A WEEKLY RECORD OF MASONIC INTELLIGENCE.

SANCTIONED BY THE GRAND LODGE OF ENGLAND.

VOL. VIII.—No. 183. SATURDAY, 29th JUNE 1878. [PRICE THREEPENCE. Registered at the G.P.O. as a Newspaper.

OUR EIGHTH VOLUME.

THIS week we have great pleasure in presenting to our readers the opening number of our Eighth Volume. We have no intention of boring them with eulogistic comments on the success which has attended our efforts thus far, but it is well that we should make this an opportunity for tendering to them our heartfelt thanks for the very considerable, and we rejoice to say, consistently increasing, support they have been pleased to accord our efforts on behalf of Freemasonry. We have striven within the modest limits of what our Gallic neighbours might perchance describe, if it were their case, as our "petit possible," to promote the welfare of the Craft, and we feel that we may take the flattering unction to our souls that these efforts of ours have met with a fair measure of success. At all events, while the great majority of our old friends remain to us, the number of new ones who have so kindly come forward to aid us, is, we may almost venture to say, a daily increasing one. This is most encouraging, for the pursuit of journalism, and especially of Masonic journalism, is not unattended with difficulties, and by no means free from disappointments. Of course, we should like to see Masonic literature more generally recognised among the Craft, but under the circumstances we have described, we have but slight ground for dissatisfaction, and even if we had any, we should feel it to be imperatively our duty to be silent. We strive to do our best, but literature is not a ware that can be unduly pushed. We can only hope that those we appeal to will appreciate our labours, and as we have steadfastly adhered to the programme we first marked out for ourselves, we must suppose that this appreciation has been exhibited. At all events, until satisfactory cause is shown, we shall continue in the same path, in the hope and belief that, as volume succeeds volume, we shall find our friends and supporters, as has been the case hitherto, continually as well as considerably on the increase. In one important particular we have been obliged, for the present, to break a series of contributions which, when complete, will be of the greatest value to the Craft. We allude, of course, to the momentary discontinuance of the Warrants of the Ancient Lodges. This, however, is explained by the absence of Bro. John Constable, to whose untiring efforts in procuring them we have been thus far indebted. On his return, however, which may be looked for in the autumn, we shall, with his assistance, resume their publication. It is possible we might have found means to continue the series in his absence, but to have done so would manifestly have been an act of grave injustice and discourtesy to a brother who has laboured so assiduously to assist us. As regards the future, we look forward to it with confidence, and we can only hope that when the time comes for us to announce the commencement of a fresh volume, that our friends will be as kindly disposed towards us as they are now. At all events, we shall spare no effort to secure so desirable a consummation.

MASONIC FETE IN DUBLIN.

ON Thursday of last week there was a grand Masonic gathering in the Exhibition Palace at Dublin, the occasion being the annual distribution of prizes to the Dublin Masonic Female Orphan Asylum, and the Boys' School attached to it. The absence of the Duke of Abercorn, K.G., the Grand Master, was a subject of general regret, and equally so the continued illness of his wife, which was the cause of such absence. However, the Craft found a most efficient President in Bro. Robert W. Shekleton, Q.C., the Deputy Grand Master, who was ably supported by Bros. Robert Warren, Grand Treasurer, the Rev. John James MacSorley, Grand Chaplain, Alderman Joseph Manning, Grand Senior, and Theophilus E. St. George, Grand Junior Deacon, George A. Stephens, Grand Superintendent of Works, George Moyers, Grand Director of Ceremonies, H. Minchin, G. Swd. Bearer, C. O. Grandison, G. Org., James Creed Meredith G.I.G., S. B. Oldham D.G. Secretary and Treasurer, and Archibald St. George Assist. Secretary. Among the representatives of Foreign Grand Lodges were Bros. Dr. Philip C. Smyley, Prussia, Captain George Huband, Alabama, U.S.A., George Hill Major, Quebec, and James H. Neilson, Egypt. There were likewise in attendance a numerous array of brethren both from the capital and the provinces. A procession having been formed, and Bro. Shekleton having taken the chair, that worthy and worshipful brother, after feelingly alluding to the absence of the Grand Master, and the cause which prevented his presiding, spoke at some length as to the merits of the Institution whose Festival was being that day celebrated, after which, Bro. Chaworth Ferguson read the report for the year then closing, from which it appeared that both financially and educationally the Asylum was in a very flourishing state. It had added £2,000 India 4 per cent. Stock to its invested moneys, and the pupils who had been trained in it were proving themselves worthy of the care and attention bestowed on them. Moreover, the health of the School had been most satisfactory. The report further stated that it was in contemplation to enlarge the School, the number of girls being at present forty-five, and it is hoped it may be found possible to increase this to sixty. With this view, negotiations are in progress for obtaining a suitable site for the enlarged premises, and plans are being prepared by the architect. This must involve a large additional expenditure, and a hope was expressed that the Craft would increase the support already extended to it, so as to meet the increased outlay. Bro. James Spaight, Limerick, proposed, and Bro. Hugh Holmes, Q.C., seconded the adoption of the report, which was agreed to unanimously, as was a resolution moved by Bro. Captain King Harman, M.P., and seconded by Bro. Thos. M'Mullen, of Cork, inviting the further co-operation of the Masonic body in support of the Asylum. A selection of music having been performed by the pupils, and the National Anthem having been sung, the procession was reformed and marched to a dais in the glass building, where the prizes and certificates were distributed to the successful pupils, both girls and boys. Having regard to the space at our command, it will be impossible to give the list in full, but the chief prizes were awarded as follow:—The Ffennell Prize, value £3, for Scripture and History to Frances Smith; Gertrude Gill, who gained it last year, receiving a Certificate. The Astley Prizes, 1st Division, English, went to (1) Gertrude Gill, (2) Frances Smith; and Second Division, French, (1) Frances Smith, (2) Gertrude Gill. The Nagle Prizes, for the highest general proficiency in Classes I. and II., were carried off in Class I. by Gertrude Gill, and in Class II. by Sophia Fenton. The Good Conduct Medals, presented by Bro. Samuel B. Oldham, and awarded by the votes of the pupils themselves, were given to Jane Crymble (silver medal), and Henrietta Richards (bronze medal). The proceedings, which were enlivened at intervals by the organ and the band of the 21st Fusileers, were brought to a close shortly afterwards.

MASONIC PORTRAITS. (No. 60.)

A BOON COMPANION.

His worth is warrant for his welcome hither,
If this be he you oft have wish'd to hear from.

IN all our experience of works of fiction there is probably no character which has so deeply impressed us with the lifelike nature of its portraiture as that of the immortal Pickwick. He is the embodiment of all that is genial and kind among men. A man of considerable wealth, amassed after long years of steady application, and having apparently no immediate relatives in whose career he could feel or take any interest, he set himself, while yet in the full vigour of mature manhood, to know something of his fellow men. When starting on his memorable travels, to accomplish this magnanimous purpose, he associated with himself not men of his own age, and likely, therefore, to be pretty much of the same mode of thinking as himself, but three or four young fellows, to whom, as regards years, it was possible for him, had he been so minded, to have stood in loco parentis. With these, who are as quaintly and humorously drawn as himself, and as true to life, he journeyed about from place to place, mixing in various societies, seeing, after his fashion, a good deal of both the bright and the dark sides of human nature, and creating for himself a host of staunch and firm friends, such as even he must have felt proud of. In his more immediate circle we find him not only respected, but beloved. It was no lip-service which was proffered him when occasion suggested or demanded it. Wherever he went, in whatever he did, all who came in contact with him took as deep an interest in his welfare as in their own affairs, and Pickwick, whether with or without his spectacles and gaiters, at Christmas festivities or at a wedding, at a cricket match or during an election, in the enjoyment of perfect freedom or in the Fleet, was the point within the circle towards which all other points gravitated. He, as it were, fascinated the people among whom he moved and had his being with the hearty geniality and warmth of his kindness, so that old and young and middle-aged alike, the inferior as well as his equal, were all irresistibly drawn towards him. One short speech of his devoted Sam Weller's will serve to show the nature and extent of this wonderful influence which he exerted over all. It is towards the end of his history, and when he suggests that his faithful servant should marry and leave his service—a proposition which is indignantly repelled in the following words:—"If you want a more polished sort o' feller, vell and good, have him; but vages or no vages, notice or no notice, board or no board, lodgin' or no lodgin', Sam Veller, as you took from the old inn in the Borough, sticks by you, come what come may; and let ev'rythin and ev'rybody do their wery fiercest, nothing shall ever perwent it!" And then, when Mr. Pickwick, as a last resource, points out to Sam that he is bound to consider the young woman also, the reply was instant: "'I do consider the young 'ooman, sir,' said Sam, 'I have considered the young 'ooman. I've spoke to her. I've told her how I'm sitivated; she's ready to vait till I'm ready, and I believe she vill. If she don't, she's not the young 'ooman I take her for, and I give her up vith readiness. You've know'd me afore, sir. My mind's made up, and nothing can ever alter it.'" Such a resolution Mr. Pickwick could not combat, and we read that "he derived at that moment more pride and luxury of feeling from the disinterested attachment of his humble friend, than ten thousand protestations from the greatest men living could have awakened in his breast." This is only one out of innumerable illustrations to be found in the Pickwick Papers of the fascination which its hero exercised on all around, and justifies the brief remark we made at the outset that in him is concentrated all that is genial and kind in human nature. We have also said that the chief characteristic about his portrait is that it is so entirely true to the life. Indeed, we can hardly picture to ourselves a social circle which does not include among its members one, at least, who may justly be said to belong to the species Pickwick, with his admirable satellites the Winkles, the Snodgrasses, and the Tupmans. This is certainly the case in Masonry, where there is always one who possesses the most eminent qualities of Mr. Pickwick. In fact, in an early number of this journal, one of our contributors sent us a short Masonic poem, entitled "My Brother," and he portrayed his hero as having both an outward and inward resemblance to Dickens's character.

"A pleasant man—a venerable file—
In gaiters, spectacles, and glossy tile;
For whom he meets a kindly word or smile—
My Brother!"

and in a footnote appended, he suggests that though Mr. Pickwick was not known to have been a Mason, he was essentially Masonic in feeling and action. There is, in short, no manner of doubt about it. It was impossible for him to stoop to speak ill of his neighbour; he would as soon have thought of marrying Mrs. Bardell to save himself from the unjust penalty inflicted in the memorable trial. Then, even in the most lugubrious circumstances he could be found retaining his natural placidity of demeanour. But chiefly remarkable was he for the unselfish desire that others should be happy, and in any way that he thought he could promote their happiness he was ever ready and willing to render service. His care for those in distress was not limited to a few conventional expressions of regret, while even those who had grievously wronged or offended found him their staunchest friend in adversity. He had his faults, of course. His temperament was sufficiently explosive in its character to have earned for him the cognomen of "Old Fireworks," and he could sharply rebuke any attempt to ridicule his peculiarities. For everything that partook of meanness he had a just and most profound contempt, while he worshipped religiously whatever in human nature was worthy of his praise and admiration. Are there not in the ranks of Freemasonry many who may be worthily designated as, in all these particulars, the Pickwicks of our Fraternity?—the men who are in the fullest and widest sense of the word charitable; that is, all kindness and consideration for others; ever thoughtful for their good name, while honourably silent as to their failings; ever ready to avenge themselves on those who have wronged them, by some return of kindness, especially if the wrongdoer has fallen into adverse circumstances; and determinedly hostile to whatever is mean and contemptible. One such, at all events, we have the good fortune to number among our friends, and him we present to our readers on this occasion. The details of his career will be brief, for the reason that we have spoken at greater length than is our wont as to the leading features by which our ideal of him is characterised. Moreover, he is known so well in the Provinces with which he is associated—we have met in Kent, in Middlesex, and in Surrey—as well as in the Metropolitan Lodges which he belongs to or visits, that it would appear as though we were anxious to flatter him unduly if we dwelt too long or circumstantially on his qualities of mind and heart. Turn we, therefore, to a sketch of his Masonic history, which, if brief, is, in every respect, creditable to him. He was initiated in the Royal Union Lodge, No. 382, Uxbridge, in 1868, and has held in it the important offices of Master and Treasurer. In 1872 he joined the Gooch Lodge, No. 1238, which meets at Twickenham, and at this moment most worthily fills the S.W.'s chair. In 1874 he became a joining member of the Royal Alfred Lodge, No. 780, at Kew, and in 1875, when the City of Westminster Lodge, No. 1563, was consecrated, he joined immediately afterwards, and at the present time holds the minor, but congenial, office of Wine Steward. He is likewise a member of the Earl of Carnarvon Lodge, No. 1642. He is Founder and was elected to fill the high position of first Worshipful Master of the Unity Lodge, No. 1637, which was consecrated in October 1876, and at the conclusion, last autumn, of his year of office, he was presented "with a very chaste and elegant Past Master's jewel," Bro. Adams—who handed it to him at the request of his successor—remarking, that it was offered by the members as a token of friendship, and as a slight recognition of the esteem in which he was held by the members of the Lodge. At the present time he combines in his own person the offices of I.P.M. and Treasurer, and when, later in the evening, his health was proposed, the W. Master laid especial stress on the services our worthy brother had rendered to the Masonic Institutions, and to the heartiness he invariably displayed in whatever related to the Craft. He was exalted to the Royal Arch degree in the year 1874, in the Hermes Chapter, No. 77, meeting at Gravesend, and now occupies the chair of Second Principal; and in the year following he joined the Royal Union Chapter, No. 382, Uxbridge, of which he has the honour to be J. Thus we find that, in the ten years which have elapsed since his initiation into our mysteries, he has occupied the chair of two Lodges, and has besides filled many other offices of dignity and trust, both in Lodge and Chapter. He is, indeed on the high road to still greater honour, for next year, no doubt, we shall be in a position to hail him as Z. of the Hermes Chapter, and if all goes well, as Z. of the Royal Union the year following. So much for the work he has done and the distinctions he has attained in Craft and Arch Masonry; but there is another field in which he has distinguished himself still more considerably. We have seen already that on his retirement from the chair of the Unity Lodge, a jewel was presented to him, and that in proposing his health, the W. Master spoke in particular of the eminent services he had rendered to our Masonic Institutions. The praise was worthily bestowed, for our respected brother is a Life Governor, and has served the office of Steward on five occasions for the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. He is also a Life Governor of, and has served three Stewardships for, the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and holds the same position among the subscribers to, and has rendered exactly the same services for, the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. We may, indeed, anticipate that in the case of each of these Institutions the Life Governorship will at no distant period be merged in the more important position of Vice-President, from which, at the moment, he is, in fact, not very far removed. In fine, the number of his various Stewardships is in excess of the number of years he has been connected with Freemasonry, a fact which speaks volumes for the interest he takes in the Charities, and the heartiness, aforementioned, which he habitually displays in all that relates to the Craft. The same good fortune surrounds him in social life, in which, moreover, he is distinguished by the exhibition of the many qualities which have won for him so much love and respect among brethren. This, indeed, is a matter of course, for it is not in his nature to be other than the same man, exhibiting under all circumstances and at all times the same qualities, in whatever society he may be mingling with. Others, if they choose, may indulge in variableness of mood, and temper, and bearing, towards their fellows. Others may display whatever is genial and pleasant in them in the Lodge, and retain whatever is disagreeable or explosive about them for the domain of private life. But our brother is not of this description. He is invariably the same with whomsoever he mixes, be they his equals, his superiors, or his inferiors; or, in other words, he is always the same kind and jovial fellow, ready in season for the stern business of life, and equally, or even more, ready for its pleasures. Not selfishly given, however, to these latter; for he loses no opportunity of ministering to the comfort and delights of his fellows, and we have seen that wherever it is possible for him to be of service to those who need it, he spares no trouble to do what is in his power to assist them. Herein is the whole secret of Freemasonry—that a man shall do willingly what lies in him to promote the comfort and wellbeing of his fellows; and this is the basis on which the whole superstructure of our Brother's career has rested from the very first. May he prosper always, and increasingly!

THE FOUR OLD LODGES.

Bro. R. F. Gould.

PART II.

§ 15.—Let us now apply ourselves to the inquiry, what are, or were the especial privileges of the four old Lodges? (1)

I.—Prior to the formation of the Grand Lodge (1717) it seems to have been the settled usage that "a sufficient number of Masons, met together within a certain district, had at that time ample power to make Masons, and discharge all the duties of Masonry, without any warrant of Constitution, the privilege being inherent in themselves as individuals." At the first meeting, however, of the Grand Lodge, the following regulation was passed, viz., that the privilege of assembling as Masons, which had hitherto been unlimited, should no longer be vested in the power of the Fraternity at large, but that every Lodge to be thereafter convened, except the four old Lodges, at that time existing, should be legally authorised to act by a Warrant from the Grand Master for the time being, with the consent and approbation of the Grand Lodge in Communication, and that without such Warrant, no Lodge should be hereafter deemed regular or constitutional.

II.—In compliment to the brethren of the four old Lodges, by whom the Grand Lodge was first formed, it was resolved, "That every privilege which they collectively enjoyed, by virtue of their immemorial rights, they should still continue to enjoy, and that no law, rule, or regulation, to be hereafter made, should deprive them of such privileges, or encroach on any landmark, which was at that time established as the standard of Masonic Government."

III.—This resolution being confirmed, the old Masons in the metropolis, agreeably to the resolution of the brethren at large, vested all their inherent privileges as individuals in the four old Lodges, in trust, that they would never suffer the old charges and ancient landmarks to be infringed.

IV.—The four old Lodges then agreed to extend their patronage to every Lodge which should hereafter be constituted by the Grand Lodge according to the new regulations of the Society, and while such Lodges acted in conformity to the ancient Constitutions of the Order, to admit their Masters and Wardens (2) to share with them all the privileges of the Grand Lodge, excepting precedence of rank. Matters being thus amicably adjusted, the brethren of the four Lodges considered their attendance on the future Communications of the Society as unnecessary; and, therefore, like the other Lodges, trusted implicitly to their Master and Wardens, resting satisfied that no measure of importance would be adopted without their approbation. The Officers of the Old Lodges, however, soon began to discover that the new Lodges, being equally represented with them at the Communications, might, in process of time, so far outnumber the old ones, as to have it in their power, by a majority, to encroach on, or even subvert, the privileges of the original Masons of England, which had been centered in the four old Lodges, with the concurrence of the brethren at large.

V.—Therefore they very wisely formed a code of laws for the future government of the Society, and annexed thereto a conditional clause; which it was agreed that the Grand Master for the time being, his successors, and the Master of every Lodge to be hereafter constituted, should engage to preserve, and keep sacred and inviolable, in all time coming. To commemorate this circumstance, it has been customary (says Preston) ever since that time for the Master of the oldest Lodge to attend every Grand Installation: and, taking precedence of all present, the Grand Master only excepted, to deliver the book of the original Constitutions to the new installed Grand Master on his engaging to support the ancient Charges and the general Regulations. The conditional clause above referred to runs thus:—"Every annual Grand Lodge has an inherent Power and Authority to make new Regulations, or to alter these, for the real Benefit of this ancient Fraternity; Provided always that the old Land Marks Be Carefully Preserved; and that such alterations and new regulations be proposed and agreed to at the third Quarterly Communication preceding the Annual Grand Feast; and that they be offered also to the perusal of all Brethren before dinner, in writing, even of the youngest apprentice; the approbation and consent of the majority of all the brethren present being absolutely necessary to make the same binding and obligatory."(3)

This remarkable clause, with thirty-eight regulations preceding it, all of which are printed in the first Edition of the Book of Constitutions, was approved, ratified, and confirmed by one hundred and fifty brethren, at an annual Assembly and Feast held at Stationers Hall, on St. John the Baptist's day 1721, and, in their presence, was subscribed by the Masters and Wardens of the four old Lodges on one part; and by Philip Duke of Wharton the Grand Master; Theophilus Desaguliers, M.D. and F.R.S., the Deputy Grand Master; Joshua Timson and William Hawkins the Grand

(2) The privilege of voting in Grand Lodge was only extended to Past Grand Masters, 21st Nov. 1721; to Past Deputy Grand Masters, 28th Feb. 1726; and to Grand Wardens, 27th June 1727. This explains why Bros. Sayer and Payne (Past Grand Masters) appear in § 3 as Officers of private Lodges.

Wardens, and the Master and Wardens of sixteen Lodges constituted betwixt 1717 and 1721, on the other part.(1)

VI.—By the above prudent precaution of our antient brethren, the original Constitutions were established as the basis of all future Masonic jurisdiction in the South of England; and the Ancient Landmarks, as they are emphatically styled, or the boundaries set up as checks to innovation or absolute dominion, were carefully secured against the attacks of future invaders. The four old Lodges, in consequence of the above contract, in which they considered themselves as a distinct party,(2) continued to act by their original authority. And so far from surrendering any of their rights, had them frequently ratified and confirmed by the whole fraternity in Grand Lodge assembled, who always acknowledged their independent and immemorial power to practise the rites of Masonry. No regulations of the Society, which might hereafter take place, could therefore operate with respect to those Lodges, if such regulations were contrary to, or subversive of, the original Constitutions by which only they were governed; and while their proceedings were conformable to those Constitutions, no power known in Masonry could legally deprive them of any right or privilege which they had ever enjoyed.

§ 16.—The following circumstantial account of the Old Lodges,(3) by Bro. William Preston, P.M. Lodge of Antiquity (the Masonic historian), may here be appropriately inserted:—

I.—"Of the four old Lodges there is only one extant, viz., No. 1. The old Lodge of St. Paul, now named the Lodge of Antiquity, formerly held at the Goose and Gridiron in St. Paul's Church-yard.(4)

II.—"The Lodge No. 2, formerly held at the Crown in Parker's Lane in Drury Lane, has been extinct above fifty(5) years, by the death of its members.

III.—"Lodge No. 3, formerly held at the Apple Tree Tavern, in Charles-street, Covent-garden, has been dissolved many years. By the List of Lodges inserted in the Book of Constitutions, printed in 1738, it appears, that in February 1722-3, this Lodge was removed to the Queen's Head, in Knave's Acre, on account of some difference among its members; and that the members who met there came under a NEW Constitution, though, says the Book of Constitutions, THEY WANTED IT NOT:(6) and ranked as No. 10 in the list. Thus they inconsiderately renounced their former rank and every ancient privilege which they derived from their immemorial Constitution.(7)

IV.—Original No. 4, formerly held at the Rummer and Grapes, removed to the Horn Tavern, and then agreed to incorporate with the Somerset House Lodge, which immediately assumed their rank. "The members of this Lodge," says Preston, "tacitly agreed to a renunciation of their rights as one of the four original Lodges, by openly avowing a declaration of their Master in Grand Lodge. They put themselves entirely under the authority of the Grand Lodge; claimed no distinct privilege, by virtue of an Immemorial Constitution, but precedency of rank, and considered themselves subject to every law or regulation of the Grand Lodge, over whom they could admit of no control, and to whose determination they and every Lodge were bound to submit."

It was resolved in Grand Lodge, that the members of the Lodge of Antiquity should agree to the same proposition, but they refused, it being, in their opinion, repugnant to the contract established at the first formation of the Grand Lodge, and to the original constitutions of the Order, to which all Masons in England were bound to pay obedience.

V.—Upon this the Lodge of Antiquity withdrew from the Grand Lodge, published a Manifesto in vindication of its conduct, resumed its original powers, and having asserted that the contract of 1721 had been violated by the Grand Lodge, proceeded to act as a Lodge in the same manner it was authorised to do before that contract was formed; whilst, therefore, the Lodges constituted subsequently to the Revival necessarily derived their sanction from the Grand Lodge, the Four Old Lodges continued to act by their own inherent authority.(8)

It may be interesting now to turn to Bro. Preston's description of the temporary secession of the Lodge of Antiquity, original No. 1, from the Regular Grand Lodge, as well as to his enumeration of the privileges enjoyed by the time Immemorial Lodges.(9)

(1) See § 3, and also Manifesto of Lodge of Antiquity, clause 4.—Post.

(2) This assertion, repeated in Manifesto, Post, but not otherwise corroborated. It should be noted, however, that the Edition of 1775 (Preston) in which it appears, was published with the formal sanction of the Grand Master, Lord Petre.

(3) See §§ 6, and 9.12.

(4) Preston, Ed. 1781, p 224.

(5) Ibid. This statement first appears in this edition (1781), and is repeated verbatim in those of 1796, 1801, and 1804.

(6) From this expression it is evident that the members of this Lodge were understood to have an inherent right, at least collectively, without any new authority, to meet as a Lodge, and to discharge the duties of Masonry; and this in a more full and ample manner than any newly constituted Lodge could do; for it is very remarkable that the four Old Lodges always preserved their original power of making, passing, and raising Masons, being termed Masters' Lodges; while the other Lodges, for many years afterwards, had no such power, it having been the custom to pass and RAISE Masons at the Grand Lodge only.—(Preston, Ed. 1781, p 225).

REGULATIONS OF GRAND LODGE:—"Apprentices must be admitted Masters and Fellow-craft only here, unless by a dispensation."—Constit. 1723, p 61.

22nd Nov. 1725:—"The Master of a Lodge, with his Wardens, and a competent number of the Lodge assembled in due form, can make Masters and Fellows at discretion."—Constit. 1756, p 280.

(7) It is a question that will admit of some discussion, whether any of the above Old Lodges can, while they exist as Lodges, surrender their rights; as those rights seem to have been granted by the old Masons of the metropolis to them in trust, and any individual member of the Four Old Lodges might object to the surrender, and in that case they never could be given up.—Preston, Ed. 1801-1804, p 215. (This note appears for the first time in 1801, and carries with it, therefore, greater weight than if it had been penned by Preston during the schism of 1779-90. See § 15 (II.-III.)

(8) This concluding statement is inconsistent with the position maintained throughout the remainder of § 16 (I. to IV.)

THE FOUR OLD LODGES.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Bro. Gould's series of papers on the "Four Old Lodges," which is now appearing in the columns of your valuable journal, will be welcomed by all who take an interest in Masonic History. Having had considerable experience in similar fields of labour, I am in a position to testify to the arduous nature of the task he has undertaken, and I have no doubt the Craft generally will bestow on him that applause to which he is so justly entitled. My object, however, in addressing these few remarks, is not so much to applaud a work, the merits of which are self-evident, as to direct Bro. Gould's attention to apparent discrepancies between him and Bro. Hughan, in the case of sundry of our earliest Lodges. You doubtless bear in mind that when Bro. Hughan published his "Pine's List," for 1734, being No. 6 of his "Masonic Sketches and Reprints," you entrusted to me the task of offering such comments on it as might seem desirable. In the fulfilment of my duty as reviewer, I noted that Bro. Hughan traced the No. 11, of Pine 1734, as being No. 18, Old Dundee, of the present day, and I educed from this that, on the assumption that Bro. Hughan's suggestion was correct, the Old Dundee, No. 18, was, in truth, that old Time Immemorial Lodge, No. 3, which, in 1717, met at the Appletree Tavern in Charles-street, Covent-garden, but which, according to the list published in the 1738 Edition of the Constitutions, removed in February 1722-3, to the Queen's Head, Knave's Acre, and there met under a new Constitution, "though they wanted it not." In this list it figured as No. 10, and in Pine's List 1734 as No. 11. It is also No. 11 in Pine's Lists of 1729 and 1730, as stated by Bro. Gould in his first paper, and No. 11 in Rawlinson's List 1733. It is No. 48 in the Dublin List for 1735, contributed by Bro. Hughan to the Masonic Magazine for January 1877, and deducting the thirty-seven Irish Lodges, this places it as No. 11 among English Lodges; while in Cole's List for 1763, contributed to the last Christmas number of the same Magazine, it appears to rank either as No. 6 (having in the interim jumped over two other Lodges), if we are to consider 27th February 1722, and 27th February 1722-3, as standing for the same date, or No. 8, if Bro. Hughan's remark is correct, that "the numeration observed is according to the new list made in 1756, the former alterations having been made in 1740," though the date of Constitution, as given in the list of Cole's—"May 1722"—does not tally with previous dates. Or it may be—and if Bro. Hughan's surmise that No. 11 of Pine 1734, is No. 18 of to-day, is correct, it must be—No. 9 of Cole, described as meeting at the "Dundee Arms, at their own private room, Red Lion-street, Wapping, second and fourth Thursday," and Constituted in 1722. All this is perplexing enough, and the perplexity is not diminished, when we find, on the one hand, Bro. Hughan tracing the No. 11 of Pine 1734, as the No. 18 (Old Dundee), of to-day, and on the other Bro. Gould connecting it with Fortitude and Old Cumberland, No. 12, of to-day. In any attempt to set this matter straight, it is obviously impossible for me to take upon myself to follow both Bro. Hughan and Bro. Gould in tracing the conclusions at which they have severally arrived. However, for purposes of comparison, I will first append a table, showing (a) the existing Lodges and those in Pine's List for 1734, with which in Bro. Hughan's opinion, they correspond; and (b) Pine's of 1729 and 1730, and the list of Book of Constitutions for 1738, and the existing Lodges, with which, in Bro. Gould's opinion, they correspond.

Classing these together and giving only the numbers of the Lodges in the several Lists, we find the following result:—

Thus Bros. Hughan and Gould agree as to Nos. 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, and 20, while they differ as to Nos. 12, 14, 16, and 18. As to the former, nothing further need be said; but as to the latter, I may, perhaps, with the dates of constitution, be able to throw some light on the matter, though I labour under the disadvantage of having only copies of a few lists available. Taking the four, about which there is this disagreement, I note, as regards our present

No. 12.—Bro. Hughan connects this with No. 8 of Pine's Lists for 1729, 1730, and 1734, and the Constitutions List of 1738. The date of constitution in all three is stated to have been April 25th 1722. In Cole's List for 1763, no Lodge constituted on such a day is included, and Bro. Gould notes that it was erased on 4th April 1744.—See § 7, List No. 5 of his in last week's number of the Freemason's Chronicle. The latter connects it with No. 11, meeting in 1729, 1730, and 1734 at the Queen's Head, in Knave's Acre, No. 10 of 1738, meeting at same place, No. 10, at the George and Dragon, Oxford Market, in 1740, the Swan, in same locality in 1744, and the Fish and Bell in Charles-street, Soho-square up to 1765—in such case it would be No. 8 in Cole's List 1763. He adds that in 1775-6 it met at the Roebuck in Oxford-street, and in 1781 was named the Old Fortitude, which some time between 1814 and 1822 was changed to its present title. Be it added, in favour of Bro. Gould's theory, that if 27th February "1722" and same day "1722-3" are one and the same, the dates in all the lists I have given bear out this statement.

No. 14.—Bro. Hughan makes this the same with No. 9 of Pine's 1729, 1730, and 1734, and No. 8 of Const. List 1738. The date in all these cases is "May 1722," and there is a Lodge constituted at this date in Cole's List 1763, meeting in "David-street, Grosvenor-square." Bro. Gould makes it the same with No. 10 of Pine's 1729, 1730, and 1734, and No. 9 of the Const. List 1738. The date in these cases is 25th November 1722, and in Cole's List for 1763 there is a Lodge (No. 7) of this date meeting in New Bond-street.

No. 16.—Bro. Hughan connects this with No. 10 of Pine 1729, 1730, 1734, &c., &c., the date being May 1722. In fact Bro. Hughan's present Nos. 14 and 16 are Bro. Gould's Nos. 16 and 14.

No. 18.—Bro. Gould traces this to No. 12 of Pine's 1729, 1730, and 1734, No. 11 of Const. List 1738. The date of Constitution is given in 1729, and 1730, as March 27th, 1723; in 1735, no date is affixed; in 1738 it is given as March 1724. In Cole's List, 1763, there is a Lodge (No. 9) corresponding with this in the particulars as to place of meeting—namely, the Dundee Arms, Wapping, but the date is given as "1722." This, of course, need not be a discrepancy, as what we should now speak of as March 1723, was often enough spoken of as in the year 1722. Bro. Hughan makes this agree with No. 11 of Pine's 1729, 1730, 1734, No. 10 of 1738, the date of Constitution being Feb. 27th, 1722 or 1722-3, as variously stated.

To sum up the case. Bro. Hughan's present No. 12 was, according to Bro. Gould, erased in 1744; Bro. Hughan's No. 14 is Bro. Gould's No. 16; Bro. Hughan's No. 16 is Bro. Gould's No. 14; and Bro. Gould's No. 18, according to Bro. Hughan, has disappeared from the List.

I think I can see how the discrepancies have arisen, but I must leave these redoubtable champions to explain them.

Fraternally yours,

Your Reviewer of Hughan's Reprint of Pine's List for 1734.

CONFLICTING ACCOUNTS ABOUT THOMAS DUNCKERLEY.

To the Editor of the Freemason's Chronicle.

Dear Sir and Brother,—Permit me to point out that your very frequent correspondent, Bro. Jacob Norton, in his letter last week respecting the late Bro. Thomas Dunckerley is entering on a very difficult, if not an impossible task, in his endeavour to weaken the Masonic version of that eminent brother's biography. I had not read the account in the Gentleman's Magazine, though I had seen mention of it in the account of Dunckerley in the Cyclopædia of Freemasonry in question, and I am of the same opinion as the writer of the latter, that there is no "good reason in re-opening a question difficult in itself, and so long buried." However, my object in writing these presents is to show that the more the two accounts are analysed, the greater reason is there to believe that no antecedent improbability exists against the correctness of the Masonic version. On the contrary, I am inclined to think, that all things considered, the version given in in the Freemasons' Magazine for 1793 is the more likely one. I am to a certain extent confirmed in this opinion by the account by himself, and "communicated in his own handwriting, by his executors" to the same Freemasons' Magazine some time after his death.—Vide Freemasons' Magazine, Vol. VI., 1799, pp 96-100.

I say there is no antecedent improbability against the truth of the Masonic version of Dunckerley's parentage. In the account published in 1793, and therefore in Dunckerley's lifetime, to which Bro. Norton refers, the question is only briefly mentioned, all that is said being contained in the passage quoted by Bro. Norton. The reason for this brevity is furnished by Bro. White, the writer of the Memoir, who adds, "but as this is a matter of much delicacy, our readers must excuse us from entering into further particulars, and permit us to draw a veil over this part of the life we propose to record, which, were we at liberty to illustrate, would prove a most interesting part of the history." But when Dunckerley was dead this motive of delicacy no longer existed, and accordingly we find in Freemasons' Magazine, Vol. VI., pp 96-100, a full circumstantial account, which had been, as we have said, "communicated in his own handwriting, by his executors," and "fully contradicts the many idle stories that have for some time been in circulation respecting him." The account is too long for quotation, but it was communicated to Dunckerley himself the day following his mother's funeral by a Mrs. Pinkney, who had been many years Mary Dunckerley's neighbour in Somerset House. The substance is as follows:—In November 1723, while Mr. Dunckerley senior was at Chatsworth, on some business for the Duke of Devonshire, Mrs. Dunckerley visited a Mrs. Meekin at Lady Ranelagh's. "Mr. L—y happened to come there, and paid me the greatest respect, and hinted that I stood in my own light, or I might be the happiest woman in England. I knew his meaning, but made no reply, and went back to Somerset House next day." A fortnight later, and she again visited Lady Ranelagh. Mr. L—y was again there, and handed her from the coach to the parlour, "where," says Dunckerley's mother, "to my future unhappiness, I found the Prince of Wales, whom I had too well known before my unhappy marriage. At his request (for I could deny him nothing), I stayed several days, during which time he made me five visits, and on Candlemas-day I went home." The result was that Mrs. Dunckerley found herself enceinte, and on the return, in May 1724, of her husband from Chatsworth, she told him what had happened. "He commended my conduct with so much joy that I could not help despising his meanness." Dunckerley was born 23rd October 1724, soon after which a separation between his mother and her husband took place, and "he kept the secret on his own account, for he had two places, and several considerable advantages as the price of my folly." The son was never known to his father, though it might have been, and his mother "might have lived in as elegant a manner as Mrs. H. or Miss B." This was the account which Dunckerley received from Mrs. Pinkney, to whom it was communicated by his mother five days before her death, and in the belief that her illness (gout in the stomach) would prove fatal. Mrs. Pinkney added that his Grandmother Bolnest, Mrs. Cannon, a midwife, and herself were present at his birth on the aforesaid Oct. 23rd 1724, "that his mother then declared the Prince of Wales was his father, and that she and his grandmother requested it might be kept a secret." Mrs. Pinkney further informed Dunckerley that his mother was a physician's daughter, and was residing "with Mrs. W. when the Prince of Wales debauched her," and Mrs. W. having discovered what had happened "had her married to Mr. Dunckerley, who was then attending the Duke of Devonshire, on a visit to Sir R. W." (Sir Robert Walpole) "at Houghton."

What follows relates to Dunckerley's career in the navy, in which previous to superannuation in 1764 he served as "teacher of the mathematics on board the Vanguard" for three years, as well as gunner. In August 1764, he left the kingdom through fear of arrest, his pay as "teacher of the mathematics" having been refused, and his daughter's illness having further crippled his resources. Previously, however, he assigned his "superannuation-pension" for the benefit of his wife and family during his absence, and then sailed with Captain Rathven to the Mediterranean, on which voyage he made the acquaintance of Lord William Gordon, who in the following year befriended him when in distress at Paris. In June 1765 he was put on shore at Marseilles when suffering from scurvy. On his recovery he received a letter of recommendation to his Excellency Col. T. [Townsend], at Minorca, by whom he was received "with great friendship," and while there "some gentlemen of the Lodge at Gibraltar," knowing his distress, sent him £20. On reaching London, in November, he removed his family "from Plymouth to the apartment in Somerset House, where my mother had resided near forty years; and at her decease it was continued to me by an order from the late Duke of Devonshire." In 1766, several persons of distinction endeavoured to convey a knowledge of his misfortune to the "Dowager Princess of Wales and the Princess Amelia," but without success. In April 1767 General O. [Oughton] acquainted Lord H. with his situation, and "that nobleman, with the assistance of Mr. W.," says Dunckerley, "laid my mother's declaration before the King. His Majesty read it, seemed much concerned, and commanded that an inquiry should be made of my character from Lord C." [? Chesterfield] "and Sir E. W." [Sir Edward Walpole] "who had known me from my infancy. The account they gave of me was so satisfactory to the King, that he was graciously pleased to order me a pension of £100 a year, from his privy purse, 7th May 1767." In the course of this account Dunckerley incidentally mentions that in January 1761 he asked Sir E. W. if he were like the late King [George II]. "As he was pleased to say that he saw no resemblance, I did not, at that time, acquaint him with my reason for asking such a question." He also says that being obliged to return to his ship after his mother's funeral, he made known the account he had received from Mrs. Pinkney "to no person at that time but Captain Swanton," and the latter remarked that those "who did not know" him "could look on it to be nothing more than a gossip's story."

Such is an outline of this very circumstantial account of Dunckerley's parentage, and what strikes me principally about it is, its apparent truthfulness. Moreover, there are some important particulars in which it is, to a certain extent, confirmed by the Gentleman's Magazine. Thus we are told in the latter, that his mother was a servant maid in the family of Sir Robert Walpole at Houghton, whence his father married her, and got a place of porter at Somerset House. Dunckerley's version, based on Mr. Pinkney's statement, is, that his mother was "a physician's daughter, and lived with Mrs. W." [? Mrs. Walpole, mother of Sir Robert, or possibly Sir Robert's wife, as he was not knighted till later; for there would be nothing singular in describing a man in 1760 by the title he was best known by in his lifetime, though it had not been conferred upon him at the time of a particular occurrence]; and Mrs. Walpole discovering she had been debauched by the Prince, had her married to Mr. Dunckerley, then in attendance on the Duke of Devonshire, who was visiting Houghton at the time. Moreover, their residence at Somerset House is mentioned, and Dunckerley afterwards occupied the same apartments, till his removal to Hampton Court Palace, where apartments were assigned him by the King [George III]. Then as to the discrepancy in the dates variously assigned to his mother's death. The Gentleman's says she died when he was very young, and his grandmother took care of him till he was put apprentice to a "barber." Dunckerley himself writes, "9th January 1760, soon after my return from the siege of Quebec, I received an account of my mother's death; and having obtained permission from my captain to be absent from duty, I went to London and attended her funeral." Are we uncharitably to suppose that this man, a distinguished Mason, and having hosts of friends moving in good society, even though he "died over eighty years ago," deliberately manufactured this lie about his mother's funeral, and the accounts he received of her deathbed confession from Mrs. Pinkney? He was in correspondence with Lord Chesterfield, General Oughton, Grand Master of Masons in Scotland, 1769-70. He was assisted pecuniarily by Lord William Gordon in 1765, who begged he "would give him leave to present" him with £200. His mother's apartments in Somerset House were continued to him "by an order from the late Duke of Devonshire," no doubt the same who had visited Houghton years before with Mr. Dunckerley senior in attendance on him. Even Sir Edward Walpole—though, according to the Gentleman's, he had no knowledge of the story of his parentage—"had known him all his life," and "believed him meritorious in the capacity in which he had served." Moreover, when Dunckerley, as the writer in the Gentleman's states, ran away to sea and got on board Sir John Norris's ship, Sir Edward wrote and interested himself in that youngster's behalf; while he, as I have shown, admits that Sir E. W. failed to see any likeness between him and the late King George II., when the question was asked. Moreover, the account was kept secret, and Sir Edward may be pardoned if he made a mistake as to the early death of the mother, when she had gone away, shortly after her seduction, to reside in London—whether she were "a physician's daughter" living with Mrs. W. or a "servant maid in the family of Sir Robert Walpole." Again, why should George III. give Dunckerley a pension of £100 a year, afterwards increased to £800, and apartments at Hampton Court Palace, if he had been only known to Sir Edward Walpole, and had served meritoriously as a gunner in the Royal Navy? It strikes me so handsome a pension, equal to what was then and is now conferred on titled persons, would not have been conferred on a mere naval gunner without some excellent reason, no matter how meritorious his services. Taking, then, the facts as narrated in the Freemasons' Magazine, Vol. VI., the grant of the pension, the testimony of eminent personages, and the points of agreement, slender though they be, between the Gentleman's and the Freemasons' Magazines, I incline to the latter's version of the parentage of Dunckerley. It was common enough for a girl who had yielded to the importunities of a princely or noble suitor to be married to some convenient attendant on the latter, a snug office being oftentimes the portion of the poor girl. Readers of Percival Keene will remember that the hero of that entertaining novel was the son of his mother by Captain (afterwards Lord) Delmar; and that she was married to Keene the Marine for the purpose of concealing her shame. This, of course, is a mere tale of fiction, but it serves to illustrate a common practice. However, my letter is running to a great length, and therefore I shall ask your permission to state a few other points in connection with Dunckerley's career in a second letter.

Fraternally yours,

"Q."

A. M. B.—Shall be pleased to hear from you at all times. We hope your Consecrations will pass off enjoyably.

CONSECRATION OF THE LODGE OF PERSEVERANCE, No. 1743.

ON Saturday, at the Imperial Hotel, Holborn Viaduct, was consecrated the Lodge of Perseverance, No. 1743, the gathering in honour of the event being numerous and well worthy of the occasion. The duty of consecrating the new Lodge had been entrusted to Bro. Hervey, the Grand Secretary, and we noted with pleasure not only that he performed his allotted task as impressively as usual, but that he was in excellent spirits and took a kindly interest in the ceremony. He was assisted in his duties by the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford M.A., Past Grand Chaplain, and Bros. H. G. Buss, Assist. Grand Secretary, E. Bowyer, and Jas. Terry Secretary to the Royal Benevolent Institution. Bro. Hervey having taken his seat, appointed Bro. Buss to fill the chair of S.W., and Bro. Bowyer that of J.W., while Bro. Terry acted as Director of the Ceremonies. In his address, he referred briefly to the changes recently introduced into the Constitutions of the Grand Orient of France, and fully justified the action taken by our Grand Lodge in relation thereto. He also deprecated change even in cases where it might seem desirable. Having further remarked on the importance of the occasion on which they were assembled, Bro. Hervey called on Rev. Bro. Woodford to deliver an oration, and the latter promptly obeyed the summons. In doing so, he pointed out that considering the frequency with which the ceremony of consecration had been celebrated lately, it was hardly possible for one in his position to say anything that would be new; and, after all, perhaps, it would be better for him to traverse the same ground over again, especially as he felt that he was addressing a lenient audience, who would make every allowance for the lack of novelty which distinguished his address. Bro. Woodford then went on to insist on the necessity there was for firmly establishing the ancient foundations of Freemasonry in all new Lodges, and conspicuous among those foundations was that of belief in God, and love of our brethren, the acceptance of which was absolutely necessary, in order to ensure the exclusion of the stupid atheist and the irreligious libertine. He enlarged on the virtues of Freemasonry and the leading features which distinguished it, and especially referred to that hatred of all persecution which was one of its principal characteristics. He spoke of the high code of morality it inculcated, and the innumerable blessings which had been the most conspicuous result, and concluded an able and instructive address by congratulating all present on the fortunate circumstance that Bro. Hervey had presided on the occasion. The rest of the ceremony having been performed, Bro. Hervey proceeded to instal Bro. Louis A. Lelus P.M. 65, 1364, and 1471, as the first

W.M. of the Lodge. This done, Bro. Loins appointed and invested the following as his officers for the year, namely, Bros. Albert Barker and Frederick Kearney, both designated in the Warrant, as Senior and Junior Wardens respectively, Bro. J. L. Mather Treasurer, W. H. Mollindinia Secr., E. Marlet S.D., J. B. D. Wall J.D., Sparrow I.G., C. Daniel P.M. D.C., C. Robinson Asst. D.C., J. Mellison, W.S., and Reed P.J.D. Essex and P.M. 407 and 453—who acted as I.G. during the ceremony of consecration—as Assistant W.S., Bro. Goddard P.M. being chosen Tyler. The Grand Secretary delivered the customary address to the Worshipful Master, and Bro. Terry those to the Wardens and Brethren, on the conclusion of which the W.M. rose and expressed the great gratification it had afforded him to have had Bro. Hervey presiding, and he referred with especial pleasure to the fact that this was the fourth time it had been his good fortune to receive installation at his hands. He then proposed, and the proposition was agreed to unanimously, that Bros. Hervey, Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, Buss, and Terry, should be elected honorary members of the Lodge, a compliment which it is needless to say was duly and suitably acknowledged. Several propositions for joining and initiation having been handed in, the Lodge was shortly afterwards closed, and the brethren sat down to banquet. After the opening toasts had been honoured, that of the Pro G.M. &c. &c., was proposed, and with it was associated the name of Rev. Bro. Woodford, who, in reply, thanked the Master for the honour he had done him in connecting his name with the toast. He was certain that both Present and Past Grand Officers were anxious to live in the good opinion of their fellows in the Craft. Freemasonry, he observed, was a remarkable institution, bringing, as it did, into one accord, people differing materially in their opinions. Moreover, it was a standing protest against everything in the shape of intolerance and bigotry. It was essentially cosmopolitan in its character, and it was our duty as Freemasons to inculcate everywhere this cosmopolitan teaching. Bro. Hervey then rose and proposed the toast of the W.M., and remarking that he came thither that evening for the purpose of consecrating the Lodge and not for speech making, expressed the gratification it had afforded him to have been entrusted with that duty, and also the great pleasure he felt in having installed so worthy a brother in the chair of the Lodge. He considered that he had that day added a fresh link to an already secure chain, and that the work he had entailed would proceed most prosperously. Having concluded by giving some sensible advice to the members, the W.M. rose and responded to the toast, and ended by proposing the toast of the Consecrating Officers, to which Bro. Hervey briefly replied, humourously observing that he was not unlike the late Mdme. Grisi in the number of his last appearances, for he had imagined that he had already presented himself to the notice of those present for the last time when he proposed the Master's health. In connection with the toast of the Assistant Consecrating Officers, the W.M. made a point of stating that it was purely an omission on his part, which he deeply regretted, that when he proposed those brethren and Bro. Hervey as honorary members, the name of Bro. E. Bowyer was not included. That omission, however, would be rectified on the first occasion it was possible to do so. The several brethren having replied, the health of the Visitors followed, and among those who acknowledged it was the Rev. Bro. Court, an American Mason, who spoke very eloquently on the subject of Freemasonry, and the cordial and fraternal reception he had met with that evening. The health of the Treasurer and Secretary and of the Officers having been given and responded to, the Tyler's toast brought a most enjoyable evening to a conclusion. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bro. T. W. Simons, who had the able assistance of Bros. F. H. Cozens, and Albert Hubbard.

PILGRIMAGE OF KNIGHTS TEMPLAR TO EUROPE.

WE have already announced that Allegheny Commandery, No. 35, of Allegheny, Pa., together with such members of other Commanderies as may join the expedition, will set forth on the 3rd July next, for a tour of 75 days to Great Britain and the Continent. We have now to add that Sir Knight Robert Morris, Past Grand Master of Kentucky, has secured a place, and will give his large Masonic experience to make the tour pleasant and instructive. Success go with them!—Masonic Review, Cincinnati, May 1878.

Bro. Robert Morris, LL.D., 32°, is the author of Masonic Songs and Poems (incomparably the best collection of Masonic poems ever written, commencing with "We Meet upon the Level, and we Part upon the Square"), "The History of Freemasonry in Kentucky," "Freemasonry in the Holy Land," &c., &c. Bro. Carson, in his "Masonic Bibliography," after enumerating ten of Bro. Dr. Morris's works, adds.—He was also the editor of the American Freemason (Louisville, 1859, Folio). The same title 8vo Chicago, 1859. He was also the projector, editor and publisher of that ponderous collection, the "Universal Masonic Library," 30 vols. 8vo, 1856-57, and he edited an edition of Webb's "Freemasons' Monitor" (Cincinnati, 1859), and has been engaged in various other Masonic literary enterprises.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—The finest remedies in the world for bad legs, old wounds, sores, and ulcers. If used according to directions given with them there is no wound, bad leg, or ulcerous sore, however obstinate or long standing, but will yield to their healing and curative properties. Numbers of persons who have been patients in several of the large hospitals, and under the care of eminent surgeons, without deriving the slightest benefit, have been thoroughly cured by Holloway's Ointment and Pills. For glandular swellings, ulcers, scurvy, and disorders of the skin, there is no medicine that can be used with so good an effect. In fact, in the worst forms of disease dependent upon the condition of the blood, these medicines, if used conjointly, are irresistible.

COMMITTEE MEETING OF THE GIRLS' SCHOOL.

THE monthly meeting of the General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls was held on Thursday, at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Col. Creaton presided. Bros. Joshua Nunn, S. Rawson, John Boyd, Thomas W. White, B. Head, J. A. Rucker, R. B. Webster, H. Massey, E. Cox, Arthur E. Gladwell, George Bolton, Thomas Mason, F. Binckes, Peter de L. Long, John H. Southwood, Walter Wellsman, C. F. Hogard, H. Browse, H. Potter, David Roberts, J. G. Marsh, and E. Letchworth also attended. Bro. Hedges acted as Secretary. The report of the House Committee on the applications and testimonials of candidates for the Secretaryship of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls stated that the Committee met on the 13th and 20th inst., when they reported that the brethren eligible for the office were Bros. W. Clifton Crick, Thomas Cull, T. Rogers Eames, Francis R. W. Hedges, W. Smallpeice, Paul Storr, William Worrell, and C. FitzGerald Matier. Five other applications were received, but the candidates either were not eligible, or had not complied with the rules. After examining the petitions of candidates for the October election, twenty-eight were placed on the list, and three vacancies were declared. A discussion afterwards ensued as to the power of ladies and lewises who are minors being able to vote at the election of Secretary, according to the laws of the Institution, and it was resolved to take the opinion of Grand Registrar on the point. The meeting was then adjourned to the 11th of July at two o'clock, for the election of Secretary, on which occasion the scrutiny of votes will not be opened till after the poll is closed at five o'clock.

Eboracum Lodge, No. 1611.—An emergency meeting of this Lodge was held on Monday last. Present—Bros. T. B. Whytehead W.M., J. S. Cumberland S.W., C. G. Pudel J.W., T. Cooper I.P.M., G. Balmford P.M. Treas., T. D. Smith as S.D., A. T. B. Turner as J.D., M. Millington I.G., T. Humphries Assist. Sec., P. Pearson Tyler, J. Morgan, Ware, Hebblethwaite, Blackstone, Jackson, and other brethren. Bros. Tennent and Harrison were passed to the second degree, and Bros. Varvill and Husband were raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason. A very pleasant evening was subsequently passed, the W.M. alluding to a pleasant visit he had paid on the previous Wednesday to the Old Globe Lodge, No. 200, Scarborough, and to the excellence of the musical performances on the occasion of the Scarborough Masonic Band; he thought it might be possible to organise during next winter, in York, a concert in aid of the Masonic Charities.

Doric Lodge of Instruction, No. 933.—Held its usual weekly meeting on Friday, the 21st inst., at Bro. Clayton's, the Dukes Head, Whitechapel-road. Bros. Cundick Preceptor, McDonald W.M., Job S.W., Stevens J.W., I. P. Cohen S.D., Waterer J.D., Wells I.G., and a number of other brethren were also present. The Lodge was opened in due form, minutes were read and confirmed. The Lodge was opened in the second degree. Bro. Ellis having offered himself as a candidate, was asked the usual questions and entrusted; the Lodge was opened in the third degree, and the W.M. worked the ceremony of raising in a most excellent manner. Bro. Musto worked the first, second and third sections of the lecture, assisted by the brethren, the Lodge was closed in the second and third degrees. Bro. Barnes, in a very appropriate address, proposed that Bro. Morgan, of Lodge 211, Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, be made an Honorary Member of this Lodge of Instruction, the motion was seconded by Bro. Cundick, and unanimously carried. Brother Morgan thanked Bro. Barnes for the kind remarks he had uttered in introducing the proposition, and assured the brethren he felt the greatest possible pleasure at receiving this mark of their appreciation of what he had been able to do for the Craft universal. It was not his custom to occupy the time of those he visited with details of the labours that devolved on him, but on this occasion, though he feared he might be voted a bore, he would break this rule. In olden times, it was recognised that our brethren were to serve their Masters faithfully seven years or less, they might then gracefully ask for preferment. He, brother Morgan, had that evening completed the seventh volume of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, and he thought he might say a few words respecting the labour he had thus completed. Our brother then gave some interesting particulars in reference to the journal with which he was associated, and ventured to submit that the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE had faithfully and satisfactorily fulfilled its mission,—the advancement and support of the best principles of our Order. Bro. Morgan's remarks were listened to with much interest, and he concluded by again thanking the brethren for the privilege they had conferred upon him in making him an honorary member of this, one of the most celebrated of our Lodges of Instruction. It was then proposed by Bro. Ellis, and seconded by Bro. Cundick, that Bro. Musto, who had been acting as the Hon. Sec. pro tem for the last year and nine months, be appointed Secretary of this Lodge of Instruction, which was carried unanimously. Brother Musto returned thanks for the honour conferred. Bro. Job was elected W.M. for the ensuing week. The Lodge was closed in due form, and adjourned to Friday next, the 28th inst.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 193.—Met on Wednesday, 26th inst., at the Railway Tavern, London-street, E.C. The following brethren were present:—A. Pascoe W.M., Moss S.W., Staley J.W., Gottheil P.M., J. K. Pitt Sec., Bush S.D., Madwell J.D., Gompertz I.G., Walker, Woodward. The first and second degrees were rehearsed, and the ceremonies of opening and closing in the three degrees practised. A vote of thanks was unanimously carried in favour of the W.M., he having occupied for the first time in this Lodge the position of Master. Bro. Moss was elected to preside on next Wednesday, and in thanking the brethren for the honour, stated he felt quite incompetent as yet to perform a ceremony with anything approaching proficiency; if, therefore, on the next occasion, any brother should desire it, he would be willing to vacate the post.

67 BARBICAN, E.C.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

DURING a short sitting on Thursday last, the House of Lords, at the instance of the Bishop of Exeter, gave a second reading to the Truro Chapter Bill. On Friday, the Lord Chancellor, who had given notice of his intention the previous day, obtained leave to introduce a Bill on Intermediate Education in Ireland. The Bill was subsequently read a first time, and the second reading was fixed for yesterday (Friday). On Monday, after an unsuccessful attempt on the part of Earl Fortescue to oppose it, their Lordships went into Committee on the Poor Law Act (1875) Amendment Bill, and the measure passed this stage without further hindrance. On Tuesday, the Public Health Act Amendment Bill was read a third time and passed.

In the House of Commons, last Thursday, a variety of questions were put to Ministers, among them one relating to the appointment of Sir Charles Du Cane to be Chairman of the Board of Customs, which was amply justified by the Chancellor of the Exchequer. When these had been disposed of, the House went into Committee on the Roads and Bridges (Scotland) Bill, and satisfactory progress was made with several clauses. On Monday a new writ for Middlesborough, in the room of Mr. Bolckow deceased, was moved for by Mr. Adam. An attempt was made by Mr. O'Clery to get Ireland relieved of her share of the charge paid annually for the Volunteers, on the ground that Volunteer regiments were not allowed in Ireland, was defeated. The Chancellor of the Exchequer declined to see the force of Mr. O'Clery's argument, when the latter very informally moved the adjournment of the debate for the purpose of calling attention to the subject, but his motion was defeated by 306 to 12. Sir H. Selwin-Ibbetson then rose shortly after, and moved the second reading of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Bill, Mr. W. E. Forster following with an amendment directed against the proposal of the Government for the slaughter of cattle from the Continent at the port of landing. Several members, including Sir M. Hicks-Beach, took part in the debate, which, on the motion of Mr. Rathbone, was adjourned shortly before one o'clock till Tuesday, when it was resumed and again adjourned till Thursday. This was at the afternoon sitting on that day; in the evening, when the House should have resumed at the usual hour, it was found that a sufficient number of members was not present, and the House accordingly adjourned. On Wednesday Sir Wilfrid Lawson moved the second reading of the Permissive Bill, but he failed in impressing the House with a favourable opinion of its merits, and his motion was defeated by 278 to 84 votes, or by considerably more than three to one.

The Queen and Princess Beatrice returned to Windsor on Saturday, and on Monday the remains of the late King of Hanover were buried in the Royal Vault in St. George's Chapel, where lie those of his grandfather George III., Queen Charlotte, George IV., William IV., and Queen Adelaide. The choir of the chapel was thronged with those whom duty or invitation had brought together to pay their last tribute of respect to a Prince of the English Blood Royal, but the ceremony was not of that imposing character, nor, indeed, was it intended to be on that magnificent scale which people usually associate with Royal funerals. A large number of distinguished guests were brought down by special train early in the morning, and shortly after the doors of the chapel were thrown open, those who were to be present began flocking in. The chief mourner was Prince Ernest Augustus, Duke of Cumberland K.G., who previous to the ceremony, had had an interview with the Queen, for the purpose of delivering to Her Majesty the insignia of the Order of the Garter worn by his late father, after which the Queen invested the Prince with the insignia of the Order, and dubbed him Knight of the Garter. Following his Royal Highness were the Prince of Wales and Prince Leopold, and in the course of the procession were representatives of other members of the English Royal Family. Officers of State of the late King carried the orders that he wore, his cocked hat and sword, and the Crown of Hanover, while the pall-barers, ten in number, were chosen from among his late ministers and officers of state. The service was choral, the officiating clergyman being the Venerable the Dean of Windsor. The Queen witnessed the ceremony from the royal pew, while the Princess of Wales with the Princesses Frederica and Marie of Hanover occupied seats near the chancel. The pall having been removed, the coffin, almost hidden by the wreaths of flowers which had been placed on it by the Queen and members of the Royal Family, was lowered into the vault, whither the Queen and others descended to take a last view of their relative's remains, while the congregation slowly dispersed to the solemn strains of the Dead March in Saul. The Duke of Cumberland, the Ex-Queen of Hanover, and her daughters have since left the Castle for Paris. The only evidence outside that anything unusual was going on was a guard of honour, with the band of the Scots Guards, drawn up in the courtyard. Hardly a day had elapsed after the mournful ceremony was over, when the Duke of Connaught with his affianced bride, the Princess Margaret Louise of Germany, and her father, Prince Frederick Charles, arrived at the Castle, where they will continue to reside for some time, till the auspicious day arrives for the marriage of the youthful couple.

The storm of Sunday, which burst about midday over London, was one of the severest we have known for some time, and caused a considerable amount of damage to property, many walls and parts of houses being struck by lightning, while not far from King's Cross, the main sewer burst into the Midland line at St. Paul's Junction, and rushing down into the cutting at King's Cross, by which the Great Northern and Midland trains travel citywards, completely stopped the traffic all Sunday and Monday, several fire-engines being engaged in the work of pumping out the water, and for a long time without seeming to make any impression. In the region of the Caledonian Road, the basement of many houses was inundated by the water, and not a few had their Sunday dinners interfered with, while in the Holloway Road, the ground was under water in parts, and the tram and omnibus traffic had to be suspended for some time. The storm does not appear to have made the atmosphere much lighter; at all events, the heat has been as great since, and may fairly be described as sweltering.

In the late Charles Mathews, who died after a brief illness, on Monday afternoon, the British stage has lost one of its brightest ornaments. The deceased actor was going a tour of the Provinces, and had taken cold at Stalybridge when en route for Manchester. This was followed by an attack of acute bronchitis, and though no one anticipated it would have terminated fatally, owing to the great vigour of the veteran's constitution, yet they evidently exaggerated his power of resistance, for he succumbed, as we have said, on Monday afternoon, his wife and son being present at the time of his demise. Numerous inquiries were made by his friends and admirers during the progress of his illness, and among those who did so were the Queen and the Prince of Wales. The late Charles James Mathews was born in 1803, being the son of Mr. Charles Mathews the elder by his wife, née De Camp—who was the daughter of an actor of that name, of some repute, and sister to Mrs. Charles Kemble. It was intended that young Charles should be educated for the Church, and he was sent to Merchant Taylors' School, where his father had been before him. On reaching years of discretion, however, he determined on following the profession of an architect, and was accordingly articled to the late Mr. Pugin for four years. With him he visited Paris, and subsequently went to Italy to pursue his studies, being made a member of the Academies of Milan and Venice. In 1830 he was laid prostrate, a helpless cripple, by fever supervening on an attack of malaria, and when removed to England his life was despaired of, but he recovered and was shortly afterwards appointed Surveyor of the Parish of Bow. On the death of his father he became part proprietor of the Adelphi, and resolved on abandoning his former pursuits and adopting the stage as his profession. He had, indeed, always shown a taste for dramatic impersonation. Accordingly he accepted an engagement under Madame Vestris, then manager of the Olympic Theatre, and his first appearance was a great success. This was in December 1835. In 1838 he married Madame Vestris, and she dying in 1857, he was married a second time to Mrs.

Davenport, who survives him. In March 1855 he gave up management altogether, and for the rest of his life was simply actor. Twice he visited the United States. In 1870 he went to Australia, returning thence in 1872, and in 1875-6 was in India, and had the honour of performing, by command, at the Calcutta Theatre before the Viceregal Court and His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. He was a successful dramatist, his first piece, My Wife's Mother, being performed at the Haymarket in 1833, before he had adopted the stage as a profession, and his last being My Awful Dad, which was played at the Gaiety in 1875. Of his other pieces, Cool as a Cucumber, which he prepared a French version of, named L'Anglais Timide, and played in to the delight of a Parisian audience in 1863; A Game of Speculation, in which he played Mr. Affable Hawk, and Patter v. Clatter, in which he played the hero, are perhaps as well known as any. As an actor he was unapproachable in the characters we have named, and also in the double rôle of Puff and Sir Fretful Plagiary in the Critic. But other claims he had on the admiration of society. He was a great linguist, speaking both French and Italian with wonderful purity. He was a good musician, and had attained such proficiency as a painter in oils that one of his pictures was exhibited in the R.A. in 1835. In society he was a very great favourite, his sterling qualities, his gentlemanly bearing, his consideration and kindness for others, and especially for young people, commanding the affectionate regard of all he was brought into contact with. We offer our sympathy to his family on the irreparable loss they have sustained.

And while we in England are mourning the loss of a veteran actor, who, even in his old age, retained all the bearing and vigour of youth, all Spain is struck with dismay at the sad and sudden death of its young and beautiful Queen Mercedes, who, in January, was a bride full of hope, and with a rosy path of expectation before her, but who now lies a corpse, cold and senseless to the sorrow and grief of her stricken husband and parents. There are not a few who imagine—for what reason we know not—that high and puissant personages know not sorrow. Yet who can hope to form a just conception of the grief of King Alphonso at the sudden close of a life so young and dear to him? Can we picture to ourselves the sorrow that reigns everywhere in Madrid, and indeed throughout Spain at the terribly sudden death of this young lady in all the vigour of her youth, and hardly yet perhaps able to realise the cares and responsibilities of her position? No doubt time will assuage King Alphonso's grief, but he will hardly ever be able to obliterate the remembrance of this dreadful blow to his happiness, though he should attain even to an almost patriarchal age. May the kindness of the G.A.T.O.U. support him in his bereavement, and give him strength to endure his loss!

At the end of last week the state of things at Berlin was the reverse of hopeful, and the continuance of the Congress seemed in the last degree improbable. Thanks, however, to the firmness of the representatives of Great Britain, who manfully declined to swerve a hair's breadth from their terms, Russia, after referring to the Czar at St. Petersburgh for instructions, yielded, and the Balkans will henceforth be the northern boundary of Turkey in Europe. In fact, there will be a strong and independent Turkey, capable of offering the most strenuous resistance to Russian aggression, while Bulgaria will be re-organised, and remaining nominally under the sovereignty of the Sultan, will naturally enjoy independence, guaranteed by all the Powers of Europe. Thus what was certain to form the most difficult point to arrange between Russia on the one hand, and Austria and Great Britain on the other, has fortunately been determined in a manner honourable to the latter Powers, and especially to Turkey. Little else has been done at the Congress, indeed, it is impossible, considering the gravity of the Bulgarian question, to have expected further material progress to have been made. We note, however, that there is every probability that Austria will occupy, with the consent of Europe, the provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina, and thus put a stop to the ambition of the petty princelings of Servia and Montenegro. Greece, too, will be consulted, but only on matters connected with her own interests, and those of the Greek populations of Turkey. Meantime, Turkey seems fully satisfied, and the situation at Constantinople appears to be no longer critical,—at least so critical as it was some time since. Let us hope that all will go well, and that ultimately a firm and durable peace will be brought about.

The Annual Festival of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Kent will take place at Canterbury, on Wednesday next. The three Lodges of that City, viz., the United Industrious, No. 31, the Saint Augustine, No. 972, and the Royal Military, No. 1449, have co-operated to make the gathering one of the most successful that has ever been held, and we hope to be able to report that these efforts have proved successful. The Provincial Grand Officers (Past and Present), and the Masters and Wardens of the various Lodges throughout the Province, will be entertained at breakfast at 10.30, and will afterwards adjourn to the Chapter House, where Provincial Grand Lodge will be opened at 12.30. The brethren will attend service at the Cathedral at two o'clock, and the business of Provincial Grand Lodge being concluded, will dine together in the Upper Music Hall at four o'clock. Bro. John R. Hall, P.M. of No. 31, is the Hon. Sec. to the Reception Committee, and we doubt not will be pleased to give any further information regarding the meeting.

Sir Daniel Gooch, Bart., M.P., Prov. Grand Master for Berks and Bucks, has fixed Wednesday next for the annual meeting of his Provincial Grand Lodge, which will be held at the Carlton Club Room, Windsor. The usual items of business are set down on the agenda paper as requiring the attention of the members of this important Province. The Finance Committee will meet at 1 o'clock, and audit the accounts of the past year; Provincial Grand Lodge will be opened at half past one; after the transaction of the business of the day, the brethren will dine together at the Town Hall, at three o'clock. We notice that the Great Western Railway offer the usual advantages to members attending the meeting; return tickets being issued from the principal stations at single fares, and a special train being provided in the evening to convey those brethren who would otherwise be compelled to leave before the conclusion of the day's programme.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons of Middlesex and Surrey will be held this day (Saturday) at the Greyhound Hotel, Croydon, under the Presidency of the Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Colonel Francis Burdett. Grand Lodge is to be opened at three o'clock; at half-past the members will repair to the parish church, where, by (permission of the vicar), a special service will be held, and a sermon preached by the Provincial Grand Chaplain. After the business of the day the brethren will adjourn to banquet, tickets for which (6s 6d each) may be had of the Prov. G. Sec., Bro. Brighten. Previous to the meeting of Prov. Grand Lodge, the Croydon Mark Lodge will be opened (at two o'clock) for the advancement of such brethren as may be eligible.

We have received with great regret an announcement to the effect that Sir Knight John Robin Mc Daniel, Past Grand Commander of the Grand Commandery of Virginia, departed this life at Washington, on the 14th May, in the 72nd year of his age. He is spoken of in the circular containing the sad intelligence, as having been true in all his relations of life, "True to his professions, true to every duty, true as a friend, true as a Templar." We offer our tribute of respectful sympathy to the relatives and friends of the deceased Sir Knight.

Those of our readers who may visit the Paris Exhibition will have an excellent opportunity of judging of the merits of Messrs. Dick Radcliffe and Co.'s ability as floral decorators. They have very prettily fitted up a window case near the Avenue "des Grandes nations," and this is decorated with ferns, rockwork, fountains, and waterfalls—in a manner which abundantly testifies to the excellent skill and taste of this well known firm. They have likewise fitted the Prince of Wales's Pavilion with a fernery, having caverns, cascades, &c., in an equally becoming style, and they have also sent four cases of very handsome wreaths, composed of dried natural flowers and grasses. Indeed, the whole of their exhibits are a credit o the firm, and to the country they represent at this International Exhibition.

Bro. Court (U.S.A.)—We have a pocket book which belongs to you. It was found, after the meeting of the Royal Savoy Lodge, on Tuesday last.

Crosbie, Roberts, Brand, McClean, Jaffa, and others. All preliminaries were duly observed. Bro. C. Lorkin answered the questions leading to the third degree, and was entrusted. Lodge was opened in the third, and the W.M. rehearsed the ceremony of raising, performing his work in a very correct manner, and giving the Traditional History. Bro. Pearcy worked the third section of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. Lodge was closed down to the first degree, and Bro. Pearcy worked the first and second sections of that lecture, assisted by the brethren. Bros. G. H. Jaffa of St. James Lodge, No. 1579, and C. Crosbie, of the Sincerity Lodge, No. 174, were elected members.

On Saturday, 22nd June, Bros. James Crosbie W.M., Hallam jun. S.W., I. P. Cohen J.W., J. Lorkin S.D., Brasted J.D., Hallam sen. I.G., Killick Sec., Pearcy Preceptor. Lodge opened, and minutes were confirmed. The ceremonies of initiation and passing were rehearsed, Bros. C. Lorkin and Garrod as candidates. Several sections of the first Lecture were worked. Bro. Hammond Kennard, thirty degree, Leith and Canongate Lodge, No. 5 Scotch Constitution, was elected a member. Bro. Hallam jun. was appointed W.M. for the next meeting, after which the Lodge will be closed until Saturday, 7th September.

De Sussex Chapter, No. 406.—At a regular convocation of this Chapter, held on the 14th June, at the Masonic Hall, Maple-street, Newcastle-on-Tyne, there were present—Companions J. Ridsdale Z., W. S. Hughes H., T. J. Armstrong J., H. Hotham P.Z. Treas., R. L. Armstrong E., R. G. Salmon as N., G. Cockburn P.S., Bolam and Carr A.S., G. S. Sims Janitor. The Chapter was opened, and the minutes of last meeting read and confirmed; the ballot was taken for two brethren to be exalted, and it proved successful in each case. No other business offering the Chapter was closed, and the Companions adjourned to refreshment. Comp. J. Cook P.S. 481 was present as a visitor.

Derby Lodge, No. 724.—The monthly meeting of this Lodge took place on Wednesday, the 26th June, at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, Liverpool. Present—Bros. Asher Hart W.M., R. Cripe S.W., H. Trevitt J.W., M. Hart P.M. Sec., J. Pendleton as S.D., Jacobs as J.D., J. W. Ballard P.M. D.C., Gordon I.G., M. Williamson Tyler; P.M.'s Bros. Caine and Beeken. Visitors—Bros. Cave, Henochsberg, and Davies. The minutes of the previous meeting were read, found correctly recorded, and duly ratified. It was explained, in consequence of the illness of the candidate, the third degree would not be given. There was a notice of motion by Bro. Jacobs to the effect that he should move for the alteration of the date for the ceremony of Installation to June, and that July and August be months of vacation in each year. No other business coming before the Lodge, the brethren were invited to refreshment by the hospitable and amiable W.M. The brethren enjoyed a very generous repast, and the W.M. rose to propose the toast of the Queen, with a few well-chosen remarks; the toast was properly honoured, all the brethren singing the National Anthem. The next toast of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and our Masonic Rulers Supreme and Subordinate, was submitted from the chair, and heartily drunk; Bro. M. Hart leading in the Anthem God Bless the Prince of Wales, which was very well sung. The W.M. called upon Bro. Gordon for a song; he cheerfully responded. W. Bro. Hart then with the kindest expressions possible gave the toast of the Visitors. He said it afforded him great pleasure in seeing Bros. Davies and Henochsberg with them that evening. He regretted that there had not been work before the Lodge, as he was sure Bro. Davies, who had the interests of the Craft so much at heart, always visited a Lodge for the purpose of seeing them work. He (the W.M.) regretted to learn that Bro. Davies would not, during his stay in Liverpool, be able to pay them another visit. However, as he had, on the last meeting previous to this, seen the third given, he has a knowledge how we get along. We shall always be glad to see Bro. Davies, and accord him a warm reception. We are also pleased to see Bro. Henochsberg here this evening. You know the feelings I have towards him, and he must be fully aware that he is heartily welcome to the Derby Lodge. Our Lodge at all times extends a cordial greeting to all who favour us with a visit, and I regret that there are not more visitors round the festive board on this occasion. To those who are here we give the toast in the heartiest manner. Bro. Davies replied for the honour conferred, and was followed by Bro. Henochsberg, who returned thanks in a very able manner. The Derby Lodge is one of those happy, harmonious Lodges which it is a pleasure to visit, especially so under the able and genial Mastership of Bro. Hart. May it ever continue as harmonious and prosperous as it is to-day. During the evening, Bros. McGauley, Humphreys, Jacobs, and Pendleton discoursed some good music, and Bro. M. Hart gave a touching recitation, in a manner he feels is sure to please. The last toast brought the evening's pleasures to a close, and the brethren separated, highly edified.

Everton Chapter, No. 823.—The regular communication of this Chapter was held at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, on Tuesday, the 25th inst. Present—Comps. T. Shaw M.E.Z., J. W. Ballard H., Wm. Boulton J., T. Webster S.E., Jesse Banning P.Z. P.P.G.P.S. as S.N., Wm. Wilson P.S., King 1st Assist., Beesley 2nd Assist., Ex. Comp. Cottrell P.Z. as Treas., P. Ball Janitor, and Comps. J. Pendleton, W. Brassey, D. Davies, P. W. Oglesby, T. Johnson, and H. Trevitt, &c. Visitors—H. Williams P.P.G.S.B. P.Z. 580, Pearson P.Z. 249, R. Washington Z. 1094, H. Bradshaw 1094, A. Cotter 249, &c. The usual preliminary business having been disposed of, it was proposed by Ex. Comp. Cottrell, and seconded by Ex. Comp. Banning, that a letter of condolence be forwarded to the widow of our late Comp. J. B. Foreshaw, on her bereavement,—carried unanimously. It was proposed by Ex. Comp. Cottrell, and seconded by Ex. Comp. Banning, that the sum of fifteen guineas be devoted from the funds of the Chapter for the purpose of endowing the three Principals of the Chapter as Life Governors in the W. L. Educational Institution,—carried unanimously. There were three candidates for Exaltation, but neither put in an appearance, much to the disappointment of all present, especially as the Chapter meets only once in two months. The Chapter was closed in ancient form, and by command of the M.E.Z. the Companions adjourned to refreshment. On the removal of the cloth, the M.E.Z. gave the first toast,—the Queen, prefacing it with a few pleasing remarks; the same was duly honoured, the Comps. singing the National Anthem. After the toast of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales was proposed and heartily drunk, the Prov. Grand Supt., and the Masonic Rulers Supreme and Subordinate was given from the chair, and coupled therewith the name of Ex-Comp. Banning, who in reply acknowledged the compliment paid him in having his name associated with the toast. He paid a high tribute of praise to our Masonic Rulers, saying he was proud of them, and stating that no Comp. would regret ever attaining to the distinction of working with them; he trusted that every one deserving of honours would receive them, as reward sweetens labour. He thanked them for the kind manner the toast had been proposed and received. Comp. Trevitt gave a very impressive recitation, after which Comp. King proposed the health of the three Principals, which was cordially drunk with musical honours. Ex-Comp. Washington kindly gave a song. Ex-Comp. Shaw in response to the last toast said, he wished to be as brief as possible, but as he should be compelled to reply for the three Principals, because of the unavoidable early departure of Comps. Ballard and Boulton, he would have to reply a little more at length than he desired. He felt greatly put about that there was no work done that evening. He had always attended to his duties, for years, in that Chapter, and could not remember such an occurrence ever before; he regretted it exceedingly, especially as so many visitors had come for the sole purpose of seeing the various officers do their part, and which had gained for the Everton Chapter so exalted a name. He hoped they would never meet again to part under such unprofitable circumstances. He thanked the Comps. for receiving the toast in the kind manner they had. He proceeded to put for their cordial reception a toast he always felt so much pleasure in proposing. The Everton Chapter owed every thing to the talent and energy of its P.Z.'s, and he, as well as they, were greatly indebted for the continued support given the Chapter by these able Companions, without whose assistance they could not succeed. He therefore would ask all to charge their glasses, and drink the very good health of the P.Z.'s of the Everton Chapter. This was most heartily done. Comp. Milne gave the next song. Ex-Comp. Cottrell rose to respond to the toast so kindly put from the chair, and so unanimously received. He had the privilege, as the I.P.Z., to reply first. He said the uniform kindness and gratitude shown by the Comps., and the many special honours conferred upon him by the Chapter fully compensated for the attention devoted by him to their welfare. He was always ready and willing to do his utmost, and, with the M.E.Z., regretted that they had been disappointed in not having at least one candidate for exaltation that night, but their meeting had not been exactly fruitless, as the Chapter had increased its weight in the Province by endowing the chair of the three Principals as Life Governors in the West Lancashire Educational Institution. They had ample funds, and he trusted the time was rapidly approaching when they would add additional lustre to the Chapter by contributing to the great and invaluable Charities centred in London. Ex-Comp. Banning said he was fortunate in having to follow so eloquent and able a speaker as Comp. Cottrell, as he uttered sentences coinciding with his own. He observed that it was well known the deep interest he took in the Craft, and particularly in the Royal Arch degree, which to him was the consummation of everything touched upon in preceding ones. He felt the more he studied and followed the principles of Freemasonry, the better he was enabled to fill his position in life with satisfaction to himself. The precepts laid down in our glorious Order made us befitting members of society, taught us how to live, and leads us daily to contemplate, with feelings of profound adoration, the Grand Lodge above. He assured the Companions that in going through the chair he had not deemed his labours ended, but as long as he could he would stand to his post, and with the utmost pleasure render all the assistance he could. In conclusion he thanked the Comps. for receiving the toast of the P.Z.'s in such a cordial way. Ex. Comp. Shaw then gave the Officers of the Chapter, and said, without deprecating other Chapters, the Officers of the Everton Chapter always held up the highest standard, and he trusted that the position for excellence of working which No. 823 had attained would never be relinquished. With the toast he would mention the names of Comps. King and Beesley, who in responding, said they felt the great responsibility of their positions to keep up the standard hitherto attained by their Chapter, and expressed their determination not to fail in their duties. Comp. Pendleton favoured the Companions with a song. In proposing the toast of the visitors, which was done in the most hearty and fraternal manner possible, the M.E.Z. expressed the pleasure he experienced in seeing so many distinguished visitors present. He said the Everton Chapter takes great delight in having as many visitors as can come, he regretted there were so few. During his year of office he would be glad to see all who might pay them a visit, without mentioning any names, it would suffice to say he was delighted to see them, and hoped they would come again to see their working. The toast was drunk with enthusiasm. Comps. Milne and Beesley favoured the Companions with more harmony, after which Comps. Williams, Pearson, Washington, Cotter, Bradshaw, and Davies replied to the toast of the Visitors. Comp. King complied to the request for a recitation. Comp. Cottrell said the next toast was entrusted to him, and the subject was brought home to him impressively by the eloquent remarks of Comp. Davies. In his speaking of our Order in its universal aspect, we are reminded that many Companions of this Chapter are scattered over various parts of the world, and who, although absent in the body, are, when we meet, with us in spirit, and we who are privileged to meet here will remember them, as our absent Companions, and to this toast I ask you to drink most cordially. This was done. Comp. Cottrell favoured the Companions with the next song, after which additional toasts were proposed, duly received, and responded to; more harmony was well rendered, and after spending a most enjoyable evening the Companions dispersed at an early hour.

Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, No. 860.—On Tuesday evening last, at Bro. Smyth's, Sisters' Tavern, Pownall Road, Dalston. Bro. M. Christian W.M., J. Lorkin S.W., Gilham J.W., Wardall S.D., Forss J.D., Borer I.G., Dallas Sec., Smyth Treas., P.M. Brasted Preceptor. The Lodge was opened, and the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The ceremony of Initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Polak candidate. Bro. Forss answered the questions leading to the second degree, and the ceremony of passing was rehearsed, Bro. Forss candidate. The Lodge was closed to the first degree; Bro. Dallas worked the first section of the Lecture, assisted by the brethren; Bro. J. Lorkin was elected W.M. for the ensuing week.

Whittington Lodge of Instruction, No. 862.—At the weekly meeting of this Lodge, held on Wednesday, the 26th inst., at Bro. Hyde's, Red Lion, Poppin's-court, Fleet-street. Bros. Marston W.M., Bull S.W., Gladwell J.W., Abell S.D., Cornu J.D., Pate I.G., Long P.M., Preceptor. After the reading and confirmation of minutes, the Lodge was opened in the second degree, and Bro. Tate was examined as to his proficiency, entrusted and raised. The Lodge was then closed down to the second, and various sections of the lecture were worked by the W.M., Bro. Tate, and the Preceptor. Bro. Cornu was elected a member, and Bro. Bull W.M. for ensuing week. The Lodge was then closed.

Upton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1227.—At the King and Queen, Norton Folgate, on Friday, the 14th inst. Bros. Hine W.M., Campbell S.W., Moss J.W., Posener S.D., Kent J.D., Smith I.G., Fenner Preceptor; also Bros. Richmond, Sargeant, Brickels, Tatton, Bolton, &c. The minutes of last meeting were read and duly confirmed; Bro. Bolton answered the questions, and Lodge advanced to the second degree; the W. Master then rehearsed the ceremony of passing. On the resumption of the Lodge to the first degree, Bro. Fenner worked the first, second and third sections of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. Bro. Brockels of Constitutional Lodge, No. 55, was elected a member. Bro. Campbell was appointed W.M. for the ensuing week, after which Lodge was closed.

Pembroke Lodge, No. 1299.—The monthly meeting of this Lodge was held at West Derby, near Liverpool, on Thursday the 20th inst. Present—Bros. John Capell W.M., R. Bennett P.M. as S.W., F. B. Bramham J.W., T. G. Fisher Sec., P. Macmuldrow P.M. Senior Grand Deacon Treas., B. M. Uldro S.D., T. W. Rudd Organist, Wm. Avis I.G., J. Robinson Tyler. Past Master—Bro. W. S. Vines Prov. G.D.C. Visitors—Bros. Rev. Dr. Hyde D.D. 1086, Berry P.M. 155, Hatch 220, Ellis 220, Durant 1473, Sandbrook 1609, &c. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and declared correctly recorded, after which the Lodge was advanced to the second degree, and Bro. Lewis was passed to the degree of a Fellow Craft. The Lodge then resumed business in the first, and the labours of the evening being ended, the Worshipful Master closed the Lodge in due and ancient form. By request of Bro. Capell, the brethren partook of supper, which was done justice to by all present. On removal of the cloth, the usual Loyal toast of the Queen was given from the chair, and duly honoured. The W. Master proceeded rapidly to the toast of our Masonic Rulers, supreme and subordinate, coupling the name of Bro. Macmuldrow P.G.S.D. P.M. with the same. Bro. Avis kindly responded to the call for a song. Bro. Macmuldrow, in reply to the last toast, said, in proportion to the honour and significance of being a Provincial Grand Officer, he esteemed and wore those honours, and trusted he would be able to do so with every consideration, and thanked the Worshipful Master for uniting his name with the toast, and the brethren for receiving it in such a cordial manner. Bro. Sandbrook kindly favoured the brethren with a song. The Worshipful Master next gave the toast of the Past Masters, coupling the name of Bro. W. S. Vines P.M. Prov. G.D.C. Bro. Macmuldrow favoured the brethren with a song in the interval. Bro. Vines rose to respond to the toast of the Past Masters, and said he had indulged in the hope that the Worshipful Master would dispense with the toast he had so kindly given, and which had been so heartily received by them all; he expressed his readiness to do all in his power for the good of the Lodge, but regretted the absence of other Past Masters. The working of the Lodge is always enhanced by the presence of the Officers, past and present; and it was to be deprecated that one of the principal Officers was so often absent. He thanked the brethren for the cordial manner in which the toast was drunk, and before he resumed his seat he availed himself of the great pleasure he experienced in proposing the health of the Worshipful Master. In offering this toast it was quite unnecessary for him to tell the brethren how deep an interest the Worshipful Master took in the Lodge and the Craft, and how well he had filled the Office of Master of this Lodge. The toast was most cordially drank. Bro. T. W. Rudd kindly gave the next song. The W.M. in responding to the toast last proposed by W. Bro. Vines, returned his sincere thanks, and regretted that there had not been more work, as was anticipated. He hoped that the Visitors would pardon any inconvenience they might be put to, as certain eventualities had to be gone into. Bro. Bramham ably sang the next song. The W.M. rose for the last time to propose a toast which, he said, was more heartily drunk in the Pembroke Lodge than any other, because the members all rejoiced to see their visiting brethren, and no Lodge did or could give a more truly fraternal welcome to their Visitors than the Lodge he had the honour of presiding over. He had great pleasure in uniting the names of the Rev. Bro. Hyde, and Bros. Davies and Berry with the toast. The toast was cordially drunk. Bro. Avis volunteered the next song. Bro. Hyde, on rising to respond for the Visitors, said: I thank the Worshipful Master and brethren for the kind reception given the Visitors this evening. It affords me great pleasure to be with you, and to witness the efficient working and harmonious feeling existing in the Lodge. I have been particularly pleased with the truly Masonic spirit evinced in the Lodge to-night towards the candidate for initiation. I may say with reference to Mr. Deane that I have known him and his family for a considerable time, and think him in every way deserving of that great mark of respect and confidence which you have shown him in unanimously electing him to become a member of our Order. Happily, Freemasonry does not look upon a gracious act, performed by a generous-hearted man (as some would say indiscreetly generous), as sufficient reason for its censure or disapproval, morally speaking. It will doubtless be a great gratification to Mr. Deane to know that the vote of this Lodge has been so unanimous in his favour. With reference to the remarks of the Worshipful Master, I need not say there is any cause for an apology on account of a portion of the business of the Lodge being submitted for the members only, and I cannot refrain from expressing my sincere congratulations to the Pembroke Lodge in having for its Master a Mason whom I have known in the Craft and otherwise for years, and a Brother whom I greatly respect. Bros. Davies and Berry followed, and returned thanks. A few more songs and a pleasant social chat, previous to the Tyler's toast being given, concluded the programme, and the brethren dispersed.

Stanley Lodge, No. 1325.—The regular monthly meeting of this Lodge was held at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, Liverpool, on Tuesday, the 18th instant. Present—Bros. J. W. Burgess W.M., J. H. Bradshaw S.W., C. Winskill J.W., T. Faulkes Sec., H. Ashmore P.M. Treas., R. B. Burgess S.D., N. Robinson J.D., C. Leighton P.M. D.C., A. Samuels Steward, S. Hill I.G., M. Williamson Tyler. P.M. Bro. F. Knight took his seat in the East. There was present a large number of visiting brethren, among whom were J. Skeaf P.G. Org., John Pemberton P.P.G. Superintendent of Works P.M. 1264, T. Roberts P.M. 673, J. Woods Treasurer 1094, H. Williams P.M. 249, G. E. Hanmer P.M. 1086, H. Burrows W.M. 673, J. Mortleman S.W. 1470, &c., &c., and members. The minutes of the last meeting were read, declared correctly recorded, and ratified. The next business was the installing of Bro. Bradshaw W.M. elect, for which purpose he was formally introduced to the W.M. presiding, and the usual ceremony was duly performed by Worshipful Bro. Burgess in first-class style. Bro. Bradshaw, after receiving the salutations of the brethren present, at once proceeded to invest his Officers for the ensuing year, which with the able assistance afforded by Bro. Burgess was soon accomplished. The Officers are as follows:—Bros.

J. W. Burgess I.P.M., C. Winskill S.W., T. Faulkes J.W., R. B. Burgess Sec., H. Ashmore P.M. Treasurer, F. Knight P.M. D.C., N. Robinson S.D., A. Samuels J.D., J. Holmes and P. McArthur Campbell Stewards, S. Hill I.G., M. Williamson Tyler. Bro. Ashmore delivered the ancient charges efficiently, and on the conclusion of the ceremony, the Worshipful Master proposed, and Bro. Leighton seconded, that a vote of thanks be tendered the I.P.M. for the very able manner in which he had performed the installation ceremony, and that the same be entered on the minutes of the Lodge—carried. The labours of the day being ended, the W.M. invited the brethren to banquet, which, it is to be regretted, was held in the old Lodge room, where there is no accommodation for such a number as were present on the occasion. The Stanley Lodge to all appearance is firmly established, and is gaining ground, and it is sincerely hoped that its future career will be a continuous one of prosperity. Few Lodges have come through such a fiery ordeal as 1325, and it is evident that the increasing prosperity of the Lodge is due to the able Masters who have recently passed the chair. It is a pleasure to be able to record the progress of a Lodge. The credit is applicable where it is due. After the brethren had done justice to the good things provided, the W.M. gave the first toast,—The Queen, which was duly honoured, the brethren all singing the National Anthem. Bro. Ashmore, by command of the W.M., gave the toast of the M.W. the Grand Master H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, which was heartily received; Bro. Bryan sang God Bless the Prince of Wales. After the toast of the Pro Grand Master had been given and received, Bro. Linaker in his usual good style favoured the brethren with a song. The I.P.M. then proposed the toast of the Prov. Grand Master in a very able manner, and united the name of Bro. Pemberton as a Prov. Grand Officer with the toast; the toast was cordially drunk, and Bro. Pemberton responded in a speech remarkable for its apology for the absence of Prov. Grand Officers from their duties in the work of the Province. He wished the Lodge every success, and paid a tribute to his dear friend who was placed in the exalted position of Master, and congratulated the Lodge on having so worthy a Mason to fill the chair. The I.P.M. again assumed the gavel, and in doing so this time rose to propose the health of the Worshipful Master. Bro. Burgess said it gave him the greatest satisfaction to propose this toast, as the W. Brother was one whom they all knew so well and so greatly respected. He was sure that the prosperity of the Lodge would increase under his Mastership, and the Lodge and Officers, Past and Present, would be united in one desire to enable him to carry on the affairs of the Lodge with success. He announced, with additional pleasure, that Bro. Bradshaw was the first Master who had risen from the ranks as an initiate of the Lodge. The toast was drunk with enthusiasm. Bro. Hatton responded to the call for a song in his accustomed tasteful manner. The W.M. on rising returned thanks for the very kind manner in which Bro. Burgess had spoken of him; he was deeply moved by the cordial reception his name received from all. As he was the first Master from among the initiates of the Lodge, he trusted he would be enabled, through the co-operation of the Officers and members, to make the Lodge second to none; there was no reason why it should not be one of the best Lodges in the province. The next toast proposed from the chair was that of the Installing Master. Bro. Bradshaw felt sure every one present admired the brilliant style in which Bro. Burgess did his work, and the excellent manner in which Bro. Ashmore gave the charges; the toast was most cordially drunk. The W.M. presented a P.M.'s jewel, in the name of the Lodge, to the I.P.M. Bro. Burgess in reply to the last toast said, he thanked the brethren sincerely for their mark of esteem. When he first saw the light of Freemasonry, in the East Indies, he never thought he should hold office in England; he had entered this Lodge with Bro. Knight, with whom he had worked hand-in-hand for the good of the Craft, and had now the proud satisfaction of following him as a Past Master. Both had done their duty to the best of their ability, and he felt sure that in the post of Immediate Past Master, he would do all in his power for the good of the Lodge in the future. He urged the members and Officers of the Lodge to attend their various posts, and said that the satisfactory position he held that day in the Order might be acquired by all, if they would, in their proper turn. He thanked them greatly for the handsome jewel, and trusted he would be long spared to wear it, with credit to the Craft and the Lodge which had so generously voted it to him. The W.M. next proposed the health of the Past Masters of the Stanley Lodge, briefly and appropriately. Bro. Bell kindly gave the next song. Bro. Leighton, as the Senior Past Master, rose, with peculiar pleasure, to respond to the last toast; he was happy to see Bro. Bradshaw in the East. He had the honour of initiating him, and he felt sure he would do credit to the exalted position of Master of the Lodge. Bros. Knight and Burgess followed, with suitable replies to the toast. Bro. Davies favoured the brethren with the next song. The I.P.M., by request of the W.M., then gave the toast of the Visitors, in his usual genial way extending a hearty welcome to one and all. The toast was heartily drunk, and fully responded to by Bros. Williams, Hayes, Roberts, Jones, &c. After which Bro. Burgess gave the West Lancashire Educational Institution. In proposing success to this Institution, he made an urgent appeal, in the absence of Bro. Browne, for that support which it so richly deserved. He coupled with the toast the name of Bro. Williams. During the interval Bro. Donelly volunteered the next song. Bro. Williams, in response to the last toast, said he regretted that it was not left to one more competent to reply on such an important occasion. He was, however, fully alive to the great value of the West Lancashire Educational Institution; he told them that every child educated under the auspices of the institution was thoroughly and properly trained. He then recounted the various offices, and stated that all those offices were honorary, and the difficult duties were performed gratuitously; he finally urged every member of the Lodge to do his part towards sustaining so noble an institution. The W. Bro. produced a profound impression. The W.M., in the next toast, gave the Officers of the Lodge, and, in doing so, expressed a desire that each brother would do his duty. In the selection he had made, he felt confident that they would. The toast was warmly received. Bro. Winskill favoured the brethren with a capital recitation. He then proceeded to reply to the toast of the Officers in a suitable manner, and was followed by the J.W., &c., &c. The I.P.M., in a very kind and appreciative manner, proposed the Masonic Press, uniting therewith the names of Bros. Wood, Mackenzie, and S. M. Davies, FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE. The toast was drunk with musical honours, after which it was graciously responded to by each of the brethren mentioned. The W.M. next gave the Musical Brethren, which was cordially received, and replied to by Bro. Skeaf. The W. Bro. then, in a very fraternal spirit, proposed the toast of the Absent Brethren, which was heartily received, and fully acknowledged by Bro. Burgess in his usual happy strain. Bro. Linaker again sang a capital song; after which the W.M. gave the health of the Members of the Stanley Lodge, with kind remarks. The toast was duly honoured and responded to. Before terminating the evening's programme, Bros. Faulkes and Ellery favoured the brethren with additional harmony, after which the Tyler's toast brought the proceedings to a close, and the brethren dispersed, having spent a very pleasant evening.

St. Michaels Lodge, No. 211.—The beautiful summer weather we are now revelling in has induced many of our Masonic friends to direct their attention to promoting those little excursions that are becoming so popular with members of the Craft. On Wednesday last, some of the members of the St. Michaels repaired, by Great Western Railway, to Maidenhead. The party left Paddington at 10.30, and, on reaching Maidenhead, were conveyed by carriages to the Raymead Hotel, where luncheon was awaiting them. After this had been ably discussed, the brethren, with their lady friends, proceeded up the river by boat. After a most enjoyable trip, the return was made to the Hotel, where the party partook of a most recherché dinner and dessert, which was capitally served by host Deacon. On the removal of the cloth, Bro. Alfred Green, the W.M., briefly introduced the few toasts it is customary to honour on these occasions, and then the party once more took a peep at the beautiful scenery that surrounds this charming spot. Not till the exigencies of the train service compelled, did our fair friends exhibit a desire for the return journey, which, however, was pleasantly completed. All tendered their sincere thanks to Bro. Green for the admirable way in which he conceived and carried out the arrangements.

Royal Savoy Lodge, No. 1744.—The second meeting of this Lodge since its consecration took place at Ashley's Hotel, Covent Garden, on Tuesday, the 25th inst. Present—Bros. J. Willing jun. W.M., Adams P.M. S.W., Clemow J.W., Jones S.D., Hyland J.D., Cook I.G., Stiles Secretary, Treadwell P.M., Clifton, W. Payne, Holt, Parkes, J. Greenfield, Dellar, Jacques, &c. Visitors—Rev. Robert Court (Ancient York Lodge, Lowell, Massachusetts, U.S.A.), Sweeney P.M., Adams P.M., Rowley and others. After reading and confirming the minutes, it was announced that the Ladies' Summer Banquet would take place at Lewis's Hotel, Maidenhead, on the 25th July next, and that due arrangements would be made with the Railway Company for the comfortable conveyance of the ladies and brethren. The W.M. then passed Bros. J. Maby and A. D. Douglas. A ballot was taken, and J. W. Smith, F. Howcroft, C. Hammond, F. Dovy and W. H. Nicol were duly initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry. As at the last banquet, there was an abundance of excellent things provided, but the waiting was exceedingly bad, and, in consequence, great delay and confusion took place between the courses. Nearly, if not all, the waiters were foreigners, and appeared to misunderstand the orders given them. The brethren are anxious that, on future occasions, there should be at least some English waiters present. A very excellent speech was made by Bro. Court, who particularly alluded to the great and favourable change in feeling created by our American brethren towards the Prince of Wales since he had joined the Craft, and in the course of his speech mentioned as a fact that long before the close of the late war between North and South the Freemasons on both sides were endeavouring to put a stop to further bloodshed, and to bring about a durable peace. The speech of our American brother gave evident satisfaction to all present, and was received with enthusiasm. Speeches were made by P.M. Adams, and others; several good old songs were sung by some of the visitors and members.

Freemason's Chronicle;

A WEEKLY RECORD OF MASONIC INTELLIGENCE.

SANCTIONED BY THE GRAND LODGE OF ENGLAND.

VOL. VIII.—No. 184. SATURDAY, 6th JULY 1878. [PRICE THREEPENCE. Registered at the G.P.O. as a Newspaper.

THE FESTIVAL OF MONDAY NEXT.

IT is as well we should remind our readers that the third and last of our Anniversary Festivals for the current year will be held on Monday next, at the Alexandra Palace, and we trust that, with His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught in the chair, and a strong array of Stewards headed by Lord Suffield, P.G.M. of Norfolk, as President, with Sir Henry Edwards, Lieut.-Colonel Charles Lyne, and General Brownrigg, C.B., Provincial Grand Masters of West Yorkshire, Monmouthshire, and Surrey respectively, and a considerable number of other brethren of distinction as Vice-Presidents, the eightieth Annual Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys will surpass all its predecessors in the brilliancy of its results. The demands on the time of our Royal brethren are so many and so urgent, that it is impossible for them to take that active part in the doings of the Craft which we have reason to know it would be their greatest pleasure to take, were time and opportunity at their disposal. It is, therefore, the more incumbent on all who are truly interested in the well-being of our Society and its magnificent Institutions to prove beyond the possibility of a doubt that we appreciate fully their efforts to promote the cause of Masonry, when circumstances permit of their doing so. With the manifold duties of their high station pressing continually upon them, they cannot hope to be among us frequently, but when they are present, and especially when they evince their readiness to preside at any of our most important gatherings, let the reception which is accorded be worthy alike of them and of the Craft in general. It is for this reason that, at the risk of being thought wearisome, we shall take this opportunity of recapitulating the most important reasons above and beyond the presidency of the Duke of Connaught, why, in our judgment, the meeting of Monday should prove a conspicuous success. In the first place, the day chosen for this Festival happens to be the thirteenth anniversary of the opening of the present school buildings. This is a most favourable auspice to begin with, and if the brethren will call to mind the amazing benefits which the Boys' School has been able to confer in that brief period of time, they will regard those benefits in the light of a special reason why they should continue, and if possible, enlarge the sphere of their support. When an Institution languishes or falls short of fulfilling the expectations of its supporters, there is, in some cases at all events, some kind of excuse for people withholding their support, or helping it but half-heartedly; but when an Institution fulfils most admirably the purpose for which it is designed, when we find the recipients of its benefits do credit to the assistance bestowed on them, then we say it is obvious the Institution is properly managed, the money contributed towards its maintenance is usefully expended, and it becomes an ornament as well as a credit to its supporters. There is, in such case, a distinct and most pronounced incentive to still greater exertion, with a view to making it still more serviceable, and as the need for its efficient maintenance becomes each year more and more apparent, the coincidence of this particular anniversary with the presidency of the Duke of Connaught is a substantial reason why the result of Monday's effort should be worthy of the occasion. There is too another and equally weighty reason. The commemoration of the opening of the new building will necessarily remind all present that a considerable portion of the cost of the new buildings was derived from the sale of the invested properties of the Institution. The Government Stock, which to the extent of £13,100 had been accumulated from the savings of many years, was converted into cash, in order that the present commodious School might be erected, and at this moment the Boys' School has but £8,000 in invested moneys on which to rely for any special emergency. In other words, there is upwards of £5,000 more stock to be purchased before it will be on the footing, in this respect, on which it stood thirteen years ago. Is it hoping too much that Monday's tale of subscriptions will enable this deficiency to be made good? A long pull, a strong pull, and a pull altogether on the part of the Stewards, ably responded to by the Craft generally, will enable this to be done, and we trust it will be our good fortune to chronicle a success to at least this trifling extent. Two other and equally valid reasons must be added to those we have already specified. The School has been considerably increased in point of accommodation and the number of its pupils within the last few months. There are, or will be, when the School reopens after the Midsummer holidays, over two hundred boys on the strength of the establishment. This enlargement of the premises has been effected at a cost of over £3,000, and the addition of some thirty pupils means an additional annual expenditure amounting to (say) some £1,350. Thus, at the very time the authorities were expending liberally of their means in order to make the School more capable of meeting the increasing demands on it for admission, they were committing themselves to an increased annual outlay of no inconsiderable amount. We are not exaggerating when we say that, with the present number of pupils, the annual expenditure will be little short of £10,000, and if we set down the permanent income at £500, we shall be in excess rather than in defect of the real amount. Thus, the School has this year trenched more considerably than usual on its resources, and has increased its responsibilities for the future, and had we had no other reasons to enumerate, this would have amply sufficed by itself as a ground for our appealing more urgently than ever to brethren to support "Our Boys." Nor must we lose sight of the fact that, as year follows year, the number of those who apply to be admitted into the School goes on increasing, and even now, with the additions recently authorised, there is every half year a very considerable number of deserving boys for whom it is impossible to make the provision they so sorely need. We cannot, with our present experience, anticipate that a time will come, sooner or later, when the number of vacancies will exceed the number of applications. On the contrary, the probability lies all the other way, and as soon as the authorised list of pupils is full, we shall probably have occasion to deplore, half yearly, the inability of the School to meet the increasing demands made upon it. We are aware it is impossible to enlarge the School so as to enable it to meet all the claims upon its resources, but our experience of recent elections shows that there is still ample room for its enlargement. Thus, what with the good that has been done already, the use of invested moneys in erecting the new premises, the recent outlay in enlarging those premises, the increased permanent outlay consequent on the increased numbers of pupils, and the many demands for admission into the School, we have a sufficiency of reasons why the Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution of Monday should be a brilliant success. And, even as a compliment to H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, for his share in the day's proceedings, we trust our hopes and expectations will be realised, and that the eightieth anniversary will be the most memorable in the annals of the School.

THE VACANT SECRETARYSHIP.

ON Thursday, the 11th inst., the choice of a successor to the late Bro. Little will be determined, and this, therefore, is the last occasion on which we shall have an opportunity of offering any remarks on a subject which is admittedly of the very greatest importance to the whole of the English Craft. On what may be the result of the election depends, in great measure, the well-being of the Girls' School for some years. We know, of course, that, if the choice should sooner or later turn out to be a bad one, it is in the power of the authorities to remove the chosen one and hold a fresh election, but that would be a certain detriment to the Institution, though not so considerable a one as would be the retention in office of an inefficient Secretary. Rightly, therefore, have we said that Thursday's proceedings will be momentous, and that those who have the right to cast a vote for this or that candidate should do so with no other object than to promote, to the best of their ability, the welfare of the School. In a former article, without expressing any bias in favour of any one candidate, we indicated as clearly as we could what, in our opinion, should be regarded as the essential qualifications of a Secretary to one of our Charities. As a matter of course, that opinion has had its usual allowance of unfavourable criticisms. Taking them together, the opposite views do not call for any special comment, but in the case of one of them we think it advisable to point out a certain inconsistency which it appears to possess with the praise so amply and so deservedly bestowed on the deceased Secretary. We suggested that, all other things being equal, the candidate who held the rank of Installed Master, and was a member of other degrees, would be preferable to one who was only a Master Mason, and the reason we assigned for this suggestion was, that such a candidate would be in a position to exercise greater influence, seeing that the circle of his Masonic acquaintance must obviously be more extended. To this it has been objected, that what the Institution wants is an efficient Secretary, who will be always at his post, not one whom, by reason of his numerous Masonic duties, it might occasionally be difficult to find. Let our readers note the weakness of this criticism. There is probably no Mason living who was connected with more Masonic bodies, and who had therefore more Masonic duties to fulfil than the late Bro. Little. Yet we have never heard it suggested that his Provincial Grand Secretaryship, or his Grand Treasurer-Generalship in the remotest degree interfered with his official duties as Secretary to the Girls' School. Latterly his health had been bad, and he was consequently absent very often and continuously from his post, but his absence was never, that we are aware of, attributable, or, indeed, attributed to the tax upon his time by purely Masonic labours. And even were it so, that a man connected with many degrees must necessarily have more claims on his time, and be therefore more frequently away from his office, yet it must be borne in mind that he has so many more opportunities of pleading the cause of the Institution. We know the Girls' School is of Craft origin, but we know likewise that Arch, Mark, Templar, and A. and A. Rite Masons contribute most liberally towards its support, and it is a decided advantage, therefore, to have a Secretary who belongs to some or all of these degrees. This offers no serious objection to the claims of any of the candidates who may have confined their attentions to Craft Masonry, for should such a one be chosen, it is open to him to join the other degrees, and the matter is at rest. We want a Secretary who shall have weight and influence, as well as the ability to do office work, and it by no means follows that the candidate who will make the most perfect official will likewise be able to command the greatest weight among brethren. We see no reason, under these circumstances, for revising or modifying our formerly expressed opinion, that, cæteris paribus, of two or more candidates for the post he is the most eligible who, by reason of his Masonic connections, will command the greatest influence.

A few words more and our task is ended. We have heard it rumoured at different times that now Bro. This, now Bro. That, was on the point of retiring his candidature. Such shaves as this are part and parcel of the ordinary proceedings which attend every election. However, as far as we have been able to gather, all the nine candidates whose names for the past few weeks have been before the Masonic public are resolved on going to the poll. These are Bros. Crick, Cull, Eames, Hedges, Matier, Smallpeice, Storr, White, and Worrell, and, as we have said before, may the best man among them win! One other rumour we have heard in more than one quarter, and it certainly has a nasty ring about it. We take it, as we take all rumours, just for what it is worth, and for the sake of Freemasonry we hope and trust there is no shadow of a foundation for its existence. Indeed, as far as we are concerned, we shall decline to believe it until we have something tangible in the shape of evidence to support it. It is well, however, to let our readers know what this rumour is, so that if, unfortunately, and contrary to our belief, there should be anything in it, they may be on their guard, and resolutely decline to be influenced by "the voice of the charmer, charm he never so wisely." Without further preface, then, we have heard it said that pressure has been, and is being, brought to bear on voters to support one of the candidates, and the pressure takes the form of a most discreditable threat that those who withhold their support may at once give up all idea of ever obtaining the "coveted purple" of Grand Lodge. We repeat what we have just said, that we shall most emphatically decline to believe in this rumour until we have something like convincing evidence of its truth, but if it be true, then our advice is, that any to whom it may be made should resent it with the scorn it deserves, and forthwith record their votes against the candidate on whose behalf it may be employed. Rather would we see the least capable elected, by a bare majority, or by a fluke, than that the election should be decided by the adoption in any case of such reprehensible malpractices.

PROVINCIAL GRAND MARK LODGE OF MIDDLESEX AND SURREY.

THE annual meeting was held at the Greyhound Hotel, Croydon, on Saturday the 29th June, and the attendance and proceedings were of the most gratifying nature. At two o'clock the Croydon Mark Lodge, No. 199, was opened by the Provincial Grand Secretary, W. G. Brighten, after which Bro. Henry Lovegrove was balloted for, and was duly advanced, the ceremony being performed by the Prov. Grand Secretary, on account of the W.M., Bro. Close, having the carrying out of the arrangements at the Church. Shortly after three o'clock the Provincial Grand Lodge was opened, when there were present the R.W. Provincial Grand Master Col. Francis Burdett, the V.W. F. Davison Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Sir Charles T. Bright P.G.S.W., the Rev. Ambrose W. Hall P.G. Chaplain, C. Hammerton P.G. Treasurer, J. M. Klenck P.G. Registrar, W. G. Brighten P.G. Secretary, J. Kirk P.G.M.O., J. Tomlinson P.G.S.O., H. Court P.G.J.O., W. Taylor P.G.S.D., J. B. Shackleton Director of Ceremonies, R. Davies Sword Bearer, J. C. Legg Standard Bearer, H. A. Pocock P.G.I.G., and B. Meyer, J. F. Gibson, A. W. Hume and A. Clark Provincial Grand Stewards, and the following Past Provincial Grand Officers, namely,—W. Worrell, E. Simpson Blaikie, John Close, J. K. Pitt, and F. H. Cozens. Among the numerous visiting brethren present were W. Poulsham of the Provincial Grand Mark Lodge of Northumberland, H. C. Lovander Grand Registrar, F. Binckes Past Grand Warden and Grand Secretary, C. F. Matier Past Grand Warden, A. G. Goodall of New York City, C. Coles 169, C. A. Solle Chaplain 286, F. R. Adams 198, B. H. Ridge 198, G. Kennedy Secretary 226, F. Griffiths 198, W. H. Goodall 211, J. B. Graham 211, E. Palmer 226, H. Shaw 226, G. Spink 226, F. W. Simons 104, E. Whittaker 139. The minutes of the previous meeting, held at the Town Hall, Twickenham, in July last, were read and confirmed. The Provincial Grand Lodge was called off to divine service at the Parish Church, where the service (full choral) was kindly conducted by the Vicar, the Rev. Canon Hodgson; the sermon was preached by the Provincial Grand Chaplain, the Rev. Ambrose W. Hall, on the text, "I will give unto him that overcometh a white stone," at the close of which the preacher brought to the notice of his hearers the Croydon Provident Clothing Fund, when the offertory realised the sum of £7 6s 2d.

The service throughout was admirably conducted, and great credit is due to the W.M. of the Croydon Lodge Bro. J. Close, to the Secretary H. A. Pocock, and other brethren of the Croydon Lodge, for the excellence of the day's arrangements.

On the return from the Church, Provincial Grand Lodge was resumed, and then the brethren saluted the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master in due form. An announcement was here received that Bro. A. G. Goodall, the representative of the Mark Masons of the United States was without, upon which a deputation of Grand Officers was sent to receive him, and on his entering the Lodge he was saluted in due form.

The Provincial Grand Secretary Bro. W. G. Brighten then called over the roll of Lodges, 17 in number, and reported that every Lodge in the Province had made its returns and paid its dues with the utmost punctuality, except the Temple Mark Lodge, No. 173.

The report was received with great satisfaction, and then the Provincial Grand Mark Master appointed Bro. F. Davison his Deputy P.G.M.M. for the ensuing year, and the brethren accordingly saluted Bro. Davidson in due form, after which the Provincial G.M.M. appointed his officers as follow:—Bros. Alfred Clarke P.G.S.W., Major Harding P.G.J.W., Rev. A. W. Hall and the Rev. W. S. Moses P.G. Chaplains, C. Hammerton P.G. Treas., R. Davies P.G. Registrar, W.

Brown, W. Nicholls, Edwin Gilbert, Claybon Palmer; John Gilbert P.G. Tyler for the ensuing year.

The Provincial Grand Treasurer presented his accounts, which for the first time in the history of the Province showed a balance in hand, and it was moved by the Deputy P.G.M., and seconded by H. C. Levander, that the thanks of Provincial Grand Lodge be presented to Bro. Hammerton for the efficient manner in which he had performed the duties of Provincial Grand Treasurer. This proposition was carried unanimously. After some remarks upon the beautiful service of the afternoon, and the excellent sermon preached by the Provincial Grand Chaplain, it was moved by the Right Worshipful P.G.M., and seconded by the Deputy P.G.M., that the thanks of Provincial Grand Lodge be presented to Provincial Grand Chaplain for his able and instructive sermon.

It was then moved by the Provincial Grand Sec., seconded by Bro. J. M. Kleeck, that the thanks of the Provincial Grand Lodge be presented to the Vicar for his kindness in placing the Parish Church at the disposal of Provincial Grand Lodge, and for the beautiful service of the afternoon; both these propositions were carried unanimously.

THE DISTRIBUTION OF PRIZES, BOYS' SCHOOL.

WEDNESDAY was the day appointed for this annual gathering, and accordingly there was a numerous assemblage of the Stewards, brethren, and their friends, including, as a matter of course, a good sprinkling of the fair sex, at the Institution, Wood Green, and the proceedings of the day, which were of the usual character, gave evident pleasure to all present. A Part Song by the Choir, followed by a Trio, which Swallow, Steddy, and Battye, rendered very effectively, and a Duet on the piano opened the programme; after which the prizes awarded to the successful competitors in Classes one, two, and three, were distributed. After another Part Song, Duet, and Trio, William Martin's one act farce, entitled D'ye know me now? was played, the principal characters being very successfully enacted by H. Bowler, W. Sparkes, G. Widdowson, and P. Heaviside, then a Part Song, and Song—"The Red Moss Rose," artistically rendered by J. T. Swallow—and pianoforte duet, by Stansfield and Price. The prizes in Classes 4, 5, and the Choir having been distributed, as well as those presented by the House Committee and Private Donors, Bruevs' comedy, in three acts, entitled L'Avocat Patelin, with G. Widdowson in the principal rôle, H. Bowler as Guillaume, J. Whyatt as Agnolet, A. Bryant as Bartholin, and E. T. Sage as Madame Petelin, was acted most creditably, young Sage in particular showing considerable mastery over the language, as well as a fair conception of the requirements of the part. Two more Part Songs, and the "Tickling Trio" intervened, and then Lenox Horne's farce of Two Heads are better than One, followed by the National Anthem, brought the proceedings to a close. Nothing could have been more satisfactory than the manner in which the programme was carried out, while the recitations and singing reflected the greatest credit on the educational staff. The principal prizes were awarded as follows:—The Silver Medal for Good Conduct, presented by the Institution, to John Gilbert Whyatt; the Canonbury Medal, presented by Bro. Edward Cox, Vice-Patron, P.M. No. 657, to Alfred Nutt; Silver Watch and Chain, for General Good Conduct, presented by the Supreme Council A. and A. Rite to a pupil on leaving the Institution, George Simons Widdowson; and Silver Watch for Efficiency as Monitor, presented by Bro. F. Rath, P.M., William Spottiswoode Sparker. The Class Prizes were awarded thus:—First Class—Classics: H. Bowler 1, E. T. Sage 2; Mathematics: A. Bryant 1, G. S. Widdowson 2; French: E. T. Sage 1, W. Davenport 2; German: E. T. Sage 1, H. Bowler, who carried it off last year, and second prize for the same subject given by Lord Suffield who presided, was adjudged to P. Heaviside.

THE STAR AND GARTER, KEW BRIDGE.

ON Thursday 27th ult., there was a gathering of no little interest at this well-known hostelry, the day having been chosen by the residents in the neighbourhood for the purpose of recognising, in a semi-public fashion, the spirited conduct of Bro. Stanbury in building and very suitably furnishing a Banqueting Hall large enough to accommodate the most numerous of the many parties, both from far and near, who frequent the Star and Garter. As we have recently referred to and described in outline the chief features of attraction in the new Hall, it will be unnecessary for us to traverse the same ground a second time, and entertain our readers with a mere repetition of what we have said already. We shall, therefore, content ourselves with stating that on the day in question the new Banqueting Hall was formally opened, and as is customary on such occasions the event was celebrated by a banquet, worthy alike of the guests and mine host, Bro. Stanbury. The chair was occupied by Mr. Thos. Layton, and the vice-chair by Mr. Ellis, there being present a goodly assemblage of residents and visitors, all anxious to testify their warm approval of the proprietor's liberality and public spirit. As to the dinner, we will dismiss it with the remark that the menu was admirable, and suited the palates of the guests to a T. In saying this we beg our readers will kindly understand that it is not intended for a joke. A sufficient time has elapsed since the friendly dissipation took place, and we have so far recovered from its effects as to be enabled to avoid all confusion of ideas as to the difference there is between an elaborate dinner and a simple tea. But to resume. The menu, as we have said, was admirable, and was worthily relished, and on the removal of the cloth, there followed a series of toasts, loyal and suitable to the event that was being celebrated. Interspersed among them was a number of songs, humourous and sentimental, and duets, the artists being our worthy friend Bro. Seymour Smith, to whom, like most of our readers, we have been so frequently beholden for an evening's genuine amusement, and a young lady—Miss Matilda Roby. The latter sang with exquisite taste and feeling—and with a finish which proved her to be a most accomplished musician—O. Barri's "Saved from the Storm," Lady Lindsay's "Love at the Gate," and Skeaf's "Somebody." Bro. Smith gave two of his well known descriptive songs, "A Visit to the Opera," and "The Browns' Dinner Party," and a brace of humourous songs, "Bill Craven" and "The Irish Captain." If we say nothing as to the merits of his performance, it is because, after what we have said on previous occasions of Bro. Smith's ability and skill in entertaining, we should be only repeating our oft-told tale of praise most thoroughly deserved, and we may add, as regards those present at this particular ceremony, most ungrudgingly bestowed. Everything, indeed, passed off well, and we heartily congratulate Bro. Stanbury on the success of his enterprise, and the cordial welcome it has received from his neighbours and numerous supporters from far and near.

NEW ZEALAND.

THE First Quarterly Communication of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Scotland for the North Island of New Zealand was held at the Masonic Hotel, Princess-street, Auckland, on the 2nd April. Mr. Hood had decorated the entrances and hall with evergreens, &c., in honour of the occasion, and the effect was very pretty. Bro. Whitaker R.W.P.G.M. presided, and amongst the visitors was Bro. G. P. Pierce R.W.P.G.M. of the Irish Constitution. There was a large attendance of brethren, the various Lodges holding under the Scottish Constitution of Freemasonry bring well represented, and there were numerous representatives from the other Lodges. Apologies for unavoidable absence were received from Bro. G.S. Graham R.W.D.G.M. English Constitution; Bro. T. L. Murray P.G. Treasurer; and Bro. A. Brodie P.G.S.W. A committee, consisting of the five principal officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge, was appointed to draft by-laws and to prepare and adopt a design for the seal of the P.G. Lodge. A considerable amount of routine business was transacted, after which the proceedings were brought to a close in accordance with Masonic ritual.

The installation of the W.M. of the Remuera Lodge of Freemasons, No. 1710, E.C., took place on Wednesday, 17th April, at Remuera, near Auckland. Bro. G. S. Graham D.G.M. E.C., Bro. E. T. Wildman D.D.G.M. E.C.; Bro. G. P. Pierce D.G.M. I.C.; Bro. H. G. Wade D.G.S., E.C.; and a large number of Past Masters were present. Bro. E. T. Wildman D.D.G.M. E.C. acted as installing Master, and installed Bro. Henry Rees George, who has been S.W. of the Remuera Lodge during the past year, and who was one of the promoters of the Lodge. The imposing ceremony was most ably performed, the Lodge choir, under the able direction of Bro. C. Hesketh, Organist, rendering appropriate music. The following are the Officers for the present year, viz:—Bro. Henry Rees George W.M.; Bro. William Lodder I.P.M.; Bro. Henry Haase S.W.; Bro. Augustus V. Macdonald J.W.; Bro. J. Hesketh Organist; Bro. John James Treasurer; Bro. William Rattray Secretary; Bro. Josiah Martin S.D.; Bro. John McColl J.D.; Bro. James Hardie I.G.; Bros. R. Wylde-Browne and Benjamin Tonks Stewards; Bro. William Bevan Tyler. Before the Lodge closed, the D.G.M., on behalf of the members of the Lodge, presented to Bro. W. Lodder a handsome Past Master's jewel, as a token of esteem, and as an acknowledgment of his services, as one of the Founders of the Lodge, and as W.M. during the past year. Bro. W. Lodder suitably acknowledged the present in a short appropriate speech. The Remuera Lodge, although it is only a year since it was formed, has made considerable progress, having nearly forty members on its roll, and bids fair to be one of the best Lodges in the district.

ELECTION OF SECRETARY R.M.I. FOR GIRLS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BRO.,—I hear that a report has gained currency to the effect that I have retired from the contest now pending for the election of a Secretary to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls.

Will you kindly allow me, through the medium of your valuable paper, most emphatically to contradict this, and furthermore to assure my numerous friends and supporters that I have every reason to hope their efforts on my behalf will be crowned with success.

Yours fraternally,

WILLIAM WORRELL, P.M., P.Z., &c.

67 Knowle Road, Brixton, S.W.
2nd July 1878.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

SIR,—I am much surprised to find that my name is omitted from the list of Eligible Candidates in your report of the meeting of the General Committee of this Institution.

I enclose a copy of a note I received from Bro. H. A. Dubois, on the 15th ult., announcing that "the Committee had unanimously agreed to report me to the General Committee as an eligible candidate for the vacant Secretaryship," subject to my sending in a certificate of my birth. This was duly complied with.

As the omission of my name in your report is seriously injuring my prospect of success, I shall rely upon your spirit of justice to publish this letter in your edition this week.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

F. A. WHITE.

PINE'S LISTS OF OLD LODGES.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Your "Reviewer" has undoubtedly traced several differences between my analysis of Pine's List of 1734, and the present most interesting series of articles by Bro. R. F. Gould P.M., &c. These differences have mainly arisen through the uncertain, and often contradictory evidence of these early lists, both private and official, but now that others have been found, especially of Pine's engraving, by desire of Bro. Gould I have re-investigated the whole matter, and after considerable correspondence with him we have unitedly adopted the numeration, dates, names and arrangements which he has of late so lucidly explained. One source of difficulty was that the positions of three Lodges were reversed, hence the present 12, 14 and 16, had they remained as originally chartered, would be exactly reversed, as 16 was 9 of the early Pine's Lists, 14 was 10, and 12 was 11. The means by which we have arrived at the result stated by Bro. Gould, while I feel sure it would interest your "Reviewer" (who has evidently considerable taste and ability for that class of work), would fail to please the general reader, and so I omit all explanations save the foregoing.

I do not think, however, that the Fortitude and Old Cumberland Lodge of to-day (No. 12) can claim any especial privileges by reason of the members of one of the old "time immemorial" Lodges joining its ranks, because by working under a Warrant they forfeited their privilege of assembling without a charter, and of being one of the four earliest numbers, the only privilege really they had.

I think with Bro. Gould, that numbers two and four of to-day should have been placed at the head of the Roll, but the "Ancients" did not set the example as to this matter, but the "Moderns," who long before the "Union" had the Stewards' Lodge placed without a number before the Lodge of Antiquity and its sister Lodge, No. 2.

Fraternally yours,

WM. JAMES HUGHAN.

LODGE VICTORIA IN BURMAH.

DEAR SIR AND BRO.,—In my letter of the 13th April last, regarding the contumacious disobedience of the W.M. of Lodge "Victoria in Burmah," No. 832, Rangoon, in refusing to re-admit, or evading the re-admission, of Bros. A. L. Vaillant, J. N. Seymour, J. C. Jordan, E. T. Dover, and J. Marsh, into Lodge No. 832, in compliance with the edict of the Grand Lodge, dated the 5th December 1877, I stated:—

"It is contemplated now that as soon as the five brethren shall present themselves at the Lodge the W.M. shall either close his Lodge, or the Masonic phalanx under him shall walk out and leave the five brethren, or any one or more of them, in possession to do their own wicked will."

The regular meeting of the Lodge was held on the 10th inst., to which the five excluded brethren were summoned. They were in attendance before the Lodge opened, when it was suggested to them that they should wait outside the door of the Lodge till the Lodge was opened, and then seek admission. This course commending itself to the five brethren, they waited outside, and in due course sought admission; the Tyler was directed not to admit them; after a little while, Bro. A. Bald, the Junior Warden and Secretary, asked to be passed out, as he had a difference with these brethren, and that he declined to sit in Lodge with them. On Bro. Bald coming out, the five brethren discussed the matter with him, and, repudiating any personal difference with him or any member of the Lodge, enquired what difference he had with them? Bro. Bald stated that it was a difference relating to the appeal to the Grand Lodge. The brethren then suggested, either through the Senior Warden or some other brother, that as they had no difference with any brother, they should be admitted.

Wor. Bro. J. Dawson D.D G.M. in the absence of W. Bro. C. T. Baxendale being in the chair, replied, that he could not discuss the matter with brethren who were outside the door of the Lodge—the brethren being kept outside against their will. The Lodge was then worked in the second and third degree, and when lowered the brethren again sought admission, when they were informed that Bro. A. Bald had stated that he had a difference, and that, therefore, those with whom he had a difference should keep out also. You may well conceive that this difference was only a pretended one (and, in fact, I am in a position to give you my personal assurance that the difference was mere pretence, affecting to be founded upon a construction of a portion of our Ritual), and that its real object was to disobey with assumed impunity the positive orders of the M.W. the Grand Master.

It appears to me, that as it takes two parties to make a difference as well as a quarrel, when the five brethren disclaimed having any difference (and there was not a brother in Lodge who doubted their statement) with Bro. Bald, they should have been admitted, and Bro. Bald permitted to remain without the door of the Lodge, if he chose. I understand that our retiring D.G.M. R.W. Bro. Colonel H. T. Duncan C.S.I., is of the same opinion as the rebellious ones of Lodge No. 832, and that he holds a brief from the Lodge to urge this point (and the matter of the exclusion and re-admission of the five brethren generally) on the Grand Lodge of England, so that the G.L., knowing the brethren of No. 832 conscientiously could not, or contumaciously and rebelliously would not, receive the five brethren again into the Lodge, the G. Lodge would rescind the order of the 5th December 1877, and thereby stultify itself. I am told R.W. Bro. H. Krauss, our present D.G.M., is of the same opinion as the brethren of No. 832, and their alleged advocate before the G. Lodge. For myself, such shallowness provokes a smile of contempt, followed by no small amount of annoyance, to find that there are weak-minded brethren even in Masonic high places; brethren who, by their want of judgment and vacillation, appear to give encouragement to the present contumacious rebellion in Lodge No. 832. I learn that the brethren have again complained to the M.W. the G.M. of England, and implored his protection, but it is perfectly futile, for the W.M. of No. 832 (W. Bro. C. T. Baxendale), forgetful of his obligation, pays no more heed to the mandate of the M.W. the G.M. than he does to the orders of the D.G.M., and so the five brethren are at this date no nearer admission than they were on the 5th December 1877, for they are still without the door of the Lodge.

Judging from what passes around me, it would appear that those whose duty it is to enforce, without a moment's delay, the order of G.L. of 5th December 1877, directing the re-admission of these brethren (with whom there is not much class sympathy), are more concerned about the status of Bro. the Rev. J. [illegible] belongs to their set) than about insisting upon a restoration to their Masonic privileges of the five brethren who have been unfeelingly and unrighteously excluded from their Lodge, though nought can be urged against their moral worth.

It is time, I submit, that some severe measures should be taken with the contumacious and rebellious members of Lodge No. 832, and the punishment should be a personal one, so that the Lodge be not destroyed.

Yours fraternally,

A LOOKER ON.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Bad Legs. Any unnatural discharge from the skin is at all times disagreeable, but in hot weather it becomes irritating—sometimes offensive. Bad legs, old wounds, scrofula, and scorbutic eruptions are cooled, soothed, and cured by Holloway's Ointment. It at once arrests all diseases of the surface by purifying and regulating the circulation in their neighbourhood by giving energy to the nerves of the affected part, and by expelling all poisonous and noxious matters. It ejects the seeds of all virulent eruptions and ulcerations, and thus confers no partial or temporary boon, but a complete and permanent cure. By means of these remedies all sufferers may aim at attaining health, and will invariably succeed.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF KENT.

The annual gathering of the Masons of Kent, was held on Wednesday last, at Canterbury. Provincial Lodge was opened at the Chapter House of the Cathedral at 12.30, by the R.W. the Prov. G. Master Viscount Holmesdale, who was supported by an array of Past and Present Prov. Grand Officers, and a numerous assemblage of brethren. The minutes of the last Prov. Grand Meeting having been confirmed, the R.W. Prov. G.M. announced, that the accounts of the Prov. G Treasurer had been submitted to the Audit Committee, and were approved, they then received the confirmation of Prov. Grand Lodge, after which the brethren proceeded to the election of Prov. G. Treas. for the ensuing year. The vote was unanimous in favour of the Past Treasurer, Bro. B. K. Thorpe, who thanked the brethren for his re-election. The following brethren were then appointed by the Prov. G. Master, as the Officers for the Province for the ensuing year, and were severally invested with their collars and jewels:—Col. A. H. King 1536 P.M. 905 S.G.Warden, Philip Hicham P.M. 31 J.G.W., Revs. W. A. Hill and J. B. Harrison G. Chaplains, Geo. Payne P.M. 1273 G. Reg., R. C. Barfield P.M. 20 S.G.D., F. Spencer P.M. 1063 J.G.D., T. Wills P.M. 299 G.S. of Works, Thomas Ayling P.M. 1096 G.D. of Ceremonies, J. P. Griffin P.M. 1050 Assist. G.D. of Cers., Simon Young P.M. 184 G. S. Bearer, J. H. Jewell P.M. 1223 G. Org., J. Hancock P.M. 1089 G. Purs., H. S. Neate P.M. 77, T. S. Chancellor P.M. 127, B. S. Wilmot P.M. 874, G. Pilcher P.M. 972, George White P.M. 1174, H. T. Naylor W.M. 1449 G. Stewards. The announcement of the various appointments was received with applause. The Prov. G. Master then proposed, in accordance with notice given by him, that grants of £20, £30, £20 and £10 respectively, be granted to members of the Province from the Prov. Charity Fund. This proposition was seconded by the Deputy Prov. G. Master, and unanimously granted by Grand Lodge. The next proposition, made by Bro. Alf. Spencer Prov. G. Sec. and seconded by Bro. Hill the Prov. G. Chaplain, to the effect that £105 be given to the Boys School, in the name of the D. Prov. G. Master, to make him Vice-Patron of that Institution, was also adopted without opposition by Prov. Grand Lodge. The D.P.G.M. then proposed that various amounts (£247 in all) be granted from the Prov. G. Lodge Charity Fund, to certain of the Lodges of the Province, to be paid to the three Masonic Charities, and this being seconded, was unanimously confirmed. Prov. Grand Lodge was then adjourned, and the brethren repaired in procession to the Cathedral, where service was held. The sermon was preached by the Rev. W. A. Hill the Grand Chaplain, from Micah vi. 8. "He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" Bro. Dr. Longhurst presided at the organ, and an anthem, which was composed by him specially for this gathering, was sung. Other parts of the service were conducted by Rev. Bro. Syree. After the sermon a collection was made, and resulted in a sum of £32 3s being raised. Half of this amount was given to the Kent and Canterbury Hospital; the other half being devoted to the Masonic Charities. The brethren then returned to the Chapter House, where the thanks of Prov. Grand Lodge was voted to the Dean, Dr. Payne Smith, for his kindness in having allowed the use of the Chapter House and Cathedral, thereby enabling the Masons of the Province to assemble with greater pomp and splendour than could possibly have been the case in any other building. Provincial Grand Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet at the music hall, which had been most elaborately decorated for the occasion. During the banquet several instrumental selections were given by Mr. Tench White's Septet Band. At the conclusion, the Right Hon. Viscount Holmesdale, who presided, gave the customary toasts. That of Her Majesty the Queen was followed by the National Anthem, after which the chairman introduced that of the Most Worshipful the Grand Master. He considered it should not be received with less cordiality than that of Her Majesty because it was second on the list. He is a true Englishman, and desires to do everything in his power for the good of the country, and especially for the Masonic Craft. With the toast was coupled the health of Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family. The next on the list was the Pro Grand Master, the Deputy G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers past and present. As regards the two former the Prov. G.M. stated that he had not unfrequently had the honour of submitting their names. The brethren knew so well their good qualities that he did not think it necessary to recount them. They had now for the first time during his presidency over the Province the pleasure of coupling the name of one of their own members with the toast. They all knew that Bro. Hill, who had acted as Prov. Grand Chaplain for many years, had been honoured with the appointment as Grand Chaplain of England for the present year. The Masons of Kent had for some time past agreed that some recognition was due to Bro. Hill for his services in connection with the Craft, and the Prov. G.M. considered that the honour conferred on him by Grand Lodge confirmed their opinion. He now had the pleasure of presenting to Bro. Hill a testimonial, which had been subscribed to by the various Lodges of the Province, and which consisted of silver plate and a purse of money, value together about £300. This he asked Bro. Hill to accept, with the best wishes of his brother Masons, who were mindful of his untiring efforts for the good of the Craft. Bro. Hill thanked the brethren on behalf of the Grand Officers, who, he considered were true noblemen, to the front in all good causes. He felt that had he been called upon to respond in the Chapter House, he would have been able to do so with greater dignity, but surrounded as he was with brethren who knew Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth, he was not afraid of their criticising him too severely. He had been connected with Masonry thirty-three years, and had enjoyed himself on many occasions in connection with the Institution. He had made many acquaintances from it, and always looked upon a good Mason as a sincere, honest, upright man. He had enjoyed the position of Prov. Grand Chaplain of Kent for the past eighteen years. He was extremely gratified at the handsome testimonial the brethren had presented to him. He believed that the Sidcup Lodge had originated the idea, and once having a start, it had gone on increasing, and ended in the splendid gifts before him. Masonry had been to him the oasis in the desert of life, and he should ever look upon that day as one of the most pleasing of its many enjoyments. Bro. Eastes, the D.P.G.M., rose. The present was the first time during the eighteen years their Prov. G.M. had presided over them that the Grand Lodge had met at Canterbury. He felt certain it must be gratifying to him and to them to meet in a city so intimately connected with their ancient brethren. Looking back during the past 100 years, he found that the Provincial Lodge had only met four times at Canterbury, viz., in 1781, 1792, 1801, and 1857. Thus three meetings had been held during the first twenty years, but since then they had allowed fifty-six and twenty-one years respectively to elapse without a gathering. He hoped they would again adopt the shorter periods, as he felt certain that a more fitting place for their meetings could hardly be found. Then again comparing Freemasonry in the Province at the time of their last visit in 1857, and at the present time, he found that, whereas they then numbered fifteen Lodges with 449 members, they now had forty-three Lodges with 2430 members. But this mere accession of numbers he should consider insufficient unless they could also show an increase in the good they had done. In 1857 the Province sent £63 up to the Charities, while in 1878 they had contributed £352 to the Institutions. These figures showed an increase which he felt could but be gratifying to every member of the Province, and although they could hardly hope for a like increase in the future, he trusted they would not tire in their efforts to do good. In connecting these remarks with the Prov. Grand Master's name, they all knew that the whole of the increase was not due to his lordship, many had joined their ranks in consequence of the good that was continually being done by Freemasons, but it could not be denied that the Province of Kent was deeply indebted to their Prov. G. Master, to whose exertions most of their present prosperity was due. He hoped the brethren would that day show their appreciation of his endeavours by according such a reception to the toast as would prove beyond doubt their feeling. The toast was most enthusiastically drunk. His lordship expressed his thanks for the kind way in which the brethren had received Bro. Eastes' remarks. He was always pleased to hear of their annual Masonic gatherings, and he was gratified at the reception accorded him on those occasions. Their Dep. G.M. had spoken at some length of the progress of Masonry during the past eighteen years. He agreed with him in thinking they could hardly look forward to so great an increase in the future, but hoped Masonry would never again lapse into that half frozen state which it held during 1780-1825. He felt sure there was not a brother among them who was not gratified at the gathering of the day. Probably none of those present (except those who were at the Albert Hall, on the occasion of the installation of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales) had ever beheld so imposing a Masonic ceremony. The meeting was a numerous one, and the buildings in which they assembled were perfectly adequate. The Provincial Grand Master was pleased at being enabled to allow the brethren to wear their Masonic regalia during the procession to the Cathedral, he considered it added greatly to the splendour of the meeting which had certainly been the stateliest ceremony ever taken part in by the Craft of Kent during the past twenty years. He then proceeded to give the health of the Deputy Prov. G.M. Bro. Eastes. It was to that brother he was indebted for much of his knowledge of the affairs of the Province. It was to him he looked for information respecting the various appointments to be made each year, and from the general satisfaction those appointments gave, he felt sure that Bro. Eastes was not only able, but really did perform the arduous duties of his office with the greatest care and ability. The toast met with a hearty reception, and Bro. Eastes in responding thanked his lordship for his very complimentary remarks. Nothing could stimulate him more to do his duty or to work for the best interests of the Craft. It would ever be his aim to carry out the wishes of the Prov. G.M., and he felt sure that those wishes would be for the good of the Freemasons of Kent. They were deeply indebted to those brethren who had had the management of the day's proceedings for the hospitable reception which had been accorded them, and he felt sure that he was expressing the wish of all present when he thanked the Masons of Canterbury, and especially Bro. Hall and others who had undertaken and carried through the arrangements for the visit. He hoped it would not be many years before they would again have an opportunity of paying a visit to the grand old city. The Prov. Grand Master next gave the health of the Provincial Grand Officers past and present, referring to each in a few kindly words. In old times it was not unfrequent for a brother to attend the meeting when he was appointed to a Provincial office, and after that never to take any notice of P. Grand Lodge or its committees, but now things were very different. They never had a meeting in connection with the affairs of the Province, but they had a goodly array of brethren wearing the purple ready to give their advice or help in any matter introduced for the welfare of the Craft. Bro. Colonel King, the newly-appointed S.W., was the first to reply. He must do so as a soldier, as he felt it was to his brother soldiers that he was indebted for the honour conferred on him. It was a grand recognition of the work done in Masonry by the Military of Kent, who, he felt, would exert themselves more and more to show they were worthy of the compliment. The J.W. also replied. It would ever be his aim to work for the good of the Craft, both in Kent and throughout the country. The health of the brethren of the three entertaining Lodges was then given. The Grand Master felt that had not the Masons of Canterbury worked hard, they would have met that day under very great disadvantages, but as they had so faithfully discharged their duties, their meeting had been a great success, and their reception a grand one. Bro. J. Plant, as W.M. of the oldest Lodge, replied. If they had fallen short in any way, he hoped the brethren would forgive them. He felt that a great part of the success of the day was due to the grand building in which they had been able to meet. The health of the Visitors was next given. The Prov. G.M. was always pleased to see members of distant Provinces, and hoped that others would make a point of joining their festive board. The toast having been heartily drunk and responded to, the R.W. the Prov. G.M. vacated his chair in favour of his Deputy, and left amid the cheers of the brethren. Bro. Eastes proposed the health of Bro. Dr. Longhurst, who had that day delighted them with the splendid anthem he had composed in honour of their meeting. Bro. Longhurst considered it a great favour to be called upon to respond to so great a compliment as had just been conferred on him. The Tyler's toast was then given, and the proceedings of the day closed. Those brethren who had the direction of the meeting seem to have spared no trouble to make it what it unquestionably was—a grand success. The bells of the cathedral rang out a hearty welcome in the morning, and pealed out a joyful farewell in the evening to those of our brethren who had to leave by train.

THE PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF BERKS AND BUCKS.

THE annual meeting of this Provincial Grand Lodge was held on Wednesday, at the Carlton Club Room, Windsor, when Sir Daniel Gooch, Bart., M.P., presided, and a large concourse of brethren assembled for the purpose of supporting their respected chief. Immediately after the Lodge had been opened, the patent of appointment of Bro. the Ven. Archdeacon Rev. A. P. Purey-Cust as Deputy Grand Master of the Province was read, and our rev. brother was installed in his office with the customary ceremonial. The roll of Lodges was then called, and we rejoice to say that all of them were represented. On the roll of Provincial Grand Officers being called, a very large number responded, and suitable apologies were furnished in the case of those who were unavoidably absent. The minutes of the last annual meeting were then taken as read and—on the motion of Bro. Brownrigg P.D.P.G.M., duly seconded—confirmed. The financial statement of the Provincial Grand Treasurer was submitted and approved, and the Report of the Charity Fund Committee, which was eminently satisfactory, was read, when a recommendation, that the sum of twenty guineas be voted from the funds of the Provincial Grand Lodge to this fund, was unanimously agreed to. It may be as well to state here, in connection with this Fund, that, with the exception of Lodge No. 1501, Wycombe, which, from being a comparatively young Lodge, has probably not had time to straighten itself, all the Lodges in the Province have a balance in their favour. The Provincial Grand Secretary then read out his report of the Lodges, and from this we gathered that there are, at the present time, 717 subscribing brethren, of whom about 150 are Past Masters. The P.G. Lodge proceeded to the election of a Treasurer, and the result was that the choice fell unanimously on Bro. Charles Stephens, after which the Provincial Charity Jewel was presented to Bros. John O. Carter P.M. 209, G. M. Knight W.M. 574, Edward Grisbrook P.M. 771, and Thomas Taylor J.W. 1410. The Provincial G. Master appointed and invested the following brethren as his Officers for the year, namely:—Bros. Filder S.G.W., McGabbin J.G.W., Rev. C. R. Honey Grand Chaplain, Rev. — Garry Assistant Grand Chaplain, Charles Stephens G. Treas., Welsh G. Reg., Robert Bradley G. Sec., W. H. Bingham S.G.D., Cantrell J.G.D., Pocock G. Sup. Works, C. D. Hume G.D.C., G. De Fraine A.G.D.C., Sheppard Grand Sword Bearer, Revell Grand Purs., Britton Senior Grand Steward; C. A. Barrett, S. Innis Baker, A. H. Simpson, F. J. Ferguson, and D. Radclyffe G. Stewards; W. Hemmings G. Tyler. There being no other business to transact, Prov. G. Lodge was closed with the usual formalities, and the brethren adjourned to the Town Hall, where an excellent banquet, presided over by the Prov. G. Master, was served by Mr. Kemsley, of the Castle Hotel. Ample justice having been done to the viands, the cloth was removed, and the regular Loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed, and in all cases most cordially responded to. Sir Daniel Gooch, in proposing the toast of the Grand Master, spoke in justly eulogistic terms of His Royal Highness's interest in Freemasonry, while with that of the Pro Grand Master, &c., was connected the name of Bro. Winkfield, Past Grand Steward, who warmly thanked the P.G.M. for associating him with the toast. The agreeable duty of proposing the health of the Prov. Grand Master fell to Rev. Bro. Honey, who spoke most eloquently of Sir Daniel's attachment to the Craft, and the deep interest he took in the welfare of the Province, and in reply the R.W. Chairman thanked Bro. Honey for the kindly manner in which he had submitted the toast, and the brethren for the equally kind manner in which they had received it, adding that it was always a source of pleasure to him to be present on these occasions. In announcing that the next meeting of Prov. G. Lodge would be held at Abingdon, he reminded those present when they last met at that town of the excellent reception they had experienced, and he trusted that the gathering would be as numerous as it had been that day. After Bro. Briggs had sung Watson's song of The Sentinel, the Prov. G.M. again rose and invited the brethren to drink a bumper to the D.P.G.M., whose absence from the banquet table must be a source of regret to all, and the other Prov. G. Officers Present and Past, and with it he coupled the name of Bro. Cutler, who expressed his thanks for the reception accorded to the toast as well as for the honour specially conferred upon him in associating with it his name. The toast of the Visiting brethren followed, and in the course of his remarks the Prov. G. Master referred with infinite pleasure to the efforts of Bro. Dick Radclyffe to whom they were so indebted for the floral decorations of the table. Bros. Berry and Radclyffe responded, and the latter in his speech expressed himself as much gratified with the chairman's comments. The toast of the Masonic Charities was proposed by Rev. Bro. Garry, who spoke of the great amount of good they had effected and were effecting; this was acknowledged by Bro. Carter. The other toasts included those of the Grand Officers of the Province, of the W. Masters, Officers, &c. of the Etonian, No. 209, and Windsor Castle, No. 771, the Provincial Grand Treasurer, who personally acknowledged the compliment, the Prov. Grand Stewards and the Tyler's toast. Shortly afterwards, the guests, who had mustered to the number of seventy-eight, rose and dispersed, and a very pleasant day was brought to a close. We cannot conclude this notice without mentioning the courtesy and liberality of the Great Western Railway Company, who issued tickets at half price to all brethren who travelled from London and the Provincial Stations. We will further add that in an early number we shall publish a short sketch of Freemasonry in this Province, based on the account issued some years since by Bro. W. Briggs Past Prov. Grand Secretary.

FREEMASONRY IN CORNWALL.

THE annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Cornwall is this year to be held at Redruth, under the wing of the Druids' Lodge of "Love and Liberality," No. 589, warranted in 1851. The progress of the Craft in the County can easily be estimated by a comparison of the numerical position of the Lodges when the Druids was constituted, with their actual state at the present time. In 1851, under the rule of Sir Charles Lemon, Bart., F.R.S., there were eleven Lodges and about 350 members, whereas now there are twenty-seven Lodges and over 1,550 brethren who are subscribing members, and who are all pleased to have so estimable a nobleman as the Right Hon. the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe as Provincial Grand Master. It is not, however, merely in numbers that the Province has improved, for now nearly all the Lodges assemble in halls of their own, some especially being of a very handsome character; and not only have their contributions to the Masonic Charities (located in London) considerably increased, but the members have had, since 1864, an excellent Masonic Annuity and Benevolent Fund, which has far outgrown the extent originally contemplated by its promoters, having in 1878 about £2,500 funded, and an income from the interest of the property and annual subscriptions of upwards of £200, thereby enabling the brethren to devote sufficient to pay for four annuities of £20 each for aged Freemasons, and for several grants for the education of children, and for the relief of widows, without in any way lessening the money funded. If we look back one hundred years before the Druids was constituted, we shall find there was but one Masonic Lodge in the county, which still flourishes as the premier Lodge of the Province, as the "Love and Honour," No. 75, Falmouth. In 1752 a new Lodge was formed at Truro, and a third Lodge at Redruth, both of which have long since ceased to work. But the Provincial Grand Lodge, which was constituted in 1752 (with the R. W. Bro. William Pye as the first Prov. G.M.) is still in a most vigorous condition, and never so prosperous as now. There are now more Freemasons in either of the larger towns in which Lodges assemble than there were in all the county a century and a quarter ago, so rapidly has the Craft increased of late years. The Provincial Grand Lodge will assemble at Redruth, on Tuesday, the 6th of August, in the Druids' Hall, for which preparations are already being made, as it is anticipated that the meeting will be numerously attended. As usual, the brethren will proceed to the parish church, to hear a sermon by one of the Provincial Grand Chaplains (Bro. the Rev. F. J. Wintle, Rector of Beerferris), after which a collection will be made, which will be divided between a local charity (to be named by the Provincial Grand Lodge), the Annuity and Benevolent Fund, and the Rector for distribution amongst the poor. The fine Masonic Hall will be also dedicated in due form, the building being worthy of the object, and one that reflects great credit on the members of the Lodge, the whole cost being upwards of £1,300 (fully subscribed by the company). The annual banquet will be served in the large hall at Bro. Tabb's Hotel.—Western Morning News.

Obituary.

BRO. ALBERT SCHMITT.

THE funeral of the late Bro. Albert Schmitt of Jersey, took place on Friday, 14th ult., with Masonic Ceremonial, and as it is eleven years since such a ceremony took place on the Island, there was a large concourse of spectators, eager to catch a glimpse of such unusual, and yet such solemn proceedings. The body of the deceased brother had lain in state the previous evening in the Temple, the coffin being covered with the insignia he was entitled to wear. At the appointed hour on Friday afternoon the procession left the Masonic Temple, from the summit of which the Royal Standard and the Union Jack hung half-mast high, Mr. W. McGee's band, playing alternately the "Dead March in Saul" and "Adeste, fideles," leading the way. At the French Lutheran Church the funeral service was performed by the Rev. J. Dupuy, and Bro. E. Dowden presided at the organ and performed, both on the arrival and departure of the cortège, some most appropriate music from Beethoven's works. The procession having been reformed, then wended its way to the Almorah Cemetery, and here the coffin was born to its last resting place, Bros. Viel, Renouf, Pallot, Benham, De Jardin, and Durell, Past Masters of La Césarée Lodge, being the pall bearers. When the ceremony was over the brethren walked slowly past the grave, each throwing into it a sprig of acacia, and several handsome bouquets were also thrown upon the coffin. Some earth, brought from Poland, was also cast in by the Polish friends of the deceased. The procession then moved off and returned to the Temple, where the proceedings were brought to a close by La Césarée Lodge. The following is the text of the address delivered over the grave by Bro. Durell, W.M. of the Lodge:—

"Before throwing a last glance on the remains of our brother wh[o]

has fallen asleep, it is not without deep emotion that I come forward to fulfil the duty which devolves upon me to sketch briefly the main features of the life of the man whose death we deplore, and to proclaim the reason why we are here; why we display around this modest grave all the funeral pomp of Masonic mourning. Poland was the native land of Albert Schmitt; he loved his country, and the dream of his boyhood was to deliver her from the cruel tyranny of a foreign foe; to awaken her from the sleep of years; and to raise her again to that rank amongst nations from which she had fallen. Later on, when scarcely a youth, he joined the noble band of patriots who, by a desperate effort, endeavoured to lift from her prostrate form the crushing weight of foreign oppression. Success did not crown their efforts. Woe to the vanquished! The bayonet and the rifle bullet laid low many a noble form! Exile was the refuge of the many! Long years have now elapsed since Albert Schmitt trod for the first time on Jersey soil. He came as a stranger, alone amongst strangers, to claim the hospitality that Jersey has never refused to the vanquished. He brought with him, however, two ideas which have accompanied him and consoled him in the hour of misfortune, until his heart ceased to beat: the remembrance of his mother and the image of his native land. His friends who are here, and who loved him, can bear me out, when I say, that often when his eye was fixed on ideal horizons, and he dropped a tear, the past arose before him, as it would have been if he had not sacrificed his all, on the altar of his fatherland. As he had loved his mother, as he had devoted himself for his country, so he clung to Freemasonry, with the passionate fondness of a man who has concentrated in it all the treasures of his loving heart. Not to the outward symbol, or to Masonic millinery, but to the grand principles of our Order, did he cling; to charity, to brotherly affection, to the worship of truth and virtue in its various forms. That is why we are here, to accompany to his last home the man, who, in the minute details of every day life, practised the virtues which are the columns upon which rest our ancient Institution. Albert Schmitt, we bid you an eternal adieu! We cast a last sorrowing look on thy coffin; but still we hope, for beyond the grave the dawn of eternal life sheds upon us its heavenly light, and by thy grave we proclaim our firm belief in the existence of the Great Architect of the Universe, and our constant hope that when it pleaseth him to remove us from this our temporary abode, we may accompany thee in that great Lodge upon high, where they, who have carried out the noble principles of our Order, will for ever live. Brother Schmitt, good-bye, we will no longer hear thy voice, as of old, but thou wilt live in our hearts, and the noble example of thy life will not be lost upon us. Brethren, one more word, and I have done. Our brother has lived, as a Mason should live; he has died, as we should wish to die; for has he not accomplished the wish of the poet—'Qu'ils meurent pleins de jours, que leur mort soit pleurée; qu'un ami leur ferme les yeux.'"

It is with the deepest regret that we announce the death of Bro. James Stonebewer, of West-hill and Wimbledon-park-road, On Monday, 4th June, the deceased gentleman was driving down Putney-hill in company with a lady and gentleman, when the pony, usually a very docile animal, is supposed to have run away, and Bro. Stonebewer jumped out of the vechile. The pony, finding itself unchecked, increased its speed, and after running a short distance turned the vehicle over, seriously injuring the occupants. Assistance was immediately procured, and Bro. Stonebewer conveyed to his residence in Wimbledon-park-road. Dr. G. E. Nicholas was at once summoned, when deceased was found to have sustained severe injury. On Wednesday Dr. Marshall was also called in, but the deceased died about five o'clock on Thursday, the 27th ult., at the comparatively early age of fifty-eight. Bro. Stonebewer had been forty years associated with Wandsworth, and had only recently retired from business to occupy his newly-erected residence in Wimbledon-park-road. He was a member of the Wandsworth Lodge, and a liberal subscriber to the various charities. He was much respected by all classes, by old as well as young, and his sudden death will not only be felt by his sorrowing widow and family, but also by a large circle of friends and acquaintance.

THE AMERICAN KNIGHTS TEMPLAR PILGRIMAGE TO EUROPE.

We have pleasure in stating that Bro. W. E. Franklin, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, Messrs. Cook and Sons' agent, will meet the pilgrims on their landing at "Moville," on the 15th, and conduct them through Ireland, Scotland, and England. It is fortunate they will have so competent a conductor as Bro. Franklin, who is well versed in everything of interest throughout their tour, and who is also an eminent member of the Craft, holding a foremost position in the Provinces of Durham and Northumberland. Should Masters of Lodges, &c. wish to accord any reception to our American brethren, they can communicate with Bro. Franklin, 42 Mosely Street, Newcastle-on-Tyne, in whose hands the whole of the arrangements are left, from the time the pilgrims land till they leave this country.

We have great pleasure in announcing that Bro. Binckes's list of Stewards for the Festival of Monday already numbers 244 brethren.

We are authorised to state that both ladies and lewises are entitled to vote at the approaching election for the Secretaryship to the Girls' School. It will, of course, be necessary they should attend in person, just the same as brethren, for the purpose of recording their votes.

JAMAICA.

THE consecration of the New Room of the Sussex Lodge, Kingston, Jamaica, took place on 6th June, the Consecrating Officer being the Right Worshipful Bro. At ten a.m. the brethren of the Sussex, Royal, Friendly, Phœnix, and Hamilton Lodges assembled at the Friendly Lodge under their respective banners. They were afterwards joined by the Scottish Grand Lodge, with their chief, Right Worshipful Bro. S. C. Burke, and the Glenlyon Lodge, after which a deputation was formed to receive the Grand Lodge of East Jamaica, with their chief, Right Worshipful Bro. Dr. Hamilton. An anthem, by the District Grand Organist, Worshipful Bro. W. R. Lee, and an oration by the Junior Grand Chaplain, having been given, a procession was formed to the new building. The new room has been got up very nicely, and is a great credit to the Building Committee. It is to be lighted by gas.

TO THE GENERAL COMMITTEE—BRETHREN,

It is with much pleasure that I notify to you that the House Committee have unanimously agreed to accept me as an eligible Candidate for the vacant position of Secretary.

I seek your suffrages on thoroughly independent grounds.—I eschew partizanship,—and am as much opposed to the amalgamation of the Executive of the Boys' and Girls' Schools (believing that the two, from their very nature, require separate and distinct management) as I am averse to the control of our Masonic Charitable Institutions being placed in the hands of Grand Lodge or any body of legated by it. I likewise hold as a fundamental principle, that those who contribute towards a fund are the persons best entitled to effect its distribution.

If elected it shall be my constant endeavour to evince the utmost courtesy to every inquirer, and by patience and perseverance to prove my appreciation of the high trust reposed in me.

The Election, which is fixed for the 11th July next, will take place at the Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, London, and will be by Ballot, between the hours of 2 and 5 p.m., when I hope to be honoured by the personally recorded expression of your confidence, which alone will enable me to obtain the position I am desirous of receiving at your hands.

I have the honour to be, Brethren, yours faithfully and fraternally,

WILLIAM CLIFTON CRICK,

Bachelor of Sciences, Paris University, P.M. 657, and Secretary 1733.

102 Chancery Lane, W.C., 17th June 1878.

Royal Masonic Institution for Girls.

To the Vice-Patrons, Vice-Presidents, and Life Governors.

HAVING intimated my intention of presenting myself as a Candidate for the Secretaryship of this Institution, I now beg to thank the large number of brethren who have promised me their support, and to solicit the vote and interest of those who are still unpledged; again promising that, if elected, my whole energy and ability shall be exerted for the further extension of the benefits of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls.

To the Vice-Patrons, Vice-Presidents, and Life Governors of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls.

MY LORDS, LADIES, AND BRETHREN,—

I beg most respectfully to offer myself as a candidate for the post of Secretary to your valuable Institution, rendered vacant by the lamented death of our esteemed Brother R. WENTWORTH LITTLE.

I have been a Freemason upwards of Nine years, during which time I have taken a very active interest in the Order. I am a P.M., and have been for some time past, Secretary of my Lodge, and Scribe E. of my Chapter.

I am now the Secretary of an Orphan Asylum, a position which I have held nearly four years, and am therefore thoroughly acquainted with the practical working of a Public Institution.

I am thirty-three years of age, and in good health, and previous to receiving my present appointment, I was engaged in business with a Marine Insurance Broker at Lloyds'.

Soliciting the favour of your kind interest and support,

I have the honour to be,

My Lords, Ladies and Brethren,

Yours obediently and fraternally,

WILLIAM WORRELL,
P.M. and Sec. No. 766. P.M. 1339.
P.Z. and S.E. Chapter No 766.

BRETHREN,—I beg to offer myself as a Candidate for the office of Secretary, rendered vacant by the death of Bro. Little. Should you do me the honour to elect me, I can only say that I will endeavour to fill the office efficiently, and I hope that the manner in which I have discharged my various duties in Masonry will be considered a sufficient qualification.

67 BARBICAN, E.C.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

IN the House of Lords on Thursday last attention was drawn to the fatal accident on the London and South Western Railway by which the late Sir Francis Goldsmith had lost his life, and a brief discussion ensued. On Friday the Intermediate Education (Ireland) Bill passed its second reading, a few objections only, and those to matters of detail, not to the principle of the measure, being raised. Indeed, there is hardly a bill which has been submitted to Parliament which has commanded such general acquiescence as this has. On Monday Earl Granville offered some remarks on the conduct of business at the Foreign Office, his text being the prosecution by the Treasury of a writer employed at that office on a charge of having communicated the text of the Anglo-Russian Project of Agreement to the Globe newspaper. The Duke of Richmond and Gordon said he was unable to give any information as the matter was sub judice. Subsequently Lord Hammond offered a defence of the gentlemen in the Foreign Office, and speaking with an experience begotten of a lifelong connection with the Department, declared his belief that it was one of the best conducted Government offices, and that those in it were worthy of the most unreserved confidence of the Secretary of State. He also hoped that some good might result from the inquiry now pending, and that the Government might think it desirable to revise the miserable pittance paid to the inferior grade of copying clerks. On Tuesday the House went into Committee on the Intermediate Education (Ireland) Bill, and it was reported to the House without any amendment whatever.

In the House of Commons on Thursday, the debate on the second reading of the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Bill was resumed by Mr. Synan, continued by Dr. Playfair, Messrs. Chamberlain, Assheton, M'Lagan, and others, among the speakers being Mr. Clare Read, who gave his support to the measure. The debate was then adjourned till Monday. The House then went into Committee on the Weights and Measures Bill, in spite of the objection raised to it, and it passed this stage. The Irish Sunday Closing Bill having been put down as the first order for Thursday, the 11th instant, the House shortly afterwards rose. On Friday, after an amendment by Mr. R. Yorke had been defeated, the House went into Committee on the Highways Bill, and had reached the discussion of Clause 11, when progress was reported. Shortly after the House had resumed at nine o'clock, it was counted out. On Monday the debate on the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Bill was resumed and concluded. The principal speakers were Messrs. Rodwell, Dodson, Rylands, Pease, Sir E. Lechmere, and Sir W. Harcourt, and Sir H. Selwyn-Ibbetson having replied on behalf of the Government, the division was taken and resulted in a victory for Ministers by nearly two to one, the numbers being—for the second reading 319, and against it 162. At the morning sitting on Tuesday the House went into Committee on the Roads and Bridges (Scotland) Bill. In the evening the question of the Removal of Paupers was discussed at great length. On Wednesday the Habitual Drunkards Bill was read a second time, but a proposition by Mr. French to give a second reading to his Landed Estates Court (Ireland) Leases Bill, was rejected by 179 to 78. Mr. Biggar's Political Prisoners Bill was talked out, and the House shortly afterwards adjourned.

The Court are at Windsor, where Her Majesty, with the Princess Beatrice and her future daughter-in-law, the Princess Louise of Germany, take daily drives and walks in the neighbourhood, or in the grounds of the Castle. Prince Frederick Charles of Germany and the Duke of Connaught have momentarily left the Castle, and have been staying in London. They have likewise this week made an excursion to Portland, where they went on board H.M.S. Thunderer, and had an opportunity of witnessing some torpedo practice. On Tuesday the Prince of Wales drove in Lord Carington's drag to the Orleans Club, several other members of the Coaching Club being also of the party. The coaches met as usual in the morning at the Magazine, Hyde Park, and the Princess of Wales was present to see the gathering, and witnessed the departure for Twickenham. On Wednesday their Royal Highnesses paid their long-promised visit to Nottingham, and the reception accorded them was enthusiastically loyal. The object of this visit was to open the Art Museum. There was a very considerable display on the occasion. A Guard of Honour at the Castle was furnished by the Robin Hoods, the well known Rifle Volunteer Corps. The 80th Regiment lined the road, and escorts were furnished by Lancers and the North Notts Yeomanry. The attire of the ladies added to the gaiety of the scene. The Municipal Corporation was numerously represented. There were present a fair sprinkling of Members of Parliament, all the local and county magnates who could manage to be present, and the party at the Duke of St. Albans, with whom the Royal Visitors were staying, among them being the Duke and Duchess of Manchester, Lord Colville, &c. The usual address was presented to and acknowledged by his Royal Highness, after which the Museum and grounds were declared open.

The present is usually considered to be a somewhat dull time but for Masonry, the last few days have, at all events, proved an exception to the rule. On Saturday last, the Grand Mark Lodge of the Province of Middlesex, under the presidency of its genial chief, Colonel Francis Burdett, held high festival at the Greyhound, Croydon. On Wednesday, there were two considerable gatherings in the Provinces, of which full particulars are given elsewhere, namely, the annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Kent, in the ancient city, and under the immediate shade of the fine old Cathedral of Canterbury, the presiding genius being very properly Viscount Holmesdale, M.P., the deservedly popular Grand Master of the Province, while Royal Windsor witnessed a similar gathering on the part of our Berks and Bucks brethren, under the benign auspices of their equally popular chief—Sir Daniel Gooch, Bart., M.P. Nor must we forget to add that on this same day the Stewards and their friends, among whom were many ladies, paid their usual visit to the Boys' School, Wood Green, for the purpose of taking part in the annual distribution of prizes, &c., &c. Thus, omitting all the minor events, the present has been an eventful week with the Freemasons.

The funeral of the late Charles Mathews took place on Saturday morning last, at Kensal Green Cemetery at the appointed hour of half-past eleven. There was a large concourse of people present to witness the mournful ceremony to pay their tribute of respect to the veteran actor who, in his day, had so often delighted them with his inimitable acting. The cortége left the residence of the deceased, 39 Belgrave Road at half-past ten, and consisted of a hearse and seven mourning coaches, followed by several private carriages. The chief mourner was Mr. Charles Mathews, the late actor's stepson, and the theatrical profession was strongly as well as numerously represented.

The annual fête in aid of the funds of the Metropolitan and City Police Orphanage, was held at the Crystal Palace on Wednesday. A Committee, including Superintendents Williams, Foster, Gernon, Williamson, Eccles, Green, and Butt, had charge of the arrangements which were most effectively carried out. As many as twelve of the divisional bands played in different parts of the grounds, and among the special entertainments must be mentioned those of the Mohawk Minstrels, and the Vaudeville Company in Our Boys. There was also a series of athletic sports on the cricket-ground, concluding with a Tug of War between the Metropolitan and City, in which the latter were twice pulled over the crease by their Metropolitan rivals. There was likewise, in the evening, a grand display of the fountains and the entire system of water-works, and at dusk the Aquarium was lighted, nor did the last of the company leave till a late hour. Everything passed off most enjoyably.

From the rapid manner in which the various questions are being disposed of by the Congress at Berlin, it is expected that the meetings will come to a close in the course of next week. It is arranged that the greater portion of Bessarabia which was ceded by Russia in 1856 shall be restored to her, and that Roumania shall be recompensed with the Dobrudscha and a part of Bulgaria, including Silistria, and extending to the Black Sea. Austria is to occupy Bosnia and Herzegovina. Antivari is conditionally ceded to Montenegro, and it is believed that the frontiers of Greece will be rectified favourably to that power. The question of indemnity is left undecided, but it is said that Russia has been given to understand that it will not be allowed in any way to affect the future territorial integrity of Turkey. What now remains of special interest to this country is the question of the Asiatic frontier, and the surrender or non-surrender of Batoum, and the feeling among the public is very strong that this important port should not be surrendered. However, next week we shall, no doubt, be in a position to state the result of their deliberations on this, and, indeed, on the whole of the questions which have been discussed.

The adjourned and final meeting of the Board of Stewards for the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys was held on Monday, the 1st July, at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen Street, Bro. General. Brownrigg in the chair. The Hon. Secretary read the minutes of the former meeting, which were confirmed. It was announced that H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught K.G. had approved of the arrangements that had been made. The ballot for seats took place, and a vote of thanks was accorded to the Chairman. Among those present were Bros. C. A. Cottebrune, R. B. Webster, General Brownrigg, Garrod, L. Ruf, Mellwham, R. W. Stewart, F. Adlard, G. Allen, J. Smith, C. F. Hogard, T. Cubitt, G. Pare, Sprague, Dickins, Palman, S. Rosenthal, Winter, W. Paas, J. Tanner, H. M. Levy, &c.

The summer excursion of the William Preston Lodge of Instruction will take place on Wednesday next. The brethren have decided to spend the day at Bro. Jones's, the White Hart, Willesden, where dinner will be provided at 5.30 p.m. We trust our friends will thoroughly enjoy themselves.

The Holiday Season may now be considered in full swing, and we may take the opportunity of directing the attention of our readers to the arrangements made by the Great Western Railway Company for Tourists. The tickets, which are issued at the G. Western Terminus at Paddington, as well as at the majority of the stations on the Metropolitan, and Metropolitan District Railways, and likewise at Messrs. Cook and Sons', Tourist Offices, Ludgate-Circus, are very moderate in price, and are available for any period not exceeding two months. The following are the districts or circuits for which they are issued, namely:—The Dorsetshire coast, the Somersetshire, Devonshire, and Cornwall coasts, the Channel Islands, North and South Wales circular tours, the Isle of Man, and Ireland. Routes, with full particulars as to prices, extension of time, steam packet tickets, &c., &c., are given in the programme, as well as the conditions on which the ticket-holders will travel, and those who may intend spending their holidays in one of those parts of the country traversed by the Great Western, or with which it is in communication, may obtain all the information they require at Paddington, or at any of the stations or places we have indicated.

The eighty-eighth annual Communication of the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island, was held on the 20th May, at Masons' Hall, Providence. M.W. Bro. Charles R. Cutler presided, and there was a considerable gathering of Grand Officers, present and past, as well as of representatives of the subordinate Lodges. Among the business transacted, the Freemasons' Repository makes mention of the submission of the Annual Reports of the Grand Treasurer, Grand Secretary, and the Standing Committees. Charters for two new Lodges were granted. Communications from England and Ireland respecting the recent Constitutional changes in the Freemasonry of France were referred to a Special Committee. A request by a Grand Lodge of New South Wales for recognition was deferred. Bro. Rev. H. W. Rugg was received as the Grand Representative of the Grand Lodge of Cuba. The result of the elections was as follows, in the case of the principal Officers at least: Bros. Chas. R. Cutler G.M., Edward L. Freeman Dept. G.M., Thomas Vincent G.S. Warden, Henry D. Deblois Grand J. Warden, Nelson W. Aldrich Grand Treasury, and Edwin Baker Grand Sec. The Grand Lodge recognized the Grand Lodge of New Mexico, but declined to do so in the case of the Grand Lodge of Colon. The Session was of unusual length, and lasted from 10 a.m. till 5 p.m.

We note with pleasure that a Special General Meeting of the Governors and Subscribers of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution will be held at Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday next, the 10th inst., at the hour of 4 p.m., for the purpose of considering the advisability of altering Laws 19, 22, 23, 24, 25 and 26 by substituting, in all cases, "guineas" for "pounds." As our readers are aware, we have again and again advocated in these columns the propriety of this change. We have also published several letters on the same subject, in all of which the writers strennously insisted on the alteration. Indeed, there is absolutely no reason against, while there is every reason in its favour. Uniformity among our Institutions in respect of the qualifications of their Vice-Patrons, Vice-Presidents, Life Governors, &c., if not imperatively necessary, is beyond all question most desirable, and we trust the Governors and Subscribers who will meet together on Wednesday next will see the propriety of unanimously endorsing the proposed change.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

Angel Lodge, No. 51.—The Annual Festival of St. John the Baptist was celebrated by the members of this ancient Lodge on Wednesday, 26th June. A large number of brethren assembled at 2.30 to witness the installation of Bro. E. J. Hennemeyer, the W.M. elect, a ceremony that was performed in a most perfect and impressive manner by W. Bro. The post prandial proceedings partook of the usual character; a most interesting and enjoyable feature being a choice selection of vocal music kindly given by Bros. S. Chaplin, J. J. C. Turner, C. Suffolk, W. Bro. F. Binckes Sec. Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and others.

The Vitruvian Lodge of Instruction, No. 87, has been adjourned until the first Thursday in September.

Royal Alfred Lodge of Instruction, No. 780.—A meeting was held on 21st June, at the Star and Garter Hotel, Kew Bridge, at half-past 7 p.m. Present—Bros. Acworth W.M., Costelow S.W., Gomm J.W., Gunner (Hon. Sec.) J.D., Tucker (Treas.) S.D., Frankel I.G., and Bros. Goss W.M. 780, Gardiner P.M. 780, Kyezor, &c. Lodge was duly opened, the minutes read and confirmed. Bro. Gardiner offered himself as candidate, and the W.M. rehearsed the ceremony of initiation. Bro. Costelow then proposed and Bro. Frankel seconded, that some testimonial be presented to Bro. Preceptor Roe, in acknowledgment of the trouble he has taken in instructing this Lodge, and the motion was, after a few remarks from Bro. Goss, carried unanimously. In consequence of an observation let fall by Bro. Secretary, in reply to which Bros. Goss, Tucker, and Kyezor spoke, it was proposed by Bro. Gardiner and seconded by Bro. Blashy, that the former resolution be entered on the minutes, the proposition was carried unanimously. After other propositions had been made and approved, to the effect that Bro. Secretary send a circular to the brethren announcing the formation of a Testimonial Fund, the Secretary stated that his object in asking if the first proposition was to be recorded was for the purpose of seeking information as to the proper fulfilment of his duties, which were not as yet sufficiently familiar to him. Having heard the matter discussed, he thanked the brethren for the knowledge he had gained. The audit committee announced that they had gone through the accounts of last season, and had found a balance in hand; their report would be submitted at a future meeting. The W.M. for next Lodge meeting was elected, and a vote of thanks passed to Bro. Acworth. Lodge was closed according to ancient custom.

On Friday, 28th June. Present—Bros. Tucker (Treasurer) W.M., Gomm S.W., Gunner (Hon. Sec.) J.W., Goss S.D., Bashy J.D., Talbot I.G., Past Master Bro. Roe, and Bros. Acworth, Eydmann, Botley, Sharp. Bro. Sharp offered himself as candidate, when the W.M. rehearsed the first ceremony, to the edification of the brethren. The same candidate then answered the questions leading to the second degree, in a manner which met with the approval of the brethren. Lodge was opened up, and Bro. Botley answered the questions leading to the third degree. The W.M. then impressively raised Bro. Eydmann. Bros. Eydmann and Sharp were elected members.

Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, No. 860.—On Tuesday evening, at Bro. Smyth's, Sisters' Tavern, Powerail-road, Dalston, Bros. J. Lorkin W.M., G. Gilham S.W., Wardell J.W., C. Lorkin S.D. Borer J.D., Carr I.G., Dallas Sec., Smyth Treas., P.M. Wallington Preceptor; and Bros. Christian, Weige, Polak, and others. After preliminaries, the ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Polak candidate. Bro. Dallas worked the first, second, and third sections of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. Bro. Gilham was appointed W.M. for the ensuing week.

Falcon Lodge, No. 1416, Thirsk.—On Thursday, 20th June the members of this Lodge, accompanied by the Worshipful Master (Bro. George Ayre) and many lady friends, enjoyed their annual picnic and visited Wharfedale. The weather was all that could be desired, and the neighbourhood displayed its sylvan charms to the greatest advantage. On arriving at Ilkley Station, waggonettes were in readiness to convey the party to Bolton Woods, where an abundant luncheon was soon spread under the shaded bank near "The Strid." Here an interesting incident occurred, which contributed much to the enjoyment of all. A large party of the Blackburn Choral Society, organised by Bro. N. Jones, and consisting of between fifty and sixty ladies and gentlemen, had made a similar excursion, and as the party included many Freemasons—brethren of the Felicity, Perseverance, Falcon, Lion, and Anchor Lodges—they soon fraternised, meeting together unexpectedly from the east and the west, and the woods echoed with the harmonious melody of glees and patriotic songs. The party then visited the beautiful ruins of Bolton Priory, whence they resumed their journey to Ilkley by the romantic drive through Beamsley. Arrangements had been made for dinner at the spacious and elegant Middleton Hotel, Ilkley. After doing justice to the viands, which fully sustained Bro. Bentley's reputation, and wandering along the beautiful terraces of this recently erected, spacious, and exquisitely situated Hotel, the party returned home, highly delighted with their day's enjoyment. Great praise is due to the Secretary, Bro. James Johnston, for his complete arrangements.

Percy Lodge, No. 1427.—The Installation and festival of this Lodge was held on Tuesday, the 18th, at the Masonic Hall, Maple-street, Newcastle-on-Tyne. There was a very large attendance of brethren; the Lodge was opened by Bro. J. C. Mowbray W.M., with the following Officers:—J. H. Bentham as I.P.M., S. P. Ord S.W. W.M. elect, W. S. Lishman J.W., B. J. Thompson P.M. Prov. Grand Sec. Treas., J. Brethnoit Sec., C. Bushell S.D., G. E. Macarthey J.D., W. B. East Chaplain, R. Ferry Organist, W. McGall I.G., G. S. Sims Tyler. The minutes of the last meeting being confirmed, the ballot was taken for Mr. T. Sayer, which proving successful, that gentleman was initiated into the mysteries of our Order by the W.M. The Lodge was then opened in the second degree, and Bro. E. D. Davis Prov. G.D.C. assumed the chair, and Bro. Bertram P. Ord was presented to him to receive at his hands the benefit of installation; the usual formalities having been gone through, the Lodge was worked up to the third degree, when all below the rank of Past Master retired, and on these being re-admitted, were informed by the Installing Master that during their absence Bro. Ord had been regularly placed into the chair of K.S., whereupon the new Master was accordingly proclaimed and saluted. He then invested the following brethren as his Officers for the ensuing year:—J. C. Mowbray I.P.M., W. S. Lishman S.W., J. W. Brethnoit J.W., B. J. Thompson P.M. Treas., C. Bushell Sec., Rev. W. B. East Chaplain, Ferry Organist, Macarthey S.D., McGall J.D., Dickenson I.G., McClerin and Farina Stewards, G. S. Sims Tyler. The addresses to the Master and brethren were most beautifully given by the Installing Master, indeed, the whole ceremony was most impressively rendered. Hearty good wishes of several visitors having been tendered to the new Master, the Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to the Queen's Head Hotel, Pilgrim-street, where they sat down to a well served banquet, to which they did ample justice. Grace being said, the customary Loyal and Masonic toasts received due attention; the health of the Prov. G.M. and Officers of Prov. Grand Lodge was responded to by Bro. B. J. Thompson P.G. Sec.; the W.M. then gave the R.W. Prov. G.M. John Fawcett, and Officers of the Prov. Grand Lodge of Durham. He could only say, whoever knew Bro. Fawcett, loved and respected him; he coupled the name of Bro. E. D. Davis with the toast. Bro. Davis in the course of his reply expressed the gratification he experienced at hearing the Provincial Grand Master of Durham spoken of in such high and eulogistic terms, and he trusted his Officers would do their best to emulate his example, and support him in all his duties. The I.P.M., Bro. Mowbray then rose to propose the health of the W.M., in doing so, he said there are many duties which devolve on us which we would willingly shirk; and, again, others which cease to be as it were a duty, but a pleasure; that which devolved on him now was more than a pleasure; the brethren would give him credit for speaking from his heart; he had known Bro. Ord for more than thirty years, and had always known him as a noble open-hearted fellow, who would go out of his way to do a person a service. He wished him a year of pleasure, prosperity, and every happiness. With it he would leave the toast in the hands of the brethren, who, he was sure would, whether members or visitors, join most heartily with him to do it honour. The W.M. said Bro. Mowbray spoke of it as being a duty and a pleasure to propose the toast, but he had completely taken the wind out of his sails; he felt grateful to him for the way he had proposed his health; he would do everything in his power to hand down to his successor the warrant in the same unsullied state in which he had that day received it; he could only assure the brethren that he thanked them very much indeed. The health of the I.P.M. was proposed by Bro. E. D. Davis P.M., he reminded the brethren that they had drunk with all enthusiasm the health of the present Master, but he was sure they would not forget the one who had just quitted the chair. He hoped Bro. Mowbray would long be spared to set an example to the Lodge, that every brother might faithfully copy; he complimented him on the way he had fulfilled the duties of his office for the past year; he assured the brethren he had never seen the ceremony of Initiation better given than that afternoon; he said he was not there to gild refined gold, or to paint the lily, so would call on the brethren to drink to the health of Bro. Mowbray. The I.P.M., in reply said, if he had failed during the past year, he assured them it was not for want of trying; he thanked all for their kind assistance this had enabled him to go through his year so pleasantly; in conclusion, he thanked them, and almost felt regret that his year of office was at an end. The W.M. rose to give the health of the Installing Master; no words he could express would convey the worth of Bro. Davis; personally he tendered him his sincere thanks, for though he had been, of late, sufferin from indisposition, still h was amongst them; he felt if he spoke for a month he could not do justice to the toast, nor would it add to the enthusiastic manner in which the name was always received. Bro. Davis, who was greeted with prolonged cheering, expressed the fear he had a few days ago that he would not have been able to be amongst them; he had great pleasure in placing the W.M. in the chair, and if it should be his good fortune to be present when he handed the gavel over to his successor, he hoped to be enabled to congratulate him on his year of office, which he trusted would be successful. The toast of the Officers was given by Bro. Bentham P.M., who expressed his gratification at seeing them steadily advancing to the high position the W.M. now occupied The toast was responded to by the S.W. The Junior Officers in like manner received their praise, and the W.M. then gave the Visitors, and expressed the pleasure he had at seeing so many that day; he would couple with the toast the name of the youngest W.M. present, Bro. G. Taylor, who replied, and thanked the Master and brethren for their kind reception. The Tyler was then called, and he brought to a close a most enjoyable evening. The singing throughout had been of a very high class, and the "Old English Glees," rendered by Bros. Ferry, Liddle, Richardson, and Darer, were received with much favour. The visitors present were Bros. E. D. Davis P.M. 965 P.P.G.S.W., J. Ridsdale P.M. 406 P.P.G.S.D., T. Anderson P.M. 511 Prov. Grand Treas., J. Cook P.M. 481 P.P.G.S.W., G. I. Dean W.M. 541, J. The Wycombe Lodge, No. 1501.—The annual meeting of this Lodge took place in the Town Hall of High Wycombe, on Thursday the 27 ult. The Lodge was opened in due form by the W.M., Bro. Hockvale, and the minutes of the last regular Lodge were read and confirmed. The only business on the agenda was the installation of the W.M. elect, Bro. Leopold Murray Nixon S.W. Bro. W. S. Cantrell P.M. and Secretary took the chair, and the W.M. elect was duly presented at the pedestal for the benefit of installation. The preliminary qualifications for the office were most impressively recited, the ancient charges were forcibly enjoined, and Bro. L. M. Nixon was duly obligated. The Lodge was then opened in the third degree, and the M.M.'s retired. Bro. John Palmer P.M. took the chair, and Bro. L. M Nixon was regularly installed into the chair of K.S., and as W.M. of the Wycombe Lodge for the ensuing year. The ceremonial in its entirety was most conscientiously performed, and those who are acquainted with our beautiful Ritual could not fail to have been impressed by the true, earnest, and zealous rendering of our accomplished Installing Master, Bro. J. Palmer P.G.S.W. Berks and Bucks. It may be mentioned that this interesting Lodge is only in its 5th year of existence, the Warrant of Constitution dating from the year 1874. The first W.M. was our lamented Bro. Jesse Owens, who was succeeded by Bros. Palmer, W. S. Cantrell, Hockvale, and the present W.M. Bro. L. M. Nixon. To these brethren the success of the Lodge is entirely due, and their names in connection with the Masonic Charities are conspicuous. The W.M. invested the following brethren with collars of office:—Bros. Batting S.W., Westfield J.W., Rev. A. J. Riddle Chaplain, Seward Treasurer, W. S. Cantrell Sec., Dr. Rackley S.D., C. Hunt J.D., D. Clark I.G., Weston Organist, and C. Nowell Tyler. The W.M., in the name of the Lodge, presented the I.P.M., Bro. Hockvale, with a jewel of office, in acknowledgment of his services during the past year. Bro. Weston added to the solemnity of the occasion by presiding at the harmonium. The usual business of the day being ended, the Lodge was closed in harmony, peace, and brotherly love. Amongst those present we noticed Bros. Powell P.P.G.D., Tolley P.M. 771 P.P.G.D. and P.Z. 771, Mason, Loasley, Baines, Webb, Field. Visitors—Bros. Brown W.M. 771, Bingham P.M. 771, Manley 771, Schieman W.M. 209, Grisbrook P.M. 771 P.P.G.D. Berks and Bucks, and Beedle 1222.

Emulation Lodge, No. 1505.—The regular monthly meeting of this Lodge was held at the Masonic Temple, Liverpool, on Thursday, 27th June. Present—Bros. H. Morris I.P.M. as W.M., W. H. Corbin S.W., J. Capell J.W., H. Coulson Sec., J. Heskin P.M. Treas., M. Strang S.D., H. H. Smith J.D., J. T. Callow P.M. D.C., Irvine Steward, R. Lytham I.G., J. Skeaf P.G.O. Organist, W. H. Ball Tyler; Past Master Bro. Rev. H. G. Vernon P.P.G.C. Chaplain. There was a very slight attendance of members, and amongst the few Visitors we noticed Bro. J. C. Spink 1299. After the usual routine business had been attended to, Bro. Morris initiated Messrs. L. Kretschman and W. M. Smith into Freemasonry. Bro. Morris relinquished the gavel in favour of Bro. Callow P.M., who immediately set to work and opened the Lodge in the second degree, and in a very able manner passed Bro. W. Fonlkes to take his seat among Fellow Crafts. The labours in this degree being ended, the Lodge resumed in the first, and after the satisfactory disposal of its business the Lodge was closed with solemn prayer. By request of the presiding W.M., the brethren adjourned to refreshment. Bro. Morris I.P.M. took the chair at the festive board, by request of Bro. Callow, and after each Bro. had refreshed the inner man, the first toast of the evening was submitted, and the health of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, Patron of our Order, was most cordially drunk, the brethren singing the National Anthem. Bro. Morris then gave H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and Rulers of the Craft, Supreme and Subordinate, which was heartily received, the brethren singing "God Bless the Prince of Wales." The W.M. had now to propose a toast which was always submitted with great pleasure from the chair, and received with cordiality by the brethren. He had had the honour of initiating two very worthy members into our glorious Order this evening, and was sure the teachings of the Craft would not fail to afford them those pleasures and advantages which they are so eminently capable of imparting. He called upon the brethren to drink to our newly Initiated Brothers. The new brethren returned thanks in a very intelligent and heartfelt manner. The W. Master then gave the last toast of the evening (as very few are proposed on such occasions in this Lodge); he had great pleasure in welcoming Visitors to their Lodge, and he knew he was expressing the feelings of the W.M. when he said they were truly welcome as often as they chose to come. Bro. Davies responded; he had been pleased with his second visit to No. 1505; he thought the Lodge was as harmonious, compact, and worked as well as any in Liverpool that he had visited; he congratulated the Emulation brethren on having such efficient and punctual Past Masters, who, in the absence of their Worshipful Master, could ably carry on the business that came before them; he always liked to see a Lodge profitably employed, and was pleased that he had been privileged to see here what he would like to see elsewhere, viz., the W.M. and the Past Masters work different degrees. It may here be added, that although Bros. Quayle, Morris and Callow work remarkably well, there is an extraordinary difference in their method. We are, undoubtedly, creatures of imitation, and, to a great extent, copy those with whom we are associated; but in Freemasonry a brother will zealously carry out the dictates of his own ideas. Bros. Coulson, Chapman, Gilfillan, Fonlkes, and Strange kindly added to the pleasure of the evening by singing some capital songs, and Bro. Hosne was most effective in a recitation he gave. The Tylers' toast was eventually given, and the brethren dispersed.

Duke of Connaught Lodge of Instruction, No. 1524.—Havelock Hotel, Albion-road, Dalston, on Wednesday evening, 3rd July. Bros. J. Lorkin W.M., R. Olley S.W., C. Lorkin J.W., G. Woolley S.D., Maples J.D., Martin I.G., G. Ferrar Treasurer, E. Dietrich Secretary, W. Fieldwick Preceptor, and Bros. Bonner, C. Oller, Shackleton P.M. 1524, &c. The Lodge was opened in ancient form, and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The ceremony of initiation was rehearsed by the W.M. in his usual correct manner, after which Bro. C. Lorkin worked the Sections of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. Bro. R. Olley was appointed W.M. for next Wednesday evening. The fifteen sections will be worked on the 7th of August.

Sackville Lodge, No. 1619.—The regular meeting of this successful Lodge took place at the Crown Hotel, East Grinstead, Sussex, on Tuesday last, the 2nd inst. There was a numerous attendance of brethren, the Provincial Grand Master Bro. Sir W. W. Burrell, and the Provincial Grand Secretary Bro. Freeman were present. The Lodge was opened at two o'clock by Bro. W. Hall I.P.M. (in the temporary absence of the W.M., who arrived shortly afterwards and then took the chair). The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, and the report of the Audit Committee received, Bro. James Hare, 193, was unanimously elected a joining member. Bro. James Cooper was then raised to the third degree, after which Bro. Walter Harwood was passed to the second degree. This business having been disposed of, Bro. C. W. Noehmer P.M. 186, and a member of this Lodge, took the chair as Installing Master, when Bro. Charles Sawyer S.W. was presented by the W.M. Bro. W. H. Hook, to receive the benefit of installation. Bro. Chas. Sawyer having been duly installed as W.M. of this Lodge, he appointed his Officers as follow:—Bros. W. H. Hook I.P.M., C. T. Young S.W., John G. Horsey J.W., Rev. E. A. Head as Sec., Wm. Hale P.M. 780 and 1351 as Treasurer, S. Davison S.D., W. Rudge J.D., J. G. Calway I.G., H. Walker as Steward, and Sargeant as Tyler. The ceremony of Installation concluded, a unanimous vote of thanks was accorded to Bro. P.M. Noehmer, for the able manner in which he had performed the duties. A vote of thanks was also conveyed to Bro. John G. Horsey J.W. for his present to the Lodge of a carpet. Among the Visitors present were:—Bros. Secx P.M. 186 and 1426, Shadd P.M. 257, D. J. Robinson W.M. 186, Earl 186, J. A. Reid 1673, A. C. Cooper 1673, Hawkes 315, Webber 163, Davey 732, Taylor 1110, and Byass 1465. The labours of the evening being ended, the Lodge was closed in perfect harmony, and adjourned until the first Tuesday in September, The brethren then assembled at a banquet held in the new and spacious Market-room of the Hotel, and provided by Bro. J. Weller in his best style, and reflecting great credit upon him, for besides the abundance of excellent things provided, the table and room were beautifully decorated with a collection of fine roses and other choice flowers. After the brethren had done justice to the good things before them, the W.M. gave the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts, which were duly honoured. The name of Bro. Freeman P.G.S. was coupled with the toasts of the Provincial G. Master and Officers; he, in a very pleasing speech spoke highly of the success of the Sackville Lodge during the two years it had been in existence. The I.P.M. Bro. W. H. Hook assumed the gavel, and proposed the health of the W.M. Bro. Chas. Sawyer, of whom he spoke in the highest terms, both as a good and diligent Mason, and a courteous, upright, and much respected friend. He was sure that the Sackville Lodge must prosper under his rule. He knew that every Bro. present was too well acquainted with Bro. Sawyer's virtues to need many words from him; he was a native of East Grinstead, and, until lately, a resident among them, but now he (Bro. Hook) and the rest of the London brethren have the pleasure and advantage of having Bro. Sawyer among them. The enthusiastic manner in which the toast was drunk, proved the cor-currence of all the brethren present in the remarks made by Bro. Hook. The W.M. then rose and returned thanks in a very able speech for the kind manner in which the brethren had received the toast of his health. As to Bro. Hook, he thought he could not better return the compliment for the pretty things he had said of him than by at once placing upon his breast the very handsome jewel which had been voted by the brethren for the able manner in which Bro. Hook had carried out the duties of second W. Master of the Sackville Lodge, and as a token of appreciation of the many benefits the Lodge had received at his hands, particulars of which were recorded on the back of the jewel. Bro. Hook acknowledged the gift in a short but telling speech, and sat down amid the hearty plaudits of all assembled. The remainder of the toasts having been disposed of, the brethren dispersed, at about half-past ten, after a most pleasant evening. Several of the London brethren drove over at an earlier hour to Three Bridges, and returned to London by the last train, the remainder staying at the Crown Hotel for the night.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 193.—On Wednesday, 3rd July, at the Railway Tavern, London-street, E.C. Present—Bros. A. E. Staley W.M., Biddle S.W., K. Harris S.W., Gottheil P.M., Pitt Sec., Sayer S.D., Gompertz J.D., Woodward I.G., Walker, Millhouse, Moss, Anderson, and Gehringer. The first ceremony was rehearsed. In a former report of Bro. Staley's working, we felt it our duty to animadvert rather severely on his shortcomings. We are glad to perceive that our strictures have produced a salutary effect, as the work showed a decided and unmistakable improvement. It is yet faulty in many respects, especially in want of deliberation in delivery. The habit of rushing through a ceremony at railway speed cannot be too strongly condemned; detracting as it does from what might otherwise be considered fairly good work. Bro. Staley has evidently determined to become an efficient craftsman, and it is from a desire to encourage him in his laudable endeavours, and from a conviction that he prefers fair criticism to fictitious praise that these remarks are made. Three of the sections were worked, several of the brethren evincing ability in giving the responses. Bro. Biddle was elected W.M. for next Wednesday.

William Preston Lodge of Instruction, No. 766.—On Friday, the 14th of June, at the Feathers Tavern, Upper George-street, Edgeware-road. Present—Bros. Coop W.M., Micklebugh S.W., Heath J.W., Braun Hon. Sec., Hayes Preceptor, West S.D., Godden J.D., Reid I.G.; also Bros. Nichols, Passingham, Hall, Adair, Tribbel, Kennard, &c. After preliminaries the ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Hayes being candidate. Bro. West took the chair, and rehearsed the ceremony of passing. Lodge was opened to the third degree and closed down. Bro. Micklebugh was elected W.M. for the ensuing meeting. A vote of thanks was passed to Bro. Coop. Bro. P.M. Braun proposed, Bro. West seconded, and it was carried unanimously, that this Lodge of Instruction be adjourned until the first Friday in September. Arrangements for a summer outing were agreed to, and Bros. Braun, Godden, and Tribbel elected as Committee. This will take place on Wednesday next, the 10th of July, the White Hart, Willesden, being the place fixed on.

Merchant Navy Lodge of Instruction, No. 781.—The annual banquet was held on the 26th ult., at the Silver Tavern, Burdett-road. Bro. Breden the W.M. of the mother Lodge presided. Bros. Robinson S.W., Ould J.W., Ives Treasurer, Turquand Preceptor acting I.P.M. Thirty-nine brethren, including three Past Masters of the mother Lodge, sat down to a well-supplied and decorated table, Bro. Gregory doing his utmost to make the brethren happy and comfortable. The usual Masonic toasts were ably given from the chair, whilst occasional songs from Bros. Clegg and Robinson contributed to the pleasure of the evening. Those brethren who have the success of this Lodge of Instruction at heart are much encouraged at the increased interest taken by the members in its progress and prosperity.

Tredegar Lodge of Instruction, No. 1625.—Met, as usual, on Monday, the 24th inst., at the Royal, Mile-end-road, corner of Burdett-road. There were present Bros. Hogg W.M., Cole S.W., Franklin J.W., Gottheil P.M. acting J.D., Emery I.G., Geo. Hollington Sec., Huggett, Hubbard, Kirkman, and Clark. The first ceremony and mode of calling off were practised. The work of Bro. Hogg is distinguished by deliberateness and fluency, and although several points require amendment, still, upon the whole, his mode of working is in tolerable accordance with the standard adopted in most of the East-end, and numerous Lodges in other districts. The two Wardens, both very young Masons, proved by their work the close attention they must have paid to its achievement. A very excellent feature in this Lodge of Instruction is the regular attendance of the W.M. of the Mother Lodge, and the S.W., who acts as Secretary. Their presence not only stimulates the younger brethren, but is also an example worthy of emulation. Bro. G. Hollington was elected to preside on Monday next.

Beaconsfield Lodge, No. 1662.—An emergency meeting of this Lodge was held at the Chequers, Marsh-street, Walthamstow, on Wednesday, the 26th June. Present—Bros. W. T. Christian W.M., W. Groome S.W., W. G. Hallows J.W., J. Pinder P.M., F. Hallows Sec., T. Franklin S.D., J. H. Cambridge J.D., A. Oldroyd I.G., T. Upward Organist, A. Delvallé W.S., Gilchrist Tyler; Bros. Hunt, Field, Carter, Clark, Robery, Stockwell, Putney, Harris, &c. The Lodge was opened in due form, with solemn prayer, in the first and second degrees. Bros. Putney and Harris, the candidates for raising, were examined and entrusted. The Lodge was opened in the third degree, and those brethren were regularly introduced, and raised to the sublime degree of M.M. The Lodge was resumed to the first degre, and the brethren called off for refreshment. The Lodge was called on, and the ballot taken for three gentlemen, whose names had been previously handed to the Secretary. It proved unanimous in their favour, and one being present, he was initiated into the Order, according to ancient form and custom. The Secretary then read the letter received from Grand Lodge respecting the four resolutions passed at the last Quarterly Communication, respecting the Grand Orient of France, and the same was ordered to be recorded on the minutes of the Lodge. The Lodge was then closed with solem prayer, and adjourned until the 5th October next. Amongst the visitors present were Bros. W. Claridge W.M. elect 1685, J. Badkin W.M. 1365, R. T. Williams 1567, G. E. Laverack 907, G. J. Westfield 1382, C. F. Harris 1679, Frederick Creed 1445, R. Shephard 861, &c., &c.

Eleanor Lodge, No. 1707.—The first Annual Festival of this Lodge, took place on Wednesday last, at the Angel Hotel, Edmonton. There were present Bros. J. Tanner W.M., J. H. Thompson S.W. and W.M. elect P.P.S.B. Middlesex, C. Lovebond J.W., C. Oliver Treas., R. J. Leaman Hon. Sec., C. R. Garnett J.D., J. Ramsey I.G., Fountain Meen Org. Bros. Pinder, Symmons, Byers, Webb, J. Perry, G. Perry, A. Gifford, J. S. Frith, W. Taylor. The Visitors were Bros. H. G. Buss Assist. G. Sec., S. Gammon P.M. 206, W. Holloway W.M. elect Ragshaw 1457, A. M. Sewell 21, G. Rawlinson late 754, E. Everdell D.C. 1519, E. Poore 1237, W. Hubbard 813, J. W. Symons 1187, J. Gilby 1309. The Lodge was opened in due form, and after the minutes were read and confirmed, Messrs. Gimingham and Watson were introduced and initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry. The next business was the installation of the new Master, Bro. J. H. Thompson, the ceremony being performed by the outgoing Master, Bro. J. Tanner. The Worshipful Master then invested his Officers as follow:—Bros. Lovebond S.W., Garnett J.W., Byers Treasurer, J. Tanner P.M. Sec., Ramsay S.D., W. Leaman J.D., Oliver I.G., Fountain Meem Organist, Symmons D.C. After the addresses had been given, Bro. Garnett, the W.M., gave the Lecture on the tracing board in the first degree. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banqueting hall, where they partook of a most récherché repast provided by Messrs. Newell and Co. of Hackney, to whom great praise must be given for the satisfactory manner in which they catered. The usual Masonic toasts followed, Bro. Buss in a very appropriate speech replying for the Officers of Grand Lodge. During the evening a selection of music was most effectually rendered by Bros. Ashton, Cozens, Fountain Meen, and Hubbard, members of the English Glee Union, to the great enjoyment of the company. A very handsome Past Master's jewel was presented by the brethren of the Lodge to Bro. J. Tanner for his valuable services as first Master. This Lodge, although in its infancy, is progressing satisfactorily the aim of the members being that not only shall the working be creditably performed, but that goodfellowship and brotherly affection should predominate amongst them; this was fully exemplified at this meeting, where every one expressed how pleasantly they had spent the evening; we hope this feeling will always exist in this Lodge.

SECRETARYSHIP OF THE GIRLS' SCHOOL.

A POLL took place on Thursday last, at Freemasons' Tavern, London, for the Election of Secretary to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls in place of the late Bro. Little. As we stated last week there were nine candidates for the vacant office. The following was announced by Bro. Lt.-Col. Creaton—who acted as Chairman—as the result of the Scrutineers' examination of the ballot:—

		Votes
1	F. R. W. HEDGES - - -	373
2	P. STORR - - -	268
3	C. F. MATIER - - -	153
4	T. CULL - - -	44
5	W. C. CRICK - - -	42
	F. A. WHITE - - -	42
7	W. WORRELL - - -	40
8	T. R. EAMES - - -	34
9	W. SMALLPEICE - -	1

Bro. Hedges was therefore declared duly elected, and amid the cheers of those present he briefly acknowledged the honour that had been paid him. Votes of thanks were passed to the Scrutineers and to the Chairman for presiding during the meeting.

R.M. INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

ANALYSIS OF THE SUBSCRIPTION LIST.

WE do not for one moment hesitate to express our dissatisfaction with the result of Monday's Festival. It was a most agreeable gathering, and those who met together for the purpose of showing their interest in the Institution were more numerous than usual. Yet while everything pointed to an eminently satisfactory result, the amount realised is considerably less than might have been expected. We admit that times are hard, and money is not so plentiful as could be wished, but this will go but a short way towards explaining a falling off as compared with last year, of, in round figures, over £3000. Brethren appear to have forgotten that a large additional expenditure has been incurred on the School buildings, while the Society stands committed to a far larger annual outlay than ever. Therefore, instead of there having been a diminution, there were manifold reasons why, as we pointed out last week, there should have been very considerable increase. However, it is no good lamenting what cannot now be remedied, and all we can do is to chronicle the inexplicable fact that, while the Festival of 1875 yielded £12,700, that of 1876 £12,100, and that of 1877 £13,160—in the first and second years we have given the figures as they were, in the last, as but for a clerical error, they should have been announced—the Festival of 1878, with a Royal Craftsman in the chair, resulted in a total of only £10,169 with over twenty lists outstanding. Having noted this, we proceed to the task of analysing the lists, and, as in former cases, we place the contributions under three categories, namely:—Metropolitan, Provincial, and Foreign, the total in each case being, Metropolitan, £4,944 14s, Provincial £5,152 18s 1d, and Foreign £71 10s. It is worthy of note, that the positions ordinarily taken by the first two are, in this instance, reversed, and that London is some hundreds of pounds behind the Provinces, whereas the Provinces are generally in the inferior place. Last year, for instance, at the Festival of this Institution, London yielded in round figures £6,790, and the Provinces £6,116. At the Benevolent Festival in February last, the contributions of the Metropolis amounted to £6,062, and those of the Provinces to £4,969, and at the Girls' Festival in May they were £4,266 and £3,996 respectively. However, we cannot grudge our Provincial brethren the satisfaction they must derive from occuping the place of honour on this occasion, and though they are some £900 behind their aggregate of last year, they show well in this respect by comparison with the Metropolis, which is something like £2,200 behind. But to proceed. The Metropolis was represented by 123 Stewards, of whom 104 represented 103 Lodges, 3 appeared for as many Chapters, and 2 under the head of the A. and A. Rite and Mark, while 14 were unattached. The total of their lists was, as we have said £4,944 14s, and the place of honour very appropriately is taken by Bro. Binckes, as the representative of the Lewis Lodge, No. 1,185, his list yielding £163 16s. He is closely pressed, however, by Bro. Costa, the worthy representative of that popular and very liberal Lodge, the Friends in Council, who seldom miss an opportunity of evincing the deep interest they take in the welfare of our Institutions. Bro. Costa totalled up to £158 11s. In addition to these there were three other three-figure lists, namely, Royal Naval No. 59 £112 7s, Orpheus No. 1706 £110 5s, and Gihon No. 49 £103 19s, Bro. Pare of the Tranquillity just missing the distinction of a three-figure total by a few pounds, his amount being £96. Lodges Nos. 2, 5, 8, 18, 21, 22, 23, 28, 33, 256, and 657, have been represented at every Festival during the last four years, and there are several which have been absent only once or twice during the same period. On the other hand there are, unfortunately, a few which do not figure in any of the last twelve lists. Of Lodges consecrated last year, or which have been warranted since the publication of Grand Lodge Calendar seven sent representatives, and two of these have been contributors to all the Festivals this year, and three to two of the number. We congratulate the brethren of these Lodges on the very satisfactory commencement they have made, and we trust their future career may continue to present equally satisfactory evidence of their prosperity and liberality. There are still thirteen more Metropolitan Lists to be furnished, so that if we take only the modest average of £50 a piece, there is still a possibility that a further sum of between £600 and £700 may find its way into the coffers of the Institution. Let us hope that it may be so, for the amount is needed.

We now pass to the Provinces, thirty-one of which sent up one or more representatives, the thirteen absentees being Beds., Cornwall, Herefordshire, Leicestershire and Rutland, Northamptonshire and Hunts., Northumberland, Nottinghamshire, South Wales Western Division, Wilts, Worcestershire, Channel Islands, Jersey, and Isle of Man. Three of these thirteen, namely, Bedfordshire (five Lodges), Worcestershire (ten Lodges), and Isle of Man (three Lodges), appear to take no interest whatever in any of our Institutions. At all events, they have sent no representative to any of the Festivals during the years 1875, 1876, 1877, and 1878. We commend them, therefore, to the special notice of the Secretaries, and as Bro. Terry's Festival is next in order of time, and he has a clear six months before him to think the matter over, let him try the effect of his energy and eloquence. We dare say some member of the Lodges in these Provinces will only be too glad to do what in him lies to encourage and support our Institutions. Be this as it may, however, we trust the effort will be made, and that a fifth year will not be allowed to pass without some contributions being received from these parts. As to the contributing Provinces, and taking them in alphabetical order, we find, first, Berks and Bucks represented by two Stewards from two of its sixteen Lodges, one of these, the Loyal Berkshire Lodge of Hope, No. 574, of Newbury, doing duty for the County of Berks, and the Wycombe, No. 1501, of High Wycombe, rendering a similar service for that of Bucks. The amounts are small —£26 10s and £27 6s respectively—and nearly equal, but in May, at the Festival of the Girls' School, six Stewards representing as many Lodges, took up sums amounting together to £217 5s, while in February, at the Benevolent, it contributed £157 9s, by the medium of seven Stewards. Last year, four of its Lodges, represented by five Stewards, sent up £171 18s 6d—one list being outstanding at the time—at the Festival of the Boys. Four Lodges sent representatives to the Girls, their joint contributions being £114 9s, and at the Benevolent its four Stewards took up £173 19s 6d. In 1876, it contributed by the medium of three Stewards, £152 15s to the Boys, and £141 15s to the Girls per a brother of No. 1501. In 1875, it contributed £287 3s 6d to the Boys, £75 2s to the Girls, and £91 5s 6d to the Benevolent. Thus, it has been an absentee only once in the four years, the aggregate of its contributions, as far as they appear in the lists from which we have gleaned these particulars, being over £1,636. Bristol with its eight Lodges was represented by its Provincial Grand Secretary, whose list amounted to £75 12s. In February, a member of one of its Lodges, No. 103, took up a list of £134 15s for the Benevolent. In February 1877, the Earl of Limerick, Prov. G. Master, as Steward for the whole Province, sent in a sum of £161 8s to the same Institution, and in 1876, the Prov. G. Registrar figured in the list of Stewards for the Benevolent, though what was the result of his efforts did not appear at the time the subscriptions were announced. In 1875, it contributed £114 9s to the Boys, £66 13s 6d to the Girls, and £53 to the Benevolent. Thus this Province has sent representatives to seven out of the last twelve Festivals. Cambridge, let us hope, has entered on a new system. It is weak in point of numbers, and has only four Lodges, of which three belong to Cambridge, and one to Wisbeach. Hitherto, during the course of our experience—or rather till as late as the Benevolent Festival of February last, we had had no opportunity of noting its contributions to any of the Festivals we have been privileged to chronicle, but at the Girls' Festival in May and on this occasion C. F. M. Mundy of the Isaac Newton University, No. 859, has done his part in redeeming the good name of the Province. His two lists together amount to twenty guineas, and they look more like his own personal contributions than as the outcome of his canvass, but at all events praise is due to this Craftsman, who appears to be the only member of this Province who remembers there are three Central Masonic Charities which need to be supported. True, there is a boy being educated and maintained at Wood Green, and there are, or recently were, two girls—one by purchase—in the sister Institution at Battersea Rise; but this, instead of involving any contribution of money, is a great advantage, as it relieves the Lodges of the Province of the necessity of rendering any help to the children in question. We have never been able to understand why, if the Apollo University, No. 357, of Oxford, can make itself conspicuous by almost invariably sending up one or more Stewards to our Festivals, the Isaac Newton University, No. 859, cannot be equally mindful of its duties. The members of the two Lodges are socially of the same standing, and it strikes us that what the one does habitually, the other might condescend to do occasionally. As for the Provincial Grand Master and his Officers who do not seem to bestir themselves much, we think it would be as well if some one whispered into the ear of the former the old proverb, noblesse oblige. The position he holds is one of great dignity, but it was never intended it should be merely ornamental, and that its duties, which are not particularly onerous, should be done or left undone at pleasure. Five out of the thirty-nine Lodges of Cheshire were represented by Six Stewards. There is one list still to come, while those of the other five amount to £80 17s. The Lodges hail from Nantwich (No. 293), Chester (No. 425), Birkenhead (No. 537), Crewe (No. 979), and Seacombe (No. 1276). Though its contributions have not been on a scale of great magnitude, it has contributed to each of the twelve Festivals held during the last four years. Moreover, there is in this case a local charity to be looked after, and those who have noted our articles on the Cheshire Educational Institute must be perfectly well aware how the brethren of the Province fulfil their duty towards it. However, in May it gave £134 8s to the Girls, and in February £172 2s to the Benevolent. Last year the Boys School benefited to the extent of £106 18s 6d, with one list still to come, the Girls received £10 10s, and the Benevolent £139 3s. In 1876, the Boys had £155 10s 6d, the Girls £73 10s, and the Benevolent £47 7s. In 1875, £84 was handed to the Boys, £21 to the Girls, and £100 to the Benevolent. Cumberland and Westmoreland, with nineteen Lodges, found a most efficient representative in the person of Bro. McKay, the W. Master of Union, No. 129, of Kendal and Prov. G. Dir. of Cers., and his list totalled to the level sum of £150. This is the first Festival it has attended this year. However, at the Benevolent in 1877, the same brother served as Steward, and took up a list of £63, and at the Boys' Festival in 1876, the sum handed in was £147. Derbyshire (eighteen Lodges) was represented by three brethren of the Royal Sussex, No. 353, Winshill, and their joint contributions together amounted to £56 14s. In May its contribution to the Girls was £21 8s 6d, but it began the year well by contributing £170 to the Benevolent by the hands of its Provincial G. Master, the Marquis of Hartington, and another brother. Last year the Boys benefited to the extent of £77 14s, and a member of No. 850 figured for £10 at the Benevolent. £131 15s 6d went to the Boys in 1876, while in 1875 the same Institution fared still better, the total subscribed amounting to £271 6s, while the Girls received ten guineas. The honour of Devonshire, when in the keeping of Bro. Godtschalk, is always maintained efficiently. It has forty-six Lodges, and it sends £220. The half of this amount went to the Benevolent in February, and a sum of £29 10s 6d to the Girls in May. Bro. Curteis took up sixty guineas for the Boys last year, while the Girls received fifty guineas, and the Benevolent a fraction over £596. In 1876, one list for the Boys amounted to £173 5s, and there was one other outstanding. In 1875, the same Institution received the sum of £289 17s. It has only been unrepresented at one out of the last twelve Festivals. Dorset, with its thirteen Lodges, is most fortunate in numbering among its Craftsmen several members of great zeal and activity, and accordingly it figures for very handsome amounts on nearly every occasion. At this Festival Bro. J. M. P. Montagu, Past Dep. Prov. G.M, hands in a list of £401 12s. As Steward for the Girls in May he was the means of raising a sum of £116 11s, and by his exertions in February the Benevolent was richer by £150 than it would have been had he not acted for his Province. Last year, the contributions were to the Benevolent £305, Girls £180 12s, and Boys £80 17s. In 1876, there was contributed £222 to the Benevolent, and for 1875 the Boys received £633 3s, making the handsome total for the four years of £2,089 15s, which gives an average of as nearly as possible £522 10s per annum, nearly £174 5s per Institution, and of about £40 per Lodge per annum. Well done, Dorsetshire, and well done, Bro. Montagu, as Steward at five of these Festivals! Durham (twenty-five Lodges) is represented by Bro. Crookes, and his amount of subscriptions is £155 8s. Last year he took up for the Boys' School an almost equal amount—£158 11s, and the same Institution received £275 2s in 1876, and £372 19s 6d the previous year, while the Girls had £286 2s 6d in 1877. Essex with its sixteen Lodges looks excellently well, figuring, as it does, for £233 5s 7d, the result of the exertions of four Stewards, and there is one list yet to come. It was represented modestly at the Girls' Festival in May and to the extent of £88 16s at the Benevolent in February. £76 16s was its contribution last year to the Boys' School, £37 9s went to the Girls' School, and £113 13s to the Benevolent. In 1876 it supported the Boys to the extent of £144 18s, and the Benevolent with £42 10s. In 1875 the Boys received £68 5s, and there was Bro. Tanner's list still to come, and the Girls £86 6s 6d, so that this Province has not overlooked its duty in supporting our Charities. Of the fourteen Gloucestershire Lodges no less than four are represented, the aggregate of their contributions reaching the very considerable amount of £379 13s, Bro. White of the Royal Gloucestershire No. 839, Gloucester, leading the way with £168. Its three Stewards' lists in May amounted to £229 16s 6d, and in February a Cheltenham Lodge,

Digitized by Google

Foundation No. 82, did duty for the Province to the extent of £118. Thus, the Province this year has contributed in all to our three Institutions over £727. Last year £338 2s was contributed to the Boys, £135 9s to the Girls, and £28 7s to the Benevolent; total for the year £501 18s. In 1876 £276 14s was raised for the Boys, and the year previous forty guineas went to the same Institution. Thus, close upon £1,550 has been raised in this small Province, upwards of two-thirds of which have gone to the Boys' School. Hants and Isle of Wight, whose Provincial Grand Master Bro. W. W. B. Beach M.P. presided at the Festival of the Boys' Institution last year, is down for a round sum of one hundred guineas. It can boast of thirty Lodges, and on this occasion one of the Aldershot Lodges—Panmure, No. 723—represents the Province. In May, four—including this same Lodge—sent up Stewards, their total contributions being £117 12s, and in February two Lodges together handed £70 7s 6d to the Benevolent. In 1877, its contributions to the Boys reached a total of £624 1s, while the Girls received £222 12s, and the Benevolent £171 5s. In 1876 the Boys were benefited by a contribution of £176 8s, the Girls by £21, and the Benevolent by £285 11s 6s. In 1875 the Boys had £371 7s, with two lists still outstanding, and the Benevolent £162 18s. Thus, in the four years it has missed only one Festival, and the aggregate of its contributions is a fraction over £2,328.

ROYAL MASONIC INSTITUTION FOR BOYS.

THE Eightieth Anniversary Festival of this Institution was held on Monday last, at the Alexandra Palace, under the presidency of H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught P.G.W., who was supported by upwards of 250 Stewards and a numerous assemblage of brethren and ladies. The banquet was served in the Concert Hall, and at its conclusion, grace having been said by Bro. Pickard G. Chap., His Royal Highness proceeded to give the usual toasts. The first, the Chairman said, needed no preface from him. He called on all present to drink the health of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen the Patron of the Institution. The next toast he considered as only second to the one first honoured, being the health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales the M.W. Grand Master of English Freemasons. Ever since H.R.H. had occupied the important position of Grand Master, he had never failed to show the deep interest he takes in everything relating to the Craft. This he (the speaker) knew from personal knowledge. In 1870, the Prince of Wales presided at the Festival of the Boys' Institution, and the Chairman was happy to think he did an immense amount of good on that occasion; ever since then the funds had come in wonderfully. Each of these toasts were cordially received, and were followed by the National Anthem and "God save the Prince of Wales" respectively. The health of H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, the Chairman of the day, was proposed by Lord Suffield, Prov. G.M. Norfolk. It was a proud privilege to propose the toast; one always difficult to introduce, by reason of the presence of the person referred to. All know the readiness with which members of our Royal Family render assistance to any good cause, and how their present Chairman invariably came forward when asked to do so. On this occasion, His Royal Highness makes his début in any great Masonic ceremony. They had a noble and brilliant gathering to do him honour, and they would at all times be most happy and glad to see him. There were many members of Grand Lodge unable to attend the meeting, but they were anxious for the success of this and everything in connection with our Institutions. He would venture to compliment H.R.H. on an event they all hoped would shortly take place, and wish him and his future wife long life and continued prosperity. The Duke of Connaught, in reply, assured the company that he appreciated most fully the kind sentiments which had been expressed by Lord Suffield. He considered it a great pleasure to be with them at so successful a meeting. This pleasure was greatly enhanced by seeing so many ladies present. Some ladies gave the Freemasons the credit of being very selfish, but he hoped meetings such as the present would go far to dispel such ideas. Lord Suffield had referred to the present as being his Masonic début, but this was hardly correct; however, he must admit that it was the first occasion he had had the pleasure of meeting so distinguished an assembly of the Masons of England. Lord Suffield had touched, in the kindest terms, on what is always a most delicate matter for any man. He was sure it would gratify Her Royal Highness very much when he told her the reception that had been accorded the first public mention of her name, and he was pleased that his brother Masons had been the first in England to so cordially honour her. Bro. Pickard, Grand Chaplain, gave the next toast,—that of the Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, the Prov. Grand Masters, and the rest of the G. Officers. It was not very often, he said, that a man was called upon to propose his own health, but he was in that position. It gave him great pleasure to speak of the Chiefs of the Order, he having been so intimately connected with both during his Mastership of the Apollo University Lodge. He was gratified in being able to couple with the toast the name of so able and distinguished a Mason as General Brownrigg, the Provincial Grand Master for Surrey. General Brownrigg stated that he considered old age had its privileges as well as other things. It was by reason of 'his old Masonic age that he was called upon to acknowledge the gratifying remarks of Bro. Pickard. He was delighted with the day's meeting, but especially so at the presence of so many ladies. He felt that the Grand Officers were so well known that it was not requisite for him to refer to them in any way. He would simply, on their behalf and on his own account, thank the company for the very hearty way in which they had received mention of their names. The next toast on the list was Prosperity to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. This was one which H.R.H. felt would commend itself to all. The Institution had now been in existence eighty years, it having been founded in 1798. At first, and up to 1854, they had possessed no building of their own, but had contented themselves with paying for the schooling of the sons of their deceased brethren. In 1855 a building was purchased, and in 1863 the first stone of their present school was laid, the building being opened in 1865. At first they had educated fifty boys, which number was afterwards increased to eighty, while now they clothed, educated and maintained 211. This great addition was most satisfactory, but the increasing demands required increased funds, and he felt he should not be doing his duty if he did not forcible bring this before the meeting. He and all Masons were proud of the Craft and of its leading Principals, the first and most important of which—Charity—he appealed to all present to assist him in carrying out; he felt sure they could not show their charitable wishes more than by educating the sons of poor brethren. Masons should be very satisfied at the progress made. With the toast he coupled the name of Bro. Pincknett, the Treasurer of the Institution. Bro. Pincknett, in reply, stated that H.R.H. had made so forcible an appeal, and had so ably pointed out the benefits of the Institution, that it was unnecessary for him to still further recount them. The success of the Institution depended entirely on the exertions of the Craft. The Committee were anxious that the scholars should have as good an education as they would have received had their parents been alive; he hoped that the appeal made by H.R.H. would produce good results. Bro. Binckes then rose to announce the amounts collected by the various Stewards; he felt they were greatly indebted to their noble chairman for presiding on the occasion; he could have wished that the subscriptions would have amounted to as large a sum as they did on the occasion of the presidency of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, but he was not in a position to announce such a result. They could but be delighted at the number of brethren and ladies who had attended to support the chairman. The Institution had had a past, which they could look upon with pride; and they also had a future, which they contemplated with hope. The amounts contributed were then announced as £10,100, with twenty lists to come in. (A detailed list, with corrections to time of our going to press will be found in another column.) The health of the Vice Patrons, Vice Presidents, Trustees, Committees, and Auditors of the Institution, was then given and acknowledged by Bro. Col. Creaton. He hoped that the number of the Vice Patrons and Presidents would before long be doubled. Bro. Sir Henry Edwards had great pleasure in giving the sister Institutions. Considering the great interest he took in Freemasonry, he felt no one was better fitted to propose it. He had always looked upon the Boys' School as the one to which support should be given, and trusted that all the Institutions might continue their prosperous career. Bro. Terry replied, thanking the company on behalf of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls and the Benevolent Institution; he congratulated Bro. Binckes on the success of his Festival, which raised the amount contributed during the year to over £30,000. They were looking forward to the ensuing Festivals of the Benevolent Institution and of the Girls' School, and he hoped that, on no future occasion, it would be necessary for the Executives to announce a less sum at their Festival than had been acknowledged that day. The Chairman next gave the health of the Stewards. When he looked round and considered the splendid Festival of the day, he could but think they were indebted to that body. He was gratified in being able to couple the name of Bro. Lord Suffield with the toast, as President of the Board. That brother having briefly acknowledged the toast, the health of the Ladies was proposed, and the company adjourned to other parts of the building, where a concert was given, and other arrangements were made for the comfort of the visitors. The whole of the day's proceedings reflected great credit on those in whose hands the arrangements were left, and we think that the Institution is indebted to Bros. Bertram and Roberts for providing such ample accommodation for so large a party. The musical arrangements were under the conduct of Bro. Wilhelm Ganz and Signors Rialp and Biaccia, who were supported by Mesdames Parodi, Collini, Thaddeus Wells, Miss Josephine Sherrington; Mr. W. Shakespeare, M. Thomas, Signor Franceschi, M. Thierry and Bro. Thurley Beale. Mr. George Magrath contributed an excellent solo on the pianoforte.

We append the List of Patrons and Stewards, with the several amounts collected or subscribed. Where no amount is inserted the list had not been received up to the time of our going to press.

THE FOUR OLD LODGES.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BRO.,—I cannot be otherwise than well pleased with the result of my letter on this subject, which appeared in your columns a fortnight since. I consider, likewise, that the greatest credit is due to Bro. Hughan for the prompt and handsome manner in which he has come forward and acknowledged that Bro. Gould's version is the correct one. We are all liable to error, but it is not always the most agreeable thing in the world to acknowledge it. Especially is this the case in literary matters, when, after long and laborious researches, a simple yet pardonable oversight, or some small but inexplicable error, is found to mar the beauty of the general result.

As to the manner in which these discrepancies have arisen, it is, as I anticipated, owing to the different order of sequence in the case of certain Lodges in different early lists of Pine. Thus, No. 9 of early Pine is No. 8 of Cole for 1763, No. 10 is No. 7, and No. 11 is No. 6; while, had they remained as originally chartered, No. 9 (Pine) would have been No. 6 (Cole), No. 10 remaining No. 7, and No. 11 being No. 8.

As to the claims of Fortitude and Old Cumberland to the exercise of time immemorial privileges, the question whether it was in its power to resign them is one that may be argued; but there is likewise to be considered the further question of expediency, as to whether it would be desirable to disturb arrangements which have been acquiesced in by those most immediately concerned for upwards of 150 years, and the more so that any present alteration would conflict with the solemn arrangements made at the time of the Union of Moderns and Ancients.

Fraternally yours,

YOUR REVIEWER OF HUGHAN'S REPRINT OF PINE'S LIST FOR 1734.

MARK MASONRY.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In reading the report of the Provincial Grand Mark Lodge of Middlesex and Surrey in your last issue, I see that Bro. Brighten Prov. G. Sec. stated that every Lodge in the Province had paid its dues except the Temple Mark Lodge, No. 173. Allow me to inform Bro. Brighten, as well as Mark Masons generally who may read the said report, that the Temple Lodge received its warrant from the Grand Mark Lodge of England, without any reference to or knowledge of a Provincial Grand Mark Lodge, and that two years after, when called upon to make its return to the Province, the Lodge unanimously decided not to recognise the Provincial Grand Mark Lodge, the said resolution being communicated to a meeting of the Board of General Purposes at Red Lion-square; we therefore do not owe any allegiance to the Province of Middlesex and Surrey.

Yours fraternally,

T. S. MORTLOCK, P.G.S.B.

P.M. Thistle No. 8., P.M. and Treas. Temple Mark Lodge No. 173.

LODGE VICTORIA IN BURMAH.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—It is probably most unpleasant for Lodge Victoria in Burmah to be made the subject of periodical articles and letters respecting its internal economy, and, for my part, I think that something is due to your readers to whom it must be the reverse of edifying to have so disgraceful an exposé thrust upon them. I know nothing whatever of the Lodge or of any of its members, and therefore have no feeling in the matter; but it strikes me that if the Lodge is wise, it will at once obey the edict of the Grand Master. The W.M. has sworn "strictly to conform to every edict of Grand Lodge," and, however unpleasant it may be to say so, his contumacy in ignoring the edict transmitted to him by the Grand Secretary is a distinct and a most deliberate violation of his oath, and worthy, under the circumstances, of condign punishment. It is of the very essence of every society that it should be subject to a certain amount of discipline, or anything like government becomes impossible. Let, then, the W.M., whoever he may be, forthwith admit the brethren who are now unjustly excluded from their Masonic rights and privileges, and then if he or any other member of the Lodge has any charges to bring against them, let him do so in a Masonic manner. As matters stand, the W.M. is defying Grand Lodge, and I should not be surprised to hear the latter has resolved, or will at once resolve, upon making further defiance of its edicts impossible.

I do not know who "A Looker On" may be, but I think his letter, published last week, is by no means calculated to throw oil on the troubled waters. If he is one of the aggrieved party, or a supporter of theirs, such terms as "shallowness" and contempt," "and such descriptions as "weak-minded brethren in Masonic high places," must have the effect of depriving them of any sympathy they may be entitled to.

Fraternally yours,

AN OUTSIDER.

CONFLICTING ACCOUNTS ABOUT THOMAS DUNCKERLEY.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Having, in my former letter, shown that the Masonic version of the late Bro. Dunckerley's parentage has in it all the appearance of being truthful, and that it is certainly preferable to the version published in the Gentleman's Magazine, I will betake myself to analysing Bro. Norton's remarks respecting Bro. Dunckerley's address, which is said to have been delivered by him in April 1757. Here, again, I see nothing improbable in the assignement of this address to this particular date, and I think many of the facts stated in my letter of last week will bear me out in this opinion. In the first place, the gunner on board a man of war—"a mere gunner," as Bro. Norton sneeringly describes it—is a warrant officer, who has attained his rank by reason of his knowledge of the art of gunnery, and a knowledge of the art of gunnery is only to be obtained by a man of ability, and after a longthened experience. In the next place, we have a right to infer that Dunckerley was a man of unusual ability, or he would not have been appointed "teacher of the Mathematics" on board the Vanguard, and this was done, as he himself tells us, "At the Siege of Louisbourg," which took place in 1758, by Admiral Boscawen, who commanded-in-chief the naval forces which took part in the reduction of that place. He had, therefore, attracted the notice of his chief, who recognised his superior abilities in the manner I have stated. And though the lecture or address referred to may not have been a remarkable mental effort, still this will make no difference whether it was written in 1757 or 1767. Again, Dunckerley, although "a mere gunner," had a circle of acquaintances such as few humble warrant officers can boast. Dukes, Viscounts, Earls, Generals, Admirals, and the like, are not generally such weakminded creatures as to receive into their friendship, and correspond with, a man who possesses no other recommendation than that of turning out to be the bastard son of a king. Moreover, he was relieved to the extent of £20 by "some gentlemen of the Lodge at Gibraltar," and it is probable that this relief was administered by them to a brother in distress, or how should they be so ready to remit money to one who was laid up at Minorca, if he had not some claim upon their regard and goodfellowship? Then, in the same year, Lord William G. asked Dunckerley's permission to present him with £200, so that the esteem in which he was held at all events preceded by two years the date assigned for his recognition by George III. as a natural son of the late King his grandfather. Here again, is another reason why Dunckerley should have been able to obtain a knowledge of our Ritual long before 1767. A few days ago, on turning over the pages of the Masonic Magazine, I came across Cole's List of Lodges for 1763, and No. 254 in that list is described as being held "on board His Majesty's Ship the Vanguard," the date of its constitution being January 16, 1766. Why may not Dunckerley have been a member of this Lodge? and why may he not have been a member of the Craft for years and years before this? Hence I say, there is no improbability against the lecture having been delivered at Plymouth in 1757.

I am sensible that this is a case which, so far as I have gone, rests only on circumstantial evidence. Whether it be possible to obtain anything in the way of direct evidence I cannot say at present. At all events, I am justified in asking your readers to regard it as being at least as trustworthy as Bro. Norton's conjecture, that because Bro. Dunckerley did not emerge from his obscurity till 1767, therefore the date ordinarily assigned to his lecture, namely, the year 1757, is inaccurate.

Fraternally yours,

D. G. LODGE OF NORTHERN CHINA.

THE third Communication of the D. G. Lodge of Northern China was held at the Masonic Hall, Shanghai, on Tuesday afternoon, 23rd April, W. Bro. Thorne D.G.M. in the chair. The general business of the meeting being ended, the D.G.M. remarked that he thought it a fitting opportunity to inform the brethren of the loss the District Grand Lodge would shortly sustain in the departure of Brothers Gundry D.G.M. and Turnbull D.G.S.W. for England. He dilated on the benefits Masonry in Shanghai had derived from the labours of those brethren, and in conclusion wished them a speedy and safe passage and happy re-union with their friends at home—a wish that was endorsed by general applause. Bros. Gundry and Turnbull thanked the D.G.M. and the brethren for this expression of kindly feeling, and the Lodge was formally closed.

The brethren subsequently re-assembled at a complimentary banquet given to the above-named brethren at the Shanghai Club.

The chair was taken by the R.W.D.G.M. Bro. Thorne, and the following were among those present:—W. Bros. Gundry D.D.G.M., Turnbull D.G.S.W., Hart D.G.J.W., Kingsmill P.D.G.B.G.P., Orme D.G. Sec., R. Fergusson D.G.S.D., H. Evans D.G.J.D., Morris D.G.D.C., Marshall D.G.S. of W., Brown D.G. Pursuivant, Hughes (Tuscan) D.G. Steward, Pearson (Sussex) P.P.D.G. Board of General Purposes, Birt P.M. Lodge Cosmopolitan S.C., E. Henderson P.M. Lodge St. Andrews in the Far East S.C., Taylor P.M. Lodge Cosmopolitan S.C., &c., &c. The dinner consisted of the usual good things, supplemented by wines of the choicest brands, to which full justice was done. At ten o'clock the chairman rose to propose the formal toasts, which received due honour, and then followed that of the evening,—Our Guests, Bros. Gundry and Turnbull.

R.W. Bro. Thorne said—You are aware our Worshipful Brothers Gundry D.D.G.M., and Turnbull D.G.S.W., are about to leave for England, and you expressed your desire to receive them amongst you this evening to bid them a Masonic farewell. Probably they may not return to Shanghai, and we feel that in parting with them we shall sustain a severe loss both Masonically and socially. Our W. Bro. Gundry was initiated into Masonry in the Lodge Excelsior, Calcutta, in 1860; he came to Shanghai in 1864, and joined the Tuscan Lodge; he has filled the chair in that Lodge with great satisfaction to the brethren. He has not however confined himself to working his own Lodge only, but has rendered suit and service to most, if not all, of the Lodges in Shanghai, and at some inconvenience to himself has frequently visited Ningpo in order to assist the working of the Lodge Star of Peace which was formerly established at that port. The high position of D.G.J.W. and D.G.S.W. of the D.G. Lodge of China were conferred upon him, and the latter honour he retained for some years. When it was proposed to bring about a division in the province, the brethren in the North of China unanimously selected our W. Bro. Gundry as their representative, and recommended him to the especial notice of the M.W. Grand Master, praying that he might be appointed to preside over them as their first D.G.M. It was rumoured at home that Bro. Gundry was expected shortly to leave China, and to this may be attributed the fact that our brother was not appointed to the position I now occupy. He was most naturally much disappointed on finding the position was not to be his; but nevertheless, in the true Masonic spirit which has at all times characterised him, he accepted the lower place of Deputy District Grand Master, and has set an example to his brethren by the fervent manner in which he has endeavoured to promulgate the principles of the Craft. Our Worshipful Bro. Turnbull was initiated in the Northern Lodge of China in 1866, and has worked through the various offices therein with very great credit to himself and much to the satisfaction of the brethren; he has always proved himself courteous to his brethren, and anxious in every way to instruct and assist them. He has had the honour of serving for two years as D.G.S.W. in the D.G. Lodge of China, and on the establishment of the District Grand Lodge of Northern China he was appointed D.G.S.W. therein. In every Masonic position he has, both by precept and example, endeavoured to promulgate the beautiful principles and tenets of our Order, he has at all times jealously guarded our Ancient Landmarks, and has never spared himself trouble in upholding the interests of the Craft. In fact, both our Worshipful brethren possess many estimable qualifications which are so well known to you that it would be superfluous for me to detain you by dwelling upon them now. In their social positions they have endeared themselves to many friends who feel much regret in parting with them, and who look forward to the pleasure of meeting them again in their native land. I am sure you will all most heartily and cordially unite with me in drinking to the health, happiness and prosperity of our W. Bros. Gundry and Turnbull, and sincerely pray that T.G.A.O.T.U. will prosper them in their future career.

The toast was given with musical honours and loud cheering.

W. Bro. Gurney on rising said, I hardly know how to thank you sufficiently, Right Worshipful Sir, for the very kind terms in which you have spoken of me, and you, Brethren, for the kind—I may say overwhelmingly kind—manner in which you have received this toast. It is true, as the District G. Master has said, that I was initiated into Freemasonry eighteen years ago. I have therefore been nearly half my life a member of the Craft, and I can truly say that not only during that long period have I ever regretted joining it, but that the association has always been to me a source of pride and gratification. By far the greater part of that time has been spent in Shanghai; and by the length of my stay here you may measure my regret at leaving. I have, to quote the words of that grand installation charge to which we have often listened, "realised here to the full, the friendships which are formed within the sacred walls of a Masonic Lodge;" and in proportion to the duration and extent of those friendships will be my regret at severing them. We all know that young trees are easily transplanted, and suffer no apparent harm from the process; but it is different with old ones. Their roots have struck out deep and far, and they cannot be moved without much hacking and tearing. I am very much in the position of an old tree; I have been here so long that I have taken root very deeply, and it will not be without a severe wrench that I shall tear myself away from the familiar associations. There is, however, a means by which even old trees can be moved, it not without injury, at least with a fair prospect of revival; and that is by carrying with them around their roots a large quantity of their native earth. Now I hope that in the old China hands I shall meet in London, at the Thatched House and elsewhere, I shall find this congenial soil, and that it may enable me to endure the process of transplantation. (Applause and laughter). The Right Worshipful District Grand Master was good enough to refer to my election by you to the high post which he now occupies. It would be affectation to deny that I felt greatly disappointed at failing to attain that office. It is the highest within the reach of a Mason of less than the most exalted rank, and it was trying to lose it as I did. I cannot but feel, however, that what has been my loss has been your gain; for you have obtained a Grand Master better skilled than myself in the details of the work. Nor is my disappointment without mitigation. Though I have missed the office, there remains to me the knowledge that you unanimously elected me to fill it; and the proof of your confidence and esteem which that election conveyed,—and of which I cannot be deprived,—is very large consolation for the loss of the rank itself. But I fear, Brethren, that I am detaining you too long, and that I am keeping the floor from my friend Bro. Turnbull, who must be anxious to acknowledge his share of the compliment which you have paid us. I will only thank you once again for this token of your regard, and for the warmth with which you have received the toast. (Applause).

W. Bro. Turnbull said, that for the second time to-day he was fortunate in being able to take refuge under the protecting ægis of W. Bro. Gundry's seniority. He assured the brethren that his feelings of regret at taking leave of them were quite as profound as those so well expressed by his eloquent friend. He deeply felt the honour that they had done him by inviting him to their hospitable board, and by their kind and cordial reception of the unmerited commendation bestowed upon him by the R.W. the D.G.M.; and thanked them for their goodwill, the recollection of which would always be grateful to him. He prayed for the continual welfare of Freemasonry, especially in Shanghai, where it was so well represented, and that T.G.A.O.T.U. would prosper them all and give them their heart's desires.

The toast of the "Sister Lodges" was then proposed by W. Bro. Hart, D.G.J.W., and acknowledged by W. Bro. Birt, on behalf of the Scottish branch of the Craft (he being the Senior Past Master in Shanghai). After thanking the brethren for the kind and cordial reception given to the toast, Bro. Birt expressed his sincere sympathy with the District Grand Lodge in the loss of their Deputy District Grand Master and District Grand Senior Warden, upon their departure for their native land. He trusted that the loss the D.G. Lodge had to submit to would be great gain to both of our esteemed guests, in renewed health and happiness enjoyed among their respective families at home. The Deputy District Grand Master had, during his residence in Shanghai, rendered many great and distinguished services to the Scottish Craft. At all times he came willingly and readily forward to instal their R.W.M.'s; this compliment he had once, or more than once, conferred upon him (Bro. Birt), and he gladly took the opportunity of thanking him for these and other eminent services rendered to Scottish Freemasonry in China. In their native land our two guests would find a more extended field in which to display their earnest labours on behalf of the Craft, and he was sure that by their skilled work and great efficiency in ruling over the Order they would show our brethren at home that Freemasonry had not declined in the Far East. The District Grand Senior Warden, during his rule over the Northern Lodge of China, had set a high and artistic example to the brethren in Shanghai who may now, or who may hope hereafter, to rule over the Craft. We wish them both God speed, with the hope that they may safely arrive in their native land, and there find that peace to which their long residence in China entitles them, and that they may live a long life to enjoy that love which is the peculiar beatitude of all good and worthy members of this holy, free, and mystic Craft.

W. Bro. Kingsmill, in rising to propose the toast of "The Lodges working under the Constitution of the District Grand Lodge of Northern China," said that as the form and ornaments of the Temple of King Solomon were intended to remind the ancient brethren of the universality of the Craft, so the Mason in Shanghai could not fail to be struck with its universal prevalence. We had here Lodges working under four Constitutions, and yet amid this seeming difference harmony was found to result. The toast he had to propose was one of peculiar significance, and especially appropriate to the day on which they met, the feast of St. George of Cappadocia, the Patron Saint of England. The District Grand Lodge had adopted it for its Spring Communication, and meeting together as they did to bid farewell to their two departing guests, the memory of the day he hoped would long remain. He trusted that the example which Bros. Goundry and Turnbull had set would conduce to the prosperity of the Lodges working under the English Constitution, and he thought that the meeting this evening was in some part a forecast of renewed life and energy on the part of the Craft. With the toast he begged to couple the name of W. Bro. Evans, and he did so with the greater pleasure that that brother was at the time the junior Master present, as well as one of the oldest Past Masters in Shanghai. All the brethren knew the interest taken by Bro. Evans in the working of the Craft, and he felt sure that they would drink the toast heartily.

W. Bro. Evans replied.—Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master, Wardens, and Brethren,—Until within the last few minutes I had no idea I should be called on to respond to a toast; but having been so called on I will do the best I can to reply, although I think a mistake has been made in selecting me for this duty, seeing, as I do, several younger brethren, more talented and fitter calculated in every respect for this duty; moreover, it is a very difficult task, which is at this part of the evening laid on me, seeing almost everything which could be said in reference to our worthy brethren who are about to leave us has already been spoken; consequently to a great extent the wind has been taken out of my sails. A good deal has been said this evening, Worshipful Sir, in reference to the antiquity of Masonry and the number of years which it has existed in China; but there is a singular fact in relation to it and myself, and it is that this evening the oldest man and the youngest made Master of a Lodge is the humble individual who now addresses you. "Extremes meet," and although Master of the Royal Sussex in 1870, 1877, and 1878, I have been chosen this evening to address you because I am the youngest Master, though the oldest man at the table. Brethren, I feel highly honoured at being chosen to reply to this toast, and am sorry I am not able to do that justice to it which its importance merits and I could wish. However, on behalf of myself and the Lodge I represent, and the other Lodges working under the English Constitution, I cordially thank you for the manner in which you have drank to the toast; and now in bidding a farewell to our honoured guests who are about to leave us, I can only reiterate what has already been said, that though our loss, let us hope the gain will be theirs. I wish you, my worthy brethren, a happy and prosperous passage home, and health to enjoy the wealth you both so richly deserve, and that T.G.A.O.T.U. may have you in his keeping; and in conclusion I once more thank you all for the cordial manner in which you have drank our healths; and now I think my task is ended, and I will therefore sit down.

After the toast of the Ladies had been given, the health of the D.G.M. was proposed by Bro. Turnbull, and suitably responded to by Bro. Thorne, and after one or two excellent songs, the proceedings were formally closed.—North China Herald.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

ON Thursday and Friday, in the House of Lords, short sittings were the order of the day, and the business will not interest our readers. Indeed, during the whole week the sittings have been remarkably quiet, and the only matter which has attracted notice has been the Anglo-Turkish treaty, respecting which Earl Granville questioned the Government both on Monday and Tuesday, the Duke of Richmond and Gordon's answer being warmly greeted by the House.

In the Commons there was plenty of business got through. The Epping Forest Bill received a third reading by a large majority, and a motion of Sir John Lubbock's on the Education Code being defeated after a full discussion by 68 to 37, the House rose at a few minutes before two o'clock. At Friday afternoon's sitting the House resumed the Committee on the Highways Bill, and made considerable progress. When the House met again at nine o'clock, Mr. Jenkins moved an address to Her Majesty praying for a Royal Commission of Inquiry as to the teaching and practice of the Anglican Church, his object being to put a stop to Ritualistic practices. In the end the honourable gentleman obtained the sanction of the House for the withdrawal of the resolution. As a matter of course, Monday evening was not permitted to pass without the Government being questioned by the Marquis of Hartington respecting the Anglo-Turkish Treaty, and the answer given by Mr. Cross in the absence of the Chancellor of the Exchequer elicited frequent and hearty cheers from both sides of the House. A long discussion followed on the question that the House resolve itself into Committee on the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Bill, and ultimately it did so, progress being immediately reported. The Bishoprics Bill having been read a second time and the other orders disposed of, the House adjourned. On Tuesday, further progress was made in Committee with the Highways Bill, after which a resolution submitted by Mr. Errington on the Irish Land Act 1870, was discussed at some length, and then rejected by 134 to 67, or a majority of two to one. Wednesday afternoon was almost entirely taken up with the discussion of a motion for the second reading of the Real Estate Intestacy Bill. Messrs. Potter, Leatham, Baxter, Leeman and others were in its favour, Messrs. Gregory, Beresford Hope, Wheelhouse, the Solicitor-General, &c. &c., spoke against it, and the result was the rejection of the measure by 193 votes to 157 votes. The House was shortly afterwards adjourned.

The Court is now at Windsor, where Her Majesty receives a constant succession of visitors. On Thursday last, Prince Leopold arrived at the Castle, and among those who dined with Her Majesty were Prince Frederick Charles and Princess Louise Margaret of Germany, the Duke of Connaught, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer. On Friday last, the Grand Duke and Her Royal Highness the Grand Duchess of Hesse (Princess Alice of Great Britain) arrived at Buckingham Palace from Flushing, having been received at Queensborough by Colonel Du Plat. They were visited at the Palace by the Prince and Princess of Wales, and then left for Eastbourne with their children. On Saturday, the Queen paid a short visit to London, and saw the Duchess of Cambridge at St. James's Palace. The Lord Chancellor arrived at the Castle in the course of the afternoon, and had the honour of dining with Her Majesty, who returned from London shortly before 8 p.m.

Last week, we noted the great activity which prevails in Masonic circles just now, making our ordinarily dull season one of unwonted brilliancy. We noted that during that time two Provincial gatherings were held in Kent and Berks and Bucks respectively. On Monday, was celebrated the Eightieth Anniversary Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. The Duke of Connaught presided at a well-served banquet, followed by a garden party. Everything passed off excellently well, the one drawback, as we note more fully elsewhere, being the smallness of the receipts. On Wednesday, the Albert Edward Life-boat, being one of the two voted by our Grand Lodge to commemorate the Grand Master's visit to, and safe return from, India, was launched with much ceremony at Clacton-on-Sea, the place where it will be stationed. Lord Skelmersdale, the Deputy Grand Master, played the chief part in the interesting ceremony, and the day was made one of great rejoicing, not only in the new seaside resort itself, but in the immediate neighbourhood, while the Mayor and members of the several Corporations of Maldon, Harwich, Ipswich, and Colchester mustered in considerable numbers. The Craft was largely represented, and the day was one of general rejoicing. A full report will be found elsewhere. On Wednesday, sundry summer banquets were held, and Thursday and Friday were each fixed for the consecration of a new Chapter. Next week, too, though it may not be so generally important, promises to be a very active one. The Provincial Grand Lodge of Surrey will meet at Croydon on Tuesday, and the Mark Grand Lodge will hold its annual Festival in aid of the funds of the Mark Benevolent Fund on Wednesday, when the chair will be taken by Lord Skelmersdale, the M.W. Grand Mark Master Mason. Nor must we forget to add that the election of Secretary to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls was held on Thursday. The result is given elsewhere.

On Monday, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, when passing from one of the rooms of his official residence into the garden, struck his head with considerable violence against the upper portion of the window, which had not been sufficiently raised. For a time the right honourable gentleman was stunned by the force of the blow, and was unable to be present at a dinner which had been fixed for that evening at his house. The Queen and Prince of Wales, on hearing of the accident, telegraphed for tidings, and likewise for the purpose of expressing their sympathy. No serious consequences have ensued.

During this week and next, Wimbledon will be in full holiday garb, as this is the annual gathering of our Volunteers for the purpose of competing for the many and valuable prizes offered for Rifle competition. The first stage for the Queen's Prize will be finished this week, when the fortunate sixty who will compete for the Prize and the Association Gold Medal will be known. A few of the contests have been already settled, but the interest in the proceedings will be reserved for next week, when the Lords and Commons, the International, and other interesting competitions will be decided.

The political news of the week has been the publication and confirmation in both Houses of Parliament of the Anglo-Turkish defensive Treaty. The purport of this instrument is easily explained. In the event of Russia claiming to retain her conquests in Armenia, and in such event only, the high contracting Powers have resolved to conclude a defensive alliance with a view to maintaining the integrity of Asiatic Turkey, and in order to enable England to render material assistance in securing this object, the island of Cyprus will be placed under her administration, so that she may occupy it militarily, and take such steps for improving the condition of its people as may be thought desirable. If the revenue shall exceed the expenditure, the surplus will be paid into the Turkish exchequer, and it is expected that the cost of administration will be defrayed out of the revenues, and will leave a considerable margin. Sir Garnet Wolsey has already been appointed to the important post of Administrator of the island, and such an appointment augurs well for the future. Soon also, no doubt, we shall hear of the commencement of a railway system, by which the amazing mineral and cereal resources of these Asiatic regions will be developed. All who have read anything of the ancient history of the country must be able to form some idea of its great natural wealth. In what is known as Turkey in Asia, there once flourished some of the richest kingdoms of ancient times, and it is only in consequence partly of Turkish apathy, and partly of the disturbances promoted by Russian agents, that a fresh development has not been given to the products and manufactures of the country. All this will be changed now. Russia will no longer have it in her power to cause disturbances. The railway and the telegraph and our commercial navy will speedily change the aspect of the country, what has been barren and unproductive will very soon be converted into a rich and smiling territory. We wonder what the Russian Bear must think of this veritable coup d'état of our Government. However, let him like it or not like it, he must make the best he can of it henceforth.

The Congress, it is generally anticipated, will have completed its labours this week. With the general character of the arrangements our readers are already acquainted. Servia, Roumania,—shorn of Bessarabia, but with the addition of the Dobrudscha, and Montenegro become independent. Bulgaria is erected into a principality, but will remain nominally under the authority of the Sultan. Austria will "occupy" Bosnia and Herzegovina, and the frontier line between Turkey and Greece will be rectified favourably to the latter power. The Straits Question remains as before, and Russia retains her Armenian conquests, except Bayazid. However, what we have said in the preceding paragragh as to the Anglo-Turkish Treaty must likewise be taken into account in estimating the general result, at least as far as our interests are concerned.

Owing to the length to which our Analysis of the Subscription List has extended, we have been compelled to hold over the latter half till next week.

Bro. Turquand, the Preceptor of the Merchant Navy Lodge of Instruction, will, on Wednesday, the 31st July, give a lecture on the Landmarks of Freemasonry. We are sure the many friends of our esteemed brother will welcome this announcement, and that there will be a good assemblage of members of the Craft at the Silver Tavern, Burdett-road, Limehouse, on this occasion.

On Wednesday next, the 17th inst., the Surrey Masonic Club has arranged with Mr. F. H. Macklin of the Duke's and other London Theatres, to give a dramatic and musical Costume recital. The entertainment will include songs, recitations, selections in character from the Happy Pair, Still Waters Run Deep, and the Hunchback, and among the artists who will appear will be found Mr. F. H. Macklin, and Miss Agnes Leonard (by permission of Mr. James Mortimer of the Duke's), Messrs. L. Earle, R. Markby, and C. H. Jesse, Miss Plowden, and Madame G. A. Cooper. Stage Director, Mr. Vyner Robinson. To commence at 8 p.m. Carriages at 10.15. Tickets at 3s, 2s and 1s each may be had of members of the Club, or of its Hon. Secretary Bro. Jas. Stevens, prior to entertainment.

WEST LANCASHIRE MARK LODGE, No. 65.

THE regular meeting was held at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, Liverpool, on Wednesday, the 3rd inst. Present—Bros. John Hayes W.M., R. H. Evans as S.W., H. P. Jennings as J.W., W. H. Cooper Sec., J. R. Gwepel P.M. P.G.S.O. Eng. Treasurer, A. C. Wylie M.O., R. Reader S.O., W. Thomson J.O., J. Fletcher I.G., W. H. Ball Tyler; Past Masters Bros. H. Jackson P.P.G.S.O., J. K. Smith P.G.S.B. Eng. and P.G.S.O. West Lancashire. After the usual introductory business, the ballot was taken for Bros. Poyser, Blott and Russell, and Bros. Poyser and Blott being in attendance, were advanced to the honourable degree of M.M.M., the W. Master, Bro. Hayes, performing the ceremony in a faultless manner, which might well be imitated. The labours of the evening being ended, the Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. Brother Hayes was compelled to vacate the chair at a very early hour, but he trusted the brethren would enjoy themselves. It was our intention to note several pleasing passages which occurred during the evening, and to give an account of the interest taken by Bros. Smith, Wylie, Vines, and Houlding in the Charities connected with the Stanley Hospital. We cannot, however, do so. We have been so overcrowded with important items for the past three weeks, we are compelled to curtail our reports.

SUMMER FESTIVAL OF THE PAXTON LODGE, No. 1686.

THIS agreeable event took place on Wednesday last, at the Grand Saloon, Crystal Palace. The arrangements were admirably carried out by the following Stewards:—Bros. J. M. Klenck W.M., F. W. Goddard S.W., C. H. Benham J.W., and H. E. Frances P.P.G.S.D. Sec. and Treas. Just twelve months since it was our pleasurable duty to chronicle the consecration of this Lodge, which ceremony was performed by our esteemed Bro. H. E. Frances, who was assisted by Bro. the Rev. R. J. Simpson P.G. Chaplain. The proceedings on that day were carried out in an eminently satisfactory way, and the several speakers were unanimous in expressing their conviction that a happy future was before the Paxton Lodge. These anticipations have been amply realised, and the first anniversary was celebrated under equally auspicious circumstances. The company assembled at half-past four, when we recognised the following members of the Craft:—Bros. J. M. Klenck, F. W. Goddard, G. R. Dodds, H. E. Frances, Coward P.G. Organist, F. J Sawyer, N. J. Basnett, W. S. S. Walker, A. W. S. Turner, W. G. Brighten, Frank Goddard, Dr. Cutmore, H. Massey, W. W. Morgan; amongst the ladies were Mesdames Klenck, Goddard, Turner, Dodd, Basnett, Walker, Sawyer, Massey, Morgan, Miss Macrae, &c. An excellent dinner was served, the table being florally decorated with admirable taste. After ample justice had been done to the viands, the Chairman, Bro. Klenck, rose and proposed the first customary toast,—the Queen and the Craft—and, in doing so, congratulated the guests on their pleasant gathering. He hoped that all would thoroughly enjoy themselves, especially as he was fully sensible that the Stewards had done their best to make the occasion a success. He hoped that the ladies present would be induced, by what they had seen of Craftsmen, to carry away with them a favourable idea of Freemasonry. In connection with the toast of the Grand Master, the W.M. referred to His Royal Highness's interest in all things relating to the Craft, and likewise to the fact of the Duke of Connaught's presidency at the Boys' Festival, on Monday, being a further testimony to the Royal interest taken in the Royal Art. The toast of the Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, &c., &c., followed, and as a matter of course, reference was made to the circumstance of Lord Skelmersdale having that very day taken the chief part in launching the Albert Edward Lifeboat at Clacton-on-Sea. To that toast Bro. James Coward P.G. Organist suitably replied. Bro. Klenck most cordially acknowledged the toast of his health, which was proposed by Bro. Frances P.M. Treas. and Sec., and expressed the satisfaction he felt at having been able to promote the pleasure of the guests. He also referred to the Masonic Charities, which he said were worthy of the support of all Masons. Bros. Levander and Brighten responded for the Visitors, and the latter alluded, in the course of his speech, to the important services the Albert Edward Lifeboat, though formally launched only that day, had already rendered. Some time since, when he was out for a cruise, for the purpose of testing the qualities of a schooner yacht, some dirty weather sprang up, and noticing a brig in distress, he proposed launching a boat and going to her assistance. At this moment he was gratified, on looking shorewards, to find that the Lifeboat was being launched, and thus the Albert Edward had an opportunity of proving her worth by rescuing the crew, nine in number, of a brig who, but for the unexpected aid thus rendered, would have been very seriously imperilled. The other toasts included "The Stewards," "The Ladies," and "The Press," after which the company separated. The musical arrangements—in which Mrs. Klenck, Miss Macrae, and Bros. Goddard, Brighten, and Coward took part—gave unmitigated pleasure. Bro. Coward's impromptus and accompaniments on the pianoforte were of the most brilliant description, while Bro. Goddard was very effective in a burlesque recitation with which he favoured the company. Letters of apology for their inability to be present were read from Bros. Col. Burdett. Alderman Hadley, J. E. Saunders, F. W. Masters 1339, R. Vincent 72, J. Smith P.G. Purs., Dr. Kempster, J. Macrae, J. Taylor P.M. 933, Gibson, and Dodson P.M. 72.

LAUNCH OF THE FREEMASONS' LIFEBOAT AT CLACTON-ON-SEA.

ON Wednesday last the Prov. Grand Lodge of Essex held an especial Grand Lodge at Clacton-on-Sea, under the presidency of the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale Dep. G.M. of England, for the purpose of formally inaugurating the station and launching one of the lifeboats presented by the Freemasons of England in commemoration of the safe return of the Grand Master from India. Prov. Grand Lodge was formally opened and then adjourned, when the brethren, headed by the mayors and corporations of Maldon, Harwich, Ipswich, and Colchester, &c., marched in procession to the boat-house, where memorial stones were laid. The procession then reformed and proceeded with the boat and crew to the beach, where Lord Skelmersdale formally presented the boat to the Institution and consecrated it with Masonic honours. The gift of the boat having been suitably acknowledged by the representative of the Lifeboat Association and the chairman of the local committee, it was, after an oration and prayer by Prov. Grand Chaplain, christened and launched. Provincial Grand Lodge having been re-opened, the Secretary announced the receipt of regrets for absence from the Prov. G.M., Lord Waveney, Sir Albert Woods, Bros. Arnold, Martyn, Hervey, Binckes, &c. A proposition, thanking Lord Skelmersdale for having presided on the occasion, was duly made and unanimously carried, and was suitably acknowledged by him. Among his many duties, this was the first occasion on which he had assisted at the launch of a boat with Masonic honours. He regretted he was only the representative of the Grand Master, who he felt sure would have been most happy to have attended had his duties permitted it. Prov. G. Lodge having been closed, the brethren separated. A luncheon was afterwards served, at which Lord Skelmersdale presided. We are not aware whether the arrangements of the day were conducted by the Life-boat Association or not; for the credit of the Institution, we hope otherwise. But whoever may have had the appointment of the Committee can scarcely be congratulated on their selection, either for the ability or courtesy displayed by that body, especially with reference to the Masonic visitors. For ourselves, we attended but to report the proceedings; still, we cannot understand why Prov. Grand Officers, who travelled many miles in order to officiate on the occasion, should be made use of, and afterwards, so to speak, ignored. Such was the treatment accorded those who represented the donors. We hope that the boat will prove of more value than the executive seem to attach to it, and that in cases of danger on the coast it is destined to protect, but few of our shipwrecked fellow creatures will not have an opportunity of returning thanks for the foresight of our brethren.

COMMITTEE MEETING OF THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

THE monthly meeting of the General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys was held, on Saturday last, at Freemasons' Hall. The brethren present were Bros. Chancellor (Chairman), Browse, Dewar, J. H. Cox, Raynham Stewart, Winter, Rawson, Row, Joyce Murray, Dr. Morris, Matier, Pillin, R. B. Webster, Benjamin Head, Massey, Adlard, Gallant, Blyth, Perryman, Rushworth, and Binckes (Secretary). There were seventeen petitions for consideration, and of these only one was rejected. The list of candidates for the October election was settled at sixty-eight, and this list was recommended to the next Quarterly Court. Eleven vacancies were declared. Three outfits were granted to ex-pupils, who are now in situations, and notice of motion was given by Bro. Jesse Turner for the next Court for an alteration in Rule 70 of the Institution. This concluded the business of the meeting.

COMMITTEE MEETING OF THE BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

THE Committee of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution met on Wednesday at Freemasons' Hall, under the presidency of Col. Creaton. The brethren who attended were Bros. S. Rawson, J. M. Case, Erasmus Wilson, J. G. Stevens, W. Stephens, W. Hale, C. F. Hogard, J. Farnfield, W. Hyde Pullen, Thos. Cubitt, F. Adlard, Joseph Smith, C. J. Perceval, James Willing jun., L. Stean, E. J. Barron, James Brett, Rev. Dr. Ace, Joshua Nunn, and James Terry Secretary, who reported the death of two annuitants. The committee, on the recommendation of Bro. J. E. Saunders, agreed to accept twenty guineas in lieu of the use of a small slip of the field in front of the Asylum, the Brighton Railway taking the slip. The Committee also resolved to build a Gardener's Lodge at the entrance to the Asylum, and appointed Col. Creaton, Joseph Smith and Thos. Cubitt a Committee for carrying out the work. It was resolved also, on the advice of Bro. Barron, to take counsel's opinion as to proving against the estate of Bro. Samuel Tomkins. On the motion of Bro. W. Stephens, seconded by Bro. W. Hale, Bro. Cutbush was elected an honorary Life Governor of the Institution, accompanied by a vote of thanks to him for his numerous presents of plants for the garden of the Asylum. Afterwards, at a special meeting, on the motion of Bro. Rawson, seconded by Bro. Joseph Smith, the subscriptions to the Institution, as far as affects Life Governors, were altered from pounds to guineas.

FREEMASONRY IN LINCOLNSHIRE.

ON Wednesday a deputation consisting of E. Locock Esq. J.P. Grand Master, and F. D. Marsden Esq. Provincial Grand Secretary, waited upon W. H. Smyth Esq. J.P. (of Elkington Hall, Louth) who was recently appointed by the Prince of Wales to the office of Grand Master of Lincolnshire, to present him with an address of congratulation on his appointment to that honourable position. The address, which is written on parchment, and signed by the Grand Master on behalf of the Lodge, has been beautifully illuminated by Mr. W. L. Davis, of Louth, the border being a remarkably pretty one, in the conventional style of the 16th century. The address is as follows:—"At a Lodge of Emergency, held in the Masonic Hall, Louth, this 5th day of July 1878, resolved unanimously that the sincere and hearty congratulations of this Lodge be presented to our esteemed and highly respected brother, William Henry Smyth, of Elkington Hall, on his appointment by the M.W.G.M. of England H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, to the high office of Provincial Grand Master of Lincolnshire, an honour well merited and justly earned, by fourteen years of devoted and unceasing attention to the Masonic interests of the Province, while acting as the Deputy of his Grace the Duke of St. Albans. The Lodge feels deeply gratified at the appointment of one of its most honoured and valued members to this distinguished office, and earnestly trusts that it may please the G.A.O.T.U. to grant that the Province may long enjoy the beneficial influence of his wise and temperate rule."

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

Mariners Lodge, No. 249.—The regular meeting was held at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, Liverpool, on Thursday, the 4th inst. Present—Bros. J. G. Robinson W.M., F. Barnett S.W., W. P. Jennings J.W., R. Collings Sec., J. K. Smith P.M. Treas., John Hayes P.M. D.C., C. Leighton P.M. 1325 as Organist, W. Corbett S.D., J. Whalley J.D., W. H. Vernon and Wm. Mooney Stewards, W. H. Parry I.G., W. H. Ball Tyler; P.M.'s Lloyd, Rose, Pennington, Pearson P.G.S. There was a strong muster of members, and amongst the visitors were Bros. W. H. Cooper W.M. 1350, R. Rankin P.M. 579, J. W. Burgess P.M. 1325, T. H. Bradshaw W.M. 1325, John Peten P.M. 597, John Lecomber P.M. 594, S. M. Davies, FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, &c. The usual routine business having been despatched, the important event of the day was undertaken by Bro. J. Hayes P.M., who installed Bro. F. Barnett. He appointed his Officers as follow:—J. C. Robinson I.P.M., W. Corbett S.W., W. P. Jennings J.W., J. K. Smith P.M. Treas., R. Collings Sec., J. Hayes P.M. D.C., J. Whalley S.D., W. H. Parry J.D., W. Vernon I.G., W. Mooney S.S., J. Jenaway J.S., Jas. Simpson A.S., W. H. Ball Tyler. He resumed the Lodge to the second degree, and passed Bros. Messenger and Fitzgerald. The Mariners Lodge has procured a Master in Bro. Barnett who will do his work as thoroughly as any that ever occupied the chair of K.S. We wish him a year of prosperity. A vote of thanks was unanimously tendered Bro. Hayes for the admirable manner in which he had conducted the installation ceremony, after which the W.M. in the name of the Lodge presented the I.P.M. with a P.M.'s jewel. This mark of esteem was highly appreciated by Bro. Robinson, who returned thanks in a very touching manner. Sundry matters of business were disposed of, the W.M. declared the labours of the day ended, and the Lodge was closed in harmony. The brethren were invited to banquet. Pressure of space prevents our giving a detailed account of the evening's proceedings, but we must not omit to say that the Loyal and Masonic toasts were given from the chair, heartily received, and ably responded to. We thank Bros. Barnett and Robinson for the kind expressions and mark of esteem shown the Masonic Press, and we reciprocate that fraternal feeling by wishing the Mariners' Lodge every happiness. A pleasing feature in the evening's programme was the presentation of a set of diamond studs to Bro. J. K. Smith P.M., and a magnificent black marble timepiece and two bronze vases to Bro. J. Hayes P.M. The clock bore the following inscription:—"Presented to Bro. Hayes P.M., as a token of the regard and esteem in which he is held by the members of the Mariners' Lodge, No. 219. July 4th 1878." The pleasures of the evening were greatly enhanced by a recitation given by Bro. Courtney in a most accomplished manner, and by the harmony contributed by Bros. M. Hart, Davies, Bell, Howarth, and others, accompanied by Bro. Bryan on the piano. The brethren, after spending a very agreeable evening, dispersed at an early hour.

Northern Counties Lodge, No. 406.—The regular meeting was held on Wednesday, the 3rd inst., at the Masonic Hall, Maple-street, Newcastle-on-Tyne, the W.M. Bro. R. L. Armstrong in the chair, J. Page S.W., R. G. Salmon J.W., G. W. Lax Sec., S. M. Harris S.D., Macdonald as J.D., W. Monday P.M. D.C., J. S. B. Bell I.G., and G. S. Sims Tyler. The Lodge being opened, and the minutes confirmed, the ballot was taken for Messrs. Marrison, Turnbull and Bourgoyne, which proving successful, and those gentlemen being in attendance, they were initiated, in a most creditable manner, by the W.M. No other business offering itself, the Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. Here a very pleasing incident occurred: a deputation from St. Peters Lodge, No. 481, consisting of Bros. R. Eynow W.M., H. S. Sewell I.P.M., G. Thompson P.M. Treas., J. Cook P.M. P.P.G.S.W., J. Atkinson P.M. and E. Gibbon Sec., waited on the Worshipful Master, to convey to him the congratulations of St. Peters Lodge on his position as Master, and to express the good feeling that existed between the two Lodges. The usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were duly given, as also were several complimentary ones, that of St. Peters Lodge being responded to by the Master, Bro. Eynow. The Tyler's toast concluded a very pleasant evening, which had been enlivened by some singing and recitations.

St. Peters Lodge, No. 481.—The installation meeting of this Lodge took place on Monday, the 8th inst. The brethren met at three o'clock, at the Masonic Hall, Maple-street, Newcastle-on-Tyne. The chair was taken by the W.M. Bro. R. Eynow, supported by the following Officers:—R. L. Armstrong W.M. 406 S.W., J. Atkinson P.M. as J.W., G. Thompson P.M. Treas., E. Gibbon Sec., J. Watson S.D., J. Usher J.D., Duckett I.G., Goss and Prentice Stewards, and G. S. Sims Tyler. The Lodge was opened, and the minutes confirmed, the ballot was then taken for Mr. Urwin, which being unanimous, that gentleman was initiated into our Order by the W.M. After which Bro. E. D. Davis P.M. Prov. G.D.C. took the chair, and Bro. Eynow W.M. was presented to him for re-installation, having been re-elected Master for the ensuing year. This having been done, and the brethren having duly saluted the newly installed Master, he appointed the following brethren as his Officers:—H. S. Sewell I.P.M., J. Watson S.W., J. Usher J.W., J. Duckett S.D., J. Goss J.D., G. Thompson P.M. Treas., E. Gibbon Sec., T. Prentice I.G., Ford and Stafford Stewards, and G. S. Sims Tyler. The usual address was then given by the installing Master, and all other routine business having been disposed of, the Lodge was closed. The brethren then adjourned to the Queen's Head Hotel, Pilgrim-street, where they sat down to a banquet replete with every delicacy of the season, and complete in all the appointments, reflecting the greatest credit on mine host Phillips for the admirable manner he studied the comforts of the brethren, and it was only to be regretted that there was so few present. Grace being said by Rev. Bro. Hind, the W.M. rose to submit the first toast—one always drunk with enthusiasm, and by Masons with Loyalty—namely, the Queen. The next toast on the list was H.R.H. the Prince of Wales Most Worshipful Grand Master. In calling on the brethren to honour this toast, the W.M. hoped he would long live to rule over us, he being a good and straightforward Englishman and a good Mason. The health of the Pro G.M. the Earl of Carnarvon, the D.G.M., and Officers of Grand Lodge was likewise drunk. The W.M. then rose to give the health of the R.W. Prov. G.M. the Earl Percy and Officers of Prov. Grand Lodge. He trusted the rumour of the Earl giving up his Grand Mastership would prove only talk, and that he would long continue to rule over the Province. The Rev. Bro. Hind then proposed the toast of the R.W. Prov. G.M. of Durham, John Fawcett. In the course of his remarks he stated he had ruled over that Province for thirty years, and he was sure there could not be a better Prov. G.M. than he was. Bro. Terry kindly sang the "Village Blacksmith." In a few well chosen remarks the W.M. gave the Initiate, and hoped he had been duly impressed by the ceremony. He also trusted he would be often seen among them. In reply, Bro. Urwin expressed his thanks for his health being drunk, and hoped the brethren would have no cause to regret electing him a member. Bro. Sewell I.P.M. then rose to propose the health of the Worshipful Master. In submitting this toast he was asking them not to perform a formal task, and he was sure they would drink it most heartily. The Master had been asked by the members to rule over them for another year, which would alone speak for the manner he had gone through his duty in the past. On one occasion only had he been absent, and then on account of ill health. He had conducted the affairs of the Lodge creditably, and as a ruler in the Craft should do. During his past year of Mastership he had received Provincial Grand honours, but he hoped that still greater honours were in store for him, and that in time he might be looked on as a high and distinguished Mason. During the year he was glad to say there had not been a single word of discord or unpleasantness amongst any of the members. He called on the brethren to join with him in wishing the Master a prosperous year, and personally every happiness. Bro. Waters S.W. favoured the brethren with one of his excellent Tyneside songs. The W.M., who on rising was heartily received, assured the brethren he could not find words to express his feelings. He could only thank them for their kind sentiments, and hoped he deserved a small portion of them. He assured them it was the last thought in his mind when last year he answered to his health, that he would be called on again to occupy the chair. He considered it a bad thing for any Lodge to have to put a Past Master in the chair, but he would not go into that, as it was well known the circumstances were those over which they had no control. He would do all in his power to merit the confidence they had placed in him, for which he again thanked them. The Installing Master was next given by the W.M., who expressed his regret that Bro. Sewell had been prevented from performing the installation as was intended, but all the brethren knew the assistance he had rendered at all times in the Lodge. In replying, Bro. Sewell said it was one of the keynotes of Masonry that it is the hope of reward that sweetens labour, and they had given him the greatest reward that man can have, and which sweetens life. He assured them he was always happy to do what was in his power to further their interests, and that of the good old Lodge St. Peter's. He regretted he was not able to be present in the Lodge, but it was a greater gain to the brethren to be able to have seen the ceremony gone through by Bro. E. D. Davis, who kindly came forward at great inconvenience, being only asked to undertake the installation at twelve o'clock that day. He assured them it would always be his endeavour, if at all in his power, to assist the Worshipful Master or any member of the Lodge. Bro. R. L. Armstrong, W.M. 406, then rose to propose the Past Masters, and in doing so coupled the name of Bro. G. Thompson P.M. Treas. with the toast. He knew of no one that he had greater respect for. If they only looked to what he had done for the Lodge, they would say with him, he is a true man and Mason. He assured them no one could admire Bro. Thompson more than he did, and he called on them to drink to his health, happiness and prosperity, as well as that of the other Past Masters of the Lodge. Bro. Thompson, on rising, was heartily cheered. He returned his most sincere thanks for the toast, and for the allusion to any slight service he had cheerfully rendered to the Lodge. The Officers next received their meed of praise, and the W.M. said, when last year he had selected his staff he knew he had picked Officers who would do their duty, and he was glad to say he had not been disappointed. The Visitors next received due honours, and a very hearty welcome, and the Tyler was then called, who brought to a conclusion the toast list. Amongst those brethren who contributed to the evening's enjoyment by singing were Bros. Ord, Dees, Rayner, Cook and Gibbon. The Visitors present were Bros. J. Cook P.M., Bord W.M. 1427, G. I. Dean W.M. 541, Marchant P.M. 424, and S. M. Harris S.D. 406.

Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction No. 860.—Held its weekly meeting on Tuesday evening last, at Bro. Smyth's, Sisters Tavern, Pownall-road, Dalston. Bro. Gilham W.M., Wardell S.W., Christian J.W., Williams J.D., Dallas Secretary, Smyth Treasurer, P.M. Wallington Preceptor; Bros. Hunt, Chandler, Brasted, C Lorkin and others. The Lodge was opened and the minutes read. The ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Chandler candidate. The Preceptor then took the chair. Bro. Hunt answered the questions, the Lodge was opened up, and the ceremony of passing was rehearsed. The Lodge was then opened and closed in the third degree, and the W.M. resumed the chair. Bro. Brasted worked the first section of the first lecture, assisted by the brethren. A vote of thanks was passed to Bro. Gilham for his able working.

Whittington Lodge of Instruction, No. 862.—On Wednesday, the 10th inst., at Bro. Hyde's, Red Lion, Poppin's-court, Fleet-street. Bro. Tate W.M., Brown S.W., Hallam J.W., Marston S.D., Pate J.D., Abell I.G., Long P.M. Preceptor. The second ceremony was ably rehearsed by the W.M., after which the whole of the sections were worked by the brethren. Bro. Hallam jun. was elected a member, and Bro. Brown elected W.M. for the ensuing week. The Lodge was then closed. In spite of the summer weather this Lodge keeps up an average attendance of members.

Neptune Lodge, No. 1264.—The monthly meeting of this Lodge was held on 1st July, at the Masonic Temple, Liverpool. Bros. Joseph Korn W.M., W. C. Webb S.W., A. C. Wylie J.W., J. H. Linaker Sec., P. B. Gee P.M. Treas., A. Cotter P.M. D.C., T. H. Arden S.D., G. Crute as J.D., J. Tickle Steward, J. S. Warden I.G., P. Ball Tyler. P.M.'s Bros. J. Healing, J. W. Burgess 1325. The Lodge having been opened and preliminaries gone through, the W.M., in a thoroughly efficient manner, passed Bros. Fender, Cavers, Kirkpatrick, and Bros. Robertson, and Sheffield (Downshire Lodge, No. 594) to the Fellow Craft degree. The Lodge was then worked up, and Bro. Adam Williamson was raised. This ceremony was also performed by Bro. Korn in a very able manner. This the more redounds to his credit, as it was the first meeting after his installation. After business of a character interesting but to the members, the Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. A very pleasant evening was spent, and the Worshipful Master received the congratulations of the brethren for his admirable working, and their thanks for his genial presidency.

Hamer Lodge, No. 1393.—The installation meeting was held on Friday, 28th ult., at the Masonic Hall, Liverpool. Amongst those present we noticed Past Masters Bros. Jones and McCarthy, and Bros. Roberts, McRobie, Speddy, Smith, Airey, Stockton, Sharp, Davis, Tomlin, Adler, Richardson, Barr, Houlding, Tomison, Lambert,

Henderson, Russell, Griffiths, &c. The members were summoned to attend at 2.30 p.m. The Lodge being duly opened, and the usual formalities complied with, it was worked up to the third degree, and Bros. Airey and Atherton were raised. The main feature in the business of the Lodge was the ceremony of installing Bro. T. Large. As most of our readers know the usual indispensable preliminaries in the ceremony, it is needless to enter into details. Suffice it to say that Bro. Large was formally introduced to the W.M., and finally proclaimed as Worshipful Master for the ensuing year. He appointed his Officers :—Bros. Thomas Sammons I.P.M., Henry Jackson P.M. D.C., Robert Leason S.W., W. C. Erwin J.W., R. H. Evans P.M. Treas., Benjamin Price Sec., James Pilling S.D., R. J. L. Kynaston J.D., W. H. Jewitt I.G., M. Callaghan S. Steward, G. B. Tenison J.S., J. J. Smith and Jas. Tomlin A.S., Thomas Pierrepont Organist, M. Williamson Tyler. Bro. Jackson delivered the charges in a masterly manner, and we are sure the Hamer Lodge will not lose a particle of its lustre under the Mastership of Bro. Large. Previous to closing the Lodge, Bro. McCarthy proposed, and Bro. Sammons seconded a proposition that a vote of thanks be tendered Bros. Houlding, Jones, and Birket for their efforts in procuring the election of a son of our late Bro. Phillips into the Blue Coat School, the same to be entered on the minutes of the Lodge ;—carried unanimously. The W.M. then signified his pleasure to banquet with the brethren. It is to be regretted that some one did not endeavour to impress on the minds of those who had the management of the Banquetting-hall that ventilation is a great acquisition to comfort, when the thermometer stands near 90 degrees. The Committee cannot be too highly complimented on the efforts they made for the enjoyment of each and all, and the Lodge must be congratulated on having been honoured with the company of so many talented brethren. We allude, of course, to the excellent musical selection which sundry of them present contributed. Bro. John Hill exhibited the extraordinary compass of his voice, and his complete mastery over it delighted all. Bro. Richardson kept the brethren in a merry strain, and his humorous sketches produced roars of laughter. The quartette, by Brothers Child, Busfield, Bryan and Hobert, was capitally rendered and highly appreciated. The solos of Bros. Hobert and Busfield were admirably sung, and the trio by Bros. Hobert, Child and Bryan received a hearty reception. The musical arrangements were, indeed, rendered complete by the presence of our highly esteemed and talented Prov. Grand Organist, Bro. J. Skeaf, who presided at the pianoforte. During the evening he kindly gave the "Sabbath Evening Chimes" and "Bells of Aberdovey," and made the instrument ring out most exquisitely. The Worshipful Master, in a few well chosen words, gave the first toast of the evening,—Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen,—and all joined in the National Anthem. This was followed by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family, which was most heartily drunk, the brethren singing "God Bless the Prince of Wales." By command of the W. Master, Bro. S. Warden proposed the health of the Pro Grand Master and the Officers of Grand Lodge. The example of Masonic zeal set before us by Grand Lodge Officers was worthy of emulation. The toast was cordially drunk. The J. Warden gave the toast of the Prov. G. Master and the Officers of Prov. Grand Lodge ; he had much pleasure in doing so, as all knew the deep interest Lord Skelmersdale takes in the Order, and that estimable Brother would be with us more frequently if his attendance were necessary. He had much pleasure in uniting with the toast the names of Bro. Jackson P.G.A.D.C., and Bro. J. Skeaf P.G.O. Bro. Jackson, in reply, assured the brethren that he considered it a great honour to have his name associated with the toast. He considered it a proud day when Lord Skelmersdale put the collar of office round his neck. Their Prov. Grand Master did his duty freely and voluntarily ; he had many engagements, which prevented his being as often Masonically in the Province as he (the speaker) knew he desired. Lord Skelmersdale had his time taken up considerably by the various distinguished Orders he belonged to—for instance, the Red Cross, the Orders of Knights of Malta, and so on, up to the thirty-third degree, besides his official duties, and the offices of state. Now, as regards himself, he was pleased to receive the office of D. of C. of this Lodge, and trusted he might be able to do his duty faithfully, and emulate in a fraternal spirit his predecessor. Bro. Skeaf said his esteemed brother had dwelt on so many subjects, and touched on so many topics, that there was nothing left for him to say. He would, however, repeat what he had often told the brethren before, that he was ever ready to do his utmost for the Craft. It may be remarked here, that every brother appreciates the kindness of Bro. Skeaf, and in him Prov. Grand Lodge has a good officer, who does his duty thoroughly. Bro. Sammons now rose to propose the toast of the evening. Some time ago he had the pleasure of investing the present Worshipful Master as I.G. of the Lodge, and to-day he had the pleasure of investing him as Worshipful Master. He was sure from the deep interest he takes in Freemasonry, and the fraternal feeling he has for the Lodge, he will do honour to the post, and when his term of office expires will receive the applause of the Lodge. The toast was received with musical and Masonic honours. The Worshipful Master thanked the I.P.M. He owed the brethren a deep debt of gratitude for receiving the toast in such a hearty manner. If he were gifted with the eloquence of some of his predecessors, he might easily express how deeply grateful he was for the great honour they had conferred on him in placing him where he was. He assured them he should do his utmost to give satisfaction, and trusted when he vacated the chair the Lodge would be in a more prosperous state than now. (Cheers). He was anxious to see the Lodge take a more active part in the Provincial Charities and the great Charities which are centred in London. The Hamer Lodge should be the best Lodge in West Lancashire, and, to use a familiar phrase, we have the men, and he hoped we should have the money too. (Applause). Bro. McCarthy relieved the duties of the W.M. by proposing the health of the I.P.M. and Installing Master. In putting the double toast into one he paid a high tribute of respect to Bro. Sammons. Bro. McCarthy digressed a little from the subject in hand by referring to the gratification he felt in seeing Bro. Large in the East. He returned to the subject, however, and finally complimented Bro. Jackson on the efficient manner he did his portion of the ceremony. When Bro. McCarthy had concluded his remarks the Worshipful Master rose—It had been his pleasure to reserve to himself the great gratification of carrying out the behests of the Lodge by presenting to the worthy I.P.M. a Past Master's jewel. He hoped he might have long life to wear it, and that he might hand it down to his heirs as a memento of the esteem and regard in which he had been held by the brethren. Bro. Sammons cordially thanked the brethren for their mark of esteem, as well as for past kindnesses ; he wished the Lodge every success under its new Master. Bro. Jackson followed, and gave all credit for the success of the installation to Bro. Sammons. Bro. Jones proposed the Masonic Charities ; the brethren of the Hamer are never backward in recognising the importance of the Charities ; the toast was duly honoured, and Bro. Sammons made good use of his opportunity to personally appeal to each brother round the board. Let us hope he met with a liberal response. The W.M. now rose to propose the health of the Past Masters ; if he talked for a month he could not say too much in their favour, therefore, on this occasion, they would kindly take the will for the deed ; the toast was drunk and duly responded to by Bro. McCarthy. To Bro. Evans was entrusted the toast of the Visitors ; he explained the reason why so few were present, yet to all who were there he, in the name of the Lodge, accorded a cordial welcome. Bro. Joseph Wood responded ; he felt very grateful for the kind hospitality shown them ; they would, no doubt, agree with him in saying they were highly pleased with the programme, from the installation to the present moment. Bro. Bryan returned thanks for the musical brethren ; he could not let the present opportunity pass without expressing his thanks for the cordial reception the toast of the Visitors had received ; he felt sure the musical brethren were ever ready to exert themselves to add to the solemnity of the ceremonies or the pleasures of the table. The W.M. next gave the Officers ; he paid a compliment to each, but especially to the S.W., in whom he stated he had one of the most efficient and genuine Masons that could sit in a Lodge. The toast was most enthusiastically drunk. Bro. S. Warden responded in a capital speech, which was only brought to a close from sheer necessity to catch the train. He had worked from the lowest rung of the ladder to his present position, and his rise had been regular, if not rapid ; he had contemplated each promotion with peculiar pride. He felt proud at getting into office, and it would be a satisfaction to do his duty with credit to himself and the Lodge. In his new appointment he would work with zeal. He had already travelled 2,800 miles to attend those duties, and he would yet add a large addition to that number if necessity required it. The J.W. also responded, and he was followed by several of the other Officers. Bro. Tenison replied for the Stewards, after which Bro. Evans proposed the Masonic Press, uniting with it the name of Bro. Davies. Bro. Davies, FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, said he felt the honour conferred upon him. He thanked the brethren for receiving the toast so enthusiastically. The Masonic Press had a sacred and most important duty to perform ; as far as he was concerned that duty should be faithfully and impartially carried out. He attached great value to representing things as they truly were—in holding up for example and guidance the good and truly sincere members of the Craft, at the same time to admonish the apathetic members in Lodges and Provinces. He knew the evil of indiscriminate praise, and he felt there was too much of it introduced. As a keen observer of events, and having a practical knowledge and deep love for the Craft, he took exception to many things which others would heedlessly pass over. Our brother then referred to several matters which had struck him during the day's proceedings. He assured Bro. Evans that the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE was ever ready to throw the broad mantle of Charity over the failings of those whose proceedings were open to condemnation, and would ever strive to uphold the dignity of the Craft. The W.M. next gave Prosperity to the Lodge of Instruction, and united therewith the names of the Preceptor. Bro. Sammons felt more pleasure in responding to this, than to any other toast. He urged the brethren to renewed energy, and to constant attendance. The Members of the Hamer Lodge were next honoured, and with the toast was coupled the name of Bro. Houlding, who replied. The Tyler's toast was then given, and the brethren separated.

The business comprised the initiation of Messrs. T. Cox and Montague L. Carpenter ; the passing of Bro. J. Patey ; and the raising Bros. D. Papworth and W. Beauchamp. A proposition to contribute five guineas from the Lodge funds to the Burdett Testimonial was carried unanimously. Letters of apology for absence were read from the Provincial Grand Master and others.

by Bro. Preceptor Pearcy, and the second section by the W.M. Bro. Hirst having offered himself as a candidate for passing, answered the questions. The Lodge was opened in the second, and the W.M. duly passed Bro. Hirst. The second section of the second lecture was then worked by Bro. Pearcy, assisted by the brethren. The Lodge was closed down. Bro. W. Rowley S.W. was unanimously elected W.M. for next meeting.

Eboracum Lodge, No. 1611.—There was an unusual good muster of the members of this Lodge on Monday evening, amongst those present being Bros. T. B. Whytehead W.M., T. Cooper I.P.M., G. Balmford P.M. Treas., C. G. Padel J.W., J. Kay Secretary, T. D. Smith as S.D., J. T. Seller J.D., H. Jackson as I.G., P. Pearson Tyler; and Bros. Ware, Husband, Shillito, Appleyard, Wilkinson, Irving, Blackstone, Hebblethwaite, Zackenby, Churchill, &c. Bros. Hebblethwaite and Blackstone were passed to the second degree, and Bro. Wilkinson was raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason, and Bro. G. H. Simpson 236 was elected a joining member. Just at the close of the Lodge, a telegram was received from the Alexandra Palace, from Bros. J. S. Cumberland S.W. and A. T. B. Turner, who were at the Masonic Boys' Festival as Stewards, representing the Eboracum Lodge, conveying good wishes and information as to the sum total realised at the Festival. The telegram was read to the brethren by the W.M., amid warm applause. After the close of the Lodge, a good deal of conversation took place regarding the forthcoming visit of American Masons on the 25th, and a general opinion was expressed that the reception promised to be a very successful affair. Bro. T. Cooper P.M. presented to the Lodge a portrait of the late Lord Londesborough, P.P.G.W. of the Province, and the W.M. presented a view of the well preserved ruins of Rievaulx Abbey, in Yorkshire.

NEW ZEALAND.

ON Monday, 13th May, at one o'clock p.m., a special train left Nelson for Wakefield, containing about thirty-five members of the Masonic Fraternity, who had been invited by the Forest Lodge, 1481 E.C., to the annual installation of its Worshipful Master. Lodge was opened in due form at 3 o'clock, and the Worshipful Master, Officers and Brethren of the Southern Star Lodge of Nelson, 735 English Constitution, were reported and admitted, together with visitors from various other Lodges of the Colony. The installation ceremonies were impressively administered by Bro. Dr. W. B. Sealy P.M., and Bro. Richard Chattock was proclaimed Master of the Forest Lodge, who, thereafter, invested his Officers for the current year, Bro. W. G. Sealy officiating as Organist for the occasion. At 6 o'clock the brethren sat down to a banquet, provided at the Forest Inn in Bro. R. M. Smith's excellent style. After the usual loyal and Masonic toasts, Bro. Gowland, the retiring Master, gave the toast of "The Worshipful Master and Brethren of the Southern Star Lodge," to which Bro. W. M. Stanton, as Master, responded, reviewing the Masonic events of the past year, not only as relating to New Zealand, but to the world at large, and as the deduction from that retrospect, earnestly invited the brethren to circumspection in the acceptance of candidates, that the Order might suffer no reproach from the careless admission of unworthy members. "The Board of Installed Masters," "The Present and the Retiring Master," "The Visiting Brethren," and other toasts in special character were drunk, and the proceedings were enlivened by music and songs. At 10 o'clock Bro. Dr. Boor gave the Tyler's toast, which terminated an exceedingly pleasant afternoon and evening, and the Nelson brethren returned by rail.

At the Southern Star Lodge, on the 15th ult., the Worshipful Master proclaimed the edict of the Grand Lodge of England in reference to the recent action of the Grand Orient of France.

At the last regular meeting of the Lodge Remuera, Auckland, New Zealand, the brethren presented a Past Master's jewel of very unique and tasteful manufacture to Bro. W. Lodder, who for the previous year had occupied the position of W.M. of the Lodge, and who, indeed, had been mainly instrumental in its formation. The centrepiece of the jewel is most appropriate. It is locket-shaped, of large size, and on the back it bears a suitable inscription. Bro. Lodder, we may add, was the first W.M. of this newly-formed Lodge, and mainly through his exertion it has become a very flourishing one.

Rodney Lodge, No. 1711.—On the 23rd May the annual installation meeting of this Lodge took place at Mahurangi, when Bro. Mont was installed for the second time in the chair of K.S., and appointed his officers as follow:—M. W. Munro S.W., C. Thomson J.W., J. S. Darrach Sec., C. Griffin M.C., F. Howard S.D., J. Brebner J.D., G. Dibble I.G. The little Lodge room was elegantly fitted up, and great credit is due to the W.M., who is an excellent working Mason, and takes a lively interest in the Craft. The great success of the Lodge is due to his untiring zeal. The installation ceremonies were ably worked by Bro. M. S. Leers P.M. 1338, President of the Board of General Purposes for the Auckland district, who is one of the brightest of New Zealand Masons. We understand that the Masons of Mahurangi contemplate erecting a substantial Masonic hall, and that a great part of the capital has already been subscribed.

Southern Star, No. 735 E.C., Nelson, N.Z.—The monthly meeting was held at the Masonic Hall, on Tuesday, 18th February. There was a full attendance, the W.M. Bro. Staunton presiding. The Ven. Archdeacon Thorpe, and two other gentlemen, were initiated. Bro. W. G. Sealy was affiliated, and welcomed into the Lodge by the W.M. as a good and worthy "Lewis," being the son of Bro. Dr. Sealy the senior member, senior P.M., and a strong supporter of the Lodge for many years past. A Sub-Committee, consisting of the W.M., the I.P.M., and Bro. Sealy P.M., reported on their commission, i.e., the consideration of the action recently taken by the Grand Orient of France, they had not yet resolved on any recommendation, and their commission was renewed; the feeling being that the voice of Masonry in New Zealand, however humble or feeble, should be raised in protest against so monstrous an innovation. Honorary membership was conferred on Bro. H. Manning Moor,—in appreciation of his services as Secretary,—on his leaving for Wellington. After the closing of the Lodge twenty-five brethren sat down to supper, and several visiting brethren were present, who expressed much satisfaction at the working of the Lodge, and at the fraternal reunion, justifying the good reputation in which the Southern Star Lodge is held throughout New Zealand.

DR. BARNARDO'S HOMES.

THE movement in aid of street boys, which led to the establishment of the home at Stepney-causway, suggested so far back as 1870 the need of a similiar institution for the opposite sex, and ultimately it was determined to form a village home for orphan, neglected, and destitute girls at Barkingside, near Ilford, in Essex. When finished the village will consist of 30 semi-detached cottages, each capable of accommodating 20 children, with a "mother" at its head, the aim being to train the girls for domestic service. On Wednesday a summer fête was held in the grounds, the first feature being a meeting which took place in a tent under the presidency of the Earl of Aberdeen. King George of Bonny was present, as were also nearly 800 supporters of the charity. After the meeting Lord Aberdeen laid the foundation-stones of three additional cottages, and Lady Cairns and the Dowager Duchess of Manchester formally opened eleven others. Dr. Barnardo took an active part in the proceedings of the day, the object of which was to obtain funds for the institution.

ANALYSIS OF THE SUBSCRIPTION LIST.

LITTLE Herts, with its ten Lodges, is generally among the contributors, and it is down for £26 5s. We must not be surprised at the smallness of the amount, seeing that, in May, it gave the Girls £68 5s, and to the Benevolent £645 11s 6d in February, this being the largest Provincial total. Last year Bro. Binckes obtained support to the extent of £59 17s, with one list still to be sent in, while £143 16s 6d was contributed to the Girls, and £176 8s 6d to the Benevolent. In 1876 Bro. Binckes received £82 17s from the Province, and Bro. Terry £102 13s; in 1875 the former £130 1s, and the latter £217 12s, while a contribution of £17 17s was handed to the Girls' School, making a total for the four years of over £1,671, with only one absence during the time. We must congratulate our Herts brethren on the steadfast support they extend to all our Institutions. Kent is one of our most influential Lodges, having, as was stated in our notice of its Provincial Meeting last week, forty-three Lodges. Six of its Lodges, represented by five Stewards, contributed among them £478, being the second largest amount from any Province, Bro. Emmerson's list yielding £151 9s, and Bro. Lukey's £136 10s. Up to last May it had contributed £3,508, giving an average of over £300 per Festival. Its total has now reached £3,986, which yields an average for the twelve Festivals of over £332. We do not think it necessary to enlarge on the merits of this statement, as it speaks for itself. We therefore move on to East Lancashire, with its array of eighty-six Lodges. Six of these sent up amongst them eight Stewards, and their total is £294 15s. As we remarked last May, this Province has an Educational Institution of its own, and considering the terrible depression of trade for a long time past, it would not have surprised us had the Province been less fully represented. However, it invariably contributes, though somewhat modestly it must be acknowledged, considering the number of its Lodges. Of the six, three are Bolton, and three Manchester; and Bro. Hine, who is chairman of the Provincial Institute just referred to, heads the list with a total of £200 5s. A single Liverpool Lodge, Ancient Union, No. 203, is the one representative of West Lancashire and its seventy-seven Lodges, the amount of its contribution being £57 15s. The same remarks apply to this division of Lancashire as to its Eastern neighbour, with this addition that its contributions last year and the year previous exceeded £2,000. Two Stewards from Pelham Pillar Lodge, No. 792 of Grimsby, sustain the honour of Lincolnshire, but one list only has been returned, the amount being £16 16s. It did not figure at either of the other two Festivals this year, but it contributed to all three Institutions in 1877 and 1876, its subscription to the Girls' School in the latter year reaching £543 14s, while in 1875 it gave £573 to the Benevolent, and smaller sums to the other Institutions. Thus it has done admirably on the whole, though it has not obtained the same prominence this year as it has enjoyed in former years. It must terribly miss "A Warden of the Fens," whose efforts were constantly being directed to helping our Institutions. Middlesex is another of our Provinces, which has figured at all the Festivals during the last four years. Eleven Stewards representing six Lodges and two Chapters—one, however, acting independently—gave among them £194 7s—or rather the seven lists sent in, up to the day of the Festival, amount to this sum, for there are still four outstanding, so that there is plenty of room for a considerable increase. It has twenty-seven Lodges, and up to February, including the Festival of this year, its contributions amounted to over £3,770. If we add to this the £177 3s 6d handed to the Girls' School in May, and this present £194 7s, we obtain a total of over £4,141 raised towards the last twelve Festivals, or an average short of £350 per Festival. Monmouthshire (eight Lodges) was represented by its Provincial G. Master, Lieut. Col. Lyne, and the total of his list is £166 19s. It contributed modestly to the Girls in May, and last year gave two hundred guineas to the Benevolent, while conjointly with South Wales it gave £464 10s to the Girls in 1875. Thus Monmouthshire, which gave birth to our Harry the Fifth, has done admirably. Norfolk with fourteen Lodges was represented by four Stewards, of whom its Provincial Grand Master, Lord Suffield, was one, and the aggregate of their lists is £279 6s. This is its first appearance during the present year, but in 1877 it supported its Prov. G. Master when he presided at the Festival of the Girls' School to the extent of £210, and it gave the Benevolent £82 17s the same year, and supported the Boys and Benevolent in 1876. The two Lodges which appear in the list are both of Norwich. The next in order is Oxfordshire which with Apollo University as one of its eight Lodges exercises a very considerable influence throughout the Fraternity. Its four Stewards—three for Apollo University, No. 357, and one for the Churchill, No. 478, of Oxford likewise—together gave £75 11s 6d. In May the same two Lodges with three others were down for £144 6s 6d, and in February again the same two gave between them £47 10s 6d to the Benevolent. Last year it supported all the Institutions, the Boys receiving £40 7s 6d, the Girls £62 9s with one list outstanding, and the Benevolent, when, but for indisposition, its Provincial G. Master H.R.H. Prince Leopold would have presided, £279 13s. In 1876, £93 11s was the amount it gave the Boys, £50 went to the Girls, and £100 7s to the Benevolent. In 1875, its contributions were £170 3s, with two lists still to be received, to the Boys, £52 9s to the Girls, and £70 6s to the Benevolent, making for the twelve Festivals, a total of over £1,186. Somersetshire (nineteen Lodges) has a representative for one of them in the list, but the amount of his contribution is not given. However, in May, when its Prov. G. Master, the Earl of Carnarvon occupied the chair, the total of its subscriptions was £318 3s. In February last it figured for £85 18s. At the Boys' Festival in 1877 it was down for £58 16s, and at that of the Benevolent for £253 14s. In 1876 it gave to the Boys £72 9s, to the Girls £31 10s, and to the Benevolent £66 6s. At the Festival of the Boys' School in 1875, when the Earl of Carnarvon likewise presided it figured still more conspicuously, the total of its lists being £540 12s 6d, and one outstanding. Twenty guineas was its contribution to the Girls' in the same year, but at the Benevolent it was not, if we remember, represented, this being the only occasion of its absence during the four years we have been dealing with. Staffordshire with its twenty-one Lodges has a representative in the person of Bro. James Walker of the St. Peter's, No. 419, of Wolverhampton, and his list amounts to £35 14s. It was likewise represented at the Benevolent in February, when it contributed £156 7s. Last year our Boys received £149 2s, the Girls £161 3s, and the Benevolent £145. At this last Festival, as our readers will doubtless remember, its Prov. G. Master, the late Earl of Shrewbury and Talbot, took the chair at the very last moment,

Prince Leopold being unable, as we have said, to preside, as he had promised to do. In 1876, the Province gave £289 16s to our Boys, and £115 10s to the Girls, and in 1875, £221 to the former, and £271 5s, including £100 from its late P.G.M., who was Chairman, to the Benevolent. Thus, it has taken part in nine out of the twelve Festivals, and has contributed on these several occasions sums amounting together to £1,544 17s. Next stands Suffolk (nineteen Lodges), its Prov. G. Secretary, Bro. W. H. Lucia, the present Grand Sword Bearer, appearing for the Royal St. Edmunds, No. 1,008, the elder of the Bury St. Edmunds Lodges, with £120 15s, as the very creditable result of his labours. In May it gave the Girls sixty guineas, in February £94 2s to the Benevolent, making a total for the year of £277 17s. In 1877, it somewhat exceeded this total, as it gave £115 10s to the Boys, £91 19s to the Girls, and £111 14s to the Benevolent, making together £319 3s. In 1876, its present Dep. P.G.M., the Rev. C. J. Martyn, was Steward for the Boys and Girls, and two Lodges gave between them £77 to the Benevolent, while in 1875 it gave to our Boys £102 18s, Bro. Lucia being one of the two Stewards, and the sum of £64 19s 6d to the Girls, so that it has only been out of the list once in the four years. The eighteen Lodges of Surrey sent five Stewards, one being General Brownrigg, the Prov. G. Master, and there is still one list to be returned, but a total of £195 5s 6d has already been reached, £141 15s being the amount of Gen. Brownrigg's list, which, we presume, must be taken as representing the whole Province. £42 10s to the Girls' School in May, and £66 18s to the Benevolent in February make the total thus far for the current year £304 13s 6d. In 1877, its donations to the three Institutions amounted to £242 5s 6d. In 1876, it gave the Boys £210 15s 6d, £31 10s to the Girls, £65 5s to the Benevolent; while in 1875, £27 16s 6d went to the Boys, £75 13s to the Girls, and £27 0s 6d to the Benevolent. Thus it has been represented more or less effectively at all twelve Festivals. Sussex, with nineteen Lodges, sent Stewards from two of them, and they raised between them £89 5s. It had already in the present year given £29 8s to the Girls, and £84 10s to the Benevolent. It distinguished itself greatly at the Festival of the Boys' School last year, when its representative, the Deputy P.G.M. and a member of the Royal Clarence, No. 271, the oldest of the Brighton Lodges, took in a list of £270 18s. Following as this did on a contribution by three Stewards of £233 7s 6d to the Girls, and of £158 13s, we think the Province was greatly to be commended. In 1876 it gave £206 5s 6d to the Boys, and £106 to the Benevolent, and in 1875 £112 7s to the Boys, and £77 2s to the Girls, so that it has been represented at ten out of the last twelve Festivals, and last year it gave among them no less than £662 17s 6d. Warwickshire, as we know, has done great things on sundry of these occasions, and the manner in which it supported its respected Prov. Grand Master, Lord Leigh, when he occupied the chair at the Boys' Festival will always be remembered to its credit, the sum being exactly £2000, and all but one of its twenty-six Lodges being represented. These have since increased to twenty-nine, and two Birmingham Lodges, the Solihull, and one of the Warwick, by the hands of five Stewards, send together £215 15s 6d. This is in addition to the sum of £207 18s given to the Girls in May last. Last year it was represented at each of the Festivals, £467 5s 6d being the sum of its subscriptions to the Benevolent, while the total for the three was only a little short of £600, or to be exact £598 10s 6d, there being in one case a list to be accounted for. We have already alluded to its contribution of £2000 to the Boys the year previous, and the Girls were benefited to the extent of £262 10s. In 1875 it was entered at the Boys' Festival for £380 2s, at the Girls' Festival for £21, and £70 to the Benevolent. The total for the eleven Festivals reaches £3,755 16s, or an average per Festival of over £341. Three of the twenty-five North and East Yorkshire Lodges sent up Stewards, and their lists made a total of £85 5s, £31 10s having been handed to the Benevolent in February, and an amount, not stated, to the Girls' School in May. It figured at the Festival of the Boys and Benevolent last year, at the Benevolent in 1876, and at the Boys and Girls in 1875; but, as we have said more than once before, we scarcely think the amount of its contributions is worthy of its position in the Craft. We trust, therefore, that the year 1879 will be more productive. Let it be noted, however, that the Eboracum, No. 1611, the junior Lodge of the City of York, which was only constituted towards the end of 1876, has done its duty admirably as a young Lodge. It has subscribed twenty-five guineas out of the total £85 5s contributed to this Festival. A like sum was given to the Boys last year, and it has been represented at the two Benevolent Festivals which have taken place since its foundation, £19 5s being the amount of its Stewards' lists in 1877, and £11 10s that of its representative in February last. Thus, in less than two years this small but healthy Lodge has given an aggregate of £83 5s at the four Festivals referred to—a notable example, and one well worthy to be followed by the other Lodges in the Province. West Yorkshire heads the list of the Provinces with a subscription of five hundred guineas (£525), there being twenty-one—or, if we add Sir Henry Edwards and Captain Wordsworth—twenty-three brethren representing the Province. Add to this £900, given to the Girls in May, and £603 5s to the Benevolent in February, and we have a total result for this year of £2,028 5s. The total for the three years 1875, 1876, and 1877 amounted to £4,684, so that since January, of the first of these three, West Yorkshire has contributed over £6,712, which gives an average per Festival of nearly £560. North Wales and Salop (twenty-five Lodges) is represented by three, the aggregate of their lists reaching £169 1s—Bro. R. J. Sisson's list accounting for £137 11s of this total. There is a small contribution by the same brother in May last, and it gave the Boys £175 7s in 1877, and something to the Girls, while the Sir Watkin Testimonial is still in course of being raised, so that we must congratulate the Province on its liberality on the present occasion. As for the Eastern Division of South Wales, with its eleven Lodges, it is down for £84; and it gave the Girls £117 12s in May, as well as £132 15s to the Boys last year; and it had figured likewise at other Festivals in 1875 and 1876. We must add that the Provincial Grand Lodge, Royal Order of Scotland, for Lancashire and Cheshire, contributed £105 by the hands of Brother J. F. Tweedale, so that the 111 Provincial Stewards have, so far, raised among them £5,152 18s 1d. Foreign parts give £71 10s, of which fifteen guineas is from Hong Kong, and £55 15s from the Punjab, £50 10s being the amount of Major Ramsay, the Dist. G. Master's list. The Grand Mark Lodge per Bro. C. Fitz Gerald Matier has sent £68 6s, and presuming we ought in justice to add this to the Metropolitan total, we raise that from £4,876 8s to £4,944 14s. There are still several Provincial lists to come in, so the latter, like the Metropolitan, stand a good chance of being increased by a few hundred pounds.

Such, with the figures as announced at the Festival itself, is the result of a year's labours on behalf of the Boys' School, and we repeat we are by no means satisfied with the result. We think it should, all things considered, at least have equalled that of last year, and there is no reason why it should not have been greatly in excess. One or two other points must be mentioned. Her Majesty, who is Patron of the Institution, gave fifty guineas, and His Royal Highness the Chairman contributed a similar amount. It was also the first occasion on which any allusion was made publicly to the approaching marriage of the Duke of Connaught with the Princess Louise of Germany, and the mention of her name was enthusiastically applauded. The arrangements gave general satisfaction, and indeed we feel justified in congratulating everybody on everything save the matter to which we have alluded, and which is the one solitary drawback to the pleasure it has given us to prepare this analysis.

JAMAICA.

Two new Lodges have been established at Kingston, Jamaica; one under the English Constitution, called the "Jamaican," working under a dispensation. A meeting was held on 7th June, at the Friendly Rooms, when Wor. Bro. Dr. Allen as Master, Bro. Hancock S.W., Bro. Dadson J.W. were installed. Several Past Masters of sister Lodges were present and assisted. The other, under the Scottish Constitution, the St. John's; a meeting was held at the Sussex New Lodge room on 20th, when Wor. Dr. Oglivie as Master, Bro. Paine S.W., Bro. Pierce J.W. were installed. The R.W. Dr. Hamilton, District Grand Master of East Jamaica, has been appointed by His Excellency the Governor as an unofficial member of the Legislative Council of this Island. The District Grand Master having decided that a fresh election should take place for a Master in the Phœnix Lodge, Port Royal, an election took place in June, when Bro. E. P. Myers, having now served twelve months as a Warden, was elected Master. The installation will take place in July.

FESTIVAL OF THE MARK BENEVOLENT FUND.

THE Annual Festival held to forward the interests of the Mark Master Masons Benevolent Fund was held on Wednesday last, at the Alexandra Palace, Muswell Hill, under the presidency of the M.W. the Grand Mark Master Mason of England, Lord Skelmersdale. The meeting was not so numerous as had been expected, but we think many of those who had intended to be present were deterred from attending by the awful event which took place on the morning prior to the Festival, when one of the Stewards fell down dead; in addition to this we must not forget that the Masons of London have just now many calls on their time, and that many others are enjoying themselves in the Provinces. Still, in spite of all these disadvantages, it is our pleasure to record that the amount subscribed exceeds that of last year by nearly £100, with seven lists still outstanding, so that by the time the accounts are closed, we think the executive will be enabled to record an increase of 50 per cent. over the result of last year. At the conclusion of the banquet, the noble Chairman proceeded with the toasts of the evening, that of the Queen was followed by the National Anthem. The next on the list was that of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales Grand Master of English Freemasons, the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family. The speaker regretted that neither the Prince of Wales nor his brother, the Duke of Connaught, had yet joined Mark Masonry, but he believed they had one of the Royal family in their ranks, viz., Prince Leopold. He hoped the Prince of Wales might be induced to join them. He was certain that if he did so, he would take as great an interest in the Mark degree as he did in the Craft. Rev. Bro. Hatch then sang the ode composed by himself in honour of the Grand Mastership of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. Bro. Matier next rose to propose the health of the M.W. the Grand Master of Mark Masons. He considered it the principal toast of the evening. It was not the first time he had had the pleasure of proposing the health of Lord Skelmersdale in connection with Freemasonry, but he felt that he had never had occasion to do so under more auspicious circumstances than the present, occupying, as the noble Lord did, the position of G.M. and President of their Benevolent Fund. After a most cordial reception, Lord Skelmersdale rose to respond. He thanked the party for the hearty way in which his health had been proposed and received. He regretted there was not a more numerous attendance, and hoped that the result of the Festival would be much greater than the number of the party might lead them to anticipate. He considered that at the present time there were too many dinners held in connection with the various charities of the country, and considered that if the money spent in dining could find its way into the coffers of the various institutions their annual subscription lists would show much greater results. He felt that in this matter there were many who would not agree with him, but still he must express his opinion on the point. Another evil of our English custom was the amount of talking required on such occasions as the present, and in this respect Freemasons were particularly exacting. Still they were not so bad as on one occasion he could remember, where in a party of four, there were fourteen toasts honoured. Passing down the list of the day, he found that the next thereon was that of the Past Grand Masters of Mark Masonry, of whom they could boast seven, viz.—the Earl of Limerick, Lord Leigh, the Earl of Carnarvon, Viscount Holmesdale, W. W. B. Beach, Rev. G. R. Portal, and Earl Percy. He had particular pleasure in giving this toast, as he believed that all of them were alive and in good health. He considered it a good omen for Mark Masonry that its rulers should be spared so long to guide and counsel them. Lord Leigh had stated that there was a time when he considered the incorporation of Mark Masonry with the Craft was certain, but owing to the opposition of the late Grand Master, Lord Zetland, it had not been carried out. He regretted this, as he felt that both Craft and Mark would benefit by such a union as was proposed. But for other engagements, he was sure Lord Donoughmore would have been with them that day, as also Lord Henniker, whom they had expected up to the last; still he felt that brother could give a good reason for his absence. With the toast was coupled the health of the Deputy Grand Masters, and other members of Mark Grand Lodge, Bro. Roebuck being called upon to respond. That brother replied to the toast with great pleasure; being mindful of the Chairman's remarks as to short speeches, he would not detain them. He referred to the progress lately made by Mark Masonry, and concluded by thanking those assembled for the compliment paid to the Grand Officers. Lord Skelmersdale next rose. Bro. Matier, in proposing his health, had referred to it as the toast of the evening; in this matter he disagreed with Bro. Matier. He considered the one he now had to introduce—Success to the Mark Benevolent Fund—was in reality the grand one of the evening. It was only lately that he had taken any interest in the Mark Degree, and he was pleased to find that it had made such a firm start. It had a Benevolent Fund of its own, which, though young, was prosperous. The present was the 10th anniversary of its establishment, £50 having been granted by Grand Lodge as its basis in 1868. The total which had been received since then was £1,263 9s 9d, out of which 28 cases had been relieved, and an amount of £850 invested, in addition to this they had a sum of £50 in hand. This balance he was aware was a small one, but they must remember that the calls on their funds had lately been numerous and frequent. The income arising from their invested property was also small, and he therefore felt justified in making a strong appeal for support, which he hoped would be accorded them in sufficient force to place them one day on a level with the Boys' Institution, and entitle them to rank as one of the great Masonic Charitable Funds. Bro. Dewar, the Assistant Grand Secretary, then read the following list of Stewards and amounts collected, the announcement of the total being enthusiastically received.

Seven lists yet to come.

Bro. Binckes, Grand Secretary, afterwards replied to the toast, referring to the remarks made by the Chairman as to the amount spent by Freemasons and others at their Charity dinners. He could not agree with the noble Chairman's remarks. His experience was that those who did not enjoy themselves at the banquet table seldom gave much for the help of their unfortunate fellow-creatures, and when they considered the infinitesmal amount spent on their dinners compared with the result of their labours, he thought few could wish to deprive them of this little enjoyment. As to the smallness of their fund, why should they despair? he could remember the time when £600 collected by thirty or thirty-five Stewards for the Boys' School was considered a grand result; surely there was no reason why they should not do as well as had been done before. The result of the labours of the Stewards of the day would enable them to increase their funded property to £1000. The health of the Stewards was next given, and with this toast the chairman had the pleasure of coupling the name of Bro. Goepel. That brother tendered his thanks for the honour thus conferred on him, a compliment no doubt paid him in consequence of his list being the largest of the day. He was specially pleased with this result, as it was in his Lodge that his Lordship, the president of the evening, was advanced to the Mark degree. Bro. Thomas now rose. There had been a contention, he said, as to which was the toast of the evening. First Bro. Matier had announced his as worthy of that position, then their chairman had advanced the claims of their Fund to that distinction, but he (Bro. Thomas) thought that the principal one had still to be given. He felt that the presence of the ladies had given a certain charm to the gathering which could not have arisen in any other way. He therefore called on the brethren to drink heartily to their good health, and to that of Bro. Brighten, whose name he would couple with the toast. Bro. Brighten had especial pleasure in responding to this toast. He felt that their summer meetings were among the most pleasant of the year, as thereat they were often able to enjoy the company of the ladies. He felt sure that more life would be given to Freemasonry in proportion to the interest taken in the Craft by the ladies, on whose behalf he acknowledged the kind remarks of Bro. Thomas. Bro. Levander concluded the toasts of the evening by giving that of the Press, to which Bros. W. W. Morgan and E. Massey responded. The whole of the arrangements of the Festival showed that its conduct had been placed in good hands. The company were indebted to Miss Binckes for presiding at the piano during the evening.

FREEMASONRY IN NORTH AFRICA.

[COMMUNICATED.]

ON the afternoon of Saturday, the 22nd June, the Italian steamer "Caprera" anchored in the midst of the beautiful Bay of Tunis, which washes the shores rendered famous in history as the site of the once flourishing City of Carthage. The arrival of the "Caprera" had been anxiously expected by our brethren of Ancient Carthage Lodge, No. 1717, who had assembled at the seaport of the Goletta to receive their worthy D.G.M., R.W. Bro. William Kingston, of Malta, and several of his Grand Officers, who had, with true Masonic zeal, and a courageous disregard of the inconveniences of an Oriental summer, travelled from Malta to pay an official visit to this young but prosperous Lodge, and at the same time to inaugurate the Mark Lodge Kingston, No. 222, and to consecrate the Royal Arch Chapter Ancient Carthage, No. 1717. The D.G.M., D.G.J.W., D.G. Reg., &c., were met at the Goletta by the W.M. Bro. Broadley, the S.W. Bro. the Rev. E. B. Frankel, the J.W. Bro. Barker C.E., the Chaplain Bro. the Rev. E. H. Shepherd B.A., the J.D. Bro. Pentecost, &c., and the party proceeded to Tunis by the evening train. On the following day a great number of the brethren (including the D.G.M.) attended divine service at the English Church dedicated to St. Augustine, where an eloquent and appropriate sermon was preached by the D.G. Chaplain Bro. E. B. Frankel S.W. 1717. On Monday the 24th June (by a happy coincidence the Feast of St. John the Baptist), a goodly number of English and foreigh brethren assembled in the commodious Masonic Hall, situated in a street bearing the Oriental name of Strada Si Aly Azuz. The Lodge-room had a peculiarly elegant appearance, and is furnished throughout in a complete and satisfactory manner. It is nearly 45 feet long, and will contain with ease about eighty brethren. The walls of the Lodge are covered with appropriate fresco, almost elaborate in design, and the whole house is brilliantly lighted with gas. A refreshment room, waiting room, &c., are comprised in the general arrangements. The Ancient Carthage Lodge, No. 1717, was opened by W. Bro. Broadley (Barrister at Law) at 4 p.m. The following W.M.'s and P.M.'s were present—W. Bro. N. Lenghi 33° P.M. of Lodge Caprera at Alexandria (P.M. 1717), W. Bro. P. Ghiani-Mameli 32° P.M., and W.S. of the Lodge and Chapter Vittoria Fedelta at Cagliari, and Deputy for that City to the Parliament of Italy, W. Bro. Vais 33° deg. P.M. and W.S. at Leghorn, W. Bro. Dr. Mugnaini 31° deg. P.M. of the Lodge Carthage and Utica at Tunis, W. Bro. the Baron James Castellnuovo W.M. of the existing Italian Lodge Risorgimento at Tunis, and W. Bro. P. Sulema 18° deg. P.M. of the Italian Lodge Concordia and Progresso at Tunis. Amongst the brethren present were Bros. Rev. E. B. Frankel S.W., J. E. L. Barker C.E. J.W., A. Blanch acting Treasurer, S. Souiller Secretary, A. Perini M.D. S.D., G. Pentecost J.D., Rev. E. H. Shepherd B.A. Chaplain, P. Paleologo I.G., V. C. Clement D. of C., M. Lumbroso and M. Schembri Stewards, and H. Haylock Tyler, together with Bros. the Chevalier Tulin de la Tunisie Consul General of the German Empire, J. J. Gardiner C.E., N. Cassanello M.D., and nearly fifty others, including the Officers of the newly founded Italian Lodge, Il Risorgimento. On an alarm being given that the District Grand Lodge of Malta sought admittance, a procession entered the Lodge in the following order—Bro. Beck D.G. Purs. and Bro. Paleologo D.G.S. bearing the greater lights, Bro. Pentecost D.G. Steward bearing the D.G.L. Banner, Bro. Rev. E. B. Frankel D.G. Chaplain, W. Bro. Charles Riechelman D.G.J.W., the R.W. Bro. William Kingston D.G.M. The D.G.M. was received with the honours due to his exalted rank. The D.G.M. assumed the gavel, and the W.M. Bro. Broadley his place as D.G.S.W. The other D.G. Officers assumed their posts, and D.G. Lodge was declared open in ample form. The D.G. Chaplain having offered up a prayer, the W.M. tendered the Books of the Lodge for the inspection of the D.G.M., and addressed that brother as follows:—

R.W. Sir,—Allow me, on behalf of myself and the Officers and members of this Lodge, to bid you welcome to "Ancient Carthage." We are deeply sensible of the honour you have done us to come amongst us, and of the great sacrifices made by yourself and your Grand Officers to accomplish this visit, so important in the annals of my Lodge, and, I feel sure, so much calculated to advance our prosperity. I feel almost justified in saying that your presence in Tunis to-day has a deep interest, not only for this Lodge and this District in particular, but for the Masonic world in general. Few spots possess greater attraction to the historical student of Masonry than the site of that mighty city from which we derive our name, the ruins of which are almost visible from the place on which we now stand. Founded by the countrymen of our Grand Master H. B. seven centuries before the Christian era, it was adorned and embellished by the "cunning workmen" of the Phœnician race, and finally, when Tyre itself fell before a victorious foe, it afforded a refuge to the descendents of those great men who originated, as our traditions inform us, the secrets and mysteries of our honourable order. The ruins of that once powerful city contain many a mark and many a symbol familiar to all workers of our Craft, and strange to say these marks and these symbols have been perpetuated by the Moslem conquerors whose children now possess those beautiful hills sloping down to the Mediterranean, once crowned by the Mistress of the World. It is to a Lodge and a country possessing these almost unrivalled associations that I welcome you to-day. You find in our midst many representatives of the G.O. of Italy, who join with us in thanking you for the honour you have done us to visit this distant part of your district. Italy and England have enjoyed a long and unbroken friendship, and I can truly state that the most cordial and fraternal feelings exist between the Italian and English Masons in Tunis. We all of us are determined to overcome the difficulties engendered by diversity of race and creed, and unite together in upholding by example as well as by precept the great doctrines upon which Freemasonry is based. The progress of our Lodge up to the present time has surpassed all our expectations. We owe much to the encouragement afforded us by yourself and your excellent D.D.G.M., W. Bro. Rosenbush, and your presence amongst us to-night fills our cup of gratitude to the brim. Your visit will always form an important epoch in the history of this Lodge, and will serve as an impetus to one and all of us to put forth fresh exertions in the Masonic cause. The Supreme Grand Chapter of England has lately given us a proof of its confidence in granting us a charter to open a Chapter in connection with our Lodge, and we are fully determined to justify the trust so kindly reposed in us, that neither the Grand Lodge nor the Grand Chapter may ever regret extending their jurisdiction and that of your District to the shores of North Africa, and thus enable English Masons to work English Masonry in the country which will always be associated with the fame and glory of the mighty Tyrian nation, to which, in all probability, we owe the very existence of our Order. The R.W.D.G.M. replied as follows: W. Bro. Broadley, W.P. Masters, Officers and Brethren,—I thank you very much for the cordial reception accorded by you this evening to my Grand Officers and myself. In coming amongst you I have done nothing more than fulfil my duty as D.G.M., and I must say that in the present instance my task has been a very pleasant one. I congratulate W. Bro. Broadley on the result of his great exertions in the cause of Masonry in Tunis, and particularly on the prosperity and increasing importance of the Lodge over which he rules. I only hope that the fame of the Ancient Carthage Lodge will be lasting, and that its future may be as satisfactory as its beginning. The R.W.D.G.M. closed the D.G.L. W. Bro. Broadley, at the request of the R.W.D.G.M., resumed the gavel, and proceeded with the ordinary work of the Lodge. Mr. Joseph Allegro, an officer in the Turkish army, was then introduced and initiated, in the French language, into the secrets and mysteries of Ancient Freemasonry in the E.A. degree. The W.M. alluded to the presence of the W.M. and Officers of the recently established Italian Lodge, Il Risorgimento, and wished both them and their Lodge every success. W. Bro. Baron Castellnuovo M.D. replied in appropriate terms, and expressed his high sense of W. Bro. Broadley's cordiality and good feeling towards the Lodge over which he had been elected to govern, and hoped that both Lodges would unite in forming a column of mutual defence and support. The Chaplain of the Lodge, Bro. E. H. Shepherd, having offered up an appropriate prayer, the Lodge was closed in peace and harmony at 6 p.m. At 8 o'clock a banquet was given under the presidency of the W.M., in the refreshment room, which was very numerously attended by the brethren and Masonic visitors. The usual toasts of obligation were given and responded to, that of the D.G.M. awakening peculiar enthusiasm. The W. Bro. Kingston, in returning thanks, expressed his gratification at the reception accorded to him and his Officers, and proposed the health of the W.M. and principal founder of the Lodge, W. Bro. Broadley. The W.M. proposed the health of the Officers, coupling with the toast that of Bro. the Rev. E. B. Frankel S.W., to whose Masonic zeal he rendered ample testimony. Several other toasts were proposed and answered to, and amongst them, that of the Grand Orient of Italy, responded to by W. Bro. Ghiani-Mameli Deputy of the Italian Parliament; W. Bro. J. M. P. Montague G.D. of England, Honorary Member of 1717; the former Masters of Lodges in Tunis, eloquently proposed by W. Bro. Lenghi, and responded to appropriately by W. Bro. Dr. Mugnaini and W. Bro. P. Sulema. The Tyler's toast brought the proceedings to a close at 11 p.m.

The next morning, at 8 a.m., the brethren met to dedicate the newly founded Mark Masons Lodge, Kingston, No. 222, named after the popular and much esteemed D.G.M. of Malta. The proceedings being opened according to ancient custom, the warrant was read, and R.W. Bro. Kingston P.M.M.M. 109, proceeded to instal the first W.M., W. Bro. Broadley. The following brethren were then advanced, viz., Bros. Perini, W. Castellnuovo C.E., Blanch, Dr. Cassanello, Schembri, Gardelle, Denti, Enriques and Barker. Another meeting was held at 4 p.m., when six other brethren attained the honourable degree, viz., the Chevalier Tulin de la Tunisie, Felice, They, Macario, Cassar, and Bourepanx. A third Mark Lodge was opened at 8 p.m., when seven other brethren sought advancement, i.e., Bros. J. J. Gardiner C.E., V. Finzi, S. Arieti, V. C. Clement, M. Le Gallais, S. Souiller and E. Nurri. The ceremonies being over, and the advancement of the twenty-two candidates efficiently carried out, with the aid of the visiting brethren from Malta, a short address was delivered by the W.M. on the special interest of Mark Masonry for brethren in Tunis; he expressed his pleasure at the name of the Lodge, No. 222, serving as a memorial of the visit of the Installing Officer R.W. P.M.M. Kingston, and expressed a hope that it would ever continue as a memorial of his hard work and great popularity in the district over which he ruled. The D.G.M. having returned thanks, the W.M. invested the following Officers for the ensuing year, Bros. Rev. E. B. Frankel S.W., G. Pentecost J.W., Dr. A. Perini M.O., D. N. Cassanello S.O., J. J. Gardiner J.O., A. Blanch Treasurer, S. Souiller Secretary, P.M. Paleologo Registrar of Marks, M. Le Gallais S.D., E. Nurri J.D., V. C. Clement D. of C.; V. Finzi and E. Gardelle Stewards, H. Haylock Tyler. The Mark Lodge was then closed in ancient form at 10 p.m.

On Wednesday, the 6th June, at 4 p.m., the founders of the Ancient Carthage Royal Arch Chapter, No. 1717, assembled in the Masonic Hall to witness its consecration, and the installation of the first principal elect, E. Comp. A. M. Broadley W.M. 1717. The warrant having been read by the acting Scribe E., an elaborate address on the history, scope and aim of R.A. Masonry was delivered by the Consecrating Officer, E. Comp. Kingston P.Z. R.A.C. No. 349, which was listened to with marked attention, and highly appreciated. The Scribe E. elect, Comp. the Rev. E. B. Frankel, offered up a prayer, during which the consecrating elements were poured out, and afterwards incensed the four corners of the building according to ancient custom. The Chapter being declared consecrated, E. Comp. Kingston proceeded to instal in the first chair the Principal Z. elect, E. Comp. A. M. Broadley, as designated in the charter signed by the Three Grand Principals of England, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Lord Skelmersdale and Lord de Tabley, and I. Comp. Reichelman P.M. 515 in the third chair, while he himself, in conformity with the provisions of the warrant, assumed the chair of H. The following M.M.'s were then introduced to receive at their hands the benefits of exaltation, viz., W. Bros. Mugnaini 32°, Lenghi 33°, and the Baron Castellnuovo, all P.M.'s of Lodges under the G.O. of Italy; and Bros. the Chevalier Tulin de la Tunisie (Consul General for Germany), Chevalier J. Cubisol Consul for Denmark and Belgium, J. J. Gardiner C.E., J. B. Bourepaux, E. Gardelle, A. Blanch, G. B. Cassar, J. E. L. Barker C.E. and Dr. N. Cassanello. The Chapter was then adjourned till 8 o'clock, when Bros. the Professors Souiller and Clement, and E. Nurrie were exalted. Before the closing of the Chapter the M.E.Z. Comp. Broadley delivered a short address on the position and nature of the degree, and its relation with foreign Masonry. The Chapter being closed in ancient form, the Companions adjourned to a banquet, where the usual Masonic and Loyal toasts were honoured and enthusiastically received.

On the following day the R.W.D.G.M., accompanied by Bros. Broadley D.G.S.W. W.M. of 1717, and W. Bro. Reichelman D.G.J.W. and P.M. 515, together with all the Officers of the Ancient Carthage Lodge, paid a visit to the newly established Lodge, Il Risorgimento, working under the auspices of the G.O. of Italy. The W.M. of this Lodge is Bro. the Baron J. Castellnuovo M.D., Surgeon to the late King of Italy, and who, on the previous day, was exalted in the Ancient Carthage Chapter, and the subordinate Officers are as follow: Bros. Dr. Funaro S.W., Professor Vais 33° J.W., Professor Ayra Orator, G. Maltesopolo Sec., Pariente Treas., Attia D. of C., and J. Enriquez Almoner. The Lodge being opened in due form, the D.G.M. was received under the Arch of Steel, and with the honours peculiar to Italian Masonry. A most cordial reception was accorded to W. Bro. Broadley and his Officers, and Bro. Broadley returned thanks in appropriate terms. The work of the evening was proceeded with, and two candidates, Messrs. Parienti and Senigallia, satisfactorily initiated according to the peculiar Ritual practised in Italy. After the ceremony an address of much real value and research was delivered by the Orator, Bro. Professor Ayra, and listened to with deep attention by all present. At 9·30 the members and visitors, over sixty in number, adjourned to refreshment, and in order entered the beautiful and tastefully decorated banquetting room of the Lodge, which is held in one of those ancient Moorish palaces which excite the admiration of all European visitors. The room and tables were most elaborately decorated with flowers, national flags, &c. While speaking on this head, it would be difficult to accord too much praise to the courteous and hard working Stewards, Bros. Catalanotti, Attia, Sannino and Jedetchi, whose exertions added not a little to the perfect success of the entertainment, which can only be described as a dinner of the most elaborate kind. The toasts of the King of Italy and the G.M. of the G.O. of Italy having been drunk, coupled with that of our own Royal M.W.G.M., the W.M. proposed the health of the D.G.M. of Malta, in felicitous terms declaring that his visit to Tunis would be considered an epoch in the annals of Italian as well as English Masonry. The D.G.M. returned thanks, and W. Bro. Lenghi explained his remarks in Italian. The W.M. proceeded to propose the health of W. Bro. Broadley, whom he characterised as his co-worker in the Masonic ranks, and to him he attributed the credit of bringing about, by indefatigable exertion, the great Masonic revival now taking place in Tunis. W. Bro. Broadley returned thanks, declaring that the evening they had spent was a full recompense for any effort of his, and expressed a hope that harmony, affection and brotherly love would unite and cement the two sister Lodges of Ancient Carthage and Risorgimento, which might be appropriately considered as typifying the mutual goodwill and regard existing between the two nations to which they belonged. Several other toasts were proposed and drank with great enthusiasm, particularly that of an absent Bro., J. H. Stevens British Vice-Consul, at present recovering from severe illness, to which W. Bro. Broadley responded, and appropriately answered by proposing the health of his able medical adviser, Dr. Funaro, the S.W. of Lodge Risorgimento. The W.M. having to leave for Goletta by special train, placed W. Bro. Broadley in charge of the Lodge, and the harmony of the evening was continued till a late hour, when a burst of enthusiasm was awakened by the chairman proposing and giving the parting toast according to our English usage. The brethren separated about midnight, with but one feeling as to the reception accorded to them by their Italian brethren, viz., one of complete and universal satisfaction.

After a visit to the ruins of Carthage, and a few hours of needful repose on Friday, the R.W.D.G.M. and his officers proceeded to Goletta, on Saturday the 29th June, by the 10 a.m. train, accompanied by a large number of brethren belonging to both the Tunis Lodges. Here the party was received by the respected agents of the Tunisian Railway, Messrs. Williamson and Gardiner, and going on board the steam launch belonging to the Company, soon reached the steam ship "Lancefield," on which they embarked. All being prepared for departure, the last adieus were exchanged, and the Tunis brethren quitted the steamer, which soon left them and North Africa behind. Nothing more remains to be said, but that the R.W.D.G.M. during his visit, by his patience, courtesy and ability, earned the hearty good-will of every Mason in Tunis, English or foreign, and that his sojourn amongst them will ever be pleasantly and gratefully remembered in the days to come.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.—These highly-efficient remedies should be at once resorted to on the first appearance of febrile or bowel complaints. It is well known that during the heat of summer and early autumn the mucous membrane of the alimentary canal is peculiarly liable to become excited and inflamed, and then dysentery, diarrhœa, cramps, English cholera, and various other complaints of that nature are very frequent. To remedy these painful and dangerous diseases, Holloway's Ointment should be thoroughly rubbed into the surface of the stomach and bowels, and it will be found that so soon as it penetrates the skin, the vomiting and nausea will abate, the cramps and pain disappear, and all other symptoms quickly subside.

DISTRICT GRAND LODGE OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

AT the Quarterly Communication held at Freemasons' Hall on Monday, 15th April 1878, there were present—W. Bros. W. H. Simpson D.D.G.M. in the chair, Henry Westcott D.S.G.W., Wm. George Cassidy D.J.G.W., Rev. W. Beg M.D. LL.D. D.G.C., Nicholas Hopson D.G. Treas., A. Gardner D.G. Reg., N. Selfe Pres. Bd. Gen. Purp., R. Lewerthy D.G. Sec., M. Medway D.S.G.D., N. J. Robinson D.J.G.D., John Booth D.G.S. of W., F. B. Davidson D.G.D. of C., H. J. Wager D.G.A.D. of C., J. Carroll D.G. Organist, H. Perdrian D.G.A. Purs., S. A. De Lisa D.G.T., and other brethren. D.G. Lodge having been opened, the minutes of the Communication of the 21st January, also those of the Special Communication, held at Maitland, for the purpose of consecrating and dedicating the new Hall at that place, on the 25th February last, were severally read and confirmed.

The D.D.G.M. read a letter addressed to himself, from the D.G.M., regretting that he was unable, through indisposition, to attend D.G. Lodge that evening, and requested the D.D.G.M. to inform the members of D.G. Lodge that no change would be made in the Officers who had been appointed on the 19th November last; and also to state, for the information of D.G. Lodge, that a new Lodge, named the Goulburn, had been opened by himself, assisted by W. Bro. Hopson D.G. Treas., in Goulburn, on the 25th February last. The D.D.G.M. stated that the Committee elected at the January Communication to revise the By-Laws of D.G. Lodge, were unable to bring up their reports that evening. He had obtained the by-laws of the D.G. Lodge of Victoria to assist him, and had drafted a revised code for the consideration of the Committee. Their report would be brought up at the next Communication of D.G. Lodge. W. Bro. Webster P.S.D.G.D., read the Auditors' Report with Balance Sheets of D.G. Lodge, and Benevolent Fund for the past year. W. Bro. E. O. Smith P.D.D.G.M. said, as this was, according to their by-laws, the Annual Meeting, the D.G. Treasurer should be elected. This part of the business had been omitted in the agenda paper. Bro. Harper, W.M. 655, also supported this view of the matter. The D.D.G.M. said the Treasurer had been elected in November last, and in the opinion of the D.G.M. should hold office until the same month in the present year, but if it was the wish of D.G. Lodge, he had no objection to the election of Treasurer that evening. After some farther discussion it was decided to proceed to the election, when Bro. Webster proposed, and Bro. Westcott D.G.S.W. seconded, that Bro. Hopson be elected Treasurer for the ensuing year. This was put and carried. W. Bros. Davidson and Ballard were appointed Scrutineers for the election of six Past Masters to serve on the Board of General Purposes. A ballot having been taken, the result was declared as follows:—Bros. Webster 1169, Wager 390, Kennedy 1653, Monckton 937, D. Mitchell 1552, and Read 817. A ballot was then taken for the election of six Past Masters to serve on the Board of Benevolence; the Scrutineers declaring the result of the ballot as follows:—Bros. Webster 1169, Wager 390, Kennedy 1653, Monckton 937, D. Mitchell 1552, and Read 817. Bro. Medway S.D.G.D. moved, and Rev. Bro. Beg D.G. Chaplain seconded, that Bro. D. Mitchell W.M. 390, and Bro. Mulholland P.M. 656, be elected Auditors for the ensuing year, which motion was duly carried. The D.G. Sec. stated that no meetings of Committee of General Purposes had been held during the past year. Bro. Wager, President, brought up the Report of the Committee of Benevolence, showing the amount voted in relief of applicants since last Communication to be £27, and the amount granted during the past year £216. The D.G. Sec. brought up the Report of the Committee of Orphan Society, with the Balance Sheet for the year ending in January last, which was read and ordered to be printed and circulated. Bro. Hopson, D.G. Treasurer, proposed, seconded by Bro. Taylor, acting S.D.G.W., that the Secretary's Salary be the same as last year, namely, £150,—carried. The same brother moved that the salary of Tyler be the same as last year, namely, £8. This was seconded by Bro. Davis P.M. 655, and carried.

The D.D.G.M., in reply to a question from W. Bro. E. O. Smith P.D.D.G.M., said the D.G.M. was not aware that any distinguishing badge was worn by members of the Lodge Empress of India.

W. Bro. E. O. Smith P.D.D.G.M. said the D.G.M. had stated he would only hold office for three years, and was proceeding to comment thereon, when Rev. Bro. Beg, D.G. Chaplain, rose to a point of order, and said the remarks of Bro. Smith were out of order as the question was not before the D.G. Lodge. The D.D.G.M. ruled the discussion out of order, the subject was not before the D.G. Lodge that evening, the proper time to discuss the matter would be when it came before them in the new by-laws, he also declined to answer questions of which proper notice had not been given to the District Grand Lodge. The business being ended, the D.G. Lodge was closed in form.

From the balance sheet of D.G. Lodge, we find that the New South Wales Freemasons' Orphan Society has a balance in hand of £532 15s 3d, besides £3,437 invested in shares of the Freemasons' Hall Co., and £1,100 in Government Debentures. The Masonic Benevolent Fund also exhibits a most satisfactory condition, there being, after payment of all charges, a cash balance of £101 15s 11d, with £300 on deposit, and £100 invested in Government Debentures. Thus, the two Masonic Charity Funds of New South Wales together possess property representing £6,633 11s 2d, a result, we feel sure, that the brethren of that district must be highly satisfied with, showing as it does that during times of prosperity they are not unmindful to lay up funds which hereafter may serve to relieve any who from unforeseen circumstances may have occasion to avail themselves of their benefits.

Provincial Grand Lodge of Hertfordshire will be held on Friday next, at Watford, under the banner of the Watford Lodge, SUMMER FESTIVAL OF THE NEW CONCORD LODGE, No. 813.

IN these days of Summer Festivals the first and most important question to decide is,—where to go? Some like a water trip, others are particularly averse to that mode of locomotion, while few can say they enjoy a long journey by train during such hot weather as we usually experience at this season of the year. We are, therefore, pleased to hear of any place which offers accommodation for ourselves and friends and yet is within easy reach from all parts of London. We feel sure that those who visited the Zoological Gardens on Thursday last, to take part in the festival of the New Concord Lodge, will agree with us, that here are to be found such attractions as are not attainable elsewhere within a reasonable distance. Such of our friends as were able to spare an hour or two previous to the meeting found a pleasure in inspecting the varied collection of the Zoological Society, and may have had an opportunity of judging of the effect of the surroundings on the appetites of the wild residents of the Gardens. Bro. Trotman, who has the management of the refreshment department, has too wide a reputation to need praise from us, still we have pleasure in adding our meed to the innumerable recognitions he has received. The meeting of Thursday was the first Masonic gathering that has been held in the Gardens of the Zoological Society, but we feel sure that it will not be the last; in fact, as we write, we are informed that the Belgrave Lodge intend holding their Festival there on Thursday next. If they are favoured with fine weather, we predict for them a successful gathering. At the conclusion of the banquet, Bro. Stead, the W.M., who occupied the chair, gave the toast of the Queen, which having been duly honoured, was followed by that of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, H.R.H. the Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal family. After a song, the president proposed the Pro G.M., the Dep. G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers. With this toast he had the pleasure of coupling the name of Bro. Buss, who he felt sure was heartily welcomed by every member of the Lodge. Bro. Buss in his reply referred to the mention that had lately been made by the heads of the Craft to the pleasure they experience in seeing ladies join in banquets connected with the Order. He thought it would be a source of gratification for the Grand Officers to see such good feeling as always prevailed at the New Concord Lodge. With the next toast, that of the Masonic Charities, the W.M. coupled the name of Bro. Gallant, who briefly enumerated, for the benefit of the ladies and non-Masons who were present, the various Institutions connected with the Craft, and the particular work they were appointed to carry out. Prosperity to the New Concord Lodge was next given, coupled with the name of the Past Masters thereof. To this toast Bro. Main responded. Being one of the oldest members of the Lodge, he could refer to its prosperity with pride. In the first two years of their existence they had made themselves Vice Presidents of the three Charities, since that time they had never lost an opportunity of working for the benefit of the Craft. He felt that what they had done for the Charities was a sure proof, if any were needed, that they had not wasted their money. Bro. Harper the S.W. of the Lodge gave the health of the President, to most of whom present he was personally known, but to those who had not the pleasure of his acquaintance the speaker could assure them he was a true friend and a brother in every sense of the word. Bro. Stead briefly acknowledged the compliment paid him. If in introducing the various toasts, or in responding to the kind remarks made in reference to himself, he had not said all that was necessary, he must excuse himself on account of time being limited. He felt he had the good wishes of the members of this Lodge, on all of whom he could rely for support. He then gave the health of the Vice-President, coupling with the toast the Officers and Stewards of the Lodge. Bro. Harper responded. The Visitors were next honoured. The members of the New Concord always held this toast in high esteem, and were always pleased to receive visitors. Bro. Painter of the Belgrave Lodge replied, he felt that the Visitors had one and all enjoyed themselves, and were greatly indebted to their hosts for providing so pleasant an entertainment. The Masonic Press was next given, coupled with the name of Bro. W. W. Morgan jun., and then Bro. Cusworth I.P.M. proposed the health of the Ladies, calling upon Bro. Thomas to respond on their behalf. This brother did so, and thanked the brethren for having remembered the ladies when making arrangements for their Summer Festival. The party then repaired to the lawn, and there enjoyed themselves until the lateness of the hour suggested the desirability of the homeward journey. The musical arrangements were entrusted to Mr. Arthur Jarratt, who was assisted by Miss Matilda Roby and Mr. H. Seligman, who carried out their duties in first rate style. Especial praise is due to Miss Roby, whose rendering of the two songs entrusted to her called forth well merited applause; in the case of the latter the demand for an encore was kindly acceded to.

THE AMERICAN MASONIC PILGRIMAGE.

ON Thursday next the Pilgrims of the Mary Commandery, No. 36 (K.T.), Philadelphia, U.S.A., who arrived at Moville this week by the Anchoria from New York, and who are this day en route from Belfast to Glasgow, will visit the ancient city of York, the scene of the earliest traditional gatherings of Freemasons in England, and the centre of so much that is interesting in the history of our country. We are glad to hear that they are to meet with such a truly Masonic reception in the old capital of the North as will prove to them that there is still a living spirit in the brethren of the mother country, and that the exercise of hospitality has not been forgotten in the great northern county. The pilgrims will reach York vid Leeds on the evening of the 24th inst., and will stay at the New Station Hotel. On the following morning they will be conducted by the W.M. of the Eboracum Lodge, No. 1611, assisted by several brethren, to the various places of interest in the city. The ruins of St. Mary's Abbey, the Cathedral, the walls and ancient gateways, will all be inspected, and in the afternoon the Pilgrims will be entertained at luncheon by the members of the Eboracum Lodge. At 4 p.m. there will be an emergency meeting of the Ancient Ebor Preceptory of Knight Templars, No. 101, at which the American members of the Order will be present, when the ceremonies of reception and installation will be worked by a number of Preceptors and Officers of the Order, and the visitors will receive a formal welcome. At 7 p.m. there will be a grand banquet at the Station Hotel, under the banners of the Ancient Ebor Preceptory and Priory of Malta, at which the Americans will be the guests of the Knight Templars of York. By the kind permission of Bro. Major T. B. Shaw-Hellier of the 4th Royal Irish Dragoon Guards (W.M. of the St. Patrick's Lodge, No. 295 I.C.), the band of that regiment will be in attendance at the banquet, and will perform a selection of appropriate music. A novel feature in the banquet will be the introduction of ladies, who will be present during the proceedings. We may add that although the banquet is given by the Knight Templars, Masons of all grades may be present. On Friday morning the Pilgrims take their departure for Sheffield, where we understand they will receive an equally warm welcome from the united Craft Lodges of that city.

THE LAUNCH AT CLACTON-ON-SEA.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Your remarks on the unsatisfactory arrangements for the comfort and convenience of brethren who were present at the launch of our Life-boat, certainly do not err on the side of severity; on the contrary, I think you have drawn it too mild, and that a sharper castigation should have been administered to the Clactonian small fry, who are already aping the conduct of the frog in the fable, and imagine they are an important municipality. I believe there is a law in Essex by which those whose duty it is to attend Prov. G. Lodge, and who do not put in an appearance, are fined a brace of guineas. Those present therefore were there in the fulfilment of a duty with a penalty attached to its non-fulfilment. But even if this were not the case, the majority of those present had travelled many miles in order, as far as each individually was concerned, to make the launch as great a success as possible. But the launch and the procession over, the Masons, who with their Life-boat had formed the principal attraction, were left to shift for themselves, while the Committee and its principal guests, Lord Skelmersdale, &c., &c., who could not be ignored, sat down to banquet. Looking at the matter from a purely business point of view, the show was a capital paying advertisement to Clacton-on-Sea, and the local Committee should not have ignored those who helped to make the day a success. For a man to be compelled to travel sixty or seventy miles to take a part in a show for the benefit of others, and then to be ignored by those others, well—it is simply disgusting.

Fraternally yours,

"OBSERVER."

A meeting of the Rose Croix Chapter will be held at the Phœnix Lodge, Portsmouth, on Monday evening, when several distinguished visitors of the degree are expected to attend.

MARK MASONRY.

GRAND LODGE OF THE PROVINCE OF HAMPSHIRE AND ISLE OF WIGHT.

THE Most Worshipful Grand Master of the above Province, the Reverend Bro. George Raymond Portal, M.A., with his Officers, honoured the Aldershot Mark Lodge, No. 54, by holding their annual meeting at the Assembly Rooms, Aldershot, on Wednesday 10th July, 1878. The Lodge was tyled at 2.30 p.m., when there were present:—The M.W. and Reverend Bro. G. R. Portal, M.A., in the chair. The Very Worshipful Bro. W. Hickman, Deputy Prov. Grand Master; The Very Worshipful and Reverend Bro. Johnson, No. 17, Prov. Grand Chaplain; The Very Worshipful Bro. J. E. Le Feuvre, Prov. Grand Secretary; Worshipful Bro. R. Eve, No. 54, Prov. Senior Grand Warden; Worshipful Bro. Groves, No. 17, Prov. Grand Junior Warden; Worshipful Bro. Harrison, No. 62, Prov. Grand Deacon; Worshipful Bro. Osborne, No. 17, Prov. Grand Sword Bearer; Worshipful Bro. T. J. Pulley, No. 54, Prov. Grand Director of Ceremonies; Bros. Hacker, Gold, Adnett, Douglas, Benham, Nichols, Westall, Dormor, Bruce, Ellis, White, and others of Lodge 54. After the ordinary business of the Lodge, the M.W. Prov. Grand Master invested his Officers for ensuing twelve months as follow:—Very Worshipful Bro. Hickman, Deputy Prov. Grand Master; Worshipful Bro. Everard, No. 17, Senior Grand Warden; Bro. Henry Hacker, No. 54, Junior Grand Warden; Reverend Bro. Johnson, No. 17, Grand Chaplain; Bro. J. Lillywhite, No. 17, Grand Treasurer; Bro. J. E. Le Feuvre, No. 63, Grand Secretary; Bro. Thos. Benham, No. 54, Senior Grand Deacon; Bro. Osborne, No. 17, Junior Grand Deacon; Bro. Douglas, No. 54, Master Overseer; Bro. Payne, No. 2, Senior Overseer; Bro. Harrison, No. 62, Junior Overseer; Bro. Cole, No. 54, Inspector of Works; Bro. McKenzie, No. 54, Assistant Director of Ceremonies; Bro. Askham, No. 54, Inner Guard. The business of the Lodge being over, it was closed in due form after solemn prayer. The brethren then retired to an excellent banquet, which was provided at the Wellington Hotel and served in that recherché style for which this hotel is noted. After the usual loyal toasts had been proposed and drunk with that enthusiasm which characterises Freemasons, the Prov. Grand Master expressed the great satisfaction experienced in complimenting the Master, Wardens and members of the Aldershot Lodge upon having made during the past two years greater progress than any other Lodge in the Province. The Prov. Grand Master then proposed the health of the "Provincial Officers" which was responded to by Worshipful Bro. Hickman and Bro. Eve, who stated that it afforded the brethren of the Aldershot Lodge much pleasure in having the honour to entertain the members of the Provincial Grand Lodge, and still more to hear the complimentary terms in which the Most Worshipful Prov. Grand Master had been pleased to speak of their efforts to promote the best interests of Freemasonry in this district, and that he might depend that what had been done in the past was an earnest of their zeal in the future. The Deputy Prov. Grand Master then proposed the health of the "Master, Wardens, and Members of the Aldershot Lodge." Bro. Hacker, in the absence of the W.M., responded, and thanked the Provincial Grand Master for the honour done the Lodge in appointing Aldershot for the meeting this year, and also in selecting members of that Lodge for his Officers. After some excellent songs by Bros. Eve, Adnett, White, and Hacker, the brethren left, at an early hour.

United Service Lodge, 1,428.—The installation of Bro. James Leggett as Worshipful Master of this Lodge took place at the Masonic Hall, Highbury-street, Portsmouth, on Friday 12th inst. About 130 members and visitors attended. The Lodge met at three o'clock, and after the ordinary business on the notice paper had been transacted, the W.M. elect was presented to the installing master (Bro. H. Townsend, the retiring W.M.) and duly installed, in accordance with the ancient customs of the Craft, the Board of Installed Masters being composed of the following:—Bros. M. E. Frost P.G. Treasurer. G. S. Lancaster P.P.G. Warden, E. G. Holbrook P.P.G. Registrar, Dr. J. O'Connor W.M. 257, Payne W.M. 342, H. Threndingham W.M. 487, G. Felton Lancaster P.M. 903, A. L. Emanuel P.M. 1069, Lieut. J. R. W. Quinn W.M. St. Aubyn Lodge 954, Bros. Lieut. Bourke, J. R. Wilson, Holmes, Lind, Jackson, and Farran, P.M.'s of the Lodge. Among the other Visitors were Bros. R. Barnes J.W. 342, R. W. Mitchell J.W. 903, W. R. Bowden P.G. Pursvt. (Oxon), Palsgrave S.D. 487, Lieutenant W. M. Noel, R.E., St. John and St. Paul 349 D.G. Supt. of Works, T. Page 342, Outridge I.G. 487, &c., &c. At the conclusion of the ceremony of installation, which was ably and impressively conducted by Bro. Townsend, the following brethren were appointed Officers of the Lodge:—Bros. Williams S.W., John J.W., T. Mares Treasurer, Woodward Secretary, Strick S.D., May J.D., J. R. Wilson P.M. D.C., Wilton Organist, Laverty I.G., Nesder and Walton Stewards, Mansell and Vinnicombe Tylers. The W.M. subsequently presented a P.M.'s jewel (which had been subscribed for by the members of the Lodge) to Bro. Townsend, referring in eulogistic terms to his exertions for the welfare of the Lodge during his year of office. The Treasurer's account showed the Lodge to be in a highly satisfactory financial position, and notices of motion were given to vote the sum of 10 guineas to the widow of a deceased member, 10 guineas to the Eurydice Relief Fund, and £50 to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. The banquet was served in the large dining hall of the Lodge, the tables being tastefully arranged, a choice collection of foliage and other plants from Messrs. Cripps and Son, Portsea, adding considerably to the effect. About 100 members and visitors attended, the W.M. presiding. The usual toasts were given from the chair. Bro. Frost, in responding for the Provincial Grand Officers, alluded to the fact of his having installed Bro. Townsend as W.M. twelve months since. He said he then felt he would do credit to the Craft by his working, and honour to the Lodge, and he thought this had been proved. The next toast, "The W.M.," was proposed by Bro. Townsend, the I.P.M., and received with great enthusiasm. In giving the toast, Bro. Townsend said it had been his pleasing duty that evening to instal in his stead Bro. Leggett, one of the oldest members of the Lodge, and he felt sure if his zeal and attention to the duties as W.M. were in keeping with what he had hitherto shown, they would have no cause to regret the choice they had made. Having referred to the possible absence of the W.M. on duty during some portion of the year, Bro. Townsend said he felt it was not fair to a brother who had attained a position entitling him to the chair that he should be debarred from filling the post of W.M. in consequence of his duties in the service to which he might happen to belong. The toast was drunk with musical honours. The Worshipful Master, in acknowledging the hearty reception accorded to the toast, assured the members of the Lodge he would do his best to keep up the name of that Lodge—one of the youngest, but the strongest in number, and by no means the weakest in funds, as their balance-sheet would show (Applause.) He should do his utmost to keep up the position of the Lodge—no easy task after succeeding their late W.M. In proposing the health of the Installing Master, the W.M. said he was sure they would all join in saying he had performed the ceremony in a most able manner. He also spoke of his services to the Lodge during the past year, a reference which evoked expressions of approval from all present. Bro. Townsend, in acknowledgment, said he had always made it his study, from the foundation of the Lodge, to watch its interests. They had had their little drawbacks at times, but the present position of the Lodge showed that it had not suffered from them. Alluding to the presentation made him in the Lodge, he said he esteemed it a very high compliment. He looked forward to the time when the Lodge would have a building of its own, worthy the united services (Applause.) It only required a long and strong pull of all hands, and he hoped in a month or two to submit a scheme which would meet with their approval (Hear, hear.) Other toasts followed, "The Visitors" being proposed by Bro. Lieut. S. G. T. Bourke P.M., and responded to by Bro. Bowden, P.G. Pursvt. (Oxon). Some excellent songs were given during the evening, those by Bro. Sylvester being specially worthy of mention. The new W.M. enters upon his year of office under the most favourable auspices, the Lodge being, as already stated, numerically and financially strong.—Portsmouth Times.

NEW ZEALAND.

AT the invitation of the Lodge Waitemata, E.C., a large gathering of Masons was held at the Masonic Hotel, Auckland, on 21st May, to attend a banquet, as a mark of respect on the occasion of the departure from the district of the R.W.D.G.M. Bro. Geo. S. Graham. The Lodge business, after the Lodge had been opened, was formally adjourned for the specific business of the evening. A banquet was spread in the Lodge-room by Bro. Hood, proprietor, at which all the customary viands and wines were supplied regardless of cost. Bro. G. S. Graham presided, and amongst the visitors and guests were Bros. W. Lodder A.G.J.W., H. G. Wade D.G. Sec., J. Warren D.G.J.W., Moet W.M. Lodge Rodney, Walker R.W.M. St. Andrew. The whole of the Officers of the Lodge Ara which attended as a Lodge were represented, and the other Lodges were all fully represented. The principal Officers were Bros. Cole W.M. of Lodge Waitemata, P.M. Warren, Moet W.M. Rodney, Lery W.M. Prince of Wales, Buchanan W.M. Tauranga; P.M.'s Mitchell, Rees, Burns, Lears; Bros. Haase Remuera Lodge. In fact, all the Lodges were fully represented. Apologies for unavoidable absence were received from Bro. F. Whitaker R.W.P.G.M., S.C., G. P. Pierce R.W.P.G.M., I.C., Nelson W.M. and others. After the supper, the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and heartily responded to. Bro. P.M. Lodder proposed the toast of the Grand Masters of the three Masonic Constitutions, coupled with the names of Bros. Graham, Whitaker, and Pierce. In the course of his address he bore testimony to the efforts of Bro. Graham in the cause of Masonry. Bro. Graham in reply expressed regret at having to offer apologies from Bros. Pierce and Whitaker. He thanked those present for the manner in which they had responded to the toast, and for the good fellowship with which he had always been received. Although absent in body from them for a short period, he would be present in spirit. He referred more particularly to his connection with Lodge Waitemata, and expressed his hearty good wishes to the brethren generally, and more especially to Bro. Lodder, who had rendered him such able and willing assistance. Bro. Wade proposed the toast of the Senior Lodge Ara, referring to the close fraternal connection which had existed between that Lodge and Waitemata. Bro. Wilcox responded. Bro. Hatswell proposed the toast of "the Sister Lodges, which was responded to by the Visitors present. In replying to this toast Bro. Buchanan, from Gisborne, gave some curious reminiscences. He had instituted Lodge Waitemata, and had at the installation taken one of the junior offices. In 1854 he became W.M. On looking around him he could see few of the old faces. His old friends had gone, but Masonry was still progressing. The good work the old masters had performed still existed, and where they sowed, fruit was borne. The various Lodges had prospered, and he believed they would carry Masonry through New Zealand till it flourished as it did in England. Bro. Burns proposed the toast of the "Visiting Brethren, coupled with name of Bro. Irving." Bro. Irving responded in a neat speech, alluding to the cordiality which he found existing amongst the Auckland lodges. He referred to the subject of the building of a new hall in Auckland, also to that of the formation of a district Grand Lodge in Auckland for the colonies of New Zealand. Bro. Buchanan proposed the toast of "The W.M. of Lodge Waitemata," and Bro. Cole responded, proposing the toast of "The R.W.D.G.M. Bro. Graham." To this the latter responded. A number of other toasts, including "The health of Bros. Wade and Burns," "The Press," "The Host and Hostess," and others followed. Intervening between the speeches were a numbers of songs, and a very interesting and pleasant evening was spent.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

IN the House of Lords on Thursday last, after a question by Earl Granville as to when our Plenipotentiaries would arrive in London, the Foreign Jurisdiction and Epping Forest Bills—the former on the motion of the Lord Chancellor, and the latter on the motion of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon—were read a second time. The Earl of Shaftesbury then rose and asked if the Government intended to maintain or suppress slavery in Cyprus, as they had done in India. Lord Stanley thought the question was put prematurely, and the Duke of Richmond and Gordon said the Government would be able to state the course they intended to pursue when they had received the report of Sir Garnet Wolseley. Earl Granville having asked if the island possessed any harbours, and the Earl of Kimberley having said that he saw no reason why the Government should not make a general declaration against slavery, the Duke of Richmond and Gordon replied that there was no harbour in the widest sense in Cyprus, but there were excellent anchorages, while as for slavery, he thought their action in Zanzibar and their Convention with Egypt were evidence that the Government were not less concerned than others about the abolition of slavery. Vivisection, Muzzle v. Breech-loading Guns, and Railway Platforms, occupied their Lordships' attention on Friday for a short time. On Monday, a question as to when the Treaty would be on the table of the House, was shortly afterwards followed by another respecting the sanitary condition of the island. Then an amendment of their Lordships to the Poor Law Act Amendment Bill, which had not found favour with the Commons, was supported by 41 to 27 Other Bills were dealt with, and in the course of the debate which followed a question by Lord Waveney as to the number of English officers with Indian Regiments, to which Lord Cranbrook replied satisfactorily, the Duke of Cambridge bore splendid testimony to the efficiency of the Indian troops, and spoke most highly of what he had seen of them during his visit to Malta. Lord Napier of Magdala, Lord Napier and Ettrick, Lord Lawrence, and the Earl of Northbrook also spoke on the subject. On Tuesday, Lord Dunsany questioned the use of certain terms in the Annexe to the Anglo-Turkish Convention, and Lord Cranbrook answered the objections. His Lordship then announced that the ill-fated Eurydice, which was struck by a squall some months since, and went down with nearly all on board, had been raised from the sandy bed on which it had gradually settled down and moved to a firm bottom some 180 feet nearer the shore. The vessel has since been got into shallow water.

Questions respecting Cyprus, its institutions, and its harbours, if any, were put in the House of Commons on Thursday, after which an unsuccessful attempt was made to get rid of the Irish Sunday Closing Bill, the result being that the House agreed by a large majority to go into Committee and consider the amendments. On Friday, further amendments were made in Committee to the Highways Bill, after which the House went into Committee on the Admiralty and War Office Retirement of Officers Bill, and made some progress with it. At the evening sitting, a resolution was submitted by Mr. Henry, respecting the circumstances attending the death of the released Fenian convict, Sergeant M'Carthy, but it was defeated by 101 to 35. On Monday, a whole batch of questions about Turkey, Cyprus, Russia, &c., was asked, after which the Marquis of Hartington sought to obtain a statement from the Chancellor of the Exchequer as to the progress of business during the remainder of the Session. The Intermediate Education (Ireland) Bill was read a second time on the motion of Mr. Lowther, after congratulatory speeches from all parts of the House. Having passed the Irish Education Votes in Committee of Supply, the House rose. On Tuesday, after a protracted discussion and several divisions, the House agreed to go into Committee on the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Bill, but no progress was made with it, and on Wednesday afternoon, after further sparring, the House settled down and got as far as Clause 9.

By the time these lines meet the eye of our readers the Queen will have arrived at Osborne, where she will be visited by the Prime Minister. Her departure from Windsor would have taken place earlier in the week, had not her Majesty waited in order that she might receive the Premier's visit; but his lordship needed a longer period of repose after the fatigues of his journey, and his recent attack of bronchitis. However the Marquis of Salisbury has had an audience of the Queen, and presented formally to her Majesty the Berlin Treaty. The Prince and Princess of Wales have been on a visit to Bristol to see the Bath and West of England Agricultural Show, and their reception, as usual, was of a most enthusiastic character. They have likewise been down to Aldershott, where a review and sham fight of the force quartered there was held in their presence, the Duke of Cambridge being likewise present. The Prince has since left London for Paris, and His Royal Highness was present at the grand English Concert given in the Exhibition Palace.

We consider that Freemasonry is still pretty hard at work, even though it is holiday time. The annual gathering of the Prov. Grand Lodge of Surrey was held at Dorking on Tuesday, under the presidency of the very popular Prov. G.M., General Brownrigg, C.B., and the following day the annual Festival of the Mark Benevolent Fund was held at the Alexandra Palace, the chair being taken by Lord Skelmersdale, Grand Mark Master of England and Wales, &c. Particulars of these gatherings will be found elsewhere. The Provincial Grand Lodge of Hertfordshire will hold its annual meeting next week at the Freemasons' Hall, Watford, the day fixed being Friday, the 26th instant. The P.G. Lodge will be opened at three p.m., and after the transaction of business, a banquet will follow.

The reception accorded to the Earl of Beaconsfield and the Marquis of Salisbury on their return from Berlin, surpasses in enthusiasm anything of the kind which has occurred during the present generation, or it may be said, perhaps, during this century. There was hardly any display—no banners and troops, and gay equipages. The landing-stage at Dover, and the Station at Charing Cross, were decorated and carpeted, and the fortunate hundreds who were able to secure admission within its precincts saw a pretty sight. Outside, right away to Downing Street, there was an enormous gathering of the people, and both at Dover and in the Metropolis their Lordships were greeted with applause which was thoroughly genuine and spontaneously given. At Dover an address was presented, and Lord Beaconsfield in acknowledging it, very gracefully pointed out that it should have been addressed to his colleague as well as to himself, as the country was as much indebted to the one as to the other. He excused the omission, however, on the very probable ground that it was not known the two Ministers were travelling together. On reaching Downing Street, the crowd surged in, and there was a tremendous shout for the Premier, who shortly afterwards appeared on the balcony of his house, and briefly addressed those present. The Marquis of Salisbury likewise briefly responded to a similar call for him, after which the crowd dispersed. It was arranged that the Prime Minister should make a statement when in his place in the House of Lords on Thursday, but a dispatch from Lord Salisbury was published early in the week, so that we knew pretty well beforehand the character of the statement it was his intention to make.

The weather has been of unusual brilliance all this week, and the business at Wimbledon has progressed most favourably, the attendance of visitors being unusually great. To-day, the principal prizes will be given away by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, but all the contests are not settled at the time of writing. Lowe, of the Queen's Westminsters, was the winner of the Silver Medal and £60 in the first stage for the Queen's Prize, but the prize itself, consisting of £250 given by the Queen, with Gold Medal of the National Rifle Association, was carried off by Private Rae of the 11th Stirling R.V., with a score of 78, Lieut.-Col. Walrond of 1st Devon being second with 77. Most of the other important contests have been settled. The Lords have beaten the Commons by 443 to 435 points. England has won the International Trophy from its only competitor, Ireland, as Scotland, for reasons of its own, has taken no part in this trial of skill for the last two or three years. Cambridge has beaten Oxford; and Cheltenham has won the Public Schools' Veteran Match, while the Donegal Cup, given to the winners of a match between Volunteers and Regulars, has been taken by the former by 1,002 points to 987. There have also been several good matches in Cricket, notably that between Eton and Harrow, played at Lord's on Friday and Saturday, when the latter won by 20 runs, the scores being—Harrow, 119 and 224; Eton, 117 and 206. The Australians have beaten Leicestershire by eight wickets, A. Bannerman making 133 in his second innings; and the match between Middlesex and Notts was left drawn, the latter having two wickets to fall and 19 runs to make to secure victory.

Sir Garnet Wolseley has been appointed Administrator of Cyprus by the style of Lord High Commissioner and Commander-in-chief. The island has already been taken possession of by our forces, under Vice-Admiral Lord William Hay, the transfer of sovereignty from the Turkish to the English authorities having been made satisfactorily. The new Administrator reached Malta on Wednesday, and on Thursday the embarkation of troops for Cyprus commenced. The island will be garrisoned by the Indian contingent and three British regiments, in all 10,000 men.

According to advices received on Thursday an unarmed English boat has been fired on by the Russian force quartered in the Gulf of Saros. It had been sent in search of some English sailors who had landed in the Russian lines and were detained there, and was flying a white flag when the alleged outrage took place.

The work of the Congress was concluded on Saturday, when the treaty was signed, after which the Plenipotentiaries were entertained at a banquet at the White Palace by the Crown Prince and Princess of Germany, all being present except the Earl of Beaconsfield and Prince Gortschakoff, who were prevented by indisposition. Thus, after the anxieties of the last year, thanks to the firmness of ministers, we escape war and have instead a peace with honour, as the Prime Minister put it, which will gratify the sovereign, and, it is hoped, be approved of by the nation. We need not dwell on the changes sanctioned by the treaty. We think, however, that Lord Salisbury's despatch is a sufficient defence of the work our negotiators have accomplished, and shows satisfactorily that the Government has consistently followed the main principles laid down in the noble Lord's despatch of 1st April. Now that peace is secured, we ought to emerge from our state of depression, especially as a new field of enterprise for our people has been opened up in Cyprus and Asia Minor, to which our Protectorate extends. Let us hope this will be the case.

The following new lists, or additions to former lists, have been received since the day of the Festival of the Boys' School, namely:—METROPOLIS—Lodge No. 1, £10 10s*; No. 4, £10 10s*; No. 11 (addition), £1 1s*; No. 749, £13 18s; No. 860 (addition), £5 5s*; Bro. Lewis, £10 10s*. PROVINCIAL—Bristol (addition), £6 6s*; Essex, Lodge No. 1000 (addition), £5 5s, and Lancashire East, Lodge No. 1170, £21*; Somersetshire, £52 10s; Surrey, No. 452, £10 10s*; Sussex, Lodge No. 1466 (addition), £29 8s*. Those marked (*) were included in the list we published last week, but no account was taken of them in the Analysis. These amounts raise the product of the Festival thus far to £10,345 15s 7d.

It may be as well to remind our readers that for some time past a scheme has been on foot in West Yorkshire to raise a Presentation in Perpetuity to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, to be called the "Bentley Shaw Presentation," in memory of that most excellent and respected brother, Bentley Shaw, for eleven years Deputy Provincial Grand Master of West Yorkshire, and at the time of his death P.G. Superintendent of the Prov. Grand Chapter. Sir Henry Edwards, Bart., P.G.M., has headed the list with a donation of £50, and the sum to be raised is One Thousand Guineas.

The Speech Day at Christ's Hospital was held on Wednesday under the presidency of the Lord Mayor, the Lady Mayoress and the Sheriffs being likewise present. Among those who took a leading part in the proceedings were Bros. J. D. Allcroft, M.P., the Treasurer of the School; Rev. A. H. Lee, the Head Master; and Dr. Bretto, French Master. Everything passed off well.

QUARTERLY COURT OF THE GIRLS' SCHOOL.

COLONEL Creaton presided over the Quarterly Court of this Institution, which was held on Saturday, at Freemasons' Hall. The brethren who attended were—Bros. J. Wordsworth, H. Browse, H. A. Dubois, Thomas Massa, H. Massey, A. H. Tattershall, J. Terry, T. R. Eames, W. Ashwell, C. G. Rushworth, and Hodges Secretary. The only business before the Court was adopting a recommendation of the General Committee to place twenty-nine girls on the list for the October Election, to declare three vacancies, and to consider Bro. Warren's notice of motion for altering Rule 74 of the Institution, by omitting the words: "in the sum of £300," and inserting, in lieu thereof, "in such sum as the Committee shall from time to time deem fit," also to omit the word "two" in the first line, and add in line four, after the word "him," "by Guarantee Society or otherwise." The Court agreed to the alteration, and adjourned.

QUARTERLY COURT OF THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

A QUARTERLY General Court of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys was held on Monday, at Freemasons' Hall, Col. Creaton presiding. Bros. F. Adlard, H. Muggeridge, Charles J. Perceval, H. Massey, Jas. Terry, H. Browse, and F. Binckes Sec. also attended. The letter of Bro. Binckes to the eldest son of the late Bro. Bentley Shaw, West Yorkshire, expressing the feeling of regret of the General Committee on the loss sustained by the death of Bro. Shaw, was read by Bro. Binckes, together with the answer received from Bro. J. Lancaster Shaw. These letters were ordered to be entered on the minutes. Eleven vacancies were declared for the October election, and sixty-seven candidates were placed on the list. Bro. Jesse Turner's motion, giving the Committee power to aid deserving boys who leave the Institution with £40 instead of £30, dropped for want of the presence of the mover. The Court then dissolved.

GRAND LODGE OF SURREY.

THIS Provincial Grand Lodge held its Annual Meeting on Wednesday, the 16th instant, under the banner of the Dorking Lodge, No. 1149, at the Public Hall, Dorking. The R.W. Bro. General Studholme Brownrigg, C.B., the Provincial Grand Master, presided. The brethren assembled at one o'clock, when amongst those present we noticed Bros. the Deputy Prov. G.M. the Rev. C. W. Arnold, M.A., G.C., the Rev. Ambrose William Hall, M.A., P.G.Ch., Charles Greenwood Prov. G. Sec., E. Marsh Prov. S.G.W., Charles Keen Prov. J.G.W., a goodly array of Present and Past Provincial Officers, as well as several visitors. Grand Lodge having been formally opened, the first business of the day was to call over the Roll of Lodges, and it was gratifying to note that each one in the Province was well represented. The minutes of the last Provincial meeting, held at Farnham, in July last, were then read, and on motion duly proposed and seconded, received confirmation. The R.W. Prov. G.M. then formally obligated his Deputy Prov. G.M., that ceremony not having hitherto been performed. The Report of the Finance and Audit Committee was next presented, and this showed the financial position of the Province was in a very satisfactory condition. The following amounts were voted:—To the Earlswood Asylum, ten guineas; to the Dorking National Schools, five guineas; and to the three central Masonic Institutions, ten guineas each; making a total of forty-five guineas as the amount dispensed by Prov. Grand Lodge in the cause of charity. This result is eminently satisfactory, and of this the Province may be proud. The election of Treasurer resulted in the reappointment for the twenty-second time of R.W. Bro. George Price. General Brownrigg then appointed and invested the following as his Officers for the ensuing twelve months:—Bros. Rev. C. W. Arnold Deputy G.M., Dr. Brushfield S.G.W., Dr. Spence J.G.W., Rev. Ambrose W. Hall G.C., George Price Treas., Milner G. Reg., C. Greenwood G. Sec. (reappointed for the twenty-second time), A. T. Jeffery S.D., Wells J.D., Street Supt. of Works, Owens D.C., Capt. Ormsby S.B., E. M. Lott Org., Stacey Purst., Speight Tyler; Browne, Taylor, Streeter, Honeywell, Lendrim, and Aldridge Grand Stewards. The Prov. Grand Officers were then saluted, and General Brownrigg addressed Grand Lodge. He was pleased to find the financial position of the Province was in so satisfactory a condition; indeed, he might congratulate the members on the progress that was being made. For himself, he had been especially favoured in having a most energetic and excellent Deputy, who had made it his business to pay an official visit to almost all the Lodges in the Province since last they met. The reports he makes touching these Lodges are necessarily of a confidential character, but on the whole they were favourable, and he could not but be pleased with the result. The speaker then urged on Masters of Lodges the necessity of making themselves competent to adequately fulfil the important duties devolving upon them, and urged that there could be no excuse, as but little labour was required to enable them to master the details. He did not wish it to be thought he wanted to interfere with the right of selection of the members of Lodges, but he held it of the highest importance that not only the Worshipful Master, but the Officers of the several Lodges should be able to do the work efficiently. He made it a point never to announce his visits, and in this he was followed by his Deputy. They both preferred dropping in at the several Lodges when opportunity offered. He would, in concluding his remarks, repeat what he had already said, that he was much pleased with the state of Freemasonry in his Province. In the course of the day's proceedings a discussion arose as to what course should be adopted in reference to the appointment of Stewards. The Prov. G. Master observed that he did not wish to make it a hard and fast rule, but his sympathies were in favour of presenting the collars of office to those brethren only who had served the office of Steward for the Province. Bro. C. Greenwood was in favour of the Stewards being selected from the senior Lodges of the Province, but in this it was anticipated there would be a difficulty; moreover, this would be scarcely fair, as these Lodges would monopolise the right to nominate brethren for the post. Eventually it seemed to be recognised that the appointment should be conferred, first, upon those Masters of Lodges who were desirous to hold the office, and then the Senior Officers might prefer their claims. Several letters—apologising for the inability of the writers to attend—were then read, amongst them being communications from Col. Burdett, Capt. Philips, &c. Provincial Grand Lodge was then closed, and the brethren repaired to the Parish Church of Dorking, which had kindly been placed at their disposal by the Vicar, the Rev. P. Ralph Atkinson, who conducted the service. The sermon was preached by the V.W. Bro. the Rev. Ambrose Hall, M.W. Prov. Grand Chaplain, who took for his text Jer. xxxii. 39,—"And I will give them one heart, and one way, that they may fear Me for ever, for the good of them, and of their children after them." Our esteemed and Rev. Brother commenced his remarks by alluding to the occasion that called forth these words from the prophet, and a consideration of their application to the gathering of the day. He saw before him a mixed congregation, some drawn thither by the singularity of the occasion of a body of Freemasons being assembled in their church, and some perhaps from feelings of curiosity, who thought they might gather from the crumbs that fell—or rather that were cast like bread upon the waters—some insight into those mysteries which it has been our custom, from time immemorial, to keep secret from the uninitiated or outer world. After a hope that the G.A.O.T.U. would bless what he was about to say, he assured the latter section of his hearers that, however we might choose to encircle our teachings with a cloud of mystery, that cloud had a silver lining; for our obligations contained nothing inconsistent with civil, moral, or religious duties. They might be assured of one thing—our Society was founded on the purest principles of piety and virtue, and was replete with valuable privileges. The true Mason would fear God for ever. At his first entry into our body, the aspirant is asked whether, in danger and in difficulty, he puts his trust in God? and he binds himself to succour a brother in infirmity, and to relieve his wants;—to love his neighbour. But his neighbour did not cease to be his neighbour if he was beyond the circle of the brotherhood. Our obligations embrace all. It was our duty to pour the oil of consolation upon the stricken conscience, to bind up the wounds of sin, to care for the afflicted. He (the preacher) felt sure that his Masonic brethren would go with him. He would now say a few words to them,—as Masons. Here he experienced a difficulty; when he looked upon the many eminent members of the Craft, who that day had left their homes to gather round their leaders in that important Province, he felt how little he had to offer for their instruction, and how much, Masonically, he needed to learn of them. As they, therefore, knew so well the duties to which they had bound themselves, he would only endeavour to refresh their memory with a few remarks upon the teachings, the principles, and the moral symbols which they possessed; and might the many excellent things which they had already learned be manifested in their allegorical lights—might they be blazoned forth to dignify and adorn the science. Would they, by example, teach morality,—do it by referring to the Master's jewel. Would they inculcate equality,—take the Senior Warden's for their emblem. For integrity,—let the Junior Warden's jewel be their symbol. Each told a Masonic lesson. Let them carry their thoughts back to that all glorious time when their great prototype, King Solomon, stood before the ark of God, and let it teach them how the light of God's countenance would shine on the dark places of the earth. Although the beautiful temple then built for His praise had long since crumbled into dust, yet the same God was still with them to answer their call when they called aright. Although He did not show Himself, yet He was still as present with them as when the Shechinah of old spoke to the Israelites out of the cloudy pillar from the mercy seat. In all their dealings let the square emblematically guide them to be upright, just and true; let the jewel lead them to rejoice in a brother Mason's good fortune; and if ever angry thoughts arose within their bosoms, let the compasses symbolically teach them to keep their passions within due bounds. These were some of the symbols of their Order, and by acting upon them they would not only be at peace within, but they would show to the outer world the true spirit that animated a Mason's heart. He urged them to practise those virtues both in their inner walk at home and in their outer pilgrimage among the children of men, so that they might know them by their fruits, just as they (Freemasons) knew each other by secret signs and tokens. They all knew that their system was founded on Brotherly Love, Relief and Truth—or, Charity. This was what he wished to impress upon the minds and hearts of his non-Masonic hearers, for he knew that there existed in the outer world conflicting opinions as regarded the great principles of the Order. People did not really take in the true meaning of the word charity. Considered in the light of almsgiving we call it relief, as in the asylums for our Boys and Girls and Aged Brethren in poverty. But that was not all. There were other virtues connected with our teaching—virtues which an inspired writer brought before them so beautifully in 1 Cor. xiii. Faith and hope—in faith that would not end in sight, a hope that would end in enjoyment, and a charity that was greater than either. Our reverend brother dwelt on the virtue of charity; he would put their charity to the test that day. It was the custom at the annual meetings of the Provincial Grand Lodge to testify their gratitude for past mercies; and for that purpose a collection was made for any local charity that the Vicar might select, as a small thankoffering for his kindness in allowing them to worship in that sacred and beautiful building. The charity to which the Vicar that day proposed to devote their contributions was the National School of the parish. After a few words on the utility of the school, the preacher concluded by asking his hearers to so live that when life's frail flower lay broken they might hear the great God Himself saying to them, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." Before leaving the church a collection was made, and we may as well state here that the amount realised was £7 11s 10½d, which, with the £5 5s voted by Prov. Grand Lodge, makes a total of £12 16s 10½d to be handed over to the Dorking National Schools as the result of the gathering of Prov. Grand Lodge for 1878. The banquet was then served at the Public Hall; it seemed to give every satisfaction; in fact, the arrangements of the day were most ably carried out by the entertaining Lodge. On the removal of the cloth, Bro. General Brownrigg, who presided, rose: He regretted that in consequence of the delay of the trains in the early part of the day their arrangements had been put somewhat out of gear. He had another engagement for that evening, and found he could only spare an hour to be with them. Under these circumstances he would push forward with the toasts. He then proposed the health of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, and with it coupled the Craft. After the National Anthem, the chairman gave the M.W. the Grand Master. Not only has the Prince of Wales taken a most active part in the doings of the Order, but his two brothers—the Duke of Connaught and Prince Leopold—hold responsible positions. He had been associated with the Duke of Connaught, and as an old Mason it charmed his heart to notice the interest the Duke took in Masonic affairs. Freemasonry was so well grounded in the hearts of Englishmen that it did not absolutely need the attachment of members of the Royal Family, still he should be sorry to see the connection severed. With the toast he would combine the health of the Pro and Deputy Grand Masters, and the rest of the Grand Officers, and associate with it the name of Rev. Bro. Arnold, Grand Chaplain. Bro. Arnold felt proud in having his name associated with the toast of the Grand Officers. Time, however, prevented him saying much, and he would, therefore, content himself by thanking the brethren for the way they had received the toast. Before sitting down he would propose the health of their Provincial Grand Master, General Brownrigg, who was always ready to attend any meeting where he could advance the interests of Freemasonry. In a letter he had sent him, General Brownrigg had remarked that if he were to die they might inscribe on his tombstone, "Killed by Freemasonry." However, he trusted the Freemasons of Surrey would never work their Prov. Master to this extent. General Brownrigg immediately rose; he regretted exceedingly time would not permit his staying longer. He felt flattered by the many kind things that had been said of him. He had received ample support in the conduct of his duties, from all parts of the Province, and it was eminently gratifying to him to know that during his Mastership the Lodges had nearly doubled. He regretted the meeting of the Lodge Frederick of Unity fell on the same day, at the same time it was gratifying to see so many of the members of that Lodge present in the early part of the proceedings. For the future he thought it desirable they should fix a date for their Prov. Grand Lodge meeting, and he suggested the second Tuesday in July, and then the several Lodges could arrange so that their meetings might not clash. He again thanked them for the way in which they had received the toast. The gallant General then said he found he had yet three minutes left that he could pass with them, and he could not better expend the time than by proposing the health of the Deputy Grand Master; this he accordingly did, in most kind and eulogistic terms. He then handed to Rev. Bro. Arnold the gavel, and took his departure, amid the cheers of the brethren. After the dnet—A Famous Victory—admirably rendered by Bros. Chaplin Henry and Montem Smith, Bro. Arnold rose: He remarked that before the Prov. Grand Master left he had proposed a toast. It was now his (the speaker's) duty and privilege to respond. In the absence of Gen. Brownrigg he had to conduct the proceedings. He assured the brethren that to him it had been a great pleasure to visit the Lodges in the Province. He had been able, on the whole, to report the Province of Surrey to be in good working order. On every side a desire was evinced to carry out the wishes of the Prov. G.M as regards the duties of Freemasonry. As Deputy Grand Master his ambition was to report all the Lodges thoroughly efficient, and he was sure the brethren would adopt any suggestion he might make to them. And now with respect to the Charities; he thought it very desirable that a union should be made with one of the adjoining Provinces—say Middlesex or Essex—for the purpose of organising their voting powers. The remaining toasts comprised The Visitors, replied to by Bro. Hinckes; the Prov. Grand Treasurer and G. Secretary, to which Bros. Price and Greenwood replied; the W.M., Wardens and Brethren of the Dorking Lodge, No. 1149, replied to by Bro. Spence; the Press, by Bro. Morgan, &c., &c. The musical arrangements were under the direction of Bro. Chaplin Henry, who was assisted by Bro. Montem Smith, and we need scarcely add, from the well known ability of these brethren, that they gave every satisfaction.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

York Mark Lodge, Time Immemorial.—The regular meeting of this Lodge was held on Tuesday evening, the W.M., Bro. T. B. Whytehead, presiding, and the following Officers and Brethren being also present:—T. Cooper P.M., G. Balmford P.M., the Rev. Wm. Valentine, G. Garbutt, J. S. Cumberland, M. Millington, C. G. Padel, A. T. B. Turner, &c. Bro. Bishop, De Grey and Ripon Lodge, was duly advanced to the honourable degree. Amongst the Visitors present were Bros. M. C. S. Tynte, J. Hanly, T. B. Shaw-Hellier, L. Murphy, J. B. Somerset, and J. Pedley of the 4th Royal Irish Dragoon Guards, now stationed at York.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 193.—Railway Tavern, London-street, E.C., on the 17th inst. Bros. Bush W.M., Sayer S.W., Biddle J.W., Gottheil P.M., Pitt Sec., Moss S.D., Woodward I.G., Walker, Meyer, Cranke, Burns and Bohlman; the latter two brethren, both of 438 S.C., became members of the Lodge. The third ceremony was very ably rehearsed by the Worshipful Master, who it is most gratifying to observe, is gradually abandoning many of the incongruities which tyros in the Craft are so apt to adopt. The delivery was careful and distinct, and elicited special marks of approbation from the Preceptor and brethren. The two last sections of the lecture were worked, and the Lodge resumed and closed. Bro. Sayer was elected W.M. for Wednesday next.

Harmonic Lodge, No. 216.—The regular meeting was held at the Adelphi Hotel, Liverpool, on Thursday, the 11th inst. Bros. Rev. J. R. Jenkins W.M., R. P. Gill S.W., Dr. Castine J.W., W. Laidlow P.M. Treas., Rev. Bro. Blake as S.D., E. B. Hartwright as J.D., W. H. Ball Tyler. P.M.'s Bros. McKune, Armstrong, Beazley, Dr. Sheldon, and Dr. Kisch, and Bros. Benner, Brakel, Rumney, Gilmour, Morris, Jackson, Pusey, Overbeck, and Busfield. Visitors—Bros. Green P.M. 1275, Tuski 1502, and Davies, FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE. The Lodge was opened with solemn prayer, and the minutes of the previous meeting were read, and after discussion carried. We have cause for regret that there was no work done, as the Lodge has the reputation of working the York Ritual with great proficiency. This Lodge has exercised a powerful influence in the Province; there is abundance of talent, and there is no reason why it should not be one of the most harmonious, compact, and wealthy in Liverpool. The Present W. Master is a brother eminently qualified to make it so, and the brethren should follow well his guidance. There being no further business, it was the W.M.'s command that the brethren adjourn to banquet. On the removal of the cloth the customary Loyal and Masonic toasts were given. All were duly responded to. To Bro. J.W. was entrusted the toast of the Prov. G.M., the Deputy Prov. G.M., and the other P.G.L. Officers. He said: Brethren,—the Worshipful Master has honoured me with the gavel, and his commands to propose this toast; I do so with pleasure, and need only advance the claims of those distinguished brethren upon you to ensure the toast being well received, but I may add, that in doing so I may safely say I am expressing the opinion of the members of this Lodge, and the Masonic body of this town and Province, that we should like to see our Masonic heads more frequently among us. (Hear, hear.) The toast was duly honoured. The W.M., in proposing the health of the Visiting Brethren, alluded very kindly to Bro. Green, who had come to visit them, which showed he had not forgotten the Lodge of which he was formerly a member; he also referred to Bro. S. M. Davies and his visit to the Province, and informed the members of the active interest that brother took in the Craft. He next expressed to Bro. Tuski the pleasure he derived from seeing him present, and accorded to each Visitor a most cordial welcome. To this toast suitable replies were made. The Lodge was then called to resume labour, and nothing more offering it was closed in due and solemn form. The pleasures of the evening were greatly enhanced by the excellent harmony rendered.

Alliance Lodge, No. 667.—The monthly meeting of this Lodge was held at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, Liverpool, on Tuesday last. Present—Bros. John Ellis W.M., H. Firth S.W., J. Devaynes P.M. as J.W., T. Peake Sec., D. Lloyd S.D., Bailey and Craghill Stewards, Foulds I.G., P. Ball Tyler; P.M.'s Bulman and Jackson. The Lodge was opened in ample form, and the minutes of the last meeting were read, found correct, and ratified. The W.M. initiated Messrs. H. Sefton and Wm. Walker. The Lodge voted four guineas for charitable purposes. The Lodge was then closed in due form. By request of the W.M. the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

Royal Alfred Lodge of Instruction, No. 780.—Meeting held on 5th July, at the Star and Garter Hotel, Kew-bridge, at 7.30. Bros. Gomm W.M., Costelow S.W., Goss J.W., Blasby S.D., Gunner (Hon. Sec.) J.D., Talbot I.G.; Kyezor, Botley, Franckel, Acworth. Lodge opened and minutes were read, confirmed and signed. The W.M. rehearsed the ceremony of initiation, Bro. Botley candidate. Lodge was called to refreshment, and upon labour being resumed, Bro. Botley answered questions leading to second degree, and was passed. The W.M. for next meeting was elected, after which Lodge was closed and adjourned.

On 12th July. Bros. Goss W.M., May S.W., Blasby J.W., Gunner (Hon. Sec.) S.D., Acworth J.D., Josey I.G.; Kyezor, Botley, &c. Formalities complied with, Bro. Botley was passed, after which he answered questions leading to the third degree, and the brethren received the call to refreshment. Bro. May resumed labour, and rehearsed the ceremony of initiation, Bro. Botley again acting as candidate. The usual routine having been transacted, Lodge was closed in due form with solemn prayer, and adjourned till 19th July, on which evening the W.M. of the mother Lodge and his Officers will take their respective positions.

Carnarvon Lodge, No. 804, Havant.—The ceremony of installing Bro. T. P. Hall, as Worshipful Master, took place in the Masonic Hall, Havant, on Tuesday afternoon, when there was a large attendance of brethren, including several Past Masters and Officers of neighbouring Lodges. Among those present were Bros. J. Clay W.M., C. H. Liddell J.W., J. Weeks P.M. Treas., Thos. Francis P.M. Sec., J. W. Hillman P.M.D.C., J. Lintott P.M. Prov. G.S. of Works, H. R. Trigg P.M. P. Prov. G.S. of Works, J. Harrison P.M., O. C. Harries S.D., W. Dart J.D., H. Kimber I.G., W. Blackmore Tyler, J. Clark, H. G. Richardson, T. Slaiter, Wheeler, Askew, Thompson, Reed, Elverstone, Field, Woodman, J. Price, C. U. Burr. Visitors—Bros. A. MacMillan J.W., Clapton Lodge 1365, W. Payne W.M. 342, O. N. Wyatt W.M. 38, W. A. Butt W.M. 56, E. Smith, E. J. Smith 342, J. Maltby P.M., G. Sherman 457, J. Hamilton Bridle 487, H. Martin Green P.M., Stratton, Bolton 127, &c. Congratulations were received from the W.M.'s of 309, 903, 1428, and several other brethren. The installing Master was Bro. Francis P.M., who was assisted by a full board of Masters. After the installation, the Worshipful Master proceeded to appoint and invest his Officers as follow:—Bros. C. H. Liddell S.W., O. C. Harris J.W., J. Weeks P.M. Treas., T. Francis P.M. Sec., J. N. Hillman P.M. M.C., W. Dart S.D., H. Kimber J.D., J. E. Elverston I.G., H. Richardson and A. J. Reed Stewards, T. B. Askew Org., W. Blackmore Tyler, and G. Blackmore Asst. Tyler. The important business of the Lodge having been concluded, the brethren adjourned to the Dolphin Hotel, where a récherché banquet was served, which reflected the greatest possible credit on Bro J. Purnell and his staff. On the removal of the cloth, the Worshipful Master proposed the Queen and Craft, and subsequently he gave the Most Worshipful the Grand Master His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. He was sure the brethren would agree with him that their Royal brother was one of the most hardworking men in the world, and that he did all he possibly could to advance the interests of the Craft. The toast was received with great enthusiasm. The W.M. next proposed the Most Worshipful the Pro Grand Master (the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon), the Right Worshipful Lord Skelmersdale (Deputy Grand Master), and the Grand Officers, the toast being well received. He next gave the Right Worshipful the Provincial Grand Master of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight (Bro. W. W. B. Beach), and the Prov. Grand Officers present and past. It was perfectly clear that Freemasonry could not have flourished as it had flourished without good Provincial Officers, and he was glad to welcome that day those brethren who had taken Provincial offices, and who had done him the honour to be present at his installation. The Provincial Officers had a deal of rough work to do sometimes, but they invariably acquitted themselves to the satisfaction of the brethren (Hear, hear). He coupled with the toast Bros. P.M.'s Lintott, Maltby, Hillman and Green. Bro. Lintott, in responding, dwelt at some length on the merits of Bro. Beach, the Provincial Grand Master, and alluded to his great efforts to advance the best interests of the Order. It was not long ago that Bro. Beach had put himself to great inconvenience and travelled a great many miles in very inclement weather to perform the ceremony of laying the foundation stone of the Carnarvon Lodge, and subsequently, when the erection of the Lodge premises had been completed, he came among them again to perform the ceremony of consecration. This, and, in fact, all the incidents of Bro. Beach's life, showed most conclusively that he had the welfare of the whole fraternity at heart. (Hear, hear). Bro. H. Martin Green P.M. also responded. Bro. Clay I.P.M. proposed the health of the newly-installed Worshipful Master, and in the course of his observations wished him a happy and prosperous year of office. The Worshipful Master, in responding, thanked the brethren heartily for the kind reception they had accorded him from time to time, and for the great honour they had done him in electing him as the Worshipful Master of the Lodge. He sincerely trusted that he should so carry out the duties which would devolve upon him as to afford satisfaction to the brethren, and he promised faithfully that nothing but sickness or business of great emergency should ever prevent his being present in his place at the various Lodge meetings. Of course, in all gatherings there must of necessity arise now and then some little unpleasantness, but he trusted that any little hitch that might occur during his year of office would speedily be overcome, and that they would be able to work harmoniously together. If peace and harmony existed, and the various Officers and brethren did their duty, the Lodge must prosper (Hear, hear.) Bro H. Martin Green P.M. proposed the Visitors in a neat speech, the toast being duly acknowledged by each visiting brother present. The health of the Installing Master was proposed by Bro. Weeks P.M., and responded to by Bro. Francis P.M., who expressed a hope that the year upon which they were about to enter, under the guidance of Bro. Hall, would prove even more prosperous than the years which had gone by. The Worshipful Master proposed the Past Masters of the Carnarvon Lodge, to which Bro. Clay I.P.M. and Bro. Hillman responded, and both promised to render the W.M. every possible assistance during his year of office. The remaining toasts were the Officers of the Carnarvon Lodge, present and past, proposed by the Worshipful Master, and responded to by Bro. Liddell S.W.; Bro. Weeks P.M., proposed by Bro. Trigge P.M., and responded to by Bro. Weeks; the Host, proposed by Bro. Clay I.P.M., and responded to by Bro. J. Purnell; and the Tyler's toast. The proceedings, which were of the most enjoyable character, terminated soon after 11 o'clock.

Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, No. 860.—Held its weekly meeting on Tuesday evening last, at Bro. Smyth's, Sisters' Tavern, Pownall-road, Dalston. Bros. Wardell W.M., Christian S.W., Williams J.W., Hunt S.D., J. Lorkin J.D., Forss I.G., Dallas Secretary, Smyth Treas., P.M. Wallington Preceptor. Bros. Slaiter, Davis, Finch, C. Lorkin, Brasted, Carr, Wyman and others. The Lodge was opened in due form, the minutes read, the ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Weige candidate. The Lodge was opened in the second degree. Bro. Gilham answered the necessary questions, the Lodge was opened in the third degree. The Preceptor then occupied the chair. The ceremony of raising was rehearsed, Bro. Gilham as candidate. Bro. Slaiter gave the traditional history, the W.M. resumed the chair, the Lodge was regularly closed to the first degree. Bro. Christian was elected W.M. for the ensuing week.

Dalhousie Lodge, No. 860.—The first summer banquet of the brethren of this Lodge took place on Friday, 12th July, at the Crown Hotel, Broxbourne, the W.M. Bro. T. B. Dodson presided, and was supported by a good attendance of the brethren and their ladies. The day being fine, the drive down was thoroughly enjoyed. After an exceptional repast, served by Bro. Benningfield, the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were honoured. The company adjourned to the beautiful gardens, and amused themselves in various ways until the time for departure. Amongst those present were Bros. Wallington P.M., Worsley J.W., Dickins S.D., Smith J.D., Barker, Bond, Jones, Christian, Pavitt, Sadler, Windus, Cornu, Tompkins, Ellis, &c.

Whittington Lodge of Instruction, No. 862.—At the weekly meeting of this Lodge, held on Wednesday evening, 17th July, at Bro. Hyde's, Red Lion, Poppins Court, Fleet-street, Bro. J. S. Brown of the Mother Lodge in the chair; Bro. Hallam S.W., Abell J.W., Bull S.D., Vizzard I.G., Long P.M., and several others. The minutes of the previous Lodge being confirmed, the Lodge was opened in the second degree, and Bro. Gladwell offering himself as a candidate, was raised to the third degree in an unexceptionable manner. The whole of the sections of this degree were then worked by the brethren. Bro. Hallam was elected W.M. for the ensuing week, and the Lodge was closed.

Stanley Lodge, No. 1325.—The monthly meeting of this Lodge was held at the Temple, Hope-street, Liverpool, on the 16th inst. Bro. J. H. Bradshaw W.M. was supported by Bros. J. W. Burgess I.P.M., R. B. Burgess as S.W., T. Foulkes J.W., W. J. Bell as Sec., A. Samuels S.D., John Holme J.D., F. Knight P.M. D.C., S. Hill I.G., M. Williamson Tyler. The usual preliminaries gone through, the W.M. worked up to the second degree, and Bros. Arnold and Sanders took their seats among Fellow Crafts. This was the first occasion since his installation that Bro. Bradshaw had officiated, and he did his work remarkably well. It was anticipated that a candidate who had been accepted would put in an appearance, but some unaccountable reason prevented, otherwise the W.M. would have commenced his year of office by making and passing candidates, for which work he is competent. There was an application for assistance, and the Lodge voted two guineas. The labours being ended, the Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment, and all spent a very pleasant evening.

Fermor Hesketh Lodge, No. 1350. — The officers and members of this highly prosperous Lodge met at the Masonic Temple, Liverpool, on Monday, the 8th inst. The meeting was summoned for four o'clock, and punctually Bro. W. H. Cooper took his seat in the East, C. P. Titherly acting as S.W., W. P. Evans J.W., T. F. Cooper Sec., T. A. Collinson P.M. Treas., J. H. Johnston P.M. D.C., R. Carruthers as S.D., E. Gordon as J.D., R. Thomas I.G., W. H. Ball Tyler; P.M.'s R. Collinson, and Dr. A. Samuels; J. Shaw, E. C. Sanxay, J. R. Storey, W. C. Riches, J. Hodgson, M. Jones, A. L. Jones, R. Gracey, H. A. Hill, W. Yallop, E. W. Airey, T. G. Grundy, J. B. McAllister, W. O. Blott; and Hon. Members—H. S. Alpass P.G. Sec., J. R. Goepel P.P.G.D.C., J. P. Platt P.P.J.G.W. Cheshire. Visitors—Rev. J. Rees Jenkins W.M. 216, R. G. Meller P.P.G.D. N. Wales and Salop, T. Ockleshaw P.M. 667, L. Ellis 1289, J. P. Bryan 1035, S. M. Davies FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, &c. After the Lodge was duly opened and preliminaries despatched, the ballot was taken for Bro. E. Airey P.M. 281 as a joining member. It proved unanimous. Other business was rapidly gone through, after which the W.M. signified his intention of proceeding to the important event of the day. The Lodge was advanced to the second, and Bros. R. Collinson P.M. and J. H. Johnston P.M. introduced Bro. W. P. Evans as the Worshipful Master elect. The customary formalities being complied with, Bro. W. P. Evans was obligated, invested, and installed W.M. for the ensuing year, I.P.M. Cooper very ably performing the ceremony. Bro. Evans received the salutations of the brethren, and at once proceeded to invest his Officers, which with the able assistance of Bro. Cooper was accomplished as follows:—W. H. Cooper I.P.M. and D.C., T. F. Cooper S.W., C. P. Titherly J.W., T. A. Collinson P.M. Treasurer, J. W. Shaw Secretary, R. Carruthers S.D., G. Gordon J.D., R. Montgomery I.G., C. Leighton, George Grundy, and W. Yallop Stewards, John Hodgson Org., Rev. C. T. Mermagen Chaplain, W. H. Ball Tyler. The ancient charges were delivered by Bros. T. A. Collinson, and Dr. A. Samuels. It was proposed by the W.M., and seconded by the I.P.M., that Bros. Alpass, Goepel, Platt, Marwood, Johnston, and Hughes, become hon. members—carried. At this period the W.M. commanded the Lodge to cease labour, and signified his pleasure to banquet with the brethren. The table was prettily set out, in keeping with the tone of No. 1350. The menu was of récherché character, and wines of celebrated vintage. Justice having been done to the well-catered menu, the W.M. rose to propose the toast of the Queen, which was duly honoured by the brethren, all joining in the National Anthem. The W.M. rose to propose a toast only second to the first from the intimate connection it had with the Craft. He invited the brethren to drink to the health of the G.M. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal family. This was received with enthusiasm by the brethren, who sang "God Bless the Prince of Wales." The third toast on the list—the Pro G.M. and the other Grand Lodge Officers—was honoured, after which the W.M. gave the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale Prov. G.M., the Deputy P.G.M., and the rest of Prov. Grand Officers, coupling with the toast the name of Bro. Alpass, Prov. Grand Secretary. Bro. Alpass rose with pleasure. Lord Skelmersdale's avocations seemed to increase daily. His popularity in London is equal to the high esteem in which he is held in the Province. If he were not so much sought after, he might come down to enjoy the comforts of his home, and the brethren of his Province might see more of him. At the same time, if Lord Skelmersdale thought the Masons of his Province needed his help, they would certainly receive it. He is fully posted as to all Masonic movements in progress. With reference to Col. Stanley, he is making himself felt, and should we require his services, they would be readily given. Bro. Alpass alluded to the movement in the Lodge to establish a Benevolent Fund, and not knowing the object of the Fund, directed attention to the Hamer Fund, the Almoners' Fund, to the three London Charities, &c. Their Province was the largest subscribing one in the kingdom, and they ought to carry their candidate into either of the three London Charities when needed. The I.P.M., on rising to propose the fifth toast, remarked it was the toast of the evening. They had had the gratification of installing Bro. Evans as Worshipful Master for the coming year, and it was a great gratification to see him in his exalted position; all know how efficiently Bro. Evans has filled the offices confided to him in the Lodge, and we have every reason to believe that those good traits which have characterised him from the day of his initiation in this Lodge, and distinguished him in his several capacities, will, now he is W.M., be equally conspicuous, and at the end of his term of office we shall find that the Lodge has lost none of its lustre by being entrusted to his Mastership. He gave them the toast of the Worshipful Master, and knew all would join in wishing him long life and a prosperous year. The toast was enthusiastically drunk. At this stage of the proceedings, Bros. Bryan, Hodgson, Grundy and Watson favoured the brethren with a quartet, which was admirably rendered. The W.M., on rising, said he felt deeply the kind remarks spoken by the worthy I.P.M. He thanked the brethren for the cordial way in which they had endorsed those remarks; he assured them in the past he had endeavoured to do his best for the interests of the Lodge, and would endeavour during his term of office to prove how greatly he appreciated the honour they had conferred on him. Before sitting down he had a pleasing duty to perform; to present, in the name of the Lodge, a handsome Past Master's jewel to our worthy I.P.M. He hoped Bro. Cooper would wear it as a mark of the high esteem in which he is deservedly held, and that he might have a long and prosperous life. The toast was heartily drunk, with musical honours. After a song by Bro. Watson, the I.P.M. rose. He felt grateful for the complimentary manner in which his health had been proposed. During his year of office he had tried to give satisfaction, and it was a pleasure to feel that his endeavours had been appreciated. His term had not been free from difficulties, yet they had overcome them, and the Lodge to-day stands in a prosperous state. We have been taken to task, because our efforts to establish a Benevolent Fund in the Lodge have not been understood. Although this particular fund has a local aspect, yet in looking after it it does not follow that we pay no attention to the great Charities of London. He was sure the Lodge was always willing to do its utmost for all charitable demands. He should greatly prize the jewel they had presented him, and should wear it with a conviction that it was voted from the best motives. In the future he would devote his energies with as much fervency as heretofore. (Cheers). The W.M. now rose to propose the health of the Past Masters of the Lodge, and in a few remarks united the names of Bros. Samuels and Johnston. Bros. Bryan and Hodgson favoured the brethren with a duet, after which Bro. Johnston said he felt sure that the Lodge would go on prospering, and he was ever ready to do his best for its interest. Bro. Samuels followed to the same purport. Bro. R. Collinson, as the junior P.M., always felt great pleasure in performing his duty, and to be present in Lodge; he had that day come from Manchester to give his support. The worthy Bro. Treasurer followed. He was particularly wishful that the Benevolent Fund of the Lodge should flourish. The W.M. on rising to propose the toast of the Visitors, said he was pleased to see so many distinguished brethren present, and assured them that they were most cordially welcome to the Lodge. He thanked them for the honour of their company, and in giving the toast, with every fraternal feeling, he united the names of Bros. Mellor, Davies, and others. The toast was heartily drunk. Bro. Mellor P.P.G.D. North Wales and Shropshire thanked the W.M. and brethren for their bountiful hospitality; for the kindness with which the toast was proposed, and the cordial manner in which it had been received. He knew he was expressing the sentiments of the visitors when he said that it was a great pleasure to be privileged to be a guest of such worthy brethren. He was delighted to be with them, and had spent a most pleasant evening, and wished the Fermor Hesketh Lodge every success. Other brethren followed, and expressed the delight they felt in being present. Bro. Cook volunteered the next song, after which Bro. Airey thanked the brethren for their kindness in unanimously electing him a joining member of the Lodge. The W.M. next proposed the toast of the Charities, and coupled therewith the names of Bros. Platt and Goepel. The toast was duly honoured and ably responded to by Bro. Platt for the Provincial Charities, and by Bro. Goepel for the London Charities. The Officers of the Fermor Hesketh Lodge were next honoured. Bro. S.W. responded; when he was initiated he had no idea of ever attaining to the important office confided to him that day. He would discharge the duties with pleasure and fidelity. Bro. Secretary and other Officers also returned thanks. The next toast Bro. Evans was sure would be drunk with every mark of appreciation; all felt indebted to the Musical Brethren, who by their talent had conduced greatly to the pleasure of the evening. He, therefore, asked the brethren to drink with him most cordially to the health of the Musical Brethren, which was done. Our genial and talented brethren again rendered a quartet, and Bro. Hodgson, the Organist of the Lodge, was called upon to respond. He thanked the W.M. for proposing the toast in such a considerate manner. He felt sure the other brethren would endorse what he said, and with him do all in their power for the good of the Lodge. The Worshipful Master next proposed success to the Masonic Press, and with the toast united the names of Bros. Bryan and Davies. The toast was warmly received. Bro. Bryan replied on his own behalf, and Bro. Davies gratefully acknowledged the mark of esteem shown him and the journal he represented. The Tyler's toast brought to a close one of the most enjoyable evenings it was possible to participate in. We wish the Fermor Hesketh Lodge every success, and hope that the worthy brethren may live long to enjoy such gratifying and harmonious celebrations as that of the 8th inst.

Era Chapter, No. 1423.—The installation meeting was held on Saturday, 13th July, at the Island Hotel, Hampton. The Chapter was opened, and the minutes of the previous convocation were read and unanimously confirmed. Apologies were received from Comps. T. J. Sabine P.P.G.S. Middlesex M.E.Z., and T. J. Hooper Wilkins, excusing and regretting their non-attendance. By the invitation of the Installed Principals Comp. Frederick Walters P.P.G. 1st A.S. Middlesex P.Z. 73, in an able and efficient manner installed Comp. E. H. Thiellay as the M.E.Z., who in return installed Comp. F. Walters as H. The Joshua elect, Comp. John Mason, was too ill to be present, so his installation had to be deferred. The other officers were invested and appointed. Comp. E. H. Thiellay P.P.G.D.C. Middlesex M.E.Z. gave proofs of his proficiency by the able manner in which he exalted Bro. John Beresford Ryley (1423). The candidate expressed himself pleased with the interesting ceremony. The report of the Audit Committee showed the funds to be in a good state. The I.P.Z., although absent, was not forgotten, for a jewel was unanimously voted him from the Chapter Funds. A vote of thanks was given to Comps. H. A. Dubois P.Z. for his services, rendered to the Chapter as its first Treasurer. Business ended, the Chapter was closed, and adjourned to meet on Saturday, 14th September, at 3 o'clock p.m. Banquet followed.

Lodge of Israel, No. 1502.—The monthly meeting was held at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, Liverpool, on the 15th inst. Present—Bros. A. Jones W.M., S. Schonstadt S.W., Rev. H. D. Marks J.W., M. Hart I.P.M. Sec., J. Skeaf P.G.O. as Org., S. J. Waring as S.D., S. J. Henochsberg J.D., R. Robinson P.M. D.C., J. Saber Steward, M. P.Tueski I.G., W. H. Ball Tyler; P.M.'s Bros. A. J. Henochsberg, J. Frank. Visitors—Bros. J. P. Wright W.M. 786, Dr. Bailey 786, Brotherton 241, Davies 22 G.R.C. The usual formalities having been duly observed, the W.M. in a pleasing and able manner initiated Mr. Harris into Freemasonry. Bro. J.W. explained the working tools in a most accomplished manner, and Bro. S.W. very ably delivered the charge. It was proposed by Bro. Robinson P.M., and seconded by Bro. Henochsberg P.M., that the customary sum of £5 be voted from the funds of the Lodge to the Masonic Relief Fund, carried unanimously. A Committee was then appointed to represent the Lodge on the Masonic Hall Relief Committee. The labours of the evening over, the W.M. closed the Lodge, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. A very pleasant evening was spent round the festive board, where the enjoyment was enhanced by the kindness of Bros. Marks, Schonstadt, A. J. Henochsberg, M. Hart, Dr. Bailey, Robinson, and S. J. Henochsberg, who delighted the brethren with some capital songs and recitations. The toast list was dispensed with, as the time was very agreeably taken up with harmony, but the W.M. did not forget to propose the health of the newly initiated Brother. Bro. Jones, in his usual fraternal spirit, gave the toast of the Visitors, according all a hearty welcome. The toast was most cheerfully accepted by the brethren, and Bro. Wright replied. This Lodge, it is pleasing to state, is one of the most harmonious and prosperous in Liverpool, and the Officers work superbly.

Llanidloes Lodge, No. 1582.—The installation meeting of this Lodge was held on Wednesday, the 10th instant, at the Trewythan Arms Hotel, Llanidloes, and was numerously attended by members and visitors. Bro. W. Collender P.M. and P.P.G.D.C. North Wales and Shropshire presided, and there were also present Bros. J. Kitto S.W. (W.M. elect), W. H. Williams J.W., Hugh Jones Treasurer, J. D. Davis Hon. Secretary, W. Russel J.D., J. H. Webb J.G., J. Trewin Tyler, D. P. Owen P.M. 938, C. Morgan W.M. 1594, J. Danily P.M. 1594, F. Britton P.M. 1594, Edward Hamer P.M. 1072 Prov. Grand Secretary South Wales, A. Hughes P.M. 1072, John Owen 1594, D. Swancott 1582, E. Hughes 1582, Thomas Bennett 1582, J. Williams 1072, W. Pell 1072, J. Morris 1124, &c. The Lodge having been opened, and the minutes of the last regular Lodge read and confirmed, the first business was the passing of Bro. Edward Hughes to the second degree, after which Bro. John Kitto (W.M. elect) was presented by Bro. Edward Hamer to receive at the hands of Bro. W. Collender the benefit of installation. The ceremony was performed in a most impressive manner, and in accordance with ancient custom the W.M. (J. Kitto) then invested his Officers for the ensuing year, after which the W.M. said he had a very pleasing duty to perform, and that was to present to their I.P.M. (Bro. W. Collender) a P.M.'s jewel, for the great services rendered by him since the formation of the Lodge in 1876 as first Master. He then, in a speech of considerable length, attached the jewel to his breast, remarking that he hoped Bro. Collender would live many years to wear it (applause). The jewel is a very handsome one. It has two clasps on the suspending ribbon, and on the back is the following inscription:—"Llanidloes Lodge, 1582. Presented by the Brethren to Bro. William Collender P.M., as a token of esteem, and in appreciation of valuable services rendered the Lodge, 1877 and 1878." It is enclosed in a handsome jewel case. The other formal business having been disposed of, the brethren adjourned to a well-furnished banquet, provided by Bro. W. Russell, at which Bro. Kitto presided. On the withdrawal of the cloth, the W.M. gave the formal loyal and Masonic toasts, all of them being cordially responded to. The health of the W.M. being proposed by Bro. W. Collender amidst the applause of the brethren, the W.M. replied thereto in a lengthened speech. Other toasts were then given, and the evening was passed in complete harmony, interspersed with songs, &c., Bro. J. D. Davies presiding at the piano. The Tyler's toast having been given, the brethren separated at eleven o'clock.

Kendal Castle Chapter, No. 129.—It has been the custom for some years past in this Chapter to hold the Annual Festival in the Summer, and to go from home to celebrate it. This year the Grange Hotel, at Grange-over-Sands—the Torquay of the North—was chosen for the occasion. We most heartily congratulate the M.E.Z. and his Officers on their good taste and power of selection. The locality is extremely beautiful, the Hotel charmingly situated and the appointments perfection. Dinner was put on the tables at four o'clock, and the M.E.Z. E. Comp. Joseph Bintley was supported by E. Comps. John Talbot H. Prov. G. Assist. S., George M'Kay J. Prov. G.S.E., John Holme P.Z., John Bowes P.Z. Prov. G.S.N., W. Kirkbride P.Z. Prov. G.P.S., Arnison P.Z., Titus Wilson P.Z. Treasurer of 129, and Comps. John Armstrong P.S. No. 148, W. Cartmel, Banks, Nelson, Taylor, Baron, T. O. Atkinson, &c. The dinner, which was served à la Russe, included every delicacy of the season, and the wines were of the choicest brands. Grace after meat having been said by E. Comp. J., the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts received due honour. The M.E.Z., in proposing the Prov. G. Supt. the Earl of Bective and the Prov. G. Chapter, referred to the excellent manner in which his lordship ruled over the Province and made a happy allusion to the proverbial hospitality of Underley. E. Comp. M'Kay Prov. G.S.E. responded, and referred to the many advantages that would accrue to Royal Arch Masonry in the Province by the formation of the Provincial Chapter. He hoped soon to have the bye-laws ready for distribution, and also to have the bye-laws of individual Chapters approved by the Prov. G. Supt. E. Comp. Bowes proposed the M.E.Z., Officers, and members of the Kendal Castle Chapter, No. 129, and in doing so referred to his long connection with the Chapter, having been one of the promoters and the first M.E.H. He complimented the present Officers for the zeal they manifested as promoters of the Royal Art, and made an especial reference to the M.E.Z., E. Comp. Joseph Bintley, who had been for many years a worker in the good cause. The toast was very warmly received. E. Comp. Bintley in reply thanked all present for the reception they had given to the toast, so kindly proposed by their old and valued friend Comp. Bowes. He had done something for the good of Masonry; and he hoped to do still more. Their Chapter was in a good position, financially and otherwise, and with such an overseer of the work as Comp. Bowes, he did not doubt that they should meet with as much success in the future as they had in the past. The Visitors having been proposed, Comps. Kirkbride, Arnison and Armstrong respectively responded, and expressed their great pleasure in being invited to take part in such enjoyable festivities. Comp. McKay having obtained permission to propose a toast, said he had the utmost pleasure in proposing the health of E. Comp. Bowes. No one present was more indebted to that Comp. than he was; no matter what work had to be done, Comp. Bowes was always equal to the occasion, and not only so, but his services were always most willingly rendered. The whole Province was greatly indebted to that Comp., both in the Craft and the Arch; he proposed his good health with the greatest cordiality. Comp. Bowes, in responding, said he was conscious of having done something for the good of Masonry in the Province, and the fact that his services were acceptable to them was a sufficient reward for the trouble he had taken. He was not tired yet; he loved Masonry now better than ever he did; he hoped for many years to be spared to assist in rendering their beautiful ceremonies in a creditable manner. The health of E. Comp. John Holme P.Z. having been proposed, that Comp. made a suitable reply. He had presided on the occasion of three of their annual gatherings, and it always afforded him very great pleasure to meet his Brothers and Companions for the purpose of promoting those principles which they all professed to admire. During the evening Comps. Kirkbride and Nelson sang some excellent songs, and a most enjoyable day was brought to a close at an early hour.

Royal Savoy Lodge, No. 1744.—This young Lodge will give a Summer Festival to the ladies and friends of the brethren at Lewis's Hotel, Maidenhead, on Thursday, 25th July. Bros. Willing W.M., J. Douglas S.W., Clemow J.W., and Stiles Secretary have made arrangements, and the Great Western Railway have granted special terms. The banquet will take place at five, giving the company ample time to stroll along the banks, or row on this magnificent part of the river. We understand Bro. Clemow has placed two of his boats at the disposal of the W.M., and everything promises to go off well.

DISTRICT GRAND LODGE OF TASMANIA.

THE First Annual Communication was holden at Freemasons' Hall, Hobart Town, on Tuesday, the 7th day of May 1878. When the following members were present:—W. Bros. William Simmons Hammond D.G.M., George Smith Deputy D.G.M., F. H. Wise D.G.S.W., L. Susman D.G.J.W., R. D. Poulett-Harris D.G. Chaplain, Charles Toby D.G. Sec., C. W. Rocher D.G.S.D., John Clark D.G. Purs., John Hamilton and W. R. Davey D.G. Stewards, W. G. Beaumont D.G. Tyler; also representatives of Lodges 536, 618, 801, &c. District G. Lodge having been opened, and formal matters disposed of, the report of the District G. Sec. was submitted. Little demanding special comment had been accomplished, but the G. Sec. hoped that at the next Annual Communication a report of more substantial and practical results would be placed before Grand Lodge. Several causes he stated had lately operated to retard the active prosecution of, and attention to Masonic duties; amongst which might be specially named the rich and valuable coal and other deposits recently discovered, and now in course of development in many portions of the colony, in which direction the attention of the capitalist and the trading portion of the community had been largely diverted. Another cause existed in the distance between Hobart Town and Launceston, rendering it very inconvenient for members of the Committee of General Purpose (who were selected from all the Lodges) to meet to prepare a draft of laws and regulations for the government of the D.G. Lodge. It was found requisite to appoint a sub-committee composed of members of the Hobart Town Lodges for the purpose.

On the subject of finance, the G. Sec. reported that in the absence of any power to demand or receive payment of any fees from the Lodges until after the making, confirming and subsequent approval of D.G. Lodge laws and regulations, it had hitherto been necessary to meet all the disbursements from private sources. The only amount received had been £2 2s from the D.D.G. Master for fee payable to the Grand Lodge on his appointment, which has been remitted to and acknowledged by the G. Secretary. The whole of the regalia and appointments for the D.G. Lodge were imported to the order of, and paid for by the R.W.D.G. Master, for which the D.G. Lodge is still indebted to him, less £10 10s, proposed optional fee payable to D.G. Lodge on his appointment, and which he has authorised to be deducted from the amount. D. Grand Secretary then gave a brief report of the condition of the various Lodges under the rule of the District Grand Lodge, and then referred to the Tasmanian Masonic Benevolent Fund, which, he stated, was established in Tasmania, A.D. 1843, with the object of assisting aged and distressed worthy brethren, and to afford relief to their widows and orphans. It was supported by annual subscriptions and voluntary contributions by members of the Order, its constitution being such as to invite subscriptions from, and afford relief to, all contributing members of Lodges subscribing to the fund, without respect to the constitution under which the Lodge is held. He hoped that such arrangement may be made by D.G. Lodge, relating to the collection of Masonic funds for purposes of benevolence, as will not materially interfere with the constitution of this old established and thoroughly effective Masonic organisation. He was informed there was also a Masonic Fund for benevolent purposes in Launceston, but no account of its constitution or report of its proceedings had reached him.

In concluding what may be justly termed merely an inaugural or progress report on the establishment of the District Grand Lodge, the D.G. Sec. would fain express a hope that the rulers of the Craft in Tasmania would not permit the present Masonic inactivity long to continue. The immense extension of the Order in all parts of the world would bring with it a corresponding demand on their benevolent resources; it therefore behoves those in authority in the Lodges to be earnest in practising the principles they profess to admire, and on which the Order is mainly founded, viz., Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth, and also to use all legitimate means at their disposal in disseminating the principles and more widely extending the influence of this time-honoured and truly benevolent institution, and thus render unnecessary any further reports on the existence of unconstituted or inoperative Warrants in the District.

The R.W. the D.G.M. then re-appointed the following Officers of D. G. Lodge for the ensuing year, viz., Bros. F. H. Wise D.G.S.W., L. Susman D.G.J.W., R. D. Poulett-Harris D.G.Chap., Charles Toby D.G.Sec., W. A. B. Jamieson D.G.S.D., C. W. Rocher D.G.J.D., J. A. Ferguson D.G.D. of C., John Clark D.G. Purs., R. B. Davey and John Hamilton D.G. Stewards, William George Beaumont D.G. Tyler. Bro. T. H. Magrath was unanimously appointed D.G. Treas., Bros. Hobkirk, Sadler, Jamieson, Clark, and Poulett-Harris, were appointed members of the Committee of General Purposes, and Bros. John Hamilton and Thomas May Evans Auditors. The draft copy of laws and regulations for the government of D.G. Lodge was then considered, and the clauses read seriatim, and, with a few alterations, passed. Apologies for non-attendance were read from several members of D.G. Lodge. After which, there not being any further business the D.G. Lodge was closed in due form, the R.W. the District Grand Master intimating that he would hold the next Annual Communication at Launceston.

Freemason's Chronicle;

A WEEKLY RECORD OF MASONIC INTELLIGENCE.

SANCTIONED BY THE GRAND LODGE OF ENGLAND.

VOL. VIII.—No. 187. SATURDAY, 27th JULY 1878. [PRICE THREEPENCE. Registered at the G.P.O. as a Newspaper.

THE LATE CONTEST FOR SECRETARYSHIP, R.M.I.G.

WE intend offering a few remarks on this important contest, and we have purposely delayed doing so till the present time, in the belief that, now that any excitement there may have been at the election has calmed down, and any sense of disappointment on the part of the defeated candidates has ceased, or, at all events, been considerably mitigated, our remarks will run no risk of being misinterpreted. The result, which is too well known to need recapitulation, may be described, in racing phraseology, as to the effect that Bro. Hedges won in the commonest of canters from Bro. Storr, Bro. Matier being a bad third, and the rest of the field nowhere. The result once published, the successful candidate received, in the first place, the congratulations of those who had striven against him for the post, and then of the Craft generally, those among them who had predilections in favour of other candidates being well content to know that the post was occupied by a good man, in whose hands the interests of the Institution would not be likely to suffer. As to the arrangements on the day of the election, they were in all respects admirable, and reflect the highest credit on the authorities. There were eight tables where voting papers could be obtained, five of these being set aside for London brethren, Lodges, Chapters, &c., and three for the Provinces. Then there were two other tables, where, in one case, the voting papers were marked, and, in the other case, where information was furnished. Thus all confusion was avoided, and a member wishing to record his vote had but to turn to the table—say No. 2, E to K London—which included the initial letter of his name, and he was furnished with the needful document, and having marked it at No. 9, and deposited it with the other voting papers, he had nothing more to do than to wait for the result, either in the Hall or its precincts if so minded, or till it was announced in the journals of the day. Nor must we pass over in silence the considerate kindness of Bro. A. Best, the proprietor of the Tavern, in placing the Great Hall at the disposal of the Committee. But for this accommodation it is well-nigh certain that, considering the numbers present, there must have been a great amount of pushing and "squeedging," and these are far from being conducive to the maintenance of placidity and good temper. Some men, too, are choleric, and albeit the most glorious fellows in the world when they are not being subjected to bodily pressure, are apt to indulge freely in the vernacular. This is far from being an edifying spectacle, even though we have it on the authority of a Latin writer that the Gods delight in seeing good men struggling with adversity. That the good men and true who were present on the 11th instant and recorded their votes did not afford the deities who preside over the fortunes of Freemasons' Tavern any such amusement is entirely owing to the kindness of Bro. Best, and we acknowledge it accordingly and with much gratitude.

We now offer certain remarks on the manner in which the voting was carried out. As our readers are aware, all entitled to vote are required to attend in person, and fill in voting papers according to the instructions given on the face. Many weeks before the election took place—indeed, long before the day was fixed for the contest—we suggested that steps should be taken to amend the law on this point, so as to substitute proxy for personal voting. Our object in offering this suggestion was stated at the time with sufficient clearness. We were simply anxious that Provincial voters should be on exactly the same footing as their London brethren. "Why," we asked, "should the voter resident at Berwick-on-Tweed, at Penzance, or in North or South Wales, who has a right to claim the exercise of an undoubted privilege, and he who lives within a stone's throw of Freemasons' Hall, not be in every respect on a footing of equality? What more has the latter done for the Institution that he should enjoy such privileges, while his unfortunate colleague must either lose his vote or his money?" This was written on the 11th May, or two months before the day fixed for the contest, and the question had been mooted in these columns, and commented on by us at an even earlier date. No response, however, was made, that is, no one concerned himself to the extent of taking the necessary steps to bring about an alteration in the law. There was ample time to have done it. A reference to the laws will show this, though some one, in criticising the proposal, was pleased to remark that whether the plan was worthy or unworthy of acceptance, it could not be substituted in time for the election which has just past. As the eventful day approached, many Provincial brethren entitled to vote began to realise the trouble to which they would be subjected. What a nuisance, it was said on more than one occasion, and in more than one Province, that we should be compelled to undertake a journey to London in order to hand in our votes! And it might have been added with equal reason, what an injustice that we should be called upon to spend a sum of money, more or less considerable, in order to do this! Had proper steps been taken, these brethren might have voted without incurring expense or trouble, and then London and the Provinces would have been on the same footing; but what was every one's business, according to the well-known rule, appears to have been no one's business, and the proposal was lost sight of. Now, however, that its merits have been brought home to at least some among the electors, it is to be hoped that measures may be taken to secure an alteration in the law, so as to substitute proxy for personal voting, and the result of the contest on the 11th instant makes it certainly desirable that the change should be made. There were, as we have said, eight tables, five London and three Provincial, at which voting papers were issued, and a friend, who is curious in such matters, has kindly furnished the numbers, as far as he could ascertain, which were issued from each table. The figures, it must be borne in mind, are not official, but we have no doubt they are substantially correct. At all events, though there may be errors in the statement, they will not in the slightest degree affect the justice of our argument. These numbers are as follow: London, table No. 1., individuals, nobility, and A. to D., 181 papers; No. 2 ditto, E. to K., 211 papers; No. 3 ditto, L. to R., 200 papers; No. 4, S. to Z., 179 papers; No. 5, Lodges, Chapters, and other Societies, 38 papers: giving a total issue for London of 809 papers. Provincial, No. 6, Lodges, Chapters, and other Societies, 89 papers; No. 7, individuals, Berks and Bucks to Middlesex, 84 papers; No. 8, ditto, Monmouthshire to Ireland and Unknown Addresses, 66 papers: giving a total for the Provinces of 239 papers. Now, if we take a few of the more distant Provinces, we find that, for instance, East Lancashire has 52 individual voters, and 41 Lodge, Chapter, &c., votes, together 93; West Yorkshire has 211 individual voters, and 48 Lodge, &c., votes, together 259; North Wales and Shropshire has 15 individual and 7 Lodge votes, together 22; Devonshire 17 individual and 18 Lodge, &c., votes, together 35. These added together give a total of 409 votes, or 170 more than were actually polled by all the Provinces together. The four we have taken at hazard, though not the most remote, are distant enough from the Metropolis to make attendance at Freemasons' Hall a matter of some labour and considerable expense. Had proxies been admissible, all these might have voted at the cost of a postage stamp, but it was exacting too much of them to compel a journey to London and back from London for the purpose of signing a paper which they could as well have signed at home. Or, as was suggested by one of our correspondents, a receiver of votes might have been appointed for each Province, and the papers forwarded under seal to the General Committee for scrutiny and acceptance if duly filled in. But, whatever arrangement might have been made, it is obviously unjust to penalise a voter from an outlying Province to the extent of two or three pounds and the fatigue of a long journey, that he may exercise the same privilege as his Metropolitan brethren, whom it costs a few pence and a little trouble. If we take the total number of voters at 4,000—it may be more, or it may be less, for we have done enough in respect of figures for the sake of argument, and we have no mind to cast up the voters in the list of Governors, &c.—we shall find them apportioned between London and the Provinces in the ratio of 5 to 3—about 2,500 in London and 1,500 in the Provinces. If we take the papers, spoiled and informal included, we have about one-third of the London constituency recording their votes, and one-sixth of the Provincial constituencies, a result which might well have been anticipated from the system presently in force. Under these circumstances, it occurs to us that no time should be lost in amending the law. We know that at the last revision there was a very considerable difference of opinion on this very question, and now that we have had experience of the manner in which personal voting works, we think, in justice to the Provinces, the experiment of proxy voting should be tried. Even in such case London would have the advantage in point of numbers, but as it is, this advantage is simply overwhelming. We shall revert to the subject at some future time.

LODGE VICTORIA IN BURMAH.

OUR readers will have noted from a letter which recently appeared in our columns, that the unfortunate differences which for so long a time have prevailed in this Lodge have not been terminated, but on the contrary, there seems to remain the same disposition as ever to resist the mandate of Grand Lodge and keep the restored members, Bro. Vaillant and others, outside the portals of the Lodge. We are not concerned very particularly about the nature of these differences. Whatever they my be, however they may have arisen, there can be no question that had the instructions conveyed by Bro. Hervey to the W. Master been obeyed, the Craft would have been spared a most unseemly exhibition of indiscipline, which, in our humble opinion, merits a most decided rebuff, if, indeed, it is not worthy of the heaviest punishment which it is in the power of Grand Lodge to inflict. However, the authorities in Great Queen-street are in a position to uphold their own dignity, and, come what may, G. Lodge will stifle, with justly fraternal sternness and most effectually, whatever feeble opposition this subordinate—or should we rather say, this exceedingly insubordinate—Lodge may raise. Orders are orders, edicts are edicts, and it is the duty of the inferior to obey, unhesitatingly, whatever emanates in the shape of a command from his superior. This, of course, is a truism, and we take some discredit to ourselves for having noted it with so much distinctness and force; but, in a case of this kind, force and distinctness are imperatively necessary. We must make it clear to our readers, that there is, and can be, no doubt whatever about the necessity—we will not condescend to use the word propriety—there is for an absolute and unreserved obedience to the supreme authority, for without it, as a correspondent remarked last week, no system of Government is possible. Thus far have we spoken in general terms, which are no more applicable to Victoria in Burmah than to any other Lodge in the jurisdiction of the United Grand Lodge of England. Let us now comment on the special circumstances of this particular case—but briefly, or we shall disgust the majority of our readers. We have received a letter from the W. Master of Victoria in Burmah, accusing us of unfairness in commenting on a case, which he says, is still sub judice, but which, from our point of view, is determined. Well, some time since, we received a long and very elaborate letter, which was mainly intended to be a defence of the other side of the question than that adopted by our correspondent, "A LOOKER ON." It was signed by the Past Master who, if we remember rightly, preceded the Rev. Bro. Marks in the chair. Our idea of this letter was, and is, that it was a communication distinguished, if in any way, by its profound insolence of tone and contempt for all constituted authority. In support of this view, we quote an early paragraph from the letter in question. It is to this effect; "I wonder what the members of the Grand Lodge will say when they discover that the appeal of Bros. Vaillant and others was entertained and disposed of in an unconstitutional manner. This perhaps may make the Grand Registrar's hair stand on end, but he must be prepared for this disclosure, and learn that he is just as liable to be deceived as any other human mortal" (sic). We commend this paragraph to our readers as the most unmitigated specimen we have yet seen or read of fraternal impudence. A simple W.M. of a subordinate Lodge declaring an appeal to Grand Lodge has been disposed of unconstitutionally. A W.M. who has sworn to obey faithfully the edicts of Grand Lodge setting them at defiance, and that in the most outrageously brazen and barefaced manner! And then the Grand Registrar's hair—our special wag standing by remarks that whether the learned and Very Worshipful Brother's natural hair or the hair of his professional wig is intended, does not hairpear on the record; but this is owing, no doubt, to the confusion of ideas caused by the hot weather. Be this as it may, it would have been more respectful to the Grand Registrar to have omitted all reference to his hair, legal or natural. He is capable of forming a judgment on a simple matter of Masonic usage or practice, as well as on the most intricate points of Masonic Law. His decision in this case has been fully and unanimously endorsed by Grand Lodge, and it would better have become the recalcitrant members of Victoria in Burmah had they accepted at first and without reservation what they will be compelled to accept ultimately on peril of being excluded once and for ever from their Masonic rights and privileges. Our opinion is, that no appeals, no subsidiary statements should be even listened to, until the present W. Master of the Victoria Burmah Lodge, No. 832 of Rangoon, has obeyed the orders transmitted to him in December last by our respected Grand Secretary. Let him observe the solemn oath he has taken in open Lodge on the occasion of his installation, and receive the now unjustly excluded brethren again into his Lodge; and when he has done these things, then, if he desires it, let him respectfully approach the supreme authority in Grand Lodge, and make whatever presentment he may choose to make.

As to the origin and circumstances of the quarrel, we have received a most elaborate statement, covered with pencil comments of great variety, and mostly uninteresting. We neither know nor care anything about the origin, &c., &c., of these unseemly squabbles. What we mean to do, and what we have done, is simply to uphold the authority of Grand Lodge, and the sneers and objections of the recusant brethren of Victoria in Burmah have more than ever confirmed us in this resolution.

The Annual Meeting of the Masons of the Province of Cornwall will be held on Tuesday, the 6th August next, at the Masonic Hall, Redruth. Prov. Grand Lodge will be opened at 10 a.m., and the business of the Province will be transacted. Among the items on the agenda paper is the dedication of the Masonic Hall of the Druids' Lodge, No. 589, to Masonic purposes. At 12 o'clock, the brethren will proceed to Church, where a sermon is to be preached by the Rev. Frederick J. Wintle, Prov. G. Chaplain.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—The chiefest wonder of modern times.—This incomparable Medicine increases the appetite, strengthens the stomach, cleanses the liver, corrects biliousness, and prevents flatulency, purifies the system, invigorates the nerves, and reinstates sound health. The enormous demand for these Pills throughout the globe astonishes everybody, and a single trial convinces the most sceptical that no medicine equals Holloway's Pills in its ability to cure, or all complaints incidental to the human race. They are a blessing to the afflicted, and a boon to all who labour under internal or external disease. The purification of the blood, removal of all restraints from the secretive organs, and gentle aperient action are the prolific sources of the extensive curative range of Holloway's Pills.

THE FOUR OLD LODGES.

BRO. R. F. GOULD.

I.—On the 1st of May 1777, Lord Petre was succeeded by the Duke of Manchester, during whose administration the tranquillity of the Society was interrupted by private dissensions. An unfortunate dispute having arisen among the members of the Lodge of Antiquity, on account of some proceedings of the brethren of that Lodge on the Festival of St. John the Evangelist, after his Grace's election, the complaint was introduced into the Grand Lodge, where it occupied the attention of every Committee and Communication for twelve months. It originated from the Master, Wardens, and some of the members, having, in consequence of a resolution of the Lodge, attended divine service at St. Dunstan's Church in Fleet Street, in the clothing of the Order, and walked back to the Mitre Tavern in their regalia, without having obtained a dispensation for the purpose. The Grand Lodge determined the measure to be a violation of the general regulations respecting public processions. Various opinions were formed on the subject, and several brethren highly disgusted. Another circumstance tended still farther to widen the breach. This Lodge having expelled three members for misbehaviour, the Grand Lodge interfered, and without proper investigation, ordered them to be reinstated. With this order the Lodge refused to comply, conceiving themselves competent judges in the choice of their own members. The privileges of the Lodge of Antiquity were then set up in opposition to the SUPPOSED uncontrollable authority of the Grand Lodge; and in the investigation of this important point the original cause of dispute was totally forgotten. Matters were agitated to the extreme on both sides; resolutions were precipitately entered into, and edicts inadvertently issued; memorials and remonstrances were presented. At last a rupture ensued. The Lodge of Antiquity supported its immemorial privileges; appointed Committees to examine records; applied to the old Lodge in York City, and to the Lodges in Scotland and Ireland, for advice; entered a protest against, and peremptorily refused to comply with, the resolutions of the Grand Lodge; discontinued the attendance of its Master and Wardens at the Committees of Charity and Quarterly Communications as its representatives; published a Manifesto in its vindication; notified its separation from the Grand Lodge; and avowed an alliance with the Grand Lodge of all England held in the City of York, and every Lodge and Mason who wished to act in conformity to the original Constitutions. The Grand Lodge enforced its edicts, and extended protection to the brethren whose cause it had espoused. Anathemas were issued, several worthy men in their absence expelled from the Society for refusing to surrender the property of the Lodge to three persons who had been regularly expelled from it; and printed letters were circulated, with the Grand Treasurer's accounts, highly derogatory to the dignity of the Society. This produced a schism, which subsisted for the space of ten years.

II.—To justify the proceedings of the Grand Lodge, the following resolution of the Committee of Charity, held in Feb. 1779, was printed and dispersed among the Lodges:—

"Resolved—That every private Lodge derives its authority from the Grand Lodge, and that no authority but the Grand Lodge can withdraw or take away that power. That though the majority of a Lodge may determine to quit the Society the constitution, or power of assembling remains with, and is vested in the rest of the members who may be desirous of continuing their allegiance; and that if all the members withdraw themselves, the constitution is extinct, and the authority reverts to the Grand Lodge."

III.—This resolution, it was argued might operate with respect to a Lodge which derives its Constitution from the Grand Lodge, but could not apply to one which derived its authority from another channel, long before the establishment of the Grand Lodge, and which authority had been repeatedly admitted and acknowledged.(1) Had it appeared upon record, that after the establishment of the Grand Lodge this original authority had been surrendered, forfeited, or exchanged for a warrant from the Grand Lodge.(2) The Lodge of Antiquity must have admitted the resolution of the Grand Lodge in its full force.

But as no such circumstance appeared upon record, the members of the Lodge of Antiquity were justified in considering their immemorial constitution sacred, while they chose to exist as a Lodge and act in obedience to the ancient Constitutions.

Considering the subject in this point of view, it evidently appears that the resolutions of the Grand Lodge, could have no effect on the Lodge of Antiquity; especially after the publication of the Manifesto avowing its separation. The members of that Lodge Continued to meet regularly as heretofore, and to promote the laudable purposes of Masonry on their old independent foundation.

IV.—The Lodge of Antiquity, it was asserted, could not be dissolved, while the majority of its members kept together, and acted in conformity to the original Constitution; and no edict of the Grand Lodge or its committees could deprive the members of that Lodge of a right which had been admitted to be vested in themselves, collectively, from time immemorial; a right which had never been derived from, or ceded to, any Grand Lodge whatever. To understand more clearly the nature of that Constitution, by which the Lodge of Antiquity is upheld, we must have recourse to the usage and customs which prevailed among Masons at the end of the last, and beginning of the present century. The Fraternity then had a discretionary power to meet as Masons, in certain numbers, according to their degrees, with the approbation of the Master of the work where any public building was carrying on, as often as they found it necessary so to do; and when so met, to receive into the Order brothers and fellows, and practise the rites of Masonry. The idea of investing Masters and Wardens of Lodges in Grand Lodge assembled, or the Grand Master himself, with a power to grant Warrants of Constitution to certain brethren to meet as Masons, on the observance of certain conditions at certain houses, had no existence. The Fraternity, were under no such restrictions. The ancient charges were the only standard for the regulation of conduct, and no law was known in the Society which those charges did not inculcate.

To the award of the Fraternity at large, in general meeting assembled, once or twice in a year, all brethren were subject, and the authority of the Grand Master never extended beyond the bounds of that general meeting. Every private assembly or Lodge was under the direction of its particular Master, chosen for the occasion whose authority terminated with the meeting.(3) When a Lodge was fixed at any particular place for a certain time, an attestation from the brethren present, entered on record, was a sufficient proof of its regular constitution; and this practice prevailed for many years after the revival of Masonry in the South of England. By this authority, which never proceeded from the Grand Lodge, unfettered by any other restrictions than the Constitutions of Masonry, the Lodge of Antiquity has always been, and still continues to be governed.

V.—[(4) And it is well known to have been an invariable rule, long after the establishment of the Grand Lodge in London, on its present system, for the Grand Master, at his installation, solemnly to engage to observe the ancient Constitutions, and to preserve the ancient privileges, of the Masons of England, as landmarks not to be removed.

From this state of the case, it must appear obvious that any regulation of the Society that is subversive of the original Constitutions, must be an encroachment on the ancient privileges of Masonry; and however, it may operate with respect to Lodges which have been constituted in conformity to that regulation, it can never affect others which are not warranted by their constitution to give it a sanction.]

VI.—While I have endeavoured to explain the subject of this unfortunate dispute, I rejoice in the opportunity which the proceedings of the grand feast in 1790 have afforded of promoting harmony, by restoring to the privileges of the Society all the brethren of the Lodge of Antiquity who had been falsely accused and unjustly expelled in 1779. By the operation of our professed principles, and through the mediation of that true friend to genuine Masonry, William Birch, Esq., present Master of the Lodge of Antiquity, unanimity has been happily restored, the Manifesto published by that Lodge in 1779 revoked, and the Master and Wardens of that truly ancient Association, the first Lodge under the English Constitution, have resumed their seats in Grand Lodge as heretofore; while the brethren who had received the sanction of the Society as nominal members of the Lodge of Antiquity during the separation, have been reunited with the original members of the real Lodge, and all the privileges of that venerable body now centre in one channel.

§ 18.—Brother Preston, however, in the foregoing narrative, omits to mention, that during the pendency of the secession, the Lodge of Antiquity, original No. 1, founded a separate Grand Lodge of its own, under the title of the "Grand Lodge of England South of the Trent." There being in consequence, at such time, four Grand Lodges of England in contemporaneous existence, viz.:—(5)

1. The Grand Lodge of England (Regular Grand Lodge), Established 1717.

2. The Grand Lodge of all England, York Masons,(6) 1725.

3. The Grand Lodge of England according to the Old Institutions ("Seceders"), 1753.

4. The Grand Lodge of England South of the Trent (7) (Lodge of Antiquity, original No. 1), 1778.

(1) APPROBATION.

THEREFORE WE, the present Grand Master of the Right Worshipful and Most Ancient Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons, the Deputy Grand Master, the Grand Wardens, the Masters and Wardens of particular Lodges, [with the consent of the Brethren and Fellows in and about the cities of LONDON and WESTMINSTER (*)] having also perused this performance, do join our laudable Predecessors in our solemn Approbation thereof, as what we believe will fully answer the end proposed: all the valuable things of the old Records being retained. —Constit. 1723.

This "Approbation" was appended to the first Book of Constitutions, A.D. 1723, and was followed by the names of Philip Duke of Wharton, G.M.; J. T. Desaguliers, D.G.M.; and others, as set out in Note. Note the passage within brackets (*); and compare with § 15 (II., III. and VI.), and § 16 (III., last note).

(2) It is here plainly implied that original No. 1 is the only Lodge which has preserved its Time Immemorial privileges intact. Compare, however, with preceding note.

(3) N.B.—In antient times no brother, however skilled in the Craft, was called a Master Mason until he had been elected into the chair of a Lodge.—Constit. 1873.

(6) Before this date, the chief officer was styled the President, and no such term as Grand Lodge is recorded.—Hughan, History of Freemasonry in York, p 41.

(7) Established by Warrant of Confirmation from the Grand Lodge of all England (York).

§ 19.—The exceptional privileges granted to the Grand Stewards will be noticed in Part III.; but Bro. Preston's commentary thereupon, may here be appropriably cited.(1) "A privilege has been lately granted to the Stewards' Lodge, of taking precedence of other Lodges; a measure incompatible with the Constitutions, and which can never be sanctioned by the rules of the Society; this privilege is said to have been irregularly obtained, and therefore several Lodges have entered protests against it in their private books, which in due time may have an effect, and probably induce a re-investigation of the subject."

Bro. Preston further states, "that it having been reported to the Lodge of Antiquity, that a member of the Stewards' Lodge, had threatened to enter a complaint, against the Master of a Lodge at Paddington, for having paid the usual compliment to the Master of the Lodge of Antiquity, on a visit, in preference to a member of the Stewards' Lodge, it was resolved by the members, 'That no Lodge, or member of a Lodge, under the constitution of England, shall take precedence of the Master of this Lodge. And that a letter be immediately transmitted to the Master of the Lodge at Paddington, thanking him for the respect shown to the Master of the oldest Lodge, and promising to defend him and his Lodge against the said complaint.' 'The complaint,' continues Preston, 'was never brought before the Society, and the matter dropt of course.'"

§ 20.—I. It should be recorded, however, that the power of the Four Old Lodges to erect a Grand Lodge in 1717, was somewhat rudely called into question, by the Ancient or Seceding Masons, and though the arguments adduced by them, command no weight whatever, and were probably invented by Bro. Laurence Dermott, (2) for the sole purpose of disparaging the Regular Grand Lodge—these, it must be recollected, were, up to the date of the Masonic Union of 1813, repeated in successive editions of the book of Constitutions (Ahiman Rezon), published by authority of the Grand Lodge of England, "according to the Old Institutions," with which Masonic body, moreover, the Regular Grand Lodge of England eventually amalgamated, on terms of equality. With respect to the resolution passed by the Regular Grand Lodge, "after the first meeting in 1717 (Revival), 'that without a warrant from the Grand Master for the time being, no Lodge should hereafter be deemed Regular or Constitutional,' (3) the Seceding brethren contended that the above assembly (Grand Lodge of England) did not possess the power to pass such a resolution; because it was not only self-created, but defective in numbers, whereas, in order to form (what Masons mean by) a Grand Lodge, there should have been the Masters and Wardens of five regular Lodges, that is to say, five Masters and ten Wardens, making the number of installed Officers fifteen.

"This (they continued) is so well known to every man conversant with the ancient laws, usages, customs, and ceremonies of Master Masons, that it is needless to say more, than that the foundation was defective in number, and consequently defective in form and capacity.

"Nor can it be urged that such defection or irregular formation was owing to necessity, as there were numbers of old Masons then in (and adjacent to) London, from whom the present Grand Lodge of Ancient Masons received the old system without adulteration."(4)

II. The author or compiler, however, of the Complete Freemason, or Multa Paucis, an unauthorised account of Freemasonry, issued about 1764-6, speaks of six Lodges being present or represented at the Revival; but as this statement is in direct contradiction to that of Dr. Anderson on the same subject, few will be found to differ from the opinion expressed by Bro. Hughan, "that the preference must be given to the account by Dr. Anderson, who clearly wrote at a time when many personally knew as to the facts narrated, and whose Book of Constitutions (1738) was really the official statement issued by the Grand Lodge, having indeed been written by its order, and agreed to in M.S. by the same body."(5)

(2) Grand Secretary, "Ancients:" 1752-70. Hughan's Masonic Memorials, p 10. It is not a little curious that Bro. Preston, the historian of the Regular Grand Lodge (1717), should have been initiated in a Lodge ("the White Stag") on the Roll of the "Ancients," whilst Bro. Laurence Dermott, the Secretary, Deputy Grand Master, and General Chronicler of the Seceders (Grand Lodge of England, "according to the Old Institutions") (1753), was a member of a "Regular" Lodge in London (Moderns) prior to his connection with the "Ancients."

This is the latest List in which all four of the Old Lodges appear.

It will be seen that No. 13 is missing.

(1) From Engraved List (Grand Lodge).

(2) It is probable that these words appear at head of the 1729 List, of which I have only seen a reprint, but the earlier List of 1725 is simply headed "List of Regular Lodges as constituted till March 25th."

They appear in the Engraved List for 1734.—See §§ 11 (note 5) and 13.

THE FOUR OLD LODGES.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Feeling assured that anything, however remotely associated with the Four Old Lodges, will prove of interest to your readers, and especially at the present time, when Bro. Gould's series of articles is appearing in your columns, I submit the following particulars relating to the original Nos. 1 and 4, which happily still exist. They are gathered from a valuable publication of Messrs. Cassell, Petter and Galpin, entitled Old and New London, the first two volumes of the work having been compiled by that able writer Mr. Walter Thornbury.

(a) Original No. 1,—hodie, Antiquity No. 2. This Lodge, as most of us are aware, held its meetings at an alehouse in St. Paul's Churchyard, bearing the uncommon sign of the "Goose and Gridiron." This sign, writes Mr. Thornbury, is found at Woodhall, in Lincolnshire, and other places, but the St. Paul's Churchyard Goose and Gridiron is supposed to have been originally the Mitre, a Musical house in London House-yard, at the north-west corner of St. Paul's. Two origins are given of the name. (1) According to the Tatler, when the Mitre ceased to be a music-house, the new landlord set up as his sign a goose striking the bars of a gridiron, in ridicule of the "Swan and Harp," a common sign for Music Houses. (2) It may be a vernacular rendering of the coat of arms of the Company of Musicians, which was probably suspended at the door of the Mitre, when a Music-house. These arms were "A Swan with his wings expanded within a double tressure, counter, flory, argent," and the double tressure might easily be mistaken for a gridiron. This was the first music-house in London, and its first master, Robert Herbert, alias Farges, sworn servant to His Majesty, besides being a publican and lover of music, was a great traveller, who, in the course of his thirty years' wanderings, collected many natural rarities, which were on view "at the Mitre, near the West end of St. Paul's Church, 1664." A great portion of the collection was purchased by Sir Hans Sloane, and it is conjectured that the site of this Mitre was afterwards occupied by the Goose and Gridiron alehouse. I should add that the foregoing particulars have been excerpted by Mr. Thornbury from Messrs. Hotten and Larwood's History of Inn and Tavern Signs.

In a few years Original No. 1, migrated from the Goose and Gridiron to the King's or Queen's Arms in St. Paul's Churchyard, where it remained till after 1715. Respecting this we learn that, in order to keep well with the City men, Garrick was in the habit of attending a Club held here. Here, too, Dr. Samuel Johnson, the great lexicographer, started a City Club, of which we read in Boswell, and here, some years later, there was a sixpenny Card Club, of which a Mr. Brasbridge, silversmith of Fleet-street, has left some interesting particulars.

The Mitre, Fleet-street—not the present Mitre in Mitre-court—ceased to be a tavern in 1788, and became, first, Macklin's Poets' Gallery, and then an auction room. It stood next to Hoare's Bank, and was pulled down in 1829, in order to enlarge the latter. The Society of Antiquaries met here from 1728 to 1753. In 1733, Thomas Topham, "The Strong Man," rolled up a large pewter dish in his fingers in the presence of a goodly company at the Mitre, and it was at the Mitre that in 1765 Johnson and Boswell met by appointment, when was formed that intimacy which is so memorable. Goldsmith was often with them, and the famous "Tour to the Hebrides" was planned here. It was hence likewise that the Masters, Wardens, and members of the Lodge walked in procession and wearing their regalia, to St. Dunstan's Church to attend Divine service, and then back again in like form. This apparently innocent perambulation was one of the causes which led to the rupture in 1779 between the Grand Lodge and the Lodge of Antiquity, in consequence of which the latter threw off its allegiance, as Grand Lodge held the procession in full Masonic clothing to be in violation of its law against such display. The healing of this rupture and the restoration of Antiquity to its place on the roll of Grand Lodge was one of the last Masonic acts of the Duke of Cumberland, Grand Master 1782-90, his death occurring very shortly after the reconciliation had taken place.

(b) Original No. 4, hodie R. Somerset House, Inverness, No. 4. This was held at the Rummer and Grapes in Channel-row, which is the same as Canon or Cannon-row, so called from its being assigned as a residence to the canons of St. Stephen's Chapel. According to Stow, the inhabitants in his time included "divers noblemen and gentlemen," as Sir Edward Hobbes, John Thynne Esq., Henry Clinton, Earl of Lincoln, and the Earl of Derby and the Duchess of Somerset, mother of the Earl of Hertford. On the south side is a dull and heavy building, erected in 1784 for the Board of Ordnance, but devoted to the then newly-formed Board of Control. This is now the Civil Service Commission. In this row, too, stood "the Rhenish Wine House of good resort," mentioned by Strype, and referred to by Prior and Montague:—

> "What wretch would nibble on a hanging shelf,
> When at Pontack's he may regale himself,
> Or to the house of cleanly Rhenish go,
> Or that at Charing Cross, or that in Channel Row."

This is no doubt "the Rummer and Grapes," where our original No. 4 held its meetings. It was the Lodge of Mr. George Payne, Antiquary and twice Grand Master, who, like many another Antiquary, was probably a man of taste in things vinous as well as a man of learning.

Digitized by Google

It was likewise to a lady residing in Channel Row that King Charles I., two nights before his execution, despatched his faithful Herbert to deliver to her a ring, and she in return gave Herbert a box sealed with three seals, two bearing the King's arms, and one a Roman figure, to deliver to the King. The following day Charles opened it, and showing the diamonds and jewels and parts of Georges and Garters it contained, said, "You see all the wealth now in my power to give my children." This touching anecdote is quoted by Mr. Thornbury from Wood's "Athenæ Oxonienses."

As regards the Turk's Head in Gerrard-street, Soho, where the Lodge was quartered in 1775, it was the headquarters of the Loyal Association in the Scottish rising in 1745. Here in 1764 the Literary Club was founded by Dr. Johnson and Sir Joshua Reynolds. On death of landlord in 1783 it became a private house, and the Club migrated to Sackville-street, and after oscillating, as it were, between there and Dover-street went thence and settled at the Thatched House Tavern, St. James's-street. Dryden lived and died in 1700 at Gerrard-street at present No. 43, and Edmund Burke lived in the same street, but number unknown.

Many of these particulars, indeed, the most of them, are non-Masonic, but they are interesting from a domiciliary or topical point of view and as such worthy, I think, of mention. It cannot be otherwise than agreeable to find the earlier homes of our oldest existing Lodges in localities or houses associated with eminent personages, whether Masons or non-Masons.

Fraternally yours,

THE LONDON MASONIC CLUB LODGE OF INSTRUCTION,

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Would you be so good as to inform the brethren (London and Provincial) who peruse your useful Journal, that the above Lodge of Instruction, at their last meeting, closed until Monday, 14th October, at 6 o'clock.

I am, thanking you in anticipation,

Fraternally and faithfully, yours,

J. E. SHAND,

Hon. Sec. L.M.C.L. of Instruction.

SIR CHRISTOPHER WREN'S CONNECTION WITH FREEMASONRY.

FALLACIES AND FACTS CONCERNING.

By BRO. JACOB NORTON.

ACCORDING to Dr. Anderson, Sir C. Wren was made S.G.W. by G.M. Henry Jermyn, Earl of St. Albans, on St. John's day, 27th of December 1663, and upon the death of G.M. Arlington in 1685, Sir Christopher was elected Grand Master, &c.

Again, "Grand Master Wren, who designed St. Paul's, London, A.D. 1673, as Master of Work, had conducted it from the footstone, had the honour to finish the noble Cathedral, the finest and largest temple of the Augustan style, except St. Peter's at Rome; and celebrated the copestone when he erected the cross on the top of the cupola in July 1708."

And again, "King George I. entered London most magnificently on the 20th of September 1714; and after the Rebellion, A.D. 1716,* the few Lodges in London finding themselves neglected by Sir Christopher Wren, thought fit to cement under a new Grand Master as the centre of union and harmony;" and this led to the election of "Mr. Antony Sayer, gentleman, Grand Master of Masons," on the ensuing St. John's day, 24th June 1717.

The above statements are mere fallacies; the title of Grand Master was unknown to Masons before 1717. There is no evidence whatever about the Earl of St. Albans, or [Lord] Arlington's connection with Freemasons. Sir Christopher Wren was, indeed, a member of the Masonic Fraternity, but we have the written testimony of his intimate friend Aubrey that Sir Christopher was not adopted a brother of the Fraternity before 18th May 1691. (See Halliwell's Constitution).

Dr. Anderson's dates of laying the foundation stone and of completing the Cathedral are also incorrect, the corner stone of St. Paul's Cathedral was laid, not in 1673, but two years later, and the completion of the building, or the laying of the copestone, took place, not in 1708, but in 1710. The following extracts from Dean Milman's Annals of St. Paul's will be read with interest, and will confirm the above remarks.

"The Architect himself (says Milman) had the honor of laying the first foundation stone, 21st June 1675. There was no solemn ceremonial, neither the King nor any of the Court, nor the Primate, nor the Bishop, not even, it should seem, was Dean Baucroft or the Lord Mayor present."

It is certainly surprising that neither King, nor Court, nor Primate, nor Bishop, &c., were present at the beginning of so important an undertaking; but the absence of the Freemasons would be more surprising still, if Sir Christopher had been connected with the Craft at that time. Mr. James Elmes, in his Memoirs of the Life and Works of Sir C. Wren, says, "The architect was assisted by Thomas Strong, the Master Mason, and the second by Mr. Longland." It is not stated that either of these Masons belonged to the Fraternity, but whether they were or not, their presence there was not what we (in the modern sense) would call their "Masonic capacity," but merely as assistants of the architect. Here is the account of the completion of the exterior of St. Paul's:—

"The exterior of the Cathedral was adjudged complete. It stood with its perfect dome and encircling colonnades, its galleries and ball, and surmounting cross. Sir Christopher Wren, by the hand of his son, attended by Mr. Strong, the Master Mason who had executed the whole work, and the body of Freemasons, of which Sir Christopher was an active member, laid the last and highest stone of the lantern of the cupola, with humble prayers for divine blessing." &c. (Annals of St. Paul's, by Dean Milman.)

Upon this occasion we see that the Freemasons were present, because Sir Christopher was then, in 1710, an active member of the Masonic Fraternity. The absence of the Freemasons in 1675, and their presence in 1710, seems to confirm Aubrey's testimony, that Sir Christopher began his connection with the Craft after the foundation stone of St. Paul's was laid.

So much for Dr. Anderson's fallacies about Wren's Freemasonry. But Laurence Dermott made some curious additions of his own to Masonic history. Repeated inquiries, he says, had been made by English and American brethren as to the cause of the origin of the Moderns (for so he styled the Grand Lodge of 1717), which he explained after the following fashion:—Anderson's account of Wren's Grand Mastership is fully admitted by Dermott as "gospel truth," but he attributes Wren's neglect of the Lodges not only to extreme old age, but to his dismissal, in the 90th year of his age, from the office of Surveyor to the King (which he held for fifty years) by King George I., and the appointment of Benson in his place.

"Such usage (says Dermott) added to Sir Christopher's great age, was more than enough to make him decline all public assemblies. And the Master Masons then in London were so much disgusted at the treatment of their old and excellent Grand Master, that they would not meet, nor hold any communication under the sanction of his successor Mr. Benson. In short, the brethren were struck with lethargy, which seemed to threaten the London Lodges with final dissolution.

"About the year 1717, some joyous companions, who had passed the degree of a craft (though very rusty), resolved to form a Lodge for themselves, in order (by conversation) to recollect what had formerly been dictated to them, or if that should be found impracticable, to substitute something new, which might for the future pass for Masonry amongst themselves. At this meeting the question was asked, whether any person in the assembly knew the Master's part, and being answered in the negative, it was resolved nem con that the deficiency should be made up with a new composition," &c.

The same authority also assures us, that though the London Lodges were closed for reasons already given, the country Lodges, particularly in Scotland and York, kept up their regular meetings, and consequently retained the original Simon Pure, and hence the London Masons were called Moderns, and the others, including his own Grand Lodge were Ancients.

This nonsense was printed in the 1764 edition of the Ahiman Rezon. It was reprinted in two or three other English editions before the Union of the two Grand Lodges in 1813, it was reprinted in American editions of the same work, and was received by the credulous so-called Ancients as veritable history, and, as far as I know, the statement was never questioned by Masonic writers. Nay, I have even read in Magazines about the ancient law of the English Freemasons, of being compelled to submit to the authority of the Surveyor of the King, or in other words, they were compelled by some law to elect him as G.M.

We all know that no such a law existed in the 18th century anywhere, nor did such a law ever exist in England. But assuming that such a law did exist when Sir Christopher was dismissed—that the Lodges were actually closed because the brethren would not submit to Benson's authority, and that in consequence thereof the Master's part was forgotten by all the London Masons. In such a case, we would be justified in supposing, that the appointment of Benson to the office so long filled by Wren must have taken place at least ten years before 1717, for otherwise the whole assembly of the London Masons in 1717 could not have forgotten such an important part. The fact, however, is, King George succeeded Queen Anne in August 1714; he did not arrive in London, as Dr. Anderson correctly states, until the 20th September following. We must naturally suppose that King George did not immediately after his arrival dismiss Sir Christopher. But, anyhow, the period between the appointment of Benson and the "revival" of 1717, must have been considerably less than three years—scarcely time enough for the whole of the London Masons to have become so rusty as Dermott made them out to have been. I could not at first find out the exact year of Benson's appointment, but if Dermott's statement was correct, about the 90th year of Sir Christopher's age, all I had to do was to find out when Wren was born; now all the biographical dictionaries agree that Wren was born in October 1632, hence, his dismissal from the office could not have taken place before 1722, or five years after the revival. The truth, however, is, Benson's appointment took place on the 20th April 1718, and Wren must have been dismissed about the same time. But be that as it may, it is certain that Wren still held the office of Surveyor several months after the formation of the Grand Lodge of England, as the following extract from Wren's letter to his tormentors will clearly show:—

"I have received [says Wren] the resolution of the Honourable Commissioners for adorning St. Paul's Cathedral, dated 15th October 1717, and brought to me on the 21st."

The above letter to the Commissioners is printed in Elmes' Life of Wren, also in the Life of Wren by the "Society of Useful Knowledge" (Lives of Eminent Men). So much for the fallacies promulgated by our Masonic luminaries about Sir Christopher Wren's connection with the Masonic fraternity.

* Probably means the Rebellion in Scotland in 1715.

Wren's tormentors, above referred to, were mainly composed of the Church dignitaries, who were appointed as Commissioners in connection with Sir Christopher to superintend the decoration of the interior of St. Paul's Church. These men were so ignorant of the rudiments of architecture, as (so it is said) not to have understood the technical phrases contained in Wren's letter, these undertook to dictate to Wren, and consequently marred the work materially. Dean Milman's following tribute to Wren, and scathing rebuke to his opponents, will be heartily approved by all lovers of truth and justice.

"Wren (says Milman) descended from his lofty elevation, or awoke from his ennobling contemplation, not to meet with homage, not with ardent admiration, not with merited gratitude from the Church, the city, the nation, for his wonderful work, but to encounter petty presumptuous jealousy, injustice, hostility, even—the word must be spoken,—unprovoked malignity, and finally absolute degradation,—as far as mean men could degrade one like Wren."

I have only one more remark to make, Wren is often referred to as "the Author of Parentalia." As far as I can learn, the book was written by Sir Christopher, and was continued by his son and grandson. The said book may perhaps contain some allusion to Wren's association with the Craft, but, unfortunately, I could not find a copy of that work in our principal Boston libraries.

VISIT OF AMERICAN MASONIC KNIGHTS TEMPLAR TO LONDONDERRY.

THE Freemasons of this city had an opportunity, of which they were happy to avail themselves on last Tuesday evening of welcoming a number of the brethren who had crossed the Atlantic for the purpose of visiting some of the principal Lodges in this country. The event is one of considerable importance, as showing the fraternal relationship which exists between the members of the Order, and the bond that unites them as closely in the new as it has for centuries in the old world, teaching the ennobling lesson to mankind that, amidst all the changes through which empires and peoples have passed, Freemasonry is immutable in its adherence to the principles of love and charity that the Supreme Architect of the Universe intended should bless and guide His creatures. About eight o'clock a body of the Knights Templar of Mary Commandery, No. 36, Philadelphia, conducted by Bro. W. E. Franklin P.G.S.D., Durham, arrived at the Quay per the steam tender from Moville, which the brethren had reached in the Anchor Liner Anchoria, and, on landing, proceeded to Mr. Jury's Hotel, Foyle-street. After remaining there for a short time, they left for the Freemasons' Hall, Magazine-street, where the Provincial Grand Lodge of Londonderry and Donegal of Free and Accepted Masons entertained them to a grand reception, under the presidency of Sir William Miller, M.B., Provincial Grand Senior Warden. The brethren, to the number of about seventy, sat down at nine o'clock to supper, supplied by Bro. James Johnston, confectioner, Ferryquay-street, in récherché style, and the night passed over in the most enjoyable manner, to the delight of all present. The following are the names of the guests:—Bro. Charles E. Meyer P.M., Daniel Sutter P.M., George T. Conrade, Charles Matthews jun., John Borden, Thomas A. Harris P.M., H. Edward Wendel, Chas. W. Packer P.M., Charles W. Leary, M.D, Jackson Heiss, William M'Carter, John Dornan, William J. Norris, Christopher Johnson, Thomas Kelsh, Lewis G. Drake, John A. Bickel, John S. M'Kinlay, Daniel Alfred Davidson, Edward White, Jacob V. Gotwalts. The presence of a large number of ladies in the gallery also graced the proceedings. Nor should we forget to mention that the lady friends kindly supplied each guest with a beautiful bouquet of flowers, to which was attached a card bearing the Derry Arms and the words cead mille failthe. The visitors left Derry yesterday for Portrush, and will visit Belfast, Dublin, &c. Another party of American Knights Templar will arrive in this city to-night (Thursday), and will also be entertained by the Derry brethren.—Londonderry Sentinel, 18th July.

ANECDOTES, &c., IN RELATION TO MILITARY MASONRY.

Capture of an English Ship by a French Privateer.—An interesting anecdote is recorded, at some length, to the following effect:—An English ship, whose crew consisted only of the master and three men, was captured by a French privateer. The officer who boarded the vessel discovered among the papers a Grand Lodge certificate that belonged to the master. He was not himself a Mason, but knew that his captain was; his manner was courteous; he took the papers and reported to the captain of the privateer, who came on board the prize, and on receiving a promise that on the master's reaching Plymouth he would use his best endeavours to obtain the release of a prisoner of war then at that depot, he gave him liberty and his ship. The grateful master kept his word; on landing he met the Masters of the Lodges, who memorialized government, and as speedily as possible the French prisoner was restored to liberty and his country.—Latomia. Leipzig, 1842.

Lodge of Unity, No. 18 (17th Regiment).—Lodges were established before and after 1733 to the British armies, and were called "Travelling Lodges," and are at present common to the armies of Europe and the East, and are productive of wholesome effects. Their tendency is to strengthen the bonds of friendship, and to diffuse among the officers and privates a spirit of charity, fraternal kindness, and subordination; this is beautifully illustrated by an event in our revolutionary war. After having routed a detachment of the British army, the constitution and regalia of a Lodge fell into the hands of the American General Parsons. Actuated by the genuine principles of Masonry, he immediately returned them to the British commander, with a note in the following words:—"When the ambition of Monarchs or the jarring interests of States call forth their subjects to war, we, as Masons, are disarmed of that resentment which stimulates to indiscriminate desolation, and however our political sentiments may impel us in the public dispute, we are still brethren; and, our professional duties apart, ought to promote the happiness and advance the welfare of each other. Accept, therefore, at the hands of a brother, the constitution of the Lodge "Unity," No. 18, held in the British 17th Regiment, which your late misfortune have put it in my power to return to you.—Address by Bro. C. W. Moore, 1836.

Art. 26.—No Army Lodge on the Registry of this kingdom shall, at any time, be charged with any dues payable to the Grand Lodge as annual contributions, except for the time they remain on Dublin duty.—Regulations, Grand Lodge of Ireland, 1768, Ahiman Rezon, 1782, p 70.

Art. 27.—No Army Lodge shall, for the future, make any townsman a Mason, where there is a registered Lodge held in any town where such Lodge do meet; and no town Lodge shall make any man in the Army a Mason where there is a Warranted Lodge held in the regiment, troop, or company, or in the quarters to which such man belongs; and any Army or other Lodge making a Mason contrary to this rule, to be fined a guinea.

"A series of articles, biographical, descriptive, and eulogistic, of some of the principal Masonic worthies of the day. They are well written, and though personal, by no means offensive, or intrusive into private life, and in Masonic society will be welcomed as an interesting series of word paintings of members of the Craft.—Standard.

"We do not remember to have read any similar series of sketches which surpass this in merit."—Land and Water.

"The book will be of great interest to Masons, containing as it does pen-and-ink sketches of the most distinguished men among them, and giving some considerable information on matters Masonic, from various points of view."—Lloyd's Newspaper.

"Admirably written, being free from what are too often observed in composition—inelegant language and prolixity."—Sunday Times.

"'J. G.' writes with a considerable amount of freedom, never hesitating to 'hit off' a weakness when he finds it publicly displayed by a 'distinguished brother;' at the same time he never loses sight of a good trait when it is displayed, either in connexion with the Craft or in the service of the public out of doors. The sketches are lively reading."—City Press.

"This is a neat book. The Portraits consist of a series of 'word pictures' of eminent English Masons. It styles Bro. W. J. Hughan 'Knight Errant,' and sketches thirty-two others under equally unique titles. We commend the book as worthy of a place in every Masonic library."—Voice of Masonry.

"Evinces much literary ability, and is a valuable addition to the few works we have in Masonic biography."—Philadelphia Keystone.

"The book ought to be in every well arranged Masonic Library."—New York Courier.

"We value the work, and heartily thank Bro. Morgan for our copy."—Masonic Jewel.

"The portraits consist of a series of what we call 'pen and ink sketches' of brethren prominent in all the noble undertakings of English Masonry. . . . Prominent among his brethren we find Bro. Fred. Binckes, ('Our Hercules,' whose herculean efforts in behalf of those blessed institutions, the charities of English Masons, have a world-wide reputation, which will live long after the zealous Craftsman has been, 'laid away to rest.'"—New York Square.

"The style of the author is pleasing, and the quality of his productions highly complimentary to his ability as a writer."—Masonic Advocate.

"It is a valuable contribution to English current literature."—Masonic Review.

"They belong to a kind of writing which has come to be amongst the most popular reading of the day. . . . . The types are as general as they are graphic. The salient characteristics are seized with an easy power, and happily hit off in felicitous phrase."—Sheffield Post.

"Cleverly and agreeably sketched, and the work altogether forms a valuable addition to Masonic literature."—Ryde News.

"Very amusing, and beyond doubt, faithful portraits of the worthies who unconsciously sat for them."—Deal, Walmer and Sandwich Mercury.

"The inquiring Brother who may wish to know something of the strength and beauty of the principles of Masonry, will find a pleasure in scanning the characteristic pictures in this book."—The Brighouse News.

"There is a pungency in the ready off-hand dash that lends much zest to the subject, and bars it from studied rhetorical expression."—Hebrew Leader.

"There can be no doubt that the writer has produced a series of Portraits which will be a source of amusement and pleasure to Masons throughout the world."—Surrey Comet.

"Will be found very interesting and pleasant reading, especially to the Masonic world."—Barnet Press.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

SCARCELY a day passes but the Government is worried in both Houses of Parliament by innumerable questions as to Cyprus, its intentions as regards Asia Minor, the Berlin Treaty, and whatever else it has done or left undone in relation to the Eastern Question. For instance, on Friday last, an exposition of the Ministerial policy having been tendered on the day previous by the Earl of Beaconsfield, Earl Granville asked Lord Salisbury for a more explicit answer respecting slavery, whether and to what extent it exists on the island of Cyprus, and the intentions of Her Majesty's Government respecting it. Lord Salisbury regretted his inability to answer the question until the Government were in possession of full information on the subject. Lord Carwell offered a remark and Lord Lilford gave some particulars as to the island, the acquisition of which he held would be a gain to the country. The Roads and Bridges (Scotland) Bill was, on the motion of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon, read a second time. On Monday, after Lord Napier and Ettrick had called attention to the Madras and Bombay famine, with a view to urge on the Government the necessity of obtaining returns as to the losses caused by those calamities, and Lord Cranbrook had replied, the Roads and Bridges (Scotland) Bill passed through Committee. On Tuesday, the Premier brought down a gracious message from the Queen, suggesting with reference to the approaching marriage of her son, the Duke of Connaught, that a suitable provision should be made for his Royal Highness, and it was arranged that the message should be considered on Thursday. Later in the evening, the question of Cyprus was again started by the Earl of Camperdown, who was exceedingly anxious to obtain a mass of information respecting the island, and in this wish he found two supporters, animated by a similar spirit of curiosity, in Earl Granville and Lord Hammond. The Premier defended the course pursued by Government in withholding information they themselves had as yet been unable to obtain; but this did not satisfy Lord Cardwell, nor was Lord Selborne content with the further defence offered by the Lord Chancellor. In fact, the greater part of the sitting was occupied with what can only be described as a most unseemly wrangle.

In the House of Commons, after a variety of questions respecting Eastern matters had been disposed of, the House made further progress in Committee with the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Bill, more than one division taking place on sundry of the clauses. On Friday there was an afternoon sitting, when the Marquis of Hartington gave notice of his intention to question the policy of the Government in the part they took in the Berlin Treaty and in concluding the Anglo-Turkish Convention, and requested that an early day might be devoted to the discussion of his resolution. The Chancellor of the Exchequer did not think he could fix an earlier day than Monday week (the 29th instant). The Committee on the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Bill was resumed, and further progress made. At nine o'clock the sitting was renewed, but the House was immediately counted out. On Monday, Mr. D. Plunkett gave notice of an amendment he should move to the Marquis of Hartington's resolution, and subsequently an attempt was unsuccessfully made to have this important debate set down for Thursday. The Contagious Diseases Bill was again discussed in Committee, and when clause 67 was reached progress was reported, and the House resumed. On Tuesday, after questions respecting the Anglo-Turkish Treaty and Cyprus had been answered, the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced the Message from the Queen already referred to, and gave notice that on Thursday he would move a resolution in accordance with its terms. Sir Charles Dilke gave notice that in such case he should move for certain returns. A resolution by Mr. Gladstone on the Indian Press Act was debated at length, among the speakers being Mr. Gorst, Sir G. Campbell, Mr. Smollett, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer. The resolution was defeated by 208 votes to 152 votes. The greater part of the sitting on Wednesday afternoon was occupied in Committee on the Contagious Diseases Bill, and the Highways Bill as amended was likewise considered.

The Queen and Princess Beatrice are now at Osborne, and on Saturday the Earl of Beaconsfield visited Her Majesty, and continued his visit till Tuesday. On Monday afternoon the noble Earl was invested without formality by the Queen with the insignia of the Order of the Garter. The Princess Beatrice was present, and his Lordship was introduced by Sir John Cowell, preceded by Sir Albert Woods (Garter), and having received the honour of Knighthood, kissed hands, and the Garter, with the Riband and George of the Order, were then delivered to him by Her Majesty. The other vacant Garter has been bestowed on the Marquis of Salisbury. These are not the only honours which our successful plenipotentiaries will receive, for, on Saturday next, the freedom of the City of London will be conferred upon them in Guildhall, after which they and all their colleagues will be entertained by the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress at the Mansion House.

The Prince and Princess of Wales have been well occupied during the current week. On Monday, their Royal Highnesses paid a visit to the London Hospital and spent a full hour in inspecting the wards, stopping every now and then to express their sympathy with the patients. The visit had been kept secret, but, somehow on the day itself a rumour of the Prince and Princess's intention got abroad, so that on quitting the Hospital, a large crowd had assembled and greeted the Royal visitors with the greatest enthusiasm. On Tuesday, the Prince and Princess visited Dartmouth, whither the Duke of Connaught, on board the Royal Yacht Osborne, had preceded them. They were received by the Duke and the naval officers of the district. The Royal Galley was in waiting, among the cadets who manned it being Prince Albert Victor, who acted as coxswain, and his brother, Prince George, who pulled an oar on the bow side. In the evening, a large number of distinguished guests was entertained on board the Osborne, while on shore there was a brilliant illumination. On Wednesday, the Mayor and Corporation of the borough presented a most loyal address of welcome to the Royal visitors, after which the latter were rowed aboard the training-ship Britannia, where Her Royal Highness distributed the prizes, among the distinguished company present being the Duke of Connaught, Prince Louis of Battenberg, the First Lord of the Admiralty, Lord and Lady Ramsay, Lord and Lady Chas. Beresford, Admiral Wellesley, &c. When the ceremony was over, the Prince expressed the pleasure it had afforded Her Royal Highness to be present and give away the prizes, and the First Lord of the Admiralty having called on the cadets to testify in the usual manner among boys their sense of the honour done by the Royal visitors, a number of hearty cheers were given, and the Prince and Princess returned on board the Osborne, leaving for London later in the afternoon.

Among the Masonic events of the week must be mentioned the annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Hertfordshire. The gathering was held this year at Watford, under the banner of the Watford Lodge.

On Wednesday an entertainment was given to Viscount Cranbrook, Secretary of State for India, by the noble Viscount's friends in the little Kentish town from which his lordship has taken his title. Indeed, it was with a view to celebrating his elevation to the peerage that the banquet was held. The chair was taken by Mr. Beresford-Hope, M.P., and amongst those present were Viscount Holmesdale, M.P., Sir Walter Stirling, Sir C. Oakley, Lord John Manners, Sir W. Hart Dyke, &c. The meeting was non-political, members of both parties attending. In the evening ladies were present, among them being Viscountess Cranbrook and her daughters. Everything passed off admirably.

Official notice has been given that the services of the Army and Militia Reserves will not be required after the 31st instant, and very minute instructions have been issued by the War Office as to their demobilisation. At the Royal Dockyards there is a cessation of that activity which prevailed so long as the issue of peace or war remained doubtful.

The arrival at Larnaca, in Cyprus, is announced of Sir Garnet Wolseley and staff, and his Excellency has already made a proclamation to the people that he has taken possession of, and will administer the island in the name of Queen Victoria. The British troops which had already arrived, and the Turkish forces were drawn up at the landing-place, and presented arms to his Excellency, a salute of seventeen guns being fired. The Queen's Proclamation was enthusiastically received, both the Greek Bishop and the Mahometan Mollah delivering addresses of a very congratulatory character. Every preparation is being made to organise the new Government, and we doubt not Sir Garnet will very speedily have things in order. Already numbers of people from Malta, &c., are flocking to the island, and the Cypriots, both Greek and Moslem, are looking forward to a very different state of things from what prevailed under the Turkish Government.

The President of the French Republic has duly ratified the Berlin Treaty, and the other Powers will follow France's example sooner or later. As we anticipated, the first feeling of jealousy on the part of our French neighbours is already passing away, and M. Gambetta, who was supposed to be the bitterest opponent of the Treaty and Anglo-Turkish Convention, has expressed himself to the Special Commissioner of the Times as on the whole well pleased with what has been done, and as especially rejoiced that England has resumed her place in Europe, for in this way the almost identical interests of the two great Western Powers will be most effectively promoted. In Italy there is very great soreness, and meetings are being held in various cities and towns which cause uneasiness to the government. As regards Austria, there have been delays in making the necessary arrangements between her and Turkey respecting the occupation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, but the Austrian troops will cross the frontier at an early date. It is feared there may be armed resistance to their entry. However, affairs in the East, will, let us hope, now settle down soon, and all fears of further troubles—at least for a long time to come—will then have passed.

It is with great regret that we announce the death of Bro. Samuel Tomkins, who till the Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge in March last held the position of Grand Treasurer of England. It will be in the recollection of our readers that the firm of Willis, Percival, and Co., bankers, of which he was a member stopped payment in February, and hence his non-re-election for the present year. Bro. Tomkins had held the office for very many years.

MEETING OF THE LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

THE July meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence was held at Freemason's Hall on Wednesday evening. Bro. Joshua Nunn, Bro. James Brett, and Bro. S. Rawson, occupied the President's, Senior Vice-President's, and Junior Vice-President's chairs respectively. Amongst the other brethren present were Bros. Bartlett, Cottebrune, C. Atkins, Cobham, Hogard, Britten, Hewett, C. G. Hill, E. C. Massey, Way, Poynter, White, Good, Darcy, W. H. Cobon, Malton and Allan. Bro. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary, acted for Grand Secretary, who is on his holidays. After the confirmation of grants made by last Lodge, £440 was granted to new cases, of which there were twenty on the list. Three were faulty, and the remaining seventeen were relieved with sums of £50, £40, £30, £20 and £10.

COMMITTEE MEETING, GIRLS' SCHOOL.

THE General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, was held on Thursday, at Freemasons' Hall. The brethren present were Bros. A. H. Tattershall (in the chair), Finney, Webster, Browse, Gladwell, Rucker, Thomas White, Letchworth, Peters, Wellsman, Dubois, Massey, Baker, Massa, W. Paas, Saunders, Rushworth, E. Spooner, Rosenthal, Faulkner and F. R. W. Hedges Secretary. Only one petition was before the brethren, and the candidate was placed on the list. £500 was fixed as the amount of security to be given by the Secretary, and the salary of the head clerk in his Office was raised to £100 a year.

EVERTON LODGE, No. 823.

THE monthly meeting was held at the Masonic Temple, Liverpool, on Wednesday, the 17th inst. Present—Bros. J. Houlding W.M., H. Ashmore S.W., J. S. Cuthbert J.W., P.M. Oglesby Sec., W. J. Lunt P.M. Treas., W. Boulton P.M. D.C., T. Webster S.D., J. Boyle J.D., J. Beesley Steward, T. H. Carefull I.G., Bryan as Org., W. H. Ball Tyler; Past Masters Bros. Cottrell, Shaw, Turner, Wilson, Halland, and a very large attendance of members, with a good muster of Visitors, among whom were—R. W. Yelland P.M. 1094, R. R. Martin P.M. 1094, R. P. France P.M. 594, John Pemberton P.P.G. Superintendent of Works, John Devaynes P.M. 667, T. Clarke P.M. 673, J. T. Callow P.M. 675, S. M. Davies FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, &c. After routine business had been disposed of, the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The Worshipful Master then signified his pleasure to proceed with the important business before the Lodge, viz. the installation of the W.M. elect; consequently, Bros. P.M.'s Turner and Lunt introduced Bro. Henry Ashmore as the Brother elected. Bro. J. Houlding addressed the Lodge, and instructed the Secretary to put the customary questions to Bro. Ashmore, which being answered, he was obligated, invested, and installed Worshipful Master of Everton Lodge, No. 823, for the ensuing year. Bro. Ashmore then received the salutations of the brethren, and with the assistance of the I.P.M. invested his Officers as follow:—J. Houlding I.P.M., J. S. Cuthbert S.W., T. Webster J.W., W. J. Lunt P.M. Treas. (for the eleventh time), J. Boyle Sec., T. H. Careful S.D., J. Beesley J.D., W. Brassey I.G., R. H. Webster S.S., J. M. King J.S., Galley and Gotham Assist. Sts., W. Boulton P.M. D.C., R. Brough Org., W. H. Ball Tyler. The charge in the East was delivered by Bro. Wilson P.M. most impressively, and that in N. East by Bro. Cottrell P.M., followed by Bro. Houlding I.P.M. delivering the final one. Never probably in the history of the Craft in this town has the beautiful ceremony of installation been more efficiently performed than on this occasion. The intense interest exhibited by the crowded gathering (every seat in the large Hall being occupied), and the gratifying expressions made use of by all, showed how great an honour each one thought it to be present. For our own part, we considered it one of the most enjoyable ceremonies we ever took part in. Availing himself of the proper time, the W.M., in the name of the Lodge, presented a magnificent P.M.'s jewel to the I.P.M., as a mark of esteem, and to which Bro. Houlding is so justly entitled. Bro. Houlding had scarcely returned thanks, when Bro. Henry Hipson advanced to the East, and with a few telling remarks presented a morocco album to the I.P.M. On this unique testimonial of fraternal regard being opened, it was found to contain, on the inside cover, an address, written by Bro. W. Maddox, and illuminated by Bro. Lowe, which read as follows:—

"Presented to Bro. J. Houlding, as a small token of remembrance of the very impressive manner in which he conducted the initiation service of the following eighteen brethren during his term of office as Worshipful Master of the Everton Lodge.—No. 823 of A.F. and A.M.

"Liverpool, 18th July 1878."

The album contained also the photographs, with names, of the eighteen brethren who had the distinguished honour of being initiated into our glorious Order by one of the most worthy Masons and efficient Masters that ever sat in the chair of K.S. Before closing the Lodge, a sum of £6 was voted from the funds for a benevolent purpose, and the business being concluded, the Lodge was closed in solemn form, and the brethren were invited to partake of supper, to which every one did ample justice. On the removal of the cloth, the Worshipful Master proposed the toast of the Queen, which was duly honoured, the brethren singing the National Anthem. United with the toast of our Grand Master was the Princess of Wales and the Rest of the Royal Family, which was heartily received, the brethren singing God Bless the Prince of Wales. Without loss of time, Bro. Ashmore gave our Masonic Rulers supreme and subordinate, and this toast being cordially received, Bro. Cottrell rose to propose the health of the newly installed Master. In assuming the responsibility of proposing what he considered the toast of the evening, he did so with great pleasure. Whoever aspires to the exalted position of Master must feel proud of the distinction conferred upon him when he occupies the chair of K.S. Bro. Ashmore is not a stranger to the office he has been elected to fill; yet, as regards this Lodge, he is. We know how he has worked his way up, and how entitled he is to have the honour of occupying the chair. Unity and concord have been the characteristics of this Lodge, and long may it continue so. He then called on them to drink the health of the Worshipful Master, Bro. Henry Ashmore. The toast was heartily received, and drunk with musical honours. After a song from Bro. Callow, the W.M. rose to respond. The time is advancing, and the brethren are desirous to be on their way home to prepare for the morrow's picnic, so he would be as brief as possible. He thanked the worthy brother for proposing the toast so kindly, and the brethren for its reception. In coming into the chair after so worthy a Master as their I.P.M., he could not say anything better than that he should do his best to give as much satisfaction as Bro. Houlding had done. He would rely on the cordial support of the officers and the brethren unitedly. With a settled and prosperous state of affairs, let us hope we shall enjoy peace and prosperity in our homes and in our Lodge. The W.M. then said he was pleased to see so many members and visitors present. He was sure they had appreciated the excellent manner in which the installation ceremony had been conducted, and he felt that it had been a great loss to those who did not witness the splendid manner in which it was done by Bro. Houlding. He fancied the excellence to which that brother had attained in the ceremony must have interfered greatly with his business, and perhaps disturbed his rest at night; such proficiency could only be attained by heavy sacrifices, especially as Bro. Houlding has so many calls on his time, demanded by his valuable services in aid of the Stanley Hospital. Without further preface, he would give the health of the Installing Master. The toast was enthusiastically received, and drank with musical honours. Bro. Handford, in his usual capital style, favoured the brethren with a song. The I.P.M. thanked the W.M. and brethren for the very kind manner in which his health had been proposed and responded to. It was now twelvemonths since he was elected to fill the chair of this Lodge, and he did not know an honour that he appreciated so greatly, or a position that had given him more pleasure to fill than the one he had that day vacated. During his term of office he might sometimes have appeared severe in his ideas of discipline, but for this he felt consoled by feeling that all his aims had been for the happiness of the brethren and the welfare of the Lodge, and it is gratifying to know, at the expiration of the year, that he had the thanks of the Lodge. In being consigned from the active post of W.M. to that of P.M., he felt a feeling somewhat akin to Othello's when he felt "his occupation gone." At the same time he trusted he might not fall into the "sear and yellow leaf." In the future, as in the past, he hoped to be of service to the Lodge, and should ever manifest the same interest for its welfare. He was also pleased to recognise the noble spirit of unanimity that had pervaded the Lodge. During the year they had carried out the grand principles of brotherly love, relief and truth. Our esteemed Brother then gave some interesting particulars of what had been done for the Stanley Hospital Charity, whereby a surplus of £4,200 had been realised, and having again expressed his thanks resumed his seat amid the applause of the brethren. The Past Masters were next toasted. All the members knew how deeply they had the love of the Craft at heart, and all are aware how well they support the Master. In fact all profit by and are indebted to their good work. The toast was warmly received. Here Bro. King kindly favoured the brethren with a song, and Bro. Boulton, as the oldest Past Master present, said it devolved on him to respond to the toast proposed by the W.M. and so heartily received by them all. He felt great pleasure in responding, as he was sure that all Lodges owe, in a great measure, their success and prosperity to those who have had the responsibilty of governing. He could look back to the childhood of this Lodge, and see the difference between now and then. The large number of members here to-day must be a guarantee that we have attained the full stature of Masonic excellence. We can now teach others what we once were glad to learn, and we can extend sympathy and support to branch Lodges that strike out from the Everton. He should always feel proud of the distinction of being a Past Master of the Everton, and as long as he was among them his services were at their disposal. Bro. Shaw P.M. proposed the next toast. If the time should ever come, that we have no Visitors to toast in the Everton Lodge, something must go wrong. He felt that visiting brethren contributed greatly to our pleasure and harmony. By their presence we perceive fraternal regard exhibited, and brotherly love was fostered. We extend to one and all our unbounded hospitality and most cordial greeting. The toast was most enthusiastically drunk, with musical honours. Bro. Devaynes P.M. 667 said he would not inflict on the brethren a long speech, but would heartily thank the Lodge for according such genuine hospitality. Other brethren followed, each and all expressing the delight they had experienced from being present on such an important occasion. The W.M. next honoured the Officers of the Lodge; he thought the selection which had been made would give every satisfaction. The toast met with favour, and the S.W. replied, after which the I.P.M. rose. The last toast reminded him of a duty he owed to the Officers, and he took this opportunity of thanking them for the kind and able manner in which they had aided him during his Mastership. The W.M. rose to propose the last toast: In all well regulated Lodges the absent brethren are not forgotten, he asked the brethren to drink the toast in the warmest manner. After a response from Bro. Callow, a few more songs and an animated chat ushered the time for the concluding toast; after which the brethren dispersed, highly delighted with the proceedings of the day, and looking forward to the morrow with hope and pleasure.

On Thursday, the 18th inst., the members of the Everton Lodge assembled, with their lady friends, at the Woodside Station, Birkenhead, where a special train, per G.W. Railway, was waiting to convey them to the place de rendezvous. Punctually the train started at 9·45, and after a clear run reached Chester. After a short stoppage the party steamed away through a lovely country to their destination, and soon reached the pretty little Station of Gresford. Alighting from the train, the party commenced the round of pleasures of the day. The short hill leading to the old village of Gresford was soon surmounted, and the Griffin Inn was taken possession of (so to speak) as a convenient depository for shawls, overcoats, umbrellas, and such like tiresome, but withal sometimes indispensable requisites for an "out." The venerable old Parish Church was the first object visited. By the kind permission of the vicar it had been opened for the inspection of the tourists. This ancient structure, so full of artistic, architectural, and historical interest, was greatly admired by all. After visiting the churchyard, and gazing in astonishment at the prodigious yew trees, all assembled within the sacred precincts, and sang with heart and voice, "The Old Hundredth." By 12 o'clock the party had reached the camping ground, which was situated on an elevated table land, commanding a magnificent landscape view; here a tent was erected, with two rows of tables, joined at the farther end by a short one extending across the width. On the tables at proper distances were placed some fine salmon, with every adjunct to tempt the appetite. The tables were decorated with bouquets, which sorely tried many a brother who had a fair tempter by his side. The tables were amply supplied with fruit, consisting of grapes, cherries, currants, and strawberries. After the course of fish, came cold meats, served with abundance of hot vegetables, and every one enjoyed the capital repast provided, while the proceedings were enlivened by some good selections from harp, lute and violin. While the room is being re-arranged, we will for a few minutes explore the surrounding scene. The spot where our party assembled is on an elevation commanding a view of the charming Vale Royal. The eye glances away in the distance, over mead and woodland, and the mind discerns the renowned old City of Chester. There, standing out in bold relief, we recognise the grand old Cathedral tower, and nearer still, and to the right, is seen the Storm-beaten St. John's Church, many other points of interest are discernible; on the right of us, in the rich plains of Cheshire, the locality of Eaton Hall is indicated by the fine clock tower which now and then gleams out brightly, as the fleecy clouds pass over the mid-day sun. In the front, and to the left of us, rise grandly the natural bulwarks of Cymry, whose every inch of ground is replete with historic renown and deeds of valour, wrought by a noble and unconquered race. Those sons of Wales no longer make the mighty mountains and deep defiles resound with their warlike cries, but, by honest, peaceful toil, are content to till and draw from mother earth the fruit of labour. To add to the delight of all, and make this picturesque and charming retreat so truly enjoyable, we are favoured with a day which may be termed warm but not oppressive, a bright and clear atmosphere without a glaring sunshine, and a gentle breeze just strong enough to waft the sweet perfume of wild flowers and the odours of new mown hay from the plains beneath. But the musicians are ready, and our brethren are standing to order with their fair companions, and, at the given signal from our genial Director of Ceremonies, Bro. Boulton, away they merrily trip. Dance follows dance, and a merry time is spent until tea is announced. This meal, like the former, is admirably served. Indeed, too much praise cannot be given the Stewards for their indefatigable exertions. It must have been an ample recompense for their trouble that the brother Stewards, in due course, were favoured by being waited on by the ladies. The secret of the success of this admirably arranged pic.nic is owing to the efficiency of the Committee, which consisted of Bros. Ashmore, Houlding, Wilson, Beesley and Boulton, the latter brother acting as Secretary. Bro. Casey, of Lodge No. 1086, also ably assisted. When we consider that upwards of 250 guests sat down, we must add that everything was done in accord with the discipline and zeal which so eminently characterises the Everton Lodge. Moreover, the Great Western Railway executive must be thanked for the special arrangements so considerately made by them. By 9.45 p.m. all were safely deposited at Liverpool, the return journey having been accomplished while it was yet light. It was pleasing to hear the expressions of delight with this most enjoyable trip. Ere we conclude, we must wish the Everton Lodge every prosperity, and to each brother in his daily vocation health, wealth and happiness.

Temple Chapter, No. 1094.—The regular Convocation was held at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, Liverpool, on the 23rd instant. Present—Comps. R. Washington M.E.Z., R. C. Yelland H., J. W. The Chapter was opened in ancient form, and the minutes of the last regular Convocation read, declared correct, and ratified. On a proposition by Ex-Comp. Pemberton, which was promptly seconded, a sum of five pounds was voted from the funds of the Chapter for a benevolent object. On the suggestion of the M.E. Principal, there being no candidate present for exaltation, Comp. J. gave the lecture of his high office, and was followed by Comp. H., both doing their work most creditably. The M.E.Z. followed with the beautiful and difficult Ritual of his office, and performed his task with impressiveness and power, entitling him to be called one of the first R.M. Masons in the town. Working without a candidate and with one, are two different things; and it is much to be regretted that we have again to chronicle a visit to a Liverpool Chapter where there was no exaltation. We know there are many candidates on the lists; that it will be a busy time for Officers in the various Chapters during the coming month or two, and we are sure any visitor from the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE will receive a cordial reception. The Chapter was solemnly closed, and by command of the M.E.Z. the Companions were invited to refreshment.

Tredegar Lodge of Instruction, No. 1625.—Met at the Royal Hotel, Mile-end-road, on Monday the 22nd inst. Bro. Cole acted as W.M., Rawley S.W., Frankel J.W., Gottheil P.M., G. Hollington Sec., Hubbard I.G. The W.M. very efficiently rehearsed the initiation ceremony. A well deserved vote of thanks was proposed to him by Bro. Gottheil, who complimented Bro. Cole upon his remarkable progress in the short time he had been a member of the Craft. Bro. Hollington, S.W. of the Mother Lodge, in which Bro. Cole was initiated, seconded the proposition with much cordiality, and remarked that he had watched with great pleasure and gratification the efforts of Bro Cole in perfecting himself in the work in which he succeeded so well. There was no doubt he would ultimately become a shining light in the Lodge. Bro. Rawley will be W.M. on Monday next, Lodge meets at 5 p.m.

DEATH.

THE CONSECRATION OF THE EZRA, No. 1489, AND METROPOLITAN, No. 1507, CHAPTERS.

OWING to the great pressure on our space last week, we regret to say we were unable to insert any account of these auspicious events in R.A. Masonry. Auspicious they undoubtedly are, for they show unmistakably that the Royal Arch is surely and continuously increasing in the estimation of Craftsmen. The consecration of the Metropolitan Chapter took place on Thursday, the 11th inst., at the Metropolitan Club, Pentonville-road, the performance of the ceremony being entrusted to our respected Comp. James Terry Prov. G. D. of Ceremonies, Herts, who was assisted in his important functions by Comps. Joseph Smith as H. and Thomas A. Adams as J. There were present Comps. James Willing jun., J. R. Stacey, and W. J. Ferguson Z., H. and J. designate respectively, together with Comps. W. M. Stiles, C. W. Hudson, H. H. Child, B. H. Swallow, J. J. Michael and C. B. Payne. Having performed the ceremony of consecration with all due solemnity, and in his usual impressive manner, Comp. Terry proceeded to instal the three principals, Comps. Stiles and Hudson being subsequently invested as Scribes E. and N., and Comp. Child as Sojourner, while Comp. Barnes was elected and invested as Janitor. A vote of thanks, with the further compliment of honorary membership, was unanimously voted to Comp. Terry, who, as usual, very gracefully acknowledged it. The Chapter having been closed, the Companions adjourned to banquet, and on the removal of the cloth, the customary Loyal and Masonic toasts were given with praiseworthy brevity and responded to most cordially. The Companions at length separated, after having spent one of the most agreeable evenings in the recollection of those present.

The Consecration of the Ezra Chapter, No. 1489, took place at the Hall of the Metropolitan Societies' Asylum, Balls Pond-road, Dalston, on Friday, the 12th inst., at the hour of 4 p.m. There was a numerous gathering of Companions, the duties of consecration having been entrusted to Comp. John Hervoy the esteemed Grand Scribe E., who was assisted by Comp. H. G. Buss P.Z., Grand Standard Bearer, and Comp. Jas. Terry Z. No. 228, Prov. G.D. of Cerms. Herts. The ceremony having been duly performed, Comp. Hervoy installed Comps. J. E. Walford, Wm. Stephens, and T. Hastings Miller, the three Principals Designate as M.E.Z., H., and J. respectively. The Officers were then appointed and invested, after which Comp. Walford proposed a vote of thanks to Comp. Hervey and his able coadjutors for their kindness in presiding over the important functions of the day, and to that he added a motion that the privileges of honorary membership should also be conferred on the worthy Companions. The motion having been passed unanimously and the compliment acknowledged in suitable terms, and what other business remained to be done having been disposed of, the Chapter was closed and the Companions adjourned to the banquet. Among the most noteworthy toasts were those of the Consecrating Officers and the M.E.Z., which were received with enthusiasm and responded to by those concerned with great warmth of feeling. We trust that Ezra, and its companion Chapter, the Metropolitan, may have a long and prosperous career before them.

SURREY MASONIC CLUB ENTERTAINMENT.

THE Musical and Dramatic Costume Recital by Mr. F. H. Macklin of the Duke's Theatre and other artists, which was fixed for the 17th instant, proved a very successful entertainment, and though the Hall was not so full as it might have been, the attendance must be described as respectable, having regard to the intense heat of the weather. The arrangements, which had been entrusted to Bro. James Stevens, Honorary Secretary of the Club, were well planned, and as well carried out, and the audience dispersed, evidently well pleased with what had been done both for their entertainment and comfort. Part I. of the programme commenced with an overture by Madame Armytage Cooper, and this was followed by a selection played in character from the Happy Pair, the parts of Mr. and Mrs. Honeyton being well sustained by Mr. L. Earle and Miss Grace Armytage respectively. Mr. C. H. Jesse having sung Green's song, entitled "Somebody," and Mr. R. Markby having very successfully recited Edgar Poe's well-known poem of "The Raven," Miss Grace Armytage delighted the audience with her rendering of "Thy Face," a song by Marriott. Mr. E. Campbell's Imitations of Popular Actors were very successful, and were well and justly applauded. The Second Part began, like the first, with an overture by Madame Armytage Cooper, after which Mr. R. Markby as John Mildmay, and Mr. F. H. Macklin as Captain Hawkesley, played in a selection from Still Waters Run Deep. Beautiful Roses, gracefully and artistically sung by Miss Grace Armytage, was followed by the song of The Untidy Family. Mr. Macklin (Modus) and Miss Agnes Leonard (Helen)—the lady being also of the Duke's Theatre, and like Mr. Macklin, appearing by permission of Mr. J. Mortimer—appeared in scenes taken from acts IV. and V. of the well-known play, by Sheridan Knowles, of the Hunchback, and their rendering of their respective parts was worthy of all praise. God Save the Queen brought the programme to a close, and we cannot but congratulate the Club and its energetic Secretary, Bro. Jas. Stevens, on the success of the evening.

LIBRARY.—The Voice of Masonry is pleased to know that the Craft, at Richmond, Va., are earnestly working in behalf of their library. They are awake to the idea of being Reading Masons and not wanting in general Masonic intelligence. Let all who can, lend them a helping hand.

Present—Bros. Nordon W.M., Grammer S.W., Chapman J.W., Biddel S.D., Da Silva J.D., Maidwell I.G., Grammer Hon. Sec., Webb Preceptor, and other brethren. The ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Prosperity Lodge of Instruction, No. 65.—At the Hercules Tavern, Leadenhall-street, 23rd inst. Bros. Maidwell W.M., Powell S.W., Daniel J.W., Hollands S.D., Roberts I.G., Davis, &c. The Lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. Davis answered the questions leading to the third degree and was entrusted. The Lodge was opened in the third degree, and Bro. Davis was duly raised, Bro. Maidwell giving the traditional history. The Lodge was closed down to the first degree, Bro. Powell was elected W.M. for the ensuing Tuesday. Nothing further offering for the good of Freemasonry, the Lodge was closed in due form. In answer to several inquiries, we announce that it is intended to keep this Lodge of Instruction open during the summer months.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 193.— Met at the Railway Tavern, London-street, E.C., on Wednesday, the 24th inst. Bro. Biddle occupied the chair, Moss was S.W., Fells J.W., Gottheil P.M., Walker S.D., Craske I.G. The W.M. rehearsed the ceremony of the third degree. The work was fairly done, the few faults arose from want of practice. The meetings of this Lodge having been continued with unhoped for success during the hottest part of the summer months, the brethren have determined not to adjourn; the meetings will therefore take place regularly without intermission every Wednesday at 7 p.m. Bro. Moss, a young but persevering Craftsman, will be W.M. on the next occasion, when he proposes to work the initiation ceremony.

assisted by Captain Simner P.M. P. Dist. G.S.W. British Burmah, presented Bro. Charles Gerrard S.W. and W.M. elect for the benefit of installation. The first part of the ceremony being completed, the Lodge was opened in the third degree, when the Installing Master appointed P.M.'s as Wardens and Inner Guard. The Master Masons having retired, the W.M. was entrusted, and withdrew. Bro. Bowes then opened a Board of Installed Masters in ample form, being assisted by twelve P.M.'s. The W.M. elect was then readmitted and placed in the chair of K.S. according to ancient custom. The brethren were afterwards re-admitted in their respective degrees, and the W.M. saluted, proclaimed and greeted in the manner usual among Masons. After the investiture of the Officers for the ensuing year, the Installing Master delivered the addresses to the W.M., Wardens and Brethren. Bro. Capt. Simner proposed, Bro. Wass I.P.M. seconded, and it was unanimously resolved that the cordial thanks of the Lodge be given in writing to W. Bro. John Bowes, for the very able and impressive manner in which he had discharged the duties of Installing Master that day. Bro. Bowes having acknowledged the compliment, and the other business before the Lodge being completed, the Lodge was closed in form with prayer. The brethren then left the Hall in conveyances, accompanied by their wives and sweethearts, to the Castle Hotel, Halton, where they sat down to a sumptuous banquet, under the presidency of the W.M. Bro. Charles Gerrard, who was supported by nearly seventy brethren and ladies. Grace after meat having been said by the Chaplain, Rev. J. Lockwood, the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were given. The presence of the ladies afforded scope for some divergence from the usual post-prandial proceedings, and many happy allusions were made for the especial benefit of the fairer part of the audience. During the proceedings the W.M., on behalf of the members of the Lodge, presented Bro. Wass with an elegant Past Master's jewel, on which was the following inscription:—Ellesmere Lodge, 758. Presented to Bro. W. R. Wass P.M., by the members of the Ellesmere Lodge, 758, as a token of their esteem and appreciation of his services to the Lodge during the eighteen months he held the Office of Worshipful Master. July 1878." Several excellent songs were sung by Bro. Dumville P.M., the leading tenor of the Manchester Cathedral, and Bro. Greenwood, Organist of All Saints' Church, Manchester, the latter gentleman being "a host in himself." The party then adjourned to the grounds of the Castle, where dancing, bowling, and other out-door amusements were engaged in until six o'clock, when they proceeded to Halton Church, which, by the kindness of the Rev. J. Lockwood, the Chaplain of the Lodge, was thrown open to them for their inspection. On entering, the party quietly seated themselves, and Brother Greenwood, having taken his place at the organ and played a short voluntary, the Rev. J. Lockwood gave out the Old Hundredth Psalm, which was heartily and devotionally sung by all present. Bro. Greenwood then sang, most ably and artistically, the aria from Mendelssohn's Elijah, "Oh, rest in the Lord," accompanying himself on the organ; after which Bro. Dumville sang most effectively the tenor solo from the Messiah, "But Thou did'st not leave," being accompanied on the organ by Bro. Greenwood. The party then returned to the Castle, where they sat down to a sumptuous tea; after listening to some excellent singing by Bros. Greenwood, Dumville and Wareing, they again repaired to the grounds, where out-door amusements were engaged in until half-past nine o'clock, when they returned in conveyances to Runcorn, all well pleased with the day's proceedings.

Acworth offered himself as candidate, and the first ceremony was rehearsed. Bro. May was elected W.M. for 2nd August, 26th July being the meeting of the Mother Lodge. Bro. The latter item includes purchase of regalia, furniture, &c., and explains its large proportion as compared with receipts. The Lodge was then closed in due form, and adjourned till Friday, 2nd August, at half-past seven p.m. We congratulate the members on the successful result of the first year's operations, and feel we can predict equal prosperity in the next and following seasons.

Two gentlemen were proposed for initiation at next meeting, and some private business was transacted; after which the brethren sat down to refreshment, separating at 10 o'clock.

Felix Lodge, No. 1494.—This Lodge held its regular meeting on Saturday, the 20th of July, at the Clarence Hotel, Teddington. Present—Bros. Edward B. Grabham P.P.S.G.W. W.M., Archer S.W., Atkins as J.W., Francis Bradley Archer P.M. Sec., Knyvett P.M. Treas., H. R. M. Belward S.D., A. C. Hunter J.D., Hunter I.G., W. Y. Laing Tyler; Past Master Bro. W. G. Moore, &c. Visitors—Bros. Charles Atkins P.M. 27, W. W. Morgan 211, John Grabham 1609, Nicholson, Yeo, &c., &c. At the opening of the Lodge, the attendance of members was somewhat meagre, but this was accounted for by counter attractions, and the engagements of several of the brethren; moreover, it was the last day of the Wimbledon Meeting. The Lodge was opened by Bro. Grabham, and the minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. The ballot was then taken for Mr. Evelyn Brookshank Tattershall, who was proposed and seconded by Bros. E. B. Grabham and W. G. Moore; the result was satisfactory, and Mr. Tattershall received his introductory step, Bro. Grabham most impressively conducting the ceremony. Routine business followed, and then the Lodge was closed. After a brief interval, most enjoyably spent in the well-ordered gardens of the Clarence Hotel by some, and by others in a ramble in Bushey Park, the banquet was given. The tables were tastefully laid out, and the viands capitally served. On the removal of the cloth, Bro. Grabham, who presided in right genial fashion, gave the toasts Loyal and Masonic, which were heartily responded to. In giving the health of the Prov. G. Master, Col. Burdett and the rest of the Grand Officers past and present, the W.M. regretted there were not more present; on the last occasion they met they were honoured with the presence of Col Burdett and several other distinguished Craftsmen of the Province; on the present occasion he would associate with the toast the name of Bro. Knyvett, who gracefully acknowledged the compliment. In giving the health of the initiate, Bro. Grabham felt he had introduced a gentleman who would prove to be a true and good Mason, and one every member of the Lodge would be pleased to associate with. After the Entered Apprentice Song, by Bro. Hunter, Bro. Tattershall replied: He felt proud at being received into the Order; he had formed his ideas of it from many worthy men with whom he was associated in daily pursuits. He assured them his hopes had been fully realised, and trusted they might never regret his having joined the Felix Lodge. To Brother Moore was entrusted the toast of the Worshipful Master. It was to him a great privilege to perform this act of duty. All the brethren were acquainted with the sterling qualities of Bro. Grabham, and he (Bro. Moore) felt great pleasure in bringing the toast under notice. Bro. Grabham felt greatly honoured by the kind expressions of Bro. Moore. He felt gratified at having been selected to fill the chair for the first and fourth years of the existence of the Lodge, and greatly appreciated the compliment thus paid him by the members. He assured them he should continue to make the success of the Lodge his first study, and hoped in the way its affairs were conducted it might be second to none in the province of Middlesex. The remaining toasts were then duly honoured and responded to. During the evening Bros. John Grabham, Hunter and others exerted themselves most successfully to entertain the company by songs and recitations.

Sir Hugh Myddelton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1602. Held at Bro. Wood's, Crown and Woolpack, 162 St. John-street-road, on Tuesday, the 23rd inst. Present—Bros. Hallam sen. W.M., W. Rawley S.W., H. P. Isaac J.W., Hirst S.D., Summers J.D., Pearcy Preceptor, Fenner acting Secretary, Hallam jun. I.G.; also Bros. Wood, Trewinnard, F. Goode, T. Goode, Powell, Morris, &c. Lodge opened, minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. Pearcy worked the first section of the second lecture, assisted by the brethren. Bro. Hirst having given proof of his proficiency, was entrusted. Lodge was opened in the third degree, and the ceremony of raising was rehearsed by the W.M. in a careful manner. Bro. Pearcy worked the second and third sections of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. Lodge being resumed to the first degree, Bro. H. P. Isaac, J.W. of the Kingsland Lodge, No. 1693, was elected a member. Bro. W. Rawley was elected W.M. for next week, after which Lodge was closed and adjourned.

West Middlesex Lodge, No. 1612.—This Lodge held an emergency meeting on Saturday, the 20th of July, at the Ealing Institute, Ealing. Present—Bros. A. Beasley W.M., Henry Kasner S.W., A. J. Burr J.W., J. Chambers Roe P.M. Sec., J. Green S.D.,

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

Royal Alfred Lodge, No. 780.—The last gathering of the session, and meeting for election of W.M., &c., for the ensuing year was held on Friday last, the 26th ultimo. There was a very fair attendance of members, and the visitors on this occasion were represented by Bros. W. J. Kennaby 1420, E. J. Acworth 133, R. E. Clarke P.M. 1158, Charles Misselbrook 781, E. Benjamin P.M. 348, D. E. Bandmann 32°, G. W. Lay 569, W. E. Haycock P.M. 1441, W. W. Morgan 211. The Lodge was opened at two o'clock by Bro. Walter Goss, who was supported by Bros. Charles May S.W., William Gomm J.W., J. Smith P.G.P. Treas., William Hilton P.M. Sec., B. Blasby S.D., Erwin J.D., Costelow I.G., Tarling W.S., Franckel Assist. Steward. Gilbert Tyler. There were also present Past Masters Brown, Littlewood, Lloyd, Beasley, Gardiner, Potter, &c. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and declared correctly recorded, Bro. Frederick Botley was examined, and duly raised to the sublime degree. There were three candidates on the list for passing, but two only were present; both these brethren, however, sustained their claim for advancement, and Bro. Walter Goss performed the ceremony, much to their edification and satisfaction. The ballot was taken for two gentlemen—Messrs Richard Wood and Robert Gifford. It resulted satisfactorily, and they, with Messrs. J. Snook and Edwin Eydmann, who were balloted for at the last meeting, were severally initiated into our mysteries. Bro. Walter Goss performed all the ceremonies with his wonted care, to the gratification of the members and visitors. The election of Worshipful Master resulted in Bro. Charles May being unanimously chosen to fill that important office, and he was cordially congratulated on the auspicious event, which congratulations he briefly but heartily acknowledged. The election of Treasurer resulted in the reappointment of Bro. Smith, while Bro. Gilbert again received the suffrages of the members for the post of Tyler. Bros. Gunner, Eydmann, and Becket were then appointed auditors, and a day was fixed for the audit to take place, the W.M. expressing a hope that all his Officers would endeavour to be present. Notice of motion was given that the customary P.M.'s jewel be provided out of the Lodge funds, and that it be presented to the retiring Master at the next meeting, and then a pleasing incident occurred. A request had been made by the Worshipful Master of a Bombay Lodge that the Master of the Royal Alfred would invest Bro. P.M. Beynon, who was now in this country, with a jewel which had been voted to him by the members of his own Lodge. The brethren of this Lodge were desirous that Bro. Beynon should be able to exhibit, while he was in this country, the mark of esteem in which he is held by the members of his own Lodge, hence they preferred the request. Bro. Walter Goss, addressing Bro. Beynon, stated it afforded him much gratification in being the medium of conveying to a worthy brother this mark of respect in which he was held by the brethren of the Lodge to which he belonged, and trusted he might always bear in mind the Lodge where he first received the elegant gift. After an acknowledgment by Bro. Beynon, the Lodge was closed. The banquet was served in Bro. Stanbury's New Hall, and was placed on the table in that worthy brother's best style. On the removal of the cloth, the toasts were briefly introduced. Bro. J. Smith replied for the Grand Officers. Bro. J. Chambers Roe, in his customary hearty way, proposed the health of the W.M. He did so on this occasion with infinite pleasure; Bro. Goss had laboured now for nearly twelve months, and with great advantage to their Lodge. This would be the last occasion on which he (Bro. Roe) would have to propose the toast, and he was sure the members would heartily respond. After Bro. Gunner had favoured the company with one of his humorous songs, the W.M. replied. He briefly referred to the principal events of his year of office, and concluded by thanking all for the kindness and consideration he had always experienced. The next toast was the health of the four initiates, and each of those brethren acknowledged the compliment. Bro. Snook, kindly complying with the request of the W.M., sang "Have faith in one another." The P.M.'s next received their meed of praise from the W.M., and replies to the toast were made by all who were present. For the Visitors Bro. Morgan replied; he referred with satisfaction to the election of Bro. Charles May to fill the chair of the Lodge in which his father, the late Samuel May, had always occupied so distinguished a position. Bro. Bandmann followed; he also referred to the eminent qualities of our late Bro. May; qualities which had endeared him to all with whom he was brought into association. Bro. Samuel May was a Mason in the truest and best sense of the term, and he (Bro. Bandmann) was sure his son Charles would follow in the footsteps of so worthy a sire. Other visitors also addressed the members, and all expressed their pleasure at the hospitality displayed. Bro. Morgan here, by request, gave "the Balaclava Charge," after which Bro. Goss requested Bro. Bandmann to give the brethren a taste of his quality. Bro. Bandmann immediately rose; he thanked the W.M. for his kind remarks. He would gladly do anything he could to entertain the company, but he feared the piece he might select would prove somewhat heavy, and he had no desire to weary the brethren from whom he had received so much kindness. True, he could give them something from Shakspeare, but in this he should prefer a little help, and he would suggest that Brother Morgan might be induced to render the requisite assistance. Bro. Morgan having expressed his willingness, the last scene from Act I. of the Merchant of Venice was selected, in which the efforts of both brethren were highly appreciated. In reply to his health, which was given from the chair, Bro. May thanked the members for the confidence they had shown in electing him, and assured them he would exert himself to uphold the prestige of the Lodge, and advance the best interests of its member. He also thanked Bros. Morgan and Bandmann for the many pleasant things they had said of him. The remaining toasts comprised the Masonic Charities and the Press, replied to by Bro. Morgan; the Treasurer and Secretary; and the Officers; to each suitable replies were made, and then the Tyler was summoned, a heavy storm raging at the time making it desirable those present should not run the risk of missing their trains. Thus terminated one of the many pleasant evenings we have spent with the members of the Royal Alfred.

Prosperity Lodge, No. 65.—This Lodge, for some years, has annually held a summer festival; the members determined this year to engage the Maria Wood. The ladies and brethren assembled early, and were received by the W.M., Bro. Brown. A substantial breakfast was provided, and the vessel was gently towed along the beautiful scenery, dancing being kept up to the strains of the Hon. Artillery Company's Band. The trip up the river was delightful. At 3 o'clock, the vessel was brought to a stand, and the ladies and brethren adjourned to the saloon, where a sumptuous and récherché banquet and dessert was provided by Bros. Ritter and Clifford, of the Guildhall Tavern; Bro. Ritter personally superintending. Brother Brown occupied the chair, supported by Bros. Burge S.W. and Simm as J.W.; 138 guests were present. The W.M. proposed the toast of Her Majesty the Queen. He alluded to the Marquis of Lorne having been appointed Viceroy of Canada. The National Anthem was sung. After the toast of H.R.H. the Grand Master, Bro. Daniel I.P.M. had great pleasure in proposing the health of the W.M., who, since he had occupied the chair, had given them every satisfaction. Last year he (Bro. Daniel) thought he had done something for the Lodge, but the W.M. had fairly eclipsed him, and this trip in the Maria Wood would be long remembered by all. He would ask them to cordially drink the health of the W.M., his wife and family. (Cheers.) After Bro. James had given an excellent recitation, the W.M. thanked Bro. Daniel and the ladies and brethren for their enthusiastic reception of the toast; it was to him a day of great rejoicing to see so numerous an assemblage; it afforded him and his family great pleasure to be present on this occasion. There were over 100 members in the Lodge of Prosperity, and he, a young member, was proud to be its W.M. As long as he occupied the chair he would do all he could to make the Lodge prosperous. Before resuming his seat he would offer for their acceptance the toast of the Visitors; they were very numerous, and he would call on Bro. H. M. Levy to respond. Bro. Levy complimented the W.M. on his admirable arrangements, and the hospitality shown the Visitors. The efforts of the Stewards had resulted in the party spending a most enjoyable day. The next toast was that of the P.M.'s and Officers of the Lodge; without the working of the P.M.'s the Lodge could not have prospered so greatly, and the Officers were all worthy of esteem. He would call on Bro. Goodwin P.M. and Treasurer to respond. Bro. Goodwin said all the efforts of the P.M.'s would be for the welfare of the Lodge. The toast of the Ladies was humorously proposed by the W.M. Bro. Burge S.W. responded. Bro. Speight efficiently acted as Toast Master. After dinner dancing was resumed. Bro. L. A. Leins P.M. ably contributed to the enjoyment of the day, indeed nothing was wanting on the part of the W.M. and the Committee to ensure the enjoyment of the ladies.

Lodge of Lights, No. 148, Warrington.—The regular monthly meeting of this old Lodge was held on Monday. In the unavoidable absence of the W.M., Bro. Thomas Tunstall I.P.M. presided, assisted by the Wardens and a goodly number of members and visitors. The Lodge was opened in form, and the minutes read and confirmed. Bros. Dr. Mackie and G. F. Curzon, being candidates for preferment, were examined and entrusted. The Lodge was opened in the second degree, and the two brethren re-admitted and passed. The lecture peculiar to the Fellow Craft degree was delivered by Bro. John Bowes P.M. P.P.G.J.W. of Cumberland and Westmoreland. The Lodge having been closed down in solemn form, the brethren separated in harmony.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 193.—Met on Wednesday, the 31st July, at the Railway Tavern, London-street, E.C. Bro. Moss W.M., K. Harris S.W., Walker J.W., Gottheil P.M., J. K. Pitt Sec., Wharman S.D., Woodward I.G.; also Bros. Blinkhorn, &c. The ceremony of initiation was ably worked by the W.M. Three of the sections were also worked, the responses being given with gratifying efficiency. This being the first time Bro. Moss presided in this Lodge, Bro. Gottheil, in proposing the usual vote of thanks, remarked upon that brother's abilities as a working Mason, having watched with considerable interest the speedy progress he has made, and the intelligent manner in which he had performed the duties of the minor offices, and now, having reached the chair, the work, as has been seen, was done in a way second to none in any other Lodge. Bro. Moss gave every indication of becoming a valuable worker in the Craft, and the Lodge to which he belonged might justly be proud of having him as a member. Bro. Walker seconded the proposition, and stated that in his long experience he had never heard the initiation ceremony rendered with so much perfection. The vote was carried unanimously. Bro. Moss, in thanking the brethren for the compliment, said, he had only been a Mason eight months, but during the whole of that time, every evening, with scarcely an exception, he spent in either Lodge or Lodge of Instruction. That he thought was the only way of becoming efficient. He had been connected in official capacities with many other societies, but since his initiation such was his love of the Order, he neglected all of them for Masonry. Bro. Kennett Harris was elected W.M. for next Wednesday, when he proposes to rehearse the first ceremony. Lodge meets at 7 p.m.

Lodge of Harmony, No. 220, Garston.—The annual meeting of this Lodge was held at the Wellington Hotel, on Wednesday, the 24th July, at four o'clock in the afternoon. The W.M. Bro. Samuel Tickle presided, assisted by his Officers, and a large number of P.M.'s, members and visitors, including Bros. H. S. Alpass Prov. G. Sec., John Bowes P.P.G.J.W. Cumberland and Westmoreland, Vines Prov. G.D.C., &c., &c. The Lodge having been opened, and the minutes read and confirmed. Bros. Baker and Vines presented Bro. George Price S.W. and W.M. elect for the benefit of installation. The preliminaries having been completed, the W.M. invited Bro. John Bowes to instal Bro. NEW ZEALAND.

The late William Westbrooke Squires.

A VALUABLE member of the brotherhood has been snatched away, in the zenith of his working. Seldom has a more solemn scene been realised than that of Tuesday, 16th April, when a message came from Brother Squires, only recently stricken, conveying to the Master and Brethren of Lodge Southern Star, 735 E.C., "Hearty good wishes," and an eternal farewell, accompanied by a request that the Worshipful Master would visit him, as he lay on the bed of death. The visit was accordingly made, and the request preferred that the brethren should receive his mortal remains in the Lodge, and afterwards confer the rites of Masonic burial. The good brother lingered until the next Sabbath bell called together the worshippers of the great Father, and soon after its chime had ceased, the spirit took its flight.

The following obituary appeared in one of the Nelson papers, having been contributed by his friend and brother, W. M. Stanton.

'Died, on Sunday, 21st April, aged 37, at his residence, Hardy-street, Nelson, after an illness of 12 days, William Westbrooke Squires, M.D., eldest son of the late Dr. William Westbrooke Squires, of Liverpool, England. Deceased was born at St. German-en-Laye, near Paris, 31st August 1840, and received his professional training at Liverpool, Edinburgh and Pisa. He was a M.R.C.S. England, and graduated as M.D. Edinburgh, 1864. His health being precarious, he sought to benefit it by a voyage to this country, and he arrived in Nelson by the ship "Magna Bona," in December 1864, and was induced to settle here in the practice of his profession, in which he continued until the time of his attack. Shortly after his arrival he was appointed Coroner, subsequently Public Health Officer, Consulting Surgeon to the Nelson Hospital, and he has filled other offices of importance in public matters, as well as being frequently elected to the Surgeonship of the Odd Fellows and other Friendly Societies. The lamented gentleman was also a distinguished member of the Masonic brotherhood, in whose active work he took an important and unflagging interest.

He preferred a request to the Worshipful Master of his Lodge for the right of Masonic burial according to ancient usage, as provided by the Constitution of the Grand Lodge of England, at the same time expressing a desire that the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of which he was Past Provincial Grand Master, and the Foresters' Court, of which he was an Honorary Member, should also join in the funeral procession.

Deceased married on the 23rd of April 1872, Catherine J. C., daughter of Mr. John Simpson, of Montere, by whom he has one son. He was presented with an affectionate address of condolence from the Southern Star Lodge on the death of his wife, which took place on the 20th August 1873. As a good Mason, a skilful physician, a useful citizen, and a warm friend, his loss will be deeply felt for a long time to come. He was tenderly cared for in the closing hours of his life, and fully realized and appreciated the watchful anxieties of his numerous sympathising acquaintance.

"On some fond breast the parting soul relies,
Some pious drops the closing eye requires,
E'en from the tomb the voice of nature cries,
E'en in our ashes live their wonted fires."

But five weeks ago, in apparent health, deceased followed the remains of his brother to his long home, in which he is now called to join him.

The day appointed for the funeral began with clouds, followed by unusual heavy rain; nevertheless, a large number of brethren, including eight Past Masters, assembled at the Masonic Hall, and at one o'clock Lodge was opened in the first degree, and ten of the brethren were told off to proceed to the house of the deceased, and accompany the hearse. Meanwhile, Lodge was formally opened to the third degree, and finally to the "Lodge of Sorrow," when the coffin was borne into the Lodge by six Past Masters, and placed on the bier in the centre, the organ playing a Dead March. The furniture was draped with black and white, and on the coffin lay a chaplet of acacia, with a beautifully-woven cross of immortelles and an illuminated scroll. The funeral procession was then formed, and proceeded to the New Cemetery, a distance of four miles. Arrived at the Cemetery, the burial service of the Church of England was read in the mortuary chapel, and at the grave, by Bro. the Ven. Archdeacon Thorpe, after which the Worshipful Master, Bro. Stanton, delivered the Masonic portion of the ritual. The hymns in the chapel and at the grave were accompanied on a cabinet organ by Bro. W. G. Sealy. The brethren afterwards returned to the hall, and the Lodge was closed.

THE

A WEEKLY RECORD OF MASONIC INTELLIGENCE.

SANCTIONED BY THE GRAND LODGE OF ENGLAND.

VOL. VIII.—No. 189. SATURDAY, 10th AUGUST 1878. [PRICE THREEPENCE. Registered at the G.P.O. as a Newspaper.

FREEMASONRY IN BERKS AND BUCKS.

AS is the case in most of our Provinces, the early records of Freemasonry in Berks and Bucks were so indifferently kept or looked after, that it is well nigh impossible to throw any light on the history of its introduction into these counties, and the progress it subsequently made. However, from Cole's List of Lodges for 1763, we gather that a Lodge, No. 244, constituted on the 6th June 1759, was held at the Mermaid, Windsor, and from an historical sketch by Bro. Biggs, till recently Grand Secretary of the Province, we learn that a Lodge, No. 195, existed anterior to 1783 at Reading, there being in possession of Lodge Union, No. 414 of that town, two mahogany columns (Ionic and Corinthian) for the Wardens' pedestals having, on a brass plate let into the bottom, the inscription, "Lodge, 195, the gift of Bro. Wm. Coyler, W. Master, 18th April 1783." There are, likewise, in possession of the same Lodge, a mahogany box of the same style of workmanship for the Secretary's use, "The gift of William Chaplin and Edward Richardson, Lodge, 195," and a Cambridge Bible, printed in the year 1769, "the gift of T. Burton P.M. to Lodge, 195." According to Hughan's List of Lodges on the Roll of the United Grand Lodge of England A.D. 1814, there was a Lodge of Virtue, No. 122, at Reading, holding under the Grand Lodge Ancients, which on the re-numbering of Lodges became Lodge No. 147 after the Union, and deceased, as will be seen hereafter, some time between the years 1814 and 1832. In the same list we find a St. John's Lodge, Windsor, which in 1813, stood No 269 on the Roll of the Ancients, became by the Union No. 340 in 1814, and, by the alteration of numbers, No. 239 in 1832. This Lodge has since passed away. The oldest existing Lodge, the Etonian, Windsor, was warranted by the Duke of Atholl on 27th May 1794, and held, therefore, under the Grand Lodge Ancients, the Warrant being originally granted to meet at the Crown and Cushion Inn at Eton, in the county of Bucks, and was No. 284, "Ancients," in 1813, 359 in 1814 after the Union, 252 in 1832, and 209 in 1863. In 1794, according to Bro. Biggs, Colonel John Deacon was appointed Prov. Grand Master of Berkshire by the then Grand Master, George Prince of Wales, and in 1796 Sir John Throgmorton, Bart., had conferred upon him the same office for the county of Bucks. The latter of these is mentioned in the Freemasons' Magazine, Vol. VI., for January and June 1796, as having been present in his capacity of Prov. Grand Master for Buckinghamshire at the Grand Feast for that year held at Freemasons' Hall on 11th May, under the presidency of his Royal Highness the Grand Master. On the retirement in 1817 of Bro. Arthur Stanhope, who succeeded Colonel Deacon, in 1795 from the Prov. Grand Mastership of Berks, Sir John Throgmorton was re-appointed Prov. Grand Master for the united counties, and from that date till now they have remained one Province. This is about all that is known of Freemasonry in these counties till the year 1813, when we find the earliest authentic record known to be in existence, in the shape of a minute book of the aforesaid Lodge of Virtue, No. 122, of Reading, and from this, which commences with 4th January 1813, we learn that the Officers of the Lodge at that day were J. B. Monck, Esq., M.P., W.M., John Parker S.W., John Hornbuckle J.W., Joseph Warry S.D., Thomas Williams J.D., Matthew Boulter Treasurer, and Nathan Elliott Secretary. The minutes of the first meeting record, that owing to the irregularities which had occurred, all arrears of fines up to St. John's Day should be considered void. In 1814 Bro. H. Hall, the then Secretary, having misapplied the funds of the Lodge, was expelled, and the same year, owing to the Union which had happily taken place between the Grand Lodges of the "Moderns" and "Ancients" respectively, the Lodge was renumbered, and became No. 147 on the Roll of the United Grand Lodge. At this time the Lodge included among its members Bro. Letchworth, Mayor and Alderman, the well known classical scholar Dr. Valpy, James and John Sutton, Blackall Simonds, Esq.,—described as "still living" at the time Bro. Biggs compiled the sketch from which we have extracted most of these particulars, that is, in 1871,—William Montagu, of Caversham, and Dr. Workman. On the 7th September 1814, the Lodge bespoke, at the Theatre, Reading, the play of The Way to get Married, but it does not seem to have recovered from the financial difficulties caused by the late Secretary's defalcations, for on the 2nd November of the same year, a Mr. Coles's bill, of a fraction over £16, was "ordered to be paid as soon as the Lodge funds would permit." The historian, however, has not recorded whether this order—albeit it was formally entered on the minutes and read and confirmed, we presume, at the next regular meeting—was deemed satisfactory by the aforesaid Mr. Coles. On the 18th of this month, Cornet Brandon was passed and raised on the same night, a not uncommon practice in those days. On the 7th December a letter was read from Grand Lodge inviting a deputation to attend for the purpose of receiving instructions as to the Union of the Grand Lodges, and accordingly a deputation, consisting of the Master, Wardens, and a Bro. Bath—one of the masters in Dr. Valpy's school—attended and received the requisite instruction on 7th June 1815. On the 3rd May just preceding, application for a Warrant, signed by the Officers and members, to hold a new Lodge at Newbury, was granted by G. Master the Duke of Sussex, and this was constituted in the following year under the style and title of the Royal Sussex Lodge, No. 672, John Parker being the first W. Master, and John Hoskins and Edward Poynter Hoskins the first Wardens. Its existence, however, was of the briefest. It made no returns to Grand Lodge after 1818, and ceased to be on the 5th March 1828. But to return to the Lodge of Virtue. Nothing further is recorded till the year 1820, when there appears to have been a falling off in the number of members. But few meetings were held, and on the 8th May 1822, the Lodge was closed in perfect harmony with but six brethren present. For nearly twelve years after this, it remained in abeyance, the furniture and effects being removed to Coley Park, the residence of J. B. Monck Esq., M.P., W.M. in 1813, for safe custody. In fact, it actually ceased to exist, for when on the 17th September 1833, the brethren again assembled together as a Lodge of Freemasons, it was under a new Warrant, as the Lodge of Union, No. 507, since altered to No. 414. Why a new Warrant should have been deemed necessary, does not appear on the record, for many existing Lodges have been in abeyance for as long, or even a longer time. The effect is, of course, to place the Lodge of Union as the second on the roll of Lodges in the Province of Berks and Bucks, the post of honour falling to the Etonian, which till the alteration in numbers in 1832 ranked as No. 359 only. However, the Lodge of Union met, as we have said, on the 17th September 1833, at the "Wheat Rick Inn," on the East side of London-street, and Bro. Graynham Rackstraw was installed first W. Master, while Bros. Baker and Munday were the Senior and Junior Wardens respectively, the celebrated

Bro. Peter Gilks being present in the capacity of Instructor. When the Lodge was closed, the brethren sat down to a banquet, and on this occasion there was drunk with great enthusiasm the health of Bro. John Ramsbottom, as Provincial Grand Master, though a Provincial Grand Lodge does not appear to have been regularly constituted till May 1837. On the 8th October 1833, the meeting of the Lodge was suspended for an hour and a half, in order that some fifty ladies might be admitted to see its decorations. On the 10th December of the same year the Lodge moved from the Wheat Rick Inn to the Upper Ship Inn and increased in numbers. On 2nd December 1835, a dispensation was granted by the Provincial G. Master for the burial of Bro. Charles Smith with Masonic rites. On 11th June 1836 the Lodge removed from the Upper Ship to the Woolpack, where it remained till its removal to the old buildings in St. Lawrence's Churchyard, on the 17th May 1837, when an emergency meeting was held for the purpose of receiving the Provincial Lodge. On this occasion Bro. Ramsbottom congratulated the brethren on the opportunity thus afforded them of constituting a Grand Lodge of Berkshire and of organising a scheme for the purchasing of the necessary regalia. From the list of officers which Bro. Biggs has appended to his historical sketch we learn that Captain Montague was appointed Deputy Prov. Grand Master, John Ramsbottom jun. and Samuel Ramsbottom Prov. Grand Senior and Junior Wardens respectively, Rev. Bro. Benwell Prov. G. Chaplain, Bro. W. Leigh Prov. Grand Treasurer, Bro. J. F. Baker Prov. Grand Secretary, and Bros. R. T. Woodhouse, M.D., Palmer, Wood, and Nathaniel Treasure as Prov. Grand Senior Deacon, Supt. of Works, Director of Ceremonies, and Pursuivant respectively. On 7th November 1837, Dr. Woodhouse was installed as Master of the Union Lodge, and held the office for two years. On 26th October, on the occasion of the foundation stone of the new chapel in the cemetery being laid by Bro. Ramsbottom P.G.M. in the presence of several Grand Officers, the same Dr. Woodhouse was appointed Deputy Provincial Grand Master. On 22nd April 1843, mourning for twelve months was decreed in consequence of the death of Grand Master the Duke of Sussex, and on 17th November 1845, it was ordered that the brethren in the Province should wear mourning for six months out of respect to Bro. Ramsbottom P.G.M., deceased. On the 21st February 1848, the late Marquis of Downshire, was installed as Provincial Grand Master, having previously been installed as W.M. of the Union Lodge. Up to this time there were in the two counties together, but the two Lodges, Etonian, Eton, and Union of Reading, and it is not till the 21st March 1850, that a warrant was granted for the constitution of a Lodge at Newbury, now bearing the style and title of "The Berkshire Lodge of Hope, No. 574." Bro. John Parker—query, the same who was the first W.M. of the defunct Royal Sussex, No. 672, founded in the same town in 1815—being the first W.M., and Bros. John Beale and Edward Balding, the first Senior and Junior Wardens respectively. On the 5th April 1852, at a meeting of the Lodge of Union, Bro. Robert Gibson made an offer of 40,000 bricks towards building a new Masonic Hall. The offer was accepted, and ultimately it was resolved to erect one in the Grey Friars Road. On the 25th April 1851, a warrant was granted for the Buckingham Lodge, then No. 861, now No. 591, Aylesbury, and the Lodge was consecrated on the 3rd May 1852, A. A. le Kan being the first W.M., and J B. Reade and Chas. Lowndes the first Senior and Junior Wardens respectively. After a lapse of six years a Provincial Grand Lodge was held on the 20th December 1858 at Reading, and adjourned till the 23rd of March of the following year, for the appointment of officers, and likewise for the purpose of laying the foundation stone of the new Masonic Hall, the ceremony being performed by the Marquis of Downshire, Grand Master of the Province, assisted by his Officers and a large number of brethren, the sermon being preached at St. Lawrence's Church, by the Rev. A. Roberts, P. Prov. Grand Chaplain. A short time previously—that is on the 10th February 1859—a new Lodge known as the Windsor Castle Lodge, now No. 771, was consecrated with Bro. Madigan as the first Worshipful Master. On the 10th May 1859, was founded the St. John's Lodge, No. 795, Maidenhead, the first W. Master being Bro. Egbert Steer Cousins, and the first S. and J. Wardens Bro. Charles Venables and John Langton respectively. The ceremony was performed in the Town Hall by Bro. Jeremiah Hood P.M. 82, Prov. G.D.C. Herts, in the presence of a considerable gathering of brethren. On the 20th November 1860, the new Masonic Hall in Grey Friars Road, Reading, was opened, the ceremony, which consisted of the opening and closing in the three degrees, being of a simple character. The Lodge Room or Hall is capacious, measuring 38 ft. by 24 ft., but the ante-rooms are very confined in space, and consequently unsuited for the purposes for which they are designed. Bro. J. B. Clacy was the architect, and Bro. H. L. Orton the builder, and the total cost, including site and decorations, amounted to £1,350. On the 15th December 1860, Bro. John Hervey P.G. Deacon, now Grand Sec., consecrated the Scientific Lodge, No. 840, at Stoney Stratford, and subsequently installed Bro. J. E. McConnell as W.M., the Wardens being Bros. Smith and Stevenson. In 1862 this Lodge migrated to Wolverton, where it still flourishes. In 1861 the Marquis of Downshire, who, during the fourteen years he had been the Prov. Grand Master, held only four Grand Lodges, resigned his post, and the Province was in October 1862 accordingly placed under the charge of Bro. Æ. McIntyre, Q.C., Grand Registrar, and he, with the assistance of Bro. Joseph Devereux, of Windsor, the Prov. Grand Secretary, and other active brethren, revived the condition of Freemasonry in the Province. In 1863, two new Lodges were consecrated, namely, the Abbey Lodge, No. 945, at Abingdon, and the St. Barnabas, No. 948, at Linsdale, the Rev. R. W. Norman being installed the first Worshipful Master of the former, and Bro. James Shugar of the latter. On the 19th November 1864, the Windsor Masonic Hall was dedicated, the chief credit being due to Bro. Devereux, who conceived and, aided by other brethren, carried out the idea of a building specially set apart for Masonry. On 17th May 1866, a second Lodge, the Grey Friars, No. 1101, was consecrated by Bro. McIntyre, G. Registrar in charge of the Province, at Reading. On the 21st May 1869 a Provincial Grand Lodge was held at Windsor, when Sir Daniel Gooch, Bart., M.P., was installed as Grand Master of the Province, the ceremony being most impressively rendered by Bro. John Hervey, Grand Secretary. On 25th February 1870, Bro. Rev. R. J. Simpson, who had been Chaplain of the Grey Friars, No. 1101, from its foundation, being about to leave the Province, was presented with a most affectionate address in testimony of the services he had rendered and the respect in which he was held. On the 27th May following, at a Prov. G. Lodge held especially for the purpose, a Code of Bye Laws for the Province was discussed and adopted, and on the 1st July of the same year H.R.H. the Prince of Wales performed his first Masonic ceremony subsequent to his initiation by the late King of Sweden by laying the foundation stone of the Reading Grammar School, Sir Daniel Gooch, Prov. G. Master, and over three hundred brethren being present. The same year the Methuen Lodge, No. 631, founded in April 1854, removed from Swindon, Wilts, to Maidenhead, and it has since migrated to Taplow, Bucks. In 1872, the St. Peter and St. Paul Lodge, No. 1410, was consecrated at Newport Pagnel, Bucks; in 1874, the Alma Mater, No. 1492, at Bletchley, and the Wycombe, No. 1501, at High Wycombe, both in the same county; in 1875, Freemasonry received a great accession of strength at Maidenhead, owing to the constitution of a new Lodge—the Ellington, No. 1566—and in 1876, Stoney Stratford, which, as we have shown, had a few years previously been able to boast of a "Scientific" Lodge, but, owing to its migration to Wolverton, had been left unprovided with Masonic accommodation, awakened once again to a proper sense of its Masonic requirements, and the result of such was the consecration of the Watling Street Lodge, No. 1639, having its headquarters at the Cock Hotel.

In respect of R. Arch Masonry, we note that a Warrant for the Downshire Chapter, Reading, was granted in 1851, the Marquis of Downshire being Z., Comps. J. B. Gibson H., Sir J. W. Hayes, Bart., J. It does not, however, appear to have been successful, and was erased in 1861. On 1st February 1865, a Warrant for the Windsor Castle Chapter, No. 771, was granted, the principals being Comps. Jas. Cottrell Z., Jas. Devereux H., and John Wiggington J. On 22nd October 1867, was consecrated by Comps. Devereux and Muggeridge, the Union Chapter, No. 414, Reading with Comps. W. Biggs as Z., Geo. Botly as H., and F. A. Bulley as J. On the 13th December 1870 the Buckingham Chapter, No. 591, Aylesbury, was consecrated, Comps. Rev. O. J. Grace, Rev. G. S. Ffinden and John Williams being Z., H., and J. respectively. The St.

Barnabas Chapter, No. 948, Linslade, and the St. George's, No. 840, have since swelled the number of R.A. Chapters to five, and in the person of Sir Daniel Gooch, who was appointed in the year 1875, the Prov. G. Chapter has a most efficient Superintendent. Such, in brief, is a history of Constitutional Freemasonry in the Province of Berks and Bucks, the chief details being derived from Bro. Biggs's interesting sketch. May it long flourish like a green bay tree!

MANIFESTO OF THE RIGHT WORSHIPFUL LODGE OF ANTIQUITY, 1778.

To all regular FREE and ACCEPTED MASONS.

WHEREAS the Society of Free Masons is universally acknowledged to be of ancient standing and great repute in this kingdom, as by our Records and Printed Constitutions, it appears that the first Grand Lodge in England was held at York, in the Year 926, by virtue of a Royal Charter, granted by King Athelstan—And, under the patronage and government of this Grand Lodge, the Society considerably increased; and the ancient charges and regulations of the Order so far obtained the sanction of Kings and Princes, and other eminent persons, that they always paid due allegiance to the said Grand Assembly.(1)

AND WHEREAS it appears, by our Records, that in the year 1567, the increase of Lodges in the South of England being so great as to require some Nominal Patron to superintend their government, it was resolved that a person under the title of Grand Master for the South should be appointed for that purpose, with the approbation of the Grand Lodge at York, to whom the whole Fraternity at large were bound to pay tribute and acknowledge subjection.—And, after the appointment of such Patron, Masonry flourished under the guardianship of him and his successors in the South, until the Civil Wars and other intestine commotions interrupted the assemblies of the brethren.(2)

AND WHEREAS, it also appears that, in the year 1693, the Meetings of the Fraternity in their regular Lodges in the South became less frequent and chiefly occasional, except in or near places where great works were carried on.—At which time the Lodge of Antiquity, or (as it was then called) the Old Lodge of St. Paul, with a few others of small note, continued to meet under the patronage of Sir Christopher Wren, and assisted him in rearing that superb Structure from which this respectable Lodge derived its Title. But on completing this Edifice in 1710, and Sir Christopher Wren's retiring into the country, the few remaining Lodges, in London and its suburbs, continued, without any nominal Patron, in a declining state for about the space of seven years.(3)

AND WHEREAS, in the year 1717, the Fraternity in London agreed to cement under a new Grand Master, and with that view the Old Lodge of St. Paul, jointly with three other Lodges, assembled in form, constituted themselves a nominal Grand Lodge pro tempore, and elected a Grand Master to preside over their future general meetings, whom they afterwards invested with a power to constitute subordinate Lodges, and to convene the Fraternity at stated periods in Grand Lodge, in order to make Laws, with their consent and approbation, for the good government of the Society at large—BUT SUBJECT to certain conditions and restrictions then expressly stipulated, and which are more fully set forth in the 39th article of the general regulations, in the first book of Constitutions. This article, with 38 others, was afterwards, at a meeting of the Brethren in and about the cities of London and Westminster, in the year 1721, solemnly approved of, ratified and confirmed by them and signed in their presence by the Master and Wardens of the Four Old Lodges on the one part, and Philip Duke of Wharton, then Grand Master, Dr. Desaguliers D.G.M., Joshua Timson and William Hawkins Grand Wardens, and the Masters and Wardens of sixteen Lodges which had been constituted by the Fraternity, betwixt 1717 and 1721, on the other part. And these articles the Grand Master engaged for himself and his successors, when duly installed, in all time coming to observe and keep sacred and inviolable—By these prudent precautions the ancient Landmarks (as they are properly styled) of the Four Old Lodges were intended to be secured against any encroachments on their Masonic rights and privileges.(4)

V.

See the alterations in the last Edition of the Book of Constitutions, by comparing it with former Editions. See also State of Facts, by Bro. Preston, passim.

AND WHEREAS, of late years, notwithstanding the said solemn engagement in the year 1721, sundry innovations and encroachments have been made, and are still making on the original plan and government of Masonry, by the present nominal Grand Lodge in London, highly injurious to the institution itself, and tending to subvert and destroy the ancient rights and privileges of the Society, more particularly of those members of it under whose sanction, and by whose authority, the said Grand Lodge was first established and now exists.

VI.

Constitution Book, 1738, p 185. State of Facts, by Brother Preston, pp 38, 40.

AND WHEREAS, at this present time, there only remains one of the said four original ancient Lodges—The Old Lodge of St. Paul, or, as it is now emphatically styled, The Lodge of Antiquity. Two of the said four ancient Lodges having been extinct many years, and the Master of the other of them having, on the part of his Lodge, in open Grand Lodge relinquished all such inherent rights and privileges which, as a private Lodge acting by an immemorial Constitution, it enjoyed.—BUT, The Lodge of Antiquity, conscious of its own dignity, which the members thereof are resolutely determined to support, and justly incensed at the violent measures and proceedings which have been lately adopted and pursued by the said nominal Grand Lodge, wherein they have assumed an unlawful prerogative over the Lodge of Antiquity, in manifest breach of the aforesaid 39th article, by which means the peaceable government of that respectable Lodge has been repeatedly interrupted, and even the original independent power thereof, in respect to its own Internal Government, disputed:(5)

State of Facts, passim.

THEREFORE, and on account of the Arbitrary Edicts and Laws which the said nominal Grand Lodge has, from time to time, presumed to issue and attempted to enforce, repugnant to the ancient Laws and principles of Free Masonry, and highly injurious to the Lodge of Antiquity.(6)

VIII.

WE, the Master, Wardens, and Members of the Lodge of Antiquity, considering ourselves bound in duty, as well as honour, to preserve inviolable the ancient rights and privileges of the Order, and, as far as in our power, to hand them down to posterity in their native purity and excellence, do hereby, for ourselves and our successors, solemnly disavow and discountenance such unlawful measures and proceedings of the said nominal Grand Lodge; and do hereby declare and announce to all our Masonic Brethren throughout the Globe, That the said Grand Lodge has, by such arbitrary conduct, evidently violated the conditions expressed in the aforesaid 39th article of the general regulations, in the observance of which article the permanency of their authority solely depended.(7)

IX.

And in consequence thereof, WE, do by these presents retract from, and recal, all such rights and powers, as We, or our predecessors, did conditionally give to the said nominal Grand Lodge in London; and do hereby disannul and make void all future Edicts and Laws which the said Grand Lodge may presume to issue and enforce, by virtue of such sanction, as representatives of the ancient and honourable Society of Free and Accepted Masons.(8)

X.

Records in the Grand Lodge of York. Constitution Book, 1723, p 60.

AND WHEREAS we have, on full enquiry and due examination, happily discovered, that the aforesaid truly ancient Grand Lodge at York does still exist; and have authentic Records to produce of their antiquity, long before the establishment of the nominal Grand Lodge in London, in the year 1717; We do, therefore, hereby solemnly avow, acknowledge, and admit the Authority of the said Most Worshipful Grand Lodge at York, as the truly ancient and only regular governing Grand Lodge of Masons in England, to whom the Fraternity all owe and are rightfully bound to pay allegiance.

XI.

Private Correspondence.

AND WHEREAS the present members of the said Grand Lodge at York have acknowledged the ancient power and authority of the Lodge of Antiquity in London as a private Lodge, and have proposed to form an alliance with the said Lodge, on the most generous and disinterested principles.—We do hereby acknowledge this generous mark of their friendship towards us, and gratefully accept their liberal, candid, and ingenuous offers of alliance:—And do hereby, from a firm persuasion of the justice of our cause, announce a general union with all Regular Masons throughout the world, who shall join us in supporting the original principles of Free Masonry,—in promoting and extending the authority of the said truly ancient Grand Lodge at York, and under such respectable auspices in propagating Masonry on its pure, genuine and original plan.

XII.

AND LASTLY, we do earnestly solicit the hearty concurrence of all regular Lodges of the Fraternity in all places where Freemasonry is legally established, to enable us to carry into execution the aforesaid plan, which is so apparently beneficial to our most excellent institution,—and at the present critical juncture, so essentially necessary to curb the arbitrary power which has been already exerted, or which hereafter may be illegally assumed, by the nominal Grand Lodge in London,—and so timely prevent such un-Masonic proceedings from becoming a disgrace to the Society at large.

By order of the Right Worshipful Lodge of Antiquity, in open Lodge assembled, this 16th day of December, A.D. 1778. A.L. 5782.

J. SEALY, Secretary.

 As a few Expelled Members of the Lodge of Antiquity have presumed to associate as Masons at the Mitre Tavern, in Fleet Street, under the denomination of this Lodge,—Notice is hereby given, that the Right Worshipful Lodge of Antiquity, acting by an Immemorial Constitution, is removed from the said Mitre Tavern, to the Queen's Arms Tavern, in St. Paul's Church-Yard; where all letters to the Lodge are requested to be directed.

(1) It is somewhat singular and noteworthy to mark the fact that these Manuscript Constitutions, of whatever date, usually agree in stating that the General Assembly was held at York; even the M.S. Constitutions of Scotland contain the same statement, and admit York to have been the first favoured City for a General Assemblage of the Craft. Though we are not anxious to invest Legends with the significance of Historical facts, yet we cannot but think so uniform an agreement respecting York, in Manuscripts found in different parts of England and Scotland, and of such various dates, must have its origin in something more stable than fiction.—"History of Freemason in York" (Hughan), p 38.

Much unnecessary stir has been made about the York Constitution of A.D. 926. None such exist now, and no one can say where they did, or when.—Ibid. p 39.

There can scarcely be a doubt that there does not exist a Masonic Charter of the year 926. Should, however, an original be found similar to Krause's translation, it could nevertheless lay no claim to be called a York Charter.—"Findel," p 90.

The common legend of a Grand Lodge having been convened at York by Edwyn, son of King Athelstane, A.D. 926, is disposed of in Sharon Turner's "History of the Anglo-Saxons (vol. ii., pp 325-365), where it appears that Athelstane acceded to the Crown in 924, he had no son, Edwyn was his brother, and in the same year, on a false charge of conspiring against him, was exposed at sea in an open boat and drowned.

(2) In 1567, it is stated in the famous Manifesto of the Lodge of Antiquity of 1778, the Grand Lodge permitted the creation of a Grand Master for the South, but of this no other proof is, as I am aware, so far forthcoming, and this is the only existing evidence that in 1567 there was a Grand Lodge at York.—"The Connection of York with the History of Freemasonry in England" (Rev. A. F. A. Woodford.)

But York being in a remote part of the kingdom, it was many years ago thought proper, for the convenience of the Fraternity, to remove the Grand Lodge from that city to the Metropolis—and the present Grand Lodge of England are the true York Masons. (?)—"Principles of Freemasonry Delineated" (Trueman), Exeter, 1777, p 153.

(3) As against this disparagement of the other old lodges, it will be sufficient to remind the reader that the 1st Grand Lodge was held under the banner of the lodge, meeting at the Apple Tree Tavern, original No. 3, a member of which lodge was elected the first Grand Master, upon whose vacation of this office, the honour of supplying the head of the Craft next devolved upon original No. 4.

"It must be borne in mind that the seventeenth century had been very turbulent and full of commotions: Masonry, therefore, which can only flourish in times of peace, continued in a fluctuating state, and found many difficulties to struggle with. In such unsettled seasons, particular Lodges could not be regularly attended in the Southern parts of England, near the principal theatre of political action; but were held occasionally when circumstances favoured the brethren, except in or near places where great Works were carried on. Thus Sir Robert Clayton held an occasional Lodge of his Brother Masters at St. Thomas's Hospital, Southwark, A.D. 1693, and to advise the governours about the best design of rebuilding that Hospital as it now stands most beautiful; near which a stated Lodge continued for a long time afterwards. Besides that and the Old Lodge of St. Pauls, some brothers, living in 1730, remembered another in Piccadilly over against St. JAMES Church, one near Westminster Abby, another near Covent Garden, one in Holborn, one on Tower Hill, and some more that assembled statedly."—(Constit. 1738, p 106; 1756 and 1767, p 176; and 1784, p 193.)

(8) Bro. Hughan says ("History of Freemasonry in York," p 56), "Reasons were not wanting to give a colour to the action on the part of the York authorities; on the other hand, the 'Lodge of Antiquity' presumed too much on their 'time immemorial' privileges after forming a part of the Grand Lodge of England, 1717." But with all deference to so high an authority, I venture to question the soundness of the conclusion he has drawn.

The right to expel from the Union (exercised by the Grand Lodge in 1747, see § 12) would imply a right to secede from the Union; if many could withdraw from one, one could withdraw from many. If the Union could become inconvenient or disagreeable to all the Lodges but one, such majority might become disagreeable to that one. If the many, for that reason could expel, why could not the one for that reason retire? And if the logic of expulsion be sound, that of secession is equally sound. These rights it might be contended—if there was any right at all to break up the compact of Union—were correlatives.

But the privilege of secession, possessed by the time immemorial lodges, though fully justified by precedent, derived yet a higher sanction from principle. Since without conceding the rights of expulsion and secession to be correlatives, either of the four old Lodges could protest against ejection because it involved compulsion, and yet claim a right to retire, because if compelled to remain, that was equally a compulsory restraint. Both really involve the same principle, ejection and imprisonment, they are equally acts of compulsion, and this might be alike objected to in both cases.

A Lodge compelled to go or remain had a forcible restraint imposed on its will, but in seceding it imposed no restraint on the will of others—they remained free to follow (i.e., the time immemorial lodges) or to continue as before. It may be urged that reasonable men would not have framed a system exposed to ruin at any time by the secession of its constituents. But the question is, not whether the terms of the compact were wise or prudent, but simply what those terms were, and the force they possessed.

("Ambrose's Letters," New York, 1865, pp 41, 205; "Spence's American Union," 2nd Ed., pp 198—200 and 210.) Many points of similarity will be found in the principle of State Rights (U.S.A.), and in that upon which the rights of the Old Lodges are, or were, based. A comparison is recommended between Art. 39 "Constitutions G. L. of England, A.D. 1723" (§§ 15 (V.) ante and 22 post), and Art. 2 "Constitutions U.S. of America, A.D. 1781," viz.: "Each State retains its sovereignty, freedom, and independence, and every power, jurisdiction and right, which is not, by this confederation, expressly delegated to the United States in Congress assembled." Compare also:

2. New Lodges—rights of—by Grant or Charter of Grand Lodge?	2. New States—rights of—by Grant or Charter of Congress?

NEW ZEALAND.

OUR Budget of News from this prosperous colony, which came to hand by the mail on Monday, is somewhat voluminous. We gather from it that Masonry is in a very flourishing condition in the Northern Island, and Lodges are being multiplied rapidly. The District G. Master of Auckland, Bro. Graham, had left for the South, which was causing some inconvenience, especially as his Deputy, Bro. Wildman, resides on the Thames Goldfield, some forty miles distant. A new Lodge, under the Irish Constitution, was shortly to be opened at Gisborne.

Funeral of a Veteran.—Donald McKenzie, who, as a man, soldier and Freemason, was one of the oldest in the colony, expired on Friday, 14th June, at his residence, Onehunga. Amongst his last wishes was that he should be buried with Masonic honours. The request was conveyed through the Officers of Lodge Manukau, and of course it was complied with. The deceased was born in the year 1800, and consequently at the time of his death was 78 years of age. His father was a soldier in the 42nd Highlanders (the famous "Black Watch"), and young McKenzie, on the discharge of his father, joined the regiment when 19 years of age, and in November 1819 he was initiated a Freemason in the 42nd Highlanders' Lodge, hailing under the Grand Lodge of Scotland. This Lodge has since become dormant. Mr. McKenzie served with the regiment in which he was born, during the trying times of 1815, when the famous battle of Waterloo was won and lost. He did not take an active part in that famous fight and victory, but he was on the scene the preceding day, and was under fire. He was then connected with the baggage guard, which was several times attacked by the French troops. He was amongst the oldest settlers in the Pensioners' Settlement of Onehunga. On the opening of Lodge Manukau, S.C., of Onehunga, he resumed his connection with Freemasonry, and, as already stated, one of his latest wishes was that he should be recognised as a Mason, with the customary mortuary ceremonials. The Masonic brethren responded in a most fraternal spirit. Not only did Lodge Manukau muster in full strength on Sunday, but every Lodge in Auckland, including Lodge Romuera, was fully represented by Officers and brethren, and at least 150 members of the Craft took part in the procession. Captain Burns, of the Artillery Company, kindly placed the excellent band of his corps at the disposal of the parade, as a recognition of the military claims of the veteran, and they added largely to the impressiveness of the solemn cortège. The Lodge Manukau was opened, and raised to the third degree, after which the order of procession was formed in the Lodge. Brother M. Niccol R.W.M. presided, and Brother Hendry ably officiated as Marshall. The procession, headed by the band, playing appropriate solemn selections, marched through the main street of Onehunga and up the by-street to the late residence of the deceased. Here the procession opened, and the Officers came to the front, and after the coffin containing the deceased was taken out, the line of march was resumed to St. Peter's Cemetery, the bank playing the Dead March in "Saul," and other appropriate solemn tunes. The son and grandchildren of deceased followed the coffin in the capacity of chief mourners. At the entrance to the cemetery the procession again opened out, and the coffin was carried up the centre, where it was met by the Rev. Mr. Tomlinson, incumbent of St. Peter's. The remains were taken into the church, where the portion of the burial service of the Church of England appointed to be read in churches was read by the rev. gentleman. Upon the removal of the coffin to the grave the brethren formed a cordon round it, while the Rev. Mr. Tomlinson concluded the ritual, consigning the body of the deceased to the earth in the sure and certain hope of a resurrection. The R.W.M. then, in a feeling and impressive manner, gave the solemn and impressive address from the Masonic ritual, after which the brethren cast their acacia sprigs into the open grave, and gave the grand honours of the Order. There was an immense concourse of people present during the ceremony, probably the largest that was ever collected on such an occasion in Onehunga. The residents were greatly gratified at the marked respect paid to their old neighbour. The old pensioners and their wives listened with mingled feelings to the solemn strains of the Dead March from the band, the sounds no doubt bringing back many strange recollections to their breasts, and while the streets were lined with the young and healthy, the aged couples looked wistfully on and after the procession from their cottage doors. At the conclusion of the burial service, the brethren marched back to the Lodge room, where the Lodge was duly closed, and the visiting brethren took their departure for home.

Presentations.—One of the most interesting and imposing events in connection with Freemasonry which has taken place in Auckland since the starting of the Order in New Zealand, was the presentation of a Past Master's jewel, by the United Service Lodge, to Bro. P.M. Burns, on Wednesday evening, the 29th May. A feature was that the chiefs of the three Prov. Grand Lodges met for the first time to do honour to a member of recognised worth, and every Lodge in the district was fully represented. The Ara and Manukau attended as Lodges, and there was hardly a Lodge in the North Island unrepresented, besides which there were several Southern Lodges which had members present. Amongst those present were Bros. G. P. Pierce P.G.M. I.C., G. S. Graham D.G.M. E.C., F. Whitaker P.G.M. S.C., E. T. Wildman D.D.G.M. E.C., T. Rycroft W.M. 421 I.C., G. Redfern P.M. 421 I.C., W. Sloane P.M. 421 I.C., A. Brock P.M. 421 I.C., J. H. Burns P.M. 421 I.C., Josh. Hydes P.M. 421 I.C., M. M. Levy W.M. 348 I.C., Jas. Buchanan P.M. 348 I.C., J. Trimble P.M. I.C., H. G. Wade P.M. 689 E.C., Thos. Cole W.M. 689 E.C., M. S. Leers P.M. 350 I.C., P.P.G.J.D. Victoria, Rev. C. M. Nelson W.M. 1338 E.C., W. P. Moet W.M. 1710 E.C., M. Niccol W.M. 586 S.C., W. C. Walker W.M. 418 S.C., E. K. Tyler P.M. Prov. G. Sec., Trimble P.M. 111 I.C. The Lodges represented included the Ara, United Service, Rodney, Waitemata, Corinthian, Prince of Wales, Manukau, Tauranganui, Dunedin, Sir Walter Scott, and others. After the regular Lodge business had been disposed of, Bro. Pierce R.W.P.G.M. made the presentation. It was a massive jewel of Past Masters' Order, with a suitable inscription. In making the presentation, Bro. Pierce referred in terms of commendation and eulogy to the great pains and ability which he had observed Bro. Burns display. He was a good all-round man, good as a Volunteer officer, good as a public man, and good in the working of the benefit orders to which he belonged, but what they had met that night for was, more especially to recognise the good which he had done to Freemasonry here, and he attributed the high position which the United Service Lodge now held to the energy displayed by Bro. Burns. Bro. Burns, in reply, felt deeply the honour conferred on him by the large number of visiting brethren and the Lodge, and hoped that his future conduct in Freemasonry would merit their approbation. A banquet was then held. It was a really efficient and excellent spread, which reflected credit on Mr. Hood, the caterer, and on his establishment, and merited the encomiums which it received. The following toasts were proposed and responded to, the chair being occupied by the Master of the Lodge:—The Queen and Craft, The Three Grand Masters of the English, Irish and Scottish Constitutions, The Provincial Grand Master I.C., responded to in a neat speech by Bro. Pierce. The other Provincial Grand Lodges were also proposed and responded to, after which Bro. Pierce proposed the toast of the evening, The Health of Bro. Burns. This was responded to in a neat and modest speech by the recipient. The health of Bro. Wildman D.D.G.M. E.C. was also drunk, as well as those of the sister Lodges. Other toasts followed, and as there was quite an array of excellent singers, and Bro. Wildman accompanied on the piano, a musical treat of no ordinary character was afforded, and a very pleasant evening was passed.

On the 24th June, a particularly interesting ceremony, consisting of the presentation of a P.M.'s jewel, took place at the regular monthly meeting of the Lodge St. Andrew, S.C. The meeting was held at the Lodge-room, Masonic Hotel. There was a large attendance of brethren, and amongst the visitors were Bros. A. Whitaker R.W. P.G.M. S.C., E. Tyler P.G.S. S.C. P.M. 348 S.C., Trimble P.M. 111 I.C., Buchanan 1840 E.C., Burns 421 I.C., R. C. Dyer D.G. Pursuivant E.C., Wade D.G.S. E.C., and other dignitaries of the Order. After the regular business of the Lodge, consisting of initiation, raising &c., the proceeding in open Lodge terminated in the presentation of a P.M.'s jewel to Bro. Walker, who for the last three years has occupied the chair of R.W.M. in the St. Andrew's Lodge. The jewel has a gold segment on top and bottom, and an intermediate scroll, the whole bearing the inscription "Lodge St. Andrew, No. 418, S.C." Beneath this is the square and compass wrought in gold, with a blazing sun in the middle, and in the centre of the sun is a beautiful emerald. The jewel itself is locket-shaped. The obverse side bears the square, compass, and segment, and on the inverse side, beautifully and artistically engraved, is the following inscription:—"Presented to Bro. W. C. Walker P.M., by the Officers and Brethren of Lodge St. Andrew 418, S.C., as a token of their appreciation of his ability and untiring attention, while discharging his duties as Right Worshipful Master during the years 1866, 1867, and 1868. Dated, Auckland, New Zealand, 1878." Bros. P.M.'s Tyler and Burns led Bro. Walker, the recipient, to the chair, which was occupied by the R.W.P.G.M. Bro. Whitaker said on this interesting occasion they were called to do honour to a brother to whom honour was due, and an occasion of this kind afforded an opportunity of impressing on the other brethren the duty of which they had a bright and good example. As they all knew, it was easier to preach than practise, but when they found one who preached and practised as did Brother Walker, it was fit that he should be recognised. Bro. Walker was admitted to St. Andrew's Lodge in 1871. He immediately commenced rising, and after going through the several offices to the satisfaction of the brethren, he rose to the position of Right Worshipful Master of the Lodge, and he had now held this position for three years. This was an unusual occurrence, but Bro. Walker had been found so courteous, so conscientious, and so efficient, that the brethren had unanimously chosen him to this honourable position on each occasion. He believed he was justified in saying that during the time Brother Walker had been in office, he had never missed attending his Lodge but once, and that was through illness. He was sure few Masons fulfilled their duties so well, and the handsome presentation did credit to the Lodge as well as to the recipient. Addressing Bro. Walker, the R.W.P.G.M. then said: Bro. Walker, I now at the request of the Lodge St. Andrew, present to you this jewel. Parenthetically, I am glad to say that it has been manufactured in Auckland. In presenting it to you, I feel it is worthy of the occasion, as your conduct has been such as to merit it from the Lodge. I know that in future you will work up to the principles you have so far carried out, and I therefore feel pleasure and honour, Bro. Walker, in, at the request of your Lodge, presenting to you this Past Master's jewel. Bro. Walker, addressing the R.W.P.G.M. and brethren, said, that he was unable to express his thanks for the kind manner in which the presentation had been made, and for the presentation itself. He felt that he had only done his duty, and he had done so not to win the favour of the P.G.M. nor yet of the Lodge, but to carry out his obligation. He had erred as others had done, but he had done his best to the utmost of his power and ability in the interests of the Craft generally and St. Andrew's Lodge in particular, and he might now lay his hand on his heart and say he had never willingly violated his obligation. He thanked them for the great honour they had done him, and while he lived in New Zealand, or when, as he intended, he should return to his native home, his brightest thought would be his reception that night. The event was celebrated by a banquet, to which most of the brethren remained. It was a recherché and well-served spread, reflecting credit on the catering abilities of Mr. Hood. Bro. Walker occupied (of right) the chair, with his Wardens in their proper positions. The usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and honoured, after which Bro. Wade P.M. proposed the "Guest of the Evening." Bro. Walker responded, and alluded to the flattering terms in which he had that night been spoken of by the Provincial Grand Master and Bro. Wade. He would make it his endeavour to do better in the future than the past. "Visiting Brethren" was proposed by Bro. Hewson, and responded to by Bros. P.M. Buchanan (E.C.), Trimble (I.C.), and Dunwoodie (S.C.). Bro. Spencer, on behalf of Lodge St. George, Dargaville (the youngest Lodge in the colony), also responded. "The Officers of Lodge St. Andrew" was proposed by Bro. Buchanan, and responded to by Bro. T. Whitson D.M. The toasts of Poor and Distressed Masons, and the Host and Hostess followed. In the intervals songs were sung, and a convivial evening was passed.

Rodney Lodge, No. 1711.—The installation of the Officers of the Rodney Lodge, No. 1711, E.C., for the ensuing year, took place at the Lodge Room, Warkworth Hotel, on Thursday, the 23rd May. Although the weather was unpropituous, there was a good attendance. The first business, after the Lodge had been opened in the first degree by W.M. Bro. Moat, was the proposal of a candidate, after which the principal ceremonies were commenced. Bro. P.M. Leers, who, twelve months since, acted as Consecrating Officer and Installing Master of the above Lodge, acted also as Installing Master on this occasion. Bro. W. P. Moat, the Master elect, was presented to the Installing Master by Bros. M. W. Munro and C. Thomson, and duly obligated and installed. The Master having been duly proclaimed and saluted in the three degrees, the following brethren were installed in their various offices by Bro. W. P. Moat:—Bros. M. W. Munro S.W., C. Thomson J.W., J. Darrach Treas., J. S. Darrach Sec., F. Howard S.D., J. Brebner J.D., G. Dibble I.G., and C. Grillin M.C. Bro. Leers addressed and charged the Wardens and Brethren on their several duties. An excellent spread was provided by Bro. Brebner. The usual loyal and patriotic toasts were given and responded to. The toast of "The Host and Hostess" was duly honoured, and a very pleasant evening was spent by all present at the second installation banquet of the Rodney Lodge.

Masonic Trip to Dargaville.—A correspondent writes:—The paddle steamer City of Cork left the Queen-street Wharf on 17th June, with a large number of Freemasons on board, to take part in the Consecration of the St. George Lodge at Dargaville, Northern Wairoa, among whom were Bros. M. S. Leers P.M. 942 E.C., 380 I.C., I. C. Victoria, P.P.J.G.D., W. J. Rees P.M. 348 I.C., P.M. 421 I.C., P.G.S., J. H. Burns P.M. 421 I.C., P.M. 154 E.C., M.W. P.G.D.C. I.C., and a number of other less illustrious brethren of the fraternity. Arriving at Riverhead, we proceeded by rail to Helensville. Arrived at Kumea at 3.15. Left a letter bag, apparently without any letters, and arrived at Helensville at 4.30 p.m. We were met by Mr. Clarke, of the Railway Terminus Hotel (late of the City Club). The accommodation of this house would do credit to any hotel in the city. Left Helensville by the steamer Minnie Casey, at 12 midnight, arriving at Dargaville on Tuesday afternoon at 2.30. During the passage of the steamer up the splendid Wairoa River, marks of progress were visible on both sides, showing what an industrious population can do. This part of the Province has been neglected in the past by the Provincial Government. The General Government have made great promises, and if faithfully kept a great future is in store for the residents of this District. It being my first visit to Dargaville, the future city of the North, I was surprised at the progress made. We found a large town properly laid out, and the buildings which are erected would do credit to many of the villa residences in the suburbs. On Sunday last, a very handsome church was opened, built at a cost of about £1,000. The fittings are very tastefully executed, and the architect and builder must feel proud of the result. The town is situated in a commanding position. The roads and drainage can be completed without any engineering difficulty. As my object in visiting Dargaville was to aid in the Consecration of the Lodge, and the installation of Bro. Dargaville as the first W.M., we proceeded to inspect the building, and finding everything correct, at noon on Wednesday the Lodge was Consecrated by Bros. Leers P.M. acting D.D.G.M., Burns P.M. acting D.G.D.C., Rees P.M. acting D.G. Org., George Powley D.G.S.W., Rev. F. Gould D.G. Chaplain, W. Mackinn D.G.J.W., Wells D.G.S.D., Austin D.G.J.D., Spiers D.G.P., and Dr. Morton D.G. Tyler. After the consecration, Bro. Dargaville was installed W.M. by Bro. P.M. Leers, in a very impressive manner. Bros. George Powley S.W., Morton J.W., and Robert Dargaville Treas. The investiture of the rest of the Officers was postponed until the next monthly meeting. In the evening, the brethren sat down to a récherché banquet, provided by Mr. Raynes, at the Kaihu Hotel. This hotel was the surprise of all who had not visited the district before. The house is well furnished, and the comforts provided do credit to Mr. and Mrs. Raynes, whose attention and courtesy during our stay were very gratifying.

One of our most pleasant anticipations was the promised excursion to the head of the river in the steamer Tangihua, at the invitation of Bro. J. M. Dargaville. The morning was ushered in with rain, but about 9 o'clock the weather cleared, and a beautiful day appeared in prospect. We left the wharf with a large party of ladies and gentlemen. The scenery on both sides of the river was enchanting. The dark and lofty kahikateas were interspersed with the graceful pungas and weeping willows. On arriving at Mr. Watson's our party landed and dispersed in various directions—some proceeding to inspect the remains of a primitive flour mill, while others went to the house to see the family. Amongst the Visitors was the Rev. F. Gould, who was rather unexpectedly required to perform the rite of baptism, Mr. Dargaville standing godfather. Having partaken of refreshments, we re-embarked, and, after a splendid passage, reached Dargaville at 8 p.m., exceedingly gratified with our pleasant excursion. After supper, we bid good-by to Mr. and Mrs. Raynes, of the Kaihu Hotel, and took up our quarters on board the steamer en route for Helensville, arriving there next morning at 11.30.

A PUZZLE SOLVED.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—It strikes me that Bro. Jacob Norton belongs to that class of critics which is known as the hypercritical. I have no doubt that Rev. Bro. Woodford is quite capable of defending his own work, but Bro. Norton should have some consideration for the faults which are inevitable in a large Cyclopædia. That what the latter is pleased to denominate "the Aberdour Puzzle," might never have arisen had a little more care been taken in reading the proofs is most likely; that the information as at present arranged in the Cyclopædia might lead ignorant people to imagine there were two Aberdours, one G.M. Scotland and the other G.M. England, is not to be denied; but with all due deference to Bro. Norton, some allowance should be made for faulty arrangements in a work of nearly 1,000 pages. As for the confusion between Morton and Heaton, it seems to me this is a mere printer's error which has escaped correction. Had the copy been in my handwriting, at least I should have offered this explanation. As I have been frequently told, those who compose my copy are not favourably impressed with my handwriting, and, mirabile dictu, do not consider it by any means a brilliant exhibition of caligraphy. But to return to the Aberdour difficulty, or rather the difficulty which Bro. Norton has apparently raised, and by which he is, or was, so perplexed. The editor of the Cyclopædia might have been more careful, but I do not think he has misled any one conversant with Masonic history—I beg his pardon, except Bro. Norton, who has brought up a tremendous array of matter in order to correct a clerical error; in short, a Nasmyth hammer to crack a nut! Cui bono?

Truly yours,

GAMMA.

OUR FRENCH BRETHREN.

We have been favoured with copy of a letter addressed by the Council of the Grand Orient of France to foreign and French Lodges, and beg to place before our readers the following translation.

A.·. L.·. G.·. D.·. G.·. A.·. D.·. L'UNIV.·.

Grand Orient of France,

Supreme Council for France and the French Possessions,
O.·. of Paris, 1st August 1878 (E.·. V.·.)

To Foreign Masonic Powers and the Lodges in their several jurisdictions, as well as to the Lodges in that of the Grand Orient of France. Thrice Greeting:—

VERY DEAR BRETHREN,—The General Assembly of the Grand Orient of France, at which the Presidents and Delegates of all the Lodges in its jurisdiction will be present, will be held during the second week of September, and, as is usually the case, the Session will terminate with a banquet, to be given at the hotel of the Grand Orient, 16 Rue Cadet, on Saturday, the 14th of the month.

The Universal Exhibition will still be open to the public at the time of this gathering, and doubtless will have attracted to Paris, from all parts of the world, a considerable number of Freemasons. Under these circumstances, the Council of the Order, inspired with a happy recollection of the fête held under similar conditions during the Exhibition of 1867, have arrived at the conclusion that the meeting of the General Assembly would offer an excellent opportunity for strengthening the ties which unite the members of the great Masonic family. They therefore invite the Freemasons of other Orients and Lodges to join with their French brethren in giving a character for universality to the approaching Fête.

The Grand Orient of France entertains the hope that this appeal will be favourably received; and for its part, it rejoices in being able, at a Convention of Masons of different Rites, to offer the brethren, who may convene together, the testimony of its deep and fraternal sympathy.

Accept, Very Dear Brethren, the assurance of our sentiments of esteem and brotherly affection.

In the name of the Council of the Order,

(Signed) DE SAINT JEAN, President.
CH. COUSIN, CAUBET } Vice-Presidents.
POULLI, DE HEREDIA } Secretaries.

GENERAL ARRANGEMENTS.

The labours of the Grand Orient will commence at 4 p.m.

The banquet will take place at 6 p.m.

Tickets, the subscription or price of which is fixed at 15 francs, to be obtained at the Secretariat of the Grand Orient, 16 Rue Cadet.

N.B.—The subscription is, and will remain open till the 5th September, and not later. This arrangement being necessary in order that the Stewards may know beforehand the number of those who intend being present at the banquet.

A MASONIC GRIP.—And speaking of signs reminds me of an old-time Masonic incident. When the anti-Masonic hostility was at its height, one of the hostiles met a sturdy old Boston caulker and framer, with a hand as hard as iron and as big as a ham, and, taking him by the hand, he began making gripe of a significant character, that the old caulker did not answer. "I thought you were a Mason," said the gripper. "Well, suppose I am; what then?" "Why, you seem to know nothing of your own signs that I have been making you." "Oh, was that what you were doing? Well, you did not make the sign right. See here now," and taking the gripper's hand in his, he crushed his tarry, caulking-iron grip upon it, till the bones cracked, and the fellow danced with a howl of pain. "There," said old Oakum, "that is the grip of the first degree, and when you want the second come to me." He never came for further light. The signs should be judiciously used, and never played with. They are serious things, and the one to whom they have been confided should regard them as a sacred trust, kept ready for use when the proper time comes, and then not too lavishly.—Masonic Jewel.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—This cooling medicine has the happiest effect when the blood is overheated, and a tendency to inflammatory action is set up in the system. One Pill taken shortly before dinner does away with indigestion, fullness and flatulency indicative of a weak stomach or disordered liver. A few Pills taken at bedtime act as alteratives and aperients; they not only relieve the bowels, but regulate every organ connected with them; overcome all acrid humours and encourage a free supply of all the secretions essential to our well being. Holloway's Pills thoroughly cleanse and perfectly regulate the circulation; and beget a feeling of comfort in hot climates and high temperature which is most desirable for the preservation of health.

PICNIC OF THE CEDEWAIN LODGE, No. 1504.

THE Worshipful Master, Officers, and Brethren of this highly prosperous Lodge, held their annual Pic-nic, on Friday, the 2nd inst. The place de rendezvous was reached by the Cambrian railway, from Newtown, after a run of about thirty miles — sometimes through luxuriant vallies, at others past forest-clad hills and deep defiles, holding each and all in warm admiration and intense, nay, almost breathless rapture, for the trip was through one of the grandest routes a tourist could select. In due course the party alighted at Machynlleth Station, and it was only then that the strength of the party was apparent. During the trip we had secluded ourselves (with a "rare" few) in a bachelors' box, and over a smoke cracked a joke, thus losing the company of the gentler sex, who now disclosed to us their genial presence. While we enumerate the names of the brethren, it is but right to say that each was accompanied by either his wife, daughter, or a friend, thereby confuting the fallacy which attributes to Freemasons the appellation "selfish." Bros. C. Morgan, John Danily, E. R. Morris, F. Britton, Rev. John Williams, Pryce Jones, Robert Jones, D. Morgan, C. D. Ray, T. Turner, Richard Jones, J. Owen, T. E. Izgard, Dr. E. Monro, T. M. Taylor, W. Francis, L. Lewis, J. Nunn, E. Jones, A. Ikin, S. Davies. There were others whose names we could not obtain. Each member of the Lodge had the privilege of inviting two friends, this made the party number sixty-seven. Great were the speculations as to how the weather would turn out; "but soon the morn, like lobster boiled, from black to red began to turn," and a fresh breeze cleared the horizon of every cloud, and made the day such a one as could be desired by those who wished to enjoy a mountain ascent and mountain landscapes. The delightful spot selected by our esteemed brethen was Plas Machynlleth, the Manor of Bro. the Most Hon. the Marquis of Londonderry. Here, on the grassy mead, beneath the shade of majestic trees, a cold collation was spread, and by two o'clock all sat down to do ample justice to the repast. This is indeed a charming locality, and no prettier spot could be selected. Each enjoyed the good things provided, and all scanned with cheerful expression the magnificent scenery that surrounded us. The dinner over, Rev. Bro. Williams returned thanks to the G.A.O.T.U., and each responded with thankful heart. The musicians who had been engaged for the occasion, during dinner discoursed a variety of popular Welsh airs. They now fell to, while the company for a short time dispersed to explore the natural beauties of Cymry. For ourselves, we take kindly to the mountains on Montgomeryshire side, and on this occasion we wandered towards the mouth of the far famed Dovy. Upwards and onwards, each stride bringing the traveller nearer the goal of his ambition, and each step creating a longing desire to look back on the receding panorama which not long ago lay before him, only in different but equally grand perspective. After over an hour's climbing, an elevation was attained, which commanded a view that could not be surpassed. Gazing inland, as far as the eye can reach and the mind discern, we see the grand beacons of Montgomery and Merionethshire, gently converge to each other and throw, as it were, their giant forms to nestle the quaint old town of Machynlleth in the plain. Out from the mountain ranges, and skirting the town on the right, gently winds the clear water of the good river Dovy. Full many an angler has been tempted to linger on the banks of this river, and oft and again has his rod been weighted by the dashing struggle of the noble salmon, with which the river abounds, and of which, well garnished, we partook of this day. Down comes the sparkling waters, through the lovely vale below, and gazing seaward we perceive where, like a silvery serpent, it empties itself into its parent the ocean. But the scene before us defies the extent of our descriptive powers. Here where we stand, we are about 2,000 feet above the level of the sea; across the vale, bearing to the left, rises the still loftier Gran-y-Gessel, while far to the north, and more lofty still, rises the majestic Cader Idris, whose peak ascends nearly 3,000 feet. Away to the west is seen, glistening in the brilliant sunbeams, Cardigan Bay, and while we drink in the beauties of the picturesque scene, we wonder why Englishmen will travel abroad for change of scene and beauty of landscape, when here we have mountain and vale, river and ocean, and a country replete with historic recollections. From where we stand we can note the site of ancient Maglona, a Roman station; while at hand can be traced the "Old Parliament House" where, in 1402, Owen Glyndwr, after accepting the Crown of Wales, exercised his sovereignty by assembling a parliament. But we must not stay longer, as even now the hour has passed when it had been arranged tea should be spread, and in our rambling, pensive tour, we have deprived ourselves of the cheerful society and merry dance on the velvet-like lawn of the Plas. However, we rejoin our friends at the Railway Station, in time to meet the last train, when we find every one highly delighted with the day's trip. Great credit is due to the Catering Committee; to Bro. Nunn, who acted as D. of C.; to Bro. R. Jones, who acted as Secretary; and to Bro. Foster. The arrangements made by the Cambrian Railway Company were very satisfactory to all the brethren of the Cedewain Lodge, than whom there is not a more genial and fraternal body of Freemasons. In conclusion, we wish them and their families every prosperity.

The Chicago Masonic Library Association desires the following Proceedings of the Grand Masonic bodies of Tennessee to complete files: Proceedings of the Grand Lodge for 1847, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 58, 59; Grand Chapter 1826 to 1848, 51, 52, 53, 54, 56; Grand Council 1847 to 1860 inclusive. MASONIC COURTESY.

AT the first cursory glance at the heading of this article, the reader might possibly be inclined to say, "surely there is no necessity for urging upon the Craft the propriety of paying due attention to strict Masonic courtesy." Now, we are free to say there is. Our idea of Freemasonry teaches us to believe that the mere formalities of the Lodge room are not sufficient, that a closer tie should exist among the brethren, and that the teachings in the Lodge room should be practically exemplified in our every day life. There we are taught to meet as brothren, yet we daily witness the back-bitings, the jealousy and the contemptible meanness that some members of the Craft display toward each other, whom, for certain reasons, they, from their self-exalted standpoint, deem unworthy of their esteem or friendship. Like the Pharisees of old, they inwardly thank their God they are not as the Publican and Sinner. These men, by such a course, give the outside world an opportunity to cast a sneer at the Fraternity.

We hold, that in a community so extensive as ours, wide differences of opinion in politics, religion and business matters must necessarily exist among its members. The believer in the Koran views the faith of the Christian as erroneous, and the red man fails to understand the proclivities of the white. But on these points we should agree to differ; the hand of friendship should be extended to all alike, the act of courtesy should ever be passed between brothers who are bound together by the same solemn vows. It is impossible we can all move in the same social sphere or associate in the same business or political circle; but we can meet each other with that courtesy which always exists between gentlemen, and should be especially marked between Craftsmen.

How cold our Lodge-rooms, in some instances, have appeared to the newly initiated. He has received his first degree, and finds himself a stranger among those whom, according to the ritual, he has just been taught to look upon as brethren. He leaves with a heavy weight in his breast; he is disappointed, perchance disgusted, and leaves the Lodge-room never to re-enter it. We know of such cases from personal experience. How different is it when, after being brought to light and initiated into the mysteries of the first degree, he finds himself cordially welcomed by his newly found brothers, when they crowd round him with cheerful greeting and kindly words; when they encourage him by their courteous welcome and warm, genial, fraternal manner: that initiate leaves the Lodge-room feeling that he has met with brothers, that he is a member, with rights and privileges, in the great Masonic fraternity, and his heart warms within him, as in his secret chamber he exclaims to himself, "I am a Free Mason."

Again, note the different receptions given in different Lodges to the visitor. In the one, a formal greeting, similar to a presidential reception at the White House; in the other, a cordial, whole-souled, courteous welcome, as brother gives to brother after a long absence from the paternal roof. In the first instance, a most unfavourable impression is produced upon the visiting brother; in the second, all the good qualities, and genial nature of the brother are brought to the surface, and often lasting and endearing friendships are formed, that perhaps in after years are looked back upon as green oases in the sandy desert of life.

If brethren then, by ordinary Masonic courtesy can accomplish so much, why are they ever careless in practising it? Life is not, to all, so bright and cheerful that they can afford to owe the mite of happiness and pleasure that the simple act of brotherly kindness can bestow. It is a trifle to him that gives, but often a priceless treasure to him that receives. By all our teachings we are bound to exercise it, by every tenet of the Craft we are taught that it is not only our duty, but our high privilege to bestow it.

Fortunately, in Canada we can pride ourselves as a rule upon the courtesy with which we generally welcome the visitor and receive the newly made brother, and it is right that it should be so. Masonry is something more than a mere symbolism, and there is not anything that so speedily attracts the attention of the visitor as the manner of his reception and welcome. Much depends upon the Worshipful Master; if he is cold, formal and precise, his welcome will accord with his manner, and the chilling reception will prevent the visiting brother making a repetition of his visit. It is very essential then that he who presides in the Oriental Chair should be urbane and courteous, displaying thus his knowledge of one of the leading characteristics of the Craft. The manner of the Master must, to a certain extent, raise or injure the Lodge; it is therefore very advisable, in the election of their Officers (but more especially their First Officer), that the brethren should select one who is not only a good ritualist and acquainted with the law, but who possesses a gentlemanly, kind and courteous manner, and the brethren themselves should vie with each other, not only to be courteous in the Lodge room, but also out of the Lodge room, and be particularly careful to prove their devotion to the Craft by being ever ready to welcome, with a cordial greeting, a kindly smile and Masonic courtesy the strange Brother, the Visitor and the newly initiated.—Masonic Jewel.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A series of articles, biographical, descriptive, and eulogistic, of some of the principal Masonic worthies of the day. They are well written, and though personal, by no means offensive, or intrusive into private life, and in Masonic society will be welcomed as an interesting series of word paintings of members of the Craft.—Standard.

"We do not remember to have read any similar series of sketches which surpass this in merit."—Land and Water.

"The book will be of great interest to Masons, containing as it does pen-and-ink sketches of the most distinguished men among them, and giving some considerable information on matters Masonic, from various points of view."—Lloyd's Newspaper.

"Admirably written, being free from what are too often observed in composition—inelegant language and prolixity."—Sunday Times.

"'J. G.' writes with a considerable amount of freedom, never hesitating to 'hit off' a weakness when he finds it publicly displayed by a 'distinguished brother;' at the same time he never loses sight of a good trait when it is displayed, either in connexion with the Craft or in the service of the public out of doors. The sketches are lively reading."—City Press.

"This is a neat book. The Portraits consist of a series of 'word pictures' of eminent English Masons. It styles Bro. W. J. Hughan 'Knight Errant,' and sketches thirty-two others under equally unique titles. We commend the book as worthy of a place in every Masonic library."—Voice of Masonry.

"Evinces much literary ability, and is a valuable addition to the few works we have in Masonic biography."—Philadelphia Keystone.

"The book ought to be in every well arranged Masonic Library."—New York Courier.

"The portraits consist of a series of what we call 'pen and ink sketches' of brethren prominent in all the noble undertakings of English Masonry. . . . Prominent among his brethren we find Bro. Fred. Binckes, ('Our Hercules,' whose herculean efforts in behalf of those blessed institutions, the charities of English Masons, have a world-wide reputation, which will live long after the zealous Craftsman has been, 'laid away to rest.'"—New York Square.

"It is a valuable contribution to English current literature."—Masonic Review.

67 BARBICAN, E.C.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

THE labours of the House of Lords have not seriously taxed their Lordships' energies during the past few days. A personal explanation between Lords Carnarvon and Beaconsfield, the reception of a message from the Queen, thanking them for their recent loyal address on the subject of the Duke of Connaught's income, and the passage through one or other of the necessary stages of certain measures, like the Highways Bill, which had been sent up from the Commons, occupying about an hour and a half on Thursday last. Half an hour sufficed for the transaction of Friday's business, and on Monday the sitting was not of much longer duration. On Tuesday, after sundry measures had been advanced, a discussion arose on the Reserve Forces, apropos of a question put to the Government by the Earl of Camperdown, who was desirous of learning how many of the reserves who had been called out, and since dismissed to their homes, had lost their civil employment. Lord Napier of Magdala, Viscount Bury, the Duke of Cambridge, and others took part in the debate.

In the House of Commons the great Eastern Debate was continued on Thursday and Friday last. On the former day Mr. Lowe opened the battle by making a tremendous and somewhat malicious attack on the Government, but Lord John Manners, who followed the right honourable gentleman, was fully equal to the occasion, and defended Ministers in a speech of great dignity and sound argument. On Friday, the principal speakers were Lord Elcho, who gave an independent support to the Government. Mr. W. E. Forster, who opposed them, Mr. Roebuck, who also supported Ministers, and Sir W. Harcourt who spoke against them. The one remaining speech worthy of notice was that of Sir Stafford Northcote, who summed up the case of Ministers with great calmness and lucidity. On the division being taken, it was found that 195 supported the resolution of Lord Hartington, while 338 opposed it, so that the majority for the Government was 143, or more considerable than it has ever been previously. On Monday the Chancellor of the Exchequer gave some indication of the procedure of public business during the rest of the Session. In Committee the House made further progress with the Estimates. On Tuesday, the House resolved itself into Committee of Ways and Means, when the Chancellor of the Exchequer moved that a sum of two millions be granted towards the deficit caused by the additional expenditure which had been incurred over and above that which the House had sanctioned in the Budget. A long and desultory debate followed, in the course of which the Ministerial policy, both financial and otherwise, was assailed by Messrs.

Gladstone and Childers. However, the money was voted. In the course of the evening there was a "scene" of no little excitement. Major O'Gorman insisted on interrupting the Secretary of State for War, and when called to order by the Speaker, refused to obey. Thereupon, on the proposition of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, seconded by Mr. Lowe, the Major, having been first named by the Speaker, was directed to withdraw, and a motion that he be called upon to attend the day following and make suitable apology to the House or be punished, was agreed to. Accordingly, on Wednesday, Major O'Gorman having been called, made his appearance, and at once tendered a most manly and sincere apology for his neglect to obey the Speaker's call to order. The apology was at once accepted, on the motion of the Chancellor, seconded by Lord Hartington. The rest of the sitting was occupied in Committee on the Military and other Estimates.

The Court at Osborne has been increased by the arrival of H.R.H. Prince Leopold, who we rejoice to say, has recovered from his recent indisposition. Both the Queen and the Prince have been to inspect the wreck of the Eurydice, which at the time was in Sandown Bay, but has since been towed to a securer position, where it is sheltered from the heavy seas which it was feared would cause her to break up. She will at once be towed into Portsmouth Harbour. The Prince and Princess of Wales having concluded their visit to the Duke of Richmond and Gordon at Goodwood, are now in the Isle of Wight, or rather, on the Royal yacht Osborne, where they have been joined by their children, and where it is expected, they will remain for some time. It is believed that the Duke of Connaught's marriage will take place in February next, in St. George's Chapel, Windsor.

The chief Masonic event of the week has been the installation of Sir E. A. Lechmere, Bart., M.P., as Prov. G. Master of Worcestershire. The ceremony was entrusted to Lord Skelmersdale, Deputy Grand Master, and it is to be hoped that under the auspices of the new P.G.M. the lethargy which appears to have prevailed for so long in this Province will be overcome, and that we shall find Worcestershire playing a satisfactory part in the general affairs of the Craft. It should likewise be mentioned that at the Quarterly Communication of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, held on Monday, the 5th inst., the Duke of Connaught and Prince Leopold were elected honorary members of Grand Lodge, and the Grand Secretary, Bro. Murray Lyon, was directed to notify their Royal Highnesses of their election.

There are few who will rejoice—and that too with so much reason—more when the present Session of Parliament comes to an end than the Earl of Beaconsfield and the Marquis of Salisbury. The tremendous anxieties of the first half of the year are now being followed by the fatigues of victory. The explanations in Parliament gave place to a visit to the Queen. Then came the great political banquet of the 27th ult., and then the visit to the City on Saturday last, when the freedom of the City was conferred on the noble lords at Guildhall, and the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress entertained them and their colleagues at a grand banquet at the Mansion House. It is hardly worth while to describe the reception in detail, as our readers are no doubt already well posted in all the particulars. Suffice it that the Premier and his colleague were loudly cheered, along the whole route, that Temple Bar—or rather what still remains of it—was made to look gay, and that the Guildhall was thronged to overflowing by citizens and visitors, assembled to pay homage to two of our foremost statesmen. The ceremony of presentation was of the usual formal character, and the speeches of the noble lords were brief and to the point. The enthusiasm at the meeting was immense and proved how popular the Ministry is in the City. In the evening, at the banquet at the Mansion House, there was equal warmth of feeling displayed. All the Ministers were present, with the exception of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon, who had been entertaining the Prince and Princess of Wales at Goodwood. On Tuesday the delegates of about five hundred Conservative Associations had an interview by appointment with the Prime Minister and the Marquis of Salisbury at the Foreign Office, and on the latter entering the applause was vociferous. The first hour and a half were occupied in presenting the delegates, who were not far under a thousand, and as each of them shook hands with the two Ministers in turn, it will be imagined the noble lords had to undergo a somewhat trying ordeal. They survived it, however, and the speeches they made on the occasion were interrupted by frequent outbursts of applause. We can imagine that the end of the Session, when Ministers can enjoy what little peace is permitted to our public men, must be looked forward to with no small amount of anxiety.

Tuesday next is fixed for the Review at Spithead of what is known as the Special Service Squadron, consisting of sixteen ironclads, turret and broadside, three gun boats, and a despatch vessel. Sir Cooper Key is in command, and Rear-Admiral Boys is his second. The squadron includes such vessels as the Thunderer, the Hercules, the Bellcisle, the Warrior, the Boadicea, the Penelope, the Resistance, the Valiant, and the Hector. This is a most formidable squadron, and had not our plenipotentiaries at Berlin brought home with them "peace with honour," would have played an important part in any naval operations it might have been necessary for the Government to undertake. Yet it is only one of many squadrons afloat, to say nothing of the ships available immediately, or at short notice, for active service. The review will be a great attraction, and there will be several vessels placed at the disposal of the Houses of Parliament and the officers of the Army, Navy, and Civil Service. Given, therefore, fine weather, and Portsmouth will have a magnificent treat. While on the subject, we may mention that the Inflexible, which, when complete, will be armed with four eighty-one ton guns, and be the most powerful ironclad afloat, had a preliminary run on Tuesday, for the purpose of testing her speed, but owing to there being something wrong with the blades of her screw, the result was not as satisfactory as might have been wished. She attained a speed of over 13½ knots, but the officials are satisfied she will realise the expected 14 knots. The cost of this vessel is set down at £700,000, so that our modern vessels of war are rather costly affairs.

The Bank Holiday on Monday was turned to very good account by the London public, and about the usual quantity of liquor was consumed, or, as the weather was none of the coolest, the usual and a little more. We wonder if any statistician will be at the pains of calculating how much is contributed to the public revenue in the shape of Customs and Excise duties on one of these public holidays. It would be an interesting question to determine this, and a far greater test whether Bank holidays are an unmixed good or an unmixed evil, than the number of police charges the following morning.

Shoeburyness is not ordinarily an attractive place, but this week the National Artillery Association has been holding its annual meeting, and consequently there are over a thousand Volunteer Artillerymen in camp, comprising nearly a hundred detachments who have met together to compete for the Queen's and other prizes. From all accounts the Camp is conducted in a most orderly manner, and the Volunteers here, as at Wimbledon, succeed in winning high encomiums from the regular officers in command.

This being Cricket Week at Canterbury, the ancient city has been thronged with visitors, and has given itself up to a course of pleasure with the most sincere devotion. Dinners, and private theatricals in the evening, and Cricket during the day, with luncheon at intervals, is not a bad way of spending a holiday; so, at least, think the good people of Canterbury, and we cannot say they have not reason on their side. On the contrary, if our engagements permitted, there is no place we should more gladly visit under such conditions.

The new Governor of Cyprus is settling down, and the work of organization has commenced in earnest, though necessarily but little progress has been made up to the present time. It seems that at no distant time the garrison will be reduced to a couple of British regiments and a battery of Artillery, and the Indian contingent sent home again, it being intended that the island should be a station rather than a garrison. And a very nice station it will prove when all is ship-shape, only people must not follow the example of certain members of the Opposition, and expect things to be completed before they are well begun. The work of making Cyprus rich and prosperous as of yore will take time.

The Austrian occupation of Bosnia and Herzegovina has already been attended with bloodshed, as the Moslem Begs are offering a strenuous, though hopeless, resistance to the occupying force. This, it is believed, is not the fault of the Turkish Government, though there are not wanting persons who say that the Turkish authorities are delay till the last moment her ratification of the Treaty. As to the Czar, there is said to be some hesitation on his part in signing the Treaty, owing to efforts made by the so-called "patriotic" party to induce him to reject it, but it is hoped and believed that the peaceful inclinations of His Majesty will prevail. Meantime, we hear of General Kauffman, of Khiva fame, undertaking a new expedition in Central Asia, Balk being the object this time of his amiable intentions. This, if successful, will bring the Russians close to the frontiers of Afghanistan, and looks as though it were intended as a counter-move to our defensive treaty with Turkey in respect of her Asiatic territories.

The Provincial Grand Lodge of Worcester will be held on Wednesday, 7th August, at the College Hall, Worcester, under the Banner of the Worcester Lodge No. 280. Prov. Grand Lodge will be opened at twelve o'clock at noon and the Right Worshipful Deputy Grand Master of England, Lord Skelmersdale, will instal Right W. Bro. Sir E. A. H. Lechmere as Grand Master of the Province. The banquet will be served at the Shire Hall, at 5 p.m., for which tickets may be procured from the Prov. Grand Stewards, or from Bro. H. Oram, Hon. Sec. of the Worcester Lodge.

The annual Provincial Grand Lodge of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight will be held at the Philharmonic Hall, Southampton, on Tuesday, the 13th of August, for the transaction of the ordinary business of the Province.

We understand that a third Lodge, of which Bro. Walshaw P.M. is to be the first Master, will be consecrated in Scarborough on the 12th September, by Dr. J. P. Bell, D.P.G.M. for North and East Yorkshire.

A Musical and Dramatic Entertainment will be given at the Surrey Masonic Club, Camberwell-new-road, S.E., under the direction of Bro. G. S. Graham, on Saturday evening, 3rd August 1878, at eight o'clock precisely. Brethren desirous of becoming members of the Club, may obtain particulars of the Honorary Secretary, Bro. James Stevens, at the Hall on any evening.

A MEETING of the Grand Masters Council, No. 1, was held at the Masonic Rooms, 2 Red Lion-square, on Tuesday, the 30th of July. Present—Bros. Rev. G. R. Portal M.P.G.M., Hyde Pullen G.P.C.W., Frederick Davison G. Treasurer, S. Rosenthal T.J.M. No. 3, General J. S. Brownrigg, Rev. Ambrose W. Hall, Magnus Ohren, Dr. F. W. Ramsay, S. C. Dibdin, D. M. Bright were introduced and received the various degrees of Most Excellent Master, Royal Master, Select Master and Super Excellent Master. The other business before the Council having been transacted, the Meeting was closed in ancient form, and adjourned to Wednesday the 30th of October.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—In general debility, nervous tremor, and mental depression, these unrivalled Pills have a marvellous effect. They have won the confidence of millions in all parts of the civilised world. Constitutions shaken by sensual excesses, or by long residence in unwholesome climates, or by sedentary habits, are wonderfully renovated by a course of this extraordinary medicine, which, powerful as is its action on the whole system, is perfectly harmless to the tenderest frame. The Pills are composed of rare balsams, without the admixture of a grain of any mineral whatever, or of any other deleterious substance. They operate directly, powerfully, and beneficially upon the whole mass of blood; nor can we question the fact when we see indigestion cured, liver complaints arrested, the oppressed lungs brought into healthful play, and every physical function renewed and strengthened by their agency.

BOMBAY.

KURRACHEE witnessed on Monday, the 24th June, one of the greatest achievements recorded in the annals of Freemasonry in Sind. St. John's Day being recognised by all English Masons as one of high festival, the brethren of Lodge "Union" were determined to make it one of the most memorable, it being the installation to the chair of that Lodge for the second time of Wor. Bro. George C. Brayson. The entire credit and success of the undertaking is due to this brother, whose zeal for the Craft and admirable working are the admiration of his brethren.

The procession to Trinity Church was formed in the following order:—

Lodge Endeavour, Manora, represented by W. Bro. T. Ward W.M., W. A. Miles, W. R. Scroggie, D. D'Silva, J. Hughes, and W. S. Cope.

Lodge Hope, Kurrachee, represented by W. Bros. Adam Clark W.M., Thomas Cosser P.M., J. H. Duncan P.M.; H. F. Brayson, J. Davison, C. T. Edwards, E. King, A. McSween, G. Twells, W. Trevena, C. W. Rook, J. M. Horne, J. G. Quanbrough, and W. Bishop.

Lodge Industry, Hyderabad, represented by W. Bros. W. Wilson W.M., J. D. Wilson P.M.; W. Hoonahan S.W., A. Wiffin J.W., Brumby S.D., Mitchell J.D.

Lodge Union, Kurrachee, represented by W. Bros. George C. Brayson W.M., James Grant P.M., J. A. Hannah; J. Quinn, W. Aspinall, W. H. Miller, W. Cuzens, R. Allan, J. C. Elstone, T. Watson, W. H. Franklin, W. H. Bloss, H. S. Cocksedge, J. Collett, and E. Cardwell.

Visitor—W. Bro. Alexander Campbell, Lodge Felix, Aden.

Each Lodge, preceded by its Tyler and Banner Bearer, marched through the western entrance of the Lodge. On emerging therefrom it was met by an admiring crowd, amongst whom could be seen many of the chief residents of the Station. The scene throughout, variegated as it was by the different colours of each Lodge, was pretty in the extreme. The procession halted at the north door of Trinity Church, when the order of formation was reversed, Union being first, Hope second, followed by Endeavour and Industry. Entry into Trinity Church was made from the west door. The compound of the Church was fairly filled with "our gallant sons of Mars," belonging to H.M.'s 83rd and Royal Artillery.

At the west door stood Bro. the Rev. J. Higgins, in Masonic costume, who led the procession up the nave of the Church, when he retired and ascended the pulpit, and W. Bro. George Brayson led the brethren to the seats that had been specially reserved for them.

Every seat in that spacious Church was crowded with spectators. The Rev. D. Cotes from the reading desk gave out the hymn—which was sung by the full choir in attendance, accompanied by the sweet music of the organ, and followed by short prayers.

"Great Architect of earth and heaven,"—

The sermon was preached by Bro. the Rev. J. Higgins, from 1 Kings vi. 7-8, "There was neither hammer, nor axe, nor any tool of iron, in the house while it was in building."

Reference is here made, as doubtless you all know, my Brothers, to one circumstance in the construction of that splendid Temple, which Solomon built to the Glory of Almighty God. Its stones were prepared and its timbers shaped at a distance from the spot where afterwards they were erected. In the distant quarries of Syenne; or in the Forests of Lebanon there was, doubtless, the sound of man's busy toil; but here on Mount Moriah, the jar and clang of labour was unheard. Tier upon tier, course above course, the Temple rose beneath the builder's hands, in stately and silent growth. In those explorations which are being carried on in the Holy City (under the auspices of the Palestine Exploration Society) we appear to have come upon the foundations of Solomon's Temple, and each great block of stone still shows the Mason's private mark designed to indicate its exact position in the building. In silence therefore the foundations were laid, in silence were the arches turned and fitted with their key-stones, in silence each pillar rose and was surmounted by its capital.

"No workman's axe, no pond'rous hammer rung,
Like some tall palm, the mystic fabric sprung."

"Majestic silence!" exclaims the poet, and in that silence was prefigured one of the deepest truths of God's natural as well as moral Government; namely, that God ever works silently if not secretly. Thus gradual are all the hidden processes of Nature, thus slowly and in secret the seed germinates, the sprout puts forth its tender leaflets, the sap ebbs and flows beneath the bark. Everywhere, through all its myriad of hidden recesses, the busy workers of living nature complete their task, and the secret laws of inert nature develop their consequences,—step by step, stage after stage, unwatched save by the All-Seeing-Eye. Whether it be the worm weaving the shroud-like cocoon, that in due time shall give birth to the ephemera of a day; or the nebulous particles (star seed, as they have been called) which gathering through millions of ages and forming at last the revolving world which men call a star: in each and all we find the same law, silent growth, progressive development, continuously passing from one growth of glory to another. There is no sudden bound in nature, its changes may surprise men, but hidden laws have long been working for their development, whether in the meanest animalcula that crowds a water-drop or in the brightest of those created intelligences, that circle around the Throne of Thrones.

Let us contrast with the masons of Solomon's Temple another group of Temple Builders and we shall see the types of divine and of human work, the types of a debased masonry, discarding Faith in God and love to man, and masonry in its purer form, acknowledging and obedient to the rules of the Great Architect of the Universe.

The first are those gathered on the plains of Shinar. They would build a city and a tower whose top should reach unto heaven. Forgetful of the divine command, to go forth in every direction and colonize and possess the world; forgetful of the divine promise that God would protect them and bless them wherever they might be; we see them herding together for mutual safety, filled with a slavish dread of the powers of nature (afraid that is, of another flood), and actuated by a selfish anxiety, which made them cling coward-like to one spot and to one another. What stir! and what commotion must have marked their efforts! Yet after all what result? So far from completing a common landmark and a rallying place for all, discussion and dispersion grew out of their very task, and doubtless for many an after age men pointed to those unfinished towers of Babel, and told from father to son how in the babble of divers tongues, in the strife of selfish and varying interests man's puny, ill-directed labour had come to nought.

Thus it may be said of much that man endeavours after and undertakes. There is confusion and turmoil, sound and strife, jarring interests, selfish struggles; he loves the roll of the drum and the fanfare of trumpets, nor is he deterred by garments rolled in blood.

God's work on the other hand is ever calm and peaceful. True power, true greatness is ever distinguished by repose and assured rest. Under a great variety of figures is this feature of Divine working inculcated in Scripture, but never more strikingly than in this instance when the Temple on Mount Moriah grew silently to its completion, scarce challenging man's notice or admiration, till it stood forth in all its finished beauty. As a ship's track upon the water, which no eye can trace—as a bird's path in air, which none can follow—as showers upon the tender herb, or dew upon the mown grass, thus does God reveal His presence and impart His influence, and thus peaceful and quiet growth are the distinguishing traits of His followers. God "hides them in His tabernacle secretly from the strife of tongues," they know nothing of the Babel warfare of the world. God teaches them the power of the still small voice "when the whirlwind, and the earthquake and the fire hath passed by: they are partakers of a kingdom that cometh not with observation, and ever, when weary with earthly toil, God speaks to them the words of comfort. In quietness and confidence shall be your strength."

Your predecessors, my Brothers in the Mystic Craft, were working Masons guided by divine wisdom. Both the Tabernacle and the Temple with their furniture were constructed after the pattern of heavenly things. But it is remarkable that our first Grand Master was of mixed birth—of a Gentile father though of a Jewish mother, one among many indications that God's gifts are not confined to any one race or people, and that Freemasonry especially is the heritage of the world. To the nations of Europe and the West, and even to the sea-girt home of the Anglo Saxon race, has passed by regular descent and transmission some share at least of that Masonic love. It has come now to be generally acknowledged that most of the Cathedrals of England, France and Germany were built by guilds or associations of Masons who passed from country to country and continent to continent and left behind them memorials of labour that have been ever since a world's wonder and a nation's pride.

Those days are past and gone! Not now, my Brothers, are you called upon to rear stately fanes consecrated to God's honor, or houses dedicated to the cause of Charity and Humanity. But other work lies before you. Still are you builders, collectively as well as individually, and Solomon's Temple remains an eternal type of what each Lodge and the united body of our order should be; and secondly what each separate and individual Mason should be. In "majestic silence the Temple rose;" so only in peace and order should and does Freemasonry work its quiet way; still it labours to leave behind monuments more enduring than those earthly piles that crumble to the touch of Time's "effacing fingers." Still secret and unostentatious is its working. It doth not "lift up its voice," or "cry aloud in the streets."

It seeks no addition to its members by argument or solicitation or proselytism. It seeks only that the Grand Master above may accept the work of Charity and Love with the approving sentence "well done! Good and faithful servant!"

Now, to accomplish such undertakings there must be unity of purpose, mutual endeavour, brotherly love and self-sacrifice. Dispute and contention never yet effected a good purpose. Axes and hammers cannot build up. "Now they break down all the carved-work thereof with axes and hammers." They can destroy but not build up. The best memorials a Lodge can rear are works of charity and piety such as that which claims your sympathies to-day. The alms-house which shelters four widows and their children has of late received but cold and insufficient support. I trust to your liberality to place it beyond the reach of want for many a day to come. Lastly, of that Temple who each man in himself is here too the law of its building, is identical with that enjoined on Mount Moriah. Slowly and gradually is each soul moulded to receive the most High. Secretly and silently does God reveal himself. Not in the noise and bustle of excited audiences, not in the passing emotions of a quasi religious fervor, is the heart of man prepared and edified. In all true religion is quietness and peace. Thus does God manifest Himself to His chosen ones. God is Love, and he that dwelleth in Love dwelleth in God, and God in Him.

And now, Brothers, in the words of the Apostle, "I commit you to God and to the word of His grace who is able to build you up" into the living temples of His Glory. So mote it be.

After the sermon a collection was made on behalf of the "Widows Home" by the Master and Senior Warden of "Union," when the Brethren responded most cordially.

After the business of the Lodge was completed the Brethren, numbering about 52, sat down to a most sumptuous Banquet, got up under the management of Brother Miller of H.M.'s 83rd Regiment; the full band of the 19th Regiment N.I. discoursed sweet music during the Banquet.

NATIONAL RIFLE ASSOCIATION, WIMBLEDON.—Lieut. G. Fenton, of H.M.'s 77th Regiment, was the winner of the Quarter Cask "Spécialité" Sherry given by Messrs. Feltoe and Sons, of Albemarle-street, W., which was shot for on the 16th July; and Major Burt, of the 1st Warwickshire, was the winner of the Three Dozen Cask "Spécialité" Saumur Champagne.

BADGE OF A MASON.

THE true and only badge of a Mason is a LAMBSKIN, not a piece of linen or muslin, or any other material, even though it be white. It must be a lambskin, and why? Because in all ages the lamb has been deemed an emblem of "innocence;" and in wearing it, the Mason is reminded of that purity of life which he is required to exhibit, and which is an essential prerequisite to his admission into "the Grand Lodge above."

The lambskin, therefore, is a very important Masonic emblem. It is a speaking, impressive, pleading emblem; always uttering its voice and eloquently urging its monitions upon him who wears it as a Mason. It not only pleads for, but demands, "purity of life," and he who will not hear and heed its pleadings, should lay it aside at once.

I confess to an admiration for the lambskin apron, not alone for its symbolic instruction, but for its inherent beauty. Purely white, in size about 14 by 16 inches, with a trimming of heavy sky-blue ribbon about an inch and three-fourths in width,—a Mason cannot wear anything more elegant and becoming, especially at a funeral, or other public Masonic procession. Indeed, I think there should be a prohibitory statute against permitting a Mason, when he appears in public as such, wearing an apron of any other material than the lambskin. And in addition to that, the Grand Lodge should prescribe the material, size, form and finish of a Masonic apron, and require that none other should be worn in public by Master Masons. The General Grand Chapter has described what the apron of a Royal Arch Mason is, and the Grand Encampment of the United States has prescribed the uniform of a Knight Templar, and permits none other to be worn. The symbolism of Ancient Freemasonry defines the material of the apron, or badge, of the Order, and every Grand Lodge should enact a law describing its form, size and finish, and then forbid Master Masons to wear any other in Masonic processions. The exhibition of material, size, style and finish of aprons worn, sometimes, in Masonic processions, is enough to make one shed tears of chagrin, or go off in convulsions of laughter: aprons of all sizes, materials and finish, and, if a novice, who had been told that a lambskin was the only badge of a Mason, were to see such a procession he would certainly discredit the information he had received, and, perhaps, conclude that all the instruction given him might as appropriately be disregarded.

Why the lambskin? It is not only its whiteness that is indicative of unstained purity; but the animal itself is the very personification of innocence. Some years ago, when I was dealing in Masonic clothing in connection with the publication of the Masonic Review, in Cincinnati, I received a letter from a Masonic acquaintance residing in central Pennsylvania. He was a very intelligent physician, as well as an earnest Mason, and one of those stern, honest, old-fashioned Presbyterians. He desired to wear "the badge of a Mason," and was told at his initiation that it was a lambskin. He had written to a dealer in Philadelphia for a Masonic apron, and a very beautiful apron was sent him, made from white satin, with the proper emblem of his rank upon it. He was greatly surprised, and immediately returned it to the manufacturer, with instructions to send him a Masonic apron. The dealer, concluding he would not be caught napping again, made and sent him a beautiful apron of the finest goatskin! This was too much for the stern old doctor, and he sent it back at once. "Why," said he, "the badge of a Mason is a lambskin, because of the purity and innocence of that animal; but you have sent me an apron made from the skin of one of the most repulsive, loathsome and beastly creatures in the land. I will not wear an apron from the back of such a creature; it is not a badge of innocence, but of everything low and sensual and disgusting!" I sent the good man an apron made from a lambskin—plain, white and neat; he was satisfied, and wore it with pride.

If there be anything in symbolism more than a name, why not apply it? If there be only a name, discard the whole system at once as a mockery and false pretence. For a man in mature years, as Master of a Lodge, to gravely inform the Neophyte that the badge a Mason should wear is a lambskin, and give him the reason in its impressive instruction as a symbol, and then invest him with an apron made from cotton or linen, is simply ridiculous. It is a warrant for discarding all other symbolic instruction, and will justify the young brother in neglecting the entire symbolic code. Indeed, is not Masonry suffering from that laxity in the practical exemplification of the instructions our symbols give? We teach one thing and do something else; we are taught to do or not to do thus and so, and promise to obey; and then, by example, we are instructed to regard this pledge as mere idle verbiage!

I once met an old Mason who must needs show me his apron as a curiosity, and it was a curious affair. It was made of heavy, coarse linen, and had once been nearly white. It was three and a half feet in length by two and a half in width, and would nearly cover a small man from his armpits to his ankles. On it was depicted almost every emblem known to Masonry, from those pertaining to the degree of Entered Apprentice up to those belonging to the orders of Christian Knighthood, not omitting the cock! It was a wonderful apron, and seeing I was greatly pleased with it, he presented it to me. I deposited it in the archives of my Lodge—Kilwinning—in Cincinnati, to be preserved for "future ages" to wonder at. The lambskin, brethren, the lambskin, is the badge a Mason should wear.

In conversing with a prominent and experienced Mason recently, on this matter, he referred to the practice of some Lodges where a piece of cotton was substituted for the lambskin as the badge of a Mason, and the use of jewels made of tin or pasteboard; said he, "Such Lodges never amount to anything, and such Masons are rarely an honour to the Craft." Was he not substantially correct?

Perhaps, however, I am pursuing this subject too far; but I wish I could see the teachings and injunctions of the Lodge-room exemplified outside of it, especially in the use of the plain, simple uniform and spotless lambskin as the true and legitimate badge of Masonry, with its eloquent and touching symbolism recognized everywhere and by every mason.—Voice of Masonry.

at the bottom of the resistance. This, however, may well be doubted, and we prefer to think that the resistance is that of a number of individuals banded together against the foreigner. The insurrection in the Rhodope Mountains still continues, in spite of all attempts to quell it. In short, matters in Turkey might go more smoothly than they are going, though, no doubt, the disturbances may be set down as both local and temporary in their character. In other respects the Berlin Treaty is being duly carried out, and without serious difficulty.

No doubt our readers are aware that for some time past the Board of General Purposes has been investigating some very ugly circumstances in connection with one of the elections at the last Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge, an erroneous statement having been made of the result of one of the scrutinies. They are probably aware, likewise, that at a meeting of the Board, specially convened for the purpose, the principal offender, himself a member of the said Board, and a Past Grand Officer—albeit of rank of little or no account—was sentenced to two years' suspension from all his Masonic rights and privileges. In other words, the offender in question will, during that period of time, be reduced to the same level as the cowan or profane. The offence, which was of a heinous character, having been proved, the punishment, which is far from being excessive, has quickly followed. As Horace hath it:—

"Raro antecedentem scelestum
Deseruit pede Pœna claudo.

It may be as well to state that the verdict and sentence were passed by a unanimous vote, so that there cannot possibly be the slightest shadow of a shade of doubt as to the guilt of the accused person. We propose offering a few general remarks on the subject of Masonic offences and punishments next week.

We beg to acknowledge, with fraternal thanks, copy of the report delivered by the Hon. Judge Townshend, LL.D., to the Grand Chapter of the Rose Croix Degree in Ireland, at the Triennial Convocation held on the 19th of June last, at Dublin. We learn from this, and with great pleasure, that the Degree is in a very flourishing condition, and though the number of Chapters is still twelve, as it was at the Convocation in 1875, namely, seven in Dublin and five in the Provinces, still, the number of members has increased from 290 to 340, or at the rate of 13 per annum as compared with 10 per annum during the period from 1872 to 1875. It is equally satisfactory to know that financially likewise the Degree is flourishing, for, although a heavy expenditure was incurred last year for printing and furniture for Grand Chapter, there was, at the beginning of 1878, a handsome sum in hand for current expenses, as well as a reserve fund of £360 in Government Stock.

An oration on the beauties and claims of Freemasonry will be delivered in the Large Hall of the Surrey Masonic Club, on Saturday, 17th August 1878, at 8 p.m. precisely, by Bro. William Darley, P.M. Lodge No. 158, and late Assessor to the Honourable Board of Trade.

SYNOPSIS OF ORATION.—FREEMASONRY—Its Loyalty—Its Veneration for the Deity—Its encouragement of Arts and Sciences—Its moral excellence—Its advancement of civil and religious liberty—Its cementing influence—Its adaptation as a basis for the peace, happiness, and prosperity of all nations—Its crowning influence and claims.

We note from the Keystone that the corner stone of a new Masonic Temple at St. John's, New Brunswick, was laid on the 2nd July, by Grand Master Clinch, with imposing ceremonial. Twelve Lodges and three Chapters took part on the occasion, two Commanderies and five bands being present and acting as an escort. The oration was delivered by Past Grand Master Wedderburn. Both the Commanderies gave banquets, and later in the evening there was a promenade concert, at which some 1,500 persons were present. It will be remembered that the Masonic Temple shared the fate of pretty well the whole of the City of St. John at the recent terrible conflagration.

We learn, from the same source, that the Grand Lodge of New York has in its jurisdiction as many as 78 Lodges, with an aggregate membership of 78,050 brethren. Last year, 2,954 candidates were made Masons, and 1,048 brethren died. Over 5,000 brethren are unaffiliated, owing to the fact of their not having paid up their dues.

We gather from le Monde Maçonnique, which takes its information from El Universo, that a new Lodge has been founded at Cadiz, under the title of the Lodge of Peace. It appears, likewise, that this El Universo is a new journal whose self-imposed mission is "to expound unceasingly the lofty and generous principles of Freemasonry, to propagate instruction in accordance with those principles, and to compel their practical introduction into real life, so that Freemasonry may prove to be an institution which is truly instructive and beneficent." It also considers Freemasonry is an eminently progressive institution, and it is this character which makes it loved and welcomed by all well-disposed people. Le Monde Maçonnique considers that a journal which is animated by such sentiments, and maintains the strictest impartiality, is capable of rendering real service, and wishes it all prosperity in its career. We re-echo the wish.

COMMITTEE MEETING, BOYS' SCHOOL.

THE General Committee met on the 3rd inst., when Bro. H. W. Hunt was elected chairman. There were also present Bros. Hyde Pullen, F. A. Adlard, W. H. Perryman, H. Browse, R. T. Morris, Donald M. Dewar, E. C. Massey, J. W. M. Dosell. After the confirmation of the minutes of the last General Committee, the minutes of the Quarterly General Court and of the House Committee were also read, together with the report of the Audit Committee, and the bills passed by that committee were ordered for payment. A petition on behalf of a son of the late Bro. F. W. Steinam was accepted, and an outfit the value of £5 ordered for a former scholar, W. P. Barrett. The Secretary reported as the result of the late Festival, that all the lists but one had come in, and that the sum so received exceeded £10,400. A vote of thanks to the chairman closed the proceedings.

ROYAL ARCH MASONS OF ENGLAND.

THE Quarterly Convocation was held at Freemasons' Hall on the 7th inst. Present—Comps. Samuel Rawson Z., Capt. Platte H., Capt. Philips J., Col. Clerke P.S.; Rev. C. W. Arnold Assistant S.E., Erasmus Wilson N., H. G. Buss as E., J. L. Thomas Sword Bearer, Robertson D.C. There were also many others present, among whom were Comps. Col. Creaton, Nunn, Long, Rucker, Pullen, Glaisher, Gray, Filer and Holman. The report of the Committee of General Purposes was read, and petitions for five new Chapters were granted, to be attached to Lodges No. 142, 1044, 1066, 1399 and 1533.

READING MASONS.

FROM THE "VOICE OF MASONRY."

ONE of the greatest drawbacks to the Craft is that its members, as a rule, do not read sufficiently; we mean by that, do not study the periodical literature of the day which is devoted to the development of Masonic lore. This is greatly to be deplored, as, at the present period of our history, the diffusion of light is required to a greater extent than it has, perhaps, been for many years, and never before were there so many of the leading minds of the Fraternity, devoting their time, energies and talent to the dissemination of Masonic knowledge. The ignorance displayed by the majority of the Order with regard to the traditions, the history, the jurisprudence and the principles of Freemasonry, is truly lamentable, and the fault lies entirely at our own doors; we initiate, pass and raise a man, give him certain signs and tokens, administer to him certain obligations, tell him to read the Book of the Constitution of the Grand Lodge, and the by-laws of his own Lodge, and then inform him he is a full-fledged Master Mason. What a mockery! The brother is on the very threshold of the Institution, and barely understands its first principles. This is the time to impress upon his mind that our symbolism is a study in itself; that our history has absorbed the attention of the most erudite antiquarians, and is still shrouded in mystery; that our jurisprudence is written, unwritten, general and local; that our traditions are sublime truths elucidated and developed under the shades of fancy and poetry. This should be told to the neophyte; the works of standard Masonic writers should be recommended to him, and he should be advised to at once subscribe for one or more of the leading Masonic journals of the day. If this course were pursued a healthy interest would be excited, and the Mason having discovered there was something more in the Institution than mere ritual, day after day, month after month, and year after year, would become more ardent in his researches, more diligent in his studies, more anxious to become a Master in the Craft.

In former days, when Masonry was forced to hide its head to preserve its vitality, and it was necessary for brethren to meet with the greatest secrecy, in the loneliest places, then it was impossible to disseminate as much light as might have been desired; its mysteries had been handed down through generations by the "living voice," yet, through all those ages and amidst all those drawbacks and persecutions it lived, but now the age of reason and intellectual strength is assuming vast proportions, and as the mind of man develops so does the science of Freemasonry advance, and it can only advance by its members enlightening themselves in all its branches, rites, history, jurisprudence, symbolism, principles and traditions, and thus can only be accomplished by hard, unwearing study—by becoming READING MASONS.

How often have our readers heard the Worshipful Master glibly confer a degree, verbatim, too, at that, in a rapid, monotonous tone, without a word of comment or explanation, without even an emphasis upon a single important point. The candidate wonders, he has advanced a grade, but has he obtained value for his money? No, the ignorance of that official has probably cast cold water upon his preconceived ideas of the Institution. If the Worshipful Master had briefly, even hastily given an outline as to the origin of the degree, and the principles of the Fraternity, or called upon some other member before the evening was over, to discuss some subject in connection with the Institution, then the neophyte would have become interested, he would have at once grasped the thought that there was a hidden something beneath the surface which he could only obtain by study; his mind would have been turned to the advisability, nay, the necessity of searching for more light, by reading those works or periodicals that should be, yet are seldom found in a Masonic Lodge. At all events, the probability is that on the first opportunity he would ask his older brethren where and by what means he could obtain "more light."

It is the want of knowledge, in fact this gross ignorance, that has done so much harm to our Institution; that has driven some of our best men from our portals, and at the present time there is no excuse for it. On all sides, at little expense, can be procured most valuable works on every subject connected with the Craft, written, too, in such easy style that the initiated can understand, though to the profane they may appear a "conglomeration of absurdities," and besides our standard works, we have on this continent especially, weeklies and monthlies devoted to the interests of the Fraternity, in which regularly appear articles on every conceivable Masonic subject, written, as a rule, by brethren whose experience and knowledge are well known throughout the Masonic literary world.

It is really lamentable to contemplate the little interest that thousands and tens of thousands of Masons take in the literature of the Craft. Announce a récherché re-union of Royal Arch Companions, or a street parade of Knights Templars and all is flurry and excitement. Announce, on the other hand, a lecture upon Freemasonry, and the hall will be only half filled. Show, parade, pageantry usurp the place of those higher ambitions that all the symbolism of Masonry so steadily and constantly inculcates. This is not as it should be, and those who really have the welfare of the Craft at heart, should make an almost superhuman effort to check this love for tinsel and glitter, for the pure gold that lies within the reach of every brother. The very cheapness of the Masonic periodical renders it within the reach of every Mason. No Lodge should be permitted to exercise its functions that does not subscribe to one or more of the Masonic journals of the day. It is impossible for a member of the Craft to keep versed on the stirring events of the Masonic world unless he subscribes to, reads and studies a Masonic paper. The best Masonic ritualist is ignorant of our mysteries unless he is a Reading Mason. The assertion may appear bold, but such is the fact. The Reading Mason though he is ignorant of ritual, has a sublime knowledge of the symbolism of the Craft that no mere ritualist can ever possess.

As I before remarked, there is greater reason now than ever that "The Sons of Light," should become "Reading Masons;" when our numbers were limited to hundreds and thousands, forced by bigotry, prejudice and intolerance to meet in hidden places, then the opportunity for studying our mysteries was slight; but with the march of civilization the science of Masonry made greater strides, and as we increased in numbers and spread in every quarter of the globe our system was developed, the Masonic tree sent forth different shoots, which became great and mighty branches, assuming peculiar forms, bringing forth lovely blossoms and sweet fruits, varying in the many countries according to the tastes, ideas and principles of those who trained them. The Freemasonry of the Nineteenth Century, is very different, with its many rites, to the simple symbolism that existed at the translation of Operative to Speculative Masonry in and about the eventful era of 1717. At that time most of the brethren were Entered Apprentices, few were even Fellow Crafts, and fewer still Master Masons, whilst, until the schism of the Grand Lodge of England, the beautiful degree of the Royal Arch was merely a crude appendage, with certain secrets attached, to the third degree. And so Masonry has developed. At one time, aided by the Jacobins, it threatened to become a political organization, and at another, seized upon by the Saints, it would have floated into a fanatical religious society, if it had not been for the stern determination of the Grand Lodge of England (or rather at that period the Grand Lodges of England), to maintain their degrees as the basis and foundation of all others.

But to return to our subject. Our argument is this: That as we increase in numbers, as new Grand Lodges spring up, as our many rites develop, it becomes more imperative upon members of the Craft to read and study. We have withstood the assaults of politicians, laughed at the fiery mutterings and fierce tirades of ignorant branches of the Protestant church, and defied the thunderbolts and anathemas of Rome; but now, we are called upon to defend our principles, our honour, our faith against traitors from within, and it is upon the Reading Masons we rely, brethren who are versed in our traditions, our history and our laws, men who are with us because they devote their lives to our interests; these men can see what a frightful abyss yawns before us, if for a moment we yield to the tongue of the atheistical philosophers of the Grand Orient of France. To crush that movement we must principally rely upon the Masonic press, and the Masonic press must be supported in its efforts to expose this damnable attempt to remove the chief corner-stone of our temple. Such being the case, let Grand Masters and those in authority urge constantly upon the Craft the necessity of reading anything and everything that pertains to Masonry; let Worshipful Masters of Lodges teach neophytes the absolute necessity for studying our standard authors, and reading our principal Masonic publications; let Lodges endeavour everywhere to build up libraries, taking the Grand Secretary of Utah, our friend, R.W. CHRISTOPHER DIEHL, and his young Grand Lodge, as an example of how much can be accomplished in a very short time; let every brother purchase what Masonic books he can afford, and subscribe for one or more Masonic periodicals, then every brother will be able to discuss Masonic questions sensibly and logically, and all the efforts of a Grand Orient of France will be crushed. And that event will occur all the sooner by the brethren reading up the history of the subject and studying the landmarks and principles of our Fraternity.

Again, the Mason that does not read knows little or naught of what occurs beyond his own Grand Lodge, possibly Lodge jurisdiction. His ideas, like his mind, are contracted. By reading he gradually comprehends the cosmopolitan character of the Order, and becomes acquainted with its proceedings throughout all parts of the world. For example, the invasion, last month, by the Grand Lodge of Scotland of a sister jurisdiction, with which she was on terms of alliance (Quebec), is, of itself, a second important event in the Masonic history of 1878. It is, itself, a subject of vast interest to the Craft, as on its settlement rests the question of Grand Lodge sovereignty on this continent. True, American jurisdictions have before been invaded, but not by Grand Lodges working in the Anglo-Saxon tongue. The Masons made in these two Lodges in Montreal (King Solomon and Argyle), hailing under the Grand Lodge of Scotland, are clandestine or they are not. The Masonic press will be the means through which the question will be discussed, and those who read, will, in reality be the ones who will finally decide the same. We merely give this as a sample. Again, we might refer to the formation of the so-called Grand Lodge of Ontario, a body not recognised by any Grand Lodge in the World. The Mason who does not read has probably never heard of this spurious body, he meets one of these so-called brethren and unwittingly admits him to his Lodge; if he had been a Reading Mason he would have been aware that the Grand Lodge of Canada (foolishly so-called), was the Supreme Governing Body for the Province of Ontario, and thus he would not and could not have been the means of admitting a clandestine Mason into his Lodge. We could cite many such examples but space forbids. Every year fresh events of interest occur, and it is only through the Masonic press that their merits or demerits can be discussed.

Much, then, has yet to be accomplished to make the members of the brotherhood Reading Masons. If, however, a commencement once is made, the stone will soon gather rich moss, in which will be imbedded hidden treasures of priceless worth. Our Lodge rooms, our Chapters, our councils, and our asylums would attract the erudite, the philosophic and the learned. We should find that even the Masonry of to-day was in its infancy; we would be astonished at our own ignorance. Brethren of ability and learning, finding that the Craft was interested in dissertations upon subjects connected with the Fraternity, would yet more earnestly labour, and on discovering the precious gems would discourse upon them at our meetings; would publish essays upon them, and thus the mind of the body politic of Freemasonry would develop and expand, would grasp new ideas, would originate mighty thoughts. Our Institution, it is said, is founded upon the purest principles of piety and virtue, but they again are assisted and leaned upon the "science of Freemasonry," and the science of Freemasonry is progressive, liberal and rational in its character, and can only be comprehended by the most profound study and careful reading. Such being the case, how necessary is it to cultivate the mind and encourage the younger members in their efforts to obtain light. The present is the time to do this, and we cannot too strongly urge upon all those who have the Fraternity at heart to put out every effort, to strain every nerve, to harden every muscle, so as to inculcate this desire, this thirst for Masonic Knowledge, which is so essential for the welfare, the progress and the permanence of Freemasonry. Brethren, if you are Reading Masons encourage others to become so, if you are not Reading Masons, and have not discovered the wondrous mysteries of our Craft, seek them by reading and study. The sooner you ally yourselves with the reading portions of the Fraternity the sooner you will appreciate and understand the mysteries of our Order, and delight in that which to you now appears crude, illogical and incomprehensible.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 193.—At the meeting of this Lodge which took place on Wednesday, the 7th inst., at the Railway Tavern, London-street, E.C. The attendance was limited, owing no doubt to the fact that many brethren who are most regular in their visits are away enjoying themselves on their holiday trip. There were, however, sufficient to open the Lodge and proceed to business. Bro. Kennett Harris occupied the chair, Brown S.W., Biddle J.W., Gottheil P.M., J. K. Pitt Sec., Moss J.D., Woodward I.G. The initiation ceremony was rehearsed. Bro. Harris claimed the indulgence of those present, he having been greatly worried on account of a serious fire, which a day or two ago unfortunately occurred in his business premises, Monkwell-street; the insurance not covering his loss by several hundred pounds. Taking this into consideration, we are bound to state the work was performed, certainly not faultlessly, but still with commendable ability. Three of the sections were worked, several of the responses being given by Bro. Secretary Pitt in an unexpectedly fluent manner,—that brother seemingly having become at last alive to the fact that a Mason of several years' standing, and who has taken so warm an interest in the Order, might be expected to possess some knowledge of the ritual and sections, of which, however, hitherto there had been no indications. We trust Bro. Pitt will persevere in his efforts, for he possesses all the qualities calculated to make him an eloquent and intelligent exponent. Bro. Brown, W.M. of the Sincerity, will preside on Wednesday next. Those who are acquainted with this brother's working, both in Craft and Arch, will bear testimony to his abilities; and those who have not that advantage, will be gratified to witness the work done with exceptional skill. Lodge opens at 7 p.m.

Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, No. 860. — At the present time many of our Lodges of instruction are closed; still there is a large section of our brethren who, no matter whether it be summer or winter, devote one or more nights of each week to acquiring Masonic instruction. As we have time after time said, there are at the Dalhousie several competent brethren who are always ready to impart to the tyro the Masonic knowledge they themselves have acquired. Hence, whenever we visit this Lodge of Instruction we invariably find a fair attendance of members of the Craft. On Tuesday, 6th of August, at Bro. Smyth's, Sisters' Tavern, Pownall-road, Dalston. Bros. J. Lorkin W.M., Forss S.W., Slifter J.W., Dallas Sec., Smyth Treas., Hunt S.D., Gilham J.D., Polak I.G., Wallington Preceptor. Bros. Turquand, Verry, &c. Lodge was opened and minutes read and confirmed. The ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Christian candidate. The Lodge was opened up, and the ceremony of passing was rehearsed, Bro. Christian still acting as candidate. Bro. Forss was elected W.M. for next Tuesday.

At a meeting of the Board of General Purposes, held at the Masonic Temple, Plymouth, on the evening of 26th July, the accounts were duly audited. Several applications for relief had been received, but not being submitted in accordance with the regulations, could not be accepted. They had to be deferred. The Board of General Purposes recommended that none of the money at present in hand should be voted by that meeting. The Treasurer, W. Bro. R. B. "MEMORY AND RAPID WRITING."—Professor Stokes, so long and honourably connected with the Polytechnic Institution, as lecturer on, and teacher of the above valuable sciences, is now giving a course of lectures, which, we are pleased to find, seem highly appreciated, both by the general audience as well as by his many pupils, who make rapid progress under his system; in fact, nothing could be more plain than the means suggested. Mr. Stokes is the author of some educational works of exceptional merit.

STEWARDS FOR OUR CHARITIES.

THE important question of providing for the ever increasing demands of our Charities is one which causes considerable anxiety to many of the foremost supporters of our Institutions, and we feel no apology is needed from us for again referring to the subject, or for supplementing previous articles analysing the results of the Stewards' labours with others which will point out how those results are obtained, and the best means for their augmentation. Under the present constitution of the Charities the Craft stands committed to an outlay of say £35,000 per annum, and the task of raising this large amount, in face of any eventualities which may arise, is no inconsiderable undertaking. That opinions as to the means to be adopted for the realisation of the desired object are divided is evident from the varied expressions which have been made during the past three months. The most recent, perhaps, is that of our Deputy Grand Master. Lord Skelmersdale, at the Festival of the Mark Benevolent Fund, held only a few weeks since, stated that, in his opinion, Charity dinners were a mistake, and that the money spent on them would be of much more use in the coffers of the Charities themselves. The opposite view was at once defended by Bro. Binckes, the Secretary of the Boys' School, whose experience renders his words of great weight. Again, when the qualifications required of a Secretary for our Girls' School were being discussed, some held that personal canvass of the Lodges by the Secretary was absolutely necessary, others in direct opposition laid it down that the Secretary should be in attendance at the office of the School to receive the money which, according to their idea, was to come in of its own accord, and to answer questions. A very good theory, we admit, but one which a brief study of the Stewards' lists of our Charities will, we think, soon upset. The idea of these advocates appears to be that every Mason throughout the country knows, or should know, the history and requirements of our Institutions. We would advise those who have such ideas to make a tour of our Lodges, Metropolitan or Provincial, they would soon find that not only is all mention of the central Charities omitted at the majority of the meetings, but in not a few cases the bulk of the members know nothing whatever of the existence of the Institutions, much less think of according them any support. While such is the case, we hold that it is necessary for our Institutions to have Secretaries who consider it their duty to travel, far and wide, to make known the work which is being done, and the amount yearly required to keep the Charities in a state of efficiency. Their prime effort is to obtain the names of brethren willing to act as Stewards, and in furtherance of this object we maintain that personal canvass is the main element for success.

On reference to the last lists of our three Institutions, which, of course, do not comprise the Festivals of the present year, we find that among the brethren who appear under letters A and B in the London Lists (which may be taken as fairly representing the whole alphabet), omitting those whose addresses are unknown, 202 have served the office of Steward, the number of Stewardships represented being 384, viz., 136 for the Benevolent Institution, 134 for the Girls, and 114 for the Boys' School, or nineteen Stewardships among ten brethren—nearly two to each Steward. This proportion, however, is not carried out in individual cases. Of the 202 Stewards, 112, or considerably over half the number, have only acted once (45 for the Benevolent, 39 for the Girls, and 28 for the Boys), while of the remaining 90, nearly one-half have acted on two occasions only, the figures being 21 for the Girls' and Boys' Schools jointly, 14 for the Girls' School and the Benevolent Institution, six for the Benevolent and the Boys' School, one Steward twice for the Girls, and one twice for the Benevolent. Thus we find that 155 out of the 202 Stewards have not completed what we consider the allotted duty of every energetic Mason, namely, that he should act as a Steward for each of the three Institutions in turn. To this number may be added eight others who, for some reason or other, have not patronised all three Charities, though six of them have served the office of Steward three times, and the other two four times each. We thus have 39 Stewards to account for, and of this number 23 have acted once on behalf of each of the three Institutions. The remaining sixteen total 91 Stewardships among them, five having acted four times each, four five times each, three six times each, one seven times, two eight times each, and one ten times. As we have stated above, these figures do not include the Festivals of this year, but the addition of those makes very little difference in the proportions. Of the 55 Stewards of the 1878 Festivals who should be included, 25 appear in previous lists, and of this number eight have acted once before, four twice, seven thrice, one each four, five, seven and eight times, and two six times each, while three served at two, and one at all three of the 1878 Festivals. Thus 1878 gives an addition of 26 to the number of "single" Stewards, and makes the totals on all accounts under letters A and B 439 Stewardships, represented by 230 Stewards (the Girls' School being first, with 152 representations, followed closely by the Benevolent Institution which shows 151, thus leaving the Boys' School with 136). Of the 230 Stewards, 130 have served once only, 49 twice, and 26 on three occasions, the remaining 25 have acted four or more times each, registering among them 133 Stewardships.

Having so far devoted ourselves to a section only of the Charity Stewards, we have given the exact figures in each case, but it will be necessary, in order to make our remarks complete, that we should include the whole body of Stewards, and we must now work on the above summary as a fair average of the whole. For this purpose we have totalled the number of Stewardships as given in the last lists of subscribers of the three Institutions, with the following results:—Girls 1,968, Boys 1,800, Benevolent 1,671; to these figures must be added the Stewardships of 1878, viz.: 211, 237 and 221 respectively; thus we have as the total number of Stewardships on record 2,179 for the Girls' School, 2,037 for the Boys' School, and 1,892 for the Benevolent Institution, together 6,108. These figures, on the above basis, would give 3,200 Stewards as the number at present on the books of the Charities, and of these 1,809 may be reckoned as having served once only, 682 on two, and 362 on three occasions each, while the remaining 347 have acted more than three times each. It would thus seem that it is not so difficult to enlist the support of a brother for a first Stewardship as it is to induce him to continue to advocate the claims of the Charities, and it therefore appears that the main point to decide is, not so much the best means of obtaining new Stewards, as how to induce those who have once acted to continue their exertions. We think we are within the mark when we say that 9 out of every 10 brethren who decide to act as Stewards, start with the intention of working on behalf of the three Institutions, and, therefore, that it is certain there is some reason why considerably over half the number stop after acting once. What this retarding influence is, it is difficult to decide, but we think it is a question which might receive the attention of those brethren who are ever ready to advance the interests of our Charities.

MASONRY A UNIVERSAL RELIGION.

AN ORATION DELIVERED BEFORE THE GRAND LODGE OF IOWA OF A. F. AND A. M., CEDAR RAPIDS, 6TH JUNE 1878.

BY L. D. LEWELLING.

MY GOOD FRIENDS AND BRETHREN.—There have been a good many mistakes made in this world. There are a good many lawyers who ought to have been cobblers. There are some cobblers who might have been doctors; and some doctors who ought to have been gravediggers for the rest of the profession. There are some men who are "jack of all trades," and some jacks who have no trade at all; and still it is true that every jack and every giant is striving, each in his own way, and by the easiest stepping stones, to better his condition.

In religion, as in secular pursuits, there ever remains an ideal. A spirit goes out from man like the twining tendril from the vine, reaching to take hold upon something better and higher. It is an instinct that cannot be extinguished; it is the yearning of the race for a better way. There is a happy condition just beyond, and to attain it our lives are fashioned to correspond with this ideal, which becomes our pattern, our example of human life and conduct, held above and beyond, but ever before us, like the pillar of fire. This ideal, this imaginary or, real person or thing, or god, or demi-god, is to individuals and to nations the standard of human actions—the measure of right and wrong. However obscure it may have become—however much enshrouded in mysticism—it still remains the test of life, to which all men bring their bundles of deeds and thoughts and aspirations, to determine whether they be holy or unholy. The ideal of the Christian world is the perfect man, Christ Jesus. The ideal of Judaism is the Saviour to come, but he is to appear with more regal attributes than those possessed by Him of Nazareth. The ideal of the Arab is Mohammed, the wandering prophet of the desert. The ideal of the Chinaman is Confucius, the moral philosopher. The ideal of the Hindoo is Bramah, the creator, succeeded and overshadowed by Buddha, or Gautama, "the enlightened." In all these ideals, in all the moral philosophies of the world, there are real affinities, and the end of each is to attain human happiness.

Men seek the same city by different roads, as all the religions of the world are stretching toward some spiritual aim. One road may be devious and winding, another more direct; here they diverge, and there converge. One seeks salvation through the ritual of the church; another translates only the language of nature into the voice of God; and thus all cannot bow to the same shrine. No one religion can satisfy the wants of all in man's present state, and hence the necessity for the toleration of all.

This principle of toleration is the Masonic religion; it is the grand principle of human kinship.

Men differ in views, in opinions, and in judgment. The affections of men are not the same; the test of conscience is not the same with all men. The food delicacies of one age or place are loathed in another. I used to hear of people eating frogs and turtles, but I had no appetite for such delicacies. The thought of eating a clammy frog, or a wriggling, crawling turtle, made the cold chills come spinning up my back in the middle of July. But since I have grown older, and seen swine fattened in the filth of the sty for man's food, and since, like the rest of erring mortals, I have eaten of frog and hog and turtle, I confess I cannot find it in my heart to condemn a Frenchman for eating horse, or a Fejee's relish for baked Englishman. I suppose there is no disputing about tastes. The illustrious Fremont dined with the Indians on roasted puppy, and the Esquimaux breakfasts on a pint of oil.

Adroit stealing was an honour to a Spartan youth, while larceny in any form is crime in ours. The gods of one nation are the devils of their neighbours, and the religion of one sect is the blasphemy of another. Each with zealous bigotry contends that he alone is right, and, thus contending, the stronger race, or nation, or party, or sect, has each in turn borne all before it like an avalanche, and, like a ship tacking before the gale, men have rushed to each extreme, and made slow progress.

The machinery of social life, of religion, of politics, has been cumbersome and erroneous, but, as a forked stick was once called a plow, and was better than no plow, and as a goat-skin bag was called a churn or a water pitcher, and was better than no pitcher, so the religions of early times were better than no religion. Men used to go to a dead stick, a stone, a cow, or a crocodile, and in the intensity of their superstition imagine that it was a god, and fall down and worship it. Men used to take a great ugly crocodile into their best room, on a rich carpet, and feed and pet it like a child, and then crouch before it in the humble attitude of prayer. Men used to fall on their knees before a good-natured family cow, and pray into her great vacant eyes, while she quietly chewed her cud, for health, and wealth, and happiness, and the destruction of their enemies. Now all this seems very ridiculous, and it was; but, after all, it was better than no religion, and the qualities or attributes with which the cow and the crocodile were endowed, were doubtless superior to those really possessed by man in his then primitive state.

Worship is better than no worship, and a fetish is better than no God, because men become like what they worship, in character and conduct; veneration in man has been the salt of his race, because it has ever kept before him some worshipful creature, endowed with real or imagined attributes better than his own. Whatever man may have worshipped in the infancy of his race, however cumbersome his religious machinery, it was relatively progressive, and each succeeding religion was better than its predecessor. But men had no idea of toleration then, and as one displaced another, strife was inevitable.

Each patriarchal family, each clan, each church, was encased like a great egg, in a thick crust of bigotry. The world was full of great eggs and there was room for each and for its growth and natural decay; but each chicken claimed the exclusive right to pip. Then came strife. It took a long while for the chickens in each egg to learn that their neighbours had rights and privileges. The Roman hierarchy denies it still, but Masons have an opinion, in which others, also, are agreed, that the Roman hierarchy is a bad egg.

It took a long time for the race to learn that men have different temperaments, that they are influenced in religion, as in politics, by education and surroundings. The old-time vendor of religious isms measured his creed and his convert by the same iron bedstead; great souls were compressed to the measure of a meaner life, until, like the Hellespont, they burst their unnatural fetters in obedience to a natural law. Then men's creeds began to widen like circling wavelets; they are widening still, and, to-day, I pray that nothing may stay their course, until they have burst to atoms the shell of every intolerant egg.

When I was a boy I thought I should like to be a minister; my relatives thought I ought to be a minister, and it may be I had a ministerial air or dignity. It was pretty nearly settled that I should enter upon that responsible labour; but somehow I began to feel myself trammelled by the religious machinery of that day. My people were Friends, and the Friends had their notions about theology, and the Baptists had theirs, and the Methodists and Presbyterians, and all; and the Catholics had theirs. Then I began to read the history of these different religions, and when I read of the strife and the discord among the churches and these men who worshipped the same God, I wondered if these all could be religions of the Prince of Peace. I read of a million of poor Waldenses who perished in France for religion's sake—I read that the Duke of Alva put to death, in the Netherlands, nine hundred thousand men, women, and children in less than thirty years—I read that the body of a venerable minister of Christ's gospel, after it had rested in peace for more than forty years, was torn from the grave and burned for heresy—I read that in our own country, the boasted land of liberty, innocent Quaker women were thrust from their families, and hurried away to loathsome prisons, the gallows, and the stocks. I saw, also, individual church differences at home—and when I read and saw all these things, I sat down and wondered, if in all the wealth and culture and intellect of this goodly world, there was not some knowledge of a divine spirit which should unite all nations, tongues, and people in a common brotherhood.

In the bonds of Masonic charity I have found what I sought; and now I say to you, that if all the bungling machinery of the fraternity shall be destroyed, if the secret words and signs shall be brought to the light of the world, I believe the divine principles of Masonic fraternity will still live in the broad light and charity of a better era, as the immortal spirit of man, freed from the chrysalis of earth, shall become more heavenly.

We are told that Masonry is no religion. I deny it. We have too long taught that Masonry is no religion. No wonder we have sometimes failed to keep the Craft in due bounds, when they are told that the sublimest principles of Masonry are but the doctrines of an insurance company.

Whether there is religion in Masonry, let our illustrious brother* answer, who, years ago, put on record his experience and his noble testimony by saying, "I am not ashamed, my companions, here to confess, that I seek daily to live the life becoming a follower of Him who, while on earth, went about doing good; and I glory that this heavenly light was first revealed to my darkened vision through the solemn and sublime mysteries of our beloved Order."

But the religion of Masonry is not sectarian—the religion of Masonry is not an exclusive religion. Masonry says to men: we are all members of the human family—we are full of faults; therefore, let us be full of charity—let us be brethren still. Upon this tenet I stand to-day and say to every man, you are my brother. There is a great spirit who is our common Father. This, then, should be my creed—let me write it before you, brethren, here: "THE BROTHERHOOD OF MAN."

Under this formula, subaltern creeds might exist, contrary opinions might arise, individual differences might array themselves against each other; but over all, as the clear sky bends over the restless billows, unaltered and unshaken, would remain the proclamation of our brotherhood—a universal brotherhood, a universal religion; a great church of charity, which admits the test of conscience, and interferes with no man's religious duty or convictions.

"What is truth?" asked a great philosopher, centuries ago, and every man proposes his own ideal as an answer.

Three boys had been to the show and seen the elephant. John said it was white as snow and crooked like a scythe, but William contended it was the colour of dirt and rolled up like a window curtain, while Samuel emphasised his contempt for both, and declared that it looked more like a black snake or a Bologna sausage; when it transpired that they were talking, respectively, of the tusk, the trunk, and the tail.

A great castle once stood in the midst of a wilderness, alone. In the remembrance of the race no man had trodden its portals; but tradition, somehow, no man could tell how, whispered of its existence. People are curious mortals, and three great kings each sent a vassal to inspect the castle and return. One went by night, when there was no moon; the castle loomed up like a great black monster against the sky; the owl screeched, and the whippoorwill sang, and the man trembled and returned. One went and came by a circuitous route, and from a distant eminence saw only the bleak walls, the high turrets, and stern embrasures. The third was admitted to the court, and found himself surrounded by friends; he was offered tempting viands from delicate hands—he rested on luxurious couches—he ascended into the watch tower and beheld beautiful gardens of flowers, with mossy banked streams winding through; he was enchanted, and returned to tell a story disputed by the first, and the third contradicted both. The honour of three great kingdoms was at stake, and three great kings engaged in war; each soon to learn that the owl, and the whipporwill, and the darkness, belonged to the forest and the night, not to the castle—that a distant and exterior view reflects no beauty from within, but that all these things go to make up the magnificence of a sylvan castle. The exterior views were half views, and so the truths of Buddhism and Confucianism may be half truths, while the owls and the darkness may be excrescences of Christianity.

. Truth is absolute, whether found in the creed of the Jew or the Greek, the Christian or the barbarian. But truth in creeds is too often like the traditional needle in the hay stack; it is the mustard seed of truth enveloped in a great bundle of error. Creeds and dogmas are not the essentials of religion; creeds engender strife.

"One thinks on Calvin heaven's own blessings fell,
Another deems him instrument of hell:
If Calvin feels heaven's blessings or its rod,
This cries there is, and that there is no God;
What shocks one part will edify the rest.
Nor with one system can they all be blessed,
The very best will variously incline,
And what rewards your virtue punish mine."

Who is to determine which see clearly, and which darkly?

Brothers and sisters do not always agree in the minor details of family affairs; how, then, expect all men to conform to a single standard?

Though one should cast out devils in the name of Beelzebub, he is not against us, and, therefore, for us. If my brother cannot accept my opinion for his own, all must agree that I have no right to compel him to do so.

It is this principle of toleration which is the great Boaz of Masonry, and as brothers disagree and are brothers still, so I conceive that we who profess the Christian religion sacrifice no title of our holy faith when we clasp hands with all nations and peoples in the great, grand brotherhood which springs from human charity.

Masonry is so noble a principle, so grand, so elevated, that it overrides all creeds and sects, and embraces all who acknowledge the brotherhood of man, and the fatherhood of God.

The fondest dream of my boyhood days, was that I should live to establish a church whose creed should be no creed, whose foundation principles should be born of a charity so broad, that not only the churches, but the citizens of every state, and the peoples of every nation under the blue dome of this earth temple, should meet upon common ground in unity and concord. It was an idle fancy, and yet, as the distinctive colours of the rainbow blended in one become the purest white, so may the creeds of earth, though distinctive still, be blended in the bonds of charity.

The secret of my first love for the institution of Masonry was its enlightened toleration of opposite opinions. There is no exact standard or measurement of human life and conduct; who, then, shall have the audacity to erect a single standard and proclaim it the only true way?

"What would happen, do you suppose,
If the mignonette should say to the rose:
The pride of roses I hate to see;
Why don't you keep near the ground like me?

What if the rose should say to the phlox,
My form and colour are orthodox;
To please your Maker, you've got to be Precisely, in all respects, like me?

What if a grape should say to a pear,
What are you flaunting about up there;
Beware of swinging alone and free,
You ought to cling to a trellis like me?

What if a swan should say to a crow,
You belong to a race of so and so;
It's a deadly sin for you to be free,
Your only hope is in serving me?

What if a goose should teach a wren,
Or an eagle try to follow a hen?
What if the monkeys should all agree
That there ought to be uniformity?

What if a man should say to another,
Differ with me and you're not my brother;
I have the truth, as the oracles tell,
Go with me, or you'll go to hell?"

I believe in the religion and dogma of Christianity; and, like my brother here, I am not ashamed to confess its illustrious and divine Founder as my ideal and my hope. But when a man comes to me and says, "See here! you're a miserable Quaker dog! you can't sing the doxology! and I'm going to take a little of that Quaker spirit out of you!" I ask you, candidly, if you would not think the man was a little over-zealous for his ology.

What profound logic the bigots of every age have had with which to support their positions. Truth is absolute—the opposite of truth is error. We teach the truth; therefore, you are in error.

It is all very well till you get to the third premise, and then I lose my patience. If I owe a man one hundred dollars, and pay him fifty, I may say I have paid him; I tell no lie, but I leave you to infer a falsehood. And when any man or church says, "I teach the truth, you do not teach what I teach; therefore, you are in error," the first premise is a half-truth, and the conclusion a lie.

And when any church or pontiff says, "I am infallible, I cannot err, I speak and command in truth, all else is falsehood," he clamours for the life-blood of liberty; and why? because he proclaims his opinions as your master and mine—because he puts an embargo on free thought—because he may take your wealth and mine, or destroy your life and mine, if only it is done in the name of religion. Religion, forsooth! a theocracy of the devil! Satan clothed as an angel of light! a wolf in sheep's clothing, seeking whom he may devour?

I am not ignorant of the power which I oppose, nor of its source. I am aware that the blasphemous assumption of papal infallibility is supported by oath, bound bishops, priests, and Jesuits, and that through their influence the edicts and decrees of the imbecile charlatan of Rome would, if possible, become the supreme rule for human conduct. Kings would be deposed, princes murdered, governments subverted and destroyed, adultery sanctioned, treason encouraged, and God blasphemed, to satisfy the selfish greed of this vampirical excrescence which fattens upon the blood and treasure of the human race.

I read somewhere, recently, of a hideous monstrosity, a man whose tongue was a snake's head; when the man slept the snake lay quiet within, but his breathing was a low and ominous hiss, and when he awoke and tried to speak the monster thrust itself out, hissing and spitting venom. And when I read I transferred the application of the legend to the church of Rome in its relations to the institution of Freemasonry. "They have sharpened their teeth like a serpent; adder's poison is under their lips."

I have no patience with any man's religion which assails the religion of another. There is much truth in the teachings of Romanism—there is truth in Buddhism and Confucianism; and there probably never was an ism which had only error for its foundation. But no religion has a right to say to another, in terms of reproach, "Stand aside, I am holier than thou." And the religion of our Jesus is false if is be not a religion of love.

I tell you it is charity that men need in this world—Masonic charity, which admits the test of conscience—and then the discords of life would become the harmony of the world.

The hardest lesson to learn is that of toleration of faiths more perfect or imperfect than our own. The Masonic philosophy is—

"Intolerance to none.
Whatever form the pious rite may bear,
Not even the poor pagan's homage to the sun
Would I scorn, lest even there
I spurned some element of Christian prayer."

Throughout the life of the world, the religions of the world have failed to satisfy the craving instincts of humanity. In the fanatical blunders of men after a more perfect system, they have over-ridden the correlative and benevolent instincts of the race, and in the end have given us too much of the isms of men, which have sometimes proved to be only fair apples of ashes. I borrow a thought in saying, "What a man wants is a religion in which all the systems of humanity may meet as in a field of the cloth of gold, to adorn it with their piety, their mysticisms, their mythology, their subtlety of thought, their splendour of ceremonial, their adaptability of progress, their elasticity of organisation, and meeting may exhaust their resources in the building of a common temple for the common good."

This is the grand philosophy of Freemasonry, which rises above words, and grips, and signs, and makes the institution worthy the patronage of the great and good.

The history of the human race has been a history of blunders and excesses—a history of a want of charity among men; but it is also a history of progress. We may mourn the processes through which we have passed, yet we can but observe that God has turned all to good account; He has builded better than man knew, and made the wrath of man to praise Him; and why not?

"If plagues and earthquakes break not heaven's design,"

Why should the violent clashing of interests and opinions among men? The blessings God sends upon men are sometimes the core of a great trouble; what is a great mishap to a single man may be a greater blessing to millions left behind.

"The spears which rushed through Arnold's heart"

Were thus made defenceless against the surging wave of liberty. The flood which drowns the brood of fledglings, discovers the worm to the mother. The shower which quickens the verdure of my pastures destroys my neighbour's grain. In the same manner the angel which bears away my darling child may have foreseen her bereft of home and friends; the victim of want and sorrow, and in mercy plucked the opening rose and carried it as a garland to the brow of the All-Father.

A mother sat over her darling boy and held the quickened pulse, bathed the parched lips and feverish brow, and struggled with the messenger from the spirit world. It was not in her heart to say, "Thy will be done," but only this, "I cannot let him go." Death fled without his prize, but left behind a muttering speech and idiotic face. The evils of the unseen were close at hand, the scylla of death was passed, but the charybdis of distorted life appeared instead.

Men cannot perceive the relation of things. From the height of heaven God overlooks the landscape of earth, and what to man is hideous deformity, is to him but an excrescence in the development of the race. A man from a mountain top views the landscape; it is a vivid picture of beauty and harmony, but he knows that in the valley are gnarled and deaden trunks, scraggy under-brush, and stagnant pools.

The ignorance and blunders of the child are the anxiety of the mother. She notes with pleasure its development, and observes that its most painful experience, its falls, its bumps, its bruises, become its best and lasting lessons. The discipline of pain is the angel of progress.

THE FOUR OLD LODGES.

Bro. R. F. Gould.

§ 22.

I. The present status of the surviving "Old Lodges" having now to be considered, a retrospect of the Legislation of the Craft, so far as it bears upon the compact of 1721 becomes essential.(1)

It will be convenient, however, in the first instance, to examine into the power of amendment actually possessed by the Grand Lodge, together with that which it assumed the right of exercising. For this purpose, a comparison between Article XXXIX. of the Old and the New Regulations respectively, as shown in the Constitution Book for 1738, will be found useful.

The term "Old" Regulations, was used to denote the rules of the Society as published in 1723, whilst the expression "New" Regulations was applied to the various alterations that were subsequently made: these ("Old" and "New") are shown in parallel columns in the Constitutions 1738, from which the following extract is given.

Old Regulations.	New Regulations.
XXXIX.—Every annual G. Lodge has an inherent Power and Authority to make New Regulations, or to alter These for the real Benefit of this Antient Fraternity, provided always that the Old Land Marks be carefully preserved, and that such New Regulations and Alterations be proposed and agreed to at the 3rd Quarterly Communication preceding the Annual Grand Feast; and that they be offer'd to the Perusal of all the Brethren before Dinner in writing even of the Youngest Enter'd Prentice; the Approbation and Consent of the Majority of all the Brethren present being absolutely necessary to make the same Binding and Obligatory; which must therefore after Dinner, and after the New G. Master is install'd, be Solemnly desir'd; as it was desir'd and obtain'd for these Old Regulations, when proposed by the G. Lodge to about 150 Brethren at Stationers Hall or St. John Baptist's Day 1721.	XXXIX.—On 24th June 1723, at the Feast, the G. Lodge before Dinner made this Resolution; that it is not in the Power of any Man or Body of Men to make any Alteration or Innovation in the Body of Masonry, without the consent first obtain'd of the G. Lodge. And on 25 Nov. 1723, the G. Lodge in Ample Form resolved, that any G. Lodge duly met has a Power to amend or explain any of the printed Regulations in the Book of Constitutions; while they break not in upon the Antient Rules of the Fraternity. But that no Alterations shall be made in this printed Book of Constitutions without leave of the G. Lodge. Accordingly All the Alterations or New Regulations above written are only for amending or explaining the Old Regulations for the Good of Masonry, without breaking in upon the Antient Rules of the Fraternity, Still preserving the Old Land Marks; and were made at Several Times, as Occasion offer'd, by the Grand Lodge; who have an inherent Power of Amending what may be thought inconvenient, and ample Authority of making New Regulations for the Good of Masonry, without the consent of all the Brethren at the Grand Annual Feast; which has not been disputed since the said 24th June 1823, for the Members of the G. Lodge are truly the Representatives of All the Fraternity, according to Old Regulation X.
The end of the Old Regulations.

II. It should be recollected, that virtually the contract of 1721 was tripartite, the parties thereto being,

1. The Four old Lodges.

2. The Sixteen new Lodges constituted between 1717 and 1721.

3. The Masons of London and Westminster.

From which it follows, as an obvious corollary, that the TRIPLE sanction was essential to any variation of its terms.

"The Constitutions of 1723," says Findel, (2) "have ever since been regarded as the legal foundation, in fact, of the Fraternity of Freemasons under the form it should retain in the future.

"That the laws and regulations therein contained were really those which were found in the ancient documents, and in use up to that period, the official character of the Book of Constitutions itself, as well as the repeated assurances of Anderson and Desaguliers, that everything was retained that was really ancient and authentic in the old Constitutions, is a sufficient security on the one hand; and on the other hand the full and complete investigation of Kloss, who compared them with the old Constitutions themselves, has established it beyond doubt."

III. A power of subsequent amendment was vested in the Grand Lodge, subject to certain well-defined conditions:—

1. It could be exercised at the Third Quarterly Communication, only, preceding the Annual Feast.

2. The old landmarks were not to be disturbed.

3. Every proposed alteration was to be submitted in writing to all the brethren, including the youngest Enter'd Prentice.

It will be shown, however, that the Grand Lodge soon proceeded to act, as though its power of amendment was without limitation, and that it possessed ample authority to change, one by one, or altogether, every feature of the Constitution.

IV.—Composition of Grand Lodge.—The Grand Lodge, by the Old Constitutions, could consist only of the Masters and Wardens (3) of regular Lodges, with the Grand Master and his Wardens at their head (4): and it had been customary even for these officers, at their annual election, and on other particular occasions, to withdraw, and leave the Masters and Wardens of the Lodges to consult together, that no undue influence might warp their opinion. (5) The first innovation upon the usages of the Society, occurred December 27th, 1720, when the office of Deputy Grand Master was established, and the Grand Master was empowered to appoint that officer, together with the two Wardens. The privilege of voting in Grand Lodge was a few years afterwards extended to Past Grand Masters (1724), Past Deputies (1726), and Past Grand Wardens (1727); (6) and was styled by Preston "a peculiar favour."

The Treasurer and Secretary were gradually admitted to full membership, it not having been settled till 1753, that the Treasurer "was a Grand Lodge officer, by vertue of his office, and as such to be elected from amongst the brethren who had served the Stewardship."(7)

Eventually, however, the privilege of voting in Grand Lodge was extended to all Grand Officers, present and past. By old Regulation XIV. in the absence of the Grand Master and his Deputy, the right of presiding in Grand Lodge was vested "in the Master of a Lodge, who should be the longest a Freemason," providing there was no one present who had been Grand or Deputy Grand Master, but before 1738 this privilege was transferred to actual or Past Grand Wardens.

26th Nov. 1728, N.R. (New Regulation) XII. If any Officer (Master or Wardens) cannot attend, he may send a Brother of that Lodge (but not a mere Enter'd Prentice) with his jewel to supply his Room, and support the honour of his Lodge.(8)

It has been well observed, that in agreeing to the old Regulations, the single (private or original) Lodges, had to sacrifice some of their former independence, which signified the less, as at first the Grand Lodge was composed entirely of representatives from the Lodges.(9)

V.—Committee of Charity.—On 13th December 1733, the following regulation was made (10):—

1. "That considering the usual business of a Quarterly Communication was too much for one time; whatever business cannot be despatched here, shall be referred to the Committee of Charity, and their opinion reported to the next Grand Lodge.

That all questions debated at the said Committee, shall be decided by a majority of those present."

In consequence of this regulation, the Committee of Charity was considered as immediately dependent on the Grand Lodge; and the minutes of their proceedings were regularly read and confirmed at the Quarterly Communications.

2. The Grand Lodge, (1) thus, to a certain extent, voluntarily delivered over to this Committee the residue of that independence which had been left to it, in the passing of resolutions. This innovation, viz., the extension of the Committee for the administration of the Charity Fund, into a meeting of Master Masons, on whom power was conferred to make arrangements of the greatest importance, and to prepare new resolutions (2), not only virtually annulled the authority vested in the Grand Lodge, but likewise greatly endangered the equality of the brethren in the different Lodges.

VI. — PRIVILEGES OF THE GRAND STEWARDS. — 1. In the Grand Mastership of Lord Weymouth, the Stewards' Lodge was established (1735), and with its formation commenced the bestowal of those extraordinary privileges, which produced so widely spread a feeling of dissatisfaction among the Craft, and was, according to some high authorities, one of the chief causes of the great schism.

The twelve Stewards of the year (3) had to attend the Grand Lodge in their proper clothing and jewels, to pay at the rate of four Lodges towards the expense of the Communication, and (at first) "were not allowed to vote, nor even to speak, except when desired, or else of what related to the ensuing feast only."

These privileges, however, were rapidly extended, it was soon passed, "that each of the twelve should vote in Grand Lodge (4)

Also to encourage gentlemen to serve the office (of Steward) it was agreed that all Grand Officers, the Grand Master excepted, should be elected out of that body.(5)

On the 7th February 1770 it was passed in Grand Lodge: "As the right of the members of the Stewards' Lodge in general to attend the Committee of Charity appears doubtful, no mention of such right being made in the laws of the Society, the Grand Lodge are of opinion, that they have no general right to attend; but it is hereby resolved, that the Stewards' Lodge be allowed the privilege of sending a number of brethren, equal to any other four Lodges, to every future Committee of Charity, and that, as the Master of each private Lodge only has a right to attend, to make a proper distinction between the Stewards' Lodge and the other Lodges, that the Master and three other members of that Lodge be permitted to attend at every succeeding Committee on the behalf of the said Lodge." This resolution, however, was declared not to be intended to deprive any Lodge which had been previously constituted of its regular rank and precedence. (6)

Bro. Findel thus expresses himself: (7)

"The newly created Stewards' Lodge, which was permitted to send a deputation of twelve members to the Grand Lodge, having the privilege of voting as individuals, and wearing distinctive aprons and ribands, as it was resolved that in future all the Grand Officers should be elected out of that body. The office of Steward, which was a very expensive one, became by this means associated with favouritism, in which rank and wealth had the preference, in total opposition to the liberal and equalising spirit of Masonry. The Grand Lodge, says Kloss, first introduced into Masonry that axiom, so abundantly practiced in the so-called higher degrees, that the more largely a brother contributes, the greater his weight in the Lodge. This unjust preference shown to the Stewards excited loud but righteous indignation among the Brethren, and such a disturbance ensued that Ward had to get up and make a speech calling for "decency" and "moderation."

The fortunes of the Stewards' Lodge culminated on 18th April 1792, when it was put over the heads of its Masonic parents, and placed at the head of the list without a number. (8)

VII.—The preceding paragraphs (I.—VI.) will have amply illustrated the great abuses which had found their way into our ancient Society. The numerous new regulations, which were introduced, caused dissatisfaction, as the rights of individual Lodges were more and more encroached upon, and the Grand Lodge was made gradually to assume the character of an independent and arbitary power.

§ 23.—The disturbance of the "Ancient Land Marks," as recorded in the previous section, or in other words, the repeated innovations upon the original constitutions, gradually effaced from the old Lodges all, or nearly all, their distinctive features of constitution, and in the result materially contributed to the great Schism of 1739-1813, which was only healed at the cost of their permanent displacement from the Ancient precedency.

§ 24.—I. The causes of the great schism of the last century are foreign to the scope of this article, except so far as they can reasonably be identified with the "Innovations" carried out by the Grand Lodge, which, no doubt, in the judgment of many worthy brethren, were rapidly effacing every vestige of the "Antient Landmarks." That the abuses, the leading features of which only have been outlined in § 22, produced great discontent, we know, but in the opinion of the writer, the great disruption of the Craft was attributable to three distinct causes.

II. (a) Speculative Masonry (9) was, so to speak, only on its trial, during the generation which succeeded the authors of the revival. The institution of a society of Free and Accepted Masons, on a cosmopolitan basis, was one thing; its consolidation, however, opposed as its practical working showed it to be, to the ancient customs and privileges of the operatives, was another and a very different affair.

(b) The importation from France of many varieties of spurious Masonry about 1740-50 had tended to disparage the primitive simplicity of the English Rite. (10) (§ 26.)

The introduction into this country of the then newly-devised and so-styled "High degrees" was doubtless greatly aided by the foresight of their originators, who whilst refraining from any direct rivalry with the Antient Craft degree, at the same time cleverly associated their invention therewith, by limiting the privilege of membership to Freemasons (11), thus instilling a belief that the alleged "High Grades" were a recovered portion of the ancient mysteries of the Fraternity, and thereby persuading no inconsiderable section of the Craft, that their general adoption was, so to speak, "a return to the old lines," and instead of an innovation, but the raising of a more stately and perfect superstructure on the foundations of the existing edifice of Masonry. (8) Freemasons' Calendar.

(9) The Fraternity, originally, being a purely Operative Society, was composed exclusively of actual workmen, i.e., Masons, and Artificers in some way connected with architecture. About the end of the sixteenth century, persons of superior position were initiated or accepted, becoming thereby free of the Society, i.e., being admitted to its privileges. Masonry, however, being only Speculative to the newly Accepted brethren, began now to be termed both Operative and Speculative; hence the modern expression Free-Masonry.

(10) Even England, the birthplace of Masonry, has experienced the French innovations; and all the repeated injunctions, admonitions, and reproofs of the Lodges cannot prevent those in different parts of the kingdom from admitting the French novelties, full of tinsel and glitter, and high sounding titles.—Proofs of a Conspiracy, (Robison), 1797. (The Abbé Barruel and Professor Robison wrote at the same era, without mutual consultation; one a French clergyman, the other a Scottish Professor, and both Freemasons. Their works produced an immense sensation, and evoked an elaborate defence of the Order from the Earl of Moira, Acting Grand Master.)

(11) See Preface to Findel's History of Freemasonry, 2nd Edition, by Bro. D. M. Lyon, p vii.

(12) Michael Andrew Ramsay opened the door (1740) to the so-called High Grades, of which the injurious effects, notwithstanding the utmost exertions of genuine Freemasons, are felt to this very day. Findel, p 204. Dr. Oliver (Historical Landmarks, Vol. I., p 9, 1846), speaks of the degrees practised on the Continent having settled down to about forty, though he mentions having before him a list of nearly one thousand, which had been or were then practised under one or other denomination of Freemasonry. In this respect, however, the palm must now be yielded to our American brethren,

"The seeds thus disseminated had the more time to thrive, as the Grand Master (Lord Byron), from 1747 to 1752, was constantly absent from this country; the Grand Lodge (says Findel) becoming completely powerless, as no regularity in the business was observed." (1)

(c) Assuming the influences above summarized, to have been in active operation for some years prior to 1752, it may, I think, be reasonably concluded that the arbitrary and unconstitutional behaviour of Grand Lodge at last turned the scale in favour of secession.

III. From 1717 to 1722 the claims of the operatives, had been very fairly recognized in the distribution of Grand Lodge office, as is attested by the appointments of the latter year, when Mr. Joshua Timson, Blacksmith, and Mr. William Hawkins, Mason, appear as Grand Wardens. In 1723, however, a struggle for supremacy, between the operatives and speculatives, had set in, and the former from that time could justly complain of their total supercession in the offices of the Society.

IV. In 1730, Anthony Sayer, the Premier Grand Master, was publicly admonished and well nigh expelled for taking part in illegal assemblies of dissatisfied Masons, who were seeking to undermine the authority of the Society they and others had so recently constituted. (2) The following extract from a contemporary narrative (3) (1730), will further illustrate, the disagreement which then prevailed. "Some operative Masons (but according to the polite way of expression, Accepted Masons), made a visitation from the first and oldest Constituted Lodge (4) (according to the Lodge Book in London) to a noted Lodge in this city, and was denied admittance, because their old Lodge was removed to another house, which tho' contrary to this great Mystery, requires another Constitution, at no less expence than two guineas, with an elegant entertainment, under the denomination of being put to charitable uses; which if justly applied, will give great Enconiums to so worthy an Undertaking, but it is very much doubted, and most reasonable to think, it will be expended towards the forming another system of Masonry, the old Fabrick being so ruinous, that unless repaired by some occult Mystery, will soon be annihilated."

V. About 1738-39 certain brethren were charged with working a "different Master's part," when several meetings were held in open defiance of the regulations. (5) By way of detecting the schismatics, and thus excluding them from the orthodox Lodges, the expedient was adopted of introducing a slight alteration in the system, (6) or as otherwise expressed (7) "some trifling innovations were sanctioned, upon the ancient customs of the Order." This resolution was unfortunate, and produced the very evil it was intended to avert.

VI.—Schisms in Societies (says Laurie), (8) generally arise from misconduct on both sides, and the rule applies to the case now under consideration.

The "Moderns" undoubtedly departed from their usual custom and propriety of conduct, by authorising the slightest innovation upon the ceremonies of an ancient institution; but the "Ancients" were guilty of a greater impropriety, in being the active promoters of the schism, and still more by holding up their brethren to the ridicule of the public.

They propogated an opinion, (9) that the ancient tenets and practices of Masonry, were preserved by them; and that the regular Lodges, being composed of modern Masons, had adopted new plans, and were not to be considered as acting under the old establishment. Whilst, therefore, arrogating to themselves, the high sounding title of "Ancient" Masons, they branded the brethren of the Regular Lodges with the odious appellation of "Moderns," who they averred never existed till 1717 (§ 20). This has been rightly styled by a distinguished living writer, as (10) "a paltry attempt to throw doubts on the legality and Masonic character of a Body from which they, as also the "Moderns," received their knowledge of the Craft." A similar view was expressed by the late Dr. Oliver (11). "I shall use the words ancient and modern in their general acceptation, the former to designate the Seceders, and the latter the Constitutional Masons: although both were alike ancient or modern, being equally derived from the same source.

The two phrases have been, however, very happily characterised in Bro. Findel's great work on Freemasonry, where we find, by way of commentary on the rituals of the rival Grand Lodges. "The simpler one, the Catechism of Moderns, is the more ancient; and that of the Ancients is the more recent." (12)

On the 5th December 1753, Robert Turner, W.M. 15, was elected the first Grand Master of the "Seceders," by the representatives of some dozen Lodges. (13)

The distinctive epithets, "Ancients" and "Moderns," were commonly employed by both parties alike, to denote the seceding and the regular Masons respectively, as may be illustrated by two extracts from the minutes of the Moira Lodge, No. 92, constituted 1755 (Moderns).

"4th December 1758, Brother Glover of St. John's Lodge being an 'Ancient' Mason, having taken his obligation of this Lodge, paid the ujal fine of two shillings, and became a member."

"19th January 1761, Bro. Wright proposed Mr. Willm. Gee, to be made a Modern Mason in this Lodge, which was seconded and thirded properly."

VII.—The chief feature of the new ritual (Seceders) consisted in a division of the third degree into two sections, the Second of which was restricted to a few Master Masons, who were approved as candidates. Thus it comes to pass (says Hughan), that the arrangement as we have it now, was practically set on foot by the Ancients: the Moderns were compelled to accept the alteration in the Master Masons' degree, or the "Masonic Union" of 1813 would not have been cemented.

The special object of the Seceders was the promotion of Royal Arch Masonry, and as many gentlemen preferred joining the Grand Lodge of "Four Degrees" to associating with the Society which worked but three, the rival body was successful in its career of innovation. A clue being thus afforded to the reasons which prompted its formation, as well as to the causes of its extraordinary success. (14)

The Grand Chapter of the "Moderns" was constituted about 1766, and (says Hughan), virtually, though not actually, was countenanced by the Grand Lodge: (15) this, however, is scarcely reconcilable with the action of their Grand Secretary, who, writing to the Prov. G. Lodge of Frankfort, in the same year, calls the Royal Arch, "a society which we do not acknowledge, and which we regard as an invention designed for the purpose of introducing innovations amongst the brotherhood; and diverting them from the fundamental rules which our ancestors laid down for us." (16) who, according to a recent writer (Macmillan's Magazine, June 1878), "can boast of more Grand Lodges, more members, and more degrees of Masonic folly, than the whole of the old world combined."

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all sores, wounds, bad legs, and sprains of any kind, this Ointment is the most efficient application. It at once gives ease by allaying inflammation and moderating the flow of blood to the part. Whenever the malady has been of long standing the Ointment should be assisted by Holloway's purifying Pills, which act upon the stomach and liver, guarding digestion from falling into that disordered state which the pain, restlessness, and fever attending these ailments is apt to produce, and which much retards recovery, and sometimes even makes serious the slightest case. No mother or nurse should be without these noble remedies; they are equally applicable to all ages and constitutions. They purify the blood, regulate its circulation, renew diseased structures, and invigorate the system.

WARDENS AND THEIR POWERS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have a copy of bye-laws in my possession, in which the following occurs:—"When a sufficient number of the brethren shall be assembled, the Master, or in his absence a Past Master, or the Senior or Junior Wardens, shall open the Lodge and proceed to business." Does this imply that the Wardens have power to initiate, pass and raise eligible candidates, although they have never passed the Chair of K.S.? An answer will oblige.

Yours fraternally,

A W.M.

[Oliver, p 141 Masonic Jurisprudence, lays it down that though competent to rule the Lodge, a Warden must not "assume the Master's chair in which he has not been installed," but "occupy a seat in front or to the right of it, in accordance with the practice of Grand Lodge, as a token of his incompetency to perform the highest rites of the Craft; because the chair is for Installed Masters only, and no initiations can be legally performed from any other place in the Lodge. If these premises be correct, it follows, as a matter of course, that, being a mere locum tenens, he has no power to initiate, pass, or raise—for the terms 'rule a Lodge' do not embrace the privilege of admitting candidates." He adds, however, that in a case of extreme emergency, the conferring of any degrees by a Warden, in the absence of any Past Master or actual Master, "would not be held absolutely illegal, though highly undesirable." He also lays it down that if a Past Master of any other Lodge is present, it is for him and not the Warden of the Lodge in question to confer the degrees.—Ed. FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.]

In answer to an inquiry that has been made to us, we gladly intimate that non-Masons and Ladies can attend the meeting at the Surrey Masonic Club this day (Saturday), where Bro. Darley, P.M. 158, will deliver his Oration on the Beauties and Claims of Freemasonry. The chair will be taken at eight o'clock precisely. As we write, we learn that Ill. Bro. Robert Morris LL.D., of Kentucky, has promised to attend on this occasion, and deliver an address, also to recite an original poem. Brethren and their friends will be heartily welcomed, and may be assured of an interesting evening.

MARK MASONRY.

THE Consecration of the Hereward Lodge, No. 227, took place at Bourne, Lincolnshire, on Tuesday, the 13th inst., and thereafter Bro. the Rev. Dr. Ace was installed as W.M., and appointed and invested Bros. W. H. Radley and Chamberlain as his S. and J. Wardens. Bro. Dr. Ace was afterwards installed as W.C.N. of a Lodge of Royal Ark Mariners, attached to the Hereward Lodge of Mark Master Masons. The consecration was performed by Bro. Dewar Grand Assist. Secretary, at the request of the D.P.G.M. of the Province, and the same Brother afterwards installed the W.M. and W.C.N.

METROPOLITAN MASONIC CHARITY UNION.

A MEETING was held on Thursday evening last, at Freemasons' Tavern, Bro. Col. Creaton in the chair, to discuss a project for forming an Association for the purpose of furthering the claims of London candidates for the Masonic Charities, when Bro. the Rev. A. F.A. Woodford explained that as the Provincial Organizations of this description, by their great success in promoting the election of provincial candidates, told very unfavourably upon the chances of Metropolitan candidates, it was advisable to form a Metropolitan Union to prevent deserving London cases being excluded from the benefits of the Charities.

Bro. A. E. Gladwell read some statistics compiled from the reports of the three Charities, which showed that in proportion to the money contributed in London to the funds of the Institutions, there were very few successful London candidates.

It was proposed by Bro. Perceval, "That it is expedient to form a London Masonic Charity Union," and this motion having been seconded, was carried unanimously.

Bro. Woodford read a set of bye-laws which had been prepared for the consideration of the meeting, and after some conversation on the subject, it was proposed by Bro. Erasmus Wilson, seconded and carried unanimously, that the meeting stand adjourned till Wednesday, the 21st inst., to give the brethren opportunity for mature consideration of the whole subject. Among the other brethren present we observed:—Bros. Tinley, J. White, Thos. Mason, J. H. Southwood, Hyde Pullen, E. C. Massey, S. Rosenthal, E. Letchworth, J. H. Watt, and J. G. March.

NOTHING NEW—EVERYTHING NEW.

FROM THE "KEYSTONE."

WE are not much given to paradox, but paradox is sometimes a forcible method of expressing truth, and for the moment we shall be apparently self-contradictory, for the purpose of establishing the assertion that while there is nothing new, everything is new.

King Solomon has been credited with the authorship of the well-known statement, in Ecclesiastes, that "there is no new thing under the sun." We are always fraternally inclined to stand by King Solomon, and we shall not desert him now. He was wisdom personified, and derived his gift of wisdom from the Grand Architect of the Universe himself. There is nothing new. The earth is not new—it is as old as creation. Man is not new—he is as old as Adam. (It will be observed that we are no evolutionists, and do not believe that oysters and monkeys are first-cousins to men.) God is not new, but "the same, yesterday and to-day and for ever." History repeats itself, men repeat themselves, and thus there is nothing new under the sun. Freemasonry certainly is not new. The law of brotherhood has been written on the hearts of the elect at least ever since King Solomon's time. All of this is true, and yet—

Everything is new. Every child born into the world is a new creation. It is in many respects unlike all of its progenitors. Every soul is a new soul. It leads a new life on this earth, and death will only introduce it to a new life in the world to come. Every day is new, every year is new, all time is in succession now, and eternity will be the subtlest novelty of all.

Our Craft is new in form, though old in substance. The mode of initiation has varied with the centuries, but the germ of Freemasonry has ever been, and ever will be, the same. It is the law of love, of social enjoyment, and of Faith in God, Hope in immortality, and Charity towards all the Brotherhood. King Solomon's Temple-builders, and William of Sen's Cathedral-builders, and all nineteenth century Freemasons, are Brethren.

Civilization has always progressed from the East to the West. The East is emphatically the place of light, and this light radiates ever to the West. The new is in the West. Here is the new world, with its New England, in many respects the rival of Old England. All America was a new found land, and not merely the island of that name. Then we have a New Jersey over the river, and "Uncle Sam" owns a New Mexico; Connecticut has a New London, Massachusetts a New Bedford (although its old glory as a whaling town is departed), Missouri has a New Madrid, Louisiana a New Orleans, and North Carolina a New Berne. The world is full of Newcomes, besides Thackeray's. The metropolis of the United States was once New Amsterdam and is now New York. Canada was once New France; Australia, New Holland, and Pennsylvania and new Jersey, New Sweden. There is a new Ireland in the South Pacific, and London has a Newgate—which has given name to multitudinous prisons.

By no means the least of the new things in the world are the newspapers—a modern luxury, and they are certainly "new under the sun." How benighted must Cæsar have been without the Times, and King Solomon without The Keystone. Let us value our gifts and be grateful that we live in a new world, where everything is new, and yet—nothing is new. We are not sure but that we live at once in the New Atlantis, the philosophical Commonwealth of Lord Chancellor Bacon, the Utopia of Sir Thomas More, and the Republic of Plato. Indeed, the wonderful island of Atlantis, mentioned by the Ancients, is supposed to have been America.

There have been many modern attempts to create new societies that should equal, if not rival, Freemasonry, but all have failed. There is but one Freemasonry that is ancient, free and accepted.

Communism is a novelty that is now threatening to disturb our peace, and it is at once new and old. The ideal communism is lovely; the practical communism Satanic. There is a communism that is recommended in the Great Light of Masonry. The Apostles had all things in common—that is, they resigned all they possessed for the common good. The modern communist has nothing to resign, and he exemplifies his understanding of communism by stealing whatever belongs to his neighbour—a distinction with a difference. Indiana boasts a town called New Harmony, where Robert Owen, the father of Robert Dale Owen, endeavoured to establish a socialistic community termed the "Harmonists," but discord invaded their ranks, and the Harmonists are now no more. Those only are true Harmonists who "harmonize in the Light"—of Freemasonry.

Freemasons are now engaged in erecting two Temples, the material and the spiritual. The material Temple looms before us in time, grand and majestic, but it shall pass away; while the spiritual Temple is the architecture of the soul, and shall endure for ever. There shall be a new heaven and a new earth created for it, and the New Jerusalem, the holy city, shall come down out of Heaven from the Grand Architect of the Universe. There, too, there shall be nothing new, and—everything new; but the explanation of this paradox we shall defer until—we enter the Grand Lodge above.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A series of articles, biographical, descriptive, and eulogistic, of some of the principal Masonic worthies of the day. They are well written, and though personal, by no means offensive, or intrusive into private life, and in Masonic society will be welcomed as an interesting series of word paintings of members of the Craft.—Standard.

"We do not remember to have read any similar series of sketches which surpass this in merit."—Land and Water.

"The book will be of great interest to Masons, containing as it does pen-and-ink sketches of the most distinguished men among them, and giving some considerable information on matters Masonic, from various points of view."—Lloyd's Newspaper.

"Admirably written, being free from what are too often observed in composition—inelegant language and prolixity."—Sunday Times.

"'J. G.' writes with a considerable amount of freedom, never hesitating to 'hit off' a weakness when he finds it publicly displayed by a 'distinguished brother;' at the same time he never loses sight of a good trait when it is displayed, either in connexion with the Craft or in the service of the public out of doors. The sketches are lively reading."—City Press.

"This is a neat book. The Portraits consist of a series of 'word pictures' of eminent English Masons. It styles Bro. W. J. Hughan 'Knight Errant,' and sketches thirty-two others under equally unique titles. We commend the book as worthy of a place in every Masonic library."—Voice of Masonry.

"Evinces much literary ability, and is a valuable addition to the few works we have in Masonic biography."—Philadelphia Keystone.

"The book ought to be in every well arranged Masonic Library."—New York Courier.

"We value the work, and heartily thank Bro. Morgan for our copy."—Masonic Jewel.

"The portraits consist of a series of what we call 'pen and ink sketches' of brethren prominent in all the noble undertakings of English Masonry. . . . Prominent among his brethren we find Bro. Fred. Binckes, ('Our Hercules,' whose herculean efforts in behalf of those blessed institutions, the charities of English Masons, have a world-wide reputation, which will live long after the zealous Craftsman has been, 'laid away to rest.'"—New York Square.

"The style of the author is pleasing, and the quality of his productions highly complimentay to his ability as a writer."—Masonic Advocate.

"They belong to a kind of writing which has come to be amongst the most popular reading of the day. . . . . The types are as general as they are graphic. The salient characteristics are seized with an easy power, and happily hit off in felicitous phrase."—Sheffield Post.

"Good sensibly written articles. The writer prefaces each of his sketches with some pithy common sense remarks."—Cashel Gazette.

"Cleverly and agreeably sketched, and the work altogether forms a valuable addition to Masonic literature."—Ryde News.

"Very amusing, and beyond doubt, faithful portraits of the worthies who unconsciously sat for them."—Deal, Walmer and Sandwich Mercury.

"The members of the Craft will take it as an acceptable addition to their biographical literature."—Monmouthshire Chronicle.

"They are written in a fair and genial tone, thoroughly Masonic."—Leigh Chronicle.

"Should have a very large sale."—Kingsbridge Gazette.

"These sketches are drawn with sparkling ability."—Bexhshire Reporter.

"We must sincerely congratulate the author on the success of his endeavour to aim at faithful portraiture, while there is an entire absence of what might give offence to the most sensitive mind."—Folkestone Express.

"A very acceptable contribution to the history of the Order. The volume has our warmest commendation."—Kelso Courier.

"Drawn with no little humour, and embellished with many a deft stroke of good natured satire."—Figaro.

"The inquiring Brother who may wish to know something of the strength and beauty of the principles of Masonry, will find a pleasure in scanning the characteristic pictures in this book."—The Brighouse News.

"There is a pquancy in the ready off-hand dash that lends much zest to the subject, and bars it from studied rhetorical expression."—Hebrew Leader.

"There can be no doubt that the writer has produced a series of Portraits which will be a source of amusement and pleasure to Masons throughout the worlds."—Surrey Comet.

"Will be found very interesting and pleasant reading, especially to the Masonic world."—Barnet Press.

"Calculated to raise the Order—if that be possible—in the estimation of its members, if not of the outer world."—Trowbridge and North Wilts Advertiser.

"Written in a spirised, racy style, and conveying, in as clear a manner as possible, a 'counterfeit presentment' of some of the rulers of the Craft."—Essex Standard.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

THE Queen on Tuesday reviewed the special squadron which it was deemed expedient to form for home defence when the Eastern question was under discussion; unfortunately the weather was most unfavourable. On Wednesday Her Majesty held a Council at Osborne, when Mr. Roebuck was sworn as a Privy Councillor, and the dignity of knighthood was conferred on the Mayor of Nottingham, Mr. James Oldknow. The Prince and Princess of Wales visited Southampton on Monday, when the Prince laid a memorial stone to the late Bishop of Oxford.

On Monday, in the House of Lords, a bill relating to Municipal Corporations in England was laid on the table by the Lord Chancellor for consideration during the recess; Lord Truro gave notice that next Session he intended to move for a commission to consider the best means of reorganising the police force throughout the country, and several minor matters were advanced a stage. On Tuesday, the Royal Assent was given by Commission to several Bills which have passed the necessary stages. Lord O'Hagan moved the second reading of the Sale of Intoxicating Liquors (Sunday) Ireland Bill, pointing out its principal points, and urging that considerable good might be expected if it became law. The Duke of Richmond and Gordon followed, stating that the Government were in favour of the various proposals which it contained, and that they would offer no opposition to its second reading, which was accordingly proceeded with. Some other matters were discussed, and the House adjourned. The following day the Bill passed through Committee without any debate, as also did the Metropolitan Commons Bill. Various other measures were read, and their Lordships adjourned. On Thursday, standing orders having been suspended, the Appropriation Bill and the Expiring Laws Continuance Bill passed through their several stages, and others were read a third time. Lord Straithnairn drew attention to the defective state of the records of services of officers of the army, and expressed a hope that the matter would be taken into early consideration. Lord Bury promised to bring the matter under the notice of the Field Marshal Commanding in Chief, but remarked that Lord Strathnairn was wrong if he supposed that services of officers were not well known. The House then rose, and adjourned to half-past one on Friday, when Parliament will be formally prorogued.

In the House of Commons on Saturday last, The O'Conor Don proposed the third reading of the Irish Sunday Closing Bill. After some discussion an amendment was proposed, which, on a division, was rejected by a majority of 40 in a House of 84 members. The third reading was thereupon proceeded with. On Monday, the answer of Her Majesty to the address of the House on the Berlin Treaty and the Anglo-Turkish Convention was brought up by Lord Barrington. Her Majesty expressed her satisfaction at the support the House had given her. A question asked by Sir H. Havelock, respecting a Consular Convention with the United States, was answered by Mr. Bourke, who stated that the necessary Bills had been prepared, but for obvious reasons it had been found impossible to introduce them during the Session. An enquiry made by Sir C. Dilke, as to whether the Government had heard of the refusal of the Porte to arrange with Greece the new frontier as settled by the Congress, was answered in the negative, but the answer proving unsatisfactory, he gave notice that he should again refer to the matter. Assurance was given on behalf of the Government to introduce, early next Session, a Bill dealing with Corrupt Practices at Elections. The Intermediate Education (Ireland) Bill was read a third time, but not without considerable discussion, followed by three divisions on the various matters introduced. During the sitting Mr. Garfit was introduced and took his seat as representative for Boston, in the place of Mr. Malcolm, who had resigned. On Tuesday, the House attended the Upper Chamber to hear the Royal Assent given to various measures; notices were given of matters which would be introduced next Session, and, after answers had been given to various questions, the House went into Committee to consider the Indian Budget, which, as may be expected, lead to considerable discussion. A question was asked by Mr. Monk, on Wednesday, as to the rumoured unhealthiness of the troops in Cyprus. This was answered by Col. Stanley, who stated that a telegram, received two days since from Sir Garnet Wolseley, stated that there was no serious illness among the troops; there were some cases of mild fever in the hospital, but all were going on well. Some discussion occurred, on the order for reading the Appropriation Bill a third time, as to the circumstances attending the murder of Mr. Ogle by Turkish soldiers, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer promised that further inquiry should be made in the matter. Reference was also made to the seizure of Roumanian territory by Russia, but was allowed to pass, after which the third reading was agreed to. The opposition of Mr. Jenkins to the third reading of the Bishoprics Bill necessitated a division, resulting in 62 voting for the reading, while only 20 supported Mr. Jenkins. The sitting of Thursday commenced by several notices being given for next Session, after which a question was asked as to whether the Turkish Government had forestalled the collection of the tithes and taxes in Cyprus for the current year, and replied to by Mr. Bourke, who stated there was no reason to suppose such was the case. That gentleman also answered some questions which were put respecting various Turkish matters. The Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Bill was, after discussion, read a third time, and two Bills which had been before the House were withdrawn. On the motion that the House adjourn, Lord C. Beresford rose and defended the naval authorities against the imputation of dilatoriness in conducting the operations in connection with the raising of the Eurydice. Mr. W. H. Smith described the difficulties of the work, and stated that regard for the friends of those lost by the wreck had induced the Admiralty not to blow the ship up until they had exhausted every means in their endeavours to raise it. The Attorney-General for Ireland stated, in answer to Mr. Moore, that every effort was being made to alleviate the condition of pauper children in Irish workhouses, in many cases with the most satisfactory results. Mr. Courtney then urged that immediate steps should be taken to restore local authority in the Transvaal, after which the House adjourned.

The forty-eighth session of the British Association opened at Dublin on Wednesday; the presidential address was delivered in the grand concert room of the Exhibition building. The large and spacious hall was crowded by members of the Association and their friends, including a more than average attendance of ladies. The President, Mr. Spottiswoode, was introduced by Professor Allen Thompson, F.R.S., who presided last year. The learned gentleman dealt with the purposes and prospects of the Association, and next with the external aspects and tendencies of science. Under the first head he showed that the Association was general in its comprehensiveness and special in its sectional arrangements, with regard to which latter he suggested they should adopt the dictum of the Frenchman, "that no theory can be considered complete until it is so clear that it can be explained to the first man you meet in the street." During the last forty-seven years the Association had expended in research £44,000. He thought it would not be difficult to "picture to the mind an ideal future, when science and art shall walk hand and hand together, led by a willing minister into the green pastures of the endowment of research." At present, however, they must be content to select the best men for definite work, and depend on the personal co-operation of leading scientists. At the conclusion of the address a vote of thanks was carried by acclamation. On Thursday morning one of the sections was devoted to Geography. The President, Sir Wyville Thomson, well known in connection with the voyage of H.M.S. Challenger, in the course of his remarks, stated that Mr. Stanley would in all probability read a paper before the termination of the sittings. This announcement was loudly applauded, a rumour having been circulated to the effect that the great African explorer had decided not to attend the Congress. In other sections papers were read on the Adulteration Act in so far as it relates to the prosecution of milk sellers, the best means of developing light from coal gas, and on various other matters. In the evening the Mechanical Science Section dealt principally with the question of river control and management, and recommended that special legislation should be initiated with the view of getting all the rivers in the country put under the control of a State Department.

The review at Spithead on Tuesday last unhappily took place amid storm and rain sufficient to prevent all evolutions which it was intended should be gone through; but the spectacle of so many vessels drawn together, as may be said, from the reserves of the country, shows unmistakably our superiority in naval matters, and compensates in some measure for the disappointment which was felt that the vessels were unable to show their behaviour under steam. The pleasure of witnessing such a sight may be imagined from the statement of Admiral Key, who guaranteed that within half a minute after the signal was given from the Royal yacht to slip the cables, the whole fleet should be steaming out to sea. Her Majesty the Queen was accompanied by their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, Princess Beatrice, and the Lords of the Admiralty, and passed slowly along the lines. At the conclusion of the inspection Her Majesty signalled from the Royal yacht, expressing her satisfaction, and regretting that the state of the weather had prevented the evolutions.

The directors of the Bank of England considered it necessary to increase, on Monday last, the rate of interest from 4 to 5 per cent., which alteration has had the effect of increasing the reserve by no less than £309,000, although, in consequence of heavy withdrawals, the proportion to liabilities is nearly the same as last week, viz., $35\frac{7}{8}$ per cent.

At Cyprus active preparations are being made for the return home of the Indian troops, some of whom it is expected will embark immediately. News from the Cape announces the suppression of the Gaeka rebellion, also that the natives on the Zulu frontier are still hostile. The meeting of the German Parliament is summoned for the 9th September. The Austrians are still opposed in their occupation of Bosnia and Herzegovina. At Zepce they only succeeded in driving back the insurgents, after several hours severe fighting. The various corps have, however, united, and little resistance may now be expected. It appears to be likely that some disturbances will occur at Batoum before it is surrendered to the Russians, the Lazis having collected in considerable numbers in the district.

As will be seen from an advertisement in another page, the Provincial Grand Master of Northamptonshire and Huntingdonshire has called an especial Grand Lodge for the purpose of consecrating the Eleanor Cross Lodge, No. 1764, which event will take place on Tuesday, 17th Sept. next. This Lodge will be the first that has been consecrated in this Province since it has been under the leadership of His Grace the Duke of Manchester, in fact the first since 1858. We think our Northamptonshire brethren, who have, during the existence of this journal, firmly supported the central charities, will make this addition to their roll of Lodges with the good wishes of their neighbours, and in fact of every Province in the country. We wish the new Lodge a prosperous career, and hope its members may be instrumental in diffusing a true Masonic spirit in their district.

The annual celebration of the Twelfth of August took place on the moors throughout the country, and good sport appears to have been universal, the price of grouse quoted in the principal markets being, in consequence, lower than has been known for many years past.

COMMITTEE OF THE BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

THE monthly meeting was held at Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday 14th inst., when Col. Creaton presided. Among the brethren present were Bro. C. J. Perceval, Thos. Cubitt, Wm. F. Nettleship, Jno. G. Stevens, G. Bolton, J. March Case, S. Rawson, Jas. Willing jun., and Wm. Hale. The death of Mr. Samuel Tomkins the Treasurer and one of the Trustees of the Institution was reported. The death of one annuitant was reported; four petitions were accepted, and the names of the petitioners placed on the list. The chairman reported that the corner stone of the Gardeners' Lodge was laid on Tuesday, and that the building would be completed in about ten weeks, the tender of Mr. Martin Taylor, of Croydon, for the building had been accepted.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT.

PARLIAMENT was prorogued on Friday. The House of Commons met at a quarter to one o'clock, and the House of Lords at a quarter past one. On the conclusion of some comparatively formal business the Speaker was called to the Upper House, when the Lord Chancellor read the—

QUEEN'S SPEECH,

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN,

When, in a critical condition of public affairs, you assembled at the commencement of the year, I pointed out to you that in the interests of my Empire, precautions might become necessary, for which I appealed to your liberality to provide. At the same time I assured you that no efforts in the cause of peace should be wanting on my part.

Your response was not ambiguous, and contributed largely to a pacific solution of the difficulties which then existed. The terms of agreement between Russia and the Porte, so far as they affected pre-existing treaties, were, after an interval of discussion, submitted to a Congress of the Powers; and their councils have resulted in a peace which I am thankful to believe is satisfactory and likely to be durable. The Ottoman Empire has not emerged from a disastrous war without severe loss; but the arrangements which have been made, while favourable to the subjects of the Porte, have secured to it a position of independence which can be upheld against aggression.

I have concluded a Defensive Convention with the Sultan, which has been laid before you. It gives, as regards his Asiatic Empire, a more distinct expression to the engagements which in principle I, together with other Powers, accepted in 1856, but of which the form has not been found practically effectual. The Sultan has, on the other hand, bound himself to adopt and carry into effect the measures necessary for securing the good government of those provinces. In order to promote the objects of this agreement, I have undertaken the occupation and administration of the island of Cyprus.

In aiding to bring about the settlement which has taken place, I have been assisted by the discipline and high spirit of my forces by sea and by land, by the alacrity with which my Reserves responded to my call, by the patriotic offers of military aid by my people in the Colonies, and by the proud desire of my Indian Army to be reckoned among the defenders of the British Empire, a desire justified by the soldierly qualities of the force recently quartered at Malta.

The spontaneous offers of troops made by many of the native Governments in India were very gratifying to me, and I recognise in them a fresh manifestation of that feeling towards my Crown and Person which has been displayed in many previous instances.

My relations with all foreign Powers continue to be friendly.

Although the condition of affairs in South Africa still affords some ground for anxiety, I have learnt with satisfaction from the reports of my civil and military officers that the more serious disturbances which had arisen among the native population on the frontiers of the Cape Colony are now terminated.

GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS,

I thank you for the Liberal supplies which you have voted for the public service.

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN,

The Act which has been passed for amending and greatly simplifying the law relating to Factories and Workshops will, I trust, still further secure the health and education of those who are employed in them.

I have had much pleasure in giving my assent to a measure relating to the Contagious Diseases of Cattle, which, by affording additional securities against the introduction and spread of those diseases will tend to encourage the breeding of live stock in the country, and to increase the supply of food to my people.

You have amended the Law as to Highways in a manner which cannot but improve their classification and management, and at the same time relieve inequalities in the burden of their maintenance.

I trust that advantage will be taken of the means which you have provided for dividing Bishoprics in the more populous districts of the country, and thus increasing the efficiency of the Church.

I anticipate the best results from the wise arrangements which you have made for the encouragement of intermediate education in Ireland.

The measure for amending and consolidating the Public Health Laws in that country is well calculated to promote the important object at which it aims.

The measure passed in regard to Roads and Bridges in Scotland and for the abolition of Tolls will greatly improve the management of highways in that part of the United Kingdom; while the Acts relating to Education and to Endowed Schools and Hospitals cannot fail to extend the benefits of education and improve the administration of charitable endowments in that country.

In bidding you farewell, I pray that the blessing of Almighty God may rest on your recent labours and accompany you in the discharge of all your duties.

Obituary.

R.W. BRO. ROBERT BAGSHAW.

WE regret to have to chronicle the death of one of our oldest Provincial Grand Masters, which took place on Wednesday last. Bro. Bagshaw has for many years past been connected with Freemasonry, and has held the important position of Provincial Grand Master for Essex since December 1854. As our readers doubtless remember, his absence, through ill health, from all his Provincial Masonic meetings for some time past, has been a matter of deep regret to the Masons of his Province, who have never failed to express their sorrow at his continued illness. Bro. Bagshaw was Deputy Lieutenant for the county of Essex, and represented Harwich in the Liberal interest at the same time as his father did; the borough at that time returning two members.

Bro. Slaiter was elected W.M. for next Thursday, and the Lodge was closed.

Hermes Chapter, No. 77.—A regular Convocation was held on Wednesday, the 14th inst., at the Old Falcon, Gravesend, when the following Principals, Officers, &c., were present:—Comps. Cameron M.E.Z., E. C. Woodward H., Rev. P. M. Holden J., C. A. Cottebrane P.Z. Scribe E., T. Murley S.N., Hall P.S., Forstick 1st Asst., Kelso 2nd Asst., Brown Janitor. Visitors—Comps. It proved successful, and those brethren were duly exalted into Royal Arch Masonry. Comp. Skilliter was elected a joining member. After routine business the Chapter was closed. The banquet was served in the worthy host's well known style, and greatly to the satisfaction of all present. The Loyal and R.A. toasts were fully honoured, and a most pleasant evening was spent.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 193.—Met on Wednesday, 14th August, at the Railway Tavern, London-street E.C. Bro. F. Brown W.M., J. B. Biddle S.W., D. Moss J.W., Gotthell P.M., J. K. Pitt Sec., Sayer S.D., K. Harris I.G., G. H. Webb, Butcher, E. Kelt, D. Posener. The second ceremony was rehearsed, and one of the sections was worked. Bro. D. Posener W.M. Tranquillity, and P.M. Upton, begged to be allowed to rehearse the installation ceremony, as on the following evening it would be his duty to instal the W.M. of the Upton Lodge. The brethren having unanimously signified their assent, Bro. Brown at once vacated the chair in favour of Bro. Posener, who worked the ceremony in a masterly manner. A vote of thanks was passed to both the brethren, who briefly acknowledged the compliment. Great satisfaction was expressed at the announcement by Bro. Gotthell that Bro. John Constable, who had been seriously indisposed, had so far progressed towards recovery as to be able to venture upon his return voyage, and if all goes well, may be expected in London in the early part of next month. Bros. Butcher and Kelt were elected members, after which the Lodge was closed, and adjourned to Wednesday, the 21st instant, at seven p.m. precisely. On that occasion Bro. Biddle will preside.

Camden Lodge of Instruction, No. 704.—Held its weekly meeting on Monday, at the Red Cap, Camden Town. Present—Bros. Turner W.M., Cohen S.W., H. Slyman J.W., Rogers P.M. Treas., Sterne S.D.; Bros. Cohen, who rehearsed the ceremony of passing. The worthy Preceptor proposed that Bro. Morgan, who he was pleased to see as a visitor at their Lodge of Instruction, be made an honorary member. This was seconded and carried unanimously. After a brief acknowledgment from Bro. Morgan, reference was made to the late Bro. Kiel, who was a member of, and a constant attendant at this Lodge of Instruction. A vote of condolence was passed, and Bro. P.M. Eldridge kindly undertook to convey to the relatives this mark of the respect in which our deceased brother was held. After discussing some matters of interest the Lodge was closed. Bro. Cohen will preside on Monday next, and the Lodge will be opened at eight o'clock.

Royal Alfred Lodge of Instruction, No. 780.—Meeting held at Star and Garter Hotel, Kew Bridge, on Friday evening, 9th August. Present—Bros. Gunner (Hon. Sec.) Lodge was duly opened, and after the minutes had been read and confirmed, the W.M. proceeded to rehearse the ceremony of initiation, Bro. Sharp candidate. Bro. E. Eydmann answered the questions leading to the third degree. The Lodge then resumed to first degree, and the brethren were called off. After a short interval labour, was resumed, and a useful discussion ensued on some matters of detail, much to the edification and instruction of the brethren. Upon the proposition of Bro. Roe, seconded by Bro. Kyezor, a cordial vote of thanks was unanimously passed to the W.M. for the able and impressive manner in which he had conducted the proceedings. Bro. Gunner heartily thanked the brethren for their encouragement; he trusted, by patient study and careful attention, to acquire still higher Masonic knowledge. He felt a peculiar pride in occupying his present honourable position among so many old and tried brethren; he would always endeavour to merit their confidence. Bro. Acworth was elected W.M. for the succeeding Friday evening, and in a few well-chosen words accepted the post, and appointed his Officers. With due observance of ancient usage and custom, Lodge was then closed in harmony, and adjourned till 16th August at half-past seven.

Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, No. 860.—On Tuesday evening, at Bro. Smyth's, Sisters' Tavern, Pownall-road, Dalston. Bros. Forss W.M., Slaiter S.W., Gilham J.W., Hunt S.D., M. Richardson 940, and Wm. Johnson. The opening business having been disposed of, the ballot was taken for Mr. Henry Carr, Superintendent of the Midland Railway Detective Department, and found clear; the Lodge was then advanced to the second degree, and Bro. Baxter tested as to his eligibility for the third; the result of the test being satisfactory he retired. The Lodge was then advanced to the third degree, Bro. Baxter was re-admitted, and raised in solemn form. The S.W. afterwards delivered the charge relating to the third degree to Bros. Hefford, Arnold, and Baxter. The Lodge being lowered by successive stages to the first, the W.M. made the usual enquiries, and the name of another candidate for the mysteries of Freemasonry was submitted. This finishing the work of the evening the Lodge was adjourned until 4th September. It was a matter of mutual congratulation amongst the brethren that, notwithstanding the fact that August was a general holiday month, the attendance was a good average one, and although several of the regular Officers were absent, taking advantage of the season, the ceremonies had been most successfully performed, auguring a continued prosperity for the Lodge.

Lewis Chapter, No. 1185.—A little more than two years since we chronicled the consecration of this Chapter, which event took place in June 1876, under especially favourable circumstances. Since then the progress made has been eminently satisfactory; the principal chairs have been filled by Companions who have made the R.A. Ritual their study, and the Chapter generally has secured a reputation for the careful and correct manner in which the business is always conducted. Saturday, the 10th inst., was the day fixed for the installation of Principals for the year, and the induction of the Officers. The Chapter was opened at 3 o'clock, when the following were present:—Comps. G. J. Row M.E.Z., A. Durrant H., George Newman J., Arthur Leared P.Z. S.E., James W. Berrie S.N., H. T. Thompson 1st Sojourner, T. C. Speight Janitor; Comps. T. B. Goodfellow, Geo. Powell, Kennett Harris, William Sayer, Thos. W. Bono, A. B. Gomm, Frederick Binckes. Visitors—Herbert J. Adam Z. 11, Henry Garrod P.Z. 507, W. W. Morgan 141. The minutes of the last Convocation having been read and confirmed, the ballot was taken for three candidates for exaltation, viz., Bros. Francis Knight, the Rev. Richard Morris, and Thomas Howes Turner, all of the Lewis Lodge. It proved satisfactory in each case, but in consequence of the holiday season, and from other causes, neither of the candidates was able to be present. Comp. John Jeffery Drake, of the Benevolent Chapter No. 303, was elected a joining member. The ceremony of installing the Principals was then performed by Comp. H. Garrod P.Z. 507, who placed in their respective Chairs Comps. A. Durrant M.E.Z., George Newman P.Z. H., J. Berrie J. The appointment of Officers then took place: Comps. Arthur Leared P.Z., S.E., E. B. Grabham S.N., H. T. Thompson Principal Sojourner, and Crowther and Goodfellow as Assistants, T. C. Speight (re-elected) Janitor. Home matters were then discussed, and one or two alterations in the bye-laws, of which notice had been regularly given, were agreed to, and the Chapter was closed. After dinner, which was very well served, Comp. Durrant, who presided, introduced the customary Loyal and R.A. toasts. Comp. Row I.P.Z. proposed the health of the Most Excellent, whom he designated as a painstaking and most worthy Companion. He referred to the happy time enjoyed by the Chapter, not only during his own year of office, but also during that of the first M.E.Z., Comp. Leared. He trusted nothing might arise to mar the good feeling that existed, and concluded by calling on all present to drink the toast and wish Comp. Durrant a prosperous year. Comp. Durrant thanked the I.P.Z. for so kindly introducing the toast. He remarked that the more he saw of human nature the more he realised his own weakness. However, of this he was assured,—that in the members of his Chapter he was surrounded by a capital set of fellows, who would strive might and main to please each other. They could never expect to go through the world without giving offence, but from this no serious result could be anticipated if they remained united. For his part, he would do all he could to promote the welfare of the Chapter, and fully realised the importance attaching to the proper carrying out of the duties that devolved on him. He concluded by reiterating their wish for a happy and successful year. The M.E.Z. then proposed the health of the Installing Principal. He described Comp. Garrod as a worthy Mason, and thoroughly competent to carry out any duty he undertook. Comp. Garrod in replying said, that after the kindness shewn him in Chapter, by offering him so cordial a vote of thanks for the little service he had been able to render, he hardly thought any further compliment was needed. Nevertheless, he appreciated this kindness, and would certainly make a note of the invitation the Comps. had given him to be present at their next installation meeting. In responding to the toast of the Charities, in giving which Bro. Durrant had gracefully alluded to the energy displayed by Bro. Fred. Binckes, Secretary of the Boys' School, that brother gave a retrospect of the progress made by Freemasonry in the district of Wood Green since the Boys' School had been established there. He referred to the foundation of the Lewis Lodge, of which he had the honour to be the first W.M. In the Lewis Lodge he had initiated many a good brother who had since displayed a warm interest in our Institutions. On the formation of the Lewis Chapter, it had been especially gratifying to him to know that one of his own initiates was selected to fill the First Principal's Chair. When from a Lodge it is found desirable to establish a Chapter, it is a sure sign of prosperity. He was much obliged to the Most Excellent for the kind things he had said in regard to his labours during the last 25 years. On looking back he could remember when his sympathies were more in favour with the Girls' School than with that of the Boys, but his zeal was at length awakened owing to the solicitations of the Grand Secretary, Bro. John Hervey, and now all present knew the position held by the Institution he had the honour to represent. He then referred to the position Comp. Row now held on the House Committee, while others present were aspiring to similar office. He was proud to see them aspiring, and assured them for his own part he never felt so satisfied as when he could look back on a day when he could record that he had done something towards advancing the welfare of the Charities, something that met with the approval of the great body to which we belong. The remaining toasts comprised the Press, responded to by Comp. Morgan; the P.Z.'s of the Chapter, to which Comps. Leared and Row replied; the H. and J.,—the M.E.Z. here remarking that when a commander has good subalterns his duties are much lightened; no better Officers could have been selected than Comps. Newman and Berrie; both were desirous to do their work, and of their capabilities there could not be any question. After a reply from each, the M.E.Z. gave the other Officers, and then the Janitor was summoned. The various toasts were interspersed by some capital songs and recitations, Comp. Garrod gave a humourous account of the arrival of a quack doctor at Dover; Comp. Harris gave in admirable style one of the Percy Legends; Comps. Thompson and Morgan also favoured the company.

Upton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1227.—Held its meeting at the King and Queen, Norton Folgate, on Friday, the 9th inst. Bros. Fenner worked the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th sections of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. Bros. Woolley of the Wanderers Lodge, No. 1604, and Francis of the Guelph Lodge, No. 1685, were elected members. Bro. Serjeant was appointed W.M. for the ensuing week. Lodge was then closed.

Bishop J.W., McDowall S.D., Garrod J.D., Mann I.G., P.M. Stephens Preceptor, Slaiter Secretary; also Bros. Trewinnard, Lockett, J. Lorkin, Jacob, Cracknell, P.M. McPherson, and other brethren. The Lodge was opened in ancient form, and after the usual preliminary business the ceremony of passing was rehearsed, Bro. Lockett being candidate. Bro. Garrod answered the questions leading from the degree of Fellow Craft to that of Master Mason, and was duly entrusted. Lodge was then opened in the third degree, and the W.M. impressively worked the ceremony of raising, giving the Traditional History. The Lodge was resumed to the first degree, and a cordial vote of thanks was ordered to be recorded on the minutes to Bro. Turquand for the great pleasure and instruction he had afforded the brethren by his able and finished working of the ceremonies. Bros.

P.M.'s Turquand and McPherson were elected members, and Bro. Aspinall selected W.M. for the ensuing two weeks. All Masonic business being ended, the Lodge was closed in due form with prayer, and adjourned to Monday, 18th August, at 7.30.

Sir Hugh Myddelton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1602. Held at Bro. Wood's, Crown and Woolpack, St. John Street-road, on Tuesday, the 13th inst. Bros. Hallam jun. W.M., Hallam sen. S.W., Trewinnard J.W., W. Rowley S.D., Gibbs J.D., Rimell I.G., Pearcy Preceptor, Fenner acting Sec.; also Bros. Wood, Huggins, Hirst, F. Goode, Isaac, &c. All preliminaries having been duly observed, ceremony of initiation was rehearsed by the W.M. in a manner which showed marked improvement, Bro. Huggins was the candidate. The same candidate proved his efficiency and was entrusted. Lodge was advanced, and the ceremony of passing was rehearsed by the W.M. Bro. Pearcy worked the second section of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. Lodge was closed in the second degree, and Bro. Pearcy worked the fourth section of the first lecture, assisted by the brethren. Bro. Hallam sen. was elected W.M. for the next meeting, after which Lodge was closed.

Eboracum Lodge, No. 1611.—The regular meeting of this Lodge was held at the Queen's Hotel, York, on Monday. Present—Bros. T. B. Whytehead W.M., T. Cooper I.P.M., J. S. Cumberland S.W., G. Balmford P.M. as J.W., J. Kay Sec., A. T. B. Turner as S.D., J. T. Seller J.D., M. Millington I.G., G. Simpson M.C., G. H. Simpson as Org., P. Pearson Tyler, P. H. Rowland P.M., J. E. Wilkinson, J. P. Husband, J. Lackenby, Hill, Leah, &c. Amongst the visitors were Bro. C. F. Matier P.M., C. Foster P.M.; Gibson, &c. A successful ballot was taken for a candidate, and Bros. Harrison, Hebblethwaite and Blackstone were raised to the sublime degree of Master Masons by the W.M., the tools being given by Bro. Turner, and the charge by Bro. Millington. The W.M. then reduced the Lodge to the first degree, and said he wished to take the earliest opportunity of thanking those brethren who had rallied round him so well on the occasion of the late American reception in York, and he especially wished to acknowledge gratefully in open Lodge the valuable services of Bro. J. S. Cumberland, without whose aid he could never have brought matters to so successful an issue as they had attained. The W.M. then presented to the Lodge, in the name of Bro. Husband, a very valuable series of photographs of the cathedrals and abbeys of England, which he said would form a really valuable collection, and was of great archæological interest. On behalf of Bro. Turner, he also presented a curious old work on religions, which had in it many points of Masonic interest, and which would be of value to the Lodge library. Cordial votes of thanks were passed to Bros. Husband and Turner for their gifts, and Bro. Husband said he had received a most gratifying letter from one of their American visitors, in which he had referred to the gratification which had been afforded them by their reception in York by the Eboracum Lodge. The W.M. requested the Secretary to make a note of the fact, and added that when he had the pleasure of meeting the Americans at the London Banquet they had, many of them, expressed to him their very great surprise and pleasure at the magnificent manner in which they had been received by the Knight Templar Preceptory and the brethren of the Eboracum Lodge, and had said that, in the whole of their pilgrimage experiences, the day at York would stand out prominently as one of especial memory. The W.M. then proposed as a joining member Bro. R. W. Hollon P.M. 236 and P.G. Treasurer for N. and E. Yorkshire, at the same time saying that he had great pleasure in performing this office, as Bro. Hollon had shown, since the formation of the Lodge, a sincere desire for its welfare, and had, on more than one occasion, presented valuable Masonic engravings. The name of a candidate for Freemasonry was then proposed, and the Lodge was closed in ancient form. The brethren afterwards met at refreshment, and a few of the leading toasts were duly honoured. The loving cup was passed round the table, and Prosperity to the Eboracum Lodge was drunk with enthusiasm, the W.M. reminding the brethren that they had just passed the second anniversary of their consecration, and had witnessed a success which at that date they little dreamed of. In replying to The Visitors, Bro. C. F Matier congratulated the Lodge upon the high reputation which it had already gained, both for charity and hospitality, and also upon the perfection of its working.

Unity Lodge, No. 1637.—This Lodge held its regular meeting on Saturday, the 10th August, at the De Burgh Hotel, West Drayton. The business comprised the election of Master for the ensuing year, the result proving in favour of Bro. W. Stephens. Bro. Woodward was re-elected Treasurer.

We are pleased to notice that the Freemasons' Repository of Providence, R.I., has almost completed its Seventh Volume. It records this interesting fact in the following words:—

Two more numbers will close the present volume of the Repository. Will our friends and patrons, who have not as yet sent in the amount of their subscriptions, take notice of the fact, and let us hear from them at as early a date as convenient? The amount of a single subscription seems but trifling, the aggregate of these sums, however, is quite large, and its receipt would be most acceptable and helpful. The subscribers to this magazine are a noble band of Brethren; many of them have stood by the Repository from the date of its establishment, and we are sure that they will respond to our present appeal. Give us a good subscription list and prompt payment, Brethren, and we will do our best to keep the Repository up to high water mark.

We add our best wishes for the future prosperity of the Repository, which is ably conducted by Brother Henry W. Rugg.

JAMAICA.

Phœnix Lodge, No. 914, Port Royal, Jamaica.—In our issue of 1st June, we reported that the district Grand Master of East Jamaica had issued instructions that a fresh election for Master must take place in June. Bro G. P. Myers, having then served twelve months, an election took place in June, when he was duly elected. The installation meeting of this Lodge was held on 4th July, when the following Officers presided:—Wor. L. C. Hollar Master, Bros. G. P. Myers S.W., John Hall J.W., J. S. Campbell Sec., R. Thompson Treasurer, W. J. J. Rutherford S.D., G. Sexton J.D., J. Allen I.G., F. Holme Tyler. Bro. G. P. Myers, Master elect, was then installed as Master for the ensuing year, and he then invested the following Officers:—Bros. Dr. J. Tyndall R.N. S.W., W. B. Hanna J.W., G. Baylis Sec., J. S. Campbell Treasurer, H. Campbell S.D., J. Gibson J.D., H. Barned I.G., F. W. Hollar Tyler. The following P.M.'s were present, and a goodly number of visiting brethren of the Sister Lodges:—Wor. J. Cole Hollar I.P.M. as Installing Officer, assisted by Wor. David Barned, J. Alvanya, Henry Barned, and B. M. Diaz. On account of the able and pleasing manner in which the duties of the past year had been conducted by Wor. L. Cole Hollar, it was proposed and carried unanimously, "That a testimonial in the shape of a P.M.'s jewel be presented to the Immediate Past Master, and a committee was appointed to prepare an address to be presented, accompanied by the jewel." Other business was then transacted. The brethren and friends retired to a well spread banquet, where ample justice was done, and the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and heartily responded to, especially the toast on behalf of our District Grand Master of East Jamaica, the Right Wor. Hon. Dr. Hamilton, who was prevented from attendance by an unforeseen occurrence. This being the only Lodge in the town of Port Royal, and being especially for the use of the Navy and Army, was well attended by brethren of those Services.

THE

A WEEKLY RECORD OF MASONIC INTELLIGENCE.

SANCTIONED BY THE GRAND LODGE OF ENGLAND.

VOL. VIII.—No. 191. SATURDAY, 24th AUGUST 1878. [PRICE THREEPENCE. Registered at the G.P.O. as a Newspaper.

TAKING THE BALLOT.

ONE of the most important requirements of Freemasonry is, that every candidate for its mysteries shall be, so to speak, unanimously received by the members of the Lodge in which it is proposed he shall be initiated. The importance attached to this regulation may be inferred from the Constitutions of the Grand Lodge, which lay it down that "no person can be made a Mason in, or admitted a member of a lodge, if, on the ballot, three black balls appear against him." Even this rule is, in many instances made more stringent still by the Bye-laws of the Lodge stipulating that two, and not unfrequently even one negative, shall reject a candidate. The necessity for so much caution no one can question, neither that too much care can be exercised by the Master of a Lodge in seeing the ballot carefully and properly taken when required. The very fact of the ballot being made use of implies that some amount of secrecy as to the voting of individual members is desirable, and the maintenance of this secrecy, when unfortunately it is found necessary to reject a candidate, is one of the most difficult parts of a Master's duty. We are of opinion that the rejection of a proposed candidate should never be put off until the ballot, but that any brother opposing should at once see the proposer, or if that be inconvenient, should write either to him or the Master of the Lodge, specifying his objections, and asking for their consideration. Should an explanation be given, he will doubtless give way, but if not, it is better to withdraw the nomination than run the risk of an unfavourable ballot, which is often looked upon as a stain on a man's character likely to hang to him for a considerable time. Again, in many cases the proposer and seconder take the rejection of their proposition as a personal insult, and often speak to members who they imagine have opposed them in terms which, on consideration, they are anxious to withdraw. If the secrecy of the ballot was maintained in its integrity very little of this could occur. In many cases the means adopted for ascertaining the opinion of the members is for one of the Deacons to take the ballot box round that each may record his vote. This we consider a most objectionable mode of proceeding, for, if the brother who carries the box cares, either from curiosity or design, to know how each has voted, there are several ways by which he can accomplish his desire. We think it is quite unnecessary for us to detail the methods which might be pursued with this object in view, as we know we are far from being singular in noticing its occurrence. In our opinion the ballot box should be placed either on one of the pedestals or on the Secretary's table, and each brother should be required to go to the box to record his vote. The carrying out of this arrangement might lead to some confusion at first, but in a short time it would be carried out as easily as is a division in the House of Commons. This mode would also relieve the Deacon, or whoever carries the box from the suspicion which, on occasions of unfavourable ballot often attaches to him, of having given a list of the negative voters; for, whether he may have done so or not, he generally has the credit of having obtained a knowledge of the dissentients, and of having given their names to the parties who consider themselves aggrieved. It seems certain that the makers of ballot boxes, as in the case of many other articles, are ignorant of the requirements or uses of their wares, otherwise we should think they would adopt some better arrangement. We lately witnessed an occurrence, the details of which may be of service in support of our argument that the Ballot-box should be stationary. On this occasion the box used was one of the most approved form, and altogether a good looking piece of Lodge furniture; it had one drawer for reception of the balls; this was divided by a small partition into two divisions, one for the favourable, another for the unfavourable votes; the bottom and division of this drawer were covered with baize, but the ends were not; therefore, by holding the box slightly on the slant, a negative ball (which was required to be placed to the right) would have fallen against the bare wood at the end, and consequently have sounded loudly, while an affirmative one from the same cause would fall against the cloth covered division and would not make so loud a sound as the other. We do not for one moment think that the Brother who took the box round on this occasion had any idea that he was allowing this exposure of the voting to occur, especially as the candidate was so favourably known as to leave no doubt as to his reception, still one or two of the brethren present noticed that the position of the box could have been made use of in obtaining a knowledge of the voting, and did not fail to express their opinion on the subject. Our Grand Secretary, and most of the brethren who have lately performed the ceremony of consecration have never failed to point out the importance of admitting only good men to our Lodges, and in the furtherance of this object, have urged brethren to make strict inquiry into the character of all proposed for initiation. The ballot is the one sure way we have of expressing our opinion after such inquiries, and on that account should be jealously guarded against any abuse which might arise to rob it of its power.

MASONIC PORTRAITS. (No. 61.)

A GRAND SUPERINTENDENT.

For he is gracious . . . . .
He hath a tear for pity, and a hand
Open as day for melting charity.

BUT little is needed in the way of introduction in the case of the brother whose portrait we present to our readers this week. It is a simple truism that there are Masons and Masons. There are those who think that when they take a place in our ranks they are conferring honour upon the Craft. They give the widest and most liberal interpretation possible to the rule which requires them not to make any undue sacrifices in the cause of Freemasonry such as may be detrimental to their own interests. They consider this gives them the utmost latitude in attending or not attending the duties of the Lodge. They are present occasionally, when perhaps they can find no other business to occupy their leisure time, and when they do so, they manage to let it be understood that the sacrifice of time and trouble under the circumstances is very considerable. Others again are very ambitious of high office, and have no objection to rise through the subordinate grades so as to qualify for the chair of the Lodge, provided they are not called upon to interest themselves to any serious extent in the duties and responsibilities they incur. Masonry, in the estimation of these, is a kind of amusement which it may be worth while to indulge in, provided only the indulgence involves no additional trouble. These are holiday Masons, of whom unhappily we have many in the ranks, and whose number it were very desirable in the true interests of the Craft should be reduced. On the other hand, there are those who join our Fraternity with the full intention of doing to their utmost ability whatsoever may be required of them. If they are invited to take office, be it never so humble, they do so with a determination to leave no stone unturned in order to make themselves as perfect as possible in their duties. They would not feel justified in aspiring to a higher and more responsible position in the Lodge until they were well satisfied of their competency to fulfil the inferior. This view they take because, instead of regarding themselves as ornaments to the Craft, they hold that a great distinction was conferred upon them when they were received into the Society, and they are resolved to show they were fully worthy of such distinction. To this class belongs the excellent Brother whom, for reasons which will be noted hereafter, we have designated "A Grand Superintendent." To have expected that he would range himself in any other class than that of the earnest Craftsman, would have been to render him a serious injustice. He is one who, in all his undertakings, has laboured assiduously and earnestly, and in this respect he may be said to have followed the example of the Great Duke of Wellington, whose maxim through life was that every one should do his duty. Others might adventure themselves in difficult undertakings to win glory and the applause of nations, but, in the opinion of that illustrious soldier, the only worthy guide for men to follow was "Duty." This appears to have been the case with our distinguished brother. He has laboured zealously and always to fulfil his duty, and the result is that he has won for himself a substantial position in all the avocations he has followed. He is the Chairman of one of our greatest and most important Railway Companies, of a Telegraph Company, and of the Great Eastern Steam Ship, and is a director of the Anglo-American Telegraph Company. Twelve years since a baronetcy was conferred upon him for his distinguished services in connection with the Atlantic Telegraph Company. During his absence from England, when engaged in laying the Atlantic Cable of 1865, he was chosen Member of Parliament for the borough of Cricklade, and has been re-elected at the different elections which have been held since that year. He is not a frequent speaker in the Commons, but there are few, if any, members who are more competent to deal with those questions which concern directly our enormous Railway and Telegraph interests. He is, likewise, or was, one of the Trades Union Commissioners, and is Deputy Lieutenant of the County in which he resides. That he has successfully filled the important positions we have enumerated is beyond question, and equally so that in order to have so filled them he must possess mental and business powers of no ordinary calibre. With this experience to guide them, our readers will conclude as a matter of course that his Masonic career is in all respects as distinguished, and there is no doubt the conclusion is a just one. Our worthy brother was initiated in the month of February 1850 in the St. George's Lodge, No. 112, Exeter. In 1853 he was chosen to fill the chair of the Royal Sussex Lodge of Emulation, No. 355, Swindon, of which, in the meantime, he had become a joining member. During his term of office he initiated, passed, and raised twenty-eight candidates. Such indeed was the general estimation in which he was held, not only in his Province, but throughout the Craft generally, that during this same year he was appointed Deputy Prov. G. Master of Wiltshire, and a member of the Board of General Purposes, while in 1854 the further honour was conferred upon him of re-electing him Master of the Royal Sussex. He was subsequently chosen Master of the Lansdowne Lodge of Unity, No. 626, Calne, of the Britannic, No. 33, and of the Middlesex Lodge, No. 143, and during these three Masterships, and his second of No. 355, he initiated, passed, and raised as many as thirty-nine candidates, the total of those he has introduced to one or other of the degrees being no less than eighty. In 1858, he was not only elected Worshipful Master of the Methuen Lodge, No. 631, Swindon, but his Provincial services were recognised in Grand Lodge by his appointment to the office of Grand Sword Bearer. In 1868 he was appointed by the late Earl of Zetland to be the Provincial Grand Master of Berks and Bucks, and prior to his quitting the Province of Wilts, with which he had been prominently connected for so many years, he was entertained at a banquet at Chippenham, at which Lord Methuen, the Prov. G. Master, presided. On this occasion he was presented with his full regalia as Prov. G. Master, his Wilts brethren having subscribed amongst them about £100 for that purpose. The exalted office to which he was then appointed has been held by him for ten years. His administration of the Province has been attended with results most satisfactory to the interests of the Craft. The number of Lodges and members has been doubled, and whereas, previous to his appointment to the post nothing was done by the Province as such towards any of our great central Charities, it now takes a leading part in contributing to the needs of these Institutions. This is due to his exertions entirely, for almost his first act was to take measures for organising a scheme for raising contributions, and during his tenure of office, Berks and Bucks, both as a Province and by the impetus given to private subscription, has figured liberally and most regularly at our Charitable Festivals.

Such have been the services of our hero in Craft Masonry, but they are far from being the sum of his achievements. Is he not Grand Superintendent of Royal Arch Masonry in his own Province? and does he not figure in the list of those distinguished brethren who have taken the Mark, Templar, and High Degrees? But to give particulars. In 1851, he was advanced to the Mark Degree, in the Bon Accord Lodge, in the Metropolis, and subsequently held various offices. The same year he was exalted to the Royal Arch Degree, in St. George's Chapter, No. 112, Exeter, and received the Knight Templar Degree in the Rougemont or Union Encampment, No. 39, Exeter. In 1852 he took the Rose Croix and Ne Plus Ultra degrees in Exeter, and that of G.E.K.K., 30° and intermediate degrees in London. In 1856 he was installed First Principal in Moriah Chapter, No. 9, and during his tenure of office exalted three candidates, while as Z. of the Wiltshire, No. 355, he exalted not less than ten candidates. In 1858 he was appointed Grand Sword Bearer in Grand Chapter, holding this post of distinction in the Arch concurrently with the same office in Grand Lodge or Craft Masonry. In 1861, he was elected First Principal of the Britannic Chapter, No. 33, and lastly, and by way of putting the Keystone to the Arch of his reputation and the distinctions he had attained, he was, in 1875, installed as Grand Superintendent of the Provincial Grand Chapter of Berks and Bucks. It should further be mentioned that he has personally conducted the ceremony of consecration in the case of the following Lodges, namely, Methuen Lodge, No. 631, formerly of Swindon, but since migrated to Taplow, Bucks; Canonbury Lodge, No. 657, London; Wiltshire Lodge of Fidelity, No. 663, Devizes; and Lodge of Concord, No. 632, Trowbridge. As regards the part he has taken and the interest he has exhibited in connection with our Institutions, it is necessary we should point out that in 1852 he served on the Select Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and that in 1855 he served on the Committee of the Institution for Girls. He is a Life Governor of these Schools, and has served one Stewardship for each of them; while as regards the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, he is a Vice-President, and took the chair at one of its Festivals. Thus in all respects he has fulfilled his duties scrupulously and conscientiously. The Provincial interests entrusted to his care and superintendence have been well watched over and promoted. As a Lodge officer, he has done his work admirably, and in a manner which has secured him the love and approbation of all who have been associated or brought into contact with him. As a Mason pure and simple, he has handsomely fulfilled the obligations he contracted during the ordeal of initiation; he has extended the right hand of fellowship to his brethren, and has freely bestowed that assistance which the necessitous of our Order or their orphan children have stood in need. He has taken a prominent part in the government of two of our three Institutions, while, if we view him in his Parliamentary and business capacity, we see him still devoting all his experience and the powers of his able mind to carefully superintend and guide the interests of important railway and other companies. Rightly under these circumstances have we named him A Grand Superintendent, for has he not discharged that duty? is he not now discharging it, both in his civil and Masonic capacities? Shall anything be said of his private worth? No; let the curious in these matters visit any of the Lodges in his present or former Province, and they will learn immediately what we might, yet do not consider it expedient to say of him in the columns of a public journal. All we need do is give utterance to a wish—and we do so in all sincerity—May the day be very far distant indeed when his place in Parliament, in public or private life, and in Masonry, shall know him no more!

MASONRY A UNIVERSAL RELIGION.

BY L. D. LEWELLING.

"Better for us, perhaps, it might appear,
Were there all harmony, all virtue here;
That never air nor ocean felt the wind,
That never passions discomposed the mind.
But all subsists by elemental strife,
And passions are the elements of life."

The natural tendency of the race is toward perfection, and from Adam till now it has continually, though it may be slowly, progressed. When Adam was placed in the garden he was innocent; and I do no violence to his feelings if I say he lacked the knowledge to be mean. He was innocent, but he was not strong. He was innocent, but he lacked the knowledge which is power. He was a babe in the great world; and the embodiment of innocence to-day is the sleeping babe in its cradle; but how much greater is man.

I tell you there is nothing, among all God's creatures, to equal the dignity of manhood. Man, with a mind capable of subduing earth; man, who can grasp the lightning and make it do his bidding; man, whose soul is a spark of divinity, and whose destiny is high as heaven, and vast as eternity; and when a man carries about in his bosom a great, warm heart, throbbing with love for wife and children, and home and fellow-men; and when he struggles on and on through the mystery of pain and sorrow for the development of his race, he is as much superior to the Adam of his race as a suit of broadcloth is superior to an apron of fig leaves.

What then? Only this: the human race has been a developing race. The law of development was implanted in the nature of the first Adam, and it impelled him to pluck the first fruit from the tree of knowledge; and ever since he has been going on through strife and pain toward ultimate perfection. I do not believe the world is growing worse every day; and when a man tells me it is, I set it down that he is a sour and crusty cynic, and, ten to one, an old bachelor.

I do not believe the race is going to the bad. We have had our dark ages, our ages of persecution and intolerance; but then men had no charity for different views, and so they bound men on the rack, and delivered them over to exquisite torture. Hundreds of men were murdered for refusing to believe that portions of bread and wine, made by the bakers and brewers of London, were the real body and blood of Christ. Men and women were bound to stakes by chains, fagots of wood piled high around them and touched with fire, and then, as they writhed in anguish, and as the flames rose higher, and the flesh crisped, and the tendons cracked, men stood back and viewed the scene with infinite satisfaction.

The wing of an angel was shown, which was said to have brought over from Jerusalem the point of the spear which pierced the body of Jesus, and men were punished who refused to believe the story.

A queer notion arose, and it is believed to-day, that it was wrong to eat meat on certain days; and four men, who had eaten a goose, were actually hung for the enormity of the crime!

Well, all that was what people call too much of a good thing! It was the excess, the over-doing, the excrescence of Christianity. Did it ever occur to you that the only sins of men are their extremes—their excesses?

There is no unnecessary machinery in man. His original faculties are all for a purpose, and good. Destroy a single faculty of a man's brain, and you destroy the equipoise; develop a single faculty to excess, and you also destroy the equipoise.

Add a single mountain on one side of the nicely poised earth, and away the world would go shrieking through the universe, like Phaeton in the chariot of the sun-god. Take away a single mountain from California or Vermont, and the result would be the same.

Develop a single faculty of man's brain to excess, and it carries him away to destruction. Take away the animal inclinations from man, says Henry Ward Beecher, and he is like an organ without a bellows. How appropriate the Masonic symbol, the compass, which circumscribes and keep the passions within due bounds. Inside the mystic circle all is well, but when one faculty breaks the boundary line the harmony is destroyed.

A judge once sentenced a murderer as follows: "Samuel N. Poston: This is is the saddest era of my life. Our parents and their children knew each other. We grew up together; went to the same school; played upon hill and in valley the same innocent games in boyhood. Years have passed since then; our roads in life have diverged. You now stand convicted of a great, a capital offence; and I, as the minister of the law, have imposed upon me the painful duty of passing upon you the sentence of death. I would that this cup might pass from me, but I cannot shrink from the official requirement. It is, therefore, the order of the court that you be taken within one mile of the court-house, there to be hanged by the neck until you are dead, and may the Lord have mercy on your soul."

It was an affecting scene. The judge was in tears; a groan ran through the assembly. The prisoner, trembling like an aspen leaf, grasped a chair for support, and who shall depict the intense agony that wrung his heart as he remembered the innocence of his boyish days? Why had he fallen? Ask the sturdy oak, whose top is overgrown, why it writhes and falls 'neath the driving tempest! Ask Peter why he cursed the Saviour of the world, and declared, "I know him not!"

Many a drunkard, excepting the one deformity of character, is an exemplary and noble man, but he is a victim to the excessive development of a group of faculties. I mean to offer no apology for drunkenness, but, on the contrary, I stand before you to-day to condemn it, as blasting and imbruting to man's nature; yet, for all that, a drunkard is a man. The great Charles Dickens once wrote, "In the human heart, away up a great many pairs of stairs, covered with the dust and cobwebs of years, was a door, and on that door was written WOMAN;" and so with the drunkard, there is a door upon which is written MAN.

I once knew a man whose genial, social nature was a perpetual gleam of sunshine in his household, and among his friends. Men loved and honored him, and yet he had a darling vice; his free, convivial nature, which won him hosts of admiring friends, was at the same time his deadliest enemy. He did not drink to drown sorrow; no green-eyed monster sat upon his hearth-stone—he knew no trouble there; but he loved company and mirth and wine, and when once he had felt their exhilarating influence his passion knew no bounds. Time wore on; his eyes reddened, and weakened, and watered. Once, twice, many times, he resolved to leave off his intemperate habits. What of that? good resolutions cast aside are common-place objects on the road to eternal death; and so he drank again. On one occasion, recovering from a week's debauch, his aged mother called him to her, and bade him promise once more, and in deeper earnest. The large-hearted man fell upon his knees, and as the great scalding tears found a channel for their flow, he promised in the witness of his God that he would reform. Alas! he had struggled up to this height but to fall again; each time turning with greater loathing from his debaucheries; each time repentant and full of self-condemnation, but still powerless to resist the sparkling temptation, when it gave its colour in the cup. In his sober moments the man was a model for Christians, ever attentive to the cry of suffering humanity; the sick and afflicted found relief by his presence, and the poor rose and called him blessed. And now, when he stands before the pearl gates, with many who have named the name of the Lord, shall it not also be said of him, "Inasmuch as he did it unto the least of these, he did it unto me?" Ah! my friends, there is a close alliance between the man of God and the man of sin. The very noblest attributes of our natures, possessed in excess, stamp us with condemnation. The passion which gives us courage to defend the truth against error is the same that ostracises a brother for his honest opinion. The spirit of fearless independence which marks the good leaders of men is the same that actuates the bold outlaw and prompts the fearless murderer. Alas! for man's excesses! Alas! for human offences against law and order and charity and life.

But if it must needs be that offences come—if the "Great Plan" required that some man should become a Judas, and some man a Pilate; that some man should smite and spit upon the Son of God, and that another should thrust the spear into his side—if the plan required the sacrifice of the life of Jesus, and that men should thus become the wicked instruments to further the ends of Divinity—who shall say that the whole plan for the ultimate development of the race did not permit this crime and that excess—this ism and that ology—that their clashing interests might goad the race to superior attainments. "A hundred pieces of unshaped stone, roughly jostled in a bay, became beautified and polished marbles;" and so the jostlings of man against man—his adversity, his prosperity, his mystery of pain and sorrow—has been his moral discipline, under which he has grown stronger, and greater, and grander. If it must needs be that offences come, it remains for you and for me to struggle on through their purifying influences—through the sad results of men's excesses—profiting by the experience of the race; profiting by the history of individual lives, subduing our passions, developing our manhood; trusting and believing that the persecutions and intolerance of the past have been the bitter medicines of common good.

But the patient is convalescent now, and I stand here to-day as one of the doctors, to declare that we don't need any more of that kind of medicine. We don't need any more intolerant pills; we don't need any more inquisitions; we don't need any more thumb-screws, and chains, and fagots, and we don't need any more doctors of the old school, who think all these appliances are necessary. But what we do need is charity—charity for men with different opinions—charity in word and deed—charity which vaunteth not itself, and is not puffed up—charity which suffereth long, and is kind. This is the pure philosophy of Masonry; this is the corner-stone of religion—the Christ in man—the stone which the builders of faiths have too often rejected.

And now, brethren, to conclude: I have tried to illustrate that there is a principle in man which urges him to perfection; that in all progress old things must pass away, and give place to new; that the friction incident to such change is the great instrument of man's development; that this friction, unrestrained, may become excessive, and result in violence and crime; that man, as a moral agent, is in the fullest sense, responsible for his excesses; but that, seen as God sees, vice and crime, which are the excesses of men, are only offshoots from the direct line of human progress, which stretches from the cradle of the race far into the unborn future. I conclude, therefore, that it is the duty of all men, and especially of Masons, for the sake of human progress, for the sake of human happiness and ultimate human perfection, to subdue their passions; to walk uprightly in their several stations before God and man; to square their actions by the square of truth and virtue; and, above all, to practise charity toward all men, while all are travelling together upon the level of time to that undiscovered country, from whose bourne no traveller returns.

* From Engraved Lists (Grand Lodge).

It will be seen that the No. 5 (Crown) of 1739 becomes No. 3 in the list of the following year, also that the dates of Constitution of Nos. 4, 6, 7, 11, and 12 on the 1739 list, sustain a remarkable variation in the list for 1740: thus—

(1) No. 4 (1739)	has its	Seniority	altered	from	17th Jan. 1722	to	17th Jan. 1721.
(2) No. 6	"	"	"	"	19th Jan. 1722	to	19th Jan. 1721.
(2) No. 7	"	"	"	"	28th Jan. 1722	to	28th Jan. 1721.
(2) No. 11	"	"	"	"	27th Feb. 172¾	to	27th Feb. 1722.
(2) No. 12	"	"	"	"	March 172¾	to	1722.

(1) No date is assigned this Lodge in Pine's List of 1729. In the Engraved Lists for 1734, 1736, and 1738, it appears as in 1739; but in the Book of Constitutions for 1738 (See § 6) it is placed at 17th Jan. 172¾, therefore the alteration in 1740 is almost certainly correct.

(2) The dates given to these Lodges in the Engraved Lists for 1729, 1734, 1736, and 1738 agree with those given in the List for 1739; also, and this is of chief importance, with the dates assigned by Dr. Anderson in the Constitutions for 1738; consequently, the alterations made in 1740, and which appear in the Calendar of current date (1878) is probably incorrect.

(3) This Lodge appears, without date, in the Engraved Lists for 1734, 1736, 1738, and 1739; but is placed at March 1723, both in Pine's List 1729, and in the Constitutions 1738. Therefore, the alteration in 1740 (continued until this day) is probably incorrect.

NOTE.—One of the periodical closing up of numbers occurred in 1740.

* From Engraved Lists (Grand Lodge).

The lapse of No: 3 on the 1740 list (Crown, constitd. 11th July 1721), together with the change of year, from 1722 to 1721, in the cases of Nos. 6 and 7 (1739) and from 172¾ to 1722 in the case of No. 11 (1739), has doubtless led to No. 11 (1739) being placed, at the general closing up of numbers in 1756, in what was apparently its true position, under the Regulation of 27th December 1727 (see p 405, note 4); it does not, however, account for No. 10 (1739) being placed above No. 9 (1739); but it is possible that No. 9 (1739) having also become No. 9 at the general re-numbering of 1740, may have elected to remain at its then existing number, instead of accepting a higher precedency, when the vacancies above it were closed up in 1756?

The fact of No. 5 (1739) being allowed to jump over No. 4 (1739) at the re-arrangement of numbers in 1740, may have afforded a precedent?(4)

PROVINCE OF HAMPSHIRE AND THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

TESTIMONIAL TO THE PROV. GRAND TREASURER.

THE annual Provincial Grand Lodge for Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, was held at Southampton on the 15th inst. The proceedings commenced at the Philharmonic Hall, shortly after 2.30 p.m., when the Lodge was opened by the Prov. Grand Master Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P., supported by Bros. W. Hickman D.P.G.M., Frost P.G. Treas., Rev. W. Scott P.G. Chaplain, J. E. Le Feuvre P.G. Secretary, Wyatt P.P.G.W., Booth P.P.G.W., Hare P.P.G.R., Furber P.P.G.W., and several other Past and Present Prov. Officers; Bros. H. M. Emanuel, and G. S. Lancaster officiating respectively as S. and J.G. Wardens, in the absence of the brethren occupying those positions this year.

The gathering was one of the largest for some years, upwards of 200 members being present. Southampton was, as a matter of course, largely represented, the Mayor (Bro. A. L. MacCalmont), and Bro. F. H. MacCalmont being among those who attended. The ordinary routine business of the Province having been transacted, the Prov. G. Treasurer's accounts were received and passed. The statement submitted by the auditors showed a balance in hand of £256 9s 1d, and the sum of £500 invested. On the motion of Bro. Hare (Southampton), seconded by Bro. Booth (Southampton), Bro. M. E. Frost was unanimously re-elected P.G. Treas. for the ensuing year.

Among other matters which engaged the attention of the Provincial Grand Lodge was the consideration of cases brought forward by the Board of Benevolence of the Province. Several annual votes were made as usual, and a sum of £30 was voted to the widow of a deceased member (the late Dr. Diver), she being entirely incapacitated, owing to a severe railway accident, since her husband's death, and having four young children dependent upon her. The Provincial Grand Master then appointed his Officers for the ensuing year as follows:—Bros. W. Hickman 130 Southampton D.P.G.M.,

Grand Master said he had a very pleasing duty to perform, and which was a source of considerable satisfaction to him personally. For 27 years their Provincial Grand Treasurer had been a Mason, and had rendered most valuable assistance to Freemasonry (Applause), but more particularly in connection with that Provincial Grand Lodge; and he wished on this occasion to express their thanks to him. In his own Lodges, where he was so well known, Bro. Frost had always taken the warmest interest in the Craft—having served as W.M. of No. 487 twice, and of No. 1069 twice, and his brethren now desired to express their thanks and gratitude to him. They had taken advantage of this large assemblage to present to him a testimonial. There was something very gratifying in recognising the claims of one who had rendered such able services for many years, and those who, in his youth, had known and esteemed Bro. Frost, would take great pleasure in finding that his services had been acknowledged in some small measure that day. He asked his acceptance of the testimonial in the spirit in which it was offered by his Masonic brethren, as a small token of the warm sympathy and affection felt towards him. (Applause.) Bro. Beach then handed Bro. Frost the testimonial, which consisted of a suite of articles for the library table, and a purse containing 200 sovereigns. Bro. Frost, in acknowledgment, said he was almost incapable of adequately expressing his feelings. He felt, however, that it was a proof that the Provincial Grand Lodge had not yet lost all its confidence in him. He accepted it in the spirit in which it was offered, and could only thank the R.W. Prov. G.M. and the brethren generally for having made him so handsome a present. It should be added that the testimonial was subscribed to by upwards of 200 of the brethren, including the P.G.M. and the principal Officers of the Province. The chairman of the Committee was Bro. G. Rake P.J.G.W., Treasurer, Bro. G. J. Lancaster P.P.G.R., Secretary, Bros. E. G. Holbrook P.P.G.R., J. R. Hayman Secretary 257, and J. Astridge P.P.G.W. The P.G. Lodge having been closed, a banquet took place at the Victoria Skating Rink, about 150 being present. The P.G.M. presided, and the usual toasts were duly honoured. In giving that of "The Queen and the Craft," the Prov. Grand Master stated he knew that this toast would meet with all the loyalty that was due to it. He was going by the train that week, and he met some one who said to him what a very loyal town Southampton appeared. This, he believed, only showed a very good testimony to the favourable impressions which were made upon the spectators at the recent visit of the Prince of Wales to this town. The Chairman then proposed "The M.W. the Grand Master of England, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, K.G., &c.," and spoke of the active part his Royal Highness had recently taken in laying the foundation stone of St. Mary's New Church; and said he was sure it had left favourable impressions on the minds of the inhabitants of the town. In France, too, the Prince of Wales had taken an active interest in the Paris Exhibition, and had left a gratifying impression upon their French neighbours; and he believed he had done much to cement the bonds of union between this country and France, in doing which he had benefited humanity in general. They had so recently had the opportunity of evincing their feelings of loyalty—he wished it had been with Masonic honours—that he would ask them to drink with all heartiness the health of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. The Chairman, in proposing "The Pro M.W.G.M. of England, the Earl of Carnarvon, the R.W. Deputy Grand Master the Earl of Skelmersdale, and the Officers and Past Officers of the Grand Lodge," said they were always ready to come forward and give all the assistance to Freemasonry in their power. The Earl of Carnarvon especially took a most active interest in promoting Masonry when the Prince of Wales was not present, and they were one and all, notwithstanding the onerous duties that devolved on some of them, ever ready to carry out the obligations they had undertaken faithfully and agreeably to all true Masons. The Earl of Skelmersdale, who had charge of a district three times the size of this town, always did his utmost to devote his best energies to the Order, and to carry out any duties entrusted to him. Bro. Hickman, D.P.G.M., in proposing the R.W. the Provincial G.M. of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, said they were all aware of the very high and distinguished manner in which Bro. W. W. B. Beach carried out the duties of his office as Provincial Grand Master. He was always ready and willing to place his time at the disposal of the several Lodges in the Province, and fulfil the duties appertaining to his office; and they all knew that when he was there, it was a source of great satisfaction to the brethren to witness the manner in which he carried out those duties. The kind and genial manner which was so intimately bound up with him, endeared him to all Masons, and they one and all could testify to the great esteem in which he was held throughout the country. Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P., in responding, said he thanked them sincerely for the very kind manner in which they had received the mention of his name. It always gave him the very greatest pleasure to come amongst them, and to preside over them on all occasions when he possibly could. Ever since he had the honour to preside over them, he had received invaluable assistance from his Officers, which made his (the speaker's) duties somewhat light, but still some of the duties he had to perform were difficult. He had, however, to congratulate them on the progress Freemasonry was making in the province, and he hoped it would continue to improve as time rolled on. The Chairman, in proposing the W. the D.P.G.M. of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight, highly eulogised the character of Bro. Hickman, who, he said, carried out the duties of his Office with great efficiency, and who was esteemed not only in Southampton, but through the length and breadth of this province. He had taken a great interest in the Masonic Charities, and an active part in the Grand Lodge of England. He hoped they would drink his health with every sentiment of affection and enthusiasm. Bro. Hickman, in reply, thanked his Right Wor. Bro. for the distinguished honour he had conferred upon him. He congratulated him upon the progress of Masonry during the nine years since he took office, and he sincerely hoped that the future might be still more prosperous than the past. The remaining toasts were the Visitors, the Wardens and Officers of Prov. Grand Lodge, and the Past Wardens and Past Officers of Prov. G. Lodge, the W.M.'s, Officers, and Brethren of the Lodges in the Province, and the Masonic Charities, all of which were duly honoured, and the company separated about eight o'clock. The banquet was served in capital style by Bro. Dartnall, of the High-street, whose catering as usual, gave the highest satisfaction. The Rink Band, under the direction of Mr. J. D. Crook, performed a capital selection of music at intervals during the dinner.—Portsmouth Times, and Southampton Times.

THE LATE R.W. R. J. BAGSHAW, J.P., D.L.

We extract the following from the Essex Standard:—

The death of this gentleman, which occurred at his town residence, 42 Gloucester-square, on 14th inst., has caused very general regret throughout the county, with which he has been so long and usefully associated. His family seat was Banksea House, Dovercourt, but for the last few years, the delicate state of his health rendering medical aid frequently necessary, he has spent his time chiefly in London, but never lost his interest in Essex affairs, or relaxed attention to the local duties devolving on him as an Essex gentleman. It was but a few weeks since he visited Harwich in relation to some property matters, and although he was then suffering from illness his so early death was not apprehended. The deceased gentleman, who was advanced in life, having been born in 1804, was son of the late Mr. John Bagshaw, of Harwich, and spent many of his early years in the East Indies. He was an extensive owner of property in the neighbourhood of Harwich, a large proportion of what is known as Dovercourt New Town belonged to him; and, as we have said, until the last few years he resided in the mansion of the estate. Mr. Bagshaw was a Deputy-Lieutenant of Essex, a Magistrate of the County, and also of the Borough of Harwich; and in the performance of his duties in a magisterial capacity, he was, as long as his health permitted, diligent and active. He was a member of the Tendring Hundred Bench, and was rarely found absent on any occasion of importance from the Court of Quarter Sessions, properly paying especial heed to the interests of East Essex and Harwich, with which by property he was more immediately identified. As High Sheriff of the County in 1873-4, the duties of Returning Officer devolved on him at the last general election, and Conservatives and Liberals alike awarded to him the honourable meed of perfect impartiality in the discharge of the difficult office he held.

In his political opinions, the deceased gentleman was a Liberal, and four times contested Harwich in that interest; twice—in 1847 and again in 1857—successfuly, and twice he was defeated—in 1841 and 1852. But, a high minded and honourable gentleman, discharging worthily all his social and civil duties, his political convictions in nothing interfered with the cordiality of his personal relations with those to whom he was opposed on party grounds. Mr. Bagshaw was for a long number of years a most earnest and influential member of the Masonic order, and in that capacity was widely known and universally respected. For twenty-three years he has filled the office of Provincial Grand Master for Essex, in which he was installed at Chelmsford on the 17th May 1855, by Lord Yarborough, then Deputy Grand Master of England. How prosperous the Order has been under his administration in this County may be judged from the fact that since he entered on his office the number of Lodges has increased from eight to seventeen. His health has not permitted his attendance recently at meetings of the Provincial Grand Lodge, the last at which he was present being, we believe, in 1874, at the meeting held in that year in Chelmsford. He was a man of earnest religious convictions; President of some of the Local Societies for the promotion of Christian objects; was liberal in his contributions for religious and philanthropic objects, and was much respected in every relation he filled in life. He leaves a widow, but no children.

The body of the deceased was removed from his Town residence on Monday by rail as far as Colchester, whence it was conveyed in a hearse drawn by four horses from the Cups Hotel, to Dovercourt, and on Tuesday the interment took place in Dovercourt Churchyard. The funeral cortège, consisting of a hearse heavily plumed and drawn by four horses, and five mourning coaches, containing the immediate relatives, left Banksea House at one o'clock, and when near the churchyard was joined by a goodly number of Freemasons representing various Lodges in the Province over which the deceased has so worthily presided, the burial service being read by the Rev. T. O. Reay, Vicar, assisted by the Rev. Henry Bagshaw. The body was placed in a vault with that of the deceased's first wife; and at the close of the service the Freemasons deposited the customary emblems upon the coffin.

Among the Freemasons present upon the mournful occasion were Right W. Bros. R. Bolton Barton, LL.D., P.P.G.M. Western India, Joseph Burton P.G. Treas., Thos. J. Ralling P.G. Sec., E. Hennemeyer W.M. 51, W. D. B. Wheeler W.M. 276, W. S. Ling W.M. 433, J. E. Wiseman P.M. and Sec. 433, G. D. Capham W.M. 1543, G. Gard Pye P.M. 51, J. P. Sarel P.M. 276, W. O. Ward P.M. 690, &c., &c.

CHARITY STEWARDS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Those interested in our great Masonic Charities will one and all thank you for your very able article last week on the question of the supply of Charity Stewards. The remarks of our Deputy Grand Master were, in the abstract, well worthy of attention, but showed a great lack of practical working knowledge. When you say that "the bulk of the members know nothing whatever of the existence of the Institutions," I believe you are not very far from the truth. In my own brief Masonic experience, both in this country and our colonies, I early discovered that in very many Lodges the boasted charity of the Order was to be found in theory but not in practice. It is not long since you published a letter analysing the annual balance sheet of a prosperous Lodge (I think in the North of England) which showed that the extensive funds of the Lodge were almost entirely spent in feasting, and that a trifle of some £20 or so was given to the Charities. The toast of "the Masonic Charities" is usually conspicuous by its absence at Lodge gatherings. Not that drinking success to the Schools can do them any service, but the absence of the mention of the Charities at such times exhibits a want of regard for the Institutions which is much to be lamented. Nothing would be better calculated to extend a knowledge of what has been done, what is doing, and what the future demands of us in regard to our Schools and Benevolent Institution, than a system of Lodge visitation on the part of the Secretaries, or some worthy deputy on their behalf. Would it not be well spent money on the part of the three Institutions, to employ as their joint agent, a well-informed and worthy brother who should systematically visit the Lodges in the Provinces (the Secretaries themselves should be able to manage the Metropolitan Lodges), and enlist the sympathies and services of brethren as Stewards? I merely throw out the idea for consideration, but feel quite certain myself that a very happy result would inevitably follow such a step.

Every one who has had actual acquaintance with the process of "raising the wind" for any purpose, charitable or otherwise, will agree with Bro. Binckes that to do away with the Charity dinners would be a fatal error. The money gained by the process would be far more than counterbalanced by the tapering off of the number of Stewards' Lists. No one supposes for a moment that our good Stewards, who give time, labour and money on these occasions, are influenced directly by the prospect of a feed to undertake their onerous duties, but on the other hand the social character of the annual gatherings is greatly enhanced, according to English notions, by an assembly at the festive board, opportunities are afforded for mutual intercourse, and pleasant recollections are taken away to many Provincial centres, and afford matter for conversation at many an after Lodge meeting, thus conducing to influence other brethren to undertake Stewards' offices.

I trust you will pardon this rough note, written in great haste, and believe me,

Yours fraternally,

T. B. WHYTEHEAD,

W.M. Eboracum 1611.

York, 20th August 1878.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I must plead guilty to belonging to the class you, in last week's article describe as not having completed the duty of every energetic Mason. I have served one Stewardship on behalf of our Charities, and one only. Although it is some time since I acted, I have not given up all idea of exerting myself for the others, though I am afraid it will not be just yet. You make various statements as to the number of Stewards and so on, which I dare say are correct as far as they go, they certainly show that there must be a great many Masons who know what the task of acting as Steward means, and should therefore be the best men to work again, but I consider it unlikely if many of them ever will. My principal reason for not putting my name down as Steward is the same as many give in this district,—It costs too much, both in time and money. If you will allow me, I will give you a list of my expenses in connection with the office, at the same time I wish you to understand that I do not regret having gone so far; I simply do not think I ought again to incur so much expense in doing so little good, until I see my way clear; and business must improve before that will occur. I first received from the office of the Institution a package of circulars, these I had to fill up and post to the eighty-three members of my Lodge; as I got no replies, I had some circulars printed, asking if they intended to subscribe, and whether they would accompany me to the Festival. At the following Lodge meeting the sum of five guineas was voted by the Lodge, and two brethren gave a like sum. I thus had £15 15s in addition to £10 10s which I had decided to subscribe myself. Before leaving for London, I met several of the members of my Lodge, and between them, they put another five guineas on my list. I thus had thirty guineas as the result of my labours, which you must not judge of in proportion to results, as I can assure you the number of letters I wrote, and personal applications I made, was considerable, in fact I found that the additional 10s worth of stamps I bought especially for this business was exhausted long before the end of the work. The next matter I was called upon for was £2 2s for my Steward's fee, and then railway fare to London and back cost 24s 8d. Add to this the fact that my wife discovered that ladies could attend, and you will believe me when I state that I put down the expenses of that Stewardship at £8. in addition to my donation. This outlay was more than twenty-five per cent. on the amount collected by me.

Yours truly and fraternally,

A STEWARD WHO HAS SERVED ONCE.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Your efforts to promote the interests of our Charitable Institutions are unceasing, and the point you have raised in the article which appeared last week under the above heading, undoubtedly points to something which is in need of being remedied. But while I freely admit some great inducement should be held out to brethren who take upon themselves the onerous duties of the Stewardship to one or other of our Institutions, and while I fully recognise that every Craftsman should, if it be in his power, undertake these duties on behalf of each of our Charities, I consider it is far more desirable that new men, who have never charged themselves with the task of canvassing, should be led to accept such task than that the same man should be pressed into the service again and again. The figures you have given are highly interesting, but it must not be forgotten that figures may be made to prove almost anything. However, accepting the number of Stewards presently on the lists of subscribers to our three Charities, and your calculation as to the number of times they have served, and taking the 347 who have acted more than three times as having filled on an average five Stewardships, the 3,200 brethren will represent, in round figures, 6,000 Stewardships, and this at 200 Stewards per annum for each of the Charities, or 600 in all, gives the Stewards who have for the last ten years served as such. We may take it, indeed, that there are at present borne on the lists of the subscribers those who have acted in this particular during the last fifteen years, as it is only of late that so many as 200 have done duty at our Festivals. Then it is quite possible, I may almost say quite certain, there are many others who have acted as Stewards and paid their fees, but only contributed one or two guineas as their own personal subscription, except in the case of those who have thus contributed during the current year, their names would not appear in the list of annual subscribers. Taking the matter on its merits, I think we should try and get as many brethren to come forward and fulfil what cannot be other than a trying task rather than press those who have fulfilled it once or twice to go through the ordeal again and again.

As to Charity dinners being a mistake, that is an open question; but judging from the nature of the general practice, I should say those in favour of the dinners far outnumber those who are against them. At all events, there is hardly a Charitable Institution in the United Kingdom among those chiefly dependent for support on voluntary subscriptions which does not hold its annual festival, or, in other words, which does not think that the likeliest way to obtain a full subscription is for the Stewards and their friends to have a good dinner as a preparative for the more serious business of the day. These dinners may be regarded as a kind of tonic. They bring the guests into a genial, if not always a generous frame of mind, and the purse strings are loosened more readily, and to a greater extent than if there were none. Our three Charity dinners cost about £1,800 per annum; and the aggregate of the three lists has been of late £30,000 net. Query—How much less would the results have been without the dinners? This is a problem which I for one should be most unwilling to undertake the solution of.

Fraternally yours,

B. G. B.

VOTING ORGANISATION.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Some little time back several influential Masons at the East-end of London, had it under consideration to establish an organization whereby the votes of the Metropolitan brethren could be satisfactorily utilised. I have, during the last few days, received an intimation that a second society for the same object is in course of formation. I took some amount of interest in the work of those engaged in the first venture, and am still in hopes of seeing some practical result. I know that a vast amount of useful information was collected as to the working of kindred association in the Provinces, and trust Bro. Charles Lacey, who I believe was the moving spirit, will not relinquish his efforts.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours faithfully,

A CONSTANT READER.

Freemasonry is an allegorical system. Every doctrine and ceremony has its mystical reference, which is not always apparent at the first blush; so that where the uninformed and weak find only mystery, the true initiate possesses food for the employment of the noblest faculties. The true Mason will not rest satisfied with mere ceremonies, which in themselves are cold and heartless, but will study to comprehend their mystical signification.

LIFE'S FRIENDSHIPS.

FROM THE "MASONIC ADVOCATE."

MUCH of the happiness of this life is gathered from its friendships. The kindly tokens of personal regard which are shown us by gentle and genial and sincere hearts, give to the soul many of its richest consolations as well as its brightest and proudest memories. Men never tire of honest friendships, for they are life's best evincements of human nature, and often they show up our own standing and characters as well.

The fact that but few are capable of sincere and constant friendship, on any basis outside of their own interests, makes the relation the more valuable when it does exist, and assures us that a true and abiding friend is a very great treasure.

Most men's fondness for you is found in the fact that they can use you for some of their sordid, selfish or personal purposes. They play with you as they do with dice, to win, and they make it their study to learn how and when and where to encompass you about. Full of subtlety and personal desires, they put on their winning ways of captivation and deception, and before you know it they have you in their web. The world is full of just such friends. To accomplish their purposes they will bear your social name, wear your favourite badge, and treat you, for awhile at least, both as a man and brother, but just as soon as their ends are subserved, or they find they can make other and better arrangements, they consign you to the regions of indifference and contempt—

"The melancholy victim of deceitful sin."

The success of such social Judases may often astonish us, especially where we believe in the moral problem of social equity, because it contradicts, apparently, the laws of life and demonstrates the low estimate which some men of no mean learning and pretensions place upon the honourable obligations of fraternal relationships.

It is true that these violations of friendship are often attended with present temporary success, and those who make them are enabled to spread themselves for awhile as the green bay tree; but their day of triumph is but short, for the old adage is realised that "chickens come home to roost," and in after life they wear the badge of duplicity in spite of themselves.

Genuine friendship, while it is a law of universal obligation, is always based upon reciprocal action, and it can only last as long as mutual manifestations of kindly integrity are evinced and maintained. A single betrayal of principle may weaken or destroy it for ever. Men do not always seem to know this. They appear to forget themselves and to neglect their friends until they find that "none are so poor as to do them reverence." The law of watchfulness is requisite in maintaining terms of honourable amity, for friendly relations do not grow as the weeds, with spontaneous growth. They are the result of careful, continued culture. Indeed, in this way enemies even become friends, and are often made so for all life. They are conquered by the respect shown them and by acts of unexpected kindnesses. It was reciprocal acts of kindness that created the bond of union between Jonathan and David, and the ties of mutual obligation which marked their lives exemplified their sincere attachments and gave to history one of its brightest examples of sincere and constant fraternity.

The ardent feeling of friendship which grew up between Washington and Lafayette was founded, no doubt, on their congenial natures, as well as in their military alliance. They met as the representatives of two distinct peoples, and as members of the Masonic Fraternity, and their friendly constancy was like the unruffled sea, placid and perpetual.

There is no doubt but many instances could be given of warm friendships which have grown up among our brethren of the mystic tie, where strong tests have been given, and where Masonry has been honoured in the bond of endearment. But they were only private affiliations, and no one has made a record of them, and they have passed away like thousands of other relations of virtue and honour, without a name and without a history.

That warm and constant friendships should find distinguished examples among the Fraternity is no more than should be expected, for this is one of the cardinal purposes of the institution, and if they fail it certainly cannot lie at the door of Masonic obligations. All the teachings of Masonry are in the direction of the genial emotions. Every step is to help, aid and assist a brother, and every lesson is intended to impress the candidate for its honours with the knowledge of fraternal duty.

We have often heard Masons complain of the coldness, the selfishness and of the double dealing of men who bore the name of being Masons. These complaints have never astonished us since our conversion to the belief of the "total depravity of the human race." Men are but animals, and it may be that we expect too much when we look for friendly tokens from all of them. Many of them are incapable of loving anybody but themselves. They are too much allied to their own personal interests to care much for others, and when brought to the test of friendship, they fail because the thing is not in them. Their inclinations are all for self, and all the Masonic manipulations of the world could never make such men Masons or friends. It is a pity that Lodges receive such into the mystic relationship, for they only make a mockery of the Craft.

ORIENTAL MIXTURE.—Notwithstanding the inveterate manner in which the use of tobacco has been denounced by certain persons, it still maintains its place in the tastes and habits of every country in the world. Whether we look to the north or to the south, the east or west, we find it indulged in to an extent which attests at once its popularity, and, when pure and properly dressed, its perfect harmlessness. Those who have sought to condemn its use have not only signally failed in their quixotic enterprise, but have proved themselves to be possessed of a delusion so palpable that it is not a little strange they should find any followers at all. Any habit, no matter what, if indulged in to an inordinate extent must necessarily be a mistake, and tobacco, like everything else, when used in due moderation is as innocent an enjoyment as any that the world affords. Nor is moderation the only thing to be considered, for it is equally necessary that purity should be taken into serious consideration. It is an unfortunate fact that very many of the tobaccos manufactured at the present day are decidedly injurious; we note, therefore, with considerable pleasure that Bros. W. and C. Page, of the Grange Tobacco Works, Bermondsey, are achieving a great and well-deserved success with their celebrated "Oriental Mixture," which, for purity, fragrance and richness of aroma, surpasses any tobacco which we have yet tried. This is entirely due to the fact that it is composed of the choicest oriental tobaccos, and that great care is taken to exclude all but the best growths. Unlike many tobaccos—whose acquaintance for the future we will cautiously eschew—Bros. Page's "Oriental Mixture," which is sold by most retailers, neither bares the tongue, nor leaves an unpleasant taste upon the palate. Where only one pipe of some tobaccos could be smoked without harm or disagreeable after effects, the "calumet of peace" might be replenished with this admirable mixture ad infinitum.

FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

HER Majesty the Queen still remains at Osborne, to which place the Earl of Beaconsfield paid a visit on Monday, staying until Wednesday. On Friday, the King and Queen of Denmark arrived at Dover, and were there met by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, who accompanied the royal visitors to London. The following day they left for the Isle of Wight. On Monday the Queen and her guests, with the Prince and Princess of Wales, witnessed some torpedo experiments, which took place in the Solent.

As notified in our issue of last week, Parliament was prorogued on Friday by Royal Commission, and now stands adjourned until Saturday, the 2nd November next. During the Session thus brought to a close, but few public measures have been passed, the Eastern Question and matters arising therefrom having taken up the bulk of the time during which the members have met. The House of Commons sat, on 136 days, for nearly 1,100 hours, continuing their debates on 85 occasions until past midnight. No less than 278 divisions were taken on various questions, and only once was the Speaker called upon to give a casting vote, the number on that occasion being 40 both for and against the question at issue.

Three members of the Cabinet, all of whom are representatives of Lancashire constituencies, were entertained on Wednesday at a banquet at Liverpool, and may be said to have started the "recess" résumés of the Parliamentary doings of the past, and intended measures of the future. As to the past we are all familiar, but the future we suppose will reveal the usual number of unfulfilled promises on the part of our statesmen.

The meeting of the British Association at Dublin was brought to a close on Wednesday last, and may safely lay claim to having been a most successful gathering. The next year's meeting will be held at Sheffield, and we hope may be the means of introducing various improvements and otherwise helping in the advancement of science.

The annual encampment of Artillery Volunteers, which is held at Shoeburyness, was brought to a close on Friday. From the remarks of the Inspecting Officer, we may judge that this portion of our volunteer force is in a state of general efficiency, and may be relied upon in case of attack for affording no inconsiderable amount of protection to our shores.

The annual collections made in the Metropolis in aid of the hospitals and dispensaries of our city are becoming the means of adding considerably to the amount spent on charitable objects. The returns of the last Hospital Sunday collection show a total receipt of no less than £24,460, which amount has been distributed by the committee among the 125 institutions which can lay claim to the benefits of these periodical contributions.

The recent robbery at the Isle of Man Bank has this week been satisfactorily cleared up. It having been decided to thoroughly search the premises lately occupied by the convicted cashier, arrangements were made for carrying this object into effect, but such a course was rendered unnecessary by a confession which he made, and which disclosed the whereabouts of the missing money. The bank has now recovered all but £15 of the £8,878 which they alleged had been stolen.

The labour question appears to be one that will give the country considerable trouble, even though we may have little or no work to quarrel over. In Bristol upwards of 2,000 persons are on strike against a proposed reduction of wages, and on a notice being given by the North British Railway Company, for increasing the number of working hours from 51 to 54 per week, about 600 mechanics employed by them at Edinburgh have threatened to strike work unless the proposal is withdrawn. While the working classes take such rigorous measures against their employers, we can hardly hope for any regard being shown them, and fear that a revival of business is seriously delayed by such unsatisfactory activity.

The death occurred on Wednesday of Queen Christina of Spain. She was the daughter of Francis I. of Bourbon, King of the Two Sicilies, by his second wife Maria Isabella, daughter of King Charles IV. of Spain, and was born at Naples on 27th April 1806. She married, in December 1829, the then King of Spain (Ferdinand VII.), who was many years her senior in age, and died four years after their marriage. On the 10th October 1830 she was delivered of a daughter, who, by the will of her father, was appointed to succeed him, he having, just previous to his death, revoked the Salic law, and thus made it lawful for a woman to reign in Spain. For many years the late Queen Christina acted as Regent to her infant child, during a greater portion of which time Spain was devastated by disastrous civil wars. She resigned her Regency in October 1840, and since then has passed a great portion of her time in retirement near Havre. For many years she possessed great control over her daughter Isabella, and may almost be looked upon as having ruled Spain during the early days of that Queen's reign.

The task of occupation is still being vigorously pushed forward by the Austrians both in Bosnia and Herzegovina, but the continued opposition on the part of the inhabitants makes the work of a most harassing nature. The Porte has sent orders to the native officials to offer no resistance, but these orders are totally disregarded, thus leading the Austrians to express doubts as to the sincerity of the instructions. No settlement has yet been arrived at with the Mussulman tribes around Batoum, and resistance to the Russian entry still seems probable. Some of the ambassadors at Constantinople are urging upon the Sultan the desire of their governments that the provisions of the Treaty of Berlin should be immediately carried into execution, so that if a firm front is shewn by the various parties to the treaty we may hope for some definite improvement in the affairs of Turkey before long. General Todleben was fired at by a Greek on Saturday, during a review of Russian troops at San Stefano, but the shot happily took no effect. The chief of the St. Petersburgh police, General Mesentsoff, however, was not so fortunate in escaping the attack of his enemies, two of whom succeeded in fatally wounding him in the streets of that city on the 16th instant. In France, the elections for the General Council, which have just terminated, show favourably for the Republicans, and lead many to believe in the future predominance of that party in the Senate. In Hanover, there has been some serious rioting, resulting in two or three persons being killed and many others wounded, in consequence of elections which took place at Harburg; the German papers state that the military were compelled to fire on the mob before peace could be restored. It appears that the result of the labours of the Berlin Congress have not given unqualified satisfaction; the people in many parts of Italy expressing their discontent at its decrees, and looking jealously upon the part that Austria has, and is now taking in the matter. Great public rejoicings have taken place in Brussels, and various parts of Belgium, in commemoration of the Twenty-fifth Anniversary of the marriage of the King and Queen of that country. Latest advices from the Cape are satisfactory, although hostilities still continued in the Transvaal and the Zulu country.

After confirming grants of £290 made at the last meeting of the Lodge, the brethren considered fourteen new cases, and granted £203 to twelve of them. Two cases were dismissed.

HAVE WE TOO MANY LODGES?

IT has always been a popular cry amongst a certain class of Masons that Grand Masters are too ready to grant dispensations to open new lodges, and Grand Lodges too ready to endorse their action by granting charters to the same. Now, we contend it is erroneous to suppose, that because there is a multiplicity of lodges, there must consequently be a laxity in the work or weakness in the lodge. Many lodges, small with regard to numbers, are in our opinion preferable to a few with an unwieldy membership and its consequent "rush of work."

Work is not all that lodges should look to, it should rather be their endeavour to render their communications interesting and instructive, and this cannot be accomplished, except in one particular (ritual), when night after night candidates are being initiated, passed and raised. We know some of these immense lodges, with memberships ranging from two to four hundred, that meet regularly every week and yet there is such a number of candidates that emergencies have to be occasionally called, and however desirous the Worshipful Master and members might be to give and hear instructive discourses, debates or lectures on Masonic subjects, the thing is impossible, quite out of the question, on account of this steam pressure of work, this incessant, continued manufacture of Masons. Such being the case, and no one can deny it, would it not be preferable for the Craft in general and these lodges in particular, to increase the number of lodges and especially to divide these unwieldy organizations, so that the labour being divided amongst the many, other subjects of interest to the Fraternity besides ritual might receive due attention?

The arguments, of course, against increasing the number of lodges are, the old cry that a small lodge is a weak one, and that by having two or more in a neighborhood, especially in country places, a bitter feeling of jealousy is engendered between them. To the first of these we would reply that a small lodge is not necessarily weak, nor is it advisable that it should have a large amount of funds on hand. To prevent poverty, let the fees for the degrees be high, and if then the cash in hand runs low, it is very easy to increase it by bazaars, concerts, reunions, &c., without drawing too heavily upon the purse-strings of the members, or trusting to that unmasonic system of annual dues which we hope some day to see abolished in all enlightened jurisdictions. In answer to the second argument, we would say, that although jealousy at times might exist, still, as a rule, there would rather be "a friendly emulation as to which could best work and best agree." The argument of jealousy in theory is well enough, but in actual practice it falls completely to the ground. Again, there is another, to our mind, very objectionable feature in these bulky organizations, termed lodges, whose membership runs into the hundreds; we allude to the fact, that there is very little opportunity for the younger brethren to obtain office. "The machine is run" by a few old members, and thus good men have no chance to occupy the chair, and every brother should have ambition enough to look forward to the time when he shall fill the Oriental Chair of K.·. S.·., become careless in their attendance and finally cease to visit the lodge-room except on special occasions. We believe this to be a very serious objection, as we have always maintained that the young Mason should not be satisfied with merely taking degrees, but that he should pride himself upon thoroughly acquiring the work and otherwise qualifying himself for the responsible position of Worshipful Master. On the other hand, in a small lodge, every brother can look forward to a period, when by honorable conduct and regular attendance, he may hope to be elected to office. Finally, we argue that the smaller lodge is preferable to the larger, because the brethren naturally become better acquainted with each other, a closer tie is formed and a more fraternal feeling engendered. Let us not then be alarmed at a multiplicity of lodges. A small lodge is much more home-like than a large one, possesses equal facilities to perform the work, and has greater opportunities to devote a portion of its time to the delivery of lectures, essays, and addresses upon the various topics of interest in connection with the history, jurisprudence and symbolism of Freemasonry.—Masonic Review.

THE ROYAL HAND-BELL RINGERS.

THE Royal Hand-bell Ringers (Poland-street, London, Bro. Duncan S. Miller, conductor. Messrs. H. Havart, W. J. Havart, J. H. Williams, and A. G. Pritchard, were honoured by command of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales to give a Campanological and musical entertainment on board the Royal Yacht Osborne, lying in Cowes-roads, Isle of Wight, on the evening of Monday, 19th inst. The company included their Majesties the King and Queen of Denmark, and the Princess Thyra, with their suite, Mdlle. D'Oxholm, Capt. Hedemann, and Capt. Hoskiver; their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales and suite, Prince Albert Victor and Prince George of Wales, the Princess Victoria of Hesse, Lord and Lady Charles Beresford, Lord and Lady Mandeville, who, with guests from other yachts, formed a numerous and distinguished audience. By means of awnings the bridges and quarterdeck of the magnificent steamer were converted into an apartment excellently adapted for the purpose of a concert; the decorations consisting of flags, among which the Danish Standard was conspicuous. The whole vessel was brilliantly lighted by lamps and lanterns. The audience were located on the bridge, while the performers with their tables and bells were just beneath on the quarter-deck, between the mainmast and the royal saloon. By special desire of the Prince, the whole of the crew, numbering 120 hands, were permitted to be present, and occupied the space round the engine-room hatchway.

The entertainment commenced at 10.30, and continued until midnight, the programme including renderings on the bells of compositions by Handel, Weber, Costa, Strauss, Godfrey, Lecocq, &c., and a selection of Old English glees of a humorous character, which were much appreciated. The pianoforte accompaniments of the vocal performances were played by Messrs. Pritchard and Williams. The Prince sent for Mr. Miller and requested him to explain to the King and Queen of Denmark the peculiarities of the bells, and of the art of ringing them, while the instruments themselves were a source of much amusement to the younger portions of the company. The night was beautifully calm and moonlit. It was remarked by the Prince that, on this occasion, the tones of the bells appeared peculiarly sweet and mellow, and attributable to the surrounding water. The Danish and English National Anthems were performed by the band, and, at the conclusion, both His Majesty the King and the Prince of Wales honoured Mr. Miller with personal assurances that the entertainment had afforded great interest and pleasure to every one present. This is the ninth occasion on which the Poland-street Hand Bell Ringers have been honoured by Royal command.

INSTALLATION MEETING OF THE UPTON LODGE, No. 1227.

THE regular meeting, for the installation of Master and appointment of Officers of this Lodge for the coming year, took place at the Spotted Dog, Upton, on Thursday, the 15th inst. The members were summoned for two o'clock, but owing to the non-arrival of some of them, Lodge was not opened until past three, when the W.M., Bro. George Brown, occupied the chair. A report was read by one of the brethren who had been appointed Auditor, showing that the financial position of the Lodge had greatly improved since the last report had been prepared, and they might now consider themselves free from liability. The reading of this report was naturally received by the members with gratification, as nothing can be more detrimental to the well being of a Lodge than for its members to know they are in debt, and to see no immediate way of clearing off the liability. Some of the members, however, expressed the natural wish for a detailed account of the finances of the Lodge for the past year, and suggested that the balance sheet should be printed and distributed to each member; we are pleased to say that this proposition, after a short discussion, was seconded, and, on being put by the Master, was carried without opposition. We could not understand the remarks made during the discussion on this question by some of the members, who seemed to think that asking for a printed statement implied mistrust of the Auditors. Surely, if they have been able to make so favourable a report after a conscientious fulfilment of their duties they should be the last to suggest such a thing as a printed statement being in the hands of every brother as unnecessary. We hope when at the next annual meeting the auditors are called upon for a statement, they will be able to show as great an improvement over 1878 as the brethren who this year fill the office did over that of 1877, and that they will not even have occasion to refer to such an unpleasant topic as "amount due to Treasurer." The Agenda paper of the Lodge contained the name of one gentleman for initiation, but owing to a sudden bereavement in his family he was unfortunately obliged to send an excuse for non-attendance. All those present expressed their sympathy with their would be brother, and desired his proposer (the W.M. elect) to convey to him their great regret at his absence and the circumstance which occasioned it. Owing to the non-arrival of the candidates for advancement, the business of the day was rendered much shorter than was anticipated; the brethren therefore had some time on their hands, and in order to enjoy a little of this in the open air the W.M. called the Lodge from labour to refreshment. On its resumption, Bro. Posener assumed the chair, and having obligated the W.M. elect, advanced the Lodge to the third degree, and duly installed Bro. Benjamin Lyons in the chair of K.S. The appointment of officers was next proceeded with, and then the Lodge was closed. At the banquet which followed, ample justice was done to the viands provided. At the conclusion, the W.M. proceeded with the toasts, the three which usually occupy the first place on our lists having been speedily honoured, the I.P.M. rose to give that of the W.M. He considered it a most pleasing duty thus to have to propose the health of a brother who had followed him through the various offices of the Lodge. He wished him a prosperous year of office, and hoped that his experience as Master of the Upton Lodge would be gratifying to himself and satisfactory to the brethren. The W.M. thanked Bro. Brown and the members most sincerely for the kind way in which they had honoured him in connection with the toast of W.M. It would be his constant aim to satisfy the requirements of the various members of his Lodge, and hoped, by persevering in this, and by a faithful discharge of his duty, to merit the approval of the Lodge. The next toast given was that of the Visitors, to whom the W.M. accorded a hearty reception, stating that the Upton Lodge was always pleased to be honoured by the presence of Visitors, and always endeavoured to give them such an opinion of their hospitality as to make them wish for future visits. Bro. Cambridge, W.M. of the Kent Lodge No. 18, responded on behalf of himself and fellow Visitors, thanking the Worshipful Master for his kind remarks, and the Lodge for the hearty reception they had accorded their guests. The health of the Installing Master was next offered for the consideration of the members, and as Bro. Posener can derive substantial benefit from the good wishes of his brethren, we think this occasion should add considerably to his happiness. Bro. Posener, in replying, stated it was his wish that he might be able for many years to be an active member of the Upton Lodge. He hoped it would be his pleasure to annually instal the Master, and that on each occasion he would have the assistance and hearty co-operation of so many Masonic friends. The toast of the Immediate Past Master was next proposed by the W.M., who offered to the retiring Master the most hearty thanks of the members, for the hard way in which he had worked to free the Lodge from debt. That his labours had been successful all were most gratified to acknowledge; they felt that, but for his never ceasing in his efforts they would have been in a very different financial condition to that which had been announced in Lodge. The members had decided that their appreciation should take a more substantial form than mere words, and he therefore had the pleasure of presenting, on behalf of the Lodge, a P.M.'s jewel, which he placed on the breast of Bro. Brown, with feelings of pride, being confident that no distinction of a like nature had ever been more zealously worked for, or more deservedly awarded. As they considered the duties of Bro. Brown had necessarily taken him often from his home, they were of opinion that some slight recompense was due on that account. He therefore would ask Bro. Brown to convey to his wife the heartiest good wishes of the members of the Lodge, and ask her acceptance of a small souvenir which had been subscribed for by the members. He then displayed a handsome gold necklet, which was accepted by Bro. Brown with great pride; he expressed the great pleasure he felt it would afford his wife to hear that the brethren of the Upton Lodge had so handsomely recognised his exertions on their behalf. As for himself, he had so often expressed his thanks for the reception given him, that he felt the brethren would excuse him if, in the present state of his feelings, he was unable adequately to thank them for their kindness. As a Past Master of the Lodge, to which position he now had the honour to belong, he should always consider it a privilege to work for the furtherance of its interest, which he hoped would ever be foremost in his thoughts. The other Past Masters who were present having each replied on his own behalf, the toast of the Treasurer and Secretary was given. To the former the Lodge was under great obligations for the way in which he had helped them over their difficulties, never allowing any debts of the Lodge to remain outstanding, whether he had funds in hand sufficient to meet claims or not. Their Secretary had given them so much satisfaction during his short occupation of that position, that the W.M. felt proud in again investing him, and was sure he would continue to merit the approval of the Lodge. Each of these brethen having replied to the toast, the W.M. proposed the health of his Officers. He was pleased to be the Master of a Lodge which had such officers as they could boast of. He felt that his duties would be very much lightened by the way in which they could and would assist him, and concluded by wishing them steady advancement and a prosperous future. Each of the Officers was called upon to respond, and each severally thanked the W.M. for having placed him in his respective position. Bro. Fenner the S.D., who is Preceptor of the Upton Lodge of Instruction, pointed out the fact that few of the members of the Mother Lodge ever favoured their child by attending its meetings, which are held weekly. Without flattering himself, he felt sure they would often enjoy very pleasant and instructive evenings should they find it convenient to attend. Considering the earnest and perfect way in which Bro. Fenner carries out any duties he may undertake, we must certainly say we were somewhat surprised to hear from him that the members of the Mother Lodge were not one and all supporters of the Lodge of Instruction, we suppose that many of them live at too great a distance from its quarters to be regular in their attendance, but we hope that before long they will take an opportunity of enrolling their names amongst its members, and thus give no occasion for Bro. Fenner next year appealing on its behalf. We think the remarks of the W.M. in appointing Bro. Fenner as his S.D. should be sufficient guarantee that the instruction offered under his guidance is well worthy of imitation, and be the means of adding considerably to the strength of the Lodge of Instruction. The Tyler being now summoned, he brought the evening's proceedings to a most successful termination.

Lord Warden Lodge, No. 1609.—An emergency meeting was held on Thursday, 22nd August, at the Lodge room, St. George's Hall, Deal. Present—Bros. E. Kirby W.M., J. Laggett S.W., J. Westaway (Organist) J.W. pro tem, J. Carpenter S.D., W. Carterfield J.D., F. H. England Steward, S. Willey I.G., S. Holgate Tyler; P.M. Bro. T. J. Usher P.P.G.R. Hon. Sec. Visitors—Bros. J. F. Solly and C. Corps 784. The Lodge being formally opened, the necessary questions were put and very ably responded to by the candidate, Bro. George Rivers, who was duly and regularly passed to the second degree by the W.M. in his usual impressive manner. The charge in the 2nd degree was then delivered by Bro. S.W., and the Lodge duly closed, and the meeting was adjourned until the first Friday in October next.

THE Lectures of Masonry teach us to view it under two denominations—Operative and Speculative. Experience teaches us to view Masons in the same way; or rather as Operators and Speculators. In Ancient Operative Masonry the use of the working tools was not only thoroughly understood, but they were applied practically to the use for which they were intended. In Modern Speculative Masonry this is not always the case. Some Masons of the present day cannot tell the difference between a level and a plumb, or a twenty-four inch guage and a square. Their Masonry will not stand the test of any of these instruments. They are the Speculators. They speculate in Masonry as they do in horses, grain, or any article of merchandise, to make money. As long as they can make it profitable to themselves, they take a lively interest in Masonic matters, but when business is dull they soon turn their attention to something else that will pay better. The great question then with them is whether to pay up their dues and take a dimit, or suffer themselves to be suspended for non-payment of dues. It matters little to Masonry which they do, for the Institution is benefitted in either case.—Advocate.

"THE PRAISE OF DRUNKENNESS.—1723."

IN appreciation of your "Masonic Column" allow me to present to your readers the following sketch of the "Praise of Drunkenness":—The little book so entitled was published in 1723 by "Bonifface Oinophilus de Monte Fiasone, A.B.C.," and is certainly a very curious production; the sub-titles are startling, and the author evidently—though so early in the last century—was a strong advocate for temperance, if not of total abstinence, as the "Praise" bestowed on drunkenness is really unmitigated and a most severe rebuke, and full of sarcastic references. The writer undertakes to prove the necessity of frequently getting drunk, and "that the practice of getting drunk is most Ancient, Primitive, and Catholic." But I fancy some of your numerous readers will be wondering what all this has to do with Freemasonry. Not much, certainly, so far; but friend Oinophilus states that the foregoing is "confirmed by the example of Heathens, Turks, Infidels, Primitive Christians, Saints, Popes, Bishops, Doctors, Philosophers, Poets, Freemasons, and other Men of Learning in all Ages!" Of other examples we need not say aught, but at once refer to what "Ebrietatis Encomium" has to offer in reference to the Craft. The date of the work (1723) is of value, for very few indeed have been the works on or of Freemasonry that have come down to us from that period. The first distinctly Masonic book was printed in 1722, and then had to do with the operative Regulations; the regular "Constitutions" of the Premier Grand Lodge of the World (England) not having been published until 1723, the year that this "Book of Praise" was issued. In Chap. XV. of "Freemasons and Other Learned Men that Used to Get Drunk," there are three pages devoted to the Fraternity, and from them I quote a few sentences:—"If what Bro. Eugenius Philalethes, author of 'Long Livers,' a book lately printed and dedicated to the Freemasons, says in his preface to that treatise be true, those Mystical Gentlemen very well deserve a place amongst the learned. But, without entering into their peculiar jargon, or whether a man can be sacrilegiously perjured for revealing secrets when he has none, I do assure my readers they are very great friends to the Vintners. An eye-witness of this was I, myself, at their late general meeting at Stationers' Hall, who, having learned some of their Catbechism, pass'd my examination, parting five shillings and took my place accordingly. We had a good dinner, and to their eternal honour the Brotherhood laid about them very valiantly. . . . However, to do them justice, I must own there was no mention made of Politics or Religion." The author afterwards states that one of the toasts was "to the Church as by Law established!" tending rather to throw doubt as to his being present at the meeting in question.

After the Banquet he tells us "the faces of the most ancient and most honourable Fraternity of the Freemasons brightened with ruddy fires." . . . . . But leaving the Freemasons and their invaluable secrets, for I know not what they are worth, come we now to speak of other men of learning."

In the postscript we are informed, "thirdly and lastly, I wish in Chap. 23, in your answer to the objection, that one cannot trust a man that gets drunk, you had been pleased to have taken notice of the taciturnity and continency of the Right Worshipful the Freemasons in this respect, for though otherwise they are free enough of speech; yet I do assure you, as to secrets, though some of them love the creature very heartily and carouse abundantly; yet has it never been known, though never so fuddled (for Freemasons will get fuddled) that they ever discovered any of their secrets. This is irresistible, irrefragable, irrefutable; or, if you will, to speak (more dialectici) in stylo tapisto, non-resistible, non-refragable, and non-refutable, and indeed is very Argumentum palmare Scotisticum."

The preface concludes as follows (a translation):—

> "Though numerous faults I see in this small book,
> (And so may any one that will but look)
> I know but two of much consideration,
> Of which I here make public declaration,
> The undertaking and the execution,
> Faults too extravagant for absolution."

Whilst freely admitting his estimate of the Society was a wrong one in many respects, I must acknowledge that in 1723 no Society was conducted as now.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A series of articles, biographical, descriptive, and eulogistic, of some of the principal Masonic worthies of the day. They are well written, and though personal, by no means offensive, or intrusive into private life, and in Masonic society will be welcomed as an interesting series of word paintings of members of the Craft.—Standard.

"We do not remember to have read any similar series of sketches which surpass this in merit."—Land and Water.

"The book will be of great interest to Masons, containing as it does pen-and-ink sketches of the most distinguished men among them, and giving some considerable information on matters Masonic, from various points of view."—Lloyd's Newspaper.

"Admirably written, being free from what are too often observed in composition—inelegant language and prolixity."—Sunday Times.

"'J. G.' writes with a considerable amount of freedom, never hesitating to 'hit off' a weakness when he finds it publicly displayed by a 'distinguished brother;' at the same time he never loses sight of a good trait when it is displayed, either in connexion with the Craft or in the service of the public cat of doors. The sketches are lively reading."—City Press.

"This is a neat book. The Portraits consist of a series of 'word pictures' of eminent English Masons. It styles Bro. W. J. Hughan 'Knight Errant,' and sketches thirty-two others under equally unique titles. We commend the book as worthy of a place in every Masonic library."—Voice of Masonry.

"Evinces much literary ability, and is a valuable addition to the few works we have in Masonic biography."—Philadelphia Keystone.

"The book ought to be in every well arranged Masonic Library."—New York Courier.

"We value the work, and heartily thank Bro. Morgan for our copy."—Masonic Jewel.

"The portraits consist of a series of what we call 'pen and ink sketches' of brethren prominent in all the noble undertakings of English Masonry. . . . Prominent among his brethren we find Bro. Fred. Binckes, ('Our Hercules,' whose herculean efforts in behalf of those blessed institutions, the charities of English Masons, have a world-wide reputation, which will live long after the zealous Craftsman has been, 'laid away to rest.'"—New York Square.

"The style of the author is pleasing, and the quality of his productions highly complimentay to his ability as a writer."—Masonic Advocate.

"It is a valuable contribution to English current literature."—Masonic Review.

"They belong to a kind of writing which has come to be amongst the most popular reading of the day. . . . . The types are as general as they are graphic. The salient characteristics are seized with an easy power, and happily hit off in felicitous phrase."—Sheffield Post.

"Good sensibly written articles. The writer prefaces each of his sketches with some pithy common sense remarks."—Cirkel Gazette.

"Cleverly and agreeably sketched, and the work altogether forms a valuable addition to Masonic literature."—Ryde News.

"Very amusing, and beyond doubt, faithful portraits of the worthies who unconsciously sat for them."—Deal, Walmer and Sandwich Mercury.

"The members of the Craft will take it as an acceptable addition to their biographical literature."—Monmouthshire Chronicle.

"They are written in a fair and genial tone, thoroughly Masonic."—Leigh Chronicle.

"Should have a very large sale."—Kingsbridge Gazette.

"These sketches are drawn with sparkling ability."—Buckinghamshire Reporter.

"We must sincerely congratulate the author on the success of his endeavour to aim at faithful portraiture, while there is an entire absence of what might give offence to the most sensitive mind."—Folkestone Express.

"A very acceptable contribution to the history of the Order. The volume has our warmest commendation."—Kelso Courier.

"Drawn with no little humour, and embellished with many a deft stroke of good natured satire."—Figaro.

"The inquiring Brother who may wish to know something of the strength and beauty of the principles of Masonry, will find a pleasure in scanning the characteristic pictures in this book."—The Brighouse News.

"There is a pungency in the ready off-hand dash that lends much zest to the subject, and lets it from studied rhetorical expression."—Hebrew Leader.

"There can be no doubt that the writer has produced a series of Portraits which will be a source of amusement and pleasure to Masons throughout the world."—Surrey Comet.

"Will be found very interesting and pleasant reading, especially to the Masonic world."—Bucks Press.

SUSPENSION AND ITS PENALTIES.

AS our readers are aware, the Board of General Purposes, at a meeting specially convened for dealing with the matter, not long since sentenced a brother to suspension from all his Masonic rights and privileges for a period of two years. The crime laid to his charge was that of having, in his capacity of Chairman of Scrutineers at the last Communication of Grand Lodge, permitted or connived at an erroneous return of the result of such scrutiny; and having heard the evidence and defence, the Board arrived unanimously at the conclusion that the charge was proved, and the sentence then and there passed was one of two years' suspension as just stated. This, as a matter of course, will form part of the Board's Report, which will be submitted to Grand Lodge on Wednesday next for confirmation, and as the verdict was unanimously given, there can be little doubt that Grand Lodge will endorse the sentence of what is virtually its Standing Committee on all matters affecting the welfare of the Craft. We may assume, therefore, that the brother in question will be shut out for the period named from all communication with his fellow Craftsmen—qud fellow Craftsmen—and will not resume his Masonic status till the term for which his sentence holds good is complete. But several of our readers have asked us what the effect of this sentence will be, and as we rejoice to say that it but rarely happens there is any occasion for the infliction of punishment of this degree of severity within the jurisdiction of our Grand Lodge, we shall do our best to enlighten our readers on the subject.

The only two works on Masonic Jurisprudence to which we can refer for guidance with any feeling of confidence are those of Oliver and Paton, and the latter, as intended primarily as a text book for Scottish Freemasons, will be of service only in so far as its dicta consist generally with those of his English brother writer. In treating of Masonic punishments, Oliver includes that of suspension among the penalties intended for the graver class of offences. He distinguishes between that suspension which is definite, and that which is indefinite and may be intended to be indefinable. The former is for a fixed period, and when that is determined, the brother on whom it has been inflicted, ipso facto, resumes all those rights and privileges of which by sentence he had been deprived. The latter is for any period, and may be made longer or shorter according to the will of the Lodge or superior authority which inflicts it. It may terminate at the end of three or six months, or it may never come to any end at all. However, the following is the passage as quoted from Oliver's work, and our readers will be able to judge for themselves of the character of this particular punishment. At page 231, our late learned brother having defined definite suspension, proceeds as follows:—"And this frequently assumes the character of a milder phasis of expulsion; for the suspended brother very seldom renews his connection with the Craft, although his readmission could be effected, as a matter of course, without ceremony or inquiry." With all due deference we cannot allow this view to pass unquestioned. One of those whom our American friends are wont to speak of as "real grit" would probably not renew his connection with the Fraternity; his sense of shame at having committed a crime worthy of severe punishment would be too great. In such cases definite suspension would be "a milder phasis of expulsion;" but in the case of a brazen-faced and overbearing brother, having no sense of shame in his mental constitution, he would not, in our judgment, have the slightest hesitation in renewing his connection with the Society, or even in committing the same offence a second or third time, if he thought he could do so without discovery. But Dr. Oliver—kind-hearted, unworldly-minded man that he was—considered all Masons good men and true; the world knows otherwise. However, to return to the subject in question. Dr. Oliver then adds, "Suspension has placed him, for the time being, on a level with the cowan, or profane; divesting him of his Masonic privileges, incapacitating him from attending a Lodge, or being acknowledged in any shape as a Brother; for it is idle to argue, as some do, that his connection with the Lodge remains unbroken, and his Masonic rights only placed in abeyance. They are really and absolutely severed during the period of suspension, nor can any Lodge dues be demanded of him."

How far Paton is in accord with his late English confrère, may be gathered from the following excerpt from his "Freemasonry and its Jurisprudence." Having described this punishment as of two kinds, definite and indefinite, he writes in respect of the former: "By definite suspension is meant a deprivation of the rights and privileges of Masonry for a fixed period of time, which is always named in the sentence. By the operation of this penalty a Mason is for the time being prohibited from the exercise of all his Masonic privileges. His rights are placed in abeyance, and he can neither visit Lodges, hold Masonic communication, nor receive fraternal relief, during the period for which he has been suspended." Of course, when the period has expired, then he "at once resumes his former position in the Order, and is reinvested with all his Masonic rights, whether these rights be of a private or of an official nature." Indefinite suspension differs only in this respect from the former, that its term is not fixed, but the nature of the punishment, while it lasts, is exactly the same.

It will be seen from these extracts that there is a general and sufficient agreement between these two authorities—except, perhaps, in one respect, which, however, need not be noted here—and as there is no reason to imagine the sentence will not be confirmed at the Quarterly Communication on Wednesday next, it only remains for us to point out to our readers how the suspended brother stands in relation to his fellows, and how he will stand during the term of his punishment. As a Past Grand Officer, he will be unable to take his usual seat in Grand Lodge. He will cease to be a member of the Board of General Purposes and Colonial Board. His connection with the Committee of Management of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution will cease and determine. Any other position of trust or control to which he may have been elected in reference to our Schools must be forthwith vacated. Whatever office he may hold in any of the Lodges, of which he is a member, must be held by other brethren. He is ineligible to be received into any Lodge or Lodge of Instruction, on any pretext or under any circumstances, until the two years shall have elapsed, and then only will he be in a position to mingle again, as heretofore, among his brethren in full Lodge assembled. As regards his status in Royal Arch Masonry, no doubt the necessary steps have been, or will be, taken in order to ensure his suspension from all offices he may hold, and from all Chapters to which he may belong, for so long a time as he is suspended from Craft Masonry. This is only just and expedient. Were it otherwise, it would be a grievous anomaly, and one that could not be too seriously condemned, for a brother to be deprived of his Craft status and yet retain his rights and privileges as a Royal Arch Mason. It is very possible for one who has been guilty of some dereliction of duty which has been deemed worthy of punishment in Craft Masonry, to have done so without having, in the slightest degree, committed an offence against the laws of Arch Masonry, and vice versâ. There is, then, in those cases, no anomaly whatever in one suspended from the Craft still retaining his position in the Arch. But the offence for which this particular brother has been visited with so signal a punishment is not of this character, and it follows, that if the sentence is to be a real one, it must apply equally to his Arch status and functions as to his Craft. We will go further, and say that if he is a member of the Mark, Templar, and other Masonic degrees, it will be necessary he should be suspended from all these for the same term. It is no good being mealy-mouthed, and mincing matters. When a brother, told off to fulfil a duty of trust, is faithless to the trust reposed in him, he must be prepared to undergo the just consequences of his crime. Breaches of discipline are serious offences, and so is neglect of duty, still it is quite possible to explain and even palliate them in certain circumstances; but malfeasance in a post of honour and trust is a crime which admits of no palliation or excuse, and only those will sympathise with this class of wrong-doers, who are capable of committing a similar offence.

We have no personal feeling in this matter. We deeply regret its occurrence, and that chiefly because we are anxious to uphold Freemasonry in all its purity. There are plenty of places in this world where people, who are so minded, may earn for themselves an unenviable notoriety for sharp practice and malpractice of all kinds, but let them reserve all their misappreciations of duty for circles outside the pale of Masonry. We are anxious the Craft should retain its character for unsullied purity.

We may add that if any Lodge should be weak enough to receive this brother during his period of suspension, it will be guilty of contumacy, and will render itself liable to suspension, or even erasure, from the roll of Grand Lodge. And having said this, we dismiss this unpleasant subject accordingly.

RIVALRY—JEALOUSY.

WHEN we take into consideration the number of Lodges working under warrant from the Grand Lodge of England, and the greater number of brethren who acknowledge that body as their head, we cannot refrain from expressing our gratification at the general harmony which prevails, nor from referring to the pleasure it must afford our rulers that they are so seldom called upon to adjudicate on matters of an unpleasant nature between either brethren or Lodges. It appears to us an irrefutable argument in favour of Freemasonry that the Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter of English Freemasons are able to hold their Quarterly Meetings time after time without having anything of a disagreeable nature to refer to. A great part of this good feeling is, we believe, engendered by a species of emulative rivalry. The members of a Lodge are naturally jealous of those neighbours whose working may compare favourably with their own; or their friends may have performed some particular act of Masonic benevolence which at once arouses the spirit of emulation among the Lodges in the vicinity, and this frequently leads to the whole of a Masonic district advancing a long step in the march of improvement, which march affects our Lodges as it does most other institutions at the present time. Such is the general good feeling which characterises our meetings that this question is often referred to by visitors at the several Lodges, and is at all times a source of satisfaction to the Masters who frequently, during the evening's proceedings, comment on such expressions; in fact, it seems that each brother is jealous lest his neighbour should conduce more to the comfort of those assembled than himself. As regards our Charities, we have always considered that a great part of their success is due to a similar feeling, and that larger lists are obtained from those parts where pure rivalry exists. Time after time we hear it remarked at Lodge meetings, where a large amount has been collected for a previous festival of one of the Charities, that the Steward who may be acting for the forthcoming one will not be content unless he far exceeds the amount realised by his predecessor, and thus, urged by a becoming jealousy of his brother's position, he often exerts himself to a greater extent than otherwise would have been the case. We could continue our remarks on this subject for an indefinite time, but our readers must be well aware of the benefits arising from a system of friendly competition, and we may content ourselves with what we have already urged, as being sufficient to defend the existence of rivalry in our Lodges. There is, however, a dark side to this as to all other worldly questions. Some time since a case came under our notice, which at the time we considered of so exceptionable a character that we did not think it advisable to refer to it in our pages; but, for some time past, we have been arriving at the conclusion that we were wrong in our surmise, and a passage in the short article which we last week reproduced from the Masonic Review convinces us. The passage referred to, bearing as it does on American Masonry, carries us yet further, and reminds us that not only English Masons, but Transatlantic brethren also, are but human, and that even in matters intimately connected with the Craft disagreeable rivalries do occur. The article containing this passage has reference to the question, "Have we too many Lodges?" In it the writer points out that it is much more desirable to have two or more "manageable" Lodges, than one with so many members as to render it impossible to carry on anything beyond the manufacture of Masons. He states that he knows of several immense Lodges, with memberships ranging from two to four hundred, who hold meetings every week, and yet are obliged to have emergencies to clear off the business which offers itself. In these it is natural that very little is known of Masonry beyond the ritual of the three degrees; hence it is the writer urges the advisability of forming new Lodges. He then points out various influences which tend to retard the formation of a second Lodge in any town or district, and among them classes jealousy. Our contemporary goes so far as to believe that this jealousy, in actual practice, falls to the ground; but on this point our experience induces us to disagree, at least in so far as English Masonry is concerned. The case to which we particularly refer occurred in a flourishing suburb of London, several of the residents of which were members of a certain London Lodge. Thinking they would prefer holding their meetings in the pure air of the country rather than in the close atmosphere of the City, they went to work to obtain the necessary sanction for removing their Lodge, and had, so we believe, all but succeeded, when a most unlooked-for opposition arose. Some of the members of the Lodge already established in the town it was intended to move to, held an unofficial meeting, and by a majority agreed to a proposition made by one of the number, that they should use every endeavour to prevent the London Lodge coming among them. They even went so far as to decide to petition the Prov. Grand Master to refuse to receive the new Lodge within his jurisdiction; but this step was unnecessary; the members of the London Lodge, hearing of the "fraternal" greeting which awaited them, decided to give up all idea of enjoying the company of such "brotherly" neighbours, and therefore let the matter drop. Since that time we have heard of other instances of such narrow-minded and un-Masonic behaviour, but hope that the cases which have come under our personal notice are all that have occurred in this country during the past three years. We think that such opposition is not only objectionable from a Masonic point of view, but is likely to tend to the disadvantage of the objecting Lodge, as it is now generally admitted that friendly competition is desirable if we wish to keep any business or society from falling into decay and eventual ruin.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Rheumatism and Rheumatic gout are the most dreaded of all diseases, because their victims know that they are safe at no season, and at no age secure. Holloway's Ointment, after fomentation of the painful parts, gives greater relief than any other application; but it must be diligently used to obtain this desirable result. It has been highly commended by rheumatic subjects of all ages and of both sexes, for rendering their attacks less frequent and less vigorous, and for repressing the sour perspirations and soothing the nerves. In many cases, Holloway's Ointment and Pills have proved the greatest blessings in removing rheumatism and rheumatic gout which has assailed persons previously and at the prime of life.

TEMPLARS OF CANADA.

Remarks on the Comments of Dr. Albert G. Mackay, of Washington, on the Address for 1875 of The Grand Prior.

(Reprinted from the article in the February number of the "Craftsman," published at Hamilton, Ont., Canada, with a few Corrections and Additions.)

In the "Voice of Masonry" for December 1875, published at Washington, the learned and accomplished Masonic writer, Bro. Dr. Albert Mackay, reviews the address of the Grand Prior of Canada for that year. While fully acknowledging his pre-eminent position as a Masonic authority, there are still some points in his comments that require explanation, if not correction. He says, in the first place, "The most important item alluded to in the address is that there exists a very strong disposition among the Canada Templars to dissever their dependency on the Convent General, and to establish for themselves a National Grand Priory." This is entirely a mistake. It never was seriously thought of, and it is to be hoped that there never will be the least desire amongst the Canadian Templars to dissever their connection with England; all that was asked or sought for was this, that the Grand Priory of Canada, a Provincial Priory under England, should be admitted into the Union of the Order of the Temple of England and Ireland, and erected into a National Great Priory, co-equal with those of England and Ireland, and the peer of all other Supreme National Grand bodies of the Temple, but still subject to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales as Grand Master, and the Convent General as the Parliament or General Convention of this Templar Union. The wish of the Canadian Fratres has been acceded to by the Convent General in the most cordial manner, and the Great Priory will shortly be established, thus at once allaying any feeling of discontent which may have heretofore existed in Canada. To establish an independent body of Knights Templar in Canada would be simply an act of the greatest folly; correctly speaking, there should not be any independent and separate bodies in the Templar Society, the Order is, or ought to be, one and indivisible; and, although want of knowledge of the correct principles of the Order in some cases, and political exigencies in others, have divided the Order into several branches, holding themselves independent of each other, still the tendency of the present day is to draw together, not to dissever, and to unite the scattered elements of our ancient chivalry into one harmonious whole. It is, therefore, greatly to be desired and looked forward to, that the day may come when all Templars—at least, those of English-speaking nations—shall be firmly and indissolubly united under one Grand Master, and directed by one supreme representative authority, as was originally the rule of the Order.

Further on in his article Dr. Mackay expresses his opinion that "The Templar Order of the present day is not identical with the old Order of the Crusades," and as a reason for so believing cites the fact that the Order of the Temple was abolished by a Bull of Pope Clement V., bearing date 2nd May 1304—that as one Pope had authorised the formation of the Order another Pope could legally and effectually suppress it." Without discussing the question as to whether the Order was legally abolished, it appears to be of far greater interest to enquire whether the Order was effectually abolished at that time. If it was, then the Knights Templar of the present day are, to a certain extent, incorrect in calling themselves Knights Templar at all. If they are not successors of the ancient Knights who were, it is admitted, outwardly suppressed in the fourteenth century, then who and what are they? It is merely nonsensical for them to call themselves Masonic Knights Templar, for what authority had Freemasons ever to create either Knights or Templars? By the ancient laws of Chivalry none but Knights could give the accolade to perpetuate the knightly dignity. That the Order of Knights Templar of the present day is the same Order as the one which was outwardly suppressed in the fourteenth century is borne out, to a certain extent, by history; to the full extent by tradition. The argument that because the Order was abolished by the Bull of Pope Clement V., it was consequently annihilated, does not appear to be conclusive. The Jesuit Order was also suppressed by a Bull of Pope Clement XIV. in 1773, but can any one believe that that Society was, in consequence, extinguished. It was outwardly suppressed, as were the Templars; but, like the Templars, it continued in secret; and when, after the lapse of forty-one years, it was in 1814 again permitted by the Pope to openly exist, it sprang up at once into public view, not a weak, sickly remnant of an annihilated Order, but a powerful and vigorous organisation that, in spite of Papal Bulls and censures, had never lost its strength or vitality. This comparatively modern example effectually disposes of the notion that the power of either Pope, King, or Emperor can extinguish any society that has within itself the elements of life.

Dr. Mackay says: "There cannot now exist any kind of Templarism that is not Masonic in its character." It may be asked in what manner is the Templar Order Masonic? If it is Masonic, then all Freemasons should and must be eligible for admission into its ranks, and would have the right to apply for membership, of course submitting to the test of the ballot, as they do in passing from the Lodge to the Chapter. But have they this privilege? Every Freemason knows they have not. If they are Turks, Jews, Hindoos, or even Christian Unitarians, they cannot be admitted into the Temple Order. None but a firm believer in the doctrine of the Holy Trinity can be so admitted; consequently, should it not be considered altogether out of place to call a society Masonic the principles of which debarred a large proportion of Freemasons from joining it? The fundamental law of Masonry being, "that when the door of any degree is closed against him who believes in one God, and the soul's immortality, on account of other tenets of his faith, that degree is Masonry no longer." On the other hand, it is well known that it has not always been held necessary that an applicant for admission into the Templar Order should be a Freemason. For several years the Chapter General of Scotland permitted Non-Masons to be made Knights Templar, although they have now again returned to the Masonic pre-qualification, and instances are on record during the last century in England where to gain admittance it was not a necessary qualification to be a Master or Royal Arch Mason.

The French "Ordre du Temple" (of which his late Royal Highness the Duke of Sussex, Grand Prior of the English Templars, and other prominent English subjects of high Masonic standing were members) did not exact the Masonic qualification, neither does the Order of Christ of Portugal; both these Orders are acknowledged to be true branches of the Templar Order. The Order in England, Ireland, Germany, Sweden, and the United States appear always to have required their aspirants to be Freemasons. As respects internal evidence of the identity in character between Templary and Freemasonry, it must be evident to all who belong to both Societies that there is no connection near or remote between the respective ceremonies of the Freemason and the Knights Templar. If there should be some seeming resemblance in mere words or phraseology it has been brought about by the misdirected efforts of those who believe Templary to be nothing more than a Masonic degree, one of the series of the York Rite of Masonry; but a careful study of the subject will readily show that the whole scope and object of the Templar novitiate ceremonies are entirely distinct and separate, and, indeed, in some degree in opposition to the Masonic initiation. There is nothing whatever in the history of the ancient Knights Templar to lead us to believe that they were allied to Freemasonry, although there is every reason to suppose that many of the Order were Freemasons initiated into the secrets of occult philosophy. Neither is there anything improbable in our traditions, and but little doubt exists that when the persecuted brotherhood were under the ban of Pope Clement V., and compelled to resign their Order and mingle in the world, some of them sought refuge and protection in the ranks of so peaceful and unsuspected an association, secretly seeking to preserve their Order, whilst a portion joined the Teutonic Order, and large numbers that of the Hospitallers, introducing, it may be presumed, many of the peculiar doctrines and ceremonies of their old Order, and perpetuating them throughout the north and south of Europe, as well as in England and Scotland, in which latter country the Templars were never suppressed, but absorbed into the Order of St. John, which thus came to represent both Orders; hence the title adopted by the Convent General of England of "The United Orders of the Temple and Hospital."

It was not until after the glorious Reformation in Europe and Britain, and the suppression of the monastic houses, when men's consciences and minds were relieved from the trammels of the power of Rome, and the exercise of free thought and discussion indulged in without dread of the terrors of her intolerant Church, that it was generally known the rites and dogmas of the Templars had been secretly preserved in the speculative philosophy of Freemasonry. From this time may be dated the gradually increasing close connection that now exists between the two Orders, but owing to the jealousy or over-caution of the ancient and accepted Masons, who burnt their few records in 1721, but little information is obtainable on the subject. In the seventeenth century the Masonic Lodges were patronised by James I. and Charles I. and II. of England, and frequented by men of learning. Towards the end of the century our traditions more particularly point to the revival, revision, and recognition of the Chivalric degrees in connection with Freemasonry, and at this revision the rituals of the Knights Templar, who adopted the Masonic degrees ceremonially, conveyed an allusion to the foundation of the Order in Palestine.

To the Freemasons the English Templars largely owe it that they were enabled to preserve their secret ceremonial, and it is as a mark of their grateful remembrance that they have required aspirants for the honour of their pure and ancient Chivalry should be Freemasons; this, and this only, is the connection that exists between the Templars and Freemasonry: protection on the one side, gratitude on the other. So far, then, Dr. Mackay and the Grand Prior agree that the Templars of to-day must be traced, and are traced, to the Knights who sought refuge and concealment amongst the Masonic brotherhood, and through and by means of that Society perpetuated the Order and handed down to the present time in spirit and meaning their ancient rites and ceremonies.

Dr. Mackay speaks of the old and new Orders, but surely this must have been an oversight on the part of the learned and talented Brother. If it is admitted that the Order can be traced to those Knights who brought it into the Masonic Society, it cannot consequently be a new Order. Even if it had been purely Masonic, which it is not, it would still be the ancient Order, for although laying claim to a knightly succession, not a vestige remains of the original military power and political influence of the early Order, now merged into a peaceful but powerful Christian Society closely allied to Freemasonry.

The Templar Constitution in England has always been Trinitarian, and in the Statutes recently adopted no severance whatever from Freemasonry has taken place, for the Masonic qualification and the Ritual remains as before, merely substituting and restoring the old names and titles of the Order founded upon historical authority.

In the United States it would appear that the originators of their Templar system chose to found it altogether upon Freemasonry, adopting the obsolete and mistaken theory that the original Order of the Templars was based on the Craft degrees, and the two have become so connected that they cannot be separated by any one who has been received into these Orders, Templary being there emphatically a Masonic Order of Knighthood, requiring the possession of Masonic degrees not now recognised by the Grand Lodge of England.

At the Union in 1813 of the English Grand Lodges it was declared that "pure and ancient Freemasonry consisted of three degrees and no more, including the Royal Arch," therefore English Craft Masonry knows nothing, and can know nothing, by her unchanging constitutions, of any grades beyond the Royal Arch, or of any between it and the third or M.M. degree; at the same time the articles of union provided for, and did not interfere with, the Chivalric degrees continuing to be attached to Craft Lodges and Chapters.

TRADITION AND HISTORY IN MASONRY.

In the ritual and the usages of Freemasonry there are two kinds of statements which are continually presenting themselves to the enquiring student, and which sometimes are coincident, but much oftener conflicting in their character. These are the historical and the traditional, each of which belongs to Freemasonry as considered in a different aspect.

The historical statement relates to the Institution as we look at it in an exoteric or public point of view; the traditional refers only to its esoteric or secret character. Thus, when we are treating of Freemasonry as one of the social organizations of the world, as one of those institutions which have sprung up in the progress of society, and when we are considering what are or were the influences that the varying conditions of society produced upon it and what influences it has reciprocally produced on these varying conditions, we are then attempting to solve a historical problem, and we must arrive at the solution in a historical method, and not otherwise. We must discard all speculation, because history deals only in facts. If we were treating the history of a nation, we should assert nothing of it as historical that could not be traced to and verified by its written records. All that is conjectured of the events that may have occurred in the earlier times of such a nation, of which there is no record in contemporaneous or immediately subsequent times, is properly thrown into the dim era of the pre-historic age. It forms no part of the authentic history of the nation, and can be dignified, at its highest value, with the title of historic speculation only, which claims no other credence than that which its plausibility or its probability commands. Now, the possibility or the probability that a certain event may have occurred in the early days of a nation's existence, but of which event there is no record, will be great or little, as dependent on certain other events, which bear upon it and which come within the era of records. The event may have been possible but not probable, and then but very little or no importance would be given to it, and it must at once be relegated to the category of myths. Or it may have been both possible and highly probable, and we may be allowed to speculate upon it as something that had exerted an influence upon the primitive character or the subsequent progress of the nation. But even then, it would not altogether lose its mythical character. Whatever we might predicate of it would be only a plausible speculation. It would not be history, for that deals not in what may have been but only in that which actually has been.

The progress, in these latter days, of what are called the exact sciences has led, by the force of example and analogy, to a more critical examination of the facts, or rather the so-called facts of history.

Voltaire, in his Life of Charles XII., said: "Incredulity was the foundation of history." Years passed before the axiom, in all its force, was accepted by the learned. But at length it has been adopted as the rule of all historical criticism. To be credulous is now to be unphilosophical, and scholars accept nothing as history that cannot be demonstrated with almost geometrical certainty.

Neibuhr began by shattering all faith in the story of Rhea Sylvia, of Romulus, and of the maternal wolf, which, with many other incidents of early Roman history, were consigned by him to the region of the mythical.

In later times, the patriotic heart of Switzerland has been made to mourn by the discovery that the story of William Tell and of the apple which he shot from the head of his son is nothing but a mediæval fable, which was common to a great many other countries, and the circumstances of which, everywhere varying in details, still point to a common origin in some early myth.

It is thus that many narratives once accepted as veracious have been, by careful criticism, eliminated from the domain of history, and such works as Goldsmith's Histories of Greece and Rome are no longer deemed fitting text books for schools where nothing but truth should be taught.

The same rules of critical analysis which are pursued in the separation of what is true from what is false in the history of a nation should be applied to the determination of the character of all statements in Masonic history. This course, however, has not generally been pursued. Many of its legends are unquestionably founded on a historical basis; but quite as many are made up of a mixture of truth and fiction, the distinctive boundaries of which it is difficult to determine; while a still greater number are altogether mythical, with no appreciable element of truth in their composition. And yet, for nearly two centuries, all of these three classes of Masonic legendary lore have been accepted by the great body of the Fraternity, without any discrimination, as faithful narratives of undoubted authenticity. It is this liberal acceptance of the false for the true, and this ready recognition of fables for authentic narratives, which have encouraged imaginative writers to plunge into the realms of absurdity instead of confining themselves to the domain of legitimate history, which has cast over Masonic history an air of romance. Unjustly, but very naturally, some scholars have been led to reject all of our legends in every part as fabulous, because they found in some the elements of mendacity. But on the other hand the absurdities of legend makers and the credulity of legend believers have, by a healthy reaction, given rise to a school of iconoclasts to whom I shall directly have occasion to refer, and which sprang up from a laudable desire to conform the principles of criticism which are to govern all investigations into Masonic history to the rules which control profane writers in the examination of the history of nations.

As examples of the legends of Masonry which have tempted the credulity of many and excited the scepticism of others, I may cite that almost universally accepted legend—universal, except with the iconoclasts—which attributes the organization of Freemasonry, in its present form, to the era of the building of King Solomon's Temple—the story of Prince Edwin and the Grand Lodge congregated by him at the City of York, in the tenth century—and the theory that the three symbolic degrees were instituted as distinct Masonic grades at a period long anterior to the beginning of the eighteenth century. These statements, still believed in by all Masons who have not made the history of the Order an especial study, were, until recently, accepted by prominent scholars as veracious narratives. Even Dr. Oliver, one of the most learned as well as most prolific Masonic writers, has, in his numerous works, recognized them as historical truths without a word of protest or a sign of doubt, except, perhaps, with reference to the third legend above mentioned, of which he says with a cautious qualification, that he has "some doubts whether the Master's degree, as now given, can be traced three centuries backwards." *

But now comes a new school of Masonic students, to whom, borrowing a word formerly used in the history of religious strife, has been given the name of "iconoclasts." The word is a good one. The old iconoclasts or image breakers of the eighth century demolished the images and defaced the pictures which they found in the churches, led away by erroneous but still conscientious views, because they thought the people were mistaking the shadow for the substance and were worshipping the image instead of the Divine Being whom it represented. And so, these Masonic iconoclasts, with better views, are proceeding to break down the intellectual images, which the old and unlearned Masons had erected for their veneration. They are pulling to pieces the myths and legends, whose fallacies and absurdities and anachronisms had so long cast a cloud upon what ought to be the clear sky of Masonic history. But they have tempered their zeal with a knowledge and a moderation that was unknown to the iconoclasts of religion. These shattered the images and scattered the fragments to the four winds of heaven, or they demolished the picture so that not even a remnant of the canvass was left. Whatever there was of beauty in the work of the sculptor or the painter was for ever destroyed. Every sentiment of æsthetic art was overcome by the violence of religious fanaticism. Had the destructive labors of these iconoclasts been universal, and not confined to certain unfortunate limits, no foundation would have been left for building that science of Cristian symbolism, which in this day has been so interesting and so instructive to the archæologist. †

Not so have the Masonic iconoclasts performed their task. They have shattered nothing, they have destroyed nothing. When, in the course of their investigations into true Masonic history, they encounter a myth or a legend, replete, apparently, with absurdities or contradictions, they do not consign it to oblivion, as something unworthy of consideration, but they dissect it into its various parts; they analyze it with critical acumen; they separate the chaff from the wheat; they accept the portion that is probable, and, perhaps, confirmed by other collective testimony as true, and as a legitimate contribution to history; what is undoubtedly fictitious they receive as a myth, and either reject it altogether as an unmeaning addition to a legend, or give it an interpretation as the expression of some symbolic idea, which is itself of value in a historical point of view.

The lamented archæologist, George Smith, late of the British Museum, in speaking of the cuneiform inscriptions excavated in Mesopotamia, and the legends which they contain, says: ‡ "With regard to the supernatural element introduced into the story, it is similar in nature to many such additions to historical narratives, especially in the East, but I would not reject those events which may have happened, because in order to illustrate a current belief, or add to the romance of the story, the writer has introduced the supernatural."

It is on this very principle that the iconoclastic Masonic writers, such as Hughan and Woodford, are pursuing their researches into the early history of Freemasonry. They do not reject the events recited in the old legends which have certainly happened, because in the same legends they find also mythical narratives. They do not yield to the tendency which Smith says is now too general, "to repudiate the earlier part of the history, because of its evident inaccuracies and the marvellous element generally combined with it." It is in this way, and in this way only, that early Masonic history can be written. Made up, as it has been for centuries past, of a commingled tissue of historical narrative and legendary invention, hitherto it has been read without judicious discrimination. Either the traditionary account has been accepted as a whole as historical, and thus numerous errors have resulted, or it has been rejected as a whole as fabulous, and hence equally numerous errors have been the consequence.

As an example of the error which inevitably results from pursuing either of these two systems of interpretation, the one of which may be distinguished as the school of gross credulity, and the other as that of gross scepticism, let us take the legend known as the theory of the temple origin of Freemasonry, that is to say, the legend which places the organization of the Institution at the time of the building of the temple of Jerusalem.

Now, the former of these schools, implicitly receives the whole legend as true in all its parts, and recognizes King Solomon as the first Grand Master, with Hiram of Tyre and Hiram Abif as his Wardens, who presided over the Craft, divided into three degrees, the initiation into which was the same as that practised in the lodges of the present day.* So firmly convinced are the believers in this theory of its truth, that the brand of heterodoxy is placed upon all who deny or doubt it.

The disciples of the latter school whose scepticism is as excessive as the credulity of the others, reject as fabulous everything that tends to connect Freemasonry with the Solomonic Temple. To the King of Israel, himself, they refuse all honor, and repudiate with contempt all his claims to the position of a Masonic dignitary. One of these Pyrrhonists has recently gone so far in his disdain for legendary lore as to load the Jewish monarch with unnecessary and unmerited abuse.

Between these two parties, each of which is actuated by an intemperate zeal, come the iconoclasts, scholars, who calmly and dispassionately seek for truth only. These disavow, it is true, the authenticity of the temple legend in its present form. They deny that there is any proof, which a historian could, by the rules of criticism, admit as evidence that Freemasonry was organized at the building of the temple, and hence they look for its origin at some other period and under different circumstances. But they do not reject the temple and the myth connected with it as wholly unworthy of consideration. On the contary, they respect this legend as a symbol, and one whose importance cannot be over estimated. They trace its rise in the Old Constitutions; they find it plainly and significantly alluded to in the Legend of the Craft; and they follow it in its full development in the modern rituals. They thus recognize the influence that the story of the temple and its builders—feeble though it may be—has exerted in the construction of the Order, and thus they feel no disposition to treat the legend with contumely.

Knowing what an important part the legends and symbols of Masonry have played in the progress of the Institution, and how much its philosophic character is indebted to these myths and symbols for all that is peculiar to itself, they devote their literary energies, not to the expurgation of this legend of the temple, but to the investigation of how and when it arose, and to what is its real meaning as a symbol. And thus they are enabled to add an important item to the mass of true Masonic history which they have been accumulating.

How the researches of these iconoclastic scholars have been conducted, and to what results they have led, are matters not precisely germane to the present article, and which for their proper consideration would demand an independent essay.

So of the legend of Prince Edwin, whom the Old Constitutions make a son of King Athelstan, and the theory of a York Grand Lodge, each of which has been able considered by those true iconoclasts Woodford and Hughan. We may say that these laborious scholars have eliminated the fabulous from the true, and, without rejecting the whole of the legends, they have shown us how they have sprung up out of the true history of the Order, and how they may be explained without charging the framers of the old Masonic legends with any greater fault than that of a confusion of dates, of persons and of circumstances.

In short, the theory of the iconoclastic school, is that truth and authenticity must always and in the first place be sought; that nothing must be accepted as historical which has not the internal and external evidences of historical verity; and that, in treating legends, of almost every one of which we may say se non e vero, e ben trovato,—"if it is not true, at least it has been well invented"—we are not to reject them as altogether fabulous, but as having some hidden and occult meaning, which, as in the case of other symbols, we are diligently to seek to discover.

PROV. GRAND LODGE OF DEVONSHIRE.

OPENING OF A LODGE AT OKEHAMPTON.

THE Grand Lodge of Freemasons of the Province of Devon was held on the 26th inst. at Okehampton, and the feature of the meeting was the constitution and consecration of the Lodge of Obedience No. 1753. For some time past a number of Freemasons living in Okehampton and the neighbourhood, have felt the want of a Lodge for the district, and a few set about to get the desired object, the result being that a Lodge was opened with the usual ceremony and honours, and Bro. William Brodie P.M. 1254 was installed its first Master. The day was observed in Okehampton as a general holiday, and the pleasant festivities will live in the recollection of those who took a prominent part in the day's proceedings. Heavy showers fell during the day, but though it marred the enjoyment of individuals, it did not seriously interfere with the ceremonies. Brethren attended from great distances to take part in the duties of the Provincial Grand Lodge, and the procession was witnessed by a large number of inhabitants and visitors. Fortunately, no rain fell during the march of the procession, which was headed by the band of the First Devon Militia, under the conductorship of Bro. George James. The band also played during the banquet, between the showers, in the square in front of the White Hart Hotel.

The Committee of Petitions met at the Town Hall at 10.30, by the courtesy of the Mayor, W. Ponsford, Esq., and the representatives of the various Lodges attended for the purpose of discussing and deciding on the different claims upon the funds. £85 was voted, on recommendation, for apportionment to Masonic Charities. On the motion of Bro. S. Jones P.M. 112 P.P.G.S.D, the sum of fifty guineas was granted from the funds of Provincial Grand Lodge to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, and it was agreed that the sum should be added to Bro. S. Jones's list, as Steward; and the sum of £50 was voted to the Fortescue Annuity Fund.

The Provincial Grand Lodge met at the Schoolroom, North-lane, at 12.30, and the following Provincial Grand Officers amongst others were present:—Bros. Rev. John Huyshe P.G.C. P.G.M., L. P. Metham D.P.G.M., Fredk. W. Williams P.S.G.W., Walter Hylton-Joliffe P.G.J.W. 1205, J. Edward Curteis P.M. 189 P. Prov. S.G.W., W. Hyne-Haycock P. Prov. G.S.D. P.M. 164, 109, 13, Samuel Jones P.P.G.S.D. St. George 112, John B. Gover P.P.G.A.D.C. St. John 70, Vincent Bird P.P.G. Treasurer 954, Leonard D. Westcott P.M. 70 P.P.G.S. Wks., W. Whittley W.M. 156 P.P.G.C., William Thomas Maynard P.P.G. Treasurer 106, John H. Tonkin P.M. 282 P.P.G.A.D.C., H. W. Hooper P.M. 444, 1254, P.P.G.R., J. F. Long P.M. 89 P.G.S., John R. Nankivell P.M. 1332 P.P.G.C., Philip Williams 112 P.G.C., J. H. Westlake P.M. 666 P.P.G.P., H. B. Stark 106 P.P.G.O., Thomas Dand P.M. 39 P.P.G.S.B., J. Reayatt 1213 P.P.G.A.D.C., George W. Smales 312 P.P.G.S.W., Dr. Henry Hopkins P.P.G.S.W. for Warwickshire 41 P.M. 43, 958, &c., &c.

The Lodges having been assembled under their respective banners, it was notified to the Provincial Grand Master and his Officers that the P.G. Lodge was duly formed, and, on his entering from the robing-room, the P.G.M. was received by the brethren with the customary Masonic honours. The Lodge having been opened, the P.G. Secretary announced to the P.G. Master that the W.M. and members of the Lodge of Obedience, No. 1753, desired to be constituted and consecrated in ancient form. The P.G. Secretary read the warrant from the Most Worshipful the Grand Master of England, H.R.H. Prince of Wales, by whom the warrant was signed, and the P.G.M. called on the brethren of the new Lodge to signify their assent to the Officers named in the warrant.

The Deputy Provincial Grand Master—Bro. L. P. Metham—delivered the usual oration:—Brethren,—The word "Oration," as applied to the address I am about, in obedience to the command of our revered Provincial Grand Master, to make, implies greater preparation and study than I have been able to devote to it. Neither do I propose to speak at all on the general question of Freemasonry, but to confine myself simply to consider the important duties and obligations which the founders of this Lodge will, from to-day, be called upon to discharge, if they are really and truly the sincere Masons they profess to be. We welcome our new sister, the Lodge of Obedience, into our family circle, and congratulate the brethren on the so far successful issue of their efforts. Brethren of Lodge Obedience,—The selection of the name by which your Lodge will hereafter be known to you foreshadows your desire and intention to obey the Constitutions of the Order, and to be guided by the principles so constantly poured into your ears and instilled into your minds by the pure teaching of Freemasonry. Be true to those principles, and we shall ever look back to the ceremony of to-day with pride and pleasure,—I leave you to consider what will be our feelings if you are unfaithful to them. Worshipful Master Elect,—On your selection to-day of officers to assist you in governing your Lodge, and on your own conduct, not only in the chair, but out of it, for the coming year depends its success or failure. You have no errors of predecessors to undo or to be the excuse for neglect or shortcoming. The first page of the minute-book will bear your signature; take care that nothing recorded there shall ever bring the blush of shame to your own cheeks, or those of your members and successors. To you is committed the guardianship of the honour of the Craft, not only in Devon, but throughout the world. See that you protect it, and hand it unsullied to your successors. Be careful—most careful—that your officers are men of probity, intelligence, and of true Masonic feeling. Admit none to participate in our secrets, whose antecedents will not bear the strictest investigation, or who are not of a genial, kindly disposition, so that no unseemly wrangles may be introduced into the Lodge. Take care that none are admitted who have only curiosity or a convivial spirit to plead as a reason. Take care, too, that every candidate is above the suspicion of being actuated by selfish or mercenary motives; that the initiation fee is truly his own after the payment of his just debts and due provision made for all who are dependent upon him. To do otherwise would be to connive at fraud, and also be a cruel robbery of defenceless women and children. In the decision of every trespass against our rules, you will remember that "it is not meet that every nice offence should bear its comment," therefore you will judge with candour, admonish with friendship, and reprehend with mercy. But you must be firm to mark what is done amiss in every matter which really merits reprobation, or which is likely to bring disgrace on your Lodge or the Craft at large. Be zealous to defend a brother if unjustly assailed, and consider the interests of the Craft to be inseparably connected with your own. "Whatever your hand findeth to do, do it with all your might;" be diligent and upright in business, and in all that concerns your duty as a citizen. Be prompt to obey the voice of charity, not only in alms-giving, but in extending comfort, counsel and consolation to every one of your fellow-creatures in the hour of need and affliction. Thus will you exact and receive from the outer world reverence and regard for our noble Institution, and furnish the best answer to those who question the need for its existence. Thus will you paraphrase the words of a great living statesman:—"Our Brotherhood is no mean heritage, but it is not an heritage that can only be enjoyed; it must be maintained, and it can only be maintained by the same qualities that created it — by courage, by discipline, by patience, by determination to do and to defend the right."

The P.G.M. pledged the Master and members of the new Lodge to obey the laws and constitution of the Grand Lodge, and the P.G.M. then declared the Lodge of Obedience, No. 1,753, to be a regular and duly constituted Lodge. Bro. Brooks R.A.M., Torquay, presided at the organ.

* See the 2d edition of Anderson's Constitutions (chap. III), where the theory is first promulgated, and where that writer says, Hiram Abif, "in Solomon's absence, filled the chair as Deputy Grand Master, and, in his presence, was the Senior Grand Warden" (page 12). And again, that "Solomon partitioned the Fellow Crafts into certain lodges, with a Master and Wardens in each" (p 13), and lastly, that "Solomon was Grand Master of all Masons at Jerusalem, King Hiram was Grand Master at Tyre, and Hiram Abif had been Master of work" (p 15). The modern rituals have made some changes, but we evidently see here the "fons et origo" of the legend as it is now believed by the Masons of the Fraternity.

The ceremony of consecration was next proceeded with. The ode, "Hail, Universal Lord!" was sung, and the P.G. Chaplain delivered the opening invocation, and afterwards read a portion of Holy Scripture. The first prayer was said by the P.G. Master, all the brethren kneeling and chanting, "So mote it be." Amidst solemn music the Lodge was uncovered, and the second prayer was said, during which the P.G. Chaplain placed the sacred name upon the Lodge. Next followed the ceremony of consecrating the Lodge with corn, wine, and oil by the P.G. Master and his Grand Wardens, the P.G. Chaplain reading portions of Holy Scripture during the three perambulations. During the offering up of the Prayer of Consecration by the P.G.M., the W.M. and Wardens of the "Lodge of Obedience" deposited the working tools of the three degrees upon the Lodge. The chants "Glory to Thee, most High God," "The Father Everlasting," "As it was in the beginning," &c., followed, and the P.G. Chaplain offered up the Prayer of Dedication. The P.G.M. then seasoned the Lodge with salt, and P.G. Chaplain preceding him with burning incense and reading from the Bible. The final benediction was delivered by the P.G.M., and the brethren gave the "Grand Honours." At the end of the consecration, Bro. William Brodie, P.M. of No. 1244, the Master Designate of the "Lodge of Obedience," was duly installed as its first W.M., and he appointed and invested his Officers for the ensuing twelvemonths as follows:—Bros. B. Barber I.P.M., W. Pidsley S.W., J. W. Boon J.W., the Rev. C. W. H. Holley Chaplain, R. T. Relf Treasurer, G. W. Gould Secretary, A. J. G. Waters S.D., J. J. Ball J.D., A. Paddon I.G., J. Coombe Tyler. The appointment of Stewards and other minor Officers was postponed to the next Lodge. Bro. Samuel Jones P.P.G.S.D. was the Installing Master. The other business of the P.G. Lodge was then proceeded with. On the motion of Bro. J. E. Carteis P.P.G.S.W., the following resolution, passed at the Provincial Grand Lodge held at Exeter on the 29th of January 1874, was rescinded, viz.:—

"That in the opinion of this Provincial Grand Lodge it is not advisable to increase the number of Masonic Charitable Institutions for the following reasons:—

"(a) The existing Charities are very far from being adequately supplied with funds.

"(b) The means of particular Lodges in this Province are already taxed to the highest extent sanctioned by the Constitutions, and the revenues of the Provincial Grand Lodge admit of no material augmentation.

"(c) Though it is perfectly consistent with the principles of Masonry that means should be provided for the relief of brethren who have fallen into unmerited misfortune, yet is is by no means consistent with those principles that the Order should assume the form or the attributes of a Benefit Society."

The reports of the Secretary, Treasurer, Treasurer of the Fortescue Annuity Fund, and the Committee of Petitions, were received and adopted, and the P.G.M. appointed the following brethren the Prov. Grand Officers for the next twelvemonths, viz.:—The Hon. Walter Hylton Joliffe P.M. 1285 G.S. Warden, Samuel Jones P.P.S.G.D. G.J. Warden, the Rev. R. Thornton W.M. 164, and the Rev. R. Swansborough W.M. 1181 G. Chaplains, Robert Bishop Twose P.M. of Lodge Fortitude G. Treas., P. Stewart Kersteman P.M. 251 Grand Registrar, W. G. Rogers P.P.S.G.W. G. Secretary, Henry Woodgates P.M. 847 G.S. Deacon, William Brodie W.M. 1254 Grand J. Deacon, Edgar Toner P.M. 1443 G. Supt. Works, Samuel Loram P.M. 1443, G.D. of Ceremonies, J. F. Long P.M. 39 G. Assist. D. of Ceremonies, George John Bishop P.M. 106 G. Sword Bearer, James Ellis P.M. 1212 G. Organist, A. W. Wolf P.M. 223 G. Pursuivant, — Box P.M. 156, — Andrews P.M. 70, A. Bodley, P.M. 39, H. D. Thomas P.M. 444, B. Barber P.M. 1254, and J. B. Patterson P.M. 1125 G. Stewards, P. L. Blanchard G. Tyler, J. Rogers G. Assist. Tyler. Bros. J. Way and V. Bird were appointed auditors for the ensuing year.

A procession was formed after the Provincial Grand Lodge closed, and the brethren walked from the school-room to the White Hart Hotel, where the meetings of the new Lodges will be held, in the following order:—

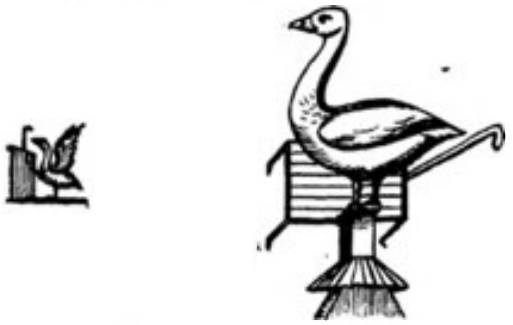
The band of the First Devon Militia. A Tyler with a drawn sword. Brethren, not members of any Lodge in the Province, two and two, Juniors preceding. The Brethren of the Lodges in the Province, two and two, the Junior Lodge preceding, each Lodge following its banner. The Provincial G. Tylers with drawn swords. Four Worshipful Masters of Lodges bearing Cornucopia with corn, and three vessels containing wine, oil, and salt. P.G. Pursuivants. The Grand Pursuivant. Past Grand Organists. The Grand Organist. Past Grand Sword Bearers. The Grand Sword Bearer. P.G. Directors of Ceremonies. The G. Director of Ceremonies and the Assistant G. Director of Ceremonies. P.G. Supts. of Works. The G. Supts. of Works. P.G. Deacons. The G. Secretary. Past Grand Registrars. The Grand Registrar. Past Grand Treasurers. The G. Treasurer. Past Grand Chaplains. Past Grand Wardens. The Corinthian Light borne by the W.M. of a Lodge. The Junior Grand Warden with the Plumb Rule. The Doric Light borne by the W.M. of a Lodge. The Senior Grand Warden with the Level. The Junior Grand Deacon. The Grand Chaplains bearing the Volume of the Sacred Law with the Square and compasses thereon, with a G. Steward on either side. The Deputy P. G. Master with the Square, preceded by his banner, borne by the W.M. of a Lodge. The Ionic Light borne by the Worshipful Master of a Lodge. A Past Provincial Grand Officer bearing the Mallet. The Banner of the Right Worshipful Provincial G. Master with a G. Steward on either side. The Grand Sword Bearer, bearing the Sword of State, the R.W. Prov. Grand Master, the Senior Grand Deacon, two Grand Stewards. On arriving at the portico of the hotel, the procession halted, the brethren opening to the right and left, facing inwards, leaving room for the Provincial Grand Master to pass up the centre, preceded by his banner and Grand Sword Bearer; the Grand Officers and brethren followed in succession from the rear.

A noticeable feature in the decoration of the school-room and in the procession was the beautiful hand-worked silk banner, belonging to Semper Fedelis Lodge, Exeter, which was given by Bro. J. Horswell. The banquet was held at the White Hart Hotel, the Provincial Grand Master presiding, and there were about 120 brethren present. The catering of Bro. John Ball was perfect in every way, and gave entire satisfaction. The tables were adorned with roses and other flowers, kindly sent by Mr. James Walters, of the Mount Radford Nursery.—Exeter and Plymouth Gazette.

MASONIC MYSTERIES.

By Bro. Jacob Norton.

WHEN I was very young I heard a sermon preached from a Rabinical text, viz., "Sin begets sin, and error begets error." The lecturer forcibly demonstrated the necessity of destroying every error before it can become the parent of other errors. Among other arguments he gave the following apt illustration:—



"The caterpillar (said he), which is so destructive to vegetation, if not destroyed in time, will become developed into a butterfly, and this butterfly will become the parents of a large number of caterpillars; hence the industrious farmer, by his destruction of these pests, not only stops their doing further mischief, but he also prevents their reproduction a thousandfold for the next year, and in a like manner by destroying one error, you prevent the production of a large progeny of errors which this error would have given birth to."

The above sketch of a sermon will, I trust, be sufficient answer to our self-appointed Masonic watchmen of Zion, who are opposed to my constant efforts to solve Masonic puzzles, and whose greatest argument against me is, "What object can be gained by running his head against the assertions of the early Masonic writers?" &c.

Freemasonry is a mystery. It is a mystery of mysteries. It is a mystery to the uninitiated as well as to the initiated. It is a mystery in its entirety, as well as in its numerous parts and details. Its name is a mystery; its antiquity is a mystery; its "landmarks" are mysteries. It is a mystery to me, that although Masons are taught that "truth is a divine attribute and the foundation of every virtue," that so many of the orthodox professional Masonic writers should either have promulgated errors, or should try to stifle discussion under the plea, "What object can be gained?" &c. The ritual itself is a great mystery. It professes Masonry to be unsectarian, but by hook or by crook, sectarianism was forced everywhere more or less into the Masonic rituals.

Apropos about the ritual, all my readers will probably recollect the following part, viz.:—"In all regular and well formed Lodges, there is a point within a circle," or in other words, that all regular well formed Lodges deduce instruction from a symbol known as the "parallel lines." I have lately, however, ascertained that in Pennsylvanian Lodges, that symbol is entirely unknown, and I have also been informed that the "parallel lines" are unknown in Scotch Lodges. The question therefore is, whether the Pennsylvania and Scotch Lodges can possibly be regarded as regular and well formed Lodges?

Among the numerous Masonic mysteries and puzzles over which I pondered, the mystery to which I shall now direct the reader's attention is certainly not the least curious. It is well known to every reader of the Freemason's Chronicle that the English Grand Lodge was organized in 1717 at the Goose and Gridiron in Saint Paul's Churchyard. Now would any one believe (for it seems scarcely credible) that two distinct geese, accompanied by distinct gridirons, which are as unlike as the two accounts about Thomas Dunckerley, which I communicated in a former number, should now, in 1878, be in the field, and each of these geese claim to be the genuine orthodox goose attached to the ale house in St. Paul's Churchyard in 1717? Here are the two geese with the gridirons, and the question is, which is the pretender, and which is the orthodox goose?

In 1876, Bro. Mac Calla, the editor of the Keystone at Philadelphia, obtained one of the above geese. I mean the larger goose standing upon a chimney pot, partly obscuring the gridiron. That goose was presented to Bro. MacCalla by P.G.M. Bro. John T. Heard of Boston. Our Bro. MacCalla of course wrote an article, and placed his goose and gridiron at the top of it. Our friend Bro. Woodford, after passing some very fine compliments to the editor of the Keystone, reprinted the said article (goose and all), in the September number of the Masonic Magazine. Of course, every zealous Mason has so far feasted his eyes on what he supposed to be the identical goose and gridiron of the St. Paul's Churchyard alehouse of 24th June 1717, and as far as I know they might have gone on feasting their eyes—I don't know how long. But I happened to see a reprint by Bro. Albert Pike of Pine's engraved Lodge list of 1725, and from thence I copied the other Goose and Gridiron, which seems to be as lively as a kitten, striking its leg against the wires of the gridiron, as if it was amused with the musical sound produced by the vibration of the wires. And who knows whether it had reference to music? for, according to the able Reviewer of Bro. Hughan's reprint of Pine's list, the alehouse in St. Paul's had formerly been devoted to music. But be that as it may, as the subject about the "Four Old Lodges" now discussed in the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, which discussion I sincerely appreciate, and which seems to be equally appreciated by others, is now attracting general attention, I therefore deemed it just the right nick of time to introduce the two rival Geese and Gridirons to the attention of the English brethren. There is an error somewhere, and if the error is not at once removed, Masonic geese will multiply almost as fast as caterpillars. I hope, therefore, and trust, that some authority will decide as to which goose is the real Simon pure.

COMMITTEE MEETING—GIRLS' SCHOOL.

THE monthly meeting of the General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls was held on Thursday, at Freemasons' Hall. There were present Bros. Col. Creaton (in the chair), A. H. Tattershall, E. H. Finney, R. B. Webster, James E. Peters, Thomas W. White, G. R. Shervill, H. Massey, Arthur E. Gladwell, H. Browse, Thomas Mason and F. R. W. Hedges. Notice of motion was given for confirming the recommendation of the House Committee to increase the annual donation to the Chaplain to £25, and to the local Charities at St. John's Hill to ten guineas. The Committee having accepted the Guarantee Society as surety for the Secretary, Bro. Browse gave notice of motion that the Institution pay the necessary premiums. Two little girls were accepted as candidates for election in April. The chairman gave two notices of motion, one for electing four girls in October, and the other for appointing a sub-Committee for revising the laws of the Institution.

CHARITY STEWARDS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The correspondence which appeared in your columns of last week with reference to your article on this subject will, I should think, be the means of inducing several past Stewards to give their personal experiences, and I hope may produce some benefit to the Charities. Your correspondent, "A STEWARD WHO HAS SERVED ONCE," has, I consider, hit the right nail on the head, when he states that brethren object to repeat their Stewardship in consequence of the expenses which it entails, although I hardly think he expresses the matter correctly. I consider that the real objection in our neighbourhood is, not so much that the work is expensive, but that it is really money wasted, and that some means might be devised for the expense of the Festivals being borne by those who take part in them, and not make those who may be many miles away pay just the same as those who are present. Take my own case, I have served four Stewardships; well, on the first occasion I of course went up to the Festival, just to see what was done, but since then certainly should not have attended only I hardly liked giving the fee for nothing; consequently I have gone to the additional expense of railway fare, accommodation in London, &c., thereby making the—to me—unnecessary expense of each Stewardship amount to about £4. As to the expense of your correspondent's wife accompanying him, I consider that entirely a separate matter, although, as he states, if it had not been the custom for Stewards to attend he would not have spent that money on her visit. The question has been under discussion for some time past among those who work for the Charities in this district, and one brother of a neighbouring Lodge has told me that he has decided not to again put his name down as a Steward, but to send the subscriptions which he intends to continue to collect as from his Lodge. He has served eight Stewardships, and states that on each occasion he has become more and more convinced that the fees and expenses of attending the Festival are a waste, and therefore he has decided to act differently for the future. At no very distant date I believe the matter will be brought under the notice of our Prov. Grand Lodge, whose assistance in all questions connected with Masonic Charity matters we are in the habit of soliciting, and should they advise any alteration, you may rely that it will be carried out throughout the Province, and this will be quickly followed by some neighbouring ones.

Yours fraternally,

Deal, 29th August 1878. INVICTA.

HAVE WE TOO MANY LODGES?

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Under this heading you last week reprinted an article from the Masonic Review, which has in it some very good points, but there is a feature in connection with the question to which I should like to call attention. As a rule big Lodges are a mistake, no doubt, except in the case of "seafaring" Lodges, where a large proportion of the members are birds of passage. It is very discouraging to young members when their early zeal is nipped in the bud by their failure to obtain office, and it should be the ambition of every brother to take some active part in the work of his Lodge. But still it is not given to every brother to have the qualifications necessary for ruling a Lodge, and I think promoters of new Lodges, as well as those who are responsible for the granting of Warrants, should take early steps to ascertain whether there is a probability of a succession of suitable brethren to fill the chair of K.S. I think if any of us reflect for a few minutes, we shall find our experience telling us that a very small proportion of brethen are in any sense qualified to preside over the affairs of a Lodge, and I feel sure that the "weakness" of many a country Lodge arises from this very cause. The first W.M. is probably chosen because he seems especially qualified for the post, but there is most likely little thought as to his successor, and the consequence of this is that after a brilliant first year the Lodge dwindles down (not in numbers, but in influence and reputation), and becomes one of that too numerous section of Lodges, to visit any of which is not a pleasure, but a task, both painful and saddening. To multiply Lodges in small centres where there is no probability of an adequate supply of good Masters, is to strike a blow at the well-being of the Order generally, and I, for one, should be very glad to see the process of procuring a Warrant made more difficult than at present, by the raising of the fee to £50.

I am, yours fraternally,

T. B. W.

VOTING ORGANIZATION.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I can fully endorse the statements of your correspondent, "A CONSTANT READER," and like him, I trust that Bro. Lacey will persevere in his efforts. As to the second Society of which "A CONSTANT READER" refers, it is as well it should be generally known that the proposal, or rather the idea of such a proposal, is obviously borrowed from that which induced the former, made in accordance with sundry recommendations contained in the columns of your esteemed journal. Judging, as I do, from the known lack of originality invariably exhibited by the weightier among those brethren who "assisted" at the second meeting, I should, if I were called upon to argue the matter, have no hesitation in affirming that the second idea is derived from the first, and that in the hurry of taking the initiatory steps for the proposed organisation, the mover and his supporters have forgotten to acknowledge, with that uniform kindness and consideration by which they are distinguished, the source of their inspiration. This is by no means the first time I have seen this kind of thing has been done, and I rejoice that "A CONSTANT READER" has drawn attention to it.

I remain, fraternally yours,

P. ORGAN.

A limitation that, except in special cases, the fund should be allowed to accumulate for two years before being drawn upon was added as a rider.

The V.W. Francis E. Clarke LL.D. carried a resolution of which he had given notice, that the Prov. Grand Lodge do subscribe to the funds of the Male and Female Orphan Schools annually such an amount as will eventually qualify the several chairs of the Grand Officers with Life Governorships in the several schools.

After which the brethren dined together in the evening, Bro. Dr. Scott presiding, when the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

ON Friday last the Queen, accompanied by Princess Beatrice and Prince Leopold, left Osborne for Scotland. Her Majesty reached Broxmouth House, the seat of the Duke of Roxburghe, on Saturday morning, and remained there on a visit until Monday evening, when she started for Balmoral, which place was reached early on Tuesday morning. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales accompanied the King of Denmark on a visit to Portsmouth on Monday last; they also inspected several of the ships which were anchored in the harbour.

A court martial for inquiring into the circumstances attending the loss of Her Majesty's ship Eurydice was opened on Tuesday last, on board the flagship at Portsmouth the Duke of Wellington. As may naturally be expected a considerable amount of evidence will be adduced, but whether any good will arise from the inquiry it is impossible to say; we fear that, as the bulk of the evidence will bear upon technicalities only, no satisfactory report will be forthcoming. Still we suppose the nation would hardly like so unfortunate an occurrence to pass without the strictest investigation.

During the week we have had some very heavy thunderstorms, not, however, marked by the extreme violence of those of last week. The South of England particularly seems to have experienced their effects. About ten minutes past eight a.m. on Thursday the wife of J. Sharman, gardener to Mr. Christopher Lethbridge, of Elmsdale, Blackheath Park, was struck by lightning whilst dressing in her bedroom, and killed instantaneously. Her infant, lying in a cot in the same room, escaped. Her husband, who was in a room below, was uninjured. The deceased had been married but two years. A very severe thunderstorm burst over Brighton. The thunder was loud and continuous, and the lightning exceedingly brilliant, while the rain fell in a perfect deluge. At Canterbury the electric current struck a large chimney at the Kent and Canterbury Hospital, doing considerable damage. The débris knocked down a man who was passing at the time. He was picked up in an insensible condition. At Chatham the lightning was very vivid and the thunder heavy. The rain came down in torrents, flooding some of the thoroughfares. A man at Rochester driving a locomotive engine was struck by lightning and rendered temporarily unconscious, but he appears to have received no permanent injury. At East Grinstead three valuable horses belonging to Mr. George Brand, of Goodwin's Farm, were killed by lightning. A boy who was feeding them was unhurt. At Abingdon two valuable cows were struck while grazing on the bank of the river below Nuneham House, and killed instantaneously. In Essex much inconvenience and mischief has been caused. In several towns and villages houses have been damaged by the lightning and flooded by the rains; while crops have been sadly beaten down, especially by hail. In many places the roads have been two feet and three feet under water. Altogether the disasters during the week from tempestuous causes have been of a serious character.

During the week two fatal fires have occurred—one at Birmingham on Monday last, by which four persons lost their lives, and three others were seriously injured, and the other at Hackney, where two children, who were playing with lucifer matches, set fire to the house and were suffocated before assistance could reach them. At the former the scene is described as very distressing, the fatalities being witnessed by a large crowd, who were, however, unable to prevent their occurrence. Certain parts of the fire escape caught fire, which rendered it necessary to relax the efforts which were being made by its means to rescue the inmates of the house. We should think in these days of advancement some method could be devised to render it impossible that such an event should occur; we find iron used now for what a few years since would have been considered impossibilities, and surely such an article as a fire escape could either be built of that metal, or in some other way rendered fireproof. We hope some steps will be taken before long with this object in view.

When we have decided where we shall spend our holiday, we are sometimes assailed by difficulties as to how we shall get to our destination. A case is in our mind where the children of a friend are suffering from that interesting complaint the whooping cough, and the railway company refuse to carry the sufferers unless Paterfamilias engages an entire compartment. At the Mansion House Justice-room, on Thursday, Bro. Henry Whittingham, the captain of the Rhine steamer, belonging to the General Steam Navigation Company, attended before Ald. Phillips to answer a summons which charged him with having, on 3rd August, carried on board that steamer, on a voyage from London to Yarmouth, 259 passengers in excess of the number specified in the Certificate of the Board of Trade, contrary to the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act, and for which offence he had incurred a penalty of £20 and a fine of 5s for every passenger carried in excess of the number for which the vessel had a certificate. It appeared from a statement made by Mr. Straight that the occurrence took place on the Saturday previous to Bank Holiday. He said there was a good deal of pressure upon the company to provide accommodation for persons desirous to avail themselves of the holiday, and three steamers belonging to the company—the Rhine, the Albion, and the Seine—were at Fresh Wharf for the purpose of conveying passengers to Yarmouth. The Rhine was only licensed to carry 363 passengers, but on this day 622 passengers were allowed to go on board the vessel, and were conveyed to Yarmouth, the excess on the number being 259. The learned gentleman urged that though the journey was performed by daylight, the admission of such a large excess in the number of passengers might have been attended with most serious consequences, and that the defendant, although an excellent seaman, and fully competent to take charge of his vessel, had been several times before convicted of a similar offence. Two witnesses were called on behalf of the company, who showed that although the larger number of passengers was carried on board the Rhine, she was not in any way crowded, and all were safely conveyed to their destination without suffering any inconvenience. Sir. B. Phillips considered the question was one of considerable importance, and the public were indebted to the Treasury authorities for having taken up the matter. He regarded it as a very serious thing for a steamboat company to allow such a large number of passengers to be conveyed on board one of their vessels in excess of the number she was authorised to carry. He ordered the defendant to pay a fine of £20, and 2s 6d for every passenger carried in excess, and the costs, amounting altogether to £52 10s, which amounts were at once paid.

The various questions presumably settled by the Berlin Congress still appear to give considerable trouble to those interested in their definite adjustment. The resistance to the Austrians, both in Bosnia and Herzegovina, is not overcome, and it has been deemed desirable that large reinforcements should be sent in order to complete the occupation. It is even reported from Belgrade that General Szaparay has been forced back and compelled to retire across the river Bosna, but this news needs confirmation. The Vienna papers are very strong in their condemnation of the Porte, which they state is secretly urging the inhabitants of Bosnia and Herzegovina to oppose the advance of the Austrian troops. The withdrawal of the English Fleet from Turkish waters has not yet taken place, in consequence of the Russians not having completed their retirement from San Stefano. As this work is being carried on, although very slowly, we may expect to hear in a few days of the movement of the English Fleet, and thereby the removal of the last of the precautionary measures it was deemed desirable to take during the recent conflict. The Russians seem very undecided how to act with regard to the occupation of Batoum; it appears certain were they to enter by force, considerable disturbance would occur; and to avoid this, they have now consented not to advance any further for a fortnight. The Turks have promised during that time to use every endeavour to induce the armed tribes to abstain from opposition, which, we trust, they will be able successfully to accomplish, if once force of arms has to be resorted to it is impossible to say when or where the matter will be settled. Certain of the Turks, now that they are released from the pressure of their enemy, are urging the Sultan to refuse to surrender any territory, and although at present the party who advocate such measures are in the minority, it is questionable whether the feeling will not spread, and that some difficulty may yet arise. The Russians with a view of providing for the cost of their late expedition, have announced a new loan of 300,000,000 roubles, which they offer at 93 per 100, to bear interest at the rate of 5 per cent. There has been some rumour of Marshal MacMahon resigning his position as President of the French after the close of the Exhibition at Paris, but nothing definite has been announced. Considerable discussion has occurred respecting such an event, but it is generally believed the rumour is entirely unfounded. The fetes which we last week announced as being held in Belgium in commemoration of the marriage of the King and Queen have continued, but have been greatly marred by bad weather. The report of Mr. Wilson as to the Egyptian finances has been accepted as a correct statement by the Khedive, who expresses his willingness that his own private estates, as well as those of his relatives, shall be given up for the public benefit. Fearful accounts of the ravages of yellow fever are daily received from the various towns and villages on the Mississippi, the infection this year being worse than that known for some time past, many of the negro inhabitants being attacked as well as Europeans. Intelligence from the Cape is satisfactory, the native insurrection being reported as subsiding.

VILLAINY DEFEATED!

THE Lodge was dim, and dusk, and grim;
The lights were lit, but they had mostly
Been turn'd low—too low—and so
The place look'd very blue and ghostly.

No sound was heard, and nothing stirr'd
The hush that made the place so mystic,
Until the door, full slow and sure,
Was opened in a way mephistic!

And, lo! a head, all shock and red,
Into the room with care intruded;
With hollow eyes it quickly spies
That no one's there—itself excluded!

Then, gaunt and thin, a man comes in—
He shuts the door and turns the handle,
Darts thro' the gloom across the room,
And near upsets the Master's candle!

Not long he thinks, but quickly sinks
Upon all fours, in manner able;
Then off he glides, and softly hides
Beneath the Secretary's table!

In folds around unto the ground
The cover falls so very neatly,
That 'neath its lid the wretch is hid,
All safely, surely, and completely!

* * * * *

Anon, a noisy neighb'ring clock
Distinctly tells the hour of eight,
And with the last decided knock
Comes ev'ry mighty potentate.

Each settles quickly in the Lodge,
For business must be set about;
Around the Guard and Tyler dodge
To keep all interlopers out.

The Secretary sagely sits,
And coughs a cough quite grandly gruff;
And then, to brighten up his wits,
He takes a mighty pinch of snuff.

As always is the case with such,
One half the pinch he tries to taste
Soon proves to be—a half too much,
And so it all is lost in waste,
For little clouds in mid air hover,
That settle on the table cover;
And when the Secretary shakes it,
The hidden man unkindly takes it,
As clouds of dust and snuff arise,
That fill his mouth, his nose, his eyes,
And make him very ill at ease,
For, oh! he wants—he wants—to sneeze!

Oh, dear! oh, lor! how snuff is curst!
He feels as tho' he'll choke or burst!
He struggles, gasps, and pants, and whoezes,
Until, oh, woe! he loudly sneezes!

"S'death!" The Lodge is all confusion!
Each one dashes from his seat,
Eager to resent intrusion,
And aid in wreaking vengeance meet.

But quick the foeman leaves the floor,
And quicker still undoes the door;
And then—oh, black and base defiler,
He doubles up the poor old Tyler!

But tho' he's free, and now can dash on,
And so escape their righteous passion,
A cloud of cubes, and plumbs, and gavels,
Assist the villain on his travels.

The moral of this short narration
Is worthy great consideration—
For should mean spies admission get,
You'd fain remove each knavish duffer:
To PUT OUT WICKED men, why, let Your Secretary be—A SNUFFER!

QUARTERLY COMMUNICATION OF GRAND LODGE.

THE following is the business to be transacted in Grand Lodge on Wednesday next, the 4th September 1878:—

1. The Minutes of the Quarterly Communication of the 5th June for confirmation.

2. In consequence of the Resolutions passed at the last Quarterly Communication for keeping Banking Account of the Grand Lodge, in future, at the Bank of England, certain alterations in the Book of Constitutions are rendered necessary.

The M.W. Grand Master will therefore move—

1st. To repeal Articles 2 and 3, page 35, of the Book of Constitutions.

2nd. To substitute for them the following: viz.:—"All monies belonging to the Grand Lodge shall be deposited in the Bank of England in the names of the Grand or Pro Grand Master, the Deputy G. Master, and the Grand Treasurer. The duties of the Grand Treasurer shall be to keep a general supervision of the accounts, to sign cheques, which must be countersigned by the Grand Secretary, for all monies duly voted by the Grand Lodge, and generally to assist and advise the Trustees and Executive Officers in the due and faithful administration of the funds of the Fraternity. The accounts shall be annually audited by the professional auditor to be appointed by the Grand Master pursuant to a Resolution passed in Grand Lodge on the 23rd June 1859."

3. The M.W. Pro Grand Master will make a communication to Grand Lodge with regard to the scrutiny for the election of members of the Board of General Purposes at the Quarterly Communication on the 5th of June last; and a Resolution will be proposed approving the action of the Pro Grand Master in the matter.

4. Report of the Lodge of Benevolence for the last quarter, in which are recommendations for the following Grants, viz.:—

A Brother of the Lodge of Sympathy, No. 483, Gravesend	£50	0	0
The Widow of a Brother, of the Hartington Lodge, No. 1021, Barrow-in-Furness	£50	0	0
A Brother of the Lion Lodge, No. 312, Whitby	£50	0	0

5. REPORT OF THE BOARD OF GENERAL PURPOSES.

To the United Grand Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of England.

The Board of General Purposes beg to report to Grand Lodge as follows:—

At a Special meeting of the Board held on Tuesday, the 2nd July 1878, by direction of the Pro Grand Master, to consider the matters relative to the election of Members of the Board by Grand Lodge on the 5th June 1878, the several papers (five in number) containing the summary of the votes were produced, and the scrutineers (who had been summoned to attend the Board) were called upon to identify their respective papers.

Upon investigation only one paper appeared to the Board to require positive explanation, in consequence of there being recorded upon the face of it 113 votes in favour of a brother whose correct grand total of votes, as ascertained by examination of the whole of the voting papers, by order of the Pro Grand Master, amounted to only 59.

The entire number of brethren in Grand Lodge at the Quarterly Communication referred to was 404, and the voting papers examined and retained in the hands of the Grand Secretary amount to 374, so that no more than 30 could by any possibility be missing, even supposing that every brother present voted.

The Scrutineers' paper containing the said discrepant record was identified by Bro. Joseph Smith, Past Grand Pursuivant, and by Bro. William Hilton P.M. of the Royal Alfred Lodge, No. 780, as the paper recording the votes examined by them, and upon these brethren alone of the whole body of Scrutineers the Board thought it necessary to call for explanation.

It was stated by them that Bro. Joseph Smith performed the part of calling out the several votes on the balloting papers, and that Bro. William Hilton marked down upon the Scrutineers' paper the votes so called out.

Bro. Joseph Smith was called upon to explain the palpable discrepancy between the number of votes actually recorded for the Brother in question, and the number called out by him to Bro. Hilton as having been so recorded, and the explanation offered by him was, in the opinion of the Board, most unsatisfactory, and could not by any possibility be reconciled with the facts as ascertained by the Board, who reported accordingly to the Pro Grand Master.

At a Special Meeting of the Board of General Purposes, held on Tuesday, the 30th day of July 1878, by direction of the Pro Grand Master, the Board arrived unanimously at the following conclusions:—

That Bro. Joseph Smith wilfully misrepresented the votes on the balloting papers examined by him.

That in consequence the return made to Grand Lodge by Bro. Joseph Smith, as Chairman of the Scrutineers, was false, and that Bro. Joseph Smith, when making such return, must have known and did know that the same was false.

That in addition to being guilty of a grave Masonic offence in misrepresenting the number of votes given, Bro. Joseph Smith violated his solemn pledge as Scrutineer, under the provisions of Article 3, page 108, of the Book of Constitutions, and thereby rendered himself amenable to Masonic punishment under Article 8, page 109.

And it was thereupon unanimously resolved:—

"1st. That Bro. Joseph Smith be suspended from all his Masonic functions and privileges for a period of two years."

"2nd. That it has not been proved to the satisfaction of the Board that Bro. William Hilton was in complicity with Bro. Joseph Smith, but that it has been established that Bro. William Hilton was negligent in the discharge of his duties as Scrutineer."

"3rd. That Bro. William Hilton be admonished for the above mentioned neglect of his duties as Scrutineer."

The Board have further to report that they have appointed a Committee to enquire and report whether any better mode can be devised than that specified in the Book of Constitutions, which may ensure greater accuracy in conducting the elections by Grand Lodge of Members for the several Boards and Committees.

NOTICES OF MEETINGS.

Egyptian Lodge of Instruction, No. 27.—At Bro. Maidwell's, the Hercules Tavern, 119 Leadenhall-street, E.C., on Thursday evening, the 29th inst. Bros. Webb W.M., Maidwell S.D., Norden J.W., Da Silva S.D., Moss J.D., Hunter I.G., Grammer Hon. Sec., Webb Preceptor, and numerous other brethren. The Lodge having been opened in the usual manner, the ceremony of installation was efficiently rehearsed by Bro. F. Brown W.M. 174, assisted by Bro. Webb and the brethren. The ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Grammer acting as candidate. Bro. Maidwell was elected W.M. for next Thursday, and the Lodge was closed.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 193.—Met on Wednesday, the 28th inst., at the Railway Tavern, London-street, E.C. There were present Bros. Moss W.M., Sayer S.W., Biddle J.W., Gottheil P.M., Brown S.D., Harris J.D., Bush I.G., Walker, Skelt, Webb, Bolman, and Brunes. The first ceremony was rehearsed. In accordance with previous arrangement, Bro. Moss vacated the chair in favour of Bro. Brown, for the purpose of working the ceremony of installation, a duty which that brother most successfully accomplished, and at the conclusion of the business in hand was rewarded with a very sincere and cordial vote of thanks. Bro. Sayer was elected W.M. for Wednesday next.

Alliance Lodge, No. 667.—A meeting was held on Tuesday, 20th August, at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, Liverpool. Present—Bros. John Ellis W.M., Henry Firth S.W., J. H. Gregory J.W., Thos. Peake Secretary, T. Ockleshaw P.M. Treas., A. Bucknall J.D., Bailey and Craghill Stewards, R. Foulds I.G., P. Ball Tyler; P.M.'s Bros. Bitter, Devaynes, Jackson, and G. S. Willings; Visitors—Bros. Johnstone J.W. 786, Jones 84, Canada, Langley, and Grundy 249, Leatham 823, Stubbs 1547, Massey 673. Lodge opened, and the minutes were read. Bros. Walker and Sefton were examined; Lodge opened in the second degree, and Bros. Walker and Sefton were passed, by Bro. John Ellis W.M. The lecture on the tracing board was very ably given by Bro. G. S. Willings I.P.M. The sum of five guineas was voted for charitable purposes, and the Lodge was closed. The brethren adjourned to banquet.

Royal Alfred Lodge of Instruction, No. 780.—At the Star and Garter Hotel, Kew Bridge, on 23rd August. Present Bros. Tucker (Treas.) W.M., Costelow S.W., Gomm J.W., Gunner Sec., Goss S.D., May J.D., Franckel I.G., Roe P.M. Preceptor, and Bros. Kyezor, Talbot, Botley, Wood, &c. Lodge was regularly opened, and the minutes read and confirmed. The W.M. ably rehearsed the ceremony of the third degree, Bro. Botley candidate. Lodge was resumed to first degree, and the call given to refreshment. Upon labour being resumed, Bro. Wood tendered himself as a candidate for Masonic light, and was impressively initiated. Upon the motion of Bro. Franckel, seconded by Bro. Goss, Bro. Wood was elected a member. The Sec. then proposed that bye-law 19 should be altered by omitting the word "September," and inserting "November" in lieu thereof. As the bye-law at present stands, it brings the Lodge of Instruction banquet into the same month as the gathering which concludes the season of the Mother Lodge. The proposition was seconded in a few pithy remarks by Bro. Roe, and carried unanimously. On the proposition of Bro. Roe, seconded by Bro. Gomm, Bro. Costelow was elected W.M. for next meeting; in acknowledging the honour, Bro. Costelow expressed his intention to do his best; but he could not promise the brethren anything like the intellectual treat they had had that evening. The Secretary announced that he had received a letter from Bro. Acworth (the W.M. of preceding Friday), stating that he was so indisposed as to be compelled to keep his room, but he sent hearty good wishes. Lodge was closed with due observance of antient usage, and adjourned till 30th August at half-past seven p.m.

Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, No. 860.—Held its weekly meeting on Tuesday evening last, at Bro. Smyth's Sisters' Tavern, Pownall-road, Dalston. Bros. Gilham W.M., Hunt S.W., Wardell J.W., Polak S.D., Weige J.D., Forss I.G., Dallas Sec., Smyth Treas., P.M. Wallington Preceptor; Bros. Bessell, Gilham jun., J. Lorkin, Webb, Borer, Crouch, Finch, Allen, Kershaw, C. Lorkin, Masters, Brasted, Taylor, Chandler and others. After preliminaries, the ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Davis candidate. The Preceptor in his usual excellent manner worked the installation ceremony, and placed Bro. Allen in the chair. The W.M. resumed the chair, and the Lodge was closed to the first degree. Bros. Martin of Lodge 212, Taylor and Chandler of Lodge 1677, and Kershaw of 773, were elected members. Bro. Hunt will preside at the next meeting. During the evening reference was made to the fact that this Lodge of Instruction, since its removal from the Triangle, Hackney, had held its meetings regularly each week, not a break having occurred during the twelve months. Brethren who desire instruction should pay this Lodge a visit. The Preceptor is a most competent instructor, and spares no pains to impart the knowledge he possesses. The worthy Sec. Bro. Richard Dallas is likewise most hearted in the cause, and seems to be in the height of his glory when the attendance of members is large. This, by the bye, is almost invariably the case.

Whittington Lodge of Instruction, No. 862.—On Wednesday, the 28th inst., at Bro. Hyde's, the Red Lion, Poppin's-court, Fleet-street. Bro. Thompson W.M., Hallam S.W., Drury J.W., Long Preceptor, and a goodly number of brethren. The ceremony of initiation was performed by the W.M., after which he vacated the chair to Bro. Alcock, who then ably performed the ceremony of installation. Bro. Collinson was elected a joining member, and Bro. Hallam W.M. for ensuing week. A vote of thanks was accorded to Bro. Alcock for his able working, and he was made an honorary member of the Lodge.

Upton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1227.—Held at the King and Queen, Norton Folgate, on Friday, the 23rd instant. Bros. Bolton W.M., Moss S.W., Richmond J.W., Hine S.D., Townsend I.G. Lodge being opened, the minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. The ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Hine acting as candidate. This brother also proved his efficiency, and the ceremony of passing was rehearsed. Lodge resumed to the first degree, and Bro. Moss worked the second section of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. Notice of motion was given that the meetings nights of the Lodge be altered from Friday to Thursday evenings. Bro. Moss was elected to preside at the next meeting, after which Lodge was closed. We may state that the poor attendance of the brethren was owing to the stormy weather. Bro. Crouch had announced his intention to rehearse the ceremony of installation, but could not come; we also know that the Preceptor, Bro. Fenner, was prevented attending, owing to the flooded state of his neighbourhood, which is near Finsbury Park. We hope to see a better muster of the brethren at future meetings.

Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, No. 1507.—Held its usual weekly meeting at the Metropolitan Club, 269 Pentonville-road, King's Cross, on Tuesday, 28th August. Present—Bros. J. W. Smith W.M., T. C. Edmonds S.W., F. Pierdon J.W., F. W. Sillis S.D., L. Solomon I.G., W. M. Stiles (Sec.) in the absence of Bro. T. A. Adams P.G.P., who is enjoying a well-deserved rest at the sea side, acting Preceptor. The Lodge was opened in due form, with solemn prayer, and the ceremony of initiation rehearsed. The first and second sections of the first lecture were worked by Bros. Sillis and Stiles respectively. Bro. Edmonds elected W.M. for ensuing week; Officers appointed in rotation. All Masonic business being ended, the Lodge was closed in due form with solemn prayer and in perfect harmony. This Lodge, notwithstanding the hot weather and the absence from town of many of its members, continues to hold its meetings weekly during the summer months.

Duke of Connaught Lodge of Instruction, No. 1524.—Held at the Havelock Tavern, on Wednesday evening, 28th instant. Present—Bros. R. Olley W.M., C. Lorkin S.W., G. Ferrar J.W., — Francis S.D., Woolley J.D., McMillan I.G., Fieldwick Preceptor, E. Dietrich Secretary, McDowell, O. Dietrich, W. Ferrar, &c. The Lodge was opened in ancient form, and the minutes of the previous meeting confirmed. The ceremony of initiation was then rehearsed in a very able manner by the W.M., Bro. W. Ferrar being candidate. Bro. Lorkin, assisted by the brethren, worked the first, second, third and fourth sections of the lecture. A cordial vote of thanks was recorded on the minutes to Bro. C. Olley for the highly efficient manner in which he worked the ceremony, and conducted the proceedings, this being the first time he had occupied the chair. Bro. C. Lorkin was elected W.M. for the next meeting. It was resolved that the annual supper take place on the first Wednesday in October. An efficient board of Stewards was appointed.

Alexandra Palace Lodge, No. 1541.—On Saturday last this young but prosperous Lodge held a most interesting meeting, over which Bro. Haigh, the very efficient W.M. presided, assisted by his Officers, viz.:—Bros. Lee S.W., Daniel J.W., Larchin S.D., Kensington J.D., Denison I.G., and Palmer P.M. The Lodge was attended by a numerous and distinguished number of visitors and members. The initiation of Messrs. Jarmain, Herridge, and Clark into Masonry was performed by the W.M. in his usual impressive manner, as was the passing of Bro. Boyle, and the raising of Bros. Burrow and Brookman; after the arduous labours of the Lodge, the W.M., his Officers, and the brethren adjourned to the banqueting hall to welcome about thirty ladies who had been specially invited to the banquet. At the conclusion of the dinner, provided in Bros. Bertram and Roberts's usual elegant style, Bro. Ward rendered grace, "For these and all thy mercies," in a most effective manner, his splendid voice and execution being highly appreciated by the company. The usual Loyal toasts were followed by that of the Grand Officers; this was appropriately responded to by Bro. Buss, Assistant Grand Sec.; Bro. Palmer P.M., in proposing the health of the W.M. took occasion to dilate upon the prosperous state of the Lodge, and to thank the W.M. and brethren who had been assiduous in promoting so agreeable and pleasurable a meeting. The W.M. strongly urged the cause of the several Masonic Charitable Institutions. Bro. Stacey, in proposing the toast of the Ladies felt convinced that this meeting augured well for an annual gathering of the ladies. Bro. Rubenstein replied on their behalf. The pleasures of the evening were much enhanced by the excellent singing of Miss Edith Daniel and Mrs. Shipway, as also by Bro. Ward; Miss Bennett and Mrs. Shipway gave some concerted pieces on the pianoforte. Bro. Dyte P.M. Treasurer, and Bro. Gush rendered good service as Stewards.

Sir Hugh Myddelton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1602.—At Bro. Wood's, Crown and Woolpack, No. 102 St. John-street-road, on Tuesday, the 27th instant. Present—Bros. W. Rowley W.M., Trewinnard S.W., W. Payne J.W., T. Goode S.D., Hallam sen. J.D., Pearcy Preceptor, Fenner acting Secretary, Hirst I.G.; also Bros. T. Goode, S. Goode, E. Payne, Wood, Hallam jun., Isaac, Dyland, W. Cook, Green, Stock, &c. After the Lodge had been opened, and the minutes read and confirmed, the ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. E. Payne acting as candidate. Bro. Pearcy worked the first, second, third, and fourth sections of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. Bro. Samuel Goode, of the Finsbury Park Lodge, No. 1288, was unanimously elected a member. Bro. Trewinnard was appointed to preside at the next meeting, after which the Lodge was closed and adjourned. We are very pleased to see this Lodge is making progress. Many brethren, well known in Masonry, have recently joined. From what we have seen of their working, the conductors are animated by a spirit of emulation in obtaining a perfect knowledge of the ritual.

PHYSICAL DISQUALIFICATIONS.

IT is one of the lessons repeated over and over again to Brethren that they must not depart from the ancient Landmarks, and must not tolerate any innovation in the law of Masonry. In this way a strong feeling of conservatism is created amongst the Craft, so that it is not easy to change the character of the Institution, nor move it from the well established lines of procedure. It is a matter of rejoicing that this is the fact; that the Masonic organizations is planted somewhere and maintains fast hold of the ancient traditions and laws.

Very likely the best informed Brethren attached to the Institution, if they were beginning de novo to lay the foundations of Masonry, would arrange the system somewhat differently from the plan and method that are stamped upon the Order as it now exists. Doubtless they might introduce many things into such construction work that would be improvements over the ancient formulas—things that would seem to be more in accordance with the spirit and thought of the present age. But Masonry comes to us full shaped out of the past; and it is better that we should take it as it is, abiding by its ancient laws and regulations, even though some of these provisions are not precisely what we would have them, rather than to run the risk of changes and modifications which once introduced may lead to the entire disruption of the organization.

This is our thought respecting the subject of physical disqualifications. It has been put into the fundamental law of Masonry that a proper pre-requisite to the making a man a Mason is that he should be hale and sound of body, not deformed nor dismembered. Such a restriction was grafted upon those associations of the middle ages from which the Masonry of modern times has descended. In those ancient societies the protection of physical labor was the chief thing aimed at. Strength and perfectness of bodily condition were essential to doing the work required; and it was a wise enactment which provided that the assemblies of those old Fraternities should be sound in body and without the touch of any physical drawback.

That things have changed since those olden days is not to be questioned. Masonry has grown into a Fraternity that now exists chiefly for social and benevolent purposes. In view of these changes, this natural progress, there is opportunity for a strong argument in favour of "letting down the bars" in the matter of physical requirements. Brother Hughan presents this side of the case in an article we have copied, an article that will be sure to command attention.

Our opinion, however, is as stated above; we are disinclined to favor changes in the old and clearly defined provisions of Masonic law, notwithstanding some of these modifications seem to be recommended by many good reasons. There is danger in such a course, according to our thought; for once begin to strike down the landmarks, and there is no telling to what lengths the iconoclastic spirit of the age may proceed. It is better to err on the side of a prudent conservatism, rather than sanction changes in the name of progress that shall unsettle, perhaps, the whole fabric of the Institution.

Having said this much in the defining of the position, we only desire to add that in our opinion there is sometimes given a too arbitrary construction, a too harsh enforcement of the ancient law providing that candidates for Masonry shall be whole in body and physically sound. Is it not something of overscrupulousness when a distinguished Brother avows his belief that a woman or an atheist can just as properly be made a Mason as a man who is deprived of even the joint of his little finger? Is it not making rather too much of the landmark when a surgeon's examination is demanded, when a lost joint or some obscure physical weakness is held to be an insuperable objection to the reception of a candidate, while no such careful scrutiny is instituted respecting moral defects? Surely there is as much reason for a generous elasticity in the construction of the law respecting physical qualifications, as there is for a liberal application of the tests by which the mental and moral condition is to be tried. It is not well to strain at gnats and swallow camels.—Freemasons' Repository.

We have received a copy of the Illustrated Australian News. It contains a series of engravings representing the more important buildings, manufactures, and works at Melbourne, and some of the other towns of Victoria, Australia. Amongst them will be found a view of Melbourne, and of the buildings now in course of construction for the International Exhibition which is to be held at that city during 1880. The newspaper also contains an interesting account, in French and English, of the Colony, its history, its climate, its institutions, and the advantages which it offers to Colonists. The illustrations have been well executed, and the paper is full of interesting and highly instructive information. Messrs. David Syme and Co., of Elizabeth-street, Melbourne, Victoria, are the proprietors.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A series of articles, biographical, descriptive, and eulogistic, of some of the principal Masonic worthies of the day. They are well written, and though personal, by no means offensive, or intrusive into private life, and in Masonic society will be welcomed as an interesting series of word paintings of members of the Craft.—Standard.

"We do not remember to have read any similar series of sketches which surpass this in merit."—Land and Water.

"The book will be of great interest to Masons, containing as it does pen-and-ink sketches of the most distinguished men among them, and giving some considerable information on matters Masonic, from various points of view."—Lloyd's Newspaper.

"Admirably written, being free from what are too often observed in composition—inelegant language and prolixity."—Sunday Times.

"'J. G.' writes with a considerable amount of freedom, never hesitating to 'hit off' a weakness when he finds it publicly displayed by a 'distinguished brother;' at the same time he never loses sight of a good trait when it is displayed, either in connexion with the Craft or in the service of the public out of doors. The sketches are lively reading."—City Press.

"This is a neat book. The Portraits consist of a series of 'word pictures' of eminent English Masons. It styles Bro. W. J. Hughan 'Knight Errant,' and sketches thirty-two others under equally unique titles. We commend the book as worthy of a place in every Masonic library."—Voice of Masonry.

"Evinces much literary ability, and is a valuable addition to the few works we have in Masonic biography."—Philadelphia Keystone.

"The book ought to be in every well arranged Masonic Library."—New York Courier.

"We value the work, and heartily thank Bro. Morgan for our copy."—Masonic Jewel.

"The portraits consist of a series of what we call 'pen and ink sketches' of brethren prominent in all the noble undertakings of English Masonry. . . . Prominent among his brethren we find Bro. Fred. Binckes, ('Our Hercules,' whose herculean efforts in behalf of those blessed institutions, the charities of English Masons, have a world-wide reputation, which will live long after the zealous Craftsman has been, 'laid away to rest.'"—New York Square.

"The style of the author is pleasing, and the quality of his productions highly complimentary to his ability as a writer."—Masonic Advocate.

"They belong to a kind of writing which has come to be amongst the most popular reading of the day. . . . . The types are as general as they are graphic. The salient characteristics are seized with an easy power, and happily hit off in felicitous phrase."—Sheffield Post.

"Good sensibly written articles. The writer prefaces each of his sketches with some pithy common sense remarks."—Cashel Gazette.

"Cleverly and agreeably sketched, and the work altogether forms a valuable addition to Masonic literature."—Ryde News.

"Very amusing, and beyond doubt, faithful portraits of the worthies who unconsciously sat for them."—Deal, Walmer and Sandwich Mercury.

"The members of the Craft will take it as an acceptable addition to their biographical literature."—Monmouthshire Chronicle.

"They are written in a fair and genial tone, thoroughly Masonic."—Leigh Chronicle.

"Should have a very large sale."—Kingsbridge Gazette.

"These sketches are drawn with sparkling ability."—Bonfshire Reporter.

"We must sincerely congratulate the author on the success of his endeavour to aim at faithful portraiture, while there is an entire absence of what might give offence to the most sensitive mind."—Folkestone Express.

"A very acceptable contribution to the history of the Order. The volume has our warmest commendation."—Keleo Courier.

"Drawn with no little humour, and embellished with many a deft stroke of good natured satire."—Figaro.

"The inquiring Brother who may wish to know something of the strength and beauty of the principles of Masonry, will find a pleasure in scanning the characteristic pictures in this book."—The Brighouse News.

"There is a pquancy in the ready off-hand dash that lends much zest to the subject, and lifts it from studied rhetorical expression."—Hebrew Leader.

"There can be no doubt that the writer has produced a series of Portraits which will be a source of amusement and pleasure to Masons throughout the world."—Surrey Comet.

"Will be found very interesting and pleasant reading, especially to the Masonic world."—Barnet Press.

"Calculated to raise the Order—if that be possible—in the estimation of its members, if not of the outer world."—Trowbridge and North Wilts Advertiser.

"Written in a spirited, racy style, and conveying, in as clear a manner as possible, a 'counterfeit presentment' of some of the rulers of the Craft."—Essex Standard.

Freemason's Chronicle;

A WEEKLY RECORD OF MASONIC INTELLIGENCE.

SANCTIONED BY THE GRAND LODGE OF ENGLAND.

VOL. VIII.—No. 193. SATURDAY, 7th SEPTEMBER 1878. [PRICE THREEPENCE. Registered at the G.P.O. as a Newspaper.

MEETING OF GRAND LODGE.

IN the absence of the Grand Master, Pro Grand Master, and Deputy Grand Master, General Brownrigg, C.B., Provincial Grand Master of Surrey, presided at the Quarterly Communication on Wednesday. Among those present were Bros. Sir Harcourt Johnstone, Bart., M.P., Grand Junior Warden, Capt. Platt P.G.W., Æ. McIntyre Grand Registrar, John Hervey Grand Secretary, Rev. W. A. Hill and Rev. R. A. Pickard Grand Chaplains, John Havers Past G.W., J. C. Parkinson P.G.D., Dr. Jabez Hogg P.G.D., John Clabon P.G.D., Rev. J. S. Brownrigg, Rev. R. J. Simpson Past Grand Chaplain, Rev. C. J. Martyn Past G. Chaplain and Deputy Prov. G. Master Suffolk, S. Rawson Past Dist. G. Master China, Sir Albert Woods (Garter) Grand Dir. of Ceremonies, Rev. S. R. Wigram P.G. Chaplain, &c., &c., &c. Grand Lodge having been opened with customary formalities, the minutes of the last Communication were confirmed. Two resolutions of the Grand Master, rendered necessary in order to give effect to certain changes agreed to at the last meeting, were then submitted. It will be remembered that a resolu- was passed by which it was agreed that Grand Lodge should open a Banking Account at the Bank of England, and the present motion was to repeal Articles 2 and 3, p 35 of the Constitutions, and substitute for them a resolution to the effect that all Grand Lodge monies should be deposited in the Bank of England in the names of the Grand Master or Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and Grand Treasurer; that the duties of the G. Treasurer should include a general supervision of the accounts, the signature of all cheques—which must be countersigned by the Grand Secretary—and assisting the Trustees and Executive in the administration of the funds; and that the accounts should be annually audited by the professional auditor to be appointed pursuant to Grand Lodge Resolution of 23rd June 1859. The resolutions were accepted unanimously. The Reports of the Board of Benevolence and Board of General Purposes, the former recommending the grants published in our columns last week, and the latter submitting the measures it had been deemed proper to adopt relative to the erroneous return of votes at the last Communication were agreed to unanimously. What other business, including the alteration of "pounds" into "guineas" in certain Laws and Regulations of the R.M.B.I., was rendered necessary by the action of the Special General Meeting of the Governors of that Institution, having been disposed of, the Lodge was closed.

So much for the business transacted, but a few comments on the Report of the Board of General Purposes, albeit we have noticed the subject matter before, would seem to call for some remarks. Happily, it seldom falls to the lot of Grand Lodge to take cognizance of an offence of this despicable character, and it is for this reason probably that the Board passed so very lenient a sentence on the incriminated Brother. Let us note somewhat circumstantially the case as it was set forth in our columns last week. It was, to begin with, one of sufficient importance to arrest the attention of the Pro Grand Master, and that immediately; and his Lordship forthwith ordered a special inquiry to be made. In one of the Scrutineers' Papers, which was identified by Bro. Joseph Smith, Past Grand Pursuivant, and Bro. William Hilton P.M. 780, as theirs, the votes cast for a certain Brother were recorded as amounting to 113, whereas, on an examination of the whole of the voting papers, they proved to be only a total of 59. This discrepancy, it was pointed out, could not possibly have happened through any large number of voting papers being missing, as there were 404 members who attended Grand Lodge, and 374 voting papers were given in, and are still in the hands of the Grand Secretary. Thus it was impossible to account for the amazing discrepancy. There was a difference of 54 between the number recorded and the number cast. The loss of voting papers, and what further explanation was attempted by Bro. Joseph Smith, was, as might have been expected, entirely unsatisfactory. The consequence was, that, at a second meeting specially convened for the purpose, the Board unanimously found that Bro. Joseph Smith had knowingly misrepresented the votes on the balloting papers examined by him; that the return he had made to Grand Lodge, as Chairman of Scrutineers, was false, and Bro. Smith knew it to be false. This being the case, sentence of two years' suspension from all his Masonic functions and privileges was unanimously passed on Bro. Joseph Smith, while Bro. Hilton, who had acted, but not in complicity with Bro. Smith, was admonished for negligence in the discharge of his duty. The vote of Wednesday, endorsing the Report of the Board of General Purposes, brought to an end the first, and let us hope the last, act also of a most discreditable episode in the Masonic history of the day. It is difficult to form anything like an accurate idea of the mind which can be guilty of a crime which is at once so enormous and yet so despicable. The falsification of a return is about the grossest form of lie which can be uttered. It is not the result of fear, as in the case of a man who tells a lie to save himself a thrashing, or to avoid certain other consequences which terrify him. It is uttered deliberately, and in this case most deliberately. The initial error of mistaking 113 for 59 was deliberate, and the return to Grand Lodge which contained this glaring inaccuracy was essentially still more so. Now, the man who did this could not possibly have in him anything approaching to a sense of honour, or else the received idea of what constitutes honour is the reverse of just. In this case, it would follow, naturally, that he should be excluded from a society which is nothing if it is not honourable. Some among us may have a regard for jewels, and think him the best man who carries on his breast a trayful of insignia; others may occasionally be unmindful of their duties; in short, we all may be guilty of those shortcomings which it is the fate of men, being simply mortals, not angels, to commit. But the falsification of a return is something so utterly low, and the man who makes it, acting as he must do with such marked deliberation, is so essentially a low order of mind, that his exclusion from our Society, for a time at least, if not for all time, is absolutely necessary. The Board have taken the more lenient view, and defined the period of his suspension, in the hope, no doubt, that, in that time Bro. Smith will have been enabled to raise his mind from the abyss of lowness into which it had sunk. Should he not, however, have succeeded in doing so when the two years have expired, or should there be the slightest doubt about his success, we trust he will take a hint from good Dr. Oliver, who remarks of definite suspension that "it frequently assumes the character of a milder phasis of expulsion, for the suspended brother very seldom renews his connection with the Craft, although his readmission could be effected, as a matter of course, without ceremony or inquiry."

A STROLL IN BARBICAN AND ITS VICINITY.

The George Tavern, Australian Avenue.

EVEN those who can only carry their recollection of the City and its principal thoroughfares some twenty or five-and-twenty years back, can hardly repress a feeling of surprise at the changes which have been wrought in that brief period of time. Where were close and stifling alleys, ill-built and ill-paved streets, lined on both sides with—for so wealthy and important a City as London—very ill-conditioned houses, there now will be found broad and well-paved thoroughfares, lined with blocks of buildings which certainly deserve the description of palatial. So rapidly are these changes being made, that a few years hence those who can remember what the City was, say as recently as the year of the Great Exhibition, will hardly recognise it for the same. True, it took a long time for the worthy Londoners to bestir themselves, but the Spirit of Improvement once aroused, has exerted itself most vigorously, till there is a reasonable chance that little of the old streets and houses will remain much longer unimproved; or, to put the matter differently, what still remains of old London—not so very old either, it must be remembered—will be pulled down and rebuilt on a grander and more imposing scale. Perhaps, no neighbourhood has witnessed greater changes in this respect than that included in the Ward of Cripplegate, and especially in those parts of it which verge on Aldersgate-street and the Barbican. These and such other familiar names as Red Cross-street, White Cross-street, Jewin-street, &c., &c., remain, but, to use a common mode of expression, were any of their former inhabitants to resume their mortal coil, and appear once again amid the scenes of their busy livelihood, it is certain they would be unable to recognise the streets and houses of to-day as those with which they were so familiar. And these changes which a few years have brought about, are a sufficient reason for preserving some knowledge of different City localities, as they were in former days. Even the most matter of fact and prosaic person must take some delight in hearing or reading of the people who lived where now they toil and strive to make their fortunes, and this feeling is likely to be the stronger, the more considerable are the improvements which have been made. There is something more than mere sentiment—or at all events the sentiment is highly creditable to those who indulge in it—when people recall that this great noble or statesman, that poet or soldier, passed a portion of his life in this quiet unpretending street, or, that now important and imposing thoroughfare. Most people, indeed, delight in knowing something of the place in which they dwell, and there is perhaps no kind of literature so generally popular as that which treats of the former history of localities and districts. Thus little or no apology is needed for the sketch we have presently compiled.

The George, so ably administered by mine host, has no history of its own to boast of, but it is in the centre of a district which has, and a very interesting record it is. A few years since, and Australian-avenue, in which it stands, was a mere blind alley, with a not particularly attractive pawnbroker's shop at its entrance; now there are on either side of it large and commanding premises, and the hostelry itself is by no means the least attractive building in the avenue. Nor is it the least important; for a well-conducted tavern, if not exactly "a thing of beauty and a joy for ever," is certainly a most desirable place, and likely to be frequented by sensible men of business at the inevitable hour of the day, when the "inner man" asserts himself, and only a "grill" or "cut from the joint" will bring him to his senses again. But of this part of our subject we shall speak anon. The time for a juicy steak has not yet come, and in the meantime, let us take a turn in the neighbourhood, and see not only what it is now, but try and recal something of its former history.

The avenue is on the south side of the Barbican, and nearest to where that street meets Aldersgate-street. Here at once we have something to interest us. Barbican, according to Stow, and the other London Antiquaries, derives its name from the "Burgh Keanin," or "postern tower," which stood on the north side of the street opposite to Redcross-street, and the remains of which were still in existence towards the end of last century. In this tower, Bagford tells us, "the Romans kept watch and ward at night that they might give notice of conflagrations or the approach of an enemy, and here on the top of the turret they lit bonfires to guide travellers to the City." In Edward III.'s reign it was entrusted to Robert Ufford, Earl of Suffolk, and it remained in his family till the reign of Mary, when it was in the keeping of the Baroness Katherine Willoughby d'Eresby, a baroness in her own right, and widow of Charles Brandon Duke of Suffolk, who lived in a stately mansion close by. This lady narrowly escaped being burnt at the stake for calling her lap-dog Gardiner, after the bishop of that name, and dressing him up in episcopal rochet and surplice. For this she and her second husband, Richard Bertie, had to flee the country, and they sought refuge in Poland. On the site of Bridgewater-square stood the mansion of the Earls of Bridgwater. It was burnt down in 1687, when Charles Viscount Brackley and his brother Thomas perished in the flames. Sir Thomas Spelman, author of the "Glossarium," died at his house in Barbican in 1640. Beech-lane, according to Stow, was so named after Sir Nicholas de la Beech, lieutenant of the Tower, who was deprived of his office by Edward III. An old house in Barbican, once belonging to the Abbot of Ramsay, was called afterwards Drewrie House, from Sir Drew Drewrie, an owner thereof, and this was inhabited subsequently by the gallant old cavalier chief, Prince Rupert. To another house the great John Milton migrated from Aldersgate-street, remaining till 1647, when he went to live in High Holborn. In time, however, the street lost its gentility, and it is mentioned by Strype as inhabited chiefly by clothes-salesmen, while in his day on the site of the old watch tower stood a watchhouse for the brawling mobocks of the day. It was also along this street that the authorities of Cripplegate were wont to go in procession when beating the parish bounds, and when they reached the south-western end, they set up a post opposite to the Boar's Head, now known as the Brown Bear, and kept by that genial and obliging host, Mr. Frederick Wykes, and then crossing to the north side, proceeded up Goswell-road. It will further interest members of the great Masonic Fraternity—and mine host of the George is a brother—to know that the present Royal Alpha Lodge, No. 16, met at the Red Cross, Barbican, during the years 1736-45. It is also worthy of note that in Edward I.'s time the Barbican was Crown property, for an Inquisition made in the third year of that monarch's reign, re Purprestures in the City, showed that some twelve years before, one Thomas Juvenal had appropriated some ground without "le Barbekan," and inclosed it with an earth wall, and it was held at the time of the Inquisition by the Sheriffs by Master Nicholas Brabanzonne, who was summoned at command of the King's justices, and said he had nothing to do with it, and laid no claim to the Purpresture, being tenant to Thomas Fitzsimon de Burgh. And the said Thomas came, and prayed he might arrent it at threepence per annum, which was granted, because the twelve sworn men swore the enclosure was no annoyance. It was further adjudged that the King might recover the arrearages, to wit, three shillings, but no forfeiture, because it was not the said Thomas's doings.

Between Whitecross-street and Golding-lane, stood the Fortune, one of the earliest and most important of the Elizabethan theatres. It was opened about 1600 by Philip Henslowe and Edward Alleyne, founder of Dulwich College, and what till quite recently was an adjoining passage, but is now a broad street, still retains the name of Playhouse-yard. In Golding-lane was the Nursery, mentioned more than once by Pepys in his Diary, and also by Dryden, a seminary established in the reign of Charles II. for training children to the profession of the stage. Nor must we forget mention of a certain building in Whitecross-street, which till quite a recent date was used as a Debtors' Prison, while it was in this street that Dr. Williams established his Free Library for Dissenting Ministers, now removed to Grafton-street, Fitzroy-square. Redcross-street, so called from the Cross opposite Golden-lane, has associated with it one curious anecdote related by Sir Thomas More in his Life of Edward V., in which he tells how that on the night after the morning that Edward IV. died, a man called at the house of one Pottier, a servant of Richard Duke of Gloucester, who resided in the street, and Pottier, when he heard the news, said, "Then will my master, the Duke of Gloucester, be King, and that I warrant thee." And we know he did become King as Richard III.

If we turn to Aldersgate-street we shall find ample matter to satisfy our craving for historical associations. We have already mentioned that Milton lived here, until he moved to a house in Barbican. On the east side of the street, Nos. 35 to 38, stands Shaftesbury or Thanet House, built by Inigo Jones, formerly the residence of the Tuftons, Earls of Thanet, and subsequently of Ashley Cooper, Earl of Shaftesbury, one of the famous Cabal Ministry of Charles II.'s reign. Nearly opposite to it was Petre House, the residence of the Petre family in the Elizabethan days, and of Pierrepoint, Marquis of Dorchester in the days of the Commonwealth. It was also used as a State prison in these latter days, and subsequently as the temporary residence of the Bishops of London, when the Great Fire had burnt them out of their house in St. Paul's Churchyard. It was to this house that the Princess Anne, after she had deserted her father James II., in 1688, was brought by Bishop Compton, in a hackney coach. At the north-east corner, and not far from Shaftesbury-street, stood Lauderdale House, the mansion of the Earl of Lauderdale, another member of the Cabal Ministry, who was afterwards sent, in 1669, as Lord High Commissioner to the Scottish Parliament, where he put down Conventicles, and was guilty of those cruelties which caused such desperation, and led to the rebellion of the Covenanters. Close by was Bacon House, the residence of Sir Nicholas Bacon, Lord Keeper in Queen Elizabeth's time, and father of the immortal Francis Bacon. In this street lived the warlike Earl of Peterborough, who in 1705 took Barcelona, and the famous Duke of Montagu, father of the Duke of Montagu who in 1721 was Grand Master of Freemasons. Two doors from the Barbican stood once the Bell Inn, "of a pretty good resort for wagons with meal," whence the waterman-poet, John Taylor, temp. James I., set out on his pilgrimage to Scotland. Opposite St. Botolph's was the Cooks' Hall, which escaped the Great Fire, but was destroyed by an insignificant conflagration in 1771, since when the Company, incorporated in 1480, have transferred their business to the Guildhall. Trinity-court, a little beyond the church, is so called from a brotherhood of the Holy Trinity, first founded in 1377 as a Fraternity of St. Fabian and St. Sebastian, licensed by Henry VI., and suppressed by Edward VI. The Hall was still standing in 1790. Another distinguished inhabitant of Aldersgate-street was Brian Walton, Bishop of Chester, who died there in 1661. He was a man of great erudition, and in 1657 published the first English Polyglot Bible—in Hebrew, Syriac, Chaldee, Samaritan, Arabic, Ethiopic, Persian, Greek, and the vulgar Latin languages. On the west side of the street stood the London residence of the Nevilles, Earls of Westmoreland, still indicated by Westmoreland-buildings, and near the site of Bull and Mouth-street stood the mansion of the Earls of Northumberland, where dwelt among others the fiery Hotspur. Henry IV. gave it to his Queen Jane, and it was then known as her Wardrobe. This was close to the Aldersgate itself. It was in her house in this street that, in 1621, died Mary, Countess of Pembroke, the "Sydney's sister, Pembroke's mother," immortalised by Ben Jonson in his noble epitaph. Where now is The Queen's Hotel, St. Martins-le-Grand, was the old Bull and Mouth—corrupted from "Boulogne Mouth," in allusion to the siege of Boulogne by Henry VIII. It stood in Bull and Mouth-street, and the south side, in Angel-street, still retains the name, though only a luggage depôt of Chaplin and Horne. A statuette of a Bull, with the arms of Edward VI. and Christ's Hospital above, and a tablet, probably taken from the old inn below, on the front of the Queen's Hotel, mark the ancient hostelry. The tablet bears the following quaint inscription:—

"Milo the Cretonian,
An ox slew with his fist,
And ate it up at one meal,
Ye Gods, what a glorious twist!"

At No. 134, on the west side of the street, a board over the two shops comprised in it announces "This was Shakespeare's House," but there is, says Mr. Walter Thornbury, no evidence whatever, documentary or traditional, of the truth of the assertion. On the same side is the well-known "Albion Hotel," so famous for its récherché dinners, and frequented by many Masonic Lodges, while in 1830, there stood the Half Moon Tavern, the resort of wits in Charles II.'s time. Among the streets leading out of Aldersgate-street, must be mentioned Little Britain, presumed to have been so named from the Earls of Brittany having lodged there. Here was published Milton's great work Paradise Lost. It lay unnoticed on the stalls for a length of time, till the Earl of Dorset, chancing upon it, took it up, and having read some passages here and there, sent it to Dryden, who returned it, saying, "This man cuts us all out, and the ancients too." The thoroughfare was famous for its old booksellers, and as the haunt of learned book-hunters. In Noble-street, in the days of Shakespeare, lived Serjeant Fleet, Recorder of London, and subsequently in the same house, Robert Tichborne, Lord Mayor 1657, one of those who signed Charles the First's death warrant, and who was executed with Harrison and others at the Restoration. The Old Castle and Falcon Inn stood near the old Gate. Jewin-street, another of the Aldersgate-street tributaries, anciently called Leyrestowe, was granted by Edward I. to William de Monteforte, Dean of St. Paul's. For many centuries, this was the one place of interment allowed to the Jews of London, till in the reign of Henry II. they obtained leave to buy local graveyards. Stow describes this street as being in his day, full of "fair garden plots and summer-houses for pleasure." Of other streets in the neighbourhood, what is now Milton-street was the once famous Grub-street, where so many poetasters and literary hacks eked out a living as best they could. In Monkwell-street stood Barber-Surgeons' Hall, the first building is said to have dated from Edward IV., and the second was erected by Inigo Jones in 1636. At the upper end of this street stood Lambe's Almshouses, the founder being a clothworker who was a gentleman of Henry VIII.'s chapel, whose benefactions were very considerable.

As in the course of our fanciful perambulations we have traversed parts of the Ward of Cripplegate, a brief mention of St. Giles's, Cripplegate, will not be amiss. It is the successor of one built twenty-four years after the Norman conquest. Matilda, Queen of Henry I., had founded a brotherhood there, dedicated to St. Mary and St. Giles. The church suffered greatly by fire in 1545, after which it was repaired and partially rebuilt. It has also since undergone repairs at other times—1623, 1624, 1629, and again in 1704. It escaped the ravages of the Great Fire and contains many old monuments, though the conflagration of 1545, already mentioned, destroyed most of the ancient ones. It has a peal of twelve bells, besides one in the turret, and is one of the few London churches which can boast a set of chimes, said to have been constructed by a poor working man. Among those whose remains lie interred in this church must be enumerated John Speed the learned topographical writer, who died 1629; Foxe, the martyrologist, who died 1587; a granddaughter of Sir Thomas Lucy, Shakespeare's persecutor, whom the great poet has immortalised as Justice Shallow, and a daughter of the same ignoble knight; Sir Martin Frobisher, one of our earliest Arctic explorers, and also one of Elizabeth's captain's who fought so gallantly against the Armada; the great John Milton, who died 1674, and his father John Milton deceased 1646; and Dr. William Bulleyn, a noted herbalist and physician, temp. Elizabeth. In the parish register of St. Giles's will be found the record of the marriage of Oliver Cromwell afterwards Lord High Protector with Mistress Ann Bourchier, on 22nd August 1620, Oliver being then in his twenty-first year.

Of course, it were quite possible for us to go on wandering about in a region so rich in historic memories; but we have gone far enough already, and having trotted "promiscuously" along the streets in the immediate neighbourhood, under the guidance of such learned persons as Stowe, Strype, Walter Thornbury, &c., &c., we are becoming sensible that the demands of our "inner man" may not, with due regard to health and comfort, be much longer resisted. We therefore hasten our steps towards Australian Avenue, in order that we may secure at Bro. Harrison's excellent restaurant one of his juiciest of steaks, and wash it down with a tankard of his best October, or if the taste suit us better, with a glass or two of that particular "seal" which he knows on occasion to produce from the inmost depths of his well-stored cellar. Hunger apart, we go to this particular hostelry for many reasons. We know from experience that we shall have all we can possibly desire in the way of food and good liquor to wash it down with. We know it will be well and speedily served; that Bro. R. T. Barrett, who is the directing genius of the establishment, and well known to Crippletonians, will exert himself to minister to our wants: that the room in which we shall be accommodated is suitably furnished, with an air of real comfort about it, and but little show; that the attendants will be civil and obliging; that the plate, glass, and linen will be clean and of excellent quality; and lastly, that the charges of our host will be moderate. Comfort, good victuals, and civility are to be had at the George Restaurant. Those who want more than this, or other than this, must go elsewhere. All we can add to these few words of praise, worthily bestowed, is the hope that host Harrison will find his untiring efforts to oblige his customers and meet their every wish will have the reward they merit, in the shape of good custom and plenty of it.

Brave hearts do not pass through a conflict unaided, and often a passing shelter is provided into which they may creep until the worst is over.

QUARTERLY COMMUNICATION OF GRAND LODGE.

THE Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge was held on Wednesday. General Brownrigg, in the absence of the Grand Master, Pro Grand Master, and Deputy Grand Master, took the Grand Master's throne, having Bro. Richard Giddy as Deputy Grand Master, Bro. Samuel Rawson as Past Grand Master, Captain Platt as Senior Grand Warden, and Sir Harcourt Johnstone, M.P., as Junior Grand Warden. The attendance of brethren was large. On the motion of the acting Grand Master the following resolutions were carried:—

1st. To repeal Articles 2 and 3, page 35 of the Book of Constitutions.

2nd. To substitute for them the following, viz.:—"All monies belonging to the Grand Lodge shall be deposited in the Bank of England in the names of the Grand or Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and the Grand Treasurer. The duties of the Grand Treasurer shall be to keep a general supervision of the accounts, to sign cheques, which must be countersigned by the Grand Secretary for all monies duly voted by the Grand Lodge, and generally to assist and advise the trustees and executive Officers in the due and faithful administration of the funds of the Fraternity. The accounts shall be annually audited by the professional auditor to be appointed by the Grand Master pursuant to a resolution passed in Grand Lodge on the 23rd June 1859."

Bro. Havers P.G.W. in moving "that this Grand Lodge approves of and confirms the proceedings of the Grand Master in ordering a revision of the returns made by the scrutineers of members returned as elected to serve on the Board of General Purposes in June last, and in acting on such amended return, thus unseating three brethren who had been declared to have been duly elected, and who were not so elected, and restoring to their rightful seats three brethren who had been duly elected and were deprived of their seats by the falsification of the returns," said the brethren would permit him for a moment to take a brief retrospect of this very unheard of proceeding. Not within the memory of the oldest man present had any scandal so grave, so outrageous, been known. One would hardly have imagined that a man held in good repute should, after taking a solemn obligation before the G. Master and assembled brethren to make an honest, true and faithful return, for the purpose of serving a friend, so have falsified the return as to oust three most respectable members of G. Lodge and return others who held the lowest number of votes as having the highest. The G. Lodge would agree that it was the duty of the Grand Master to act for his Grand Lodge in such an emergency, and save it from the consequences of so grave an error. He thought Grand Lodge might go further. The Grand Master had acted with the greatest promptitude, so that there had been no delay, and when the time for the meeting of the Board of General Purposes came, the proper members were summoned to attend. He would, therefore, venture with the approval of Grand Lodge to add to his motion, "That this Grand Lodge expresses its thanks to the Grand Master for his prompt and energetic action, by which speedy justice has been done and a grave scandal corrected." He could not help condoling with Grand Lodge on this very great scandal. He took it to be a public calamity. He regretted exceedingly the severe punishment that had been inflicted on a man who had been held in considerable repute among the brethren for many years, who was an old Grand Officer, and who had been a member of the Board of General Purposes for twenty years. He thought the punishment most severe, but he felt bound to say he thought it most just. He was not sure that a man guilty of such conduct ought to be longer tolerated among them; but he thought it well to temper justice with mercy. He pitied the man, but at the same time he was glad an example had been made of him. The Board of General Purposes deserved credit for the manly and upright way in which they had performed a most painful duty. There was reason to fear that this was not the first time such an occurrence as the brother punished had been guilty of had happened; but he trusted that steps would be taken to prevent such a thing happening again. Bro. McIntyre, Q.C., in seconding the motion, heartily concurred in everything that Bro. Havers had said, and felt confident that while the brethren were sorry for the punishment awarded, they were still more sorry the punishment should have been deserved. The motion was carried, and Grand Lodge shortly afterwards was closed in form.

The s.s. Devonia, on board which vessel were Bros. Meyer, Sutter, and others of the Mary Commandery Pilgrimage, arrived at New York on 1st September, all well.

The arrangements which are being made by the brethren of Northampton for successfully carrying out the consecration of the Eleanor Cross Lodge, on the 17th inst., are of the most complete character. They have secured the assistance of two important members of the Craft to perform the ceremonies. Bro. Terry J.G. Warden of Herts, and Secretary of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, having undertaken that of Consecration, and Bro. Butler Wilkins, the Deputy Grand Master of the province of Norths and Hunts, that of Installation. We can only repeat our good wishes of last month, and hope it will be our pleasure to record for many years the doings of this new Lodge.

THE FOUR OLD LODGES.

Bro. R. F. Gould.

"York being the established Place of Masonic Government, the whole fraternity successively paid Allegiance to its Authority, and whereas the Sacred Art flourished so much, that Masonry in the South came to require some Nominal Patron to Superintend its Government. A person under the Title of Grand Master for the South was appointed, with the Approbation of the Grand Lodge at York, to which the whole fraternity at large were still bound, as they were before, to pay Tribute and acknowledge Subjection. And thus Masonry flourished for many years in the South, as well as in the North, but afterwards became again at so low a Ebb in the South, that in the year 1717, only four Lodges remained extant in those parts, but those Lodges ever gloried in Originating from the Ancient York Masons, which they constantly testified. And whereas these very Lodges cemented under a new Grand Master for the South, and hence arose what is now called the Nominal Grand Lodge in London, whose meetings have been by some considered as General Meetings, but without any Constitutional Authority to give such Meetings a Sanction to that Title.

"And whereas the Grand Lodge of All England, still existing at York, is the Supreme Legislature of Masonry in this kingdom. And hath, with Lamentations, beheld that the Nominal Grand Lodge, in London, have not only forgotten the Allegiance due to this Parent State of Masonry in England, but have proceeded to insult its Dignity, and depart from every ancient Landmark of the Order, assuming such arbitrary and unmasonick Measures, as ought not to be found among Masons.

"Besides, which, many Masters and Lodges under their Sanction have been struck off their Books on trifling occasions, and particularly on Pecuniary ones, Motives which Masons ought to blush at, and, in fine, they have adopted Measures altogether arbitrary and repugnant to the principles of the Masonic Institution, whereby the true Spirit of Free Masonry in the South of England hath been subverted, and if not timely supported by the Masonic Legislature might become totally destroyed.

"Hence, however, the Grand Lodge in London, from its Situation, being encouraged by some of the Principal Nobility of the Nation, arose at Great Power, and began to despise the origin from whence it sprang. In an unbrotherly manner, wishing the Gr. Lodge at York annihilated, which appears by one of their Almanacks, insinuating, that though there are some Brethren remaining, who act under the Old Constitution of York, yet that they are few in number, and will be soon annihilated.(2)

"Upon the whole, let every dispassionate Mason but weigh impartially the several Facts here stated, and he must spurn at the daring Innovation offered by the Nominal Grand Lodge in London, to so sacred an Institution.

If he wishes to partake of Masonry in its Original Purity, he will turn his attention to that source, where it hath been Inviolably maintained and continued for Successive Ages to this Day, and, where the Legislature of Masonry for this Kingdom stands fixed by its true Title 'The Grand Lodge of All England, Established at the City of York.'"

§ 26.—I. On 27th December 1813,(3) the Union of the two Societies took place, under the Grand Mastership of H.R.H. the Duke of Sussex, there being at the period of this amalgamation 640 Lodges holding under the "Moderns," and 359 under the "Ancients."(4)

II.—The articles of Union agreed to, by the rival Grand Lodges, were twenty-one (5) in number, of which three only bear distinctly upon the subject of the present article, viz., Nos. II., VII., and VIII.

III.—Art. II. "It is declared and pronounced that pure Ancient Masonry consists of three degrees, and no more, viz., those of the Entered Apprentice, the Fellow Craft and the Master Mason, including the Supreme Order of the Holy Royal Arch.(6) But this Article is not intended to prevent any Lodge or Chapter from holding a meeting in any of the degrees of the Orders of chivalry, according to the constitutions of the said Orders."(7)

IV.—Art. VII. (Extract from, omitting the Grand Officers.) The United Grand Lodge of Ancient Freemasons of England shall be composed of—

"The actual Masters and Wardens of all Warranted Lodges,(8) Past Masters of Lodges, who have regularly served and passed the chair before the day of Union, and who have continued without secession regular contributing Members of a Warranted Lodge. It being understood that of all the Masters who, from and after the day of the said Union, shall regularly pass the chair of their respective Lodges, but one at a time, to be delegated by his Lodge, shall have a right to sit and vote in the said Grand Lodge, so that after the decease of all the regular Past Masters of any regular Lodge, who have attained that distinction at the time of the Union, the representation of such Lodge shall be by its actual Master, Wardens, and one Past Master only."

Past Masters are admitted to membership in many Grand Lodges, and by some the inherent right has been claimed to sit in these bodies. But the most eminent Masonic authorities have made a contrary decision, and the general opinion now is that Past Masters obtain their seats in Grand Lodge by courtesy, and not by inherent right.(9)

In the composition of the United Grand Lodge of England, the admission of Past Masters in 1813, in deference to the prevailing practice among the "Ancients," was a distinct innovation; it may be noted also that for many years subsequent to the Union (until 1834), Past Masters were ineligible for election to the Boards of General Purposes, Finance,(10) Works, and Schools, and the Committee of Benevolence. It was in consequence of this disability, that the late Bro. Peter Gilkes, in order to qualify for election to the Board of Benevolence, of which for the last sixteen years of his life he was a distinguished member, during that period annually filled the chair of a Lodge, and discharged its arduous duties.(11)

V.—Art. VIII. (Ante § 9, Note 4.)

§ 27.—I. The prevailing theories with regard to Masonic history, are of so conflicting a nature, that the student may be sorely tempted to take refuge in the sceptical solution of this difficulty, propounded by a notable mystic of the last century.(12) "No man can give any account of the Order of Freemasonry, of its origin, of its history, of its object, nor any explanation of its mysteries and symbols, which does not leave the mind in total uncertainty on all these points."

The descent of modern Freemasonry has been variously traced; (a) from the old Roman Sodalities, (b) the operative Guild assemblies of the middle ages, (c) and from the German operative Stonemasons in the beginning of the eleventh century.(13)

If, however, we turn from within to without, the pale of the Craft, and seek for information from non-Masonic writers, we are assured by one high authority,(14) "that true Freemasonry, of which Freemasons, as a rule, know nothing, existed before the Templars." And by another,(15)

"that Masonic writers who reject the hypothesis of descent from the Templars throw no light upon the matter; in casting from them that theory they seem to have left themselves entirely in the dark."

Leaving these discrepancies for others to explain; I subjoin one peculiarly British theory,(1) which from its quaintness, may interest, if it fails to convince, and shall pass on to a consideration of the essential simplicity of the original Masonic Rite.

II. From the earliest period, at which any distinct evidence is forthcoming of the usages and customs, which have finally crystallized into what we now know by the expression Freemasonry, a Simple Rite of one degree, or a single form of initiation, was the only ceremony (as we now understand that phrase) observed by the fraternity.

All the brethren were on an equal footing, and the "Master" only meant that member who was elected by vote to preside in the Lodge, or who was charged with the care of work, or with control over the workmen. The three titles, or in modern parlance, "degrees" of Apprentice, Fellow-craft (or Craftsman) and Master-Mason, being only applied in reference to their art.(2)

The Apprentice, as the term signifies, being a learner; the Craftsman, an expert workman, who had acquired his trade; and the Master, an overlooker, or, possibly, an employer of labour.

There were no secrets communicated by Lodges to either fellows of Craft, or Masters, that were not known to Apprentices, since members of the latter grade were necessary to the legal constitution of communications for the admission of Masters and Fellows.(3)

The MASON WORD is the only secret that is ever alluded to in the minutes of St. Mary's Chapel, or in those of Kilwinning, Atcheson's Haven, or Dunblane, or in any other, examined by Bro. D. M. Lyon, of a date prior to the erection of the Grand Lodge of Scotland (1736).(4)

But that this talisman consisted of something more than a word, is evident from the "Secrets" of the "Mason Word" being referred to in the minute-book of the Lodge of Dunblane, and from the further information drawn from that of Haughfoot, viz., that in 1707 the word was accompanied by a grip; (5) whilst so far back as 1686, it is proved by manuscripts of about that period that in England "Signs" were communicated to the initiates.(6)

(1) The adherents to Druidism had various names. Guydelians, Paulicians, Manicheans, Leogrians, Oughers, May's-ons, besides others. In the sense of the bough, or office of justice, the word May is primitive to the month of May, to Maia, the Goddess of Justice, to Majestas, and to the proper name among the Romans of Maius, Magus, or Majius. Considering, too, that the May (May-pole) was eminently the great sign of Druidism, as the Cross was of Christianity, is there anything forced or far fetched in the conjecture that the adherents to Druidism should take the name of Men of the May, or May's-ons?

The word Hiram (which is made the foundation of the now-adopted name of Masonry, and of the strange story of the architecture of the Temple of Jerusalem) signifies precisely the high-pole or holy-bough. This single word, however, of Hiram, not improbably furnished the hint afterwards inlarged into all that fabulous foundation of Masonry, after that the real cause of the name of May's-on had been abolished, and lost in the shades of antiquity. From the premises there also appears clearly the reason why the Society of the May's-ons, or adherents to the Religion of the Grove, should be more peculiarly national to Britain than to any other part of the world. This country was, in all probability, the parent of Druidism. Essay on the Real Secret of the Freemasons (Cleland) 1766, p 120.

The method of the foregoing derivation well illustrates the principle enunciated by Voltaire, "That in etymology vowels go for very little, and consonants for nothing at all," of which a further example is afforded by the contention of some etymologists, that the term "Mason," is derived from mass a club, with which the doorkeeper was armed to drive away uninitiated intruders! (see Heckethorne, Vol. I. p 251).

On comparing, however, the actual Druidism of the past with the Masonry of the present, the position advanced by a writer of the last century (1783), "that the most perfect remains of the Druids' rites and ceremonies are preserved in the customs and ceremonies of Masons," (Smith's Use and Abuse of Freemasonry, p 35) would seem to be one that is fairly maintainable. See Preston, Ed. 1796, p 165; Constit. 1767, p 72; Borlase, Ant. Corn., pp 53-146; and Secret Societies (Heckethorne), Vol. I. p 110.

III.—"It seems clear (says Hughan) that modern Freemasonry of Three Degrees, not only is of English origin and a continuation of ancient operative Masonry, but that its introduction into the new arrangement took place in London, certainly not before A.D. 1717.(7)

The introduction of the degrees of Fellow Craft and Master Mason was effected so imperceptibly that the exact date has not been recorded. It is very probable that the degree of Master Mason first originated as a reward for Masonic merit, especially for brethren who had passed the chair during 1717-20; and that the second degree has been intercalated afterwards, to complete the three steps of the operatives.(8) The third degree could hardly have been present to the mind of Dr. Anderson when, in 1723, he superintended the printing of his "Book of Constitutions, for it is therein stated, that "the Key of a Fellow-Craft," is that by which the secrets communicated in the Ancient Lodges could be unravelled.(9)

It was no common thing for many years after the revival to meet with members who had received a degree beyond the Fellow-craft,(10) which was all that was required of the Treasurer, Secretary, or Doorkeeper of Grand Lodge, by the Constitutions of 1723; all new regulations, moreover, remaining subject to the approval of the youngest apprentice.(11)

Fellow-crafts and apprentices (12) only, are named in O. R. XXXVII. and by the provisions of O. R. XVIII., in the sickness or absence of the Deputy G.M., the Grand Master was empowered "to chuse a discreet Fellow-craft to act as Deputy pro tempore.

In the minutes of the Moira Lodge, No. 92, which commence 17th July 1755—the first mention of anything beyond "making masons," is as follows, viz.:—

"Perticular Night, 27 Aprill 1756
For the Makeing Jn°. Simpson, Mariner ...
He paid into the Lodg - - - one pound one Shill	1	1	0
And Rais°. Master the next lodg night and paid."	0	5	0

whilst the earliest reference (by name) to the two first degrees, appears under date of "Oct. ye 20th 1760," viz., "The Busness being over the Lodge was close in due form. The Enter°. Apprintice and fellow Craft's parts."

IV.—The degrees recognised in 1723 (13) being but three, the Apprentice, Fellow Craft and Master Mason, undoubtedly all others not included in such a simple Rite are "Innovations" in the Body of Masonry.

"It may be argued that so long as the consent of a Grand Lodge was obtained, any number of degrees would be legitimate, but as it was expressly declared by the first Grand Lodge that 'All the alterations were only for amending or explaining the old Regulations for the good of Masonry, without breaking in upon the Antient Rules of the Fraternity, or infringing the OLD LANDMARKS;' it is evident that anything so revolutionary as extra degrees must be foreign to pure and Antient Freemasonry, and contrary to the ceremonies sanctioned by the Grand Lodge of England at the revival."(14)

On the 26th May 1799, it was resolved by the Grand Lodge of Scotland; that they sanction the Three Great Orders of Masonry, and these alone, of APPRENTICE, FELLOW-CRAFT, and MASTER MASON, being the Ancient Order of St. John, and they expressly prohibit and discharge all Lodges having Charters from the Grand Lodge, from holding any other meetings than those of the Three Orders above described.(1)

V.—A non-Masonic writer, from whose pages I have already quoted, may here be profitably cited.(2)

"As to spurious Masonry, its almost countless degrees form an incoherent medley of opposite principles, founded chiefly on Christian traditions and institutions, orders of knighthood, contested theological opinions, historical events; in fact, every important event or institution has afforded models for Masonic mimicry."

"Masonry ought not to be an ambulance, but a vanguard. It is embarrassed by its excessive baggage, its superfluous symbols."(3)

VI.—Reverting to the enquiry with which this Section commenced—viz., the most probable origin to be assigned to modern Freemasonry—the preceding paragraphs (II.—IV.) will have shown, that the usages and customs of Masons have been vastly extended, since they ceased to be (in the South of England) the peculiar and especial heritage of the "Four Old Lodges."

Masonry may therefore be termed the stock, and modern Freemasonry the scion; the pristine simplicity of our Ancient English Rite being now only reflected in the mirror of tradition.

CHARITY STEWARDS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—It is with considerable gratification I find the subjects connected with the above heading occupying so prominent a place in your columns from week to week, as I am satisfied the more thoroughly are ventilated the many questions involved, the more beneficial will be the results to the interests of our Institutions, which must at all times be regarded as deserving our most thoughtful consideration, and which, under present circumstances, cannot fail to be objects of considerable anxiety.

With your correspondents to present date—if I gather correctly from their letters—three questions notably present themselves for discussion:—

a. The necessity for Anniversary Festival Dinners.

b. The expenditure of time and money by those who undertake the duties of Stewards.

c. The inadequate return for such expenditure.

a. At the recent Festival in aid of the "Mark Benevolent Fund" this was treated at some length by the Chairman, Lord Skelmersdale, than whom there cannot be quoted one more solicitous for the prosperity of our Institutions—more ready at any time, and at all times, to give his services in promotion thereof; more earnest and more genial in the discharge of any duty he undertakes, or one whose utterances, from the distinguished position he occupies in the Craft, and in other branches of Masonry, are more deserving of attentive respect. In the expressions then used by his Lordship there was no condemnation of the present system; the words adopted were in the form of a friendly, not a criticising enquiry—why could not—(resolving itself really into the shape of an earnest, trusting hope that such might be the case)—the results all were desirous of realising be accomplished without the large outlay necessitated by a dinner?

Doubtless, the enquiry has been urged over and over again; while, with equal certainty, it may be affirmed the aspiration has been indulged in by infinite numbers of those who are in the habit, at the call of duty, of participating in festive assemblies, and assuredly by none more heartily than by those upon whom devolves the labour of organising and carrying out all the multifarious details in connection with the "getting up" of such gatherings.

Deeply imbued with this feeling, but firmly impressed with its Utopian character, I ventured, in reply to his Lordship's observations, with all deference to express my opinion, based upon experience and fortified by practice, that the abolition of the social meeting under the name of "Anniversary Festival" would be detrimental to the interests of the Charity which might elect to try the experiment.

I cannot better depict the advantages often the question of money resulting from the Annual Festival than in the words of my excellent friend Bro. T. B. Whytehead, of York, in his letter in your issue of 24th August, the concluding paragraph of which is admirably exhaustive.

These admitted, let me turn to the consideration of the most important point,—the acquisition of funds.

The modus operandi is: Fix a day to which the attention of W.M. and Members of Lodges is constantly directed by circulars, notices, &c., soliciting the names of Brethren to act as representative Stewards of Provinces, Lodges, &c., in support of a Brother, more or less distinguished and influential, who has consented to preside at the Anniversary Festival to be then celebrated. In response, the names of (say) 200 Stewards are received. These Stewards exert themselves, more or less successfully, to obtain donations; fired, in the majority of cases, by a just spirit of emulation to excel in the discharge of the duties they have undertaken; their eyes turned to the goal—the Festival Day—when the results will be publicly announced, amidst the plaudits of "fair women" and good brethren. The aggregate, an enormous success; those who have contributed largely evolving out of their inner consciousness a gratifying reward; those who have laboured equally perseveringly, but not so fortunately, consoling themselves that they have done their best; those who have fallen short, led to put enquiries to themselves, and stimulated, it is to be hoped, to more earnest exertions on a future occasion.

The "feast of reason and the flow of soul," the charms of melody, the badge of honour, all provided from a special fund raised by the Stewards, without calling for the outlay of a shilling from the funds of the Institution; the pleasant introductions, the interchange of social amenities, the renewal of old, sometimes of severed, friendships—contribute to throw a halo over the event, which renders each recurring anniversary a red-letter day in the memories of all who have joined in its celebration.

This is but the Masonic phase of a universal practise. Centenaries, jubilees, comings of age, national triumphs, political victories, foundation-stones of churches, hospitals, colleges, schools, theatres, &c., great events in connection with religious or secular societies, scientific associations, all have, as a necessary concomitant, that wonderful English institution,—a banquet, in some form or other; and all acknowledge the potency of the agency.

Abolish the annual gathering and you take away the pivot of the entire machinery, you deprive the Arch of its keystone. The Festival is the culmination of the labours of a year, the visible embodiment of the individual and collective exertions brought into play out of sight of the public.

I am free to confess that, so far as my experience extends, the festival per se, no matter under whatever distinguished auspices it may be held, does not materially conduce to an increase of funds—i.e., the work has all been done previous to the Festival, which may be looked upon as a consummation. I do not think it can be proved that at the banquet tables more than £100 has ever been added to the aggregate amount on the Lists of Stewards made up previous to their entering the room.

But now occurs the question: Would brethren be found to act as Stewards if their duties were simply to be confined to paying visits to a few Lodges, soliciting support from their funds and from friends, recording the amounts on a list, remitting the same with money received to head-quarters on or before a given day, the amounts being published in due course, and there an end? I, for one, think not. Will any of your correspondents suggest some other plan as worthy of trial?

This letter has far outrun the limits I had set for myself in treating of "a," and not wishing to trespass unduly on your space, or on the patience of your readers, I will reserve my remarks on the two remaining points of discussion, probably asking insertion of a separate communication on each.

Meanwhile, I am,

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

FREDERICK BINCKES.

London, 2nd September 1878.

SCRUTINEERS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am very glad to find that at last some positive action is to be taken with regard to the malpractices of those delinquent scrutineers who are unfaithful in the discharge of their self imposed onerous duties. It is now some years since the following occurrence took place, but I think the recital will strengthen the hands of the executive in the manly verdict they have passed, and which I hope will have a deterring effect for the future, and lead to a thorough alteration in our elective system. I suppress names and substitute blanks; but should it be doubted, I have all the papers now before me, and think I cannot better explain the case than by quoting extracts from my Petition:—

"To the General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys.

"That at the last School Election, the 16th October 1871, I was interested in the case of D.; that I there met Brother ——— of ———, who was representing that of C. At two o'clock Brother ——— came to me, stating, that although he had already polled 1250 votes for C.'s case, he had just received a note from Brother ———, one of the scrutineers (and which he showed me), bearing the following: "Buy, Borrow, or Steal 200 more, or you will be nowhere," thus announcing, from the scrutineers' room, that anything under 1450 would be unsuccessful.

"On consulting with my friends, at twenty minutes to three, and ascertaining that my whole strength was 1179 votes, we, on the faith of the document sent from the scrutineers' room, abandoned the case as hopeless, giving 300 votes to Brother ——— for his boy C." &c. &c.

"I therefore unhesitatingly declare that had it not been for the note shown me as coming from the scrutineers' room with the statement it contained, I should have polled my votes, and thus secured the election of the boy D. . . . . Through the misstatement of one of the most important officers appointed that day, who I consider not only committed a great breach of trust in communicating to his friend in the election room, but in also volunteering to be placed on the list of scrutineers for the purpose (as it appears) of securing the election of his candidate."

Such was my Petition.

Now, may I ask could there have been a more flagrant breach of trust than this? but what reply did I get. The case was brought before the Board, without any notice being given me, but, strange to say, by some extraordinary means the erring scrutineer was present, and all I heard of the matter was, "That it had been discussed, and the Brother had expressed his regret, for (what he called) an error in judgment," and that was all the redress I obtained. There was, therefore, only one course open to me, admission by purchase; so I paid the hundred and fifty guineas, which was partially recouped by subscriptions amongst the boy's relatives and those who worked the case. I might add that C. headed the poll with 1598 votes, while the lowest successful candidate got in with 958!! and I threw up 1179 on the representation of a scrutineer! Comment on such a case I leave to others, with the wish that next Wednesday this disagreeable episode and blot on our Institutions may find a remedy by some system being devised that shall place an effectual bar to its recurrence.

Believe me, &c. &c.,

WILLIAM BIGGS,

P. Prov. G. Sec. Berks and Bucks, P. Prov. S.G.W. Wilts.

31st August 1878.

In Memoriam.

IT is with the deepest regret that we record this week the sad and sudden death of one who was one of the brightest ornaments of Cornish Masonry. It will be long, indeed, before that most distant of our Western Provinces can boast of his equal in activity, in loyalty, and in liberality among its brethren. Sir Frederick Martin Williams, Bart., M.P., at the time of his death held several important offices in Masonry. He was D.G. Master of the Province in Craft, and its Grand Master in Mark Masonry, while he was Intendant General in the Masonic and Military Order of Knights of Rome and of the Red Cross of Constantine. Sir F. Williams was born 25th January 1830. He was educated at Winchester, and in 1858 married Mary Christian, youngest daughter of the Rev. Robert V. Law, Rector of Christian Malford, Wilts, and granddaughter of the late Right Rev. G. H. Law, D.D., Bishop of Bath and Wells. He was a member of the firm of Tweddy, Williams and Co., Bankers, of Redruth and Truro, and was also largely engaged in mining and other operations. He was Deputy Warden of the Stannaries, a D.L. and J.P. of Cornwall, a J.P. for Devon, and a Fellow of the Royal Geological Society. He succeeded to the title on the death of his father, the first baronet, in 1870, while his connection with the Commons House of Parliament dates from the year 1865, when he was first returned for Truro in the Conservative interest. A memoir of our late distinguished brother will be found in the volume of "Masonic Portraits" reprinted from the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, the title under which he figured in that list of worthies being "The Merchant Prince." However, a few facts in connection with his Masonic career, above and beyond what we have stated, will be read with interest. Sir F. Williams was initiated in January 1863, in the Phœnix Lodge of Honour and Prudence, No. 331, Truro. He was a joining member of No. 131, Lodge of Fortitude of Truro, and of Westminster and Keystone, No. 10, and the Marquis of Dalhousie, No. 1155, both London Lodges. He was the representative of the Grand Lodge of Portugal in our Grand Lodge, as well as a Past Grand Warden. In Royal Arch Masonry he held the office of Second Grand Principal in the Chapter of his Province, and was a Past Grand Scribe N. We have already noted that of Mark Masonry in Cornwall he was the presiding genius in fact as well as in name, while he was a Past Grand Sovereign of the Order of Knights of Rome and of the Red Cross of Constantine, and had taken the S.P.R.S. or thirty-second degree in the Ancient and Accepted Rite. He was Vice-President of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, and a Vice-Patron of both the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys and the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, besides being the largest contributor to, and one of the moving spirits of the Cornwall Masonic Annuity Fund. This is, indeed, a proud record of titles to the love and respect of his brother Masons, and one that will not easily be surpassed. It is sad to think he should have been suddenly stricken unto death by a fit of apoplexy, and so, in the fulness of mature age, removed from all he loved most dearly. But life and death are in the hands of the Supreme Being for Him to dispense as seemeth best, and it is not for mortal men to question the justice of His awards. We can but offer to his bereaved family and the brethren of his Province our sincere tribute of respectful sympathy. We trust that He who has visited them thus grievously will give them strength to endure their grief. In fine, to quote some lines by the Earl of Surrey—

"Divers thy death do diversely bemoan
. . . . . .
But I, that knew what harbour'd in that head;
What virtues rare were tempered in that breast;
Honour the place that such a jewel bred,
And kiss the ground wherein the corpse doth rest."

On Wednesday morning there was a large muster of the Masonic body at the York Cemetery, on the occasion of the funeral of the late Bro. William Cowling, P.M. 236, who had died at Scarborough on the previous Friday. Bro. Cowling had for some years occupied a prominent position amongst York Masons, and had laboured hard and successfully in the interests of the York Lodge, No. 236. He was initiated in 1850 in the York Lodge (then called the Union Lodge), by Bro. R. W. Hollon, then W.M., and was elected Master in 1855. For a number of years he served the Lodge as Treasurer, and was re-elected W.M. in the centenary year (1877). He was a P.M. of the York Mark Lodge (T.I.), and P.Z. of the Zetland Chapter 236, and was a P. Prov. Senior G. Warden for N. and E. Yorkshire. The pall was borne by five Past Masters and the Inner Guard of the York Lodge. Amongst those present, in addition to the Officers of the Lodge, and many brethren, were Bros. J. March P.M. 236, W. Lawton P.M. 236, Rev. J. E. M. Young P.M. 236, Thomas Cooper P.M. 236 and P.M. 1611, R. Davison P.M. 236, J. Todd P.M. 236, G. Balmford P.M. 236, F. Rawling P.M. 236, T. B. Whytehead W.M. 1611, &c.

This ceremony took place on Tuesday, in the large room over the Pier refreshment-hall at Portishead, the new Lodge of the Order really being in connection with the Royal Hotel. There was a very full meeting of the brethren from Somerset and the adjoining province of Bristol, and the ceremony was ably performed, in the most solemn and impressive manner, by the V.W. Bro. R. "A series of articles, biographical, descriptive, and eulogistic, of some of the principal Masonic worthies of the day. They are well written, and though personal, by no means offensive, or intrusive into private life, and in Masonic society will be welcomed as an interesting series of word paintings of members of the Craft.—Standard.

"'J. G.' writes with a considerable amount of freedom, never hesitating to 'hit off' a weakness when he finds it publicly displayed by a 'distinguished brother;' at the same time he never loses sight of a good trait when it is displayed, either in connexion with the Craft or in the service of the public out of doors. The sketches are lively reading."—City Press.

"This is a neat book. The Portraits consist of a series of 'word pictures' of eminent English Masons. It styles Bro. W. J. Hughan 'Knight Errant,' and sketches thirty-two others under equally unique titles. We commend the book as worthy of a place in every Masonic library."—Voice of Masonry.

"Evinces much literary ability, and is a valuable addition to the few works we have in Masonic biography."—Philadelphia Keystone.

"The style of the author is pleasing, and the quality of his productions highly complimentary to his ability as a writer."—Masonic Advocate.

"It is a valuable contribution to English current literature."—Masonic Review.

"Will be found very interesting and pleasant reading, especially to the Masonic world."—Bristol Press.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

THE Queen is still at Balmoral Castle, and with Princess Beatrice and Prince Leopold attended divine service on Sunday. The Court is ordered to go into mourning for three weeks, on account of the death of the late Queen Christina of Spain. On Sunday the Duchess of Edinburgh was safely delivered of a daughter, at Coburg, at which place the Marquis and Marchioness of Lorne have lately arrived.

The Australian Cricketers concluded what is expected will be their last match in England on Tuesday, when 11 players of England opposed them at Kennington Oval. The match resulted in favour of the colonials, who scored 166 against their opponents' 158.

The inquiry into the loss of the Eurydice has been concluded. The court consider that the vessel was in a sound and seaworthy state, and that no blame could be attached to either the officers or crew. They state that the loss was occasioned by the ship being caught in a sudden squall, the approach of which was concealed from the officers of the ship by the high land of the coast.

In addition to the casualties from the storms which were recorded in our last issue, several fatalities have occurred round the coast, where vessels have been wrecked and members of their crews lost.

The week which has just closed will be painfully remembered by a very great number of families. Two most disastrous accidents have occurred, which, together, will render the homes of some thousands desolate, and will cause heartfelt sorrow in many families. On Saturday the regular fast cheap train of the London, Chatham and Dover Railway, which leaves Ramsgate and Margate each day was, in consequence of excess of traffic, divided into two parts. The first of these reached its destination as usual, but to the second a most appalling accident occurred. On reaching Sittingbourne Station the driver observed that the line on which he was travelling was blocked by some goods trucks; unfortunately, in consequence of a curve in the line, the obstruction was not observed until too late, and in the crash which followed five persons were killed and forty more or less injured. An inquest has since been held, and a verdict of manslaughter returned against the two guards of the luggage train, who, it is stated, were guilty of criminal negligence in carrying out the shunting operations they were engaged in. The second, which was one of the most fearful calamities of modern times, occurred on Tuesday, on the River Thames, at Woolwich. The Princess Alice, a large iron saloon steamer, licensed by the Board of Trade to carry 899 persons, left Sheerness for London at 4.15 p.m., and called at Gravesend at 6.30. She was to stop at North Woolwich pier, and was in Gallion's Reach, just below it. The tide was running down, at two hours' ebb, and in rounding the point on the south bank (Tripcock Trees Point) into the reach, the course of the steamer was to hug the bank and to avoid the force of the tide. She then headed across the river to the next point, that on the north side, called the Devil's House. When half-way down the reach, and in mid-stream, she was run into by a screw collier outward bound. It was then 7.45 p.m. The Bywell Castle, the vessel which ran the passenger steamer down, had hauled out of dry dock at 5.45 p.m. that evening, and at 6.30 p.m. left the wet dock, in charge of Mr. Dicks, pilot, and her master, Captain Thomas Harrison. The log of the Bywell Castle gives the following particulars:—"At 7.45 p.m. proceeded at half speed down Gallion's Reach. Being about the centre of the reach, observed an excursion steamer coming up Barking Reach, showing her red and masthead lights, when we ported our helm to keep over towards Tripcock Point. As the vessels neared, observed that the other steamer had ported, and immediately afterwards saw that she had starboarded and was trying to cross our bows, showing her green light close under the port bow. Seeing collision inevitable, stopped our engines, and reversed full speed, when the two vessels collided, the bow of the Bywell Castle cutting into the other steamer, which was crowded with passengers, with a dreadful crash. The excursion steamer, which turned out to be the Princess Alice, turned over and sank." It is, unfortunately, impossible to gain any particulars from those in charge of the Princess Alice, as none of them are among the few that were saved; for this reason it will be all but impossible to satisfactorily prove who was to blame, should such a charge be made against the directors of either ship. The estimates of the loss of life are various, but all appear to agree that upwards of 500 lives have been sacrificed, while various statements, apparently well founded, place the number as high as 700. The exact number can never be found out, as no record is kept of the passengers who embark or land at the various piers. The work of recovering the dead goes on, and it is expected that bodies will be found in various parts of the river for some time to come. Operations were speedily commenced with a view of raising the wreck, and most likely before these lines are read will have proved successful. There is a rumour that about 250 bodies are in one of the cabins, but until the work is further advanced this cannot be confirmed. Her Majesty the Queen has, with her usual consideration, expressed her sympathy with the sufferers. As may be expected in such a calamity, the Craft will, during the next month or two, have specially brought home to them the awful consequences of the accident, and we hope that some notice will be taken of the matter by Grand Lodge at its next meeting. Already we have heard of one brother and his family being lost; while another, with his wife, are among those saved. The early accounts of the disaster contained the information that a Lodge of Freemasons, on hearing of the accident, at once closed their Lodge and rendered every assistance in their power. We hope that the action of our Woolwich brethren will be endorsed by Grand Lodge, who can materially assist, by voting a sum of money to the fund now being raised on behalf of those whose friends are missing.

After the fearful consequences of these two casualties, it is gratifying to be able to record that an accident which occurred on Wednesday evening off the Isle of Wight, and which might have added a terrible third to the week's list, was unattended by fatal results. One of the Isle of Wight Company's boats, whilst returning from an excursion to Alum Bay, in the face of a strong tide, was rendered helpless by the breaking of a link of one of the rudder chains; and as a consequence almost immediately ran aground. Fortunately, order was maintained on board, and the whole of the passengers were either landed, or taken on board another of the Company's steamers, which happened to be passing. Yet another narrow escape is recorded, from off the Isle of Man; where a steamer, on which were several passengers, on Wednesday escaped being run into by about a foot. Some damage was done to the sounding line and other gear of the passenger boat, but beyond a considerable fright, no serious consequences occurred to the passengers.

Another week has passed, and little has to be added to the account of the operations in Bosnia and the Herzegovina. The work of occupation by the Austrians seems to be at a standstill, the general in command appearing to think it best to await the reinforcements which have been sent him. The Russian occupation of Batoum has been all but completed; the Lazis having determined to migrate, had resolved not to oppose the soldiers, and consequently the work was carried through without disturbance. The Turkish Government seem determined not to carry out their parts of the Berlin Treaty, unless they are absolutely obliged to do so; they now refuse to surrender the territory to which Greece is entitled. The Athens Government have called upon the Powers to enforce the Berlin understanding, and rumours are current that Italy is making military preparation to support Greece if necessary, The withdrawal of Russian troops from San Stefano still continues, but it is stated that fresh troops are pouring into Bulgaria. Information, both from Cyprus and the Cape, is re-assuring. At the former place the health of the troops is said to be improving, while from the latter the civil war is considered as concluded. In fact, a day of thanksgiving has been observed in the colony. The terrible epidemic of yellow fever is said to be greatly extending among the inhabitants of the shores of the Mississippi, and in several parts of the Union subscriptions are being raised in aid of the sufferers.

One of the new Lodges for which a Warrant has been granted is intended to perpetuate the memory of the late King of Hanover. The meetings will be held at the Town Hall, Hounslow, during the summer months. The principal Officers designate are Bro. H. A. Dubois P.P.G.D. P.M. P.Z. W.M., Bro. Henry Lovegrove S.W., and Bro. George Clark J.W.

The meetings of the New Concord Lodge of Instruction will in future be held at the Jolly Farmers, Southgate-road, N., under the Preceptorship of Bro. Cusworth P.M. The winter session will be opened on Wednesday next, at 8 o'clock.

The Vitruvian Lodge of Instruction, No. 87, will resume it weekly meetings on Thursday, the 12th inst., at the White Hart, College-street, Belvedere-road, Lambeth, when it is hoped that the members will be enabled to attend, as some important matters are to be arranged; amongst others, the question of appointing a brother to act as Preceptor.

THE FALKLAND MEMORIAL.

The Brethren of the Loyal Berkshire Lodge of Hope, No. 574, Newbury, have obtained the sanction of the R.W. the Prov. Grand Master (SIR DANIEL GOOCH, BART., M.P.) to organise arrangements for the attendance of the Brethren of the various Lodges in the Province on the occasion of Unveiling the Memorial to LORD FALKLAND, which has been erected on Wash Common, the site of the first Battle of Newbury. The ceremony will be performed at 12.45 p.m. on Monday next, by the Pro Grand Master of England (Lord Carnarvon).

Bro. W. Biggs P.M., Past Provincial Grand Secretary, has kindly consented to act as Director of Ceremonies.

After the Ceremony a Public Luncheon will be provided in the Corn Exchange, Newbury, at 2 o'clock. The Worshipful the Mayor of Newbury (T. S. Slocock, Esq., M.A.) will preside, supported by Lord Carnarvon and others. Luncheon Tickets, 2s 6d each.

The W. M. and Brethren of the Lodge entertain the hope that as many of the Brethren as possible will endeavour to attend, to do honour to the Pro Grand Master.

The Brethren will assemble in the Council Chamber at Half-past Eleven o'clock precisely. The R.W. the Provincial Grand Master has graciously consented to allow the Brethren to appear in full Masonic clothing. The attendance of Brethren from neighbouring Provinces is respectfully invited.

ROYAL YORK LODGE, No. 315.

VISIT OF THE PROV. G. MASTER AND THE OFFICERS OF PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE.

THE regular meeting of the Royal York Lodge, No. 315, which was held on Tuesday, the 3rd inst., was specially interesting from the fact that the Prov. G. Master with several of his Officers attended the meeting. The Lodge was formally opened at the Royal Pavilion, Brighton, under the presidency of the W.M. Bro. A. J. Hawkes, supported by Bros. C. W. Hudson and J. Packham, the Senior and Junior Wardens respectively. The other offices were filled as follows:—R. J. Pope Sec., W. Gibson S.D., Ash J.D., W. J. Smith I.G., Payne Steward, and Devine P.G.O. Organist. Among the Past Masters were Bros. Foat I.P.M., W. J. Nell, W. R. Wood, Eborall, T. Hughes, H. H. Hughes, &c. The usual preliminary business having been disposed of, the ballot was taken for Bro. Paige, and he was declared duly accepted as a joining member; the ballot was again brought into requisition, this time on behalf of Mr. J. Saxby, who having been accepted was initiated into the Order. After some other matters had engaged the attention of the members, the Lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned to a banquet presided over by the W.M. The various dishes provided having received the attention of the members, grace was said, and the toasts of the evening were commenced, the two which usually head our lists being appropriately introduced by the W.M., and meeting a most hearty reception, the members joining in the anthems which followed. Bro. R. W. Wood P.M., P.G.S., now assumed the gavel, and directed the attention of the brethren to the important duties devolving on the Pro G.M. The Earl of Carnarvon, who, he said, was not only a prominent Mason but also a great statesman. He was zealous in the performance of the duties required of him in connection with Freemasonry, and, in fact, thoroughly carried out anything he took in hand. He (Bro. Wood) had the pleasure of being present when his Lordship was advanced to the Royal Arch degree, and although that connection was but trifling, he was gratified at being able to refer to it, and now felt it an honour to have the opportunity of proposing the health of his noble Bro. and Comp. After a song, Bro. Stride P.M., P.P.G.J.W., introduced the next toast on the list, Lord Skelmersdale and the the rest of the Grand Officers past and present. He was pleased at being depated to propose this toast, and coupled the name of Bro. Wood therewith. That Brother having replied, the W.M. rose. He had great pleasure in giving what all must admit was the toast of the evening. He referred to the progress Masonry had made in the Province of Sussex since it had been under the rule of its present governor, and expressed his pleasure at being Master of the Royal York Lodge at the time the Provincial Master had honoured it with a visit. He thought that few of the Past Masters could boast of such an exceptional distinction, as it was twenty-five years since any Provincial Grand Master had been within its walls. He referred to the gratification it afforded the Masters of the Sussex Lodges to avail themselves of his Lordship's invitations to attend the summer picnics he gave, and hoped that he would long be spared to rule and guide the Masons of Sussex. An excellent recitation from the S.W. followed the toast, and then the Prov. G. Master rose to respond. He thanked the brethren for the hearty way in which they had received the mention of his name, and expressed his regret that illness had prevented his attending their installation meeting in March last. Their Master had referred to the progress made during the past few years in Sussex Masonry, but he hoped at the next meeting of Provincial Grand Lodge to be in a position to present a report far in advance of any that had yet been given. He pointed out that the principal aim of Freemasons should be the support of their charitable institutions, and for this purpose he urged the advisability of combination. He saw that the Province of Herefordshire had just taken the matter in hand, and he hoped it would not be long before every Province in England which had not yet its charity committee would follow the example. He hoped that the annual receipts of the three Charities would increase year by year, and that the time would come when it could be said that every Mason contributed something to their maintenance. The W.M. next gave the toast of the visitors, he apologised for diverging from the list laid before him, but hoped the members would excuse his so doing as several of their friends had soon to leave. He coupled with the toast the name of the Mayor of Brighton, Bro. Mayall, who briefly responded on behalf of the visiting brethren. He had been a Mason 27 years, but hitherto had taken very little interest in the working of the Craft. The remarks of the Prov. Grand Master on the requirements of the Charities had induced him to decide that henceforth he would devote more attention to the work of the Order, and he hoped for the future to carry out Freemasonry in its integrity. The health of the Deputy Prov. G. Master was next given from the Chair, together with that of the rest of the Prov. G. Officers. The Master regretted that the absence of the Deputy Prov. Grand Master from this country prevented his being among them on the present occasion; in his absence he would call on Bro. Dixon, the P.W. of the Province, to respond. That Bro. congratulated the Royal York Lodge on the honour conferred on them by the visit of the Prov. G. Master; he regretted the absence of the Deputy of the Province, but hoped he would be able to attend at some future meeting. He tendered the hearty thanks of the whole of the Prov. G. Officers. Bro. Farncombe P.G.S. followed Bro. Dixon, adding his personal thanks. Bro. Stride P.M. gave the next toast, that of the W.M. Since Bro. Hawkes had occupied the chair of the Lodge, he had devoted his energies to making everything as comfortable and harmonious as possible, and he felt the whole of the members would agree that he had been successful. The Worshipful Master in reply considered it a great thing to be able to say that he was honoured at his Installation by a larger gathering than had ever assembled in Brighton under similar circumstances; he, throughout his occupation of the chair, had met with every consideration it was possible to be shown him. The health of the P.M.'s was next given, and responded to by Bros. Wood, Stride, and Sandeman. That of the Officers followed, acknowledged by the Senior Warden, after which the initiate of the Evening was toasted, and he replied in a capital speech. Throughout the evening several of those present endeavoured, by songs and recitations, to make the meeting pass pleasantly, and if we may judge from the good feeling displayed throughout, they wer successful. The Tyler was summoned and gave the farewell toast of the meeting.

NEW ZEALAND—NAPIER.

NO better evidence of the spread of Freemasonry in Hawke's Bay could possibly be given than that which is furnished by the fact that it has been found necessary in the best interests of the Craft to erect another Hall in Napier.

It is now twenty years ago since the first Lodge was opened in this town, at which time, and for that purpose, the late Colonel McGregor, Mr. Michael Fitzgerald, Mr. J. A. Smith, and others, obtained a dispensation from the Grand Lodge of Ireland. The first meetings were held in the upper floor of a store at the Spit, and though the most primitive furniture and accessories were well in keeping with the cheerless appearance of the apartment in which the brethren assembled, the warmth of heart and Masonic spirit that were there engendered gave ample promise of bearing good fruit. The canopy of Heaven being the roof tree of Masonry, it mattered little to the fathers of the Craft in Napier where they practised the rites and ceremonies of the Order so that they could secure freedom from prying eye, and listening ears. But no great length of time elapsed before better accommodation was obtained, and in due course land was bought, and the first building dedicated to Masonry was erected in this town. By this time Scinde Lodge, 419 I.C., numbered amongst its members nearly all the principal people of the province, and until about two years ago was the only Lodge in Hawke's Bay. With the growth of population came brethren of other Constitutions, who naturally and loyally desired to see another Lodge established. Some old Masons of the English Constitution thereupon met, and decided to form a Lodge which, under the name of "Victoria," has gone on prospering until it became necessary for the convenience and comfort of both Lodges that another Hall should be erected. This building is now completed, and was formally consecrated to-day.

Situated on a section at the corner of Munroe and Dickens-streets, the new hall presents a striking appearance, the front being remarkably classic in its design. The facade of the edifice is of the Doric style of architecture, having three windows and four fluted columns, with entablature surmounted by pediment. Admission to the building is obtained by a door, the only one, on the north side, which leads into a vestibule seven feet wide, from whence entrance is gained both into the Lodge-room and into the ante-room. This latter apartment is 20 feet long by 18 feet wide, and will be ordinarily used as a refreshment room. The Lodge-room is an extremely handsome hall, 40 ft. in length and 20 ft. in width, having plastered walls and cove ceiling, finished with heavy cornices. In the east, west, and south walls there are alcoves for the chairs of the three principal officers, whose stations are in those situations, the eastern alcove being surmounted with cornice and crimson canopy. The Chairs are placed on dais painted to represent black and white marble. Running round the walls are stuffed spring seats covered with crimson rep. The Masonic furniture is very handsome and complete, and much of it being the gift or manufacture of the members, no expense has been spared to make the several presentations worthy of the Lodge. The officers' pedestals and the altar are beautifully designed, the tops resting on entablatures supported by columns in groups of three, having carved capitals, with moulded bases and cornices complete; each pedestal represents one of the three orders, Doric, Ionic, or Corinthian. Until gas is laid on, the hall is lighted by a kerosene chandalier, and ventilated by patent ventilators.

The contractors for the building were Messrs. Baillie and Davis, who have performed their work in a manner that has given the greatest satisfaction. Indeed every one connected with the Victoria Hall appears to have vied with the other to make the building at once an ornament to the town and a credit to the Craft. We should mention that the architect is Mr. W. A. Dugleby, whose knowledge of the requirements of a Masonic Lodge, combined with his professional ability, has left nothing to be desired. To the untiring energy of J. M. Batham, Esq., the present Worshipful Master of the Victoria Lodge, is also greatly due that Masonic spirit and zeal that have animated the brethren, by which, without any assistance, they have quietly and unostentatiously worked together to that result which shows itself in the completion of as handsome a Lodge as any in this colony.

The consecration of the new building was fittingly appointed to take place on the Masonic Festival of St. John the Baptist, and the august ceremony was attended by every Mason in Hawke's Bay who could be present. The ordinary monthly meeting of the brethren of the Victoria Lodge was held at three p.m., and the Lodge having been duly formed in the Third Degree, the Delegates of the Provincial Grand Lodge were admitted at 4 p.m., with the usual honours. The Delegates were brother Past Masters Batham and Harwood, Bro. P.M. Batham taking the chair. The brethren then resumed their seats, and the Secretary having read the delegation, temporary Grand Officers were appointed, P.M.'s Kennedy and Wundrum occupying respectively the Senior and Junior Wardens' chairs. The ceremony of dedication then commenced by the Rev. Chaplain reading the first three verses from the 1st chapter Genesis, which was followed by the beautiful anthem "Father of Light," which was most impressively sung. On the application of Brother P.M. Draustield, the Lodge was formally examined, and Brother Architect Dugleby having returned the Working Tools, the D.P.G.M expressed his approval. Bro. P.M. Price then announced the desire of the Brethren that the Hall should be consecrated according to ancient form and usage, upon which the Rev. Chaplain read the Consecration Prayer. The following programme was then observed:—Procession of Officers; March by Organ; at termination of first circuit in the East, the Hall was dedicated to Freemasonry; corn sprinkled; grand honors; Ode; to Masonry; at the termination of second circuit, wine was sprinkled, and the Hall dedicated to Virtue; grand honors; Ode to Virtue; at the end of the third circuit, oil sprinkled, Hall dedicated to Charity; grand honors; Ode to Charity. The Rev. Chaplain then pronounced the Invocation, the choir responding. After the anthem "To Heaven's High Architect," had been sung, the D.P.G.M. delivered an able address, and this concluding the ceremony, the delegates of the District Grand Lodge retired. The proceedings were most impressively conducted from first to last, and occupied about two hours in their performance. The choral portion of the service was presided over by Bros. Redman and Aplin.

A banquet in honour of the occasion was held in the evening. The chair was taken, shortly after 8 o'clock, by the W.M. Bro. Batham, supported by P.M.'s Bros. Harwood and Wandram, and Bros. Kennedy and Sutton, and the W.M. of the Scinde Lodge, Bro. Dransfield. Brother Morgan, Senior Warden of the Victoria Lodge, and Bro. de Lisle, Junior Warden, occupied the vice-chairs, in their respective positions. There were nearly 100 brethren present.

The first toast was the usual one, "The Queen and the Craft," by the W.M., Bro. Batham, followed by the "The Three Grand Masters"—those of England, Ireland, and Scotland, respectively. "The District Grand Masters of New Zealand" was also given by the Worshipful Master.

P.M. Bro. Harwood then proposed "Prosperity to the Victoria Lodge." He said it was now, he believed, two years since the formation of the Victoria Lodge, and from that moment to the present it had advanced steadily, increasing in strength until it had assumed the position it now occupied—a position which it had attained by the united efforts of its members and the untiring exertions of its Officers and Masters, especially of its present Worshipful Master. The handsome Masonic Hall in which they were now assembled stood as a grand monument of the attachment of its members to the Craft. They must all ernestly hope that the Lodge might continue to flourish for many years to come, under its energetic promoters, in unity, strength, peace, and harmony.

The toast was acknowledged by the Worshipful Master, who took occasion to thank Bro. Harwood for his kindness in coming to Napier to assist in the ceremony of that day, a kindness which was all the more felt by him (the Worshipful Master) as Bro. Harwood was the only Past Master in the English Constitution whose services were at all available. The W.M. also thanked the Officers of the Scinde Lodge for the efficient assistance they had rendered. He then gave some particulars of the efforts made to get the hall erected, dwelling with warmth of feeling upon the liberal and willing aid that had been accorded by the brethren of the Lodge. Over £600 worth of shares had been taken by the brethren, the shares bearing no interest, and a considerable portion of the furniture and requisites had been presented to the Lodge by the brethren. The brethren had worked hard to get the Lodge erected, and it rested with them to do credit to it and never disgrace it.

Bro. Morgan, S.W. of the Lodge proposed, "The Lodges of Sister Constitutions," responded to by P.M. Bro. Wandram.

Bro. Dransfield, W.M. of the Scinde Lodge, proposed in highly eulogistic terms, "The Worshipful Master of the Victoria Lodge," acknowledged by the W.M., Bro. Batham.

Bro. de Lisle, Junior Warden of the Victoria Lodge, proposed "The Past Masters," coupled with the name of P.M. Bro. Sutton, and suitably acknowledged by him.

P.M. Bro. Kennedy proposed "The Building Committee and the Architect of the Hall" (Bro. Dugleby.)

Bro. D'Arcy Irvine, M.A., proposed the "Visiting Brethren." Bro. Elsross acknowledged the toast, and congratulated the Victoria Lodge upon the handsome hall they had erected for their meetings, and expressed a hope that it would frequently be graced with the company of ladies at Masonic balls or other occasions when the presence of the fair sex was permissible.

Bro. Combe proposed "The newly-made Masons," responded to by Bro. Loab, of Waipukurau.

The W.M. proposed the health of the caterer, Bro. Johnson, which was suitably acknowledged.

The Worshipful Master informed the brethren that he had received telegrams from the Tauranganui Lodge (Gisborne) and from the Wellington Lodge, conveying expressions of congratulation. He had also received a cordial letter from the District Grand Master of Westland (Bro. Lazar), expressing regret that he was unable to be present. He had besides received telegrams and letters from various brethren regretting their inability to attend. He mentioned these matters as evidence of the kind interest evinced in the prosperity of the Lodge. (Applause.)

Bro. Garner proposed "Absent Brethren," which was duly honored.

Bro. Ellis proposed "Old Masons" (of not less than ten years' standing). The toast was acknowledged by Bro. Raven, who then proposed the health of "Our Worthy Chaplain"—acknowledged in feeling terms by Bro. D'Arcy Irvine, Chaplain of the Lodge.

Bro. Combe proposed "Prosperity to the Craft.

Bro. D'Arcy Irvine proposed "The Press," acknowledged by Bro. Pirani.

"The Ladies" was proposed by Bro. Garner, and was responded to by Bro. Begg.

Bro. Blythe proposed "Buried Animosities," which having been honored, the last toast, usual at all Masonic banquets, was given by the Tyler, Bro. Motley—"All poor and distressed Masons throughout the Universe."

"Auld Lang Syne" then concluded a banquet which was about the most pleasant and harmonious of any that has been given in Napier, or perhaps in any other part of New Zealand. The evening was enlivened with songs and recitations by the brethren, the accompaniments being played by Bros. Redman and Aplin. We may here mention that Brother Johnson deserves great credit for the manner in which he discharged his duties as caterer. Everything was served in good style, and the ornamentation of the feast was in excellent taste.

SOUTHERN CROSS LODGE 997, E.C.

INSTALLATION OF BRO. W. B. SCANDRETT.

THE interesting annually recurring event, the installation of the Worshipful Master of the Southern Cross Lodge, E.C.—the oldest lodge in this portion of New Zealand—came round last Monday evening, when Bro. W. B. Scandrett was, with the usual formalities, placed in the highest position in the gift of a Lodge. The ceremony was performed in a most impressive manner by one who is justly regarded as a father in the Craft, Bro. W. Craig. Bro. the Rev. W. P. Tanner officiated as Chaplain, the musical service being entrusted to a small but efficient choir of male voices under the direction of Bro. Hantrie West, Organist of the Lodge. The attendance of brethren was very large indeed, no less than sixty being present in the room, including a very creditable representation indeed of the Brethren of the Scottish Constitution Lodge, St. John, who, headed by their R.W.M. Bro. Wragge, and his I.P.M., were heartily received with the proper Masonic honours. Into the details of the ceremony it is unnecessary to go, suffice it to say that in the actual act of Installation no less than nine of the rank of Installed Master assisted, and that the proceedings were, to Masons, of a most interesting character throughout. Having invested his Immediate Past Master, Bro. A. C. Henderson, who, during the past year has been a most efficient and energetic Master in the Craft, the newly installed W.M., later in the proceedings invested his Wardens and Officers, the W.M. being subsequently addressed on his duties to his Lodge and to the Craft by P.M. Bro. Craig, and the Wardens and Brethren by the I.P.M. The following is a complete list of the Officers of the Lodge for the ensuing year:—Bros. W. B. Scandrett W.M.; R. Waymouth S.W., L. E. Reade J.W., T. Perkins Treasurer, A. Mair Secretary, W. S. Moir S.D., A. Cross J.D., W. Daley I.G., A. Munro Tyler. The Lodge having been closed in due form, the brethren thereafter adjourned to the other Lodge room, in rear of the Prince of Wales Hotel, where a splendid repast—one which gave the highest satisfaction to all present—had been prepared for them by Bro. R. Powell. The W.M., Bro. Scandrett, occupied the chair, supported on his right and left by Bro. Wragge, R.W.M. of Lodge St. John S.C., and the I.P.M. Bro. Henderson. The tables having been cleared, the W.M. proposed "Her Majesty the Queen," which toast was enthusiastically drunk, the brethren singing the National Anthem. P.M. Bro. J. T. Martin proposed "H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family," alluding to the fact that the Prince is Grand Master of England. P.M. Bro. Moffett proposed "The three Grand Lodges of England, Ireland, and Scotland," which was drunk with Masonic honours. P.M. Bro. Martin proposed "The District Grand Lodge and future Invercargill Royal Arch Chapter," to which Bro. E. R. Bowen made response. R.W.M. Bro. Wragge, of Lodge St. John S.C., proposed the health of "The Southern Cross Lodge and its newly installed Master," alluding in the warmest terms to the fraternal relations that exist between the Southern Cross Lodge and his own. The toast was drunk with enthusiasm and with musical honours, by the brethren of the S.C. and the visitors. W.M. Bro. Scandrett acknowledged in a most cordial manner the heartiness and goodwill with which the toast was drunk. P.M. Bro. Wade in a genial manner proposed the health of I.P.M. Bro. Henderson stating that from the satisfactory manner in which Bro. Henderson during the past year had discharged his duties as Master, he (Bro. Wade) felt a pride himself as having, during his term of office, been the first to appoint Bro. Henderson to an office in the Lodge. Bro. Henderson suitably replied, in doing so taking an opportunity to relate his experience of the onerous nature and duties of the office he had just vacated, and to bespeak from the brethren for his successor that consideration they had displayed towards himself. S.W. Bro. Waymouth proposed "The Past Masters of the Lodge," which was acknowledged by P.M. Bro. Craig, who, in the course of his remarks, referred in terms of the highest commendation to the recent action of the Grand Lodge of England in instructing all Lodges under its jurisdiction to refuse admission to or hold intercourse with Masons under the Grand Orients of France and of Egypt, which had decided in future not to insist upon—as qualification for Masonic membership—belief in God. The action of the Grand Lodge of England in regard to these two Grand Lodges he considered should have the approval, not only of Masons, but of all good men throughout the world. The W.M. Bro. W. B. Scandrett then proposed "The Lodge of St. John S.C." which was drunk with the amplest honours and three cheers, R.W.M. Bro. Wragge ably making response to the toast. "The Wardens of the Southern Cross Lodge," proposed by Bro. Bowen, and replied to by Bros. Waymouth and Reade; the Ladies (humorously responded to by S.D. Bro. Moir); "the Host and Hostess," and "All Poor and Distressed Masons," brought the regular toast list to a close. During the evening some capital songs and recitations were given by various brethren, one of the best contributors to this portion of the proceedings being Bro. R. Bree, whose kindness and ability were acknowledged in a special toast. "Auld Lang Syne," sung in orthodox style, and "God Save the Queen," brought a pleasant evening to an appropriate close.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Weary of Life.—Derangement of the liver is one of the most efficient causes of the grievous diseases, and the most prolific source of those melancholy forebodings which are worse than death itself. A few doses of these noted Pills act magically in dispelling low spirits, and repelling the covert attacks made on the nervous system by excessive heat, impure atmospheres, over-indulgence, or exhausting exertion. The most shattered constitutions may derive great benefit from Holloway's Pills which will regulate disordered action, invigorate the nerves, increase the energy of the intellectual faculties and revive the failing memory. By attentively studying the instructions for taking these Pills and implicitly putting them in practice, the most despondent will soon feel confident of a perfect recovery.

Halford W.M., Pearcy S.W., G. Cook J.W., Tolmie Preceptor, A. W. Fenner Secretary, J. A. Powell S.D., A. Wing J.D., W. Cook I.G.; also Bros. J. Stock, Crawley, Hallam sen., Hallam jun., W. Rowley, Garrod, Byng, W. J. Goode, Morgan, &c. Lodge was formally opened, and the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The ceremony of initiation was excellently rehearsed by the W.M., who was well supported by his Officers; Bro. W. Rowley was the candidate. Bro. Pearcy worked the first, Bro. Fenner the second, Bro. Powell the third, and Bro. Pearcy the fourth section of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. Bros. S. J. Byng, W.M. of the Burgoyne Lodge No. 902, and W. J. Goode, of the Crusaders' Lodge No. 1677, were elected members. Bro. Pearcy was appointed W.M. for the ensuing week. The Lodge will now meet regularly every Monday evening.

Warrington Lodge of Lights, No. 148.—The regular monthly meeting was held on Monday, 26th August, at the Masonic Rooms, Sankey-street. The W.M., Bro. Joseph Pickthall, presided, and was assisted by his Wardens and a goodly number of brethren. The Lodge having been opened in ancient form, the minutes were read. The Lodge was raised one degree, when Bros. A. Mackie and G. F. Carson claimed preferment, and having sustained their claim, were entrusted and they retired. The Lodge having been opened in the third degree, the W.M. vacated the chair in favour of Bro. John Bowes P.M. P.P.G.J.W. Cumberland and Westmoreland, who separately raised in ample form the two brethren before named. To illustrate the lecture of this degree, a new tracing board of large size was used for the first time. After labour the brethren were invited by the W.M. to supper, and a very enjoyable evening was spent. The usual toasts were duly honoured. The W.M.'s health was drunk with much heartiness, as was that of the junior members. The Visitors one and all complimented Past Master Bowes on the manner in which he had rendered the ceremony of raising. Some excellent songs were sung during the evening, and at half-past ten the Tyler's Toast was proposed.

Royal Alfred Lodge of Instruction, No. 780.—A meeting was held on 30th August, at the Star and Garter Hotel, Kew Bridge. Present—Bros. Stevenson Tr., G. Walters Sec., N. D. Partridge S.D., C. Howard J.D., Lewis I.G., Robson W.S., McDonald D.C., Young Org., W. Gilchrist Tyler. Routine business was then transacted, and the Lodge was closed. The banquet was well served, and was thoroughly enjoyed by the assembled guests. On the removal of the cloth, the W.M. briefly introduced the two Loyal toasts, following which were given the National Anthem and "God Bless the Prince of Wales." With that of the Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master and the rest of the Grand Officers Past and Present, was associated the name of Bro. Joshua Nunn, who, the W.M. stated, was a member of the Leopold Lodge, and a Mason well known and universally respected at the East-end of London; moreover, whenever mention was made of him throughout the Craft, it was with feelings of admiration and respect; he (the W.M.) had great pleasure in offering the toast for their acceptance. After Bro. Potter had favoured the company with the "Skipper and his Boy," Bro. J. Nunn rose to reply: In the name of the illustrious brethren who were associated with him in the toast, he returned them his sincere thanks. For himself, it was true he was one of the Founders of the Lodge, but he was present that evening as an honorary member. Freemasonry at the east end of London was doubtless flourishing, and their success was due to the exertions of such men as those by whom he was surrounded. The next toast was entrusted to Bro. W. H. Myers, who gracefully proposed the health of the W.M. Bro. Clarke had been an immediate neighbour of the late worthy Preceptor, Bro. Thomas Austin, and he (Bro. Myers) should not be surprised if the brethren discovered that the mantle of that talented Brother had fallen on their Worshipful Master, who, by the way in which he had that evening invested his Officers, had displayed abilities which he individually had not given him credit for possessing. He was sure all present would fully honour the toast. After a song by Bro. Hill, the W.M. replied. He thanked the members of his Lodge sincerely for the honour they had paid him in electing him to the chair. He would strive earnestly to advance the interests of the members. With regard to what Bro. Myers had said in reference to his association with the late Bro. Austin, he trusted he might convince them he had benefitted by what he had gleaned from that Brother's vast store, and which Masonic knowledge he would strive to dispense for the benefit of the Leopold Lodge. The next toast given was the health of the Visitors, and those present severally replied, after which the W.M. gave that of the Past Masters, at the same time presenting the I.P.M. with a P.M.'s jewel, to which was added an elegant appendage, which had been subscribed for by some of the members This substantial mark of the esteem in which he is held was feelingly acknowledged by Bro. Myers, who made reference to matters connected with the history of the Lodge which concern the members thereof, and will not interest the general reader. The remaining toasts all received their due consideration, and Bro. Gilchrist was called on for that to our distressed brethren. In the early part of the evening a feeling of gloom pervaded the assembly, in consequence of a report which had been circulated that an esteemed Preceptor, well known in the neighbourhood, was amongst those who were lost in the ill fated steamer, the Princess Alice, but Bro. Morgan, who did not arrive till a late hour, was able to dispel the gloom by stating he had just received an intimation that the brother in question was at his post on the Tuesday evening when the accident occurred. In addition to those we have already mentioned, Bros. Young, Seddon, Myers, Tombs, Morgan, &c., contributed to the entertainment of the company.

Whittington Lodge of Instruction, No. 862.—Held its weekly meeting on Wednesday, 4th September, at Bro. Hyde's, Red Lion, Poppins-court, Fleet-street. Bro. Hallam W.M., Drury S.W., Abell J.W., Hallam jun. S.D., Vizzard J.D., Brown I.G. The ceremony of initiation was ably performed by the W.M., Bro. Collinson candidate. The greater part of the lecture was gone through by the brethren. Bro. Drury was elected W.M. for the ensuing week, when the second degree will be rehearsed.

Duke of Connaught Lodge of Instruction, No. 1524.—At the Havelock Tavern, Albion-road, Dalston, E., on Wednesday evening, 4th inst. Present—Bros. Woolley W.M., G. Ferrar S.W. and Treas., C. Lorkin J.W., R. Olley S.D., J. Lorkin J.D., Elliston I.G., W. Fieldwick Preceptor, E. Dietrich Hon. Sec., &c., &c. After preliminaries, the ceremony of initiation was rehearsed by the W.M., Bro. W. Ferrar candidate. Bro. C. Lorkin, assisted by the brethren, worked the first, second, and third sections of the lecture. Bro. Elliston of New Concord Lodge 813 was elected a member. Bro. G. Ferrar was unanimously chosen W.M. for the next meeting. Bros. C. and J. Lorkin and Bro. R. Olley were appointed auditors. Bros. Fieldwick, G. Ferrar, and E. Dietrich were re-elected Preceptor, Treasurer, and Secretary for the ensuing year, and a cordial vote of thanks was passed to them for the manner in which they had performed their duties during the past twelvemonths. A cordials vote of thanks to Bro. Woolley for the manner in which he had carried out the duties of the chair closed the proceedings.

THE INTERNATIONAL CONGRESS OF HYGIENE AT PARIS.

DISCOVERY OF A COMPLETE SUBSTITUTE FOR WHITE LEAD.

The proceedings of the Congress, which has been held in the Palace of the Trocadero and Tuileries, under the patronage of the French Government, have recently been brought to a conclusion. The Congress has been a great success. It was attended by representatives of 17 nationalities, and by 1,048 men of science who take an interest in the topics brought forward for elucidation and discussion. Perhaps the most interesting, and certainly the most important matter with which the Congress dealt, had reference to the means of diminishing the dangers arising to workers in different industries from the use of poisonous mineral substances, more especially white lead, mercury, &c., by the definite substitution of non-poisonous substances. The papers of Professor Lutschannig, Analytical Chemist and Assayer of Metals, Liverpool, and Dr. T. L. Phipson, F.C.S., which dealt with one branch of the subject, namely, the dangers arising to the health of those employing white lead or preparations of lead, such as house painters, lead paint makers, &c., were listened to with the deepest interest. To an Englishman, and to English industry, has fallen the credit of solving the problem of how to produce a less costly, a more permanent, a non-poisonous, and a complete substitute for the white or carbonate of lead used in painting houses, and for all other purposes for which white lead paint is now employed. After ten years' experiments and investigation, Mr. Thomas Griffiths, F.S.A., of Liverpool, and a member of the Sanitary Institute of Great Britain, has produced the desired pigment, which is prepared, by a special process, of sulphide of zinc, in combination with other ingredients, which, while in nowise modifying the hygienic properties and advantages of the zinc, lend to this metal a body and a whiteness which even lead paint itself does not possess. Some of the qualities which recommend "Griffiths' Patent White," as it is called, were clearly placed before the Congress. It was stated that its covering powers exceed by about 25 per cent. those of the best lead paints, and this, too, without being any dearer; it does not yield to the influence of injurious gases, which destroy ordinary paints; the most violent heat will neither blister nor crack it; it does not contain any poison, and does not cause any odour, and it does not produce any chemical or galvanic action on metals, as is the case with lead; this is a feature of the utmost importance. In this latter respect the new paint acts as a true preservative, as it does not yield to the influence of oxygen, ammonia, sulphuretted hydrogen, salt, or any other destructive or corrosive agent. It is evident that from the cheapness of cost, and its inherent excellence, the new paint is calculated to satisfy the demands both of the Tradesman and the Sanitary reformer. About 25 tons per week of the "Griffiths' Patent Zinc White," as it is called, are turned out at the works of the Liverpool Silicate Paint Company, who manufacture this pigment for the owners, Griffiths, Fletcher & Berdoe, and a new factory has been opened on the banks of the Thames, which will give a weekly output of about 50 tons more. In contemplation of a further great increase in the demand, arrangements have been made by which, in no distant future, 200 tons per week can be manufactured. The new paint has been approved by numbers of scientific and commercial authorities. Apart from its value as a commercial product there can be no doubt that, from a sanitary point of view alone, Mr. Griffiths acted wisely in submitting this invention to the approbation of the International Congress. We see it was also brought before the meeting of the British Association in Dublin, and is attracting the greatest attention, and, as Dr. Phipson justly says, "this is one of the most useful and ingenious discoveries of the present age."

CUSTODY OF LODGE FUNDS.

THE resolutions passed in Grand Lodge at its meeting on the 5th June last, as to the future investment of its funds were, on Wednesday, 11th inst., confirmed by the passing of certain resolutions defining where and in whose names the monies of Grand Lodge should in future be deposited. The measures now to be adopted for the safe custody of the funds offer a security such as should satisfy the most particular among our number, enacting as they do that all monies shall be deposited in the Bank of England in the joint names of the Grand or Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and the Grand Treasurer; and that all cheques for amounts duly voted by Grand Lodge shall be signed by the Grand Treasurer, and countersigned by the Grand Secretary. The first part of this resolution, stipulating that the money shall be placed in the Bank of England, is no less a result than could have been expected taking into consideration the unfortunate nature of our recent experiences. In fact, for some time past, it has been urged by various members of Grand Lodge, that the laws on this question are really out of date, and the Freemasons of England ought to have their now considerable funds placed in the custody of the first of our great banking establishments. Naturally, this would have been a very delicate matter to bring forward while the late Grand Treasurer retained the position he had filled for so many years, and whose long occupation of that important office fairly entitled him to the confidence reposed by Grand Lodge, but it is a question that has been growing each year in importance, and one that would eventually have demanded consideration under any circumstances. We are gratified, then, in recording that on this, its first opportunity, Grand Lodge has taken the initiative step, and that for the future we may consider the funds of Grand Lodge as secure as it is possible for human laws to make them. Still we think the duty of Grand Lodge does not end here; we should have preferred to have heard a suggestion made that some similar alteration should be effected in the rules governing Provincial and Private Lodges. We, of course, may rely on some of the more important Provinces following the example set by Grand Lodge, and perhaps a few of the wealthier private Lodges may likewise do so; but were it officially recommended to every Lodge in the kingdom, and some suggestion offered as to the means likely to be most successful, we consider that at least one-half the Lodges would adopt such a recommendation—or some modified form thereof—before another year had passed. We consider that Grand Lodge would thus be studying its own interests, and at the same time act its part of "guide, philosopher, and friend" to every Lodge working under its jurisdiction. Amongst the members of Grand Lodge it was a very easy task to find a responsible brother to fill the office of Treasurer, but in private Lodges it can hardly be denied that difficulties often arise. A few weeks since a correspondent wrote to us in rather strong terms regarding the Treasurer of his Lodge, who, he stated, was, for certain reasons, unsuited to fill that office. Since that time we have received communications from other parts of the country,—that our correspondent's picture was an exact outline of the Treasurer of our several correspondents' particular cases, thus making it certain that the individual Lodge referred to was not alone in its misfortune. Again, it has occurred when a Lodge has lost its funds through calamity or misfortune overtaking its Treasurer. At the present time we are reminded of two cases, which have recently occurred, where Lodges have suddenly found themselves penniless, and in each case the loss is considerably over £100. These we fear are but examples of what takes place year after year, and of what will continue so long as the present system remains in vogue. We are not opposed to Treasurers in general; far from it; for, as a rule, more good-natured or liberal members cannot be found in a Lodge; still we hold that the system is bad, and in support of this assertion ample evidence can be adduced if necessary. One brother, who is in a position which makes his opinion worthy of all consideration, lately stated in our presence that he would be pleased to have as his income the interest on monies which had been lost to Lodges from the various causes we have referred to, and gave it as his opinion that this would be amply sufficient to warrant his retiring from business, and to provide himself and family with everything they required. It is a matter, however, that must be approached in the various Lodges with the greatest caution, unless Grand Lodge think it desirable to refer in some way to it, then the question could be freely discussed without giving offence to the most sensitive Treasurer, who would thus know he was only one of considerably over a thousand similarly placed, who were being talked about, and many of the number would bring their experience to guide the members of their Lodge in their decisions.

Another question in connection with this subject is,—Could not the funds of each Lodge be so invested as to bear interest? When we take into consideration the immense amount which would represent the balances of the various Lodges in England, we can but regret that these balances are not earning something. Say, for example, the number of Lodges in England having funds in hand are one thousand, and that on an average their balance is £10, we thus have a sum of no less than £10,000, which, if invested at three per cent., would produce sufficient to provide for the clothing, education, &c., of two boys and two girls in our Schools, and then leave enough to place two additional annuitants on both the Male and Female Benevolent Funds. Thus, in a way which would injure no one, should we be able to provide for eight more in our Institutions. Again, the average balance might with safety be reckoned at £15 or £20, in such case the benefits arising from the interest could be shared by twelve or sixteen persons respectively. That numerous amounts of apparent insignificance make considerable differences in the totals received by our Charities is clear from the large sums which are annually raised by the Associations formed in London, and some parts of the country, for obtaining Life Governorships by weekly subscriptions of 1s or 6d each. The greatest obstacle we see to the carrying out of this scheme is, the difficulty of investing the money easily; but this is an obstacle readily overcome. In every town where a Lodge is held there is a branch of some one or other of the large banks, and at any of these deposits may be made which, on an average, would realise say 2½ per cent. If any of our readers think the question worthy of consideration, it will gratify us to hear their views on the subject, but we hope to see some Lodge take steps to inaugurate such a fund as we point out could be raised. We remind brethren that the average sum required from each Lodge, to provide for the accommodation of four more children in addition to two aged Masons and two widows, is but six shillings per annum.

THE FOUR OLD LODGES.

Bro. R. F. Gould.

§ 28.—The power of passing and raising Masons, continuously possessed by the old Lodges, may be dismissed in a few words. Since, by what may be termed a process of "levelling up," viz., the extension of this privilege to all Lodges in 1725,(1) Lodges, old or new, are now on the same footing.

§. 29.—Original No. 1 (Lodge of Antiquity) would seem, in every way, to have avoided any surrender of its rights, and, indeed, to have powerfully asserted its independency.

§ 31.—I. Original No. 3 (Fortitude and Old Cumberland). The status of this Lodge is open to discussion,(2) though the point is narrowed to the consideration of a short statement of eight lines only, viz., the note to Lodge No. 10 in § 6, upon which, moreover, Preston entirely bases his estimate of this Lodge's position. It is submitted that the brethren of Original No. 3, from the date of their coming under a new Constitution, suspended merely, the exercise of their undoubted inherent privileges. It would, indeed, seem to be incompatible with the terms of the compact of 1721, for them, whilst preserving an unbroken continuity of existence, to surrender rights inherent in themselves, and confirmed to them in trust for and by the Masons of the Metropolis.(3) These rights would seem to be inalienable; they were inherent in the members of Original No. 3, and must have become the inheritance of succeeding generations, as well as having been the possession of the earliest one. The members are continuous; there has been no gap between one generation and another, and what was inherent in them must clearly be continuous also.

Grand Lodge having, in the case of Original No. 4, taken upon itself to revive privileges which it was incapable of creating, out of respect to Past Grand Master Payne, might, it is thought, well essay the simpler task of sanctioning the resumption of privileges which are merely dormant, in respect to the memory of Past Grand Master Sayer?

II. But, as a matter of fact, were these rights surrendered? This view is only sustainable, on the ground that the acceptance of a warrant, necessarily involved an implied or constructive surrender by Original No. 3 of its inherent privileges, and if authority and precedent be regarded, no such argument would seem to be maintainable. Under the Grand Lodge of Scotland, it has been inferentially stated (4) that one of, if not both, the two senior Lodges, Mother Kilwinning and the Lodge of Edinburgh, accepted warrants from the Grand Lodge, and it is matter of history, not only that, believing their ancient privileges to be assailed, they subsequently retired from the Masonic Union, but also, that so far from their acceptance of warrants being construed into a renunciation of pre-existing privileges, these were increased rather than diminished on their return "within the fold." The Master of Mother Kilwinning, in particular (after the secession of this Lodge from 1743 to 1807), being constituted ipso facto Provincial Grand Master for the Ayrshire district.

III. It has, however, been urged by a very high authority (Bro. Hughan), that Original No. 3 lost its privileges through amalgamation with a junior Lodge; but with great respect to Bro. Hughan (whose adverse opinion, I am assured, must militate greatly against the general reception of my conclusions)—

(b) If such an amalgamation did occur, I am at a loss to understand how this step could possibly involve a loss of precedency in the case of the older Lodge, any more than happened on its further absorption of the Old Cumberland Lodge in the present century. In all amalgamations of this kind, i.e., unions of two existing Lodges, the doctrine of merger has prevailed, and the lesser precedency has invariably been merged in the higher, as would naturally occur under the old legal maxim, "Omne majus continet in se minus,"(5) as illustrated by the rule that "whenever a greater estate and a less, coincide and meet in one and the same person or body, the less is immediately annihilated; or, in the law phrase, is said to be merged, that is, sunk or drowned in the greater.(6)

(c) The earliest amalgamation of Lodges, of which we possess any authentic record, occurred shortly before the 24th January 1742, on which day the Master of No. 95 (meeting at the Turk's Head, Greek-street, Soho), constituted 12th December 1732, surrendered the Warrant of Constitution in Grand Lodge, by reason of its having joined with No. 38 (meeting at the King's Arms, Strand), a Lodge which dated from 25th May 1725. (7) On 26th February 1744-5, a similar surrender of its Warrant by No. 185 (Three Tuns, Houghton-street, Clare Market, constituted 4th November 1740) is recorded, on its joining with No. 102 (Fountain, Katherine-street, Strand, constituted 23rd May 1733).(8)

(d) It should be added, moreover, that the precedency of Original Nos. 1 and 4 (present Nos. 2 and 4) has been entirely unaffected by their various unions with junior Lodges.

IV.—It appears indeed somewhat anomalous, that whilst the meeting at the Old Apple Tree Tavern in 1717, is justly regarded as the most momentous event in the history of the Craft, the old Lodge under whose banner that meeting took place, and who furnished the first Grand Master, who was elected to preside over the Premier Grand Lodge of the World, has been so totally forgotten, that its ancient privileges have subsided into abeyance, and even its very existence is disputed!!

§ 32.—Original No. 4 (Somerset House and Inverness). This Lodge, though spoken of rather disparagingly by Bro. Preston, who, indeed, loses no opportunity of extolling the Lodge of Antiquity at the expense of the other old Lodges, would seem fully to have retained its Time Immemorial privileges.

Its expulsion from the Masonic Union (1747-51), does not necessarily imply, any break in the continuity of its existence as an independent Masonic community, since it is most probable that on its restoration to the Union the same members belonged to it who had been such on its erasure; although were this not the case it would have been fully "within its rights" during the interim, in discharging the duties of Masonry, by the initiation or admission of members, conformably with its immemorial constitution.(9)

It is certain that (see § 21, Note 3), as an official of Grand Lodge (Note 2, page 405), Pine would possess unusual facilities of information, besides being placed in a situation of responsibility as regarded accuracy of statement.

Original Nos. 3 and 4 would in this case date between 1712 and 1717.

II. The numbers placed against the old Lodges in the

In consequence of this, almost all the Lodges applied for new Constitutions, &c.—Laurie, pp 100-1. See also §§ 1 ante, and 34 (I.) post.

1723 List (Constit.), and in the account of the Revival (§2) confirm one another, Dr. Anderson being answerable for the numeration in both cases, and the Lodges numbered 1, 2, 3, and 4 respectively in § 3, may without doubt be identified with those bearing similar numbers in § 2. The 1738 List (Constit.) makes this clear as regards § 2, but only inferentially so far as concerns the 1723 List, which, had it stood alone, would have been open to various interpretations, having been compiled prior to the Regulation of 27th December 1727. (See Note 3, p 405.)

§ 34.—I. The analogy between the Grand Lodges, in England and Scotland respectively,(1) derives another illustration, from the fact that the most ancient Lodge under the Masonic constitution of each of these countries, seceded for a time from the governing body.(2) In 1737, it was resolved by the Grand Lodge of Scotland,(3) that all Lodges should be enrolled according to their seniority, which should be determined from the authentic documents which they produced; those producing none to be put at the end of the roll.

On 30th November 1743 (4) a letter was read from the Lodge of Kilwinning, complaining that they were only second on the roll, while, as the mother Lodge of Scotland, they were entitled to the first place. The Grand Lodge decreed, that as the Lodge of Kilwinning had produced no documents to show that they were the oldest Lodge in Scotland, and as the Lodge of St. Mary's Chapel had shewn their records as far back as 1598, the latter had an undoubted right to continue first on the roll.(5)

In consequence of this decision, Mother Kilwinning, although it had been a consenting party to the erection of the new Grand Lodge, withdrew from it in 1743, and re-asserting its independence, continued to exercise all the functions of a Grand Lodge until, in 1807, a reconciliation was effected between it and the present Grand Lodge of Scotland.

It being conceded that Mother Kilwinning should be placed at the head of the roll of the Grand Lodge, and that her daughter Lodges, as soon as the roll should be arranged and corrected, should be entitled to be ranked according to the dates of their original charters, and of those granted by the Grand Lodge; also that the Master of the Mother Lodge Kilwinning for the time being, should be ipso facto Provincial Grand Master for the Ayrshire district.(6)

II. Here unfortunately the analogy ceases; our oldest English Lodge, original No. 1, now the Lodge of Antiquity, though it resumed, as a matter of course, its position as No. 1 on the roll of the "Constitutional" Grand Lodge, after the temporary secession of 1779-90,(7) it was shortly afterwards superseded by the Grand Stewards' Lodge, a creation of 1735, and, in 1813, became also junior to a Lodge dating from 1759 only(8): original Nos. 3 and 4 have experienced still harsher treatment.

III. It will doubtless be contended, that the Masonic re-union of 1813 was no mere healing of a schism, such as would admit of the rights of the parties being resumed as they existed prior to the breach, but a union of two Masonic societies (by agreement) of coequal authority, who each contracted away its separate rights and privileges, in consideration of the ample power and authority which was thereby to vest in the one Masonic body, produced by the fusion of the two independent Grand Lodges.

IV. But, the Four Old Lodges were the "Common Ancestors" of both "Moderns and Ancients," and however indisposed the latter may have been, to yield precedence to Warranted Lodges (of the "Moderns"), though of prior date to their own, it is scarcely conceivable that the negociations pending in 1810–13, for a union of the rival Grand Lodges, would have been in any way jeopardised, had the "Moderns" made the precedency of the "Old Lodges" over all other Lodges ("Modern or Ancient,") a condition precedent to signing away their independent existence.

Indeed, the acquiescence of the "Ancients" in the precedency claimed for the Grand Stewards' Lodge, negatives any such conclusion.

V. If, however, the action of the Grand Lodge of Scotland with regard to "Mother Kilwinning," cannot be instanced as at present coinciding with the policy pursued by our own Grand Lodge, is it not possible to follow the precedent established by our Scottish brethren, and to place the Old Lodges at the head of the roll, without numbers?

VI. The story of the great schism might have had a very different ending, had the Old Lodges wavered in their loyalty to the governing body they set up; a real flavour of antiquity would thereby have been communicated to the so-called "Ancients," the countenance of the creators of the Masonic Union of 1717, would doubtless have found general acceptation as a return to the "Old Constitutions," and the Masonic historian of to-day, might have hesitated to characterise as an anachronism, the familiar title by which the regular Masons have been distinguished from the "Seceders."

If, however, they could not reasonably expect any reward for their fidelity, they at least merited an immunity from punishment, but in the result, as has been already narrated, the Old Lodges who did not secede (i.e. join the Ancients) were degraded, whilst the actual seceders (as represented by their Senior Lodge), were exalted to the highest position on the roll.

History repeats itself—the charge preferred against the Grand Lodge of England by the York Masons, a century ago, of "despising the origin from whence it sprang,"(1) has derived yet a further illustration, from the hard measure meted out to the survivors of the Four Old Lodges, who as their creation, the "Premier Grand Lodge of the World," has advanced so as to have become a wonder and a pattern to the universal craft, have themselves steadily retrograded from the foremost position they once occupied, until, in the end, their ancient privileges have passed out of the domain of reality, and constitute an almost forgotten page of Masonic history.

COMMITTEE MEETING—BOYS' SCHOOL.

THE General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys met last Saturday at Freemasons' Hall. There were present Bros. Hyde Pullen (in the chair), George J. Row, H. Browse, Don. M. Dewar, J. W. M. Dosell, W. H. Perryman, H. Massey, Joyce Murray, Richard Morris, C. J. Rushworth, W. Mann, F. Adlard, J. Boyd, and F. Binckes Secretary. After reading and confirmation of the minutes, the salary of one of the Masters was increased from £65 to £75 a year. Authority was given for the education of one boy out of the School, and the ordinary allowance for that purpose was granted. The Secretary informed the brethren of the lamented death of Bro. Jesse Turner, and of Bro. John Symonds' resignation as Trustee of the Institution. Harry Newbolt, an applicant for the sixth time for admission to the School at next election, was withdrawn by his friends, he having obtained a presentation for Christ's Hospital. In reply to Bro. Joyce Murray, Bro. Binckes said that Bro. Benjamin Head had recovered from his recent severe illness.

COMMITTEE MEETING OF THE BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

THE Committee of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution met on Wednesday afternoon, at Freemasons' Hall, when there were present Bros. Colonel Creaton (in the chair), W. Stephens, Raynham Stewart, James Brett, L. Stean, John G. Stevens, F. Adlard, C. A. Cottebrune, Hyde Pullen, N. G. Philips, J. M. Case, S. Rawson, J. Newton, Jabez Hogg, C. F. Hogard, W. H. Main, and James Terry Secretary. After the reading and confirmation of the minutes, and the reception of the House Committee's Report, Bro. Colonel Creaton said that the Committee felt that a greenhouse was a necessity at the Institution. An estimate had been obtained, but he thought other estimates should be got for it. The brethren having authorised the obtaining of other estimates, Bro. Colonel Creaton reported that the gardener's lodge was progressing favourably, and the walls were ready to receive the framework for the roof. A cheque for £140 on account was ordered to be drawn for the builders, and directions were given for insuring the cottage, and for an estimate for a reinsurance of the Institution at Croydon to be obtained. Five petitioners were placed on the list, and a notice of motion given by Bro. Raynham Stewart concluded the proceedings.

HINTS TO HIS FAULTFINDERS.

By Bro. Jacob Norton.

It is very curious that—while our Masonic writers rarely trouble themselves to find fault with such contributions as, for instance, that the Henry VI. MS. is true; or that early in the fourteenth century ex-Knight Templars were Masonised in Scotland; or, as another maintained, that it was so done at York, besides other absurdities that appear occasionally in Masonic papers—if I happen to point out evidence that might clear Mrs. Dunckerley from the charge of adultery which her son imputed to her, or that the Christopher Wren Masonic stories by Anderson and Dermott are unreliable; or that our Cyclopædists are not infallible; our self-appointed "defenders of the faith" immediately become excited, and one after another come forth to protest, to apologise, or to find fault.

Now, I do not imagine myself infallible, and I have no objection whatever to be criticised, and if any one can show that my facts or inferences are wrong, I would cheerfully thank them for it. But it seems to me that my faultfinders (if the three criticisms above referred to were not written by one and the same person) find fault merely for the sake of discouraging investigation and inquiry. They seem to have committed themselves to some popular Masonic absurdities, and therefore fear that their turn may come next.

"When sheep are shorn, the lambs tremble."

The defender of Dunckerley has by no means satisfied me with his defence. It smacks very much like a sharp lawyer's one-sided plea. I must, however, defer saying any more about it at present, because I have, as yet, been unable to get the sixth volume of the Freemasons' Magazine to which he referred for his additional information. To the second faultfinder I have already replied last week, and to the apology of my third critic, that the two Aberdours in Bro. Woodford's Cyclopædia, was a mere "clerical error," and that it did not mislead any one except Bro. Norton, I shall say, in the first place, that it seems very improbable that Bro. Mackenzie and Bro. Woodford should have coincided in making the same clerical error in their respective Cyclopædias. And, secondly, I beg to assure my critic that others besides myself would have been misled by a statement supported by two Cyclopædias.

A Cyclopædia is only valuable when it is reliable, and when it is unreliable, it is a mere nuisance. Now, within a few years, three Masonic Cyclopædias have made their appearance, and if the general opinion of the Masonic press could be relied on, each of these Cyclopædias must be faultless. But on examining Dr. Mackey's Cyclopædia, I found so many errors, so many exploded statements, so many subjects irrelevant to Masonry, and so much Buncombe, that I can safely aver, that if these redundances had been left out, the bulk might have been reduced to a sixth of its size, or even less.

Bro. Mackenzie's book is less bulky, and contains consequently fewer errors. But, nevertheless, this author imitated Dr. Mackey's plan too closely, and therein he was wrong. A Cyclopædia of Agriculture should be confined exclusively to all subjects connected with farming. A farmer's daughter here and there may learn to play on the piano, but that is no reason why an article on music should be ingrafted into a farmer's Cyclopædia. A Cyclopædia of Masonry should in a like manner be confined to Masonic subjects: for instance, the articles in Bro. Mackenzie's Cyclopædia on the Talmud, Kabballa, the Baal, Shem (Dr. Falk), the legend about Christ, of the St. John's, Christians, &c. These articles may be very amusing and instructive, but they are as much out of place in a Masonic Dictionary as they would be in a dictionary of mathematics, music, or any other similar work.

Again, the Hebrew words in a Masonic Cyclopædia (and some of them faulty too) are merely put in there for Buncombe's sake. The "Aleph," says Bro. Mackenzie, possesses peculiar sanctity; it refers to the Trinity, and by distorting it, it may be made into a St. Andrew's Cross. Now, all this is mere twaddle; the Aleph is no more sanctified than the Beth. The inventor of that letter knew nothing about St. Andrew's Cross, nor had he the remotest notion about the Trinity. But suppose the inventor of the Aleph had really been a Trinitarian, what has the Hebrew Aleph or the Trinity to do with Masonry?

It is not my intention to write a regular review of Bro. Mackenzie's Cyclopædia, but before I part with the subject, I must call attention to a blunder of Dr. Mackey which is incorporated in the book before me. I mean the twenty-five so-called "Masonic landmarks."

I have had several controversies about "ancient landmarks" with English and American brethren, in the course of which I have shown that while Dr. James Anderson was really the greatest Masonic innovator, yet it was Dr. Anderson who Masonised the phrase "ancient landmarks." Halliwell's poem is minus of free born; it merely ordains, "ye no bondman prentice take." This no bondman law was imposed by Acts of Parliament, not upon Masons alone, but upon all trades. I have also proved that neither the Strasburg Constitution of 1459, nor the Turgo Constitution of 1462, contain any reference to "free born," or to "no bondman." Nay, even the sound limb law was not mentioned in the German Constitutions; but yet sound limb and free born are placed by our Cyclopædists—Mackey and Mackenzie—among the landmarks, or irrepealable Masonic laws.

Our American landmarkers bombastically compare Masonic laws to the laws of the Medes and Persians, both are alike irremovable. Well, the Pope also had irrepealable laws, and it is a well-known fact that the downfall of the Pope's power was mainly, if not entirely due, to his irrepealable laws. The downfall of the Medes and Persians was perhaps in a like manner due to their irremovable laws, and the same causes will help the downfall of any other society.

The Stuart Dynasty were also great landmark sticklers. "Divine right of Kings," and "our prerogative," were their ancient landmarks. The antiquity of those notions they traced to William the Conqueror, to King David, and to King Nimrod. No one disputed the antiquity of the said landmarks. But, nevertheless, John Bull kicked against them. They were not consistent, he said, with his own common sense. At last Mr. Bull became disgusted with the persistency of the landmark sticklers, and to get rid of them, he decapitated one King, and sent another, with his landmarks, on a tramp to France. Since that time "Divine right of Kings" ceased to be claimed by English Sovereigns, and "our prerogative" meant the right of the people to make, alter, or abolish any law or laws whenever they think proper to do so. Such being the case, irrepealable laws became an impossibility in England, because each Parliament is empowered to abolish the laws passed by all preceding Parliaments. "The prerogative of the people" is really and truly the landmark of landmarks, and it is older than other so-called landmarks. It was not created by legislation, because it is older than the oldest legislative code, and it cannot be destroyed by legislation. Brutal force of Kings or priests may for a time obscure it, but it—the prerogative of the people—is sure to re-establish its rights in spite of adverse legislation. If then the prerogative of the people is Nature's own indestructible and irremovable landmark, then the Masonic theory of irrepealable laws is both absurd and futile.

The fact is, "ancient landmarks," in the Masonic sense of the phrase, was invented in behalf of kingcraft and priestcraft. With such a phrase, all kind of oppression and superstition has been defended. When an old usage, creed, or law, is assailed, if there is any intrinsic merit in it, it will be defended on the ground of its merit. It is only when there is really no merit in an old usage, law, or creed, that its defenders resort to the plea of "ancient landmarks." Whenever, therefore, "ancient landmarks" is appealed to in a debate, we may be very sure that the landmark pleaders have neither reason nor justice on their side.

Of this fact Masonic history furnishes ample illustrations; thus, the exclusion in America of colored Masons from white Masons' Lodges, the exclusion in Prussia of Jews from Masonry, the retention of sectarianism in Masonic rituals, and the fanatical spirit evinced against the Grand Orient of France, were all defended on the plea of ancient landmarks.

But when we come seriously to reflect where the theory of "ancient landmarks" will lead us to, then its absurdity becomes so manifest that, I think, even Bro. Mackenzie will be compelled to laugh at it; thus, in plain language, "Remove not the ancient landmarks," simply means, that we must never try to become either wiser or better than our great, great grandfathers were, a thousand or more years ago.

In short, the phrase ancient landmarks is a delusion and a fraud, and the sooner we discard it from Masonic nomenclature the better will it be for Masonry.

Bro. Woodford's Cyclopædia is less bulky than either of the former, it is also minus of the landmark superstition, and it is free from Hebrew words, and if the author had omitted Latin, French, and German, the book would not have been less valuable; the work, however, is not free from faults, and the only chance we have of getting ultimately a good Masonic Cyclopædia is, for every one who discovers the shortcomings of our present Cyclopædians, or who can suggest any improvement for Masonic Cyclopædias to publish their ideas freely and fearlessly. We must never mind offending an editor, and we must discard the Masonic literary practice of "you tickle me, and I will tickle you." We need not, however, use harsher language than is absolutely necessary, nor should we refrain from giving due merit where it is due. But the mere fear of giving offence should never deter us from exposing errors or from concealing the truth. Such is my determination to deal with Masonic subjects, and such I hope it will continue to be as long as I can wield a pen, and as long as Masonic editors will publish my communications.

In conclusion, I beg to assure my faultfinders that I am very grateful to Bro. Woodford and to Bro. Kenning for many acts of civility and goodwill I receive from them. My private friendship to Bro. Woodford has, however, never deterred me from coming into conflict with him on Masonic subjects. If I recollect right, our first "friendly tilt," as Bro. Hughan calls it, was about Dunckerley. We have also differed about ancient landmarks, but we nevertheless remain good friends. With Bro. Mackenzie I have not the pleasure of being personally acquainted, but I am grateful to him for the notice he once took of a request of mine for information about a certain book, said to have been published by Ramsay, in Dublin, in 1737.* The above remarks, about his book (with a great deal of which I heartily agree) was certainly not due to any ill feeling on my part towards him. My faultfinders will, therefore, understand that my criticisms were prompted by no other motive than that expressed in the previous paragraph.

* The Ramsay book was sent to me by Bro. Carson, from Cincinnati, for inspection, and I am strongly persuaded that the said book was never printed (as its title page indicates) in Dublin. "Dublin" was probably put in to deceive the French police. The same book was subsequently printed in English at London. So says Kloss.

The Colony we Live in. Adelaide: Frearson and Brother, Printers and Publishers, King William-street. 1878.

THIS useful little pamphlet may best be described as a multum in parvo. It gives within the narrow compass of ten pages a considerable amount of valuable information, chiefly in the form of hints as to the class of people who are most needed in the colony, the measures most needful to increase its prosperity, and the anomalous fashions by which life in South Australia is distinguished. Having pointed out the qualifications indispensable for an efficient colonist, and having paid a well deserved tribute of praise to "the trusty yeomanry to whom the stability of her prosperity is confided," the pamphleteer goes on to note the class of immigrant which is most needed in S. Australia. He deprecates most strongly the far too common practice in the mother country of sending out young men of good families to make their way in an entirely new sphere, and he describes it as being as "unwise as it is cruel and selfish;" it often meets with the saddest results, and cannot be too strongly reprehended. He says they are "as ignorant of the requirements a life so utterly different from their early one calls for, as they are unfitted for it; away from all control of family and friends; no longer restrained by the wholesome fear of losing cast with the associates of their old sphere, they become discouraged, indifferent, careless, and too often drift into the dangerous loafing class, whence they rapidly sink to their ruin." All men, however, of this class do not turn out thus unsatisfactorily, and the writer acknowledges that many examples are not wanting "of men well bred, well educated, and gently nurtured coming out here to seek for a more promising field for endeavour than is offered to them in the old world, and who, joining at once the great brotherhood of workers, beat out, through countless vicissitudes, trials and privations, a path for themselves to honourable positions, and in time become a power in the land. In their successful battle with difficulties they have gained self-control, and consequent strength of character. In witnessing and sharing with the poor the hardships often so patiently endured by them, they have learned to sympathise more widely with their fellow-beings, and to help and support them in time of need. This is the class of men who, valuable everywhere, become priceless in the new world where so many elements of contention and discord exist—where so many and various are the interests to be reconciled—so many the claims to be adjusted! Would that our legislators were chosen from such patterns, and possessed the self-respect, calm judgment—dignity, the tact and forbearance of the true gentleman."

The subject of education, with a view to the mental development of the colonists, is mentioned, and regret is expressed at the want of liberality shown by the colony to the scholastic class. "It is a fact as grievous as it is anomalous that some of our school teachers are worse paid than upper servants. Can this be right? Is it wise or just? We are rich, we are prosperous, we need education; we wish for the best kind; why not pay the best price for it, and thus bring to our help first-rate talent and experience? What inducement under the present regime do we offer to young people to qualify themselves highly for the task of tuition? We are said to be a generous community; let us then be so to our good friends the school teachers, and in time we shall reap a rich reward." We fully endorse the remarks of the writer, but seeing the old country is shamefully indifferent to the adequate remuneration of teachers, male and female, we can hardly wonder at a young colony following in the same track. Here, in England, the average governess is oftentimes treated worse than a servant, for governesses are plentiful, and servants are not; it is not surprising, therefore, that the successful English colonist, more often than not a man of low degree, should look down with contempt on a common teacher.

In speaking of the drawbacks due to climate and other conditions, the writer points out how in many cases they might be greatly mitigated. For instance, he asks, "Why not take advantage of the experience, born of time, and gained by those who inhabit climates which approximate to ours, and avoiding exposure to the mid-day sun, turn some of its most oppressive hours into a time of rest or siesta?" A little further on he remarks, "To see a man walking about the streets of Adelaide in the white heat of its summer day, with thick, dark clothing on, must impress strangers with grave doubts of his sanity. Why not take an independent stand, and instead of following, sheep-like, the lead of others, even to our own detriment, initiate customs and fashions of our own?" The question is a most reasonable one, and the only excuse we can offer in behalf of the South Australians for not adopting a fashion of their own, and one suitable to the conditions of life as they are in that colony, is that most of them are English born, and prefer following in the footsteps of their fathers to obeying the instincts of common sense.

It will be gathered from the foregoing that this little pamphlet is what we described it at the outset, and as the price is only sixpence, those of our readers who are interested in matters colonial will do well to expend that modest sum in the purchase of a copy. It does not contain much that is new, but its advice is sound enough, and worthy to be followed by intending emigrants.

Under the Red Ensign. By Thomas Gray. London: Simpkin, Marshall and Co.; Kent and Co.; J. D. Potter; Wilson's (late Norie's); and Pewtress and Co., 15 Great Queen-street, W.C. 1878.

It is impossible to exaggerate the importance of a work of this kind to sailors, and those who may desire to go to sea, as well as to those who have relatives either at sea or about to place themselves under "The Red Ensign." Mr. Gray, from the official knowledge he has gained in the Board of Trade—the Government Department to which the guardianship of our Mercantile Marine interests is entrusted—speaks with an authority which can only be derived from his actual and practical experience of the subject. He is, in fact, the very man of all others whom a parent or guardian about to send a youngster to sea, or the youngster himself, should consult, and there is no better way of doing this than by purchasing this useful book. It tells him not only what he must do, and whom he should consult, but likewise what he must scrupulously avoid doing, and of whom he must under no circumstances seek counsel. The first and two following chapters are especially addressed to "Parents and Guardians," who are told plainly the kind of boy that should go to sea, and how they should treat those who evince an irrepressible desire to do so. They are also undeceived as to the dangers of a sea life, which Mr. Gray says, are "grossly exaggerated and misrepresented. Undoubtedly," he adds, "there are shipwrecks and sufferings at sea, but what portion of humanity is free from danger or exempt from suffering? A passenger ship is as safe as a passenger train. Miners are as liable to severe suffering as seamen; and, as a matter of danger, it is quite as, if not more, dangerous to attempt to cross the crowded thoroughfares in our cities and towns, than it is to go to sea in a foreign-going British ship." The principal dangers which beset the British merchant sailor are not those he experiences when following his profession, but are those he is liable to when ashore. These are fully described in Chapter VI. Chapter II. is entitled "What to avoid," and the post of infamy under this head is properly assigned "the Advertising Crimp." Mr. Gray's advice is to the point—"Before you enter into any arrangement with any one who advertises in the way I have described, cut out the advertisement and send it to the Board of Trade, and ask whether the advertiser is known, and whether he is licensed by the Board of Trade to supply seamen and apprentices to ships." The reason for this is also given. "Some of these men have been convicted more than once, and such of them as sail pretty close to the law are pretty well known at headquarters." The inquiry must be addressed to the "Assistant Secretary, Marine Department, Board of Trade, London," and will be answered forthwith. Then is quoted a most important section of an Act of Parliament, which we take leave to reproduce. "All superintendents of Mercantile Marine offices appointed under the Act" (these are public officers at public offices at every port), "shall, if applied to, give to any persons desirous of apprenticing boys to the sea service, and to masters and owners of ships requiring apprentices, such assistance as is in their power for facilitating the making of such apprenticeships, and may receive from the persons availing themselves of such assistance, such fees as may be determined by the Board of Trade." The fee is fixed at five shillings, so that for this modest sum the desired information can be had from the official headquarters—which is the best of all sources of information, and no one need trouble the crimp and incur the monstrous charges he is certain to make. Other sections are quoted, showing the penalties improper persons or those acting improperly render themselves liable to, so that any one who has reason to believe he has been victimised knows how to obtain a legal remedy against the person who has imposed upon him. Chapter III. tells the reader "What to Do," that is, where to go for information; whether a youngster should be apprenticed or sent to sea as a boy, what wages the different classes of sailors receive, and the cost and extent of an apprentice's outfit. In Chapter IV. the Merchant Service is described, and the reader is told "What sort of people the boy will meet in it, and how to treat them." This, and Chapters V., VI. and VII. are addressed to "The Boy." Chapter V. treats of "Wages," Chapter VI., a most important one, of "Rights, Duties, and Obligations," while Chapter VII. contains much sensible advice on the subject of "The Naval Reserve," showing how desirable it is that all sailors of good character who are attached to their calling should join and the advantages they will derive from so doing. So much for the Book or Pamphlet itself. But there are no fewer than fifteen Appendices, numbered A, B, C, &c., &c. Appendix A shows the comparative safety of the merchant service. Appendix B gives cases—the names only being omitted and "Blank Dash" substituted—of crimps who have been punished by fine or imprisonment. Appendix C contains "Forms of Indentures of Apprenticeship—England and Scotland;" and D the "Forms of Apprenticeship to the Sea Service." In E we have a list of training ships of all classes, while the other Appendices contain particulars respecting Wages, Food, Berthing and Accommodation, Examination for Certificates as Officers and Seamen, Rights of Seamen in regard to Seaworthiness of Ship, List of useful Books for a Boy, &c., &c. In short, Mr. Gray, in his "Under the Red Ensign," has provided a most useful compendium of valuable information, which will be of service both to parents and guardians, and to their sons or wards, as the case may be. He is, as we have said, one who is quite competent to write such a book, his official position enabling him to speak with certainty of whatever it is desirable should be known by the public. We thank Mr. Gray, accordingly, for the opportunity he has afforded us of making acquaintance with a work of such general usefulness.

In the "Model Lodge" men will come together as brethren in fact as well as in name. They make their Lodge the rallying point of mutual interests and affections. It is a sort of family, wherein each member feels that he has a rightful place and a relation of love to sustain with every other member. In the Lodge of this character, members do not have to go about asking to be introduced to each other, or wondering how it could have happened that some coarse-grained and objectionable person could have been admitted to the rights and privileges of the organisation. Theirs is a homogeneous body. All are acquainted and willing to recognise each other whenever and under whatever circumstances they may meet. No stranger can come within the gates of their Temple except by the hearty assent of their entire membership. They do not forget their pledges to help and stand by each other, but are faithful alike to the demands of a true friendship and a noble Masonic profession.—Freemasons' Repository.

CHARITY STEWARDS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Having established, as I hope, conclusively, not only the desirability, but the absolute necessity, of Anniversary Festivals as a means to an end, let me now address myself to the consideration of—

b. The expenditure of time and money by those who undertake the duties of Stewards.

On this your correspondent, "A Steward who has served once," remarks (in your number of 24th August): "My principal reason for not putting my name down as Steward is the same as many give in this district. It costs too much, both in time and money." Exactly the same grounds may be urged for withholding co-operation in any good work. Whatever is done is worth doing well, and no great object can be accomplished without the expenditure both of time and money. Leaving the outer world, is it—from a Masonic point of view—a "great object" to find means for the education and maintenance of the young and aged who by accident or misfortune need support? There is not a member of the Order who will fail to respond in the affirmative! Then, brethren must be found to organise themselves, and this cannot be done so successfully as by the formation of a Board of Stewards, whose first care is to furnish a fund from which shall be defrayed the entire expenses of the Festival, so that—unlike the majority of charitable institutions outside Freemasonry—the amount realised may be placed intact to the credit of the funds of the Institution. Not only is this so, but, as in the instance of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, for which I can speak with a knowledge of facts, a sum of £550 has been contributed in seventeen years from the surplus of the "Stewards' Fund."

Within the memory of many of us, when a Board of Stewards comprising forty or fifty representatives was looked upon as large or numerous, the responsibility of a Steward was, admittedly, heavy, involving not only his personal donation, of at least ten guineas (at that time regarded as a matter of course), but a contribution to the "Stewards' Fund" of from five to eight guineas, a substantial "expenditure of money," though perhaps that "of time" was not so serious as at present, owing to the comparatively limited area for exertion.

At the present day, when a Board of Stewards of from 150 to 200 is regarded with feelings of disappointment, the fee payable by each Steward for expenses does not exceed two guineas, and out of this small amount he receives twenty-six shillings in kind—Dinner Ticket and Badge—leaving sixteen shillings for other expenses.

But as it is the hope of reward that sweetens labour, let me recount the advantages now derived by a brother from his "expenditure of time and money" as a Steward, many of them not known to the Stewards of bygone years.

Every brother accepting the office of Steward is called upon to pay a fee—say two guineas—to "The Stewards' Fund," separate from the funds of the Institution; from which are defrayed the entire expenses of the Festival, such as printing, postage, music, &c.

For this fee, each Steward receives his Dinner Ticket, value 21s, and if he present a donation of ten guineas or upwards, one vote for life in addition to the votes to which he may become entitled by virtue of such donation.

A second Stewardship, accompanied by a similar donation, entitles a brother to two votes for life, in addition to those formerly possessed, and to those to which he may become entitled by virtue of his second donation.

Every Steward at the Anniversary Festival who shall procure donations or subscriptions to the extent of not less than fifty guineas in addition to his personal donation, shall receive one additional vote for life at each election, and, similarly, a further extra vote for every additional sum of not less than fifty guineas so collected and paid over.

In addition to these privileges, there is the following, conferred by the M.W.G.M. at the Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge on 4th June 1873, for the express behoof of Provincial brethren, some of whom had complained of "the expenditure of time and money" necessarily entailed upon them as contrasted with Metropolitan brethren:—"Every brother who shall serve the office of Steward at any Anniversary Festival of any one of the Masonic Charities, as the representative of some Provincial or Country Lodge, who shall personally attend such Festival, and shall bring up thereto contributions amounting to not less than one hundred guineas, shall have the same rights and privileges, as to wearing the Charity jewel or clasps, as if he had himself contributed the sum of ten guineas whilst serving such Stewardship." Here is a great boon, so far as the right to wear the much-coveted "Charity jewel" is concerned, though not giving voting power, and, in my opinion, somewhat marred by the compulsory "personal attendance."

It will thus be seen that the "expenditure of time and money" is rewarded by the acquisition of valuable rights and privileges, with honour and distinction, to say nothing of the gratification derived by every well regulated mind from the sense of duty done.

Having referred to Stewards of past years, I will now state that the experience of Festivals in recent years shows that Boards of Stewards now comprise three classes—

1. Those who pay the fee as Stewards, qualify as Life-Governors, Vice-Presidents, &c., in virtue of a personal donation, and collect nothing.

2. Those who pay the fee as Steward, make no personal donation, and collect amounts more or less considerable.

3. Those who pay the fee as Steward, qualify by a personal donation, and collect more or less largely. And, there are these, not sufficiently numerous to be classed, who pay the fee as Steward, and do nought beyond.

I forbear from comment on these different classes. I do not contrast class with class, because I concede most fully the right of independent individual action, and because I admit most gratefully that the aggregate benefits to our Institutions are worthy of all admiration, and that any critically comparative analysis would not only be ungraceful but censurable.

My only object in these letters—necessarily diffuse, exceedingly commonplace, but, I hope, not altogether unpractical—is to afford some material for a fair and full consideration from every point of view of all the points involved in the important question, "How can the interests of the Masonic Institutions be best maintained, and the present support increased? I am anxious to prove that the present machinery, in the shape of Festivals and Stewards, is the best that can be devised. I want to see the ranks of Stewards largely recruited from the brethren of wealth and influence who have held, and are holding, themselves aloof. I want to convince brethren who are doubtful or hesitating that "time and money" must be expended in labouring for those who cannot aid themselves, that such "expenditure" should not only not be grudged, but cheerfully undertaken by those who can legitimately incur it without detriment to themselves and their connections, if they are in any respect imbued with a proper sense and value of their initiatory obligations.

No one than myself is more intimately acquainted with the exacting and arduous duties devolving upon our Anniversary Stewards. I have served the office at six different Festivals—twice before, and four times since the tenancy of my present office—and have acted as Secretary of the Board of Stewards at Eighteen Anniversaries. Whatever sacrifice is involved is simply a sacrifice of self—a duty and a pleasure in the cause of the poor and distressed of the household of faith.

I refrain from doing more than alluding to the complaint of expenditure in connection with the personal attendance of a Steward at the Festival, because that is entirely optional, only given when convenient, or perhaps when a visit to the Metropolis may be looked upon as an agreeable change from the quiet monotony of country life. Still less can I consider the question of expense involved in the compliance with the desire of a wife to accompany her husband on his visit as Steward. To Masons especially, with the characteristic gallantry of the Order, the association on all possible occasions with those who, we are told, "share our troubles, and double our pleasures," must be productive of such unmixed gratification as to exclude the possibility of entertaining considerations of so sordid a nature.

In addition to the subject matter of my succeeding communication, I shall have to ask space for insertion of my views as to a more extended and comprehensive support to our Charities than they at present enjoy.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

FREDERICK BINCKES.

London, 9th September 1878.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am pleased to see by your last issue that Brother Fred. Binckes has taken this matter into consideration, and that he promises to give other of his ideas on the subject. I fully agree with him in his opening paragraph,—That any discussion is sure to be beneficial to the Charities. I had hoped to have given you my views on some of the questions raised, but, at present, I have not time to devote to the task. May I ask the favour of a portion of your space for a letter next week?

Yours fraternally,

INVESTMENT OF GRAND LODGE FUNDS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

12th September 1878.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—It affords me very great gratification—as I ventured to suggest the same alteration a few months ago—that our Grand Lodge has determined henceforth to invest its funds in the Bank of England, as is done by the Ecclesiastical and Charity Commissioners, so that proper security will be given against losses through contingencies; but whilst we may celebrate the song of mercy, we must also lament the solemn dirge of woe, in the recent mortality of so many distinguished Masons. The deaths of Bentley Shaw of Yorkshire, and Sir Frederick Williams of Cornwall, of John Sutcliffe of Lincolnshire, and of William Cowling of York, not to mention others, are very appalling. Their demise admonish us to set our house in order, for we too, that survive, must die and not live. Of William Cowling we may state, without fulsome flattery, that he was the Prince of Masons at York. By him I was raised to the sublime degree of a Master Mason, advanced into Mark Masonry, and exalted into the Companionship of the Royal Arch. I admired his lofty Masonic talents, always equal to any emergency, either as S.G.W., to give place to the Lord Mayor of York, in the Grand Lodge, or to perform any other of the lower and various offices of Masonry. Of him, it may be lamentably recorded, "multis ille bonis flebilis, occidit."

Yours truly and fraternally.

SCRUTINEERS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I should be wanting in moral courage and totally regardless of that confidence which arises from the possession of a clear conscience if, having noticed the letter of Bro. Biggs under the above heading in your impression of the 7th inst., I did not at once reply to it. Blanks are an abomination to me, and I always did, and hope always shall, object to the shield of anonymity.

Being absent from home, seeking a brief respite from "worry and care," I have not my papers to refer to. I can therefore only, at this moment, rely on my memory for such particulars as I think necessary in repudiation of Bro. Biggs' statement, which, not denied, stigmatises "Bro. ——, one of the Scrutineers," as having "committed a great breach of trust."

I am the Scrutineer referred to, and I distinctly state that the circumstances are not as Bro. Biggs represents. I cannot recollect the name of the candidate in whom I was interested on that occasion, seven years ago, nor of the "Bro. —— who was representing" the case. Of course, these particulars I can ascertain on my return home, but the delay would probably weaken my reply. I do, however, remember that what I really did was, to urge on the representative of the candidate in perhaps somewhat too forcible terms, and using a quotation very liable to misconstruction, but before I could possibly know how the voting was proceeding, and influenced only by the general opinions of other brethren before the Scrutineers were appointed, that he should not relax his efforts to obtain proxies. My note "from the Scrutineers' room" was in answer to one sent to me there by "the representative of C.," and was written either just before, or at the immediate commencement of the proceedings of the scrutiny. Bro. Biggs has no right to assume that the facts are otherwise than I then represented, and now repeat, and, because he blundered, to endeavour to throw the onus of his mismanagement on another person. Having, as he states, 1,179 votes for his candidate, it was his duty to have polled them, and not to have listened to any solicitations which the "representative of C." or any other person chose to make. His own acumen ought to have sufficed to tell him that with 1,179 votes in hand he must have had at least a very good chance of success. For myself, I never knew him, or of him, until after this unfortunate occurrence, and never authorised any transaction with him.

There were no "extraordinary means" adopted in respect of my presence at the General Committee Meeting of the Institution when Bro. Biggs subsequently petitioned. I was there in my own right, and probably had some inkling of Bro. Biggs' intention to represent his cause of complaint. Of course such knowledge would naturally rather have ensured my attendance than have kept me absent; but I don't remember that I was otherwise influenced in any way. There, in answer to Bro. Biggs' petition, I fully and effectually justified what I had really done, and proved to the fullest satisfaction of my brother Committeemen that in no way whatever had I violated my trust as a Scrutineer. It is therefore most wanton and ungenerous in Bro. Biggs to suggest the reverse.

From this untoward circumstance the following "morals" may be drawn:—

1st. Don't act as a Scrutineer of votes should you be in any way interested in a candidate for election. Having the purest intentions, any trifling anxiety on behalf of a case may be magnified into a "breach of confidence or trust."

2nd. Don't quote in haste, and don't use forcible expressions in quotation which might bear a different interpretation to that intended.

3rd. Don't believe in the generosity of a brother Mason to bury an unpleasant occurrence in oblivion, and don't be sure at any time that the ghost of a long-forgotten incident may not arise "after many days" to disturb the rest you may greatly require, and are earnestly seeking.

Should the "Representative of C." notice this correspondence, I hope he will add his testimony to the correctness of my version of the transaction so plausibly misrepresented by Bro. Biggs.

With fraternal regards, believe me, yours faithfully,

JAMES STEVENS, P.M., P.Z.

Bournemouth, 9th September 1878.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—It is impossible there could be a case showing more emphatically the importance of having an independent body of Scrutineers than that mentioned by Bro. Biggs in his letter of last week. For my own part, it strikes me that no one should be eligible as a Scrutineer who has the slightest interest in the return of any candidate. Thus no brother serving on a committee for promoting the success of any applicant, no one who has actively canvassed for any one, and no one who has any votes yet unpolled, should be chosen member of the Board of Scrutineers. It would be better, indeed, if the Scrutineers were non-voters altogether, as well as non-canvassers and non-members of Committees, for then it would be impossible they could exercise any influence in favour of this or that candidate. I do not imagine there would be any difficulty in finding the requisite number of brethren, so circumstanced, who would be quite willing to undertake the duty, but in the event of there being any, then, I say, let no one be elected who has not already recorded his vote or votes for the candidate of his choice. In such case no element of doubt or suspicion can enter into the return of the Scrutineer, whereas, if he still retains his vote or votes, he retains at the same time the means of turning the election at the last moment in favour of a particular candidate. We know the polling is very close at times, and that a single vote often makes all the difference between success and failure. By excluding the Committeemen and canvassers of the several candidates from election as Scrutineers, by forbidding Scrutineers from voting when once they have entered on their duties, and by cutting off all communication between the Scrutineers and the supporters of candidates, so that none but the Secretary and his clerks can possibly have access to the former, the Scrutiny would be above the smallest iota of suspicion, and nothing of the kind which Bro. Biggs described last week, or which has brought so heavy a punishment on a Past Grand Pursuivant, could possibly take place.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Fraternally yours,

T. P. B.

OFFICIAL VISITS BY PROV. G. MASTERS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The reports of proceedings at Lodge meetings which appear in your columns frequently contain comments on matters which, if they be received in a fraternal spirit, and attended to by those interested would doubtless lead to improvements. Occasionally, however, I consider you rather severe; as, for instance, when in your paper of 11th May last you accused our Deputy Prov. G. Master of neglecting his duty in not visiting the Lodges "under his care and guidance." A letter which appeared in a subsequent number I think put that matter in a better light, and I trust convinced you that Bro. Hughes is desirous for the welfare of his Province. I now ask,—Why have you passed without comment the passage in your report of the Royal York Lodge, inserted last week, referring to the visit thereto of the Provincial Grand Master of Sussex? The matter I here refer to is doubtless apparent, considering the tenor of my opening remarks, but the passage I specially direct your attention to is the following:—"the W.M. rose. He had great pleasure in giving what all must admit was the toast of the evening. He referred to the progress Masonry had made in the Province of Sussex since it had been under the rule of its present governor, and expressed his pleasure at being Master of the Royal York Lodge at the time the Provincial Master had honoured it with a visit. He thought that few of the Past Masters could boast of such an exceptional distinction, as it was twenty-five years since any Provincial Grand Master had been within its walls."

Now, Bro. Editor, I should like to know the state of Freemasonry in the Province of Sussex; if it is flourishing, it is very certain that its success has not arisen from the attention given to it by its Provincial Grand Master. At the present time, I believe, there are less than twenty Lodges in the Province, and if twenty-five years are allowed to elapse between the Prov. G.M.'s visits to a Lodge, one visit a year would suffice, and leave a few years "rest," even with the present number of Lodges; fifteen years ago there were about a dozen only. What is the opinion of the W.M. of Royal York Lodge as to the duty of a Provincial Grand Master? Does he consider he should occupy that important post merely in name, or did he politely condemn the action of his ruler when he gave the toast?

Yours fraternally,

NORTH WALES.

[We would remind our correspondent that the present Prov. Grand Master of Sussex has only held his appointment since March 1877, and that he cannot be expected to be responsible for the shortcomings of his predecessor.—ED. F.C.]

MASONIC MYSTERIES.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

4th September 1878.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I see no reason for rejecting either of the signs given by Bro. Norton in his paper which appeared last week in your journal. No. 1 answers the origin assigned to the sign by the Tatler, which I alluded to in a former letter, and which is given as follows in Old and New London: "The 'Mitre' was a celebrated music house in London House Yard, at the north-west end of St. Paul's. When it ceased to be a music house, the succeeding landlord, to ridicule its former destiny, chose for his sign a goose striking the bars of a gridiron with his foot—(the italics are mine)—in ridicule of the 'Swan and Harp,' a common sign for the early music houses." No 2 corresponds with the suggested "vernacular reading of the coat of arms of the Company of Musicians," which may have been suspended at the door of "The Mitre" when it was a music house, and is described in the same work as follows: "These arms are a swan with his wings expanded with a double tressure, counter, flory, argent. This double tressure may have suggested a gridiron to unsophisticated passers-by."

I find on reference to "Debrett" on Heraldry, that "the Tressure" in the Chapter is one of the Subordinate Ordinaries; that it is the diminutive of the "Orle"—another Subordinate Ordinary—which is described as "a border or frame within the shield," and of which it "is supposed to be half its breadth;" and that "it passes round the shield in the same form and shape as the escutcheon, and is generally borne double and fleurie." The "double Tressure, counter, flory, argent" might certainly be rendered by "unsophisticated" persons as a gridiron, and except that the goose in No. 2 has not got its wings expanded like the swan in the Musician's Coat of Arms, there seems no reason why the second sign should not be as genuine a goose and gridiron as the first.

Bro. Norton's paper has at least the merit of being very amusingly written, even if the mystery he indicates is not of the most mysterious character.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A series of articles, biographical, descriptive, and eulogistic, of some of the principal Masonic worthies of the day. They are well written, and though personal, by no means offensive, or intrusive into private life, and in Masonic society will be welcomed as an interesting series of word paintings of members of the Craft.—Standard.

"We do not remember to have read any similar series of sketches which surpass this in merit."—Land and Water.

"The book will be of great interest to Masons, containing as it does pen-and-ink sketches of the most distinguished men among them, and giving some considerable information on matters Masonic, from various points of view."—Lloyd's Newspaper.

"Admirably written, being free from what are too often observed in composition—inelegant language and prolixity."—Sunday Times.

"'J. G.' writes with a considerable amount of freedom, never hesitating to 'hit off' a weakness when he finds it publicly displayed by a 'distinguished brother;' at the same time he never loses sight of a good trait when it is displayed, either in connexion with the Craft or in the service of the public out of doors. The sketches are lively reading."—City Press.

"This is a neat book. The Portraits consist of a series of 'word pictures' of eminent English Masons. It styles Bro. W. J. Hughan 'Knight Errant,' and sketches thirty-two others under equally unique titles. We commend the book as worthy of a place in every Masonic library."—Voice of Masonry.

"Evinces much literary ability, and is a valuable addition to the few works we have in Masonic biography."—Philadelphia Keystone.

"The book ought to be in every well arranged Masonic Library."—New York Courier.

"We value the work, and heartily thank Bro. Morgan for our copy."—Masonic Jewel.

"The portraits consist of a series of what we call 'pen and ink sketches' of brethren prominent in all the noble undertakings of English Masonry. . . . Prominent among his brethren we find Bro. Fred. Binckes, ('Our Hercules,' whose herculean efforts in behalf of those blessed institutions, the charities of English Masons, have a world-wide reputation, which will live long after the zealous Craftsman has been, 'laid away to rest.'"—New York Square.

"The style of the author is pleasing, and the quality of his productions highly complimentay to his ability as a writer."—Masonic Advocate.

"They belong to a kind of writing which has come to be amongst the most popular reading of the day. . . . . The types are as general as they are graphic. The salient characteristics are seized with an easy power, and happily hit off in felicitous phrase."—Sheffield Post.

"Good sensibly written articles. The writer prefaces each of his sketches with some pithy common sense remarks."—Cashel Gazette.

"Cleverly and agreeably sketched, and the work altogether forms a valuable addition to Masonic literature."—Ryde News.

"Very amusing, and beyond doubt, faithful portraits of the worthies who unconsciously sat for them."—Deal, Walmer and Sandwich Mercury.

"The members of the Craft will take it as an acceptable addition to their biographical literature."—Monmouthshire Chronicle.

"They are written in a fair and genial tone, thoroughly Masonic."—Leigh Chronicle.

"Should have a very large sale."—Kingsbridge Gazette.

"These sketches are drawn with sparkling ability."—Bungfshire Reporter.

"We must sincerely congratulate the author on the success of his endeavour to aim at faithful portraiture, while there is an entire absence of what might give offence to the most sensitive mind."—Folkestone Express.

"A very acceptable contribution to the history of the Order. The volume has our warmest commendation."—Keles Courier.

"Drawn with no little humour, and embellished with many a deft stroke of good natured satire."—Figaro.

"The inquiring Brother who may wish to know something of the strength and beauty of the principles of Masonry, will find a pleasure in scanning the characteristic pictures in this book."—The Brighouse News.

"There is a poignancy in the ready off-hand dash that lends much zest to the subject, and bars it from studied rhetorical expression."—Hebrew Leader.

"There can be no doubt that the writer has produced a series of Portraits which will be a source of amusement and pleasure to Masons throughout the world."—Surrey Comet.

"Will be found very interesting and pleasant reading, especially to the Masonic world."—Barnet Press.

"Calculated to raise the Order—if that be possible—in the estimation of its members, if not of the outer world."—Trowbridge and North Wilts Advertiser.

"Written in a spirited, racy style, and conveying, in as clear a manner as possible, a 'counterfeit presentment' of some of the rulers of the Craft."—Essex Standard.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

THE Queen, who still remains at her Northern residence, has sent to Lord Sydney, the Lord Lieutenant of Kent, and to the Lord Mayor of London, messages of condolence and sympathy with the relatives of those who perished in the collision on the Thames between the "Princess Alice," and the "Bywell Castle." Her Majesty has graciously forwarded a subscription of 100 guineas toward the fund being raised on behalf of the sufferers. The Prince of Wales has also made a donation of fifty guineas to the same fund. H.R.H. during Doncaster race-week stayed with Mr. C. Sykes, M.P., at Brantingham Thorpe. H.R.H. The Princess of Wales left London on Monday, in company with the King and Queen of Denmark, for the Continent, while the two sons of their Royal Highnesses have resumed their studies on board the Britannia at Dartmouth.

The work of recovering the bodies from the wreck of the Princess Alice has been continuously persevered in during the week. Up to the present time the general opinion seems to be that over 600 persons, must have perished in consequence of the accident. The various inquests which have been opened are proceeding, but no very important or satisfactory evidence has been forthcoming. The Board of Trade have ordered an inquiry into the matter, and the first meeting with that object in view, is announced to take place on the 24th inst. This, it is understood, is to be followed by an official committee, whose duty it will be to consider whether any alteration is required in the rules which regulate the navigation of the Thames.

While the awful calamity of last week is fresh in the memory of the whole country, another fearful accident is recorded. On Wednesday an explosion occurred at the Abercarne Old Pit, near Newport, which resulted in the death of upwards of 280 persons. Soon after the explosion occurred a meeting was held to decide the best means to be adopted to extinguish the fire, which still raged. As it is impossible to stop the fire without first destroying the ventilation, this seems a very important matter, as, should by any chance there be any of those in the pit still alive, the latter course will result in their death; therefore, it is not without considerable anxiety the managers can discuss the matter, nor can any decision be arrived at, until ample assurance is arrived at that no life exists in the pit.

The fatal fire which recently occured at Birmingham has assumed a very unexpected phase. The owner of the house, a Mr. Dennison, has been arrested on suspicion of having wilfully murdered his wife, child, and two other persons, it being alleged that he maliciously set fire to the building.

The Austrian troops make but slow progress in occupying Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Mahomedan insurgents offering them in various districts an obstinate resistance. The insurgents wage something more than a mere guerilla warfare, being thoroughly organised, and apparently well provided with the means of prolonging the strife. The struggle finds sympathy beyond the borders of the occupied provinces, the gravest feature of the situation being the organisation of the "Albanian League," which the Porte is believed to be powerless to break up. The assassination of Mehemet Ali Pasha and his suite, near Jahova, by the infuriated Moslems, seems to indicate the impotence of the central Government to curb the fanaticism of its subjects. At Posavina the insurgents are reported to have 50,000 men, including 15,000 Turkish troops; and they hold several strongly fortified positions. The Austrians now have concentrated in the two provinces an army of 200,000 men, in order to crush all opposition; and it is said that General Szapary intends to bring his force up to 100,000 before recommencing offensive operations. The conquest of Novi-Bazar, it is stated, will be reserved for as spring campaign. General Zach has sustained a repulse before Behacs, a town defended by Turish regulars, who declare that they have received no orders from Constantinople to surrender, and that they will defend the place to the last extremity. General Sametz captured the citadel of Kljuc, in the Kraina, after several hours fighting. In Constantinople numerous arrests have been made, in consequence of an alleged Muradist conspiracy, and the murder of Ali Pasha has increased the disquietude of the capital. Nothing has been done by the Sultan in reference to the Austro-Turkish Convention, but it is understood that Safvet Pasha recommends the signature of that instrument. It is reported from Constantinople that Lord Salisbury has intimated to the Porte that England will probably not give her adhesion to the joint remonstrance which Germany proposes should be addressed to Turkey in regard to the tardy execution of the Treaty of Berlin, especially as to Greece and Montenegro. The Russians are now in the occupation of Batoum, and it is stated have asked Servia to keep her troops on a war footing till peace is definitely assured.

From America news reaches us that the yellow fever epidemic still rages in the Southern States. In many cases it is necessary to suspend all business operations, and as a consequence, large numbers of workmen are unemployed, and great distress prevails, in a creditable style. Bro. Moss was elected W.M. for the ensuing Tuesday. As the evenings are now closing in, the attendance of brethren is requested.

Strong Man Lodge of Instruction, No. 45.—Held its usual meeting on Monday the 9th inst., at the old Rodney's Head, No. 12 Old-street, Goswell-road. Present:—Bros. Pearcy W.M., J. A. Powell S.W., Wing J.W., Tolmie Preceptor, Feuner Secretary, W. Rowley S.D., H. Hallam sen. J.D., H. Hallam jun. I.G., also Bros. Byng, S. Hallam, &c. Lodge being opened, the minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. Byng gave proofs of his proficiency, and was entrusted. Lodge was advanced, and the ceremony of passing was rehearsed by the W.M. in his usual masterly manner, he being ably assisted by his Officers—who each performed his part in an excellent manner, thus rendering the Master's duty comparatively easy. Bro. Byng was the candidate. The W.M. worked the second, third, fourth, and fifth sections of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. Lodge was closed in the second degree, and then called off and on. Bro. Powell was unanimously elected W.M. for the ensuing week, after which Lodge was closed in due form and adjourned.

Vitruvian Lodge, No. 87.—The winter session of this Lodge was opened on Wednesday last, at the White Hart, College-street, Lambeth. The W.M. Bro. H. T. T. Ross presided, and was supported by a great number of the members. The first business before the Lodge was the raising of Bros. Evans, Bogg, Brown and Burlett, which ceremony was duly accomplished. The ballot was next taken for the admission of Mr. William Reynolds; it resulted in his unanimous election, and that gentleman was introduced, and formally initiated. A letter from Bro. Bond P.M., resigning his office as Treasurer, was read by the W.M., and a stormy discussion ensued; the W.M. apparently forgetting it was in his power to command silence. Eventually a brother was proposed as the future Treasurer, and unanimously elected. The retiring Treasurer however declined to hand over the monies he had in hand until the accounts were audited; five brethren were thereupon appointed to perform this task. Two sums of 10s each were voted for the relief of distressed brethren who had applied to the Master during the meeting, and other matters being disposed of, the Lodge was closed in due form.

Percy Lodge of Instruction, No. 198.—This Lodge held its weekly meeting on Saturday, the 7th of September, at the Jolly Farmers, Southgate-road, Islington. Present—Bros. I. P. Cohen W.M., J. Lorkin S.W., J. A. Powell J.W., Killick Sec., Halford Treas., T. Goode S.D., Garrod J.D., Byng I.G., R. Pearcy Preceptor. This was the first meeting of the Lodge after the recess, and the numerous attendance augurs well for the coming session. The preliminaries of opening, &c., having been attended to, the ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, and several sections of the first lecture were worked. Bro. J. Lorkin will preside next Saturday.

Ancient Ebor Preceptory of Knights Templar, No. 101.—The regular quarterly meeting of this Preceptory was held on Tuesday evening. Amongst those present were Sir Knights the Rev. W. Valentine E.P., T. Cooper P.E.P., W. Lawton P.E.P., T. B. Whytehead P.E.P., J. S. Cumberland, T. B. Priestick, P. H. Rowland, G. Simpson, G. H. Simpson, J. Ward, &c. The Right Hon. the Lord Mayor of York (Comp. Wm. Varey, of the Zetland Chapter 286) was a candidate for installation, and the ceremonies were worked by the E.P. and Officers. The members of the Mary Commandery Pilgrimage, who visited York from Philadelphia in July, and were entertained by the Ancient Ebor Preceptory on that occasion, were elected honorary members, as was also E. Sir Knight J. W. Woodall P.E.P., of the Geoffrey de Bouillon Preceptory, Scarborough, and P.G. Constable for North and East Yorkshire.

Tyrian Lodge, No. 253, Derby.—A meeting was held on 28th August, at the Derbyshire Masonic Hall. Present—Bros. A. G. Taylor W.M., E. R. Ward S.W., W. C. Watson J.W., F. J. Robinson Sec., W. Holden Tyler. Visitor—Bro. J. O Manton Sec. 1085, The Lodge was opened at 7.45 p.m. After the reading of the circular and minutes, Bro. Ward S.W. was elected W.M. for the ensuing year, and Bro. Naylor re-elected Treasurer. The Lodge was then advanced, and Bro. Beatson raised to the rank of a M.M., in the course of which ceremony he gave involuntary evidence of its impressive character. The Lodge was closed at 9 p.m., and the brethren adjourned to refreshment, when the usual toasts were duly honoured. The W.M. elect, when called upon, expressed his intention to endeavour to uphold the prestige of the Lodge. The retiring Master bore testimony to the support given him by his officers and brethren generally; the S.D. of the evening, in his character of Prov. J.G.W., responded to the Prov. Grand Officers' toast, and the Visitor made a passing allusion to the newly raised brother's display of feeling, showing that the impression caused was in contradistinction to what the impression would have been if his manner had been inattentive; and, finally, the Initiate expressed himself as very anxious to adhere to the great principles of Freemasonry, and thus prove that the favours he had received had not been undeservedly bestowed. It should also be stated that there was a very interesting discussion relative to the origin of Freemasonry, and its identity with Jewish and other customs, Bro. P.M. Hall, Bro. Davis and Bro. Manton contributing some very interesting facts.

Joel was then initiated into our Order in a most impressive manner by the W.M., and Bro. Boegienne was passed to the F.C. degree, both ceremonies being most perfectly worked. The Lodge was then closed down, and routine business being disposed of, the W.M. in a few well chosen remarks asked the brethren to accept at his hands a finely executed group of the Officers of the present year. The picture, which is the work of Bro. H. S. Mendelshon of this town, is a rare production of art, and the portraits are all very faithful likenesses, and form a very pretty feature in the Lodge Hall. On the motion of Bro. Monday P.M., seconded by Bro. Ridsdale P.M., a vote of thanks, which was carried by acclamation, was passed to the W.M. for his very handsome presentation, which would always be looked on with pleasure by every member of the Lodge. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. The usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were honoured; the health of the Master, the P.M.'s, the visitors and the initiate all received due attention, and some capital harmony rendered the evening very enjoyable. The visitors were Bros. J. Cook P.M. 481, J. Wood S.W. 48, J. Goss S.D. 481, and A. Joel 481.

The hall is at present in the hands of painters and decorators, which precluded the working of the fourth degree and damped the ardour of the brethren in the matter of the Loyal toasts.

Southern Star Lodge, No. 1158.—This Lodge held a regular meeting on Tuesday, the 10th September, at the Surrey Masonic Hall, Camberwell New-road. Present—Bros. W. Allan W.M., Smith S.W., R. Harris J.W., T. Pulsford P.M. Sec., A. Wright P.M. Treas., Stewart S.D., R. Fortune J.D., Wilks W.S., Holloway I.G., Stead Tyler. P.M.'s Bros. Walters, Wise, &c. The Lodge was opened, and the minutes of last regular Lodge meeting and Lodge of emergency were read and confirmed. Bros. Lyon, Bertolle, Clarke, and Beecroft were raised to the sublime degree, and Bro. Davies was passed. After routine business, Lodge was closed, and the brethren partook of light refreshments.

Perfect Ashlar Lodge, No. 1178.—This Lodge held its election meeting on Thursday, the 5th September, at the Bridge House Hotel, Southwark. Present—Bros. Frederick Garbett W.M., Joseph Stock S.W., Simpson J.W., F. Walters P.P.G.D. Middlesex P.M. Sec., Ebsworth Treas., Bell S.D., Quincey J.D., Chaloner I.G., Laing Tyler. Past Masters Bros. Ebsworth, Dakin, Lover, &c. Visitors—Bros. P. Brown 156, W. Cook P.G.S. 1580, Hyland 1580, Beck W.M. 1687, R. Buck W.M. 1196, &c. The Lodge was opened, and after the minutes had been read and confirmed, Bros. E. Chittenden and G. J. Wainwright were raised to the sublime degree. There were two aspirants for the second degree—Bros. J. W. Walker and Wheeler—and both were advanced a step. A sum of five guineas was voted from the Lodge Funds for a Past Master's jewel to the outgoing W.M., Bro. Frederick Garbett. After the bye-laws had been read, the brethren proceeded to the election of a Master for the ensuing twelvemonths, and this resulted in the S.W., Bro. Joseph Stock, being selected for that honourable post. We congratulate our worthy brother, as, for some inexplicable reason, for the last five years the brethren of this Lodge have—so we are told—favoured the Junior instead of the Senior Wardens with their suffrages on election nights. Bro. P.M. Ebsworth was re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. W. Y. Laing P.M. Tyler. A notice of motion that £10 10s be voted from Lodge funds for the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, to be placed on the list of the W.M. elect, was handed in. Twenty guineas having been voted from Lodge funds in aid of a distressed brother, who had done good service to the Lodge, and routine business transacted, the meeting was closed.

Upton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1227.—At Bro. Bolton's, King and Queen, Norton Folgate, on Friday, the 6th instant. Bros. Hine W.M., Pede S.W., Crouch J.W., Fenner Preceptor, Townsend Sec., Richmond I.G., Bolton, &c. All formalities having been duly observed, the ceremony of initiation was rehearsed by the W.M. in a manner which showed the diligence he had used in studying the ritual. He was assisted by an efficient staff of officers, Bro. Bolton acting as candidate. Bro. Fenner worked the first four sections of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. Bro. Peile was appointed W.M. for the ensuing week, after which Lodge was closed, and adjourned until Thursday, at eight p.m. All future meetings of this Lodge of Instruction will be held on Thursdays. Members are requested to note the change of the night of meeting.

On Thursday, the 12th inst. Bro. Peall W.M., Richmond S.W., Moss J.W., Fenner Preceptor, Townsend Sec., Kent S.D., R. W. Pearcy J.D., Gieseke I.G.; also Bros. Hine, Bolton, &c. The W.M. rehearsed the ceremony of passing, Bro. Bolton candidate. Bro. Fenner worked the first section of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. Lodge was closed down. The ceremony of initiation was rehearsed by the W.M. who was ably assisted in both ceremonies by his Officers. Bro. Richmond was elected W.M. for next Thursday. A vote of thanks was accorded the W.M. for the manner he had performed his duties. After Lodge was closed, the brethren made a subscription for the relief of the sufferers by the calamity which befel the Princess Alice. Bro. Fenner was requested to forward the amount to the Mansion House Relief Fund. We hope this example will be followed by other Lodges of Instruction.

Eboracum Lodge, No. 1611.—On Monday, the 9th inst., the regular monthly meeting of this Lodge was held at the Queen's Hotel, Micklegate, York, the W.M. Bro. T. B. Whytehead occupying the chair, and there being present in addition Bros. T. Cooper I.P.M., J. S. Cumberland S.W., Jas. Kay as J.W., T. Humphries Assist. Sec., T. D. Smith S.D., A. T. B. Turner J.D., G. H. Simpson as Org., M. Millington I.G., R. Ware, Lackenby, Husband, Tom Smith, Blackstone, Wilkinson, Churchill, &c. A ballot was taken for a candidate, which proved successful, and subsequently for a joining member—Bro. R. W. Hollon P.M. 236 and P.G.D.C. Eng.—which also proved successful. Mr. W. G. Girling, who had been elected at the previous meeting, was then initiated by the W.M., and Bro. the Rev. R. P. T. Tennent was raised to the third degree. Bro. A. T. B. Turner presented to the Lodge copies of Abiman Rezon (7th Edition), and Finch's Masonic Key (2nd Edition), and the W.M. on behalf of Bro. T. W. Wilson, York Lodge 236, presented a rare engraved portrait of Bro. Francis Drake, G.M. of the Grand Lodge of all England at its Revival at York in 1761. The W.M. said the portrait of Bro. Drake had a special interest for them, possessing as they did the identical Bible, with an inscription to testify the fact, which lay on Bro. Drake's pedestal. Hearty votes of thanks were passed to Bros. Turner and Wilson for their gifts. The W.M. reminded the brethren of the Masonic event that was to take place at Scarborough on the following Thursday, and said he hoped to be accompanied by as many brethren as possible. Two life subscriberships in the Masonic Boys' School were balloted for, and drawn respectively by Bros. T. Cooper P.M. and J. Keswick, and the Lodge was closed in solemn form, a very pleasant evening being subsequently spent by the brethren.

SUBSTANCE OF ADDRESS BY REV. F. GOULD.

IT gives me great pleasure to be present at the consecration of this Lodge, but I must apologise for the inaccuracies that may be noticed in the remarks I am about to make, for I am but young in Masonic experience. Still the interest I have from the first felt in Masonry having increased continually, and with it the desire to investigate the origin and progress of the Craft, perhaps a few thoughts on the subject may not be unacceptable.

The history of Masonry is, I think, generally believed to begin with the erection of Solomon's Temple, and no doubt a great deal was substantially arranged at that period. My own thoughts, however, point to a much earlier date for its origin, namely, the time of the erection of what is usually called the "Great" Pyramid in Egypt. The researches of Piazzi Smith have led to the general conviction that this vast pile was put together with an object far higher than that it should be the receptacle of the remains of an Egyptian monarch. Indeed, the Egyptian mind would probably have never conceived such a project. The other Pyramids, built as monuments, were merely copies (very inferior ones) of the Great Pyramid, and they gradually diminished in size, so that the modern are the smallest.

It would be impossible to point out all the peculiarities of this wonderful structure which give to it its peculiar significance; but, to mention a few: Its peculiar position, on the "utmost bound of the everlasting hills," is so literally true that a deep fissure in the rock on the very edge had been carefully filled up with solid masonry so as to place it in the exact spot required. The angle of the descending passage had reference to the peculiar astronomical position of the heavens, and from this datum has been gathered the exact date of its erection. It was in existence before Moses became learned in all the wisdom of Egypt; before Jacob came down to Egypt. When Abraham visited the country this wonderful structure was even then hundreds of years old. Then its measurements outside and in—position with regard to the north. The proportion which its perpendicular axis bears to the sides, and the proportion which the area of its vertical section bears to the area of the base. Such, and a multitude of similar measurements are proof of a wonderful design on the part of the builder—a design far beyond the conception of the people of the land. It was doubtless the work of strangers. Then again the measurements of the passages, chambers and niche, and the coffer, the internal measure of which equals the calculated capacity of the ark of the covenant, are full of significance. The number 5 and its multiples occur over and over again, and the strangest discovery of all is, the almost complete identity of our English inch, acre, wine pint and gallon, quarter and chaldron, with the measurements here ascertained. Should the theory that the English are descended from the lost tribes of Israel ever receive corroboration, this identity of measurements may have its part in the work of proof, and may explain why Masonry has been so well kept up among the English.

That the erection of such a structure, with such evidences of design, by strangers, should have necessitated the formation of a guild among the builders, and the inculcation of the principles of true morality by which they might be kept pure from the false morality of the people among whom they dwelt, appears very probable, and if so we have here a true Masonic body—Operative and Speculative.

It would appear probable that a similar body would be formed at the building of the Temple, and other large edifices, by Solomon, for this monarch was remarkable for carrying out his great designs with method and order; and, moreover, as from the age of Solomon magnificent structures were being continually raised—e.g., in Greece, Asia Minor, and subsequently in Rome—the Masonic guilds would become permanent bodies.

On the general introduction of Christianity a great impetus was given to the building and adornment of large Cathedrals throughout Europe. The continuance of Masonic Guilds would follow as a natural consequence. Connected with these there would be Lodges of Instruction, in which the sciences, such as Geometry and Architecture, would be taught, while the instruction in morality would naturally be illustrated by the tools which were in use among the workmen. Masons need not be reminded of the lessons that would have been taught and illustrated by the rule, square, level, compass, chisel, gavel, &c. So important are these lessons of morality, and so apt the illustrations, that though the Guilds have ceased as regards operative Masonry, yet the higher purposes have been secured by Masonic Guilds to the present day. How much then is to be learned by Masonry! and how important that we should, by regular attendance, secure for ourselves the continual repetition of these valuable lessons. The true way to recommend Masonry is to regard its ritual not as a dead letter, but as involving great principles of action. An Israelite with his ceremonial might lose sight of the meaning, and so lose all the benefit intended by it. So may it not be with Masons.

In conclusion then, I would urge on the brethren who are members of this new Lodge of S. George to recommend Masonry, by endeavouring to act up to the noble principles that are by it taught. You are at present few in number: those outside will narrowly watch your conduct. Remember, then, that a good Mason must be a good man.

NEWTON, AUCKLAND.

THE Consecration of the Eden Lodge, No. 1530 (E.C.), took place on 17th July at the Rising Sun Hotel, Newton, Auckland. There was a large attendance, and amongst those present were Bros. G. S. Graham D.G.M., E. T. Wildman D.D.G.M., and the following Grand Lodge Officers:—Rev. C. M. Nelson D.G. Chaplain, C. F. Goldsbro' D.G. Treasurer, H. G. Wade D.G. Secretary, E. Willcocks D.G.D.C., Dawson D.G.A.D.C., Hesketh Organist, Rattray Pursuivant. The Masters and Officers of most of the other Lodges in the district were also present, as well as many Visitors. The District Grand Master presided, and the Lodge was consecrated in accordance with ancient custom. The following officers were installed:—Bros. J. Warren W.M., D. Chapman S.W., J. Carlaw J.W., W. J. Suiter Treasurer, W. Johnson Secretary, E. W. Morrison and J. Moore Deacons, T. Walker I.G., C. Westmoreland Tyler, and Thos. Barnett Steward. At the conclusion of the ceremonial, which was carried out with the usual solemnities, the Lodge was called off. A banquet was subsequently held, at which the customary toasts were proposed. Great praise was attributed to Captain Mann, of the Rising Sun Hotel, for the excellent arrangements made and the superb spread provided.

The Quarterly Communication of the Masonic Provincial Grand Lodge of New Zealand, North Island, Scottish Constitution, was held on the 18th of July at the Masonic Hotel, Princes-street. There were present Bros. F. Whitaker P.G.M. who presided, W. Anderson P.G.S.M., W. McCullough P.D.P.G.M., A. Brodie P.G.S.W., A. Dewar P.G.J.W., W. Errington P.G. Architect, E. K. Tyler P.G. Secretary, T. L. Murray P.G. Treasurer, Captain Fraser P.G. Director of Ceremonies, Captain Goldsmith P.G. Sword-bearer, Ellison P.G.J.D., Walker W.M. St. Andrew's, and a number of other visitors and representatives of the various Lodges and Constitutions. The principal business of the meeting was to receive the report of the committee appointed to draft and prepare by-laws for the Provincial Grand Lodge. These, after the minutes were read, were adopted, after some emendations. Bro. the Rev. J. Hill having resigned his position of P.G. Chaplain, on account of his removal to the South Island, the P. Grand Master announced that he had appointed Bro. the Rev. Mr. Gould, of Otahuhu, to that office. A number of routine matters were discussed, and the meeting was brought to a close in the usual form.

The Masonic banquet at the Thames, given by the brethren of the Sir Walter Scott Lodge on 1st July to the Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Whitaker, was a very successful affair. The W.M. of the Lodge, Bro. T. L. Murray, presided. In responding to the toast of his health, Bro. Whitaker said: Being there, reminded him of the time when he was first affiliated to Scotch Masonry, and he looked upon the Sir Walter Scott Lodge as the very foundation of their Provincial Grand Lodge. He had first started on his Masonic career in England, then he joined an Irish Lodge, and at last found himself landed in Scotland, and was so well satisfied that he had no disposition to leave it, least of all for the Colonial Lodge of which he had spoken in New South Wales. This occasion, he believed, was the first in which they had had an official inspection from a P.G.M. The Scotch Constitution provided for an annual visit, and he was determined, if possible, to visit every Lodge in the district. He was much obliged to Bro. Murray for the way in which he had proposed his health, and to the brethren for the hearty response given.

HOLLOWAY PILLS.—Cure for Indigestion—Indigestion, with torpidity of the liver, is the curse of thousands, who spend each day with accumulated sufferings, all of which may be avoided by taking Holloway's Pills according to their accompanying directions. They strengthen and invigorate every organ subservient to digestion. Their action is purifying, healing and strengthening. They may be safely taken without interfering with ordinary pursuits, or requiring much restriction in diet. They quickly remove noise and giddiness in the head, and dispel low spirits and nervous fears. These balsamic Pills work the cure without debilitating or exhausting the system; on the contrary, they conserve and support the vital principle by substituting pure for impure blood.

THE PRIMITIVE FREEMASONRY OF THE ANCIENTS

From the CORNER STONE.

THE general diffusion of Masonic literature throughout the world, but especially in the United States, has now made almost every Mason acquainted with the theory that has been insisted upon—that the principles of Freemasonry—that is to say, the doctrine of Speculative Masonry—existed in the earliest ages of the world, and were believed and practised by a primitive people, or priesthood, under the name of the Pure or Primitive Freemasonry of the antediluvians; that this Freemasonry was, at length, after the Flood, corrupted as to the truths it taught, and then went under the name of Spurious Freemasonry, but that a choice few preserved the primitive doctrines, and handed them down to the present day, where they exist under the form of Speculative Masonry.

These doctrines are not now denied by any one who has carefully studied the Masonic system, although many differ in relation to some of the details of the theory advanced. This theory does not belong exclusively to any Masonic writer. It was promulgated at the middle of the last century by the celebrated Chevalier Ramsay, the author of the "Travels of Cyrus," and the founder of a very philosophical system of Masonry. In a work published by him in 1751, entitled "The Philosophical Principles of Natural and Revealed Religion, unfolded in a Geometrical Order," he has briefly but distinctly advanced this theory, and it is given here to the readers of the Corner Stone—first, because the work is very scarce in this country, but principally because it contains a most succinct and satisfactory evidence, as well as history of the origin and progress of the science of Freemasonry.

The Chevalier, writing a work for general perusal, has said nothing in it of Masonry by name; but, as the course of his studies and the labors of his life identified him with the institution, it is apparent that, under the name of ancient religion, he was thinking of his favorite science. The reader has only to substitute in the paragraphs about to be quoted the word "Masonry" for "religion," and in a few lines he will be put in possession of the whole theory on the subject, as it has been more elaborately worked out by Hutchinson in his "Spirit of Masonry," and other Masonic writers.

Ramsay propounds his theory as follows:

1. Adam, Noah, and all the other antediluvian and post-diluvian patriarchs knew the great principles of natural and revealed religion, and, therefore, could and should have taken all possible means to transmit this saving knowledge to their posterity.

2. It would have been unbecoming the prudence and sanctity of these holy patriarchs not to have chosen some surer method for transmitting these sacred truths than by tradition, which is much more subject to falsification than written tradition.

3. The most ancient, the most expressive, and the most palpable way of writing was not by arbitrary names and alphabetical letters, but by symbolical gravings, which represented intellectual ideas by corporeal images; and this way of writing was particularly consecrated to the use and transmission of Divine things to posterity, as the word hieroglyphic (sacred writing) indicates.

4. According as the world increased, and was peopled after the deluge, the sons and grandchildren of Noah copied and carried these sacred symbols of religion (or Primitive Freemasonry) to the different places of the earth which they went to inhabit with their families; thus these symbolical characters were transported from country to country, over all the face of the terrestrial globe; and for this reason it is that the symbols, images, idols, statues, representations, traditions, fables and mythologies about the gods, goddesses, and religion are much the same in all nations.

5. By succession of time, the true original sense of the sacred symbols and hieroglyphics was forgotten. Men attached themselves to the letter and the signs without understanding the spirit and thing signified, and this fell by degrees into the grossest idolatry and wildest superstition. They explained the sacred symbols according to their fancy, and so turned all the ancient traditions into fables, fictions, and mythologies, where, though the circumstances were different yet the fund was the same.

6. Notwithstanding these degradations, adulterations, and misrepresentations of the original symbols and traditions, there still remain some hints, rays and vestiges of Divine truths in the mythologies and religions of all nations, from East to West, from North to South, in Asia, Europe, Africa and America. (And these vestiges constituted the Spurious Freemasonry of Antiquity). After reading these succinct remarks, the Masonic student desiring to attain a full knowledge of so important a subject will doubtless seek other works to complete his knowledge of the antiquities of Freemasonry, or Theocratic Philosophy.

Freemason's Chronicle;

SANCTIONED BY THE GRAND LODGE OF ENGLAND.

VOL. VIII.—No. 195. SATURDAY, 21st SEPTEMBER 1878. [PRICE THREEPENCE. Registered at the G.P.O. as a Newspaper.

VISITORS: THEIR RIGHTS AND PRIVILEGES.

IT will be seen from a report we publish elsewhere in our columns of the meeting, on the 6th August, of the Lodge of Goodwill, No. 711, Port Elizabeth, Cape of Good Hope, that a question was raised respecting the presence of a visiting brother, who had given proof of his worthiness to be admitted, during the ceremony of opening the Lodge and the reading and confirmation of the minutes of the previous meeting. The brother about whose right the question was raised was none other than our worthy friend Bro. Constable, whom we take this early opportunity of congratulating on his return home. Why any objection should have been taken to his being present during what are, after all, merely formal preliminaries is an enigma we shall not attempt the solution of, nor will it be in our power to suggest a reason for the Master's readiness to waive his objection to Bro. Constable's presence if the latter had resolved on standing on his rights and insisting on his admission. It is one of those cases which can only be dealt with on general principles, and all we propose doing is briefly to state the circumstances as explained to us by Bro. Constable himself, and then to offer a few remarks as to what, in our humble judgment, is the course which a Lodge should pursue when a strange brother presents himself at the doors and requests to be admitted within its precincts. The facts are as follow:—Bro. Constable presented himself at the hour appointed for the meeting of the Lodge. He was properly introduced, and having proved himself to the satisfaction of the W. Master, and assumed his clothing, he entered the Lodge, and then awaited its opening. However, the Master went and requested Bro. Constable would retire till he had opened the Lodge and the minutes awaiting confirmation had been confirmed, the reason he assigned for this unusual request being that it was not their custom to permit strange brethren to be present during these preliminaries. Bro. Constable did as requested, took off his apron, and resolved not to claim admission. Bro. Brister, the Treasurer, then went out, and said that if Bro. Constable insisted upon being present as a right, the Master would allow his presence, but Bro. Constable does not seem to have been pleased by this relaxation in his favour, and went home. The matter was discussed during the slight repast which followed the Lodge business, and many brethren objected to the action of the Master, and applauded Bro. Constable for having stood up for his constitutional rights, it appearing that this is the second instance in which a visiting brother had retired or been called upon to retire from the same cause.

The laws laid down in the Constitutions on the subject of Visitors are clear enough, "No visitor shall be admitted into a lodge unless he be personally known, recommended, or well vouched for, after due examination by one of the present brethren; and during his continuance in the lodge he must be subject to the by-laws of the lodge. The master of the lodge is bound to enforce these regulations." In this there is nothing which in any way warrants the exclusion of a visitor during any part of the time the Lodge is met together, nor is there anything in the two sections which follow, and which regulate the exclusion of visitors, on which the Master of Goodwill could rely as a justification for requesting Bro. Constable to retire while the Lodge was opened and the minutes confirmed. They enact that visitors of known bad character may be refused admission, and that brethren who are not subscribing members to a Lodge may not visit a Lodge in the town or place where he resides "more than once" during the period of their "secession from the craft." Beyond a few words at p 19 as to visitors to Grand Lodge, and a prohibition at p 79 against the reception as visitors of brethren "concerned in making masons clandestinely, or at a lodge which is not a regular lodge, or for small and unworthy considerations, or who may assist in forming a new lodge without the grand master's authority." There is nothing in the Constitutions beyond what we have already quoted or described, and it is certain that these contain no justification whatever for the conduct pursued in this particular instance. Going further, and consulting well-known authorities on Masonic law, we shall find, similarly, no exclusion of the kind practised in Lodge of Goodwill is mentioned, there being, however, one case in which the enforced retirement of visitors is deemed proper. Oliver, having first of all discussed the general regulations already referred to, the restrictions on visiting, and the examination of visitors, goes on to speak of the "Privileges of Visitors," and he cites in evidence a report from the Board of General Purposes during the year 1819, in which, as he considers, the true rights of a visitor are defined. A Lodge in London refused to admit some brethren, who were well known to them, on the ground that "as the Lodge was about to initiate a candidate, no visitors could be admitted till that ceremony was ended." Complaint was made, and the several parties attended the Board, when it appeared that "the Officers of the Lodge against which the complaint was laid had acted under an erroneous opinion of the general laws, and not from any intention to infringe them, or to offend against the established customs of the Craft; and they assured the Board of their anxiety, at all times, to conform themselves to every regulation of the Grand Lodge, and that they should not again fall into a similar error." Thereupon the Board passed a resolution to the effect that "it is the undoubted right of every Mason, who is well known or properly vouched for, to visit any Lodge during the time it is open for Masonic general business, observing the proper forms to be attended to on such occasions, so that the Master may not be interrupted in the performance of his duty." In spite of this, however, says Dr. Oliver, there are Lodges which do "refuse admission to visitors when practising the ceremonies of any of the degrees, although such exclusion is undoubtedly illegal." The writer then goes on to describe how a late Grand Master, when the subject was brought under his notice, declared "that a Mason's Lodge is a Mason's church; and that no qualified brother could be legally refused admittance under any circumstances." Later we come to a paragraph specially treating of "the Exclusion of Visitors," and from this we extract the following passage:—"When any business of a private nature, such as a discussion on the state of the funds, or any other topic which cannot be interesting to a stranger, occupies the attention of the brethren, due notice having been given to every member, it would be indelicate to invite visitors to be present, as the financial affairs of the Lodge might be in such a state of disarrangement and confusion as it would be undesirable to communicate to any who were not members, and who, consequently, could feel no interest in the proceedings. And, therefore, in some Lodges the bye-laws are imperative on this point, and direct that no subject of local importance to the Lodge ought to be discussed in the presence of visitors. When, therefore, such discussions are unavoidable, visitors may be courteously requested to withdraw." No objection can be taken to this exposition. No brother having the slightest claim to be considered a gentleman would be desirous of prying into the secrets or inner history of the Lodge he was visiting; and our knowledge of Bro. Constable justifies us in stating that, had he been invited to retire during the discussion of matters of a private nature, and concerning only the members of the Lodge, he would have done so at once, and with all the grace imaginable. But the request for him to retire was not urged on this account, but on the ground of Lodge custom. There is nothing in the opening of a Lodge which can be described as of other than a general character. All tried Masons are acquainted with the ceremony, and a night or two's attendance at a Lodge of Instruction would enable most brethren to fulfil it personally. The minutes, which were those of the previous regular meeting of the Lodge on the 2nd July, and of an emergency meeting on the 23rd of the same month, may have included notes referring to private matters, or a discussion may have been contemplated on the question of their being confirmed, all which would concern members only. We are assured that, in such circumstances, no visitor would make bold to remain, having been courteously invited to retire. But the offer of the Master of the Lodge of Goodwill to allow Bro. Constable to remain, if he insisted on his right to be present, disposes of this supposition at once. The sole reason assigned for preferring so unusual a request to the visitor was that "it was not the custom" of the Lodge "to allow strangers to be present at these preliminaries." What there is in the ceremony of opening a Lodge to which all approved Masons may not be admitted we are unable to say; but that the minutes might contain matters of a private character is very likely; still, from the information forwarded to us by Bro. Constable, "custom" only was pleaded as the apology for his not being permitted to remain during the preliminaries. This custom, we need hardly say, is not reconcilable with the Constitutions, as quoted, or with the Report of the Board of General Purposes in 1819, in which it was declared to be "the undoubted right of every Mason who is well known or properly vouched for to visit any Lodge during the time it is open for general Masonic business." The only reason which the Master of the Lodge of Goodwill could urge in his defence—so far as we can judge—is that the Lodge is not open till it has been opened—that is, till the opening ceremony has been performed. We do not say this is not a valid reason, but we think it would be straining unduly the law as interpreted by the Board of General Purposes in the case we have referred to. All matters of this kind should be dealt with in a spirit of large-heartedness, and it seems to us to be narrow-minded in the extreme to invite a brother to retire during the opening ceremony, and yet allow him to enter the Lodge during the transaction of its general business. We say this much on the supposition of the Lodge not being open till the customary formalities have been gone through, but our true objection to the action of the W. Master of this Lodge rests on the earlier and fuller reasons we have offered.

THE FOUR OLD LODGES.

LIST No. 11.

The engraved list for 1740 constitutes one of the most important links in the chain of our Lodge History, marking, as it does, the first change of numbers; the previous (and earliest) numeration having extended from 1729 to 1739.

The numeration which this change inaugurates, ranged from 1740 to 1755 inclusive, being followed by those of 1756-69, 1770-80, 1781-91, and 1792-1813.

It is remarkable, moreover, for containing more errors in regard to dates, than will be found (appearing for the first time) in any other of the Official Lists. Successive engravers naturally perpetuated the mistakes of their predecessors, but to Pine belongs the distinction, after having had the bringing out of these lists for seventeen years, of placing the wrong dates of Constitution against no less than four out of the first nine Warranted Lodges on the 1740 List, which error, in its entirety, has survived to this day. (See List No. 9.) Also No. 43 is placed at the year 1727 from 1728; No. 98 at 1734 from 1733; and No. 99 at 1732 from 1733. The dates in each case from which the alterations were made having been those recorded in the Constitutions 1738, which was approved in manuscript by Grand Lodge.(1) The present positions of the last mentioned Lodges, Nos. 98 and 99, afford a good illustration of the inconveniences that have ensued; No. 98, the senior of the two, being placed after the fair date of its warrant as No. 45 (Strong Man), and No. 99, the junior, being placed higher than its proper seniority, as No. 35 (Medina). Present No. 35 (Medina) was a London Lodge up to 1761, but, in 1762, was removed, or its warrant transferred, to West Cowes, Isle of Wight. It was erased in 1773, but appears again in the numeration for 1781-91 as No. 33, having moreover gained a further year's seniority (1731), which it retains to this day?

No. 43 (present No. 29, St. Albans) is placed at the year 1727 from 1728—an error which has also survived to the present time. No. 93 (present No. 37, Anchor and Hope, Bolton) was permanently placed at the year 1731 from 1732 in the 1781-91 numeration.

It would appear that warrants changed hands very easily. Thus the present No. 64, Fortitude, Manchester, met at the Flower Pot, Bishopsgate St., London, until 1743, when it was erased; in 1744 it was off the list, but reappeared the following year, as the Hare and Hounds, Parsonage Lane, Manchester.

No. 165 (present No. 67, Star in the East), or its place or warrant, belonged to a London Lodge, meeting at the Three Tuns, Houghton-street, Clare Market, up to 1745, when the warrant of constitution was surrendered. In 1750, however, the blank was filled by the name of the Third Lodge, Calcutta, East India, dated at 1740. The list for that year showing one other Bengal Lodge only, namely: No. 66, the East India Arms, Bengall, dating from 1730 (which will also be found in the 1740 List). In 1756, at the change of numbers, these Lodges (Nos. 66 and 165 in 1745) are shown as No. 40 and 117, respectively, and in the following year, the earlier of the two has disappeared. It is somewhat singular that the present No. 67, though dated at 1740, never appeared on the roll till 1750, also that whilst its first name, the third Lodge, Calcutta, would imply that there were two Senior Bengal Lodges then in existence, no intermediate Lodge can be found on the lists. In 1778, present No. 67—then No. 93—is styled the first Lodge of Bengal. It is just possible, that the older Indian Lodge of 1730, was identical with the so-dated Lodge of 1740, and in such case existing No. 67 is placed ten years after the fair date of its warrant.

No. 86 (present No. 39, St. John's, Exeter) has had a somewhat chequered career. Appearing as No. 97 in the List for 1734 (the earliest after its establishment now extant), it became No. 86 in 1740, but, on 29th November 1754, having been erased, along with nineteen other Lodges, was omitted from the List at the change of numbers in 1756, and, accordingly, on re-instatement in 1759, had to come in at the bottom of the roll; during the continuance, therefore, of this numeration (1756-69) its place was No. 239; in 1770, it resumed its proper seniority, as No. 48; becoming No. 38 in 1781, and 35 in 1792. During the continuance of the engraved lists, 1723-78, this Lodge was shown at its proper date (1732), but in the numeration of 1781-91, and 1792-1813, was placed before the fair date of its warrant, at 1731, where it has since remained.

The earliest of the engraved lists was published in 1723, the latest (now extant) in 1778.

John Pine was the engraver for 1723 to 1741; the lists for 1742-3 are missing, but in 1744 the engraver was Emon Bowen (§ 3, IX.) Benjamin Cole then followed, during 1745-66; being in turn succeeded by William Cole, in 1767, who brought out, in 1778, the last engraved list, which is owned by our National Masonic Library. The "Signs of the Houses" cease to be shown after 1769.

The Lodges in this list (1740) which have ceased to appear on the roll, are shown in ordinary type, whilst the still subsisting Lodges are in italic.

The various erasures and re-instatements, chronicled in the Constitution books up to 1784, are, as far as practicable, noted below; these changes however, are very imperfectly recorded.

To facilitate reference, the numbers borne by Lodges at the previous numeration (1729-39), are shown in a separate column. This arrangement will enable the interested reader to identify any Lodge on the 1740 List, with its name, place, and date, on all previous lists from 1729 onwards:—

CHARITY STEWARDS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The fact of your having inserted my short note last week induces me to avail myself of your implied permission to give me space this week. Looking at the various questions which have been raised, I admit that Bro. Binckes's division of them under three heads is correct, but in various parts I can hardly follow him in his treatment thereof. For instance, under his section (a), "The necessity for Anniversary Festival Dinners," he devotes considerable time to proving that such gatherings are advisable, and, in fact, necessary. This I have always considered is the opinion of nine-tenths of those who have any knowledge of the subject; certainly your article, and the correspondence which has ensued, point to the continuance of the Festival Dinners being advisable, the only question being as to the best means to be adopted to make these successful.

In such a matter as this it is very essential that none of the rules are objectionable, to even one person who might devote his services to the cause. I consider, therefore, it praiseworthy for any brother to come forward and point out anything which strikes him as prejudicial. For this reason I do not think Bro. Binckes should be so sharp on your correspondent, "A STEWARD WHO HAS SERVED ONCE." He may be a very hard working and straightforward brother, in fact his statement stamps him as the latter. Of course, I should not agree in charging the Institution with any incidental expenses which might arise in consequence of the Festival, such as your correspondent refers to, but I believe many men look at the total they spend in connection with any given object as the amount that particular item has cost, be it pleasure, pain, or charity; and thereby your correspondent is not alone in this view, which in my opinion is a wrong one.

Having devoted myself thus far to finding fault with Bro. Binckes, I will now try my hand at suggesting remedies.

As for the fee; that I look upon as so small a matter that it requires but passing notice; for, as Bro. Binckes points out, considerably over half the amount is spent on each Steward who attends the Festival. At the same time, as your Provincial correspondents have referred to it, I think it worth while considering if it would not be advisable in future to make the fee either a guinea or 25s, and let each brother who attends the Festival pay for his own banquet ticket, as is often done in the case of Lodges on installation nights. I do not say the alteration would make any material difference, but it would certainly do away with the feeling that money had been spent on a banquet which it was impossible or inconvenient to attend. Should the matter ever be brought forward, I would also suggest that some alteration be made in the form of the badge—I was going to write jewel, but think the denomination "badge" is more appropriate to the tinsel now in vogue. Few brethren care to bedeck themselves with such gaudy appendages as have lately been provided for the Stewards, and fewer still value them as it might be expected they would do considering the nature of the services these are intended to commemorate. Surely the same rule applies in this case as in that of Past Masters' jewels,—the neater they are the more they are admired.

Referring now to the advantages offered to those brethren who undertake the offices of Steward as recited in Bro. Binckes's letter last week. I quite agree with him that they are numerous, and confer privileges, but trust he will allow me to differ with him on one point—that of their sufficiency.

The additional voting power which is accorded should in itself be sufficient recompense for the expenditure of time and money which occurs, were it universal, but the conditions which are attached—in my opinion—completely nullify the genuineness of the gift (?) which is in fact purchased. Why not confer a vote on every Steward who collects, say twenty-five guineas? leaving the matter of personal donation out of the question. Were this suggestion adopted, many brethren would make a point of always being on the look-out for small sums for one or other of the Charities, and, as the voting papers for each election were received by them, they would be reminded how easy it was to obtain another vote for life at an outlay—even under present arrangements as to fees—of but two guineas. The alteration would lead to a few extra votes being issued, but I believe the expense thereof is usually considered, from an advertising point of view, as money well spent. In my own case, I have made up my mind that, unless anything unforeseen occurs, I shall serve as Steward to one or other of the Charities every year, and I hope to be able to take up large lists, but as I understand it, I shall not get any votes on account of my labours unless I make a donation on each occasion of not less than ten guineas. I shall not alter my resolution in consequence of this, but merely point to it as showing my idea of the matter. The same objection occurs in the special boon conferred on Provincial brethren, as to wearing the Charity jewel; the conditions are both unnecessary, and, as Bro. Binckes states, mar the gift. Why should it be compulsory for a brother to travel one or two hundred miles to and from London for a few hours pleasure? and why not recognise lists of smaller amount than one hundred guineas?

The question of advantage "derived by every well regulated mind from the sense of duty done," is, of course, beyond doubt, but I do not think the support of our institutions, or, indeed, of anything else would result merely from a sense of duty. Some reward must be offered, the question is, of what form and of what value shall it be? I am rather surprised Bro. Binckes should have put this as he has, for he does not seem to have forgotten "that it is the hope of reward that sweetens labour," he, but a few lines earlier in his communication having himself quoted these words.

In conclusion, I would ask, has Bro. Binckes read the letter of "INVICTA" in your issue of 31st ult.? If so, I wonder he has not in some way referred to it. I look upon it as an important one. "INVICTA" states that he has served four, and a friend of his eight Stewardships. Now the opinion of such brethren (I suppose, from the letter, that in this matter it is uniform) should be worth something. What is their opinion? That the money they have spent in attending the Festivals is wasted—they admit, on themselves—and that for the future they intend to act differently. Now what will they do? We certainly cannot afford to lose such hearty workers; therefore, why not exert ourselves to keep them?

Apologising for the length of my present communication,

I remain, yours respectfully and fraternally,

ALPHA.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I think that Bro. Binckes's letters on this subject will command the assent of the great majority of Freemasons. He has stated the case most literally, and argued it, point by point, with the greatest judgment. In my humble opinion the manner in which he has placed some of his arguments is well nigh, if not quite unanswerable. Considering the magnitude of our Charity Festivals, it strikes me the cost which falls upon the Stewards is extremely small. The fee per Steward is now Two Guineas, and the cost of other tickets issued, is a guinea each gentleman's, and fifteen shillings each lady's, or it may be half a guinea. Say there are four hundred gentlemen and two hundred ladies present, and taking the lower fee for the latter, we get the cost of the banquet as five hundred guineas. If we assume, for the sake of argument, that there are two hundred Stewards, then we have from them four hundred guineas, and must add to this sum two hundred guineas for the non-Stewards' tickets, and one hundred guineas for the ladies' ditto, making in all seven hundred guineas or £735. We have already set down the banquet at £525, so that there remains a sum of £210, for music, badges, advertising, &c., &c., &c., and the experience of our latest Festivals is to the effect, that there is a margin or surplus over on the right side of the account, a considerable portion of which finds its way into the coffers of this Institution, which receives also the aggregate of the lists collected without the deduction of a single farthing.

If brethren incur more than the two guineas outlay, that is purely a personal question, which in no way affects the main argument. But let those who object to the present system—which, be it remembered, is almost universal in this country—suggest some other which is likely to be more profitable. I fancy they will incur some difficulty in doing so.

Fraternally yours,

P. T.

SCRUTINEERS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—It is not my intention to enter into discussion with Bro. Stevens on a subject that occurred seven years ago, my object in writing the record of that event was "to point a moral and adorn a tale," under the circumstance of the heavy punishment passed on the Past Grand Pursuivant, hoping it would have the effect of calling attention to the very imperfect way in which our elections are carried on, and that from letters on the subject some practicable alteration may be effected. All I wrote in your issue of the 7th was from the Petition I sent to the General Committee of the Boys' School at that time, which being settled in my absence I do not, nor ever did, know the statement Bro. Stevens made, consequently I have nothing to add to, or detract from, that Petition as stating my grievance. Had his brother Committeemen treated me fairly, as any properly organised court would have done, they would not have listened to an ex parte statement from one of their body, but have called all parties together, and heard both sides before passing judgment. Query—Is not a reform wanted here? Had Brother Stevens allowed blanks to be substituted for names, this exposure would not have appeared as regards his committee. Now, with regard to Bro. Stevens himself. I can honestly respond to his remarks that, until this unfortunate occurrence, I did not know there was such a person, and do not even remember ever having met him. But I am happy to see my communication has begun to bear fruit already, in a letter from "T. P. B." whose practical suggestions bear on the point. I still maintain our election should be so managed that errors should be impracticable; that even the Scrutineers themselves should be checked, to see that their returns are correct, and not let them—as has happened—return a child as elected, and afterwards find a rejected one should have filled his place. I also maintain that sufficient time is not expended in casting up the votes. The poll closes at three, and generally by five o'clock the successful candidates are declared; the Scrutineers having, in the interim, examined some thousands of votes. If the Ballot Box was used, and the same system adopted as at our Parliamentary elections, no one could by any means anticipate the result.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

WILLIAM BIGGS, P.M., P.Z.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Bro. Stevens's letter of last week confirms me in the views I have already expressed, that a way should be found of having only those as Scrutineers who are entirely independent of any interest in any of the candidates—at least from the moment they enter the Scrutineers' Room. Bro. Stevens acknowledges, in a manly, straightforward manner, that he it was who despatched the obnoxious message, while his account of the matter exonerates him from all blame except on the score of indiscretion. I do not refer to the language in which his message was couched—every one knows well enough that it never is intended to be accepted literally; but to his having communicated at all, when once he had entered the Scrutineers' room, with any one outside, whether in answer to a note he had received, or at his own instance. Every one will most readily exonerate Bro. Stevens of intentional blame after the manly explanation he has offered, but there should be no room whatever for even the slightest suspicion of blame to enter into any brother's mind. It is far easier to excite doubts about anything or person than to allay them; and, therefore, if those only are employed as Scrutineers who have no interest in the election, or whose personal interest, as represented by the votes they have cast for their favourite candidates, has passed away before entering the Scrutineers' room. No one could then say he had been misled by a Scrutineer's message to a friend, how harmlessly soever that message may have been intended.

Fraternally yours,

T. P. B.

LODGE FUNDS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am continually hearing complaints made as to the disposal of Lodge Funds, and that a large number of Lodges do not contribute to the Charities. It certainly is a most un-Masonic state of things, and I think it reflects on the members of such Lodges. How can they call themselves Masons—whose leading characteristic is Charity—and yet devote their funds to self-gratification alone? To me this is a "mystery" I hope not to be initiated into. Why not adopt the principle of applying all Lodge funds to acts of Charity, and separate the banquet? Let this latter be a special matter. No one would wish to deprive a brother of his refreshment, yet I certainly feel hotel bills unnecessary items in Lodge accounts. Would it not be possible to make it compulsory on all Lodges to contribute something towards the Charities? A useful lesson would be given if all Provincial Grand Lodges made it a rule to bestow no Provincial honours on any brother belonging to a Lodge who had not contributed according to his means to the Charities, and that every Lodge should provide at least one Steward annually. An article in the CHRONICLE of last week mentions, "the average sum required from each Lodge to provide for the accommodation of four more children, in addition to two aged Masons and two widows, is but 6s per annum." Surely so small a sum could be well provided by each Lodge. The practice of forming Charity Associations should be encouraged. One shilling per week subscribed by ten persons, on the same principle as a building society, would ensure two Life Governorships per annum. Surely no Lodge is so impecunious as not to be able to afford this.

No small augmentation to the fund could be raised by a well organised system of banking all Lodge funds, as hinted at in your Editorial last week. If any bank could take up the whole list of Lodges it would be worth the interest; but to open separate accounts at numberless banks would scarcely be practicable, as interest could only be allowed on an accumulated sum, not on individual deposits. As regards the interest, this should be handed over in a lump sum to the Charities, but not apportioned to each Lodge, according to the amount under deposit.

I am afraid I am trespassing on your space, but hope these few hints may prove serviceable to the Charities.

Yours fraternally,

16th September 1878. DICK RADCLYFFE.

APPROACHING ELECTION FOR THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I beg leave to call the attention of the voters, at the forthcoming election for candidates to the Boys' School, to the fact that the number is reduced to 65 by the withdrawal of No. 3, Henry Newboult, and the ineligibility of No. 43, Henry Webb, who is over age.

Yours fraternally,

C. J. PERCIVAL.

CONSECRATION OF THE ELEANOR CROSS LODGE, No. 1764.

ON Tuesday last the Freemasons of the Province of Northants and Hunts assembled in great force at the Masonic Hall, Abington-street, Northampton, for the purpose of consecrating the Eleanor Cross Lodge and investing brethren to act as Officers for the ensuing year. The Warrant for this Lodge, which was granted by Grand Lodge during the last quarter, was issued on the petition of the following brethren:—M. A. Boémé P.M., T. Whitehouse W.M., F. Gadsby S.W., Hamilton W. Parker J.W., Geo. Ellard I.G., Henry Brown, S. J. W. Sanders Asst. Chap., H. J. Atkins, H. Hill and H. Spoor, all of 360, S. Wathen Wigg and E. Morris of 1391, J. Linnett (Sir Watkin Lodge, Mold, 1477), and C. H. Frank 538. It will thus be seen that the new Lodge starts under most favourable auspices, enjoying as it does the support of the principal members of the Pomfret Lodge, No. 360, which is the only other Lodge in the town. Indeed, we understand that the members of 360 are unanimous in wishing success and prosperity to the new Lodge. Punctually at 12 o'clock the Lodge was opened, under the direction of Bro. James Terry, who was the Officer appointed to perform the ceremony of consecration, he being supported by Bro. Butler Wilkins, Deputy Prov. Grand Master, who acted as Installing Master. The usual preliminary business having been most satisfactorily disposed of, Bro. S. Wathen Wigg, the Chaplain elect, delivered the following oration; the whole of those present paying our respected brother the greatest attention, and at the conclusion expressing their appreciation of his address:—

"Right Worshipful Master, Worshipful Sirs, Brethren in the North, East, South and West,—At the erection of all stately and superb edifices it is customary to lay a foundation stone, and to speak some words of admonition and encouragement. We, who are speculative rather than practical Masons, are met here to-day, in the name of the G.A.O.T.U., and in the presence of these worshipful brethren, to lay the foundation stone of a new Lodge, and it has fallen to my lot, by the courtesy of the Consecrating Officer, and the will of the brethren, to speak those words which are customary on such occasions—to strike, albeit with a trembling finger, the key-note which shall swell into glorious harmonies in all the future of the Lodge. It must be evident to you that I cannot approach such a task, so grave in its responsibilities, in the presence of such learned and reverend brethren, young and inexperienced as I am, without considerable hesitation; but as obedience is one of the first Masonic obligations, I feel that while in the path of duty I shall receive that kind consideration which a brother may always expect. I do not propose to-day to discuss the past history of Masonry; that is a subject which has tasked the abilities of many of our most eminent brethren, and is utterly beyond my limited knowledge. I prefer to speak of what Masonry is, rather than of what it was; and in doing so our thoughts naturally cluster around one word, which forms, if I mistake not, the very centre and life of our Order. I need not tell you that it is that word which meets us at the door of the Lodge, abides constantly with us during its solemn sessions, goes with us as we retire to the outer world: a word which never forsakes us at any moment of our existence, and is at the last whispered in faltering accents over our open grave—the simple, but all expressive word "Brother;" the foundation, copestone, and cement of our Order. How often men have tried to realise its true meaning, the page of history records, and with like fidelity it records also repeated failure. A century ago that sacred word was inscribed in flaming letters above the guillotine in the streets of Paris, when the blood of the noble, the pious, the pure was shed like water in the sacred name of fraternity. The Middle Ages saw the same attempt in the monasteries and brotherhoods with which this and other countries abounded, but it took not long for men to discover that the sacred name of brother might be borne by men who possessed none of the brotherly spirit. Once, indeed, men thought that the dawn of the day of universal brotherhood had arrived, at that time when, moved by a new and divine impulse, men sold all they possessed, and threw the proceeds into one general fund, and had all things in common; and so true for a time was this brotherhood that it forced from an astonished heathen world the exclamation, "See how those Christians love one another!" But now, alas! those words are never repeated, except in tones of ineffable sadness by friends, or in the bitterest irony by enemies. But to-day our ancient Order presents to the world a united brotherhood, which has not only stood the test of centuries, but of different races, varied nationalities, widely sundered countries, and of divers creeds. A brotherhood which is based on the common Fatherhood of the Most High. The charge sometimes made, that Masonry is anti-Christian, is utterly false—while every Lodge is consecrated in the name of God—every meeting begun and ended with appeals to His holy name, while that sacred volume is never closed during our session, we can afford to treat such a charge as a misapprehension of the ignorant, or a slander of the malicious. And if I am reminded that every Freemason, as such, lies under the ban of the Bishop of Rome, I answer, first, that the Bishop of Rome has no jurisdiction, either in things civil or ecclesiastical, in the realm of England; and I venture further to add that we are as likely to prosper under his curse as under his blessing; for we, as English Freemasons, cannot forget that some of the proudest names in our history have shared that ban, and that some of the noblest pages in the annals of our country were written while we lay under the Papal interdict. Freemasonry is not a religion; she leaves that great and solemn question to be settled between a man and his God; all she demands of her sons is that they shall adore the Almighty Father—shall love the universal brotherhood—shall visit the widow and the fatherless in their affliction, and keep themselves unspotted from the sins and vices of the world. And her doors are only closed against the atheist and the libertine. The Grand Lodge of England has recently nobly vindicated this principle by refusing to acknowledge as brethren those who have impiously, and in defiance of all Masonic tradition dared to remove the name of the G.A.O.T.U. from their Ritual; by that act they cut themselves off from the universal brotherhood, and from that moment they ceased to be Free and Accepted Masons: they went out from us because they were not of us. Our true safety and strength lies in obedience to the precepts taught us in that Sacred Volume, and by bending in awe and reverence at the name of its Author—by imploring His aid in all our lawful undertakings, and by looking up to Him in every emergency for comfort and support. To us, the officers and brethren of the new Lodge, is committed to-day a solemn charge, in our keeping is placed in all its integrity the honour of our fraternity, and we must use all diligence to see to it that we in like manner transmit it unimpaired to those who shall come after us, and if we would preserve and beautify our ancient and illustrious Order we must not be satisfied with the mere outward trappings of the craft. Wearing an apron does not make a man a Mason, or even the correct knowledge of our working tools and ritual; these are but the emblems of those grand principles which constitute true Freemasonry. A man must be made a Mason in a certain place which we know of before ever he enters the door of the Lodge. And if he be not a Mason in this true sense, no matter what position he may hold, what distinction he may attain to, he has yet to learn the vital principles of our Order. And thus, my brethren, you will readily realise how important it will be for us to keep unworthy men without the door of that Lodge which will be to-day for the first time closed-tyled. We know who are fit and proper persons to be made brethren, and it is at our peril that we admit any others. We are not called upon to make a great number of Masons, but we are called upon to see to it that every man we introduce into our ancient and honourable Order is worthy of that high distinction. And it is our duty also, by our conduct both within and without the Lodge, to impress men favorably with Masonry; to behave within the Lodge in such a manner that those admitted to our fellowship may see our ritual performed with spirit and precision. Much more depends than we are apt to think on the impressions an initiate receives when for the first time he beholds a just, perfect, and regular Lodge. If he sees a careless and negligent behaviour, if the ceremonies are performed in a slovenly manner, if the harmony of the craftsmen are to another, or if the obedience to the Master fails in the smallest point, he his apt to undervalue the great privileges to which he has been admitted. It is one of the boasts of our Order that within the Lodge all brethren are equal, but a Mason is always most careful both within and without the Lodge to respect those distinctions which society on the one hand, and Masonic law on the other, has imposed. It will be the most earnest effort of the Eleanor Cross Lodge to cultivate that spirit of true brotherhood which consists not in the name, but in deed—a brotherhood which is not limited to the confines of our Lodge, but is extended to every Mason dispersed over the face of the earth and sea; and especially will it be our aim to work in harmony and brotherly love with that ancient Lodge already in existence in this town, and as one candle lighted at another does not diminish the light from which it is taken, but leaves it in unimpaired brightness, while adding its own share to the general illumination, so we trust that the Lodge consecrated to-day will not diminish the brightness of the ancient light, but rather aid it in the execution of that duty which for so many years it has performed alone. . . . And when we leave the Lodge, let us not fold up our Masonic principles with our aprons, but carry them with us into our every-day life. We cannot do better than imitate the example of our ancient brethren, the evidences of whose skill remain with us to the present day in those stately cathedrals which adorn and beautify our land. Examine them; and in every perfectly-finished arch, every quaint capital, every bit of carven satire, you will discern evidences of the life and freedom of the workmen. You will find no mechanical slave labour, no details carelessly finished, no part, because it was unseen or inconspicuous, left bare and rough; but every niche, every gable, every bit of tracery, show that the soul of the craftsman was in his work; there was principle in the touch of his chisel, honour in the stroke of his gavel, self-sacrifice in the nice adjustment of his compass. And shall we, brethren, to whom the Great Architect has committed the erection of a far more superb and majestic edifice, fall behind our ancient brethren in the quality of our work? The spiritual temple which day by day we are erecting may well tax our utmost energies, and as we labour we must afford to each other that aid and encouragement of which we all stand in need. And let us be careful, like our ancient brethren, to perform each part of our work with care and exactness, not doing well and carefully that part which our fellow-craftsman and the world at large can see and appreciate, and leaving rough and unfinished that side which meets only the eye of the Great Architect. . . . . Let brotherly love, relief, and truth ever be the principles which animate us, and to them let us add that spirit of self-sacrifice, without which no great work can ever be accomplished. When we call to mind the noble lady whose illustrious name we have ventured to assume as the distinguishing mark of our Lodge, who, as tradition has it, at the risk of her own life, extracted the deadly poison from the arm of her husband, may the devoted spirit which animated her also inspire us, so that we may be ready to face even death itself in the path of duty and honour, until at last the stately temple shall arise in all its grandeur and majesty, and, our work being done, the Great Master shall summon us from labour to an endless refreshment in that region bright,

> A temple of eternal light."

The formulæ of the ceremony is doubtless known to our readers, we therefore content ourselves by remarking that Bro. Terry was in excellent form, and was enabled, through the perfect co-operation of the Officers, to make the ceremony one of the most impressive we remember having witnessed. Bro. Terry now placed the gavel in the hands of Bro. Butler Wilkins, Deputy Grand Master of the Province, and introduced the W.M. designate, Bro. M. A. Boémé P.P.G.D.C., &c. A board of installed Masters was then opened, and that brother was installed as the first ruler of the Lodge, and he, in due course, invested his officers as follow:—Bro. Rev. S. J. W. Sanders S.W., H. J. Atkins J.W., Rev. S. Wathen Wigg Chaplain, Hamilton J. Parker Treas., Henry Brown Sec., H. Hill S.D., H. Spoor J.D., G. Ellard D. of C., J. Linnett Steward, E. Morris I.G., Kirby and Dean Tylers. The Lodge was now called off for the purpose of attending Divine service at St. Giles's Church, to which the brethren marched in procession in full Masonic clothing, a dispensation having been obtained from the Prov. Grand Master permitting the same. The sermon was preached by the very worshipful Rev. Bro. Rent, Past Grand Chaplain of England, from 1 Kings vi. 7, "And the house, when it was in building, was built of stone made ready before it was brought thither: so that there was neither hammer nor ax nor any tool of iron heard in the house, while it was in building." At its conclusion a collection was made on behalf of the Northampton Infirmary and the Masonic Charities, and resulted, as was afterwards announced in Lodge, in the sum of £25 0s 2d being raised. On the return of the brethren to the Lodge room the J.W. handed over command to the W.M. Bro. Sanders, the S.W. now rose, he had the gratification of being selected to express to the W.M. the hearty thanks of the founders for the great services he had rendered them. As a mark of their appreciation they asked the W.M. to accept an impression of the founders' jewel which had been designed by the Honorary Secretary. He (Bro. Sanders) would not occupy the time of the Lodge by detailing the virtues of their Master, but would suffice by referring to his past services in connection with Freemasonry. He hoped the Lodge would prosper under his guidance. It was also the wish of his brother founders that the Master would present, in their name, a similar jewel to Bro. Brown, whose services as Secretary during the formation of the Lodge had entitled him to the greatest thanks the Lodge could bestow. The Senior Warden having attached the jewel to the breast of Bro. Boémé, that brother tendered his thanks for the honour conferred on him; he should always wear the jewel with pride. He was gratified that the first duty he had an opportunity of discharging, in his new capacity, was to carry out the wishes of the founders in presenting a jewel to Bro. Brown, as some recognition for his exertions on their behalf. Bro. Brown heartily thanked the brethren, he considered the present the proudest moment he had ever spent in Freemasonry. The names of nine gentlemen for initiation, and one brother for joining, were given in for ballot at the next meeting. A letter of regret at inability to attend was read from the Duke of Manchester, Prov. G. Master. Another from Bro. Atkins, asking the acceptance by the brethren of a set of tracing boards, and, in conjunction with the Pomfret Lodge, No. 360, of a copy of the Installation Engraving, was also read, and the gift suitably acknowledged by the W.M. on behalf of the Lodge, it being further resolved that the thanks of the members be recorded on the minutes. Votes of thanks were also passed to the Rev. R. B. Hull, for having granted the use of the church; to the Rev. Bro. Bent, for his admirable sermon; to Bro. Wigg, for his oration; and to Mr. Ebenezer Law, the organist, and the choir, for their assistance in the services at the church. On the proposition of the S.W., seconded by the J.W., honorary membership was conferred on Bros. Bent, Terry and Butler Wilkins, for their services to the Lodge in having performed the ceremony of consecration. Each of these replied, thanking the members for the honour conferred on them. The W.M. having received hearty good wishes from the visitors, closed the Lodge, and the brethen proceeded to the Town Hall, where the banquet was provided. At its conclusion, grace having been said, the W.M. proposed the toast of the Queen and the Craft, followed by those of H.R.H the Prince of Wales Grand Master, the Pro G.M., the D.G.M. and the Officers of Grand Lodge Past and Present, with this latter he coupled the name of Bro. Bent, Past Grand Chaplain, who thanked the brethren, both individually and on behalf of the Grand Officers. The next toast was the Prov. Grand Master, the Deputy Prov. Grand Master, and the Prov. Grand Officers Past and Present. Bro. Butler Wilkins, in replying to this, stated he had a threefold task to perform; first, to thank them on behalf of the Prov. G. Master and Officers of Prov. G. Lodge; 2nd, on behalf of himself; and 3rd, to propose what he considered the toast of the evening. All regretted the absence of the Prov. Grand Master, who was anxious for the success of this addition to the Lodges of the Province. When he (Bro. Wilkins) saw around the board so many distinguished brethren who were wearing the insignia of their Provincial Lodge, he felt that it was an unquestionable sign that Freemasonry was advancing in their part of the country. He had great pleasure in replying on behalf of so important a body, and also in thanking the brethren for their kindness to himself. In proposing prosperity to the Eleanor Cross Lodge, he congratulated the members in having secured so able a Master for their first year, and addressed a few words of warning to the Officers, whom he urged to be particularly careful whom they admitted into their ranks. He coupled with the toast the name of the W.M. Bro. Boémé in replying, expressed his gratification at the whole of the day's proceedings. He had been a Mason for many years, but had never before witnessed the important ceremony which they had taken part in that day. Bro. J. T. Green P.M. 360 gave the next toast—the Officers of the Lodge. All Masons were aware that no Lodge could be worked without proper Officers. Those selected that day seemed to him all that could be desired. Bro. Atkins J.W. responded. He felt that the Officers all appreciated the compliment that had been paid them. He assured the brethren that the Officers had the welfare of the Craft, and especially their own Lodge, at heart, and that their aim would be to carry out their duties as true Masons. He would ask the brethren to drink another toast. Most of the members also belonged to the Pomfret Lodge, and when they considered how that Lodge had helped them: he felt a hearty reception would be accorded the toast. As in many cases the brethren were drinking prosperity to their mother Lodge, we need hardly remark that our Bro. Atkins was correct in his surmise, that great enthusiasm would be displayed. The four Lewises who during the procession to and from the church had borne the volume of the Sacred Law were now introduced, and a very handsomely bound Bible was presented to each, as a memento of their services on the occasion. The Master next gave the health of Bros. Buckle and Simmonds, and thanked them on behalf of the Lodge for the part they had taken in the ceremony. Each responded. Bro. Saunders proposed the health of the visiting brethren, and Rev. J. Bird replied. Bro. P.M. Kingston next gave "the Consecrating Officer." Bro. Terry suitably acknowledged the kind remarks and hearty reception accorded them. He had also to thank the brethren of Northampton, and, indeed, of the entire Province, for the hearty support they accorded the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, especially at the end of last and the beginning of the present years. He considered the result of their labours (upwards of £300) was most creditable for such a comparatively small Province as Northants and Hants. He hoped it would be his privilege to again visit the Eleanor Cross Lodge, which he now left with most hearty wishes for its prosperity. Several other brethren were obliged, in consequence of the train being due, to leave at this time; but those who resided in Northampton spent a very pleasant couple of hours together, many of the brethren contributing songs, &c. It having been remarked that the toast of Prosperity to the Pomfret Lodge had not been replied to, in consequence of the confusion caused by so many of the party leaving to catch the trains, Brother Past Master Green was now called upon to respond; this he did in a few well chosen words. The Pomfret Lodge had been in existence for many years, and was happy in the knowledge that they had sufficient members to come forward and found a new Lodge. They not only hoped to see the Eleanor Cross Lodge prosperous, but hoped the time was not far distant when there would also be an Eleanor Cross Chapter. He thanked the brethren on behalf of No. 360, and assured them they might depend on the Pomfret sticking fast to them, and helping them if at any time in their power. Bro. Butler Wilkins rose, he considered the toast he was about to propose was one which should have been given earlier, but he supposed it had been overlooked. In looking round the tables he had seen many with whose faces he was familiar, but he also saw others who were not members of their own Province. He asked the brethren to drink prosperity to the Leicestershire Lodges, and called upon Bros. Cleaver and Wright to respond to the toast. Bro. Cleaver, in doing so, expressed the gratification he felt sure it would afford the brethren of his Province to hear of the day's proceedings. In his Province the aim of each brother was to do all the good in his power for his brother Masons, and he felt sure from what he had seen to-day, the same feeling was rife in Northampton. Bro. Wright also replied. He referred to the fact of the Chaplain of the new Lodge being a Leicestershire man, and he felt proud that a member of his Province could deliver such an oration as he had that day listened. Some songs followed, and the brethren then separated.

LODGE OF ANCIENT CARTHAGE, No. 1717.

TUNIS, NORTH AFRICA.

The regular meeting of this Lodge, for the purpose of electing a W.M., was held at the Masonic Hall, Tunis, on Friday, the 6th Sept. Present—W. Bros. A. M. Broadley D.G.S.W. Malta W.M., N. Lenghi P.M., Rev. E. B. Frankel S.W., J. E. L. Barker J.W., J. H. Stevens Treasurer, S. Souiller Sec., Dr. A. Perini S.D., G. Pentecost J.D., V.C. Clement D. of C., Rev. E. H. Shepherd Chaplain, Paleologo I.G., Lambroso and Schembri Stewards, H. Haylock Tyler, and over thirty other members of the Lodge, with three visitors. After the minutes had been read and confirmed, P.M. Bro. N. Lenghi rose and begged in the name of the Officers and members of the Lodge, to present a P.M.'s jewel, of the value of twelve guineas, to W. Bro. Broadley, as well as an illuminated address on vellum, signed by the Secretary on behalf of fifty members of the Lodge. Bro. Lenghi said, that the great prosperity of the Lodge itself, as well as the revival of Masonry in Tunis, must be ascribed to the zeal and activity of their present W. Master, and concluded by calling on the Secretary to read the address. Bro. Lenghi's remarks were received with loud applause. The address having been read, Bro. Broadley returned thanks, and expressed his strong desire not to be re-elected, as he needed some repose after the labours of his year of Mastership. The ballot was then taken, and it resulted in twenty-nine out of the thirty-three members who voted recording their vote for the re-election of Bro. Broadley. W. P.M. Lenghi called on Bro. Broadley to bow to the decision of the Lodge in the matter, and carry out the good work he had begun. Bro. Broadley then said that, after this expression of the opinion of the Lodge, he felt bound to again accept office, and would try to once more uphold the fame and reputation of the Lodge. Bro. A. Blanch was unanimously elected Treasurer. A vote of thanks was awarded to the scrutineers of the Ballot. W. Bro. Dr. Magnaini P.M., 32°, and Bros. Dr. Funaro and Parisote. The P.M.'s jewel presented to W. Bro. Broadley excited much admiration. The Lodge of Ancient Carthage now numbers nearly sixty members, and it is expected that petitions will be soon presented for Lodges at the seaport towns of the Goletta and Susa, so that English Masonry may be almost safely said to have taken firm root on the shores of North Africa.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—The greatest wonder of modern times—They correct bile, prevent flatulency, cleanse the liver, purify the system, renovate the debilitated, strengthen the stomach, increase the appetite, invigorate the nerves, promote health, and reinstate the weak to an ardour of feeling never before expected. The sale of these Pills throughout the globe astonishes everybody, convincing the most sceptical that there is no medicine equal to Holloway's Pills for removing the complaints which are incidental to the human race. They are, indeed, a blessing to the afflicted and a boon to those who suffer from any disorder, internal or external. Thousands of persons have testified that by their use alone they have been restored to health after other remedies had proved unsuccessful.

SEVENTH APPLICATION, OCTOBER 1878.

The Votes and Interest of the Governors and Subscribers are earnestly solicited on behalf of

ARTHUR H. DAY, Aged Ten Years,

SON of the late Bro. JOHN DAY, of Tendring, in the County of Essex, Farmer and Brewer. The Deceased was for eight years, and up to a short time of his death, a Subscribing Member of the Lodge of Hope, No. 433, Brightlingsea. During the last years of his life he became much reduced in circumstances, in consequence of a long affliction—Paralysis. At his decease, which took place on the 20th of December 1871, barely sufficient funds were realised to pay his debts, and the Widow was consequently obliged to give up the business, and is mainly dependent on her friends for support. She has two children (out of a family of five) entirely dependent. The Applicant is a quick, promising Boy, greatly needing your sympathy.

The Case is strongly recommended by the following Brethren:—R. W. Bros. W. W. B. BEACH M.P. P.G.M. Hants and Isle of Wight; *SIR. J. H. JOHNSON, Shakespeare Lodge, No. 99, the Priory, St. Osyth, Essex; *E. JOHNSON, V.P. Farringdon House, Exeter; C. H. WATERS P.M. OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

AT a Council held on Saturday, at Balmoral, where the Queen still remains, it was ordered that Parliament, which stood prorogued to the 2nd of November, be further prorogued to the 30th of that month. The Prince of Wales left Brantingham Thorpe on Saturday, and returned to London. On Monday H.R.H. left for Abergeldie Castle, Aberdeenshire. The Duke of Connaught arrived in London on Tuesday, on his way from Potsdam to Balmoral. The Princess Louise and the Marquis of Lorne left Balmoral on Wednesday for Inverary.

The inquests on the victims of the collision on the Thames continue from day to day. On Monday, evidences of identification having been concluded, the first mate and the seaman who was steering the unfortunate vessel were examined, while on Tuesday, other of the men engaged in the navigation of the vessel, were brought forward. On Wednesday, the principal witnesses were passengers who were on board at the time of the collision, and these, as well as those examined on Thursday, seem to agree that it was impossible for the Princess Alice to have avoided the collision. The fund at the Mansion House being raised on behalf of those left destitute by the accident, now exceeds £23,000.

From an official statement made to the Lord Mayor it appears that 258 lives were lost by the explosion in the Abercarn pit. Of these 131 have left widows, and 363 children are rendered orphans by the calamity. The work of flooding the mine to extinguish the fire has been completed, and steps have been taken to at once commence the pumping out, which it is anticipated will take at least a month. The inquest which has been opened has been adjourned for that time it being impossible to proceed further until an inspection of the pit has taken place. A fund for the relief of the sufferers has been opened at the Mansion House, and up to the present time upwards of £8,000 has been received on account thereof.

The two Fenian prisoners, Condon and Melody, have been released, in accordance with the instructions of the pardon granted on their behalf.

Hobart Pasha, who has been unexpectedly recalled to resume his duties as Inspector General of the Turkish Fleet, has left London for Constantinople for that purpose.

An obstinate resistance is still made to the Austrian troops in some parts of Bosnia. Latest advices from Vienna, however, state that the operations of the force under Field Marshal Bienert, which begun with the passage of the Save have been proceeded with without opposition, and that the troops now occupy the line from Sakova and Gradacac towards the Bosna. The inhabitants of the district of Bangaluka are being disarmed without much trouble, and it is expected that the insurgents will shortly surrender the stronghold of Bihach, near which place General Zach and Reinlander's brigades are stationed. The Austrians are reported to have burnt Breka, on the Save, in consequence of the treason of the inhabitants, and now only require to subjugate Bielina Tuzla and Svornik to complete their occupation of Eastern Bosnia. A circular memorandum has been prepared by the Porte refuting the charge of delay on its part, in carrying out the stipulations of the Berlin Treaty; it will shortly be sent to the Powers. It is estimated that 50,000 Russian troops have now embarked from San Stefano, at which place the operation is still in progress. Mousa Pasha has assumed command of Erzeroum, the evacuation by the Russians having been completed. The Servians are actively engaged in military preparations, and, it is stated, daily expect a subsidy from Russia. In France, a grand military review, at which Marshal MacMahon and the Duke of Cambridge were present, has been held at Vincennes. The troops on the ground numbered upwards of 50,000 men, and generally exhibited improvement compared with that displayed at any such gathering held in that country for some years past. The German Parliament has been engaged for two days on the Anti-Socialist Bill, which was ultimately referred to a committee. From the United States it is reported that the new cases of yellow fever appear to be decreasing in some towns, but that the epidemic still extensively prevails. Some cases have occurred at Jamaica, but it is hoped the measures taken to stop the progress of the malady will be successful in staying its ravages. In view of its appearance at some of the ports of North America, the English authorities have issued orders as to the measures to be adopted should it appear in any of our ports. From the Transvaal news of a disquieting nature is received. The Zulu police have mutinied, and the Caffres are assuming the offensive. Fort Weber has been attacked, and Leydenburg surrounded. In consequence of the dissatisfaction caused by the policy of the Government, many volunteers refuse to serve longer, and are returning home.

THE GRAND MASTERSHIP OF SCOTLAND.—We, Scotsman, are authorised to state that Mr. Inglis, of Torsonce, the Depute Grand Master Mason of Scotland, has declined to comply with the requisition, signed by about 500 members of the Masonic Order, to allow himself to be nominated Grand Master, in consequence of the expressed desire of the present Grand Master, Sir M. R. Shaw-Stewart, to retain office for another year.

Bro. Erasmus Wilson and his confrère, Bro. John Dixon, have received a congratulatory telegram from the Queen on the successful termination of their labours in connection with the Egyptian Obelisk, Cleopatra's Needle.

The City of London Orchestral Union will give the First Concert of their Twelfth Season on Wednesday next, at the Albion Hall, London Wall. Bro. G. T. H. Seddon, S.W. 174, is the Conductor, and Arthur Gee, P.M. 174, is the Treasurer. The Concert will begin at eight p.m.

We have before us a copy of the Report of the Directors of the Crystal Palace District Gas Company for the half-year ending the 30th June 1878, which was laid before the Proprietors at the Ordinary General Meeting on Thursday. The Directors begin by announcing that the general working of the Company during the half-year has been most satisfactory. They then announce that they have taken advantage of the low price of coal, in order to secure contracts for all the coal that will be required to March 1880; that they have resolved on reducing the price of gas to the general consumer to 3s 9d per 1,000 cubic feet, the reduction to take effect from the Michaelmas quarter; and also that the Reports of the Gas Examiners of the Parishes supplied by the Company, with respect to the illuminating power of the gas and its freedom from sulphuretted hydrogen, were, as usual, satisfactory. They conclude their Report with the announcement that the Profit and Loss Accounts amount to £11,103 2s 11d, out of which they recommend the Declaration of a Dividend for the half-year to 30th June last at the following rates, namely: at 6 per cent. per annum on the Preference Stock; at 7 per cent. per annum on the Ordinary Seven Per Cent. Stock; at 10 per cent. per annum on the Ordinary Ten Per Cent. Stock; and at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum on the New Ordinary Seven Per Cent. Shares—all less income tax. This will absorb £10,188 16s 10d, and leave a sum of £914 6s 1d to be carried forward to the profit of the next half year. Appended are various Statements of Account, from which we have gleaned the following interesting particulars:—The paid-up Capital of the Company includes the old Preference Stock (50,000), Ordinary Seven Per Cent. ditto (£125,000), and Ordinary Ten Per Cent. (£75,000), making together £250,000, to which must be added £29,874 12s of the New Ordinary Seven Per Cent. Stock, bringing the total up to £279,874 12s. Against this is set the expenditure till end of half year, amounting to £255,321 1s 8d, leaving a balance unexpended of £24,553 10s 4d. There were consumed during the period 19,883 tons of coal against 20,075 tons received, the quantity in store on 30th June being 11,443 tons, or somewhat in excess of the amount in store on 31st December preceding. The Reserve Fund amounts to £8,275 5s 10d, the Contingent Fund to £10,000, and the Insurance Fund to £1,894 2s 10d. On the Revenue Account there is a balance of £12,550 17s 4d, which has arisen thus. The sale of gas yielded £37,108 4s 3d, £638 2s 4d being for Meter Rental, and the rest for Gas Rental, and the sale of Residual Products £9,589 18s 1d, making a total receipt of £46,698 2s 4d. Against this must be set the following expenditure:—Manufacture of Gas £25,810 12s 5d, Distribution of Gas £2,537 18s 3d, Public Lamps £680 3s 11d, Rents, Rates, and Taxes 1,529 6s 7d, and Expenses of Management £2,798 0s 6d. These, with sundry other items, raise the aggregate of the expenditure to £34,147 5s, leaving, as we have just said, a balance of £12,550 17s 4d. From the General Balance Sheet it appears there is £18,616 7s 2d, that there is coal, &c., in stock and in transit to the value of £17,427 2s 9d, the sum of £13,117 0s 5d is due for Gas and Meter Rental, and £1,154 1s 9d for Residual Products.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

Goodwill, No. 711, Port Elizabeth.—The regular meeting of this Lodge was held in the Masonic Temple, on the 6th August. The chair was occupied by Bro. C. T. W. Monat, M.W. Dist.G.S.D., the following Officers, members, and Visitors being present, namely:—Bros. Jas. Brister Treas. acting as S.W., Geo. King J.W., W. Gilbert S.D., A. Guthrie J.D., T. Staines Secretary, and J. Newsome I.G.; S. R. White I.P.M., F. D. Deare P.M., I. C. Kennedy P.M., S. Bain D.D.G.M. of the East Province of South Africa, Rev. Dr. Wirgman, H. E. Tonks, E. R. Smythe, Ashburnham, Howell, Gay, Tunbridge, Forsaith, Gibbs, Sutter, Read P.M. and Probate, both of the Cape of Good Hope Lodge, No. 863, F. Holms. Bro. Constable P.M. 185 was only introduced, and proved himself to the satisfaction of the W.M.; but the latter having called upon him to retire during the ceremony of opening and the reading and confirmation of the minutes, Bro. Constable did not present himself again during the evening, though he was given to understand that if he insisted on his right to be present, the W.M. would waive all objection. The Lodge having been opened, and the minutes of the last regular meeting held on 2nd July, as well as those of the Emergency Meeting on the 23rd of that month, having been read and confirmed, Messrs G. N. Walker and C. V. Freeman were balloted for as candidates for initiation, and declared elected. Bros. F. Cheese, of No. 683, S. S. Hunter, of No. 281, and W. C. Johnson, No. 1359, were balloted for, and elected joining members. Bro. Wirgman was then raised to the sublime degree of M.M., the ceremony being ably and impressively rendered by the W.M. A motion by Bro. J. C. Kemsley P.M., to the effect that a P.M.'s jewel be presented to Bro. S. A. White I.P.M., was carried, and so was a motion by Bro. S. Bain P.M., that in accordance with the request of D.G. Lodge, the sum of five shillings per member on account be remitted, the amount being placed to the credit of the Lodge in the books of District Grand Lodge. The report of the Standing Committee on District Grand bye-laws was received in part, but sundry questions were raised, and referred back to the Committee for further information. The Auditor's report was received and adopted, after which Lodge was "called off," it being announced that labour would be resumed at 7.30 p.m. the following day, and the brethren adjourned to an informal banquet, a mere slight repast, the only incident of note in connection with this being the discussion among those present as to whether Bro. Constable was constitutionally right in his demand to be present at the opening of the Lodge and during the confirmation of the minutes. Many brethren objected to the action of the Worshipful Master, and applauded Bro. Constable for the course he had adopted. This was stated to be the second instance in which a visitor had retired, owing to the same cause. On the following evening the Lodge again assembled, and after the customary preliminaries, Messrs. G. W. Walker and C. V. Freeman were initiated into the mysteries of the first degree, the W.M., as on the day previous, performing the ceremony with his wonted ability. The Lodge was then closed. We shall offer a few remarks next week on the propriety of this system of distributing the business over two evenings.

MEETING OF THE LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

THE Lodge of Benevolence met on Wednesday evening, at Freemasons' Hall. The brethren present were Bros. J. M. Clabon (President), Joshua Nunn (Senior Vice President), James Brett (Junior Vice President), John Hervey (Grand Secretary), A. A. Pendlebury, W. Dodd, Col. Burney, E. P. Albert, H. Bartlett, Joseph Wright, H. Garrod, W. Stephens, C. F. Hogard, S. Rawson, W. Russell, W. Mann, W. Groome, Thomas Deane, W. Stuart, G. R. Shervill, G. P. Britten, John White, J. D. Matthews, H. Massey, and W. H. Cohen. There were only fourteen new petitions before the Lodge, and these were relieved with a total sum of £390. Bro. Garrod informed the Lodge that since the last meeting one of the elected members, Bro. Craven Procter Cobham, was unfortunately lost in the collision between the Princess Alice and the Bywell Castle. Lodge was then closed.

Lodge of St. Michael, No. 1273, Sittingbourne.—The Installation Meeting was held at the St. Michael's School-room, on Thursday, the 12th inst., when Bro. H. Tuff, the Senior Warden, was duly installed as W. Master. There was but little other business, so that when the minutes had been confirmed, and a candidate balloted for and approved (but not initiated), the installation ceremony was at once proceeded with. The Installing Master was the then Worshipful Master, and now Immediate P.M., Bro. Seale, who acquitted himself so thoroughly well as to gain the approval of every one present, and at the conclusion of the ceremony a vote of thanks was, at the instance of Bro. Goldfinch, heartily accorded to him for his efficient working. The W.M. invested the following as his Officers—Bros. H. G. Sutton S.W., J. M. Longhurst J.W., Geo. Payne Treas., T. Henham Sec., W. Challender S.D., A. F. Tucker J.D., J. Potter I.G., H. Black Dir. Ceremonies, R. Murrell Tyler. Other members of the Lodge present were:—Bros. B. Taylor I.P.M., W. J. Harris P.M., C. Burley P.M. Griffin P.M. 1050, H. Miskin S.D. 1449, M. Barnes W.M. 1050, J. Gambrell 1050, C. Tuff 184, J. P. Watts W.M. 158, T. Deane W.M. 77, J. Saffery J.W. 1089, W. H. Ruskine W.M. 184, J. R. Foord S.W. 503, A. Aubrey S.D. 127, E. Hogben 133, A. Sales 706, A. Barfield S.W. 35. The banquet was held at the Bull Hotel, and did credit to the host, Bro. J. Owens; he was not, however, present, owing to a recent bereavement. The Chaplain having said grace, the toast list was proceeded with, the Queen and the Craft, and M.W. Grand Master were briefly yet ably proposed by the W.M., and were of course heartily received. The third toast contained the names of the R.W. the Pro G. Master, the Deputy G.M., and the Grand Officers. In proposing this toast the W.M. said he must congratulate the Craft upon having such a Pro Grand Master. He had two or three times lately had to deal with most delicate matters, notably in the matter of the Grand Orient of France, and still more lately on a yet more delicate question, and he had proved himself able to grapple with emergencies. The qualities required in a ruler were gentleness and firmness, and these were found admirably combined in the Earl of Carnarvon. He spoke in high terms of the other Grand Officers, and passed a warm eulogy on the worth of Bro. Hill, one of the Grand Chaplains, whose name he coupled with the toast. The Rev. Bro. Hill, in an eloquent speech, said how proud he felt to find himself associated and named with such eminent men as those to whom reference had been made. Alluding to the able and thorough manner in which the affairs of Grand Lodge were conducted, he remarked that unless men came well to the front, it were better they should not come forward at all. He said it so much depended upon the chiefs doing their work thoroughly and well, whether the other officials came up to their work; a little laxity at head quarters was an excellent excuse for laxity elsewhere. It was an honour to Masons to have such men to guide their destinies. We had also the sympathies of our Queen, who was the daughter of a Mason, and who had three sons who were Masons. The reverend Chaplain then alluded to and reproduced some of the observations which had fallen from the Earl of Carnarvon on the occasion of the inauguration of the Lord Falkland Memorial. The favour of serving under these distinguished men, he told the brethren, he owed not to himself, but to the popularity he had obtained amongst them. Whether he deserved that popularity or not, he did not know, but he intended if possible to keep it. Viscount Holmesdale's name was next proposed as Provincial Grand Master, and very cordially received. The W.M. believed that, as a Prov. G.M., he had no superior, and very few, if any, equals; and this, he thought, must be the opinion of all who had witnessed the excellent way in which he had conducted the business at the late meeting at Canterbury, the most successful ever held in the Province. This toast was followed by that of the Deputy Prov. G.M. and the Prov. Grand Officers, the name of Bro. Payne, one of the Grand Officers, and Treasurer of this Lodge, being associated with it. The W.M., in giving the toast, said that the Lodge owed a great debt of gratitude to Bro. Payne. He was a man who was always at his post. Indeed, he thought he might almost say that Bro. Payne had never failed to attend Lodge; at any rate, he was sure he had always been there unless prevented by sickness or some very pressing emergency. They had, moreover, to thank him as their Treasurer for having so long taken care of their deficit for them, although he was glad to say that the balance was now in their favour. He thought too that never had an honour been more justly deserved than that which the Prov. Grand Lodge had lately bestowed upon him. Bro. Payne in a suitable response urged upon the younger brethren the necessity of regular attendance, especially if they held office. He made a touching allusion to the serious illness of Bro. Wood, a P.M. of the Lodge, for whom he begged the consideration and prayers of the Lodge. He concluded by making a brief financial statement, showing how the Lodge had, nine years ago, started in debt, and how that, by judicious and careful management, they now had a very fair balance in the hands. Owing to the rather awkward train-service, some of the toasts which followed had to be hurried over, in order that that of the Visitors might be reached before they were compelled to leave. The toast of the W.M. was of course enthusiastically received. To this he made an able response, and in the course of his remarks referred to the sad catastrophes which had lately happened, one of them in their very midst. Relief, he said was one of the great principles of the Order, and he appealed to the brethren then present to contribute their mites in aid of the sufferers from the foundering of the Princess Alice, and asked them to respond as heartily to this appeal as they had to the last toast. The sum of £6 was at once collected, which the W.M. promised to send to the Mansion House Relief Fund, as a contribution from the Lodge of St. Michael and its Visitors. The W.M. next proposed the health of the Installing Master the I.P.M., whom he complimented upon the zeal and assiduity with which he had performed his duty during the period he had filled the chair, as well as upon his crowning effort in so successfully installing his successor. It gave him great pleasure to pin upon his breast the jewel which the Lodge, in recognition of his worth, had voted him. The reception of the toast proved that the brethren heartily appreciated Bro. Seale's successful efforts. After Bro. Seale had responded, the W.M. gracefully proposed the Visitors, and coupled with that toast the name of Bro. Barfield, of Lodge No. 35, who had come all the way from the Isle of Wight to do him honour. Bro. Barfield, in reply, regretted that he had been, until that day, a perfect stranger to every one present, except their W.M. He had been, he said mixed up with Masonry for 35 years. He compared Masonry as it was then with Masonry as it is now, and mentioned, in proof of its improvement, that the amount bestowed last year upon charitable purposes reached nearly £40,000! Its numbers had lately received vast augmentation, but he was afraid that the bounds were overstepped in this respect. He feared some Lodges showed hardly sufficient discrimination in the selection of members, and judging from his own experience, he thought this was particularly the case in some London Lodges. In spite, however, of this fear, he could not help feeling that this was doing a certain amount of good, for he was sure that Masonry would tend to make every man better. He complimented the Lodge upon their working, remarking that he had never seen better in a country Lodge. The Past Masters of the Lodge were next toasted, for whom Bro. Penfold responded, and the toast of the Officers of the Lodge, proposed by Bro. Harris, brought the list to a close. The music was under the direction of Bro. Aubrey, and during the evening Bro. Arthur Thomas, an excellent tenor, sang some capital songs. Altogether, the Lodge has every reason to congratulate itself upon so successful a meeting.

Royal Jubilee Chapter.—The usual September meeting was held at the Horns Tavern, Kennington, on Thursday, the 12th inst. Ex. Comp. T. Foxall M.E.Z. presided, with Ex. Comp. Durkin H., Ex Comp. Stephens P.Z. acting J., Comps. J. Nunn Scribe E., Thurston P.S., Salter 1st Asst. S., Strobe 2nd Asst. S.; Jaceard, H. Lovegrove, Dunn, Laskey P.Z., Dodson P.Z., &c. Comp. Gluckstein P.Z., Faith Chapter, was the only visitor. The Companions appeared in Masonic mourning, owing to the death of Comp. Harvey J. since the last meeting. The candidate for exaltation not being in attendance, the election of Officers was proceeded with, and the result of the ballot showed that the following were elected to office for the ensuing year:—Comps. T. Durkin M.E.Z., J. Nunn H., Lovett J., T. Foxall P.Z. Scribe E., Dunn Scribe N., H. Lovegrove P.S., Potter Janitor. Since the formation of the Chapter Comp. Nunn has been most energetic as Scribe E., and the Companions were unanimous in electing him to the second chair. At the conclusion of the business of the convocation, the Companions adjourned to banquet.

Domatic Chapter of Instruction.—To those of our readers who enjoy, and can appreciate, a couple of hours in Royal Arch Masonry we say,—Attend the Domatic Chapter of Instruction, held at the Union Tavern, Aire-street, Regent-street. Apart from listening to the ceremony of exaltation, invariably well rendered, we have had the pleasure on several occasions of hearing some of the clauses of the sections, or one of the beautiful lectures with which this part of Masonry abounds, worked in a manner that reflects credit upon the able teachers of Capitular Freemasonry who so frequently attend this Chapter. The meetings are held on Wednesdays, at 7.30, all the year round, and seldom less than twenty Companions assemble. On Wednesday last, the business consisted of the ceremony of exaltation, a portion of the first section of the first lecture, the election of Officers for the ensuing fortnight, and the election as members of Comps. Willing jun., and Douglas (Standard Theatre). Amongst the Companions we noticed Comps. Bull, Haslett, Cameron, J. Boyd, Manders, Belfrage, J. J. Boyd, Robinson, &c., &c. The P.S., whose name we were unable to catch, did his work in a very efficient manner. We understand there has been but two blank nights since the resuscitation of the Chapter some three years since. We wish it every success.

Wandsworth Lodge, No. 1044. — A meeting of this prosperous Lodge was held on Wednesday, at the Spread Eagle Hotel, Wandsworth. Bro. H. R. Jones W.M. presided, and was supported by the following Officers and brethren:—Bros. W. A. Morgan S.W., Alf. Newens J.W., H. Wilson Treas., J. Frost Sec., J. B. Walker S.D., W. J. Huntley J.D., S. C. Landon D.C., J. J. Holland I.G., J. Wardroper Steward, J. G. Carter P.M., E. H. Boldy P.M., P. Cooke P.M., F. H. Newens P.M., C. W. Gray P.M., Geo. Howick P.M., F. Reed R. Walker, P. V. Denham, G. Clark, John Sanders, G. W. Smith, W. J. Springett, H. F. Goodchild, George Fortescue, R. Neal, F. Knipler, and A. A. Denham. The following Visitors honoured the Lodge with their attendance:—Bros. Wildey Wright (the eminent barrister), Dr. Joseph Oakman, R. H. Smith, Geo. Brooks, Jas. Wright, A. Mason, T. F. K. Smith, and A. B. Morgan. The Lodge having been opened, the usual formal business was proceeded with, Bro. P. V. Denham was then raised to the degree of M.M., and Bro. John Sanders passed to the second degree. The installation of Bro. W. A. Morgan as W.M. was then proceeded with, the installing Master being Bro. Boldy. At the conclusion of the business a banquet was provided, and served in the most recherché style, complete satisfaction being expressed at Bro. Dougherty's catering. The usual toasts were given from the chair, and were responded to by the brethren in a truly Masonic manner. The W.M. elect justly praised the retiring W.M., Bro. H. R. Jones, for his abilities. The toast of the Visitors was eloquently replied to by Bros. Wildey Wright, Dr. Oakman, and other brethren.

A. Perceval was a candidate for passing, and he having exhibited sufficient knowledge to warrant his advancement, received the benefits of the second degree. Bro. Fredk. Brown then ably completed his year's work by installing his successor, performing this task in an eminently satisfactory way. After Bro. Webb had received the salutations of the brethren, he appointed his Officers:—C. J. Perceval Senior Warden, Wyatt Junior Warden, John Newton P.M. Secretary, E.G. Legge (W.M. 1196) Treasurer, Beedell Senior Deacon, Knill Junior Deacon, Carr D.C., Large Steward, Jones I.G., Verry Tyler. Bro. The offer was readily accepted by the members. The report of the auditors was adopted, and the proposition—"The Committee having made arrangements with Messrs. Bertram and Roberts, propose that in future the meetings of the Lodge take place on the second Saturdays of the months of April, May, June, July, and September, and that the bye-laws be altered in accordance therewith"—having been discussed, it received the approval of the Lodge. However, the next meeting will be held on the second Saturday in October, as the minutes for this new arrangement will then have to be confirmed. The Lodge was then closed. The banquet was capitally served by Bros. Bertram and Roberts, and the Toast List—an ample one—was fully honoured. We regret the pressure on our space prevents our reporting the speeches, which were highly complimentary, and much appreciated by those who listened to them.

The Lodge was then resumed, and Bros. Pigot, Shipley and Bacca were unanimously elected members of the Lodge. Bro. Hunter proposed, and Bro. Simmons seconded, that a vote of thanks to Bro. Kidder be recorded on the minutes for the able manner in which he had worked the ceremony of installation. This being carried unanimously, Bro. Kidder briefly replied. Alluding to the dreadful calamity which had happened on the Thames, the W.M. said it had been suggested to him that it would be an appropriate way of marking the re-assembling of the Lodge, if they exercised on behalf of those who had suffered the leading characteristic of Freemasonry, namely, Charity. He therefore appealed to the brethren present to aid him in collecting a subscription, to be handed to the Fund now being raised on behalf of the sufferers by this awful catastrophe. The result of this appeal was that the Hon. Secretary was enabled to forward the sum of two guineas to the Fund. Bro. Rowley was elected W.M. for the ensuing week, and appointed his officers in rotation. The Lodge was then closed.

THE KILMARNOCK BURNS MONUMENT.

LAYING OF THE MEMORIAL STONE.

FOR some weeks past the usually quiet town of Kilmarnock has been in a fever of excitement over the laying of the memorial stone of the monument to Robert Burns—an event which took place on Saturday last in the presence of assembled thousands. Considering the poet's connection with Kilmarnock, it has often been wondered why it lagged so far behind in the desire to do honour to one whom, it was known, many of the residents of Kilmarnock loved and admired. It was there that the first edition of his works was printed, and it is there where the only full collection of all the editions of his works is to be found, and that, too, in the house of Mr. James M'Kie. With all these advantages, it was not till the movement for a statue to Burns in Glasgow had been carried to completion that it occurred to the minds of some of the Kilmarnock gentlemen to remove the blot which had too long lain on the fair fame of their town. At the Anniversary of Burns, held on the 26th of January last year, it was agreed to have a statue of the poet erected in some suitable place in the town; and in order to have the matter gone into in a practical manner, an influential committee was appointed to carry out the proposal—Mr. Turnbull, the president of the Burns Club, being appointed convener, and Messrs. James M'Kie and James Rose joint secretaries. Thus begun, the movement was not allowed to lag, for within a month £614 had been subscribed, and in April models were asked. As the amount then placed at the disposal of the committee (£1282) exceeded all their expectations, it was decided to have an ornamental building erected which should contain a marble statue of the poet. The Kay trustees, who had recently acquired a large portion of ground from the Duke of Portland for a public park, generously offered to allow the proposed monument to be erected within the grounds. Plans were then asked for, and at a meeting on the 14th of December last Mr. W. G. Stevenson, of Edinburgh, was chosen as the sculptor for the statue, and the design of Mr. Robert Ingram, architect, was selected for the monument. The total cost was estimated at £2300, and the amount at the disposal of the committee is £2260, and they are hopeful that the few hundred pounds which will yet be required to complete the memorial will speedily be forthcoming. The site chosen is the best in the neighbourhood, being on the highest point in the park, and commanding an extensive view of the land of Burns. Arran is seen on the one side, and London hill on the other, while to the north-west are the ruins of Dean Castle, and on the opposite side is the Wallace monument. The style of the monument itself is baronial, of French Gothic design. It will consist of two storeys and a tower—the entire height something like 75 feet. The basement is likely to be utilised as a dwelling-house and offices. Two flights of stairs will lead up to a platform and balcony, where, facing the onlookers, is an alcove of fifteen feet high. In this the statue, which will be eight feet from foot to head, will be placed, and, the sides being open, a walk of three feet wide goes round. Immediately behind, or in the interior of the monument, is a large room which will be used as a museum of relics connected with the poet. A flight of stairs leads from this to a balustrade, which will form a promenade—the stair continuing to the top of the tower. As to the statue itself, it is being cut by Mr. Stevenson from a block of Sicilian marble, weighing about nine tons. The design shows the figure to be in a thoughtful position. The poet is represented as standing firmly on the right leg, the left thrown easily in advance. The right hand holds a pencil, the left a book, which rests on the trunk of a tree. The face is looking to the right, giving the spectator from the front of the figure the view of the face best known by the Naysmith portrait, from which it is taken. The tight-fitting coat and knee-breeches give full opportunity for the display of the design.

On Saturday, flags and banners floated from all conceivable places, and several arches of drapery were hung across the streets. Business was almost entirely suspended, and for three or four hours the shops were closed. The railway company gave extra facilities for visitors; but it was found that the modest calculations of the railway officials were far beneath the requirements, and under these circumstances their resources were not a little taxed to convey all the intending excursionists to Kilmarnock. Fortunately, the weather was favourable, and from an early hour in the forenoon, the principal streets were crowded with a dense mass of people. All available points from which a view of the procession could be obtained, were eagerly seized an hour or two before the time. At half-past two o'clock Provost Sturrock and the magistrates and town council, along with Mr. J. Fortescue Harrison, M.P., Mr. Graham Somervell of Sorn, convener of the county; Mr. Henry Leck of Hollybush, Mr. P. Comyn Macgregor, and others assembled in the Town Hall. The Provincial Grand Lodge met in the school-room, Dundonald-road, under the presidency of Mr. R. W. Cochran-Patrick R.W.P.D.G.M., who was supported by W. Ralston Patrick Substitute P.G.M., William Kennedy R.W.M. of St. John's, Maybole, as P.G.S.W., James Neilson R.W.M. of St. John's, Kilwinning, as P.G.J.W., Robert Wylie as P.G. Secretary, and Rev. Mr. Inglis, Kilmaurs, as P.G. Chaplain. In the meantime the various trades intending to take a part in the procession were gathering in the public recreation grounds, Dundonald-road, where they were marshalled in order by Captain Anderson, of the Ayrshire Volunteers. The Masonic brethren, of whom about 2,000 were present, were being drawn up by their own Grand Marshal, Mr. W. Bryce. Order was gradually evoked out of confusion, and when it was announced, about half-past three, that the Prov. Grand Lodge was ready, a start was at once made. The route was by St. Marnock-street, King-street, Duke-street, London-road, and Holehouse-road, to the public Park. When the head of the procession reached the Town Hall the gentlemen who had met there, at once took their places, and the body then moved on.

One of the most interesting features of the procession was a body of carters, upwards of a hundred of whom were mounted on strong, well-built, and gaily-decorated horses. Each man wore a Kilmarnock bonnet, decked with blue ribbons, and he had also a blue rosette on the breast of his coat. The appearance of the cavalcade as it passed along the streets was very imposing, and the hearty cheers which greeted the men showed how much their efforts had been appreciated. Another noted group was the Foresters. Each Lodge was preceded by three mounted men dressed in the picturesque garb of the Craft, having the bow slung over the shoulder, with the quiver by the side. The joiners also caused a little sensation by the representation of actual work. A lorry had been fitted up with a double bench, and there two men in white aprons carefully planed away at a piece of wood, and seemed to be so intent on their work as to be altogether ignorant of the panorama of which they formed a part, or of the thousands of eager eyes under whose gaze they were passing. There was one class, however, which, though small, could not escape notice. All the trades had flags and banners, on which were appropriate mottoes, while a few displayed working models of their handicraft. Almost hid in the general mass was a small band of chimney sweeps, whose presence would have passed unnoticed had it not been for the banner which they carried, on which was inscribed in large letters, "By dirt we live." The appearance of the men and the lads did not bear out the motto, as for once, at least, they had cleaned all the dirt away from themselves, and come out like the others to honour the Ayrshire bard. It is impossible to notice in detail all the component parts of the procession, but it may not be out of place to refer to the presence among the Freemasons of the Lodge 133—St. David's of Tarbolton. This is the native Lodge of the poet, which from some cause lay dormant for 42 years, and was only resuscitated by the Manchline people in January of last year, in order that it might take a part in the Burns demonstration in Glasgow. Alongside of this Lodge was 135—the St. James Kilwinning, of Tarbolton—which the poet joined on his leaving the St. David, and in which he occupied the highest post. It is estimated that about 4,000 people took part in the procession, and when all were gathered together there could scarcely be fewer than 10,000 persons in the Park. Indeed, it was remarked that such a day had not been seen in Kilmarnock since 1832, when the Reform agitation stirred the feelings of the people. An idea of the number in the procession may be gathered from the fact that it took 40 minutes to pass a given point; and before all were placed in position it was about half-past five o'clock in the afternoon.

As soon as the members of the Provincial Grand Lodge had taken their places on the building,

Mr. Turnbull called on the Depute Provincial Grand Master to lay the memorial stone of the monument. Nearly fifty-eight years ago Sir Alexander Boswell, the P.G.W. of the day, laid the memorial stone of the monument to the poet on the banks of the Doon, and it was in no spirit of rivalry, but from a well-founded desire that, on a site overlooking so many scenes familiar to the poet's daily presence, in a town where he met and enjoyed the fellowship of many warm friends, and where his poems were first given to the world, it was right and proper that his memory and his genius should be fittingly recognised and perpetuated. Mr. Turnbull concluded by presenting Mr. Cochran-Patrick with a handsome silver trowel for the purpose of laying the stone.

After the tune Old Hundredth had been played by the band of the Artillery Volunteers, the P.G. Chaplain offered up prayer, and then the Provincial Grand Secretary placed a bottle in the cavity of the stone, after which the stone was laid with all due Masonic honours.

The articles contained in the bottle included a short sketch of the monument, alphabetical list of subscribers, copy of Burns's poems, copies of various newspapers, the current coins of the realm, the standard measure of one foot and the standard weight of 1 lb. A brass plate was placed above the cavity, and on it was the following inscription:—"By the favour of Almighty God, on the fourteenth day of September, Anno Domini Eighteen Hundred and Seventy-Eight, and the era of Masonry 5878, and in the Forty-second year of the reign of our beloved Sovereign, Victoria First, the memorial stone of this monument, erected by public subscription in honour of the genius of Robert Burns, Scotland's national poet, was laid by R. Wm. Cochran-Patrick, Esq., of Woodside, Beith, Right Worshipful Depute Provincial Grand Master for Ayrshire (attended by numerous Masonic Lodges), according to the ancient usages of Masonry."
