, Providence Council was revived, and has maintained its existence, under conditions of increasing prosperity, until now.

In 1847, Pawtucket Council of Royal and Select Masters was organised in Pawtucket. This body received its charter from the Grand Council of Massachusetts. In 1859-60, Webb Council, of Warren, was instituted, having been granted a charter by the Grand Council of Connecticut. At a much earlier date a body of Royal and Select Masters had been organised at Newport, under a charter obtained from the Supreme Council of the Scottish Rite for the Southern Jurisdiction.

In 1860, therefore, at the time of the creation of the Grand Council governing the Cryptic Rite in Rhode Island, there were four bodies in the State, each deriving its authority from a separate source. The membership of the four Councils aggregated about two hundred and fifty. But little interest was taken in the Cryptic degrees or organisations. The experiment had been tried of giving them to the control of Royal Arch Chapters, but the experiment had not met the views of brethren who were most devoted to the Rite. At this juncture it was determined to take an advanced step, looking toward the maintenance of the degrees in a distinctive organisation, and the imparting of more interest and importance to the Rite. A Convention, called at the instance of Providence Council, met in Masons' Hall, Providence, 9th March 1860,—three Councils, viz., Providence, Pawtucket and Webb (Warren) being represented. At this meeting an invitation was sent to De Blois Council, of Newport, to participate, but the invitation was courteously declined. Several adjourned sessions of the Convention were held, and after much careful consideration, a decision was reached to form a Grand Council. Tuesday, 30th October 1860, was the date fixed upon for public recognition of the new Body and the installation of its Officers, and prominent Craftsmen from Massachusetts and Connecticut were asked to attend and conduct the services. In accordance with such arrangement, on the date named, 30th October 1860, the Grand Council of Rhode Island was instituted, Bros. E. P. Moore, Grand Master of the Grand Council of Massachusetts, and H. B. Ensign, Grand Master of the Grand Council of Connecticut, taking the leading parts in the constituting and installing ceremonies. Rev. Bro. Sydney Dean officiated as Grand Chaplain.

James Salisbury was installed as first Grand Master. This brother was, in some respects, a remarkable man. He had peculiarities of speech and action, so that he was noticeable in any gathering. He was a man of opinions; of strong prejudices; of great conservatism; but he was a true and faithful Craftsman, and especially devoted to the interests of the Cryptic Rite. He well deserved to be placed at the head of the new Grand Council, a position which he held for five years. Bro. James H. Armington, a royal soul, greatly esteemed and beloved by the Craft, was the second Grand Master. He held office for four years. The succession to the first office in the Grand Council has been as follows: Charles R. Cutler, Stillman White, Albert H. Cushman, John F. Adams, Amos A. Peavey, Edwin Baker, Rev. Wm. N. Ackley, and Osmond H. Briggs, who is now at the head of the Body. Evidently the administration of the affairs of the Cryptic Rite in Rhode Island has been in good hands during the last quarter of a century.

Woonsocket Council, of Woonsocket, was organised 8th April 1868, and received its charter the year following, taking rank as No. 4 in the jurisdiction. De Blois Council, of Newport, was admitted to fellowship, becoming allegiant to the Grand Council in 1870, and was designated as No. 5.

The several subordinate Councils have been favoured with a fair measure of prosperity since the establishment of this Grand Council; and now there are about 800 members of the Cryptic Rite in this State, more than three times the number reported in 1860.

It is no part of my present purpose to discuss the character and worth of the degrees that belong to the Cryptic system. That they inculcate valuable lessons may not be questioned, and that the truth they seek to convey is set in the form of a beautiful and attractive ceremony is generally conceded. The enthusiastic supporters of Cryptic Masonry maintain that it deserves to be regarded as the "summit and perfection of the York Rite,"—essential to the full understanding of what is represented in the degree of Master Mason and that of the Royal Arch. Whatever our differing estimate may be, I am sure we shall all agree that the Cryptic degrees have a Masonic and a moral value, and that it becomes all Royal and Select Masters to be familiar with their teachings and pronounced in their support, ever striving to maintain the Rite in a position of influence and efficiency, and to increase its ministry of practical usefulness. In this branch of Masonry, as in other departments, it depends upon the character and efforts of those included as members what the progress shall be and what the accomplishments. Brotherly love counts for as much here as elsewhere. Faith in God is as essential a feature. Fidelity to duty is as imperatively demanded, while zealous endeavour will just as surely contribute to desired success. If the next quarter of a century in the history of the Grand Council of Rhode Island is to bear a richer fruitage of honour and blessing than the epoch just ending, there must be a corresponding increase of devotion and service on the part of those identified with its interests and work.—Freemasons' Repository.

ACADEMY—74 NEWMAN STREET, OXFORD STREET, W.

BRO. JACQUES WYNMANN WILL BE HAPPY TO TAKE THE MANAGEMENT OF MASONIC BALLS. FIRST-CLASS BANDS PROVIDED.

MASONIC LIBRARIES.

THE question of accumulating relics is being earnestly considered by our brethren in the United States. We have pleasure in reproducing the following, which has recently been issued:—

Masonic Library Building, Cedar Rapids,
1st December 1885.

To the Brethren of Iowa, and Friends of the Library Enterprise:—Many of you are doubtless aware that prior to the last meeting of the Grand Lodge the Grand Secretary inaugurated, in connection with the Library Hall, an Archæological Department, which has been steadily growing by donations from month to month, till it has become one of the most interesting in connection with the Library, and to make it more worthy the Fraternity and the State, your Grand Secretary desires that the brethren will take an interest and pride in the same, and donate anything they may have to spare in the line of old diplomas, coins, medals, certificates, old rare books, pamphlets, engravings, photos, &c., anything having the mark of the Craft upon it, also Indian relics, and fine specimens of minerals or anything that may prove of interest or value to the large number of visitors that now weekly visit the Library Building.

The Library Hall is built fire-proof, and commodious enough to display all such articles as may be sent in, and it well known that many such articles are now in the hands of the brethren, where they are seldom seen and attract little or no attention, while if collected together would make a very interesting collection. Due credit will be given each donor, and their name attached to their donations.

Any one knowing of a copy of the original edition of the Mormon Bible is requested to correspond with the Grand Secretary, who also desires an autograph of Abraham Lincoln, for the autograph collection now being prepared for our Library.

Photos or drawings of buildings erected for Lodge purposes, photos of presentation jewels, as also drawings of the arrangement of Lodge, Chapter, and Commandery rooms are desired.

Notices of dedication of Masonic Halls and the like are especially requested.

In behalf of the Masons of Iowa I beg to sincerely thank the brethren who have already contributed to this department, and trust they will continue their interest in the same until the Grand Lodge of Iowa shall have such a collection that every Iowa Mason will take an interest in and feel proud of it.

Contributions can be sent direct to Masonic Library Building, Cedar Rapids.

T. S. PARVIN, Grand Secretary.

ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

WE look to the management of our Charitable Institutions very much as ordinary politicians do to the Lord Mayor's banquet for something in the shape of inspired utterances respecting the present position and the future prospects of those glorious organisations in which all Freemasons take so deep an interest; and at the opening of the year it was only natural that Bro. Terry, as the representative of that Institution whose Festival comes earliest on the rôta, should take advantage of the New Year's Entertainment to the Old People at Croydon to speak in plain and certain language how that Charity really stands. It is now well known that at the Festival to be held next month in aid of the Benevolent Institution, the Marquis of Hertford has consented to preside, and the influence of that worthy Brother may have some effect in arousing the interest of the Craft in this active Charity of our Order. But the fact stares us boldly in the face that up to the present moment there is a strange falling-off in the number of Stewards representing Lodges, both in London and the Provinces, compared with some previous years; and unless some extraordinary effort is put forth by the brethren collectively during the few weeks that have to expire between now and the date of the Festival—24th February—the usefulness of this grand Institution must be seriously curtailed. This, we venture to opine, would be a source of unmitigated grief to all who watch the beneficent work which the Charities are called upon to perform; but when, with such a gloomy prospect in view, we note also that there are no fewer than one hundred and thirty deserving applicants for the benefits of the Charity, and so few vacancies at the disposal of the executive, the case assumes a very serious aspect indeed. It would be superfluous to remind the brethren of the deep and earnest solicitude which Bro. Terry feels for the Institution with which he has been for so many years intimately associated, and which owes so much of its success and usefulness to his exertions. And at this juncture of affairs, when so much depends upon the turn that matters must take within the next few weeks, we deem the indefatigable Secretary's ideas on the subject of such vast importance as to deserve the most prominent place that we can give them in our columns. No more fitting an occasion could have been chosen by Bro. Terry for issuing what we must all regard as a Manifesto to the Craft, than at the "Old Christmas day" festivities within the walls of the Institution itself, a report of which will be found on another page. In responding to the toast of the evening, Success to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, Bro. Terry pointed out that the esteemed President of the day, Bro. C. J. Perceval—who was most sincerely congratulated upon his recovery from a serious illness—had called attention to the fact, which was patent to the reading portion of the Masonic world, that large amounts had been received during the past year on behalf of the Institutions, and once again the Benevolent Institution stood at the head of the list. That during the past 7 or 8 years had not been an unusual thing; it had only once during that period been surpassed, and that was in the year 1883, when an extraordinary effort was put forth on behalf of the Boys' Preparatory School, at Wood Green. Still they wanted money, perhaps more than either of the educational Institutions, for this simple reason—they knew at once when they took a child into either of the Schools exactly what would be the cost of maintenance of that child upon the funds; but when an annuitant was elected upon the funds of this Institution, it was impossible for the committee to say what charge they were undertaking, or what expense incurring. The annuitant might live only three months, but in some instances they had lived 30 years, enjoying those benefits and advantages; and so, with the large number of candidates coming before them, nearly 130, with a larger list to present to the committee next week than they had had for years, it was sad for them to know they had not a sufficient number of vacancies with which to cope with so large an amount of distress. And, although £21,000 might appear a great sum realised in one year by the Benevolent Institution, compared with £16,000 each for the Boys' and Girls', yet actually they were worse off during the past year, inasmuch as the increase in their subscriptions and donations was only £1 400, whilst the Girls' Institution had an increase of £1,800, and the Boys' the very large increase of £2,500 on the year. Therefore, he ventured to say, that although it did appear at the first blush that the Benevolent Institution was the most successful, yet, taking facts and figures, it was the least successful of the three. Looking forward to the Festival of 1886, he could only express a sense of deep regret that they were not more forward than they were at the present time. They had between sixty and seventy Stewards less than last year; they had a chairman without a Province at his back, whereas the Province of Gloucestershire came up last year to support the President (Bro. Sir Michael E. Hicks Beach, M.P.) bringing up £1100. So, unless their good friends were working, as he was sure they would work, more energetically if possible than others had done, the Institution would sustain a loss of some £4000 or £5000, and that with an increased list of candidates. He knew the Craft had only to be made aware of these facts, between now and next month's Festival, and there was ample time for a large acquisition to the number of Stewards and promised subscriptions on the lists of those Stewards. It was, of course, always a source of anxiety as to what the result of the Festival would turn out to be; and he looked forward with some amount of regret in anticipation that it would be nothing like the announcement made in 1885. When they came to consider what an additional source of expenditure was placed upon this list by electing 23 widows and three men, at a cost of nearly £800 a year—an amount which in the first history of this Institution was thought more than they could afford to pay—but which was now placed on the list as an extra charge per year—he was sure all the well-wishers of this Institution would use their utmost exertions to raise as large an amount as possible in the coming month. He thanked them for the honour and privilege of being present to give them these facts and figures, and he hoped that by their dissemination amongst the thinking and reading portion of the Craft, they might produce such a result as should falsify his words that night, and prove to the Committee, when they met in February, that he had been a false prophet. Still, they must look upon it as business men. Money was not so flush as it was last year; we had passed through a period of great and general depression; we had had a political election, causing money to be spent in many ways; and thus early in the year people had hardly yet time to look at their balance-sheets to see how they stood, or to calculate how much they could afford to give in charity. He hoped those who had hitherto given five guineas would give ten, and those who had given ten, twenty; so as to qualify as Vice-Presidents; and that those who had attained that position might even yet increase their assistance to the Institution. He congratulated the meeting upon their happy presence and the renewed health of their President, and hoped these gatherings would continue to be enjoyed by all of them for many years to come. It will thus be seen that the position of the Benevolent Institution is a most critical one just now, and it is to be hoped that Bro. Terry's well-directed statements may be read and duly considered throughout the length and breadth of the Fraternity. There can be no question that his apprehensions respecting the result of the approaching Festival are well grounded, judging from the present outlook; and we can only trust that the brethren will make a stupendous effort during the next few weeks to sustain the verdict which Bro. Terry has wished to be pronounced upon himself in respect of the Festival, that he has been "a false prophet." There is yet time to make up lost ground, if the various Lodges in the metropolis and throughout the Provinces will take heed of the "no uncertain sound" which hails from headquarters; and that they will do so, and enable the Institution to extend—at any rate not compel it to be limited—its sphere of beneficence, is a consummation devoutly to be wished by every man who has the true interest of the Craft at heart.. Could the brethren witness, as we did on Wednesday last, the happiness and contentment which is provided for so many of our poorer brethren and widows at the splendid establishment at East Croydon, we feel assured they would be stimulated to such exertions as would at once set the mind of Brother Terry perfectly free from anxiety; and we look hopefully to the effect which a perusal of his outspoken appeal and note of warning will produce amongst the brethren generally ere the time arrives when the amount subscribed in behalf of this magnificent charity is announced by him at the Festival which is now so close upon us.

WELL PREPARED FOR GREAT WORK.

An Extract from an oration by J. A. Kiester, Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Minnesota.

AN Order so ancient as Masonry, having the designs and purposes of Masonry, and being so universal, must necessarily be peculiar in many respects, must differ in many features from most human organisations, and such is the fact. And here I shall say nothing of the peculiar ceremonies of Masonry, its universal language, its method of teaching by symbols, hieroglyphics, allegories, traditions, and memorising which make a peculiar and indelible impression upon the mind of the initiate—a system found in perfection nowhere else—nor need I suggest that its adaptability to all classes of men is such that it possesses a charm for even the mystic, the seer, the antiquary, as well as for the man of to-day, the moralist and the philosopher, but I may refer to plainer, more evident facts.

The Institution is one of fixed principles and disciplinary character, yesterday, to-day, and for ever the same. Its great leading principles are crystallised in landmarks and ancient regulations, which no power within or without the Order can ever change. It is true a Masonic body may attempt it, but the only result is that it legislates itself out of the Order; they cease to be Masons, but Masonry remains the same. Let us realise the great importance there is in this fact of permanence. An Institution existing in every civilised land, maintaining unchangeably certain correct primary, moral, social and political principles, must in the ever-changing notions and vagaries of every age, be of inestimable value to the world.

To illustrate this tendency to change "these shifting sands of doctrine," in one respect only, but an important one, you will permit me the remark that now, after the lapse of one, two or three centuries, nay, within fifty years, some of the religious denominations have added many new dogmas to the faith they once held, while some have lost sight of the distinctive principles, or peculiar doctrines, on which they were originally founded, and some have gone so far as not only to keep in silence and subordination, but to contradict those very original doctrines.

Our political, educational and social systems, too, are filled with new theories and radical changes, some of which are doubtless valuable and so far so good; but in all this we see, without any disposition to find fault or criticise, illustrated, this disposition to change, to drift away from former moorings; yet essential truth, right, justice, are unchangeable, and such are the principles of Masonry! Do we not want, in all this drifting and uncertainty, something permanent? Is it too much to say that in this Institution we find it?

And in this peculiar age of individualism, irreverence, independentism, self-will, disregard of old, fundamental truth, religious dissensions and infidelity, in this age of nervous excitement, intense activities, waste of forces, and the headlong scramble for wealth, this old Order, which teaches, has always taught, always will teach the existence of God, the immortality of the soul, the obligations of the moral law, respect for and obedience to lawful authority, and plain and honest dealing between man and man, and prudence and moderation in all things; this Order, I say, with such teachings and with its disciplinary influences upon the life and heart, of such age and dignity, existing in all lands, of such vast membership, embracing such wealth and intelligence, is necessarily of great value to society, to the state, and of great power in the moral world, and must in the very nature of things have done, though silently indeed, a great work for good, and has yet a great work to do, in the affairs and destinies of our race.

But we may take a step still higher and declare that from the unchangeable character of our Order, Masonry is not only the steady teacher of its principles, but the preserver, the conservator, through all the chances and changes of time, of those very principles! Where will you find a higher office or more important trust than this?

And I must suggest that while Masonry encourages its members in the study of the sciences and in the acquisition of all useful knowledge, and has to-day among its membership many of the most distinguished men of science, it has no sympathy with that sceptical philosophy which, under the pretence of believing nothing or knowing nothing, obliterates the Deity from the universe, substituting for a living, ever present God and His creative power, unexplainable names and terms, dethroning intelligence in the creation, government and final disposition of all things.

And now I may ask, is there not great excuse for the existence of this Order in this day and age, is there not need for its continuance? Do not good government, public order, aye, the old truth faith of mankind, demand its assistance? Let the man of observation, research and intelligence, answer these questions. Allow me now to allude briefly to certain other peculiar features of this Order, some of which in a great measure make Freemasonry the institution it is,—different from all others, sui generis indeed,—peculiarities in which lies the secret of much of its power and endurance, and I confess I enumerate them with great pride. This society, though of great age and of wide extent, has never given aid to despotism in any of its forms, in church or state. It has never waged the wars of intolerance, in any age or country, nor has it ever waged war for any purpose; it is eminently the society of peace. It has never built the fires of religious or political persecution. And in language which I have elsewhere used, I add; "It has never enslaved or degraded the poor or helpless, nor has it ever dishonoured itself in the face of the rich or great for their favour. It has never followed any fanatical ideas, whims or theories. It never dictates to any one, raises no disputes and argues no questions, and lives in quietness and peace with all men; and with all this, and unlike most other institutions, it asks no favours or special privileges of church or state. It never proselytes, it sends out no missionaries, has no propagandists, and pays nothing for recruits," and while the worthy who knock at its door are seldom denied, none are ever urged to seek admission.

And we now may add largely to all this when we assert, as we truthfully can, that while many great evils overshadow the world, one of the greatest, the saddest, the most confounding, perpetually weakening and distracting the best effort, is the antagonisms created by ignorance, bigotry, envy or jealousy, among the institutions really working to the same great end—the subduing of these evils—that Masonry, standing almost alone in the world, has no share in such jealousies, never creates or permits contentions with other societies, nor interference with their labours. It never anathematises other societies nor excom-municates individuals. And all this summary of peculiar features I have named, not because they are new or novel here, but as tending to show the distinctive character of our Order, and how eminently worthy it is of our high esteem and the respect of the world.

But I call attention to still higher features of our Order. Let the man who would view this old Institution in its grandest character, and see the practical application of its principles, visits the schools, colleges, the widows' and orphans' homes and hospitals, erected and maintained by it in Europe and America! Let him estimate the vast sums contributed voluntarily, by Masons as such, to sufferers by fire and flood and pestilence, from year to year, given gladly and with unstinted hand! Let him sum up the aggregate value of the relief and charity funds held for disbursement by the Order, amounting in this country alone to hundreds of thousands of dollars, and, what is still better, let him go to the homes of want, of sickness and suffering, over the land, and behold the quiet unquestioning work of relief and attention ever going on, and of which the world knows nothing, because done on that Christian and Masonic principle, "Let not the left hand know what the right hand doeth, that thine alms may be in secret." Here, again, we call the philanthropist to answer the question, Is not this worthly labour? And here the world may learn, if not elsewhere, one of the secrets of why Masonry has lived so long, why it should continue to live, and why it is not only worthy of the respect of the world, but also why it receives the attention and labours of hundreds of thousands of the wisest, most enlightened and most noble men of our race.

Let us now turn to another view of our subject and see what sanction or approval all this may have received.

It is indeed no idle boast, no empty delusion, that this grand old Order has numbered among its members many of the most illustrious men of every age and land, scientists, poets, educators, scholars, heroes and statesmen, the friends of humanity, the workers for man's progress and happiness.

In our own country what a splendid galaxy of illustrious names may we point to, among whom are Washington, Benjamin Franklin and many other signers of the Declaration, Warren and Putnam, and other Generals of the Revolution, Chief Justice John Marshall, De Witt Clinton, Jackson, Clay and Garfield, besides hosts of others in all the walks of science, literature, and human enterprise, and many thousands of the Christian ministry of almost all the denominations, and we may feel proud that we are united by the mystic tie with such men, and co-workers with them.

And I cannot help remarking here how hideously imbecile is the charge in the face of these great facts, that Masonry is anti-republican, that it is anti-Christian. And now, may the question be timely, Is there not much in all this of special honour and distinction to every Mason? May not every Mason be justly proud that he is a Mason, and love and honour his Order? And every true Mason, whatever his station may be, does honour and love it. He reveres it because of its venerable character, its dignity and stability. He loves it because of the lessons of Brotherly Love and toleration and Charity which it teaches. He honours it because of the great truths which it has preserved through centuries, and inculcates to-day. He respects it because of its lessons of peace and support of order and good government. He respects it because of the illustrious men in every age and country whose names are associated with it. He loves it because of the strong bonds of unity, sympathy and mutual interest it establishes among men. He loves it because of its grand, systematic and ever-increasing work in the relief of human suffering. He loves it because, to-day, as always in the past, it is in full sympathy with the labours and best aspirations of men in everything that relates to the progress, improvement and elevation of our race.

But, brethren, I must detain you a few minutes longer. This Institution of ours, as you all know, notwithstanding its correct principles and laudable purposes, its unobtrusive and peaceful character, its far-reaching and harmonising influences, has always, at least since the days of Samuel Pritchard, more than one hundred and fifty years ago, had its opponents; and I am sorry to say, that as a rule its opponents have not been fair or candid, and their statements of the character and purposes of the society have often been exceedingly false and mendacious.

I may say that besides a number of candid and sincere persons who hold unfavourable opinions of our Order there are two extremes, representing wholly different and antagonistic ideas and purposes and methods which hate Freemasonry. The one is found in those high, powerful and closely organised systems of despotism, the real spirit and purpose of which would, under various pretences, divest man of his right to speak, think and act, except in certain pre-arranged channels, and make him a slave, submissive in body and soul, in life and labour, to a ruling few, in no way his superiors in natural right, intelligence or virtue, and which is for ever promulgating principles, which grew as fungi, in the mental gloom of the world's night—the dark ages. And the opposition and unjust denunciation from this source arises from the fact, partially, that Masonry teaches equality, toleration, fraternity, but more particularly because Masonry as an Institution is to-day one of the strongest bulwarks against despotism in any and every form, and an Institution which no despotism, in either Church or State, can control or use for its purposes. And the world, though it may not always have known it, has always had great need for just such an Institution.

The other extreme which hates Masonry is represented mainly by certain sporadic and ephemeral associations over the land, based on some one-idea principle, narrow-minded, and pursuing their hobbies with rancour, always fanatical, always vociferous, for ever crying, "Lord! Lord!" and under the livery of an assumed sanctity presuming to judge the world and all that therein is, from the elevation of an ant-hill. Both these extremes, with startling travesties of the truth, and with arguments which in the light of facts apparent to all the world are a shame to the human understanding, belabour Masonry right and left. And, strange as it may seem, these extremes hate each other as they hate Masonry, and more strangely still, Masonry takes no note of and cares nothing about either of them.

But, brethren, should we not after all be thankful for the remorseless criticism, the unmerciful opposition to which the Order has been subjected? It is a well known fact that where the meetings of the opponents of Masonry have been held to denounce or expose the Order, as they claim, there the number of applicants for admission to the Order has generally increased; and so patent is this fact, and so often observed, that we can truly say our enemies do indeed "build better than they know," or intend. But this is the least benefit we receive from this opposition. We are taught thereby to observe more closely the teachings of our Order, that we become not obnoxious to these objections; over and above all, this opposition but serves to lay bare and expose to the world the grand, the everlasting foundations on which Freemasonry rests.

And now may I not say that the thought of our responsibility under God to our Order and to humanity, and the great trust in our keeping is one of the greatest we can entertain, if we but fully realise its import. We must know that our individual being is bound up with each other by the most sacred ties, and to the world around us, in the force of example and the influences we exercise. And so far as we are true to our Order and its high purposes, "we are warranted in looking upon ourselves as co-labourers, though humble, indeed, with the Supreme Architect, the builder of all worlds."

And I apprehend that Freemasonry, in all its branches, has an immeasurably larger work to do in the future than it has had in the past, and there never was an era in its history when it was so well prepared for a great work. I am no alarmist, nor would I proclaim danger when none is nigh, yet there are many sober, thoughtful men, men who closely observe the signs of the times, as well as certain sensationalists, who hold that it is very probable, at least, that a great crisis of some kind in human affairs is not distant. What may be the character or proportions of such impending crisis we are not told with much definiteness, but we may conjecture what may, perhaps, be one of its features. We know from some very late developments, that despotisms of all kinds are growing uneasy, because they cannot live in the light, the progress and the national liberty of this nineteenth century. And these powers of intolerance, self-aggrandisement and arbitrary rule are preparing, it is thought, for some final conflict to retrieve the lost ground, or for the supremacy of the world. In such a crisis where would the members of this grand old Order be found, with their labours, influences and sympathies? Might not the world then learn at least one

INSTALLATION MEETINGS, &c.

ST. JOHN LODGE, No. 70.

THE installation meeting of this, the oldest Lodge in South Devon, was held on Monday, the 4th inst., at the Huyshe Temple, Plymouth, when, in consequence of the death of Bro. F. P. Holmes P.M. P.P.G. Supt. of Works, the brethren appeared in Masonic mourning. There was a goodly muster of the brethren, under the presidency of the retiring Worshipful Master, Bro. T. King, and after the ordinary routine business, Bro. G. Sucoombe was regularly installed into the chair, the ceremony being carried out in most efficient manner by Bros. J. Gover P.P.G.D.C., R. Pengelly P.P.G.A.D.C., J. Moysey P.G.D., L. D. Westcott P.P.G.S. Wks. and J. Griffin P.G.J.D. Having been saluted with the usual honours, the newly-installed Worshipful Master invested his Officers, as follow:—Bros. T. King I.P.M., W. F. Westcott S.W., W. T. Hooking J.W., L. D. Westcott Treasurer, J. B. Gover Secretary, W. King S.D., F. Wreford J.D., W. H. D. Colling D.C., J. Hicks A.D.C., J. Newman Organist, J. H. Evans I.G., J. Goad and E. Radden Stewards, and W. H. Phillips Tyler. Bro. L. D. Wescott was elected representative of the Lodge at the Committee of Petitions, Bro. F. W. Westcott the Charity Steward, and Bros. J. B. Gover, L. D. Westcott, R. Pengelly, E. A. Lean, and the Worshipful Master, the representatives of the Lodge on the Committee of Associated Lodges. A Past Master's jewel was voted to be presented to the retiring Worshipful Master Brother T. King. At the close of the Lodge the brethren and their Visitors dined together at the Temple, when a most enjoyable evening was spent. Amongst the Visitors present were Bros. E. Tout and W. Odam P.M's 70, G. Roseveare 974 P.P.G.S. of Works, G. R. Barrett 1255 P.P.G.D, W. L. Lavers I.P.M., W. H. Crimp W.M. 1255, Rev. T. W. Lemon 189 P.P.G. Chaplain, R. Pike 230, T. Goodall 1550 P.P.G.O., J. R. Lord 1247 P.P.G.S.B., A. J. Rider W.M. 1247, J. H. Blackell 1099, E. Pillar W.M. and J. Gifford I.P.M. 105, J. Gidley 2025, W. H. Hunt 1205, and many others.

OLD CONCORD LODGE, No. 172.

THE installation meeting of this Lodge was held on Tuesday, at Freemasons' Hall, Lincolns Inn Fields, under the presidency of Bro. Henry R. Cope W.M., who was supported by Bros. John Stedman S.W., John Whaley J.W., John Hancock Treasurer, Geo. King Secretary, Thomas Whaley S.D., G. F. Davis J.D., G. Evans I.G., Carl T. Fleck D.C., and the following Past Masters: W. O. Beazley, G. M. Gurton, W. H. Harris, R. D. Hilton, A. J. Dottridge, H. L. Dixon, Geo. Hockley. In due course Bro. John Stedman was installed as Worshipful Master, and he invested the following as the Officers for the year:—J. Whaley S.W., T. Whaley J.W., J. Hancock Treasurer, King P.M. Secretary, Davis S.D., G. Evans J.D., C. T. Fleck I.G., J. A. Armour D.C., Marriott Organist, C. Couchman Tyler. After the closing of the Lodge the brethren and visitors adjourned to the Holborn Restaurant for banquet, which was served under the personal direction of Brother Hamp, in the admirable manner customary at this establishment. Among the visitors were Brothers Edwin M. Lott Grand Organist, W. M. L. Seaman 193, Alfred Harvey 1963, Edwin Bryant (Alexandra Palace Lodge), Joseph Storey P.M. 1107 P.P.G.S. of W. Kent, W. Cambden 228, H. A. Sawyer 1612, J. T. Pilditch P.M. and T. 1257, E. Floyd 902, F. Isant 27, A. T. Randall 20, E. G. Coleman S.D. 11, W. J. Mason 1328, M. Mildred W.M. 2024, J. Stephens W.M. 1425, C. W. Hunt P.M. 1425, C. H. Searle 1298, W. T. P. Montgomery S.W. 1475, W. W. Lee 1897, G. Adams, T. Whaley 55, A. J. Probyn P.M. 11, W. Radcliffe P.M. 211, H. Hambling 2030, J. Packer 73, John Brown W.M. 975, John Parker 217, J. J. Woolley W.M. 15, P. Skar S.D. 1891, J. Hampton 145, E. Brooks 766, J. W. Ray S.D. 1624, J. Garner P.M. 975, W. J. Collens P.M. 766, W. J. Edwards 916, J. Parkes 217, T. P. Collings P.M. 22, F. Binckes P.M. P.G. Steward, J. Donaldson Treasurer 1963, T. Bowley 1963, C. Jones 1420, W. Angus 619, G. Howard 72, J. S. Thompson 1326, J. F. J. Sykes 180, &c. At the conclusion of the banquet, Bro. Stedman W.M. gave the usual toasts. The Queen having been honoured, the health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales was submitted. They were all deeply indebted to the Grand Master of England, both for his services to the Craft, and for the good he did in the country generally. Speaking of the Earl of Carnarvon, the Pro Grand Master, Bro. Stedman said the work done by his Lordship in the Craft was well known; both this and his general work was much appreciated. He felt that so long as such a Mason as the Earl of Carnarvon filled the office, the toast of the Pro Grand Master would be sure of a hearty welcome. The toast of the Deputy Grand Master, and the other Grand Officers, Present and Past, followed. The Grand Officers of England were men who had done well and had earned the places they occupied in the Craft. They had the pleasure that evening of numbering among their visitors a distinguished Grand Officer in the person of Bro. Dr. Lott Grand Organist. He was a fair example of the Grand Officers who had worked their way up, and who had been rewarded for their merit. His talent, as a musician, had won for him the post of Grand Organist. Bro. Lott, in acknowledging the toast, assured the brethren nothing gave the Grand Officers greater pleasure than to be present at Lodges, and to have the opportunity of acknowledging the kind sentiments which were universally expressed in them towards the Officers of Grand Lodge. Bro. Cope, the I.P.M., proposed the health of the Worshipful Master. One of the greatest pleasures he could have enjoyed that day was to instal so worthy a representative of the Old Concord Lodge as they had in Bro. Stedman. He hoped he would have a successful year of office, and that he would follow in the footsteps of those who had preceded him, and who had secured for the Lodge its present high position. Bro. Stedman tendered his sincere thanks for the toast. He was extremely grateful for the high office conferred on him that day. He felt very great pride in occupying the chair of the Lodge in which he had been initiated. Having attained to the high honour, he assured the brethren all his endeavours would be thrown into the work of securing the happiness of the members and the prosperity of the Lodge. He trusted that when he came to leave the chair he should have done sufficient to merit the approval of all the brethren. The next toast was that of the I.P.M., Bro. Cope. Brother Stedman was sure the health of the ruler of the Lodge for the past year would be drunk in an enthusiastic manner. A better Master it would not be possible to find than Brother Cope had proved himself in the Old Concord Lodge. During his occupancy of the chair he had maintained the reputation of the Lodge, and had looked after the comforts of the brethren as well as any Mason could have done. Brother Stedman had much pleasure in presenting to his predecessor the Past Master's jewel of the Lodge, and in doing so assured Brother Cope it was presented with the heartiest good wishes of the members. Brother Cope tendered his thanks. He was very much obliged to the brethren for the kind present they had made him that evening, and hoped that he might be spared for many years to wear it in their midst. The Past Masters of the Lodge were next toasted, and this having been replied to, the W.M. proposed the Charities. The members of the Old Concord Lodge were very glad to see among them so warm an advocate for the Charities as Bro. Binckes, who would, he was sure, do his best to enlist the support of those present on behalf of the Institutions; not that much persuasion was needed to ensure support from the Old Concord. Brother Fleck would represent the Lodge at the next Festival of the Boys' School, and the members had that evening appointed another brother as Steward for the Girls' School. Bro. Binckes replied. With a Worshipful Master with such a soul for music as the present Master of the Old Concord, he had hardly dared to hope that time would be found for the proposition of the toast of the Masonic Institutions. Its proposition had shown him that the traditions of the Old Concord Lodge in this respect would not suffer while the Lodge was under the guidance of its present Master. The spirit which had secured for the Lodge the reputation it had gained in the past was still fresh, and he doubted not would manifest itself in the future as strongly as it had in the past. Bro. Binckes referred to the very large total which had been contributed by the Masons of England towards the support of the Benevolent Institutions of the Craft during the past year, upwards of £54,000, and that, be it understood, during a year which had not been one of prosperity. This magnificent result must be taken as a proof that the hearts of Masons beat true to that Charity which bound all members of the Order together. There were some who considered too much time was taken in making appeals on behalf of the Institutions. He considered it would be a bad time for Freemasonry when there should be no mention of the dark side of the Order—that side which, although it always had a silver lining, brought them face to face with their responsibilities as Freemasons. Bro. Binckes hoped that the members of the Lodge would rally to the support of their Steward, Bro. Fleck, and that his list at the next Festival might be such as the Lodge would be proud of. It was hard to say which of the three Institutions was the most deserving, but he felt that if they took the son of a Mason—the one who should be the man of the future—they were acting wisely. On him would depend the support of many of the other sex in the future, either as sister, wife or daughter, while on the boys of to-day would depend the future of the Institutions themselves. He believed the three Institutions occupied a common platform, and that in such a Lodge as the Old Concord neither of them would ever lack support or sympathy. In conclusion, he would urge on all present never to forget those who needed their sympathy, and who, from their peculiar position, could not plead for themselves. The W.M. then proposed the toast of the visitors, of whom he was pleased to see no less than fifty present. He coupled with the toast the name of Bro. Whaley, the father of the Constitutional Lodge, No. 55, but more intimately associated with the Old Concord Lodge as the father of its two Wardens, congratulating him on being present on such an interesting occasion, as the meeting of that day must have been to him when he witnessed two of his sons promoted to the highest offices in the Lodge below that of Master. The name of Bro. Collings P.M. 22 was also associated with the toast. Bro. Whaley replied, asking the brethren to accept the warmest thanks of the Visitors for the grand entertainment provided for their enjoyment. As the W.M. had told them, he happened to be the father of the Constitutional Lodge, which numbered about 130 members. As the father of such a Lodge he had naturally had some experience of Masonic meetings. At the installation it was usual to expect a little treat, but that night they had had a great one. There were special circumstances which enhanced his pleasure. It so happened that two of his sons had been promoted to high office in this Lodge that night. He knew they had the interests of Freemasonry at heart, and also the interests of their fellow creatures. They had not only followed in his footsteps, but had advanced far beyond what he had achieved, for while during the many years he had been associated with the Constitutional Lodge he had never taken office, they had risen high in their Lodge, and no doubt would eventually rise to the chair. Bro. Collings having replied, the toast of Treasurer and Secretary was given. These two brethren having replied, the Officers were toasted, and the proceedings were brought to a conclusion in the usual way. Bro. Stedman's reputation as a musician was sufficient to induce us to expect a musical treat, but he had provided a programme which exceeded even the most sanguine expectations. His efforts were deservedly appreciated, while the solos and choruses of his "Choir Boys" brought forth the heartiest applause. Miss Effie Clements, Miss Bertha Colnaghi, and Miss Alice Davies were good in the parts they essayed, and they were well supported by Bro. Franklin Clive and Mr. Sam Wright; indeed, we may say that the music of the evening was the best we have listened to at a Masonic meeting.

LODGE OF JOPPA, No. 188.

THERE was an extraordinarily large gathering of the members of this old, and especially of late, increasingly vigorous Lodge, at Freemasons' Tavern, on Monday evening, to witness the installation of Bro. J. W. Dewsnap as Worshipful Master, in succession to Bro. A. J. Martin. During the latter's term of office the Lodge enjoyed, as was frequently expressed at the banquet, "a glorious year;" its financial position was materially improved, and placed on a much sounder basis than had been experienced in many preceding years; and in all respects the condition and prospects of the Lodge were subjects of genuine and unanimous congratulation. A satisfied spirit, engendered by these considerations, pervaded the proceedings throughout, and thus the réunion was characterised by unusual and refreshing éclat. This is a matter for sincere congratulation to the members of the Joppa Lodge, which is one of the oldest and most reputed in the metropolis, and the senior of the five so-called Jewish Lodges in London. Soon after four o'clock the retiring Worshipful Master assumed the chair, and was supported by Bros. J. W. Dewsnap S.W. and W.M. elect, L. Wall J.W.; P.M.'s L. Alexander, A. G. Dodson D.C., L. M. Myers, M. Spiegel, H. Hymans, and O. Roberts, J. S. Lyon P.M. Treasurer, Lewis Lazarus P.M. Secretary, G. M. Lion S.D., Isaac Botibol J.D., L. Davis I.G., M. Lenzberg and M. Hart Stewards, P. E. Van Noorden Organist, R. W. Goddard P.M. Tyler; Bros. G. Van Volen, A. Jonas, W. Thomas, G. Harrison, H. Saqui, E. J. Coombe, L. France, J. Wynman, L. Kool, A. Botibol, S. Botibol, S. J. Roco, M. Lack, M. Frank, P. Isaacs, F. Isaacson, Isaac Israel, J. Abraham, J. Myers, G. Haines, W. J. Gardner, W. Murley, A. Wagstaff, H. Davis, F. Greenwall, J. Davis, and many others. Amongst the Visitors were Bros. S. M. Lazarus P.P.G.W. Wilts, B. Lyons P.M. 1227, O. S. Jacobs P.M. 1327, H. Massey P.M. 619, J. Phillips P.M. 188, W. Valentine W.M. 1017, S. Pardoe W.M. 1587, H. W. Casperd W.M. 1668, E. H. Norden W.M. 205, A. Elverton 1155, O. Sohnieder 151, F. Eastwood 1237, A. Benabo 212, W. Joel Peace and Harmony, P. Moore 1917, J. Butterworth 1608, M. Ivey 1101, G. Taff 917, J. Davis 1604, A. P. Levy 212, B. Loebe 185, D. S. Woolf 72, J. Seigenberg, and H. W. Myers 1017, &c. Lodge having been opened in due form, and the usual preliminaries observed, the ballot was opened for Mr. Henry Lazarus, who had been proposed by his father, the worthy P.M. and Secretary of the Lodge, and seconded by Brother M. Lenzberg: for Mr. Michael Siegenberg, proposed by Bro. M. Lenzberg, seconded by Bro. A. Botibol; and for Mr. Barnett Isaacs Barnato, whose sponsors were Bros. L. Myers P.M. and Isaac Myers. In each case the voting was unanimous, and by permission of the Worshipful Master, on account of Mr. Lazarus jun. being one of the candidates, the ceremony of initiation was performed by the Secretary of the Lodge, whose working was much admired. The Worshipful Master then resumed the chair, and the Lodge having been advanced to the second degree, Bro. Saqui was passed, this ceremony being also carried out in a manner which fully sustained the prestige won by Bro. Martin throughout his tenure of office. The report of the Audit Committee, and that of the Joppa Benevolent Fund, both of which showed that the Lodge and its accessories were in a healthy financial position, were received and adopted. Bro. Dewsnap was then presented for the benefit of installation, and having assented to the usual interrogatories accepting the responsibilities of office, a Board of Installed Masters was constituted, and Bro. Dewsnap was regularly installed into the chair of K.S. On the re-admission of the brethren, the newly-installed Worshipful Master was proclaimed and saluted with the customary honours, after which he proceeded to invest his Officers for the year, as follow:—Bros. A. J. Martin I.P.M., L. Wall S.W., G. Lyon J.W., S. Roco Chaplain, J. S. Lyon P.M. Treas., Lewis Lazarus P.M. Secretary, Isaac Botibol S.D., W. Gardner J.D., M. Lenzberg I.G., A. G. Dodson P.M. D. of C., M. Hart Assist D. of C., H. Von Stavern and E. Coombe Stewards, and R. W. Goddard P.M. Tyler. The ancient charges were delivered impressively by Bro. Martin I.P.M., who acquitted himself in masterly manner throughout the whole ceremony of installing his successor. Some routine business having been transacted, Lodge was closed amidst hearty good wishes, and the brethren and visitors adjourned to the banqueting-hall, where an excellent repast was provided by Messrs. Spiers and Pond. The Queen and the Craft, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales Most Worshipful Grand Master, the Pro G.M. the Earl of Carnarvon, the Deputy G.M. the Earl of Lathom, and the rest of the Grand Officers having been honoured, Bro. Martin I.P.M. rose and said the brethren would be perfectly well aware why he was entrusted with the gavel. That was an instrument which he had relinquished that evening with regret, inasmuch as during the time he held it he had experienced much satisfaction whilst presiding over the deliberations of the Lodge. Nevertheless, it was very pleasant for him to resume it temporarily whilst he proposed the health of their highly esteemed friend the Worshipful Master. Of course, that night it would be superfluous to speak of Bro. Dewsnap's excellent qualities as a working W.M.; of that they would be able to judge at the next meeting of the Lodge. It was only necessary now to know and to acknowledge that he was their Worshipful Master, and sincerely to wish him a happy and successful year of office. The toast was received with a hearty fire, and Bro. Dewsnap, W.M., in responding, offered the brethren his sincere thanks for the kindly manner in which it had been received. He must say it was a source of great gratification to find himself occupying the chair. It was just ten years since he took his third degree in this Lodge, and they would readily sympathise with him when he said he felt deeply sensible of their kindness in permitting him to fill the chair of his mother Lodge. He trusted that during his year of office he should have the assistance of the Past Masters, and the co-operation of the brethren generally, in carrying out his arduous duties. He hoped they would go through the coming year as comfortably as the last had been, for it was an exceedingly satisfactory year, under the presidency of his Immediate Past Master. The Lodge had witnessed its vicissitudes, but now it seemed on the high road to prosperity. He hoped the brethren would bring forward their friends whom they wished to become members of the Lodge, so that they might have a successful year. He subsequently proposed the Initiates, which toast he said was an important one in every Lodge. To-night they had three highly creditable brethren initiated, one of whom was the son of their esteemed Secretary, who would, he was sure, become a worthy member of the Joppa Lodge, as well as a worthy son. From the intelligence the other two brethren had displayed during their initiation, he felt convinced they would also become worthy members amongst them. Of course without initiates no Lodge could be successful, therefore he again asked the brethren to bring forward their friends, and let them be a good and strong Lodge. The toast, having been received with acclamation, Bro. H. Lazarus assured the brethren it had afforded him very great pleasure to have gone through the ceremony of initiation, and he felt very proud to be amongst this noble gathering. It had long been his ambition to become a Mason, having heard the Institution spoken so highly of amongst his numerous friends. He should endeavour to emulate the example of his worthy father, of whom he was very proud, and hoped he should have the pleasure of being amongst them for many years to come. He should try and follow in the footsteps of his father, and to make himself worthy of the cordial reception they had extended to him that evening. Bro. M. Seigenberg also sincerely thanked the brethren for the manner in which they had received the toast. Though it had been his ambition for many years to become a Mason, he never knew its grandeur until he came amongst them. He should ever keep the obligation he had taken, and considered the man who failed to do so was not worthy of living amongst them. Bro. B. J. Barnato could hardly express what he felt on this occasion. Even had he been prepared to make a speech the solemnity of the ceremony he had witnessed had so taken him by surprise that he should be scarcely equal to it. He thanked them for their confidence in making him a member of this ancient and honourable institution, his initiation into which he should remember as long as he lived. The W.M. then said he had a toast to propose which he was sure would meet with a hearty reception at their hands,—the Joppa Benevolent Fund. That was a fund they had amongst themselves, but members of the Joppa Lodge subscribed to it, and they did not accept even visitors' subscriptions. This fund was for themselves, and he prayed God none of their lots would be to need it; but when a brother fell in distress of any kind, he could come before the Benevolent Fund and obtain relief. One of the beauties of this Fund was, that even their next door neighbour did not know of its existence. If any one fell into arrears he might come to this Fund and explain his circumstances and get relief, and even those who subscribed to it did not know. That was genuine benevolence and relief. Bro. Alexander P.M., who was called upon, as a vice-president of the Fund, to reply, said he felt a great amount of pleasure in being with them to-night, this being the first time, with perhaps one or two exceptions, his health had permitted him to join in the assemblies of the Lodge. There might be some amongst them who were not aware of the vast amount of good that had been done through this Benevolent Fund, but if there was anything more pleasing than another he had to communicate it was that in reality they had increased this Fund, which they had not done for many years previously. It was about £16 more than it was last year. Fortunately they had had only one applicant. He had no need to tell them that the vice-president and committee were very careful as to the manner in which they dispensed the money; at the same time they were generous in their doles when circumstances warranted. Whilst they observed both these particulars, he was sure the brethren felt confidence in those who were the managers and custodians of the Fund. He then congratulated the Lodge upon the acquisition of so many new members, some of whom he did not know, after so long an absence, and hoped the Fund might prove a source of increased benefit and usefulness. Bro. L. Lazarus P.M., as Secretary of the Fund, had pleasure in announcing that two of the initiates, Bros. H. Lazarus and M. Seigenberg, had each contributed a guinea to the Fund, and the third, Bro. B. L. Barnato, had made himself a vice-president by subscribing five guineas. The total amount collected that evening was £28 5s 6d, a result which was hailed with loud applause. The W.M., in proposing the health of the Immediate Past Master, showed that Bro. Martin had had a most glorious year. He ascended the throne with éclat, and had gone out of office with the same. Besides the work he had done in the Lodge during his year, he had installed him (the speaker) and was thus deserving of a special toast. Bro. Martin, at the commencement of his year, told them what he wanted,—their hearty co-operation, and they had accorded it to him. He now left the Lodge in a more prosperous position than when he was elected as its president; better than it had been for many years. They had now a balance of about £40 in hand, and while he praised their I.P.M. for that, they must not let it rest there; he hoped by this time next year they would have a surplus of at least £50. Bro. Martin was a good man and Mason, and he was sure the toast of his health would be heartily received. It was the custom of this Lodge to reward the outgoing Master with a small memento of his year, and he had great pleasure in placing upon Bro. Martin's breast a jewel, second to none that had been presented to any P.M. of this Lodge. He trusted it would remind their I.P.M. of his very successful year of office. He had also the pleasure of presenting him, on behalf of the Officers and brethren of the Lodge, with a P.M.'s collar, which though somewhat an innovation, it was an honour which Bro. Martin richly merited. Bro. Martin I.P.M. in returning thanks for the gifts, said he looked upon them with peculiar pleasure, for they assured him that had he not won their confidence, and performed his part to their satisfaction, he should not have been rewarded in the manner in which they had thought fit to reward him that evening. It was said "the labourer is worthy of his hire," and they knew that in ancient times a labourer thought himself well paid at the rate of a penny per day. He should have thought himself well repaid if they had given him an ordinary jewel of five guineas, voted by the Lodge for that object. Many of the members were not aware it was the custom of the Lodge to give anything at all; but if a man was worthy, a jewel was sometimes given to him. By their gifts to-night he felt he had not only won their confidence, but they had ratified that confidence by presenting him with such an honour as that which he now wore upon his breast. At the outset of his career he asked the brethren to pay attention to him while he was in the chair, not to respect him as a humble individual, but because he was the representative of the Lodge. He could safely say that during the whole of his year of office order and decorum had prevailed in the Lodge. Many critical visitors had come amongst them, who said how much the Lodge of Joppa had improved in its manners; and he thought they might take credit that they were now the patterns of excellence. Might they always continue to be so. He concluded by thanking them for their kindness in presenting him with a P.M.'s collar. That had only been done two or three times in the Lodge, and he felt as proud of that as he did of the jewel. Having thanked his late Officers for their co-operation as "junior partners," he said he did not believe in talkativeness, but in acts; and he did not think it was merely lip service when they so kindly received the toast of his health. The Worshipful Master next gave the Past Masters, the toast being responded to by Bros. Alexander, Hymans, Spiegel, and Myers, the latter of whom said the P.M.'s were always ready to give whatever assistance was required by the Lodge. He did not think they could have chosen a better man for W.M. than Bro. Dewsnap, for in him they had one who would work well. He had known him for a considerable time, and had seen his working in Arch Masonry, and he was sure he would do credit to his Lodge. He hoped the brethren would all assist their W.M. to the utmost of their power, and make the Lodge this year better if possible than it had ever been before. The health of the Visitors having been well received, Bro. Valentine, W.M. of the Montefiore Lodge, said although his name had been coupled with the toast, it was not due in any measure to merit on his part, but to the fact of his representing one of the five Lodges which were understood as Jewish. He thought the fact of the names of these Lodges being at all times coupled at the installation banquets of the Joppa Lodge with the toast of the Visitors was an additional proof, if indeed any was needed, of that strong Masonic unity and friendship which subsisted amongst them. And in returning thanks for the toast this evening he did so not merely on behalf of himself and the other W.M.'s present, but also on behalf of the Montefiore Lodge, over which he had the honour of presiding. That Lodge had a stronger tie than the others, because he could not overlook the fact that the Joppa Lodge was the mother of the Montefiore. Their first members were of this Lodge; indeed, their first secretary, who was also secretary of this Lodge, their late Bro. Albert, was its first Master, and if any incentive were wanted to his Lodge to continue in the right path, they had it before them in the way in which the Joppa Lodge continued to maintain its prestige in the Craft. If the Montefiore had done so, it only reflected credit upon the Lodge from whence it sprang. Bro. Norden, W.M. of the Israel Lodge, said this was the first time he had had the honour of visiting the Joppa Lodge, and from the hospitable manner in which the Visitors had been received that evening he hoped it might not be the last. He was very pleased to hear such good working in the Lodge, especially from Bro. Past Master Martin, and the able manner in which he discharged his duties as Installing Master. If they had such good working brethren in the Lodge as he was, they would not suffer from want of proper instruction. Bro. Caspord, W.M. of the Sampson Lodge, also suitably replied, as also did Bro. Phillipps, late P.M. of the Joppa. The health of the Treasurer and Secretary followed, and was responded to by Bros. Lyon and Lazarus; the Officers of the Lodge also severally acknowledged the compliment paid to them, and the list was feelingly closed by the Tyler. During the evening a choice selection of vocal and instrumental music was given, under the direction of Bro. P. E. Van Noorden, who was assisted by Miss Maude Viccars, Madame Florence Winn, M. H. Imano, Miss Maude Isaacson, and Bro. Frank Isaacson; Mr. Walter Van Noorden acting as accompanyist. The most exquisite morceaux of the evening was a duet for violin (Miss Maude Isaacson) and piano (Mr. Frank Isaacson), — Osborne, and De Beriot's "William Tell," which was played in masterly style, and elicited a rapturous encore. Miss Isaacson has a pure and delicate touch, simply marvellous in a young player of only fifteen years of age, and such was the effect of her manipulation that the audience cheered her vociferously, and for an encore she played, with equal sweetness, "Home, sweet Home;" Madame Winn also came in for hearty rounds of applause, after singing the familiar Scotch ballad "Caller Herrin'," and Roeckel's song, "Number Two," and would have replied to the encores that were demanded but for the Master's prohibition, on the ground of want of time. Altogether a most harmonious and enjoyable evening was passed.

ST. JOHN'S LODGE, No. 328.

THE annual installation meeting of this Lodge took place on Monday, at the Masonic Hall, Torquay, where there was a large attendance of the brethren of this and the sister Lodges. Amongst those present were Bros. D. J. Allams P.P.G. Chaplain, J. Grant I.P.M., W. Taylor P.M., B. Knight I.P.M. 1402, H. Marley W.M. 1358, W. E. Warren P.P.G.O., G. Searle W.M. 218, C. Atkins 27, James Oliver P.G.S.B. Lodge having been opened in accordance with ancient rites, Bro. J. Salter was presented for the benefit of installation, and he was duly installed into the chair by Bro. Harland P.P.G.S.D., whose working was much admired. The newly-installed Master, having been greeted with the customary honours, invested his Officers for the year, as follows:—Bros. J. Grant I.P.M., E. Richards S.W., R. L. Mogford J.W., D. J. Allams P.P.G.C. Chaplain, C. J. Harland P.P.G.S.D. Treasurer, R. D. Renwick Secretary, W. Wakeham D.C., T. Brooks Organist, W. A. Hill S.D., T. Beckett J.D., J. R. Cridge and A. W. Searley Stewards, C. Davison I.G., and W. S. Tozer Tyler. At the conclusion of business the brethren and visitors partook of an excellent banquet at Bro. Cridge's, Queen's Hotel, when the loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured.

ARNOLD LODGE, No. 1981.

THE installation meeting of the above Lodge was held at the Bell Inn, East Moulsey, on the 5th of January, and the day being unexceptionally warm and sunny, was much appreciated by the brethren, the majority of whom hail from the metropolis. A goodly number mustered, among whom were Bros. Kipling W.M., S. P. Catterson P.P.G.S.B. Surrey S.W., Hume J.W., W. Youlden P.P.S.D. Treasurer, J. W. Moorman Secretary, G. Moorman, H. J. Shelley, F. Croaker, Gates, Mills, Knight, Bell, Ellis, Pilgrim, Fleming, Fowler, &c. Among the Visitors were Bro. H. E. Frances P.P.G.S.D. Surrey, Laurence P.M. 1630 P.P.S.D., Jessop P.P.G.P. Middlesex, Holmes P.M. 548, Shah 1297, Lane 1538 P.G. Steward, Taylor 1638, J. Youlden jun. P.G. Steward. After the opening of the Lodge and confirmation of minutes, the report of the Audit Committee, which showed the Lodge to be in a very favourable position financially, was adopted. Lodge being opened in the second degree, Bro. Youlden P.M. took the chair, and Bro. S. P. Catterson P.M. being presented as W.M. elect, was duly installed into the chair of K.S., and he appointed the following brethren as his Officers:—J. Youlden S.W., S. Moorman G. W., W. Moorman Secretary, Croaker S.D., Shelley J.D., F. W. Hallet I.G. These appointments gave great satisfaction to the brethren, the investing of Bro. W. Youlden as Treasurer and J. W. Moorman as Secretary being well received. After the installation Brother S. P. Catterson passed Bro. Holliday to the degree of F.C. Ballots were then taken to initiate Messrs. A. Ollis and R. E. Catterson, the latter being the son of the W.M. These gentlemen were duly initiated into the mystic science in a most impressive manner. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Brother W. Youlden for his able rendering of the installation ceremony. A handsome jewel was presented to the I.P.M., Brother Kipling. The Secretary having read a letter from Brother the Rev. C. W. Arnold P.P.D.G.M., acknowledging in warm and fraternal terms the receipt of a testimonial from the members of this Lodge, a portrait of Brother Arnold was unveiled. This had been painted, by request of the Lodge, by Brother H. E. Frances P.P.G.D., and gave universal satisfaction, being not only an excellently painted picture, but an admirable likeness of the worthy Brother who gave the Lodge a name, and who will ever be remembered by its members for his eminent Masonic abilities, unvarying and unostentatious kindness. The Lodge being closed, the Brethren adjourned to an excellent banquet, which did credit to mine host. The menu—with a plenitude of good things described thereon, and many a quip and appropriate quotation—was the work of the Secretary, and called forth the commendations of the brethren.

RICHMOND LODGE, No. 2032.

A REGULAR meeting of the members of this Lodge was held on Tuesday last, at the Station Hotel, Richmond, when there was a satisfactory attendance, under the presidency of the Worshipful Master, Brother C. I. Digby, who was supported by Bros. B. E. Blasby I.P.M., W. R. Phillips P.M. S.W., J. R. Houghton J.W., Forster Reynolds P.M. Treasurer, G. C. Rowlands Secretary, E. Dare S.D., J. M. Margason I.G., A. Crew Organist, C. Maton and R. H. Messum Stewards, B. Banks Tyler, and many others. Amongst the Visitors were Bros. W. J. Huntley P.M. 1044, G. W. Swales 312 P.P.G.S.W., J. W. Clarke 1512, H. Dougherty 1907, A. Tucker 1365, H. Lansdown 1541, W. Deavett S.D. 889, W. W. Morgan I.P.M 211. The brethren assembled soon after four o'clock, and Lodge having been opened in due form, the minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed. Having advanced to the third degree, Bros. Smith, Keyes, and Robinson were raised, the solemn rites being admirably performed by the Worshipful Master, assisted by his Officers. Resuming in the second degree, Brother Macrae, who had been initiated at the preceding meeting, was passed, the working in this degree being also excellent; the lecture on the tracing board was delivered by the respected Senior Warden of the Lodge, Brother W. R. Phillips P.M. Subsequently, on the motion of Bro. Blasby P.M. it was resolved to establish a Benevolent Fund in connection with the Lodge, and a committee was appointed to formulate the basis on which the scheme shall be worked. Some other business having been transacted, Lodge was closed, amidst the heartiest good wishes, and the brethren adjourned for the banquet, which was admirably served by Brother John Munro, the proprietor of the hotel. The menu having been amply and satisfactorily discussed, the loyal and Craft toasts were given from the chair, and duly honoured. The W.M., in proposing the Queen and the Craft, said that toast was always loyally received, and by none more so than by the Masonic Craft. As loyal men they were always anxious for the welfare of Her Majesty, and in associating her name with this toast it afforded them an opportunity of expressing their appreciation of the deep interest the Queen displayed in all matters connected with Freemasonry. He then gave H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, a toast which, like the last, was always well received in Masonic Lodges. Since His Royal Highness's accession to office as Most Worshipful Grand Master there had been a great incentive to join Freemasonry, and he hoped their M.W.G.M. might be spared for many years to take part in the proceedings of the Craft. The health of the Pro Grand Master, Deputy Grand Master, and Grand Officers Present and Past was then given, the toast being received with enthusiasm. With it was associated the names of Bro. Sir John Whittaker Ellis, Bart., M.P., and Bro. Swales P.P.G.S.W. North and East Yorkshire. Brother Sir John W. Ellis responding, in a humorous speech, said when the time came for him to respond for the Grand Officers he always felt his shortcomings inasmuch as his many other engagements prevented him from attending so closely to the duties of Freemasonry as he could desire. However, if he was not so active in Grand Lodge as elsewhere, he was certain there were plenty of able men there willing to do everything in their power to administer well and wisely the affairs of the Craft. It was a happy omen for this country that men of all shades of political thought were prepared to sink minor points of detail under the banner of Freemasonry, and thus they were prepared well to look after the safety of the realm. He then related an amusing anecdote of the meeting of a then Lord Chancellor of England with a Lord Mayor of London, the latter of whom considered he was the better man; at any rate the office of civic magistrate of the chief city of the world, which he (the speaker) had lately occupied, was one of great honour and dignity. He then described his recent visit to Ireland, where he witnessed the laying of a foundation stone, with Masonic honours, and promised to present a photograph of the event to the Richmond Lodge. On that occasion a Rev. Mr. O'Hara referred to the antiquity of the Brotherhood; in doing which he said he did not know whether or no Masonry was of Christian origin, but at any rate it inculcated the Christian virtues, and no better motive could be brought into play than to promulgate the principles of Christian virtue, honour and sympathy that were taught by the Brotherhood of Masonry to its children. Brother Swales also responded, in suitable terms. Brother B. E. Blasby I.P.M. then proposed the health of the Worshipful Master, of whom he said his heart and soul was in the work which devolved upon him, and so far as the present year was concerned, everything had gone on smoothly and prosperously. Brother Digby was an able and excellent Master, fully alive to the interests of the Lodge, and they all wished for him a very happy and successful year of office. Brother Phillips then sang, in excellent voice, the song "Sunny hours may come again." The Worshipful Master in returning thanks for the compliment paid him said it afforded him great relief to be assured that his humble efforts in the chair had so far merited their approval. His year was now drawing to its close, and he could only hope, when the end did arrive, the members would not regret having placed him in his present honourable position. He then gave the health of the I.P.M., speaking of the valuable assistance he had received from Bro. Blasby in the performance of his duties as ruler of the Lodge. Bro. Blasby was the Father of the Richmond Lodge, in whose behalf he had faithfully and zealously laboured. Indeed, to him the success of the Lodge was essentially due. Brother Blasby I.P.M. then suitably acknowledged the toast, and was followed by Brother Abell, who sang in admirable style, "Flow on, thou regal purple stream." The W.M. next gave the Initiate, the toast being received with characteristic éclat, and Brother Macrae, in responding, thanked the brethren for their reception of the toast, adding that the farther he advanced in Masonry the more he was impressed with the grandeur and sublimity of its teachings and ceremonies. Bros. Swales, Morgan, &c. responded on behalf of the Visitors, and other toasts followed, interspersed with music and singing. A very pleasant evening being thus enjoyed.

Night and Day. By Dr. Barnardo. London: 48 Paternoster Row, E.C.

It would be superfluous to remind the readers of this or any other English journal of the philanthropic efforts which have been for many years put forth by Dr. Barnardo, especially for the benefit of helpless and destitute children; and it is a task in which we, as Masons, might well assist in the carrying out of our principles of true charity and benevolence. This monthly record of Christian missions and practical philanthropy should be widely disseminated, as doubtless it is, amongst those who have a feeling of sympathy towards the unfortunate little waifs and strays who must inevitably drift into the pathways of poverty and crime but for some such rescuing scheme as that which Dr. Barnado, and other philanthropists, have set on foot, and for the support they appeal for help. In this month's number of "Night and Day" there is a deeply interesting and pathetic story on "A Little Street Heroine," with a description of the industries to which the Doctor's "family" at Stepney are being trained, together with sketches of those engaged at the "Homes," with personal notes respecting a large number of the children who have been rescued from the streets and from miserable hovels in our slums, which to call home would be a misnomer and a mockery. The little work is brimful of interesting narrative and record of benevolent work which cannot fail to be of stimulating influence to every class of readers into whose hands it may fall.

The following Festivals were held at the Freemasons' Tavern during the week ending Saturday, 9th January 1886:—

Strand.—After a most successful tour in America and the English provinces Miss Minnie Palmer made her reappearance here last week in the variety comedy, "My Sweetheart." This, since last we saw it in London, has been considerably revised, with a view of making the plot more compact. The doctor, originally an old man, has been transformed into a young one, who, loving Tina (Miss Palmer) without any response from her, devotes himself to promoting her happiness. On discovering that Mrs. Fleeter, the adventuress, already possesses a husband, and the consequent blow to Tony, the latter goes to Europe, whence he has not returned at the date of the last act, when all but Tina have lost faith in him. A comic negro servant has been introduced, but this part would be better if it were "cut" a little. However, the play in this respect takes but a secondary place, the chief attraction being Miss Minnie Palmer. The moment she comes upon the stage the spirits of the audience seem to rise, and she carries them along as though she were impelled by elfin spells. Miss Palmer, who is more refined in her style than formerly, possesses a sense of fun that is rarely seen, while her singing and dancing appear to have improved. Her droll antics and comic facial play are as irresistible as ever, and it is impossible to say what next she will undertake. One of the principal attractions of her performance is the graceful way in which she dances a shadow dance, in the last act, this being nightly encored. She is ably supported by a well trained company. The character of Tony, represented by Mr. Charles Arnold, is even more artistic from a histrionic point of view; his impersonation presents a consistent piece of acting, which is natural and refined in expression. He has also a good voice, which he uses most successfully in his song in the last act. The part of the "broken down sport" is again undertaken by Mr. T. J. Hawkins, and he also comes out with flying colours. Mr. R. A. Roberts is in earnest as the Doctor; while Mr. G. E. Poulett is good as Farmer Hatzell. The part of Dudley Harcourt is capitally acted by Mr. L. D'Orsey; and Mr. Willie Freear makes a good negro. Of the ladies, Miss Annie Baldwin, as Miss Fleeter, after Miss Palmer, takes first place. This lady would, however, score better if she were not quite so stagey. Miss Jane Grey is humorous as Mrs. Hatzell. We consider Miss Minnie Palmer ought to fill the house for some time to come with "My Sweetheart," although the piece is now in its fourth year.

The third performance given by the Dramatic Students will take place at the Court Theatre, kindly lent for the occasion by Messrs. Clayton and Cecil, on Tuesday, 19th January 1886. John Dryden's comedy, "Secret Love; or, the Maiden Queen," will be represented on this occasion. We may state that the objects of this Society, which was formed in February last, are to give further opportunities of practice to the junior members of the theatrical profession, and to promote the study of dramatic literature, by the production of the best plays in the English language, especially those little known to the stage.

A QUARTERLY GENERAL COURT of the Governors and Subscribers will be held at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen Street, Lincoln's Inn Fields, London, on Monday, the 11th day of January 1886, for the transaction of the ordinary business of the Institution.

To receive a recommendation from the General Committee for the adoption of a list of 48 candidates, from which 20 boys—or, should the notice of motion for the increase be adopted—30 boys shall be elected at the Quarterly General Court, to be held on Monday, 12th April next.

To consider the following Notices of Motion:—

By W. Bro. JOYCE MURRAY, V.-Pat., on behalf of the House Committee:—

1. To amend Law 74, Clause 2, that it may read as follows: "The assistant masters shall be appointed by the head master, subject to confirmation by the House Committee."
2. To insert in Law 75 the words: "House Steward," and after the first word "The."
3. That ten additional boys be elected at the Quarterly General Court, on the 12th April next, making the total number 240.

By W. Bro. RAYNHAM W. STEWART (P.G.D.) V.P. and Trustee:—

4. To form part of Law 37—That the members of the House Committee shall be elected for three years, and that at the expiration of the first three years the election shall take place annually. The three at the top of the list shall then retire, and be eligible for re-election, and so annually.

The chair will be taken at Four o'clock noon precisely.

REMARKABLE MASONIC ADVENTURE.

(COMMUNICATED.)

"SAILORS' yarns" are invarisbly full of interest, especially when they are told by an educated and intelligent man, who has not imbibed a proclivity for high falutin' whilst sailing o'er the watery main. Some, we know, are given to occasional glimpses of the "great sea-serpent," while "phantom ships" afloat are as prolific as the "big gooseberry" is on shore in the silly season. But, providing you are in conversation with a bond fide seafarer whom you have long known, and whose veracity is unimpeachable, you can listen to his stories of adventure without the slightest inclination to shrug the shoulder dubiously. I have a case in point which, being of Masonic interest, you may think is deserving of a place in your columns. We have often heard the testimony of travellers in various parts of the world as to "Masons whom they have met," and of the hearty fraternal sympathy and brotherly love which is engendered on both sides when English Masons meet with brethren on a foreign shore; but for peculiarity of incident, and showing the remote quarters of the globe into which the principles of our Order have penetrated, I have seldom heard a narrative more strikingly illustrative than that which was related to me a few evenings ago. Accidentally meeting my old friend, Captain Wilkinson, who had not long since returned from a lengthened voyage, it was only natural, especially at this time of the year, that we should exchange the "compliments of the season;" and as we sat by the parlour fire, smoking our calumets of peace—by-the-bye, the tobacco was very fine, not smuggled you must know, still not "duty paid"—the conversation veered round upon the Captain's last voyage, and the incidents it presented. As a land-lubber, I am not much versed in nautical parlance, consequently I cannot reproduce the many quaint expressions which my jovial and genial brother used, in natural seafaring habit, to garnish his recital. After some general conversation on the position and prospects of the shipping interest, which he described as more than ordinarily dull, I ventured to ask him whether, as a Mason, he had discovered anything in the East, whence he had just returned. "Ah! my friend," he explained, "Freemasonry extends very much further into remote and comparatively unknown regions than many of the brethren appear to imagine, and an instance of this came under my own personal observation."

"Let us have it, then, by all means," I rejoined, catching the interest, "for we are all glad to obtain an addition to our store of Masonic knowledge."

"Well," he continued, "as you know, last year I was in command of the steamer Presidx, belonging to Messrs. E. J. Hough and Co., of Bishopsgate-street, London, who, I may add, have formed a company called the Tunisian Esparto Company—Esparto being a grass that is largely used in paper making and other manufactures." I assented to that knowledge, being somewhat "in the trade," and replied that I recollected the captain's departure for his voyage perfectly well. "The business in Tunis and Tripoli," he went on, "is buying grass from the native Arabs and shipping it to this country. I left the Tyne early last January, bound to Genoa, and on my arrival there I received instructions to sail to Tripoli, there to load part cargo of Esparto, and thence to proceed to Surkinis Bay, to complete cargo. "My instructions," laughed the narrator, "were short, sharp, and decisive, though somewhat vague. They were briefly in these words: 'One white house, with a lot of moveable Arab tents and camels;' but I must first go to the ancient town of Sphax. As you will see by the chart, Sphax lies to the eastward of Morocco and Algiers, and to the northward of Tunis, on the coast of Africa; and it was left to me to cruise along the coast until I espy the 'one white house, and the lot of moveable Arab tents and camels.' However, the task was accomplished without difficulty, and surely enough the white house, which is a landmark on the coast, came into view."

After replenishing our pipes, our worthy brother gave a minute description of this town of Sphax, which he spoke of as the most ancient he had ever seen in the Arab quarter, and well worthy of a visit. I replied that it was most unlikely I should ever have that privilege, unless, indeed, he should be going over for another cargo of Esparto and would invite me to accompany him, which he smilingly assured me he would do. He described the native streets as all being roofed over, so as to protect the passers along it from the sun and rain, and gave an interesting account, which I will not prolong here, of the manner in which the streets are sub-divided for the purposes of trade—some of them being devoted to the sale of cotton, others to meat, tin ware, provisions, &c. The Arabs were to be seen reclining at the entrances to their "shops," quietly smoking chibouques, as they waited for customers to come along; "and," our Brother exclaimed, "a finer race of men I have never seen in my life."

But to return to the story. He proceeded to say, "My agent there was an Italian brother, who sent his Arab servant to show me the town, and gave me a full description of Surkinis—or rather its encampment—where he advised me to make myself known to the sheikh. Now, I need not tell you I cannot speak a single syllable of Arabic; so that I had no means of making myself known until the following incident happened: I towed boats, with a number of Arab labourers, to take on board grass from Sphax to Surkinis Bay, as I was informed that nothing could be had, and no assistance procured, at the latter place. Well, the towing had been going on all right, and everybody very busy, except the captain—that's me, you know." At which remark, I suppose I ought to say in parenthesis, as newspaper reporters do, there was "laughter" mutually, for our Brother is by no means a drone at anything he undertakes. "The latter individual," continued my friend, "betook himself up for a stroll inland, being told by the only two whites on the settlement that I had nothing to fear from the natives, adding the precaution, however, that I must "beware of the dogs," which were very numerous, and of a vicious, wolfish breed, having a strong affinity for white men's calves, even though though they were only of "'salt junk'" (more laughter, of course).

I ventured to suggest as to the hazardous nature of a journey into the country at a time when the Arabs were in bitter hostility to the English, and stories of the Soudan campaign might have already reached that region, as no doubt they had done; but the captain shook his head, and said he had been assured to the contrary, and the only remark he added was that, being mounted on a very young horse, he "did not fear the dogs." He continued, "I started at daybreak for the hills, following the camel's track, and arrived about noon, when the Arabs were gathering the grass and loading the camels and donkeys for the next day's journey to the encampment. I was tired after six hours in the saddle"—fancy a robust, jolly looking captain of a vessel outside a young horse for six hours at a stretch!—"and after dinner at two p.m., I crossed the hills to another grass place. At five p.m. I started on my return journey towards the encampment at Surkinis Bay. I had my compass and knew the course to steer; but unfortunately night came on rapidly, and no stars being visible, I got off the track and lost my way. I found this out by striking a match, and setting my compass. Had I been wiser, I should have had an older horse, as I was informed before I started that the "old 'uns will find their way home on the darkest night, as old farmers' hacks do in this country from market, be the night ever so dark and their masters ever so tipsy."

"However did you manage in this predicament?" I was prompted to ask. "Well, I led the horse up the hill and lit my pipe, saw my revolver all right, and prepared for a bad night on the ground. Everything seemed as still as death; but at ten o'clock I saw a light in the valley, and just then a few stars came out; so I set my compass once more, and steered for the spot on which the lights were glimmering. These revealed to me a lot of camels and drivers returning to the mountains for grass, and they seemed alarmed to see a lone fellow there upon the dreary wastes on horseback. After a while, however, the sheikh approached, but as I could not speak Arabic, nor he, I imagined, English, the thought flashed across my mind to pass him a Masonic sign—the sign of sorrow. To my astonishment and intense relief, the sign was recognised and returned, and in a moment more we had exchanged the grip with all the heartiness of true 'Hail! fellow, well met.' He at once ordered me chabouk and coffee, after which he despatched an Arab with me back to the settlement, much to the surprise of the two whites there, to whom I told the story of my strange adventure, to which they listened with wondering interest. After this I was treated with the greatest respect and kindness all the time I remained at Sirkinis, and on leaving I was presented with a sheep and some fowls."

"Then you fared better than the unfortunate bishop who we are informed has recently been captured by some half savage tribes in a remote region?" laughed I; to which the Captain jocularly retorted "Perhaps the bishop is not a Mason, and therefore could not make himself known by signs!" I was very much interested and amused at our Brother's description of the emotions which overtook him when he "found himself lost," and his joy at encountering a brother in that "outlandish spot;" and said as a "chiel amang ye, takin' notes," I should "prent it," with the editor's permission, in the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

After the story was told, our Brother added that the only person there who spoke English was a head stevedore, who had been raised to the third degree in Masonry. "This man, whom I had brought from Sphax, inquired what the English intended to do after conquering the Soudan; but I answered by saying I was not sufficiently advanced in politics to solve such a problem as that. On expressing surprise that the stevedore was a Master Mason, he assured me I need not be, as many sheikhs were Masons, besides other Arabs."

Regarding this as another instance, and a very uncommon one, of the "universality of Masonry," showing that even in the most obscure and remote parts of the habitable globe there are men of all classes ranged under the banner of the Order, I venture to think you will deem it worthy of record in your columns, and that the length of this sketch is in some measure justified by the remarkable character of the information and incidents it contains.

CONSECRATION OF ST. EILIAN MARK LODGE, No. 360.

ON Tuesday, the 22nd ult., the Right Worshipful Bro. Captain Hunter Provincial Grand Master consecrated the new Lodge, St. Eilian, No. 360, at the Castle Hotel, Amlwch. The Lodge has been formed by Bro. Owen Thomas as first W.M., and the Wardens are Bro. the Rev. H. Thomas (rural dean) and Bro. the Rev. Henry Lloyd (Amlwch) and the petitioners, with Bro. Owen Thomas, being Bro. Dr. T. C. Roden, M.D., and Bro. J. Lloyd Griffith (Holyhead). Bro. Captain Hunter was assisted by Bro. Dr. T. C. Roden D.P.G.M. and the Provincial Grand Officers, and Bro. George L. Woolley (Llandudno) P.G. Secretary Past Grand Steward of England acted as Installing Master. An address was given by Bro. Captain Hunter to the brethren on Mark Masonry, and the great progress the Mark degree had made in North Wales, and an interesting ceremony followed. The Provincial Grand Chaplains were Bro. the Rev. Hugh Thomas (rural dean) and Brother the Rev. Henry Lloyd. Brother Williams, Organist of Christ Church, Carnarvon, presided at the organ, and conducted the musical arrangements. Colonel Tudor, Provincial Grand Master of Staffordshire (a Past Grand Warden of North Wales), was present. After the consecration, the brethren adjourned to the Dinorben Hotel, where they dined. Bro. Captain Hunter presided, and was supported on his right by the R.W.P.G.M. of Staffordshire and the W.M. Bro. Owen Thomas, and on his left by the Provincial Grand Chaplains and the rural dean of Llanallan. After a pleasant evening most of the brethren had to leave by the 7.30 train, having to go long distances.

THE OLD FOLKS AT HOME.

OUT of the London fogs and mist, away from the slushy streets and the bustle and din of City Life, where "beautiful snow" has been trampled by a myriad of footsteps of man and animals into a perfect quagmire of horrible "sludge," and on to the quiet country-side home of the "dear Old People" who are the objects of such tender solicitude to the friends and supporters of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution at Croydon. Down to that sequestered and peaceful spot where age and indigence are relieved and the declining days of our poor brethren and widows are soothed and comforted by the bounty of the Craft, where in summer time the flowers bloom and scent the quiet air, but where at this truly "old-fashioned" Christmas time the trees are shivering with the sheen of frosted crystals and garlands of snow, such as have not been witnessed since the memorable "black Tuesday" of five years ago. Such was the contrast experienced on Wednesday last—Old Christmas Day—by the little knot of friends and well-wishers who started in saloon carriages, specially provided for their accommodation, from Cannon-street, bent on their annual mission of carrying rays of sunshine into the homes and hearts of the poor old people who have been lifted by the benevolence of the Craft from positions of extreme and unavoidable necessity. In spite of the leaden skies, which portended a continuance of the snow-storm of unwonted severity that had fallen upon London, Bro. Terry, the indefatigable Secretary of the Institution, had the felicity that afternoon of welcoming a goodly muster of the real friends of the establishment, which has proved so great a blessing to its residents, whilst the amiable matron, Miss Norris, had equal pleasure in receiving a large number of ladies who had braved the virulence of the storm and the difficulties of travelling to pay their accustomed "compliments of the season" to the dear old creatures who have found a happy and contented home at Croydon. Amongst those present we noticed Bro. C. J. Perceval (President of the House Committee), Bro. J. Terry jun., Miss Kate S. Terry, Miss Jessie Terry, Mr. A. M. Terry, Bro. W. Raynham Stewart, Bro. Edgar Bowyer, Mr. A. P. Bowyer, Bro. T. Cubitt, Bro. H. J. Strong (hon. surgeon to the Institution), Bro. W. J. Crutch, Miss Ada Crutch, Miss Cissy M. Crutch, Bro. C. F. Hogard, Bro. T. Hastings Miller, Bro. R. Griggs, Mr. E. J. Martin, Bro. John Martin, Mrs. and Miss Newton, Bro. H. Massey, Mr. H. W. Massey, Miss A. R. Massey, Bro. H. J. Amphlett, Bro. E. M. Money, Bro. J. T. Briggs, Mr. Vernon, Miss Fanny Vernon, Mrs. Culver, Bro. J. Mason, and many others. In cosy and cheerful contrast with the white waste outside was the interior of the building, well warmed and lighted, and teeming with decorations of holly and mistletoe, the walls being adorned with devices in a hundred designs, and the great hall reverberating with the many voices of the residents who, this day out of the whole three hundred and sixty-five, are made supremely happy. Many willing and loving hands had contributed to the merry-making on this auspicious occasion. The Committee started with a substantial nucleus of £20 towards the fund, while a donation of five pounds was forwarded by the executive of a kindred Institution in East Lancashire. Then the Board of Grand Stewards for 1884-5 came forward with a solid addition to the fund of £13 9s 3d, which enabled the Committee to present each of the residents with a Christmas-box of half-a-sovereign. Many kind friends also testified their interest in the Old People's welfare by presenting gifts in kind, and it need hardly be said that these "creature comforts" were gratefully appreciated by the recipients. Mrs. Edgar Bowyer generously forwarded hampers of fruit; Bro. Edgar Bowyer gave two plump turkeys for the Old Folks' dinner; Bro. T. Hastings Miller added to the store of fat things two prime hams; whilst Bros. C. F. Matier and R. Berridge supplied the means of innocent recreation for many months to come by sending each a dozen packs of playing cards. Then there were big packages of tea for the widows, and of tobacco for the old men, and it was a sight to see the luxurious ease and enjoyment with which the ladies sipped their mild Bohea and the gentlemen puffed their fragrant weed when they had retired from the scene of the general festivities to their snug and comfortable apartments. Is it needful to say that the Christmas dinner was thoroughly enjoyed and "done justice to?" or that the few toasts which followed, beginning with the Queen and the Craft and leading up to a Happy new year, that the residents found a responsive echo in each and every breast? The dinner was an unparalleled success, and enjoyment was paramount, the House Committee and visitors exerting their utmost endeavours to render the happiness of their guests complete. After dinner came the "seasonable" visits of friends to the cosy quarters of the residents, all of which were suitably adorned with emblems of Yuletide, while on many a mantel-shelf appeared pretty cards of remembrance and good wishes, both for Christmas and the New Year. Later in the afternoon the House Committee and their invited friends sat down to a substantial dinner, under the presidency of Bro. C. J. Perceval, after which several speeches relating to the Institution were delivered. Bro. W. Raynham Stewart led off, by proposing the health of the Chairman, who had done good suit and service for the prosperity of this Institution. Bro. Perceval was proverbial for his kindness to the poor; he felt for the wants of others, and they were all delighted that he had sufficiently recovered from his recent illness to fill the position he so worthily occupied that day. Bro. Perceval, after suitably acknowledging the cordiality with which the toast had been received, said, as the Almighty had been pleased to restore him once more to health, he hoped it would be for renewed exertions on behalf of this grand Institution, and all the Institutions in connection with Freemasonry. As they loved and admired Freemasonry, so should they follow its precepts in whatever station of life they might be placed. He then proposed the toast of the evening—Success to the Royal Masonic Institution—and observed that they would all have been glad to see by returns published in the Masonic papers the handsome sums which had been subscribed to the Institutions during the past year, and to know that one stood at the top of the tree. Each Institution had its own separate behests; but the Benevolent Institution had claims more particularly demanding their care than the others, for this reason—that once they got the Old People on their list of annuitants they seemed to live for ever. He hoped in the future, as in the past, this Institution would be known as the one the most prominent of the three. In the other Institutions the educational requirements were continually passing away, whereas the Old People passed away very slowly, for they were taken for their life-time. He associated with the toast the name of their worthy and esteemed Secretary, Bro. James Terry, to whom he paid a high and deserved tribute for his splendid exertions in behalf of the Institution. Bro. Terry, in a speech which we deem of sufficient importance to the Craft to give in extenso in our leading columns, responded; and after that came the toast of the Visitors, coupled with the names of Bros. Hogard, Hastings Miller, and John Newton. Bro. Hogard, in responding, said he was very pleased to have witnessed the entertainment to the Old People, in whom they felt so deep an interest. Some of those present were connected with the Institution officially, as Auditors of accounts, and they had heard with much regret the remarks of Bro. Terry concerning the future of the Institution. They could only hope, as was the case last year, that his prophecies would not be fulfilled. Still they must look the facts broadly in the face. Times had not looked well during the past twelve months; therefore they must not be surprised if results did not quite come up to their expectations. It had afforded him intense pleasure to see the old people enjoying the entertainment which Bro. Terry had kindly provided for them, and he hoped as these gatherings took place year by year they might be able to enhance the benefits of the Institution, and maintain it as the premier Institution of the Craft. Bro. T. Hastings Miller said it afforded him a vast amount of pleasure to be present on this occasion, and he looked forward with much gratification to the recurrence of that happy day, which the old people so much enjoyed. It was most refreshing to see the happiness depicted on every countenance, and he hoped to see it for many years to come. Bro. John Newton also responded. He recollected the second entertainment of this kind ever given to the inmates, and since then he had been a constant visitor and helper on such occasions. He re-echoed what Bro. Miller had said, it did their hearts good to see the happy enjoyment of the old people. He looked forward to these gatherings with a vast amount of pleasure, as a means of doing good to their fellow creatures. He dearly loved the Institution, and worked as hard as he could for it; and he hoped this would not be the last time he should be a guest of the House Committee. The President then proposed the health of Bro. Terry's staff, and said they all knew that during their Secretary's recent illness how admirably the Institution had been carried on. Bro. Mason was a most energetic, hard-working, useful man, and from his perseverance and energy he had largely augmented the annual subscriptions towards the funds. Bro. Mason, in response, said certainly there was one lesson he had learnt, and that was "when time is short, do what you have to do speedily." Since he had been connected with the Institution he had done his best for it, and he intended to do so, as long as he enjoyed the confidence of the Committee. He believed these gatherings did a great deal of good, at any rate they brought some of them closer to each other than they were at any other time of the year, and it was most cheering to see the gladdened faces of the old people. He believed their hearts beat for the time when Old Christmas day came round. When he arrived to-day an old resident said to him, "Ah! I was afraid the snow would stop you coming." It showed how anxious they were; and every time the old men took a whiff at their pipes, or the old ladies brewed their tea, their blessings went up upon the donors of the gifts. He feared there was much truth in the statement made by Bro. Terry as to the prospects of the Institution. This year started with 60 or 70 Stewards less than last year; and if they put it at £50 each, there was a loss of between £3,000 and £4,000. He could not see how it was possible to reach anything like the amount of last year, unless, by means of the Press, a mighty effort be aroused amongst the Craft. Bro. Terry had made superhuman efforts, but he could not be in two places at once. The Press got to the hands of those whom the staff could not reach, and he hoped when the brethren knew the necessities of the case, they would come forward and show that where the need was the supply should not be deficient. Bro. J. Terry jun. also responded. Mr. T. Hastings Miller then gave the House Committee, for whom Bro. Raynham Stewart replied, and the company then joined the ladies at tea, under the superintendence of Miss Norris and her assistants. Later on the residents were again assembled in the hall to witness an entertainment given by Lieut. Cole, the famous ventriloquist, and Mr. Harry Lancy, whose recitals were much enjoyed. The entertainment was most successful, and the inmates expressed their grateful appreciation of it as they bade good bye to the visitors on their leaving for the homeward journey to town.

The first Annual Ball of the Chiswick Lodge, 2012, will be held at the Star and Garter Hotel, Kew Bridge, on Friday, 29th instant, when, under the direction of an efficient board of Stewards, a very enjoyable evening may be anticipated. We are convinced that Bro. Brill, the proprietor of the Star and Garter, will do his share towards deserving success, and with the resources at his command that will go far towards securing this desirable result. The price of a double ticket (to admit lady and gentleman, or two ladies) is £1 1s; of single tickets, for gentlemen 12s 6d; and for ladies 10s 6d. These will include light refreshments during the evening and supper during the interval. They may be obtained from the Stewards, Treasurer and Secretary of the Ball. In order to promote comfort the number of tickets is strictly limited, and early application for same is requested.

WELL PREPARED FOR GREAT WORK.

reason why this Order has lived and wrought and taught? It would indeed not be the only instance in the world's history in which there has quietly and unostentatiously grown, in the great laboratory of human events, the antidote to great evils. It is little to say that Masons, as such, are with the principles of William the Silent of Orange and George Washington, rather than those of Philip the Second of Spain and George the Third of England. In the day of these men, and in the events of their time, was illustrated the fact that the side of right, though apparently the weaker, may triumph over the side of wrong through some mysterious providence which baffles and defeats the most consummate and adroit statesmanship, and the most skilful, heroic and patient generalship of the powers of despotism. Oh, humanity! Could ye but know the glorious deeds that have been, silently and unknown, wrought for you in the world's upward and onward progress throughout centuries!

But it is evident that there is much work to be done for humanity, without waiting for any great crisis in human affairs. A hasty glance over the world reveals a sad condition, notwithstanding our very just boasts of great progress and high civilisation, and the glorious triumphs of the Cross.

Let us face the truth. The great majority of mankind are yet but political slaves! Gigantic standing armies are eating out the substance of nations. Great fleets of iron-clad men-of-war prowl over the high seas, and vast fortresses frown along the borders of all lands. War still devours whole kingdoms at a meal. Intemperance in every land sinks its hundreds of millions of dollars annually, and fills the land with widows and orphans and beggary, and stocks the earth with drunkards' graves. On the one hand great organisations of anarchists parade the streets of the large cities of this, the freest land under the sun, proclaiming doctrines subversive of all property rights, of social order, and of civil government itself. On the other hand, great monopolies and moneyed corporations, soulless, grasping and insolent, are absorbing the earnings and property of myriads of people. And it is possible for an individual, who never contributed a dollar to the real wealth of the country, or did aught for the nation, for science or humanity, to amass a fortune of many millions in a single lifetime.

Crime still pours its ceaseless stream through all the earth, and gloomy prisons rear themselves on every hand, and ignorance and superstition and bigotry still exist; while the gaunt victims of disease, misery, and destitution are marching in a procession of millions to untimely graves! All these things teach us that the world's night has not yet passed away, and though the dawn has begun to break, there is much to be done before the full morning cometh. And in the work of lifting these evils from our race, our share, not as an Order, indeed, but as men who are Masons, with the teachings of Masonry in our hearts, is a very large one. And how shall we be prepared to do our part? By making the teachings of Masonry what they were intended to be—practical. Not with new methods, but by a recurrence and strict adherence to the principles and methods already taught us. For if there be such a thing as a new or modern Masonry, with new principles, as distinguished from an older system, the old Masonry is the better. And we need no noise, no proclamations, no great announcements, for such things are inimical and strange to Masons, for the dominion of the principles of Masonry, like those of a higher and holier kingdom, "Cometh not with observation."

Faithful to our great trust and work in the onward progress of the world, then as humanity in the past has been blessed by our labours, so shall the generations to come, everywhere, rejoice in the beneficence of Freemasonry.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—These remedies are unequalled throughout the world for bad legs, wounds, foul sores, bad breasts, and ulcers. Used according to direction, given with them there is no wound, bad leg, or ulcerous sore, however obstinate or long standing, but will yield to their healing and curative properties. Many poor sufferers who have been patients in the large hospitals under the care of eminent surgeons, and have derived little or no benefit from their treatment, have been thoroughly cured by Holloway's Ointment and Pills. For glandular swellings, tumours, "piles," and diseases of the skin there is nothing that can be used with so much benefit. In fact, in the worst forms of disease, dependent upon the condition of the blood, these medicines, used conjointly, are irresistible.

The first meeting of the General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys for the year 1886 took place at Freemasons' Hall, on Saturday last. Brother Joyce Murray Chairman. Among others present were Bros. J. L. Mather, S. Hastings Miller, Raynham W. Stewart, W. Paas, Edgar Bowyer, H. W. Hunt, J. Moon, W. Maple, S. Richardson, Dr. Morris (Head Master), F. Adlard, L. Ruf, H. Hinton, A. Durrant, A. E. Gladwell, S. H. Parkhouse, T. Griffith, A. Williams, G. P. Gillard, E. Valeriani, C. Belton, W. A. Scurrah, C. H. Webb, F. Richardson, G. Mickley, E. F. Storr, and F. Binckes (Secretary). The minutes of the previous meeting having been read, those of the House Committee were read for information. Petitions from nine candidates were considered and accepted, and the names placed on the list for election in April. Two applications for grants towards outfit were entertained, £5 being voted in each case. The Committee resolved on recommending for adoption by the Quarterly Court on Monday, the 11th inst., a list of 48 candidates, the vacancies to be filled being 20, or, in the event of the motion hereafter stated being carried, 30. The following motions were given for the Quarterly Court on Monday:—

By Bro. Joyce Murray, Vice-Patron, on behalf of the House Committee:—

(1) To amend Law 74, clause 2, that it may read as follows:—"The Assistant Masters shall be appointed by the Head Master, subject to confirmation by the House Committee."

(2) To insert in Law 75, the words "House Steward," and after the first word "The."

(3) "That 10 additional boys be elected at the Quarterly General Court on 12th April next, making the total number 210."

By Bro. R. W. Stewart P.G.D., Vice-Patron and Trustee:—To form part of Law 37—

"That the members of the House Committee shall be elected for three years, and that at the expiration of the first three years the election shall take place annually. The three at the top of the list shall then retire and be eligible for re-election, and so on annually."

The usual vote of thanks to the chairman for presiding closed the proceedings.

PRESENTATION TO BRO. T. VINCENT, P.M. 1076 and 1861.

BROTHER Thomas Vincent, P.M. 1076 and 1876, P.Z. P.P.G.S.B. Surrey, at a special vestry of the parish of St. Margaret's, New Fish-street, City, was presented, on Wednesday, 30th ult., with an illuminated testimonial, beautifully framed, in recognition of his long and able services as churchwarden. The presentation was made by Stuart Knill, Esq., the Alderman of the Ward of Bridge, in which Ward the parish in question is situated. The Alderman spoke of the many years he had known Bro. Vincent, and of the integrity and zeal with which he had carried out the duties of any position he undertook. He honored the friendship of such a man, and hoped that Bro. Vincent might be spared many years amongst them. His face was so well known in the Ward that when the time came for his removal it would leave a blank not easily filled, while his name would always remain on the page of history in connection with the Ward. The rector of the parish (the Rev. A. J. McCaul) said he would take the opportunity of testifying to the valuable services rendered by Mr. Vincent for so many years. He had managed the whole finance of the parish, was treasurer of their schools, and he had heard of many acts of kindness rendered by him towards the poor. On his part he thanked Mr. Vincent most heartily for his uniform courtesy and kindness; he hoped he might be spared for very many years, and that he should always be honoured with his friendship. Bro. Vincent replied in a few well chosen phrases. He was much flattered by the kind words spoken of him by their worthy Alderman, and also by their esteemed Rector; he should highly value the testimonial of his fellow parishioners; it would remind him of many happy days he had spent amongst them; and when it pleased the Great Architect of the Universe to remove him to another sphere, he trusted that his children would look upon this testimonial in honour of his memory.

The ceremony of initiation will be rehearsed at Bro. Gilbert's, the Windsor Castle, King-street, Hammersmith, on Saturday (this day), 9th January, by Bro. E. Ayling P.M., Preceptor of the Chiswick Lodge of Instruction, No. 2012, Bro. G. Gardner W.M. elect in the chair. Lodge will be opened at 7.30 p.m. sharp.

THE NEXT ELECTIONS FOR THE MASONIC SCHOOLS.

AFTER such a result as we were recently enabled to chronicle as the total of the contributions of English Craftsmen to the Masonic Educational Institutions for the past year, it is not to be wondered at that the Committees of the two Schools should have been enabled to recommend, not only that the existing number of pupils should be maintained, but that in each case additions should be made to the number on the establishment. Success has attended the operations of the Institutions during the past twelve months to such an extent as to call forth the approval of all who interest themselves in the work of benevolence, and to-day we are in a position to judge the effect this success will have on the more immediate future. The numbers of pupils in the two Schools are to be increased at the next elections, in April.

In the case of the Girls School the additions decided upon are but slight, still they are sufficient to mark the progress which the Institution is making. At the present time—when every one is complaining of the badness of trade, and the lack of money—anything like extension in the work of benevolence cannot be too highly applauded, and therefore the additions decided upon in connection with the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, although small, are sufficient to call forth general congratulation. It is decided (1) that in case a vacancy occurs from any cause before the newly-elected children are received into the School, the next highest unsuccessful candidate on the list may be admitted at the next Quarterly Court, and (2) that one additional girl be elected at the Quarterly General Court in April, thereby raising the number of elected girls in the Institution to 237. The former of these resolutions may be looked upon as a mere matter of detail, intended to give the supporters of the Institution an opportunity of preventing a waste of space, as well as the inconvenience of starting a half year with one or more pupils short of the capacity of the Institution. With such a number of children as two hundred and thirty-seven to be taken into consideration, it is just as well to provide for emergencies, and it is but natural to suppose that circumstances may occasionally arise to create an unexpected vacancy. Whenever this rule is taken advantage of it will imply an addition to the Institution for the six months immediately following, and thereby relieve for that period the necessities of the family to which the highest unsuccessful candidate for the time being belongs—no trivial advantage, as many a brother's widow could testify. It is such small matters as these which prove the watchfulness and thoroughly hearty manner in which the Committees of our Institutions carry out their self-imposed duties. Nothing that can be thought of is neglected in the desire to relieve the wants of others, and we are convinced it is only careful consideration for the future which prevents even greater extensions than have just been decided upon. The second proposition is, of course, an addition to the School pure and simple, and will allow of the admission of one more child to the benefits of the Institution. This will necessarily entail an additional outlay—an outlay which, although terminable at any of the periodical elections, is virtually permanent, as such a proposal as a reduction in the number of pupils must not be even thought of, much less seriously entertained. We think the Craftsmen of England may be relied upon to maintain the Institutions in the future as ably—even if not better—as do the brethren of to-day.

Turning to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys we have an increase decided upon of a most substantial character, and one which will be hailed with delight by all who have taken a part in raising the funds which have made it possible. Ten additional children are to be admitted to the Institution, which already feeds, clothes, and educates two hundred and thirty sons of Freemasons; so that, after the election in April next, two hundred and forty boys will be on the books of this Institution. Truly a grand number, and one which, as in the case of the Girls, we hope will speedily be increased, but never decreased.

Having referred to the increases which have been decided upon, we may now look at the prospects of the elections, which, as usual, will take place in April. The coming contests promise to be exciting, if they are not deserving of being termed excessively severe, although to many of those who will take a part in them they will prove painfully severe, as it will be necessary, in spite of the eleven additional vacancies declared, to send thirty-two of the candidates back—unsuccessful. In the case of the Girls' School twenty-three candidates can be admitted from an approved list of thirty-seven applicants, while in that of the Boys School forty-eight are eligible to go to the poll, to compete for thirty places, a total of eighty-five candidates, of whom fifty-three only can be admitted. It is much to be regretted that this large proprotion of deserving cases will have to be sent away disappointed, but it is hardly to be expected that members of the Craft can, or ever will be able to relieve every case of distress brought before them. It is rather a subject for rejoicing that as many as fifty-three of the eighty-five candidates can be admitted, than that we should lament the circumstances which force us to send thirty-two of them back. It is but natural that there should be more candidates than vacancies, for there are no benefits, such as the Schools confer, which can be had simply for the asking; indeed there are numberless cases in which smaller benefactions are sought after, much more than is the case with the scholarships of our Schools. This proves that the Masons of England are to be congratulated on having, comparatively speaking, so small a number of calls made on them in this respect.

As we have said before, it is the earnest desire of the Committees of the Masonic Institutions to spread their advantages over as wide an area as possible, and to make the blessings of the Charities felt to the utmost extent, but with the increasing demands which are constantly made on them, and the increased expenditure which is so frequently sanctioned, there must be a corresponding increase in the activity of those who subscribe the money to carry them on, and in these days of almost universal depression it is difficult to see in what way the contributions of the Craft can be augmented. We can hardly ask those who have already worked to do more than they have done, but we can, and do, entreat of them to continue their support as far as they are able, and, above all, to enlist the services of brethren new to the work. A brother who serves the office of Steward, for instance, should not consider his work complete until he has transferred his "representation" of one of the Institutions to another member of his Lodge. All should strive to encourage regular representation from their Lodges, and no matter how small the list, if it could be relied upon year after year it would be particularly welcome. It is not one or two exceptionally large contributions which have placed the Institutions in their present position, or which keep them in a state of activity, but numberless small offerings from brethren all over the country. No pains, then, should be spared to render these gifts regular, and as numerous as possible. What has been done during the last few days towards increasing the number of children in the Masonic Schools has been rendered possible by the large number of small contributions which were sent up last year, and similar increases will be possible in the future if increased support of a like kind be forthcoming. The result is worth striving for, and we earnestly hope that some of our readers may find it in their power to take an active part in securing it. Let them remember that as the result of last year's good work eleven new vacancies have been declared, and that, in spite of this, thirty-two distressed families will be sent away after the next elections—unrelieved for want of funds.

FINANCIAL TABLES FOR THE YEAR.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have just received the reprint of a letter signed "P.M. 1607," which appeared in the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE of the 21st of November last. To this letter is appended a table purporting to show the sums contributed during the past seven years by each Province to the three Masonic Charitable Institutions.

I am sure that any one reading these figures and the satirical paragraph near the end of "P.M.'s" letter would infer that the Lodges and brethren of the Province of Herefordshire, which he has specially held up for derision, had during the period referred to (1879-85) contributed nothing to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, nothing to the Girls' School, and the paltry sum of £53 11s only to the Boys' School fund. Permit me, therefore, through your columns, to correct these misstatements, the fact being that during the years in question I myself have remitted £477 15s from the brethren of the Province, viz.:—

To the Boys' School - - - -	£194	5	0
To the Girls' School - - - -	152	5	0
To the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution -	131	5	0
Total - - - - -	477	15	0

To this must be added various sums contributed by Lodges and brethren, the amount of which I do not know, as it does not come before me.

Possibly the fallacious figures given by "P.M." include only the sums taken up and presented to the Annual Festivals, and he ignores remittances made through post. However this may be, they are, so far as the Province of Herefordshire is concerned, inaccurate and most unfair.

I hardly need say that before castigating his brethren "P.M." should have taken due care that the figures which he thought fit to give to the Masonic world were fair and correct, and contained all the facts necessary for an impartial judgment, or he should have added that for aught he knew, in addition to the amounts he had stated, considerable sums might have been remitted by the Lodges and brethren of a Province.

I may say that Herefordshire is a very small Province, its four Lodges containing but 110 members, so that a remittance of £477 15s from the Association referred to under my signature is very creditable, and especially so when regard is had to the fact that our claims upon the Institutions during the same period have amounted to £32 only.

"P.M." Masonically insinuates that the Province of Herefordshire would not have given even the paltry sum with which he credits it but in the hope of getting it back. If his figures and insinuation were true, how fatal they would be to any candidate from the Province; whereas, on the contrary, a full and true statement of the facts would be beneficial.

If "P.M.'s" other figures are reliable, it would appear that Herefordshire is one of the few Provinces which, during the past seven years, has remitted to the Association £440 more than it has received.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

W. EARLE P.M., Prov. G.S.

Hon. Secretary Herefordshire Masonic Charity Association.

"MASONRY" IN COURT.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Flashes of humour and lapsus linguæ often break forth spontaneously to vary and relieve the monotony of the proceedings of our law courts, and a peculiarly funny instance came under notice not very long ago. During a recent visit to the Lord Mayor's Court, Bro. H. Wildey Wright and Mr. Lewis Glyn were the opposing counsel, and the former having addressed the jury on behalf of his client, the latter rose to reply, prefacing his observations with that bland smile for which he is noted, and sundry gesticulations which are familiar to gentlemen learned in the law. The pause being more prolonged than usual, Bro. Wright sprang to his feet and exclaimed, "If you wish to address the jury do so, but don't address them by Masonic signs." To this Mr. Glyn imploringly assured the jury, "Gentlemen, they were not Masonic signs to you." The foreman of the jury said, he could not understand them if they were; whereupon the learned judge (Mr. Woodthorpe Brandon) comforted the jury that it was "merely a figure of speech." It need hardly be said that the amusement in court was intense, as many there knew that Mr. Lewis Glyn is not a Mason.

I remain, Dear Sir and Brother,

Fraternally yours,

QUIZ.

PROFESSIONAL SINGERS AND THEIR FRIENDS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In the course of a lively conversation with a brother the other evening the subject turned accidentally upon the desirability or otherwise of incurring the heavy expense of engaging professional and non-Masonic "talent" at our banquets, and we mutually agreed that there is, or should, be sufficient vocal and instrumental ability amongst the members to render any such extraneous aid unnecessary. I am willing to admit that the performance of an overture during dinner adds zest to the meal, and the singing between the toasts tends materially to heighten the enjoyment of the proceedings. But whether the brethren are justified in putting a Lodge to such an expense as must accompany professional engagements of the kind to which I refer is a question which calls for very serious consideration. The subscriptions of the brethren should be devoted to none but Masonic purposes, and musical services rendered in our Lodges should be voluntary and gratuitous, not expensively charged for. But even admitting that three or four artists are engaged for, say a guinea each per night, and their banquet, which costs probably as much more, that should be the outside; and I always thought it was, until enlightened by my veteran brother, the other night, who seemed to "know the ropes." "Bless you," he remarked, "in these cases the first cost is not all. For instance, a young lady is engaged to sing. She must have a lady friend to assist her at her toilette, and a gentlemen friend to turn over the leaves of the music, and so on. The gentlemen artists frequently have their attendants, too; and of course all these aides expect to be entertained the same as the rest. Thus, if four professionals are engaged to take part in the musical accompaniments of a banquet, the harmonious party is very often largely increased, and it is easy to calculate the expense which is thus unnecessarily thrust upon the Lodge funds. I am aware that I shall be open to the retort that it is no business of mine, and that the brethren have a right to do as they please; but I venture to think in a majority of such cases the brethren either do not know or do not care to enquire the extent of the outlay incurred by this luxury, the payment for which, out of Lodge funds, is unjustifiable, and a waste of money. Perhaps some of the luxurious Worshipful Masters or Treasurers may take a different view of the matter, and let us know what that view is; also, whether the charge can be upheld by Masonic law.

I remain, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

A LOVER OF MUSIC.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—After nearly two years' severe illness, the G.A.O.T.U. has graciously restored me to health, and since my almost exhausted resources were further depleted by the cruel burglary at my residence, on Christmas Day, I am once more desirous, able and willing, to obtain some employment to assist my broken fortunes. I trust, therefore, some of the many brethren I have known in my happier and more prosperous days will be able to come to my rescue.

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

CHARLES J. PERCEVAL P.M. 1607.

OUR INSTITUTIONS.

The Quarterly General Court of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls was held at Freemasons' Hall, London, on Saturday, the 9th inst., under the presidency of Bro. Horace Brook Marshall P.G. Treasurer. The minutes having been confirmed, the chairman announced that he had made an application to Grand Lodge for a grant of money towards defraying the cost of the land recently purchased by the Institution. He was pleased to say that the brethren present in Grand Lodge had unanimously voted the sum of £1,000 for that purpose. Bro. J. H. Matthews P.G.S.B. then moved the three propositions of which he had given notice, and which were detailed in our issue of the 2nd inst. All of them were carried. The Secretary reported the completion of the purchase of land recently authorised, and a resolution to provide a new box for the deeds, &c., of the Institution having been carried, a vote of thanks was passed to the chairman, and the meeting terminated.

The Quarterly General Court of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys was held at Freemasons' Hall, on Monday, the 11th inst., under the presidency of Bro. George Plucknett, Treasurer of the Institution. The whole of the motions of which notice had been given, and which will be found recorded in our last issue, were carried, and the recommendation of the General Committee as to the number of candidates to be elected at the next meeting was adopted. Considerable discussion ensued on Bro. Rayuham W. Stewart's motion concerning the future of the House Committee, and notice was given that a proposition would be made for the next Quarterly Court not to confirm the minutes in regard to it. The proceedings terminated with the customary vote of thanks to the chairman.

The monthly meeting of the Committee of Management of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution was held on Wednesday, at Freemasons' Hall, under the presidency of Bro. John L. Mather. The death of three female annuitants was announced. The reports of the Warden, and of the Finance Committee, were adopted. Votes of thanks to those who had contributed to the entertainment of the Old Folks at Croydon, on the 6th inst., were passed. A widow's application for half her late husband's annuity was granted, and then the new petitions were considered, and ultimately accepted. The thanks of the meeting having been given to the chairman, the proceedings terminated.

The installation meeting of the Israel Lodge, No. 205, will take place at the Cannon-street Hotel, E.C., on Tuesday, the 26th instant, at 4·30 p.m. precisely. Bro. Alfred J. Henochsberg P.M. 1502 is the W.M. elect.

A Masonic Charitable Association in connection with the Finsbury Lodge of Instruction, No. 861, to be held at the King's Head Tavern, 42 Threadneedle Street, E.C., will commence its operations on Tuesday evening next, the 19th inst, and be continued on the third Tuesday in every month. Lodge opens at seven o'clock. Brethren are cordially invited to join.

The Lord Mayor of London (Bro. Alderman Staples) was present last night (Friday), at an emergency meeting of the St. Botolph Lodge, No. 2020, held at the Albion, Aldersgate street.

The following Festivals were held at the Freemasons' Tavern during the week ending Saturday, 16th January 1886:—

Monday—Old Pauline's Club, St. George and Cornerstone Lodge, Royal Savoy Lodge, Enoch Lodge, Lodge of Unions. Tuesday—Piscatorial Ball, St. James's Union Lodge, Urban Lodge, Codogan Lodge. Wednesday—Royal Savoy Lodge Ball, Enoch Lodge, Buckingham and Chandos Lodge. Thursday—New Holborn Quadrilles, Elliott Lodge Ball, Caledonian Society, Lodge of Regularity, Polish Lodge, University of London Lodge, Pilgrim Lodge, Gt. Northern Lodge. Friday—London Caithness Ball, Jordan Lodge, University Lodge, Lodge of Antiquity. Saturday—London Wheelers' Soirée, City and West End Soirée.

Vaudeville.—On Wednesday last was produced here a comedy, entitled "Plebeians," by Mr. Joseph Derrick. Although the new piece was well received on the first night, the success was mainly due to the talented artists who were engaged in its production. Placed in the hands of a company not so well versed in this style of acting the piece would have been a disastrous failure. Such ideas as are expressed by the author will never be appreciated, and unless the work be almost rewritten the sooner Mr. Thorne changes his programme the better. Imagine a rich brewer, or a money lender, offering an individual £15,000 if he will marry his daughter, merely because he can place the prefix "Honourable" before his name. This, however, seems to be the idea on which Mr. Derrick has founded his comedy. The following is an outline of the plot. Mr. Basil Brown, a brewer, who resides at Candy Lodge, Brixton, calls upon an impecunious "Honourable," whom he has met at his club, and to whom he offers a cheque for £15,000, provided he will marry his daughter. In furtherance of this view, the Hon. Danby Cleeve (Mr. T. Thorne) is invited to dine on the following day at Candy Lodge, where he will have an opportunity of meeting Miss Belinda Brown. A Jewish money lender, who states his wealth to consist of a quarter of a million, also calls upon the aristocrat, and offers a bait of £20,000 if the "Honourable" will marry his daughter. This individual states it is the one hope of his life to obtain for his daughter a position in society, and that can only be obtained by marriage. The Jew adds that he and his daughter are to dine on the following day at Candy Lodge. Whilst Cleeve is meditating over these bribes, a young lady, Grace Wentworth, calls to see him. She has a tale of trouble; her affianced husband was to come to England from a far distant land, but the vessel is a fortnight overdue; she earnestly pleads the gentleman will make inquiries respecting the vessel; this he promises to do, and is about to carry out his promise, when he is told that the vessel has foundered, and the lady's lover has been drowned, and that he himself is entitled to possession of the dead man's wealth. The day for the dinner at Candy Lodge at length arrives, and here the "Honourable" falls in love with the brewer's daughter. But as he has come into a fortune, he accepts her without the proferred cheque. The joy of the brewer is unbounded, while the Israelite is wild with rage. After the engagement has been agreed upon, it turns out that the vessel in which Grace Wentworth's affianced husband is supposed to have been lost, safely arrives in port, and of course the gentleman claims his wealth, but Cleeve in turn comes in for another slice of fortune's favour. As we have before said, the success of the piece was entirely due to the excellent company that was engaged. Miss Kate Rorke takes the part of Belinda Brown, the brewer's daughter, but she has poor material to exercise her abilities upon. Miss Kate Phillips assumes the part of the Jew's daughter, and is even, if possible, in a worse plight. Miss Maude Millett seems to have been "fitted" the best; her rendering of the part of Grace Wentworth being replete with sentiment. Mr. Thomas Thorne, in selecting the part of the Honourable Danby Cleeve, has chosen one unworthy of his powers. Labouring under extreme difficulties, however, he managed to create some fun out of a bad work. The parts of the Jew (Mr. Charles Groves) and the Brewer (Mr. Fred Thorne) were both well acted; in fact, the vitality of the piece seemed to rest on the shoulders of these gentlemen. Other characters were filled by Mr. W. Lestocq (Jabez), Mr. H. Akhurst (Mr. Seldon), Mr. F. Grove (Pritchard), Mr. F. Mellish (Columbus Brown), and Miss Lavis (Mrs. Basil Brown).

SHAKESPEARE'S WILL.—Any person desirous of inspecting the actual last will and testament of the immortal Bard of Avon can do so by visiting Somerset House and paying a shilling. The visitor is conducted to a dimly-lighted room in which this precious relic is preserved, and is not a little astonished to find it securely fixed in a series of frames protected by glass. The will remained for many years without any attempt being made to protect it from the wear to which it is subjected. Indeed, the reference to the will during the period which it was unprotected has slightly worn away the writing at the folds of the paper. It is a remarkable fact that for every Englishman who visits Somerset House to inspect it, there are at least two Americans. The Will has been reproduced in fac-simile on two or three occasions at distant intervals, one of the last copies being taken in the year 1864, when a fac-simile (now out of print) was published at six shillings. Fac-similes have for many years been exceedingly scarce, and a sovereign or more has been paid for good copies. Messrs. Cassell & Company have, we learn, now reproduced the Will in a form which will enable every person to possess it, for they will issue a fac-simile copy with Part I. of "Cassell's Illustrated Shakespeare," to be published on the 26th inst., the price of the Part, including the Will, being but 7d. This new fac-simile of the Will has been very carefully executed, its permanent value being greatly enhanced by its being printed on paper of antique style, and in ink similar in colour to that of the original document.

Mr. Charles Du Val has reached India, and made his first appearance there at the Gaiety Theatre, Bombay, with unqualified success. The Indian Journals are unanimous in their favourable criticisms on Mr. Du Val's Monologue. He appears for a season at the Theatre Royal, Calcutta, after at Bombay, and will probably visit China and Japan.

Monday, the 25th instant, has been appointed for the reception of Works of Art intended for the Spring Exhibition of the Nineteenth Century Art Society, at the Conduit-street Galleries.

INSTALLATION MEETINGS, &c.

SCIENTIFIC LODGE, No. 88.

IT was with particular pleasure that we assisted at the Installation meeting of this old and prosperous Lodge, on Monday evening, at the Lion Hotel, Petty Cury, Cambridge, when there was a large gathering of Masons from all parts of the Province. On entering the Lodge room, which we found splendidly appointed, and well warmed and ventilated, in cheerful contrast to the bitter weather outside, we found a goodly number of the members assembled under the gavel of the Worshipful Master, Bro. G. McCallum P.P.G.J.D., who was well supported by his Officers. Lodge was opened soon after four o'clock, in accordance with ancient rites, and after the minutes of the last meeting had been read and confirmed, a perfect galaxy of Provincial Grand Officers took their seats upon the dais, followed by the Deputy Provincial Grand Master of Cambridgeshire, Bro. J. Neal York, and the Deputy Provincial Grand Master of Northumberland, Bro. R. H. Holmes, both of whom were saluted with the honours accorded to their exalted rank. Amongst the Past Masters of the Lodge present were Bros. J. R. Ling P.P.G.J.W., W. I. Basham P.P.G.D.C., B. Chennell P.G.J.W., A. H. Moyes P.P.G.S.W. (Secretary), T. Hunnybun P.P.G.D.C., and E. Hills P.P.G. Reg. The Visitors included Bros. the Rev. T. Bartrup Nichols (president of the St. Oswald's College, Cullercoats), son of the W.M. elect, R. L. Wherry J.W. 1232, Rev. H. Bott I.G. 186, J. W. Emerson 859, G. E. Anson 705 (New Zealand), G. Tindall W.M. 242, T. Watt W.M. 441, R. H. Pearson P.M. 1196, J. E. L. Whitehead S.D. 441, S. H. Sharman S.W. 441, W. W. Morgan I.P.M. 211, J. Read P.M. 85, J. Catling 441, J. W. Wilson 685 P.P.G.S.W., E. H. Jennings P.M. 441, J. Fuller J.W. 441, C. A. Vinter I.P.M. 441, Hutchinson J.D. 2107, H. Saunders P.M. 859, J. H. Gray P.M. 859. The preliminary business, which included the adoption of a most satisfactory report by the Auditors, having been disposed of, the W.M. vacated the chair in favour of Bro. the Rev. T. Bartrup Nichols, who, in company with two or three other brethren of his Province, had travelled all the way from Newcastle-on-Tyne to instal his venerable and esteemed father into the chair of K.S. The Worshipful Master elect, Bro. Thomas Nichols S.W. P.G. Treasurer, has for years ranked amongst the more active and distinguished Masons in Cambridgeshire, having filled the office, not only of Treasurer of his own Lodge, but also that of Provincial Grand Lodge. Those who knew him best recognise in him an energetic and discreet brother, who is ever alive to the true principles of the Craft, and it has been a matter of astonishment that he had not, long ago, aspired to the dignity of Mastership. At length, however, even having regard to his advanced age, considering the active services he had so long rendered to the Province, it was deemed by the brethren most desirable, if not absolutely necessary, that he should rank amongst the rulers of the Craft, and that desire having been communicated to him, Bro. Nichols bestirred himself, and brings to bear no perfunctory knowledge, nor self-satisfied reliance entirely upon the Past Masters, but a full conviction of the responsibilities of the position, and a determination to carry out the duties which devolve upon him. This was a source of sincere congratulation on Monday evening, on the part of those who had previously recognised Bro. Nichols' zeal and energy, and his capacity for taking command of the Lodge. Having assented, according to established usage, to undertake the responsibilities, a Board of Installed Masters was constituted, and Bro. Nichols was duly installed into the chair by his son, who performed the ceremony in a masterly manner. On the readmission of the brethren, the newly-installed Worshipful Master was saluted with the customary honours, and he then proceeded to invest his Officers for the year, as follow:—Bros. G. McCallum P.P.G.J.D. I.P.M., W. I. Pashler P.P.G. Supt. of Works S.W., Oliver Papworth P.P.G.D.C. J.W., E. Hills P.M. P.P.P.G Chaplain, W. H. Jarrold P.P.G.D.C. Treasurer, A. H. Moyes P.M. P.P.G.S.W. Secretary, W. Purchas P.P.G.O. S.D., F. Piggott P.P.G.S.B. J.D., T. Hunnybun P.M. P.P.G.D.C. Director of Ceremonies, J. R. Ling P.M. P.P.G.J.W. Organist, W. P. Spalding P.G. Supt. of Works I.G., W. Davidson P.M. P.P.G.J.W. Steward, and T. Wood Tyler. The addresses to Master, Wardens, and Brethren were then delivered by the Installing Officer, the whole ceremony being rendered in recondite and eloquent manner. Indeed, it is no figure of speech to say we have seldom seen the beautiful rite more perfectly or impressively carried out. Hearty good wishes having been expressed, Lodge was closed in form, and the brethen then adjourned, to reassemble in the banqueting-room, where a récherché repast was provided by the worthy proprietor of the hotel, who is proverbial for the interest he takes in the Lodge, and his provision for the comfort of the brethren. The toast of the Queen and the Craft having been proposed, and received with loyal enthusiasm, the National Anthem was sung, and the health of the Most Worshipful Grand Master H.R.H. the Prince of Wales was followed by that of the Right Worshipful Pro Grand Master, Deputy Grand Master, and Present and Past Grand Officers, these toasts being also heartily welcomed. Ample justice was done to the toast of the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, Bro. the Earl of Hardwicke, the Worshipful Deputy Grand Master, Bro. J. Neal York, and the Prov. Grand Officers. The W.M., in proposing this toast, expressed regret that their Deputy Provincial Grand Master had been compelled to leave early, in consequence of an important business engagement; in Brother York's absence he would call upon Brother B. Chennell Prov. G.J.W. to respond. Bro. Chennell, in the course of his reply, said it was his pleasure and privilege to be at the last meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Cambridgeshire, when they voted one hundred guineas towards the funds of each of the Masonic Charities. This action had been highly approved by the Craft generally, and it was hoped that other Provinces would follow the example. The I.P.M. next proposed the health of their newly-installed Worshipful Master, in doing which he sincerely congratulated the Lodge upon the wisdom and excellence of their choice. It was very gratifying to find that so esteemed a member of the Lodge had at last been induced to accept the Mastership. Bro. Nichols was so well known to all the brethren that no eulogy was needed in presenting to them the toast. The W.M., in responding, after alluding to the difficulties he had surmounted, taking into consideration his advanced age, said it required some amount of moral courage to essay the responsibilities of the chair. It was from no selfish feeling that he had so long held aloof from that position; it was solely from the thought that it would be for the advantage of the Lodge that he should do so, and that he should not take the chair. At the same time he had a sneaking regard for the office, and pressure having been kindly placed upon him, by the solicitations of his many friends he at last gladly consented. He had not done so without consideration, and should do all he could to bring to bear upon the duties that amount of energy which he was thankful to say he still possessed, and trusted his zeal might make up for any shortcomings he might display. He referred with gratification to having been placed in the unique position of a father being installed by his son, and he felt that his labours in Freemasonry had not been in vain. He was proud to know that his son, who had installed him that day, had so far carried out his wishes, and made himself an active and honoured member of the Craft. He appreciated most highly the compliment that had been paid to him by so many distinguished brethren travelling such a distance, to be present at his installation. He reciprocated the kindly wishes which had been extended to him, and hoped to receive during his year of office the co-operation and assistance of his officers and the brethren generally. He trusted that at the end of his year, however imperfectly he might have carried out the duties, it would be recognised that he had striven to the utmost of his ability, and that the Lodge would not have suffered at his hands. Bro. O. Papworth P.P.G.D.C. then proposed the health of the Installing Master, and in doing so said from his knowledge of Bro. Nichols jun. he felt the toast would be most heartily received. He could scarcely pay that brother a higher compliment than to hope that the father might prove worthy of the son. The Installing Master, in the course of his response, said the proceedings of that day had proved a source of heartfelt happiness to him in his Masonic career. He was highly gratified at the reception the brethren had given him, and pleased at the important part that had been entrusted to him to play that day. He quite appreciated the kindness of the members of the Lodge in giving place to him, and spoke in the highest terms of the Worshipful Master, who he felt sure would never be excelled by any of the brethren for the amount of zeal and energy which he would bring to bear upon the fulfilment of his duties. He concluded an excellent and practical speech by wishing for the Scientific Lodge a long and prosperous career. The health of the Past Masters was next given from the chair, and in doing so the W.M. said the Past Masters, as the toast list indicated, were "most potent, grave and reverend signiors," and he relied upon them for their co-operation and aid. The toast was acknowledged by Bro. Davidson P.P.G.J.W., who said it would be the pleasure, as well as the duty, of all the Past Masters to uphold the W.M. in the fulfilment of his onerous duties, and to sustain the prestige which the Scientific Lodge had so long enjoyed. The toast of the Visitors having been proposed in felicitous terms from the chair, Bro. Holmes, Deputy Grand Master of Northumberland, was the first to respond. He thanked the Worshipful Master for the gratifying terms in which the toast of the Visitors had been given, and for the cordial reception which had been accorded it. He had a vivid recollection that some years ago Bro. Nichols, who had so well discharged the duties of Installing Master on this occasion, visited him at Newcastle-on-Tyne, in company with his father, their worthy Worshipful Master that day. Whilst discussing why Brother Nichols had not passed the chair, he had promised, if ever the day came when their brother should be induced to accept the position of Master, he (the speaker) would make an effort to be present. In fulfilment of that promise he had gladly travelled from the north, and it was exceedingly gratifying to him to see his old and respected friend in the exalted position he now occupied. Bro. Watts, of the Three Grand Principles, and Bro. Gray, of the Isaac Newton Lodge, also responded. The Masonic Charities was the next toast, and the W.M. delivered an earnest and practical speech on the beneficent influence which the various institutions exercised on behalf of those who were in deserving need. The toast was coupled with the name of Bro. W. W. Morgan, who in the course of his response said he had seen the Secretaries of each of the Masonic Institutions that morning, and Bro. Binckes, the representative of the Boys' School, had authorised him (Bro. Morgan) to convey his sincere regrets to the brethren of the Scientific Lodge that he was unable to be present on that interesting occasion. As the Worshipful Master had so kindly associated his name with the toast of the Masonic Charities, and as neither of the actual representatives of the Institutions were present, he thought perhaps a few words from him as to what those Institutions were doing would not be inopportune. The munificent gift which had been voted at the last Provincial Grand Lodge of Cambridgeshire had been received with the warmest approval by the Craft at large, and the work being done by the Charity Organisation scheme which was now in full operation in the Province of Cambridgeshire was a means that would be of intense value to the Masonic Institutions generally. They must all acknowledge that the past year had been one of unexampled prosperity so far as the Masonic Institutions were concerned; this would be conceded by every one who was interested in the affairs of Freemasonry; but without posing before them as an alarmist, it must not be lost sight of that in this period of universal depression in trade a reaction might occur. Bro. Morgan urged upon the brethren most seriously that they must not be led too far a-head by an exceptionally prosperous year—or years—for when a grand success was achieved in any year the executive of the various Institutions were strongly urged to increase their sphere of benevolence, and were perhaps induced to undertake responsibilities which there was a possibility they might not be able to meet. A time of adversity might come; and while he, in accord with every well wisher of the Masonic Institutions, hoped there should be no falling off in the amount that was being expended, with that wish he coupled a sincere desire that a proper and discreet wisdom should be exercised in the outlay of the money which was placed in their hands. It undoubtedly was the desire of every brother who contributed that the capital funds of the Craft should be placed upon a more firm and solid foundation. It was most undesirable that the Institutions should exist on a "hand to mouth" principle. The absolute responsibilities entailed upon the executive of the three Institutions might be realized when it was taken into consideration what a vast amount of beneficent work was done. During the past year the amount realized on behalf of the three Masonic Institutions had amounted in the aggregate to £54,500. Even with this vast sum there were some difficulties to face. The Craft was increasing in volume, and the demands upon its bounty were multiplying. At the next election for the Benevolent Institution there would be no fewer than 136 deserving applicants for the benefits of that Institution, and Bro. Terry, in a so-called "Manifesto," issued last week, had earnestly appealed to the brethren throughout the country to assist him by every means in their power to make the approaching Festival a success. It must be remembered by the brethren that the amount of charity bestowed by the Benevolent Institution was divided amongst 190 men and over 200 widows, who received annuities—the males £40 per annum, and the widows £32. This of itself entailed a yearly expenditure of £13,804. Then they had the Girls' School, where 237 pupils were being maintained, clothed and educated. Again, at the Quarterly Court held that afternoon there was a proposal that the admissions to the Boys' School at Wood Green should be increased from 230 to 240. All these items, as a matter of course, entailed grave responsibilities, and should an evil day come, when the subscriptions on the part of the Craft might materially fall off, it would be inevitable that the scope of the Institutions must be narrowed. Those who had hitherto subscribed would only be content so long as the candidates in whom they were particularly interested were kept well to the front, but should there be any unavoidable curtailment there would certainly arise a laxity of interest, and, as a consequence, a fearful falling off in the receipts must follow. If instead of 240 pupils at the Schools the Committee should only be able to provide for 200, it would have a most depreciatory influence upon the actual income, the result of which would be appalling. Bro. Morgan said he did not urge these views in any alarmist spirit, but it was necessary that men of business experience should be fully prepared for such exigencies as might arise. In conclusion, he advised that a substantial addition should be made to the reserve fund of each Institution, in order that, should a crisis occur, they might be able to cope with the demands made. Unquestionably the executive of the three Masonic Institutions had the confidence of the Craft at large, and it afforded him the greatest possible pleasure to have had the opportunity, however imperfectly, of laying his views before the brethren as to the position of the Institutions and the duties of all true Masons to support them by every means in their power. The proceedings of the evening were fittingly closed with the Tyler's toast. The speeches throughout were interspersed by a choice selection of vocal and instrumental music, with recitations.

DOMATIC LODGE, No. 177.

A HUNDRED years of uninterrupted Masonic existence is what few Lodges can boast of, and therefore those which do enjoy that distinction may be excused for any enthusiasm they feel in connection with the honour. Another Lodge has just attained to its centennial—the Domatic, No. 177—the one hundredth Worshipful Master of which was installed on Friday, at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, and active preparations are being made to celebrate the event by a banquet after the regular meeting next month. The meeting of Friday last was presided over by the W.M. of the past year, Bro. Robert Pierpoint, who was supported by Harry Price S.W., A. Simner J.W., George Everett P.M. Treasurer, T. Morris Secretary, H. J. Chapman J.D., R. Harvey I.G., N. Salmon Steward, Riechelmann Organist, and the following Past Masters:—W. M. Foxcroft, W. J. Ferguson, E. White, H. Bowman Spink, J. McLean, J. R. Foulger, and J. E. Walford. The minutes of the last meeting having been confirmed, and the Auditors' report received, the Lodge was advanced and Bro. J. Webster passed. Bro. H. B. Pardy was raised, and then Bro. Harry Nelson Price was installed as Worshipful Master, Bro. Everett, Treasurer of the Lodge, performing the ceremony with marked ability, notwithstanding the fact that he was suffering from severe indisposition. The following brethren were appointed as Officers: Simner S.W., Chapman J.W., G. Everett P.M. Treasurer, Morris Secretary, Harvey S.D., J. Sadler Wood J.D., Salmon I.G., J. E. Spurrell D.C., and J. Billinghurst Steward. After the completion of the Installation ceremony, Messrs. Thomas Trodd, Robert Hewetson, Anthony Fawcell Peacock, and Ernest George Arthur Smith, were initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry. An increase in the Visitors' Fee on the occasion of the Centenary Banquet next month was then agreed to, and the report of the Centenary Committee received. Two propositions for initiation were submitted, and a vote of thanks to the Treasurer for the able manner in which he had performed the ceremony of Installation was unanimously agreed to, on the proposition of Bro. Pierpoint I.P.M. seconded by Bro. Foulger P.M. The Worshipful Master, in putting this motion, said that Bro. Everett had had a great wish to instal him, the one hundredth Master of the Lodge, into the chair. So strong had this desire been that Bro. Everett had left a sick room, to which he had been confined the last two or three weeks, solely for the purpose of being present. Bro. Everett felt deeply grateful to the brethren, one and all, for their kind expressions to him. He had had a wish to instal Bro. Price, because he was a brother whom he had personally introduced to Freemasonry, was a very old friend of his, and was, moreover, the one hundredth Master of the Domatic Lodge. After the customary greetings Lodge was closed and adjourned in due course. A banquet followed, and at its conclusion the toast list was gone through. The first, the W.M. said, was a toast which for close on fifty years had been received with honour and enthusiasm by Englishmen throughout the world, and which in every assembly of Freemasons was sure of an especial welcome—it being that of the Queen. It was usual with Freemasons to couple with this toast the Masonic Craft, the prosperity of which they all desired. The toast was heartily received, and followed by the National Anthem, Madame Riechelmann singing the solo. The next toast was that of the M.W.G.M. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. The Worshipful Master was sure this would be received with the same cordial welcome as had been accorded to the previous toast. By the winning character of his nature, and by his geniality at all times, the Prince of Wales had won the esteem of all with whom he came in contact, while the way in which he had managed the affairs of the Craft had won for him the esteem of every member of the Order. This toast was followed by that of the Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers Present and Past. In the Earl of Carnarvon the brethren had a very worthy and highly distinguished Mason; one who was always ready to fulfil any duty he might be called upon to perform in connection with the Order. The Deputy Grand Master was an equally good Mason, as any brother who had seen his working in Grand Lodge could testify; while the Grand Officers generally were men who had well earned the honourable positions to which they had been appointed. Bro. Pierpoint proposed the health of the W.M. It was a very pleasing duty to him to submit this, the health of his successor in the chair. Personally he wished the W.M. every success, and in doing so he felt he was only expressing the wish of every member of the Domatic Lodge. The support the brethren had given to the chair during the past year had ensured to him a very happy year of office, and the best wish he could express for his successor was that he might have as great prosperity during his term. He did this feeling assured that Bro. Price was fully deserving of all the honour the members of the Domatic Lodge could confer, and with the full conviction that he would merit the approval which would be showered upon him. The W.M. considered it a somewhat difficult task to reply to the many kind things which had just been said of him; but he felt that the cordial reception of the toast by the brethren proved that they endorsed the remarks of the Immediate Past Master. He felt sure the members would believe him when he said that while he was in the chair he should do his best to ensure the comfort of the brethren and the prosperity of the Lodge. He trusted that when he vacated the chair the mention of his name in connection with the Domatic Lodge would always call forth as hearty a response as it had done that night. Before resuming his seat he had much pleasure in proposing the toast of the Immediate Past Master. He felt assured the brethren would unite with him in wishing their Immediate Past Master the greatest success in his future career. He had pleasure in presenting to Bro. Pierpoint the Past Master's jewel of the Lodge, and he did so, feeling that no jewel was ever more deserved than this one. Bro. Pierpoint felt at a disadvantage as he was suffering from a severe cold; indeed, had it not been for the pleasure of attending the old Domatic Lodge he did not think he should have ventured from home that day. He was truly grateful for the honours which had been conferred on him during the past year. He had especially to thank the Past Masters for the kind assistance they had rendered him during his term of office. He well remembered that on the night of his Installation they had held out the right hand of fellowship, and since then they had done all they could to make his year of office a prosperous one. He did not like to mention names in such a case as this, but could not refrain from a special reference to Bro. Ferguson, who had been particularly kind during the twelve months. There was also the Treasurer, to whom he desired to address a few special words of thanks. He had done much to secure the prosperity of the Lodge during the past year. The brethren were all pleased to see him again well enough to get about, as it was at all times a pleasure to see his happy face in the Lodge. The Worshipful Master proposed the toast of the Initiates, whom he hoped would so act as to maintain and even add to the reputation of the old Domatic Lodge. Bro. Smith was the first to reply. The events of that evening had been looked forward to by him with infinite pleasure for some time past, and he was happy to say their realisation was fully up to his expectations. Bro. Trodd followed. The Worshipful Master had expressed a hope that the Initiates of that night might one day occupy the chair of that—their mother Lodge. He hoped he might, but he could not help thinking he was then nearer the chair than he should ever be again, or at least for very many years. He should try, however, and merit promotion from his brethren. Brothers Hewetson and Peacock also replied, after which the toast of the Charities was given from the chair. In the Charities associated with the Order the brethren had three splendid Institutions, of which they ought to be, and were justly, proud. The two Schools were worthy of especial esteem, but the third Charity—that which provided for the aged and the widows of the Craft—was if anything even more deserving than either of them. He should have the pleasure of representing his Lodge at the next Festival of this splendid Institution, and he hoped the members of the Lodge would do their best to support him in that Stewardship. Bro. James Terry replied, suggesting that it would be a very gratifying feature if the list of the Worshipful Master at the coming Festival was for as many pounds as the number of their Lodge. £177 from the Domatic Lodge, No. 177, at the hands of its one hundredth Master would be a grand result. When the brethren remembered on whose behalf their Master and he were pleading, they could not fail to do their utmost to make the appeal a success. At a later part of the evening it was announced that £64 11s 6d had been promised in the room on behalf of the Old People. The toast of the Visitors was duly honoured and replied to by several of the guests, while that of the Past Masters was acknowledged by Bros. Pierpoint and Ferguson. Bro. Morris replied for the Treasurer and Secretary, and sundry of the Officers to that proposed in their honour, after which

CONFIDENCE LODGE, No. 193.

THE installation meeting was held on Monday, 11th instant, at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, when there was a goodly muster of the brethren and visitors. Bro. W. A. Cubitt the W.M. was supported by Bros. W. Saint S.W. and W.M. elect and the Officers. Past Masters B. D. Renshaw Treasurer, J. Shackell Secretary, F. Biddle, J. E. Fells, Samuel Webb, J. Smith and F. Warne; J. G. Gildersleve acting as I.G., L. G. Reinhardt Tyler, and about forty other brethren. The Visitors included Bros. G. H. Stephens P.M. 1623, J. C. Cross 902, W. Reynolds and W. Graves 1685, J. F. Simpson 1706, A. Bishop 1892, W. E. Johnson 1076, A. G. Watkinson 1728, J. Dale and G. J. Freeman 1613, J. P. Omer 1259, W. C. Schenebergen 172, H. J. Rose 1891, C. H. Kelsey 1227, J. W. Weston 1278, C. J. Woodward 1365; and others. Lodge was duly opened, and the minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed. Lodge was advanced, when Bro. Joseph Hart was raised. Resuming in the second, Bro. Frederick Hemings was passed. It was announced with regret that Mr. Henry Middleton Alston, who was balloted for and accepted at the last meeting of the Lodge, had died somewhat suddenly, the melancholy event occurring on 27th December. Bro. W. Belchamber 1158 was unanimously elected a joining member. Bro. W. Saint was then presented as the W.M. elect, and a Board of Installed Masters having been formed, he was installed into the chair of K.S., the ceremony being most ably carried out by Bro. Cubitt I.P.M., assisted in the charges by Bro. Samuel Webb P.M. The collars for the year were thus bestowed:—Bros. W. A. Cubitt I.P.M., F. Silvester Senior Warden, G. P. Nightingale Junior Warden, B. D. Kershaw Past Master Treasurer, J. Shackell Past Master Secretary, S. Smither S.D., H. Freeman J.D., E. J. Davey I.G., S. Webb P.M. D.C., and L. G. Reinhardt Tyler. It was unanimously resolved to vote twenty guineas out of the funds of the Lodge in aid of the three Masonic Charities, and after some other business, Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to the Pillar Room of the hotel, where Bro. Clemow, with his usual ability and taste, provided a really magnificent banquet. After dessert the usual Loyal and Craft toasts were proposed from the chair and duly honoured. Bro. Cubitt rose; he did not intend to dilate at any great length upon the toast; time was on the wing. He should content himself with proposing the health of their Worshipful Master, whose qualifications for that office were well known and admitted by all present. Bro. Saint W.M., in acknowledging the cordiality with which the toast had been received, said their excellent I.P.M. had spoken many kindly words as to his capabilities, and he could only hope that during his year of office he should be able to prove that he was equal to what he had been represented to be, and that he might give satisfaction to the brethren. The health of the Visitors was the next toast. Bro. J. Freeman 1613 said this was his first visit to the Confidence Lodge, but his invitations to it was as numerous in the future as they had been in the past, he should accept them more frequently. Bros. Stephens P.M 1623, W. E. Johnson 1076 and J. C. Cross 902 also responded. In proposing the health of the I.P.M. and Installing Master, the Worshipful Master paid a deservedly high tribute to the zeal, assiduity, and ability of Bro. Cubitt, who during his very successful year of office had done so much to uphold the prestige of the Lodge, and to extend its usefulness. He felt perfectly certain that in his Immediate Past Master he should find every assistance he might require in the discharge of his onerous duties, and on behalf of the brethren he asked Bro. Cubitt's acceptance of a valuable Past Master's jewel, which he had richly earned by his unwearying efforts for the promotion and welfare of the Confidence Lodge. Brother Cubitt Immediate Past Master returned his very sincere thanks for the kind manner in which the Worshipful Master had proposed the toast, and the brethren for the cordiality with which had they received it, and also for the generous manner in which they had been pleased to vote him the handsome Past Master's jewel on his retirement from the chair. He knew it had been an established custom in this Lodge to pay a similar compliment to Masters when they retired from that position, and he had often heard them declare that when they received the jewel it was the "happiest moment of their lives." He was not going to follow those who had spoken in such terms, but he was very proud indeed to receive this jewel as a Past Master of the Lodge. The W.M., in proposing the health of the Past Masters, said the toast was one which involved a great amount of goodwill. They had a goodly number of Past Masters present that night, and he repeated that during the years he had been connected with this Lodge he had ever received from them the utmost courtesy, kindness, and good feeling. That being the case he was only too pleased and happy to have the opportunity of expressing his gratitude to them for the services they had rendered him. It was a great acquisition to a Master in the chair to have Past Masters around him who were willing to support him and uphold him in the dignity of that position. Of course he considered the duties of the Mastership should be carried out in a way that was becoming and dignified, combined with respect and good feeling, without which they could not have unanimity in the Lodge. It should be his study to promote a feeling of goodwill amongst the members during his year of office, and especially to work in harmony with the Past Masters. Bro. Walter Wood said the rest of the Past Masters had placed upon his shoulders the duty of responding to the toast. He could not but thank the company for the hearty manner in which the toast had been received. Every speaker had observed that it was too late to say everything he had intended to say; and with such excellent examples before him it would be rash on his part to attempt a lengthy speech. Therefore, sheltering himself under their excuses, he would merely say the Past Masters of the Confidence Lodge had in the past done all in their power to forward its interests, and nothing on their parts would be wanting in the future in the same direction. Bro. Shackell briefly replied to the toast of the Treasurer and Secretary. He had risen to respond to that toast a good many times during the 21 years he had been a member of this Lodge, and hoped to do so a good many more. He trusted he might be deserving of all the good things that had been said of him. The Officers of the Lodge came next, and on their behalf suitable acknowledgments were made by Bros. F. Silvester and G. P. Nightingale, soon after which the list was closed by the Tyler. During the evening selections of music and recitations were given, amongst those who contributed to the enjoyment of the brethren being Bros. Weston, Silvester, Davey, and Watkinson. Bro. Graves presided ably at the pianoforte.

HARMONY LODGE, No. 309.

ON Thursday evening, 7th instant, at the Red Lion Hotel, Bro. Douglas G. Gilmour, of Gosport, was installed as Worshipful Master of this Lodge for the ensuing year. There was an unusually large attendance, including representatives of every Lodge in the district. The ceremony was performed in a most efficient manner by Bro. J. W. Gieve, the retiring W.M., to whom a special vote of thanks was accorded for the ability displayed by him on the occasion. The Worshipful Master afterwards appointed the following as his Officers for the year:—Bros. J. W. Gieve I.P.M., W. A. Hill S.W., Henry Cooke J.W., Rev. A. C. Hervey P.M. P.P.G.C. Chaplain, J. B. Goldsmith P.M. P.G.J.W. Treasurer, Rev. A. A. Headley P.M. P.P.G.C. Secretary, Dr. E. T. Crouch S.D., G. Harry J.D., Rev. F. J. Ashmall I.G., Harry Love Dir. of Cers., C. Smith and T. W. Haydon Stewards, E. H. Cooper Organist, R. Eames Tyler. The Worshipful Master, in the name of the Lodge, presented to Bro. Gieve I.P.M. a handsome Past Master's jewel, in recognition of his services during the past year. Subsequently a banquet was served in the large hall, the excellent catering of Bro. G. Bond P.M. giving unqualified satisfaction. Amongst the members of the Lodge present, in addition to those named, were Bros. Edgar Goble P.M. P.G. Sec., A. R. Holbrook P.M., E. Goldsmith P.M., J. Mason P.M. P.P.G.S.D. Middlesex, Lyon, W. G. Leath, Leaver, H. E. Bate, Fraser, House, Worthington, Robins, and Brougball. The Visitors included Bros. Mark E. Frost P.P.G.S.W., Captain W. H. St. Clair, R.N., W.M. 2074 P.G. Reg., W. Gunnell W.M. 312 P.G. Supt. Wks., J. Gieve P.M. 1069 P.G.D.C., J. G. L. Stubbs W.M. 175, and E. Naylor W.M. 928 P.G. Stewards, Dupree W.M. 1069, T. P. Palsgrave P.M. 487, H. E. Loader W.M. 487, J. M. Foster W.M. 1776, G. T. Cunningham W.M. 1834, G. D. Lovegrove Organist 257, Thornton S.W. 903, Senior S.W. 1705, Waters, C. Reader, Chalcraft, and G. Bird.

THE GREAT CITY LODGE, No. 1426.

THE monthly meeting of this Lodge was held on Saturday evening, 9th inst., at the Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street. Bro. Feudick W.M. presided, supported by his Officers, several members and Past Masters, and the following Visitors:—Bros. Ossay W.M. 59, J. Langdon 1457, J. Terry Secretary of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, Tomlin 1815, Breckuell 1633, J. T. Duffery 1275, J. G. Deacon 39, A. J. Hudson 1627. The minutes of the last Lodge having been read and confirmed, Bro. Fraser, a candidate for passing, was examined as to his proficiency and afterwards passed to the degree of F.C. The next business was to ballot for the admission of Mr. Alfred Joseph Coleman; this being unanimous in his favour and he being in attendance, was impressively initiated into the mysteries and privileges of ancient Freemasonry. An appeal was made to the Lodge by a distressed brother, and a very handsome response was made to it by a contribution amongst the members. There being no further business, the Lodge was closed, and an adjournment took place to the dining hall, where a substantial dinner was served. At its conclusion grace having been said, the Worshipful Master remarked that as that was an off-night he should give the customary toasts in a very brief and comprehensive form, which embraced the Queen and the Craft, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales M.W.G.M., the Pro and Deputy Grand Masters, and the rest of the Grand Officers Past and Present. Bro. Baber I.P.M. said, that having assumed the Worshipful Master's gavel the brethren knew to what use he should apply it; this was to propose the health of the Worshipful Master. In doing so he should adopt his suggestion, and that was to be very brief in the observations he should make in proposing the toast. There was no doubt that he had filled the office with very great ability, and therefore he asked the brethren to drink his health with great cordiality, a request which was heartily responded to. The Worshipful Master, in responding to the toast, thanked Bro. Baber for the very kind terms in which he had proposed his health, and the brethren for the cordiality with which it had been received; he could assure them that he would discharge the duties of the office to the best of his ability. He said the next toast he had to propose was that of their brother initiate. At all times The Great City Lodge was proud to receive the infusion of fresh blood amongst them, and he felt sure that their brother initiate would never regret the day when he was made a Mason. Bro. Stevens P.M. sang the "Entered Apprentice." Bro. Colman thanked the brethren for the cordiality with which his name had been received, and said that he was determined to prove himself a good Mason. The Worshipful Master next gave the Past Masters of the Lodge, to which Bros. Baber, Stevens, Headon, Freeman, Kibble, Keeble, and Blackie severally responded. The Worshipful Master said the next toast he had to propose was that of the Visitors, who were always welcome at The Great City Lodge. That night they had not so many as usual, but those who were present might well bear comparison in point of quality, and in the name of the Lodge he gave them a hearty welcome. The Visitors severally returned thanks, expressing the pleasure they had experienced in seeing the working of the Lodge, as well as the hospitality which had been extended towards them. Bro. James Terry, Secretary to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, speaking on behalf of the Masonic Charities, said, that was not the first time he had been the guest and received the hospitality of The Great City Lodge, as he was present at its consecration and saw Bro. Stevens, its first Master, installed into the chair, and he believed that he was the first Steward, when the Lodge gave £50 to appear on his list. Their Worshipful Master would this year represent the Lodge as its Steward, and he hoped that his list would be a successful one on behalf of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. The list of applications was now closed, and numbered 136, but there were only 16 vacancies. That was a very unwelcome state of things, and especially so as amongst the candidates there were several over 60, some over 70, and some over 80 years of age, all seeking the benefits of this Institution. As all these candidates were men and women treading the down hill of life, it was a very serious thing to think of; also how such a state of things could be met. Boys and girls were often adopted by charitable and benevolent people, but he had never yet heard of any one adopting an old man or a woman, and there was no other place than the workhouse that was open to them unless this Institution took them in hand. It was an injunction impressed upon them, and indeed it was the duty of all to assist them in the declining years of their life, and make the closing days of it happy and comfortable. He felt sure that if the brethren could see the painful and distressing cases which were brought before the Committee of this Institution they would double the amount of the subscriptions they intended to place in the hands of their Worshipful Master. He wished to mention one fact which had occurred, when a brother 80 years of age applied to the Committee to become a candidate for the benefits of this Institution, but it appeared that he had only subscribed for 8½ years, whereas a subscription of 10 years was required to give him a qualification. He accordingly continued to subscribe, and at 84 years of age he was placed upon the funds, which he enjoyed for 18 years, and recently died, being then 102 years of age. This venerable centarian held a certificate of his birth, and therefore his age was known to be a fact. It is also a remarkable circumstance that this man left a widow upwards of 70 years of age, who now finds a home in the Institution. Let them see what they could do in support of the Worshipful Master's list, and aid the cause which they had so much at heart. Many could help one, and as he was addressing City men he knew that if a good case was brought before them they would support their Worshipful Master in a successful manner, and the first fruits of it would be to bring relief to their poor and distressed members. Several other toasts were given.

ALLIANCE LODGE, No. 1827.

THE members of this popular Lodge, which is mainly composed of the officials of the Corporation of the City of London, met, for the first time since the installation of Bro. Lieut. Henry Wright as Worshipful Master, at the Guildhall Tavern, on Wednesday evening last. The W.M. was supported by Bros. Colonel T. Davies Sewell P.M., J. Perkins S.W., C. W. Bowley P.M. acting as J.W., R. Pawley P.M. Treasurer, J. E. Turner P.M. Secretary, Major J. Perry Godfrey J.D., T. Whiddington D.C., T. Lovell Tyler, Lieut. V. Dunfee, E. F. Fitch, W. E. Bush, E. Pugh, H. E. Richards, Roberts, Williams (Visitor), and others. After the usual preliminaries, some routine business was transacted, but in consequence of many members of the Lodge having accepted invitations to the Lady Mayoress's juvenile fancy dress ball at the Mansion House, it was deemed advisable to postpone the more important business on the agenda until the emergency meeting convened for Wednesday. At the close of the Lodge the brethren and visitors dined together, under the presidency of the W.M., an excellent repast being provided, under the personal superintendence of Bro. Newton. In proposing the loyal toasts the W.M. observed that on an occasion like the present he did not propose to make any lengthy set speeches, but, there was one toast which was always drunk wherever loyal Englishmen, Scotchmen, and Irishmen assembled, and that was the health of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen. Her Majesty, as Patron of the Craft, took a deep interest in Freemasonry, and testified that interest by becoming a patron of the Masonic Charitable Institutions. In proposing the health of the Prince of Wales the W.M. expressed the hope that His Royal Highness might long continue in the capacity of Most Worshipful Grand Master. He had succeeded to a long line of Grand Masters. His predecessor, the Marquis of Ripon, was a most popular member of the Fraternity; before him was the Earl of Zetland; and in earlier times the office was held by uncles of the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Sussex and the Duke of York. The Prince of Wales did not appear quite so frequently amongst them as a Most Worshipful Grand Master might do were he a commoner, but he took a great interest in all that concerned Freemasonry, and they knew also that although he was not often amongst them, yet he was cognisant of all that transpired in connection with the Craft. The W.M. next proposed the health of the Pro Grand Master the Earl of Carnarvon, the Deputy Grand Master the Earl of Lathom, and the rest of the Grand Officers Present and Past, in doing which he alluded to the Earl of Carnarvon as Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and said his name would no doubt be frequently mentioned during the next few months, and he would have great anxiety on his mind. His lordship was known as a man of worth in the region of politics, and in Masonry, and more especially so in respect of antiquarian researches as vice-president of the Society of Antiquarians. The Earl of Lathom was also well-known in the Craft and in society. Both took a deep interest in all that concerned Freemasonry. They were not merely formal members, but both knew the ritual from beginning to end. There were many members of Grand Lodge belonging to the Alliance, but other duties had prevented them from attending on this occasion. Bro. C. W. Bowley P.M. then assumed the gavel, and in proposing the health of the W.M. sincerely congratulated the Lodge upon having so able and zealous a president; and said the manner in which he lately performed the ceremony of the investiture of his officers was something to be remembered. The Worshipful Master, after returning thanks for the compliment paid him, hoped that during his term of office he should merit the confidence and esteem of the brethren, if so, he should feel he had not occupied the chair in vain. Of course it was a very laudable ambition on the part of every Mason to become Master of his Lodge. He had looked forward to that distinction with considerable pleasure, and hoped to hand down the warrant of the Lodge pure and unsullied as he received it from his predecessors. He regretted that during the year there had been apparently a lack of interest in the working, but that arose from the fact of the Lodge being full. They were limited to 40 members, and that number was completed by the nomination that evening of Mr. Homewood Cranford, the City Solicitor. He knew there were several other gentlemen desirous of joining the Alliance Lodge, but unless the bye-laws were extended they could not be admitted. He should like the bye-laws to be extended, so as to have more work to do, but there seemed to be a feeling against it, though some were of a different opinion. He did not wish, however, having begun his Mastership so well, to hurt the feelings of any one, and, as two or three members had said they were not in favour of increasing their number at the present time, he should not propose that they do so. The health of the Treasurer and Secretary was next given from the chair, and in doing so the W.M. expressed regret that their esteemed Secretary Bro. Turner had been called away early in the evening. Speaking of Bro. Pawley, as Treasurer of the Lodge since its commencement, he referred to the recognition of that brother's services by the presentation to him of a special jewel, voted to him unanimously by the brethren. By his kindness and courtesy Bro. Pawley had won the esteem of the brethren generally, and was in every respect one of its most active and valued members. Bro. Pawley P.M. in responding, returned his heartfelt and fraternal thanks for his name having been associated with the toast. He was one of the first instigators of the Lodge, and ever since he joined it the utmost kindness and respect had been shown towards him by every one of its members. It was to him a matter of satisfaction that in no single instance had a black mark been brought against him in respect of anything he had proposed or done in the Lodge. All he had done had been with the greatest possible earnestness, for the purpose of seeing the Alliance Lodge second to none; and he hoped to see it still better than it was. He was told he had given the greatest satisfaction to all the brethren, and hoped they would never find a blot upon his escutcheon as their Treasurer. The W.M. next proposed the Officers of the Lodge, in doing which he said no man, however efficient he might be, could carry on the duties of his office unless he were ably seconded by those under him. He was thankful to say that the Officers he had chosen were quite equal to the duties they were called upon to perform, though he was sorry many of them were absent this evening, having accepted invitations to the Lady Mayoress's ball at the Mansion House. He then stated that it was through the kindness of Bro. Sir John Monckton that he had risen to the position he now occupied, and he hoped all the Officers would work up to the chair, and fulfil their duty to the Alliance Lodge. Next Saturday (the 9th inst.) he was to have the honour of installing the successor of Dr. Benjamin Ward Richardson, as Master of the King Solomon Lodge, No. 2029, at 8A Red Lion Square. That was a Temperance Lodge, the only one in London, and a large gathering of Masons was expected. In conclusion he invited as many of the brethren as could make it convenient to be present on that occasion. The toast was suitably acknowledged by Bro. C. W. Bowley P.M., Major Godfrey, and Bro. Whiddington; and Bros. H. C. Richards, E. Pugh, W. E. Bush, and Roberts responded for the lay members of the Lodge. The W.M. coupled with the Visitors the name of Bro. Williams, whose acquaintance he had made at The Great City Lodge of Instruction, which was held at Masons' Hall Tavern, Basinghall Street, every Thursday evening, at 6.30 p.m. Bro. Williams had passed through the chair of his Lodge at Esher, the parish in which the late Bro. the Duke of Albany P.G.W. and Prov. G.M. of Oxfordshire resided, and he had recently installed his successor there, according to established custom. Bro. Williams, after returning thanks, said from the way in which he had heard Bro. Lieut. Wright's working, he was sure he would prove a credit to Masonry, and to this Lodge in particular; and it would be a great loss to the Lodge if he had no initiates to take through the various ceremonies. He echoed what the W.M. had said respecting the excellence of The Great City Lodge of Instruction, and recommended all who wished to advance in the Craft to attend it. Some other complimentary toasts were honoured, and a very pleasant evening was diversified with singing and recitations. At the close of the meeting the W.M. and Bro. H. C. Richards, by invitation of Bro. Augustus Harris, attended the Baddeley Festival at Drury Lane Theatre.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Whilst the inhabitants of our great cities suffer from the effects of overcrowding and all its attendant evils, both physical and moral, the more robust and energetic emigrant will in his turn be liable to suffer in his new home from the want of really skilful and the great medical resources of his native land always at command. To the intending friend can give is for him to take a supply of these well known remedies as part of his outfit, for by attention to the easily understood and yet ample directions which accompany each box and pot he will never be at fault when taken ill or under any adverse sanitary conditions of life.

DALCHO'S CONFLICTING OPINIONS ABOUT MASONRY.

BY BROTHER JACOB NORTON.

FROM the very start of our Society the brethren have been grossly deceived, firstly by romancers, secondly by dreamers; the former supplied the legends, symbols and degrees; and the latter somehow managed to find meanings for the symbols and explanations for the legends, about which the original romancer never dreamed of, and as we had a succession of romancers we had also a succession of dreamers; and hence the ritual underwent a succession of changes; for instance, in the earliest Masonic catechism I find as follows—

Q.—What Lodge are you of?

A.—I am of the Lodge of St. Stephen.

St. John is not at all mentioned in the first ritual. But ritual tinker No. 2 made it "from the Lodge of St John," and tinker No. 3 made it "from the Lodge of the Holy St. John at Jerusalem;" and this improved answer convinced the dreamer that St. John was an eminent Mason, a Grand Master, and what not. Thus, even Mackey, in his Lexicon, assures us that "we do not dedicate our Lodges to the Saints because they were Christian Saints, but because they were eminent Masons." And when once such a notion is fastened upon the Fraternity it is at once claimed to be ancient, and, as a rule, everybody believes whatever the luminous Master tells him. Bro. Frederic Dalcho, though he was a scholar, philosopher, and a theologian, was not an exception to the rule; indeed, he even laboured under a disadvantage with which the earlier generation of dreamers were not troubled, for Dalcho's mind was further confirmed by the number of high degrees it was cram'med with. But Dalcho was an extraordinary man, and, I believe, an honest man too; hence, while in his early Masonic days he was exceedingly superstitious, in the latter part of his Masonic days he became exceedingly rational. I shall, therefore, give specimens from Dalcho's orations of 1801, 1802 and 1803, and afterwards I shall quote from Dalcho's Ahiman Rezon of 1822. Briefly then, in his early days he said—

"I am of opinion that the ancient Society of Free and Accepted Masons was never a body of architects; that is, they were not originally embodied for the purpose of building, but were associated for moral and religious purposes." He then goes on to say that our manner of teaching was derived from the Druids, our emblems from Egypt, some things came from Basidides, and other things from the Greeks, and other things were derived from the Crusaders, the Pope, and what not; and after referring to the vast number of Masons accompanying the Crusaders to the holy land, he then goes on to explain how the original pious or philosophic society became associated with the building fraternity, viz., that "when Moses ordained the erection of the sanctuary, and afterwards, when Solomon was about to build the temple . . . they chose from among the people those whose wisdom and zeal for the true faith attached them to the worship of the Most High, and committed to them the erection of those works of piety. It was on these great occasions that our predecessors appeared to the world as architects.

These notions Bro. Dalcho probably derived from high degreedom, and they seem to have stuck to him. In the next oration he is very emphatic on the same topic. He says—

"It has been generally reported, and as generally believed, that our Society was instituted for architectural purposes by bandicraftsmen. What gave rise to this idea I am at a loss to determine, as the blue degrees have no written records to explain the difficulty; and tradition is too lame to give satisfaction to the scientific mind."

After referring to the famous circular issued by the Charleston High Degree Riters in 1802, of which new concern Dalcho was the first Sov. G. Commander,—and poor Dalcho of course believed in all the new cock and bull stories appertaining to the new Rite,—Bro. Dalcho goes on to reason after the following fashion. He says—

"We are, in a nameless Masonic degree, informed that a word was lost. If then Masonry took its rise from the creation, as our ancient records import (what records?) Masons must have been in possession of a word; hence, the changing of the word in the time of Solomon was an innovation of the fundamental principles of the Craft; this, however, we are unwilling to allow. It is well-known to the Blue Master that Solomon and his royal visitor were in possession of the real pristine word, but of which he (the Blue Master) must remain ignorant, unless initiated into the sublime degrees. The authenticity of this mystic word, as known to us, and for which our most respected Master died, is proven to the most sceptic mind from the sacred pages of Holy Writ, and the Jewish history from the earliest period of time."

After some more puffing up of the sublime degrees, and stating that the Talmud throws light upon these degrees, he goes on to say—

"It is well known that about 27,000 Masons accompanied the Christian Princes in the Crusades . . . . While in Palestine they discovered several important Masonic manuscripts, among the descendants of the ancient Jews, which enriched our archives with authentic written records (who saw those records?) and on which some of the degrees are founded.

"In the year 1311 some very extraordinary discoveries were made, and occurrences took place which renders the Masonic history of the period of the highest importance; a period dear to the Mason's heart, who is zealous for the course of the Order, his country, and his God." (Is not this a grand piece of bunkum?)

"Another very important discovery was made in the year 1553, of a record in Syriac characters, belonging to the most remote antiquity, and from which it would appear that the world is many thousand years older than given by the Mosaic account, an opinion entertained by many learned men. Few of the characters were translated until the reign of our illustrious and most enlightened Bro. Frederic, second King of Prussia, whose well-known zeal for the Craft was the cause of so much improvement in the Society over which he condescended to preside.

"From such of our records as are authentic" (where are they?) "we are informed of the establishment of the sublime and ineffable degrees in Scotland, France, and Prussia, immediately after the first Crusades, but from some circumstances, which are to us unknown, after the year 1658 they fell into neglect until the year 1744, when a nobleman from Scotland" (what nobleman?) "visited France, and re-established the Lodge of Perfection in Bordeaux."

So much of Dalcho the superstitious. And now for Dalcho the rationalist. In 1822, Dalcho wrote—

"Various indeed have been the speculations on this subject, the origin of Masonry, and great has been the labour . . . . of many . . . . to prove that every man of note, from Adam down to the present day, were Freemasons. But such round assertions are beneath the dignity of the Order, and would not be urged by men of letters. Neither Adam, nor Noah, nor Nimrod, nor Moses, nor Joshua, nor David, nor Solomon, nor Hiram, nor St. John the Baptist, nor St. John the Evangelist, belonged to the Masonic Order. . . . It is unwise to assert what we cannot prove. Hypothesis in history is absurd. There is no record, sacred or profane, to induce us to believe that these holy men were Freemasons, and our traditions do not go back to their days. To assert that they were Freemasons may make the vulgar stare, but will rather excite the contempt than admiration of the wise.

"It has been the practice of ingenious and zealous Masons to trace Freemasonry as far as probability extends, and then to call everything preceding that period 'Speculative Masonry.' This may satisfy a young Mason, but not an historian, nor an antiquary. Only allow me the liberty of writing on 'Speculative Masonry,' and like Milton, I would go into the invisible world, before the creation of man, and show that the cherubims and seraphims . . . are Royal Arch Masons . . . and yet this is just as probable as the far-fetched stories of many writers on Freemasonry."

Bro. Dalcho next pitches into the tradition that the world is indebted to Freemasons for preserving the Pentateuch, showing that the book was never lost, that Daniel, Ezra, and others possessed copies of the said book, and he says—

"To assert, therefore, that Freemasons preserved the law is as ridiculous as to assert that Saint Augustin, likewise called St. Austin, a Roman Catholic Bishop, &c., was at the head of the Fraternity, A.D. 600. He certainly appeared in England at the head of a fraternity, but it was of forty monks, who accompanied him from Rome, and not of Freemasons.

"Freemasonry has likewise been identified by some zealous Masons with the Eleusinian mysteries, for no other reason, as far as I can discover, than to prove its antiquity. These mysteries were of Egyptian origin, and were probably instituted about 1390 B.C. They were at first religious, and taught the unity of the Supreme God. . . . But at length the symbols which they used to denote the Spiritual regeneration of the initiated, were forgotten, and the most horrid impurities were practised under cover of night; God forbid, therefore, that Masonry should ever have been identified with these mysteries," &c.

Now, with all due respect to Bro. Dalcho, it seems from the above remarks that even in 1822 he was not altogether free from the habit—dreaming or guessing—which he acquired during his early Masonic days; for how did he know what the Eleusinian mysteries taught, first or last? The fact is, he knew nothing about them. He also could not entirely divest himself of the notion that the origin of Masonry was for doctrinal purposes. He did not indeed believe in the very greatest antiquity of Masonry, but ascribed it to the Christian era; he imagined that the custom of dedicating Lodges to St. John was very old, and that the ritual was also old, and like many cranky dreamers who see the Trinity in everything where the word three occurs, Dalcho of course discovered any number of Trinities in the ritual. This, together with the dedication of Lodges to St. John, to say the least, puzzled him. Dalcho did not know what Bro. Lyon has disclosed, viz.:—that in the middle ages every Lodge had a different patron saint. He did not know that there is no evidence whatever that the system of dedicating Lodges is older than 1723, and he did not notice that in Anderson's form of dedicating Lodges, the St. Johns are not mentioned. To which I must add, that we now have five Masonic rituals, ranging between the years 1723 and 1730, each containing an O.B., and each O.B. is minus of the words "dedicated to St. John." Hence we may rationally infer that Lodges were not dedicated to St. John even as late as 1730; at what precise period the fashion of dedicating to the Saint began I know not, perhaps Bro. Gould, who discovered several early rituals, will be kind enough to enlighten us upon the subject. Any how, it cannot be denied that Dalcho did not know as much about Masonic history as we know now. But, on the other hand, when we take into consideration the historic cloud of darkness in which the Craft was enveloped in the time of Dalcho, we should not feel surprised at what Dalcho did not know, but at what he did know. Dalcho may truly be called the pioneer of Masonic rationalism; for his conclusions have since then been confirmed by the best Masonic historians of Germany, Scotland, and England.

Bro. Dalcho also called attention to a paper written by Sir Christopher Wren in the Philosophical Transactions, which paper was criticised in the Quarterly Review, Vol. 24, p 145 (should be Vol. 25). In that paper Sir Christopher ascribed the origin of the Masonic Fraternity, not to Adam, nor Solomon, nor the Saints John, nor King Athelstan, nor to a religious, moral, or philosophical society, but he says:

"That the holy war gave the Christians, who had been there, an idea of the Saracenic works. . . . The Italians (among whom were yet some Greek refugees), and with them the French, Germans, and Flemings, joined into a fraternity of architects, procuring papal bulls for their encouragement. . . . They styled themselves Free Masons, and ranged from one nation to another, as they found churches to be built."

In Halliwell's poem it is stated that Aubrey received the above tradition from Sir William Dugdale, and that the said event took place about the time of Henry III. of England. Sir Christopher, therefore, most probably got the above story from Aubrey. Whether this story is true or not is immaterial, but it furnishes presumptive evidence that when Sir Christopher wrote that paper he was not a Mason, for otherwise he would at least have referred to the old Masons' legends. I took the trouble to consult the Quarterly Review, but I could not learn the year when Sir Christopher wrote the said paper. But anyhow, whether Wren was a Mason or not, it is certain that he did not believe in our so-called "Masonic traditions."

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

SAMSON LODGE, No. 1668.

THE regular meeting was held on Tuesday, 12th ult., at the Café Royal, Regent-street, when a goodly number attended. The Lodge was duly opened by the W.M. Bro. H. W. Caspard, assisted by Brothers R. A. Kinsbury S.W., B. Fuld J.W., J. S. Miller S.D., S. Lancaster J.D., T. Levy I.G., Past Master Baron D. Barnett Secretary and Organist, Moss D.C., A. Oberdoerffer Tyler. Visitors—Bros. A. J. Martin I.P.M. 188, Newton Truscott 1593, J. Wynman W.S. 188. After the minutes had been confirmed, it was proposed by Bro. Clabon and seconded by the W.M. that a vote of sympathy and condolence should be placed on the minutes with regard to the death of a son of Past Master Baron D. Barnett, which was unanimously agreed to. Afterwards the ballot was taken for Mr. Isaac Reol, proposed for initiation by Bro. Levy, and seconded by Bro. Lancaster; Mr. Alfred H. Marks, proposed by Bro. Lancaster, seconded by Bro. Levy; Mr. Jacob Benjamin, proposed by Bro. Fuld, seconded by Bro. Barnett. The initiation was conducted by the W.M. in a most impressive manner. Bro. Joseph Van Praagh, after having answered the usual questions in a perfect manner, was passed. Here again the working was excellent. Some other business having been disposed of, Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet. The W.M. proposed the usual Loyal toasts. Bro. Past Master Loewenstark, in responding for the Past Masters, thanked the W.M. for his kindness in proposing the toast; he had the pleasure to inform the brethren he was the first W.M. of the Samson Lodge and was delighted to see it so prosperous, the excellent working of the W.M. that evening had given great satisfaction. Other P.M.'s also replied. The W.M. next proposed the health of the three Initiates; by the earnest attention they had shown that evening there was no doubt that in due time they would occupy honourable positions in the Craft. After suitable responses had been made, Bro. Quincey P.M. proposed the health of the W.M., which was most cordially received and responded to; Bro. Jaques Wynman making special allusion to the compliment paid by the W.M., who had spoken of him as one of the representatives of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE. Songs by Bros. Moss, Miller and others added to the enjoyment of a very pleasant and enjoyable evening.

ALBERT EDWARD LODGE, No. 1780.

AT the meeting held in the Masonic Hall, Southampton, on Tuesday afternoon, the 5th instant, Bro. W. A. Algan was duly installed Worshipful Master, and afterwards invested his Officers, as follow:—Bros. P.M. James Ireland I.P.M., J. W. Bailey S.W., Geo. Heathcote J.W., W. Foster S.D., E. Warren J.D., G. Longshaw I.G., W. Berry Secretary, James Ireland Treasurer, B. Tanner D. of C., James McKie and H. Hussey Stewards, and Vere Tyler. The installation ceremony was performed by Brother P.M. Berry, and there were present the Past Masters of the Royal Gloucester, Peace and Harmony, Southampton, Clausentum, Shirley, Aldershot, Lymington, and other Lodges. The brethren afterwards sat down to a banquet, supplied by Bro. Dartnell, of which 60 partook, including the Mayor of Southampton, Bro. H. Coles, and ex-Mayor, Bro. James Bishop. Bro. P.M. Ireland was unable to be present on account of an accident he received about a month ago, and the Sheriff of Southampton, Bro. E. Brown, also sent a letter of apology for inability to attend.

CHISWICK LODGE, No. 2012.

THE brethren of this Lodge celebrated their annual meeting on Monday, at the Star and Garter Hotel, Kew Bridge, under the presidency of Bro. Charles H. Everett, the W.M. of the past year, who was supported by Bros. George Everett I.P.M., George Gardner S.W., Richard Harvey J.W., F. Lawrance Treasurer, Harry Price Secretary, W. Gomm S.D., W. A. Dowling J.D., J. Brown D.C., H. Furze I.G., C. Riechelmann Organist, A. H. Strong Steward, T. C. Walls Hon P.M., George Rowe Tyler, and the following Visitors: John Jacobs W.M. 1614, S. Hewett 1614, E. A. Tilbury 975, Arthur Williams I.G. 2030, A. H. Shepherd I.G. 781, D. P. Cama W.M. 2105, H. J. Stollery S.W. 209, L. A. Da Costa J.D. 1349, E. Ayling P.M. 995, H. Jackson 780, J. A. Blount 1471, R. J. Petley 1471, W. Johnson P.M. 865, C. A. Walter P.M. 865 P.G.D. Middlesex, R. Whitley 946 P.P.G.D.C. Middlesex, L. Hollingsworth 1501, E. F. Crowe 1828, W. M. Adamson P.M 834, H. E. Price 1744, G. Reynolds I.G. 1614, W. Causton P.M. 162, N. Defries P.M. 185, G. A. Payne P.M. 933, V. Wing J.D. 1585, G. Thomas I.G. 1194, A. Pringle J.W. 92, E. Gilbert P.M. 1326, J. E. Risch 1150, W. H. Norman 144, Alfred Barden W.M. 11, C. Parnacott 145, W. Regeatur 14, F. Binckes P.G.S., John Edwards W.M. 1662, R. White P.M. 26, G. T. King W.M. 749, and others. The business before the Lodge comprised the confirmation of the minutes, the reception of the Auditors' report, the admission of Lord George Hamilton as a joining member, the raising of Bro. John Thomas Wood, and the passing of Bros. William Henry Meacock, and John Ellis; after which Bro. George Gardner was regularly installed as Worshipful Master for the year, Bro. George Everett, the Father of the Lodge, performing the work in a very graceful manner. The following were appointed as the Officers:—Harvey S.W., Gomm, J.W., Dr. Lawrance Treasurer, Furze Secretary, Dowling S.D., Brown J.D., &c. The installation ceremony having been completed, in due course Messrs. Alfred James Murray, Frederick Will Dodson, and Richard Newton Stollery were introduced as candidates for initiation. Brother Gardner admitted them to the mysteries of Masonry in regular form, and then proceeded to close the Lodge. Two propositions were handed in from gentlemen desirous of being initiated. A hearty vote of thanks was passed to Brother George Everett for the way in which he had that day performed the ceremony of installation. A vote of ten guineas was made from the funds of the Lodge to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, for which Charity Brother Gardner W.M. will act as Steward at the next Festival. A vote of thanks was also passed to Brother Harry Price for the way in which he had fulfilled the duties of Secretary. In proposing this the Worshipful Master felt that the brethren would regret, with him, that Brother Price found his numerous engagements precluded him continuing in office. Lodge was then closed, and the brethren repaired to banquet. At its conclusion the usual toasts were honoured. The Worshipful Master made a special toast of the newly affiliated member, Brother Lord George Hamilton, who he was pleased to welcome as a member of English Craft Masonry. It was an especial pleasure to receive him in their midst, because he came of so good a Masonic family. His late father had reigned for the last ten years of his life as the Masonic ruler of Ireland, and had been followed in that office by his son, the elder brother of their joining member that evening. This was the only instance, but one, in which a son had succeeded his father as a Grand Master of Freemasons in the United Kingdom, the other instance being when the Duke of Atholl succeeded his father as Grand Master of England. It was an especial honour to the Chiswick Lodge that so distinguished a family should be represented on its roll, and the Worshipful Master hoped that they might prove themselves worthy of the honour. Lord George Hamilton, in the course of his reply, thanked the Worshipful Master for having deviated from his programme in order to allow him to leave somewhat early. He should have no objection to spend the jovial evening with them—should rather enjoy it—but other business had to be attended to and he was obliged to leave. As their Master had said, his family had taken a great interest in Freemasonry for many years past. He and his brothers had been initiated, and had taken their several steps in the Order in Ireland, where, especially in the Northern parts, no institution tended more to unite men together in good fellowship than did Freemasonry. Referring to the universality of Freemasonry Lord G. Hamilton said that during last autumn he and his brother had been travelling in America. Among other places they visited Chicago, and the mere fact that two Freemason visitors were among them was sufficient to arouse the kindest sentiments among the brethren of that city. They decided to give a grand banquet in honour of their guests, but this was prevented, as he and his brother were unable to stay for it. When he found it was all but certain he should spend a greater part of the coming year in England, he decided he should like to join an English Lodge, where he might have an opportunity of continuing the pleasant associations which were always connected with such an Institution; there was then no wonder he should select a Lodge in a district with which he was intimately associated, and thus he had joined the Chiswick Lodge, to the members of which he was deeply grateful for the hearty reception they had accorded him. The knowledge of the great influence which Masonry exercised was the reason why he and other members of his family were so pleased to be associated with it, and he hoped that the same friendly relations might always continue. He concluded by again thanking the members for the readiness and cordiality with which they had welcomed him—a Lodgeless wanderer in Britain—to a participation in their benefits. As we have already said, the usual toast list was gone through, but the exigencies of the train service necessitated several of the brethren leaving at this part of the evening's proceedings.

EPPING LODGE, No. 2077.

THE installation meeting of this Lodge took place on Saturday, the 2nd instant, at the Cock Hotel, Epping, the following members being present:—Bros. E. Lewis W.M., James Salmon S.W., J. Woodrow J.W., J. London S.D., H. Fletcher J.D., Fraser I.G., J. Fletcher Org., W. Dance P.M. Sec., E. J. Acworth P.M. Treas., Parkinson Tyler, and others. Among the Visitors were Bros. Fidler P.P.G.S.B. Middlesex P.M. 1237 &c., Buck P.P.S.G.W. Essex P.M. 453 &c., Vincent P.G.S.B. Surrey, T. Ralling P.G. Secretary Essex, J. Edwardes P.M. 1457, Nunn W.M. 1457, Corble W.M. 453, Medwin P.M. 192, Gibbs W.M. 1613, Haig-Brown P.M. 174 W.M. 1962, Reid 1364, Dale 1613, and many others. Bro. F. Philbrick, Q.C., D.P.G.M. Essex being detained, did not arrive until after the ceremony of installation. After the usual business of the Lodge the W.M. elect, Bro. James Salmon, was installed into the chair of K.S. in ancient form by Bro. Holloway P.M. 1457, &c. The W.M. was pleased to appoint and invest his Officers for the ensuing year, as follow:—E. J. Lewis P.M. I.P.M., Acworth P.M. Treas., Dance P.M. Sec., J. Woodrow S.W., J. London J.W., Fraser S.D., F. Johnson J.D., Hughes I.G., J. Fletcher Org., Parkinson Tyler. No further business offering, the Lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet table, Bro. Lawrence, the host, providing a capital dinner. The usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured. Bro. Philbrick D.G.M., in responding for the Provincial Grand Master, &c., said: It is no slight honour to return thanks for the head of the Masonic Province of Essex, and of those who are associated with him in governing the Craft of the Province. I am sure that we Masons of Essex can look with the greatest pride upon our present Provincial Grand Master Lord Brooke, and I am quite sure that the more he shows himself amongst us, and the better opportunities we have of becoming acquainted with him, the better we shall like him. For myself, I am extremely glad to be once more amongst my Epping brethren, and I may tell you that this is the first time that I have been able and permitted to be out of my house after a severe illness. I am glad to be with you because I do not forget that just twelve months ago I had the privilege of taking part in the consecration of this Lodge. I am glad to know that the Lodge is prosperous, and I am sure that a steady increase of members who will become good working Masons and maintain the principles of the Craft, is the best guarantee for its success; and I trust that the progress of this Lodge will support a good foundation, for if you hurry the foundation you may endanger the stability of the superstructure. In conclusion, I have to tender your W.M. my sincere good wishes upon his accession to the chair. In response to the toast of the W.M., Bro. Salmon said:—I am very pleased to have been elected W.M. of this Lodge. It has been my ambition to occupy the chair, and now that I do so, I hope that during my year of office I shall have plenty of initiates. I shall endeavour to carry out my duties to your satisfaction, and I trust that at the end of the period I shall merit that meed of praise which is always so welcome to the retiring Master of a Lodge. Other toasts followed. The proceedings were enlivened by vocal and instrumental music, contributed by Miss Madeleine Hardy, Miss Venning, Bro. Latta, and others. A pleasant item was the rendering of a song, "The Men of England," composed by the W.M. The brethren separated at an early hour, after having spent a most enjoyable evening.

UNITED NORTHERN COUNTIES LODGE, No. 2128.

AN emergency meeting of the above Lodge was held on Monday evening, the 11th instant, at the Masonic Hall, 8A Red Lion-square, Holborn, for the purpose of initiating Mr. W. H. Bullock jun., a Lewis. The ceremony was very impressively performed by the W.M. Bro. J. S. Cumberland P.P.G.J.W. N. and E. Yorks who at its close presented the newly-made brother with a handsome Bible, decorated with Masonic emblems, and suitably inscribed, on account of his being the first initiate of the new Lodge. The draft Bye-laws were afterwards discussed, and the Lodge was closed in due form.

Tredegar Lodge of Instruction, No. 1625.—A meeting was held on Thursday, the 7th instant, at the Wellington Arms, Wellington Road, Bow, E. Present—Bros. Randall W.M., Isaacs S.W., Maloney J.W., Cox Treasurer, Da Costa S.D., Fort (Secretary) J.D., Cohen I.G. Lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The ceremony of initiation was rehearsed by the W.M., Brother Levine acting as candidate. Bro. Da Costa worked the first, second, third, and fourth sections of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. A vote of thanks was ordered to be recorded on the minutes for the able manner in which the W.M. had rehearsed the ceremony. The Lodge was then closed in due form.

Kingsland Lodge of Instruction, No 1693.—At the meeting held on Monday, the 4th inst., at the Cock Tavern, Highbury, N. Present:—Bros. Kirk W.M., Flack S.W., Potter J.W., Forge Treasurer, Collingridge Secretary, Turner S.D., Brett J.D., Keogh I.G. After preliminaries, Bro. Forge, as candidate for raising, answered the usual questions, and was entrusted. Lodge was opened in the third degree, and the ceremony of raising rehearsed, Bro. Forge candidate. Lodge was resumed to the first, when a guinea was voted to the Aged Freemasons' Entertainment Fund. Lodge was closed in due form.

We are compelled to hold over several items of news, reports, &c., in consequence of pressure on our space.

"Dr. G. H. JONES, F.R.S.L., the well-known Surgeon-Dentist of 57 Great Russell Street, London, has just re-issued his popular treatise on the teeth, which should be read by every one wishing to have a good and sound set of teeth; 'Painless and Perfect Dentistry' is its title, which will be found fully justified on perusal of its pages, as many hints for the guidance of those seeking a really practical and scientific dental surgeon will be found. The care and treatment of the teeth, with much useful information concerning the mouth and its molars, is contained therein, and we cordially commend this brochure of Dr. G. H. Jones, to the attention of our readers, which will be found a true guide, philosopher, and friend. The concluding chapters of the book are devoted to a description of the Author's method of dental treatment, which has obtained so high a reputation, and which seems to realise the desideratum of 'holding the mirror up to nature.'"—The Brighton Standard, December 1883.

IMITATIONS OF FREEMASONRY.

IT is not necessary for us to give evidences of that imitation which is the sincerest form of flattery to prove the high opinion in which Freemasonry is held by the world in general; if it were, we might point to almost every society or brotherhood established for the purpose of relieving the necessities of its members, and claim each of them as imitators of Freemasonry, for in nearly every instance can we find traces of either the ritual, the forms or the ceremonies of Freemasonry, while in some the similarity is so strong as to induce the belief that the one is but a clumsy copy of the other. But while all, or nearly all of these societies, may be termed imitators of Freemasonry many of them have extended the sphere of their operations far beyond the scope of Freemasonry, with results more or less beneficial or disastrous in different instances. In England it is the boast of a very large section of the Masonic brethren that Freemasonry is not a benefit society. Admission to its ranks is open to all free men of good character, but it has no advantages of a pecuniary nature to offer to those who seek a participation in its mysteries. Its labours are directed rather to the improvement of a man's moral character, than the state of his finances, but this is not the case with some of the imitations of Freemasonry, the advocates of which appear to vie with each other in offering inducements to attract new members. We have before us an instance in the "Chosen Friends," a "Fraternal Society, 30,000 strong," which is being advertised in some of the American papers as "organised on the basis of Masonry and Odd Fellowship." Really we are inclined to think that Free and Accepted Masonry is not only old in point of age, but is also old fashioned in the way its affairs are conducted, when we read of the benefits this new Society is able to offer its members, but we will let our readers judge for themselves. This imitation of Freemasonry offers "3,000 dollars secured! A safe investment for Merchants, Professional Men, Clerks, Employers, and Employes, as soon as a person becomes a Chosen Friend." This sum, says the advertisement, being "as securely invested as if it was in a Trust Company." What do English Craftsmen think of this? Is it desirable, in face of such counter attractions, to continue Freemasonry as a non-benefit Society? Is it not rather desirable that we should discover on what basis these "Chosen Friends" work, and inaugurate a similar system among Freemasons, to entitle each member to "3,000 dollars, as securely invested as if in a Trust Company?" Are we acting up to the principles of Freemasonry if we allow such an opportunity of benefiting our fellow creatures—and ourselves—to pass? If a comparatively new society, only 30,000 strong, can offer 3,000 dollars fully secured to each of its members, how much could Freemasonry offer, with its hundreds of years' existence, and its branches spread over the four quarters of the Globe. We almost imagine ourselves rich, all we want to know is, how is it done? Must we become a "Chosen Friend" to find out, and if so, where shall we find the nearest "Council?"

Do such imitations as this have any effect on Freemasonry?—is a question which might naturally be put by any one reading of this scheme, and in reply we should say, Yes. The effect may be very insignificant, but it is doubtless existent. Just as surely as there are fools in the world to be caught by such absurd promises, so are there men who will believe that such societies as the one referred to are "organised on the basis of Masonry," and they will carry their belief so far as to actually associate the Society with Freemasonry. When they are duped by some Chosen or unchosen Friend they will blame Masonry for it—because the Society they joined made use of the name of Freemasonry—without authority it is unnecessary to say—and so we get a bad reputation. This, however does not materially affect us. Freemasonry can boast a career of usefulness for ages past; it has done good work in days gone by, and is doing a good work now, but it teaches that Truth is one of the grandest of principles, and if associated with Brotherly Love and Relief is sufficient to keep together a Fraternal Society more than 3,000 strong, without any such nonsense as offering to each of its members 3,000 dollars fully secured. If our imitators would copy our great principles of Brotherly Love, Relief and Truth, and act up to them, they would do us no harm, while they would greatly benefit themselves.

FREEMASONRY.

THE student of the Science of Masonry, who is desirous of elucidating the reason of its existence, its history, its objects, its mysteries and its works, will naturally be attracted at first to a consideration of its name and title.

The designation of this Brotherhood, the title so proudly owned by all its members, is "The Ancient and Honourable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons."

A critical disquisition on the component parts of this title would involve years of labour. Hundreds and thousands of volumes have been written on the various subjects of which it would be found necessary to treat, but the salient points may perhaps be briefly indicated, so as to awaken thoughtful consideration and a desire for further information regarding our world-wide and world-famed Institution.

It is "ancient," as having existed from time immemorial. There can be no doubt about its antiquity. A great number of theories have been advanced at one time or another as to the origin of Freemasonry, but none of them have been entirely satisfactory, from the simple fact that the Order is so Ancient that it is impossible to trace its beginning. Certain writers have traced it somewhat clearly to the Associations of Builders of the Middle Ages, those wondrous architects whose Cathedrals and Churches and public edifices are the most astonishing erections that the whole history of mankind has ever exhibited. These great works are marvels of beauty and solemnity, with a magnificence of thought and decoration entirely unapproached by all the improvements of modern times and to an appreciative beholder they convey an impression that can never be effaced from the memory.

Other writers have traced a connection of Freemasonry with the Roman Collegia Fabrorum, or Colleges of Builders, which were instituted by Numa Pompilius in the year 715 B.C. These colleges were really Fraternities. They had their own laws and their own judiciary. They were free of all contributions to the city or state. They had lodges, and their labours in the lodges were always preceded by religious ceremonies. They had secret ceremonies and different degrees of membership with secrets peculiar to each degree. The Presidents of the colleges were called Masters or Teachers (Magistri), and their membership was composed of men of all countries and of different beliefs. In nearly all these particulars we find a striking similarity in the Freemasonry of the present day.

A few of our authors have gone further back still. The City of Nineveh was one of the most ancient cities of the world. It is supposed that it was the first city built after the flood. Its ruins have been examined and investigated in modern times, and it is stated to be an undoubted fact that the Builders' Marks found on the stones in the ruins of the ancient City of Nineveh are identical with the Freemasons' marks of the present time. It may therefore be safely asserted that this similarity is a strong proof of the Antiquity of Freemasonry.

It is also known to the initiated that in the ceremonies of Freemasonry there is internal evidence of its antiquity. Some of these ceremonies are evidently founded on incidents and circumstances which took place at the building of the Great Temple at Jerusalem by King Solomon, and which are preserved only in Freemasonry. Likewise the use of corn, wine and oil in the ceremonies of Consecration and Dedication is clearly traceable to a similar custom practised by the Romans.

At all events, whatever may have been its origin, Freemasonry is the most Ancient Fraternity that is now in existence. So much for its antiquity.

Freemasonry is "honourable." It is honourable because "by a natural tendency it conduces to make all those honourable who are strictly obedient to its precepts." One of its fundamental principles is the practice of social and moral virtue. It is honourable because its teachings inculcate the highest morality. Whatever may be mysterious about its origin, there is no secret about its principles. It is based on universal benevolence, universal brotherhood and universal charity.

It is honourable because its objects and aims are pure and good. It is always to be found on the side of Humanity and Progress. It is essentially Philanthropic, Philosophic and Progressive. Its objects are the investigation of truth, the study of universal morals, science and art, and the exercise of benevolence. There may be, and doubtless there are, many members of the Society who do not realize this high ideal, who do not know the high objects and aims of the service in which they are called upon to assist, but that is not the fault of the Institution, and those who study it in the light of these designs and intentions will find themselves amply repaid.

It is honourable from the long line of illustrious and honourable men who have given their time and their talents to further its interests, to engage in its work and to prosecute its designs. The wise and good of all nations have been connected with Freemasonry, and have found in that connection ample scope for their highest and best efforts. Kings and Princes have been proud to wear its badges and share its labours. Church and State have contributed their quota. Professional men, merchants, artificers and all classes are to be found represented in the ranks of Freemasonry. A society so attractive to the best thought and the best minds must be worthy of all respect. Surely Freemasonry is Honourable.

Freemasonry is a Fraternity. One of its leading features is that every Freemason is Brother to his fellows. This Brotherhood is independent of all distinctions. It is not dependent on nationality, race or religion. It is free from any and all considerations of colour, clime or form. It is uninfluenced by political divisions or the distractions of statecraft. Men of the most diverse opinions find in Freemasonry a common meeting-place where they can unite in the prosecution of a common aim. It forms the centre of union between good men and true.

In this connection, the Universality of Freemasonry is a characteristic of its Fraternity. In all parts of the civilised world you will find Freemasons. Wherever civilisation exists you will find Brothers of the mystic tie. The Freemason will find friends wherever he goes, friends bound to him with the same ties of Brotherhood, brothers ready to help and assist him, to cheer him on his way, to comfort him in sickness or distress, and to render to him those kindly offices so dear to the true lover of his fellow-man. If a traveller in a strange land, he needs few letters of introduction, the fraternal grip of a Freemason will amply supply their place.

As a Fraternity, Freemasonry joins in the ties of closest friendship those who otherwise would be widely separated and who would remain perpetually apart. It exercises the principles of a Brotherhood by improving the character of its members, by giving them broader views of their relations to one another, and by inducing them to improve their condition in life and to reach a higher ideal of usefulness.

In following out these designs, Freemasonry binds each of its members to all the others by the most fraternal ties to succour and relieve a Brother when necessary, and to extend a helping hand to those who were dependent upon him when they are deprived of his protecting care. In these good works all must take part. It is impossible to belong to a Masonic Lodge without helping to support some scheme of benevolence. From the moment of his initiation the neophyte is like a cog in a mighty wheel, and he can no more help moving on with the rest of the machinery in the direction of good deeds than the wheel itself can help turning while the motive power exercises its impellent force.

The earliest lesson in Freemasonry is one of charity and toleration, and no individual torpor or demerit can long withstand the beneficial influence of the rules of Freemasonry. It may then be safely asserted that the whole system of Freemasonry is calculated and designed to inculcate and enforce the sentiments and practice of a Brotherhood or Fraternity.

Masons are "Free and Accepted." Free alike in the technical sense, and free also in the utmost liberality of thought and action. Freemasonry requires a perfect freedom of inclination in every candidate for its mysteries. It is of his own free will and accord that he comes forward to join its ranks, and it is of his own free will that he takes upon himself the obligations and duties of a member of the Craft.

Many speculations have been indulged in as to the why and wherefore of the terms "free" and "accepted." The word "free," in connection with operative Masons, originally signified that the person so called was free of the guild or company of Masons, that is, in full membership and entitled to all the privileges of the society, the right to do the highest class of work and to receive the highest wages. The operative Masons who were not free of the guild were not permitted to work with those who were. This distinction still exists in many parts of Europe. The term was perhaps first used in the tenth century, when the travelling Freemasons were incorporated by the Roman Pontiff.

"Accepted" is equivalent to initiated. It alludes to the acceptance by the operatives of those who were not previously members of the guild or company.

One writer asserts that Masons were declared "free" by King Solomon, and termed "accepted" by Cyrus, the founder of the Persian Monarchy, the Conqueror of Babylon, through whose instrumentality the Jews were delivered from captivity and allowed to return to Jerusalem. Also, that they were invested with the privileges of bearing arms and freedom from taxation by Darius, the Mede, and Artaxerxes, the son of Xerxes.

Our Masonic tradition is, that after the building of King Solomon's Temple, the initiated were declared "free" and exempted from all imposts, duties and taxes for them and their descendants; for, as the remnant of the Canaanites employed as labourers and bearers of burdens were associated with the free-born at the erection of this edifice, a distinguishing appellation became necessary to prevent confusion, as well as peculiar privileges to excite emulation. This appellation was "accepted," and the privileges were a perfect immunity from all contributions to the service of the State. A similar plan was pursued by Zerubbabel at the building of the Second Temple, when Freemasonry was revived after the captivity in Babylon. These occurrences affixed to Masons the honourable and permanent designation of "free and accepted."

Lastly, the members of this Fraternity are "Masons," anciently and originally, beyond a doubt, operative mechanics, stone-masons who carried on their handicraft by manual labour and with the actual tools and implements of their calling. Modernly, they are Speculative Masons, who apply these tools as symbols of great moral truths, and who have extended the system to embrace all science and art, and who have laid under contribution all operative terms as symbolical of greater realities to form a comprehensive plan of the highest morality.

The word "Mason" has many fanciful derivations, such as the Persian "Magi," or disciples of Zoroaster, the founder of the Parsee religion (and, by the way, the Magi had three degrees, called Disciples, Masters and Complete Masters); a Hebrew word, mawsang or masan, signifying a stone quarry; a Greek word meaning a mystery, and many others. There is plenty of room for the inquirer to speculate to his heart's content in this direction.

It has thus been shown that the titular designation of Freemasonry comprises matters of the most interesting description. Much more might be said upon these various topics. Their significance is capable of being greaty extended. We have, however, written simply to direct, to interest, and, if possible, to instruct. To acquire knowledge and to impart information are duties incumbent upon every conscientious member of "The Ancient and Honourable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons."—Freemason's Repository.

THE VARIOUS IMPLEMENTS OF MASONRY.

AS emblematic of our conduct in life, these afford us useful lessons which we would do well to heed. The Holy Bible is one of the great lights of the Craft, one that we cannot fail to follow up if we would be true to our principles, and measure up to the standard required of us. It will guide us in the way of truth, that adorns and strengthens the character of the man. It will guide us in the way of true and abiding happiness, and secure for us an entrance into the Grand Lodge Room on high. "It enriches the memory, it elevates the reason, it enlivens the imagination, it directs the judgment, it moves the affections, it controls the passions, it quickens the conscience, it strengthens the will, it kindles the sacred flame of faith, hope and charity, it purifies, ennobles, sanctifies the whole man, and brings him into a living union with God. It has light for the blind, strength for the weak, food for the hungry, drink for the thirsty; it has a counsel in precept for every sorrow, a balm for every wound; of all the books in the world the Bible is the only one of which we never tire, but which we admire and love more and more in proportion as we use it. Like the diamond, it casts its lustre in every direction; like a torch, the more it is shaken the more it shines; like a healing herb, the harder it is pressed the sweeter is its fragrance." The Holy Bible lies open before every member of the Order, and points out the whole duty of man. Walk in this great light that you may reflect honour upon that Order, whose foundation principles are the truths herein revealed.

Then by other emblems we are taught to regulate our actions, our every movement by the principles of morality and virtue; and in our different stations among men and before God, to walk uprightly, circumscribing our desires within proper limits. We are also directed to move right onward in the way of truth, turning neither to the right nor to the left, and to avoid in our conversation and actions, dissimulation. The earnest student, as he advances in Masonry, may also learn lessons appropriate to the three principal stages in human life, viz.:—youth, manhood and age; and if true to these lessons, he may, as a Master Mason, "enjoy the happy reflection consequent on a well-spent life, and die in the hope of a glorious immortality." Let all the implements and emblems of Masonry be carefully used and closely studied, and we shall ever and always deserve the title of "good men and true." We will come more fully to understand our duty to God, and to each other; there will indeed be enkindled in our hearts a flame of devotion to God, of brotherly love to each other, and charity to all mankind.—Detroit Freemason.

MARK MASONRY.

CONSTANTINE LODGE, No. 145.

THE quarterly meeting of this Lodge was held at the George Hotel, Colchester, on Thursday evening, the 10th instant. Bro. J. P. Lewin I.P.M. P.P.G.J.W. East Anglia, in the chair, through illness of the Worshipful Master, Bro. Thomas Eustace. The principal business was the election of W.M. for the ensuing year, and the choice of the brethren fell upon Bro. Thomas G. Mills S.W., who returned thanks for the honour conferred upon him. Bro. Fred. A. Cole was re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. Munson Tyler. Great regret was expressed at the illness of the W.M., with best wishes for his speedy recovery.

INSTALLATION MEETINGS, &c.

MEDINA LODGE, No. 35.

AT the meeting of this Lodge, on 14th inst., Bro. H. C. Manners S.W. was installed W.M. for the ensuing year. The ceremony was performed by Bro. T. W. Faulkner P.P.J.G.W., in a most impressive manner, and the working throughout was excellently done. After taking the chair the W.M. expressed his thanks to the Lodge for the honour they had conferred on him, and proceeded to invest his Officers. It was unanimously decided to present the I.P.M., Bro. Roberton, with a P.M.'s jewel, in recognition of the services he had rendered during his year of office. The following are the Officers for the ensuing year:—Bro. H. C. Manners W.M., R. Roberton I.P.M., T. W. Faulkner P.P.J.G.W. Treasurer, G. A. Mursell P.S.G.D. Sec., H. C. Damont S.W., F. Rutland J.W., J. Leftwich S.D., A. Lee J.D., J. C. Airs P.M. D.C., H. Wheeler P.M. Reg., A. Barfield P.P.J.G.D. Charities Committee, F Ransome Organist, R. Cullingford I.G., T. M. Taylor and A. Perry Stewards, Young Tyler. There was a large attendance of members of the Lodge and visiting brethren. Among those present in addition to the Officers were Bros. O. Haxthausen P.M., F. W. Dyett, W. Snellgrove, S. S. Wheeler, G. Chambers, C. Stock, W. Trew, E. Poland, F. Osborne, F. C. Hayes, and G. A. Brannon 151, George Pack P.M. 175, M. J. Speir and S. A. Wiltshire 245, G. Brown 328, C. J. Huntoun 940, J. C. Hopwood S.D. 1457, R. Kirk, W. Dodson, H. Robinson, and G. Dickenson S.D. 1681, T Wilkins 1780, John Bailey W.M, A. Greenham S.W., and J. H. Brown 1884. After the Lodge was closed a large number of the brethren partook of a banquet, provided at the Fountain Hotel, to which ample justice was done. Due honour was given to the first toasts, Queen and Craft and the Prince of Wales M.W.G.M., the W.M.'s reference to the personal qualities of His Royal Highness, which were well-known to many present, meeting with enthusiastic approval. The W.M. then proposed the Earl of Carnarvon Pro G.M. and the Grand Lodge of England, R.W. Bro. Beach and the P.G. Officers, present and past. He paid a high eulogium to the Prov. Grand Master for his great services to the Craft, and his unfailing courtesy, and coupled with the toast the names of Bros. Mursell P.S.G.D., Barfield P.P.J.G.D., and Pack P.P.J.G.D. The toast was responded to by the brethren named, who fully endorsed the praise given to the R.W. Bro. Beach, and bore testimony to the great services which were rendered by other high Officers, notably Bros. Le Feuvre and Sheldon Smith. Bro. Faulkner was also called on to respond; he remarked that he had the honour of being the last Grand Warden of the Province of the Isle of Wight. The toast of the W.M. was ably submitted by Bro Faulkner, who said Bro. Manners had been most regular in his attendance at Lodge, and had proved himself very attentive and and earnest in the discharge of his duties. He cordially wished him a prosperous year of office. Bro. Manners expressed his thanks for the way in which the toast had been proposed, and for the enthusiastic reception the brethren had given it. He felt that he was scarcely entitled to all the praise Bro. Faulkner had given him, but they might rely on his doing his best to serve the Lodge and carry out his duties in a proper manner. Bro. Pack proposed the I.P.M. and Medina Lodge, No. 35, and spoke of the value to the Lodge of the services of an experienced body of Past Masters. He was in a position to bear testimony to the services of Bro. Roberton, and it was with particular pleasure that afternoon he heard the Lodge give expression to the regard in which they held him by voting him a Past Master's jewel. Bro. Roberton, in responding, referred to the improvements which had been carried out in the construction of their Lodge-room during his year of office, the completion of which had given him great satisfaction. His best services would continue to be at the disposal of the brethren. The Visitors was submitted in cordial terms by Bro. Mursell, who said no Lodge in the province felt greater pleasure in receiving and welcoming visiting brethren than Medina, No. 35. The toast was responded to by Bros. Pack 175, Brannon 151, Brown 1884, Hopwood Albert Edward, Huntoun 940, Stockton-on-Tees, Wilkins 1780, Southampton, G. Brown, St. John's, Torquay, Wiltshire 245, Mechanics, and Dickinson, Robinson, Dodson, and Kerr, 1681, Londesborough, who all expressed appreciation of the hearty welcome accorded them. The W.M. proposed the Installing Master and the Past Masters of the Lodge. The W.M. referred to the excellent manner in which that day's ceremony had been performed by Bro. Faulkner, whom they regarded as the patriarch of their Lodge, and expressed his thanks for the valuable services rendered by him and other Past Masters. Bro. Faulkner said he was sure there were other Past Masters in the Lodge who, if they cared to undertake it, could do the installation ceremony as well as the W.M. had been pleased to say he (Bro. Faulkner) had done it that day. It was 40 years since he had been initiated in the Medina Lodge, and he should continue to do his best to maintain their good opinion of him. Other respondents to the toast were Bros. Haxthausen, Airs—who spoke of the benefit derived from the Lodge of Instruction they had established—Barfield, Mursell, Wheeler, and Roberton. Bro. Faulkner in submitting the toast of the Masonic Charities eulogised the great services in the work of Charity that had been rendered by that veteran in the cause Bro. Barfield, whom Bro. Mursell seemed determined to emulate. Bro. Barfield, who wore the collar of the three Charities, adorned with 24 clasps, entered very fully in his reply into the working and needs of the Charities. In the course of an interesting speech he said in June last 236 girls were being educated in a thoroughly useful and practical manner, at a cost of over £9,000 per annum. In addition to this the trustees had been able to purchase a house and strip of land, which would prove to be valuable investments. 240 boys were being educated in the Boys' School, at a cost of £10,000, to make up which sum the trustees had to rely almost entirely on subscriptions, as they had very little money invested, and a considerable sum was urgently needed. The Benevolent Institution had 390 annuitants on the books, at a cost last year of nearly £14,000, and the account was considerably overdrawn. As showing the extent of the Masonic Charities it would be interesting to state the incomes of the several Charities from all sources, as given in their last statement of accounts. The Benevolent Institution received £21,374 7s 1d, the Girls' School 16,768, to which the Sir H. Edwards Presentation Committee contributed 1000 guineas, and the Boys' School £16,272 16s. In addition to the regular work of these three Charities, the Board of Benevolence, whose object was the relief of cases of a temporary character, and who gave assistance in cases of emergency, in grants varying in amount according to the circumstances of the claimant, had disbursed funds to the amount of £10,153. The total income of these several funds reached the sum of £64,569 2s 7d, which gave them an enormous power for relief of the distressed brethren and their families, and was the means of conferring an incalculable amount of good. In conclusion, the speaker expressed considerable dissatisfaction with the manner in which local cases were treated by the Charity Committee of the Province. Bro. Mursell, also responding to the toast of the Charities, said the office of Steward had given him exceptional opportunities for seeing the immense benefits conferred by the manner in which the funds were disbursed. He felt himself specially indebted to Bro. Barfield—whose services he was afraid he could not hope to equal—and the brethren of the Londesborough Lodge, for the generous assistance they had afforded on several occasions. The brethren present would be pleased to know that the collection that had just been made in the room amounted to £2 5s. Bro. Brannon proposed the Secretary and Officers of the Lodge, which, after a song by the W.M., Bro. Manners, was responded to by Bros. Mursell, Rutland, Leftwich, Cullingford, Taylor, Perry, Roberton, and Young. The proceedings were closed by the Tyler. During the evening some capital songs were given by Bros. Wheeler, Stock, Airs, Faulkner, Mursell, Dickenson, Wilkins, Cullingford, Poland, Rutland, &c.

VITRUVIAN LODGE, No. 87.

ON Wednesday, the 13th instant, a meeting of the members of the above Lodge was held at the Bridge House Hotel, London-bridge, Bro. W. R. Davis the Worshipful Master presiding. A numerous attendance of visitors and members of the Lodge were present, including Bros. Thomas Minstrell S.W., Birch J.W.; Bros. P.M.'s Bale, Timothy, Harner, Whiting, Thirkle Treasurer, Stuart Secretary, Janaway; J. M. Moore, Wyatt, Watson, Lambourne, Chamberlain, Nicholls, Nightingale, Woodliffe, Carterer, Massey, Woods, Burnard, Carter, and Comfort. The ceremony of passing was most efficiently performed. Bro. Minstrell was unanimously elected Worshipful Master for the year ensuing. Bro. Thirkle was re-elected Treasurer, and an Audit Committee were appointed. Bro. Bale said it was his pleasing duty as the Immediate Past Master of the Lodge to propose that the usual Past Master's jewel should be presented to their Master, Bro. W. R. Davis, for the very admirable manner in which he had performed the duties of his office during the year. While their Worshipful Master had been in the chair he had shown in every way that he had the interests of the brethren and of the Lodge at heart, and after the very able way he had performed his duties the Worshipful Master, as every one else would do, would feel it very keenly indeed if his services were passed over without acknowledgment. It would be a great pleasure to him to propose the motion, because he believed that they had never had a Master more deserving of the honour than their present one. Brother Past Master Harner seconded the motion, which was carried nem. con. After the transaction of other business the Lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet room. The usual Loyal and Craft toasts followed, and in the course of the proceedings Past Master Bale said, by the kindness of the Worshipful Master, who had allowed him to take the initiative in this matter, he had now a duty to perform, which they would all recognise as one of a most pleasing character. It related to their dear old friend, Bro. Thirkle, who had been their honoured and respected Treasurer for very many years, and he had to ask his acceptance—and he did this with very great pleasure indeed—of the testimonials, which would now be placed before him, of their great respect and esteem for him. These consisted of an illuminated address, suitably emblazoned and framed in an elegant gilt frame, and a silver tea service, consisting of a teapot, sugar basin, tongs, and cream jug, upon a Chippendale tray. As their dear old friend would see, the teapot was suitably engraved in commemoration of the occasion, and all the articles bore Bro. Thirkle's monogram. By the inscription Bro. Thirkle would see what they thought of him, and he (Bro. Bale) could only hope that Bro. Thirkle would accept these articles as an expression of their goodwill towards him for the kindness and urbanity he had always displayed towards them in his capacity of Treasurer. It would be most gratifying to Bro. Thirkle to know that these articles had been purchased from subscriptions obtained without a single instance of canvassing; on the contrary, when it was first resolved they should show their gratitude to Bro. Thirkle for his long and continued services to the Lodge, subscriptions were at once forthcoming. Everything that was given was given freely and willingly. In asking their Bro. Thirkle's acceptance of the articles they could only hope that the Great Architect of the Universe would spare him and his family many long years to have their use, and that He would enable him to continue those valuable services to the Lodge which he had rendered so faithfully in years gone by. Bro. Thirkle said he was unable adequately to thank them for their kindness, and the kind words which had accompanied the gift. He heartily reciprocated their wish that the Great Architect would give him health and strength to continue his services to the Lodge for many years to come, and he hoped that when they were called hence that they might all meet in the Grand Lodge above, where the world's Great Architect lives and reigns for ever. Several toasts followed, and a very pleasant evening was passed.

PEACE AND HARMONY LODGE, No. 359.

AT the meeting of this Lodge, held at the Masonic Hall, on Monday afternoon, 18th inst., Bro. G. Aldis was installed W.M., and appointed his Officers, as follow:—Bros. H. Webb I.P.M., E. Brown S.W., C. Dusantoy J.W., J. Young S.D., A. F. Blackman J.D., J. Adams Secretary, J. R. Weston Treasurer, W. Jenvy I.G., G. Cross Dir. of Cers., A. Baker Steward, T. G. Daycombe Assistant Steward, Vare Tyler. The installation ceremony was performed in an impressive manner by Bro. Webb, in the presence of eighteen Past Masters, and the brethren sat down to a banquet, supplied by Bro. Dartnell, of the High-street.

ROYAL UNION, No. 382.

THE January meeting was held on the 18th inst., at the Chequers Hotel, Uxbridge, when Bro. E. Cotton W.M. presided. Bros. Hall S.W., Wilson J.W., Brooks S.D., Taplin J.D, Fleming I.G., Bailey Organist, Stacey Steward, Nicholson I.P.M., P.M.'s Cooke, Febrenbach, Lonsdale and Rowles; also Bros. Hanson, Jamieson, Lambert, Pilkin, Taylor, &c. Letters of apology for unavoidable absence were read from Bros. Coombes P.M. P.G.S.D. Secretary, King, &c. Bro. Nicholson P.M. officiated as Secretary. After the minutes had been confirmed, a ballot was taken for admission, as joining member, of Bro. Drinkwater, formerly a member of this Lodge. This proved unanimous in his favour. Mr. Mead, of Southhall, was proposed as a candidate for initiation, and the ballot proving favourable, he was duly initiated. The brethren then proceeded to elect a Worshipful Master and Treasurer for the ensuing year. Bro. Hall was elected W.M. and Brother Febrenbach unanimously re-elected Treasurer; the Tyler (Bro. Duffin) was also re-elected; the W.M., S.W., J.W., and Bros. Jamieson and Taylor were appointed as Audit Committee. On the motion of Bro. Nicholson I.P.M. a P.M.'s jewel was voted to Bro. Cotton W.M. as a slight token of the brethren's esteem and admiration for the excellent manner in which he had carried out his duties. The Bye-laws were read, and Bro. Hanson gave notice of motion for the alteration in the law relating to Visitors' fees. A vote of condolence with Bro. Nicholson I.P.M. on the recent loss of his wife was unanimously agreed to. A candidate was proposed for initiation at next meeting. All business ended, Lodge was closed, and adjourned to third Monday in March, the annual installation day. The brethren partook of banquet in an adjoining room, which was well served by Bro. Phillips. The usual Masonic toasts and harmony, &c. followed.

PANMURE LODGE, No. 720.

A REGULAR monthly meeting of this Lodge was held at the Balham Hotel, Balham, S.W., on the 18th inst., the W.M., Bro. George Treves, presiding. The whole of the Officers were present, viz.: Bros. J. D. Arnold S.W., A. Leonard J.W., Geo. Lambert P.M. Treasurer, T. Poore P.M. Secretary, F. Purkiss S.D., Dr. Lewis Jones J.D., A. C. Wood I.G., S. Ash and G. Allen Stewards, C. Thomas Tyler; Past Masters James Stevens, C. Everist, and E. Mitchell, and Bros. J. A. Bell, J. Finch, W. Jones, and others. The visiting brethren were Bros. S. Richardson W.M. "Unity," Edwin George W.M. "Marquis of Ripon," and F. W. Driver P.M. "Strong Man." After confirmation of previous minutes Mr. James Burridge, already approved of by ballot, was introduced, and, in a very creditable manner, initiated into the Order, the ceremony being completed by the delivery of the charge by the Worshipful Master. A junior member of the Lodge, Bro. Bell, gave the lecture on the tracing board in the first degree, and materially assisted to maintain the reputation for good working which this Lodge has always enjoyed. In the course of the routine business at closing, the Worshipful Master referred to his proposed Stewardship at the ensuing Festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, and solicited support, which was readily accorded. "Hearty good wishes" having been, in accordance with good old custom, offered to the Worshipful Master by the respective Visitors, the Lodge was closed in due form and with solemn prayer. Dinner was served in the usual liberal and unostentatious style which has always characterised the efforts to please of Bro. Past Master George Lilley, the proprietor of the Balham Hotel, whose absence from the Lodge on this occasion, owing to his late unfortunate and very severe accident, was specially referred to, and very deeply regretted. The brethren generally expressed their gratification to learn that Bro. Lilley is now convalescing, and may be soon expected to resume active duty, and this his many Masonic friends outside the Panmure Lodge may be also pleased to hear. After the cloth was cleared, the Worshipful Master ably discharged his duty in presenting the Loyal and Masonic toasts. His own health was drunk most cordially, and in his response he congratulated the Lodge on its continued progress. The Initiate, Bro. Burridge, in well-chosen sentences, acknowledged the compliment paid him, and remarked that arrangements made by him to enter the Panmure Lodge some ten years ago had been unfortunately disturbed. He had often regretted this, and the fact that though now located at Westgate-on-Sea he had after all been "made" in Balham, would show that his regret was accompanied by an earnest intention to receive the "Light" of Freemasonry. He could but say now that if he could have conceived that the teachings of the Order and its ceremonial introduction were of so "sacred" a nature, his regret for the delay would have been increased tenfold. He should never forget the impression made upon his mind on this occasion. To the toast of the Visitors, Bros. S. Richardson, F. W. Driver, and Edwin George, respectively responded, and each stated his gratification with the work in Lodge, and his subsequent entertainment. The usual compliments were paid to the Past Masters, the Secretary and Treasurer, and the Officers, and were each briefly acknowledged. In the course of the evening Bro. G. S. Graham "looked in," and in his usual genial manner placed his musical attainments at the service of the brethren, and, accompanying the several singers, greatly added to the harmony and enjoyment of the social gathering. With the time-honoured Tyler's toast, the pleasant proceedings of the meeting were brought to a close.

KENSINGTON LODGE, No. 1767.

THE installation meeting of this Lodge was held on Saturday, at the Kensington Hotel, Russell Gardens, Kensington, when the following brethren were present: C. A. Walter J.W., J. W. Barker P.M. Treasurer, George Read P.M. Secretary, J. H. Taylor P.M., J. Metcalfe P.P.G S.W. Leicestershire and Rutland P.M., Lewis Brett P.M., R. H. Williams S.D., Arthur Barclay J.D., F. J. Oliver Organist, A. Norman I.G., J. Wiggins Steward, Robert Schofield P.M. Tyler, several lay members of the Lodge, and the following Visitors: J. R. Hubbard 463, W. W. Snelling S.D. 1541, G. Ellard W.M. 1764, W. C. Williams J W. 1585, H. J. Rose 1891, S. Cochrane 3, C. Woods 865, J. Newcastle 1892, H. G. Heywood 865, D. P. Cama W.M. 2105, S. W. Keene 898, C. J. Foakes P.M. 1891, J. Banks 834, A. H. Strong S.D. 1585, W. H. Canston P.M. 1726, H. H. Room W.M. 2090, J. F. H. Woodward Prov. G. Sec. Middlesex, W. Bassett S.D. 1892, C. W. Cunningham 1612, Jermyn Boyd P.M. 23 P.G. Steward, John A Gartley I.P.M. 205, T. W. C. Lenty W.M. 23, C. E. Soppet P.G. Steward, G. C. Harding P.M. 1238, W. W. Morgan jun., and others. After the transaction of some formal business, and the passing of a brother to the second degree, Bro. C. A. Walter was installed as Worshipful Master, and he appointed the following Officers: Williams S.W., Barclay J W., Barker P.M. Treasurer, Read P.M. Secretary, Norman S.D., Oliver J.D. and Organist, Wiggins I.G., J. Mackay and C. Heath Stewards, Schofield Tyler. After the addresses and other parts of the installation ceremony had been given, the Lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned to banquet. The usual toasts followed, the first being that of the Queen and the Craft. The Queen, the Worshipful Master said, was admired by all for her good qualities and for her desire to advance the interests of those under her rule. In proposing the health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales M.W.G.M., the W.M. felt the brethren would express the heartiest feelings in connection with the toast, as the Prince of Wales was really the one member of the Craft of whom all the brethren were especially proud. He wished it was in the power of the Grand Master to be more frequently present at Masonic meetings, to personally witness the enthusiasm of the brethren when his name was mentioned. The next toast was that of the Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers, Present and Past. They had no Grand Officer then present, but they were honoured with the company of two Past Grand Stewards and the present Provincial Grand Secretary of Middlesex, with whose names the W.M. coupled the toast. Bro. Woodward expressed his thanks for the compliment which had been paid him, and for the hearty way in which the Grand Officers Present and Past had been toasted. It had been a great pleasure to him, as he was sure it was to his Provincial Grand Master, Sir Francis Burdett, when the present Master of the Kensington Lodge was invested as one of the Wardens of the Province of Middlesex. From what he knew of their present Master he felt that the work of the Lodge would be properly carried on during the ensuing year. Bro. Woodward said that one great thing which struck him in connection with Freemasonry, and he had travelled through eleven different countries of the world—was that we could meet in Freemasonry men, relatives, and friends, whom it was impossible to meet in any other institution in the world. He had been entertained by members of the Craft in different countries, and had at all times great pleasure in being present at Masonic gatherings. Bro. Soppet followed, thanking the brethren for the compliment of being associated with the toast of Grand Officers. He briefly reviewed the system under which he and his fellow Grand Stewards were appointed, and their status at the end of their year of office. As a member of the Royal Kensington Lodge he looked upon that of which he was then a guest as a brother or a sister, and felt especial pleasure—as one of the founders and the present Father of the Royal Kensington Lodge—in making the acquaintance of brethren so intimately associated so far as name was concerned. The members of the Royal Kensington Lodge had often wondered what the Kensington Lodge was like. Now, from personal observation he should be able to report to his brethren, and he hoped the two Lodges would learn to know more of each other in consequence. He could truly say that for working and hospitality the Kensington Lodge was not to be excelled. Brother Jermyn Boyd also replied. He was gratified that he had the the opportunity of witnessing the proceedings of that day. He could but endorse the remarks of his brother Grand Steward, and bear testimony to the excellent way in which the Worshipful Master had been placed in the chair by Bro. Read the Secretary. Bro. Read then assumed the gavel. Had the Immediate Past Master of the Lodge been present he would no doubt have been better able to submit the toast of the Worshipful Master, but in his absence he would do his best. As the first Master of the Kensington Lodge, Bro. Read had had especial opportunities of judging of the ability of its present ruler. He could truly say that Bro. Walter was a thoroughly good Mason. In any case of benevolence no one could be found more ready to render any assistance that lay in his power, and as ruler of the Lodge for the coming year he felt he would add to his already acquired reputation. The Worshipful Master thanked the brethren most sincerely for the kind manner in which they had drunk to the last toast. He felt he should have a successful year, as he had good Officers and a united body of members. The brethren of the Lodge had supported him hitherto, and would no doubt do so now that he was at the head of the Lodge. The toast of the Visitors followed, the Worshipful Master giving the guests a most cordial welcome, and assuring them that his Lodge looked upon the large number of visitors as one of the most pleasing points in the day's proceedings. Most of the Visitors replied. Bro. Room, who was the first to respond, had hardly remembered he was a visitor until reminded of the fact by the W.M. coupling his name with the toast. He saw around him so many brethren with whom he was intimately associated—old friends and new—that he felt as if he was in one of his own Lodges. He was particularly pleased that he had been present that day, as he had seen the installation ceremony worked in such a manner as could not be excelled. In the course of two months' time it would be his duty—if he was spared—to instal his successor in the Hammersmith Lodge, and he felt he could not do better on that occasion than copy the working of Bro. Read as displayed that day—as far as he was able. He could not have had a better lesson than he had received in the Kensington Lodge, for which, and for a most hospital reception, he heartily thanked the brethren. Bro. Ellard desired to add his tribute of praise to the Secretary of the Lodge for the way in which he had discharged the duties of Installing Master. As Director of Ceremonies of the Province of Norths and Hunts for the past six years, Bro. Ellard had attended very many installations, but he had never seen the ceremony so ably rendered as it had been that night. Bro. Foakes felt an especial interest in the Lodge, his voice having been among the first heard in it at the time of its consecration. He was indeed pleased to witness the prosperity it was enjoying. The Worshipful Master proposed the health of the Installing Master, and Bro. Read, in replying, said he had heard so much praise of his working that night as to be almost overcome by the flattery of the brethren. If he had performed the work of installation as ably as their praises led him to believe, he was truly pleased. He felt that it was because he always strove to do his best that the compliments had been so numerous. He trusted he might always deserve the same kind feelings as had been expressed towards him that day. He really felt that so many kind expressions must really come from the hearts of those who uttered them, and he sincerely thanked them all for their kindness. The Worshipful Master felt the next toast was one which would give the brethren equal pleasure with the last—it being to the Past Masters. They all knew that the longer the Lodge was in existence the more Past Masters they got, but it was an especial pleasure to him that so many of his predecessors in the chair had been able to attend and support him on the present occasion. Bro. Barker tendered his sincere thanks for the toast, to which he hoped to have to respond for many years to come. Bro. Metcalfe followed, expressing the pleasure he felt at being present, and in seeing so grand an assembly of visitors and members. Bro. Taylor said his greatest pleasure would be to do anything he could for the Worshipful Master or any of the brethren, and he felt that all the Past Masters were actuated with feelings of a similar character. The health of the Treasurer and Secretary was next drunk. Bro. Barker felt an especial pleasure in replying on this, the fourth installation at which he had been honoured as Treasurer of the Lodge. He referred to what the Lodge had been able to do in the past on behalf of the Charities, and hoped they would be able to continue, even if not to increase their grants to the Institutions. He should like to give at least thirty guineas each year to the Charities, even if by so doing the members had to content themselves with one banquet less. Bro. Read assured the brethren he performed the duties of Secretary with especial pleasure. He considered the office the prondest in the Lodge, next to that of Master. Perhaps he was overlooking the Treasurer, but that was an honour of a somewhat different character. He trusted the brethren would support their Treasurer, who would act as a Steward at the next Festival for the Boys' School, and that the contributions he would take up would be worthy of the Kensington Lodge. The toast of the Officers was next honoured, and was replied to by the respective brethren. After this came the Charities, for which the Worshipful Master said all true Masons were proud to do anything in their power. Bro. Norman replied, recounting what had been done on behalf of the widow of an old member. The Masons had come forward and helped her at a most critical time, and the result was that the house in which she resided had been secured for her, while a sufficiency had been saved to keep her and her child. This was a practical illustration of Masonic charity, and he trusted that while he could recount so satisfactory a result it would stimulate his hearers to further acts of benevolence, and convince them that the Charity professed by Freemasons was something more than a mere name. The Tyler's toast was subsequently given, and the proceedings brought to a conclusion. Some excellent songs were given during the evening by members of the Lodge and Visitors, and the benefit of having a practical Organist in the Lodge was amply demonstrated. The result was, to our thinking, much more enjoyable than if we had had to listen to the better—but at the same time much less homely—utterances of professionals.

ALLIANCE LODGE, No. 1827.

AN emergency meeting of this Lodge was held on Wednesday, 13th instant, at the Guildhall Tavern, when there was a numerous gathering of the brethren, under the presidency of Bro. Lieut. Henry V. Wright Worshipful Master, who was supported by Bros. E. Garnet Mann, C.C., J.P.M., J. Perkins S.W., Henry Squire J.W., R. Pawley Treasurer, H. Clarke S.D., Major J. Perry Godfrey P.M. J.D., J. C. Whiddington D.C., Frank S. Jackson I.G., Fred rick A. Jewson Organist, B. Emanuel and Beaumont Morice Stewards, P.M.'s L. F. Littell P.G.P., Colonel T. Davies Sewell P.G.S., G. W. Johnson, and others. Bros. E. Pugh, C. W. Bowley, J. Henry Smith, E. F. Fitch, W. T. Roberts, Lieut. V. Dunfee, H. C. Richards, W. E. Bush, Thomas Clarke, E. Jex, C.C., W. Westcott, &c. Amongst the Visitors were A. Barbr P.M. 1585, B. Cooper S.W. 1141, J. Sawyer S.W. 985, A. Gillardoni S.W. 235. Lodge having been opened to the third, Bro. T. W. Roberts was raised to the sublime degree, the ceremony being carried out in a most admirable manner by Brother Wright. In doing so, he gave not only the traditional history, but also the lecture on the tracing board and the charge. Bro. Hill, not being in attendance, his passing was postponed. Lodge was closed in all three degrees. The W.M. again spoke of the proposition to increase the numbers of the Lodge, and brought forward certain reasons for it. He asked the members to communicate with him before the next Lodge, as he would not propose anything which they would not wish. The Lodge adjourned to banquet, the W.M. having on his left Bro. Sheriff Clarke, and on his right Bro. George Nash Johnson, C.C., Chairman of Commissioners of Sewers, and Brother L. F. Littell Past Grand Pursuivant. The Wardens occupied their respective chairs. In proposing the toast of the Queen and the Craft, the W.M. alluded to her Majesty coming out of her retirement to open Parliament, and was sure she would be well received, and that loyalty to the throne lived in the hearts of the people. In proposing the Most Worshipful Grand Master, the W.M. thought the health of the Prince of Wales had a peculiar interest in that Lodge, connected more or less with the Corporation, in the fact of the chief festival of the civic body—Lord Mayor's Day—being on the Most Worshipful Grand Master's birthday. Bro. Littell, in replying for the Grand Officers, referred to the Pro and Deputy Grand Masters, the Earls of Carnarvon and Lathom, holding office in the present Administration. He said it was a proof of the popularity of the Grand Officers that they were received everywhere with so much cordiality. Bro. Johnson proposed in kindly terms the health of the Master, and felt sure from what he had seen and heard that day, the reputation of the Lodge was quite safe in Bro. Wright's hands. He was assured the members would all support the dignity of the chair. The W.M. replied in suitable words, and before sitting down proposed the health of the new member, Bro. Sheriff Clarke. He observed it was not usual to drink the health of a joining member, but he thought they might do so on this occasion, as their new brother was one of the Sheriffs, and he felt the Lodge was honoured by Sheriff Clarke becoming a member. The Sheriff replied in a short speech, in which he observed that he had left his mother Lodge because they admitted any and every sort of person. He was pleased to join the Alliance Lodge, and if the Master could get the bye-laws altered he had a friend to propose. The Past Masters were honoured, mention being made of Bros. Sir John Monckton, Littell, Frank Green, C.C., Colonel Davies Sewell, and Garnet Mann, &c. The latter, who was the I.P.M., had had to leave early, to fulfil a political engagement at Croydon. He coupled with the toast the name of Bro. Johnson, who responded in a dignified and eloquent manner. For the Visitors Bros. Bareham Cooper, A. Boehr, J. Sawyer, and Alfred Gillardoni replied. The remaining toasts were the Officers, and Tyler's. Bros. J. Perkins, C.C., and H. Squire, C.C., replied, the former assuring the Lodge that all the Officers would do their best in their different stations, and he looked forward with pleasure to the time when he hoped to preside over the Lodge, which would not be the first time he occupied the Master's chair. A very pleasant evening was spent in social happiness and amenity.

LODGE OF KING SOLOMON, No. 2029.

THE installation meeting of this Lodge, which is the only one in London founded on the principles of total abstinence, was held on Saturday evening, 9th instant, at Saville House, Red Lion-square, when there was a goodly attendance of brethren and visitors, under the presidency of Bro. Dr. B. W. Richardson, F.R.S., Worshipful Master. He was supported by Bros. Harrison Branthwaite S.W. and W.M. elect, W. S. L. Chubb J.W., Matthew Williams S.D., T. W. Richardson J.D., Lieut. Henry V. Wright D.C., H. Maiden I.G., J. P. Baptie J.W., Matthews, R. A. Govan, H. W. Williams, A. Forrow, J. G. Goll, A. Wells, J. H. Hughes, C.C., F.R.S., C. W. Fletcher acting as Secretary, W. Memory, J. Fisher, T. Smith, J. J. Cowley, G. A. Ames P.G.S., J. Ferrier, A. Jardine, T. H. Williams, W. A. Jones, S. A. Wilkins, E. J. Mills Tyler, &c. Amongst the Visitors were Bros. W. Clarke 114 P.G.P., A. M. Broadley P.D.D.G.M. of Malta, Augustus Harris S.W. designate of the Drury-lane Lodge, No. 2127, H. T. Reid P.M. 1287, C. H. Cox 163, Benjamin Williams I.P.M. 1861, W. T. Roberts 1827, and others. Lodge was opened in due form at five o'clock, and prior to entering upon the business the W.M. referred in feeling terms to the unavoidable absence of the excellent Secretary of the Lodge, Bro. Harry Tipper, with whom the brethren heartily sympathised in the bereavement he had sustained by the death of his wife. He desired that a record of their sympathy should be expressed on the minutes of the Lodge, and this was unanimously agreed to. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the Acting-Secretary and confirmed, when Lodge was opened in the three degrees, and resuming in the second, Bro. Harrison Branthwaite was presented as the W.M. elect, and subsequently installed into the chair by Bro. Lieut. Henry V. Wright, whose admirable working elicited frequent expressions of approbation. On the re-admission of the brethren the newly installed Master was greeted, and the duties of the Officers on their investiture were explained by the Installing Master, who also delivered the charges to the Masters and Wardens, with great elocutionary effect. The collars were thus bestowed: Bros. Dr. B. W. Richardson, F.R.S., I.P.M., W. S. L. Chubb S.W., Matthew Williams J.W., Sir Philip Cunliffe Owen, K.C.M.G., C.B., C.I.E., Treasurer, Harry Tipper Secretary, T. W. Richardson S.D., Lieut. Henry V. Wright J.D., H. Maiden I.G., J. Fisher D.C., and E. J. Mills Tyler. During the installation ceremony Bro. H. W. Williams officiated as Director of Ceremonies, and Bro. J. W. Matthews presided at the organ. The Worshipful Master then said a pleasing duty devolved upon him. Those who had anything to do with the founding of this Lodge knew the great amount of work that was undertaken, cheerfully and willingly, by their I.P.M. Dr. Richardson, and they also knew the way in which he had conducted the affairs of the Lodge since its formation. It was now his (the speaker's) duty to present him, in the name of the Lodge, with a Past Master's jewel, in recognition of the services he had rendered to the Lodge. Might he long live to wear it. The I.P.M., who was received with applause, said, as the Worshipful Master had observed, it was a period of anxiety for a long time to found this Lodge, but all those difficulties which were about them had disappeared, through the truly Masonic spirit with which their proceedings had been carried out. He could say that during the two years he had been Master of the Lodge nothing could have been more in accordance with his feelings—feelings of gratitude, respect, and affection to all present—than what had occurred. The climax came when he received the first jewel ever given by this Lodge to a Master. He should wear it in remembrance of this Lodge whether in it or out of it, and he reciprocated all those feelings which had been shown towards him better than any words could convey, in that sympathy with which he approached all the members, and good feeling towards them all. Eight candidates for initiation, and one joining member, were proposed, and Lodge was then adjourned until the second Saturday in March. Later in the evening the brethren and visitors partook of an excellent banquet at Freemasons' Tavern, supplied by Messrs. Spiers and Pond. There was, of course, no wines, but substitute was provided in the shape of orange, lemon, pine-apple, raspberry, and other fruit champagnes, from the Holywell Works, Finsbury. At the conclusion of the repast the usual loyal and Craft toasts were honoured, Bro. W. Clarke P.G.P. responding for the Grand Officers. The Immediate Past Master, in proposing the health of the Worshipful Master, said Bro. Branthwaite was one of those men who always said "duty before pleasure," and a duty of an exceedingly important kind at this moment called him away, so that they would be obliged to lose his benign presence. Before he went they all wished him success, happiness, and prolonged usefulness through the coming year. The toast was received with enthusiasm, and the Worshipful Master, in response, said he was sorry it should have so happened that he had to leave them on this, to him, auspicious occasion; but those who knew what a medical man's duties were would readily sympathise with him. He was very pleased with the installation that had taken place that night. It was one that most of them would consider unexpected so far as the individual upon whom it rested was concerned. He had no idea that he should be installed as the Worshipful Master of the Lodge of King Solomon. Indeed, he had no intention of being so. This was the third time he had been raised to the sublime position of Master of a Lodge, and his intentions were quietly to have stood aside, and allowed the Junior Warden, whoever he might be at the time, to take the position. However, circumstances had turned out otherwise, and it had become, probably, his duty to take the chair at present. In doing so he could only pledge his best endeavours to carry on the work of the Lodge as it had been carried on by his predecessor; and he hoped in saying that he was saying no more than he should be prepared to fulfil. Bro. Ames then said it had fallen to his lot, in the absence of the newly-installed Worshipful Master, to propose the health of their Immediate Past Master. He felt he could not do justice to that toast. The brethren knew Dr. Richardson as well as he did, and probably better, from a Masonic point of view. He had founded the Lodge, and had now retired from the chair which he had filled in so dignified and practical a manner for nearly two years. With great humility he had the pleasure of proposing the good health of their Immediate Past Master. Bro. Richardson, who was greeted with prolonged applause, said he would not weary the company with a repetition of thanks, but proceed to the duties before him, the first of which was one of a most enthralling character. They had been charmed to-day at the manner in which the installation ceremony had been performed. From the first time he saw the working of this Lodge his eyes had been fixed on one member of it, a young man of the greatest promise, and one who bade fair in days to come to be one of the distinguished ornaments in Freemasonry. When they knew that this was Bro. Wright's maiden essay to instal, they must all have been struck with the emphasis and style of words and manner with which he had fulfilled the important duty that devolved upon him. All they could expect was done, and more. They congratulated Bro. Wright most sincerely on the advance that he was making in Masonic working, and wished that his health might be long maintained, so that those advantages might be pushed to the uttermost. Bro. J. J. Cowley having sang, in excellent voice, "The Vicar of Bray," Bro. Lieut. H. Wright rose to respond. When their Worshipful Master requested him, at their last meeting, a fortnight ago, to undertake the duty of Installing Master, he knew nothing whatever about the ceremony of installation, but he always felt that the W.M.'s request was a command, and as the W.M. asked him, he promised to do the best he could; and he was very gratified that the brethren had been pleased with his small efforts. He hoped that he should always pay due respect to the chair of this Lodge, and behave himself in every way to their satisfaction. He could assure the W.M. and his successors that they could always rely upon him for any assistance it was in his power to render them. The Acting Worshipful Master, in proposing the health of the Visitors, said he could imagine in the old days of early Freemasonry, when men worked with those tools which now only Speculative were used in an Operative sense, there could be nothing more charming than when the work was over, and the rough roof over the place tiled, that some one coming from a distant part of the world, a stranger, should tap at the door, be properly examined by the Wardens, and duly admitted as a friend, and that he should convey to those rude, yet skilful, brethren the facts that he had gathered, and the knowledge he had obtained. It must have been truly delightful in those days, when there were no railways or telegraphs, when there were nothing but the human brain as the condenser of the thoughts, thus for a man to come in and be welcome. He contended that Freemasonry lived largely on social intercourse, and it was one of the signs of its vitality that this pleasant intercourse was still kept up. The light was always burning in our Lodges for the strangers who entered them. And in this Lodge, representing King Solomon in earnest, because they were a Lodge of Lodges in that respect—for they not only placed their Master in the chair of King Solomon, but they were King Solomon itself—this Lodge of wise men made it part of their wisdom to make all strangers welcome amongst them when they got distinguished wanderers to come and tell them what they knew. To-night their Worshipful Master had missed a great treat, in not hearing the reply to this toast of one who had travelled over the whole world, picking up Masonic lore, and ready to impart it to others—a great scholar and traveller, whose Masonic knowledge was pre-eminent, who had written charming treatises and letters bearing upon the Craft, who was a Knight of Malta, and had written a history of it, who had explored, wherever explorations were to be made, after those hidden secrets, and who had come here to tell of them. He associated with the toast the name of Bro. A. M. Broadley Past District G.M. of Malta. Bro. Broadley, who was loudly cheered, said he intended to have emulated, and if possible excelled, the admirable brevity which had characterised the speeches of this evening. But in proposing this toast the Worshipful Master said so much about the humble individual who had now the honour of addressing them, that he feared if he did not say something of those distant lands in which he had worked as a Freemason, and tell them something of his experiences of Freemasonry in those countries, and his experiences both there and in England, he should very much disappoint the brethren who were now under the gavel. He should, therefore, ask them to bear with him for two or three minutes while he said something of the working of Freemasonry in those distant countries in which the banner of the Grand Lodge of England was appreciated quite as highly as it was here, and countries where the work of Freemasonry took a form which was perhaps more practical, and produced effects which in everyday life were probably more striking, than the Freemasonry with which they were familiar in this country. He must first of all express the pleasure that he felt in visiting them this evening. He was somewhat puzzled at the nomenclature of their excellent Lodge, which he thoroughly understood, and he need hardly say he really appreciated. He not only appreciated the hospitality they had tendered him, but he confessed it was a very great treat to one who was about to rejoin the ranks of London Masonry by becoming the Secretary of the new Drury Lane Lodge, which was to be consecrated on Monday fortnight, and privilege to be able to bring Bro. Augustus Harris to witness the ceremony which had been so ably worked by Bro. Wright today. It was the touchstone of true Masonic work to be able to perform the difficult ceremony of installation; and he had rarely seen it done better than that night. He thought the Lodge of King Solomon, which was of course a Lodge pre-eminent for the wisdom of its members, and in fact a Lodge which had taken upon itself a name which rather pertained to the whole Craft, might be congratulated upon so eminent a worker as Bro. Wright, and that he also could claim, in a very humble and inferior degree, some kind of connection (a very remote one) with King Solomon. Ancient Carthage had some connection with ancient Tyre, and ancient Tyre had more or less connection with King Solomon in the building of the Temple. Therefore it was perhaps appropriate for him to come from ancient Carthage to pay his respects to the Lodge of King Solomon. It was exactly eight years ago that he began to work English Masonry in Tunis, on the site of ancient Carthage. The Lodge there, he was happy to say, was surviving many vicissitudes through which that country had passed. If it had survived and flourished, as he was certain it would continue to do, it was on account of the interests and principles of English Masonry, of which they should all be proud. Foreign Masonry did not succeed in foreign countries as English Masonry did, because it embraced political and other considerations which diverted from its best and holiest purposes. In Tunis, which had become almost part of the French Republic—if there English Masonry had survived the disappearance of foreign lives, it was because men of all religions and languages came together and worked under the banner of the Grand Lodge of England, with no other devices than the holy emblems of Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth, put into practical good fellowship, which had nothing whatever to do with factions in politics or nationality. Therefore, he thought the sojourner in that distant land of Tunis, where people of many races and languages met together, would see that the success which had attended Masonry there was due to the fact that English Masonry was so very different, and he ventured to say without fear of contradiction, so very superior, to the offshoots of that Masonry—because Continental Masonry was all, more or less, an offshoot of our own, though unfortunately degenerated. He had every reason to be proud he had founded two Lodges working on the site of ancient Carthage, on which they had so many excellent Masons, on the shores of the Mediterranean. He was for some time Deputy District Grand Master of Malta, which included Tunis within its territorial jurisdiction. Malta was a half-way house to the East, a great centre of our Mediterranean commerce, and the stopping place of our troops; and it was there where Masonry exemplified the sentiments shadowed forth by their W.M. when he spoke of the Visitor's knock at the door. There were doubtless many in London who would remember the pleasure they experienced when the ship cast anchor at Malta, who had gone up to the Lodge and found the brethren meeting there; and the reception, although not so splendid as in Great Queen-street, was nevertheless most refreshing. It was his lot to work in another country of historical interest, which was closely associated with the founders of the Craft—a country which had connection even with King Solomon himself, namely, Egypt. He was taken there by his private avocations, and found English Masonry had fallen into the "sere and yellow leaf." Everything in this life sprang from individual energy, and he was pleased to find here revived the Bulwer Lodge, the sentence of death upon which had already been passed by the Grand Lodge of England. That Lodge had now become a flourishing Institution, and formed a rallying-point for our troops, who found there a Masonic centre. When one saw the energies of those countries, and found that a great deal had been done to make Masonry a point of hospitality and intercourse, which he understood was one of the great objects of Masonry, it was most gratifying. It would be an evil day for Masonry when it was brought to the level of a mere friendly society; its distinguishing characteristic was something more than a friendly society; it was a society which practised the greatest amount of benevolence and charity, combined with hospitality and social amenity and goodwill. Charity must go hand in hand with the great social feature, and this was illustrated in no better way than in the Mediterranean and in those countries which were so rich in the traditions of the Craft; where the emblems of the Craft met the eye in all directions, the old traditional Jewish emblems of which we all knew so much in English Masonry. He was glad to tell the company that a new Lodge was about to be founded in London, a Lodge which would be almost unique in its character—the Drury Lane Lodge. He was sorry that Bro. Augustus Harris, the S.W. designate, had been obliged to go away, but he asked had him to thank them for the excellent lessons in Masonry he had received at the hands of Bro. Wright that day. The Drury Lane Lodge was one that would have traditions of its own; they intended to work in a special Temple that would be fitted up within the precincts of Drury Lane Theatre; which had traditions of many old Masons who had passed away, such as Christopher Wren, and many other great men who had contributed to its fame. They hoped to establish a Lodge which should not only excel for its work and Charity, but also be given to hospitality. In endeavouring to continue working in a London Lodge, and resuming Masonic activity, which had perhaps a little slipped away, owing to the occupations of everyday life, he should be coming back to that which was certainly his first love whilst sojourning in distant lands. He thanked them for the pleasant evening they had enabled him to spend in their society, and felt sure the principles they tried to inculcate in this Lodge were those which would do honour to the Craft. He fully endorsed all that the W.M. had said as to the aims and objects of Freemasonry, and to the welcome they extended to the Visitors; and he hoped that if any of them ever went to the shores of the Mediterranean, and tapped at the door of any of the Masonic Lodges there, the truth would come home to them of what Bro. Richardson had said as to the welcome they would receive. Meanwhile, if they preferred the excellent climate of this country, as experienced within the last few days, to the sunny shores of the Mediterranean, he hoped to welcome them to the brighter skies and genial warmth which would be extended to them from the Drury Lane Lodge. Bro Ferrier then gave a humorous recitation on a "Scotch Courtship and Marriage," after which the W.M. proposed the Press, coupled with the name of the representative of this journal, who responded. The W.M. then sang "Once I Loved a Maiden Fair," and the health of the Officers of the Lodge having been proposed and acknowledged, the proceedings were brought to a close with the Tyler's toast.

CONSECRATION OF THE BROWNLOW LODGE, No. 2131.

A Provincial Grand Lodge was held at the Town Hall, Ellesmere, by Sir Offley Wakeman, Bart., for the purpose of consecrating a new Lodge, to be called the Brownlow Lodge, and numbered 2131. The brethren present were:—W. E. Harding Prov. G.J.W., the Revs. W. Humphreys and J. B. Meredith P.G. Chaplains, J. P. White P.G. Treasurer, V. C. L. Crump P.G. Reg., W. H. Spaull P.G. Secretary, J. Maclardy P.C.S.D., W. Lascelles Southwell P.G.J.D., Thomas James P.G.S. of W., T. Warren Thompson P.G.D. of C., R. A. Craig, G. J. Morgan P.G. Stand. Bearers, J. Sewell P.G. Organist, R. Blayne P.G. Assistant Secretary, J. Machin P.G.A.P., T. B. Hyde P.G. Tyler, J Smith, J. Ginders, J. Blockley P.G. Stewards, J. F. Edisbury P.G.J.W. North Wales, E. Andrews P.P.G.W., Thomas Robert and W. Putman P.P.G.D., A. T. Akeroyd P.P.G. Organist, W. B. Newnes P.P.G. Tyler, C. K. Benson P.P.G.P. North Wales, the Rev. H. K. Southwell 357, A. C. Williams 721, J. W. Lawrence 2131, E. W. Prevost 592; from Lodge 117 were W. Belton W.M., A. C. Townsend J.W. and W. J Ogg from 1124; Kyffin G. Salter and George Bonner; from 1432 J. H. Parsons I.P.M., J. Whitridge P.M., J. England S.W., J. H. Tomb and C. J. Fotherby; from 1574 Bastow W.M., from 1621 J. H. Cooksey W.M., Thomas Pratt P.M. and Secretary, and H. E. Roberts S.W. The Provincial Grand Lodge was opened, and letters were read from the Deputy P.G. Master and a number of other brethren apologising for their absence. All the Lodges of the Province were represented. The draft by-laws for governing the P.G. Lodge were submitted by the Committee appointed to draw them up, and after a few amendments, were approved. The R.W.P.G.M., assisted by the P.G. Secretary, then proceeded to consecrate the Brownlow Lodge, No. 2131. The Lodge was opened in the three degrees, and Bro. Rev. W. Humphreys P.G. Chaplain delivered an oration, in which he congratulated the R.W.P.G.M. that his first official act since his installation should be to consecrate a new Lodge, also that Masonry was increasing in the Province. This was a matter of congratulation in these days of controversy, as the Masonic Lodge was common ground on which men of all creeds and politics could meet as brothers. Prayer having been offered by the Rev. J. B. Meredith P.G. Chaplain, and the censer with incense having been carried round the Lodge, the Lodge was solemnly dedicated by the R.W.P.G.M. The Provincial Grand Lodge was then closed. The R.W.P.G.M., assisted by Bros. V. C. L. Crump P.G. Reg. and T. Warren Thompson P.G.D. of C., installed Brother E. W. Provost the first W.M. of the Brownlow Lodge, who, after the ceremony was completed, invested the following Officers:—Bros. A. T. Akeroyd S.W., W. J. Ogg J.W., K. G. Salter Treasurer, the Rev. H. K. Southwell S.D., the Rev. H. Poole King J.D., J. W. Lawrence I.G. The names of several gentlemen were proposed for initation. The by-laws were approved, and after hearty good wishes the Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to the Bridgewater Hotel, where a banquet was excellently served by Bro. Lawrence. The Loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and it was announced that the Provincial Grand Master, Sir Offley Wakeman, Bart., had consented to preside at the Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, in May 1887, at the Freemasons' Hall, London.

UNVEILING A STATUE OF BRO. SIR HENRY EDWARDS.

ON 13th instant a statue of Sir Henry Edwards was unveiled at Weymouth, amidst great rejoicings, by the Mayor (Mr R. N. Howard). From 1866 to 1885, when the town ceased to be a parliamentary borough, Sir Henry Edwards represented it in the Liberal interest, and during that time his acts of munificence were many and great, his latest being to invest £5,000 for the benefit of the aged poor of the town. It is in order to perpetuate the memory of his public services, munificent charities, and private worth, that a statue, erected by public supscription, at a coast of 800 guineas, has been provided and placed at an angle of the Alexandra Gardens. The work was entrusted to Messrs. W. and T. Wills, of Gower-Street, London, who have produced a splendid work of art and a faithful likeness. The statue, which is 8ft. high, is carved out of Sicilian marble, standing upon a pedestal of Cornish grey granite 10ft high. It is in the Italian style, engraved with appropriate mouldings, and is altogether a splendid piece of workmanship. One remarkable feature in connection with this memorial was the ready manner in which all classes of the town contributed towards it. The whole of the friendly and benefit societies of the town formed a procession, which, meeting with the Mayor and Corporation at the Guildhall, proceeded to the statue. The weather was most unfortunate in the early part of the morning, and threatened to mar the whole of the proceedings, but fortunately about eleven o'clock sunshine followed the rain and wind, and the unveiling ceremony was performed under fairly favourable circumstances. Amongst the distinguished visitors present were Sir Robert Fowler, M.P. (Ex-Lord Mayor of London), Sir Charles Forster, M.P., and Sir Gabriel Goldney, personal friends of Sir Henry Edwards, who is at present a guest of the Mayor. Mr. Robins, hon. Secretary of the Memorial Committee, detailed the many acts of benevolence and generosity which had marked Sir Henry Edwards's connection with the town, and then formally handed over the possession of the statue to the Mayor on behalf of the town. The Mayor took occasion to point out how in former times Weymouth was the only place besides London which returned four members to Parliament. The town had always been able to boast of its representatives in the House of Commons, not only of a Cecil, but of Sir Christopher Wren, Sir James Thornhill, Sir Fowell Buxton, and Sir Henry Edwards. Sir Robert Fowler said the inhabitants of Weymouth were doing honour to one who worthily succeeded those the Mayor had mentioned. All in the House of Commons appreciated Sir Henry Edwards's genial presence, and it was a source of great regret that he was no longer with them. As a citizen of London he (Sir Robert) could bear testimony to the great regard in which Sir Henry was held by all who came in contact with him, and he was very glad to see that the burgesses of Weymouth had shown their appreciation of the excellence of their late member by erecting in his lifetime this statue. Sir Charles Forster said he had been a member of the House of Cummons for 33 years, during 20 of which he had been connected with Sir Henry Edwards by ties of the closest friendship. The great characteristic of that gentleman was his universal popularity, both in and out of the House. Though he was no longer their member, he was sure his memory would be long cherished by the people of Weymouth, and the erection of this statue to him evinced that they desired to remember his long services and many acts of benevolence. In order still further to perpetuate this memory of the past, he suggested that the Town Council should exercise the right granted them in the last session of Parliament by conferring on Sir Henry the honorary freedom of the borough. Sir H. Edwards's annual dinner to the aged poor took place in the afternoon. All the school children were feasted with tea and cake, the various benefit societies had either suppers or teas, and in the evening a banquet took place at the Royal Hotel, at which Sir Henry Edwards was the honoured guest of the gathering, and received a most gratifying reception. In responding to the toast of his health, he traced his association with Weymouth, and referred to the long and lasting friendships he had formed. He said that failing health prevented him going through the wear and tear of a contested election for the county, but had a member been returned for Weymouth he would have tried to be that member, or have died in the attempt.

ROYAL EAR HOSPITAL, FRITH STREET, SOHO.—The useful charity held its annual general meeting in the rooms of the Institution on Tuesday, the 12th inst. It is one of the oldest and most deserving of special hospitals; and during the 70 years it has been established, over 120,000 patients have been treated for various ear diseases within its walls. The report of the surgeons, Dr. Urban Pritchard, F.R.C.S., and Dr. F. Matheson, C.M., was read. From it we learn that during 1885 there were 7,796 out-patient attendances, at which 2,463 separate cases received careful treatment. Forty-four patients were admitted into the in-patient wards, all serious cases and mostly children. This new department was reported to be a very great success, although it had considerably added to the expenditure. The accounts for 1885 were audited and passed. The financial condition of the hospital was shown to be far from satisfactory, as there was a considerable falling off in donations and subscriptions, funds are therefore urgently needed to prevent a reduction in the number of beds. A vote of thanks to surgeons, treasurer and secretary brought the proceedings to a close.

FINANCIAL TABLES FOR THE YEAR.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I was pleased indeed to read Bro. Earle's letter, and to find that the Province of Herefordshire has contributed so munificiently to the various Institutions, but if this Province chooses to hide its brilliant light from the Masonic world, I trust to be excused if I fall into error. I am afraid our worthy Brother Earle must have been suffering from a fit of chafing if he could see anything but good-natured criticism in the remarks I made. I can assure him that "I nothing extenuate, nor set down aught in malice." I simply took my figures from the Festival Reports, and my object is, and ever will be, to remind the backward Provinces how small a sum they contribute as against the large amounts they take from the funds of the several Institutions. Likewise to stimulate to further exertion. As, however, these conditions of receiving does not apply to the Province of Herefordshire, such a condemnation as Bro. Earle has favoured me with was uncalled for.

Yours fraternally,

"HEARTY GOOD WISHES."

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have observed in certain Lodges of late, and with regret, a hesitation on the part of Visitors to address those greetings to the Worshipful Master which it has been, for the past thirty years, to my knowledge, the general custom amongst Freemasons to offer just previous to the closing of the work in Lodge.

On inquiry, I learn that a doubt has been expressed as to the propriety of any individual brother Visitor, not himself the Master of a Lodge, presuming to convey hearty good wishes in the name of the Lodge from which he hails, it being assumed that he has no direct authority from his Lodge so to do; and that this doubt is influencing some brethren who prefer to follow a lead without reasoning for themselves as to the direction towards which it tends.

It appears to many of my Masonic friends, and to myself, somewhat late in the day to make innovation in respect of a practice which, though not especially ordained, is, nevertheless, lex non scripta amongst Masons, having very much to recommend it, and, as far as one can surmise, nothing objectionable in its performance; and it will certainly require the exercise of considerable authority, and the exposition of strong reasons, to secure a general acquiescence in this proposed departure from Masonic etiquette.

If there were the slightest interference with any prerogative possessed by our "Rulers in the Craft," an argument for the abrogation of the custom might exist, but there is none such. The equality of Freemasons, qua Freemasons, places all present in a Lodge, except merely in respect of official duty then in course of performance, on a level, and one brother has as much right as another, nay, it is even his bounden Masonic duty, to be courteous to his hosts, and to offer his salutations on behalf of himself and his usual Lodge companions. How the reverse proposition can be maintained I know not, and should be glad to learn positively on what grounds the abandonment of the Visitors' pleasant greeting is sought for.

Yours truly and fraternally,

JAMES STEVENS P.M. P.Z.

Clapham, 16th January 1886.

"SIGN THE BOOK, BRETHREN, PLEASE."

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Have you ever heard the above expression as the brethren are filing out of the Lodge room to the banqueting hall? No doubt you have; but have you ever turned back over the leaves of the book and admired the pretty pictures (?) there presented? I attended a Lodge meeting the other night, and was anxious to see how many years had elapsed since my last visit. What a set of hieroglyphics met my astonished gaze! Zounds! what signatures. And how blotchy and blotty and smeared the pages were. It seemed to me that there had been a sort of caligraphic earthquake amongst the signatures, for they ran higgledy-piggledy one into another, and were leaning in all directions, like you often see tombstones in an old disused churchyard. It surely cannot be that the brethren are "top-heavy" when they enter the Lodge, whatever they may be later on. But there the names were at all manner of angles and tangents, smudged with blots—such wretched scrawls! Many were the signatures of foreign brethren, difficult enough to decipher under the most favourable circumstances, but utterly unintelligible now. The reason was not far to seek. At that hotel, which shall be nameless, they appeared to have raked up the oldest and most worn-out quill pens that could be found amongst the sweepings of an office, and with them the brethren were expected to sign legibly! How was it possible? Why you might just as well have dipped a lucifer match into the inkpot.

I mention this, not as an isolated case, and brethren will agree with me that the fault is a very common one amongst hotel proprietors to be too economical, and unwisely so, in respect to the writing materials they supply for Masonic purposes. My contention is that books, if kept at all, should be well kept, and that the brethren should be provided with proper writing materials. If a boy at school blot his copy-book he gets his ears boxed for his slovenly stupidity. If a clerk in the office commits such an offence often in his master's ledger, the chances are that his notice to quit comes upon him earlier than is congenial to his feelings. Why, then, should not a Masonic attendance book be kept in the same cleanly, tidy manner? The attendance book is a permanent record, to which brethren like to refer at frequent intervals; and to see the pages smudged and blotted in the way they often are must be a source of irritation and annoyance to many besides,

Yours fraternally,

CACOETHES SCRIBENDI.

A Masonic Ball, under the auspices of the five Leicester Lodges, in aid of the Masonic Charities, will be held at the County Assembly Rooms, Leicester, which have been granted for the purpose by Sir Henry St. John Halford, Bart., P.D.G.M. Leicester and Rutland, who has also lent his patronage to the Ball, on Tuesday, 16th February 1886. The gathering will also be under the distinguished patronage of the Right Honourable the Earl of Carnarvon M.W. Pro Grand Master of England, the Right Honourable the Earl of Lathom R.W. Deputy Grand Master of England, the Right Honourable the Earl Ferrers R.W. Prov. G.M. Leicestershire and Rutland, His Grace the Duke of St. Albans R.W. Prov. G.M. Nottinghamshire, the Most Noble the Marquis of Hartington, M.P., R.W. Prov. G.M. Derbyshire, William Kelly, Esq., F.S.A., F.R. Hist. Soc., R.W. Past Prov. G.M. Leicestershire and Rutland, S. S. Partridge, Esq., Deputy Prov. G.M. Leicestershire and Rutland, George Toller, Esq., P.G.S.B. England, Past Deputy Prov. G.M. Leicestershire and Rutland, His Worship the Mayor of Leicester Israel Hart, Esq. Brethren will wear full Masonic clothing, and Officers of the Army, Navy, and Auxiliary Forces are invited to appear in uniform. Tickets, which will include supper and light refreshments, —12s 6d each, double ticket 21s—may (upon the introduction of a Mason) be obtained from any member of the Ball Committee. Nicholson's Royal Quadrille Band, under the direction of Bro. Henry Nicholson, has been engaged. Further information can be obtained of Bro. S. A. Marris, Hon. Sec., Freemasons' Hall, Leicester.

An entertainment was given at the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, Wood Green, on Saturday, the 16th inst., by a number of ladies and gentlemen who take considerable interest in the School and those cared for in it. Several songs and recitations were first given, these were followed by a farce, in one act, by W. Martin, Esq., entitled "D'ye know me now?" which was itself succeeded by more songs, recitations, &c. A pleasant evening was spent by all who listened to the performances. We were pleased to see that the boys, who had that day returned to School after their holidays, were accorded the place of honour during the entertainment, they occupying the front rows of the auditorium.

The Ball of the Royal Savoy Lodge took place on Wednesday, the 13th inst., at Freemasons' Tavern, Great Queen Street, and proved to be one of the most successful gatherings ever held in connection with the Craft; there being two hundred and eighty-five guests present. Dancing was carried on with enthusiasm until close on midnight, when supper was served in the Crown and Glee Rooms. A feature of the supper was that it was served hot—a veritable Masonic banquet, as many of those present observed. After supper, dancing was resumed, and the festivities were kept up until a late hour. Brother J. W. Smith the W.M. of the Lodge and the Committee of the Ball were most assiduous in the discharge of their duties, and have the gratification of knowing that their efforts proved successful. Great praise is also due to the manager of the Tavern, for his exertions on this occasion; he was most energetic in securing the comfort of all assembled, and his attention added considerably to the enjoyment.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Indigestion and Liver Complaints.—The digestion cannot be long or seriously disordered without the derangement being perceptible on the countenance. These Pills prevent both undue and excessive waste; they improve the appetite, and with the increase of desire for food, they augment the powers of digestion and assimilation in the stomach. Holloway's Pills deal most satisfactorily with deranged or diseased conditions of the many organs engaged in extracting nourishment for our bodies from our various diets—as the liver, stomach and bowels, over all of which they exercise the most salutary control. By resorting at an early stage of this malady to these purifying and laxative Pills, the dyspeptic is speedily restored to health and strength, and his sallowness gradually vanishes.

GREY FRIARS LODGE, No. 1101.

THE regular meeting was held on Wednesday, 13th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Reading. Bros. Prickett, W.M., Dowsett acting I.P.M., Ravenscroft S.W., Creed J.W., Bennett acting S.D., Briggs acting J.D., Stransom Treasurer, Greenaway Secretary, Pulley P.M. D.C., Slaughter I.G., Sherwin (a visitor of No. 1024) acting as Organist, Hemmings Tyler. P.M.'s Bros. Hurley, Blackwell, Margrett; also Bros. Brown, Parkes, Stewart, Jones, Smallwood. Visitors—Bros. Lindars 1714, Nichols P.M. 1714, Banting W.M. 1714, Blyth Secretary 1714, Staniford Steward 1714, W.M. 2043, Cook jun. Treasurer 2043, Stubington Secretary 2043, Millard Steward 2043. Lodge was opened, and the minutes of last regular meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. Smallwood, a candidate for degree of F.C., having answered the usual questions in a very satisfactory manner, was entrusted and retired. Lodge was opened in the second, and Bro. Smallwood was re-admitted and passed, the ceremony being correctly performed by the W.M. Bro. Jones, a candidate to be raised, gave satisfactory proof of his zeal, and in due course was raised to the sublime degree; the ceremony was performed by the W.M. in a very impressive manner. Later on Bro. Danks's motion, "That the sum of £10 10s from the funds of the Lodge be voted and added to the W.M.'s list, on his attendance at the Festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution," was proposed, in the mover's absence, by Bro. Dowsett; it was seconded by Bro. Ravenscroft S.W. and carried. Bro. Pulley moved a resolution that a petition be presented from this Lodge to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, on behalf of the son of Bro. Freeman P.M., for election into that Institution; this was seconded by Bro. Stransom (Treasurer) and carried. Bro. Margrett P.M. proposed, as a joining member to this Lodge, Bro. H. G. Sherwin, Professor of Music, of the St. Peters Lodge, No. 1024; this was seconded by Bro. Ravenscroft, and carried. After the usual routine the Lodge was closed according to ancient form, and adjourned.

LEOPOLD LODGE, No. 1571.

THE installation meeting of this comparatively sound, but prosperous Lodge, was held on Monday, the 11th inst., at the Bridge House Hotel, London Bridge, when there was a large and influential attendance of the members and visiting brethren. Lodge was opened in accordance with ancient rites, and after the minutes of the last meeting had been read and confirmed, Bro. Duffield was presented for the benefit of installation, the ceremony being admirably rendered by Bro. Youngman P.M. The newly-installed Master having been saluted with the customary honours, invested his Officers for the ensuing year, as follow:—Bros. S. Greenwood S.W., Bowley J.W., Correy S.D., Jones J.D., Packer I.G., H. J. Layton D.C., Kemble W.S., J. Penny P.M. Secretary, H. Sawtell Treasurer. At the conclusion of the business, the brethren and Visitors partook of an excellent banquet, when the usual Loyal and Craft toasts were duly honoured and responded to, the proceedings of the evening being diversified by a choice selection of vocal and instrumental music.

HONOR OAK LODGE, No. 1986.

THE election meeting of this Lodge was held at the Bridge House Hotel, London Bridge, on Wednesday, 9th inst. Brother H. M. Williams opened the Lodge at 5.30 p.m., supported by his Officers:—Bros. H. Stokes S.W., J. W. Hartley J.W., W. Hopekirk P.M. Treas., John Hammond P.M. P.P.G.D. Middlesex Secretary, H. Hooper S.D., A. Darch P.M. J.D., J. Fuller as I.G., F. France D.C., J. H. Worstencroft A.D.C., W. H. Simons Organist, G. R. Langley Assistant Secretary, C. Shepperd Tyler. There were also present Bros. C. H. Phillips I.P.M. J.W., Hiscox P.M., Arter, Bennett, Mordey, T. Letchford, J. Letchford, R. L. Lawson, W. H. O'Reilly, E. Bye sen., and other members. The Visitors were Bros. S. Richardson W.M. 183, J. Harling W.M. 30, James Stevens P.M. 720, 1216, 1426, C. Wise P.M. 1158, W. H. Williams P.M. 101, John Mason P.M. 309 P.P.G.S.D. Middlesex, G. W. Knight S.W. 1507, E. C. Hiscox S.W. 1159, Sydney Hill Organist 1216, E. Schultz 1745, J. Nunnerly 1815, J. Pike 1586, J. Sutton 1558, and E. Bye jun. 141. The minutes of the previous meeting were read by the Assistant Secretary, and confirmed. A ballot was taken for the initiation of Mr. William Taylor Cue, which was declared clear. Bros. C. W. Bennett and W. W. Arber proved proficiency, and were passed to the F.C. degree, Mr. Cue being then in attendance, was introduced and initiated into the mysteries of the Order. The respective ceremonies were very ably rendered by the W.M., and were made more than usually impressive by the perfect working of the several Officers, and the appropriate musical accompaniments by Bro. Sydney Hill, who officiated as Organist. The election of Bro. Henry Stokes as W.M. for the ensuing year, by unanimous vote of the Lodge (which was a foregone conclusion, that worthy brother enjoying the highest esteem of every member), was announced amidst acclamation; as was also the re-election of Bro. Hopekirk P.M. as Treasurer. Bro. C. Shepperd was elected Tyler. On the proposition of Bro. C. H. Phillips I.P.M. a Past Master's jewel, of the Lodge pattern, was voted for presentation to the retiring Worshipful Master Bro. Williams, as a well-deserved recognition of valuable services, and a zealous and faithful discharge of the duties of the chair during the past year. The Bye-Laws of the Lodge were then read by the Assistant Secretary, Bro. G. R. Langley, who, prior to the closing of business, made a very earnest and feeling appeal to the brethren for assistance on behalf of Richard Turner Groombridge, a candidate for election to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and a son of the late Bro. Groombridge, publisher, of Paternoster Row. The special nature of this case made Bro. Langley's appeal one which deserved and received the sympathy of the brethren, and in the result promises of material support were given, both as regarded Lodge votes and those of individual members. "Hearty good wishes," that good old form of expressing the courtesy of guests toward their hosts, and of cementing Masonic friendships and the bond of union between our several Lodges, having been exchanged, the Lodge was closed in due form. Shortly afterwards the brethren assembled for dinner, and on the clearance of the cloth the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were briefly given from the chair. The health of the W.M., proposed by Brother C. H. Phillips I.P.M., was drank with great cordiality, and the toast was ably responded to by Brother Williams, who modestly transferred a portion of the laudatory remarks of the proposer to his Officers for their combined exertions in perfecting the ceremonial and other work of the Lodge during his term of office, and so enabling him to vacate the chair of K.S. with credit to himself and satisfaction to all the members. The Initiate was also well received, and after the E.A. song in his honour, sung by Brother James Stevens, had been heartily "chorussed," Brother Cue expressed his great satisfaction with the introduction into Freemasonry he had that evening received, and the hope that the solemnity of the ceremony might continue to influence his future career as a member of the Order. The Masonic Charities, a toast which is far too frequently placed too low down in the list to receive that attention which its importance demands, was next given by the W.M., who referred to his intention to act as one of the Stewards at the approaching Festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, and solicited support. He knew the present need of that Institution for generous assistance this year to maintain its power to help those of our Order who had borne the "heat and burden of the day," and who now, in their old age, required the careful and substantial sympathy of their former associates. He was very pleased to see Brother John Mason, the esteemed Collector for the Institution, present as a guest, and would couple his name with the toast. Bro. Mason in response acknowledged the service about to be rendered by the Worshipful Master, and in a very forcible speech emphatically pressed the undoubted necessity for a strong effort to maintain the efficiency of the particular Charity with which he is connected. The falling off in number of Stewards this year, as compared with the last (no less than 60 or 70), the late increase of liability, and the present increase in the number of candidates for election, were subjects of great anxiety to his Committee, their Secretary, Brother Terry, and himself, and he trusted that whilst time afforded the opportunity, for there was yet an interval of six weeks before the Festival, the laudable example of the W.M. and members of the Honor Oak Lodge would be emulated by many other Lodges. For the extremely cordial welcome given by the W.M. to the Visitors individual responses were made by those present, one and all expressing the pleasure the proceedings of the evening had afforded them. The remaining toasts — the Past Masters, the Officers, and the Tyler's—were duly proposed and acknowledged, and the brethren then separated. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Brother W. H. Simons, the Organist of the Lodge, who sang two or three, of his best songs, in fine style, and was assisted by Brother Sydney Hill Organist 1216, and by the vocal efforts of Bros. Darch, James Stevens, and others.

The consecration of the Drury Lane Lodge, No. 2127 will take place on Monday next, 25th inst., at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-steeet, at 2.45 p.m. Bro. Lord Londesborough P.G.S.W. of England is the W.M. designate, Bro. Augustus Harris the S.W., and Bro. Sir John Eldon Gorst, Q.C., M P., Solicitor-General, the J.W. The Grand Secretary will perform the ceremony of consecration.

The installation meeting of the Sincerity Lodge, No. 174, was held on Wednesday, 20th instant, at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street, when Bro. Frederick Joseph Dellow was installed as Worshipful Master. We shall give a report of the proceedings in our next issue.

At yesterday's meeting of the House Committee of the Royal Masonic Institutions for Boys, it was arranged that the new buildings for the Preparatory School be formally opened for the reception of the candidates elected in October last. An inspection of the new buildings was to take place at three o'clock; the reception of elected boys, in the New Assembly Hall at four; while refreshments were to be served in the dining hall of the new buildings at five. We hope to give further details next week.

A dispensation has been granted for the brethren of the Craft and Mark degrees to wear their Masonic clothing at the Ball in connection with the Chiswick Lodge, No. 2012, which takes place on Friday, 29th instant, at the Star and Garter Hotel, Kew Bridge.

The following Festivals were held at the Freemasons' Tavern during the week ending Saturday, 23rd January 1886:—

Monday—Grand Master's Lodge, Royal Albert Lodge, Mr. Amber's Dinner. Tuesday—Cadogan Lodge, Salisbury Lodge. Wednesday—Novomagians, Grand Stewards' Lodge, Oak Lodge, Metropolitan Dairymen's Ball. Thursday—Universal Lodge, Great Northern Lodge, St. Mary's Lodge, Globe Lodge. Friday—Jerusalem Lodge, London, Ross and Cromarty Ball, Emulation Lodge, Peace and Harmony Lodge, Urban Lodge. Saturday—St. James's Soirée, Bachelor's Quadrille Party.

The Millais Exhibition.—In the Grosvenor Galleries we have a very typical, though not complete, collection of Sir John Millais' works, which allows the younger generation another chance of seeing the pictures which first raised such a storm thirty-five years ago. From the earlier pictures we miss the "Vale of Rest," and from the latest "Cinderella," and "Cherry Ripe," but we get a very good notion of the scope of the work, and of the right to be called a great artist which is claimed by his admirers for the exhibitor. The work of arranging the pictures has not been particularly well performed, as the different periods appear to be mixed somewhat at random, and though this sometimes makes an effective contrast, as when we find the "Carpenter's Shop" and the "Portrait of Henry Irving" visible at a glance, it is unsatisfactory, in that we cannot see the development, or rather the various phases, of the artist's labours. And why does Mr. Stephens trouble us with extracts from all the past inanities of criticism, laudatory as well as vituperative, unless it be to excite derision? Who is interested, for instance, in the opinion of "a critic of the time," that "the Rescue" is one of those subjects which illustrate our ideal of the proper functions of art? Mr. Stephens himself is sometimes comic. Concerning the "Huguenot," we are told "profound emotions disturb her countenance, and absorb our admiration; but if we conceive the features undisturbed by anxiety or terror their loveliness becomes apparent, and the painter's art is rightly estimated." That is to say, if we avoid looking at the picture we begin to appreciate it. Concerning the "Black Brunswicker," Mr. Stephens says, "it was the intention of the painter to render, in the expression and air of the "Black Brunswicker, that soldier's sense of the renewed loss to his country at Ligny." This is interpretation with a vengeance. It must be conceded that as a mere taker of likenesses Sir John Millais excels. He has to an almost marvellous extent that faculty, more dramatic than artistic, of throwing himself into the character of his subject; of subordinating his own individuality to that of his sitter, a quality which is much appreciated in a portrait painter. But this lack of individuality also touches the vital distinction of the artist. Now he is Rossetti, now an early Italian, now Gainsborough, now Titian, now Reynolds, and within the last few years he has very nearly been respectable dull Frank Holl—but he is never himself. The large canvas, "Hearts are trumps," in which the heads of the three ladies are really admirably painted, is simply spoilt as a picture by the way in which he has crammed into one canvas what really belongs to half-a-dozen. It looks as if the inlaid card tables in the foreground were put there merely to show some foolish people that John Millais can paint card tables so as to look exactly like real ones. The flowers on the left are not in it—they have no business there whatever. The grey dresses are merely fidgetting and distracting, instead of being of a piece with the heads; and so throughout the picture, which is really one of his best. There is not much to choose in all his various "manners," but in mere quality he has distinctly deteriorated with prosperity. Note the delicacy, the reverence, the simplicity, almost to childishness, of the quality of painting in the Isabella, and then compare it with that of his later and popular works, such as the North-west Passage. But there is really no occasion to mourn over Millais, as some critics are doing over "The Lost Leader." He never was a leader,—only a follower. All that can be said is, that if Millais had come under the influence of a true artist, he might have been a better workman. As it is, Millais is a master of the brush and palette, a consummate imitative genius, a great interpreter of character, a man of much natural refinement, but a great artist—never.

Novelty.—"The Babes" must be getting pretty old by now, nevertheless they seem none the less attractive than when they first saw light on a public stage. They have made a small fortune for more than one house—and their domicile has been so frequently changed that it would be hardly possible to describe them as of any particular locale. They have now settled down in London, at the Novelty, where they are drawing full houses, and are sending the audiences away night after night with sides aching from the laughter they provoke. The principal parts are still sustained by Bros. Lionel Brough and Willie Edouin, with Miss Alice Atherton, while these artistes are supported by a strong company. As "The Babes" will have to make room ere long for a new burlesque, by Mr. George Dance, we advise our readers to take an early opportunity of paying them a visit, at the Novelty.

Tredegar Lodge of Instruction, No. 1625.—Held at the Wellington Arms, Wellington-road, Bow. At the weekly meeting on Thursday, the 14th instant, there was a numerous attendance of the brethren to meet Bro. T. J. Barnes, who presided; Bros. B. Stewart S.W., W. H. Myers J.W., Moss S.D., B. Da Costa J.D., Maloney I.G., C. N. Fox Hon. Secretary. Lodge was opened, and the minutes read and confirmed. Lodge was resumed to the first, when the lecture was worked by the following:—Bros. L. A. Da Costa, Isaacs, E. Da Costa, Moss, Myers, and Stewart. Lodge was resumed to the second degree. Bros. B. Da Costa, Musto, Myers, Horg, and McDonald worked the lecture. Lodge resumed to the third degree. Bros. Moss, McDonald, and Musto worked the lecture. Lodge closed in the third and second degrees in due form. Bro. Moss proposed, and Bro. Musto seconded, that Bros. L. A. Costa, Rosenthal, Isaacs, Beatly, Mead, Warman, Toole, Culver, Smith, and West become members of this Lodge of Instruction. This was carried unanimously. Bro. Musto proposed, and Bro. Myers seconded, that a vote of thanks be recorded to Bro. Barnes for presiding, and Bro. Musto expressed the great pleasure it gave him and the brethren to see Bro. Barnes again amongst them. Bro. Barnes, in thanking the brethren, said it gave him a deal of pleasure and satisfaction in presiding that evening, and at seeing so many young Masons working so efficiently, and proposed that a vote of thanks be recorded on the minutes to the Officers and Brethren who had so ably assisted him. Bro. Cary seconded the proposition, which was carried unanimously. The Lodge was closed in due form, and adjourned until the 21st instant.

Chiswick Lodge of Instruction, No. 2012.—On Saturday, 9th inst., at the Windsor Castle Hotel, Hammersmith. Present: Bros. George Gardner (Treasurer) W.M., Wing S.W., Gomm J.W., Johnson Secretary, Williams S.D., Brown J.D., Stroud I.G., Weeks Tyler, Past Masters Bros. Ayling, Johnson, Pierpoint, Pardue, Recknell, Spiegel, Gilbert, Sims, Dodson 834, Hardy 201, Bros. Williams, Davis, Hopkins, Walden, Tilbury, Furze, Smither, Wimpsay, Wood, Craggs. Lodge opened in the three degrees, and resumed to second, when the ceremony of installation was most ably rendered by Bro. Ayling P.M. The Officers were invested by the Worshipful Master, after which the ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Williams candidate. Lodge closed in perfect harmony. This was a most successful meeting, at the new quarters of the Lodge of Instruction. Brethren are earnestly invited.

"Dr. G. H. JONES, F.R.S.L., the well-known Surgeon-Dentist of 57 Great Russell Street, London, has just re-issued his popular treatise on the teeth, which should be read by every one wishing to have a good and sound set of teeth; 'Painless and Perfect Dentistry' is its title, which will be found fully justified on perusal of its pages, as many hints for the guidance of those seeking a really practical and scientific dental surgeon will be found. The care and treatment of the teeth, with much useful information concerning the mouth and its molars, is contained therein, and we cord ally commend thi brochure of Dr. G. H. Jones, to the attention of our readers, which will be found a true guide, philosopher, and friend. The concluding chapters of the book are devoted to a description of the Author's method of dental treatment, which has obtained so high a reputation, and which seems to realise the desideratum of 'holding the mirror up to nature.'"—The Brighton Standard, December 1885.

Freemason's Chronicle;

A WEEKLY RECORD OF MASONIC INTELLIGENCE.

Registered at the G.P.O. as a Newspaper.

Reports of United Grand Lodge are published with the Special Sanction of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the Most Worshipful the Grand Master of England.

VOL. XXIII.—No. 577. SATURDAY, 30th JANUARY 1886. [PRICE THREEPENCE. 13s 6d per annum, post free.

"HASTEN SLOWLY."

SO much has been said and written within the last few weeks on the subject of Masonic benevolence, and the demands made upon the resources of the Craft, that a brief consideration of cause and effect in these particulars may not be inopportune at the present time. It is conceded all round—and we almost tire of hearing it reiterated at Masonic banquets—that since the accession of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales to the Grand Mastership, Freemasonry has made rapid strides in numbers and popularity. Unquestionably this is the case, as our Calendars testify, the numbers of the Lodges on the roll of the Grand Lodge of England having increased nearly seven hundred within the last decade. This may be a matter for congratulation in some respects; but, as we have had occasion frequently to demonstrate, it has been not altogether an unmixed good. Numerical strength in Freemasonry is not so much sought after as it is in friendly societies, for obvious reasons; and although we welcome within the pale of the Institution all upright and discreet men, there is too much reason to fear that many are induced to join its ranks from mercenary or other unworthy motives. The enormous number of candidates for the benefits of our Institutions is a subject for serious and earnest consideration at the present moment, and the fact reminds us that not much caution has been exercised as to the selection of candidates for the mysteries and privileges of our Order. We frequently hear it urged, especially by Past Masters who have seen the disadvantages arising from an indiscriminate admission into Lodges, that a greater degree of caution should be exercised by proposers and seconders, who are probably better acquainted with the status of those whom they desire to see introduced than are the other brethren who have to decide the result of the ballot. On the other hand, we are told that "no Lodge can flourish without Initiates," and a good deal of nonsense is talked about the "infusion of new blood." No objection could be taken to these ideas if the aspirants for Masonic benefits were proved to be capable of fulfilling their responsibilities. But how often such is not the case is apparent as every Festival comes round, when the demands upon our Charities are described as "utterly beyond the powers of the executive to cope with." This is a question that is continually cropping up, and leads us to inquire as to how far the boundaries of Masonic obligations to assist should extend. At a Lodge meeting not long ago an application was made by one who had been initiated there at least 30 years ago, who after paying a nominal subscription for five years seceded, though he subsequently joined another Lodge, to which he was a regular subscriber for twenty years or more. This brother had evidently been an active Mason, and ostensibly had done good suit and service to the Craft, otherwise on being overtaken by reverses he would not, on petition, have been relieved by one of the largest grants it is in the power of the Board of Benevolence to bestow. That fact alone was ample evidence that the brother in question had worked himself up into a position of considerable standing. Since his reverses he has been elected on the funds of the Benevolent Institution, and his total income at the present time is the annuity which he receives from that Charity. But again he is hard pressed, and being faced with serious demands upon his resources, he finds the means placed at his disposal by the bounty of the Craft totally inadequate to meet his requirements; he therefore comes back to the Lodge which he has not entered for years, and asks the brethren to recommend his petition to the Board. As a matter of course, a considerable amount of discussion arose on the question, in the course of which details of the facts, as stated now, were elicited. Then the case was argued, how far the Lodge was justified in supporting such a claim? To ignore it altogether would appear, and would probably be, cruel; but in answer to the argument as to why the applicant did not go to the Lodge to which he had regularly subscribed for upwards of twenty years? the reply was that his necessities were urgent, and that the Lodge in question was not then in session, so that he was obliged to fall back upon the one with which he had so distant an association. Again, the question arose, how were the brethren to act in such a matter? And upon this we should like, and we invite, the opinions and advice of any of our correspondents who are competent to speak upon the bearings of such a case. At another Lodge which we recently visited, the widow of a brother who was initiated in it five years ago appealed for assistance. It did not come out in evidence whether or not he became a full-fledged Mason, but it was quite clear that he was not an enthusiast, inasmuch as he had only paid half-a-year's subscription with his initiation fee, and then lapsed altogether his connection with the Order. The Lodge to which we now particularly refer is proverbial for its charitable proclivities, and here again the question arose—though it was not dictated by any spirit of stern economy—whether or not the brethren were justified in voting, out of funds furnished by the consistent supporters of the Lodge for a specific purpose, money in relief to such an appeal. The brother who proposed it stated his case very fairly and impartially, and urged that as they had established a Benevolent Fund for the relief of distress generally, it was quite within the province of the Lodge—nay, its bounden duty—to meet the case of a deserving widow, even under the most exceptional circumstances. The result was that a small sum was voted to the widow who applied. We express no opinion as to the decision of the brethren, though whether the grant was prompted by sheer generosity rather than by judicious consideration of the functions of the Lodge, or justice to the general body of subscribing members, is open to question. We too frequently find that remarks on the "unbounded charity" of the Masonic Fraternity, and the principles of universal benevolence, come from young and inexperienced Masons, who, burning with the enthusiasm which their admission into the Order naturally inspires, would "rush in" where others, of greater knowledge of the whole bearings of the matter, would "fear to tread." To relieve every stranger at the gate who might present himself, as really or apparently needy, would break the back of any Institution, however sound, so far as its legitimate scope is concerned, and indiscriminate bounty would open the door to all sorts of imposture and deceit. In the instance to which last reference was made, the sum of five guineas was proposed to be given from the Benevolent Fund of the Lodge, and in our view the members exercised a very wise discretion when they decided that a less amount was sufficient to meet the exigencies of the case before them. It must be clear to all who have had any lengthened experience with these matters that many men join our Lodges with the view of how much they can "get out of them." We have often pointed out the extreme and urgent desirability of caution in recommending candidates for admission into Freemasonry; and we cannot do better than refer to the key-note struck by the Grand Secretary of England, a few nights ago, at the consecration of the Drury Lane Lodge, which was so splendidly inaugurated under the auspices of Bro. Augustus Harris, the enterprising and eminently successful proprietor of Drury Lane Theatre. On that brilliant occasion, when there were so many Grand and Provincial Grand Officers present, Colonel Shadwell Clerke gave vent to sentiments on this subject which will be endorsed by every right-thinking member of the Fraternity. He said, in as many words, that the most extreme caution was necessary as to the recommendation of aspirants for the mysteries and privileges of Freemasonry, for when a popular Lodge was started there was always a large number of candidates who wanted to rush into it. In concluding his words of admonition, the Grand Secretary gave as his text, the lessons from which we trust will be pondered and acted upon by all who might read his timely observations. He said, "I warn this Lodge, as I have warned others, to be very careful in this respect, and to 'hasten slowly,' for the more difficult it is to join a Lodge, the better class of members there will be in the long run." This is a point we have always consistently urged, and the force of the argument will be readily conceded by all who have watched the progress of Freemasonry during the past few years. It is not always, however, that the indiscriminate admission of candidates is confined to young Lodges who have a promising and popular career before them. In how many Lodges where, perhaps from lax administration, or the machinations of partizans, do we find that the legitimate roll of members has become "small by degrees and beautifully less," often to such an extent that initiates are eagerly sought after, in order to sustain breath within the body of the Lodge, and to save it from a condition of pulmonary consumption? A knowledge of these facts fully justifies us in the expression of the views with which we open this article, feeling assured that, as the records of our benevolent funds confirm, there are many men induced—we were almost about to say, encouraged—to join the ranks of Freemasonry who should never have become Masons. Before a man is proposed in any Lodge it should be absolutely ascertained why and wherefore he is prompted in the wish to take that important step in life; and in the present day, when the demands upon our Charitable Institutions are so heavy, it becomes more and more imperative that the strictest caution should be exercised with regard to adding to the strength of our Lodges. Not only do we find that many are admitted, only to strut their "brief hour upon the stage" of Masonic life, and then to fall back on the bounty of the Order, owing to their inability to fulfil responsibilities which they might know they were incapable of before entering; but there is even greater danger in the number of men who, though well-to-do, and perfectly free from any apprehension that they will become burdens upon the Craft, are to be found struggling to enter our Lodges for purposes entirely of their own. Thus we see too many class Lodges springing into existence, into which men who are aiming at positions, political and otherwise, are desirous of "rushing in." It will be an evil day when the political element usurps a prominent place in Freemasonry, or when it is tolerated in the slightest degree; and to see men who are aspiring to popularity, on the School Board, in the Vestry, or in Town Councils, eagerly anxious to make Freemasonry a royal road to the achivement of their ambitions desires is to our mind a tendency which should receive a prompt and decisive check at the hands of all true friends of our Order. We trust, therefore, that not only the new Lodge which the Grand Secretary addressed so practically and fraternally on Monday, and which promises so brilliant a career, but all other sections of the Craft will put into practice the caution which is implied in the terse but significant words bequeathed to all of them, and they are, to "hasten slowly."

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Coughs, Influenza.—The soothing properties of these medicaments render them well worthy of trial in all diseases of the respiratory organs. In common colds and influenza the Pills, taken internally, and the Ointment rubbed over the chest and throat, are exceedingly efficacious. When influenza is epidemic, this treatment is the easiest, safest, and surest. Holloway's Pills purify the blood, remove all obstacles to its free circulation through the lungs, relieve the over-gorged air tubes, and render respiration free, without reducing the strength, irritating the nerves, or depressing the spirits; such are the ready means of saving suffering when any one is afflicted with colds, coughs, bronchitis, and other chest complaints, by which so many persons are seriously and permanently afflicted in most countries.

which balances are in the Bank of England, Western Branch.

The Committee have likewise to report that they have received the following Petitions:—

1st. From Companions Abel Penfold as Z., Robert James Warren as H., John Aillud as J., and six others for a Chapter to be attached to the Henley Lodge, No. 1472, North Woolwich, to be called the Henley Chapter, and to meet at the Three Crowns Hotel, North Woolwich, in the county of Kent.

2nd. From Companions Nathaniel Merridew as Z., Herbert Standing as H., Frederic La Coque Thorne as J., and seven others for a Chapter to be attached to the Guy's Lodge, No. 395, Leamington, to be called the Guy's Chapter, and to meet at the Crown Hotel, Leamington, in the county of Warwick.

3rd. From Companions the Rev. Charles J. Martyn as Z., Joseph Francis Hills as H., Frederick Wheeler as J., and seven others for a Chapter to be attached to the Stour Valley Lodge, No. 1224, Sudbury, to be called the Martyn Chapter, and to meet at the Freemasons' Hall, Sudbury, in the county of Suffolk.

4th. From Companions Alderman Sir Francis Wyatt Truscott as Z., Alderman Sir John Whittaker Ellis, M.P., as H., Alderman Sir Robert Nicholas Fowler, Bart., M.P., as J., and nineteen others for a Chapter to be attached to the Grand Master's Lodge, No. 1, London, to be called the Grand Master's Chapter, and to meet at Willis's Rooms, King Street, St. James's, London.

The foregoing petitions being in all respects regular, the Committee recommend that the prayers thereof be respectively granted.

The Committee have likewise to report that they have received a memorial from the Companions of the Minerva Chapter, No. 250, Hull, praying for a Charter authorising them to wear a centenary jewel, in accordance with the resolution passed by the Supreme Grand Chapter on the 1st February 1882. This memorial being in form, and the Chapter having proved an uninterrupted existence of 100 years, the Committee recommend that the prayer thereof be granted.

(Signed) ROBERT GREY P.A.G. Soj.
President.

Freemasons' Hall, London, W.C.
20th January 1886.

To receive and consider the Report of the Committee on the Revision of the Royal Arch Regulations—with Amendments received since the Quarterly Convocation.

A Convocation of the North London Chapter of Improvement was held at the Alwyne Castle Tavern, St. Paul's Road, Canonbury, on Thursday. Comps. Dean M.E.Z., Radcliffe H., Strugnell J., Sheffield S.N., Edmonds P.S. The ceremony of exaltation was rehearsed in a complete and creditable manner. R.A. Masons should visit this Chapter of Improvement, and prepare themselves for the various officers in their Chapters.

The admission of fifteen boys, elected in October last to the advantages of the Preparatory School at Wood Green, took place on Friday last, and we congratulate the Craft upon the inauguration of the new premises. There was only a formal and unostentatious ceremony, but we trust that, now the new building has been completed, and that provision has been made for the reception of one hundred scholars, the necessary funds, which are the summum bonum of success in the matter, will be forthcoming, and, should there be sufficient applications, the School may be worked at its full strength at no distant date.

INSTALLATION MEETINGS, &c.

SINCERITY LODGE, No. 174.

THE annual meeting of the members of this Lodge took place on Wednesday, the 20th instant, at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham Street, City, when Brother Frederick Joseph Dellow was installed as Worshipful Master for the ensuing twelve months. Brother Thomas Francis Harvey W.M. opened the Lodge, supported by his Officers and a goodly number of members and visitors. Having confirmed the minutes of the previous meeting Brother Harvey proceeded to pass Brother Butcher to the second degree. Another brother who was expected to seek similar advancement, and another who is awaiting his third degree, were unfortunately prevented from being present, so that the next ceremony before the Lodge was the installation of Worshipful Master. Brother Dellow S.W. was presented, and duly obligated by the Worshipful Master, who then resigned his chair in favour of Brother A. H. Brown P.M. who inducted the Worshipful Master elect into the chair of the Lodge with marked ability. In due course the following were appointed the Officers of the Lodge for the year:—Bros. Cant S.W., Blain J.W., Lacey P.M. Treasurer, Webb P.M. Secretary, Wiles S.D., Richardson J.D., Seddon P.M. Organist, Higgs I.G., Magee D.C., Miller Steward, and Very Tyler. The report of the Audit Committee was presented and adopted. Brother J. S. Fraser offered his services as Steward at the next Festival for the Girls' Institution; which were accepted, and ten guineas was voted in aid of his list. The death was announced of Brother Milburn, whose widow was in most distressed circumstances. This brother was initiated in the year 1879, but had only paid half a years' subscription to the Lodge, after which period his association with Freemasonry lapsed. However, considering the distressed circumstances in which the widow was placed, the brethren voted her the sum of three guineas. At this stage of the proceedings Bro. Charles Lacey P.M. rose and addressed the Lodge on the question of Brother John Newton's retirement from official duties as Secretary. Brother Newton, to the regret of every member of the Lodge, had felt it incumbent upon him, having regard to his other duties, to adopt this course, but it was gratifying to know that the Lodge was in an eminently sound financial position, and this was mainly attributable to the energy and zeal that Brother Newton had thrown into his work during the 18 years he had conducted the business of the Lodge as its Secretary. It was arranged that a Secretary's jewel, of modest and unpretentious character, should be provided at the expense of the Lodge, for presentation to Brother Newton, and which he trusted that Brother would feel much gratification in wearing. He had retired from active duty in the Lodge in full vigour, and he had promised to give every assistance that was in his power to his successor. A Past Master's jewel was presented to Brother Captain T. F. Harvey on his retirement from the chair, and after the transaction of some other business, the members and their Visitors partook of an excellent banquet, supplied under the direction of Brother J. Marcham. In giving the loyal toasts the Worshipful Master referred to the successful period during which Her Majesty had governed; her reign had only been exceeded by three monarchs of this country. The Prince of Wales was in every sense of the word a courteous gentleman, and it was a gratifying proof of his interest in Freemasonry that his eldest son Prince Edward, had been initiated into the Craft. The Immediate Past Master in proposing the health of the Worshipful Master, said he felt he might congratulate the Lodge upon having so popular a man and Mason as Brother Dellow to rule over the Sincerity Lodge for the ensuing year. The toast was received with applause, and Brother Dellow, after returning thanks for the honour they had done him, said he had a difficult task in responding to the toast, inasmuch as more had been placed to his credit than he deserved. After the many able Masters who had gone before him, he feared he should not be able to acquit himself so well as he might desire, but he would strive. In proposing the toast of the Immediate Past Master he said there could be but one opinion,—that Brother Harvey had fulfilled his duties to the utmost satisfaction of the brethren. He trusted their esteemed Immediate Past Master might be spared many years to aid the Lodge by his council, experience, and advice. Brother Harvey suitably returned thanks for the kindness with which the mention of his name had been received; he assured the brethren the jewel with which he had been presented would be prized as long as he lived. The Worshipful Master then proposed the Past Masters, whom he designated the backbone of the Lodge. He was pleased to see so large a muster present that evening, no less than eleven having put in an appearance, and he associated with the toast the name of Brother John Newton, who for so many years had been connected with the Lodge as its Secretary, and had discharged the duties of that onerous position with fidelity, fervency, and zeal. Bro. John Newton in response, said the Past Masters, from the oldest to the youngest, took a deep interest in the affairs of the Lodge, and were gratified at the position it now held. He sketched his somewhat lengthy career in connection with the Sincerity Lodge; he remembered, 25 years ago, when he was initiated by Bro. Bulmer, who was now present. He had never regretted that step, for during his connection with Freemasonry he had made many friends, who had helped his forward, and in due course he attained the exalted position of Master of the Lodge. At the close of his year of office the question arose as to who should instal his successor. There were two aspirants for this honour, and as to adjudicate between the rival claimants would involve grave responsibility, he decided to take the duty upon himself. He was proud to know this inaugurated a new era, and he was able to say that the Lodge of Sincerity had never since had occasion to go outside its doors for the services of an installing officer. He again returned thanks for their kindness to him during his long association with the Lodge and trusted he might live many years to assist in its advancement and prosperity. The W.M. then welcomed the Visitors, on whose behalf Bros. Mansfield, Tickle, Cock, Scott, Berry, Morgan, and others replied, and in due course the proceedings were closed in a befitting manner by the Tyler. During the evening a choice selection of vocal and instrumental music was given, under the direction of Madame Conch. Amongst the Visitors present were:—Bros. Brittain S.D. 1278, Cock W.M. 1597, Scott 933, Toulmin 1503, Knott 177, Mansfield P.M. 21 P.G.S., Tickle 1702 P.P.G.R. Middlesex, T. H. Spiller 49, C. H. Spiller 49, Brown 1364, Allard 1421, Morgan I.P.M. 211.

EAST MEDINA LODGE, No. 175.

THE installation meeting of this Lodge took place at the Masonic Hall, Ryde, on Wednesday, the 20th instant. The following Officers and members of the Lodge were present:—Bros. J. L. Stobbs P.G. Steward W.M., Tenison Smith I.P.M., H. E. Matthews S.W., H. Durrant J.W., Francis Newman P.P.G.S.W. Treasurer, Charles Carter Secretary, O. B. Gabell S.D., Henry Davis J.D., B. J. Marvin D.C., W. Andrews I.G., W. H. Long Steward, Miah Willis Tyler, Gen. the Hon. Somerset J. G. Calthorpe P.M. P.P.G.S.W. (P.P.G.J.W. England), G. H. Pack P.M. P.P.G.J.D., James Lowe P.M., Ernest Groves P.M., E. G. Stroud, A. Dransfield, John I. Barton, and Alfred Dashwood. Among the Visitors were Bros. John McQueen W.M. 11; H. C. Manners W.M. G. A. Marsell P.M. P.P.G.D., and Robert Callingford I.G., all of 35; A. J. Simmons 74; J. G. Garnham W.M., S. Wheeler P.M. P.G.J.D., H. M. Wavell S.D., and G. A. Brannon I.G. all of 151; John W. Gieve I.P.M. 309; F. Topham Jones W.M., A. Scott P.M., T. H. Petherick P.M., and F. Trueman, all of 551; Lord John H. Taylour W.M. P.P.G.W. New South Wales, W. Menzies P.M., and W. Hammond Riddett J.D., all of 698, J. C. Hopwood S.D. 1457, H. H. Durrant 1697, James Conner P.M. Sec. 1869; A. Greenham S.W., and W. T. Swayne, both of 1884. As private business had prevented the Senior Warden, Bro. Matthews, from undertaking the duties of office during the ensuing year, Bro. H. Durrant J.W. had been unanimously elected Worshipful Master, and having been presented by the I.P.M., Bro. Stobbs, the ceremony of installing him in the chair was most impressively performed by Brother Francis Newman P.M. P.P.G.S.W. The W.M. invested his Officers, as follow:—Bros. Matthews S.W., Carter J.W., Newman Treasurer, Gabell Secretary, Davis S.D., Andrews J.D., Smith D.C., Ellery Organist, Long I.G., Dansfield, Stroud, and Keet Stewards, Willis Tyler. A Past Master's jewel, which had been voted by the Lodge in recognition of the able manner in which the duties of the chair had been carried out during the past year, was presented to Brother Stobbs by Brother Newman, who gave appropriate expression to the appreciation in which Brother Stobbs' services were held. The manner in which the remaining business of the day, which included a raising, was carried out, testified the wisdom of the choice the Lodge had made, and was a striking proof of the excellence of the training and the capabilities of the Worshipful Master and his Officers. After the Lodge was closed most of those present adjourned to Yelf's Hotel, where a banquet was served by Bro. Pack, in that excellent style for which he has an established reputation. Grace, after meat having been said, due honour was done to the toasts of the Queen and Craft, the M.W.G.M. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the M.W. Pro Grand Master the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, the R.W. Deputy Grand Master the Earl of Lathom, and the Grand Officers Present and Past. In reply to the latter toast, Gen. the Hon. Somerset Calthorpe Past G.J.W. thanked the Worshipful Master for the manner in which he had proposed the toast, and the brethren for the cordiality with which they had received it. He said all who had had the privilege of being associated with the Grand Master the Prince of Wales in Masonic work could testify to the attention His Royal Highness gave to the duties of his office, and the urbanity which characterised his connection with his subordinate officers, on whom his good example had an excellent effect. The Worshipful Master proposed in an appropriate manner the toast of the R.W. the Provincial Grand Master of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, Brother W. W. B. Beach, M.P., and the Provincial Grand Officers Past and Present. He coupled with the toast the name of Brother Francis Newman P.P.G.S.W. Brother Newman, in responding to the toast, eulogised the services rendered to the Craft by the Provincial Grand Master, Brother W. W. B. Beach, M.P., who devoted a great deal of time to his duties, and had only been absent from one meeting of Provincial Grand Lodge since he had held the office. It was a source of great gratification to the brethren at Ryde that Brother Le Feuvre, who had so distinguished himself by the exemplary way in which he had carried out the arduous duties of Prov. Grand Secretary, should have been raised to the well earned dignity of Deputy Provincial Grand Master at a Provincial Lodge held there in the course of last year. From his knowledge of the present Provincial Officers, Bro. Newman said he could assure his hearers they had a sincere desire to carry out their duties in a proper manner. The I.P.M., Bro. Stobbs, said it was with particular pleasure he availed himself of the privilege he had to propose the health of the W.M. He had watched with interest the able manner in which Bro. Durrant had performed the duties appertaining to the various offices he had already held in the Lodge, and he saw he was resolved to be thorough in all he undertook. This was an earnest of the manner in which the more important duties now devolving on him would be carried out. The W.M. briefly returned thanks, and expressed a hope that, though a young Mason, he should be able to perform his duties in a proper manner. The W.M. in proposing the Masonic Charities, alluded to the several institutions by means of which the stream of Masonic charity was effectively directed, and said that though the relief of distress was the duty of all men, it was a duty especially incumbent on Masons, whose secret was "the art of doing good." Bro. Groves, whose name had been coupled with the toast, said the East Medina Lodge was determined to do something substantial this year for one of the three leading Masonic Charitable Institutions. He was going up as Steward for the Boys' School, and hoped to be able to take a good round sum with him. He should be glad to be entrusted with contributions from any other Lodge in the Island that was not sending up a steward of its own. A collection which was then made at the table amounted to £3. Bro. Tenison Smith proposed the Immediate Past Master, Bro. Stobbs, to whom he paid a high compliment for the manner in which he had filled the Master's chair during the past year, especially referring to the inconvenience to which he had put himself on several occasions when he had come a long distance solely in order to be present at Lodge. Bro. Stobbs expressed his thanks for the cordial reception they had given to the flattering terms of the toast, and said he had been induced to take charge of the ship 12 months ago, when the opportunity was offered him, from the knowledge he had of the excellence of the crew with which it was manned. He felt much indebted to his Officers for the help they had given him; their ready co-operation had made any efforts on his part a pleasure. His only source of regret was that his Senior Warden had not felt himself well enough to follow him in the chair, but they all felt assured they possessed a most worthy substitute in Bro. Durrant. Bro. Gen. the Hon. J. G. S. Calthorpe proposed the health of the Installing Master, Bro. Newman, and spoke in complimentary terms of the admirable and impressive manner in which that day's ceremony had been performed. No brother in the neighbourhood could compare in knowledge of the Craft with Bro. Newman, to whom the speaker said he was himself indebted for his initiation into Masonry, and he cordially and sincerely wished him long life and happiness. Bro. Newman expressed his thanks for the way in which the toast had been proposed and received, and said he certainly felt it an honour to have initated into that Lodge a brother who was so soon after made an Officer of Grand Lodge. It was a great pleasure to himself to be present at an installation, and in none was he more pleased to take part than that of the East Medina Lodge. There had been 31 installations in that Lodge since he had been a member of it, and at only two had he failed to be present, once when he was snowbound, and once when he was detained at Winchester on a law case. Bro. Pack proposed the Visitors, to whom in the name of the brethren of East Medina Lodge he extended a hearty welcome in cordial and appropriate terms. It was with great pleasure they had noted in their Lodge that day the presence of every W.M. in the Island. The compliment was replied to, and the hospitality of the brethren of the East Medina Lodge was warmly acknowledged, by Bros. McQueen 11, Garnham 151, Topham Jones 551, Gieve 309, Lord John Taylour 698, Simmons 74, and G. A. Brannon 151 for Bros. Manners 35 and Hopwood 1457, who had been compelled to leave by train. In proposing the toast of the Past Masters, the W.M. said the Lodge had just reason to congratulate itself on the large number of Past Masters who continued to take an active interest in the work of the Lodge; and to the attention and trouble they bestowed on the Lodge of Instruction was attributable in a very great degree the excellence of the working on which the Officers had been complimented that day. The Lodge was especially indebted to Bros. Newman, Groves, and Lowe, in this respect. Brother Lowe, in response, said he had not of late attended the Lodge of Instruction so regularly as formerly, but he was at all times ready to assist when required. He could endorse all that had been said in favour of a Lodge of Instruction, and could assure the younger members it was the only way to gain a proper knowledge of the work. The toast of the Officers of the Lodge was proposed by Brother Mervin in a brief and appropriate speech. The toast was responded to by Brother Matthews S.W., who said he hoped his engagements and health would permit him to go on to the chair next year. Bros. Carter, Gabell, Andrews, Long, Tenison Smith, Dransfield, Stroud, and Keel also responded. The Tyler's toast having been honoured, Brother Dudley Watkins proposed the host and hostess, speaking in high terms of the admirable manner in which they had provided for the comfort of their guests. The toast was warmly drunk and appropriately acknowledged. During the evening a capital programme of music and recitations was gone through by the following:—Bros. Dudley Watkins, Gieve, Petherick, Topham Jones, Gabell, Connor, Ellery, and McQueen. Bro. Dudley Watkins also gave a clever ventriloquial performance.

MANCHESTER LODGE, No. 179.

THE brethren of this Lodge celebrated their annual installation on Thursday, the 21st inst., at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet Street, the following Officers and Past Masters of the Lodge being present: W. F. Hughes W.M., J. Ellwood S.W., G. Westman J.W., W. Hopekirk P.M. Treasurer, Jas. Kew P.M. Secretary, Walter Dickeson P.M., H. A. Lovett P.M., L. Dettmer P.M., A. E. Hughes S.D., F. J. Hughes Steward, H. Brinkmann D.C., J. Herbert Kew Assistant D.C., J. W. Cain and W. G. Baker Musical Directors. The usual routine business having been disposed of Bro. Ungar was raised, and Bro. Bryant was passed, after which Bro. Ellwood was presented as Worshipful Master elect, and duly installed into the chair of the Lodge. He appointed the following as his Officers: C. G. Westman S.W., A. Hughes J.W., W. Hopekirk P.M. Treasurer, J. Kew P.M. Secretary, C. Mulvey S.D., J. Gittens J.D., H. Brinkmann I.G., F. Hughes Assistant Secretary, J. H. Kew D.C., W. Baker Assistant D.C., W. Dickeson P.M. Steward, J. Cain and J. Bromley Musical Directors, Whiting P.M. Tyler. At the conclusion of the installation ceremony Messrs. Thomas Simkins, Charles Edward Oscar Walker, James Watts and William James were initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry by the newly-installed Master. A Joining member was elected and formally welcomed as a member of the Lodge by the Worshipful Master, who, in a few words expressed the pleasure he and the other brethren of the Lodge experienced in welcoming their new member. Auditors for the Benevolent Fund having been appointed it was announced that after the next meeting of the Lodge a Soirée would be held, at which ladies would be welcomed. The sum of ten guineas was voted to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, to be placed on the list of the W.M., who will act as Steward at the coming Festival of that Institution, and, after the transaction of some other business Lodge was closed. A banquet followed, and at its conclusion the usual toasts were honoured. The health of the Queen having been enthusiastically drunk, the W.M. proposed the M.W.G.M. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. This toast, he said, was sure of as hearty a welcome as had been accorded to the previous one. The brethren all knew the great interest His Royal Highness took in the welfare of the Craft. Anything he could do for its welfare he was only too willing to perform. He could not of course be present at all the meetings where he would be welcomed, or where he would like to be, but as far as possible he did everything needed for the welfare of Freemasonry. The Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers Present and Past, were next toasted. The Earl of Carnarvon, the Earl of Lathom, and the other brethren comprised in this toast, one and all, took a great interest in Freemasonry. It would indeed be a hard task for the Grand Master were it not for the Pro G.M. and the Deputy G.M., who well and worthily perform many of the duties which would, without them, devolve on the head of the Order. The Immediate Past Master, Bro. Hughes, next assumed the gavel. The special toast he had to propose that night was a most important one—indeed no other proposed or to be proposed that evening was of so important a character to the members of the Manchester Lodge, it being that of the present Worshipful Master. It was gratifying to the members of the Lodge to know that the brother who had that night been installed as Master was capable of carrying out the duties attached to the office in a manner creditable to himself and the members of the Lodge generally. He felt he could not say sufficient in praise of Bro. Ellwood, but would call on the brethren to drink to his very good health, long life and prosperity. The Worshipful Master tendered his thanks for the very kind way in which the toast had been proposed and received. As the proposer of the toast had said, he should do all that lay in his power to advance the interests of the Lodge. He trusted the Great Architect of the Universe would give him health and strength to carry out the work of his office as ably as the members might desire it carried out, and that when the time for his retirement came round the brethren would be able to say he had done his duty. He remembered that on the night of his initiation in the Manchester Lodge, when Bro. Lovett occupied the chair, he had said that from his brief experience of Freemasonry it would be his desire to rise to the office of Master. He had never lost sight of that ambition, and now that he had risen to the dignity of ruler he could but heartily thank the brethren for the way in which they had elected him to the post, and for the hearty reception they had accorded him on the first occasion he had presided over the Lodge. He next proposed the health of his predecessor, Bro. Hughes, the Installing Master of the evening. Bro. Hughes had performed the ceremony of installation most creditably, and had shown his ability in the other work required of him during his term of office. In having so able a brother sitting on his left the Worshipful Master felt he should at all times be sure of any assistance he might require, and there were times when the best of them needed a little prompting. He had much pleasure in presenting to Bro. Hughes the very handsome emblem for past services which had been voted to him by the members of the Lodge. He felt that Bro. Hughes had eminently deserved the honour conferred on him, and in presenting the jewel he hoped he might be spared to wear it out. Bro. Hughes tendered his thanks for the very kind manner in which the toast had been proposed, for its hearty reception, and for the handsome jewel which had just been presented him. It was a great gratification to him to know that his year of office had ended so satisfactorily as it appeared to have done, and that the brethren were satisfied with what he had done as Master of the Manchester Lodge. He trusted the Lodge would continue in its present state of efficiency. Much of the success of a Lodge depended on the Worshipful Master, but still more on the way in which the brethren rallied round their ruler. Wishing prosperity for the Lodge, he again thanked the brethren for their many kindnesses to him. The Master next proposed the toast of the initiates. Without initiates a Lodge would soon go down, but such was hardly to be expected in the case of the Manchester if they went on as they had begun their present year, when they had the pleasure of welcoming four initiates among them. The Master felt sure the Manchester Lodge would never suffer from a lack of new members, for although it was not possible for those in it to ask outsiders to join, yet they had many friends who were anxious to be admitted to the mysteries of Freemasonry, and who were well acquainted with the high standing of the Manchester Lodge. He heartily welcomed the four brethren who had been initiated that night. Bro. Simkins having returned his thanks, said he felt very proud to be admitted a member of the Manchester Lodge. He should at all times be pleased to be among the brethren, and do what he could to advance the welfare of Freemasonry. Bro. Walker thanked the brethren for the heartiness of the reception they had accorded him. He trusted that in his after life he might do all that lay in his power to advance the interests and welfare of the Craft. Bro. Watts also thanked the brethren. He trusted he might follow in the footsteps of the Worshipful Master, and attain to the highest position in the Lodge. Bro. James felt the brethren had conferred a great honour on him that night. He hoped and trusted that he might long be spared to be among them, and that he might so act as to become a thoroughly good Mason. The toast of the Visitors was next given, and to this several brethren responded. Bro. Goodchild had been especially delighted to see the way in which the ceremonies had been worked in the Lodge. Bro. Garratt was pleased to have been present. The installation ceremony had been most ably worked—in a manner which any body of Masons might well be proud of. He felt that the Manchester Lodge would lose none of its lustre under the rule of its present Master, but that it would progress during the current year as it had done in the past. He was sorry he had not been able to visit the Lodge as often as he had been invited.

After the pleasant hours he had spent there that day he should endeavour not to lose any opportunity he might have of visiting them. Bro. Marsh followed. It was very interesting to see the retiring Master of a Lodge instal his successor, and to perform the ceremony as ably as had Bro. Hughes that day. The manner in which the present Master had performed the work he had had to do since his installation was also most creditable, and augured well for the Manchester Lodge. Bro. Marsh referred to the Stewardship of the Worshipful Master for the Benevolent Institution, and forcibly urged the brethren to do their utmost on behalf of the Old People. Bro. Smith added his thanks, and expressed the pleasure he felt in seeing the Lodge in so prosperous a condition. Many of his friends were associated with it, and he felt special interest in its welfare. Bro. Morgan also replied. While thanking the brethren for their hearty reception, he regretted the cause which brought him to the Manchester Lodge, in place of the late Bro. Levy, who had so long represented the Masonic Press at the meetings of this Lodge. He concluded by hoping the Worshipful Master might have a prosperous year of office, and the Lodge a successful future. The toast of the Past Masters was next given, Bro. Hughes returning his sincere thanks, and hoping the Past Masters deserved the many kind things which were said in their favour. They were always willing to help the Master or any of the members in any way that lay in their power. No task was too hard for them to attempt, but in the Manchester Lodge they had little or nothing to do, as the brethren who were elected as its rulers were such apt workers as to need no help in the different ceremonies. He was pleased to see Bro. Ellwood in the chair, for although they had been accustomed to good rulers in the Manchester Lodge, he felt the present head would excel his predecessors. The next toast, the Worshipful Master said, was a very deserving one—the Masonic Charities. He was pleased to say the Manchester Lodge and its members were always ready and willing to support the Institutions of the Order. Bro. P.M. Hopekirk replied. The charity of Freemasons reflected great credit on the Order. It was the benevolence of the brethren which allowed the evening's enjoyment to bear the morning's reflection. Bro. Hopekirk made a forcible appeal on behalf of the Institutions, asking each of the brethren to do their utmost in support of the list of the Worshipful Master for the coming Festival. None of them knew the amount of good they might do if they worked zealously on behalf of the Charities—for those who were in distress and unable to plead for themselves. The Officers of the Lodge were next toasted. The Worshipful Master felt sure the same cordial reception would be given to this toast as had been accorded to those which had preceded it. The brethren he had appointed to office were efficient, and would do their best to perform the work required of them to the satisfaction of all; he knew they would help him, and he hoped that together they would be able to manage the Lodge successfully. Bro. Westman was very pleased the Worshipful Master had appointed him to so important a post, and he trusted that he might discharge the duties attached to it as much to the satisfaction of the brethren as he had that of Junior Warden, filled by him last year. His ambition was to assume the chair as soon as possible, and he hoped he might merit the approval of the brethren when he was eligible for it. Brother Hughes also replied, expressing his thanks. Bro. Kew Secretary followed. It was, he thought, well-known that his desire was to help any of the members of the Manchester Lodge and to do anything in his power to advance its interests. Other of the Officers having responded, the Tyler's toast was given and the brethren separated. Among the Visitors were Bros. Nathaniel Goodchild P.M. 704, J. Weston P.M. 1602, E. W. Scattergood W.M. 753, James Thorn 957, J. Lawrence 1788, J. Judge 829, G. Moy 1744, G. A. Garratt P.M. 704, Charles H. Thomas 1696, C. Peters 575, J. J. Marsh P.P.G.S.B. Middx., G. H. Wood 1572, A. WILTSHIRE LODGE OF FIDELITY, No. 663.

THE installation meeting of this Lodge took place at the Masonic Hall, Devizes, on Friday, the 15th inst., when there was a large gathering of members and visitors. The W.M. elect Bro. F. S. Hancock S.W. was duly installed, the ceremony, at the request of the W.M. Bro. W. H. Bush, being performed by Bro. Wm. Knott P.M. P.P.J.G.W. Wilts. The newly-installed Master afterwards invested his Officers for the ensuing year, as follow:—Bros. T. C. Hopkins S.W., W. L. Tucker J.W., W. Nott P.M. Treasurer, H. I. Ward P.M. Secretary, H. J. Johnson S.D., N. I. Beale P.M. 936 J.D., W. H. Burt P.M. D.C., F. Sloper I.G., H. Howse P.M., W. Cooper and B. W. Crees Stewards, C. R. Barnes Tyler. The Officers on investment were severally addressed on their responsibilities by the W.M., who to the Treasurer expressed his regret that he (Bro. Nott) had felt compelled to resign the more active duties of the office of Secretary, which he had filled for the past sixteen years, though the Lodge would still have the benefit of his assistance to the new Secretary, Bro. Ward. The usual addresses to the Master, Wardens and Brethren were delivered by the Installing Master. In addition to those members already mentioned there were present Bros. T. H. Chandler P.M. P.P.S.G.W. Wilts and J. A. Randell P.M., whilst amongst the Visitors were Bros. A. J. Beaven P.M. 1271 P.P.G.P. Wilts, Jas. Lesker P.M. 135, W. Wilson W.M. elect 906 P.P.G.D.C. Somerset, T. S. Hill P.M. 632, J. H. Foley W.M. elect 632, T. E. Wilton J.W. 41, H. Applegate J.D. 632, Jas. Pocock 632, G. L. Palmer 632, J. G. Wilton I.G. 41, &c. After the Lodge was closed, the brethren adjourned to the customary annual banquet, provided in excellent style by Bro. Beale, at the Bear Hotel.

DOBIE LODGE, No. 889.

HIGH festival was held at the Griffin Hotel, Kingston, on the 20th instant, when over fifty brethren—members and visitors—assembled in Lodge to assist at the installation of Bro. Weaver as Worshipful Master for the ensuing year. The outgoing Master, Bro. Tisley, installed his successor with an exactitude and expression which called forth the highest praise from Bro. Case P.G.D. P.M. of No. 1, and Bro. Smales, a Past Provincial Grand Officer of Yorkshire. The W.M., who is a P.M. of the Lily Lodge, 820, appointed as his Officers:—Bros. Chapman S.W., W. Drewett S.D. 1638 J.W., Long P.M. Treasurer, Squire P.M. Secretary, F. Porter S.D., George Wall J.D., J. H. Jarvis I.G., John Drewett S.W. 1638 D.C. After labour a récherché banquet was provided by Bro. W. H. Sharp, at the Griffin Hotel, Kingston, and the usual list of toasts was gone through. Bros. Hodges, Drewett, Honeywell, Coppinger, and others contributed music, which rendered the proceedings most enjoyable. The Dobie Lodge has voted fifty guineas during the past year to the three Masonic Charities, and has relieved a distressed member.

ROYAL SAVOY LODGE, No. 1744.

THE installation meeting of this Lodge was held on Tuesday, at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, W.C., under the presidency of Bro. J. W. Smith, the Worshipful Master of the past year. He was supported by W. M. Stiles I.P.M., James C. Smith S.W. W.M. elect, H. Dickey Secretary, W. Jaques S.D., W. H. Barling J.D., R. Ross D.C., C. Holland I.G., G. Mordey Organist, E. The usual formalities having been observed, the report of the Audit Committee was received, after which Bro. J. C. Smith was installed as W.M., his predecessor in the chair performing the ceremony with marked ability. The following brethren were appointed as the new Officers:—Bros. Dickey S.W., Jaques J.W., Willing P.M. Treasurer, W. A. Scurrah Secretary, Barling S.D., Holland J.D., Ross I.G., Mordey and Verdin Stewards, H. E. Price Organist, Knightley Assistant Secretary, Koester Tyler. Previous to the closing of the Lodge the retiring Worshipful Master was presented with a handsome Past Master's jewel, which bore the following inscriptions:—
On the obverse:—

No. 1744,
ROYAL SAVOY LODGE,
Founder (Septimus).
Presented to
Bro. J. W. SMITH P.M.,
by the Royal Savoy Lodge, No. 1744, as a mark of esteem, and in recognition of his valuable services as W.M. 1885-6.

After the conclusion of the business, the brethren repaired to the large hall of Freemasons' Tavern, where an excellent banquet was served, and an enjoyable evening spent. About one hundred and fifty members and visitors sat down. At the conclusion of the banquet, the usual toasts were given from the chair. The Worshipful Master said that in all grades of society the toast of the Queen was always received with enthusiasm, but he felt sure it was never more thoroughly welcomed than when proposed at a Masonic meeting. Not only was the Queen beloved by Freemasons, as the mother of their Grand Master, she was also a zealous supporter of the noble Charities associated with the Order. He had pleasure in submitting her health, coupled with success to the Craft. In proposing the health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, he felt it was hardly necessary for him to dilate on the many good qualities of the Most Wor. Grand Master. Were he to attempt to do so, he could only repeat what was already known to those around him. The Masonic brethren were very pleased at having so distinguished a personage as the heir to the throne at their head, and respected him both for what he did to advance the interests of the Order and for his enthusiasm on behalf of the Charities. The Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers was the next toast. The brethren would take an especial delight in drinking to the health of the two noblemen at the head of this toast. In the absence of the Grand Master, whose duties were so numerous as to prevent his attendance at Masonic meetings as often as was desirable it was most gratifying the brethren had two such Masons as the Earl of Carnarvon and the Earl of Lathom to preside. With such men as the Grand Officers of England at the head of affairs Masons might rest satisfied that everything that was possible to advance the interests of Freemasonry would be done. The Worshipful Master had much pleasure in coupling with the toast the name of Bro. Charles Greenwood P.G. Sword Bearer, to whom he extended a hearty welcome. Bro. Greenwood tendered his thanks on behalf of the Grand Officers of England. The many kind things said of the Pro Grand Master and the Deputy Grand Master were richly deserved. He felt that under the rule of such Masons the Order must prosper. He was personally gratified at being present, and regretted other engagements had prevented his seeing the retiring Master instal his successor. One of the proudest things a Lodge could wish for was to have brethren in the chair who were able to perform all the ceremonies required of them, finishing up their term of office by installing their successor. He was pleased to know the Royal Savoy Lodge had had such men at its head, and felt the brother placed in the chair that day would be no exception to the rule. The way in which he had invested his Officers showed he was capable of performing his duties. The Immediate Past Master gave the next toast. After the twelve months which had just passed he had no doubt the brethren had heard enough of his voice, but he had especial pleasure in addressing them on that occasion, it being his duty to propose the health of their Worshipful Master, Bro. J. C. Smith. The brethren were all aware of his abilities, of his knowledge of the ritual, and of his power of command; they could therefore form a fair opinion of what might be expected during his occupancy of the chair. He felt sure they all wished the Worshipful Master a good year of office, and trusted he might have health and strength for many years to come. The W.M. returned his very sincere thanks for the hearty reception the brethren had given the toast of his health, and assured them he had never known a prouder time in his life than then, when he presided for the first time as Master of his mother Lodge—the Royal Savoy. He was especially pleased in being the first initiate of the Lodge who had attained to the chair. Those who knew him, knew the interest he had taken in the Craft; he would carry out the duties of the office to the best of his ability. It would be his constant desire to emulate the example set by those who had preceded him; all of them would, he was sure, assist him to the best of their ability. He felt flattered that on his entry into the chair that evening he carried with him the good will and the good feeling of every brother who knew him, this was evidenced by the very large number of guests who were present to do him honour. In conclusion he assured those present that during his year of office he should strive to give them the best of entertainments, both in the Lodge, at the banquet table, and at the Lodge of Instruction. He next proposed the health of the Installing Master, and the other Past Masters of the Lodge. In speaking of the Immediate Past Master he felt it was a matter of great gratification to have to propose the health of so worthy a Mason as Bro. John Smith. He was one of the founders of the Lodge, and had thrown untiring energy into his efforts on its behalf. The way in which he had fulfilled the duties of his office and retired from the chair was a subject for congratulation among the members, and all who had witnessed his working. Not only had he ably performed the ceremonies of the year, but had that night installed his successor in a most able manner. The W.M. regretted the absence of so many of the Past Masters, but felt that in the two then present—Bro. Smith and Bro. Stiles—they had really representative Past Masters of the Lodge, men of whom any body of Masons might justly be proud. Bro. Smith I.P.M. returned his thanks for the toast, and for the very great kindness which had been shown him during the past twelve months. He had endeavoured to discharge his duties to the satisfaction of the brethren, and was pleased to hear so satisfactory a report on his working as had been given that night. He highly valued the jewel the brethren had been pleased to present him—it would be zealously preserved during his life-time, and, he felt sure, handed down after his death to his children. Bro. Stiles followed. He was very pleased to see the Lodge in so flourishing a condition. Seven years ago they had started with eight founders, now they had between one hundred and twenty and one hundred and thirty members, and if among that number there were some who were rather noisy, it was because they felt the importance of the Lodge. It was a good old-fashioned fraternal Lodge, where brethren met each other as they met in the outer world. They were indeed a contented band of brothers, united for the purpose of adding to each other's enjoyment and relieving the wants of those in distress. The Lodge was noted for its joviality, in evidence of which he might refer to the two balls which had been held in connection with it, and at each of which close on three hundred brethren and ladies had been present. The Lodge was really a factor in Freemasonry, and as such he hoped it would long continue to prosper. The Worshipful Master gave the toast of the Visitors. This toast was sure of a hearty reception whenever proposed in a Masonic Lodge, but nowhere more hearty than at the Royal Savoy. Bro. Binckes replied. As a Visitor it might at first sight appear an onerous task, surrounded with tremendous responsibility, to undertake to reply on behalf of the numerous visitors then present, but really it appeared to him that the visitors had nothing to find fault with and nothing to complain of. They had been most heartily received and royally entertained. He felt such a meeting as the present one was nothing without some show of enthusiasm. He alway had been, and was, fond of ceremonialism on such occasions, and hoped the Royal Savoy Lodge would always possess it, for without it they could never continue the good work which had been carried on by its members during the seven years the Lodge had been in existence. The brethren of the Royal Savoy Lodge seemed to delight in inviting to their meetings as many guests as they could, and the visitors were always pleased to accept the invitation. He was pleased to see such hearty hospitality, for it invariably went hand in hand with another virtue—that of Mercy. He trusted that the year of office of the Worshipful Master might be one of success, and that the destinies of the Lodge might never be entrusted to one less capable of directing them than he. If such were the case Bro. Binckes felt there was a long career of success in store for the Lodge, and in conclusion felt that he and his brother visitors could not do better than endorse that sentiment with the time-honoured Masonic formula—So mote it be. Bros. Fidler, Christian, Gorringe, Garratt, Baker, and others also replied, after which the Worshipful Master proposed the Charities, which toast was acknowledged by Bro. John Mason. Bro. Stiles announced that the list of Bro. Willing, as a Steward at the next Festival on behalf of the Benevolent Institution, who will represent the Royal Savoy Lodge and the Metropolitan Chapter, already amounted to £93 7s 6d, there was, however, plenty of room for an extension of that total. The health of the Treasurer and Secretary was next given, and to this Bro. Scurrah responded. He thanked the brethren most heartily for the very kind manner in which the toast had been proposed and received. He thanked the Worshipful Master for the appointment he had received that day, and assured them all he should do his best to assist in the work of the Lodge, during his term of office. The officers of the Lodge were next toasted. During the time the Master had been a member of the Lodge the question of the officers had been a strong point with him. Even when he was but a lay member he felt that the success of the Lodge mainly depended on the Officers, and with that view he had endeavoured to induce members of the Craft to visit Lodges of Instruction. His endeavours to acquire a knowledge of the ceremonies of Freemasonry had resulted in his attaining the summit of his ambition—the chair of his Lodge. He had always hoped that should such fortune attend him he might be surrounded with a zealous body of officers. He had such officers, and he felt sure they would do their best to support him. Referring to the appointment of Bro. Dickey to the post of Senior Warden, the Worshipful Master said that some years back Bro. Dickey had stood aside from the regular stream of promotion, and had undertaken the onerous duties of Secretary. He had discharged those duties for some time in most exemplary fashion, and by his kindness of manner had endeared himself to every member of the Royal Savoy Lodge. He had now attained his proper place in the Lodge—occupying the office of Senior Warden, and would, it was hoped, ultimately rise to the dignity of Master. Bros. Dickey and Jaques having suitably acknowledged the toast, Bro. Barling, the S.D., followed. During his term of office he should use his best endeavours to do his duty, and so act that, should he ever be chosen by the brethren to fill the office of Worshipful Master he might be as well prepared for it as the present ruler of their Lodge. Bro. Ross J.G. felt very proud of his position. It was one which many members of the Lodge would feel it an honour to occupy. He should strive his uttermost to give them satisfaction, and if he was behindhand at any time he hoped the brethren would excuse him, and at the same time help him out of his difficulties. Bro. Price felt that the Office to which he had been appointed was the first step towards the acquisition of greater honours, although the prospect of his rising to the position of Master was at present a very remote one. It would be his endeavour to fulfil the duties of his office as they should be carried out, and he hoped he should meet with success. Business engagements had prevented his regular attendance in the past, but he trusted that in future he should be able to be among the members of the Lodge at each of its meetings. The Tyler was then summoned, and he concluded the proceedings in the usual way. Several brethren contributed songs, &c., during the evening, thereby adding to the enjoyment of the meeting.

STAFFORDSHIRE MASONIC CHARITABLE ASSOCIATION.

THE sixteenth annual meeting of the Staffordshire Masonic Charitable Association was held on the 21st inst., at the North Stafford Hotel, Stoke, when Bro. Frank James (Walsall) P.D.P.G.M. presided, and there was a good attendance of brethren, representing most Lodges in the Province of Staffordshire. The fifteenth annual report was presented by Bro. T. Mount Humphries, which showed that the amount of subscriptions contributed to the Association by the various Lodges amounted to £779 17s 7d, and a sum of £753 18s had been sent direct to London from the Province of Staffordshire. The following brethren have given in their names as Stewards for the Festivals of 1886:—Bro. W. H. Bailey P.M. 624 for Benevolent Festival on the 24th February; Brothers W. Vernon P.M. 456, R. Tooth P.M. 637, and W. Randle W.M. 482 for the Girls' School Festival, 19th May; Bro. Percy Evershed P.M. 624 and F. J. Turley P.M. 1792 for the Boys' School Festival, in June. In moving the adoption of the report, the President said the report had been carefully considered that morning by the Committee, and was one which every one would consider was of a very high and congratulatory character, when they considered that the Association had only been in existence something like 16 years. When it first commenced the Association was started with a subscription of £5 5s only, but singular progress had been made, and they now had a subscription list of over £800 a-year which was collected for the purpose of carrying on the work of this Association. That could not be otherwise than satisfactory throughout. He did not mean to say that £5 5s was the only sum contributed by the brethren of Staffordshire, because individual subscriptions were given direct to the various Masonic Charitable Institutions, but the subscription of £5 5s was the beginning of an organisation which had worked so much good, and so effectively for the purpose of securing the interest of Staffordshire in connection with the Masonic Institutions. He had always held that loyalty to these institutions was a great point, and he would impress on all brethren of Staffordshire loyalty, because, as had been said in the report, year by year the difficulty of securing the election of any candidate became greater and greater. However, there was the fact that since the establishment of this institution the Province of Staffordshire had never put its hand to any good work for the purpose of getting elected a candidate whether to the Boys', Girls', or Benevolent Institution, without effecting its object. Having succeeded on all these occasions, they might take credit for those successes from the simple fact that the organisation, which was formed for the purpose, had accomplished its object. The President said perhaps the poorest Lodge in the province had from necessity to make the largest application for benefits, but he hoped that those Lodges receiving benefits would endeavour to do all they could, and use every effort they could, to recompense the Association, to show that they were actually grateful for the benefits conferred upon them. In connection with the subscriptions, whether considered as to the A or B fund, they were a matter for congratulation. He thought the brethren of the different Lodges would see that the longer the Association existed, the greater the necessity for their holding together, and uniting in loyal support to the institution of which they were members. He then most cordially moved the adoption of the report. Bro. J. F. Pepper seconded the adoption of the report, which was carried. Bro. Pepper then moved the re-election of Bro. Frank James as president for the ensuing year. He said Bro. James had shown a great interest in the work of the Association, and since his election to the office he had not missed a single meeting. Bro. A. G. Price seconded, and said that the Province of Staffordshire was deeply indebted to Bro. James for his great exertions in the work of the Association. The motion was carried unanimously. In acknowledging his re-election, Bro. James thanked the brethren heartily for the vote of confidence they had passed in him. While he cordially accepted the office for the present year he did desire distinctly to give them intimation that at the expiration of this year he should like to retire. Yes, he could assure them that he had so many engagements of a public and private character that he must ask them to seriously consider before that time next year, and endeavour to find some brother to occupy the position he now held. For a period of ten years, ever since the lamented death of the Earl of Shrewsbury, he had been president of the Association, and it was true that he had never been absent from one of the meetings, either general or committee, but it was absolutely impossible that he could continue to occupy the position of president of the Masonic Charitable Association of Staffordshire after this year. The brethren of the South, for a considerable period, had done honourable work, and no doubt honourable work would continue to be done by them, and he hoped some one from the North would undertake the duties he now cordially accepted. Bro. Bodenham, who was prevented from being present through illness, was re-elected a Vice-President of the Association, along with Bro. W. H. Bailey 624. Bro. Bayliss was re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. Humphries Secretary, and Bros. Humphries and Turner were appointed Managers of elections, and a cordial vote of thanks was passed to Bro. Bayliss for his services in the past. Bros. Joyce and Woodhouse were re-elected Auditors. A discussion took place on a communication that had been received from Bros. Greatbach (Hanley), and Turner (Longton), with regard to the expenditure at the Masonic Charitable Institutions. Bro. Greatbach said he had carefully compared the cost of educating the boys at institutions similar to that of the Masonic Institution for Boys in London, and he was firmly convinced that the cost of maintenance at the latter institution was excessive. The cost for educating each boy was £15 11s. whereas at other institutions, such as the Commercial Travellers', the Yorkshire Society, the Licensed Victuallers' Society, and the Clerks' and Warehousemen's Society, all being institutions similar in character, and on all fours with the Masonic Institution for Boys, the cost was much less. He contended that the statistics which he now read proved that the cost per boy per annum ought not to exceed £35, and if the cost was reduced to that amount the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys would provide for 13 where only 10 now receive the benefits of the Institution. The matter ought to be taken in hand, and something done to reform the expenditure of the institution. He concluded by moving, "That a presentment be made from the Staffordshire Masonic Charitable Association to the Provincial Grand Lodge of Staffordshire, that the Staffordshire Masonic Charitable Association is of opinion that the expenditure at the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys is excessive and injudiciously applied, and that it is desirable for the Provincial Grand Lodge of Staffordshire to petition H.R.H. the M.W.G.M., as President of the Institution, to authorize the appointment of an independent Committee to investigate and report to the M.W.G.M. what alterations are necessary to render the said Institution more extensively useful." The President expressed his hearty sympathy with the remarks made by Bro. Greatbach. This was no new matter by any means. For years passed he, from his position, had been preaching the same doctrine, that they were not getting, as Masons, the larger amount of benefits for the enormous sums of money which they annually contributed to those Institutions. When they considered the contributions of brethren in support of the three institutions amounted to over £50,000 a year, there was very considerable room for doing an enormous amount of good, and the only question that had been present to his mind had been, did that £50,000 a year do that amount of good, and was that amount of discretion exercised over the funds which there ought to be? Over and over again he had brought forward to this Association comparative figures of the cost of education at different institutions, and there had always been this fact noticed that the Masonic Institutions had been largely and grossly in excess of any other similar charitable institutions. Bro. Turner (Longton) seconded the proposition of Bro. Greatbach, and corroborated the remarks of the latter, but after some discussion, on the suggestion of Bro. Bayliss, the proposition was withdrawn, and Bro. Baylis moved and Hamshaw seconded a resolution to the effect that a committee be nominated to consider the whole question, which was carried. The next annual meeting is to be held at Lichfield.

Our Warrior Princes. The Four Edwards, and the War of the Roses. By Roscoe Mongan, B.A. London: Dean and Son, 160A Fleet-street, E.C.

Undecorated Heroes. By Philip H. Hemyng, late R.N. London: Dean and Son, 160A Fleet-street, E.C.

Of all the tempting dishes of interest and information that can be spread before the boys of Britain, those which savour of adventure and "accidents by flood and field," are ever the most acceptable, and this fact has evidently been recognised by the firm of publishers named, in their issue of the "Deeds of Daring Library." In the first named volume is given an historical record of many of the internecine battles that are emblazoned on the scroll of English annals, the main accidents of which are graphically described, and in a style of diction which the rising generation love, because they can easily comprehend it. The four Edwards include, of course, the conqueror of Wales and Scotland, the victor on the field of Cressy, the chivalrous "Black Prince," the hero of Poitiers; the valiant Edward IV., and the chequered fortunes of the Wars of the Roses. These are all presented in an attractive form, and will not only prove interesting and entertaining to boys, but will serve also as an extremely useful guide to the important study of English history. The work bristles with martial episodes which have left their mark upon the national escutcheon, and they are clothed with such facile skill that they cannot prove otherwise than attractive to the intelligent youthful readers to whom they are addressed. The little work is plentifully embellished with engravings and maps, the former including the famous collapse of Stirling Bridge, the murder of Rutland by Clifford, the sanguinary combat between French and English cavalry in the Somme; the charge of French cavalry, led by Marshals Andreghen and Clermont, and their overthrow by the English archers at Poitiers; the Black Prince's march through Roncesvalles; Stanley presenting to the Duke of Richmond the Crown of Richard III., which had been found in a bush in the battle-field of Bosworth; and many others. The work is dedicated to Lieut.-Col. F. M. Wardrop, of the 3rd Dragoon Guards, whose splendid reconnaissance with "The Daring Five" during the Soudan campaign will be remembered by the merest tyro in the modern history of English warfare. The second work under our consideration is of a more varied description, but is nevertheless brimful of exciting and interesting episode and adventure. The author gives as his raison d'être for the work that in the present day we have the Victoria Cross for naval and military heroes, the Albert medal for civilian heroes, and the Royal Humane Society's medal for those who exhibit their heroism in saving life from drowning; while every little engagement that in former days would scarcely have been noticed in the Gazette is now rewarded by a medal or a bar. But that magnificent bull-dog courage which is so typical of the true Briton, and which, when united with the necessary presence of mind, produces the hero par excellence, is often unnoticed and unrewarded, and of these the author has collected and put into handy form a series of instances of undaunted bravery and presence of mind, with the threefold object of amusing his older readers, enduing them with a spirit of emulation, and rescuing the names of a few undecorated heroes from undeserved oblivion. There are capitally written stories of adventure on land and sea, and these are well illustrated by original engravings by H. Leask. Both these works are well got up and calculated to amuse, and instruct our youth, without any of the pernicious sentimentalism which unfortunately permeates so much of the literature for boys which emanates from the cheap press of the present day.

Another of those popular entertainments provided during the season for the pupils of our Boys' School, at Wood Green, will be given this (Saturday) evening, when the entertainers will be the Carolina Minstrels, who have distinguished themselves at our Institutions on many former occasions.

This week has again been an exceptionally busy one in Masonic circles. The consecration of the Prince Edward Lodge, No. 2019; Lodge of Israel, 205, installation; the Lodge of Union, 414, installation; the Neptune Lodge, 22, installation; Polish National Lodge, 554; and several other meetings are deferred until our next issue.

CONSECRATION OF THE DRURY LANE LODGE, No. 2127.

ONE of the most important events of the week in connection with Masonry in London, and indeed throughout the country, namely the consecration of a new Lodge, intended especially for the dramatic profession and those associated with it in the higher walks of literature, music, and art, was celebrated on Monday, when the Drury Lane Lodge was inaugurated under the most splendid auspices at Freemasons' Hall. It is well known in the Craft that this "new departure," which has excited so wide an interest in Masonic circles, was initiated by Bro. Augustus Harris, the popular and successful proprietor of Drury Lane Theatre; and, judging from the magnificent start made, the Lodge, which has been named after that historical and national theatre, bids fair to rise rapidly in the firmament of Masonic light. Its "local habitation" will be within the precincts of Drury Lane, where a special temple is to be fitted up in the most elaborate and luxurious style; and there can be little doubt that this section of the Masonic Craft will prove one of the most useful and influential in the whole of the Fraternity. The founders of the Lodge are Bro. Lord Londesborough P.G.S.W., who has been installed as its first Master, Bro. Augustus Harris as its Senior Warden, Bros. Sir John Eldon Gorst, Q.C., M.P., Solicitor General, Junior Warden, H. Neville P.M., A. M. Broadley P.D.D.G.M. of Malta Secretary, Bros. Charles Warner, Thomas Thorne, Henry Pettitt, and R. C. Woodville, Lieut.-Col. H. H. Kitchener, J. S. Fleming (Treas.), Sir Edward A. Inglefield, C.B., and J. H. Clynds. A brilliant and distinguished company of guests assembled at the Consecration ceremony, Grand Lodge and most of the Provinces being represented by prominent Officers; and the aspect of the hall, when filled by so large a gathering of Masons, was picturesque in the extreme. Amongst those present were: Bros. Col. Shadwell Clerke, Gen. Laurie the G.M. of Nova Scotia, F. A. Philbrick, Q.C., Capt. N. Philips, Frank Richardson, Gen. Studholme Brownrigg, the Earl of Onslow, Rev. C. J. Martyn, Thomas Fenn, J. H. Matthews, J. C. Parkinson, Robert Grey, the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor of London (Alderman Staples), Sheriff Clarke, Dr. W. H. Russell, Captain H. V. Pirie, T. H. Bolton, M.P., K. R. Murchison, Joseph Isaacs, A. Bloxam, Col. Honeywood, L. L. Wynne, W. A. Hart, Bradshaw Browne, Deputy George Sims, W. Sidney, Col. Robert Douglas, Right Hon. W. T. Marriott, Q.C., M.P., Gen. Sir Seymour Blane, Alderman Isaacs, Dr. Robson Roose, T. Burnside, C. F. Matier, A. O. Tagart, Dr. Ramsey, H. Hacker, P. Wallis, F. Massey, C. Coote, H. Botty, M. Léon, Maj. Josephs. The brethren having assembled in the Lodge room, the presiding Officer Colonel Shadwell H. Clerke, Grand Secretary, took the chair, and appointed his Officers pro tem: Bros. Fenn President of the Board of General Purposes as S.W., Robert Gray P.G.D. J.W., Rev. C. J. Martyn P.G.C. as Chaplain, Frank Richardson P.G.D. Director of Ceremonies, and J. H. Matthews P.G. Standard Bearer I.G. Apologies for non-attendance were read from his Grace the Duke of Abercorn G.M. designate of Ireland, Earl of Rosslyn P.G.M. of Scotland, Viscount Wolseley, Earl of Limerick, W. W. B. Beach, M.P., Lord Robartes, Earl of Jersey, Marquis of Hertford, Sir Albert Woods, Lord Charles Beresford, M.P., and many others, most of their letters conveying hearty good wishes for the prosperity of the new Lodge. Having opened in the three degrees, the hymn, "Hail! Eternal, by whose aid," was sung, the musical arrangements being under the direction of Bro. Dr. Wilhelm Ganz P.G.O., who was ably assisted by Bros. J. Hodges, W. Sexton (altos), G. T. Lawler sen., T. Lawler jun., E. J. Bell (basses). After solemn rites, the brethren of the new Lodge were arranged in order, and the Director of Ceremonies read the petition and warrant; and after the brethren had signified their approval in Masonic form of the Officers named therein, an eloquent oration on the principles of the Institution was delivered by the Chaplain, the Rev. C. J. Martyn. He dwelt upon the cardinal principles upon which Freemasonry is founded, and hoped that prosperity might attend the new Lodge. Might Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth, in conjunction with Temperance, Fortitude, Prudence, and Justice ever actuate their minds and subdue their passions, and might these "three grand principles," and these "four cardinal virtues" ever be practised by them all, and be transmitted through their Lodge, pure and unimpaired, from generation to generation. The anthem, "Behold how good and joyful a thing it is for brethren to dwell together in unity," was then sung, and the invocation given; after which the Chaplain read 2 Chronicles xi. 1—6, which was followed by the hymn "Supreme Grand Master! God of Power!" Lodge board was then uncovered, and the consecrating Officer strewed corn, the emblem of plenty; poured wine, the emblem of joy and happiness; oil, the emblem of unity, and sprinkled salt. Having done this he dedicated the Lodge, the brethren joining in the anthem, "Glory be to God on high." The Chaplain took the censer three times round the Lodge (solemn music being performed during his progress), and halted in the East, when the anthem, "O Lord, how manifold are Thy works," having been chanted, the presiding Officer duly constituted the Lodge, and the final benediction was pronounced. Lodge was then resumed in the second degree, and Lord Londesborough was duly installed into the chair, the ceremony being performed in masterly style by Col. Shadwell Clerke. The newly-installed Master having been proclaimed and saluted with the customary Masonic honours, appointed and invested his Officers for the year, as follow:—Bros. H. Neville to act as I.P.M., Augustus Harris S.W., Sir John Gorst J.W., A. M. Broadley Secretary, Sir Edmund A. Inglefield S.D., Henry Pettitt J.D., Charles Warner I.G., J. Fleming (Treasurer of Drury Lane Theatre) Treasurer, R. E. Goddard Tyler. Colonel Shadwell Henry Clerke and the Officers who had assisted him in the Consecration ceremony were then unanimously elected hon members of the Lodge, for which the Grand Secretary briefly returned thanks. Bro. General Laurie Grand Master of Nova Scotia was also elected an hon member, and acknowledged the compliment paid him. The following brethren were proposed as joining members:—Bros. Lord Suffield P.G.W. Prov. G.M. Norfolk, Thomas Tew P.G.D. P.G.M. West Yorkshire, Sir John Monckton P.G.W. Past President Board of General Purposes, Joseph C. Parkinson P.G.D. of England P.P.D.G.M. Middlesex, Wilhelm Ganz P.G. Organist, Major A. G. Dickson, M.P., 1150, J. Tynte Agg-Gardner, M.P., 82, Colonel Hughes Hallett, M.P., 255, Dr. Morell-Mackenzie 28, Thomas Henry Bolton, M.P., 701, Charles Wyndham 36 (S.C.), Robson Roose, M.D., 63 810, Col. Robert Douglas 1615, A. Cooper, M.D., P.G. Steward 252 P.M. 1591, William Howard Russell, D.C.L., 319 Malta 1068 Cairo, Herbert Edward Story (Herbert Campbell) 657, C. J. Phipps, F.S.A. P.M. 41 P.G. Supt. of Works Somerset, Charles Dickens P.M. 960, Lord A. Paget 33, Charles Coote 1319, Captain H. V. Pirie, 5th Lancers, 1118, Lionel Brough 1319, James Fernandez 1319, Alfred Gibbons 96, Thomas Clarke, Sheriff of London and Middlesex, 1827, and Major Hyman Joseph, 3rd M.A.V. After the usual congratulations had been exchanged, the proceedings closed. The brethren assembled at a magnificent banquet, under the presidency of the W.M. Lord Londesborough, when the loyal toasts were given from the chair and duly honoured. Bro. Sir John Gorst, Q.C., M.P., Solicitor-General, proposed the health of the Pro G.M. the Earl of Carnarvon, the Deputy G.M. the Earl of Lathom, and the rest of the Grand Officers Present and Past. Bro. General J. Studholme Brownrigg, C.B., Provincial Grand Master of Surrey, who was called on to respond, said there was an old adage that "we should never halloo until we are out of the wood." Doubtless this originally applied to fox-hunting; he was in the position of a fox who had been obliged to break cover. He had not expected to be called upon to respond, he had forgotten for the moment that for thirty-one years he had been a Grand Officer. However, he had been rattled out of cover, and was sure he had the sympathy of all the Grand Officers, Past and Present. It was always a pleasure to aid and support a new Lodge, and such an addition as this to the roll of Lodges on the register of the Grand Lodge of England must be a satisfaction to them all. He and the Grand Officers wished the new Lodge every prosperity. Admiral Sir Edward Inglefield, C.B. then proposed the Sister Grand Lodges, with reference to which toast he said, lately he had become acquainted with General Laurie, Most Worshipful Grand Master of Nova Scotia, upon whom he should call to respond. Brother General Laurie stood in the same position in Canada as the Prince of Wales did in this country with regard to Freemasonry. He was worthy of that high and honourable position. The duties of the Grand Lodge there were carried out with the utmost integrity, and in every relation in life General Laurie was deserving of that cordial reception which he (the speaker) was perfectly sure would be accorded to him that evening. After suitable response had been made, Bro. Colonel Shadwell Clerke proposed the health of the W.M., Lord Londesborough, in introducing which toast he said he was about to make an entirely novel remark. He was going to say he was about to propose "the toast of the evening." Had it been so, it had never been to him so gratifying as on the present occasion, when all the members of the Drury Lane Lodge welcomed as its first Master the noble brother who now occupied the chair. They were all aware, and he was sure they were all deeply grieved at the knowledge, that his lordship had recently been the victim of a sad accident. Such, however, had been his lordship's indomitable perseverance, fortitude and pluck that he had now nearly recovered from its effects, so that he was present amongst them as their Worshipful Master. Lord Londesborough had earned the gratitude of all good Masons. He had done long and useful service to the Craft. He had been a Mason over 30 years, and for upwards of a quarter of a century had occupied the distinguished position of Past Grand Senior Warden of England. During that time he had occupied the chairs of no less than three Lodges; moreover, he had taken a great personal interest in matters theatrical. Therefore it was only fit and proper that when this eminently successful Lodge was started the Founders should select so good and worthy a brother to preside over them. The brethren would join with him in welcoming Lord Londesborough that night in the chair, and in wishing him a speedy and happy recovery. Lord Londesborough W.M., in a brief response, thanked the brethren for the kind and flattering reception they had accorded him. He was deeply touched with their consideration, in that he knew they had foregone what was to the majority of those present a pleasure, viz., that of smoking, on account of his present affliction. He thanked the Grand Officers present and the brethren for starting this new Lodge so well; he thought the members of the Drury Lane Lodge would combine to carry it to a successful issue. It would be impossible they could have a Lodge to contain all the members of the dramatic profession, for that would require as large a hall as that which many of the brethren attended at the installation of the Prince of Wales. They must be satisfied to have a section of the dramatic profession within the Lodge, and of those who were attached to that profession in various ways. Of both these sections they had a good representative assemblage that evening, and he congratulated them upon the fact. Bro. Henry Neville, in proposing the health of the Consecrating Officer and his Assistants, felt sure he was expressing the sentiments of the brethren present when he said never had they been so impressed with the rendering of the consecration ceremony as they had been that day. He was very proud to have the pleasure of being one of the Founders of this Lodge. There were only two pleasures in a man's life, one of which was in looking back upon work well done, and in looking to the future. After he had passed the chair he looked back with the greatest pleasure in the world upon the kind and brotherly love he had received at the hands of all the brethren. The Drury Lane Lodge had no past history upon which they could look back, but they could anticipate for it a glorious future. They could look forward with faith, hope, and pride; faith in the admirable teaching of their Worshipful Master and his Wardens; hope, that they might all entertain the purest principles of Masonic feeling; and pride, that many good and honourable names would be inscribed upon the roll of the Lodge. Brother Colonel Shadwell Clerke thanked the proposer of the toast for the kindly terms in which it had been couched. Such a compliment from Bro. Neville was very gratifying indeed; he could assure the brethren he felt exceeding pleasure in being permitted to take part in the ceremony. He was always too glad to do whatever he possibly could to further the interests of the Order, and he tendered his hearty thanks to every brother who had assisted him that day. Especially he thanked the Rev. Bro. Martyn, their excellent Chaplain, Bro. Frank Richardson, who had so ably discharged the duties of Director of Ceremonies, and Bro. Mathews, who acted as Inner Guard. Being supported by an unusually able body of men, he thought that between them they had done the work fairly well; and this was a matter of satisfaction to him, because in the Drury Lane Lodge they had taken what might be called a new departure. It would number on its roll a grand assemblage of "all sorts and conditions of men," from north, south, east and west. He congratulated them upon the result of the evening, and as he had mentioned in the consecrating room, he predicted for the new Lodge a triumphant success. He hoped, however, that it would be careful, as all other Lodges should be, in not taking all into it who desired to join. He felt always bound to say a few words on this subject, for when a popular Lodge was started there were always a large number of candidates willing to rush in. They read in the papers of the advantage likely to accrue from connection with such a Lodge, and were most anxious to join it. But he warned this Lodge, as he had done others, to be careful—to "hasten slowly," for the more difficult it was to join a Lodge the better class of members there would be in the long run. He thanked them all exceedingly, particularly the Brother who proposed this toast, for the kindness with which they had received the mention of his name. Bro. A. M. Broadley, on rising to propose the Visitors, was received with every demonstration of welcome. He said, in endeavouring to emulate the excellent example which had been set to them by their Worshipful Master, he was afraid he should not be able to do justice to the extraordinary list which was recorded on the first Visitors' pages of the Drury Lane Lodge. Still to-night he thought some excuse might be made for him if he expressed that feeling which was experienced particularly by the members of the dramatic profession. They could easily appreciate the anxiety with which Bro. Augustus Harris felt on a "first night," and the trepidation of an actor who first spoke to them in a new capacity. During the past seven years it had been his frequent opportunity to tell them of some of his work in sunnier climes, but he now stood before them on the boards of the Drury Lane Lodge, to propose a toast to which he had often answered in days gone by; and he did so with some feelings of pride, for a more representative assembly of Visitors never graced the launching of a Masonic ship. They had the pleasure of numbering in their midst the Consul General of America (Bro. Waller), whilst General Lanrie was there to represent the Colonial Grand Lodges. Representatives were present from the Upper House of the British legislature; and their list contained the names of seven or eight members of Parliament. He ventured to say to those who had left for more tempestuous scenes that they would not there feel the placid unanimity which characterised the first meeting of the Drury Lane Lodge. It was a matter of congratulation that two of them at least had stuck to their guns, for he believed the Solicitor-General was still in his place amongst them, and that the honourable member for Dover preferred Masonry to the regions of controversial politics. There also remained amongst them the gallant Admiral Sir Edward Inglefield, C.B., who was their Senior Warden, to represent the Navy; for the Army they had General Studholme Brownrigg and other gallant officers; for the medical profession Dr. A. Cooper and others. Amongst that able and valuable body of men the legal profession, were not only the Solicitor-General, but Bro. Philbrick, Q.C., the Right Hon. W. T. Marriott, Q.C., M.P., besides representatives from every other possible sphere of tragedy and comedy, whose names were "household words" wherever the English language was spoken. He had only to mention the names of Lionel Brough, Augustus Harris, Henry Pettitt,—men known to every one in the room. Literature was represented by Dr. W. H. Russell and Joseph Parkinson; the corporate dignitaries of the City of London were represented by the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs of London and Middlesex. It was a great honour to have such celebrities to visit the Drury Lane Lodge, and there were other names which brought him back to sunnier climes, and to an atmosphere eminently preferable to that which they had, within the last few days, experienced outside. There were brethren present who first saw Masonic light in Malta, which was the half-way house to the Mediterranean, amongst these was Dr. W. H. Russell, who was initiated there at the instance of the Most Worshipful Grand Master, and who was made a Fellow Craft in the ancient City of Cairo. He only hoped that the eminent littérateur had returned to find the charms of the third degree under the auspices of the Drury Lane Lodge, a Lodge which could arrange such a meeting as this, to say nothing of the many brethren who came from nearly every county in England, representatives of the great Masonic Charities, and other spheres of life. They might say the greatest success had attended the first meeting. If they all desired to see the prosperity of the Lodge they could not do better than take heed to the advice which had been tendered to them by Col. Shadwell Clerke. In drinking to this toast they were drinking to the health of men who would ever be associated with the traditions of the Drury Lane Lodge, and he intended to couple with it three names, each of which had a certain significance; the first was Bro. Philbrick Grand Registrar of England, Consul General Waller, who represented America, and their veteran friend Dr. W. H. Russell. Bro. Philbrick, Q.C., in the course of his observations, said that the founders of this Lodge had exercised the true Masonic axiom—hospitality. If he might speak on behalf of his brother Visitors he would say that this promised to be a strongly representative Lodge, supplying a want which had been long felt, and which would be a welcome addition to the Masonic Lodges already in existence; that it had a great career before it the results of this evening attested; he wished the newly-consecrated Lodge a long career of prosperity. Consul General Waller also responded in eloquent terms, and was followed by Dr. W. H. Russell, who hoped the young fledgling they had just seen hatched would shortly plume its wings and soar into the higher regions of Masonic life. Bro. Joseph Parkinson, in the absence of Bro. Edmund Yates, proposed Prosperity to the Drury Lane Lodge. He said in the speeches they had heard so eloquently delivered they had seen the ground entirely cut from under his feet, and he asked whether it would be possible for him to add anything to the encomiums that had been passed on the Drury Lane Lodge? They had been told of the high qualities of the Worshipful Master, to which he sincerely desired to add his humble testimony. He asked them now to drink to the successful future of the Drury Lane Lodge, on the ground of what in a great measure had brought them together that night, viz., a sympathy with an intellectual calling, and the great traditions which the name of Drury Lane inspired. He referred to the long line of brilliant dramatic successes that had hovered around the career of Bro. Augustus Harris. He looked forward in the hope that the prosperity which they anticipated for this Lodge would be equal to that which he had achieved at the Drury Lane Theatre. He trusted that the associations of a high lineage of dramatic genius, combined with Masonic experience, would grow into a harmonious whole. It had been brought before the dramatic profession that Shakespeare himself was a Freemason, and if so, where could his spirit look down more happily than upon the Drury Lane Lodge? He thanked Bro. Harris for the spirit in which he had brought forward this Lodge and assured him on behalf of the company that when in the fulness of time he filled the chair, they would all have the same pleasure of supporting him on his installation night. Brother Augustus Harris in reply observed that Brother Parkinson had told them that the ground had been slowly and deliberately cut from beneath him, and that there remained nothing more to be said. Still, he called upon him to say something more, which he thought was rather a paradox. Bro. Parkinson had told them a great deal about the morality of the Lodge; this he should have great pleasure in reporting to Mrs. Harris. But when he reached home and informed her of all their virtues he should endeavour to make her satisfied that they came here for the purpose of drinking to their wives' healths especially. With regard to this Lodge would they allow him to thank them, as Senior Warden, for the way in which they had assembled that evening, and for the kind way in which they had expressed their hearty good wishes for its prosperity. He went into the Drury Lane Theatre seven years ago, as young in theatrical matters as he was in Masonry, but he hoped to advance in Masonry in the same way that he had advanced in the theatrical profession. In conclusion he thanked them all for their presence that evening. The Worshipful Master then vacated the chair amidst the hearty congratulations of the brethren, leaving the presidency in the hands of Bro. H. Neville. Brother Lord Onslow then gave the health of the Officers of the Lodge, in doing which he said they had seen in the production of the Drury Lane Lodge traces of that lavish and magnificent entertainment which they were accustomed to look for at the Pantomimes at Drury Lane Theatre. Referring to the Baddeley Festival, celebrated there on Twelfth Night, he contrasted the difference in that Festival in the present day, under their generous Senior Warden, to those times when it was asked how far the bequest of £3 per annum would go in cakes and wine? Of their Junior Warden it might be said that he was not only eminently learned in the law, but he had also achieved a great Parliamentary reputation, and his name would go down to posterity as having, with three other gentlemen, formed a new and separate party in Parliament. Their Senior Deacon, Sir E. Inglefield, had been all over the world, and probably he had seen as much of the world as any person or thing, excepting that mysterious patrimony which he carried in his pocket, his father's watch. With respect to Bro. Pettitt there was no one in the ranks of Masonry who was better acquainted with Human Nature. As to their excellent Secretary, Bro. Broadley, his sympathies were wide and extended to every class and to every creed. He could not bear to see any one down-trodden, and would even rather take part with those who rebelled than those who would leave them in the lurch. With regard to Bro. Fleming it would be impossible to form a Lodge equal to this without him as Treasurer, and as much of Freemasonry consisted in eating and drinking, he knew no one more competent to speak on the subject of "Drink" than Bro. Warner. Bro. Sir J. Gorst, responding for the Officers, said they would do their best to deserve the kindly remarks that had been made respecting them; and next year, when they would probably see Bro. Augustus Harris installed into the chair, if it were possible to repeat any of the kind things that had been said that night, it would be most satisfactory. He hoped, so far as the Officers were concerned, they would work in the true spirit of Masonry, and that the interests of the Lodge would not suffer at their hands. Bro. Chas. Dickens briefly proposed the Masonic Charities, in doing which he said the great Institutions were the very life-blood of the Craft. Such a toast needed but few words from him to recommend it to the acceptance of any body of Masons. He wished to remind them, however, that Bro. Broadley was going up for the fifth time as a Steward for the Boys' School, and he hoped they would send him up this time with a list which should be a best on record. Another matter deserved notice, and it was that on Friday next, at Drury Lane Theatre, there would be such an assembly of the Boys and Girls of the Masonic Institutions as had never before been witnessed. By the kindness of their Senior Warden, Bro. Harris, room had been found for them on that afternoon in the theatre where for many weeks past room of any kind had been lacking, and he was told on excellent authority that the W.M. would not be unknown in connection with those cheering words to children, "buns and oranges." He concluded by observing that wherever charity was known, Masonry was one of its most earnest and substantial supporters. Bro. F. Binckes, Secretary of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, in the course of his response, did not hesitate to say he felt it a very great and proud privilege, in the presence of so many members and visitors of this Lodge, to respond on behalf of the Masonic Institutions. It was very gratifying that his name had been associated with this toast, and he would endeavour to follow the example of the speakers of the evening in being as brief as possible in the remarks which it would be his pleasure and duty to utter. There might be some difference of opinion as to how this toast should be treated on an occasion like the present, but after listening to the Chaplain during the consecration of the Lodge, there was no brother who would not support the Masonic Institutions. Allusion had been made to the fact that on Friday next upwards of 500 objects of their care would be entertained by a moving spirit of the Drury Lane Lodge, who would be assisted by his lordship, the W.M., and other members and enabled to enjoy that magnificent sight which had never been surpassed, if ever equalled, by any spectacular effort in the past. They had heard much of "the wonderful lamp," and let them hope there might be many sacred lights burning in the cause of Masonic Charity. When he told them that at the next Festival of the Boys' Institution one of these sacred lamps would be held by their esteemed Bro. Broadley, to whose merits such valuable and deserved testimony had been paid, he felt sure that lamp would not be held in vain, but that the brethren would fill it with oil that would make it burn with brilliancy such as should never fail. He asked the brethren to bear in mind that there was a vast amount of distress which could only look to its legitimate sources of relief; and he appealed to them, therefore, to afford all the support they could to the three Masonic Institutions, which were for the maintenance of the old and decayed brethren and their widows, and the maintenance and education of the young of both sexes. The proceedings, which had been of a highly interesting and enjoyable character throughout, were brought to a fitting close by the Tyler.

FUNERALS properly carried out and personally attended, in London or Country, by Bro. G. A. HUTTON, 17 Newcastle Street, Strand, W.C. Monuments erected. Valuations made.

CONSECRATION OF THE PRUDENCE LODGE, No. 2114.

THE consecration of this Lodge, which took place at the Masonic Hall, Hope-street, Liverpool, in the second week in the new year, created an unusual amount of interest in Masonic circles, and attracted a more influential assembly of the leaders than any which has been witnessed for a long time in this city. The novel feature of the Prudence is that it will be conducted on Temperance principles—that is to say, no intoxicating liquors will be allowed to be consumed at refreshment by members of the Lodge. A similar regulation is a conspicuous feature of the Wolseley Lodge, No. 1933, Manchester, consecrated by the distinguished General after whom it is named some two years ago, and the success which has attended its existence fully warrants the Liverpool brethren in following the example set them by Manchester Freemasons. The Wolseley Lodge now numbers about 100 members; and judging from the success which marked the inauguration of the Prudence, it is certain that its existence will be one of continued prosperity. Several enthusiastic Freemasons are closely identified with its inauguration and interests, and the first meeting was in every respect of a most hopeful and promising character. About 100 brethren were present to witness the impressive ceremony, amongst these being Bros. Lord Claud J Hamilton, M.P. Abercorn Lodge, 251, Ireland, W. Goodacre P.G. Sec. acting P.G.M., E. Pierpoint P.G.J.W., J. D. Murray P.G.D.C., R. Washington P.P.G.S.D., J. B. Mackenzie P.P.G.S.D., Harold Wyatt P.G. Asst. Secretary, W. C. Erwin P.P.G. Asst. Secretary, Rev. H. G. Vernon P.P.G.C., Rev. R. F. Leslie P.G.C., R. Foote P.G. Treas., J. H. Barrow P.G.S.D., J. Beesley P.G.S.D., George Brouthridge P.P.G.D.C., R. Cain P.G. Steward, R. Williams P.G.S.B., John Cobham P.G.S.D., G. Morgan P.G.J.D., T. Whitehead P.G.S., John Duncan jun. P.P.G.D.C., J. T. Callow P.P.G.T., H. S. Lacy P.P.C.D.C., T. Salter P.P.G.S.D., Robert Martin P.P.G.T., John Whalley P.P.G.D.C., Maurice Hart P.P.G.D. of C., H. Williams P.P.G.A.D.C., R. Ripley P.P.G.A.D.C., J. M. Smythe P.M. 93 Belfast, S. Haynes P.M. 1547, R. White W.M. 241, J. Platt W.M. 1173, W. H. Hignett W.M. 1547, T. H. W. Walker W.M. 1678, H. Derbyshire P.M. 1993, D. Edwards P.M. 1993 (one of the Founders, and first Masters of the Wolseley Lodge, Manchester), R. G. Bradley W.M. 249, J. Hocken P.M. 675, John Brotherton I.P.M. 241, R. Harley P.M. 1475, R. R. Martin P.M. 1094. The chair was taken by Bro. W. Goodacre P.P.G.R. P.G. Secretary, acting as Consecrating Officer, supported by Bros. R. Pierpoint P.G.J.W. acting S.W., J. T. Callow P.P.G.T. acting J.W., J. H. Barrow P.G.S.D. acting P.G. Secretary, J. D. Murray P.G.D.C. acting D.C., and M. Hart P.P.G.D. of C. acting I.G. The acting Prov. G.M., Bro. Goodacre, on opening the Lodge, addressed the brethren on the nature of the meeting, after which the P.G.C., Rev. R. Leslie, offered up prayer. The Founders of the Lodge were then ranged in order, as follows:—Bros. J. Duncan jun. P.P.G.D.C. 1547, Robert Foote P.G.Tr. 1505; H. J. Nicholls 2042, R. Ripley P.P.G.A.D.C. 1547, Malcolm Guthrie J.W. 1547, H. G. Isaacs 1547. The acting P.G. Secretary read the petition and warrant, and the brethren approved the same, after which an oration was delivered by the P.P.G.C., Bro. A. G. Vernon, as follows:—

Right Worshipful Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Grand Officers, and Brethren,—On the dedication of the Lodge of Prudence, No. 2114, I have been requested to address a few observations suitable to the interesting occasion. There is always, no doubt, a feeling of solemnity attached to the meetings of the brethren, even when the business that calls them together is of the most ordinary nature, for no degree exempts us from that serious obligation which is the glory of our Craft at all times, and under all circumstances, at the opening of a Lodge solemnly to invoke the presence and countenance of the Great Architect of the World. But to-day we are called together for a purpose so august and sacred that all levity and carelessness must be utterly impossible, while in pursuance of dedicating this Lodge to His service who, as the Great Master Builder, has originated the principles upon which our Masonic Order professes to be founded. And first, as to principles, which are the foundations of any Order, our principles are that our members should be mutually beneficial to each other, and instruments for the good of Society, which, in the scriptural phrase, is "to be of one mind, having compassion one for another, and to love as brethren." Wherever there is a brother like ourselves, the offspring of one common stock, partaker of the same nature and sharer of the same hope—so in numberless instances it has proved itself to be—it has gained for the wandering traveller kindness in an inhospitable and savage clime; it has quelled the violence of the pirate by sea; it has, in the various and distinct nations which diversify the map of the world, discovered everywhere an object for the display of that beneficence which each brother owes to his fellow. Looking back to the pages of ancient history, we trace, even in the records of the sacred volume, the origin of our Order. The pedigree of our Society is both ancient and honourable, for virtue is virtue, whether it be ancient or modern, whether it dazzle from the throne, or glimmer from the hut, and having stood the lapse of ages, and the storm of opposition, proves itself erected upon a good and sound foundation. The principles of our Masonic Order are derived from Him who is the Maker and Builder of the Temple of the World. The Great Master of all, in whose presence alone we seek to be approved, and to whom, as on all occasions, so now much more especially, we dedicate this Lodge. But presuming that with due investigation as to character and worth, the ranks of our Order be enlarged and strengthened, and with honourable fidelity our principles be preserved and practised, "that Masonry and Brotherly Love ought to go hand in hand." Let me entreat you then, brethren, diligently to search the Volume of the Sacred Law for the secrets of our Art; and while you seek to pry into the covenant, the signs and tokens which subsisted and were communicated between the Kings of Judah and of Tyre, O may the spirit of the widow's son be in you, filling you with a knowledge of the points on which they all turned, even wisdom to design, strength to execute, and the beauties of holiness to adorn. Remember that the same pages contain an inestimable pearl of great price, and that they only are wise and good who make that pearl their own. Gain this, and you thus lay hold on the right pillar, both of solid fame and spiritual wealth, whereby you shall be established; and then you may safely rest upon the left, a still higher column in our scientific line, for in that you will find strength. Whether the Lodge meets on the high mountains of worldly grandeur, and is beheld from afar; on the lowest vale of obscurity, and noticed but by few—whether you hew on the tops of Lebanon, or work in distinguished offices near the sanctum sanctorum, or, with the sons of Levi, serve at the Altar—be zealous in the discharge of all the duties demanded of you—nor faint, though it fall to your lot to labour in the plains of Jordan. May we be found workmen that need not be ashamed, and in reliance on the integrity of our Great Master Builder, and on the title we derive from Him, may we humbly but confidently hope that a blessing will descend from the Most High upon our labours, and our meetings, and that from associating together as brethren in unity here, may we meet again as brethren in bliss hereafter. So mote it be.

The Provincial Grand Secretary, acting Provincial Grand Master, then proceeded with the ceremony of Consecration, in a most masterly and impressive manner, to the admiration of every brother present—the elocution was indeed a masterpiece—in the usual form, with corn, oil, wine, and salt, the Provincial Grand Chaplain giving the appropriate passages from Holy Writ. At the conclusion, Bro. John Duncan jun. was presented to the Consecrating Officer for installation by Brothers Murray and Ripley, and worthily installed as the first Worshipful Master. The following Officers were afterwards invested:—Bros. R. Foote S.W., H. J. Nicholls J.W., Dr. F. J. Bailey Treasurer (by proxy), H. G. Isaac J.D.; W. H. Ball was elected Tyler. The following are the other Officers, who will be invested at the first regular meeting of the Lodge:—Bros. J. M. Smythe I.P.M., R. Ripley D.C., Simon Jude Secretary, George Williams S.D., J. G. Langley I.G., B. E. Bailey, J. P. Elson, and J. Bain Stewards. Four gentlemen were proposed for initiation, and nearly forty joining members were nominated. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to the Consecrating Officer, Bro. Goodacre. The brethren afterwards dined together in the large banqueting room, where they were well cared for by Bro. Casey, the house steward. The music during the Consecration was by the late Bro. J. Skeaf P.P.G.O., the anthem being by Bro. J. P. Bryan P.P.G.O., and both these and the after dinner music were effectively given by Bros. J. Busfield, W. Lewis, W. H. Quayle, — Woosey, C. Burchall, J. Queen, J. Eddington, J. Quayle, H. J. Nicholls, J. G. Forsyth; Bro. J. P. Bryan P.P.G.O. officiated at the organ.

In Memoriam.

SIR W. W. BURRELL, BART.

ONE of the most popular and respected Provincial Grand Masters of English Freemasonry has departed this life, in the person of Sir Walter William Burrell, Bart., Grand Master of Sussex. Sir Walter died on Sunday last, the 24th instant.

BRO. JAMES SOMERVILLE TELFER.

IT is with deep regret we have to record the decease of an esteemed member of our staff, Bro. James Somerville Telfer, who had been associated with us for the last fifteen months. In that brief period he had gained the goodwill and esteem of his confrères and the readers of this journal. Our deceased brother succumbed to consumption, on Sunday last, after a long and trying illness, and his remains will be interred in Kensal Green Cemetery this day (Saturday). Bro. Telfer had travelled considerably, and his experiences in Japan and elsewhere had secured for him a knowledge of the world which made him a very genial and pleasant companion. In his special province—that of dramatic critic—he had gained confidence by his impartial judgment upon the works brought under his notice, and the news of his decease will be received with regret by a wide circle of friends. On behalf of the staff of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE we tender his relations our deep sympathy in the loss they, in conjunction with ourselves, have sustained.

The V.W. Grand Mark Secretary, Bro. F. Binckes, Past Grand Warden, has kindly consented to rehearse the ceremony of consecration at the Royal Savoy Mark Lodge of Instruction, No. 355, at the Moorgate, 15 Finsbury Pavement, E.C., on Friday, 5th February, at six o'clock precisely. After the ceremony, a dinner will be provided at the Metropolitan Hotel, South Place, Finsbury Square, E.C. Tickets, 4s 6d each, may be obtained of Bro. W. M. Stiles, Sec., 28 Vernon Street, West Kensington, W.

NEW MUSIC.

Why must we say Good-bye? Song. Words by Henry J. Treadwell, music by Edith Cooke, composer of "I Dreamed a Dream," "Shadows," &c.

Peace, Troubled Heart. Song. Written by H. L. D'Arcy Jaxone. Composed by Ciro Pinsuti. London: J. B. Cramer and Co., 201 Regent Street.

As its name implies, the exquisite little song which Edith Cooke has lately presented to the music-loving public is a love theme, and the words are so prettily woven into the music that it is no matter for surprise that the piece should have so readily ingratiated itself into the good graces of the drawing room and the concert hall. The tender passion breathing in every line reminds us forcibly of the song which Sullivan has made immortal, and were we to call this the twin-sister of "The Lost Chord," the simile would be by no means inappropriate. Fond reminiscences of a lost love, to whom a long good-bye has been said, until the looked-for reunion "In the Eternal Love," are entwined in soft and soothing melody, the air of which is so pleasingly pathetic that it must at once take its rank as one of the most charming of modern morceaux. This admirable composition has already figured amongst the pièces de resistance at many of our best concerts, and will, we are assured, find a place in the repertoire of favourite songs in many a home circle. Mr. Treadwell has set the words to easy music, in F sharp, and the accompaniment blends most admirably with the passionate memories and longings expressed by the writer. Mr. Jaxone's "Peace, troubled Heart," will find many admirers amongst lovers of sacred music, the words being suggestive of holy and inspired sentiments, which have been set to an air of symmetry and beauty by Pinsuti. The name of the composer is of itself sufficient to commend the piece to those who would add another choice item to their collection, and on the whole it may be well and worthily recommended to those who have a special penchant for music of this particular class.

"Dr. G. H. JONES, F.R.S.L., the well-known Surgeon-Dentist of 57 Great Russell Street, London, has just re-issued his popular treatise on the teeth, which should be read by every one wishing to have a good and sound set of teeth: 'Painless and Perfect Dentistry' is its title, which will be found fully justified on perusal of its pages, as many hints for the guidance of those seeking a really practical and scientific dental surgeon will be found. The care and treatment of the teeth, with much useful information concerning the mouth and its molars, is contained therein, and we cordially commend this brochure of Dr. G. H. Jones, to the attention of our readers, which will be found a true guide, philosopher, and friend. The concluding chapters of the book are devoted to a description of the Author's method of dental treatment, which has obtained so high a reputation, and which seems to realise the desideratum of 'holding the mirror up to nature.'"—The Brighton Standard, December 1885.

PUBLIC INSTALLATIONS.

FOR some time past our American contemporaries have devoted considerable attention to the subject of Public Installations, but so far as our memory serves us the question has not been noticed on this side of the Atlantic, nor should we have deemed it desirable to refer to it now had it not been stated, in the columns of some of the American papers, on the authority of a brother of some standing, that public installations are practised in England. We must admit we are but imperfectly acquainted with the mode of procedure at these public installations, and it may be that our remarks are based on an erroneous view of the case, but we will take the common sense rendering of the term, and assume that a public installation is the performance of the ceremony of installation in the presence of outsiders as well as of Masons—in the presence indeed of any one who chooses to attend, armed perhaps with a regular invitation. We should not have thought it necessary to inform English Masons that such a course is impossible in England, that it would be in direct violation of the laws of our Grand Lodge, or that the members of any Lodge allowing such a display would be severely penalised, but the statement to which we refer, made on the authority of "an English Mason," proves that there is an idea prevalent in the minds of some contrary to the generally accepted view.

Our American brethren have taunted English Masons with being fond of display, while we, on our side, have accused them of carrying on their Masonry—especially some of the higher degrees—almost entirely for the purpose of ostentation. In one of our earliest numbers we referred to this subject, and if our opinions are now slightly modified to what they were then, it is because our American brethren—or some of them—have taken steps to infuse a little practical Masonry into their Masonic actions. We will not quarrel with our cousins for saying that English brethren are the more addicted to public displays of Masonry, as we look upon the question as almost too absurd for argument. We will take any of the American Masonic publications, and compare their reports of Masonic displays with the law of England, which forbids any public assemblage of Freemasons, except perhaps the attendance of brethren at Church in some Provincial town, or the wearing of Masonic regalia at a brother's funeral, at the laying of a Foundation stone, or at a Masonic Festival. In all these cases no part of the Lodge work must be conducted outside the limits of a tyled Lodge, much less performed in public, and we must certainly express our surprise that any English Mason could have stated otherwise. We most flatly contradict his statement, and challenge him to produce evidence in support or confirmation of it.

We are at a loss to understand on what basis public installations could be tolerated, unless it be, as the Keystone puts it, as "Shows for vanity's sake," but there are few brethren in this country who would care to recommend it on such grounds, much less attempt to practise it, even if it were not specially prohibited by the Constitutions of the Order. What would become of our secrecy if one of the most important ceremonies of the year were performed in public? Would it be possible to prevent non Masons who attended such gatherings from learning many of the secrets of Freemasonry, or could we, in face of such innovation, keep those who desired it from forcing their way into meetings other than those of installation. We think not, but our American friends may reply we are wrong, and bring for their proof the action of their own brethren, many of whom believe in these public installations, and, as far as we know, practise them.

It may be that the "English Mason" who assures our contemporary that public installations are practised in this country simply refers to the semi-public—and we must impress on our readers that they are only semi-public—entertainments which follow our installations; but if he does he has a very clumsy method of expressing himself, as a consideration of the case will prove. If we are to continue the system of following our meetings by banquets, it will always be necessary to have a number of outsiders present in the same room as the members of the Lodge, during the actual serving of the repast, for it would hardly be possible—and certainly not politic—to compel every caterer to initiate the whole of his staff simply for the purpose of attending on brethren at Masonic dinners. But what do these non-Masons learn of Freemasonry during their short sojourn in our midst? They may perhaps discover that the Master, and the Senior and Junior Wardens are fixtures at various points of the compass, they may learn the title by which brethren address the Officers of the Lodge, and their fellow members, but any knowledge of actual use to them they will be unable to acquire during the progress of a Masonic banquet, and immediately the banquet is over the Tyler assumes command of the door, and rigorously excludes all but regularly initiated Masons. The Tyler is as cautious during the time the toasts are given to exclude outsiders as he is during the performance of work in the Lodge, and the brethren are as careful to keep themselves from prying eyes then as during any other part of their proceedings. The toasts are not infrequently followed by a song, and although uninitiated vocalists are sometimes engaged, the same care to abstain from Masonry in their presence is practised as at the banquet, and nothing that would warrant the appellation "public installation" transpires in their presence. Besides all this, we fail to associate the "Masonic toast" with actual Freemasonry, any more than we do the Masonic banquet. Both are associated with Masonic gatherings, but really form no part of ancient Freemasonry, the practice of the ceremonies of which is only permissible within the limits of a properly tyled Lodge. We shall be pleased to hear from our "English Mason, Bro. Geo. S. White," as to when and where an English installation was performed in public, but we doubt if he can enlighten us?

GRAVE ERROR.

MASONS who read the current Masonic news, and who care about and observe what is transpiring, must be aware that an agitation which was begun several years ago, having for its object a revolution of existing Masonic relations by the ultimate overthrow of all the so-called "higher degrees," has ever since been carefully nursed with cumulative force by talented Masons in the various Grand Jurisdictions of this country.

It was vastly accelerated, if not actually caused, by what is known as the Massachusetts departure, by which the Grand Lodge of that commonwealth, at her Quarterly

Digitized by Google

Communication in June 1882, overstepped the boundary of her legitimate jurisdiction, and not only assumed to pass on, but to discriminate between, the Masonic titles of bodies, of none of whose rites a Grand Lodge of Symbolic Masonry can have any knowledge, and whose legislation in the premises has not been, and cannot be, enforced without danger of rebellion.

Having since attracted kindred spirits all along the line, like an avalanche gathering force as it progresses, this centripetal speciousness seems to have crystallized, in Illinois, into a well-defined double policy, viz., First to sap the foundations of the objective system of degrees by the subtle means of inoculated speech and literature, calculated to prejudice the minds of Master Masons, and secondly, to finally wipe out what is left, by Grand Lodge interdiction "through the Masons of her obedience."

If this has not become apparent to any of the Masons of Illinois, they have not been on the alert, and for such it is certainly high time to man the tower; for it is the duty of every one to participate in and take his full share of the responsibilities of the Craft. As nothing can be gained by concealment on the one hand, or ignorance on the other, let us have light.

To this end it will be profitable to examine pertinent contributions to the Masonic press, pro and con, past and present; and I would advise every one who has not already done so, to explore with care the last report of the committee on correspondence to the Grand Lodge of Illinois.

Having taken exceptions, on the same grounds, to the report of the same author as committee on correspondence to the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of Illinois, at its last convocation, I have been reminded that I misapprehended his position upon this question; that instead of being connected with this crusade, he, in common with other eminent brothers high in rank, both in this and other states, holds, "that the Grand Lodge should pass on the legitimacy of Symbolic Masonry only, and leave all others degrees and orders alone." In short, to "let each Grand Body look strictly after its own business."

A careful examination of the report to the Grand Lodge will show that the eminent brother, contrary to the usual course and to precedent, surrendered important parts thereof to other learned and influential brethren to treat upon this question, one of whom was the able editor and publisher of this excellent journal, and two others of the most gifted Past Grand Masters of the Grand Lodge of Illinois, only one of whom, however, actually availed himself of the opportunity.

If it be discovered and pointed out that any but Bro. Brown of the Voice of Masonry took the ground above described and urged as that of the amiable brother of the committee and his ally, I will be only too glad to acknowledge my error, and humbly beg the brethren's pardon. I have found no peg uncovered whereon it was possible to hang ingenious sophism, first in proof of the assertion that nothing beyond the Lodge is entitled to the Masonic name, except in so far as their membership is composed exclusively of Masons; and second, in support of the theory of annihilation by edict, as indicated hereinbefore.

Somehow, I am unable to perceive, that the way to let these other Masonic Bodies alone, is to set their house on fire, and ask them to co-operate in putting it out, by feeding the flames with oil.

I am very willing to acknowledge, also that my powers of discernment are not very acute, because I have been utterly unsuccessful in finding a solution of the reasons for all this "fuss and feathers," and for these alliances of the powerful and influential intellects, and for all this inoculated literature sent out broadcast among the Lodges on the principle that that is the modus operandi of passing on the legitimacy of Symbolic Masonry only, and of letting all other degrees and orders alone.

It may be, however, that my obtuse mind is incompetent to grasp the right construction of some of the passages involved, like the following: "It will be asked if a Grand Lodge has not supervision over all the Masonry within its borders? It certainly has: it can, and should, as we think, prohibit the employment of its rituals by an association of men, notwithstanding such association embraces Masons exclusively. It can interdict the Chapter Council, Commandery, or bodies of the Scottish Rite, from assuming any function of the Lodge, either directly or indirectly. We hope the reader will keep the foregoing in mind, for the day, if it comes, when the Lodge will demand its own. * * * The practice of employing the esoteric rituals, signs, grips, words and symbols of the Lodge is indefensible usurpation and groundwork of error and contention. * * * The Grand Lodge has been too long remiss in duty, in not interdicting those of their obediences from practising its rituals in other associations of Masons. * * * When, therefore, something claiming to be Masonry crops out in bodies which the Grand Lodge has not created, it is certain that either such bodies are teaching as Masonry something that is not Masonry, or that it is time for Masons who desire to be loyal to those solemnly assumed engagements from which no Mason, or association of Masons, can absolve them, to ask themselves whether as members of such bodies they are making an unwarrantable use of the name, symbols, esoteric rituals, or modes of recognition of the Craft. Upon an affirmative answer to this question rests the right and duty, and in the fact that their membership is composed of the Masons of its obedience, lies the power of the Grand Lodge to deal with the problem of pseudo Masonry."

I do sincerely hope others will see what I fail to comprehend, that the foregoing is evidence of a peaceable desire to let such Masonic bodies alone, and that the Grand Lodge is to confine itself to Symbolic Masonry only. Some of these utterances seem to be puerile, and others as containing specious sophistry, but through them all peeps the germ of a mischievous error, to which I will recur hereafter. Speaking for the Chapter here, as one of the bodies in question, it would seem from these quotations, as if it all at once was unduly encroaching upon the rights and prerogatives of the Lodge, or was making other use of things appertaining to Symbolic Masonry, upon which it is founded, and of which the main part of its degrees is an integral part, the evidence for which can be furnished in a tyled Lodge or Chapter, than has been permitted for a century and a half without any complaint whatever.

The author of the last quotation will be recognized by its ear-marks as the same distinguished and able, but shifting brother who seems to command an infinite resource of "tests," between which he is hovering, like the Irishman's flea, as occasion demands. His first, it will be remembered, was "The Ancient Charges of a Freemason, as the inexorable and unchangeable organic standard, by which all that is claimed as Freemasonry must stand or fall," but when he was challenged to point out therein the definition of our present triplex system of degrees of the Lodge, which he could not do, he abandoned it without formal declaration, however, so as to still leave it available for repetition, on the principle presumably, that an "oft-told tale" must be true, and constructed "three essentials," which he abandoned in turn, and in like manner as his "organic" flatulency, when the main one of the three was exposed as a mutilation of the first great landmark of our Institution, entitled "God and Religion," which is not only indivisible, but the printed part used must be construed by the primary and greatest of all.

If not puerile, how inconsistent is the statement that the Grand Lodge can "interdict the Chapter, Council, &c., from assuming any functions of the Lodge, either directly or indirectly." While it is true, and while that undoubted power and prerogative of the Grand Lodge has ever been not only acknowledged but vigorously supported by the class of Masons referred to, it is superfluous to throw the gauntlet until they or any of them undertake to do so, or until there is some reasonable probability that they will so interfere. The functions of a Lodge are, to make its own by-laws, consistent with the general laws of Masonry, and to see them duly executed; to confer the degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft and Master Mason, in a regular and constitutional manner, with business incidental thereto, and to the general management of a subordinate. Which of these functions has the Chapter assumed? Or, which is it likely to assume?

Turning to the report in question, and to the review of Massachusetts, we find lengthy quotations, on the Royal Arch degree, from Bro. Mackey, to be in answer to the following question by the author of the review, "Now what are the facts relating to the origin of the degree in question, and its subsequent relation to the Fraternity?" But most of them, as well as other statements, have been pronounced erroneous by celebrated historians of our time, among whom is the distinguished and well known Bro.

Digitized by Google

William J. Hughan, of Torquay, England, whose thorough exploration among the resources of the past has recently resulted in a most valuable book, entitled "Origin of the English Rite of Freemasonry;" which the reviewing brother well knew, for he says: "We are aware of the fact that distinguished authors reject the theories of Brother Mackey, but when it can be made plain that the 'word' was lost, and subsequently found in an organization that did not exist in 1717, and in a degree fabricated after the establishment of the first Grand Lodge, then we will review the conclusions of the author quoted."

According to the external evidence, solely relied on by this distinguished brother and his compeers, and by which he arrives at the above conclusion, the Master Mason's Degree, as we now have it, was also fabricated since 1717 and after the establishment of what they call the "first" Grand Lodge; but aside from that fact the pertinent question arises, Why was the mass of Mackey's statements referred to printed as facts, in the face not only of Bro. Hughan's history, but of averments of other equally reliable and distinguished historians of the Craft? The only answer apparent to any unprejudiced mind is the same that will occur to any one at all conversant with the esoteric symbolism of the Masonic system, after perusing his comment on the following: "This degree (Royal Arch) is indescribably more august, and sublime and important than all which precede it, and is the summit and perfection of Ancient Masonry. It impresses on our minds a belief of the being and existence of a supreme Deity without the beginning of days or end of years, and reminds us of the reverence due His holy name. It also brings to mind many essentials of the Craft, which were for the space of four hundred and seventy years buried in darkness, and without a knowledge of which the Mason's character cannot be complete. * * * This section furnishes us with many interesting particulars relative to the state of the Fraternity during and since the reign of King Solomon."

"This, brethren, is the class of food with which the masses of the Fraternity have been served from time out of mind, and it is not, therefore, surprising that Masons not particularly instructed in foundation stones, should accept as orthodox, whimsical assertions, so boldly set forth, because of the absence of a bold, truthful popular literature, so necessary to dispel impositions upon credulity."

The only answer, I say, to this and the preceding paragraph must be: Because it was intended that the inoculation therein, thus insidiously administered, should be all the more affective. If there is any other reply, it must be additional and to the effect that somebody, who should know better, betrays a most deplorable oblivion of the art and science of Masonry; which at the same time, however, affords a most rational solution to the animus of the crusade, both by him and his associates, who all seem to suffer more or less from the same malady.

In this connection it would be interesting to hear the learned brother explain the meaning of his education in "foundation stones." Those that I have been instructed in are the fundamental and primary truths, supporting all correct systems, and my correct system of Geometry, in which Masonry was founded, includes the holy Royal Arch, of which Bro. Hughan testifies in concluding his aforementioned history, thusly: "In conclusion, we cannot do better than quote the words of Dr. Hopkins in his well known 'Lectures on Freemasonry,' respecting the Royal Arch: 'I would urge every one (having made himself acquainted with our ordinary Craft ceremonies, and having undergone the necessary probation) to proceed to that sublime and exalted degree, by which alone his cravings for Masonic lore can be satisfied, his doubts explained, and the completeness of the system be fully developed.'"

And Past Grand Master H. P. H. Bromwell, one of the most amiable and modest of men, but of prodigious ability, who has made Masonry the study of a lifetime, and who (I say it with due reflection and conscious of what it means) knows more about it than any man now living, said in a recent letter to the writer: "You know the explorations I have been engaged in during the last twenty-eight years concerning the geometry of the Lodge and its work, and particularly to discover and verify the most ancient G.·. O.·. W.·., and on that subject I feel sure I can give some facts, but the means of their full explanation and verification can only be used in a proper place. The Royal Arch Degree, if its tradition be true, is a degree worthy of all care and praise, and if the same be only a fabrication, for the purpose of forming the Masonic matter into an interesting and impressive degree, it is still invested with secrets of the greatest matter known to the Craft; but it holds it in a broken vessel, nevertheless in a condition to be repaired; and whether repaired or not, still indispensable for the verification of the true ancient word. There are several degrees claiming the ancient word, but they contain nothing of the sort. Those that fabricated them did not even know what is meant by the G.·. O.·. W.·. They supposed it to be a word in some language, and that it might be any particular word having a certain prescribed meaning; not knowing that there can be but one such word, and that it must be omnific as to all human language, as the triangle is omnific as to all geometry. That word was once in the Royal Arch (Royal Ark) degree, but so mispronounced that it was no longer the same. The heling (haling) words are still there, but that is not the only place; both the G.·. O.·. W.·. and its heling words are in the body of the Lodge by t. t. t., and there is not a Master Mason who has not pronounced them or heard them as often as he has been present at the conferring of that wonderful degree, unless he was deaf or inattentive.

"It has been always understood that the Royal Arch degree was anciently conferred, not by the Past Masters, but by the Master Masons in possession of it, under the warrant of the Master of a Lodge, and only on Master Masons of long standing and high character. If this be true, as it seems to be, it is a most significant fact, in proof of the truth of one part of the legend, as well as of that of the Master Mason."

Of the Mark Master Bro. Bromwell discourses thus: "It has so much the simplicity and ring of the Ancient Craft, and deals in such Masonic matters that many skilful Masters believe it to be the ancient closing ceremony of the Fellow Craft Lodge. Although this cannot be verified, I think it highly probable. It is a beautiful degree."

Lest any one should be misled into the belief that the distinguished Past Grand Master is a "high degree champion," let them be undeceived by the following quotation from another letter recently received; but it is but just to say that the position therein defined, which is also mine, is not new. He has expressed the same opinion many times before, and for many years past, viz., In the matter of so-called 'higher degrees' I have long noticed the increasing evils which are being wrought among the Craft, the prevailing habits and usages in regard to them. In the first place there are no higher degrees. The three degrees of the Lodge are all. If any alleged degree has any Masonic value, it is because it has preserved some matter of Masonic Craft, which, by the carelessness and ignorance of Lodges, has been suffered to go to loss. Outside of this they are only beautiful or sublime ceremonies, which draw their symbols and teachings from the great storehouse of the Lodge, but which is also the case with most of the swarm of degrees of all modern orders, like Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, and of this and that. More than three thousand degrees, listed as Masonic, have been invented and worked in Europe and in this country during the last century and a half, all professing to have some wonderful Masonic secrets to impart. Wherever they have flourished most, Ancient Craft Masonry has gone into demoralisation. In most of Europe the Lodges of Masonry are mixed up with every sort of Rites, and are really in no sense what ancient Masonic Lodges were. Grand Master Robbins did a grand good thing when he refused to recognise one of those pseudo Grand Bodies, which called itself the 'Grand Orient of Spain,' and which is a new offspring from the spawn of continental innovations. Now, here is the mischief of the whole set, as things are managed; all the so-called higher degrees are believed by the outside world, and by all ignorant Masons, to be actually higher, and much more, they all have stupendous titles and flourish of feathers and finery, and make as much noise as if they were chief in Masonry; consequently the Lodges are besieged with petitions for initiation by everybody who wants to get where he can appear on the outside of a horse, bedizened with shoulder-straps, plumes and swords, &c.; and half of the work of the Lodge now is, to confer Masonic degrees on chaps who merely use the Lodge as a necessary entrance way to the 'higher' degrees. They rush through in six months, ignorant of everything of Masonry, and so remain; like the fly on the coach wheel, they think the whole concern is made to carry them They actually think they have a right to appear in a Masonic procession without invitation, and all such stuff. The consequence is, the Lodges get more demoralised from year to year, more ignorant and indifferent. I do not know where it is all to end. Such an excrescence on the body of Masonry must affect it as in all other cases, by actually obliterating the entire science and art of the Craft—more than half of which has been lost within the last fifty years."

What is the remedy? Not in the course of our leaders, who being "blind are leading the blind" in an attempt to tear down the genuine and the false alike, and who, if possible, after successfully levelling everything down to the end of the Master's degree, to be logical, must keep on weeding out that which has been perverted and corrupted, until there will not be enough left to weep over. Not in the revolutionary tendency to unduly centralise tyrannical power in the Grand Lodge, to the detriment of the Lodges and of the individual freedom and rights of the Mason, which cannot be invaded with impunity. This might be done in Russia, but cannot be done in this free country. The Mason is "free" because truth and light make him "free," and he who allows himself to be enslaved or restricted in his personal freedom is unworthy of the other, and rightfully suffers the consequences. But the proposed Grand Lodge interdiction implies the exercise of such a central despotic power, which would be, as was the action of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, an unwarranted invasion of individual rights, because the power, being inherent in the individual only, could not be delegated by the Lodges of which it is composed, and which it represents collectively, hence is incompetent.

A Grand Lodge is sovereign as to others in its territorial jurisdiction, and not over the individual consciences and personal rights of the members of the Craft, who are under certain obligations, for the violation of which alone they are responsible, but which do not bind them to conform to and abide by laws and edicts, void, if issued through incompetent authority.

Representing the moral universe, where reigns silence and peace, it cannot make war upon the atoms in its composition. It represents the whole body of the Craft as one man, the Grand Master being the head and the Grand Wardens the arms; hence, though it has disciplinary power over itself—that is, to subdue the passions—it cannot restrict the natural motion of the members and limbs of the body without destroying the harmony of the work.

Its powers are constitutional after all, and it must be governed in the exercise of its functions by constitutional Masonic law. Herein lies the solution of the "germ" of the mischievous error" in the utterances quoted from the Grand Lodge report, and the "specious sophism" therein lies in the hint to strike down the bodies assailed, by subtle and insidious means, which course is altogether beneath the lofty dignity of a Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, and contrary to all principles of amity and justice.

If any of them are invading in any way the lawful prerogatives or the lawful jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge she has the undoubted power to declare them clandestine, and her members must and will cheerfully obey; but it must be remembered, in all cases, that prudence, as one of the four cardinal virtues, stands before that of justice.

The true remedy is education; study of the science, art and object of Masonry by the leaders in this crusade; by the Masters and Wardens and by the Craft. Any one, even superficially conversant with the outlines of the geometry of the Lodge, must coincide with and feel the justice of Bro. Bromwell's lamentation about the loss, perversions and corruptions. Only when a better knowledge shall have been attained, so that we may be the better able to discern the genuine from that which is spurious or false, will it be time to talk of striking down the "pseudo Masonry," in Chapters and other bodies. Education and diffusion of intelligence among the Craft, high and low, rich and poor, are absolutely necessary to restoration of the purity of Ancient Craft Masonry, and are at the same time the antidote to the noxious craze of "high degreeism."—Voice of Masonry.

LODGE OF ISRAEL, No. 205.

THE installation meeting of this old Lodge, one of the most prosperous amongst the "so-called Jewish Lodges" in London, was held on Tuesday, 26th ult., at Cannon-street Hotel, when a large gathering of the members and visitors assembled, under the presidency of the retiring W.M. Bro. E. H. Norden. When it is considered that the members of the Israel Lodge have not only for many years consistently supported the various Masonic Charities, but have also built up a Benevolent Fund of their own, now happily amounting to over £1,000, some idea may be formed of the stamina and vitality of a body of Masons, who have the true principles of the Brotherhood at heart. And thus the whole of the proceedings on Tuesday were characterised by an amount of satisfaction and unanimity such as is not frequently witnessed. Bro. Norden was supported by Bro. Alfred J. Henochsberg P.M. 1502 S.W. and W.M. elect, with a full complement of the Officers and members, the company numbering about 150 in all. Amongst the Visitors were Bros. Rev. R. J. Simpson P.G.C., J. Lewis Thomas P.G.A.D.C., Edgar Bowyer P.G.Std.B., H. Garrod G.P., James Terry P.P.G.S.W. Norths and Hunts, Secretary of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, E. R. Adams P.P.G.C. Lincolnshire, S. Jacobs P.P.G.D. Herts, Geo. Kenning P.P.G.J.D. Middlesex, J. Chapman P.M. 194, C. Norrington P.M. 619, S. Bons W.M. 185, J. W. Dewsnap W.M. 188, N. J. Valentine W.M. 1017, H. W. Casperd W.M. 1668, W. Mundy 1839, G. A. Potter W.M. 1964, W. Tear 1765, H. Friedlander 446, Belsham 733 Melbourne, J. Hart 193, A. Myers 1552, Collard 95, Larner W.M. 858, Bockenham 1962, D. M. Davis W.M. elect 1017, T. Fraine 1438, H. Gabriel 1445, S. M. Lazarus P.P.G.W. Wilts, H. Massey P.M. 619, J. Myers 188, Rev. S. J. Roco Ch. 188, H. Van Starhen 188, J. Moore 548, Allen P.M. 733, G. Moss 1017, Leon Herts, La Bien Aime Amsterdam, D. J. Collins 193, and others. The minutes of the last regular meeting, and of a subsequent Lodge of Emergency, having been read and confirmed, the report of the Committee of the Benevolent Fund was submitted, showing a balance in the hands of the Treasurer of £986 18s 8d. One joining member was admitted, and five candidates were proposed for initiation at the next meeting. Bro. Henochsberg was then duly installed into the chair of K.S. by his predecessor in office, Bro. E. H. Norden, whose working was in every respect most admirably carried out. The newly-installed Master having been proclaimed and saluted with the customary honours, invested his Officers for the ensuing year, as follow:—Bros. E. H. Norden I.P.M., Solomon Jacobs S.W., R. J. Paton J.W., A. M. Cohen P.M. Treasurer, C. F. Hogard P.M. Secretary, Rev. M. Haines Chap., J. B. Da Mesquita S.D., W. Hunter J.D., Joseph Da Silva P.M. D.C., M. Bromet Asst. D.C., T. Hart I.G., S. Schmere and J. Litchfield Stewards, Rawles Tyler. A handsome P.M.'s jewel was presented to the Immediate Past Master Bro. Norden, on the reverse side of which was the inscription:—

Presented to Bro. E. H. Norden P.M.
By the members of the Lodge of Israel, No. 205,
In recognition of his valuable services as Worshipful Master,
For the year ending 26th January 1886.

In addition to this, and to still farther mark the esteem in which Bro. Norden was held, and his popularity in the Lodge, a Past Master's collar and jewel were also presented to him by his Officers, with their heartiest good wishes. On the jewel was inscribed:—

Presented to W. Bro. E. H. Norden P.M.
By the Officers of the Lodge of Israel, No. 205,
As a mark of esteem, on his vacating the chair,
26th January 1886.

The gifts were suitably acknowledged by the recipient, and after the transaction of some routine business the brethren sat down to an admirably-served banquet, prepared under the direction of Bro. M. Silver, whose attendance is always looked for at our Jewish Lodges. At dessert the usual loyal toasts were honoured, but before entering on the business of the evening the Worshipful Master expressed regret that Mr. Frederick Paton, who had engaged to undertake the direction of the musical arrangements of the evening, had the day before unfortunately broken a bloodvessel, and was unable to attend. But they had one or two volunteers, who had arranged with their worthy J.W. to sing during the evening, and he hoped, under the circumstances, the company would extend to their friends their kind indulgence. The toast of the Queen and the Craft and of the Most Worshipful Grand Master was enthusiastically received; and in giving the Grand Officers the Worshipful Master briefly observed that they were the right men in the right place. They were honoured by the presence of four of them to-night, and he associated with the toast the name of Bros. Rev. R. J. Simpson P.G.C. and J. Lewis Thomas P.G.A.D.C. Bro. Rev. R. J. Simpson said with regard to the Lords Carnarvon and Lathom he need scarcely say a single word. The Grand Officers deserved all honour, both as men and as Masons He regarded it as a great privilege to be called upon to return thanks for the Grand Officers. Bro. Lewis Thomas also responded, and in the course of his remarks observed that he could not say this was the first time he had been present at the meetings of the good old Lodge of Israel. For many years he had been the guest of their excellent Secretary, Bro. Hogard, and each time he came to this Lodge he felt a greater endearment towards the brethren and their proceedings. Only last night he was present at the consecration of a new Lodge, which ceremony was carried out with great splendour—the Drury Lane Lodge. The Immediate Past Master then rose; from the first time since leaving the chair he took the gavel in his hand, and they would all know it was for the purpose of proposing the health of their excellent Worshipful Master. They all knew the working of Bro. Henochsberg, and it would be superfluous on his part to dilate upon his many admirable qualities. He had performed the duties of Mastership in another Lodge, and had brought to London such a reputation that it would be useless for him (the speaker) to say anything further. The Worshipful Master met with a cordial reception in rising to thank them for the hearty reception they had given to the toast, so eloquently given by their Immediate Past Master; he did so most sincerely. He deeply appreciated the enthusiastic manner with which the mention of his name had been received by the brethren, he should endeavour, to the best of his ability, to carry out the duties of the office to their satisfaction, and if he did so, he was sure it would be to his own gratification. He had now a very important toast to propose, though in the Lodge of Israel it required very few words to evoke the enthusiasm which the brethren would give to it. He asked them to join with him in drinking to the health of their Visitors. Bro. Bowyer thanked the Worshipful Master very heartily for the kind manner in which he had coupled his name with the toast, and the company for the heartiness with which they had received it. He could assure them he had been so often amongst them during the last eight or ten years that he scarcely regarded himself as a Visitor. He thanked them for the bountiful hospitality they had placed before their guests. Bro. Boas, as one of the rulers of a sister Lodge, said it was a great honour to be called upon to respond to this toast. This was one of his first visits to the Lodge of Israel, and he had been delighted with what he had seen, and should endeavour to come amongst them as often as possible. Bro. Dawsnap could add but little to what had been said by previous speakers. It had given him the greatest possible pleasure to see the working in the Lodge, and also to partake of the hospitality that had followed. Bros. Chapman, Adams, and Valentine also replied to the toast, as also did Bros. Casperd, W.M. of the Samson Lodge, and Isaac Davis, in response to calls from the brethren. The W.M. then rose and said, if there was one toast more important than another it was that of the Immediate Past Master. No doubt they had heard with a great amount of pleasure the beautiful manner in which Bro. Norden had rendered the installation ceremony that evening; during his Masonic career he had never seen it more admirably carried out. The Immediate Past Master acknowledged the kind support he had received from the brethren of the Lodge, without which he should not have been able to go on with his work in a manner satisfactory to the Lodge and gratifying to himself. It was to them he owed any credit he might have gained for good working. He expressed his unabated interest in the welfare of the Lodge, and said he should endeavour to do in the future as he had in the past. The W.M., in proposing the Masonic Charities, said he was sorry that Bro. J. Terry, Secretary of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, had been obliged to leave, as he was in hopes that they would have had from him a speech on the advantages of the Masonic Institutions. He should ask Bro. A. M. Cohen P.M. to respond. Bro. Cohen said a rather difficult task devolved upon him, and he regretted that many of the brethren had left, inasmuch as he had a great desire to realise the "ambition" which had been alluded to by their W.M. Under no circumstances did they accept donations for their Benevolent Fund from Visitors, because it was the pride of the members of the Lodge of Israel that this Fund should be devoted to themselves only, so that they could not, and would not, accept any subscriptions from brethren who did not belong to the Lodge. But he appealed to those who did belong to it, and especially the younger members, to give that assistance to the Fund to which the W.M. had so fittingly alluded. Year by year they had increased this Fund, until now they had very nearly reached the proverbial four figures. He depended upon the brethren that night to make up the £13 or £14 still required to that end. It had been said of the wise King Solomon that he taught,—"Cast your bread upon the waters, and it shall be seen after many days," and nothing gave zest to his (the speaker's) appeal so much as to know that they were doing good to those who should come after them. He did not ask them even for the price of the banquet they had enjoyed that night, but he asked all, and especially those who had not been prompted to give to this Fund at all, to assist him on this occasion. Then he should be able to leave that hall with the buoyancy and bon hommie that had been depicted by the W.M. Let them hope this fund would never be required by any of those present, but what a satisfaction it would be to them and to the world at large who were Masons to know that to those who needed they could give without stint and without diffidence. The appeal was then sent round, and later in the evening Bro. Hogard (Secretary) announced that the magic figures they had had before them for so many years had at last been reached. They had that night received one of the largest sums ever collected on an installation night, namely, a total of £15 17s, which exceeded by about £3 the figures aimed at by the President of the Fund. The W.M., in proposing the next toast, said the Past Masters of the Lodge of Israel had made such a name for themselves that the toast needed no words from him to ensure for it an enthusiastic reception. That night they had a glorious array of Past Masters, but this was not in consequence of the installation meeting, for at all the gatherings of the Lodge the Past Masters met in goodly numbers. He had never yet, in his Masonic experience, seen the principles of brotherly love more fully extended in his own case, though he came as a comparative stranger amongst them. He was taken by the hand, and assisted in every possible way, and he could not forget the kindness they had shown him. He coupled with the toast the names of P.M.'s Letour and S. Harris, who suitably responded. The W.M. then proposed the health of the Treasurer and Secretary, whose ability and efficiency had been well tried and proved. Bro. A. M. Cohen responded as Treasurer, and hoped the Lodge would continue to be as prosperous as it was at the present time, and had been for some time past, though he recollected the time, many years ago, when it was not so. The W.M. had alluded to the fact of his having been connected with the Lodge over forty years; during the whole of that period he had never been absent more than half a dozen times. In his younger days he came from all parts of the country to attend his Lodge, and although he could not expect the G.A.O.T.U. to spare him much longer, at his advanced age, yet he hoped as long as he continued their Treasurer he should not only receive, but deserve, the encomiums that had been showered upon him. Bro. Hogard having thanked the brethren for the manner in which the toast had been received, said during the time he had been a member of this Lodge he had endeavoured to fulfil the various duties that had devolved upon him to the best of his ability. They were probably aware that the duties of the Secretary did not begin or end with entering the portals of the Lodge. There were many things which occurred when they were not meeting, and it had been his pleasure, as well as his duty, to attend to every detail connected with the Lodge. He was proud to see the high position which the Lodge had now attained, and with a list of five candidates for initiation at the next meeting he felt assured that the Lodge would go on and prosper, at all events under the presidency of their present Worshipful Master. The Lodge had not only a large Benevolent Fund of its own, but it year by year supported the great Masonic Charities, of which they were all so proud. It had been said that times were bad, but with one exception last year realised the largest subscription ever given to the Masonic Charities, which, including the amount given by the Board of Benevolence, reached the enormous total of over £54,000. The brethren were certainly numerous, but for any body of men to have done such work in one single year spoke volumes for the way in which the brethren supported the various Charities connected with the Order. He was sure that the Masonic virtue inculcated in their hearts at their initiation, namely, Charity, received at the hands of Masons generally a large and significant support. He reminded the brethren that he was a Steward for the Boys' School at the next Festival, and hoped at their next meeting to say something on that subject. But at this late hour he would merely content himself by again reiterating his sincere and hearty thanks for the manner in which they had received the toast of his health, and for the confidence the W.M. had reposed in him by again appointing him as Secretary of the good old Lodge of Israel. The officers of the Lodge having severally responded to the compliment paid them, the proceedings were closed with the Tyler's toast. During the evening a choice selection of music was given by Miss Annie Matthews, Miss Alice Bocquet, and Mr. Joseph Hay, Bro. Warren Tear presiding ably at the pianoforte.

HOPE AND UNITY LODGE, No. 214.

ON Thursday, the 28th January, the annual meeting of this Lodge was held at the White Hart Hotel, Brentwood, when there was a full attendance of members and a number of visitors. The principal business was the installation of the W.M. elect, Bro. Dr. Quennell S.W., and this ceremony was ably performed jointly by the outgoing W.M., Bro. F. W. Imbert-Terry, and Bro. George Cooper P.M. and Treasurer P.P.G. Supt. of Works. The following were appointed Officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. Frank London S.W., F. B. Page J.W., Rev. W. J. Skilton P.M. P.P.G.C. Chaplain, George Cooper P.M. P.P.G. Supt. of Works Treas., A. Wright P.M. P.P.G.D. Secretary, H. G. Hobson S.D., J. C. Goode J.D., W. W. Brown P.M. P.P.G.O. D.C. and Organist, H. W. Ellis I.G., Mallet Tyler. A hearty vote of thanks having been passed to Bro. Imbert-Terry for his great services to the Lodge during his year of office, the W.M. rose and remarked that he should commence the duties of the chair with a very pleasing one, viz., to present to Bro. Imbert-Terry a small token of the esteem and respect in which he was held by them all. It was but a small token as regards its intrinsic value, but when he said it was the first time within the memory of the oldest member that a P.M.'s jewel had been given to the retiring W.M. he thought it would bear a special value in the eyes of their I.P.M. The members of the Lodge need not be reminded of the eminent services Brother Imbert-Terry had rendered to the Hope and Unity Lodge. Whether as regarded the excellency of his working, his personal courtesy, or his princely hospitality, he had laid such a claim upon their regard as would not soon be effaced from their memories. He trusted that Bro. Imbert-Terry would live many years to wear the jewel he now placed upon his breast, and that the Lodge would long have the benefit of his presence and assistance. Bro. Imbert-Terry said this presentation had taken him quite by surprise. He had taken a great interest in the Hope and Unity Lodge, and the only reward he had looked forward to had been to merit their esteem and regard. His year of office had been to him a most happy one, and he thanked them one and all for the way they had supported him, and for the great kindness and courtesy he had received from them all, without a single exception. He should prize greatly the handsome jewel they had just given him; and he trusted he should still be able to do something for the benefit of Lodge No. 214. The brethren afterwards dined together, a sumptuous banquet being well served by Mrs. Mason, the hostess. Among the brethren present at the meeting, besides those already mentioned, were:—Bros. Matier, T. J. Ralling P.M. P.G. Sec., Rev. Crate P.M. 697 P.P.G.C., Cobb P.M. 51 P.P.G.S. of W., Lewin W.M. 1543 P.M. 276 P.P.G.S. of W., Grimes W.M. 51, Suthery P.M. 276 P.G.D., Colonel Newton (Essex Rifles), Rev. Stewart, Meggy 276, Eve, Rev. Quennell, &c.; and the following members of 214:—Bros. Joseph Earle P.M. P.P.G.S.W., J. C. Earle P.M. P.P.G.J.W., Tebbut P.M., Colonel Burgess P.M., A. W. Wallis P.M., Morice, Morant, Hobson, H. Wallis, Hendrie, &c.

STABILITY LODGE, No. 217.

THE installation meeting of this old and flourishing Lodge was held on Tuesday evening, at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet Street, when there was a goodly attendance of brethren and visitors, under the presidency of the retiring W.M. Brother James Glanville. He was supported by Bros. J. T. Wright S.W., T. R. Hinks J.W., T.

Hinks P.M. Treasurer, J. Nixon P.M. Secretary, W. Gorrie S.D., W. Eckersall J.D., H. Lynn I.G., F. C. Woolmer D.C.; Past Masters J. Addington, H. Marfleet, W. J. Cattermole, and others. Amongst the visitors were Bros. R. J. Voisey P.M. 1963, H. Vickery P.M. 1475, J. J. Brinton I.P.M. 1329, J. D. Rose P.M. 73, R. J. Nishart W.M. 1789, P. A. Nairne P.M. 176, W. H. Glyn Smith 1691, C. James 1963, J. Banker 1158, J. Tasker 73, J. R. Bunch 172, J. Humphrey 55, R. W. Robinson 879, C. A. White 1777, J. Justice 79, W. Leonard 1777, T. Lane 186, and F. J. Loughlin 1365. Lodge having been opened and the minutes of the preceding meeting read and confirmed, Bro. J. T. Wright was presented for the benefit of installation, and the ceremony was afterwards duly carried out by Bro. Marfleet. The newly-installed Master invested his Officers for the year, as follow:—Bros. J. Glanville I.P.M., T. R. Hinks S.W., W. Gorrie J.W., T. Hinks Treasurer, J. Nixon Secretary, W. Eckersall S.D., H. Lynn J.D. The ancient charges were delivered in admirable manner by the Installing Master. The ballot was then opened for Mr. Alfred C. Brown, who had been proposed by Bro. Gorrie S.D., and seconded by the then W.M., Bro. Glanville; and the voting being unanimously in favour, he was duly initiated into the mysteries and privilegef of the Order. A handsome Past Master's jewel was presented to Bro. Glanville on his retirement from the chair, as a mark of esteem, and in recognition of valuable services rendered to the Lodge during his term of office. At the conclusion of business the brethren and visitors partook of a récherché banquet, provided in Bro. Clemow's usual excellent style, when the loyal and Craft toasts were given from the chair and duly honoured. The I.P.M., in proposing the health of the W.M., congratulated the brethren upon having the right man in the right place. He had watched Bro. Wright through the various offices he had filled, and could only say he had devoted his best attention to the duties attaching to each. He had done his best for the interests of the Lodge in the past, and having regard to that fact they might look forward to his doing so in the future. He wished his successor every happiness and prosperity during his year of office, and hoped his installation into the chair might be the commencement of a new and successful era in the history of the Stability Lodge. In conclusion he expressed his conviction that all the brethren would unite in the endeavour amply to sustain the prestige of the Lodge, and to verify its title for stability and usefulness. The Worshipful Master, in acknowledging the cordiality with which the toast had been received, took this opportunity of thanking the brethren for having conferred upon him the honour of electing him to the chair of the Stability Lodge. It would be his constant endeavour to conduct the affairs of the Lodge in such a manner as should conduce to its continued prosperity, and he trusted that at the end of his year of office he might have given them satisfaction. He then proposed the health of the Initiate, and in doing so said it was not often in the Stability Lodge the newly-installed Master had the opportunity of admitting an initiate, and he regarded it as a privilege for which he was indebted to Bro. Glanville. He could only remind his brother initiate that if he remained true to the principles he had espoused that night he would have no reason to regret having united himself with the ancient and honourable institution of Freemasonry. Bro. A. C. Brown, after the E.A.'s song had been sung, returned thanks for having been admitted into the Lodge. He had been told that Masons were a goodly company, but his informant had only told him half. The impressive ceremony he had witnessed would ever be uppermost in his memory, and he should strive earnestly to carry out the promises he had made, and to benefit by the sublime principles of which he had seen the initiatory stages that evening. In proposing the Visitors, the Worshipful Master said one of the leading principles of Freemasonry was hospitality, and they prided themselves upon that virtue. He was very pleased to see so many visitors present on this occasion, and he assured them of a most hearty and cordial welcome. He especially thanked Bros. Rose and Voisey for having assisted him in preparing for the work of the chair. Bro. Brinton, whose name was associated with the toast, thanked the Worshipful Master most heartily for the cordial terms in which he had welcomed the Visitors, and said Bro. Wright was on the high road to progression in the science of Masonry. He hoped and anticipated that the Worshipful Master would have a year of uninterrupted prosperity, and that he would be supported by an able body of Officers. It was incumbent upon every Officer to make himself thoroughly acquainted with the duties, and if they worked well together they might look confidently forward to the recompense of reward. Bros. Voisey and Nairn also responded to the toast. The Worshipful Master next proposed the health of the Installing Officer, and said he was deeply indebted to Br. Marfleet for the admirable manner in which he had performed the installation ceremony that day. He hoped he might be spared for many years to discharge his duties as efficiently as he had then done. Bro. Marfleet having acknowledged the toast, in a few happily-chosen sentences, the Worshipful Master proposed the health of the Immediate Past Master, in doing which he paid a high tribute to the zeal and assiduity displayed during the year by Bro. Granville, whose excellent example he should endeavour to emulate. It had been a great pleasure to present to their Immediate Past Master a jewel, which had been unanimously voted to him by the Lodge, and he was only echoing the sentiments of every brother present when he wished that Bro. Glanville might live for many years to wear it, in remembrance of his very successful and happy year in connection with the Stability Lodge. The Immediate Past Master returned thanks, and expressed his unabated interest in the welfare of the Lodge. He thanked the brethren for their recognition of the small services he had been able to render, and promised that in the future he should do, as he had done in the past, all he could to promote its prosperity. The W.M. afterwards proposed the health of the Past Masters, and of the Treasurer and Secretary, paying well-deserved compliments to each as to the manner in which the affairs of the Lodge were administered, and the e toasts having been duly responded to, the list was fittingly concluded by the Tyler. The enjoyment of the evening was materially enhanced by singing and recitations, amongst those who specially contributed to the programme being Bros. Voisey, Leonard, and White.

LODGE OF UNION, No. 414.

THE annual Festival was held on Tuesday, 19th ultimo, at the Masonic Hall, Reading, when there was a numerous gathering. Bros. M. J. Withers Prov. G.J.D. W.M. presided, supported by his Officers. There were also present—P.M.'s S. Wheeler, C. Stephens, C. Oades, R. Bradley Prov. Grand Secretary, C. Smith, F. J. Ferguson, J. Egginton, J. Weightman, &c. Visitors—Bros. G. W. Webb W.M. 2043, Captain W. Golding P.M. 1899, R. C. Prickett W.M. 1101, H. Arrowsmith W.M. 1566, R. C. Hurley P.M. 1101, E. Margrett P.M. 1101, F. Marsh W.M. 1895, E. J. Blackwell P.M. 1101, R. Griggs W.M. elect 228, J. Greenaway Secretary 1101, W. J. Martin 414, H. Creed J.W. 1101, Charles Slaughter I.G. 1101, F. Brown 1101, C. F. Simmons 694, Walter Blackwell 1101, A. T. Morling 948, Rev. J. D. Dunlop 561, J. W. Noble 1643, Rev. G. K. Faulkner 592, J. Deverill jun. 1894, W. A. Simmons 1895. The ordinary business having been gone through, a Board of Installed Masters was opened with full ceremonial, P.M.'s Charles Stephens and R. C. Mount occupying the Senior and Junior Warden's chairs. The retiring W.M., Bro. Withers, installed as his successor the J.W., Bro. Blackwell, who had been unanimously elected at the previous Lodge. The newly-installed W.M. invested his Officers, as follow:—Bros. M. J. Withers I.P.M., D. H. Witherington S.W., J. W. Martin J.W., Rev. Canon N. T. Garry Chaplain, R. C. Mount P.M. Treasurer, A. W. Parry Secretary, C. G. Hawkes S.D., W. Sherwood J.D., J. H. Walters I.G., J. T. Dodd D.C., J. C. B. Tirbutt, C. T. Rayner and J. R. Hayward Stewards, R. Dowsett P.M. 1101 Almoner, W. Hemmings Tyler. The W.M. presented the I.P.M. with a P.M.'s jewel, which had been unanimously voted by the brethren. Bro. Withers expressed his hearty thanks for the honour conferred. The jewel bore the following inscription:—

LODGE OF UNION, No. 414,
Presented to Bro. M. J. WITHERS, P.M. Prov. J.G.D.,
As a token of esteem. January 1886.

At the conclusion of the business the brethren adjourned to banquet, at the Great Western Hotel. The usual prefatory toasts having been received with full honours, the health of the newly-installed Master was proposed by the I.P.M., and was cordially received and appropriately acknowledged. The other toasts included the I.P.M. and P.M.'s of the Lodge of Union, proposed by the W.M.; the Masonic Charities, by Bro. Stephens; the Visitors, by Bro. Smith; the Worshipful Master and brethren of the Greyfriars and Kendrick Lodges, by Bro. Mount; the Initiates, by Bro. Oades; the Wardens, Secretary, and other Officers, by the W.M. The musical part of the programme was carried out by Bros. Blackwell, Knill, Millar, Bonny, Galt, and Martin, under the direction of Bro. Hayward P.G.O. The portrait of the late Bro. W. W. Moxhay P.M. Past Provincial Senior Grand Warden, who had for many years acted as Installing Master to the Lodge of Union 414, and the Greyfriars Lodge 1101, was placed on the wall of the reception room, and was generally considered to be an excellent likeness.

POLISH NATIONAL LODGE, No. 534.

A meeting of this Lodge was held at the Freemasons' Tavern, on 14th ultimo, Bro. J. O. Bieling in the chair, supported by Bros. Bryant S.W., Tongue J.W., Gordon S.D., Apsey J.D., Turner I.G., Runtz D.C., P.M.'s Jackson, Jagielski, Ebner, Paas, Lancaster Secretary and Nowakowski Treasurer. The business of the evening commenced by the ballot, for Mr. Henry Birkbeck. This proving to be unanimously in his favour, he was duly initiated. Bro. Wm. Taylor was then passed, both ceremonies being worked in perfect manner. The report of the Committee on the portrait of the late Bro. Lord Dudley Stuart P.G.W. P.M. was read, and it was resolved that it should be cleaned and restored before the next meeting. Lodge was closed in form, and the brethren retired to the banquet room. After the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts had been duly honoured, Bro. Corri Jackson proposed the health of the W.M., calling attention to the able manner in which the ceremonies had been worked by him. This was responded to by the W.M., who concluded his remarks by calling attention to the toast of the initiate, saying that the name of Birkbeck had always been held in the highest honour by the Polish National Lodge, as the name of one of its founders; they were glad to receive amongst them one of his relations. The initiate thanked the brethren for the cordial manner in which they had received the toast, and assured them that no effort should be wanting on his part to endeavour to make himself efficient. The Visitors were honoured, and the brethren separated at an early hour. The following Visitors were present:—Bros. Walter Snodin W.M. 157, W. Saegert P.M. 548, Alford P.M. 228, E. W. Allen P.M. 173, J. Tatlock W.M. 142, F. H. Atkins P.M. 890.

DUKE OF CONNAUGHT LODGE, No. 1524.

THE installation meeting of this Lodge was held on Thursday, the 28th ultimo, at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet Street, under the presidency of Brother J. Lambert Payne, the retiring Worshipful Master, Bros. Arthur Ferrar S.W. and W.M. elect, Rudolf Polak J.W., W. H. Brand P.M. Treasurer, W. H. Lee P.M. Secretary, G. Ferrar S.D., A. B. Odey J.D., W. Beasley I.G., J. H. Rich D.C., W. Wright and W. Simpson Stewards, E. Frisby Organist, Marsh Tyler; Past Masters Smyth, Brasted, Lorkin, Dignam. The Visitors included Bros. Raikes P.P.G.C. Dorset, Walters P.P.G.D. Middlesex, White Pentucket, Lower Massachusetts, U.S.A., Darnell 1769, Grace 73, Sutton 73, Wilson 1155, Clark 1897, Woodman 1950, McLarin 1805, Larter 1602, Holt 856, Cottebrune P.G.P., Finnister 901, Gooding 1329, Isaacs 1624, Gaya 395, Pascoe 27, Storr 765, Forge 1693, Britton 860, Lea 1897, Smither 193, Warton 1986, Daniels 300, Denose 1853, Rose 1607, Burrage 1115, Enright, Gascoyne 395, and others. Lodge was opened soon after four o'clock, and after the ordinary routine business had been transacted, the report of the Audit Committee—which showed the Lodge to be in a sound financial position—was received and adopted. Brother Arthur Ferrar was then presented for the benefit of installation, and a board of Installed Masters having been duly constituted the installation ceremony was ably carried out by Brother Payne, whose working was much admired. On the re-admission of the brethren, the newly installed Master was proclaimed, and saluted with the customary honours, after which he invested his Officers for the year, as follow :—Bros. Payne I.P.M., Polak S.W., G. Ferrar J.W., Brand P.M. Treasurer, Lee P.M. Sec., Olley S.D., Beasley J.D., Rich I.G., Wright D.C., Frisby Organist, Simpson and Robinson Stewards, Marsh Tyler. The ballot was then opened for Mr. Henry J. Allardyce, who had been nominated by Bro. Frisby and seconded by Brother Rich. The voting was unanimously in favour, and Mr. Allardyce was initiated by the Worshipful Master, who performed the ceremony in perfect manner. At the conclusion of business the brethren adjourned to the Pillar Room, where a sumptuous banquet was provided by Brother Clemow, in a style which well sustained the character of this old and popular City hotel. After the loyal toasts, the Immediate Past Master rose. He had the honour and privilege of proposing the next toast; he was sure the brethren would all join with him in drinking the health of their newly-installed Worshipful Master. He was very pleased indeed to see Brother Arthur Ferrar in that honourable position. They had worked shoulder to shoulder together for many years, and Brother Ferrar was eminently deserving the honour the brethren had conferred upon him. They had seen the creditable manner in which he had performed the ceremony of initiation that evening; and no doubt at their next meetings he would work the other two degrees in equally satisfactory manner. The toast having been received with enthusiasm, the Worshipful Master thanked the brethren sincerely for the high compliment they had paid him. He could only assure them that if they gave him the opportunity of working he would strive to the utmost of his ability to give them satisfaction. Brother Oakley having recited the humourous composition, "Mrs. Caudle on Freemasonry," the Worshipful Master proposed the Initiate, in doing which he said it had afforded him much pleasure to have initiated Brother Allardyce into the mysteries and privileges of the Craft. He hoped the time would come when Brother Allardyce would occupy the position which he now filled, and that he would prove a credit to the Craft and to this Lodge in particular. Brother Allardyce thanked them for the kind reception they had given to the toast, but he reminded them of the old adage, "Take the will for the deed." After the kindness with which he had been admitted into this honourable Institution, he was perfectly at a loss to express the intensity of his feelings. He trusted that he might realise the hope expressed by the Worshipful Master. For the Visitors Brother White was first called upon to respond; in doing so he said he felt peculiar pleasure that the United States of America had been mentioned in connection with the toast. He was sure they would not deem it egotistical of him when he said he was proud to answer for that toast, for assuredly no mother was prouder of her son or daughter than England was proud of his country. He further wished to thank them for the extreme hospitality they had tendered to a representative of the United States. Brother Raikes, on behalf of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Dorset, thanked the brethren for the kind manner in which its representatives had been received that evening. He assured them that he had never seen the work of the day surpassed in any of the thirteen Lodges in the Province of Dorset which he had the pleasure of visiting occasionally. He sincerely hoped that the blessing of the G.A.O.T.U. might rest upon all their undertakings. He thanked them also on behalf of the Faith and Unanimity Lodge, No. 417, which was his mother Lodge; and in speaking of that Lodge he was reminded of a certain young lady to whom five gentlemen made a proposal of marriage. In her perplexity and dilemma, she went to the captain of the ship on which she was a passanger, and asked his advice. The captain replied that if she came on deck next morning, and jumped overboard he would challenge the suitors to save her, and the one who did so should be accepted. It was a beautiful morning, with the sun shining brightly, as she stood with the five suitors around, and as she jumped overboard four of them sprang after her, and brought her safely back to the ship. Then she was equally puzzled, and said to the captain, "What am I to do? they are all so wet." "Take the dry one," said the captain, meaning himself, and he certainly had the pleasantest position of the whole five. He thought he could not do better than follow the captain's example in responding to this toast, and let the other Visitors speak for themselves. Bro. Woodman W.M. 1950, said having been initiated in this Lodge it gave him very great pleasure to see Bro. Ferrar occupying the chair; it proved that study and assiduity had brought their own reward. He hoped Bro. Ferrar's year would be crowned with every possible success. Bros. Forge, Hoir, McLaren, Darnell, and Walters also responded. Each speaking in complimentary terms of the excellent working they had witnessed in the Lodge-room, and of the abundant hospitality that had been extended to the visitors. The W.M. in proposing the Past Masters, said he was pleased to see seven or eight of them present that evening, though he regretted that Bro. Chapman was still very ill. He spoke of the valuable counsel and assistance given by the Past Masters to the W.M., and said a very pleasant duty now devolved upon him in connection with the toast. That was to present Bro. Payne, their I.P.M., with a splendid jewel, which had been unanimously voted him by the Lodge as a mark of esteem, and in recognition of the valuable services he had rendered to the Lodge during his year of office. The jewel was a very handsome one, having on the bar the name of the Lodge, with the Coat of Arms of Prince Arthur, and on the reverse side was the inscription, "Presented by the Duke of Connaught Lodge, No. 1524, to Bro. John Lambert Payne P.M., in recognition of his valuable services as Worshipful Master. 28th January, 1886." Bro. Payne, in responding, said he had endeavoured to carry out the duties of his office to the best of his ability, and this mark of their favour showed that his efforts had been appreciated. Bros. Smyth and Brasted also suitably returned thanks. The Worshipful Master next proposed the Treasurer and Secretary, paying each a high compliment. Bro. Brand thanked the brethren for the confidence they reposed in him as their Treasurer. He was gratified at the excellent balance sheet which he had been able to present to them. He had proposed that a certain portion of the benevolent fund in the hands of the Treasurer should be invested, and this proposal had been accepted in good spirit by the Audit board. Bro. Lee, as Secretary, said he would not enlarge upon the financial aspect of the Lodge, beyond this—that, although the money was to be placed in the bank in the names of the W.M. for the time being, with the Treasurer and Secretary, at the same time it was to be understood that it would not be withdrawn except by resolution of the Lodge. They would quite agree with him, as father of the Lodge, that he was justified in congratulating himself upon its continued prosperity. The W.M. then proposed the Officers, who responded, and the Tyler brought to a close a very enjoyable and happy evening.

MASONIC BALL AT FOLKESTONE.

DURING the past year Masonry in Folkestone has made rapid strides, and one of the greatest (in a public manner) was the idea of a Masonic ball on a scale never before attempted in Folkestone. After much anticipation, great worry, and deep anxiety on the part of the Stewards and Committee, the ball, which took place on Wednesday evening, the 27th ult., must certainly have given satisfaction to those gentlemen, as it did to all who had the pleasure of being present. The gentlemen who devoted their time to the carrying out of the preliminary arrangements as the Committee were Bros. S. Joseph W.M., G. L. Hart I.P.M., H. Stock P.M., F. Klatt P.M. P.Z., W. L. Earnshaw P.M., J. Sherwood P.M., William Francis P.M., A. H. Holbein P.M., J. Kennett P.M. P.Z., W. Cessford H., E Hire J., A. Petts S.W., A. J. Crane J.W., G. Spurgen, Jas. Hart, J. Sherwood jun., F. Hall, J. Aldridge, and H. Waite, and they certainly did all in their power to enhance the pleasure of the evening. But the success was more immediately due to Bros. J. Kennett, Secretary, J. Hart and J. Sherwood jun. The hall was held at the Pavilion Hotel, and the room used for dancing was the splendid saloon of the Hotel, whilst the appartments on either side were utilised as refreshment and lounge rooms. The ball room was very prettily decorated, by Mr. E. Harris, with Masonic banners and emblems and national flags, whilst the dance band of Mr. J. R. C. Roberts, conducted by Bro. H. S. Roberts Organist, was necessarily the principal feature in the evening's enjoyment. The floral decorations were effectively carried out by Mr. J Amos. Bros. Spurgen and Waite, who catered for the guests, could not have done so in a better manner, and their arrangements for the comfort of those present were most considerate. It would be superfluous to congratulate the gentlemen who acted as Ball Stewards, Bros. J. Hart J.W., H. Waite J.D., J. Sherwood jun. and Saunders. Dancing was carried on with great zest until nearly five o'clock a.m., when the guests dispersed. The following is a list of those present :—Bros. S. Joseph W.M. 558 and Mrs. Joseph, Mr. W. S. Joseph, Bro. A. Petts S.W. 558, Bro. Jas. Kennett P.M. 558 and Mrs. Kennett, Bro. F. Klatt P.M. 558, Bro. Jas. Hart 558 and Mrs. Hart, Bro. G. L. Hart P.M. 558, Bro. W. Kennett J.W. 1436, Mrs. W. COSMOPOLITAN LODGE, No. 428, S.C.

A MEETING of this Lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, on 17th December, when the Officers for the ensuing year were elected and installed, as follows:—Bros. T. S. Southey W.M., C. J. Holland I.P.M., T. Pemberton D.M., J. Bannerman S.M., E. D. Meldrum S.W., L. F. Gowing J.W., A. Olsen Treasurer, W. Youngson Secretary, J. Gould S.D., A. Laidrich J.D., J. W. Mielenhausen I.G., J. Kinghorn D.C., F. A. A. Kofod and H. Freudenthal Stewards, C. Merritt Tyler. The ceremony of installation was conducted by Bro. Thorne P.D.G.M. Northern China, E.C., with whom were the following Officers of the District Grand Lodge:—Bros. T. W. Kingsmill, L. Moore, E. P. Lalcaca, O. Middleton, H. Evans, R. D. Starkey, A. M. A. Evans, A. Johnsford, J. Morris, G. B. Fentum and J. M. Cory, Rev. F. R. Smith, G. M. Hart, R. W. Astill and J. S. Ezekiel. There were also present Bros. C. H. Dallas District Grand Master of Japan, J. G. Thirkell, C. M. Donaldson, W. Birt, G. L. Skinner, H. M. Perkins, and a large number of members of the Lodge and Visitors. In all over sixty brethren were present. At the completion of the ceremony of installation, the retiring Officers resumed their chairs, and an address and jewel of the Lodge, having a suitable inscription engraved on the clasp, were presented to Bro. Thorne on behalf of the Scottish Freemasons of Shanghai. Bro. Donaldson said:—Right Worshipful Brother Thorne, the Committee appointed by this Lodge to draw out and present you with an Address on behalf of the Scottish Craft, on the occasion of your resigning the distinguished office of District Grand Master for Northern China under the English Constitution, have delegated to me, as the Founder of the Lodge and their Senior Past Master, the latter part of their duty, and a very pleasant one it is to me, the more so indeed as the Lodge Cosmopolitan came of age this evening, having completed its twenty-one years of work when the ceremony of installation began. Yes, R.W. Sir and Brethren, twenty-one years ago, on behalf of this Lodge, I had the honour of proposing the first Prov. Grand Master of China, Bro. Rawson, and the then Worshipful Master of the Northern Lodge, Bro. Gould, as honorary members, and now I have again the honour of presenting another District Grand Master, also a Past Master of the Northern Lodge, with an address on the beginning of her (so to speak) manhood; and this document is expressive of the high opinion entertained by us of the very valuable services you have rendered to the Craft at large, more especially in the northern parts of this vast empire. Although it only bears about sixty signatures, these represent several members of the Lodge—and many others of our brethren under the Scotch Constitution—who are at present absent from Shanghai; and whilst fully endorsing everything that is contained in the address of our English Brethren, we think, as an honorary member of this Lodge for nearly twenty years, and having regard to the very cordial assistance you have always so freely and cheerfully rendered us when required, something more was due to you than the mere appending our names to the document I have alluded to. Therefore, to verify our name "Cosmopolitan," and our motto "Home Everywhere," the present proceedings were unanimously adopted. I could add a deal on behalf of the Lodge, and still more on my own account, as during our Masonic intercourse of considerably over a quarter of a century, we have, I dare to say, always worked most harmoniously together; but I will not further detain the brethren with these old stories, as many may think, and some may even say, that things have changed since then. Therefore, with this preface, I will call on Bro. Gowing, our Secretary, to read the address itself. The Secretary then read the address, as follows:

CORNELIUS THORNE, Esq.,
Past District Grand Master of Northern China, E.C.

DEAR SIR AND RIGHT WORSHIPFUL BROTHER,—When, after many years of constant and unsparing labours on behalf of Freemasonry, you announced your intention of retiring from the high office which you had filled with such distinguished credit as District Grand Master of English Freemasons in Northern China, the announcement created a deep feeling of regret, not only among English Masons, but among the members of the Craft of every other Constitution represented in China. To the lasting benefits which you have conferred on English Freemasonry in the Far East, the brethren lately under your own jurisdiction have testified in the warmest terms; and we, the undersigned members of the Lodge Cosmopolitan and others working under the Grand Lodge of Scotland, now desire to express to you the the high regard and esteem in which you are held amongst us, and our grateful remembrance of the favours which you have conferred upon us. Nearly twenty years ago the members of the Lodge Cosmopolitan showed their appreciation of the services which you had already rendered to the Craft by electing you an honorary member of their body; and situated as we are, having no Provincial Grand Lodge in China, it has always been a great advantage to us to have your long experience and sound judgment in Masonic matters placed, as they have been, so ungrudgingly at our service. Before the establishment of the District Grand Lodge you more than once acted as our Installing Master; and since then you have never missed one occasion of attending with your Officers and installing the various Masters of our Lodge as they succeeded one another. By your readiness to assist Masons of every Constitution and nationality—thus carrying out to the uttermost the great principle of the universality of the Science of Freemasonry—you have, as a Mason, proved yourself Cosmopolitan in the truest sense of the word; and we, members of the Cosmopolitan Lodge, beg your acceptance of a Lodge jewel as a visible mark of our grateful esteem. It is our earnest prayer that you may long be spared to continue the good work on behalf of Freemasonry and of your fellow men, to which you have devoted so large a portion of your life.

We are, Dear Sir and Right Worshipful Brother,

Yours faithfully,

(Fifty-six signatures were appended).

Bro. Donaldson—This document, my R.W. Brother, I have now the greatest pleasure in handing to you, and also the jewel referred to therein, well knowing you will place more value on it than it is intrinsically worth; wishing you, on behalf of the whole Scottish Craft, health and happiness during such length of days as may be allotted to you, and on behalf of the Committee every prosperity, wherever you be; and may our Father in Heaven have you at all times in His holy keeping. Bro. Thorne, in reply, said—Bro. Donaldson, R.W. Sir, Bro. Wardens, and Brethren of the Cosmopolitan Lodge: I feel great difficulty in finding words to express myself, in returning you thanks for this further proof of your kindness towards me, in presenting me with this beautiful address and handsome jewel. You have been pleased to bear testimony to my zeal for our Order. I feel I scarcely deserve such kindness, for I am aware how inadequately I have performed the various Masonic duties which have fallen to my lot. Still, Brethren, I have in some measure tried to carry out the principles of the Craft, and to follow the precepts inculcated by the jewel worn by our J.D., the trowel, which teaches us to spread the cement of brotherly love and affection. In the address you refer to the fact that over twenty years ago I was elected an honorary member of this Lodge. This was not for any service I had then rendered to it, for when I left Shanghai, in March 1864, the warrant for its working had not arrived; and I therefore felt more fully this mark of the esteem of my Scotch brethren who had honoured me in so signal a manner. You allude to me as a Cosmopolitan Mason. Is not this the character which every Mason should strive to obtain and to be proud of? Do we not boast that Freemasonry extends its branches over the whole habitable surface of the globe? And that being so, are we not as Freemasons bound to carry our principles with us wherever we go, so as to set an example to all mankind as well as to our brethren of moral and religious rectitude? Brethren, we are all too apt to fail in this respect; but when such notice is taken of us as you have been pleased to take of me this evening, it makes us feel more fully our own shortcomings, while at the same time it teaches us that the affection of our brethren causes them to overlook many of our failings, and should therefore strengthen us to persevere in the paths of rectitude. To my younger brethren in the Craft I venture to say—remember our lives and actions are carefully noted by those around us, and that as Freemasons we are bound to act up to the precepts taught in our Lodges; and by doing so we may be the means of causing others to follow in our steps, and thereby increase the happiness of those with whom we are connected, or with whom we may come in contact. Brethren of the Cosmopolitan Lodge, I thank you most warmly for this address, and also for the jewel which accompanies it. I shall feel proud to wear this jewel whenever I have an opportunity of so doing; it will remind me of the many pleasant Masonic meetings I have taken part in with my brethren at Shanghai, and of the kindness I have received at their hands. I do not think I shall be leaving China for some time to come, and it will be my pleasure in the future, as in the past, to render service to this Lodge and its members. May the teaching of this Lodge be the means of bringing many into the right path, so that at the termination of this, our mortal existence, we may be found ready to enter into that rest prepared by the Great Architect of the Universe for all who trust in His word and walk in the way of His commandments. R.W. Sir, and brethren all, accept my heartfelt thanks. Bro. Pemberton, on behalf of the Lodge, then presented a testimonial and address to Brother C. M. Donaldson, the Senior Past Master and founder of the Lodge, in commemoration of the constant services which he had rendered to the brethren; and Bro. Donaldson warmly returned thanks. After the closing of the Lodge the brethren supped together under the presidency of the newly installed Master, convivialities being kept up till a late hour.

CONSECRATION OF THE PRINCE EDWARD LODGE, No. 2109.

ON Saturday, the 23rd ultimo, a new Masonic Lodge was consecrated at Heaton Moor, near Manchester, in the large hall of the Conservative Club. This Lodge is an offshoot of the Wolseley Lodge, six out of the seven petitioners being subscribing members of 1993, and it is said to be intended to conduct it on temperance principles. The brethren of the Provinces of East and West Lancashire had a general invitation to attend the consecration, and as a result a numerous company of brethren assembled to witness the ceremony. Bro. W. Goodacre P.G.S., acting for the D.P.G.M., was the Consecrating Officer; he performed the task in an able, eloquent and masterly style. The following brethren (founders) were appointed to their respective Offices:—Hopewell P.M. P.D.G.D.C. Bombay W.M., Harris W.M. 1993 I.P.M., Webster S.W., Burton J.W., Thompson Treasurer, Cole Secretary, Wells S.D., Rev. R. W. Buckley Chaplain, Bromley P.M. D.C., Broadbent J.D., Berra I.G., Litton and Coxell Stewards, N. Jones Tyler. Many candidates were proposed for initiation and joining, and after the usual hearty good wishes for the prosperity of the new Master, Lodge was closed, and the brethren formed in procession, and marched to the lively strains of the Barnes Home Band, to St. Paul's Church, where a choral service was performed by the choir, and an address delivered by the rector, Bro. Rev. R. W. Buckley, D.D, Chaplain. The proceeds of a collection, made at the close of the service, is to be devoted to providing a stained glass window in commemoration of the consecration of the new Lodge. A banquet was held in the evening, and was all that could be desired. Bro. W. Harris, in proposing Success to the Prince Edward Lodge, said one or two attempts had been previously made to found a Lodge on the Moor, but from various causes the endeavours were not successful. The Prince Edward Lodge, whose existence had been inaugurated that day under such favourable auspices, was now an accomplished fact, and this regally named Lodge would, he trusted, have a great, useful, and honourable career. Such must be the inevitable result if those who from time to time constituted the component parts were honourable, worthy and true Craftsmen. The desire to maintain its now bright and untarnished escutcheon was surely a work worthy of emulation by every one of its members. He took Ancient Freemasonry to mean, amongst many other beautiful allegorical teachings and ennobling tenets, a moral Institution, inculcating primarily self architecture, self completion, removing the knobs and excrescences of our moral character, and making in them a more complete and polished manhood—more susceptible to every generous impulse of our common humanity—more ready to perform any kindly act to our brother man, and more charitable to all in word and deed. Who amongst them could estimate the possibilities for good emanating from the establishment of this Lodge? Might the young Craft, so ably and efficiently launched that day, be continued in her course by the guiding hand of the G.A.O.T.U., and might the work thus begun in His name be continued to His glory, and established in them by obedience to His Divine precepts. Several other toasts were honoured, and an enjoyable evening was spent.

CONSECRATION OF THE WILBERFORCE LODGE, No. 2135.

THE constitution and consecration of this Lodge took place on the 29th ult., at the Lodge-rooms, Charlotte-street, Hull. The ceremony was most solemn and impressive, and was performed by Bro. Dr. J. P. Bell Past Senior Grand Deacon Eng. and Deputy Prov. Grand Master North and East Yorkshire, assisted by Bros. M. C. Peck P.G. Secretary, Walter Reynolds P.M. P.G. Treasurer, Geo. Wilson P.P.G. Deacon, H. Forder P.M. P.G.J.D., and a large attendance of the brethren of other Lodges in Hull and district. On the conclusion of the consecration ceremony, Bro. T. T. Davis was installed as Worshipful Master by Bro. W. Reynolds P.M. P.G. Treasurer; and afterwards the following brethren were invested as Officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. P. C. Whitfield P.M. Acting I.P.M., J. Macksil S.W., R. W. Moll J.W., W. Gillet P.M. Treasurer and Lecture Master, F. W. Maggarr Secretary, W. Hakes Chaplain, F. Vivian S.D., G. W. Greenwood J.D., Vessey King Organist, J. Charlesworth D.C., J. W. Sewell Steward, W. Hickling I.G., J. Bardall Tyler. About 70 brethren subsequently sat down to a banquet in the Humber Lodge, Osborne Street, kindly lent for the occasion by Bro. J. D. O'Donoghue, W.M. of the Humber. During the evening Miss Empringham and Mrs. Baxter entertained the company with a number of popular songs and duets, the duties of the pianist being kindly undertaken by Bro. Vessey King.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

NEPTUNE LODGE, No. 22.

THE annual meeting of this Lodge was held at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham Street, E.C., on Thursday, the 28th ultimo, when Bro. J. Corbett was installed as Worshipful Master for the ensuing year. The Lodge having been opened in regular form and the minutes confirmed, the business of the day was proceeded with. This comprised the consideration of a notice of motion by Brother H. Povey P.M. D.C.:—"That a jewel of the usual value be presented to the W.M., Brother W. Cook, on his retirement from the chair, and that the inscription be such as the Lodge shall determine." This was carried, and then Bro. J. F. Fletcher was passed to the degree of Fellow Craft. Mr. Robert John Bert White was balloted for, for initiation, on the proposition of Bro. H. Roberts, seconded by Bro. J. Corbett W.M. elect. The report of the Audit Committee was received, and then Brother J. Corbett was installed as Worshipful Master for the year ensuing. The following brethren were appointed Officers for the year:—Bros. William Cook I.P.M., L. V. Walker S.W., E. Y. Jolliffe J.W., E. F Storr P.M. Treasurer, J. P. Collings P.M. Secretary, W. R. Brooks S.D., H. Savidge J.D., W. J. Charles I.G., H. H. Knill Organist, H. Povey P.M. Director of Ceremonies, J. R. Tayler and Harrington Baily Stewards, J. Parkinson Tyler. Mr. White was then initiated, the ceremony being conducted by the newly-installed Master. On the Proposition of Bro. E. F. Storr P.M. and Treasurer, the sum of ten guineas was voted from the funds of the Lodge for Masonic charity, to be placed on the list of the W.M. Some formal business having been transacted the Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet; after which the customary toasts were honoured. The Queen and the Craft was the first on the list, and was followed by the National Anthem. In speaking to the toast of the Most Worshipful Grand Master, the W.M. referred to the undoubted popularity of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, who was a man beloved by all classes of the community; it would be a surprise to the world if anything arose to dim the lustre of his fame. The Pro Grand Master the Earl of Carnarvon was made the subject of a separate toast; next came the Deputy Grand Master the Earl of Lathom, and the rest of the Grand Officers, with which was associated the name of Col. Shadwell H. Clerke the Grand Secretary of England, who in reply referred to the traditions of the Neptune Lodge, which embodied a wide and comprehensive period in Masonic history. Any reference made to the Grand Officers by such a Lodge was worthy of especial recognition. Brother Colonel Clerke referred to the masterly way in which the work had been performed by the Installing Master, likewise to the ability displayed by the present W.M., and cordially thanked Bro. Corbett for the way in which he had referred to the brethren comprised in the toast. Bro. Cook proposed the health of the W.M. As the speaker who had just sat down had said, the brethren had already had an opportunity of judging of the Worshipful Master's qualifications for office. He had performed the ceremony of initiation in such a manner that every member of the Lodge must have been thoroughly satisfied. He (Bro. Cook) had infinite pleasure in calling on the brethren to drink a toast in honour of their Worshipful Master. Bro. Corbett, after expressing his thanks to Bro. Cook and the brethren for the toast, assured them that their happiness and comfort should be his first study. He should endeavour to carry out the ritual in a manner that should sustain the prestige the Lodge had always enjoyed. He was much gratified at the success which had attended their present meeting, and assured them he would do his best to maintain the good feeling already existing in the Lodge. He trusted the year might pass pleasantly for all. Bro. Corbett now proceeded to propose the health of the Immediate Past Master. It must have been intensely gratifying to the members generally, and it was particularly so to him, to hear the eulogistic remarks made by their esteemed Grand Secretary in regard to the working of Bro. Cook. He had no hesitation in saying that his efforts to promote the comfort of the brethren during the past year had secured for him the lasting esteem of the members. Bro. Cook having made suitable reply, the W.M. proposed the health of the initiate, to whom he tendered a cordial welcome. In response Bro. White said that till the end of his days he would strive to keep the insignia with which he had been invested in a state of purity. For the visitors several responded, but as time was getting short brevity was the rule; with one exception, where a brother, unwisely we think, went somewhat out of his course to urge on those present the desirability of securing larger premises for our Grand Lodge quarters. The general impression was, however, that the occasion was scarcely a fitting one for the expression of such views. Bro. Henry Povey (the Installing Master of the day) replied on behalf of the Past Masters, and then the W.M., in a most exhaustive speech, proposed the Masonic Charities. He detailed what was being done by the three Institutions, and referred to the part taken by the Neptune Lodge in the establishment, both of the Boys' School and the Benevolent Institution. Brother Terry in response gave some very interesting statistics, fully acknowledging the constant and consistent support given by the Neptune Lodge. After specially thanking the Lodge for its vote of ten guineas and the Worshipful Master for his promise of a similar amount, he humorously explained that sound practical evidence had for many years been shown that the brethren of the Old Neptune Lodge were fervent in their belief as to the benefits derivable from the Institution with which he was most intimately associated. He detailed the heavy responsibilities entailed on the executive of the Charity, and pleaded eloquently on behalf of the immediate objects of his care and solicitude. The Treasurer and Secretary were next toasted, and brief responses were made both by Bro. Storr (Treasurer) and Bro. Collings (Secretary). Shortly afterwards the Tyler's toast was given. Among the Visitors were Bros. Pile P.M. 1892, Crepper, Stedman W.M. 172, Cross 1319, Cousens 227, E. Anderson jun. 715, Wright 1364, Fitzgerald 1364, Burkitt 930, Kenning P.M. 1657, Willey 9, King 186, Hampfer 1679, Stone 1261. The following is the programme of songs, &c., which were capitally rendered by the artistes named. Brother Dr. J. F. Haskins presided at the pianoforte, and to him great credit is due for the musical arrangements, which gave most unbounded satisfaction to all assembled. Grace, "For these and all Thy Mercies," Tallis; National Anthem, "God Save the Queen." Dr. J. Ball—Solo by Miss Effie Chapuy, R.A.M.; Trio, "This Magic Wove Scarf" J. Barnett—Miss Chapuy and Messrs. Cassidy and D'Alton; Song, "I fear no foe," Pinsuti—Mr. Curtis D'Alton; Song, "Bid me good-bye," Tosti—Miss Effie Chapuy; Duet, "Maying," Miss M. H. Smith—Miss Chapuy and Mr. T. Cassidy; Song, "Linger awhile, my dearest," J. F. Haskins—Mr. T. Cassidy; Song, "Esmeralda," Levey—Miss Effie Chapuy; Song, "Father O'Flynn," Stanford—Mr. Curtis D'Alton; Solo Violin, "L'Elisir d'Amore," Thirlwell—Bro. H. Savidge, J.D.; Solo Pianoforte, Bro. Henry W. Peck; Song, "Good-bye," Tosti—Mr. T. Cassidy; Song, "The Demon King," Marks—Mr. Curtis D'Alton; Duet, "Excelsior," Balfe—Messrs. Cassidy and D'Alton.

G. Sword Bearer S.W., D. Schmidt J.W., R. Fisher Young P.M. Sec., P.M.'s Charles Allen, J. G. Yolland, J. Eccles, J. Lowthin, W. Lewis S.D., B. Gotto D.C., G. F. Kempson A.D.C., H. Holmes Prov. G.A. Sec Herts, T. S. Carter P.P.J.G.W. Herts, J. E. Cussans P.P.G.S.W. Herts, R. W. Goddard P.M. 65 Tyler, and others. Among the visitors were Bros. Morris 403, Tevon 1950, Kilsby 1702, Tabernacle 1238, Haskins 1364, Mickley 449, Parrott 1479, Roberts 1185, Teigne 1612, Hunt 194, Hawkins 25, Hudson 1708, Dumville 1479, W. M. Morgan jun., &c. The Lodge having been regularly opened, and the minutes confirmed, the sum of five guineas was voted from the funds of the Lodge for the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, to be placed on the list of Bro. Hopkin the W.M. elect, who will act as Steward at the approaching festival. Bro. Hopkin was then presented and regularly installed as Worshipful Master for the ensuing year. After being saluted in the three degrees, he appointed the following brethren as his Officers:—Bros. Schmidt S.W., Lewis J.W., Hayward Edwards P.M. Treasurer, Fisher Young P.M. Secretary, Durham S.D., Martin J.D., Grae P.M. D.C., Kempson A.D.C., Gotto I.G., De Bury and Baxter Stewards, Goddard P.M. Tyler. Brother Brittain the Installing Master then completed the ceremony with the customary addresses, delivering them in an able manner. Brother Hayward Edwards was appointed as the representative of the Lodge on the Provincial Audit Committee, and Brother Young the representative to the Hertfordshire Masonic Charity Association. The Trustees and Officers of the Gladsmuir Benevolent Fund were re-elected, and then the W.M. proceeded to close the Lodge. Before doing so he had a very pleasing duty to perform—to present his predecessor with the Past Master's jewel which had been unanimously voted to him by the Lodge. Bro. Brittain had performed the work of the chair during the past year in the most gratifying manner. If it had not been his good fortune to have any candidates come forward for initiation he had had other duties to carry out, equally, if not more, onerous. During the twelve months the Gladsmuir Lodge had lost two of its Past Masters, and the representation of the Lodge at the funerals of those two brethren had been arranged and properly carried out by the Worshipful Master. Then they had been honoured by a visit from the Provincial Grand Lodge, an event which naturally entailed a great amount of labour for Brother Brittain. He had attended to all these matters in a satisfactory manner, and in other ways had advanced the reputation of the Lodge. In presenting the Past Master's jewel he trusted that Bro. Brittain would long be a conspicuous member of the Lodge, and that he would have good health for many years to come. Bro. Brittain suitably acknowledged the presentation, and the name of a candidate for initiation having been given in, the Lodge was closed. The brethren afterwards assembled at banquet, under the presidency of the Worshipful Master, Bro. Hopkin. The usual toasts were given at the conclusion of the repast. The Worshipful Master said the first toast in all assemblies of Englishmen, and especially of Masons, was the health of Her Majesty the Queen. He was sure those present would honour the toast to the best of their ability, as loyalty was a prominent feature among Freemasons. It was a source of regret that Her Majesty did not so frequently show herself as her people desired, still, no doubt she had reasons for not doing so. The toast was followed by the National Anthem, and then the health of the Most Worshipful the Grand Master was proposed. His Royal Highness was a true and hearty Mason, as was evidenced by the interest he took in its ceremonies and in its welfare generally. In proposing the toast of the Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers Present and Past the W.M. said that from what he had seen at Grand Lodge he was convinced that Freemasonry was conducted as it ought to be. The way in which the work of the Craft was there arranged was worth the while of any one eligible to attend to witness. The next toast was the health of the R.W. the Provincial Grand Master. Many of those present had seen the way in which the Provincial Grand Master carried out the ceremonies of the Order. He was perfect in every part of the work. At the recent consecration of the Dacre Lodge he had amply proved this, the way in which the ceremonies were there carried out being a treat to behold. Bro. Halsey took great interest in the Gladsmuir Lodge, and, as they had heard in the Lodge, would have accepted their invitation to be present that day but for a prior engagement. He had shown the high opinion he held of the Gladsmuir Lodge by appointing four of its members to Provincial office for the current year. In proposing the toast of the Deputy Provincial Grand Master and the rest of the Provincial Officers, the Worshipful Master expressed his regret at the absence of the Deputy, who he fully anticipated would have been among them that day. They were honoured however by the presence of Bro. Dr. Mickley, the

S.W. of the Province, and by other Provincial Officers. Bro. Mickley, in responding, regretted that the absence of the Deputy had thrown the response to the toast on him, but more especially did he regret his absence, as it was caused by ill health. The Deputy of the Province might well be termed the right man in the right place. He proved his aptitude for the office on every possible occasion, and attended to his work as far as he was able. Bro. Mickley concluded by expressing his thanks on behalf of the others comprised in the toast, after which Bro. Brittain proposed the health of the Worshipful Master. It fell to his lot to propose the health of a most esteemed brother, who he had that evening had the pleasure of installing in the chair of the Gladsmuir Lodge. Bro. Hopkin had been most attentive to his duties, and had risen to his high office amid the good wishes of his fellow members, who felt the greatest pleasure in seeing him in the chair and who trusted he might have a successful and prosperous year of office. In response, Bro. Hopkin assured the brethren he hardly felt able to reply to the very kind way in which he had been received by those present. The position he then occupied in the Lodge was far beyond what he had ever expected. It would be his constant endeavour to keep up the standard of merit of the Gladsmuir Lodge, and if possible add to the high reputation it already enjoyed. He next proposed the toast of the Installing Master. Those who had witnessed the ceremony of the day must have been gratified at the able way in which the Immediate Past Master had performed it. The manner in which Bro. Brittain had conducted the affairs of the Lodge during the past year was worthy of imitation, for he had been most attentive to every duty which he was called upon to fulfil. He was a most enthusiastic brother, having the interests of Freemasonry at heart. No one could be more anxious to see the work of the Order properly carried out. Bro. Brittain tendered his thanks. He had that day made his maiden attempt at the installation ceremony, and he was very pleased to know he had done it to the satisfaction of those around him. He assured them he knew it much better out of the Lodge than he had appeared to know it in the Lodge, but that he supposed was usually the case. He considered that his year of office had been an eventful one for the Gladsmuir Lodge. First they had been threatened with being forced to find other quarters, but happily a removal had not been necessary. Then they had had the misfortune to lose two of their Past Masters, and last, though not least, they had unexpectedly had the opportunity of entertaining Provincial Grand Lodge, in which matter they had given satisfaction to all the brethren in the district. With all this to attend to he had unfortunately had no actual work—so far as the ceremonies of Masonry were concerned—but the Lodge had maintained its reputation he what it had done. He had been able to attend regularly in the past, and assured the brethren that if it was any way possible they would always see the jewel they had just presented to him at their meetings with him behind it. The toast of the Visitors was next given. Bro. Kilsby replied. He, and he felt he might also say, all the Visitors, had so thoroughly enjoyed themselves that night that they would be anxious to come again. The work in the Lodge had been a treat, and the hospitality of the brethren such as to prove how pleased they were to see guests among them. Bro. Yonens (Melbourne) also replied. He was much indebted to the Worshipful Master and the brethren for the hearty reception accorded him that day. Although not as regular an attendant at Lodge meetings as he could desire he had the interests of the Craft thoroughly at heart. He had had some experience of Freemasonry at the Antipodes, where it was very strong. Only the previous week he had read of the consecration of a new Lodge in New Zealand, and it had started with seventy-nine members. He could also speak strongly of the true Masonic spirit of the Australian and New Zealand brethren. During his travels he had been shipwrecked, and was on that occasion entertained by a brother Mason, who took him in and treated him as only a true Mason could do. He should not readily forget the kindness with which the Visitors had that night been received in the Gladsmuir Lodge. The W.M. next gave the Past Masters. The brethren who had passed the chair of the Lodge were Masons who could be looked up to and revered. The Lodge might at all times be sure of their support and their encouragement. It would be his endeavour to follow in their footsteps. Bro. Yolland tendered thanks for the hearty reception of the toast, assuring the Lodge that the services of the Past Masters would always be at the disposal of the brethren. Brother Brittain also replied, and the Worshipful Master then proposed the Masonic Charities. No one, he felt, was more to be pitied than he who, in the battle of life, had fallen into distress. It was the purpose of Freemasonry to help those who were unfortunate, and he trusted the Gladsmuir Lodge would do its best to support the brethren and others who were forced to appeal for assistance. Last year had seen the largest amount contributed for Masonic benevolence ever known, and that entailed grave responsibilities. Were the brethren to consider that as a last dying effort? Were they to cease activity and be content with less?—No. They must so act as to prevent a falling off, even if they were not able to increase the total year by year. He had undertaken the duties of Steward for the Old People, and appealed for the warmest support from the brethren on behalf of those who were unable to appeal for themselves. Bro. Cussans replied in a forcible speech. There were some who looked upon Freemasonry as consisting of but two things—buffoonery and gluttony, but those who were initiated knew this was not true—the aim of every brother was to relieve the wants of others so far as lay in his power. Bro. Cussans referred to some instances which had come under his observation in which Masonic charity had been fully exemplified, and in other ways urged the brethren to do what they could. As a result we are pleased to say several amounts were added to the Worshipful Master's list. The Officers of the Lodge having been toasted, and a reply having been given, the Tyler was summoned, and he concluded the proceedings in the customary manner. Several of the members of the Lodge and visitors were prevented from attending by the inclemency of the weather. Bro. Dr. Haskins presided at the piano.

"OUR CHILDREN" AT THE PANTOMIME.

As was shadowed forth at the consecration of the Drury Lane Lodge on Monday night, the enthusiasm of Bro. Augustus Harris is not confined merely to his confrères within the Lodge, but is also extended to the children who are maintained, clothed, and educated in our Institutions at Wood Green and Battersea Rise. His kindly invitation to the little ones of both sexes who are the peculiar care of the Craft, to witness a representation of Aladdin, was received with great rejoicing at both Schools, and the proprietor of the "National Theatre" has reaped the reward of his well-merited intentions by the scene that was witnessed in his unparelleled resort on Friday of last week. The girls left Battersea early in the afternoon in thirteen well-appointed conveyances, supplied by Mr. Thomas Tilling, the "prince of jobmasters," of Peckham, and elsewhere, and arrived at the theatre soon after two o'clock, where they were received by the genial proprietor, his brother Mr. Charles Harris, Bro. J. Fleming the Treasurer, Bro. A. M. Broadley Secretary, and others, including Bros. Edgar Bowyer, Frank Richardson, and Robert Grey. They were under the superintendence of Miss Davis, the head mistress, who was assisted by Miss Kernott and Miss Hammond; and all looked cheerful and well as they filed into the corridor of the theatre, evidently bent on enjoyment. The boys, accompanied by their esteemed head master the Rev. Dr. Morris, travelled by rail from Wood Green to Farringdon Street Station, and marched thence in procession to Drury Lane. On their arrival at the theatre they were conducted to the seats specially allotted them in the pit, and as the lads recognised their cheery-faced "sisters" in the balcony, they set up such a cheer as has seldom been heard to reverberate through the walls of "Old Drury." It is scarcely necessary to say that the exciting incidents of the Arabian Nights' story, so familiar to every school boy and girl, were heartily enjoyed, and that the fun of the after burlesque was appreciated. The children enjoyed Pantomime as children always do, and their ringing laughter was most refreshing. All that could be done for their enjoyment was done, and when the transformation scenes had been wonderingly admired, and the antics of clown and pantaloon laughed at, the little ones filed out into the corridor, where they were regaled with rich cakes, oranges, and buns, generously given by Bro. Lord Londesborough, the Worshipful Master of the Drury Lane Lodge. His lordship occupied a seat in the stalls during the performance, and seemed heartily to enjoy the ebullition of pleasure evinced by the children. The "distribution" of the good things was superintended by Mr. Gibbon, who discharged this labour of love with the utmost readiness, and the little ones were loud in their praise of the cakes supplied by Messrs. Buzzard, of 197 Oxford Street, and still more for the delectable entertainment to which they had been treated through the kind hospitality of Bro. Augustus Harris.

In reference to the late Sir Walter Burrell, Prov. Grand Master for Sussex, it may be said he was an excellent worker himself, and strove by every means in his power to induce the Masters in his Province to perfect themselves. A good old custom was that of his,—to invite the Masters annually to a pic-nic at his seat at East Grinstead, and all who have occupied the W.M.'s chair can testify to the enjoyable nature of these Masonic gatherings. Nothing was left undone that would conduce to the comfort of his guests, even to the sending of carriages for their conveyance both morning and evening from and to the railway station. He visited the Lodges in his Province, and by his universal cheerfulness and kindness won the hearts of every brother therein.

Truth says of him:

Another good landlord and zealous agriculturist has passed away in Sir Walter Burrell, who had represented the defunct borough of Shoreham in Parliament for the last ten years, during which period he supported the Tory leaders "with silence and solicitude." He was very popular in Sussex among all classes, and was the head of one of the oldest families in the county. He was very kind and charitable to his poor neighbours, and did everything in his power to improve their condition and to make them happy. Sir Walter was an enthusiastic supporter of all the local cricket clubs, and he took great interest in the Volunteers. He was one of the leading Freemasons of Sussex. His father, Sir Percy Burrell, sat for Shoreham for fifty-six years, and was "father of the House" when he died in 1862.

The following Festivals were held at the Freemasons' Tavern during the week ending Saturday, 6th February 1886:—

Monday—Caxton Lodge, Urban Chapter, Lodge of Unions, Zephyr Ball. Tuesday—Albion Lodge, Royal York Lodge, Third London Rifle Volunteer Ball. Wednesday—City of London Lodge Ball, Grand Chapter Club. Thursday—St. Andrew's Lodge, St. James's Chapter, Victoria Rifles Lodge, Westminster and Keystone Lodge. Friday—Second City of London Volunteer Ball, Royal Kensington Lodge, Odd Volumes, Thistle Lodge. Saturday—City and West End Soirée, London Wheelers' Cinderella, Phœnix Chapter.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills will be found the best friend to persons afflicted with ulcerations, bad legs, sores, abscesses, fistulæ, and other painful and complicated complaints. Printed and very plain directions for the application of the Ointment are wrapped round each pot. Holloway's alterative Pills should be taken throughout the progress of the cure, to maintain the blood in a state of perfect purity, and to prevent the health of the whole body being jeopardised by the local ailments; bad legs, old sores, great grievances, are thus really cured, without confining the patient to bed, or withdrawing from him either the nutritious diet and generous support so imperatively demanded, when weakening diseases attack advanced years or constitutions evincing premature decrepitude.

REVIEWS.

All Books intended for Review should be addressed to the Editor of The Freemason's Chronicle, Belvidere Works, Hermes Hill, Pentonville, London, N.

—:o:—

The Cosmopolitan Masonic Calendar, Diary and Pocket Book for 1886
London: G. Kenning, Great Queen Street, and Little Britain, E.C.

The name and character of this handy and comprehensive book of reference upon all matters connected with the Craft are so familiar to our readers, and so essential has it proved to all who have an active interest in Freemasonry, that it would seem scarcely necessary to say anything new about it. By a glance at the 17th annual issue of this recognised handbook of our Order, we note that many improvements have been made, and of course additions, which are constantly arising in consequence of the increase in the number of Masonic Lodges throughout the country. In addition to the calendar, there is given a list of Lodges, with dates (ancient and modern), Chapters, K.T. Preceptories, Conclaves, Colleges, and Grand Councils, with the names of Officers, &c., together with full particulars of every Grand Masonic body throughout the world. An improvement is noticed, and one which will be of great service in enabling brethren to ascertain in a moment the information they are in search of. We refer to the indices at the heads of pages, classifying the Lodges in this and other countries, both in the Craft, Mark, Arch, and other degrees. This is a work which should be in the hands of every member of the Craft; and those who do not possess it will find they are deficient of much useful information on account of their old issues being, perhaps like themselves, a "little rusty."

FUNERALS properly carried out and personally attended, in London or Country, by Bro. G. A. HUTTON, 17 Newcastle Street, Strand, W.C. Monuments erected. Valuations made.

"Dr. G. H JONES, F.R.S.L., the well-known Surgeon-Dentist of 57 Great Russell Street, London, has just re-issued his popular treatise on the teeth, which should be read by every one wishing to have a good and sound set of teeth; 'Painless and Perfect Dentistry' is its title, which will be found fully justified on perusal of its pages, as many hints for the guidance of those seeking a really practical and scientific dental surgeon will be found. The care and treatment of the teeth, with much useful information concerning the mouth and its molars, is contained therein, and we cordially commend this brochure of Dr. G. H. Jones, to the attention of our readers, which will be found a true guide, philosopher, and friend. The concluding chapters of the book are devoted to a description of the Author's method of dental treatment, which has obtained so high a reputation, and which seems to realise the desideratum of 'holding the mirror up to nature.'"—The Brighton Standard, December 1885.

THE ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

THE very large additions which have been made during the past few years to the number of annuities dispensed by this Institution has placed it in the foremost rank among the Charities of England, while the extent of its munificence has acquired for it such a reputation as has brought credit to the brethren who established it, to those who have raised it to its present greatness, and, above all, to those who maintain it by their contributions. To each and all of these brethren the thanks of the Craft are due, and are frequently given, while, in addition, the supporters of the Charity have won the thanks—aye, and blessings also—of the many aged brethren and widows who have been relieved through its funds in the declining years of their life. We trust the day is far distant when it will become necessary to in any way curtail the operations of this truly noble Institution, but as we have invariably pointed out, whenever an increase in its sphere of operations has been proposed or carried out, extension not only means increased responsibilities for the time being, but also increased expenditure year by year so long as it is desired to maintain the extension. We say, so long as it is desired to maintain the extension, but who is there, with the true spirit of Masonry in his breast, who does not desire to maintain, and even extend the benefits which this Institution bestows on aged brethren and the widows of deceased Freemasons?

With every desire, however, to extend the operations of the Institution there is another, and a greater object to be achieved—to raise the funds necessary to carry the Charity out on its present basis; and although this difficulty has been nobly mastered in the past, there can be no gainsaying the fact that at the present time there is a prospect, if not a probability, of its mastering every effort which the brethren of England can put forward on behalf of the Institution, and those who are seeking admission to its benefits. The receipts of the year are largely dependent on the result of the Annual Festival held on behalf of the Institution, and the receipts of that Festival are in turn largely dependent on the number of Stewards who take part in it. This year the number of the latter is terribly short of the total of last year, and it may therefore be expected that the total amount realised by the Board of Stewards will also be a long way short, although at present there are no means of forming an estimate one way or the other. All we can do is to argue by inference, and unfortunately there is very little need to take an extravagantly gloomy view of the case to make it apparent that a great falling off must result from this year's Festival as compared with what was announced last February. At the Festival of 1885 the total announced showed an average of about £53 per Steward, and at the present time there are sixty-seven Stewards less than at the corresponding period of last year. It is but fair then to imagine that the year's total may show a falling off of upwards of three thousand five hundred pounds, indeed that it must do so unless this year's Stewards are able to do much better than their brothers were able to last year, and so raise the average. But is there anything which can for one moment induce us to hope that this year's lists will be individually larger than last year's? we fear not. Rather may we look for a falling-off, for everything at the present time points to a diminution in the flow of benevolence rather than to an increase. Business has been bad for some time; appears to be getting worse, and presents the gloomiest of prospects for the future. How, then, can we expect increased benevolence? There may be a willingness to give more; we believe there always is whenever more is needed; but without the means to carry the wish into execution the best of desires are unavailing, and meanwhile those who are the worst off cannot find that little help which moderate prosperity, at ordinary times even, would place it in the power of their fellows to bestow. What can be done to help them, or where shall we look for relief for the many whose past services to the Craft have given them a claim on every Mason of to-day, for relief as far as their circumstances in life permit? We can only look to the Craft at large, and appeal to every brother to help his local Steward to the best of his ability, and thereby endeavour to make the Festival of the present year as great a success as any which have preceded it.

At the present time there are one hundred and twenty-nine candidates seeking admission to the benefits of the Benevolent Institution, while at the same time there are but eighteen vacancies which can be divided among that large number of applicants; add to this the six deferred annuities which the Institution is able to afford, and we have one hundred and five candidates for whom absolutely nothing can be done. No doubt every one of these old people has been looking forward to the week which is now closing for many months past, for most of them must have been aware that it was on Wednesday that the Committee had to decide on the number of vacancies to be filled at the coming election. It was in the power of the Committee to decide on an extension or a curtailment of the number of annuitants, or simply to decide on filling the vacancies caused by death during the past twelve months. They adopted the latter course, but not without making a strong effort to meet the increasing calls on the Charity by at least a small increase in the number of beneficiaires. Wiser counsels, however, prevailed, and in face of the facts we have just referred to in connection with the approaching Festival, the Committee decided to simply continue as they had been doing the past year. We approve of their decision, but we regret the circumstances which have made that decision necessary. All we can hope for now is, that the Festival may prove a surprise—that a much larger amount may be announced than is expected, and that, in consequence, it may be found possible to increase the number of vacancies previous to the election.

We have said that the number of candidates is one hundred and twenty-nine. Of these, fifty-eight are seeking the benefits of the Male, and seventy-one those of the Female Fund. There are but twelve vacancies for the aged brethren to fill, and only six available for the widows. Add to these the three deferred annuities in each case, and we have the total of what can this year be done for those who, in their decline of life, are compelled to seek the help of their brother Masons, or the brethren of their deceased husbands. Can a more forcible appeal for help be made than the bare announcement of these figures, coupled with the assurance that as much is being done with the funds at disposal as is possible to be done? and that anything further the Masons of England may find it in their power to give will be faithfully and zealously applied for the relief of those who are unable to relieve themselves.

An opinion has been gaining ground for some time past that for a Steward to be of much service he must secure a tolerably large list. Nothing is further from the facts of the case. Large totals are of course desirable, but if we cannot have large ones let us have medium ones, or even small ones. If a brother can only secure one or two amounts in addition to his own, let him not despair on that account; if he cannot secure even one amount to support his own donation, let him not keep back. His efforts in the cause must do good, and will without doubt bear fruit some day, while his example will lead others to follow in his footsteps, perhaps to meet with greater success from friends than he was able to secure from his. If once it becomes the rule for brethren to give up Stewardships because they cannot at first command a number of contributions outside their own, the whole system of Stewardship will speedily come to an end, while it is only after setting a good example, and then trying what can be done that brethren secure large totals. In face of the present outlook we urgently implore all who are able to lend a hand on behalf of the Benevolent Institution, and endeavour to make its Festival—to be held this month—so great a success as to allow of an increase in the number of vacancies being declared before the next election.

ALBERT PIKE'S "MASONIC ORIGINS."

By Bro. Jacob Norton.

A REFORMER of religion, science, or politics, is very apt to be assailed by those whose cherished faith he is endeavouring to destroy, and such is also the case in Masonry: thus Bro. Krause was persecuted unto death by his contemporaries in Germany because he differed with them about something. Bro. Dalcho was deposed by two of his associates from Sovereignty of the A. and A. Rite because he knew more than they did. Bro. Findel is still detested by American Templars and other high degreers because he exploded their fallacies, and we all remember what a hue and cry was raised against Bro. Gould because he disproved Wren's connection with Freemasonry. The opponents to free inquiry can be divided into several classes. First, are those who believe in "the wisdom of our ancestors." They are opposed to innovation, simply because it is new. These are mentally mere crystalized fossils, and are impervious to reason. Second, are the luminaries, who have acquired a high reputation as Masonic authorities. These, as a rule, will fight to the last for every old absurdity, even after they are convinced that it is an absurdity. Here, however, we have a high degreer who frankly acknowledges that the legends of all our Rites and Degrees are mere fictions.

I have here, seemingly, a bran new pamphlet, minus, however, the names of the author and publisher—it is headed "Masonic Origins," at the end of which is the well-known cross of a S.G.C. of the A. and A. Rite, and I have reason to believe that Bro. Albert Pike is its author. I have made up my mind long ago that Bro. Pike was not Masonically orthodox, as far as Masonic traditions are concerned, and verily believe that the few concessions which Mackey, in the latter part of his life, made to reason and common sense, were mainly due to Pike's influence. But be that as it may, Bro. Pike has come out with a confession of faith, and his motives, as well as his reasoning thereupon, seem to me very curious.

Bro. Pike seems to regard the Masonic degree manufacturing business from a political economy standpoint, viz., supply and demand. It seems to be his opinion that when Masons first began to hanker after Christian Masonry, that the degree inventor was perfectly right in making the bankerers believe that De Molay and the Knights Templars were Masons, that he was in possession of the Templars' mysteries, &c., and that for a certain sum he could transform them into genuine Knights Templars. After our Christian became Templarised, the degree manufacturer found that high titles were appreciated among our brethren; and here again the degree inventor was perfectly justified in making that class believe that he had received from Berlin or Paris a series of ancient Rites and degrees overflowing with Masonic light, and that the possessors of those Rites will be called Emperors of the East and West, Princes of Jerusalem, Princes of the Royal Secret. In short, the Rite will confer upon a Mason more titles than any King, Emperor, or Potentate ever had. And of course the ambitious brethren rush into the newly-invented concern, and imagine themselves to be very high in Masonry.

Now, as a rule, the hankerers for more and more light, never can find time to read anything, but some of the infected with the high degree fever seem to have got old of some old Masonic history, wherein they learned that old father Adam was a Mason. Thereupon they began to inquire as to what had become of the Adamite ritual, &c. And here again, the degree inventor was justified in persuading those zealous seekers for "more light" that somebody from Egypt, Timbuctoo, or elsewhere, had empowered him to confer a series of degrees, covering the whole period from the days of Adam to those of Solomon. And it is amusing to read the writings of these high degree luminaries, boasting that four or five thousand years ago their Masonic degrees were deemed to have been ancient. Bro. Pike not only approves of the Masonic degree inventing business, but he also lays down the law that the inventor of a degree or rite has a right to be Grand Nabob thereof for life, that he may sell his right to another, and that whichever way the Nabobship was acquired the members of the concern are bound to obey the Nabob's dictum.

Here is a strange perversion of ideas, viz., because supply and demand, in legitimate business transactions, is all right, therefore, when a Masonic simpleton hankers after ancient Degrees, the Degree manufacturer may palm off upon him his new-made Degrees for old ones. Now, if a man sells an old coin, manuscript, &c., for a high price, and guarantees it to be old, and it is afterwards discovered that the seller himself had manufactured it, he is taken up and punished as an impostor; hence, I can see no reason why the seller of old Masonic degrees may not also be punished as an impostor. The truth, however, is the craze for more degrees is now so great that our Masons will rush into any kind of humbug, knowing it to be such. Bro. Pike's motive, however, for coming out with the truth, is simply to convince the reader that as far as truth is concerned one rite is just as good as another, he says:

"The primary or earliest rite of Freemasonry was the Symbolic, commonly known as Blue Masonry, consisting at first of either one or two degrees, to which afterwards a third was added. When the first or second degree was invented, or by whom, or how, is not known. It is only known that until about a certain date there were no degrees, and that it was some time after the first two were invented and used, that the third degree was adopted. The three were invented in succession, and came into use before there were other organisations than that of Blue Masonry." Again.

"Every one knows that no such a history, charges, and regulations, had come from Italy (meaning Anderson's Constitutions, &c.), that the charges were not extracted from 'Ancient Records' of Lodges beyond Seas. . . . that the whole account of the Constitutions adopted by the Grand Lodge at York, of which Prince Edwin was Grand Master, and the adoption of the Constitutions in the times of Henry VI. and of Edward IV. was fabulous.

"But being drawn out by Anderson, they were adopted by the Grand Lodge, and by that became obligatory, being in no wise vitiated by the false statements as to the antiquity of the sources from which they were derived, any more than the laws of Numa Pompilius, because, to give them greater sanctity, he pretended that they were dictated to him by the Nymph Egeria."

Now it is my humble opinion that if the laws of Numa had been ridiculous or unjust, and were only obeyed because the Nymph Egeria was believed to have dictated them, that the moment the Romans discovered that the Nymph did not dictate them, they had a perfect right to discard them.

After our author has had his say about Blue Masonry, he skims over the origin of a dozen or more other Masonries. It seems that the A. and A. Rite historians claimed that nine Commissioners assembled at either Berlin or Bordeaux (they do not seem to know which) in 1762. Thereupon Bro. Pike says:

"Whether there was such an assembly; whether, if there was, it met in 1762, who the Commissioners were, how appointed and empowered, and how, when, and by what Body these Regulations were adopted, nothing whatever is, or has been, known." Again,

"The Templar degree made its appearance in England, brought it is supposed from France, and worked in England as the first of seven degrees, of which the seventh was the Kadosh. All these were given in the Blue Lodge.

"In Scotland, one Lodge would sell to another, for a pound or two, the right to confer the Templar degree. In England the Lodges conferred it, and afterwards the Dermott Grand Lodge chartered an Encampment at Manchester, composed of artizans, which conferred the Templar degree for seven and sixpence. Then Dunckerley took possession of it, assumed to be its Chief, and made it an Order, with a new organisation. Who knows anything about the origin of that degree, by whom, and when, and where, it was invented and first worked? No man on earth! It is supposed to have originated in France, but no one knows that, nor has any one ever seen a French ritual of a Templar degree like ours, or like the English degree, nor is such a degree spoken of as ever having existed in France by any French Masonic writer.

"And those who had possession of the Templar degree in New England made the Red Cross degree out of two degrees of the Rite of Perfection, and organised it and the Templar degree into another Rite, with Encampments, Commanderies, &c. And who knows anything in regard to the origin of the two degrees out of which the Red Cross was made? No one! When, how, or by whom they were made, no one knows.

"I shall not criticise Bro. Pike's statements about the Templar degree being the first of seven in Dunckerley's Rite, &c. But I must say that, notwithstanding no one knows as to where and when the Templar degree was invented, I have not any doubt that France was the birthplace of Masonic Templarism. In the 5th volume of Bro. Gould's history I find as follows:

"In France, however, some [who pretended to be] Scots Lodges appear to have very early manufactured new degrees, connecting these very [so-called] distinguished Scots Masons with the Knights Templars, and thus giving rise to a subsequent flood of Templarism."

On page 92 he says:

"At this distance of time it would be impossible to define their precise teaching. This impossibility is not caused by the absence of rituals, of which any number exist, but by their diversity. One chief idea, however, runs through all—the discovery in a vault, by Scottish Crusaders, of the long lost and ineffable word. Also that in this search they had to work with the sword in one hand and the trowel in the other. The epoch referred to is, however, that of the Crusaders, not of Zerubbabel (or the second Temple)."

"The concluding part of the last paragraph furnishes the germ of Royal Arch Masonry, that is, the hint of "the sword in one hand, &c., probably suggested to the English ritual tinker to place the origin of the R.A. to the time of Zerubbabel. There were not only all kinds of Templar degrees in the last century, but R.A. degrees also, varied. For instance, several years ago I got hold of a French copy of a R.A. ritual, which was brought to New York from Hayti by Count de Laurent, in 1832. I had it translated into English, and two brothers of the 33rd degree assured me that there was some Scottish riticism in it. A very similar French ritual of the R.A. degree was brought from Hayti about the beginning of this century to New Orleans, which was translated by Bro. Pike. Whether this R.A. ritual, formed of the original Rite of Perfection before the Charlestonians swamped those degrees into their A. and A. Rite, I know not; but be that as it may, that French ritual placed the origin of the R.A. to the time of the Emperor Titus, or after the destruction of the last Temple, when some zealous Masons discovered a vault, and in it they found the lost word. The English ritual tinker changed its origin to the time of Zerubbabel, when not only the lost word was discovered, but the Pentateuch was also then discovered, and he also Christianised it, with the Triple Tau, and quotations from the Gospel of St. John. Here in America we have another kind of the R.A. ritual. But the A. and A. Riters knock the wind out of all R.A. rituals. According to them, the word has never been lost since the days of Solomon, and hence it was not found either since Solomon's time.

Now, the Templar degree was probably changed and altered as many times as the R.A. degree was. We have seen that the French Masons have somehow Masonized the Crusaders, but in a Protestant country like England the whole scheme of the Crusades was regarded as part and parcel of Catholic superstition. In short, the English Protestant had no sympathy for the Knights Templars. Hence it was deemed necessary by the degree tinker to turn De Molay and the Templars into Masons, and that means the Protestant flame of hatred was fanned against a Pope and a Catholic King, and great sympathy was engendered for our murdered ancient Masonic Knights Templars. Admitting, therefore, that the Protestant Templar ritual was not brought from France, yet there can be no doubt that some kinds of French Templar rituals were brought from France, which were swamped in England, and again in America.

And now for one more paragraph from Bro. Pike's pamphlet.

"Fortunately (says Bro. P.) it is no longer considered necessary to resort to fiction, impudent and ridiculous, to support the claim to the legitimacy of any degree or Rite of Freemasonry. Nothing in religion, or history, or mythology has ever equalled the riotous exuberance of fiction in which the earlier Masonic writers in England revelled in regard to Blue Symbolic Masonry, and multitudes religiously believe those impudent fictions yet. These sufficed at the time when they were invented, but they are unnecessary and exploded now."

Into what a jumble of inconsistency has Freemasonry been plunged? Thus, on one side we are told that "Truth is a divine attribute, and the foundation of every Masonic virtue. To be good and true is the first lesson we are taught at our initiation, &c."

While, on the other hand, the most prominent and most widely known American Masonic luminary frankly admits that we have all along been humbugged; he points out no remedy for ridding Masonry of what he calls "impudent fictions," but, on the contrary, he not only approves of retaining those fictions, but makes the existing fictions an excuse for justifying the invention of more and more rites and degrees, which are of course to be based on new humbugging fictions. In short, after viewing Bro. Pike's notions from every side, I must come to the conclusion that expediency is the highest point of Bro. Pike's Masonic morality.

BOSTON, U.S., January 1886.

WHERE THE SECRET IS.

IF Masonry were nothing more than seems to be supposed by many Masonic writers and orators, innovations might well be considered of little consequence. It could not matter to the Fraternity whether or not a particular part of a certain ceremony were performed in precisely the manner to which our grandfathers were accustomed, provided something should be done which would appear well in the eyes of the initiate and comport with the dignity of an ancient and honourable association. It is true there is a lurking belief in the minds of even the most inattentive and negligent members of the Lodge, that there is something secret or mystic involved in some particular parts of the work, which would be of importance if any one could ascertain what it is, and the portion in which it is fossilized being a part of the secret, all agree that the work should be kept intact as far as possible, in order to preserve whatever possibility there may be of its recovery. This belief passes by tradition, and is insisted on continally as being a necessary article of faith, but no one seems to suppose that there is the least chance or hope of ever discovering what those secret, or rather lost, knowledges are, which have been so effectually hidden in the work.

While the Craft go on thus from year to year, without any attempt to find out what, if anything, is concealed in the Lodge, and without using any of the means at hand for that purpose, the knowledge of what is in the Lodge itself decreases, while all other knowledge increases, and consequently indifference and neglect more and more prevail. While this has been going on during the last thirty-five years, more than six hundred thousand men in the United States, belonging to every station in life, have been admitted to all the rites and benefits of Masonry as now practised, and to the knowledge of the "mysteries" of the Lodge, so far as they may have been able to find out what they are in the best way they could.

Having exhausted the little fund of information still existing in the Lodge which serves somewhat to sharpen their curiosity, those who have some inclination to investigate the supposed science and philosophy of the Institution of which they have heard a great deal, look about for other sources of information. Of these, or what are supposed to be such, they find two. One is the abundant supply of Masonic writings of all sorts, and the other is the so-called "high degrees." If they inquire of any one of those Masons whom they have seen occupying a conspicuous position among the Orders which are "away up" in Masonry, and who wears strange and highly enigmatical jewelry attached to his watch chain, they are assured at once that the only source of knowledge is to be found in the superior "Capitular," "Cryptic," "Templar" or "Ineffable" grades, as the case may be, to which the jewel and "gold mounted" philosopher has attained. They further learn that they cannot extract much, if anything, from "the first three degrees," or if more properly spoken, "the first three degree," or, as more likely they will be termed, "the inferior degrees," or, as they have been recently designated in the allocution of an "Eminent Grand Commander," the "subordinate and appendant degrees."

The inquirer, never noticing that such informants have themselves nothing whatever in the shape of Masonic knowledge to communicate, which concerns "the inferior degrees," beyond what he has been able to pick up from the other members who are Master Masons—never stopping to inquire why it is, if they are in possession of such superior illumination, that they cannot explain to him either the steps "Dieu gardes," signs, positions, ambulations, words, floors, geometric figures, or the meanings of the implements actually used, or the characters or names of those who use them in the most important and solemn parts of the work, concludes that he ought to have some more degrees. He inquires the terms on which they may be obtained, and particularly how long he must wait before he can be "put through," and, to see what can be found in the meantime in books, he takes up one of the Masonic cyclopœdias. He finds it filled with illustrations. He receives his first impressions from the larger and full page engravings, which of course must be considered of more Masonic importance than the small figures, scattered here and there in the body of the text. Perhaps the first which arrests his attention is the half page illustration in Mackey's Cyclopœdia, showing "the Arms of Freemasonry," and the figure containing the cherubim, ark, lion, ox, man and eagle, &c., and from the text he learns that this last is the Arms of the Grand Lodge of England. He inquires if any representations of this exists about the Lodge, and finds that such a thing was never heard of in "the blue Lodge," as it is now called, but finally discovers that it is only to be found in the Chapter, where it is a prominent representation. This shows him that the Chapter is a far more exalted body than the Lodge. He goes on, and before he gets through the book he finds eight full page illustrations of degree chambers, and fifty-three smaller engravings appertaining to Scottish Rite and Templar degrees, two full page and seventeen lesser engravings of Chapter matters, four of the Eastern Star, one full page illustration (ancient treatle board) and three small figures for the benefit of the Lodge of "Ancient Craft Masonry." As to the reading matter, it appears largely devoted to the magnifying of the so-called "high degrees."

The effect of all this is twofold; first, to direct his attention to the Orders which have grown up among the Craft, as being the only accessible sources of knowledge in Masonic mysteries and lore, and secondly, and still more unfortunately for Masonry, to divert his attention from the Lodge, and from any attempt to explore what it contains; and thus thousands of scholarly men who could and would have long ago brought many things to light in the Lodge, for the benefit of the Craft, after trying the Chapter, and perhaps some other organization, and finding nothing there which they had expected, nor any reason why there should be, have dropped the whole subject of Masonic research, and have taken little or no interest in the Lodge or any of the Orders outside of it.

The effect of all this is to sap and undermine the Lodge, and lower the esteem in which Masonry is held throughout the Fraternity. And the evil is one which tends at all times to propagate and increase itself. In proportion as "high degrees" are multiplied and find votaries, the newly entered in the Lodge have their attention diverted from what is to be found therein by proper observation and examination, and in like proportion loss of truly Masonic modes, and habits of thought prevail, and innovations and confusion are brought in.

At this time more than a hundred degrees, constituting over half a dozen rites, are claiming attention, each organization assuming that it has something valuable to impart; some from one source and some from another; while most of the time many of them are occupied with internal uproar over the authenticity of pretended documents purporting to have been issued by some self-assumed authority, as though it could make any difference in the value of their establishment, whether the original pronunciamentos were forged or not. Preposterous legends and astounding titles, with all the other "modern improvements" necessary to a high degree outfit, can be fabricated now with as little expense as at any former time, and made genuine, if that is any object, without difficulty. While all this is going on, some of the Grand Lodges are organizing Schools of Instruction, not schools to ascertain or teach what Masonry is and what it contains, but to teach the ritual. This is all well; the ritual is about all that is left to teach; and that is in a mutilated condition for want of knowing what the ritual is about. By all means let the ritual be taught until every Lodge shall have somebody in its ranks who can confer a Masonic degree with decency and dignity. But the way to preserve the ritual is to teach the Craft what it means. As soon as a Lodge can be made to understand what the work contains, they will be able to remember and recollect the form of it, and more than this, to correct former blunders, which now they cannot do, for they have no criterion to which they can resort.

It is because of the condition of things in the Lodges that Masonic writers appear to have so little idea of the character of Masonry. All the causes now at work to lower the character of the Craft Lodge, and inflate the "high degree" balloon, have not been without effect. The withdrawal of attention from the exploration of Masonry, where it can be found in the body of the only Lodge designed and constructed to contain it, and which alone can contain it, has left the most of our writers where the other members are, with no idea of Masonry other than a collection of ceremonies which excel those of other societies which claim what they call degrees. They do not understand that Masonry teaches anything of its own, nor that everything in the Lodge, and its work from beginning to end, is an indispensable part of the system. If they knew this some of them would go to work in the investigation of it. The belief mentioned above that there is something hidden in the complex of the work, though extremely vague and unsatisfactory, would prompt some research, if it were not for two hindrances. The first is a conviction that whatever it may have been once, the secret lore of the Craft has become hopelessly lost, for it is the common idea that it was committed to memory and tradition, and as it has passed from memory it is beyond recovery, except by something like a miracle. The second cause is, that they do not know that Masonry has for its object the demonstration and illustration of the divine order in the universe, in its three degrees, and that this was not left to memory or tradition, but to geometry and its kindred sciences, and the known physical structure and mental and moral constitution of man, and the physical structure of the universe, and other known truths and facts, by means of all which the entire system is so inwrought in the work, from beginning to end, that such parts as may be lost may be restored, as long as the knowledge of geometry and the other sciences involved, together with some considerable portion of the work, may remain.

It is for want of being informed on this subject that Masonry is so commonly regarded as a mere system of teaching by aid of symbols and oral instruction, and that whatever sublime truths were incorporated in it originally, the mode of setting them forth depended on memory and tradition, as well as on that which remains. This is, doubtless, the principal reason why so many are carried away by the notion of high degrees, and why great results from that source are expected: they supposing that if any hidden lore is ever to be revealed, it must be found in some memory of ancient knowledge preserved in some of those degrees by oral tradition or legend; they not being in a condition to reflect that if nothing can be found and verified in the Lodge itself "founded in geometry" it will be idle to seek for it in councils and divers other bodies which have nothing to do with order or geometry, but muster all the miscellaneous ceremonies they can to compose a rite, any two or ten degrees of which might change places with each other and all be as well arranged for most purposes as ever before. This is why we hear so much about the mythology and mysteries of the ancients, and about symbols and symbolism, as though these things taken by themselves amount to anything, or are more than every and all ritualistic societies are continually uttering. In this respect the "high degrees," and all other secret societies, are all on a level, and they can surpass the Craft Lodge, for they have more room for that sort of furniture or baggage as it might be called, which only serves to hide emptiness. If men really believe that there is anything not generally understood, which can be found in the Lodge, why do not they drop the ancient mysteries and symbolism hobbies and do more in stirring up the cobwebs in the Lodge? The Lodge is the only mystery which has come down to us; why not cultivate that a little, and give those which have so long ago "gone hence" a little rest in their supulchres?—Voice of Masonry.

ST. MICHAEL'S LODGE, No. 211.

THIS old and flourishing Lodge, which in spite of the many vicissitudes through which it passed in years gone by, is now in a more prosperous condition than ever since its foundation, held its installation meeting at the Albion, Aldersgate Street, on Tuesday last, when there was a large attendance of members and visitors, under the presidency of Bro. Alfred Withers P.M. D.C. He was supported by Bros. H. Martin S.W. and Worshipful Master elect, E. Thring J.W., Charles Greenwood P.M. P.G.S.B. Treasurer, W. Radcliffe P.M. Secretary, Past Masters W. W. Morgan, F. J Hentsch, Usher Back, James Linsdell, T. H. Lavers, John Waters, &c. Amongst the Visitors were Bros. W. H. Dean P.P.G. Deacon Dorset, A. Hart, J. Corkhill 701, Hardy 201, Glenny 530, Jennings 1580, Stevens P.M. 1627, Lockett 1436, Brock I.P.M. 145, Cross 586, Probert, Cant P.M. 1816, Everett 1507, F. Everett 1602, Collings Organist 1693, and others. Lodge was opened at four o'clock by Bro. Alfred Withers P.M., officiating in the room of the retiring Worshipful Master, Bro. T. H. Peirce, who had been summoned to Germany on important business, and the usual preliminaries having been observed, the ballot was taken for Mr. Charles James Dawson, proposed by Bro. H. Martin, and seconded by Bro. Percy J. Barr, and for Captain George Caleb Challen, whose sponsors were the same. Bro. H. Martin was then presented for the benefit of installation, and having assented to the responsibilities of office, a band of Installed Masters was constituted, and he was duly installed into the chair of K.S., the ceremony being ably carried out by Bro. Withers, who executed his work to the admiration and satisfaction of all present. On the re-admission of the brethren the newly-installed Master was saluted with full honours, and he invested his Officers for the year, as follows:—Bros. Peirce (named as) Immediate Past Master, Thring S.W., Dickson J.W., Greenwood P.M. Treasurer, Radcliffe P.M. Secretary, Bennett S.D., Aires J.D., Linfield I.G., Green P.M. Steward, Withers P.M. D.C., Banks Tyler. The address to the Master was delivered by the Installing Master with his accustomed ability, while those to the Wardens and Brethren were given by Brother Radcliffe P.M. The report of the Audit Committee was presented, showing that the Worshipful Master commences his year under the most favourable auspices, so far as the financial condition of the Lodge is concerned, there being a balance in hand of over £63. The report was unanimously received and adopted, and sums of ten guineas each were voted to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution and to the Royal Masonic Girls' School. Mr. Dawson and Capt. Challen were duly initiated into the mysteries and privileges of the Order, the working of the new Master being such as to produce a most favourable impression as to his capabilities for the office to which he had been elected. The usual Past Master's jewel had been voted to the retiring Worshipful Master, but in consequence of his unavoidable absence the presentation was postponed until the next meeting of the Lodge. At the conclusion of business the brethren and visitors partook of a sumptuous banquet, which as is usual at this first class establishment was admirably served. At dessert, the customary Loyal and Craft toasts were proposed from the chair and enthusiastically received. The W.M. in proposing the Queen and the Craft, and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, spoke of the interest they manifested in the affairs of the Order; and next gave the Pro Grand Master the Earl of Carnarvon, the Deputy Grand Master the Earl of Lathom, and the rest of the Grand Officers present and past. The Grand Officers were not merely ornamental but working Masons, and they had an admirable specimen of them present that evening in the person of their excellent Treasurer Bro. Charles Greenwood P.P.G.S.W. Surrey. By the manner in which they received the toast let them show how highly they appreciated his services, not only as a Grand Officer, but also in his more intimate connection with the St. Michael's Lodge. The toast was received with every demonstration of welcome, and Brother Greenwood in the course of a brief reply, alluded to the deep and abiding interest which the Officers of Grand Lodge took in all matters appertaining to the Craft. It was a very proud moment to him when he was appointed a Grand Officer, and he thanked the brethren most sincerely for the manner in which they had expressed their appreciation of the honour that had been conferred upon him. Brother William W. Morgan Past Master, in the unavoidable absence of the Immediate Past Master, Brother Peirce, proposed the healt of their esteemed Worshipful Master, and in doing so observed that Bro. Martin was an enthusiastic member of his Lodge, and from the day he entered it he had gathered around him a circle of appreciative friends. All who knew the efforts he had put forth to advance the interests of the Lodge felt proud of the position that Bro. Martin had been called upon to occupy, and would wish for him a most happy and prosperous year of office. The toast was received with special enthusiasm, and in response Bro. Martin thanked the brethren most heartily for the way in which the mention of his name had been welcomed by all present. Since he had been a member of this Lodge he had found in it many men whom he was proud to number as his best friends, and it would be his constant endeavour during his year of office to deserve their confidence and esteem. He hoped that the interests of the Lodge would not suffer at his hands, and again he thanked them most sincerely for the great honour which had been conferred upon him, and promised that he should do all in his power to sustain the position which the St. Michael's Lodge had so long enjoyed. He then proposed in felicitous terms the health of the Initiates. He could scarcely tell them the pleasure it afforded him to propose two of his personal friends as members of this Lodge. He had known them intimately for many years, and considered them eminently fit and proper persons to become members of the Masonic Fraternity. He had every confidence that they would become worthy members of the St. Michael's Lodge. Bro. Dawson thanked the brethren sincerely for having admitted him as a member of their honourable institution. It was a proud moment in his life to see the light of Freemasonry, and he should do his utmost to prove himself, as the Worshipful Master had hoped, a worthy and useful member of the Lodge. Bro. Capt. Challen also suitably responded, and said his initiatory night in Freemasonry would never be effaced from his memory. He was deeply impressed by the ceremony he had witnessed that day, and esteemed it a great privilege to have been admitted into the mysteries of the Craft. The Worshipful Master, in proposing the toast of the Visitors, expressed the pleasure it afforded him to see so goodly an array on the present occasion, and he assured each and all of them of a most hearty and cordial welcome. He trusted this might not be the last occasion on which they should meet, and if only the Visitors were as pleased as the members of the Lodge were satisfied to see them, he (the speaker) should be most gratified. Bro. W. H. Dean P.P.G.D. Dorset thanked the Worshipful Master most sincerely for the manner in which he had proposed the health of the Visitors. It had been an extreme pleasure to him to have attended this Lodge, for he had heard a great deal of the St. Michael's, and he had been perfectly charmed with the work that he had witnessed that day. He considered the various ceremonies had been performed in a highly creditable manner, and having had the pleasure of visiting many Lodges he considered the St Michael's working to be, in his humble judgment, perfect. With regard to the installation ceremony, it was everything that could be desired, and he thanked them for the very great pleasure which their invitation had afforded him, and for the hearty reception which had been accorded to the Visitors generally. Bros. Brock, Stevens, S. Glenny, Hart, Jennings, and F. Everett also responded, each paying a deserved tribute to the St. Michael's Lodge for the excellence of its working and the abundant hospitality it extended to the Visitors. The W.M. in proposing the Past Masters, congratulated the Lodge upon the noble array they had of veterans who came regularly amongst them and took an active interest in the Lodge. He referred with gratitude to the assistance he had received from Past Masters Greenwood, Back, Withers, Morgan, and Radcliffe; all were most able and zealous Past Masters, and he hoped they might long be spared to see the Lodge prosper in the future as it had done in the past. Brother A. Green returned thanks for the cordial manner in which the toast had been proposed, and said in this old Lodge the members one and all endeavoured cheerfully to perform their duty and to advance the prosperity of the Lodge. It was a great pleasure to him to see one of his children occupying the chair, and he looked upon Brother Martin as one of their greatest lights in the Lodge. The W.M. in proposing the Masonic Charities spoke of the pride and interest which had always been manifested in the Masonic Institutions by the members of the St. Michael's Lodge. They did not go through the world without meeting with people who sneered at Freemasonry, but Masons were always able to point with pride to their Charities, which exercised so vast and beneficent an influence over those for whose benefit they were designed. There was nothing in the world to be compared with them. He regretted the absence of Bro. Terry, the esteemed Secretary of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, but he had been summoned elsewhere, in connection with important duties in his Mother Lodge, otherwise he would have been present to-night to plead the claims of the Charity with which he was most intimately connected. He reminded the brethren that he had decided to go up as a Steward at the next Festival for the Old People, and he trusted the brethren would enable him to take up a list which should be a credit to the St. Michael's Lodge. He associated with the toast the name of Bro. W. W. Morgan who, in the absence of Bro. Terry, said he felt it an honour to speak on behalf of the Masonic Charities. In the words of the song they had just heard so beautifully rendered—"There's no place like home;" but amongst the members of the Craft there were some who scarcely recognised what home was, in their decline of life. Here Masonry slipped in and provided home and comforts for many who in the evening of life had been overtaken by adversity. At the present moment they had on the funds of the Benevolent Institution—for which their Worshipful Master had accepted a Stewardship—over 200 widows, who each received £32 a year, and over 190 old Masons who in their day had done good suit and service to the Craft, and who were now each in receipt of an annuity of £40 per annum. But, however prosperous the members of the Lodge might now appear to be, there was a dark side to every picture, and none of them knew how soon they too might be overtaken with similar misfortune. They were now all smiling and happy together, and giving liberally of their means towards the Charities, and he earnestly appealed to them to make every effort to continue that support which the St. Michael's Lodge had consistently accorded hitherto to the Institutions. Bro. Greenwood, their esteemed Treasurer, was going up as a Steward for the Girls' School, at the Festival over which Bro. General Studholme Brownrigg, P.G.M. for Surrey, had kindly consented to preside. Now, Bro. Brownrigg was well known to the members of this Lodge; had visited them on a previous occasion; moreover, he was a Mason beloved by every brother in his Province. All would doubtless support Bro. Greenwood, who was a Past Provincial G.S. Warden of Surrey, and had served as Provincial Grand Secretary there for many years. Such was the esteem in which he was held, that he (the speaker) felt the brethren would support his list to the best of their ability. Bro. Morgan then reminded the brethren they had one old member of their Lodge on the Funds of the Benevolent Institution, who in his day had subscribed as liberally as any of those now present were doing to the funds of the Institutions, and even now an appeal was being made on behalf of another brother for the benefits of the same Charity. These were the dark sides to the picture to which he had alluded, and he pointed to the possibility of each or any of them some day coming under the bitter sting of adversity. The Girls' Institution at the present time maintained, clothed, and educated 237 pupils, whilst 240 boys were similarly cared for at Wood Green. Brother Martin the Worshipful Master had already told them he should represent the Lodge as Steward for the Benevolent Institution, and he (the speaker) had just received an intimation that Brother C. Greenwood jun. was to act as Steward for the Boys' School. It was very gratifying to be able to have these three active brethren to represent the St. Michael's Lodge at the forthcoming Festivals, and he had no doubt whatever that each would be well supported. In conclusion Bro. Morgan delivered an earnest appeal on behalf of the Institutions generally. The Worshipful Master next proposed the toast of the Treasurer and Secretary, in doing which he said they could not place too high a value upon the services of Bro. Chas. Greenwood as Treasurer of the Lodge for many years. Had not always found the position of the Lodge so prosperous as it was at the present time. There had been times when there were no funds in the Lodge, whereas now there was happily a balance in hand. With regard to their Secretary, who was also an initiate in this Lodge, he ably discharges his duties, in whatever capacity he is called upon to act, and his services were fully recognised by every member of the Lodge. Bro. Greenwood, after thanking the brethren for the manner in which the toast had been received, said he felt proud of the position he filled as Treasurer of the St. Michael's Lodge. During the many years he had filled that office he had seen the Lodge in prosperity and adversity, but he had never seen it more flourishing than he was happy to report it was at the present time. At one period he might have been justified in asking the brethren for security for any advance that he was compelled to make on behalf of the Lodge. Now things were changed, and the members might be justified in asking him for security as their custodian. He trusted he might be spared many years to come amongst them, and he should only be too pleased to act as their Treasurer so long as confidence was reposed in him as at present. Bro. W. Radcliffe P.M. Secretary also responded in suitable terms, and compliments having been passed to the Officers, and acknowledged, the official list was closed by the Tyler. The proceedings of the evening were diversified by a choice selection of vocal and instrumental music, under the direction of Bro. J. A. Collings, assisted by Madame Ernst, Madame Pauline Featherby-Capel, Bros. John Probert and Henry Cross, a judiciously selected programme contributing materially to the enjoyment of the numerous company of guests.

LODGE OF FRIENDSHIP, No. 923.

AT the monthly communication of this Lodge on Monday, the 1st inst., at Petersfield, the following Officers were installed:—Bros. W. Smoker W.M., E. Navler I.P.M., R. Pocock S.W., C. Wells J.W., W. B. Edgeler P.M. P.P.G. Supt. Wks. Treas., T. Caparn Sec., G. Pearson S.D., F. Duddy J.D., M. P. Creedon P.M. D. of C., H. H. Atkinson-Grimshaw Asst. D. of C., J. J. Bettle Organist, H. V. Hann I.G., R. H. Jacks and T. J. Cremack Stewards, C. Knight Tyler. The members afterwards adjourned to a banquet at the large room of the Red Lion Hotel, where an excellent spread was provided by Host Pay. There were several visiting brethren present, including Bros. Edgar Goble P.G.S., J. Palmer S.W. W.M. elect 2068, F. Sanders W.M. 342, and others. The usual Masonic and other toasts were given and heartily responded to, and a very enjoyable evening was concluded at seven o'clock.

STRANGEWAYS LODGE, No. 1219.

THE installation meeting of this Lodge was held on Wednesday, the 27th ult., at the Masonic Rooms, King-street, Manchester, when the company numbered about fifty members and visitors, under the presidency of Bro. W. Appleby, the retiring Worshipful Master. Lodge having been opened in form, Bro. Willis was presented as W.M. elect, and he was subsequently installed in the chair by Bro. W. T. Schofield P.M. He invested his Officers for the year, as follows:—Bros. W. Appleby I.P.M., Henry R. Slatter S.W., W. B. Russell J.W., W. T. Schofield P.M. Treasurer, W. H. Dawson P.M. Assistant P.G.D.C. Secretary, W. Williams S.D., Robert Hughes J.D., Charles J. Schofield P.M. D.C., R. D. Callison I.G., J. W. Callison, Donald A. Murray, and John L. Savage Stewards; P. H. Nicholls Tyler. Two candidates for initiation were proposed, and after the transaction of some routine business the brethren partook of a sumptuous banquet, under the presidency of the newly-installed Worshipful Master. The Loyal and Craft toasts were duly honoured, after which the W.M. gave the R.W. Provincial Grand Master of East Lancashire, Colonel Le Gendre Starkie, and the Deputy Prov. Grand Master Bro. G. Mellor, and the rest of the Provincial Grand Officers, Present and Past. Bros. Dawson P.M. and Andrews P.M. each acknowledged the toast, in suitable terms. Bro. Andrews then gave the newly-installed Worshipful Master of the Strangeways Lodge, the toast being enthusiastically received, and responded to by Bro. Willis, whose admirable working and the interest he has evinced in the welfare of the Lodge have been abundantly recognised by all the brethren. Brother Dawson next proposed the Immediate Past Master of the Lodge, and after making reference to the admirable way in which he had discharged the duties of the chair during his year of office, presented him, on behalf of the brethren, with a handsome Past Master's jewel, suitably inscribed, as a mark of esteem, and in recognition of the valuable services he had rendered. The toast and jewel was acknowledged by Bro. Appleby, after which the W.M. welcomed the Visiting Brethren, and Bro. Schofield proposed the Masonic Charities, for which toast Bro. Andrews replied. The health of the Officers having been given and duly responded to, the toast of the Installing Master was honoured, and acknowledged by Bro. Schofield, the list being concluded by the Tyler. During the evening the proceedings were enlivened by some excellent singing and recitations, amongst those who contributed being Bros. Owles, Jupp, North, Greenwood, Howell, Hinde, and others. A most agreeable evening was passed.

OLD ENGLAND LODGE, No. 1790.

THE regular meeting of this Lodge was held on Thursday, 4th inst. at the Masonic Hall, Thornton Heath, when there were present Bros. H. Baber W.M., W. H. Ransom S.W., C. Tarry J.W., W. Foulsham P.M. Treasurer, Hugh M. Hobbs Secretary, F. T. Ridpath S.D., J. Kilvington J.D., W. Horton D.C., W. Best Steward, Wm. Lane Tyler, F. C. Pascall P.M.; Bros. C. Daniel P.M. 69, Fleming, Hornail, Chamberlain, S. Clark, Mason, Wilson, Dr. Klein, Potter, Greenfield, Blogg, Griffin, Shakespeare, Phelps, J. Clarke. Visitors—Bros. J. D. Langton W.M. 2096, Byron H. Ridge P.M. 1463 P.P.G.A.D.C. Surrey, Maitland, H. Dicker W.M. 1470, W. Pile P.M. 1892, W. G. Oates 2096, F. Webster 47. After the business of the Lodge had been completed, which consisted of initiating Mr. Phillips into Freemasonry and passing Bro. Wilson, the Lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. During the evening the interesting ceremony took place of presenting to the Lodge the portrait of Bro. Wm. Foulsham P.M. Treas. P.P.J.W. Northumberland 30°. On unveiling the portrait the W.M., in complimentary terms, referred to the great service rendered to the Lodge by Brother Foulsham, and then called on the Secretary to read the following address:—

Worshipful Sir,—We, the undersigned members of the Old England Lodge, No. 1790, of Free and Accepted Masons, have long desired that a lasting memento of yourself should be possessed by the Lodge and handed down to posterity. You having been the principal Founder of the Lodge and its first W.M., we are confident that your name will ever be mentioned in the Lodge with the same regard and affection it has always received from those who esteem you for your talents as a Mason and your qualities as a man, but we are anxious that when time with us shall be no more, the brethren may still have a lasting reminder of the distinguished brother who did so much, with unfailing zeal, for the Old England Lodge, and to whom it owes its very existence. With this object in view we have had a portrait of yourself painted, which we now beg to present to the Lodge. And we pray the Great Architect of the Universe that you may long be spared, in health and strength, to witness the continued prosperity of the Lodge in which you have always taken so great an interest, and to give the brethren your valuable advice and assistance. Bro. Foulsham returned thanks in suitable terms, and assured the brethren that he should always do everything in his power to promote the prosperity of this the fifth Lodge that he had been the means of founding during his long Masonic career. The Visitors expressed the pleasure it had been to them to be present on this interesting occasion, and the meeting concluded with the Tyler's toast. Some excellent songs were rendered by Bros. M. H. Dicker W.M. and Bros. Shakespeare, Kilvington, Ridpath and Griffin.

SAMSON LODGE, No. 1668.

THIS young and flourishing Lodge held an emergency meeting at the Café Royal, Air Street, Regent Street, W., for the purpose of passing, raising, and initiating candidates. The chair was taken at 5:30 punctually by the W.M. Bro. H. W. Gasperd, assisted by Bros. R. A. Kingsbury S.W., F. B. Fuld J.W., D. Loewenstark P.M. Treasurer, Baron D. Barnett P.M. Secretary, J. T. Miller S.D., J. Lancaster J.D., J. Levy I.G., H. Moss Steward, I. Quinsey I.P.M., H. Aarons P.M., C. Ochse P.M.; Bros. A. H. Marks, Joseph Von Praagh, Charles Benjamin, Isaac Kool, F. G. Brown, and several other members. Visitors—Bros. G Sauth, Kilwinning 19, F. Schofield 1178, J. Wynman 188. The ordinary business having been gone through, Bro. Von Praagh was raised to the sublime degree of M.M. Bros. Kool, Benjamin, and Marks were passed, and Mr. Alfred Foster Gasperd (brother of the W.M.), Mr. Phillip Albert Hahn, and Mr. John Nash were duly initiated into the mysteries of the Craft. All the ceremonies were conducted by the W.M. in a most creditable, praiseworthy, and impressive manner. It was proposed and seconded that a letter of condolence be sent to the widow of Bro. P.M. Lovey; this was unanimously agreed to. In token of respect to the memory of this brother the brethren appeared in Masonic mourning. Several candidates were proposed and seconded; they will be balloted for at the next meeting. Other business being disposed of, the Lodge was closed with the hearty good wishes of the visitors. The brethren then proceeded to partake of a sumptuous banquet. After full honours had been given to the toasts of the Queen and the Craft and the Royal Family, the W.M. proposed the health of the Initiates; by the strict attention they had paid to the ceremonies that evening there was no doubt they would prove themselves worthy Masons. The W.M. also remarked that as a young Master he appreciated the priviledge of initiating his own brother. He trusted he might prove himself worthy of the confidence reposed in him. In reply, the first initiate—Bro. A. F. Gasperd—sincerely thanked the brethren for the kindness of their reception. He congratulated himself on being initiated by his own brother. He would do his best to gain that friendship and brotherly love that his brother had already secured. Bros. Hahn and Nash also made suitable replies. Bro. Loewenstark, as the first W.M. of this Lodge, was pleased to propose the health of the W.M.; might his future career be as successful as on that evening. The W.M. in responding said that it required some amount of moral courage to essay the responsibilities of the chair; but thanks to his Wardens and Deacons the work had gone smoothly along. He hoped that each of them would occupy the chair, and that there would be plenty of work to do for him as well as for them. The Worshipful Master next proposed the health of the Past Masters, and as the time was short he would associate the Officers with the toast. Bro. Aarons P.M. responded in his usual eloquent manner; he was followed by Bro. Loewenstark P.M. Bro. Kingsbury S.W. then spoke in most admirable terms of the departed brother whose loss the Lodge was now mourning. The health of the Visitors was the next toast, and after several had replied the Worshipful Master proposed prosperity to the Press, coupled with the name of Bro. Wynman, as representative of the Freemason's Chronicle, who acknowledged the compliment. Bros. Benjamin Moss and others favoured the company with songs during the evening. The Tyler's toast brought the proceedings to a close.

BRIXTON LODGE, No. 1949.

THE installation meeting of this young, but sound and flourishing Lodge, was held on Saturday evening last, at Brixton Hall, Acre-lane, Brixton, when there was a goodly muster of brethren and Visitors, under the presidency of Bro. Henry Baldwin, Past Provincial Grand Standard Bearer Middlesex, the retiring Worshipful Master. He was supported on the occasion by Bros. W. E. Farrington I.P.M., C. G. S. Kipling S.W., R. Poore J.W. and W.M. elect, W. Kirkland P.M. Treasurer, Henry Lovegrove P.M. Secretary, C. Axford S.D., E. Newby J.D., A. Albert I.G., R. Evans D.C., A. Jones Steward, T. Poore P.M. 1720, J. D. Sprague, C. J. Dore, W. R. Palmer, R. Potter Tyler, and others. Amongst the Visitors were Bros. J. Stevens P.M. 1426, Craink 1669, Phillips 1986, Powles 1907, Watts, Moses 1201, Lucas 1521, Butler 243, Mills, Guest, Wallis, Smith 857, Lee, Tarr, Mayer 1693, Vernon 1101, &c. Lodge having been opened in accordance with ancient rites, the minutes of the election meeting were read and confirmed, and the ballot was then opened for Mr. J. Bott, who had been proposed by Bro. Poore, and seconded by the Worshipful Master, and for Bro. Isaac White, whose sponsors were Bro. Kirkland and the W.M. elect. In each instance the voting was unanimously in favour, and the two candidates were duly initiated into the mysteries and privileges of Freemasonry by the Worshipful Master, whose working was eminently satisfactory. The report of the Audit Committee, which showed the Lodge to be in a sound financial condition, was then submitted and approved, and Lodge having been advanced to the second degree, Bro. R. Poore was presented for the benefit of installation. A Board of Installed Masters having been constituted, the impressive ceremony was duly performed by the retiring Master, in a manner that afforded a considerable amount of gratification to all present. On the re-admission of the brethren the newly-installed Worshipful Master was proclaimed and saluted with the customary honours, after which he invested his Officers for the year, as follows:—Bros. Henry Baldwin I.P.M., Day S.W., Axford J.W., Kirkland P.M. Treasurer, Lovegrove P.M. Secretary, Newby S.D., Albert J.D., Read P.M. Organist, Evans I.G., Jones D.C., Dore Almoner, Sprague and Palmer Stewards, Potter P.M. Tyler. The addresses to the Master, Wardens, and Brethren were delivered with elocutionary effect by Bro. T. Poore P.M., father of the Worshipful Master, and subsequently a handsome Past Master's jewel was presented to Bro. H. Baldwin, in recognition of the able and zealous manner in which he had filled the chair during the past year, and of the valuable services he had rendered to the Lodge. On the reverse side of the jewel was the inscription:

Presented to Bro. Henry Baldwin P.M., P. Prov. G. Standard Bearer Middlesex, as a mark of esteem for his efficiency as Worshipful Master and installing his successor in the chair of K.S., February 6th, 1886. Brixton Lodge, No. 1949.

The compliment was duly acknowledged by the Immediate Past Master, who thanked the brethren for the gift, and the kindly motives by which it had been prompted, and assured them of his continued efforts to sustain and increase the welfare of the Brixton Lodge. After the transaction of some other business, Lodge was closed amidst hearty good wishes, and the brethren adjourned for the banquet, which was served in sumptuous style by Mr. Inglis, of Bell-yard, Temple Bar, whose arrangements for the comfort and enjoyment of the company elicited expressions of unqualified satisfaction. The Worshipful Master, in proposing the Queen and the Craft, expressed his intention of being brief with the remarks he might feel called upon to make in connection with the toasts, in consequence of the work having been somewhat protracted. He was sure, however, that the toast which always came first upon their list on occasions like the present would be received with loyal enthusiasm. He next proposed H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, K.G., Most Worshipful Grand Master, in doing which he said they had much to be proud of as a body of men in having such a ruler to preside over the Craft. His Royal Highness was a good man and Mason, and took a most active interest in all that appertained to Freemasonry. The toast was cordially received, and was followed by that of the R.W. the Pro Grand Master the Earl of Carnarvon, the D.G.M. the Earl of Lathom, and the rest of the Grand Officers Present and Past. The Immediate Past Master then assumed the gavel, and in felicitous terms proposed the health of the newly-installed Worshipful Master, in doing which he said that was the toast par excellence of the evening. They could imagine what pleasure it afforded him to see Bro. Poore in the honourable position he now occupied, seeing that he was the first initiate of the Brixton Lodge, and which he entered as a Lewis by special privilege granted to him by Grand Lodge. He felt that Bro. Poore did great credit to his father in Freemasonry, and that during his year of office he would do credit to the Lodge and give every satisfaction to the brethren generally. From what they had seen of his working, they could look forward with confidence that the affairs of the Brixton Lodge would be ably and zealously administered by their newly-installed Worshipful Master, however much might be thrust upon him. He congratulated the brethren upon the wisdom of their choice, and expressed his belief that he would do the work to the credit of himself and satisfaction of the Lodge. The toast was received with the utmost cordiality, and the Worshipful Master thanked the brethren sincerely for their very great kindness in electing him to the chair of the Brixton Lodge. He should endeavour to deserve the kindly wishes which had been expressed towards him, and he assured the brethren that nothing should be wanting on his part to discharge his duties with fervency and zeal, and to uphold the excellent character for working that had already been gained by the Lodge. He trusted that success might attend his year of office, and that the harmony and good feeling which now subsisted amongst the whole of the brethren might long continue to prevail. He then proposed the Initiates, and in doing so observed that it was with much pleasure he witnessed the introduction of two such worthy brethren as Bros. Bott and White. Whilst they were pleased to see an infusion of fresh blood into the Lodge, it was an additional satisfaction to find men of such excellence coming amongst them. The initiates responded briefly, both returning thanks for their admission into the ancient and honourable Institution, and expressing their hope that they should become worthy members of the Craft. The Worshipful Master next gave the Installing Master and Immediate Past Master, Bro. Baldwin, to whom he said the utmost credit was due for the manner in which he had discharged his onerous and difficult duties that day. He did not think the installation ceremony could be better or more efficiently carried out than it had been by Bro. Baldwin on that occasion—a remark that was cordially endorsed by the brethren present. He had fulfilled the duties of the chair during his year of office with credit to himself and satisfaction to the Lodge, and he (the speaker) should try and emulate the excellent example which had been set before him by his predecessor. The Immediate Past Master thanked the brethren sincerely for the very hearty manner in which they had received the toast of his health, and assured them he was deeply sensible of the kind terms in which it had been proposed by their excellent Worshipful Master. It had afforded him much pleasure to see Bro. Poore work up to the chair, and it was doubly pleasing to him to instal him into that position that day. Many brethren had asked him how it was that Bro. Poore had come forward so rapidly, having entered the Lodge as a Lewis, but the reason lay in the fact that he was possessed of foresight and discernment in Freemasonry; and he was sure the same qualities would enable him in the future to make still further advances in the art. He (the speaker) should have great pleasure in assisting their Worshipful Master in the government of the Lodge, and hoped he might live many years to carry on the work he had so well begun. Bros. Powles of the Selwyn Lodge, Lucas of the Royal Leopold, and James Stevens P.M. 1426 severally responded for the Visitors, the latter paying a high tribute to the Masonic qualifications of the W.M. and his respected father, whom he was delighted to meet on this auspicious occasion. Bro. T. Poore also responded, in a few happily-chosen sentences, expressing confidence in the skill and assiduity of his son, who now occupied the honourable position of being Master of the Lodge, and a hope that, at the expiration of his year of office, he would instal his successor. The health of the Past Masters came next, and Bro. Lovegrove acknowledged the compliment paid them in graceful terms, and subsequently the Officers were proposed, and response given, the list being brought to a fitting close by the Tyler. During the evening some excellent singing and recitations varied the speeches, and the réunion was one of a most enjoyable description.

The Centennial of the Domatic Lodge, No. 177, was celebrated at the Criterion, Piccadilly, W., this (Friday) evening. The meeting was a most successful one, and was attended by 101 members of the Lodge and 113 visitors.

The Queen's (Westminster) Lodge of Instruction is held at 79 Ebury Street, S.W., on Wednesday evenings, at 7.45. Bro. G. Coop S.W. 141, 1612, Secretary 2021, S.N. 1604, is the Preceptor; Bro. C. P. Bellerby 1612, J.W. 2021, Chapter 1604, is the Secretary; and Brother C. Kempton P.M. 1287 the Treasurer. Brethren are cordially invited to attend.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Sudden changes of temperature sorely try all persons prone to rheumatism, sciatica, tical lourenx, and many similar maladies scarcely less painful, though of shorter duration. On the first attack of stiffness or suffering in any muscle, joint, or nerve, recourse should immediately be had to fomenting the seat of the disease with hot brine, and rubbing in this remarkable ointment, which will assuage the tenderness of the part, subdue inflammation, and reduce the swelling. The Pills, simultaneously taken, will rectify constitutional disturbances and renew the strength. No remedy heretofore discovered has proved so effective as the Ointment and Pills for removing gouty, rheumatic, and scrofulous attacks, which afflict all ages and are commonly called hereditary.

Flockton 304, Calverley 304, the Founders, and many others. The Petition and Warrant of Constitution having been read, E. Comp. Charles Mason, as acting Prov. Grand Superintendent, read the following address :—Allow me, in the first place, to congratulate "Excelsior" that, as a further way of celebrating the twenty-first anniversary of the consecration of their Lodge, they have wisely decided to have a Royal Arch Chapter attached thereto, and also that they have resolved to ask our worthy Companion Dr. Smyth to be their first Principal. I congratulate you heartily, Companions, upon your choice. When we consider the great services of Dr. Smyth, how, before many of those now present were born, he was fighting our battles for us, defending our Order against the attacks of our opponents, one and all may rejoice to see him about to occupy the position to which he is about to be installed. It is not often that a new Chapter has the opportunity of having a Companion to preside over it who can look back to a Masonic career extending over forty years. The words "to survive the wreck of mighty empires and to resist the destroying hand of time," are familiar to all of us, but do we thoroughly realise their meaning? I will not stay to discuss the vexed question of antiquity, yet even glancing over the last two or three hundred years, what do we find? Our Order steadily pursuing its way. We see the rise and fall of nations, we see great changes taking place, one kingdom absorbing several; in our own land what great social changes have taken place, and are still taking place, yet our Order remaineth the same. Without we have strife and bitterness; religions and political discussions and heartburnings, these we leave behind; we step past the portals of our Lodges and Chapters, we find harmony; we leave doubts and disputations, we find brotherly love; without all is ringing with the sound of war, within all is peace. Go abroad; we find in our own Empire of India, where we are gradually overthrowing the rulers of that vast country, that Masonry has existed there from ancient days. Your own First Principal nominate, Dr. Smyth, relates when a friend of his (Colonel Abercrombie, of the Bengal Artillery) was visiting Mattra, an ancient city thirty-six miles from Agra, in 1853, his carriage was stopped, and calling him aside, he was asked if he was not a member of a "Gadu Ghar," a House of Enchantment, as the natives styled Masonic Lodges. On replying in the affirmative, to his astonishment the Hindoo saluted him as an Entered Apprentice and Fellow Craft, informing him that his countrymen from time immemorial had kept up the knowledge of the three degrees, but nothing beyond them. "You," he proceeded to say, "profess to have something more, of which we are ignorant." We find the Sheiks of Arabia extending the right hand of friendship to a foreigner, because he is a Mason. We find the Kaffirs of Africa in possession of an ancient ritual, but only one degree, handed down to them from time immemorial. When our countrymen are driven out by stress of circumstances or love of adventure, we find the Order already in the land of their choice to greet them. What is this mysterious bond of union and of friendship? What is it that knits all men together in this great bond of Brotherhood? Is it the love of eating and drinking? I trow not. Nay, it is something higher and nobler; something of a loftier character; it is the dignity, the grandeur of our Order, founded on the sublime basis of virtue, nay, even on the sacred name of the Great God himself, the Ruler and Governor of all. This is why that, amidst all the great changes going on around us, our Order can "resist the destroying hand of time," has afforded consolation to many in the time that is past, and we trust to many in years to come. Comp. Mason concluded by giving a short explanation of the Royal Arch jewel. The ceremony of consecration was then proceeded with, the Consecrating Principal being ably assisted by E. Comp. Rev. W. C. Lukis, acting as Chaplain, E. Comp. Green, acting as Prov. G.D.C., and Bro. Carr acting as Organist, the whole being rendered in an able and impressive manner. The three Principals nominate, Comps. T. C. Smyth, D.D., P.Z. Z., S. Stead P.Z. H., and Thos. Tyers J., were then installed into their respective chairs, the ceremony being curtailed, owing to the Companions having all previously occupied similar chairs in other Chapters. The M.E.Z. then invested Comp. W.M. Tyers as S.E., Heathwaite as S.N., Cowborough as Treasurer, Bingham as P.S., Flockton and Calverley as A.S., Barrand Janitor. A hearty vote of thanks was given to the Consecrating Companion, and several brethren proposed for exaltation, after which the Chapter was closed. The Companions afterwards adjourned to the Banquet Hall, where refreshment was served.

EBORACUM CHAPTER, No. 1611.

ON the 2nd instant, the installation meeting of this Chapter was held at Freemasons' Hall, St. Saviourgate, York, when the Principals for the year were installed in their chairs, the ceremonies being performed by Comp. T. B. Whytehead P.Z. Prov. G.H. The following are the present Officers :—Comps. Simpson P.Z. M.E.Z., Millington H., Blenkin J., Kay S.E., Chapman S.N., Rev. R. Blakeney Treasurer, Brown P.S., Whytehead P.Z. D.C., and Pearson Janitor. There were also present Comps. Padel P.Z., Seller P.Z., and several other members and visitors. There were three names of candidates on the summons; but none were able to be present, and therefore, after an explanation of the pedestals, &c., by Comp. Whytehead, and the report of the Auditors, which showed a handsome balance in hand, the Chapter was closed, and the members retired to supper, and spent a pleasant evening under the presidency of the M.E.Z.

The regular monthly Committee meeting of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys was held at Freemasons' Hall, on Saturday last, Bro. W Roebuck in the chair. Among those present were Bros. C. F. Hogard, L. Ruff, Stephen Richardson, George Cooper, G. P. Gillard, Edgar Bowyer, G. Haldane, Controller S. G. Blake, J. L. Mather, J. Moon, Rev. R. Morris, M.A., LL.D., F. Adlard, J. G. Stevens, T. Hastings Miller, A. E. Gladwell, T. Cubitt P.G.P., Charles Belton, W. Maple, A. F. Godson, Richard Eve, and F. Binckes P.G. Stwd. (Secretary). The minutes of the previous Committee having been read and verified, and those of the House Committee and Quarterly Court read for information, the reports of the Audit and Finance Committee were submitted and accepted. The Committee approved of one of the Boys elected in October last being educated out of the School, and agreed that the usual allowance should be paid on his behalf; they then considered the petitions of four boys, whose names were directed to be placed on the list of candidates for the October election.

The Committee of Management of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution held their monthly meeting at Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday. Bro. Edgar Bowyer occupied the chair, and amongst those present were Bros. Murlis, Hogard, Wilson, Newton, Bolton, Bulmer, Daniell, Freeman, Webb, Dr. Hogg, Cubitt, Jas. Willing jun., and James Terry Secretary. After the minutes had been read and confirmed, the Secretary reported the death of two male annuitants, and also one of the female candidates (Mrs. Scott). The Warden's report was read. The Committee next considered the question of vacancies to be filled at the election in May, when it was shown that there were twelve male and six female annuitants available; these with the deferred candidates on each fund, would make the numbers to be elected fifteen men and nine widows, from approved lists of fifty-eight of the former, and seventy-one of the latter. After other business, a vote of thanks was accorded to the Chairman.

FUNERALS properly carried out and personally attended, in London or Country, by Bro. G. A. HUTTON, 17 Newcastle Street, Strand, W.C. Monuments erected. Valuations made.

THE PRESTONIAN LECTURE.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE."

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In the Official Calendar of the Craft, issued by the Grand Lodge for the present year, I again find the following recorded amongst the "Remarkable Occurrences in Masonry:" "Bro. William Preston of the Lodge of Antiquity, author of the illustrations of Masonry, bequeathed amongst other Masonic gifts £500 Consols to the Fund of Benevolence, and £300 Consols for the Prestonian Lecture." For some years these lectures were regularly delivered in the different degrees, and were very intently listened to, the last time I believe the lecture was delivered by Bro. Henry George Warren of the Phœnix Lodge, No. 178, and some other Lodges, but that was many years ago, and since then nothing has been heard of it. I think, therefore, it would be interesting to the Craft in general, and to old Masons in particular, to know how it is that this legacy to posterity, given by so distinguished a brother, has been allowed to lapse, and further, as the £300 Consols must in the past years have accumulated a large amount of interest, what has become of it, by whom is it received, and to what purpose, if any, it is applied. I certainly am of opinion that some explanation ought to be given by whoever is able to supply it, as to the reason why the lecture is not now given, and who are the recipients of the interest accruing upon the Stock invested for the purpose. I am not aware whether payment was ever made to those brethren by whom the lecture was delivered, most assuredly I feel certain that Bro. Warren would have felt insulted if payment had been offered to him for such a service, and that being so some information ought to be afforded how and to what purpose the interest of the money is applied.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours truly and fraternally,

1st February 1886. P.M.

APPEAL FOR EMPLOYMENT.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Might I kindly solicit your aid in appealing, through the columns of your paper, to such of the Brethren as are employers of labour, with the view of possibly obtaining some kind of employment quickly. I am now in very straitened circumstances, and to make matters worse my wife is near her confinement. I would not mind in the least how subordinate the position, or even if it should be a temporary one, if only I could succeed in obtaining something to do quickly—to tide over my present difficulties. If you can, through the medium of the Chronicle, assist me in any way to gratify this wish, believe me I shall be extremely thankful.

Your faithfully and fraternally,

P.D.

9 Ferrier Street, York Road, Wandsworth.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—As a frequent attendant at Masonic meetings, I should like to ask you who is responsible for the hats, coats, and umbrellas which are deposited by brethren during the holding of a meeting? There is usually some qualified person "somewhere about," whose duty it is to take care of these articles; but I, and doubtless many others, have an unfortunate experience of the manner in which they perform their duties. They are no doubt called away to attend to other matters, and in their absence there is no knowing what may happen. I do not say that brethren wilfully upset the order in which things have been left, or that the good intentions of those who re-arrange the different articles, "so as to put them all on view," is capable of a different construction, but I do object to find everything moved from the place in which it was left, especially when it does not "come right in the end." Some months since I was present at a meeting where "during our temporary absence" everything had been upset by a brother, as I was told, who had mislaid his apron case). I lost my umbrella on that occasion, and although it has since been restored to me, I do not think that lessens the evil of which I complain. Some weeks after the loss of my umbrella my hat came to grief—the second time during my Masonic experience—and it was only after a long search that I was enabled to discover my property. The hats had gone wrong on this occasion, so I heard it said, as the result—would you believe it?—of a brother's idea of a joke being to mix up the head gear of the brethren at the banquet. This accusation of practical joking was made in the presence of the brother implicated, and as he made no attempt to contradict the statement, it was I suppose correct. I was within an easy distance of home on this latter occasion, and so did not lose anything beyond my time and temper in searching for my property, but who would have been responsible had it been otherwise?

Yours fraternally,

AN ANTI-JOKER.

THE THEATRES, &c.

Haymarket.—"A Woman of the World" is the title of a three act comedy by Mr. B. C. Stephenson (author of "Impulse"), that was presented to the public here, on Thursday afternoon, the 4th instant. Although received by those present with every sign of encouragement, we fear the same result will not be achieved if the piece is submitted to the test of being placed in the evening bill. Undoubtedly, the work contains some clever dialogue, some humorously drawn characters, and some amusing incidents, yet it does not contain sufficient novelty, nor will it evoke sympathetic interest enough to secure the favour of the general public. "A Woman of the World" is founded on the German play "Der Probepfeil," by Oscar Blumenthal, but Mr. Stephenson will scarcely be recouped for the pains he has taken in its adaptation. A widow—"the woman of the world"—has made up her mind to marry a certain Sir Godfrey Chalmers, a youthful guardsman, he at the same time having become infatuated with her. But—the old story—all goes not smoothly; Godfrey's uncle, Dudley Chalmers, has set his heart on a match between his nephew and Beatrice Norton, the daughter of a friend. This young lady, who is musical, is attracted by a German adventurer, named Slowitz, who desires to secure her hand on account of her reputed wealth. A Mrs. Mandeville, to further ends of her own, encourages and assists this scoundrel in his design; but in the end Slowitz is proved to be an impostor, by Dudley Chalmers, who opens the eyes of Beatrice and Godfrey to the true state of their hearts. The construction, however, is clumsy. At the opening of the piece everybody can see how it will end, and but little sympathy is shown when the happy termination is brought about. With regard to the artistes engaged, first honours must be given to Mr. Beerbohm Tree, whose humorous caricature of a foreign musical impostor was a grand piece of acting, which is well worth seeing a second time. Mr. Tree was well supported by Mr. Charles Brookfield, as Dudley Chalmers; a man whose surliness overlies sound common sense, confirmed by experience. Mr. H. Kemble gave a capital piece of character acting as Mr. Norton, while Mr. Gilbert Farquhar, as the old-fashioned dandy, Percy Buddington, acquitted himself well. Mr. Arthur Elwood was earnest as Sir Godfrey Chalmers. Miss Helen Barry's style hardly enabled her to do justice to the part of Mrs. Mandeville, notwithstanding that she acted with plenty of "go." Miss Helen Forsyth was delightful as Beatrice; her ingenuous charm and freshness winning for her the appreciation of the audience. The other parts were fairly filled; Mr. F. Gerard (Mr. Lindley Smart), Mr. U. Winter (Mr. Alfred Maffleton), Mr. Arthur Darwin (Mr. Washington Mivarts), Mr. Ulick Winter (Melton), Mr. West (Bibury), Miss Maud Merrill (Miss Gushman), Miss Gertrude Tempest (Miss Martingale), Miss Steele (Mrs. Templeton), Miss Tempest (Pauline). Special praise must be awarded to Mr. Edward Hastings for the excellent way in which he "stage-managed" the piece.

Vaudeville.—We are not surprised that Mr. Derrick's comedy "Plebeians," which was produced here on the 13th ult., should have proved unsuited to the public taste, or that it should have been withdrawn after a short run. As we said, in noticing its production, there was nothing in the piece to win for it anything like success, and the action of the management in withdrawing it has proved the correctness of our verdict. It has been replaced by "Confusion," an eccentric comedy by the same author, which has already achieved a reputation,—it having been represented more than four hundred and fifty times previous to its present revival. "Confusion" is well worth seeing, and will no doubt prove successful for some time to come. Most of the characters are filled by the same artistes who portrayed them during its former run, while those who are new give valuable assistance. Miss Kate Rorke plays the part of the misunderstood wife with that grace and skill that has always made her famous. Miss Millett, one of the best ingénu's we have on the stage, realises the character of Violet with pretty effect. Miss Larkin and Miss Kate Phillips did all that was required of them; while Mr. Glenny, as the perplexed and much-wronged husband, portrayed the character with an earnestness that at times made us wish we could see him in a more serious part. Mr. Charles Groves, as Blizzard, appeared to revel in the comical ties set down for him; and last, but by no means least, Mr. Frederick Thorne threw an amount of serious woe into his face that would have been creditable to Robson in his palmiest days.

Toole's.—The long talked of travestie on "Faust," by Mr. F. C. Burnand, has been presented to the general public, but, so far, with a result that may be described as disappointing. Why Mr. Toole should have ventured to produce so whimsical and clever a piece before it was fully rehearsed no one can conceive. The scenery, on too ambitious a scale for so small a theatre, did not work properly. This may have been attributable to too much having been attempted in imitation of that at the Lyceum—in the shape of steam clouds, electric effects, and Mephistophelean marvels. However, Mr. Toole has plenty of material to work upon, and when all goes smoothly no doubt success will be achieved. The travestie is full of lively jokes and witty puns, but they frequently seem to miss fire. The style in which Mr. Toole represents Mephistopheles puts us in mind of a pantomime; he uses a harlequin's wand to perform his tricks. One of the best features in the piece is Mr. Toole's excellent imitation of Mr. Sims Reeves; he manages to take off the popular tenor much more successfully than he does his friend Irving. Miss Marie Linden, as Margaret, imitates Miss Helen Terry wonderfully; she reproduces the voice and gesture of that popular actress with great success. Mr. E. D. Ward is a capital Faust; his imitations of Mr. Irving's peculiarities being very good. One of the hits of the piece is Mr. George Shelton's impersonation of Margaret's mother (name not known), this clever artist is indeed exceedingly funny. Mr. W. Brunton could not elicit much humour from the part of Constable Valentine, although he laboured assiduously. The music consists chiefly of music hall tunes and snatches from Gounod's opera.

EBORACUM LODGE, No. 1611.

A VERY full meeting of this Lodge was held on Monday evening at the Freemasons' Hall, St. Saviourgate, York. In the absence of the W.M., through illness, the chair was taken by Bro. T. B. Whytehead P.M., and there were also present Bros. Sir F. Milner, Bart., I.P.M., C. G. Padel P.M., J. T. Seller P.M., G. Balmford P.M. and Treasurer, William Brown S.W., G. Chapman J.W., J. Kay Secretary, T. J. Dalton S.D., W. Lackenby J.D., W. Stephenson I.G., P. Pearson, J. Mennell, W. T. Nance, J. E. Wilkinson, and about 20 other brethren. A ballot was taken for a candidate, and two accepted candidates were initiated by the acting W.M., the Charge being given by the S.W. On the motion of Bro. Dyson, the sum of £25 was voted from the Lodge funds to the Proprietary Fund. Bro. Padel presented to the Lodge Library the fifth volume of Gould's "History of Freemasonry," and Bro. Whytehead also presented six Masonic works, and for these votes of thanks were accorded. The name of a candidate was proposed and seconded, and the Lodge was closed. A smoking concert was afterwards held in the smoke room, when songs and recitations were given by Bros. Mennell, Thackray, Sir F. Milner, T. B. Whytehead, and others, and a thoroughly friendly evening was enjoyed by the members and their numerous visitors.

CHINE LODGE, No. 1884.

A NUMEROUS and highly representative gathering of members of the Mason Craft took place at the Masonic Hall on Thursday, the 4th inst., on the occasion of the installation, as Worshipful Master, of Bro. Alford Greenham S.W., who had been unanimously elected to succeed Bro. John Bailey in the chair. The ceremony of installation was performed, in a skilful and impressive manner, by Bro. F. Newman P.M. P.P.G.S.W., and afterwards Bro. Greenham appointed and invested the following as his Officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. John Bailey I.P.M., William Judd S.W., Frank Ravner J.W., Rev. George Avery Chaplain, Francis Cooper P.M. P.G.S. Treasurer, Lewis Colenutt Secretary, Charles H. Moorman S.D., Arthur F. Swayne J.D., William Deeks D.C., John W. Cantlow I.G., John B. Middleton Organist, Francis Cooper P.M. S.S., William Thompson J.S., William J. Mew Tyler. The Worshipful Master then presented to Bro. Newman, in the name of the members of the Lodge, a handsome timepiece, of novel construction, being in the form of a lighthouse with revolving light, the clock face and aneroid barometer coming into view alternately. The W.M., in the course of an eloquent speech, said the future history of the Chine Lodge would ever be associated with the name of Bro. Newman. He referred to his efforts in connection with the Masonic Hall, which would ever remain as a memento of his Masonic generosity. In the early days of the Lodge he worked unceasingly on its behalf, and for two years filled the chair. They did not select a Masonic jewel for presentation, as Bro. Newman already possessed one from the Chine Lodge, and they would remember that when it was resolved to present it Bro. Dr. Dabbs, with his accustomed generosity, insisted on bearing the whole cost of it, and thus to acknowledge the valuable aid rendered to him during his year of office by Bro. Newman. The presentation was briefly acknowledged by Bro. Newman. Before the Lodge was closed several new members were proposed. The brethren subsequently adjourned to Daish's Hotel, where a récherché banquet was served under the supervision of Mrs. Tizard. The newly-installed W.M. presided, and the number of brethren present was so large that several were accommodated in an adjoining room. Bro. General the Hon. Somerset J. G. Calthorpe, Past Grand Warden of England, in responding to the toast of the Grand Master H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and Officers of Grand Lodge, complimented the W.M. on the marked ability he had shown in carrying out his duties that day. He had visited many Lodges in the Island, but he must admit that the Chine Lodge had the most convenient building he had seen for holding a Lodge meeting, and this he attributed to the fact that it had been designed by Bro. Newman. Bro. A. R. Holbrook P.M. proposed the P.G. Master Bro. Beach, M.P., the D.P.G.M. Bro. Le Fevre, and the Officers of P.G. Lodge, to which Bros. Faulkner P.P.G.S.W. and F. Cooper P.G.S., replied. The health of the W.M. was given in eulogistic terms by Bro. Dr. Dabbs, the senior Past Master of the Lodge, and was received with acclamation. Several toasts followed, and the proceedings were interspersed by some capital vocal selections.

Justice Lodge of Instruction, No 147.—On Thursday, 4th inst., at the Brown Bear, High Street, Deptford. Present:—Bros. Penrose W.M., Prior S.W., Dandridge J.W., Speight P.M. Secretary, Mansfield S.D., Thomas J.D., Miller I.G., Hutchings P.M. Preceptor, Greener, Catt, Walters. The work of the evening comprised the rehearsal of the ceremony of initiation, Bro. Greener candidate. Lodge was then called off; on resuming it was opened in the second, and the ceremony of passing rehearsed, Bro. Catt personating the candidate. Bro. Prior S.W. was elected Wor. Master for the ensuing Thursday, and all business being ended Lodge was closed in due form and adjourned.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 193.—At Bro. Lashbrook's, Hercules Tavern, 119 Leadenhall Street, City, on Wednesday, 3rd inst. Bros. Saint W.M., Hunter S.W., Gilderslev J.W., Davey D., Belchamber P., Murrell I.G., Pitt Secretary, Cubitt, D. Moss, H. Moss, King, Lashbrook, &c. Lodge was opened in due form and the minutes of previous meeting were confirmed. The ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. H. Moss candidate. Bro. D. Moss worked the first section of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. Bro. Moss also rehearsed the fifth section in the form of a lecture, which gave great pleasure and instruction to the brethren. Bro. H. Moss 1668, W. Hunter 205, and Murrell 193, were elected members. Bro. Hunter was elected Worshipful Master for next meeting. All labour ended Lodge was closed in due form and adjourned to Wednesday, at 7 o'clock.

Kingsland Lodge of Instruction, No. 1693.—Held at the Cock Tavern, Highbury, on the 8th inst. Present:—Bros. Dixie W.M., Hancock S.W., Flunk J.W., Ware S.D., Kirk J.D., Keogh I.G., Weeden acting Preceptor, Collingridge Secretary, and several other brethren. After preliminaries the ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. White acting as candidate. Bro. White answered the usual questions leading to the second degree. The first, second, and third sections of the first lecture were then worked. Bro. Hancock was elected W.M. for Monday next, and the Lodge was closed in due form and adjourned.

MARK MASONRY.

Royal Savoy Lodge of Instruction, No. 355.—The usual weekly meeting of this young and flourishing Lodge was held at the Moorgate, Finsbury Pavement, on Friday, 4th inst. The V.W. Grand Secretary Bro. F. Binckes P.G.W., in his usual able manner, rehearsed the ceremony of consecration, he being ably assisted as D.C. by Bro. J. L. Mather P.M. Old Kent Lodge (T.I.) and supported by the whole of the Officers and members of the parent Lodge, and a great number of brethren from other Lodges. Nine brethren were proposed and elected as members, and after a hearty vote of thanks to the Grand Secretary, the meeting was adjourned until Friday, 19th inst., at seven o'clock, when the W.M. of the Prince of Wales's Lodge, No. 4, will preside as W.M., supported by the Officers of that Lodge in their respective chairs. After labour came refreshment, which was provided in faultless style by Messrs. Weyers and Cole, at the Metropolitan Hotel, South-place, Finsbury-square, and was heartily enjoyed by the brethren (to the number of 25) who participated. In consequence of the slight indisposition of Bro. Mather Preceptor, the chair was taken by Bro. Binckes, the two Wardens of the parent Lodge supporting him as Vice-Presidents, and after spending a very happy time, under the genial presidency of the Grand Secretary, the meeting dissolved. We observed present to support Bro. Binckes Bros. J. L. Mather P.M. Old Kent (T.I.) Preceptor, D. P. Cama W.M. Percy Lodge, C. Pulman P.G.I.G. P.M. 139, J. T. Briggs W.M. Sir Francis Burdett Lodge, J. D. Birkin W.M. 284, A. G. Fidler S.W. 284, Graham P.M. 284, Carter P.M. 139; W. M. Stiles S.W., W. A. Scurrah J.W., G. Gregory M.O., W. Dickey S.D., Mordey Reg. of Marks, A. H. Scurrah J.D., G. Dickinson D.C., M. J. Rowley I.G., F. W. Huddlestone Organist, all of 355; S. H. Parkhouse S.D. 211, S. P. Catterson M.O. 234, H. J. Davis I.G. 357, J. W. Beeglymer 223, T. C. Edmonds S.D. 139, G. Emblin S.D. 239, C. J. B. Knightley Secretary 355.

To-day (Saturday) has been appointed for the private view of the Spring Exhibition of the 19th Century Art Society, at the Conduit Street Galleries, and the Exhibition will open to the public on Monday, the 15th instant.

"The Ritual and Ceremonial of the Symbolic Degrees of Freemasonry, 1813-1886" is the title of a new Masonic lecture, which Bro. James Stevens P.M. P.Z. announces as ready for delivery in Master Masons' Lodges and Lodges of Instruction.

In Memoriam.

BRO. JOHN BEAUFOY ALFRED MOORE.

It was with very great regret that we received the intelligence of the demise of Bro. John Beaufoy Alfred Moore, for many years the esteemed proprietor of Ye Olde Cheshire Cheese, one of the most historical hotels in Fleet Street. This event occurred on Friday, the 5th instant. Brother Moore was in the full enjoyment of health on the preceding Wednesday, but on returning home that evening he was taken suddenly ill in a cab, and expired about half past one o'clock on the Friday. Bro. Moore was only 65 years of age, and his sudden removal has caused a profound sense of sorrow amongst a wide circle of friends, especially the habitués of "the Cheese," the famous resort in years gone by of Boswell, Johnson, and a host of other celebrities in literature and art. Brother Moore was a member of the Robert Burns Lodge, No. 25, and manifested considerable interest in the Craft and its doings. The funeral cortège left Maida Vale at eleven o'clock on Thursday forenoon, and proceeded to St. Mark's Church, where the burial service was read by Canon Duckworth. The coffin was literally buried in wreaths and crosses, sent by loving hands as a last tribute of respect and affection. From Maida Vale the funeral procession wended its way to Brompton Cemetery, which was reached at half-past twelve o'clock, and here the impressive rites of the Church of England were concluded in the presence of a large circle of sorrowing spectators.

"Dr. G. H JONES, F.R.S.L., the well-known Surgeon-Dentist of 57 Great Russell Street, London, has just re-issued his popular treatise on the teeth, which should be read by every one wishing to have a good and sound set of teeth; 'Painless and Perfect Dentistry' is its title, which will be found fully justified on perusal of its pages, as many hints for the guidance of those seeking a really practical and scientific dental surgeon will be found. The care and treatment of the teeth, with much useful information concerning the mouth and its molars, is contained therein, and we cordially commend this brochure of Dr. G. H. Jones, to the attention of our readers, which will be found a true guide, philosopher, and friend. The concluding chapters of the book are devoted to a description of the Author's method of dental treatment, which has obtained so high a reputation, and which seems to realise the desideratum of 'holding the mirror up to nature.'"—The Brighton Standard, December 1885.

IS NOISE AN ESSENTIAL TO ENJOYMENT?

DURING the last few days the British roughs have been trying to demonstrate, in various centres of civilisation, that noise is essential for their enjoyment, or at all events that they can find some amusement in creating disturbances, and making themselves a nuisance to their fellow creatures. It is true a few of them have gone much further than this, and have committed outrages which have called forth the strongest condemnation, and which, it is to be hoped, will be severely punished. But a large number—by far the majority—have contented themselves with shouting, and creating as much noise as is possible, to the annoyance of all who heard them, and with no good result to themselves. Yet, in a measure, we can excuse all this noise considering the source from whence it has come. Many of those who have been loudest in creating the uproar have hardly known better, while they have been led astray by popular agitators; men who are for ever urging the masses to excesses against good order and regularity. But what can we say of almost similar conduct among educated men; men who have been taught, and who know better; men who are moving in good spheres of life, and who are well acquainted with the laws—unwritten though they may be—which govern properly organised society? Such behaviour from these is disgraceful, and calls for the strongest condemnation, even if it should not be carried beyond actual reproof.

There are some Masons to whom noise appears to be an essential to enjoyment, especially at the banquet table, and to such as are so circumstanced we commend the above paragraph. If they could see themselves as others see them, could realise the fact that their frequent shouts for a glass of wine with Bro. So-and-so was the greatest of nuisances to their more peaceable neighbours, they would perhaps see they were quite as great offenders against good order as the loudest of the shouters who, during the past few weeks, have proved such an annoyance to the peaceable citizens of London and other towns, and considering they stand much higher in the social scale they are deserving of stronger reproof than the poor ignorant masses, who have gone wild in response to the rabid utterances of practised agitators. Is it necessary for these brethren to make themselves a nuisance to all around them before they can say they have enjoyed their evening? If so, the sooner it becomes generally known the better, as we may then be able to set apart two or three Lodges for these over "enthusiastic" brethren, and let them shout among themselves, to their heart's content—on condition they do not annoy their fellows whenever they may find themselves outside one of their reserved centres. We can appreciate enthusiasm in a good cause, or hearty enjoyment at the festive board, as well as any one, but the excess to which some brethren go is far beyond the one or the other, and is, we again say, deserving of the strongest condemnation. We have known a few of these lively spirits to monopolise an evening, to call down upon themselves the censure of the Worshipful Master, to bear the criticisms of Past Masters and Visitors alike, and to go away feeling they had had a good time of it, and really believing they had contributed to the harmony of the meeting. How can we hope to convert such offenders as these? We should be sorry to suggest anything un-Masonic, but really they deserve to have their own weapons turned upon themselves. Let us go, again, to the popular agitators, and take example from them; in short, let us "boycott" those who annoy us, and when they shout for a toast let all who desire to maintain peace and comfort decline to acknowledge it. There are plenty of methods by which one friend can attract the notice of another, without continually shouting across the tables, to the annoyance of those around, and the sooner this is generally recognised the better it will be for all concerned.

WHY AM I A FREEMASON?

A TRAVELLER on a long journey gets weary sometimes, and finds it necessary to pause for rest and refreshment. While resting and meditating, he naturally takes a retrospective view of the way already travelled, the place whence he came, the rough and rugged places, it may be, over which he has passed, the running brook where he has slaked his thirst with its limpid water and plucked vernal flowers from its green and fertile banks. He then takes a prospective view of the road yet to be travelled. It may be he is going home to see his loved ones, either on this side of the "dark river" or beyond. In either case the object is delightful and the thought transporting. Supposing it to be a road he has never before travelled, the following questions cannot fail to engage his earnest attention: Am I in the right way? and is it a safe route to travel?

The writer of this article, having "travelled East" for many years, is inclined to mediate on the spot where he is now resting, and inquire:

Why am I a Freemason? and is that route a safe one to travel?" To me the answer is not difficult nor embarrassing.

It is because Freemasonry is a social organization, instituted by virtuous men, and based upon the broad, liberal and sublime principles of morality and religion. Its first grand principle, underlying it, and interwoven with all of its ceremonies, is the belief in one true and living God, the Supreme, intelligent First Cause of all things. Hence, no atheist can be made a Mason; and any Mason who may become an atheist cannot remain a member without being guilty of the greatest hypocrisy.

The second great truth inculcated is the belief in a resurrection to eternal life. Nothing can ever efface from the mind of a Mason the doctrine of immortality, so beautifully and forcibly taught by the legend in which the sprig of acacia is found blooming at the head of the grave of the departed, and which doctrine is symbolized when the evergreen is deposited upon the remains of a departed Brother.

In addition to these fundamental truths, the Fraternity lays down as moral axioms the four cardinal virtues of Temperance, Fortitude, Prudence and Justice, the practice of which makes a man an upright and honourable citizen. But it does not stop there, for justice without charity is as cold as an iceberg. The social virtues of Brotherly Love, Relief and Truth, which are the "tenets of a Mason's profession," must be added to give symmetry to moral character; and which will make a man what his Maker intended he should be, namely, a social being—the depository of whatsoever is pure, whatsoever is lovely, and whatsoever is of good report among his fellow men.

To complete the system of truth adopted and inculcated, the Fraternity teaches most impressively the Christian virtues of Faith, Hope and Charity—faith in God, hope in immortality, and charity to all mankind. It does not divorce morality and religion, but teaches the most reverential worship of the great I Am. Founded upon such principles, its votaries cannot be classed as men of "one idea." It is not an insurance company for making pecuniary investments with the assurance of remuneration in dollars and cents. Neither is it a temperance society, organized for the simple purpose of inculcating one of the cardinal virtues, however commendable that assuredly is. It is infinitely broader than any association that does not aim at perfecting its members in all that pertains to true manhood.

What other human association can boast of constantly inculcating, in all its ceremonies, a more perfect code of moral and social ethics than that which we have just been describing. Our whole system of moral and religious truth not only demonstrates our faith in God, but in the Bible which is ever open upon our altars, sending forth its sweet incense to permeate the minds and hearts of all who come within our sacred retreat.

Freemasonry does not claim to be the Church nor the State, and yet it is a support of both. It has always embraced among its members many of the ablest divines and some of the most brilliant and distinguished statesmen; in fact, men of every rank and station in life. Its success is due, in a great measure, to the fact that it is non-sectarian and non-political in its organisation. It does not interfere with any duty we owe to God, our country, our neighbour or ourselves, but on the contrary enforces all those duties in the strongest manner. It is a charitable institution, linking its members together "by an indissoluble chain of sincere affection," and seeking to "unite men of every country, sect and opinion."

It may be said by our opponents, "We do not object to your principles, but all Masons do not live up to them." We admit and regret that some Masons do not live up to their principles, and yet all must admit that no society, moral or religious, has ever succeeded in making all of its members pure and upright. We must not forget the parable of our Saviour, in which it is said: "Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in the field? from whence then hast it tares?" The reply was, "An enemy hath done this." An enemy has been sowing tares among the wheat ever since.

Again, it may be said: "We object to secret societies." Why, and on what ground? We admit that a secret society, organised for wicked and selfish purposes, is decidedly objectionable. For example, one whose purpose it is to overthrow the government of a free people, or for violating the laws of the government. Every society must be judged of by its principles and practice, and not because it may or may not have secret tokens and signs of brotherly recognition, or pledges of personal relief in case of danger or distress. If that postulate be true, and we do not see how any one can successfully controvert it, there can be no just grounds for objecting to the Fraternity of Freemasons. Secret tokens and pledges of friendship have been quite common in all ages of the world. In the first persecution of the Christians under Nero, they had their secret tokens and passwords of brotherly recognition for mutual protection.

I will illustrate what I conceive to be a lawful and laudable secret among brethren. Every reader of the Bible will readily recognise this beautiful passage of Scripture: "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it." That promise, made to the victor, contains a secret token and pledge of friendship. It is quite probable that St. John here alludes to the custom among the Romans of giving tokens of friendship called the tesseræ. We will mention two kinds of these tokens or pledges. First, the tesseræ convivialis, which answered to our cards or tickets of admission to public feasts or banquets. Then there were the tesseræ hospitales, which were given as a badge of friendship and alliance, and on which some device was engraved. A small oblong square piece of wood, stone, or ivory, was taken and divided into two equal parts, on which each of the parties wrote his own name, and then interchanged it with the other. Each one carefully preserved his part, and by producing it when they travelled gave the bearers a mutual claim to all the hospitality their respective houses could afford. No one could know the meaning of the name or device upon the tesseræ but the contracting parties that interchanged them; and could at any time verify the contract by comparing them—"which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it." It is a beautiful illustration of the value of such tokens and pledges of friendship as will bind virtuous men more closely together in all that pertains to noble deeds of charity and brotherly kindness. And no Mason should ever lose sight of that as one of the grand objects of the Brotherhood of Free and Accepted Masons.

"Ideal fabrics to uprear,
Some men think all our art;
But little think what plans we draw
To form an upright heart.

Our plumb we poise, and clear each clog
That hangs about the string:
And each unruly passion's flight
Within the compass bring."

My conclusion is that Freemasonry, in its plan and purposes, is the best and purest social organization outside of the Church of the living God. Its moral and religious creed is eminently liberal and practical, and is intended to promote the doctrine of the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of man. That it does not succeed in making all of its members pure, virtuous and benevolent, must be attributed to the corrupting influences of evil times and customs, against which the Church, as well as Freemasonry, has had to contend with varying success. I know of no stronger bond of union in all that relates to a virtuous life than that imposed upon the Masonic Brotherhood.

"Upon this rock we'll stand when worlds,
T' oblivion all shall tend;
Our brethren as ourselves we love;
To all mankind a friend."

MASONIC DISTURBERS.

THERE are a few in the Craft who may be called Masonic disturbers; who are never easy without creating dissension, and if more numerous would be classed as Masonic destroyers.

How little do such persons regard the principle that peace and harmony are the strength of all institutions.

We do not allude to those who, having the interest of the Lodge or Chapter at heart, never hesitate to express their opinion when they think the funds are likely to be misapplied, or when some action is to be taken that may interfere with the prosperity of the body with which they are connected. Such members are sometimes wrong in their ideas; but yet they mean well, and speak according to their convictions. They may be looked upon really as the preservers rather than the destroyers.

But there are some who have the desire to rule, either in a station or on the floor, and if unable to accomplish their object, will do their best to ruin. We have met a few of this kind. For a time, charity for their weaknesses may cause the Lodge or Chapter to be indulgent until the infliction becomes painful, and the offender is, as it were, "sat upon."

Then is exhibited the spirit of malignancy, only too well known in some bodies, where one individual can and will prevent the Lodge or Chapter from working. In some cases it is also manifested by attacks made in the public press under a nom de plume, on individuals, thereby causing feelings of bitterness which should not exist. In the end, however, this will rectify itself, and the disturber finally find that he is either outside the pale of the Fraternity, or regarded as one who ought never to have belonged to it.

Let Masonic disturbers be warned in time.—New York Sunday Times.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Coughs, Influenza.—The soothing properties of these medicaments render them well worthy of trial in all diseases of the respiratory organs. In common colds and Influenza the Pills taken internally, and the Ointment rubbed over the chest and throat, are exceedingly efficacious. When Influenza is epidemic, this treatment is the easiest, safest and surest. Holloway's Pills purify the blood, remove all obstacles to its free circulation through the lungs, relieve the over-gorged air tubes, and render respiration free, without reducing the strength, irritating the nerves, or depressing the spirits; such are the ready means of escaping from suffering when afflicted with colds, coughs, bronchitis, and other chest complaints, by which the health of so many is seriously and permanently injured in most countries.

A ROYAL COMMISSION.

A DOCUMENT of unusual interest to the Masonic Fraternity of this State was quite unexpectedly received a few days ago by ex-Alderman William E. Pine, Past Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of New Jersey. It is a commission from the Grand Lodge of England, appointing Mr. Pine a representative of that body to the Grand Lodge of this State, and bears the autograph of His Royal Highness, Albert Edward Prince of Wales and Grand Master of England. It is elaborately engrossed on a large skin of parchment, some of the lines being embellished with initial letters in gold, blue and red, and the penmanship of the document is equal to fine copper-plate engraving. This is the first English commission crediting a representative to the New Jersey Grand Lodge, and there are very few, if any, Masons in the United States who have been thus honoured by the head of the English Fraternity.

The following is a transcript of the commission, the signature of the Prince of Wales occupying the upper left-hand corner:

ALBERT EDWARD, G.M.

To the Most Worshipful Grand Master, the Right Worshipful and Worshipful Officers of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of New Jersey, and all others whom these presents may concern.

Health, Peace, Unity!

We, the Grand Master, in our own names and on behalf of the Right Worshipful and Worshipful the Officers and Brethren of the United Grand Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of England, being most desirous of establishing relations of amity and brotherly love between the United Grand Lodge of England and the Most Worshipful Grand Lodge of New Jersey, and the several Lodges and brethren under their authority and sanction respectively, and in token of the great confidence reposed in, as well as the high consideration entertained for, the Honourable William E. Pine, do hereby nominate, constitute and appoint him Grand Representative and the Representative of the Grand Lodge of England in the said Grand Lodge of New Jersey, charging him our said Representative, at all times and upon all occasions, to use his best exertions to promote and maintain the integrity, the honour and the welfare of the Masonic Craft at large, and to testify our good will, high consideration and fraternal regard towards the Most Worshipful Grand Master, his officers and brethren of the Right Worshipful Grand Lodge of New Jersey, whereby the bond of union may be strengthened and the interests of the Fraternity promoted. And we do hereby confer upon our said Representative ample powers to do and perform all such Masonic acts as by the laws and usages of the two Grand Lodges the Representative of a sister Grand Lodge may do and perform.

With fraternal greeting we do request the Most Worshipful Grand Master of New Jersey to receive our said Representative, whom we charge to assure the Grand Lodge of our high respect, and of our cordial desire to operate with them in every effort that can be made to preserve the purity and usefulness of Ancient Freemasonry throughout the world.

Given under our hand and seal of our Grand Lodge, at London, this 7th day of November, A.L. 5885, A.D. 1885, by command of the Most Worshipful Grand Master His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, K.G., &c., &c.

(Seal). LATHOM D.G.M.

SHADWELL CLERKE G.S.

The Commission was duly presented at the meeting of the Grand Lodge last week, and Mr. Pine received in accordance with the expressed wish of the Royal Craftsman.—Newark (N.J.) Sunday Call, 31st January.

PALESTINE COMMANDERY, No. 18, K.T., OF NEW YORK CITY.

PALESTINE Commandery, No. 18, K.T., stationed at New York City, gave its eighth annual reception in the Metropolitan Opera House, on Thursday evening, 14th January. This occasion was one of the most brilliant events of the social season. Palestine Commandery is distinguished for two things, namely, the earnest interest its members take in the maintaining of all things which are for the honour of the Order, and for the large and generous hospitality with which on an occasion like that of the past reception visiting Knights are received and entertained. The preparations for the event had been in the hands of an efficient committee a long time previous, and when the evening arrived everything was completed by the best of good times. The Opera House was in gala array and resplendent with light when the Knights and their ladies and the many guests arrived. The decorations were made under the superintendence of Sir Mitchell Halliday. All nations were represented in the flags which adorned the fronts of the boxes, while the principal features of the display of light and colour were of an emblematic character, appropriate to Templary. The stage had been transformed into a tent, in the rear of which was a platform for the Grand Officers, garlands of flowers and statues being displayed upon and about it. A large passion cross of white flowers, with a smaller Templar cross of red flowers, was a conspicuous object, which was made by Mrs. Milton Frost, of Detroit, and presented by her to Palestine Commandery. A cross formed in gas jets surmounted the flowers, and these also flamed out, in tongues of fire, the motto, "In Hoc Signo Vinces," above the cross, while the name "Palestine, No. 18, K.T." appeared upon the cross itself. The beauseant of the Commandery was in front of the proscenium arch, and on each side were representations of Knights in armour. The guests were received by Em. Sir James W. Bowden, Em. Commander, Chairman of Committee on Invitation, and as the Knights in their rich uniforms, and the ladies in their elegant costumes gathered, the scene was one of great beauty. Cappa's Seventh Regiment band, 110 pieces, discoursed charming music as the throng grew; and as the boxes filled and the more restless ones moved about the aspect was inspiring. After an overture from Verdi's "Sicilian Vespers," and selections from the "Mikado," the band struck up a grand march, "Palestine Commandery," composed by Signor Cappa, during the performance of which Grand Commander R.E. Sir Peter Forrester and his staff were escorted to the platform. Then followed an inspection and review by the Grand Commander, in which appeared delegations from Columbian Commandery, No. 1; Morton, No. 4; Clinton, No. 14; Cœur de Lion, No. 23; De Witt Clinton, No. 27; Manhattan, No. 31; Ivanhoe, No. 36; Constantine, No. 48; Bethlehem, No. 53; York, No. 55; St. Elmo, No. 57; Greenwood, No. 58; and Palestine, No. 18. Following this inspection was an exhibition drill by the Drill Corps of Palestine Commandery, composed of thirty-six Knights, under the command of P. Em. Sir Eugene S. Eunson. The several movements, including various emblematic formations, were admirably executed, in fact almost, if not quite, to perfection, and were observed with marked interest. Dancing followed, with an extended order of dances, which occupied the time till nearly daybreak. Among the guests present were Mayor William R. Grace; Hugh J. Grant, Sheriff of the city; V.E. Gen. Sir Charles Roome, Acting Grand Master of the Grand Encampment of the United States; R.E. Sir Eli C. Birdsey, P.G.C. of Connecticut; R.E. Sir John W. Simons, Treasurer of the Grand Encampment of the United States; R.E. Sir Peter Forrester, Grand Commander of Grand Commandery of New York; E. Sir Albert G. Goodall, Grand Generalissimo; R. C. Christiance, Grand Treasurer, and Robert Macoy, Grand Recorder of the Grand Commandery of New York. From the Grand Commandery of New Jersey, R.E. Sir Thomas W. Tilden, Past Grand Commander; R.E. Sir John H. Ackerman, Grand Commander; E. Sir Edward W. Price, Grand Generalissimo; E. Sir Isaac C. Githens Grand Captain General; E. Sir Thomas Godson Grand Prelate; E. Sir Albert D. Winfield, Grand Standard-Bearer, and E. Sir Charles Slee, Grand Junior Warden. There were also present Most Worshipful Brothers Frank R. Lawrence, Grand Master; Washington E. Connor, Grand Marshal; Wor. Herman G. Carter, Grand Librarian; George H. Raymond Grand Lecturer, Col. E. M. L. Ehlers Grand Secretary of Grand Lodge of New York, Sir Holland of St. Bernard Commandery, Chicago, E. Sir Robert M. Lawrence, of Westchester Commandery, No. 42, New York, and Sir George W. Latimer, of Detroit Commandery, Michigan, as well as delegations from Washington Commandery, Newport, R.I.; Apollo, No. 1, Chicago, Ill., and St John's, No. 4, of Philadelphia, Pa., who lent their presence on this festive occasion. Noticeable among the throng hailing from Massachusetts were Eminent Sir Charles E. Pierce, Commander of St. Omer Commandery, of South Boston and an honorary member of Palestine. On his suite were E. Sir Charles J. Noyes, P. Com., and Sir Charles H. Porter Junior Warden of St. Omer, and Sirs Frank H. Mudge and George S. Carpenter, of De Molay Commandery, of Boston, and Sir George W. Frye, of Godfrey De Bouillon Commandery, of Fall River—each of whom, with the exception of the two Knights last named, were accompanied by their wives. India was represented by V.E. Sir K. Arthur Saunders, Prior of the Grand Priory of Madras, India, and District Deputy Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of England in India.

Eminent Commander Bowden and the Officers and Knights of Palestine were ubiquitous, and unwearying in their exertions to promote the happiness of all participants, and their efforts for this Eighth Annual Reception were crowned with success. Long live Palestine Commandery, No. 18, Knights Templar!—Keystone.

AN INQUIRY.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Can any of your readers enlighten me with regard to the general practice in reference to Lodge Benevolent Funds? First, Will Grand Lodge sanction a Bye-law embodied in the General Bye-laws of the Lodge—1. Establishing such a Fund; 2. Fixing the proportion of subscriptions; 3. Setting forth the sources from which the money is to come—collections from members and guests after or during banquets; 4. Constituting the body to administer the Fund? Such a Bye-law I fancy gives the Lodge something of the semblance of a Friendly or Benevolent Society, and I cannot but think that it is better altogether to omit it from the general Bye-laws and to deal with the matter by separate and distinct regulations.

Faithfully and fraternally yours,

LUX.

INSTALLATION MEETINGS, &c.

TEMPLE LODGE, No. 101.

THE installation meeting of this old and popular Lodge was held on Tuesday, 2nd inst., at the Ship and Turtle, Leadenhall-street, when there was a goodly muster of brethren and visitors, under the presidency of the retiring Worshipful Master, Bro. E. J. Altman, who was well supported by his Officers. Amongst the array of Visitors were Bros. Hyde Clarke P.D.G.M. of Columbia, Kempton W.M. Temple Bar Lodge, Capt. Pash W.M. Fitzroy Lodge, Ansell P.G.D. Grand Lodge of Turkey, Capt. Durrant P.M. Lewis Lodge, Gellion P.M. Hyde Park Lodge, Edwards P.M. 917, Snellgrove 907, Butcher 569, Birkett 569, Nelson Reed P.M. 1592, S. Temple 569, Llewellyn 12, Oakshott 1058, Martin P.M. 23, Hellier 1624, Walton 1257, Butt 1579, Stacey 575, and many others. Lodge opened, and after the transaction of routine business, which included the adoption of a satisfactory report from the Auditors, Brother T. A. Bullock, Superintendent of the Eastern Telegraph Company, Old Broad-street was presented for the benefit of installation, the ceremony being most efficiently performed by the outgoing Worshipful Master. On the re-admision of the brethren, the newly-installed Master was proclaimed and saluted with the customary honours in the three degrees, and he then proceeded to invest his Officers for the ensuing year, the collars being thus bestowed:—Bros. Altman I.P.M., E. S. Lardner S.W., Round J.W., Reynolds P.M. Sec., J. Bond P.M. Treasurer, Beard S.D., Wilson J.D., Bagley I.G., Hastelow D.C., Williams W.S., Potter Tyler. The addresses to the Master, Wardens, and Brethren were delivered with much ability and elocutionary effect by Bro. Altman, his working eliciting expressions of admiration. A handsome Past Master's jewel was presented to the retiring Worshipful Master as a mark of esteem, and in recognition of the efficient manner in which he had discharged the duties of his office during the year. At the conclusion of the business the brethren partook of a sumptuous banquet, which was served for the first time in the new and splendid rooms of the Ship and Turtle, under the admirable superintendence of Bro. Ashby, whose arrangements for the comfort and enjoyment of the brethren gave unqualified satisfaction. At dessert the Worshipful Master gave the Queen and the Craft, the toast being followed by the National Anthem; after which he proposed the Most Worshipful Grand Master H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, K.G., which was loyally received. He then gave the Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers Present and Past, in doing which he spoke of the ability and judgment with which the affairs of Grand Lodge were administered by the rulers of the Craft. Bro. Hyde Clarke P.D.G.M. of Columbia, in responding, eulogised the Temple Lodge both for its traditions in the past, and its sound position and excellent prospects at the present time. He also congratulated the officers and brethren upon the admirable and efficient manner in which the ceremonies of the day had been performed, and concluded by wishing for Bro. Bullock a very happy and prosperous year of office. The Immediate Past Master, in proposing the health of the Worshipful Master, alluded to the creditable manner in which Bro. Bullock had passed through the minor offices of the Lodge, and expressed his firm conviction that he would fulfil the duties of the chair with honour to himself and with satisfaction to the brethren. The Worshipful Master, in acknowledging the compliment paid to him, said he regarded it as most auspicious for any Master to be so well supported by the Officers and members of the Lodge. His conviction was at least equal to his hope that their distinguished Visitors would leave them that evening with favourable impressions formed by the work they had witnessed in the Temple Lodge. For himself, he regretted exceedingly that his experience as a Mason, in his own opinion, scarcely fitted him for the exalted position to which it had pleased the brethren to elect him; still he could not but be gratified with the unanimity with which that honour had been conferred upon him. Their distinguished Visitor, Bro. Hyde Clarke, was singularly competent, by his experience in many parts of the world, to judge of the merits of any Lodge; he had in his capacity of District Grand Master visited the four quarters of the globe; and the complimentary way in which he had spoken of the working of the Temple Lodge could not fail to be highly gratifying to himself (the speaker) as it must have been to all the Officers and brethren present. He hoped he might realise the wish which had been expressed by the proposer of the toast that he might enjoy a happy and prosperous year of office, and promised to use his utmost efforts for the promotion of the welfare of the Temple Lodge. He then proposed the I.P.M. and Installing Master, and in doing so paid a deserved compliment to Bro. Altman for the ability with which he had carried out the duties of the chair during his year of office, and the splendid manner in which he had performed the installation ceremony that day. The toast was acknowledged by Bro. Altman, who thanked the brethren heartily for the tangible recognition they had made of the services he had been able to render to the Lodge. For the Visitors, who received a most cordial greeting, Bros. Ansell P.G.D. Turkey, Capt. Pash P.M., and Capt. Durrant P.M. responded, in suitable terms. The W.M. coupled the toasts of the Past Masters and the Secretary and Treasurer, for which responses were made by P.M.'s J. Bond and Flack. The W.M., in proposing the Officers of the Lodge, made happy allusion to the admirable way in which the whole of the Officers discharged their duties on all occasions, and congratulated the Lodge, in anticipation, upon having, in their Senior Warden, Bro. Lardner, a Master to follow him (the speaker) next year. He could not resist the temptation to specially refer to the working of their Junior Warden, whom he ventured to predict would, in his turn, fill the chair when it became vacant in a manner seldom, if ever, excelled by any Master of the Temple Lodge. Bro. Lardner having replied, the list was appropriately concluded by the Tyler. During the evening there were excellent songs and recitations, amongst those who contributed to the enjoyment of the company being Bros. Frank Williams, H. J. Reynolds, E. Lardner, A. Beard, S. Temple, Birkett, &c. A most agreeable and harmonious evening was passed.

ST. GERMAIN'S LODGE, No. 566.

THE annual meeting of this Lodge, for the installation of the Worshipful Master elect, Bro. the Rev. Henry Greeves P.M. P.P.G.C. North and East Yorkshire (Vicar of Wistow), and the investment of Officers was held in the Lodge room at Selby, on Friday, the 14th instant. The Installing Master was the D.P.G.M., Bro. Dr. Pearson Bell P.G.D. England. The following is a list of the Officers:—Bros. George Dixon Todd I.P.M., W. N. Cheeseman S.W., T. G. P. Barlow J.W., Rev. Thomas Cheese, B.A., Chaplain, G. W. Hudson Treasurer, W. Rawling P.P.G.O. Secretary, Captain Hawdon S.D., Mark Scott P.M. J.D., Staniland P.M. P.P.G.S.B. D.C., W. Leatham and W. Staniland Stewards, Charles Turner I.G., Pearson Tyler. In the evening the brethren dined together at the Londesborough Arms Hotel.

CALLENDER LODGE, No. 1052.

THE regular meeting of this Lodge was held on Tuesday, the 16th instant, in the Masonic Rooms, King-street, Manchester, and more than unusual interest was attached to the proceedings of this meeting from the fact that a gentleman was being proposed as a candidate for initiation who a few weeks since had been refused by the Wolseley Lodge, because of the occupation he was engaged in. As will be seen from the following list of names a large number of visiting brethren attended:—Roger Walker W.M., Seth Wrigly S.W., John Jordrell J.W., Alfred B. Outram I.P.M. and Treasurer, D. Edwards Secretary, Ernest Jones S.D., Charles L. Griffin J.D., Charles J. S. Bennett Organist, B. White D.C., A. Williams I.G., James Sly Tyler; T. Campbell, T. W. K. Stunt, Frank Creane, N. Battersby, W. H. Clayton, D. Langridge P.M., Thomas Fallons P.M., John Smith, W. H. Lofthouse, W. Duncan P.M. Visitors—Bros. Broughton 1345, George Parker 1083, Charles Claber W.M. 467, J. Priestman 1011, John Bell I.P.M. St. John's, W. T. Norton P.M. 1161, John Wilson 1993, Thomas Quick jun., 1993, H. Darbyshire P.M. 1993, E. Nathan P.M. 1798, W. Allcock 322, T. H. Stansfield J.W. 167, John Hatton P.M. 1458, Ridgeway 1993, Erams 1009, A. H. Jeffries W.M. 1161, W. Holyock 1993. The Lodge was opened in due form and with solemn prayer by the Worshipful Master, Bro. Walker, at 7·15. The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. Edwards P.M. of the Lodge, and first Master of the Wolseley Lodge, proposed the candidate referred to in a well-considered speech, wherein he gave an eminently satisfactory account of the antecedents of the applicant. The proposition was seconded by the Worshipful Master, and at his request a visiting Past Master, who fills the office of D.C. of the Wolseley Lodge, strongly supported the proposition. The ballot was then taken, and it proved unanimous in favour of the candidate. With his usual courtesy the W.M. invited Bro. Edwards to perform the ceremony of initiation, which this distinguished Brother did in an able and eloquent manner. The working tools were afterwards explained by Bro. Jordrell J.W. most efficiently. The Lodge was then opened in the second degree, and Bro. John Smith having answered the necessary questions was entrusted, and he retired. The Lodge was again advanced, and Brother Smith was raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason by the Worshipful Master. The Lodge was then closed in the third and second degrees, when Bro. Fallas P.M. proposed a candidate for joining. Hearty good wishes were expressed by the visitors, and Lodge was closed in due form at 9·45. The brethren and visitors, who, before the commencement of business had partaken of a splendid knife and fork tea, provided by Mrs. Edwards, were now invited to the festive board, and were regaled in the heartiest manner. The usual Loyal and Masonic toasts having been gone through, Brother Edwards was deputed by the Worshipful Master to propose the toast of the newly initiated Brother. This he did in a long and earnest speech, his remarks being frequently applauded by the members and visitors present. Brother Watson replied in graceful terms. The toast of the newly raised brother was then proposed by Brother Jones, and responded to by Bro. Smith in a manner which led all present to suppose that in him they had a promising and enthusiastic Mason. The toast of the Visitors was proposed by Brother Langridge P.M., and responded to by a number of the visiting brethren, who expressed admiration at the excellent working of the W.M. and his Officers, and referred to the liberal catering at the festive board. After a most harmonious and enthusiastic meeting the proceedings were brought to a close at 11 p.m.

ALDERSGATE LODGE, No. 1657.

IT is some time since so numerous and representative a gathering of Freemasons has been witnessed in the City as that which took place on Monday evening last, at the Albion, Aldersgate-street, the occasion being the installation of Bro. Edward Young Jolliffe P.M. 1400 as Worshipful Master, in succession to Bro. W. H. Froom. This Lodge, although comparatively young, has displayed the most gratifying evidences of vitality and progress, and numbers in its ranks many prominent members of the Craft, including the Lord Mayor; the Past Grand Treasurer of England (Bro. J. Derby Allcroft), and representatives both of Grand Lodge and of the Corporation of the City of London. By its steady and consistent support of the Charities attached to the Masonic Fraternity, it has already gained an enviable prestige amongst the metropolitan Lodges, and the assemblage on Monday evening of so many Grand Officers and others holding high rank in the Craft gave the most satisfactory evidence of the position which has already been gained by the Aldersgate Lodge. The brethren assembled soon after five o'clock, when Lodge was opened under the presidency of the retiring Master, Bro. W. H. Froom, who was supported by Bros. S. White I.P.M., E. Anderton S.W., J. Renals, C.C. (acting as J.W.), A. Brookman, C.C., P.M. Treasurer, Rev. Dr. P. H. E. Brette (of Christ's Hospital) P.G. Chaplain Middlesex Secretary, A. B. Hudson, C.C., J.D., J. Larkin D.C., F. Crockford I.G., C. W. Lovett Organist, E. F. Brewster Fuller and M. R. Webb Stewards, G. Rawlinson W.S., Colonel S. H. Clarke P.G.D. Grand Secretary, and the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, F.S.A., I.P.M. 2020 (honorary members); P.M.'s J. D. Allcroft P.M. Past Treasurer. G. Kenning, Dr. S. Benton; Bros P. E. R. Saillard, T. Benskin, W. S. Chapman, H. Matthews, W. W. Thompson, J. Shotter, H. Thomas Tyler, and others. The minutes of the last regular Lodge meeting having been read and confirmed, the report of the Finance Committee was submitted and adopted. It was resolved that the sum of 25 guineas should be voted from the funds of the Lodge in aid of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. The retiring Worshipful Master then vacated the chair, which was assumed by the Grand Secretary, Colonel Shadwell H. Clerke, and Bro. Jolliffe was presented as Worshipful Master elect. A Board of Installed Masters was duly constituted, and the ceremony of installation was performed in a masterly manner. On the re-admission of the brethren, the newly-installed Master was proclaimed and saluted with the customary Masonic honours, after which he invested his Officers for the year, as follow:—Bros. W. H. Froom I.P.M., Edward Anderton S.W., George Vickery J.W., Alfred Brookman, C.C., P.M. Treasurer, Rev. Dr. P. H. E. Brette P.M. Secretary, Joseph Reynolds P.M. S.D., A. B. Hudson, C.C., J.D., Fredk. Crockford I.G., John Larkin D. of C., C. W. Lovett Organist, Edmond F. Brewster Fuller and Matthew R. Webb Stewards, Geo. Rawlinson W.S., H. Thomas Tyler. The addresses to the Master, Wardens, and Brethren were effectively delivered by the Installing Master, whose working was much admired. On the arrival of the Lord Mayor, he was greeted with the honours. His Lordship was informed that at the last meeting, on the proposition of Bro. A. Brookman, he had been unanimously elected an honorary member of the Lodge. The Lord Mayor briefly acknowledged the compliment which had been paid to him. At the conclusion of some routine business Lodge was closed, and the members and visitors adjourned to the banqueting room, where a sumptuous repast was provided under the personal superintendence of Bro. J. P. Swayne, the manager of the Albion. The usual prefatory toasts were duly honoured, that of the Grand Officers being responded to by Bro. Colonel Sir F. Burdett Prov. Grand Master of Middlesex. The Immediate Past Master, Bro. Froom, in proposing the health of the Worshipful Master, felt assured they would receive the name of Bro. Jolliffe with enthusiasm, for no member had ever been placed in the chair of that Lodge with more hearty goodwill on the part of the brethren. Bro. Jolliffe was the I.P.M. of the Thames Valley Lodge, and also held high office in the Neptune Lodge; and they most all congratulate him upon the position he had now attained in Aldersgate. He had been asking himself how it was that Bro. Jolliffe had risen to that popularity, and he thought he saw it explained in the motto inscribed upon the banner which hung behind the Master's chair, Tant que je puis—"I do as much as I can." Had not Bro. Jolliffe been always doing as much as he could for Freemasonry in general, and this Lodge in particular? He was the most unselfish man they had ever met, working for the benefit of all around him. With such a character he thought he could ask the brethren to join with him in drinking to the health of their Worshipful Master in a bumper, wishing him health and prosperity during his year of office. Bro. Jolliffe, in acknowledging the cordiality with which the toast had been received, said he had the pleasure of being invited here (on the night this Lodge was consecrated) by an old friend of his, the present Master of St. Botolph. Since then he had received nothing but kindness from the whole of the brethren. He considered it to be a very great honour to be elected to the chair, and he only hoped that during his year of office he should so manage the affairs of the Lodge that when he left it they would speak as favourably of him as they had done that night. He then proposed the health of the Installing Master, to whom he considered the Lodge was under a great obligation for coming amongst them, knowing the many engagements the Grand Secretary had. No one was more welcome at their meetings than was Bro. Colonel Shadwell Clerke, and he might come amongst them even more frequently in the future. Colonel Shadwell H. Clerke suitably acknowledged the toast. The Worshipful Master, in proposing the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, said that night they were honoured by the presence of his Lordship, and meeting, as they did, in his own ward—he being one of their honorary members, and several of their members being also connected with that ward—they felt it a great compliment that his Lordship should have come amongst them that evening. When they considered the many onerous duties that were connected with the office of Chief Magistrate of the City of London, they must regard it as a great favour that he should attend their installation meeting. He would only add a wish that Lord Mayor Staples might have the best of health given him to continue the functions of the high position which he had so ably fulfilled up to the present time. The Lord Mayor thanked the brethren very much indeed for the manner in which they had received the toast, and if he might be allowed to make one remark with reference to what the Worshipful Master had said when he spoke of the onerous duties the Lord Mayor had to perform, he hoped Bro. Jolliffe did not think that one of them was to have the pleasure of meeting the brethren of the Aldersgate Lodge that night. He assured them it afforded him the utmost pleasure and satisfaction to have the opportunity of meeting the brethren of this Lodge, because there were so many of them whom he reckoned amongst his personal friends. The Lodge had a resting-place in his own ward, and all the associations, even to the little emblem that was upon the outside of their regalia, showed Aldersgate in all its beauty. He used the term advisedly. They had an illustration of what Alders Gate was when his fellow-citizens in the ward did him the honour of erecting a fac-simile of that ancient structure at the time he passed through the City as Lord Mayor. He appreciated that compliment very highly indeed, and appreciated it still. It was only a proof, if proof indeed were needed, of the feeling existing between himself and his neighbours in the ward for many years. He felt pleased at their spontaneous offer to elect him an honorary member of this Lodge, an honour which he did not expect, but which he highly valued; and he desired to see the continued prosperity of the Aldersgate Lodge. He was P.M. of another Lodge in the same ward, and he was glad to see the harmony which existed between the two. He trusted that Aldersgate ward, whether represented by the Aldersgate Lodge or the St. Botolph, would always continue to flourish in harmony, peace, and goodwill. He did not know there was any particular reason why the Lord Mayor should be Master of a Lodge, and he did not know that history gave them any precedent on that subject. But of late years they had had a fair number of Lord Mayors who presided over Masonic Lodges, and they had all been well spoken of and treated with respect. He hoped the same fate would be in store for him. The Worshipful Master next proposed the Visitors, and associated with the toast the names of Bros. General Laurie Grand Master of Nova Scotia, F. A. Philbrick Grand Registrar, J. C. Parkinson P.G.D., and W. W. Martin W.M. of the Thames Valley Lodge, who responded. The Worshipful Master gave the health of the Immediate Past Master and Past Masters of the Lodge, remarking that they were fortunate in having so many of the veterans present that evening. They spared neither time nor trouble in doing all they could for the benefit of the Lodge, and on this occasion he believed all the Past Masters of the Lodge were in attendance. As to the Immediate Past Master, whose name he would couple with the toast, he could say a great deal, but Bro. Froom said to him, in the proverbial word of Punch, "Don't!" Bro. Froom said the Past Masters, one and all, desired to do all they could to promote the welfare of the Lodge, and would render what counsel and assistance they could to the Worshipful Master during his year of office. In his capacity as I.P.M. he had been making some inquiries as to what his duties might be; and the only thing he could learn was that he was to support the Master whenever called upon. He assured Brother Jolliffe that he, as well as the other Past Masters, would be ever ready to support him to the utmost of their power during his year of office. In proposing the Officers of the Lodge the Master said he considered himself fortunate in being surrounded by such an efficient body; they were all thoroughly up to their work, and would discharge their duties well. Bro. E. Anderton S.W., whose name was coupled with the toast, said he had never accepted duty with more pleasure than at the present time, for their Worshipful Master had been associated with him in the work of the Lodge for many years. They had seen with interest and admiration the great amount of zeal and energy he had always thrown into the work, for the benefit of the Lodge and the Craft generally; and therefore it was they offered him their special congratulations upon having attained the position of Master of this Lodge. If anything could add to their satisfaction in this respect it was that Bro. Jolliffe had been installed in the presence of such a distinguished company. Nothing should be wanting on their part to continue to the end of his year of office the success which had so marked its commencement. Bro. J. Renals S.D. also responded. The Worshipful Master, in proposing the health of the Treasurer and Secretary, referred to the fact that Bro. Brookman was one of the first initiates in this Lodge, and had worked his way so well that now he held the honourable position of their Treasurer. He had discharged his duties with fervency and zeal, and was in all respects a model Officer. The duties of the Secretaryship some time ago became so heavy that he relieved Bro. Brette of them; but when it was the wish of the brethren that he (the speaker) should fill the chair, Bro. Brette came forward and said he would resume his old position. He spoke of the arduous duties both these Officers were called upon to perform, and concluded by eulogising the exertions of each in his respective sphere. Bro. A. Brookman, C.C., responding as a Past Master and Treasurer of the Lodge, said it would be in the recollection of the brethren that when election time was on in connection with the Lodge he was absent. He thought the office was one that might well be conferred upon another brother, as he had had so many honours "thrust upon him." He was the first of the initiates in this Lodge to reach the chair, and after the handsome treatment he then received, the brethren paid him the compliment to elect him as their Treasurer. Last year he thought the honour might be transferred, but in his absence the brethren again kindly re-elected him to the post, and he thanked them very much for the confidence they reposed in him. To be elected Treasurer of a Lodge was the greatest compliment in the power of the brethren to bestow upon one of their Past Masters, and especially in this Lodge, in which the office was at one time filled by that worthy and good philanthropist, Bro. John Derby Allcroft. When elected to succeed that brother, he felt it an especial honour, which he should appreciate as long as he lived. Still he should like that next year the office might pass from him; but, of course, having been re-elected, he was their servant, and as long as he remained in office he should endeavour to do his duty. Bro. the Rev. Dr. Brette P.M. acknowledged the compliment that had been paid to him as Secretary, and assured the brethren it would be his duty and pleasure to do everything in his power, if spared during the next two years, to support Bro. Jolliffe in the chair, and as I.P.M., and to do all he could to render his year a happy and prosperous one. During the evening a choice selection of vocal and instrumental music was given, under the direction of Bro. R. Raynham, of St. Paul's Cathedral, assisted by Masters Humm and Lewis, Bros. J. Hodges, A. L. Fryer, R. De Lacy, and W. Winn.—City Press.

"ILLUSTRATIONS."—Mr. F. G. Heath's new pictorial threepenny review will, in its second (March) number, include "A rout at Balaclava—1854," by the author of "Lorna Doone;" also engravings, from the most recent portraits, of Lord Salisbury and Mr. Gladstone.

A series of Masonic meetings will be held on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, 1st, 2nd, and 3rd March, at the Masonic Hall, Kidderminster, under the auspices of the Hope and Charity Lodge 377, and Lechmere Lodge 1874, on which occasion the Collection of Masonic Works, Medals of all countries, Prints, Engravings, China, made by Bro. George Taylor, Provincial Grand Secretary, will be on view, for the purpose of affording the brethren an opportunity of inspection, prior to the Province taking measures for acquiring the same. On Monday, 1st March, at half-past six, the meeting will be under the auspices of the Lechmere Lodge, No. 1874, when the Collection referred to above will in part be explained and described by Bro. W. J. Hughan P.M. 131 P.S.G.D. of England, &c. &c., especially in relation to the Four Grand Lodges and the United Grand Lodge of England. On Tuesday, 2nd March, at seven o'clock prompt, Bro. W. J. Hughan will lecture on the "Connecting Links between Ancient and Modern Freemasonry." Towards defraying the cost of these meetings, brethren are requested to purchase tickets, which may be obtained of the W.M. and Secretary of each Lodge, or of the Hon. Secretaries, at one shilling for each meeting. On Wednesday, 3rd March, at eight o'clock, a Masonic Ball will be held at the Town Hall, when brethren and their friends, who so desire, may view the Collection previously. Further particulars may be had of Bro. W. C. Awdry, or Bro. D. Mackay, Hon. Secs., Bank Buildings, Kidderminster.

Bro. Sir Francis Burdett, Prov. G. Master of Middlesex, in responding to the toast of the Grand Officers at the installation meeting of the Aldersgate Lodge, on Monday, the 15th instant, made a happy allusion to the scheme which is in course of being matured for constituting the Isle of Man a separate Province. We are accustomed to look upon the Isle of Man as a stepping-stone between England and Ireland, and although the sister Isle has a separate constitution, it has always worked in consonance with the Grand Lodge of England. The few Lodges, however, in the Isle of Man have now petitioned that they may have a Provincial Grand Master in their own island, and we cannot but congratulate them upon the prospect of their wishes being realised. There can be no question whatever that they will be able to rule their Province in a way that will be satisfactory to themselves, but that they will form an integral part of the Grand Lodge of England. The "House of Keys" as the Isle of Man is frequently called, will undoubtedly justify the confidence which the Grand Lodge is only too ready to repose in it, and we shall "only be too glad," in the words of Sir Francis, "to have the opportunity of receiving the Provincial Grand Master of the Isle of Man on the daïs of the Grand Lodge of England." As "one of us," the Manx brethren will no doubt support the Craft as firmly and as substantially as any other of the Provinces have done since we have become a United Grand Lodge. We can only hope that the wishes expressed by the Prov. Grand Master of Middlesex may be realised and that the new Province, when firmly established, as no doubt it will be in a very short time, will be attended with every success.

At the meeting to which we refer, Gen. Laurie, Grand Master of Nova Scotia, was very happy in his reply to the toast of the Visitors. Visiting this Lodge, he said, called to mind some of his earliest associations, and carried him back to the time when he heard a great deal of Aldersgate Ward—not of the Aldersgate Lodge, because it was not then in existence—when his uncle was Alderman of that ward, for thirty years. He did not know he had a right to assume that his name should, therefore, be associated with such a toast in the City of London, but after what had fallen from the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, who had alluded to the interest which the Corporation took in the Craft, and the high position many of its members occupied in it, he did so with much pleasure, inasmuch as his ancestral connection with the Aldermanic bench was an interesting association. He heard it stated by the Lecture Master, at the inauguration of the Grand Master's Chapter, that there were many points of connection between the Corporation and the City of London and the Craft. They could all readily concur in the objects of the great Charities, which afforded assistance to many who were deserving, and some who were not. He reiterated that there was a great resemblance between the Corporation and the Craft, and concluded a happy speech by expressing the hope that their interests might be buttressed and defended against all assailants.

The monthly meeting of the Board of Benevolence was held at Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday, 17th inst., when Bro. Joshua Nunn, the President, and Bros. J. Brett and C. A. Cottebrune, the two Vice-Presidents, occupied their respective chairs. Grants made at the former meeting having been confirmed, the list of new cases were taken into consideration. There were thirty-eight petitions before the Board, and of these thirty-four were relieved, with a total of £1015. The four remaining cases were deferred. Previous to the conclusion of the business, notice was given of a proposition, in the name of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales M.W.G.M., that a sum of two hundred guineas be voted towards the fund now being raised at the Mansion House, under the auspices of Bro. the Lord Mayor, towards relieving the distress among the unemployed of London.

We understand that Bro. Samuel Pope, Q.C., has retired from his candidature for the office of Grand Treasurer, for which he was nominated at the December Communication of Grand Lodge. There are, therefore, only two candidates now before the Craft, Bro. R. B. Martin P.M. and Treas. 1506, and Bro. D. P. Cama W.M. 2105.

We are assured our readers will not feel aggrieved with us for reproducing the following gracefully expressed compliment of our contemporary, the Keystone:—

"Our congratulations are fraternally extended to our excellent contemporary, the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, of London, as it enters upon its twenty-third volume of publication. It is ably conducted, very readable, and always instructive. It knows what to publish, and what to cast into the waste paper basket. Our English Brethren are especially fortunate in both of their Craft weeklies, which keep us and them properly informed concerning current Masonic thought and action in the great Masonic jurisdictions of England, Scotland and Ireland. We wish the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE increased success in dispensing Masonic light and knowledge."

The following Festivals were held at the Freemasons' Tavern during the week ending Saturday, 20th February 1886:—

Monday—Philanthropic Ball, Grand Master's Lodge, British Lodge. Tuesday—Cadogan Lodge, Enoch Chapter, Salisbury Lodge, Industry Chapter, Ebury Chapter. Wednesday—Buckingham and Chandos Lodge, Oak Lodge, Noviomagus, Hackney Carriage Proprietors. Thursday—Universal Lodge, St. Mary's Lodge, Great Northern Lodge, Globe Lodge, Holborn C.C. Ball. Friday—Jordan Lodge, Pilgrim Lodge. Saturday—Tottenham House Ball.

An interesting window has been erected in memory of Mrs. Houlbrook, who, it will be remembered, lost her life last year in the collision in the Irish Channel with her Majesty's ship Hecla. The window has been executed by Mr. Taylor, of Berners-street, for Christ Church, Hendon, where Mrs. Houlbrook resided, the subjects, "Faith and Charity," typically representing the virtues by which she had endeared herself in the neighbourhood.

Obituary.

RIGHT HON. LORD WAVENEY, P.G.M. SUFFOLK.

It is with extreme regret we have to record another death among the Provincial Grand Masters of England—Bro. the Right Hon. Lord Waveney, Masonic ruler of the county of Suffolk, died a few days since. By his decease Masonry loses one of its most popular chiefs; a brother who was honoured and revered throughout his district, and in every part of the country where he was known. He was truly "a fine old English gentleman, one of the olden time," a brother who thoroughly appreciated the teachings of Freemasonry, and who loved to see its lessons acted up to in the fullest sense. His connection with the Order dated back a considerable period; indeed, only at the last meeting of his Provincial Grand Lodge, held at Lowestoft, in July, he said, in response to the toast of his health, "he believed he was one of the oldest Masons in the county, having been initiated in the year 1828." He took a personal interest in the Masonic work of his district, and was never behind in his support of any worthy act proposed for the benefit of the brethren under his rule.

CHARITY—ITS MASONIC IMPORT.

CHARITY is a word that requires several forms of definition to express its full meaning. In one of its proper uses it points to that active beneficence which is exercised by those who seek to give help and relief to distressed humanity. It implies a practical ministry to the wants of the unfortunate; a willing service of benevolence performed as opportunity may offer; a giving and doing for the good of others according to whatever are the resources available. Charity, as thus defined, is a virtue specially commended in the teachings of Freemasonry, and its practice is enjoined upon every Craftsman.

The word may be used in another sense, however, and given a meaning which signifies vastly more of noble character and true service than is implied by the former rendering. Charity denotes a fundamental principle of generous thought and feeling—a disposition that disposes a man to be kind and forbearing to his associates, to regard their conduct in the best light possible, and to refrain from attributing to them base motives. It is a potential grace of character, always prompting the heart in which it bears rule "quietly to hear, kindly to judge." Such an one will put the best construction on the acts and motives of others, being moved to take an optimistic rather than a pessimistic view of man and the world.

A Brother who has become imbued with the true spirit of Freemasonry will manifest charity in this form of its expression. He will not exhibit that severity and haste of judgment which so often cuts to the heart, and accomplishes but little of good. He will remember how limited we are in the knowledge of men—that we cannot read their hearts—that we are unable to understand the motives, purposes and circumstances which may have influenced them, and hence will conclude that much of charitable judgment is demanded. Even where human conduct is clearly wrong—where there are just grounds of criticism and censure—a Brother in whom charity has come to be a ruling force ought to be generous, forbearing, forgiving. He who is hard and unpitying, severe and relentless, in his treatment of those who may have been at fault in some things, is no true representative of Freemasonry. The Craftsman who is under the control of enmity and resentment, so that he is pitiless in his judgment, never disposed to palliate offences or forgive the transgressor, and who despises those who fail to meet all the tests of his requirements, partakes more of the spirit of the world than of the spirit of that Fraternity in which he has taken membership. Most certainly he lacks that queenly grace of charity—to possess which is a better endowment of life than the understanding of all mysteries, for Charity is of God and the greatest of Heaven's gifts to man.—Freemasons' Repository.

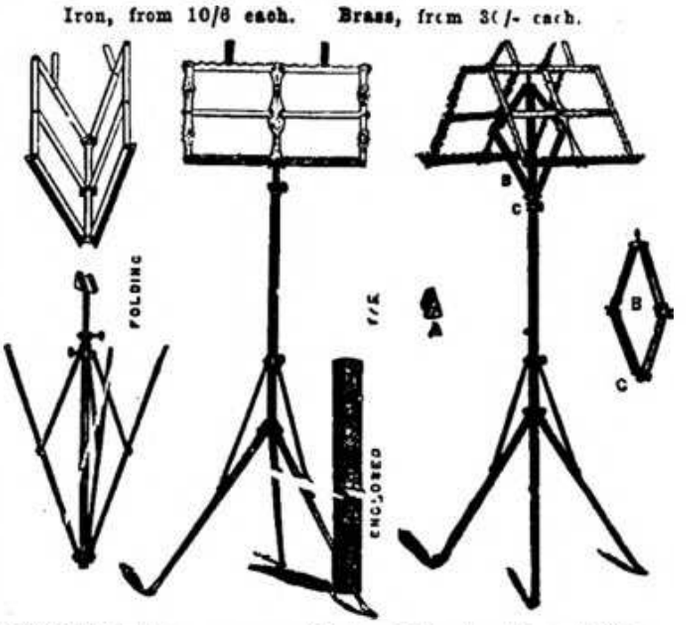
The Modern Kitchen Oracle. A culinary magazine. By Samuel Hobbs, formerly Chef de Cuisine to Messrs. Gunter and Co., of Berkeley Square. London: Dean and Son, 160a Fleet-street, E.C.

We have so many books on culinary subjects, under the comprehensive title of "cookery books," that one might almost imagine that our stock of information on the science of gastronomy was complete. But when such an experienced man as the chef de cuisine to "Gunter's" turns his attention to the subject we naturally expect a practical addition to the knowledge which has been imparted to us by compilers whose chief merit lies in theory. The great point aimed at by Mr. Hobbs is to tell his readers how to cook the most récherché dinners, and meals which shall be as little expensive as possible—the great fault of most of our cookery books being that the instructions given for manipulating the most ordinary dishes are too lavish for economical households. In this magazine, which is to be published in twelve sixpenny monthly parts, there will be given a menu for each month, with its requisition list, and also a list of dishes suitable for breakfast, luncheon, supper, and other collations. Clear directions are also given how to prepare each dish and its belongings, how to serve a dinner, large or small, and when to commence its preparation. It is pointed out that so many changes have taken place in the gastronomic tastes and habits of all classes of society that one-half the works on cookery hitherto attempted have become almost obsolete and out of date, many of them being written by foreigners, who did not know our tastes and proclivities in the way of food, and what is now promised and needed is a plain direction in culinary operation, divested of superfluous and expensive ornamentation. Forty years' experience in the best kitchens in the metropolis will be brought to bear to ensure the success of this work of information to those wishing to become accomplished cooks; and we predict for it an extensive circulation amongst those families to whom a properly-cooked and well-served dinner is an object of primary consideration in the daily routine.

Bow Bells Almanac for 1886. London: John Dicks, 313 Strand.

It seems rather late in the year to be in receipt of "annuals," but this production by Mr. Dicks is worthy of mention, if only for the artistic style in which it is got up, and the vast amount of information it contains. One reason, probably, for its apparently tardy issue is that it is made to include the official list of all the members elected to the new Parliament, also revised Peerage, and members of the Privy Council revised to date. This compendious almanac, which is profusely embellished with engravings, contains a great variety of useful and interesting information, and it is only on a par with the other marvellously cheap productions by this well-known publisher that so enormous and valuable a budget is presented to the public at the ridiculously low price of sixpence.

Printers', Stationers', and Kindred Traders' Effective Advertiser. London: Baker and Symes, 60 Ludgate-hill, E.C.



The seventeenth issue of this monthly trade circular is to hand, and it contains a variety of information and hints on matters in which the traders named are interested. The "trade notes" are crisp and up to date, and are written by one who evidently is conversant with the subject which he is called upon to treat of, while the "random papers," appropriately for this month, deal exclusively with valentines. There are papers on "International Contract," "Printing for Profit," "Cheap Books," and other miscellaneous subjects, all of which are of interest to those engaged in various branches of printing, stationery, and newspaper trades.

CENTENARY OF THE DOMATIC LODGE, No. 177.

A FESTIVAL in celebration of the completion of one hundred years of continuous working by the Domatic Lodge, now No. 177, took place on Friday, the 12th inst., at the Criterion, Piccadilly. It was found necessary to hold the meeting away from the regular home of the Lodge—Anderton's Hotel, Fleet Street—in consequence of the capabilities of that establishment being unequal to meet the requirements demanded by this special meeting. This will be readily understood when we say that accommodation had to be made for the comfort of two hundred and fifty guests, and ample as are the capabilities of Brother Clemow's establishment for ordinary occasions, this special gathering was too much for him to undertake, the brethren therefore assembled at the Criterion, and there the company was so numerous as even to tax this popular establishment to its fullest extent. The following is a list of those present:—

The Lodge having been formally opened and the minutes confirmed, the Worshipful Master proceeded to raise Bro. Webster, after which he initiated Messrs. T. H. Hobbs, R. Williamson, J. Anley jun., and J. J. Elliott, and then passed Bros. T. W. Trodd, R. Hewetson, A. F. Peacock, and E. A. G. Smith (members of the Lodge), together with Brother J. H. Laurie, son of the Grand Master of Nova Scotia, who is at present on a visit to this country. Before the Lodge was closed Col. Clerke rose; he had the pleasure of presenting to the W.M. the first centenary jewel of the Domatic Lodge. The Lodges which had attained the hundredth year of their existence now getting more numerous than was formerly the case. Whatever pride and pleasure he had on the present occasion he thought it must be a still greater pride and pleasure to the W.M. to be the recipient of the first centenary jewel which the Lodge, on the completion of its centenary, voted him. He was instructed to say that this was given as a very slight recognition by the Lodge of the services Bro. H. Nelson Price had during his tenure of office rendered to the Lodge, and to assure him they felt that during the remainder of his term he would give them as much satisfaction as hitherto. The brethren had asked him, in their name, and on their behalf, to present Bro. Price with this first centenary jewel, and it was unnecessary for him to say that he accepted the duty with great pleasure indeed, and he congratulated the W.M. on being President of the Lodge on such an interesting occasion. Bro. Price, in thanking Col. Clerke and the Lodge, said he felt it a very high honour to receive this jewel, and the honour was greatly enhanced by the very happy terms with which the Grand Secretary had accompanied the presentation. He trusted Col. Clerke's remarks would be verified; he should certainly do everything he possibly could worthily to fill the high position in which he was placed, and to sustain the Lodge in the exalted position it now occupied in the Craft; at the same time he should study the harmony and happiness of the brethren. Bro. Spurrell then read the Grand Lodge warrant authorising the members of the Lodge so long as they continued subscribing members of the Lodge to wear the centenary jewel. Shortly afterwards the Lodge was closed, and the brethren assembled in the large dining hall to banquet. When this was disposed of the toasts were proposed. After the Queen and the Craft had been duly honoured, the Worshipful Master said the Prince of Wales was the most popular man in the world. During the eleven years His Royal Highness had occupied the position of Grand Master Freemasonry had made great strides, not only in the number of Lodges and the number of members of the Craft, but also in the amount distributed by its Charitable Institutions. He was sure that while His Royal Highness was able to devote time to Freemasonry it would flourish even more in the future than it had in the past. Bro. Ferguson proposed the Pro Grand Master the Earl of Carnarvon, the Deputy Grand Master the Earl of Lathom, and the rest of the Grand Officers Present and Past;—brethren who had taken so much interest in the welfare of the Craft, and brought it to its present state of perfection. They had the respect of every one living, wherever the English language was spoken. Wheresoever Masonry existed the Grand Lodge of England was held in the highest respect. That had arisen, doubtless, from the fact of such distinguished and earnest brethren presiding over it. Both in the past and the present such brethren had given their careful and anxious thoughts to promoting the interests of Freemasonry. Those who had the privilege of attending Grand Lodge had seen the manner the Earl of Carnarvon presided; he had set an example to every one who might preside over any great assembly. In coupling the name of the Grand Secretary with this toast, he reminded the brethren that Bro. Col. Shadwell H. Clerke was universally known. He had endeavoured to assist the Craft in every way, and when he was appealed to on any point of difficulty he solved the matter in the most satisfactory manner. It was clear to the brethren he had Freemasonry at heart. Col. Clerke in reply said, he was not in the least prepared to return thanks for this toast, because their worthy and distinguished brother on his left (Bro. Philbrick) was his senior, and to him should have fallen the duty to answer. But the Grand Registrar was about to speak on another subject. Thanking the brethren for the compliment just paid, he could not but remark that the toast was a most important one, because it comprised such a large number of good and worthy gentlemen, of every social position in life. Not to speak of those distinguished noblemen, Lord Carnarvon and Lord Lathom, there was a large array of Present and Past Grand Officers, who were only too grateful for the kind recognition they always received from their brethren in Masonry. They had done their best to promote its interests, and they were fortunate enough to be selected by the M.W.G.M. from time to time to receive distinction at his hands. He could only hope that there were many in the room to whom the distinction would come in the fulness of time. The G. Officers were always happy to receive recognition of their services, and it was a great pleasure to those who were present that night to have visited the Lodge. It was certainly a pleasure to him, and he knew it was to the Grand Registrar. The occasion was exceedingly interesting—it was the centenary year of the Lodge. At the present day there frequently were such celebrations, because Lodges were working up to their one hundredth year. But it was not always that a Lodge which dated back 100 years could prove its centenary, because at headquarters they had not only to be satisfied that a Lodge was founded 100 years ago, but also that it had worked continuously 100 years. Many a Lodge had been refused its centenary warrant because it could not show its centenary existence. The Domatic Lodge, however, was fortunate, as it was seen at a glance that it had worked continuously for a century. It was, therefore, entitled to its centenary warrant, and it had received it without delay. The Grand Officers were present that night to congratulate the Lodge very heartily indeed, and this he did in the name of the absent as well as in the name of those who were present. They also wished the Lodge every success in the future, and hoped the day would come, though none of those present would see it, when the Domatic Lodge would celebrate its second centenary. Bro. Pierpoint I.P.M. rose to exercise the privilege which his position allowed him, the privilege was a most pleasurable one; to propose the health of their worthy and highly esteemed Worshipful Master. The W.M. that evening stood in a position of which he was very proud, he was well known to the brethren of the Domatic Lodge, if not to the Visitors. His genial and cordial manner, both in Lodge and out of it, had gained for him the good will and affection of the brethren. They had in him a Master they were all proud of. He could only wish him a most pleasant year of office. From his Officers he would receive every support, as well as from every member of the Lodge. The Worshipful Master, in reply, said there were some periods in a man's life-time—in the history of it at all events—when he could scarcely be coherent; he did not mean after dinner; but when a man had a certain amount of honour placed upon him it was a very difficult matter for him to find words adequately to express his high appreciation. Now, he had had great honour placed upon him that evening, more especially by the way in which the I.P.M. had proposed this toast. He could only say that if he was half as good as Bro. Pierpoint had represented to them he should consider himself a better man than he thought he was. However, he should endeavour to be so. As far as the Domatic Lodge was concerned, he was quite sure it would be his study to use his best endeavours to keep it in the high position in which it now stood; also to do all in his power to enhance the comfort and happiness of the brethren. While the Lodge remained in the same harmonious condition, while the same unanimity of opinion continued, it would be as prosperous as it was now. It was a great honour to be the Worshipful Master of the Lodge for such an important period. He hoped he should be able to get through the year to the satisfaction of the brethren and reflect a little credit on himself. Bro. F. A. Philbrick, Q.C., Grand Registrar said a great honour had been conferred upon him by the Worshipful Master, an honour of which he felt duly sensible—to propose Prosperity to the Lodge, the centenary of which they were met to celebrate. Possibly the W.M., and if not he, certainly some of the brethren whom he had the privilege of addressing, had either said, or heard said, that the toast of the evening was about to be proposed, and he had heard distinguished orators advance many and great reasons why the toast the company was being asked to honour should be esteemed the toast of the evening. He would advance no reasons, he would utter no word, to commend to the brethren this as the toast of the evening; it recommended itself in that assembly. They who were met after 100 years of the world's history, of the history of Masonry passed by, to celebrate the anniversary of the inauguration of this Lodge, at such a distant period, knew well enough that such a meeting must be of rare occurrence in the annals of the Craft, must be singularly noted in the records of Masonry, and must commend itself to all who were present to take part in it. As the Grand Secretary had remarked, the course of the Domatic Lodge had been plain and clear. It had run in an unbroken channel for a century; it began life before the great disturbance which led to the first French Revolution startled the world; it had seen the kingdoms of Europe shaken and the map of Europe divided and divided again; it had witnessed the struggle for existence which their kingdom waged against the great conqueror of Europe; it had seen how the powers of Europe were allied against this country; it witnessed the overthrow of 1814; it passed the hundred days; and he had no doubt if they could go back seventy years it took its own part in the rejoicings after Waterloo. He hoped he might be pardoned if he appeared to dilate on topics of ancient history; but when they celebrated one hundred years, they meant all that those one hundred years contained. When, after that great conflict, this nation emerged with honour to itself, and at the head of the powers of Europe, and all that depended for inward life and for national vigour upon the maintenance and the continuance of the English nation, it revived and flourished afresh; he made no excuse in an assembly of Englishmen for reminding them of that which was dear to their forefathers, which was an object of solicitude to them; but which had placed us in the position we now so proudly filled. And, turning from the history of the nation to the history of the Lodge, he congratulated the Worshipful Master and the brethren on the position which at the end of this century the Lodge found itself in. It was said by those who understood horticulture that the fruit of an old tree showed all the qualities of the race, and the best qualities in perfection. He congratulated the W.M. and the brethren of the Lodge that the old tree could still bear fresh fruit, and he trusted that the motto of horticulture would be realised in the Lodge, and that the initiates of that night would bear out the principles that had been inculcated in them, and which were taught in that Lodge. It had had a long career, and he was pleased to see that a worthy historian had recorded so much of the annals of the Lodge. In the interesting résumé placed in their hands he saw some things which would do honour to the Lodge. Some, however, were different to what he had seen in some Lodge annals. In such he and Col. Shadwell H. Clerke had sometimes seen how brethren had managed to get warrants and contrived to dispose of one of them, which was utterly opposed to anything now considered right; but he had no doubt was perfectly convenient and acceptable to the brethren of the past; he had seen how, in the graphic records of the Lodge—and our Lodge histories were like our English histories—some brethren present, no doubt, had watched or seen what had been done with regard to the Commission which had been looking at the records and manuscripts in our English families. Some might have noticed how the Commission had found among our English annals and in the records of the country which still remained, some of the most interesting details, not merely of political, but of domestic life, which shed a light on the manners and customs of our ancestors, and which, possibly, explained some of those things which we, as Englishmen, had a difficulty to explain unless we saw their origin. Now, he should be utterly puzzled if going from the Lodge that night there was any disturbance. He did not suppose there would be one, or that the riots would have got so far as the sacred precincts of a Lodge, but if a brother was to say to somebody else that he was a "snake against the Lodge," he did not know that he should attach any particular meaning to it unless he had the book; but here he found, in the interesting and graphic records of nearly a century ago, that a brother who did not belong to the Lodge had disturbed its harmony and told a brother of the Lodge that he was a snake against it: the words as recorded by the Secretary were—"he was a snake agen him,"—and the self-contained dignity of the Lodge was sufficient to say that the visitor who had thus committed himself should merely be punished by exclusion from the Lodge for the time being. He thought this showed not only great courage and great fidelity in the Secretary of that period to record that which a century afterwards became an interesting event, but it showed that the Lodge at that time was sufficiently founded, and felt sufficient strength in its own dignity, to be able to deal with an incident of that kind as it so thoroughly deserved. Having seen, by the kindness of the Lodge's present admirable Secretary, a proof of this history in advance, he was enabled to cast his eye through it before he came to the Lodge, and he could say, as it began so it was worthily carried on, and he thought the success it had attained at the present moment was the best guarantee for the usefulness of the Lodge and for the fidelity with which it had adhered to the great traditions. Apologising for detaining them so long, he hoped they would forgive him for having made remarks upon the interesting records he had referred to. It was not every Lodge, nay indeed, there were very few Lodges in the Craft, that presented a perfect record like this one, and he scarcely knew one that had added to a mere record of events in Masonry matters like those he had called attention to what gave a life and a real interest to the dry minutes of ordinary proceedings. And now he would turn to the present. He would venture to offer to the brethren the hearty congratulations of the Grand Officers and Visitors on the position of the Lodge, on the numerous gathering, and the Masonic spirit which animated it. They were met on an occasion which was rare in the annals of Freemasonry. When, with a light heart and an easy voice, Bro. Col. Shadwell Clerke talked about these incidents getting common—well, for him to celebrate a hundredth birthday might not be a rare occurrence, but for him (Bro. Philbrick) it was, and he felt the honour of the occasion, and that it was worthy of remark; and when he saw the great gathering, and witnessed the interest the brethren took in the proceedings, he felt that it was no common subject of interest that had brought them together. They were met to wish prosperity to the Lodge, and to congratulate it upon the hundredth year of its existence. They hoped also that it would celebrate its bi-centenary which had already been indicated. Long might it continue to cherish the true principles of Freemasonry, and to have worthy Masons belonging to it; long might it recruit its members from men who would do justice to it, and in time rise up to administer its concerns with faithfulness and fidelity; long might its success be great, and long might its prosperity continue. Bro. G. Everett Past Master and Treasurer responded; he said to be the mouthpiece of the Lodge was an honour, and he thanked the brethren heartily and cordially for the way they had received the toast. It was a great day in the Lodge's history. On the occasion of the attainment of the 100th year of the Lodge's existence it could not but be gratifying to the feelings of all concerned, especially to those who had been so many years connected with it, as were those on his right, to go into the Lodge history. In December a hundred years ago the Lodge met at a small house—the Ship, in Little Turnstile. Only Operative Masons could belong to it. During the first year of its existence two persons were proposed as joining members who were not Operative Masons. In 1787, the second year of the Lodge's existence, the Lodge was not opened on one night because the landlady was sick. On another occasion, in 1792, one Adams, Esq., applied for relief, and was relieved to the extent of 8s 2d. The Lodge from time to time removed from one house to another, till it got to the Green Dragon, Fleet-street, to the Falcon, in Fetter-lane, where it was held for 20 years, and where he (Bro. Everett) became a member in 1885. It afterwards went to Anderton's Hotel, where it had been for the last twenty-two years, and where it had prospered. But of all this he did not propose to speak. The brethren would be able to read this for themselves. At the present time it had 118 members, and the Lodge paid every year on an average £45 to Grand Lodge. For the last seven years they had voted twenty-five guineas to each of the Charities, and he hoped they would continue to be able to do so. In spite of all that they held themselves well. They had very much to be proud of, for all this was done out of a subscription of two and a half guineas a year. Bros. R. Williams, T. H. Hobbs, J. Anley, and Elliott responded for the Initiates. Bro. Foulger P.M. proposed the Visitors, and Brother General Laurie, G.M. of Nova Scotia, in responding, said that thirty-two years ago he was initiated in Lodge No. 176, so that he was not a stranger to this jurisdiction, as that Lodge was under the Grand Lodge of England. He then thanked the Lodge for having given his son the degree. He could have given him a dispensation for taking his three degrees before leaving Nova Scotia; but he thought it would not be right to allow any ties of blood to interfere with the usual course. The W.M. next proposed the Past Masters, 13 of whom were present. They attended numerously, and they always endeavoured to be of service to the Lodge. There were no less than 101 members of the Lodge present, which was an extraordinary coincidence on the 100th year of its existence; 100 members gave one for each year, and there was one over for the ensuing year. Bro. W. F. Smith responded. Bro. E. White P.M. proposed the Treasurer and Secretary, both of whom had worked very hard, and with a great deal of energy, to promote the welfare of the Lodge on all occasions; he referred to the fact that there were one hundred and forty-eight members of the Lodge to show what a vast deal of work there must be for these Officers. Bros. Everett and Morris responded. Brother Herbig P.M. proposed the Officers; he said there had been a succession of good Officers. No brother accepted office who did not feel himself bound to attain proficiency. If this continued the prestige of the Lodge must be maintained. The S.W. and Bro. Spurrell D.C. responded, and the Tyler's toast closed the proceedings. During the evening some excellent singing was given—under the direction of Bro. Riechelmann—by Madame Riechelmann, and Bros. W. F. Packer and Franklin Clive. The arrangements for the comfort of the brethren and the success of the festival were unexceptionable, and reflected the greatest credit on Brother J. E. Spurrell D.C. and acting Steward, who left no stone unturned to give satisfaction to the members and visitors to the Lodge.

WHARTON LODGE, No. 2045.

THE anniversary of this popular young Lodge was celebrated on Tuesday, when the first Worshipful Master, Bro. W. Side, installed his successor, Bro. James Jackson Gawith. Lodge was opened at five o'clock at the White Hart Hotel, Willesden, where Bro. Side was supported by Bros. F. Davison P.G.D. (hon. member), the Officers and members of his Lodge, and the following Visitors: Bros. F. Briggs 25, Lewis Ascott P.M. 733, John Vale 901, J. Stephens 177 W.M. 1425, S. R. Walker P.M. 733, G. Davis P.M. 1632, D. Hughes P.M. 901, James Crook 1637, John Hughes P.M. 901, W. W. Stanger P.M. 197 P.G.S., A. F. Peacock 177, W. M. Stiles P.M. 1507, W. W. Morgan P.M. 211, G. A. Duke 1608, W. F. Boydell 1981, F. A. Russell 1996, J. Chivers 901, H. T. Reed 1287, F. C. Frye P.M. 1642. After the minutes of the Lodge meeting of the 20th of October 1885, and those of Emergency Meeting of February 1886, had been read for confirmation and passed, the Report of the Audit Committee was presented. The period comprised in the first year's (so-called) working covered 18 months, and undoubtedly the first W.M. has made good use of his opportunities. The Lodge now boasts of something like forty members on its roll; it has defrayed all liabilities attaching to its formation, and the second Master inaugurates his reign with a substantial balance to the good. In due course our Rev. Bro. Wharton, after whom the Lodge is named, presented the W.M. elect, and Bro. Side performed the ceremony of installation in an eminently satisfactory way. After the Board of Installed Masters had been closed, the Worshipful Master was saluted in the three degrees, and he appointed the following as his Officers: Bros. D. Stroud S.W., W. Thomas J.W., J. C. Wharton P.M. Treasurer, J. R. Mills Secretary, A. R. Brode S.D., W. H. Hargrave J.D., J. Salmon I.G., C. J. Wharton D.C., and G. Thomas Tyler. Brother Side then completed the installation ceremony, giving a scholarly interpretation of the addresses to Master, Wardens and Brethren, and was rewarded for the services he had rendered to the Lodge, as Founder and first Worshipful Master, by the presentation of an elegant Past Master's jewel; this he gracefully but briefly acknowledged. Bro. Wharton then announced that he had undertaken a Stewardship for the Royal Masonic Benevolent, and pointed out the absolute needs of this Institution at the present time. His appeal was rewarded by a vote of ten guineas from the Lodge funds. Hearty good wishes having been tendered, and other routine matters duly disposed of, the Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet. At the conclusion of the repast Bro. Gawith, on rising to propose the toast of the Queen, intimated that it was his intention to adhere strictly to short speeches during his term of office. The toast having been honoured, it was followed by that of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales Grand Master, the Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers Present and Past. With the toast was coupled the name of Bro. F. Davison P.G.D., who in reply remarked that the capital music he had just listened to had somewhat diverted his attention. He had really not had an opportunity to consider the remarks he should offer in reply; however, it would be conceded on all hands that the Prince of Wales was a thorough Mason at heart. He had many calls on his time, but the readiness with which he on all occasions responded to the exigencies of his public duties was thoroughly appreciated by Englishmen. As Freemasons we could not possibly have a better Master than the Prince of Wales. On behalf of the Grand Officers he thanked the brethren most heartily for the reception they had given to the toast, and, personally, he was much gratified at the success the brethren had achieved. He was present at the consecration of the Lodge, and trusted it would long continue its career of prosperity. The present Worshipful Master was an old friend, and he augured much happiness for the brethren from Bro. Gawith's Mastership of the Lodge. Bro. Side proposed the health of the Worshipful Master, in brief but happy terms. After a song by Bro. Marshall—the Powder Monkey

—the Worshipful Master rose to respond. It gave him great pleasure to reply to the toast so kindly given by the Immediate Past Master. He (the W.M.) was but a young Mason, but he had had some experience, having served as Master in another Lodge. He was consequently a P.M., but he confessed he had not hitherto had much opportunity for working; still he trusted when occasion served he should be found capable of fulfilling his duties. He was one of the founders of the Lodge, had been its Secretary, and now, as its Master, the welfare of the Lodge should receive his best attention. Unfortunately, during the last year he had had the misfortune to break his leg, and he took this opportunity of acknowledging the kind assistance and ready help he had received at all times from Bro. Wharton. After a humorous song, admirably sung by Brother Thomas, Bro. Wharton proposed the health of Brother Side. When the present Worshipful Master presented the jewel to the Immediate Past Master he had referred to his so doing as being a sign of the decline of Bro. Side's reign, however, he had had eighteen months of active service, which had resulted in placing the Lodge, in which he (Bro. Wharton) took so much pride, on a sound and substantial basis. Brother Side had had an arduous time, but he had brought to bear upon his duties sound experience, which in the future would bear good fruit. Bro. Peacock next sang "Jack's Yarn," to the accompaniment of Brother Biggs, and then Bro. Side replied to the toast. He rose with some amount of diffidence, inasmuch as he had entered on a new capacity. It was some time since he had undertaken the duties of Immediate Past Master, but he hoped, with a little brushing up, to do what was required of him. As first Master and founder he was proud to see the position the Wharton Lodge had secured for itself during the time it had been under his government. His humble services would ever be at the command of the Lodge. He thanked the brethren heartily for the reception and support they had given him; this had enabled him to uphold the honour, dignity and reputation of Freemasonry. He trusted he might fully realise the kind aspirations of Brother Wharton, who, he thought, had said far too many kind things of him. For the Visitors Bros. Stephens, Stiles, Davis, and others replied. Bro. Wharton acknowledged the toast of Treasurer, and Bro. Thomas that of the Officers. Shortly afterwards the proceedings were brought to a conclusion. We congratulate our Rev. Bro. Wharton on the bright future which presents itself to the well wishers of the Lodge which bears his name.

ROYAL CLARENCE LODGE, No. 1823.

AN emergency meeting of this Lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Clare, on Tuesday, 2nd inst., when Bro. Thomas Stokoe was installed as Worshipful Master for the ensuing year. The retiring W.M., Bro. J. E. Barnes, presided, and the following brethren were present:—Bros. Rev. C. J. Martyn P.G.C. Eng. Dep. Prov. G.M. Suffolk, Rev. J. Sedgwick, D.D., P.M. 1823 P.P.G.C. Eng., C. H. Vincent P.M. 1823 P.G.R. Suffolk, S. C. Cooke P.M. 1823 P.G.J.D. Suffolk, Col. Herbert P.M. 178, Jos. Bell P.M. 1280 P.G.J.W. Essex, Rev. J. F. Wilkinson 1224 P.G.C. Suffolk, R. E. Cooper 938, B. H. Hurst 1224, F. W. Doubleday 85, Rev. B. B. Syer, C. S. Goodchild, Rev. J. R. M. Vatcher, W. L. Fenner, F. C. Wayman, W. J. Ward, A. Boa, C. F. Freeman. The ceremony of installation was impressively performed by Bro. Martyn, and the first duty of the newly-installed Master was to present to his predecessor, Bro. J. E. Barnes, a P.M.'s jewel, subscribed for by the Officers and brethren. The Worshipful Master appointed and invested his Officers, as follow:—Bros. Syer S.W., Goodchild J.W., Vatcher Chap., Tandy P.G.S.W. Essex Treasurer, Vincent Secretary, Fenner S.D., Wayman J.D., Boa D.C., Ward I.G., D. F. Glazio Tyler. The W.M. presented to the Lodge a framed photograph of the mural tablet recently erected in Clare Church to the memory of the late W.M. H.R.H. Prince Leopold Duke of Albany, Earl of Clarence, K.G., of which photograph Brother General Cecil Ives P.M. P.P.G.J.W. Suffolk has kindly presented a copy to each subscriber to the memorial fund. Gen. Ives has received the thanks of Her Majesty the Queen and their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and the Duchess of Albany for photographs forwarded to them, the Duchess expressing herself as "deeply touched by the mark of respect paid by the brethren to her beloved husband." The brethren afterwards adjourned to banquet at the Half Moon Hotel, where a very pleasant evening was spent, under the presidency of the W.M., who was well supported, the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts being heartily received.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 1625.—A meeting was held at Bro. Lashbrook's, Hercules Tavern, Leadenhall-street, on Wednesday, 17th instant.—Bros. D. Moss W.M., W. Saint S.W., J. Gildersleve J.W., D. Simmonds S.D., Belchamber Preceptor, Lashbrook I.G., J. K. Pitt Secretary; Bros. King, Fernley, &c. After preliminaries, Bro. King, as candidate for passing, was entrusted. Lodge opened in the second degree, and the ceremony of passing was exceedingly well rehearsed by the W.M. The chair was vacated in favour of Bro. Pitt. Bro. King offered himself as candidate for the third degree and answered the questions. Lodge was advanced and the ceremony was rehearsed. Bro. Saint was elected W.M. for ensuing week.

Royal Military Lodge of Instruction, No. 1449.—A meeting was held on the 15th inst., at 38 St. Peter's Street, Canterbury. Present: Bros. Beckett W.M., Abbs S.W., Tomblings J.W., R. D. Simms Secretary, Pepper S.D., Tomblings J.D., McClintock Steward, Claydon I.G., Blamiers I.P.M. Lodge was opened in the 1st degree. The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. Bros. Tomblings, McClintock, Abbs, Claydon, R. D. Simms, Pepper, and Beckett explained the working tools of an Entered Apprentice. Questions leading from the 1st to the 2nd degree were put by Bro. Beckett, and were correctly answered. Lodge was opened in the 2nd, when Bros. Pepper, Tomblings, and McClintock explained the working tools. The questions leading from the 2nd to the 3rd degree were put by Bro. Beckett, and correctly answered. Lodge was closed in the 2nd degree. Nothing further having been offered for the good of Freemasonry in general or of this Lodge in particular, the same was closed in due and ancient form.

Royal Alfred Lodge of Instruction, No. 780.—A meeting was held on Friday, the 5th inst., at the Star and Garter Hotel, New Bridge. Present:—Bros. Wing W.M., F. Botley S.W., Thomas J.W., Andrews Preceptor and Treasurer, C. E. Botley Secretary, Hughes S.D., Gillett J.D., Sherrin I.G., Gardner, Bailey, Turner, &c. Lodge opened in due form, and the minutes were read, confirmed, and signed. Lodge opened in 2nd, and questions leading to 3rd were put, and answered by Bro. Gardner, who was entrusted. Lodge opened in the 3rd, and the ceremony was rehearsed, the Worshipful Master giving the traditional history. Lodge closed in the 3rd and 2nd degrees. Bro Thomas was elected Worshipful Master for the next meeting. Lodge was then closed and adjourned until the 12th inst., at 8 o'clock.

ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.

HILDA CHAPTER, No. 23.

A MEETING was held on the 6th inst., at York, when, in the absence of Bro. A. T. B. Turner M.W.S., through illness, and at the unanimous wish and request of the Ex. and Perfect Princes, Ill. Bro. C. J. Banister S.G.I.G. 33°, and I.G. North Eastern District, occupied the throne, and opened the Chapter, assisted by the Officers. The minutes of the last Chapter were read and confirmed. Bro. Donald Grant was unanimously elected, and being present, was perfected into this beautiful Christian Degree by Ill. Bro. Chas. Jas. Banister 33°, in his usual impressive manner, and proclaimed in due form. This being the installation meeting, the M.W.S. elect, Bro. G. Simpson, was presented by Bro. T. B. Whytehead P.M.W.S. to Ill. Bro. C. J. Banister, who installed him into the chair in due form. Bro. Simpson then appointed the following Officers:—Bros. M. M. Reynard High Prelate, W. Brown 1st Gen., McGachen 2nd Gen., T. B. Whytehead Treasurer and Recorder, Waddington G. Marshal, Fraser Raphael, and Chadwick C. of G. Letters of apology were read from several brethren for non-attendance. The chapter was visited by Ill. Bro. Voight 30° P.M.W.S. of the Talbot Chapter, Sheffield. The third point was given by the M.W.S. Bro. G. Simpson, and the Chapter was closed. Ill. Bro. the Hon. W. T. Orde-Powlett 30° was unable to stay for supper, which was presided over by the M.W.S., and there was a fair attendance. The usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed from the chair, and duly responded to. Ill. Bro. C. J. Banister, being an invalid, had to leave very early.

We are pleased to learn that Brother E. H. Rand, who for many years occupied the position of manager at the Cannon-street Hotel, has settled in a new home—the South Western Hotel, Southampton, of which he is now the proprietor. The Hotel has been thoroughly renovated and refurnished; a visitors' lift erected, the scale of charges revised, and many other improvements effected, all of which we feel sure have been conceived and worked out with the zeal and care which Bro. Rand's long experience has enabled him to bring to bear on such an undertaking.

THE PRINCES FANCY DRESS BALL.—As a fitting termination to this year's series of Princes Cinderellas, which are given for the benefit of the Chelsea Hospital for Women, an additional ball, at which all the dancers must appear in strictly fancy dress, has been arranged for Monday, 1st March. So popular have the Princes Cinderellas become, that the Executive Committee have had to decline applications for tickets at every dance, and with a view to limit numbers, and to ensure for the Princes Fancy Dress Ball a very high character, they have drawn up stringent regulations. Each subscriber must be vouched for as being personally known to one of the Patrons or Stewards, of whom there is a goodly list. Add to this that Coote and Tinney will furnish the music, that the Princes Hall in Piccadilly is to be charmingly decorated, and the fine galleries above thrown open for the supper, and we have all the elements of success, and not the least pleasant feature is, that it is all for so good a cause. Further details will doubtless be furnished by Mr. J. S. Wood, at the Hospital, in the Fulham-road.

We regret to hear that Mr. Louis Collins, of Wine Office Court and United Club, London, son of the late Rev. Henry Collins, and cousin of General Wolman, C.B., and of General Wolman, A.D.C., late commanding E.D., has for some time been ill, in London. This has retarded the bringing out of the Advertisers' Guardian, 1886; a copy of the 1885 issue of which H.R.H. the Prince of Wales graciously accepted last year, and which certainly did the author much credit. We understand that the post of General Commanding the Eastern District, now so ably held by General White, will not, as was prognosticated by so many of our neighbours, be held by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught; but that the occupant of the Scarletts will be General Sir Evelyn Wood, K.C.B., K.C.M.G.—Colchester Chronicle.

"Dr. G. H JONES, F.R.S.L., the well-known Surgeon-Dentist of 57 Great Russell Street, London, has just re-issued his popular treatise on the teeth, which should be read by every one wishing to have a good and sound set of teeth; 'Painless and Perfect Dentistry' is its title, which will be found fully justified on perusal of its pages, as many hints for the guidance of those seeking a really practical and scientific dental surgeon will be found. The care and treatment of the teeth, with much useful information concerning the mouth and its molars, is contained therein, and we cordially commend this brochure of Dr. G. H. Jones, to the attention of our readers, which will be found a true guide, philosopher, and friend. The concluding chapters of the book are devoted to a description of the Author's method of dental treatment, which has obtained so high a reputation, and which seems to realise the desideratum of 'holding the mirror up to nature.'"—The Brighton Standard, December 1885.

THE ROYAL MASONIC BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

CLOSE upon fifteen thousand pounds as the outcome of a Festival concerning which the gravest fears were entertained up to the very last moment, is sufficient to call forth the heartiest congratulations from every section of the English Craft. We feel assured that the warmest thanks of the brethren throughout the country have been showered during the past few days on the Stewards and others who took part in securing the grand success of Wednesday, when the Anniversary Festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution was held, under the presidency of the Most Hon. the Marquis of Hertford, and a sum of £14,846 14s 6d, announced as the total of the amounts brought up by the Stewards. We shall not attempt to recount any of the evils which it was expected—and justly so—would militate against the success of this year's Festival; it is sufficient for us now to rejoice at the result, which in face of bad trade and general depression, has proved that the benevolence of Freemasons is equal to the calls made upon it. The success of Wednesday not only maintains the reputation which has long been enjoyed by Freemasons as dispensers of Charity, but will also enable the Committee to continue the work of the Institution during the current year without that anxiety that must have been inseparable from their work under less favourable results than those which attended this year's celebration.

The total of Wednesday's Festival was contributed by 276 brethren, of whom 125 represented the Metropolitan Lodges and Chapters, 130 the Provincial, and 21 were unattached. The London and unattached Stewards brought up a total of £8,953 3s 6d, and the Provincial Stewards £5,893 11s, so that on this occasion London was again strongly to the fore so far as the amount of subscriptions is concerned.

The premier list of London—and, indeed, of the Festival—was that of Brother Walter Martin, of the Southwark Lodge, No. 879, who brought up £450, while he was closely followed by Brother J. C. Flatteley, of the Excelsior Lodge, No. 1624, who contributed £400. Next we have Bro. James Bartle, of the Earl of Carnarvon Lodge, No. 1642, with a total of £250—a grand sum, when considered in connection with what this Lodge has done in the past; Bro. C. Kempton, of the Great Northern Lodge, with £210; and then the Chairman of the day, who brought up £208 7s (including his own donation—fifty guineas). Thus, five Stewards from London brought up no less a sum than £1,518 7s for our Old Folks. There were several other three figure lists, and we have much pleasure in specially referring to the brethren who were so fortunate as to secure large totals. Bro. C. N. Carrell, of the Victoria Park Lodge, No. 1816, succeeded in raising £156 17s 6d; Brother J. Carnaby, of the Corinthian Lodge, No. 1382, £155; Bro. C. W. Eves, of the Empire Lodge, No. 2108, £154 17s 6d; Bro. E. Bentley Haynes, of the Egyptian Lodge, No. 27, and Bro. J. Pringle, of the Merchant Navy Lodge, No. 781, each £150; Comp. C. Daniel, of the Prosperity Chapter, No. 65, and Bro. H. Harbord, of the City of London Lodge, No. 901, each £141 15s; Bro. George Sidders, of the Temperance in the East Lodge, No. 898, £136 10s; Brother James Terry, the energetic and much respected Secretary of the Institution, who on this occasion figures among the unattached, £135; Bro. W. H. Baker, of the Abbey Lodge, No. 2030. £126; Brother C. Hunt, of St. Paul's Lodge, No. 194, £123 7s 6d; Bro. J. C. Cross, of the Burgoyne Lodge, No. 902, £120 18s; Bro. Rev. H. R. Cooper Smith, of the University Lodge, No. 1118, £119 3s 6d; Bro. Dep. Insp. Gen. T. B. Purchas, of the Friends in Council Lodge, No. 1383, and Bro. A. H. Robinson, of the St. Peter Westminster Lodge, No. 1537, each £115 10s; Bro. Edwin Storr, of the St. John's Lodge, No. 167, £106 1s; Bro. H. N. Price, the Worshipful Master of the Domatic Lodge, No. 177, which celebrated its centenary a few days since, £105 19s; Bro. George Boulton, of the Wanderers' Lodge, No. 1604, £105 10s; Bro. Horace B. Marshall, C.C., who figures among the unattached, and Brother James Willing jun., who represents both the Metropolitan Chapter, No. 1507, and the Royal Savoy Lodge, No. 1744, each £105; and Bro. Hugh Cotter, of the Yarborough Lodge, No. 554, £100. Twenty-six lists for a total of £4,188 1s, or an average of upwards of one hundred and sixty pounds from each of the first twenty-six London Stewards, nearly half the amount sent up by the whole of the metropolis, and about as fine a list of "high amounts" as is possible under existing circumstances. The other London Stewards worked nobly in support of the good cause, as their individual lists and their joint total demonstrates, and it is only because we must draw the line somewhere that we do not extend the roll of "honourable mention" much further down the list; indeed were it not that we give the figures in detail elsewhere, we should feel it our duty to name each of the Stewards and record the result of each one's efforts on behalf of the Institution.

Kent takes the lead among the Provinces, with a total of £864 1s 6d, of which the Provincial Grand Secretary, Bro. Alfred Spencer, secured £365, and another much respected member, Bro. Horatio Ward, £252 6s; the balance is made up by five other Stewards, and in addition there are two lists yet to be announced.

West Yorkshire, ever ready to help, and help too in a substantial way, nobly maintains its reputation by a contribution of £735, collected by the twenty-two brethren who undertook to represent it at this Festival.

Middlesex comes third on the list, with a total of £540 19s 6d contributed at the hands of sixteen of eighteen Stewards, the other two lists being yet outstanding. Bro. W. A. Scurrah, the Worshipful Master of the Henry Levander Lodge, No. 2048, takes the palm in this district, with a list of £140, and is nobly supported by his co-workers. The Lebanon Lodge, No. 1326, is especially worthy of mention, no less than eight of its members figure as Stewards, six of whom took up between them the sum of £98 17s. We fancy we can recognise in this result the handiwork of Bro. John Mason, the Collector of the Institution, who we believe is the Secretary of this Lodge. Personally he appears as unattached, with a total of £68 5s, so that the Lebanon Lodge and its members really figure at this Festival for upwards of £167.

Bristol, with its eight Lodges, sends up £318 10s, of which total Bro. Pierrepoint Harris secured £300 5s, as representative of the Province; and Bro. W. Purnell, £18 5s, as a general Steward.

Suffolk, represented by four Stewards, contributes £295, of which sum one hundred guineas appears on the list of Bro. N. Tracy, the representative of the Province; while the other Stewards, Bros. C. F. Crane (1631), H. J Wright (936) and B. Gall (81) take up £85, £78 15s. and £26 5s respectively.

Hertfordshire—Little Herts as it is usually designated—contributed not a little to the success of the Festival. £277 3s 6d being the total of its contributions, sent up at the hands of nine Stewards. Bro. J. W. Morris, as representative of the oldest Lodge in the Province—the Hertford, No. 403—comes first, with a list of £52 4s, and he is supported by Comp. Edward Swain, as representative of the Hertford Chapter, No. 403, with £27 6s,—£79 10s from the brethren and Companions of the county town Bro. W. Mackie, of the Wilson Iles' Lodge, follows with £42; and then comes Bro. W. K. Hopkin, the Worshipful Master of the Gladsmuir Lodge, No. 1385, who brings up £36 15s, no inconsiderable amount when we consider that the Gladsmuir is but a small Lodge, and has been at considerable expense during the past year, when they entertained Provincial Grand Lodge on the occasion of its annual meeting.

Worcestershire is particularly strong in its representatives on the present occasion, both Sir Edmund A. H. Lechmere, Bart., M.P., the Provincial Grand Master, and Bro. A. F. Godson, the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, being among the Stewards. Four other brethren undertook the task of pleading on behalf of the Old People, and the result of the six lists is a total of £271 17s. Of this the Provincial Grand Master takes up £171 18s, Bro. W. Perry (564) £36 15s, Bro. A. F. Godson £31 10s, and the three remaining Stewards ten guineas each.

Staffordshire entrusted its representation to Brother W. H. Bailey, and right nobly has he fulfilled the trust reposed in him, as his list of £204 15s forcibly demonstrates. Despite the great interest the brethren of this district continually display in the Charities of the Order, we should like to see them do more. If we may go so far, we would suggest they induce their Provincial Grand Master to act as Chairman at one of the Festivals, and rally round him to the utmost in their power in order to make his presidency a success. If they would do this heartily, and could induce their chief to support them in their endeavours, we predict such a result as would make a grand addition to the funds of whichever Institution was fortunate enough to be selected for the honour.

Dorsetshire is next in order, with a total of £180 10s, brought up, with the exception of ten guineas contributed by Bro. W. James, of No. 707, by the Provincial representative, Bro. E. T. Budden. This is a good start for the year, and we hope will be repeated by our Dorset brethren at each of the succeeding Festivals.

Nottinghamshire sends up £176 18s 6d at the hands of Bro. John Toplis, representing the Newstead Lodge, No. 47, and has a Steward with a list outstanding. We trust his efforts will be, if not as successful as those of his co-Steward, at least sufficient to make an appreciable difference in the total of his Province, although the amount already contributed is large, and one of which the brethren of the county may justly be proud.

Somersetshire also had the services of a good representative, Brother W. Rice, who worked for "The Province," and secured no less than £166 18s, a total a few pounds short of what was sent up by the Province at the corresponding Festival of last year.

Berks and Bucks had four representatives, and between them they secured £159 11s 6d. Brother R. C. Prickett, of 1101, takes the lead, with £64, and is followed by Bro. A. S. Morling, of No. 948, with £48 9s. Brother H. J. Stollery (209) and J. Thickens (1770) were the other Stewards, and their lists amounted to £34 2s 6d and £13 respectively.

Devonshire follows very closely, its three Stewards making up a total of £157 10s, of which Brother J. E. Curtois, as representing the Province, collected £105, Bro. A. T. Blamey (1402) £36 15s, and Bro. H. Marley (1358) the balance of £15 15s.

Surrey—whose Provincial Grand Master, Gen. Studholme Brownrigg, C.B., has consented to preside at the coming Festival on behalf of the Girls' School—sends up £148 11s for the Benevolent, at the hands of four Stewards, of whom Bro. Aynsley, of the Mozart Lodge, No. 1929, secured £67 14s. The other Stewards were Bro. F. A. Guimaraens (416), J. A. Lorimer (1046), and J. Drewett (1638), while the amounts of their lists were £38 17s, £31 10s, and £10 10s respectively. No doubt the brethren of Surrey are reserving themselves for the special effort we may expect them to make in support of their chief, and such being the case—and assuming that the result of their efforts on behalf of the Benevolent may be taken as a criterion of what they will do for the Girls—a handsome total may be looked for from them in May next.

Cheshire had five Stewards, who, between them, contributed £148 6s. Three of these Stewards, Bros. Thomas Maples (537), E. Woodhead (537), and W. Mellor (758) took up lists of £36 15s each, while Bros. John Clayton and Walter Kenworthy, who acted jointly on behalf of Unanimity Lodge, No. 89, collected £38 1s.

Cambridgeshire had two representatives, the total of whose efforts was a contribution of £143; Bro. Papworth securing £63, and Bro. W. Welchman £80.

Cornwall had but one representative, Brother Controller S. G. Bake, but he succeeded in getting a good list, the result of his Stewardship being a total of £141 15s.

Hants and the Isle of Wight presses very closely, the total from that district being £141. Three Stewards were at work there, of whom Bro. R. L. Loveland, of the Hampshire Lodge of Emulation, No. 1990, secured £54 5s, Brother J. Wallingford, of the Gosport Lodge, No. 908, £45 10s, and Brother T. Francis, of the Carnarvon Lodge, No. 804, the balance—£41 5s.

Sussex contributed £122 10s, two members of the Province acting as Stewards, of whom Bro. W. H. Russell, of No. 40, collected £70, and Bro. B. Bennett, of No. 732, £52 10s.

East Lancashire had nine Stewards, of whom one has not yet made a return. The other eight secured a total of £120 15s, most of their contributions, we imagine, being personal donations.

Essex did well, giving £115 5s 6d as its contribution. There were four Stewards, of whom Bro. James Salmon, representing the Epping Lodge, No. 2077, was the most successful, his list being one of fifty guineas.

Durham sent up one hundred guineas at the hands of a single Steward, Bro. Hans B. Olsen, of No. 764, and this brings to a close the list of three figure Provinces.

There are nine other districts to be referred to, and of these eight sent up totals of less than one hundred pounds, while one—North and East Yorkshire—has not yet made any return. The eight Provinces and the amounts of their contributions are as follow:—West Lancashire, 6 Stewards, £78 15s and one list to come in; Derbyshire, 1 Steward, £63; Bedfordshire, 1 Steward, £53 12s; Oxfordshire, 3 Stewards, £46 18s 6d; Gloucestershire, 2 Stewards, £39 18s; North Wales, 2 Stewards, £29 11s; Shropshire 1 Steward, £25; and Warwickshire, 1 Steward, £21 15s.

THE FESTIVAL.

As we say above, the Anniversary Festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution was held on Wednesday, at Freemasons' Tavern, London, under the presidency of the Most Hon. the Marquis of Hertford, Senior Grand Warden of England. The customary banquet having been partaken of, the chairman proceeded with the toast list. In proposing the first, he said there were many points on which members of the Craft particularly prided themselves, but there were some matters—and among them the toast he was then proposing—in which they were at one with the general body of Englishmen. The toast of Her Majesty the Queen was well received whenever it was proposed. Knowing as he did there was no more loyal body of men than the Freemasons, he considered it unnecessary that he should allude to any of the many reasons which might be given for honouring the toast. When he heard the chairman of a meeting give one reason after another—excellent though these might be—for drinking the health of Her Majesty, it seemed to him very much like offering apologies for Her Majesty, as though she was in need of being defended. He felt that in that room, at all events, no apology was needed on behalf of Her Majesty, whose health he submitted for their consideration. The toast having been heartily received, was followed by the National Anthem, and then the chairman gave H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, K.G., Most Worshipful Grand Master, the Grand Patron and President of the Institution, the Princess of Wales, and the other members of the Royal Family. If Masons were loyal to the Sovereign, so also were they loyal to their Most Worshipful G.M. He felt the Masonic body ought to think itself extremely fortunate in having at its head such a man as H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, who took so great an interest in the Order—not only a Masonic but a personal interest—doing all in his power to uphold Masonry and promote its welfare. It almost amounted to a mystery how his Royal Highness, among his multifarious duties, could find time to perform his Masonic work as he did. But in this, as in every other way, his Royal Highness set a good example, that should be followed by all Masons. He should not be far wrong if he went further, and said that the good example set by his Royal Highness was followed by other members of the Royal family for it was something extraordinary to see the way in which the names of the Royal family appear wherever any good was to be done. Never mind what it was for—if it was for a Charity, or for the good of the community or the nation in any way—they might be sure that some one, if not more, members of the Royal family would have their names at the head of it, and would be among the first coming forward to help as far as they could. The Chairman felt he need not give many reasons for submitting the next toast—The Right Honourable the Earl of Carnarvon M.W. Pro G.M. The brethren knew that when His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales was unable to preside at any of their meetings his place was taken by the Earl of Carnarvon. Many of those present would know far better than he could tell them what an excellent Mason the Earl of Carnarvon was. Indeed, there was no brother to whom Grand Lodge would more readily apply for help in any difficulty than the Pro Grand Master. He had every confidence in giving the toast. This was followed by the Right Honourable the Earl of Lathom, R.W. Deputy Grand Master, and the Present and Past Grand Officers. Lord Hertford felt that all who had seen the Earl of Lathom taking the chair in the next room, as Deputy Grand Master, must have thought that he was the right man in the right place. He believed there were few Masons living who had done more for the welfare of the Craft than he. He was always at work for the good of the cause. Much might be said in praise of the Present and Past Grand Officers, but they were so well known that it was almost unnecessary. He had much pleasure in coupling the name of Bro. C. J. Martyn, Past Grand Chaplain, with the toast. To return thanks for the Grand Officers, said Bro. Martyn, was at all times a pleasing, as well as a very honourable duty, but he was particularly pleased to be called upon on that occasion, because they had at the head of the Grand Officers for the year their present Chairman, who had so well and ably presided over them that night. Lord Hertford had said much in praise of the Deputy Grand Master, but he (Brother Martyn) felt it was impossible to say too much, for he supposed there was no more popular Mason than the Earl of Lathom. With regard to the rest of the Grand Officers, those present would believe him when he said, they were one and all actuated by a desire to prove and justify in some way the selections that the Grand Master had been pleased to make from time to time. He assured them, in the name of all the Grand Officers, as well as on his own behalf, that so long as God gave them health and strength, so long would their energies be devoted to the welfare of the Craft they loved so well. The chairman next proposed success to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons. He really felt he ought to commence with an apology for taking the chair. When he looked at the list of distinguished Masons who had preceded him in that chair, and when he looked to the number of Masons around him who were far more intimately acquainted than he was with the practical working and management of the Charity, he could but feel that an apology was due from him; but, at the same time, when the honour was offered him of taking the chair, he felt first of all that he could not refuse to do what was in his power to help so excellent a Charity, and he was further supported by the thought that it required very little eloquence to induce Masons to be charitable. When he looked at the magnificent gathering he felt that the Charity met with approbation, and that the brethren sincerely wished it well. Lord Hertford then proceeded to give an outline of the establishment and rise of the Fund, and concluded by remarking that the annual expenditure, outside the permanent income of the Institution was no less than £13,000. Bro. Major J. Woodall Woodall replied, and then Bro. Terry read the list of amounts brought up by the respective Stewards. This we give in full on the next page.

Bro. Sir E. H. Lechmere proposed the Chairman. He said Lord Hertford was one of the good working Masons, or he would not have reached the high position he occupied in the Craft. All present would agree that he had distinguished himself that night. The grand financial result of the evening must have given the greatest satisfaction to all. It was certainly a most remarkable fact that year after year, no matter what the state of depression might be, Masons were as ready as ever to help their Charities. He was sure they would always find Stewards to come up from the Provinces for this Charity, bringing with them large sums of money; and so long as they had the attendance of so many brethren, and so long as they had their sympathy, and that of the ladies, they would find brethren like Lord Hertford ready to discharge the duties his lordship had discharged so well that evening. The Chairman, in reply, thanked the brethren for the very kind way in which they had received the toast so well proposed by Sir Edmund Lechmere. They had indeed given him pleasure that night by showing by deed, and not by word, what they thought of the Charity on whose behalf it had been his privilege to enlist their sympathy. The sum given that night for the Charity was truly a noble one. It had been exceeded only on one occasion. On behalf of the Charity he begged to thank all, not only for the money they had given, but for the interest they must have taken, and he thanked the Board of Stewards for the hard work they had performed. He could not help noticing that evening, when he looked at the toast list, what appeared to him, if he might be allowed to say so, an omission. He did not see upon the toast list the name of Bro. Terry. Those who knew anything of the immediate working of the Charity must know how hard Bro. Terry worked for it. He hoped that every future Festival of the Charity might be presided over by men far better able to do it than himself, at the same time anxious as he for the good of the Charity. The success of that night was what he might call a regular bumper. Looking at the depression of the times, and at all the circumstances, those who were acquainted with the other Masonic Charities knew that there were circumstances that might have militated against this one that night; but, bumper as it was, he hoped it might be exceeded next year, and so on for many years. Bro. Dr. Jabez Hogg P.G.D. proposed success to the other Masonic Institutions, to which Bros. Hedges and Binckes replied. Bro. F. A. Philbrick, Q.C., Grand Registrar, proposed the Stewards, to which Bro. Capt. George Lambert P.G. Sw. Bearer replied. The Ladies was proposed by Bro. Thomas Fenn P.G.D., and acknowledged by Bro. F. Sumner Knyvett P.G. Steward. A very enjoyable concert was provided for the ladies in the Masonic Temple, under the direction of Bro. Edwin M. Lott, Mus. Doc., Grand Organist, the artistes being Miss Margaret Hoare, Miss Amy Sargent, Miss Minnie Kirton, Madame Raymond, Bros. Arthur Thompson, Dudley Thomas, T. Tremere and Franklin Clive, with Miss Nellie Hamilton and Bro. Hedley Carus, assisted by Bro. Lott, as instrumentalists.

A Convocation of the Provincial Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of Leicestershire and Rutland will be holden at Freemasons' Hall, Leicester, on Tuesday, the 2nd day of March, for the transaction of the general business of the Province, and for the purpose of consecrating and constituting, according to ancient usage, the St. George's Chapter, to be attached to the Albert Edward Lodge, No. 1560, when all Past and Present Provincial Grand Officers, together with the Principals and Past First Principals of the several Subordinate Chapters of the Province are hereby summoned to attend, and all regularly exalted Royal Arch Masons are invited to be present. Provincial Grand Chapter will be opened at a quarter to four o'clock in the afternoon.

The Debrett series, comprising the Peerage, the Baronetage, Knightage, and Companionage, and the House of Commons, will be issued in a few days, and furnish more than two months' later information than kindred works.

Holloway's Pills.—Changes of temperature and weather frequently upset persons who are most careful of their health, and particular in their diet. These corrective, purifying, and gentle ancient Pills are the best remedy for all defected action of the digestive organs. They augment the appetite, strengthen the stomach, correct biliousness, and carry off all that is noxious from the system. Holloway's Pills are composed of rare balsams, unmixed with baser matter, and on that account are peculiarly well adapted for the young, delicate, and aged. As this peerless medicine has gained fame in the past, so will it preserve it in the future by its renovating and invigorating qualities, and the impossibility of its doing harm.

MASONIC DIGNITY.

IF there is one subject connected with what may be called the externals of the Lodge, which more than any other should enlist the attention of the Craft, it would seem to be the maintenance of the decorum and dignity proper to the Institution.

Giving credit for sincerity to the countless declarations of Masonic orators and writers for the press, touching the antiquity and character of our Fraternity, any one on side the Lodge, without an observation of existing facts, would surely expect to find throughout the Masonic brotherhood a higher regard for all which is appropriate to true decorum and dignity than among the members of any other association whatever: for in our public utterances no opportunity seems to be neglected which can be used to set forth the great antiquity of the Institution; the noble part it is alleged to have acted in the development of science, art and social order; the endless catalogue of illustrious names of "kings, princes and potentates" of every civilized nation, claimed to belong to its roll of honour, and what is more to be prized than all, the wisdom and beneficence of the principles it is designed to uphold.

Allowing these declarations to be sincere, and only a tithing of them to be based on any sufficient knowledge, or probable information concerning the historic matters involved, it would seem incredible that any want of regard for the time-honoured usages of our predecessors, or solicitude for the honour and dignity of the Institution, now and hereafter; or of complete and substantial furnishings or tasteful adornment should be noticeable in or about our "temples of initiation"; or of truly decorous and proper apparel and garniture in our public or private assemblies, processions and ceremonies.

It would be further expected by a stranger, that in an Institution which has for two of its supporting pillars Wisdom and Beauty, its votaries would place among the first of its "liberal arts" that of elegant and expressive adornment, and that good taste would be cultivated to the exclusion of all slovenly negligence and meretricious display; and that order and propriety would be so advanced as to lead to a system of construction and embellishment truly Masonic in all its aspects.

Yet it must be confessed that for the most part such expectations would prove as baseless as many of the panegyrics upon the antiquity, universality, and glory of the Institution; the most oft-repeated and extravagant of which are indulged in by those who are content to let everything of ancient Masonic excellence and propriety become lost to the Craft.

It is not because of any high estimate placed on the antiquity or noble characteristics of Ancient Craft Masonry that these things are so generally observable, but because of a failure to appreciate and thence esteem those things in which the sublimity and moral grandeur of true Masonry consist, and this is shown to be true in the face of the whole Craft by this: that when simplicity and true Masonic dignity and decorum are urged upon the Craft, and imitations and mere frippery denounced, there is not wanting some one to hasten to the front as champion of the latter, without a word in behalf of the former, with all the earnestness of those who feel that something has been done which reflects disadvantageously on themselves personally. It is doubtless true that this has not happened because of any ill disposition towards the exaltation of Masonry, or of actual folly in judgment concerning such matters; but from the very original cause which has produced the evils which they defend, and the same which has brought about the prevalent notion that the Masonic Lodge is wholly destitute of anything to produce a respectable or significant appearance either in public or private, and that it must be made presentable by eking out the remnants of its legitimate equipage with unseemly claptrap; or by letting it take care of itself, and resorting to "higher degrees" for purposes of display.

Now, if really fine and impressive appearance in public or private is something desirable, as all must admit it is, how is it that it never occurs to those who are enthusiastic in such a matter, that the Ancient Craft Lodge has, and always had, greater resources for the very purpose of significant display than any other society or order to be found, and that with less expense in the long run than the opponents of simplicity and dignity are willing to lavish in carrying on and exhibiting the so-called higher degrees?

Let an Ancient Craft Lodge room be for once completely constructed, furnished and adorned with everything which properly pertains to it, all in proper form and order, and it would be an astonishment to thousands who are accustomed to the existing state of things, and if a procession fully equipped as it might be were to appear on the streets of any city, those who should see it for the first time would scarcely believe their own eyes. And this is not an exaggeration, for everything which is in any way Masonic, from first to last, belongs to the Lodge and is part of its exclusive paraphernalia, to be used as far as means will permit or the Craft may deem expedient. Hence those who are fond of pageantry, and of making a fine display of Masonry, ought to see how unreasonable it is for them to be content with the neglect of proper appearances which is allowed to exist both in Lodges and Chapters, and at the same time expend large sums of money for shoddy imitation and things having no Masonic significance, at exorbitant prices, and which have no lasting value.

amounts of money poured out continually in procuring the erection of buildings, or paying extravagant rents, and in the purchase of goods and trappings which are made to sell. In how few instances can a Lodge Committee find in Masonic structures any examples of the stately and beautiful forms and composition of parts and ornaments, which should distinguish the work of a Fraternity whose principal art is the noblest of all, architecture? Where is anything truly Masonic in design or execution to be found in or about a Masonic Lodge? What of the fixtures or furnishings of the rooms or their approaches? What can be seen on the persons of Officers or members, or borne in the procession of a Lodge or Grand Lodge, even on the most important occasions, which would show that Masons as a body care aught for ancient Masonic usages, or the memory of Masonic achievements of any description? It is not meant by this that they do not care for decency of appearance as a body of citizens, or for personal attire, but that they show little or no regard for that which is Masonic; a disregard which has gone on until a majority of Masons do not even know what were the usages fifty years ago.

Many are warmly in favour of display; but, labouring under the impression that the "Blue Lodge," as they term it, is destitute of materials and modes of embellishment, and has nothing to offer in the way of appearances, they regard every protest against the increase of tinsel and shabby makeshifts as though it were a fulmination against orderly decoration and tasteful art, and in favour of bare benches, sawdust floors, tallow-dip candles and greasy aprons; and feel aggrieved that any one should try to rob the Lodge of the few novelties for which it has spent perhaps its last dollar. Indignation naturally sets in with more or less violence and the Craft are called upon to stand up for their rights.

How has it been during the last twenty-five years or so in this respect? Indeed, long before that, "the lambskin, the badge of a Mason," had given place to a piece of white sheepskin leather, of the size and somewhat in the shape of a Masonic apron; and that to a flap of white cotton called by way of euphemism "a white linen apron;" and that to keep up the degeneration, has finally come to be worn, not over the dress, where it belongs, but tucked in under the coat to represent the latter clause of a cheap shirt, instead of the "badge more ancient than the golden fleece," &c.

The three principal stations of the Lodge having been deprived of their characteristic form, can no longer be distinguished from those introduced in modern societies, and have lost their place in such a way that no Masonic circumambulation can be performed, except such as takes place within the Lodge (not Lodge room), as at installation; and the two great pillars are represented by a couple of broom-handle effigies, the mockery of all architecture.

Because there was nothing else left to throw away, the distinctive and symbolic sash, without which no Mason, even as late as thirty years ago, thought of going into a procession, has been cast aside; together with the emblematic banners borne on two flagstaves, which emblazoned the march; and so on with everything else which belonged to the occasion.

Now, as one after another, the insignia of the Craft have been thrown entirely aside, or have given place to some mean substitute, invented and furnished by the ever present dealer in "hand-me-down" regalia, until nothing was left but the collars, which of course had a special signification, and were very important in preserving the knowledge of the celestial forms of the Lodge and its floors; a drummer has come round with a miserable novelty and palmed it on to the Lodges as a subtitute—a "modern improvement"—consisting of a blue string with a lot of the common emblems, miniatures of things already in the Lodge, and huddled together without an atom of sense; and in such a way interested outsiders have come to be the designers and fabricators of the ever-changing toggery which is putting out of sight and out of mind the unique and significant appliances and adornments of the Craft.

As to the mosaic floor itself, with its visible representatives and all the lore connected with it, by which its peculiar form and complication of parts were made to show knowledge of celestial and terrestrial order involved in the construction of the Symbolic Lodge (not the Lodge room); there is nothing left of it but the caricature of its surface, still found on the Master's carpet.

While these things are so, it is no wonder that some or many should be dissatisfied with the actual appearance of things in and about the Lodge, contrasted with the glowing picture of the greatness and splendour of the Institution set forth in our oratory and wherever mere "talk" is all that is supposed to be necessary. And considering everything, it is not strange that three different notions as to propriety should be entertained. First, that mole-eyed view which discerns no difference between simplicity and shabby meanness, between elegance and finery, and prefers the latter, that is, coarse, ill-adapted and slovenly surroundings and modes. Second, that which sees nothing as ornamental and beautiful except redundancy and flash and novelty, and being coupled with a desire for something more lively than squalor and scantiness and discomfort, wishes to enjoy a raree show at the least expense for the time being. In neither of these cases is any account taken of what is worthy and valuable or what is appropriate and becoming in such an Institution as Ancient Craft Masonry. The third view is that of those who esteem the dignity and honour of the Masonic Institution and of its noble Fraternity throughout the world, as demanding more because entitled to more consideration on the part of those who are admitted to enjoy its rights, lights and benefits, than can possibly be the case in any other fellowship; and hence desire to maintain intact the high estate of dignity, simplicity, elegance and beauty of the entire Masonic system, internal and external; and so to manifest this in every way as to testify their appreciation of its excellence. Which of these views should prevail let all worthy Masons judge, and act accordingly.

Notwithstanding the discouraging aspect of much which appears in the neglect and indifference of Lodges and members, and the constant lapse from former Masonic ideas and conduct, and the loss of Masonic lore so much to be deplored, there is one great source of encouragement continually growing and strengthening. This is, that every voice and utterance put forth, come from whom it may or from which side in any controversy, joins with all others in concluding on the same urgent appeal to the Craft to maintain in every way, and by all means attainable, as the supreme object and end of Masonry, those sublime virtues, truth and uprightness, and more than all, the God-born principle of charity in all its forms, and especially in that most angelic, which is the keystone of the Masonic arch and the key of heaven. Nor are these vain and empty utterances, for the works of the Craft in all its organisations and rites exhibit to-day more efficient and wide-spread efforts, organised and unorganised, in furthering every scheme of benevolence and mercy, and show more liberality and generosity than ever before. With such a motive power all things are possible, and we can well hope that advancement in the attainment of great ends will impel a movement towards securing those next in importance, and so the work of the Craft be crowned with glory as well as honour.—Voice of Masonry.

THE SECRETARY'S MINUTES.

THE Secretary of a Lodge is a high and important Officer—for some purposes the most important in the Lodge. Although nominally the servant of the Lodge, he is often its master. Although the W.M. is supreme, and the Secretary is the scribe, the latter not infrequently controls the action of the former. If the Master be the mind, the Secretary is the hand that wields the pen, which is the index of the mind. Frequently the Secretary is a Past Master, and he should always be so. The duties of his office are so responsible that he requires all the knowledge which experience in the Master's chair can give. He cannot know too much, or be too expert. What the Lodge is, depends to a considerable degree upon his action; whether the Lodge shall be praised or blamed by the Grand Master, when he comes to make a Grand Visitation to the Lodge, is determined very much by his adherence to the usages and customs of the Craft in engrossing the Minutes, and in formulating the action on various matters coming officially before the Lodge. The most experienced and skilful Brother in the Lodge, who will accept the office, is the one who should be elected Secretary.

We wish we had the considerate attention of every Secretary in this jurisdiction, and in all jurisdictions, to the present article—not that we can say anything especially new with regard to their duties, but because we believe we can say much that is true, and for the best interests of Freemasonry. A Secretary is more than the mere scribe of the Lodge—he prepares much, if not all, of the business for its action. All communications to the body pass through his hands, and are presented by him. Many motions are made by him, and some are adopted by the force of his single vote. He determines the direction given to much of the charity. He observes, or neglects to observe, the regulations of Grand Lodge bearing upon Lodge action. Now, what guide has he, over and above his own experience? In the jurisdistion of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, and we opine in most Masonic jurisdictions, there is a model form of Minutes furnished him. This is so full, so exact, so minute in all of its details, and so specific in all of its directions, that if a Secretary will always have it before him in writing out the Minutes, he cannot err. For almost every possible proceeding in a Lodge there is a plainly prescribed form. And this form is not an empty form, since it comprehends matter of substance, of the highest importance. For example, take the following:—"A communication was received from the Grand Secretary, stating there was nothing on the records against John Jones." Suppose a Secretary omits to insert this in the Minutes, in the case of a petition for initiation and membership, or for membership only? The probabilities are that he has failed to make the necessary inquiry of the Grand Secretary, and having so failed, and the Lodge having initiated a candidate without it, it becomes the imperative duty of the Grand Master to issue an edict, striking the name of the initiate from the roll of the Lodge; and as a result the Lodge is obliged to commence de novo, and do its work over again, after having made the necessary inquiry of the Grand Secretary, and learned that the applicant's record is clear. Take another example:—A member writes to a Secretary, simply asking for what is often termed a Dimit, although we, in Pennsylvania, style it simply a Certificate; and the Secretary moves (in error) that it be granted, and, thereupon, the Brother is erroneously considered to be no longer a member of the Lodge. But the "Form of Minutes," if it had been consulted, would have instructed the Secretary that a member must present a resignation of membership in writing, which must be accepted, before any such Brother can be entitled to receive a Certificate to enable him to apply to another Lodge for membership, which Certificate he is entitled to as a matter of course after the Lodge has, by vote, accepted his resignation—the Secretary giving it to him on his request, without any motion for it in open Lodge. The repeated neglect by Secretaries to observe this form of Minute is another fruitful source of edicts from the Grand Master. Now, no Grand Master is fond of issuing edicts of this character—indeed, we have known a Grand Master to feel that he was soiling his hands by the use of the edictorial pen, and to wash his hands after the unpleasant duty was performed. It is always more agreeable to praise than to blame, and if Secretaries of Lodges would only perform their simple duty, would only follow the printed precedents plainly set before them in the "Form of Minutes," they would not only have their Minutes in proper form, but they also would have, what is far more important, the substance of them correct, and the action of the Lodge regular, unnecessary to be set aside by an edict from the Grand Master.

The examples we have given above are only two out of many which we might cite. It is not too much to say that almost all of the errors into which Lodges usually fall, might be prevented by the Secretary being guided by the information specifically conveyed in the regulation "Form of Minutes."

In this connection we may advert to three related matters. The Secretary should leave a line blank between the individual minutes. This renders a reference to the Minutes easy, when it is desired to discover the action of the Lodge in any particular. This end is further attained by abbreviated memoranda, in red ink, in a blank about two inches in width reserved at the left hand side of the Minute Book, from top to bottom. Add to this the indexing of the more important actions in a general index of the volume, and the engrossing of the Minutes in a clear, legible hand, and the Secretary's work is performed precisely as in every case it should be. All of these suggestions are not difficult of observance, their performance by the Secretary is his simple duty, and every W.M. of a Lodge owes it to his Lodge, as well as to himself to see that they are diligently and faithfully followed.—Keystone.

THIRD "AMMONIAPHONE" CONCERT.

THAT Dr. Carter Moffat's Ammoniaphone ranks high in public favour was evidenced by the presence of a distinguished Company at Holloway Hall, London, on Friday, the 19th inst., in response to invitations issued by Mr. C. B. Harness, Managing Director of the Medical Battery Company, Limited, of 52 Oxford Street, London, W., the proprietors of Dr. Carter Moffatt's invention. Not the least interesting feature of Friday's concert was the fact that all the artistes were Ammoniaphonical votaries, who testified their appreciationo f the benefits they have derived from Dr. Carter Moffat's remarkable invention by volunteering their services. The Programme consisted of a Part Song, "Awake, Æolian Lyre," Ammoniaphone Concert Party; New Song, "Old Soldiers," Mr. Dudley Towers; Song, "O'er the Meadows," Miss Alice Crang; Duet, "The Burial at Sea," Messrs. Roy St. Claire and Dudley Towers; Part Song, "Hail to the Chief," Ammoniaphone Concert Party; Piano Solo, "The Wanderer," Mr. Alfred Allen; Song, "Masks and Faces," Miss Paula Costello; Patriotic Song (new), "London," Mr. Roy St. Clare (accompanied by the composer); Part Song, "Hush thee, my Baby," Ammoniaphone Concert Party; Song, "The Lost Voice," Mr. Roy St. Claire; Part Song, "O who will o'er the Downs so free," Ammoniaphone Concert Party; Song, "The Gauntlet," Mr. Dudley Towers; Piano Solo, (a) "A do beist blume," (b) "Invitation to the Minuet," Mr. Alfred Allen; Song, "Absent, yet Present," Miss Paula Costello; Song, "The Lost Chord," Mr. Roy St. Claire; Song, "Good Bye," Miss Alice Crang; Humorous Quartette, "Prophundo Basso," Misses Costello, Ridgway, Messrs. St. Claire and Towers. God Save the Queen. Mr. Alfred Allen accompanied on a special Concert Grand Pianoforte by Messrs. John Brinsmead and Sons. Between the parts of the Concert, Dr. Carter Moffat briefly explained the extraordinary properties of the Ammoniaphone for increasing and enriching the Vocal Tone, and for the treatment of Asthma, Bronchitis, and pulmonary affections by inhalation. After the Concert Mr. C. B. Harness entertained the artistes, and a distinguished party of literary, musical, and scientific celebrities at supper in the Ammoniaphone Saloon of the Medical Battery Company, Limited, 52 Oxford Street, W., while the band rendered a choice selection of solo and concerted pieces.

The Board have to report that they have had under their consideration the rates of salary hitherto received by Brother William Henry Lee, third clerk, and Brother Neville Green, fourth clerk, in the Grand Secretary's office, who have served therein for thirteen years, and have already arrived at the maximum rate of £200 a year, as fixed for all the junior clerks by Grand Lodge in the year 1874, and whose prospects of future advancement are remote.

As it appears to the Board that the maximum rates of salary of these two officials might fairly be fixed in gradation between that of the second clerk, which is £300 a year, and that of the junior clerks the Board now recommend the following arrangement for the approval of Grand Lodge, viz.:—

The salary of Brother William Henry Lee to be raised to £230 from the 1st January last, and to increase by £10 a year until it arrives at £250, which shall be the maximum salary of the third class.

The salary of Brother Neville Green to be also raised to £225 from the 1st January last, which shall be the maximum salary of the fourth clerk.

To the report is subjoined a statement of the Grand Lodge Accounts, at the last meeting of the Finance Committee, held on Friday, the 12th day of February instant, showing a Balance in the Bank of England (Western Branch) of £4414 1s 5d; and in the hands of the Grand Secretary for Petty Cash £100, and for Servants' Wages £100; and Balance of Annual Allowance for Library £28 18s 6d.

7. REPORT OF THE COLONIAL BOARD.

To the United Grand Lodge of Antient Free and Accepted Masons of England.

The Colonial Board have to report to Grand Lodge that they have had brought under their notice an official copy of a circular issued by the Most Worshipful Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of the State of Illinois, United States of America, dated 12th November 1885, and sent from that Grand Lodge to the Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of England.

This edict is addressed to the Lodges in obedience to the Grand Lodge of Illinois, and recites a resolution of that Grand Lodge, to the effect that certain Lodges existing in the province of Quebec, and not owing allegiance to the Grand Lodge of that province, are illegal and irregular, and charging the brethren of the Grand Lodge of Illinois not to hold Masonic intercourse with such Lodges, or with any members thereof, and the Most Worshipful Grand Master of Illinois thereon issues his edict accordingly.

With reference to this announcement, the Colonial Board have to call attention to the Proceedings of Grand Lodge of the 3rd December 1884, when a correspondence between His Royal Highness the Grand Master and the Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Quebec was laid before the brethren.

It appeared by that correspondence that the Grand Lodge of Quebec demanded that the Warrants of the three Lodges holding under this Grand Lodge, which have existed and were working in Montreal long before the formation of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, should be at once withdrawn, because of the subsequent creation of that Grand Lodge, to which demand the Grand Master replied that he was unable to accede so long as these three Lodges elected to remain under their original and lawful adherence to the Grand Lodge of England, and the Grand Lodge unanimously approved of the action thus taken by the Most Worshipful Grand Master.

Since the Grand Secretary communicated the reply of the Grand Master to the Grand Lodge of Quebec no official communication on the subject has been received from that body, but in the Proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Illinois for the year 1885 an announcement appears in the Report of the Committee on Masonic Correspondence that the Grand Master of Quebec had issued his edict "severing fraternal relations" with the "three recusant Lodges holding authority from the Grand Lodge of England," and stating that the claim to have these Lodges recognised as legally existing "does not find any justification in law or common sense," and after quoting the edict of non-intercourse by the Grand Lodge of Quebec, it reports that the Committee had requested the Representative of that Grand Lodge at the Grand Lodge of Illinois to present the subject for consideration.

This having been done, the Grand Lodge of Illinois, at the instance of the Representative of the Grand Lodge of Quebec, requested its Grand Master to issue the edict of the 17th November 1885, whereby all intercourse with the three Lodges in question has been severed.

Inasmuch as the sole ground for thus ostracising the three Lodges is their continued allegiance to the Grand Lodge of England, the Colonial Board feels bound to submit to Grand Lodge that it would not be consistent that direct relationship should continue to exist between it and the Grand Lodge of Illinois, and that the action of that Body in thus intervening leaves no other course open than to vindicate the undoubted rights and privileges of this Grand Lodge by respectfully recommending to the Most Worshipful Grand Master that he should withdraw the Patent issued by him to the brother representing this Grand Lodge at that of Illinois, and should call on the brother who represents that Grand Lodge here to return the Patent appointing him its Representative; and this they submit accordingly.

(Signed) JOHN ANTHONY RUCKER,
President.

INSTALLATION MEETINGS, &c.

—:o:—

NEW CONCORD LODGE, No. 813.

THE annual meeting of this old and popular Lodge was held on 18th inst., at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham Street, where there was a goodly muster of the brethren, under the presidency of the Worshipful Master, Bro. Alfred J. Potter. There were also present Bros. C. Weeden S.W., A. Perl J.W., John Stilwell P.M. Treasurer, R. R. Harper P.M. Secretary, F. Perl S.D., J. E. Chubb J.D., J. T. Palley I.G., C. H. Ockelford D.C., Past Masters H. Gabb, L. Hadip, Bros. H. A. Gray, E. C. Conrad, J. Boulton, E. Barnes, W. B. Richards, J. R. Cordell, D. Sherwill, J. B. Smith, J. Arnold, T. Naylor, G. Brastlin, A. K. Turbefield Tyler, &c. Lodge was opened in accordance with ancient rites, and the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The ballot was then opened for Messrs. Edwin and Alfred Levesque, who had been proposed by Bro. Ockelford and seconded by Bro. F. Perl, and the voting being unanimously in favour, these gentlemen were initiated, the ceremony being admirably rendered by the Worshipful Master and his Officers. Lodge was then advanced to the second degree, and Bros. E. Barnes, T. Naylor, and J. Arnold were passed to Fellow Craft. The working in this degree was also gone through in most creditable manner, and elicited genuine expressions of approval. The brethren then proceeded to the election of Worshipful Master for the ensuing year, and the result was unanimously in favour of Bro. C. Weeden, who was highly complimented upon the manner in which he had discharged the duties of Senior Warden, and the minor offices which he had filled. Bro. Weeden briefly acknowledged the honour which had been conferred upon him, and promised to do his utmost to promote the welfare of the New Concord Lodge during his term of office. Bro. John Stilwell P.M. was unanimously re-elected Treasurer, with thanks for his past services; and Bro. A. K. Turbefield was re-appointed Tyler. The Auditors—Bros. W. B. Richards and J. R. Cordell—were re-elected, and compliments on the services they had rendered to the Lodge during the year. At the conclusion of the business, the brethren adjourned for refreshment, but this being an "off night," there were only a few short toasts, led off with the Queen and Craft, our Masonic Rulers, followed by the health of the Worshipful Master, for which Bro. Potter suitably replied. In the course of the evening, Bro. Sherwill received the congratulations of the brethren upon his return to London, in the capacity of manager of the Queen Anne Restaurant, Cheapside; and the compliment was duly acknowledged. It was also stated that the New Concord Lodge of Instruction was about to start a Benevolent Association, and that Bro. James Terry, Secretary of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, had kindly consented to take the chair at the inaugural meeting, on 10th March, the anniversary of the marriage of the Most Worshipful Grand Master the Prince of Wales. The meeting is to be held at the Jolly Farmers, Southgate-road, and will be continued on the second Wednesday in each month, at eight o'clock, when visitors will be cordially welcomed. The brethren have been fortunate enough to secure the services of Bro. R. R. Harper as Secretary of the new Association, which is expected to prove a great success. One or two other toasts were honoured, and the brethren separated at an early hour.

BURGOYNE LODGE, No. 902.

THERE was a highly satisfactory gathering of the members of this old and sound Lodge on Monday evening, at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet Street, when Bro. W. Williams was installed in the chair in the presence of a large and distinguished company. Taking a review of the whole proceedings, it is apparent that the Lodge has well sustained its reputation for usefulness and charity under the genial presidency of Bro. W. Batty, and that in his successor will be found a ruler who will follow in the good old lines laid down by his predecessor. Lodge was opened at half-past four o'clock, with the usual formalities. The Worshipful Master was supported by Bros. Williams S.W. and W.M. elect, Castell J.W., Harvey P.M. Treasurer, Jeffreys P.M. Secretary, Field P.M. D.C., Cross S.D., Smith J.D.; P.M.'s Bros. Wale, Gabb, Pocock, Byng, Wilkin and Reynolds; Bro. Gilbert Prov. Grand Tyler Middlesex Tyler, and about 40 other brethren. Amongst the visitors were Bros. Wrennall P.P.G.S.B. Bristol, Wheat P.M. 753, Taylor P.M. 902, J. Antler P.M. 1441, Barnley P.M. 957, Taylor P.M. 101, Tory P.M. 507, Frost P.M. 228, Wilson P.M. 1328, Ferguson P.M., Castle P.M., Making W.M. 1278, Alexander 1095, Atkins 548, White 132, E. W. Wills, G. T. Chreton 1328, G. Ellis 1962, C. Keeps 228, W. H. Wingfield P.M. 1360, H. J. Amphlett 1511, Arthur Coombes 1471, A. Jay 193, J. Hermann J.W. 1329, G. T. Turner 183, G. A. Dobbs 1586, R. W. Galer S.W. 1366, D. J. Bridegroom I.G. 1364, A. McDowall P.M. 948, J. H. Date 34, A. Dutton 34, J. Watts P.M. 507, and many others. Lodge having been opened in accordance with ancient rites the minutes of the last Lodge and emergency meetings were read and confirmed. By fiat of the Worshipful Master the ballot was opened for Mr. William Wheatley, of Cow Cross Street, E.C., who had been proposed by Bro. Castell J.W., and seconded by Bro. Clarke; and for Mr. W. L. Kellaway, builder, of White Lion Street, Clerkenwell, whose sponsors were the W.M. elect and Bro. Field P.M. D.C. Both were unanimously accepted, and after the installation ceremony the latter was initiated into the mysteries and privileges of the Order. Bro. W. Williams was then presented for the benefit of installation, and the ceremony was rendered in perfect manner by the retiring Master, whose working was much admired. On the re-admission of the Brethren the newly-installed Master was proclaimed and saluted with the honours in the three degrees, after which he invested his Officers for the year, the collars being thus bestowed: Bros. W. Batty I.P.M., C. Castel S.W., J. C. Cross J.W., R. H. Harrey P.M. Treasurer, H. C. Jefferys P.M. Secretary, R. N. Field P.M. Director of Ceremonies, J. Gilbert Tyler. The addresses to the Master, Wardens, and brethren were delivered with excellent effect by Bro. Batty, who was subsequently presented with a handsome Past Master's jewel, bearing the following inscription:—

"Presented by the brethren of the Burgoyne Lodge, No 902, to Bro. W. Batty W.M., as a token of fraternal regard, and in appreciation of his services rendered during his year of Mastership. February 1886."

The jewel had on the bars the title of the Lodge, with a very chaste and elaborate centre-piece in diamonds. Mr. Kellaway, being in attendance, was duly initiated, and the business having been concluded, the members and visitors adjourned to the banqueting-room, where a récherché repast was served by Bro. Clemow, in a manner which might only be expected from this old and reputed establishment. The arrangements were all that could be desired for the comfort and enjoyment of the guests, and elicited expressions of unbounded satisfaction. At dessert the customary Loyal and Masonic toasts were honoured, and the Immediate Past Master, in giving the health of the Worshipful Master, complimented Bro. Williams upon the position he had attained. He hoped the W.M. might have health and strength to carry him through his year of office; he was perfectly sure he would do so to the best of his ability and to the satisfaction of the brethren. The toast was received with the utmost cordiality. The Worshipful Master, in responding, said he did so with a certain amount of diffidence, but with pleasure at the very warm reception with which they had received the toast. He thanked the I.P.M. for the kindly terms in which the toast had been couched, and the brethren generally for the way in which they had accepted it. He was afraid that he had scarcely acquitted himself to their satisfaction, but if so they must attribute it to a slight nervousness on his part. He should endeavour to emulate the example of those who had preceded him in that position, and hoped by assiduity and application to work to merit that confidence which had been reposed in him. It would be his endeavour during his year of office to do all he could to promote the interests of the Lodge, as he had always done during the seven years he had been connected with it. He trusted that that night he had entered upon a happy year of office, and that they would all work in unison together as they had done since he had been in the Lodge. He then proposed the health of the Installing Master, Bro. W. Batty I.P.M., and thanked him for the splendid way in which he had performed the ceremony of installation. The manner in which he had done the work was a credit to himself and highly satisfactory to the whole of the brethren. Bro. Batty had during his year of office discharged his duty with fervency and zeal, and he had now the very pleasing task of pinning to his breast the jewel which had been so unanimously voted to him by the members of the Lodge. He trusted that the Great Architect of the Universe might give him health and happiness for many years to wear it, as an emblem of the respect and esteem he was held in the Lodge and the appreciation by the brethren of his ability and the valuable services he had rendered. The I.P.M. had very great pleasure in acknowledging the encomiums which the brethren had passed upon him, and which he thought were more than he deserved. When he entered the Lodge he did his best to sustain the prestige it had for so many years enjoyed, and by dint of perseverance and attending to the Lodge of Instruction, also copying the example of the Past Masters, he had succeeded to the proud position he now occupied. He trusted that the jewel which had so kindly been presented to him would not die with him, but be handed down to his children, all of whom he hoped would become Freemasons, as a memento of the kindly feelings which had been so tangibly expressed towards him that night. He again thanked them most sincerely for the manner in which the toast had been received and wished for the Lodge a long career of prosperity. The health of the Initiate was then proposed by the Worshipful Master, and received with its customary heartiness. The W.M. was somewhat disappointed that evening; he fully expected to have had two initiates, but he believed that in Bro. Kellaway they had one of the right quality, and that he would prove himself an apt and worthy student of the Craft. They had seen a few of his qualities, and he had never known an initiate acquit himself more satisfactorily than their Brother initiate had done that evening. Bro. Kellaway, in responding, said it had been one of the greatest ambitions and wishes of his life, and more particularly during the last six years, during which he had been in business in London, to become attached to a Lodge of Freemasons. At the same time his desire was to become attached to a Lodge of gentlemen. And he felt very proud with the little he had already been able to see of those present. It should be his endeavour to acquire that knowledge of the mystic art which would in time entitle him to occupy the chair now so ably filled by the Worshipful Master. He thanked them very much for the kindness which had been shown him on the night of his initiation, and for the splendid entertainment which had been given. The Worshipful Master then proposed the health of the Visitors, the toast being received with acclamation characteristic of the Burgoyne Lodge. Bro. W. Rennall P.P.G. Standard Bearer replied, and in doing so pointed out to the initiate that if he wished to obtain any prominence in Freemasonry he must take an active part in the work going on. There was a great responsibility resting upon all who joined the Fraternity, both in the practical and charitable work of Masonry. He was very glad to find that in London that excellent work was being carried out; he assured them that in his own Province of Bristol, though it only comprised eight Lodges, they were a very compact body, and were trying to emulate the example so well set before them by the brethren of the metropolis. They had cause to be exceedingly well satisfied with the manner in which the ceremony of installation had been rendered by the I.P.M., who had acquitted himself in a most masterly manner, that well entitled him to the handsome gift with which he had just been presented. He had never seen the ceremony better or more efficiently carried through than it had been by Bro. Batty. He hoped that the jewel would be handed down to posterity as a heirloom, showing the appreciation in which its recipient was at the present time held by the brethren of his Lodge. Bro. Frost, in the course of his response, said he had the honour of being present as Preceptor of the Lodge of Instruction, and he impressed upon the younger members the great advantages to be obtained by attending Lodges of Instruction. To the Officers of the Lodge it was only necessary to observe that "practice makes perfect." He thanked them on behalf of the Visitors; and for his own invitation, by virtue of his position as Preceptor of the Lodge of Instruction. The W.M. then proposed the P.M.'s of the Burgoyne Lodge. He supposed there was scarcely a member of the Lodge but who knew and appreciated the vast amount of labour which the P.M.'s threw into the work of the Lodge. They were always in their places, ready by their council and assistance to forward the interests of the Burgoyne Lodge. Bro. W. Wilkin, responding on behalf of the P.M.'s, said he congratulated the W.M. upon entering into what they all hoped might prove a happy and prosperous year. It was an old saying in the Lodge that the P.M.'s were always willing to assist in the work, and it was a pleasing fact that the P.M.'s of this Lodge were not content to rest idle after they had passed the chair. A great number of them held offices in the Royal Arch Chapter intimately associated with the Lodge, viz., the Panmure, No. 820. Several of the Past Masters of this Lodge had passed the chair in that Chapter, of which he (the speaker) was now the M.E.Z. elect. He hoped that during his year many of the members of the Lodge would associate themselves with the Panmure Chapter. The Worshipful Master then proposed the health of the Treasurer and Secretary of the Lodge, whom he designated two of the best Officers in London. They carried out the duties devolving upon them with zeal and assiduity, and never thought it any trouble to go out of their way, if by so doing they could advance the interests of the Lodge. They were always at the beck and call of the members when required, and cheerfully performed any duties that were conducive to the well-being of the Craft. Bro. R. H. Harvey P.M. and Treasurer thanked the brethren very much for the manner in which the toast had been received. To be Treasurer of this Lodge was to him a labour of love. He had plenty of time on his hands and being the oldest Past Master present he felt it not only a duty, but a great pleasure, to fill the office to which he had been so unanimously re-elected. This was his fourth year of office, and it would be his endeavour in the future, as it had been in the past, to well look after their funds. He congratulated the Lodge upon having a good balance in hand. The Lodge stood in a sound position, and owed no man anything. This time last year they had a balance of £100, and during Bro. Batty's Mastership they had been very charitable. They had sent three Past Masters as Stewards on behalf of the Institutions; Bro. Byng went up as a Steward for the "Old People," Bro. Wilkin for the "Boys," and the Immediate Past Master for the "Girls;" they were each voted ten guineas to head their respective lists, and with other subscriptions similarly voted the total amount was brought up to 36 guineas. They had also purchased new regalia, and incurred other minor expenses, so that the balance in hand at the last Audit meeting stood at £52 13s 7d, this he thought was very satisfactory, showing that they thought of the Charities first, and their creature comforts afterwards. Their esteemed S.W., Bro. J. C. Cross, was going up as a Steward at the approaching Festival for the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, and they were pledged to him for 10 guineas to his list, which sum he hoped would be substantially augmented by the brethren that evening. He hoped that the present Master might have as many initiates as Bro. Batty had been fortunate to admit, so that he might be enabled to extend that hospitality which he desired. His (the speaker's) great aim was to keep the Lodge out of debt, and so long as he was entrusted with their confidence he should be pleased to render whatever service he could to promote the best interests of the Lodge. Bro. H. C. Jeffery P.M. and Secretary also responded. He thanked them very warmly for the kind manner in which they had accepted his name in conjunction with this toast. For nine years, during which they had reposed confidence in him, he had worked amicably with the Treasurer and the members generally, and it was to him a source of satisfaction they had approved of his small efforts. As long as they entrusted him with the office he should strive to work for the furtherance of the Craft in general, and this Lodge in particular. The Worshipful Master then proposed the Officers of the Lodge, and in doing so said from what they had seen that day of the Officers whom he had the honour of appointing he had strong reason to believe they would acquit themselves equally as well as those who had gone before them. There was but one channel through which they could obtain position, and it was their duty regularly to attend the Lodge of Instruction. It was held at the Goose and Gridiron, in St. Paul's Churchyard, every Wednesday evening, at 7 p.m. The Officers respectively replied, and the list was closed in fitting manner by the Tyler. During the evening some excellent songs and recitations were rendered, notably amongst the former being Bros. Cantle, Coombes, and Reynolds. Altogether a most harmonious and enjoyable evening was passed.

GREY FRIARS LODGE, No. 1101.

THE regular Lodge meeting was held on the 10th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Reading. Present: Bros. R. C. Prickett W.M., J. H. Hawkes I.P.M., W. Ravenscroft S.W., H. Creed J.W., J. T. Stransom Treasurer, J. Greenaway Secretary, B. W. Bennett acting S.D., W. Hickie J.D., H. G. Sherwin acting Organist, Chas. Slaughter I.G., J. Sparrow and F. Brown Stewards, Past Masters R. C. Horley, R. Dowsett, W. G. Flanagan, E. Margrett; W. Rhind, E. W. Ridley, S. Biggs, O. Egginton, T. P. Stewart, S. Knight, G. S. Smallwood. Visitors: Bros. G. W. Webb W.M. 2043, C. B. Tubbs S.D. 2043, Richard Armstrong M.M. Mary's Chapel, No. 1. Lodge was opened and the minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed. The ballot was taken for Bro. H. G. Sherwin, of No. 1024, as a joining member, and was declared to be clear. Lodge was opened in the second degree, when Bro. Smallwood, a candidate for raising to the third, gave satisfactory proof of his efficiency, was entrusted, and he retired. Lodge was advanced, and Bro. Smallwood was re-admitted and raised. The first part of the ceremony was performed by the W.M., and the latter by Bro. E. Margrett P.M. The Secretary read a letter from the Prov. Grand Secretary, informing the Lodge that a grant of £10 10s had been awarded to the Grey Friars Lodge, No. 1101, from the Charity Fund, and wishing to be informed to which of the Masonic Charities the Lodge would like the grant appropriated; also informing the members that the Charity Committee had adopted the cases of Widow Leaver and Widow Ford for the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. Bro. E. Margrett P.M. proposed, and Bro. J. H. Hawkes I.P.M. seconded, that the Prov. Grand Lodge grant of £10 10s be added to the Worshipful Master's list, as Steward to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution Festival on 26th Feb.; this was carried. The labours of the evening being ended, the Lodge was closed in usual form and adjourned.

PORTSMOUTH TEMPERANCE LODGE, No. 2068.

THE installation of Bro. J. Palmer took place on Monday, 22nd inst., at the Soldier's Institute, Portsmouth, when the ceremony was most ably performed by Bro. Nayler P.M. The Officers appointed for the ensuing year were Bros. G. F. Bevis S.W., P. H. Emanuel J.W., Rev. Dr. William Stern Chaplain, T. Tuffnell Treasurer, J. R. Pither P.M. Secretary, W. Miller S.D., Q. Cecconi J.D., H. Kerridge I.G., A. Chugg D.C., G. Williams and J. Coote Stewards. Bro. Tufnell was presented with a Founders' jewel, subscribed for by the members of the Lodge, as a mark of high esteem. The sum of £21 was voted towards the Provincial Education Fund. After closing of the Lodge the brethren adjourned to a banquet, well served by Bro. Mayhour. Amongst those present were Bros. Woodhouse, Palmer, Reading, Bevis, Pither, Emanuel, Chugg, Robinson, Cecconi, Adames, Miller, Nayler, Dillon, Hoare, Porter, Tuffnell, Beckley, White, Fisher, Cusk, A. W. Bevis, Williams, Prior, Coote, Honey, Skeens, Allen, and Tingle, members of the Lodge. The Visitors included Bros. Goble P.G.S., Jackson P.G. Steward, Gieve I.P.M., Gilmour W.M. 309, Sanders W.M. 312, Smoker W.M., Pocock S.W., and Hann 928, Dempsey W.M. and Ch. Lork no Organist 933, Batchelor I.P.M. 1705, Wattoman 1272, Foster W.M. and White jun. 1776, Long W.M. 1903, Lancaster I.P.M. 1950, Brockwell P.M. S.W. 2071.

Royal Military Lodge of Instruction, No. 1449.—A meeting was held on the 22nd inst., at the Masonic Temple, Canterbury. Present: Bros. Abbs W.M., Tomblings S.W., Pepper J.W., Beckett Secretary, McClintock S.D., Clayton J.D., Gellee Steward, Cockerell I.G., Past Masters Hammond and Blamires. Lodge was opened and the minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. Bros. Pepper, Clayton, Tomblings, Cockerell, and McClintock explained the working tools of the first and second degrees. Lodge was closed in second degree, and after routine work the brethren separated.

Langton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1673.—At the meeting on Tuesday, the 16th inst., the ceremony of installation was rehearsed by Bro. R. Clay Sallow P.G.S.D. Kent, Bro. H. M. Hobbs being W.M. elect. This brother afterwards appointed and invested his Officers, as follow: Bros. Gordon Smith S.W., W. G. Oates J.W., J. D. Langton Secretary, A. Toulmin S.D., E. M. Morriss J.D., T. Bird I.G. The whole ceremony and the charges were rendered in Bro. Sallow's well-known impressive manner. There were also present Bros. Fraser, Knight, Carter, Holden, Marshall, Ridpath, Barnes, &c. Visitors: Bros. Harrison, Martin, &c. Bro. Sadlow, who had been formerly Preceptor of the Lodge, was unanimously elected an honorary member, and a cordial vote of thanks passed to him for his kindness in acting as Installing Master. After the Lodge had been closed, the third meeting of the Langton Masonic Benevolent Association was held, Bro. J. D. Langton, the Vice-President of the Society, in the chair. The Treasurer announced that 111 shares had been taken up, and three ballots of 10 guineas each were drawn, these were appropriated to Bros. Janson, Rauson, and Royal.

"Dr. G. H JONES, F.R.S.L., the well-known Surgeon-Dentist of 57 Great Russell Street, London, has just re-issued his popular treatise on the teeth, which should be read by every one wishing to have a good and sound set of teeth; 'Painless and Perfect Dentistry' is its title, which will be found fully justified on perusal of its pages, as many hints for the guidance of those seeking a really practical and scientific dental surgeon will be found. The care and treatment of the teeth, with much useful information concerning the mouth and its molars, is contained therein, and we cordially commend the brochure of Dr. G. H. Jones, to the attention of our readers, which will be found a true guide, philosopher, and friend. The concluding chapters of the book are devoted to a description of the Author's method of dental treatment, which has obtained so high a reputation, and which seems to realise the desideratum of 'holding the mirror up to nature.'"—The Brighton Standard, December 1885.

UNITED GRAND LODGE OF ENGLAND.

THE regular Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge was held on Wednesday at Freemasons' Hall, London, under the presidency of Bro. Hugh D. Sandeman, Past District Grand Master of Bengal, who was supported by Arthur M. Saunders, District Grand Master of Madras, as Deputy Grand Master, the Marquis of Hertford S.G.W., Lieut.-Colonel the Hon. W. E. Sackville West J.G.W., Rev. Canon G. R. Portal and Rev. R. N. Sanderson Grand Chaplains, Major John W. Woodall Grand Treasurer, F. A. Philbrick, Q.C., Grand Registrar, Thomas Fenn President Board of General Purposes, Colonel Shadwell H. Clerke Grand Secretary, E. E. Wendt, D.C.L., Grand Secretary German Correspondence, A. Meadows, M.D., S.G.D., F. H. Goldney J.G.D., Sir Albert W. Woods (Garter) Grand Director of Ceremonies, J. H. Paul, M.D., D.G.D.C., Butler Wilkins and G. P. Brockbank Grand Standard Bearers, E. M. Lott, Mus. Doc., Grand Organist, Henry Garrod Grand Pursuivant, and A. Lucking Assistant Grand Pursuivant, together with a large number of Past Grand Officers and members of Grand Lodge. Grand Lodge having been opened, the minutes of the December Communication were read and confirmed, and then the brethren proceeded to the election of a Grand Master for the ensuing year. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales was proposed for re-election by Bro. Burdett-Coutts, M.P., and the proposition having been seconded by Bro. Charles Martin P.G. Steward, His Royal Highness was unanimously re-elected, and afterwards proclaimed by Sir Albert Woods G.D.C., as Grand Master of England. Bro. Burdett-Coutts, in making the proposition, said the members of Grand Lodge owed the Prince of Wales not only the loyalty that attached to the Heir to the Throne, but also that special loyalty which all Masons must entertain towards one who had rendered the Craft such distinguished services as he had done. During the Grand Mastership of the Prince of Wales 600 or 700 new Lodges had been added to the roll of the Grand Lodge of England, and every year some 800 or 900 brethren had been initiated; vast sums had been subscribed to the great Masonic Charities, and large amounts distributed by the Board of Benevolence. The Prince of Wales was one who combined in himself not only the dignity of his Royal position and special Masonic qualifications to which he had alluded, but whose character was so gracious and genial that he had endeared himself to every man who came in contact with him. The election of G. Treasurer was the next business, and scrutineers having been appointed, under the Chairmanship of Brother Robert Grey P.G.D., the balloting papers were collected, and the scrutineers retired for the counting. The proposition which stood in the name of the Most Worshipful Grand Master, "that the sum of two hundred guineas be voted from the fund of General Purposes as a donation from Grand Lodge to the Mansion House Fund now being raised for the relief of the unemployed in London," was submitted from the chair, seconded by the acting Dep. G.M., and carried unanimously. The G.M. in the chair, in making the proposition, said he had in his hand a letter from the private secretary of the Grand Master, stating the great regret the Prince of Wales felt in not being able to be present that evening, in order that he might himself put the motion before Grand Lodge, a motion in which he felt very deep interest. The absence of the Prince of Wales on the continent prevented his being present, and he had delegated whoever might fill the chair of Grand Lodge that evening to make the proposition. Bro. Sandeman felt it was sufficient for the brethren to know that their Grand Master, with his large heart of charitable feeling and of sympathy for his fellow human beings, should have made the proposition to ensure its being carried, but apart from that, all knew the tremendous and very great distress which was existing, and had existed, amongst those unemployed in London. He put the proposition before them, as charitable men, without further remarks. In declaring the motion carried, the acting Grand Master said that as it had been agreed to with such unanimous feeling he presumed the brethren would allow the staff of Grand Lodge to pay the sum over at once in anticipation of the confirmation of the minute at the next Quarterly Communication, a suggestion which was received with hearty cheers. The grants recommended by the Board of Benevolence for the last quarter, and of which we gave a list in our last issue, were then agreed to, while the Report of the Board of General Purposes, also published by us last week, was taken as read, and ordered to be entered on the minutes. Bro. Thomas Fenn P.G.D., President of the Board, in proposing that the Report be adopted, referred to the rule which limited the salaries of the clerks in the Grand Secretary's Office. In 1874 when the rule was made, there were five clerks in the office, now there were seven. Then there were some 1,800 Lodges and Chapters on the roll, now there were 2,700—an increase of fifty per cent. The work had naturally increased. The two brethren whose salaries it was proposed to increase, and who had served thirteen years, were in precisely the same condition, in regard to salary, as their juniors who had only served eight years. The adoption of the Report was agreed to unanimously. The report of the Colonial Board was also taken as read, and ordered to be entered on the minutes. Its adoption was subsequently moved by Bro. J. A. Rucker P.G.D. (the President of the Colonial Board), seconded by Brother Brackstone Baker P.G.D., and agreed to unanimously by Grand Lodge. Bro. Brackstone Baker, in the course of his remarks said, that when the Grand Lodge of Canada was established, in 1859, there was an understanding that those English Lodges in Canada which wished to retain their allegiance to the Grand Lodge of England should do so, as it was admitted on both sides they had a perfect right to do. In fact, Brother Colonel Mercer Wilson, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada, writing to the Earl of Zetland, on the 9th of February 1859, said, that "he had ever held that any subordinate Lodges preferring to continue under their English warrant, had a perfect and undoubted right to do so, and were entitled to all their Masonic privileges." On this principle being admitted, the Grand Lodge of Canada was at once recognised. Again when the Grand Lodge of Quebec was formed the very same conditions were laid down, and those conditions having been now violated by the Grand Lodge of Illinois, he, as the representative of that Grand Lodge in Grand Lodge of England, begged respectfully to be permitted to throw up his representative patent.

The Scrutineers of the ballot for Grand Treasurer then presented their statement of the numbers polled on behalf of the respective candidates, and the acting Grand Master declared Brother Cama to be elected by a large majority. The actual votes polled were—

Bro. Harding having presented his report of the receipts and disbursements of Grand Lodge during the year 1885, the same was received and ordered to be entered on the minutes. The two appeals of which notice had been given were, on the recommendation of Bro. Philbrick G. Reg. dismissed, while the motion by Bro. D. D. Mercer was lost by a large majority. This proposition was to the effect that no brother who is in receipt of an annuity from the funds of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution shall be entitled to participate in the funds at the disposal of the Board of Benevolence, and Brother Mercer, in moving it said, it arose out of what happened at the Board of Benevolence in January. A brother who was then, and now, receiving an annuity of £40 from the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, and who had been relieved in 1870, applied to the Board for further assistance. When he (Bro. Mercer) looked at the Book of Constitutions at that meeting he found there was no rule as to how such a case should be treated. There was a difference among the brethren at the Board, whether they should entertain the case or not; but the petition was so strongly supported by many influential brethren who were present, that they determined at last to recommend that a sum should be granted to the brother; but, in order to know how to act in the future, he thought it better that Grand Lodge should decide. At the meeting he had said, and he said again, it was opening the door to a very bad principle to grant relief to brethren who were annuitants of the Benevolent Institution. The supporters of the petitioner made a very strong appeal that, inasmuch as he had done a very great deal for Masonry, and a great deal for the Masonic Charities, he should be relieved. He admitted the brother had done a great deal for both, but his reply was, that if the brother had done all this amount of good his work was most munificently rewarded by a grant, on a former occasion, of £250 from the Board of Benevolence. Brother Nunn P.G. Sword Bearer, President of the Board of Benevolence, seconded the motion. As Grand Lodge gave £1600 a year to the Benevolent Institution, and the brother had been previously relieved very handsomely by the Board of Benevolence, he thought that brother had no right to appeal again. Brother F. Binckes P.G. Steward opposed the motion, and repeated the statements as to the great amount of good the brother in question had done to Freemasonry. He contended that the leading principle and tenet of Freemasonry was Charity. If a brother, or a widow, or children were in distress, that distress was not to be refused relief because the object of Charity was in receipt of £40 a year. It had been stated at the Board of Benevolence that if this particular case was relieved by the Board, every annuitant of the Benevolent Institution would be coming to the Board of Benevolence for further relief; but he begged Grand Lodge to remember this, that the members of the Board had confidence reposed in them to deal with every individual case on its merits, and if any annuitant's case was brought before the Board, if it was unworthy, the Board would have sufficient discrimination to discover the fact. He asked Grand Lodge not to indulge in a systematic legislation of disfranchisement, or to deprive the Board of Benevolence of the discretion with which it was entrusted. Brother James Stevens and several others spoke in favour of Brother Binckes's view of the case, and eventually, as we have said, the original proposition was rejected by a large majority. Grand Lodge was then closed.

THE SO-CALLED SWEDENBORG RITE.

By Brother Jacob Norton.

STEINBRENNER'S "Origin of Masonry" appeared in New York in 1863 or 1864, and the English editions of Findel's history were successively published in 1866 and 1869. The said works furnished conclusive evidence that Masonic degrees did not exist before 1717 and that Templarism and Scotch Riteism were unknown to have had any connection with Masons or Masonry before 1735. I have here, however, another book, published in 1870 in the same office wherein Steinbrenner's "Origin" was published, viz., "The Swedenborg Rite," by Samuel Beswick, in which the author claims that high degreedom in Masonry was an old institution in 1717. He says:

"Upsal, where Swedenborg graduated, has been rendered somewhat famous by the Philosophical degrees of St. Martin. In one of the degrees Upsal is spoken of as the first place which sent forth Freemasonry and the Templar Order over Europe. It represents that eighty-one Masons came to Europe about 1150, under the care of Garimont, Patriarch of Jerusalem, and went to Sweden to the Archbishop of Upsal, where they inclosed all their Masonic information in a marble tomb, placed in a subterranean vault. This tomb was subsequently discovered, &c., &c. And according to St. Martin, these eighty-one Masons established Freemasonry in Europe, and nine of them established the Order of the Temple."

The above tradition annihilates with "one fell swoop" the Grand Masterships of St. Alban, St. Augustin, King Alfred, Athelstan, and others; for in that case Masonry could not have reached Egypt but a few years before the reign of Henry II. The antiquity of Masonic Templarism having been proved on the authority of St. Martin, Bro. Beswick's history of Swedenborg's Templar Masonry seems very plausible. He says:

"When about eighteen years of age, in the year 1706, and whilst [Swedenborg] was on a visit to his home in Brunsbo * * * he went to see the University of Lund. Here he was for the first time initiated into the mysteries of Masonry, taking the Chapter degrees of the Scottish Rite, which formed part of the series. On his return he joined or affiliated with the Stockholm Chapter."

If it should be objected that Swedenborg was in 1706 only eighteen years of age, and that he must have falsified his age in order to gain admission, we reply that it was customary to initiate in the Continental Chapters and Lodges at an age so low as seventeen, Masonic discipline was so lax that all the Continental Universities had their Chapters and Lodges, which acknowledged no governing head, and therefore it is no wonder that they became disorderly from the intemperate conduct of their youthful members. For mere boys were admitted, and the only qualification for membership was, that the candidate shall have been on the roll of the University."

The question however is, what became of the Lund University Lodge? And Bro. Beswick explains it by the following anecdote:—He says that the Jesuits had composed an anti-Masonic sarcastic ballad (and they must have set it to music too). This ballad was distributed among the non-Masonic students, and, after which, whenever and wherever a youthful Knight appeared, the satirical ballad was invariably hummed into his ears, and this caused the breaking up of the Lund Lodge. But the mischief did not end there. Bro. Beswick says:—

"It was this lack of discipline and independence of the University Chapters and Lodges which caused Von Ecklef, Master of Stockholm Chapter * * * to give the Swedish system to Zinnerdorf without the privity of the Grand Lodge. Hence, the reason why, for half a century after Swedenborg's initiation, the debasement of the Order became inevitable, and hundreds of degrees were fabricated and promulgated in the Lodges to the great detriment of the Order and the scandal of Symbolic Masonry. Scores of systems were in operation at the same time, each patronised and defended by able advocates in every station of life."

It is strange that while Bro. Beswick was acquainted with several languages, and was fully aware of the fabrication in the last century of innumerable Masonic degrees and Rites, that not the slightest suspicion entered his mind that his own high degrees were also invented in the last century, and such is the case with all our advocates of certain pet rights of their own. Their pets they claim as ancient, but all other Rites they denounce as bogus, &c. Thus, a majority of the members of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts have become infatuated with certain high degrees, and therefore the said Grand Lodge declared and resolved that only their pet degrees belong to ancient Masonry. The truth however is, the one kind of high degrees are no more ancient than the other kinds, they are merely "six of one and half a dozen of the other."

Bro. Beswick gives a full account of all the visits Swedenborg made in the course of his travels in Europe to various Lodges, Chapters, and Commanderies—one specimen will suffice. He informs us that "Swedenborg remained in Stralsund from 1713-14 to the spring of 1715. Here again he renewed his visits to Chapters and Commanderies of these two seaside towns, and here he was perhaps better known amongst the fraternity from his visits during this period of his history than from his associations in Stockholm."

Whence Brother Beswick gathered his information about Swedenborg's visits to Masonic Lodges in 1715, and up to the time of his death, I cannot tell. In fact, he had no positive proof to give, but he got hold of a letter which Swedenborg wrote from Stockholm in 1715, after his return from a visit made to his brother, in which he stated, "I might easily have arrived yesterday, had it not been for the darkness and uncertainty of finding quarters with some one in a blue dress." Be it remembered that Sweden was then at war with Russia, Denmark, &c., it is not improbable that people in Stockholm may then have been divided in opinion, and that the different parties may have adopted different colours, and that a green dress may have distinguished one of the parties from the others. Bro. Beswick, however, says, that "Swedenborg's allusion to the blue dress had no reference to any special relation or acquaintance, as the reader might suppose * * * but it alludes to the dress belonging to the Order of Sublime and Ineffable Masonry which he had joined."

But the question still remains, where is the documentary evidence that Swedenborg was an Ineffable Mason? or a Mason at all? To this he replies as follows:—

"In the archives of the Chapter at Christianstadt there is an old record book containing the minutes of a Convention or Lodge held in Wittshoffe, 5th June 1785 * * * Among other things, the minutes state that the first brother of the watch, Lieutenant-Colonel and Knight Baltzar Wedemar, upon this occasion delivered a Lecture on Masonry * * * In this lecture he mentioned the writings of Swedenborg, and spoke of his career as a Freemason, that he [Swedenborg] visited Charles XII. in Altensted in order to have the high Orders of Masonry introduced into Sweden. That Mr. Wedemar himself had visited the Lodge in London which Swedenborg joined in the year 1706, and that the signature of his name is in the register of the Lodge."

The said London Lodge is said to have been named Emanuel Lodge, No. 6. Now, if Swedenborg was initiated in London, he could not also have been initiated at Lund in the same year. To this Bro. Beswick replies:

"The Swedenborgian Masons in Stockholm and Sweden generally supposed that Swedenborg was first initiated in an English Lodge, called Emanuel Lodge, No. 6, London: but this is undoubtedly a mistake. The writer heard of this report over twenty years ago, when he and others were hunting for information in relation to Swedenborg's career as a Freemason, and the report proved to be without the least foundation."

Bro. Beswick very justly objects to the "No. 6 London Lodge" theory, for the following reasons: first, Lodges in England in those days were known only by the names of the public-houses wherein they held their meetings, and had no other names; second, that in 1717 there were only four Lodges in London; and third, he quotes from a letter of an English Grand Secretary, that the records of the early Lodges did not exist; and on the other hand, he shows that in some French Geographical Dictionary Lund is called Lunden, and Lunden was mistaken for London. All this, however, might have been admitted as reasoning if it was not too well known that Masonic Chapters, Commanderies, and high Orders in Masonry did not exist either in 1706, or at any period during the lifetime of Charles XII. of Sweden; and if a Bro. Wedemar delivered in Sweden in 1785 such a lecture as above intimated, it simply proves that he was not a bit more veracious than a thousand and one of our English and American St. John's Day orators were, and still are. In short, all the evidence thus far furnished by Bro. Beswick is totally worthless to prove that Swedenborg was a Mason.

But yet, as Swedenborg was an indefatigable writer, and he left many of his writings, in the shape of books, letters, &c., hence some evidence of Swedenborg's knowledge of Masonry I thought might have been discovered in Swedenborg's writings. Such, however, is not the case, as the following admission of Bro. Beswick himself shows. In the last chapter of his book he says:—

"From the very moment of his initiation, Swedenborg appears to have resolved never to allude to his membership or to his knowledge of Freemasonry either publicly or privately. He appears to have made up his mind to keep it a profound secret. * * * We have searched his Itinerary, which contains brief references to everything he saw, heard, and read during his travels, for something having relation to his Masonic knowledge, intercourse, correspondence, visits to Lodges, places or persons; but there is a studied silence and systematic avoidance of allusion to it. The time which he devotes (meaning devoted) to Masonic intercourse is always a perfect blank in his journal. The whole of 1737, and the spring of 1738, is a blank. * * * Exactly twelve months after, he returns to Paris, and again his journal is a blank during the whole of 1739 and 1740, including the Masonic visits he made on his way home. Many Masonic letters must have been sent to him during the last twenty years of his life, from France especially, but not one can be found. All Masonic correspondence seems to have been systematically destroyed."

A man endowed with an ounce of common sense would have taken Swedenborg's silence about Masonry as an evidence that he knew nothing about it. But our high degree Masons, though they may have pounds of learning, as a rule lack the proverbial ounce of common sense. Hence, Swedenborg's silence, according to the marvellous reasoning of Bro. Beswick, is the strongest proof that Swedenborg was a Mason. He says:

"Knowing it as well as he did, he (Swedenborg) would undoubtedly have condemned it, and illustrated its tendency in the memorable relations of his theological writings; if he had disapproved of it, his mouth would not have remained sealed * * * His silence proves his great consistency as a Mason, even if he approved of it." To which he adds, "We think we are justified in affirming that Swedenborg never had any official position in a Lodge."

I confess that up to the time I got hold of Beswick's book I had not met in a Masonic publication any information relating to the "Swedenborg Rite; and I naturally supposed that Swedenborg was a Mason, and was the manufacturer of a Rite. The book before me, however, convinced me that Swedenborg never was a Mason at all.

After I had copied the above questions from Bro. Beswick's book, and had interlarded them with some comments, I consulted our three standard Masonic Cyclopædias. Well, Bro. Mackenzie says, "It can hardly be admitted that he (Swedenborg) was of the Fraternity." Brother Woodford, in Kenning's Cyclopædia, says, "We deny that Swedenborg was a Mason." And Dr. Mackey, after giving several extracts from Swedenborg's theological writings, says, "Such passages as these might lead one to suppose that Swedenborg was familiar with the system of Masonic ritualism. His complete reticence from the subject, however, and the whole tenour of his life, his studies, and his habits, assure us that such was not the case; and that if there was any borrowing of one from another, and not an accidental coincidence, it was the Freemasons of the high degrees who borrowed from Swedenborg, and not Swedenborg from them; and if so, we cannot deny that he has unwittingly exercised a powerful influence on Masonry."

Or, in other words, instead of Swedenborg having been Masonised by the high degreers, the high degrees were Swedenborgianised through the writings of Swedenborg. The general opinion however is, that one of the French degree fabricators manufactured three new degrees and clapped them on to the original English three degrees, and palmed them off as a "Swedenborg Rite." The said Rite is thus explained by Bro. Beswick:

1st. York Rite or Templar Masonry of three degrees, being an embodiment of the ancient original ritual, dating back to the period of building Solomon's Temple.

2nd. Swedenborg Rite of Symbolic Masonry of three degrees, and dating back to a period preceding the building of Solomon's Temple."

He also explains the Rite as follows. After naming in succession the first three English degrees, he says:

"4th. Enlightened Freemason, or green brother; 5th, Sublime Freemason, or blue brother; and 6th, Perfect Freemason, or red brother."

I shall only add that Bro. Gould merely refers to Swedenborg's influence on the Swedish Rite. Bro. Findel, though he gave a sketch of Swedenborg's life, never seems to have doubted Swedenborg's Masonry. Bro. Rebold is emphatic, and refers to him as "one of the most eminent Masons of the time—the Brother Swedenborg." And if it had not been for the over zeal of Bro. Beswick, I think that our Masonic Cyclopædists would never have questioned Swedenborg's connection with the Craft. Thus, one by one, the pretensions of the high degrees were exposed. But yet such is the prevailing appetite for more degrees that the last swindle, viz., "The Mystic Shrine," seems to be a success, for hundreds are madly rushing into it in all the States, from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

BOSTON, U.S., 17th February 1886.

PART I.—THE FOUNDATION.

INTRODUCTORY to the subject it may be well to explain that in what follows it is not intended that any new system of philosophical reasoning will be presented, nor is it expected, if it were possible, that all the ground will be covered which is suggested by the subject: Masonic Triples. But the object is to unlock a part of the mysteries of Masonry with the assistance of the threefold key, and inquire what the Institution is, what it teaches, and what are the duties which it enjoins?

The subject itself is threefold, and an analysis based upon the symbolism of the Temple logically presents the parts in the order we have chosen: First, the foundation; second, the edifice; third, the ornamentation.

The man who is made a Mason is early told that he is about to receive truths which will enable him to build his true Masonic edifice; or, in other words, as a Mason his character must become conformed, to the proper contour of the stones of that spiritual building, that temple not made with hands. How shall he do it? What door does the triple-key unlock that light may shine and give the neophyte "good and wholesome instruction?"

Let us inquire, What is Masonry? The authorized Text-Book of Vermont, and it agrees substantially with the manuals or monitors of all the other jurisdictions, answers the question in these words: "It is a beautiful system of morality, veiled in allegory and illustrated by symbols. Truth is its centre, the point whence its radii diverge. It leads its disciples to a correct knowledge of the Great Architect of the Universe, and the moral laws He has ordained for their government."

The threefold answer as contained in the "Ancient Constitutions," which are declared to be "obligatory, as fundamental regulations, in all parts of the world," is in these words, which we number to emphasize the proper division, as follows: (1.) "Whoever, from love of knowledge, interest, or curiosity, desires to be a Mason, is to know that as his foundation and great corner-stone, he is firmly to believe in the Eternal God, and to pay that worship which is due to Him as the Great Architect and Governor of the Universe." (2.) "A Mason must observe the moral law. And if he rightly understands the royal art, he will never be an atheist, or an irreligious libertine; and will never act against the great inward light of his own conscience." (3.) "He will likewise shun the errors of bigotry and superstition, making a due use of his own reason, according to that liberty wherewith a Mason is made free; for though in ancient time Masons were charged to comply with the religious opinions and usages of the country or nation where they sojourned or worked, yet it is now thought most expedient that the brethren in general should only be charged to adhere to the essentials of religion, in which all men agree, leaving each brother to his own judgment as to particular forms. Whence, being good men and true, of unsullied honour and unfailing honesty, the Order becomes the centre of union, and the means of conciliating true friendship."

The literature of the Fraternity upon this subject is both voluminous and learned. The best energies of many minds have been spent in throwing light upon the theory of our Institution, and these brothers, while they have been far from a textual agreement, have imparted distinguishing characteristics to the public teachings of our Craft which are well known. Because of this fact we begin by quoting the original language in which our ancient brethren promulgated the "fundamental regulations" so that the reader may see clearly the foundation of the system. And this is the more necessary because we are known, in the world around us, by what our own writers have averred were the tenets of the Fraternity. We find in a leading encyclopædia, in connection with a long and scholarly history of Freemasonry, this answer to the question of "What is Masonry?" and while the inference to be drawn therefrom is not as palatable as a true and loyal brother could wish, there is no use in trying to argue it aside. It is the studied, candid, and (we may say) impartial verdict of a board of editors second to none in the world. They state: "As regards the future of Freemasonry, it is impossible at least for outsiders to say much. The celebration of the Brotherhood of Man, and the cultivation of universal goodness in the abstract, seem rather indefinite objects for any society in this unimaginative age. There is, on the one hand, a tendency to degenerate into mere conviviality; while if schools, or asylums, or other charities are supported, to that extent of course the society becomes local and even exclusive in its character. In the meantime, Masonry is to blame for keeping afloat in the minds of its members many of the most absolutely puerile ideas. A more accurate knowledge of its own singular and not undignified history would tend more than anything else to give worth and elevation to its aims. No one now believes the stupid slander that Freemasons are engaged in any definite conspiracy against the state, religion, or social order. There is, however, something in their fundamental principles, the fraternity of men, and their indifference to theological belief, and also in their recent movements, which perhaps justifies the suspicion, and even hatred, with which they are regarded by the Ultramontane party. Masonry in each country, of course, takes its colouring from the state of thought and feeling by which it is surrounded, but it cannot be disputed that the German, Dutch, Belgian and French magazines of the Craft occasionally exhibit a tone which is not favourable to Christianity regarded as a special revelation. The tendency of political opinion in such an association is also necessarily democratic; and while it would be absurd to make the brotherhood answerable for the opinions of Mazzini, or the outrages of the Commune, and while the majority of Brethren are loyal subjects, and probably orthodox Christians (in the theological sense,) the Institution itself undoubtedly 'makes for' liberty in matters both civil and spiritual."

In this excerpt the reader's mind grasps the verdict of history upon the first one hundred and sixty-eight years of our Institution as Speculative Craft Masonry. Is it true? We think it is false in several important particulars; that the "fundamental regulations" of the Ancient Constitutions convey a very diverse impression, and that it is high time the arguements pro and con concerning Freemasonry's antiquity, its higher or three degrees, were merged into a candid inquiry how shall a brother best learn and practise the three great duties which, as a Mason, he is charged to inculcate: to God, to his neighbour, and to himself? The symbolism of the Institution sinks to a secondary place beside this question. "It is the design of the Masonic Institution to make its votaries wiser, and therefore better," and if this design is not achieved, what matters it whether there be any legitmate degrees or any society at all?

The voice of Masonic Triples, based upon the first part of the Ancient Constitutions, cited above, teaches that the foundation of the Masonic edifice is "to believe in the Eternal God." This certainly implies that the regulating power is supernatural; that a belief in Revelation is an essential, and logically explains why there are "three great lights," and that the chief one of these is the Bible. This position admitted, the Holy Bible (the New Testament as well as the Old) becomes indeed a "rule and guide," and in all Lodges is "dedicated to God, because it is the inestimable gift of God to man." Our investigation, therefore, will be from a Christian standpoint. We say Christian advisedly, but not in a sectarian sense. By Christianity here we mean that Spirit of God in the world which saves from the blight of sin; the power which is destined to work the world's redemption from the curse of the broken law; the leaven which will ultimately restore man to the holiness marred by sin, and which, when it shall have filled the earth, will usher in that era of universal brotherhood which is the fulness of the Masonic type. In short, the voice of the first great Masonic Triple teaches the God of the Bible, the brotherhood of the Bible, the manhood of the Bible; these, and nothing less, or the Masonic Institution belies the plain readings of its ritual.

Antiquity, therefore, for the Christian morality which breathes through every part of Speculative Masonry, cannot be conceded. A sort of caste or brotherhood may be traced in systems of the "Mysteries" prior to the Christian era, it is true, but that fraternity was not founded upon the law of sacrifice, inculcated by the "Golden Rule," which is the present basis of the Masonic profession, and which has only been known since the first Christmas anthem was sung amid Judean hills. The brother who denies the "Glad Tidings:" "Peace on earth: good will to man," or who seeks to hide the living personality behind a vague generalization, rejects the central support in the foundation of the Fraternity to which he would fain adhere, and throws to the winds his best argument why Masonry exists. A supernatural foundation is necessary because of deadly evil to remedy; if natural morality is sufficient why is the Masonic brotherhood desirable as an auxiliary of Christian civilization or for any other purpose?

The brother's future Masonic and moral edifice is to be builded according to the divine plan of the Temple, the pattern and details whereof were a matter of direct revelation. The contrast or comparison between this sacred edifice and the symbolism of Masonry form an invaluable and almost inexhaustible mine of knowledge. The number three is the only key which satisfactorily unlocks the sealed recesses of our mystic temple. Let us look at a few of the Triples.

The Tabernacle was the type; the Temple was its consummation. They each had three apartments, the holy of holies where the highest act of worship was to be performed, the apartment of sacrifice, and the outer court of congregation. Corollary we find Masonry to possess a triple: Faith, Hope, Charity. Reference being had to the Ancient Constitutions (above), we find this triple to mean belief and worship (Faith), sacrifice for the good of others (Hope the mainspring), Love the centre of union ("Charity that never faileth.") Thrice in the Temple Builder's life was Solomon directed by prophetic dreams and visions—at the three epochs of his rise, his climax and his fall. Masonry directs special attention to the three steps, which are emblematical of youth, manhood, and age. The parallel symbolism from authentic history and our monitors is striking. Entered Apprentices should strive after the attainment of knowledge, so that as Fellow Crafts they may discharge their duty to God, to their neighbours, and to themselves, that so as Master Masons they may enjoy the rewards of a well-spent life and attain unto a blissful immortality. Solomon was blessed in just so much as he followed these divine maxims. The Temple itself had a threefold history. David was the Proposer; Solomon was the Founder; and latter men were the Purifiers and Restorers. So in Masonry we find three degrees, of the original body, and several supplemental or restored mysteries. Like all great works the original Temple was the result of a long succession of events. This is also true of Masonry in its early history as a progressive institution, and which will reasonably account for many things not plain to the profane.

And this introduces the first part of our subject: the foundation of our Speculative Masonic and moral edifice. The permanence of our Institution depends upon the answer given, and just here we shall be obliged to differ with many brothers and those whose interpretations have called out the quotation in the Encyclopædia mentioned above. The true ground to take is to plant one's feet firmly upon the triune God of the Bible. This position is historically accurate as well. Masonically it breathes in every ceremony of the Grand and Secular Lodge. The invocation in the charge to the Grand Master at his installation is: "May the Father of Light, of Life, and of Love [Father, Saviour, Comforter], give you wisdom, &c. The Worshipful Master at his installation is particularly charged: "The Holy Writings, that great light in Masonry, will guide you to all truth: it will direct your paths to the temple of happiness, and point out to you the whole duty of man." Historically, it is now known, from recent discoveries and translations of the rituals of the dead of the ancient Egyptians, that their Deity was triune. Their religion was not a belief in many gods, but in One Threefold Deity, represented to the eye by diverse and varied forms. Granted, then, that our Fraternity has descended from the "Ancient Mysteries," the foundation at the first is consistent with the premises that under a Christian dispensation Masonry believes in the Triune God of Revelation. And this need be no tumbling block to those who reject the New Testament. Even they admit that man was created in the image of God. An analysis of man's being discloses the same threefold existence, separate and yet one: perfect only when the three are united, Body, Soul [affections], Mind. From this fact alone does Masonry rationally assume to teach the doctrine of the Resurrection of the Body, the first authoritative revelation of which is to be found in the New Testament: "I am the Resurrection and the Life. The voice of Masonic Triples speaks to us in this manner, rather than in the laboured argument which relegates, Masonically, the Revealed and Eternal God-head of the Bible to merely the abstract being of Omniscience, Omnipotence, and Omnipresence. These are attributes, not His Personality. And the revelation which reveals to us this glorious majesty at the same time defines the Being of God.

The candidate expresses his belief and trust in God. In the beginning God said: "Let there be light, and there was light." From the earliest ages there has always been an association between the idea of the Divine Presence and that of visible light, and this association has influenced the customs of worship. Light is the symbol of the everlasting Godhead. God's presence in the Old Testament is everywhere spoken of as a bright and shining light. In the New Testament the aged Simeon declares the infant Saviour to be "a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of Israel." The newly made Mason asks for and receives light. Now, light is threefold also, and the three original and primitive rays, blending into one colour—pure white—is a fitting symbol of the Triune God; for there are three distinct colours, and yet all blended in one make up the one true light. The explanations following of the three Great Lights, the three Lesser Lights (together with their representatives), become more consistent and instructive triples in this connection.

Look at the Lodge itself; the triple floor composed of the Mosaic pavement, the indented tessel, and the blazing star in the centre, and the light placed in the East and behind the monogram which symbolises the Great and Holy Name, at the mention of which all, from the lowliest Entered Apprentice, the brethren assembled, to the Worshipful Master, most reverently bow. This act of worship, and the lights, as the symbol of the Ineffable Presence, have ever been used by Jew and Christian, from the temple to the present. And the reason why true Masonry possesses the power over men that it does, is because of its consistency in placing its triple lights so as to speak to the seeing eye of man, of that light of the soul which is God Himself. Based upon this rock the brotherhood of man, as inculcated by the Masonic system, may indeed securely repose.

If we are correct in our belief that the GOD whom Masons reverence and adore is none less than the I AM [see "Light of Ages"] of Revelation, the ever blessed and glorious Trinity, then the situation and foundation of the Temple become most important in our symbolism. The Supreme Grand Master declares in connection with His spiritual temple: "My throne is in heaven;" and "To him that overcometh will I [the Son] make a pillar in the temple of my God." The high ground of Mount Moriah aptly illustrates the relative position—it placed the temple above the people, so to speak, that they might look up to it, not at it, or down upon it. The foundation walls were built of three courses, and the precipitous contour of the Mount was such the appearance of the work when done had the solid presentation of indestructible bulwarks—as if they were a part of the earth itself, and these walls are standing to-day.

Undoubtedly the Trinity of the Godhead unlocks the mystery symbolized not only of Masonry but of all pure morality. This morality clothes the sealstone of the Temple so that it becomes the "living temple, made without hands, eternal in the heavens." As intimated above, we must, in laying the foundation of morality, go back of moral law to God Himself, or we have a human affair which never rises higher than its source. Moral law is not a mere promulgation of an edict of the Almighty, a commandment, a law, but it is the very expression of the Godhead itself. We only know God by His revealed attributes. God is Love, God is Truth, God is Life: "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life." Enlarge upon this thought and the whole threefold system of the Masonic Institution becomes one consistent and complete whole. Having laid the foundation of our mystic temple upon an imperishable basis, the edifice may, indeed, rear its stately form, and present in its grand proportions, like Solomon's Temple, an appearance of being more the handiwork of the Great Architect of the Universe than of human hands. With our threefold key we shall next inquire: What is the voice of Masonic Triples concerning the Building—the edifice itself?—Voice of Masonry.

THE MASONS OF THE MIDDLE AGES.

THE men who planned the Cathedrals of mediæval times were surely of devout imagination, but the workmen, if devout, were sometimes possessed by a mocking demon of unbelief regarding the sanctity of the priesthood. What makes the marvel seem greater is, that the monks were, in the beginning of the gothic rabbies, the architects and builders of their own churches, and it is quite incredible that they should have exposed an obvious apologue and caricature the leering infidelity and wantonness of their order. This must have taken place at the later period of the art, when it had passed from the monastic fraternities into the exclusive keeping of the lay guilds, and when the decay of faith and morals among the clergy was visited with daring sarcasm and contempt by the people. That the Masons were unpunished for their audacious indiscretions may have been because the doctrines of the holy faith were not impugned, whilst the hypocrisy and vice exposed in the all expressive language of art the priesthood could neither defend or deny. It is not in the least probable that these things would have been tolerated by the dignitaries of the church unless the lay founders had lent their connivance. Mr. Findel, a German writer on Freemasonry, whose works have been translated into English, supposes that the Masons were haters of Popery at heart and believers in Evangelical truth, and that they were protected from persecution by the Guilds. In the opinion that they held a creed of apostolic simplicity, I think that the historian shows that large faith of love, and that he is willing to accept on behalf of its object whatever is of good report. It is more likely that they were just a trifle irreverent, and relished a joke more heartily than they enjoyed a mass. For instance, in the large Church of Strasburg, we are told that in one of the transepts opposite the pulpit, a hog and a goat may be seen carrying a sleeping fox as a sacred relic; a bitch is following the hog, in advance of this procession is a bear with a cross, and before the bear a wolf holding a burning wax taper. Then follows an ass, which is reading mass at the altar. A beautiful preserved altar piece in the church of Doberan, Mecklenburg, exhibits priests grinding dogmas in a mill. In the Cathedral of Brandenburg a fox in priestly robes is preaching to a flock of geese. In the minster at Berne, in a picture (in that age architecture included painting) of the last judgment, the Pope is amongst the damned. We are all familiar with the uncouth faces of man and beast on our mediæval buildings that do duty for gargoyle and corbel. Probably some of my readers have been in Temple Church, London, and must have noticed the heads in miniature which form the finial of the pew-ends. There is not, according to our modern notions of such things, a becoming expression of countenance in any of them; they are all grotesque with grimace, and each seems to strive to outgrin the other.

Mr. Findel, in his work on Freemasonry says, that the Masonic Guilds took their rise in the church-building middle ages, and that their places of birth were the frontiers of France and Germany. Many of the great churches were a long time in the building, and the workmen thus embodied acquired the inevitable esprit de corps from community of interest and vocation. They were, in fact, a regiment of industry; they were separated by their craft and its symbolism from the civilians amongst whom they had pitched their tents; they were commanded by a master, and every nine men were under the wardenship of the tenth. When the Cathedral was completed; when it rose in tower and spire like a creation of wondrous frost work, the tents were struck and a new encampment found. But the men who were in some cases scattered throughout the country still belonged to the army of operative masons, and could by the use of sign or pass-word be at once received into the ranks of a new regiment. So that, apart from any secret rules of art, the incorporation had its manifest advantages. Indeed it had been asserted that the architects of the finest churches, those which best exemplified unity and grandeur of conception, were either laymen or ecclesiastics who were members of the Guilds. If this were so, the secrets of the Crafts must have been those of mere construction and manual skill; things which could be best taught and acquired experimentally. They have left their marks, however, on the stones of those magnificent edifices.—Canadian Craftsman.

It will be very gratifying for the Subscribers to hear that "our Girls" have again been particularly successful in the Cambridge Local Examination. Out of 20 entered 18 have been successful, viz, 2 in the Senior Examination, and 16 in the Junior: the 2 former and 5 of the latter passing with honours, as follows: Senior Class—3 honours, Julia Harvey, and pass; distinguished in religious knowledge, Edith Hicks. Junior Class—2 honours, Jane Taylor; Class 3 honours, distinguished in religious knowledge, Mary Wyatt; Class 3 honours, Cecily Jardine, Agnes Denley, and Ellen Senior. Pass, Gertrude Ashworth, Clara Coales, Edith Corney, Ada Crow, Grace Barham, Catherine Hide, Mabel Lewis, Mabel Osmonde, Juliet Priestley, Mary Spalding, Ethel Stone. This result could only have been achieved by good steady work throughout, and we must offer our hearty congratulations, not only to Miss Davis and her able staff of assistants, but also to the pupils themselves.

Another Lodge will be added to the roll of the Province of Surrey on Tuesday next, when the Abbey Lodge, No. 2120, will be consecrated at the Masonic Hall, Chertsey. The Prov. Grand Master, General J. Studholme Brownrigg, C.B., will officiate, and he will be supported by Bro. Charles Greenwood P.G.S.B. Prov. Grand Secretary, Bro. James Terry Prov. G.S.W. Norths and Hunts. and other distinguished Masons. Bro. Henry Currie Leigh Bennett is the W.M. designate, while Bros. Col. Lorenzo George Dundas and William Henry Gardiner are the Wardens designate.

The Chiswick Lodge of Mark Master Masons, No. 357, held its regular meeting at Bro. Brill's, the Star and Garter Hotel, Kew Bridge, on Saturday, 26th ultimo. Amongst other business, Bro. George Gardner was unanimously elected W.M. for the next twelve months. This brother was also nominated for Provincial Grand honours.

The Annual Dinner of the Chiswick Lodge of Instruction will be held at Bro. E. Gilbert's, Windsor Castle Hotel, King-street, Hammersmith, on Monday, the 15th instant, at 7:30 sharp. Brethren are kindly invited. Tickets 3s 6d each.

We have been requested to state there will be no meeting of the Langton Lodge of Instruction on Thursday evening, 10th instant.

A convocation of the North London Chapter of Improvement was held on Thursday, at the Alwyne Castle Tavern, St. Paul's Road, Canonbury, N. Comps. Brasted M.E.Z., Gregory H., Stringnell J., Sheffield S.E., Russell S.N., Radcliffe P.S. The work was well rehearsed by the Companions named, and a pleasant and instructive evening was spent. Companion Edmonds was in his place as Preceptor.

The Covent Garden Lodge of Instruction, No. 1614, will in future meet at the Criterion, Piccadilly, on Thursdays, at 8 o'clock in the evening. Brother W. C. Smith P.M. 1563, Preceptor, will rehearse the ceremony of installation on Thursday evening next.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Counsel for the delicate.—Those to whom the changeable temperature is a protracted period of trial should seek the earliest opportunity of removing all obstacles to good health. This cooling Ointment, perseveringly rubbed upon the skin, is the most reliable remedy for overcoming all diseases of the throat and chest. Quinsey, relaxed tonsils, sore throat, swollen glands, ordinary catarrh, and bronchitis, usually prevailing at this season, may be arrested as soon as discovered, and every symptom banished by Holloway's simple and effective treatment. This Ointment and Pills are highly commended for the facility with which they successfully combat with influenza. They allay in an incredibly short time the distressing fever and teasing cough.

EMPLOYMENT BUREAU.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—John Bull is hard to move, and the Masonic John Bull is still more difficult to stir into action. He is necessarily Conservative in all things pertaining to the Craft, and change is the antithesis of his Masonic being. I would not have it otherwise if I could, because, if for no other reason, stedfastness is a principle which in the present day is fast losing its virtue. Change is not always improvement, nor is it even generally synonymous with progress. I would, therefore, move slowly, but surely.

I have noticed from time to time that correspondents have mooted the above question in your columns, and I think one of them asked, "Where is WATCHMAN?" Well, non dormio. "Pegging away" was a very good motto for the late Abraham Lincoln, and for agitators, but it is not very acceptable among Freemasons, who are loyal to the backbone, not only to the reigning monarch, but to things Masonic as they are.

There are times, however, when a word in season may be spoken, and I think the time now is when the question of an Employment Bureau may be fairly re-opened. There is a great deal of distress revealed, but how much still concealed it is impossible to say. The better the position, the more independent and refined the character, the greater the chance of suffering in secret, unthought of and uncared for. Among this class there must be many brethren who would welcome help to work that they might be independent still, whose hearts would again swell with thanks and joy if they could but secure the assistance and consideration of those who are placed in authority as masters or foremen, or overseers, or who could influence others who have the command of labour. A Bureau, such as I have on more than one occasion shadowed forth, would give an opening to the unemployed Freemason; he could go to it with a feeling in some degree of right and independence, and he would have the satisfaction of knowing that something was being done to show sympathy and afford practical help. I need not enter into all the arguments that might be advanced, I have urged them before, but I may insist upon the fact that the establishment of an Employment Bureau is not only practicable, but without it the circle of Masonic helpfulness is not complete. It is the last stone of the building, but it is not the least in significance. It has a long way to travel, and it wants careful shaping and guiding into its place. That it will find skilful hands to do the work in due time I have no doubt. I am proud of my own thought; I can wait its development. I can only urge the importance of that development, leaving to those with more power and influence to initiate the work. It must not be forgotten that the mere giving of money is not always charity. The rich and well-to-do give out of their abundance, and it practically costs them nothing. They make no sacrifice, and very often they do no work. There is little real honour in such giving. The gift most welcome is that which involves some labour, some sacrifice, which results in doing good without humiliating the recipient; that helps the willing labourer to work, and sustains his self-respect and self-reliance. The Masonic Employment Bureau would do all this and more, and it ought to be tried.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

WATCHMAN.

DEATH.

HUGHAN.—On the 26th February, at her residence, 18 Emma Place, Stonehouse, Plymouth, MARGARET, relict of the late William Hughan. Friends will please accept this intimation.

The Grand.—The executive of the Grand, with a spirit which is to be commended, provide everything that is possible in the shape of novelty, and in furtherance of this view they are constantly availing themselves of what we may term itinerant companies. This necessitates the occasional introduction of something which would scarcely come up to the "legitimate" ideas of the old fashioned playgoer. Such a menu has been supplied this week, when the "Irish Aristocracy" company have been in possession of the boards. Messrs Richard Mack and Mr. Richard B. Ferguson are comedians of sterling merit, and in their specialités entertainment are almost unapproachable. Mr. Edwin Barry is a descriptive vocalist of great power, and reminds us somewhat of Henry Russell in his best days. Mr. Pat and Miss Ella Murphy ably contributed to the success of the entertainment, while the sisters Everett were excellent, both as singers and dancers. Altogether the performance is worthy of support, and as the company remain at the Grand for another six nights, our readers will have the opportunity of following the advice we here tender them, to pay a visit. On Monday, the 15th instant, Miss De Grey, who will be supported by Mr. Bassett Roe and a strong company, will appear in "Jane Shore" and "Woman against Woman."

"AS OTHERS SEE US."—There is something interesting in the stories of kings in the olden times, disguising themselves, and mingling in easy intercourse with their people, from the desire to see things as they really were, and not in the light in which they were apt to be presented to them. The Scotch Jameses were said to be fond of this, and the disguise of Fitz-James, in the "Lady of the Lake," is a case in point. These were not the days of daily newspapers, nor had royal commissions to inquire into everything begun to be thought of. Humbler men than kings, and in days more recent, have been known to follow the example. It is recorded of Thomas Campbell, the poet, that once, being in a remote part of Scotland, he made an effort to find out whether the fame of his poetry had travelled so far. It happened that a plain woman, with whom he came into contact, had been greatly interested in another member of the clan, John Campbell, of Kingsland Chapel, who had recently astonished the world by his extensive travels in South Africa, having visited Lattakoo, and other remote Missionary settlements. When the poet asked her if she had ever heard of Mr. Campbell and his books, she replied with an emphatic yes. "Then," said the poet, greatly pleased, "I am Mr. Campbell." "What," asked the woman, in delight, "and are you really the great Mr. Campbell?" The poet was framing a modest answer when she burst upon him with some question about Lattakoo. The spell was broken, and the vision of delight vanished. Whether the poet had ever heard of Lattakoo may be doubted, but he knew at least that he was not "the great Mr. Campbell. —The Rev. Dr. Blaikie, in "The Quiver" for March.

ROSICRUCIAN SOCIETY.

The following is the text of the Annual Address, delivered by the Chief Adept, Fratre T. B. Whytehead, before the members of the York College, at their meeting at Freemasons' Hall, St. Saviour-gate, York, on Saturday, the 20th ult.:—

Fratres,—On the occasion of addressing you on the sixth anniversary of the constitution of this College, and of the formation of this county of Yorkshire into a Province, I must first congratulate you as members of the Rosicrucian Order upon the prosperity which has followed us in the north of England, and upon the strength and vitality which have attended our efforts to throw about Freemasonry a flavour of something more than those qualities which usually pervade the eternal Craft. Most of us who are members of the Order have had considerable experience of Freemasonry; the bulk of the members of this College have passed through the chairs of Craft Lodges, and many of us have threaded our way through other branches of the art, so that we may truly be said to be a body of tried Masons, whose only object, I trust, in meeting as Rosicrucians is to advance the study of the history of Masonry and archæology, to promote in every possible way the intelligent consideration of our symbolism, to bring as far as possible the light of truth to bear upon our legends, and to make a daily progress in Masonic knowledge. These are, indeed, the objects for which our Society was formed. It grew—our own revived modern version—out of the desire of a few prominent Masonic students and workers to find something more in Masonry than mere ritualism and moral teaching, for excellent as are these and perfect as they are under our own teaching, yet in these progressive days we require something more than this. In the earlier days of Freemasonry, as we understand it, there was comparatively little learning. Men were satisfied with small things, and doubtless our ceremonies were regarded as of exceeding great value simply as a medium of instruction. And I should be the last to suggest that even now they have decreased in value. The world is probably no better than it was in the days of Anderson and Desaguliers, and men stand in need of morality just as much at the end of the nineteenth century as they did at the beginning of the eighteenth century. Still, I think most thoughtful Masons will agree with me that there is great scope for more than the bare repetition of a regular code of teaching, no matter how excellent it may be. And about a society, such as that of Freemasonry, there is such abundance of material for investigation, and such a wide platform for the explorations of brethren of literary tendencies, that I do not think a society whose objects are the elucidation of the traditions and obscure origin of the ancient brotherhood needs any apologist. It has been, I am aware, alleged against us that by the assumption of the title of Rosicrucians we have attempted to draw around us a glamour of mystery which does not of right belong to us, and that the Rosicrucian Society is simply another attempt to add to the already somewhat inordinate array of Masonic degrees. I do not think that any such accusation can fairly stand good. Attempts had been made from time to time to form a Masonic Archæological Society, but without any permanent success, and it seemed to the minds of some earnest brethren, more than one of whom is, alas! numbered with the great majority, that a better prospect of stability might be secured if a little circle could be drawn together by something more powerful than an annual subscription, and that a sort of inner bond might be formed whereby individuals might be linked together by an invisible chain which should have more powerful bands than those of any ordinary society. Then came the question of the form that this Fraternitas-in-Fraternitate should take, and, as usual in Masonic minds, a legendary historical event was sought for which could furnish the desired outline. The Rosicrucian Society seemed to present the requisite features, for, so far as we now know, this singular mediæval brotherhood was banded together for the purpose of investigating the hidden mysteries of nature and science. It met but seldom. It was said to have drawn its members from every quarter of the globe, and its ostensible objects were the amelioration of the condition of mankind and the judicious communication of knowledge. Thus it has come to pass that we are met here as one section of the Rosicrucian Society of England, for the purpose of the intercommunication of knowledge, the sharing of any information we may possess, the propounding of any Masonic, archæological, or scientific problems, and mutual assistance in the solution of the numerous "cruces" that beset the Masonic investigator on every hand. I should, perhaps, be almost justified in the assertion that we resemble the ancient Rosicrucians in another special and peculiar point. We know that in the later days, at any rate, of that renowned Society its members became the subject of much derision, in consequence of the common statement that they were in search of the Philosopher's Stone—a material which when found would, it was believed, prove the source of enormous wealth and power. Now, we are in search of our Philosopher's Stone; but we do not expect if we discover it to be rewarded by either the mines of Golconda or the power of a Xerxes. The grand secret of which we are in search is the true origin and history of Freemasonry, a mystery that has so far rebuked the wisdom of some of the most learned and talented men of the past century, and which is even now apparently a very long distance from disclosure. Masonic libraries teem with histories of Freemasonry. Nearly two centuries ago brethren began to publish so-called histories, and for ages before that period there existed MS. accounts of the descent of the ancient Craft from the earliest periods of antiquity, even from the father of the human race himself. These writings, known as the "Old Charges and Constitutions," are most curious and interesting, and may be read by anybody, thanks to the published collection of them, edited by our learned Bro. Hughan, himself a member of our Rosicrucian Order. Before the formation of the Grand Lodge in London in 1717 nothing more seems to have existed in the way of written acknowledgment than these ancient parchment rolls, which themselves bear abundant internal evidence of having been copied by more or less learned scribes from still more ancient documents. After the organisation in London at this date numerous printed works began to make their appearance, some issued by authority, and others purporting to be betrayals and exposures of the mysteries of the Order, and so, right through the years until this present year of grace 1886, we have a series of histories of Freemasonry, most of them closely resembling one another, until we arrive at the climax of Masonic literary activity, and have before us the noble work of Bro. R. F. Gould, the fifth volume of whose magnificent history is in the hands of most of us. Bro. Gould's history is, as far as actual information is concerned, absolutely exhaustive. It is in itself an entire Masonic library, and is by far the most able work on the Craft that has yet made its appearance. But Bro. Gould has dealt with his whole subject, I think, somewhat too much from his own professional standpoint. It is the business of the legal mind to reduce to its lowest ebb of credibility every statement that is arrayed before it, and to reject as unworthy of credence everything that cannot be absolutely or irrefragably proved by facts or figures. Now, although this is a very proper frame of mind in which to approach a mere question of right and wrong, or to regard the positive details of contemporary occurrences, and circumstances, yet I scarcely think it is the best spirit in which to attack the problem of the early and unwritten history of Freemasonry. Some sceptics would reply to this suggestion that Freemasonry has no history, that it was manufactured in London in the second decade of the eighteenth century, and that there was nothing of the kind before that date. This assertion is frequently made; but it will not hold good, for many reasons. In the first place, there is the diary of Ashmole taking us nearly a century further back, when the Warrington Lodge of Speculative Masons was in working existence. Then we have the minute books of the early Scotch Lodges, whose story has been so well told by Bro. Lyon, the Grand Secretary of Scotland; and, lastly, we have the early minutes of the Lodge at York, where it is plain that our brethren were at work before the year 1700. The suggestion that the year 1717 saw the first establishment of Freemasonry is clearly wrong, and yet before that time we have little to show in this country but the most scattered and fragmentary evidence. To my mind this is in itself ample proof that it is not to written testimony that we must look for traces of our early history. Where, then, it will be asked, are we to seek? I know of nowhere more likely than in the monuments of antiquity, and the symbolic forms of them that are found in great abundance over the world's surface. But before we look to these we must divest ourselves of any notion that we shall find many of the symbols that are now so commonly used by us, and are so well known to every well-instructed member of our Craft. I am satisfied that Freemasonry as it now exists resembles in only a very small degree, and in a few leading principles, the Freemasonry of bye-gone ages. I am quite prepared to grant that the Revival of 1717 saw a complete remodelling of the Order. I believe, with Bro. Carson, of Ohio, that up to that period Freemasonry had been essentially Christian in its teachings, and that what was known of it in England had been received from the Guilds of continental builders, which had previously died out through a process of natural decay and lack of useful objects for existence. It was, I suspect, these Guilds who learned a certain portion of the ancient Christian mysteries from their employers of the Benedictine Order, and adapted them to their own purposes. It was they who added to those mysteries the Hiramic Legend and the symbolism of the Solomonic Temple, and converted into a stone-worker's allegory what had previously been an exposition of the story of the fall of mankind, the sacrificial redemption of the human race, and the doctrine of the Resurrection. The true mysteries had been handed down to the Benedictines, and preserved by them, from the early Christians, and before that date had been kept secret and inviolate from the foundation of the world by successive patriarchs and prophets, whose "schools," as they are termed in the old Testament writings, were merely what we should term in our own phraseology Lodges or Colleges, for the instruction of chosen initiates. If I am asked how all this is to be proved, I frankly admit that it cannot be demonstrated by any possible means; but, in default of any better or more probable thesis, I offer it for your consideration, feeling myself that the theory contains all the germs of possibility, and even probability. As I have said, in these days people wish to see everything reduced to an equation, and unless a statement will stand the test of an algebraical demonstration, it is rejected as unworthy of examination. This is all very well where actual facts and records are available; but in our case we stand on different ground. We look back, straining our eyes into the dim mists of antiquity, and we see nothing but faint shadows looming and flitting indistinctly in the twilight of the past. Out of this material we must form our theories at present. We have yet the existing monuments of the past to refer to; but I shall not venture on that ground to-day, but reserve some remarks on their symbolism for a future occasion. In the meantime I should like you to think over what I have said. In the space of the few remarks I have made it has been impossible to do more than put the theory to you in the barest outline; but you will see that the gist of the idea is that "Free and Accepted Masonry" is nothing more nor less than an adaptation, to meet modern cosmopolitan ideas, of the ancient Christian mysteries, and that these in their turn were a continuation of the first revealed religion of mankind. Many of you will probably not agree with me, will see impossibilities and insurmountable objections to such a theory; but, at all events, you will all give me credit for an honest and earnest desire to arouse a genuine anxiety to probe every imaginable crevice whence we may extract some ray of light to illumine the present clouded condition of the sources of our ancient history.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

NEPTUNE LODGE, No. 22.

THE first meeting of this old and popular Lodge, since the installation of Bro. J. Corbett as Worshipful Master, was held at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street, on Thursday evening, 25th ultimo, when there was a large attendance of brethren and visitors. The W.M. was supported by Bros. W. D. Cook I.P.M. L. V. Walker S.W., E. Y. Jolliffe J.W., E. F. Storr P.M. Treasurer, F. P. Collings P.M. Secretary, W. R. Brookes S.D., H. Savidge J.D., W. J. Charles I.G., H. H. Krill Org., H. Povey P.M. D.C., J. B. Fyler and H. Bailey Stewards, J. Parkinson Tyler, and others. The Lodge having been opened in form and the business on the agenda paper having been transacted, a handsome Past Master's jewel was presented to the Immediate Past Master, as a mark of esteem and in recognition of the valuable services rendered to the Lodge during his year of office. The gift was suitably acknowledged, and some routine business having been disposed of, the brethren adjourned to banquet, where the customary Loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured. In proposing the Queen and the Craft the W.M. observed that in the course of a few months her Majesty would attain the jubilee of her reign. She was one of the most constitutional Sovereigns who had ever ruled over the destinies of this great empire, and she had never deviated from her prerogative. Whether in the capacity of a daughter, wife, or mother, she had set an example that reflected the utmost credit on herself, and which he was pleased to see copied by many of her subjects, throughout the length and breadth of the land. He then gave the toasts of the Most Worshipful Grand Master His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Most Worshipful Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers Present and Past, which were cordially received. The I.P.M. then assumed the gavel, and said he had a very pleasing duty to perform, namely, to propose the health of their excellent Worshipful Master. He had known many Masters of Lodges in his time, and men of various degrees of excellence, but Bro. Corbett quite equalled, even if he did not surpass, any who had gone before him. His working in the Lodge was not only excellent, but the manner in which he presided at the banquet table was especially gratifying. The Worshipful Master, in responding, said there was always a certain amount of gratification in endeavouring to do one's duty, and it had been his maxim ever since he had been connected with Masonry to do his best to promote its interest in whatever capacity he had been called upon to fill. It might be that he had not always succeeded, but he trusted they would take the will for the deed. To him it was a source of sincere pleasure to be associated with friends who strove to do their duty. Although he did not lay claim to the abilities displayed by many of the Past Masters, or to the qualifications which Bro. Cook had attributed to him, yet he assured them he would do all he possibly could to promote the happiness and enjoyment of the brethren, and to sustain the prestige which had been held by the good old Neptune Lodge for many years. In giving the Past Masters, he said it was always gratifying to the comparatively young members of the Lodge to be honoured with the presence of the Past Masters, to whom they were vastly indebted for their counsel and assistance. They had borne the heat and burden of the day, and were looked upon as the sages of the Lodge. The younger members were, perhaps, sometimes impulsive and rash, so to speak; and it was therefore a great source of satisfaction to see the veterans of the Lodge present to check whatever they might see partaking of that tendency, and to keep them in the right path. After a capital violin solo by Bro. Savidge S.D., Bro. Cook replied, and in the course of his observations said the Past Masters were ever ready to do all they could for the benefit of the Lodge. They were all animated by that spirit, and he thanked them for the cordial manner in which the toast had been proposed, and received by the brethren present. The W.M. then proposed the Treasurer and Secretary, remarking that the "whirligig of time brings its revenges." It was just eight years ago that he was introduced into this Lodge by Bro. Storr and Collings, who now occupied the positions respectively of Treasurer and Secretary. Bro. Collings on that occasion very gracefully gave way to Bro. Storr, and allowed him to perform the ceremony of initiation, and at their last meeting it had been his privilege and pleasure to invest them in the offices which they so worthily held in the Neptune Lodge. He was most proud of Bro. Storr as their Treasurer, for he had devoted his time and no little of his means to the cause of Charity. He did not mean mere almsgiving, but the great Charities of the Craft, which poured oil and wine into the wounds of the needy and afflicted, and in promoting the real practical work of Freemasonry, as his jewels would testify. Bro. Collings was always willing also to assist in the work of the Craft in general, and this Lodge in particular, and to both these excellent Officers the members of the Lodge were deeply indebted for the services they had rendered. Bro. E. F. Storr P.M. Treasurer, who was most cordially received, said there was an axiom amongst the wise men of old that "to be silent is to be eloquent;" but he could not refrain from expressing the pleasure it had afforded him to perform any work which might be for the advantage of the Neptune Lodge. He said at the time their present W.M. was initiated into the Lodge that they were bringing into it a good man and Mason, and his prophecy had not been falsified, for Bro. Corbett promised, and had already proved himself, an ornament to the Lodge. He (the speaker) was very proud of the position he held as a representative of the Charities, and was glad to inform them that at the Festival on behalf of the Benevolent Institution, on the preceding evening, a sum of no less than £14,816 had been announced, towards which amount their Worshipful Master Bro. Corbett had been enabled to take up a list of £41. This was highly gratifying, when they took into consideration the recent depression of trade, and the unusual calls that had been made upon the purses of the benevolent and large-hearted, when money was wanted in so many ways, there had been so large a sum subscribed towards the Masonic Charities. He thanked the Worshipful Master for the compliment he had paid to him as "Charity Storr," and said he was exceedingly proud of the appellation. He was also proud of his jewels, but especially so of the Charity jewel, and hoped that so long as the Great Architect of the Universe spared him his name would ever be familiar to the Craft as "Charity Storr." Bro. T. P. Collings P.M. and Sec., in the course of his response, said it had always been his aim to further the interests of the Neptune Lodge, and he should continue to exert his utmost powers to aid in its success. In proposing the Officers and Prosperity to the Lodge, the Worshipful Master quoted the old motto, "Honour to whom honour is due;" he must say that each and all the Officers whom he saw around him had worked their way up step by step to the positions they now occupied, and that they were all actuated by a united desire to promote the reputation and the prosperity of the Neptune Lodge. He felt sure the brethren generally would be satisfied with the abilities they would display in their several capacities, and the way in which they would discharge their duties. They were moved by a spirit of emulation to enhance the happiness and welfare of the brethren, and he was glad to be assisted by such an excellent body of Officers as the Lodge could boast during his year. The toast was suitably acknowledged by the Officers present, and the list was fittingly concluded by the Tyler. The proceedings of the evening, which were of a very harmonious and enjoyable description throughout, were varied by some excellent music and singing, in which Bros. Walker S.W., Hoffer, Peck, Charles I.G., Savidge J.D., H. Bailey W.S., Brooks S.D., and others took part.

TEMPLE LODGE, No. 558.

THIS Lodge assembled at the Town Hall, Folkestone, on Tuesday afternoon, the 2nd inst., for the purpose of installing Bro. A. Petts as W.M. for the ensuing year. Amongst those present at the installation were the following Past Masters: Bros. S. Joseph, J. Sherwood, F. Klatt, A. Hart, G. L. Hart, R. White, H. T. Samson, A. H. Holbein, J. Kennett, Mitchell, and J. Shaw. Bro. G. L. Hart performed the ceremony in an able and impressive manner, and at its termination the following Officers were appointed:—Bros. A. J. Crane S.W., J. G. Robinson J.W., A. H. Holbein Treasurer, Jas. Kennett Secretary, F. Francis S.D., G. Spurgen J.D., H. S. Roberts Organist, H. Clements Assistant Organist, G. L. Hart Director of Ceremonies, W. Worsell I.G., W. Griffin Standard Bearer, W. Dunk and L. Banks Stewards, and Ed. Farnley Tyler. Before the closing of the Lodge, Bro. Stock, on behalf of the brethren, presented Bro. S. Joseph with a very handsome Past Master's jewel, and in doing so alluded in very feeling terms to the respect in which he was held by all the members of the Lodge, and also to the efforts he had made towards the prosperity of the Lodge. On the suggestion of Bro. Holbein, a Past Master's jewel was also presented to Bro. Kennett, for his untiring zeal as Secretary, and his energy in assisting in every thing which would promote the interest of the Lodge. At the conclusion of the ceremony the brethren adjourned to the Pavilion Hotel, where a sumptuous banquet had been provided by Bros. Spurgen and Waite. There were about sixty present. The W.M., Bro. A. Petts, presided, and amongst the brethren present were Bros. S. Joseph I.P.M., G. L. Hart P.M. P.G.S. D.C., H. Stock P.M. P.P.G. Sup. W., J. Sherwood P.M. P.P.G.J.D., F. Klatt P.M. P.P.G.J.D., W. L. Earnshaw P.M. P.P.G.J.D., J. English P.M. P.P.G. Sup. W., Penfold P.M., J. Kennett P.M. Secretary P.P.G.O., A. H. Holbein P.M. Treasurer, R. White P.M. P.P.G.P. (Hants), O. H. Wagner P.M. P.P.G.J.W. (Herts), H. Samson P.M. 1436, D. White P.M. 1436, A. Hart P.M. 483, J. Shaw W.M. 125, W. Mitchell P.M. 1558, A. J. Crane S.W., T. G. Robinson J.W., F. Francis S.D., G. Spurgen J.D., W. Worsell I.G., W. Dunk and L. Banks Stewards, W. Griffin Stand. Bearer, J. Collens, H. Waite, C. E. Perry, M.D., G. Saxby, G. I. Swaffer, R. Goulden, F. Hall, R. Webster, G. F. Taylor, F. Scones, W. Prebble, W. Major, W. B. Kennett, T. H. English, J. Cheyney, G. Kemp, W. Birch, J. Sherwood jun., J. Hart, J. Eldridge, S. Petts, E. Devereux, H. Urben, R. Pope, A. Hart, G. Peden 125, C. Woods 1436, A. W. Conquest 1209, G. H. Warner 1209, J. Lathey 135, F. K. Tutt 1436. The W.M. in an able manner proposed the Queen and the Craft; the Most Worshipful Grand Master H.R.H. the Prince of Wales; the Most Worshipful Pro Grand Master the Earl of Carnarvon; the Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master Earl Lathom and the rest of the Grand Officers Present and Past; the Right Worshipful Prov. Grand Master of Kent the Viscount Holmesdale. The next toast was the Very Worshipful Deputy Prov. Grand Master Bro. J. S. Eastes, and the Provincial Grand Officers Present and Past, which was responded to by Bro. Hart P.M. (Gravesend), who eulogised Bro. Eastes, for the admirable manner in which he carried out the duties of his office. Bro. J. Sherwood P.M. next proposed the toast of the evening in an excellent speech, in which he alluded to the great events likely to take place in Masonry in Folkestone during the coming year in the building of a Masonic Hall, and the visit of the Provincial Grand Lodge, which was enthusiastically received and ably responded to by the W.M. Bro. S. Petts next replied in a well-chosen speech to the toast of the newly initiated brethren. The Masonic Charities was proposed by Bro. White P.M., and replied to by Bro. Earnshaw P.M. During the interval between the speeches the charity bag was passed round and resulted in the collection of a substantial sum which was generously increased to ten guineas by one of the brethren. Bro. Klatt P.M. next proposed the Visitors, to which Bro. Mitchell P.M. 1558 replied in suitable terms. Bro. Hart P.M. (Gravesend) next proposed the Installing Master and the other Past Masters of Temple Lodge, and passed a high compliment to Bro. G. L. Hart P.M., the Installing Master, for the admirable manner in which he had carried out his duties. Bros. G. L. Hart, S. Joseph, and H. Stock replied to the toast. The Officers of the Temple Lodge was proposed by Bro. Mitchell P.M., and replied to by Bro. A. J. Crane J.W., and the Tyler's toast concluded the list. Mention should be made of the admirable manner in which Bro. G. L. Hart carried out his duties as Director of Ceremonies, and Bros. W. Dunk and L. Banks as Stewards. The musical arrangements were under the able conductorship of Bro. H. S. Roberts, and Bros. W. Dunk, W. Major, and W. Prebble sang some excellent songs in good style.

HENRY LEVANDER LODGE, No. 2048.

IT is not often we have to record so much evidence of progress in a young Lodge as was displayed at the regular meeting of the Henry Levander, which took place on Saturday, 27th ult., at the Railway Hotel, Harrow Station, under the presidency of Bro. Wm. Alfred Scurrah Worshipful Master. The other Officers present were Bros. Henry Lovegrove I.P.M. Treasurer, C. J. Axford S.W., C. P. McKay Secretary, R. M. Surridge S.D., W. H. Burgess J.D., Harry Webb I.G., S. Barfoot D.C., S. Reece Steward, John Read P.M. 720 Organist, W. M. Stiles hon. member, while among the Visitors were Bros. Harry Sillis Assistant Director of Ceremonies 937, W. H. Tilling W.M. 765, L. J. Hudd 1426, F. Inskipp 1907, W. W. Lee 1897, C. H. Phillips 1986, Knight 1814, and W. W. Morgan jun. The Lodge having been opened and the usual formalities observed, was advanced to the third degree, when Brother John Dolling was raised. Lodge was then resumed, and Bros. Herbert Thornton Garner, Walter Hugh Magnire, and John Stubbings were passed, after which Mr. Charles Stevens was initiated. The ballot was taken for one candidate for initiation and two for joining, and in each case resulted in unanimous election. The items to which we referred at the commencement of this report were then brought forward. These consisted of the voting of five guineas from the funds of the Lodge to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, to be placed on the list of the W.M.; the establishment of a Benevolent Fund in connection with the Lodge; the decision of the members to appeal for a Royal Arch Chapter to be attached to the Lodge; and some minor matters of interest to the brethren. Brother Arthur Scurrah was appointed Assistant Steward, and invested with the collar of the office by the Worshipful Master, and the Lodge was subsequently closed. A banquet followed, and at its conclusion the Worshipful Master proposed the usual Loyal toasts. In submitting the health of the Provincial Grand Master, Sir Francis Burdett, the Worshipful Master said he did not know much of the other Provincial Grand Masters, but from his experience of the ruler of Middlesex he felt that Sir Francis was one of the best. He believed Sir Francis was well acquainted with the doings of every Lodge in his district, for about those he did not personally visit he made inquiries of others. Bro. McKay proposed the health of the Worshipful Master. The brethren had witnessed the excellent working of Bro. Scurrah that day in all the degrees, and could but have admired the care he had shown in all he was called upon to undertake. He had been punctual to the minute in opening the Lodge at the appointed time, and appeared to do everything that lay in his power to ensure the comfort of the brethren and the success of the Lodge. On a previous occasion their Worshipful Master had shown his love for the Charities, and at the Festival held that week he had again acted as Steward, working in such a manner as to secure for Middlesex one of the highest positions among the contributing Provinces of England. The Benevolent Fund which had that night been decided upon in connection with the Lodge was mainly due to his exertions, while the brethren had heard from his own lips the practical manner in which he intended to help that Benevolent Fund (Bro. Scurrah promised in Lodge to give ten guineas as a nucleus for the Fund). Bro. Scurrah tendered his thanks. He considered it a very great honour to preside over the Lodge, for although it was a very young Lodge it had proved itself during the few years of its existence as good as many which had been established for a much longer period. During the six months he had had the honour of presiding over the Lodge he had had the pleasure of initiating seventeen gentlemen, and he was proud to say there was not one of those seventeen of whom he could say he wished he had not initiated them. As was well known to the members, he took a great interest in those who were proposed for initiation in the Lodge, and personally satisfied himself they were worthy of being admitted. He felt justified in saying that all those he had initiated were becoming worthy, true, and upright Masons. As that was the first meeting of the Lodge since the Festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution he took the opportunity of announcing the result of his Stewardship, when he represented the Henry Levander Lodge at that Festival. He had studiously avoided asking any brethren outside of the Lodge for subscriptions in support of his list, and the result was that nearly all of what he took up had been given by the members of the Lodge. The exceptions showed a total of ten guineas, and consisted of two amounts of five guineas each which he had been requested by outsiders to take up, and which, in the interests of the Institution, he could not refuse. This result spoke well for the desire of the members of the Lodge to carry out the great work of Charity. He cordially thanked the brethren who had nobly supported his list, and was quite sure the Prov. Grand Master and his Deputy, when they heard what the Henry Levander Lodge—the youngest in Middlesex—had done, would agree it was not unworthy of being classed among the foremost in the Province. The Lodge was but a young one, but he felt certain it had a great future before it, and he believed the members would go on and on until the Lodge became one of the shining lights in Freemasonry. He was heartily pleased they had that night established a Benevolent Fund in connection with the Lodge, for misfortune might overtake any of them at any time, and although he hoped it might never be the case that any of those around him should have to appeal, the money would be there if they needed it. He again thanked the brethren for the hearty manner in which they invariably received him, and hoped he should be connected with the Lodge as long as his life lasted. Bro. Scurrah next proposed the health of the Initiate. The toast was a very important one, and one he had had to bring forward at each of the meetings of the Lodge which he had presided over. They had only one initiate that evening, which was an exception with them, but for a variety of circumstances they would have had three or four on that occasion. He felt sure that the Initiate of that night would prove—as those who had preceded him had done—a brother of whom the Lodge would be proud. Bro. Stevens replied. He felt very much honoured by the kindness he had met with that night, and hoped he should in time become a good Mason. The toast of the Visitors, the Worshipful Master said, was almost, if not quite, as important as the previous one. He did not think the Henry Levander Lodge was behind any other Lodge in the heartiness with which they welcomed their visitors. They were truly pleased to see guests, and hoped they might so enjoy themselves as to desire to attend the Lodge again and again. Several brethren having replied, the health of the Treasurer and Secretary was given, Bro. McKay acknowledging the compliment. The Tyler's toast followed almost immediately afterwards, and the brethren departed to catch the London train.

PERCY LODGE OF INSTRUCTION, No. 198.

THE annual supper of this Lodge of Instruction took place on Thursday, the 18th ult., at Bro. Langdale's, the Jolly Farmers, Southgate Road, Islington, and owing to the indefatigable exertions of the able Secretary, Bro. R. W. Galer, the result was a complete success. Owing to a family anniversary the Worshipful Master of the mother Lodge was unable to preside, but his place was ably filled by Bro. I. P. Cohen, the respected Preceptor of the Lodge, who was supported by a number of popular Masons. Amongst those who were present we may mention Bros. J. A. Powell, R. W. Galer Sec., A. W. Fenner Treasurer, Browne-Kidder, F. Brasted, A. Mullord, J. Glass, P. Recknell, G. P. Barnett, W. Aynsley, J. Robinson, H. J. Kirk, J. W. Saunders, W. J. Nicholls, E. G. Lewis, E. Brett, Griffiths, A. Cook, M. E. Keogh, R. Aslett, W. Beatton, Green, H. Barnett, Yates, White, Wood, J. A. Collings, Bayne, Langdale. After the supper, which was served in a very satisfactory manner by Bro. Langdale, the usual Loyal toast was given, and responded to in a patriotic manner. The National Anthem was sung by Bro. A. Mullord, Bro. Collings presiding at the piano. The next toast given by the president was that which may be considered the toast of the evening, Success to the Percy Lodge of Instruction, No. 198. Bro. Cohen said he thought it was hardly his province to propose the toast, having the honour of being its Preceptor. The Lodge claimed to be the oldest and best attended Lodge of Instruction in London. Nothing could be more gratifying to himself, and the members generally, than to see this continued success; he trusted the Percy Lodge of Instruction would have the same support for many years to come, so that it might continue to maintain its present proud position. Unanimity and concord, good-fellowship and harmony, had always prevailed in it. The brethren might rely on him doing his utmost to make it, if possible, still more successful. In conclusion he begged to couple the names of Bros. J. A. Powell and A. W. Fenner, they being the oldest members of the Lodge present. The toast was heartily responded to. Bro. Yates here kindly gave a recitation, "The Fireman's Wedding." Bro. Powell, responding, thanked the brethren for their kind reception of the toast, and congratulated the Preceptor and Secretary on the success which still attended their exertions; he hoped this would continue for many years to come. Bro. Fenner, in a short speech, which embodied all the good feeling which one Mason could express towards another, said if it were required he would give his services in any way to further the interests of the Lodge. Bro. Powell then gave the health of the Preceptor, Bro. Cohen, than whom a more kindly, genial, or efficient brother could not be. Bro. Cohen, was always willing to instruct any brother who was anxious to attain that efficiency which was so essential to fit him to discharge the duties of office in his mother Lodge. To our Secretary, Bro. Galer, we owe much for his indefatigable exertions in the interest of the Lodge. Bro. Galer is always at his post, and to him in a great measure is due the success of the Lodge. In reply Bro. Cohen thanked the brethren. What he had done to deserve the encomiums passed upon him by Bro. Powell he did not know; he had simply done his best to convey knowledge to those brethren who required it; nothing gave him greater pleasure than to see pupils attending the Lodge. Bro. R. W. Galer said there was not much left for him to say; he regretted Bro. Lambert, the much respected Worshipful Master of the mother Lodge, was not present to hear how the Lodge of Instruction had progressed. He could not go into statistics, as the year had not been completed, but he could inform the brethren that it had sent up money to the Masonic Charities; that the average attendance of its members had been increased. It had been said that the Strong Man Lodge of Instruction was the oldest, but there was documentary evidence to prove that this Lodge of Instruction was held as a Club of Instruction in 1791—so that it was really the premier Lodge of Instruction in London. He felt proud in being its Secretary, and expressed his thanks to the brethren generally for their good feeling and kind support. The health of the President (Bro. Glass), Secretary (Bro. Galer), and Treasurer (Bro. Cohen), of the Percy Charity Association, was then proposed by Bro. Fenner, who congratulated the brethren on the good results which had attended their labours. These Associations had done wonderful service in aid of the Charities. The Percy Association had been the means of sending up a large amount to the Institutions, and still continued so to do. He asked the brethren to give the toast full honour. Brother Glass, responding, thanked the brethren for the compliment paid him; he could assure them he felt proud of the honour of being President of the Percy Association, and would exert himself to the utmost in bringing it to a successful ending. He remembered the time when his esteemed friend Bro. Brasted, first introduced him to the Percy Lodge of Instruction, it was with fear and trembling he ascended the stairs, but he soon got over his nervousness, and became impressed with the kind and brotherly feeling exhibited towards him on that memorable evening. Bros. Galer and Cohen followed, and spoke of the good work such Associations had done for the Charities. The Visitors' toast came next; it was proposed by Bro. Cohen in a happy speech, and Bros. H. Barnett, White, Wood, Green and Cook responded. The toast of Success to the Mother Lodge was heartily received and duly honoured; and a compliment was paid to Bros. Bayne, Collings, Brasted, Yates, Kirk and Langdale, who had so kindly contributed to the enjoyment of the evening. After Bro. Mullord had replied the final toast was given.

La Tolerance Lodge of Instruction, No. 538.—At the meeting held on Wednesday last, at the Portland Arms, Great Portland Street, W. Present: Bros. W. Kelly W.M., W. T. Burgess P.M. S.W., W. T. Thom J.W., W. E. Willby S.D., D. T. Bickerell J.D., J. H. Price I.G., W. Langdon P.M. Secretary, W. Fowles Treasurer, acting as Preceptor. Also Bros. Lonsdale P.M., Lloyd P.M., Latreille P.M., Hill, J. Hemmings, Wyuman, &c. Lodge was opened by the W.M. and the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The 1st, 2nd, and 4th sections were worked by Bros. Fowles and Hemmings, assisted by the brethren. The W.M., a young Mason, who displayed considerably efficiency, next rehearsed the ceremony of initiation, to the satisfaction of all present; Bro. Hill acted as candidate. It was suggested by the W.M. that the Lodge, having heard of the untimely death of Bro. Davies, Lodge No. 72, who had been a frequent visitor, and who was Secretary of the Savoy Lodge of Instruction, thought some record should be entered on the minutes to express the deep regret felt by the brethren. This was unanimously carried. Bro. W. T. Burgess P.M. was elected W.M. for the ensuing week. The installation ceremony will be rehearsed here next week by Bro. Latreille P.M. 1260. A vote of thanks was passed to the W.M., and there being no other business Lodge was closed and adjourned till Wednesday, the 10th inst.

MASONIC "AT HOME."

ON Thursday evening, the 25th ultimo, by invitation of the Worshipful Master and Officers of the Portsmouth Lodge, a most successful "At Home" was held at the Masonic Hall, Highbury-street. The hall was prettily decorated, the usual Masonic adornments being supplemented by pretty floral designs, cleverly executed by Messrs. Fay, of Southsea. By special dispensation of the Provincial Grand Master, the members of the Craft appeared in Masonic clothing. The "Blue" Lodges were strongly represented, and there were several prominent Masons in the purple decorations of the Provincial Grand Lodge. Grand Lodge had one representative in the person of Bro. Edward Terry, the eminent comedian, as Grand Steward, and there were also present members of the Provincial Mark Lodge, the Rose Croix, Red Cross of Constantine, Royal Arch Degree, Scottish Constitution, &c. The guests numbered about 130, and were received by the Worshipful Master, Bro. H. E. Loader, and Mrs. Loader. The banqueting hall was set apart for refreshments, and elaborately decorated, the silver plate used on the occasion having been lent by Mr. E. Emanuel, of the Hard. The oyster "bar" was a novel feature. The orchestra was occupied by Mr. Wilton's band, and it goes without saying that the music was excellent. The duties of Stewards were carried out by Messrs. Thackara, Whitehall, Bonghton, H. P. Holley, and Jenkins.

Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution.

MAY ELECTION, 1886.

The Votes and Interest of the Governors and Subscribers of this Institution are earnestly solicited on behalf of

BRO. FRANCIS HARPER,

(AGED 64 YEARS),

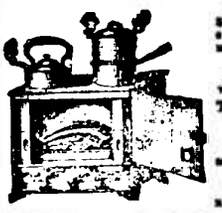
ST. MICHAEL'S LODGE, No. 211,

On the 18th April 1856, and remained a subscribing member thereof for nearly twenty years—to December 1875. In 1868 he became a joining member of the

ROYAL UNION LODGE, No. 382,

And subscribed to it for three years. Is afflicted with severe disease of the eyes, which incapacitates him from following his profession—that of a Dentist. He is now dependent on friends.



The case is recommended by the following members of the St. Michael's Lodge:

Charles Greenwood P.M. Treasurer, 61 Nelson Square, Blackfriars, S.E.
John Laver P.M., 80 Sutherland Gardens, Paddington, W.
Alfred Withers, P.M. D.C., 430 King's Road, Chelsea.

THE RIGHT TO REJECT A CANDIDATE.

IT has often been our duty, and it is by no means an agreeable one, to call attention to the number of class Lodges that have of late sprung into existence, each of which has the ostensible and avowed object of promoting the interests of a certain school of thought. And it must occur to every right balanced mind that when social, political, or other crotchets are regarded as a primary consideration, or even placed on the level of our Masonic principles, there is great danger of such Lodges degenerating into the regions of partisanship, and of their being wielded for the personal interests and purposes of a party or clique. It has been recently deplored that more than one Masonic Lodge has been utilised for the aggrandisement and assistance of a political faction, and that it has been largely made use of in promoting the candidature of brethren seeking Parliamentary benefits. We have in reference to this subject pointed out that when once the golden rule is broken, and politics are admitted within the portals of a Masonic Lodge, its influence for good must of necessity be stultified, and that controversy and discord must inevitably take the place of harmony and peace. We have no fear that this evil will be permitted to run far into our system, for its only tendency would be to sap Freemasonry of that which the brethren hold most dear, as to its universality and cosmopolitan equality. The atmosphere of a Masonic Lodge must not be vitiated by disputation, nor should a shadow of the friction of parties be found within its walls. There are again other Lodges founded upon principles that were never contemplated by the Craft, and amongst these are the so-called teetotal Lodges, of which several have been established within the last three or four years. We have all along contended that such a distinctive title and profession is not consonant with the Constitutions of our Order, nor is it conclusive or satisfactory as to the composition of such Lodges. We are fully aware that in some at least of the "Temperance" Lodges the members are not all rigid abstainers from intoxicating liquors; just the same as there are professed teetotallers included in the membership of Lodges who practise conviviality and hospitality amongst their tenets. It does not stand to reason, then, that a man who joins a teetotal Lodge must perforce be a total abstainer, any more than that men who eschew the generous grape should be excluded from these societies who mingle mirth with their pleasures "across the walnuts and the wine." We do not say that Lodges of this particular class are generally to be condemned, and, seeing they are in existence, they must, as a matter of justice and necessity, be recognised. It should be borne in mind that due respect must be paid to the absolute tenets of the persons who comprise these Lodges, and our remarks on this subject are called forth by certain matters that transpired recently at Manchester, in connection with the Callender Lodge. As reported in our issue of the 20th ultimo, a gentleman was proposed as a candidate for initiation who had been refused—a few weeks previously—by the Wolseley Lodge, which as our readers know was the first "teetotal" Lodge instituted in this country—because of the occupation he was engaged in, namely, because he was a publican by trade. An eminently satisfactory account was given of the antecedents of the applicant, whose nomination was supported by several brethren of the Lodge, and in the end the ballot was unanimously in favour, so that the aspirant for participation in the mysteries and privileges of Freemasonry stands no longer "out in the cold." The question here very naturally crops up, as to whether it was right for a publican to force himself upon a professedly Temperance Lodge. It transpired that the person referred to was born in a public-house, and on the death of his father, the widow "sold out," and took her family of five children to America, where they settled on a farm thirty miles from any other dwelling. This particular son was engaged, through the civil war of America, in fighting for the country of his adoption, and at the close of the struggle he returned to Manchester. Being without any occupation or trade, and as a matter of course having to make a living, he commenced the only business with which he was at all acquainted, that of a publican. In that business he succeeded, and by his conduct so gained the good wishes of his fellow citizens that he was requested by them to allow himself to be nominated as a candidate for the Town Council of Salford, free of expense to himself. This honour he declined, but a greater honour—that of becoming a Freemason—was uppermost in his desire, and with this view he sought admission into the Wolseley Lodge. Why it was that he was advised to endeavour to enter the Craft across the threshold of a teetotal Lodge is a mystery to us, and we can scarcely be surprised at the rebuff which met him on his attempt to obtain an entrance by such a door. We can easily imagine the discussion which such a nomination would excite in the Wolseley Lodge, the members of which might lean to the opinion that, although the testimony as to the character of the applicant might have been all that could be desired, yet the business he was engaged in was such as to render it inadvisable to admit him. We repeat that the would-be brother had little reason to be surprised at his rejection; indeed, it was the only natural outcome of the inconsiderate counsel to which he had listened from his nominator and seconder, whom we are thus led to infer are not rigid advocates of the principles espoused by the Wolseley Lodge. It is apparent, on the face of the circumstances we have narrated, that a publican had no right to be nominated to join a teetotal Lodge; for, granting that this man bore a high character for respectability, and that his antecedents were all that could be desired, still it was hardly consistent that he should seek to intrude into a society whose principles were so diametrically at variance with his own and the avocation in which he was engaged. When it became known that the candidature was objectionable to many members of the Lodge, the most sensible—indeed the only reasonable—course to have adopted, was to withdraw the nomination, and thus not only have spared the candidate the humiliation of an adverse ballot, but the brethren of the Lodge also the pain of being conscientiously obliged to "pill" one who was desirous of joining them. A man whose sole occupation is the sale of intoxicating liquors has no reason to feel aggrieved if he is rejected by a body of men who are pronounced in their opposition to his proclivities and trade. It would have displayed a much greater amount of tact and discretion had the brethren who nominated and seconded the would-be candidate withdrawn his name as soon as they discovered "how the land lay." The question arising from this episode is, whether, seeing that a teetotal Lodge is in existence and warranted, with this specific object in view, it was becoming that such a candidate should be forced upon the members. If men choose to unite in this way for the promotion of their own ideas of sobriety, and isolation from the "cups that cheer" and do inebriate, by all means they have a right to do so; and this persistent effort to introduce a candidate of the avocation named looks very much like an attempt to insert the thin end of the wedge to upset all their previous arrangements. It is a fact which will be admitted generally that licensed victuallers, as a body, are a most respectable class of men, and deserving of all respect; but the puzzle is to know why one of them should be so desirous of joining a Lodge where men of his ilk and calling are naturally objects of aversion. Some interesting interchange of thought on this subject, and the influence of these class Lodges in general, may be elicited, and we shall be very glad to hear what our correspondents may have to say on the points raised by the Manchester episode.

INSTALLATION OF THE DUKE OF ABERCORN.

HIS Grace the Duke of Abercorn was installed as Grand Master of Ireland on the 3rd inst., in the Masonic Hall, Molesworth Street, Dublin, in presence of one of the largest and most representative gatherings that has ever been held under the auspices of the Grand Lodge of Ireland. Every part of the country was worthily represented, though the limited accomodation necessitated the exercise of considerable restrictions in the distribution of tickets of admission. Only about 400 of these could be issued, and fortunate were the few who succeeded in the ballot for them, after the wants of the G. Officers and Past Master had been satisfied. A triple row of seats extended along the hall at each side from the dais to the organ, on which the Masters and Wardens of the Metropolitan Lodges were seated, while the elevated benches behind were filled with Provincial Masters and privileged representatives. A place on the front rows near the dais was allotted to the Committee of General Purposes. The arrangements were worked out most satisfactorily, and the Stewards may be congratulated on the manner in which they acquitted themselves. Bro. J. Creed Meridith, LL.D., had the superintendence, and he was assisted by Bros. Kendal Franks, M.D., S. G. Robinson, R. S. Reeves, C. R. M'Namara, Thomas Stuart, J. G. Yeates, P. Jones, T. Atkinson, H. Leslie, J. C. Mayne, W. Grove White, LL.B., H. J. C. Tweedy, M.D., A. E. Murray, and C. Carnegie. At a quarter past eight o'clock the arrival of the Officers of the Grand Lodge of Ireland was announced, and the procession entered the hall, a march being played on the organ by Brother Joze. The chair was taken by the Right Worshipful R. W. Shekleton, Q.C., Deputy Grand Master, and the roll of Grand Officers was called by Bro. S. B. Oldham Deputy Grand Secretary and Treasurer. The following answered to their names:—Bros. the Marquis of Headfort G.S.W., Edward H. Kinahan, J.P., G. Treasurer, the Right Hon. Lord Plunket Archbishop of Dublin, the Rev. J. A. Galbraith Grand Chaplain, George Moyers, LL.D., J.P., G.S.D., Harry Hodges G.J.D., George A. Stephens, J.P., Grand Superintendent of Works, John T. Banks, M.D., Grand Director of Ceremonies, James Creed Meredith, LL.D., Grand Steward, J. C. Crawley, LL.D., Grand Sword Bearer, Thos. S. Sibthorpe, J.P., Grand I.G., and Archibald St. George Assistant Secretary. Apologies were received from Bros. Lord Arthur Hill G.S.W., the Earl of Bandon Grand Secretary, Maxwell H. Close Representative of the Grand Lodge of England, and others. The Grand Lodge was thus officered: Bros. the Marquis of Headfort G.S.W., the Rev. Joseph A. Galbraith G.J.W., Alderman John Moyes, LL.D., G.S.D., Harry H. Hodges G.J.D., and Thomas Sibthorpe, J.P., G.I.G. The Grand Lodge having been opened, His Grace the Archbishop of Dublin invoked a blessing. The Deputy Grand Master announced the special business which had called the brethren together, and nominated the following to receive the Grand Master elect, and conduct him into their presence:—Bros. the Hon. Judge Townshend, Edward H. Kinahan, J.P., Dr. Banks Grand D.C., and James Creed Meredith Grand Steward. The Duke of Abercorn was escorted by the officers named to the dais, where he was presented to the Deputy Grand Master by Bro. Judge Townshend. The customary obligation having been duly administered, His Grace was invested with the insignia of office, and took the chair. The Deputy Grand Master then made the following proclamation:—I proclaim the most high, potent, and noble James, Duke of Abercorn, Marquis of Hamilton, Viscount Strabane, Lord Hamilton, Baron of Strabane and Baron of Mountcastle in the Peerage of Ireland, Marquis of Abercorn and Viscount Hamilton in the Peerage of Great Britain, Earl of Abercorn, Baron of Paisley, Arbroath, Abercorn, Hamilton, Mountcastle, and Kilpatrick, in the Peerage of Scotland, a baronet of Ireland, a duke of Ireland, Duke of Chatlerhault in France, Lord Lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum of the county Donegal, and Companion of the Bath, Most Worshipful Grand Master of the Ancient and Honourable Society of Free and Accepted Masons of Ireland. The Deputy Grand Master then addressed the Duke of Abercorn:—My Lord Duke and Most Worshipful Sir,—On behalf of the Freemasons of Ireland, I desire to express to your Grace our most fraternal and heartfelt congratulations on your installation as head of the Order in Ireland, and it is to myself a source of sincere pleasure and allowable pride that it has fallen to my lot, as the presiding officer, to place you in the chair of Grand Master. Though your Grace has been hitherto unable to take part in our Masonic proceedings in Dublin, the brethren are aware that you were nominated by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Grand Master of the Freemasons of England, and the patron of the Order of Ireland, to the post of Senior Grand Warden of the Grand Lodge of England, and the tongue of good report has also borne testimony to the zealous and efficient manner in which you have discharged the duties of Provincial Grand Master of Derry and Donegal. To be selected by the unanimous vote of so numerous and influential a body as the Freemasons of Ireland to preside over them is an honour of which any one, no matter how exalted his rank, might well be proud; but, my Lord Duke, to be called on to fill the place of our late revered and respected Grand Master must evoke in your mind, in addition, feelings of peculiar solemnity. It is a little more than eleven years since we were assembled in this hall to welcome amongst us, as our Grand Master, Her Most Gracious Majesty's then Viceroy of Ireland, whose noble and dignified presence and eloquent address added lustre to all assemblies in which he took part, and won the hearts of all with whom he was brought in contact, and no one who was present on that memorable occasion can forget the enthusiastic reception accorded to him by the brethren. The inscrutable dispensation of the Great Architect of the Universe has removed him, who, take him all in all, we scarce dare hope to look upon his like again, and has left his family to deplore the loss of a loving and devoted husband and father, and us, his Masonic brethren, of our valued and venerated guide and head. To you, sir, has fallen a princely heritage, a great name, and a long bead-roll of illustrious ancestors, brave and honourable men, and fair and virtuous women; but amongst them all are two pre-eminently distinguished, to whose bright example and careful training is to be attributed the exalted position their children have attained amongst the nobles of the land, and whose kind and sincere friendship it was my great privilege to have had fully and invariably accorded me. In your presence and upon this occasion I cannot trust myself to speak as I should wish of him who has gone; but for her who is left to cherish the memory of so many years of loving union, I would bespeak the continued and warm sympathy of all in this her time of deep distress. In an assemblage of Masons it may seem out of place to allude to the lessons that are inculcated amongst us in all our ceremonials; but at this juncture in the destinies of our beloved country, and especially when our Order is assailed by people who wilfully misrepresent our objects and actions, it cannot be amiss in me, who have for so many years been so closely identified with the Masonic body, to avow, as I have always done, the principles that actuate us Masons, and that unite in the bonds of Brotherhood men of every country, sect, and opinion. Brotherly love, charity and truth, universal benevolence and tolerance, are the characteristics of the Order, and we recognise no distinction of class or creed—religious or political. Our motto is—Fear God, honour the King, and love the Brotherhood. As my utterances on this occasion may be made public, I would very briefly refer to the charge—which is in print, and may be read by any one who likes—given to every Mason on his admission into the Order. The earnest study of the volume of the Sacred Law, and the constant practice of the Divine precepts therein contained, of our duty to our God, to our neighbour, and to ourselves, are first most strongly urged, and those precepts are fully explained and amplified. The charge then proceeds: — "As a citizen I enjoin you to be exemplary in the discharge of your civil duties by never proposing or countenancing anything which may disturb the peace and good order of society, by paying obedience to the laws of the State in which you reside and by which you are protected, and by never losing sight of the allegiance you owe to the Sovereign of your native land. As an individual, I would enjoin upon you the practice of every domestic as well as public virtue. Let prudence direct you, temperance chasten you, fortitude support you, and justice be the guide of all your actions; and be especially careful to maintain in their fullest splendour those truly Masonic ornaments, Benevolence and Charity." And in closing our Lodges, when imploring the benediction of our Heavenly Father, we pray that every moral and social virtue may cement and unite us. This brief allusion to portions of our ceremonial should, in the minds of thinking people, be a complete refutation of the attacks upon us. I have, my Lord Duke and Most Worshipful Sir, occupied your time and that of the brethren present longer than I should have liked, but I felt it my duty in this public manner to repel the false charges made against the Order. In conclusion, I would wish your Grace many years of continued and unclouded happiness; and I trust that, as we can congratulate ourselves on your having undertaken the responsible office of Grand Master of the Free and Accepted Masons of Ireland, you will have no reason to regret your having done so. Before I lay aside my insignia as Deputy Grand Master, my emblem of authority over my brethren, I ask them to assist me in saluting their newly-installed Grand Master according to ancient custom. This having been done, M.W. His Grace the Duke of Abercorn said: R.W. Deputy Grand Master and Brethren,—I feel most flattered at the kind allusion with which you, Worshipful Grand Master, have been pleased to refer to myself, and also at the touching references made to the memory of my dear father, your late Worshipful Grand Master. It will be long, I am sure, before the recollection of his face and form fades from your hearts, together with the interest that he always took in the working of the Masonic Order in this country. I feel more especially the great and distinguished honour that you, brethren, have been pleased to confer upon me to-day, and I cannot help thinking that it is chiefly owing to the accident of birth that I am in the proud position of being now your Worshipful Grand Master, and not from any merits of my own arising from any great services to the Craft. I can only venture to express a hope that the brethren in Ireland may have no reason to regret this accident of birth, and for my part I shall always endeavour to discharge the important duties connected with my present position to the best of my ability; and it will be my constant desire to follow worthily in the footsteps of your late Grand Master. The position that I now occupy is one indeed to be envied by Masons, not only with regard to the United Kingdom generally, and taking into consideration the similar position that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales occupies in England, but more especially with respect to that portion of the United Kingdom in which we live, and which I pray for centuries to come may form an integral portion of that Kingdom. We live in troubled times, as your worthy Deputy Grand Master has just said—times to which it is impossible to assign any futurity of peace or tranquillity. But when we leave the outer world, with all its cares and anxieties, and enter this Hall, we feel—at least I do—that we have entered into another sphere, and for the time being are living in a bond of union, friendship, and charity with all men. And this is literally true, for have we not assembled within these walls men of all classes of society in Ireland? We are graced to-day by the presence of one of the ablest judges of the land, and the name of our brother will be handed down to posterity associated with the brightest deeds of Charity in connection with the Masonic Order. We have worthy and distinguished representatives of the legal and literary professions, of the landed interest, of the commercial and trading classes, and of the poor artizan and country labourer. And it is over these, brethren, that you have to-day elected me to preside—over this large community, with its hundreds of Lodges, ranging from the north to the south, the east to the west extended, in the area, but united in fellow feeling and love. I wish that the calumniators of our Order could for once understand the system upon which we live and let live. They would then be less willing and less desirous of finding fault with us. We are, it is true, a secret society, but a society without any political motive, but one that only works for the good of our fellow countrymen when in distress or affliction. I cannot, brethren, refrain from referring for an instant to the two great Charities that are connected with our Order—the Masonic Orphan Girls' and Boys' Schools. I have to congratulate you upon the successful working of both of these Institutions, that success being mainly attributable to the energy displayed by various members of the Craft who have the cause of these excellent Charities at heart, and also to the generous spirit evinced on their behalf by the various Lodges throughout Ireland. May the success that has hitherto attended them continue to prosper, thereby increasing year by year the number of poor orphans to be admitted within their walls. I will not detain you, brethren, further, for I have now a most pleasing duty to perform—to invest for the third time our worthy Brother Shekleton as Deputy Grand Master of the Order. In bringing under your notice the name of Bro. Shekleton I am not introducing to you the name of an unknown Mason. When I knew it fell to my lot to have the great pleasure of appointing a Deputy Grand Master, I at once felt that it would be with the sanction of all the brethren throughout this land that I should nominate Bro. Shekleton to that position. It is needless for me to say—the approbation which you have shown at the mention of his name proves—that he is a brother worthy to be accepted by you for the third time as Deputy Grand Master. It is also a matter of gratification to myself to think that I am able to propose such a worthy and excellent Mason. I beg now, brethren, to invest Brother Shekleton as Deputy Grand Master of this most distinguished Order. The Deputy Grand Master having been invested with the insignia of his office, was saluted. R.W. Bro. Robert W. Shekelton, Q.C., said: Most Worshipful Sir,—It is with feelings of the greatest diffidence that I stand amongst my brethren to return thanks, as I have so often done, for the honours that have been conferred upon me in Masonry. I confess that to a certain extent I was reluctant to undertake the office again, because I felt that, having filled it for so many years, it was my duty to give way to a younger brother, one who would be enabled to discharge the duties to your satisfaction, who would bring a larger amount of energy into the performance of those duties, and devote more time to the interests of the Order that I of late years have been able to do. But I felt, at the same time, that it was my duty when his Grace the Grand Master intimated his intention to nominate me, that I should not decline that honour unless I were thoroughly satisfied that it was not in my power to discharge the duties of the office; and, finally, I placed myself in the hands of my brethren, as I have always done, bespeaking their kind assistance and support, which have been hitherto on every occasion so generously accorded to me. To you, Most Worshipful Sir, I return my personal thanks for having entrusted me with the office. I must say that I am not unknown to your Grace, having had the honour of your friendship now for many years. To you, my brethren, I am not a stranger, having been Deputy Grand Master for a period now of nearly seventeen years. I believe it has been unprecedented in the annals of the Order that a brother has filled that important office for so many years, and that the same brother has had to discharge the duties of Grand Master on two separate occasions. I confess that thought brings melancholy reflections to me, because it reminds me of the death of two brethren, who were kind and generous and noble friends of myself; and I assure you that that alone has weighed upon me, and made me very doubtful whether I should have undertaken the office again. But, brethren, I thank you heartily for the way in which you have received my name to-night, and I can assure you that as long as I have the honour of being entrusted with the position of Deputy Grand Master I shall endeavour to discharge the duties of the office, as I have hitherto done, without regard to any man in the Order, simply actuated by a desire to do my duty to the Craft, and promote the well-being of the Order. Bro. the Hon. Judge Townshend said: Most Worshipful Grand Master,—I have been requested, as having discharged the functions for several years of the high office of Deputy Grand Master, to mention to your Grace publicly here to-night, if you did not know it already, that the Order in Ireland, on hearing that you had been pleased to nominate our R.W. Bro. Shekleton to the office of Deputy Grand Master—an office which, as I well know, requires no little care, no little attention, is encumbered with a good deal of difficulty, requires much discretion, much command of temper, and many other attributes which I do not like to enumerate lest it might look as if I wished to take credit for the possession of them myself, but which we all recognise in the D.G.M., whom we most gladly receive and welcome amongst us for the third time—determined to present him with an address which would but feebly convey their appreciation of his high personal character, and of the eminent services he has rendered to Freemasonry in Ireland. I have to ask your Grace to present, in the name of the brethren, this very handsome testimonial to our beloved brother; and we ask you to do so, not merely because we know that it will obtain a very great enhancement in that way, but that it will be gratifying to your Grace to be able by that overt act, in the face of this great assembly, to testify to your brethren that you are gratified at the fact that they have so kindly and so cordially received the appointment that you have made. I now place the address in your hands for formal presentment, and I think you will agree with me that it is in itself not unworthy of the Order or of the state of decorative art in Ireland. The following is the text of the address:

Address from the Freemasons of Ireland to the Right Worshipful Brother Robert Wm. Shekleton, Q.C., J.P., Deputy Grand Master.

Right Worshipful and Very Dear Brother,

It is with sincere pleasure that the members of the Masonic Order in this country present their fraternal welcome and congratulation to you upon the occasion of your appointment, now for the third time, as Deputy Grand Master of the Freemasons of Ireland, a position which you have already filled under our late Grand Masters (His Grace the Duke of Abercorn, K.G., and His Grace the Duke of Leinster) for the unprecedented period of nearly 17 years, with credit to yourself and benefit to the Craft. In order to commemorate this event, they purpose placing your portrait in the Grand Lodge room, where they trust it may long continue as a memorial of the services of one so highly esteemed and beloved by his brethren. In conclusion, they fraternally hope that much happiness is reserved for you in the future, and that you may be long spared to perform those exalted Masonic duties which you have so ably discharged in the past.

Signed, on behalf of the brethren, this 3rd day of March, 1886.

ABERCORN, Grand Master.
BANDON, Grand Secretary.

The Duke of Abercorn, in presenting the address, said the acclamation with which the brethren had received the words of Brother Judge Townshend furnished a further proof—if such were wanting—that to no one could such a testimonial be more fittingly presented than to their, for the third time, newly-elected Deputy Grand Master. Without further preface, he begged to hand to Brother Shekleton the address which had been presented to him so heartily and so unanimously by the brethren. Bro. Theophilus St. George was formally present as representative of the Grand Lodge of Virginia, U.S., and, having been invested with the insignia of that office, Bro. St. George took his seat on the dais. Bro. Shekleton said Bro. St. George had been for many years a most active member of the Order. He had filled all the subordinate offices in the Grand Lodge, and had now retired into the ranks of the illustrious Past Grand Officers; but the choice of the Grand Lodge of Virginia could not—as all the brethren well knew—have fallen upon a better or more deserving Mason. During the evening a collection for the Masonic Orphan Schools was made, the National Anthem was sung, and the Grand Lodge was closed with customary formalities.

The final meeting of the Board of Stewards in connection with the recent Festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution was held on Friday, the 5th inst., at Freemasons' Hall, under the presidency of Bro. Edgar Bowyer. Bro. Terry, as Secretary, submitted the statement of accounts, and payment of the bills having been ordered, votes of thanks were passed to the Chairman of the Festival (the Most Noble the Marquis of Hertford S.G.W.), the President, Treasurer, and other Officers of the Board for their services, and to Bros. Martin and Flatteley for their efforts on behalf of the Institution, which had resulted in their bringing up lists of £156 and £140 respectively. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the proceedings.

The General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys assembled on Saturday, under the presidency of Bro. Edgar Bowyer V.P. P.G. Standard Bearer. The minutes of the previous meeting having been confirmed, those of the House Committee were read for information. Two petitions were received, and after consideration they were approved, the lads thereby becoming eligible for the October election. A grant was made to a former pupil of the Institution, and a vote of thanks having been passed to the chairman the proceedings were brought to a conclusion.

The lads who were sent up from the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys to the Cambridge Middle Class Examinations in December last acquitted themselves most satisfactorily, all of them having satisfied the examiners, while a large majority were placed in the Honours Classes. Thirteen boys went up for examination, with the following result:—Honours: Class I.—A. S. Haworth, distinguished in Latin and Mathematics. Class II.—J. Jamison, G. N. C. Keighley, A. J. Kennedy, and S. W. Richardson. Class III.—H. R. Hounslow, J. Langdon, W. W. Lucas, and W. J. Pringle. Satisfied the Examiners: H. W. N. Knott, H. V. N. Scrope-Shrapnel, G. W. Southam, and F. T. Tanner.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

CONFIDENCE LODGE, No. 193.

THE first meeting of this substantial old Lodge since the installation of Bro. W. Saint as Worshipful Master was held on Monday evening, at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street. The W.M. was supported by Bros. F. Silvester S.W., G. P. Nightingale J.W., S. Smither S.D., J. Gildersleve I.G., W. A. Cubitt I.P.M., Past Masters R. Kershaw, T. B. Biddle, H. T. Reed, Bedford Lemere, S. Webb, and J. Smith; Bros. H. F. Jones, J. Dongray, A. W. South, J. Egan, W. Belchamber, J. W. Garwood, W. J. Parker, J. Grundy, J. H. Clare, G. Masters, H. King, J. Little, W. Colyer, E. Carey, E. H. Walden, W. G. Farnley, F. Westoby, L. G. Reinhardt Tyler, &c. Amongst the Visitors were Bros. George Sadler 172, S. M. Pipe 1306, G. Andrews 1420, and others. Lodge having been opened in form, and the minutes of the previous meeting read and confirmed, was advanced to the third degree, when Bro. Frederick Hemmings was raised, the ceremony being performed in most creditable manner by the Worshipful Master, assisted by his Officers. Lodge was then resumed in the second, but the candidate, Brother A. F. Jones, being unavoidably absent, the ceremony was rehearsed. The manner in which this was done reflected the utmost credit on all who participated in the rite, and augurs well for the success which may be anticipated next meeting. A candidate for initiation was nominated, and after the transaction of some matters of business Lodge was closed in due form, amidst the heartiest good wishes. The brethren afterwards partook of a récherché supper, provided by Bro. Clemow in that style of elegance and refinement for which Anderton's has long been proverbial. This being an off-night, the W.M. said he intended to be brief in proposing the customary toasts; but in drinking to the Queen and the Craft, he said it would not be in any body of Freemasons that the name of her Majesty would be received with any expression of disloyalty such as had been alleged to have taken place elsewhere. The toast was received with enthusiasm, as also were those of the Most Worshipful Grand Master his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers Present and Past. The I.P.M. then rose, and said this was the second time he had been entrusted with the gavel, and in proposing the health of their Worshipful Master, he confessed he had great pleasure in doing so on this occasion. Being an off-night they must congratulate themselves upon the very pleasant gathering they were now enjoying. He was pleased to tell the brethren that they were not likely to be long without an initiate into the good old Lodge of Confidence, for, as they had heard, a candidate would be brought forward at the next meeting. The toast having been heartily received, the Worshipful Master briefly returned thanks, and in so doing said he felt a debt of gratitude to the brethren for the kindness with which they had greeted the mention of his name. He trusted the Lodge might go forward during his term of office, and that they might have a still further increase of members. It was always gratifying to see "new blood" coming into the Lodge, because it kept them up to the standard, and made them feel, as others felt, an interest in the Lodge of Confidence, in addition to the older members. He was a little disappointed that matters were not quite so glowing at the opening of his year as he could have wished, yet he hoped on the next occasion of their meeting there would be a more numerous attendance. He then proposed the Visitors, observing that they were not numerous that evening, as might have been expected. Nevertheless, they were most heartily welcome, and he was pleased to think that although their gathering was a small one, yet he trusted their Visitors would perceive that this welcome was a genuine one. There was the same spirit and good feeling pervading all the brethren, and he was sure that would be appreciated by those present. If there was not that enthusiasm which marked some of their gatherings when a larger number was present, still he was pleased to see the Visitors, and as to the way in which the business had been conducted, both at the Lodge and at the festive board, he hoped they would think it creditable to the Confidence Lodge, and to all parties concerned. They endeavoured to carry out the business in a proper and dignified manner, and he trusted the Visitors would go away with a favourable impression of what they had seen. Bro. Sadler, in responding, said he was sorry he could not be present in time to see the working in Lodge, but he thanked them for the hospitality which had been extended to the Visitors. He came there as a stranger within their gates, with only Freemasonry to recommend him; and he hoped to have an opportunity before long of again meeting the brethren of this excellent Lodge, which had such a reputation for good working. Bro. Pipe also replied, stating that he had had the honour and pleasure of knowing their Worshipful Master for 20 years, Bro. Saint, in his estimation, was a worthy of worthies, both in public and private life. He wished continued prosperity to the Lodge, and a year of happiness and success to their Worshipful Master. Bro. Andrews added his quota to the thanks of the Visitors for the hospitality they had enjoyed, and spoke in the highest terms of the work he had witnessed in the Lodge room. The W.M. then gave the Immediate Past Master, and the Past Masters of the Lodge present. He thanked Brother Cubitt for his counsel and assistance, and for his willingness at all times to help forward the work of the Lodge. It was a source of satisfaction to see so many of the Past Masters in attendance, ready to support the efforts of the Officers and himself in the carrying out of their duties. They were all so well known that it would be superfluous on his part to say anything in their commendation; but it was satisfactory to know that they did not retire upon their laurels after they had passed the chair, but continued their active interest in the Lodge, as they had done hitherto. The toast was heartily drank, and Bro. Cubitt I.P.M., responding to the toast, said he was very pleased to see they had a numerous gathering of Past Masters, this being an "off-night." Sometimes brethren, after they had passed the chair, found it convenient to have other business to prevent them from attending on these small occasions; but that was not so in the Confidence. The Worshipful Master had said he was somewhat disappointed at the results of his first night's work, but he had no need to be upset in that respect. His (the speaker's) predecessor had no initiate on the first two occasions of his sitting, but had eleven during his year; and he (Bro. Cubitt) had no initiate on his first night, but finished up the year with ten. Bro. Saint had none that evening, but one had been nominated for the next meeting, and there was a prospect that he would have as successful a year as any of his predecessors. This was a strong Lodge, having 86 subscribing members, but they must have an infusion of new blood to take the place of those who would inevitably drop off through death or from other causes. He trusted their W.M. would have health and strength to carry out his duties, with credit to himself and with satisfaction to the brethren. The W.M. expressed regret that their esteemed Secretary, Bro. J. Shackell P.M. was prevented from being present that night, and was sure the brethren all wished for him a speedy restoration to health. He then proposed the Officers of the Lodge, observing that it was a source of great pleasure to be surrounded by so efficient and competent a body. Many other brethren were working up to the chair, so there need be no fear as to the way in which the business of the Confidence Lodge would be conducted in the future. Bro. Silvester was sure that he and his brother Officers were anxious to do all they could to make themselves efficient, and to qualify themselves for the high position they one and all aspired to occupy. Everything he did for the Lodge he did with a great deal of pleasure, and he was sure the same spirit actuated the whole of the Officers of the Lodge. He had worked from the very lowest rung of the ladder, and it was his aim to attain to the proud position which the Worshipful Master now so worthily held. Bro. Nightingale also responded. He felt very grateful to the W.M. for mentioning his name in connection with the toast. He assured him that it would be a pleasant duty to exert his utmost efforts to assist in carrying out the work of the Lodge, and to promote its best interests; and it was also his ambition to make himself worthy of the chair when his turn should come. He also had taken the lowest step of the ladder, but hoped in time to fill the position which Bro. Saint so worthily and honourably occupied. Bros. Smither, Egan, and Colyer expressed themselves in similar terms, and the proceedings were closed at an early hour with the Tyler's toast. During the evening some capital songs were given, the humorous vein being, as usual, irresistibly sustained by Bro. Silvester.

GODERICH LODGE, No. 1211.

ON Monday evening, the 1st inst., there was a large and representative gathering of the Masons of West Yorkshire on the occasion of the initiation of Mr. G. W. Balfour, M.P., into this Lodge, at the Masonic Hall, Great George Street, Leeds. Bro. Charles Scriven was in the Master's chair, and the other Officers of the Lodge present were Bros. John Jacques I.P.M., A W. Youings S.W., W. H. Bradford J.W., J. W. Fourness P.M. Treasurer, William Smith Secretary, W. Ward S.D., J. Ellis J.D., W. B. Townsend P.M. Organist, T. Craistor I.G., A. K. Scattergood and W. J. Gwillam Stewards, and J. Calverley P.M. The Visitors, who came from all parts of the Province, included Bros. T. W. Tew Past G.D. of England Prov. G.M., Henry Smith D.P.G.M., Rev. Canon Bullock P.P.G. Chap., Rev. J. J. Needham P.G. Chap., Rev. J. A. Naylor P.G. Chap., J. Menzies P.P.G.W., C. L. Mason P.P.G. Treasurer, A. W. Stanfield Prov. G. Reg., W. F. Smithson P.P.G.D., G. F. Crowe P.P.G.D., D. R. Glover P.P.G.D., Thos. Winn P.P.G. Sup. of W., T. Bateman Fox Prov. G. Sword Bearer, Alfred Austin P.P.G.S.B., J. Richardson P.P.G.A.P., Saml. Slack P.P.G.D. of C., H. T. Gardiner Prov. G. Steward, Jas. Milnes W.M. 289, Thos. Myers W.M. 304, John Thrippleton W.M. 306, Wm. Tyers W.M. 1042, Rev. T. C. Smyth, D.D., LL.D., P.D.D.G.M. East. Arch. W.M. 2069, A. Williamson P.M. 289, Wm. Greaves P.M. 289, J. Dobson P.M. 289, John Dyson P.M. 306, J. B. Hargreaves P.M. 1311, W. Watson P.M. 2069, Henry Oxley P.M. 495, H. Carr W.M. 1085, Thos. Ecroyd P.M. 439, and many others. Bro. Thos. Winn P.M. P.P.G. Sup. of W. acted as Director of Ceremonies, and Bro. W. B. Townsend P.M. had charge of the musical arrangements of the evening. Letters of apology were received from Bros. W. L. Jackson, M.P., P.M. Prov. G.S.W., Colonel A. Charlesworth P.M. Prov. G.J.W., Ald. Thos. Hill P.M., Mayor of Bradford, Ald. John Rhodes, Mayor of Pontefract, Herbert G. E. Green P.M. Prov. G. Sec., and others. The ceremony of initiating Mr. G. W. Balfour, M.P., into the mysteries of Freemasonry was performed by Bro. Scriven, assisted by Bros. Tew, Bradford, and Ward. At the conclusion of the ceremony Bro. Tew said that he was deeply obliged for the compliment accorded to him of enabling him to take part in the interesting ceremony of that evening, and to mark the accession to the Craft of a gentleman distinguished by many and varied qualifications, one whose eloquence and ability had so endeared him to the people of Leeds that in the autumn of last year he was elected as Parliamentary representative of the Central Division of the borough, and their satisfaction was greatly added to by the fact that they were welcoming so talented a representative to the ranks of Freemasonry. Goderich Lodge had that evening shown its appreciation of personal worth by admitting Bro. Balfour as a member, and it had recognised the justness of the selection made by the outside public of his fitness for a political career. That Bro. Balfour would uphold the principles of the Craft they knew full well. In conclusion, he wished prosperity to the Goderich Lodge, and complimented the W.M. (Bro. Scriven) on the large gathering of Masons over which he had been called upon to preside. The scroll was then taken, when Bro. Youings was announced as W.M. elect. After "hearty good wishes" had been exchanged, the brethren adjourned to the banquet, admirably served by Bro. A. Wood. Bro. Scriven in felicitous terms proposed the health of R.W. Prov. G.M. of West Yorkshire Bro. T.

W. Tew P.G.D. of England, and W. Deputy P.G.M. Bro. H. Smith, and the P.G. Officers Present and Past. The R.W. P.G.M., in responding, said that the Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire was never in a finer condition of prosperity than now. The largest proportion of Lodges had already sent in their returns, from which it appeared that there were a larger number of Freemasons in the province than he had ever known to be the case in the twenty-three years during which he had been connected with the province. He had the honour to be present at the festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution in London, under the presidency of the Marquis of Hertford. He was proud to find himself so well supported by Stewards from West Yorkshire, when the announcement was made that the province had contributed to the funds of the Institution the magnificent sum of about £735, the second largest amount that had been sent up from the Provinces. There were many candidates for that admirable charity, and he believed that West Yorkshire would be always found supporting their candidates, both by their votes and their purse, to the best of their ability. He alluded to the meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge at Sheffield, on the 14th of April next, when business of great importance was to be dealt with, and he hoped the Leeds brethren in large numbers would be present. Freemasonry was in a very flourishing condition in Leeds, and he hoped to see the day when all the eight Lodges of the town would meet under one roof. He hoped Freemasonry would always thrive in Leeds, and that all the brethren would work together in harmony, with one great object in view, namely, brotherly love, relief, and truth. In conclusion, he called upon the brethren not to forget the late P.G.M., Bro. Sir H. Edwards, who was lying on a bed of sickness. It was their bounden duty to remember one who had done so nobly in the past, and to express the hope that he might be long spared. The Prov. G.M. then gave the initiate's toast, which was received with enthusiasm. Bro. G. W. Balfour, M.P., in returning thanks, said that he had discovered that though not building in a material sense they were Masons in a spiritual sense, and he rejoiced to think that he had become a member of that great body. He trusted to remain not merely a sleeping partner, but an active member of the great society, and in due time to merit the kind and cordial reception they had accorded to him. Other toasts followed.

EBORACUM LODGE, No. 1611.

ON Tuesday, the 23rd ult., an emergency meeting of this Lodge was held at the Freemasons' Hall, St. Saviour-gate, York. The W.M. and brethren of the Falcon Lodge, Thirsk, had expressed a desire to visit the Eboracum Lodge for the purpose of exchanging fraternal courtesies and seeing the working of the Lodge, and accordingly a special meeting was arranged for their convenience. The Lodge having been opened, the chair was taken by Bro. T. B. Whytehead P.M. P.P.G.W., in the absence of Bro. A. T. B. Turner W.M., who is in bad health. There were present also Bros. J. Blenkin P.M. as I.P.M., J. T. Seller P.M., Geo. Ayre P.M. P.P.G.D., W. Brown S.W., Geo. Balmford P.M. and Treasurer P.P.G.O. as J.W., J. Kay Secretary, S. J. Dalton S.D., W. Lackenby J.D., W. Storey Steward, W. Stephenson I.G., P. Pearson and J. D. Irving Assistant Stewards, J. Hall Tyler, W. T. Nance, W. B. Dyson, J. W. Blenkin, J. E. Wilkinson, H. Mennell, W. G. Carter, W. Sharp, C. Taff, W. Routledge, Geo. Hebblethwaite, T. Horsley, B. Stephenson, and H. Shonksmith; and the following visitors: Bros. Geo. Kirby P.M. 236, Major McGachen P.M. 1991, R. C. Faukner, S. G. Crummack, T. Watkinson, J. Bisoomb 236, and G. Manton 279. The W.M. and brethren of the Falcon Lodge, 1416, were announced, entered the room, and took their places to the number of 11, including Bros. Z. Wright W.M., Dr. Longford S.W., Dr. Hartley J.W., J. T. Hansell Secretary, T. J. Wilkinson P.M. and Treasurer, C. Greensides P.M., Rev. E. Richardson J.D., Rev. Canon Camidge P.M. P.P.G.C. Chap., F. R. Hansell D.C., W. W. Hall I.G., and J. S. Farmery Tyler. Bro. Whytehead welcomed the Visitors in the name of the Lodge, expressed regret at the absence of the W.M., and hoped that the practice of interchanging visits between Lodges would become more frequent. Bro. Z. Wright replied, expressing the pleasure it gave himself and his brethren to be present. Bro. Blenkin P.M. then took the chair, and proceeded to initiate a candidate who had been balloted for at the last regular Lodge, and subsequently Bro. Whytehead resumed the chair, and initiated a second candidate, the charge being given by the Senior Warden. At the conclusion of the ceremonies, the arrival was announced of Bro. Rev. Canon Tristram Grand Chaplain and D.P.G.M. of Durham, and that distinguished brother was introduced by a deputation under the direction of Bro. Ayre P.M. as D.C., and was saluted. At the request of the Visitors, the Lodge was then raised to the second and third degrees, and again lowered, after which Bro. T. B. Whytehead said that, as usual, he had a pleasant duty to perform, namely, to present to the Lodge more gifts on the part of its members. Bro. G. Lamb had done a quantity of painting, staining, &c., for the Lodge on entering its new premises, and had forwarded to the Treasurer a receipted bill for the whole amount. Bro. Shonksmith had presented a quantity of glasses engraved with Masonic emblems and the number of the Lodge. Bro. W. Stephenson had given a set of match trays for the smoke room table, and three antique goblets engraved with Masonic emblems; and he himself begged to present to the library the Abbé Barruel's "History of Jacobinism," in four volumes. Votes of thanks were passed for these gifts and the Lodge was closed with "hearty good wishes." The brethren then adjourned to the supper room, the capacity of which was tried to its utmost limits. An excellent supper had been provided by the Tyler, to which justice was done, and after the wreck had been removed the usual loyal toasts were given. Bro. T. B. Whytehead gave the toast of the Falcons. He said for some years it had been an annual pleasure to him to visit Thirsk at a certain period and to instal the Worshipful Masters of the Falcon Lodge, whom he regarded as his Masonic children, the youngest of whom he was pleased to see smiling on his left. The Falcon Lodge had shown marvellous activity considering its dimensions and locality. It had a beautiful little hall of its own and did good and intelligent work in Masonry. He hoped that they had that night inaugurated in York a new feature in the way of Masonic visiting, which would be continued and extended. Bro. Z. Wright responded, saying how gratified he and his brethren had been in witnessing the clean working of the Eboracum Lodge, and how much surprise they had felt at the beautiful details of the furniture and the general excellence of the new premises. He said that the Falcon Lodge had not as much work on hand as their entertainers, but they kept their working tools in good order, and ready to work up any good material that was presented to them. Bro. Canon Camidge proposed Prosperity to the Eboracum Lodge, and referred to his early friendship with Bro. Whytehead, when as schoolfellows they often rowed up the river Ouse against stream and wind. Now, however, they were embarked on the stream of Masonry, with both wind and stream in their favour, and he trusted that the voyage so auspiciously begun would continue as happily. He congratulated the Eboracum Lodge upon its success and the good work it was doing, and concluded by speaking in the highest terms of Freemasonry, its value to society, and its influence on the happiness of mankind. The toast was responded to by Bro. J. Blenkin P.M. The toast of the Visitors was given by Bro. W. Brown S.W., and responded to by Bro. G. Kirby P.M. Bro. J. T. Seller P.M. proposed the Officers of the Lodge, and Bro. G. Balmford P.M. and Treasurer responded. Bro. W. B. Dyson gave the Health of the Candidates, and both of them responded. Bro. Whytehead gave the Masonic Charities, and spoke of the work done by the Lodge in that direction, which had been mainly owing to the efforts of their Bro. J. S. Cumberland P.M., whom he had hoped to have seen amongst them that evening. Bro. T. Horsley responded, and after the Tyler's toast the meeting broke up. During the evening several songs were given by Bros. G. Kirby P.M., Major McGachen P.M., J. E. Wilkinson, H. Mennell, and others.

OLD ENGLAND LODGE, No. 1790.

IN consequence of a fire which occurred at the Club adjoining the Masonic Hall, Thornton Heath, the regular meeting of this Lodge was held at the White Hart, Abchurch-lane, on the 4th March. Bros. H. Baber W.M., W. H. Ranson S.W., C. Tarry J.W., W. Foulsham P.M. Treasurer, H. M. Hobbs Secretary, F. T. Ridpath S.D., J. Kilvington J.D., W. Best and C. A. Wadsworth Stewards, F. C. Pascall P.M., C. Daniel P.M. 65, H. E. Philps, and W. Lane Tyler. Lodge having been opened, the Secretary read the dispensation from the M.W. the Grand Master, authorising the Lodge to meet at the above address. Bro. Philps was passed to the second degree. Great regret was expressed by the brethren at the fire, which had taken place on the previous Tuesday, whereby the regalia of the Lodge had been destroyed, and the furniture and fittings injured, but above all at the loss of the oil painting of Bro. W. Foulsham, which had been presented to the Lodge at the February meeting. A hearty vote of thanks was ordered to be recorded on the minutes, and sent to Bro. T. Turquand Fillan, W.M. of the Langton Lodge, for allowing the use of the furniture and regalia of the Langton Lodge of Instruction, and to Bro. G. Anderson P.G.S., at whose premises the meeting was held. After some other business Lodge was closed in perfect harmony.

PRINCE EDWARD OF SAXE-WEIMAR LODGE, No. 1903.

THE monthly meeting of this Lodge was largely attended, on Wednesday, 3rd inst., among those present being Bros. H. Long W.M., William Royston Pike J.W., A. L. Emanuel Secretary, G. Backer Treasurer, W. Mayhour J.D., G. Sylvester Organist, W. C. Ford, J. Elverston, T. Page, A. Austin, J. Gieve, E. Hill, E. H. Bayley, C. Reader, F. Bevis, J. Johns, and J. Galt. The visitors were Bros. E. Goble Provincial Grand Secretary, E. Nayler Provincial Grand Steward, J. Wallingford, J. W. Gieve, J. Wedlock, W. Clarke, A. Ashby, G. Grant, G. Barnden, R. H. Jee, G. F. Brown, and P. H. Emanuel. After the Lodge was closed the brethren partook of a banquet well served by Bro. Mayhour. The Loyal and Masonic toasts having been duly honoured, Bro. Long, who presided, said he had a most pleasing duty to perform, the most pleasing during his year of office. It was to make a presentation to Bro. Emanuel, their honorary Secretary. Bro. Emanuel, like many others, had "tied" himself up. The members thought they should mark that event. He was connected with several societies in the town, all of which had recognised the great event of his life. The brethren had therefore met together that evening to present Bro. Emanuel with a handsome Dresden China clock and pair of candelabra to match, and hoped he would live for many years with his wife, and have some little ones about him, who in the coming by-and-bye would be able to look on the presentation with love and pride. Bro. Emanuel had been a most hardworking and zealous Secretary, and had always evinced an interest in the welfare of the Lodge. Might the One above spare him to be amongst them for many years. Bro. Emanuel, who was enthusiastically received, thanked the W.M. for the presentation, made on behalf of himself and the brethren, of such a handsome marriage gift. He was connected with many societies, all of which had recognised his humble services, but he could assure the brethren that none were more appreciated than the one received that evening from many dear brethren, whose friendship he thoroughly appreciated. Regarding his marriage, he felt he had done a wise and sensible thing, and hoped that he might be spared amongst them for many years to come. He had had a good example set him in Masonry by his late esteemed father, and he assured the brethren that if it was their will, he would always officiate as Secretary with that faithfulness and zeal he had hitherto. Beneath the base of the clock was a silver plate bearing the following inscription:—

"Presented to Bro. A. L. Emanuel, on his marriage, by the members of the Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar Lodge, as a token of respect and to mark their appreciation of his services as Secretary from the formation of the Lodge, 1881 to date 1886."

Other toasts followed, and with the aid of harmony, a most enjoyable evening was spent.

ABBEY LODGE, No. 2030.

A MEETING of this Lodge was held on Monday, 8th instant, when there was a large attendance of members and visitors, though, possibly by reason of the inclement weather, the gathering was not so numerous as usual. There was a considerable amount of business on the agenda paper, including four raisings, a passing, and three initiations, besides balloting for a joining member and the election of Master, Treasurer, &c. for the ensuing year. Lodge was opened by Bro. W. H. Baker W.M., at four o'clock, and was fully engaged until 7 p.m. The only item on the list of business that was not effected was the passing, the candidate for which ceremony was not in attendance. Bros. Gammon, De Pinna, Gersell and Hoffman were raised to the third degree; Mr. Francis Charles Morgan, Mr. John Irving, and Mr. Charles Thomas Cowley were initiated into the first degree, and Bro. C. C. Morgan, 1257, was elected a joining member. The ballot was then taken for the Worshipful Master, to be installed in May next, and Bro. Seager-Hunt S.W. was unanimously elected to that honourable office. Bro. Rogers, Treasurer of the Lodge from its commencement, was also unanimously re-elected, as was also Bro. Walkley the Tyler. The I.P.M. Bro. Burdett-Coutts moved that on the termination of his year of office a P.M.'s jewel be presented to Bro. Baker. It is more than usually well deserved in the case of Bro. Baker, by reason of the admirable manner in which he has fulfilled the general duties of Master, and the especially correct working of the ceremonies in Lodge. Though doubtless Bro. Baker would fully appreciate this reward when presented to him, it must be a still greater satisfaction to him to note the increased prosperity and prestige which the Lodge has obtained during his term of office. Bro. Baker announced that since the last meeting of the Lodge they had lost one of their earliest members—Bro. Brinckmann—by death. Bro. Baker said he had taken upon himself to write a letter of sympathy to the family on behalf of the Abbey Lodge. He had been invited to be present at the interment, but had been unable to attend; he had, however, on behalf of the Lodge, sent a wreath of flowers, feeling sure that the brethren would endorse what he had done. Bro. Burdett-Coutts reported that he had, on the previous Wednesday, attended Grand Lodge, where he had had the honour of being selected to propose the re-election of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales as Most Worshipful Grand Master of English Freemasons. Speaking after the dinner which followed the closing of the Lodge, the I.P.M. further said that he had no idea why he was selected on Wednesday to perform that very high and dignified office, unless it was attributable to the fact that he was the first Master of the Abbey Lodge, which by its rapid growth and vigour, and by the admirable part it had played in the history of Freemasonry for the last two years, had won for itself a very honourable position in the Craft. The Grand Officers present were Bro. Simpson Past Grand Chaplain, Chaplain to the Abbey Lodge, and Bro. Jekyll Past Grand Organist. Among the Visitors were Bros. Russell W.M. of the Carnarvon Lodge, Goldstein and Bliss, also from the Carnarvon, Kaye W.M. of the Crystal Palace Lodge, Dr. Forbes, Griffith, Cave, Fisher, Thompson, and many others.

EPPING LODGE, No. 2077.

THE ordinary monthly meeting of this Lodge was held on Saturday, the 6th inst., at the Cock Hotel, Epping. The Officers present were Bros. J. Salmon W.M., E. G. Lewis I.P.M., J. Woodrow S.W., J. London J.W., Fraser S.D., Fletcher J.D., Hughes I.G., E. J. Acworth P.M. Treasurer, Fletcher Organist, Perkinson Tyler; also Bros. Noakes, Tucker, Lawrence, and others. Lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of the meetings of January 2nd and 30th were read and confirmed. Lodge was opened in the second degree, and Bro. Tucker, a candidate for raising, having answered the usual questions, was entrusted and retired. Lodge was opened in the third degree, and Bro. Tucker was raised to the sublime degree of M.M. in due form. Lodge was resumed to the first degree, and Bros. Noakes and Smith having answered the questions leading to the second were entrusted and retired. Lodge was opened in the second degree, and by permission of the W.M., Bro. Acworth P.M. and Treasurer performed the ceremony of passing Bros. Noakes and Smith to the F.C. degree. Lodge having been resumed to the first degree, and the chair taken by the W.M., the ballot was taken for Mr. Sutton Abbott, and proving unanimously in his favour, he was initiated according to ancient custom. Two gentlemen were proposed for initiation, and Bro. J. Salmon was elected to represent the Lodge on the Essex Charity Committee. No further business offering, Lodge was closed in due form. The usual banquet followed.

UNITED STRENGTH LODGE, No. 228.

A REGULAR meeting of this old and royal Lodge was held on Tuesday evening, the 9th inst. at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street, but there was a numerous attendance, under the presidency of Bro. C. H. Fox W.M. There were also present Bros. J. F. Curtis S.W., W. Smith J.W., H. Langley S.D., A. Wooley D.C., J. Curtis Organist, G. C. Jupe I.G., Past Masters Rudrum, A. H. Hickman, J. Hillhouse, and R. H. Halford C. The visitors Bros. G. T. Hare Tyler, G. Brookes, J. T. Ashby, W. Ware, G. R. Lambert, C. Taylor, J. Jennings, W. Cubben, B. G. Brickley, J. Hodson, C. Rogers, J. Bruton, W. J. Randall, C. Jolley, W. H. Brockey, H. Paine, T. Baxter, J. Billinghurst, and others. Among the Visitors were Bros. Fredk. Edgington P.M. 1321, and H. Parry 1319. Lodge was duly opened, and the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. It was then advanced to the third, and Bros. W. H. Cook and Walter Ware were raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason, the ceremony being well carried out. Resuming in the second, Bros. J. Bruton and C. Jolley were passed, the working being, as in the former degree, most creditable to the W.M. and his Officers. The ballot was then opened for Mr. Benjamin Geo. Brinkley, who had been proposed by Bro. W. Smith J.W., and seconded by Bro. Edward Davies P.M. The voting being unanimously in favour, the candidate was duly initiated into the mysteries and privileges of the Order, in accordance with ancient rites. There was some discussion on the bye-laws, on a point raised by Bro. Hillhouse, which having been satisfactorily disposed of, and other business of minor importance gone through, the members and visitors supped together, when the customary Loyal and Craft toasts were duly honoured, amidst a pleasant sprinkling of vocal and instrumental music and recitations.

ST. JAMES' LODGE, No. 765.

THE election meeting of this Lodge was held at the Bridge House Hotel, London Bridge, on Tuesday, the 2nd inst., there being present on the occasion Bros. W. H. Tilling W.M., Geo. Tilling S.W., E. J. Rawle J.W., H. W. Mitten, Richard Tilling, J. Child, and Past Masters J. E. Costello S.D., Carnes, Perkins, Spencer, Alfred Tilling, Prior, Samuels, Miels, Roberts, Travers, Geo. Carter, J. Williams, Spurling, Walker, Brinkler, Rudd, and other members. Amongst the Visitors were Bros. W. Martin W.M. 879, Marsh W.M. 1587, Chamberlain and Venables 1587, and Fountain 879. There was no ceremonial work before the Lodge, and the minutes of the previous meeting having been confirmed, and the bye-laws of the Lodge read, the brethren at once proceeded to the election of W.M., Treasurer, and Tyler. Bro. George Tilling, the present esteemed S.W., received the unanimous vote of the members as W.M. for the ensuing year. Bro. J. Child P.M. was re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. Rowe Tyler. Auditors having been appointed and date of meeting arranged, a grant of ten guineas was unanimously voted to a former Past Master of the Lodge, now in need of assistance. On the proposition of Bro. H. W. Mitten, who in an excellent speech set forth the merits of the Worshipful Master and the praiseworthy manner in which he had discharged the duties of his exalted position, a Past Master's jewel was voted to Bro. W. H. Tilling, to be presented at the ensuing meeting of the Lodge. No further business offering, the Lodge was then closed in due form and with solemn prayer. Refreshment followed labour, and the usual toasts were given, that of the Worshipful Master elect, Bro. George Tilling, being most cordially received, and to which the newly-elected brother made appropriate response. For the Visitors, to whom a hearty welcome was accorded, the several brethren named replied in terms of high appreciation of their reception. A very pleasant and enjoyable evening was spent under the presidency of the Worshipful Master, whose term of office has been marked with a zealous endeavour to uphold the well-known character of this excellent Lodge.

La Tolerance Lodge of Instruction, No. 538.—At the Portland Arms, Great Portland Street, W., on Wednesday last. Present: Bros. Latreille W.M., Burgess S.W., Thom J.W., Willby S.D., Lonsdale J.D., J. H. Price I.G., J. Paul Preceptor, Fowles Treasurer, W. Langdon P.M. Secretary. Visitors: Bros. Chalmers P.M., Hemmings, Dobson, Smale W.M. of the mother Lodge, and several others. This being the night for the rehearsal of the ceremony of installation by Bro. Latreille P.M., Bro. Taylor was placed in the chair. Bro. Taylor afterwards appointed the Officers, in a perfect manner. Bro. Latreille gave the addresses, to the great pleasure and instruction of the brethren. The first and second sections of the first lecture were worked by Bro. John Paul Preceptor. Bro. Dobson of the Randolph Lodge was elected a member; the Preceptor, Treasurer, and Secretary were unanimously re-elected to serve for the ensuing year. A vote of thanks to Bro. Latreille for his kindness in attending to rehearse the ceremony of installation, was cordially agreed to. Bro. Latreille made suitable reply, and this brought the proceedings to a close. Bro. Burgess P.M. will be the W.M. for the ensuing week.

Sir Hugh Myddelton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1602.—On Thursday, 4th inst., at the White Horse Tavern, Liverpool-road. Present—Bros. Baker W.M., Garner S.W., Rev. R. N. Sanderson J.W., Hughes Secretary, Jordan J.D., Weeden Preceptor, Welsford I.G., and other brethren. Lodge was honoured by a visit from Bro. Rev. Robert Nicholas Sanderson, Grand Chaplain, who kindly acted as J.W. The work comprised the rehearsal of the ceremony of initiation, Bro. Hughes acting as candidate. The first section of the lecture was worked by Bro. Weeden, assisted by the brethren. Bro. Weeden then took the chair, and after preliminaries, rehearsed the ceremony of raising, Bro. Welsford acting as candidate. Bro. Baker then resumed the chair. Bro. Jordan 1580 was elected a member. Bro. Garner was elected W.M. for the next meeting. A vote of thanks was passed, and ordered to be entered on the minutes to Bro. Baker for his able working in the chair, this being the first time in any Lodge of Instruction. Nothing else offering, the Lodge was closed, and adjourned.

Kingsland Lodge of Instruction, No. 1693.—At the Cock Tavern, Highbury, N., on Monday, the 1st instant. Brothers Cooper W.M., Fluck S.W., Snook J.W., Turner S.D., Hancock J.D., Collingridge Secretary, Stockhall I.G. After preliminaries, the W.M. was obligated and entrusted, and the ceremony of installation rehearsed. After the customary salutations, the W.M. invested his Officers, and the Installing Master gave the addresses in an able manner, for which a vote of thanks was recorded on the minutes, and Lodge closed in due form.

Monday, 8th instant.—Bros. Ellis W.M., Hancock S.W., Fluck J.W., Collingridge Secretary, Turner S.D., Keogh I.G. After preliminaries, the ceremonies of initiation and raising were rehearsed, Bro. Moore acting as candidate for the former, and Bro. Collingridge for the latter. Bro. Hancock was elected W.M. for 15th instant. Bro. Brunton, Euphrates Lodge, was elected a member. Lodge was closed in due form and adjourned.

The Fifth Annual Supper of the Kingsland Lodge of Instruction, No. 1693, will take place on Monday, 22nd instant, at the Cock Tavern, Highbury. Bro. J. Cooper W.M. 1693 in the chair, and Bro. R. P. Forge S.W. 1693 in the vice chair. Bro. J. H. Collingridge 1677 Secretary. Supper on table at 7·30.

The ceremonies of consecration and installation will be rehearsed at the Marquess of Ripon Lodge of Instruction, No. 1489, held at the Queen's Hotel, Victoria Park Road, Hackney, on Monday, the 22nd March, by Brother James Terry P.P.G.S.W. Norths and Hunts, Secretary Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, &c. Lodge will be opened at 7 o'clock.

The W.M. (Bro. Chas F. Pardon), the Wardens, and Brethren of the Gallery Lodge, No. 1928—the only Press Lodge in the world—will give their first evening concert on Saturday, the 20th instant, at the Brixton Hall, Acre Lane, Brixton, in aid of the Lodge Benevolent Fund. The Lord Chancellor (Bro. Baron Herschell), who, when Her Majesty's Solicitor General, visited the Lodge has, at his own request, been supplied with tickets. Bros. W. Ganz P.G. Organist, W. L. Barrett, and Frederick Cundy have promised their assistance. Amongst the other artistes who will give their services are Madame Thayer, Misses Bene Fowell, Alma Evelyn, Lizzie Mulholland, and Alice Farren; Messrs. Percy Palmer, Herbert Jewell, and Henry Horscroft, Messes. F. F. Buffen, Lee Davies, Sidney F. Hill (pianoforte), M. Theodore Werner (violin), Herr Otto Langly (violoncello). Following the Masonic principle of equality, there are to be no reserved seats. It is expected that many public men who are members of the Craft will take this opportunity of extending the right hand of fellowship to the members of the Fourth Estate.

The first meeting of the Stewards for the approaching Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls will take place on Monday next, 15th inst., at 4 o'clock, at Freemasons' Hall, London, when the preliminary arrangements will be considered, and other business transacted.

At the meeting of the Langton Lodge of Instruction, at the White Hart Hotel, Abchurch Lane, Cannon Street, on Thursday, the 18th of March, Bro. Langton will rehearse the installation ceremony, after which the meeting of the Langton Masonic Benevolent Association (which now numbers 115 members) will be held.

We regret to hear that Bro. Charles Godtschalk, who in his day has been one of the most zealous and consistent workers on behalf of the Masonic Institutions, still remains in a serious condition as regards his health Consequent on a further attack of paralysis, which occurred some four months since, our worthy brother is now bedridden, and the greater part of his time is spent in an almost unconscious state. Bro. Charles Godtschalk was always an attentive correspondent, and many of those who had business connections with him, in association with the several Committees of the Province of Devon, will accept this as an explanation for any delay that may have arisen in their communications not being replied to with that promptness that hitherto has characterised our brother. Acting on the advice of his physician, Bro. Godtschalk has removed from London, and we trust the change will produce the beneficial result so much desired.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Coughs, Influenza.—The soothing properties of these medicaments render them well worthy of trial in all diseases of the lungs. In common colds and influenza the Pills taken internally and the Ointment rubbed externally are exceedingly efficacious. When influenza is epidemic this treatment is as best, safest, and surest. Holloway's Pills and Ointment purify the blood, remove all obstructions to its free circulation through the lungs, relieve the overgorged air tubes, and render respiration free without reducing the strength, irritating the nerves, or depressing the spirits. Such are the ready means of saving suffering when afflicted with colds, coughs, bronchitis, and other complaints by which so many are seriously and permanently afflicted in most countries.

CONSECRATION OF THE ABBEY LODGE, No. 2129.

ANOTHER Lodge was added to the roll of Surrey on Tuesday, when the Abbey Lodge, No. 2120, was consecrated at the Masonic Hall, Chertsey. In consequence of a severe attack of bronchitis, the Provincial Grand Master, General John Studholme Brownrigg, C.B., was unable to be present to perform the ceremony of consecration as he had intended, and in his absence the arrangements for the consecration of the Lodge were entrusted to Bro. Chas. Greenwood P.G. Sword Bearer, who it is now definitely settled is to be the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, in lieu of the Rev. C. W. Arnold P.G. Chaplain, whose absence from this country necessitated his resigning that office. Among those present to do honour to the occasion were Bros. James Terry P.M. 228 P.P.S.G.W. Norths and Hunts, Stampall Lambert W.M. 1556, C. Greenwood jun. P.P.G. Secretary, John G. Horsey P.P.G.D.C., P. Murray 36, A. T. Onslow P.M. 1395, H. E. Frances P.P.G.S.D., T. Vincent P.P.G. Sword Bearer, W. W. Morgan P.M. 211, C. T. Tyler P.P.G.S.D., Thomas Wakley jun. 1395 Prov. G.J.D., J. D. Lester P.P.G.S.W. The brethren formed in procession and entered the Lodge, when Brother Greenwood appointed Brother John G. Horsey to the Senior Warden's chair, and Brother Lambert to that of Junior Warden. Bro. H. E. Frances was asked to take the post of D. of C., and Bro. Lester that of Inner Guard. The Lodge was opened in the three degrees, and after the hymn "Hail, Eternal," Bro. Greenwood explained the nature of the duties the brethren were assembled to perform. He then requested Brother James Terry to formally consecrate the Lodge. Bro. Charles Greenwood jun. officiated as Provincial Grand Secretary, and read the petition and warrant of the Lodge. The brethren having signified their approval of the Officers named in the warrant, Bro. Terry gave an eloquent and practical oration on the principles of the Masonic Institution and the responsibilities of its members, after which the ceremony was proceeded with according to the customary forms. Bro. Henry Currie Leigh Bennett was installed as Worshipful Master, and Colonel Lorenzo George Dundas invested as Senior Warden, Brother William Henry Gardiner, the J.W. designate, was unable to be present, his investiture had therefore to be deferred until the first meeting of the Lodge. Brother James R. Boor Past Master and Secretary 370 was elected Treasurer, and duly invested. Bro. the Rev. Walter W. Martin P.M. Chaplain 370 was appointed Secretary, George Fox Spencer S.D., and G. J. Mason Tyler. The other offices will be filled latter on. The addresses were then delivered by Bro. Terry, and the ceremonial work of the day, which throughout was performed in that perfect manner we always look for from Bro. Terry, was brought to a conclusion. The customary votes of thanks were passed to those who had taken part in the day's proceedings, and Bro. Terry, in acknowledging the compliment, expressed the pleasure he felt in taking part in the formation of a new Lodge for the Province of Surrey. The banquet was served in the dining-room of the Masonic Hall. The after proceedings were of the usual agreeable character. As a matter of course the approaching Festival of the Girls' School was referred to, and Bro. Charles Greenwood expressed his fervent desire that the Provincial Grand Master should be strongly supported on that occasion by the members of his Province. Brother Greenwood said that it was at Chertsey, thirty years since, that he first received his official appointment as Provincial Grand Secretary, and it was gratifying to him that it was also at Chertsey that he received his first recognition as Deputy Provincial Grand Master. He felt a difficulty in following so zealous and expert a Mason as the Rev. C. W. Arnold, but hoped he should be able to discharge the duties of his new office for the benefit of the Province, and agreeably to the brethren comprising it. Bro. Terry in responding for the Charities referred to the Festival of his Institution in 1883, when Gen. Brownrigg presided with most satisfactory results. On that occasion two hundred and seventy-two Stewards supported the Provincial Grand Master of Surrey, and the total contributed amounted to upwards of thirteen thousand pounds, of which amount £905 14s was taken up by twenty-two Surrey Stewards. Doubtless Surrey would be as loyal to their chief when he presided next May on behalf of the Girls as they were when he filled the same office for the Old People, and added to this he was now working for a popular Institution, so that it might reasonably be hoped the coming Festival would be a success. Other complimentary toasts were given and responded to in order, and the proceedings were brought to a conclusion in due form by the Tyler.

Amongst the many improvements we have recently had occasion to notice, in various parts of the metropolis, may be mentioned that at the "Salmon and Compasses," Penton street, Islington, which has now been converted into a really handsome and récherché tavern. The compartments have been subdivided, and fitted with screens of stained glass, with elaborate designs, setting out the title of the house. Every arrangement has been made for the comfort and convenience of the numerous patrons of this old establishment. We congratulate Bro. Hooper, who has just completed his extensive alterations, on the tranformation he has effected in the interior of the Salmon and Compasses.

Officer at his post. After the reading and confirmation of the minutes of the last general Convocation the ceremony of constitution and consecration of the new Chapter was proceeded with, at the commencement of which the Grand Superintendent, as Consecrating Officer, delivered the following address:—

EXCELLENT COMPANIONS,—We are met on this present occasion partly to conduct the ordinary business of Provincial Grand Chapter, but we have in addition been specially called together to consecrate the new Chapter of St. George, to be attached to the Albert Edward Lodge, No. 1560, an event of rare occurrence, inasmuch as only three new Chapters have been founded in the province during the present century. Two of these Chapters I had the honour of consecrating; whilst of the earliest of them, which was consecrated by that excellent Mason the late V.W. Bro. John Savage P.G.D., I was the M.E.Z. nominated in the Charter. As to the precise period when Royal Arch Masonry was first practised in Leicester, it seems difficult to decide, as in former days the old Atholl Lodges, like No. 91, formerly existing here, until after the Union in 1813, worked under their Warrants not only the Craft degrees, but also the Mark, Royal Arch, Templar and some other Orders. It was by this body of seceders, the so-called Ancient or Atholl Masons, that the Order of the holy Royal Arch of Jerusalem was first introduced. Dr. Oliver and some other writers (but probably erroneously) thinking it was formed by dividing the old Masters' grade into two parts. The first mention of the degree is in a printed work of 1741; it next appears in the Atholl records in 1752, and upon Lodge minutes at York in 1762. The Grand Royal Arch Chapter of England was constituted 22nd July 1767, under Lord Blaney, then Immediate Past Grand Master of the regular Grand Lodge of England; and to this body the present Supreme Grand Chapter of England owes its origin. By its authority Charters were granted and Provinces constituted. Leicestershire being so constituted as early, at least, as 1793, and having as its Grand Superintendent Thomas Boothby Parkyns, M.P. (afterwards Lord Rancliffe), also P.G. Master for the Province, and who, in 1802, was the Grand First Principal of Grand Chapter. It was not, however, until 20th April 1858 that a Grand Chapter was formed in the Province, under the authority of Earl Howe, Grand Superintendent, over which, as his Lordship's Deputy, I had the honour to preside, as I have since done, either in that capacity or as Grand Superintendent, at every Convocation. Although the Grand Chapter had amongst its leaders many noble and some Royal members of the Grand Lodge of England, it was never recognised by the Grand Lodge until the Union in 1813; and in like manner the Grand Chapter of Scotland is not recognised by the Grand Lodge of that country down to the present day. By this Grand Chapter was granted, under the number 102, the first Charter for a Royal Arch Chapter in this Province—that of the Chapter of Fortitude, attached to St. John's Lodge, which thus came into existence as early as 1796, being six years after St. John's Lodge was founded. The early minute book of this Chapter is unfortunately lost, but a number of particulars derived from old papers among the records of St. John's Lodge are printed in my little "History of Freemasonry in Leicestershire." We find that John Abbey was exalted in 1796—that "the expenses of a Royal Arch Chapter, held 6th April 1802, were defrayed out of the Craft Fund"—and that after the Union of 1813, under date 4th of December 1817, the designation was (for a time) changed to "United Chapters 102 and 114, George Inn;" and as the old Atholl Lodge Lodge No. 171 had ceased to make returns, its members, no doubt in like manner, became merged in St. John's Lodge. The original Warrant of the Chapter, like that of the Lodge, having been lost or destroyed some years previously, a Warrant of Confirmation was obtained from the Grand Chapter, dated 9th May 1821; and about the same time the furniture, &c. of the Chapter was purchased by subscription, headed by Sir F. G. Fowke, Bart., who also presented the banners of the Principals, still in use. During half a century this was the only Chapter in the Province, when, in 1847, St. Augustine's Chapter was founded, in connection with the then recently established John of Gaunt Lodge, No. 766 (now 523), and so continued to the year 1856. At that time the brethren at Ashby being desirous of having a Chapter attached to their Lodge, whilst both the local Chapters were in anything but flourishing condition, the members being (in comparison with those of the two Lodges) few in number, it was decided for them to unite in working the old Chapter of Fortitude, whilst the Charter of St. Augustine's Chapter was annexed to the Lodge at Ashby de la Zouch. On 28th May 1869, the De Mowbray Chapter at Melton was consecrated, our worthy Companion Langley, to whom Masonry there and elsewhere in the Province owes much, being the first M.E.Z. And, finally, on the 14th January 1873, I had the pleasure, during the time I held the high office of P.G.M., as well as that I still retain of Grand Superintendent, of consecrating the Charnwood Chapter, No. 1007, Loughbourgh. From that day to the present, whilst several new Lodges have sprung into existence in our midst, all of which are in a highly flourishing condition, and whilst the dear old Chapter of Fortitude, the mother Chapter of most of us, has, I believe, closely approaching one hundred members, it is self evident that there is "ample room and verge enough" for the friendly and beneficial operations of at least one additional Royal Arch Chapter in Leicester. Under these circumstances, and with a view of giving a new impetus to Royal Arch Masonry amongst us, a Charter has been obtained for the new Chapter of St. George, No. 1560, which we are about to constitute in ancient form, and, mystically, to construct as a spiritual temple to the honour and glory of the Great I Am—and may the result prove that we may apply to it the words of the Masonic poet:—

"When orient Wisdom beam'd serene,
And pillar'd strength arose;
When Beauty tinged the glowing scene,
And Faith her mansion chose;
Exulting bands the fabric view'd;
Mysterious powers ador'd,
And high the triple union stood,
That gave the Mystic Word."

The Provincial Grand Scribe E. having stated the wishes of the Companions of the new Chapter, and having read the Petition and Warrant, and the other usual formalities being observed, the Consecrating Officer called upon E. Companion the Rev. C. Henton Wood Prov. Grand Reg. to deliver the Oration. Comp. Wood, after giving some interesting particulars as to the history of the several Royal Arch Chapters in this Province, and remarking upon the apparent want of interest shown in Royal Arch Masonry, proceeded as follows:—

"Why then is the Supreme Order of the Royal Arch in such a languishing condition, when the Mark Degree and other Masonic systems now worked in our midst are continually gaining accessions of strength, and, so far as one is able to judge, prospering exceedingly? A chief cause, no doubt, is novelty, to many minds the multifarious clothing, jewels and paraphernalia of these various Orders have a great attraction, and whereas a principal charm of Masonry is the consciousness of secret knowledge, which gives a sense of superiority over those who have it not, this feeling is intensified by the multiplicity of the degrees taken; and the young Mason is tempted to wander off the beaten track, in search of abstruse and complicated instruction, before he has acquired the genuine secrets of a M.M.; and the allurements of office lead him to seek employment outside his Lodge, sometimes before he has qualified himself for promotion within it. Another cause is the want of more instruction during a brother's novitiate. Are not degrees conferred in too quick succession? Is not the feeling growing that candidates have a sort of claim and right to the succeeding degrees at the earliest possible date allowed by the Constitutions? and do not many of our rising brethren, in consequence, claim office, as a right, whether qualified or not? If a candidate is told, within three months of his initiation, that having taken the third degree he has arrived at the summit of his profession, is he not apt to feel disappointment, and can we wonder that he should seek after novelty and try to quench his rising thirst for knowledge at every fresh fountain to which he can gain access, rather than rest content under the vine of his own Lodge and drink of his own cistern? A Craftsman may lawfully travel, as his ancient brethren did, from East to extremest West to seek out other Masters and learn new modes of work; but he should at least know how to indent on the Rough and try the Smooth before he sets out. So long as minute instruction in the three degrees is little attended to—so long as slovenly signs and tokens are tolerated, and the work of a Lodge restricted, by common consent, to the ceremonial conferring of Degrees, on the principle of "the more the merrier"—quality in candidates being held secondary to quantity—the Royal Arch being never so much as hinted at, it is to be feared that the Supreme Order will not command that place in the estimation of the brethren at large which its importance demands. Time is devoted to other Degrees which would perhaps be better spent in striving to attain to the 'climax of Freemasonry,' for the ritual is extensive and complicated, and can hardly be mastered on the few occasions set apart for the exercise of it. We have therefore to rely too much on other means of obtaining the requisite knowledge, the correctness of which is doubtful, and the Companion who does his best in that direction too often fails to satisfy either himself or his predecessor in office. But happily there are landmarks and limits, within which the aspirant cannot widely err. In ritual we are apt to attach too much importance to our own views of verbal accuracy, whereas the doctrine of Limits, which runs like a thread throughout the Craft degrees, appears to me as applicable to ritual as to morals. In the first place we have brought to our notice the two Grand Parallels between which, so long as a brother confines himself and marches steadily onward with the eye of Faith fixed on that Star of Hope which illuminates the immense vista, he cannot err. The point within the circle conveys the same idea. The landmarks bound his horizon; and whereas the limit of every circle is a rectangle contained by the radius, and half the circumference, the Mason standing in the centre can still discern the two great Parallels of the law of God and the Rules of the Craft. For if a material circle be divided into a large number of sectors, and these be arranged side by side, alternately point to base, it will be seen that they will be found to approximate to the rectangle above mentioned, and here I see the origin of the indented or tesselated border and the pattern of a Companions' badge. And the idea of two Grand Parallels is dominant in the Royal Arch itself. The "limit" of the curve called Catenary, is two parallel straight lines: for the two parts of a flexible cord suspended by its two ends, are (if very long in proportion to the distance between them) practically parallel to one another. In the Royal Arch we have impressed on our minds the strength and durability of a vault or dome constructed on the principle of the true Catenarian Arch, standing complete in itself without buttress or band of any kind. Such an Arch stands self supported only when the curve from which it takes its name can be accurately traced between the limits of the outer and inner edge of its voussoirs. This again reminds me of the path of a stedfast Mason amid the landmarks of his Order, containing his words and very thoughts within the compass of propriety, and going on his humble way rejoicing in the light which God has shed around him. I have endeavoured to suggest the possible causes which prevent the Brethren at large from entering the Supreme Order and hinder them from pursuing it stedfastly. If I am right, these causes will not be removed by merely increasing the number of Chapters, but the lack of a centre of Instruction and a standard of comparison in our Province will be supplied to-day. The St. George's Chapter commences its career with every advantage; it possesses in its Principals, the Chiefs of the Order in this Province, three illustrious Companions, second to none in Masonic skill and extended experience. They will be, I understand, supported by a body of Companions selected for their approved conduct and zeal, and who will fulfil the expectations of the Founders by setting up for imitation such a standard of ritual and finished working as will instruct the minds and gladden the eyes of all who are privileged to behold it. May the G.A.O.T.U. prosper them one and all. May He direct and approve their work on earth, and finally exalt them in the Heavens.

The ceremony of constitution and consecration was then regularly proceeded with, according to the printed programme, and on its completion the three Principals designate, viz., M.E. Comp. W. Kelly G. Supt., George Toller Prov. G.H., and S. S. Partridge Prov. G.S.E., who had all previously filled the several chairs of a Royal Arch Chapter, were duly inducted into the chairs of first, second, and third Principals of St. George's Chapter, No. 1560. The other Officers of the Chapter were appointed and invested. A vote of thanks was unanimously passed to Comp. the Rev. C. Henton Wood, for the admirable Oration delivered by him, and he and Comp. M. J. Walker were elected honorary members of the Chapter. St. George's Chapter was then closed, and the business of Provincial Grand Chapter resumed. The Provincial Grand Treasurer's accounts having been received and passed, and some notices of motion disposed of, the Grand Superintendent appointed and invested his Provincial Grand Officers, as follow:

A resolution was passed that the Grand Superintendent's address and the oration of Comp. the Rev. C. Henton Wood should be printed for distribution. Several apologies for absence having been read, the Provincial Grand Chapter was closed in due form. The musical arrangements of the consecration ceremony were most effectively carried out, under the able direction of Comp. T. A. Wykes P.P.G.O. In conclusion it should be added that the interest and gratification of the Companions were materially enhanced by the presence of their much-esteemed Chief, the veteran Comp. Kelly, who although far from having completely recovered from his long and serious indisposition, braved the effects of the present Arctic weather, and conducted the proceedings of the day with his usual marked ability and impressiveness.

GRAND HISTORIC MASONIC COLLECTION.

A GRAND historic collection of Masonic books, medals, manuscripts, engravings, prints, old aprons, &c., such as we venture to say has never been brought together before, has been on exhibition, to the members of the Craft, at the Masonic Hall, Kidderminster, during the past week. The exhibits, which are of surpassing interest, have been got together after an infinite amount of patient research by Bro. G. Taylor, of this town. A series of Masonic meetings have taken place at the Masonic Hall this week. A descriptive lecture on the contents of the collection referred to above was to have been given on Monday evening by Bro. W. J. Hughan, of Torquay, Past Grand Deacon of England, the Masonic Historian. Unfortunately, owing to the death of a member of his family on Friday last, Bro. Hughan was prevented from fulfilling his engagement, and at the last moment, Bro. Taylor took upon himself to fill Bro. Hughan's place. After alluding to the sad event that prevented Bro. Hughan's attendance, and to the regret and disappointment that all the brethren must feel at his absence and the cause of it, Bro. Taylor said :—

It is a rather difficult task to know where to commence, and where to leave off, in a brief description of such a Collection as this; so large a number of its items affording material for separate lectures in themselves. It is but natural that a society so ancient as Freemasonry, which has undergone the changes and vicissitudes of ages, and yet to-day presents a firmer, powerful, and more prosperous front than ever, should afford a very wide field for study. Setting aside its strictly historical and archæological features, the whole system of its symbolism is so intimately interwoven with the thoughts and aspirations of the mind and soul as to make it boundless in its ramifications and applications.

It is to be regretted that more is not done in our Lodges to create a taste, or administer to the desire, for something of a more directly intellectual character than even the beauties of our ritual afford. Much may be done by Masters of Lodges, to invite attendance, and sustain interest by inviting essays on scientific subjects, as well as on those that Ancient and Modern Masonry presents, thus following more intimately the operative nature of the work in our ancient Lodges. It is most remarkable how few brethren there are who comprehend the extent of Masonic Literature and its attendant objects. It would surprise many to know that Kloss, whose work on Masonic Bibliography, published at Frankfort in 1844, and which I lay before you, enumerates about 6000 volumes; it will ever remain a standard work. You will imagine how greatly this number would be increased if a complete list could be made, and that to date.

Bro. Taylor went on to describe the present as an effort to incite in the district this deeper study of all allied with the past and present of the Craft.

For some time before the Worcester Masonic Exhibition in August 1884, I had been paving the way, and that notable gathering gave the starting point for acquiring the bulk of what you see around. How much I have to thank the never ceasing kindness, the sacrificing efforts, and the great abilities of our Bro. Hughan (to whose regretable absence I have before alluded), I can never tell you, and you will never divine. So scarce are Masonic books and objects of worth, that instant action alone can secure when anything of note offers.

The knowledge of this tells me how wonderfully successful I have been in acquiring what is here. It has been a business of much labour, mixed with a good deal of pleasure.

Take for instance these two manuscripts.

We know the intense dislike Masons of the present day have to showing for perusal or publication anything in the shape of writing. "How much more then were they indisposed to retain any evidences in bygone days? In 1717 (according to Kenning's Cyclopædia) many old manuscripts were collected by request of Grand Master Payne, and in 1720 some foolish brethren are said, by Anderson, to have burnt several important MSS., especially one by Nicholas Stone."

These then are now of priceless value, being the actual Rolls that were read to initiates on their reception, long before our present Rituals were shaped. But upon this subject Bro. Hughan's paper, which I shall read to-morrow, has more to say.

Varying in detail, there is one in the British Museum, one in the Grand Lodge of England, one in the York Lodge, and one or two others, but no other Collection than this in the world possesses two.

This, the "Inigo Jones MSS.," dated 1607, has a frontispiece of Masons at work, drawn by that celebrated architect, who, Anderson states in his Constitutions of 1738, was Grand Master of the Craft in 1607. Bro. Gould, in his new History of Freemasonry, gives it a full description and many references, classing it amongst the most valuable of existing versions of our manuscript Constitutions.

This, the Wood MSS., takes its name from a Mr. Wood, from whom it was obtained, but who is unable to furnish any particulars of its history, beyond that the MS. had been in his possession for about 20 years. It is written on parchment, with partially illuminated letters here and there. It is entitled the "Constitution of Masonrye," newlye translated by J. Whitestones for John Sargensonne, 1610.

As it bears intimately on the subject under mention I may here say that Dr. Plot's History of Staffordshire, published in 1686, is in this library. It has a significant reference to persons of quality joining the Order, and mentions a scroll or parchment volume in use among the members. This attack on Freemasonry, by Dr. Plot, so early as 1686, is much referred to by Masonic writers.

These MSS. lead me to draw your attention to another prominent feature of the Collection, viz., the complete set of the Constitutions, the charges which are embodied in those of 1723 to 1784 being undoubtedly derived from these old MSS. or similar copies, now lost. Here we have the editions of 1723, 1738, 1756, 1767, the Appendix of 1776 (1769, which was unrecognised), 1784, 1815, 1819, with corrections, 1827, 1841, 1847, 1853, 1858, 1861, 1863, 1865, 1866, 1867, 1871, 1873, and lastly 1884. I am not aware how many complete sets, replete with frontispieces, &c., exist, but they must be very few indeed. As an incident in its collection, I may mention that the edition of 1723 I picked up at an old book store for 9s. I saw one priced the other day at fifteen guineas, and it is cheap at that.

Beyond these are the Constitutions of the Seceding Grand Lodge of England, calling themselves the "Ancients," or "Atholl Masons." These, published by aid of their Secretary, Laurence Dermott, and by Thomas Harper, is a series of Constitutions known by the name of Ahiman Rezon. This title is derived from three Hebrew words—Ahim, brothers—Mannh, to select—Ratzan, the will,—hence the combination reads "the will of selected brethren." Fortunately I possess the whole of these except 1787, which I have hitherto failed to obtain.

These two sets of Constitutions lead me to touch upon one subject mentioned for to-night's lecture had Bro. Hughan been present, viz., the "Grand Lodges of England."

There have been four separate Grand Lodges in England, the premier being (1) the Grand Lodge of England, formed in 1717 by the "Time Immemorial" London Lodges, consisting of four at least, but probably more.

(2) The so-called Grand Lodge of all England, started in 1725, by the old Lodge working there for many years before, of which minutes exist, dating before the origin of Grand Lodges.

(3) "The Grand Lodge of England South of the River Trent," constituted at London by the York body in 1779, but collapsed in 1787, owing to the secessionists of the Lodge of Antiquity being received back again into that body.

(4) "The Grand Lodge of England according to the Old Institutions," formed in 1751, and known as the "Ancients."

The York Grand Lodge and its offshoot died out, but the first and last mentioned, called Moderns and Ancients, both of London, continued as rivals until 1813, when they united and formed the present Grand Lodge of England.

A set of Royal Arch Regulations lacks two to make it complete, and the Mark Constitutions are, I believe, complete.

It has been my aim to make up sets of everything so far as I possibly could. Take Grand Lodge Reports, which, as you know, are issued quarterly. How many Lodges, think you, retain and treasure up these Proceedings of all that passes in Grand Lodge? I fear I am correct in saying hardly any Lodges in England. Those here date back to 1777; there are several missing between then and the Union in 1813. Since then to the present date I have all except December 1871, which I cannot obtain, proving how careless Lodges are in preserving what is regularly sent to each every three months.

I now turn to another important and similar section, viz., Lists of Lodges. Much more care and talent were exercised by our ancestors in publishing these guides to the name, location, date of meeting, and date of constitution than now, when we print in plain pocket-book style, and badly have we repaid our brethren for their ingenuity, for there is not a complete set in the Grand Lodge of England or elsewhere in the world. These lists were first issued in 1723. Here is an example of 1763 all on engraved plates, against each Lodge being a fac-simile of the sign of the hotel or inn where the Lodge met. These continued in this form until 1778. I have here 1763, 1766, 1770, 1775, and 1778; no private individual or library, save the Grand Lodge of England and Bro. Carson, of Cincinnati, Ohio, having more than one. After 1778 they assumed this printed calendar form, in which, with few exceptions, you have before you these from 1781 to 1814, when it was altered to this pocket-book style, with which you are familiar, and of which I lack a considerable number between 1815 and 1850.

Another set worthy of mention is nine vols. "Pocket Companions," dating from 1735 to 1764, the first-mentioned being of extreme rarity, the list of Lodges it contains giving a Lodge at Philadelphia, No. 79, which no other list mentions.

Of the famous "Illustrations of Masonry," by Wm. Preston, continued by Oliver, there is every one here except the first of 1772.

The earliest magazine on Masonry was published in 1793. I have persevered to make up a complete set of every Masonic periodical—quarterly, monthly, or weekly—which has appeared to the present date. In this I have succeeded, except the Freemasons' Magazine for 1798, the Freemason's Magazine for 1863, and from July to December 1865.

Another very rare set, here complete, is "Cole's Constitutions," from 1728, engraved on copper plates.

Also, the whole of the works of Bro. W. J. Hughan, all editions of which were limited in number, and have become most difficult to procure.

I believe all the Histories of Freemasonry are here, and another special feature I have made is the collection of "Lodge Histories." These are here about fifty examples of zeal and research, which I trust all Lodges will follow. Works on the medals of the Fraternity are represented by Zacharias' Numismatica, Merzdorf's, Hedlinger's, and Marvin's publications.

A considerable number of French and German Masonic works on all subjects will be found in the Collection, but nothing foreign except that which is rare or of early dates.

Under the head of Rituals will be found a goodly number of old and rare caricatures and so-called exposures of Masonry, by Prichard, Briscoe, Wilson, and several anonymous writers, which I cannot refer to in this brief sketch, or to other curious old works, such as "Multa Paucis" of 1769, "Long Livers" of 1722, "Blue Blanket" of 1722, and others. The whole are catalogued and divided into 17 sections, viz.:

Almanacks, Calendars, and Lists of Lodges.
Bibliography.
Biographies.
Constitutions, Bye-laws, and Jurisprudence.
Cyclopædias.
Histories of Freemasonry, and Proceedings of Grand Lodges.
Lodge Histories.
Works on the Higher Degrees.
Magazines, Journals, and Periodicals.
Works on Medals, Numismatics, &c.
Polemic Works, for, about, or against Freemasonry.
Persecutions of Freemasonry.
Rituals, Manuals, and Handbooks.
Sermons, Addresses, and Orations.
Song Books and Ode Books.
Tales, Sketches, &c.
Various.

Ten volumes of the latter contain all the pamphlets, scraps, and miscellaneous matter of a hundred different Masonic subjects.

The library portion, I believe, contains about 600 volumes.

The china and pottery, with the quaint diversity of emblems they bear, I need not allude to.

The framed aprons you see on the walls are quaint specimens of a period when brethren were at liberty to wear any design they chose, and were not confined to a regulation pattern.

Three of the engravings are particularly worthy of mention!—The "Mock Procession" is an original engraving, the copies of 1771 lacking the quaint particulars of the artist's lodgings this bears. Clavel's "Histoire de la Pittoresque" you will find in the library gives a reduced copy, and states that only one original existed.

You will see by reference to the old Constitutions that it was the custom in the early times of Grand Lodge for the brethren to form in procession, and escort the Grand Master elect from his residence to the Freemasons' Hall. This mock procession was organised in 1741 to throw ridicule on the fraternity, and it led soon after to a discontinuance of Masonic processions in London.

The print of Count Cagliostro's exposure in the Lodge of Antiquity is also I believe rare. The particulars of the incident are related on the print. "Picart's" plate shows Pine's List of Lodges of 1734, copied in the arrangement you see.

Lambert de Lintot's allegorical engravings are also scarce. A large number of scarce and interesting prints and portraits will be found in the portfolios lying on the table, with the boxes containing a quantity of old and recent lodge summonses, certificates, &c.

Masonic seals and old Lodge seals have had attention in the impressions of wax you see on the walls, and I hope the collection of such may grow.

Before touching upon the question of medals, I must take this opportunity of referring to a generous gift by a well-known Masonic student and Lodge historian in Yorkshire, Bro. J. Ramsden Riley, of Bradford, to whom we are indebted for that framed sheet of old certificates; the rare engraved list of 1776; his history of the Airedale Lodge; the very scarce first edition of Browne's Master Key of 1798; History of the Minden Lodge, and the Musical Entertainer of 1737, a valuable work engraved by George Bickham jun., and dedicated to the Marquis of Carnarvon when Grand Master.

It will take me a far longer time than I have to attempt any exhaustive description of the four hundred Masonic medals you see. I have endeavoured, by aid of the cards set against each tray, to take note of special items.

You will be able to find the history and origin and description of all up to No. 150 in the catalogue in the centre of the room, but time has failed me to catalogue beyond there at present. A goodly number were unknown to writers on Masonic medals, but these you will be able to trace in Marvin's work on Masonic medals, which lies in the same place. Marvin's book was published in Boston in 1880, and has now become the standard work on Masonic medals. He there catalogues about 700 medals, about 60 of which he illustrates. Few persons are aware of this large number of Masonic medals existing outside the wide field of Lodge jewels and personal decorations.

Marvin says the largest cabinet then (1880) was that of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Mecklenberg at Rostock, which contained 324 specimens, the next in importance being the cabinets of the Lodges of Apollo and Minerva at Leipsic.

In America the Lodge Pythagoras, of Brooklyn, had a collection of about 200 specimens. In England there are no large collections save this, except one made by Bro. G. L. Stackles, of Hull.

It will be observed that most of them are of foreign origin, where the striking of medals by the Fraternity has been especially popular during the last 150 years. They have been struck chiefly in honour of some distinguished member of the Fraternity, or of some event or anniversary in connection with the Lodges and their members. By the aid of agents in the principal cities of the Continent and advertising I have been fortunate in obtaining many rare and unique specimens.

The fifteen silver medals, Nos. 46 to 60, were obtained under peculiar circumstances. My efforts to obtain the Swedish medals resulted in acquiring two only. An acquaintance with the chief engraver at the Royal Mint, Stockholm, enabled me to advance my wishes. She (Madame Lea Ahlborn) is the daughter of Lungren, the famous Swedish engraver, and doubtless the only lady engraver of dies of any note ever known. She kindly proffered to wait upon the King of Sweden, and state my object, with the view of obtaining his Majesty's assent to her using the old and new dies lying in the Royal mint, for the purpose of supplying me with impressions.

King Oscar graciously complied, and the result you have before you.

Many of the earliest medals known are in this collection. The whole are classed as follows:

England 117, Germany 52, France 106, Holland 20, Belgium 20, Sweden 17, Denmark 1, Moldavia 1, Italy 4, America 52.

Bro. Taylor then went on to describe all the most rare of the medals exhibited, something like 400 in number, their history and origin, but it would be impossible to do justice to this interesting account without more space than we have at command, and the difficulty of description without the medals themselves. We can only congratulate all those who had the privilege of listening to this interesting and instructive lecture, and also the Masons of the Province of Worcestershire, on the opportunity they have of acquiring so splendid and unique a collection at so small a cost. Bro. Taylor has collected it for a specific purpose, and desires to place it at the disposal of the Province at prime cost. It would indeed be a thousand pities to see such a collection, made at the expense of so much care and labour and private influence, again dispersed.

A cordial vote of thanks to Bro. Taylor, closed Monday's proceedings.

On Tuesday night, Bro. Hughan had supplied Bro. Taylor with a lecture in MSS., the subject of which was "Connecting Links between Ancient and Modern Masonry." The lecture was read before a most appreciative audience, several of whom expressed the pleasure and instruction they had derived from such a graphic and lucid explanation of the subject.

A hearty vote of thanks was passed to Bro. Hughan for his kindness in promising to visit Kidderminster, and under so severe a family affliction providing for his enforced absence so well. It was coupled with an expression of sincere sympathy in the loss he had sustained.

A vote of thanks was again accorded to Bro. Taylor, who promised, at the request of the brethren, to allow the collection to remain on view for the remainder of the week.

THE BALL.

A BALL, under the patronage of Sir Edmund Lechmere, Bart., M.P.,[1] and members of the Province of Worcester, and under the auspices of "Hope and Charity" and "Lechmere" Lodges, took place in the Town Hall, Kidderminster, on Wednesday, 3rd inst. The walls of the room were draped around with red baize to the windows, and the gallery was partitioned off and the space underneath formed into two drawing rooms. The orchestra was decorated with shrubs and flowers. The following is a list of those present:—Bro. A. F. Godson Deputy-Prov. Grand Master; the Mayor and Mayoress of Durham and party, the Mayor and Mayoress of Bridgnorth and party, the Mayor of Kidderminster and party, Bro. G. W. Taylor P.G.S., Bro. and Miss Vale and Miss Lane, Dr. Waddell, Brother W. B. Williamson, Mr. A. H. Wilson, Brother and Mrs. Westcott, Dr. Webster. Mr. Gilmer's famous band was present, and dancing commenced at half-past eight and was kept up with spirit until half-past two. Refreshments were provided at a buffet, presided over by Mrs. Lane, in the Corn Exchange. At the supper, the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Godson, gave the Queen and the Craft. After supper by request of D.P.G.M., Bro. Harvey Preen, W.M. of the Hope and Charity Lodge, 377, Kidderminster, gave the ancient Tyler's toast—"To all poor and distressed Masons, wherever dispersed o'er land and sea, a speedy return to their native country, if e'er they desire and deserve it." We had nearly forgotten to mention that Bro. Awdry, as Master of Ceremonies, discharged the duties that devolved upon him with all that tact and ability which distinguishes everything he undertakes.—Kidderminster Sun.

"Dr. G. H. JONES, F.R.S.L., the well-known Surgeon-Dentist of 57 Great Russell Street, London, has just re-issued his popular treatise on the teeth, which should be read by every one wishing to have a good and sound set of teeth; 'Painless and Perfect Dentistry' is its title, which will be found fully justified on perusal of its pages, as many hints for the guidance of those seeking a really practical and scientific dental surgeon will be found. The care and treatment of the teeth, with much useful information concerning the mouth and its molars, is contained therein, and we cordially commend this brochure of Dr. G. H. Jones, to the attention of our readers, which will be found a true guide, philosopher, and friend. The concluding chapters of the book are devoted to a description of the Author's method of dental treatment, which has obtained so high a reputation, and which seems to realise the desideratum of 'holding the mirror up to nature.'"—The Brighton Standard, December 1885.

THE APPROACHING ELECTION OF THE GIRLS' SCHOOL.

THE usual half-yearly election of pupils to this Institution will take place on Saturday, the 10th April, on which occasion twenty-three vacancies will be filled from a list of thirty-six approved candidates. Twenty-one of these candidates now appear for the first time, and of the remainder fourteen have made one previous application, while the other, Lilian Frances Wells, has taken part in each of the last two elections. Four of the candidates now make their last appeal, the limit in regard to age rendering them ineligible if they are not successful at the next contest. Of these, No. 2, Mathilde Pratt, brings forward 211 votes from October last. She is one of five children dependent on their mother, who was left a widow in March 1884. The father was a member of St. Luke's Lodge, No. 225, Suffolk, and Star in the East Lodge, No. 650, Essex, so that his family have good fields from which to look for help in their hour of need. We trust that sufficient support may be secured from these two Provinces to render the case secure, ere it be too late. No. 5, Ethel Kirkman, an only child dependent on her widowed mother, secured 263 votes in October, a number which, we need hardly mention, will have to be very considerably increased next month if the child is to become a pupil at the Institution. Her father was a member of Union Lodge, No. 38, Sussex, and died in 1882, after a Masonic membership of seven and a half years. Both the other last applications are new to the present list, and are thereon numbered 25 and 26 respectively. No. 25, Amy Dalton Cutbush, is the daughter of a brother who was well known in connection with the Masonic institutions, was at all times a warm advocate on their behalf, and one who supported them to the best of his ability. He died in August of last year, and there are now five members of his family dependent upon his widow. We hope that the application now being made on behalf of his daughter Amy may result in her election to the Girls' School on the 10th. No. 26, Edith Mary Hood, and the members of her family appear to be very similarly circumstanced, for in her case there are also five children dependent on a widowed mother. Her father was a member of the Commercial Lodge, No. 1391, Leicestershire, and remained a subscriber of his Lodge until the time of his decease, which occurred in July last. The case is the only one from the Masonic province of Leicestershire and Rutland, and will, we hope, receive the support of the brethren of that district to such an extent as may be necessary to secure the child's election on this her first and last application.

Neither parent living is recorded in four cases; while in three others the children, and the families of which they are members, are now dependent on step-mothers. Of the former, No. 15, Ettie Louise Chapman, appears to stand a very good chance of being admitted at the next election, for 1072 votes were polled on her behalf in October, in addition to which she comes from a Province—Devonshire—which seldom fails with any case its representatives regularly adopt, and we presume this case has been adopted, or it would not have been so well supported at the election last October; she is an only dependent child, daughter of an old member of the Brunswick Lodge, No. 159. No. 14, Flora Richardson, one of four parentless children, brings forward 413 votes, but we trust that number will be very materially increased ere the poll closes next month. Her father was a P.M. and a Past Provincial Grand Officer of Essex, and the case of his child will, we are convinced, receive such support as the brethren of that district can give. The Essex brethren are proverbial for the sincere way in which they carry out their Masonic obligations, especially in the matter of affording relief whenever it lies in their power to do so. No. 27, Lilian Maud Arrowsmith, is one of four now dependent on their relations; she has a brother in the Boys' School, but in the case of parentless children this should hardly be considered as lessening the claims of a sister for the benefits of the Girls' Institution, especially when, as in this case, there are still so many to be provided for. Her father was S.W. of the Westbourne Lodge, No. 733, at the time of his death (in June 1882), and in that capacity doubtless made many friends, who, it is to be hoped, will combine and give to his daughter similar benefits to those which have been secured for his son. No 28, Martha Paulina C. Steng, is one of three dependent children. Her father was a member of the Old England Lodge, No. 1790 (London), until the time of his death in October last, and had risen to the office of Inner Guard therein. We hope the members of his Lodge and their friends may be able to command sufficient votes to secure this parentless child's early election. No. 3, Eleanor Phillips, one of five children dependent on a step-mother, comes forward for the second time, but has not yet had any votes polled on her behalf. Her father was a member of St. George's Lodge, 431, Northumberland. Perhaps the friends of the candidate were husbanding their strength last time, so as to make an especially good show at this el ction. No. 7, Mary Ann Dickinson, one of three children dependent on their step-mother, fared much better in October, for 1255 votes were then polled on her behalf. The father was a member of the Royal Standard Lodge, No. 1298, up to the time of his decease, which occurred in March 1884. No. 9, Edith May Walmsley, made a good—though not equally good—fight at the last election, her total of votes recorded on that occasion being 783. Doubtless this number will have to be repeated to give the candidate even a hope of being secure; but from such Lodges as the Whittington, No. 862, and the Stuart, No. 1632, of which the father was P.M. and Treasurer, this should present no very serious difficulty.

Twenty-one of the remaining candidates have each lost their father, and the other four have both parents living. No. 36, Violet Annie W. Bell, and eight other children are dependent on the widow of a brother initiated in the Walden Lodge, No. 1280, who became a joining member of the Southampton Lodge, No. 394, in which latter he rose to the dignity of W.M elect. The case is new to the present list, and, so far as we are able to judge, appears one of the most deserving on it. No. 1, Lilian Frances Wells, is one of seven fatherless children, and comes forward with a total of 1,187 votes as the result of the two elections in which she has taken a part. Her father was an initiate of the Prosperity Lodge, No. 65, London. No. 21, Eleanor Julia Sutton, and No. 34, Louise Ethel Sanders, are also members of families in which there are seven children dependent on a widowed mother. They are both new applications, the former from Hants and the Isle of Wight, and the latter from London. Bro. Sutton was initiated in the Harmony Lodge, No. 309, and Bro. Sanders in the Islington Lodge, No. 1471, of which he was a Past Master. No. 4, Isabel Davies Knight, one of six fatherless children, secured 177 votes last October. Her father was a member of the Yarborough Lodge, No. 551 (Hampshire and the Isle of Wight), and filled the office of Senior Deacon therein. No. 8, Gertrude Emma Wardroper, is one of five children dependent on a widowed mother, and has already had 103 votes polled on her behalf. Her father was an initiate and a Past Master of the Wandsworth Lodge, No. 1044. No. 10, Isabelle May Pinder is, as we said when writing of the case in September last, particularly deserving, and we still feel that some special action might have been taken in her case to allow of her admission without election. The facts of the case are, that a sister of the present applicant was duly put forward as a candidate, and was ultimately elected, but in the interval between election and admission to the Institution she died. We think the present candidate might be accepted by the subscribers in her place. There are four members of the family dependent on the widowed mother, and, so far, three votes have been recorded on behalf of the present applicant. Her father was a member of the Excelsior Lodge, No. 1042, West Yorkshire, and filled the office of S.W. therein. No. 16, Constance Murfin; No. 17, Florence Bulmer; and No. 24, Lillian Gertrude S. Rawlings, three new cases, are each members of families in which there are four dependent children. The father of Murfin was initiated in the Westbourne Lodge, No. 733, London; of Bulmer, in the Three Grand Principles Lodge No. 208, West Yorkshire; and of Rawlings, in the St. Luke's Lodge, No. 144, London, of which he was Worshipful Master. There are eight candidates where the number of children dependent on the mother is three, and of these Nos. 11, 12 and 13 have each made one previous application. No. 11, Eva Marian Lillywhite, daughter of an Officer of Hants and Isle of Wight, brings forward 107 votes; No. 12, Lilian Woods, daughter of a brother of the Adams Lodge, No. 158, Kent, has 36; and No. 13, Emily Mary Fulford, daughter of a brother initiated in the Lodge of Israel, No. 205, London, has 75. Lillywhite (No. 11) has a brother in the Boys' School. The other candidates in this section are first application cases, and are as follow:—No. 22, Mary Hayten Glass (father initiated in Zetland Lodge, No. 525, Hong Kong); No. 30, Mary Rhydero Woodman (St. Peter's Lodge, No. 476, South Wales, West Division); No. 31, Fanny Alice Smith (All Souls Lodge, No. 170, Dorsetshire); No. 33, Maggie Jane Addenbrooke (Stability Lodge, No. 564, Worcestershire); and No. 35, Louisa Delina Hardey (Prince of Wales's Lodge, No. 1003, Jersey). The last named candidate has a brother in the Boys' School. No. 19, Margaret Winifred Turner, and No. 23, Julia Elizabeth Clark, are each members of families where two children are dependent. The father of the former was initiated in the City of London Lodge, No. 901, and of the latter in the Stability Lodge, No. 217, both of London. No. 22, Aline Mary Norman, is an only child dependent on her mother; her father was initiated in the Lennox Lodge, No. 123, North and East Yorkshire, and afterwards joined the Tees Lodge, No. 509, Durham, where he rose to the dignity of Worshipful Master.

Both parents are living in each of the remaining cases. No. 6, Grace Ellen M. Barnard, has 712 votes to her credit; she and three other children are dependent, and no doubt there is good reason why they should be helped, but the subscribers can gather no information on this point from the ballot paper. No. 18, Edith Lilian Proudfoot, is one of three dependent children; No. 20, Alice Flora Cook, one of four, of whom two only are partially provided for; and No. 32, Winifred Cleveland Hyde, one of four dependent. In each of these cases both parents are living, but we are without any details as to their position.

Taking the list of candidates and the number of vacancies that are available, we can but congratulate the Craft on the position of the Institution, and the candidates on the chances of success they each enjoy. Twenty-three to be elected from a list of thirty-six candidates is a state of affairs which will compare most favourably with many of the elections of the past, when the figures were much more out of proportion. The Institution is deserving of the heartiest support, and while it can offer such benefits to those who are in distress as will be tendered on the 10th of next month, there is no fear of it being neglected by the English Masonic body.

MASONIC TRIPLES.

Part II.—The Building.

WHATEVER model another may take for his symbol of moral character, the Masonic student is confined to the Temple of Solomon. The distinguishing characteristics of that edifice, therefore, become important. It is assumed at the outset that to be in harmony with the ritual this character must be first pure, then peaceable, and of good report. Referring to history we find so much emphasis was laid by the Almighty upon the central virtue of this triple, peace, that it was denied David to build the house of the Lord because he had been a man of war from his youth. To his son was accorded the privilege denied the father. Had David been allowed to build the Temple no doubt Hebrews alone would have been the workmen, but under Solomon the heathen even were allowed an important place. Masonry recognizes this important fact in the first three Officers of every Lodge, representing Solomon King of Israel, Hiram King of Tyre, and Hiram Abif of the tribe of Naphtali. The first represented the chosen people, pure and simple; the second the heathen world, entirely without the pale; while the third of our three Ancient Grand Masters was of mixed blood, his father being a Tyrian but his mother was a Danite who lived in Naphtali. The symbolism therefore of the first three offices of every Lodge is the universality of Masonry and a true type of the Christian brotherhood of man. The Light was to lighten the Gentiles and to be the glory of Israel. Change the triple foundation of the preceding article and this symbolism is false.

The plan of the temple bears the impress of the triple nature of its builders. It partook of the symmetrical Jewish characteristics, but the plan was evidently Egyptian, ornamented and beautified with Tyrian ideas of architecture. The result of these combinations was a building unlike any modern or other edifice, unlike in many respects even the Temple of Herod, which a great biblical scholar has said must be carefully distinguished from it. This being the historic fact, the Egyptian impress of a power sufficient to dictate the form of the temple, the threefold Deity of the Egyptians must have admirably harmonized with the Eternal God of the Ancient Constitutions of Masonry. The threefolds extended further. The stones were quarried in three places: partly in Lebanon, partly in Bethlehem, and partly from the temple rock, the name of which is "Royal Caverns." The Masonic corollary is the introduction, obligation, instruction of the neophyte, and the reward of faithful labour, emblematically represented by peace, unity, plenty; corn, wine and oil.

The novelty pertaining to the temple was the porch or third apartment. In it stood the historic pillars, and in it was to assemble the great congregation. This was built partly of cedar and partly of stone. Here was retained a relic of the ancient sanctuary attached to trees—a union of the Canaanite and patriarchal feeling—in the large walled quadrangle upon which the porch opened. Wide-spreading cedars, stately palms, venerable olives, shaded the place. This triple shade suggests the lair of the "Lion of the Tribe of Judah:" "In Salem is His leafy covert, and His rocky den in Zion." This naturally leads the Masonic student to reflect upon the situation of the Lodge, and the high hills and low dales where it was the ancient custom of the Fraternity to assemble for labour. The three species of trees also suggest the three orders of architecture, of which it is said, that of the five recognized but three show invention and particular character, and essentially differ from each other.

The temple was surrounded by a triple story of chambers, each of which was five cubits high, so that there remained above ample space for introducing the windows, somewhat in the manner of a clerestory to the sanctuary. There was a triple peculiarity about the walls of these chambers. They differed in width, and this arose from the circumstance that the external walls of the temple were so thick that they were made to recede one cubit after an elevation of five, so that the scarcement in the wall gave a firm support to the beams which supported the second story, without being inserted into the wall of the sanctuary; this insertion being avoided perhaps not merely for architectural reasons, but also because it appeared to be irreverent. The third story was supported likewise by a similar scarcement, which afforded a still wider space for the chamber of the third story. In the light of this description the Bible account becomes intelligible. The temple when completed was impregnable as a fortress, in location and structure, impossible to be subdued by any then known arts of war. Masonically the three chambers may rationally refer to the three places of Lodge meetings; to the three orders of craftsmen; to the plumb, square, and level. Masons meet upon the level, act by the plumb, and part upon the square, if true to the plain teachings of the Institution. The number five, referring to the height, suggests the five senses of human nature, three of which must be possessed in order to become a Mason. The impregnable character of the temple in its symbolism of the history of Masonry has not received the attention which is its due. "No institution was ever reared upon a more solid foundation," says the Worshipful Master to the candidate, and no human society has ever withstood the vicissitudes and persecutions this has undergone, "Yet Freemasonry still survives." The three jewels of a Fellow Craft are not destroyed. The attentive ear still receives the sound from the instructive tongue, and the mysteries of Masonry are safely Lodged in the repository of faithful breasts. The triple walls of the temple chambers also suggest the truth of the Masonic declaration that during its construction there was not heard the sound of axe, hammer, or tool of iron. If Masonry owes a debt to Christianity for the light of a complete revelation, the obligation rests not entirely upon the human side. The temple, indeed, was destroyed, but the foundation remains. The divine institution of the church owes Masonry a debt of gratitude as well. Says a good authority: "Masonry is not a religious institution, its object being to promote and cherish the personal and social virtues of its members, rather than to maintain and defend the Word of God and the peace of His Church. If, however, we may believe its traditional cabala, it has been the means of preserving the sacred records from utter destruction; and should some unexpected calamity occur in the future to destroy the Sacred Writings, there is enough taught, amid the sublime traditions of this ancient Fraternity, to avail in leading the sinner back, not only to the knowledge of his duty, but also to faith in his Saviour, and hope in the glorious resurrection of the body, and the blissful immortality of the soul. The clearness with which the sacred truths of the Bible are set forth and illustrated has made this Institution exceedingly obnoxious to the Church of Rome; and the application of the level to all ranks of society has made it no less so to the political despots of Europe."

The three windows of the temple proper again suggest light, not alone of themselves however, because it should be observed that the openings were for the purpose of ventilation, since the light within the temple was furnished by the sacred candlesticks. Light is not only threefold, but it may be resolved into the seven prismatic colours of the rainbow. The Church has alway regarded these rays as a symbol of the sevenfold gifts of the Holy Ghost, who is the Lord and giver of life. Beautifully apposite here are the words of a brother, whose MS. we use by permission: "If we believe in God we must believe in Him as He is. He dwelleth in light unapproachable, into which a man cannot enter. In the plain language of Scripture, 'Who only had immortality dwelling in the light, which no man can approach unto: whom no man hath seen nor can see, to whom be honour and power everlasting. Amen.'" The manner in which the light filled the temple, the Spirit of God being the sole light of the Most Holy Place, amply fulfills the parallel. The excerpt continues: "Now as we stand upon the mosaic pavement, emblematical of human life, checkered with good and evil, the beautiful border which surrounds it shows manifold blessings and comforts which surround us, and which we hope to enjoy by a faithful reliance upon Divine Providence, which is hieroglyphically represented by the blazing star in the centre, and so standing declare our need of light, what is it but that we declare our need of God, for without him we can do no good thing?" The seven rays also suggest the seven liberal arts and sciences, the monitorial signification of which is known to every well informed brother.

The "gates" of the temple were three in number, and, according to some authorities, divided the walls into three equal parts or portions. There were also three entrances to the the temple. The entry to the outer court was called the first, that into the inner court the second, and the door of the sanctuary the third. The tenets of a Mason thus symbolized are three in number: Brotherly Love, Relief and Truth, and these comprehend the whole religion of humanity. No people of the old, old world, if we may believe history, were ever able to grasp the idea of the universal brotherhood of man. It was left to the Christian dispensation to foster a society which became the Operative Masonry of our fathers.

The dedication of the completed temple was watched by three lines of guards. These may not improperly be treated as referring to the threefold guard at the door of the preparation room, so that no unworthy candidate may approach the Masonic temple. The three questions asked before entrance are much more important than is ordinarily supposed. It is rank perjury to answer them in the affirmative when the heart is not prepared to honestly receive and act out the spirit of the moral temple. To declare that voluntarily and without mercenary motives he has come to solicit the light and privileges of Masonry, and at the same time act the part of a hypocrite, knowing full well that selfishness and not the "sincere wish to be serviceable to your fellow creatures" is the motive, how great is the responsibility of him who approaches unworthily?

The symbolism of history in its connection with the dedication of the temple and Masonry is important. The editors of the encyclopædia referred to last week say: "A more accurate knowledge of its own singular and not undignified history would tend more than anything else to give worth and elevation to its aims." We accept the challenge so far as the symbolism and the voice of our triples are concerned. We have already alluded to the silence amid which the stately edifice arose, not distinguished so much by its magnitude as by its good architectural proportions, beauty of workmanship, and costliness of materials. In order to reconcile the spirit of the new architecture as nearly as was possible with the old law, the stones were hewn in the quarries, and placed with reverent silence one upon another, without sound of axe or hammer, as if by the gradual growth of nature. Masonry in like manner is scattering her gentle influences for good, quietly, unobtrusively and within the tyled recesses of her Lodge rooms. The spiritual stones may not, indeed, in all cases be the white stones which Josephus informs us was the colour of the temple material, but such as they are, the rough ashlars, made as nearly perfect as possible, we present to the tender mercies of a covenanted God. The element of secrecy is the element of strength. The ornamentation of the temple is reserved for another chapter, hence, in what follows, we omit descriptions usually mentioned in this connection.

Three things are noticeable of the dedication. (1) The whole population came up from the remotest extremities of the empire. This again signifies that Masonry may reasonably count as legitimate worshippers at its shrine the people of all races and climes. No questions were asked as to particular beliefs. The whole people came up to the dedication. All, therefore, have the privilege, if they so desire, of building upon a solid foundation a Masonic edifice of moral character. (2) Two solemnities were joined, and two processions advanced from different quarters. One came from the lofty height of Gibeon, bearing the relics of the old worship, now to be disused for ever. The tabernacle, with its worn and patched covering, and containing the furniture of a portion of the ceremonial worship, including the sevenfold candlestick, must have presented an appearance not easily forgotten. The wanderings were over. The Ark of the Lord was now to have a permanent resting place, and the glory of the old was merged in the magnificence and perfection of the new. Masonry has experienced this change. The long procession of Operative brethren, with their working tools, might well pass in review here before the mind's eye. The tabernacle rested in places which will be known and located so long as the earth shall endure. The cathedrals and temples of the old world are lasting monuments to the memories of Operative Masons, whose system is now disused and probably for ever as a special craft. But another procession appeared at the dedicatory ceremonies. It was still more stately, and joined the first on Mount Zion. It bore but one relic, the one thing which was to unite the old and the new together. Says one historian: "From its temporary halting place under the tent erected by David on Mount Moriah, came forth the Ark of acacia wood, covered with its two small winged figures, supported as of old by the Levites on their shoulders. Now, as before, when it had removed from the house of Obed-edom, the king and people celebrated its propitious start by sacrifices (but on a far greater scale), 'sheep and oxen that could not be numbered for multitude.' The road (such was the traditional picture preserved by Josephus) was flooded with the streams of blood. The air was darkened and scented with the clouds of incense; the songs and dances were unintermitted." Speculative Masonry is to its predecessor (Operative Masonry) what the latter procession was to the former. The Masonic Word is fittingly an emblem of the Ark. The law of sacrifice typified by the bloodshed, is that which is the rule of every Mason who honestly believes the "five points of fellowship," and acts out, therefore, the part of the manhood of the Bible. "The greatest and best of men, in all ages, have been encouragers of the art, and have never deemed it derogatory to their dignity to level themselves with the Fraternity, extend their privileges and patronise their assemblies." Onward the processions moved; united in one it entered, doubtless, the eastern gate. It ascended court after court. It entered the Holy Place. Less than two centuries ago the brethren assembled to determine what the future of Masonic brotherhood should be. At that meeting were crystallised into one harmonious whole the various charges of the Craft and its legendary lore. The Ancient Constitutions is the voice of that assembly, and every Worshipful Master is obligated: "You admit that it is not in the power of any man, or body of men, to make innovations in the body of Masonry. The Masonic Ark is safely anchored, and the study of the tenets of the Craft becomes the highest pursuit of the student. The Ark was sacredly and reverently placed within the innermost recesses, so the Masonic mystery is as faithfully guarded within the heart of the brother. (3) Three orders of men assisted at the dedication—the king, the priests, and the people. The Masonic student will have no difficulty in placing the emblematical truth of the three orders of craftsmen and the duties enjoined upon the three principal officers of the Lodge (with the Worshipful Master in the East), representing Wisdom, Strength and Beauty.

We next consider: What is the voice of Masonic triples upon the ornamentation of the temple?—Voice of Masonry.

ADVANCEMENT IN MASONRY.

SOME things advance fastest when they appear to stand still. According to astronomers, our globe is moving rapidly through space, and at the same time revolving rapidly on its own axis; while to each of us it appears the most steady globe imaginable, and actually immovable. The reason why it appears so steady is, that it moves in accordance with law. So Masonry moves, and the result is that it seems never to be moving at all. All the changes in its past history were well-nigh imperceptible. From being builders of material temples to becoming builders of spiritual temples, Freemasons glided along without a jar or a discord. Men who were not operative Masons were gradually admitted, until finally they outnumbered the operatives, and the Craft no longer was distinguished by wielding the Plumb, the Level and the Square, the Twenty-four inch Gauge and the Gavel, as implements of labour, but came to use them as symbols only, for more noble and glorious purposes than they were used by their famous progenitors. This advancement was actual, and yet it was scarcely noticeable, and it resulted in the highest advantage to the Fraternity. As the immaterial or spiritual is higher than the material or natural, so is speculative Masonry higher than operative Masonry.

The initiate, early in his career, learns that there is possible advancement for him in Masonry. Once, in the history of the Craft, the majority of its members were either Apprentices or Fellows, and but few were Master Masons; now all may speedily, sometimes too speedily, become Master Masons. In a month's time the newly-initiated Brother finds that he can be "advanced;" and in another month's time "further advanced." In six month's time (in Pennsylvania) he can be "still further advanced," by being received into the Chapter, and there learning what, one hundred and fifty years ago, he might have learned in the Lodge, but which, since the excision and relegation of a part of the mysteries of the Lodge to the Chapter, he must seek now in the Chapter. Such advancement of a Brother in Freemasonry is apparent, it is objective and tangible; and yet is it always in truth real advancement? Or is it only formal? Forms and ceremonies are necessary to constitute advancement, but if they be empty forms to the initiate, he is not advanced a jot. He must learn the substance under these forms, he must comprehend their meaning; he must look through the sign and see the thing signified. This brings us to the consideration of what is, after all, the real gist of advancement in Freemasonry.

All the forms and ceremonies of Masonry are shells, every one covering a kernel. This kernel is always some vital truth, practical truth, interesting truth, Masonic truth. It is what Masonry exists for, what it teaches, what has kept it alive through the centuries. Hollow forms could not keep it alive a year. Indeed, no single feature of its wonderful composite could ensure its perpetuity. It is a beautiful system, of morality, of instruction, of entertainment, all combined. Suppose a Brother "goes it strong" on its morality alone, or its instructive features alone, or its conviviality alone—he is rightly judged to be one-sided, cranky, not appreciating the fulness of Masonry. He advances backward. He gives up the whole, and accepts a part. All of us may value some one feature more than another—that is, some one of these may minister to us more benefit or pleasure than another but we do not ignore the rest. The young Brother, and some who are older, never advance far in Masonry because they mistakenly think that they see through it at the beginning. You can never see through it. Its capacity to instruct and delight the thinking mind is endless. You cannot outgrow it. So long as you reflect upon what you see enacted in the Lodge, Chapter or Commandery; so long as you study, with the aids which literature gives you, the hidden meaning of all Masonic forms and ceremonies; so long as you "further advance" in the knowledge of what Masonry was and is; so long as you delve in the mines of learning which the cultured Brethren of past and present times have opened, and rendered so accessible, and so enjoyable, so long you will not only continue to appreciate the Masonry that you already know, but you may add to your knowledge, year by year, and thus be treasuring up a constantly increasing store of information, which will be a perpetual source of delight and instruction, until time shall be no more. Practically there is thus no limit to advancement in Masonry.

The brethren who have undertaken Stewardships for the Ninety-Eighth Anniversary Festival of the R.M. Institution for Girls met at Freemasons' Hall, on Monday last, when Bro. Charles Greenwood P.G.S.B., D.P.G.M. Surrey, occupied the chair. The Right Hon. the Lord Mayor of London was elected President of the Board of Stewards, with the following brethren as Acting Presidents:—Bros. Charles Greenwood P.G.S.B., D.P.G.M. Surrey; Captain George Lambert, F.S.A., P.G.S.B., Vice-President, &c.; and Charles Belton, F.R.G.S., P.P.G.D. Surrey; Vice-Patron. Bro. John L. Mather was elected Treasurer, and Bro. Edgar Bowyer P.G. Standard Bearer, Vice-Patron, was elected Chairman of the Ladies Stewards; with Bro. F. R. W. Hedges (Secretary of the Institution) Hon. Secretary. The usual Steward's fee of £2 2s was agreed to. The Festival will be held at Freemasons' Tavern.

MARK MASONRY.

MACDONALD LODGE, No. 104.

THE quarterly meeting of this Lodge was held on Monday, 8th inst., at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street, when there was a goodly muster, under the presidency of the Worshipful Master, Bro. W. Johnston. He was supported by Bros. J. Mainwaring S.W., W. H. Bates S.O., F. B. Scott J.O., A. Williams P.M., G. Yaxley P.M., W. C. Hall P.M., G. W. Verry Secretary, J. Baker Chaplain, J. Church S.D., A. F. Church J.D., Thomas Tyler, Bros. A. Mead, H. Burradale, J. P. Leillard, W. A. Nelson, E. Moss and others. Lodge having been opened in accordance with ancient formalities, and the minutes of the preceding meeting having been read and confirmed, several brethren were advanced, the working being all that could be desired. Among the visitors present were Bros. Galler P.M. 205, C. F. Matier P.G.W., R.M. G. Master's Lodge, W. T. Hunt R.M. 322, E. Hoare Grand Organist, &c. Business having been satisfactorily disposed of, the brethren partook of supper together. The customary Loyal and Mark Masonic toasts were honoured, interspersed with some capital songs and recitations.

THE HOLBORN RESTAURANT.

"WHERE to dine?" is a query that is capable of being answered in a great variety of ways; but where to obtain a truly excellent meal, at reasonable tariff, and with the surroundings of luxury and refinement, is a discovery which experience only can point out. Nobody knows better than the City man the places where not to dine—the stuffy coffee-house, wherein the discomfort of a badly-cooked dinner is served on table-cloths of dingy hue, amidst the evil smelling atmosphere of a shabbily-furnished dining-room. Those old-fashioned shanties are rapidly disappearing before the march of improvement and the altered habits and customs of men whose avocations necessitate their partaking of the mid-day or evening meal at a restaurant. Brighter and more commodious saloons are taking the place of the low-roofed coffee shops, whose high backed seats and cramped table room were formerly used uncomplainly, inasmuch as they were "Hobson's" choice. But the greatest of all the improvements we have noticed in this respect is at the Holborn Restaurant, at which the proprietors have, at enormous expense, constructed an annexe or grill room, which is at once the most splendid and elaborate in the metropolis, and eminently worthy of a visit. A country visitor to town, on opening the doors of this princely apartment would almost instinctively hesitate to enter, for assuredly in such a palatial dining saloon none but the wealthy could afford to pay for such luxury and refinement as is everywhere apparent. But once having tasted of the comforts and enjoyment which can be here obtained at the same cost, or even less, than at many of the second-rate and ill-conditioned refreshment houses to which we have referred, there will be no second thought as to a repetition of a visit. The proprietors of the Holborn Restaurant, fully alive to the every-day requirements of the public, have not only raised a sumptuous palace for the convenience of their patrons, but have added a cuisine admittedly the best in London, without in any way increasing their tariff. In the midst of luxury and refinement, never hitherto attempted in this country, friends may meet and enjoy their chop or steak at the nominal price of from ninepence to one shilling: the charge for vegetables is the same as you would pay at any pokey and unsavoury cook-shop; your "Burton" or "bitter" is 2d, just the same as at any public bar; and, moreover, you have thrown into the scale what is most essential to the enjoyment of a meal, courtesy and civility on the part of your attendants. In case you may be an abstainer, tea or coffee is at hand at a moment's notice, at all hours of the day and evening, and at the most moderate and reasonable tariff.

The new grill-room may be entered either by the doorway of the Little Queen-street approach, or by that leading from Holborn. The visitor is at once struck with the exceeding beauty and lustre of the saloon, which is sixty-eight feet long by forty-seven feet wide, and upwards of eighteen feet in height. The walls are of the rarest and most beautiful marbles and mosaic, very little woodwork being seen. Among the marbles are the grand antique and campan vert from the Pyrenees, vein and statuary marble from Carrara, rouge incarnat from Languedoc, Levanto marbles from the Apennines, and alabaster from our own mines in Staffordshire. The skilful and artistic manner in which they have been combined in application is beyond all praise. A marble dado runs round the room to the height of the window-sills, which are also marble to the depth of the recess. The plinth is black, and the die and capping black and white—grand antique marble of the Pyrenees—divided by a band under the capping, of a rich brownish red, gained by the use of Levanto marble. On a series of pedestals matching the dado are ranged pilasters of red marble, which carry the cornice; the spaces between on the west side being occupied to about one-third of their height by mirrors set in a narrow gold framing, richly enhanced by a pale green marble as wall lining. On the opposite or east side the spaces are entirely taken up by square quarried stained glass windows, reaching from the dado to the cornice. This treatment of the glass is very judicious, being both pleasing and quiet. Immediately above the mirrors runs a string course of fluted statuary marble, and above this, bordered with the same pale green marble as before, a series of Venetian enamel mosaic panels of renaissance ornament, comprising figures and animal subjects, and foliated decorations in various rich colours and tints, on a gold ground. From the top of the cornice springs a large and bold cove, festooned with a series of flower and fruit clusters and drops. The ground of the cove is of dull gold, and granulated; the "swags," ribbons and drops are also of gold, and from the most prominent flowers incandescent light springs, by means of which the room is entirely lighted. The cornice and illuminated cove are carried across the room in two places, and serve to encase the deep iron girders which were necessary as a part of construction to support the walls and floors above. These girders are in turn supported by two iron stanchions, which are most ingeniously encased in marble, and by this means appear to be solid monolithic fluted and reeded shafts. They stand about fourteen or fifteen feet high, and are of veined white marble in two perpendicular sections, the joints being skilfully concealed in the quicks or fluting. These columns are beautifully proportioned, and terminate in ornate gilded capitals, presenting a chaste and picturesque appearance. The ceiling of this room is remarkable beautiful; it is divided into square fricassed panels, inclosed by moulded stiles of polished alabaster, having circular bosses of the same material at the joints. The panels are of gold mosaic, decorated with a foliated pattern in rich colouring. The effect of this ceiling, with its variety of light, shade, and colour is, when seen under the brilliancy of the electric light, indeed splendid, and is quite unique in London. At the end of the room stands a sumptuous-looking grill, which occupies nearly the whole of the north wall. This is a splendid production, by Messrs. Doulton, in the ware for which they are so celebrated. The ornamental details of the grill are particularly deserving of notice, especially the sliding doors to the hot-plate rack, which are of silver and polished Bessemer steel. On the top of the grill stand two gorgeous Oriental vases, the whole forming an attractive feature, entirely in harmony with the rest of the decorations. The architects of the building were Messrs. Archer and Green, and the whole of the marble and mosaic work was carried out by Mr. W. H. Burke, of the firm of Burke and Co., Newman-street, who were charged with the general decoration of the grill-room, and the windows were designed and executed by Messrs. Clayton and Bell, of Lambeth.

In the midst of these sumptuous surroundings a number of small tables are arranged in tête-a-tête fashion, so that parties, either large or small, can be easily and comfortably accommodated at their respective meals. The appointments of the saloon are of the most récherché description—the table-cloths snowy white, the glass and cutlery without a speck or blemish, while the necessary concomitants of the cuisine are of the most varied and complete kind. We have rarely, if ever, seen such a combination of perfect management and supervision, such excellence of wines and viands, such perfection of cooking, service, and attendance. Thousands of persons are daily becoming aware of what a boon has been placed within their reach by the proprietors of the Holborn Restaurant, where the public may be served at any hour with a substantial and splendidly-cooked meal, at from 1s 6d upwards, in the midst of artistic splendour, warmth and luxury, amidst the sweet cadences of soft, soothing music.

In closing our description of this new grill-room we advise our readers, one and all, when inquiring as to where to dine in London, to seek out and enjoy the advantages set within their reach at the Holborn Restaurant. Our country and colonial friends, especially, will be glad to learn of a centre at which they are able to procure a comfortable and excellent meal, at an exceedingly cheap rate, amidst surroundings of the most lavish and sumptuous character. Here they can make sure of a good dinner before going to the theatre or concert-room, or a late supper on their return. Contrary to the custom of some restaurants, where the prices are increased as the evening advances, here there is a uniform and normal charge from noon to midnight, which is unaltered during the whole time the grill-room is open. We are unable, with the space at our command, to enter more fully into details of this leviathan establishment of luxury and refinement; but, like good wine, it "needs no bush." We recommend all our friends to pay the Holborn Restaurant a visit, and see for themselves what sort of place the new grill-room is. We are convinced their verdict will endorse the opinion we express, that it is, par excellence, the most elaborate and best appointed establishment either in London or elsewhere.

Empire.—"Round the World" is a piece that all playgoers should see. As a dramatic work it cannot be called strong, but as a spectacular production it is everything that can be desired. The work is founded upon the well-known novel, by Jules Verne, "Round the World in Eighty Days," and contains a compressed version of the story, and nearly all the striking incidents of the voyage of the adventurous Englishman of the original. The scenery is superb; the Giant's Staircase, in the Rocky Mountains, is a lovely piece of scenic art; and the explosion on board the steamship Henrietta is very striking and realistic. As incidentals to the piece are introduced some snake charming, by Mons. Karoly; a trained elephant, and three well-arranged and well-danced ballets, the costumes of the first and second of these latter being both pretty and effective. In the second of these Mdlle. Pertoldi appears, and dances with her usual grace and elegance. It may perhaps be said the characters are almost overlooked in the magnificence that surrounds them, but on the whole the artistes engaged play their parts well. Mr. Charles Cartwright portrays Sir Clifford Cool, the baronet who undertakes to go round the world in eighty days, for a wager of £10,000. M. Marius, as Passepartout, Sir Clifford's valet, attends him, and is exceedingly amusing throughout. Mr. Charles Collette, in the character of a detective, and Mr. Myron Calice, as Hannibal Smith Pearce, of Boston, are both excellent. Mdlle. Miska and Miss Kate Vaughan take the parts of the sisters,—Stella and Gladys Herbert. Miss Vaughan does her best, but her part is a weak one, and it is undoubtedly a disappointment to find that her well-known Terpsichorean powers are not brought into exercise.

Grand.—The version of "Jane Shore" which was presented at this theatre, to a crowded and fashionable audience, on Monday first saw the light in August last, at the Court Theatre, Liverpool, where it was produced under the title of "The King's Favourite." Miss Marie De Grey as Jane Shore. This lady has now brought the play to London, and, judging by the reception it has met with during the week, we may predict a successful run for it in the Provinces where the talented Lady who sustains the title rôle has already made arrangements for its production. The work is by Messrs. J. W. Rounding and R. Palgrave, and treats of Jane Shore's association with Edward the Fourth. Edward meets Jane at a fête, given at the house of Mistress Neville. Here he makes overtures to her, but is repulsed with an energy that would disarm one lover less persevering than the royal wooer. Later on, Edward formulates with Lord Hastings a scheme for the abduction of Jane. This plot, however, is overheard by Brian (Mr. F. Charles), Matthew Shore's servant. Brian gives information to his master, who, for convenience sake, has been lured away. Shore, however, returns, confronts the King, and draws his sword. For this he is instantly arrested, and immersed in prison for a long period. Meanwhile, it is reported to Jane her husband is dead, and she becomes the Court favourite. In that capacity she pleads for the life of Clarence, when the King is stirred to anger by the insinuations of Gloster, who pours insidious speeches into his brother's ear. After Edward's death, by Gloster's order Jane is turned into the streets, and denounced as a witch. Here, on pain of death, no one is to give her food or shelter. However, before her strength is exhausted, her husband, who has been released from prison, arrives and pardons her, and Jane dies in his arms. In striking contrast with the gentleness and self-reproach of Jane is the pitiless malignity of Zanita, her cousin (Miss Rose Leclercq), who schemes against Jane whilst she is in favour, and gloats over her in her distress. Miss De Grey gives a careful and effective rendering of the part of Jane Shore. Her delivery is clear, and she secures the attention of her audience, though the play is naturally of a somewhat "heavy" character. Of Mr. Bassett Roe's impersonation of the Duke of Gloster we cannot speak too highly. The authors' intention is fully grasped, and the interpretation is marked with a freedom from undue emphasis and attempt at point making, though no opportunity for the satire attaching to the delineation seems to have been overlooked. We predict for this gentleman an early appearance at one of our west-end Theatres. On the unthankful part of Zanita Miss Rose Leclercq brings to bear the great experience she has acquired, and the result is a most artistic presentation of what might easily become a most repulsive portraiture. Mr. Matthew Brodie, as King Edward, acted with much spirit. Mr. Jones Finch, as Matthew Shore, was a little too "ponderous;" we think this gentleman, who is a true artist, could easily throw a shade or two of relief into his impersonation. Mr. Hamilton Piffard (Lord Hastings), Mr. H. H. Morell (Master Milstead), Miss Ina Garrick (Mistress Neville), and Miss Helen Massey (Duchess of Clarence), do not discredit their surroundings, while a special word of praise must be given to Mrs. Ernest Clifton (Mistress Milstead). This lady enacts a somewhat difficult part with great discrimination. Altogether we congratulate the authors, who in Miss De Grey and the ladies and gentlemen she has engaged to support her have secured the services of artistes who are capable of bringing out the many strong features this work possesses. On Monday the same company will produce the romantic drama, "Woman against Woman."

Vaudeville.—We have heard the question asked, "How is it experienced managers waste their time and money in producing pieces that at first sight it is evident will not take?" Whether it is that they do not read the piece thoroughly before rehearsing, or whether they think anything will do now-a-days we cannot say, but the fact remains that piece after piece is put upon the stage only to be condemned by all who witness them, and are speedily withdrawn as lamentable failures. At the Vaudeville, Mr. Thorne's productions of late have met with but little success, and we are afraid his latest venture will not cause Dame Fortune to smile on him. "Doo, Brown and Co." is from the pen of Mr. C. M. Rae, who describes it as an original farce. The work has some good lines in it, but the plot is too feeble for its absurd situations and wildly farcical incidents to exercise their proper effect upon an intelligent audience. Doo, Brown and Co. are a firm of lawyers, represented by Doo (Mr. Thomas Thorne) who engages an empty headed man named Dobbins (Mr. Fred. Thorne) to attend to his clients, and to make use of catch expressions. This privilege he exercised on the first night to such an extent that the audience could but vote him a nuisance. Mrs. Peppercorn (Miss Sophie Larkin), dressed up as a classical and amorous Flora, gives a sitting to an artist named Indigo Leo (Mr. C. Glenny), and with Major Peppercorn (Mr. Charles Groves) saved the second act. But when, in the last act, the Major and Doo fight a duel blindfolded, with carving knives and forks, in the most absurd fashion, the temper of the audience gave way, and the curtain went down amidst strong marks of disapproval.

With respect to the recent collection of Masonic medals, emblems, books, and other objects exhibited in the Masonic Hall, Kidderminster, a writer in a local journal says:—

"I am told that there are only three other such collections in existence. But this differs from them in being the work of a single enthusiast, in an incredibly short space of time. Bro. Taylor, who stands very near the top of the Masonic grades, in this, as in other matters, reveals the tremendous energy with which he is accustomed to work. To accumulate the objects I was permitted to see the other evening would, by an ordinary man of means and leisure, be considered a sufficient life work. In the present instance, they have been drawn together from all quarters of the globe by a man whose every hour seems full of business affairs. Apart from any knowledge of, or interest in, Freemasonry, no intelligent man can fail to be struck by the numismatic and bibliographical value of the articles brought together, many of them unique, and all of them scientifically arranged, and forming a bird's-eye view of the history of Freemasonry. To an outsider the Craft becomes more intelligible, more impressive, and more worthy of respect in the presence of these eloquent witnesses of the immense interest taken in its teaching and ritual by different generations, nationalities, and ranks now passed away, but whose enthusiasm and convictions are here crystalised for our information, and a record for ages to come. A collection so complete and varied cannot well be estimated pecuniarily, but I am informed that experts have valued it at something like two thousand pounds. Should Brother Taylor ever wish to part with it, I should think the Freemasons of England would hardly allow it to be broken up and dispersed.

The Southampton Masonic Hall Company have declared a dividend of 5 per cent., and Bro. J. R. Weston has been re-elected chairman.

THE ELECTIONS.

To the Editor of the Freemason's Chronicle.

Dear Sir and Brother,—Once more the April elections for our Schools are within measurable distance; and once more I beg to offer your readers an analysis of the candidates seeking admission. In the case of the Girls' School there are 36 contesting for 23 vacancies, and in that of the Boys' 48 applicants for 30 vacancies. The ages of the former range from 7 years 4 months to 11 years, with an average of 9 years; and of the latter from 7 years 3 months to 10 years 11 months, with an average of 8 years and nearly 8 months. Of the girl applicants 15 hail from London, 3 from Hants, 2 each from West Yorkshire, Sussex, Essex, and the Colonies, and 1 each from Suffolk, Northumberland, Kent, Devonshire, Leicestershire, North and East Yorkshire, South Wales (West Division), Dorsetshire, Worcestershire, and the Channel Isles; of the boys 15 hail from London, 4 from West Yorkshire, 3 each from East Lancashire and West Lancashire, 2 each from Northumberland, Hants, Durham, Gloucestershire, Kent, and S. Wales (West Division), and 1 each from Sussex, Herts, Wilts, Staffordshire, Devonshire, Bristol, Berks and Bucks, the Colonies, Essex, Warwickshire, and Norths and Hunts. The fathers of the girls subscribed on an average for 9 years and 11 months, ranging from 1½ to 21 years; and of the boys for an average of 9 years and 8 months, ranging from 1½ to 22½. Out of the 36 fathers of the girls only 11, or less than one-third, are recorded as assisting one or more of the Institutions, and of the boys' fathers only 10 out of 48, or a trifle more than one-fifth are so returned This looks very bad on their part. Of the girl applicants 25 are dependent upon the mother only, three on a step-mother, four on both parents, while four have neither parent living. The respective families range from one to nine in number, with an average of 4¼ and are as follows:—Three with one child, two with two, four with three, nine with four, six with five, one with six, three with seven, and one with nine. Of the boy applicants, thirty-nine are dependent on their mother only, three on both parents, and six have neither parent living. The respective families average 3¾ each, and are as follows:—Seven with one child, seven with two, eight with three, ten with four, eight with five, three with six, three with seven, one with eight, and one with nine. Having now finished the analysis, I will call attention, as usual, to last cases. Amongst the girls there are four. The first two, Mathilde Pratt and Ethel Hickman, are on their second application, with 211 and 263 votes respectively; the first comes from Suffolk and Essex, and the second from Sussex. There ought to be no trouble in securing their election, but their friends should not feel satisfied with less than another 1200 each. Nos. 25 and 26, Amy Cutbush and Edith Hood, come up for the first and last time, and it is now or never with them. With regard to No. 25, I feel sure so many of the London brethren were acquainted with her late father—our much respected brother James Cutbush, who was so generous in his better circumstances towards the Institutions—to permit her to be disappointed. With regard to No. 26, though I am entirely unacquainted with her case, I wish her success, and I trust that the Province of Leicestershire and Rutland will be enabled to enlist the sympathies of sufficient of the neighbouring Provinces and others to see her safely through.

With regard to the boys there are five last applications. The first is No. 1 on the list, with his fifth attempt and only 318 votes to his credit. Though I am sorry for the boy, when I see the Lodge his father belonged to, I cannot hold out much hope of success for him; at the same time I hope, for the lad's sake, I may be a false prophet. Had he been born a week later he would have had another chance. No. 11 on the list (Lampricht) hails from Northumberland, which Province has two candidates on the list. If this Province is desirous of securing this lad's return, it must let the other, who has three more chances, entirely alone, which by the way she appears to have done already, as with three previous applications he is only credited with 19 votes. The three remaining ones, 14, 21, and 40, are forlorn hopes; but I see no reason why they should not all take the place they are besieging. They come from London, Kent, and Warwickshire respectively, and these districts should be fully equal to the task of planting their flags within the walls of Wood Green School, where I hope to have the pleasure of seeing the boys on my next visit.

Yours fraternally,

P.M. 1607.

The second annual ball of the Albert Edward Lodge, No. 1780, Southampton, was held at the Masonic Hall, Albion-place, on Wednesday, the 10th instant. There was a goodly company of some eighty ladies and brethren, and as a dispensation had been granted to the brethren to appear in their Masonic clothing, the scene was a brilliant one. The services of Mr. Faulkner's quadrille band were engaged for the evening, and the catering of Mr. Etheridge gave every satisfaction. The ball, in fact, proved a great success.

How to Recite. By Edwin Drew. London: Dean and Son, Fleet Street.

WHILE to some extent agreeing with the author of this little work that elocution may be taught, after a careful perusal of the book before us we must reluctantly express the opinion that little, if any, benefit could be gained by a student of the art from a study of "How to Recite." We contend that no useful purpose can be served by merely directing a person to emphasise this or that word. There are degrees of emphasis, and such a variety of methods for producing each different degree that it is impossible for any individual who has not a sufficient interest in his task—and ability to grasp the meaning of the piece he desires to recite—to receive that interest and understanding from written directions similar to those our author places before his readers. If the student has not some idea where emphasis is required, he is certain to fail, and no amount of study from a work such as that under consideration will make him or her competent to recite. What is required is, we think, directions to those who have the notion, to induce some idea of the way in which the proper sound of a word can be produced, and the idea an author desires to convey may be carried into effect. Again, we think the selection of poems by no means a happy one. Certainly two recitations worthy any student's attention are given—"The Women of Mumbles Head," and "The Field of Waterloo;" but with these exceptions there is not a solitary piece that would arouse the average reader's interest. Without an interest in his work no student can hope to excel in the art of elocution. We are convinced a selection of really interesting poems for recitation—of which there is no dearth—combined with a few practical hints on deportment and the mode of economising voice power would be welcomed by the youthful student; throughout the present work, however, we do not find anything beyond the most commonplace and every-day observations; indeed, nothing which would assist a diligent student, or arouse in any one picking up the book the feeling that he or she could with advantage join the army of elocutionists. We are sorry we cannot speak favourably of "How to Recite," but we feel the author has failed in his avowed object,—that of producing a work which should induce a greater number of the rising generation to more carefully cultivate the use of the voice.

BALLAD SINGING.—I would impress on amateurs who may be interested in the art of singing a ballad that before the chief essential, "speech in song," can be arrived at, the proper production of vocal tone must be mastered. To begin with, I would have my readers think of the singing voice as of a marvellous musical instrument which is placed in the throat. It is a natural combination of many manufactured instruments, but chiefly it is to be considered as partaking of the nature of a wind and a reed instrument—that is to say, the air, propelled by an invisible but distinct force from the lungs, is directed against the vocal cords or ligaments, where sound is produced. In order that this sound may not be impeded in its efforts to reach the outer air, the throat must allow itself to open. It must open passively; the sound then escapes, and finding free passage, it directs itself against another part of the instrument, which is the sounding-board, or resonator, of the voice, and is known to us as the hard palate, just above the top front teeth. Here the sound is magnified, intensified, or minimised, and managed as the artist chooses, and when perfected it may be clothed in speech, and so produced finally in "song." "Speech in song" means, to my mind, that the sound which is uttered is so enveloped by the word, that "word and sound," so combined and perfected, end in being "song." It will be seen, then, that to sing an English ballad requires an unusual combination of forces in the singer, and it is this very necessary combination which makes the true artist so rare.—From Cassell's Family Magazine for March.

"ILLUSTRATIONS."—Mr. Blackmore will contribute "the Lonely Bride" to the April number of Mr. F. G. Heath's new pictorial threepenny review, "Illustrations," which will also include an illustrated article on the London underground "circle" system of railways.

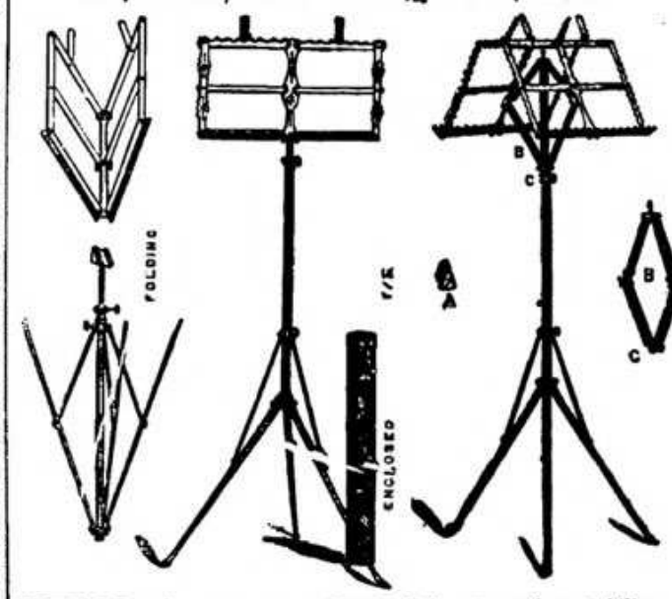
General Gordon's high appreciation of "Plutarch's Lives" is well known, and various references to the work occur in his Diary at Khartoum. "I would make 'Plutarch's Lives,'" he writes in one place, "a handbook for our officers; it is better than any number of 'Arts of War,' or 'Minor Tactics.'" "It would be nobler," he writes in another place, "to keep the Soudan, but it is too much to expect our taxpayers to agree to, and besides which, 'Plutarch's Lives' are no longer in vogue, and 'you must pay me well ere I go to the Soudan' is the idea. It will interest many to know that a cheap reprint of "Plutarch's Lives of Alexander and Cæsar" has just been issued as a volume of "Cassell's National Library," now publishing in threepenny weekly volumes.

The first number of a new serial issue of "Familiar Wild Flowers" makes its appearance this month. It is illustrated with 200 coloured plates, from the original paintings made expressly for the work by Mr. F. E. Hulme, F.L.S., F.S.A.

The Revised Book of Constitutions: Critically Considered and Compared with the Old Edition. London: Simpkin, Marshall & Co. 4 Stationers' Hall Court, E.C. Sent on receipt of stamps, One Shilling, by W W. Morgan, Freemason's Chronicle Office, Belvidere Works, Hermes Hill, Pentonville.

The ceremonies of consecration and installation will be rehearsed at the Marquis of Ripon Lodge of Instruction, No. 1489, held at the Queen's Hotel, Victoria Park Road, Hackney, on Monday next, the 22nd inst., by Bro. James Terry P.P.G.S.W. Norths and Hunts, Secretary Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, &c. Lodge will be opened at 7 o' clock.

We again remind our readers that the Gallery Lodge, No. 1928, will give their first concert this (Saturday) evening, at the Brixton Hall, Acre lane, Brixton, in aid of the Lodge Benevolent Fund. Bros. W. Ganz Past Grand Organist, W. L. Barrett, and Frederick Cundy have promised their assistance. Amongst the other artistes who will give their services are Madame Thayer, Misses Bene Fowell, Alma Evelyn, Lizzie Mulholland, and Alice Farren; Messrs. Percy Palmer, Herbert Jewell, and Henry Horscroft, Messrs. F. F. Buffen, Lee Davies, Sidney F. Hill (pianoforte), M. Theodore Werner (violin), Herr Otto Langley (violoncello). Following the Masonic principle of equality, there are to be no reserved seats.



Bro. A. Petts was installed Worshipful Master of the Temple Lodge, No. 538, Folkestone, on the 2nd inst., the ceremony being performed by Bro. Hart Past Master, in a very able manner. The Lodge and its guests afterwards dined together at the Pavilion Hotel, and spent a very agreeable evening.

PORTSMOUTH LODGE, No. 487.

THE installation of the W.M. elect (Bro. J. T. Thackara) took place in the Masonic Hall, Highbury Street, Portsmouth, on Thursday afternoon, the 11th instant, in the presence of a large and representative gathering of members of the Craft. The ceremony of installation was to have been performed by the Provincial Grand Master (Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P.), but a telegram had been received from him, apologising for his absence in consequence of his suffering from a sore throat. The duty was discharged by Bro. Frost P.M., to whom a cordial vote of thanks was accorded. A Past Master's jewel was presented by the W.M. to his predecessor (Bro. Horace E. Loader P.M.), in recognition of his efficient discharge of the duties. A Past Secretary's jewel was presented to Bro. J. W. Boughton. At the banquet, which was admirably served from the Albany Hotel, Landport (the choice wines having been specially selected by Mr. J. D. Antill), the usual toasts were honoured, the health of the W.M. being proposed by the D.P.G.M. (Bro. J. E. Le Feuvre) and received with enthusiasm. The decorations of the banqueting room were most artistic. The band of the Hants Artillery Volunteers, under the direction of Mr. Alley, was in attendance, and played appropriate selections. The Officers were appointed as under:—Bros. H. E. Loader I.P.M., J. W. Boughton S.W., G. Whitehall J.W., Palsgrave P.M. Treasurer, Rae Secretary, Bates S.D., Jenkins J.D., H. P. Holley P.M. D.C., Pearman Organist, Sanderson I.G., Curtis and Perry Stewards, Axell and Smith Tylers.

GOSPORT LODGE, No. 903.

THE annual meeting for the installation of the W.M. of this Lodge took place on Tuesday, the 9th instant, at the India Arms Hotel, Gosport. There were present Past Masters Bros. G. B. Irons, J. Wallingford, R. Mitchell, F. Powell, and W. Brunwin, also Bros. D. G. Gilmour W.M 309, J. H. Jackson W.M. 1428, W. H. St. Clair 2074, J. M. Foster W.M. 1776, G. T. Cunningham 1834, J. W. Gieve I.P.M. 309, W. Dupree W.M. 1069, E. Good P.M. 804, W. Gunnell P.M. 342, J. Bussey 342, G. Darby W.M. 1705. About forty brethren of the Gosport Lodge were present. The ceremony of installing the W.M. elect (Bro. J. E. Thornton) was performed by Bro. J. Dempsey I.P.M. The W.M. appointed his Officers, as under:—Bros. J. Dempsey I.P.M. W. Smith S.W., A. Perryman J.W., Rev. B. Ring, LL.D., Chaplain, W. Rowe Treasurer, J. Batt Secretary, C. Turle S.D., J. Hathaway J.D., H. Webb I.G., S. W. Misselbrook Organist, C. Larkins Assistant Organist, J. Warden D.C., J. Gill and H. Long Stewards. The usual banquet followed.

THE GREAT CITY LODGE, No. 1426.

THE last meeting of this Lodge for the session was held on Saturday, 13th inst., at the Cannon-street Hotel, but in consequence of the extreme coldness of the weather it was but thinly attended. Bro. R. Fendick W.M. presided, supported by his Wardens, and Bros. Headon P.M. Treasurer, Keeble P.M. Secretary, Stevens P.M., &c. The first business, after the disposal of the minutes of the last Lodge, was to raise Bro. Alfred Joseph Coleman to the degree of M.M., which ceremony was most ably and impressively performed by the Worshipful Master. The next matter that came under the notice of the brethren was to elect a Worshipful Master for the ensuing year, and Brother Potter S.W. was unanimously elected to that office, but will not be installed until the second Saturday in October. Bro. Potter returned thanks on his election, and promised to do all in his power to promote the welfare of the Lodge and the happiness of the brethren. Bro. Headon P.M. was unanimously re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. Potter Tyler. The Auditors of the Lodge accounts were appointed, and after the customary reading of the Bye-laws had been disposed of, the Lodge adjourned for light refreshment; as this was an off-night they were not of the usual extent, but they were of a very substantial description. At the close of the repast the Worshipful Master gave as the first toast the Queen and the Craft, which met with the usual response. The Worshipful Master said the next toast he had to propose was the health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, who had just been re-elected Most Worshipful Grand Master; he felt sure that the brethren would do honour to the toast, for no one had ever done more for Freemasonry than His Royal Highness. The toast was received with great cordiality. Bro. James Stevens P.M. said he wished to remark that as this was the last time the Worshipful Master would preside over them that would be a fitting opportunity to thank him for his past services, with a hope that he would form one of the [band] of Past Masters for many years to come. They should be wanting in common feeling if they were to pass over the occasion without referring to his services and what he had done for the Lodge. During his year of office the Lodge had been affected by the depression of trade, and they had not grown so fast as they had done some years ago, but when they got rid of certain incumbrances he could not doubt that the fortunes of The Great City Lodge would revive, but they would never be able to say that any brother ever ruled over the Lodge with greater success, or with greater pleasure to the members. The toast was enthusiastically received. The Worshipful Master, in responding, said he thanked Brother Stevens for his kind remarks, which were almost too flattering to him; he had not had so much work to do as he should have liked during his term of office; it would have been a great pleasure to him, but he hoped that a large amount of it would fall to the lot of the coming Master. From all he had received the greatest amount of kindness, and he thanked them one and all for it. The Worshipful Master said, another toast he had to propose; one that he hoped they would do honour to, and that was the Officers of the Lodge. One of them he thought they ought to render their best thanks to; that was Bro. Gwynne, who was always ready to take any office when the Officers were not present. He also wished to mention the Worshipful Master elect, wishing him health and happiness in the office which he had struggled so hard to obtain. Bro. Potter S.W. and W.M. elect said, on behalf of the Officers and himself, he thanked the W.M. and the brethren for the kind manner in which their health had been proposed and responded to; he could only repeat what he said in the Lodge, that he would do the best he could for the Lodge and the welfare of the brethren. Bros. Gwynne and Cooke severally responded. In response to the toast of the Past Masters, Bro. Headon jocularly remarked that in his youth, like the Lodge, he grew rapidly, but he could not go on growing for ever, and if the Lodge did not get as many new members as it should that was an additional reason why the old ones should keep close together. Several songs were sung, and the evening passed in complete harmony.

ALLIANCE LODGE, No. 1827.

AT the last regular meeting of this Corporation Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons, held at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham Street, Bro. Lieut. Hy. Wright presided, supported by Col. T. Davies Sewell P.M., Bros. J. Perkins, C.C., S.W., H. Squire, C.C., J.W., R. J. Pawley P.M. Treas, J. E. Turner P.M. Secretary, Major J. Perry Godfrey J.D., F. Jewson Organist, J. C. Whiddington D.C., J. Lovell Tyler, and many other Brethren and Visitors. At the conclusion of Lodge business a sumptuous repast was served by Messrs. Ritter and Clifford, whose arrangements gave unqualified satisfaction. After the banquet, the Loyal and Masonic toasts were honoured, and the "health of the Worshipful Master" was received with special enthusiasm. Bro. Wright, in the course of the evening, expressed regret at the absence of Bros. Sir John Monckton, F. Green, C.C., and others, whose presence was always welcome at the gatherings of the Alliance Lodge. He then proposed the health of the Past Masters, who were represented on this occasion by Bro. Col. Davies, and referred to the dignity and urbanity with which that gentleman conducted the business of the Lodge during his year of office. His ability and genial manner had won for him many friends, not only in this Lodge, but also in the Corporation and City Guilds. Bro. Col. Sewell, in acknowledging the compliment paid him, said he owed a deep debt of gratitude to the brethren for the cordiality with which they had received the mention of his name. It was a great undertaking to respond to this toast, as he had succeeded to a line of talented Past Masters, who had distinguished themselves with credit and satisfaction, not only to this Lodge in particular but to the City of London generally. From the way in which he was always received here, he owed the utmost fealty to the Alliance Lodge, and he rejoiced to see the unanimity and harmony which pervaded the whole of its members, a state of things which he hoped would long continue. Bro. Smith then said he had been called upon to perform a very pleasant duty; he asked the brethren to join him in drinking to the health of their excellent Worshipful Master. They had been accustomed to look to the Master of the Alliance Lodge to do his duty well, but they must all admit that none could have acquitted themselves better in that capacity than had Bro. Wright. He was thoroughly acquainted with the Ritual of the Craft, and would prove an ornament to the Lodge when he was called upon to join the ranks of the veterans. The W.M., in returning thanks, observed that Col. Sewell had expressed gratitude for the kindly feeling expressed towards him; but he (the speaker) was vastly indebted to that brother, who had introduced him to the Alliance Lodge. He hoped he should never do anything to disgrace the position which he at present occupied, through the kindness of the brethren. His desire was to keep up the traditions of the Lodge, and in that respect he confessed himself to be a grand old Tory. He then alluded to the interest which had been taken in the affairs of the Lodge by successive Lord Mayors, Sheriffs, &c., and felt grateful for the assistance which had been rendered to them by the Treasurer and Secretary, the working Officers of the Lodge. He was most fortunately situated in having an array of colleagues around him. There was no single Officer present who would not or could not assist him in carrying out the work of the Lodge. Several complimentary toasts followed, including "The Visitors," for whom Bro. Scott replied, and "The Treasurer and Secretary," acknowledged by Bro. R. J. Pawley P.M. The proceedings were agreeably diversified with recitations and singing, and a pleasant evening was passed.

HONOR OAK LODGE, No. 1986.

THE installation meeting of this Lodge was held at the Bridge House Hotel, London Bridge, S.E., on Wednesday, the 10th inst. There was a large gathering of members and visitors, amongst whom were Bros. H. Maunder Williams W.M., C. Phillips I.P.M., Henry Stokes S.W. and W.M. elect, J. W. Hartley J.W., Walter Hopekirk P.M. Treas., John Hammond P.P.G.D. Middx. Sec., H. Hooper S.D., Aug. Darch P.M. J.D., F. France D. of C., J. H. Worstencroft A.D. of C., G. R. Langley Asst. Sec., W. H. Simons Org., Alfred Pitman Asst. Org., J. W. Hiscox P.M., Thomas Moody P.M., Dr. R. L. Lawson, Thomas Cox, F. Wootton, W. H. O'Reilly, W. H. Cloake, C. W. Bennett, S. Scott Young, Walter W. Arter, C. Longhurst, R. Neilans, J. Andrews, W. T. Cue, Thomas Letchford, B. Forster, and E. Bye sen. The Visitors were Bros. Fredk. Binckes P.M. P.G. Stwd., James Stevens P.M. 720, 1216, 1426, W. H. Williams P.M. 101, J. R. Johnson P.M. 1320, G. W. Speth W.M. 183, J. Harling P.M. 30, C. W. Fox P.M. 1326, A. R. Cranch P.M. 1669, Wm. Hamblyn P.M. 1622, A. R. W. Powles W.M. 1901, S. Richardson W.M. 183, G. W. Knight S.W. 1507, R. T. Brickdale J.W. 1623, James B. Serjeant W.S. 1765, R. C. Jones S.D. 1686, Jos. Wilson 177, W. Tomson 1524, E. Morson 1320, Sidney Hill Org. 1216, W. Wilson 1837, E. A. Francis 183, A. Gooch 1441; and others. The Lodge having been opened, and previous minutes confirmed, a notice of motion was given for the removal of the Lodge to the White Swan Hotel, Upper Norwood, its present place of meeting being in consequence of circumstances connected with its original "home," only temporarily permitted by dispensation. A candidate for passing not arriving in good time, the ceremony of installation was at once proceeded with, and Bro. Henry Stokes was presented to the out-going and Installing Master. Bro. Williams completed a highly creditable year of office by performing the ceremony in a most efficient manner, assisted by Bro. John Hammond, who, at his desire, subsequently delivered the addresses. The newly installed Master, Bro. Stokes, then appointed and invested his Officers in the following order: Bros. Joseph W. Hartley S.W., H. Hooper J.W., Walter Hopekirk P.M. Treas., H. Maunder Williams I.P.M. Sec., A. Darch P.M. S.D., F. France J.D., G. R. Langley I.G., J. H. Worstencroft Director of Ceremonies, G. Mordey and O'Reilly Stwds., W. H. Simons Org., A Pitman Asst. Org., and Charles Sheppard Tyler. A handsome Past Master's jewel was next presented to Bro. Williams in a most appropriate address from the W.M., and the gift was suitably acknowledged, as was also the further present of a collar and Lodge jewel to that worthy brother. An unexpected acknowledgment of the services of Bro. John Hammond, as one of the founders, and hitherto Secretary of the Lodge, was then made to that brother, by the presentation of a special jewel, setting forth by its inscription the services rendered. Bro. Hammond expressed his surprise and pleasure at receiving a gift so spontaneous and unlooked for, and modestly deprecated the eulogiums which had accompanied the presentation. After the disposal of some routine business, the Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet. The customary leading toasts having been duly honoured, that of the Worshipful Master was proposed by Bro. Williams, the I.P.M., in terms of high appreciation of the services of the W.M. in his previous discharge of the respective offices he had held in the Lodge, and which had so well qualified him for his present exalted position. The remarks of Bro. Williams were cordially endorsed, and an enthusiastic reception was given to the toast. In response, the W.M. assured the brethren that no pains on his part should be spared to sustain the present reputation of the Lodge, and its continued and permanent progress. Adopting a very proper order of arranging the programme of toasts, that of the Masonic Charities—which it has been heretofore too much the custom to relegate to the very near conclusion of Masonic entertainments—followed the response of the W.M., by whom the claims of the respective Institutions were set forth, with special allusion to the forthcoming Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, whose respected Secretary was then present, and from whom he solicited an acknowledgment of the toast. Bro. F. Binckes, who received a very hearty greeting, after endorsing many of the remarks of the W.M., and thanking him on behalf of the sister Institutions, in one of his best and most characteristic speeches interested the brethren by special reference to the Boys' School, its progress of late years, and its present position. He had peculiar pleasure in recording his appreciation of the past efforts of the Honor Oak Lodge, and the expectation that the same disposition to aid the School in which he had so deep an interest would be continued. He looked forward to the ensuing Festival with some amount of natural apprehension lest the hard times of the present should affect the pecuniary result, but still had faith that the generous impulses of the Craft generally to sustain their most important Charities would prevent any serious disappointment. For the past assistance rendered by the Honor Oak Lodge he entertained the liveliest feeling of gratitude, and he was induced to hope for a continuance of support in the near future. For the toast of the P.M.'s Bros. Williams, Phillips, Hammond, and Hopekirk severally returned thanks, Bro. Williams particularly referring to the very happy year of office through which he had just passed, and which had been made so agreeable by the devotion of his Officers and the attention of the members generally to the best interests of the Lodge; and Bro. Hammond again referring to the manner in which that services he had been able to render had been recognised in the earlier part of the evening. The names of twenty-five Visitors were then read, and the W.M. called upon his Officers and brethren to accord them a hearty welcome. Bro. James Stevens P.M. 720, 1216, 1426, by general request, returned thanks for the greeting accorded, and in the course of many laudatory remarks on the perfect Masonic work which had been witnessed that evening (which remarks were freely endorsed by the general body of visitors) expressed the hope that the brilliant example set by those who had hitherto ruled the Lodge might be emulated, and probably equalled, if they could not be excelled, by the present and future occupants of the Chair of K.S. The Lodge was an ornament to the Craft, both in respect of ritual work and ceremonial, and its hospitality had been so distinctive as to ensure its attractiveness to all who could enjoy the honour of placing their names on the Visitors' list. Of the many now assembled he felt assured there was none who could do otherwise than wish the Lodge the prosperity it so richly deserved. The toast of The Officers of the Lodge was ably responded to by Bro. Hartley S.W., and shortly afterwards the Tyler brought a most successful meeting to a pleasant conclusion. Amongst the many vocalists and reciters of the evening, we should not omit to make special mention of the admirable efforts of Bros. Cranch, Simons, Sargeant, Pitman, and Forster, in regard to the last named of whom we may say, in the words of Captain Reece (words which he and others will quite understand), "It was his duty, and he did!"

ROYAL UNION LODGE, No. 382.

THE members of this Lodge celebrated their annual installation on Monday, the 15th inst., at the Chequers Hotel, Uxbridge, on which occasion Bro. W. C. Hall was regularly installed as Worshipful Master. Bro. C. Cotton, the W.M. of the past year, presided, and he was supported by the following Past Masters of the Lodge:—Bros. Geo. Rawles, W. Webb, Joseph Lonsdale D.C., W. Coombes Secretary, G. Febrenbach Treasurer, and H. Nicholson. There was also a good attendance of members and the following visitors:—Bros. S. Murch 1612, G. Girling Butcher 569, W. Wright 1977, W. Biggs P.P.G.S.W. Wilts, Past Provincial Grand Secretary Berks and Bucks, T. Dyson, C. Beckett 2000, John Hodges Past Master 1706, R. De Lacy 1706, G. Harper 1612, W. W. Morgan P.M. 211. The minutes having been confirmed, the Lodge was advanced, and Bro. W. C. Hall presented for installation. This ceremony was undertaken by Bro. W. Biggs, a brother who, as long back as September 1877, was sketched in our columns under the designation "An Installing Master." We then spoke of his ability as a presiding Officer, and at that time we believe our opinion was shared by all who knew Bro Biggs. To-day we find him equally proficient, and the eight years which have elapsed since then appear to have given him even greater command of the work, rather than to have detracted from any of the spirit or ability he then possessed. At the same time we suppose we must admit that the eight years have made some difference; for, unfortunately, we do not so frequently have the pleasure of meeting Bro. Biggs at Masonic gatherings as was the case at the time we refer to. Having been regularly installed, the new Worshipful Master appointed the following brethren to office:—J. J. Wilson S.W., Thos. Brooks J.W., G. Febrenbach P.M. Treasurer, W. Coombes Prov. G.S.D. P.M. Secretary, H. W. Nicholson P.M. Asst. Secretary, Jas. Taplin S.D., A. G. Fleming J.D., A. Lambert I.G., F. Taylor Org., J. Lonsdale P.M. D.C., F. Stacey Asst. D.C., T. W. Jamieson Steward, G. Duffin Tyler. The addresses were then given, and in due course the ceremony was completed. Mr. John Ash Martin, a candidate for initiation, was regularly introduced, and was admitted to a participation in the mysteries of Freemasonry by the W.M. A Past Master's jewel was presented to the retiring Master, Bro. Cotton, who, in acknowledging the presentation, said it afforded him great pleasure to receive so valuable a gift from the brethren of the Lodge. A proposition for an initiate and for a joining member having been handed in, notice was given of a motion to alter the Bye-laws of the Lodge. The case of a distressed brother, who desired his petition to the Board of Benevolence to be brought before the Lodge for signature, was then considered, and Bro. P.M. Febrenbach kindly undertook to personally visit the applicant. In the event of his finding the necessities of the case demanded immediate relief, he was authorised to afford the same from the Benevolent Fund of the Lodge. Lodge was then closed, and a banquet followed. This was very well served by Bro. W. Phillips, the proprietor of the "Chequers," and was followed by the usual toasts. The Loyal toasts having been honoured, with those of the rulers of the Craft, the usual compliment was paid to the R.W. the Provincial Grand Master Sir Francis Burdett. With the toast of the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, and the rest of the Provincial Grand Officers was associated the names of Bros. Lieutenant Coombes, G. Febrenbach, and J. Lonsdale, who acknowledged the compliment. Bro. Cotton then proposed the health of the Worshipful Master, who he congratulated on the ability he had shown in conducting the ceremony of initiation that day. In reply, Bro. Hall said that when, ten years back, he was initiated in the Royal Union Lodge, the chair of Worshipful Master appeared to loom in the distant future. By the kind suffrages of the brethren he had secured the coveted honour. He trusted his efforts would receive a kindly recognition, and that the prestige of the Lodge would be sustained during his year of office. At the request of the W.M., the duty of proposing the health of the Installing Master was entrusted to Bro. Morgan, who thanked Bro. Hall for the opportunity afforded him of saying a few words in favour of a dear old friend. Bro. Biggs, during the last few years, had not taken so active a part in the work of Freemasonry as he had in the earlier part of his career. He had proved himself a sound and worthy Mason, and to some of the young brethren who were around the board an outline of his career might prove of interest. Bro. Biggs was initiated between thirty and forty years back, in a popular London Lodge, wherein he regularly served the office of Worshipful Master. In 1857, he was appointed to a minor office in the Provincial Grand Lodge of Wiltshire, in which district he subsequently had the honour of filling the office of Grand Senior Warden. At that time Sir Daniel Gooch held the office of Deputy Grand Master of that Province. When Sir Daniel was installed as ruler of Berks and Bucks he appointed our esteemed brother to the Grand Secretaryship of the Province, and that office he held for something like ten years. At the present time he was looked upon as the perpetual Director of Ceremonies of the Province of Berks and Bucks. To the older brethren he was well known, and wherever he was known he was respected. Bro. Morgan felt that the toast would be as heartily received as he desired it should be, and bearing in mind the high esteem he entertained for Bro. Biggs, that would be of the most enthusiastic character. Bro. Biggs tendered his cordial thanks to Bro. Morgan for the kind way in which he had spoken of him. As had been stated he did not now take so active a part in the duties of Freemasonry as heretofore, but this could be accounted for when is was remembered that he might be classed in the ranks of the veterans, inasmuch as he was over seventy years of age. He had not performed a Masonic ceremony for something like ten years, but having been requested by the Worshipful Master, who was a next door neighbour, to instal him, he had had much pleasure in complying with the request. Years ago he had been a frequent visitor at the Royal Union Lodge, and he was pleased to see its present state of efficiency. After paying a deserved compliment to the Worshipful Master for the way in which he had performed the ceremony of initiation, Bro. Biggs proposed the toast of the Masonic Charities, forcibly urging on his listeners the necessity of united efforts to maintain them in the state of efficiency that was required at the present time, when distress was so prevalent in every quarter. The toast having been replied to, the health of the Past Masters was given, Bro. Cotton responding. "The Visitors" and "The Officers" brought the list to a conclusion, and the brethren separated. Some excellent songs were given during the evening, the musical arrangements being under the direction of Bro. Dyson, who was assisted by Bros. Hodges, Beckett, and De Lacey.

MASONIC BALL.

A MOST successful ball was given on Monday evening, 8th inst., at the White Hart Hotel, Bromley, a special dispensation having been granted by the Prov. G. Master Lord Holmesdale. The invitations were issued by the Hervey Lodge, 1692, whose meetings are held at this hotel. The company assembled at nine o'clock, when dancing was commenced. The following Officers of the Lodge acted as Stewards:—R. V. Harman Worshipful Master, D. Grinsted P.M., J. King Secretary, M. J. Dickens J.D., J. Howard I.G., J. Sanders. The M.C.'s were Bros. R. L. Gore I.P.M. and W. G. Hibbs. The ball-room was most artistically decorated with Masonic emblems and flags. The first part of the programme having been gone through with much spirit, an adjournment was made for supper; Bro. R. V. Harman W.M. presided. After the loyal toasts, in proposing the toast of the Craft, which is not only the most ancient but the most honourable society which ever existed, the W.M. gave a short but facetious description of the secrets and mysteries of the Order. The remaining toasts were the Most Worshipful Master, the Ladies, the Stewards, and M.C.'s, which having been duly honoured, dancing was resumed, the remainder of the programme being completed with unflagging zeal.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 193.—At Bro. Lashbrook's, Hercules Tavern, 119 Leadenhall-street, City, on Wednesday. Bros. Saint W.M., Shackell I.P.M., Campbell S.W., De Costa J.W., Seaman I.G., Pitt Secretary, Moss Preceptor; Valentine, Hyman 1275, Lashbrook. After preliminaries, Bro. Moss, as candidate for raising, answered the questions, and was entrusted. Lodge was opened in the third, and the ceremony of raising was rehearsed. Bro. Moss worked the first and second sections of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. Lodge was resumed in the first degree, and Bro. Moss worked the first section of the lecture, Bro. Pitt answering the questions. Bro. John Hyman, 1275, was elected a member. Bro. Campbell was appointed W.M. for ensuing week. All labour ended, Lodge was closed in due form.

Kingsland Lodge of Instruction, No. 1693.—On Monday, 15th instant, at Bro. Baker's, Cock Tavern, Highbury, N. Bros. Hancock W.M., Kirk S.W., Stockhall J.W., Forge Treasurer, Collingridge Secretary, Turner S.D., White J.D., Keogh I.G., Trowinnard Preceptor, and several other brethren. The ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Finck candidate. Bro. White answered the questions leading to the second degree, and that ceremony was rehearsed, Bro. Dixie candidate. Bro. Trowinnard P.M. 1693 and 228 was elected Preceptor; Bros. Fenner, Western, and Forge (all P.M.'s) elected Deputy Preceptors; Cooper W.M. 1693 Treasurer, and Collingridge Secretary. Bro. G. J. Barnett 1929 was elected a member.

FUNERALS properly carried out and personally attended in London or Country by Bro. G. A. HUTTON, 17 Newcastle Street, Strand, W.C. Monuments erected. Valuations made.

ORIGIN OF THE WORD FREEMASON.

A VERY complimentary notice of the Masonic organization appeared in a recent number of the English Churchman, published in London, England. Besides expressing commendation of our Fraternity, the writer of the article to which we refer gave his opinion respecting the derivation of the word Freemason, which he assigns to a Hebrew origin. He states that "mas" in Hebrew means "tribute, levy, tributaries," and so we have the compound word "task-masters" as used in the Mosaic writings—a word equivalent to "lords of tributary services." The writer in the Churchman also shows that "mas" was anciently applied to those persons in Israel who were set apart to perform some distinct work, as king Solomon is said to have raised a tribute of select men—a "mas"—and placed them under the superintendence of Adoniram when a great undertaking was to be engaged in. The thirty thousand men thus selected belonged to a superior class and were associated together by some peculiar bond. They constituted a body of comparatively free men of the "mas," and received honours and preferment thereby. The writer from whom we quote says that these selected Israelites formed "a distinguished class, and remained a select and distinguished class, rich in instruction, culture and refinement, and proud of their distinction as 'mas,' by which collective name they may have formed a respected and respectable Brotherhood in Israel. Hence the Brotherhood of Masun or Mason, or Masoni, or Macons, or Masons, as they variously were called at their spreading over the various civilised countries of the world.

The origin of the word as thus given is by no means so fanciful as are some of the sources to which the term Mason, or Freemason, has been traced. Indeed, when we consider the strongly marked Hebrew character of the Masonic system, there seems to be considerable presumptive evidence in favour of such an etymology of the distinguishing appellation of the Craft. Certainly it is supposable—a proper influence in the nature of things—that the word Mason was primarily used in reference to some class, or association, having a resemblance to that great Brotherhood to which the name now applies. It might thus properly come from the Hebrew source designated.

Then as to the term Freemason. In the middle ages the word Mason applied to an operative Craftsman, and the prefix probably come into use to designate such an operative who was free of his Guild—or whatever might be the Society in which he had membership. A Free Mason in mediæval times was a superior sort of workman, entitled to special privileges, and most likely a worker in free-stone. Now we have the one word Freemason to designate the members of a great Fraternity, and, however we may trace the origin of the term, it is of chief importance that we keep in mind its practical import as at present applied. It stands for a class of men selected and set apart—a class united together by very close bonds of mutual sympathy and helpfulness—a class that ought to illustrate the qualities of both mental and moral superiority. Freemasons of to-day ought to be free of petty prejudices and gross passions—free of all entangling alliances with that which is base and corrupting. They ought to be skilful workers upon that best material of inner life, doing their best to mould and perfect human character.—Freemasons' Repository.

The first Festival of the Grand Master's Lodge of Instruction for Mark Master Masons was held on Wednesday, at the Masonic Hall, Red Lion Square, Holborn. The Lodge was opened with the following brethren acting as Officers: Bros. Lord J. W. Taylour P.G.W. W.M., J. L. Mather S.W., R. Berridge G.D.C. J.W., C. F. Hogard P.G.S. M.O., G. Cooper P.G.D. S.O., Ramsey J.O., A. Williams P.G.D. I.P.M., C. F. Matier P.G.W. Secretary, and S. B. Wilson P.G.I. of W. I.G. The usual formalities having been observed, the resignation of Bro. F. Binckes (Grand Secretary), the Treasurer of the Lodge of Instruction, was announced, and was formally received with general expressions of regret. Brother A. Williams was unanimously chosen to fill the vacancy. Lord Taylour and Bros. Hogard, Cooper, Wilson, Mather, Berridge, Driver, Richardson, Hoare, Ramsey, Moon, and Tisley were elected members of the Permanent Committee, and Brother Matier Secretary. Brother Poore then gave the lecture on the tracing board, and a vote of thanks was unanimously passed to him for so doing, he also being elected an honorary member of the Lodge. Fifteen propositions for joining were handed in, and in due course the Lodge was closed. A banquet followed at the Holborn Restaurant, Lord J. W. Taylour presiding. He first proposed the toast of the Queen and Mark Masonry, and this having been honoured, he followed with the M.W. the Grand M.M.M. the Earl of Kintore. He spoke with satisfaction—which he felt every Mark Mason would endorse—of the great progress the Mark Degree had made during the past few years. Any one who could remember it, as he could, twenty-two years back, could but marvel at its present position. He coupled with the toast the name of the Prince of Wales, Grand Master elect, and felt that under his rule the progress of the Degree would be as great, if not greater, than it had been under any of his predecessors. The toast of the Deputy Grand Master and other Grand Officers followed, and in proposing it the Chairman said that the success of Mark Masonry was due to the efforts of the brethren who had ruled it in years gone by. Brother Davison replied. He felt there was no fear of interest in the Mark Degree lessening while they had such brethren as their present Chairman ready to help whenever their services were required. Brother Williams proposed the health of the Chairman, who, he said, had come specially from the Isle of Wight to preside. Lord Taylour thanked the brethren for the high honour they had conferred on him in asking him to preside over the meeting. It had been one of the pleasantest days he had ever spent in Masonry, and had fully repaid him for any little trouble he had been put to in attending. Other toasts were, the Permanent Committee, the Mark Benevolent Fund, the Visitors, Brother Poore, and, finally, that of the Tyler. Bros. Berridge, Matier, Dr. Morris, and Poore severally responded. Brother Matier, speaking to the toast of the Mark Benevolent Fund, regretted the absence of his official chief, Brother Binckes, who could have responded in a much more able manner than he was capable to do. Brother Matier recounted the present position of the Fund, and said that there were the names of ninety-five brethren on the list of Stewards for the coming Festival. £1700 was subscribed last year, and he hoped this year's total would be even in excess of that amount.

The ball given by the Selwyn Lodge, No. 1901, at the Peckham Public Hall, on Friday, the 5th instant, proved a very great success. The Worshipful Master and members of the Lodge fully entered into the spirit of the scheme, and, under their directions, a numerous company of lady and other visitors most thoroughly enjoyed themselves. Nor was the entertainment confined to dancing, there being singing and instrumental music and recitations in certain rooms set apart for the purpose. A capital supper was provided, and the different rooms were very prettily and tastefully decorated. Brother R. W. Powles W.M. and Brother A. J. Bellis P.M., Hon. Secretary of the Stewards' Committee, are to be congratulated on the admirable manner in which everything was carried out.

The installation meeting of the Wallington Lodge, No. 1892, was held on Thursday, at the Public Hall, Carshalton, Brother Alfred Bishop being installed as Worshipful Master. We shall give a report of the meeting in our next issue.

The Companions of the North London Chapter of Improvement held their weekly Convocation on Thursday, at the Alwyne Castle Tavern, St. Paul's-road, Canonbury, Comps. Edmonds M.E.Z., Strugnell H., Brasted J., Sheffield S.E., Dean S.N., Radcliffe P.S. The ceremony of exaltation was ably rehearsed.

A Committee of Frome Masons has been appointed, with a view to considering what will be the most advisable steps to take in order to secure greater accommodation than is provided by the present hall, and the cost thereof. The report was to be delivered at an adjourned meeting of the brethren.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Rheumatism and Neuralgia.—Though the former disease remorselessly attacks persons of all ages, and the latter ruthlessly selects its victims from the weak and delicate, the persevering use of these remedies will infallibly cure both complaints. After the affected parts have been diligently fomented with hot brine, and the skin thoroughly dried, Holloway's Ointment must be rubbed in firmly and evenly for a few minutes, twice a day, and his Pills taken according to the printed directions wrapped round each box of his medicine. Both Ointment and Pills are accompanied by instructions designed for the public at large, and no invalid, who attentively reads them, can now be at any loss how to doctor himself successfully.

AN ANCIENT MASONIC CERTIFICATE.

Time worn and interesting documents recently found in Hunterdon County.

LOUIS Anderson, cashier of the Bloomsbury (N.J.) National Bank, while settling up the estate of his father, who died at his home in Flemington a year ago, found a batch of old papers in which was a Masonic dimit sixty-four years old, and what was known a century ago as a Masonic dismissal certificate, designated in the Masonic Lodges of to-day as a dimit. It is ninety-three years old, is writted on parchment, and reads as follows:

We, the Master and Wardens of Unity Lodge, No. 7, Ancient York Masons, held at Kingwood, in the State of New Jersey, North America, assembled in due form, do hereby certify and make known to all men enlightened on the face of the earth, that the bearer hereof, our well beloved brother Silas Hough, hath been entered an Apprentice, passed the Degree of a Fellowcraft, and raised to the Sublime Degree of a Master Mason in our said Lodge, and having performed his work amongst us to the entire satisfaction of all the brethren, we therefore recommend him to true and faithful brethren of the Royal Craft wherever Providence may order his Lott.

In testimony of which we have delivered him this present certificate under our seal, and duly attested by us, and that the same may not be of use to any other, have caused the said Silas Hough to sign his name on the margin hereof. Given this twelth day of December, the year of Light 5793 and of Salvation 1793.

Attest: Wm. McGill, Secretary,
{L. S.} Elijah Rellinghouse, Master,
Wm. Lokobry, Senior Warden,
Jacob Snyder, Junior Warden.

The writing is in a good business hand, and the only word that differs from the spelling of the present day is the word "lot," which beginning with a capital letter ends with two t's. The seal of the Lodge is fastened with a large wafer, the motto being so much worn that only a few letters are discernible. The following emblems are on the seal: sun, moon, square and compass, Bible, plumb, and a gauge and a gavel crossing each other. The Lodge has been out of existence so long that it is not remembered by any Masons of the neighbourhood. No. 7 in this State is now known as Newark Lodge.

The dimit mentioned above was given to Samuel Hill by Hiram Lodge, No. 25, F. and A. M., of Flemington, and bears the date 1822. It is attested by J. T. Blackwell, Secretary, and signed by Daniel Case, Master; Henry B. Poole, Senior Warden; John Bush, Junior Warden.—New York World.

The care and treatment of the teeth, with much useful information concerning the mouth and its molars, is contained therein, and we cordially commend this brochure of Dr. G. H. Jones, to the attention of our readers, which will be found a true guide, philosopher, and friend. The concluding chapters of the book are devoted to a description of the Author's method of dental treatment, which has obtained so high a reputation, and which seems to realise the desideratum of 'holding the mirror up to nature.'"—The Brighton Standard, December 1885.

THE APPROACHING ELECTION OF THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

THE April election of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys will take place on Monday, the 12th proximo, and on that occasion thirty lads will be elected from a list of forty-eight eligible candidates. Thirty-four of these candidates are new to the present list, ten now make a second application, one a third, two a fourth, and one a fifth.

Five of the lads will be removed from the list of candidates if unsuccessful at the coming contest, in consequence of their age precluding them from taking part in another election. Of these, No. 1, Samuel William Knight, one of three fatherless children, left by a former member of the Vitruvian Lodge, No. 87, London, has already polled 318 votes, as the result of four elections in which he has taken part. It need hardly be said that very much more support will have to be given him next month than he has ever received before if he is to be successful. No. 11, Charles Wren Limpricht, was a candidate in October last, and on that occasion secured 156 votes, he is one of five fatherless children; his father was initiated in St. Peter's Lodge, No 481, Northumberland, and died in February 1884. No. 14, Sidney Robert Bolton, was also a candidate at the last election, but no votes were then polled on his behalf; both his parents are living, the father having been initiated in the Kennington Lodge, No. 1381, London; there are three children dependent. No. 21, Edward Alfred John Mayne, and No. 40, Thomas Biddle Bunney, the other two last cases, are first applications; the former is one of two fatherless children, left by an old member of the Royal Military Lodge, No. 1449, and the latter one of two left by a former member of the Trinity Lodge, No. 254, Warwick.

Six of the children have neither parent living, and all of these now appear on the list for the first time. No. 27, Robert Melhuish, is one of a family of seven, the father of whom was initiated in St. Peter's Lodge, No. 1125, Devon. No. 28, Sidney Walter Watts, one of a family of two children of an old member of the Pattison Lodge, No. 913, Kent. No. 38, George Frederick Johnston, one of six left by a Past Master of the Marquis of Granby Lodge, No. 124, Durham. No. 43, William Waspe, one of four left by an old member of the Nelson Lodge, No. 700, London. No. 44, Frank Ernest Hancock, one of two children of the late Bro. Hancock, well known to Masons in the West end of London as a member of the St. James's Lodge, No. 765, the City of Westminster, No. 1563, and the Rothesay, No. 1687, and also in connection with a Lodge of Instruction which for many years met at his house in Jermyn-street; and No. 48, Oliver Lancelot Brister, one of the four children of a brother initiated in the Southern Star Lodge, No. 1158 who afterwards became a founder of the Caxton Lodge, No. 1853, both of London.

The somewhat meagre details we have given of the above eleven cases are ample, we are convinced, to awaken the sympathy of every reader when the special claims surrounding each case is taken into consideration. In the first five the chance of securing the coveted place in the School ends with the election of next month, while in the latter six, the children, with their brothers and sisters, are left without father or mother. How gladly would we see the names of each one of these eleven lads among the successful at the close of the poll on the 12th. Is such a display of Masonic charity possible?

As so many of the remaining candidates are first application cases, we purpose, first, to analyse those who have taken part in previous elections, and conclude with a brief summary of those who have not. No. 7, Joseph Wood, and five other children of a late member of the Finsbury Lodge, No. 861, London, are now dependent on their widowed mother. The lad was a candidate at the last election, and on that occasion polled 107 votes. No. 3, Albert Taylor, has already contested three elections, but so far has only secured 36 votes; he is one of five children now dependent on the widow of an old Past Master of the Tranquillity Lodge, No. 274, East Lancashire. No. 9, Otto René John Fox, is also one of five dependent children, left to the care of the widow of an old member of the South Saxon Lodge, No. 311, Sussex. The lad was a candidate at the last election, and on that occasion had 912 votes polled on his behalf, a number which, if repeated next month, should render his admission to the School all but secure. No. 5, Joseph Thomas Andrews, is one of four children left by a late Past Master of the Upton Lodge, No. 1227, London. In October last, when he competed for the first time, he had 122 votes polled on his behalf. We were well acquainted with the late Bro. Andrews, and should be very pleased to see his son admitted to the benefits of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. No. 10, Percy Haslem Matthews, has a sister in the Girls' School, but there are still four children dependent on the mother, the widow of a Past Master of the Furness Lodge, No. 995, West Lancashire, who also took part in the foundation of the Arthur John Brogden Lodge, No. 1715. Ten votes were polled on behalf of the lad at the last election. No. 4, Percy Gibbs and two other children are dependent on their widowed mother; the father was a member of the Royal Gloucester Lodge, No. 130, Hants and Isle of Wight, and one of the Founders of Chapter No. 319. The boy has already taken part in two elections, but so far only eleven votes have been polled on his behalf. No. 8, Herbert Benjamin Plows, son of an old member of the Vitruvian Lodge, No. 87, London, has been more successful, 517 votes having already been recorded for him, although he has been only once before the subscribers; he is one of three children dependent on a widowed mother. No. 6, Frederick Tom Webb, stands perhaps the best chance among the whole of the candidates on the list, for in October last, when he applied for the first time, no less than 1009 votes were recorded for him; he and one other child are dependent on their mother, who is the widow of a brother initiated in the Lodge of Israel, No. 205, London, who was also one of the Founders of the Eccleston Lodge, No. 1624. No. 2, George Cannon, has already appeared at the last three elections, and now comes forward with 19 votes in hand; he is the sole dependent child of the widow of a brother of the St. Peter's Lodge, No. 481, Northumberland. No. 13, William Archer Stocken, also an only child dependent on a widowed mother, secured 349 votes in October last; his father was a member of the Cecil Lodge, No. 449, Herts. No. 12, Walter Berry Freeman, is one of nine children, of whom one is partially provided for, who comprise the family of Bro. J. W. Freeman, a Past Master of the Justice Lodge, No. 147, London; both of this lad's parents are living, and at the last election they were enabled to secure 806 votes on behalf of their son's candidature for the Boys'

School; if they can only be fortunate enough to repeat this number next month the lad's admission to the School is tolerably certain.

The other cases—twenty-six in number—are all first applications. There is one family of eight, dependent on a widowed mother; two of seven, one of six, three of five, five of four, four of three, two of two, and five of one; while in one case there are five children, of whom two are partially provided for; another where there are two, of whom one is partially provided for; and one case where five children are dependent, both parents being alive. In three of the cases the lads have sisters in the Girls' School, these being No. 16, Bryan Hanby Holmes; No. 19, Robinson Midgley; and No. 47, Charles Sidney Buckley.

The day of election, the 12th proximo, will be a day of rejoicing to a large majority of the families interested in the contest, for nearly two-thirds of the candidates who go to the poll can be admitted. This is an exceptionally favourable condition of affairs, especially as at the present time so much distress prevails, and we hope it will prove an incentive to those brethren who have already given in their names as Stewards for the next Festival of the Institution to redouble their efforts, while to some of those interested in the candidates who will go to the poll we trust it may prove sufficient inducement to secure their services in a similar capacity. The brethren rejoice when it is possible to declare a large number of vacancies; do they remember at the same time what is needed to maintain the children who are elected to fill those vacancies, or the demand there always is for fresh vacancies? Increased subscriptions on behalf of the Institution is the only method of keeping the supply any way equal to the demand.

"OUR NEXT CHAIRMAN."

The shapeless masses—the materials—
Lie everywhere about us. What we need
Is the celestial fire to change the flint
Into transparent crystal, bright and clear.
That fire is genius!

IT is hardly necessary to remind our readers how eminently the above lines of Longfellow apply to a Masonic ruler. Whether he be the Master of a Lodge, of a Province, or the Chairman of one or other of the Festivals which occur year by year in connection with the Charitable Institutions of the Order, the fire of genius is needed, to enable him to utilize the materials which lie about him, so as to change the shapeless flint into the brightest and clearest of crystal; in other words, so to adapt himself to the circumstances of the moment as to ensure from every one about him the brightest unanimity and the clearest encouragement. At most of the meetings to which we have incidentally referred this appears to require no very great effort. The masses there can hardly be said to be shapeless, inasmuch as each portion is well acquainted with the share he is expected to take in the proceedings of the day, and appears to only need a word from a leader to ensure the programme being properly carried out; but in this respect appearances are somewhat deceptive. That such meetings invariably progress and end as they should do is not the result of mere chance, but it is rather because the brethren who undertake the lead—the chairmanship—of them are endowed with that fire which is needed to change the rough to the perfect; and if one meeting may appear to progress more smoothly than another the cause may often be found in the degree of genius displayed by the Chairman. He must know just when and how to humour his audience; he must lead, and yet seem to follow; he must rule, and at the same time appear to be the servant of those he rules; while in numberless ways must he be prepared to meet emergencies—which arise even in the most peaceful and unanimous of gatherings, and which if neglected or misunderstood may have unfortunate results, even if they do not culminate in ultimate disaster. The great point with the chairman of a large assembly is to keep his audience on good terms both with themselves and their leader, and to do this he requires no small portion of that celestial fire which the poet has told us can work the most wonderful changes. the brother of whom we are writing has had a long and brilliant career, and it is not difficult to quote examples of his ability to endorse our opinion that he possesses the celestial fire of genius to a marked degree. In many spheres of life he has had all the means of action, the shapeless masses everywhere about him, and in all—whether it has been as a Soldier, a Provincial Grand Master, or a Chairman—has he proved himself capable of changing "the flint into the crystal;" while from the roughest materials he has produced the brightest and clearest of jewels.

"Our next Chairman" was born on the 22nd September 1814, and, like many with whom he has since been intimately associated, was educated at Eton. In his eighteenth year—in July 1832—he entered the army, and soon rose to the highest dignities of that profession. He served at the Mauritius and in the East Indies, until 1840, as Adjutant of the 9th Regiment. He then filled the office of Military Secretary to the Governor General of Jamaica, until 1843, and three years later acted in a similar capacity to the Governor General of Canada. From 1846 to 1853 he was Regimental Adjutant of the Grenadier Guards. He served during the whole of the Crimean campaign; as Assistant Adjutant General to the first, and afterwards the Light Division. He was present at the battles of Alma, Inkerman, and Tchernaza, and at the attack on the Redan. He was chief of the Staff to the Allied Expedition to Kertch, under Sir George Brown. He was twice mentioned in despatches, and received the rank of Colonel for distinguished service in the field. He rose to the rank of Major General in 1868, Lieutenant General in 1876, and General in 1878, retiring from the Service in 1881, after being associated with it for nearly fifty years. He was created a Companion of the Bath in 1855, is an Officer of the Legion of Honour, and of the Order of the Medjidi. He has received the Crimean medal, with three clasps, and also the Turkish medal. He commanded at Shorncliffe from 1867 to 1870, and at Chatham from 1870 to 1873, and since 1876 has been Colonel of the 95th (Derbyshire) Regiment. He is a J.P. for Middlesex, for the city and county of Dublin, and for Westminster, and at the present time is the Masonic ruler of the Province of Surrey, having been appointed Provincial Grand Master in 1871, and Provincial Grand Superintendent in 1873.

"Our next Chairman" was initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry in St. John's Lodge, Quebec, in 1845; he became a joining member of the Lodge of Friendship, No. 6, London, on the 10th June 1852, and served the office of Worshipful Master in that Lodge in 1858. He also joined the Alpha Lodge, and is at the present time one of the oldest member of that distinguished body. He was present at the meeting of this Lodge when H.R.H. the Prince of Wales initiated his eldest son, Prince Albert Victor, and in recounting his experiences thereof at a subsequent meeting of his Provincial Grand Lodge he said, that he had not only been struck by the way in which the ceremony had been performed by the Prince of Wales, but also by the attention paid by the young Prince during his initiation. Our hero was exalted into Royal Arch Masonry during his sojourn in Canada, and joined the Chapter of Friendship, No. 6, on the 27th June 1851, and was installed as First Principal thereof in 1860. He was appointed Senior Warden of the Grand Lodge of England in 1855, and, as we have said, Provincial Grand Master of Surrey in 1871, and Provincial Grand Superintendent of the same County in 1873. He was also advanced to the degree of Mark Master Mason in Canada, and joined the Carnarvon Lodge, No. 7 on the English Register, 18th May 1876. He was one of the founders, and the first W.M. of the Studholme Lodge of Mark Master Masons, No. 197, and was appointed Junior Grand Warden of the Mark Degree in 1876. He is also Provincial Prior of the Order of the Temple for Kent and Surrey, and was Great Prior of the Supreme Council 33° in 1878. It will thus be seen that in Masonry also "Our next Chairman" has achieved the highest distinctions. The Province of Surrey has progressed and prospered greatly under his rule. In 1871, when he was appointed to govern the Craft in the Province there were under a dozen Lodges, now there are some thirty working under his guidance. Similarly the Royal Arch Degree has prospered, there having been but six Chapters in the Province of Surrey when he assumed its command in 1873, while at the present time there are eleven in active work. The brethren of Surrey have practically shown their love for their Provincial Grand Master by naming two of their Lodges—the Brownrigg, No. 1636, meeting at Kingston, and the Studholme,

No. 1591 — after him; but this does not represent even a part of the respect and esteem with which he is regarded by those under his rule. In July 1884 he had the honour of holding a special meeting of his Provincial Grand Lodge at Redhill, for the purpose of receiving the Most Worshipful the Grand Master H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and the Princess of Wales, on the occasion of their laying the foundation stone of the new Schools of the Royal Asylum of St. Ann's Society. In April of the preceding year a somewhat similar pleasure devolved on "Our next Chairman," the visitor on that occasion being H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, who journeyed to Bagshot for the purpose of laying the foundation stone of the new church of St. Anne's in that town. On each of these occasions the ruler, the officers and the brethren of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Surrey were most active in assisting in the work, but, perhaps, none more so than the brother of whom we are now writing, who, likewise, in many other ways has taken an active part in the affairs of the County with which he is so intimately associated.

The subject of our sketch has not been unmindful of the claims of the Masonic Charitable Institutions, to each of which he has given his support in years gone by; while the title by which we have designated him at the head of these remarks, proves that he has neither lost his love for our noble Institutions or his desire to do his utmost on their behalf. He will act as Chairman at the Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, which will take place on Wednesday, the 19th of May next, and which, we trust, will be a great success. He is not new to the work which will then devolve upon him, for he undertook a similar duty on behalf of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution in 1883. On that occasion he proved himself a most capable President, and the efforts he then made, supported as they were by the brethren of his Province, proved most beneficial to the Benevolent Institution. That similar exertions will be made on behalf of the Girls' School, by "Our next Chairman" and by the brethren of his Province, there is no doubt, and that an equally satisfactory result may follow we have little fear.

All the means of action,
The shapeless masses—the materials—
Lie everywhere about us;

and if it is in the power of one individual to exercise any influence on those materials, "Our next Chairman" is the man to accomplish it, and as so much depends on the result of his labours, and on the labours of those who will assist him, we hope that the day of the Festival will prove that the celestial fire of genius has been strong enough in him to once more

MASONIC TRIPLES.

Part III.—The Ornamentation.

MASSIVE proportions, extending in detail to the stones of the edifice (Josephus mentions a length of forty cubits), called for and received an artistic ornamentation for the temple equally as grand. We may be sure, were history entirely silent, that Tyrian art was capable, as was Egyptian architecture, also, to rise to the majesty of the occasion. The massive stones composing Solomon's house were worthy of chronicle, much more those of the house of the Lord. The temple was wainscoted with cedar-wood, which was covered with gold. The boards within the temple were ornamented with beautiful (threefold) carvings representing cherubim, palms and flowers. The ceiling was supported by beams, also of cedar, and the wall which separated the holy from the Most Holy Place is described in the language of Scripture: "So Solomon overlaid the house within with pure gold; and he made a partition by the chains of gold before the oracle, and he overlaid it with pure gold." Solomon also "overlaid the upper chambers with pure gold." Within the Holy of Holies stood only the Ark of the Covenant; but within the Holy Place were ten golden candlesticks and the altar of incense. The altar in the temple had steps before it upon which an ascent was made, but neither the tabernacle nor the second temple's altar had these steps. The promise made to Solomon was threefold, as follows: "Concerning this house which thou art building, if thou wilt walk in my statutes [italics ours], and execute my judgments, and keep all my commandments, to walk in them; then will I perform my word unto thee, which I spake unto David thy father." Masonically, the ornamentation of the temple may be used to set forth the moral and spiritual edifice referred to in the nine classes of Masonic emblems; eight of which refer to the public and private duties of the craftsman, and the ninth teaching the doctrine of the resurrection of the body in a manner which may not be communicated to the outside world.

What then is the conclusion of this whole matter? And what is Masonry viewed from the Speculative standpoint as revealed by the mystic number three?

The colour of Ancient Craft Masonry is blue. It typifies truth, friendship and fidelity. The first of this triple is the foundation, the other two are attributes or consequents. This points us back to the monitorial explanation of Masonry: "Truth is its centre." From this point radiates the whole duty of man, introducing the symbol of the Saints John, to whom all Lodges in Christian lands are dedicated. This emblem is a "certain point within a circle, embordered by two perpendicular parallel lines, representing these two saints; upon the vortex of the circle rests the Holy Scriptures. The point within the circle represents an individual brother; the circle the boundary line, beyond which he is never to allow his passions to betray him. In going around the circle he must necessarily touch upon these two lines, as well as the Holy Bible, which teaches that while a Mason keeps himself thus circumscribed within its precepts, it is impossible he should materially err." All the graces which adorn the true Masonic character must, therefore, be a true exponent of truth. Truth is a triple: (a) Truth of the thing, (b) Truth of knowledge, (c) Truth of the sign. If the foundation be sure, then the superstructure is a living reality. To illustrate our thought:

1. The truth of the thing. Apply the number three and we find that all the ancient religions were based upon a central, threefold object. The myths of heathendom and representations of the one body and three faces, the constantly recurring number three in the heathen mythology holds the truth in a shadow. Our position taken in part I. is that the revelation of that truth belongs to Christianity.* That the solution of the case rests upon the fact disclosed by the three great lights of Masonry; there are things which were hid from other eyes and ages of the world but which are revealed in the person of Jesus Christ. The doctrine of the Trinity is one of these. The Name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost is a revelation. In Christian lands, therefore, the doctrine of the Trinity, the truth of Being, cannot be antagonistic to Masonry because the search is for more light, and no brother should rest satisfied with half a light or a whole light partially revealed. Both points of the compasses are above the square in the Master's Lodge. We here see how it is possible for Masonry to be universal. The Institution is logical, and does not require an impossibility. The brother's conception of the Eternal God in other than Christian lands may indeed be held in shadow to-day; the same may be true of the Jewish craftsman, but that does not debar him from full Masonic fellowship, nor does it follow that the Institution is antagonistic, in consequence, to the Church of the Living God. As proof that this statement has the endorsement of eminent Doctors of Divinity we refer to almost any list of such ministers in any of the branches of Historic Christianity. Suppose we do find this truth foreshadowed in heathen rites, this much can be said: There is a universality in all which seems to point to one common origin. These traditions have come down, distorted oftentimes, but they have the same underlining which crops out here and there, and these and all show that similar principles are at work everywhere The various religions of the earth have a common basis of truth, and all the lines converge in the religion of Christianity. This aptly describes the Masonic Institution and gives the best reason why the Worshipful Master truly says to the candidate: "Masonry is a progressive Institution."

2. Truth of knowledge. The emblem referred to is a most interesting study in this connection. It rationally shows why the Masonic Fraternity may plant itself firmly upon the truth, teaching the religion of humanity; and at the same time be consistent in adhering to the ancient landmarks which have come down from time immemorial. We quote again from a brother's MS., by permission: "You do right well, brethren, to acknowledge the dignity and supremacy of God and the Holy Place where He has placed His Name." The temple's true symbolism points to the church; to man redeemed, disenthralled from all appearance of inconsistency the result of human weakness, and suffered for a season, to a perfectness revealed only in the Holy Scriptures. "You do right well to keep in mind the memory of the blessed St. John the Baptist, that ancient patron of our Order, and St. John the Evangelist. These two illustrious names are blended in one single purpose of setting forth the majesty of the God-made Man. The one was a Jew, a forerunner of the Son of God and Son of Mary, the other followed after and set up the pillars of that spiritual temple whose height, length, depth and breadth now fills the four quarters of the globe. One might say that wherever a Jew is found there is the brother of St. John the Baptist, a witness of Christian truth, and wherever a Christian is found there is the brother of St. John the Evangelist, a witness of the truth which the Jews of old believed. So, too, it is sometimes said that the New Testament lies concealed in the Old Testament, and the Old Testament stands revealed in the New Testament. The world's history bears witness to both, a sort of threefold witness to the truth. From the beginning both the Church of God and Masonry have ever done honour to the illustrious Saints John. Masonry has ever been the handmaid of the church. She has ever cherished the principles and doctrines of these two most glorious champions of right. The one was beheaded for boldly denouncing vice; the other was thrown into a cauldron of boiling oil at Rome, and was preserved alive, and so the terrified Romans banished the Evangelist to Patmos Isle, and there he received the Revelation of the future of the church. Where or when has Masonry ever countenanced vice? Where or when has Masonry ever obstructed the path of Christianity? Never. If tradition be true, St. John the Evangelist, in the decline of life, organized the scattered bands of roving Operative Masons and formed the first Grand Lodge. No doubt, too, he taught them the truth as it is in Jesus. Nobody claims that St. John Baptist, or St. John Evangelist were more occupied with Masonry than with their first duty in God's church. But, mind you, if the universal consent of the Christian Church gives witness to the truth of God, so too the universal consent of the whole Masonic world gives witness to the fact that these two were ancient patrons of Masonry. Masonry is not mixed up as a factor of church history, for reasons which must be plain to every Mason. Neither is Masonry mixed up with political history, for the same very good reason. While its foundation principles underlie all moral religious truth and all good political government, yet it is not a controller of either, and never has been or can be used as a tool of either."

3. Truth of the sign. One definition of veritas signi is: "This consists in its adequateness or conformity to the thing signified. The truth and adequacy of signs belong to enunciation in logic." To the mind of the writer many Masons, while they write about the Institution, mix up things which do not really belong to it. They fail to discriminate between the temple workmen and the temple worshippers, and that is why one hears a brother now and then declare that the Lodge is good enough church for him. Well, anybody who is well versed in Masonry knows that it teaches the highest kind of morality. The character, to pass muster when tried by the Overseer's squares, must be either oblong or square; the ornamentation of the temple was pure gold in material; but nowhere does Masonry profess to give us help. The Order teaches love to the brethren, charity to all, to be sure, yet the teachings stop short of saying that Divine help must come through it from God. In other words Masonic teachings should accord with the genius of the Institution—an auxiliary indeed to Christianity, but neither a religion nor Christianity itself. The dedication of the temple by Solomon recognized this fact. He looked to God and prayed after the temple was completed. It is the workman's privilege to be a workshiper also, but the distinction should be always kept in mind. We say the craftsman at his labour is doing his duty, and a man in prayer is fulfilling the same service, but work is not prayer, although it may be sanctified by prayer. The brother, therefore, who claims that his Lodge is his church may as well claim it for his political governor, which is absurd. The truth of the sign is further shown in the allusion to the spiritual temple in the heavens, of which Solomon's was a type, the place "where all good Masons hope at last to arrive, by the aid of that theological ladder which Jacob, in his vision, saw ascending from earth to heaven: the three principal rounds of which are denominated Faith, Hope and Charity." This leads us logically to the discussion of a triple which has furnished the arts with one of the most exquisite subjects for the exercise of human skill, and to consider the doctrine of the resurrection as taught by our ritual. Like the other triples mentioned the subject is a vast one, and within the compass of three articles nothing but bare outlines may be given. Analyzed, Faith has something of the expectation of Hope, and Hope something of the desires of Love. Faith justifies at the bar where the law condemns. Hope lifts the soul above the dark and dismal shadow of mortality, explaining the ninth and last class of Masonic emblems. Charity (love) animates it to run the heavenly race until the crown immortal shall be won and worn. Like the colours of the rainbow, these graces maintain their distinctions, yet melt and soften into each other by imperceptible degrees. The first of this triple is Faith, and is superhuman. Faith comes down from above, and is the gift of God. Faith deals with spiritual, and is itself spiritual. We therefore placed Faith as the foundation-stone of our theory of the Masonic moral edifice. The true Masonic hope is Christian hope, whether held in the shadow of expectation or in the light of believed revelation. If this is not conceded, who shall particularize which hope may influence the mind from among the various others—good hopes and bad hopes, true hopes and false hopes—hopes laid up on earth that will disappoint the heart, and hopes garnered in heaven that will never fade? In the language of our symbolism, which temple shall it be—the earthly or the spiritual building; Solomon's temple which crumbles in ruins, or the one not made with hands, eternal in the heavens? We referred to Hope as the superstructure of the Mason's edifice. Is the symbolism of the foundation and building true or false? The ornamentation consisted principally of pure gold, so the ultimate virtue, Charity, is the highest in rank. Indeed Faith and Hope may be reckoned merely as preliminaries—the instrumental means of bringing her into exercise: "For the end of the commandment is love [charity] out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned." At the gate of death the brother takes leave of Faith and Hope. They have been his solace at every stage of the journey. Were it possible that he could drop a tear as he enters the mansions of our Father's house above, the spiritual temple of Revelation, it would be as bidding an eternal farewell to the two, but he is assured that Faith may indeed be lost to sight, Hope end in fruition, yet "Charity extends beyond the grave, through the boundless realms of eternity."

If with our threefold key we unlock the door, the doctrine of the resurrection of the body (which is as firmly held by Masonry as truth itself) is found to have been shadowed in both Greek and other mythology. All the deliverers from death showed forth the desire that was working in the minds of the Hebrews themselves, and which was not clear, but which was made clear in Him who declared Himself to be the Resurrection and the Life. This doctrine of the resurrection became the great doctrine of the Church. The types and shadows went first, a schoolmaster to lead men to Christ. Solomon's temple, with all its threes, and its flight of stairs of three, five and seven steps, leading up on the inside, sets forth the truth in mystery while it does not declare it. We of this later age can see that Solomon builded better than he knew; that the Holy of Holies represents to us heaven itself; that the pilgrimage of man was from the lower to the higher; that the Great High Priest as a forerunner has now entered once for all into heaven, and that all the mysteries of worship were hedged about by the number three, which occurred in every measure and proportion. This was a revelation from heaven; "See," said the Lord to Moses, "that thou make everything according to the pattern showed thee in the Mount." Now all this was not changed when Christianity came. What before was dead form became spiritual and full of life. A spiritual worship was to take the place of what before could not give life. So the revelation of Saint John in Patmos agrees with what Moses saw in the Mount, and the Christian church has its spiritual service and ceremonies and forms which are founded upon the pattern of heavenly things. tion, with all its beauty, its parallel symbolism of Christianity, in the degrees of Ancient Craft Masonry, can never take the place of the Church, and the consistent craftsman has no desire to place it in a false position, whether through the so-called inffable degrees or otherwise?—Voice of Masonry.

KEEP TO THE STANDARD.

FREEMASONRY is not a reformatory institution. It was never designed to be such. She will admit none possessing blemishes, either physical or moral. The candidate must pass muster on the cardinal virtues, or he is rejected. So carefully guarded are the portals of the Masonic Institution that the candidate for initiation must pass a most searching examination. While passing this ordeal, charity is unknown. The candidate has no rights, but is subjected to the unanimous consent of the members of the Lodge. One could hardly imagine that any institution could exercise more caution, or be more practically careful about the admission of new material. This great precaution is necessary and imperative, because the object of the Masonic Institution is not to make the weak strong, but the strong stronger.

In addition to all this, the candidate must not be solicited to join; no inducements must be offered him; he is to form his own favourable opinion of the institution—and how? By observation; by examining and comparing the members of the Order with the profane. The Masonic society must stand the test of cold, stern criticism. The profane will exercise no charity for any shortcomings of the Order, or any of its members. Is it not essential that when we are weighed in the balances that we be not found wanting? Freemasonry can rest on no other foundation than the impenetrable rock of moral integrity. Those members who cannot stand the test of the criticism of the profane, are its worst enemies.

When a brother sinks or falls, it is our bounden duty to lift him up. The Masonic plane of each member certainly should be as high as the plane demanded of those desiring initiation. But the question is often asked, "Suppose you lift an erring brother up, what then?" "Suppose reasonable efforts have been used to elevate him, and he sinks still lower, then what?" "Suppose he promises to do better, and will not, or at least does not, then what?" "Shall we suspend him?" "Shall we cast him out?" This brings us to the point where it becomes necessary to exercise judgment and Masonic charity. I say, "Masonic charity," because Masons are taught and exhorted to exercise charity.

Now let us understand; let us reason together concerning Masonic charity. There are two kinds, (1) Emotional, (2) Practical.

Practical charity is controlled by reason and common sense.

Emotional charity has no aim, no object, no direction, no organization; it is at the mercy of the storms and winds, and the waves of the emotions.

Practical charity is just the opposite. Emotional charity is the charity of talk, of inaction, and generally costs the bestower nothing. Practical charity is that of action, of reality. It always costs the bestower something.

He who is controlled by emotional charity, considers the individual of more importance than the Lodge—than the Order; while he who is governed by practical charity claims that the Lodge or the Order is of more importance than the individual. The tendency of the former is to sacrifice the Order for the sake of the individual; that of the latter to sacrifice the individual for the sake of the Order.

The Virtue, Temperance, warns us to be cautious in the exercise of charity; we must not be too sympathetic, too emotional, neither must we be too cold nor too practical. We must, however, keep up the standard: and it becomes each and every Lodge to see that the moral plane of each member is, at least, as high as the moral plane demanded of its initiates.—Texas Masonic Journal.

UNION LODGE, No. 414.

THE regular meeting was held at the Masonic Hall, Reading, on 16th instant. Bros. F. Blackwell W.M., D. H. Witherington S.W., J. W. Martin J.W., R. C. Mount P.M. Treasurer, A. W. Parry Secretary, C. G. Hawkes S.D., W. Sherwood J.D., John T. Dodd D.C., J. C. B. Tirbutt, C. P. Rayner, and J. R. Hayward Stewards; W. Hemmings Tyler; Past Masters M. J. Withers I.P.M., Charles Oades, C. Stephens, S. Wheeler jun.; Bros. A. Livings, W. Bonny, B. Ruddock, G. S. Galt, W. J. Maurice, H. P. Knill, W. G. Miller, Richard Dowsett. Visitors—Bros. C. H. Stubington Secretary 2043, G. W. Webb W.M. 2043, Charles Slaughter I.G. 1101, Walter Blackwell, T. P. Stewart 1101, B. W. Bennett J.D., Cyrill B. Tubbs S.D. 2043, Thomas Cooke Treasurer 2043, W. Hickie J.D. 1101. Lodge was opened in due form, and with the singing of an anthem composed by Bro. Tirbutt Past Provincial Grand Organist. The minutes of the last regular meeting having been read and confirmed, the Lodge was opened in the second and third degrees, and Brother Alexander Bonny was raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason. Lodge was resumed, and Bro. Mount moved that the sum of £50 be paid to reduce the mortgage debt upon the Lodge buildings. This was seconded by Bro. Withers, and carried unanimously. The Secretary reported that a circular had been received, soliciting a contribution from the Lodge to the Oban Masonic Hall Building Fund. The W.M. gave notice that at the next regular Lodge he would move that the sum of £15 15s be devoted to Charity. Business being ended, Lodge was closed.

OAKLEY LODGE, No. 694.

AN event of a novel and interesting character, in the shape of a concert in which all the performers were either members or relatives of members of this Lodge, took place in the Town Hall, Basingstoke, on the 16th instant. The chair was taken by Bro. the Rev. A.G. Barker, of St. Leonard's, Sherfield, the W.M. of the Oakley Lodge, who explained that the absence of Bro. W. B. Beach, M.P., the R.W. Provincial Grand Master of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, was due to pressure of Parliamentary duties. The hall was well filled, with a thoroughly appreciative audience. Among the Masons present were Bros. E. Adams, Rev. A. G. Barker, J. L. Brooks, E. P. Conran, Rev. J. H. Chadwick, J. Dew, C. R. Dale, J. Gibson, C. J. Jacob, Arthur Lamb, F. Lazenby, G. Lear, J. W. Lodwidge, F. D. Miller, A. Portsmouth, J. Puntis, Rev. J. Scott Ramsay, Percy Randolph, T. Sherwood, C. Franklin Simmons, J. B. Soper, H. J. Thatcher, W. W. Tyrrell, Rev. G. S. Ward, S. T. Webb, J. Wheeler, E. C. White, D. White, and the Rev. E. Nelson Williams. Among others present, there were also—Miss Allen, Miss Allnutt and party, Mrs. and Miss Beach and party, Mrs. Chadwick, Mr. and Mrs. Cannon, Mrs. Drew and party, Mr. Field, Miss Graysmark and party, Dr. Hayes, Mrs. Hussey, Mrs. Knight and party, Mrs. Lamb and party, Mrs. Lazenby, Miss Lee, Rev. W. P. Lysaght, the Misses May, Mrs. J. Moody and party, Miss Millard, the Misses Portsmouth, the Misses Randolph, Mr. J. R. Rawlence, Mrs. W. Snow, Mr. C. J. Stevens, Mrs. Salter, Mr. and Mrs. Stark, Mr. and Mrs. Sapp, Mrs. Tyrrell and party, Mrs. S. T. Webb, Mrs. F. C. White, &c. The programme included some of the best compositions, and consisted, with three exceptions, entirely of vocal music. The part songs were admirably given, and no wonder that the Chairman's warmest enthusiasm was excited in speaking subsequently of the musical talent which was displayed. The first was Sir S. Bennett's "Come live with me," performed by Mrs. E. Adams, Miss B. Powell, Mrs. Conran, Mrs. Smith, Rev. J. H. Chadwick, Mr. Thatcher, and Mr. D. White. Hatton's part song, "I met her in a quiet lane," was performed by Mrs. E. Adams, Miss Dew, Mrs. F. Batch, Mrs. Smith, Rev. J. H. Chadwick, Mr. Thatcher, and Mr. D. White; and Pinsuti's "Good night, good night, beloved," received a perfect treatment. The harmony being of the choicest description. The performers were—Miss B. Powell, Miss Dew, Mrs. E. Adams, Mrs. Conran, Mrs. F. Blatch, Mrs. Smith, Rev. J. H. Chadwick, Mr. Thatcher, and Mr. D. White. Two other interesting and successful efforts of vocal harmony were the ladies' trios—"Rise again, glad summer sun" (Leslie) and "Wreathe ye the steps" (Schumann), sung by Miss B. Powell, Miss Dew, Mrs. E. Adams, Mrs. Conran, Mrs. F. Batch, and Mrs. Smith. Mr. Thatcher gave the favourite song "Anchored" a thoroughly appropriate treatment. The Chairman explained that his daughter was absent, suffering from a cold, and that Miss B. Powell had kindly undertaken to sing in her place. Miss B. Powell's welcome voice was then heard in the song "Because," for which she was loudly applauded. In the second part Miss B. Powell had chosen the subject "My lodging is on the cold ground" (17th century), which she gave with artistic expression. The appearance of Miss W. Lamb with Mr. H. E. Powell for the pianoforte duet, "A Fairy Dance," was heartily greeted, and the performance was as earnestly applauded. The audience was also much indebted to Miss Bush, who kindly gave two songs, "The Last Dream" (Cowen), and "Masks and Faces" (Molloy). Mr. D. White sang "From far the last" (Stephen Adams), and "The stirrup cup" in good form. "La Pleine" (Raff) was a most enjoyable pianoforte solo, cleverly played by Miss Powell, to whom also several of the vocalists were indebted for discriminate accompaniments. Mrs. E. Adams and Miss B. Powell gave as a duet "None shall part us," from Sullivan's "Light of the World," and "Long years ago," from Lawrence," a much-appreciated performance. Miss Drew, in singing "Sunshine and rain" (Blumenthal), and "The old and the young Marie" (Cowen)—two favourite songs—has an excellent voice, and was much applauded. Mrs. E. Adams was also much enjoyed in the song, "Love hailed a little maid." Miss Day and the Rev. J. H. Chadwick were successful in the duet "Secret voices" (Marsials), as were also Miss Ellen Ward and Mr. H. E. Powell in the pianoforte duet "Spanish Dances" (Mozkowski). The programme being concluded, the Chairman, who had been full of merriment during the evening, referred in eloquent terms to the galaxy of beauty and the musical talent which had been so conspicuous in this splendid entertainment, which had been originated and brought to a successful issue by Bro. Dew, with the object not only of providing a pleasant evening, but of bringing a little grist to the mill—in other words, to replenish the funds of the Cottage Hospital. He (the Chairman) was quite confident that there was great talent in the Oakley Lodge, and when he reported this concert to the Provincial Grand Master, he would no doubt sanction his challenging any other Lodge to produce a body of performers with such great talent and such good looks. Dr. Hayes proposed a vote of thanks to Mr. Barker for taking the chair, and this having been briefly replied to, the Masonic National Anthem brought the concert to a close. Financially the result has been that Bro. Dew has been enabled to add £20 to the funds of the cottage Hospital.
