The Depute Provincial Grand Master then said—Nearly three generations of men have lived and died since the mortal remains of Robert Burns were laid in their last resting place on the banks of winding Nith. But though "fate has snapped the brittle thread" of his eventful life, and removed his bodily presence from us, and death has silenced for ever the tuneful voice which delighted a listening world, the event of to-day shows that his genius is still as much honoured and admired in his native land as it was when in life's full vigour, in the plenitude of his genius, "in glory and in joy" "he followed his plough upon the mountain side." Time, the great destroyer of merely mortal works, "has laid his palsied hand in vain" on our minstrel's strain, and the holly of the Scottish muse is as bright now as when Coila first garlanded the poetic brow of her inspired bard in the "auld clay biggin'." He whose memory the people of Kilmarnock have worthily commemorated in this magnificent monument was essentially the national bard of Scotland and of the Scots. Of all the illustrious names which form the muster-roll of the poets of our land not one is more familiarly known in its homesteads, none so dearly treasured in the hearts of its people as that of the Ayrshire ploughman. Nor can we wonder at it. His muse, "homely in attire" though she is, has conferred a deathless fame on the everyday incidents and characters of humble, honest Scottish life. All that goes to make up the nationality of a people—their old associations, their common lives, their familiar ways, their modes of thought, their peculiarities of expression—are all immortalised in the simple Scottish lays of Burns. To use his own often quoted words—"The poetic muse of his country found him at the plough and bid him sing the loves and joys, the rural scenes and rural pleasures of his native country in his native tongue." But he sang these homely themes as they were never sung before. It is one of the best proofs of the greatness and originality of his genius that he borrowed his inspiration from what he saw around. No matter how intrinsically worthless the subject might be, he at once invested it with undying interest. He has married to immortal verse the "Wee, modest, crimson-tipped flower," the daisy, the "cowran, timorous beastie," the mouse, and has mourned Tam Samson as Cypris wept for her dead Adonis, as Thyrsis wailed for Daphnis, or the nymphs their lost Lycidas. As classic poets have immortalised the festivals of ancient time, he in undying strains has celebrated the rustic sports of Hallowe'en; and his description of the quiet close of the labourer's week of toil under the cottage roof-tree is peerless in the annals of poetic literature. Such were his subjects, and the scenes were worthy of the song. To us standing here to-day his works possess a special interest. We are in the very district which was so dear to him. The "fair nature" he loved so well is familiar to us. The hills and woods, the sweeping vales and foaming floods, the plains and fells, the red-brown moors, the burnie whimpling through the glen—we know them all. The rising sun still glints with glorious light o'er the Galston moors as it did on the "simmer Sunday morn" of Mauchline's "Holy Fair;" the moon yet glowers on the distant Cumnock hills, as she did near a hundred years ago, when the poet sang of Death's complaint against John Hornbrook. The banks and braes of bonnie Doon are as lovely now as when they met the poet's eye, and the yellow woods are waving yet "o'er Lugar's winding stream." The well-fed Irvine and "auld hermit Ayr" no longer flow unsung, but like the yellow waves of Tiber, or the "honoured flood of Arethusa and smooth sliding Mincius," are "crowned with vocal reeds." Nor is there anything in these simple scenes to take them of themselves out of the run of everyday life. Davie, the "ace of hearts," the "odd, kind chiel about Muirkirk," winsome Willie, honest Tam o'Shanter, and Souter Johnnie, "his ancient, trusty, drouthy cronie," were decent, honest Ayrshire men; and the fair ones, whose varied charms he sang so often and so well, were simple, honest, bonnie Ayrshire lasses. Taken thus by themselves, there is nothing sensational in the subject, the scenes, or the actors in the poetry of Burns. But the spark of Nature's fire which glowed so brightly in the bosom of the poet has made them renounced all over the wide world, and touched the heart of every age for all time. The influence of the poetry of Burns can be directly traced to three causes. These are, first, his own natural gifts, common to him with the great minds of every age; there was next the fact that he spoke of what all his fellow-men knew in language which they all understood; and there was, lastly, the circumstance that this combination of lofty genius with the common objects of rural life was at that time and for this country original. To find any parallel to the case of Burns we must go to a far distant land, and to an age separated from the present by a long interval of time. Under the sunny sky of Syracuse, nearly three centuries before the birth of Christ, Theocritus and his school immortalised the rural life of his age with all the natural freshness and originality of true genius. But Burns borrowed nothing from them—I do not suppose that he knew of their existence, and all that Burns has done is entirely due to his own merit. It is impossible to separate the poetry of Burns from Burns the poet. We are all familiar with the circumstances of his career, from the first burst of his fame in his "glorious youthful prime" to the last sad scenes—"the tears all and the fears all of dim, declining age." Born in a comparatively humble sphere of life, without any of the advantages which high education and refined culture could have given—gifted by Nature with the most splendid genius, strong passions, and a morbidly sensitive pride—exposed on every side to temptation—at one time caressed by the world of learning and fashion; at another neglected, misrepresented, forgotten, almost in bodily want—it is not surprising that the lash of his bitter satire sometimes fell where it was not deserved, that he wrote things which had better been left unwritten, and that he did things unworthy of his nobler nature. No one was more sensible of all this than the poet himself. We cannot excuse what must be condemned, but we may pity and forget. There is too much in his career which ought to be a warning rather than an example. But with all this the influence of the poetry of Burns is much more for good than for evil. For one who has been made worse by reading his works tens of thousands have been made better; and as has been often said of another great name in literature, if everything to which the most captious critic could object were obliterated from his works, much would remain which would only perish with the language in which it is written. I have now, in the name of the Provincial Grand Lodge, and of the numerous body of Masons from other parts of Scotland, to thank you for the kind welcome which you have given to us, and for asking us to take a part in this ceremony. It is the privilege and the pleasure of the Masonic body to take part in laying foundation and memorial stones of public buildings which are designed for good ends; but I venture to think that on no occasion did they come forward more heartily or with greater pleasure than to-day, because he whose memory you are commemorating was not only an honour to his country and an honour to Ayrshire, but we honour him in the Masonic Craft as a brother of our own. I have also to thank you for the handsome present you have given me, and I can only say I shall honour and treasure it as one of the most pleasing memorials that I have. I may just take this opportunity of stating that the mallet which it was my privilege to use to-day was the very one which the poet himself, when presiding over the Sons of Light in the Lodge of Tarbolton, used upwards of twenty times.

Provost Sturrock, on behalf of the town of Kilmarnock and the subscribers to the monument, thanked the R.W. Depute Provincial Grand Master and the other members of the mystic tie for coming in such numbers to lay the memorial stone of the monument. Probably no man had so impressed his countrymen as Robert Burns. He need hardly even except the great magician of the north. If, however, any proof were needed that the genius of Burns was still appreciated by his countrymen, he would only point to that great gathering and to the demonstration. Purists there were, and purists there would ever be, who would detract from the reputation of the poet and defame his name. He did not envy these men. Burns was great on account of his genius; and the most of those present he thought would agree with him in sinking any little difference of opinion as to the frailties that beset him. All mankind had their frailties, and he needed not at this time of day to apologise for those of Burns. When this monument was originated twelve months ago in the town of Kilmarnock an appeal was made to the gentlemen round about, and a hearty response was made. Though it might be invidious to mention names, he could not but allude to the handsome subscription of Colonel Alexander, M.P. for South Ayrshire. The Provost concluded by expressing the hope that the monument would be worthy of the name and fame of Burns, and that it would be a shrine to which many would gladly pay a visit.

The National Anthem was then played by the band, and the proceedings terminated.

The procession then formed in reverse order, and marched back to the town, the route chosen on this occasion being by the Cemetery road, Willie Mair's Brae, High-street, Union-street, and Portland-street to the Cross, where they dismissed.

In the evening a public dinner was held in the George Hotel, when Provost Sturrock occupied the chair, and Mr. Turnbull discharged the duties of croupier.

RED CROSS OF CONSTANTINE.

RESUMPTION OF LABOUR.

THE time is at hand when the majority of our Lodges will be once again in the full swing of work, and the moment seems not inopportune for offering a few words of advice. We may imagine that we are about entering on a new year, and in such case a review of the past, as well as a close scrutiny of the prospect before us is desirable. We do not for one moment suppose we shall be in a position to offer much, if anything, in the way of novelty. One Masonic year is remarkably like another, and it is only occasionally that anything happens of a very distinctive character. It is almost certain, therefore, that what we say in this instance we have said again and again in former articles. Still, at the risk of being thought tautologous, we must traverse the same route again, and it may be that our remarks will meet the eye of sundry who have not had any previous opportunity of studying our views. And, after all, we shall not be singular in this matter; indeed, our most learned authorities find themselves under the necessity of repeating many times the advice it is their duty to offer, and therefore we need not be ashamed that we labour under the same necessity as they do. Were we to compare the addresses which a consecrating officer feels it his duty to make when constituting this and that new Lodge, we should notice in them all a strong family likeness. There would be the same impressive advice to the Master and his Officers to be circumspect in the discharge of their duty, the same caution to brethren generally to be careful whom they admit into the Fraternity, and the same urgent recommendation of our noble Charitable Institutions to the hearty support of Craftsmen. Points of this description lose none of their importance because it is found necessary to urge them again and again; at all events, it is far better to indulge in this repetition of the practical than to pen learned essays on the abstruser portion of Masonic study. But let us address ourselves without further preface to the duty of the moment. We have said that in a short time most of our Lodges will be once again in full working order. It will be admitted on all hands that in order to ensure a continuance of that prosperity which has attended most of our Lodges, and especially during the last half dozen years, those only should be appointed to rule and govern them who are willing and anxious to discharge, to the best of their ability, the responsibilities of their several positions. In particular the Master, who has it in his power to make or mar the fortunes of the Lodge he has been chosen to preside over, must be a model of tact and courtesy. He should be able to work the ceremonies creditably. He need not be a very learned man, but he should make it a point of acquiring the requisite knowledge of the duties of his position. It does not add to his dignity, or the estimation in which he should be held by his fellow-members, if they find he is obliged every now and then to have recourse to the kind offices of one of his Past Masters to help him through his work, or that, when a new candidate for Masonic light presents himself for initiation, he is under the necessity of vacating the chair, in order that some well-informed elder of the Lodge may perform the ceremony. It sounds somewhat ridiculous, to say the least, for the head of a Lodge to have his work done vicariously, when a brother has made such progress in our science in Freemasonry as to be deemed worthy of being admitted into the mysteries of a higher degree, and he who has reached the highest position of all, is himself unable to impart the additional knowledge. It is very pleasant, no doubt, for a brother to write W.M., and P.M., after his name, and it may be to carry on his breast three or four jewels commemorative of the valuable services he has rendered in his capacity of Master; but the least that a man can do who aspires to the highest position his brethren can confer upon him, is to qualify himself for the regular discharge of his functions. It is the reverse of complimentary to the brethren who choose him for their ruler when a Master in no wise concerns himself about the work he will have to fulfil, and fancies that all that is required of him is, to preside genially in the banqueting-hall. Even a novice in the art of Masonry will quickly discover for himself the difference between a Lodge which is governed by a thoroughly competent Master, and that which is presided over by one who prefers doing his duty by deputy. Equally important is it that the Officers generally should be appointed for their competency and readiness to do what is required of them. The Warden who looks forward to the day when he himself shall be installed in the chair of his Lodge will best show his worth by acquiring a practical knowledge of his duties as Warden. That is the least he should do, for if he is negligent in the inferior office, is there any probability he will be more considerate, and more regardful of the superior and more exacting duties of the chair? Similarly those who fill the minor offices should make a point of attending and doing what is required of them in as perfect a manner as possible. There is the old maxim, which is none the less deserving of our attention because it happens to be an ancient one, that what is worth doing at all is worth doing well, and we hold that no Lodge should elect a Master who thinks it too much trouble to discharge his duties, and no Master should appoint as Officers brethren who will not make the slightest sacrifice in respect of the time and trouble required of them in order to do their work thoroughly. Let us next say a few words as to the admission of new members, a matter in which it is impossible to carry caution to excess. A single unpleasant member may destroy the harmony of a Lodge, and therefore, it is impossible to be over-careful whom we receive into it. Too often, we fear, the proposal of candidates is done hastily, and without due inquiry. Indeed, the inquiry in many Lodges is merely a formal matter, to which few, if any, pay the slightest attention. Yet the Constitutions are very precise on the subject. "No person shall be made a mason without a regular proposition at one lodge, and a ballot at the next regular lodge; which shall not take place unless his name, addition or profession, and place of abode, shall have been sent to all the members in the summons." If this law is observed literally, as it should be, there is ample opportunity for due inquiry to be made into the character and antecedents of a candidate for initiation, but it is, we believe, a common practice in many Lodges to abridge the interval prescribed by this law, and a few days' notice is all the Lodge gets, that Mr. A.B.C. proposed by Bro. S. and seconded by Bro. Z. will be balloted for, and if elected, initiated into the mysteries of the Craft. There is no reason why this practice should ever be adopted, for the Constitutions make due provision for any real emergency that is likely to arise. Let members be circumspect as to those they take upon themselves to recommend for admission. Let them bear in mind that a recommendation involves a certain amount of responsibility, and in order to impress this on their minds let Masters of Lodges take care that the law is strictly enforced on all occasions, and our Society will be all the better for the circumspection. It is not necessary we should be a numerous, in order to be a respectable body. On the contrary, by extending the privileges of Freemasonry to all applicants indiscriminately, we run a good chance of lowering its character.

A third point on which it is desirable we should offer a few remarks is, that of the expenditure of Lodge Funds. We are not of those who think the expenditure of every shilling should be narrowly scanned, but the distance between niggardliness and a lavish expenditure of money is very considerable. Seeing that one of the chief objects of Freemasonry is the promotion of good fellowship, there is every reason why the members of a Lodge, when they have accomplished the labours of the evening, should devote a few hours to enjoyment round the festive board; but this can be done at a moderate cost quite as well as by an extravagant outlay. It is no doubt a very fine thing to sit down to banquets at a guinea or more a head, but we question if half of those who partake of them would not prefer a quieter and less showy kind of "feed." They could have "the feast of reason and the flow of soul" all the same, and the Lodge Funds would be all the better. Or, in cases where each member pays his share of the outlay, let the older ones do all they possibly can to discourage extravagance. The Lodge will prosper none the more because its members discuss periodically a costly array of viands, and still more costly wines, while the less pretentious dinner will enable it to be more liberal in its support of our Institutions. And this brings us to the fourth and last point on which we feel it is desirable to offer a few words of advice. Our Charities have increased in magnitude during these latter years, while the demands on their resources have increased likewise. They depend almost entirely for support on the voluntary subscriptions of the brethren, and the amount which must be raised annually in order to keep them in their present state of efficiency represents not far short of the interest on a million of Government Stock. We have had an instance this year of the effect which a depressed state of public affairs must have on the amounts raised at the Festivals of these Institutions, for though the aggregate of the three amounts is eminently satisfactory when we compare them with the totals subscribed as recently as four or five years ago, still there was a very considerable falling-off as compared with the results achieved in 1877, when over £35,000 was collected by the Boards of Stewards, while this year the amount is under £30,000. Yet the number who are in receipt of the benefits of these contributions is greater than ever, and the need for a more liberal support is proportionately increased. We all know how hard the Secretaries work, and how they go everywhere and do everything they can to secure subscriptions, but we fear there are not a few Lodges who might be a great deal more responsive than they are, while in the case of others no response whatever is made, be the appeals never so urgent. Here, then, is ample room for improvement, and we trust that as our Lodges are now resuming their duties, Worshipful Masters and other brethren of influence will exert themselves still more energetically in advocating the cause of these Institutions. They will never have reason to repent them of their zeal in such a cause.

ADJOURNMENT OF LODGES.

WE promised in our report of a meeting of the Lodge of Goodwill, No. 711, Port Elizabeth, Cape of Good Hope, to offer a few remarks on the practice which is apparently of occasional, if not of common, occurrence, of calling off the Lodge for refreshment and completing the tale of business set down for the gathering on the day following; or in other words of adjourning the Lodge for twenty-four hours, when the agenda paper is too heavy to allow of all the business being got through at one sitting. The subject has been noticed in these columns once before, and we believe there is little doubt whatever that this adjournment of a Lodge cannot be justified. As was pointed out at the time of our former reference, a Lodge can only be adjourned till the time of its next regular meeting, and there is, fortunately, a precedent which settles the question. At the Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge held on 3rd September 1856, it being found impossible to transact the whole of the business, a motion adjourning Grand Lodge to the 1st October was proposed and carried, and on the latter day the brethren met together as arranged. However, it was argued by many of those present that any such adjournment was illegal. No settlement of the disputed point was then arrived at, but on the question being referred to the late Earl of Zetland, his Lordship convened a Grand Lodge of Emergency for 19th November, and gave his decision in the following terms. "It appears that at the September Quarterly Communication the Grand Lodge passed a resolution of adjournment to the 1st of October, which, I am decidedly of opinion, was an unprecedented and illegal act; and consequently whatever proceedings took place at such adjourned meeting are null and void. In looking over the minutes of Grand Lodge, it appears to me that the phrase to adjourn, when used with respect to Grand Lodge, is precisely analagous to its application to the House of Commons. In that House the question is 'That the House do now adjourn,' which only means until the next legal day of meeting, and it is adjourned accordingly to that day and no other. In like manner, when the Grand Lodge adjourns, it adjourns to the next Quarterly Communication, and to no intermediate time. I am prepared to stand by my own decision on this point, that when Grand Lodge adjourns, it adjourns to the next legal day, unless a Grand Lodge of Emergency be called, at which no business can be transacted except such as appears upon the circular by which it is convened." The above will be found at pp 312-313 of Oliver's Masonic Jurisprudence, and may be taken as our guide for the conduct of private Lodges. The Bye-laws of a Lodge specify the days on which it meets, and when the Lodge is adjourned, it must, in accordance with the law as laid down by the late Grand Master, stand adjourned to "the next legal day of meeting" and no other. But in the case, as reported by us last week, the Lodge was "called off," the announcement in the summons to members to attend containing the following announcement:—"The Lodge will be called off, and labour resumed at 7.30 p.m., on Wednesday, the 7th"—the meeting was on the 6th—"when those candidates who have been accepted will be initiated into Freemasonry." It may be that, in our colonies, there are few, if any, facilities for assembling together, and consequently we must not expect the law to be administered with that exactitude which we look for at home: but it would be rather unpleasant for the candidates, who were initiated at the adjourned meeting, if the legality of their initiation were called in question at some future time. According to Grand Lodge Calendar, the first Tuesday in the month is the appointed day for the Lodge of Goodwill to meet; therefore the "calling-off" till the following evening was certainly an irregularity, which, in the opinion of the late Grand Master, Lord Zetland, nothing could justify. Nor, as far as we can see, was there any necessity for doing what was done. An emergency meeting could have been called for the 7th (Wednesday), and certain business set down for transaction at that meeting. By this means, the law would have been observed, and no question affecting the validity of the gentlemen's initiation could possibly be raised. What we are anxious to impress on our readers is, that it is desirable the laws should be administered as correctly and carefully as possible, instead of with an easy, good-natured laxity, as is too often the case in some Lodges.

COMMITTEE MEETING OF THE GIRLS' SCHOOL.

THE General Committee of the Subscribers to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls' met on Thursday, at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. J. A. Rucker presided. There were also present Bros. E. H. Finney, H. Hacker, Walter Sowdon, A. H. Tattershall, Joshua Nunn, E. Letchworth, H. Massey, Thos. W. White, John Boyd, Thomas Berdwin, H. A. Dubois, R. B. Webster, G. Faulkner, H. Potter, and F. R. W. Hedges Secretary. The chairman reported the death of Bro. C. Jardine, who was lost in the Princess Alice. Bro. Nunn moved that a letter of condolence be written to Bro. Jardine's widow and family, and informed the brethren that the death of Bro. Jardine was really a serious loss, for he had left nine children, only one of whom was earning remuneration, and that was barely sufficient to keep him. The motion, which was seconded by Bro. Thomas W. White, was carried unanimously. On the recommendation of the House Committee, Bro. Nunn gave notice of a motion for the Quarterly Court to suspend the laws of the Institution so as to place one of Bro. Jardine's little girls on the October list. Bro. Nunn likewise gave notice of motion for the Quarterly Court in October to increase Col. Creaton's Committee for altering the laws from five to nine members.

* From Engraved List, Grand Lodge.

At first view, the description of the Lodges in the above list would seem to be in direct conflict with that already given in a previous reprint from an Official List of 1776 (see List No. 7, ante): the following extract from the Book of Constitutions, 1784, will, however, explain the apparent discrepancy:—

Nov. 24, 1775.(1)—"The Grand Secretary informed the Grand Lodge, that a Free-Masons' Calendar for 1775 and 1776, had been published by the Company of Stationers without the sanction of the Society: and that as he apprehended a publication of that kind, properly authorised, would be acceptable to the fraternity, and might be beneficial to the Charity, he moved, that a Freemasons' Calendar, under sanction of the Grand Lodge, be published, in opposition to that published by the Stationers Company; and that the profits of such publication be appropriated to the general fund of the Society.—The question was put, and it passed in the affirmative."

The Calendar of 1776, cited by me in List 7, proves, on re-investigation, to be the unauthorised publication, and a subsequent inspection of later Official (engraved) lists than I had previously had access to, leaves no doubt of its general inaccuracy, as will plainly appear by comparing with the List above.

The List for 1768 marks the period of transition in the nomenclature of Lodges; distinctive names being frequently, but not yet universally, adopted. With the exception of original No. 1, which appears in 1760 as the West India and American Lodge, and is scarcely a case in point, the first of the old Lodges (under which title I classify all the Lodges whose descriptions are exhibited above), to adopt a distinctive name, was the Lodge of Friendship, then No. 3, which is so styled in W. Cole's List for 1767; in the following year (1768), as shown above, this example was followed by Nos. 2 (Horn), 5 (Tyrian), 6 (Fortitude), and 8 (Ionic). No further steps were taken in this direction until 1770, when No. 1 became the Lodge of Antiquity, and No. 9 the Dundee Arms Lodge. In 1772 No 4 blossoms into the British Lodge. In 1777 No. 7 becomes the Tuscan Lodge; but not until 1781 does No. 10 appear as the Kentish Lodge of Antiquity.

It should be noted that the date of constitution of No. 8 in the 1768 List (Ionic, now Royal Alpha) is given as May 17[2]3. A similar date is shown in the Lists for 1767 and 1769. It will be observed that the "signs of the houses" are only shown with regard to six out of the ten Lodges above exhibited (see Notes to List 11).

The Somerset House Lodge, with which original No. 4 (No. 2 Horn, above) amalgamated about 1774, was constituted May 22 1762, and is described in the Engraved List for 1763 as No. 299 "on Board H.M. Ship the Prince at Plymouth;" in 1764-66, as "on Board H.M. Ship the Guadaloupe;" and in 1767-73, as "the Sommerset House Lodge (No. 219 on the numeration of 1770-81) at ye King's Arms, New Bond St." (§ 16, IV.)

It is highly probable that the removal of this Lodge from Plymouth to London was effected at the instance of Bro. Thomas Dunckerley?

(a) This brother, whose period of service afloat, as a warrant officer in the Navy, was contemporaneous with the existence of this and other Lodges in King's ships, was probably initiated in a Lodge associated with the naval service.

(b) The name assumed by the Lodge on its removal to London (Somerset House), is identical with the place of residence of Bro. Dunckerley at that time, to whom quarters in "Somerset House" were assigned on the death of his mother.

(c) The date of its removal to London (1767) corresponds with the year in which a pension of £100 per annum was settled on Bro. Dunckerley by the King.

The Legend of the Mouse Tower.—Below Bingen the river becomes the true "castellated Rhine." Here begins the narrow gorge of the Rhine, cut through a chain of mountains running nearly at right angles to the stream. It may be that the river burst through a great mountain wall which opposed its progress at Bingen; and it is certain that a wall of rock runs obliquely across at this place, and has been broken through artificially at what is known as the "Bingen Loch," or "Hole of Bingen." The deepest part of this channel lies under the castle of Ehrenfels, built by the archbishops of Maintz early in the thirteenth century. It was stormed in the Thirty Years' War; but its destruction, like so much else in this country, is due to the French in 1689. It rises very picturesquely above the river, while vineyards creep up to it from below, and the folding hills make a fitting background. Archbishop Hatto's name is connected with Ehrenfels, but not more justly than with the quaint Mäusethurm, or Mouse Tower, on its island in the river below. Every one visits the Mäusethurm, and every one knows how the cruel archbishop induced the famishing people of Bingen to enter a great barn:

> "Then, when he saw it could hold no more,
> Bishop Hatto he made fast the door,
> And while for mercy on Christ they call,
> He set fire to the barn, and burnt them all."

So he went back to Ehrenfels, "and sat down to supper merrily." But that night was his last. A vast army of rats issued from the smoking barn. The bishop, in terror, fled to his river tower. But there was no escape for him. The rats swam the river, climbed the walls, and crept by thousands in at the windows and loopholes. Then "all at once to the bishop they go."

> "They have whetted their teeth against the stones,
> And now they pick the bishop's bones;
> They gnawed the flesh from every limb,
> For they were sent to do justice on him."

There are quaint pictures in some old German book which show us the rats scaling the tower, on the top of which appears the archbishop, with cope, mitre, and pastoral staff, whilst a couple of huge rats have made good their lodging on his shoulders. The story is "in print," and if not "in choice Italian," yet in the choicest high German. And yet, as far as Bishop Hatto is concerned, it marks but the irony of fate. He was by no means a hard-hearted prelate: and the Tower, which is much later than his time, was built for collecting tolls from the vessels that passed up and down the Rhine. The same story is told of other bishops and of other rats. It is widely scattered, and occurs in Switzerland, in Sweden, in Poland, and elsewhere. Mr. Baring-Gould, who has collected many of these parallel stories, suggests that the myth "points to sacrifices of chieftains and princes in times of famine"—of course in heathen days—"and that the manner of offering the sacrifice was the exposure of the victim to rats.—From "Picturesque Europe" for August.

Holloway's Ointment & Pills.—Sores, Wounds, and Ulcers.—Every variety of sore—ulcer, eruption, boil, and carbuncle—is safely stopped in its destructive course by the timely application of this healing ointment. It arrests unhealthy and substitutes healthy action, thus relieving the inflamed diseases affecting the skin. Holloway's Ointment has gained an imperishable fame for its facility in healing old inflammatory sores about the shins and ankles, and for bad legs and old wounds it cannot be equalled; nor is it less efficacious in gathered breasts and abscesses. When the complaint has been of long continuance Holloway's Pills will expedite recovery if taken in those doses which act as alteratives on the stomach and tonics on the constitution.

DISPOSAL OF LODGE FUNDS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Bro. D. Radclyffe, in his letter in your issue of last week, started a theme which I have been harping on for some time past—the lack of support, by Lodges, of our Charities. He puts his ideas in very plain language, but I think he will have to hit home much harder before the members of delinquent Lodges will "reflect," or rouse themselves to remove this blemish on their character.

The principle of applying all Lodge funds to acts of Charity, as he seems to wish, is, in my opinion, not only impossible, but unnecessary, for I need hardly remind him that were such a scheme to be adopted the amount at disposal would be fabulous. If, instead of the few Lodges who now work for our Charities every Lodge made it a part of its duty to do so, the amount raised annually would soon swell into such proportions as would amply suffice for every case of real distress which might be brought forward. It is the fact of so many Lodges allowing year after year to pass without devoting any of their funds to the Charities, or in any other way exerting themselves for the benefit thereof, which makes it necessary to exclude so many of the candidates who seek the benefits of our Institutions. Even if a Lodge does get a brother to undertake the duties of Steward it by no means follows that the members will vote such a sum of money as they might reasonably be expected to expend, to head the list, and in many cases there are members in the Lodge who throw cold water on the whole affair, and mourn over every amount put on the list as though it came out of their own pockets. If it should be hinted that part of the Lodge funds be voted, they are foremost in pointing out how the financial position of the Lodge will not allow of it, and generally remember some particular case of distress which they ought to support—if it could be afforded—before any other should be considered.

I think Bro. Radclyffe could find many Provinces where—although it be not written, it is generally understood—charity is the surest and quickest way to distinction; and in not a few that Prov. G. Lodge votes a sum to a certain Lodge in order to start the list for an en-uing Festival. Still I agree with Bro. Radclyffe that it should be a stipulation, and not left for brethren to find out by accident.

I have often thought that a very easy method is open to us, which would do away with this half-heartedness on the part of Lodges; that is, for Grand Lodge to demand a copy of each Lodge's balance sheet and publish an analysis thereof every year. No comment would be necessary, for figures speak volumes, and, although comparisons are odious, they not unfrequently lead to reform. If you will allow me, I will supply a few balance sheets which I hope will go far to show what can be done, and what should not be done, with the funds of our Lodges. As some brethren like to do their charity unseen and quietly, I will not give the names of the Lodges I refer to, but should any question arise I am ready with printed accounts in each case to verify my statements.

The first I come across—and which I give below—is one in which it is evident charity is "unseen" or "quiet," but I hope the members make up for the deficiency of the Lodge in this respect.

BALANCE SHEET OF LODGE ———. ONE YEAR—1877-8:—

RECEIPTS.

Total Receipts	£201	9	6

EXPENDITURE.

Tavern bills for one emergency and six regular meetings; the summer Festival and Committee on same, and the Audit Committee	£136	12	6
Treasurer, on account of amount due to him, and for certain old debts (£24 0s 10d of which is for Tavern bills)	36	11	5
Grand Lodge certificates and dues	16	15	0
P.M.'s jewel	5	5	0
Tyler	3	7	0

As may be judged from the above, the Lodge at beginning of the year under consideration had heavy liabilities. What its condition was at the close, I am unable to ascertain, beyond the fact that £2 6s 6d was "due to Treasurer."

Bro. Radclyffe designated such a state of things as the above un-Masonic; I feel sure no brother can conscientiously say that his was a wrong opinion. Here is a Lodge spending over £160 of its year's receipts on refreshment, and not a penny given in charity. Although the Members preach that virtue to every candidate they admit, and doubtless would like the outside world to believe they practise what they preach on every occasion. I hope the next balance sheet I may notice will contain some redeeming features.

Yours fraternally,

UNION JACK.

CUSTODY OF LODGE FUNDS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In your leader of the 14th inst., upon the above subject, you raise the question, "Could not the funds of each Lodge be so invested as to bear interest." The question has been anticipated by some six years. In October 1872, I was elected Treasurer to the Doric Lodge (933), when a balance £78 13s 8d was handed to me by the representative of my predecessor, the late Bro. Scurr. The next day I opened a deposit account in the name of the Lodge, and arranged with the manager of the Institution that I only should have the power to draw on said deposit, or subsequent deposits. In the period between October 1872 and July 1878, the Lodge Funds have been benefited to the extent of £33 7s 4d, equal to an annual average of £6 1s 4d! The accounts of the Doric are audited annually in December, and at each audit I produce the deposit account to shew the bona fides of the deposits. The balances at each audit were as follow:—1872, £145 8s 10d; 1873, £130 8s 1d; 1874, £143 16s 11d; 1875, £143 3s 0d; 1876, £133 19s 7d; 1877, £151 13s 8d; giving an average annual balance of £141 8s 8d; so that, considering the naturally fluctuating nature of the account, the interest derived is very good. The advantage derived from this investment is always applied to the augmentation of the Benevolent Fund of the Lodge. In the same period of time the Lodge has voted to our three Institutions the sum of £101 10s (which has been liberally supplemented by the brethren of the Lodge,) and to the needy brethren of the Lodge, and widows of deceased brethren, £105 12s, or a total of £207 2s from the funds of the Lodge. Following my example, Bro. John G. Stevens, upon being elected Treasurer of the Yarborough Lodge (554) adopted the same course, with a like beneficial result, the advantage to the latter being greater in proportion, inasmuch as its income is nearly double that of the Doric. What the Treasurers of these two Lodges have done, other Lodge Treasurers can do without the intervention of Grand Lodge to compel them. It is a commonsense course, and I wonder it has not been more generally adopted. In the foregoing remarks the two Lodges named are not cited as examples of good management, for doubtless there are many others quite as well conducted as "554" and "933," but I speak of them particularly, because, being Treasurer of the one and a P.M. of the other, I know something of their affairs.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

THOMAS J. BARNES,

P.M. and Treasurer 933.

CHARITY STEWARDS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have been much interested in the correspondence which has appeared in your columns during the last three or four weeks in reference to Stewards for the Masonic Charities, and whilst I cannot but admire the powerful advocacy of Bro. Binckes (on what I will call the patriotic side of the question) in behalf of these truly valuable Institutions, I think there is much to be said on the subject of the personal expense, necessarily (or unnecessarily) incurred by those brethren who attend as representatives of their respective Lodges at the Annual Festivals.

Take the case of a brother residing two or three hundred miles from London who elects to serve as Steward for his Lodge. At the expenditure of much time and labour he succeeds, I will imagine, in obtaining, by donations from the members of his Lodge, £50 or £60, which sum includes a donation of his own of probably two or three guineas; in addition to this, he pays two guineas as Steward's fee, and his travelling and other expenses bring the amount paid out of his own pocket to something like a £10 note. In return for this (besides the satisfaction to himself of having done a Masonic duty) he receives, as his "reward that sweetens labour" (and expense) the privilege of wearing a badge of his Stewardship. Under these circumstances, is it surprising that a brother living a great distance from town, instead of taking upon himself the post of Steward, would rather remit his five or ten guineas, if he has it to spare, to the Institution itself, and by so doing obtain an equivalent in votes?

As it appears that only about one-eighth of our Lodges are represented at the Annual Festivals of our Charities, the question suggests itself,—whether there is not some special reason why so small a proportion of our brethren exert themselves on these occasions? Doubtless there is some reason, and I cannot but think that this question of pounds shillings and pence (for which there is no equivalent, except a feed—a very good thing in its way) is one cause which deters many from serving the office of Steward. If this is the case, should not some further inducement be held out to those who are willing to take this office? On this point I think "ALPHA," in his letter in your last week's impression, has struck the proper keynote, by his suggestion that a vote should be conferred on every Steward who collects a sum of at least twenty-five guineas, leaving out the question of personal donation. A Steward would then, whilst exerting himself for the Institution he was desirous of benefitting, have the satisfaction of knowing that some advantage to himself would accrue in so doing; and I am strongly of opinion that a concession of this nature would result in a much larger number of Lodges being represented at the Annual Festivals of our three Institutions, and the funds thereby be considerably augmented.

Yours fraternally,

JOSH. TODD,

P.M. and Treasurer No. 236.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Does not your correspondent "P. T." labour under a slight mistake? He says, at the conclusion of his letter last week, that the system adopted by the Masonic Charities, as to their Festivals, is almost universal in this country. It may be so in certain respects, but, as far as my knowledge goes, it varies in the most important point, viz:—who pays the piper. Certainly I cannot boast a very wide experience, but I think I could find two Charities where the expenses of the Festival are paid out of the funds thereof, to each he can name where the Stewards defray the cost out of their own pockets.

One other point suggests itself; he considers Bro. Binckes' arguments are "well nigh, if not quite unanswerable." Perhaps they are; but I do not think Bro. Binckes himself has arrived at this conclusion, for in his first letter he stated that he writes with a view of doing good to the Institutions, by arguing various matters in connection therewith.

I believe Bro. Binckes is enjoying a little rest with a view of strengthening himself for his winter campaign, and as he has promised us further of his ideas on this subject, I anxiously await his return, when we may expect him to comment on the various questions that his letters have given rise to.

I remain, yours respectfully and fraternally,

ALPHA.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Until your paper of last week reached me, I had considered that my letter to you, which was published on 24th ult., must have been very ill considered. Each of your correspondents (with the exception of ALPHA, last week) seem unanimous in abusing me in consequence thereof. I regret if what I wrote was out of place, but can assure you I wrote as I felt. Perhaps, as it turns out, it would have been as well if I had not written the last paragraph of my letter, but as it cannot now be recalled, all I will ask is for my "fault-finders" (as Bro. Norton terms them) to ignore those few lines, and for the future only argue on the other parts of my communication. It is all very well to pooh pooh the whole of my letter, because it finishes up badly, but I consider the objection I therein point out, is the principal one which affects our Charity Stewards, and at present no very conclusive argument has been urged by your correspondents to upset it. As to Bro. Binckes I have all but made up my mind to be revenged on him for his chaff by acting as Steward for his Festival next year, and if I do I will introduce myself to him as—

A STEWARD WHO HAS SERVED ONCE.

SCRUTINEERS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I beg to say I am not the "Bro. Stevens" referred to in the letters of your correspondents on the subject of Scrutineers.

Yours fraternally,

JNO. G. STEVENS,

P.M. 554 and 933.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In all public correspondence, especially that of an unpleasant nature, and when persons are indicated by name, the writers cannot be too particular in the designation of the person or persons involved. In a correspondence going on in your journal, between Bros. William Biggs and James Stevens, upon the subject of "Scrutineers," the former speaks of the latter simply as Bro. Stevens. Now, there are several Bro. Stevens in the Craft, and it happens that there are two Stevens who take an active part in elections at Freemasons' Hall, both act as "Scrutineers" when not personally interested in the election of a candidate, and both are zealous and useful Masons. Many brethren who do not deeply interest themselves in the affairs of the Order, knowing only one Bro. Stevens who interests himself in election matters, take it for granted that it is the Stevens they know who is involved in this unpleasant imputation. That Bro. is John Geeves Stevens, and the mistake has occasioned him much annoyance and pain. Will Bro. William Biggs in his future communications be good enough to correctly designate the brother or brothers against whom he may prefer a charge, and so prevent unnecessary mortification to those who are not in any degree mixed up with the transactions to which he alludes.

Yours fraternally,

JONATHAN TAYLOR, P.M. 933.

BRO. NORTON'S "HINTS TO HIS FAULT-FINDERS."

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—As I have the honour to represent at least one of those brethren whom Bro. Jacob Norton has designated as above, and to whom his remarks published last week are personally addressed, I trust you will grant me just a modest space in your valuable columns in order that I may offer a few remarks in reply. I have a great respect for Bro. Norton, whom I had the privilege of meeting on his last visit to the old country. What I say, therefore, will be said in all friendliness of spirit, and whether he betters me in argument, or I better him, will in no wise detract from the regard in which I hold him.

In the first place, Bro. Norton must bear in mind that he who first raises an objection is the faultfinder, not he or they who reply to it. Thus, a certain statement has been accepted for, say, a century-and-a-half, and Bro. Norton comes forward and says, in his usual impetuous manner, "Oh, but that's all bosh." There and then others appear in the field, and either endorse or resent—I do not use the word in any offensive sense—his statement. A. who agrees with him is a faultfinder in the sense that he ranges himself under Bro. Norton's banner, while B. the Brother who differs, is an upholder of the ancient belief or statement, and is only a faultfinder in that he objects to Bro. Norton's. I do not find fault with Bro. Norton for raising these or similar questions—on the contrary, the more they are argued, the greater light will be thrown on them. But when we differ and I argue with him, I necessarily offer one set of reasons—for or against as the case may be—and he another; but unless he claims to be infallible in the position he advances against views which have prevailed for years, he is not justified in describing those who accept these latter as faultfinders. They only find fault with him because he began the fray by finding fault with them. This is a species of attack which is quite unworthy a disputant of Bro. Norton's calibre.

I certainly did not understand that Bro. Norton, in his endeavour to upset the received belief about Bro. Dunckerley's origin, was anxious to clear that Brother's mother from the charge of adultery. I imagined, and I think not without reason, that he was comparing the non-Masonic with the Masonic version of Dunckerley's early life and his connection with Masonry up to a certain date, the conclusion he arrived at being that the latter version was wrong. I met him by quoting a statement, described by those who received it as having been in Dunckerley's own handwriting, which was published in a later volume of the Magazine he quoted from. He admits he had not read it, and he very properly defers dealing with my arguments until he has. Now, Bro. Norton, allow me to ask if it would not have been wiser, had you ascertained whether what you had gleaned about Dunckerley was all that was known about him, before you set yourself to the task of finding fault with the Masonic version of that brother, &c.? Who is the faultfinder—you who attack a statement with an incomplete knowledge of the circumstances, or I, who defend the statement out of my—I dare not say complete, but more considerable—knowledge of the same? I do not say that, after all, you may not be right, while it may be proved that I am wrong. Dunckerley died some fifty years before I was born, as the version of his birth was published in the Freemasons' Magazine for 1796. I cannot, of course, say if the person who forwarded that version was, or was not, palming off on the Masonic public a fictitious statement of the circumstances. Nor am I in a position to say whether the editor of the journal in question was, or was not, in collusion with the forwarder of the version. All I know is, there is the account, and in my humble opinion, what collateral evidence there is appears to confirm it. But this defence of mine, based as it is on a fuller knowledge of the subject, is not faultfinding.

I shall ask your permission, Sir, to offer further remarks, but for the present, I have said enough to justify my observations, which were purely defensive, while it was Bro. Norton's attack which made them necessary.

I would suggest to Bro. Norton, with whom I know that I am in agreement on many matters, (1) that he must not again make the mistake of taking the field unless he has completed his armaments; (2) that I shall be happy to meet him again in argument when he has succeeded in obtaining the information he ought to have possessed before he made his attack; and (3) that whether he or I prove victorious in this wordy warfare, he has, and will have always, to speak more Franco, the assurance of my most distinguished consideration. He may always command my hand in the interchange of good-fellowship, and I wish he were here at this moment to test the sincerity of my statement.

Fraternally yours,

"Q."

A MASON'S DUTY.

From THE KEYSTONE.

HOW very few members of the Craft appear to fully understand or can appreciate the meaning of the above heading! Many young men enter, without giving the subject a moment's consideration, or else because their father was a Mason, or more frequently still because some boon companion unfortunately belonged to the Fraternity. Once admitted, he readily obtains a sufficient smattering of the lectures to permit him to take his second and third degrees, and then (without really knowing aught of the Blue Lodge) sends in his application to the Chapter, is accepted, and in due time manufactured into a Royal Arch Mason. This, however, is not his goal—his ambition soars far beyond that—he has seen a Knights Templar parade, and his friend, Jack Smith, looks so handsome in his cocked hat, with waving plumes, his baldric, his semi-military coat, his belt, his sword, et hoc omne genus. Yes, he has ambition, he has danced through the Symbolic Lodge, been galloped through the sublime mysteries of Capitular Masonry, and has had no time to waste on the simple symbolism of the Cryptic Rite. Oh! dear, no; the night after (possibly the same night) he forwards his petition to the Commandery, and within a month is dubbed a Knight Templar and a Knight of Malta.* What does such a brother know of a Mason's Duty?

Perhaps some may say, "This is an exaggerated way of putting it," but we can assure them it is not. Look at figures and see at what railroad speed the degrees can be obtained—say in the Empire State. Suppose the candidate petitions a Lodge working every week, as many do, on 1st May. He is balloted for and accepted on 8th May, and the same evening receives his first degree; on 15th May, he is passed, and on the 22nd of the same month comes out a full fledged Master Mason. On the following day (23rd May) he presents his petition to the Chapter, and two weeks after obtains the Mark Degree (6th June), on 20th June passes the chair, and is received and acknowledged a Most Excellent Master, and on 4th July finds himself a Royal Arch Mason. Next day his application is in the Commandery, and allowing that that body only meets once a month he is, on the 2nd August, admitted to the Asylum and turned out a Knight of the Temple. Thus in less than three months a candidate might in the State of New York obtain all the degrees of the York Rite, and also those of the Commandery. The system of thus rushing candidates through the various bodies is worse than a mistake; it is an injustice to the applicant and an injury to the Craft. Such being the case, we cannot wonder at so many young men neglecting the Lodge and attending the Commandery alone. We have not one word to say against the Templar organization, except that we think it would be far better if there were some general rule, the same as that adopted by the Great Priory of Canada, to the effect that no candidate should be admitted within the portals of the Asylum unless he has been a Master Mason at least one year, and a Royal Arch six months; by such a system the brother as he advanced would learn to appreciate the beauties of the rich symbolism of the Lodge and comprehend the grandeur of the mysteries of the Holy Royal Arch, and once understanding them he would perceive that a Mason's Duty is not a thing to be worn one day and cast aside the next, to be paraded before the public on festive occasions and hidden at other times in his most secret closet.

This constant eagerness to obtain degrees has done much to keep in the back ground the real objects of the Craft. We do not wish the reader to understand by that that we are opposed to the higher degrees; on the contrary, we have always held that every Brother has the right to take as many degrees and ally himself to as many rites as he pleases, and moreover maintain that no rite has the power to say to its members, you shall not take such and such degrees. What we wish to impress upon the reader is this, that after once admitting a candidate, we should feel it our duty to thoroughly verse him in one degree before he is allowed to take another, and we mean by this, not simply teaching him parrot-fashion a few set questions and answers (which probably will be useless to him in another jurisdiction) but instructing him in the objects sought to be impressed upon the mind, in that degree and the duties involved upon him in passing through its mysteries. In no other way can the ordinary brother comprehend "a Mason's Duty." If such a course were generally adopted the unseemly bickerings and disgraceful differences that at times spring up between members of the Craft would certainly be lessened. Then, too, as the Brother advanced he would be able to form a just estimate of the value and merits of every degree, and be in a position to properly appreciate and comprehend the various claims of the different rites.

A Mason's duty extends far beyond the Lodge room, Chapter and Asylum. Of course it is his duty to attend the various bodies to which he belongs as regularly as he can, and he should make every effort to become conversant with the ritual and esoteric portions of the ceremonies; he should also make it a point to study the history and master the jurisprudence of the Order. These certainly are his duties, but there are higher and nobler ones still, and they should be carefully observed. How often do we hear a Brother thoughtlessly invoke the name of The Most High on every trivial occasion, and nail as it were every passing remark with an oath or a curse! The excuse being, "Oh! it is habit." It is a Mason's Duty to warn gently, kindly and fraternally such an one of the awful responsibility he assumes in daring to call upon His Maker to witness every trifling statement he may make. He has been taught in his Lodge room that he is never to mention the name of God "except with that reverence due from the creature to the Creator." Let his Brother warn him in time, and by example and precept persuade him to give up the pernicious habit, a habit degrading to his manhood, wicked in itself, and vulgar in every sense of the word.

Again, we note the demon Liquor leading our members at times to the very brink of destruction; we have seen the noblest and best fall a victim to its snares; we have known great and good men yield and finally sink beneath its alluring influence. Here a brother can step in and aid, and help, and watch over and assist and guide, and perform in truth and earnestness, a Mason's Duty. Of course, Freemasonry does not pretend to be a temperance society, and we trust never will be. The majority of its members are not teetotalers; but when Whisky has seized within its grip a Brother, no effort should be spared to rescue him from his fatal grasp. The task is a difficult one; but it is here that we should strain every nerve and exert every effort to save—not only to save him, the unfortunate fallen one, but his wife, his little ones, yes, and his very soul. Drinking is a mania with many, as irresistible as the contagion of fever or the virus of small-pox; yet, by patient care and watchfulness, the attacks may be warded off, lessened or shortened. Every Mason should feel it his duty, nay, his privilege, to strive to save a Brother under these circumstances; and all should remember it is not to be done by Lodge discipline, suspension and expulsion. It can only be accomplished by kindness and brotherly love, commingled with the truest and purest charity. How often would we find, if we carefully followed up the cause of such a brother falling, that it was financial difficulty—actual want. It is easy to say, "He could apply to the Lodge for aid." How glibly the affluent member can dilate upon this topic! Few, however, who once have been in good circumstances, will (unless compelled by the most dire circumstances) reveal their wants and sufferings. No, it is the Mason's Duty to quietly discover these things for himself, and then at once assist the family of his Brother with the actual necessities of life, and at once set to work with others to secure employment for him. By so doing, a Brother exemplifies the teachings of the Lodge-room, does credit to the Craft and honour to himself—and yet he has only done his duty.

We might, if space permitted, dilate upon this subject ad infinitum. A Mason's Duty is never fully accomplished until he returns to that Mother Earth from whom he sprang. He will find, which ever way he turns, that there is work before him—Brethren in sickness, widows in distress, orphans in penury. If he is true to his vows he can accomplish much, and win for himself, when summoned before the Supreme Grand Master, a seat near the Grand East in the Grand Lodge above.

ROBERT RAMEY.

ORILLIA, ONTARIO.

* NOTE.—According to the regulations of the Great Priory of Canada, the applicant for the Templar Grade must be a Master Mason of two years' standing, and a Royal Arch Companion for six months.

LOST MY INTEREST.

"I HAVE lost my interest in Masonry," said a brother of the mystic tie to us a short time since, and we at once resolved to investigate the philosophy of his aberrations.

Why is it, we would ask, that so many men take the solemn obligations of the mystic tie, and then pass out from the sacred precincts of the Lodge room as if there were no cable-tow to bind them to the fellowship of the Craft, and no moral influence to hold them to its prestige? That hundreds so act will be admitted in every jurisdiction. They take the degrees, and in most instances at first seem well pleased. The simplicity of the ritualistic lessons impressed them, and the sacredness of the mystic obligations taught them that the institution was one of fraternity and confidence, of equality and equitable benevolence. Their inferences were fair, because they were legitimate, and it is not contrary to the usual convictions that they had such impressions. It is scarcely possible for any one who is of good report and comes well recommended to pass through the ordeal of Masonic adoption without feeling the moral pressure that the Society is one of the highest in fraternal ties and brotherly sympathies. It is this solemn and vivid conviction that leads them to believe that personal infallibility should mark all of their fellowship and dealings, and when they learn that their Masonic brethren are only men of like passions with themselves they are disappointed. It is the weakness of humanity, not of Masonry itself, that causes this destruction of confidence which leads men to say, "I have lost my interest." It is not right to blame an organization of pure principles, of high moral tendencies, with the personal delinquencies of its members, which is so often done. Indeed, it is just here that most of these brethren lose their interest in Masonry. It is here that they see those defects which wean them away from the Lodge room, and from their confidence in Masonic fellowship. They see in more or less of the members, coldness and fraternal indifference, which belong to the outside world, and the result is they retire from the association with mortified feelings of disgust and disappointment. Many of these aberrations no doubt grow out of the spirit and manner of conducting Lodges, for it is not always the case that the best men are placed in the governing offices of a Lodge, and even where this is the case, the thoughtless, not to say illegal action of the Lodge itself often creates confusion among the brethren and drives many from their Masonic devotion for all life.

Some Lodges get up a bad feeling in electing their officers. They show an undue zeal in pushing some men forward, and they fail frequently in treating with generous feelings such as are backward and unassuming. They have the right to expect a Lodge room to be a place of confidential kindredship, of free and social fellowship, but they often find it cold and formal, selfish and exclusive in its operations, and not unfrequently they have seen brethren that were poor, suspended, and even expelled for non-payment of dues; which was a poor compliment to Masonic charity. Failing thus to find their expectations in the Lodge room, where unity, peace and harmony should distinguish every meeting, they drop out and become cold in all of their Masonic interests. Out of doors, on the streets, and in the affairs of life, they find that Masonry is nothing to them. They receive no favors from it, but, on the other hand, they are deceived and wronged and treated meanly by some who wear the badge and who profess to be Masons, but who have not even the smell of Masonry about them.

The fact is many men who have passed the ordeal of Masonic gradation have failed to measure up to its requisitions. They are too weak to take the steps, and too ignorant or careless to study the groundwork of its personal and relative obligations. Some men are so filled with selfishness, and so intent on their own interests, that they cannot measure up to anything that is good, or true, or honourable, no matter what society they may join, and therefore there is nothing to be done among Masons as well as among "other sinners."

To those who have lost their interest in the strength of the mystic cable, we might say, courage, brothers! Stand firm. Let your motto be—

"Living friendly, feeling friendly,
Acting fairly to all men;
Seeking to do that to others
They may do to us again.
Hating no man, scorning no man,
Wronging no man by word or deed;
But forbearing, soothing, serving,
Thus to live, and this your creed."

CONSERVATISM OF FREEMASONRY.

From The Masonic Review.

WE live in the most thoroughly iconoclastic age the world ever saw, and the most incontinent and persistent image breakers are the people of this country. The silver and mirk of age afford no protection, and the most sacred things are as rudely handled as the rest. Even "Masonic Landmarks" are called in question, and the tinselry of more idealistic workmen, harmless in itself, is in danger of being substituted, and finally admitted as an essential part.

But Masonry is of necessity conservative. Its Lodges, Chapters, Councils, and Commanderies are all sacred conservatories. It must not thrust itself into the path of progress, it was never intended to be aggressive, but it must preserve the charts of the sea on which the ship is riding—it must keep the compass boxed and in order, and sit as a pilot at the helm, or even courageous and strong thinkers will be like the bold youth that attempted to drive the chariot of Aurora; only ruin and disaster will reward their rash courage.

The attritions of thought and the jousts of the philosophers are not to be condemned, or discouraged, but Masonic Lodges are not to become their arenas. Masonry is not a discoverer or an inventor, but a preserver. We but repeat our history when we say: Theology divides into schools; and sects contend for rituals and forms; reformers rowel the sides of bony hobbies; charity weeps in the closet, while bigotry holds the reins and claims the heritage. Political parties divide the commonwealth; hungry spoilsmen, like cormorants, struggle for office and prey upon the country—ambition, with fiery eyes, mounts the topmost waves, while demagogues step to the front and push statesman aside—patriotism, with blanched face, sits in the shadow of despair, and revolution drives the ploughshare of destruction through the foundations of the State, and it lies like a ruined temple. Men of science extol their themes, and loudly proclaim their discoveries; from the mountebank, with his patent soap and limber-jack, on the street corner, to the profound professor in his chair, and from his rostrum, while they recognize only ignorance or enmity as the animus of all who question their conclusions.

Not from their devotions—not from the noble tasks of government, not from the intense pursuit of knowledge and discovery would we recall them, but from errors and narrowness; we would somewhere find a conservatory for the real and well-defined in every department; and save for the people and for the coming generations the genuine and the useful, to enrich, elevate, adorn, and happify them for all time and also for eternity.

No one who has examined into the rituals and symbolism of Masonry, can fail to see that certain well-defined ideas or doctrines of religion lie at its very basis, and constitute a large proportion of its substance. Particularly is this true of the first three degrees.

At this time, and in this country, is this conservatism of the utmost—indeed of incalculable value. In our zeal to be liberal we must remember that there are certain things that do not belong to us—that it would be a crime to give them away. They are rare treasures, entrusted to us by heaven, for Divine purposes, and can not be diverted and squandered without robbing both God and man! Only a savage could trample costly jewels into the street like common stones! Masonry is set for the keeping, not for the "liberally" giving away of these treasures to license or capricious prejudice.

Even within her sacred walls our French neighbours have committed that grand offence the act of reckless suicide; but cosmopolitan Masonry has enough virtue to disown the crime, and the clubs also, which ceased to be Lodges when they committed it? No more mischievous notion has ever entered the Masonic sanctuary than that occasional fungus folly, that the essential and principal part of Masonry is its social—or club-room feature. Should this notion ever prevail, the jurisdiction recognizing it would immediately become "spurious." The single great truth of the Entered Apprentice, which meets him at the threshold and teaches him the Divine existence, and Providence, and his personal dependance and helplessness, is of infinitely more value than all the social features connected with it, and which I would by no means underrate.

But, more particularly let us consider our own—our individual and local Masonic obligations. Our obligations to the over-conservation which is blind and stubborn as Saturn in the fable, who becoming tired of the society of Uranus only, resorted to creating, and made an oyster, and went on making oysters for a thousand years, until, at last, disgusted and dissatisfied, he created Jupiter. His fear became such, that all nature froze, the things that had been made went backward, and to save the world, Jupiter slew his father Saturn. Equally from Jupiter the radical—the reformer, as from Saturn the over-conservative, true conservatism—such conservatism as our rites and symbols teach us, must Masonry be a saviour. Emerson tells us that "Reform in its antagonism inclines to asinine resistance—to kick with hoofs; it runs to egotism and self-conceit, to unnatural refining and elevation, which ends in hypocrisy and sensual reaction." For Emerson, this is unusual candour, but it is so truthful that it is continuously illustrated and confirmed in our sight. From the triple league of Saturn, Night, and Fate, as well as from Jupiter, Phœbus, and Uranus, Masonry must be our true Palladium. By wise men it was so designed, and for this end Providence has wonderfully fostered it.

The Bible is assailed again, with all the virulence of former days; and with the keener satire and harsher denunciations that come from better and more general learning, society is also menaced by a most debasing form of communistic socialism, which would produce every where, as it did in France, less than a century ago, and at the close of the Franco-Prussian war, a reign of terror, under which virtue became a crime, learning and culture a disgrace, property the legitimate prey of thieves and loafers, and piety a sure and unchanging death-warrant.

If the law is gone, there can be no law-breaker. If the standard and touchstone of virtue is thrown aside, wrong is unknown, and license and liberty are one and the same thing; society is in the presence of most imminent dangers where Divine authority is ignored and religious ideas set aside. It should be known that all forms of civilization owe their origin to religious ideas, and hold their control over the public mind only in proportion to the extent and controlling power of them. Equally must Masonry maintain the truths of science and general culture. Astronomy, Geometry, Architecture, Logic, Rhetoric, and the fine arts have their place, and all their acquisitions only add harmonious members to the family of religious and moral truths which Masonry symbolizes and defends. There can be no disagreement, although there may be difficulty in the efforts of unskilled minds to trace and comprehend the harmony. The truths of both science and religion are to be treasured by us, and neither to be held responsible for the failures of any of the Craft to comprehend or illustrate them.

Thus Masonry will become a strong barrier against superstition, whether amongst Roman Catholics, Protestants, Communists or Scientific Materialists—a vice from which no name or class is entirely exempt. Principles are stronger than societies — stronger than the State. They last while generations, assemblies and senates grow old, moulder and decay. We are only their custodians for a time. If we pollute and defile them, reformers must arise to wash away the stains we have made, and in whose eyes our depraved and dying fame will be only infamy. Let truth become stronger, virtue brighter, goodness more enlarged for our handling, for our custody and commerce with them! Let us not be content to write our momentoes in fading violet, but engrave our stubborn virtues and enlarged experience with mallet and chisel on tressel-boards of adamant, on signet and capstone of marble and brass! It will be more tedious work than to flaunt a banner, beat a drum and raise a dust, the chaff of frivolous minds, but it will become the heritage of immortality, the work of a Divine and eternal philosophy! becoming our professions and our opportunities, and a blessing more enduring than marble and brass, and more valuable than purest gems.

It is well known that nothing adds so much to the appearance as a good hat. Now, hats may look well, but they may be far from a comfort to the wearer. We have lately worn a newly-patented ventilating one, sold by Messrs. Lewis F. Marsh and Co., of Castle-street, Bristol. At this time of the year, when the weather is usually close and oppressive, any system that will give coolness and add comfort to the wearer of a silk hat must be a boon to the public. There are several good ventilated hats in the market. This one, which, we understand, gives great satisfaction, consists of forming slits at the junction of the body and the brim, at the forehead part, and fitting flat tubes to same within the hat, which are carried up to about the level of the top of the leather. The crown being also ventilated, this admits of a current of air passing freely through the interior of the hat. In difference it makes scarcely half a size, the bodies being made slightly full. The lower mouths of the tube are screened by the band, the weavings of the lower part being made open to allow the air to pass to the tubes. The patent was secured by the firm in April last. To those of our readers who like to keep their heads cool we say,—Examine Messrs. Lewis F. Marsh & Co.'s Patent Ventilating Hats.

SEVENTH APPLICATION, OCTOBER 1878.

The Votes and Interest of the Governors and Subscribers are earnestly solicited on behalf of

ARTHUR H. DAY, Aged Ten Years,

SON of the late Bro. JOHN DAY, of Tendring, in the County of Essex, Farmer and Brewer. The Deceased was for eight years, and up to a short time of his death, a Subscribing Member of the Lodge of Hope, No. 433, Brightlingsea. During the last years of his life he became much reduced in circumstances, in consequence of a long affliction—Paralysis. At his decease, which took place on the 24th of December 1877, barely sufficient funds were realised to pay his debts, and the Widow was consequently obliged to give up the business, and is mainly dependent on her friends for support. She has two children (out of a family of five) entirely dependent. The Applicant is a quick, promising Boy, greatly needing your sympathy.

The Case is strongly recommended by the following Brethren:—R. W. Bros. W. W. B. BEACH M.P. P.G.M. Hants and Isle of Wight; *Sir. J. H. OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

ON Sunday H.R.H. the Prince of Wales paid a visit to the Queen at Balmoral, where he remained to luncheon. He afterwards drove to Invercauld House, on a visit to Col. Farquharson, and the party on Monday and Tuesday enjoyed some sport among the deer of the neighbouring forest. In the evening of the latter day His Royal Highness again visited Balmoral Castle, and dined with the Queen. H.R.H. the Princess of Wales left Calais on Tuesday, accompanied by her three daughters, and arrived in London the same evening. The following day the Royal party left for Abergeldie Castle. H.R.H. Prince Frederick William of Prussia arrived, on a visit to Her Majesty the Queen, on Monday, and, together with the Duke of Connaught, has devoted a part of his time to deer-stalking.

On Tuesday particulars were published in London of the failure of the English Mission to Cabul. It appears that our Envoy was stopped at the Khyber Pass, and, notwithstanding his protests, and his having warned the Afghan general in command there that the act would be regarded as the act of Shere Ali himself, he was obliged to return to Jumrood, the mission subsequently withdrawing to Peshawur. A special meeting of the Viceroy's Council was at once summoned. General Roberts, the commandant of the frontier forces, has started for Peshawur with secret orders, and large bodies of troops are concentrating on the frontier. It seems all but certain that an occupation of Afghanistan will ensue, as there is little chance of an apology being sent for the affront thus offered to the English nation.

At the Woolwich inquest on Friday an engineer was examined as to the state of the engines of the Princess Alice at the time of the collision so far as could be judged from their present condition, and some other witnesses having been brought forward, the inquiry was adjourned until Wednesday, when further witnesses were examined on behalf of the London Steamboat Company. Their case being closed, the captain of the Bywell Castle was called, and gave evidence as to the capabilities and course of his vessel. His examination was continued on Thursday, and important evidence given. He stated that his vessel was not driven astern until fifteen minutes after the accident, and that the Princess Alice was cut in two pieces by the collision. After cross-examination of this witness, the Court was adjourned. The expense incurred by the Woolwich parish officials in connection with the work arising from this disaster is reckoned at upwards of £1200, and steps are being taken to obtain repayment of this amount from the county magistrates.

The work of pumping out the water from the Abercarn Colliery was commenced on Friday, but was impeded on Saturday in consequence of the pumps becoming choked with earth. Arrangements were then made to raise the water in tanks by means of the lifting apparatus, and now operations are being successfully carried on. Great distress is being felt in the district, and earnest appeals are being made for relief. On Friday, £1,000 was voted to the fund by the Monmouthshire and South Wales Collieries Association, while in various parts of the country subscription lists are being actively circulated, with, we hope, satisfactory results. Up to the present time £16,000 has been received at the Mansion House on behalf of the sufferers, which sum includes an amount of 50 guineas from H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

The up Scotch express of the Midland Railway Company came into collision with a goods train at Holbeck Junction, near Leeds, on Wednesday morning. Great damage was done to the rolling stock, one engine and eight empty trucks being forced off the line, thereby destroying a bridge. One of the trucks fell into the roadway beneath.

The Austrians, who are beginning to realise the cost of their expedition in Bosnia—over which it is estimated they are spending no less than half a million of florins daily—are expected to issue a new credit of forty millions of florins. On Monday news was sent from Vienna of the capture of Livno, the last remaining stronghold of Western Bosnia, which by this step has at last been completely subjugated by the Austrians. Their troops have also been most successful in other parts, completely routing the insurgents, who were stationed at Senkovics, and occupying various positions in the line of march. The Hungarians are strongly protesting against the occupation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, which they consider as fatal for the Hungarian nation. A meeting is to be held on Sunday, when various resolutions will be submitted, condemning the policy of the Government. It is officially stated that the Austrians have now completed the pacification of Herzegovina, and that authorities have been appointed throughout the country. A telegram from Cyprus describes the health of the troops as unsatisfactory. At Dali, out of a force of 2622 men, four hundred are in hospital, or at light duty, or convalescent. A grand military parade took place at Cassel, on Friday, the Emperor William being among those present. At midnight, on Monday, the Emperor of Russia embarked on board the royal yacht "Livadia," and proceeded to Sebastopol, where he reviewed the Russian troops who have returned from Turkey. From the United States no very encouraging news is received with regard to the yellow fever epidemic. The disease continues its ravages unabated in some of the towns, but in others a slight diminution in the number of cases is reported.

CITY OF LONDON ORCHESTRAL UNION.

THE First Evening Concert of the season was given in the Albion Hall, London Wall, E.C., on Wednesday, 25th September The programme comprised the following pieces for instrumentalists, and the excellent manner in which they were rendered by the band evidenced that a wise selection had been made:—1. Overture—"Zauberflote," Mozart; 2. Ave Maria, for orchestra, Schubert; 3. Liebeslieder—"The Tempest," Taubert; 4. Symphony in C (No 7)—"Adagio—Minuetto—Trio," Haydn; 5. Waltz—"Traume auf dem Ocean," Gungl; 6. Overture—"Nabuco," Verdi; 7. Grand Duo—"Antony and Cleopatra," Riviere; 8. "Ugo, Conte di Parigi," Donizetti; 9. War March of the Priests—"Athalie," Mendelssohn. We hardly know, where everything passed off so much to the satisfaction of the audience, how to particularise any piece specially for praise; still we cannot refrain from noting our unqualified admiration of the way Nos. 2, 4, 6 and 8 were rendered, the Solo for Clarionet—Mr. Hobbs—being especially deserving of notice. Bro. G. T. H. Seldon, who is the conductor, must be congratulated on the ability displayed by the artistes under his control. We thank him—as we believe will all who attended—for introducing us to so talented a vocalist as Miss Helen Heath, who during the evening sang, with great feeling, four songs—viz., "Marion rite," "Jenny of the Mill," "She wore a wreath of roses," and "Once upon a time," the two latter of which she was induced to repeat. Mr. Simmons also sang two buffo songs.

SIR MICHAEL SHAW STEWART AND THE GRAND MASTERSHIP OF SCOTLAND.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Ardgowan, 19th September 1878.

SIR,—I observe in the Scotsman to-day a statement that Mr. Inglis declines to be nominated for the Grand Mastership, "in consequence of the expressed desire of the present Grand Master, Sir M. R. Shaw Stewart, to retain office for another year."

I have not been consulted in any way by Mr. Inglis or his friends, nor have I expressed any desire to be re-elected. I have been made aware lately that there is a very strong wish on the part of a large number of Freemasons, amongst whom are those most influential in the Craft, that I should retain for the present the office of Grand Master, and this for reasons which, I believe, are as well known to Mr. Inglis as they are to me.

You have been authorised to make a statement on a public matter in which my position is incorrectly described, and unwilling as I am to write about myself, I must request you will have the goodness to correct the statement.

I am, &c. M. R. SHAW STEWART.

Torsonce, Stow, 20th September 1878.

SIR,—I observe with regret a letter in your impression of to-day from Sir Michael Shaw Stewart, in which he states that he has not expressed any desire to be re-elected Grand Master, adding, "I have been made aware lately that there is a very strong wish on the part of a large number of Freemasons, amongst whom are those most influential in the Craft, that I should retain for the present the office of Grand Master, and this for reasons which, I believe, are as well known to Mr. Inglis as they are to myself."

These reasons Sir Michael does not mention, and they are unknown to me. I declined the requisition of nearly 500 members of the Craft from all quarters of Scotland to be put in nomination for the chair solely from a desire to avoid unpleasant and unseemly discussion in Grand Lodge; but if Sir Michael believes that his re-election is desired by "those most influential in the Craft," I am quite willing to abide the result of a scrutiny of our respective requisitions. This public controversy I would have deprecated, but it has been forced upon me.

I am, &c. HENRY INGLIS.

SIR,—Since Sir Michael Shaw Stewart deems it necessary—and, it is to be presumed, proper—to disclaim any desire on his part to continue in the position of Grand Master Mason after next election, there can be no impropriety, Masonic or otherwise, in thus publicly considering the issues raised by his letter in your paper of Friday last. With all deference, it may not be out of place to point out to Sir Michael that the simplest and only real way to give effect to his very creditable avowal would be to decline to stand. That he "expressed" his intention to retire from an office which he has already held for five years (although as a rule its occupants have never held it for more than two, or at most three, years), and did so in a communication published at his own request last month, is an undisputed fact; and had he not done so the candidature of Bro. Henry Inglis would never have been undertaken. No sooner was the requisition to Mr. Inglis circulated, however, than a counter-requisition was started to Sir Michael by a committee who, along with it, issued a circular in which they express a "hope" that he "may be induced to remain in his exalted position," and call a meeting in Glasgow, mainly for the purpose of promoting his re-election. In a second circular, previous to the meeting, this committee say, in regard to Sir Michael—"We are enabled to state that, not from personal motives, but for the good of the cause, he is prepared to hold office for another term." At the meeting it was stated by one of the committee (according to a daily newspaper) that "members of the Order had been erroneously led to believe that the present Grand Master, Sir Michael Shaw Stewart, intended to retire from office," and much more was said to the same purpose. If Sir Michael was aware that that meeting was to be held—and that he was there can be no manner of doubt—why did he not then announce that he was not desirous to be re-elected? and, unless he is unknowingly a tool in the hands of an unauthorised committee, or virtually a participator in their proceedings, why has he not repudiated their action and contradicted their statements as above specified?

In his letter, Sir Michael says, that he has "not been consulted in any way by Mr. Inglis or his friends," but it may be asked if Mr. Inglis and his friends would have properly recognised what was due to themselves had they consulted even Sir Michael Shaw Stewart, Bart., after the groundless aspersions and base imputations which were unsparingly and most indecently cast upon Brother Inglis at the meeting which was held in Sir Michael's interest, as reported in the public press? It does not appear that Sir Michael has in any way reproved those who at that meeting most unjustly traduced a distinguished brother, of whose good offices he has repeatedly so far availed himself as to depute him to preside upon the Throne of Grand Lodge when he himself could not attend in his place; and it is certain that he has not exhibited the same refined scrupulousness in seizing the first or any opportunity of vindicating the character of that brother when assailed in his absence that he has displayed in shielding himself from being supposed to "desire" an office which he seems resolved to hold, or at least has expressed his "willingness" to accept, if the statement of his committee is to be accepted.

Sir Michael further says, in his letter, that he has "been made aware lately that there is a very strong wish among Freemasons that he should retain for the present the office of Grand Master." Of course, considering his many estimable qualities, this is only what might be expected; at the same time it is a question how far this may or may not be owing to the fact that he is already in possession of the office, and that it is felt that it would be uncourteous and ungracious, as well as unusual, to indicate even remotely that he should retire from office, especially when it has been ascertained that he is disposed to retain it. This circumstance was no doubt duly appreciated by Brother Inglis in his wise and magnanimous resolution to decline the requisition presented to him by some five hundred members of the Grand Lodge, who pledged themselves to support him, and who would have done so, even had he gone the length of contesting the chair. That equal weight is not attached to this view by at least some of Sir Michael Shaw Stewart's supporters is evident judging by the means which have, in some instances, been used to obtain votes for him—means which it is certain he would be the first to condemn were they known to him, even although his retention of the Masonic throne were dependent upon their adoption and employment on his behalf.

I am, &c. No Faction.

Edinburgh, 21st September 1878.

Sir,—It is much to be regretted that the election of Grand Master should be made the subject of controversy in the newspapers, as it interests only a limited class of the community, and not the public generally. In your paper of Thursday a paragraph appeared to the effect that Mr. Inglis had declined to accede to a requisition, signed by about 500 members, to allow himself to be nominated Grand Master, "in consequence of the expressed desire" of Sir Michael Shaw Stewart to retain office for another year. As no one would believe that the Scotsman said they were authorized to make a statement which they had no authority for making, your information must necessarily have come either from Mr. Inglis's friends or from himself, and as Sir Michael Shaw Stewart's name was introduced, he was in a manner compelled to contradict the statement made if it were incorrect. He did accordingly deny most emphatically that he had ever expressed any desire on the subject. He has been requested to continue in office, and he puts his services at the disposal of the Grand Lodge if the members desire to retain them. This should have ended the controversy, but apparently it has not, as there are two letters in to-day's Scotsman on the subject. Now it appears to me that the matter lies in a nutshell, and is scarcely worth writing about. Mr. Inglis says he has about 500 requisitionists asking him to be elected Grand Master. If this be so, and they all vote for him, then he has more than an absolute majority, and he would certainly be elected. But he says he has declined to come forward because Sir Michael Shaw Stewart has expressed a desire to retain office for another year. Sir Michael says he has done no such thing, and that he has no desire either the one way or the other. Mr. Inglis has therefore called out before he was hurt, but no great harm is done. Let him now go on and try the question in the usual way. We will then see how many of his 500 requisitionists are qualified voters, and will attend and vote. It is quite true that a good many signed the requisition under a total misapprehension, but they afterwards withdrew their signatures, and the requisition at the time your paragraph appeared was melting away like snow off a dyke. If we are to have a contest for the chair, let us have it now, when both sides are prepared, and be done with it. One thing is certain, Mr. Inglis will never be Grand Master Mason of Scotland without it, and if he can really rely on anything approaching to 500 voters he should try it now. It is not worth while noticing your second correspondent's remarks about Mr. Inglis's declinature being a graceful act, as evidently Sir Michael Shaw Stewart does not so regard it. Talking of graceful acts may do very well for the general public, but it won't seriously impress the members of the Grand Lodge. If Mr. Inglis does not now come forward they will put their own interpretation on his reasons, and rely upon it their interpretation will be the correct one.

I am, &c. W. S.

20th September 1878.

Sir—I observe in your issue of to-day a letter from Sir M. R. S. Stewart, Grand Master Mason, and much regret that a brother occupying such a distinguished office should have initiated a correspondence in your columns on Masonic matters, knowing, as he must, that there exist other ways and means whereby he is enabled to make known to the Craft (who alone have an interest) his sentiments on all subjects relating to its affairs. I greatly deprecate his action in thus writing you, and am all the more strongly convinced that a change in the occupancy of the Masonic Throne would be desirable, and when I mention that out of the 750 certificated members of the Grand Lodge nearly 500, from all parts of Scotland, are enthusiastic in their wish to see the Depute Grand Master in that position, it is clear that I am not by any means singular in my desire; while the graceful manner in which Mr Inglis has refrained from acceding to the wishes of his numerous supporters, and thereby to allow "the man in possession" another to his many years in office, has more than ever commended the Depute Grand Master to the fraternal esteem and respect of his "friends."

I am, &c. R. W. Master.

23rd September 1878.

Sir,—"W. S." in his letter of to-day, states, in reference to the requisition to Mr. Inglis, "it is quite true that a good many signed the requisition under a total misapprehension, but they afterwards withdrew their signatures, and the requisition, at the time your paragraph appeared, was melting away like snow off a dyke." As a member of the committee formed to promote Mr. Inglis's election, I have to state that the requisition, signed by about 500 Masons, was sent to him on Saturday the 14th inst., and that he wrote declining it on the 16th inst. At that date only four of the requisitionists had withdrawn. Since then other five have done so—two of them by letters received this morning, a week after they received notice that their requisition was declined.

"W. S." also states that many signed the requisition under "total misapprehension." He does not say what that misapprehension was. But the official circular of Sir Michael Shaw Stewart's party states it to be an "erroneous impression" that he "intended retiring." If he did not intend to retire from office he surely "desired" to remain; and the denial now made of that desire is of questionable accuracy.

But we are told that the "most influential in the Craft" wish Sir Michael to retain office. It would appear from the composition of his Edinburgh committee that there existed a great dearth of those "most influential" Masons, for to swell out the Edinburgh committee list names are imported from Glasgow, Dublin, Peterhead, and other places, and the names of others than members of Grand Lodge are added. The list is also conspicuous by the absence of the name of the Provincial Grand Master of Glasgow, and the many other familiar names one is accustomed to find surrounding the Grand Throne. Indeed, I presume that by the "most influential in the Craft" is meant the few Conservative Peers and M.P.'s whose Masonic bones it is desired to revitalise on this occasion. None of them have been in Grand Lodge for years. Of the Masters of the twenty-four Masonic Lodges in and around Edinburgh, only six are found supporters of Sir Michael, and of these six, one is his own brother.

The truth is, that in this matter Sir Michael, from a desire to remain in office—no; we are told that that is an incorrect expression, and I won't therefore use it—but, to use the words of his committee, from an intention not to retire, has allowed himself to be made the "catspaw" of the Glasgow faction in their desire to prevent the election of Mr. Inglis to an office the duties of which, in the usual absence of Grand Masters, he has most satisfactorily for years generally discharged.

I am, &c. P. G. Master.

CONSECRATIONS.

St. Thomas's Chapter, No. 142.—This Chapter was consecrated on Wednesday night, at the Cannon-street Hotel, by Comps. J. Hervey, H. G. Buss, the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford, and Jas. Terry. The oration was delivered by Comp. the Rev. A. F. A. Woodford. After the consecration of the Chapter Comps. H. C. Levander, G. A. Rooks, and J. W. Lambert were installed as the three Principals, and the other Officers having been appointed, the Chapter was closed, and the members and visitors dined together. Letters of apology for inability to attend were received from Sir Albert Woods (Garter), Professor Erasmus Wilson, Colonel Shadwell Clerke, and Captain N. G. Philips.

Kensington Lodge, No. 1767.—This Lodge was consecrated on 20th inst., at the Courtfield Hotel, Earl's-court, Kensington. The ceremony was performed by the Grand Secretary of England, Bro. John Hervey, who was assisted by Bro. Thomas Fenn Past Grand Deacon, Bro. Beyett Past Grand Superintendent of Works, Berks and Bucks, and the Rev. Ambrose W. Hall M.A. Past Provincial Senior Grand Warden of Surrey. The oration was delivered by the Rev. Ambrose W. Hall. After the Lodge was consecrated, Bro. George Read, a Past Master of the Zetland Lodge, No. 511, was installed as first Worshipful Master of the Lodge; and the Officers for the year having been appointed and invested, votes of thanks were given to the consecrating Officers, who were also constituted honorary members of the Lodge, and the day's proceedings concluded with an elegant banquet.

DEATH OF PAST GRAND MASTER BRO. A. J. WHEELER.

To us the saddest news of the week from the plague-stricken South, is that which chronicled, on Saturday last, the death of Past Grand Master, Bro. A. J. Wheeler, of Memphis, Tenn., editor of the Masonic Jewel. Bro. Wheeler nobly fell at his post, a victim to the yellow fever, while serving as Secretary to the Masonic Board of Relief, and thus doing all in his power to alleviate the distress of his suffering and dying Brethren. He might have fled from the scourge, as did thousands of others, but he did not, and hence while we mourn his loss, we laud his manhood and his self-sacrifice. He wears now the martyr's crown, and on it there is doubtless inscribed, "Holiness to the Lord." Bro. Wheeler was Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Tennessee in 1874, and at the time of his death was Grand Representative of the Grand Lodges of Indiana and Arkansas near the Grand Lodge of Tennessee, and member of the Committee on Masonic Jurisprudence of his Grand Lodge. It was, however, as editor of the Masonic Jewel (now in its eighth year of successful publication) that he was best known to us, and to the Masonic world. All who are familiar with that monthly, have learned to love the true Masonic spirit that always characterized its editor, Bro. Wheeler was the soul of courtesy—a Freemason of learning and culture, of wise judgment and unexcelled common sense, and of pronounced opinions. He had few opponents, and no enemies. We rarely, if ever, differed with him. His wise experience, added to his native ability and continued studies, rendered him a discreet councillor in all of the bodies of Masonry with which he was connected. In common with the entire body of Freemasons in America we mourn his loss. He has monumented himself, however, in the Memphis Masonic Jewel, which he conducted with great ability, and long may it continue to illustrate and perpetuate the name of its founder and editor, and the glorious principles of Freemasonry.—Keystone, 14th September.

This being the last gathering of the brethren previous to the Installation Meeting, we were pleased to see the Officers of the Mother Lodge in their respective places. Present—Bros. Walter Goss W.M., May (W.M. elect) S.W., Gomm J.W., Blasby S.D., Franckel J.D., Costelow I.G.; P.M.'s Bros. Roe and Littlewood; Visitor—Bro. Bloomfield 1612; and Bros. Goss advanced the Lodge to the third degree, and rehearsed the ceremony of raising, with Bro. Fenner as candidate. Lodge was closed down, and the brethren were called off. After a short pause labour was resumed. Several brethren took the opportunity of subscribing towards the Preceptor's Testimonial Fund (subscriptions to which will be received by the Secretary). Bro. Tucker, in a very impressive speech, descanted on the subject of relief to indigent itinerant brethren. He argued that the present method of indiscriminate almsgiving was detrimental to the recipients; it encouraged many of that class to practise upon the newly initiated. It also had a tendency to lessen the self-respect of those who were relieved, and made it possible for impostors to prey upon young brethren. Bro. Tucker illustrated his argument by instances within his own experience, and proposed a resolution that applicants be referred to the Treasurer. Bro. Fenner followed; he gave further instances. Bro. Gomm likewise added a few observations. Bro. Gunner, whilst fully concurring in many of the remarks which had fallen from the experienced brethren who had spoken, could not acquiesce in the proposal to limit the privilege of all Masons to exercise that preeminent virtue, Charity; and he thought every brother should be allowed to practise it in such manner as was (to his way of thinking) requisite; the giver, exercising due caution, would have none but himself to blame if his confidence were betrayed. He, therefore, begged to propose a resolution,—that it is inadvisable to draw a hard and fast line, to circumscribe a brother's almsgiving, and that the ancient custom be preserved. Bro. May seconded the proposition, and it was carried unanimously. Bro. Squires was elected a member. The W.M. for 4th October having been appointed at the last meeting, a very instructive evening was brought to a close by the adjournment of the Lodge until 4th October next.

R. Foulger was unanimously elected W.M., Bro. W. Sharpe re-elected Treas., and Nowell Tyler. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to a very excellent banquet, provided by Bro. Deacon. Burdett Coutts Lodge, No. 1278.—"There is more than one element required to make a Lodge successful," these were the words addressed to us a few days since by an esteemed friend whose years in Freemasonry count over two score. "You require good Masters, good Officers, and a firm resolve on the part of the members to pull well together." We thought over these words on our recent visit to the Burdett Coutts Lodge, on Thursday, the 19th instant, the occasion its installation meeting. Here, we reasoned, have we had good Masters, we have good Officers, and we know the members "pull well together;" therefore, here we may look for successful results. Well, we came to the conclusion that we need not look in vain; the Lodge may be pronounced a prosperous and successful one. The Lodge was consecrated in 1869, and Bro. James Terry, Secretary of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, was its first W.M. Since then the members have invariably selected competent brethren to preside over them; have rendered good service to the Masonic Institutions, at the same time have never been unmindful of any special calls that have arisen. The gathering on this occasion was equal to the many pleasant assemblies we have taken part in with the brethren of this Lodge, and will long be remembered by those who had the privilege of being present. The Lodge was opened by Bro. G. Ward Verry, who was supported by his Officers and the following P.M.'s of the Lodge:—Bros. James Terry, H. Lloyd, J. Ashburner, W. Crutch, and Toye. Amongst the Visitors we recognised Bros. K. Knight 184, A. Sheppard 1598, W. H. Allaway 1598, W. C. Claridge 1685, G. T. H. Seddon 174, W. H. Coles, Capt. R.E., P.M. 20, B. W. Sharp 1211, F. Meen 1707, H. Forss 554, M. Christian 860, G. S. Symmons 1457, W. W. Morgan 211, G. Weige S.W. 860, Batchelor, E. J. Moore P.M. 174, David Murray, Celtic 192 S.C., &c. The minutes having been read and confirmed, Bro. George Hodge, a candidate for the third degree, underwent examination as to his proficiency in the former, and, having sustained his claim, was raised to the sublime degree. Bro. Terry, now acting as Director of the Ceremonies, introduced Bro. Charles K. Crouch as the W.M. elect, and Bro. G. Ward Verry proceeded to obligate the candidate for the Master's chair. A Board of Installed Masters was in due course opened, and the ceremony completed in a most satisfactory and impressive manner. After receiving the salutations of the members, Bro. Crouch appointed the following as his Officers:—Lazarus S.W., Defriez P.M. 45 J.W., Terry P.M. Treas., G. W. Verry P.M. Sec., Sturtevant S.D., Prestage J.D., Jones I.G., Chitson D.C., Witherick W.S., J. Berry P.M. A.W.S., W. Gilchrist P.M. Tyler. A sum of £10 10s was voted to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, to be placed on the list of the Steward who should represent the Lodge at the next Festival. The report of the auditors was then read. It showed that all liabilities had been discharged, and that the Lodge had a balance in hand of £33 9s 3d. The Benevolent Fund, which began the financial year with a debt due to the Treasurer, had "adjusted" itself, and now had a balance in hand of £3 12s. This report was unanimously adopted, and ordered to be entered on the minutes. The name of a gentleman who was an aspirant for Masonic light was handed in, and Lodge was then closed. After a short interval the brethren reassembled, and Bro. Lloyd served the banquet, which was of excellent quality and admirably placed upon the table. The toast list was then proceeded with; the W.M. briefly introduced the Loyal ones, which were honoured, and the brethren sang the National Anthem, and God Bless the Prince of Wales. After the health of the Pro Grand Master, the Deputy, and the rest of Grand Officers, Bro. Batchelor favoured the brethren with "The Scout;" and then Bro. G. Ward Verry rose to propose the health of the W. Master. Bro. Crouch was one of the initiates of the Burdett Coutts Lodge, and had ever been mindful of its claims. He (Bro. Verry) was pleased to know it had fallen to his lot to instal him into the chair of that Lodge. After a song—"The Lugger"—well rendered by Bro. Making, the W.M. replied. It was a great pleasure to him after having served the various offices in his Lodge to stand there as W.M. The labour of qualifying for office was not so heavy a one as many might imagine. It required but a moderate store of energy and perseverance, and he trusted he might see many of those younger members with whom he had laboured during the past eight years, fill the position he now held. Before resuming his seat he had a pleasing duty to perform; to propose the health of the Immediate Past Master, Bro. G. Ward Verry, and present him with the Past Master's jewel which the brethren had voted. He also had, on behalf of some of the members, who were not unmindful of the great energy displayed by Bro. Verry in his capacity of Secretary, to offer for his acceptance a set of diamond studs, which were tendered as a slight recognition of the valuable assistance he had rendered the Lodge. After Bro. Weige had given, with his accustomed vigour, "In cellar cool," Bro. Verry rose. He had to thank them most sincerely for the P.M.'s jewel, also for their supplemental gift. He could hardly say he was entirely taken by surprise. At the same time, he was not prepared for this substantial recognition of his services. He was appointed four years ago. While he was spared he would continue to exert himself for the welfare of the Lodge, which he was proud to see in so flourishing a condition. The W.M. next gave the P.M.'s of the Lodge, and Bro. Prestage sang "You'll remember me." Bro. P.M. Lloyd said it afforded him great gratification to see the bantling he had been so proud of now exhibiting sufficient strength to stand alone. He trusted he might be spared many years to witness its continued prosperity and usefulness. Bro. P.M. Ashburner was an initiate of this Lodge, and would endorse all that had been said. He referred to the absence of Bro. Terry, who had an engagement at Nottingham, and had been compelled to leave. Bro. Ashburner impressed on the young members the desirability of qualifying themselves to fill any office they might be called upon to accept. After Bros. Crutch and Toye had each said a few words, the W.M. proposed the health of the Visitors, and Bro. Sturtevant sang "The Anchor's Weighed." After the Visitors had severally acknowledged the compliment paid them, Bro. Making sang "Will o' the Wisp." The remaining toasts were then duly honoured, and the proceedings were brought to a close by the Tyler. Bro. Seddon rendered goodly assistance during the evening as accompanyist.

Temple Chapter, No. 1094.—The regular bi-monthly Convocation of this Chapter was held at the Masonic Temple, Hope-street, Liverpool, on Tuesday, the 24th instant. Present—Ex Comp. R. Washington M.E.Z., R. C. Yelland H., J. W. Burgess J., Pemberton P.Z. P.P.G.S.B. Treasurer, P. Macmuldrow P.Z. P.G. Scribe E. as S.E., R. R. Martin P.Z. as S.N., J. H. Bradshaw P.S., Burgess A.S., P. Rall Janitor. There was a fair muster of Companions, amongst whom, as visitors, were Ex-Comps. Wylde P.Z. 580, Wells M.E.Z. 1086, Berry 249, Reader, S. M. Davies No. 16 G.R.C., &c. The Chapter was opened at 6.30 p.m., and the minutes of the last regular Convocation were read, and being found correctly recorded, were ratified. The ballot was taken for three candidates; it proved favourable in each case. Bro. John Holmes, Lodge 1325, being in waiting, was duly exalted to the supreme degree of the Holy Royal Arch. The magnificent ceremony, so profound, so instructive, and so complete, was given in a most impressive manner by our highly esteemed and venerable Principal. The working of every Officer of this Chapter is exceptionally good, and unitedly they perform the ceremony as near perfection as possible. From time to time we have had great pleasure in recording the working of many Craft Lodges in Liverpool, upwards of twenty of which we have visited. Taken altogether, we can safely say that a more zealous, genial and proper-spirited body of Freemasons do not exist. Much as they have done for every deserving cause, and are still doing, they are capable of doing more. We have also had the pleasure of visiting their Mark Lodge, which is admirably worked, and now we have been enabled to record the doings of the topmost workers in Craft Masonry. We shall have occasion to refer to the progress of the Craft in Liverpool and West Lancashire at some future time. By request of the M.E.Z., a letter was read from Comp. D. A. Davis S.E., which conveyed unwelcome tidings of his severe illness to all present. Although our courteous and respected Comp. resides in Manchester, he has never hitherto been absent from his post, and it was with deep regret the announcement of his illness was received. It was proposed by Ex-Comp. Martin P.Z., and seconded by Ex-Comp. Burgess J., that a letter of condolence be written to their worthy Companion, expressing their sympathy for his suffering, and joy at his partial recovery from the fever which prostrated him for four weeks; hoping that he would be speedily restored to health. The proposition was carried unanimously, and ordered to be entered on the minutes. The visiting Companions tendered their hearty good wishes, and the Chapter was closed in due and ancient form. By request of the Excellent Principal, the Comps. adjourned to supper, where each enjoyed the good things so kindly provided. After the removal of the cloth, the M.E.Z. proposed the Queen, which was duly honoured, all joining in the National Anthem. The next toast, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, was warmly received, after which the health of the Grand Superintendent of the Province was given and cordially drank. By request of Ex. Comp Washington, Comp. Davies gave a song. Comp. Bradshaw P.S. proposed the health of the three Principals, which was heartily drank. Comp. Fish obliged with the next song, after which the M.E.Z. rose to respond; he thanked Comp. Bradshaw for so kindly proposing the toast, he was gratified with the manner in which it had been received. It had been his pleasure to do some work, and he hoped those who were eligible would come forward to keep up the activity. Ex Comp. Burgess followed, with a few remarks. The M.E.Z. next proposed the health of the newly exalted Companion; in doing so he said he was always pleased to see worthy candidates come forward to attain the degree in Freemasonry without which no one can be perfect in the noble Craft. He now asked them to drink to the health of their newly Exalted Companion. This was heartily done, and Ex-Comp. Martin gave the next song, after a few words of thanks from Comp. Holmes, Ex. Comp. Martin rose. He was entrusted with the gavel by the Most Excellent to propose a toast which is always received with great cordiality. This Chapter has always felt a pleasure in extending a hearty welcome to visiting Companions, and the more they honour us with their presence the better pleased are we. To-night we are particularly favoured with some distinguished Companions, one of whom has come a great distance to see the working of this Chapter, and to him, as well as to all others, we extend a cordial greeting, and we trust they will come again as speedily as possible. He gave the health of their Visiting Companions. The toast was drank with great cordiality, after which Ex. Comp. Pemberton gave a song. Comps. Wylde, Berry, Reader and Davies then responded. Each and all thanked the members of the Chapter for their truly fraternal hospitality, and heartily gave a well-merited tribute of praise to the working, which it had been a pleasure to witness. A delightfully social evening was then brought to a close, the only drawback being the conspicuous absence of the worthy and versatile Scribe E.

Kain re-elected Treasurer of the Lodge. Bro. W. Grant was also re-appointed as Tyler. The report of the Audit Committee, showing a favourable balance in the hands of the Treasurer, was submitted, and unanimously adopted. Captain Kain rose, and in eulogistic terms proposed that a Past Master's jewel be presented to Bro. S. D. Ewins, the W.M., for his conduct of the Lodge during the past year, which had, under his management, passed a most successful time. This motion having been seconded, was carried unanimously. The W.M. having suitably acknowledged the compliment thus paid him, the Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet room, and there spent a few hours in a most enjoyable manner. Marquess of Ripon Lodge of Instruction, No. 1489.—The annual supper of the members took place on Monday, at the Pembury Tavern, Amhurst-road, Hackney. The chair was taken by Bro. Wm. Stephens P.M., and there was a fair attendance of members. The supper was capitally served by host Cracknell, and the evening's proceedings were of a genial and most enjoyable character. This Lodge of Instruction meets every Monday evening, at the above address.

Cranbourne Lodge, No. 1580.—Met on Tuesday, at the Red Lion Hotel, Hatfield, under the presidency of Bro. W. Bancor W. Master. Several of the Officers of the Province of Herts were present, and the Lodge was numerously attended. The Lodge working consisted of initiating one gentleman into Masonry, and passing one brother to the second degree, after which Bro. Henry Cox was elected W.M. of the Lodge for the ensuing year. The brethren on this occasion invited ladies to be present at their banquet, and while the Lodge was a work these ladies, under an escort of brethren, visited Hatfield House, the seat of the Marquis of Salisbury, and were shown over the apartments, and had the different objects of interest pointed out to them. They then returned to the Red Lion Hotel, where an elegant banquet was served, and the Masonic toasts were afterwards honoured, without, however, the usual Masonic ceremony. In the course of the evening the Lodge presented to Bro. James Terry, Secretary to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, the Prov. Junior G. Warden of Herts, and the Sec. of the Lodge, a Prov. Junior G. Warden's jewel. The proceedings of the day were brought to a conclusion with a few dances.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A series of articles, biographical, descriptive, and eulogistic, of some of the principal Masonic worthies of the day. They are well written, and though personal, by no means offensive, or intrusive into private life, and in Masonic society will be welcomed as an interesting series of word paintings of members of the Craft.—Standard.

"We do not remember to have read any similar series of sketches which surpass this in merit."—Land and Water.

"The book will be of great interest to Masons, containing as it does pen-and-ink sketches of the most distinguished men among them, and giving some considerable information on matters Masonic, from various points of view."—Lloyd's Newspaper.

"Admirably written, being free from what are too often observed in composition—inelegant language and prolixity."—Sunday Times.

"'J. G.' writes with a considerable amount of freedom, never hesitating to 'hit off' a weakness when he finds it publicly displayed by a 'distinguished brother;' at the same time he never loses sight of a good trait when it is displayed, either in connexion with the Craft or in the service of the public out of doors. The sketches are lively reading."—City Press.

"This is a neat book. The Portraits consist of a series of 'word pictures' of eminent English Masons. Its styles Bro. W. J. Hughan 'Knight Errant,' and sketches thirty-two others under equally unique titles. We commend the book as worthy of a place in every Masonic library."—Voice of Masonry.

"Evinces much literary ability, and is a valuable addition to the few works we have in Masonic biography."—Philadelphia Keystone.

"The book ought to be in every well arranged Masonic Library."—New York Courier.

"We value the work, and heartily thank Bro. Morgan for our copy."—Masonic Jewel.

"The portraits consist of a series of what we call 'pen and ink sketches' of brethren prominent in all the noble undertakings of English Masonry. . . . Prominent among his brethren we find Bro. Fred. Binckes, ('Our Hercules,' whose herculean efforts in behalf of those blessed institutions, the charities of English Masons, have a world-wide reputation, which will live long after the zealous Craftsman has been, 'laid away to rest.'"—New York Square.

"The style of the author is pleasing, and the quality of his productions highly complimentary to his ability as a writer."—Masonic Advocate.

"It is a valuable contribution to English current literature."—Masonic Review.

"They belong to a kind of writing which has come to be amongst the most popular reading of the day. . . . . The types are as general as they are graphic. The salient characteristics are seized with an easy power, and happily hit off in felicitous phrase."—Sheffield Post.

"Good sensibly written articles. The writer prefaces each of his sketches with some pithy common sense remarks."—Cashel Gazette.

"Cleverly and agreeably sketched, and the work altogether forms a valuable addition to Masonic literature."—Ryde News.

"Very amusing, and beyond doubt, faithful portraits of the worthies who unconsciously sat for them."—Deal, Walmer and Sandwich Mercury.

"The members of the Craft will take it as an acceptable addition to their biographical literature."—Monmouthshire Chronicle.

"They are written in a fair and genial tone, thoroughly Masonic."—Leigh Chronicle.

"Should have a very large sale."—Kingsbridge Gazette.

"These sketches are drawn with sparkling ability."—Banffshire Reporter.

"We must sincerely congratulate the author on the success of his endeavour to aim at faithful portraiture, while there is an entire absence of what might give offence to the most sensitive mind."—Folkestone Express.

"A very acceptable contribution to the history of the Order. The volume has our warmest commendation."—Kelso Courier.

"Drawn with no little humour, and embellished with many a deft stroke of good natured satire."—Figaro.

"The inquiring Brother who may wish to know something of the strength and beauty of the principles of Masonry, will find a pleasure in scanning the characteristic pictures in this book."—The Brighouse News.

"There is a piquancy in the ready off-hand dash that lends much zest to the subject, and bars it from studied rhetorical expression."—Hebrew Leader.

"There can be no doubt that the writer has produced a series of Portraits which will be a source of amusement and pleasure to Masons throughout the world."—Surrey Comet.

"Will be found very interesting and pleasant reading, especially to the Masonic world."—Barnet Press.

"Calculated to raise the Order—if that be possible—in the estimation of its members, if not of the outer world."—Trowbridge and North Wilts Advertiser.

"Written in a spirited, racy style, and conveying, in as clear a manner as possible, a 'counterfeit presentment' of some of the rulers of the Craft."—Essex Standard.

F. RATH & Co.'s IMPROVED PATENT GAS BOX IRON.

PERFECTION IN IRONING FOR EVERY SPECIES OF FABRIC.

Great Saving in Expense and Labour.

The price being only 22/, it is the Cheapest Iron in the trade, and can be had at all Ironmongers in the United Kingdom.

F. RATH & CO.'S IMPROVED GAS BOX IRON is extremely simple in its construction, and cannot get out of order; the merit of the invention is, that the heat produced from the burning gas is thrown on to the steel plate which covers the bottom surface, none being allowed to pass off in waste.

Three times the amount of work ordinarily executed can be done by the use of these Irons, which have now been in use in extensive Manufactories long enough to thoroughly prove their merits and evidence their entire success. They are as suitable for Family Use as for the Work-room, the Manufactory, or the Laundry.

THE

A WEEKLY RECORD OF MASONIC INTELLIGENCE.

SANCTIONED BY THE GRAND LODGE OF ENGLAND.

VOL. VIII.—No. 197. SATURDAY, 5th OCTOBER 1878. [PRICE THREEPENCE. Registered at the G.P.O. as a Newspaper.

THE APPROACHING ELECTIONS.

ON Saturday next, will be held the Quarterly Court of the Girls' School, and three vacancies will be filled up from an approved list of twenty-nine candidates. The Monday following, namely, the 14th instant, will be held the Quarterly Court of the Boys' School, and eleven vacancies will be filled from an approved list of sixty-seven candidates. Let us, as is our custom on these occasions, furnish a few particulars as to the candidature of the different applicants. And firstly, as to those who are about to compete for the three vacancies in the Girls' School. We have said there are twenty-nine candidates, all but five of whom are applicants for the first time. One of them has made five previous but unsuccessful attempts, to enter the School, and has 508 to the good towards this election. Numbers 2 and 3 have been candidates at three previous elections, and have 723 and 724 votes respectively to the good, this being also the last chance in No. 2's case. Nos. 4 and 5 were candidates at the April election, and then polled 622 and 577 votes respectively. Thus all the old candidates have a fair number of votes standing to their credit,—an advantage of great moment at an election where the proportion of applicants to vacancies is only a little short of ten to one. Of the new candidates No. 16 has this only chance of success. She will be eleven in January next, and ineligible on that account, under Law 52. Five candidates have both parents living—the father of one, however, being insane; three have lost both, while one has a stepmother only, and the other twenty are fatherless. In the case of six of the Girls the father was subscriber or Steward to one or more of the Charities. The father of No. 15, who is still alive, has been a subscribing member to his Lodge for 32¼ years, the father of No. 1 died while the second year of his subscription was still unexpired. These are the maximum and minimum periods respectively of subscription, all the other twenty-seven ranging between them. Eight of the candidates hail from London, twenty-one from the Provinces or Districts abroad. Of these twenty-one, W. Yorkshire sends up no less than three, and Monmouthshire two, while Bristol, Hants and I.of W., Essex, Somerset, Cambridgeshire, Calcutta, Durham, Wilts, Warwickshire, Kent, Gloucestershire, South Wales, West Lancashire, Devonshire, Cheshire, and Yorkshire North and East send up one each. Four of the candidates have each a sister in the Institution already, and one of these a brother in the Boys' School as well, two have each a sister in the School already, and two have each a brother in the Boys' School.

For the Boys' School there are eleven vacancies and sixty-seven approved candidates, or rather more than six of the latter for each one of the former. Of the forty who have stood previously, Nos. 1 and 2 have tried at six previous elections, and if they fail this time they will have their names removed in accordance with the requirements of Law 52. They have 564 and 634 votes respectively to the good. No. 3 has been a candidate five times already, and has 27 votes to his credit. Nos. 4 to 8 both inclusive have tried four times, and this will be the last chance of No. 5. The votes to their respective credits range from 689 in the case of No. 6, to 10 in the case of No. 4. The next four in order have been applicants thrice already, and No. 11 has this single chance of success remaining to him. Their several votes range from 278 recorded for No. 12, to 10 recorded for No. 9. The seven next in order have tried twice before, and No. 18 must win this time or his chance is gone for ever. The votes already cast range from 323 to the credit of No. 16, to 3 for No. 15. The remaining twenty-one of the forty were candidates last April, and in the case of Nos. 24, 32 and 38, this is their only remaining chance. No. 36 has 849 votes to his credit, No. 27 has 783, No. 33 687, No. 28 602 votes, No. 23 330 votes, and No. 32 489 votes, while five had no votes whatever recorded for them. Of the twenty-seven new candidates, No. 50 has this one and only chance of getting in, so that nine of the whole sixty-seven will have their names erased from the list if they are unsuccessful on this occasion. Three of the boys have had each a brother in the School, two have each a brother in it now, two have each a sister in the Girls' School, and one has two sisters there. Nos. 6, 8, 9, 19, 23, 46 and 58 have both parents alive, but in the case of No. 8, he is paralysed; the mother of No. 9 has been deserted by her husband since 1871, and the fathers of Nos. 46 and 58 are both lunatics. Four have lost both parents, fifty-four are fatherless, one is motherless, and of one no particulars are given under this head, though it is shown that the father died in 1869. In seven cases the father was a supporter of, or had filled the office of Steward for, one or other of our Institutions. The maximum and minimum periods for which the fathers had been subscribing members to one or more Lodges are 25 years in the case of No. 51. and a little over one year in the case of No. 14 respectively. Fourteen candidates hail from London, and one owes a divided allegiance between London and Essex, the other fifty-two coming from the Provinces or districts abroad, namely:—seven from E. Lancashire, five from Lincolnshire, three each from Devonshire, Hants and Isle of Wight, N. Wales and Salop, and West Yorkshire, two each from Essex, Bristol, Warwickshire, Suffolk, Durham, and South Wales West Div., and one each from N. and E. Yorkshire, West Indies, Norfolk, Somersetshire, Monmouthshire, Bengal, Cheshire, South Wales East Div., Northamptonshire and Hunts, Worcestershire, Surrey, Dorsetshire, Nova Scotia, Northumberland, Derbyshire, and Singapore. Such are the leading details respecting the number, distribution, and distinguishing characteristics of the candidates for the approaching elections to our Schools, and the one hope we limit ourselves to expressing is, very naturally, that the most deserving ones may win. It is well likewise to add one remark, namely, the two lists together contain the names of ninety-six girls and boys, which the authorities of the two Schools between them have approved as cases deserving of the relief they can afford, and only fourteen, or barely one out of every seven, can receive them. This alone shows how necessary it is the Craft should come forward and liberally support these noble Schools. Let our readers bear in mind that close on six out of every seven of these ninety-six must either be wholly disappointed of obtaining the benefits of one or other School, or have their claims postponed till next April.

THE MASONIC DISPUTE IN SCOTLAND.

IT is greatly to be regretted that Masonic differences of any kind should find their way into the columns of a non-Masonic journal, and become the subject of comment or correspondence. The half-dozen letters we published last week from the Scotsman will not tend to raise the Craft north of the Tweed in public estimation. Many will quote the well known text to the effect that it is a blessed thing when brethren dwell together in unity, and will smile the smile of sarcasm when they read these evidences of what must certainly be described as something else than unity. Even a Mason may be pardoned the exhibition of unusual warmth when stoutly defending some cardinal principle of Freemasonry, when, for instance, he is engaged in upholding the ancient landmarks of the Order, or when he is resenting the unwarranted, because unjust, attacks on them which are occasionally made by the bigot or the scoffer. In such case a defence couched in stronger terms than are ordinarily employed in argument is excusable; nay, we should not think much of him who did not so indulge himself, as the lack of warmth might be considered as betokening a state of indifference to the fair fame of the Craft. But for brethren of position to have been betrayed into a most unseemly squabble over a matter of comparative unimportance is pitiful indeed, and, as we have said, will not tend to enhance the reputation of Freemasons in the opinion of the general public. We claim, and by the outside world are assumed, to be a body of men united together by the most fraternal feelings. One of our watchwords is "Charity," which we use, not simply in the sense of almsgiving, but in that infinitely wider and more extended sense in which it is used by one of the sacred writers of the earliest Christian era; yet a simple statement, which, whether it were right or wrong, was of little moment, has sufficed to set the whole body of Scottish Freemasons by the ears. What makes it worse still is that the Grand Master Mason of Scotland is himself in great measure responsible for this unseemly discussion having taken place. Having seen a statement in the Scotsman to the effect that Bro. Inglis of Torsonce, Depute Grand Master, had declined to be put in nomination, on the ground that the present Grand Master, (Sir M. R. Shaw Stewart) had expressed a wish to retain office for another year, thereupon the Grand Master writes to say that he had not been consulted by Bro. Inglis or his friends, and that he had not expressed any desire for re-election. Still he had latterly been made aware of a very strong wish on the part of a large number of Freemasons, including the most influential in the Craft, that he should retain his office for the present, and for reasons which he believed were as well known to Bro. Inglis as to himself. Now, whether the Grand Master had expressed a wish to be re-elected, or whether a large and influential section of the Craft had memorialised him to retain office for the present, was a matter so entirely immaterial to the outside public, that it was matter for surprise Sir M. Shaw Stewart should have for a single moment entertained the idea of writing to non-Masonic journals about it. It is true the statement he was anxious to rectify appeared in the columns of such a journal; but, in our humble opinion, the proper place for the correction of so trivial a misunderstanding was Grand Lodge itself, when a few words of conversation between the Grand Master and the Depute Grand Master would have set the whole thing at rest. Nor was there any reason in pointing out that Bro. Inglis or his friends had not consulted him (the Grand Master), because there was no absolute reason why he or they should have done so. Bro. Inglis had acted with the greatest courtesy towards his chief, declining to be nominated to the Grand Mastership when he heard—erroneously as it turned out, however—that the latter was desirous of retaining office another year. A brief explanatory statement to Bro. Inglis to this effect, that he (Sir M. Stewart) had not expressed any such desire, would have answered every purpose till the next Communication of Grand Lodge, when further personal explanations would have set the whole matter at rest. But the Grand Master having initiated the discussion in the columns of the Scotsman, the Depute Grand Master followed the example of his chief, and wrote a letter to the effect that he was not acquainted with the reasons which had induced a section of the Craft to request the Grand Master to retain office for a further term, that he had declined "the requisition of nearly five hundred members of the Craft from all quarters of Scotland to be put in nomination for the chair solely from a desire to avoid unpleasant and unseemly discussion in Grand Lodge;" but that if the Grand Master was under the impression that his re-election was desired by "those most influential in the Craft," he (Bro. Inglis), was quite willing to abide the result of a scrutiny of their respective requisitions. The challenge in the last clause we have referred to, is not, we regret to say, in accordance with Bro. Inglis's previous and invariable courtesy. It means simply: Let us try this issue, which of us is the more popular with the Craft, you whose re-election is desired by "those most influential in the Craft," or I who have received a requisition signed by nearly 500 members to be nominated for the chair. Moreover, in italicising the words which are in italics, Bro. Inglis would appear to have cast some doubt on Sir M. Shaw Stewart's statement. In short, the Grand Master made a serious mistake when he sent his letter for publication, and the Depute Grand Master assuredly did not mend matters by replying. Had the matter stopped here, much as we might have regretted the unseemliness of the controversy, we should have contented ourselves with feeling, instead of expressing, our regret, but with one exception, the following letters have made matters still worse. Let the reader note carefully their contents, and he cannot do otherwise than arrive at the conclusion that, while the language in which they are couched may be unobjectionable, the tone which characterises all but that signed "R.W. MASTER" is most decidedly to be deprecated. "R.W. MASTER" thinks with us that there existed other ways and means whereby the Grand Master Mason of Scotland might have made known "to the Craft (who alone have an interest) his sentiments on all subjects relating to its affairs." But even he thinks it worth while to express his opinion that "a change in the occupancy of the Masonic throne would be desirable," thus at once constituting himself an opponent of the Grand Master, if not a partisan of the Depute Grand Master. We regret the publication of controversial letters on a purely Masonic subject in a non-Masonic journal; in the first place, because it is uncalled for, the internal administration of the Craft being a matter of no interest to non-Masons: and in the next, because those who take part in the controversy appear to lay aside those sentiments of charity by which Brethren of the Mystic Tie—presumably living together in unity — are supposed to be animated towards one another.

MEETING OF LANCASHIRE FREEMASONS.

THE annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of the Western Division of Lancashire was held at the Philharmonic Hall on Wednesday. The Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, Deputy Grand Worshipful Master of England, Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master of the Western Division of Lancashire (the second most extensive province in the United Kingdom) presided, and he was assisted by a large number of past and present Provincial Grand Lodge Officers. Altogether there were over 1,000 brethren present, each wearing full Masonic dress, with his insignia or jewels of office. Bro. Spence W.M. Lodge 32 officiated as W.M. in opening the Craft Lodge in accordance with the ancient rules and customs; Bros. W. J. Chapman I.P.M. 1,609 as P.M., W. W. Iolton 113 as S.W., Jowett 281 as J.W., and R. H. Evans 292 as J.D. The Prov. Grand Lodge having been announced, a procession was formed, and the Prov. Grand Lodge was opened in due form. The Provincial Grand Secretary (Bro. H. S. Alpass) then read the roll of Lodges in the Province, when the responses showed that the whole of the 79, with the exception of two, were represented. The absent Lodges were the Ellesmere, No 730, Chorley, and the Arthur John Brogden, No. 1,715, Grange-Over-Sands. The Provincial Grand Secretary also read the minutes of the last Prov. Grand Lodge meeting, held at Southport, which were confirmed.

It appeared from the report of the Provincial Grand Treasurer, which was taken as read, that the balances from last year were:—Charity Fund, £308 11s 6d; Prov. Grand Lodge Fund, £369 2s 11d; Fund of Benevolence, £1,637 3s 9d—total, £2,314 18s 2d. The income during the year with these balances amounted to the following sums:—Charity Fund, £472 5s 9d; Prov. Grand Lodge Fund, £719 0s 2d; Fund of Benevolence, £1,962 19s 10d—total £3,154 5s 9d. The disbursements included votes of £200 for the Indian Famine Fund, £100 to the Royal Masonic Educational Benevolent Institution, and £105 to the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution. The report also showed that up to the last report the sum of £1,829 5s had been paid to the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution. There had been £1,000 invested in a bond in the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board; £773 8s 1d in the Savings' Bank; and £757 10s 5d in the National Bank of Liverpool. The balances at the end of the financial year were:—Charity Fund, £472 5s 9d; Prov. Grand Lodge Fund, £719 0s 2d; Fund of Benevolence, £1,962 19s 10d—total, £3,154 5s 9d.

On the motion of Bro. Dr. J. K. Smith, Bro. J. T. Callow P.M. 673 and 1505—a most assiduous Mason—was unanimously appointed to the office of Provincial Grand Treasurer. Bro. Callow returned thanks. The P.G.M. then proceeded to invest his Officers for the ensuing year: Bros. W. J. A. Baldwin (Baltoo-in-Furness) P.G.O.W., H. R. Robertson (Liverpool) P.G.J.W., Rev. J. Rees Jenkins 216 P.G. Chaplain, Ralph Robinson 1502 P.G. Reg., F. W. Sergeant 203 P.G.S.D., W. Archer 1086 P.G.J.D., J. E. Jackson 667 P.G.S. of W., J. Wells 580 P.G.D.C., J. Wainwright 613 P.G.A.D.C., E. C. Cooper

The Provincial Grand Lodge proceeded to take into consideration a number of applications for relief from the relations of deceased members of the Order of Free and Accepted Masons, the sum of £60 being voted to meet them.

The P.G. Secretary (Bro. Alpass) then said: In making the customary annual report of the Province it affords me much pleasure to state that Masonry continues to make very satisfactory progress, both as regards the number of Lodges and subscribing members. Since our last meeting, Warrants of Constitution have been granted for the Wilbraham Lodge, No. 1713, Walton; the Urmston Lodge, No. 1730, Urmston; the Kirkdale Lodge, No. 1756, Kirkdale; and the Ashton Lodge, No. 1140, has been removed from Cheadle, in the Province of Cheshire, to Withington, near Manchester, in this Province. It is gratifying to report that the Lodges generally are in good working order, and, with one exception, brotherly love and harmony prevail amongst them. At the last election of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, the widow of a brother, a Past Provincial Grand Officer, was elected to the benefits of the Fund. There are three children of widows of Freemasons whose mothers are desirous of obtaining their admission into the Masonic Schools in London; but it will be very difficult to ensure their election, in consequence of the few votes held in the Province for these Charities. Brethren should recollect that where a widow is left with a large family dependent upon her, something more than paying for the education of her children should be done for her. She should at least be relieved of the clothing, maintenance, and education of one child, by its being elected into the Schools above referred to. According to the last report of the boys' school, which has reached me, only twenty-seven Lodges in this Province possess votes for the School. And I am reminded by the consideration of this fact that it has become an annual custom with some of the Liverpool Lodges to expend so large a portion of their funds on a pic-nic that they are unable to support the Charities with the liberality we have a right to expect from them, and which, from the great number of their subscribing members, they ought to be able to evince. All the Lodges in the Province have sent in their annual returns and paid the fees due from them. During the past year fifteen dispensations have been issued. At the commencement of this year the Skelmersdale Masonic Hall, Westminster-road, Liverpool, was completed. The Prince of Wales and the Watson Lodges meet there; and the Kirkdale Lodge, when consecrated, will be held there. The erection of this convenient building is due to the zeal of the brethren of the North-end of this town, and will add to the prosperity of the Lodges meeting there, and the comfort and convenience of their members; and it has pleased the R.W.P.G.M. to acknowledge the service thus rendered to the Order by appointing Bro. W. Archer, who has been one of the most active in the cause, P.G.J.D. for the ensuing year.

The Provincial Grand Master said he hoped in another year to see a marked improvement in the direction of larger amounts voted for the Masonic Charities, and also that less money was spent in pic-nics by several Lodges. (Applause). He considered it to be a disgrace to the Province—the second largest in the Kingdom—that they should be so poorly represented on the list of the London charities; and he hoped these few words would be taken to heart by the brethren, and that there would be a marked improvement. He hoped that each individual brother would do something on his own behalf, as far as he could, to further these excellent institutions. In conclusion, he intimated that in future he intended to carry out the plan adopted in several other Provinces—namely, that when a brother served the office of two stewardships in connection with the London Charities, he should be entitled to wear a charity jewel. (Applause).

Bro. R. Wylie, P.P.G.D.C., moved, and Bro. J. R. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C., seconded, that the sum of 100 guineas be voted from the Charity Fund to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls in the name of the R.W.P.G.M. A similar sum was voted to the West Lancashire Masonic Institution.—On the motion of Bro. Wylie, seconded by Bro. C. Broadbridge, P.P.G.D.C., it was also resolved that the sum of £25 be voted from the Provincial Grand Lodge Fund to promote the election of the daughter of the late Bro. Mott on the foundation of the Girl's Institution. On the motion of Bro. J. R. Jenkins, P.G.C., seconded by Bro. J. T. Callow, P.G. Treas., a vote of thanks was passed to Bro. Major Turner for his services as P.G. Treas. Bro. R. Wylie, Secretary to the Hamer Benevolent Fund, reported that one case had been relieved, and he appealed for increased support in the future. The officers and committee having been re-appointed, the Provincial Grand Lodge was closed by the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master.

The Annual Court of Governors of the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution was afterwards held. Lord Skelmersdale presided. The business before the meeting was the consideration of the general committee and the transaction of the general business of the Institution. Brother Richard Brown, P.M. 211, submitted the twenty-eighth annual report, of which the following is an extract:—No better estimate of the progress of Masonic charity in the province of West Lancashire can be found than in the printed records of this Institution during the past quarter of a century. These records are ample and lasting evidence of the deep interest the brethren take in the welfare of this important Institution; and it must be a source of the greatest encouragement to all concerned that their generous efforts are, through the blessing of the Great Architect of the Universe, attended with such continued and increasing success. A glance at the honorary treasurer's accounts will show that this prosperity is not alone satisfactory as regards the funds of the institution, but it will be seen that the usefulness of the charity has also been extended. During the year eighty-eight children have enjoyed the lasting and valuable benefits of a good education, the sum paid for this purpose being £380 17s 3d. Notwithstanding this exceptionally large payment, the invested capital has been increased, the total amount being the handsome sum of £13,886 12s 7d, the interest arising from this sum being applicable to the increasing requirements of the Institution. This satisfactory financial position, and the fact in the extended working of the Institution some changes seem desirable, has induced the court of Governors to appoint a sub-committee to consider such changes in the bye-laws and regulations as will tend to enlarge the sphere of usefulness of the charity. A report of the proceeding of this committee will be brought before a special court for consideration and approval at an early date. As the objects of this sub-committee are to widen the field of operation, the continued exertions and help of the brethren are desirable. The interest felt in this noble charity in the past—the fact that it has proved in every way more successful than the most sanguine expectations of its generous promoters and supporters could have hoped for, give cheering hope for a continuance of that zeal and earnestness which has characterised the efforts of all.

Sixteen children were afterwards elected on the foundation of the Institution grants, and grants were made to three children for their advancement in life, and a vote was taken for the education of eighty-one children for the ensuing year. There are now 115 children receiving the benefits of education at this establishment. Bro. G. Broadbridge was appointed joint Secretary with Bro. Brown. The other Officers having been appointed, the proceedings were closed with the usual ceremony.

The banquet was held in the evening at Eberle's Restaurant, Eberle-street; there were about 300 brethren present. Lord Skelmersdale presided; he was supported by P.G.L. officers and the leading representatives of the Lodges throughout the Province. The banquet was served in good style. After proposing the toast of "The Queen," Lord Skelmersdale gave the health of "His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M., the Princess of Wales, and the other Members of the Royal Family." His lordship said it was the intention and aim of the Prince of Wales to carry out the main objects and principles of Freemasonry, and his recent enthusiastic reception in Grand Lodge was an evidence of the appreciation in which he was held by the brethren. Speaking of his Royal Highness's efforts in connection with the Paris Exhibition, his lordship said he might safely say that if it had not been for the great zeal and energy shown by the Prince the exposition would not have had half the success which it had enjoyed. His lordship, in conclusion, spoke of the Duke of Connaught and Prince Leopold as being both enthusiastic and devoted Masons. The P.G. Chaplain, Bro. the Rev. J. Rees Jenkins, next gave "The Earl of Carnarvon, M.W. Pro G.M., and the other Officers of the Grand Lodge," and in doing so spoke in high terms of the position which the G.L. had taken up with respect to the Grand Orient of France. The toast was acknowledged by Bro. Beresford, Past G.S.D. Bro. Alpass next proposed "The Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, M.W.D.G.M. and R.W.P.G.M. West Lancashire," which was received with applause, continued for a considerable time. Bro. Alpass spoke of the great amount of time and attention which his lordship devoted to his Masonic duties; there were many good and faithful P.G.M.'s throughout the country, but none who took so much interest in a Province as his lordship. Lord Skelmersdale, in acknowledging the toast, referred to the pleasure which it had given him to be present that day. Although Masonry took up a large amount of his time, he looked upon the day spent in connection with that Prov. G. Lodge as one of the most pleasant of the year. His Lordship again expressed a hope that at the end of the year there would be a great improvement in the Province as to the support of the London Charities. Bro. Dr. Smith, P.P.G.R., gave "The Right Hon. Colonel Frederick Stanley, W.D.P.G.M., and the P.G. Wardens," which was responded to by Bro. Baldwin P.G.S.W. Lord Skelmersdale stated that Bro. Colonel Stanton would have been present that day but for the fact that he had received an urgent summons to London to attend certain imperial business, with the importance of which every one was conversant. The P.G.M., in giving "The Provincial Grand Masters of the Adjoining Provinces," coupled the toast with the name of Bro. the Rev. C. J. Martyn, Past Grand Chaplain of England, and Deputy Grand Master of Suffolk, of whom he spoke in the highest terms, as a man, Mason, and minister. Bro. Martyn, in response, thanked the brethren for the hearty reception which as a stranger they had given him that day, and he felt bound to say, as an old Mason, that he had never witnessed so enormous a gathering of Masons as the present. It had been to him a special source of pleasure to see the working of the Lodge, and he would carry with him into his distant Province pleasant recollections of his visit to West Lancashire. Bro. Spence, W.M. 32, gave "The P.G. Officers, Past and Present," which was responded to by Bro. R. Robinson, P.G. Reg. The P.G. Sec. proposed the toast of "The Worshipful Masters of the Lodges in the Province," and spoke in high terms of the excellent working which prevailed in every section of this Masonic division. Bro. Spence, W.M. 32, and Bro. Goodacre, W.M. 1730 (Urmston), responded to the toast, the latter stating that as the result of the remarks made by Lord Skelmersdale that day, he had pleasure in stating that his Lodge had determined to vote the sum of 50 guineas to one of the London Charities. Bro. R. Wylie, P.P.G.S.D. gave "The Charities of the Province," which was responded to by Bro. R. Brown, the honorary Secretary of the West Lancashire Masonic Educational Institution. Bro. Robertson, P.G.J.W., gave "The Ladies," which was responded to by Bro. J. R. Goepel, P.P.G.D.C. A capital musical programme was supplied by Bros. Child, Muir, J. Hird, and T. J. Hughes, Messrs. Kirkburn, Austin, Kitwood, Robinson, Shimmin, and Lewis. Bro. J. Skeaf, P.G.O., most efficiently presided at the piano.

The enemies of Freemasonry usually owe their enmity to ignorance of its principles, or chagrin at having been denied entrance into the Fraternity. Almost invariably, honest enquiries are happily disappointed and much instructed, on finding that the fundamental principles of morality and religion are so clearly and strongly enforced by Freemasonry.

THE FOUR OLD LODGES.

By Bro. R. F. Gould.

To the Editor of the Freemason's Chronicle.

Dear Sir and Brother,—I feel some delicacy in writing respecting this valuable series of papers now current in the Freemason's Chronicle, as it may be thought I am intruding myself on the notice of your readers, in connection with a subject which Bro. Gould is treating specifically, and which, until he has completed his task, he has a right to consider his own. However, my present contribution lies outside the pale of his inquiries, and I hope, therefore, he will pardon the intrusion.

After giving Pine's List for 1740 and the additions thereto in 1744-5, Bro. Gould states that only thirty-eight of the 196 Lodges contained therein are now on the roll of our Grand Lodge. The majority of the remaining 158 Lodges have ceased to be, but some few still exist in foreign countries under the jurisdiction of what are now independent Grand Lodges. Thus:—

No. 110 of Pine (1740)—No. 126 of Pine (1734)—is St. John's, Boston, Massachusetts, the premier Lodge under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of that State. This is the Lodge founded by Henry Price, by virtue of the patent, as G. M. of North America, granted him by Lord Montagu on 30th April 1733. At least, 1733 is the date assigned by our Massachusetts brethren to No. 1 St. John's Lodge, Boston, on the roll of their Grand Lodge. Or, it may be identical with the Grand Lodge itself.

No. 192 Pine (1744-5) "Union of Angels, Francford in Germany, June 17, 1742," is the same with "Lodge zur Einigkeit"—Lodge of Union—Frankfort-on-the-Maine, "1 Mar. 1742" in Van Dalen's Kalender für Freimaurer for 1870.

No. 196 Pine (1744-5) "St. George, Emperor's Court at Hamburgh, Sept. 25, 1743," will be found in Van Dalen's Kalendar bearing same name and date. It is the second senior Lodge, in respect of age, holding under the Grand Lodge of Hamburgh—the oldest Grand Lodge in Germany.

The Lodge No. 108 of Pine (1740)—No. 124 of Pine, 1734—held in the city of "Hamburgh, Lower Saxony," and constituted 1733, is no doubt the one of which we read in Preston, that Lord Strathmore granted a deputation to eleven German Masons to open a Lodge in that city. Findel says we possess no further information respecting this, and that it was "not till 1737 that a Lodge without a name first came into active operation" in Hamburgh. In 1741 it assumed the name of "Absalom," and in Van Dalen's Kalendar will be found one bearing the same name, with 6th December 1737 as its date of constitution. On turning to Cole's List for 1763, I find a Lodge without a name meeting in "Decker Street, Hamburgh," but constituted "Oct. 23 1740." This is probably the Provincial Grand Lodge for which, according to Preston, Lord Kintore, G. M. of England 1740-1, granted a deputation. The proceedings of the P. G. Lodge of Hamburgh were opened in 1741, and it was then that the Lodge without a name, of which there is no record in Pine's and Cole's Lists referred to, assumed the title it still enjoys of "Absalom."

"Q."

To the Editor of The Freemason's Chronicle.

Dear Sir and Brother,—Some time since you entrusted me with the duty of reviewing Bro. Hughan's Reprint of Pine's List of Lodges for 1734, and in the fulfilment of that task I found it necessary to question the accuracy of his judgment in stating that our present Strong Man Lodge, No. 45, should be traced to No. 128 of Pine's List, described as meeting at the "Duke of Marlborough, Petticoate Lane, White Chapell," on the "Third Fryday," the date of its constitution being "Novem. ye 5th, 1734." I suggested that present No. 45 was traceable rather to Pine's No. 110, described at the "Ship Coffee House, Near the Hermitage Bridge," on the "1st and 3rd Tuesday," the date of constitution being "2nd Feb., 1732-3." Bro. Hughan maintained his point, and argued that if it were No. 110, "then it ceased to exist, by the list of 1776, long before the 'Union of 1813.'" He further urged that for many years it had been the only Lodge in connection with 1734, and even in 1776 the only London Lodge of 1734, and he added that, "in the Constitutions of 1738 occurs a London Lodge of 5th November 1734." I still held to my opinion, however, that it was No. 110 of Pine's List for 1734, the reason I gave for doing so—see Freemason's Chronicle for 20th January 1877—being that the late Dr. Oliver, in his Revelations of a Square, was very minute in his details respecting the Strong Man Lodge, and traced it numerically through a series of lists. I also pointed out that already there was much confusion as to the date of Constitution, the text of, and the note appended to, the passage in Oliver giving no less than three dates, namely, in the note "2nd February 1734," and the text "2nd February 1733," or "17th February 1734;" so that Bro. Hughan's "No. 128," constituted "5th November 1734," only complicated matters still further. In his reply to my argument, Bro. Hughan said (see Freemason's Chronicle, 27th January 1877), "'Strong Man' Lodge is still an open question, and there I leave it pro tem." I felt at the time that it was somewhat of a bold venture to adhere to my views in opposition to Bro. Hughan, and was not a little gratified that he so far recognised my prudence in doing so as to consent to the subject remaining an open question. It is all the more gratifying to me to learn, from Bro. Gould's papers, that his opinion, on certain matters in connection with these old Lists, is in my favour—to this extent, at least: "No. 110" of Pine 1734 is described similarly in Pine for 1736 (see Freemason's Chronicle, 27th July 1878); and last week I find that this No. 110 became in Pine 1740 No. 98, which agrees with Oliver's note already referred to, except that "2 February 1732-3" has become "Feb. 2 1734," which also accords with Oliver's statement. Bro. Gould remarks on this change of date, to "1734 from 1733," that, "The present positions of the last-mentioned Lodges, Nos. 98 and 99, afford a good illustration of the inconveniences that have ensued; No. 98, the senior of the two, being placed after the fair date of its Warrant as No. 45 (Strong Man), and No. 99, the junior, being placed higher than its proper seniority, as No. 35 (Medina)," which had been altered to "1732 from 1733." In Cole's List of Lodges for 1763, contributed to the Masonic Magazine for December 1877, the day of Constitution is altered to "Feb. 17," but the description of the Lodge, which by the closing up of numbers had become "No. 68,"—this also agrees with Oliver—identifies it as being one and the same with No. 98 of 1740. Cole's description locates it at the "Sampson and Lion, E. Smithfield, late the Ship at ye Hermitage—the italics are mine. This No. 68, according to Oliver, became No. 57 in 1770, No. 44 in 1781, and No. 41 in 1792, as which it remained up to the Union, after which, according to Hughan, it became No. 61, then 1832 No. 53, and in 1863 No. 45, as now. Thus Bro. Gould's account, supplemented by Cole's account of 1763, apparently justifies my views.

One other point is worth noting. Bro. Hughan, in his reprint of Pine 1734, says of the present "Medina" Lodge, No. 35, Cowes, that "it was warranted in 1731, but the foregoing list" (Pine 1734) "contains no such reference, so that it is likely the Lodge has been removed since its constitution." Bro. Gould bears out this suggestion by Bro. Hughan. "Present No. 35 (Medina)," says the former, "was a London Lodge up to 1761, but, in 1762, was removed, or its warrant, transferred to West Cowes, Isle of Wight." It is the No. 111 of Pine 1734 and 1736, described as meeting at the "Theatre Tavern, Goodman's Fields," and constituted 17th February 1723." In 1740 it became No. 99, meeting at the "Fleece, Goodman's Fields," but date of constitution was described as "Feb. 17, 1732." In Cole's List for 1763 we have it as "No. 57," meeting at "West Cowes, Isle of Wight," and dated "Feb. 17, 1732." Thus the trace which Bro. Hughan was unable to find is supplied by Bro. Gould, and "Present No. 35" is, apparently, the "No. 111, Theatre Tavern, Goodman's Fields, 2nd and 4th Monday, 17 Feb., 1732-3," of Pine 1734, only it has since been promoted to "1731" according to Grand Lodge Calendar.

When I discussed this question before, I suggested that some member of the Strong Man might throw light on the subject. Surely there must be among them one sufficiently interested in the festivities of their Lodge to say something on this matter! And it would cost so little trouble!! So with the brethren of the Medina, they might help Bros. Hughan and Gould at the expenditure of a very little time and trouble! But wisdom cries aloud in the streets—or at least in the columns of the Freemason's Chronicle, and the Craft heed her not.

Fraternally yours,

Your Reviewer of Hughan's Reprint of Pine's List of Lodges 1734.

THE GOOSE AND GRIDIRON.

To the Editor of the Freemason's Chronicle.

Dear Sir and Brother, — In my communication, "Masonic Mysteries," printed 31st August, pp 150-1, I called attention to two rival geese and gridirons, and made a hap-hazard guess, that the smaller goose was somehow connected with the idea of music; and it seems that, for once at least, I was literally "sound on the goose," as the following extract from Brewer's "Dictionary of Phrase and Fable" will show.

"Goose and Gridiron.—A public house sign, properly a music house, like Evans'. When it ceased to be a music house, some facetious landlord, to turn its former use into contempt, chose for his sign a 'Goose striking the bars of a gridiron with its foot,' and wrote below, 'The Swan and Harp."—"The Tatler, with notes, Vol. iv. p 206."

I failed to find in the Tatler any reference to the goose, &c. Mr. Brewer must, therefore, have found the above notice in the notes appended to some edition of the Tatler. The above, if true, settles the question, that the Goose and Gridiron engraved on Pine's Lodge list in 1725, answering the above description, is the Goose of 1717. But whether the said public house was known as the "Goose and Gridiron" before 24th June 1717? Whether the Goose on the top of the chimney pot, was the sign of the old music house? Whether the last described Goose was hung up as a sign after 1725? or whether it was the work of a Masonic wag to pass it off as a joke upon some Masonic editor, remains yet to be discovered.

Respectfully and fraternally yours,

CHARITY STEWARDS.

To the Editor of the Freemason's Chronicle.

Dear Sir and Brother,—Alpha's letter, which appeared last week, is a fair specimen of hypercriticism. The question, as originally propounded, related to the expediency or non-expediency of having a banquet at the Annual Festivals in aid of our several Masonic Charities. I said that we Masons, in electing to have a banquet, merely followed a system which is almost universal in this country. I believe this is correct, and ALPHA admits "it may be so in certain respects." I further pointed out, that, as regards our Charities, the aggregate of the sums subscribed in each case, found its way into the coffers of the Institution—a not unnatural inference from which is, that while the system may be almost universal, the manner in which it is practised is not necessarily so. But even supposing that our Charities bore the cost of the banquet, &c., it would still be a most profitable outlay. Non-stewards and ladies, having no claim whatever to dine at the expense of the Charity, would still have to pay for their tickets, so that the amount of the expense borne by the Institution would form a very small proportion of the amount subscribed. Let us take Bro. Binckes's last Festival, which yielded in round figures some £10,400. The £400 would certainly have more than covered the cost of the Stewards' dinners and what I will describe as the official outlay, in the shape of badges, advertising, music, &c., or somewhere about four per cent. on the net produce.

As to Bro. Binckes's arguments being, as I suggested, "well nigh, if not quite unanswerable," that is merely the expression of my individual opinion, which must be taken for what it is worth and nothing more. ALPHA's suggestion, however, that Bro. Binckes does not himself appear to think so, and the reason for this suggestion, namely, that Bro. Binckes is writing "with a view of doing good to the Institutions," are, with all due deference to ALPHA, about as milk-and-watery a suggestion and reason as it is possible for any correspondent to propound. I presume Bro. Binckes has faith in the arguments he has the courage to express, and I dare say, with my knowledge of "OUR HERCULES'S" powers as a dialectician, he is quite prepared to maintain them against all comers. At the same time his native modesty would forbid his suggesting their unanswerableness, while it is open to me and others, who read his letters, to conceive they are unanswerable or nearly so. It is most unlikely that Bro. Binckes or any one else who may write "with a view of doing good to our Institutions," would advance any arguments in the virtue of which he had not entire faith. I think no one can have read his letters on "(a) the necessity for Anniversary Festival dinners," and "(b) the expenditure of both time and money by those who undertake the duties of Stewards," without arriving at the conclusion that he believes fully in the virtue of the present system, and I should imagine he is prepared to uphold his reasons for so thinking. He cannot say my opinions are "well nigh, if not quite unanswerable," but in communicating them to you, Sir, with a view to insertion in your valuable journal, he does, in fact, challenge the opinion of the Masonic public as to their merits. Lord Skelmersdale at the Mark Benevolent Fund dinner put it, as we are told, suggestively—but without condemning the present system—"Could we not raise the necessary funds for our Institutions without incurring the expense of a dinner?" Bro. Binckes had risen, and in reply, said, "I think not, my lord, with my sixteen or seventeen years' experience as Secretary of one of them, and there are many reasons for my so thinking." Those reasons are, in my humble judgement, such as I have described them. Let ALPHA, instead of criticising poor unfortunate me, for venturing to have an opinion, and others answer them if they can, and suggest a better plan for raising the needful. I will wager Bro. Binckes will be the first to accept any system which it can be shown will surpass the present one in accumulating funds for our Institutions. He has to bear the brunt of the labour entailed by the present system, not the least considerable or responsible portion of which is the ordering all the necessary arrangements for the dinner. I dare say he will be only too glad to find this labour reduced.

Fraternally and faithfully yours,

DISPOSAL OF LODGE FUNDS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am much obliged to you for having given space to my letter last week, and in accordance with my proposal therein, I send you a second balance sheet, which I am pleased to say is of a much more Masonic character.

I may add that this has not been selected with a view of showing extremes, but is the second one which I came across. This Lodge was not established until two years after that which I noticed last week. The difference in the mode of managing these two Lodges must be considerable if we may judge from the state of the funds.

BALANCE SHEET OF LODGE ———. ONE YEAR—1877-8:—

RECEIPTS.

Balances (including £150 invested)	£336	3	2
Interest on invested funds	6	9	9
Other receipts	259	11	0

EXPENDITURE.

Tavern bill's for Lodge meetings; the summer Festival and Committee on same	£238	19	6
Grant to Masonic charity	20	0	0
Tyler	2	10	0
Printing, postages, &c.	6	7	1
Balances (including £244 12s 6d invested)	301	14	4
	£602	3	11

It will thus be seen that the members of this Lodge are able to considerably augment their funds by investing the unemployed portion of their capital. The amount likely to be added, in the way of interest, during the current year being over ten guineas.

The experience gained in the case of this and the two Lodges referred to by Bro. Barnes, in his letter last week, shew that you, in your article, under-estimated the amount which can be earned by putting money out at interest. You therein state that three per cent. can be realised. These examples shew that, as far as large balances are concerned, 4 and even 4½ per cent. is attainable.

Yours fraternally,

UNION JACK.

DEDICATION OF A NEW MASONIC HALL AT SHIPLEY.

ADDRESS BY EARL CARNARVON, PRO GRAND MASTER OF ENGLAND.

ON Tuesday afternoon, an interesting ceremony in connection with the Airedale Lodge of Freemasons, took place at their new Masonic Hall, viz., the dedication of the Lodge Room to the purposes of Freemasonry. The brethren of the Lodge assembled in good force but owing to the limited accommodation of the building (although sufficiently large for the purposes of their own meetings), they were unable to make the occasion so general as it otherwise would have been. Their invitations included the acting members of the Provincial Grand Lodge of West Yorkshire, and they had succeeded in securing the honour of the company of the Most Worshipful Brother the Earl of Carnarvon Pro Grand Master.

The Lodge having been opened by the W.M. and Officers of the Airedale Lodge, Provincial Grand Lodge entered, and was presided over by the Right Worshipful Bro. Lieut. Colonel Sir H. Edwards, Bart., Prov. G.M., assisted by the Worshipful Bro. T. W. Tew D.P.G.M. of West Yorkshire. After the customary salutations of these two dignitaries, a procession was formed, and escorted the M.W. Pro Grand Master Earl Carnarvon into the Lodge.

Sir Henry Edwards, Prov. Grand Master, replying to his salute, said he begged to return his hearty thanks to the assembly for their very cordial reception of him. We are gathered here to-day, he said, to perform an important ceremony. It is to dedicate this new Masonic Hall to the purposes of Freemasonry for ever; and to encourage and exhort the brethren in this town and Province to learn and practise more and more the beautiful principles of our ancient Fraternity. We are honoured to-day by the presence of the Pro Grand Master of England, the Earl of Carnarvon. This compliment to West Yorkshire is warmly felt and appreciated by the whole Craft in this Province, over which I have the honour to preside. I need not dilate on the admirable way in which the Pro Grand Master performs his Masonic responsibilities, or the immense interest he takes in the affairs of Grand Lodge. He always does everything he undertakes for the benefit of the Craft in the same admirable manner, and, I repeat, we owe him a debt of gratitude for being amongst us to-day. The address of the Pro Grand Master to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, on his installation as Grand Master, on the 28th April 1875, which I had the honour to listen to, will be long remembered. We welcome the Pro Grand Master to West Yorkshire, a Province of sixty-five Lodges and 3000 Loyal Masonic subjects, who read with the deepest interest of his dignified conduct whilst occupying the throne of Freemasonry in Grand Lodge. (Applause.) After referring to the promptness with which the Province of West Yorkshire is worked, Sir Henry said,—It is a well-known circumstance that wherever you find prosperous Lodges, they are certain to be most loyal and punctual observers of the regulations and landmarks of Grand Lodge and the bye-laws of the Craft. (Hear, hear.) Again thanking the Pro Grand Master for his presence amongst them, the R.W. Prov. Grand Master called upon the brethren to salute his lordship with the honour due to his exalted rank; a call most heartily responded to.

The Secretary, Bro. Riley P.M. then read an address of welcome to Earl Carnarvon, which he afterwards presented to his lordship.

The Right Hon. Earl Carnarvon, Pro Grand Master, in responding, said, Right Worshipful Sir, and Brethren,—It did not need so hearty a demonstration of feeling to assure him of meeting in Yorkshire, and, indeed, in every part where Freemasonry prevails, a truly fraternal and sympathetic welcome. He rejoiced greatly to have the opportunity of coming amongst them that day. He rejoiced to hear from their R.W. Prov. Grand Master of the progress of Freemasonry in West Yorkshire. He rejoiced to take part in meeting the W.M. and brethren of the Airedale Lodge, a Lodge old in Masonic history, well known in the Craft, and holding an honourable position in this Province, in their new home; and he cordially tendered them his hearty good wishes. It would be the beginning of a fresh chapter in the history of the Lodge, and he hoped it would also be the beginning of fresh honours for Masonic success. (Applause). It had been truly said in that address which had been read over to him (Earl Carnarvon) that Masonry had a world-wide name and character. He would only add a few words to that assertion, that when we reflect on the truthfulness of that fact, it is more patent to us that we each have a great duty to perform. Our aim, by our own conduct, whether we act in the Lodge, or in the Province, or in our individual capacity outside the Lodge, should be to uphold and maintain the fair fame of the name and character of Freemasonry; that we may not only hand it down to the next generation unsullied, but send it on with additional lustre. (Applause.) All who study Freemasonry know the high standpoint its principles profess; and all who come to its ranks ought to live to those principles. (Hear, hear.) Every Lodge, he said, ought to possess a home of its own nothing so much as a migratory residence tended to damage the prestige of a Lodge. A settled home was a source of continually gathering new history, and he hoped the new home of the Airedale Lodge would be the means of additional attractions to its members. (Loud applause.)

The ceremony of dedication was then proceeded with, according to ancient Masonic style, by the W.D.Prov. Grand Master Bro. Tew in an able manner, after which the Pro Grand Master declared the Lodge duly and properly dedicated to God and His glory, and to Masonry.

After the business of the Lodge had been brought to a close, a sumptuous luncheon, under the superintendence of Bro. R. Brewer, of the Belle Vue Hotel, Bradford, was served in the banqueting-room, after which the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were given and honoured.

In response to the toast of the Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, M.W. Pro Grand Master, which was most enthusiastically received with loud and continuous cheering,

His Lordship said it was no common feeling of satisfaction to find himself there to-day; it was also a satisfaction to meet with so hearty a welcome. He thanked the Airedale Lodge for their invitation, and also the representatives of other Lodges who had joined in his reception. His knowledge of Yorkshire was small, yet it was such as to teach him that there were no plainer, franker speaking people than the Yorkshire people, and none who could give so hearty a welcome. (Applause.) The county possessed some of the best temporal gifts which God could send. (Hear, hear.) He could not lay claim to an extended age in Masonry, yet he had taken considerable interest in its welfare. He could truly say he had never known the Craft so prosperous. They were wealthy, powerful, and free from strife; and that was a condition that all who were in authority ought to be proud of. Yet here he would give one word of counsel. Our strength lies not in the numbers, or the wealth of the Craft, but in maintaining intact, collectively and individually, the great principles of our Order, in being steadfast to its great and good landmarks. His time with them was now short, but he trusted at no distant day to renew his acquaintance—(loud cheers)—and speaking, not as a half stranger, but as an old friend. One reason for his leaving them so hurriedly was that he was going to pay a visit to an old and dear friend of his, their tried and honoured late Prov. Grand Master—Lord Ripon. (Cheers.) It would be some satisfaction to him to know that though his Masonic brethren disagreed with the action he took in seceding from them, he had not forfeited their esteem. (Loud cheers.)

His Lordship then briefly proposed Success to the New Hall, which was duly received.

MISS FLORENCE SMART'S EVENING CONCERT.

On Tuesday, the 1st instant, at the Athenæum, Camden-road, Miss Florence Smart gave her first Evening Concert, in the presence of a numerous and fashionable audience. The first item in the programme had to be postponed for the arrival of Mr. Pettit, and the Concert opened, somewhat late, with the duet "I would that my love," by Mendelssohn, executed by Miss Mary Davies and Miss Emily Dones. Mr. Coates followed, with Arthur Sullivan's "Stars in the Summer Night," which he was called upon to repeat, and subsequently followed with song by the same author, "The distant shore." The excellent manner in which this gentleman rendered his songs, caused us to regret extremely that he was not permitted to complete the programme, with "Oft in the Stilly Night." Madame Antoinette Sterling is so well known, and likewise appreciated, that we need merely mention her singing of "Thou art weary" and "Caller Herrin,"—with encores, "The better Land" and "The Old Sailor's Wife;" and say these songs were charmingly rendered, as may well be imagined. Mr. Victor Buziau's solo on the violin, "Cavatina" by J. Raff, was listened to with breathless attention, and was, of the instrumental portion, the pièce de resistance of the evening. Miss Mary Davies followed, with Eaton Farring's song, "When the Gorse is in blossom," which was encored, and when we say this lady is a rising artiste we mean no idle compliment. Miss Emily Dones gave "The Green Trees Whispered," by Balfe, and Hullah's "Storm," both of which we have heard this lady execute more effectively on other occasions; however, we must not omit to state that she was suffering from hoarseness. The second part opened with Beethoven's Trio in G, for pianoforte, violin, and violoncello, by Miss Smart, Mr. Victor Buziau, and Mr. Walter Pettit. This was a severe test on the powers of the executants, and the time it occupied, 25 minutes, proved too great a strain on the attention of the audience. If we may be permitted to be facetious, we would suggest that the first of Madame Stirling's songs, "Thou art weary," might have been appropriately sung at the close of the Trio, such lengthy morceaux, however skilfully executed, are too much for most audiences, and the words might have been truthfully addressed to not a few of the listeners. Mr. Walter Pettit played with much skill a Solo for violoncello, "Caprice Hongrois," by Emile Dunkler, but in truth it must be told that the audience, though so appreciative of the songs, had no special liking for instrumental music after Mr. Buziau's performance; a buzz of relief could be heard throughout the room at the conclusion of the piece. Miss Florence Smart presided at the piano with great ability, and the Solo "La Regalta," by Liszt, was thoroughly appreciated. Altogether the Concert was a success, and we wish the promoter may secure pupils and increased prosperity: we know her to be a talented lady, and thoroughly deserving of public support.

We understand that this Concert is to be repeated on the 5th Nov., at the Athenæum, Camden-road, and we hope the lady's friends may not on this occasion engage themselves for domestic pyrotechnic displays.

THE MASONIC FUNERAL SERVICE.

From the "Voice of Masonry."

THE ceremonies performed by Master Masons when they commit the body of a deceased brother to the grave do not constitute a religious service, in the proper meaning of the term. When, therefore, a church, as is sometimes the case, opposes the performance of these services by a Masonic Lodge, on the ground that it is an interference with a sacred function that should be administered only by a priest or a clergyman, it commits a very serious error, which could be easily corrected by a knowledge of the true character of the Masonic rite.

The whole system of Freemasonry being founded on the science of symbolism, every rite and ceremony that it practises is of a symbolic character. The funeral service which it performs over its deceased members is, therefore, a symbolic service. It has nothing to do with a religious rite. It does not offer itself as a substitute for the Church Service. It does not propose to substitute its own rites as a necessary supplement to any form of "Christian burial." What the Church does is altogether of a religious character. The death and burial of a Christian affords to his surviving brethren an opportunity of enforcing, by this instance of mortality, the religious lessons that refer to the uncertainty of life and the certainty of death, and serves as the occasion for reminding the irreligious and the unconverted of the necessity of coming into that sacred communion where, alone, it is taught that the grave is robbed of its victory and the sting is taken from death.

Now, to none of this does the Masonic funeral ceremony over a deceased Mason make any pretence. It is not the most superstitious and ignorant, alone, who are impressed with the opinion that funeral rites are necessary, if not to the future welfare of the dead at least, to the consolation of the living. Christianity, of course, does not maintain the old pagan belief that the unburned dead hover for a hundred years on the banks of the Styx, before they are permitted to enter the boat of Charon and be transported to the Elysian fields. And yet there is no one, even in this enlightened day, who does not look with repugnance on the thought that the loved one should be consigned in almost the contempt of silence to the last resting place of all. "Christian burial" is, therefore, something that almost every Christian looks to as a fitting termination of life. "To be buried out of Christian burial," as Goodman Delver has it—that is, to be consigned to the grave without the sanction of the Church's forms and ceremonies—has been considered as being, in a way, dishonouring and ignominious.

Then, as the greater portion of the Masonic Fraternity is composed of Christians, imbued with Christian views, and affected by Christian prejudices, it is preposterous to suppose that any such Mason would desire, by the rites of his Order, to supplant or supersede the burial services of the Church. And no clergyman nor professor of the Christian faith would ever entertain such a supposition if he knew what was the real meaning of the Masonic service.

Speculative Masonry is, I have already said, a symbolic institution, and its whole system is founded on the science of symbolism. It is the only secret institution of the present day that pretends to such a character. All its initiations are symbolic; all its rights and ceremonies are symbolic; everything that it does inside or outside of the Lodge is symbolic. If it dedicates a hall, or lays the corner-stone of some public edifice, or celebrates, in procession, the festival of a patron saint, the clothing of the members, the implements, and decorations and banners which are borne, are all grounded on the symbolic idea and have a symbolic meaning. And when it joins in consigning a brother to his narrow home, and gives to his mortal remains a last farewell, of all the acts of symbolism which are peculiar to the Institution this burial service is not the least symbolic. And how do we sustain this proposition, which to what Masons call the profane world must be very novel?

Prominent among the symbols of Masonry, perhaps we should rightly say most prominent, is the symbolic death of the Third degree. To every Mason, however imperfectly instructed he may be on other points, the symbolism of the Third degree is very familiar. He knows that it teaches the resurrection of the dead, one of the two dogmas which constitute the orthodox Masonic creed, the other being the existence of a personal God. As we stand around the remains of our brother as they are about to be consigned to the dust, we only consummate this symbolism of death which was begun in the Lodge when he was initiated into the sublime mysteries of a Master Mason.

"Every Master Mason," says Hutchinson, "represents a man saved from the grave of iniquity and raised to the faith of salvation."

Around every Master Mason other brethren have gathered at one time to witness with solemn awe the simulated death and resurrection, which, by this affecting symbol, inspired them with the conviction of a future life. And when this symbolic death and resurrection, so mystically represented in the Lodge, are to be replaced by the real death and resurrection to a higher life, Masons again assemble around the spot where lies the senseless body of their beloved one, and prepare to perfect the symbolic idea which had been first presented in the Third degree. The Masonic funeral service is, then, not a religious, but a strictly symbolic rite. And thus received we are enabled to understand many things connected with its administration, which would be otherwise inexplicable.

In the first place, none but Master Masons have a right to Masonic burial. "Fellow Crafts or Apprentices," says Preston, to whom we are indebted for the first formula of the service, "are not entitled to funeral obsequies." Why is this a regulation? Simply because to the Apprentice, or to the Fellow Craft, there is, in his initiation, no symbolism of death which is awaiting for its perfection the time and place of the real death and the real grave. To those who have received only the initiation of the First and Second degrees, the symbolism of the mystical death, which is implicitly preserved in the ceremony of burying a Master Mason, would be wholly unintelligible. As the ceremony is a symbolic one we must obey, in its administra tion, the laws of symbolism. No Mason, no matter how many degrees he may have received, no matter how high he may have climbed on the Masonic ladder, can be Masonically buried, except as a Master Mason. In some jurisdictions (I know of one at least) Grand Chapters have adopted a funeral service for Royal Arch Masons, and the Knights Templars have, not very long ago, taken the same step. But the funeral service of the Templars (and what is said of them might just as well be said of the Royal Arch Masons) is either religious or symbolical, or it is neither. It cannot be a religious service, because modern Templarism does not profess to be a religion, and although teaching Christian doctrines, it does not claim to be a Christian sect. And even the old Templars who sprang out of the Crusades, although they called their institution a religious Order, never thought, as Knights, of performing any religious rites, but left the discharge of all such duties to their Chaplains who were regularly ordained to the work by ecclesiastical authority.

The Mediæval Guilds paid much attention to the funerals of their members. All the expenses were paid by the company, and the members walked to the church in solemn procession. But the services were always performed by a "mortuary priest" who was engaged for that purpose by the Guild. Neither is the Templar funeral service a symbolical service, for there is, in no part of the Templar system of initiation a rite or ceremony which develops the symbolism of death as in the Master's degree. If it be, then, neither religious nor symbolic, the funeral service of a Templar, however beautiful may be the language in which it is framed, must be unmeaning and useless, for it is not sustained by religious authority nor recommended by Masonic symbolism.

The same thing may be said of the Chapter funeral services, in those jurisdictions where such a service exists. There is, in none of the degrees of Royal Arch Masonry, any symbolism of death upon which a Masonic symbolic funeral service could be based.

At the hour of death, however high he may have reached in his Masonic researches, the Mason comes back, instinctively, to that solemn degree in which alone he has learned the great lessons of life and death.

And as we stand around the grave of our brother, all of us, from the highest dignitaries in Commandery or Chapter, to the humblest Mason who is recorded on our roll, are Master Masons carrying out, in open day and in the face of the world, the symbolism which we were taught in our nocturnal assemblies in the recesses of our Lodges.

It was a beautiful and an expressive thought of the Greeks when they made the same word signify "to die," and "to be initiated." With them death was the initiation into life eternal. Every Mason knows how, in like manner, death and initiation are closely related in the Master's degree. Hence, of all the degrees in Masonry, the Third, alone, is appropriately supplied with a funeral service. The simulated death is succeeded by the actual one, and thus the lesson of life and immortality is perfected. The real grave is but a supplement of the figurative one, and the symbolization of death and the resurrection are continued from the Lodge to the cemetery.

If it is unmeaning for Royal Arch Masons, or Templar Masons, to have a funeral service, because it is not religious and cannot be symbolical, since there is no symbolism of death in the Capitular or Chivalric degrees on which to rationally found such a service, how much more unmeaning must funeral ceremonies be in a secret society where there is no symbolism of any kind. Such societies, however they may obtain our approval for their charitable deeds as benevolent associations, while paying by the attendance of their members all honor to the memory of a deceased associate, should certainly be satisfied with the services of the Church. Having had no symbolic service when he was admitted into their society, he can have none when he leaves it. But if these societies claim that their service is not symbolical but religious, then they come into collision with the Church, because they thus imply that the Church service is incomplete and requires another to make it perfect. But this is a question between the Church and these societies into which we have no wish and no right to enter. To borrow a slang phrase, the only excuse for using it being its exceeding appropriateness, "it is not our funeral."

Having thus shown that the Masonic funeral service is altogether symbolical and belongs exclusively to Master Masons and to the Master's degree, the other regulations on this subject claim our attention.

Preston, to whom we are indebted for the law of Masonic burials, lays down the regulation that except in the case of foreigners and sojourners, "no Mason can be interred with the formalities of the Order, unless it be at his own special request communicated to the Master of the lodge of which he died a member." (Preston, Illust. Oliver ed, p 89.)

This provision is in accordance with the general spirit of the Institution. Freemasonry is a voluntary, not a compulsory Order. When a candidate is admitted to receive its mysteries, he must, previous to his initiation, declare that he has come "of his own free will and accord." If, after having advanced one step in his novitiate, he should declare his unwillingness to go further, no Lodge or member would seek by promises or threats to induce him to proceed. Every symbol must be communicated to willing recipients only.

Now, as the funeral service at the grave of a deceased brother is but a continuation and necessary sequence of the funeral service in the Lodge, and as this former part of the symbolism was imparted only at the request of the candidate, it follows as a rule of consistency that the latter part of the same symbolism should also be illustrated only at his request. One portion of the symbolism cannot be of a voluntary character and the other portion compulsory. It is to be presumed that if a Mason wishes the service to be performed he will say so before he dies. If he does not express the wish, it is equally to be presumed that he declines the symbolism. And as the Lodge could bestow nothing upon him while he lived, without his consent, neither can it bestow anything upon him after his death, which before dying, he had explicitly or implicitly declined to receive. This is the reason of the law that a Master Mason cannot be buried Masonically unless it be at his request. The law, in more recent times, has been stretched, in a spirit of liberality, so as to recognise the request of his immediate relatives as if it were his own, because they are naturally supposed to represent what were his sentiments.

The next regulation of Masonic burials is, that no Mason can be buried, "foreigners and sojourners excepted," unless he has been a man of good character and exemplary conduct. Preston, it is true, does not enunciate this law in express words. But it is implied from the fact that he is required to have been at the time of his death a member of a Lodge. The request for his burial must have been, says Preston, "communicated to the Master of the Lodge of which he died a member."

Now, as it is a well settled maxim of law that everything that is done by competent authority is presumed to be rightly done, and as the Lodge had neither suspended nor expelled the deceased, since at the time of his death he was a member, it follows that he could have done nothing that would have rendered him liable to suspension or expulsion. Therefore, being a member "in good standing" at the time of his death, it is to be taken for granted that his life had been a virtuous one. Now, why is it that none but good Masons can be buried with the formalities of the Order? It is because the symbolic death of the Third degree was that of a virtuous man. And at the time when that symbolism of death is imparted to the aspirant he is told to "be true and faithful, and imitate the example of that celebrated artist whom he has once represented." Throughout the remainder of his life the unswerving integrity of that "celebrated artist" is ever an example to him. His death and resurrection are a hope and a consolation. When we stand around the grave of our brother, we are reminded of that death and burial which had been symbolized to us, as of one who had sacrificed his life to preserve his integrity. Recalling all the details of the legend of the Third degree, it is evident that to appropriate the funeral services founded on that legend to an unworthy man and Mason would be to debase and to misapply its symbolism. Hence, none but Master Masons "in good standing" in their Lodge, that is, of irreproachable conduct, are entitled to Masonic burial.

From what has been here said the following principles may be assumed as the results of the enquiry:

1. The Masonic funeral service, is not a religious service. Therefore it does not come into collision with the service of the Church, being intended neither as an addition to or a substitute for it.

2. It is a symbolic service carrying out, at the grave, the symbolic idea which had previously been taught in the Lodge.

3. Its symbolism is founded on the symbolism of death and burial as presented in the Master's degree. Therefore any service performed by Masons of a higher degree or by any non-religious society must be unmeaning and inexpressive, because there is no such symbolism from which the service can derive any application or significance.

4. Being a part of the symbolism of the Third degree it can be performed over Master Masons only.

5. For the same reason and because Masonry is a voluntary institution, which requires the "free will and accord" of every one who would share its mysteries, the service can be performed only on the request of the deceased brother expressed before his death, or what is supposed to be the same thing, on the request of his immediate relatives.

6. As the symbolism in a Masonic funeral refers to the death and burial of one who was distinguished in the annals of Masonry for his virtues, the service can only be performed over one who is his representative, that is, a worthy Master Mason "in good standing." Otherwise the symbolism would be inconsistent and contradictory in its interpretation.

7. Lastly, as none but worthy Masons can, for the reason above stated, be interred with this funeral service, and as the only evidence of such worth recognized by Masonic law is "good standing," unaffiliated Masons, not being in "good standing," are not entitled to Masonic burial. An unaffiliated Mason may, perchance, be a good man, but he cannot be esteemed a good Mason.

THE LAST CHANCE.

Royal Masonic Institution for Boys.

SEVENTH APPLICATION, OCTOBER 1878.

ARTHUR H. DAY, Aged Ten Years,

SON of the late Bro. JOHN DAY, of Tendring, in the County of Essex, Farmer and Brewer. The Deceased was for eight years, and up to a short time of his death, a Subscribing Member of the Lodge of Hope, No. 433, Brightlingsea. During the last years of his life he became much reduced in circumstances, in consequence of a long affliction—Paralysis. At his decease, which took place on the 30th of December 1871, barely sufficient funds were realised to pay his debts, and the Widow was consequently obliged to give up the business, and is mainly dependent on her friends for support. She has two children (out of a family of five) entirely dependent. The Applicant is a quick, promising Boy, greatly needing your sympathy.

The Case is strongly recommended by the following Brethren:—R. W. Bros. W. W. B. BEACH M.P. P.G.M. Hants and Isle of Wight; * Sir. J. H. 67 BARBICAN, E.C.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

ON Sunday, Her Majesty the Queen paid a visit to the Princess of Wales at Abergeldie Castle, and has, together with the Princess, paid visits to the Hon. Lady Biddulph since the death of her husband. H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, accompanied by the Princesses Louise, Victoria and Maud, reached Abergeldie Castle on Thursday, and on Friday and Monday visited Her Majesty the Queen at Balmoral. H.R.H. Prince Frederick William of Prussia left Balmoral on Friday.

By the death of General Sir Thomas M. Biddulph, K.C.B., Keeper of the Privy Purse, Her Majesty has lost a most faithful servant. The deceased, who had suffered from a severe attack of bronchitis and inflammation of the lungs, expired on Saturday at Abergeldie.

Mr. Justice Keogh, one of the Irish judges, died on Tuesday, at Bingen, aged fifty-nine years. The deceased acted as Attorney General for Ireland during the time of Lord Aberdeen's Government.

On Saturday Mr. George Burt and Mr. Thomas Bevan were, with customary ceremony, installed as Sheriffs for London and Middlesex for the coming year. Later in the day, the various City Companies and others entitled assembled for the purpose of electing the Lord Mayor, the choice resulting in favour of Alderman Sir Charles Whetham.

On Friday the pilot in charge of the Bywell Castle at the time of the collision on the Thames was further examined, and at the conclusion of his examination expressed his great regret at the accident and his sympathy with the sufferers. The first mate was the next person brought forward, and other evidence having been given, the Court adjourned until Tuesday, on which day further witnesses appeared. The Coroner stated, that in consequence of strong representations having been made to him as to the unseaworthiness of the Princess Alice, he had determined to apply for the nomination of an expert to examine her timbers. On Thursday, which was the next day devoted to the inquiry, the Coroner stated that he had appointed four persons to examine the wreck, and would question them on oath as to the condition thereof, at the proper time. The witnesses on that day included the mate, an engineer, and a seaman on board the Bywell Castle. Several statements having been made as to the condition of the water of the Thames at the point where the collision occurred, in consequence of the sewer outfall there the Metropolitan Board of Works have referred the matter to the Works and General Purposes Committee, and discussions have occurred in various other assemblies on the same subject. The fund at the Mansion House raised in aid of the sufferers, now amounts to £33,000. Of this sum about £10,000 has been distributed by the committee among various applicants.

Pumping operations are still in progress at the Abercarn Colliery. Until the water is cleared from the mine it is of course impossible for any survey thereof to take place. The relatives of those in the pit are naturally anxious that the work should proceed as speedily as possible, especially as fears are entertained that many of the bodies will be buried in the falls which will certainly occur from the force of the explosion and the action taken since. Great distress prevails in the district in consequence of the calamity, the whole of the men lately engaged at the colliery being out of employment by reason of the stoppage of the works.

The inquest on the late fatal fire at Birmingham has resulted in the verdict "That the fire was designedly caused, but by whom there was no evidence to show." The jury added to their finding a severe censure upon the local police, together with a strong condemnation of the defective arrangements of the Fire Brigade.

The state of affairs on the north-west frontier of our Indian empire is causing considerable anxiety both in that country and here. The Indian Government, who wish to give the Ameer of Afghanistan every opportunity of making amends for the insult offered to our Envoy, are making active preparations for a campaign, but it is expected that very little can be done until the spring, beyond subduing those of the hill tribes who are opposed to us, and enlisting the support of the others. The popular belief in India is, that the Ameer will take no notice of our preparations, although the Government seem to think that the display will bring him to terms without fighting. General Crawford Chamberlain, brother of Sir Neville, will, it is stated, be entrusted with the chief command. Various rumours come from St. Petersburgh on the question, among others is one that in case of any attack by England, Russia could hardly leave the Ameer undefended, and in that case Afghanistan would play a part similar to that of Servia during the late campaign. Among a certain class there, it is thought an Anglo-Russian war in Asia is unavoidable. On the Continent, the course of events is anxiously watched, the general opinion being that war must ensue.

A ministerial crisis has occurred in Hungary in consequence of some difference of opinion as to the means of defraying the cost of the Bosnian occupation, and, as a consequence, Herr Szell, the Minister of Finance, tendered his resignation. This was followed, on Monday, by the whole of his colleagues taking a similar step. The Emperor has accepted that of the former, but will take time to consider those of the latter. It is stated that the next vote of credit on this account will be for eight and a half millions sterling. Numerous bodies of the insurgents are crossing the frontier into Servia, it being estimated that upwards of ten thousand have either taken that step or are on their way. The principal inhabitants of Zwornik having met the Austrian troops, and made the submission of that town, some thousands of Turkish soldiers, with two pachas, also crossed into Servia, where they were at once disarmed. The Austrians having thought the fortress of Klobuk might be used as a basis of future risings, have completely destroyed it, and have disarmed the Mahometan inhabitants thereof. Generally, throughout Bosnia, the insurgents as well as the Turkish troops seem to have abandoned all idea of further resistance, they not thinking it likely any additional assistance will be accorded them by the Porte. The total losses of the Austrians in killed an wounded, and those who have died from sickness during the campaign, is stated at 4000 men. The effective strength of the French army for next year is fixed at nearly 500,000 men; the expense of maintaining it being estimated at twenty-two millions sterling. Great anxiety is felt at the Vatican in consequence of its being expected that the negotiations with Germany will be broken off. In consequence of the recent reduction of pay, and the partiality with which rewards are bestowed, a mutiny occurred in Japan during the latter part of last month; 300 men belonging to the Imperial Guard and the Artillery rebelled, and killed three of their officers. The disturbance was quickly put down. From Morocco a severe famine is reported, and deaths from starvation are of daily occurrence. The yellow fever epidemic still rages in the Southern States of America, and in some of the country districts and suburbs of large towns the death rate is increasing.

The annual meeting of the Prov. Grand Lodge of Northumberland, will take place on Tuesday next, at the Corn Exchange, Alnwick. The Right. Hon. Earl Percy, Prov. G. Master, will preside, and on this occasion, the Prov. G. Master invites the brethren to dine with him, with the permission of His Grace the Duke of Northumberland, at Alnwick Castle. Prov. G. Lodge will be opened at two o'clock precisely. Ample arrangements have been made for a large attendance of the brethren of the Province, and it is expected that the gathering will be one of the most important ever held in the district in connection with Freemasonry.

The season is at hand when people who are given to floriculture will be thinking of laying in their stock of hyacinths, tulips, and other bulbous plants. Consequently, the florists generally are busy issuing their autumn catalogues with a view to attracting intending purchasers. We have received copy of Messrs. Dick Radclyffe & Co.'s Catalogue, and having carefully noted its contents we are satisfied that those of our readers who may favour this well-known firm with their custom will obtain what they require at moderate charges and of excellent quality. The collections of bulbs, either for the open ground or for indoor decoration in pots and glasses are remarkably cheap, considering the number and variety of the sorts included. Two guineas for a collection comprising 300 crocus, 100 snowdrops, 75 Duc Van Thol tulips (various), 50 narcissus, two dozen hyacinths, besides daffodils, iris, jonquils, lilies, ranunculus, scillas, &c., &c., is by no means excessive, or if the collection is too numerous, one-half of it may be had for one guinea, in either case carriage to any railway station in England and Wales, and packing being covered by the charge. Smaller collections, carriage not paid, may be had for either open ground or indoors for half a guinea. The lists of different roots separately is very numerous and contains all the best known varieties, ranged under their different colours. The prices range from twelve to eighteen shillings per dozen, and from forty-eight to one hundred and thirty-six shillings if bought in collections, or from 2s to 6d per bulb for the different varieties. The same may be said of the tulips and other roots, which are marked at so much per root, per dozen, or per hundred, according to circumstances. These occupy the larger half of the Catalogue, the rest containing fruit trees, roses, miscellaneous, roots, gardening necessaries, manures, &c., &c., the quality in all cases being guaranteed. We have also been favoured with copy of Catalogue of hyacinths, &c., &c., issued by the well known firm of W. Cutbush & Son, of the Highgate Nurseries, and Barnet, Herts. Here too, after careful examination of its contents we can, with confidence, recommend to our readers who have not made up their minds whom to carry their custom to, to visit the Nurseries of this firm. They will find a large and varied assortment of every description of bulb, and may indulge their taste for expensive varieties or for those of a more modest price. Here, too, the prices per root, per dozen, and per hundred are given, or may be, in the last case, obtained on application.

At this busy season of the Masonic year, when Lodges are speculating as to where they shall hold their installation meetings, so as to find the requisite accommodation for large parties, we direct attention to Bro. Smith's advertisement, which appears in another column. Bro. Smith is favourably known to many of our readers, and his ability as a caterer has been acknowledged again and again.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—In all outward complaints a desperate effort should be made to at once remove these annoying infirmities, and of establishing a cure. The remarkable remedies discovered by Professor Holloway will satisfactorily accomplish this desirable result, without any of those dangers or drawbacks which attended the old method of treating ulcerative inflammations, scrofulous affections, and syphilitic annoyances. The most timid invalids may use both the Ointment and Pills with the utmost safety with certain success, provided a moderate attention be bestowed on their accompanying "Directions." Both the preparations soothe, heal, and purify. The one assists the other most materially in effecting cures and renewing strength by helping exhausted nature just when she needs such succour.

CONSECRATION OF THE MID SURREY CHAPTER, No. 1044.

SOME members of the Wandsworth Lodge, No. 1044, seeing the need of forming a Chapter in connection therewith, determined to petition Grand Chapter for that purpose. The necessary preliminaries having been duly observed, a Warrant was granted to form the Mid Surrey Chapter, the promoters preferring this designation to that of the name of the Mother Lodge. On 27th September, in accordance with ancient rites and ceremonies, the Chapter was Consecrated by Comp. H. E. Frances P.P.D.C. for the Grand Chapter of Surrey. The Chapter was opened by him, he having for H. Comp. J.M. Klenck Z. 1339, and for J. E. Cronch H. 857. The Comps. were admitted in proper order, and marshalled by Comp. Stevens, who efficiently acted as Director of Ceremonies. There were present Comps. C. W. Gray M.E.Z. designate, H. R. Jones H. designate, and G. Pythyan J. designate, J. R. Jones acting S.E. Also Comps. Bridges P.G.S.B. Grand Chapter of Middlesex, F. Keily, J. F. Storr, Godfrey, W. J. Huntley, with several others. Comp. Frances addressed them on the nature of the meeting. The petition and warrant having been read, and the members of the new Chapter duly presented, Comp. Frances gave an oration on the principles of Royal Arch Masonry, a composition from his own pen, which met with marked attention and approval. The fine anthems, which are indispensable to this important ceremony, were exquisitely rendered by Comp. Lawler, assisted by Comps. Baxter, Carter, and Jekyll, and gave great delight. The entire ceremony was most impressively given by Comp. Frances, who afterwards duly installed Comps. Gray, Jones and Pythyan into their respective chairs. On the readmission of the Comps., after the installation, it was unanimously agreed that Comp. Frances be made an honorary member, and that votes of thanks be inscribed to Comps. Klenck and Cronch for their valuable assistance. Several propositions for exaltation and joining were then made, and the Comps. adjourned to the Viaduct Hotel, Holborn, to partake of banquet, where the Masonic toasts were duly given and honoured, the evening's pleasure being much enhanced by the musical performance of Comp. Lawler and his party.

A new Lodge of Freemasons, styled the Pimlico Lodge, No. 1772, was consecrated on Thursday, at the Morpeth Arms, Millbank, by Bro. John Boyd, Past Grand Pursuivant, who was assisted by Bros. J. A. Rucker, Peter de Lande Long, H. G. Buss, and several other Grand Officers. Bro. John Palmer, a Past Master of the Egyptian and Kilburn Lodges, was installed as the first Worshipful Master of the Lodge.—Standard.

Kingsland Lodge, No. 1693.—This Lodge, which was consecrated in August 1877, has now completed its first year's existence, and the results achieved by the brethren may be considered highly satisfactory. The founders have been careful in their selection of brethren who have joined the Lodge, and the character of those who have been proposed as candidates for initiation has been well looked into. The Lodge moreover has fairly exerted itself on behalf of the Charities. The brethren met for the installation gathering on Tuesday last, the 1st October, at the Jolly Farmers' Tavern, Southgate-road, when, at 4 o'clock, the Lodge was opened by Bro. Charles Kingston Killick, supported by his Officers, a good attendance of members, and the following amongst other Visitors:—H. R. Hallam J.W. 1349, Wm. Webb A.D.C. 1590, H. Hallam 218, J. T. Rowe W.M. 198, A. Raynor 1201, H. Cox W.M. elect 1580, W. B. Kidder P.M. 12, R. H. Halford W.M. 228, W. Cook 1590, R. Pearcy J.W. 228, W. H. Main P.M. 813, John A. Powell J.W. 186, H. After the minutes had been read and confirmed, the Auditors' report was received and adopted. Bro. Charles Hall was then raised to the sublime degree, the W.M. conducting the ceremony most effectively. The W.M. elect, Bro. A. H. Trewinnard, was then introduced, duly obligated, and installed as second W.M. of the Kingsland Lodge, the retiring Master undertaking the duties, and executing his work most ably. The appointment of Officers resulted as follows:—Bros. Isaac S.W., Hawkins J.W., Crosbie Treas., C. K. Killick P.M. Sec., A. W. Fenner S.D., Henry Hall J.D., Bartle I.G., N. L. Western D.C., J. Thompson A.D.C., Opperman W.S., Steedman P.M. Tyler. During the proceedings Bro. J. L. Mather acted as Director of Ceremonies, while Bros. Edgar Bowyer and H. Cox filled respectively the chairs of Senior and Junior Warden. After Bro. Killick had made a statement as to the result of his Stewardship at the last Festival of the Benevolent Institution, and the transaction of routine business, Lodge was closed. Banquet was served by Bro. Fysh, who was ably assisted by Bro. Allardyce, and on the removal of the cloth, the W.M. proceeded with the toasts. That of Her Majesty and the Craft having been loyally responded to, the W.M. gave the health of the Grand Master, and "God Bless the Prince of Wales" was sung. Bro. Killick felt it a great pleasure that it devolved on him to propose the health of the W.M. The present W.M. had ably filled, during the past year, the office of Senior Warden, and he felt assured the brethren had selected a competent Master. After a song, Bro. Trewinnard replied. He had always made this particular branch of Freemasonry his most especial study, and he was much pleased to stand before them in his present position. He trusted the affairs of the Lodge would prosper under his rule, and that the members would never regret having placed him in the chair. The next toast on the list was the health of the Installing, and First Master of the Kingsland Lodge, who had that night given them an admirable taste of his quality. The W.M. would now call upon them to drink Bro. Killick's health; before doing so, however, he would place on his breast the jewel that had been voted at the last meeting of the Lodge, and in doing so, he would express a hope that their esteemed I.P.M. might live long to wear it among them. Bro. Hallam jun. here sang "Meet me once again." Bro. Killick thanked the members for the spontaneous generosity they had exhibited in responding to his toast, so kindly proposed by the W.M. It was to him a gratifying recollection, that of having had the pleasure of introducing their present W.M. into Freemasonry. He was especially thankful that he had that day been privileged to instal him into the chair. For the handsome jewel they had presented him with, he was much indebted to them, and he trusted he might wear it for many, many years to come, and also that he might continue to see their kind faces around him. The next toast was Prosperity to the Masonic Institutions, coupled with the name of Bro. Terry, who, in a most exhaustive speech, acknowledged the compliment, and recounted what was being done by the three great Institutions supported by the Craft. The remaining toasts were taken in due course, and some able replies were made. The W.M., in response to an appeal from Bro. Terry, expressed his readiness to serve as Steward at the next Festival of the Benevolent Institution. Some capital songs were given during the evening, Bros. Hallam, Oppenheim, Killick and others favouring the company, while Bros. Isaac and Hawkins gave excellent recitations.

Meyer J.W. 1524, Batchelor, O. Dietrich, &c. Business—After the regular routine of opening, the ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. B. Meyer being candidate. Bro. J. Lorkin, assisted by the brethren, worked the first four sections of the lecture. Bro. G. Ferrar was appointed W.M. for Wednesday, 16th inst. The supper of this Lodge of Instruction will take place on Wednesday evening next.

Abercorn Lodge, No. 1549.—A meeting was held on Wednesday, 2nd October, at the Abercorn Hotel, Stanmore. Present—Bros. G. Tilcombe W.M., J. Ebbs S.W., W. S. Marshall J.W., C. Veal P.M. Sec., W. A. Royal Alfred Lodge, No. 780.—The installation meetings of this Lodge are invariably well attended; when we say this, we do not wish our readers to assume that our remark is to apply to the installation meetings alone; indeed, we scarcely know any Lodge where better attendances are to be found. Since the improvements made at the Star and Garter, Kew Bridge, and the erection of the commodious banqueting hall by Bro. Stanbury, every facility for comfort, and for the enjoyment of the good things of this life is at the command of the Lodges and Chapters who make this establishment their head quarters. The present W.M., Bro. Charles Frederick May, is the son of the late Samuel May, a brother for whom the most universal respect was ever entertained, both by those who knew him in his Masonic capacity, and by those whose business relations brought him more immediately into association. Ten years back Bro. Samuel May filled the chair of the Royal Alfred Lodge, and up till the time of his death, which occurred in 1876, was ever watchful for the interests and welfare of the members. We believe it was during the Mastership of Bro. William Hilton that Bro. Charles May was invested with his first collar, that of Inner Guard, and as the Masters of this Lodge believe in the wholesome rule of aspirants rising steadily, step by step, and are opposed to the system—adopted, we regret to say, in too many Lodges—of "pitchforking" their members into office, we find that Bro. C. May has gradually risen, till on our entering the Lodge on Friday last we found him in the chair of Senior Warden. Bro. W. Goss, who is the soul of punctuality, opened the Lodge at the hour appointed, and the minutes were read and confirmed. The report of the Auditors was then read, and adopted. It shewed there was a balance due to the Lodge of over £61. The candidate for raising—Bro. John Edward Sharp—who was present, was examined, and duly advanced to the sublime degree of a Master Mason. There were six candidates on the paper for the second degree—Bros. Alfred T. Secker, John Snook, Edwin Evdmann, John Henry Jarvis, Richard Wood, and Robert Gifford; and each took his second step in Freemasonry. The next business was the election of a Treasurer to the Lodge. This office had become vacant in consequence of the unpleasant disclosures which have occurred since the last meeting of the members. The choice of the brethren fell upon Bro. Walter Goss, and this announcement was greeted with applause by all assembled. Bro. Goss, who throughout his year of office has carried out most carefully every duty, now took his place as Installing Master, and Bro. May was formally obligated, and the ceremony completed in its entirety. The Officers were then appointed and invested:—Bros. W. Gomm S.W., R. Blasby J.W., Walter Goss I.P.M. Treasurer, William Hilton P.M. Secretary, Costelow S.D., Frnnckel J.D., Gunner I.G., Tarling W.S., Gilbert Tyler. After the discussion of several matters in reference to the future conduct of the Lodge, and the usual routine business, Lodge was closed. We must not omit to mention here, however, that Bro. Past Master Gardiner, during the proceedings, intimated his intention to act as Steward at the next Festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, and that the Lodge voted him the sum of £10 10s to place his list; this amount was most liberally supplemented by the members, and later on in the evening, when Brother Gardiner handed over his list for our inspection, we were pleased to note it totalled up to £49 7s 6d. As Bro. Gardiner is one who does not let the grass grow under his feet, we expect this amount will be considerably augmented ere the Festival is held. After a short interval the brethren were summoned to the banqueting hall, where a most recherché repast was awaiting them. This was partaken of with extreme satisfaction, and on the removal of the cloth Bro. May proceeded with the toasts. The brethren having most loyally responded to the health of Her Majesty, that of H.R.H. the Grand Master was given. It is well known he takes a great interest in all Masonic matters, and by the way he exerts himself to further the best interest of Freemasonry he has won the respect of every member of the Craft. With the next toast—the Pro G.M., the Deputy G.M., and the rest of the Grand Officers—was associated the name of Bro. H. G. Buss, Assistant Grand Secretary, who replied. He would at once acknowledge his obligations to the W.M. for the kind way in which he had proposed, and to the brethren for the way in which they had received the toast. Both the Pro Grand Master and the Deputy were ever mindful of the heavy responsibilities of their position. This was evidenced most especially by the way the Pro Grand Master had conducted the recent proceedings in Grand Lodge. Lord Skelmersdale was perhaps better known in his own Province, that of West Lancashire; but all might be assured no Deputy Grand Master had ever been more popular. He was always ready to expend his time, and bring his great experience to bear. And now a few words for himself. Personally he felt a great pleasure in being present; for fourteen or fifteen years he had had the honour of being Secretary of this Lodge, and it was gratifying to him to see so many old faces around him. So long as the Lodge had officers who were as capable of doing their duty as those he saw at their posts that evening every prosperity must attend them. Bro. Walter Goss now rose to propose the health of the W.M., which duty he performed in most felicitous terms. Bro. May on rising was most heartily greeted; he thanked Bro. Goss for the kind way in which he had introduced the toast; and for the hearty way in which he had made reference to his father. If at the end of the twelvemonths he should stand there and be considered worthy of their regard, he should feel amply repaid for any trouble he might have to undergo. The next toast was that of the Past Masters, to whom was due so much of the success which had attended the working of the Lodge in the past, and to their continued exertions would be due any future prosperity that might ensue. Their Immediate Past Master, Bro. Goss, had that evening most successfully completed his labours by the way in which he had performed the ceremony of Installation, and in his new post of Treasurer he (the W.M.) trusted he might for many, many years, attend their gatherings, and give the Lodge the benefit of his experience. After an amusing song from Bro. Gunner, Bro. Goss acknowledged the compliment. He would strive to make his future services of value to the Lodge, and felt it a great compliment they had paid him in electing him Treasurer. The handsome jewel they had presented him with should ever be prized by him, and he trusted his children might look upon it with gratification for many years. Bro. Hilton remarked that he had had the pleasure of initiating the W.M. some seven years back, and he was much gratified at finding him that day in his exalted position. Bro. Beasley and others having offered a few words, the W.M. called on the members to drink the health of the Visitors. The list was a long one, and comprised, amongst others, the following:—Bros. Thos. J. Barnes P.M. 554, John Soper 55, H. C. Soper P.M. 704, J. Tickle P.M. 1196, R. Clarke P.M. 1158, John Bingemann P.M. 55, T. J. Maidwell W.M. 27, C. D. Hume W.M. 742, Seymour Lucas, G. Phillips, O. Sarvent 22, W. C. A. Bradle 87, H. Craven 834, J. W. Sanders 1293, George Penn W.M. 1642, George Jonoffe, Euphrates, W. W. Morgan 211. Bro. May expressed the gratification it afforded the members of the Royal Alfred to meet and entertain brethren of other Lodges, and felt pleased to hear that they were enjoying themselves. To Bro. Barnes was entrusted the duty of replying, but several other brethren spoke a few words, all in eulogy of the day's proceedings. The remaining toasts were speedily disposed of, and the brethren separated. The following is a list of the P.M.'s of the Lodge who were present:—Bros. J. Chambers Roe, T. Brown, A. H. Longhurst, A. Beasley, H. Patten, G. A. Littlewood, G. F. Fry.

Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, No. 860.—Held its weekly meeting on Tuesday evening last, at Bro. Smyth's, Sisters' Tavern, Pownall-road, Dalston. Bros. Polak W.M., Brasted S.W., Wardell J.W., Weige S.D., J. Lorkin J.D., Dignam I.G., Dallas Sec., Smyth Treas., P.M. Wallington Preceptor; also Bros. Christian, Bolton, Collins, &c. Lodge was opened and the minutes of the last meeting read and confirmed, the ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Collins as candidate. Bro. Dallas worked the 1st, 2nd and 3rd sections of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. Bro. Bolton of Lodge 1056 was elected a member. A vote of thanks was passed to the W.M. for his able working in the chair, this being the first time. Bro. Brasted will preside at the next meeting.

Whittington Lodge of Instruction, No. 862.—At the weekly meeting of this Lodge, held Wednesday, 2nd October, at Bro. Hyde's, Poppins-court, Fleet-street. Bro. Vizzard W.M., Brown S.W., Hallam jun. J.W., Thompson S.D., Kidder J.D., Hallam sen. I.G., Long Preceptor, and many others. The Lodge was opened and minutes confirmed. Bro. Welsford having offered himself as a candidate, the ceremony of initiation was ably performed by the W.M. The lecture was taken up at the end of the ceremony, and continued to the end of the sixth section. Bro. Jeapes was elected a member, and Bro. Brown W.M. for the ensuing week, when the ceremony of passing will be rehearsed. A vote of thanks was accorded to the W.M., this being the first time he had occupied the chair in any Lodge.

Metropolitan Lodge of Instruction, No. 1056.—On Friday, 27th September, at Portugal Hotel, Fleet-street. Present—Bros. Cowan W.M., Creak S.W., Stanway J.W., Snelling Sec., Abell S.D., Gush J.D., Squirrell I.G., Christopher Tyler; P.M. and Preceptor Bro. J. R. Stacey. The Lodge having been opened in due form, and the minutes read and confirmed, the W.M. proceeded to work the ceremony of installation; appointing and investing his Officers, and giving the usual addresses to the W.M. elect, Wardens, and Brethren, the whole of the ceremony being given in a clear and impressive manner, and greatly to the satisfaction of the brethren present. A vote of thanks was afterwards passed, thanking Bro. Cowan, who was subsequently made an honorary member of the Lodge, in recognition of his services.

Perfect Ashlar Lodge, No. 1178.—The installation meeting took place on Thursday evening, at the Bridge House Hotel, Southwark. The Lodge was opened at four o'clock by Bro. Frederick Garbett, who was supported by his Officers and the following P.M.'s of the Lodge:—J. A. Smith, W. T. Lover, J. H. Harmsworth, John Dixon, G. J. Grace, F. Garbett, Ebsworth, and Deacon. The visitors comprised Bros. W. Cook P.G.S. Herts, W. T. Buck 1196, W. Morris 554, H. L. Holloway 1622, E. Box Royal Oak, T. J. Hyland J.D. 1744, Geo. Page 879, D. Sinclair, T. Vincent 1076, John Stroud 1227, R. H. Halford W.M. 228, G. S. Elliott 1623, J. Hamson 73, John A. Powell J.W. 186, D. D. Mercer 1329, R. Pearcy J.W. 228, E. Brain W.M. 1571, W. W. Morgan 211, G. B. Yarman 73, and W. D. Bayley Junior Warden 185. After the minutes had been read and confirmed, the candidate for the third degree, Bro. J. W. Walker, passed his examination, and the ceremony was worked most satisfactorily by the W.M. The W.M. elect, Bro. Joseph Snook, was then introduced, and duly obligated, Bro. Garbett efficiently discharging the duties of Installing Master. On compliance of the request that those brethren who were not entitled to wear the levels should retire, a Board of Installed Masters was opened, and the ceremony completed. The brethren were then admitted, and saluted the new W.M., who appointed and invested his Officers:—Bros. Simpson S.W., Bell J.W., Ebsworth P.M. Treas., Challoner Sec., Quincey S.D., G. H. Forder J.D., Bridges I.G., Smith P.M. D. of C., Gibbs A.D.C., Lovel P.M. W.S., W. Y. Laing Tyler. The ballot was then brought into requisition for some candidates for our mysteries. Mr. Joseph J. Lambourne successfully underwent the ordeal, and he, being present, was introduced and initiated into the privileges of ancient Freemasonry. The new W.M. has been a most painstaking and constant attendant at the several metropolitan Lodges of Instruction, and the advantage he has derived from his visits was now apparent by the excellent way in which he performed the ceremony. A notice of motion on the paper, it was arranged should stand over till next meeting, but the proposition in reference to the late Secretary

Bro. F. Walters P.P.G.D. Middlesex, P.M. 73, that—"in consideration of the services rendered by him to the Lodge, as Secretary for the past eleven years, he be elected an Honorary Member of the Lodge"—was brought forward, seconded, and received unanimous confirmation. After the customary greetings from the Visitors, Lodge was closed. Banquet was then served in capital style by Bro. Spencer, and on the completion of the repast, which was thoroughly appreciated by the assembled guests, the W.M. proceeded with the toast list. The three first were received with every demonstration of loyalty; the eulogistic remarks of the W.M. in connection with our Masonic Rulers being cordially endorsed by the members. On proposing the health of the Initiate, Bro. Stock said the brethren of the Lodge of Perfect Ashlar were always pleased to receive into their ranks gentlemen who came with good recommendations. He had pleasure in proposing the health of their new member, Bro. Lambourne. This brother in reply said, He was not a good hand at making a speech, but felt a great honour had been conferred upon him, that of his being admitted into the ranks of Freemasonry. He felt greatly indebted to his friend, P.M. Lover, who had kindly introduced him to their Society. He trusted he might become an ornament to the Craft. Bro. Garbett felt a great pleasure in proposing the next toast, the health of the Worshipful Master. They had been fellow initiates, and it had afforded him infinite pleasure to instal him into the chair. He had been a most earnest worker, and he (Bro. Garbett) regretted he had not been able to perfect himself so admirably as Bro. Stock had done in the ritual of the Craft. After a capital song by Bro. Royal, Bro. Stock rose to reply. He assured the brethren that as long as it lay in his power he would exert himself for the welfare of the Lodge, and he sincerely trusted they might never regret the choice they had made in appointing him. He thanked them heartily for the way they had received the toast. The health of the Installing Master was the next offered. The W.M. undertook this pleasant duty with intense satisfaction, as he and Bro. Garbett were old friends. He would place on their brother I.P.M.'s breast the jewel which had been presented by the Lodge. After a song—"On Balaclava's Heights"—from Bro. Killick, Bro. Garbett rose. It afforded him great pleasure to respond to the toast. He was grateful to the members for the kind assistance they had rendered him during the year. To the P.M.'s he was specially indebted; they had never failed in helping him when their aid was required. He trusted he might long be associated with them, and that he might see the Perfect Ashlar continue its career of prosperity. The W.M. then gave the health of the Visitors. He named them seriatim, and expressed the satisfaction the members felt in having so many distinguished Masons present. The reply for the Visitors was entrusted to Bro. C. K. Killick P.M. 1693, and Bros. Halford, Trewinnard, and Morgan added a few observations. Then the W.M. most earnestly besought the sympathies of the brethren on behalf of the Masonic Charities, and called on Bro. James Terry to address them. After a recitation by Bro. Morgan, Bro. Terry gave an exhaustive account of what was being done by the three great central Charities, and strenuously urged on the brethren the need of increased exertion. The elections for the Boys' and Girls' School would shortly be held, and many of the most deserving cases would necessarily have to be rejected, through inadequate means at the disposal of the governing bodies. He thanked the members for the support they had always rendered to the Charities, and hoped that prosperity and happiness might attend all their future undertakings. The health of the P.M.'s was ably replied to by Bro. Ebsworth, and the several Officers each gave expression to their sentiments. The W.M. then summoned the Tyler, who concluded the evening's proceedings. The brethren were agreeably entertained during the evening by some capital songs; in addition to those already enumerated, we must not omit to mention the efforts of P.M.'s Smith and Deacon, who exerted themselves most successfully. Before closing our report, we—on behalf of several of the visitors—tender our thanks to the energetic D. of C., Bro. P.M. Lover, who was most assiduous in his exertions to minister to the comfort of the guests.

St. Eleth Lodge, No. 1488.—The regular monthly meeting of this prosperous and well worked Lodge was held on Tuesday, the 1st inst., at the Castle Hotel, Amlwch, when the following brethren were present:—Bros. H. Lloyd W.M., B. Roose I.P.M., J. Treweek S.W., C. S. Dyer J.W., T. Pritchard Sec., Rev. J. Smith Chaplain, Owen Rowland S.D., J. Hughes as I.G., O. Roberts Tyler. The Lodge was opened at 3.30 p.m., when the minutes of the previous meeting were read, found correctly recorded and ratified. This being the meeting for election of Worshipful Master, the ballot was taken, and resulted in the unanimous appointment of Bro. Treweek to that exalted post. The election of Treasurer followed, and then the appointment of Tyler. The labours of the evening being ended, the Lodge was closed in harmony, at an early hour, as a number of the brethren of the Lodge live a considerable distance from the town.

Ancient Carthage Lodge, No. 1717, at Tunis in North Africa.—An emergent meeting of this Lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Tunis, at 8 p.m. on Monday, 23rd September. The European date corresponds with the eve of the 27th day of the Ramadan fast, and is always the occasion of festivities and rejoicing throughout the Moorish city, which is brilliantly illuminated during the whole night. The W.M. Bro. A. M. Broadley, Barrister-at-Law, presided, assisted by the following Officers:—W. Bros. Dr. Magnaini 32° P.M., J. H. Stevens S.W., Pentecost J.W., Soniller Interpreter and Secretary, Blanch Treasurer, Lumbroso S.D., Finzi J.D., V. C Clement D of C., Dr. Cassanello and Bourepaux Stewards, and Bro. P.M. Paleologo I.G. More than thirty other members and visitors were present. On an alarm being given the General Mahammed el Arbi ben Si Reschid was introduced and initiated by the W.M., in the Italian language, into the secrets and mysteries of Ancient Freemasonry. The candidate, who was deeply impressed by the ceremony, is a cousin of the present occupant of the throne of Tunis, and a nephew of the much lamented sovereign H. H. Si Ahmed Bey. He is a gentleman of considerable acquirements and enlightened opinions, speaking fluently both the Italian and French languages. General Si Mahammed is the forty-fourth candidate initiated in this Lodge since its consecration twelve months since. The W.M. announced that the installation meeting would take place on the 5th October. The Lodge was closed at 9.30 p.m. There was no banquet, as by the Bye-laws of this Lodge no part of its funds can be appropriated to refreshment, and the entertainments are restricted to the Installation Festival and that of St. John the Baptist.

Marquess of Granby Lodge, No. 124.—A meeting was held on 1st October, at the Masonic Hall, Old Elvet, Durham. Present—Bros. Samuel Penny W.M., Samuel Holdsworth S.W., Thos. Bell J.W., William Coxon Secretary, Charles Dawson S.D., Samuel Bousfield J.D., John Carr and William Robertson Stewards, Andrew Carr I.G., John Carter Tyler. Past Masters Bros. John Sewell, George Johnston, Henry Lawrence; and thirty-five of the brethren. Visitors—Bros. Sanderson, W. Gray, E. Dodds, of the Norman Lodge, No. 1334, Geo. Holdsworth, St. Marnock Lodge, No. 109. Business—The minutes of the last General Lodge were read and confirmed. The ballot was taken for Bro. George W. Richardson, as a joining member from the Perseverance Lodge, Hebburn-on-Tyne, and he was duly approved of. The Lodge was advanced to the third degree, when Bro. William Crawford was duly raised to the Master Masons degree by Bros. Henry Lawrence P.M. and Samuel Penny W.M. The W.M. stated that the next Provincial Grand Lodge will be held at Durham, on the 22nd day of October, at two o'clock in the afternoon, under the banners of the Marquess of Granby and Norman Lodges. The Lodge was then closed in due form.

Duncan, &c. The usual preliminaries having been observed, the Lodge was advanced to the second degree, and Bros. Lloyd and White examined as to their proficiency. The Lodge having been opened up, these two brethren were raised to the degree of M.M. The W.M. elect, Bro. Frank Kirk, was now introduced by Bro. P.M. Swallow for the purpose of being installed into the chair of the Lodge. With the usual form this ceremony was completed, and the newly elected W.M. proceeded to invest his Officers as follow:—Bros. Hancock S.W., Docker J.W., Louis Beck P.M. Treas., Parsons Sec., Crossland S.D., Outhwaite J.D., Forscutt I.G., Duret and Jones Directors of Ceremonies, Swallow and Livermore Stewards, P.M. Holden Chaplain, Berrow Organist, Potter Tyler. One proposition for joining, and two for initiation were handed in. The balance sheet was read and unanimously adopted, and £10 10s voted to the funds of the Boys' School, to be placed on the list of the Worshipful Master, who will act as Steward at the next Festival of that Institution. After this Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet hall, where the W.M. presided in a genial manner. After grace the health of Her Majesty the Queen was given, and the National Anthem sung. The W.M. next gave that of the M.W. Grand Master the Duke of Rothesay. The members of the Rothesay Lodge, which was named after his Royal Highness, could but accord the heartiest welcome to this toast. The W.M. considered it was due to the patronage of His Royal Highness that Freemasonry was just now in so prosperous a state. The toast was enthusiastically honoured, and "God Bless the Prince of Wales" sung. The next toast on the list—the Grand Officers—was given by the W.M. They were that night honoured in having two representatives of Grand Lodge among them. He regretted that the Prov. Grand Master for Middlesex had been obliged to leave them so early in the evening, but was sure they had, in Bro. Bose, as able a representative of Grand Lodge as could be found. That Brother, on rising to respond, stated that he was quite unprepared, as he had throughout the evening looked upon it as certain that Bro. Burdett would reply to the toast. The way in which the toast is everywhere received can but be gratifying to the Grand Officers, especially to those noblemen who head the present list. Personally, he thanked the members for the way in which he had been received, and congratulated them on the successful termination of their first year's labours. He thought it very gratifying to see the first Master retiring with such honour. Bro. Beck rose, it being the first time that a Past Master of the Rothesay Lodge had been entrusted with the gavel, he thought it desirable to briefly explain to the new members the special duty entailed thereby. Every one present must be gratified at receiving so distinguished a brother to preside over them. He hoped they would unite in heartily drinking to his good health, and the prosperity of the Lodge under his guidance. The toast having been honoured, the W.M. in reply tendered his sincere thanks for the honour conferred on him in placing him in the position of W.M. It would be his endeavour to make his year as successful as possible. He considered he had a very arduous task before him, having to follow so energetic and painstaking a brother as their late Master, Bro. Beck. To excel him would be impossible, but he would endeavour to merit the approval of the members of his Lodge. His next duty was to propose an eminently Masonic toast. Hospitality, he considered, was one of the most important characteristics of Freemasonry, and to practise it was the most pleasing office of any Master. He felt sure he was expressing the sentiments of every member of his Lodge when he said that they were heartily pleased to have so many Visitors; they were one and all welcome. He hoped their present visit had been a pleasant one, and that they would take an opportunity of again witnessing the work of the Rothesay Lodge. With the toast he coupled the names of Bros. Thomas and Mount. The first of these brethren after having tendered the thanks of himself and fellow visitors, said: He did not know whether the fact of a man becoming a Freemason worked a complete change in his nature, but he felt sure that in some respects it did, and that in a most marked way. He was never received at any gathering with such genuine good feeling and hospitality as at a Masonic Lodge. There a man met with thorough cordiality, and was truly received on one of the five points of fellowship, there, there was no half-hearted reception accorded, no just touching the tips of your fingers and saying a mere how-do-you-do; it was real genuine welcome, and such as could but make any one completely at home and ready to appreciate the pleasures of a meeting. He believed it was by such interchange of visits that Freemasonry maintained its exalted position. Such evenings as the present were like bright spots in our course, and induced one to look forward to them with great pleasure. He concluded by tendering the congratulations of the visitors on the successful condition of the Lodge, and its great prosperity during the first year of its existence. Bro. Mount assured the members that no one could have more at heart the welfare of the Lodge than himself. As Master of the Granite Lodge, he felt especially pleased in having an opportunity of responding, for it was that Lodge which had recommended the petition of the Rothesay. He had long know their present Master in connection with Freemasonry, having had the pleasure of escorting him round the Lodge at the time of his initiation. He could also boast another Masonic connection, having been initiated into the Craft by the father of their W.M. The W.M. now rose to propose what he considered was the toast of the evening—that of Past Master Bro. Louis Beck. All present knew something of the way in which that brother could carry out the work of a Lodge, but only those who, like himself, had been connected with him as Officers, knew how he had laboured throughout the year in their Lodge, and before that, had exerted himself in connection with its formation. But fifteen months ago the Rothesay Lodge existed but in the imagination of Bro. Beck, and now they could look round and see the Lodge in thorough working order, with a goodly array of members, and no small amount of credit attached to it by brethren and neighbouring Lodges; in fact they were, thanks to Bro. Beck's management, in a state of great prosperity. He had been entrusted by the members of the Lodge with the task of placing on the breast of Bro. Beck a P.M.'s jewel, he considered it thoroughly deserved, and hoped Bro. Beck would accept it as a slight reward for his labours. The founders had, some time back decided to present Bro. Beck with a bust of himself, and he (the W.M.) was pleased that he was now able to present that also. Bro. Beck found himself incapable of expressing his feelings of gratification. He took a great pride in forming the Lodge, and from the first had worked to make it a success. If he might judge from the eulogistic remarks of the W.M. he had succeeded. No one could be more gratified at the result than himself. He considered throughout he had but done his duty, and was therefore truly pleased at the hearty reception given to the toast. Although he was no longer Master of the Lodge he should take a continued interest in its welfare, not only as a P.M., but also from the fact of his being the Father of the Lodge. The health of the Treasurer and Secretary was next proposed. As Bro. Beck had already had an opportunity of responding, the W.M. would confine his remarks to their Secretary, whom he considered was the most perfect representative of the class to be found in England. Bro. Parsons in reply thanked the Master for his good opinion. Although he felt that the remarks were too eulogistic, he was gratified that his labours met with approval. He was always desirous to do his duty to the best of his ability. He trusted that the future might not entirely upset the encomiums passed on him. There was a matter he would like to say a few words about; one he considered it the duty of every Secretary to refer to. Having enjoyed themselves during the evening, they ought to remember those of their brethren who, from one cause or another, were in distressed circumstances, and also the orphans of others who had claims on their benevolence. They should bear in mind that such brethren joined the ranks of Freemasonry when in good positions and with no prospect before them of misfortune, therefore it behoved them to reflect, for it was impossible to say who might be the next to meet with misfortune, either from illness or other causes. He thought it would be much better for the Lodges to forego one night's banquet and devote the sum to one or other of the Charities. This had been done with the greatest success by The Great City Lodge, who were able to send £50 as the surplus of a bread and cheese supper. He did not wish the brethren to do anything contrary to their desires, but he felt sure that after such an evening, showing such a truly Masonic result, the brethren would go away highly satisfied with themselves. Bro. Beck here stated that he had forgotten one matter which he wished to mention. For some years past he had been in the habit of giving a ball, the proceeds of which had on each occasion more than provided for the expenses. He now proposed to continue these gatherings as the Rothesay Lodge Benevolent Fund Ball, and hoped that much larger profits than he had received would accrue. He felt that success was certain if the officers would undertake the duty of Stewards, and the members generally exert themselves in the cause. The next toast was that of the Masonic Charities, to which Bros. Hedges and Terry replied. The latter brother referred to the remarks of the Secretary, he felt certain that if the Lodges had no banquets, the Craft would have no Charities. The members of Lodges where banquets are unknown are generally as cold-hearted as the Lodge itself. He referred to one Lodge which started as a non-dining Lodge. For many years it "lived" and that was all—as to charity it was unknown there. One night the Master elect stated it was his intention to have a banquet, after his installation, and on that occasion introduced the toast of the Charities, announcing it was his intention to act as Steward for one of them, and sending the list round for the names of supporters. When it came back there was between £70 and £80 recorded thereon, and this, in the opinion of Bro. Terry, was mainly attributed to the fact of a banquet having brought the members into jovial intercourse. The present S.W. of the Rothesay had already given his name as Steward for the Benevolent Institution for 1880, and Bro. Terry hoped that the charitable spirit already evinced by the Lodge would continue. The Officers of the Lodge were next toasted, and each replied in brief speeches. The Tyler being now summoned, gave the finishing touch to a most successful gathering. During the banquet, the band of the London Scottish Rifles performed a choice selection of music, and between the toasts several of the members of the Lodge displayed their vocal and instrumental abilities, greatly adding to the enjoyment of the evening.

F. RATH & Co.'s IMPROVED PATENT GAS BOX IRON.

PERFECTION IN IRONING FOR EVERY SPECIES OF FABRIC.

Great Saving in Expense and Labour.

The price being only 22/, it is the Cheapest Iron in the trade, and can be had at all Ironmongers in the United Kingdom.

F. RATH & CO.'S IMPROVED GAS BOX IRON is extremely simple in its construction, and cannot get out of order; the merit of the invention is, that the heat produced from the burning gas is thrown on to the steel plate which covers the bottom surface, none being allowed to pass off in vapour.

Three times the amount of work ordinarily executed can be done by the use of these Irons, which have now been in use in extensive Manufactories long enough to thoroughly prove their merits and evidence their entire success. They are as suitable for Family Use as for the Work-room, the Manufactory, or the Laundry.

Freemason's Chronicle;

A WEEKLY RECORD OF MASONIC INTELLIGENCE.

SANCTIONED BY THE GRAND LODGE OF ENGLAND.

VOL. VIII.—No. 198. SATURDAY, 12th OCTOBER 1878. [PRICE THREEPENCE. Registered at the G.P.O. as a Newspaper.

FREEMASONRY IN PENNSYLVANIA

WE acknowledge with fraternal thanks the receipt of copy of the Proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania during the year 1877. On the whole they may be described as presenting a healthy organisation in the highest degree creditable to the Grand Master and the other leading spirits of this ancient Masonic body. Extracts are furnished from the minutes of Proceedings of the Quarterly Communications held on the 6th June, 5th September, and 5th December respectively, as well as of the Annual Grand Communication on the 27th December. At the first Quarterly Communication referred to, a portrait of the late Bro. John Chambers, D.D., who at the time of his death was the Senior Grand Chaplain of Grand Lodge, an office he had filled for close on a quarter of a century, was presented by his executor, at the express desire of the Rev. Brother's widow, and its receipt most warmly acknowledged by the Grand Master. At the same gathering a series of resolutions condoling with the Grand Lodge of Missouri on the death of Bro. Frank Gourley was passed and ordered to be presented to that body, as well as to the relatives of the deceased brother. At the September Communication, the Grand Secretary's annual report was presented and showed the number of Lodges on the roll on the 27th December of the previous year to have been 375, six having been constituted in 1876. The number of members in the jurisdiction was 37,811, the number of admissions initiations, &c., &c., in the course of the year having been 1,788, the number of resignations, suspensions or expulsions and deaths being 2,213. At this Communication it was resolved to open Masonic intercourse with the Grand Lodge of Scotland. At the December meeting the election of officers took place, when Bro. J. Madison Porter was elected Grand Master, Bro. Robert Clark declining to be re-elected, Bro. Michael Nisbet being the Deputy Grand Master. Bros. S. B. Dick and Conrad B. Day, Grand Senior and Grand Junior Wardens respectively, and Bros. Thos. R. Patton and John Thomson, Grand Treasurer and Grand Secretary. The Committee on Finance presented their report for the year ended 15th November, showing that the Receipts, including Balance brought forward, amounted to 141,859 dollars 65 cents, and the Expenses to 137,977 dollars 42 cents, leaving a balance in hand amounting to 3,882 dollars 23 cents. The estimated revenue and expenditure for 1878 are set down as 147,995 dollars 63 cents, and 147,259 dollars respectively, leaving a small balance in hand of over 736 dollars. The Balance Sheet of Grand Lodge for the past year shows a total for both sides of the account of over 2,211,449 dollars, the principal items on the Dr. side being—Sinking Fund—over 24,068 dollars; Stephen Girard Charity Fund, over 51,012 dollars; G. Lodge Charity Fund, over 68,226 dollars, and Real Estate close on 1,919,127 dollars. On the Creditor side the chief items are Grand Lodge of Penna. over 762,450 dollars, and the Masonic Temple Redemption Loan 1,320,500 dollars. Other Reports of a like character were also presented. At the Annual Communication on the 27th December, the Report of the Board of Almoners showed that 234 applicants, of whom 197 hailed from Pennsylvania, had been relieved to the extent of 2720½ dollars, while the Stewards of the Stephen Girard Charity Fund had relieved 245 brethren, of whom 212 hailed from Pennsylvania itself. The portrait of the late Bro. S. H. Perkins, a Past Grand Master, was presented by Mr. E. D. Marchant, the artist who painted it, and accepted, a resolution of thanks for the gift being unanimously passed by Grand Lodge. Grand Master Clark then delivered his valedictory address, in which he reviewed the events of the year, noting in particular the visitations he had made, the Lodges which he had constituted during his administration—these were ten in number—and whatever else of interest had taken place—such as the appointment of Bro. Aurelio Almeida as representative at the Grand Lodge of Cuba, Bro. W. Officer as representative at the Grand Lodge of Scotland, Bro. Cadwalader Evans as that at the Grand Lodge of New York. The new Grand Master, J. Madison Porter, and his principal Officers having been duly installed, the former delivered an address, at the close of which he mentioned that the late Past Master Stephen Taylor, then but recently deceased, had presented a sum of 10,000 dollars to Grand Lodge on certain conditions, and when those had been fulfilled, the income arising therefrom would be at once available for charitable purposes. The appointment of the other Officers was then proceeded with, and a resolution of thanks to the retiring Grand Master having been unanimously agreed to, Grand Lodge was closed. The rest of the proceedings include the Report of the Committee on Foreign Correspondence.

Two matters we have reserved till the last, as it appears to us that they deserve more than passing comment. In the Report presented by the Committee on Appeals at the December Quarterly Communication will be found a resolution to the effect that the W. Master of one of the Lodges, and the Lodge in question had erred in taking a ballot for an applicant for initiation or membership before the written favourable report of the Committee of Inquiry had been actually presented by the Lodge. This bears on the question of that caution in the admission of candidates, to which we have so frequently made reference, and on which so many of our most distinguished members have of late laid so much stress. It proves that in the Masonic jurisdiction of Pennsylvania, the preliminary inquiries which are, or should be made, in the case of all applicants for initiation or membership, are something more than a mere farce or formality, which may or may not be observed, just as it suits a Lodge, and we commend it to the notice of any of our readers who may incline to laxity in respect of this pre-requisite condition on behalf of candidates. Let them bear in mind what has been said again and again, that a Lodge cannot be too particular whom it receives into its fold. One indifferent member may destroy its harmony, and even imperil the fortune of the lodge itself. The other matter is not one on which we feel we can justly offer our Pennsylvanian brethren any degree or kind of congratulation. It will be found in the report by the library committee, and refers to the reception accorded by the Lodges and members of the jurisdiction to the first part of the original minutes of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, on which we commented some time since. We cannot, however, do better than quote the very words of the Report itself, which are as follow :—"We regret to say that in publishing this first part, we too hopefully relied on being sustained by the membership of this Grand Lodge. Out of nearly 4,400 members of the Grand Lodge, only 122 were subscribers. With nearly 40,000 Masons in Pennsylvania, we have only 85 who have responded. Of over 375 Lodges, only 18 have given us their support. It is disheartening to your Committee to do this labour without the least show of encouragement from those who should be interested in the early history of Masonry in this jurisdiction. The Committee have endeavoured in every way to make the Library of the Grand Lodge self-supporting, but have failed to do so up to this time, on account of the failure of the Craft to support their work." There is more to the same effect, but we have quoted enough to show how indifferently the Freemasons of Pennsylvania view the efforts of their Grand Lodge to spread abroad amongst them an authentic knowledge of the history of the Craft. Just fancy—122 out of 4,460 Grand Officers, 85 out of nearly 40,000 brethren, and 18 out of over 375 Lodges are all who have thought sufficiently well of Masonic literature to spend a dollar, or about four shillings of our money, in the purchase of Part I. of the official history of their own jurisdiction. Yet we hear not a little of the Grand doings of the Craft in these parts, of its Grand Temples, Grand Processions, Grand Festivities, &c., &c. There is never much difficulty in finding ample funds for a Grand "Feed" or a Grand Pilgrimage, but it is otherwise when a Grand History is offered for sale. Then out of over 375 Lodges and nearly 40,000 Masons, the munificent sum of 225 dollars is contributed towards the cost—or in other words less than two-thirds of the sum charged to a single Knight Templar Pilgrim for his trip to the United Kingdom and Paris. The Library are right in having so conspicuously drawn attention to this matter. The next thing it should do must be to immortalise the 225 Lodges and brethren who have contributed by appending a list of their names and numbers whenever Part II. is ready to make its appearance, if indeed, it ever is so fortunate as to be ready.

VISIT TO CONGLETON OF LORD DE TABLEY, PROV. GRAND MASTER CHESHIRE.

THE regular meeting of Eaton Lodge, No. 533, on Wednesday, the 9th inst., was an unusually brilliant event. The brethren of this Lodge have recently acquired, by purchase, a very spacious building in the town, which was formerly the property of the Calvinistic body, and comprises a chapel, and school-room, with offices attached. Under the good management of a few of the brethren, many alterations and embellishments have been accomplished, and the handsome and complete furniture belonging to the Lodge became the Temple admirably. We cannot but congratulate the brethren of No. 533 on acquiring such valuable, commodious, and spacious buildings, and trust Eaton Lodge may increase, in number, in peace, and prosperity. This being the meeting for the installation of the W.M. Elect, the brethren were punctual in attendance, and the Lodge was opened at 2 p.m. in due and ancient form, with solemn prayer, by the following Officers:—Bros. G. S. Furnivall W.M., Astley Terry P.P.G.S.B. I.P.M., John Brown S.W., Jas. E. Reade J.W., Dr. Beales P.M. P.P.J.W. Treas., W. Blackshaw P.M. P.P.S. of Works Sec., F. A. Daniel S.D., S. Cotterill J.D., S. Blackshaw P.M. D.C., G. Barlow P.M. P.P.G.O. Org., J. E. Garside I.G., S. Latham Tyler. There was a strong muster of the members of the Lodge, among whom were S. F. Gosling P.M. P.P.G.S.B., J. Wilson P.M., G. Barlow P.M., &c., &c., and Bros. Sheldon, Kirk, Holland, Wallworth, Bond, Beckett, Broadhurst, Barlow, Bradbury, Brown, Orrer, Chaddock, Wingate, Franceys, &c., &c., and as Visitors Bro. J. Baker P.M. 966 P.P.J.G.D., S. Bennion P.M. 293, F. S. Wright P.M. 546 P.P.J.G.D., G. F. Smith Secretary 163, Bros. Paterson P.M. 546, J. Salmon P.M. 425 P.P.S.G.D., Pierrey P.M. 418 P.P.S. of West Staffordshire, Ingamells P.M. 460 P.J.G.D. Staffordshire, Chalmers W.M. 726, Marwood P.M. 537 P.P.J.G.W., Wood W.M. 267, Phorbann W.M. 98, Hilditch 98, Rowley 98, Garland P.M. 533 P.P.G.C., Maydew P.M. 295, Warren-de-Tabley P.G. Master, F. Jackson P.G. Treas., S. M. Davies FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, &c. The preliminary business having been disposed of, the Lodge was worked up to the third, when it was announced that the R. W. Prov. G. Master, Lord De Tabley, desired to be admitted. The W.M. commanded a deputation to wait upon the R.W. brother, and conduct him into the body of the Lodge, in accordance with the privilege due to his exalted position. This duty was performed, and, preceded by Bro. Terry P.P.G.S.B., and attended by the P.G. Officers past and present, his lordship entered the Lodge, where he was received with the customary honours. The W.M. then signified his readiness to proceed with the important event of the day, whereupon the W.M. elect, Bro. J. E. Reade, was introduced for installation. Bro. Furnivall gave the usual impressive charge, and the Secretary was instructed to put the customary questions, which were answered satisfactorily, after which Bro. Reade was duly obligated, installed, and proclaimed the Worshipful Master of No. 533 for the ensuing year, and received the salutations of the brethren. The installation ceremony was ably performed by Bro. Terry. The W.M. proceeded to invest his officers, and with the assistance of Bros. Cokayne and Beales, soon accomplished this duty. Bros. G. S. Furnivall I.P.M., J. Whitehurst P.M. S.W., T. A. Daniel J.W., Dr. Beales P.M. P.P.J.G.W. reappointed Treas., W. Blackshaw P.M. P.P.G.S. of W. Sec., S. Cotterill S.D., J. T. Garside J.D., S. Blackshaw P.M. D.C., Lorenz, B.A., P.P.G.C. Chap., G. Barlow P.M. P.P.G.O. Organist, Wingate I.G., S. Latham Tyler. The R. Wor. Provincial Grand Master rose to address the Lodge. He expressed the great pleasure he felt in being present. He could not allow the Lodge to be closed without congratulating the brethren on the successful issue of their labours in purchasing and furnishing this fine Temple. He held an opinion, drawn from a knowledge of what outsiders thought of the Craft, that the sooner the Lodges were withdrawn from tavern influences the better, and he hailed the opening of this beautiful Temple, in which he understood the Eaton Lodge had that day assembled for the first time, as a good omen of what Masonry in general would do throughout the Province. He highly commended the example which the brethren of No. 533 had thus set to other Lodges in Cheshire. He was pleased with the handsome manner in which the Lodge was furnished, and expressed great satisfaction with the working of the Lodge, and the evidence of the care taken by each Officer to acquire a complete knowledge of his duty. In conclusion, he expressed every wish for their happiness and prosperity, and thanked them for the cordial manner which always characterised his reception in Eaton Lodge. (Applause.) Bro. Cokayne announced that the Charity Box contained four guineas. Bro. Beales proposed, and the I.P.M. seconded a motion, that a sum of ten guineas be voted from the funds of the Lodge to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys,—carried. The W.M. said it gave him great pleasure, entering on his duties as Master of the Lodge, to devote ten guineas to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, for the benefit of the Lodge. It was proposed by Bro. Wilson, and seconded by Bro. Gosling, that a vote of condolence be sent from the Lodge to Bro. G. W. Hall, on the death of his eldest son,—carried unanimously. The W.M. proposed a vote of thanks to the R.W. Prov. G. Master for the honour of his presence that day. It was seconded by the I.P.M. and carried nem con; the same to be entered on the minutes. It was proposed by Bro. Gosling and seconded by Bro. Wilson, that a vote of thanks be tendered the W.M. for his generous presentation to the Girls' School. This also to be entered on the minutes,—carried. These expressions of appreciation were duly and suitably acknowledged by the R.W. Brother and the W.M., after which the Lodge was closed with solemn prayer at 4.30 p.m. The W.M. invited the guests to banquet. The spacious and well-ventilated room was amply filled with brethren from distant parts of Cheshire and the adjoining Provinces. The chair was taken by Bro. Reade, who was supported on the right by Lord de Tabley. The catering was attended to by Mr. M. Harper, of the Swan Hotel, Congleton, and the menu was of the most récherché character. The repast was capitally put on the table, indeed, too much praise cannot be given for the general attention each and all received. During dinner some good selections of music were played by a string band engaged for the occasion. On the removal of the cloth, and grace said, the W.M. rose to propose, in a few well chosen words, the first toast, "The Queen and the Craft," which was duly honoured, the brethren singing the National Anthem. On rising to propose the second toast, the W.M. said he desired to lose no time, as there were a number of brethren who had long distances to go to reach their homes. He would, therefore, in giving this toast, which every English Freemason honoured, merely say that the G.M. had shown himself a true Mason. He was pleased to learn that he was about to receive additional honours, shown him by the Paris brethren. One and all, as true Masons and Englishmen, let us drink to "The health of the Most Worshipful the G.M. of England." The toast was received with great heartiness, the brethren singing "God Bless the Prince of Wales." The Worshipful Brother, in proposing toast No. 3 on the list, said, all know how thoroughly and efficiently our Pro Grand Master does his duty; in the Deputy G. Master we have the Mason, the man, and the brother. In order to curtail time I will with this toast unite the 4th on the list, which I need not tell you, is that of the R.W. the Prov. G. Master of Cheshire. With reference to our Prov. G. Master, Lord De Tabley, he has shown his Province, and the Craft, what a deep interest he takes in everything that tends to the advancement of Freemasonry generally. This Lodge in particular is greatly indebted to his Lordship. It is needless for me to extol the many excellent virtues of our Prov. G. Master in his presence, as you are all thoroughly acquainted with those good and virtuous traits which have endeared his Lordship so indissolubly to every Mason in this Province. I could not do better than direct the attention of the brethren here to-night, especially the younger members in the Craft, to the untiring zeal which our Prov. G. Master takes in our Order; it is a sufficient incentive to every backward brother to feel that there must be a great amount of good in Freemasonry when we have such good and noble brethren in our Order. I now ask you to drink this toast most cordially. We need scarcely add it was received with the greatest enthusiasm, and grand honours. His Lordship, in response, said: The kindness of my reception whenever I come among the brethren of Eaton Lodge is so great that I cannot express to you how deeply touched I am by such marks of esteem. As I told you in the Lodge-room, I am very pleased to be with you to-day, under such favourable auspices. It has become incumbent on me to answer to the toast of G.L. Officers; I do so with pleasure, as I have received great favours from the Officers of the Grand Lodge. I never appreciated an honour more than I did the act of that excellent Grand Master the Earl of Zetland, when he appointed me Prov. G. Master of this Province. On my early appointment to this important position, I visited the Eaton Lodge, we then had a happy day. We are now celebrating a most auspicious event; an event which will redound to your welfare and credit, as you have dedicated to yourselves a local habitation and a name. I hope you will ever prosper, and I hope the example shown by you will be followed by other Lodges in my Province. After alluding to the excellent working of the Officers in the installation ceremony, his Lordship continued his remarks by saying:—Let us, brethren, look with earnestness to the duty before us, sink all differences, that harmony may prevail. Let peace and love reign among us, and bear goodwill and love towards all men. I am entrusted with the gavel for a moment, and you anticipate the toast I am about to propose, it is the health of the W. Master. He has a name well known and appreciated in this town, and under his benign rule your Lodge will prosper. I am sure you will have a happy year. The R.W. Brother then led the brethren to the toast with Masonic honours. The W.M. rose to respond: R.W. Sir and Brethren, I thank you most heartily for the kind manner my health has been proposed, and the brethren for the cordial way in which they have received it. I feel deeply grateful, my Lord, for the kindness you have shown me and this Lodge. It shall be my endeavour to maintain the integrity of the Lodge intact, and to promote peace and harmony in all our working. Nothing will give me greater pleasure than to promote the happiness of the members, and I will do all in my power for their welfare. By request of the W.M., Bro. Wilson proposed the health of the Deputy Prov. G.M. of Cheshire, and the Officers of Prov. Grand Lodge Past and Present. He would be as brief as possible, consistent with the importance of the toast. He had great pleasure, as an old Mason, to bear testimony that the Hon. Deputy Grand Master was a worthy and trusty Mason; a brother whom they all greatly esteemed; he did his duty thoroughly. He had great pleasure in proposing the toast with every cordiality. The toast was most heartily received, and replied to by Bro. Terry and others, who gave assurance that the Prov. Grand Officers would do their duty, and endeavour to follow the example of their noble leader. Bro. Beales proposed the health of the Visitors; he regretted he could not really term the many visiting brethren here to-day their guests, as, for the first time in his memory, each had to pay for his ticket. The reason, however, was obvious. This worthy brother expressed his pleasure at seeing so many visitors, without whom their Lodge would be weak in appearance that day, and he united with the toast the name of Bro. Spencer. Any other brethren who would favour them with a few remarks they would be pleased to hear. Bro. Spencer thanked the proposer of the toast, and the brethren, on behalf of the visitors, and extended a kind invitation to any present to visit his Lodge; he knew he could ensure them a hearty reception. Bro. Salmon congratulated the brethren on the success of the day; he hoped Chester would soon have a Lodge room fit to receive the distinguished brethren of Prov. G.L., and in keeping with the City and Province of Cheshire. Bro. Jackson offered a few words, and was followed by others, all tending to express the same purport. Bro. Terry proposed the Masonic Charities; they were the perfection of our Order. They flourish as they never did before; he hoped they would flourish still more; they conferred an immense amount of good. He coupled with the toast the name of the Prov. G. Treasurer, Bro. Jackson, who said he had been greatly pleased with the donations made that day to the Girls' and Boys' Schools, and hoped the Province would reward those brethren who worked for the Charities. The W.M. here announced that their Prov. Grand Master was about to retire, but before doing so his Lordship again expressed his great pleasure in being present, and thanked the brethren for their fraternal greeting. When His Lordship left, the brethren gave him three hearty cheers. Probably no P.G.M. is more beloved, truly and deservedly so, than Lord De Tabley. He is an example to Prov. Grand Masters generally; he has the reward of being loved sincerely by every brother Mason in Cheshire. Bro. Daniel proposed the health of the I.P.M. and P.M.'s, which was duly acknowledged by Bro. Furnivall. The W.M. called on Bro Cokayne to propose the Wardens and Officers of the Lodge, which was suitably acknowledged. The health of the Treasurer, next proposed, was received, and warmly responded to, and then the Tyler's toast brought the evening to a close. The pleasure of the evening was greatly enhanced by some good songs from Bros. Blackshaw, Brown, Maydew, and Wilson. We are indebted to the kindness of Bro. Secretary for his courtesy. Bro. Sheldon also deserves our thanks.

INAUGURATION OF THE INDEPENDENT LODGE, No. 236, G.L. IRELAND.

(From the "Sentinel of Mauritius.")

On Friday, the 30th August, took place, at the local de la "Loge la Paix," the inauguration of this new Lodge, established under the Constitution of the Grand Lodge of Ireland. At 7.30 o'clock p.m. the Lodge was opened in form by W. Bro. George Lewison P.M., and one of the founders of the British Lodge No. 736, and P.M. and one of the founders of the Lodge Friendship, and Installing Master on this occasion. The visitors were then introduced, amongst whom we remarked W. Bro. J. Emile Daruty 33°, and P.M. of the Lodge l'Amitié No. 245, and also Representative of the Supreme Council of France; W. Bro. J. Rochière 30°, and Vénérable de la Loge l'Amitié No. 245, accompanied by Bros. Graves, Panniset and Bouis of the same Lodge. W. Bro. T. H. Thompson P.M. of the Saint Louis Lodge of Mark Master Masons; and Bros. Capt. J. T. Russell, R.N., Captains Crocker and Krokstedt, ships Canada and Glenroy, Dr. Gandberg, W. C. Argent, J. Cornell, C. Lawrence, H. R. Bell, S. M. George, J. T. Barnes, and several others, whose names escape our memory.

The Acting Secretary, Bro. G. J. May, having read the warrant of the new Lodge, the ceremony of Dedication then began.

W. Bros. Daruty and Rochière then introduced Bro. A. G. Rickwood W.M. Elect, to the Installing Master, who carried out the ceremony of Installation in accordance with the laws of the Irish constitution.

W. Bro. A. G. Rickwood, having been placed in the chair, then installed the officers of the Independent Lodge, in their several capacities.

W. Bro. Rickwood next read the circular received from the G.L. of Ireland in reference to the Grand Orient of France having altered the first article of its constitution, on which he made the following observations. The circular I have just read explains, I hope, fully why you do not see here this evening the brethren of our Sister Lodges of the Island, although there are Lodges constituted under G.L. of England and Scotland, yet most of the members of these are affiliated to the Triple Esperance and La Paix Lodges who are constituted under the G.O. of France. We all know very well that Masons are brethren by a double tie, among us no invidious distinction exists; merit is always respected, and honour rendered to whom honour is due; nevertheless, the course is laid down for us, and we must observe it.

W. Bro. Rickwood then read the following address, viz.:—Brethren, there has been from time immemorial a laudable and useful custom among Masons to deliver on special occasions, addresses, orations as they are called, on some pressing subject of Masonic interest, or some prevailing truth of Masonic teaching. It is then with great pleasure that I shall venture to express something more than a hope that the Lodge now to be numbered among those of this Island will not occupy the least honourable place on the Masonic roll of the Grand Lodge of Ireland. To this end it is necessary that three things above all should be kept in view; first, the convenience, comeliness, and decency of our place of meeting; secondly, the maintenance of a truly regular and Masonic equality in all our proceedings while assembled in Lodge; and above all, the perfect interpretation of our lives and conversation with the true principles of Masonry, so as to produce not only a speculative and barren admiration of virtue, but likewise an active practical illustration of the beneficial effects of that noble and exalted system of morality of which we are the representatives. Our place of meeting, brethren, should be carefully and diligently selected, replete with those conveniences which our ancient ritual requires for its due and impressive performance. The three great lights should be the charter of our dependence on the aid of the G.A.O.T.U., the three lesser lights should embody the principle of our self-government. Let us then, brethren, by a discreet, honourable and virtuous career, study to evince our attachment to the landmarks of the Order, and thereby command the confidence of the world in their beneficial tendency and effect. Let us cultivate the social virtues, zealously regard the qualities of prudence, temperance and charity; in a word, let us show to the world that, though not exempt from human frailty, in becoming Masons we become better men. Thus, brethren, by faith in God, hope in immortality, and charity to all mankind, may we ascend by the ladder of honourable exertion to that Lodge which is the residence of the spirits of just men made perfect, and governed by the Grand Master of the Universe, whose Tyler is death, and whose portal the grave. He then addressed W. Bro. Daruty 33°, in the following terms, viz.: I am proud of the honour you and the brethren of your Lodge (constituted as you are under the Supreme Grand Council of France) have evinced towards us this evening; we have not only to thank you for your attendance and offices, but for the kind and brotherly recommendation attached by you to our application to obtain the warrant by which we are empowered to hold our meeting this evening; the interest you have taken in, and the admiration you have shown towards the prosperity of our Lodge, prompts me to ask the unanimous and cordial vote of thanks of the brethren on your behalf, and we trust we shall on many occasions have the pleasure of cultivating social virtues for our benefit.

W. Bro. Daruty answered in most flattering terms, and assured the brethren of the Independent Lodge that their brethren of the Lodge l'Amitié were unanimous in wishing prosperity to the Independent Lodge.

W. Bro. Rickwood, addressing the visitors, said: Brother Visitors, I find here, among you, many distinguished Masons, I am sure you will excuse me if I cannot individually speak of you. I shall satisfy myself by saying, so far as my experience extends, the greatest of all brotherhoods is that of Freemasonry, and that quality I recognize by your presence here this evening. The members of the Independent Lodge will long remember the honour you have done them by your attendance, and they trust, by being enabled steadily to persevere in the course laid down for them, we shall, on many occasions, have the pleasure of seeing you again. And now, my brethren, I thank you on my own part as well as that of the members for your kind attention. After a reply from Wor. Bro. T. H. Thompson P.M. Wor. Brother Rickwood moved the following resolution relative to W. Bro E. P. Albert, Past Grand Pursuivant of the G.L. of England:—With a view of conveying to our Worshipful Brother E. P. Albert, Past Grand Pursuivant of the G.L. of England, a permanent record of the estimation in which he is held by the members of this Lodge, for the valuable and laudable services rendered by him, I propose we unanimously vote our cordial thanks for the same, and farther, that he be pleased to accept the honorary membership of the Lodge, and be its representative in all Masonic matters which may have to be submitted to Grand Lodge. I regret to find that our Bro. P.M. de Lisse has not been able to attend our meeting. I desire to express my sincere and grateful thanks to him for having, on many occasions, assisted me by his advice, and for his good feeling towards the success of our Lodge. And also to Bro. May, our Secretary.

W. Bro. Rickwood then addressed W. Bro. George Lewison P.M., as follows: It is with much pleasure I take the present opportunity of thanking you for your kind offices this evening, and indeed for the interest you have taken in helping the formation of this new Lodge; it is to our worthy brother's having the interest of the Craft at heart that we have met here this evening, where, it is to be hoped, we shall on many more successive occasions again meet, and derive from him the pleasure of his experience, being, as he is, one of the oldest and most respectable Freemasons in this island. I therefore trust, my brethren, you will agree with me in allowing to be recorded on the Minutes of this Lodge our unanimous and cordial vote of thanks to our Bro. P.M. Lewison. The pedestal presented by him, and which now stands in the centre of this Lodge, is an everlasting testimony of our worthy brother, which not only evinces his attachment to the Order, but to the brethren of this Lodge in particular.

W. Bro. Lewison P.M. replied, thanking the W.M. for the very kind eulogium he had passed upon him.

The W.M. then terminated his address by complimenting Bro. G. J. May, Secretary, to whom he said, I must indeed take this opportunity of stating that you have most actively assisted me in carrying out the operations and directions issued to you, and for which I desire to record my best thanks.

CHARITY STEWARDS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—A somewhat unexpectedly protracted holiday having come to an end, on my return to duty I at once proceed to the consideration of the third section of the above subject, viz.:

c. "The inadequate return for such expenditure."

Here again I take my text from the letter of "A STEWARD WHO HAS SERVED ONCE," in your issue of 24th August. The writer states, "I simply do not think I ought again to incur so much expense in doing so little good," which, plainly interpreted, means, "I grudge neither the time nor the money I have expended, but I do lament over the insufficient results." Very creditable to the heart, but scarcely so to the head. In no pursuit in life can any one guarantee that success shall always reward labour. That the incentive to labour is success, no one will question; equally certainly it may be stated that no one will maintain that the want of success attending a given effort shall be held as a justification for ceasing from further effort. What we find in our heart as our duty to do, let us do, discharging such duty to the best of our ability, in the earnest hope that its "fulfilment may procure all the satisfaction we desire." Disappointment, however, should not be the parent of discouragement, but should rather stimulate to renewed exertion. "Paul may plant, Apollos may water," but it remains with higher influences to "give the increase."

A zealous, conscientious member of a Lodge, recognising the multitudinous claims on the resources of the Masonic Institutions, and impressed with a deep feeling of regret at the neglect and apathy evinced by the majority of his brethren, determines to do all that in him lies to give life to the dry bones with which his Lodge is strewed, and to rouse the animated frames to vigorous effort. He offers his services as Steward, is accepted, and proceeds forthwith in his self-allotted task. He "receives from the office of the Institution a package of circulars—posts them to the members of the Lodge—gets no replies—has special circulars printed"—and though possessing a constituency of 83 persons, two only manifest their sympathy and appreciation, by donations of 5 guineas each—a few others contribute 5 guineas amongst them—which, with 5 guineas from the Lodge funds, and his own donation of 10 guineas, constitute a total of 30 guineas as the outcome of lengthened and anxious work.

This, given in his own words by "A STEWARD WHO HAS SERVED ONCE," is, I regret to say, the experience of numberless Stewards. But do not let them on this account "throw up the sponge," and retire from the arena as defeated in the struggle. Rather let them derive consolation from the fact that the united results of 50 such "disappointments" mean 1500 guineas! No blame attaches to them, but a sense of shame ought to hang heavily on that large majority who, seeing in their path an object worthy of their aid, close their eyes wilfully, or, like the Levite in the parable, "pass by on the other side."

This it is that renders absolutely necessary, what I am free to admit is in itself undesirable, the constant, uninterrmittent, urgent appeals, addressed to the careless and the indifferent, by the official representatives of our Institutions, and by other good fellow-workers who have their interest at heart. "The dripping of water wears away a stone," and it is only by the persistent "dripping," to which some object, that impression can be made on the stony and the cold.

Do not let any Steward imagine for a moment that his services are appreciated only in proportion to the result attending them. To "A STEWARD WHO HAS SERVED ONCE," I would say, do not be disheartened; try again—remember that everything must have a beginning. Soil that has been neglected and allowed to remain fallow for years cannot be expected to produce a remunerative crop on the first attempt at culture, but with continued attention and treatment it will be found to amply repay the pain and labour bestowed upon it. Seventeen years ago the vineyard in which for that period it has been my lot to toil was in an exceedingly unpromising condition. I, and I hope I may say others, are perfectly satisfied with it now. I have no wish to indulge in egotism, but I feel that I may state that earnestness and perseverance not only subdued difficulties, but begat sympathy which speedily developed into practical support.

More need hardly be added, I trust, to encourage the weak-hearted, or to influence the wavereres; still less to induce those who have once placed their hands on the plough not to turn back. There is enormous work yet to be done, and I have every hope that doers will be found who, through good report and ill report, will trustfully and hopefully tread the path of duty, undeterred by coldness, ridicule or neglect, even though their reward assume no higher proportions than the gratifying testimony of their own consciences.

I cannot omit a few words in reference to the letters of your correspondents "ALPHA" and "P. T." I am considerably pleased by the perusal of any communications on the very important subject on which we are expressing our views and opinions, but I wish to avoid controversy. Where so many are interested and concerned it is more than idle to look for unanimity. My object has been, and is, to treat the questions connected with "Charity Stewards" in a fairly exhaustive manner, from my point of view, which regards the present system as the best, as one productive of the greatest benefit to our Institutions, and which, while profiting by the arduous services of Stewards, secures to those brethren privileges and distinctions. These may, or may not, be prudently extended, and details may possibly be capable of improvement. My observations are here, of course, limited in this application to the "Anniversary Festivals," and in no way have a bearing on any scheme for a further and fuller support of our Institutions, on which I may trouble you hereafter.

"ALPHA" charges me with being sharp on your correspondent "A STEWARD WHO HAS SERVED ONCE." To any such intention I utterly demur; and in this particular, and in others, "ALPHA" appears to me to justify the description of "hypercriticism" attached to his letter by "P. T.," whose tone is, in my humble judgment, preferable to that of "ALPHA." I do not say this because "P. T." writes somewhat approvingly of my poor efforts, and I may be but a poor judge in my own case, as is the wont of most men.

Your number of 31st ult. I regret to say I have not by me at this present writing, and therefore am unable to refer to the letter of "INVICTA," which, however, shall have from me the attention it doubtless deserves.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

FREDERICK BINCKES.

DISPOSAL OF LODGE FUNDS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In the third balance sheet I have the pleasure of forwarding you there is one matter I should like to direct attention to. The first item of expenditure I summarise as "Refreshment and Rent." The latter of these items represents £24 3s of the whole, and therefore leaves £227 4s 7d as the actual amount spent on refreshment. Now, in my opinion, these two items should be reckoned together in order to put this balance sheet on a similar footing to those already published, for it is very certain that in both those cases payment had to be made for accommodation, although it may not appear as a special item in the balance sheet; it can hardly be expected that the various hotels, at which the bulk of the Lodges meet, provide rooms for the gatherings without charge; but it is evident they must so regulate their prices for wines, suppers, &c., as to leave a margin sufficient to cover rent, gas, &c. In the case of this Lodge, the meetings of which are held at one of the Masonic Halls, where the members have a wine cellar of their own, it may be assumed that the amount thus saved is considered an equivalent for the charge for use of apartments. For this reason I think I am justified in combining the two amounts.

No. 3.

BALANCE SHEET OF LODGE ———. ONE YEAR—1877-8:—

RECEIPTS.

Balance forward			£85 6 6
Receipts for the year:—
Subscriptions and Visitors	194 10 6
Initiation Fees ...	99 15 0
		294 5 6
		£379 12 0

EXPENDITURE.

Refreshment and Rent	£251 7 7
Grand Lodge certificates and dues	62 11 6
P.M.'s jewel	10 10 0
Tyler	4 0 0
Printing, postages, &c.	15 8 3
Balance in hand	35 14 8
	£379 12 0

To the above balance sheet is added a report by the auditors, who therein direct attention to the omission of any grant to the Masonic Charities appearing in the accounts, and they state that a sum had been voted by the Lodge, but the minute referring thereto not having been confirmed, it was considered undesirable it should appear in the balance sheet. I think it would be rather difficult to find the "balance" if anything like a fair sum in proportion to the receipts had been voted, but I suppose the members considered they did their duty by giving about ten guineas. Even if they only gave that amount, the result of the year's work shows very badly. For a Lodge to start with a balance of £85 and leave off with £25 is, in my opinion, simply disgraceful, unless some calamity can be adduced as the cause; but in this case the fault is nothing more nor less than wasteful extravagance. The members spent £250, that is, £50 above their surplus receipts, on refreshment, and yet they hope to rank as a Masonic Lodge. This statement certainly does not do much to remove the charge made by Bro. Dick Radclyffe against our Lodges, and the further I look into the matter, the more I am convinced that his remarks were far too mild. The facts, as far as I have gone, lead me to believe that Freemasonry in many cases means but extravagant expenditure of money on eating and drinking. All I can hope is, that some brother will come forward and put a different complexion on this subject, as I really dread to think what the total spent by English Lodges on refreshment will come to, if instances cannot be found directly opposite to those I have particulars of, as regards the proportion of refreshment expenses.

Yours fraternally,

UNION JACK.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—"UNION JACK'S" last statement of account is a decided improvement on the previous one, but there is a wide disproportion, nevertheless—so, at least, it appears to me—between the sum devoted to Tavern Bills, &c., and that voted to Masonic Charity. I imagine I am tolerably safe in assuming that the "Other Receipts" - £259 11s—consist of little else than subscriptions and initiation and joining fees—or, in other words, that they compose the bulk of the regular income of the Lodge. Close on £240 of this is spent in dinners, &c., and other £25 and upwards are required for Grand Lodge certificates and dues, these two items thus exceeding the regular income of the Lodge. I am not anxious there should be no more cakes and ale, and I willingly acknowledge that this Lodge has acted prudently. It has £300, of which the greater part is invested, to the good, yet its Charity Grant stands to its Tavern Expenditure in the proportion of, in round figures, about 8 to 92. Again, it is very honourable in a Lodge to recognize the services of its Master, but seven guineas is a fairly long price to pay for a jewel when only £20 is voted to a Charity, the two sums being as nearly as possible in a ratio of three to eight. However, it is easier to play the part of critic than to exhibit oneself as a model of discretion, so I will wind up by pointing out that if all our Lodges—excluding those abroad—only did what the one cited by "UNION JACK" last week has done in the year mentioned, their contributions to Masonic Charity would represent a round sum of £25,000. As much more in the shape of personal contributions from brethren would place our three Institutions on a substantial footing, and enable them to better meet the claims on their resources.

Fraternally yours,

OLD FILE.

CUSTODY OF LODGE FUNDS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Bro. Barnes alludes to me, as the Treasurer of the Yarborough Lodge, No. 554, in his letter to you of the 26th ult. on the above subject. I beg to say that in January 1868 (the year of my Mastership) a sum of £50, balance of Lodge funds for the year 1867, was invested, and that since January 1874 (the time I was appointed Treasurer of the Lodge) a sum of £163 10s has been paid to the three Masonic Institutions, and to needy brethren and widows of deceased brethren £131 1s, or a total from the Lodge funds of £294 11s in less than five years.

According to Bro. Barnes's statement the Doric has paid since October 1872:—

To the Institutions	£101	10 0
To Brethren and widows of deceased brethren	105	12 0
Total	207	2 0

So that the payments from the funds of these two Lodges during the last six years have been as follows:—

To Institutions:—
Yarborough Lodge	£168	10 0
Doric	101	10 0
		£265	0 0
To needy brethren, &c.:—
Yarborough Lodge	£131	1 0
Doric	105	12 0
		£501	13 0

I am, Dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

JOHN G. STEVENS,

P.M. and Treasurer 554.

LODGE FUNDS AND THE GREAT CITY LODGE.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The subject of Lodge Funds and their appropriation having received a good deal of attention in the columns of your estimable journal, allow me to remind your readers that to-day will be held the Installation Meeting of one of our Metropolitan Lodges which, though quite a youthful daughter of our Grand Lodge, has yet made itself conspicuous in the English Craft. The number of its members is considerable, it has persevered in its labours till now there are few Lodges where it will be found the work is better done, and, above all things, it has given the light of its countenance to the frequent exercise of that virtue on which Masons pride themselves with so much or so little reason according to the circumstances and conduct of individuals and Lodges. The Lodge I refer to is The Great City Lodge, and this meeting being the great one of the year, I do not see what greater éclat can be given to the occasion than for the Lodge to vote a liberal portion of its surplus funds to one of our Charitable Institutions. I am assuming the Lodge has a surplus of receipts over expenditure, which, perhaps, I ought not to have done; but somehow it has struck me that it could not possibly be otherwise, and that there must be sufficient to enable the Lodge to repeat at this meeting one of the many doughty deeds of charity by which its past brief career has been distinguished. But there is also a further reason for this suggestion of mine, which does not appear on the surface. I have said The Great City Lodge has already achieved a fame beyond its years, and the influence its example must exercise on other Lodges is commensurate. By signalising its installation in the manner I have pointed out it will afford the best possible proof which a Lodge can give that its heart is deeply set on the promotion and support of our Charitable Institutions, and that in the midst of feasting and plenty it still has an eye and an ear for those to whom the bounty of Providence has been less abundantly dispensed. The champagne, and the hock, and the sherry will sparkle the more brightly when the way to enjoy it has been paved with a Vice-Presidency to one of our Institutions. It will also teach those Lodges which do not include a grant for Charity among the items of their expenditure—the tavern bills absorbing all their assets—that these Masons have some other end in view than to gorge six or seven times in the year.

Trusting the brethren of the Great City Lodge will take my hint or suggestion in good part, I subscribe myself,

Most faithfully and fraternally yours,

PETER.

THE "FOUR OLD LODGES."

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—We had intended keeping the few words of ours as to Bro. Gould's "Four Old Lodges" until the series was complete, but in response to his fraternal queries and friendly notice of our previous articles on the subject, and also of our correspondence with him, we have decided to at once state, as briefly as possible, a few thoughts on this important subject. First of all let us say, that until recently but little has been known as to the old Lodges, and that little—unless in a few most honourable instances, we have had to acquire and discover after patient toil, for years. Now, however, we have access to several engraved Lists of Lodges from 1723, in and out, to 1778, and Bro. Albert Pike, of U.S.A., has issued a reproduction of Pine's List of 1725, the writer having followed, in the Freemason, with one of 17.9, and in the Masonic Magazine of others bearing the years 1733 (Rawlinson), 1734 (Pine's), 1763 (Cole's), &c., &c. We did the best with the material formerly at our disposal, but had we left our analyses until now, it is likely we should have been preserved from several errors, through the mistakes and erroneous statements of our first authorities. However, we have been always ready to admit that the best we could do was much of a tentative character, and mainly as the herald of better and more correct data on which to found positive conclusions. We trust we have not dogmatised, and have always been ready to welcome earnest students as accessions to the small band of zealous labourers in Masonic Archæology. Not one anywhere has done equal to Bro. Gould in the department he has so completely made his own, and in which he has so effectually cleared up doubtful points from an examination and reproduction of the several valuable Lists to which he has had access in the Grand Secretary's Office, &c. We are in hopes that the series of interesting articles when complete, will be printed in a book form, so that they may attain the full publicity and consideration they so amply deserve. Few seem to care to criticise them, and few indeed can thoroughly do so for several reasons; first, because they are well nigh perfect, and next because those who have the materials and knowledge at hand to do so, see so few blemishes that it would be a pity to touch any portion which is merely stated as a matter of opinion; the collected facts, reproductions of Lists, and the easy, happy arrangement of the whole, being so thoroughly useful and satisfactory. Not having any side to keep up, and being anxious only for the truth, we are quite content to have any of our old statements set aside that have been proved of late to be erroneous. We have been accumulating a quantity of facts as to these old Lodges, and not having the time to arrange them for the Press, we have been pleased to aid our Brother Gould, by any information at our command, whenever possible, for he has deserved no less from us, and more we could not do, and certainly we are now relieved from the duty of attending to this special subject through his able articles.

The able reviewer of our reprint of "Pine's List, 1725," may rest assured that the changes of dates, years, &c., will go far to explain many peculiarities as to certain old Lodges, and that if we could only have been sure that 1734 was the wrong year for the constitution of the "Strong Man" Lodge,* there would have been no difficulty in connecting it with an old Lodge of 1732-3. The worst is, that frequently in these Lists the days, months, and years do not agree with those on the original warrants. We think it well nigh certain that the surmise of the "Reviewer" has turned out be exact as to fact with respect to the "Strong Man" Lodge, and we much wonder—with him—that so few Lodges do aught to elucidate their own histories, or care for that of others. We have already expressed our approval of your Reviewer's intelligent criticism.

We have carefully considered Bro. Gould's views as to the original No. 3, and its continuance through its acceptance of a "New Constitution," being in fact the present "Forti ude and Old Cumberland," No. 12. Of course all we can both say resolves itself into a matter of opinion, ours being, that by the acceptance of a "New Constitution" they lost their previous position and privileges, in opposition to Bro. Gould's belief, and as a matter of fact we know the members have never since regained them, nor apparently wished so to do for many years past! The privileges the old No. 3 had were simply to meet without a warrant, to be one of the four original Lodges preceding all others, and such like. By accepting a warrant they forfeited the one, and by being placed as No. 10, as in Constitutions of 1738, they lost the other, and so the Lodge has continued until now. We are quite ready to admit that Bro. Gould has identified No. 12 as the lineal descendant of original No. 3, so that, under another name, the members of to-day may fairly claim that their predecessors took part in the formation of the Premier Grand Lodge of the World, and the credit of this discovery is entirely due to our Brother Gould, to whom also we beg to express our appreciation of the handsome manner in which he has always credited to "Cæsar the things which are Cæsars," so unlike many writers, who take all from others and keep the credit to themselves.

Fraternally yours,

WILLIAM JAMES HUGHAN.

We have been asked to say a few words in behalf of the boy Richard Howell Nicholls, aged nine years, who is a candidate for the second time for admission into the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. Our duty on these occasions is to maintain the strictest neutrality, but this does not prevent us from saying that it is a most deserving, as it undoubtedly is a most distressing case, as will be gathered from the statement hereinafter quoted from the circular letter issued with a view to secure, if possible, his election. Those brethren, therefore, whose votes are not already promised, will be doing the boy and his widowed mother a substantial service by supporting his candidature. The following are the circumstances as described in the circular referred to:—

Richard Howell Nicholls, aged nine years, whose father was a hay and straw merchant, at Grays, Essex, and died on the 25th May 1877, after a few days' illness of inflammation of the lungs, leaving a widow and six children under ten years of age totally unprovided for. He was initiated in 1866, in the Vitruvian Lodge, No. 87; was one of the founders of St. John's Lodge, Grays, No. 1343, in the year 1870; was W.M. of the same Lodge in 1874, and by his uniform courtesy and kindness endeared himself to all the brethren.

Obituary

BRO. E. G. HOLBROOK.

We deeply regret to have to announce the death, at the early age of 34, of Bro. Edward George Holbrook, one of the proprietors of the Portsmouth Times. The deceased gentleman, who resided at Regent Lodge, North End, was a short time since seized with an attack of typhoid fever. He was attended by Dr. Knott, and until Saturday last progressed favourably towards recovery; but on that day a relapse occurred, from which he never recovered, but gradually sank and expired at half-past five on Tuesday evening. For some considerable period Bro. Holbrook had taken an active part in public life, having represented the Ward of St. John in the Town Council for nearly five years. He was also a member of the Watch Committee. His attendance at the meetings of the Council was very regular, and, although his voice was but very seldom heard, when he did speak he was generally listened to with respectful attention. The deceased was for several years a member of the Masonic body, and was systematically most active in promoting the interests of Masonic Charities. He was a Past Master of the "Lodge of Harmony," Fareham, and had held the position of Grand Registrar of the Province of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight. In private life his genial qualities obtained for him a very wide circle of friends, who now deeply deplore his premature death. He has left a widow and three children.—Portsmouth Evening News.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE BRO. SHEPPARD, P.M. 27.

We regret to have to record that Brother Sheppard succumbed to the serious injuries received in a recent accident, the particulars of which most of our readers are acquainted with. He was buried on Monday last, at Abney Park Cemetery. The funeral cortège was met at the gates of the Cemetery by several Freemasons, as well as by numerous officials of the New River Company; Bro. Sheppard had been the City inspector. Amongst those present were Bros. T. J. Maidwell the W.M., H. G. Buss A.G.S. the Treas., the Secretary, and several Past Masters of the Egyptian Lodge; the W.M., S.W., and several members of the New Concord Lodge.

Whittle, G. Thomson, T. J. Thompson, John Knott, J. Holt, J. A. Atkinson, T. Leech, J. F. Fear, W. Thomas, A. H. Hawthorn, J. Davies, T. H. Tudley, Geo. Bottomley, E. Newton, W. Webber, W. Lumb, H. Platt, &c., &c.; among the visitors we had the pleasure of recognising James Salmon, W.M. 1674, P.M. 425, &c., &c., P.P.S.G.D., Wm. J. Pearson P.M. 451, P.P.S.G.D., J. W. Thomas P.M. 637, &c., &c., P.P.G.S.B. Staffordshire, W. C. Lisle P.M. 293, P.G.S.D., W. Sandford, C. A. Cordingley 293, S. M. Davies, FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, &c., &c. The Lodge was opened promptly at 3 p.m., and the usual routine business having been disposed of, was advanced to the second, and afterwards to the third degree, for the purpose of raising a member. The W.M. Elect, Bro. Douglas S.W., was then introduced to the Installing Master, Bro. Samuel, by Bro. Watson P.M., and in due course installed in the chair of the Lodge in a manner which reflected credit on Bro. Samuel. Bro. Douglas next invested the following brethren as Officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. E. H. Girdlestone I.P.M., George Young S.W., T. Bolshaw J.W., J. Badger (re-appointed) Treasurer, J. Samuel P.M. Sec., W. Pointon S.D., W. Wood J.D., E. Herd Organist, Rev. Bro. Pepper Chaplain, A. McCrindle I.G., T. Miller Tyler. The labours of the evening being ended, the Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet, where an excellent menu was provided, the caterer being our worthy brother the host of the Royal Hotel. On the removal of the cloth, the W.M., after very neat preface, gave the several Loyal and Masonic toasts, which were most heartily responded to. The W.M., on rising to propose the health of R.W. Prov. G. Master Lord De Tabley, and the P.G. Officers past and present said they all knew how well their worthy Prov. G. Master administered the affairs of the Province, and any remarks from him on the subject would be superfluous. He contented himself therefore with coupling the name of Bro. Lisle with the toast, and asked all present to honour it appropriately. This having been done, Bro. Lisle rose and returned thanks, remarking they were well aware how his Lordship's heart was in the Order, and had his smile for every brother. With him at its head the Craft had greatly increased in this Province. He believed very few would have done so much as he had done, and he trusted that in years to come good and worthy men would spring up equal to him. He hoped that the Province would ever continue as at present, in love, peace, and charity. The worthy and indefatigable Brother Dir. of Cer., by consent of the W.M. then assumed the gavel, for the purpose of proposing the toast of the evening, namely, the health of the Worshipful Master, and in doing so said: It is with great pleasure I rise to propose this toast. The worthy brother who has this day been placed in the responsible position of Master of this Lodge has justly earned the distinction conferred upon him, and is one who can justly estimate the importance of the great trust reposed in him as a ruler and a governor in the Craft. This Lodge has, this day, as heretofore, rewarded zeal, application, and merit, and while we adhere to this excellent custom, the Lodge will never lose any of its reputation for discipline and correct working. We have the true Masonic virtues in our Lodge. We sink all points of difference, and endeavour to make each other as happy as possible. I feel no greater pleasure than being among my brethren in Lodge. I am sure during the coming year every brother will render the W.M. every aid, and he who fails in that is not true to his Lodge. Let us hope that the end of the year will be as prosperous as the beginning. I now ask you to drink most heartily to the "Health and prosperity of the W.M." The toast was drunk in a bumper, with all the honours. Bro. Kendrick having favoured the brethren with a song, the W.M. rose to respond. He said, Brethren, I will not detain you long, but it would not become me if I failed to express my sincere appreciation of the kindness that has actuated the worthy brother in proposing my health, and you for endorsing in so hearty a manner the sentiments he has expressed towards me. With the exception of the distinction of P.G. office, there is no greater honour than to rule a Lodge. With the true spirit of Masonry among us, and that carried out to perfection, prosperous as our Lodge has always been, it cannot fail to continue so. My entire sympathy and support shall be extended to the Lodge, and in my endeavours to do my utmost for its welfare I feel I shall receive the hearty co-operation of my Officers and of the Lodge. I have entered on the office with a full sense of its responsibilities, and my great care shall be to vacate this chair without in the least tarnishing the honour or welfare of the Lodge. While I am on my legs, I have great pleasure in proposing the health of the Installing Master. It is but right to say since I have known Bro. Samuel in this Lodge that he has done his duty in every respect. In asking him to perform the difficult ceremony which he has accomplished in such a masterly manner to-day, I felt he would be equal to the occasion, and you must have appreciated the able manner in which he rendered it. I now ask you to drink his health. Bro. Young having volunteered a song, Bro. Samuel said he rose with much difference to reply to the toast so kindly put from the chair, and so warmly received. He had taken an active part in the working of the Lodge. He had that evening received an additional impetus, if it were needed, to make fresh efforts, and felt the honour conferred upon him in receiving Prov. Honours. He appreciated Masonry for its real worth. He endeavoured to guard his younger brethren against errors and laxity of discipline. There were too many indifferent Masons. Its mission was to dispense wisdom, light, and happiness, and we could not but pity those who tried to injure them. As Freemasons, we were the guardians of, not innovators upon, our Order. It was our bounden duty to protect our principles. By command of the Worshipful Master, Bro. Watson Past Master proposed the toasts of the Visitors; extending to all a truly fraternal welcome, and uniting with the toast the name of Bro. Salmon, to whom he and the Lodge were greatly indebted, and to Bro. Thomas P.P.G.S.B. Staffordshire. He was glad to see all the visiting brethren, who had favoured them with their presence that day. Bro. Salmon, in responding, said, It was a true saying that time and tide would wait for no man, and he might add that trains would not wait for him. He then drew the attention of the brethren to a few matters, and assured them with every fraternal feeling, he would be pleased at any time to do all he could for the Lodge, and felt delighted with the day so profitably spent. Bro. Thomas, in responding, said it was his first visit to the Lodge and to Cheshire, and it was probably in consequence of its good repute that he was present. They had been well blessed with P.G. Officers, and therefore prosperous and happy. In his Province they had not had things as smoothly, but latterly they had made great progress under the able leadership of the late lamented P.G.M. Lord Shrewsbury, though now he regretted to say they were again under the care of Grand Lodge. Years ago we received a very valuable acquisition to our Province in the personal aid and influence of Bro. Hall, who came from Seacombe. It was through him the Earl of Shrewsbury took so deep an interest in the Order. Through this brother's exertions they had given £2,400 to the Charities. They tried to emulate the leading Provinces, which set an example not only to the Provinces that are backward, but also to London. He looked forward with hope to a closer union between Cheshire and Staffordshire. The brethren of the latter were desirous to help all they could in the good work before them, and in return they liked to be assisted. Let them then join hand in hand, and they could not but succeed. He concluded by saying he was greatly pleased in being there on this occasion. Bro. Eardley proposed the Charities, in a very able manner, and said that as Bro. Blackhurst had represented them before, he hoped he would do so again, and he would couple the name of Bro. Blackhurst with the toast. Bro. Blackhurst P.M. said he had the honour to represent this Province at the Boys' School, and Bro. Salmon, a very energetic and well versed Charity Steward, had only beaten him by a few pounds. He then adverted to Bro. Samuel's remarks on Ancient Masonry, and referred the brethren to the state of the Charities in the time of the Duke of Athol as Grand Master and their flourishing state to-day. He hoped to be able to represent them at the next Festival of the Girls' School, and after that at the Aged Freemasons and Widows. The W.M. next proposed the I.P.M. and Past Masters of the Lodge; he did so to keep up a good custom, and to show he appreciated the valuable aid rendered by the Past Masters. The toast was drunk with every respect. Bro. Girdlestone I.P.M., in reply, said it would not become him at that late hour to make a speech. He thanked the brethren for their mark of respect to him, and for the support given him during his year of office. He felt he had merited their esteem. He valued the Past Master's jewel presented him in that sense. He promised to take the same interest in the future as he had in the past, and render all the aid he could for the furtherance of the welfare of the Lodge. In conclusion, he paid a high tribute of praise to Masonic literature, and hoped the brethren would read the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE as a source of information on the leading Masonic matters of the day, and felt greatly pleased to see a representative with them that night, and added,—Let us read and learn. The W.M. next proposed the Officers of the Lodge. He felt sure no better Officers could have been appointed in any Lodge in the Province. He was convinced all would do their duty faithfully. He coupled with the toast the name of the Senior Warden, who replied for the honour conferred, and hoped all would attend to their duties, and that the benches would be well filled with members to encourage them. Bro. D. of C. gave the last toast, which brought a pleasant and edifying evening to a close. We wish to thank Bro. Samuel for his kindness to us, and many of the brethren who expressed their well wishes for the welfare of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, and in return reciprocate most cordially our best wishes for their future happiness in their Lodge and homes.

Hervey Lodge, No. 1260.—The regular meeting of this Lodge was held on Wednesday, at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, W.C. Bro. J. H. Southwood opened the Lodge, supported by the following Officers:—Goodacre S.W., Foot as J.W., Charles Atkins P.M. Sec., Jabez Hogg P.M. Treas., Latrelle as Deacon, Dean Org. The minutes having been confirmed, Bros. Kirby and Hart were prepared and regularly passed to the second degree. That ceremony completed, Bros. Fildew and Calenshead were duly raised to the third degree. The W.M. having resumed the Lodge to the first degree, brought forward a motion which stood in his name as to the revision of the bye-laws, and a committee was appointed to draw up a new set, to be brought before the Lodge at its next meeting. Bro. Hogg P.M. and Treas. proposed that the thanks of the members be given to the W.M. and Secretary for their labours in connection with the Summer Festival, he felt that all the members who took part in that day's enjoyment would agree with him that the whole of the proceedings passed off in a most satisfactory way, and he felt that this success was due to the exertions of the two brethren named. The proposition was duly seconded, and unanimously agreed to. Both the W.M and Sec. responded, thanking the members for this mark of appreciation of their labour. Four propositions for initiation having been handed in, the Lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned to supper. After grace the usual toasts were given. Bro. Hogg, in replying to that of the Grand Officers said, that having had to thank the Hervey Lodge for their kind sentiments so often, he hardly knew in what new terms to reply. He was gratified at the hearty reception accorded to the toast, and especially so as his name was connected with it. He had always striven, and should continue to strive, to assist the Hervey Lodge to the best of his ability. In his position of custodian of their funds, he assured them he should ever take as much care of their money as he did of his own. He wished the Lodge every prosperity, and hoped he should long have an opportunity of attending its meetings, which he considered the most enjoyable he ever participated in. The health of the Visitors was next given, the W.M. assuring them they would always find a hearty welcome at the Hervey Lodge. Each of the guests replied, congratulating the Master on the prosperous condition of his Lodge, and thanking him for the hospitality accorded them. Bro. Hogg now assumed the gavel, and gave the health of the W.M. In doing so he again referred to the pleasant day's outing the W.M. had provided for the members, and hoped it would be a feature never omitted in future years. Their W.M. was so well known to every member that he felt no remarks of his were necessary in eulogy of his good qualities. He would, therefore, at once call on them to drink the toast. This having been most heartily done, the W.M. rose. Having thanked the members, he proceeded to give his ideas as to the best means to be adopted with the view of reorganising their Benevolent Fund, and hoped that as many brethren as could make it convenient would attend their next meeting, when the matter would be discussed. He then proposed the health of the Treasurer and Secretary. He considered them very important Officers. On the faithful discharge of their duties very much of the success of the Lodge depended. He felt that the Hervey had, in Bros. Hogg and Atkins, two brethren who would carry out the duties of their offices with the utmost satisfaction to all concerned. These two brethren having replied, the W.M. gave the toast of the Officers of the Lodge, and it having been duly honoured and acknowledged, the Tyler was called, and the proceedings were brought to a close.

The Great City Lodge, No. 1426.—An emergency meeting was held on Saturday last, at the Cannon-street Hotel. Present—Bros. Richard Stanway W.M., Freeman S.W., Blackie J.W., Edward Moody P.M. Sec., Headon P.M. Treas., Catchpole S.D., Hamer J.D., Kibble D.C., Taylor I.G.; P.M. Bro. James Stevens. Bro. Keene was raised to the sublime degree by the W.M., the Officers rendering him goodly service. It was agreed that a P.M.'s jewel be presented to Bro. Stanway at the installation meeting, which will take place this day (Saturday).

SEVENTH APPLICATION, OCTOBER 1878.

ARTHUR H. DAY, Aged Ten Years,

SON of the late Bro. JOHN DAY, of Tendring, in the County of Essex, Farmer and Brewer. The Deceased was for eight years, and up to a short time of his death, a Subscribing Member of the Lodge of Hope, No. 433, Brightlingsea. She has two children (out of a family of five) entirely dependent. The Applicant is a quick, promising Boy, greatly needing your sympathy.

The Case is strongly recommended by the following Brethren:—R. W. Bros. W. W. B. BEACH M.P. P.G.M. Hants and Isle of Wight; * Sir. J. H. OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

THE Queen and Princess Beatrice attended Divine Service on Sunday in Crathie Church, Balmoral. Prince Leopold left London on Friday, and has proceeded to Germany. The Chancellor of the Exchequer is the Minister in attendance upon the Queen.

The Order of the Bath has been conferred upon Mr. F. O. Adams, Secretary of the Embassy in Paris, and upon the Hon. H. C. Vivian, British Agent and Consul-General in Egypt.

The deaths have been recorded this week of Lord Chelmsford, aged 84, Sir F. Grant, President of the Royal Academy, aged 75, and of Mr. Whalley, M.P. for Peterborough, aged 65.

The coroner's inquest in connection with the loss of the Princess Alice steamer has been continued, and conflicting evidence has been given respecting the sobriety of some of the crew of the Bywell Castle on the occasion of the collision. The total number of bodies that have been recovered is 590, but some 50 persons are still reported to be missing. The Mansion House Relief Fund has been closed, the committee being of opinion that the amount already subscribed (upwards of £35,000) will be sufficient to meet all requirements.

A violent gale raged on Wednesday night in the English Channel, and it was feared that some accident had occurred to the Eddystone Lighthouse, as no light was visible from Plymouth; but this morning's telegrams state that the edifice is standing, but communication is prevented by the state of the weather.

Public interest, has during the past week been chiefly directed towards India. The intentions and movements of the Indian Government are not quite clearly known. It appears that some forward military movement has been made, although the reported capture of the Khyber Pass has not yet been confirmed. The Russian papers, while disclaiming for their Government all responsibility for Shere Ali's hostile attitude towards the British Government, exult in the embarrassment thus created, and declare that, should Afghanistan be annexed to British India, compensation would be sought for by Russia in Kashgar and on the Chinese frontier. Minatory indications of Russian progress in other directions are also given. In Europe the settlement of the Eastern Question does not proceed in the peaceful manner that was expected. The Austrian troops have virtually obtained possession of Bosnia and Herzegovina, although there are still considerable bodies of insurgent forces in the field. The Russian troops, upon the ground that outrages had been committed upon the Christian population, have re-occupied Tchukmudje and Tchataldja, in close proximity to Constantinople. The Porte has declined to conclude a Convention with Austria, upon the ground of excesses committed by the Austrian troops in the enforcement of the occupation, but at the same time professes a desire to maintain cordial relations with the Austro-Hungarian Empire. The Russian Commissioner in Roumelia, having declared that his Government will administer that province in accordance with the Treaty of San Stefano, and not with the Treaty of Berlin, the other Commissions have sought instructions from their Governments. In France there has been a period of comparative tranquillity, but M. Gambetta has made several addresses in the Eastern Departments proclaiming the permanence of the Republic. The Italian Government has raised objections to the British and French administration of the Egyptian finances, but explanations have been given that the arrangements made have merely a domestic character. The resignations of the Hungarian Ministry have been accepted by the Emperor. A popular vote in Geneva has rejected several constitutional changes proposed by the Radical party. From the Cape Colony we learn that military affairs are proceeding satisfactorily, and that the native insurrection is generally suppressed, but in the Transvaal fighting was still going on. The Cape Parliament has been dissolved. It is reported from New Zealand that five Wesleyan Missionaries have been murdered and eaten by the cannibal natives.

A Grand Masonic Fête will take place on Thursday, the 24th October 1878, at Paris, in the Great Hall of the Trocadero, under the presidency of Mons. Cremieux, Senator, and formerly Minister, at which some of the principal people in the capital will be present. This Fête is offered to all Foreign Freemasons by the members of the Supreme Council of the A. and A. Scottish Rite of Freemasonry for France and her Dependencies. Tickets of admission may be obtained gratis, on proof of Masonic title, at the Secretariat of the Scottish Rite, No. 46 Rue de la Victoire, Paris.

COMMITTEE MEETING OF THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

The monthly meeting of the General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys was held last Saturday, at Freemasons' Hall, when there were present Bros. J. G. Chancellor (in the chair), George J. Row, Donald M. Dewar, S. Rawson, A. H. Tattershall, H. Browse, James Winter, H. Massey, Richard Morris, Hyde Pullen, R. B. Webster, S. Rosenthal, G. J. Palmer, W. F. C. Moutrie, Alexander Wallace, and W. Paas. A son (ten years old) of the late Bro Charles Jardine, who was lost in the Princess Alice, having presented himself to the Committee and passed the required examination, Bro. Binckes (Secretary) said that a motion would be made at the Quarterly Court of the Institution on Monday, the 14th inst., to suspend the Laws regulating the admission of candidates, so as to admit this boy without election. The Girls' School would do the same thing with regard to one of Bro. Jardine's daughters. Bro. Jardine had been a Life Governor and a Steward of each of the Masonic Institutions. It was resolved to recommend the Quarterly Court to elect thirteen instead of eleven boys out of a list of sixty-five candidates. Bro. R. B. Webster gave the notice for the suspension of the laws of the Institution to meet the case of Bro. Jardine's boy, and Col. Creaton's notice of motion for the appointment of a sub-committee of five to revise the laws of the Institution was also given. Bro Binckes said the other business of the Quarterly Court would be to elect a trustee of the general fund in place of Bro. John Symonds, who had resigned. Two candidates were placed on the list for the April election.

COMMITTEE MEETING OF THE BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The Committee of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution met on Wednesday afternoon, at Freemasons' Hall. The brethren present were Lieut.-Col. Creaton (in the chair), Griffiths Smith, J. M. Case, S. Rawson, J. A. Farnfield, L. Stean, C. A. Cottebrune, Henry Smith, J. G. Stevens, C. J. Perceval, R. H. Giraud, R. W. Stewart, H. J. Strong, and James Terry (Secretary). The Secretary reported the deaths of four of the annuitants; also that the sum of £70 voted by G.L. for coals for the inmates of the Institution at Croydon during the winter had been received. The finance report for the quarter last past showed a balance of £188 14s 2d to the credit of the general fund; £1,110 14s 10d to the female fund; and £44 19s 3d to the sustentation fund; or a total balance in favour of the Institution of £1,344 8s 3d. The report of Bro. Robert Griggs, the architect of the Gardener's Cottage recently built at the Institution, stated that the building was nearly completed. A letter was read from a female annuitant at Plymouth, thanking the Committee for her annuity, but stating that a relative of hers having died, she had come into some property, and she did not feel justified in continuing to receive the annuity from the Institution. Bro. Terry was directed to write to her, congratulating her on her good fortune, and thanking her for giving up her annuity. Some petitions having been passed, the Committee accepted a tender to build a greenhouse at the Institution for £140. On the motion of Bro. Raynham W. Stewart seconded by Bro. J. A. Farnfield, the salary of Miss Norris, the matron at the Institution, was increased from £30 to £50 a year after which the Committee adjourned.

THE regular Summer Communication of this District Grand Lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Yokohama, on 24th June. Present—Bros. Charles H. Dallas D.G.M., William Bourne P.D.D.G.M. as D.D.G.M., Drummond Hay D.G.R. as D.S.G.W., A. Langfeldt P.D.B. of G.P. as D.G.W., E. J. Geoghegan D.G. Treas., Wm. H. Stone D.G. Sec., E. B. Jones D.G.D. of C., W. E. Clarke D.G.S.B., W. A. Crane P.D.G.W. D.G. Org., J. J. Esslie Acting D.G. Org., H. Moss as D.G. Purs., M. Kirkwood, C. D. Moss and T. R. H. McClatchie D.G. Stewards, and several members and visitors.

The members and visitors having taken their seats, the District Grand Officers entered in procession, and the D.G. Lodge was opened in due form.

The D.G. Sec. proposed that as the minutes of the last regular Winter Communication had been printed, and were in the hands of the members, they be taken as read. This was seconded and carried unanimously.

Letters from several member regretting their absence were read, and the D.G. Sec. presented the abstract of returns received from the Lodges in the district for the four quarters ending 31st March 1878, and proceeded to read the report of the District Board of General Purposes as follows:—

Masonic Hall, Yokohama, 10th June 1878.

The President of the District Board of General Purposes has the honour to submit the following report to the District Grand Lodge:—

The Board has examined and audited the accounts of the District Grand Treasurer, which are attached to this report. It will be seen that the receipts of the D.G.L. have amounted to dols. 260·65, and the disbursements to dols. 131·96, showing an excess of income over current expenses of dols. 128·69. This sum has been applied to the discharge of outstanding liabilities, which amounted last year to dols. 173·78; the indebtedness to the subordinate Lodges, which was incurred to pay for the regalia, has been extinguished, and the only liability now remaining is the cash balance of dols. 45·09 due to the District Grand Treasurer. The fees of honour and the quarterly dues, which are payable next month, will discharge this advance and put a balance in the Treasurer's hands. In the accounts, dols. 62·00 of this surplus income has been written off as depreciation on the regalia, and dols. 66·69 has been added to the capital account, which now stands at dols. 554·91.

On comparing these accounts with those of last year, we find that, by greater economy in printing and advertising, a reduction of nearly dols. 60·00 has been affected in general expenditure; on the other hand the chief sources of income also show a reduction—the fees of honour of dols. 29·00 and the quarterly dues of dols. 23·00—while there is a slight increase in the initiation and joining fees.

No business of importance has come before the Board since the Winter Communication of the D.G.L.

The President of the Board will move that this report be received, adopted and entered on the minutes.

A. LANGFELDT,
President of District Board of General Purposes.

W. H. STONE,
D.G. Secretary.

On the motion of the President of the D.B. of G.P., seconded by the District Grand Secretary, the report was received, adopted, and ordered to be entered on the minutes.

The D.G. Master stated that he had to submit to the D.G.L. a resolution that did not appear on the agenda paper. Nearly all present would remember Bro. Frank Pittman, who four years ago, when this D.G.L. was first established, undertook and most zealously discharged the duties of D.G. Sec. His sudden death, while in the prime of life and in full health and strength, had been a shock to the many, who had lost in him not only a valued brother in the Craft, but also a personal friend. Bro. Pittman left a widow and several children to mourn his loss, and the D.G.M. felt sure that it would be a satisfaction to them to know that here in this distant land were friends who shared their sorrow and sympathised in their bereavement. The resolution he would move was as follows:—

"That the District Grand Lodge of Japan has learned with the deepest regret the sad tidings that our esteemed Brother Frank Pittman, our first District Grand Secretary, was among those who perished in the foundering of H.M.S. Eurydice, and desires to express to his sorrowing widow and children the heartfelt sympathies of the Freemasons of this District."

The resolution was seconded by the Acting D.D.G.M., and on being put to the D.G.L. was carried unanimously.

The D.G. Sec. read a circular letter addressed by the Grand Secretary to the D.G.L., enclosing the report from the G.L. of England, issued in consequence of the Grand Orient of France having suppressed from its constitution the clause affirming a belief in God. The D.G. Sec. then read this Report, and the District Grand Master delivered an address on the circumstances which had called it forth.*

Other matters of local interest having been disposed of, D.G. Lodge was closed in due form.

* This address we hope to reproduce in a future number.—ED. F.C.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Old wounds, Sores, and Ulcers.—Daily experience confirms the fact, which has triumphed over opposition for thirty years—viz., that no one who are known equal to Holloway's remedies, for curing all bad sores, wounds, diseases of the skin, erysipelas, abscesses, burns, scalds, and, in truth, all cases where the skin is broken. To cure these maladies quickly is of primary importance, as the consolatory confinement of sores weakens the general health. The ready means of cure are found in Holloway's Ointment and Pills, which heal the sores and expel their cause. In every worst case the Ointment has succeeded in effecting a perfect cure, where every other means has failed of giving any relief. Desperate cases best display its virtues.

In consequence of the lamented death of the R.W. the P.G.M. of the Province of Essex, the brethren appeared in full Craft mourning. After the confirmation of the minutes, a ballot was taken for the admission of three joining members. A brother, initiated at the last regular Lodge, was then passed to the degree of Fellow Craft, and the efficient manner in which the W.M. performed this, his first ceremony since his installation, elicited the warmest commendations from the brethren. The W.M. then, in feeling terms, alluded to the decease of the R.W. the P.G.M., and moved the following resolution:—"That the members of the Angel Lodge, No. 51, Colchester, have heard with deep regret of the death of the Right Worship ul the Provincial Grand Master of Essex, Bro. Robert John Bagshaw, and desire to take this, the first opportunity, to express to Mrs. Bagshaw their sincere condolence in her bereavement. They feel that the Craft in Essex have lost a P.G.M. who took the warmest interest in the welfare of the various Lodges; and, when his health permitted, his frequent visits were always a source of pleasure and profit." This resolution having been seconded by W. Bro. John Copping, the oldest P.M. present, was carried unanimously, and the Secretary was directed to forward a copy to Mrs. Bagshaw. A discussion took place as to the propriety of introducing a clause into the bye-laws, admitting "honorary members" at a reduced subscription, and W. Bro. A. R. Clench gave notice that at the next meeting he should move a resolution on the subject. At the close of the Lodge business the brethren adjourned to the festive board.

Royal Alfred Lodge of Instruction, No. 780.—Met at the Star and Garter, Kew Bridge, on Friday, 4th Oct. It has rarely fallen to the lot of brethren to be present at a meeting where the true tenets of Masonry were more spontaneously evinced. The Officers were Bros. Gunner W.M., Tucker S.W., Blasby J.W., Gumm S.D., Beckett J.D., May I.G.; and there were also present Bros. Goss, Roe (Preceptor), Kyezor, Talbot, Pearson, &c. Lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed; the ceremony of initiation was then rehearsed, Bro. Goss I.P.M. 780 volunteering as candidate. It was evident that Bro. Gunner was suffering from an affection of the throat (which we are sorry to learn is of a chronic character, owing to an accident or brother met with on the Isis some years since), whereupon Bro. May (W.M. 780) kindly occupied the chair for the remainder of the evening. Lodge was advanced to the 3rd degree, and resumed to the 1st, when the call to refreshment was given. Lodge was resumed to the 3rd degree, and duly closed down. Bro. Tucker was unanimously elected W.M. for 11th inst. He in replying for the compliment which had been paid him, expressed his gratification at his study of Masonic lore was appreciated by the brethren. He begged to state that the acme of his Masonic ambition was so to perfect himself as to give pleasure to the brethren upon such occasions as the present, when they might see fit to elect him to conduct our proceedings. He also gave notice of a motion with regard to the family of a late brother who was one of the victims by the recent catastrophe upon the river. Lodge was then closed, with due observance of ancient custom, and adjourned till 11th inst. at half-past seven.

Lord Warden Lodge, No. 1096.—A meeting was held on Friday, the 4th instant, at St. George's Hall, Deal. Present—Bros. E. Kirby W.M., J. Laggett S.W., H. R. Botting J.W., T. J. Ueber P.M. P.G.R. Sec., J. Carpenter S.D., W. Carterfield J.D., F. R. England Steward, S. Willey I.G., S. Holgate Tyler, Past Master Bro. T. Ayling P.G.D.C.; Bros. W. Dunn, H. Roberts, H. McDermott, H Robinson, G. Rivers. Visitors—Bro. T. Bent 784, Wellington Lodge. Lodge opened, and minutes were confirmed. Bro. Rivers, a candidate to be raised, was examined, and answered most satisfactorily; he was entrusted and retired. Lodge opened in the third degree, and Bro. Rivers was raised by the W.M. in a most impressive manner, he giving the ancient charge and lecture. The Officers performed their several duties in faultless style; in short, they are deserving of all praise for making themselves so thoroughly efficient. Lodge was closed in the third and second degrees. Two gentlemen were proposed for initiation at the next meeting. The Lodge was closed in due form, and adjourned till Friday, the 18th instant. The brethren afterwards spent a most pleasant hour together.

Lord Warden Lodge of Instruction, No. 1096.—The first annual supper took place on Monday last, when twenty-one of the brethren sat down. A much larger number was expected, but several at the last minute were detained. Bro. T. Ayling P.M. Preceptor presided, assisted by Bro. J. Laggett S.W. and Secretary. After the repast the Preceptor gave the Queen and the Craft. He need not remind his hearers of the great loyalty which they were at all times ready to show to Her Most Gracious Majesty. God Save the Queen was then sung by the company. The W.M. next gave H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. He need hardly remind them how fortunate we were in having such a noble Grand Master. After "God Bless the Prince of Wales," The Earl of Carnarvon, the Deputy G.M., and the rest of Grand Officers Past and Present were duly honoured. It was most gratifying to the G.M. and to the brethren generally to have two such noblemen to assist in ruling our Order. Bro. Botting now proposed the health of Lord Holmesdale P.G.M. of Kent. He was satisfied that every Mason in the Province was gratified with their P.G.M.'s genial manner, and the impartial way in which he ruled so large a Province. Bro. Kirby next gave the V.W. the Deputy P.G.M. Bro. Eastes and the rest of the Provincial Grand Officers Past and Present. He was satisfied Bro. Eastes was the right man in the right place. Lord Holmesdale was indeed fortunate in having such a hard-working and efficient brother to assist him in his arduous duties. All might rest assured that those brethren who aspired to Provincial honours could safely leave their claims in the hands of Bro. Eastes. Bro. T. Ayling could bear out all they had just heard, as he had had the good fortune to meet the Deputy P.G.M. on many occasions, and a more worthy brother it was impossible to know. Bro. Kirby, in a very forcible speech, proposed Prosperity to the Masonic Charities. He reminded them that there was a most distressing case, that of the girl Brazier. This would be her first and only chance. Saturday was close upon them, when all their energies would be required if they wished to succeed. The late Bro. Brazier was a most energetic and hard-working Mason, particularly in the cause of the Charities, when he was suddenly struck down. Bro. Ayling most ably responded. He set forth the great work the Charitable Institutions were doing, and how much they needed all the support that could be given them. He also referred to the struggle that was so close at hand; he believed that about 3,000 votes would be required to ensure success. Bro. King next gave Prosperity to the Lord Warden Lodge of Instruction. He need not remind them how essential it was to have a good Lodge of Instruction; he could bear testimony to the work they had already done. Bro. Laggett ably responded; they had upwards of thirty members; he had been well supported in every way. Bro. Botting next gave the Visitors; it was most pleasing to the members of the Lord Warden Lodge to meet visiting brethren; they were always ready to give them a cordial reception. Bro. Terry W.M. 1206, Cinque Ports Lodge, expressed how pleased the Visitors were with the heartiness that had been shewn them. The proceeds of the charity box amounted to £1 3s 6d, and it was decided to send £1 1s to the Institution for Girls, so as to obtain two votes for use on Saturday next. Bros. Ayling, Botting, Bridges, Haslip, Carpenter and Pritchard kindly entertained the brethren. Altogether a very pleasant and enjoyable evening was spent.

Tredegar Lodge, No. 1625.—A meeting, which ought to have been the installation one, of this flourishing Lodge was held at the Royal Hotel, Mile End-road, on Monday evening. The hitch has arisen in this way: At the previous meeting of the Lodge in September, Bro. G. Hollingdon S.W. was unanimously elected W.M. for the ensuing year. Since then it has been ascertained that according to the Constitutions he was ineligible, he being W.M. of another Lodge. In these facts becoming known, he made application to Grand Lodge for a dispensation, but it was not granted. The Lodge, therefore, at its next meeting will proceed to the election of a W.M. for the ensuing year. The Lodge, on this occasion, was opened by Bro. Geo. Laggett W.M., all the Officers being present, and the following visitors:—T. S. Ward 1, J. F. Port, C. Blanc 174, A. Farmer 1421, C. J. Harrison 206, C. F. Butler 811, and J. Gunn 1365. The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, with the exception of that part relating to the election of the W.M.,

Secretary, Bro. G. W. Verry, read the Auditors' Report, by which it appeared there was a balance of £28 odd in the hands of the Treasurer. This admirable state of the finances of the Lodge was favourably commented on by the W.M. and several of the brethren present. The initiation of Mr. Joshua Randell was then proceeded with (he having previously been balloted for), the beautiful ceremony being most impressively performed by the W.M., who also explained the working tools. After fraternal greetings from the Visitors, and some routine business, the Lodge was closed, the brethren adjourning to supper.

Royal Kensington Lodge, No. 1627.—A meeting was held on Friday, 4th October, at Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street. Present—Bros. Charles E. Soppet W.M., W. E. Gordon Leith S.W., B. F. Gordon Leith as W.M., and Bro. Hyde Pullen as Treasurer for ensuing year. A P.M.'s jewel was voted to Bro. Charles E. Soppet. There were four propositions for election and initiation at next meeting, on 1st November, when the new W.M. will be installed.

Beaconsfield Lodge, No. 1662.—The second Installation meeting of this Lodge was held at "The Chequers," Marsh-street, Walthamstow, on Saturday, the 5th inst. Oldroyd I.G., also Bros. J. M. Hunt, A. Delvalle, Carter, Clarke, Field, Upward Org., W. G. Hallows, F. Hallows Sec., Barnard, Harris, Rubery, Stockwell, Moffatt, Mumford, and Marsh for Gilchrist (Tyler). The minutes of last meeting, and emergency, were read; also audit report, unanimously accepted. The W.M. Bro. Christian then in his usual impressive manner initiated Mr. John Henry Wildash into the Order. Bro. Jas. Pinder then occupied the chair, and Bro. Wm. Groome the W.M. elect was presented and installed into the chair of K.S., according to ancient rite; he invested his Officers as follow:—Bros. T. Franklin S.W., F. Hallows J.W., W. T. Christian Treas., J. Pinder Sec., T. Upward S.D., J. H. Cambridge J.D., J. M. Hunt I.G., C. B. Carter D.C., G. Clark W.S. The three addresses were then delivered by Bro. Pinder. The W.M., in the name of the Lodge, presented to Bro. W. T. Christian I.P.M. a handsome testimonial, engrossed on vellum, in recognition of his most valuable services as a founder and first W.M. of this Lodge. A letter was read from Bro. J. Hervey G. Sec., expressing his regret that ill-health would prevent his attendance. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to a repast provided by the host, Bro. W. G. Hallows, in his usual admirable manner. The usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were given. To that of the Grand Officers, Bros. Joshua Nunn P.G.S.B., H. G. Buss Asst. Grand Sec., and W. T. Howe G. Purs., replied:—the former congratulating the Lodge on its great success, both Masonically and financially, and expressing his extreme pleasure that he, as one of the founders, had to a certain extent contributed to that success. To the toast of the Visitors (of whom there were upwards of 25 present), Bros. T. Cunningham P.M. 754 (High Cross, Tottenham), J. S. Badkin P.M. 1365 (Clapton), responded. Moore P.M., W. B. Brand 30, Westfield 1382.

The Crusaders Lodge, No. 1677.—The Anniversary Fes- of this Lodge was held on Wednesday, at the Old Jerusalem Tavern, St. John's-square, Clerkenwell. The Lodge was opened by the W.M. Bro. Jarvis Maples, who was well supported by the Officers and members of his Lodge, while amongst the Visitors were the following brethren:—Bros. Dr. Barringer P.P.G.S.W. Herts, S. E. Hayes 795, T. H. Simmonds J.W. 1107, P. Woodman 228, R. H. Marsh P.M. 1196, A. H. Hickman J.D. 228, John Tovell 1489, W. Stead W.M. 813, G. H. Patmore Senior Deacon 228, J. G. Fisher Junior Warden 1624, E. Bowyer Past Master 1580 P.G.D. Herts, G. W. Gilham Senior Deacon 1632, J. E. Carpenter P.M. 1196, Mullord S.D. 1288, T. B. Humphrey 1509, Sigismund Lehmeyer Urban, C. J. Pingston 205, A. W. Fenner S.D. 1227, W. W. Morgan 211. The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. The report of the auditors was received. It showed that the progress made during the year had been most encouraging, and the members could look forward to a very early day when all liabilities incurred in the formation of the Lodge, for furniture, &c., would be discharged. A Benevolent Fund had already been started, and has to its credit a balance of over £12. The report was unanimously adopted. Bro. W. J. Hunter W.M. elect was then introduced, and duly took his obligation. The installation was performed most admirably by the outgoing Master—Bro. Jarvis Maples. After the readmission of the brethren, the appointment of Officers took place. Bros. Simmonds S.W., T. Goode J.W., J. Maples P.M. Treas., J. G. Defries Sec., F. Rothschild S.D., Millward J.D., G. Calderwood I.G., S. Rushton Org., J. S. Knight W.S., J. Pigott P.M. D.C., J. Verry Tyler. Previous to the installation ceremony the ballot box was brought into request; there were three candidates for joining: Bros. Wm. Stedman Gedge, United Strength Lodge 228, Wm. Browne Kidder, P.M. Fortitude and Old Cumberland Lodge 12, Thomas John Hyland, Jordan Lodge 201. The result in each case was satisfactory, and Bros. Gedge and Hyland took their seats as members of the Lodge—the third on the list, Bro. Kidder, not being able to attend. The agenda paper contained the names of three gentlemen as candidates for initiation, and in each case the ballot was favourable. All were present—Messrs. William Farr, John Carnaby and William Mackie; each was separately introduced, and received the benefits of Masonic Light, the new W.M. exhibiting in a most satisfactory way his capabilities for the exalted position in which the members of the Lodge had placed him. The Secretary was then called on to perform his routine duties, which, on this occasion, commenced with the reading of the circular from Grand Lodge in reference to the action of the Grand Orient of France with regard to the elimination from the ritual of a belief in the G.A.O.T.U. Communications having been read, the Lodge was closed, and shortly afterwards the banquet was served. We may add here, that the efforts of Bro. Gay seemed to be greatly appreciated by the guests. The W.M. then introduced the toast of Her Most Gracious Majesty, which was honoured by the brethren, who afterwards joined in the National Anthem. The second toast, the W.M. remarked, might be dismissed as briefly as the former one. The Prince of Wales was always studious for the interests of Freemasonry, and it was with great pleasure he offered the toast for their acceptance. The third toast—The Most Worshipful Pro Grand Master the Earl of Carnarvon, the Right Worshipful the Deputy Grand Master Lord Skelmersdale, and the rest of the Grand Officers Past and Present—was always cordially received, and he (the W.M.) believed it was deservedly so. Without more preface he would offer it for their acceptance. Bro. Millward, who throughout the evening was in capital voice, here sang "Meet me once again." The health of the Initiates was now given by the W.M. At the consecration of their Lodge, Bros. Terry, Marsh, and other distinguished Masons, had most strenuously urged upon them the need of exercising caution in their selection of candidates. This, he felt, they had always done. The gentlemen who had joined their ranks that night were well recommended, and would (the W.M. was assured) become a credit to the Order; he hoped they might each eventually occupy the chair of the Lodge. Bro. Hickman here favoured the company with one of his popular ditties, and the initiates briefly acknowledged the compliment that had been paid them. After a song—"The Arab Steed"—by Bro. Mullord, the I.P.M. rose. Most of the brethren present were young members of the Craft, but he thought all would know what duty he had to perform: it was to ask them to drink the health of their Worshipful Master. Bro. Marsh, in his well known excellent style, here gave an amusing reading—a parody on the "Burial of Sir John Moore." Bro. Hunter then rose. He thanked the brethren for the way in which the toast had been received. No effort should be wanting on his part, and if, twelve months hence, he should still be thought deserving of their good opinion, he should feel amply repaid. The next toast was the health of the I.P.M. Bro. Hunter spoke of the qualities displayed by Bro. Maples during the year he had so successfully brought to a close. He had infinite pleasure in presenting him, on behalf of the Lodge, with the jewel the members had voted him at their last meeting. Bro. Maples remarked that too much credit had been laid at his door; it was true he had left no stone unturned. It was a precept he had always recognised, that what was worth doing at all, was worth doing well. He was much gratified at the reception they had given him, and he thanked them for the elegant jewel they had presented him with. To the toast of the Visitors, Bros. Dr. Barringer, G. H. Marsh and Carpenter replied. The remaining toasts were then duly honoured, and the summons given for the Tyler brought a successful evening's proceedings to a close. The guests were entertained during the evening with several capital selections, Bros. Rushton, Lehmeyer, and several others ably distinguishing themselves. Bro. Millward's song, "Come into the garden, Maud," was exquisitely rendered.

All Saints' Lodge, No. 1716.—The installation meeting of this Lodge (being the first since its consecration last year) was held at the Town Hall, Poplar, on Friday evening, 4th October. After the routine business had been transacted, the Lodge was opened in the second degree, and Bro. John Dennis S.W. was presented by Bro. W. J. Fenner Treasurer to the W.M., Bro. W. H. Farnfield, for installation. The ceremony was most ably worked by the W.M., and in a faultless manner, until the time for the delivery of the addresses, when Bro. Hubbuck P.G.S. and P.M. 58 kindly gave that to the W.M., and Bro. Jas. Terry, P.G.J.W. Herts, those to the Wardens and Brethren. The newly-installed W.M. then appointed his Officers as follow:—Bros. J. K. Coleman S.W., Leonard Potts J.W., J. S. Turner S.D., W. C. Young J.D., T. Bates I.G., W. J. Fenner P.M. Treasurer, E. L. Bracebridge P.M. Secretary, J. House D.C., J. Grout Organist, and Harrison Tyler. During the proceedings the Lodge room was well filled with brethren, many P.M.'s honouring the gathering with their presence. Among them we noticed Bros. G. Payne P.G.S., C. J. Salmon P.M. 173, H. J. Lewis P.M. 907, and J. A. Farnfield P.M. 256. The Lodge having been closed in due form, the brethren adjourned to another part of the hall, where a banquet was tastefully laid out, the viands being supplied by Bro. Grist, of Hackney, the enjoyment of all being greatly enhanced by the singing of Bros. Carter, Symons, and Theodore Distin, under the direction of Bro. J. Grout Org. 1716. After the Loyal and usual Masonic toasts had been severally proposed and responded to, the I.P.M., in proposing the toast of the evening, said he was pleased to see Bro. Dennis in the position of W.M. of that Lodge. They all knew what sort of a worker Bro. Dennis was in the Craft, and therefore knew how the work would be sure to be done during his year of office, which he (the speaker) hoped would be a prosperous one, and that when Bro. Dennis became I.P.M. he would be able to look back on as successful a term of office as that concluded by himself. The toast was received with enthusiasm. Bro. Dennis said he was much obliged to the brethren for the manner in which they had received the toast. He was proud to occupy the position he held in the Lodge, and he would endeavour, by gentlemanly bearing and courtesy, not unmixed with firmness, to merit the esteem of the brethren; he hoped, with Bro. Farnfield, that his year of office would be a successful one. The toast of the Visitors followed, and was responded to by the several brethren, each of whom expressed the pleasure he had derived in witnessing the working of the Lodge, and in the reception they had met with, both in the Lodge and at the banquet table. The W.M. rose and said it afforded him great pleasure to propose the next toast, viz., the health of Bro. W. H. Farnfield—the founder and first W.M. of the Lodge—on his becoming I.P.M. They had been associated together in Masonry a great many years, and he was glad to have the opportunity on such an occasion to congratulate him on the success that had been attained in raising the Lodge to its prosperous condition at the end of this, its first year. By the unanimous vote of the brethren it had been resolved to present Bro. Farnfield with a P.M.'s jewel, with a suitable inscription. It was then his duty to carry out the wishes of the brethren and make the presentation—(Here, amidst loud applause, he affixed a magnificent jewel on the breast of Bro. Farnfield). He hoped Bro. Farnfield would receive the jewel as a mark of the esteem in which he was held by the brethren, and as an acknowledgment of the services he had rendered to the Lodge. That, however, was not all, for the brethren, desirous of acknowledging more fully the regard they have for him, had raised a fund by individual subscriptions for the purpose of presenting him with a further mark of their esteem. A gold Albert, with locket attached thereto, had been purchased, and he had the great pleasure of presenting Bro. Farnfield with this also. He hoped that whilst the jewel would remind him in Lodge of the grateful feelings of the brethren, by wearing the chain he would be reminded day by day of the feelings which had prompted the second presentation. He had much pleasure in again proposing the health of Bro. W. H. Farnfield I.P.M., the toast was drunk with Masonic honours. Bro. Farnfield, who appeared much moved, said he did not know how to sufficiently express his thanks for the kindness he had received at their hands. He was very much surprised to have been made the recipient of such valuable tokens of their regard. Although he knew he was to be presented with a jewel, it having been inscribed on the minutes of the Lodge, it was a matter of surprise to find it was so magnificent and valuable a one. With regard to the Albert and locket, that was indeed a thorough surprise to him, for he had not the least intimation that such a presentation was to have been made until it was done. As well as he could, he desired to thank the brethren most heartily for their many expressions of esteem, and he hoped he should be able to work long with them for the good of Freemasonry in general and the All Saints Lodge in particular. The toast of the Officers followed, and it having been well received and responded to, a very pleasant evening was brought to a close with the Tyler's toast.

St. Michael's Lodge, No. 211.—The first meeting of the season was held on Tuesday, at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street. Present—Bros. Alfred Green W.M., Alfred Withers S.W., William Radcliffe J.W., C. Greenwood P.G. Sec. Surrey Treasurer, W. W. Morgan Acting Sec., Dr. Waters S.D., Usher Bach J.D., W. E. Young I.G., Longstaff Tyler. Past Masters Bros. Parsons, Lavers, T. H. Lavers, Wilden, &c. After the Lodge had been opened and the minutes read and confirmed, the ballot was taken for Mr. Henry Martin; it resulted in favour of that gentleman, and he was introduced and the ceremony carefully performed by the W.M. A letter was read from Bro. D. Dryedale, P.M and Secretary, stating his wish to resign his membership of the Lodge. This resignation was accepted with great regret by the members, and on the motion of Bro. T. H. Lavers P.M., duly seconded, it was unanimously agreed that honorary membership should be conferred on our esteemed brother, as a slight recognition of his long services as Secretary of the Lodge. After routine business, Lodge was closed. A pleasant hour was afterwards spent by the brethren in social converse.

York Lodge, No. 236.—The regular meeting of this Lodge was held on Monday evening, the 7th inst. Bro. the Rev. William Valentine W.M. presiding, supported by his Wardens and Officers, amongst the members present being Bros. Thos. Cooper P.M., J. Todd P.M., G. Balmford P.M., Major Barstow P.M., T. B. Whytehead W.M. 1611, &c. The business consisted of an initiation, and after the close of the Lodge the brethren met at refreshment and spent a social evening.

St. Patrick's Lodge 295 (I.C).—This Military Lodge of the 4th Royal Irish Dragoon Guards, at present stationed at York, celebrated its annual banquet at the Masonic Hall, York. The W.M. Major Shaw-Hellier presided, supported by Bros. Capt. Hanly S.W., Capt. Murphy J.W., Capt. Tynte S.D., and the rest of the Officers and brethren. The S.W. was nominated for the office of W.M. next year. Amongst the invited guests present were Bros. T. Cooper P.M. 236 and P.M. 1611, J. Todd P.M. and Treas. 236, T. B. Whytehead W.M. 1611, G. Balmford P.M. 236, W. D. Lemmon P.M. 570, 5th Dragoon Guards Lodge, together with most of the Officers of the York Lodge 236 and Ebor cum Lodge 1611. In proposing the health of the W.M., the S.W. referred to the great obligation the brethren were under to Major Shaw-Hellier, to whose exertions it was mainly owing that they had regained possession of their ancient warrant, for so many years dormant, as well as many valuable portions of the old Lodge furniture.

Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, No. 860.—Held its weekly meeting on Tuesday evening last, at Bro. Smyth's, Sisters' Tavern, Powell-road, Dalston. Bros. Braxted W.M., Weige S.W., Wardell J.W., J. Lorkin S.D., Dignam J.D., Christian I.G. Bros. McClean, C. Lorkin, Allen, McMillan, Forss, &c. Lodge was opened and the minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. Bro. McMillan answered the necessary questions; Lodge was opened in the second degree, and the ceremony of passing rehearsed. Bro. C. Lorkin worked the first section of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. The Lodge was opened in the third degree; Bro. C. Lorkin worked the first section of that lecture assisted by the brethren. The Lodge was called from labour to refreshment, and afterwards resumed. Bro. C. Lorkin worked the third section of the first lecture. Bro. Weige was elected W.M. for next week.

Capper Lodge, No. 1096.—The electing meeting was held on the 9th instant, at the Marine Hotel, Tidal Basin, Victoria Docks, E Lodge was opened at six p.m. Bros. J. White W.M., John Dorton I.P.M., F. Brien S.W., P. McCarthy J.W., Holliday P.M., Knox P.M., Brayshaw P.M. Treasurer, Taplay S.D., Job J.D., W. Dorton I.G., Nevins W.S., J. Mitchell Secretary, and numerous brethren. The candidates for passing and raising not being present, a ballot was taken for the W.M. for ensuing year, which proved unanimous in favour of Bro. F. Brien S.W., who returned thanks for the honour the Lodge had conferred upon him, and promised to do all he could to promote the welfare of the brethren during his year of office. Bro. Brayshaw was re-elected Treasurer, and he thanked the brethren. Bros. Thompson, Miles and Mason were elected Auditors, and the Tyler was also re-elected. A £10 10s jewel was voted to the W.M. The report of the Benevolent Fund was read and adopted; it showed a balance of £68, after a display of that chief characteristic of the Craft—Charity. Nothing further offering for the good of Freemasonry, Lodge was solemnly closed with prayer, and adjourned until the second Wednesday in November. The brethren then repaired to refreshment, after which the usual Loyal and Craft toasts were duly honoured. In response to Bro. Dorton, who proposed the health of the W.M., Bro. White briefly replied. He expressed the gratitude and pleasure he felt at the honour the Lodge had conferred upon him, and thanked the brethren for the support he had received during his year of office. The toast of the Visitors having been heartily received, Bro. P.M. White 907 thanked the brethren for the reception the visitors had received, congratulating the Lodge upon the happy and harmonious working he had witnessed that evening. Bro. J. Dorkin, in reply to the toast of the P.M.'s, expressed the pleasure he had derived in supporting the W.M., Bro. White, and paid a just tribute to the W.M. for the excellent manner in which he had conducted the Lodge. The toast of the W.M. elect having been received with great cordiality, he thanked the Lodge for electing him, and promised to employ his best efforts to promote the prosperity of the members. The W.M. next gave the toast of the Masonic Press; he was happy to say they were honoured by the attendance of two members, Bros. Jolly and Stephens, and he trusted they would give the Lodge the benefit of their good offices upon future occasions. Bro. Jolly, in reply, expressed the pleasure he always had in visiting the Capper Lodge. Bro. Stephens briefly thanked the W.M. for the hearty welcome he had received, and expressed the pleasure he felt in visiting the Capper Lodge, and witnessing the harmonious working. The brethren might feel proud of their W.M., who evidently possessed that qualification for the chair—viz., the ability to maintain a harmonious feeling; such unanimity as he had witnessed that night was seldom equalled. After a number of songs, capitally rendered by Bros. Skelton, Sherwin Organist, Stephens, and Hilliard, the brethren separated, having spent a most enjoyable and profitable evening. Visitors—Bros. E. Balls 77, G. H. Stephens 1623, T. A. White 907, C. Jolly 913, Smith 1100, &c.

St. John of Wapping Lodge of Instruction, No. 1306.—As we announced last week would be the case, this Lodge of Instruction, which is held at Bro. Mortlock's, Gun Hotel, Wapping, resumed its weekly meetings after the holidays on Monday evening. Bro. T. J. Barnes presided as W.M., Bros. Veal and Stephens being the Senior and Junior Wardens respectively, Bro. Mortlock Preceptor, and Bro. Brame Secretary. There were likewise present Bros. Wilson, Blaw, Ralph, Greeley, Wood, Colman, Thompson, Banks, Martin, Henly, and W. W. Morgan. The Lodge was opened, the minutes read and confirmed, and then the business, which was of a purely formal character, being at an end, the Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to a pleasant little supper, provided in his usual excellent and liberal style by host Bro. Mortlock. Bro. Barnes occupied the chair, and the brethren having done ample justice to the viands, the cloth was removed, and toasts, interspersed with some genial songs, became the order of the evening. The brethren dispersed at a seasonable hour, and we congratulate the Lodge on its having inaugurated a new season in so agreeable a manner.

F. RATH & Co.'s IMPROVED PATENT GAS BOX IRON.

PERFECTION IN IRONING FOR EVERY SPECIES OF FABRIC.

Great Saving in Expense and Labour.

The price being only 22/, it is the Cheapest Iron in the trade, and can be had at all Ironmongers in the United Kingdom.

F. RATH & CO.'S IMPROVED GAS BOX IRON is extremely simple in its construction, and cannot get out of order; the merit of the invention is, that the heat produced from the burning gas is thrown off to the steel plate which covers the bottom surface, none being allowed to pass off in waste.

Three times the amount of work ordinarily executed can be done by the use of these Irons, which have now been in use in extensive Manufactories long enough to thoroughly prove their merits and evidence their entire success. They are as suitable for Family Use as for the Work-room, the Manufactory, or the Laundry.

THE GRAND ORIENT OF FRANCE.

THE General Assembly of this Grand Orient for the year 1878 was held during the week ended the 14th September. Bro. De Saint Jean, President of the Council, occupied the chair on the opening day—Monday, the 9th September—with Bros. Bruand and Antide Martin acting as Senior and Junior Grand Wardens, Bro. J. Jean as Orator, Bro. Poulle as Secretary, Bro. Neumark as Expert, and Bros. Foussier and Coulon as Masters of Ceremonies. Nearly two hundred representatives of Lodges were present, and the Assembly at once proceeded, according to custom, to organise itself in nine bureaux. At the afternoon sitting the same day, Bro. de Saint Jean was chosen President during the whole session, and on Tuesday the Wardens and other Officers who would take part in the direction of business were appointed. This over, the Assembly at once proceeded to the discussion of the motion relative to the modification of Article 41 of the Constitutions, and in the result it was resolved that the article should stand as follows:—"The Grand Orient will not constitute Lodges in those foreign countries, where there exists already a Masonic Power which is regular and in fraternal relations with it. It will recognise no Lodge constituted in France or the French possessions by a foreign Masonic Power. Bro. E. Rousselle then asked a question relative to the project for revising the Ritual in accordance with the change made in the Constitutions of the Grand Orient last year. Thereupon Bro. Bussière proposed that the Council of the Order should terminate its labours before the end of the year. President de Saint Jean suggested that the assembly should proceed to the Order of the day pure and simple. Bro. Bussière then modified his resolution. A long wrangle ensued, various propositions being submitted, and in the end Bro. De Saint Jean's simple order of the day was lost, and another carried over its head. This led to a scene. Bro. President, having donned his insignia, declared with strong emotion his intention of resigning his position as president and member of the Council. Very many of those present begged him not to do so, but he persisted and retired. Bro. Rondeau, the Senior Grand Warden, then took on himself the Presidency of the meeting, and on the proposition of Bro. Caubet it was resolved to send a deputation to Bro. De Saint Jean inviting him to resume his functions, after which the sitting closed. On Wednesday Bro. Rondeau announced amid the warmest manifestations of enthusiasm that Bro. De Saint Jean had consented to retire his resignation, shortly after which that distinguished brother was introduced and resumed his presidency. Medals of Honour were then awarded to Lodge Les Disciples d'Hiram, Orient de la Pointe à Pitre, and six brethren, while three received the distinction of Honourable Mention. On Thursday the Assembly proceeded to elect twelve members in lieu of as many retiring by rotation from the Council, the following being the successful candidates, namely, Bros. Poulle, Bruand, De Hérédia. Lagache, Wyrouboff, Doué, Roche, André-Rousselle, Thulié, Du Hamel, Brémond, and Andrieux. On Friday a proposition to reduce the price of Warrants from 150 francs to 50 francs was withdrawn, and at the meeting of the Council, the same Officers as last year were elected. Bro. J. Jean, as Orator, delivered the customary address, and on Saturday the banquet was held, Bro. De Saint Jean presiding, the number of guests being 350, among whom were many distinguished foreign brethren who had the day previous been introduced, amid hearty welcome, into the Grand Orient.

It remains to be seen whether the Grand Orient will take any steps to establish Lodges in foreign countries where there is a regular Masonic Power which is not in friendly relations with it. This, indeed, is the question which immediately concerns us in England, and we trust sincerely that Grand Orient will not take such steps, as otherwise further difficulties may arise.

GIRLS' SCHOOL ELECTION.

THE Quarterly General Court of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls was held at Freemasons' Hall, at noon on Saturday last, and when the ordinary business was disposed of the Court adjourned, pending the election of four girls from an approved list of twenty-nine candidates, of whom five only had presented themselves for admission on any previous occasion. In the case of one of these (No. 2), it was her last chance, and the same must be said of one of the twenty-four new candidates, namely, No. 16. However, happily for these, it will be found that they have obtained places among the successful, so that in this one particular respect not one of the candidates can be said to have been absolutely disappointed, though, of course, hopes of their ultimate success will still prevail among the friends and supporters of the unsuccessful. We noted a fortnight since that eight of the twenty-nine candidates hailed from London. Of these only one has gained a place—No. 3 on the list—with 2724 marks. Of the twenty-one Provincial candidates three got in, obtaining the first, second, and fourth places respectively. No. 1, from Kent, polled 4741 votes, No. 2, hailing from Bristol, obtained 2817 votes, and No. 4, from Hants and the Isle of Wight, scored 1,104. Two other candidates, No. 24 (Cheshire), and No. 22 (London), stood next in order, with 1,086 votes and 1,018 respectively, and then the numbers grew less and less, No. 11 having no votes whatever recorded for her. It remains to be added that the attempt to introduce a daughter of the late Bro. Chas. Jardine, who was drowned in the Princess Alice, was a failure, Bro. McIntyre, Q.C., Grand Registrar, having ruled that it was not competent for the Quarterly Court to suspend the Rules of the Institution as proposed. Subjoined is a complete list of the Candidates, with the votes appended:—

BOYS' SCHOOL ELECTION.

THE half-yearly election to fill the vacancies that have occurred in this Institution since April last, took place at the Quarterly General Court, held at Freemasons' Hall, on Monday. The number to be elected was originally eleven, but had since been increased to thirteen. A. W. Gardiner who, as will be seen, heads the list with 2,373 votes, of which 489 were carried forward from April last, is one of two candidates hailing from Durham, and had he not succeeded on this occasion would have been ineligible for admission at the next ballot. Miles Coverdale, who is said to be descended from the distinguished Biblical scholar of the same name, stands second with 2,119 votes, 687 of which were cast for him in April. Coverdale is one of the two Essex candidates. A. E. Reece, of London, who comes third, polled 1,813 votes, of which 602 stood to his credit from April. W. E. Furze, one of the three Devon candidates, had already made six previous attempts to get in. He had 634 votes to his credit when the poll opened, and this was fortunately increased to 1,777 votes—we say fortunately, as this was his last chance. Fifth in order is A. T. White from West Yorkshire, with 1,745 votes, all polled on this occasion. Of the seven East Lancashire candidates, W. R. Roberts stood sixth with 1,667, and then came a second West Yorkshire candidate with 1,652 votes. No. 8, A. H. Day, who had tried at six previous elections and had this one remaining chance left him, hails from Essex, and increased his score from 504 to 1,610 votes. E. A. Browning, of Monmouthshire, and a candidate last April, raised his total to 1,533 votes. T. E. Evans, of Warwickshire, a candidate for the first time, was tenth with 1,531 votes. H. A. Simmonds, of London, who scored 783 votes last April, increased his total to 1,476, and secured the eleventh place, while A. L. E. Rossiter, of Cheshire, and A. C. Balcombe, of the Western Division of South Wales, were twelfth and thirteenth, with 1,375 and 1,370 votes respectively. Rossiter had to his credit 849 votes from April; in the case of Balcombe this was his first, and, had he failed, would likewise have been his last attempt. F. C. Watkins (last chance), a Londoner, heads the list of the unsuccessful with 1272, followed by James Ward from N. Wales and Salop, fifteenth in order, with 1,221 votes, A. J. Chandler (Norfolk), sixteenth, with 1,153 votes; C. W. Green of London (last chance), seventeenth, with 1,064 votes, and R. H. Nicholls (London and Essex), eighteenth, with 1,013 votes. After this the votes go on diminishing more and more rapidly, as we get lower on the list, till in due time we reach No. 41, with under a hundred votes, then No. 54, with under ten votes, and No. 65, with no votes whatever. Of these, No. 46 with 23 votes, No. 55 with 7 votes, and No. 38 with 3 votes, will have their names removed from the list, as it was their last chance. No. 45 had been withdrawn before the ballot was opened, and No. 43, though a candidate for the first time, turned out to be disqualified by age. Of the nine candidates who had this chance only of success, four are among the successful, and five among the unsuccessful, so there are already forty-seven candidates, with more or fewer votes to their credit respectively, who are eligible for election in April next. Of the fourteen London candidates, two only were successful; of the fifty-two Provincial, eleven—a result which proves decidedly the superior organisation of the latter. As regards the proposition to admit a son of the late Bro. Charles Jardine without the formality of a ballot, it will be seen elsewhere that the Mansion House Relief Fund intend purchasing an admission for him, as well as one for a sister of his into the Girls' School. We subjoin the full result of the poll:—

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF NORTHUMBERLAND.

THE annual meeting of the Prov. Grand Lodge of Northumberland was held on the 8th inst. at Alnwick. The Lodge met in the Corn Exchange, under the banner of the Alnwick Lodge 1167, there being present the greatest number of brethren that have ever assembled at any meeting held in the Province. To convey the brethren, a special train was run from Newcastle, and the total number present was about 700. The proceedings throughout were most successful, and the event for many years to come will be looked back upon by those present with feelings of unalloyed pleasure. The R.W. Prov. G.M. the Earl Percy, M.P., occupied the chair of K.S., and there were present the following officers:—Bros. L. M. Cockcroft D.P.G.M., E. H. Holmes P.G.S.W., W. J. Ward P.G.J.W., Rev. W. L. J. Cooley, P.G. Chap., Thos. Anderson P.G. Treas., B. J. Thompson P.G. Sec., N. Mein P.G.S.D., C. Hopper P.G.J.D., J. C. Mowbray P.G.S. of W., E. D. Davis P.G.D. of C., Richard Evson P.G. Assist. D. of C., A. Guthrie P.G.S.B., C. H. Shepherd P.G. Organist, Thos. Halliday P.G.P., Charles Anderson P.G. Assist. P., Joshua Curry P.G. Tyler. The R.W.P.G.M. was supported on the dais by a large number of Past Provincial Grand Officers. The Lodge was opened in due form, and after transacting other business, the R.W.P.G.M. invested his Officers for the year as follow:—Bros. Adam Robertson 1167 P.G.S.W., John Ridsdale 406 P.G.J.W., Robinson 409 P.G. Chap., Thomas Anderson W.M. 1712 P.G. Treas., George Cockburn P.M. 24 P.G. Reg., B. J. Thompson P.G. Sec., John Bolam W.M. 24 P.G.S.D., John Harcuss W.M. 431 P.G.J.D., George Forbes 393 P.G.S. of W., E. D. Davis P.G.D. of C., George Dean W.M. 541 P.G. Assist D. of C., J. G. Youll W.M. 685 P.G.S.B., B. P. Ord W.M. 1427 P.G. Organist, R. J. Armstrong W.M. 406 P.G. Purs., John Taylor W.M. 1676 P.G. Assist. Purs., Joshua Curry Tyler. After the closing of the Lodge at the Corn Exchange, the brethren wended their way to the magnificent seat of the Percy family—Alnwick Castle. The normal quietude of the old town for the while was disturbed, and the sight of so many strangers appeared to take the inhabitants by surprise. Arrived at the courtyard, where a glimpse was obtained of the splendid proportions of the historic keep, the Visitors were at once struck by the perfection of the arrangements which had been made for their reception by the noble Earl, whose munificent hospitality will be regarded in the future as one of the greatest events connected with Freemasonry in this part of the country. There was no confusion in the seating of such a large company, for each of the Lodges was guided by numbers and letters directing them to the tables allotted to them. The banquet was held in the Guest Hall of Alnwick Castle, which for the occasion had to be enlarged, by the erection of a handsome marquee. The hall, which is one of the largest of the kind in the kingdom, had been splendidly fitted up for the banquet. The Chairman, the Right Hon. the Earl Percy, M.P., R.W. Prov. G.M., and the leading Officers of the various Lodges, sat at a raised table facing the guests. Three very large tables ran the length of the room, whilst four were erected in the marquee, which was arranged in such a manner that all had an excellent view of the proceedings, and were well able to hear the various speeches. Covers were laid for over seven hundred. The admirable manner in which the viands were brought to the tables reflected the highest credit on Mr. Thorpe, the chef de cuisine of Alnwick Castle, and his able staff of assistants. The arrangements in the hall were under the personal supervision of Mr. Pantling, the house steward, and gave the greatest satisfaction to all concerned. The floral decorations and the dessert were arranged by Mr. Ingram of Alnwick Castle Gardens. After the arrival of the R.W. Prov. Grand Master, who was accompanied in procession by the Provincial Grand Officers, grace was sung by the boys of the Duke's Schools, forming the choir of St. Paul's Charity, Alnwick, under the conductorship of Mr. C. G. Moore, the Organist of the Church, and this was repeated after dinner. Before dinner the Duchess of Northumberland appeared in the gallery of the Guest Hall, which was elaborately decorated with shrubs and plants. The presence of the Duchess was observed by Bro. E. D. Davis, the able Director of Ceremonies, and in response to his call, rounds of enthusiastic cheering, which the Duchess gracefully acknowledged, were given in her honour. The banquet was one of a most sumptuous description, and the system observed by the staff of waiters connected with the Castle, augmented by a staff of waiters from London, was admirable. After dinner, Earl Percy occupied the chair, and proposed Her Majesty the Queen, which was loyally responded to. He next proposed His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the M.W.G.M. of England, followed by the M.W. Prov. G.M. the Earl of Carnarvon, the R.W.D.G.M. Lord Skelmersdale, and the Officers of the Grand Lodge. The V.W.D.P.G.M. Bro. L. M. Cockcroft gave The R.W. Prov. Grand Master of Northumberland, the Hon. Earl Percy, M.P., which was received with enthusiasm. The R.W. Prov. G.M. ably responded. Bro. G. Selby Thompson proposed The V.W.D. Prov. Grand Master L. M. Cockcroft, Esq., and the R.W. Prov. G.M. gave The Officers, past and present, of the Prov. Grand Lodge, to which the Prov. G.S.W. Bro. Adam Robertson replied. Bro. B. J. Thompson Prov. Grand Sec. proposed the W.M. and Members of the Alnwick Lodge No. 1167, to which the W.M. Bro. Geo. Simpson responded. Bro. E. D. Davis proposed The Masonic Charities, and the Rev. W. L. J. Cooley P.P.G.C., in the absence of Bro. Hubert Laws, responded. Bro. W. H. Holmes P.P.S.G.W., next proposed The health of the Duke and Duchess of Northumberland and the Countess Percy, a toast which was acknowledged with rounds of cheering, repeated again and again. Earl Percy briefly replied on behalf of the Duchess of Northumberland and Lady Percy, and with regard to the Duke said that, although not a Mason, he was willing at all times to lend his means and influence to every good work, as also were the Duchess and Lady Percy. The company then separated, after having enjoyed a princely repast, the whole proceedings having been of the most harmonious description. With reference to the gathering, which will doubtless be ever memorable in the annals of Masonry in the North of England, we may state that there are now 18 Lodges in the Province, and the total number of contributing members is 1555. The oldest Lodge is No. 24, Newcastle, and the youngest is also a Newcastle Lodge, St. John's 1712. Up to between 11 or 12 years ago, Freemasonry was at a very low ebb in the old town of Alnwick. There was at that time no Lodge, but some two or three brethren took the matter in hand, and chiefly with the assistance of the Morpeth Lodges, a sufficient number of Masons were made to form a Lodge. The Alnwick Lodge was consecrated in 1867, the meeting place then being the Freemasons' Tavern, Market place, and the first W.M. being Bro. Thos. Braithwaite, then of Morpeth, but now of Alnwick. Very great interest was taken in the affairs pertaining to the Craft by the members of the young Lodge, and the numbers have gone on increasing, until now the number of contributing members is 95, whilst the brethren now possess a comfortable Lodge room in Clayport Street. The present W.M. is Bro. Geo. Simpson.

The present R.W.P.G.M. of Northumberland, Bro. the Earl Percy, M.P., was initiated at Oxford, and was installed in his present office in September 1869. The ceremony of installing his Lordship took place at the Assembly Rooms, Newcastle, the installing master being the oldest Provincial Grand Master in England,—Bro. John Fawcett, R.W.P.G.M. of Durham. There were present on the occasion an unusually large number of brethren, and the attendance at the annual banquet was, with the exception of yesterday, the largest which has ever been known in the province.—Newcastle Daily Journal.

PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE OF NORTH AND EAST YORKSHIRE.

THE Freemasons of North and East Yorkshire held their annual Grand Lodge on Thursday, at Beverley. The gathering took place at Richmond last year, and now Beverley has been honoured. The event proved a red letter day in the history of the town, which is in every way appropriate for the assembling of an historical fraternity. Although the business of the Grand Lodge did not commence until two o'clock in the afternoon, all the early trains brought up Masonic visitors, who occupied themselves for a few hours by inspecting the Minster and St. Mary's Church, as well as other objects of antiquarian interest. The Minster was the chief attraction, more especially as Bro. Stephenson, of the Beverley Lodge, well known for his antiquarian researches, had acceded to a request to give a verbal description of the leading features of the building. Increased interest was given to the morning's proceedings by a recital on the organ, given by Bro. Camidge, Organist of the Minster. The organ is a grand old instrument, by the famous builder Snetzler, and it was heard to great advantage on the occasion, the organist having made a delightful selection of music, which was highly appreciated by all who were fortunate enough to be present. All the selections were of a contemplative character. Handel's overture to "Samson" being the first number. The next was one of Batiste's quiet Andantes, the one in E minor. This was played in fine taste, showing a judicious blending of the stops. No. 3 was Mendelssohn's "Cornelius' March," a fine sparkling theme, bringing out the more prominent stops of the instrument. The next number was an Andante movement by Smart, whose name is a sufficient guarantee for graceful melody and pure harmony. The organist led up to this movement by a pretty extemporaneous passage or two. The two next selections were specially interesting. The first comprised the movements moderato and allegro from Corelli, adapted no doubt from the instrumental writings of this famous composer, who died in 1713. The other number was Schumann's "Ich Grolle Nicht." A selection from Mendelssohn's "Hymn of Praise" was the next number on the programme, but at the last moment the organist changed it for Haydn's representation of "Chaos." The concluding piece was Bach's Prelude and Fugue in D, and with this the visit of the Freemasons to the Minster terminated, and the fraternity wended their way to the Assembly Rooms to hold their Grand Lodge. The entire suite of rooms was engaged. The principal rooms were decorated with flowers, plants, and Masonic flags and emblems. Every Lodge in the province was well represented. Prior to opening the Grand Lodge the Board of Benevolence held a long sitting, and considered several applications for assistance, from widows of Freemasons and necessitous brethren. Several grants were passed and the claims of candidates—boys and girls—for admission to the Schools were carefully investigated, and resolutions to support the most deserving passed. Bro. the Right Hon. the Earl of Zetland, the Provincial Grand Master, presided over the Grand Lodge, and was supported by the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Bro. J. Pearson Bell, M.D., J.P.; Bros. Hon. W. T. Orde Powlett, Major Woodall, &c. The following brethren were installed Grand Officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. Sir Charles Legard, Bart., W.M. Denison 1248, S.G. Warden; Charles Norman P.M. Lennox 123 J.G.W., Rev. L. Heath, M.A., Kingston 1010 P.G. Chaplain, R. W. Hollon P.M. York 236 and Eboracum 1611 P.G. Treasurer, J. Todd P.M. York 236 P.G. Reg. M.C., Peck P.M. Sykes 1040 P.G. Sec., J. H. Emes P.M. Minerva 250 S.G.D., J. T. Atkinson W.M. St. Jermain's 566 J.G.D., A. W. Ansell P.M. Humber 57 P.S. Sup. Wks., T. B. Whytehead W.M. Eboracum 1611 P.G.D.C., B. L. Wells P.M. Alexandra 1511 P.G. Sword Bearer, J. Camidge Constitutional 294 P.G. Organist, J. Ward York 236 P.G. Pursuivant, T. Crier Humber 57 P.G. Tyler. A committee was appointed for the purpose of increasing the support given to the several Masonic Charities in the Province, and it was announced by the Grand Master that the Provincial Lodge next year would be held in York, on the invitation of the Eboracum Lodge No. 1611. About 120 brethren afterwards sat down to a banquet, under the presidency of the Provincial Grand Master, who in the course of the proceedings thanked the officers and brethren of the Constitutional Lodge, Beverley, for the handsome hospitality with which the Grand Lodge had been received.

DISPOSAL OF LODGE FUNDS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In answer to the query of your correspondent OLD FILE, the amount appearing as "Other Receipts" in Balance Sheet No. 2 is made up of Subscriptions £168, Initiation fees £52 10s, and Visiting fees £39 1s.

I am pleased to see, from the letters you publish, that the officials of the Yarborough and Doric Lodges take so much pride in shewing the results achieved by their Lodges. I wish others would follow their example, it would be a grand incentive to the members to exert themselves so as to get a respectable statement to put forward. At the same time I should like them to shew what proportion of their receipts they can afford to devote to charity. It would serve as a basis on which to suggest a fixed minimum.

No. 4.

BALANCE SHEET OF CHAPTER ———, ONE YEAR—1877:—

RECEIPTS.

Balance forward			£3 14 3
Receipts for the year:—
Subscriptions and Visitors	75 10 6
Exaltation Fees ...	28 7 0
		£107 11 9

EXPENDITURE.

Refreshment	£52 9 9
Grand Chapter certificates and dues	9 15 0
P.Z's jewel	5 5 0
Janitor	1 10 0
Printing, postages, &c.	4 7 6
Balance in hand	34 4 6

The above statement, although satisfactory on the whole, lacks the one important item without which no Masonic balance sheet is perfect. I, of course, allude to a Charity Grant.

I hope the members of this Chapter may have as large a surplus to report this year, but I trust they will not again forget those who, "from unavoidable calamity and misfortune, are reduced to the lowest ebb of poverty and distress." With such a balance brought forward, and anything of a prosperous year, they could, without risk, devote ten guineas from their funds to each of our Charities. Were they to do this, I feel certain that Companions would be found among them willing to undertake the duties of Stewards, and from what I personally know of the Chapter, I feel convinced the result of the united efforts of three Stewards would be such a sum as would put their name among those at the head of the Charity lists of 1879. I almost feel inclined to ask you to publish the name of this Chapter at the head of the statement, but in the hope that there are many where somewhat similar results can be shewn, I leave it blank, thinking that by so doing, others than the members concerned will find it of interest.

I have to thank you, Bro. Editor, for forwarding the two letters which were sent to your office addressed to me, they each contained a balance sheet, both of which I will ask you to publish in due course.

Yours fraternally,

UNION JACK.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The third balance sheet presented by "UNION JACK" is more unsatisfactory than either of those which preceded it. The year's income amounts to £294 5s 6d, the year's expenditure, which includes no grant whatever for charitable purposes, to £313 17s 4d, so that the Lodge which commenced the year with the respectable balance in hand of £85 6s 6d, closed it with one of £35 14s 8d, thus showing the very substantial diminution of, in round figures, £50. Five-sixths of the whole income were spent in feeding and rent. Ten Guineas were voted for a P.M.'s jewel, and Printing, Postage, &c., cost the very considerable sum of £15 8s 3d. If we put the three balance sheets together, then, omitting, at the outset, the balances whether on the right or the wrong side of the account, we shall find the following results.

(a) RECEIPTS.	201 9 6	266 0 9	294 5 6	=761 15 9
(b) EXPENDITURE:—
Refreshment, &c.	160 13 4	238 19 6	251 7 7	=651 0 5
Grand Lodge -	16 15 0	25 6 0	62 11 6	=104 12 6
P.M.'s Jewel -	5 5 0	7 7 0	10 10 0	= 23 2 0
Tyler - -	3 7 0	2 10 0	4 0 0	= 9 17 0
Printing, &c. -	2 18 7	6 7 1	15 8 3	= 24 13 11
Not Specified -	12 10 7	——	——	= 12 10 7
Charity - -	——	20 0 0	——	= 20 0 0
TOTAL EXPENDITURE - - -				£845 16 5
EXCESS of Outgoings over Incomings -				£84 0 8

It will be noted that out of this total of £845 16s 5d only £20, granted by 2nd Lodge, was expended in Charity, being less by £3 2s than was voted for P.M.'s jewels, and by £4 13s 10d than was expended for Printing, &c.

(c) Now for BALANCES at beginning and end of year.

Beginning: 2nd Lodge £336 3s 2d. 3rd Lodge £85 6s 6d =	421 9 8
Less due to Treasurer of 1st Lodge - -	36 11 5
	£384 18 3
End: 2nd Lodge £301 14s 4d, 3rd Lodge £35 14s 8d =	337 9 0
Less due to Treasurer of 1st Lodge - -	2 5 6
	£335 3 6
Difference—TO THE BAD—between opening and closing Balances - - - - - - - - -	49 14 9

It will be noted under this head that the "EXCESS" above shown namely £84 0s 8d is accounted for thus:—

Diminution of Balance in hand 2nd Lodge - - -	34 8 10
" " " 3rd " - - -	49 11 10
	£84 0 8
To which must be added "Due Treasurer," 1st Lodge -	2 5 6
	£86 6 2
Again, if we add to "Difference—TO THE BAD,—above shown - - - - - - - - -	49 14 9
The old Debts and moneys due Treasurer 1st Lodge, viz.	36 11 5
We have the EXCESS stated in another form - - -	£86 6 2

It must be remembered that had the 1st Lodge commenced the year without liabilities it would have closed it with £36 11s 5d amount paid off, less £2 5s 6d still due Treasurer, or the fair balance in hand of £34 5s 11d, which is the exact difference between EXCESS of Expenditure over Receipts (£84 0s 8d), and the Difference "TO THE BAD" between opening and closing balances (£49 14s 9d).

But what a miserable revelation these statements afford of the true inner life of some of our Masonic Lodges! Are we not the veriest of humbugs, the most superlative of hypocrites, when we talk of our charitable doings; and here are three Lodges—I should much like to believe they are exceptional cases—which out of a year's receipts, amounting in the aggregate to £761 15s 9d, spend £651 0s 5d in feasting, and £20 in charity? Freemasonry has been described as a peculiar system of morality, veiled in allegory, and illustrated by symbols. A very peculiar system indeed, with humbug for its veil of allegory, and the knife and fork and tankard as the most remarkable among its symbols. £650 spent in eating and drinking, and £20 voted for charity! The contrast is superb, but not one of which the Lodges in question have the slightest reason to be proud. And this leads me to submit a further observation, namely, that nine-tenths of those who banquet thus gorgeously belong to the class of folk who in their families live in honest, homely fashion, and the expenditure of a guinea or five-and-twenty shillings on a single dinner—one-half of which is showy vases and plated candelabra, and the other half a sorry attempt to rival a fashionable dinner—is not in keeping with their usual style of living. Here and there we find a member who can appreciate a really good glass of wine, but the majority are hardly able to distinguish between gooseberry and champagne. They speak affectionately and at the time with many a knowing wink of their love of Margaux, yet, if tried, they could not tell it from Medoc, even to save their souls. Honestly, they would prefer dining en famille off a prime haunch or saddle of mutton, or a sirloin of beef with et ceteras, and wash it down with a tankard of sound English ale; but they are afraid if they were to suggest the idea they might lose caste with their fellows. So with many a sigh for what is not in the menu, and many a wry face over the kickshaws they know nothing about, they partake of one after the other, "Soupe à la polonaise," "Filets de requin à la chinoise," "Cotelettes de veau, sauce Brobdingnag," "boeuf à la redingote," and so on. Well nigh every guest knows the whole thing is but affectation and humbug, yet each pays his guinea or more for the privilege of playing the hypocrite on stated occasions. And then the statement of account is overhauled with the result as seen in the above cases—£650 in feeding, and £20 in charity! Heigho! this is, indeed, Freemasonry—a peculiar system of morality—with a vengeance!

I rejoice to say I am very partial to good living. I should be a fool if I were not. I hold that the good things of this life which a benign Providence has bestowed upon us should be enjoyed, and enjoyed freely—though not to excess—as well as thankfully. But too many of our Lodge banquets are mere glitter, make believe, and pretence; with plenty of bright light, and sham flowers and silver plate, &c., but nothing that is really sound and good; with plenty of enforced gaiety, but no true enjoyment. But I fear that I have trespassed at too considerable length on your valuable space. I will conclude, therefore, with the remark, that if we exercised more common sense, and exhibited more courage; if we declined to be led by the nose into expense which cannot be justified; if we thought more about our principles, and less about our bellies, our "peculiar system of morality" would be all the better; and what is more to the point still, some of our poor and distressed brethren might be all the better, too, if we showed a little more self-denial.

Ever yours fraternally,

OLD LODGES.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Permit me to thank Bro. Gould for the notes he so kindly furnished in your issue of last week. The confusion of dates in the case of our senior Lodges is greatly to be regretted, but as the errors once made have been perpetuated, there is no help for it but to accept the present numbering, though there is no valid reason why the dates of Constitution, where they are proved to be wrong, should not be set right again. Now, Pine's List for 1734—recently reprinted by Hughan—was the first that was published after present Medina, No. 35, and Strong Man, No. 45, had been constituted, and it is reasonable to suppose that the dates would be correctly given when only a brief interval of time had elapsed between the date of the List's publication and those of the Lodges being constituted. Well, this Pine's List, 1734, gives the dates of constitution as follow:—No. 110 now Strong Man, No. 45—2nd Feb. 1732-3; No. 111 now Medina, No. 35—17 Feb. 1732-3. The same dates are also given in Pine's List 1736. According to Dr. Oliver, the former was warranted, in the 1738 List, on 2 February 1732 which would fall within the year 1732-3; but in the 1740 List, Pine gives the date 2nd Feb. 1734, which falls within the year 1733-4, thus degrading the Lodge one year in respect of date, the while he allowed it to retain its numerical precedence as No. 98—which by the closing up of the Lodges it had become from No. 110—over No. 99—formerly No. 111—constituted "17 Feb. 1732," which, by thus dating it, he advanced a year. The conclusion I am disposed to draw from this retention of No. 98 in this list in its pride of place (though with date of constitution degraded to 2 Feb. 1734) over two 1732 Lodges and eleven 1733 Lodges is that 1734 is a clerical error for 1732, which was intended to have been written, the "3" of "1732-3" having been dropped. Subsequently when the Lodges were closed up in 1756, the error committed by Pine and continued by Cole misled Grand Lodge, which, without stopping to examine the facts, transferred one Lodge to its supposed proper year, so that No. 98 was degraded and became No. 68 at the bottom of the 1734 Lodges, while No. 99 figured as No. 57 in its old place among the 1732 Lodges. How in the former case the original "Feb. 2," became "Feb. 17" I will not attempt to explain. Then, as Feb. 17 1732 falls within 1731-2, a subsequent compiler of Grand Lodge List, in his desire to be more than usually accurate, perhaps described the date of constitution as "Feb. 17 1731-2" and then a further change resulted in the "2" being dropped. In some such way as this I imagine a Lodge constituted 17 Feb. 1733 is now dated as a 1731 Lodge—the process being simple enough:—17 Feb. 1733 is the same as 17 Feb. 1732-3. The "3" was dropped for the sake of brevity, and it became 17 Feb. 1732 only. Then for greater accuracy this was converted into 17 Feb. 1731-2, and then for brevity again this was reduced to 17 Feb. 1731.

I think there can be no doubt whatever that present No. 45 is older than present No. 35, and all the intermediate Lodges formerly under the banner of Grand Lodge "Moderns." I fancy, too, there is just a little reason in the explanation I have offered for its degradation from 1732-3 to 1734.

Yours fraternally,

YOUR REVIEWER OF HUGHAN'S REPRINT OF PINE'S LIST OF LODGES 1734.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—As a member of Strong Man Lodge, allow me to offer such scanty information as is at my command now, concerning the past history of No. 45. In the minutes of a regular Lodge meeting held on the 8th March 1833, it was resolved "that it is highly proper to celebrate in a marked and distinguished manner the Centenary of the Strong Man Lodge, at one of its meetings during the ensuing year, 1834, the Warrant bearing date February 1734." This was followed by the striking off and presentation to each subscribing member of a commemoration, or centenary jewel, one of which can be seen at Bro. Kenning's. Allow me also to add that the Lodge figures as 61 on 1st November 1832, and as 53, late 61, on 6th December. Next week I hope to be able to give a few more particulars, and if you will allow me space, I will endeavour to supply a copy of the warrant.

Yours fraternally,

H. J. DEAN.

THE "FOUR OLD LODGES."

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I hardly think it becoming, even in so able and enthusiastic a Masonic writer as Bro. Hughan, to adopt the regal or editorial "We" in expressing his individual opinions on the subject of the "Four Old Lodges," or, indeed, on any subject. Nor is it wise, unless he wishes to lay himself open to the charge of arrogance; as Masons, who are also men of the world, must smile at the exhibition of such petty vanity. Bro. Gould and Your Reviewer must be more than human, if they relish this kind of patronage. The value of their labours will be all the same, neither more nor less to the extent even of one jot or tittle, whether Bro. Hughan condescendingly pats them on the back or not. It is a pity one so enlightened as he should assume such airs towards writers who evidently know what they are about, and one of whom, by the laborious patience and ability with which he has gone on investigating a subject of deep interest to the Masonic public, is deserving of a better fate than to be patronised even by Bro. Hughan. If that estimable brother is anxious to be thought even wiser than we know he is, I would respectfully suggest to him to be a little less vain of his powers, and not assume, as the style of his letter would lead people to believe he does, that he is the only competent authority on Masonic history. I know, directly, or indirectly, all three—Bros. Hughan and Gould and Your Reviewer, and except in the one particular, that the first, I believe, entered the field of Masonic literature before the other two, I have as great confidence in the opinions of the two last as Bro. Hughan's. This makes the assumption of any superiority on his part the more to be regretted. I confess that, when I began the letter, I thought I should find at foot of it the names of half-a-dozen brethren, or, at least, of Bros. Hughan and Woodford, who had constituted themselves a kind of irresponsible tribunal for the purpose of passing judgment on Bro. Gould's researches, having overlooked the fact that at all events some among your numerous readers are competent to form an opinion for themselves. Let Bro. Hughan take warning from a far greater writer than he can ever hope to be—the late Charles Dickens, whose marvellous abilities were only equalled by his inordinate vanity. Even he was the subject of frequent ridicule.

I am, Dear Sir,

Your faithful friend and Brother,

London, 15th October 1878. SCRUTATOR.

MASONIC QUERY.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—A large number of W.M.'s aprons will shortly be wanted, all over the country: and I wish to know how much longer that badge is to be rendered ludicrous and unbecoming by the Tau being placed upside down, like Levels, merely because of the printer's blunder in the Constitutions, where "Perpendiculars upon Horizontals" appears, instead of "Horizontals upon Perpendiculars," as it obviously should be.

Too many members of the Fraternity, I am afraid, neither know nor care anything about the signification of the "Symbols" by which the beautiful system of Masonry is illustrated; and wear them only as children wear mock jewellery and watches on their gala clothes. But the most ignorant and careless S.W. who was ever promoted to W.M. can see the absurdity of stamping him in the higher degree with the emblem of the lower; and, instead of giving him his rightful "implement of power" to indicate his rank and position in the Lodge, sending him back for a level to the chair from which he had just emerged. I never see the W.M.'s badge as it is now made without being reminded of the famous picture of the "Rationalistic Chicken," with a piece of eggshell sticking to its tail, and wondering when the owner will awake to the consciousness of the foolish figure that he presents in consequence.

The manufacturers of course are not to blame. They merely go by the book. But surely there is in Grand Lodge some brother intelligent and influential enough to take up the question of revision, and insist on this and other errors being rectified without delay.

Yours fraternally,

5th October 1878. O. V. N.

A SENSIBLE PROTEST.

To the Editor of the Standard.

SIR,—Having noticed in your edition of Monday last, a paragraph to the effect that it is intended at the approaching meetings of the Governors of the Masonic Boys' and Girls' Schools to move for the admission of a son and daughter of the late Bro. Jardine, who lost his life through the recent collision on the Thames between the Bywell Castle and Princess Alice, I must ask you to allow me to express my disapproval of such a proceeding, and submit that it is establishing a most unwise precedent, and calculated to give great dissatisfaction to hundreds of governors and subscribers who will not have an opportunity of being present when the motions are made. So far as the widow and orphans are concerned, I am confident there is not a member of the Fraternity who feels greater sympathy for them than myself, and I should be glad to hear of Mrs. Jardine succeeding in getting some of her children into the Schools, after the ordinary course for election has been pursued, but not in the manner proposed, as I am fully in accord with the view so clearly put before the public in the letter of "H. G. S." under the heading "Blindfold Benevolence," in your edition of the 4th instant, which was so ably supplemented by a leading article of same date.

Many cases of the greatest distress have been known to me, and the widows have been unable, after repeated applications, to obtain admission for their children to these Schools, and in some of these cases the brethren have met their death by drowning or accident, leaving large families totally unprovided for; but because it did not take place under circumstances similar to Bro. Jardine's, no "special," heed is taken, and these poor widows did not, as of course Mrs. Jardine and children will, receive substantial relief from a Mansion House Fund.

I will not trouble you further than to express a hope that the members who will assemble in Great Queen-street, at the Courts about to be held, will pause, before adopting a course not contemplated in the rules of these institutions, nor warranted by extreme distress.

I am, Sir, yours obediently,

10th October. JUSTICE.

INSTALLATION MEETINGS.

The Great City Lodge, No. 1426.—The installation meeting of this Lodge was held on Saturday, the 12th inst., at the Cannon-street Hotel, E.C. The Lodge was formally opened by the W.M. Bro. R. Stanway, supported by Bros. J. Freeman and G. W. Blackie Senior and Junior Wardens respectively; Bros. R. J. Simpson P.G.C. Chaplain, N. B. Headon P.M. Treas., E. Moody P.M. Sec., J. Seex P.M., J. Stevens P.M., J. H. Townend P.M., W. H. Catchpole S.D., T. Hamer J.D., W. F. Kibble D. of C., G. Jenkins Org., C. Taylor I.G., W. H. Hook Steward. The emergency meeting of the previous Saturday having disposed of the business that would otherwise have been brought forward, the way was left clear for the installation to be proceeded with. Accordingly, the minutes having been confirmed, Bro. J. Freeman was duly presented, and obligated. The Lodge was advanced, and he was placed in the chair of K.S. in regular form. The Officers for the year were appointed as follow:—Bros. G. W. Blackie S.W., W. H. Catchpole J.W., Rev. R. J. Simpson Chap., N. B. Headon Treas., E. Moody Sec., T. Hamer S.D., C. Taylor J.D., W. Kibble I.G., W. H. Hook D. of C., R. Hooker and F. T. C. Keeble Stewards, G. Jenkins Organist, Steedman P.M. Tyler. The Auditors' report was then presented. From it we learn that the Lodge has the following balances:—General Fund, £52 16s 6d; Benevolent Fund, £109 15s 6d; Samaritan Fund, £23 3s; and Reserve Fund, £14 4s. Bro. J. Stevens proposed that the balance sheet be received and entered on the minutes, this was seconded, and, on being put to the Lodge, was carried unanimously. A proposition for initiation was handed in, and the visiting brethren having tendered their good wishes, the W.M. closed the Lodge. The brethren then adjourned to banquet in the great hall of the Hotel and commenced a very pleasant evening, under the presidency of the newly installed Master. After grace, the W.M. gave the health of the Queen. As Masons, he said, we should especially honour this toast. The brethren having given it a hearty reception, the W.M. gave that of the M.W. the Grand Master H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, which was also received in a hearty manner. In giving the next on the list, the Pro G.M., the D.G.M. and the rest of the Grand Officers Past and Present, the W.M. expressed his pleasure at having two Past Grand Officers among them. He considered these two brethren were worthy members of a most influential body. They had each worked in their time for the good of the Craft, and he doubted not would never flag in so continuing to work. He would ask the brethren to evince their good opinion of Grand Lodge by giving a hearty reception to the toast. Bro. Simpson, in reply, considered, with reference to the heads of Grand Lodge, that their praises were so often sung it was hardly necessary for him to refer to them. Suffice it to say, that whatever they have in hand they carry out in a most straightforward manner. As for himself, he had to thank the W.M. for having reinvested him as Chaplain of the Lodge. He heard, not many years ago, that Masonry had been the turning point of a brother's life, and that turning point arose from the perfect way in which the ceremony was performed. Were he free to give that brother's name, it would reveal one of the most prominent Masons of the day. Our rev. brother further referred to various matters in connection with Freemasonry, more especially regarding the firm stand it had maintained. Bro. Fenn also responded; he said that while Freemasonry supported the throne and religion as it did, it could not fail to prosper. Bro. Stanway next assumed the gavel. In proposing the health of the newly installed Master, he did so with especial gratification, as that brother had taken a part in introducing him (Bro. Stanway) into Freemasonry. He was pleased he had that night had the pleasure of returning that kindness by installing Bro. Freeman into the chair. He hoped their W.M. would remember this ceremony with the same gratification as he did that of initiation. The W.M., in feeling terms, returned thanks for the way in which his health had been proposed. He felt that the members would excuse his shortcomings when they considered the responsibility entailed by his being appointed to rule so large a Lodge as The Great City. He hoped for the support of the members and officers in the carrying out of his duties. He next gave the health of the Immediate Past Master, and the other P.M.'s of the Lodge. Before giving the toast he had a pleasing duty to perform, viz.—to present to Bro. Stanway a P.M.'s jewel, which he hoped that brother would long be in a position to wear among them. Bro. Stanway, in responding, said he would not detain them long in detailing what should be done in and out of Freemasonry. He had to thank the members for the kind support he had received during his year of office. To the Officers he was especially indebted. To them, and indeed to members generally, he owed his most sincere thanks. He considered he could, at the end of this, his year of office, say, it was well finished. He accepted the jewel as a memento of what would never be effaced from his memory. Bro. Stevens followed. He referred the company back to the time of their inauguration, five years since, and felt sure the members would agree with him that so far The Great City Lodge had carried out its programme. He spoke at some length of the letter which appeared in our last issue, under the signature "Peter," and explained the matters therein referred to. Bro. Freeman next gave the toast of the Visitors. The Great City were always pleased to see among them a goodly array of Visitors, and hoped their gatherings would always be graced by some. The W.M. here announced that the Charity box had returned to him with £4 2s as the result of its journey round the table. Bro. Edmonston, in responding for the Visitors, considered it a great compliment being selected from so many to respond to the toast. It gave him great pleasure to be present at their meeting. He considered a compliment had been paid the Royal Leopold Lodge, of which he had the pleasure of being Senior Warden, in mentioning the members thereof specially in the toast. Bro. Bakers also replied. He was extremely gratified at what he had seen during the evening. Bro. Preston followed; he tendered his meed of praise. The W.M. next proposed the health of the Treasurer and Secretary. He felt that they had brethren filling these offices who were far in advance of those occupying similar positions in other Lodges. Bro. Headon, the Treasurer, was gratified that his office entailed so little talking. He was pleased if he had filled the office of Treasurer of the Lodge to the satisfaction of the members. He then referred to the letter on which Bro. Stevens had commented. He thought that the balance sheet of the Lodge would satisfy all the requirements of our correspondent. He hoped the Master would before long express it as his intention to represent, on behalf of the Lodge, one of the Charities. Should he do so, he (Bro. Headon) would guarantee that the Lodge would not be backward in supporting him; in fact, he would now offer to propose that such a sum be voted as would be a credit to the Lodge. He felt sure the members would handsomely support the Master. Bro. Moody also spoke at some length on what he considered the intrusion of our correspondent. He felt that The Great City Lodge did not want any suggestions as to what they should do. He thought their work in the cause of Charity, which, in the columns of the journal he was now alluding to, had lately been held up as an example, would amply answer any remarks of such correspondents as "Peter." We regret that Bro. Moody's "annual lecture" was here brought to an abrupt termination, on "a question of order," as we think that The Great City Lodge has, during its short existence, had suggestions made, as well as faults pointed out, at these installation meetings by their worthy Secretary. However, he promised an exhaustive "sermon" at the next gathering, when he specially invited the members to attend. The W.M. next gave the toast of the Officers, to which the S.W. responded. It was then proposed that the thanks of the meeting be given to Bro. Bertram, for the satisfactory way in which he had carried out the musical arrangements of the evening. Nor would it be just to omit mention of Bro. Harper's solo on the trumpet. As our readers are aware, Bro. Harper is the trumpeter par excellence of the day. Whether he is one and the same with the celebrated trumpeter of the Comic Latin Grammar, "Trumpeter unus erat, qui coatum scarlet habebat," we are not prepared to say; but as to the unapproachable merits of his performance there can be no question. Among the Visitors were Bros. T. Fenn P.G.D., W. H. Perryman P.M. 3, J. Walker P.M. 27, S. W. Sutton P.M. 73, E. W. Davis P.M. 95, 172, R. Jackson P.M. 104, G. Pritchard P.M. 117, A. D. West Middlesex Lodge, No. 1612.—The duty of writing notices of meetings is, as regards its monotony, one not well calculated to excite a very considerable amount of enthusiasm, but there are cases in which the recording one or other of our Lodge meetings is attended with a great deal of pleasure. This is essentially the case with young and vigorous Lodges, whose history is of yesterday, but whose members have shown from the very outset that they are animated by the true Masonic spirit, and that they are in fact what our American cousins are, we believe, in the habit of describing as "real grit." This is particularly the case with the West Middlesex Lodge, which, throughout the brief period of its existence, has proved itself to be an eminently good working Lodge, full of spirit and energy, and fully actuated by the most generous of Masonic principles. We do not say this in any spirit of flattery, but because we know it has been and is the case. The Officers do their duty admirably, and the members second their efforts to promote the success of the Lodge most laudably. More than this it would be impossible to say, so, without further preface, we announce that on Saturday last the members met at the Ealing Institute, under the presidency of the W.M., Bro. A. Beasley, supported by Bros. Kasner and Barr, who filled the chairs of Senior and Junior Wardens, Bro. J. Chambers Roe P.M. Secretary, Bro. T. Kingston the W.M. elect, a strong muster of the members, and the following Visitors:—Bros. W. Goss I.P.M. 780, T. Cull J.W. 1416, John Johnson 475, W. W. Truman I.G. 1566, A. Kent 1425, S. T. Kingston 1269, John March 27, W. S. Cantrell jun. P.G.D. Berks and Bucks, R. E. Hannis 771, W. T. Wrighton 23, W. Heath 1681, W. W. Morgan 211, J. Collinson 862, W. J. Murlis P.M. 1489 and 1642, T. J. Robinson 1589, M. Rickwood J.W. 192, B. E. Blasby J.W. 780, George Wells 780, G. F. Hearne 733, S. J. Dowsing 167, &c. The Lodge was opened at two o'clock, when the minutes were read and confirmed. The Report of the Audit Committee was next received, and unanimously adopted. The ceremonial portion of the day's proceedings then commenced. Brother E. T. B. Allen was examined as to his proficiency in the second, he aspiring to be raised to the sublime degree. The knowledge he displayed warranted his claim for advancement, and the Worshipful Master worked the ceremony with the impressiveness we are so accustomed to from him. Bro. W. J. Bloomfield, a candidate for passing, was next introduced; he complied with the requisite formalities, and Bro. Beasley instructed him in his second step in Freemasonry. A notice of motion—That the Initiation Fee be raised to ten guineas, and the Joining Fee to six guineas—was then considered: the result, however, was a foregone conclusion, as it had been arranged by the Founders this increase should be made so soon as the muster roll of members had reached a certain number, which number had already been exceeded. We need, therefore, only state that the motion was carried. We now come to what, unquestionably, was the event of the day,—the installation of the W.M.

for ensuing year. The choice of the brethren, at the last meeting, had fallen on Bro. Thomas Kingston, P.M. of the Whittington Lodge, and he was now introduced by Bro. J. Chambers Roe, who most efficiently acted as Director of Ceremonies. The chairs of Senior and Junior Warden were severally filled by Bros. Weaver Past Master, and Cantrell W.M. of High Wycombe Lodge. After Bro. Kingston had been duly obligated, Bro. Beasley, who acted as Installing Master, requested the members who had not yet passed the chair to withdraw, and a Board of Installed Masters was opened, and Bro. Thomas Kingston was inducted into the chair as Master of the West Middlesex Lodge. The brethren were then re-admitted, and saluted their new Master, who appointed the following as his Officers:—Bros. H. L. P. Kasner S.W., A. J. Burr J.W., H. Tucker Treas., J. C. Roe P.M. Secretary, Delevante Org., Green S.D., Dyer J.D., Seward jun. D.C., Fisher W.S., Bourne I.G., Harrison Tyler. A chaste and elegant Past Master's jewel was then presented to the outgoing Master by Bro. Kingston, who expressed, on behalf of the members, their appreciation of the great services Bro. Beasley had rendered during the two years he had occupied the chair. The handsome gift was suitably acknowledged by the recipient. The name of a brother was then handed in as wishing to join the Lodge; also that of a gentleman as candidate for initiation. Bro. Weaver P.M., an honorary member of the Lodge, then rose, and briefly addressed the members. He expressed his sense of approval as to the way in which the heavy business of the day had been conducted by Bro. Beasley. He regretted he had not been so frequent a visitor to the Lodge as he could have desired, but he assured the members, though he had not been at their meetings, he had been eminently gratified by the reports he had read of their progress. The worthy Sec. then read a letter he had received from Bro. John Hervey, Grand Sec., expressing his regret that the state of his health at present precluded his accepting the kind invitation of Bro. Beasley; at the same time assuring that esteemed Brother that on one of their "quiet" nights he should have great pleasure in paying the Lodge a visit. The writer also stated how gratified he was to know the Lodge had attained so high a position. Bro. Roe brought several other letters before the Lodge, which was then closed. The banquet was served at the Feathers Hotel, and was placed on the table in capital style by host Bro. Stephens. On the removal of the cloth, Bro. Kingston gave the Loyal toasts, which were fully honoured. Bro. Beasley, in proposing the health of the Worshipful Master, referred to Bro. Kingston's many qualities. He called on all present to drink the toast with all heartiness; and wish him every prosperity during his year of office, for a better-hearted man, or a truer Mason, he never was acquainted with. The toast was most rapturously received, and the W.M. announced that before he ventured to reply, Miss Delevante had kindly consented to favour them with a song. Bro. Delevante then introduced his daughter, who rendered with exquisite taste two of her favourite songs. Bro. Kingston then rose. He was much gratified with the kind way in which the toast had been given and received. Three years ago he was installed W.M. of his Mother Lodge; it was a great honour that had been conferred on him by the members of the West Middlesex, and he trusted he might be considered worthy of their confidence. He could assure them he had the welfare of the Lodge at heart, and would ever exert himself to further its best interests. Before sitting down he would offer a toast for their acceptance, which he knew they would receive with the greatest cordiality; it was the health of their first Master, the Installing Officer of the day. Any eulogy he could attempt would be superfluous; Bro. Beasley's actions spoke for him. He would therefore, without further preface, offer the toast for their acceptance. After the brethren had given most happy expression to their sentiments, Bro. Beasley rose. He would lose no time in returning his sincere thanks for the way in which the toast had been received. He appreciated their kindness, he trusted, in a way which it deserved. He only hoped they had not set too high a value on his services. He was the first P.M. of the Lodge; true he had served two years as their Master, and he hoped his services had been of benefit to the Lodge. Being now the P.M., he aspired to be looked up to as something more,—as the Father of the Lodge; and he hoped he might for many, many years be looked up to in that connection. Bro. Beasley concluded by thanking one and all for the kind way they had supported him. The next toast was the health of the Visitors, and Bros. Call, Cantrell, and Morgan replied. Bro. Bloomfield replied to the toast of the New Members, and then came the "Officers," for which Bros. Kasner and Burr replied. "The Treasurer and Secretary" produced able responses from Bros. Tucker and Chambers Roe, and after one or two other toasts, the Tyler was summoned. Some capital songs were given during the evening, while Bro. Jones gave a reading from Knowles's William Tell.

Metropolitan Lodge, No. 1507.—The brethren of this Lodge assembled on Wednesday, for the purpose of installing a Master for the ensuing year, and transacting such other business as might offer. Lodge was opened at 3.30 at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street at which establishment the regular meetings are held. Bro. R. T Kingham, the W.M., opened the Lodge, being supported by a goodly array of brethren and visitors. After the formal business of the day had been disposed of, the Lodge was opened to the third degree, and Bro. C. W. Blake and F. J. Perks were raised. Lodge was then resumed to the second, and Bro. W. F. Bates was passed. Bro. John Douglass was now presented and duly obligated. Lodge was advanced and the ceremony of installation proceeded with, Bro Kingham acting as Installing Master. Bro. John Douglass having been formally inducted into the chair of K.S., proceeded to appoint the following brethren as his Officers for the year:—Bros. C. J Scales S.W., W. Side J.W., J. Wilding P.M. Treasurer, W. M. Stile Secretary, H. Lovegrove Assistant Secretary and W.S., G. Coll. J.D., H. Stiles I.G., J. Clark Director of Ceremonies, Daly Tyler. The addresses having been given by the Installing Master, five gentlemen, viz.:—Messrs. Alfred Mellon, L. Hollingsworth, David Morgan, G. F. Hall, and Jas. Markie were introduced for the benefit of initiation. The ceremony was duly proceeded with, and each admitted to Masonic light. Votes of thanks were passed to the Installing Master for the able way in which he had conducted the ceremony, and to Bro. Clemow for his efforts to make the Lodge as comfortable as was possible in the present state of his premises. Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to Bro. Mellon's Hotel, in Covent Garden, where a first rate banquet was served, the only hitch being that the waiters had more work than they could comfortably manage in consequence of the attendance being more numerous than was expected. At the conclusion of the banquet the W.M. gave the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts, coupling the name of Bro. T. Adams P.G.P. with that of the Grand Officers. Bro. Adams replied in his usual genial manner. Bro. Kingham, on rising to give the health of the W.M., was assured that he would receive the support of the members. Bro. Douglass had been intimately connected with the Lodge during the whole time of its existence; he was in fact one of the founders. He had worked through the several offices, and had now attained the summit of a Mason's ambition. Bro. Kingham felt sure that the position was well deserved, and that in carrying out the duties thereof, Bro. Douglass would have the support and co-operation of the whole of the members. He would conclude by wishing Bro. Douglass every prosperity, both for himself and for his Lodge. Bro. Douglass, on rising to reply, was received most heartily. He was exceedingly obliged to the members for their expressions of kindness. It would be an incentive to him to perform the duties, which he hoped to carry out in such a way as to merit the commendation of his fellow workers in the Metropolitan Lodge. The next toast was that of the I.P.M. It was a pleasing duty that the new W.M. had to perform in decorating his predecessor with a jewel, which had been voted in recognition of his services to the Lodge. He hoped he would receive it and wear it as a memento of a most successful term for many years to come. Bro. Kingham, in reply, referred to the occasion of his first responding as W.M. of the Metropolitan Lodge. He then stated that that was the happiest moment of his life, but now he could look back and say that he had spent other such pleasant moments while ruling the Lodge, and the whole was crowned by the act of kindness which he had just received at the hands of Bro. Douglass, in the name of the Lodge. He need hardly say that he should wear the jewel with the greatest pleasure. The toast of the P.M.'s was next given, with this the W.M. coupled the names of the Treasurer and Secretary. Bro. Willing, the Treasurer, was very brief in his reply. He, with the other founders wished to make the Lodge one of the successes of Freemasonry; he hoped that, so far, they had succeeded. Bro. Michael was gratified at the kind way in which the mention of his name was always received in the Lodge. Bro. Stiles followed, thanking the members for their support. To the toast of the Visitors, Bro. Crouch, W.M. of the Burdett Coutts, and Dottridge, W.M. of the Old Concord, responded. The W.M. next gave the Masonic Charities, he felt that few words of his were needed, as they had with them that evening Bros. Hedges and Terry, both of whom were ever ready and willing to urge the claims of our Charities. Bro. Hedges was the first to reply. He had great pleasure in stating that the W.M. had just sent him word that he would undertake to act as Steward at the coming Festival of the Girls' School. Bro. Hedges hoped that the members would support their W.M. in such a way as to put the Metropolitan Lodge as near the post of honour in the subscription list as its past doings warranted him in hoping. Bro. Terry followed. He was very pleased to hear from Bro. Hedges that the W.M. had undertaken a Stewardship for the Girls' School. He wished him every success. On no less than three occasions had the Metropolitan Lodge provided a Steward for the Charities, and so long as they carried out the first principle of Freemasonry in such a way as they had in the past, he was convinced they would prosper. The toast of the Officers followed, and to this each responded The Tyler was now summoned, and the proceedings terminated. Among the Visitors were Bros. J. Terry P.M. 228 Prov. G.J.W. Herts R.M.B.I., F. R. W. Hedges R.M.I.G., E. E. Barratt Kidder 12, T. Vernon 25, W. S. Cooke 25, George Lee 40 (Canada), J. C. Dwarber P.M. 55, E. R. Freebody 87, C. Stevens P.M. 101, J. OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

THE Prince and Princess of Wales, with their children, arrived in London from Abergeldie early on Sunday morning. Their Royal Highnesses left for Paris on Wednesday evening, arriving there on Thursday morning. On Wednesday the Princess Louise opened a new building in connection with the Warehousemen and Clerks' Schools near Croydon.

In consequence of the unsettled state of affairs in India, the foreign leave of officers in the army and navy has been suspended. Nine batteries of Royal Artillery, with reinforcements for regiments already on service in India, left Portsmouth for Bombay on board the Serapis on Tuesday.

The Middlesex magistrates have refused, by a considerable majority, to renew the licence for dancing and music to the Argyll Rooms, a well known place of resort near the Haymarket.

A panic among the crowded audience of a music-hall in Liverpool occurred on Friday, in consequence of a cry of "Fire!" In the pressure to escape from the building thirty-seven persons were killed, and many others were severely injured.

The Board of Trade inquiry into the collision on the Thames between the steamers Princess Alice and Bywell Castle was opened on Monday, and has been continued daily.

The Judges of the Royal Court of Jersey have decided that marriage with a deceased wife's sister is lawful in that island, Lord Lyndhurst's Act prohibitory of such unions not having been registered in the Royal Court.

The Irish Sunday Closing Act came into operation on Sunday last, and was everywhere well observed.

Michael Heraghty, one of the men accused of the murder of the Earl of Leitrim, died on Saturday, in Lifford Gaol, from typhus fever.

William Stafford, a clerk in the Liverpool branch of the Bank of England, who absconded with £15,000 in notes, was captured at Jersey on board a yacht, which he had hired with a view of reaching Spain. Nearly £7,000 was found in his possession, and he states that he has been defrauded of the remainder.

It is announced from India that the Native Envoy despatched to Cabul by the Viceroy has been permitted to leave that city, bearing a reply from the Ameer. The nature of the reply is, of course, as yet unknown; but, as there is little hope of its proving to be of a satisfactory character, military preparations have been continued without intermission. Very considerable forces have been drawn from the central districts, and preparations have been made for an advance across the frontier. In the meantime negotiations are being carried on with the border tribes, who appear to be not entirely opposed to British interests. The Indian difficulty has not been without influence upon affairs in Europe. The Russian Government has sent a circular to the other Powers declaring a desire to conclude a definite Treaty of Peace with Turkey, and justifying the continued occupation of certain districts by the alleged impotence of the Porte to prevent ill-treatment of the Christian population. The Turkish Government, on the other hand, blame the Russian authorities for any excesses that may have occurred through their refusal to permit a Turkish occupation of the evacuated districts. The Austrian occupation of Bosnia is so far complete, and resistance overcome, that a reduction of the mobilised force has been ordered from Vienna, and about 70,000 men will be immediately withdrawn from active service. The Austrian Government has replied to the Turkish Circular attributing barbarous excesses to the occupying forces in Bosnia, denying the charges, and claiming credit for extreme moderation in carrying out the decisions of the Berlin Conference. A Turkish newspaper, published at Constantinople, strongly condemns the conduct of the Ameer of Cabul in displaying hostility towards "the sole ally of Islam." The Anti-Socialist Bill has been carried in the German Parliament, generally in the shape agreed upon in the primary committee. General Greig, the Russian Minister of Finance, has visited Berlin, presumably with a view to a new loan, and is now in Paris, it is believed, with the same object. The Hungarian Ministry is still in abeyance, but Baron Depretis has been invited by the Emperor to undertake the formation of a Cabinet. M. Gambetta delivered a speech at Grenoble last week, in which he urged the selection of Republican Senators as the necessary complement to the national constitutional system. The Bishop of Orleans, Monseigneur Dupanloup, whose pamphlet against Freemasonry, published in 1875, attracted so much attention, died suddenly on Friday, aged 76. M. Blignières has been appointed to the control of the Egyptian railways and ports. The Italian papers express discontent at the assumed exclusion of their Government from influence in Egypt. The yellow fever is still very fatal in the Mississippi towns, but there are hopes that colder weather may stay the epidemic.

A letter we have quoted elsewhere in our columns from the Standard, is worthy of our attention, and the heading given to it by our contemporary—"A Sensible Protest"—shows what is its opinion of the writer's views. No Englishman would for one moment dream of suggesting anything which could possibly stay the free flow of Charity, and certainly no English Freemason would be guilty of such conduct. When, what is in fact a great national calamity happens, such as the wreck of the Princess Alice, or the Abercarne Explosion, it is just and indeed necessary that some special appeals have to be made to the public; but as has been suggested by another correspondent of the same journal, it is most undesirable that the relations of the victims should be pecuniarily better off than they would have been had their relations still lived. The intensity of their mental suffering is hard to be borne, but that is no reason for overwhelming them with charitable gifts. It is a fact that many poor people who are as sorely stricken as the relatives of those who went down with the Princess Alice receive no help whatever from the public, not because the public begrudges them the needful help, but because the accidents from which they suffer are not of sufficient magnitude to attract notice. If it were possible to suggest a means by which a general relief fund could be established, it would be better than the present plan of appealing to the public only when a great catastrophe happens, for then the inequality with which the Charity of the public is distributed would pass away. For this reason also we are content that the motions made at the Quarterly Courts of the Boys' and Girls' Schools respectively, for the admission without election of a son and daughter of the late Brother Charles Jardine were ruled down. Every Freemason deeply sympathises with Mrs. Jardine and her little ones, so suddenly and so sadly deprived of their husband and father, but our sympathy with them would not justify us in being guilty of an injustice to others who have been bereft in like manner, though not under such painful circumstances.

QUARTERLY COURT OF THE GIRLS' SCHOOL.

THE Quarterly Court of the Governors and Subscribers to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls was held last Saturday, at Freemasons' Tavern. Bro. Lieut-Colonel Creaton was called to the chair. The Chairman moved, that a sub-committee consisting of five members of the General Committee be appointed to take into consideration the desirability of revising the bye-laws, and report thereon to the Quarterly Court in January next. Bro. S. Rawson seconded the motion; but Bro. Joshua Nunn moved as an amendment, which was seconded by Bro. C. F. Matier, "That the sub-committee for the revision of the bye-laws be increased to at least nine members;" and this amendment meeting with the approval of the brethren, Bros. McIntyre, Clabon, Nunn, Rucker, Boyd, Griffiths Smith, Col. Creaton, Le Feuvre and J. L. Hine were appointed as the sub-committee. The following motions were also agreed to:—"That four girls be elected at the October Quarterly Court instead of three, thereby filling up a vacancy caused by death;" "That the amount paid as an honorarium to the chaplain be increased from £20 to £25 per annum, also, that to the parochial charities from £5 to £10 per annum;" and "That the premiums on the Secretary's guarantee be paid by the Institution." An exceptional case having arisen by the untimely death of Bro. Charles Jardine (a member of the Audit Committee of this Institution), through the late fatal collision on the Thames, whereby a widow and nine children are left unprovided for, Bro. Joshua Nunn moved, "That the laws regulating the admission of candidates to this Institution be suspended for the purpose of admitting Cecily Sara Jardine, aged eight years, one of the said orphans from that catastrophe, without election." This resolution, however, was opposed by several brethren, as not being within the power of the Court. The chairman having appealed to Bro. McIntyre, Q.C., for his opinion, Bro. McIntyre, after reading the law referred to, decided that the Court had not the power to suspend the laws. Upon the recommendation of the General Committee the Court granted a gratuity of £20 to G. S. Peachy, for attention and assistance, as extra services, during the late Secretary's illness. Bro. H. Hacker's motion, "that the name of Edith Brown, No. 21 on the list of candidates for election, be struck out as ineligible," was lost, the brethren holding that her father was not in receipt of such pay as would take her out of the rules. The brethren then proceeded to the election of four girls out of an approved list of twenty-nine candidates.

QUARTERLY COURT OF THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

A QUARTERLY General Court of the Governors and Subscribers to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys was held on Monday, at Freemasons' Tavern, Colonel Creaton, Vice Patron and Trustee, in the chair. The brethren passed a resolution to elect thirteen, instead of eleven boys, out of a list of sixty-five approved candidates at this meeting. Bro. R. B. Webster, in consequence of the ruling of Grand Registrar at the Quarterly Court of the Girls' School, the previous Saturday, withdrew his motion to suspend the laws of the Institution, and admit Arthur George Jardine into the School without election. Subsequently Brother Binckes informed the Court that he had received a telegram from the Rev. Dr. Cox, to the effect that the Committee of the Mansion House Fund had decided to buy this boy into the School, and one of his sisters into the Masonic Girls' School. Col. Creaton's motion, "That a sub-Committee of five members of the General Committee be appointed to take into consideration the advisability of a revision of the laws; that such Committee be empowered to confer with a similarly appointed Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, and to report thereon to the Quarterly Court in January next," being brought forward, it was suggested that in lieu of "five," the word "nine" should be substituted, and in the amended form the motion was carried. Colonel Creaton was elected a trustee of the General Fund, in place of Bro. John Symonds, resigned. On the motion of Bro. Raynham Stewart, seconded by Bro. W. Roebuck, a vote of thanks to Bro. John Symonds was afterwards passed, for his efficiency as a trustee, the vote also conveying the expression of a wish that his health would soon be restored. The result of the election of boys will be found elsewhere.

Truths about Whisky. London: Printed by SUTTON, SHARPE & Co. 145 Queen Victoria-street, E.C. 1878.

WHEN Sir Wilfred Lawson and his fellow-advocates of total abstinence from liquors shall have succeeded in converting their countrymen to their views, the necessity for the publication of a work of this description will have passed away. But the time when the British public are likely to be influenced by the eloquent voice of the Lawsonian charmer is still remote, and it may be doubted if it ever will arrive, though the world should last for another thousand or so of centuries. Till, then, we are all converted to teetotalism, it is unquestionably to the interest of the public that the liquors we imbibe should be of the purest and most unsophisticated character. If whisky happens to be our particular vanity—and there are not a few who are prepared to swear by it as the vanity of all vanities—it is desirable we should have it as pure as possible. Whisky-drinkers, therefore, both North and South of the Tweed, as well as on the other side of St. George's Channel, will welcome this publication most heartily. It has been written at the instance of the four well-known firms of Whisky Distillers, Messrs. John Jameson and Son, Wm. Jameson and Co., John Power and Son, and George Roe and Co., who for the last two years have been using their utmost exertions to check the practice of those fraudulent traders by whom silent spirit, variously disguised and flavoured, is sold under the name of Whisky; and they consider their efforts are likely to be more successful, in the first place, if their own position in the trade is known; and in the next, if what constitutes true Whisky is thoroughly and generally understood by the British public. To this end, they state in Chapter I. their position as Whisky Distillers, and having done this they go on to speak of the qualities and popularity of genuine Dublin Whisky, the peculiarities of the Dublin manufacture—all the four firms hail from the capital of Erin—the question of patent stills and silent spirit, the growth of silent spirit into sham Whisky, the relative wholesomeness of the two, the action of the official and parliamentary authorities, "Racking in Bond—the Gregging Question" and "Whisky Frauds outside the Bonded Warehouses." We must not be understood as possessing more than a general knowledge of the subject, and it is on this ground only that we can venture upon the opinion that the contents of this book will prove valuable to the reader. However, the reader will doubtless ask himself this very pertinent question—who can speak with greater authority on the subject of Whisky than the firms who have had this book published. They are engaged in the business of distilling, and are interested, therefore, in having their Whisky as pure and unadulterated as possible. They suffer from the action of the fraudulent tradesmen who sell what is Whisky in name only, and they are fully justified, therefore, in doing all they can to guard the public against buying adulterated liquor. Thus the public is deeply indebted to the Jamesons and their co-adjutors in this work for the pains they have taken to enable it to distinguish the pure from the impure, the good from the bad or the indifferent. Four illustrations accompany the work and will give the reader some idea of the extent of the business transacted by each of the four firms which share among themselves the honours and responsibilities of the authorship of these "Truths about Whisky."

Poverty of India. BY DADABHAI NAOROJI. London: Printed by Vincent Brook, Day and Son, Gate-street, Lincoln's Inn Fields 1878.

THE title of this little pamphlet is somewhat startling, the general public being under the impression that India is a mine of wealth. We know that it has a very large revenue that its manufactures are numerous and considerable, and that its mineral and agricultural resources are enormous. At the same time it is undeniable that in so densely populated a country there must necessarily be a large amount of poverty, especially if we bear in mind the character of its climate. We have had a recent and most terrible illustration of this in the shape of the famine which raged in so many districts, and caused so terrible a sacrifice of life. What makes it still worse is the fact that these lamentable visitations occur at comparatively frequent intervals, and though, as the railway system is more largely developed, we may look forward to the day when the effects of these famines will be far less severely felt, still there is no doubt that great misery and distress, the inevitable result of much and widespread poverty, does and will for some time to come prevail in our Indian Empire. How to lessen this poverty is the object Mr. Naoroji has had in view in writing this pamphlet, and he has certainly brought together a mass of varied and important information on the subject. This information is well and methodically arranged. The statistical matter, which is conspicuous throughout, is derived from the best and most authentic sources. What is still more to the point is, that having shown how great is India's poverty, and the cause to which is is attributable, he suggests a means by which it may be remedied. Whether the means proposed will secure the desired object is a question we cannot take upon ourselves to affirm. It is, however, well worthy the consideration of all right-thinking men. The book, though on a painful subject, is highly interesting, and the reader will gather from it much information which is not easily accessible to the general public. We thank Mr. Naoroji for his courtesy in forwarding us a copy of this pamphlet.

SHAKSPERE AT SCHOOL.—So our chestnut-haired, fair, brown-eyed rosy-cheekt boy went to school, and waited on his father and mother and their guests. Was he like Seager's model lad, or Jaques's "whining school-boy, with his satchel and shining morning face creeping like a snail unwillingly to school"? (As You Like It, II. vi 146-7. Did he never, unlike "the blessed sun of heaven, prove a micher [truant], and eat blackberries? . . . a question to be askt" (1 Henry IV., II. iv. 419). Did he not play "nine-men's morris"? (Midsummer-Night's Dream, II. ii. 39). and "more sacks to the mill," "hide and seek," (Love's Labours Lost, IV. iii. 78), and other games like hockey, foot-ball, &c., that Strutt names, and that we played at school too? Undoubtedly he did; and birds-nested too, I dare say, and joined in May-day, Christmas, and New Year's games: helpt make hay, went to harvest-homes and sheep-shearings (Winter's Tale, IV. iii.), fisht (Much Ado, III. i. 26-8), ran out with the harriers (Venus and Adonis, st. 113-118), and loved a dog and horse (Venus and Adonis, st. 44-52; Midsummer-Night's Dream, IV. i. 119; Merc. Ind. i. 18-31, II. 45; Richard II., V. v. 78-86; 1 Henry IV., II. i. 7, &c.), as dearly as ever boy in England did. It is good to think of the bright young soul's boy-life.

What did Shakspere learn at school? Latin, of course; and notwithstanding bragging Ben Jonson's sneer of Shakspere's owning "little Latin and less Greek," it is clear that he must have been well grounded in Latin at least (see Capel on Dr. Farmer's essay on "The Learning of Shakspere," 1767). On this subject, Mr. Lupton, the editor of Colet, the best authority I know, says:—"I think you would be safe in concluding that at such a school as Stratford, about 1570, there would be taught—(1) an 'A B C book,' for which a pupil teacher, or 'A-B-C-darius' is sometimes mentioned as having a salary; (2) a Catechism in English and Latin, probably Nowell's; (3) the authorised Latin grammar, i.e., Lilly's put out with a proclamation adapted to each king's reign (I have editions of 1529, 1532, 1665, &c.); (4) some easy Latin construing-book, such as Erasmus's Colloquies, Corderius's Colloquies, or Baptista Mantuanus, and the familiar 'Cato,' or Disticha de Moribus, which is often prescribed in Statutes (a copy I have is dated 1558). The Greek grammar, if any in use at Stratford, would most likely be Clenard's, i.e. 'Institutiones absolutissimæ in Græcam linguam' . . . Nicolao Clenardo auctore (my copy is dated 1543)." The treatment of boys at school was sharp, and Shakspere, no doubt, got whacks on the hands and back with a cane—to say nothing of being bircht over a desk, or hoisted on another boy's back—for making mistakes, like the rest of us in later time. English, we may be pretty sure, he was not taught; it is now only gradually finding its way into schools. Of some of the university subject, the trivials—grammar, "logike, rhetorike,—and the quadriuials . . . I meane arethmetike, musike, geometrie, and astronomie" (Harrison, 1577-1587, book ii., p 78, of my edition), I suppose some smattering was given in the grammar-school, but I know no authority on the point.—From Mr. J. Furnivall's Introduction to "The Leopold Shakspere" for October.

RETURN OF THE PILGRIMS.

ST. GEORGE'S HALL, Philadelphia, was a scene of unsurpassed brilliancy on Thursday evening, 3rd October, the occasion being the reception banquet to the members of Mary Commandery, K.T., No. 36, and their friends who accompanied them on their recent pilgrimage to Europe. Long before the hour announced for the supper, the spacious waiting rooms were filled with lovely women and gallant Sirs, to the number of four hundred and fifty, anxiously awaiting the signal for their pilgrimage to the haunts of Epicurus. Promptly at eight o'clock the long line, headed by the officers of the Commandery, passed up into the beautiful banqueting hall above, and after a blessing by the Rev. Joseph Welsh, were soon seated. Every effort was made by the committee to make the affair home-like and agreeable, and certainly the presence of the ladies considerably heightened the pleasure, and added not a little to the elegant scene. The room was appropriately decorated with flags, banners, ensigns bearing the symbols of the Order, while the tables were profusely ornamented with beautiful pyramids of fragrant flowers. Five long tables extended the length of the hall—and also one across the room, all of which were abundantly laden with every desirable edible. At the latter table were seated the officers of the Commandery, the guests and their ladies. After doing full justice to the bountiful repast, E. Sir James S. Barber introduced the presiding officer of the evening, Sir Andrew Robeno, P.E.C., who made a lengthy and touching address of welcome, in which he thanked the ladies for their presence, and said, although he was not accustomed to seeing the fairer sex at Masonic dinners, yet he was forced to admit that their attendance this evening had greatly intensified the pleasure of all. Referring to the absence of wines and other intoxicating drinks, the speaker said that intemperance and Christian chivalry should never go hand in hand, and Mary Commandery was determined they should not on this occasion. The president then introduced Sir James S. Barber, E.C., who spoke of the parting scenes of the Pilgrims, and described the routes taken by them, and after bidding them a hearty welcome he proposed, "Our brethren of the old world," which was responded to by Sir Charles E. Meyer, P.E.C., in which he gave a glowing description of the hospitable manner in which they were treated during their pilgrimage. He thought it a happy coincidence that after such a grand reception which they received in old England, they should return home and be so cordially received and enthusiastically welcomed under the roof of St. George's Hall, the home of the Englishmen of Philadelphia. Sir Harry R. Coulomb, Generalissimo, in a short but pleasing address introduced Sir Daniel Sutter, P.E.C., who gave a lengthy and pleasing account of their travels through Paris, Brussels, Antwerp, &c. Sir Americus R. Underdown, Captain General, was then called upon, who, in a humorous and happy vein, proposed a sentiment to Switzerland, which was replied to by Sir Charles Matthews jun., in an exhaustive description of their tour through that beautiful country. Other speeches were made by Sir Joseph Zane, Sir M. Richards Muckle, P.E.C., and others. The speeches were interspersed by vocal and instrumental music, which was rendered in excellent style. The committee of arrangements, of which P.E.C. Sir William H. Heck was chairman, deserve unqualified praise for the management of this, one of the grandest affairs ever held in Philadelphia.—Philadelphia Evening Star.

Trade Trickery and the "Louis Velveteen."—A victim of imposition, J. M. Ward, thus writes to the Courier, as a warning to ladies shopping:—"I was the other day made the victim of an imposition, which I fear is largely practised by tradesmen, especially drapers. I entered what I believed to be a respectable shop, for the purpose of making several purchases. Among other things that I wanted was some 'Louis Velveteen,' which I had seen favourably noticed in a daily paper, and which had been specially recommended to me by a lady friend. I was shown an article of this description, purporting to be what I required. Thinking the appearance of the material very good, and being assured by the assistant that it was the 'Louis Velveteen,' I completed my purchase, and left. On the following day my friend saw the velveteen I had purchased, when she at once pronounced it to be a comparatively worthless imitation. Such frauds upon the public can only be safely guarded against by the use of trade-marks, and I would recommend ladies who require any special article to ascertain whether it should bear any such mark, and, if so, to see that it does. Too late—for the draper positively declined to take back the material—I discovered that the velveteen I wanted is stamped every seven yards on the reverse side with the name ('The Louis Velveteen') in plain letters. Had I known this at the time, of course I could have protected myself against the plausible misrepresentations of the young man before whose suave assurances I fell a victim. Such frauds hurt both ways—the deluded purchasers and the manufacturers (reputation) of an article which the press had done much to bring into public demand."

The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and found correct, were ratified. The W.M. resigned his seat in the East to Bro. Beresford P.M., who advanced the Lodge to the 2nd degree, and conferred the degree of Fellow Craft on Bro. Bell, performing his task in a very able manner. The Lodge was lowered, and Bro. Schofield resumed the gavel. The business of the evening being ended, the Lodge was closed in harmony, and the brethren, by request of the W.M., adjourned to refreshment. Bro. Schofield proposed the first toast, the Queen and the Craft, which was duly honoured, and the succeeding toast of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family was most heartily drank. The next which was given was the R.W. the Prov. G. Master, Lord de Tabley, and the Prov. G. Officers Past and Present. This also was drank most cordially with musical honours. Bro. Booth favoured the brethren with a song. Bro. Col. Wilkinson replied; he was followed by Bro. Beresford. Bro. Finch proposed the health of the newly passed Brother, and kindly responded to the call for a song. Bro. Bell returned his best thanks. The W.M. next gave the health of the Officers of the Lodge, which was warmly received. Bro. Balfe kindly conduced to the harmony of the evening by singing the next song. Brother Senior Warden responded; he expressed his sincere thanks for the manner in which the toast had been received. The Officers always tried to do their duty, and in the effort they were successful. Bro. Junior Warden also followed, with a few remarks to the same purport, and several of the Officers added a few words. Bro. Beresford, by request of the W.M., rose to propose the toast of the Visitors; he did so by expressing the great pleasure he felt in extending a hearty welcome to those brethren who had favoured them with their company. After the visiting brethren had replied, Bro. Col. Wilkinson proposed the health of the W.M., which was most heartily received and gracefully responded to. W. Bro. Finch, by permission of the Worshipful Master, assumed control of the gavel; he had to propose a toast which it had never been his privilege to do before, and a privilege that might never occur again. We have here a brother who has come a long way to visit us, and as a brother and a representative of the Masonic press we are delighted to welcome him. The applause which greets this announcement shows me that you greatly appreciate the importance of this toast. The press is a mighty means of diffusing knowledge, and with the freedom of the press is associated the liberty of a nation. He regretted that so few Masons read. There are great advantages to be derived from the careful perusal of such a journal as the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE. His (the speaker's) acquaintance with that journal had extended over a long period, and he always enjoyed and appreciated its contents very much. It was a journal he could commend to each of those present most heartily. The worshipful and worthy brother continued his remarks by speaking of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE in the most complimentary and appreciative manner, and concluded by again urging the brethren to a more extended knowledge of the working of the Craft through reading Masonic literature, and by calling upon the brethren to drink most fraternally to the health of Bro. Davies. Bro. Davies, in response to the last toast, which had been most enthusiastically received, spoke at length. He congratulated the worshipful brother on the highly appreciative sentiments which actuated him to propose the toast in such a kind and able manner, and also the brethren who had done honour to him personally by receiving his name in connection with the journal he had the honour to represent. A very pleasant social chat was enjoyed, after which the Tyler's toast brought a thoroughly edifying evening to a close. Besides those already mentioned, Bros. Bradley, Booth, Meadows, and others, contributed by their vocal efforts to amuse the company.

A distressed brother was relieved with the sum of 10s 6d. A letter was read from Bro. A vote of thanks was proposed and carried, thanking him for his kindness. The Lodge was closed, and the brethren, seventy-two in number, sat down to banquet. Grace having been said, the W.M. proposed the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts. Bro. E. P. Albert P.G.P., in responding to that of the Grand Officers, said he had so often spoken in response to this toast, that he could do little but thank them. He was proud of occupying the office of P.G.S. of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and of being Proxy Master of the Mauritius. Only yesterday he his heard of being elected honorary member of a Lodge in the island of Mauritius, under the constitution of the Grand Lodge of Ireland. The toast of the Benevolent Fund was responded to by Bro. Alexander P.M. and President. He was pleased to hear from the brethren that they had now the sum of £1,400. Since 1849 they had relieved brethren of the Lodge with various grants, ranging from £100 downwards. He hoped the fund would go on increasing, and none of those present ever be in a position to require its help. The W.M. then proposed the Visitors. He was pleased to see so many brethren, not only from London, but also from the country. He alluded to the French Freemasons inviting the members of the various Constitutions to a meeting in Paris on 24th October. He called on Bros. Hudson and I. P. Cohen to respond. Bro. I. P. Cohen replied in a neat speech, and was followed by Bro. Hudson, who was proud to hear that the Benevolent Fund had reached the amount it had. Bro. L. Alexander P.M. then proposed the health of the W.M. He stated that he had been a member of the Lodge for twenty-seven years; they had not yet had an opportunity of seeing the working of the W.M., but he was sure they would be gratified when they did. The W.M. replied, and then proposed the Past Masters. They had a number present, and he would call on Brother H. M. Levy to respond. This speaker was followed by Bro. S. Hickman. The W.M. then proposed the toast of the Wardens, Bros. M. Spiegel and Hyman, who he hoped to see in the chair. The Tyler's toast concluded an agreeable evening. The Visitors were—Bros. E. M. The Lodge then was lowered to the first degree, and the annual elections proceeded with, with the following unanimous result: Bros. J. S. Cumberland W.M., G. Balmford P.M. Tr. (re-elected), Bro. P. Lodge on the previous Thursday, and had received the office of P.G.D. of C., and he was glad to inform the brethren that the P.G. Lodge meeting next year would be held at York, under the banner of the Eboracum Lodge. He also explained the formation of a Provincial Committee of Charity, as adopted by P.G. Lodge, and said that at the next meeting the Lodge would have to nominate a representative for that Committee. The W.M. then, in the name of Bro. Clifford P. MacCalla, of Philadelphia, an eminent Mason, and editor of the well-known Keystone, presented to the Lodge his recently published works, "Wonders of Operative Masonry," and "Philadelphia, the Mother City of Masonry in America." F. RATH & Co.'s IMPROVED PATENT GAS BOX IRON.

PERFECTION IN IRONING FOR EVERY SPECIES OF FABRIC.

Great Saving in Expense and Labour.

The price being only 22/, it is the Cheapest Iron in the trade, and can be had at all Ironmongers in the United Kingdom.

F. RATH & Co.'s IMPROVED GAS BOX IRON is extremely simple in its construction, and cannot get out of order; the merit of the invention is, that the heat produced from the burning gas is thrown on to the steel plate which covers the bottom surface, none being allowed to pass off in waste.

Three times the amount of work ordinarily executed can be done by the use of these Irons, which have now been in use in extensive Manufactories long enough to thoroughly prove their merits and evidence their entire success. They are as suitable for Family Use as for the Work-room, the Manufactory, or the Laundry.

FREEMASONRY IN THE PROVINCE OF NORTH WALES AND SALOP.

THOSE who have had the largest amount of experience in, and are therefore the best qualified to undertake the task of, writing the history of any Institution, are perfectly well aware that an intimate acquaintance with it in all its various forms and phases is essential, if the sketch is to be anything more than a simple aggregation of dry, hard, and valuable, yet very uninteresting, facts. Haydn's Dictionary of Dates is a most valuable work, and no student of history should be without it; but no one would think of describing it as a pleasant book to read. No one who was anxious to pass an hour or two in light agreeable converse with one of our literary worthies—we mean, of course, a converse with him through the medium of his works—would select for the purpose, this or a Cyclopædia, or any other work of a similar character, that is, most valuable, but among the driest of the dry. No one can possibly place a higher value than we do on the immense importance of every student of history possessing an accurate knowledge of dates and facts, but they are only the dry bones of history. They are as necessary as the lines, both straight and curved, are to the picture, but it is the matter with which the outline or skeleton is filled in which constitutes the real attraction. In order that a history may be made complete we must learn something of the nature of the subject. If, for instance, it is some such Institution as Freemasonry we are desirous of studying, it is desirable to know as well its nature and the class of people who profess it, as that it was established in such a year and place, and has had such and such princes and nobles presiding over its destinies at such and such periods. We are, or should be, anxious to know if Masonry differs in different parts even of the same country, as well as what constitutes such difference and whence it may have arisen. It is also desirable we should make acquaintance with its members in different localities, so that we may judge for ourselves if Freemasonry is really the benign Institution it is proclaimed and claims itself to be. When we enter a previously unvisited country, we do not concern ourselves particularly as to the form of its government or the date of its newest constitution. We are indifferent as to the time when Christianity may have been introduced into it. What we do concern ourselves to learn is, the kind of people we are amongst for the first time, what are their manners and customs, what their national peculiarities, what their arts and manufactures, what their products and resources. Some of the spots we may see during our travels may possess interesting historical associations. These assuredly are not overlooked, nor do they lessen the attractions of the visit, but increase it rather. If we run over to Paris, for instance, it is not for the purpose of verifying the fact by the mouth of its inhabitants that it was besieged by the Germans in 1870-1. We go, it may be for business, or it may be for pleasure, and if we turn our visit to account, we shall assuredly note the idiosyncrasies of Parisian life, and compare our new with our old experiences. In this way we increase our knowledge of human nature, and a great poet has told us

"The proper study of mankind is man."

Similarly, we should not visit a remote Province of our English Freemasonry for the purpose of ascertaining when the Institution was first introduced into it, and what have been its vicissitudes. We can do this as well in London. But being Masonic students, and wishing to know what, if any, are the local peculiarities and associations by which this or that town or Province are distinguished, we visit it, and, by intermingling with our brethren we have no difficulty in acquiring the needed information. Some such reason as this must have influenced us in the spring of this year, and impelled us to visit the Province of North Wales and Salop. A reference to Grand Lodge Calendar would have told us the names, numbers, localities, and in the majority of cases, the dates of constitution of its Lodges. Preston, or the officials in Grand Secretary's office, would, doubtless, have informed us of its rise and progress in this Province, but then we should not have been much wiser when we had done all this. We should not have been able to form a just and adequate idea of what Freemasonry was like in this important and extensive district. We should not have known if it was or was not diligently pursued by the members; if the working was or was not satisfactory; if the laws and regulations of the Craft were well or ill observed. In short, our visit to the Province has made all the difference between a vague and an intimate knowledge of it and its Freemasonry. Without having pried into matters which in no wise concerned us, we have been able to form a fairly just estimate of the merits of our North Welsh and Salopian brethren. Before we went amongst them we assumed they were good fellows, now we know them to be such. Last year we knew there were in it some five-and-twenty Lodges, scattered over a very considerable extent of country. Now we can boast that we have visited every one of these five-and-twenty Lodges, widely scattered as they are from one another, that we have watched with interest the mode of working in each, and are well informed, or at least are not incapable of forming a pretty accurate opinion, of the different degrees of enthusiasm which prevail in different parts of the Province. There seems to have been some idea that a visit of inspection in the case of so extensive a district was out of the question; the fact of our having visited all the Lodges which are comprised within its limits is direct evidence to the contrary. Moreover, in the early part of our visit we gave currency to a report, based on statements made by many well-informed and earnest brethren, whose opportunities of forming an opinion upon a matter of fact had been considerable, to the effect that the supervision of the Province by those in authority was not what it might and should be. Having done this, we were in duty bound to see if the report in question was or was not well founded, and it occurred to us that a visit of inspection was the likeliest means to enable us to judge for ourselves whether it was so. We regret the result of our experiences is unfavourable to the withdrawal of the report. We should much have preferred to have been able to retract our statement, made though it was on such excellent authority; but officials cannot be absolved from the charge of neglect of duty simply because they undoubtedly possess great amiability, and, indeed, most of those qualities of the heart and mind which cause men to be admired and esteemed by their fellows. Were we to regulate our statements and opinions by the wish, we trust we in common with other Masons possess, we should pass unnoticed all shortcomings, all dereliction of duty. But then we should ourselves be wanting, and therefore blameworthy. Still our readers are invited to bear in mind that if we note a fault, we do so in no unkindly spirit, but simply because we see that to wink at the perpetration and continuance of error is harmful to Freemasonry. But our remarks have already extended to some length, and we shall merely add that in an early issue we purpose beginning the story of our excursion through North Wales and Salop, and the starting point will be—Shrewsbury.

OLD LODGES.

No. 45, STRONG MAN.—In investigating the early history of our oldest Lodges, it is obviously impossible to give in detail, the reasons which have satisfied one's own mind, of the identity of a Lodge of to-day, with its place and number on lists ranging backwards for more than a century. The case, however, of present No. 45 being a very representative one, some additional remarks on its history may not be deemed out of place. In the first instance, I would observe that its identification with No. 110 of 1729-39 seems to me absolutely certain. The fact would, I think, be clearly established from the evidence of the engraved lists alone, but the Constitutions of 1738 effectually dispel all doubt upon the subject. The following extract will make this evident:—

Nos.
68	Ship Coffee House	Near the Hermitage Bridge	2nd Feb. 173⅓
69	Theatre Tavern	Goodman's Fields	17th Feb. 173⅓

The numbers prefixed to these Lodges must be disregarded, as London Lodges only (such moreover as were not in arrear with their contributions) were shown in this list, but the dates are of the first importance, the manuscript containing them, prior to its adoption by Grand Lodge, having been submitted to Past Grand Masters Payne and Desaguliers, who, it is recorded, "signified their approbation after making some corrections." By the co-operation of these brethren, the statements therefore contained in this Book of Constitutions, possess a weight of authority which cannot be over-rated.

The variation of date from 2nd to 17th Feb. is immaterial, indeed the lists are full of such blunders, but the matter is, I think, capable of easy explanation. In 1756 the numbers were closed up by order of Grand Lodge, and the engraver, in carrying this into effect, must have pushed the date of No. 99 on the previous list (1755) one place higher than it should have stood, and thereby brought it alongside of No. 98 (present No. 45, Strong Man).

The original warrant of Constitution would of course be the best evidence of this Lodge's age, but a warrant of confirmation, such as there can be little doubt the Lodge is now working under, will only record the date ascribed to the Lodge in the then current calendar at the period of its issue.

No. 67, STAR IN THE EAST, Calcutta.—The early history of this Lodge is even more confusing than that of No. 45, since it occupies the place of what was a London Lodge up to 1745. In my note on this Lodge in the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE of 21st September, I showed that it suddenly appeared on the List in 1750, with a Constitution dating from 1740, being styled moreover the third Lodge of Bengal, implying there was a second, which latter, however, was conspicuous by its entire absence from the roll. I have recently succeeded in clearing up this mystery, which is fully explained in the following extracts from the minutes of Grand Lodge:—

April 3, 1747. "Received a letter by the ship Wager, dated 4th February 1745-6, from Capt. Robt. Hamilton, Master, and six other brethren, of the third constituted Lodge at Calcutta, in Bengal, directed to the Rt. Worshipful the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons in London, accompanied with a copy of their petition for a Constitution directed to the Rt. Worshipful Lechs. Gee P.G.M. of the Provincial Grand Lodge, in Calcutta, and also with a copy of the minutes of three of their Lodges, held 16th April 1740, the 10th Nov. 1745, and the 15th January 1745-6, which were read and purported as follows:—

That the second Lodge there being too numerous, they had separated from it, and the said 16th April 1740 were constituted into a new and regular Lodge.

That they had addressed the said Provincial Grand Lodge to know whether they had properly advised the Grand Lodge of England thereof but had received no satisfactory answer, and that they lately had strong reasons for conclu ing that their Constitution had never been transmitted to the Grand Lodge in London, and requested if it had not, that the same might be enrolled in the list of regular Lodges agreeable to the date of their Constitution.

That their Lodge had been regularly kept up, and that they had to the utmost of their abilities and judgement propagated the Craft, and had transmitted ten pounds to the use of the General Charity.

But the brother who was to speak to this affair being out of town, the consideration there of was deferred till he should be present."

Dec. 16, 1747. "The Letter from the Master and six other brethren of the third Constituted Lodge at Calcutta, in Bengal, accompanied with a copy of their petition to the P.G.M. in Calcutta, and of the minutes of three of their Lodges, which were received and read at the Q.C. held the third day of April last, purporting as in the minutes of the said Q.C. is mentioned (the consideration whereof was deferred, the Brother who was to speak to the same, being out of town), were again read and spoke to, when it not appearing that any advice had before been sent of their said Constitution.

Ordered—that the said Lodge at Calcutta be (as is requested) enrolled in the list of regular Lodges, agreeable to the date of their Constitution."

CANVASSING FOR OUR CHARITIES.

WE have been favoured with the following circular letter, addressed by Bro. Dick Radclyffe to his fellow members of the Etonian Lodge of St. John, No. 209, Eton, and presumably to brethren generally throughout England. Bro. Radclyffe has undertaken the duties of Steward at the Festivals next year of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution respectively. He is necessarily anxious to obtain as much support as possible, and in his circular he invites brethren to place their names on his list, either as Life Governors or Life Subscribers, or at least as annual Subscribers, using as an argument in favour of his appeal a statement we have heard used at other times,—that if each Mason in England would only give a guinea per annum to each of our three Charitable Institutions, there would be no call for Stewards, while the benefits thereof would be doubled. Bro. Radclyffe is, to a certain extent, and with certain reservations which we purpose noticing next week, right in his statement, but we caution him, in a friendly manner, against making this statement even in its present form without some qualification, or he may find it turned against him, and to his serious detriment. Let him say rather,—if every Mason would but give at least a guinea annually to each of the Charities; he will then leave no door open for escape from giving five, ten, or twenty guineas to those who are able, but not at all times willing, to do so. There are people who will regard his guinea as the maximum amount of each Mason's subscription, but Bro. Radclyffe must make it perfectly clear to every one, and beyond even the possibility of a doubt, that the guinea he is talking about is the minimum that must be given. As to his scheme for the issue of half-crown tickets, we commend it to the notice of our readers generally, as one which, in the hands of energetic brethren, has been, and no doubt will be again, productive of good to the Institutions in whose behalf they have been or may be issued. Many a man will think nothing of buying at odd times half-a-dozen shilling or half-crown tickets, especially when there is the chance attached to each ticket that he may become a Life Subscriber, when he would think twice, or even thrice, about giving even half a guinea at one time. And it is surprising how soon these small sums mount up to something considerable. We wish every success to our worthy Bro. Radclyffe's scheme, and have great pleasure in appending his letter, which reads as follows:—

129 High Holborn,
October 1878.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have much pleasure in informing you that I have undertaken to represent the Etonian Lodge of St. John, No. 209, at the ensuing Festivals of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution for Aged Freemasons and Widows of Freemasons.

Much has been said of late of the difficulty experienced by the Charities in raising sufficient funds to meet only part of the necessities, as all cases cannot be relieved and many candidates are turned away. Surely this is a reproach to a body of men whose "leading characteristic" is "Charity." It is estimated if every Mason in England were to give 21s per annum to each Institution (not a large sum to a man who can find several guineas for initiation fees, subscriptions, &c.), that the Charities would require no urgent appeals, nor need they turn candidates away, as the amount thus realised would be sufficient to double the establishments. Certainly it would prevent the trouble experienced in procuring Stewards, who would of then be required, and, therefore, no grumbles would reach us of the "hardships," "loss of time and money," so often seen in the weekly medicines, of those ready to excuse themselves from their responsibilities. Having undertaken the duties, I intend to do my utmost to procure a good list, and I call upon every brother to carefully consider the question of the Charities, and whether it is not a disgrace that so large and influential body of men should be begging simply because each and every Mason does not care to provide a guinea per annum. Let me now call upon you to start a new rule and a good example, by adding your name to my list as a Life Subscriber or Governor, or at least an Annual Subscriber.

As many of the "uninitiated or popular world" are charitably disposed, and admire our Charities, and would contribute small sums, especially with the chance of becoming a Life Subscriber, I have issued a series of tickets, 2s 6d each, which will entitle to one chance, and purpose allotting by ballot (this to take place under the superintendence of five members of the Etonian Lodge at the Audit Committee meeting) a Life Subscribership for the Institution for every five guineas thus realised. I think this method would be acceptable to many outside the body of Masons, I therefore ask you to undertake the distribution of tickets, and feel sure you will have no difficulty of disposing of at least a book of tickets, and relying on such sure support, I enclose a book of tickets, and shall have pleasure in sending as many more as you require.

It will be esteemed a special favour could you report on the last day of each month the progress made; and let me remind you if every Mason in England were to sell one book of tickets three years income at least would be secured.

Trusting this scheme will meet with your hearty co-operation, and that you will introduce it to your friends, as well as cordially support my canvass by adding your name to the undermentioned list.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

DICK RADCLYFFE,
Provincial Grand Steward Berks and Bucks,
J.W. 742, I.G. 209.
Unions Emulation of Improvement.

FREEMASONRY IN MASSACHUSETTS.

WE have received a copy of the Proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts at the regular Quarterly Communication, held in the Masonic Temple, Boston, on the 12th June last, and the Special Communication on the 24th of the same month. The Grand Master, Bro. Charles A. Welch, presided on the former occasion, and was supported by Bro. A. H. Howland jun. D.G.M., Will. H. Chessman Senior G. Warden, J. B. Sayles Junior G. Warden, J. McClellan G. Treasurer, Tracy P. Cheever as Recording Grand Secretary, other Past and Present G. Officers, and the representatives of a hundred and ten Lodges. Grand Lodge was opened in ample form, and in the absence of the R. Worshipful Recording G. Secretary, Bro. Rev. Chas. Titus, the G. Master, with the approval of Grand Lodge, appointed Bro. Cheever to act in his stead. Certain Bye-Laws were submitted for approval and referred to the Committee on Bye-Laws, who reported favourably of several of them, while in the case of others a few slight changes were deemed necessary, further time being requested in the case of one. The report was accepted. The petition for recognition by the so-called Grand Lodge of New South Wales having drawn forth an official remonstrance from the Grand Lodge of Scotland, the Committee appointed to report thereon proposed that its consideration be postponed till the next Quarterly Communication, and it was postponed accordingly. The rest of the business was of local interest, and the Lodge was closed in due course with the customary formalities. The Special Communication was held for the purpose of taking part in the services attending the transfer of the remains of the late Isaiah Thomas, Past Grand Master of the Massachusetts Grand Lodge, to Rural Cemetery, under the direction of the Municipal authorities of the City of Worcester, and in accordance with an invitation from those authorities. Bro. Charles A. Welch, Grand Master, presided, as on the former occasion, and the Deputy Grand Master, the Grand Wardens, Grand Treasurer, Recording Grand Secretary pro tem, and other Grand Officers were present. The Grand Lodge was opened in ample form in some commodious premises at Worcester, and in a short time afterwards its members were conducted to carriages and a procession was formed, in which the Hon. Benj. F. Thomas and family, with other relatives of the late Prov. Grand Master, and other distinguished citizens of Worcester took part, the Morning Star Lodge of Worcester, of which the late Bro. Isaiah Thomas had been the first W.M. preceding the civic portion. A number of Masonic bodies took part in the ceremony, which was a most impressive one. The Grand Master delivered an oration over the grave, the virtues of the deceased brother being justly eulogised. The re-interment then took place, after which Grand Lodge was closed, and the members were entertained at a pleasant collation by the Worcester brethren in their Masonic Hall. It should be added that the late Bro. Thomas was W.M. of the Morning Star Lodge of Worcester in the years 1793, 1794, 1797, 1799, 1801 and 1802, and Grand Master of Massachusetts for the years commencing 27th December 1802, 12th December 1803, and 10th December 1804. He died in the year 1831 at the ripe age of eighty-two.

LEWIS LODGE, No. 1185, WOOD GREEN.

THE installation meeting was held on Saturday, at the Kings Arms Hotel. The members were summoned for 4 p.m., but in consequence of an accident that occurred to the train in which the W.M. and several of the brethren were repairing to their rendezvous, considerable delay arose. This was much to be regretted, as with this exception the day's proceedings were of an unusually interesting character. Lodge was opened by the W.M., Bro. William Sayer, who was supported by his Officers, Past Masters, and the following Visitors:—Bros. T. J. Maidwell W.M. 27, F. T. Froom W.M. 65, W. Groome W.M. 1662, T. Franklin S.W. 1662, W. W. Medcalf S.W. 1671, T. W. C. Bush J.W. 1728, W. G. Hallows S.D. 811, W. E. Gomperts J.D. 869, A. J. Stanton D.C. 1489, Jas. S. Fraser D.C. Sincerity, H. Field I.G. 1602, Thos. Lawrence 22, Jones 65, T. H. Redman 340, T. Richardson 862, C. H. Fisher 1489, and W. W. Morgan 211. After the minutes had been read and confirmed, the ballot was taken for two candidates for our mysteries—Messrs. Henry James Billing and Josiah George Doree. It resulted satisfactorily, and both gentlemen being present, they were introduced and initiated by the W.M., who performed his task in a very careful manner. W. Bro. Cover P.M. then introduced Bro. Thomas W. Bone as the W.M. elect. A very praiseworthy rule is maintained in this Lodge; that is, that the outgoing Master shall instal his successor. Bro. Sayer we have known for some years, ever as a painstaking, earnest student, and we knew well that he would make himself competent to fulfil this crowning act of a Master of a Lodge. Bro. F. Binckes P.M. P.G.S. was invited to the S.W.'s chair, while Bro. Cover P.M. P.G.P.Reg. Essex occupied that of J.W. The obligation was then taken by Bro. Bone, and the ceremony was completed. On the readmission of the brethren the appointment of Officers was made:—Bros. James William Berrie S.W., George D. Hooper J.W., Captain Alfred Durrant P.M. Treas., Thomas H. Turner P.M. Sec., Charles E. Lloyd S.D., Thomas Harrison J.D., James R. Tollis I.G., Rev. Dr. Richard Morris, M.A. Oxon, LL.D. Chaplain, Frederick C. Pelton D.C., Kennett Harris W. Steward, C. T. Speight Tyler. Bro. Sayer then delivered the addresses, and amid the congratulations of the brethren, took his seat as I.P.M. of the Lodge. Routine business then commenced, and the name of a candidate for initiation was handed in. Attention was then drawn to the fact that by the Bye-Laws of the Lodge, the cost of one banquet was set apart for Charity. This being so, it was proposed and seconded that the sum of ten guineas be placed on Bro. Dr. Morris's list as Steward for the next Festival of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, and five guineas be voted towards the expenses of a former pupil of the School, by name Bryant, who had been advised to try his fortune as a student at Cambridge. Bro. Cover, without, however, exhibiting the slightest opposition to the proposal, having inquired why it was made at so early a date? it was stated that Bro. Morris was merely desirous of showing that he had made a commencement, and already had something on his list, and the motion was agreed to unanimously. Of course it will be easily understood why a preference is given by this Lodge to the Boys' School, seeing that it is located in immediate proximity to the Institution, and very many of the members have made it their business to become personally acquainted with the boys, and take a very deep interest in all that relates to them. It may also be mentioned that the Supreme Council of the A. and A. Rite are among the principal supporters of young Bryant in his desire to earn further distinction as a student, and have promised him assistance to the extent of £40 per annum for two years. But to proceed with our own notice. The death of a member was then announced, amid expressions of deep sympathy with his family, and also the resignations of three members, which were accepted, with regret. A petition was then brought before the Lodge on behalf a distressed brother, who was also one of its oldest members, and Bros. Waller, Hollingsworth and Binckes having spoken strongly in its favour, the whole of the balance in hand of the Lodge Benevolent Fund, amounting to £5 15s, was voted to him as a help in his time of distress, and it was further arranged that the contents of the Charity box, which turned out to amount to £4 9s, should likewise be handed over to the distressed member in question. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to an excellent banquet, which Bro. Greenslade had spared no pains or expense to place before them. It had the further advantage of being well served, and when the time came for the removal of the cloth, the satisfaction visible on the faces of those present was evidence enough that Bro. Greenslade had played the part of host right well. Unfortunately, owing to the accident we have already mentioned, it was late when the time came for dealing with the toast list, and all we can do is to give the propositions seriatim and leave our readers to imagine—as they will have not the slightest difficulty in doing—what would have been said in support and in response, had time allowed of speeches being made. The list included "The Queen and the Craft," "The M.W.G.M. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales," "The Rt. Hon. Earl of Carnarvon, the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, Pro and Dep. G. Masters, and the rest of the Grand Officers," "The Worshipful Master," "The Initiates," "The I.P.M.," "The Visitors," "The Masonic Charities," "The Officers," "The Press," and "the Tyler's toast." Only in the case of that of the W.M., proposed by Bro. Sayer I.P.M., and that of the I.P.M., proposed by the W.M., the toast of the Masonic Charities, to which Bro. Binckes responded, and that of the Press, in reply to which Bro. Morgan offered a few remarks, was there anything which could be looked upon in any way worthy of being accounted a speech. Bro. Binckes, indeed, not only spoke of his connection with the Charities, but likewise of his having been founder and first W. Master of the Lodge, while Bro. Morgan expressed the pleasure he derived from this recognition of the Press as a legitimate Masonic toast.

CONSECRATION OF THE ST. LEONARD LODGE, No. 1766.

SHOREDITCH, though embracing a somewhat large district, cannot be considered strong in Masonic Lodges, but if we are to judge from the number of brethren who assembled at the Town Hall on Tuesday, a vast array of members of the Craft are resident here or hereabouts. In our issue of the 31st August we notified that a warrant had been granted for this Lodge, and in due course our W. Bro. James Terry received instructions from the M.W. the Grand Master to take upon himself the duties of Consecrating Officer and the date named above was fixed for the ceremony to be performed. The W.M. designate, Bro. Louis Stean, is a veteran Mason; one who has served zealously and well; and now, after nearly fifty years activity (he was initiated in the year 1830), we find him ready to don his armour, and lead a new generation in their search after Masonic Light. The consecration was set down for four o'clock, when the members named in the warrant assembled, and amongst those who attended we were able to recognise the following brethren:—Bros. Jas. Terry P.G.J.W. Herts, W. T. Howe Grand Pursuivant, J. H. Hale W.M. 737 P.G.P. Norths and Hunts, J. B. Shackleton P.M. P.A.G.P. Middlesex, Chas. W. Cox J.W. 1564, E. T. T. Howe, Grand Pursuivant, to take the Senior Warden's chair, and Bro. W. H. Main that of the Junior Warden, while Bro. Wm. Clarke P.M. P.G.D.C. Suffolk—than whom we know of no brother who displays greater energy—acted as Director of Ceremonies. The musical arrangements had been entrusted to the English Glee Union, under the direction of Bro. Albert Hubbard, who on this occasion had the valuable assistance of Bros. G. Musgrave, H. Ashton, and F. H. Cozens. With all details thus provided for, with commodious premises, and well ventilated rooms, need we add that everything passed off most enjoyably. The proceedings at the consecration of a new Lodge have so frequently been particularised in our columns that, on this occasion, we need scarcely plead that demands on our space preclude our giving a fuller description. On the completion of the ceremony Bro. Terry installed Bro. Louis Stean as the first W.M. of the St. Leonard Lodge. Bro. Stean appointed the following as his Officers:—Bros. George T. Barr J.W. 907 S.W., Charles F. Barham P.M. 754 J.W., Charles Stevens P.M. Treasurer, Joseph Cox Secretary, E. Benjamin S.D., Jones J.D., Clements I.G., Gale D.C., Marshall W.S., T. C. Speight Tyler. Bro. Terry gave the address to the Master, and Bro. Clarke that to the Wardens; Bro. Terry then completed his labours by giving the address to the members. During the evening Bro. Terry, and those who had assisted him in the labours of the day, received the thanks of the Lodge for the services they had rendered, and it was intimated that at the first meeting a proposition that honorary membership be conferred on them would be brought forward. After the Visitors had paid the members the customary compliment, Brother Louis Stean closed his Lodge. The banquet, under the superintendence of the indefatigable Bro. Grist, was then served, and met with the unqualified approval of all who were present. On the removal of the cloth, the W.M. briefly introduced the Loyal toasts. In speaking to that of the M.W. the Grand Master, Bro. Stean remarked that we ought all of us to be proud of our present Grand Master, who was ever mindful of the best interests of Freemasonry. The first time he (the W.M.) had the opportunity of hearing a Grand Master speak, was many, many years ago; the Grand Master he referred to was the late Duke of Sussex. The Prince of Wales was a staunch supporter of our Institution, and all present would heartily drink to the toast. With the third toast, the Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and the rest of the Grand Officers, was associated the name of Brother W. T. Howe, who responded: In Lords Carnarvon and Skelmersdale we had two noblemen who were ever anxious to advance the principles of Freemasonry. For himself, it had given him infinite pleasure to be present that day, and he thanked the W.M. and Officers for the kindness he had met with, both in Lodge and at the banquet table. On Bro. Terry devolved the duty of proposing the health of the W.M. In doing so our esteemed brother turned his opportunity to account, and made some very happy allusions. Bro. Stean had been a Mason forty-eight years, and it was gratifying to know he felt himself capable of administering the affairs of a new Lodge. The brethren who had chosen him, might be congratulated; they had made a very happy selection, as their W.M. possessed a rare combination of qualities. He had ever been a good and zealous worker in the cause of Freemasonry, and a staunch supporter of the Charities. Due honour having been paid to the toast, Bro. Stean rose, and assured the brethren present that he fully appreciated the kind manner in which they had received his health. When he first presided over a Lodge, he had considered the position of Master as one which afforded him pleasure. He now had regard to its duties and responsibilities, as well as to the pleasure it gave him. He had carefully thought the matter over when invited to preside over a new Lodge, and the conclusion he had come to was, that if, after his protracted Masonic career, he were capable of doing so, it was his duty to undertake the office. He was satisfied the St. Leonard Lodge would show it was in its power to effect much good—more, indeed, than he had been able to effect. He trusted the seed sown that day would bear good fruit, and that the young Masons present on this occasion would find, when he was gone, that his prediction had been fulfilled—that the Lodge was equal to any in the Craft; that their subscriptions were as considerable as those of any other Lodge, and that every chair in the Lodge, not only those of the Master and Wardens, but likewise the Deacons' chairs, would represent a Vice-Presidentship of one or other of the Institutions. Bro. Stean then proposed the toast of the Consecrating Officers, and, in doing so, expressed his regret that the proposition to admit them as honorary members had been lost sight of. However, he assured them the omission would be rectified at their next meeting, as it was a compliment to which, from the admirable manner in which they had fulfilled their duties, they were most justly entitled. After "Molly Brierly" had been sung by Bro. Ashton, Bro. Clarke rose, and gratefully expressed his sense of the honour done to him and his colleagues, the thanks so cordially rendered being a sufficient reward for what they had done. He felt assured the day's proceedings would have a beneficial effect on all who had witnessed it. Masonry had a mission to fulfil. It was a glorious Institution, and inculcated thoughts and ideas which must benefit them one and all. Bro. Terry likewise responded, and expressed the pleasure it had given him to preside at the ushering into the world of a new Masonic baby—this being the 117th occasion on which he had been present. It had also been a source of satisfaction that he had installed Bro. Stean as W.M. of the St. Leonard Lodge; he was deeply impressed with the remarks that worthy and worshipful brother had made. Bro. Terry likewise referred to the approaching Festival of the Royal Benevolent Institution, and announced that Bro. Lieut.-Col. Le Gendre Nicholas Starkie, Prov. G. Master of East Lancashire, had kindly consented to preside on the occasion. This induced in him the hope that, with such a president, the result would be satisfactory, and that East Lancashire would loyally second the efforts of its chief. On Bro. Terry resuming his seat, Bro. Howe announced his intention, and others, to act as Steward at the Festival in question. Bros. Hale and Shackleton replied to the toast of the Visitors, and that of the W.M. of the Cosmopolitan Lodge was acknowledged by the W.M. in person, Bro. J. W. Taylor. The toast of brethren of other constitutions was coupled with the name of Bro. Lee, who expressed himself highly gratified that he had been present. He assured them that though his Lodge was some thousands of miles away, in Canada, there were good men and true in the Dominion, and their hearts beat warmly towards their brethren in all parts of the world. The toast of the Officers was briefly but suitably acknowledged by Bros. Senior and Junior Wardens, and shortly afterwards the Tyler's toast brought the proceedings to a close. We append the musical programme, and merely add that the several pieces were admirably given, and the efforts of the talented party justly appreciated. Four Part Song, "The Soldier's Love," Solo Bro. H. Ashton; Song, "I fear no Foe," Bro. A. Hubbard; Soldiers' Chorus from the Opera of "Faust;" Song, "Molly Brierly," Bro. H. Ashton; Song, "Sigh no more, Ladies," Bro. G. Musgrave; Four Part Song, "Come boys, drink;" Song, "The Thorn," Bro. F. H. Cozens; Song, "Tom Tough," Bro. A. Hubbard; Song, "Down by the Brook side," Bro. H. Ashton; Humourous Song, Bro. F. H. Cozens; Glee, "The Watchman."

CONSECRATION OF LODGE OF PROGRESS, No. 1768.

THIS ceremony was performed on 17th Oct., at Freemasons' Hall, by the V.W. Bros. John Hervey Grand Secretary, the Rev. E. J. Simpson P.G. Chaplain, H. G. Buss P.G. Treasurer Middlesex as Director of Ceremonies, Murton P.G.D. as S.W., Fenn P.G.D. as J.W. The musical arrangements were in the hands of a very able brother. In his opening remarks Bro. Hervey expressed unqualified satisfaction at being called upon to consecrate a Lodge every petitioner of which was a member, and in most cases a prominent working member, in the Emulation Lodge of Improvement, wherein he had held the office of Treasurer for over thirty years. He had no misgivings whatever that the rendering of the beautiful ceremonies of the Order would in any way suffer in the hands of the Officers designate, or that any candidate seeking Masonic light, in the Lodge of Progress, would fail to be impressed when the mysteries of Freemasonry were revealed to him in all their solemnity. An eloquent oration was delivered by the Rev. Bro. Simpson, of which the following is a summary:—"I have had much pleasure in complying with the request that I should assist as Chaplain at the Consecration of the Lodge of Progress, more especially as my old and excellent friend the Grand Secretary is the consecrating and installing Officer. I congratulate you on the happy choice you have made in styling yourselves the Lodge of Progress. I will take your title as a key to observations I am about to make, but let me premise these remarks are not intended to teach the experienced brethren here present any thing unknown, but rather to remind them and myself of some old facts and truths that may help us on the march of Progress. In the opening Chapter of the volume of the Sacred Law, we have the first record of Progress in matter. From chaos came the new created world. Mother earth, ever labouring for our good, furnished the materials to aid man, first with his tent, then the hut, the house, the tabernacle, and so on, until finally that grand masterpiece was completed, King Solomon's Temple at Jerusalem. Thus, to this day, the wonderful powers and properties of matter are being continually evolved. Let us take a short review of the Progress of Man. Though fallen from his first high estate, man, fashioned in the express imaare of his God, has made mighty progress in the restoration of that God-like image that was defaced. A long line of patriarchs, prophets, kings, and righteous men, in sacred history, attest this progress, while Plato, Aristotle, and many a great philosopher in profane history bear witness to the same. In modern days, we meet with many noble and remarkable instances of the like kind, all this moral, intellectual and religious progress tending to one great result, educating men for the Grand Lodge above. Again, with regard to the progress of Masonry, this has been great, especially of late years. The principles held by Masons are the foundation of all religious systems that acknowledge the one true and living God, which acknowledgment at once implies acting under a law, acting in the sight of the Law-giver, responsible belief, and a system of rewards and punishments. In no system is the arrangement from design more beautifully and significantly illustrative than in Freemasonry, it tells man of a happy present, and of a still happier future, and guiding his footsteps by the light of divine truth, points to those eternal mansions whence all goodness emanates. May this Lodge ever be guided by this light. Order, harmony, and proportion are the requisites of every building, spiritual, social and political, which would make any claim to perfection. Let us endeavour to unite ourselves by the principles of genuine philanthropy, so to build up ourselves in good works, and so to practise the doctrines taught by our noble Institution, that in whatever character we may appear in the world, we may faithfully perform our duty. Let us live as men, considering the great end for which the goodness of God created us, beseeching Him who ruleth the universe, and giveth order and motion to the heavenly bodies, that He would direct us in the true and right way, that our footsteps slip not, that He would promote still more and more that charity which is the bond of all virtue, and give us wisdom to contrive in all our undertakings, strength to support us in all difficulties, and beauty to adorn those heavenly mansions where His honour dwelleth." The ceremony of consecration being concluded, Bro. W. A. Dawson was presented for installation, and duly inducted into the chair of K.S., by Bro. Hervey, and received the salutations of the brethren. Bro. Legg was unanimously elected and invested as Treasurer, and the following Officers were appointed:—Bros. F. R. Spaull S.W., A. C. Spaull J.W., Hornblower Sec., Tattershall S.D., Duret J.D., Ockenden I.G., and Marvin M.C. Bros. Hervey, Simpson, Buss, Murton, Fenn and Richards, were elected honorary members. Bros. Smallpeice Secretary Emulation Lodge of Improvement, J. E. Hunt, Kentish, and other petitioning brethren were present, and also numerous visitors. Several propositions for joining, and for initiation were handed in, and all further business being despatched, the Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to supper, where the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, all speeches being commendably short. This Lodge will be worked on strict Emulation ritual, and proposes to dispense with banquets. The first regular meeting will take place on Wednesday next, 30th inst., at Freemasons' Hall.

MEETING OF THE LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

THE Lodge of Benevolence met on Wednesday evening, at Freemasons' Hall. There was not a large attendance of brethren, and the list of cases requiring relief was also small, there being but eighteen cases down. Bro. Clabon presided, and Bro. Joshua Nunn and Bro. James Brett were in their chairs as Senior and Junior Vice Presidents. Bros. Hervey, Buss, S. Rawson, J. M. Case, C. A. Cottebrune, H. Garrod, C. F. Hogard, F. Binckes, John Wright, Griffiths Smith, R. Halford, John Constable, W. Stephens, and L. Alexander were amongst the other brethren who attended. Fifteen of the eighteen new cases were relieved, the sum granted being £319. Three cases were deferred, the evidence of payment for two years not being considered sufficient. The recommendations to the Grand Master from last Lodge of Benevolence were confirmed. The business of the meeting was completed in two hours.

In Memoriam.

The Yarborough Lodge, No. 554, has sustained a severe loss in the somewhat sudden death of Bro. W. Hamilton, one of the P.M.'s, and some time Treasurer. The sad event occurred on Friday, the 18th instant, after a few days illness. The late Bro. Hamilton was well known at the east end of London, and was respected by a large circle of friends, for his manly, honest, and independent behaviour. He was a Life Governor of all the Institutions connected with our Order, and had served as Steward on several occasions. His remains were interred on Wednesday, the 23rd instant, at Abney Park Cemetery, in the presence of a numerous assemblage, amongst whom were Bros. Cotter, the W.M. of the Yarborough Lodge; Bros. Wynne, Middleton, Vasey, Kindred, Barnes, J. G. Stevens, Harrison, Brooks, Berry, Warman, Symes, Witts, Livermore, and Messrs. Watson, Shepherd, Cook, W. Taylor, &c.

DISPOSAL OF LODGE FUNDS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am obliged to your correspondent "OLD FILE," for his elaborate analysis of the first three balance sheets you have been kind enough to publish for me. The fact of totalling the three results makes the matter appear, if possible, even worse than before. I only hope that these or some other efforts will bring to a sense of shame some of the uncharitably disposed Lodges; it really is a matter that must eventually affect the good name of our ancient Fraternity. Several of my friends tell me that writing on this question is mere waste of breath. I trust in this respect they are not correct, or, if they are, it may be hoped that some measures will be found which will prove more successful.

No. 5.

I am informed that it is the intention of the members of this Lodge to vote a part of their funds to one of the Charities, but I think they are very much to blame for allowing a whole year to pass without actually doing so. It is all very well to satisfy oneself one year by saying, "I am saving up, and will give liberally," then the second year make the gift, and during the third year say, "I gave last year." This is an argument very often used, and one which I cannot describe as anything but a lamentably weak one.

Yours fraternally,

UNION JACK.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am rather amused to find that, whenever you take up with a subject which appears to attract more attention than usual, your London Masonic contemporary, who prides itself on being the only Masonic weekly in the country, takes an early opportunity of passing its opinion on the identical subject. Thus, for several weeks past, the subject of Lodge Funds has been discussed at some length in your columns. Last week the journal in question had a leader on it. This would not be worth noticing if it happened only now and then, but this is not the first time, by many, the same course has been pursued. As far as my experience goes, it seems to me that, in all the noticeable questions which have cropped up of late, you have taken the initiative, and your contemporary has played second fiddle. This hardly accords with its arrogant claim to be the Masonic weekly.

Fraternally yours,

CROW.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—After reading the letters under the above heading in your last issue, I thought the statements put forward were so much to the point, and unfortunately so true, that I determined to make use of them in pointing out to the members of my Lodge the way in which they were spending their funds. I accordingly took our last balance sheet with the intention of drawing up a kind of "brief," when I was struck by the similarity of certain amounts, and eventually found that my mother Lodge occupied an unenviable position in your columns. It is, I regret to say, the first of the Lodges that your correspondent "UNION JACK" published the balance sheet of. I of course thought that after such a discovery, it would hardly be necessary for me to go much further into the question, but that it would be better for me to use my efforts to get other of the members to view the matter in the same light as I do, and endeavour in the future to wipe away the stain of the past.

It may be asked,—Why did you not do something to have rendered such a statement as that presented an impossibility? I must plead guilty. In this, as in other matters, the old proverb, that "Every one's business is nobody's," is, I am afraid, the real cause of no money being voted. Each member left it to the other to propose a grant, and in the end no one undertook the duty.

Yours fraternally,

S.D.U.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The last balance sheet furnished by UNION JACK must not be placed in the same category with two of its predecessors. In fact, all things considered, the Chapter, in my humble judgment, shows well at the end of its financial year. There is a good balance to wind up with, and I should prefer to assume that had there been an equally good one at the commencement, something would have been done for one or other of the Charities. With only a fraction over £3 at the outset, it was wise to be on guard against too free an expenditure till the prospect of improvement was assured.

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

OLD FILE.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I regret I have not been able to reply to "UNION JACK'S" letters before. I am sorry to see he is of opinion that it requires some compulsory action to cause Lodges to subscribe, as I maintain it is their duty to do. As this difficulty does appear, would it not be an easy matter to compel every Lodge to subscribe, say, one-third of its subscriptions? If men are loath to give to the Charities, and only join Freemasonry for its pleasures, they would thus be compelled to support the Charities. It is often said that the honours of Grand and Provincial Grand Lodges are as easily obtained by Charity as by non-Charity subscribing brethren. If this be so, and as the purple is a distinction much sought for, surely this would be the proper weapon to wield in the cause of Charity. Make it compulsory for the brother who may be elected to Grand Lodge that his Lodge should annually subscribe a fair sum to the Charities, and also make it compulsory on him that he should serve as Steward to one of the Charities. As regards devoting all Lodge funds, I do not mean in their present amounts, as the Charities require nothing near such a sum; but let the subscriptions be limited; say, Lodge purposes, £2 2s; this would pay expenses, and leave a large balance for the Charities; banquet fund, £1 1s; simply to pay for festivities, and not make it compulsory for every one to join; and also to charge a higher fee for banquet where the member does not subscribe. I think these two funds would cause but little trouble, and the figures could be increased or decreased at will. The idea is simply to keep tavern bills apart from Lodge funds proper.

Another plan would be,—Let it be understood that all candidates who have been subscribing members should take precedence at elections. I feel sure if this question were ventilated a little more it would be of great benefit to the Charities. If "UNION JACK," or any other brethren interested, will forward their names and addresses, I can introduce a scheme which I trust will receive their hearty co-operation and approval. I feel it wants but very little to set the whole machinery in motion, and that it will soon be a thing of the past to find Lodges do not subscribe to the Charities.

The balance-sheet of Lodge ——, published in your issue of the 28th September, speaks for itself. Let the members strive to show an improvement by this time next year—Tavern Bills, say £36; Charity, £100! How much better it would look.

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

DICK RADCLYFFE.

THINGS ONE WOULD LIKE TO KNOW.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Will you or any of your readers kindly inform me if it is compulsory on the two Wardens of a Lodge to rise and keep standing during the time the Master is addressing the Lodge, whatever may be the subject of his communication?

Yours fraternally,

LONDON MASONIC CHARITY ASSOCIATION.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I should not attempt to intrude into the discussion respecting the Society just formed if circumstances had not, for many years, brought me into relations with voting Charities. Any experience I may have gained in this way certainly leads me to view with considerable apprehension the movements of the L.M.C.A. The essence of the voting system is the individual interest taken by subscribers in the candidates for whom they vote; and as nothing can be more likely to stifle this individual interest than the delegating to a Board the selection of certain candidates for whom votes are to be recorded, I am obliged to come to the conclusion that the effect of the L.M.C.A.'s operations will be most mischievous and disastrous. With all respect for the brethren who compose the committee of this new election agency, I think I am as well able to decide which candidate deserves my votes as they can be. I we may judge from the letters which have appeared on this subject in your contemporary, the effect of the L.M.C.A.'s action will be a series of keen contests between London and Provincial Masons for the success of their respective candidates. Now this rivalry I for one respectfully deprecate. It can lead to no other result than bitterness and ill feeling. And though a Londoner myself, and therefore naturally prejudiced in favour of London candidates, I must in fairness remark that any advantage which Provincial candidates may derive from the Charity Committees in their districts is probably more than counterbalanced by the greater facility with which London Masons can be personally canvassed.

Should the L.M.C.A. become a power in the Craft, the friends of candidates will, of course, canvass the members of its Committee rather than individual Masons. The separate action of subscribers will be merged in the resolutions of a self-elected patronage board, and I fear that jobbery and corruption must be the inevitable consequence. The present promoters may be entirely free from any such motive, but in the natural course of things I am convinced that this will be the outcome, and therefore I deplore very sincerely the formation of the L.M.C.A., and cannot give it my humble support.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother, yours fraternally,

THE PROVINCIAL GRAND CHAPTER OF CHESHIRE.

THE Annual Convocation of Royal Arch Masons of this powerful Province was held at the Masonic Chambers, Argyle-street, Birkenhead, on Monday, the 21st inst. There was a large gathering of Companions from all parts of the county, and visitors from the adjoining Provinces and abroad. Promptly at 2 p.m the Chapter of Fidelity, No. 477, was opened by Ex. Comp. Donald Fraser M.E.Z., supported by the Officers of the Chapter Past and Present. At 2.15 the M.E. Grand Superintendent of the Province, Lord De Tabley, was announced, and having been admitted, accompanied by his Grand Officers, was received with due honours, and the Prov. Grand Chapter of Cheshire was opened. His Lordship was supported by the following Grand Officers:—Comps. John Wood P.G.H., Jas. Salmon P.G.J., G. W. Latham P.G.S.E., John Siddeley P.G.S.N., E. Priest P.G.P.S., F. Jackson P.G. Treas., C. H. Hinde P.G. Reg., H. Keayne P.G.S.B., A. E. Cokayne P.G.St.B., T. H. Kirk P.G. Org., M. Alcock P.G.Jan. We had the pleasure of recognizing, in the crush, Comps. S. Gilbert P.Z. 321, Saml. Jones P.Z. 477, J. H. Johnston P.Z. 477, Dr. A. Samuels P.Z. 477, J. G. Adams H. 477. Wm. Bennett P.Z. 477, W. Johnson M.E.Z. 721, J. C. Robinson P.Z. 423, Henry Bailey P.P.G.H., S. Spratley P.P.G.J., R. Beales P.P.G.A.S., J. P. Platt P.P.G.H., J. Bishop P.P.G.J., C. Dutton P.P.G.H., C. W. Spencer Stanhope P.Z. 357, John Beech P.Z. 361, George Fox P.Z. 361, J. C. Robinson P.Z. 425, J. Dowell Bury M.E.Z. 425, L. Ellis P.Z. 537, James Hamilton S.E. 1048, G. H. Eaton H. 295, T. H. Kirk P.Z. 1045, J. Siddeley H. 1045, J. Blackhurst H. 321, E. Eardsley P.P.G.A.S. P.Z. 221, J. E. Gibson J. 321, J. Hill M.E.Z. 323, W. Greatorex P.Z. 587, &c. After the minutes of last Provincial Grand Chapter had been read and ratified, and other matters gone into, the M.E. G. Superintendent rose, and delivered his annual address in a most touching and edifying manner. His lordship expressed the great pleasure he experienced in meeting so many Companions, and congratulated them on the happy and prosperous state of Royal Arch Freemasonry in the Province. From the large assemblage of brethren there that day,—which year after year showed an increase of Prov. G. Chapter,—he augured and believed there was a glorious future before them. He regretted that he was compelled to announce the retirement of Comp. Captain Cope, who, as a thorough good Mason, not only in Royal Arch, but in every branch connected with the Craft, was compelled through ill health to retire from the active part he usually took in the Order. His lordship then thanked the Officers, who had so ably performed the duties allotted them in the past year, and announced that the time had arrived to appoint his Officers for the ensuing twelvemonths. He remarked on the deep solicitude he felt for the welfare of the Craft and the Province he had the great responsibility of governing; in appointing his Officers upon the combined principle of merit and priority of claim. The M.E. Grand Superintendent concluded his remarks (which were listened to with rapt attention, and frequently greeted with applause by all present), by stating that the Provincial Grand Chapter showed a balance of £68 6s 4d, which was evidence of the zeal and ability with which Royal Arch Masonry was carried on in the Province. His Lordship then honoured the following Comps. with Provincial Grand Offices for the ensuing year:—Rev. C. W. Spencer Stanhope H., J. C. Robinson J., G. W. Latham re-appointed S.E., John Siddeley re-appointed S.N., M. McMerney P.S., J. Meadows and J. Blackhurst Assist. Sojs., F. Jackson re-appointed Treas., C. H. Hinde re-appointed Registrar, John Siddeley 1045 Sword Bearer, R. M. Townshend Standard Bearer, W. Mathews D.C., T. H. Kirk re-appointed Organist, M. Alcock re-appointed Janitor. These Companions were duly invested and took their seats. In pursuance of a notice of motion, Comp. Latham P.G.S.E. moved "that the sum of sixty guineas, the amount necessary in addition to previous grants to make the Most Excellent the Prov. Grand Superintendent a Vice President of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, be granted from the funds of the Prov. Grand Chapter to that Institution." In moving this resolution, Comp. Latham paid a very high tribute of praise to the Province for the noble work already done by the Masons of Cheshire locally, and universally in a charitable point of view. The only drawback to his speech appeared to be that he extolled the Province too highly, as he seemed to think that Cheshire was almost too strong in the amount of votes at its command; but we know that this Ex. Companion is aware there is room for all the efforts of the benevolent tendencies of the worthy Brethren of this noble Province to exercise their unabated good influences. The motion was seconded by Comp. Bulley, and on its being put by his lordship, was carried unanimously. Before closing the Prov. Grand Chapter the M. Excellent stated that it was his will and pleasure to hold his next Prov. Grand Chapter at Crewe. The brethren reassembled at four p.m. to banquet, Lord de Tabley presiding, and nearly 70 brethren sitting down to discuss the splendid bill of fare provided by Comp. Berry, of the Ranelagh Hotel. The banqueting-room was handsomely decorated with the flags of many nations, and the walls, east and west, were covered by large mirrors, reflecting back some beautiful and costly paintings, lent for the occasion by E. Companion Fraser. The tables were tastefully and elaborately decorated with fragrant flowers and choice plants, and last, but not least, the menu, which was of the most récherché character, was well served and highly appreciated by all present. The cloth having been removed, the noble chairman rose to propose the toast first on the list, and which he knew would be loyally drunk; he asked them to respond to the toast of Her Majesty the Queen. It was duly honoured, the Comps. singing the National Anthem. His Lordship rose to propose the next toast, which he felt would be equally as welcome, and as loyally responded to; it was that of the Sovereign head of the Craft, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.E.Z. of England. The toast having been most heartily received, the chairman rose and said he was desirous of proceeding as rapidly as possible, as he knew many Companions wished to return to their distant homes. He felt great pleasure in proposing the next toast, as it included the health of that gracious lady whom Englishmen, and particularly English Freemasons, had learned to honour, because of her great and endearing qualities, and as the Consort of our future Sovereign. He therefore called upon them to drink most cordially to H.R.H. the Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family. The toast was drunk with the greatest enthusiasm. After a short interval, in which Comps. Ellis and Forrest favoured the company with a duet. His Lordship rose again, and said he was proud of the Earl of Carnarvon and the Officers of Grand Chapter, whom he esteemed in proportion to the importance of the duties they discharged so efficiently, and asked all to drink most heartily to the toast of the Earl of Carnarvon and the Officers of the Supreme Grand Chapter. This was done, and then Comp. Latham rose to propose a toast which he said required no recommendation from him. Those in this province who were Royal Arch Masons knew how deep an interest their Most Excellent Grand Superintendent took in the Craft. Each succeeding year, under his Lordship's rule, they were attaining a standard more nearly approaching to perfection in the Craft than they could do under any other ruler. The longer he ruled over them the more they learned to appreciate him. When Lord De Tabley took the Province under his control, things were in chaos in comparison with its present state, and they owed the prosperity and happiness of the Fraternity in great measure to the zeal and ability with which he had watched over and promoted the true Masonic interests of the Province. He desired therefore to propose the health of the Prov. Grand Superintendent of Cheshire, as on his health, and power to fulfil his duties, depended largely the welfare of every Royal Arch Chapter in the Province. The toast was received with the most fraternal greeting and full Masonic honours. His Lordship, who was greeted most warmly, said: Comp. Latham and Comps., I rise to thank you most sincerely for the very kind and flattering manner—I fear far too flattering ("no, no,")—in which my health has been proposed, and the marked demonstration of esteem with which it has been responded to by you all. I was exceedingly proud when appointed the Grand Superintendent of this Province, and my efforts have been directed to reclaim it from the position I found it in, and raise it to a foremost place among the Provinces in the kingdom. (Applause.) I am pleased that the Chapters composing it are zealous in emulating each other in everything good, and that the Officers endeavour, with scrupulous care and fidelity, to follow one uniform ritual, but above all, that harmony is universal. (Applause.) The support I have received from my Officers, past and present, is most encouraging to me, as my labours do not cease inside a Lodge or Chapter. In discharging the difficult and delicate task of appointing my Officers, I do so with great care, and fearlessly; and I sincerely hope that, with their energetic co-operation, and the loyalty of the Comps. generally, the result will prove satisfactory. I am exceedingly thankful for the kind reception accorded me, and the admirable arrangements by which we have been enabled to enjoy this banquet, and to meet under such favourable auspices. (Cheers.)

After a moment's respite, M. Excellent rose again, for the purpose of proposing toast No. 6 on the list, and in doing so said: I rise most willingly and with feelings of great pleasure to propose the next toast, and I take this opportunity of testifying to my appreciation of the services of those Officers who have aided me in their various posts during the past year. I am satisfied they have done their duty ably and faithfully, and from the appointments made this day I have every reason to anticipate the same satisfactory result for the ensuing year. In giving you the toast of the Prov. G. Officers Past and Present, I will associate with it the newly installed H. and J. This was drunk with Masonic honours. Comp. Robinson having responded, his Lordship resigned his seat to his senior Officer, but before leaving, in a few kind words drank to their next happy meeting. Comp. D. Fraser, in proposing the toast of the Visiting Comps., said: In giving this toast, I am sure each and all know how deeply indebted we are to our brethren who have contributed, by their presence, so largely to the success of the day. It is needless for me to say that they are truly welcome among us; but how deeply I, and I know each of you, feel the honour done us by having so many distinguished Comps. here cannot be expressed. I do not know how many brethren have honoured us with their presence, neither can I single out one more than another, but to each and all we give a most hearty welcome, and I ask you to join with me in drinking to their very good health, and we shall be pleased to hear them all respond. The toast was received very warmly, as Comp. Forrest replied in a happy vein. Comp. Smith having given a song, the toast of "The Charities" was proposed, and acknowledged by Comp. Platt. The ninth toast, the Excellent Principals and Officers of the Chapters of the District, was given by Comp. Robinson, and very complimentary allusion was made to the Chapters of Birkenhead. With the toast were associated the names of Ex. Comp. Fraser M.E.Z. of 477, and Ex. Comp. Ellis 537, both of whom replied in suitable terms. Comp. Forrest then favoured the Comps. with a song, and the Janitor's toast brought a most agreeable day to a close.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

THE Queen is still at Balmoral, and spends her time in the quiet way the residents of the district are so accustomed to. Sir Michael Hicks Beach is the Minister in attendance.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has made a political tour through the Midland counties. He spoke at Birmingham on Saturday, and has since delivered two other speeches in that town, and has also spoken at Wolverhampton and Dudley, in vindication of the Government.

Colonel Stanley, Minister for War, and Mr. W. H. Smith, First Lord of the Admiralty, have left England for Malta and Cyprus.

The appointment of Mr. W. G. Palgrave to be Consul General in Bulgaria was notified in Tuesday's Gazette.

Cardinal Cullen, the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Dublin, died on Thursday.

The death has been announced of Mr. David Stewart Ker, formerly M.P. for Downpatrick and Down.

At a meeting of the East Kent Farmers' Club on Saturday, it was determined to reduce labourers' wages to a minimum of 15s per week. The Agricultural Labourers' Union threaten to resist the reduction, and urge the men to strike.

In the Board of Trade Inquiry into the collision between the Steamers Princess Alice and Bywell Castle, the evidence in relation to the circumstances of the collision has concluded, and the Crown Counsel has formulated charges of neglect against the first mate of the Princess Alice and the master and two engineers of the Bywell Castle. Evidence as to the construction of the Princess Alice has since been taken. The Netherlands mail steamer Flushing, on Monday, ran into and sank a schooner off the North Foreland, herself sustaining considerable damage. While being towed back to Queensborough, the tow rope broke, killing one passenger and seriously injuring another.

Another serious railway accident has taken place. On Saturday a fatal collision occurred at the Pontypridd Junction of the Taff Vale Railway, where a shunting train ran into a passenger train. Twelve persons were killed and about thirty others injured. The signalman, who admitted that his error had caused the calamity, has been arrested.

A large bonded warehouse in Haydon-square, Minories, belonging to the London and North Western Railway Company, was destroyed by fire, on Tuesday, and two firemen were severely injured while engaged in their duties.

The preliminary report of the accountants and solicitor upon the position of the City of Glasgow Bank, was published on Friday evening. The general result appears to be, that in addition to the total loss of the capital of the bank there is a further deficiency of upwards of £5,000,000, which it is expected will entail a call of £600 per share. Consequent upon this report, the five directors of the bank, with the manager and secretary, were arrested on Saturday by order of the Lord Advocate. Several further failures have been reported during the week, arising from the suspension of the Glasgow Bank. At a meeting of the shareholders, held on Tuesday, it was agreed that the affairs should be wound up by voluntary liquidation.

The Ameer of Afghanistan's answer to the Viceroy's letter has not yet been received, but its tenour is known to be unsatisfactory, and, therefore, in India there is a general belief that war cannot be avoided. There is not the same agreement as to the period when hostilities will begin, but an opinion prevails that nothing will be done until the spring. Very considerable forces, however, are being collected upon the frontier, and large reserves are being sent up from the southern stations. Many native Princes have tendered their support to the Indian Government, and several have offered their personal services. Notwithstanding the pressure applied by the Russian diplomatic and military authorities, the Porte still refuses to accept the terms required for a definitive Treaty of Peace. The movement of Russian troops southwards and the declaration that Adrianople will be held until the definitive Treaty is signed, together with the refusal to recognise the powers of the European Commissioners to regulate the financial administration of Eastern Roumelia, and the continued presence of Russian troops near the capital, afford grounds for suspicion at Constantinople that an attempt is being made to evade the stipulations of the Treaty of Berlin. The Anti-Socialist Bill has passed the German Parliament, and the Session has been closed. The Hungarian Diet re-assembled on Saturday, and the Emperor delivered a speech in which he spoke of the occupation of Bosnia and Herzegovina as complete. The Austrian Reichsrath also has resumed its sittings, and the resignation of the Auersperg Ministry has been announced. Baron de Pretis is endeavouring to form a Cabinet. The President of the French Republic on Monday distributed the awards to the successful competitors at the Paris Exhibition. The yellow fever still rages in the Southern States of the American Union, but the mortality is diminishing under the influence of colder weather.

A warrant has been granted to certain members of the New Forest Lodge, No. 319, to open a Lodge in Southampton, to be called the Albert Edward, with Bro. W. Hickman D.P.G.M. as the first Master.

A meeting of the Doric Chapter of Instruction, No. 933, will be held at Comp. Yetton's, the Rising Sun, Globe-road, Bethnal Green, on Monday evening next, 28th October, at eight o'clock precisely. The Companions will continue to meet every Monday evening during the winter months. Comp. T. J. Barnes P.Z. is the Preceptor, and Comp. Wm. H. Myers the S.E.

ST. LUKE'S CHURCH, SOUTHPORT.

LAYING THE MEMORIAL STONE.

ON Friday, the 18th inst., there took place in Southport the solemn laying of the foundation stone, with Masonic honours, by the Rt. Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, of a new church, to be erected at the corner of Hawkshead-street-south, and to be dedicated to St. Luke. Southport is proud, and justly proud, of her ecclesiastical buildings, and all who love fine architecture will be glad to learn that the proposed erection bids fair to be in every way worthy to stand side by side with any of its elder sisters. The "Unity" and "Fermor" Lodges, both of Southport, mustered in strong force, and the number was swelled by contingents from all parts of the county till, to judge from the long files drawn up in the avenue leading from Holy Trinity School to Manchester-road, there could have been no less than 200 Brethren present. At two o'clock a long procession of surpliced choir boys, robed clergy, and Craftsmen in full regalia made its way gradually through the streets. The combined effect of the many colours was very pleasing when a straight length of road permitted the eye to glance uninterruptedly from front to rear, and the changing hues, brought alternately into prominence by the many windings of the route, were equally picturesque. The following was the order of the procession:—Holy Trinity Choir, St. Luke's Choir, clergy, two Tylers, with drawn swords, members of Lodges, according to their numbers, juniors walking first, Past Provincial Grand Officers, two and two, Visiting Provincial Grand Officers, two and two, Architect, with the plans, a cornucopia, with corn, borne by a Master of a Lodge, two ewers, with wine and oil, borne by Masters of Lodges, Provincial Grand Pursuivant, Provincial Grand Organist, trowel, borne by Past Master, mallet, borne by Past Master, Provincial Assistant Grand Director of Ceremonies, Provincial Grand Director of Ceremonies, Provincial Grand Superintendent of Works, bearing a plate with the inscription for the foundation stone, Provincial Grand Secretary with Book of Constitutions, Provincial Grand Registrar, bearing the seal, Provincial Grand Treasurer, bearing a phial containing the coins to be deposited in the stone, the Corinthian Light, borne by the Master of a Lodge, the column of the Provincial Junior Grand Warden, with a plumb rule, banner of Provincial Grand Lodge, two Provincial Grand Stewards, the Doric Light, borne by the Master of a Lodge, the column of the Provincial Senior Grand Warden, borne by the Master of a Lodge, the Provincial Senior Grand Warden, with the level, Provincial Junior Grand Deacon, the Provincial Grand Chaplain, bearing the Sacred Law on a Cushion, two Provincial Grand Stewards, the Provincial Deputy Grand Master, with a square, the Ionic Light, borne by the Master of a Lodge, the Provincial Grand Sword Bearer, the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, Provincial Grand Senior Deacon, two Provincial Grand Stewards, Provincial Grand Tyler. As the head of the procession arrived at the site the Brethren divided to right and left and faced inwards, forming an avenue through which the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, preceded by the Provincial Sword Bearer, and followed by the Brother bearing the Ionic Light, the Provincial Deputy Grand Master, and the Provincial Officers and Assistants, passed to the platform which had been erected for the ceremony, and to which the clergy had already made their way.

The proceedings at the stone were opened with the singing of an appropriate hymn, after which Bro. the Rev. C. S. Hope, vicar of Holy Trinity, presented the following address to the Provincial Grand Master:—"My Lord, Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master,—The population of Holy Trinity parish having enormously increased of late years, and the church accommodation having thereby become wholly inadequate to its requirements, it has been decided to divide the parish and to build on this spot a church of plain but substantial character, to seat 1000 persons, the estimated cost of which is £5000. Of this sum £3000 has been already subscribed, and Bro. the Rev. W. H. Marsden, B.A., has accepted the charge of the new district. The Building Committee appointed to carry out the work being all Freemasons, and knowing how highly the grand principles of the ancient Craft are valued by your lordship, ventured to suggest that this would be a suitable occasion for their practical application. I have, therefore, on behalf of the committee, myself, and all present, to offer to your lordship a most hearty welcome, and our warmest thanks for so readily acceding to our request to lay the foundation stone of our new church. And may the Great Architect of the Universe prosper our handiwork and grant your lordship long life to practise and uphold the principles of true Masonry in this Province."

His Lordship said: I assure you it gives me great pleasure indeed to come here this day to begin so good a work as is about to be begun, namely, to lay the foundation stone of this church. It has happened to me to lay the foundation stone of a church in this town once before. This is the second time I have performed a ceremony in this town; but it is the first time I have performed it with Masonic honours—in fact, this is the first time I have had the pleasure and gratification of laying the foundation stone of a church with Masonic honours since I came to rule over this great Province. (Hear hear.) I am sure there is no work—no Masonic work—in which I have ever been engaged that has given me half the pleasure that doing this work to-day gives me. We all know how much church accommodation is wanted; and I can imagine well in this increasing town—increasing so rapidly—that the accommodation at present provided cannot be one-half enough for those who ought and who would attend the church if they were able. (Hear.) Therefore, it gives me still greater pleasure when I see this good work of church extension carried on here from time to time. I can remember not later than last year our good Bishop (the Bishop of Chester) told me that since he came to take the oversight of this diocese, he had consecrated or re-opened no fewer than eighty-five churches. (Applause.) When we think of the time he has been amongst us, I think that shows at all events in South Lancashire the work of church extension is proceeding well and rapidly. (Applause.) I will not detain you, as I may have to address you later on; but I will merely say it gives me very great pleasure to lay this foundation stone, and to be surrounded, as I am, by so goodly a number of the brethren of the Province, whom I thank for coming here on this occasion. I only wish that this church may rapidly rise, and that the funds may speedily be forthcoming; and that eventually that hope, which I hear is expressed, that the church may soon be free from debt, will be fully and entirely carried out. (Applause.)

A prayer was then said by the Provincial Grand Chaplain, after which the P.G. Treasurer placed the inscription plate in position; a phial of contemporary coins, and copies of the local newspapers and of other current publications were deposited; the mortar was spread; the stone was slowly lowered to its position; and, with all the forms and ceremonies prescribed by the Craft, Lord Skelmersdale declared the stone to be well and duly laid.

This done a collection was made, realising £85; another hymn was sung; the Provincial Grand Chaplain gave the benediction; and the proceedings were brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

After the ceremonial on the ground a splendid banquet was served at the Prince of Wales' Hotel, to which about 180 guests sat down. The banquet was thrown open to the public, and a number of ladies were present. Lord Skelmersdale, Deputy Grand Master of England, and Right Worshipful Prov. Grand Master of West Lancashire, presided, and there were also present:—Bros. H. S. Allpass P.G.S., Rev. J. Rees Jenkins P.G. Chaplain, R. Goepel P.P.G.D.C., R. Wylie P.P.G.S.W., G. Turner P.P.G. Treasurer, J. T. Callow P.G. Treasurer, R. Robinson P.G. Registrar, The Masters of Fermor Lodge and Unity Lodge (Southport), Rev. Canon Sheldon (Rural Dean), Geo. Mellor Mayor of Ashton-under-Lyne, and D.P.G.M. of East Lancashire, Rev. C. H. Knowlys (Rector of North Meols), Rev. C. S. Hope (Vicar of Holy Trinity), Rev. W. H. Marsden (Vicar designate of St. Luke's); Rev. Canon Clarke, D.D. (Vicar of Christ Church); Rev. R. Stephenson M.A., Dr. Woods, Dr. G. A. Woods, Capt. Hesketh, Councillor Marchbank, Councillor Roberts, &c.

After grace, the Noble Chairman proposed the health of her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, which was duly honoured.

The Chairman next submitted the toast of The Prince and Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family. He said they were a mixed assembly there, so he gave this toast both Masonically and Loyally. The Prince of Wales was their head Masonically, and their future ruler, though he hoped the time was yet far distant before he would become so—(hear, hear)—and the noble Chairman would ask them to drink his health and the rest of the Royal Family. There were two other Freemasons in the Royal Family—his Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught and his Royal Highness Prince Leopold. (hear, hear.) They were one and all dear to their hearts—(applause)—and he would pause for one moment to say, and he thought they would agree with him, he hoped that one of the younger branches of the Royal Family, Princess Louise, would meet with that success and that esteem in Canada which she deserved. (Cheers.) That her husband, Lord Lorne, would do his duty there most admirably he had not the slightest doubt, but he had a very hard task to fulfil, for he had a very difficult nobleman to follow. (Hear, hear.)

The Rev Bro. C. S. Hope proposed the health of the Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale, who wished to leave the banquet to catch a train, but it would be ungrateful to allow him to depart without thanking him for the kind action he had done for them that day, and without proposing his health. (Hear, hear.) Southport had in the past much to thank his Lordship for, and she was, he felt sure, very grateful to him. From the opinions which he had heard expressed many persons in the parish of Holy Trinity were especially grateful to him, and they would all anxiously look forward to his lordship coming amongst them again. (Cheers.) The first question he had been asked was, "Is Lord Skelmersdale coming?" and when he answered "Yes," they said, "All right." That day he had come amongst them and given them valuable help, as Right Worshipful Provincial Grand Master, and the speaker was sure of this, that Freemasonry would not suffer in Southport by what the people had seen. (Hear, hear.) He had nearly gained a convert to Freemasonry, Canon Clarke, and that was a great deal. (Laughter.) He hoped when Canon Clarke got up later he would not contradict him. (Laughter.) On their behalf, on his own behalf, and on behalf of Trinity parish, he thanked the noble lord for the kind and hearty way in which he had come to help them. (Cheers.) Theirs was a poor church, which constantly needed help.

The toast was drunk with musical honours. The Chairman said he thanked them most heartily for the extremely kind way in which they had received the mention of his name. He must apologise to them most humbly for rather curtailing their enjoyment, if he might say so, by hurrying on the toasts. Mr. Hope had said very truly that he was bound to catch a train. He had a long journey before him; he was going to Paris. He was sure it was a very great pleasure when he came there to lay the foundation stone of this second church, which was the first he had laid in this town with Masonic honours. They had already been given to understand that one amongst them had been impressed with the ceremony, and might he say that if that ceremony had done nothing more than bring Canon Clarke over to the side of Freemasonry, he for one should feel that his time had not been wasted. (Hear, hear.) That day they had begun a good work, a stone had been laid, and that stone had been cemented by subscriptions on the ground. He hoped that was an earnest of the future, and that in the course of time Mr. Marsden would have such an amount of funds that he would hardly know what to do with them. (Laughter, and hear, hear.) This was a wealthy town, a prosperous town, and he hoped it was going to be more prosperous still. (Applause.) Why should not St. Luke's spring up as rapidly as he had seen other churches spring up in the district, and the work be carried on as thoroughly and as well? He hoped with all his heart it would be so. He thanked them most heartily for the kind way in which they had received him that day. (Cheers.)

Brother R. Fletcher proposed the health of the Bishops, Clergy, and Ministers of all denominations.

The Rev. Canon Sheldon, Rural Dean, responded. He thanked them for the cordial manner in which they had been pleased to drink this toast. He was present yesterday at the laying of the stone of the church at Kirkdale. The chief speaker on that occasion was the distinguished and universally admired Home Secretary, who received such a welcome at Southport afterwards. He need hardly say to them that, speaking for the clergy, it seemed to betoken bright and happy days when the Home Secretary, in the midst of such onerous duties, and other gentleman of distinction, should gather together and lay the foundation stone of a church at Kirkdale—(hear, hear)—and he need hardly say that it was an augury of good things when the noble lord who had just left should take the trouble to come to Southport to lay the foundation stone of a church. (Hear, hear.) When they saw men sinking all political and personal opinions, and coming together in such a large and striking manner as they had done that day, to lend a helping hand in the good work, one could not but feel thankful. In the Church of England, to which he belonged, and amongst other religious bodies outside, he hoped they would have a growing bond of sympathy. (Hear, hear.) He said the Masonic ceremonies of that day produced a very startling effect upon his mind, and he thought it would do them all good.

The Rev. Bro. C. H. Knowlys also responded. He said the ceremony of that day was a very solemn one. At all times the laying of a foundation stone was a solemn ceremony, but when supplemented by the grandeur of their Masonic Art and Craft it lent still more solemnity to the deed. He asked, who could tell how many souls would be saved by the results of what they had done that day? It was also a very joyful occasion. It was really necessary in Southport. In his own parish 511 houses had been built during the last two years, whilst he had been there. The population had increased in St. Luke's district, and he was sure that the clergy were very thankful for what had been done that day, and their earnest prayer would be that they might look back upon it as one of blessedness and thankfulness in their Provincial Grand Lodge. (Applause.)

The Rev. Canon Clarke proposed success to St. Luke's Church. He said the ceremonial which was enacted at the foundation stone laying of St. Luke's Church impressed him, as it had impressed Canon Sheldon, very strongly—(hear, hear)—and he did say to Mr. Hope, he wondered when would be next Lodge meeting—(Laughter)—and possibly if his name were submitted to that meeting he might hope to become one of the brotherhood—(laughter)—but he did not actually ask Mr. Hope to propose him—("No, but he will do so followed by laughter)—because he (Canon Clarke) must ask his wife (Laughter.) He had never had a secret from his wife since he was married, and he advised all, except Freemasons, to have none—(laughter)—so that if he became a Freemason, he would have to make an exception to the general rule. (Renewed laughter.) It must be by the leave of his wife, otherwise, he could not consent ("Oh she will") so that if he did not become a Freemason, it was his wife's fault. (Renewed laughter.) Canon Clarke then spoke in high terms of Mr. Marsden, and said he would go about amongst the poor and the rich, amongst those who were in sorrow, distress, and sickness, and would minister the wholesome medicine of God's Holy Word to their souls; and he hoped and trusted Mr. Marsden would soon have a church of his own. After referring to the Home Secretary's speech at Liverpool, Canon Clarke said, in conclusion: May the Great Architect of the Universe bless this church abundantly, and crown the work which has been begun to-day till the top stone be laid with rejoicing, amid shouts of "Glory to God in the highest, on earth peace, and goodwill to men." (Hear, hear.)

The Rev. Mr. Marsden responded. He said the work had proceeded prosperously and successfully so far, thanks to the energy of the churchwardens and sidesmen and other gentlemen who were interested in the welfare of St. Luke's. (Hear, hear.) Various people had been asking him why the Freemasons should lay the foundation stone. "Well," he replied, "if a Mason cannot lay it, who can?" (Laughter.) But that was not all that the Freemasons had done. They had come forward and liberally helped to extend the subscription list, and they had helped them generously that day. (Hear, hear). If the building came to a standstill, and they were in a "regular fix," who knew but what they would come to their help again, and build the church for them altogether. (Laughter and applause.) After referring to the "ancestral halls" of Little London in a humorous vein, the rev. gentleman gave an account of the financial position of the undertaking. He thanked all the numerous friends who had assisted.

Bro. J. Barrow proposed the health of the Officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge. He said they had in the Provincial Grand Lodge men of note and ability. The money which they had spent in assisting charitable institutions, the poor, the aged and orphans, was marvellous. (Cheers.) Outsiders did not know anything about it, and they did not want them to know anything about it. They kept those things to themselves, and the Provincial Grand Lodge richly deserved the honour which the bestowal of such charity carried with it. (Hear, hear.) They had many of the Officers of the Provincial Grand Lodge present that evening, including the Provincial Grand Secretary. It was through his influence that the Province was so distinguished. Bro. Barrow believed this was the second largest Province in the kingdom, and he hoped before long it would be second to none in the kingdom from a Masonic point of view. (Applause.) The toast having been honoured, Bro. Alpass P.G.S. responded, and gave an interesting sketch of the history of Freemasonry. Several other toasts followed.—Liverpool and Southport Daily News.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—This medicine has resisted every test which time, prejudice, and vested interests could impose upon it, and it at once stands forth triumphant as the most reliable remedy for those derangements of the system so common at the change of seasons. When the air grows cooler, and the functions of the skin are retarded, an occasional dose of Holloway's Pills will call on the liver and kidneys for greater activity, and compensate the system for diminished cutaneous action. As an aperients, aperients, and tonics, the Pills have no equal. To every aged and delicate person, whose appetite is defective, digestion loitters, and tone of health low, this medicine will be a precious boon, conferring both ease and strength.

LOCAL CHARITY FUNDS.

WE beg to acknowledge with fraternal thanks the receipt of a pamphlet from the pen of Bro. Godtschalk. That estimable brother is the representative in London of the Charity Committee of Devon, or, as it is called in the Province itself, the Committee of Petitions; and his object in issuing this pamphlet is to urge on his fellow Provincial brethren the advisability of establishing a Local Educational and Advancement Fund for the benefit of children of distressed or deceased Freemasons. The principal grounds on which he rests his proposal are these:—The voting power of the Province is such that it cannot hope to carry the candidate which it has resolved on supporting till several unsuccessful attempts have been made. Thus the boy Furze, who at the recent election to the Boys' School was what may fairly be described as the "official" candidate of Devonshire, had made six previous attempts to get in, but the support he had received on those occasions had only resulted in placing to his credit some six hundred and odd votes, while his success at the seventh trial has only been secured by borrowing largely from other quarters, and thus anticipating, or say we rather, pledging, for some time to come, the voting force of the Province. This is the main reason why Bro. Godtschalk submits his plan for a Local Fund to his fellow Devonians. The others are that there is no reason to anticipate a sufficiently large increase in the number of Devonian Life Governors to the two Schools, or that Provincial Grand Lodge could take upon itself to increase its votes to such an extent as to ensure that the candidate of its selection shall succeed after fewer attempts. A further reason is, that a Local Fund of this character will not be in opposition, but supplementary to, the great central Charities. Taking the Boy Furze as an illustration of what such a Fund is capable of effecting—this boy was three years and a half on the list of candidates before his friends and supporters were enabled to get him in. During that time, as a reference to this list will show, he has been one of four children wholly dependent on a widowed mother for support. Had there been a Local Charity Fund in Devonshire, he might, during this long period of waiting, have been receiving some educational help from it. That is, the Committee might have voted him the sum necessary to enable him to attend some local school, where he would have been gradually preparing himself for admission into the London School. Again, there are in Devon, as elsewhere, a considerable number of brethren who are able and willing to contribute small sums per annum—such as five or ten shillings—but who cannot afford to become Life Governors, or even Life Subscribers. These by their small annual contributions, for which, of course, they would receive a certain voting power, would make a considerable show in the Province, while as regards the London Schools, even the aggregate of their contributions would only increase the voting power of the Province to a slight and inappreciable extent. But the Fund will not be Educational only. Bro. Godtschalk proposes that it shall be an Advancement Fund likewise. Children who cannot be entered at the London Schools will not only receive a sound education at a good school in the different neighbourhoods where they reside, but when they are old enough to set about earning their own livelihood, then in cases where an outfit or premium may be needed, the Fund will provide it. There is yet another advantage which may be anticipated from the realisation of Bro. Godtschalk's or any similar scheme. It will, unquestionably, lessen the pressure on the central Schools at Wood Green and Battersea respectively. There are many people who would be well satisfied their children should be educated in their immediate neighbourhoods, even though it might involve additional efforts on their part to maintain and clothe them. This would, of course, reduce the number of candidates for the admission into the Central Schools. In short, a formidable array of reasons may be urged in favour of Bro. Godtschalk's scheme, but few, if any, against it. The mere mention of the Cheshire Educational Fund, to which we have more than once referred in these columns, and the success of which Bro. Godtschalk adduces as an argument in support of his scheme, will suffice to remind our readers of the value of Local Charitable Funds, while it will fully justify the advice we are about to offer to our Devonshire brethren. This advice is to act upon and do their utmost to promote the success of such a fund as Bro. Godtschalk proposes. It cannot be otherwise than advantageous, and there is no reason why what has been so successfully done by Cheshire, with its thirty-nine Lodges and eighteen Royal Arch Chapters, should not be done as successfully by Devonshire, with its forty-seven Lodges and twenty-five Royal Arch Chapters. At all events, say we, it is an experiment worth trying.

A drawing for several Life Governorships in connection with the Second Tottenham, Edmonton and Enfield Masonic Charitable Association will take place, on Thursday next, at the Seven Sisters', Page Green, Tottenham, at 7.30 p.m. After the ballot supper will be provided, and from the arrangements made, a pleasant evening may be anticipated. Tickets for the supper (price 3s 6d) may be had of the Hon. Sec. of the Association, Bro. J. Garrod, from the above address. In order to introduce the claims of our Charitable Institutions to the notice of other than members of the Craft, the Committee offer a special invite for non-Masons to accompany their Masonic friends. We wish the Association every success, and the meeting of Thursday next a happy termination.

Bro. T. J. Mardwell, W.M. of the Egyptian Lodge, No. 27, will work the ceremony of installation in the Egyptian Lodge of Instruction, 119 Leadenhall-street, on Thursday evening next, 31st October, at 7.30. Brethren are invited to attend.

Hartington Lodge, No. 1085.—The October meeting of this Lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Derby, on Wednesday, the 2nd inst., when the attendance was such as to clearly indicate the interest its members take in continued support of the prominent position it has attained in the Province. The junior members, particularly, were in strong muster, and their evident attention to, and acquaintance with the work, testified to the judgment and discretion exercised by the Lodge in the selection of its candidates. The presence also of visitors evinced the good fellowship that exists between it and the other Lodges in the town and neighbourhood. The initiation and passing ceremonies were worked in admirable form, Mr. Edwin Belfield and Bro. Carr being the recipients, respectively, of the favours of the W.M. on behalf of the Craft. The subsequent nomination of three brethren as joining members, and one gentleman as a candidate for Freemasonry, proved the popularity of the Lodge, and we express our fraternal wish that it may so continue, being assured that the popularity of any Craft Lodge is solely due to judicious management, and an attention to the great principles of the Order.

Lodge of Prudent Brethren, No. 145.—The first meeting since the vacation took place on Tuesday, and was numerously attended by brethren and visitors. Bro. Haslett W.M., Leggott S.W., W. Lister J.W., J. Boyd P.G.P. Treas., G. S. States P.G.S. Sec., Dr. Wilkinson S.D., C. Woods J.D., J. Chinnery I.G., Verrall D.C., J. Curtis Steward, J. Read; P.M.'s Bros. Thiellay, T. Bull, &c. The Visitors were Bros. G. Brooks P.M. 902, Z. Gianelli 173, G. Martos 813, H. Santer 167, W. Stollard 180, Venn P.M. 49, Jermyn Boyd 23, H. M. Levy P.M. 188, &c. The Lodge was opened, and the minutes were confirmed. A communication was read from Bro. Hedges, Secretary to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, respecting subscriptions to a testimonial to perpetuate the memory of the late Bro. R. W. Little. Bro. J. Boyd, P.M. and Treasurer, gave notice of motion that a sum of ten guineas be voted for that purpose from the Lodge funds. He stated that in addition to any amount that might be raised beyond the sum required for the memorial, the interest would be given to the widow, and the principal was eventually to revert to the Girls' School. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to an excellent banquet provided by Bro. A. Best, and superintended by Bro. E. Dawkins. The W.M., who very genially presided, proposed the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts. That of the Grand Officers was responded to most eloquently by Bro. Boyd. He had so frequently returned thanks for this toast, at the Prudent Brethren Lodge, that he hoped a fresh member might be selected for Grand honours; the duty—always a pleasurable one—would not then devolve on him. Bro. E. H. Thiellay P.M. had great pleasure in proposing the health of the W.M. Bro. Haslett was one who had endeared himself to every member of the Lodge. All present—whether members or visitors—respected him. He would ask them to drink his health in all sincerity. After a graceful reply from the W.M., Bro. T. Bull proposed the health of the Visitors, and Bro. Venn P.M. 49 replied. He thanked the W.M. for his hospitality; he regretted there had been no working; he knew the W.M. was capable of fulfilling the duties of the Lodge. Personally, he (the speaker) was indebted for his visit, not only on this, but on other occasions, to Bro. J. Boyd, whose working, both in Craft and Arch Masonry, and for the Charities, was so well known and appreciated. He had listened with interest to the remarks made in the Lodge as to recognising the services of the late Bro. Little, and he was pleased to say that the Gibon Lodge, of which he was a P.M., had given a notice of motion that a sum of £5 5s should be voted for the same purpose; he hoped every Lodge would follow this example. After a few remarks from Bro. Brooks, Bro. H. Dicketts P.M. P.G.S. gave the Past Masters of the Lodge. To them was due the success of the Lodge. Bros. Boyd, Thiellay and T. Bull have done their duty in every sense of the word. The tasks they have had to perperform, both in this and other Lodges, were not easy, but each and every one had striven to give satisfaction. Bro. E. H. Thiellay I.P.M. replied; this was his mother Lodge; it was one each member ought to be proud to belong to, and all should aspire to the honour of becoming a P.M. The next toast was the health of the Treas. and Sec., Bros. J. Boyd and G. States. Both were well-known, not only in this Lodge, but throughout the Craft. Bro. J. Boyd contrasted the difference in the way their evenings were passed now, in comparison with those of years ago. We now give a large amount to the Charities; £40,000 annually to our three Institutions; but we might do more. A great responsibility devolves on the executive, and they should be supported. We annually send up a Steward from the Lodge, and brethren hitherto have liberally subscribed. Their S.W. Bro. Leggott had got on his list nearly £200. He was pleased to see the prosperity of the Lodge. Bro. G. S. States P.G.S. Hon. Sec. followed, his services were always at their command. The W.M. then proposed the toast of the Officers, to which Bro. Leggott S.W. responded. The Tyler's toast was then given, and this concluded a very agreeable evening, which was augmented by the excellent harmony of several brethren.

There appeared in a recent number of Land and Water a letter from Mr. R. E. Robinson, in which that gentleman proposed a plan for providing the Metropolis with sea water baths. Many of our readers, no doubt, are aware that a scheme has already been suggested for conveying water into London from the Cumberland Lakes. Mr. Robinson points out that it will be considerably less costly to derive the additional water supply from Brighton. That town is distant only fifty miles, and pipes could easily be laid along the main road, so that London would always be in the enjoyment of an inexhaustible supply of pure sea water. The advantages resulting, if such a scheme were carried out, would, as Mr. Robinson points out, be many. Spacious baths might be erected in the Northern, Southern, Eastern, and Western districts of the Metropolis. The refuse water from them would flush the sewers, and help to lessen, if it did not wholly remove, those noxious smells which now emanate from the drains placed at intervals in all our street gutters. In the thoroughfares under which the sea water was conveyed hydrants might be fixed, with a view to a good supply of water always being available, either for purposes of fire or for cleansing the streets, while as an indirect, yet certain benefit, may be mentioned the fact that existing fresh Water Companies would be able to exercise greater care so that the water supplied by them should be of the purest possible quality. We should then hear less about the prevalence of ill-health caused by the impurity of the water supplied by them, and used in great part for drinking purposes. One or two other points are deserving of notice. These are, that the towns on the Brighton road might, by means of supplemental pipes, derive a supply of pure water from the main pipes, and that in the important matter of expense, the capital required would, in Mr. Robinson's opinion, not exceed one million sterling. There is no doubt whatever, as we said at the outset, that a constant supply of sea water from Brighton would involve a far less considerable outlay than a supply from more distant Cumberland, and as the sanitary properties of sea water are too well known to need any comment, we think the scheme is one which is well worthy of public consideration.

We announce with great pleasure that Madame Worrell-Duval's Annual Evening Concert will take place at the South Place Institute, E.C., near Moorgate Street Railway Station E.C., on Monday, the 11th November. The list of artists is a promising one, and includes the names of Miss Matilda Roby, Miss Bessie Stroud, Madame Worrell-Duval, Madame Osborne Williams, Mdlle. Helene Arnim, Miss Emma Buer, Messrs. Abercrombie, Lawrence Fryer, Chaplin Henry, and H. Horscroft. There will likewise assist Mr. R. Bamber (violin) and Miss Edith Gregory (pianoforte), while the duty of conducting will be shared among Messrs. J. Turle Lee, Osborne Williams, and Herr Trousselle. Doors will open at 7.30 p.m., and the Concert commence punctually at 8 p.m. Carriages at 10.30 p.m. Prices—Reserved seats, 3s and 2s; unreserved ditto, 1s. Tickets may be had of Madame Worrell-Duval, 67 Knowle-road, Brixton-road, S.W.; Mr. John R. Williams, 11 Bellefields-road, Stockwell, S.W.; Mr. W. T. Rickwood, 33 Cheapside, E.C.; Messrs. F. G. Barns and Co., 31 London Wall, E.C., and of any gentleman who has undertaken to fill the office of Steward. We trust Madame Worrell-Duval's Concert will be attended with success.

F. RATH & Co.'s IMPROVED PATENT GAS BOX IRON.

PERFECTION IN IRONING FOR EVERY SPECIES OF FABRIC.

Great Saving in Expense and Labour.

The price being only 22/, it is the Cheapest Iron in the trade, and can be had at all Ironmongers in the United Kingdom.

F. RATH & CO.'S IMPROVED GAS BOX IRON is extremely simple in its construction, and cannot get out of order; the merit of the invention is, that the heat produced from the burning gas is thrown on to the steel plate which covers the bottom surface, none being allowed to pass off in waste.

Three times the amount of work ordinarily executed can be done by the use of these Irons, which have now been in use in extensive Manufactories long enough to thoroughly prove their merits and evidence their entire success. They are as suitable for Family Use as for the Work-room, the Manufactory, or the Laundry.

THE

A WEEKLY RECORD OF MASONIC INTELLIGENCE.

SANCTIONED BY THE GRAND LODGE OF ENGLAND.

VOL. VIII.—No. 201. SATURDAY, 2nd NOVEMBER 1878. [PRICE THREEPENCE. Registered at the G.P.O. as a Newspaper.

CANVASSING FOR OUR CHARITIES.

LAST week we inserted and commented briefly upon a circular letter of Bro. Dick Radclyffe, who has undertaken to act as Steward at the ensuing Festivals of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution and the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. In order to secure as much support as possible, Bro. Radclyffe, in addition to canvassing in the ordinary way for the Guineas, Five Guineas, and Ten Guineas, which entitle their respective donors to be enrolled in the list of Annual Subscribers, Life-Subscribers, and Life-Governors, proposes to issue books of half-crown tickets, the purchasers of each of which tickets will be entitled to ballot among themselves for as many Life-Subscriberships as the aggregate of the half-crowns received will justify. The success which has attended this plan is so well known that it calls for no further remark from us. What, however, does seem to demand some comment is the statement to which Bro. Radclyffe has lent the authority of his name, namely—that if every Craftsman throughout England gave "21s per annum to each Institution (not a large sum to a man who can find several guineas for initiation fees, subscriptions, &c.) the Charities would require no urgent appeals, nor need they turn candidates away, as the amount thus realised would be sufficient to double the establishments." Of the correctness of this view there cannot be the slightest question. If we assume that in England there are 1,250 Lodges, and that each Lodge on an average has fifty subscribing members, we arrive at a total membership of 60,000 and upwards. But it is well known that a very considerable number of brethren are members of two, three, and even more Lodges, and therefore a deduction must be made from the 60,000 above given. If, then, we assume that one brother in six belongs to more than one Lodge, we shall have a total of 50,000 brethren, to whom the Charitable Institutions must look for support. If each of these acted on Bro. Radclyffe's suggestion, the total annual amount of subscriptions to the Charities would be at the rate of one guinea per member to each Institution 150,000 guineas, or £157,500—a sum infinitely beyond what would be required to maintain our Institutions at double their present strength. This, in fact, would be about four times as much as the aggregate incomes of all three Institutions during the year 1877, when the receipts from donations, subscriptions, and other sources were in excess of what they had ever been previously. We do not for a moment suppose that any one would object to so large an amount being subscribed annually as would be the case if every brother acted on Bro. Radclyffe's suggestion, and loyally gave his guinea to each Charity. The excess of income over expenditure would be so enormous, that in a very few years the invested moneys would yield an income sufficient to maintain our Institutions at their present rate of efficiency without any appeal whatever being made to the brethren for additional help. We are inclined therefore to believe that Bro. Radclyffe has placed his suggested contribution at too high a figure, and that one guinea from Craftsmen distributed equally among our Charities would suffice not only to maintain them at their present strength, but likewise to secure that strength to such an extent as to provide for even the heaviest demands that might be made on them. Having regard to the number of affiliated Masons as aforesaid—and non-affiliates have no claim whatever on our support, that is to say, of course, no such claim as would justify the extension towards them and their families of the benefits of our Institutions—we repeat, having regard to this number, it is very evident that the Schools and the Croydon Institution would not require to be made more than half as strong again as they are now. A Girls' School capable of receiving three hundred, a Boys' School of about the same strength, and a Benevolent Institution with about four hundred beneficiaries, would assuredly meet the greatest demands which are ever likely to be made—unless, indeed, we are prepared to offer a kind of premium to people of small means to become Masons, so that they may have a chance of getting their sons and daughters into our Schools, or themselves into the R.M.B.I. If we reckon the expenditure of each Institution at £11,000 per annum, we have a total for the three of £33,000, and if we increase this to the extent of one-half, we arrive at the considerable sum of £49,500, or, say in round figures, £50,000. Now, a guinea per annum from each of the 50,000 Craftsmen would cover this amount, and leave a small balance over, while a guinea to each Institution from each subscribing member would be just thrice as much as would be needed, even if these were half as strong as they are now. Of course, it is very natural that every brother should desire to see our Charities on a better footing as regards their permanent incomes. If these, amounting in one case to about the sum paid for a purchased admission into the school, and in the other cases to a few hundreds only, were increased to a few thousands, then indeed might we congratulate ourselves on their position, and that without having recourse so extensively to the unpleasant process of canvassing for donations and subscriptions. Moreover, the Institutions would be commensurately less affected by those periodical fluctuations in the income of the country which result from commercial panics, political crises, and the like. This is a point which should be kept prominently before the Masonic public, namely—that if the permanent incomes of all three Institutions—including grants from Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter were added together, they would not suffice to cover one-half of the expenditure incurred by one of them. There is, therefore, every reason why the subscriptions and donations of the brethren should be on the most liberal scale for many years to come, but there is a difference between appealing urgently for what is necessary and appealing for individual contributions so considerably beyond the immediate and even prospective requirements of our Charities. There is, too, one other point which cannot be too carefully insisted upon, viz.—that those who canvass for our Institutions will do well not to lay too great stress on what, in the way of contribution per Mason, will cover the expenditure of our Institutions. It is desirable, and ought to be regarded as a duty, that every one should give according to his ability, but it is very undesirable that any of those who are sparing of their surplus money should have an opportunity allowed them of giving less than they can well afford. There are many brethren who have no objection to spending guineas on banquets and pleasure excursions who are by no means as liberal when it is a question of supporting our Charities, and if they are encouraged to believe that a guinea all round is all that is needed, they will give that guinea, and no more. As a matter of fact, those who even give a guinea are but a small fractional part of the Masonic community, and the rich Craftsman's five or ten guineas are the more welcome, and, indeed, the more necessary, because the comparatively poor Craftsman's guinea is not always forthcoming. Canvassers, therefore, must be very cautions how they use this guinea argument, or they may find their lists grow "small by degrees and beautifully less."

COMMITTEE MEETING OF THE GIRLS' SCHOOL.

THE monthly meeting of the General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls was held on Thursday, at Freemasons' Hall Col Creaton presided, and the other brethren present were Bros. S Rawson, H. Browse, J. A. Rucker, E. H. Finney, O. H. Tattershall, James Peters, J. G. Stevens, W. F. C Montrie, H. A. Dubois, H Potter, H. Massey, John Boyd, Arthur E. Gladwell, E. Letchworth, H. Harker, T. F. Peacock, G. R. Sherrill, E. Spooner, H. Dicketts, Henry Venn, Thomas Cubitt, G. Faulkner, and F. R. W. Hedges Secretary. One petitioner was placed on the list, and a letter was read from Bro. John Caldwell P.M. 61, in which he stated that owing to ill-health he resigned the Robert Burns Lodge, No. 25, but sent a cheque for £100 for the Boys' School, and £100 for the Girls' School. A letter was also read from Bro. Peter Matthews, honorary surgeon dentist to the institution, resigning the appointment, which he had held for twenty years, on account of failing health. Bro. Gladwell called attention to the sum of 170 guineas being the amount payable for the purchase of a child into the Institution, and hoped the sub-Committee which had been appointed would take this subject into consideration in the revision of the bye-laws, as the amount was either too small for a child of the age of eight years, or too large for a child of eleven years. The Chairman said the sub-Committee would consider the point. On the motion of Bro. Dicketts, seconded by Bro. E. Spooner, it was resolved to admit by purchase a daughter of Bro. Charles Jardine, who lost his life in the wreck of the Princess Alice.

LODGE OF LIGHTS, No. 148, WARRINGTON.

THE monthly meeting was held at the Masonic Rooms, on Monday, 28th ult. Present—Bros. J. Pickthall W.M., T. Tunstall I.P.M. as S W., C. E. Hindley J.W., Jas. Paterson S.D., J. Grime J.D., John Bowes P.M. P.P.J.G.W. Sec., J. H Galloway I.G., T. Dumville Tyler; J. Harding P.M., Wm. Sharp P.M.; Bros J. Bayley, T. Jones, G. F. Curzon, T. Sutton, R. W. Francomb, W. Born, and the following visitors:—D. W. Finney W.M. 1250, J. H. Galloway 1250, A. Hayes 1250, Geo. Cropper 1250, S. M. Davies, FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE. The Lodge was opened at 6.30, and the minutes of the last meeting were read, found correct and ratified. There was little business to bring before the Lodge. The bulk of that transacted was of a private nature. At its conclusion the Lodge was closed with solemn prayer. The brethren, by the request of the W.M., adjourned to supper, at the Red Lion Hotel. The repast was put on the table in excellent style by Bro. Speakman, and the attendance was faultless. After each brother had enjoyed the good things provided, the cloth was removed. The first toast—Her Majesty the Queen—was offered with a few well-chosen remarks, and was duly honoured; all singing the National Anthem. The next toast was introduced to the brethren by the Worshipful Master, who expressed a fervent hope that His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales would be spared long to rule over the Craft. He united with the toast the gracious Consort of his Royal Highness and all the Royal Family. The toast was drunk most heartily. On rising for the third time, Bro. Pickthall gave the Masonic Rulers, supreme and subordinate, uniting with the same the name of Bros. Sharp and Finney. Bro. Sharp thanked the W.M. and brethren. He alluded to his recent attendance at Provincial Grand Lodge, and regretted that this large Province had not a Masonic Temple to do justice to such a large gathering of the Craft. It was, he thought, the largest that had ever taken place in England, except that at the Albert Hall. He assured the brethren that the present was a very active period in Freemasonry. He trusted that the time had arrived when their Provincial Grand Officers would make a point of visiting each and every one of the Lodges in their important Province. (Hear, hear.) He had an idea that Lord Skelmersdale would see the necessity of doing so, and himself set the example. Bro. Finney also returned thanks, and had the honour of proposing the health of the W.M. In doing so, he said, I rise with very great pleasure to propose this toast, yet I fear I cannot do justice to the subject. Your W.M. fills the chair of your Lodge ably and faithfully. He has won for himself the esteem of each and all, not only in the Lodge, but in his every-day life. To rule a Lodge to the satisfaction of the brethren requires many excellent qualities. We know with what tact, zeal, energy and kindness our esteemed brother has discharged the important duties of his exalted position. It is a source of great satisfaction to a Worshipful Master to know he has the hearty co-operation and sympathy of his Lodge in all his efforts. I know, by the entire accord and harmony, that so it is in this Lodge; its W.M. has the complete support of every Brother. As the W.M. of an offshoot of this Lodge, I feel it a duty as well as a pleasure to try and copy the good example laid down by No. 148, which, as a Lodge, in all its bearings, is a credit to the Province. Individually I greatly value the friendship of the W.M., I have learned to esteem him as much out of Lodge as in. I came here to-night to mark the high esteem I hold the W.M. in, and also to testify the high regard I have for the brethren of the mother Lodge. I hope that the cordial feeling which now exists between the two Lodges may ever continue, and increase in the Lodges of this town. The toast was drunk with musical honours. Bro. Cropper favoured the brethren with a song, after which the W.M. rose, and said, Brethren,—I thank you sincerely for the kind reception accorded the last toast. I have anticipated the kind remarks of Bro. Finney, and I feel grateful for the personal expressions with which he has been pleased to propose my health. During my year of office, which is now rapidly drawing to a close, I have endeavoured to do my duty; I regret I have not been able to do more. I shall yield up my post to my successor with many vivid recollections of the pleasant evenings we have spent together, and in after years I shall recall the twelvemonths I passed as Master of this Lodge among the happiest of my existence. While on this subject, I cannot resume my seat without expressing the deep sense of my obligation to the Officers of the Lodge who have so ably aided me in carrying out the duties, and to the brethren for the esteem always shown me in my capacity. Bro. Galloway, by command of the W.M, assumed the gavel to propose the health of the Past Masters of 148. If the Past Masters gave as much pleasure to the brethren as their W.M., he could only imagine what a continual reign of happiness and prosperity the Lodge had enjoyed. He coupled with the toast the name of Bro. Bowes. The toast was most heartily drunk, with Masonic honours. Bro. Bowes in reply said, the task of responding for the Past Masters devolved upon him, as the penalty of being eloquent. He felt greatly honoured by such a distinction, and assured the brethren that the Past Masters have always taken a deep interest in the welfare of the Lodge, and would continue so to do. There was a time when the Lodge, like many others, was not as prosperous as they could wish; but now, by indefatigable exertions, it was on a sound footing, and he looked to a career of uninterrupted prosperity in the future. Bro. Tunstall, with great pleasure, proposed The Health of the Wor. Master and Officers of 1250. In doing so, he expressed regret that all the Officers of the Lodge were not present. He need, however, tell the brethren of 1220 who were present, that the members of their Lodge were always heartily welcome. The members of 148 always feel glad when a new Lodge is added to the large roll of Lodges, and are happy to find that the tenets of the Craft are strictly carried out by 1250. He had the honour of uniting the names of Bros. Finney, Sutton and Cropper with this toast. Bro. Tunstall favoured the brethren with a song; after which Bros. Finney and Sutton returned thanks. The W.M. now rose; he had reserved the toast he was about to give them for himself, as he considered it a toast greatly esteemed. He hoped the day would never come when the Lodge would be without visiting brethren. They had present that evening a brother to whom he knew all were delighted to extend a most cordial welcome; he need not tell Bro. Davies that they would be very happy to have him visit their Lodge again. With the toast he had the pleasure of uniting the name of Bro. Davies. The toast was drunk enthusiastically, and Bro. Davies responded thereto. Bro. Cutnor kindly answered to the call for a song. The health of the Officers of the Lodge was next proposed and drunk, and Bro. Bowes, in reply, said on behalf of Bro. Treasurer and myself, I thank you for the honour done us; I am pleased to see so many round this festive board to-night, and gratified at the remarks of Bro. Davies, who regretted that there had been no work for him to witness. He hoped Bro. Davies would come and visit them again. Bro. Bowes regretted there was not uniformity of ritual in the Craft; he said, if our Brethren in ages gone by could maintain uniformity, why not we who live in the enlightened age of the 19th Century. Other Brethren replied, and after some more capital songs, the Tyler's toast brought one of the most enjoyable evenings to a close that it has been our good fortune to participate in.

Northumberland and Berwick Lodge of Mark Master Masons.—The regular meeting of this time immemorial Lodge took place on Wednesday, the 23rd October, at the Masonic Hall, Maple-street, Newcastle-on-Tyne. The Lodge was opened by Bro. W. E. Franklin Prov. G.S. of W. W.M., supported by the following Officers—Bros. W. S. Hughs P.G.S.W. I.P.M., J. Rydadale P.M. as S.W., Dr. Lake Armstrong J.W., T. J. Armstrong M.O., G. Place as S.O., J. R. Robson J.O., R. Lock Treasurer, R. G. Salmon Secretary, T. Blinkensop S.D., J. Wood J.D., S. M. Harris I.G., J. S. B. Bell Steward, and G. S. Sims Tyler. The minutes of last meeting being read and confirmed, the election of W.M. and Treasurer was then proceeded with. It resulted in the unanimous selection of Bro. W. Cockburn S.W. as W.M., and Bro. R. Lock as Treasurer. Bro. G. S. Sims was also re-elected Tyler. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. The usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured.

A full report of the meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Mark Masters of Northumberland and Durham, held under the Banner of the Union Lodge, 124, Sunderland, shall appear in next week's issue.

Common as is the occurrence to London Masons, it is not often we have to announce that the Fifteen Sections are to be worked on the same evening in a Provincial Lodge. It therefore gives us great pleasure to notify the fact that the Master and principal Officers of St. James Lodge, No. 482, Handsworth, have arranged to work them on Monday next. The Lodge will be opened at five o'clock, and we hope the meeting will prove a most interesting and instructive one. The brethren of this Lodge are noted for their hospitality, and we are given to understand many Visitors are expected on the occasion.

In our report, last week, of the Union Chapter, No. 414, Reading, in announcing the installation of Principals, we inadvertently gave the names wrong. The Principals of the Chapter, who were installed into the respective chairs by Comp. E. G. Bruton P.Z., are—Comp. R. Bradley (Prov. G. Secretary Berks and Bucks) M.E.Z., Comp. A. Portsmouth H., and Comp W. Parsons J.

NEW ZEALAND.

OUR New Zealand correspondent sends us the following items of Masonic intelligence:—

The interesting Masonic ceremony of erecting and opening a new Lodge (the Southern Cross, under the Grand Lodge of Scotland) took place at Donaldson's Post-office Hotel, Chapel-street, Prahran, on Tuesday evening, 3rd September. It was attended by a large number of the Craft, including the members for the district, Bros. G. D. Carter and E. J. Dixon. After the Provincial Grand Lodge had been opened in due form, the Prov. D.G.M., Bro. D. Grueby, presiding, owing to the unavoidable absence of the Prov. Grand Master, Bro. A. K. Smith, who was detained at the House by his Parliamentary duties, the impressive ceremony of erecting and opening was performed by the Provincial Grand Lodge Officers, the musical portions being efficiently rendered by Bros. J. Coverlid and Alfred Wheeler, Bro. A. Fritsch officiating at the organ. The members of the new Lodge were introduced and presented, and the following brothers inducted into their respective offices by the Installing Master, Bro. H. W. Lowrey:—Bros. Alfred Wheeler R.W.M., Alfred Nyberg S.W., John G. Miles J.W., E. J. Dixon Treasurer, W. C. Hawkins Secretary, Samuel Willis S.D., W. Lansly J.D., Thomas Donaldson I.G., J. Bitten Tyler. After the Lodge closed the Prov. Grand Lodge Officers and Visitors were entertained by the members of the new Lodge at a banquet provided by Bro. Donaldson.

The installation of the Worshipful Master and Officers of the Lodge of Dunedin took place on the 21st August, at the Masonic Hall, Moray-place. There was a large attendance of the Craft. The Grand Lodge of Otago and Southland, E.C., was represented by Bros. John Hyde Harris D.G.M, H. S. Fish D.D.G.M., and Officers; the Provincial Grand Lodge, S.C., by Bro. Gore D.D.P.G.M. and Officers; whilst the Otago Kilwinning Lodge, S.C., the Lodge Celtic, S.C., the Lodge St. Andrew, S.C., the Lodge St. George (Inapeka), E.C., Lodge of Otago, E.C., and Port Chalmers Marine Lodge, E.C., were represented by their respective Worshipful Masters and Officers. The Lodge having been duly opened, a Lodge of Provincial Masters was formed, Bro. S. De Leon being installed as Worshipful Master for the ensuing year. The installation ceremony was performed by Bro. E. Nathan P.M., who, assisted by Bro. Myers P.M., also installed the following Officers:—Bros. Cameron S.W., Braid J.W., Blackburne S.D., Beattie J.D., Young I.G., Asher Treasurer, Naphtali Secretary. The balance-sheet, which was of a very favourable character, was then read and adopted, after which the Lodge was closed in due form. The brethren, to the number of fifty or more, then repaired to the Criterion Hotel, where a sumptuous banquet was served in Bro. Thompson's best style, in honour of the occasion.

Prince of Wales Lodge, No. 1338, Auckland.—The Installation Meeting took place at the Freemasons' Hall, Princes-street, on Thursday, 12th September. A very large number of brethren attended the meeting, so large, indeed, as to make the want of a suitable hall with fitting accommodation for Masonic purposes severely felt; a want which received unfavourable comment from the brethren present, but one which, we are glad to learn, is about to be supplied. Many District Grand Lodge Officers and other Visitors of distinction arrived before the opening of the Lodge and during the evening, amongst these may be mentioned:—R.W.P.G.M. I.C. Bro. G. P. Pierce P.M.; V.W.D.D.G.M. E.C. E. T. Wildman P.M.; V.W.D.S.G.W. E.C. W. Lodder P.M., V.W.D.G. Treas. E.C. C. T. Goldsbro' P.M., V.W.D.G. Sec. E.C. H. G. Wade P.M., V.W.P.G. Secretary I.C. W. J. Rees P.M.; W.P.G. S.D. I.C. A. Brock P.M., W.M. Lodge Ara 348 I.C. M. Levy W.M. Lodge Eden 1530 E.C. J. Warren, W.M. Lodge Remuera 1710 E.C. H. Rees George, Wor. H. N Montagu P.M. Robert Burns Lodge 817 E.C., and P.M. Sydney Tarbolton 277 S.C. P.B.G. Sec., M. M. Irving 33, H. Brett Director of Music P.G. Lodge S.C., and following P.M.'s—W. H. Skinner 1338 E.C., M. S. Leers 942 E.C., 1338 E.C., and 380 I.C., G. M. Mitford 348 I.C. and 1338 E.C. The W.M. Bro. the Rev. C. M. Nelson opened the Lodge in form, at half-past seven, and after the usual ceremonial and preliminary routine business, Bro. Dr. Dawson S.W. of the Lodge, W.M. elect, was presented for installation to the W.M., who on this occasion acted for the first time as Installing Officer, a duty hitherto performed in the most faithful, zealous, and efficient manner by W. Bro. Leers P.M. Bro. Nelson showed himself, however, in nowise wanting in the high qualifications requisite for this important duty; the elegant, and indeed eloquent and impressive delivery of the ancient charges and important portions of the ritual of this ceremony, could not fail to enhance the beauties of Masonry in the heart of the listener, and those who had not previously visited Lodge Prince of Wales, must have indeed felt gratified at the highly efficient mode in which the working and business of the Lodge was conducted. During the evening some very excellent anthems were chanted by a choir, consisting of Bros. Brett, Skinner, Harker, Wilcox, Irving, Rogers and Montagu, Bro. Rees P.M. acting as Organist. After the conclusion of the installation and ceremonial the Board of Installed Masters was closed, the brethren of lower grades were re-admitted, and the newly-installed W.M. then formed his Lodge as follows:—Bros. F. W. E. Dawson W.M., Rev. C. M. Nelson P.M. and Chap., E. C. Dyer S.W., W. Rattray J.W., W. H. Skinner P.M. Treas., M. S. Leers P.M. Sec., E. S. Wilcocks Director of Ceremonies, S. Rogers Organist, Major General J. W. Gossett S.D., W. S. Collins J.D., J. W. Gossett I.G., C. Porter Tyler. The brethren having duly saluted the W.M., W. Bro. Nelson then impressively addressed the newly-appointed Officers and the brethren generally on their respective duties, and the installation ceremony being thus concluded, the Lodge was closed in peace, love, and harmony, and the brethren adjourned to the banquet table, well supplied by Bro. Hood. The manner in which all the wants of the inner man had been anticipated and provided for by mine host, was the theme of general commendation. After the weight on the board had been considerably diminished, the good things had disappeared, and grace was said, the exhilarating glass was circulated in strictest moderation, and the toast of the evening received due attention, interspersed by mellifluous strains from the vocalists previously mentioned, in solos, glees, and other concerted music. The W.M. proposed the following toasts in rapid succession, prefacing them with appropriate remarks:—The Queen and the Craft; H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, M.W.G.M. of England; the M.W. Grand Masters of Scotland and Ireland, Sir M. Shaw Stewart and the Duke of Abercorn. Bro. J. Adams proposed The District Grand Master, E.C., Bro. G.S. Graham, the P G. Master, S.C., Bro. P. Whitaker, and the P.G. Master, I.C., Bro. G. P. Pierce. W. Bro. Nelson then proposed, in a most eulogistic address, the toast of the evening, the W.M. of the Prince of Wales Lodge, Bro. Dawson. He alluded in feeling terms to the Masonic career of Bro. Dawson, side by side with himself in the Lodge, and but one step removed from him, and felt convinced that the welfare of the Lodge could be in no better hands, and concluding by exhorting the newly-appointed officers to support the Master by the due and earnest fulfilment of their duties. The W.M. replied very appropriately and feelingly, expressing grateful thanks for the kindness extended to him. Bro. W. H. Skinner, P.M. gave The installing Master, and took occasion to allude to the excellent way in which the ceremonies of the evening had been conducted. Bro. Nelson expressed his sincere acknowledgments. The Past Masters of the Prince of Wales Lodge was then given by Bro. R. C. Dyer S.W., and suitably acknowledged in a few most pertinent remarks by Bro. Leers P.M. This worthy brother then eloquently proposed The Visiting Brethren, coupling with the toast the name of Bro. Past Master Montagu, of Sydney, a brother of high distinction in the Craft, by whose presence the Lodge was honoured that evening. Bro. Montagu, in reply, stated that he could wish one of two things, either that the hour was much later, so that he might be spared the necessity of unworthily representing the number of distinguished brethren who were standing up in response to the toast, or that it were much earlier, so that he might have time to express the feelings he experienced at the honour so distinctly conferred on him. He realised on this occasion the full benefit of the Masonic tie. For the first time in the many years since he had been admitted to the Craft, he found himself in a peculiar position. On other occasions, when travelling through the neighbouring colonies, accompanied by his treasured certificate, he had been so well known—through his position as a journalist, and by brethren who had sat with him in Lodge and could vouch for him—that he did not require to use them. On this occasion, coming a stranger, in a strange land (except by letters of introduction), in the hurry of departure, he left his certificates behind, and hence had to work his way into Lodge. He had satisfied the closest, but very necessary scrutiny; but, once within the sacred circle of the mystic tie, the bonds of fellowship and brotherhood were cast around him in close embrace, and friends were secured where before everything seemed drear and cold. Next to benevolence and charity, hospitality was the great Masonic principle; and it became a brother who had tasted of its benefits to repay the debt by standing forward as the champion of Masonry whenever the breath of envy or malice attacked the purity of its principles. Bro. Montagu concluded by congratulating the brethren of this Lodge upon the excellence of its working, judging by the conduct of the Officers on this occasion. The Officers of the Lodge Prince of Wales was then given by Bro. E. T. Wildman D.D.G.M., in one of the best speeches of the evening, who supported his well-merited praise of these brethren by the recapitulation of his own personal experience of their efficient conduct and general merits. Bro. R. C. Dyer S.W. responded. The following toasts also received able proposal and due recognition, The D.G.L. Officers (Bro. Wildman D.D.G.M. in response), The Brethren who rendered the Music, The newly (lately) initiated Brethren, by Bro. Rattray, and The Poor and Distressed Brethren. Our Next Happy Meeting concluded the proceedings, and the brethren separated after a most agreeable evening.

The question of erecting a Masonic hall is at present occupying the earnest attention of the Officers of Lodges, and members of the Craft generally, in Auckland, and it is probable that in a short time some satisfactory scheme for that purpose will be devised. We are informed that an offer was made to the Committee, and which is certainly a liberal one, by a well-known Hotel-keeper, to erect on the site in Princes-street a first-class Hotel, on the American principle, with suites of rooms, &c., at a cost of from £10,000 to £12,000, and a Hall, entirely separate form the Hotel, at a cost of £3000, provided he got a lease for a term to be agreed upon, at the expiration of which the whole property would revert to the fraternity, or to trustees whom they may appoint.

Miss Florence Smart's Second Evening Concert will take place on Tuesday next, the 5th inst. This talented lady will be assisted on this occasion by the following vocalists:—Madame Antoinette Sterling, Miss Mary Davies, Miss Kate Hardy and Mr. Field. M. Claude Jacquinot (violin) and Mr. Walter Pettit (violoncello) will appear, and a most agreeable evening's entertainment is anticipated.

The Lord Mayor Elect (Alderman Sir Charles Whetham) has honoured Messrs. Lock and Whitfield, of Regent-street, with a sitting for his photograph, which will be reproduced by the Woodbury permanent process, and published with the November number of the British Mercantile Gazette.

DISPOSAL OF LODGE FUNDS.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—"UNION JACK'S" last Balance Sheet shows an improvement at the end of the year to this extent, that the account opened with a balance due to Treasurer of £5 3s 3d, but closed with one in hand amounting to £68 13s 5d. Yet, though apparently there is a modest Benevolent Fund, showing a balance in hand from previous year of £6 2s 6d, the bulk of the Receipts finds its way into the stomachs of the members, Refreshment figuring for a fraction over £287 out of a total Receipt from Subscriptions, &c. amounting to £392 10s 10d. "UNION JACK" says the Lodge means to vote a part of its balance to one of the Charities. Be it so, and the sooner the better. Those who eat three-fourths of their incomings should find something for those who have few or no incomings to eat. More than this need not be said.

My chief object in writing these presents is one which affords me much pleasure, and I trust your readers will be equally pleased. I am desirous of setting before them what I think is worthy of being described as a model balance sheet. It is that of a Provincial Lodge, and relates to the year 1876. But though nearly two years old, it is worth giving in summary. The statement speaks for itself.

RECEIPTS.

Balance—Cash and Masonic Hall Shares	148	9	8

Let me add that this Lodge has given £741 to Masonic Charitable Institutions, namely, £252 to Boys' School, £189 to Girls' School, £100 to Male Fund R.M.B.I., and £100 to Female Fund ditto; £100 to Local Masonic Charity. In return for these, and for its fixed annual subscription of two guineas to each of the four funds connected with the central Charities, it commands 78 votes for Boys' School, 37 for Girls' School, 24 votes Male Fund, and 24 votes Female Fund R.M.B.I., besides 100 votes to Local Masonic Charity. For its donations to non-Masonic Charity it is entitled to 11 votes for twenty years, terminable at different dates.

This is unquestionably a model balance sheet, for which the Lodge deserves the greatest kudos. Let other Lodges seek to imitate it, and our Charitable Institutions—central and local—will fare well. But what a contrast to those which have been furnished to you by "UNION JACK!"

Fraternally yours,

OLD FILE.

P.S. From a return for the year 1877-78 of the Lodges for the Province in which the above is located, I find the number of its members set down as 113. If we reckon the number at about 100 for the year 1876, we shall find the expenditure on refreshment is at the rate of very little more than £1 per member, while I should judge from the amount received as subscription (£196) that an individual members' contribution would be about twice that sum.—O.F.

"CHARITY;" IS IT "GIVING?"

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

SIR,—The correspondence in your columns on the "charity" question ought to raise some serious considerations, and I venture to start a few points. I do so because certain of our brethren seem to think: that Freemasonry exists, only, to support certain Institutions called "Masonic Charities;" that all who are called Masons are bound to subscribe sums not below a certain minimum; that no member in the Craft is free to exercise his judgment as to deserts or management of the Institutions called "Masonic Charities;" that, being Masons, they are bound to blindly and indiscriminately support such Charities, forsaking all others, while, at the same time, they are to ask for the support of the outside or popular world to "Charities" in which the initiated only, or their immediate connections, can have the slightest chance of becoming—should their necessities require it, or they become qualified—beneficially interested.

I take issue upon these points. I shall not deal with them exhaustively, and I will, as much as possible, write italics, though I shall use none.

I would proceed to show that some of the views you have admitted to your columns, if acted upon, would be subversive of all Masonic principles; for some of the proposals would end in making each Lodge meeting a mere meeting of Board of Guardians, but when each Brother gave of his substance, in place of distributing, as in legal relief, the forced contributions of others, and we should have a huge benefit Society, not for equal benefits of all subscribers, but for blind giving to the best beggars—to those who, by externals, could "qualify" readiest as the most needful to be relieved. But I shall not attempt this exhaustive work. I have charity at heart; but I cannot afford the time to demonstrate what must be clear to all who have unmuddled brains. I shall only charge myself with the task of pointing out a few plain facts, leaving clear heads to fill up the pictures.

I distinctly charge: that those who are endeavouring to make out that giving to what is called "charity" is the one essential principle of a Lodge member, are offending against the "Antient charges and regulations," inasmuch as they are countenancing dissent from the "original plan of Freemasonry." This "original plan," which is to be maintained in all its purity, is set forth in the Book of Constitutions, and those who can run can read that book. It will there be seen that the institution of gigantic "charities" was no part of the "original plan," but that proper and discriminate charity was incidental to it. It has been said that a Freemasons's Lodge is the Freemason's Church. I put it on a higher pedestal. I say a Lodge is the Freemason's Home, dedicated not only to the worship of God, but where the Freemason may unite with the "virtuous of every persuasion in the firm and pleasing bond of fraternal love." In this connection "charity," properly so-called, arises—and true charity helps—not pauperises. "It blesseth him who gives and him who receives," but your "giving," in the form of votes, troubles the thoughtful "subscriber," while it degrades the receiver. Upon this "charity voting," however, I will not enter, for I should speak too strongly upon this subject in this, my maiden effort in Masonic controversy.

I utterly deny the right of any one to fix, as you, Sir, do, and Bro. Radclyffe does, the minimum of another's charity. Charity is free, and our law, I mean of course our Masonic law, teaches us that we are to be prudent. This word should be printed in capitals, so as to impress us that we should be prudent, that we do not distress ourselves or families; that we do not cause others to give that which they should use in making their foundation in life firm; that we do not make a virtue of that which is a vice—and the greatest of all vices—ostentation in giving.—and we should remember, too, that it is no charity in a man to give that which belongs to his creditors or his family, in order that he may win renown, which a man is tempted to do by ostentatious giving. As to what could be obtained by fixing an amount which, you say, each brother ought to give, I say that it would be a great degradation and danger to the Craft to have such amounts. "Degradation," because our institution would be proved to be radically wrong if its members required to have distributed among some of them yearly such large amounts to keep them from the pangs of distress, and a "danger" because the exhibition of large giving will tempt the crafty, the lazy, and the improvident to become members of our ancient institution for the sake of what they might get. Do you doubt this? Look at any town where there are "charity" funds, and you will see that poverty gathers there as to a feast. Wretchedness is there made a trade. Look at London, and the action on the Poor Laws. Ten years ago London, with a million less population, had nearly 166,000 paupers, with a large fringe of people "on" and "off" the Poor Laws. Then trade was flourishing, and labour was heavy in its demands. To-day, without hardship to the real poor, with an added million of population—with trade terribly depressed, we have—What? Why less than 80,000 pauper population. This is because the legal charity is now discriminating. Increase your indiscriminating charities, and you will increase your applicants. I was in a country place not long ago, and found that Masonry was very popular in a poor town among the artizan and small tradesman class. The reason was, that one of that class had been elected to a "pension" on the R.M.B.I. All the improvident of that town are looking forward to their time coming when they will be qualified to become a "case." As to our institutions themselves, I have a right, as a member of the Craft, to weigh each of them in the balance, as to the amount of good done, and consider what might be done. I have endeavoured to increase the funds of the "Old Men and Womens' Institution," and successfully, for I find the funds prudently and satisfactorily applied. But if it was proposed to give pensions of two or three hundred a-year, I should withhold my support. Yet the cost of the children in the R.M.B. Schools is far above, per head, what a parent with £500 or £600 a year can afford to spend upon his child. The evil does not end with the limits thus imposed upon the "charity," and I may mention that I was sounded by a brother, who some years ago subscribed to a country Lodge for a little time, whether he would have any chance of "running" his son into a thing wherein some £60, £70, or £80 a year was the sum reputed to be spent on each boy. This Brother looked upon the thing as "good enough," because if he got it, it would give for begging more than he would care to earn. We know that certain ancient seekers passed the mouth of a cavern. Well one day I was passing with a friend, in the holidays (not this year), the door of a tavern, where resided the widow of a late brother. Quoth friend to me, pointing to a child at said door, "There's one of the Masonic School children." It was a fine boy. No depression of trade there; for the "people," somehow, always find the money to get drink; but the publican-brother had influence in his death to get votes—not because his death had left his child necessitous—but because the "case" was known; and the child is now held up as one of many who but for Masonic charity, would be wanting a home and training. When I see such things, I give my money—that which I have to give to charity—in directions where I know it will be "thankfully received, and faithfully applied."

I am not singular in holding that "giving," to be "charity," must be discriminating; for I know Lodges where the view is gaining adherents. Of late years the principles and intentions of Freemasonry have been perverted and misdirected, by almsgiving (chiefly in votes) being made the "First Principal," in place of being an "Assistant Sojourner." By degrees, we shall come again to the true principles. We shall have no split, as in France. Our English common sense will refuse to be guided by a few enthusiasts, even in charity. We shall be guided in our true charity, by that wide-spread religion of both Hebrew and Gentile, which tells us in that Book of Books, to "consider" the poor. If we properly consider them, we shall not tempt them, by the display of huge funds, to enter an Order whose primary objects are the cultivation of good fellowship among men of all creeds—best shown by all sitting down to one common table; displaying, in the best form, hospitality, kindliness, and universal charity of heart. We have, in these hard times, not too many opportunities of cultivating the social pleasures under rule of Master and Wardens, and if these opportunities are to be lost to us under the inspiration of grudging Brothers, who overlook the primary principles of the Craft, you will tumble the Craft into the mud, and the large funds now produced will be lost.

Let "UNION JACK," Bro. Dick Radclyffe, and some others, turn their attention to the Book of Constitutions, and they will learn something. Even the omniscient "we" of your columns, may find food for reflection there in.

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

DEUX ETOILES.

CHARITY STEWARDS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am sorry my letter (published in your issue of 28th September) caused your correspondent "P. T." to so far depart from the end we all have in view as to question my rendering of mere words. For this reason I never care to refer to any matter, either in Lodge or in a public journal, because, in the one case it generally ends in some one taking general remarks as made against him personally,—not, as is intended, merely in support or otherwise of a proposition,—while on the other hand some correspondent airs his particular idea of the meaning of certain words, or something equally frivolous, which in no one way affects the main argument, and merely promotes discord. I will not again refer to this or any other question which involves personality. My object always has been to promote, as far as in me lies, the welfare of our Charities, and they certainly cannot benefit through any personal arguments.

As my remarks hitherto may not clearly show my views on this subject, I will briefly recount them, as so far expressed, but would rather refer your readers to my letter in your issue of 21st September. 1st. I agree that Anniversary Festivals are necessary, but I maintain that the rules, in so far as those of our Institutions are concerned, require revision. 2nd. The advantages offered to brethren working for our Charities are inadequate.

To each of these subjects considerable space has lately been devoted in your valuable journal, with, up to the present time, in my opinion, a complete victory in favour of alteration. In fact, no one, so far as I remember, has yet said a word in support of the present rules being maintained.

Bro. Binckes's third letter, treating of "The Inadequate Return for Expenditure," supports rather the idea of an alteration being necessary. He points out that fifty lists such as the one which forms the basis of his remarks would realise no less than 1,500 guineas. Then, I say, Why not do something to encourage such workers? it is to them we look for systematic and continued support; to the enthusiast of the day for exceptional and spasmodic contributions. As I have before stated, no rule should be allowed to continue which can give offence to even one person likely to help the cause if it can be so altered as to meet the objection, and hence it is I would advise a thorough discussion as to the best means to be adopted to lighten, if possible, the expenses of Stewardships. I feel sure that in this matter liberality would tend to increased returns; and if some concessions were made in the way of votes to brethren such as "A STEWARD WHO HAS SERVED ONCE," I believe they would prove a profitable investment.

I remain, yours respectfully and fraternally,

ALPHA.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have been anxiously looking forward to Bro. Binckes's fourth letter on this subject, which is of far too great importance to be allowed to drop for want of a little thoughtful discussion. I know, of course, that his time is fully occupied, that he has his various Committees to attend, and that he is also here, there, and everywhere, doing all in his power to get Stewards and others to support his School. But great things are expected from great men, and "Our Hercules" is one in whom we look for herculean labours, among which can hardly be included the task of writing another letter. Were Bro. Binckes somebody else, people might arrive at the conclusion that "ALPHA" or another person among your correspondents had proved too much for him, but this is out of the question. So I trust you, Bro. Editor, will exert your powers of persuasion on Bro. Binckes, and induce him to forward that promised letter, so long and so anxiously expected by,

Yours fraternally,

TOOTSICUMS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The circular letter in last issue of the CHRONICLE, from Bro. Dick Radclyffe, informing the Craft if they did this, and if they did that, such and such would be the result. These remarks offer not a single new idea, and are somewhat inflated, and unlikely to produce much good from Masons generally, whatever effect they may have on the Brethren of St. John's, No. 209.

In reality, our Bro. Radclyffe says plainly, I have screwed my courage to the point of Stewardship for two of the Charities; now, after this sacrifice on my part, it really is your bounden duty to put your names on my list for at least so-and-so.

I fear the Craft as a body will not take kindly to the style adopted, and that our brother's belief and assurance that each individual appealed to will dispose of a book of his tickets ("if he relies on such sure support") will meet with disappointment. This disposal of ticket business has been done again and again, and nearly to death. The worthy brother, energetic enough in print, but wanting a deal of help, if he means business, and intends getting amounts on his lists worthy the big flourish he commences his Stewardship with, should remember that the issue of circular letters containing oft-told platitudes and impossible facts, with well worn theories, that won't work—about every brother selling a book of his tickets—is mere moonshine, and leads to no material result.

Rather should a Steward who means work, one having the welfare of the Charities at heart, personally visit Lodge after Lodge, bringing before its members (of course, by permission of the W.M.) the claims of the Institutions whose cause he is advocating, and point out the good done and doing; and not alone by once stating the case. The facts culled from the published records of the Charities are all sufficient to move the hearts of good Masons. The Craft require no taunting; a personal reminder put to a Lodge or Chapter, with tact and discretion, has many times been followed by a vote of ten guineas; at other times, when the cash has not been voted then and there, a promise has been given to take the matter into consideration at a future meeting; faith has been kept the money has been voted, the Steward for the Institution has been favoured with instructions to place such an amount on his list. All this means—Time, Work, and Money; but, on the principle if a thing is worth doing, 'tis worth doing well, a personal appearance is more valuable than a hundred-weight of papers or letters, with which Lodges and brethren get inundated.

Our Charities have their years of prosperity, and also those of depression,—this is the natural sequence of the country's commercial success, or the reverse for the time being; but the vast progress these Institutions have made, the immense good accomplished and doing, bars the words "reproach" or "disgrace," as applied to the Craft in their voluntary and generous support given to the Charities. Our Institutions are not suing in forma pauperis for aid; they but ask the Craft to support and maintain what they have created; and never will that appeal be made in vain, spite of mere expression of individual opinion. Should, unfortunately, an extraordinary effort at any time be required on behalf of one or all the Charities, my belief is, the appeal would meet with a generous and liberal response; nonparing hands would give, and subscriptions would be received, not only from the body at home, but from the English Craft throughout the world.

Yours fraternally,

CHARLES GODTSCHALK P.M. 70 and 1255.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER, — Will you permit me to call further attention to a very excellent proposition made by Bro. Dick Radclyffe in his letter which appeared in your journal of last week.

Bro. Radclyffe very properly observes, with regard to the Charity Elections, "Let it be understood that all candidates who have been subscribing members should take precedence at elections." The force of this suggestion will be readily admitted by those who have studied the summaries of candidates published from time to time in the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, where you have repeatedly referred to the few applications which possessed the recommendation that the candidate had been mindful of the claims of our Institutions in his days of prosperity. The performance of this duty ought undoubtedly to be remembered, should calamity or misfortune overtake the subscriber, and there are several plans by which this could be effected, if the Committees now revising the Laws were to take them into consideration.

Perhaps the simplest arrangement would be the issue of additional votes at each election, according to an agreed scale, to such candidates as possessed the claim of having been charity subscribers. Possibly an invitation from you to Bro. Radclyffe, or to some of the many brethren who interest themselves in our Institutions, would be met by the preparation of a scheme which would commend itself to the Committees, and result in a due recognition of the principle that those who have assisted others should have special consideration in the hour of need.

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

C. P.

THE FOUR OLD LODGES.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Referring to the kindly remarks of Bro. W. J. Hughan, in your impression of the 12th instant, the truly fraternal tone of which I much appreciate, I am sorry to have been so far unsuccessful in converting this esteemed brother to my own way of thinking with regard to the present status of Original No. 3 (now Fortitude and Old Cumberland).

Very shortly I trust to put my views as to this Lodge's position before the Masonic public in a connected form, but meantime the readers of the CHRONICLE may perhaps bear with me if I claim a little of your space, wherein to supplement, by a few additional remarks, what has already appeared in your columns in respect to this Lodge.

1. The acceptance of a Warrant in 1723 was followed by no penal consequences until 1729.

2. The adjustment of the precedency of Lodges was left to the (four) Grand Officers, amongst whom one only of the four old Lodges (Original No. 4) was represented.

3. Immediately after the publication of the engraved list for 1729, when for the first time Lodges were shown in order of seniority, a protest was registered by Original No. 3, "against their misplacement in the printed book, whereby they lost their rank."

I submit, therefore, that the degradation of this Lodge six years after the occurrence, upon which the decision of the "four Grand Officers" was based (approved, however, by Grand Lodge, who dismissed the appeal of the parties concerned), besides being an ex post facto law, was an undoubted violation of the Original Constitutions (embodied in the solemn compact of 1721) by which only the four old Lodges were governed, and was, moreover, in manifest breach of the LANDMARK set up as a check to innovation and absolute dominion, viz.:—

"That every privilege which they (the four old Lodges) collectively enjoyed, by virtue of their immemorial rights, they should still continue to enjoy, and that no law, rule or regulation, to be hereafter made, should deprive them of such privileges, or encroach on any landmark which was at that time established as the standard of Masonic Government."

Yours fraternally,

R. F. GOULD.

OLD LODGES.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The following extract from the Warrant of Confirmation under which we of the Strong Man are now working may assist in clearing up the mystery with which the career of the Lodge is surrounded, and if some brother of the Medina would kindly publish a similar extract, we should then know the positions we do and ought to occupy.

Yours truly and fraternally,

H. J. D.

After the customary greeting, the warrant reads:—

"Whereas, it appears by the Record of our Grand Lodge, that a warrant, bearing date the 2nd day of February, 1734, was issued under the seal of Masonry, enabling certain brethren therein named to open and hold a Lodge of Freemasons at the Ship Coffee House, Hermitage-Bridge, London, to be called the Strong Man Lodge, which was then No. 110; and whereas, by the general closing up of the list of Lodges in the year 1740 the said Lodge became No. 98. By the closing up of the list of Lodges in the year 1756 it became No. 68. In the year 1770 the said Lodge became No. 57. By the closing up of the list of Lodges in the year 1781 it became No. 44. And by the closing up of the list of Lodges in 1792 it became No. 41, and which Lodge, in consequence of the Union of the two Fraternities of Freemasons on the 27th day of December 1813, became and is now registered in the books of the United Grand Lodge No. 61, and meets at the SWAN Tavern, Mansel-street, Goodman's Fields, London."

P.S.—Since then the Lodge has been No. 53, and its present No. is 45.

THINGS ONE WOULD LIKE TO KNOW.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Why Past Masters, or actual Officers of one Lodge, when visiting another Lodge, wear their collars of Office to the distraction of other Visitors, and sometimes to that of the W.M.? Is there any Constitutional law relating thereto?

Fraternally yours,

FORTE.

DRAMATIC.—The Sheffield Masonic Amateur Dramatic Society gave two performances at the Freemasons' Hall, Sheffield, on Thursday and Friday 24th and 25th Oct., and they were both most successful. The pieces represented were Charles the Second, My Uncle's Will, and Still Waters Run Deep,—the male characters being taken by the Sheffield brethren; the Ladies' parts by Miss Marie Montgomery, and Miss Frederica Taylor, of London, who respectively made their mark as Florence Marigold in My Uncle's Will, and Mrs. Sternhold in Still Waters. We understand that two more such entertainments are to take place towards the end of this month.

INSTALLATION MEETINGS, &c.

Paxton Lodge, No. 1686.—The anniversary meeting of this Lodge was held on Saturday last, at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham. The Lodge may be described as an off-shoot of the Stockwell Lodge, No. 1339; it was consecrated in July of last year, and has performed its duties and responsibilities in a manner that has merited the commendation of all who wish well to the Craft universal. The Lodge was opened by the W.M. Bro. J. M. Klenck, who was supported by Bros. F. W. Goddard and H. Thompson P.M. as Senior and Junior Wardens respectively, and a good assemblage of members and visitors. After the minutes of last meeting had been read and confirmed, Bro. H. E. Frances P.M., P.P.S.G.D. Surrey, took the chair as Installing Master, and Bro. Klenck introduced the W.M. elect, Bro. F. W. Goddard, to the presiding Officer to receive at his hands the benefits of installation. After Bro. Goddard had signified his intention to conform to and support the ancient Charges and Regulations, the obligation was administered, a Board of Installed Masters was formed, and the ceremony proceeded. On the re-admission of the brethren, the appointment of Officers was made:—Sawyer S.W., Boswell J.W., J. M. Klenck I.P.M. Treasurer, H. E. Frances P.M. Secretary, Woodhams S.D., Bassett J.D., Dodd I.G., Walker D.C., Frank Goddard W.S., Partridge A.W.S., Radford Tyler. In investing his Officers Bro. Goddard made some happy remarks in reference to the responsibilities they were severally taking upon themselves, and urged one and all to assist him in promoting the welfare of the Lodge. The addresses were then delivered by Bro. Frances, who resumed his seat amidst the congratulations of all present. The W.M. then rose for the purpose of presenting a Past Master's jewel of most artistic design to Bro. Klenck I.P.M., and in doing so, Bro. Goddard congratulated Bro. Klenck on the success of his Mastership, and tendered him the hearty good wishes of those over whom he had so genially presided. He also expressed a hope that the recipient of the jewel might long wear it on his breast, and that he might long continue a member of the Lodge which owed its foundation to him. The jewel had on it the following inscription:—

"Paxton Lodge, No. 1686. Presented to Bro. J. M. Klenck, in appreciation of his services as First W.M. and Founder. Oct. 1878."

Bro. Klenck acknowledged the gift in appropriate terms, but was brief in his remarks, as he had to address the meeting later in the evening. Bro. Goddard then rose and presented, for the acceptance of the Lodge, a banner of elegant design, and beautifully wrought by Bro. Frances, Secretary; and on the motion of Bro. Klenck, a vote of thanks was unanimously passed, and ordered to be inscribed on the minutes. The vote having been duly acknowledged, Bro. Frances rose and said, he, too, had a banner which he begged the Lodge would do him the favour to accept. It was intended to show the intimate connection existing between Freemasonry and Charity, and had inscribed on it the name of three brethren, members of the Lodge, who had qualified as Vice-Presidents of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. Though the number was at present limited, he trusted that in due time the banner would be filled with names of those who had similarly distinguished themselves. The banner was accepted, and a suitable vote of thanks passed and acknowledged. It may be as well to add that this, too, was the work of the donor, and the wonder is that he can find time to produce so many works distinguished by such artistic merit. On the motion of Bro. Goddard it was agreed that for the future the Lodge should meet on the last Saturday in March, April, May, September, and October. Bro. Bassett having proposed a vote of thanks to the auditors (carried), and several letters of apology from Colonel Burdett, Colonel Peters, Rev. R. J. Simpson, Captain Durrant, and other brethren, expressing their regret at being unable to be present, having been read, Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet. The menu, it is needless to say, was an excellent one; Brothers Bertram and Roberts were the caterers on the occasion. After the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts had been proposed and acknowledged with the utmost heartiness, Bro Klenck rose and proposed the health of the W. Master. He remarked that the brethren had known him from the foundation of the Lodge as being one of the founders, and therefore they had had every opportunity of judging of his merits. He congratulated Bro. Goddard, who was a true man and Mason, on the position he occupied, and felt sure he would acquit himself worthily of his duties and responsibilities. Bro. Goddard, though acknowledging himself "poor in thanks," yet very gratefully acknowledged the kindness of the I.P.M. in proposing the toast in such laudatory terms, and the brethren in so heartily endorsing them, and at the close of a neat response, proposed the health of the Installing Master, Bro. Frances. This was responded to, Bro. Frances remarking that he had felt no hesitation in installing Bro. Goddard, because he knew the W.M. was one who would never disgrace the chair. It then became the duty of the W.M. to propose the health of the I.P.M., and at the same time to present to that worthy brother a further evidence of the esteem and respect in which he was held. This evidence was in the form of a very handsome testimonial on vellum, enclosed in a deep gold frame, and bearing the inscription:—

"Presented to John Matthew Klenck, P.M., in testimony of the high esteem in which he is held by his brother members; his exertions in behalf of the Masonic Charities; his efficient services to the Lodge; and to commemorate his being the first W.M., and one of the founders."

The testimonial was the work of Bro. Frances, and in every way worthy of his ability as an artist. The design was a most elaborate one, and beautifully carried out; and what adds greatly to its value as a testimonial is the fact of the portraits of the several founders of the Lodge, with their autographs, having been introduced, and ably worked in, so as to harmonise with the general design. Brother Klenck expressed, as far as it was possible for him to do so, his deep sense of this further proof of the kindly feeling entertained towards him by the brethren of the Paxton Lodge. He should strive to do his duty in the future as conscientiously as he had striven to do it in the past. He was delighted with the harmony that prevailed in the Lodge, and trusted it would always continue. Then followed other toasts, including those of the Visitors, the Press (acknowledged by Bros Moreau and Thompson) and the Officers. In the intervals between the speeches several songs were very effectively sung by Bro. Sawyer and others, and when the Tyler's toast brought the proceedings to a close, those present rose and departed, well pleased with their entertainment. The following Visitors were present, namely:—H. C. Levander Prov. G. Sec. Middlesex, H. Thompson P.M. 177, Chas. F. Johns 1287, Thos. J. Robertson 1538, Moritz Rosenblum 1339, Wm. McKay 1339, Jubal Webb, W. W. Morgan 211, &c.

Hemming Lodge, No. 1512.—This Lodge held its installation meeting on Thursday, the 17th October, at its Lodge Room, Lion Hotel, Hampton. Bros John Hammond P.M. 201 P.G. Steward Middlesex W.M., C. W. Fox P.M. 1326 W.M.-elect S.W., John Cameron Jessett J.W., W. Hammond P.M. P.P.G.D. Middlesex Secretary, E. Hopwood P.M. 141 P.G.S.B. Middlesex Treas., T. Moody Acting S.D., T. C. Walls P.P.G. Org. Middlesex J.D., F. W. Kent D.C., J. W. Hiscox Steward, John Gilbert P.G.T. Middlesex Tyler. Past Masters Bros. John Hurst, Samuel Hill, D. B. Raw and other members. Bros. Davey, Cox, Papworth, Day, Patey, Hanlon, Beauchamp, Andrews, Messenger, Jones, Tagg, Wheeler, Murphy, &c. Visitors—Bros. J. W. Baldwin P.M. 1423 P.P.G.P. Middlesex, W. Fisher P.M. 834, Handel, Turner, Borrell, and White (all of 1656), T. G. Hamilton S.W. 1306. W. Bartlett, E. Russell and R. M. Axford were separately initiated into the mysteries of the Craft. During a break in the ceremony, the Right Worshipful Prov. G.M. Colonel Burdett entered, and was duly saluted in accordance with the honours of his exalted position. The gavel having been presented, was at once returned to the W.M. Bro. T. Hanlon was now passed to the degree of F.C., and subsequently Bros. Bray, Cox, and Carpenter were ably raised to the sublime degree, the obligations being administered separately. The W.M. next installed his successor, Bro. Copeman William Fox P.M. 1326, who at once invested his Officers, viz.:—Bro. J. C. Jessett S.W., T. W. Ockenden, by deputy, he being unavoidably absent as an Officer of the new Lodge of Progress 1768, then in the act of Consecration. The Treasurer and Secretary were re-invested, with kind, complimentary remarks from the W.M. T. C. Walls S.D., F. W. Kent J.D., J. W. Hiscox I.G., T. Moody M.C., Harry Tagg Steward, W. J. Day Junior Steward. The Installing Master then gave the addresses with excellent precision and effect. Other business incident upon the duties of the occasion were then proceeded with. Allusion must not be omitted to the report of the Audit Committee, consisting, by virtue of the bye-laws of the Lodge, of the P.M.'s and Officers, nearly all of whom were present at the audit. After a payment of ten guineas to the Charities, three guineas to the Bardett Testimonial Fund, and over fifty guineas to the funds of Grand Lodge and Prov. Grand Lodge, a cash balance remains in the hands of the Treasurer of over thirty-five pounds, in addition to arrears due. We append the auditors' remarks upon this result:—"With every liability met, the W.M. thus enters upon the duties of his important post with the pleasing anticipation of continued marked success, and the Committee feel confident that with this excellent balance in hand, his known philanthropy will secure a further respectable increase to the objects of benevolence. One of the foremost to be considered is that of the testimonial to the memory of our lamented Bro. Little, late D.P.G.M., a generally beloved brother of the Province. This testimonial, so thoroughly deserved, whatever form it might have taken, commands the sympathy of the entire Craft, from the benevolently practical nature it assumes for the future."

Castle Lodge, No. 1621.—The Installation meeting of this Lodge was held at the Crown Hotel, Bridgnorth, on Friday, October 25th. A Lodge of Emergency was opened at two o'clock, when the ballot proving unanimous Mr. Thomas Dowell was initiated by the W.M. Bro. E. Jones Chittey in his usual impressive manner. The Auditor's Report and other business having been disposed of, the Lodge was closed in due form. At three o'clock the brethren reassembled for the event of the day, when there were present Bros. E. J. Chittey W.M., H. B. Southwell S.W., A. Colles, M.B., J.W. Hubert Smith Treasurer, Thomas Whitefoot Secretary, Jos. Stokes I.P.M., P.M. 252, P. Prov. G.S.W. Worcestershire, F. Foxall S.D. C. Deighton J.D., J. Sewell Organist; Elihu Price, W. Simms, E. M. Southwell, W. L. Southwell, A. S. Trevor, T. Whitefoot jun.; and T. Tyler Tyler. Among the visitors were Bros. Sir Offley Wakeman, Bart., W.M. 478 P.G.S.W. Oxon, E. M. Wakeman, W.M. 262 P.G.S.W. Shropshire and North Wales, George Taylor P.M. 377 P.G.P. Worcestershire, Horton Adkins J.D. 1261, F. Chittey 1551, J. W. Chadwick 377. The Lodge having been opened, and the minutes confirmed, Bro. H. B. Southwell, the W.M. elect, was duly presented and obligated. Lodge was then advanced, and the ceremony of installation proceeded with, Bro. Joseph Stokes P.M., P.M. 252 P.P.G.S.W. Worcestershire, acting as Installing Master; the chair of Senior and Junior Warden being filled by Bros. E. M. Wakeman W.M. 262, P.G.S.W. Shropshire and North Wales, and George Taylor P.M. 377, P.G.P. Worcestershire, respectively. Bro. H. B. Southwell having been formally inducted into the chair, the brethren were readmitted and saluted their new Master, who then invested his Officers as follow: Bros. A. Colles, M.B., S.W., F. Foxall J.W., Hubert Smith Treasurer, Thomas Whitefoot Secretary, T. Pratt S.D., W. Simms J.D., E. J. Chittey D.C., John Sewell Organist, A. S. Trevor I.G. E. M. Southwell, Thomas Whitefoot jun. and E. Cooper Stewards, T. Tyler Tyler. The ceremony was throughout rendered in a highly efficient and impressive manner by the Installing Master. On its completion the W.M. rose to present Bro. E. J. Chittey, the outgoing Master, with a very handsome Past Master's Jewel, and expressed, on behalf of the Members, their appreciation of the great services rendered by him, not only during his year of office, but as a founder of the Lodge and an incessant worker for its interests. Bro. Chittey expressed the pleasure he felt in receiving that mark of esteem from the brethren of the Lodge with which he was so intimately connected, and whose interests he had so deeply at heart. Hearty good wishes having been tendered by the Visitors from their respective Lodges, Lodge was closed in due form and the brethren adjourned to the banquet, which was served in excellent style by the host Bro. J. S. Vince. After grace the loyal and other toasts usual on these occasions were duly honoured, and the W.M. in responding to the toast of his health expressed a confident hope in being able to keep up the efficient working of the Lodge, assured as he was of the ready assistance of the two experienced brethren who had preceded him in the chair, and relying upon the earnest cooperation of his brother Officers. Bros. Stokes and Chittey responded to the toast of the Past Masters, and Bros. Taylor, Chadwick, Adkins and Chittey on behalf of the Visitors. During the evening some capital songs were given, and Bro. Sewell, Organist, greatly contributed to the evening's amusement by playing several selections. For the convenience of those brethren who had come from a distance, the Tyler was summoned shortly before eight, and an extremely pleasant evening was then brought to a close.

Prince of Wales Lodge, No. 1705, Gosport.—The installation of Bro. C. B. Whitcomb, on his entering upon a second term of office, took place on Thursday, 24th ult., at the Star Assembly Rooms, which had been tastefully decorated for the occasion. Canvin Tyler, William Thomlinson Assistant Tyler. In the course of the proceedings, Bro. G. F. Lancaster, on behalf of the brethren, presented the W.M. with the following vote of thanks, beautifully illuminated on vellum and richly framed:—"Ancient, Free, and Accepted Masons of England—Prince of Wales Lodge, 1705.—Extract from Minutes of Lodge held on the 26th of September 1878:—"Resolved unanimously, that the best thanks of this Lodge be, and are hereby heartily accorded to Brother Charles Benjamin Whitcomb W.M., for the very able, painstaking, and courteous manner in which he has, as first Master of the Lodge, performed the duties of his office.—James W. Stroud, Secretary." At the conclusion of the business of the Lodge the brethren adjourned to the India Arms Hotel, where an excellent banquet was served. On the removal of the cloth the customary Masonic toasts were duly honoured, and the W.M. was warmly eulogised for the able and zealous manner in which he had discharged the duties of his office during the past year. In the course of the proceedings the W.M. presented Bro. G. F. Lancaster with a handsome meerschaum pipe and carved smoking set complete, in recognition of his untiring efforts on behalf of the Lodge.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.—The will of Mr. George Bryan Jennings, late of 23 Philpot-lane, and of Shelley House, Chipping Ongar, merchant, who died on the 16th Sept., has just been proved by Mrs. Cecil Frances Jennings, the widow. The testator, after leaving his furniture and household effects to his wife absolutely, leaves the rest of his property to her for life, and then to his children. The will of Mr. Louis Alexander Mounder, late of A 1 Tower, Smithfield Market, licensed victualler, who lost his life on the 3rd Sept., by the sinking of the Princess Alice, was proved on the 17th Oct. by Mr. F. C. Mundet, the brother, the surviving executor. The testator's property is divisible among his children in equal shares, the provisions in favour of his wife becoming inoperative in consequence of Mrs. Mundet having been drowned at the same time with her husband. The will of Mr. John Cole Cole, late of Riches-court, Lime-street, and of Smithfield, Caterham, Surrey, who died on the 11th Sept., was proved on the 5th Oct. by Mrs. Catherine Cole, the widow, and Mr. John Cole, the son, the executors. The testator leaves all his real and personal estate to his wife absolutely. The will and codicil of Mr. Thomas Edwards, formerly of Old Broad-street, but late of Harrow, who died on 13th August last, were proved on the 14th Oct. by Mr. A. J. Edwards and Mr. C. C. Edwards, the sons, the acting executors, the personal estate being sworn under £15,000. The testator bequeaths to James Cutler Vyse, if in his service at his death, £200; to his executors, £100 each for their trouble; to his sister Susannah, £100; to his friend Mr. Steer, 19 guineas; to his daughter Beatrice, £1000; and the residue of his property to all his children.—City Press.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

The Queen remains at Balmoral Castle.

Cabinet Councils were held on Friday, and on Wednesday, from which Colonel Stanley, Mr. W. H. Smith, Sir M. Hicks-Beach and Lord John Manners were the only members absent.

Among the political speeches of the week have been those of Sir W. Harcourt at Scarborough, Lord Carlingford at Bath, Mr. Leatham at Huddersfield, and Mr. Chamberlain at Birmingham, all condemning the foreign policy of the Government. Colonel Mure, Mr. Ritchie, Lord Hardwicke, and Mr. Gore Langton, at other meetings, have spoken in approval of the Government.

The polling at Peterborough on Tuesday resulted in a large majority for the Hon. J. W. Fitzwilliam. Mr. G. Potter had previously withdrawn from the contest.

Lord Dufferin, the ex-Governor-General of Canada, arrived at Derry on Monday, and proceeded next day to Belfast. In both cities he was presented with addresses of congratulation.

The Report upon the alleged atrocities perpetrated upon the Mussulman population of the Rhodope district has been published as a Parliamentary Paper. The Report is signed by the British, French, Italian, and Turkish Commissioners.

Among the most important papers that have been read at the Social Science Congress at Cheltenham have been those by the Hon. G. Brodrick upon Education, Mr. D. Chadwick upon the Causes of Depression in Trade, Mr. Hullah upon Musical Education, and Mr. Michael, Q.C., upon Sanitation. The meetings were brought to a close on Wednesday.

The funeral rites for the late Cardinal Cullen were celebrated at the Roman Catholic Cathedral in Dublin, but it is expected that the body of the deceased prelate will be interred at Clonliffe.

Mr. C. H. Robarts was on Thursday elected by the Court of Common Council to the office of Remembrancer of the City of London.

The Coastguard cruiser Fanny was run down and sunk on Thursday morning off the Tuskar Light by the Helvetia steamer, bound for New York. Seven of the crew were saved, and 17 are missing.

A contract has been signed between a London firm and the German Government for raising the sunken ironclad Grosser Kurfürst.

The magistrate and assessors conducting the Board of Trade Inquiry into the loss of the Princess Alice on Monday decided that no blame was shown to rest upon the master of the Bywell Castle; that the two engineers of that vessel were blamable for leaving the engine-room on the occurrence of the collision, but no negligence had been proved against them. The first mate of the Princess Alice was liable to the charge of carelessness in not setting a proper look-out, but as it was not proved that his negligence had contributed to the collision his certificate was returned to him.

The Coroner's inquest upon the twelve persons killed by the collision at Pontypridd Junction found that the accident was attributable to the negligence of the signalman, who was thereupon committed for trial upon a charge of manslaughter.

The Coroner's inquest in the case of the Liverpool Music Hall accident resulted in a verdict of accidental death, but the jury condemned the means of exit from the building as inadequate

The wife of a manager of a strolling dramatic company, with her three children, sleeping in a caravan at Newtown, Montgomery, were rendered insensible by the fumes from a coke fire. The children died, and the woman is not expected to recover.

Joseph Garcia, a Spanish sailor, was convicted of the murder of a labourer, his wife, and three children, whose house, at Llangibby, he broke into and robbed. The prisoner was sentenced to death. Patrick John Byrne was found guilty of the murder of two brother soldiers at Northampton, and was condemned to death.

The liquidators of the City of Glasgow Bank have resolved to make a call upon the shareholders of £500 per share. The charges against the ex-directors and secretary have been extended by one for embezzlement in misappropriating bills deposited by customers, and the accused have been formally committed for trial. Mr. Nichol Fleming and another ex-director have left the country.

The Afghan difficulty remains in an uncertain position. By the desire of the Imperial Government a second letter has been sent by the Viceroy to the Ameer, Shere Ali, warning him of the consequences that must follow from his persistence in a refusal to receive a British Mission, and, therefore, no decisive action can be expected for some time. The Native Princes have for the most part offered substantial aid to the Indian Government in any effort that may be made, and the military preparations on the frontier are being carried on with undiminished activity. The Russian Press adopt a very bellicose tone with respect to the dispute between the Indian Government and the Ameer of Afghanistan, some of the papers, and those the most important, urging their Government to render efficient support of Shere Ali for the furtherance of Russian interests in Asia. In Eastern Europe the state of affairs is still very unsatisfactory. The Russian troops in Roumelia have been strengthened by reinforcements from beyond the Balkans, and an intimation has been given to the Porte that the territory will not be evacuated until substantial guarantees are given for the safety of the Christian population. The insurrection in Macedonia is extending, and representations have been made to the foreign Ambassadors at Constantinople in remonstrance against the article of the Treaty of Berlin which leaves Eastern Roumelia under the rule of the Sultan. The Turkish Government ascribe this movement to foreign incitement, and the German and Austrian papers assert that numerous Russian Volunteers are serving with the insurgents. It appears that there is no present intention of extending the Austrian occupation of the Western provinces of Turkey, and a partial demobilisation of the army is being carried out. Baron Depretis has failed to form a Cabinet at Vienna, and in the Hungarian Diet a demand for the impeachment of the Foreign Minister has been presented by the Anti-Slav Deputies. The German authorities are vigorously enforcing the anti-Socialist law, and numerous political associations have been closed, while various newspapers have been suppressed. Some discontent has been evinced by the exhibitors at the Paris Exposition with respect to the award of prizes, and the authorities have interfered to prevent public manifestation of that feeling. An attempt, happily unsuccessful, was made to assassinate the King of Spain on Friday, while riding in Madrid. The assassin, a Socialist workman, is arrested. The Communal elections in Belgium have been favourable to the Liberals. The Khedive of Egypt has signed a decree approving the transfer to the State of landed property held by members of his family, and has also sanctioned the raising of a loan secured upon that property. The United States Government has presented a complaint to the British Government respecting the expulsion of American fishermen from the Newfoundland Coast, and the press of that country approve the action of their Government, and insist that unless the British Government give satisfaction the amount of the Halifax award ought not to be paid.

That Companion Joseph Smith, Past Director of Ceremonies of the Supreme Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of England, was, on the 30th of July last, suspended, by order of the Board of General Purposes, "from all his Masonic functions and privileges, for a period of two years." That the said suspension was reported to and approved by Grand Lodge, on the 4th of September last, and in accordance with Article 10, page 6, of the Royal Arch Regulations, Grand Chapter will proceed to declare Companion Joseph Smith suspended from his Arch Masonic functions.

The President will therefore move:—

Companion Joseph Smith, being an elected member of the Committee of General Purposes of the Supreme Grand Chapter, is, by reason of his suspension, disqualified from attending such Committee, it will therefore be necessary that the Grand Chapter elect another Companion to fill the vacancy thus caused.

(Signed) JOHN CREATON, President.

ROYAL ARCH FREEMASONRY IN YORKSHIRE.

INSTALLATION OF SIR H. EDWARDS AS PROVINCIAL GRAND SUPERINTENDENT.

ON Wednesday the interesting ceremony of installing the Provincial Grand Superintendent of West Yorkshire R.A. Masons took place at Sheffield, under the auspices of the Chapters of Paradise and Loyalty. A large number of Companions assembled on the occasion, fully 250 being present. The ceremony of installation was ably performed by Lieut.-Colonel Le Gendre Starkie, Prov. Grand Superintendent of East Lancashire, who, in reply to a cordial salutation of him, explained the order of procedure for the day, a ceremony which became necessary through the decease of the late Prov. Grand Superintendent Bentley Shaw. After the necessary formalities, Lieut.-Col. Sir H. Edwards was introduced to the Companions, and his patent from Grand Chapter having been examined and read, he was duly and regularly installed Prov. Grand Superintendent. In placing him in his chair Colonel Starkie expressed the hope that, as Sir Henry had adorned the Masonic world in the Craft, so he might continue to do in Royal Arch Masonry; as he was now in the zenith of his life, so might he rise to the zenith of Masonic distinction. (Applause.)

Comp. Drury, Sheffield, and Comp. Booth, Halifax, were then appointed respectively S. and J., and the appointment of the other Officers followed.

In reply to the salute of the Companions,

Sir Henry Edwards said:—Companions,—No one could stand in the position that the present moment occupies, as Provincial Grand Superintendent of this Province, without feeling some emotion. It is now approaching four years since I was installed Provincial Grand Master of West Yorkshire by Lieut.-Colonel Le Gendre N. Starkie, and to-day have been placed by him at the head of this Chapter, in the position lately occupied by our departed Companion Bentley Shaw. Deeply do we all regret that the space of four years should have witnessed the retirement of one distinguished Prov. Grand Superintendent and the death of another, and the necessity for the installation of myself in their room. I could have wished that His Royal Highness, the head of the Royal Arch Freemasons, had expressed his desire that some other Companion in this Province should have been installed in this high office instead. I could not, however, set aside what has almost been a command from His Royal Highness, that I should take this office, but now having accepted it from a sense of duty, I hope no regret lingers in the breast of any other Companion on the appointment which the head of the Grand Chapter of England has thought fit to make in the person of your Provincial Grand Master. (Hear, hear.) To fill both these high offices does indeed create no little sentiment of emotion—feeling the double responsibility of high duties to perform, viz., to sustain the dignity of this Grand Chapter, as well as Provincial Grand Lodge; to maintain the honour of Freemasonry, to preserve the ancient landmarks of our Order, and to enforce mildly, yet courageously, the discipline of the Books of Constitution. To me it is a real pleasure to leave outside the doors of this Chapter for the moment all those differences and disputes which create dissensions more or less with persons engaged with politics or with religious opinion, or the business occupations of the world, and to be engaged with a number of Royal Arch Masons, all of one mind, all of one voice, and all of one heart, in the performance of a solemn ceremony as that which the Prov. Grand Superintendent of East Lancashire has now so perfectly and eloquently performed. (Applause.) This visit, which we have received from him to-day is one of prompt promise. No sooner had I felt the necessity of complying with the commands of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales than I applied to my gallant Brother and Companion to undertake this ceremony of installation. You have greeted him most warmly, with the honour due to his rank, and on behalf of myself and this Grand Chapter, we thank him heartily and sincerely for the journey he has taked to Sheffield, the admirable manner he has performed the ceremony, and the exhortation he has given us. His name will never be forgotten by the Freemasons of East Lancashire, and I am quite sure the Masonic work which he undertakes in that large Province will bear good fruit to remotest time; and amongst the fruits of that work is a course of public usefulness outside the Lodge as well as in it, and which East Lancashire warmly appreciates. (Hear hear.) The ostensible objects of Royal Arch Masonry, the end and aim of this branch of our symbolic system, the study of its history—revealed and traditional, is to bring us into more intimate connection with certain canonical books of the Holy Scriptures. Numberless authorities well known, have amply explained the ritual of this order in Freemasonry. It inspires its members with most exalted ideas, and leads to the exercise of the purest reverence for the eternal Ruler of the Universe, the elemental spring and primordial source of religious principles, the very fountain of the virtues Faith, Hope and Charity; resolving conjectures into certainties, and bringing traditional history into historical harmony with Biblical facts. (Hear hear and applause.) These have confirmed, in a remarkable manner, the groundworks of our noble Order. It is an Order of which every Master Mason or student of religion founded on the Bible ought to become a supporter, to the best of his time and means. This was an earnest desire of my lamented predecessor in this chair, expressed at Huddersfield the last time he officially appeared amongst us, and he added:—"We meet for no unholy purpose, but for wise and judicious action in a good cause." The number of Chapters scattered about this Province afford ample opportunities for effecting the consummation of Companion Shaw's last wishes, and now my own. I hope the Chapters in this Province will be carefully worked, and that they will co-operate as well with me, their new chief, as they did with the old, for peace, unity and love. And now, brethren, I thank you once again for your cordial reception of me to-day, I thank you for having come long distances to be present at my installation as Prov. G. Superintendent of Royal Arch Masons of West Yorkshire. I assure you I shall never forget to-day, any more than I shall ever forget my installation as Prov. Grand Master of West Yorkshire; and, lastly, my acknowledgments are due to the two Chapters in Sheffield under whose banners this ceremony has been conducted, for the excellency of their arrangements, and for their hospitality to the Chapters of this Province. I wish the whole of the Chapters in this Province every prosperity. (Loud applause). During the after business, 100 guineas was voted to the Bentley Shaw Presentation Fund.

The third annual assembly of the Great Priory of Canada was held at the British Masonic Chambers on 11th October. The Great Prior, Col. J. B. McL. Moore, delivered an address, in which he referred to the following subjects:—

Qualifications for admission to the Order; the late action of the United States Grand Encampment; the jurisdiction of the Great Priory, and interesting historical references regarding the origin and progress of the Order. He drew special attention to the late acquisition of Cyprus to the British Crown—the island so memorable in the history of the Order, and connected with some of the most interesting reminiscences.

The following officers for the ensuing year were elected:—

V.H. and E., the Great Prior, Col. W. J. B. McLeod Moore, Laprairie.

V.E. the Great Sub-Prior, W. B. Simpson, Montreal.

JAMAICA.

THE Chapel of the "Free Church" in Duke-street, has been purchased by Bro. S. L. Barned of the "Royal" and "Phœnix" Lodges, and a building Committee of the Royal and Glenlyon Lodges has been appointed to raise funds to purchase the said premises from Bro. Barned, and to fit them up as a suitable Masonic Temple. It is proposed to get up suitable entertainments, and His Excellency Sir Anthony Musgrave, Governor-in-Chief of this Island, the Right Worshipful Hon. Dr. R. Hamilton, District Grand Master of East Jamaica, and the Right Worshipful S. Constantine Burke, Assistant Attorney General, and District Grand Master of Scotland, have kindly consented to have the same under their immediate patronage. The W. G. J. Sargeant, Master of the Royal, Bro. E. I. Leon of the Royal, with Governor Dias and Bro. Fry of the Glenlyon, members of the building Committee, are using all their endeavours to raise the amount required; though at this present moment things in this Island have a very dull and barren appearance, and as the commercial men have stated that they expect business will be in a still more unsettled state, several houses must close.

Glenlyon Lodge, S.C.—At an ordinary meeting on 9th Oct, at Friendly Hall, presided over by the R.W. S. H. Watson W.M., J. Mitchell S.W., Bro. A. H. Jones J.W., with the following Past Masters:—Worshipful A. E. Burke Glenlyon, Dias of St. John's, Langley of Royal, Ferron of Phœnix, and a goodly number of visitors, two candidates were initiated into the Mysteries of Freemasonry by Wor. A. E. Burke, in a most impressive and talented manner. In being the night of the election of Master, Treasurer and Tyler, Bro. J. K. Spicer, and the Rt. Wor. A. E. Burke (District Grand Sec. for Scotland in this Island) were nominated. The result was a majority in favour of the Rt. Wor. A. E. Burke. This worthy brother having some time ago occupied the chair of this Lodge, and won the esteem of his brethren, they were determined he should again fill the Oriental chair. Rt. Wor. B. M. Dias was elected Treasurer, Bro. J. Hayes Tyler.

Royal Lodge, No. 207, Kingston.—The monthly meeting was held on 17th October; W. G. J. Sargeant Master presided, assisted by Bros. Therwell S.W. and G. Campbell J.W.; also there were present:—Ferron of the Phœnix, Langley and Burke of the Royal, Dias of Glenlyon, Tait Sussex; also a number of visitors, who were all very much pleased to see the admirable working of this Lodge, and to listen to the impressive manner the third degree was conferred on six candidates by the W.M. Several communications from the late P.M. Andrews, who is now on a visit to England, were read; he was requested, on leaving this Island, to put himself in communication with the Grand Secretary, to know whether the time had arrived for the members of this old and ancient Lodge to wear its 100th year jewel; but, to the great disappointment of the members, they will have to wait sixteen years longer, when naturally many will have passed away to the Grand Lodge above. Worshipful Bro. Sargeant having won the laurels of the day, and being styled one of the best Masters that ever occupied the chair of the Royal, success seems to follow him, and every member of the Lodge wishes that he will consent to occupy the chair for another year. He has all the qualities of a good Mason and a gentleman. He is the only son of the venerable Rev. George Sargeant, Superintendent of the Wesleyan Society in this Island, one also who is greatly respected and beloved.

Phœnix Lodge, No. 914, Port Royal.—A monthly meeting was held on 3rd October, presided over by G. P. Myers, Master. For the future the ordinary meeting will be held on the first Tuesday in the month, instead of the first Thursday, so as to meet the wishes of the members of the Hamilton Lodge, Spanish Town, which meets on the first Thursday. Also the election of Master will take place in June, instead of April and the Installation at the first Ordinary Meeting after the election. This Lodge has suffered a great deal, and several candidates of the Navy and Army, who would have come forward, have been debarred, on account of Quarantine being enforced for several months, as "Yellow Jack" has made his appearance; but we are glad to state that no new cases have occurred, and that Quarantine restrictions have been withdrawn; the men of H.M. ships, however, have all been compelled to be on board by six p.m.

At a Quarterly Convocation of the Glenlyon Holy Royal Arch Chapter, S.C., held at Sussex Hall, on 30th September, the following Officers were installed for the ensuing year, by the Most Excellent Companions E. Burke I.P.Z. of this Chapter, E. Langley P.Z, and C. H. Davis P.Z. of the "Royal," L. Cole Hedian, Joshua of the "Phœnix," M.E. Companion B. M. Dias Z., S. H. Watson H., J. K. Spice J., Pollack S.E., A. H. Jones S.N., F. Fryer Treasurer, W. T. Smedmore P.S., W. Magnus and E. French Assistants, J. Hayes Janitor.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Rheumatism and Gout.—These purifying and soothing remedies demand the earnest attention of all persons liable to gout, rheumatic, or other painful affections of the muscles, nerves, or joints. The Ointment should be applied after the affected parts have been patiently fomented with warm water, when the unguent should be diligently rubbed upon the injured skin, unless the friction should cause pain. Holloway's Pills should at once be used to reduce inflammation and to purify the blood. This restorative abates the violence, and lessens the frequency of gout, rheumatism, and all spasmodic diseases which spring from hereditary predisposition, or from any accidental weakness of constitution. This Ointment checks the local remedy. The Pills restore the vital powers.

W.M., Pearcy S.W., Millison J.W., Tolmie Prec., Fenner Sec., Symons S.D., J. Millington J.D., Killick I.G.; also Bros. Halford, Stock, Hunter, Robison, Weeden, Halford, Hallam jun., Millward, Pelikan, Isaac, Gardner, Hyland. All preliminaries having been duly observed, the W.M. worked the first and second sections of the first lecture, assisted by the brethren. Lodge being advanced a degree, Bro. C. K. Killick P.M. 1693 rehearsed the ceremony of installation, assisted by Bros. Hunter W.M. 1677 acting W.M. elect, Halford W.M. 228 S.W., Stock W.M. 1178 J.W., and Tolmie W.M. 861 as I.G. On the readmission of the brethren, Bro. Hallam sen. resumed the chair. The W.M. appointed and invested his Officers. We need hardly say that Bro. Killick performed the duties of Installing Master in a perfect manner. The W.M. worked the fourth section, assisted by the brethren. Bro. Pelikan, of Sir Hugh Myddelton Lodge, No. 1602, was elected a member. Bro. Pearcy was elected W.M. for the ensuing week. Those who may be present will have a treat, as Bro. Pearcy is "perfect" in the ritual. A vote of thanks was awarded Bro. C. K. Killick for rehearsing the Installation ceremony. After which Lodge was closed.

Constitution Lodge of Instruction, No 55.—On Tuesday at the Bedford Hotel, Southampton-buildings, Holborn. Present:—Bros. Baker W.M., Miroy S.W., Cooper J.W., Dickins Sec., Tate S.D., Linscott J.D., Bramham I.G., Bingemann Preceptor. Bros. Soper, Powneeby, Bond, Abell, Woods, Sanders, Sandall, J. H. B. Richards and Groves were elected members. Bro. Miroy was elected W.M. for ensuing Tuesday week, and appointed his officers in rotation. The Lodge was closed, and adjourned till Tuesday, 5th November, at the hour of six, when the 15 Sections are to be worked by the brethren. Bro. L. Bingemann will preside on that occasion, and he will no doubt be well supported by his friends.

Percy Lodge of Instruction, No. 198.—A meeting was held on Saturday last, at the Jolly Farmer's, Southgate-road, Islington. Present—Bros. S. E. Moss P.M. 185 W.M., R. H. Halford W.M. 228 S.W., R. Pearcy (Preceptor) J.W., C. K. Killick Sec., Millington I.G. Lodge was opened and minutes confirmed. The Fifteen Sections were worked in the following order:—FIRST LECTURE—Bros. Gibbs, J. Lorkin, T. Goode, Braisted, Stock, Killick and Powell; SECOND LECTURE—Bros. Halford, C. Lorkin, Hallam jun., E. P. Isaac and Pearcy; THIRD LECTURE—Bros. I. P. Cohen, Pearcy and Walmington. The whole of the sections were worked in an admirable manner, and elicited the heartiest approval from the W.M., who received the unanimous thanks of the Lodge. Bro. J. Gibbs will preside next Saturday. Bros. D. Moss 1275 and F. Carr 1607 were elected members.

Lodge of Faith, No. 141.—The members of this old and flourishing Lodge met at Anderton's Hotel, on the 29th ult., for the purpose of installing the W.M. elect, and other Masonic business. Lodge was opened at 5 o'clock p.m., by Bro. E. Mallett W.M., his Officers, and numerous brethren. The minutes of the last regular meeting were confirmed. Lodge was opened in the second degree, and Bro. C. Dairy W.M. elect was presented to the Installing Master, Bro. E. Mallett, for the benefit of installation. A board of installed Masters was formed, and Bro. C. Dairy was inducted into the chair of the Lodge. The brethren were then admitted, and having saluted their new Master, the W.M. proceeded to invest his Officers:—Bros. E. Mallett I.P.M., G. Rumball S.W., J. Morrison J.W., W. Stuart P.M. Secretary (re-elected), W. Carter P.M. Treas. (re-elected), W. Clarke I.G., Titley W. Steward, A. J. Abrahams D.C. Tyler (re-elected). Ballot was then taken, separately, for four gentlemen, candidates for initiation, and it proving unanimous, Messrs. John B. Weeden and Nathaniel Nathan were admitted into Masonry in solemn form, the W.M. giving abundant promise of good work, by his excellent rendering of the ceremony. The W.M. in a neat and appropriate speech thanked Bro. Mallett for the splendid manner in which he had installed him into the chair, assuring him of the high esteem he was held in by the Lodge. This had found some small expression by the members voting a P.M.'s jewel, which he (Bro. Dairy) felt very proud to place upon his breast, and he trusted he would have a long and prosperous life to wear it. Bro. Mallett thanked the W.M. and the brethren for their gift, and for the kind manner in which it had been presented. he felt it bound him in yet closer ties to the Lodge of Faith, and he hoped to hand it down as an heir-loom to his descendants. Several applications for membership were received, and then Lodge was solemnly closed, and adjourned until 26th inst. The brethren repaired to the Holborn Restaurant, Queen-street, for the banquet, at which upwards of seventy sat down. All seemed to appreciate the excellent fare provided, under the superintendance of Bro. Hamp. On the cloth being removed, the W.M. rose to propose the Queen and the Craft, in appropriate terms, which was received with enthusiasm; God save the Queen was then sung. The health of H.R.H. M.W. G.M. met with the usual hearty reception, and the toast was followed by God bless the Prince of Wales. The Pro G.M., the D.G.M., and rest of the Grand Officers followed, and with it was associated the name of Bro. Cottebrune P.G.P. This brother, in reply, said he had been indirectly connected with the Lodge of Faith many years; he felt it a great honour upon his first visit to have to respond to such a toast. The health of the Initiates was next given; the W.M. said that might justly be deemed the toast of the evening. The members were happy to receive gentlemen amongst them who had been so well recommended. He exhorted each to lay to heart the lessons taught in the Lodge, and to practise them outside. Bro. Nathan modestly thanked the brethren for admitting him into so honourable a society, and hoped to prove himself worthy of their confidence. Bro. Weeden also trusted he might become a worthy brother, and thanked the brethren. Bro. E. Mallett I.P.M. then said that he appeared before the brethren in a new rôle, and for the first time; yet, having passed from the chair only some few hours, he could assure the brethren he had great pleasure in proposing the health of their W.M. He had worked side by side with Bro. Dairy for nine years, and had had ample opportunities of proving his qualities; he was confident the brethren would have an excellent year under the guidance of their new W.M. The toast was received with enthusiasm. Bro. Dairy returned his sincere thanks for the really brotherly manner in which Bro. Mallett had introduced the toast. He had to thank him for many good offices during the years they had been associated together. His many services, however, were crowned by the one rendered that evening—installing him in his present proud position. He would assure the Lodge of his intention to leave nothing undone to promote the welfare of the brethren, and thanked them sincerely for receiving his health so cordially. The next toast was the P.M.'s; they had many in the Lodge, some, like Bros. Carter and Stuart, fulfilling the duties of Treasurer and Secretary, but all able and willing to do service for the Lodge. Bro. E. Mallett was called upon to respond. He, being the most recent addition to the P.M.'s as a body, could not be expected to reply so fully as some who were of longer standing, but he could speak with confidence of the zeal which inspired them all to promote the good and welfare of the brethren. In proposing the health of the Visitors, the W.M. felt this toast second to none in importance among Freemasons, who regard hospitality as a duty and a pleasure. They were honoured with the presence of many distinguished brethren. There was Bro. Cottebrune P.G.P., with whom he had been connected many years at the Lodge of Instruction over which he so ably presides. There was Bro. Gladwell 172, H. J. Andrews 382, J. L. Coulton P.M., G. H. Stephens 1623, R. T. Whitley P.P.G.A.D.C. Middlesex, and many others whom they were all glad to see, and would be proud to meet again. Bro. Cottebrune thanked the W.M. for the handsome manner in which he had received him; he hoped to avail himself of his kind invite. Bro. Coulton also thanked them for his reception. Bro. Gladwell said he had thoroughly enjoyed himself, and had indeed been so much at home that evening that he scarcely realised he was not a member when the toast was given. Bro. G. H. Stephens endorsed what had been said by the brethren; he also thanked the Lodge of Faith for the generous reception the Visitors had received. He felt it was a debt he owed, to allude briefly to the fare which had been provided so bounteously. He had been much impressed by the manner in which Bro. Dairy had initiated the candidates, and felt it was indeed a great thing for so old a Lodge to commence another year of Masonic industry under so able a Master as he had proved himself to be. The Officers was briefly responded to by Bro. G. Rumball S.W., and the Tyler's toast brought the business to a close. The toasts were interspersed with an unusually choice selection of glees, &c., under the direction of Bro. Erwin Moss, assisted by Bros. Collins, Upstone, and Tremeer, whose finished performance added much to the enjoyment of the brethren.

Sir James Meek, and carried. The Companions afterwards met at supper, under the presidency of E. Comp. R. W Hollon P.Z., and a pleasant evening was spent, the usual toasts being duly given.

Bro. C. A. Jones W.M., assisted by Bro. the Rev. J. S. Boucher I.P.M. P.G.C., installed, in the most impressive manner, Bro. Owen Thomas as W.M. for the ensuing year; who subsequently invested the following Officers:—Bros. C. A. Jones I.P.M., Canon Evans, D.D., Chaplain, L. Prothero S.W., G. Thomas J.W., R. Thomas Treasurer, D. W. Davies Secretary, S. Nightingale S.D., C. P. Boucher J.D., C. Foulkes I.G., W. Hayden Organist, W. Hamer S., J. W. Poole P.M. D.C., W. Watkins Tyler. Davies Secretary, as a recognition of the faithful manner they had discharged their duties. The gifts were suitably acknowledged. Notice was given that the Lodge vote £5, or more, towards the distress fund of Abercarne, South Wales. Notice was also given that the Lodge vote £20 in order to secure an additional life interest in both the Boys and Girls Masonic Orphan Institution. Bro. C. H. Rees was appointed to represent the Lodge at the North Wales and Shropshire Masonic Educational Association. After the conclusion of the business, the brethren proceeded to the Royal Hotel (Bro. Humphreys), there to partake of an excellent banquet. In the course of the evening, the usual Masonic and Loyal toasts were drunk with enthusiasm. The minutes of the last Convocation were read and confirmed. The ballot was taken for a brother for exaltation, and proved favourable. From unforeseen circumstances the candidate was unable to attend. The M.E.Z. then gave a short account of his visit to Prov. Grand Chapter, at Birkenhead, which was listened to with great pleasure by the Companions. It is to be regretted that the number of Members present was so small to participate in the duties and pleasures of the Chapter. The business of the evening being ended, the Chapter was closed in ancient form, and the Comps. dispersed.

Skinner was elected a member of this Lodge of Instruction. Bro. Le Grys was elected W.M. for next meeting. The Lodge of Instruction banquet is fixed for the Last Friday in November, when the brethren desire to meet as many of their confrères as can make it convenient to attend; a post card or note addressed to Bro. Gunner, at the Star and Garter, announcing intention to be present is requested, so that proper provision may be made.

Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, No. 860.—This Lodge held its weekly meeting on Tuesday, the 29th of October, at the Sisters' Tavern, Pownall-road, Dalston. Present—Bros. R. Dallas W.M., J. Lorkin S.W., Wardell J.W., W. W. Morgan as Sec., Smith Treas., Gilham S.D., Polak J.D., Carr I.G. P.M.'s Bros. W. H. Wallington Preceptor, C. K. Killick 1693, Wright; C. H. Webb W.M. 1607; also Bros. Braxted C. Lorkin, Perss, Wyman, Collins, &c. After preliminaries had been complied with, the W.M. worked the ceremony of initiation, Bro. C. Lorkin candidate. The Preceptor, Bro. Wallington, then rehearsed the installation ceremony, performing his task most carefully, and greatly to the satisfaction of the brethren. Bro C. H. Webb acted as W.M. elect, and on taking the chair went through with the formal investiture of Officers. Bro. Wallington then most impressively delivered the address, and on resuming his seat received the congratulations of the brethren on the ability he had displayed. Later in the evening a cordial vote of thanks was passed to him, and this mark of respect was ordered to be placed on the minutes. Bro. Dallas worked the second section of the first lecture. Bro. Killick was elected a member, and then Lodge was closed. As is the custom at this Lodge of Instruction, some of the members afterwards spent an hour together in conviviality.

Whittington Lodge of Instruction, No. 862.—The members held their anniversary banquet on Wednesday, 30th Oct., at Bro. Hyde's, Red Lion, Poppins-court, Fleet-street. Bro. Long, the Preceptor, was in the chair; he was assisted by Bros. Tate and Thompson of the Mother Lodge, and a distinguished but not numerous assemblage of brethren. The banquet met with great satisfaction; it was Bro. Hyde's first effort in that direction. After removal of the cloth the various Masonic toasts were duly honoured, and the evening passed very pleasantly, with vocal and instrumental music.

Royal Albert Lodge, No. 907.—A regular meeting of this Lodge was held at Freemasons' Hall on Monday evening, 21st ult. Lodge was opened at 5.30 p.m. by Bros. F. A. White I.P.M. as W.M., T. Griffiths P.M. as I.P.M., R. Jennings S.W., G. T. Burr J.W., J. A. Farnfield P.M. Treasurer, W. H. Farnfield P.M. Secretary, T. Butt S.D., W. Wardley J.D., H. J. Lewis P.M. D.C. and W.S.; also Past Masters R. E. Stevenson, C. Chard, T. Griffiths, and J. Dennis, and a large number of brethren. The minutes of the previous Lodge meeting having been read and confirmed, ballot was taken for two gentlemen, candidates for initiation, which proved favourable. The W.M. accordingly admitted Messrs. Charles Robinson and William Searle into Freemasonry, in a very able and impressive manner. Bro. Wallis was next invested with the I.G. collar. No further business being on the agenda, Lodge was solemnly closed and adjourned until the 18th November next. The brethren then sat down to the banquet, which was served by Bro. A. Best in his usual excellent style. The cloth being removed, the W.M. gave the Loyal and Craft toasts in brief but appropriate terms, and each was duly honoured by the brethren. Bro. J. A. Farnfield P.M. rose to propose the health of the W.M., remarking that it would require but little recommendation from him to ensure a hearty response to the toast. The brethren had had an opportunity of seeing how ably Bro. White had discharged the duties of the chair during his recent term of office, and were well assured that in his hands the honour of the Lodge would be well sustained throughout the present year. Bro. White P.M., in reply, thanked Bro. Farnfield for the kind manner in which the toast had been proposed, and also the brethren for the hearty reception that had been given to it. He hoped that as he had been successful in the past, so in the future he might secure their good opinion. Having been called upon, through unforeseen circumstances, to occupy the chair this year, although but recently having vacated it, he should strive, with the co-operation of the P.M.'s, to render that service to the Royal Albert Lodge which he felt it deserved. The W.M. next rose to propose the toast of the Initiates, one which he felt to be the toast of the evening. They had just admitted two gentlemen into their ancient Order; and, from the fact of their being recommended by P.M.'s of the Lodge, he felt glad to offer them a sincere welcome. He was sure the brethren would heartily respond. Bros. C. Robinson and William Hearle both returned thanks for the honour the Lodge had done them, and trusted they would prove themselves worthy of the Order. The W.M. then gave the Past Masters. He was glad to see so many present at the Lodge. Of working P.M.'s they fortunately had many. There were Bros. J. A. Farnfield, Treasurer; Dennis, from whom he had taken his first, second and third degrees

W. Farnfield Secretary; C. Chard, who was busy with the Lodge of Instruction; and Bro. Stevenson. He therefore asked them to do honour to the toast, and he coupled the names of Bros. Dennis and Chard. Bro. P.M. Dennis, in reply, said: Permit me to thank you for the hearty manner in which you have received this toast. I feel that I scarcely deserve the high tribute of respect paid me by Bro White, and am sure that while we as P.M.'s have all done our best for the Lodge, none have done more than Bro. W.M. White has done, and is now doing, for the Royal Albert Lodge. I feel a degree of pleasure in recalling the fact that it was not only my privilege to make him a Mason, as he has told you, but also to instal him into the chair. Bro. P.M. Chard also briefly expressed the pleasure he felt at the hearty way in which the assistance the P.M.'s had rendered for many years was appreciated. It had always been a pleasure to do whatever lay in their power for the good of the brethren. The W.M. next gave the Visitors. He had seldom seen so few at their meetings, and was glad to offer those who had honoured them with their presence a cordial welcome. Bro. Anderson briefly replied. The W.M. next gave the toast of the Treasurer, Secretary and D.C. and W.S. He was sure the Lodge was indebted to Bros. P.M. J. Farnfield, W. A. Farnfield, and H. J. Lewis D.C. and W.S. for the manner in which they performed their duties, and would mark it in their reception of the toast. Bro. H. J. Lewis in a humorous speech expressed the satisfaction he had in pleasing the brethren. He felt he had done so that evening, as every one seemed happy. It was the highest gratification to him to know the Lodge had well sustained its high character for hospitality. The other Officers having responded in suitable terms, the Tyler's toast brought the proceedings to an end. The Visitors were Bros. Anderson S.W. 60, Talbot 1716, Stephens 1623, and Fennell 1623. During the evening the toasts were interspersed with several capital songs.

Wandsworth Lodge of Instruction.—A meeting was held on Wednesday evening, the 30th October, at the Spread Eagle Hotel, Wandsworth. The following brethren were present—Bros. H. R. Jones I.P.M., J. G. Carter P.M., W. J. Huntly, John Frost, F. Reed, G. Howick, J. Featherstone, P. V. Denham, John Saunders, Newens, J. J. Holland and A. A. Denham; J. G. Jones and H. S. Lee Visitors. Bro. Carter P.M., as the W.M., proved himself thoroughly efficient in the ritual. Bro. Featherstone went through the ceremony of being initiated, Bro. Lee was passed, and Bro. Jones raised. Bro. Holland proposed, Bro. Featherstone seconded, and it was unanimously carried, that Bro. J. G. Jones and H. S. Lee, be elected members of this Lodge of Instruction.

Grey Friars Lodge, No. 1101.—This Lodge held an emergency meeting on Wednesday, the 23rd of October, at the Masonic Hall, Reading. Present—Bros. Arthur Welch Prov. G.R. Berks and Bucks W.M., W. G. Flanagan W.M. elect S.W., J. Early Dunks J.W., Thomas Newman D.C. acting Sec., J. T. Stranaom Treasurer, E. J. Blackwell J.D., Hawkes Steward, Hemmings Tyler. Past Masters Bros. Margrett I.P.M., R. C. Hurley; Bros. Pulley, Bailey, Hunt, Prickett, Rolfe, White. This Lodge of Emergency was held for the purpose of "taking into consideration a letter received from the W.M. of the Lodge of Union 414, accompanied by a resolution and notice with regard to the tenancy of the Lodge room and appurtenances, and to decide upon the same;" also to "pass the Treasurer's accounts as audited." The Lodge being opened in the first degree, the letter from the W.M. 414, together with the resolution and notice, were read by the acting Secretary, who called attention to the minutes of 9th October and 13th November 1867, wherein an agreement had been made and signed by the two Lodges as to the rental of the premises. A lengthened and interesting discussion took place, which resulted in a resolution, proposed by Bro. Hurley P.M. and seconded by the W.M. elect, "that an offer of an increase of rental be made to 414, subject to arbitration if the offer be refused." An amendment was proposed by Bro. Margrett I.P.M., seconded by Bro. Bailey, "that a communication be made to the members of 414, requesting them to agree to refer the question of terms to the arbitration of some Masonic authority." The amendment was put, but not carried. The original resolution was put, and declared to be carried. The Treasurer's accounts, as audited, were passed, with a complimentary vote of hearty thanks to the Treasurer for the "satisfactory state of the Lodge finances," which was carried by acclamation. All business being ended, the Lodge was closed.

Mortlock Preceptor, Brame Secretary, also Bros. Greeley, Wood, Banks, &c. After preliminaries, the W.M. worked the ceremony of Initiation, Bro. Banks candidate. Bro. G. H. Stephens then worked the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Sections of the Lecture, assisted by the brethren. The report of the Audit Committee was read and adopted. It showed a satisfactory financial position, after awarding £3 3s to a distressed brother. Bro. Horsley was duly elected W.M. for the ensuing week. Bro. Mortlock Preceptor, rose to propose a vote of thanks to their Worshipful Master. It was the first time Bro. Veal had worked a ceremony in that Lodge. He was sure this mark of respect was seldom more deserved. Carried unanimously. Bro. Horsley S.W. expressed the pleasure it afforded him to see one of the principal officers of the Mother Lodge acquit himself in so proficient a manner. Bro. Veal briefly thanked the brethren, and Lodge was solemnly closed, and adjourned till next Monday evening, at 8 o'clock p.m.

Gladsmuir Lodge, No. 1385.—A meeting was held on the 25th ult., at the Red Lion Hotel, Barnet. Present—Bros. R. F. Young W.M., F. Venables P.G. Pursuivant S.W., C. Gray J.W., P.M. Acting P.G.S.D. Sec., P.M. Lowthin P.P.G.S.W. Treas., J. P. Everby S.D., C. W. Allen J.D., J. G. Yolland P.P.G.S. Bearer D.C. as I.G., J. Parrott P.P.G.S. Steward, R. W. Goddard Tyler. P.M.'s Bros. J. Lodge was then opened in the second degree, and the ceremony was performed. The Lodge was closed down, and several propositions were made. Lodge was then closed in due form. The brethren afterwards adjourned to refreshment. Bro. Cutbush notified the brethren that his list for the Girls' School amounted to sixty guineas; he thanked them for their support.

The Great City Lodge of Instruction, No. 1426.—Held at Masons' Hall Tavern, E.C., on Thursday, 31st Oct., at 6 p.m. Present—Bros. T. Poore P.M. 720 W.M., Jas. Stevens P.M. 1425, &c. S.W., P. Dickinson P.M. 1298 J.W., T. Hamer I.G., G. W. Blackie Hon. Sec., G. W. Saul Preceptor, and about thirty other brethren. The Lodge was opened in the first degree, and the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed. The sections of the first lecture were then worked by the following brethren—Bros. Harper, Hunt, Moss, C. Taylor, Saul, Poore, and Watts. The Lodge was opened in the second degree, and the second lecture worked by the following brethren—Bros. A. E. The Lodge was opened in the third degree, and the third lecture worked by the following brethren:—Bros. Pepper, Ockenden, and Sadler. The Lodge was closed down to the first degree. Several new members joined the Lodge. Votes of thanks were ordered to be recorded on the minutes to Bro. Poore P.M. 720, for occupying the chair, and also to the working brethren for their kindness in assisting. All Masonic business being ended, Lodge was closed in due form.

West Middlesex Lodge of Instruction, No. 1612.—The usual weekly meeting was held on Thursday evening, the 24th ult., at the Feathers Hotel, Ealing. Present—Bros. Kingston W.M., Fisher S.W., Coop J.W., Barr Sec., Tucker Treasurer, Porter S.D., Seward J.D., Le Grys I.G., and Bros. Wells, Tisk Brown, Clark, Wright, Etienne, Nye, Edmeston, Delevante, and several others. The Lodge having been opened in due form and the minutes read, the W.M. rehearsed the ceremony of initiation, Bro. Wells candidate. Bro. Etienne, of the Mother Lodge, was unanimously elected a member. The question has again been raised of securing a more suitable "home" than that now now used by the Mother Lodge, and some of the brethren have inspected premises which are considered to be suitable. A Committee has been appointed to look into the question in all its bearings, and to report at an early meeting the result of their inquiries. On the whole, there is a prospect of the Lodge either securing some existing premises, or erecting a suitable Masonic Hall. There is no doubt that, in a growing and fashionable resort such as Ealing, as a speculation, either plan would be remunerative; further, it is believed that many Lodges and Chapters would be induced to migrate to Ealing, particularly during the summer months.

Lodge of Progress, 1758.—This Lodge, which was consecrated on the 17th ult., held its first regular meeting, at Freemasons' Hall, on Wednesday last, under the presidency of the Worshipful Master Bro. W. Alfred Dawson, supported by Bro. Richards P.M. &c., an honorary member of the Lodge, as I.P.M., Bro. F. R. Spaull S.W., A. C. Spaull J.W., E. Legg Treasurer, E. Hornblower Secretary, Tattershall S.D., Duret J.D., T. W. Ockenden I.G., J. R. Hunt, Kentish, J. R. Jones 113, W. G. Weber 873, J. Marshall 538, &c. A ballot was taken on behalf of the last three named brethren as joining members, and declared unanimous. Another ballot resulted in equal success for the admission of Mr. James William Gane, a candidate for initiation, who was duly and solemnly admitted to the benefit of Masonic light. Bro. Weber presided at the organ. The bye-laws were read and approved. Amongst the visitors present were Bro. William Hammond P.M. 201, 1326, 1512, and W.M. 1656, Bro. Dunlop, &c. The next meeting will take place on Wednesday, 27th November, at 7 o'clock.

PERFECTION IN IRONING FOR EVERY SPECIES OF FABRIC.

Great Saving in Expense and Labour.

The price being only 22/, it is the Cheapest Iron in the trade, and can be had as all Ironmongers in the United Kingdom.

F. RATH & CO.'S IMPROVED GAS BOX IRON is extremely simple in its construction, and cannot get out of order; the merit of the invention is, that the heat produced from the burning gas is thrown on to the steel plate which covers the bottom surface, none being allowed to pass off in waste.

Three times the amount of work ordinarily executed can be done by the use of these Irons, which have now been in use in extensive Manufactories long enough to thoroughly prove their merits and vindicate their entire success. They are as available for Family Use as for the Work-room, the Manufactory, or the Laundry.

FREEMASONRY IN NORTH WALES AND SALOP.

BEFORE we enter on the account of our visit to Shrewsbury, it will be as well, perhaps, if we note some of the chief Masonic antecedents in the history of the Province. Readers of Preston's Illustrations will be aware that North Wales was the first Province which the Grand Master of England placed in charge of a Provincial Grand Master. The deputation was issued on 10th May 1727, and the brother to whom it was granted was Bro. Hugh Warburton. But for some years after the organisation of our present Grand Lodge, though Freemasonry established itself in the region round about, it does not seem to have obtained at all events a very firm foothold in this district. From the earlier published lists of Lodges we find that one meeting at the Fountain, Shrewsbury, and numbered 128 in Pine's list for 1740, was constituted 16th April 1736. In a later list of Pine there appears one numbered 194, meeting at the "Angel, Dolgelly, North Wales," and constituted 17th September 1743, while in Cole's list for 1763 is one meeting at the "Fox Inn, Salop," presumably Shrewsbury, which was founded on 27th January 1762. Of other "Modern" Lodges existing at the time of the Union and since extinct, but of considerably later date than the foregoing, must be mentioned the "Mercian Lodge," Ludlow, No. 485 before, and No. 528 after, the Union; Lodge of St. Winifred, Holywell, No. 545 before, and No. 570 after, the Union; and the Lodge of Industry, Bridgenorth, No. 578 before the Union, No. 597 after the Union, and No. 391 in 1832. Besides these, we know there was a Lodge holding under the Grand Lodge of the "Ancients," and this is still in existence, being the senior Lodge in the Province,—now No. 117, but No. 153 of the "Ancients" before the Union. No. 262—being No. 434 on the roll of the Grand Lodge "Moderns" prior to the same epoch—also still lives at Shrewsbury. But there are twenty-three other Lodges in this extensive Province, of which one only—No. 384 of Bangor, founded in 1827—received its Warrant of Constitution from our late G. Master, H.R.H. the Duke of Sussex. Twenty-four years elapse before we light upon an additional Lodge, namely, No. 597, of Holyhead, warranted in 1851. Two were born the year following, namely, No. 601 of Wellington, and No. 606 of Carnarvon. No. 611 of Ludlow was constituted in 1853, No. 755 of Llandudno, in 1858, No. 998 of Welchpool, in 1864, Nos. 1113 of Llangefni, 1120 of Ironbridge, and 1124 of Oswestry, were constituted in 1866, and No. 1143, Denbigh, in 1867, and No. 1836 (Wrexham) 1870. All these were warranted during the Grand Mastership of the late Earl of Zetland. In 1871, Lodge No. 1369 was constituted at Bala; in 1873, Lodges Nos. 1432 (Oswestry), and 1477 (Mold); and in 1874, Nos. 1488 (Amlwch), and 1509 (Portmadoc). These came into being when the Marquis of Ripon presided over our destinies, while since the Prince of Wales has been elected Grand Master, there have been created six additional Lodges, namely: No. 1575 (Market Drayton), No. 1582 (Llanidloes), No. 1583 (Towy), No. 1594 (Newtown), No. 1621 (Bridgnorth), and No. 1674 (Rhyl), the first three having been constituted in 1875, the next two in order in 1876, and the last in 1877. It should be added that of the twenty-five Lodges which constitute this important Province, no less than nineteen have been consecrated during the Prov. Grand Mastership of Sir Watkins W. Wynn Bart. M.P., who was appointed to his exalted office in the year 1852, by the late Earl of Zetland. So much for the antecedent Masonic History of the Province. As to its interest from an historical and archæological point of view, and therefore one like to prove especially attractive to Freemasons, there cannot be the slightest possible doubt. Druidical and Roman remains abound. It was in the great battle of Shropshire that the celebrated British Prince Caractacus was defeated and taken prisoner, in the reign of the Emperor Claudius. This is the same of whom history records—rightly or wrongly, is not material, for it is a gallant story—that when being led captive through the streets of Rome he expressed his astonishment that a people who were so well provided with palaces at home should have envied him and his people their humble cottages. It is also a memorable district in the wars of our Edward I., who reduced Wales to be an appanage of his crown, and it was in Carnarvon Castle that the son of the conqueror—afterwards Edward II., and the first English Prince on whom the title of Prince of Wales was conferred—was born. This was in the year 1282. But peace did not immediately follow this conquest, and a border warfare prevailed for many years, in which the sword and battle-axe, the spear and bow and arrow, played a very conspicuous part. Then came one of the events so memorable in the annals of Henry IV.'s reign, when that monarch, at Shrewsbury, completely overthrew the coalition formed against him by the Percies, the Douglas, and Llewellyn. This was in the year 1403, when Henry Hotspur was slain, and Falstaff distinguished himself in the engagement, even to the extent of fighting a "full hour by Shrewsbury clock" against the gallant foemen. Since then, with the exception of events during the wars of the Roses and the Great Civil War, to dwell on which would protract the present article to inordinate length, there have been few matters which it were worth while to record—at all events, in these columns. Pass we, therefore, to the main object of this present writing, and let us recount the experiences we have gathered from our visit to the genial capital of Shropshire, and, indeed, of the Masonic Province of which it forms a part.

As we have already shown, there are two Lodges in Shrewsbury, Nos 117 and 262, the former of which—No. 153 on the roll of "the Ancients"—was, in the first instance, held under a Military Warrant in the Shropshire Militia, and became a Civil Lodge in 1820; while the latter belonged to the Grand Lodge of "Moderns," and was warranted in the year 1788, on the roll of its Past Masters being Sir W. W. Wynn, the Provincial Grand Master. They are respectively named the Salopian Lodge of Charity and the Salopian, and the former meets at the Raven, the latter, which is also the more influential of the two, at the Lion. The two together muster close on a hundred members, but the Lodges keep as much apart from each as possible, and do not seem to exhibit, the one towards the other, those feelings of love, and that desire for harmonious action, which it is so desirable should exist between fellow Lodges. We met many members of both, and in both cases we found them generally well informed on Masonic matters, as well as genial in their bearing. The members of No. 117 exhibit a strong desire for a healthy unity of action, and much zeal for the acquisition of further and fuller knowledge of the Royal Art, and to this end they have established a Lodge of Instruction, which meets every week. In such circumstances, of course, the brethren, and especially the Officers, should, in a very short time, become efficient, but it did not strike us that the benefits of such a Lodge were as fully appreciated as they deserve to be, and the result in laxity of attendance at the parent Lodge itself, as well as in that vitality which is so necessary to the healthy action of a body corporate was, we regret to say, but too apparent. No. 262 has a Royal Arch Chapter attached to it, but we fear this branch of Freemasonry is confined to a class, and its influence is therefore far more restricted than is desirable. This is no doubt due to causes which are more powerful in a comparatively small provincial town than elsewhere, but the drawback is by no means irremovable, and we trust that in future Craftsmen will exert themselves to work harmoniously together. There is plenty of young blood in both Lodges, and the members, whom we have consequently grouped together for the purpose of offhand description, possess many estimable qualities which cannot fail to be of excellent service when the opportunity for displaying them arrives. As proof of the energy which some of the members display, we may mention that Comp. J. B. Boucher travels regularly from London in order to attend his duties as H., while Bros. J. S. Davies and E. M. Wakemen journey all the way, one from Oswestry, and the other from near Bridgnorth. If these can exhibit thus much zeal and punctuality, it is certainly in the power of those who are resident in Shrewsbury itself to be as zealous and punctual. It is well also to state that the Craft is greatly indebted to Bros. R. Lewis, G. H. Hankey, and J. D. Bagnall, Past Masters, W. Morris, W. Master, and J Vine, Secretary of Lodge No. 117, as well as to Bros. S. Wood, T. Onions, J. B. Boucher, and J. D. Bagnall, Past Masters of No 262. We can but add a hope that their example will be duly appreciated by others, and that in the future both Lodges will enjoy the utmost prosperity.

NORTHUMBERLAND AND DURHAM.

PROV. GRAND LODGE OF MARK MASTERS.

THE annual gathering of Mark Masons of this Province took place on the 30th ult., at Sunderland, under the Banner of the Union Lodge, No. 124 Provincial Grand Lodge was opened at 2.30, by the Rev. Canon H.B. Tristram F.R.S., R.W. Prov. G.M., supported by a large gathering of Present and Past Prov. Grand Officers, and also a good attendance of brethren, amongst whom were:—Clapham P.P.D.G.M., T. Y. Stranghan P.P.D.G.M., Rev. E. L. Marrett P.P.G. Chap'ain, W. E Franklin W.M., Dr. Luke Armstrong J.W., T. J. Armstrong M.O. R. L. Armstrong S.O., W. S. Hughes P.G.S.W. I.P.M., R. G. Salmon Sec., S. M. Harris I.G., B Bell J.S., and Sims Tyler, all of the Northumberland and Berwick Lodge, E. Hudson P.M. 39, J. Maddison W.M., T. Inizell J.W., E. Southest M.O., M. Pumton S.O., W. Brandly J.O., T. M. Watson Reg. of M., W. Cockson S.D., J. B. Wells J.D., and Atkinson Tyler, all of No. 124; H. H. Blair W.M., T. Robson P.M., Rev. W. Cooley M.O., J. J. Horsley Secretary, G. Thompson P.M., J. P. Thompson, and Walters Tyler of No. 135. The minutes of the last meeting having been confirmed, the Treasurer's report was adopted; it showed a balance in his hands of £20 16s 8d, and upon the notice of Bro. Clapham it was unanimously carried that £10 10s be voted to the R.M.I. for Boys and £5 5s to the Palestine Exploration Fund. In submitting this the Prov. Grand Master spoke in a most touching manner in support of the claims of the Boys' School. The report of the General Purposes Committee was most satisfactory; it showed new members to the number of 27, and a total of Mark Masons in the Province of 216. The R.W. Prov. Grand Master then appointed and invested the following brethren as Officers for the ensuing year:—T. Y. Stranghan P.D.G.M., Capt. J. A. Forbes S.G.W., Fisher G.J.W., F. Maddison G.M.O., W. E. Franklin G.S.O., Kesburn G.J.O., R. H. Holmes P.D.G.J.W. Treasurer, Rev. W. L. J. Cooley Chaplain, W. Cockburn G. Secretary, T. J. Armstrong Assistant G. Secretary, H. H. Blair G.S.D., H. E. Southest G.J.D., G. Hudson G.D. of C., W. J. Watson Reg. of Works, R. L. Armstrong G. Standard Bearer, M. Frampton G. Sup. of Marks, Weatherhead G. Sword Bearer, Dixon G.I.G., J. P. Simpson and J. Horsley Grand Stewards, J. Thompson G. Organist, and Atkinson Grand Tyler. Other routine business being disposed of, the Grand Lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren, numbering about fifty, adjourned to the Queen's Hotel, Fawcett-street, where they sat down to a well-served banquet, presided over by the Provincial Grand Master, who was saported by the Dep. Provincial G.M. and Bro. the Rev. E. L. Marrett P.P.G. Chaplain. The brethren having done full justice to the good things put before them, grace was said, and the usual Loyal toasts were heartily greeted. The Prov. G.M. then gave the health of the M.W.G.M.M.M. Lord Skelmersdale, and in doing so said his name was dear to all Masons, whether in this or in Craft Masonry. The next toast submitted from the chair was that of the R.W. Deputy Grand Master and Officers of the Grand Lodge. The Deputy Prov. Grand Master then rose to propose the health of Canon Tristram P.G.M. He said he considered it very tyrannical of the North-Eastern Railway Company that there should be no train after 6.40 by which their Prov. Grand Master could leave, thus depriving the brethren of his presence. It required few remarks of his to recommend the toast. All the good works the Canon had done, for which he was so well known all through England, and also as the head of this Province, would alone be sufficient to ensure its being well received, but he would recommend as a mark of respect to the P.G.M. that brethren should use their best endeavours to spread this degree. He would like to see Lodges formed in Darlington, in Shields, and even, he considered, there was room for another Mark Lodge in Newcastle-on-Tyne, and he hoped that during the Provincial Grand Mastership of Canon Tristram there would be new Lodges formed in these places. In conclusion he called on the brethren to join with him in drinking long life, health and happiness to the P.G.M., Canon Tristram, who on rising was received with hearty cheers, said he almost felt surprised at the reception the brethren had given him, which almost confused him; he confessed that he did trust that he might have the pleasure to see some new Lodges in the Province during his reign, which would soon be coming to an end. Mark Masonry was a select old society, if he might call it such; all could not be Masters, all could not be Overseers, but all could be good Mark Masons; he loved the Arch Degree, but he felt it was incomplete without the Mark. He then made several apt allusions to the degree and matters of local interest, and concluded by saying that though the terms in which my health has been proposed are beyond my merits, I none the less thank you for the hearty response you have given. Before setting down, I call on you to drink health, long life and happiness to the Deputy Prov. Grand Master, without whose help and valuable assistance, I could do nothing. Canon Tristram here left; the brethren rising, and given him three times three, Bro. Stranghan then took the chair, and on rising thanked the brethren for the compliment they had paid him and the other Officers of Prov.G.L. He had been in active service, except last year, ever since the formation of the Prov. G. Lodge, the Grand Lodge of America had this year recognised the Grand Mark Lodge of England, and he hoped soon some arrangement might be come to with Scotland. Above all, the members of this degree must be of the right stuff; no Province could have a better Master than the Canon. Bro. R. H. Holmes, Prov. Grand Treasurer, then gave the Past Grand Officers; he considered it a great honour to be a past Officer; when a Brother had so worked as to be thought worthy of office in his province, it spoke well for him. Personally he felt as much honour when he received his first office in the province, that of Steward, as he did when he received the highest. He had pleasure in giving them the Past Officers, coupling the name of Bro. Clapham P.P.D.G.M. with the toast. In returning thanks, Bro. Clapham said he thought when a poor old fellow like him came to a certain age he should be put on the shelf, or left to come and enjoy himself with his good and kind brethren, but he should not be asked to work or to answer to toasts. He would, however, do his best to express the gratitude he and all the Past Officers felt in having their health so kindly received. He hoped all the Past Officers might become Deputy Grand Masters, as he had done; he therefore thanked them very much. The D.G.M. then said it became his pleasing duty to drink success to the Union Lodge, under whose auspices they had met and so enjoyed themselves. This Lodge required special support from the Prov. G. Lodge, as the ruler of the Craft in the Province of Durham did not look on Mark Masonry in so kind a manner as Earl Percy did in the other Province. He tendered to the Union Lodge his sincere thanks for all the arrangements they had made. He coupled with the toast the name of the W.M. Bro. Maddison, who in reply thanked the Dep. Grand Master for his kind remarks, and thought it a great honour that during his Mastership the Provincial Grand Lodge had been held under their banner; if they had done well in the past he hoped they would do better in the future. The Deputy G.M. then gave success to the time immemorial Lodge, the Northumberland and Berwick, which had been the Mother to all the Lodges of the Province, with this he would couple the name of Bro. W. E. Franklin the W.M. Bro. Franklin in the course of a few well chosen and eloquent remarks thanked the brethren for their kind sentiments. The Tyler's toast brought to a conclusion a most enjoyable evening, which had been enlivened by some capital harmony.

ST. JAMES'S LODGE, No. 482, HANDSWORTH.

THE proceedings at this well established Lodge, one of the most prominent in the Province of Staffordshire, on Monday last, were of a novel and interesting character. The W. Master, in conjunction with his immediate predecessor in the chair, and with the assistance of his Senior and Junior Wardens, had arranged to work the Fifteen Sections. Now, we in London are in the habit weekly of seeing announcements that, in this or that Lodge of Instruction, a band of brothers have arranged to go through the Craft Lectures, but we should regard it as a novelty, indeed, were we to find, on entering one of the numerous Lodges it is our privilege to visit, that we were about to listen to the working of the entire sections. True, when there is a paucity of business before a Lodge, some enthusiastic brother rises, and occasionally suggests, as the brethren have a spare half hour, the desirability that one or two of the sections should be worked; but, we regret to say it, our brother, in five cases out of six, is voted a bore, while—to use a common expression—one pill (or section) is considered a dose, and the brethren soon give indications that an adjournment to banquet, or to bed, is desirable. This, in a measure, is due to want of pre-arrangement, or to the inability of the respective workers to throw into their task the necessary zeal and energy, or it may be owing to their lack of elocutionary and appreciative power; but, whatever the cause, there can be no question that a more intimate acquaintance with our ectures is most desirable, and that it would be greatly conducive to the well-being of our Lodges if there were exhibited a greater amount of earnestness in the cause of Masonic study. To us who are constantly in the habit of attending Lodges of Instruction, nothing can possibly give greater pleasure than to hear certain parts of our lectures well, or even fairly well, declaimed. Brethren may, and often do, smile at the strange anachronisms, &c., which have been introduced into them, but the reflective among them know how these have found their way thither, and why; as well as the exact measure of approval or disapproval which must be meted out to them; but it is impossible for any intelligent brother to hear the working of the sections without deriving considerable benefit. He will learn much, from a speculative point of view, of architecture, of the six grand periods, &c., &c., &c., as well as of the moral duties it is our duty to fulfil. The language in parts of them is magnificent, and we should not envy the brother who could set out the working of the lectures or (say) of any one of the sections without being struck, not only with the immense moral value of the principles they inculcate, but likewise with the beautiful language in which those principles are set forth. But to approach the plain duty we have to perform, which consists simply in recording particulars of the meeting of this Lodge. The hour fixed in the summons for the assembling of the brethren was 5 p.m., and punctually to the appointed time the brethren came together in considerable force, and the Lodge was opened in due and ancient form. In due course, the work specially appointed for the evening was reached, and under the presidency of Bro. Dr. Parkes I.P.M. the first lecture was most successfully worked, the following brethren treating the respective sections, namely:—Bros. J. Deeley J.W. (1), J. H. Parkes W.M. (2), E. R. Kimpton Secretary (3), J. F. Pepper S.W. (4), J. H. Parkes W.M. (5), J. F. Pepper S.W. (6), and E. R. Kimpton Secretary (7). Bro. J. H. Parkes W.M. then occupied the chair, and the second and third lectures were worked with equal success by the following, namely, Second Lecture—First section, Bro. Dr. Parkes I.P.M., second ditto J. F. Pepper S.W., third ditto E. R. Kimpton Sec., fourth ditto J. F. Pepper S.W., and fifth ditto J. Deeley J.W. Third Lecture—First section, Bro. Dr. Parkes I.P.M., second section J. Deeley J.W., and third section E. R. Kimpton Secretary. The sections over, there were offered to those who had taken part in the working most hearty expressions of congratulation, the brethren present, one and all, averring that they had derived the greatest pleasure imaginable from the evening's labour. It was then mentioned that the Friday previous (the 1st instant), Bro. John Pursell Prov. G. S. Warden of Warwickshire, and Preceptor of the Birmingham Lodge of Instruction, on quitting the Masonic Hall in that town, had been run over and received some very severe contusions. He was taken back instantly to the Hall, and there examined by three medical men, who were fortunately at hand. It was found that no bones were broken, but Bro. Pursell has attained the ripe age of sixty-eight, and the shock to the system from so severe an accident was very considerable. The sympathy of all present was most feelingly uttered, and it was resolved that the condolence of the Lodge should be conveyed to Bro. Pursell forthwith. Lodge was shortly afterwards closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet. On the removal of the cloth, the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were given with commendable brevity, and were most cordially greeted, that of the W.M. in particular calling for the warmest eulogiums from the proposer, and the utmost enthusiasm from the guests. Bro. Parkes acknowledged in brief, but most appropriate terms, the praises which had been bestowed upon him that evening, and, like a true Mason, expressed himself delighted with the able assistance he had received from his I.P.M., Wardens and Secretary in carrying out the labours of the evening. The health of the Visitors was acknowledged by Bros. Howkins, Michael Davis, and C. Walsh Graham, the first of whom spoke in the most glowing terms of the working he had witnessed. The great knowledge and experience which Bro. Howkins is known to possess renders his testimony the more valuable. It may be imagined that the chief topic during the repast, and in the intervals between the toasts, was the Sections, and the manner in which the members of St. James's Lodge, No. 482, had acquitted themselves, and there was but one opinion as to the result of the experiment. Must we add that this was of the most favourable character, and that all present congratulated themselves on the success of the evening. However, the happiest meetings must at some time, be it sooner or later, come to an end. In due course, therefore, the company dispersed, each with feelings of satisfaction that he too could justly describe what had passed as events quorum pars magna fui. We may here remark that the following Officers were present, namely:—J. H. Parkes W.M., W. E. Parkes I.P.M., J. F. Pepper S.W., J. Deeley J.W., W. Randall, M.A., Rector of Handsworth, Chap., J. Jacobs Treas., E. R. Kimpton Sec., B. G. Cole J.D., E. W. Bradley I.G., F. W. Payton Steward, Chas. Payton, F. Derry P.M. and Past P.G.W., G. J. Payton, H. Morton Sharp, T. Dixon Miller, J. V. Barber, J. W. Evans, J. Rowlands Past Master, J. Chapman Tyler; and the following Visitors, namely:—Bros. H. G. Quilter Worshipful Master 1016, Past Provincial Grand Sword Bearer Warwickshire, Rev. E. C. Perry P.M. 720, G. H. Johnstone 982, Stephen Wood P.M. 1168, P.P.G.W. Warwickshire, R. H. Vertegens P.M. 74, Thos. Taylor P.M. 418, P.P.G.S.W. Staffordshire, James Rowley P.M. 539, T. Mount Humphries P.M. 539, P.P.G.S. of Works, T. H. Smith P.M. 468, Thos. Howkins W.M. 468, P.P.G.D.C. Warwickshire, Jas. H. Walton P.M. 696, P.P.G.R., W. J. Stubbs P.M. 696, P.P.G.J.D., Joseph Fenn P.M. 74, P.G.R., H. Harcourt 74, John Skinner 74, H. R. Duddell 925, Charles Winn S.W. 933, T. Hands P.M. 1016, G. E. Earnshaw W.M. 587, Ashton T. Salt W.M. 887, A. L. Gibson 163, John Waterson P.P.G.D., Major John W. Preston P.P.G.S.W. Somerset 42, G. Barnley 925, F. M. Mole S.W. 1411, C. Walsh Graham I.P.M. 696, Chas Round P.M. 347, W. Vernon W.M. 456, P.G.S.B. Staffordshire, Daniel Round I.G. 347, R. Williams Treas. 696, W. W. Morgan Sec. 211, &c.

The Fifteen Sections will be worked at the Doric Lodge of Instruction, No. 933, Duke's Head, 79 Whitechapel-road, E., on the 22nd of November, at 7 o'clock precisely.

Obituary

THE LATE SAMUEL PHELPS.

IT is with unfeigned sorrow that we have to announce the death of the eminent tragedian, Mr. Samuel Phelps, who departed this life shortly before three o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, at Anson's Farm, near Epping. For some time past it had been evident to those about him that the great actor's powers were failing, but his death at the last came somewhat unexpectedly, and not long after a rumour had gone abroad that he had taken a turn for the better. Mr. Phelps, however, had exceeded the ordinary span of three score and ten years allotted to man, and the rally—if such there really was—must have resembled that last flickering of the candle which immediately precedes its extinction. That Mr. Phelps, when his biography comes to be written, will be placed in the same category of actors with the Kembles and Edmund Kean is not to be expected, but that he was a thorough and most competent artist, and one of the brightest ornaments of the stage he had trodden for fully half-a-century is a fact beyond all question. He is—or was rather—the last of those eminent men who formed the connecting link between the stage of John Kemble and Edmund Kean and the present generation of actors. His name was a tower of strength to any company with which he was associated. As an interpreter of the noblest and most exacting characters of Shakspeare there is no living actor that could rival him, and though especially regarded as a tragedian, there are few, if any, artists who could approach him in comedy. In this respect he was not unlike Macready, in whose footsteps he followed so closely, and albeit a better Lear, Macbeth, and Hamlet than any of his compeers and successors, some of his greatest triumphs were achieved in comedy. He was born at Devonport in the year 1800, or, as some say, in 1806. In early life, he was apprenticed to the trade of printer, and served his full time, and such was the skill he acquired as a compositor, that it is recorded of him that, years after he had abandoned this calling, when about to play in some Provincial town, he set to work and composed the playbill announcing his performance, the local printer, for reasons which are not material, having been deserted by his men. On coming of age, Phelps took to the stage, and in a very short time made his mark, and once during his earlier career, he received the warm congratulations of the great Edmund Kean for his artistic rendering of the part of Tubal in the Merchant of Venice. Having won for himself a high Provincial reputation, he challenged the verdict of popular opinion on the London boards, with a success which must have been as gratifying as it was deserved. But not to enter fully into a career which has been described at such length in other journals, it will suffice if we draw attention to that most distinguished portion of his life, when, firstly in conjunction with Mr. Greenwood and the late Mrs. Warner, and afterwards by himself, he presided so successfully over the destinies of Sadlers Wells Theatre. This period lasted from 1844 to 1862, and in its progress he produced no less than thirty-two of Shakspeare's plays, besides many of the best works of other great dramatists. His respect for the legitimate drama won him golden opinions from the most enlightened portion of the British public, and during his management the Wells was nightly thronged with an audience fully appreciative of the good work he was doing. Nor was it alone as an actor that he impressed the public so favourably. He was a man of education, and the most refined and critical taste, and in his Shakspearian revivals, in the matter of costume and scenic accessories, he showed he was a complete master of the history and archæology of the periods to which the plays severally belonged. Since 1862 he has appeared at most of our leading theatres, and the mere announcement of his appearance was the almost sure forerunner of full houses. He was to have appeared this season at Drury Lane, but his health intervened, and denied the London public the opportunity they so much desired of once again greeting their favourite. Indeed, at the time of his death, he was under an engagement with Mr. Chatterton to play a series of farewell performances, commencing with that of Cardinal Wolsey in Henry VIII. His retirement from the stage would have taken place about next Easter, but it has been ruled otherwise by the Great Architect of all things; and Samuel Phelps, the great actor, the refined scholar, and the courteous gentleman, who pandered to no one, and held mere lip service to be an utter abomination, has passed away to his last home. His private virtues were many; in the bosom of his family no one was more dearly loved, while in public he was respected by all with whom he came in contact. May the memory of his virtues and talents flourish ever!

We have great pleasure in stating that Messrs. Besson and Co., of 198 Euston Road, N.W., Musical Instrument Makers to the Armies and Navies of all the Nations in the World, were awarded a GOLD Medal for Excellence of manufacture at the Paris Exhibition, and not a SILVER Medal, as has been erroneously announced in other journals. This raises the number of medals awarded to this excellent and long-established firm since 1837 to THIRTY. In honour of the award Messrs. Besson and Co. invited their employés to a dinner at the Hotel and Restaurant, Français Audinet, 5 Charlotte-street, Fitzroy-square. We congratulate the firm on this further evidence of the sterling merits of their musical instruments.

We have great pleasure in announcing that the annual benefit of Bro. Jennings, the able and enterprising musical director and manager of the Oxford, will take place on Wednesday next, the 13th instant. We trust Bro. Jennings will have a grand success, such as the manager of this popular place of entertainment so richly deserves.

"CHARITY;" IS IT "GIVING?"

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I desire metaphorically to pat your correspondent "DEUX ETOILES" on the back, and I trust he will pardon me the liberty, for his pluck in stepping forward to point out what threatens to become a nuisance to the Craft. It has more than once occurred to me that some of our active brethren (more power to them), who are very energetic on behalf of the Charities, are in danger of forgetting that men have other duties and claims in life besides Masonry and Masonic Charity. Far be it from me, as I am sure it is from "DEUX ETOILES," to say a word to damp the ardour of any Bro., but I certainly do think that to make any qualification, such as has been suggested—of having served a Stewardship or contributed so much to one of the three Charities—a sine qua non to advancement to Provincial or any other Masonic honours would be, not only unjust, but absolutely cruel. It simply would mean the creation of a money qualification. We have quite enough of this kind of qualification already in Masonry. It would be quite needless for me to point out what every working Bro. is well aware of—that many of the best places in Masonry are filled by brethren who are perfectly innocent of having done either good or evil for the Craft, and whose sole recommendation is the possession of wealth which has enabled them to contribute a few hundreds to the Charities, a gift to them of far less sacrifice than a donation of ten shillings by many a poor Bro. whose name has never been breathed beyond the circle of his own Lodge. Added to a little toadyism, is it not a fact that the golden key will unlock almost every Masonic door? But although this may be the case in fact, we still preserve the theory that we prize honour and virtue above the external advantages of rank and fortune, and in private Lodges I conceive our pure teachings to be far more worthily interpreted than in Grand and Provincial Grand Lodges. I do see, occasionally, poor though worthy men ruling Lodges with satisfaction to themselves and advantage to the brethren who rejoice to sit under their teachings, but on the other hand I have seen placed in the best offices of some Provincial Grand Lodges brethren who have never once attended to the duties of their own Lodges during their years of Mastership, or whose ignorance and utter incapacity are matters of notoriety, but whose rank or wealth, or both, give them influence, or whose toadyism must be rewarded. If we see any suggestion such as that of Bro. Radcliffe carried out we shall put the stamp of authority upon such selections.

Let me be permitted, without the accusation of any egotism, to state my own case. I am a man of very limited means, but with a social position which compels me to keep up a certain appearance. I have a family growing daily more expensive, whilst my means remain stationary. With me Masonry is a hobby, and I have taken it up for some years with zeal in all its branches, and done more work both in ritual and organization as well as official drudgery routine than one Brother in five hundred, judging from observation. I have gone through most of the chairs in most of the degrees, and, I believe, never made an enemy, though I have largely added to my friends. No one in my Province experiences, I am sure, greater pleasure in subscribing his annual mite to the Masonic Charities than do I, but I have never served a Stewardship because I cannot afford it. I am called upon to contribute to at least half a score of local societies, to say nothing of casual calls for special objects, which everybody knows are continually cropping up. I say nothing of private relief, though any resident in a provincial city who holds any social position well knows the numerous appeals which reach him from the neighbouring poor and distressed. My church too has its claims, which must not be put aside, and when I add these things together I find that my income will not permit me to "qualify" in our Masonic Charities. I think you will admit that it would be rather rough on me to declare that because I am not the possessor of another hundred pounds or so per annum that my Masonic labours should go unrewarded.

"DEUX ETOILES" is also right in calling attention to the fact that unsuitable candidates are sometimes elected to the Schools because they happen to have influential friends. The other day I heard of an instance in which the case of a child was taken up by a Northern Province with great energy—but, as yet, without success—which I submit is quite unsuitable. The father held an excellent situation, at a salary of considerably over £1,000 a year, up to the day of his death; his life was insured for, I believe, £2,000; at his death a sum of nearly £2,000 was subscribed and invested for the widow, who is not friendless by any means, and I confess to thinking this a case that should never have been brought forward. I am convinced that at the present time numbers come into our ranks under the impression that they are joining a sort of convivial benefit club, which will give them suppers and grogs when they are in health, and a pension when they break down; and the tremendous fuss that is publicly made about the "enormous" charitable results of the Craft lends colour to the supposition. Would it be deemed out of place to enquire how many out of all the applicants for the Benevolent Fund have ever contributed directly towards its support?

Let us, as your correspondent says, in the first place be brethren in deed and in truth towards one another, and then let us aid in our Charities as far as we legitimately may, but let us not forget that there are other orphan and destitute institutions besides our own, and that we are not bound at great sacrifices to ourselves and our families to provide unlimited accommodation and permanent refuge, either for brethren who have by their own sin and folly come to poverty or for their children, especially when those children have friends and relations in good circumstances.

If by any happy stroke of fortune I should ever be in such a financial position as to be able to do so, it will be my great delight as well as high privilege to serve as a Steward, and make myself a Life Governor of each of the Institutions, but in the meantime I decidedly object to being left out in the cold as one unworthy of Masonic honours.

Yours fraternally,

A MASONIC ENTHUSIAST.

4th November 1878.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—"DEUX ETOILES," who writes at length on the above question, though he scrupulously avoids the use of italics, may be said to write in big capitals. The tone is lofty, the conceptions are on a magnificent scale, and there is such a halo of superiority about the whole exposition, that I am almost afraid to think of the consequences to my unhappy self if I address you on the same matter. I hope I may venture to affirm that I have "unmuddled brains," my friends, at least, are complimentary enough to tell me I can argue a point fairly well; but I almost begin to think they are wrong, for how can any one be otherwise than muddled, who has the audacity to think differently from your correspondent? I have read all your leaders and the letters of your various correspondents on the subject of Charity, and, as yet, I have failed to discover that either you or they have sought to prescribe the minimum of another's charity. You have said that a guinea all round from the Craft would keep our Institutions in a state of efficiency, and Bro. Dick Radclyffe has suggested that people who can and do expend several guineas on banquets, &c., &c., might be thoughtful enough to contribute a guinea to each Institution, and yet do nothing to the detriment of themselves or their families. Yet, with every respect for the overwhelming opinion of "DEUX ETOILES," I imagine there is a sensible difference between pointing out that a certain result will follow if people do certain things which, as a rule, they are quite capable of doing, and laying down the law imperiously that certain things must be done. I should say the average newspaper reader, whether a Mason or not, fully understands that Charity, though it includes almsgiving, is not one and the same thing with it. At the same time people, when they canvass for a charity, must necessarily give greater prominence to mere almsgiving than as a constituent part of charity in its fullest sense it is entitled to. If "DEUX ETOILES" has room enough in his superlative brain, he must kindly bear in mind that reading homilies, be they never so eloquent, is not the readiest way of obtaining contributions. Our Institutions are committed to a certain heavy expenditure per annum, and the money must be raised. Those who, like you and your correspondents, are obliged to keep this prominently before your readers, or take an interest in doing so, are under the necessity of harping on the subject of donations. You and they would rather not do so—that is my own impression at least—but even Masons, except, perhaps, such lofty-minded members as "DEUX ETOILES," occasionally require a little nudging just to remind them of their duty. Charity, it must be remembered, is a Masonic duty, as well as a Masonic virtue, and until we are fully satisfied that people are always prepared to do what is right and proper they should do, I fear you and others must go on lecturing. For my own part, I would far rather, as a Steward at one of the Festivals, have brethren come to me and offer me their guineas than go to them and ask for a subscription; but where are they who will do this? and, when found, how many will there be of them? I am sure it would save a world of trouble if people would give of their surplus cash spontaneously, but will the Craft do this to the extent of over £30,000 a year. Let DEUX ETOILES show that can be done, and he will be justly entitled to, and will doubtless receive, the thanks of the whole Craft.

Yours fraternally,

NOT TOO MUCH MUDDLED.

London: 6th November 1878.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I beg to thank you for the publicity you gave my circular and letter in last week's issue, and the kind remarks accompanying it. As I expected, it has been the means of inviting criticism, which I hope will be the means of calling attention to the ultimate benefit of the Charities. As you promised to notice my statement, I naturally looked forward to the review you have given this week in your very able leader. I am pleased to see, from the figures you give, and you have far better statistics to work upon than I, that my estimate is far above requirements. I assert it would be no great hardship for every Freemason to devote three guineas per annum to Charity, and I consider no person should join our Fraternity without he is in a position to do something in the cause of Charity, as there are many cases besides the Institutions requiring our support. I do not think our subscriptions to the Charity Funds of the Lodge should stop short at the amount required to support the Charities, nor should this be considered the whole of a Mason's duty, or that they constitute the original plan of Freemasonry. I admit, with you, it is desirable each should give according to his ability, and that it is dangerous to establish a minimum sum, but at the same time I feel sure every true Mason (whose charity should know no bounds save those of prudence), who is able to give more, would not be biassed by such worldly precautions as to limit his subscription to the minimum amount required; indeed, it would be a very selfish policy to adopt, as any thinking person must know, that although it may be within every one's power to subscribe the minimum amount one year, circumstances of unforeseen misfortune may prevent it the next; but what I maintain is, it ought to be every Mason's desire to do his best, and judging from your statistics, I am afraid to believe this is not the case. I am pleased to see there are several very able letters in your present number. "OLD FILE'S" balance sheet is a very laudable example as to how Lodge funds should be distributed, and if this good example were followed, the necessity of canvassing would be avoided; but the existence of the evil proves "OLD FILE'S" balance to be the exception. "DEUX ETOILES'S" remarks are somewhat severe, but I agree with him Masons should be free to contribute what they please. He hints at a great danger which might arise from a too prosperous state of things, but I think the remedy rests with the Craft to prevent this. I remember full well the impression made upon me by the charge after my initiation as to fidelity, by refraining from recommending any one to a participation unless you have strong grounds to believe he will reflect honour on our choice. Any one, therefore, I take it, who introduces a friend simply because he may afterwards benefit by the Charities would not reflect honour on our choice, as he would undoubtedly be influenced by worldly or other unworthy motives, and because our Charities happen to be in affluent circumstances there is no reason why they should not be discriminating, and it rests with the brethren to put forward only such cases as are really deserving. I feel sure it is not always the most deserving case that is at the top of the poll, while it stands to reason that the candidate with most influence wins. Consequently, this influence is relieved from a burden they would otherwise have in supporting their candidate. I think all cases should be analysed by a Charity Committee, and the cases they recommend should be the first to claim our votes. A method could easily be adopted, similar to that resorted to in the case of "Simmonds," but, as I am diverting, I will return to the subject. I am, however, sure that "DEUX ETOILES" would be the last to withhold his donation because of a fear he would be supporting an undeserving case, and I repeat if more care were observed in introducing worthy men, the evil he deplores would not result. Bro. Godschalk's letter accuses me of an arrogance which you, Bro. Editor, will vouch is not my intention. I have nowhere asserted my ideas as original, nor made such a sweeping demand that it is every brother's bounden duty to support me, but I do say I think every one should support the Steward of his Lodge, and failing a Steward should support Stewards of other Lodges, by any scheme they may put forward which does not directly divert the direct or large subscriptions to their own; if their choice were to fall on your humble servant he would be pleased. I do not think I err in saying this. I have had many friendly letters supporting my scheme, and few only adverse to it. I must admit I do not think the system of giving a loophole to obtain Life Subscriberships on such easy terms the best, but knowing that it is impossible to make all subscribe as requirements demand, the evil existing, and not knowing a better, I adopt what appears to me to be a "come-at-able" method of raising funds by small subscriptions, and I find that many liberal donors do not hesitate to give a few half-crowns for tickets which they would otherwise not give, being subscribers, nor care to figure on other lists for small sums. I have made one or two remarks in former letters how it is in the power of the Grand Lodges to stimulate the method of raising funds, by making it necessary for all Lodges putting forward candidates for the "purple" to be able to show a proper proportion of their funds devoted to charity, and for the candidates to have served the office of Steward to one or more of the Charities creditably. Also that the Charities might offer a further inducement for Stewards to come forward if it were known that, in accordance with the result they obtained so they would be rewarded should they at any future time unfortunately require aid from the funds they were endeavouring to augment. I am glad to see C. P.'s friendly remarks; I feel sure he is able to unveil a scheme that would commend itself to the committees, and I hope he will do so. I fear I have trespassed too long on your valuable time and space, and hope to hear more pros and cons, as it cannot fail to do good if the subject is thoroughly ventilated.

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

DICK RADCLYFFE.

P.S.—I hope "ALPHA'S" and "TOOTSICUMS'S" remarks may induce Bro. Binckes to write his fourth letter as soon as possible.

OLD LODGES.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Bro. Gould's valuable papers on the Four Old Lodges induces in me the wish that he would carry his researches further and trace other Old Lodges formerly on the roll of our Grand Lodge, but now borne on the list of other and independent Grand Lodges. In a former letter I endeavoured to trace a connection between Lodge No. 1 of Massachusetts, Lodges "Absalom," and "St. George" of Hamburgh, and the Lodge of "Union," Frankfort-on-Maine, with Lodges 110 (Pine 1740), 108 (Pine 1740), and 196 (Pine 1744-5), and 192 (Pine 1744-5) respectively. On turning to Cole's List for the year 1763 I find several other Lodges which, as far as my knowledge goes, are still in existence. If Bros. Gould and Hughan will turn their attention to this subject I think much interesting and valuable information will result from it. At all events, I submit the following cases as a sequel to my former communication.

No. 130 "New Lodge, Copenhagen, Denmark, Oct. 25, 1745," and No. 139 "St. Martin's Lodge at Copenhagen in Denmark Octo. 9, 1749."

These two Lodges now, I believe, exist, in the shape of the Lodge "Zorobabel and Frederick" of Copenhagen. I base my opinion on Findel, who, in treating of Freemasonry in Denmark, says, that it was introduced into that country in 1743 by a Baron G. O. Munich, who founded a Lodge, which on June 13, 1745, took the name of St. Martin. This, however, he says was not a regularly constituted Lodge, and he thinks that it was through lack of the necessary legalisation that three brethren separated themselves from it in its first Masonic year, and erected a new Lodge, which they named "Zorobabel," Prof. G. Nielsen, ecclesiastical counsellor, being chosen chairman, May 26, 1744. After various failures, Findel tell us, "At length, in Oct. 1745, a proper warrant was drawn up by Bro. Lord Cranstoun" and "this day"—which, however, is not stated—"has ever since been kept as the anniversary of the foundation of the Lodge." We next learn that "in the year 1749, the Lodge 'St. Martin' received its constitution from the then Grand Master, Lord Byron," and that "both Lodges conducted their work amicably together, from 1765, in a common room at Bro. Marshall's, until they united into one Lodge, under the name of "Zorobabel of the North Star." Until Nov. 11, 1778, they conducted their work in the German language, but as the number of brethren increased, they felt the necessity of having a place where they could work in the Danish language. Nov. 18 of that same year an especial Lodge was opened, under the appellation of 'Frederick of the Crowned Hope' for the German language." Passing over the intermediate period, as containing nothing of moment to the object I have in view, I find that the late King of Denmark, who ascended the throne in 1848, was exceedingly zealous in the cause of Freemasonry, and that the present flourishing condition is due to his exertions on its behalf. He, says Findel, "introduced the Zinnendorf (Swedish) Rite (its solemn inauguration took place Jan. 6, 1855), and promoted the union of the two Copenhagen Lodges into one, under the name of "Zorobabel and Frederick of the Crowned Hope." This I trow is the "Zorobabel and Frederick," which I have given above, and which will be found in Van Dalen's Kalender für Freimaurer.

I have marked other Lodges which I am more or less well assured still exist, but under the banners of other and independent Grand Lodges. Of these I will, with your kind permission, write later.

Fraternally yours,

"Q."

OLD LODGES.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The records of the Craft afford ample materials for the compilation of a work which might fittingly be entitled the "Vicissitudes of Lodges." For example, the present Caledonian Lodge, No. 134, possesses a singular history, of which an epitome may be found interesting.

Shortly after the arrival in London (1760) of the late William Preston (afterwards P.M. Lodge of Antiquity and author of the "Illustrations of Masonry"), a number of brethren from Edinburgh resolved to institute a Freemasons' Lodge in London under sanction of a constitution from Scotland, but not having succeeded in their application, they were recommended by the Grand Lodge at Edinburgh to the Antient Grand Lodge in London, who immediately granted them a dispensation to form a Lodge, and to make Masons. They accordingly met at the White Hart in the Strand, and Preston was the second person initiated under that dispensation.

The Lodge was soon after regularly constituted by the officers of the Antient Grand Lodge in person. Having increased considerably in numbers, it was found necessary to remove to the Horn Tavern, in Fleet Street, where it continued some time, till, that house being unable to furnish proper accommodation, it was removed to Scot's Hall, Blackfriars. Here it continued to flourish about two years, when the decayed state of that building obliged them to remove to the Half Moon Tavern, Cheapside, where it continued to meet for a considerable time.

At length Preston, and some other of the members having joined a Lodge under the regular English Constitution, at the Talbot Inn, in the Strand, they prevailed on the rest of the Lodge at the Half Moon Tavern to petition for a constitution. Lord Blaney, at that time Grand Master, readily acquiesced with the desire of the brethren, and the Lodge was soon after constituted a second time, in ample form, by the name of the Caledonian Lodge.

This Lodge was numbered 325 in 1764; 268 in 1770; 211 in 1781; 180 in 1792; 218 at the Union; 156 in 1832; and 134 at the last closing up of numbers in 1863. Its present description being the Caledonian Lodge, Leadenhall Street, London.

Yours fraternally,

R. F. GOULD.

STRONG MAN LODGE.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Your correspondent, "H. J. D.," in publishing the Warrant of Confirmation under which this Lodge is working, supplies further evidence under the seal of Grand Lodge, in favour of the theory which your Reviewer has so consistently maintained.

The place of the Lodge on all lists prior to 1740 is fixed at 110, which number, from 1734 to 1739, was filled by the Lodge then meeting at the "Ship Coffee House," near the Hermitage Bridge, with a Constitution dated at February 2nd, 173¼. This renders it impossible for the Lodge to have been warranted in 1734, as recited in the Warrant.

The official document, moreover, contains a further misstatement, viz., that the Warrant was issued to enable certain brethren . . . to meet at the "Ship Coffee House;" the first place of meeting of the Lodge being the "Crown and Mytre," Labour in Vain Hill, under which title its payment of two guineas for its Constitution is recorded, in the minutes of Grand Lodge, under date of 29th May 1733. In Rawlinson's List of 1733 (at No. 110) it is similarly described, with the slight variation of "Rummar and Mitre" in the tavern sign.

Digitized by Google

An interesting account of the centenary meeting of the Strong Man Lodge will be found in the first volume of the Freemasons' Quarterly Review (1834.)

Yours fraternally,

R. F. GOULD.

P.S. The Warrant under which present Medina (No. 35) is working, was probably sold in 1761-62, by one or more of the London brethren who had previously used it.

MASONIC HALLS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—This day there reached me by post an appeal from the brethren of a certain Colonial Lodge for funds to enable them to build a Masonic Hall. This is not the first circular sent out with a similar object which has come into my hands, and an idea has occurred to me, apropos of such appeals, which I send to you for what it is worth.

We are all agreed that it is very preferable for every Lodge to meet under its own roof-tree, and to be independent of houses of public entertainment, but in how many cases is it impossible for this theory to be carried out?

Take the case of a young Lodge in a provincial town. At the eve of its existence it must provide itself with furniture, &c., at a cost of not less (to do it decently) than £100, which is rather a heavy pull on the handful of founders, and the number of initiates per year does not do much more than pay current expenses and provide for relief, charity, &c. Unless the brethren have amongst them some rich brother, whose heart is expanded by benevolence, they cannot hope for many a long year to build or buy premises suitable for Masonic purposes, and are driven to the admitted evils of meeting in a licensed house.

Now for the remedy.

Why should there not be established a MASONIC HALL LOAN FUND, to which Grand Lodge, Provincial Grand Lodges, and Private Lodges might all contribute, and from which, under the control of the Board of General Purposes, sums of money might be lent at a very low rate of interest for the purpose of enabling young Lodges to erect suitable buildings for their accommodation, the loans to be paid off by instalments, and the interest to go to the Charities, after paying the expenses of loan negotiations, management, &c. The prospect of the advantages to be derived from such a fund would surely induce young Lodges to subscribe to it, whilst it is difficult to conceive a more fitting or paternal channel for the expenditure of a portion of the funds of Grand Lodge and of wealthy private Lodges.

However, there you have my suggestion, if you think it worth a corner.

Yours fraternally,

T. B. WHYTEHEAD W.M. 1611.

THINGS ONE WOULD LIKE TO KNOW.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—What is the status in a Lodge of a member of the Craft elected as one of its honorary members? What are his privileges? Can he take any part in the proceedings—vote—or hold office? If he partakes of a Lodge banquet, will he be required to pay a Visitor's fee, or is he exempt from payment by virtue of his membership.

Yours fraternally,

FORTE.

VALE OF WHITE HORSE LODGE.

On the 31st ult. this new Lodge was consecrated at Faringdon. Hitherto the Majority of Freemasons residing in Faringdon have been members of one or other of the Swindon Lodges. Freemasonry has, however, made such progress here that it was deemed advisable to form a new Lodge, and a charter was accordingly obtained from the Grand Lodge. On Thursday the Lodge, which was called the Vale of White Horse, No. 1770, was consecrated. There was a large attendance of the Craft. The ceremony of consecration took place at the Lodge Room, in the Savings Bank. The Consecrating Officer was Brother James Terry Jun. Grand Warden for Herts. The oration was delivered by Bro. the Rev. C. R. Honey P.G.C. Berks and Bucks. The ceremony was interesting, and was, on the whole, impressively performed. After the Lodge had been consecrated, the W.M. was duly installed. Bro. H. Blandy-Jenkins, who was some years back W.M. of the Abbey Lodge (Abingdon), was chosen to be the first W.M. of the Vale of White Horse Lodge. Bro. Blandy-Jenkins is deservedly popular, and the selection of him gave great satisfaction to the members of the Craft. The installing Master was Bro. J. J. New (of Swindon). After the W.M. had been installed, he proceeded to invest his Officers. Bro. Luker was appointed S.W., Bro. Belcher J.W., and Bro. Philips Treasurer. Before the Lodge was closed a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to the brethren who had taken part in the ceremonies of consecration and installation, and to the Prov. Grand Secretary (Bro. R. Bradley) for the trouble he had taken with respect to the formalities which have to be gone through before permission is given to consecrate a Lodge. After the business of the day had been disposed of the brethren adjourned to the Crown Hotel, where about sixty sat down to a banquet. Bro. Blandy-Jenkins presided, and several brethren holding high Masonic rank in the Provinces of Wilts, and Berks and Bucks were present. As many of the brethren had to leave early to catch the train, there was not much speech-making. In the course of the evening the health of the W.M. was proposed, and was most heartily received. A tribute was also paid to Bro. New for the labour and energy which he had displayed in all that related to the formation and the future working of the Vale of White Horse Lodge. An earnest hope was expressed that the new Lodge would render substantial help to the Masonic Institutions, and it was determined that the W.M. should represent the Lodge as Steward at the anniversary of one of the three great Societies.

Portitude and Old Cumberland Lodge, No. 12.—This Lodge met for the first time since the vacation on the 4th inst., under the presidency of the W.M. Bro. D. Nichols, supported by Bros. W. H. Bateman S.W., H. Mower J.W., L. Ruf P.M. Treas. and Father of the Lodge, A. Snelgrove P.M. Sec., W. H. Rudderford S.D., G. Coombs J.D., E. E. B. Kidder I.G., Bruttenbach D.C., Bidel Assist. D.C.; P.M.'s Bros. W. B. Kidder I.P.M., R. W. Stewart P.G.D., G. Angold, J. Cleaver, Lemaitre, A. Lilley, Picard, &c. Visitors—R. Ward 1511, J. Curlier 11, Clausen 1348, H. Stewart 95, L. Gros late 12, Shaw 1257, A. Hays 180, P. Storr 811, W. B. Berkley 108, H. M. Levy P.M. 188. The Lodge was opened and the minutes confirmed. The report of the audit committee was read and adopted, it showed a balance in hand after all liabilities had been discharged of £59 6s 4d. The ballot was taken for the admission of Mr. Pigarche (son-in-law of the W.M.); it proved unanimous in his favour. By the courtesy of the Worshipful Master, he was duly initiated into the Order by Bro. W. B. Kidder I.P.M. Bro. R. W. Stewart P.M. P.G.D. proposed, and Bro. Angold P.M. seconded, that Bro. L. Ruf P.M. and Treasurer be re-elected Treas.; this was carried unanimously. Bro. L. Ruf P.M. rose; he had great pleasure in proposing that, as the Lodge had already voted twenty guineas to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, the brethren now vote a further sum of thirty guineas, in order to qualify the Lodge as Vice President. Bro. Picard P.M. seconded the proposition, which was carried unanimously. Bros. Bateman S.W. and Cleaver offered themselves as Stewards to represent the Lodge at the next Festival of the Benevolent Institution. The resignation of a brother was accepted, with regret. It was agreed that a letter of condolence be sent to Bro. Dudley Rolls P.M. on the loss of his son. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to a banquet, provided by Bros. C. and A. Painter, that gave great satisfaction. The table was artistically decorated with flowers, and a button-hole provided for every brother by Bro. Coombes J.D. Grace having been said, the W.M. proposed the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales was always active in the cause of Freemasonry, and the W.M. was sure the mention of his name would ensure a hearty reception being accorded the toast. The W.M., in proposing the toast of the Pro G.M. and the Deputy Grand Master Lord Skelmersdale, and the rest of the Grand Officers, said he was pleased to say that they had a Grand Officer a member of their Lodge—Bro. R. W. Stewart P.G.D. That brother, in a very eloquent speech, returned thanks. Bro. Kidder I.P.M. proposed what he might say was the toast of the evening—namely, the health of the W.M.; he is one that every one respects. He has had very arduous duties to perform. Bro. Frank Ward sang "The Holy Friar." The W.M., who on rising was received with great enthusiasm, returned thanks for the toast. He felt grateful for the kind manner in which the brethren had received the toast. His great aim would be in every respect to further the comforts of the Lodge and the brethren. The W.M. then proposed the health of the Past Masters. Their Lodge was well known and respected. They had good Past Masters. He had to thank not only Bro. Kidder in particular, but all of the Past Masters generally, for the assistance they had given to the Lodge. Bro. Kidder I.P.M. returned thanks in a very excellent speech. Bro. R. W. Stewart P.M. said he had the Worshipful Master's permission to propose the toast of the newly-initiated brother. He was heartily welcome to the Lodge, where they would always be pleased to see him. Bro. A. Snelgrove P.M. sang a very excellent song. Bro. Pigarche returned thanks for the hearty and kind manner the brethren had honoured the toast and the compliment they had paid him in receiving him as a member of the Lodge. The W.M. then proposed the toast of the Visitors; they had many distinguished Masons present, but he would call on Bro. Paul Storr to respond to the toast. Bro. Pigarche sang a very artistic song, which was deservedly applauded and encored; he accompanied himself on the piano. Bro. Paul Storr replied on behalf of the Visitors, and was followed by Bro. H. M. Levy P.M. 188. The W.M. then proposed the toast of the Treasurer and Secretary, Bros. L. Ruf and A. Snelgrove, whose services they had for many years fully appreciated; both were well worthy their regard and esteem. Brother Bedell gave the next song. Brother L. Ruf said he had taken every interest in the Lodge. He had belonged to it twenty-nine years. He was the Father, and his great idea was to see the Lodge become Vice-President of the Charities. Bro. A. Snelgrove followed, and said he, in conjunction with his fellow colleague, hoped they had done their work well. The members had seen the balance sheet that night, and it was a sufficient proof they had the interest of the Lodge at heart. Bro. Kidder jun. sang "Nancy Lee." The toast of the Officers was next given.

The W.M. worked the first, second, fourth and fifth sections of the Lecture, assisted by the brethren. Bros. Halle and Smith, of the Mother Lodge, and Bro. Brandrum of Eclectic Lodge, No. 1201, were elected members. Bro. Symons was voted to the chair of K.S. for next Monday evening, after which Lodge was closed. The Lodge was opened and the minutes were confirmed. Mr. Chas. Robinson was ballotted for and duly initiated into the Order. The Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to slight refreshment. The usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were given. Bro. E. P. Albert P.G.P. responded for the Grand Officers. The harmony of the evening was enhanced by the excellent singing of the W.M., Bros. Benjamin, Blanks, Silvester and Franklin.

Taylor Tyler; Past Masters Bros. W. Leather, J. G. Dunn, and Bros. J. Grace, J. Hall, John Harrison, G. Barton, W. R. Ward, J. Bennett, T. Haslam, J. Smith, T. Windus, H. C. Lockhart, W. Birchall, D. McKechnie, D. M. F. Gaskin, J. Ricketts, J. H. Roughsedge, James Fowler P.M. 86 and 1384, James Harrison, R. Tyson P.M. 106, C. C. Wilson, F. A. R. Neill, &c. Visitors—S. Wylde P.M. 1403, John Bowes P.M. 148 P.P.G.J.W., R. Brierley P.M. 1250, D. W. Finney W.M. 1250 P.G.S., S. M. Davies (FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE), W. R. Robinson W.M. 1335, F. M. Coats 241, W. The Lodge was advanced to the second degree, and Bro. Bennett was passed. This being the night for election of officers, the ballot was taken for W.M. for the ensuing year, and resulted in the unanimous selection of the S.W. Bro. Robinson was re-elected Treasurer, and Bro. Taylor Tyler. The other Officers were voted to their respective offices. Several matters of private business were brought forward, and kept the Lodge open to an unusually late hour. The W.M. having received the hearty good wishes of many brethren, the Lodge was closed. By request of the W.M. the brethren adjourned to supper. In consequence of the lateness of the hour many left without sitting down to refreshment, a circumstance which caused the W.M. regret. After the removal of the cloth, the W.M. proposed the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts in quick succession. He most cordially gave that of the Visitors. He craved their indulgence for all shortcomings. He welcomed them very cordially, and asked the brethren to drink heartily to the toast,—which was done. He called upon Bro. Wylde to respond. That brother bestowed indiscriminate praise where it was not on any consideration merited. This customary flattery is very injurious, and is calculated to mislead the younger members of the Craft. In all fraternal spirit, we consider that the working of No. 897 requires great improvement to merit such praise as that bestowed. A very fine selection of music was rendered by Bros. Lockhart, Taylor, and Barton, Bro. Woodward presiding at the organ. Bro. Harrison proposed the health of the W.M., bearing testimony to his best endeavours to fill his post with credit to himself and satisfaction to the brethren. The toast was drunk with Masonic honours, and the W. Master in replying reviewed the past year. He regretted he had not been able to do more for the good of the Craft, and particularly for his Lodge. He had great pleasure in proposing the health of the W.M. elect, who he thanked, with the Officers generally, for their many past marks of esteem. Bro. White responded, and remarked, in anticipation of the appointment of Officers for next year, due regard would be taken to appoint those who understood their duties, and would attend to them. He hoped for good attendance on the part of the members, and their hearty co-operation in the work before them.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

THE Queen remains at her northern residence. Their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales reached London on Monday on their return from Paris. It is announced that the Indian Collection of the Prince of Wales, now in the Paris Exhibition, is, by consent of His Royal Highness, to be removed to the Edinburgh Museum.

The Earl of Carnarvon on Tuesday night delivered an address at Edinburgh, on Imperial Administration, in which he contrasted the present amicable relations between the Colonies and the Home Government with the dislike formerly entertained by the former towards "Downing-street."

The present candidates for the office of Rector of Aberdeen University are Mr. Cross, the Home Secretary, and Lord Rosebery, the Earl of Aberdeen having withdrawn.

The deaths have been announced of the Dowager Marchioness of Cholmondeley; Mr. J. W. Miles, formerly M.P. for Bristol; Mr. Kenneth Macleay, a distinguished Scottish artist; and of Mr. Samuel Phelps, the well-known actor.

Lord Penzance, as Dean of Arches, on Saturday delivered a long judgment declining to enforce the monition pronounced against the Rev. J. Edwards, of Prestbury, as the Court of Queen's Bench had granted a prohibition in the case of Mr. Mackonochie. Lord Penzance criticised very sharply the action of the Queen's Bench in overruling the decisions of the Arches Court.

A new set of rules was issued on Monday prescribing changes in the mode of hearing summonses at Judges' Chambers.

A pedestrian match extending over six days was brought to a close at the Agricultural Hall on Saturday. There were nineteen competitors, and the winner, a man named Corkey, travelled within the period a distance of 521 miles. Brown, the second man, had covered 506 miles.

A match at football was played at Kennington Oval on Monday night by the electric light. The experiment was, on the whole, successful, but improvements in some of the details were desirable.

A fire broke out at Maynooth College on Friday last, and half the western wing of the building was destroyed.

Mining operations in Cornwall are almost entirely suspended, and many of the miners are emigrating from the district.

A party of mining engineers visited the Sandwell-park Collieries on Wednesday. During the descent, two gentlemen fell out of the cage. One, Mr. Arnold, was killed upon the spot, and the other, Mr. Barker, was dangerously injured.

Many hundreds of farm labourers in Kent have struck against the proposed reduction of wages.

Several cotton mills at Burnley have resumed working, the operatives accepting reduced wages.

A lighter was run down and sunk in the Mersey by the steamer City of Baltimore, and one man was drowned. The steamer J. O. Scott ran down a foreign schooner on Tuesday off Hartlepool, and the crew of the latter vessel were drowned.

The Malabar steam transport, about to convey troops to India, was disabled on Saturday by the derangement of her machinery, and was towed into Plymouth Harbour.

The master, mate, and boatswain of a merchant vessel, the Maggie Dixon, were convicted at Exeter Assizes of gross cruelty towards an apprentice. The master was sentenced to 12 months imprisonment, and the other prisoners to five years penal servitude.

A labourer engaged in unloading a vessel in the Liverpool docks died from the effects of excessive drinking of rum, which formed part of the cargo.

A police sergeant at St. Helen's, near Liverpool, was shot dead by a man whom he had stopped upon suspicion. The murderer has since been arrested at his mother's house in Ireland. A man of independent means, living at Uttoxeter, murdered his wife and then committed suicide. A boatman, named Mumford, at Dover, on Tuesday, killed his wife and child by stabbing them with a dagger.

A man named Charles Peace, who is awaiting his trial in London for burglary at Blackheath, has been identified as the murderer of a Mr. Dixon, near Sheffield, two years ago.

One of the directors of the City of Glasgow Bank, Mr. Stewart, has been released upon sureties to the extent of £15,000. The other directors in custody have applied to be released, but have not yet offered sufficient sureties. A public meeting was held in Glasgow on Monday, when a subscription was opened for the relief of the shareholders in the City Bank, and upwards of £55,000 was at once subscribed. That amount has since been increased to nearly £80,000. Subscriptions have also been opened in Edinburgh, Dundee, and other Scottish towns.

The Viceroy's second letter to the Ameer Shere Ali was delivered on Saturday last to the Afghan Commander at Ali Masjid, and with peremptory demand for a reply before the 20th inst. Public opinion in India is decidedly adverse to this renewal of communications after the Ameer's refusal to allow the British Mission to proceed to Cabul, and there is no expectation of any concession on his part. In the meantime military preparations on the frontier are being vigorously carried on. General Sir S. J. Browne has been appointed to the command of the Peshawur force, and Sir N. Chamberlain will accompany the Viceroy to Lahore as Military Member of Council. A fresh division, composed of a Bombay and a Madras brigade, has been ordered to the frontier. M. Greig, the Minister of Finance, has returned to St. Petersburg, without having succeeded in what was believed to have been the object of his mission—the arrangement of a foreign loan. The Porte, upon the advice of the British Ambassador, has directed the evacuation of Varna. In Roumelia the insurrection is extending, but the Russian authorities deny that it has been encouraged by them. At Belgrade there is some uneasiness lest the demand for the incorporation of East Roumelia with Bulgaria should interfere with the territorial cessions to Servia which were recommended by the Congress of Berlin. The lottery, under the sanction of the French Government, in connection with the Parish Exhibition, has proved so popular that 12 millions of tickets have been issued, and even a larger number would find purchasers were it possible to arrange for the drawing. The French Chamber has been engaged in discussing the validity of M. Paul de Cassagnac's election, and the first sitting was entirely taken up by his speech. On Thursday the discussion was resumed, and after a stormy debate M. de Cassagnac's election was annulled. A storm of unusual violence raged at Vienna on Sunday, which did great damage and caused complete stoppage of telegraphic communication. A new Cabinet was formed at Athens last week under the presidency of M. Tricoupis, but upon their first meeting the Chamber, an adverse resolution was passed, and the Ministry resigned. The negotiations between the Russian Government and the Vatican have come to an end, and it is understood that the Pope will shortly issue a protest against the oppressive treatment of Catholics in Poland. Elections were held in the United States on Tuesday, which resulted favourably for the Republicans, although the Democrats will still have a majority in the House. General Butler was defeated in Massachusetts. The Press of the United States is unanimous in approving the action of their Government in respect of the Newfoundland fisheries dispute. Telegraphic news has been received from Cape Town to the 15th of October. There had been no further fighting, but the Zulus still maintained a threatening attitude.

COMMITTEE MEETING OF THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

THE General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys held its November meeting on Saturday last. There were present Bros. W. Roebuck (in the chair), H. Browse, J. G. Chancellor, W. F. C. Moutrie, Don. M. Dewar, Geo. J. Row, A. Durrant, C. G. Rashworth, W. Hyde Pullen, H. Massey, S. Rosenthal, Chas. Horsley, F. Adlard, George Motion, and F. Binckes (Secretary). The Mansion House Committee of the "Princess Alice" Fund having resolved to buy into the Institution a son of the late Bro. Charles Jardine, the brethren referred it to the House Committee to recommend his admission on payment of 170 guineas. Three candidates were placed on the list for the April election. An outfit was granted to a late pupil of the Institution, who is now in a situation; and a vote of thanks was passed to Bro. John Caldwell, who sent a cheque for £100 to this Institution on his resignation of membership of the Robert Burns Lodge, No. 25, his failing health not allowing of his travelling from Devonshire to attend the meetings of the Lodge.

GRAND CHAPTER.

THE Quarterly Meeting of Grand Chapter was held on Wednesday evening, at Freemasons' Hall. Comp. S. Rawson occupied the Z. chair, Comp. Capt. W. Platt the chair of H., and Comp. J. A. Recker the chair of J. There were also present Comps. J. Hervey, Erasmus Wilson, Rev. C. W. Arnold, Dr. Woodman, James Lewis Thomas, Francis Robinson, James Glaisher, W. Hyde Pullen, C. A. Murton, Peter de Lande Long, E. S. Snell, Thomas Fenn, A. J. Duff Filer, H. Maudsley, H. J. P. Dumas, Joshua Nunn, Colonel Creaton, J. M. Case, F. P. Morrell, H. G. Buss, C. B. Payne, ... H. Tattershall, G. Stacey, George Lambert, J. Clever, W. Stephens, A. A. Pendlebury, W. Dodd, H. Massey, and Charles Godtschalk. On the motion of Comp. Col. Creaton, seconded respectively by Comps. J. Lewis Thomas, Joshua Nunn, the Rev. C. W. Arnold, and J. M. Case, Charters were granted for Chapters to be attached to Lodges Nos. 1428, 1177, 531, 594, 1525, 1358, 1665, and 970; and a Charter of Confirmation was granted to Chapter No. 358, Ireland Island, Bermuda, the original Charter being entirely decayed. Grand Chapter then declared that Comp. Joseph Smith P.D.C. was suspended from his Arch Masonic functions for the period while his Craft suspension continues in force. Comp. Joseph Smith, who was an elected member of the Committee of General Purposes of the Supreme Grand Chapter, being by reason of his suspension disqualified from attending such Committee, the Grand Chapter elected Comp. F. Adlard P.Z No. 7, &c., to fill the vacancy thus caused. Grand Chapter was then closed.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Autumn is proverbially the season of sickness: then the blood requires purification, the digestion demands thorough and attentive regulation and all the secretions call for correction. Holloway's remedies supply all the necessaries for securing health; the one overcomes cutaneous diseases, sores, ulcerations, abscesses, carbuncles, and all visible imperfections; the other acts most potently in cleansing the circulation, strengthening the stomach, governing the liver, regulating the bowels, and reducing the entire system to order. Thus these twin medicaments furnish the most efficient medicine chest available for family use. It is easier, through Holloway's discovery, to point out the remedy than to describe the disease; into the former no fallacy can intrude; into the latter prejudice may unwillingly creep.

ROYAL ARCH MASONRY IN CUMBERLAND.

IT was our good fortune last week to spend two or three days among the everlasting hills of canny Cumberland. As our custom is, we sought out the brethren, and found we were fortunate as to time, as the Whitehaven and Wigton Chapters held their Annual Installation Festivals respectively on the first and second of November. On arriving at the Masonic Temple in College-street, Whitehaven, we found quite a crowd of Companions, and every face bespoke interest in the day's proceedings. The Chapter was opened in due form, according to ancient custom, and in a very efficient manner. The bulk of the Companions admitted, the minutes were read. The ballot was then taken for several candidates, and four of the number being present, they were exalted by the Principals, ably assisted by Comps. John Barr P.Z Prov. G. Treas. and Rothery P.S.; the exaltations being completed, the M.E.Z., Comp. Sandwith, called upon E. Comp. John Bowes P.Z. Prov. G. Scribe N., to undertake the duties of installing Principal. In due course Comps. Dr. Hendy, W. F. Lamonley and Edward Tyson, were presented respectively as Z., H., and J. elect, for the benefit of installation, which ceremony was duly and regularly performed, and on the return of the Companions the new Chiefs were proclaimed, greeted, and saluted. The Officers for the ensuing year having been invested, and the benediction pronounced, a cordial and hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Comp. Bowes for his valuable and efficient services. The Companions, now to the number of fifty, adjourned to the banqueting-room, where an excellent dinner was served by Bro. Smith of the Albion Hotel. Grace before and after meat being said by Joshua, the usual Royal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured. Comps. Barr and Sandwith came in for a large share of praise, for their long-continued interest in Royal Arch Masonry. The health of the Installing Principal Comp. Bowes called forth many expressions of thanks and obligation for many years of valuable assistance. We gathered that the Chapter, after a period of great activity, fell asleep, and was revived under the fostering care of Comp. Captain Mott; that ex-Companion being called to the Grand Chapter above, the choice of a Preceptor fell upon Ex. Comp. Bowes, long-well known in Cumberland and Westmoreland for his active services in the Craft. That Comp. readily complied with the wishes of the members of the Chapter; he exalted many brethren, and conducted a Chapter of Instruction. Comp. Barr stood to the front, ably assisted by Comp. Tyson as P.S., and the Sun, Square and Compasses Chapter, No. 119, has added a very large number of members to its roll. Ex. Comp. Bowes has annually visited the Chapter and installed the Chiefs, and now No. 119 is one of the largest Chapters in the county, and its working an example to all. After a pleasant evening the Companions separated, well satisfied with the day's proceedings. The next day, Saturday, the annual meeting of the Chapter of St. John, No. 327, Wigton, was held. A great gloom, however, overspread the Convocation, for Ex. Comp. John Lemon was interred that day. The whole town was in mourning attire, and universal regret was expressed on all sides for the heavy loss Masonry had sustained by the death of Bro. Lemon. He had been Senior Warden of the Province, and for many years its Treasurer. The Chapter met, and Ex. Comps. James Gardiner, Joseph Pearson, and W. H. Hoodless, were respectively installed as Z., H. and J. The Officers having been invested, and the ceremony completed, the Chapter was closed, and the Companions went in a body to the Railway Station to join the funeral party. After the funeral, the Companions partook of luncheon, but speeches and salutes were dispensed with, in consequence of the melancholy circumstances under which the Chapter met. We were impressed, during our visit, with the necessity of a Chapter at Maryport, this town is mid-way between Whitehaven and Wigton. The Whitehaven Chapter is overgrown, and there are a large number of R. A. Companions at Maryport, well able to work and sustain a Chapter. If we may presume to make a suggestion, it will be, that a Chapter be immediately formed at Maryport, and, out of compliment to one of the oldest R. A. Masons in the Province, called "the Nicholson Chapter." We are sure that the M.E. Prov. G. Superintendent, Lord Bective, and Colonel Whitwell would view such a step with favour. If another friend and adviser was wanted, we are sure that Comp. Bowes's best services would be at the disposal of the Maryport Companions. We commend this suggestion to all whom it may concern. Verum sap.

THE ATHENÆUM, CAMDEN ROAD.

We are much indebted to those artists who make it their business from time to time to cater for the enjoyment of the public, and to provide their friends with the means of spending an evening rationally and pleasantly. Miss Florence Smart, whose second evening concert, at the Athenæum in Camden Road, we attended on Tuesday, deserves both credit and support for the spirited manner in which she has got up these entertainments, and her evident desire to please her patrons. The programme for the above evening was full, and the music—the songs especially—well received by a large, intelligent, and appreciative audience. We might, perhaps, say that some of the songs were a trifle too long, considering the number set down, but if we may judge by the repeated encores that were demanded, the majority of those present thoroughly enjoyed them. It would be an invidious task to point out individual excellence, seeing that all the artists acquitted themselves well. We will add, however, one word as regards Miss Smart. Her performances during the evening must have satisfied the most fastidious listener, and her persevering efforts to please won entire approbation. We observe that the third of these concerts is arranged to be given at the same place, on Tuesday, the 17th December, when we are assured the young lady will receive another hearty reception.

THE ROYAL PRINCES AND THE ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.

We learn that, on Wednesday last, the 6th inst., their Royal Highnesses the Duke of Connaught and Prince Leopold were advanced to the 33° at the headquarters of the Ancient and Accepted Rite, 33 Golden-square, in the presence of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, 33°, Grand Patron of the Order. The ceremony was performed by Lord Skelmersdale 33°, the Sov. Grand Commander, assisted by the other members of the Supreme Council 33°. A full report will appear in our next.

MASONIC PRESENTATION TO LORD METHUEN.

A GRAND Lodge of the Province of Wilts was held yesterday, at the Town Hall, Swindon, under the presidency of Lord Methuen Prov. Grand Master for Wilts. Grand Lodge was numerously attended, and among the brethren present were Bros. Gabriel Goldney, M.P., Deputy Prov. Grand Master, Sir Daniel Gooch, M.P., Prov. Grand Master for Berks and Bucks, Lord Hy. Thynne, Frederick H. Goldney Prov. Grand Treasurer, H. C. Tombs Prov. Grand Secretary, James Terry Secretary of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, and F. R. W. Hedges Secretary of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls.

Among the letters which were read expressing regret for inability to attend was one from Bro. Collins, on behalf of His Royal Highness Prince Leopold; from Sir H. Watson Taylor, who sent a present of two fine haunches of venison; and from Bro. Hervey, Grand Secretary of England. The Treasurer's report showed that the funds of the Province were in a highly favourable condition, and fifty guineas were voted to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution. Bro. Gabriel Goldney then presented to Lord Methuen a pair of magnificent solid silver candelabra, of the value of six hundred guineas, accompanied by a testimonial on vellum framed and glazed. The candelabra and testimonial were subscribed for by the brethren and Lodges of the Province in commemoration of Lord Methuen having completed his twenty-fifth year of office as Provincial Grand Master of Wilts. Bro. Goldney, in making the presentation, after stating that it was a recognition by the brethren of the eminent services of His Lordship, as Provincial Grand Master, in raising the Province of Wilts to its present high position in Freemasonry, traced the progress of the Province in the last twenty-five years, which was evidenced by the increased number of Freemasons in the district, and the continually growing contributions it made in the cause of charity. Lord Methuen, who, in replying, was visibly affected, expressed his pleasure at this latest mark of their appreciation of any little services he had been able to render. When he looked on the magnificent testimonial which had been presented to him, and considered its great cost and high artistic execution, he could not help asking himself what he had done to deserve it? Although he might, to some extent, have assisted the Province, he was sure that the generous and kindly feelings which the brethren had evinced towards him that day were ten or a hundred times greater in proportion. For many generations he trusted the splendid tokens of the brethren's esteem, generosity and kindness, would be handed down to members of his family, who he hoped would, in their turn, have the same feelings towards the Freemasons of Wiltshire as he had himself. He concluded by informing the brethren that all that he had been enabled to do in Freemasonry was due to the kind instruction he had received from Sir Daniel Gooch. Brother F. R. Goldney then presented his Lordship with a History of Freemasonry in Wiltshire, which was afterwards ordered to be printed. The new Grand Officers for the year were subsequently appointed, and the proceedings of the day concluded with a banquet. A ball was given in the evening.

The Abbey Lodge of Mark Masters, No. 225, Abingdon.—The consecration took place on 30th ult., at the Abbey Council Hall. The consecrating officer was the very Worshipful Brother the Rev. P. M. Holden, Past Grand Chaplain, who performed the beautiful and impressive ceremonies in the most able manner. He was assisted by several distinguished officers from the Grand Lodge. The installation of the first Worshipful Master, Brother Walter Ballard, was then proceeded with, and he subsequently invested his Officers, the S.W. being Bro. Walter Thompson, and the J.W. E. L. Shepherd. The Lodge being closed, a splendid banquet was partaken of in the Council Chamber. The excellent rendering of several choice selections of music, by Brother Theodore Distin and others, was much appreciated. Amongst the brethren who took part in the proceedings were Bros. T. J. Pailey W.M. of the Aldershot Lodge, E Margrett W.M. designate of the new Leopold Lodge, which will be consecrated in Reading on the 25th inst., Charles Stephens, George Westall, &c., &c. The Great Western Railway Company's arrangements for the conveyance of the Visitors to and from Abingdon were very complete, and were carried out under the personal superintendence of Brother H. Stevens, the District Traffic Manager.

Ancient Carthage Chapter, No. 1717, at Tunis, in North Africa.—The first regular meeting of this Chapter after the summer recess was held on Friday, the 25th of October, at the Masonic Hall, nearly the whole of the members being present. Two of the Principals having resigned, owing to the difficulty to come from Malta to attend the meetings of the Chapter, the Bros. Principal, E. Comp Broadley, installed in their stead, and by the unanimous desire of the members, E. Comp Dr. N. Lenghi 33° G.O. of Italy and P.M. of the Italian Lodge "Caprera" at Alexandria, as H.; and Ex.-Comp. Dr. Q. Mugnaini 33° G.O. of Italy and P.M. of the Italian Lodge "Carthage and Utica" at Tunis, as J.; Comp Professor S. Soniller was elected and installed as E. On the Chapter being opened in due form, a vote of thanks was passed to E. Comp W. Kingston (R.W.D.G.M. of Malta) P.Z. 349, and E. Comp. Reichelmann J. 349 for their invaluable aid in opening the Chapter, and the consideration shown by them in resigning their posts to other eligible Companions, when it was found that their private associations in Malta would prevent their coming to Tunis to work the Chapter. It was also resolved that a letter of thanks be written to the Principals of the Melita Chapter 349, who had presented the "Ancient Carthage Chapter" with a highly finished set of sceptres. The following candidates were then unanimously elected: Bros. J. H. Stevens, H.B. Majesty's Vice-Consul at Tunis S.W 1717, A. Perini M.D. J.W. 1717, M. Lombroso Secretary 1717, A. Felice, and J. Barsotti. These brethren being in attendance, were introduced, and duly exalted to the sublime degree of the Royal Arch. There are now twenty-nine active members of the Chapter, including the W.M. of the Italian Lodge "Risorgimento," and the degree is very highly appreciated by the foreign brethren, especially as the ceremony is efficiently worked in the Italian language. The Chapter being closed in due form, was adjourned till the next regular meeting of the 23rd November.

NEW ZEALAND.

The first anniversary of the Palmerston Lodge, No. 1749, E.C., was celebrated on Friday, 16th August, in the presence of a very large gathering of the Craft. The Lodge was opened in due form at 8 p.m. by Bro. Henry Kitchener W.M., assisted by his Officers, and the following visitors were announced and received with the usual Masonic ceremonies:—The W.M., Officers, and members of Lodge Waitaki No. 1111 E.C., the R.W.P.M., Officers, and members of the Oamaru Kilwinning Lodge S.C., the W.M. Officers, and members of the Port Chalmers Marine Lodge No. 942 E.C., together with Bros. P.M.'s D. Rhodes Lodge of Otago No. 844 E.C., J. Matheson No. 1111 E.C., Crawford E.C., and J. Joyce No. 942 E.C. The Lodge of Mount Ida was represented by Bro. Bremner, and the sister Constitutions of Ireland and Scotland by Bros. Geohagan I.C., and Captain M'Bride of the barque Aline S.C. The usual routine business of the Lodge having been transacted, a Board of Installed Masters was formed, and Bro. M'Kenzie P.M. Oamaru Kilwinning Lodge S.C., who had been duly elected as W.M. of the Palmerston Lodge, was presented for installation, the ceremony being performed by Bro. C. de Longueville Graham, who was ably assisted by the W. Bros. J. Joyce and J. Matheson. After the installation of the W.M., Bro. H. Kitchener, the retiring Master, was installed as P.M., and the Board of Installed Masters closed. The following brethren were then invested as Officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. R. Jeffreys S.W., Catamore J.W., Drapper Sec., Stephenson Treasurer; Haynes J.D., J. Bower I.G., Robins Tyler. Bro. P.M. Matheson gave the customary addresses to the newly-invested wardens, while the W.M. was addressed by Bro. P.M. J. Joyce. At the termination of the installation ceremony Bro. H. Kitchener P.M. moved that a vote of thanks be recorded on the minutes to the installing Officers. This being carried by acclamation, the Lodge was closed in due form. Appropriate music was rendered during the ceremonies by Bro. J. A. D. Adams of the Lodge of Otago No. 844 E.C. After the installation, the brethren adjourned to the Empire Hotel, where a sumptuous repast had been provided in Bro. J. Duncan's best style; fully fifty members of the Craft were present, and a most enjoyable evening was spent. The usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were given, and duly honoured; while at frequent intervals some excellent songs were rendered by several of the brethren present, Bro. Blakely presiding at the piano. Shortly before the closing toast was given, the health of the host and hostess, Bro. and Mrs. Duncan was appropriately given, and responded to; and after a brief interval the brethren separated well pleased with the enjoyable evening they had spent. From the acknowledged ability of the W.M., Bro. M'Kenzie, together with the able selection of Officers he has made, we augur a most successful year for the thriving little Palmerston Lodge.

A meeting of the P.G. Lodge of the North Island, S.C., was held on Monday evening, the 2nd September, in the Wellington Theatre Royal, for the purpose of installing the Officers who were unable to attend in Auckland last year. The Waterloo Lodge was the first opened. About 200 Masons of the various Lodges were present. The Provincial Grand Lodge was then entered, and Bro. the Hon. F. Whitaker P.G.M. assumed the throne, and opened the Provincial Grand Lodge, introducing Bro. McCulloch P.P.D.G.M. as the installing Master. Bro. Brodie P.G. Senior Warden occupied his proper chair, and the other G.L. Officers were filled by deputies. The Officers installed were: Bro. A. Johnston as P.D.P.G.M., Bro. Rev. B.W. Harvey as P.G.D. Chaplain, Bro. Gillon as P.G.D. Sec, Bro. Browles as P.G.S.D., and Bro. Dale as P.A. Marshal. The ceremony was admirably conducted by Bro. McCulloch, and the musical part was supported by a splendid choir. Bro. Brodie, on behalf of the Sir Walter Scott, Thames; Bro. McCulloch on behalf of the St. Andrew's Lodge, Auckland; and Bro. Power, on behalf of the Delight of the Thames Lodge, congratulated the newly installed Officers. After the ceremony a banquet was held.

The Correspondent of the Sydney morning Herald writing from Noumea, New Caledonian, says:—After Henri Rochefort's escape a leading merchant of Noumea received notice to quit, and the Masonic Lodge was closed, through presumed complicity in the flight of the Communist leader.

The Lodge was opened at 6.30 in due and ancient form, and the minutes of the last meeting read, found correct and confirmed. After sundry business of a private nature had been transacted, the Lodge was closed in harmony and the brethren adjourned to banquet, the Worshipful Master entrusting the Chair to W. Bro. Gilbert, who presided in a genial and entertaining manner. The first toast proposed was the Queen and the Craft which Bro. Gilbert said required no comment on his part to ensure a hearty reception. By request of the chair, Bro. Hilditch favoured the brethren with a humorous song. The second toast—that of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, the Princess of Wales, and the Royal Family—was most heartily honoured. The third, which was given in a very happy manner, was that of the Pro Grand Master and the Deputy Grand Master. During the interval Bro. Walton gave a recitation. In the next toast the worshipful brother drew the attention of the brethren to their own Province. As Lord De Tabley was as much beloved in one Lodge as in another, little was needed to ensure the enthusiastic reception of the toast. Bro. Walton again kindly favoured the brethren with a recitation, after which W. Bro. Gilbert said: I rise with the greatest possible pleasure to propose a toast which I am sure you will receive with every expression of regard and fraternal feeling, we are to-night pleased to see among us a brother who is better known to me than to any one present. I had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of Bro. Davies at the Prov. Grand Chapter at Birkenhead, and afterwards had the additional pleasure of meeting him in the town. He is, as most of you are aware, a thorough and hard working Mason, and the life and soul in this district of a very important Masonic Journal—the most important to the Craft—the "Freemason's Chronicle." I have the greatest confidence in stating that he has seen as much of Masonry as any one among us. He has visited many Lodges in this Province, and he can tell you from experience that this Province stands second to none. I may state for his information that this little Lodge of ours stands second to none in its good works, and we accord him a hearty welcome among us. The toast was drunk with the utmost cordiality, and Bro. Davies gratefully responded. A few other good recitations, amid social enjoyment, brought a very agreeable evening to a close.

La Tolérance Lodge of Instruction, No. 538.—Meeting held at the Horse and Groom, Winsley-street, W., on the 6th inst. Bros. A. Ginger W.M., H. Bertram S.W., T. Cooper J.W., R. Child S.D., Pratt J.D., S. Cooper I.G., F. G. Baker P.M., C. Davis Treas., J. Hurdell Secretary, and over forty other brethren. Lodge opened and minutes were confirmed. The first and second sections were worked. The ceremony of initiation was then rehearsed, Bro. I. Irish candidate. The next business of the evening was a notice of motion that had been given at the previous meeting by Bro. C. Davis Treasurer, "That the Lodge of Instruction meet in future at the Green Dragon, Maddox-street, W., instead of the Horse and Groom, Winsley-street, as heretofore." An amendment was proposed by Bro. Ferguson, that the Lodge remain at its present place of meeting. A long discussion ensued, when the amendment was lost, and the original proposition carried. The reason for removal is the want of room to accommodate the members, the Lodge having increased to such an extent. Bro. Bertram was elected W.M. for the next meeting, and Lodge closed.

David Evans and James Jones were respectively re-elected Treasurer and Tyler for the same period. On the motion of P.M.'s Rich and Phillips, it was unanimously agreed to present a jewel to Bro. Secretary Whittle; also to Bro. Quarter-Master Orlopp, who for many years acted as Tyler, to the satisfaction of the brethren, but who, consequent on his promotion, has recently resigned the appointment of Tyler, and become a subscribing member to the Lodge.

Skinner offered himself as candidate, and the initiation ceremony was rehearsed. Bro. Skinner answered the questions leading to second degree. The brethren were called to refreshment. Labour was resumed; it was decided to present Bro. Roe, at the banquet on 29 h inst., with a black marble dining room clock, and Bros. Blasby, Beckett, and Gunner were appointed a committee to select and purchase the same. A special vote of thanks was accorded to Bro. Le Grys for his able working, and Bro. Goss was elected W.M. for next meeting. It was announced by Bros. Roe and Goss (P.M.'s) that they hoped to work most of the sections during the winter season, and they invited the co-operation of the brethren. Lodge was closed and adjourned till 8th Nov., at half-past seven p.m.

Abell S.W. was elected W.M. for the ensuing week, when the ceremony of passing will be rehearsed.

Prince of Wales Lodge, No. 959, Ipswich.—The members of this Lodge held their installation meeting on Monday evening, at the Golden Lion Hotel, Ipswich. The Lodge having been regularly opened and the minutes of last meeting confirmed, two brethren were passed. The W.M. elect, Bro. W. D. Paine, was then presented, and all the brethren below the chair having retired, he was duly installed by Bro. the Rev. R. N. Sanderson, who performed his duties in an able and pleasing manner. On the readmission of the brethren the new W.M. received the customary salutes, and then invested his Officers. After a hearty vote of thanks had been passed to the late W.M., Bro. Bennett, for the admirable way in which he had discharged his duties, the brethren adjourned to the banqueting room, where the new W.M. presided. The usual Loyal and Craft toasts having been given, the health of the W.M. and Immediate Past Master were warmly received, and the meeting closed with the Tyler's toast. Stamford Lodge, No. 1045.—The regular monthly meeting of this Lodge was held at the Masonic Chambers, Altrincham, on Monday, the 4th instant. Present—Bros. W. Agar Renshaw W.M., W. Alcock I.P.M., A. H. Gilbody S.W., C. H. Cook J.W., J. Siddeley P.M. Treasurer, R. Newhouse P.M. P.P.A.G.D.C. Sec., S. Sturmer Assist. Sec., T. H. Kirk P.M. P.P.G.O. Organist, J. Hamilton S.D., S. Thompson J.D., J. Ambler I.G., J. Worthington Tyler; Past Masters Bros. J. Hardy, R. Baker P.P.G.D.C., C. H. Hinde P.G.R., J. A. Birch P.P.G.S.D., and Bros. J. Henshall, J. Harrison, T. Kent, H. Balshaw, J. Lewis, G. Richardson, B. Riley, M. Stone, W. Gibson, J. Bott, D. Kinsey, J. A. Crabtree, James Byrom, J. Drinkwater, E. G. Parker, A. B. Everett, T. Dains, E. Procter, James Harrison, W. Dacre. Visitors—W. B. Pullen 175, E. Aston 941, H. Bratt 428, C. G. Bowston 163, and S. M. Davies FREEMASONS' CHRONICLE. The brethren of this Lodge have the novel and noteworthy system of partaking of refreshment before business. The Lodge room is adjoining the Unicorn Hotel, and the catering is provided by the hospitable host, who is a brother. After enjoying a bountiful tea, the brethren repaired to business, the Lodge being opened at 6.30. The minutes of the last meeting were read and ratified. The ballot was taken for Bro. Geo. F. Smith as a joining member, and proved unanimous in his favour. The ballot was also taken for Mr. Wm. Griffin and Mr. F. R. B. Lindsell, and proved in each case unanimous. Mr. Wm. Griffin being in attendance was duly initiated into our Order. The Worshipful Master deserves great credit for the efficient and impressive manner in which he performed the ceremony, especially as this was his first effort. It remains for the subordinate Officers to emulate him. In accordance with a notice of motion, Worshipful Bro. Kirk moved that bye-law No. 6 be expunged from the book of Bye Laws. The motion was seconded by Bro. Gilbody. After an earnest appeal from Worshipful Bro. Hinde, who is always zealous on behalf of our noble Charities, the word "expunged" was "expunged," and the word "suspended" substituted, which met the approval of the brethren. Other business of a formal nature having been gone through, the Lodge was closed in harmony, with solemn prayer. By request of the W.M., the brethren adjourned, to reassemble at the customary social board. Bro. Siddeley in the temporary absence of the W.M. took the chair, and availed himself of the pleasure of proposing the two first toasts of the evening, which were duly honoured. The Worshipful Brother entrusted the toast of the Pro Grand Master and Deputy Grand Master of England to the S.W. This was cordially received. Bro. Siddeley reserved to himself the pleasure of proposing a toast which brought them nearer home, and which they all delighted to honour. The sincere regard manifested by the brethren of the Province for their Prov. G. Master, testified to the inestimable aid rendered to the Craft by Lord De Tabley, whose many virtues were known in and out of the Craft. He called upon the brethren to drink to the very good health of their Prov. Grand Master, upon whose life and health depended greatly the prosperity of the Province. The toast was drunk with the greatest enthusiasm and with Masonic honours. Upon Bro. Cook J.W. devolved the duty of proposing the health of the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, which he did very ably, uniting with it the names of Bros. Hinde and Baker. This was warmly received, and Bro. Hinde returned thanks. The toast being so heartily proposed and drunk, indicated the appreciation of the brethren for the Prov. Grand Officers. The cordial manifestation exhibited by the brethren round the festive board showed the good feeling existing in the Province among all members of the Craft. On behalf of his brother Officers he expressed his sincere wishes for the continued prosperity of the Province. Bro. Baker said, I have to thank you, as one of the Prov. Grand Officers of this Province, for the very warm manner in which the last toast has been received. I deem it a great distinction and a high honour to be a Prov. Grand Officer under such a worthy and noble Master as Lord De Tabley. Bro. Lewis kindly favoured with a song. Bro. Birch next proposed the toast of the newly initiated brother; in doing so he assured the brethren that Bro. Griffin would do his duty as a Mason as thoroughly as he did in his every day capacity, in which he was honoured and esteemed. The toast was most fraternally received. The W.M. returned, and Bro. Siddeley relinquished the chair. By request of the Worshipful Master, Bro. Cook gave a very amusing recitation; after which Bro. Griffin responded to the honour conferred upon him, in a very touching manner. Bro. Hinde rose: he assumed the gavel to propose a toast which was at all times given with the deepest feeling of pleasure, and received with the utmost cordiality in the Lodge, indeed, we of the Stamford Lodge, extend a hearty greeting to all our brethren, no matter from what clime they may come; we hold the claims of all brethren to be mutual. It is a source of great pleasure to the brethren of this Lodge to welcome visiting brethren, they hope the day may be long distant when they cannot reckon on visitors in their Lodge, and round their festive board. He had pleasure in uniting with the toast the name of Bro. Davies. The toast was drunk with great cordiality. Bro. Thompson kindly responded to the call for a solo on the flute, which he gave in capital style. Bro. Davies in returning thanks for the honour conferred upon the Visitors, referred, among other matters, to a rule established in the Stamford Lodge, which required a password to be given to the I.G. before leaving the Lodge. He explained that he came armed with every weapon necessary to gain admittance to a Lodge, but the stern sense of duty of the faithful I.G. totally disarmed him, and he had to resume his seat. The brethren evidently enjoyed this episode in the evening's pleasure, and heartily applauded Bro. I.G. for his fidelity. This question was the means of opening up a lively chat, and Worshipful Brother Birch explained the practice was instituted for the purpose of maintaining regularity and order. The system is doubtless commendable in its object, as it prevents that very objectionable parading in and out of the Lodge room during business. But the question is, Whence comes it? Is it new or old? Bro. Baker kindly responded to the call for a song, after which Bro. Siddeley in a very pleasing and complimentary manner proposed the health of Bro. Birch, whom they delighted to honour as one of the fathers of the Lodge. The toast was heartily drunk. Bro. Birch on rising was received with applause, he said I cannot fail to recognize the great kindness shown me in the cordial reception of this toast. I look back with a great deal of pleasure to my connection with this Lodge, and I look forward with deep interest for its welfare. I am always ready to render every assistance in my power to advance the objects of the Craft, for which I have great regard. I should have been here to-night to witness the ceremony of the initiation of my friend Bro. Griffin, but urgent business prevented me, I am happy to meet the brethren round this social board. Bro. Lewis again kindly favoured the brethren with a song; after which the Tyler's toast brought a very pleasant evening to a close.

Lord Warden Lodge, No. 1096.—A meeting was held at the Public Rooms, Park-street, Deal, on Friday, the 1st inst. Present—Bro. E. Kirby W.M., A. H. Des Barres I.P.M., T. Ayling P.M. as S.W., H. R. Botting J.W., T. T. Usher P.M. Secretary, S. Hinde Treasurer, J. S. Harrison P.M. Chaplain, F. England as S.D., W. Carterfield J.D., S. Willing I.G., J. Westaway Organist, G. Wood, G. Rivers, F. Haslip, C. Hurst. Visitors—F. Bird P.M. P.P.S.G.W., C. Corps Wellington Lodge 784, S. Holgate Tyler. Lodge opened, minutes were read and confirmed. The two candidates for initiation were unable to be present. Lodge opened up to third degree, and was closed down. A petition was handed for the signature of the brethren present from a brother who had sustained serious personal injuries, also loss of property estimated at £750, through the late whirlwind that visited Lower Walmer. The Lodge was closed in solemn form, and the brethren spent a pleasant hour together.

Clapton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1365.—On the 1st November. Present—Bros. McMillan W.M., McDowell S.W., Finch J.W., Spurgeon S.D., Richard J.D., T. Birch I.G.; also Bros. The Lodge was opened in due form, and, on the preliminary business being arranged, was opened up to the 2nd degree; the ceremony of passing was rehearsed, Bro. L. Coubro being the candidate. The Lodge was then resumed to the 1st degree, and Bros. J. Coubro of 1150 and Maughan of 19 were unanimously elected members. The Lodge was then closed in perfect harmony, considerably earlier than usual, to enable the brethren to attend the inauguration of the Second Clapton Benevolent Association, which was commenced with nearly fifty members. The Secretary wishes to take this opportunity to inform the members of the Lodge and intending visitors that Bro. Barkin has kindly placed at the disposal of the members a most comfortably furnished room for the winter, the regular Lodge-room being considerably too large and cold; the members present on this occasion seemed fully to appreciate the change.

Sir Hugh Myddelton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1602.—A meeting was held on Tuesday, at the Crown and Woolpack, St. John-street-road. Present—Bros. W. Rowley W.M., R. C. Read S.W., A. F. Rowley J.W., J. The first, second, third, and fourth sections of the lecture were worked by Bro. Preceptor Pearcy, assisted by the brethren. Bro. C. Halford, United Strength 228, was elected a member. Bro. Colonel Burdett Provincial Grand Master. The W.M. worked all the ceremonies in his usual solemn and impressive manner, and after about three hours and a half of labour, the Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. After the usual Loyal toasts had been disposed of, the W.M. proposed the health of the Initiate, Bro. C. Millington, observing that he had had the pleasure of initiating one who he knew would be an honour to the Lodge and a credit to the Craft. Bro. C. Millington responded. He would endeavour to uphold the honour and integrity of Freemasonry. Bro. C. K. Killick in a felicitous speech proposed the health of the W.M.; he congratulated the brethren on having such a brother for W. Master. The toast was received with acclamation. The W.M. observed that he was proud of the kindness shown him by the Lodge. So long as he was associated with the Kingsland Lodge he would exert himself to promote its advancement. The remaining toasts comprised the health of the I.P.M., the Visitors, the Officers, &c., and last came that of the Tyler. Some capital songs and recitations were given during the evening.

PERFECTION IN IRONING FOR EVERY SPECIES OF FABRIC.

Great Saving in Expense and Labour.

The price being only 22/, it is the Cheapest Iron in the trade, and can be had at all Ironmongers in the United Kingdom.

F. RATH & Co.'s IMPROVED GAS BOX IRON is extremely simple in its construction, and cannot get out of order; the merit of the invention is, that the heat produced from the burning gas is thrown on to the steel plate which covers the bottom surface, none being allowed to pass off in waste.

Three times the amount of work ordinarily executed can be done by the use of these Irons, which have now been in use in extensive Manufactories long enough to thoroughly prove their merits and evidence their entire success. They are as suitable for Family Use as for the Work-room, the Manufactory, or the Laundry.

Freemason's Chronicle;

A WEEKLY RECORD OF MASONIC INTELLIGENCE.

SANCTIONED BY THE GRAND LODGE OF ENGLAND.

VOL. VIII.—No. 203. SATURDAY, 16th NOVEMBER 1878. [PRICE THREEPENCE. Registered at the G.P.O. as a Newspaper.

THE EATON LODGE, No. 533, CONGLETON, CHESHIRE.

THIS county, as we have remarked more than once before, must always take a foremost place among the Provinces subordinate to our Grand Lodge. We say this, not merely because it has a considerable number of Lodges on its roll, or because its local organisation for charitable purposes is as admirable as the amount of good done is considerable. We say it is entitled to the respect of all brethren not for these reasons only—though it must be admitted they would be alone sufficient—but likewise because it is one of the districts in England in which Freemasonry established itself when the system devised by Anderson and Desaguliers and their compeers, began to extend their influence beyond the metropolis. Moreover, it is as well to bear in mind—and this may have had something to do with the Royal Art so soon obtaining a foothold in Cheshire—that of the earliest non-operative Masons of whom any record exists, namely, Elias Ashmole and Colonel Mainwaring, the latter hailed from Kerthingham, in the county of Cheshire. The ceremony of initiation was not performed within the limits of the county, but at Warrington, on the borders of contiguous Lancashire. This is something to boast of, namely, that out of our two earliest gentlemen Masons, one was a Cheshire man. Then, when in 1724 the Speculative system became to spread into the Provinces, no less than three of the nine Lodges founded in different parts of England, namely, two at Chester, and one of Congleton were established in the county, the other six being at Bath, Bristol, Norwich, Chichester, Portsmouth, and Carmarthen respectively. Other Lodges were constituted some years later, namely, one at Macclesfield in 1731, and another at Chester in 1738, one of the two 1724 Chester Lodges having died meanwhile. Thus, though none of them are in existence at the present day, the oldest living Lodge in the county being the Unanimity, No. 89 of Dukinfield, which was consecrated in 1754, it is evident that Cheshire was at a very early date a favoured district of the Fraternity. Moreover, Brother Captain Astley Terry, who has compiled the history to which we are indebted for most of these particulars, includes Cheshire with North Wales, in the Province over which Hugh Warburton was appointed Grand Master in 1727 by the Earl of Inchiquin. But though established thus early, the Lodges do not seem to have had a long career, that held at Congleton being one of twenty-one Lodges struck off the roll of Grand Lodge in 1759 on the grounds that they had neither contributed to the General Fund of Charity, nor had any communication with Grand Lodge, or even, as far as could be ascertained, held any meeting for several years. For a long period Congleton appears to have been without a Lodge, and at last, in 1789, one was constituted under the style and title of Independent, No. 550. The brethren of this Lodge, with those of the Macclesfield, went, on 24th June of the same year, in procession with a band of music to be present at Divine service in the church at Congleton. In 1793 it became No. 459, and was one of twelve Lodges to the members of which Bro. Godfrey, the then Provincial Grand Orator, preached a sermon at the church of St. John, Chester, on 23rd June. In 1805 this Lodge migrated to Lane End, Staffordshire, became No. 516 after the Union, and was erased from the roll of Grand Lodge in March 1828. Then there was a second lengthened period during which Congleton was without a Lodge, nor was it till the year 1846 that owing, it seems, chiefly to the energy of the late Bro. Gibbs Crawford Antrobus, of Eaton Hall, steps were taken to establish a new Lodge. On the 27th August of that year a Warrant, bearing the signatures of the late Earl of Zetland, Lord Worsley, and W. H. White, Grand Master, Deputy Grand Master, and Grand Secretary respectively, was issued by Grand Lodge, constituting the following brethren into a Freemasons' Lodge, to be known as the Eaton Lodge, No. 777, now No. 539, to be held at the Red Lion, Congleton, namely, Bros. John Smith as W.M., John Dyer as S.W., Thomas Wallworth as J.W., Patrick Halpin, Robert Oliver, Charles Wilson, and Thomas Hope. A preliminary meeting having been held on the 2nd September following, Brothers E. Stocker Peter Ullivero, John McCracken and John Johnson became members in addition to those named in the Warrant, and in due course the Lodge was constituted with the following Officers over and above those designated in the Warrant, namely — Bros. G. Stocker Treasurer, Patrick Halpin Secretary, R. Oliver S.D., Chas. Wilson J.D., Thos. Hope I.G., and J. McCracken Tyler. During the remainder of the year eleven were added to the roll of members, among them being Bro. G. Crawford Antrobus, who in April 1847 was appointed S.W., and on 15th September of that year became W.M. Nine were added to the strength of the Lodge in 1847, and in 1848 eight more, while Bro. McCracken Tyler died, and was succeeded by Thos. Chaddock, who was initiated by dispensation from the Provincial Grand Master. Bro. W. Starkey succeeded Bro. Antrobus as Master for the year 1848-9. On 5th September 1849 it was agreed that the Secretary, in consideration of the duties of his office, should be a non-subscribing member. In November, a pair of globes was purchased for the use of the Lodge. Bro. John Wilson became Master in 1849-50, and Rev. Bro. J.W. N. Tanner in 1850-51, the latter and the Treasurer being re-elected the next year, though it is evident the Lodge was not in a flourishing condition, as the minutes do not contain a record of the installation or appointment of Officers. In 1852-3 Bro. G. Barlow was Master, and Bro. John Dakin in 1853-4, and several members names not recorded in the minute book were excluded from payment of dues, while new life was imported into the Lodge by the admission of sundry members. Bro. John Chapman, though elected Master in succession to Bro. Dakin, having declined to accept the honour conferred upon him, Bro. Antrobus occupied the chair for a second time; he being at the time Senior Grand Warden of the Province. During this year it was resolved to move the Lodge from the Golden Lion to the Bull's Head, its present abiding place. The annual subscription was slightly increased, and it was agreed that the quarterly supper should be paid for out of the Lodge funds. It was during this mastership also, that the Prov. Grand Lodge held its meeting in Congleton. At the installation of Bro. John Myatt W.M. 1855-6 Bro. John Smith founder and first W.M. of the Lodge, but who had resigned his membership in the meantime, was present as a visitor. A sum of £5 was voted to the Royal Free Hospital, Grays Inn Road, London, in 1856. Bro. Dr. Beales was W.M. in 1856-7, and J. H. Shepherd in 1857-8 the chief events during the latter's year of office being the presentation of an address to Bro. Antrobus Prov. G. Senior Warden and Past Master, by the Congleton brethren, on the occasion of their presenting the east window of Eaton Church; a further increase in the annual subscription; and the appointment of Bro. Antrobus to be Dep. P.G.M. in the place of Bro. Maddock deceased, a letter of condolence being likewise addressed to the Prov. G.M. the late Lord Combermere on the lamented death of his Deputy. Bros. W. Burghope (1858-9), Sam. F. Gosling (1859-60), and Bro. Joseph Whitehurst (1860) were the next W. Masters, and it was when the last-named presided over the destinies of the Lodge that the brethren, accompanied by Lord De Tabley and other Prov. G. Officers, as well as by brethren of other Lodges in Cheshire and Staffordshire, attended divine service at Astbury Church in memory of Bro. Gibbs C. Antrobus. In 1861-2 Bro. G. W. Hall was Master; in 1862-3 Bro. W. Bradbury. During Bro. Bradbury's Mastership it was ordered to pay £1 annually to the Cheshire Educational Masonic Institution, founded in 1863. Thanks also were voted to the son of the late Bro Antrobus for his kindness in presenting the brethren of the Lodge with his father's Masonic library. In 1863, by the closing up of Lodges, the Eaton became, as it is now, No. 533 on the roll of Grand Lodge. In 1863-4, Bro. Dr. Beales a second time filled the chair of his Lodge, and the Lodge voted a sum of five guineas towards the fund for a testimonial to Lord Combermere P.G.M., while the year following, during the Mastership of Bro. William Aston, it was ordered that a hatchment in memory of their late P.G.M. should be placed in front of the Bull's Head Hotel. Three months later and the Lodge received an invitation to attend a Provincial Grand Lodge at Knutsford on the occasion of the installation by the Most Worshipful Earl de Grey and Ripon, Grand Master, of Lord de Tabley, who had been appointed to succeed Lord Combermere in the command of the Province. During the presidency of Bro. Henry Aston W.M 1865-6, and Bro. John Skerratt W.M. 1866-67, nothing noteworthy occurred, but in the Mastership of Bro. E. A. Cokayne 1867-8 Lord de Tabley, attended by his Officers, honoured the Lodge with a visit, and having observed the manner in which the three degrees were worked, "expressed his gratification with the very efficient manner" in which the ceremonies had been performed, and as a sum of five guineas had at this particular meeting been voted to the Institution for aged Freemasons "to enable the Lodge to become Life-Governors," his Lordship also expressed "his high appreciation of the vote in aid of Charity which had been unanimously passed." In 1868-9 Bro. S. F. Gosling was chosen W. Master for the second time. The sum of £1 was voted to the Zetland Commemoration Fund, and a new member, Bro. G. W. Reade, presented the Lodge with a floorcloth to serve as a memento of his connection with the Lodge. In 1869-70, Bro. Dr. Beales was W.M. for the third time, and the Lodge, in recognition of the valuable services he had rendered it during the many years of his membership presented him with a valuable P.M.'s jewel—he had joined the Lodge in 1863, and we rejoice to say that last year when Captain Terry's History of the Lodge was published, was still a member, and held the important office of Treasurer. In October 1869, the Lodge received a copy of an address presented to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales by the Masons of Cheshire, and of His Royal Highness's reply thereto, this being, it is stated, the first Masonic address to the Prince. In January 1870 a resolution expressing the regret felt by the members at the death of Bro. John Smith, "the father of the Eaton Lodge" was unanimously passed and recorded on the minutes. In the Mastership of Bro. William Blackshaw, 1870-1, the Provincial Grand Lodge was held in the Town Hall, Congleton. Lord De Tabley P.G.M. presided, and there was also a large gathering of the brethren from the different Lodges in the Province. The members attended Divine service at St. Peter's Church, and the collection made at the close of the sermon was divided between the local Cottage Hospital, and the Provincial Fund of Benevolence. Bros. J. Whitehurst and A. E. Cokayne, Past Masters, W. Blackshaw W.M., and T. G. Sheldon, J. J. Horsfall, S.W., and T. W. Vandrey, S.D., were the Provincial Grand Stewards. At the next meeting a sum of two guineas was voted to the fund for a memorial window in the church at Higher Sutton, in memory of the late Bro. John Smith. Bro. J. J. Horsfall was chosen W.M. for the year 1871-2, and during his reign Bro. Beales presented the Lodge with a portrait of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. A harmonium was likewise purchased. Bro. S. F. Gosling succeeded Bro. Horsfall in the chair of the Lodge for 1872-3, this being the third year during which he had occupied that post. In May 1873 the Lodge went into mourning for the then recently deceased Earl of Zetland, Past Grand Master. In September a subscription was made by the brethren to the fund for placing a memorial window to the late Bro. Bradbury, a Past Master of the Lodge, in Biddulph Church. In 1873-4, and again for the second time in 1874-5, Bro. Samuel Blackshaw occupied the chair. During the former year a subscription, amounting to £10, was contributed by the brethren to the fund for placing a pulpit in Chester Cathedral by the Freemasons of Cheshire. In the latter year the amount of subscription was raised to its present sum, namely, Thirty Shillings, and the initiation fee was increased from Four to Five Guineas. Bro. A. E. Cokayne, W.M. for the second time in 1875-6, presented to the Lodge a banner, the design of which was drawn for him by Sir Albert Woods (Garter) Grand D. of C., through G. E. Cokayne, M.A., F.S.A., Lancaster Herald. Two sums of £5 and £10 respectively were subscribed towards the fund being raised in Cheshire to secure to the Provincial Grand Lodge a perpetual presentation to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. The sum of ten guineas was also subscribed to the Cheshire Educational Masonic Institution, making a total of twenty-one guineas in three years, and securing for the Lodge twenty votes in perpetuity. In 1876-7, when the record is concluded, Bro. Captain Astley Terry held the Mastership. He presented to the Lodge a Charity Box, while Bros. Cokayne and Sheldon gave, the former a silver jewel and the latter a silk collar for the Director of Ceremonies. Here ends our story, which is derived from the materials so ably, and with such care compiled by Bro. Captain Terry from the Minute Books of the Lodge and other sources. Published with this sketch will be found lists of Patrons and Grand Masters of Freemasons, of Prov. Grand Masters, of the members of the Eaton Lodge on whom Provincial honours have been conferred, and of all who have been members of the Lodge, together with a copy of the Lodge Bye-Laws, and what must prove a great convenience to members of the Lodge possessing the book, forms for filling in from year to year the names of the Officers, admissions and withdrawals, and any record of importance. The History is further embellished with Photographs of the late Bro. G. Crawford Antrobus, a Past Master of the Lodge and Dep. P.G. Master of Cheshire, and Bro. John Smith founder and first Master. Copies, by photography, of the Lodge Warrant as well as of the Warrant of a Lodge at Macclesfield, granted in 1756 by the Grand Lodge of the "Ancients," bearing the signatures of the Earl of Kelly Grand Master, Bro. W. Osborn Dep. G.M., W. Dickey S.G.W., and Laurence Dermott for himself as Grand Secretary, and for James Gibson J.G. Warden. The frontispiece is a coloured illustration of the Lodge banner with its motto, "The Lord is all our Trust" inscribed thereon. We congratulate Bro. Captain Terry on the completeness with which he has done his work, as well as the ability he has shown in the collation and arrangement of his materials, and we may add that if all other Masters were to follow his admirable example a history of the Craft in England might soon be written.

INSTALLATION MEETING OF THE ALBERT EDWARD LODGE, No. 1557.

THURSDAY, the 7th of November, may well be termed a Red Letter Day in the history of the Albert Edward Lodge. Non-Masons would ask each other, "Why the commotion? and what brought so large an influx of strangers to the good old town of Hexham?" But members of the Craft know that these strangers were brethren who had come some long distances—from Alnwick, Darlington, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Sunderland, &c., to do honour to a brother who had won for himself by indomitable perseverance a reputation throughout the Province. It was the Festival of the Lodge, and the installation of Bro. William Marr Bell, the District Supt. of the North British Railway, who had very courteously attached saloons to the 2.10 train leaving Newcastle, to convey the brethren who had intimated their intention to be present. Several who had come by an earlier train were entertained at lunch at Bro. Bell's private house, where Mrs. Bell most courteously and amiably presided. The Lodge was opened at three o'clock, by the W.M. Bro. W. Fishburn, T. Foster I.P.M., W. M. Bell S.W. W.M. elect, J. Turner J.W., Rev. G. Robinson Chaplain, J. Catherall Sec., J. Pervice as S.D., M. Robson J.D., J. Nicholson Organist, R. Humphries P.M. as I.G., J. Johnson Steward. The Lodge was so full that it looked more like a meeting of the P.G.L. than that of a private one. The minutes being confirmed, the ballot was taken for Mr. G. Hunter, which proving satisfactory that gentleman was duly initiated into the mysteries of our Order by the W.M. Bro. E. D. Davis P.P.S.G.W. and P.G.D.C. then assumed the chair, and Bro. Fishburn introduced Bro. Bell, the W.M. elect, to him, to receive at his hands the benefit of installation. Bro. Bell having given assent to the ancient charges, all below the rank of P.M. left the Lodge; a Board of Past Masters was then formed, numbering nineteen, and the ceremony was proceeded with. Upon the brethren being re-admitted, the new W.M. was duly proclaimed and saluted. He then appointed and invested the following brethren:—W. Fishburn I.P.M., Rev. G. Robinson S.W. and Chaplain, J. Catherall J.W., J. Turner Treas., J. Nicholson Sec. and Organist, E. Shield S.D., J. Purvis J.D., J. Johnson I.G., F. Robinson and T. Pearson Stewards, N. Newcastle Tyler. Hearty good wishes were tendered to the W.M. by the representatives of the various Lodges who were present, and the Lodge was closed. The brethren then adjourned to the Town Hall, where covers were laid for one hundred, and close upon that number sat down to dinner, which was provided by Bro. Pearson of the Bush Hotel. One end of the spacious hall was decorated, and bore the motto of the town, "Welcome to the Heart of O' England." Grace having been said, the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were submitted from the chair and responded to. In giving the health of the P.G.M., Earl Percy, and Officers of the Grand Lodge, the W.M. said: You all know that at the head of our Province we have a good working Mason—one who does not shirk his work. You all remember, only a few weeks ago, how he presided over us at Alnwick, and also the sumptuous banquet he set us down to, and I trust he will long rule over us. We have this day amongst us a large number of Provincial Grand Officers; they have come from far and near, and this Lodge ought and does feel very proud to see them. He would couple with the toast the names of Bros. A. Robertson Prov. Grand Senior Warden and J. Ridsdale P.G. Junior Warden, and would call on them both to reply. Bro. Robertson said, that when Earl Percy conferred on him the post of S.W., he had no idea that it would entail such responsibility; he assured them that the P.G. Officers intended to do their duty. One thing they had made up their minds to do; that was to make an official visit to every Lodge in the Province. He thanked them all for the kind manner in which the toast had been drunk, and he was sure he was expressing the feeling of all when he said that it was a pleasure to be present to do honour to the good Mason who had that day been installed. He concluded by again thanking them on behalf of the Provincial Grand Master and Officers of Prov. Grand Lodge. Bro. Ridsdale also responded. The W.M. then gave the Provincial Grand Master of Durham and Officers of that Lodge, and expressed the pleasure he always felt in attending the Provincial Grand Lodge of that Province, presided over by the oldest Prov. Grand Master in England. Bro. J. E. Robson P.M. replied. Bro. E. D. Davis on rising said: We have had the pleasure of placing in the chair of K.S. this day, a brother who, from the first moment of his initiation till now, has been a lover of the noble science; his great ambition was to make Freemasonry in this town a thing to be respected. I believe you could not have put a man in the chair who would do more justice to the Lodge than the one you have selected, and I trust every prosperity will attend him and your Lodge. I, therefore, give you his health, and call on you to drink it in full bumpers,—this was done with cheers. The W.M., who was enthusiastically greeted, thanked them all heartily for the way his name had been received, he did not quite believe he deserved all the kind things Bro. Davis had said of him; he had always looked forward to the proud position in which he now stood, although at a time when he had little hope of attaining it. He was sure that although this Lodge was young, it had had good Masters, and during the past year a most efficient one; he assured them he would try his best to do his duty in the high office they had placed him, and when the time came, to hand to his successor the warrant in as unsullied a state as he had received it. Before sitting down he would call on them to drink the health of the I.P.M. who by his work that day had satisfied the Visitors that he had made Freemasonry his most careful study. A deal of the success of the Lodge was mainly due to him. Bro. Fishburn said: He believed all who took office would try and succeed, and if he had done so he was thankful. He would do all in his power to render any assistance to the W.M. if he required it, and concluded by thanking them. Bro. Turner, in giving the toast of the Installing Master, observed that it was the first time he had seen the ceremony, and had been much impressed by the way Bro. Davis had given it. They, the members of the Albert Edward Lodge, looked on him as their father, and he only hoped that he would not forget one of his children in this the Heart of O' England, Hexham. Bro. Davis, who was received with loud cheers, said it would be impossible for him to convey to the brethren his thanks, or to answer in adequate terms to the toast so kindly proposed by Bro. Turner. It was his desire to see Freemasonry flourish on the face of the globe. He need not say in this Province of Northumberland how much he had worked for that object. Brethren, I cannot tell you my feeling of joy when at Alnwick only a short time ago I saw around me over 700 Masons sitting down to a banquet where there was an abundance of wine, and every other good thing, which was only to be asked for, and to see the whole of that vast gathering rise, and quietly leave the grand old castle of the P.G.M., and like good Masons and gentlemen go to their homes. I say the result was magnificent; a thing to be proud of. Brethren, I cannot hope to address you for many years longer, but as long as I live my feeling will always be that of gratitude to the brethren for the courtesy always accorded me. The Present and Past Officers was submitted by Bro. R. L. Armstrong W.M. 406. In the course of his remarks he said he felt sure those appointed that day would do their duty. However talented a Master might be, he could do nothing without his Officers. The S.W. had received the honour of being appointed Provincial Grand Chaplain; he should couple his name and that of Bro. Robson with the toast. Both suitably replied. The W.M. then gave the Visitors, and expressed his thanks to those who had come from long distances that day, and assured them he and his Lodge would never forget the honour done them. He coupled with this toast the name of Bro. G. Thompson P.P.G.S.W., and Bro. Loflin, of the Mariner's Lodge, New York. In returning thanks, Bro. Thompson said they were all delighted with the entertainment provided them, and that they had come as a mark of respect to the W.M. He again thanked them for the reception of the toast. During the evening the W.M. received several congratulatory telegrams from brethren who were unavoidably prevented from attending. The time had now come for the Visitors to leave, and as they left the Hall, they were loudly cheered. The W.M. went to the Station with them; where again, they had saloon carriages attached for their convenience. Every one felt highly pleased with the day's proceedings.

INSTALLATION MEETING OF THE EBORACUM LODGE, No. 1611.

CHARITY STEWARDS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Having regard to the great importance of the question, the treatment of which has occupied, and happily continues to occupy, so large a portion of your space, I confess myself amenable to the charge of neglect in not having furnished you with the letter to the absence of which some of your correspondents have done me the honour to refer in complimentary terms.

If, however, brethren will only bear in mind the ceaseless demands upon time and attention—morning, noon and night—they will not withhold that indulgent consideration I venture to ask at their hands. The "fourth letter" was completed two or three weeks since, with the vital exception of statistics, which I prepared some time ago, but which I have unfortunately mislaid, and have not, at present, either the means or the leisure to reconstruct.

Meanwhile, let me offer a few remarks on the recent letters which have appeared in your columns. It was not to be expected that the modus operandi so actively and energetically adopted by Bro. Dick Radclyffe would pass without criticism, or escape censure. There was never yet lacking an excuse for not giving—there is nothing easier than to find a justification for your own shortcomings by condemning the action, and by misconstruing the motives of those who are persistent in their efforts in a direction you are determined not to approve. No one has ever ventured to say that the only merit in Freemasonry is in almsgiving. But I for one will venture to say that those who, with the means to give (I cannot fix the amount), studiously decline from year to year to contribute to our Charities, not only neglect the fulfilment of obligations they ostentatiously accepted, but prove their utter inability to recognise or appreciate the true prompter of Freemasonry! I do not deny their observance of "Truth" (but "what is Truth?") as it is in them; but of "Brotherly Love" and "Relief" they can have no realising conception. "If I see my brother have need, and shut up,"—I care not whether my "compassion" or my purse,—how dwelleth a real love of Freemasonry in me?

Your correspondent "DEUX ETOILES" is exceedingly hard upon those who, like Bro. Radclyffe and others, feel it their highest duty to substitute deeds for professions, acts for words, and to devote themselves to the work of inducing others to do likewise. But where is the necessity for this? where is to be found a single argument in support of a denunciation of practical philanthropy, and its zealous advocates. Surely those who, like deaf adders, wilfully stop their ears against the appeals on behalf of the aged, the widow, and the fatherless, may rest content with keeping their money, and with refusing co-operation in helping those who cannot help themselves, without thinking it incumbent upon them to denounce in strong terms those who feel and do differently from themselves! An appeal, however urgently pressed, is not a demand—a request, however forcibly embodied, is not a levy—concession in both cases is entirely optional.

The Brother who is "NOT TOO MUCH MUDDLED" is quite right when he speaks of "the necessity of harping upon the subject of donations." It is unfortunate perhaps that this necessity must be recognised, but for all that you cannot escape from it, and while no doubt it is exceedingly unpalatable to the "lofty minded," the niggardly, and the indifferent, there can be no relaxation, if the needs of our Institutions are to be adequately provided for.

I fear "A MASONIC ENTHUSIAST," who sends his communication "Charity; is it Giving?" is a type of a very large class of members of our Order. But how am I to understand his claim to be reckoned as "A MASONIC Enthusiast?" His own belief in himself is evidently sincere. "With me Masonry is a hobby, and I have taken it up for some years with zeal in all its branches, and done more work both in ritual and organization as well as official drudgery and routine than one Brother in five hundred, judging from observation." Passing over what looks to me like a tinge of the spirit of one of the "two men who went up," not the publican, I must demur to the assertion of "zeal" in all the branches of Freemasonry; because annually "giving charity" is one, and a very important one of the branches of Freemasonry. That your correspondent is an "enthusiast," I readily admit, he tells us of his recognition of every claim upon him except that of Masonic charity. "His church," "half a score of local societies," "private relief," having satisfied all which he, "finds that his income will not permit him to qualify in our Masonic Charities." Has it never occurred to our enthusiastic brother that it would be consistent with the character he assumes to allow these various claims in some one given year to be subservient to other claims at least equally deserving, and which, with the knowledge an enthusiastic study of his Masonic profession must necessarily have brought with it, he must be aware, ought to occupy more of his attention, and to share more largely in his benefactions than they evidently have hitherto done?

All Masons point with pride to our noble Institutions, though the majority do not contribute to their support. In my humble judgment, the efforts of those who labour to reduce this majority are worthy of all praise, and if persevered in will I am confident meet with reward.

Yours fraternally,

FREDERICK BINCKES.

London, 11th November 1878.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—What course of reasoning is to be followed in making comparison between the remarks of Bro. Dick Radclyffe in CHRONICLE of the 9th inst.?

Are these subdued ideas really to be read and judged with those not only in the circular letter but the epistle from our brother in yours of the 26th ult.?

In the latter he coolly suggests that Lodges be compelled to give one-third—or, as he puts it, "compelled to subscribe one-third of their subscriptions."

Add to this suggestion his crude and ill-digested words, such as "reproach and disgrace," indiscriminately applied to the Craft in the circular letter, with its general self-sufficient tone, lead me to the safe conclusion, that in correspondence it is quite possible "Arrogance" (the word is not my own) may with very delusive ideas be expressed without intention or knowledge of the writer. This is the only theory to be adopted in fair comparison of the letters in question, and one I am inclined to believe will be admitted by Bro. Radclyffe. These unfounded imputations against a generous Fraternity call for withdrawal, a body who, by their united aid, give freely and liberally to their Institutions, and that by voluntary effort.

These large gifts to the Charities, be it remembered, are free, distinct, and wholly independent of the monies paid by the Craft (by right) to Grand Lodge; again, be it remembered that a large proportion of this money is voted by the Board of Benevolence and Grand Lodge to suffering brethren, and to distressed members of the Craft and their belongings. To say nothing of the large sums now and again voted by Grand Lodge for purposes outside the pale of Masonry.

Evil will be the day when a Mason's charity (save the mark) is brought about by "compulsion."

Its teachings and very first principle are freedom of thought and action, whilst these teachings, when followed, produce the healthy and vigorous development of this freedom, and, used in right directions, are the parent of that best of all virtues, the virtue taught by Christ—viz.: "Charity of the Heart." Much could—and has been said and written on this phase; these words include so much of all that is good and noble, and makes this world worth living for; the milk of human kindness here displayed, bringing about that Charity of individual combined action, doing the largest amount of good possible for the greatest number. This I maintain is part of the good work done by the Craft. The genius of Masonry was never at any time aimed to make mere pocket Charity its first and paramount object, but charity in that sense is the outcome of its work, and follows as a moral result. Let, therefore, the first real principles of Masonry have fair play and cultivation, never will fear then exist of its Charities, as embodied by our Institutions, being in a drooping or languishing state for want of active support and the real sympathy of the Craft. Indiscriminate giving is the bane of society; enrich a charitable institution beyond its requirements, you at once tend to breed claimants, and not only claimants but a race of paupers are created. Our Institutions are doing good work, and require the energetic and earnest support of the Brotherhood to maintain their efficiency in the support of all legitimate candidates as they are elected. Funds for this purpose the Craft have hitherto ungrudgingly given. The very large accession to the ranks of the Order during late years has not been an unmixed good, at least it naturally has brought increased numbers asking aid from the Charities, but who with truth can say that Lodges, Chapters and individuals forming Masonry have not honoured this increased demand by timely and liberal donations, finding the necessary funds to enable the Institutions to meet increased expenditure, and, I maintain, supporting the Charities in their present prosperity.

This may be seen in the largely augmented annual incomes of each of the Charities year by year increasing. A time of commercial depression may,—perhaps, has come upon us,—it is but exceptional. Fear not; the Craft will ever raise sufficient to meet all claims their Charities are pledged to, with a surplus. I believe it is an undoubted fact, were the income of each of the Charities doubled to-morrow we should have the number of candidates trebled; and at least one-third of them undeserving, or, to say the least, that proposition should never have been brought forward, their only claim (unfortunately for the Craft) is in being tacked on to the skirts of Masonry, and brought forward with clamour to the exclusion of real distress, which often hides its sorrows in silence for want of the helping hand. Having had repeated opportunities of investigating cases which have been elected to one or other of the Charities, I assert, at least the proportion named ought not to have been admitted to the exclusion of those more deserving. Hence, find the funds for the liberal support of the Charities in their present state of efficiency, and allow for a natural increase. After this, leave well alone; be cautious how you hold forth a premium to—may I say, pauperism.

In conclusion, I ask why all this clamour as to the distressed state of the Charities, and alleged indifference of the Craft to their wants? Is the case so bad, as to justify the absurd theory of "compulsion." Every Mason who is a practical worker, both within and without the Lodge, knows well to the contrary; but he will also know that to accumulate the very large amounts necessary for the well-being of the Charities, the best machinery for the purpose is a Board of energetic Stewards. Honour to those brethren who, at the sacrifice of time, labour and money, fill the office with credit to themselves and profit to the Charities. Those who undertake the office from pure motives of doing good for poor suffering humanity will not stop to bargain as to results, or the particular advantage accruing to themselves thereupon, whether it be a present "purple collar," or a prospective place on the funds for Aged and Decayed Masons. The heartfelt satisfaction in doing what good is possible in the individual desire to illustrate one of our teachings would be, I take it, the real and pure incentive, and warm each to their work. To Bro. Dick Radclyffe, in his duplicate Stewardship, sincerely I offer my warmest congratulations, and hope he will take a double first class, by the amounts on his list exceeding his utmost expectations, but placed thereon solely by voluntary offering.

Yours fraternally,

CHARLES GODTSCHALK P.M. 70 and 1255.

WARRANTS OF "ANCIENT" LODGES.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—About a month since, or it may be longer, I had the pleasure of reading in your columns of the re-appearance in a London Lodge of Bro. John Constable. Indeed, I have had the pleasure of shaking him by the hand, and congratulating him on his safe return home. I have therefore been looking forward to the completion of that task which Bro. Constable had conducted so successfully and with so much energy, but which was necessarily interrupted during his absence from England. I mean the publication of the Warrants of the still existing "Ancient" Lodges. The number of Warrants yet required to furnish the vacant dates of constitution in the Grand Lodge Calendar is under thirty—I write under correction, but I think I am not far out of my reckoning—and as, of course, no one would dream of intruding on what Bro. Constable has taken specially in charge, all that can be done is to invite him to continue, and if possible complete his important task. It may be that his time is too fully occupied for him yet to resume his labours, but it will doubtless be a source of satisfaction to him to learn that the completion of what he has commenced, and so far carried out successfully, is anxiously looked forward to by a considerable number of brethren.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Fraternally yours,

"Q."

THINGS ONE WOULD LIKE TO KNOW.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In answer to "FORTE," allow me to state, for the information of the Craft generally—

I. An honorary member cannot take part in the proceedings of a Lodge.

II. Can neither vote nor hold office.

III. If he partake of the banquet, can only do so by invitation, or by payment if the bye-laws so provide.

The only exception is the Secretary, who may legally be an honorary member with full privileges.

Yours fraternally,

W. SMALLPEICE,

Sec. Emulation Lodge of Improvement.

P.S.—The answers I. and II. also apply to members of Lodges of Instruction, notwithstanding any bye-law to the contrary.

COMMITTEE MEETING OF THE BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

THE monthly meeting of the Committee of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution took place on Wednesday afternoon, at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Lieutenant Col. Creaton, V.P. and Trustee, presided, and the other brethren who attended were Bros. R. H. Grand, Charles Cottebrune, James Brett, W. Clarke, S. Rawson, J. M. Case, A. H. Tattershall, W. Hale, J. Newton, W. Stephens, W. Hilton, Jabez Hogg, C. G. Dilly, W. F. Nettleship, Thomas Cubitt, Raynham W. Stewart, and James Terry, Secretary, who read a letter from Bro. Le Gendre N. Starkie, Provincial Grand Master for East Lancashire, agreeing to preside at the next Festival of this Institution. Bro. Terry stated that he had twenty-six Stewards from the Province of East Lancashire, and that the brethren were taking such steps therein that he fully anticipated the list of that Province would be the largest at the meeting. Bro. Terry also informed the Committee that the lady who at last meeting resigned her annuity, because she had had some property left her on the decease of a relative, had subscribed £10 to the Institution. As ten guineas were required to give her the requisite number of votes the Committee subscribed the additional ten shillings that she might have the votes. A letter was read from Miss Norris, the Matron of the Asylum at Croydon, expressing her thanks to the Committee for making an addition to her salary. One petitioner only applied to be placed on the List of Candidates for next Election, and his petition was accepted, after which the Committee adjourned.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—None except the uncommonly hardy can brave bleak cape continents, unsettled, and unusually wet weather without some bodily discomfort or actual disease. Holloway's remedies have won a name and a fame previously unknown in medical science for their ability of successfully contending with colds, coughs, quinsy, rheumatism, and neuralgia. This formidable list of dangerous and painful affections is completely under the control of these instinctive specifics, which, used according to their accompanying directions, will soon mitigate the tortures, suppress all inflammatory tendencies, and secure the soundest health. The very moderate price charged for these never-failing remedies places them within the reach of the most humble sufferer, whose ill-health, by producing poverty, exaggerates his personal pangs.

THE ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.

Advancement of their Royal Highnesses the Duke of Connaught, K.G., and Prince Leopold, K.G., to the 33rd degree, in the presence of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, K.G., 33rd degree, Grand Patron.

A SPECIAL Meeting of the Supreme Council 33° of England, Wales, and the Dependences of the British Crown, was held at Head Quarters of the Order, 33 Golden-square, London, on Wednesday, 6th November, for the purpose of advancing to the 33rd and last degree of Freemasonry their Royal Highnesses the Duke of Connaught and Prince Leopold, when the following members of the Supreme Council were present:—

Letters of regret at their unavoidable absence were received from the Earl of Carnarvon 33rd degree Past Sov. G. At 4 o'clock H.R.H. the Prince of Wales 33rd degree, Grand Patron of the Order, arrived from Marlborough House, accompanied by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught and H.R.H. Prince Leopold, and were received by Lord Skelmersdale and the other members of the Supreme Council 33rd degree, and conducted to the Council Chamber, where the 31st and 32nd degrees were conferred; after which the Supreme Council adjourned to the Hall, where their Royal Highnesses were introduced by Col. Shadwell Clerke 33rd degree, and Genl. Studholme Brownrigg 33rd degree, and were advanced to the 33rd and last degree in due and solemn form, the ceremony being most impressively performed by the Sov. Grand Commander Lord Skelmersdale, H.R.H. the Grand Patron investing his Royal Brothers personally.

Their Royal Highnesses were then duly proclaimed by their style and titles as "Sovereign Grand Inspectors General of the thirty-third and last degree of Masonry, and honorary members ad vitam of the Supreme Council of England and Wales and the Dependencies of the British Crown," and were saluted accordingly. After some congratulatory remarks from the Sovereign Grand Commander Lord Skelmersdale, which were suitably acknowledged by their Royal Highnesses, the Supreme Council was closed.

It is worthy of remark that this is the only occasion on which our three Royal and Illustrious Brothers have met together in Masonry, H.R.H. Prince Leopold having been absent from ill-health on the occasion of the Instalment of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales in the Albert Hall in April 1875.

H.R.H. Prince Leopold, it may be remembered, has recently served the office of M.W.S. of the Oxford University Chapter Rose Croix, while H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught is at the present moment M.W.S. of the Studholme Chapter Rose Croix, and has presided in person at two of the three meetings held this year.

Grand Secretary-General, H.E.

H.R.H. PRINCE LEOPOLD AND KNIGHT TEMPLARY.

BY special dispensation granted by the Great Prior of England, the Right Hon. Lord Skelmersdale, an emergency meeting of the Cœur de Lion Preceptory of the Province of Oxford was held on Monday afternoon, the 11th inst., at 33 Golden-square, London, for the purpose of installing H.R.H. Prince Leopold, K.G., into the Preceptor's chair of this distinguished Preceptory. At a few minutes after four o'clock His Royal Highness, accompanied by the Eminent Preceptor Sir Knight the Rev Thos Cochrane, Grand Prelate of the Order, was received by the Sir Knights assembled under an Arch of Steel. The eminent Preceptor, having Sir Knight Hyde Pullen Past G. Superintendent of Works as Constable, Sir Knight F. Richardson as Marshal, Sir Knight the Rev. John Robbins, D.D., Grand Almoner and Chaplain as Chaplain, and Sir Knight Colonel Somerville Burney Past Grand Commander of Essex as Captain of Guards, then proceeded to open the Preceptory in due form. The special dispensation issued by the Great Prior of England for holding an emergency meeting of the Cœur de Lion Preceptory for the Installation of His Royal Highness in London instead of at Oxford was then handed by the Great Sub-Prior to the E.P., and by him handed to the Grand Chancellor of the Order, by whom it was read in full. It having been announced that the Very High and Eminent the Great Prior of Ireland, His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, K.G., was without, awaiting admittance, a deputation of the Great Officers of the Order was appointed to conduct His Royal Highness into the Preceptory, where he was received with all honours under an Arch of Steel, and took his seat at the immediate right of the Eminent Preceptor, who had the Great Sub-Prior of England Sir Knight Colonel Shadwell Clerke on his left. H.R.H. the Great Prior of Ireland having been saluted in due form, the ceremony of installation was proceeded with. His Royal Highness Prince Leopold, K.G., the E.P. elect was presented to the E.P. by the Very Eminent Prior of Suffolk and Cambridge (Captain N. G. Philips), the senior Provincial Prior present. The ceremony of installation was very ably and impressively rendered by the Eminent Preceptor Sir Knight the Rev. Thos. Cochrane. His Royal Highness, after having been duly proclaimed and saluted, briefly expressed his acknowledgments to the members of the Cœur de Lion Preceptory for the honour they had done him in placing him in that high and responsible position, which he would endeavour to fill as ably as it had been by his predecessor. His Royal Highness then appointed his Officers as follow:—

Sir Knight the Rev. T. Cochrane, Pro P.
" Colonel the Hon. W. E. Sackville West, Constable.
" Reginald Bird (D.P.G.M. Oxford), Marshal.
" Walter Thompson, P.P., Treasurer.
" the Rev. G. M. Brock Arnold, Chaplain.
" J. E. C. Bodley, Registrar.
" Fentham Hedges, Sub-Martial.
" J. Sanders, Chamberlain.
" John Potts, Director of Ceremonies.
" Joseph Reade, Captain of Guards.
" E. S. Lucas, Almoner.
" R. Usher, Standard Bearer.
" W. W. Harrison, P.C., Organist.
" James Cavan, Aide de Camp.
" Tomlin, 1st Herald.
" Horatio Symonds, 2nd Herald.
Comp. W. Stephens, } Equerries.
" G. Norwood, }

His Royal Highness then received congratulations from H.R.H. the Great Prior of Ireland, and from the very Eminent Provincial Priors present, and it was somewhat remarkable that "hearty good wishes" came from such remote Provinces as "South Africa," "British Burmah," "Bengal," as well as from the home Provinces of "Suffolk and Cambridge," "Essex," "Dorset," "Kent," "Sussex," &c. &c. Amongst the distinguished Sir Knights present we noticed the following Very Eminent Priors:—Captain N. G. Philips, Suffolk and Cambridge; Colonel Shadwell Clerke, Sussex; J. M. P. Montague, Dorsetshire; C. W. Hoskins Goldy, South Africa; the following Very Eminent Past Provincial Priors:—Colonel Somerville Burney Essex; General H. Clark, Kent; H. D. Sandeman, Bengal; Colonel Duncan, British Burmah; and the following present and past National and Great Officers of the Order:—Sir Knights A. Stavely Hill, Q.C., M.P., Grand Chancellor; C. Godden, K.C.T., Grand Treas.; Raymond Thrupp, Grand Reg.; the Rev. John Robbins, D.D., Grand Almoner and Chaplain; Hyde Pullen, Past G. Supt. of Works; Colonel Francis Burdett, P.P. England and Ireland; the Rev. Canon Harford, P.P.; F. Richardson, P.P.; John Potts, Joseph Reade, Lott (Organist), &c., &c. All business being ended, the Preceptory was closed in ample form by the Illustrious and Eminent Preceptor, and their Royal Highnesses the Duke of Connaught and Prince Leopold, accompanied by the Great Officers of the Order, then retired under the Arch of Steel. Great praise is due to the Great Sub-Prior (Colonel Shadwell Clerke) and the other "authorities" at Golden-square, for the admirable manner in which all the arrangements were carried out, which tended so materially not only to the perfect success of the meeting, but also to the comfort of those who were privileged to be present on this occasion, which will long be remembered by them in general, and the members of the Cœur de Lion Preceptory in particular, as a red-letter day in the annals of Knight Templary.

INSTALLATION MEETINGS, &c.

Grey Friars Lodge, No. 1101. — The members of this Lodge met on Wednesday last, at the Masonic Hall, Reading, for the annual installation of W.M. and appointment of Officers. The Lodge was opened by Bro. Arthur Welch Prov. G. Reg. Berks and Bucks, supported by his Wardens, Bros. W. G. Flanagan and J. Early Danks. The other Officers present were Bros. C. R. Honey Chaplain, J. T. Stransom Treas., W. Ferguson S.D., E. J. Blackwell J.D., T. Newman D.C., H. R. Dowsett I.G., and J. H. Hawkes Steward. The minutes having been confirmed, Bro. W. G. Flanagan was duly presented for installation, and the ceremony was carried out in his favour by Bro. P.M. Moxhay. The new W.M. then appointed the following brethren as Officers for the ensuing year:—Bros. J. E. Danks S.W., W. Ferguson J.W., J. T. Stransom Treas., E. J. Blackwell S.D., R. Dowsett J.D., C. R. Honey I.G., T. Newman D.C., J. H. Hawkes Steward. The Installing Master gave the usual addresses, and thus completed the ceremony of installation. Previous to closing the Lodge, the W.M. had great pleasure in presenting, in the name of the members, a jewel to the retiring P.M., as a proof of the esteem of the brethren, and as a token of the satisfaction they had experienced during the time that he had ruled over them. Bro. Welch returned his sincere thanks for the handsome present made him. It would not only remind him of the term of his Mastership, but would call to his mind the uniform kindness he had ever received from the members of the Lodge. He regretted that his year of office had not been more eventful. He considered the principal aim of a W.M. should be to bring the work of a Lodge up to a standard that would be a credit to the brethren; he thought he could look back on the working of the Grey Friars Lodge, and say it was at least up to the average. Another important matter which should engross the attention of a Master was Charity. He considered it very difficult to make a rule as to what proportion of the receipts of a Lodge should be devoted to charity, still it could but be admitted that many Lodges fall woefully short in this part of their duty. He had seen certain balance-sheets referred to in one of the Masonic newspapers, which he could but characterise as most objectionable. In the case of his own Lodge, he was gratified in being able to state that during the past year 40 per cent. of their receipts had been spent in charity. He hoped the Grey Friars' Lodge would long be in a position to continue such support to the Institutions of the Order. Both these elements—good-working and charity—were most essential to a Lodge, but he considered they would be of very little use without good feeling. Throughout his year of office he had not heard one brother ever express himself in any thing but a Masonic manner, and it was to the perfect unanimity of the brethren that he attributed their success. He should ever look back with gratitude for the great kindness he had received. The names of three brethren having been handed in as candidates for joining. The W.M. proposed that a vote of thanks be given to Bro. Moxhay for the services he had rendered to the Lodge in installing the new Master. Bro. Moxhay briefly thanked the members. It gave him great pleasure to be present. It brought the memory of past kindnesses vividly before him, and shewed the kind sentiments with which the brethren were actuated towards him. He was only too happy to be able to be among them, and assist in the working at any time his help would be of service. Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to the Upper Ship Hotel to banquet. Among those who sat down were the following visitors:—Bros. E. Bradley Prov. G. Sec., W. Knight 141, J. Wilson P.M. 209, J. M. Dormor I.G. 340, A. M. Yette P.M., E. Baker W.M., S. Bradley J.W., T. J. Ferguson Prov. G.S. I.G., S. Wheeler jun. D.C., and C. G. Butler of 414; G. M. Knight W.M., Stephen Knight J.W., W. Cordrey and S. Tegg of 574, E. L. Shepherd W.M. 945 Prov. G.S.B., R. C. Mount W.M. 1,328, W. W. Morgan jun. 1,385, F. Williams 1399, &c. At the conclusion of the banquet, the health of the Queen having been given and heartily responded to, the W.M. gave that of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. By his kind and genial manner he has won the esteem and regard of all with whom he has come into contact. We, as Masons, should especially honour him from the fact of his considering the post of Grand Master of our Order as worthy of his occupancy. Bro. Knight W.M. 574 had great pleasure in assuming the gavel for the purpose of proposing the Prov. G. Master and the Grand Officers of the Province past and present. It was quite unnecessary for him to make any comments in introducing this toast. The energy, zeal and enthusiasm of the Prov. G.M. was so well known that he felt additional praise from him was but superfluous. He was gratified in being able to call upon Bro. Bradley the Prov. G. Sec. to respond to the toast. That brother tendered his sincere thanks on behalf of Sir Daniel Gooch and the past and present Officers of Prov. G. Lodge. He felt that nothing but very important business would have kept their Prov. G. Master away from them that night. Since he (Bro. Bradley) had the pleasure of addressing them last year, considerable progress had been made by the Lodges of their Province. During the past few days a new Lodge had been added to the list, and he was convinced that by this addition the Province would not lose any of its good character. He referred to the movement which, twelve months since, was on foot with the object of dividing the Province, and stated that the G.M. of England had now decided that the Provincial should not be divided. He also mentioned the objects and working of the Provincial Charity Fund, pointing out that the aim of the Grand Lodge officials was to supplement the grants of private Lodges with amounts from the Provincial fund. Bro. Welch had now the pleasure of proposing the health of the W.M. He had by perseverance attained the high position of ruler of the Lodge, and from the way in which he had carried out the duties thus far required of him, Bro. Welch felt that he was in every way worthy of the distinction accorded him, and hoped that he would receive the support of the members during his year of office. The W. Master in reply assured the brethren that he deeply appreciated the great honour they had conferred on him. It would be his effort to carry out the duties of his position with satisfaction. Bro. Stephens now had the pleasure of offering a most important toast. He considered it a very good augury of the good feeling that existed between the two Lodges of Reading when a P.M. of the Union was called upon to propose the health of the immediate and other Past Masters of the Grey Friars Lodge. Most of those present were well acquainted with their character, and knew the interest they took in the Craft. He called on the brethren to drink to their continued good health. Bro. Welch I.P.M. was the first to reply. Whether the praise that had been bestowed on the P.M.'s was deserved or not was hardly a matter for him now to decide, but in any case he took their remarks as very kind. He would not, in his position of retiring ruler, act the part of ex-Prime Minister, and console himself on his loss of office by making it as hot as possible for his successor, but would do all in his power to assist Brother Flanagan in the ruling of the Lodge. Brother Margrett followed, and next proposed the health of Bro. Moxhay, the Installing Master. It was a most deserved popular toast, and needed no remarks from him to ensure a hearty reception. Bro. Moxhay, in replying, hoped that it would be his privilege to be among the guests of the Grey Friars' Lodge and assist in the work thereof for many years to come, although he could hardly expect that his health would long permit of his taking so active an interest in Freemasonry as he had hitherto done. The W.M. considered his next duty one of the most pleasing it had been his lot to perform. Nothing could be more Masonic and tend to greater enjoyment among the Masons of Reading, than the hearty good feeling existing between the two Lodges in the town. He was especially gratified at seeing so many members of the sister Lodge around the festive board, and had the greatest pleasure in proposing success to the W.M. and brethren of the Union Lodge, No. 414. This toast having been replied to, was followed by those of the Masonic Charities, the Visitors, and the Treasurer and Officers of the Grey Friars' Lodge. The Tyler's toast was then given and the brethren separated. The musical arrangements of the evening were entrusted to Bros. Hickie and Davis, and under their supervision a most enjoyable programme was arranged. Our talented Bro. Seymour Smith exercised his vocal ability to the gratification of all assembled.

Earl of Carnarvon Lodge, No. 1642.—The installation meeting of this Lodge was held on Thursday, at the Ladbroke Hall, Notting-hill. The Lodge was opened by Bro. George Penn the W.M., assisted by Bros. S. H. Parkhouse S.W., W. Stephens Treas., W. Murlis Sec., E. M. Lander J.D., F. Delevante Organist, J. Pushman Steward, S. Smout jun. D. of C., S. Smout I.G., R. Schofield Tyler. The usual formal business having been disposed of, the Lodge was advanced, and Bro. Rutherglen was raised to the degree of M.M. Bros. Bushman and French were next passed, and then Mr. George F. Rule was initiated, the ceremonies in the two former degrees being performed by Bro. P.M. Stephens, and that in the latter by Bro. P.M. Murlis. The W.M. elect, Bro. S. H. Parkhouse, was now formally presented, and duly installed into the chair of the Lodge by Bro. Penn. The ceremony completed, the new W.M. appointed his Officers for the year. The sum of fifty guineas was voted to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, to be placed on the list of the retiring W. Master, who had undertaken the duty of Steward. The report of the Auditors' having been presented, was unanimously adopted, and then the Worshipful Master proceeded to close the Lodge. The brethren adjourned to banquet. At its conclusion, the W.M. gave the usual toasts. Our Grand Master, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, he said, was not only respected by us, as Masons, but also by strangers in every part of the world. He had pleasure in proposing the next toast—that of the Pro Grand Master. The Lodge of which he (Bro. Parkhouse) was Master had especial cause to honour the name of the Earl of Carnarvon. That nobleman honoured their Lodge when he gave permission for it to bear his name. The health of the Deputy Grand Master and the rest of the Grand Officers was the next toast which claimed their attention. It was one received in every Mason's Lodge with the greatest enthusiasm. They had the honour that evening of numbering two Past Grand Officers among their guests, and he should, with pleasure, couple the names of Bros. John Boyd and Thomas Cubitt with the toast. The first named brother in his reply expressed his regret at the absence of the Grand Secretary. As the members were aware, Bro. Hervey had intended to be present, and he felt that only unpreventible circumstances would have kept him away. He hoped that Bro. Hervey would be able to attend some future meeting of the Lodge, as he felt that the members could accord such a welcome, and give so good an account of themselves, as to make a visit most enjoyable to the Grand Secretary. Bro. Boyd congratulated the Lodge on the progress it had made; he questioned whether any other Lodge had attained such a position in so short an existence. The way in which the brethren supported the Charities was a pattern worthy of imitation; he hoped they would continue to prosper, and carry out the true principles of Freemasonry for many years to come. Bro. Cubitt also thanked the brethren on behalf of the Grand Officers. The Past Officers of Grand Lodge had by their zeal earned a reputation throughout the country, and he felt sure that the present rulers would show no falling off. Bro. Penn had now a most pleasing duty to perform; it was one he had looked forward to for the past twelve months. There present W.M. had been known to him for a considerable time, and throughout the whole of their acquaintance he had respected and honoured him. He (Bro. Penn) had the pleasure of being introduced into Freemasonry by Bro. Parkhouse, and he felt that that was one of the greatest of the many kindnesses he had performed for him. Bro. Parkhouse was one of the founders of the Lodge over which he was now appointed to rule, and throughout the whole period of their existence, as well as during the time of formation, had worked to make it a great success. The W.M. thanked the brethren for the kind reception they had accorded him. The founders and subsequent members of the Earl of Carnarvon Lodge had been enabled to work the Lodge up to a most successful point, and he hoped that its prosperity would continue during his term of office. He then proposed the health of the Initiate, he felt sure that their newly made brother would eventually prove a great acquisition to the Craft. Bro. Rule thanked the members for the way in which they had received him into their Lodge. He had seen the benefits of Freemasonry in almost every part of the world, and had long wished to join its ranks, he felt that he could not have done so in a better Lodge than the one he had selected. In giving the health of the Past Masters, the W.M. stated that he considered it was to them very much of the success that had attended the Lodge was due. They could not boast a long array, but what they lost in quantity they gained in quality. He had pleasure in presenting to Bro. Penn a jewel, which had been placed in his hands by the Lodge as a token of the esteem in which Bro. Penn was held by the members. Bro. Murlis here disclosed a most elaborate testimonial, consisting of a clock and two ornaments, which had been privately subscribed for among the members as further testimony of their appreciation of the late W.M.'s services to the Lodge, and also presented an engrossed vote of thanks, which had been prepared to accompany the gift. Bro. Penn heartily thanked the members for their very handsome gifts. He had scarcely left the chair, he said, before a brother had placed in his hands a very handsome set of studs, and now their W.M. had presented a jewel, and the brethren a most elaborate testimonial. He confessed that during his year of office he had endeavoured to do his duty, but he felt that his efforts had not been of such a nature as to warrant so much kindness. Much of the success he had achieved was due to the assistance he had received from his Officers, to whom he wished to tender his hearty thanks. He hoped their gifts of that day would long be prized in his family, and looked up to as a memento of a most enjoyable term of office. Bros. Murlis and Stephens also briefly replied to the toast of the P.M.'s, and then the W.M. proposed success to the Charities. The Earl of Carnarvon Lodge had in the past taken no unimportant part in promoting the welfare of the Charities. Their first effort was on behalf of the Old People, and on that occasion their list was second in amount. On the second, when they advocated the claims of the Girls' School, they had the proud privilege of heading the list. He hoped their future career would not be less gratifying. Bro. Binckes replied, thanking the Lodge for the handsome amount they had voted to head the list of Bro. Penn, and hoping he would be as successful with his Stewardship as his predecessors had been. Bro. Penn followed, and trusted the members would support him to the best of their ability. The first response to this appeal came in the form of an offer of co-Stewardship, with a donation of twenty guineas to start with from Bro. E. C. Woodward P.M., and that was quickly followed by other amounts, which, before the meeting terminated, reached considerably over one hundred guineas. The toast of the Visitors was next given, and was responded to by Bros. Harding and Roberts. Bro. Penn responded as Treasurer, and Bro. Murlis as Secretary, to the kind remarks the Worshipful Master made on their behalf. The Worshipful Master expressed, in proposing the health of the Officers, the great pleasure he experienced in having such energetic brethren to support him as those with whom he was surrounded, and the toast having been drunk, each in turn responded. Among the Visitors were Bros. T. Cubitt P.G.P., F. Binckes P.G.S., Sec. R.M.I.B., T. B. Linscott J.D. 55, J. Carr jun. 55, W. Williams 173, J. N. Frye J.W. 195, W. R. Hatton 358, S. Eborn P.M. 511, J. U Stanton 562, E. Arrowsmith I.G., J. S. Adkins, R. H. Jackson and H. A. Spencer 733, T. Browe P.M. 780, G. C. Harding 1,238, W. W. Morgan jun. 1,385, W. F. Savage P.M. 1,425, J. H. Pearson S.W. 1,567, &c. The brethren were much indebted to Bro. Delevante for the musical portion of the arrangements, which found in him a most efficient chief. The singing of the daughter of that brother being especially appreciated. We cannot conclude our report without referring to the ample accommodation afforded by Bro. Linscott, both for the duties of the Lodge and the pleasures of the banquet; we think officials of many London Lodges could with great advantage inspect his establishment, and should any of our friends have an idea of removing, we would recommend them to visit here before deciding on new quarters.

Doric Lodge of Instruction, No. 933.—Held at the Duke's Head, 72 Whitechapel-road, on Friday, 8th ult. Present—Bros. West W.M., Biddle S.W., Waterer J.W., Moss S.D., Hopkins J.D., McDonald I.G.; also Bros. B. Cundick P.M. Preceptor, W. Maple P.M. Hon. Sec., T. P. Cohen P.M., Wilcox, Job, Richmond, J. Taylor, Austin, Webb, Ellis and G. H. Stephens. Lodge was opened in due form at 8 o'clock, and the minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. Job, as candidate, answered the usual questions, and was entrusted. Lodge was opened up, and the ceremony of passing was worked. Bro. Ellis (who will work the Fifteen Sections at this Lodge on the 22nd inst.) then worked the sections of the second lecture, assisted by the brethren. Lodge was resumed, and Bro. Ellis, with the assistance of the brethren, worked the 4th and 5th sections of the first lecture. Bro. Biddle was elected W.M. for the ensuing week, and Lodge was solemnly closed and adjourned.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

THE Queen is still at Balmoral. Their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales reached Sandringham on Friday, where the thirty-seventh birthday of the Prince was celebrated on Saturday. Several distinguished visitors have during the week visited their Royal Highnesses.

The inquiries instituted with a view of settling who was to blame for the collision which occurred on the Thames between the Princess Alice and the Bywell Castle have been brought to a close. In the case of the Commissioners of the Board of Trade, a unanimous opinion has been arrived at that the calamity was brought about in consequence of the Princess Alice altering her course. The coroner's jury have given their opinion that each vessel was to blame, and suggest that more stringent rules should be enforced for the future navigation of the Thames.

Upwards of £134,000 has been received on account of the fund being raised for the relief of the shareholders of the City of Glasgow Bank.

On Friday, the 8th inst., Alderman Sir Charles Whetham, the new Lord Mayor of London, was sworn in at the Guildhall. Previous to the ceremony the courts of the Innholders, Loriners, and Leathersellers Companies, together with the Aldermen, Sheriffs, and Officers of the Corporation of the City of London, were entertained at luncheon by the then Lord Mayor and his elected successor. On Saturday the usual state procession to Westminster took place, and in the evening the customary banquet at the Guildhall. The Prime Minister was, as might be expected, the principal speaker. In the course of his remarks he pointed out that an invasion of India from Afghanistan was hardly practicable, though he considered it in the power of any foe to so far disturb the district as to compel us to keep a great military force in a state of efficiency there, at a considerable expense. The Government had taken such steps as they had thought advisable to prevent any attack through Asia Minor, from which point he considered an invasion would be more difficult to withstand. He concluded by referring to the Berlin Treaty, and stated that it was the determination of the British Government that the provisions thereof should be carried out both in spirit and to the letter. The Chancellor of the Exchequer replied on behalf of the House of Commons, and stated there was nothing in the financial state of the country to warrant any uneasiness.

Mr. John Mathieson jun., a leading merchant of Glasgow, died suddenly in the streets of that city. Mr. Massingham, a Fellow of Merton College, Oxford, was accidentally burnt to death while in a fit. Mr. Hubert Wood, a London solicitor, committed suicide on Monday. A collision occurred on Saturday, at Ardwick Station, between two trains. One driver was killed and a fireman injured, but no passengers were hurt.

The tower of the church of St. Mary, Week, Cornwall, was struck by lightning on Saturday night, and was entirely destroyed. During a violent storm on Monday, the roof of a plate-mill at the Consett Ironworks fell in, killing one man and injuring five others.

Three colliers were killed in a pit at Aberdare by the overturning of the cage in which they were descending. Two miners quarrelled in a public-house at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and one was fatally stabbed by the other. At the Sandwell Park Colliery one miner was killed, and another (his father) was dangerously injured by a fall of coal.

The Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise, accompanied by the Duke of Connaught and Prince Leopold, arrived in Liverpool on Thursday morning, and received a hearty welcome. At ten o'clock the distinguished party drove to the Town Hall, where addresses were presented to the noble Marquis by the Corporation and the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce. In reply, his Lordship expressed the satisfaction with which he had observed the enthusiastic feeling manifested towards Canada among all classes of the community in England and Scotland, wherever he had of late had an opportunity of hearing any expression of the public mind. After leaving the Town Hall, the party drove to the landing stage, where the Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise embarked on board the Sarmatian, which immediately thereafter set sail for Canada.

It is announced that the Ameer's force at Ali Musjid has been augmented by three guns, and that the troops are practising at ranges in the Kyber Pass. The Calcutta papers state that sixteen thousand Momunds are ready to join the British forces as soon as an advance is decided on. The guides have ascertained that the Ameer's troops are armed with muzzle-loading guns. The prospects of concession on the part of the Ameer are regarded as being more favourable. The German and Austrian papers for the most part approve of Lord Beaconsfield's Guildhall speech as indicating a pacific settlement of pending difficulties. An opinion has gained ground that Russia will adhere to the Berlin Treaty, and will exert herself to obtain an understanding with England with regard to political affairs, both in Europe and Asia. Count Schouvaloff arrived at Pesth on Tuesday, and had a prolonged interview with Count Andrassy. It is not believed at Vienna that the Austrian Government will encourage the proposition for a new Congress to revise the Treaty of Berlin. The Russian Ambassador at Constantinople has declined the Turkish proposal for the mutual appointment of Commissioners to inquire into the alleged outrages in the Rhodope district. The Turkish Government appears more disposed towards a conciliatory arrangement with Greece, but no definite arrangement has been effected. A compromise has been effected between the European Commissioners and the Russian authorities in Eastern Roumelia, whereby the financial administration is to be handed over to the former, while the civil administration remains in Russian hands. The insurrection in Macedonia has not abated, and, although official declarations have repudiated responsibility on the part of the Russian authorities, it is asserted that the insurgents are well supplied with arms, and the Bulgarian newspapers published under Russian censorship strongly invite the inhabitants of Eastern Roumelia to resist the decision of the Berlin Congress. The feeling in the Hungarian Parliament is strongly adverse to the occupation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, but it is not believed that Count Andrassy's position will be imperilled. The Paris Exhibition was finally closed on Sunday. Among the last gatherings which have taken place in connection with it, was one of Colonial gentlemen, who presented to Sir P. Cunliffe Owen an epergne in acknowledgment of the assistance he had rendered. Since the opening on the 1st of May, upwards of sixteen million persons have visited the Exhibition. The German Emperor, in reply to an address at Wiesbaden, expressed a hope that other States would follow the example of Germany in endeavouring to check the advance of Socialism. The Belgian Chambers were opened on Tuesday. The King in his speech referred to the satisfactory condition of the national industry; but intimated that the increased expenditure of the State would render necessary some additional taxation. The Criminal Court at Madrid has sentenced to death Moncasi, who lately attempted to shoot the King. The reply of Lord Salisbury to the United States Foreign Secretary, in relation to the Fisheries disputes, has been received at Washington, and it is believed that a satisfactory agreement will be effected. A small British force in the Transvaal was driven back by a great number of natives, but the English completely routed them in a subsequent attack they made.

We have received the early numbers of the Masonic Newspaper, a new candidate for favour with our American brethren. As it is published in New York, the membership of whose Grand Lodge includes some eighty thousand Craftsmen, it wil address itself to a numerous, as well as a highly influential, constituency, and though it is not in the power of man to command success, there ought to be little difficulty experienced in establishing the venture on a sure basis. At all events, the Masonic Newspaper is doing what in it lies to achieve success. It is well written and carefully edited, while its budget of news is highly interesting, and we can assure its proprietors and all interested in its welfare that it has our heartiest and most fraternal good wishes for its prosperity. May its career be a long as well as a prosperous one, and may it fulfil its rôle of exciting in the minds of our New York brethren an ever-increasing love for the Craft and its literature!

We have received a specimen of Masonic paper, specially manufactured for the Craft at the Malling Mills, Kent, and formally approved and sanctioned by our late Grand Master the Earl of Zetland. It is of excellent quality and possesses what, in our eyes, is a most important recommendation. That is, there is no showy display of Masonic emblems. Indeed, but for a most unpretentious "Square and Compass" in the left hand top corner, where usually stands the ordinary embossed stamp, there is nothing to show that it is the Masonic Paper it claims to be. But if a sheet is held up to the light, the water mark, in the shape of a five pointed star, a square and compass, the Bible, the double triangle, and "Masonic Paper, Malling Mills" will be seen. This paper is sold by Messrs. S. D. Ewins & Co., Paternoster-row, and we are sure those who purchase it will be delighted with its appearance and quality. It has the further advantage of being inexpensive.

At the next half-yearly Communication of Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons, which will be held at Freemasons' Tavern on the 3rd December, under the presidency of the Grand Master of the degree, Lord Skelmersdale, a scheme will be proposed for the purpose of educating the sons of Mark Masons. Without going into the details of the scheme, which of course will require deliberation, we may mention that its broad basis is that half of the annual subscriptions to the Fund of Benevolence shall be applicable towards aiding Mark Masters in educating their sons in their own neighbourhoods. The scheme is not meant for indigent or necessitous Mark Masons only, or primarily, but is designed as well for those Mark brethren who, though able to educate their families, are not sufficiently well to do to secure for them the superior education that is offered by many of the old grammar and foundation schools in their particular provinces.—Standard.

CONSECRATION OF THE KIRKDALE LODGE, No 1756.

THE handsome, complete, and commodious Masonic Hall, at Liverpool, named after Lord Skelmersdale, was the scene of a great event on Friday, the 8th instant. It had been announced, and fully believed until the day mentioned, that the Prov. Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale, would be present to carry out the leading part; but, alas! the promise made could not be kept, in consequence of the indisposition of his lordship, and disappointment was most keenly felt. However, the genial brethren of Liverpool are not disposed to allow any disappointment to interfere with the success of any enterprise they take in hand, and especially when that event is a Masonic celebration. Consequently, long before the hour appointed, four p.m., there were gathered at the Hall over one hundred Masons We noticed among those present Bros. E. Johnston W.M. designate, H. S. Alpass Prov. Alpass took the seat in the East and opened Prov. G. Lodge. He was assisted by Bro. Callow P.G. Treasurer as J.W., and Bro. Robertson P.G.J.W. as S.W., with Bro. G. Broadbridge P.P.G.D.C. as Secretary, and aided by Rev. Bro. Jenkins, Provincial Grand Chaplain. Bro. Alpass explained the cause of absence of the Provincial Grand Master, and at once proceeded to consecrate the new Lodge. The consecration and dedication were very ably done by Bro. Alpass, and the Prov. G. Chaplain did his work admirably. Bro. Alpass addressed the petitioners, giving them good advice, while the Prov. G. Chaplain delivered a very impressive and eloquent oration. Indeed the Province of West Lancashire must be congratulated on having brethren so able. On the completion of the ceremony Bro. Alpass relinquished his seat to Bro. Robertson, who acted as installing Master, Bro. Lunt filling the post of S.W. It is to be regretted that Bro. Lunt should take this post on such an important occasion; his memory did not prove equal to the task involved. The Lodge being lowered, Bro. Alpass introduced Bro. Johnston for the benefit of installation. The customary formalities were observed, and Bro. Johnston was duly obligated, invested, and installed Worshipful Master for the ensuing twelve months in a very able manner. The new W.M., Bro. Johnston, at once proceeded to invest his Officers, as follow:—T. W. Serjeant P.G.J.D. I.P.M., Wm. Gick S.W., H. Furguson J.W., J. Grierson Sec., R. E. Mitten Treas., C. Bargery S.D., T. Hay J.D., W. West S.S., H. Marshall and G. Marsden A.S., H. Alexander I.G. Bro. Robertson gave the customary charges, and the Lodge, by command of the Worshipful Master, was called off from labour to banquet in the hall below. The catering was undertaken by Bro. Casey, and everything went off with satisfaction. The menu card deserves notice, as it contained photographs of all the officers in miniature, while the bill of fare was of the most récherché character. On the removal of the cloth, the W.M. gave "The Queen," which was drunk most heartily, the brethren singing the National Anthem. Toast No. 2 followed; namely, that of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, Princess of Wales, and the rest of the Royal Family. It was cordially drunk, the brethren singing "God Bless the Prince of Wales." Bro. Senior Warden was entrusted with toast No. 3, which was that of the health of the Pro Grand Master the Earl of Carnarvon. Bro. Jones here favoured the brethren with a capital song. The W.M., on rising to propose the next toast, said that it brought them nearer home. After alluding to Lord Skelmersdale's exalted position in the Province, he expressed great regret that his Lordship was not present. With the toast he united the name of the Prov. Grand Chaplain. Rev. Bro. Jenkins, in returning thanks for the distinction of having his name coupled with the last toast, explained that up to the latest hour they had reason to hope that Lord Skelmersdale would be with them, but his Lordship was unavoidably absent. Bro. Bromley gave the health of the Consecrating Officers and the Installing Master, and complimented them most highly on the efficiency displayed. The Provincial Grand Secretary replied; he felt grateful for the compliment. If he knew there were some imperfections that, had he been given sufficient notice, he could have avoided. He was taken by surprise in being called on to perform the ceremony. Bro. Alpass alluded to the deplorable state of the Liverpool Masonic Temple, and drew attention to some efforts of the Dramatic Lodge to raise funds to cover the expense of embellishing it. He intimated that Lord Skelmersdale would support these efforts, and hoped that very soon the Temple would be put in a condition worthy of the Freemasons of Liverpool. In conclusion, Bro. Alpass expressed his best wishes for the happiness of the brethren in the north end of the town, and proposed prosperity to the Kirkdale Lodge, No. 1756. The toast was drunk with enthusiasm. After a song from Bro. Gilfillen, Bro. Mitten

Treasurer responded. So far the Lodge was a success, as everything was paid for, and there was a good balance in hand; and, judging from the number of applications for affiliation and initiation, it would be highly prosperous. He thanked them for receiving the toast so heartily. Bro. Alpass now rose to propose the toast of the evening. He remarked it was customary on such important occasions as the present to propose the health of the W.M., and that duty devolved upon him. He felt a pleasure to do this, as he knew that the Lodge under the Mastership of Bro. Johnston would be under the guidance of a competent Mason, who would look after its best interests, and do all he could for the Craft generally. The speaker briefly reviewed the connection he held many years ago with the Ancient Union, No. 203, and over which Bro. Johnston presided as W.M.; it was a well worked Lodge. He looked forward to a happy and prosperous career for this Lodge under the administration of that Worshipful Brother, and called upon the brethren to drink heartily to the toast. Bro. H. Gill favoured the brethren with an instrumental selection - "The Fairy Bells," which was highly appreciated, and was followed by Bro. Jones singing a song. The Worshipful Master on rising to respond to the toast, acknowledged most gratefully the honour conferred upon him by Bro. Alpass in proposing his health in such a complimentary manner, and also to the brethren, who had accepted the toast with such tokens of appreciation. He deeply regretted the absence of the Prov. G. Master, and also felt the absence of Bro. Archer, who is the founder of this building, and to whose untiring exertions they owed the great privilege of assembling here to-day. Nothing but severe illness could have prevented this respected brother from being present. He would take the opportunity of testifying to the many acts of kindness done by him, for which personally he was much indebted. He appreciated the honour of being elected first W.M. of No. 1756, and would do all in his power to advance the best interests of the Lodge. He was assured in this he should have the active co-operation of all the brethren, who he trusted would exercise every care in their selection of candidates for admission. In conclusion, he would echo the sentiments so generally expressed that day—that this Lodge might ever prosper, as it had begun, and that when its first Officers and members have passed away, it may flourish and be a credit to the Craft. Bro. J. Wells proposed the health of the subordinate Officers, a toast which was duly honoured, and Bro. Secretary replied. Bro. Quinn here favoured the brethren with a song. To Bro. Senior Deacon was entrusted the toast of the Charities; he did this duty in a really capital speech, and announced amid the applause of those present that the Kirkdale Lodge was practical in its appreciation of the noblest attribute of our Order; it would give twenty guineas to the Charities on this its birthnight among the Lodges. He had much pleasure in uniting with the toast the name of Bro. G. Broadbridge. The toast was heartily drunk, and the W.M. rose:—He had the greatest possible pleasure in supplementing the sum just mentioned with five guineas; this announcement was received with cheers. The brethren at this stage of the proceedings were favoured with a capital selection of music by Bros. Jones, Bryan, and Quinn, who were accompanied on the piano by Bro. Skeaf. The musical programme was under the able management of Bro. Skeaf Prov. G.O. Bro. Broadbridge now responded to the last toast; he said that the noble London Charities did more for the provinces than most brethren were aware of. He also referred to the Provincial Charities, and concluded some able remarks by saying he was pleased to know this Lodge had made such a good beginning, and hoped it would continue the same good work. Bro. Director of Ceremonies proposed the health of the Visitors, as Bro. Serjeant, to whom the duty was allotted, suffered from a very severe cold. All present, except the Officers of the Lodge being guests, it was not expected that all could respond to the toast; but the hospitable brethren of 1756 drank heartily to the toast, and after a song, from Bro. Hatton, Bros. Mellor and Jones replied. Bro. Donnelly sang the next song, and was followed by Bro. Jno. Warden proposing the health of the Musical Brethren, which was cordially drunk. Bro. Jones again favoured, the brethren, and replied most agreeably. Other toasts followed, and were most fraternally received; amongst them was the Masonic Press, by the W.M., to which Bro. Davies (FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE) replied. After final and requisite proceeding, the brethren separated, highly delighted with the success of the day.

MADAME WORRELL-DUVAL'S ANNUAL CONCERT.

AS announced last week in our columns, this Annual Evening Concert was held, on Monday evening, at the South Place Institute, Finsbury, E.C., and Madame Worrell-Duval may, on the whole, be congratulated on its success. There was a very good attendance, and the audience was what may properly be designated an appreciative one. There was some excellent music, both vocal and instrumental, and the evening passed off satisfactorily. There are, however, one or two matters which call for some remarks. They will be made in no unfriendly spirit, but rather with a view to the avoidance in future years of what, in our humble judgment, were drawbacks, of a more or less formidable character, to the complete success of the evening. In the first place, the programme was far too lengthy a one. Even the most insatiable lover of music must have found a concert, comprising no less than twenty-four items, including two long piano solos and two violin solos, a surfeit, if not an embarras, of musical wealth. Then the opening duet for pianoforte, though a work of our distinguished countryman, the late Sir Sterndale Bennett, was not a sufficiently stirring preparative for the excellent morceaux that were to follow, while Benedict's song, "Rock me to sleep," admirably sung, as it undoubtedly was, by Miss Emma Buer, had an ominous title. This effect was no doubt counteracted by Gounod's lively "Ou Voulez-vous Aller?" spiritedly sung by Miss Bessie Stroud; but in spite of this and many other redeeming features, the concert did not go so capitally, or excite so much enthusiasm as it must have done had the programme been shorter and more judiciously selected. Again, we regard it as a conspicuous error to introduce Italian songs, however admirable, into a programme intended for an English audience. The very best of Italian music can be heard nightly at Her Majesty's, but the bulk of the English public, though well content to hear foreign operas in the houses provided for such performances, take but little interest in Italian songs when introduced at an ordinary concert. True, in the very cream of society, Italian, German, and French music is as much appreciated as are the productions of our own composers; but then the audiences are capable of judgment. They are familiar, more or less, with these languages, and understand the words as well as the music. But there is no detraction if we say that a South Place Institute audience, fashionable and intelligent though it may be, is not the best and worthiest—that is, as regards musical taste and judgment and linguistic knowledge—that could be found. Having, however, noted these blemishes, which affected the composition of the programme rather than the entertainment itself, we pass to the more agreeable duty of commenting on the performances of the several artists. All who took part in the concert may be said to have acquitted themselves well, while several of them excited among the audience a feeling not so very far removed from enthusiasm. Madame Worrell-Duval's contributions to the concert were four in number; an Italian song, by Bevignani, Blumenthal's "Love the Pilgrim," Franz Liszt's "Loreley," and a duet with Miss Emma Buer, the well-known "Quis est Homo?" of Rossini, and in all these the lady showed that she was a most accomplished artist. Miss Emma Buer sang "Rock me to sleep," and Sullivan's "Thou art passing hence," with taste and judgment. Miss Matilda Roby was very effective in "Love at the gate" and "Lovely spring." In the former song she fully merited the encore she ought to, and doubtless would, have received but for the rigidly, and in this case, we think, unwisely enforced restriction forbidding all repeats, a restriction which, by the way, was departed from in the second part of the concert. Miss Bessie Stroud sang spiritedly "Ou Voulez-vous Aller?" and "My love he is a sailor," while Mdlle. Arnim acquitted herself well in "Thou art Weary" and "Hundred Pipers," sung by desire. For the latter song, Mdlle. Arnim was vociferously applauded, and by the removal of the aforesaid objectionable restriction was enabled to comply with the wishes of the audience. As to Mr. Chaplin Henry, who contributed "I fear no foe" and "The Wolf," he was in admirable voice, and sang them both splendidly. Mr. Abercrombie rendered "The three Gifts" and "Tom Bowling" in a manner which delighted the audience, who were especially taken with his delivery of the former. Mr. Bamber is a violinist of no mean repute, and was applauded as well for his faultless execution as for the delicacy of his playing, and both Mr. Osborne Williams and Mr. Turle Lee, with Herr Trousselle, were very effective in the pieces allotted them for the piano. In short, the artists, one and all, gave satisfaction, and, as we have said already, had the programme been less crowded the pleasure of the audience would have been without alloy.

Lodge of Antiquity No. 146, Bolton.—The regular meeting of this Lodge was held on Wednesday, 13th November, at the Bulls Head Inn, Bradshawgate, Bolton. Present: Bros. John Duxbury W.M., R. Horridge S.W., Jas. Dooley J.W., M. Burgess Sec., W. Cooper S.D., R. Duxbury I.G., P.M.'s Jno. Morris and Jno. Wild, also Bros. F. Williams, Constantine, Heywood, A. Morris, Broughton, Kennedy, Galloway, Rimmer, &c. Visitor—Bro. James Newton P.M. 37, Bolton. The Lodge was opened at 6.30 p.m. and the minutes of the preceding meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. E. Hird was passed to the degree of F.C. by the W.M., who also delivered the lecture on the second tracing board. The W.M. informed the brethren that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales M.W.G.M. had been pleased to grant a warrant authorising the members of the Lodge to wear a centenary jewel. The warrant was then read, as also the instructions from Grand Lodge as to the wearing of the jewel. The W.M. intimated that Bro. Jas. Newton P.M. 37 had kindly consented to deliver a lecture on the history of the Lodge which he had compiled from the Lodge records. At the call of the W.M., Bro. Newton then proceeded to deliver the lecture, tracing the existence of the Lodge from its foundation on 24th June 1776 to the present time, and quoting from the records numerous interesting extracts respecting the Lodge and the Craft in general. The lecture, which occupied upwards of an hour in its delivery, was listened to with marked attention by the brethren, and at its close a cordial vote of thanks was tendered to Bro. Newton, not only for his kindness in compiling and delivering the lecture, but also for the valuable services rendered by him in making the necessary researches into the records and preparing the memorial for the centenary warrant. A candidate was proposed for initiation, and the Lodge was closed at 9.30 p.m.

Northern Counties Lodge, No. 406.—The regular meeting of this Lodge took place on 6th November, at the Masonic Hall, Maple-street, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Bro. R. L. Armstrong in the chair, supported by the following Officers:—Bros. John Page S.W., R. G. Salmon J.W., G. W. Lax Secretary, S. M. Harris S.D., G. Bamford J.D., Macdonald as I.G., W. Monday P.M. D.C., W. S. Hughes P.M., J. Rundale P.M. P.G.J.W. The Lodge being opened and the minutes confirmed, the W.M. called on the brethren to salute the P.G.S.W., which was done according to custom. The ballot was then taken for a candidate, which proving successful, he was initiated into our Order in a most efficient manner by the W.M. After routine business had been disposed of, Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment, the usual toasts following. The Visitors were—G. Thompson P.M. 451, J. Wood S.W. 48, Church Manchester, and W. Auther, Mother Kilwinning Lodge, Scotland.

St. Michael's Lodge, No. 211.—A meeting was held on Tuesday, at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street, E.C. Present—Bros. Alfred Green W.M., Alfred Withers S.W., William Radcliffe J.W., W. W. Morgan Sec., Dr. Waters S.D., Usher Back J.D., W. E Young I.G., T. C. Speight P.M. Tyler; P.M.'s Bros. J. Lavers, T. H. Lavers, Parsons, Drysdale; Visitors—Bros. R. Best 3, George King P.M. 172, W. W. Brown W.M. 214, Prov. G. Organist Essex, Charles Best 907, Robert Chamberlain W.M. 1122; and a fair attendance of members of the Lodge. The Lodge was formally opened, and the minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed. The ballot was then taken for Mr. Alexander Henry Hitch as a candidate for initiation, and the result was unanimous. Bro. Henry Martin was examined as to his proficiency, and entrusted. Lodge was then advanced, and the ceremony of passing was ably performed by the W.M. Lodge was closed down, the candidate for our mysteries was introduced, and Bro. Green initiated him, performing this, as he had the previous ceremony, in an eminently satisfactory way. The Officers also were most painstaking in order to make the proceedings as impressive as possible. After routine business the Lodge was closed, and the brethren partook of a capital banquet, which was served under the personal superintendence of Bro. Jennings. On the removal of the cloth, the W.M. gave the Loyal toasts, which received full honour. In proposing the health of the Pro G.M., the D.G.M. and the rest of the Grand Officers, the W.M. remarked that the P.G.M. had rendered very great service to the Craft; whatever he did had a tendency to advance the interests of the Order. Bro. P.M. T. H. Lavers proposed the health of the W.M. He would call on the brethren to drink the toast most heartily. Bro. Green had now filled the chair of the St. Michael's Lodge for nearly two years, and it might truthfully be said that he had almost resuscitated the Lodge. He (Bro. Lavers) trusted that Bro. Green would remain with them many, many years, and continue his career of usefulness. The W.M., in acknowledging the compliment paid him, remarked that if he had accomplished anything at all, it had been done from a love of duty and from a sincere regard for the Craft. He had been stimulated by the kind assistance he had received from his Officers and the Past Masters of the Lodge, and he hoped a bright future was before them. He sincerely thanked them one and all for their kindness. The toast of the P.M.'s was the next given by the W.M. Bro. T. H. Lavers said: If one thing more than another was gratifying to a parent, it was to know that his children were doing well. His year of Mastership had been a very fruitful one, and he was proud to know his offspring in the Craft were all prospering. He was especially gratified in having been the means of introducing so worthy a Mason as the present W.M., whom he had initiated. Brother Drysdale thanked the members for the honour he had received at their hands; he assured them he fully appreciated the kindness they had specially exhibited at the last meeting. Bro. John Lavers and Bro. Parsons also acknowledged the compliment that had been paid them. The health of the Initiate was the next toast the W.M. introduced. Bro. Hitch was a personal friend; from what he had seen that night, he (the W.M.) was assured Bro. Hitch would come to the next meeting with a firm resolve to make himself more thoroughly conversant with our mysteries. After the E. A. Song, which was given with his accustomed vigour by Bro. P.M. Speight, the initiate briefly replied. The W.M. assured the Visitors it was the wish of the members that they should be accorded a hearty welcome; if the business of the Lodge had appeared somewhat of a heavy character, he trusted it had been lightened by the pleasure they had endeavoured to throw into the proceedings at the festive board. He would ask the members heartily to drink to the health of the Visitors. Bro. G. King P.M. replied. He was pleased at the admirable way in which the proceedings of the evening had been conducted. Amongst the Officers he recognised one or two of his boys, and he was gratified to see the skill with which they performed their duties. Bros. Brown and Chamberlain also bore testimony to the pleasant evening they had spent; Bro. Chamberlain remarking that he belonged to a far distant Lodge, but the members were ever ready to extend the right hand of fellowship to their brethren of the Craft. The several Officers then next came in for their meed of praise, and after due acknowledgments had been offered, the Tyler was summoned. During the evening the brethren vied one with the other to promote harmony, and valuable assistance was afforded by the brilliant accompaniment of Bro. Brown.

Brixton Lodge of Mark Masters, No. 234.—Saturday, the 9th instant, the great day of the year in the City, was an important one in South London with the Masonic fraternity. Hitherto there has been no Lodge of Mark Masters in the neighbourhood of Brixton or Camberwell; but, in response to a petition addressed to the Grand Mark Master, Lord Skelmersdale, a warrant was granted for the Brixton Mark Lodge, No. 234, to meet at the Surrey Masonic Hall. Bros. T. Poore, C. P. McKay and H. Lovegrove were named as principal Officers. The ceremony of consecration took place on Saturday, and was performed by the Grand Mark Secretary, V.W. Bro. F. Binckes, in the presence of R.W. Bro. Col. Francis Burdett, Provincial Grand Mark Master Middlesex and Surrey, and a number of distinguished Mark Masons—Bros. Hale, S.W. and W.M. elect of the Wentworth Lodge, No. 737. The Lodge being closed down, a P.M.'s jewel was presented to the I.P.M. Bro. W. Hitchman, by the W.M., as a mark of respect from the Lodge for the efficient way in which he had performed his duties during his year of office. Bro. Hitchman returned thanks in a very appropriate manner.

Skinner answered the questions leading to 2nd degree, but was not entrusted. Lodge was advanced, and Bro. Kyezor having kindly consented to act as candidate, the W.M. rehearsed the ceremony of raising. Lodge was then closed down, Bro. Skinner re-admitted, and the W.M. delivered the addresses which form part of the Installation ceremony. Bro. Tucker announced that the brethren of another Lodge of Instruction to which several members of this Lodge belong had instituted a Benevolent Fund, and invited the co-operation of all present in forwarding the matter. This may, we hope, lead to the establishment of a similar Fund in this Lodge of Instruction. The S.W. was elected W.M. for next meeting, and Lodge was duly closed and adjourned till 15th November, at 7.30. The Secretary has to request that the brethren will reply to the circular invitation to the Annual Banquet, as he desires to make the meeting a success, in connection with the presentation of a testimonial to Bro. Roe.

Lemarque was presented to him to receive at his hands the benefit of installation. After the obligation Lodge was advanced, and a Board of Installed Masters formed. Bro. Stean performed the ceremony, and, considering his advanced age, the work was done in a very impressive manner. On the readmission of the brethren below the degree of Installed Masters, the ceremony was completed, the addresses being given in a manner which elicited the approval of all. The following brethren were then invested as Officers of the Lodge for the ensuing year:—Bros. Abbott S.W., J. F. Van Raalte J.W., F. Jones Treas., L. Stean Sec., W. Rowley S.D., S. J. Corke J.D., W. Pitt I.G., after which Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet, which was served by the manager of the hotel in his usual satisfactory style, and to which the brethren did ample justice. Grace having been said, the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to; the I.P.M. proposed the W.M.'s health, wishing him a happy and prosperous year of office. The W.M. in returning thanks assured the members he would exert himself to the utmost to promote the welfare of the Lodge. He then proposed the health of the I.P.M., and presented him with a P.M.'s jewel; he hoped the worthy brother would live many years to wear it. Bro. I.P.M. thanked the W.M., brethren, and his Officers, for the able assistance he had received from them during his year of office; also for the handsome jewel they had presented to him; he would always strive to uphold the dignity of the Lodge. The health of the Visitors was next given, in a very happy speech. The W.M. trusted they would depart with pleasurable recollections of the evening

The M.E.Z. alluded to it being the birthday of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. The health of the new exaltee was proposed by the M.E.Z., and Comp. Bro. Roose presenting the Master elect. All below the rank of M.M. having been asked to retire, the Lodge was opened in the third degree, after which brethren who were not Installed Masters were asked to withdraw, when the Board of Installed Masters was opened. Treweek having been formally inducted into the chair, the brethren were called in, and at the request of the Installing Master saluted the new W.M. in due form. Before the Lodge was finally closed Bro. J. Smith read a note from Bro. Mercier 606, offering to present to the Lodge the painting of any distinguished brother whom the brethren might select. This kind offer was gladly accepted, and the unanimous and sincere thanks of the Lodge were accorded to Bro. Mercier, and ordered to be placed on the minutes. It was resolved to form a committee to select the fortunate brother who is to be thus honoured. After hearty congratulation from the representatives of various Lodges who were present, the Lodge was closed in due form. Lloyd I.P.M. the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were given from the chair, and duly honoured; the W.M. in responding to the toast of his health expressed a hope to be able to keep up the efficiency of the Lodge; and those who know the true Masonic heart of Bro. Treweek have every confidence that they will see his hope realised. The last train leaving at 7.30 p.m. necessitated the departure of many brethren who had come from a distance. Ferguson J., T. A. Adams I.P.Z.; Comps. W. M. Stiles Scribe E., C. W. Hudson N., J. Douglass P S, H. Stiles 1st Asst. S., Barnes Janitor, and Comps. W. Cook, S. Beattie, T. C. Edmonds, T. J. Clare, &c.; Visitor—Comp. J. J. Michael, High Cross Chapter 829. The Chapter was opened in due form, and the minutes of previous convocation read and confirmed. A ballot was taken for Comp. W. Cook, United Strength Chapter 228, for joining, and for Bro. T. J. Hyland, J.D. Royal Savoy Lodge 1744, and Bro. R. Tuck, Metropolitan Lodge 1507, for exaltation, which was unanimous. Bros. Hyland and Cook were introduced, and regularly exalted into Royal Arch Masonry. Three brethren were proposed and seconded for exaltation at next convocation, and the Chapter closed in ancient form and adjourned. Business over, the Comps. sat down to an excellent banquet, served in Bro. Cox's best style. The usual Loyal and complimentary toasts were given, and elicited some graceful replies.

Unity Lodge, No. 1637, West Drayton.—The installation meeting of this Lodge was held on Saturday, the 9th inst., at the De Burg Hotel. The Lodge was opened by Bro. Varley W.M., and a ballot taken for Bro. Geo. Penn W.M. of the Earl of Carnarvon Lodge, which proved unanimous in his favour. Bro. Wm. Stephens P.M. 1365 and 1489, the W.M. elect, was then duly installed into the chair of K.S. by Bro. Geo. Penn, in a most impressive manner, although this was the first time that he (Bro. Penn) had attempted the ceremony. The W.M. received the usual salutes and congratulations of the brethren, and proceeded to invest his Officers for the year as follow:—Bro. Varley I.P.M., Davis P.M. 382 S.W., Wm. Grist J.W., E. C. Woodward P.M. Treasurer, Wm. Coombes P. Prov. G.S.B. Middlesex Sec., Cooper sen. and jun. Deacons, Atkins I.G., Slyman D.C., Penn Steward, Dutton Tyler. Before closing the Lodge the W.M. intimated his intention to represent the Lodge as Steward at the forthcoming Festival for Aged Masons. At the banquet the W.M. presided, and proposed the usual Loyal and Craft toasts. Bro. Murlis P.M. 1489 responded for the Visitors, and Bro Penn for the Masonic Charities. All the Officers seem well up in their work, and we have no doubt a most prosperous year will ensue.

Ancient Carthage Lodge, No. 1717, at Tunis, North Africa.—A meeting was held on 4th November. Present—Bros. A. M. Broadley D.G.S.W. Malta W.M., J. H. Stephens S.W., Dr. A. Perini J.W., M. Lumbroso Secretary, A. Blanch Treasurer, G. Pentecost S.D., P.M. Paleologo J.D., V. C. Clement D.C., Dr. Casanello and A. Bokobsa Stewards, M. Le Gallais I.G., H. Haylock Tyler; Past Master Bro. Siera, of Leghorn. Visitors—Bros. Captain R. Sanderson No. 1244, Captain Dabner No. 949, Darmon, Salema, and nearly forty members. The Lodge duly opened, Si Furhat Ben Reschid, who was elected at the last regular meeting, was duly initiated into the mysteries of Ancient Freemasonry. The candidate is a younger brother of General Muhammed Ben Si Reschid, who was initiated in this Lodge last month, and who is a cousin of the reigning sovereign of, Tunis. The ceremony was performed in the Arabic language with the able assistance of the interpreter, Bro. Souiller, whose services were rewarded with a hearty vote of thanks from the assembled brethren.

Marquess of Ripon Lodge of Instruction.—Held at the Penbury Tavern, Amhurst-road, on Monday, 11th November, at 7.30 o'clock. Present—Bros. McMillan W.M., Cox S.W., L. Coubro J.W., P.M. McPherson S.D., Spurgeon J.D., P.M. Wright I.G., P.M. Lee Preceptor, Slaiter Hon. Secretary; also Bros. McDowall, P.M. Hobbs, P.M. Cusworth, Cracknell, G. Ferrar, W. Ferrar, Baddeley, A. R. Olley, Blunt, C. Lorkin, and other brethren. Lodge was opened in due form, and after the preliminary business, Bro. G. Ferrar answered the questions leading to the degree of Fellow Craft, was entrusted and duly passed. Bro. Preceptor Lee worked the first, second, and third sections of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. Bro. W. Ferrar, of the Liberty of Havering Lodge, No. 1437, was elected a member. Bro. Cox was elected W.M. for the ensuing two weeks. A committee was then appointed to revise the Bye-Laws of the Lodge, to meet after the usual business on Monday next. All Masonic business being ended, the Lodge was closed with prayer, and adjourned to Monday, 18th November, at 7.30 o'clock.

The Great City Lodge, No. 1426.—This well-known and deservedly popular Lodge held its regular monthly meeting at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street, appropriately enough on the day when "The Great City's" new Lord Mayor was formally installed into his office, and presided at the grand banquet given on the occasion in The Great City's Guildhall. The Lodge was opened by Bro. James Freeman W.M., supported by G. W. Blackie S.W., W. H. Catchpole J.W., E. Moody P.M. Secretary, T. Hamer S.D., C. Taylor J.D., W. H. Hook D. of C., R. Hooker and F. C. Keeble Stewards, W. Kibble I.G., W. Steedman P.M. Tyler. Past Master Bro. John Seex. Visitors—Bros. Frank Erier St. John's 3½, T. West 1641, G. H. Palmer 63, J. Smith jun. Industry, G. Smith sen. Industry, C. J. Perceval S.W. Loyalty, Baker 1708, Richards Sir Hugh Myddelton, Webber Royal Albert, A. Wing W.M. 45, W. W. Morgan 211., &c., &c. After the minutes had been read and confirmed, the ballot was brought into request in favour of Mr. Geo. Gwyn Parker; the result was satisfactory, and that gentleman was introduced, and the W.M. performed the ceremony in his behalf greatly to the instruction and approval of the brethren. After the discussion of several matters in reference to promoting the welfare of the Craft, Lodge was closed, and the brethren sat down to banquet. On the removal of the cloth, the W. Master gave the accustomed Loyal and Masonic toasts—"The Queen and the Craft," "His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales M.W. Grand Master," &c., &c. Bro Seex then rose and proposed, in highly eulogistic terms, the health of the W.M., and in doing so he remarked that it was most gratifying to those on whom from time to time had devolved the duty of proposing this health to know that the toast was one that always commended itself to the members. The present occupant of the chair was eminently qualified for his position, and he (Bro. Seex) trusted he would enjoy health and strength, not only to fulfil the duties of his present office, but likewise to remain for many years to come an honoured member of the Lodge. Due honour having been paid to the toast, the W.M. acknowledged in grateful terms the kindly manner in which his health had been proposed and received. He admitted that he was fully sensible of the difficulties under which he laboured. He could invariably say a good word for others, but he found himself at sea entirely when he was called to speak for himself. He was well assured he had the hearty good wishes of the members generally, and he was gratified at the large attendance. The health of the initiate, Bro. Parker, followed, and the W.M. said that, having known Bro. Parker for many years, he was confident his admission into the Lodge would prove serviceable to the Craft, and he both hoped and trusted he would in time become an experienced officer. Bro. Parker thanked the W.M. and brethren for the kindly greeting they had extended towards him on this his first appearance in a Masonic Lodge. He was glad to have already met several with whom he was personally acquainted, and should do all in his power to attain that position in the Craft which he felt must be an object of just ambition to every one in the position he then held. The health of the Visitors followed, the terms in which it was proposed being most cordial, and the manner in which it was responded to by Bros. Wing and Perceval equally so. The toasts of the Treasurer and Secretary, and of the Officers, were then in due order honoured and appropriately acknowledged, and shortly afterwards a most agreeable evening was brought to a close in a very satisfactory manner. The intervals between the toasts were devoted to singing, and this greatly enhanced the pleasure of the meeting.

Strong Man Lodge of Instruction, No. 45.—At the Old Rodney's Head, No. 12 Old-street, on Monday, the 11th inst. Bros. Symons W.M., Halle S.W., W. Rowley J.W., Tolmie Preceptor, Fenner Sec., Wing S.D., Stock J.D., J. Smith I.G.; also Bros. J. Millington, Halford, Pearcy, Hallam sen., A. Rowley, Bigg, Willson, Trewinnard, Hallam jun., Gyer, and others. The ceremony of passing was rehearsed in an able manner, Bro. Bigg candidate. The sections of the second lecture were worked. Bro. Bigg of the mother Lodge was elected a member. Bro. Halle was appointed W.M. for ensuing week. A vote of thanks was cordially awarded the W.M. for the very efficient manner he had filled the chair of K.S. The Fifteen Sections will be worked on the last Monday in the present month, when it is hoped a strong muster of "strong men" will assemble.

Constitutional Lodge of Instruction, No. 55.—A meeting was held on Tuesday, November 12th, at the Bedford Hotel, Southampton-buildings, Holborn. Present:—Bros. Miroy W.M., Tate S.W., Bramham J.W., Dickens Sec., J. H. Dodson S.D., Tranter J.D., Sanders I.G., Bingemann P.M. Prec., T. B. Dodson, Abell, Brown, Gilruth, Corns, Scott, Watts, and others. The Lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of preceding meeting read and confirmed, Bro. Baker, a candidate for the second degree answered the questions, and was passed. The first section of the lecture was worked by Bro. Tate, second by Bro. Brown, third by Bro. Bingemann, fourth by Bro. Watts. Bro. Tate was unanimously elected W.M. for ensuing week. The Installation ceremony will be rehearsed by Bro. T. J. Maidwell, W.M. of the Egyptian Lodge, on Tuesday, 26th November. Lodge will be opened at 7. Brethren are invited to attend.

Hemming Lodge, No. 1512.—An emergency meeting of this Lodge was summoned for last Tuesday, 12th inst., at the Red Lion Hotel, Hampton. In the absence of the W.M. (Bro. C. W. Fox) the chair was taken by Bro. Wm. Hammond P.P.G.D. Middlesex, the senior Past Master and Secretary of the Lodge, supported by Bros. D. B. Raw P.M. formerly Treasurer of the Lodge as I.P.M., J. C. Jessett S.W., T. W. Ockenden J.W., E. Hopwood Treasurer, T. C. Walls S.W. 1381 S.D., Crunden J.D., Hiscox I.G. There were also present—Bros. Past Master Hurst; Day, Toser, T. C. Murphy, &c., &c.; and visitor Bro. McNaught (Scotch Constitution). A ballot being taken and declared unanimous for the admission of Mr. Prime, that gentleman was duly and regularly initiated into the mysteries of the Craft. A passing was also on the agenda, but the candidate was not present. Further business having been transacted, the Lodge was closed and the brethren adjourned to supper, ably supplied by Bro. Murphy, the host. After the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts had been honoured, the W.M. proposed the health of the initiate. Bro. Prime, in responding, expressed his gratification on being enrolled a member of our ancient fraternity. He proceeded to say that during recent continental travels, being overtaken by sickness, he had experienced great kindness at the hands of a comparative stranger, whom in course of time he found, on enquiry, to be a Mason. A friendship sprang up between them, and ultimately he solicited his newly found friend to grant him an introduction to Masonry, and he rejoiced that his object had that day been accomplished. His preconceived notions in favour of Freemasonry had been exalted by the beautiful ceremony he had lately heard and witnessed, and he felt that another existence had dawned upon him, on the threshold of which he was now standing. The response, which was listened to throughout with rapt attention, evoked considerable applause at its conclusion, and we may add occasions are very rare when an initiate delivers his maiden speech with such eloquence, and can command appropriate language to convey the first impressions formed on a man's mind when admitted to the bosom of Masonic light. Bro. McNaught having responded to the visitor's toast, the proceedings terminated. The next meeting will be held on Thursday next, 21st inst.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 193.—This Lodge held its usual meeting on Wednesday, the 13th of November, at the Railway Tavern, Fenchurch-street, E.C. Present—Bros. S. J. Turquand P.M. 1556 W.M., T. J. Barnes P.M. 554 S.W., C. H. Webb W.M. 1607 J.W., J. K. Pitt Sec., E. Gottheil P.M. Preceptor, Walker S.D., Holland I.G.; P.M.'s Bloomfield, Hill, Hogg, Musto, Levy, Posener, Lee. Visitors—Bros. M. Ayres 95, E. T. Worsley 860, W. J. Smith 860, Geo. Johnson 860, J. Roberts 65, Saml. Levy Hiram 70 (New Orleans), F. Ware 1178, Patmore 228. The Fifteen Sections were worked, to the gratification of the brethren generally. Bros. P.M. Levy, Worsley, Smith, Dixon, Spencer, Ware, Roberts, Slaiter, and Patmore S.D. 228 were elected members of this Lodge of Instruction. The usual votes were passed to the W.M. and workers, and able responses were made. The proceedings throughout were conducted admirably, and as a result a most instructive evening was passed. Bro. Biddle was elected W.M. for next Wednesday.

Percy Lodge of Instruction, No. 198.—The regular meeting was held on Saturday, 9th November. Bros. Bedwell W.M., H. Hall S.W., Mallord J.W., J. Lorkin S.D., Fenner J.D., Gilham I.G., Pearcy Preceptor, Halford Treasurer, Killick Sec., and about thirty members. The Lodge having been duly opened, and minutes confirmed, the ceremony of passing was rehearsed; the sections of second lecture were also worked. Bros. J. P. Parkes 1538, and E. M. Adams 1685, were elected members. Bro. H. Hall will preside this (Saturday) evening.

King Henry VIII. Lodge No. 1757.—This new Lodge for the province of Herts was consecrated on Monday evening, at the Town Hall, Hemel Hempstead, by Bro. T. F. Halsey, M.P., Prov. G.M. of Herts. The Lodge is appointed to meet on the Thursdays nearest the full moon in the months of January, April, July, and October. When the Lodge had been consecrated the Rev. W. Oswell Thompson, Vicar of Hemel Hempstead, Prov. G. Chap. was installed as Worshipful Master of the Lodge, by Bro. Halsey. The consecration and installation had the advantage of a beautiful musical accompaniment by a choir of professional brethren. The ceremonies were witnessed by a large number of Freemasons, among whom were many of the Grand Officers of the Province of Herts.

F. RATH & Co.'s IMPROVED PATENT GAS BOX IRON.

PERFECTION IN IRONING FOR EVERY SPECIES OF FABRIC.

Great Saving in Expense and Labour.

The price being only 22/, it is the Cheapest Iron in the trade, and can be had at all Ironmongers in the United Kingdom.

F. RATH & CO.'S IMPROVED GAS BOX IRON is extremely simple in its construction, and cannot get out of order; the merit of the invention is, that the heat produced from the burning gas is thrown on to the steel plate which covers the bottom surface, none being allowed to pass off in vain.

Three times the amount of work ordinarily executed can be done by the use of these Irons, which have now been in use in extensive Manufactories long enough to thoroughly prove their merits and evidence their entire success. They are well suitable for Family Use as for the Work-room, the Manufactory, or the Laundry.

THE

A WEEKLY RECORD OF MASONIC INTELLIGENCE.

SANCTIONED BY THE GRAND LODGE OF ENGLAND.

VOL. VIII.—No. 204. SATURDAY, 23rd NOVEMBER 1878. [PRICE THREEPENCE. Registered at the G.P.O. as a Newspaper.

ROYAL ARCH MASONRY IN PENNSYLVANIA.

WE have received, and fraternally acknowledge the receipt of copy of the Proceedings of the Grand Holy Royal Arch Chapter of Pennsylvania during the year 1877, and we rejoice that this section of Freemasonry is in so exceedingly prosperous a condition. The Quarterly Convocations were held in the Masonic Temple, Philadelphia, on the 1st February, 3rd May, 2nd August, and 1st November respectively, and the Annual Convocation on the 27th December. At each of these meetings Comp. Alfred P. Potter, Grand High Priest presided, and was well supported by his Grand Officers, and the representatives of very many of the subordinate Chapters. At the May Convocation a communication from the Grand Chapter of Quebec, requesting recognition by the Grand Chapter of Pennsylvania, was referred to the Committee on Correspondence. At the Convocation in August, a full and exhaustive report as to the state of Royal Arch Masonry in the jurisdiction was presented, and from this we glean the following interesting particulars. There are, or rather were at the time the Report was submitted, exactly one hundred Royal Arch Chapters in the jurisdiction, three of which were constituted in 1876, and three Mark Lodges. The number of Companions in the former on the 27th December 1876 was 10,457, there having been 684 admissions, &c. in the course of that year, and 548 resigned, suspended, expelled, or died. The members of the three Mark Lodges mustered together 2,044, as against 2,114 at the corresponding date in 1875, two only having been marked in 1876, while seven resigned, nineteen died, and forty-six were suspended or expelled, or together seventy-two. At the November Convocation the Committee on Finance presented their Report, and the Resolutions attached thereto were adopted. From this we learn that for the year ended 29th October 1877, the receipts, including a balance from previous year of 1,510 dollars 35 cents, amounted to a little over 7,992 dollars. The expenditure reached over 5,481 dollars, leaving a balance of not quite 2,511 dollars. But of this close on 1,300 dollars were needed to pay balances due on appropriations to 27th December 1877, so that the balance was reduced to 1,011 dollars, and if to this sum the 423 dollars due to Grand Chapter were added, then the surplus of receipts over expenditure and appropriations showed the satisfactory total of 1,434 dollars. The investments of Grand Chapter were stated to be all in the Six per Cent. Redemption Loan of the Grand Lodge, and to have reached 17,000 dollars. The estimated receipts and expenditure for the current year were set down—the former at close on 8,731 dollars, and the latter as under 6,750 dollars, leaving a surplus of about 1,981 dollars. The Committee on Correspondence then delivered their report on the request for recognition by the Grand Chapter of Quebec, which report, for reasons which must commend themselves to all, was to the effect that the said Grand Chapter should not be recognised. The other business having been disposed of, the election of principal Grand Officers for the ensuing year was proceeded with, and resulted as follows:—M.E. Comps. Alfred R. Potter Grand High Priest, William C. Hamilton, M.D., Grand King, Hibbert P. John Grand Scribe, Thomas R. Patton Grand Treasurer, and John Thompson Grand Secretary. These companions were formally installed into their respective offices at the Annual Communication on the 27th December, on which occasion the other Grand Officers were appointed and invested, thus bringing the proceedings of the year to a satisfactory conclusion. The Appendix contains a mass of very interesting information, from which, if we had time and space, we should have great pleasure in making several excerpts. As it is, we must content ourselves with only a few remarks. Thus from that portion of it which treats of Canada we learn that the position of Arch Masonry in the Dominion is eminently satisfactory as to the number of its members, while the finances show a cash Balance in hand, and in 5 per cent. Dominion Stocks amounting to over 6,082 dollars. The number of Chapters at date is set down as seventy, and the number of Royal Arch Companions at 3,115. The Report on Maine contains an excellent résumé of the history of Mark Masonry in England, and the remarkable progress it has made since the establishment in 1856 of our Mark Grand Lodge. Under the head of New Jersey is a long and instructive address by Comp. the Rev. James Murray, Grand Chaplain, on the occasion of the annual Convocation of the Grand Chapter of that State, the subject being "The Effects of the Captivity and the Second Temple." The treatment is very able, and our reverend Companion has displayed much erudition in the course of his remarks. We may add that we trust the next Report of Royal Arch Freemasonry in Pennsylvania will be as interesting and as satisfactory as the one we have just been commenting upon.

"IT IS EASY TO PROMULGATE AN ERROR, BUT VERY HARD TO ERADICATE IT."

BY BRO. JACOB NORTON.

WHENEVER an error originated, from an ignorant or learned man, when once it was accepted as an article of faith, additions were generally made to it, and learned men in the course of time did not disdain to aid and defend its perpetuation. No one, for instance knows who, or when, originated the notion of witchcraft; and that itself was a strong argument for perpetuating that notion. In 1736, Parliament abolished the law of burning witches, and the repeal of that law horrified the then pious ones, including John Wesley, just as much as Grand Lodges were horrified at the G.O. of France for having erased from its constitution a certain law.

The history of Masonry furnishes several facts to illustrate the truth of the heading of this paper; thus, in the fifteenth century the author of the Halliwell MS. introduced (as he alleges), from hearsay, the story of King Athelstan and his son Edwin having called an assembly of Masons, to whom Prince Edwin gave a charter. The MSS. says neither where nor when the said assembly was held. Matthew Cooke's MS., written in the sixteenth century, is also silent as to the where and when the said assembly was held. "Haghan's Old Charges," written in the seventeenth century, gave a location to the Athelstan assembly, viz., "York," and in 1738, Dr. Anderson added the year when that assembly was held, viz., 926. Everybody received the story with the additions as a fact, and Dermott began each Lodge Charter with the article of faith, that he derived his authority from Prince Edwin of 926. Dr. Oliver asserted that the Athelstan charter was still preserved at York. At last Bro. Findel exploded the Athelstan story. Since then, all the efforts of the legend defenders, including Bro. Paton's pamphlet, have failed to resuscitate the old faith in the Athelstan legend. This story is, however, not entirely abandoned; and it is curious to see to what expedients our legend sticklers resort to, in order to prop up a legend. The old story being no longer tenable, our Bro. Woodford brought forward Dr. Drake's discovery, that a Prince Edwin was baptized in 627 at York, who afterwards built a stone church. Now remember, that our earliest MSS. make no reference to York, but they do affirm that Prince Edwin was the son, or as some say, the brother of King Athelstan.

The Edwin of 627 was neither son nor brother to a King Athelstan, but because he was baptised at York, and his name was Edwin, and he built a church, therefore Bro. Woodford wants us to believe that the legend is mainly true, but that it refers to the said Prince Edwin of 627.

Dr. Oliver was not only a supporter and defender of old errors, but was also a promulgator of new errors; thus, in his "Revelations of a Square," he says, that D.G.M. Dr. Manningham was very much offended at learning that some W. Masters, to please Jewish Masons, omitted the name of Jesus from the prayers; thereupon, the D.G.M. consulted Dr. Anderson, and the two Doctors conjointly composed a prayer ending with Jesus; and the G.L. (between 1752 and 1754) approved of the said prayer, and the prayer was printed in the Pocket Companion of 1754. This story has been repeated many times by our American advocates of Christianised Masonry, and Dr. Mackey even embalmed it—prayer and all—in his Masonic Cyclopædia. At last, I wrote to the R.W. Bro. Hervey for information as to whether there was any evidence to sustain the story. Bro. Hervey answered most decidedly in the negative. In the meantime I found in the Gentleman's Magazine of 1739, that our Dr. Anderson died 28th May of that year; this settles the question about Anderson's composing a prayer in 1754, or fifteen years after he died. The truth is, with the exception that such a prayer was printed in 1754, all the rest of the story is a pure fiction—the invention of Dr. Oliver. But as Dr. Mackey repeated the story that Dr. Manningham "was the author of the prayer . . . which was presented by him to the Grand Lodge and adopted as a form of prayer to be used at initiation of candidates,"* the defenders of our Christianised ritual, may yet again and again quote the Oliver fiction, backed by Mackey, and palm it off on their uninformed audience as a historic fact.

The antiquity of our ritual, is another error believed by our "bright Masons." Some believe that King Solomon composed it. The late Dr. Winslow Lewis ever used to say, "they believe that King Solomon worked in the English language." Others suppose that the ritual has come down to us from the Lodge of the holy St. John at Jerusalem. This Masonic St. John's Superstition, is still rampant in our midst, for instance, ask an American Mason "Whence come you?" and he will answer "From the Lodge of the holy St. John at Jerusalem." To be sure, everybody knows that it is not true; nay, he himself knows it is not true, because he was never near Jerusalem, and, perhaps, never outside of his State. But it is still more ludicrous when you put the above question to one who has been to Jerusalem—such for instance as the famous Bro. Bob Morris, who knows no such a Masonic Lodge in Jerusalem exists, and who is not so foolish as to believe that there ever was such a holy Lodge of St. John at Jerusalem. But yet, when Bro. Morris is asked "Whence come you?" he answers, with a most serious, reverential, and sanctimonious face, "From the Lodge of the holy St. John at Jerusalem." This St. John's nonsense, was very justly ridiculed in a poem in 1751. The poem begins as follows:—

> "Freemasons, as the story goes,
> Have two saints for their patrons chose,
> And both SAINT JOHNS—one the Baptist,
> The other the Evangelist.
> The Baptist had a Lodge which stood,
> Of old, by Jordan's ancient flood,
> But for what secret cause the other
> Has been adopted for a Brother,
> They cannot, and I will not say.†

In 1851, I petitioned the G.L. of Massachusetts to discard sectarianism and the St. John's from the ritual, the petition was referred to a learned Rev. D.D., who reported in 1852. Among other matter, he quoted Dr. Oliver's statement, that the earliest ritual contained the following question and answer, viz.:—Q. "Whence come you?" A. "From the holy lodge of St. John." (The word "Jerusalem" has evidently been added since). The Rev. Brother's report satisfied the G.L. that it was "sound on the goose" as far as "ancient landmarks" were concerned, and therefore, Massachusetts Masons still continue to come from the Lodge of the holy St. John at Jerusalem.

The writings of Bros. Findel, Lyon, Hughan and others, disabused the minds of some brethren; the majority, however, are still grovelling in Egyptian darkness; and it is no wonder they are so, for, first, not more than four per cent. (if as many) subscribe for a Masonic publication; second, as a rule, American editors are averse to publish truth whenever it conflicts with their prejudices or vanity; and, third, there is a want of candour combined with courage on the part of those who know the truth to make it known in the Lodges and Grand Lodges; and hence, as long as the present ritual continues to be repeated in our Lodges, the ninety-six per cent. of our Masons who never trouble themselves with reading anything but newspapers, will continue to believe in the ritual as "gospel truth."

But with all these drawbacks, the dawn of reason is gradually looming up; a visible change has come over the scene in quarters where it was least expected; for instance, our learned Dr. Mackey, who has promulgated and defended more Masonic moonshine than any other writer, except Dr. Oliver, has become sceptical about the Solomonic origin of Masonry, and about the Templar legends. His change of opinion is plainly indicated in two articles printed in the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, 31st August. The article on page 148 is from Dr. Mackey's pen.

Again, in his Lexicon, printed some twenty years ago, Dr. Mackey asserted that the Saints John were "eminent Masons," but in his Masonic Cyclopædia, the Masonry of the Saints is ignored. True, our Doctor halts half-way, he still hankers after legends, he pats Bro. Woodford on the shoulder for bolstering up a legend, he still believes ancient landmarks, and he still pretends to come from the Lodge of the holy St. John at Jerusalem; the truth is, it is hard to part with long cherished errors. We cannot, therefore, expect more from Dr. Mackey; he did, however, make some progress, and we ought to be thankful for a little.

The change of opinion for the better among a few prominent Masons has, for reasons already given, produced no corresponding change in the rank and file of the brotherhood. As an illustration of this, I was amused to read in the Masonic Review, Cincinnati, the sarcastic remarks of Bro. E. T. Carson, who probably owns one of the largest, if not the largest, Masonic library in the world. Bro. Carson refers to the Cincinnati ritual worshippers as "consciectious Masonic mules," who are discussing in the Lodge of Instruction as to whether, according to the "Preston-Webb work," it is more proper to say, "Come out here, Pat Maroney," or "Pat Maroney, come out here!"

Another instance of gross ignorance may be seen in the criticism of the Editor of the Canada Craftsman (see FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, 31st August, p 147). Dr. Mackey dared to state, in the Voice of Masonry, that "the Templar Order of the present day is not identical with the old Order of the Crusades." There is no doubt that Dr. Mackey was, within a few years, a firm believer in the Templar legends, but he has changed his mind, and dares to come out with the truth; and thereupon the editor of the Craftsman pitches into poor Bro. Mackey right and left. Of course, our readers of the Craftsman are persuaded that its editor is far more profoundly learned in Templar and other historic lore than Dr. Mackey. But the fact is, our Canadian Knight Templar editor knows no more of the history of the Templars than what he heard on the night when he was invested with the cocked hat, or what the vain-glorious Grand Priors and Grand Prutors have palmed off on him; and this he calls history!

It is a curious fact, that while Dr. Mackey was groping in darkness, such writers as our Canadian editor used to look up to him as a Masonic oracle. But since our Doctor began to manifest some common sense in his writings, he lost caste among the orthodox. And this experience itself of Dr. Mackey furnishes an additional illustration to the truth of my text at the head of this paper, viz.: "It is easy to promulgate error, but very hard to eradicate it."

* Dr. Mackey says that Anderson died in 1746, which is incorrect. He also says, "Before that period [1754] no prayer was used on such occasion" [at initiation]. Invocations are found in all the pre 1717 rituals, but it seems that no prayers were used at initiation after 1717, for I have before me a reprint from a pamphlet published originally in 1750 (the preface does not indicate that any additions were made to the reprint), wherein I found the following:—"The ancients made use of a prayer, inserted in the apprentice lecture, but the moderns leave it out when they make a Brother." So Dr. Mackey may be right in this case; and the moderns may have borrowed the custom of praying from the ancients.

† I have read about sixty or more Masonic sermons, addresses, &c., ranging between 1725 and 1808, and not a solitary one refers to the Evangelist being made G.M. when upwards of ninety, or of his having been a Mason. This nonsense about the Evangelist's Masonry was not invented before this century, and it was not known to the oldest Masons in America before C. W. Moore, in Boston, began to print Masonic matter, that is, after 1824; hence, in 1751, the brethren could "not say."

(HONOURABLE MRS. ALDWORTH).

THE Hon. Elizabeth St. Leger claims a place in the annals of noted Irishwomen, from the strange circumstances which have concurred to hand down her name to posterity. In the only portrait of her ever known to have been taken, she is represented as wearing her Masonic jewels and apron. The face is that of a woman of about five-and-thirty, with a pleasing Madonna-like cast of countenance. Benevolence and strength of character are striking features in what—considering the details we have of her life—must be a faithful likeness.

The subject of this memoir was the youngest child and only daughter of the Right Honourable Arthur St. Leger, created first Viscount Doneraile, 23rd June 1703, and of his wife Elizabeth, the daughter and heiress of John Hayes, Esq., of Winchilsea. She was married to Richard Aldworth, Esq., of Newmarket, County Cork, who was the son of Sir Richard Aldworth, Provost Marescbal of Munster; but the date of the marriage is uncertain.

Lord Doneraile, the father of the Hon. Elizabeth St. Leger, was a zealous Freemason. He held a warrant, which empowered him occasionally to open Lodge at his own residence, Doneraile House, where, it is recorded, the duties of Freemasonry were never more rigidly performed than by the Masonic brethren of Lodge 150—the number of the warrant.† In the performance of these rites, Lord Doneraile was usually assisted by his son and by some intimate friends. The meetings were sometimes held in the town of Doneraile, but more frequently at Doneraile House, as in the instance about to be related.

Either in the year 1732 or 1733, when Elizabeth St. Leger was about nineteen or twenty years of age, the Lodge was held one night at her father's residence. Whether by design or accident cannot be confidently affirmed, but the fact remains that she certainly was in the room adjoining the one where the Lodge was being held on this particular occasion. This room was at the time undergoing some alterations. Amongst other things, the wall had been considerably reduced in one part, for the purpose of making a saloon. The young lady, having heard the voices of the Freemasons, and being giddy and thoughtless, felt a most intense desire to gratify her curiosity, and to witness this mystery so long, so faithfully, and so secretly locked up from public view. She made her arrangements accordingly, and, with a pair of scissors, removed a portion of a brick from the thin part of the wall, placing herself so as to command a full view of everything that passed in the next room. So situated, she witnessed the two first steps in Masonry, which was the extent of the proceedings of the Lodge for that night. Curiosity satisfied, fear now took possession of her mind; for, from what she heard, she concluded that the brethren were about to separate. For the first time she became tremblingly aware of the awkwardness and danger of her situation, and hastily began to consider how she could retire without observation.

There was no mode of escape except through the very room where the concluding portion of the second step was being performed. The apartment was a very large one; the ceremony was being performed at the very far end of it, and the brethren were all deeply engaged. Quick as thought, Miss St. Leger had resolution enough to attempt to escape. She glided along unobserved, laid her hand on the handle of the door, and gently opening it, to her dismay saw, standing on the lobby outside, a grim and surly "tiler," with his long sword unsheathed. With a shriek that pierced through the apartment, the terrified girl fainted, whilst the indignant brethren gathered around her.

Their first care was to resuscitate Miss St. Leger without alarming the house, and then to endeavour to learn from her how much she had witnessed. She confessed the whole truth, and, many of the members being furiously enraged at the transaction, she was placed under guard of the tiler and a member, in the very room where she had lain hidden. The members of the lodge re-assembled, and deliberated as to what, under the circumstances, was to be done. For two long hours the wretched girl listened to the angry discussion, and heard her death deliberately proposed and seconded. It is said that she was only saved from immediate death by the moving and earnest supplication of her younger brother. At length the good sense of some succeeded in calming, in some measure, the irritated feelings of the majority. When, after much more had been said, and many things had been proposed, she was given the option of submitting to the Masonic ordeal to the extent she had witnessed; and, if she refused, the brethren were again to consult. Being waited upon to decide, Miss St. Leger, exhausted and terrified by the storminess and earnestness of the debate, gladly and unhesitatingly accepted the offer.

She was accordingly initiated, and went through the ordeal, without any of the inmates of the house, save those present, being aware of the transaction. Thus vanishes the traditional story that the lady had hidden herself in a clock-case, her presence being betrayed by the whirring of the works, which she had inadvertently set in motion, and was unable to stop.

As Miss St. Leger, and as Mrs. Aldworth, she never made any secret of belonging to the Masonic body. On the contrary, she was rather proud of the distinction, and it is equally certain that the brethren held her in the highest esteem. By her marriage with Mr. Aldworth she had unlimited command of money, and the poor in general—and the Masonic poor in particular—had good reason to record her numerous and unostentatious acts of kindness.

The Dublin Evening Post and the Dublin Weekly Oracle, the two chief papers of the period, have some quaint advertisements respecting the performances given at the Smock-alley and the Aungier-street Theatres, for the benefit of the Dublin Masonic Orphan Schools. Upon these occasions the brethren walked in procession to the theatres, with Mrs. Aldworth at their head, wearing her apron and other Masonic insignia. Performers such as Mrs. Woffington, George Anne Bellamy, Barrington, Sheridan, or Garrick, usually gave their services for the sake of the charity; but they were scarcely noticed upon these nights, the Lady Freemason seated in front of the stage-box being the chief attraction of the evening. The house was always crowded when it was announced she would attend.

In the annals of the craft there is not a more esteemed name than that of Elizabeth Aldworth. Her conduct was unimpeachable in every relation of life. She was an excellent practical Christian, and most punctual and scrupulous in the performance of her Masonic duties. The brethren generously admit her many admirable qualities, and are unanimous in declaring that far from regretting her admission into their society, they consider her name and good deeds reflect a lustre upon the Masonic body.

We beg to acknowledge receipt of a very admirable photograph of sundry relics of the Grand Lodge of all England, held in the ancient City of York, during last century, and defunct about 1792. These, which were recently exhibited in the Eboracum Lodge, No. 1611, on the occasion of the visit of the American brethren from Philadelphia, United States, consist of a Bible with:—"This Bible belongs to the Freemasons' Lodge at Mr. Howard's, 1761," inscribed on the fly-leaf; a gauge about eighteen inches in length, bearing the names "John Drake," "William Baron of Yorke," and "John Baron," with the date "1663," and two emblems—interlaced triangles; a square of modern manufacture, and a cup—a very antique piece of silver work, which, though having nothing to identify it with its former possessors, came into the hands of its present owner, Mrs. Newstead of Selby, from an ancestor, who was a member of the old Grand Lodge at York, and set a high value on it, as the "Loving Cup" of that body.

MARK MASONRY.

THE annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Mark Master Masons of the County Palatine of Lancaster was held on Monday, the 4th November 1878, in the Town Hall, Bury, the M.W. Grand Master Lord Skelmersdale presiding. R.W. Deputy Colonel Starkie, R.W. Bros. G. P. Brockbank Past Grand Warden Prov. S.G.W., E. S. Heywood Prov. J.G.W., and a large number of Present and Past Officers; also R.W. Thos. Entwisle Past Prov. G.M.M. Lancashire, C. F. Matier P.G.W. and Past. Prov. D.G.M.M. Lancashire. The Prov. Grand Lodge having been opened in ample form, at 3 o'clock, the Roll of Lodges was called over by the Prov. Grand Secretary, and also the Roll of the Prov. Grand Officers. Apologies were read from the absent Officers, which were deemed satisfactory. The minutes of the proceedings of the Prov. Grand Lodge meeting held at Bolton, 22nd October 1877, were read and confirmed. Bros. Brockbank and Newton, Auditors, presented their report on the Treasurer's accounts for the past year, announcing a balance to the credit of the Prov. Grand Lodge of £118. Bro. Brockbank, on behalf of himself and colleague, drew attention to the fact that the Prov. Grand Secretary had discharged the arduous duties of his office for seven years without any remuneration, and recommended that some step should be taken to rectify this omission. Bro. Woodall (of Manchester) was then elected Provincial Grand Treasurer. The Officers for the ensuing year were then duly invested. Bro. Matier Past Grand Junior Warden moved, and it was seconded by Bro. John Duffield Prov. S.G.W., and resolved unanimously, that the P.G. Secretary's salary be £25 per annum, and that this resolution date retrospectively for one year. On the motion of Bro. G. P. Brockbank Past Grand Warden, seconded by Bro. Thomas Entwisle P. Prov. G.M. Lancashire, it was resolved, that the sum of £52 10s (fifty guineas) be voted from the funds of this Prov. G. Lodge in the name of the Provincial Grand Master for the time being to the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, in equal proportions, Old Men and Women. Applications were made from Wigan and Ashton-under-Lyne respectively as suitable places for holding the next Provincial meeting. All business being concluded, the Prov. G. Lodge was closed at 5 p.m., and the Prov. G. Officers retired.

MASONIC HALL AT CANTERBURY.

ANOTHER "Red Letter Day" has to be recorded in the annals of Freemasonry in Canterbury, inasmuch as the long cherished wish of the brethren to have a building of their own in which to hold their meetings has at length been realised. A joint committee of the three Canterbury Lodges—31, 972, 1449—have secured the lease of a suitable house (No. 38 St. Peter's-street), it has been readily adapted to the requirements of the Craft (which has rapidly increased of late years), and with the ready co-operation of the several Lodges and Royal Arch Chapter, and the generous liberality of various brethren, a very suitable Lodge room, &c., has been provided. The premises were inaugurated as a Masonic Hall on Thursday, 14th November, the occasion being the installation of Bro. John F. Cozens as W.M. of Lodge St. Augustine, No. 972. The ceremony took place at three o'clock, in the presence of about fifty brethren, including Visitors from several Lodges in the Province. The newly-installed W.M. then appointed his Officers as follow:—Bros. Vile S.W., E. Beer J.W., Pilcher P.M. P.G.S. Treasurer, Blake P.M. P.P.G.A.D.C. Sec., Pierce P.M. D. of C., Miskin S.D., S. F. Pringuer J.D., Higgies Organist, Rossiter I.G., Adsett and Crump Stewards, Harnett Tyler. The Installing Master was Bro. Welsh P.M., who went through the impressive ceremony in a very able manner, and received a unanimous vote of thanks. Bro. Secra I.P.M. having been elected as delegate to the Charity Committee, the Lodge was duly closed, when the brethren adjourned to Bro. Shaxby's, Guildhall Hotel, where a sumptuous banquet awaited them, and to which ample justice was done. Amongst the other brethren who were present at the installation, or who supported the W.M. at the banquet, may be mentioned:—Bros. Dean W.M. 31, Plant I.P.M. 31, Dr. Longhurst J.W. 31, Holtumn P.M. 31 P.P.G.S. of W., A. J. Beer P.M. 972 P.P.G.J.W., E. Beer W.M. 1449, Naylor P.M. 1449 P.G.S., Greenwood P.M. 1449 P.P.G.P., Higham P.M. 31 P.G.J.W., Taylor W.M. 1110, Head I.P.M. 1110, Sutton S.W. 1110, Eve W.M. 1209, Clarkson W.M. 1089, &c., &c. The usual toasts were duly honoured and responded to, the proceedings being enlivened by some excellent songs and glees, well rendered by Bros. Plant, Moulding, and Higgins, of the Cathedral choir, accompanied by Bro. Dr. Longhurst.

MEETING OF THE LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

THE Lodge of Benevolence met on Wednesday evening in the Board-room, Freemasons' Hall. Bros. J. M. Clabon President, Joshua Nunn Senior Vice President, and James Brett Junior Vice President, held the three chairs, there was a crowded attendance of brethren, among others, Bros. John Hervey G.S., H. G. Buss Assist. G.S., S. Rawson P. Dist. G.M. China, James Glaisher P.G.D., Thos. Fenn P.G.D., Dr. Rhys Williams P. Assist. G.D.C., Thomas Cubitt P.G.P., C. A. Cottebrune P.G.P., E. P. Albert P.G.P., W. T. Howe G.P., John Constable, A. A. Pendlebury, A. Middlemas, Chas. Atkins, H. Garrod, H. Bartlett, Griffiths Smith, J. W. M. Dosell, George Phythian, C. F. Hogard, the Rev. Dr. Ernest Brette, Geo. Plucknett jun., and C. B. Payne G. Tyler, were present. After the Board of Masters had disposed of the business before them, the Lodge confirmed the grants of last Lodge of Benevolence, and then took up thirty new cases. After sitting three hours, the brethren made grants to twenty-five of these cases, of a total sum of £582, and then closed the Lodge.

"CHARITY;" IS IT "GIVING?"

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Bro. Binckes in his haste to demolish your series of correspondents has not given himself time to read my letter of the 4th November in an intelligent manner, or he would not have accused me of a "recognition of every claim except that of Masonic Charity." In that letter I said that no one in my Province experienced greater pleasure than myself in subscribing his annual mite to the Masonic Charities. But I contend that to give one's contribution to the list of one's Lodge Steward, and to serve as a Steward oneself are two very different things. It is all very well for Bro. Binckes and his friends in town, who at the cost of a sixpenny 'bus can attend a Festival, and simply have to pay the fees; but I, like many other brethren, live at such a distance from London that the expenses of the journey and a night in town make a big hole in a £5 note, which, when added to Steward's fees and qualification as L.S. or L.G., is an important consideration to most men of limited means. Charity, let me remind Bro. Binckes, begins at home, and I do not regard it in the light of Charity at all to give what one cannot afford.

I have not unfrequently seen in the statements of particulars of cases of candidates for the Schools that the applicant's father was a Life Governor or Subscriber, or had served so many Stewardships to one or other of the Institutions, and I have thought, and shall continue to think, that it would have been much better and more Masonic if those brethren had made provision for their families, before giving away their small means in such a manner. I know of one case in which a brother enjoying a comfortable life income of over £1000 per annum, and possessing more than one charity jewel, left his family at his death almost wholly unprovided for, and they have been compelled to seek Masonic assistance. I call this "bad form," and an infraction of our elemental teachings, in which we are told that we should assist our brethren, "the same not being detrimental to ourselves or connections."

It certainly never did occur to me, as Bro. Binckes suggests, to make the claims of my church or other local calls "subservient in some one given year" to my serving a Stewardship or making myself a Life Governor of the Charities. Neither do I think such a course would be consistent with any character I have assumed, or even with common-sense justice.

At the dire peril of again being called Pharisaical I will venture even to say that I wish sincerely I were (as Bro. Binckes says) "a type of a large class of members of our Order," because in such case Masonry in the provinces could claim a very much larger number of effective workers than it does at present.

I do not quite understand what Bro. Binckes is driving at in his letter, save that he has been possessed by an uncontrollable impulse to have a shot at us all round. The principal object of my former letter was to combat the suggestion made by a doubtless very worthy brother, with whom I regret to say I am personally unacquainted, that a kind of money standard should be fixed to be attained by every brother before he should be suffered to receive any Masonic honours. This notion I urged was utterly wrong, and opposed to all Masonic teaching, to say nothing of common-sense fairness, and I still maintain this. It is not clear to me whether or not Bro. Binckes wishes for the "money qualification," but I repeat my former assertion, that the five shillings, half-sovereign, or sovereign contributed by a brother of narrow means to the list of his own Lodge Steward is as valuable and acceptable in the sight of the G.A.O.T.U., and probably as great a personal sacrifice, as the hundred guineas of the brother of large wealth, and that the poor Brother is much better discharging his duties as a faithful Craftsman by laying by in store for his family than by covering his breast with charity jewels and leaving his wife and children as a heavy legacy for the Craft to provide for.

When I wrote my former letter I had not the slightest intention or expectation of "drawing" Bro. Binckes, and I hope he will not misunderstand me if I suggest that I scarcely think him qualified to discuss impartially the question at issue, his own point of view being necessarily very different from nearly all the rest of the Craft, and whilst I receive as an article of faith the dictum of our ancient Bro. S. Paul, that "Dominus ordinavit iis, qui Evangelium annuntiant, de Evangelio vivere," yet I must submit that we are not all Secretaries of Masonic Schools, and are not prepared to go the length of "Fiat a Big Steward's list, ruat coelum," which appears just now to be the dominant idea amongst a few energetic Metropolitan brethren.

I am, yours fraternally,

18th November 1878. A MASONIC ENTHUSIAST.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I think Bro. Godtschalk is wrong in assuming that Bro. Radcliffe has suggested every Mason should be compelled to give a certain amount to each of our Institutions. This would not be Charity, but a kind of poll-tax, which I for one, and I assume every other Mason, would resent. Bro. Radcliffe—as I read his letters—I understand to have suggested that, considering brethren rarely experience any difficulty in finding guineas for subscriptions, joining fees, banquets, &c., &c., they ought to experience no difficulty in contributing a guinea to each of our Charities. This is far from being an unreasonable proposition, but it has nothing of compulsion in it. It is painfully suggestive of a lack of charitable consideration on the part of large numbers of brethren, but it does not lay it down to each Craftsman, "You must give something," instead of "It is your duty to give something if it is in your power to do so." It is quite true that large sums are raised annually for our Charities. This has come to be a necessity, and reflects the highest credit on those who contribute and help to raise the amounts, but as was once said by the Marquis of Ripon, when Grand Master of our Fraternity—not in so many words, but in effect—those who do not contribute have no share in the credit. His Lordship suggested that many brethren failed in their duty in regard to our Charities, and that it would be far better if the subscriptions consisted of a number of small sums, contributed by a vast majority of the Craft, than of a number of large sums—the contributions of a small minority. This it strikes me is the gist of the whole matter, and is, in another form, exactly the same kind of suggestion as Bro. Radcliffe and those who are of his way of thinking advocate.

As for the number of unworthy cases which find their way into the lists, and ultimately perhaps into the School, this is a serious allegation which Bro. Godtschalk has brought against the General Committee, to which all applications are submitted, and by which they are approved or rejected on their merits. I must leave him and them to discuss this matter.

Fraternally yours,

CHARITY STEWARDS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am doubtless chargeable with the deliverance, both in speech and writing, of more than a fair average of nonsense, but let me be judged by what I do say or write, rather than by what I am often made to say and write. Pray correct in your next the following errors in my letter in your number of this date, for which perhaps my caligraphy may be to blame:—

Line 24, for "cannot" read "care not to."
" 27, for "ostentatiously" read "voluntarily."
" 28, for "prompter" read "promptings."
" 67, for "annually" read "actually."

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

WARRANTS OF "ANCIENT" LODGES.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In reply to your correspondent "Q." I may state that his surmise as to my time being fully occupied is the cause which has prevented my continuing the preparation of the Old Warrants for your pages. I am gratified at this evidence that my endeavours to supply a missing link in our records has met some approval, and hope ere long to continue the series. I may add that I am still in want of transcripts of Warrants from the following Lodges, and hope that some of your readers will be able to supply same:—

OLD LODGES.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In continuance of my former letters on this subject, I note the following Lodge, which is still in existence under another jurisdiction, and must be regarded therefore as another among the yet remaining links which connect Freemasonry in other countries with the Grand Lodge of England, the Mother Grand Lodge of the whole world.

"No. 272, S. John's Lodge, Ann-street, New York, 2d & 4th Wednesd. Dec. 27, 1757." The Lodge thus described in Cole's List for 1763 still exists, and is No. 1 on the roll of the Grand Lodge of New York. In the introductory Chapter of the recently published "Early History and Transactions of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of the State of New York, 1781-1815," we learn that this Lodge was constituted 7th December 1757, by R.W. Bro. Geo. Harison, who received his deputation as Prov. Grand Master of New York in 1753, from Grand Master Lord Carysfort, and continued to preside over the district for eighteen years, during which period he consecrated several Lodges. On the cover of the Washington Bible in possession of the Lodge is the inscription: "St. John's Lodge Constituted 5757; burnt down March 8, 5770; rebuilt and opened Nov. 28, 5770; officers then present, Jonathan Hampton Master, William Butler Senior Warden, Isaac Heron Junior Warden." At the close of the war in 1783, that part of the Lodge which had left in 1776 returned. In that year the Worshipful Master announced that a Lodge calling itself St. John's (No. 4) had become possessed, during the war, of the properties of the Lodge, and refused to restore them. An attempt was made to bring about a coalition between the two, and succeeded, in spite of the opposition of Senior Warden Frean, who had got hold of the warrant and retained it. Meanwhile a Grand Lodge had been constituted under the authority of our Grand Lodge Ancients (by warrant of Grand Master the Duke of Athol, dated 5th September 1781), and in 1784 the St. John's Lodge surrendered its warrant and was placed on the roll of Lodges. In 1789, when a committee, consisting of one member from each of the Lodges in New York City, was appointed for the purpose of determining the order and precedence of the different Lodges, St. John's Lodge (No. 2 Provincial) was assigned the premier place on the roll, and this rank it still holds.

Yours fraternally,

"Q."

ROYAL ARK MARINERS.

A Warrant of Confirmation having been granted by Lord Skelmersdale R.W.G.M. to the Mount Horeb Lodge of Royal Ark Mariners attached to the St. Johns Lodge of Mark Masters (Time Immemorial) Bolton, this Lodge was consecrated by Bro. C. F. Matier (who had been specially appointed for the purpose), on Saturday, the 9th November. The brethren assembled at the Commercial Hotel, Bolton, at 4 o'clock, when Bro. Matier, assisted by Bros. Brockbank, Entwisle, Harwood, Morris, Boggett, Preston, Hine, Horrocks and others, proceeded with the usual ceremonial to consecrate the Lodge in form, and afterwards admitted the following brethren into the Order:—Bros. J. H. Greenhalgh, N. Nicholson, J. Heywood, J. W. Bolley, Arthur Middleton, W. H. Alcock, H. Greenwood, John Barrett. The brethren named in the Warrant, viz.—Bros. G. P. Brockbank, Entwisle, and Thomas Morris, having been duly invested, and Bro. Newton appointed Secretary, the further appointment of Officers was postponed, with a view to an entire change on the occasion of next meeting. A vote of thanks was accorded to Bros. Matier, Boggett, and Preston, for their attendance and support, and they were elected honorary members. The Lodge closed in peace and harmony at 5 p.m.

Royal Order of Scotland.—The Provincial Grand Lodge and Chapter of the Counties Palatine of Lancashire and Cheshire was held at Freemasons' Hall, Manchester, on Friday, the 8th November, R.W. Bro. Rob. H. Hutchinson Prov. Grand Master presiding. Bros. C. F. Matier Deputy Prov. G.M., G. P. Brockbank P. Prov. S.G.W. as S.G.W., and John Gibb Smith Prov J.G.W., John Chadwick Prov. G. Sec., John Duffield Prov. G. Treasurer, J. F. Hoffgaard Organist, S. Spratley, J. Hall, Thos. Chorlton, S. B. Ellis, W. H. Prince Taylor, being also present. Several brethren were balloted for and approved. Bro. Geo. Lamb Campbell, of Wigan, having presented himself, was inducted into the Order with the usual ceremonial. The office of T. was filled by Bro. Matier, the Wardens being Bros. Brockbank and Gibb Smith; Conductor Bro. Hall; and Warder of the T. Bro. Spratley. The full ceremonial was recited, and the lectures worked in ample form. It was resolved that ten guineas be voted to the Royal Benevolent Institution, the same to be placed on the list of Bro. Matier, in name of the Prov. G. Master. The brethren subsequently dined at the Hall, and several complimentary toasts were given and responded to.

Cryptic Rite.—The St. John's Council of Royal and Select Masters, No. 8, was consecrated by authority of the W.P.G.M. Rev. G. R. Portal, on Saturday, 9th November, at the Commercial Hotel, Bolton, by R.W. Bro. C. F. Matier P.G.W., assisted by R.W. Bro. G. P. Brockbank, P.G.W. and R. W. Br. Thomas Entwisle, P. Prov. G.M.M. Lancashire, and Bro. Rob. Harwood P. Prov. G.D. The customary solemnities having been observed, the Council was declared duly constituted, and Bro. G. P. Brockbank installed Thrice Illustrious Master, Bro. Thomas Entwisle Deputy Master, Brother Rob. Harwood Conductor of Works. Bro. James Newton was appointed Recorder to the Council. The beautiful ceremonials of the Order were carefully and correctly rendered by Bro. Matier, with his accustomed ability, and the following brethren were admitted members of the Council, in addition to the brethren previously named: Bros. Thomas Morris, George Ferguson, Richard Boggett (Hull), Arthur Middleton, J. W. Bolley, H. Preston (Hull). Bro. Matier was elected an honorary member, and the thanks of the Council duly accorded to him for his services on the occasion. At the conclusion of business the brethren partook of refreshment, and the proceedings closed at an early hour, several of the members having to travel a considerable distance.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Limb and Life.—Not many years ago some ulcerations and diseases in the joints placed in peril the affected limb when one less was recommended to spare the risk of life—now the discovery of these noble remedies has made the cure of the worst maladies no longer a matter of doubt. Holloway's treatment preserves the condemned limb, and in its course of cure improves the general health and vigor of the frame. Holloway's Ointment and Pills heal all sores and ulcerations, and extirpate scrofulous sores. Ulcers, bad legs, scrofulous discharges, swollen or gathered glands, contracted sinews, enlarged joints, rheumatic and gouty concretions are readily remediable by the proper and persevering application of these cooling, healing, and purifying preparations, which are as powerful as they are harmless.

THE GAIETY RESTAURANT.

THOSE who can call to mind the few facilities which existed in London some five-and-twenty years ago for obtaining refreshment at reasonable cost and in anything like comfort, will appreciate the enterprising conduct of Messrs. Spiers and Pond in adding one more, and on the most magnificent scale, to their already formidable array of establishments, where men and women may lunch or dine like civilised beings. Once a restaurant was a dingy lane of boxes, which would have evoked the maledictions of a bullock had he been placed in one of them to have his feed, and had it been in his power to utter maledictions after the manner of an infuriated human being. Those boxes were narrow, far too narrow indeed for the number they were intended to accommodate. Then the sitting accommodation was the very reverse of satisfactory—a hard and narrow bench, while a long-legged individual must have experienced no small difficulty in disposing of his nether limbs. The intermediate table being, like the benches aforesaid, a fixture, could neither be pushed further away if it seemed too close, nor brought nearer if it were too far removed. The room was dimly lighted, the floor sanded, the pervading odour by no means satisfactory and deprivative—if there be such a word—rather than promotive of appetite. The waiters generally were a seedy-looking lot, with an oiliness of facial surface suggestive of rare ablutionary exercise, and a look which, when not conveying a certain insolence of tone and manner, was invariably expressive of a hankering after the customary fee. The table-linen and cutlery well matched the general appearance of the place, the former being of a dull yellowish white, freely dotted with patches of spilt gravy and sauces, &c., &c. The plates were ordinarily of the commonest ware, and the tankards of dirty looking pewter, which all the waters in all the rivers in the world could never have made to look clean and pleasant. The viands were, with the exception of a few well-known houses, remarkable rather for their quantity than quality. Chops and steaks were the principal items on the bill of fare, but if a joint of roast or boiled beef or mutton were served, it was presented to the hungry visitor in uninviting slabs instead of slices, with a mass of vegetables crowded on the plate, the whole lying in a tepid liquid which the guest was expected to look upon as gravy, but which, if it were not the washings of the dripping pan, was mostly coloured water. The cheese that followed was hard, stale, and generally unprofitable as a digester of what had been swallowed before, and if the cost was not outrageous, it was unquestionably excessive, considering the roughness and crudeness of the entertainment generally. Such, reader, is a description, by no means highly coloured, of a chop house five-and-twenty years since, and such were the only houses then existent where the London men of business, professional men, and clerks, were able to obtain the necessary refreshment during the day. But "other times, other manners;" and now we rejoice to say we have changed all this, most decidedly for the better. Then a man was served as we have described, now he may lunch or dine comfortably, and even daintily and delicately, if he is so minded. Then a lady, who felt faint during her shopping expeditions, had but one resort which she could visit — the pastrycook's — where, always excepting such well-known restaurateurs as Verry in the West, and Birch in the East, her choice of viands was limited to meat patties—mostly crust, lined thinly with a suspicion of veal or beef—puffs, buns, and similar dyspeptic delicacies, while the liquids comprised the inevitable lemonade or ginger beer, infragrant tea and muddy-looking coffee, or cherry brandy. Now she may, indeed, frequent the pastrycook's as of old, and have her chop and a glass of sherry or bitter ale; and besides, she may, without the slightest fear of being thought singular, adjourn to one of the many elegantly appointed buffets or restaurants with which the metropolis is now furnished. What these are like, our readers know full well already, for are not Messrs. Spiers and Pond an institution of the age? Are not their establishments all over the metropolis? and is it not a well-known fact that a well-served lunch or ordinary can be had in any one of them at moderate charges. The surroundings are comfortable, and often elegant. The tables are neatly furnished with clean linen, and with plate and glass of excellent quality. The attendance is good, the waiters civil without being servile, and not regulating their attentions by the extent of the fee you are likely to "tip" them. To these inestimable benefits we are indebted to the energy and enterprise of Messrs. Spiers and Pond, and among the chief monuments heretofore erected to their fame are unquestionably the Holborn Viaduct Hotel and the Criterion, Piccadilly. But recently they have surpassed themselves, and the latest addition to our London restaurants is also the most magnificent. Be not frightened, reader, at the use of this word magnificent, for we naturally associate it with what is costly. This is not the case, however, with the Gaiety Restaurant, which was opened on Monday to the London public. Costly the building has been, it is true, and costly must have been the appurtenances thereof. Richly, and, at the same time, artistically decorated walls can only be built and fitted after a large outlay of money; but thus far the cost falls on the proprietors. The thousands and thousands they must have expended in making the Gaiety Restaurant what it is are solely their venture. At the same time, it will be the duty of the London public to show they are not unworthy of the conspicuous public service which Messrs. Spiers and Pond have just rendered. Men may say what they will about this kind of speculation, but it is a public service which any firm renders when it opens a grand establishment where ladies and gentlemen may lunch or dine in comfort from a well-served table at moderate charges. We claim to speak with some authority on this subject, as we were present at the private view on Thursday last of this new restaurant, and it is beyond question that a finer establishment does not exist in London. The grand entrance is from the Strand by a vestibule, in which is the grand staircase, the walls of which are splendidly decorated. To the right are the Grand Luncheon Buffets, in a noble apartment one hundred feet long and thirty-three feet wide, and proportionately high. The walls and ceiling are beautifully painted, the designs being most artistic, while all the appointments—the buffets themselves and their fittings, the marble tables, the morocco settees, &c., &c., are excellent. On the floor below is the Grill room, not so lofty, but otherwise of the same dimensions as the Buffet room, and less elaborately decorated; below this again are the cellars and other offices, on a scale which may be better imagined than described: for example, the large beer cellar alone contains two hundred hogsheads. Above the Buffet room is the Gaiety Table d'Hôte, furnished like an ordinary dining room, in good taste and well carpeted. Here the public may dine at the same rate as at the famous Criterion Table d'Hote, that is, for three and sixpence, the menu including soups, fish, entrées, joints, sweets, &c., &c. Ladies' cloak rooms are within convenient reach, and hats, umbrellas, &c., &c., are taken in charge by the attendant in the lobby provided for their reception. Above is the Smoking and Coffee room, both this and the Table d'Hôte being of the same superficial area—one hundred feet by thirty-three feet—as the Buffet room, and therefore capable of accommodating a very large gathering of people. Above them, on the top floor of all, are the kitchens and other offices required in the culinary department. In short the arrangements of the Gaiety Restaurant must be pronounced as being as perfect as modern skill and science, backed by enterprise and money, can make them. That such an establishment, in such a thoroughfare as the Strand and under such management, will prove an inestimable benefit to the public is certain. That Messrs. Spiers and Pond may reap the full reward of their generous energy is the smallest of the good wishes we feel called upon to offer them!

PYRAMID MASONRY.

From the "Keystone."

THE received traditions of Freemasonry place the origin of the Fraternity at the building of King Solomon's Temple, and notwithstanding the fact that literal archæologists and iconoclasts deride this as pure fiction, others have not been deterred from finding even an earlier origin for the Craft, viz: at the building of the Great Pyramid of Egypt. Not a few modern savants would persuade us, that this wonderful structure was erected for divers weighty reasons, such as, for example, to monument a divine standard of weights and measures. Bro. William Rowbottom is the latest interpreter of the meaning of the Pyramid, and he finds it to be a chronological monument, indicating events both past and future, and erected by the first organized Fraternity of Freemasons. He has stated his views, somewhat briefly, in a well-written work just published, entitled "The Mystery of the Bible Dates solved by the Great Pyramid."*

According to Sir John Herschel, and other received authorities, the Great Pyramid was built four thousand and forty-eight years ago, in other words in B.C. 2170. Bro. Rowbottom accepts this date, and alleges that the architect and builder of the pyramid was no other than Melchizedec, King of Salem, whom he identifies with Shem as an inspired architect, the great work of whose life was intended to be a prophecy in stone of the world's history.

We will state Bro. Rowbottom's theory:

The Pyramid dates are obtained by measuring backwards from commencement of the Grand Gallery, which is assumed to represent the year 1 of the present dispensation—in other words, the birth of Christ. The first ascending passage from its junction with the entrance passage to the commencement of the Grand Gallery, measures 1542 inches, and since a Pyramid inch is taken to represent a year, this distance signifies 1542 years. Now 1542 years B.C., Moses was born—hence this measurement, we are told, monuments that historical fact. But the first descending passage is 986 inches from the entrance to the commencement of the first ascending passage. This being added to the previous 1542 inches, makes 2528 inches, or years, and therefore represents the B.C. 2528, which was the date of the Flood. Other measurements give the year B.C. 2170, the date of the birth of Abraham, and also of the erection of the Great Pyramid; and the year A.D. 1882, which we are led to believe may be the year of the consummation of all things.

We confess we should be more inclined to place some confidence in this scheme of chronology if we saw any basis for the assumption of its starting point. Bro. Rowbottom does not enlighten us as to how he arrives at this corner-stone of his assumption; we suppose, however, that he fixes it solely on the hypothesis that it falls in, in the line of the other coincidences, with the dates of leading Biblical events.

Bro. Rowbottom next considers the evidence of Freemasonry's identification with the building of the Great Pyramid. We will quote a few passages from his book in this connection:

"It is not necessary that Freemasonry shall have always existed as at present constituted, nor that in all ages and climes that it shall have presented identical features. It the rather appears to me that the claims of the Order to antiquity should rest on the preservation of certain knowledge from remote periods, and that if it has any real connection with Sacred History, that it should have retained the power of securing its record from loss or irreparable mutilation; in fact, that it should possess the means of keeping the records square. Some might call it a fancy, and yet to me it is a belief as certain as knowledge, that Freemasonry has some such or equally important mission, for I do not think it credible that such an institution could have retained its influence over men of keen intellect, and oftentimes of great piety, had it been nothing more than a cunningly devised fable.' Genuine Freemasonry would thus consist in every age of the preservation of knowledge among the faithful, and this view would explain its original title of 'Light.'

That Masonry cannot be opposed to, or detract from, the authority of the Scriptures, is evident from the fact that their study is inculcated as the duty of every true Mason, and that the open Bible occupies a prominent place in every properly furnished Lodge.

Among Masons true Art found its original home, and to them we owe our noble Gothic Cathedrals, whose harmonious proportions are so pleasing to the eye. In those days, as in the days of ancient Rome and Greece, artists carved and built to certain well known—though secretly preserved—laws of proportion. This has led some to regard Masonry as purely operative in its origin, but the weight of evidence is decidedly in favour of the equal antiquity of speculative Masonry, and that the laws governing the ancient guilds of skilled workman are not the foundation, but the outcome of the principles of true Masonic government. The building of Solomon's Temple is evidenced as the first occasion on which operative and speculative Masonry were united in a common object; but many and mighty reasons may, and have been, adduced in favor of a much earlier event, viz: the building of the Great Pyramid.

If then Masonry had its origin at the building of the Great Pyramid, and also had a contemporary existence with the sacred annals; and if the record of these two witnesses is in truth inspired, then it will follow that Masonry should be in agreement with both. I trust that I have shown that it is so in historic import and philosophic teaching."

Bro. Rowbottom concludes his volume with the statement, that the English nation—the Anglo Saxon people, are the descendants of the Lost Ten Tribes of Israel, and hence to them are all the promises of Scripture vouchsafed. Others have stated and ably argued this case, and we must confess there appears to be strength in the argument.

This volume will interest Freemasons, and all students of the Bible. The coincidences to which it invites attention are certainly remarkable, and if they are only fancies, they are philosophic fancies, which lend a charm to the most remarkable edifice in the world, and one which is now attracting anew the attention of scientists, scholars, and Freemasons.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF MAN.

FREEMASONRY has lately had a singular ally in teaching the doctrine of the brotherhood of man—no less a one than the fearful scourge that is now devastating large sections of our national territory. For once men ignore their politics, their religion, their prejudices and prejudgments of all kinds, and unite in liberally contributing of their means for the relief of the sick, the dying, the bereaved, and the helpless, in the fever cities of the South. All Americans appear to be learning Freemasonry, and to be exemplifying in their actions the noble doctrine of the brotherhood of man.

We have often thought that if the State, the Church, and society had done their whole duty to the individuals composing them, there would have been little, if any, room for Freemasonry, and possibly the Fraternity might never have existed, or might even now come to an end. The State should labour for the welfare of all its citizens; the Church likewise for all of its members; and society for the smaller circle of which it, in various localities, is composed—but they each and all do not. The State is not a unit, but, owing to the existence of divers parties in it, is ruled in turn by factions, as one or the other for the time predominates. The church has grown rich and eminently respectable, and while still accomplishing great good, and acting as a civilizer all over the world, it has practically sadly neglected the doctrine of fraternity or brotherhood, and its members are often as far apart as the poles. Society is segregated into "sets," as the Church is into denominations, and the State is into parties. Thus all degree in ignoring the brotherhood of man. It requires something akin to an earthquake's shock to awaken them to a sense of their responsibilities. Such a shock they are now receiving, and the result is, an unqualified acknowledgment that they are their "brother's keeper." Man is linked anew to man all over our land. The North and the South, the East and the West, are one. The political hatchet is buried, sectarian animosities are ignored, and the "hard times" are even lost sight of, in view of the terribly harder times of our stricken fellow-countrymen. These are now truly the United States of America, and may they continue so, long after the cementing cause has ceased to be the death-blood of the disease-stricken thousands who now fill the grave-yards of the South!

Freemasonry has always exemplified the doctrine of the brotherhood of man, for it is the very corner-stone of our Fraternity. Nowhere, however, does the Freemason feel the full force of this glorious doctrine so fully, as when he is associated, either in the Lodge or elsewhere, with his Brother Masons. He is then with those who, with him, have learned all of its meaning, and are continually exhibiting its teachings in practice. We unhesitatingly affirm that Freemasonry often puts the Church, the State, and society, to the blush, by its whole-souled and universal exemplification of the noble truth of brotherhood. We are our "brother's keeper," and we glory in the thought and the fact. We admit our responsibility most unqualifiedly—it requires no earthquake shock to wake us to it. No Freemason in good standing need suffer long from sorrow, need, sickness or any other infirmity. We care for our members, and not by any specified stint or measure of obligation, but as we have ability, from a full heart and a ready purse.

The American people may do well to ask themselves, whether one of the purposes of the Almighty in sending, or permitting, the Yellow Fever scourge to devastate our cities and towns, is not to awaken us as individuals to a fuller apprehension of the high and holy truth of human brotherhood. It cannot be an accident; it must be a teacher. Its methods are novel, radical and terrifying, but we would fain believe that there is a silver lining to even this leaden cloud. At all events men everywhere may become scholars, with benefit to themselves and also to their fellows, in the great school of the Almighty that teaches brotherly love. Their field is the world, and school never closes. There is suffering, death, bereavement and sorrow on earth, everywhere and always. Man is ushered into the world with a cry, and tears are his companions until after he passes through death's dark valley. He needs a brother—he must have a brother, or else he is often left comfortless. Brotherhood is the world's want, universal Brotherhood. Freemasonry supplies it as far as it may. We set the world an example—let it be followed. We cannot, we would not, make all men, such as they are, Freemasons, but we would have them educated up to the capacity for eligibility to the Fraternity. A man must have all of the elements of Freemasonry in his nature, must be a Mason at heart, before he is made a Brother, or else it is useless for the Craft to endeavour to mould him after its model. It is not every Mason in name who is a Mason indeed. Hence we do not look for the speedy Masonization of the world—unless it should be converted to Masonry by some such radical method as a Yellow Fellow scourge! Such an event would inaugurate the millennium. Imagine, if you can, a world of Brethren—all linked together by the Mystic Tie, all forming one loving family, all acknowledging the brotherhood of man! Where then would be differences or strife? where the need for criminal laws or penitentiaries? The Grand Lodge above would surely open below, and the Great Grand Master might preside in it in the presence of a united world, all acknowledging the brotherhood of man and the fatherhood of God! We do not expect to live to see that day, but it may arrive, and that sooner than we think. The winnowing processes are in operation; the Great Schoolmaster of the Universe is abroad, teaching mankind lessons of charity and brotherhood; and the happy day may speedily dawn when all men, from the least to the greatest, shall love their neighbours as themselves, and worship in spirit and in truth the Father of all.—Repository.

THE Saturday morning performances of the Two Orphans at the Olympic have been discontinued for the present, in favour of a new play entitled Marie de Courcelles; or, a Republican Marriage, the leading characters being played by Mr. Henry Neville and Miss Marian Terry. The revival of the Two Orphans at this theatre has turned out an immense success, and the policy of its withdrawal when produced a few years ago is questionable, for it was the most successful piece the Olympic ever produced, and there is no reason why it should not have even surpassed the run of Our Boys at the Vaudeville (over 1,200 nights), which is still playing. Mr. Neville has been fortunate in being able to secure some of the originals of the principal characters, and filling the others with equal talent.

ONE of the nuisances of the age arises from the use of rank and inferior tobacco. Go where we may, we are liable to meet with the nauseous fumes generated in the pipe of some inexperienced or palateless smoker. In the streets, the air is redolent of the foul exhalations, and the sweet atmosphere of the country and seaside is too often tainted by the unsavoury whiffs of inconsiderate or ignorant smokers. But in railway carriages especially is the nuisance prevalent, and it appears strange to us that so many persons are still to be found, willing not only to vitiate, and render the air offensive to themselves and others, but who are ignorant or careless enough also to undermine their constitutions by the consumption of a coarse and unpalatable article. It is true that difficulty may have been experienced hitherto, in obtaining good tobacco, but at the present time this article—fresh and wholesome—may be readily obtained. We would recommend to the favourable notice of our brethren of the Craft the "Mellow Smoking Mixture" manufactured by Murray, Sons and Co., of Belfast, which has become so deservedly popular among all classes of smokers as to be readily obtainable from almost any respectable tobacconist. It is sold in neat, sealed packets bearing the name and trade mark (a pipe) of the firm; is uniform in quality, and, unlike other mixed tobaccos, is popular among smokers who usually eschew "mixtures." The popularity of the pipe at our social gatherings is so great that our readers will doubtless appreciate our drawing attention to the high class character of the "Mellow Mixture."

After the Turtle. Thirty-one Years' Ministerial Policy as set forth at Lord Mayor's Day Banquets, from 1848 to 1878. Collected by Richard Seyd, F.S.S. London: Houlston and Sons, Paternoster-square; J. and W. Rider, 14 Bartholomew-close. Manchester: J. Heywood, 141 Deansgate. 1878.

THOSE who take an interest in the political changes which have taken place in England during the last thirty years, will find this a most instructive compilation. As our readers are aware, Lord Mayor's Day of late years is looked forward to by people of all classes, not so much on account of the show and the feast as for the political utterances of the chief Minister of the Crown for the time being, or his representative. This is owing to the fact that Lord Mayor's Day is about midway between the close of the previous session and the opening of the next. Ministers have, as a rule, enjoyed complete rest from their arduous duties, and are on the eve of meeting in council together for the purpose of arranging the Parliamentary programme for the coming year. But in times of great excitement, such as we have witnessed for the past three years the anxiety to hear what Ministers have to say is intensified. Thus, the speech on Lord Mayor's Day, in response to the time-honoured toast of "Her Majesty's Ministers," is always looked forward to, and Mr. Seyd has done no slight service in collecting those which have been delivered in the course of the last thirty-one years. He might, perhaps, have added a few words where necessary or desirable, but the collection itself is well worth the shilling charged, and we trust After the Turtle will have a large and remunerative sale. It is worthy of note that these thirty-one speeches have been delivered by nine statesmen, of whom only three are still living. These nine are the late Marquis of Lansdowne, who replied to the toast in 1848, in the absence of his chief Lord John Russell; the late Lord John Russell, who has spoken four times, in 1849, 1850, and 1851, and again as Earl Russell in 1865; the late Earl of Derby (three times), in 1852, 1858, and 1866; the late Earl of Aberdeen twice, in 1852 and 1853; the late Lord Palmerston eight times, in 1855-6-7 and 1860-1-2-3-4; the late Sir G. C. Lewis, in the absence of his chief Lord Palmerston, in 1859; Mr. Disraeli, now Earl of Beaconsfield, seven times, namely: in 1867-8 and 1874-5 as plain Mr. Disraeli, and in 1876-7-8, as Earl of Beaconsfield; Mr. Gladstone four times, in 1869-70-1-3; and Earl Granville, in the absence of his chief (Mr. Gladstone) in 1872. It is likewise to be noted that the names of the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs are given for each year, and the names of the principal guests.

Practical Rules of English Syntax. Interspersed with Critical Notes and Explanatory Observations. Intended for the use of Schools, Private Teaching, and Self Instruction. London: E. Martin and Co., 3 Paradise-road, Clapham, S.W.

WE have seen in our time many works on English Grammar or its constituent parts, but we can honestly say that we have rarely seen one which for clearness, excellence of arrangement, and soundness of teaching has surpassed this most useful little book. That we are not alone in our estimate of its merits is shown by the fact that this is already the third issue or edition to which it has attained—proof undoubted that these Practical Rules of Syntax fully answer the description which the author claims for them. It is a book which should find its way into all schools, and likewise into those families in which attention is paid to the instruction of the children in English grammar.

We have great pleasure in noting two entertainments, at Lower Sydenham and Upper Norwood respectively, the former of which took place on the 19th inst., while the latter is fixed for Friday next, the 29th inst. In both, the burden of the entertainment is borne by Bro. Magnus Obren and his family, assisted by the Misses Mahood. That which was held on Tuesday passed off most satisfactorily, and we should say must have resulted in a very handsome addition to the funds of the Choir Fund, to which the proceeds were to be devoted. The programme commenced with a well-played duet for pianoforte by Mrs. Charles M. Obren, and Miss A. Mahood. Mr. Aubrey M. Obren followed with a song, "When the Birds have gone to Rest," in the chorus of which the audience joined. A reading "An Heirloom," by Bro. Magnus Obren came next, and then songs "The old Cottage Clock," by Miss Mahood, "Fair is my Love," by Bro. Charles M. Obren, a duet—"The Elphin Call"—by Mrs. Hunter and Miss Mahood, a piano solo by Miss Adelaide Hunter, another reading by Bro. M. Obren, and then songs, duets (instrumental and vocal), a third reading by Bro. M. Obren, and lastly a recitative song by him, "Try, try again," which injunction, by the way, will be fulfilled next week. All who took part in the entertainment not only evinced a deep interest in what they did, and for that reason alone would have commanded the applause of the audience, but they likewise displayed artistic ability of a very high order, and the commendations of those present must be taken as indicative of their appreciation of the talent displayed, as well as of the sacrifice of time, &c. for the purpose of benefiting a local institution. The entertainment which is fixed for Friday next will be held in behalf of the Royal Normal College and Academy of Music for the Blind, at the College, Upper Norwood, and is given by Bro. Magnus Obren and family, and the Misses Mahood. With the exception of a few items, the programme is the same as that of last Tuesday. We shall certainly make every effort to be present, as we are aware that a good treat is in store for us.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

HER Majesty the Queen and Princess Beatrice were expected to reach Windsor Castle from Balmoral on Friday evening. Intelligence was received on Saturday of the death of one of Her Majesty's grandchildren, the Princess Mary of Hesse, youngest daughter of Princess Alice.

The London School Board, at their weekly meeting, resolved to establish classes at certain centres for the instruction of the blind. Under the presidency of the High Sheriff of Lancashire, a meeting has been held to promote the formation of a national fund for the relief of sufferers from disasters in mines.

The Lord Mayor presided on Monday at a meeting of the Council of the Hospital Sunday Fund. Wishing to remove the feeling which seemed to prevail that he was not favourable to the movement, he expressed his approval of the Fund. As Lord Mayor, however, he was bound to consider the feelings of all parties connected with approved charitable agencies, and he thought the Mansion House was not the place where such an office should be established for a longer period than twelve months.

From various parts of the Provinces reports have been received that the late heavy storms have caused several of the rivers to overflow their banks, and thereby flood the neighbouring country.

The Locked-out Agricultural Labourers of Kent and Sussex assembled on Wednesday night at Exeter Hall to the number of between five and six hundred, with the view of enlisting the sympathies of the London working classes by making known their grounds of complaint against the farmers. The hall was densely crowded from platform to gallery; Mr. Auberon Herbert occupied the chair. Resolutions condemnatory of the action of the farmers and of the existing land laws, and expressing a determination to support the men in their endeavour to uphold the Union were passed.

Upwards of a quarter of million sterling has been received on behalf of the shareholders of the City of Glasgow Bank.

At an inquiry into the death of a youth of eighteen, named Nolan, which occurred while he was serving a term of three months' imprisonment in the House of Correction, it was shown that for eleven days he was supplied with bread and water only—the bread consisting of sixteen ounces, supplied once in twenty-four hours. After some further evidence the inquiry was adjourned.

The indictment which Mrs. Rousby, the actress, had preferred against Herr Bandmann, for assaulting her on the stage of the Queen's Theatre in April, has been tried before the Lord Chief Justice. The defence was a denial of the assault, and the case resulted in a verdict of not guilty.

On Sunday an attempt was made on the life of the King of Italy, who at the time was entering the city of Naples. A man, who it is stated gives as his reason for the attempted crime that he was poor, and therefore entertained feelings of hatred towards the king, approached the Royal carriage, and attempted to stab His Majesty. The Prime Minister, Signor Cairoli, was wounded in the thigh, and the King received a slight scratch. The man has since undergone some examination. Letters written by Internationalists were found at his house, in consequence of which some arrests have been made. This event has caused a profound sensation throughout France and Germany. At Florence, during a meeting of workmen to demonstrate their loyalty, a bomb was thrown from a window into their midst, and two men were killed. It is said that the king had received two letters, warning him that an attempt would be made on his life.

The Indian Government has learnt from a Cabul merchant that the suspicion they entertained that for some years past secret agents have been sent from Russia to the Ameer is substantially correct. As no satisfactory answer was expected from the Ameer, the Indian Government prepared a Proclamation declaring that the Ameer had left them no resource but to assert the power of England. Orders to advance have been issued, and the British troops have crossed the frontier. The enemy, who were in possession of Fort Kapion, retired on the approach of the English, and it was found on reaching Kapatyanga Fort that it had been evacuated. Both were at once taken possession of by our troops. Count Schouvaloff, after several days' stay at Pesth and interviews with the Emperor of Austria and Count Andrassy, left for Paris, whence he is expected to return immediately to London. It is generally believed that he has not succeeded in obtaining support to the proposition for another Congress to revise the stipulations of the Berlin Treaty. Prince Dondoukoff, the Russian Governor of Bulgaria, has been summoned to Livadia, where the Czar is staying. An agitation is going on in Bulgaria for the election of Prince Dondoukoff as the future head of that State. The insurgents in Macedonia are still active, and reports are received daily at Constantinople of Mussulman villages burnt and their inhabitants driven away. The object of these attacks is assumed to be to expel the Mahomedan population, and to occupy the province with Bulgarian immigrants. The communications between the British and United States Governments upon the Fisheries question are believed to be closed in a satisfactory manner. The amount of compensation awarded by the Commissioners will be paid this week. From Canada we learn that great preparations are being made to accord a fitting reception to the Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise on their arrival there.

INSTALLATION MEETING OF THE LODGE OF ISRAEL, No. 1502.

THE regular monthly meeting of this influential and prosperous Lodge was held at the Masonic Hall, Liverpool, on Monday the 18th inst. Present:—Bro. Alex. Jones W.M. in the chair; Bros. S. Schönstadt S.W., Rev. H. D. Marks J.W., H. A. Tobias as S.D., S. J. Henochsberg J.D., Maurice Hart P.M. Secretary, J. Defrece Treasurer, Ralph Robinson P.M. P.G.R. D.C., A. J. Henochsberg P.M., Alpass P.G. Secretary, Bowes P.M. 148 P.P.G.S.D. West Lancashire, P.P.G.J.W. Westmoreland and Cumberland, P. Macmuldrow P.M. 1299 P.P.G.S.D., G. Broadbridge P.M. 241 P.P.G.D.C., D. Lavenstein W.M. Lodge of Israel, Birmingham, 1474, J. Windsor W.M. 241, F. Barnett W.M. 249, Evans W.M. 1350, Rev. T. W. Richardson P.M. 1380, Dr. Bailey S.W. 786, H. Gabriel 241, Mackenzie S.W. 1609, &c. &c. The W.M. opened the Lodge in the usual form. The minutes being read and confirmed, the ballot was taken on behalf of Messrs. Phillips, Mamelock and Robell; it proved favourable in each case. This being the evening for the installation of the W.M. elect, the Lodge was then opened in the second degree, when Bros. S. Schönstadt was introduced to receive the benefit of installation; the necessary questions being put to him and answered, he was duly obligated. The Lodge was then opened in the Masters' Degree, when all those present below the rank of Installed Officer, were requested to withdraw. The W.M., who acted as Installing Master, then opened the board of Installed Masters, and inducted the new W.M. into the chair, after which the brethren were re-admitted and saluted their W.M. The following brethren were invested as Officers of the Lodge:—Bros. Alex. Jones I.P.M., M. Hart P.M. D.C., Rev. Prag Prov. G.C. Chaplain, Rev. H. D. Marks S.W., H. A. Tobias J.W., Isaac Defrece Treasurer re-elected, S. J. Henochsberg Secretary, Maurice Aronsberg S.D., M. P. Tuseki J.D., Veale Organist, Joseph Saber I.G. by proxy, H. W. Wright S.S., D. Gabrielsen J.S., W. Ball Tyler re-elected. After which the W.M. initiated Messrs. Phillips, Mamelock and Robell into the mystic Order in a manner that reflected great credit on him. The brethren were then called from labour to refreshments and partook of an excellent and récherché banquet. Grace having been said by the Chaplain, Bro. Prag, the W.M. proposed the toasts. The first on the list is one which is at all times received by Masons with enthusiasm; I need not further commend it to your notice, I ask you to drink to the health of H.M. the Queen. This toast was received with eclat, and God save the Queen was ably given by Bro. Solomon Jacobs. The second toast the W.M. felt sure would be equally well received; the ability of our sovereign head of the Craft H.R.H. the Prince of Wales M.W.G.M. of England, as a Mason, is well known. The G.M. has often proved, by the interest he takes in Masonry, that he has it at heart, he is consequently entitled to our fullest regard and esteem. He would therefore ask them to respond to the toast, with which he would associate the Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family. This toast was heartily responded to by the brethren, and God Bless the Prince of Wales ably given by Brother Veale the Organist. The next toast comprised the Earl of Carnarvon Prov. G.M., Lord Skelmersdale D.G.M. R.W.P.G.M. of Lancashire, and Prov. Grand Officers, all of whom were esteemed in proportion to the important duties they discharged. In Lord Skelmersdale we, as Prov. G.M. as man, and as Mason, we have no superior, if any equal; there must be the opinion of all who have witnessed the excellent way he discharges the business of Grand Lodge; more particularly at the Grand Lodge meeting recently held at the Philharmonic Hall, the largest and most successful ever held in this Province. The great interest he takes in Masonry fully entitles him to the esteem in which he is held by the Craft in general. We have the honour of having present here this evening various P.G. Officers, amongst others the P.G. Secretary Bro. Alpass, who has fulfilled that important office in this Province for a number of years, and he (the W.M) well knew he had discharged his duty with zeal and assiduity, and is therefore held in the highest respect, not only by those with whom he comes in close connection, but by all the Masonic brethren in the Province. The next P.G. Officer it afforded him particular pleasure to mention on this occasion was one from our midst, who had lately had the distinguished honour of being appointed P.G.R., an honour which he had justly earned. By this appointment, the members of the Lodge of Israel feel highly favoured. The brother referred to is P.M. Robinson. He need not here eulogise the excellent qualities he possesses, they are well known to all. He—as the first Master of this Lodge (to whom the members owe a debt of gratitude, and to whose exertions the success of the Lodge is mainly due)—set such an admirable example by his well ruling, that it could not fail to have the desired effect. His conduct has been emulated by all those brethren who have succeeded him. He hoped that Bro. Robinson might be spared many years to afford Masonry in general and the Lodge of Isreal in particular that support and assistance which at all times he is so willing to give. Without further remarks, he would ask them to drink to the Officers of Grand Lodge, supreme and subordinate, coupling with the toast the names of Bro. Alpass and Bro. Robinson. Bro. Alpass P.G.S. in responding to this toast complimented the W.M. and members on the successful and prosperous condition of their Lodge, also on its admirable administration and working since its formation four years ago. He doubted not that under the leadership of the present W.M. it would not lose its lustre. Bro. Robinson P.M. P.G.R. also acknowledged the toast at considerable length; he felt himself highly flattered by the eulogium passed upon him; he also intimated that he had been appointed President of the Hamer Benevolent Fund, and trusted that the brethren, who were never behind others in charity, would give their hearty support to this Fund. The next toast was that of the newly installed W.M., very ably proposed by the I.P.M. Bro. Jones, the Installing Master, who congratulated the members of the Lodge on the selection they had made in placing such an excellent and worthy brother at their head. He had known Bro. Schönstadt for many years, and proposed him as candidate for Masonry in his mother Lodge, the Pembroke 1299, some five years ago; ever since they had followed each other step by step; therefore he was more than pleased at having had the honour and pleasure of installing him. He felt sure that the Lodge would be managed by Bro. Schönstadt as well as by any of the preceding Masters, more particularly as he had been for three years the chairman of a most influential body. Bro. Schönstadt on rising was received with acclamation. In returning thanks for the hearty and cordial manner in which his health had been proposed and responded to, he begged to express his deep sense of gratitude to the members of the Lodge of Israel for having elected and placed him by their unanimous vote, in the high and exalted position of W.M. for the ensuing year, an honor which he much appreciated, and of which he felt proud. He was fully sensible of the difficulties under which he had to labour in the discharge of his important duties, but he would endeavour, as far as his humble and earnest exertions would permit, to do his best to gain the approbation of the members, uphold the dignity of the Lodge, and further its interests and prosperity. When the time came that he had to vacate the chair, he would hand the warrant over to his successor in the same pure and unsullied condition he had received it. In the discharge of the important duties devolving on him, he required the support of the members of the Lodge, and trusted they would afford him that kindness which they had so readily shown his predecessors. In the Officers appointed he placed every confidence; they would faithfully discharge their respective duties, and render the necessary assistance that he required of them in the well ruling and governing of the Lodge. He hoped and trusted that, under the blessing of the Great Architect of the Universe, his year of office would be a pleasant and prosperous one. The W.M. next proposed the health of the I.P.M., Installing Master Bro. Alex. Jones, who he complimented on the energy with which he had brought to a satisfactory close his year of office; also upon his crowning effort of so successfully installing him in his stead; it gave him great pleasure to place upon his breast a handsome P.M.'s jewel, which the Lodge had voted him in recognition of his merits, and as a memento of the respect in which he is held by the members. He wished him many years of health to wear it, and to continue his valuable services to the Lodge of which he was now a P.M. and honoured member. Bro. A. Jones in responding thanked the brethren for the great kindness and forbearance shown him during his year of office, also for the handsome jewel with which they had presented him. He would look upon it as an incentive to further efforts. In giving the health of the Visitors the W.M. remarked this toast was one that required little comment; it recommends itself at all times. In the Lodge of Israel it is received on all occasions with pleasure and cordiality. He could assure the visiting brethren, one and all, that the members were happy to see them, and were ever ready to welcome them. He hoped and trusted the Lodge might never be without Visitors. Around were many distinguished brethren, amongst others the W.M. of their namesake the Lodge of Israel, Birmingham; this worthy friend and brother came from a distance to do him honour, for which he felt deeply thankful. He assured their guest that the brethren were delighted to see him. We have in the W.M. of the Merchants, and the W.M. of the Mariners Lodges; both these brethren bear the highest reputation as Masons, and for their ability as Masters; to the W.M. of the Merchants Lodge, Bro. Windsor, he felt deeply indebted for his kindness and courtesy, also for his having at all times given him (the speaker) valuable assistance in his Masonic career. He hoped that the other visiting brethren would forgive him if he did not mention their names, as time was much advanced. He called on the members to honour the toast of the visiting brethren, coupling with it the names of Bros. Windsor, Lavenstein, and Barnett. Bro. Lavenstein W.M. Lodge of Israel, Birmingham, acknowledged the compliment paid him, and expressed himself highly gratified with his visit. The brethren of his Lodge looked with considerable interest on the doings of No. 1502; he had come from a distance to witness the installation of his friend and brother the W.M., in whose hands he felt sure the Lodge was safe, and would be conducted with dignity. He wished Bro. Schönstadt a hearty, happy, and prosperous year. Bro. Windsor W.M. 241 and Bro. Barnett W.M. 249 also returned thanks, expressing their high opinion of the Lodge, and the hearty reception they had received from one and all of the members. Bro. P.M. Robinson P.G.R. very ably proposed the Benevolent Fund in connection with the Lodge; he appealed to the members for their continued support of this excellent charity. Afterwards the handsome amount of £10 was collected, and this was thankfully acknowledged by Bro. B. Levy, President of the Fund, who informed the brethren that the aggregate amount now in the possession of this charity was £200. The next toast was that of the newly initiated brethren, ably proposed by Bro. P.M. A. J. Henochsberg, who congratulated the W.M. and members on the choice they had made in the admittance into the Craft of such worthy members as Bros. Philips, Mamelock, and Robell, who he felt sure would prove worthy members of the Craft. This toast was briefly acknowledged by the newly initiated brethren. The toast of the P.M.'s of the Lodge was given by the S.W., who remarked, in a few well chosen words, that the P.M.'s of the Lodge would ever stand high in the opinion of the members, for the zeal each had displayed during his year of office. Bro. B. Levy proposed the Officers of the Lodge, whom he eulogised for the zeal and ability with which they discharged their respective duties; he also congratulated the W.M. on having appointed such a worthy brother as H. A. Tobias J.W., who he felt sure would prove an ornament to the Lodge, and would in due time ably fill the position of W.M. The Senior and Junior Wardens thanked the brethren for their kindness. The Tyler's toast closed the meeting.

Sincerity Lodge, No. 174. — A regular meeting of this Lodge was held on Wednesday, at the Guildhall Hotel, Gresham-street, City. The Lodge was opened by Bro. John Appleby, who was supported by Bros. G. T. H. Sedden S.W., C. H. Webb as J.W., John Newton P.M. Secretary, Jones J.D., F. Brown I.G., Verry Tyler. After the minutes had been read and confirmed, the ballot was taken for Mr. William George Cane, and Mr. William Cecil. In each case the result was satisfactory. Bro. W. Giller, of the Loyalty Lodge, No. 1607, a candidate for the third degree, was then examined. He exhibited sufficient knowledge of what was required of him to warrant his claim for preferment, and the W.M. worked the ceremony of raising, in the candidate's behalf, in an eminently satisfactory way, deriving much assistance by the competency displayed by the Officers of the Lodge. The agenda paper bore the names of three brethren as candidates for the second degree—Bros. Bellman, Mustart and Marshall; in addition to these the W.M. of the Loyalty Lodge, which our readers will remember is an offshoot of the Lodge of Sincerity, had requested Bro. Appleby to pass two candidates for him, as the Loyalty Lodge would not meet again till April next. These candidates—Bros. Garden and Burton—with the three named above, were then examined, entrusted, and in due course passed to the degree of F.C. The ceremonial portion of the day's proceedings was then brought to a close by the initiation of Mr. William Cecil. Routine business now commenced, and this proved to be as heavy as the previous work, that had been transacted. Bro. Newton earnestly pleaded the claims of the son of a deceased member—Bro. Arthur—who is desirous of being placed on the list of candidates for the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys. Several members supported Bro. Newton, and the Lodge pledged itself to adopt the case. A letter was read from the members of a Colonial Lodge, soliciting funds for building a Masonic Hall; this was discussed, and the consideration of the letter was—we think wisely—postponed sine die. The next feature requiring notice was a petition that had been presented by a brother who urged he was in distressed circumstances, and a most exhaustive discussion resulted; in the end, however, it was decided that the Lodge could not take action in this case. £10 was then voted from the Benevolent Fund for the assistance of a brother who needed temporary help. Bro. Seddon S. Warden pressed the claims of the Benevolent institution, for which he has accepted a Stewardship; and Bro. C. J. Perceval intimated that he would act as Steward at the next Festival of the Girls' School. Lodge was then closed. There was no banquet, but some of the members spent an hour most pleasantly together. The following were the Visitors:—C. V. Falkner 41, W. W. Morgan 211, R. Shephard 861; Bros. Giller, John S. Burton, and John J. Garden, of 1607. We regretted to find that the Lodge was in mourning,—in consequence of the lamented death of Bro. J. W. Dunstan Junior Warden.

Palatine Chapter Rose Croix, Manchester.—A meeting of this Chapter was held on Wednesday, the 6th November, at the Palatine Hotel, Manchester. Present—S. P. Thomas Rose 30° M.W.S., supported by Illus. Bros. Stephen Smith 31°, G. P. Brockbank 31°, John Duffield 31°, Geo. Higgin 31°, Jas. A. Birch P.M. W.S., J. Gibb Smith 30°, R. H. Hutchinson 30°, R. McD. Smith 30°, J. F. Heffernan 30°, B. S. John Joule 30°, P. Royle M.D. 30°, John Chadwick 18°, W. Gibb 18°, and others. Four candidates were balloted for and approved, three of whom presented themselves for perfection, which ceremony was performed by S.P. James A. Birch, S.P. Contracting as Raphael. Col. Le Gendre Starkie, Prov. G. Master East Lancashire, was balloted for and elected at this meeting, and it is expected he will shortly present himself for perfection. At the conclusion of the business the S.P.'s adjourned to banquet, which as usual was of a most recherché character.

Prosperity Lodge of Instruction, No. 65.—The Annual Supper took place on Tuesday, at Bro. Maidwell's, the Hercules Tavern, Leadenhall-street, E.C. The chair was taken by Bro. Brown W.M., of the Mother Lodge, who was supported by his I.P.M. Bro. Daniel; the Secretary of the Lodge of Instruction Bro. Hollands the Preceptor Bro. Sparrow, and the following members and Visitors—Bros. Kearney, Lewis, Coe, Strode, James, Brown, Pattison, King, Richards, Biddle, Sayer, Moss, Hamilton, Wall, Terry, Maidwell, Main, Quincey, Morgan, &c. The Lodge having been formally opened and closed, the brethren adjourned for the purpose of enjoying the repast, which had been capitally prepared, and was so liberally served by host Maidwell. On the removal of the cloth the customary toasts were given and replied to, the general tone of the remarks testifying to the happy feeling which exists between the Mother Lodge and the Lodge of Instruction. In the course of the evening a presentation was made to Bro. Hollands, of some articles for table use, also of a pair of glasses; and Bro. Brown, who handed the testimonial to the worthy Secretary, happily remarked that he trusted Bro. Hollands would thereby the better be enabled to see the faces of the members who entertained for him such deep feelings of esteem.

King's Cross Lodge, No. 1732.—This Lodge held its regular meeting on Saturday last, at the Metropolitan Club, 239 Pentonville-road. Bro. J. J. Michael W.M. presided, and was supported by Bros. W. M. Stiles S.W., J. T. Briggs J.W., H. Stiles S.D., H. Higgins P.M. J.D., F. Saintsbury Secretary, L. Solomon I.G., and Daley Tyler, as well as by several members, and the following Visitors, namely—Bros. J. N. Thompson J.D. 1695, T. Gilbert 1507, T. C. Edmonds 1507, Louis Bamberger S.W. 1366, and W. W. Morgan Sec. 211. The Lodge was opened as usual, and in the course of the business Bros. H. Cashmore, J. Patterson, and F. Fletcher were raised to the sublime degree of M.M., while Bros. A. Hubbard and W. Pope were passed. When the duties of the evening were concluded, the brethren sat down to a modest dinner. The bill of fare included two sorts of fish, joint, vegetables, cheese, and celery—well-dressed and admirably served, at a charge of half-a-crown. On the removal of the cloth, the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed from the chair. Bro. Knight, acting I.P.M., gave the health of the W.M., and in doing so spoke in terms of well-merited eulogy of the manner in which their president had worked the ceremonies that afternoon. The W.M. acknowledged the toast in suitable terms, thanking both Bro. Knight for the handsome manner in which he had proposed the toast, and the brethren present for the cordial manner in which they had greeted the proposition. Bro. Michael added that he was desirous of fulfilling his duty to the satisfaction of the Lodge, and he should leave no stone unturned in order to achieve a success. The toast of the Visitors having been duly acknowledged, that of the I.P.M. Bro. Knight was proposed and most cordially received. Other toasts, such as are customarily given on these occasions, followed, and in due time the meeting came to an end, the brethren separating with a sense of pleasure at the very agreeable evening they had spent together. This is a young Lodge, but it is a promising one. It has no debts; its officers work well together; perfect harmony reigns among the members, and though it is by no means strong in numbers, King's Cross, No. 1732, is one of the nicest and most genial to visit that we have been privileged to make acquaintance with. During the evening Bro. Stiles exerted himself to induce the members to contribute towards his list for the next Festival of the R.M.B.I., and from what we know of the charitable proclivities of the brethren present, we doubt not his appeal will be freely responded to.

Crusaders Lodge, No. 1677.—This Lodge held its regular meeting on Wednesday 13th, at the St. John of Jerusalem. Present—Bros. W. J. Hunter W.M., Simmons S.W., T. Goode J.W., P.M. J. Maples Treasurer, P.M. Defries Secretary, Rushton Organist, Rothschild S.D., Millward J.D., Calderwood I.G., Verry Tyler; also Bros. J. Knight P.M., W. B. Kidder, Gilbert, Farr, Mackie, Carnly, Chandler, Taylor, A. Goode, W. Jackson, P. Jackson, F. Goode, W. Goode, W. Gay, Moorhouse, Garrod, W. Cook P.G.S. Herts, T. Hyland, J. Callegari, Cummings, Parr, and others. The Visitors were Bros. C. Reuter P.M. Cornwallis 1107 P.P.G.D.C. Kent, T. H. Simmonds J.W. Cornwallis 1107, A. W. Fenner S.D. Upton Lodge 1227, W. Hopekirk P.M. 179, J. E. Carpenter P.M. Urban Lodge 1196. All preliminaries having been observed, Bros. Gilbert, Farr, Mackie, and Carnaby were examined, entrusted, and duly passed to the second degree. On the Lodge being resumed, a ballot was taken for the following gentlemen, who were initiated into the mysteries of the Craft:—Messrs H. Parry, Charles Hayward, and Edwin Creed. The ceremonies were performed by the W.M. in a very efficient manner. In pursuance of notice of motion by Bro. Secretary, the No. 3 Bye-law of the Lodge was altered, to the effect that the subscription be paid annually, in October, instead of half-yearly as hitherto. After which Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to supper, which was admirably served by Bro. Gay. The loyal and patriotic toasts were ably given; that of the W.M. receiving a most hearty greeting. On the health of the visitors being drunk, Bro. Carpenter responded, congratulating the brethren on their having such an efficient W.M. to preside over them. The initiates also responded. The brethren were highly pleased with the singing of Bros. Millward, Parry, Carpenter, and Callegari. Bro. P. Jackson favoured the brethren with a recitation—"Little Jim." The Tyler's toast brought the evening's duties to a close.

Mrs. Dion Boucicault has commenced an engagement at the Dublin Theatre Royal, and will produce a new play written for her by Edmund Falconer, entitled The Banshee. At the termination of her Dublin season, Mrs. Boucicault sails for New York, and starts on her farewell tour of the United States, Canada, and Australia.

The brethren then adjourned to partake of supper, the frugality of which—could they have witnessed it—would have rejoiced the hearts of Bro. Dick Radclyffe, "Union Jack," "Old File," and the rest, who hold that the Masonic Charities would best be served and supported by impracticable self-denial, and a policy in Lodge arrangements calculated to hinder Masonic human nature from being occasionally made glad by the enjoyment of the good things which a gracious Providence, in His goodness and mercy, has deemed fit to bestow upon his but too frail and erring creatures. Even Sir Wilfrid Lawson himself might have sat at the board and gazed with complacency on the abstemious assembly of Craftsmen, among whom there was nevertheless no lack of sociability and merriment, but, on the contrary, great good humour prevailed, lively chat being interspersed with pleasant songs, given, by some, with remarkable taste and skill. The brethren who favoured with their vocal efforts were Constable, Ross, Woolf, Barnett, Bailey, and Smith. Just as the assembly was about to separate, at the early hour of 9.45, the Worshipful Master in feeling terms informed the brethren that the genial and very highly esteemed Bro. John Peartree P.M. and Treasurer had met with a rather serious accident, and although no bones were broken, it is yet likely to materially affect a not over robust constitution. He fervently hoped and trusted that at the next meeting of the Lodge Bro. Peartree might be so far recovered as to be able to be among them, in something like his former health and strength. Most sincere and heartfelt regret was expressed by all present, and if wishes could produce the effect, Bro. Peartree's restoration would be swift and sure.

Bro. P.M. Gilbert Greenall Lodge, No. 1250.—The regular monthly meeting was held at the Masonic Rooms, Warrington, on Tuesday, the 12th inst. Present—Bros. D. W. Finney W.M., J. Armstrong I.P.M., T. Auckland S.W., T. Sutton J.W., Spencer Wallherd Sec., J. H. Galloway Treasurer, G. Mackey as S.D., G. O. Brian as J.D., J. Galloway as I.G., T. Domville Tyler. P.M.'s W. Wood, P. Eiclsten, W. Richards, and Bros. Wm. Reid, Wm. Taylor, Jas. Farrington, T. Speakman, R. Heaton, Wm. Bolton, &c. Visitors—A. Harries 318, Scotland, &c. The Lodge was opened at 7 p.m., the minutes of last meeting were read, found correct, and ratified. This Lodge, under the able Mastership of Bro. Finney, is very happy and prosperous, and the brethren are working up a musical service, for which there is plenty of talent in the Lodge. There was work anticipated, but through unforeseen circumstances, it was postponed. It is to be regretted that the Senior and Junior Deacons, as well as the I.G., were absent. It looks unfavourable to have three Officers of a Lodge away; each night they miss they lose much beneficial instruction. The brethren of Warrington are very desirous of building for their Lodges a Temple, and there can be no doubt that they will do this; and when completed they will wonder why it had not been done long ago. The Lodge was closed in harmony, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment.

St. John of Wapping Lodge of Instruction, No. 1306.—A meeting was held at Bro. Mortlock's, the Gun Hotel, High-street, Wapping, on Monday, 18th Nov. Present—Bros. Goldstein answered the usual questions, Lodge was opened in the second degree, and the ceremony of passing was rehearsed by the W.M. Bro. Banks was elected W.M. for ensuing week. Lodge closed in due form and adjourned.

Bagshaw Lodge No. 1457.—A meeting was held on Thursday, 14th inst., at the Princes Hall, Princes road, Buckhurst hill, Essex. Present—Bros. W. Holloway W.M., C. J. Edwards S.W., J. H. Crowther J.W., J. Tanner P.M. Sec., J. Clarkson P.M. Treas., S. Fuller S.D., J. H. Challis J. ., W. H. Mestin I.G., R. W. Goddard Tyler. Past Masters Bros. Whitehead, Smith and D'Oyley, which ceremony was performed in a satisfactory manner. Several motions as to joining members and other business was then gone through, and the Lodge was closed. A supper was afterwards served in the Banqueting Hall, and the customary toasts followed, bringing the evening to a close. The inclemency of the weather induced but a small attendance.

Bootle Lodge, No. 1473.—A meeting was held on Thursday, 7th November, at the Town Hall, Bootle. Bros. J. P.McArthur W.M., W. H. Clemmey S.W., J. C. Paterson J.W., R. A. Hough Secretary, S. E. John Douglass W.M., supported by the following Officers:—C. J. Scales S.W., W. Side J.W., J. Willing P.M. Treas., W. M. Stiles Sec., H. Stiles I.G., G. Clark D. of C., H. Lovegrove W.S., R. T. Kingham I.P.M. The ballot was taken for three gentlemen for initiation, after which Lodge was advanced, and Bro. W. F. Bates was duly raised. Lodge resumed, and Bros. A. Mellon, J. Markie, L. Hollingsworth, D. Morgan, G. F. Hall, and J. Detrax were passed, the latter brother, who was initiated in the Prudent Brethren Lodge, No. 145, receiving the second degree in this Lodge by request of the W.M. of No. 145. Messrs. G. W. Pauley, J. Sheppard, Charles Sheath, Arthur John Thompson, and W. Parker were now introduced, and duly initiated into Freemasonry by the W.M. Bro. Kingham announced his intention to act as Steward for the Boys' School. One proposition for initiation, and one for joining were handed in, and the business of the evening being thus completed, the W.M. closed the Lodge.

Hemming Lodge, No. 1512, Hampton.—The regular monthly meeting of this Lodge took place at the Red Lion Hotel on Thursday last, 21st inst. In the unavoidable absence of the W.M. Bro. C. W. Fox, the chair was taken by Bro. John Hammond P.M. 201, 1512, Provincial Grand Steward Middlesex. The I.P.M.'s chair was ably filled by Bro. D. B. Raw P.M., late Treasurer of the Lodge, Bros. J. C. Jessett and T. W. Ockenden were at their respective posts as Wardens, Bros. E. Hopwood P.M. P.P.G.S.B. Middlesex Treasurer, William Hammond P.M. and W.M. 1656 Secretary, T. C. Walls Deacon, T. Scott and Handel, both of the Wolsey Lodge 1656. The minutes of the installation meeting, 17th October, and emergency meeting 12th November were read and confirmed. Brothers Bartlett, Russell and Axford were advanced to the second degree, and Brother Hanlon was raised to the sublime degree. The ceremonies were excellently rendered by Bro. J. Hammond. The important question of a representative for one of the Metropolitan Charities was brought under the notice of the Lodge, and it was gratifying to find there were several brethren willing to serve as Stewards. The appointment, however, will be definitely made at the next meeting. Apologies for absence were read from the R.W. Prov. G.M. Bro. Colonel Burdett, the W.M., Bros. Hurst, J. W. Hiscox, Kent, and others; the further business of the summons being completed, the Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment. A well supplied supper, carefully prepared by the host (Bro. Murphy), met with ample justice, and the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, the intervals being considerably enlivened by vocal contributions from Bros. Raw, Walls, and W. Hammond. The next meeting will take place on Thursday, 16th January 1879.

Duke of Connaught Lodge of Instruction, No. 1524.—A meeting was held on Wednesday, 20th inst., at the Havelock Tavern, Albion-road, Dalston. Present—Bros. Weige W.M., J. Osborn Sec., Cook S.D., Godolphin J.D., Green I.G. Past Master Bro. Wood; Elliott, Goode, Pelican, Hollidge, Holt, and others. All requirements complied with, Bro. Hollidge was passed. Bro. Hollidge answered the questions leading to the third degree and retired. The Lodge opened in the third degree, and the ceremony of raising was rehearsed, Bro. Godolphin acting as candidate. Bro. Godolphin, of the Friars 1149, and Hollidge, of the mother Lodge, were elected members. Bro. Read will preside at next meeting.

West Middlesex Lodge of Instruction, No. 1611.—At the weekly meeting of this Lodge on the 14th inst., at the Feathers Hotel, Ealing, Present:—Bros. Le Grys W.M., Kanner S.W., Ray J.W., Tucker Treas., Burr Sec., Rickwood S.D., Clarke J.D., Johnson I.G., Beasley P.M., Stephens, Tink Brown, Dyer, Gasson, &c. &c. The Lodge was then called off for refreshment, no smoking or drinking during the ceremonies being now permitted. On resuming, the Treasurer referred to the discussion at the previous meeting in regard to the formation of a Benevolent Fund, and after some conversation a Committee was appointed to prepare Bye-Laws and submit them to the next meeting, when it is hoped there will be a numerous gathering to consider the rules, and to further discuss the question of erecting a Masonic Hall. The Lodge was closed in due form.

F. RATH & Co.'s IMPROVED PATENT GAS BOX IRON.

PERFECTION IN IRONING FOR EVERY SPECIES OF FABRIC.

Great Saving in Expense and Labour.

The price being only 23/, it is the Cheapest Iron in the trade, and can be had at all Ironmongers in the United Kingdom.

F. RATH & Co.'s IMPROVED GAS BOX IRON is extremely simple in the construction, and cannot get out of order; the merit of the invention is, that the heat produced from the burning gas is thrown on to the steel plate which covers the bottom surface, none being allowed to pass off in vain.

Three times the amount of work ordinarily executed can be done by the use of these Irons, which have now been in use in extensive Manufactories long enough to thoroughly prove their merits and evidence their entire success. They are as suitable for Family Use as for the Work-room, the Manufactory, or the Laundry.

THE LONDON MASONIC CHARITY ORGANISATION.

HAD we consulted our own wishes, we should have abstained from offering any remarks on this subject. We do not wish people to think we view with disfavour the scheme now being attempted, because it has emanated from another quarter. Quite eighteen months have elapsed since we gave it our best consideration—the article appeared on the 9th June 1877—and the conclusion we arrived at was not favourable to the establishment in London of an association for voting purposes, such as is to be found in very many of our Provinces. We stated, indeed, at the time that we did not see how our Lodges could be brought together, and that we thought a greater display of energy on the part of the supporters of London candidates would ensure the success of a greater number of the latter. The occasion which induced us to offer these remarks, was a discussion which had taken place some time previously in the Tredegar Lodge of Instruction. Bro. C. Lacey had proposed the establishment of some such association, and Bros. Barnes and Stevens had pointed out that in all the cases they had taken up they had succeeded in carrying their candidates; there having been only one candidate in which success was not achieved at the first attempt. We pointed out that if two brethren, working in combination, had done so much, the efforts of half a dozen were likely to be even more profitably employed, though at the same time anything beyond this, in the way of organised canvassings, would be undesirable, and even impracticable. Since then we have studied the question more minutely. We have been furnished with copies of the regulations of several Provincial Associations of the same character, and the more we examine the matter, the more firmly are we convinced that such an association in London will sooner or later prove a failure. We pointed out that, while a combination of Lodges in this or that Province is a matter of no great difficulty, our Metropolitan Lodges, numbering over two hundred and fifty, "are distributed over an immense district. Assuming it is possible to induce the Lodges east, west, south, and north to combine together, it would be well nigh an impossibility to canvass them." In the Provinces combination is comparatively easy, because the Lodges "are so located as to be come-at-able without much difficulty," and moreover the average number in each Province is about twenty. Again, "A Province is enabled to concentrate its efforts in order to secure the election of one, or, it may be, at the outside, of two of its candidates, whilst the voting strength of London is necessarily distributed among a large number, all presumably of equal merit." Under these circumstances we suggested that if brethren in the locality from which the case emanated bestirred themselves, it was probable that London would have its fair proportion of success, while a combination to carry a certain number of candidates might, in the anxiety to distribute the voting power so as to ensure the success of all, prove fatal to the success of any. That London might do a great deal better we admit. It fared indifferently at the October elections, and may do so again, if its efforts are not guided more skilfully; but when we have it on the authority of two brethren that they have carried every election in which they interested themselves, and all with a single exception at a first attempt, we do not think more is needed in the way of organisation for voting purposes than that other brethren in the metropolis shall bestir themselves with equal energy. It rarely happens that any of our largest and most influential Provinces send up more than three or four candidates, while it is no uncommon thing for London to have as many as fifteen or twenty. It is comparatively an easy task for a Province like East Lancashire to carry one or two candidates. It has several hundred votes for each Institution, and the latest lists of Governors and Subscribers to the two Schools show that at the time they were issued it had seven girls and nineteen boys at Battersea Rise and Wood Green respectively, while London, which contributes about one-half of what is annually raised, had seventy-two girls and fifty-four boys. At the same time London sends up by far the largest number of candidates, and any organised attempt to carry an undue proportion might turn out disastrously. From the fact that Metropolitan Lodges are distributed over so wide an area, from the extreme improbability that east and west, and south and north, will league together, and place their respective votes in the hands of a Committee, and because we believe the well-directed efforts of a few are likelier to succeed than those of a more extensive combination—for these reasons, we should regret to see a permanently established voting organisation in the metropolis.

FREEMASONRY IN MASSACHUSETTS.

THE proceedings of the Grand Lodge of this State in respect of the regular Quarterly Communication on the 11th September, and of three Special Communications, one anterior and two subsequent to that date, have reached us, and accordingly we give them that brief, but fraternal recognition in our columns which all such publications deserve at our hands. The purpose of the first Special Communication in Holbrook, Mass, on the 20th July, was to lay Masonically the foundation stone of a new Town Hall. In the absence of the Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master Bro. Abraham H. Howland jun. presided, and Bro. Tracy P. Cheever was acting Grand Secretary pro tem, in the absence of the Rev. C. Titus, who we regret to say, has since died. The meeting was held, owing to an invitation from the Municipal authorities of Holbrook, and the ceremony appears to have been most imposingly as well as impressively carried out. Bro. Howland, when the ceremony of laying the stone had been completed, delivered an address, and he and his Grand Officers were then conducted to an adjoining building and there entertained at lunch by the brethren of Norfolk Union Lodge. The object of the Special Communication on the 13th September, at which Grand Master Welch presided, was the performance of Masonic funeral services over the body of the late Honourable Frank Welch, Past Grand Master of Nebraska, and in order to participate in this mark of respect to their distinguished brother, several Nebraskan brethren had journeyed to Boston in charge of the remains. These having accordingly been introduced, a procession was formed, and after the religious services had been performed in the First New Jerusalem Church, the body was received by Grand Lodge and conducted to the cemetery, where our Masonic Funeral Service was most impressively rendered by the Grand Master and the acting Grand Chaplain. The other Special Communication, held on 3rd October in the Masonic Temple, Boston, under the presidency of Grand Master Welch, was to pay the last tribute of respect to their deceased Brother John McClellan, who for the long period of seventeen years had held the important office of G. Treasurer. The Lodge Burial Service having been performed, the funeral service was rendered in St. Paul's church, and the body then escorted to the cemetery at Mount Auburn, and there consigned to its last resting place with the customary Masonic rites, the family and relatives of the deceased being present. At the regular Quarterly Communication on the 11th September, Grand Master Welch presided, and was supported numerously by his Grand Officers and the representatives of subordinate Lodges. In the course of the proceedings the Grand Master announced that anticipating his action would be confirmed by Grand Lodge, he had remitted to Memphis, New Orleans, Vicksburg, Jackson, and Port Gibson one hundred dollars each, or a total of five hundred dollars, towards the relief of the sufferers by the yellow fever. On the motion of Past Grand Master Nickerson, the action of the G. Master was confirmed, and a sum of five hundred dollars voted to replace the amounts so forwarded by him. Bro. Sutton in approving of the G.M.'s action, was pleased to add that he would increase the sum thus appropriated by another hundred dollars. With the exception of noting that arrangements were made for Grand Lodge to attend the funeral of Bro. Welch, Past G.M. of Nebraska, as already described, we need add nothing as to the other business which took place, as the interest attached to it is of a purely local character.

THE CONSECRATION OF THE ETHELBERT CHAPTER ROSE CROIX.

THE ANCIENT AND ACCEPTED RITE.

A SPECIAL Meeting of the Supreme Council, 33°, of England, Wales, and the Dependencies of the British Crown, was held at the Masonic Rooms, St. Peter's-street, Canterbury, on Monday, 18th November, for the purpose of perfecting candidates in the 18th degree, and to consecrate a Chapter Rose Croix, under the title of the Ethelbert Chapter, to be held at Canterbury, when the following members of the Supreme Council were present:—Capt. N. G. Philips 33° Lieut. Grand Commander, J. M. P. Montagu 33° Grand Chancellor, Lieut.-Col. Shadwell H. Clerke 33° Grand Secretary General, H. D. Plater No. 1206, Edward Lokey No. 199, and James S. Harris No. 1209.

The Consecration and Dedication of the Ethelbert Chapter was then proceeded with. The brethren having assembled in the Hall, and formed the Arch of Steel—the Supreme Council 33° entered in order. The Lieutenant Grand Commander (Capt. N. G. Philips) assumed his seat, and the Warrant of the Ethelbert Chapter having been read, he gave the Declaration of Constitution, and Consecration and Dedication Address, and the Grand Marshal proclaimed that the Chapter had been consecrated.

The Ceremony of Installation then followed. Illustrious Bro. R. Joynes Emmerson 30°, Most Wise Sovereign Designate, was presented, and very ably and impressively installed by Lieut.-Col. Shadwell Clerke 33° Grand Secretary General; after which the Most Worshipful Sovereign appointed and invested the Officers of the Chapter:—Rev. T. Branfill Harrison High Prelate, Lieut. Alex. H. Dee Barres First General, Horatio Ward Second General, James D. Terson Grand Marshal, Arthur C. Plater Raphael, Charles Eaton Herald, Francis F. Giraud Captain of the Guard, Richard Harrison jun. Recorder, George Page Director of Ceremonies, John Wilson Outer Guard.

Bro. Herbert T. Sankey was unanimously elected Treasurer of the Chapter.

The Most Wise Sovereign then expressed the acknowledgements of the Chapter to the Illustrious Brethren present, members of Supreme Council, for the honour conferred in their attending to consecrate the Chapter, and a proposal that a vote of thanks be entered upon the minutes, and that for their excellent and valuable services they be elected honorary members, was carried by acclamation. Also that the thanks of the Chapter be given to Illustrious Bros. S. Rawson 32°, Lieut.-Col. Somerville Burney 32°, Dr. W. Deamer 30°, and Professor E. M. Lott 30°, for their services in assisting in the ceremony of consecration, and that they be elected honorary members of the Chapter.

A committee was next appointed to draw up the Bye Laws; and propositions were made for reception of candidates at the next meeting of the Chapter. The ceremony was then concluded. All business being done, the Chapter was closed in due form. After which the brethren adjourned to the Fleur-de-lis Hotel, where the members of the Supreme Council, the visitors and members of the Chapter, numbering thirty-three, were hospitably entertained at a handsome banquet by the Most Wise Sovereign Illustrious Bro. R. Joynes Emmerson 30°, and where the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed.

The Lieut. Grand Commander, in returning thanks for the health of the Supreme Council, congratulated the Chapter on the very admirable way in which it had been fitted up, and in the excellency of all the arrangements; results which were chiefly attributable to the skill and energy of the Most Wise Sovereign, and of Bro. Horatio Ward 18°, one of its founders.

CONSECRATION OF THE CASTLEMARTIN LODGE, No. 1748.

INSTALLATION OF THE WORSHIPFUL MASTER.

UNDER the genial reign of the present Provincial Grand Master South Wales Western Division, Bro. Col. Lloyd Philipps, and his worthy Deputy, Bro. Lord Kensington, M.P., Freemasonry is making progress in the Western Counties, and this progress is not confined to an increase in the number of those belonging to the various Lodges, but the members of the Craft in the Western Counties of South Wales are awaking to their duties in supporting the Charities, which are the glory of our Order. It is not long since Bro. J. Beavan Philipps took up the onerous duty of Steward for the Boys' School; although he only received proper encouragement from the members of his own Lodge, he still held on, and took up a fair sum, when the condition of the Province is considered. The following year he not less successfully advocated the claims of the Girls' School, and he has been worthily and successfully followed in the good work by Bro. Aaron Stone, a brother whom to know is to admire, while he in turn is followed by earnest and serious Bro. Margrave, who this year is working for the "Old Folks." But it is not to chronicle the doings of these brethren that we write, it is simply to place on record that if they found a little difficulty in stirring up the men of Pembrokeshire at first, these latter brethren are now pushing forward; they give their subscriptions, and not content with that, they open Chapters, for was not the Hwlferdd recently consecrated at Haverfordwest? Have not the Tenby brethren obtained a Charter to open another at that delightful watering place? And on Thursday, the 21st, Bro. Col. Lloyd Philipps had the pleasure, assisted by Bro. Lord Kensington, his Deputy, of consecrating the Castlemartin Lodge. The day was delightfully fine, and brought a large number of brethren into the pleasant old town of Pembroke, which, in the neighbourhood of the Assembly Rooms, where it is intended to hold the Lodge until a building of their own is built, was gaily decorated with banners. At the hour of twelve the brethren assembled, and those who were not members of Provincial Grand Lodge entered the Lodge room, when Lodge was opened by Bro. Edwin Thomas, Worshipful Master of the Loyal Welsh Lodge, held at Pembroke Dock, in the same borough, but separated by about a mile from Pembroke. The Prov. Dir. Cer. having marshalled the Prov. G. Officers, the Prov. G. Tyler announced the Provincial Grand Master and his Deputy and Officers, who were received in proper form, by those in the Lodge. The chair was taken by Bro. Col. Philipps Prov. G.M., supported by his deputy Bro. Lord Kensington D. Prov. G.M., Bros. W. J. Morgan Prov. S.G.W., Howell Davies Prov. J.G.W., J. Jenkyn Jones Prov. S.G.D., and a very large number of other Provincial Grand Officers Past and Present. Bro. Szlumper P. Prov. S.G.W., in the unavoidable absence of Bro. E. Hamer Prov. G. Sec., having read the warrant of the new Lodge, the Prov. G.M. directed his Deputy to withdraw with the W.M. designate to prove his fitness for the office. Bro. Kensington having declared Bro. the Rev. D. Bowen duly qualified, the Prov. G.M. consecrated the Lodge in ancient form. He then proceeded with the installation of Bro. the Rev. D. Bowen as the first W.M. of the Castlemartin Lodge. In the course of the ceremony the Prov. G.M. took the opportunity of remarking that this was the first time he had had the pleasure of installing the first W.M. of a Lodge in his Province, and he very cordially wished the Castlemartin Lodge a prosperous career, and the W. Master a happy year of office. Bro. Bowen having been duly saluted in the three established degrees, and addressed by the Installing Officer, then appointed Bros. John A. P. Adams S.W., W. Murray J.W., R. Millar Sec., Ward Davis S.D., R. George J.D., J. W. Penny I.G. The brethren unanimously appointed Bro. R. E. Morgan Treasurer, who was duly invested by the W.M. Bro. G. Tracy was appointed Tyler. Several nominations were made, and the congratulations of a very large number of visitors were showered upon the new W.M., with the best wishes of all present, Nothing further having been proposed, the Lodge was closed. There was a dinner afterwards, at the Lion, capitally served by the host and hostess, to which about ninety brethren sat down, and where brotherly love and kindness prevailed until the breaking-up, caused by the departure by train of the Prov. G.M. and his Officers. It transpired during the day that a charter had been granted about forty years ago to another Castlemartin Lodge, but this, for some reason, had never been consecrated. Many were the warm wishes expressed that the present Castlemartin should be as long-lived and prosperous as the former was premature and unfortunate.

BRO. WOOLF LYONS, a well-known inhabitant of Margate, died suddenly of heart disease on Saturday, 16th November, at his residence, 4 King-street, Margate. He was initiated into Freemasonry by his friend, Bro. John Thomas Moss P.P.G.R. Middlesex, at the Lebanon Lodge, No. 1326, Hampton, Middlesex, on 15th February 1872, and continued a subscribing member to his death. He steadily refused all solicitations to take office in the Lodge. However, he did good suit and service last July by representing the Lodge as its Steward at the Boys' School, and making himself a Life Governor of that noble Institution. He was a popular brother, and was well liked by all who knew him. He leaves a widow to deplore his loss. He was about to serve as Steward to all the Masonic Charities, and become a Life Governor of each. He was buried in London. A large circle of relatives and friends were there to pay their last sad respect to him.

CONSECRATION OF THE LANDPORT LODGE AT PORTSMOUTH.

IN the presence of a large number of the members of the ancient Craft, the interesting ceremony of the constitution of this Lodge, and the installation of the W.M. Bro. Richard J. Murrell, was performed on Wednesday, 20th inst., at the Masonic Hall, Highbury-street, Portsmouth, which had been kindly lent for the occasion by the Portsmouth Lodge. The brethren assembled in the spacious Lodge at 2.30, and shortly afterwards the R.W. Provincial Grand Master Bro. W. W. B. Beach, M.P., with the Deputy Provincial Grand Master Bro. W. Hickman, and other Grand Officers past and present took their seats on the dais, Bro. H. M. Emanuel P. Provincial G.S. Warden being appointed to the Senior Warden's chair, and Bro. Dr. Wilks, of Ryde, Provincial G. J. Warden, taking the other chair. The Lodge having been duly opened, the P.G.M. said they were met together on a most interesting occasion, and he availed himself with great pleasure of the opportunity of attending, because it was not the first or second time that he had had the honour of being in Portsmouth for a similar purpose. Before he had the privilege of presiding over that province he was called upon by the late Admiral Sir Lucius Curtis to assist him in constituting a Lodge in this locality, and he had also then been entrusted with the power of conducting the ceremony. Since he had been P.G.M. he had also had the gratification of constituting a new Lodge in the town of Portsmouth, and he was glad to be able to say that both Lodges were thriving and flourishing. He had, therefore, unusual pleasure in attending to constitute another Lodge, which he had little doubt would flourish in a similar manner. He knew full well that Portsmouth was a large and important focus for Freemasonry. The energy and ability of Freemasons in this town were so great that they naturally felt that there was further scope needed for the exercise of those qualities, and as their numbers increased from time to time it necessarily followed that new Lodges should be required. It was always gratifying to a Provincial Grand Master to constitute a new Lodge, especially one which he was convinced would be properly and efficiently supported. In the present day, as in the past, it should be the aim of brethren to do all that lay in their power to support a Lodge after it had been constituted. That was best done by holding fast to the principles of their Order, and not by adopting principles disassociated from the past, or by thinking that through their own exertions they could introduce some new system of Freemasonry. That had recently been done in another country, to the great sorrow of those who had been Freemasons for a long time, and who loved and revered the traditions of the past. He strongly deprecated tampering with the fixed principles of the Craft, and the introduction of innovations. This would be a rash proceeding, and one which could not commend itself to them. Those Freemasons who were assisting in the foundation of a new Lodge had a serious duty to perform, and they should deliberately consider what were the leading principles of Freemasonry, take them to heart, and put them into practice with the greatest sincerity and energy. He commended to them, in the first place, reverence for the Great Architect of the Universe, and in the next place, unity and brotherly love, based upon that principle of charity which exists to such a great extent in their institution. Charity, they were told, consisted not merely in relieving distress or in assisting the widow, the orphan, or the aged in their time of need, but also in that spirit of brotherly love pervading all their relations in life and assisting them to become better members of society. Such, he trusted, would be the principles that would govern all their public and private relations in life. The Prov. G. Secretary Bro. J. E. Le Feuvre then read the petition and warrant for the new Lodge; and an oration upon the nature and design of Freemasonry was delivered by the Prov. G. Chaplain the Rev. S. Scott. The ceremony was afterwards proceeded with, Bro. Pillow presiding at the harmonium, and the consecration hymn being "Great source of Light and Life." The imposing ceremony completed, the P.G.M. installed Bro. R. J. Murrell as W.M. The W.M. then appointed Bros. John Clark S.W., C. G. Adames J.W., E. S. Main P.M. Secretary, J. Lillywhite P.M. Treasurer, and G. A. Green P.M. Director of Ceremonies. In the course of the proceedings the P.G.M. said that they were reminded of the uncertainty of life by the fact that one of the founders of the Lodge, Bro. E. G. Holbrook, had departed from amongst them. The P.G.M. added that he was a most respected brother, not only amongst the Masons of Portsmouth, but also in the Provincial Grand Lodge, where he had held office; and it was a source of deep regret to them that he had gone from amongst them. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the P.G.M. for his kindness in attending, and for the ability with which he had conducted the ceremony.

In honour of the event the W.M. of the new Lodge, Bro. R. J. Murrell, entertained the Prov. G.M., the Provincial Officers, and a number of the brethren at a banquet, which was served in the hall under the Lodge. The catering was entrusted to Bro. George Bond P.M., by whom an excellent bill of fare was provided, the wines being also of the first quality. The "founder of the feast," Bro. R. J. Murrell, occupied the chair, and the vice chairs were filled by Bros. Clark and Adames.

The chairman in submitting the toast of the Queen and the Craft, said that in assemblies of good and true-born Englishmen the toast was one which required very few words to commend it. When he spoke of their beloved Sovereign, the mother of their Grand Master, it was a name they all revered, for during her reign of many years this country had been prosperous and happy. The Chairman next proposed the Most Worshipful Grand Master H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. Knowing the interest which his Royal Highness manifested in their Ancient Order, the toast required few words by way of introduction. While they hoped that the day might be far distant when the Prince of Wales would be called upon to rule over this country, they knew that when that time came he would do his duty to their satisfaction. (Applause.) The Chairman afterwards gave the R.W. the P.G.M. of Hampshire and the Isle of Wight Bro. W. W.

B. Beach, M.P., Constituting and Installing Officer, and the V.W. the D.P.G.M. Bro. Hickman, and the Officers of P.G. Lodge past and present. He regretted that the P.G.M. had been obliged to leave in order to catch a train, and expressed his obligations to him for his kindness, and also to the Officers in coming there to constitute the Lodge. The toast was received with great enthusiasm. The D.P.G.M in response, said that it had afforded the P.G.M. considerable pleasure to constitute the new Lodge under such auspicious circumstances. Indeed he (the D.P.G.M.) did not remember any Lodge which had been constituted with such favourable prospects, and the gratification felt by the P.G.M. was therefore shared by every brother present. (Hear, hear). The P.G.M. had been confined to his house through indisposition, and that had been the first time he had left it on any business purpose for some time past. It must have given an exceptional degree of pleasure to the P.G.M. to have added to the number of his Lodges in the province one that came into working under such circumstances as did Lodge 1776. The province was steadily increasing, not only in the number of its Lodges, but in the number and importance of the brethren; and he trusted that satisfactory state of things would long continue. He hoped and believed that the new Lodge would work in harmony and in the true spirit of Masonry with the Lodges in the neighbourhood, as well as with those of the Province generally. It was a great happiness to him to be able to come among the brethren in that district, for he had had experience in past times of their uniform kindness towards those in positions of authority, which might at times be accompanied with a certain amount of anxiety to fulfil their duties in a way not only beneficial to the Craft, but acceptable to the brethren in their particular province. He felt satisfied that the W.M. would have a happy year of office, heartily wished every success to the Lodge, and, in conclusion, expressed his belief that the W.M., at the end of his term of office, would receive the congratulations of the brethren, as he most heartily deserved them. (Applause). Bro. J. E. Le Feuvre, P.G.S., replying for the Provincial Officers, expressed obligations to the W.M. for the magnificent entertainment he had provided. For years past Portsmouth had been pre-eminent in its devotion to Masonic principles, which he hoped were not confined within the four walls of the Lodge, but were, to the best of their ability, extended outside. In a short time that would not be the junior Lodge, for one was about to be constituted in Southampton, and it would be very gratifying to the Southampton brethren who were present to have the Portsmouth brethren with them on the 12th of December, to assist them in carrying out those fraternal feelings which they were associated together to promote. The W.M. was well known in Portsmouth for his ability in another Lodge, and the higher rank he had assumed would afford gratification to the brethren over whom he presided. Bro. Murrell would prove a useful addition to the long and honourable list of Masters and Past Masters, and he was proud to be the mouthpiece of the Provincial Officers in wishing him a prosperous year of office, and in hoping that the new Lodge might succeed, even beyond their expectations, in disseminating the principles of brotherly love, relief, and truth. (Applause.) The Mayor of Portsmouth Bro. W. D. King, who was received with great cordiality, said that he was very pleased to be present that evening and regarded that first meeting of the new Lodge as a happy augury of a number of pleasant reunions. He proposed the toast, the Worshipful Master Bro. R. J. Murrell, and success to the Lodge (Applause), expressing his conviction that the W.M. would occupy his position in a dignified yet humble spirit—dignified, in that he would maintain order in the Lodge, and humble, in that he would be always ready to receive advice from his seniors. The toast did not need many words to commend it to their hearty approval, especially to those who knew Bro. Murrell as intimately as he did. He was a sterling friend and possessed great energy, and he had no doubt that those brethren who had been the means of inaugurating the Landport Lodge had selected him as the most fitting brother in the town to fill the important position, because they knew that if he took a thing into his head he would carry it out. He was sure that Bro. Murrell would retire into the Past Master's chair with all the honour and credit that would most certainly be his due. (Loud applause.) The chairman made a feeling response, trusting that the Lodge would work harmoniously, prove a centre of Masonry, and extend its beneficent influence far and wide. The other toasts were the W.M.'s and representatives of neighbouring Lodges; the Visitors; the Officers of the Lodge; and the Tyler's toast. During the evening some capital harmony was contributed by several of the brethren.

The Provincial Grand Master was attended by the following Prov. Grand Officers:—Bros. W. Hickman 130 D.P.G.M., Dr. A. Platt Wilks P.M. 698 G.J.W., Rev. W. Scott 394 P.G. Chaplain, G. Dymot P.M. 394 P.G. Reg., M. E. Frost P.M. 487 and 1069 P.G. Treasurer, J. E. Le Feuvre 130 P.G. Secretary, J. Harrison P.M. 804 P.G. Superintendent of Works, G. Bond P.M. 487 P.G. Sword Bearer, G. Pack W.M. 175, and J. Whale P.M. 309 P.G. Sts., J. Excell Tyler.

On Thursday evening the first regular meeting of the new Lodge was held, under the presidency of Bro. Murrell, when the usual routine business was discussed, and numerous propositions for initiation and joining were made.—Portsmouth Times and Naval Gazette.

La Tolerance Lodge of Instruction, No. 538, has removed from the Horse and Groom, Winsley-street, Oxford-street, to the Green Dragon, 2 Maddox-street, Regent-street, where the members have secured very commodious and comfortable quarters.

Special Advent Services will be held at St. Anne's Church, Soho. Bach's "Magnificat and My Spirit was in heaviness," will be sung, with orchestral accompaniments, under the direction of Mr. Barnby, on Friday, 6th, 13th, and 20th December, at 8 o'clock. "CHARITY;" IS IT "GIVING?"

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In reply to the strictures of "A MASONIC ENTHUSIAST," on my letter to you under this heading I can assure him that I neither was, nor am, desirous, either "in haste" or at all, sure, to "demolish your series of correspondents," or any one of them. On a subject so important as that under discussion, I am gratified at seeing so many brethren communicating their views and notions, and while claiming the free expression of my own opinions, I am fully prepared to accord a respectful consideration to those of others with whom I fail to agree. The fault I ventured to find with "A MASONIC ENTHUSIAST"—and with the large number of whom I cannot help accepting him as a type—was, not that he absolutely ignored Masonic Charity, but that he placed it on a level much lower than that of charity in connection with the popular world. This I gathered from his previous letter, and his second only confirms the impression I formed. He says that no one in his Province experiences greater pleasure than himself in subscribing his annual mite to the Masonic Charities; and, lower down, he gives it as his opinion that this is as acceptable to the G.A.O.T.U. as the hundred guineas of the brother of large wealth. Now, surely that unfortunate "widow's mite" has been made to do duty long enough. I should like to know on how many occasions it has been tendered in lieu of sterling coin; how many times it has been quoted, and pleaded in justification of the most limited exercise of practical benevolence? But, apart from this, I contend that your correspondent proves my case; that there is a very large class in Freemasonry which regards every other charitable claim as paramount to that of Masonic Charity—the outer world first, Masonry next—whereas I, and those who think and feel with me, reverse the order. I do so for this, to me, extremely simple and cogent reason—I became a Mason voluntarily; in the earliest stage, I was informed, in plain terms, what I ought, and ought not, to expect, and was closely examined as to the motive by which I was actuated. I was then told that above all other virtues there was that of Charity; that the rich abounded in the Craft, but that there were also many who were reduced to a state of poverty and misfortune, and that in their behalf appeals would be made, &c. Pleading inability, I made certain promises, which I have ever since felt bound to do what in me lies to fulfil them—to what extent is a question to settle with my own conscience, as it is for every brother Mason. Of course, no one is called upon or expected to do anything that may prove detrimental to himself or connections, or more than his circumstances in life may fairly warrant. The little I have been enabled to do has been the result of my having always regarded, as a Mason, all other charitable claims as subservient to those of Masonry, and I continue to do so. Herein is the point of contention between the class of which I am one, and that class with which "A MASONIC ENTHUSIAST" associates himself, and it may be that these will go on in parallel lines with no possibility of ever meeting.

My ability to discuss this question impartially shall be matter of opinion, but I altogether demur to the statement that my point of view is necessarily very different from nearly all the rest of the Craft. My experience has fortunately proved that I can claim the concurrence of a very large minority at all events, and I hope to live to see this minority converted into a majority. I conceive it to be my duty to enlist support by all legitimate means, from every quarter to which I have the privilege of appealing, and no less my duty fairly and dispassionately to combat the arguments of those who do not give themselves, and who, by example may influence others.

Whether St. Paul was a "brother" or not I have not the slightest idea, but that he was eminently cute and practical is proved by his "dictum" as quoted by your correspondent, to the general applicability of which I have no possible objection.

"Big Stewards' Lists" are most desirable, and I believe are attainable without peril, such as that pointed at. May their realisation be a dominant idea amongst energetic brethren, both Metropolitan and Provincial.

If Charity begins at home, there is no reason why it should end there, and I applaud those who, while they possess the means, extend their bounty to others not so fortunately situated as themselves. Should unforeseen adversity overtake them, they are not to be censured for the generosity they exhibited in happier and more prosperous days, and in such instances as alluded to by "A MASONIC ENTHUSIAST," more ready sympathy and assistance will be forthcoming than in the cases of those who, resolutely setting their faces against appeals, when it was in their power to contribute, may by accident or misfortune be placed on the lowest spoke of Fortune's wheel, and compelled to seek aid from the very Institutions the claims of which they never recognised. Many such cases have occurred within my own personal knowledge!

As to the prominent instance adduced of a Brother "enjoying a comfortable life income of a £1,000 per annum, possessing more than one Charity jewel" (there must be some mistake here), "leaving his family almost wholly unprovided for, they having to seek Masonic assistance," I should like to know to what extent Masonry is to be held responsible for a state of things so deplorable. The services necessary for the attainment of a Charity jewel and Bars would not involve an outlay that could be considered as approaching extravagance in a man with an income of £1,000 per annum.

To the question "Charity; is it Giving?" I emphatically answer "Yes." Most certainly there is a Charity apart from giving, but that sublime attribute we are not discussing. To answer the question in the negative would be destructive of all efforts to mitigate the effects of that evil which we are told shall never cease out of the land, and which when endured by Masons must be relieved by the aid of Masons!

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

FREDERICK BINCKES.

25th November 1878.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—"OLD FILE," in issue of CHRONICLE for 23rd November, says he thinks Bro. Godtschalk is wrong in assuming that Bro. Radclyffe had suggested compulsion in reference to subscriptions to the Charities.

'Tis a pity "OLD FILE" only thinks when, with a little more trouble, he might be assured.

A sentence placed between inverted commas should mean a quotation. The words quoted by me in CHRONICLE were so placed, the full text of this quotation is as follows:—"Would it not be an easy matter to compel every Lodge to subscribe, say, one-third of their subscriptions." The original of this quotation, here rendered verbatim, can be seen in Bro. Radclyffe's letter in CHRONICLE of 26th October last, and which "OLD FILE" evidently has overlooked. However, he will find it under the head of "Correspondence," and will then, I hope, admit, in this matter, nothing has been assumed.

"OLD FILE" refers to another portion of my letter, in which attention is called to cases I mildly termed undeserving; but this he is pleased to describe as a serious allegation against the General Committee.

I take the facts to be these; then point to another little error that, in some unaccountable manner, has crept into "OLD FILE'S" letter—Provided the petition of a candidate for one of the Charities is in accordance with the laws of the Institution; that it is in every way regular, vouched for and signed, the General Committees do not specially investigate each case on its merits. This function they possess, doubtless; but to exercise the power would be an endless, unthankful, and impossible task.

The real executive is the Secretary of the Institution. He it is who would act and promptly take steps to have a case removed should falsehood or unworthy motives be detected after a petition had been accepted, or he would cause it to be removed from the list, even after the election, if such was the case. But the undeserving cases I referred to were not of this class, but cases in which the mischief is done before the petition reaches the General Committees, by the injudicious action of those who first get up the petition and bring the case forward, irrespective of whether the candidate stands in need of the aid of the Charity, but simply because they happen to be qualified, and that to get on the Fund, or into the Schools would be so much gained, and this possibly to the detriment and exclusion of the really deserving and sometimes nearly penniless who happen to be without influence or friends.

It is to the former class reference is made, as the undeserving cases. To no neglect of the General Committee or the Secretaries—they are wholly blameless. How is it possible for them to judge of individual merit? Cases coming as they do, not only from the United Kingdom, but from all parts of the world. To give some idea of the watchful care of the Secretaries of the Institutions, that no case gets elected or placed on the lists if misstatements or falsehoods in a petition can be detected, I here relate the circumstances of a case which came under my own knowledge.

A petition had been sent up for the Benvolent Fund. It appeared all regular, and was duly signed, &c., &c. It passed the General Committee, and the petitioner was placed on the list. The usual election was approaching; in fact, so close was it, that voting papers had been sent to the Secretary's office filled in for this candidate, and signed for polling; when it came to the knowledge of the Secretary of the Institution, that this candidate was in receipt of a Government pension far exceeding in amount the annuity sought, and that the petition which had been accepted in good faith by the General Committee contained a gross falsehood. The Secretary promptly and thoroughly investigated the matter, and found the petitioner had been for some time, and was then, in receipt of a pension largely in excess of the annuity, rendering this person ineligible as a candidate. I need scarcely say, the Secretary at once took steps to remove the case from the list. Now, say the candidate was ignorant of the law of the Institution that declares an applicant must not be in possession of an amount of more than a given sum to be eligible for the fund, what are we to think of the brethren, the friends of the candidate who got up the case and forwarded the petition. They surely knew the particulars as to the position in life of the petitioner. Their own status in Masonry necessitated the knowledge on their part of the law of the Institution,—that a person in receipt of a certain sum per annum could not be eligible for the annuity. Had this case not been detected, the candidate would in all probability (from the influence at work) have been elected, and would have received the annuity at the expense of perhaps some poor and deserving candidate to whom it might mean the annuity or absolute want. Comment is superfluous; but the facts I vouch for. I am, however, charitable enough to believe cases of the character described do not often occur. My allusion, therefore, to undeserving cases getting elected to one or other of the Institutions has nothing to do with the General Committees or the Secretaries. The onus is not with them, but with those injudicious brethren who get up petitions for wrong candidates; those who from social position could do without the aid of the Charity, but from influence or clamour get to the front, whilst the really deserving in some cases go to the wall.

Yours fraternally,

CHARLES GODTSCHALK,

P.M. 70 and 1255.

CHARITY STEWARDS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am at a loss to understand why the above could not be reduced to one guinea, charging the brother who acts as Steward for his dinner, the same as any other visitor. Thus reducing his expenses, and, in the case of provincial brethren unable to attend, doing away with the feeling that they were wasting money. I believe if our three worthy Secretaries were to take this into consideration they would find more brethren anxious to represent their Lodges.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

WM. C. PARSONS P.M. 180.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Excuse me again trespassing on your valuable space, but I am sure you will give me the opportunity of removing what appears to be a misunderstanding on "OLD FILE'S" part. I had no wish or intention to limit the subscriptions of all Masons to a standard,—as there are many better able to give 100 guineas than others to spare one. I wished it to be understood how small a sum would be required from each, and that it should be every Mason's duty before "refreshment" to consider it a virtue to give, according to his ability, and to recollect that "a Mason's Charity" should know no bounds, save those of prudence. Nor do I wish to exclude poorer brethren from the honors of G. Lodge rank, this is not my intention, as I should regret to see a Mason's worth measured by the length of his pocket. I simply suggested—if Grand Lodges were to take the services rendered into consideration, it would be an inducement for many poorer brethren to serve; as, although poor, much good is done by working. No brother should decline undertaking the task of seeking to induce others to give, because he is not able to head his list with a round sum. I have frequently observed that the best lists come from the poorer brethren, who, knowing their own inability, make up for the deficiency by hard work, and inducing others to give. I think the good these brethren do, by making the wants of the Institutions known to many, far greater than the Steward who serves and simply gives sufficient to qualify himself as a Life Governor. I point this out here, as I intended all my remarks should tend to show that no Mason need shirk the duties of Steward on the ground of expense; what he is unable personally to give, he may make up for by inducing others to do. I am afraid I have not succeeded in pointing out my intentions so clearly as "OLD FILE'S" letter leads me to desire; I thank him for his friendly remarks, and I would ask "A MASONIC ENTHUSIAST" to peruse these remarks of "OLD FILE."

Apologising for this encroachment on your space,

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

DICK RADCLYFFE.

23rd November 1878.

AN "OFF" NIGHT AT THE TRANQUILLITY LODGE, No. 185.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In your report of the meeting of this Lodge on the 18th instant, it is stated that the frugality of the supper would have rejoiced the hearts of Bro. Dick Radclyffe, "UNION JACK," "OLD FILE," and the rest, who hold "that Masonic Charities would best be served and supported by impracticable self denial and a policy in Lodge arrangements calculated to hinder Masonic human nature from being occasionally made glad by the enjoyment of the good things which a gracious Providence in His goodness and mercy has deemed fit to bestow on His but too frail and erring creatures." I leave Bro. Dick Radclyffe and "UNION JACK" to speak for themselves, but, as far as I am personally concerned, I must repudiate any such notion as that hinted at in the above quotation. On the contrary, I am convinced it is man's duty to enjoy the good things which Providence has deigned to bestow on his creatures. In a letter you did me the honour to publish in your columns of the 19th October, I wrote:—"I rejoice to say I am very partial to good living. I should be a fool if I were not. I hold that the good things of this life which a benign Providence has bestowed upon us should be enjoyed, and enjoyed freely—though not to excess—as well as thankfully." Herein lies the gist of the whole matter. In that letter I had been criticising three balance sheets sent you by "UNION JACK" for publication, the result being that I found £650 had been spent in "Refreshment, &c." and £20 in Charity. Well, supposing the three Lodges had limited their expenditure under the former head to about two-thirds of their receipts from all sources, I can hardly imagine they would have enjoyed themselves less, while there would have been £150 available for our Institutions or for other Charitable purposes. There was nothing mean, or of which I need have any reason to be ashamed,

Digitized by Google

..when I drew attention to the huge disproportion between £650 spent in feasting and merrymaking, and £20 voted for Charitable purposes. Any attempt to deprive Freemasonry of its festive character would be a capital mistake, and would do incalculable injury, but let the festivity be kept within modest limits, instead of absorbing all, or nearly all, our Lodge Funds, as would seem to have been the case in the three Lodges whose balance sheets I criticised.

It is not a little amusing that while your report speaks of the "frugality" of the supper, the Sunday Times reporter remarks that those who remained to partake of it, had no reason to complain, "as the 'off' night at the Tranquillity would be esteemed a 'gala' night at many of our Masonic gatherings." However, it is satisfactory to know the brethren enjoyed themselves, and as Tranquillity has a considerable Benevolent Fund of its own, I for one begrudge them nothing.

Fraternally yours,

OLD FILE.

GRAND MARK LODGE.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—There are two subjects to be brought forward at the meeting of the Grand Mark Lodge, on Tuesday next, which have attracted a good deal of notice, and I ask a small space to remark on them.

The proposed alteration in clause 63 of the Book of Constitutions will, I am sure, act prejudicially upon the Order. At present we are almost certain of a good class of men to rule over our Mark Lodges, and we feel that this is especially necessary in an Order which has not the status of the Craft, and of some other Masonic degrees. The proposed alteration, to do away with the qualification of a candidate for the Chair, having previously been installed Master in a Craft Lodge, if carried out, will open the door to a worse qualified set of brethren to fill the Mark Chair. Observation convinces me that if the "Recommendation (a)" is confirmed, we shall soon have brethren ruling some of our Mark Lodges who would never be elected to the chair of a Craft Lodge, simply because Masons, as a rule, think the Mark Degree comparatively of no moment. This will be a fatal mistake on the part of our rulers, who should do all in their power to elevate, or at least maintain, the ground we hold.

The other proposed step to which I take exception is the plain for establishing an Educational Fund for the children of necessitous Mark Masons. We are told that this is not for the purpose of aiding "indigent" brethren. For whom then? It seems to me that this will be pauperizing the Order. If a brother is so needy as to be unable to pay for his children's education, at such a time as this, when excellent educations can be procured throughout the length and breadth of England for merely nominal payments, I do not think he ought to have indulged in the expense of taking the degree. Would it not be better to expend the money in establishing foundations or scholarships at one or both of the Universities, or even book prizes, open for competition to boys in the Masonic Schools, who are sons of Mark Masons?

I am sorry to be unable to attend Grand Lodge on Tuesday, where I should have been glad to have heard these questions discussed, but I do hope nothing will be done in haste, especially as regards the alteration of Constitutions.

I am, yours fraternally,

27th Nov. 1878. A MARK W.M.

LORD CARNARVON'S MARRIAGE.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The approaching marriage of our Pro Grand Master having been announced in the papers, would it not be well to take steps to enable the Craft to present to his Lordship some tangible token of their high appreciation of his services? I would, with all deference, suggest that a list be opened with a subscription limited to 5s, so as to bring it within the means of every brother on the Roll, and that the result be expended in the purchase of a piece of plate, of suitable design, to be presented to our Pro Grand Master in open Grand Lodge, or at a special banquet in his honour.

I am, yours fraternally,

T. B. W.

CAPPER LODGE, No. 1076.

THE installation meeting of this Lodge was held on the 14th ult., at "The Marine Hotel," Tidal Basin, Victoria Docks. The Lodge was opened shortly after 2 p.m. by Bros. J. White W.M., P. Brien S.W. W.M. Elect, P. McCarthy J.W., B. Brayshaw P.M. Treas., J. Mitchell Hon. Sec., H. Taplay S.D., J. T. K. Job J.D., W. Dorton I.G., M. Sherwin Organist; also Bro. E. West P.M., Holliday P.M., and numerous brethren. The minutes of the last Lodge meeting were read and confirmed. A committee was elected for the Benevolent Fund of the Lodge. Bro. P. Brien, W.M. Elect, having been presented by Bro. J. Dorton I.P.M. to the W. M. J. White, for the benefit of Installation, was installed into the chair of K.S. in a very able and impressive manner. On the return of the brethren the W.M. invested as his Officers Bros. J. White I.P.M., P. McCarthy S.W., H. Taplay J.W., B. Brayshaw P.M. Treas., J. Mitchell Hon. Sec., J. T. K. Job S.D., W. Dorton J.D., P. Nevins I.G., A. Mann D.C., R. Brown and W. Harvey W. Stewards, and M. Sherwin Org. The W.M. then, in appropriate terms, presented the I.P.M. Bro. White with a P.M.'s jewel. Bro. White briefly thanked the brethren. Bro. White announced his intention of acting as Steward. He spoke as follows:—Worshipful Master and Brethren,—"For the good of Freemasonry in general and this Lodge in particular" I would like to say something about this Lodge becoming a Vice-President of the Aged Freemasons' Charity. I would like each brother to give me 7s 6d between this and February; 2s 6d this month, 2s 6d next month, 2s 6d in January, or the whole amount now, or a promise to pay this small sum. Brethren, this Lodge can become V.P. of the R.M.B. Institution. Reflect on this; for 7s 6d either of you who might require them would have ten votes, whereas, for a member to get two votes only it would cost five pounds. Ten votes every year at the disposal of this Lodge! Brethren, you remember my speaking to you and asking you for your votes and interest on behalf of the child of Mrs. Priestley. How many votes do you think I obtained from this Lodge? Two from our W.M., and one from our J.W.; only three votes from this large Lodge! I know that P.M. Holliday is a thrice-told Governor; that P.M. Dorton is the same; that the wife of one of our P.M.'s gave five pounds for a Life Governorship. Now, I joined the London Masonic Charity Association, to further Mrs. Priestley's child's case. After I had laid it before the committee I noted that a brother on my left stated that, although pledged to support the Committee's "last chance" selections, still, he could not give up some 300 votes he wielded. On this he was assured his case should be carried at the next election if he lent those votes. Now, brethren, what votes could I promise? None. At the Board of Benevolence there is no case comes before it but the question crops up, "What has the applicant done for our Charities?" You may be sure that there is a considerable difference made between the one who has done something and the one who has done nothing. Now, I want you, not only to give me these three half-crowns, but to give me one each quarter-day until such time as this Lodge is V.P. of each of our great Charities. Only think, brethren, that there are nearly 1,800 Lodges, and of these Lodges and Chapters but 200 rank as V.P.'s. In four years we should have cleared off the three Institutions, and by that time I venture to think we should count our Life Governors by the score. Your good example may ultimately be followed by other Lodges; in fact, a V.P.'s Wing to the Royal Benevolent Institution might be the result of such an effort; and the time may come when the candidates for our Order might qualify for the "three degrees" more fully by taking up three Life-Governorships. The effort can hardly be elevated into a sacrifice, the sum being so trifling; yet how noble the result! Lodge was then closed, and the brethren repaired to the Milk-street Restaurant, Cheapside, for the banquet, to which about seventy sat down. On the removal of the cloth the W.M. gave the toast "The Queen and the Craft;" "God Save the Queen" was sung by Bro. Sherwin Org. The toast "H.R.H. M.W.G.M." then followed. Song—"God Bless the Prince of Wales." The other Masonic toasts were duly honoured. Bro. P.M. White then proposed the "W.M." He alluded to the earnest manner in which Bro. Brien had always worked for the Lodge, and the excellent impression he had made upon the brethren, as evinced by his unanimous election. He had joined the Lodge at a most opportune time, and had ably filled a gap, year by year, to his own credit and the welfare of the Lodge. The W.M. briefly replied, and then proposed the toast of the P.M's., naming White and J. Dorton, who replied in suitable terms, as also did P.M. Gaskell, at considerable length, and P.M. West, Holliday, Day, &c. The W.M. next gave The Masonic Charities, which the Capper Lodge was proud to have at all times recognised as worthy of its utmost support. He coupled the name of Bro. J. Terry P.M. P.G.J.W. Herts, Sec. R.M.B.I., with the toast. Bro. Terry, who was received with cheers, said he would recall to the memory of the brethren those beautiful words of our Lectures, "That Charity is the best test, and the surest proof of the sincerity of our religion." No doubt this was deeply impressed upon the hearts of all, especially when Bro. White I.P.M. made so earnest an appeal that afternoon for support for the Masonic Institutions. Brethren, our Masonic Institutions are, as you will readily perceive, most unique in themselves. Any other charitable institution can plead, and often successfully, over an unrestricted area, for support, whereas those of the Craft cannot appeal to the general world, and have, in consequence, a far less extended circle from which to enlist support. We are limited to the benevolence of the Craft only, for the support, clothing, and education of 220 boys, 200 girls, and 295 aged people. Now, as business men, let us try and estimate what amount of capital ought to be supplied, year by year, by the generosity of the Craft, for the daily support of over 700 souls in our Institutions. Each girl costs to educate and clothe £30 per annum, each boy £44. There are 150 annuitants at £40 per annum, 135 at £50 per annum, and 13 widows are receiving £20 per annum for three years. Thus we are committed to an annual expenditure of over £10,500 for the aged people, £9,000 for the boys, and £7,000 for the girls. Such is the magnitude of the work to be done each year; and, speaking of working expenses,

Digitized by Google

I am happy to inform you that an independent actuary has declared our working expenses to be low; indeed, upon a lower scale than any other collecting charitable institution you can name. Our Charities, brethren, are not only unique in their deriving support from the Craft alone, but are unique in that they are unfortunately dependent upon the generosity of a small minority only for support to carry out their good work. Of the Craft we may estimate 100,000, who, allowing a deduction of one quarter to cover duplication of membership, if they would subscribe only 5s per annum to each of our three Institutions would yield £50,000 and upwards. If they gave only 5s to one, which I think within the range of all, what a noble increase would be made to our resources. It is, indeed, only the minority who support us, for out of 210 or 215 candidates, I find only 18 of the parents had subscribed, and yet they were admitted, being deserving. Brethren, could I tell you, or could you witness what I do, I feel you would remember the lesson taught us at our initiation, when our ability to assist the cause of charity was so forcibly brought home to us; and now that you are possessed of the means, give as you are able, and the Masonic Institutions would never have to refuse admission to a candidate, and would become a pattern to all charitable institutions. An opportunity now presents itself. Place in Bro. White's hands what you have to give, that he may give a good account in February next. He has to-day appealed to the Capper Lodge for the support of each brother. He asks each of you to give 2s 6d a month till January, so that by February he may take up sufficient money to the R.M.B.I. to constitute the Capper Lodge a V.P. of that Institution. The idea is good, and likely to increase in good works. You can, by this simple means—1st, place your W.M. a member of the Committee of Management, and thereby aid your candidates, and then make your Wardens ex officio V.P.'s of the Institution. Brethren, is not this something worthy of the Capper Lodge, to have the great credit of starting so excellent an idea? The means of attaining this object are simple—a glass of beer less occasionally will afford sufficient to carry out the suggestion of one you are all so justly proud of, and enable him to continue the good work the Capper Lodge has done. I remember Bro. Holliday P.M. brought up nearly £100 from the Capper Lodge. The golden opportunity is now yours; do not let it slip, or the credit of it be taken away by others. In response to this appeal, £30 was guaranteed by the brethren at the table to Bro. White's list. The health of the Visitors was next given, and received with enthusiasm. After several had replied, the Officers was given, and met with a bumper. Each of the Officers having spoken, the Tyler's toast brought a very memorable evening to a close. During the proceedings some excellent songs were sung by Bros. Catchside, Stephens, and Sherwin Organist, who greatly enhanced the pleasure of the evening by his accompaniment of the songs and selections. The Visitors were Bro. J. Terry P.M. Sec. R.M.B.I., Wren 50, Balls 77, Ives 781, Jolly 913, Catchside 1063, Reeves 1437, Clapp 1437, Stephens 1623.

PORTLAND LODGE, No. 576.

THE annual meeting of this Lodge and installation of the Worshipful Master, on Monday, the 9th ult., was the occasion of a large gathering of the brethren of the "mystic tie." Upwards of forty members of the Craft were present, including visitors from the Grange, Wannon, and other Lodges. The Lodge was opened in due form, Bro. J. L. Archer P.M. presiding. Masonic business was transacted, including the "passing" of a Brother. The ancient charge having been read, and all brethren under the rank of P.M. having retired, a board of Installed Masters was formed. There were present Bros. Archer, Browning, Hayward, McConachy, Portland Lodge; Bro. Kinch, Grange Lodge, Hamilton; Bro. Bailey, Wannon Lodge, Coleraine; Bro. J. J. Martin, All Nations' Lodge, Clones; and Bro. Liddle. The ceremony of installation having been performed, the newly installed Worshipful Master Bro. Ednott Barbank was greeted by his Fellows, and the Board of Past Masters closed. Master Masons and Fellow Crafts were then severally admitted, and the brethren saluted the Worshipful Master according to ancient usage. Bro. Barbank then proceeded to invest his Officers for the ensuing twelve months, as follows:—Bros. Hayward I.P.M., Lowe S.W., Beath J.W., Jones Treasurer, Browning Secretary, Barton S.D., McEachern J.D., Chapman D.C., Tattersall and T. McConachy Stewards, Hayden I.G., Hayward Tyler. The ceremony of installation was very ably performed by Bro. Archer, the several charges being given in an impressive and perfect manner. The Lodge having been closed the brethren and their visitors sat down to the customary banquet, which was catered in excellent style by Mr. Lewis, Percy-street. The chair was taken by the W.M., Bro. Barbank; the vice-chairs being occupied by the Senior and Junior Wardens. Due justice having been done the "good things" provided, the Worshipful Master gave the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts, including the Queen and the Craft, and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Grand Master of England. Song—Bro. Hayward—"The British Lion." The S.W., Bro. Lowe, very briefly proposed the District and Provincial Grand Masters, to which Bro. Kinch responded as a Past Provincial Officer. Song—Bro. Brown—"Gentle Annie." Bro. Hayward gave The Sister Lodges throughout the world. Bro. Thurman, Wannon Lodge, replied to the toast in a very appropriate and pithy speech. Masonic Song—Bro. E. Barbank. Bro. Archer proposed the Health of the newly installed Worshipful Master of the Lodge. He spoke very highly of the exertions made by the W.M. on behalf of the Lodge, and all agreed that he would discharge the duties of his high and important office in a most commendable and efficient manner. Masonic Song—Bro. S. McConachy. Bro. Barbank, in reply, said it gave him confidence when he found he had the assistance and good-will of all the brethren. During his connection with the Lodge he had been assiduous in the discharge of his Masonic duties, and he hoped that under his rule the Lodge would continue to prosper. He urged a regular attendance at meetings, more particularly at Lodges of Instruction, as every brother should endeavour to render himself competent to hold office in the Lodge. Bro. Barbank pointed out the benefits and advantages accruing from a strict adherence to the tenets and usages of Masonry, and strongly deprecated the admission of unworthy men into the ranks of the Masonic Order. Kindly reference was made to the services of Bro. Browning, Secretary of the Lodge, whose Masonic knowledge was not equalled in the district. Bro. Chambers, with capital effect and spirit, gave the hunting song, "My Pet Horse." The health of the Retiring Officers was very warmly drunk, and Bro. Hayward, the I.P.M., acknowledged the toast on their behalf. Comic Song—Brother Bailey—"Studying Economy." Bro. Barbank proposed the health of the Installing Master, Bro. Archer. He said although the lateness of the hour prevented any long introduction to the toast, yet it required none. The zeal and ability displayed by Bro. Archer in the working of the Lodge, and the able and impressive manner in which he that evening conducted the installation ceremony, were noted and duly appreciated by the brethren, and he (Bro. Barbank) hoped that the Officers and members would long continue to have the benefit of Brother Archer's advice and assistance. Song—Brother Barbank—"Let us speak of a man as we find him." Bro. Archer made a capital speech in reply to the toast, which was very heartily received and drunk. He tendered good advice to the Officers as regards their duty, if they desired the Lodge to prosper and be regarded with respect, always inculcating the great principles of Masonry, brotherly love, truth, and charity. He sincerely thanked them for the manner in which his health had been drunk, and would strive to aid in every measure for the good of the Lodge. Masonic song—Bro. Hayward. Bro. S. McConachy gave the Visiting Brethren, a toast always well received at the Portland Lodge. Bros. Brown Grange Lodge, Bailey Wannon Lodge, and J. J. Martin All Nations' Lodge, returned thanks for the kind attention shown them that evening. Bro. Beath gave the Ladies, which it is needless to state was received enthusiastically. "Here's a health to all good lasses" being sung by the company. The Tyler's toast was then honoured, and the brethren separated after spending a pleasant evening.—The Portland Guardian, 12th September 1878.

67 BARBICAN, E.C.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

HER Majesty the Queen, accompanied by Princess Beatrice and suite, reached Windsor from the North on Friday morning. The Premier paid a visit to Her Majesty during the afternoon. On Saturday H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught arrived at the Castle, and left on Sunday evening for London. On Monday Her Majesty conferred the honour of Knighthood on Mr. F. Leighton, having previously invested him with the Gold Medal and Chain of Office of President of the Royal Academy. On Tuesday the Queen and Princess Beatrice paid a visit to the Duchess of Cambridge at St. James's Palace. On Wednesday several gentlemen, including the ex-Lord Mayor of London, were introduced to Her Majesty by the Secretary of State for the Home Department, and received the honour of knighthood.

Three Cabinet Councils have been held. The first on Friday afternoon, at which it was decided to recommend the Queen to summon Parliament for Thursday the 5th December, the second on Monday, and the third on Thursday. It is stated that the Queen will not open Parliament in person.

The Sarmatian, with the Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise, arrived at Halifax on Saturday night. The passage had been a rough one, and the Princess was very sick. The patent births were a failure. The vessel was three days out when the Marquis and the Princess made their first appearance on deck for a short time. On arriving off the York Redoubt, on Saturday, the Governor General and his wife landed to enjoy a short rest at the Admiral's house. The official landing took place on Monday. The Royal party stepped on shore at exactly the same spot at which the Prince of Wales landed eighteen years ago. They were received officially by the military and naval authorities, and with much enthusiasm by the public at large. The Duke of Edinburgh was in the procession by which the Princess and the Marquis of Lorne were accompanied from the dockyard to the Provincial Hall, where the ceremony of administering the oaths of office was gone through. Salutes of guns from the Citadel, the forts, and the ships made generally known the interesting fact that an heir of the Argyll family had for the first time become the actual ruler of British America. In reply to the address which was presented to him the Marquis of Lorne thanked the people of Halifax for their devotion to the Throne, and mentioned the fact that there the Duke of Kent had passed many years of a soldier's life, and there two of his grandchildren had come that day. The Governor General of Canada and the Princess Louise left Halifax on Wednesday morning for Montreal, which it was expected they would reach on Friday, as they will stop at two places for the night on the journey.

Another terrible disaster has occurred off Dungeness, where, about midnight on Monday, a collision took place between the German mail steamer Pommerania and an iron barque, the Moel Eilian, which was in ballast. The night was dark and foggy. The steamer was so badly injured that she gradually filled and sank; the Moel Eilian had a large hole stove in her bows; but she made for Dover, where she is now in dock. The Pommerania had boats sufficient to save all who were on board, who are believed to have numbered 220, but one of them was swamped, and two others were crushed. Others were floated, and 172 persons were saved by a Scotch steamer, the Glengarry, which was passing and saw the rockets from the mail steamer. The captain was supposed to have gone down with his vessel, but a telegram states that he was picked up by the City of Amsterdam and taken to Holland. In a dense fog on the Mersey a ferry-steamer was carried against a vessel anchored in the river, and several passengers were thrown overboard. It is believed that fifteen lives were lost in consequence.

Julius Heizburg, a wholesale jeweller, has been committed for trial on a charge of fraudulent trading. The prisoner commenced business in 1874 with a capital of £100, and in July last failed for nearly £10,000. He appears to have obtained large quantities of goods from various London jewellers, and to have immediately pledged them.

On Friday three men were buried alive by the falling-in of the top of a tunnel near the new station at Fairlie on the line of railway which is to connect Glasgow with the watering place at Largs. Two more men were seriously injured.

A summons taken out by Mr. John Balieff, charging a police sergeant with an assault in Piccadilly on the evening of Lord Mayor's Day, has been decided at the Marlborough-street Police Court. The evidence of Mr. Balieff was corroborated by Mr. Thompson, a law student, who declared that the conduct of the police outside the Criterion was perfectly scandalous. The magistrate did not consider the charge substantiated, and dismissed the summons, remarking that it would be impossible for the police to do their duty in a crowd if every person who happened to be roughly used had the right to render the police liable for the injury caused to him.

Several members of the Metropolitan Board of Works went down the river, on Saturday, in order to collect samples of the water at the time when it would be most likely to be contaminated with sewage from the Outfall Works at Crossness. Their object is to decide the question raised by Captain Calvert in his report to the Thames Conservators, and by others, whether the discharge into the River is injurious and offensive. The specimens taken, which are reserved for chemical examination, were turbid, but without swell. A meeting of watermen and lightermen of the Thames was held on Saturday to protest against the report of the Wreck Commissioners in the Princess Alice case. Resolutions were passed denouncing the report made by Mr. Balguy, and his assessors, and instructing an opposition to be presented to the proposed new Thames Navigation Bill.

The British troops are rapidly continuing their advance in the Khyber Pass. They occupied the Chagai Height, commanding Ali Musjid, without opposition; and after an engagement, chiefly with artillery, the fort of Ali Musjid was occupied, the enemy having evacuated the place some time before, leaving behind the tents, guns, and war material. General Browne reports that the British loss was not serious. It is stated that the place was a scene of great confusion on the entrance of our troops. Considerable additions had recently been made to the forts, and the garrison appeared to have been prepared for a long siege, but when their position was turned the Ameer's troops took to flight, most of them leaving their arms behind them. Behind the fortress was a standing camp, which was taken as it stood. A number of the Afghans have been captured, including many officers, but they have since been released. A telegram has been received from the Viceroy, stating that Dacca has been occupied without opposition, and telegrams from other sources state that the tribes from Jumrood to Jellalabad have revolted against the Ameer. The Khurum Fort has been occupied by the British forces. The garrison fled to Peiwar, and the English troops encamped in the Valley. The principal inhabitants welcomed our soldiers, and brought them provisions. Another message states that supplies are being received on all sides. The Maharajah of Cashmere has offered to send a contingent to our help, but has been told that the greatest service he can render will be to watch the Afghan frontier of his territory. The occupation of Pisheen is confirmed, and two English officers have visited the largest villages, where they were received in the most friendly manner.

A remarkable scene was presented by the City of Rome on Sunday, in its reception of the Royal Family on their return from Southern Italy. The enthusiasm of the people was very warmly expressed, and the King and Queen, full of emotion, again and again came on the balcony at the Quirinal to bow their acknowledgments to the crowds in the streets who hailed them. Prince Charles opened the Roumanian Chambers on Wednesday with a speech, in which he remarks upon their newly-acquired independence, and the steps taken to occupy the Dobrudscha. He hopes that the Constitution will be remodelled, and tells the Deputies that "posterity will remember accomplished facts." The Emperor William in reply to the Address of the Prussian Chamber of Deputies, after thanking them for their devotion to his person and the Royal House, says he intends to return shortly to his Princely vocation, to which he will the more readily devote himself as he is certain of finding in the Chamber a clear comprehension of his efforts for the tranquil development of the Fatherland.

Joppa Chapter, No. 188.—The regular Convocation and Installation meeting of this Chapter was held on Monday, the 25th inst., at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street, City. Comps. W. Littaur M.E.Z. in the chair, P. Dickinson J., S. N. Abrahams P.Z. Treas., W. H. Gulliford S.E., L. Lazarus S.N., H. P. Isaac P.S.; P.Z.'s Comps. J. Lazarus, H. M. Levy, S. Lazarus, E. P. Albert, S. Pollitzer. After preliminaries, ballots were taken for the admission of Bros. Simmons No. 1017, G. Hobinstock 1017, F. Gianelli 167, W. Howard St. Barnabas, E. Goeberon No. 193, and J. E. Walters (previously accepted), who were duly exalted into R.A. Masonry by the M.E.Z., whose working was perfect; he was assisted by the Companions, who rendered the ceremony solemnly and impressively. The Installation of Principals then took place, and Comp. W. Littaur (who had been re-elected) was inducted into the chair. The M.E.Z. invested the Principals and Officers:—Comps. P. Dickinson H., L. Lazarus J., S. N. Abrahams Treas., W. H. Gulliford S.E., I. P. Cohen S.N., H. P. Isaac P.S., Smith P.Z. Janitor. The M.E. in investing his Officers addressed pertinent remarks to each. The report of the auditors was read and adopted; it showed a balance in favour of the Chapter of a goodly amount, this being without the fees for exaltations of the evening. Propositions were handed in to the S.E. Comp. S. Pollitzer P.Z. said he had great pleasure in being the medium for a presentation to the M.E.Z., who had been re-elected that evening for the third time to the chair, which he so worthily occupied. The presentation consisted of an elegant watch with suitable inscription. The M.E.Z. in eloquent terms suitably acknowledged the valuable gift, and also the kind expressions uttered by the P.Z. and endorsed by the brethren. The resignation of two Companions was tendered, and accepted with regret. The Chapter was then closed, and the Companions—forty-seven in number—sat down to a sumptuous and récherché banquet, provided by Bro. W. G. Jennings, and superintended by Comp. Silver. The M.E.Z., after grace had been said, proposed the usual Loyal and Royal Arch toasts. Comp. S. N. Abrahams proposed the health of the M.E.Z. Whatever had been said of him he deserved; they had seen how he had impressed the Companions who had been exalted, and they also must have seen how ably he had performed his duties. All were gratified to see him for the third time in the chair. The M.E.Z. thanked Comp. Abrahams for his kind expressions; he hoped at the expiration of his third year of office to merit their continued approbation. The M.E.Z., in proposing the health of the Exaltees, remarked it was a red letter day in their Chapter to have so many candidates, all of them respected and introduced by tried Companions; he was sure each would be a credit, not only to Freemasonry, but to the higher degree they had just entered. Comp. J. Walters responded to the toast. The M.E.Z. then proposed the toast of the Visitors, and Comp. A. M. Cohen P.Z., late 188, returned thanks, followed by Comps. W. Stevens, Kidder, Gardner, and Max Littaur. The M.E.Z. next gave the toast of the P.Z.'s, with it he would associate Comp. J. Lazarus, whose name was on their Warrant, and Comp. E. P. Albert, who had filled the chair two consecutive years; the others had done every duty required of them. Personally he had to thank Comp. J. Lazarus, to whom he was indebted for the position he then held Freemasonry. After a reply from Comp. S. M. Lazarus, the remaining toasts, comprising the Treasurer, H. and J., P.S., and the rest of the Officers, were given and acknowledged; the Janitor was then summoned, and the Companions separated after passing a very agreeable evening. The visitors were Comps. W. B. Kidder 12, W. Stephens P.Z. 862, A. M. Cohen P.Z. late 188, J. O. Gardner, M. Littaur late 188, Wolf No. 21.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 193.—A meeting was held on Wednesday, 27th ult., at the Railway Tavern, Fenchurch-street. Present—Bros. K. Harris W.M., T. W. C. Bush S.W., D. Moss J.W., Gotthelf P.M. Prec., J. K. Pitt Sec., T. B. Biddle S.D., Woodward I.G. The usual preliminaries having been arranged, the ceremony of initiation was rehearsed by the W.M., Bro. Walker as candidate; this was followed by the ceremony of passing, with the same candidate. Bro. Moss worked the first section of the lecture. Bro. Bush was elected W.M. for next Wednesday, at 7 o'clock.

The ballot was taken for Bro. J. Drinkwater, as candidate for exaltation. This also proved unanimous. The Second Principal gave the ancient lecture peculiar to his office, for the benefit of a young Companion, in a very able manner. We have been told that this Chapter works equal to any in the Province, and if this is so, we shall be pleased at some future time to witness its efforts, as we consider it a pleasure to visit where talent is displayed. The business of the evening being ended, the Chapter was duly closed with ancient charge and solemn prayer at 7.30, and the Companions adjourned to refreshment. The toast list on these occasions is short, but the importance of all is felt and duly honoured. The M.E.Z. proposed the first toast, The Queen, followed with that of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family, which were heartily received. To Comp. He informed the Companions that he had been pleased to receive the distinction he had from their noble chief at last Provincial Grand Chapter at Birkenhead. He expressed the pleasure he felt at seeing the Prov. Grand Supt. Lord De Tabley looking so hale and hearty on that important occasion. He hoped the day would be far distant when His Lordship could not be at the head of the Craft in this Province. Comp. Simpson also returned thanks. Comp. Siddeley, by courtesy of the M.E.Z., assumed the gavel. He had now the pleasing duty to propose the health of the newly elected joining Comp. Smith. He welcomed him warmly into the Chapter, and trusted the work done in it would be to his satisfaction and edification. The toast was warmly received. Comp. Smith, in reply, thanked the Comps of No. 1015 for their kindness in electing him. As he was Third Principal in another Chapter, he hoped his services, which were at their disposal, might be brought into requisition, as at all times he would do his best to promote the interests of the Chapter. Comp. Goodacre proposed the health of the Visiting Companions. He regretted that unforeseen circumstances had prevented Comp. Davies, who had come a long way for the purpose, seeing the Chapter work that evening. He assured the Visitors that there was always a cordial welcome extended to all in the Stamford Chapter. The toast was received very heartily. Comp. Davies, in replying, touched upon many topics interesting to all; the subject of his remarks evoked a lively and pleasing chat, which ushered in the hour for separation.

After the usual Loyal toasts, Bro. S. P. Bidder P.M. proposed the health of Bro. George Mellor R.W.D.P.G.M. of Masons in East Lancashire, and the rest of the Provincial Officers. He said that every Lodge in the Province rejoiced when the R.W.P.G.M. selected Bro. Mellor for the high position of his Deputy; and the great esteem in which Bro. Mellor was held, not only by the brethren of the Province, but by his fellow-townsmen of Ashton-under-Lyne, who had several times elected him to the highest municipal honours they could bestow, was a sufficient guarantee that he was well worthy of holding the high position he did in the Craft. In response Bro. Mellor complimented the W.M. and his Officers upon the excellent and efficient manner of working in their Lodge, and remarked that during his forty years' experience in Freemasonry, he had seldom seen and heard the ceremony of passing so well done. He urged the brethren to copy the example of their W.M. and his Officers, in being prompt and regular in their attendance. Bro. Burdett Coutts Lodge of Instruction, No. 1278.—The members met on Wednesday, at the Salmon and Ball, Bethnal-green-road, where, in spite of the depressing influence of the weather, there was a fair attendance of members. William Preston Lodge, No. 766.—The annual meeting of this Lodge was held on Thursday, the 28th inst., at the Cannon-street Hotel, E.C. Lodge was opened by Bro. S. D. Ewins W.M., assisted by Dr. C. R. Cutmore S.W. W.M. elect, E. Kidman J.W., W. Drake S.D., W. J. Roberts J.D., W. F. Smart I.G., W. J. Collens D.C.; Past Masters Bros. Captain Kain Treasurer, W. Worrell Secretary, W. J. Miller, G. Jerrold and J. G. Appell; in each case it resulted in their unanimous election. Lodge was advanced, and Bro. Dr. Cutmore was introduced to Bro. J. W. Miller, who had assumed the chair, by Bro. P.M. Newman, for the benefit of installation. Lodge was regularly advanced, and the ceremony completed. At its conclusion the W.M. appointed his Officers as follow:—S. D. Ewins I.P.M., E. Kidman S.W., W Drake J.W., Capt. Kain Treas., W. Worrell Sec., J. R. Roberts S.D. (by deputy), W. F. Smart J.D., W. Collens I.G., E. B. Broomhall D.C., G. Newman P.M. Std. Mr. J. G. Appell was introduced and most impressively initiated by the W.M., who performed the ceremony in a very perfect manner. Before closing the Lodge the W.M. had the gratification of presenting to his predecessor in office, Bro. S. D. Ewins, a handsome P.M.'s jewel, which had been unanimously voted by the Lodge. He considered that the jewel had been well earned, and trusted that Bro. Ewins might live long to wear it. The inscription on the jewel was as follows: "Presented by the William Preston Lodge, No. 766, to Bro. Samuel Daniel Ewins P.M., in appreciation of his eminent services as W.M., and as a token of fraternal regard and esteem. 28th November 1878." Bro. G. Newman announced that he had undertaken to represent the Lodge at the approaching Festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, and on his asking the Lodge to support that Institution, the sum of five guineas was immediately voted to head his list. Lodge was now closed, and the brethren adjourned to banquet. At its conclusion, after grace, the W.M. gave the usual toasts. Bro. Ewins in introducing the toast of the W.M., referred to Bro. Cutmore in very kind terms. He considered the health of their new W.M. was the principal toast of the evening. The members had seen how well Bro. Cutmore had been able to work the ceremony of initiation on this the first night he had occupied the chair of the Lodge, and he (Bro. Ewins) considered his conduct in the chair thus far augured well for the future prosperity of the Lodge. The W.M. thanked the brethren for having placed him in his present position. It would be his endeavour to carry out the duties of the Lodge in a most perfect manner. His object would be to make the working as impressive as it was possible to be, and with this in view he hoped for the support and co-operation of the brethren. Brother Abbott here sang "The Fine Old English Gentleman." The next toast given was that of the Initiate. All must know that anything in Nature, as well as in Masonic Lodges, must die unless fresh blood is infused into it. The W.M. had great pleasure in welcoming the newly initiated Brother among them, and hoped he would be the means of stirring the members up to renewed effort. Bro. Appell replied in a neat little speech. He felt fully sensible of the great honour that had been paid him that night. He should ever retain a memory of the beautiful and impressive ceremony he had that night taken a part in. The health of Bro. Miller, who performed the ceremony of installation in a most impressive manner, was, we are pleased to announce, specially proposed by the W.M.' who in fitting terms called to the memory of the brethren the perfect way in which the whole of that ceremony had been carried out. Bro. Miller thanked the brethren. He was always most heartily received in the William Preston, and as a consequence felt more at home there than in any Lodge it was his good fortune to enter. Since the Lodge meetings had been held at their present quarters, the Lodge had considerably increased. He hoped that its prosperity would continue, and that it would always occupy the high position it at present enjoyed. He was gratified at thinking he had been of service in installing the present Master. Bro. Newman, by command of the W.M., gave the health of the Visitors, tendering them a hearty welcome, and trusting it would be long before it was necessary to omit the toast at the meeting of the William Preston. Each of the guests replied. After which the W.M. gave the health of the Past Masters; replying to which Bro. S. D. Ewins I.P.M. considered it a great honour to have the opportunity of responding to so important a toast, and then delivered the following speech:—I am desirous of doing my duty in every state of life in which the G.A.O.T.U. has called me. I confess I am glad to be relieved from the distinguished post I have just left. The poet talks of "the fierce light that beats upon a throne," but in my opinion it is nothing to the nervousness I felt on taking the distinguished office to which you appointed me." He tendered his hearty thanks for the handsome jewel which had been presented him, and hoped he would be able to attend the meetings of the Lodge for many years to come. The health of the Officers was next given and acknowledged. The Tyler was summoned, and the brethren dispersed.

City of Westminster Lodge, No. 1563.—The installation meeting was held on Thursday, 28th inst., at the Regent Masonic Hall, Air-street, Regent-street, W. Report will appear in our next issue.

Sir Hugh Myddelton Lodge, No. 1602.—A meeting was held on 22nd November, at the Agricultural Hall, Islington. Present—Bros. P. M. Sim, Acting W.M., Rowley S.W., Western J.W., Osborne Sec., Poulton J.D., Parslow D.C., Field I.G. P.M.'s Bros. Somers, Lee; W. Payne, E. Payne, Percy, Rimell, J. Francis, W. Francis, Hollidge, Pelikan, Kitchener, Greenfield, and others. Visitors—Bros P.M. Brain, Rühre, Hirst, Rowley, Pearcy, Fenner, and others. In the unavoidable absence of the W.M. Bro. Coombes, Lodge was opened in due form by P.M. Sim, and advanced to the third degree, to which Bro. Hollidge was raised. Bros. J. Kitchener and E. Pelikan were passed to the second degree. Pursuant to notice of motion, the brethren then proceeded to the election of a Treasurer, that office having become vacant by the much-regretted resignation of Bro. W. Payne. The candidates were Bros. P.M. Somers, and J. Greenfield. After a ballot, duly taken, Bro. Greenfield was declared elected, by a considerable majority, and was invested by the Acting W.M. with the collar of office. The names of several joining members, including one from a Scotch Lodge, were announced. Petitions for relief were presented, and in two cases refused. The Craft will do well to look carefully into and remember these petitioners, who make claims from time to time, which they cannot sustain. Lodge was closed in solemn form, when the brethren proceeded to partake of slight refreshment, and spent a very happy evening. Bro. Parslow and others sang some excellent songs, and the brethren dispersed at an early hour. We are gratified in being able to state that this young Lodge is making satisfactory progress, and that the members conduct their proceedings with perfect harmony and good feeling.

West Middlesex Lodge of Instruction. No. 1612.—At the meeting of this Lodge on Thursday, the 21st instant, there was a very numerous attendance of brethren to support Bro. H. Kaner, the S.W. of 1612, who was W.M. for the night. The Officers were Bros. Rickwood S.W., Seward J.W., Burr S.D., Gasson J.D., Wright I.G., Tucker Treas.; and Bros. Beasley, Kingston, Dyer, Stephens, Maling, Clarke, Fernee, Jones and others. The Lodge having been duly opened, the minutes were read and confirmed, after which the Lodge was advanced to the third degree, when the ceremony of raising was rehearsed by the W.M. (Bro. Maling candidate), in a manner reflecting the highest credit, and affording a most enjoyable treat to the brethren present. At the conclusion of the proceedings, a special vote of thanks was carried by acclamation to Bro. Kaner for his able rendering of the most impressive of our ceremonies, which that brother suitably acknowledged, and after the transaction of some formal business, relating to the formation of the Benevolent Association, and to the erection of a Masonic Temple, which we understand is to be seriously considered at the next regular meeting of the mother Lodge, the proceedings were closed in the usual way, and the brethren retired, feeling thoroughly satisfied that when, in the course of events, Bro. Kaner fills the chair of W.M. in Lodge 1612 he will ably discharge the duties of the post, and in every way keep up the high reputation which that Lodge has for careful, accurate, and impressive rendering of the ceremonies.

West Smithfield Lodge, No. 1623.—The regular meeting of the Lodge was held on Thursday, 21st November, at Bro. T. Batt's, New Market Hotel, West Smithfield. Bro. G. S. Elliott W.M. presided, supported by his Officers—Bros. J. Howes P.M. S.W., J. Johnson J.W., F. Walters P.P.G.D. Middlesex P.M. Treasurer, E. Mallett P.M. Secretary, W. Pennefather P.M. S.D., W. Malthouse J.D., T. McButt I.G., Lardner D.C., G. Stephens W.S., and others. The W.M. in an able manner initiated three gentlemen into the Order. It was unanimously resolved to present the Treasurer, Bro. F. Walters, with a testimonial from the Lodge Funds. Banquet was well served. There were thirteen visitors.

Tredegar Lodge of Instruction, No. 1625.—Held at the Royal Hotel, Mile End-road, on Monday, 25th November, Present—Bros. Berry W.M., Barnes S.W., Yetton J.W., Gottheil I.P.M.; also about 40 other brethren. After the usual preliminaries, the fifteen sections were worked by the W.M., assisted by Bros. Moss, Barnes, Andrews, Musto, Durell, Candick, Yetton, Moss, Musto, Myers, Hogg, Taylor, Job, Webb, and Ellis. The thanks of the Lodge were given to the W.M. for the able manner in which he had presided, considering he was labouring under great mental trouble, hourly expecting the death of his father; this called forth the sympathies of the brethren. The thanks of the Lodge were voted to those who had assisted the W.M. in the working of the sections. Bro. Hollington was elected W.M. for the next meeting, which will be held on the 9th December, as the mother Lodge meets on the first Monday, in the same room. Visitors—Knight 184, Smith 1278, Hodge 1278, Gravely 898, Haynes 898, Oldacres 898, Moss 1275, Addison 1349, Howcroft 1349, Saad 1349, Ward 1349, Hodges 1382, Macdonald 1445, and Walter 1579, all of whom, with the exception of the first three, became members.

Hilda Chapter, Rose Croix.—At the regular meeting of this Chapter, held at York, on Wednesday, Bro. the Hon. W. T. Orde-Powlett was elected M.W.S., and Bro. T. Cooper, the present M.W.S., was elected Treasurer for the coming year.

St. George Lodge, No. 1723.—A meeting was held on Wednesday, at Commercial Hotel, Town Hall-square, Bolton. Present—Bros. J. H. Greenhalgh W.M., Nat. Nicholson S.W., Harrison Veevers J.W., G. P. Brockbank P.M. and P. Prov. S.G.D. as Sec., Geo. Ferguson Treas., James Heywood S.D., William Court J.D., J. W. Taylor P.M. D.C., John Barrett Steward, Robert Latham I.G., J. W. Roiley Tyler; Past Masters Bros. Thos. Morris, Jas. Richardson W.M. 221, Thos. Entwisle P. P.G. S. of W., W. H. J. Jones, Chas. Stanley, W. Hewitt, John Bromley, R. Hough. Visitors—Bros. Robt. Harwood 37 and 348 P.P.G. S. of W., H. Greenwood 348 P. Prov. G.P., Thos. Holme P.M. Ellesmere, E. Garstang S.D. 37, John Collins 678, J. Horrocks 348, A. Cosgrave 221, R. Duxbury I.G. 146, J. F. Skelton 146, Bradburn 221, Rooke Pennington 37, Jas. Hall 221; and Bros. H. Stead, W. H. Alcock, Jas. Smith, Wm. Blain, M. Fielding, P. Staton Organist, S. Brierley. The members confirmed minutes of former meeting, and then balloted for the following gentlemen as candidates:—Messrs. E. G. Harwood, J. Priestley, T. T. Holt. All were approved. Mr. Robt. Ramwell, who was accepted at the last meeting, was initiated by Bro. James Richardson W.M. Lodge 221; E. G. Harwood, by Bro. G. P. Brockbank; T. T. Holt, by Bro. Chas Stanley P.M.; and J. Priestley, by Bro. T. Entwisle P.M. P.P.G.S. of W. A letter was read from Bro. Terry, announcing Festival for Aged Freemasons and their Widows, and soliciting Stewards from the Lodge. Colonel Starkie, our Prov. G.M., was announced as chairman. Bros. Ferguson Treasurer, J. Martin Rutter Secretary, and J. W. Taylor Director of Ceremonies, together with Bro. Brockbank, who had previously given in his name, all consented to act as Stewards on the occasion. A circular from Prov. Grand Secretary was then read and considered. Bro. Dr. Hall was proposed as a joining member, and a gentleman was also proposed for initiation at the next meeting. Hearty good wishes were given by the Visiting Brethren, and the Lodge was closed at 8.30. At this meeting, which was the first, from the establishment of the Lodge, from which formal invitations had been issued to the Past Prov. Officers and others, the master was unusualy large, and the appearance of the Lodge Room very brilliant. Thirteen of the members sat under their own banners, and the Lodge banner of the Mother, 221, together with that of St. George, were suspended from the walls. The Officers were punctual, the ceremonies were given with great care and accuracy, and at the close of the proceedings the W.M. was highly complimented by the Visitors for the treat which had been afforded them. Three old P.M.'s and the W.M. of the Mother Lodge respectively performed the ceremonies of initiation. The working tools of the degree were explained by the W.M. in a highly effective manner, and the founder of the Lodge delivered the charge to the initiates. The Master of Ceremonies, Bro. J. W. Taylor, and the Organist, Bro. Staton, with Bros. Collins and Garstang, enhanced the proceedings by their rendering of the musical programme, and altogether the evening's proceedings in the Lodge were of a most enjoyable character. Dinner succeeded, after which the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were proposed and responded to. Bros. Skelton, Holt, Nicholson, Collins, Pennington, Spead, and others, contributed materially to the pleasures of the evening, the proceedings of which were conducted under the able management of the Master of Ceremonies, Bro. J. W. Taylor.

PERFECTION IN IRONING FOR EVERY SPECIES OF FABRIC.

Great Saving in Expense and Labour.

The price being only 22/, it is the Cheapest Iron in the trade, and can be had at all Ironmongers in the United Kingdom.

F. RATH & Co.'s IMPROVED GAS BOX IRON is extremely simple in its construction, and cannot get out of order; the merit of the invention is, that the heat produced from the burning gas is thrown on to the steel plate which covers the bottom surface, none being allowed to pass off in vain.

Three times the amount of work ordinarily executed can be done by the use of these Irons, which have now been in use in extensive Manufactories long enough to thoroughly prove their merits and evidence their entire success. They are as suitable for Family Use as for the Work-room, the Manufactory, or the Laundry.

MASONIC PORTRAITS. (No. 62.)

"L'honneur acquis est une caution de celui qu'on doit acquerir."

ONCE before have we presented our readers with a pen and ink sketch of a worthy brother holding high office in the Craft who was likewise a distinguished member of the medical profession. There are many reasons perhaps why medical gentlemen should become Craftsmen. Those who are fond of playing upon words may see a natural connection between medicine and Freemasonry, in respect of what is known in the latter as well as in the former, as the "healing" process, while others with a great degree of justice will see in the love and affection of medical men for the Royal Art merely another illustration of those genial and kindly qualities of heart and mind by which the profession is distinguished. There are, indeed, few classes of men who do so much good for their fellow creatures. We do not refer simply to their professional avocations, though the good they do in their medical capacity is incalculable. Rather do we incline to speak of that large-hearted kindness which impels them to assist the poor to so considerable an extent. The good they do is not generally known, but it is very generally and most deservedly appreciated. Under these circumstances there is every reason why a profession so philanthropically inclined should evince more than usual regard for Masons, and so account for their presence amongst us in such considerable strength, speaking numerically. However, be the reason what it may, there is little doubt that Freemasonry numbers in her ranks many who are highly distinguished in the medical profession. One of our Senior Grand Deacons is an instance. He whom we have described as "Hippocrates"—a contemporary, by the way, of the immortal Pythagoras—is another, and the brother whose portrait we present this day to our readers, under the designation of "Æsculapius," is a third. Doubtless, if we pressed the point still further, we should find some difficulty in enumerating in our columns the names of all the prominent physicians and surgeons who are likewise Craftsmen, but such a triad of eminent brethren is sufficient for the purpose either of argument or conjecture.

"Æsculapius," who is of honourable descent, and can trace back his pedigree to warlike ancestors who flourished in the county of Devon in the thirteenth century, after undergoing the customary general training which all youngsters undergo, entered upon that special course of study which is necessary in the case of men about to enter the medical profession. In this he distinguished himself, and closed the educational portion of his career by graduating in honours. During his professional career he has fulfilled the promise of his early days. He has at different times held medical appointments of importance, and is now settled in the county town of one of our northern Provinces as a physician in large practice. But his medical are not the only duties he has had to fulfil, and has fulfilled with such distinction. He is a most successful lecturer on various subjects connected with science and natural history. For many years he was curator of the local museum, and had almost the sole charge of the local science classes. He has the additional honour of being a Fellow of the Linnean Society, and is a member of the London Literary Union. But though his numerous avocations have necessarily made the most serious demands upon his time, nevertheless he has for the last thirteen years been a member of the Craft. He was initiated in the year 1865, in Lodge No. 1051, then newly warranted in the town he then, as now, resided in, and in a very few months, thanks to the zeal and ability displayed, was honoured with the appointment of Senior Deacon. So rapid, indeed, was his progress in the study of the Royal Art, and so great the esteem in which he was held by his fellow members, that in little more than two years from the time of his initiation he was elected to fill the chair of his Lodge. To this office he was unanimously re-elected, a circumstance which reflects credit alike on the recipient of the honour as well as on those who conferred it. Men are not elected for the second time to fill an important position unless they have given irrefragable evidence of merit, nor do people confer such high distinction unless they are capable of appreciating such worth. It was during his Mastership—whether for the first or second year we know not, nor is the point of material importance—and chiefly through his instrumentality, that the late Earl of Zetland, the then M.W. Grand Master of England, consented to lay the foundation-stone of the "Royal Albert Asylum for Idiots and Imbeciles of the Northern Counties," one of the noblest charities we have in this country for those whose mental faculties have never been fully developed or have failed them, and who consequently are unable to obtain for themselves the necessaries of life. So great was the confidence reposed in our worthy brother, that, notwithstanding his entrance into our fraternity was of such recent date, the local conduct of the preliminary arrangements was placed entirely under his direction, and as a meet reward for his exertions, he had the supreme satisfaction of hearing from the Grand Master and his executive Officers that the assemblage of brethren on the occasion was more numerous than they had ever seen before, and that the subsidiary arrangements were entirely to his Lordship's and their satisfaction. It may well be imagined that merit such as our worthy brother had shown would be speedily recognised, and that no long time would elapse ere Provincial honours were bestowed upon him, but something further in the way of recognition was in store for him, and the high distinction of Grand Sword Bearer of England was conferred on him in 1871, when only six years had elapsed from the time of his initiation. Twice since then has he occupied the chair of a Lodge, the latter occasion being in the year 1875, when the Morecambe Lodge, No. 1561, was consecrated by Lord Skelmersdale, Deputy Grand Master, in person, and "Æsculapius" had the great honour of being inducted into the chair of K.S. by his Lordship. He may thus be spoken of as virtually the Father, as well as first Master of this Lodge. But not alone as an Officer is he known in his Province. The members of the several Lodges to which he belongs have frequently enjoyed the advantage of his teaching in Lodges of Instruction, and have again and again had opportunities of hearing him, both in sectional and other lectures. He has also occasionally given original lectures on different subjects connected with Freemasonry, several of which have been published in Masonic journals. He has likewise enacted very favourably the part of Installing Master; in fact, his services in this capacity are in constant request, both in the town in which he resides and its immediate neighbourhood, while it is very recently that he was deputed by the Grand Master of his Province to take the chair at the consecration of a new Lodge. He has, too, held the post of Secretary to his mother Lodge for eleven years, and early in the present year his retirement therefrom was made the occasion for giving him a complimentary dinner, and presenting him with a handsome epergne as a testimonial of the appreciation in which his many and great services to the Lodge were held. The dinner was given under the presidency of the Worshipful Master, who, in presenting the testimonial, described at some length the valuable services which our brother had rendered to Freemasonry, and closed his remarks, almost word for word, to the following effect: "I have great pleasure in giving to you the sincere thanks of the brethren of this Lodge for the many and valuable services which, from time to time, you have rendered them, and at their wish, and on their behalf, present you with this epergne, which I hope you and yours may long enjoy, and I hope also that you may have a long, prosperous and happy life." He is also the recipient of a solid gold Past Grand Officer's jewel, which another Lodge of which he is a member presented to him, and of a silver goblet, by no means of lilliputian size, the gift of a third Lodge. But his services have not been limited to Craft Masonry. As soon as he was qualified to do so, he was exalted to the R.A. degree, and diligently served the office of Scribe E. in a Chapter situated at a considerable distance from his home. Appreciating, however, the great inconvenience arising from there being no R.A. Chapter in the town where he lived, he and sundry other R.A. Masons petitioned Grand Chapter for a warrant of Constitution. This was at once granted, and, in 1869, Chapter 1051 was consecrated, and our eminent Companion installed in the chair of the First Principal. On retiring from his office, the Companions presented him with a Past Z.'s jewel set in diamonds. Subsequently he became Second Principal in his Province, and another year having elapsed, he was further honoured by being appointed Standard Bearer to the Supreme Grand Chapter. He has likewise, as in the case of Craft Masonry, acted again and again as Installing Officer of Principals; and one of his latest Masonic acts was the consecration of a new Royal Arch Chapter and the constitution of a new and separate Provincial Grand Chapter. In the Mark Degree to which he was advanced shortly after the union of the English and Scotch Rites in the North of England, he is the founder and Past W. Master of a Lodge named after him. He has also occupied the position of a Grand Warden in his Province, and that of Grand J.O. in the Mark Grand Lodge. He has also distinguished himself as a Knight Templar and Knight of Malta, and not only has he filled the office of E. Commander of his Encampment, but he has likewise had high rank conferred upon him both in his Province and in the Grand Priory of England. He is an enthusiastic member of the A. and A. Rite, has devoted considerable time and energy to the promotion and progress of a Rose Croix Chapter, which has the reputation of being one of the most efficient in the Northern District, and has recently taken the 32° S.P.R.S.—a proof that his zeal and attention are fully recognised in Golden-square. He is a Knight of the Red Cross of Rome and Constantine, and after filling the office of M.P.S., he was appointed Intendant General of a Division, and has acted as Consecrating Officer at the foundation of two very flourishing Conclaves. As regards other degrees, he is a member and Prov. Grand Officer of the Royal Order of Scotland, Commander of Ark Mariners, a Past Celebrant of the Rosicrucian College, a member of the Order of High Priesthood, and a Master of the St. Lawrence degree. But, numerous as are the distinctions he has received in the branches of Masonry to which he belongs, there is yet another for which he is indebted to himself alone. This we are accustomed to regard as the highest distinction which a Mason can possibly gain, and is worth, in one sense, all the rest put together. He is a loyal supporter of all our Charitable Institutions—a Life Governor, we believe, of each of them, and the number of bars and clasps he is entitled to append to his Charity jewel—some twelve or fifteen—suffice to indicate the amount of labour he has undertaken in order to promote their welfare.

We are now approaching the close of our sketch. We have shown what he has been, the offices he has filled, and the many and well-merited distinctions which have been showered upon him, or which, as a practical exponent of true Masonic Charity, he has won for himself. We will simply add that in the midst of all his numerous engagements he is but seldom absent from his Masonic duties, be they in connection with Lodge or Chapter, Conclave or Encampment, and those among his juniors who desire his assistance always find him ready and willing to impart instruction and afford them aid in the discharge of their several duties. May he, in the words of the Worshipful Master of his mother Lodge, when presenting him with a testimonial—as quoted above—"May he enjoy a long, prosperous, and happy life!"

REMARKS UPON "Q.'s" CRITICISMS ON THE DUNCKERLEY QUESTION.

By Bro. Jacob Norton.

In the Freemason's Chronicle of 28th September Bro. "Q." lectured me for endeavouring to upset the "Masonic version" of Dunckerley's parentage ere I had read the article in the Freemason's Magazine of 1796. Bro. Q. is evidently hot headed, and hence he is apt to pay no attention to an article which conflicts with his received faith. My good brother has certainly misconstrued or magnified my offence. In my letter printed 15th July I have not committed myself one way or the other, as the following paragraph will show:—

"I propose to reproduce both accounts about Dunckerley, and though it is impossible to demonstrate which is true, yet the reader will have a chance of judging for himself."

I have acknowledged the impossibility of demonstrating which is true, but yet the printing of both accounts has enabled Bro. Q. to learn that Mrs. W. was Lady Walpole, and it also compelled me to read the article in Freemason's Magazine for 1796. I did indeed know of its existence some years ago, but we have not got the volume of 1796 in Boston. However, Bro. Carson, of Cincinnati, kindly copied it for me. I have the whole of it now at heart, and am therefore now prepared to say what I shall say.

To do full justice to the subject, I would have to reproduce all the evidence pro and con, but as, for obvious reasons, that cannot be done, I must refer the reader to the previous papers in the Freemason's Chronicle upon this question.

"Q." says, "There is no antecedent improbability against the truth of the Masonic version of Dunckerley's parentage." I thought so too, when I sent my letter, headed "Conflicting Accounts," &c., but since I have read the sequel of Dunckerley in the volume of 1796, I have changed my views. There are some facts in the second narrative of the Freemason's Magazine that one could not readily believe, but yet, to any one who had read the history of the two first Georges there is really nothing in the Masonic version, that is either impossible or improbable. For instance, I firmly believe as probable that Lady Ranelagh consented to make her residence a place of assignation for the Prince of Wales's amours, that she even sent her own carriage to bring his favourites to her house, and kept them there, and treated them on a perfect footing of equality, during the Prince's pleasure; and even afterwards, for her Ladyship to visit the Prince's favourite at Somerset House, or anywhere else. I can believe, that Lady Walpole was cognizant of her servant's intrigues with the Prince of Wales during his visit at Houghton. I could even believe that Sir Robert Walpole and his lady could provide a pretty girl for the entertainment of the Prince during his stay at their house. Nay, I should not be astonished to hear that the Princess of Wales, afterwards Queen Caroline, had sent her own carriage for Mrs. Dunckerley for the same purpose that Lady Ranelagh did. (For farther information I refer to the Appendix at the end of this letter).

But while the immoral state of the court, the courtiers, and the court parsons (as will be seen in the Appendix), would favour the probability of the "Masonic version" of Dunckerley, yet, paradoxical as it may appear, this very looseness of morality among the highest classes forms an insuperable reason for disbelieving Dunckerley's story. Thus, Mrs. Dunckerley had certainly been a servant in the house of Sir R. Walpole; the man she was married to was also a servant; and Mrs. Dunckerley's mother was a midwife. Mrs. Pinkney informed Dunckerley that his mother told her that she was the daughter of a physician. It is very strange that Dunckerley had never heard of it before. It is not, however, improbable that her father may have been a barber, who performed bleeding and cupping—and may have administered some physic too; such "surgeon barbers," were common in England in those days, and are still to be found in Poland and Russia, and this may account for the statement in the Gentleman's Magazine, that his grandmother had bound young Dunckerley to a barber. But be this as it may, it is certain that his mother and his grandmother were poor, and hence I cannot understand why a woman in Mrs. Dunckerley's circumstances should have felt ashamed to acknowledge herself the favourite of the Prince of Wales, at a time when the idea of shame was unknown among the highest ladies in the realm. It is alleged by Dunckerley that his mother told Mrs. Pinkney, five days before her (Mrs. D.'s) death:—

"My son might have been known to his royal father, and I might have lived in as elegant a manner as Mrs. H. [Howard] or Mrs. B., but my dear mother reclaimed me from so criminal a passion, and dread of public shame prevented my making it known."

According to the "Masonic version," the secret was known to Dunckerley sen., to Lady Ranelagh, to her servant or confidant, Mrs. Meekin, to Mrs. Dunckerley's mother, and the said mother informed Mrs. Pinkney in 1724, at the birth of Thomas Dunckerley, that the Prince of Wales was the child's father. Besides which, the secret of the Prince's intrigues with Mrs. Dunckerley is said to have been known to Lady Walpole, and to Mr. L——y (probably Lumley), who is said to have been the Prince's go-between in love affairs. When so many knew it, it is rather strange that it was unknown to Sir Edward Walpole. But presuming that her mother was really conscientiously religious—yet, for the sake of the boy and his future prospects, a mother, even a religious mother, should not have scrupled to make the parentage of the child known to the Prince —it seems contrary to human nature for a mother to suffer her only child to be brought up in ignorance, or very nearly so, and to subject him at the tender age of ten to the hardships of a man of war, when a solitary note from her to the Prince might have been the means of raising that child to a very high position in society.

Again Bro. Dunckerley was certainly no fool. He possessed the art of ingratiating himself into favour, and he was known to Sir Edward Walpole, who was willing to promote his interest in an honourable way. Mrs. Dunckerley died 9th January 1760. George the Second died 25th October following, at the age of seventy-seven. Now, why did the shrewd Bro. Dunckerley waste those precious nine-months or more? Why did not he at once make himself known to the king? He was not (he says) acquainted with manners or forms of the Court, but why did he not candidly make known all he knew to his friend Sir Edward Walpole, who surely had the means of making it known to the king? And again, why did Dunckerley make no effort to give his information to any of the members of the royal family, until after the death of Mrs Pinkney, the only witness he had to verify his singular story. And I may further add, as Mrs. Pinkney was the only one to whom Mrs. Dunckerley revealed the parentage of her son, why did not Dunckerley take Mrs. Pinkney before a justice of the peace, and cause her to make an affidavit to the fact? I am aware of his excuses, but to me they seem insufficient. When, therefore, the above inexplicable facts are taken in connexion with the obituary notice in the Gentleman's of 1795, written evidently by one who was posted up in the subject, and whose statement was never contradicted in the said Gentleman's Magazine, I must come to the conclusion, that the so-called Masonic version of Dunckerley's parentage, is not quite as certain as our Masonic orthodox writers and Masonic Cyclopædists have made it out to be. Indeed, Tichborne presented much stronger evidence of his identity than Dunckerley did of his parentage. Thousands of Englishmen and many Americans still believe that Tichborne (or whatever else his name may be) was wronged; but yet, one ended his days in Hampton Court, and the other may end his days in prison. And who knows whether in either of those cases actual justice was done?

There seems to be somewhere some further information about Dunckerley, for if I rightly recollect, Dr. Oliver says, somewhere, that Dunckerley's son was intemperate, and Bro. Oliver mourns over the scion of royalty being compelled to get his living as a common bricklayer, and that he died a drunkard, &c. It is not impossible therefore, that some further hints may yet be found to throw light upon the life of Dunckerley.

It is needless to discuss the minor questions which crept into this discussion, such for instance, as Bro. Q.'s definition of "fault finding," the date of Dunckerley's lecture. "It is all bosh," &c. But I must caution Bro. Q. against a repetition of the blunder in his letter of 28th September. I fraternally advise him, with the most friendly feelings, that whenever he finds himself irritated by an article in a Masonic paper, he should immediately clap a wet cold towel upon his head, and then read it again, for had he done so when reading the paper of 15th June he would not have charged me with upsetting the "Masonic version." If this paper should really shake the brethren's faith in the so-called Masonic version, Bro "Q." has to thank his own over-zeal in inducing me to read the article printed in 1796. Briefly, then, when I first read the narrative printed in 1793, I saw no reason to doubt that Dunckerley was a natural son of George the Second. When I first read the article in the Gentleman's Magazine of 1795, I was puzzled as to which account was the true one. But when I finished reading the sequel, printed in 1796, I came to the conclusion that if George the Third would have submitted the Dunckerley story to the judgment of such a lawyer as Sir Alexander E. J. Cockburn, Dunckerley would never have received £800 a year, would never have been a Provincial G.M., would never have introduced amongst the moderns the Royal Arch, Templarism, Kadosh, and other moonshine, and would never have figured in our annals as a "Masonic Luminary."

Boston U.S., October 18th 1878.

Appendix.—The following I abridge from Lord John Hervey's "Reign of George II."

Sir Robert Walpole told Lord Chancellor King that George the 2nd constantly wrote long letters to the Queen, of what he did every day, and particularly of his amours, and that the Queen replied in similar long letters, approving of his amours, "not scrupling to say, that she was but one woman, and an old woman, and that he might have more and younger women, "by which perfect submission to his will, she effected whatever she desired, without which it was impossible to keep him within bounds." (Life of Lord King, in Campbell's Lives of the Lord Chancellors.)

Again, when the King formed his attachment in Hanover to Madame Walmoden, he informed the Queen, by letter, of every step he took in the affair, such as the growth of his passion, the progress of his applications, the sum of money he paid for obtaining her love, and the final success. He wrote in addition to the Queen, "You must love her because she loves me."

The 27th chapter of the Heart of Midlothian shows the degree of intimacy between the Queen and her "good Lady Suffolk." Pope celebrated the said Lady Suffolk in verse, and if I recollect aright, Dean Swift used to visit her. Thackeray, in his lecture of George II., says:—

"As I peep into George II., St. James's, I see crowds of cassocks rustling up the back stairs of the ladies of the court stealthily, the clergy slipping purses into their laps." Lady Yarmouth, one of the King's mistresses, sold a Bishopric to a court parson for £5,000.

With all these facts before me, I really cannot believe Bro. Dunckerley, that his mother was deterred by a fear of shame from making known that the King was the father of her child.

INSTALLATION BANQUET OF THE EBORACUM LODGE, No. 1611.

THE annual installation banquet of this young and prosperous Lodge was held at the Queen's Hotel, York, on Monday, the 25th ult., and was well attended. The dinner was of an excellent character, reflecting every credit upon the host, Bro. H. Churchill. The W.M. Bro. J. S. Cumberland occupied the chair, supported by the following members of the Lodge:—Bros. T. B. Whytehead I.P.M. Prov. G.D.C., T. Cooper P.M. 1611 and P.M. 236 P.P.G.D.C., P. H. Rowland P.M. 237 P.P.G.J.W., R. W. Hollon P.M. 236 P.G.S.B. Eng., C. G. Padel S.W., J. T. Seller J.W., J. Kay Secretary, M. Millington S.D., T. D. Smith J.D., G. Simpson M.C., A. T. B. Turner Asst. M.C., G. H. Simpson Organist, J. Blenkin I.G., W. Hill Steward, G. H. Hebblethwaite Steward, C. Blackstone G. D. Goodall, J. R. Jackson, J. E. Wilkinson, P. H. Matthews, H. Churchill, T. E. Abbey, M. Varvill, J. Morgan, R. Ware, G. C. Lee, P. Pearson Tyler. The special guests of the Lodge were Bros. W. Valentine W.M. 236 P.P.G. Chap., G. C. Baskett S.W. 236, A. Buckle J.W. 236, J. Healy W.M. elect 295 (I.C.), W. Harris Sec. 295, J. B. Somerset I.G. 295, and C. Cheeseman W.M. De la Pole 1605. The following visiting brethren were also present:—Bros. J. Todd P.M. 236 Prov. G. Reg., R. Beggott P.M. 1605, M. Rooke 236, W. H. Sampson 236, W. T. Gowland 236, C. Abbott 236, G. W. Flint 1429, C. Winn 938, Blagbro (Leeds), Meek (Filey), T. M. Richev, F. G. Bellringer (Stockton), &c. The usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were given from the chair, Bro. R. W. Hollon responding to that of the Grand Lodge, and Bro. J. Todd to that of Prov. Grand Lodge. Bro. T. B. Whytehead then gave the health of the W.M., which was received with great heartiness. He said that after a very long absence from England, he had returned four years ago, a Mason, to make many pleasant acquaintances, and none more so than that of the W.M., with whom he had been associated intimately in Masonry during that period, and he knew no brother who stood a good to Bro. Cumberland in point of Masonic zeal and a true fraternal spirit. He was very proud to have had the honour and privilege of installing him as W.M. of a Lodge of which he was one of the first founders, and he wished him health, strength, and a happy term of office. In responding, the W.M. thanked the brethren for their good wishes, and said he would take that early opportunity of saying that he hoped great care would be exercised in the proposal of candidates. Brethren should remember that they had not themselves alone to consult in this matter, but that they must remember the comfort and pleasure of the other members of the Lodge, and never attempt to introduce any one as a candidate whose presence they did not think would contribute to the universal happiness and harmony of the Lodge. The W.M. then proposed the I.P.M. and Installing Master, Bro. T. B. Whytehead, which was very warmly received, and suitably responded to, Bro. Whytehead thanking the brethren very cordially for their strong support during his happy year, and expressing a hope that it might be extended with the same warmth to his successor. Prosperity to the Eboracum Lodge was proposed by Bro. Valentine, W.M. of the York Lodge 236, who spoke of the gratification with which he noticed the progress of the Lodge, and above all the excellent manner in which it was ruled and conducted. If he had even had a doubt on the question, it would have been removed at this time; but he had always held that the establishment of the Eboracum Lodge was a right and proper step, and he wished it every success. "The Sister Lodges of the Province" was proposed by Bro. T. B. Whytehead, and replied to by Bro. Buckle J.W., of the York Lodge 236. Bro. Buckle, in the course of his remarks, said that he thought Masons too often lost sight of that part of their duty which came under the head of Charity. Charity did not consist only in giving. "Though I give all my goods to feed the poor, and have not charity, I am nothing," said a very old divine. There was the charity which tried to hide the faults of a brother, which put a kind construction on his actions, which hoped the best, and believed the best, and was not carping and anxious to display the foibles and weaknesses of others. This he maintained was real charity, not to lose sight of the actual practical "giving," but to look to higher aims, and to work out the real meaning of the word "charity" in its highest sense. Bro. C. G. Padel S.W. 1611 proposed the Visiting Brethren, congratulating the members of the Lodge upon the constant number of visitors whom they had the pleasure of so frequently entertaining. Bro. G. C. Baskett S.W. 236, and Bro. Healey S.W. 295, responded. The W.M. proposed the Wardens and Officers of the Lodge, to which the Wardens responded. Bro. Rowland P.M. proposed the Masonic Charities in happy terms, to which the W.M. responded. Bro. Rowland took occasion to note the service this very young Lodge had already done in the way of sending up Stewards with good lists, and rejoiced to know that a continuance in well doing was contemplated. Bro. T. D. Smith J.D. proposed the Ladies, and Bros. M. Varvill and A. T. B. Turner responded. The Tyler's toast then brought a very happy evening to a conclusion. The toast list was well worth notice as a work of lithographic art. It bore a series of appropriate mottos selected from the ancient charges and regulations, and on the first page was a photograph of an ancient Masonic flagon, the property of the Eboracum Lodge, the original occupying a prominent position in front of the W.M., and being used as a loving cup in the course of the banquet. Some capital songs varied the proceedings, contributed by Bros. Blagbro, Wilkinson, Cheeseman, Todd, and Flint. Bro. G. H. Simpson Organist effectively presided at the pianoforte.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—During every break of winter weather exertions should be made by the afflicted to recover health before unresisting cold and trying storms set in. Throat ailments, coughs, wheezings, asthmatical affections, shortness of breath, morning nausea and accumulations of phlegm can readily be removed by rubbing this fine derivative Ointment twice daily upon the chest and neck. Holloway's treatment is strongly recommended with the view of giving immediate ease, preventing people from going and effecting permanent relief. These all powerful curative Ointment and Pills can accomplish, and will surely prevent incidents in cases from hardening of the constitution to display themselves afterwards in the most injurious forms that will probably embitter life till death itself is almost prayed for.

It may also be stated that thirty-two brethren of the Province have consented to serve as Stewards on the occasion, and this number is expected to be very largely increased before the Festival.

A grant of fifty pounds was made from the Prov. G. Lodge Fund to the East Lancashire Systematic Masonic Educational and Benevolent Institution.

LORD CARNARVON'S MARRIAGE.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I consider the proposal of "T. B. W." that the approaching marriage of Lord Carnarvon should be made an opportunity for presenting his Lordship with some token of the appreciation in which his services are held by the Craft, an excellent one, and one which steps should at once be taken to adopt and carry out. I would go still further, and suggest that the approaching marriage of H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught which, it is said, is arranged to take place early in the month of February next, should be made the occasion for presenting his Royal Highness with a similar token. Whether the Duke's future father-in-law, Prince Frederick Charles of Prussia, is or is not a Mason I cannot say, but the Prussian Royal Family, like the English, has always evinced a deep interest in the welfare of Freemasonry. Why not then exhibit our loyalty and our sense of gratitude for England's and Prussia's Princes doing so much for the Craft by making the Duke and his future consort some present? A committee can soon be formed, and if the amount of subscription were limited to a maximum of say £1, and a minimum of half-a-crown—which I think would be preferable to the fixed amount of a crown, a handsome sum might be raised for the purpose. Another Committee should be appointed with a similarly limited subscription in the case of Lord Carnarvon; and I would suggest the appropriation of the funds so raised in the following manner: Part in purchase of a Perpetual Presentation to Girls' or Boys' School, to be called the CARNARVON Perpetual Presentation, and the remainder in the purchase of some jewel or jewels for presentation to the future Countess. Similarly, in the case of the Duke of Connaught, part in purchase of a CONNAUGHT Perpetual Presentation to Boys' or Girls' School—care being taken that it shall be to that one of the Schools which does not receive the CARNARVON Presentation—and the rest in purchase of some jewel or jewels for presentation to His Royal Highness's bride elect.

Why, dear Sir and Brother, should you not at once take steps with a view to inaugurate the two subscriptions? A small working committee would do the work speedily, and a larger ornamental committee would lend the necessary eclat to the proceedings.

Fraternally yours,

ONE WHO WILL SUBSCRIBE TO BOTH FUNDS.

London, 4th December 1878.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—"T. B. W.'s" suggestion in last week's issue, to present our Pro Grand Master with a "tangible token" upon his marriage, is one that will, I venture to submit, commend itself to the Craft generally, as an opportune moment to pay a graceful tribute to his worth as a Statesman, and as a Brother held in high estimation by Masons. Your correspondent's view as to subscription and banquet is worth consideration, if a committee were formed to carry out his idea. I am a stranger to him and the Pro Grand Master, but am willing to contribute and assist.

I am, faithfully yours,

2nd December 1878. J. W. 1563.

THE "OFF NIGHT" AT THE TRANQUILLITY LODGE, No. 185.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—It is not right that a virtue should be assumed if not possessed; therefore, to allay any misapprehension that may have arisen out of the conflicting statements, I may state that the cost of the supper (re Tranquillity 185), on the 18th ult., was £1 11*s* 6*d* for thirty-five brethren, equal to 6*s* 7½*d* per head. I think this rather an extravagant sum for a supper!!

I feel confident many of the brethren do not expend more than this sum for a week's dining; hence it is distasteful to me to hear remarks such as "Only a supper! if I had known it, I would not have come." "Are we to have Champagne with our supper?" I can't drink beer, I must have claret!" "Bro. Treasurer, order me a little sherry!" "Cannot I have a little Scotch whiskey?" and so on, ad nauseam.

This, dear Bro. Editor is distasteful to—

ONE WHO KNOWS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The discrepancy in the reports of FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE and Sunday Times, anent the "Off Night" of Tranquillity Lodge, No. 185, which so much tickled the fancy of "OLD FILE," may be explained by the fact that the reporter of the Sunday Times evidently drew his ideas of what took place from reminiscences of the glorious past, while the report in your columns is a veracious account of the affair, as witnessed by the bodily presence of your

"CHARITY IS GIVING?"

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Parsimony has lifted up her voice, and inquires, what shall I cry? Is Charity giving?

Brother Binckes justly and truly replies in the affirmative; but then, logically considered, assertion is not proof. I may ask further a logical question: Is there any charity without giving?

He who is not charitable is not a sincere Christian.

Some Masons are not charitable; therefore some Masons are not sincere Christians. St. Paul, who is of high authority, is pressed into the controversy.

But this I say, says St. Paul (which some readers of the sacred law, seem to have forgotten), but is proved in daily life! "He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully. Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver."—2 Corinthians, ix. 6, 7.

Solomon, the wisest man, asserts what is proved in daily life: "There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty. He that giveth unto the poor shall not lack: but he that hideth his eyes shall have many a curse."—Proverbs xi. 24; xxviii. 27.

But a greater than Solomon, the greatest of all Teachers, our blessed Master of all, lays down as an incontrovertible axiom, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Whose experience has proved the contrary? Cadit quæstio.

Yours fraternally,

DANIEL ACE, D.D.

CAUTION.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Will you kindly permit us, through the medium of your paper, to caution Lodges and Charity Committees against an itinerant, who calls himself "Bro. Charles Johnstone, of the Morning Star Lodge, No. 552, Lucknow," as he is unworthy of assistance?

We shall be glad to give further information if required.

Yours fraternally,

BRO. WHITE AND THE L.M.C.A.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

4th December 1878.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have noticed in the last number of the Chronicle your account of the proceedings at the last meeting of the Capper Lodge, at which Bro. White, in the course of an address to the Brethren on the subject of our Masonic Charities, is reported to have said, "I joined the London Masonic Charity Association to further Mrs. Priestley's child's case. After I had laid it before the Committee I noticed that a brother on my left stated that although pledged to support the Committee's 'last chance' selections, still, he could not give up some 300 votes he wielded. On this he was assured that his case would be carried at the next election if he would lend those votes." Now, as I recognise myself as the "brother on my left" and have a vivid recollection (assisted by memoranda made at the time) of what occurred at the meeting of the L.M.C.A. to which Bro. White alludes I beg that you will allow me to give my account of what then took place. It is somewhat at variance with Bro. White's statement, but I give it in no unfriendly spirit, as I can easily understand that Bro. White having attended the meeting for the purpose of advocating the claims of a candidate in whom he felt an interest, and finding the decision of the Committee not in harmony with his own desires, left the meeting with a feeling of disappointment, and as I venture to say, not with a memory sufficiently accurate to state three months subsequently what then occurred. What did occur at the meeting of the Committee of the L.M.C.A. on 30th August was as follows.

The Committee received and considered a report respecting the London Candidates for the Schools, all of whose circumstances were carefully inquired into. The merits of Bro. White's candidate were fully recognised by the Committee who however came to the decision that two more urgent cases were entitled to their first support. As regards myself, I stated to the Committee that, while I fully endorsed their selection, I was already pledged (previously to the formation of the L.M.C.A.) to support the child of an old friend. I mentioned also, in reply to an enquiry, that I thought the child's friends, not myself alone, which would have been an idle boast, would command at least 300 votes, when I was solicited to place the votes, if possible, at the disposal of the Committee, who would, after securing the election of the more urgent cases, take that of my candidate into consideration. This, your readers will perceive is a very different matter to offering me a positive guarantee that the child should be elected next April. The idea of such a bargain would not be entertained by the Committee as at present constituted. Such an arrangement would have been very convenient to me individually, but as a member of the Committee I should not countenance it, and I think the other members of the Committee would agree with me that such a bargain would be neither righteous nor discreet.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours faithfully,

A. E. G.

A CONSTITUTIONAL QUESTION.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—At the Consecration of a Lodge at Thame, on Thursday, the 5th inst., the Lodge in the course of the ceremony being in the second degree, was "resumed" to the third degree, instead of being "opened" in the usual form.

I was informed by a brother sitting next me, that this was no new idea, and often adopted at one of the Oxford Lodges, although the question had been raised as to the correctness of the ceremony.

Perhaps some of your numerous correspondents, who are more conversant with the authorities on ritual than your humble, servant will kindly give their opinion on the question?

Yours fraternally,

J. W.

CHARITY STEWARDS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Permit me to point out to your readers, in reply to Bro. Godtschalk's remarks in last week's issue, that he has misunderstood my letter in CHRONICLE of 26th October. I suggested it was advisable for Lodge funds to be kept under two heads, and separate subscriptions:

1. Charity fund and general expenses.
2. Refreshment and tavern bill expenses.

There are many brethren who subscribe and seldom attend their Lodge; and I repeatedly hear they are under the impression their subscription is used for Charity. If they were to attend the audit meetings, they would soon be relieved of this erroneous impression. If this system were adopted, many brethren would subscribe willingly who now do not, simply because of their inability to attend their Lodges, and they do not feel disposed to see their money expended for the benefit of banqueting members.

Thanking you for your courtesy in publishing my letters,

I remain yours faithfully and fraternally,

DICK RADCLYFFE.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I fear I must plead guilty to having overlooked the quoted passage containing the word "compel," which Bro. Godtschalk included in his letter. But I read Bro. Radclyffe's proposition by the light of common sense, and not in a spirit of hypercritism. I interpreted his meaning to be that Lodges and brethren owed it as a duty to contribute to the necessities of our distressed brethren. This, in my humble judgment, was the limit of Bro. Radclyffe's suggested compulsion. But even if I misinterpreted him, am I not right in stating that every member of a Lodge is compelled to contribute to the Benevolent Fund? In each case, the Charity dispensed by our Grand Lodge to distressed members and their families is the result of compulsory contributions. Therefore, if each Lodge were compelled to contribute a something to each of our Institutions, there would be an excellent precedent for it, and the Charity so dispensed would be a Benevolence justly imposed on the Masonic community, without distinction of persons.

Fraternally yours,

OLD FILE.

Bro. W. C. Parsons is very anxious we should point out to our readers that he never thought of propounding the idea that a Charity Steward could by any known arithmetical process be reduced to a guinea. What he wished to say was, that the Steward's "Fee," not the "Steward," might, in his opinion, very properly be reduced to a guinea. We enter fully into our worthy brother's views. A Steward may, occasionally, be reduced to his last guinea, but that is a figure of speech, not the result of an arithmetical process. Nor are "fees" and "Stewards" convertible terms. If they were, "Our Hercules" and his colleagues of the R.M.I.G. and R.M.B.I. might annually find themselves in a difficulty, as Bro. Best of the Freemasons' Tavern, and Bros. Bertram and Roberts of the Alexandra and Crystal Palaces might, and doubtless would, decline to accept corporally Bro. A. B. C. and Bro. X. Y. Z. in payment of their dinner bills, the said brethren not being current coin of the realm. However, no great harm has been done, and the reason we headed this letter "Charity Stewards" was simply that such has been throughout the heading appropriated to this particular correspondence.

UNITED GRAND LODGE OF ENGLAND.

THE regular Quarterly Communication of Grand Lodge was held on Wednesday evening at Freemasons' Hall. The Right Hon. the Earl of Carnarvon, Pro Grand Master, occupied the chair, and, in the absence of Lord Skelmersdale, R. W. Bro. W. B. Beach M.P. Prov. Grand Master of Hants and Isle of Wight acted as Deputy Grand Master. Lord Tenterden C.B. occupied the Grand Senior Warden's chair, and Sir Harcourt Johnstone M.P. was in his place as Grand Junior Warden. There were likewise present—Bros. S. Rawson Past District G. Master of China, Sir Albert Woods (Garter) G. Director of Ceremonies, Æn. McIntyre, Q.C., Grand Registrar, John Hervey Grand Secretary, Rev. H. A. Pickard and Rev. W. A. Hill Grand Chaplains, Rev. C. W. Arnold, Rev. T. R. Wigram, Rev. J. E. Cox, and Rev. R. J. Simpson Past Grand Chaplains, H. G. Buss Grand Asst. Secretary, Erasmus Wilson and Lieut.-Col. Shadwell H. Clerke G. S. Deacons, J. M. P. Montagu and Raphael Costa G.J. Deacons, W. H. Lucia G. Sword Bearer, Captain Platt P.G. Warden, J. L. Thomas Asst. G.D. of C., Ex-Sheriff Hutton P.G.D., W. F. Nettleship P.G.D., J. M. Clabon P.G.D., W. Ganz P.G. Organist, Lieut.-Col. Creaton P.G.D., Joshua Nunn, F. Richardson, T. Fenn P.G.D., J. A. Rucker President Col. Board, Captain Philips P.G.D., J. C. Parkinson P.G.D., &c., &c. After the usual preliminaries and the confirmation of the minutes of the previous Quarterly Communication, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, on the motion of Bro. Richardson, was re-nominated Grand Master for the ensuing year. The Pro Grand Master then announced that by the lamented death of Bro. F. Pepys Cockerell, the office of Grand Superintendent of Works had become vacant, and His Royal Highness the Grand Master had appointed Bro. John Gibson, a Fellow of the Royal Institute of British Architects, and Past Master of Prince of Wales Lodge, No. 259, to fill the vacancy. His lordship, having paid a tribute of respect to the memory of our deceased brother, whose name must ever be associated with the building in which they were assembled, invested Bro. Gibson with the insignia of his office, and Bro. Gibson, having been conducted to his seat on the dais by Sir Albert Woods, was saluted according to ancient custom. The Pro Grand Master then announced that Bro. Clabon had been re-appointed President of the Board of Benevolence, and that, as the only brethren brought forward for election, Bros. Joshua Nunn and James Brett were re-elected Senior and Junior Vice-Presidents thereof respectively. Only twelve Past Masters were nominated for election on the Lodge of Benevolence, and the twelve were elected accordingly. Their names will be found at foot of this report. Bro. Raynham W. Stewart P.G.D. then rose and interrupted the proceedings for the purpose of making an appeal on behalf of the brethren and their privileges, but the brethren for the most part treated the appeal with remarkable indifference, and Bro. Raynham Stewart very properly resumed his seat without concluding his observations. Bro. Clabon, supported by Bro. Nunn, then moved the confirmation of the several grants made by the Board of Benevolence, after which the Earl of Carnarvon announced that Bro. Edward Tyrrell Heath, Dep. District G. Master of Bombay, had kindly presented G. Lodge with a highly interesting and even invaluable record of the early history of Speculative Freemasonry. This was none other than a book, consisting of only a few pages and in a splendid state of preservation, of which, as far as is known, there is only one other copy extant. It is a record of the Lodges in existence in the year 1729, and of these—only fifty-four in number—there are still several yet flourishing which, as his lordship had been informed, were distinguished by the very features which characterised them at the date of this Book. Accordingly, Lord Carnarvon proposed, in the first instance, that they should accept it, and that it should lie in the Grand Secretary's Office for the period of one month, in order that brethren might have an opportunity of inspecting it, and in the next that a vote of thanks should be passed to the donor. Both these motions were seconded by Bro. Beach, Deputy G. Master, and were agreed to unanimously. The motions standing in the name of Bro. Clabon were then discussed and agreed to, and G. Lodge was closed. The following are the names of the several Past Masters elected to serve on the Board of Benevolence, namely:—Bros. W. H. Perryman P.M. 3, Griffiths Smith P.M. 21, Charles Atkins P.M. 27, Henry Bartlett P.M. 147, W. Mann P.M. 186, C. F. Hogard P.M. 205, H. Massey P.M. 619, W. Maidwell P.M. 657, Henry Garrod P.M. 749, W. J. Marlis P.M. 1,642, W. S. Christian P.M. 1,662, J. M. Klenck P.M. 1,666.

In a letter we published last week, signed "T. B. W.," it was proposed that the approaching marriage of the Earl of Carnarvon should be made the occasion for presenting his lordship with some mark of the esteem in which he is held by the Craft. This week we publish a letter signed "ONE WHO WILL SUBSCRIBE TO BOTH FUNDS," on the same subject. Our latter correspondent is more detailed in his suggestion, and proposes that a presentation should be made both to the Duke of Connaught and the Earl of Carnarvon. He even goes further, and suggests that it should take the form of a Perpetual Presentation to one or other of the Schools, to be named in the one case the CARNARVON and in the other the CONNAUGHT Presentation, the balance remaining in each case to be appropriated to the purchase of a wedding gift to the bride elect. We can only say that the proposition meets with our entire approval. This does not, of course, apply to the details, but to the suggestion pure and simple, which, in our judgment, should be immediately acted upon. For ourselves, we shall be happy to render all the assistance in our power.

MARK MASONRY IN READING.

THERE has hitherto been no Mark Masons' Lodge in Reading, and we believe that there is only one in the county, namely that recently consecrated at Abingdon. A resolve had been made to establish a Lodge of the same description in Reading, and the determination has been very successfully carried out. On Monday the ceremony of consecrating the Leopold Lodge took place at the Masonic Hall. Previously, however, to the ceremony a Lodge was formed, and twenty-one brethren were advanced to the degree of M.M.M. It is very rarely that so many candidates offer themselves for advancement, and the fact that they were so numerous augurs well for the future prosperity of the Lodge. The ceremony of advancement was most ably gone through by Bro. E. Margrett, the W.M. of the Lodge. The Consecrating Officer was Bro. F. Binckes, who in Mark Masonry is Past Grand Warden and Grand Secretary. Bro. Binckes discharged his duties as Consecrating Officer in a felicitious manner, and in the oration he gave a very interesting description of the teaching peculiar to the degree of Mark Master Mason. At the conclusion of the ceremony of Consecration the W.M. invested the Officers, amongst whom were Bro. W. H. Herbert (S.W.), C. Stephens (J.W.), the Rev. C. R. Honey (Chaplain), C. Stephens (Treasurer), and T. J. Pulley (Secretary). Several distinguished brethren were elected honorary members of the Lodge. Amongst them was H.R.H. Prince Leopold, who had been requested to allow the Lodge to be named after him. He had given his consent to the proposal, and had also expressed his willingness to become an honorary member of the Lodge. Previously to the closing of the Lodge a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to the Consecrating Officer and to the other brethren who had taken part in the proceedings of the day. The Lodge was, it should be added, very numerously attended, and indeed the Masonic Hall has scarcely ever been so full. After the Lodge had been closed the brethren, to the number of about fifty, sat down to a banquet at the Ship Hotel. It was served by Bro. Bailey in his usual excellent style. The W.M. presided. Several speeches were delivered, and all of the brethren who took part in the proceedings appeared to be of opinion that the Lodge would be likely to maintain an excellent position. In reference to the question of charity, attention was called to the Mark Benevolent Fund. It was stated that it was originally intended to expend the fund in making grants to Mark Master Masons who were in necessitous circumstances. From a very small beginning the fund had, however, largely increased and it had been determined, chiefly at the instance of Bro. the Rev. G. R. Portal, to allocate a certain portion of the fund to the special purpose of assisting brethren in meeting the expenses incurred in the education of their sons. The W.M. (Bro. Margrett) expressed his intention of acting as one of the Stewards at the next Festival of the Mark Benevolent Fund, and the announcement gave general satisfaction. In the course of the evening some very good songs were given, and the singing and playing of Bro. F. H. Cozens, Prov. G. Organist, were especially appreciated. After having had a most agreeable gathering, the brethren separated shortly before ten o'clock.—Berkshire Chronicle.

The Grand Lodge of the Most Ancient and Honourable Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons of Pennsylvania. Its Early History and Constitutions. From A.L. 5730, A.D. 1730. Its Minutes and Proceedings. Part II. Compiled and published by the Library Committee of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania. Philadelphia: Sherman and Co., Printers, 1878.

SOMETHING like a year has elapsed since it became our duty to notice Part I. of the Early History and Constitutions of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, and had the Library Committee of Grand Lodge there and then terminated its labours we should have had no reason to be surprised at their conduct. The forty and odd thousand brethren in the State are so deeply interested in the history of the Grand Body to which they belong, that from the Report of the said Committee published in the Proceedings of the Grand Lodge for the past year, they would seem to have purchased among them about two hundred copies. Or, to put the matter in a different form, about two hundred out of forty thousand have mustered up sufficient courage to expend the munificent sum of one dollar, or four shillings of our money, in the purchase of the first part of a most interesting as well as valuable contribution to Masonic History. Under these circumstances it reflects the utmost credit on the Library Committee that in the teeth of such terrible discouragement they should have [illegible] prosecuting their task, and if only one-half of our Pennsylvanian Craftsmen have any sense of shame about them they will now respond, as it is their duty, to the appeal to their honour, and liberally support their Grand Lodge Committee in their erection of this grand national Masonic monument. Let it no longer be chargeable against the Pennsylvanian Craftsmen that any number of dollars are invariably forthcoming when it is a question of Masonic show, or dining sumptuously, or going on a pilgrimage, while not a single dollar can be spent on one or two occasions in the year for Masonic literature. Having spoken thus freely, we now enter on the more agreeable task of noting what is worthy of note in Part II. of these Proceedings. Remarking first that this Part is embellished with what strikes us as being an admirable Portrait of the great Benjamin Franklin, we will add incidentally that it carries us to the month of March 1799, thus extending over a period of about twelve-and-a-half years. We left off at the close of Part I. with the formal severance of the connection formerly existing between Pennsylvania and the G. Lodge (Ancients) of England. This severance was resolved upon on 26th September 1786, and appears to have been thought worthy of comment in the columns of the Pennsylvania Gazette of the 4th October following. The comments are made in the greatest courtesy toward British Masons. Having pointed out that the Masonic separation naturally follows the political, and that "it would be as improper as absurd that we should again yield an obedience to her wild, extravagant claims of power, as that Lodges of this Empire should be subservient to jurisdictions from abroad," the writer goes on to say, "But notwithstanding our Masonic dependence on Great Britain is now no more, yet those fine-spun cords of love and affection, by which the Fraternity are drawn together, will no doubt ever induce them .... as a band of Brothers connected by the dearest ties .... to cultivate the most social intercourses with each other. The means of this happy cultivation and improvement will probably be the frequent subject of our best and most serious disquisitions. We shall endeavour to hold forth every engaging allurement, that the members of the British G. Lodge may approach and apply their elegant wonder-working fingers to finish the beauties of so well ordered a dome in this new empire, and make this favourite land what we really wish, the distinguished residence, the last best retreat of heaven-born Masonry." The severance was also ordered to be notified to the English Grand Lodge aforesaid, in a letter bidding farewell to the latter. Accordingly, at the adjourned Communication held on the 16th October 1786, the draft of the said order was submitted and unanimously approved, and the first step rendered necessary by this act of Masonic independence was taken, namely, the preparation and approval of a form of Warrant to be issued to its subordinate Lodges, by the new Grand Lodge. At the same time a circular letter was ordered to be written and forwarded to the different daughter Lodges announcing the erection of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania into a Grand Lodge, and calling upon them to surrender their old Warrants in return for new ones, to be issued to them free of expense. At an extra Grand Lodge held on 2nd December, it was resolved to celebrate St. John's Day by attending Divine Service in one of the City Churches, and a Committee was entrusted with the preparation of the arrangements. On the 18th December it was announced that the service would be held in St. Paul's Church, and that the Rev. Mr. Pilmore had consented to preach the sermon. At the same meeting a letter was read from Lodge No. 7 setting forth that they, with Lodges Nos. 6, 17, 19, 29, and 37 (held at Somerset, Maryland), had met and declared and constituted themselves an independent and Grand Lodge—that of Maryland. A committee was appointed to reply to this letter. At an extra Grand Lodge on the 2nd January 1787, the thanks of the meeting were voted unanimously to the Rev. Mr. Pilmore for his sermon, and to Rev. Dr. Magaw for his prayer on St. John's Day, and a request for a copy of each with a view to their being printed was also made, while committees were appointed to distribute the sums collected among the distressed prisoners in gaol and among distressed brethren. Bro. Adcock was shortly afterwards re-elected Grand Master, Br. Jonathan Bayard Smith being appointed his Deputy, while Bros. Joseph Dean, Geo. Ord, Gavin Hamilton, and Asheton Humphreys were elected to the offices of Grand Senior Warden, Grand Junior Warden, Grand Treasurer, and Grand Secretary respectively. Grand Deacons were next appointed, and the Grand Master proclaimed, after which his Deputy installed the other principal officers. On motion duly made and seconded, a Bro. Wm. Williams, a Master Mason, was passed to the chair with the usual ceremonies. On the 13th January, the Grand Lodge met for the purpose of constituting the new Lodge No. 19, for which a warrant had previously been ordered to be issued, and the W.M. and Wardens were installed. At the Quarterly Communication on 26th March, the Secretary was instructed to call upon the late officers of vacant Lodges to deliver their books, papers, jewels, and furniture to the Grand Lodge, and to send copies of the sermon and prayer to each Lodge in the jurisdiction, as well as to every Grand Lodge in the United States. The Secretary was also ordered to inform the latter of the declaration of independence by the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania and to send copies of the Bye-laws and Constitutions. There are two other items of interest recorded at this meeting, namely, that the Treasurer was ordered to buy for the use of Grand Lodge every book which appeared interesting on Masonry, as well as a ticket in the lottery. At the Quarterly Communication in June it was announced that the ticket had been purchased and drawn blank. At this meeting the Lodges in arrear of dues were called upon to pay as early as possible, and it was resolved that as soon as the Grand Lodge funds would permit, it should subscribe to the Philadelphia Infirmary for the relief of sick persons. A resolution directing that the Grand Master and Deputy Grand Master should present a copy of the Constitutions to General Washington is the last minute recorded of this meeting. In September there would appear to have been no meeting—at all events there are no minutes of one. We pass therefore to the Communication in December when, inter alia, it was resolved to appoint a committee with a view to procuring a room in the Philosophical Hall, then building, for the use of the Grand Lodge and its subordinate Lodges. The election of Grand Officers was then proceeded with, Bro. Adcock being re-elected G.M., and Bro. Jon. B. Smith re-appointed his Deputy. Steps were likewise taken to relieve the Grand Tyler in his present distresses, and also generally for the relief of distressed brethren, it being recommended to the several Lodges to open subscriptions for the latter. The minutes close with an order to the Grand Secretary to convene the members of Lodge No. 2, which had declined its meetings for some time, with a view to considering and ameliorating its position. The usual installation of Grand Officers on St. John's Day was not fully carried out, as the Grand Master was unable to be present, but this was done on the 1st January 1788, when also a motion was carried that the sums subscribed towards building a home for Grand Lodge on a plot of ground given by Bro. Jos. Dean, G.S. Warden, should be reported at the next meeting, and also that plans for the said building should be submitted at the same time. Beyond, however, a similar motion at the June Grand Lodge, nothing was done for some time, but in December of the same year arrangements were ordered for raising £40 or £50 towards erecting a temporary building, and on St. John's Day orders were issued for such building to be proceeded with. Towards the close of the year the Grand Lodge of Virginia solicited correspondence with that of Pennsylvania, and the inevitable Committee was appointed to draw up an answer. On the same occasion a change was made in the Government of the Craft, and Bro. Adcock having declined re-election, his Deputy, Bro. J. B. Smith was chosen for the ensuing year, and he and his principal Officers were installed on St. John's Day. On 30th March 1789 a letter was read from Grand Lodge of Maryland, enclosing minutes of its proceedings in October of the previous year, and formally announcing the separation from Pennsylvania of the Lodges now comprised in the said Grand Lodge of Maryland. Several late members of Lodge, No. 2, succeeded on 15th June, in obtaining a Warrant to be called No. 2, the attempt to revive the original Lodge without some such step having apparently proved unsuccessful. An application by certain brethren for a Warrant for a new Lodge to be held at Norfolk, Virginia, was declined on the ground that there was a Grand Lodge already existing in that State. Bro. J. B. Smith was re-elected Grand Master on 14th December 1782, and retained that high office during the remaining period, to which the minutes recorded in Part II. relate. At the adjourned meeting on 18th December, a Warrant was granted for a Lodge to be held at Port-au-Prince in the island of St. Domingo. The letter recognising the Grand Lodge of Maryland was at the same meeting submitted and approved. On the 21st of the same month the Grand Master tendered his resignation, but from what we have said already it is clear that it was not accepted. On this occasion, and also at the meeting on the 25th following, Bro. M. Ewing, G. Secretary, of New Jersey, was minuted as having been present as a visitor. At the latter Grand Lodge, a new Secretary, in the person of Bro. Peter Le Barbier Duplessis, was chosen in succession to Bro. Asheton Humphreys, whose resignation tendered more than once had at length been accepted, and to whom the thanks of Grand Lodge were unanimously voted in recognition of his long and valuable services to the Craft in Pennsylvania. At the meeting on the 28th December, Bro. M. Ewing, Grand Secretary of New Jersey, being again present, a communication from the Grand Lodge of that State was read, inviting correspondence and the interchange of friendly relations. At the meeting the next day the Code of Laws and Regulations for the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania were submitted and adopted.

The House Surgeon; or, the Doctor at Home—is the title of a brochure, published by the Accident Insurance Company, of 7 Bank Buildings, E.C. The author is the late Alfred Smee, F.R.S., Surgeon to the Bank of England, whose name alone is a guarantee that its contents are useful and practical. The illustrations, too, have been drawn under his direction, and greatly enhance the value of the little work. In fact, no more useful book has, in our judgment, been published, and the Accident Insurance Company are entitled to the thanks of the public for placing at its disposal, for the modest charge of sixpence, yet another (thetenth) edition of the House Surgeon, which ought to have a place in every household. It contains instructions for the treatment of accidents and emergencies before the arrival of medical aid. Thus, if any one burns or wounds himself, or sustains the fracture of a limb, or in the case of possible death from drowning, a reference to the House Surgeon will show clearly what should be done while medical aid is being sought. The value of such a book is so obvious that we need hardly add anything to the remarks we have already made. By following the simple instructions it contains, not only must the sufferer be benefited, and the work of the physician or surgeon, when he does arrive, facilitated, or, it may be, rendered unnecessary, but, in extreme cases, a life, which otherwise might be sacrificed, may very possibly be saved.

The ceremony of Installation will be rehearsed on Wednesday next, at 7.45 p.m., in the La Tolerance Lodge of Instruction, No. 538, on which occasion Bro. W. H. Dean P.P.G.S.B. Dorset will preside.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

THE Queen with Princess Beatrice paid a visit to the Empress Eugenie at Chiselhurst on Tuesday. On Wednesday Her Majesty held a Council at Windsor. The Prince of Wales on Thursday passed through Leeds, returning from a brief visit to the Hoo, and was presented with an address. The town was gaily decorated in honor of the visit.

A Cabinet Council was held on Tuesday, at which all the Ministers were present.

The Session of Parliament was opened on Thursday by Royal Commission. The Queen's Speech, read by the Lord Chancellor, was very brief, and merely referred to the hostilities which the unfriendly conduct of the Ameer of Afghanistan had rendered necessary, with a declaration of belief that the Treaty of Berlin would be carried out. At the Evening Sitting in the Lords, the debate upon the Address was continued until 11 o'clock, but no amendment was moved, although Lord Granville, Earl Grey, and other Peers took exception to the Government policy in respect of Afghanistan. In the Commons, Lord Hartington said he should not oppose the voting of supplies, but the course of the Government would require explanation at a later period. The debate was continued by many speakers, and the Address was eventually agreed to. Vacancies have arisen in the Commons by reason of the death of Mr. Dunbar, member for New Ross, and Professor Smyth member for Londonderry, and also in consequence of the resignation, by reason of ill health, of Mr. K. Hodgson, member for Bristol, and Mr. Sandford, member for Malvon. Sir John Guest and Mr. Lewis Fry are the Candidates for the Bristol seat, and Sir W. N. Abdy and Mr. G. Cortauld for that of Maldon.

Notice has been given of an application to Parliament for an Act to authorise the affairs of the City of Glasgow Bank to be settled by arbitration. The unlimited liability attaching to the possession by the Caledonian Bank of four shares in the City of Glasgow Bank has led to an arrangement between the former and other Scotch Banks, and it was decided on Wednesday that the Caledonian Bank should present a petition for liquidation.

The Bishop of Durham, in consequence of continued illness, has resigned his office, and foregoes the pension prescribed by Act of Parliament.

The most important news from Afghanistan is the success of General Roberts in capturing the Peiwar Pass. Checked on Saturday by a determined fire, the General retired, but on Tuesday renewed the attack with great vigour, and succeeded in expelling the enemy from formidable positions and capturing 18 guns. The evacuation of Jellalabad is stated upon official authority, and there is general belief that the Afghan troops have been withdrawn to Cabul. The Khyber Pass has been re-opened to convoys, and in the valleys the British forces receive abundant supplies. The definitive Treaty of Peace between Russia and Turkey appears now to be in course of negotiation, with some prospect of a satisfactory result. The Emperor of Russia, after visiting Moscow, returned to St. Petersburg, and has publicly declared his expectation that a definitive arrangement with the Porte will shortly be effected. The Turkish General Suleiman Pasha, who commanded the Balkan Army, and so strongly contested the Shipka Pass, has been found guilty by a Court-martial of military misconduct, and sentenced to 15 years' confinement in a fortress.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Lorne have arrived at Ottawa, where, as at every other point of their journey, they were received with the utmost cordiality.

EMULATION LODGE OF IMPROVEMENT.

THE Annual Festival was held in the Grand Hall, Freemasons' Tavern, 29th November 1878. Present: Bros. T. Fenn P.G.D. as W.M.; Bro. C. A. Murton P.G.D. as S.W.; Bro. J. A. Rucker P.G.D. as J.W.; Bro. A. C. Spaull as S.D.; Bro. G. C. Pulsford as J.D.; Bro. W. A. Dawson as I.G.; Bro. W. Smallpeice as Secretary, and about 130 other brethren. The Lodge having been opened in the third degree, the whole of the sections of the first lecture were worked in an able and impressive manner by the undermentioned:—

Section 1. By Bro. A. C. Spaull J.W. 1,768.
„ 3. By Bro. A. D. Renshaw S.D. 194.
„ 4. By Bro. E. Hornblower S.D. 1,604.
„ 5. By Bro. E. G. Tattershall 165.
„ 6. By Bro. F. B. Spaull S.W. 1,768.
„ 7. By Bro. W. A. Dawson W.M. 1,768.

About thirty-three brethren were then proposed as joining members of the Lodge, and Bro. Fenn having vacated the chair, Bro. The Right Hon. Lord Henniker R.W. S.G.W. took his place, and closed down the Lodge in the three degrees.

The brethren then proceeded to an excellent and substantial supper, served by Bro. Best in the large Banquet Hall, the chair being taken by Lord Henniker. Amongst the distinguished brethren who supported his Lordship we noticed Bros. John Hervey Grand Secretary, Captain Philips, Binckes Sec. R.M.I.B., Case, H. J. P. Dumas, Murton, Clarke, Edwin March, and others.

Grace having been said, and the cloth removed, the Chairman gave the usual loyal toasts, which were duly honoured. In proposing the health of the M.W. Grand Master, his Lordship made a fitting allusion to the many estimable qualities of His Royal Highness, and expressed a hope that they might soon have an opportunity of repeating the welcome they had recently given him in that Hall. Passing to the toast of the Grand Officers, Lord Henniker trusted that they might for many years have such rulers in the Craft as the Earl of Carnarvon and Lord Skelmersdale, whose efforts for the welfare of Masonry could not be too highly valued. In responding to this toast, Bro. Clarke said it must be an especial pleasure and satisfaction to the Grand Officers to attend the Emulation Lodge, whose proceedings cast such lustre upon English Masonry. Bro. John Hervey next proposed the health of the Chairman, Lord Henniker, in flattering terms, and bore testimony to his Lordship's great services to the Craft in the Province of Suffolk, remarking that the Lodge of Emulation owed Lord Henniker a debt of gratitude for having, at much inconvenience, undertaken a long journey in order to preside over them that evening. The toast was received with acclamation. Lord Henniker, in responding, complimented the Officers of the Lodge on the splendid working he had witnessed, the gratification derived therefrom fully repaying him for the journey he had undertaken in order to be present. He then proposed the toast of the evening: Success to the Emulation Lodge of Improvement. He considered the Emulation Lodge supplied one of the great Masonic wants, and was becoming a great authority in this country in matters of ritual. "Emulation" was a word we, as Masons, should always have before us, and he could not refrain from connecting with this toast their highly valued friend, Bro. John Hervey, who had been one of the chief supporters of the Lodge of Emulation for over thirty years. They should try, although they would find it a difficult task, to emulate the services of Bro. Hervey. Bro. Hervey in responding, expressed the pleasure he felt in seeing so numerous an assembly that evening, which convinced him that the good which was being done by the Emulation Lodge would continue to increase. In consequence of failing health, he had lately taken no active part in their working, but his Bro. Officers were not likely to let the Lodge fall off either in numbers or efficiency. The Chairman then proposed the health of the Officers of the Emulation Lodge, Bro. Fenn and others, who had given them such a treat that evening by their impressive working of the first lecture. He looked upon Bro. Fenn as a model W.M., and it was only due to Bro. Smallpeice, the indefatigable Secretary to the Lodge, that they should accord him the praise he deserved for his active services in that capacity. Bro. Fenn, in responding, said, that if they had earned any credit for their working, it must be shared alike by all the brethren who had taken part in it; but he might observe that the greater part of them were young members, and it must be gratifying to all present to know that they had received their education in the Lodge of Emulation. Bro. Murton then proposed Prosperity to the Lodge of Unions, under whose Warrant they were privileged to meet. He hoped that as they were proud of their mother Lodge, she was also proud of her offspring, the Lodge of Emulation. He recommended brethren to spare no pains in learning the lectures, so as to arrive at a true understanding of the ceremonies. The toast was responded to by the W.M. of the Lodge of Unions, who gave a short sketch of their history. Bro. Rucker next proposed the toast of the Royal Masonic Institutions, remarking that there were two classes of Masons, namely, those who contributed to the support of the Charities, and those who did not. In coupling with the toast the name of Bro. Binckes, he would leave him to say something on behalf of the claims of the Charities, although advocacy of that kind he looked upon as superfluous, when the advantages of the Charities were so widely known and understood. Bro. Binckes, in responding at some length, made an eloquent appeal to the brethren, observing, in allusion to the remarks of Bro. Rucker, that he feared the class who did not give to the Masonic Charities was more numerous than the class who, acting up to their Masonic profession, contributed freely. He hoped that that state of things would be reversed before long, and he had every confidence that the great body of Masons were alive to the importance and necessity of supporting by all means in their power the various Charities associated with Masonry. The health of the Stewards of the evening, was proposed by Bro. Clarke, and responded to by Bro. Pulsford.

GRAND MARK LODGE.

THE half-yearly Communication of Grand Mark Lodge of England took place on Tuesday evening, at Freemasons' Tavern. Lord Skelmersdale, Grand Master, was unable to be present, and the throne was occupied by the Earl of Limerick, Past Grand Master. There was a large attendance of brethren, among whom were General J. Studholme Brownrigg, Bros. Thos. Halsey, M.P., Captain Philips, S. Rawson, Shadwell H. Clerke, Sir J. Halford, and J. Lewis Thomas. The following business was on the agenda paper:—

Recommendations from the General Board:—

(a) "That in clause 63 of the Book of Constitutions the following words shall in future be omitted, 'Unless by special dispensation of the Grand Master, have been previously installed as Master of some Craft Lodge of Freemasons, and also,'"

(b) "That Grand Lodge authorise a grant of £25 in aid of the brethren of the Mark degree at Curacoa, who lost all their property, and have been reduced to a state of great destitution by the hurricane of September 1877."

(c) "Grants from Benevolent Fund—That £15 be granted to Bro. R. H.; that £10 be granted to the widow of Bro. H."

(d) "That the rules for the management of the Education Fund, now submitted, be approved."

(e) "That the Grand Master be authorised to take charge of certain other orders and degrees connected with Freemasonry, under such conditions as the General Board may from time to time recommend."

After a long discussion on Recommendation a, in which the general feeling of the brethren was against the proposed alteration, the Earl of Limerick drew attention to the circumstance that this clause was not included in the Report of the General Board. It therefore could not be put. This subject then fell to the ground. Recommendations b and c were agreed to. Recommendation d was adopted, with a few minor alterations in some of the bye-laws. On Recommendation e, Brother Binckes explained that the strong argument in favour of it was the desirability of not multiplying supreme jurisdiction in the Degrees or Orders. Several brethren disapproved of the proposition to take other Orders under Grand Mark Lodge, and the Earl of Limerick warned Grand Lodge that by giving the power proposed they would be taking a very serious step, that might lead to discussion which would be inconvenient and injurious to the Mark degree. Bro. C. J. Smith strongly opposed adopting the Side degrees. The Mark degree did did not stand so free from dangers that it could afford to adopt further grounds of opposition by the Craft, and it should endeavour to establish harmony rather than resistance. The motion was ultimately withdrawn, and the Report of the General Board, with this exception, adopted. Bro. Montagu then nominated Lord Skelmersdale for Grand Master for the ensuing year, and the Earl of Limerick distributed charity jewels to Bros. Rev. D. Ace, Robt. Arnison, H. Baget, J. Barker, R. Baggett, Rev. W. Bedford, W. G. Brighten, E. H. Coates, T. Cubitt, R. Eve, J. Fawcett, J. Gardiner, J. R. Gorpel, C. Harding, J. C. Mason, W. Nicholl, Capt. Perkins, C. H. Perrott, Capt. Ritchie, A. Scargill, J. L. Thomas, E. T. Tattershall, F. M. Tindall, F. Trickett, and George Ward Verry. Grand Lodge was then closed.

A centenary warrant having been granted to the members of the Howard Lodge of Brotherly Love, 56, Arundel, Sussex—the Lodge was constituted in London in 1736—on 19th December the Festival will be held, and the Prov. Grand Master Sir W. W. Burrell, Bart., has consented to be present, accompanied by his Officers.

Royal Alfred Lodge of Instruction, No. 780.—The proceedings at the meeting on Friday, 29th ultimo, were of a very interesting character. It has frequently been remarked that a good dinner makes every gathering pass off well. At the present time we are perfectly content to accept this aphorism. We will even go further, and concede that the doings at the gathering we are about to chronicle were especially interesting. About two years back this Lodge of Instruction was started, and the meetings have since been held most regularly, as is evidenced by the reports which have appeared from time to time in our columns. Bro. J. Chambers Roe, a Past Master of the mother Lodge, at all times a sincere and hard-working Mason, was appointed Preceptor, and, under his guidance, the younger members of the Royal Alfred have acquired a knowledge of ritual, and have attained a capacity for office, that will fit them for any duty they may be called on to fill in this or any other Lodge. Friday was the day appointed for the Annual Banquet, and was further made the opportunity, by the members, of testifying to Bro. Roe their appreciation of the kindness he had always evinced, and of offering him some tangible recognition for the trouble he had expended. Bro. C. Costelow presided, and was supported by Bro. Walter Goss I.P.M. and W. Gomm, of the mother Lodge, who respectively filled the chairs of Senior and Junior Wardens. There was a large attendance of members, and Bro. Stanbury—mine host of the Star and Garter—had provided an admirable menu, which was served in the style so characteristic of this establishment. On the removal of the cloth, the toasts customary on these occasions were given and duly acknowledged. Bro. Roe proposed the health of the W.M., who was a young but very energetic Mason. He had been a most persevering student in the Lodge of Instruction, and it was gratifying to all who were present to have Bro. Costelow presiding. After the chairman had expressed his acknowledgments, he brought forward what might be termed the toast of the evening—"Prosperity to the Royal Alfred Lodge of Instruction and the health of the Preceptor." After conveying to Bro. Roe assurances of their appreciation of his zeal, the chairman directed his attention to a splendid clock, on a marble stand, which the members had requested him to present. Bro. Costelow formally handed over the testimonial to their esteemed Preceptor, amid the cheers of all assembled. The following is the inscription:—

Bro. J. Chambers Roe P.M. 780,
Preceptor of the Royal Alfred Lodge of Instruction, No. 780,
As a mark of the esteem of the Brethren,
Who have to acknowledge his zeal and Tender care in imparting to them his Extensive knowledge of the Ritual of the Craft.
29th Nov. 1878.

Bro. Roe gracefully acknowledged the honour paid him by the brethren, for what he considered such trifling services. His work had been truly a labour of love, and as the brethren thought he had been of service to them, the knowledge of it could not but be gratifying. Their valuable gift he should ever pride, and he trusted it would mark the run of time for generations in his family and be esteemed as an heirloom. After other toasts had been disposed of the brethren departed, greatly pleased at the successful result of the meeting.

Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction, No. 860.—Held its weekly meeting on Tuesday evening, at Bro. Smyth's, Sisters Tavern, Pownall-road, Dalston. Bros. Polak W.M., Carr S.W., Brasted J.W., C. Christian as candidate. Bro. Dallas worked the 1st, 2nd and 3rd sections of the lecture, assisted by the brethren. The Audit Committee informed the brethren they had examined the accounts of the Lodge to this date, and found the same correct. Bro. Dallas was elected Secretary and Bro. Smyth Treasurer, for the ensuing year. Bro. Carr will preside next Tuesday evening.

The Lodge was opened at 2.30 p.m., and the minutes of last meeting duly ratified. This being the night for installing the W.M. elect, and the choice of the brethren having fallen upon Bro. White, late S.W., he was presented for the purpose of attaining the distinguished honour of Worshipful Master of the Lodge of Loyalty for the ensuing year. The ceremony was performed by Bro. Wylie, who invested and proclaimed Bro. J. S. White, and requested the brethren to salute him as W.M. The W.M., with the assistance of Bro. Wylie, appointed his Officers as follow:—W. J. Marrow I.P.M., T. Molyneaux S.W., T. Morris J.W., F. Hodgson Secretary, E. Beilby S.D., R. B. Woodward J.D., W. Harrison P. Prov. D.C., C. F. Mermagen Chap., Dr. Ricketts S.S., H. L. Rieley J.S., W. R. Ward I.G., J. Taylor Tyler. After some business of a private nature had been transacted, and the usual preliminaries observed, the Lodge was called from labour to banquet. The spacious and comfortable hall in which our St. Helen's brethren meet has recently undergone complete renovation, and on this occasion everything looked quite smart. Great credit is due to the hostess of the Fleece Hotel for the great interest she always evinces for the comfort and enjoyment of the brethren. Mrs. Taylor prides herself on her ability to provide a menu which, while it gratifies all, cannot be excelled for récherché character. Bro. George Broadbridge P.P.G.D.C. ably directed the ceremonies of the evening. The musical brethren (Capt. Windus, G. Barton, D. Gaskin, H. C. Lockhart, Taylor accompanied by R. B. Woodward, who presided at the piano and organ) added greatly to the enjoyment. On the removal of the cloth the W.M. gave the three toasts which usually head the list. Bro. Gaskin then sang "The Worthy Mason," after which W. Bro. White rose to propose the health of their Prov. G. Lord Skelmersdale Deputy G.M. of England, and the Prov. G. Officers past and present. Bro. White had attended as many Prov. G. Lodges as possible, and had been very much pleased and pleased on such occasions by the able manner in which everything was carried out. It must have been gratifying to all, as it was to him, to witness such a large attendance at Prov. Grand Lodge as there was recently at Liverpool. He was very grateful as many Prov. Grand Officers had done him the honour of attending his Lodge. All must feel it a great distinction to have the worthy Prov. Grand Secretary among them. He was pleased to say he had visited the Lodge before, and they were always glad to welcome him. He united the name of Bro. Alpass P.G. Sec. with the toast, and felt sure it needed no further commendation to ensure that brother's name being most cordially received. There was a time when Provincial Grand Lodge honoured St. Helens with its meeting, and he hoped the time was not far distant when they would do so again. Bro. Alpass, in the course of his reply, gave the brethren some good advice as to the means to be pursued when matters were not quite as straight as could be wished, and stated that it was much better to explain any grievance which might exist privately to the W.M. than run the risk of causing discord by publicly demonstrating it in open Lodge. He congratulated the members on the prosperous condition of their Lodge, and hoped that their balance—close upon £150—would be judiciously invested. He would suggest that they make a grant of ten guineas to each of the three London Charities. This was not an unreasonable sum, but it would be the means of handing down the names of the present members with credit to those who might follow, and would be a good example to all who might try to emulate them. The I.P.M. proposed the Army, Navy and Reserve Forces, uniting therewith the name of Bro. Capt. Windus, which was followed by the musical brethren singing "Comrades in Arms," in capital style. Bro. Capt. Windus had great pleasure, as an officer of the Reserve Force, in replying to the toast. At the present time a small portion of our Army was engaged in a war, the difficulty and danger of which could not be easily realised; but with the characteristic pluck of our soldiers, the ability of our officers, and the full equipment of modern war appliances, he considered there was no doubt our forces would give a good account of themselves. Worshipful Bro. Marrow again assumed the gavel, to propose a toast which he knew would receive most cordial reception. Diligently, step by step, Bro. White had worked himself up to the highest office in Lodge, and by strict attention to his various duties, efficient working, and courteous bearing, he had gained the love and esteem of all, both in the Lodge and in every day life. Bro. Marrow was pleased to see him occupy this proud position of W.M. He was sure he would discharge its duties with the same zeal, attention, and efficiency he had those of his previous offices; he felt that no words could ensure a more hearty welcome to the toast than it was their desire to give. Bro. Barton favoured the brethren by singing "The Pilgrim of Love." The W.M. in his reply stated that it had been his aim and endeavour to attend the meetings of the Lodge regularly, and to perform his duties faithfully. He not only attended the regular communications of the Lodge, but derived great pleasure and advantage from attending the Lodge of Instruction. He wished to impress on the minds of all the brethren that in order to acquire proficiency in the Craft, they must study, persevere, and practically utilise their time and talents; there was no place where a Brother could acquire so much practical knowledge of Freemasonry as in a Lodge of Instruction. With reference to his position of W.M.; he deeply feel the responsibility of the post, and in proportion to its responsibility, would endeavour to use extra zeal and caution, so that he might discharge the duties to the credit and welfare of the Lodge, and to the satisfaction of those who had so confidingly placed the government of the Lodge in his care. He hoped the remarks of Bro. Alpass would make a deep and lasting impression on each and all, and that the cloud which had that day hung over the proceedings would be dispersed, and the future be happy and prosperous. He next proposed the health of the I.P.M. Bro. Marrow. The prosperity the Lodge during his year of office had been very great. It was his privilege to present to Brother Marrow a Past Master's jewel, which had been subscribed for by the brethren as a mark of the high esteem in which they held him, and as a token of appreciation for the way in which he had discharged his duties. In placing the jewel upon Bro. Marrow's breast, he wished him long life to wear it, and called upon the brethren to unite in drinking to his very good health. Bro. G. Broadbridge called for a salute of twenty-one guns, which was given. Bro. Marrow felt grateful for the kindness shown him, and also for the great distinction conferred in presenting him with a Past Master's jewel. He should wear it, not merely as an emblem of the office he had vacated, but more particularly as a memento of fraternal regard. He was happy to know that at the termination of his year of office that he had won and maintained the good opinion of the brethren. He also thanked the Officers for their hearty co-operation during the past year. The next toast was the Officers of the Lodge, Past and Present. With regard to the Past Officers, the members had seen and heard how admirably they had done their duty, and the W.M. hoped the appointment of Officers made that day would redound to the credit and prosperity of the Lodge, and meet with the approbation of the brethren. The musical brethren again favoured the brethren with a very melodious selection, "As the Moments Roll," after which Bro. Dana P.M. returned thanks for the Past Officers, and Brother S.W. for the Present. He did so with pleasure, feeling confident that each and every brother officer would attend his duties punctually, and maintain the position confided to him with efficiency. They would be pleased to receive the instruction of their elder brethren, and profit by their experience in the Craft. His love for the Craft, the deep interest he had ever manifested for the welfare of the Lodge, and the important office he now filled would be sufficient incentive for him to redouble his energies in order to make the future prosperous and happy. The W.M. next proposed the health of the Installing Master. He had carried out the ceremony to the delight and edification of all. The toast was received with Masonic honours. Bro. Taylor favoured the brethren by singing "The Holy Friar," after which Bro. Wylie responded. Bro. Leather proposed the Visiting Brethren, coupling with the same the names of Brothers Tobias and Taylor. Bro. Tobias felt doubly honoured in having his name united with the toast. He was glad for the privilege of being present. He did not consider it too much to say that the visitors had been most bountifully provided for and fraternally entertained. He trusted that the Lodge might continue as prosperous in the future as it had been in the past. Bro. Taylor also responded, to the same purport. Bro. Robinson proposed the Masonic Charities, and was followed by Bro. Wolfenden, who also urged the claims of our noble Institutions. Bro. Broadbridge responded in his usual able and impressive manner. Bro. Morris J.W. proposed The Ladies. In doing so he stated that the toast was one of the most interesting that could be submitted. The ladies, although not admitted to our gatherings, are closely united with us in all our social positions in life. We are greatly indebted to them for many comforts. He was sure among a body of Freemasons it would be impossible to find a brother so ungallant as not to drink heartily to the toast. "The Image of the Rose" was sung by the Musical Brethren, and Bro. Gurney responded on behalf of the fair sex. Bro. Lockhart sang "Nancy o' Bristol," and then Rev. Bro. Mermagen proposed the health of the Musical Brethren in deservedly complimentary terms, uniting with the toast the name of Bro. R. B. Woodward, whom he described as the pervading musical genius of the Lodge. The toast was cordially received, after which "Come, Boys, Drink," was capitally rendered. Bro. Woodward, in returning thanks for the toast, said he should always do all in his power for the good of the Lodge. From the remarks of his Rev. Brother, he understood that the beauty and solemnity of music in the ritual was admitted. No doubt it added additional grandeur to what is in itself sublime and profound. The W.M. now called the Lodge back to labour, when it was suggested that the consideration of Votes for the Charities should be left over until the next regular meeting, and accordingly the Lodge was closed in due and ancient form.

Whittington Lodge of Instruction, No. 862.—At the weekly meeting held on Wednesday, 4th inst., at Bro. Hyde's, Red Lion, Poppins-court, Fleet-street. Bro. Abell as W.M., Tate S.W., Knill Abell J.W., Vizzard S.D., Hallam J.D., Brown I.G., Long P.M. and Preceptor, and others. The whole of the ceremony and lecture of the first degree were rehearsed, after which Bro. Tate was elected W.M. for the ensuing week, when he will perform the ceremony of the second degree.

St. Augustine Lodge of Instruction, No. 972.—Met for the first time at the New Masonic Hall, Canterbury, on Wednesday, 27th November. Bro. Vile, W.M. for the evening, rehearsed the ceremony of initiation, and Bro. Rossiter gave the charge. The Secretary read a summary of the attendance and working of the past year, from which it appeared that although the attendances had not been quite so large (owing to circumstances which are now removed), the work had not fallen off. Not only have the ceremonies been worked frequently, but the Fifteen Sections have been given twice, and some of them as many as six times. The attendance on Wednesday night was good, and augurs well for a successful year.

Wandsworth Lodge of Instruction, No. 1,044.—A meeting was held at the Spread Eagle Hotel, Wandsworth, on Wednesday, the 4th inst. Bro. J. J. Holland was W.M., Bro. F. Reed S.W., and Bro. W. A. Blackmore J.W. The first and second degrees were rehearsed, Brother Wardroper candidate. Several of the brethren offered to present the Lodge with some working tools. The subject is to be considered at the next meeting. Besides those above mentioned, there were present—Bros. W. A. Morgan, J. G. Carter, H. J. Newens, and A. A. Denham Sec.

Upton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1,227.—At Bro. Bolton's King and Queen, Norton Folgate, on Thursday, the 29th November. Present—Bros. Hine W.M., Pearcy S.W., Gieseke J.W., Townsend Sec., Bolton S.D., Serjeant J.D., Richmond I.G. also Bros. Abrahams, Shroad, Peacock, &c. After the usual formalities had been complied with, the Lodge was advanced, and Bro. Abrahams gave proof of his proficiency and was entrusted. Lodge was opened up, and the ceremony of raising was rehearsed in a very able manner by the W.M., Bro. Abrahams as candidate. Lodge was closed down to the first degree. The W.M. vacated the chair in favour of Bro. Pearcy, by whom the ceremony of initiation was rehearsed in an excellent manner, Bro. Richmond candidate. The W.M. having resumed, Bro. Pearcy was elected W.M. for the next meeting. The following brethren were elected auditors, according to the bye-laws:—Bros. Bolton, Townsend, Hine, Pearcy, and Serjeant, after which Lodge was closed and adjourned.

Clapton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1356.—29th Nov.—Present—Bros. Bell W.M., Spargin S.W., Buck J.W., McMillan S.D., Cogan J.D., Goddard I.G.; also Bros. Soper, Greenwood, J. Badkin, Cusworth, Hobbs, L. Coubro, Leech, Stevens, and several other brethren. After preliminaries, the ceremony of passing was rehearsed, Bro. L. Coubro candidate. The necessary questions were then answered, and the same candidate was raised to the degree of M.M. The annual supper will take place on Friday, 13th December, at the White Hart Tavern, Clapton, when Bro. J. L. Cogan, W.M. of the Clapton Lodge, will occupy the chair, on which occasion a large attendance is anticipated. Brethren who are unable to use their tickets are requested to return them not later than the 11th instant.

Royal Arthur Lodge of Instruction, Battersea.—On Tuesday evening, the 3rd inst., the Fifteen Sections were worked at the Prince's Head, York-road, Battersea, under the guidance of Bro. Collings W.M., who had for his Wardens Bros. Leaper and P.M. Whitley. There was a good attendance of the brethren, who one and all were highly gratified with the able manner in which the work was carried out. It would indeed be unkind to bestow more praise on one worker than on another; but the faultless manner in which P.M.'s Wise, Read, and Davis, and Bros. Leaper and Farwig fulfilled the duties, allotted to them, deserve special mention. A vote of thanks was ordered to be recorded to the W.M., the brethren who had worked the sections, and to the host, for the kindness shown in providing for the creature comforts. We must certainly congratulate the Royal Arthur Lodge of Instruction on the progress they are making.

Lodge of Equity, No. 1384.—The regular meeting of this Lodge was held at the Alfords Chambers, Widnes, on the 5th instant. Present—Bros. J. W. Wareing I.P.M. as W.M., H. S. Oppenheim as I.P.M., J. White J.W. as S.W., J. Foster as J.W., A. Telbutt Sec., J. W. Carlile Treas., F. A. R. Neill S.D., A. G. Kyle J.D., G. Purver I.G., J. Taylor Tyler; Bros. C. Gerrard W.M. 758, A. Speakman, John Matthews, James Rimmer, W. Cooper, F. Pankhurst, &c. Visitor—S. M. Davies FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE. The Lodge was opened at 6.30 with solemn prayer, and the minutes of the last regular meeting read and ratified. The presiding W.M. deplored the absence of the W.M., which was unavoidable; the same may be said with regard to the other absent Officers, whoare usually very punctual. There being no work before the Lodge, the Worshipful Brother closed the same in due and ancient form, and the brethren adjourned to supper. The brethren of 1384 have just taken new quarters, and it reflects great credit on them for furnishing so compact a little Lodge room in which to hold their meetings. On these occasions the usual custom of adopting a series of toasts is dispensed with, being supplanted by a social chat round the festive board. Each brother having done full justice to the good things provided, and a pleasant evening having been spent, the brethren dispersed at an early hour.

Falcon Lodge, No. 1416.—W. Bro. Geo. Marwood, P. Dep. Prov. Grand Master for North and East Yorkshire, will, on Thursday next, perform the ceremony of installation of the W.M. elect of this Lodge (Bro. J. T. Wilkinson), at the Masonic Hall, Thirsk, at two p.m. A large attendance of brethren is anticipated.

Lodge, No. 384, and Dr. E. P. Edwards of St. Cybi Lodge, No. 597, were ballotted for, as joining members, and unanimously elected. Bro. Wm. Francis Jones, the candidate to be passed to the second degree, was then examined and and approved. The Lodge was advanced, and Bro. Jones was admitted and passed, the ceremony being performed by the W.M., assisted by the S.W., who gave the lecture on the tracing board; and the J.W., who presented the working tools. The Lodge was then closed in the second degree, and a proposition was made that the Brother to be selected for the painting by Bro. Mercier, to be presented to the Lodge, should be by ballot, which unanimously was in favour of W. Bro. W. Bulkeley Hughes, M.P., and D.P.G.M. of North Wales and Salop, who has been a joining member of the St. Elath Lodge since its consecration; and who was the principal mover for its formation, he having from its commencement always evinced the liveliest interest in the welfare of the St. Elath Lodge. The harmonium used in the Lodge was presented by him, and when the Lodge funds were at a low ebb he magnanimously came forward with pecuniary assistance, and it is the unanimous opinion of the brethren that a more deserving brother, or a more worthy Mason, could not have been selected than Bro. W. Bulkeley Hughes. The Lodge was then closed in due form.

City of Westminster Lodge, No. 1563.—The installation meeting was held on 28th ult., at the Regent Masonic Hall, Air-street, Regent-street, W. The chair was taken by Bro. Green 1687, Albert Fish J.W. 1366, G. Hammond 1765, J. Berrow 190, W. H. Fletcher W.M. 190, G. Draper P.M. 1305, J. L. Baker P.M. 1305, D. W. Belfrage S.W. 179, H. Gloster W.M. 1531, A. J. Manning W.M. 1472, J. Austin P.M. 753, M. Crook 1614, A. Bassington S.W. 205, R. Collingham Perfect Ashlar, W. H. Dean W.M. 417, L. Ascott P.M. 733, John Kent 192, W. F. Neave 1314, U. Ponsford 25, Louis Beck P.M. 1687 W.M. elect 1559, W. W. Morgan 211. On the opening of the Lodge the minutes were read and confirmed, Bro. Jas. Middleton, a candidate for passing, underwent examination, and was entrusted. Lodge opened up, and the ceremony of the second degree was carefully performed by the W.M. Bro. B. Phillips S.W. and W.M. elect was then introduced to Bro. White to receive at his hands the benefit of installation. The obligation was administered, and on the retirement of those below the degree of installed Master, the ceremony was proceeded with. The brethren were then readmitted, and saluted their new Master in the three degrees. The investiture of Officers was proceeded with as follows:—Bros. B. Turner S.W., J. E. Shand J.W., B. Swallow P.M. Treas. E. J. Scott P.M. Sec., J. Hutchinson named as S.D., Warr P.M. J.D., E. C. Woodward P.M. I.G., Rev. P. M. Holden Chap., James D.C., Potter P.M. Tyler. The Auditors' report was submitted and duly received confirmation. An order was given that the balance sheet should be printed and circulated amongst the members. Several propositions were handed in, and communications read; amongst others one from Bro. Col. Burdett, Provincial Grand Master Middlesex, regretting his inability to be present. Hearty good wishes from the Visitors were then tendered. Before Lodge was closed, the Worshipful Master presented the Immediate Past Master with an elegant jewel. In consequence of a domestic bereavement Bro. Phillips was prevented from staying to participate in the festive part of the evening's proceedings. Consequently, Bro. P.M. White was called on to preside. Under his experienced guidance the business was conducted most admirably. On the removal of the cloth he gave the health of Her Majesty the Queen, associated with Prosperity to the Craft, which was received with acclamation, and drunk most heartily. After the National Anthem had been sung, the presiding Worshipful Master gave the health of the Most Worshipful the Grand Master the Prince of Wales. Brother Cantle sang in good style a new version of "God Bless the Prince of Wales." The next toast the W.M. brought under the notice of the brethren was the health of the Pro G.M., the D.G.M. and the rest of the Grand Officers past and present. He made some happy allusions to the Pro G.M.'s approaching marriage, and called on the brethren to honour the toast. "At the Queen's Command" was then sung by Bro. L. Fryer, much to the taste of the company assembled, who marked their appreciation by receiving this song in a most enthusiastic manner. Bro. P.M. Holden proposed the health of the I.P.M. All present would join with him in deploring the sad event which had precluded their W.M. staying with them. He commented on the conduct of the chair by Brother White, who had ably completed his work by installing his successor, and likewise on the qualities displayed by those members who were advancing towards the chair. After an admirably rendered song by Bro. Cantle, Bro. White rose and acknowledged the compliment paid to him. He had been, he said, nervous at his installation, but since then he had regained confidence, and now he felt more at home in his duties. He deeply regretted the unavoidable absence of the W.M., who he trusted, would be able to preside at their next gathering, and also alluded in justly complimentary terms to the harmonious feeling which existed in the Lodge. The toast of the Visitors, after a humorous song by Bro. Cosens, was acknowledged by Bro. Draper and others. Bros. Swallow and Holden responded for the P.M., and the other toasts having been given and honoured, the brethren rose and departed. In the course of the evening Bro. Rev. P. M. Holden recited with great effect "The Charge of the Light Brigade." One remark we feel it our duty to add. The menu and the music programme showed great taste. They were, in fact, admirably designed, and as admirably coloured, the music programme in particular being something quite out of the ordinary run of such cards. It should also be noted that the officers one and all were most courteous in their attention to the guests, and Bro. Scott, the genial and painstaking Secretary, was especially distinguished by his amenity, and the desire he evinced to please everybody.

West Middlesex Lodge of Instruction, No. 1612.—At the meeting on Thursday, 28th November, Bro. Seward jun. was W.M., the Officers being Bros. Porter S.W., Wells J.W., Le Grys S.D., Dyer J.D., Clark I.G., Tucker T., and there were present Bros. Tait Brown, Kasner, Stephens, and Murch. After preliminaries, the W.M. rehearsed the ceremony of initiation, Bro. Tucker candidate, and the Lodge having been opened in the second degree, Bro. Brown was advanced a step, the work being done by Bro. Seward in his usual careful and impressive manner. The Lodge was closed down to the first degree, when a most deserved compliment was paid to the Hon. Treasurer, in unanimously appointing him Preceptor to the Lodge. Bro. Tucker is in every way competent for this post, and has bestowed great pains in acquiring an accurate knowledge of our ritual and ceremonies. The appointment is one which every member of the Lodge will hear of with pleasure. Bro. Porter was elected W.M. for the ensuing week, and having appointed his Officers in rotation, the Lodge was closed in due form.

Wolsey Lodge, No. 1656.—The brethren of this Lodge mustered in considerable force at the regular meeting on Monday last, 2nd instant. The proceedings commenced shortly after 6.30. Bro. The necessary examinations having proved satisfactory, Bro. Drummond was passed to the second degree, and Bros. Handel and Bozel were raised to the sublime degree. The ritual was rendered in a most impressive manner by Bro. Wm. Hammond, and Bro. Honeywell, who presided at the harmonium with marked ability, contributed greatly to the solemnity of the occasion. Three candidates for initiation were not present, but from two satisfactory explanations of absence were forthcoming. The minutes of the last regular meeting, 4th Nov. were read and confirmed, and a notice of motion from Bro. Walls for the alteration of the day of meeting was discussed and amended, and the members will have to consider at the next Lodge in February the desirability of altering the day from the first to the second instead of to the third Monday as at first moved. Bro. T. W. Ockenden was appointed Steward for the next Festival of the Girls' School, and will head his list with a donation of ten guineas from the Lodge. A communication was read from the R.W. Bro. Colonel Burdett P.G. Master Middlesex, regretting his inability to attend. Further business was despatched, and the Lodge being closed the brethren adjourned to partake of the good cheer prepared by Bro. E. Andrews, the Host. The Loyal and Masonic toasts were honored with the usual "Wolsey" fire. The Worshipful Master's health was proposed by Bro. J. W. Baldwin Prov. G. Purst., and heartily responded to. Bro. Walls P.P.G.O. replied for the Prov. Grand Officers. Bro. Gilbert 1512 responded on behalf of himself, and Bro. Davey 1512 to the Visitors' toast. The W.M. took the opportunity of commending to the notice of the brethren the toast of the Organist, for his efficient services rendered during the evening, which was warmly received, as was also the health of the Host and Hostess. Vocal contributions from Bros. Walls, Hurst, Piller, Chandler, Honeywell, and others, considerably enlivened the harmony of the proceedings. The members present not already named were Bros. Eyres, Forge, Masters, Darling, White, Featherstone, Duffell, Richer, Turner, Jobbins, Worthington, and Gilbert Tyler. The next regular meeting will take place on Monday, 3rd February 1879.

Ayad, of "Carthage and Utica." The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. Brunet (an old French Mason, of the Lodge Amis de Progrès, Paris), claimed admission, and having produced his certificate headed "A.N.D.G.A.D.L.U.," and affirmed his own belief in the existence of a supreme being, was, after due examination, admitted. The ballot proved favourable to the admission as candidates of Si Hamed El Sonni (a nephew of H.H. the reigning Bey of Tunis), Si Ali Ben Reschid (a nephew of the late Sovereign of Tunis Ahmed Bey), and Mr. S. Sitbin (a merchant of Sous). Mr. Jules Emile Jessel (Traffic Superintendent of the Bone and Tunis Railway), and Mr. Claude Mivière (of the French Telegraphic Service) were then introduced and initiated, in the French language, into the secrets and mysteries of Ancient Freemasonry. The W.M. also delivered the charge in the same language. It was resolved that a Committee, consisting of the W.M., Bros. Scniller Interpreter, and Lumbroso Secretary, should proceed forthwith to translate the Book of Constitutions into Italian, and that the same should be printed and published at the cost of the Lodge. Another Committee was also appointed for the translation of the ritual into Arabic. The charitable collection having been made, and two candidates for initiation proposed and seconded, the Lodge was closed in peace and harmony at 8.30 p.m.

Kirkdale Lodge, No. 1756, Liverpool.—The first regular meeting of this Lodge after its consecration on the 8th November was held on Wednesday evening, the 27th ult., in the Skelmersdale Masonic Hall, Westminster-road, Kirkdale. The Lodge was duly opened with the following Officers:—Bros. Edward Johnston W.M., P. M. F. Neill P.M. 203 as P.M., Robt. E. Mitton Treasurer, Wm. Gick S.W., Hugh Ferguson J.W., James Grierson Secretary, Charles Bargery as S.D., Thos. Hay as J.D., Henry Alexander as I.G., and John Cruice Tyler. Amongst the visitors were Bros. John Lunt P.P.G.D.C., William Sephton P.M. 1086, M. Comber 1013, Thomas McWean S.W. 1035, Dr. Costine J.W. 216, Isaac Line Secretary 1086, &c. The minutes of the formation and consecration having been read and confirmed, twenty-eight brethren were unanimously elected joining members, and on being admitted, the W.M. proceeded to invest his assistant Officers as follow:—Bro. Charles Bargery S.D., Thos. Hay J.D., Henry Alexander I.G., W. G. West S.S., Henry Marshall J.S., and George Marsden Assistant S. Bro. John Lunt P.P.G.D.C. acting very efficiently as D. of C. Eight candidates having been duly proposed and approved of, were introduced and initiated into Masonry, very satisfactorily by the W.M. The bye-laws of the Lodge were then adopted, and three new joining members, Bro. Dr. Costine, Andrew Finnie and Alexander Ruxton, were duly proposed. The Treasurer, in reply to the W.M., said he was not prepared at the moment to give a list of all the donations to the Lodge, but he was proud to say, that notwithstanding their great outlay, the Lodge was free from debt. The Lodge having been closed, the members and visitors adjourned to the Hall below, for refreshments, where peace and harmony prevailed.

F. RATH & CO.'s IMPROVED GAS BOX IRON is extremely simple in its construction, and cannot get out of order; the merit of the invention is, that the heat produced from the burning gas is thrown on to the steel plate which covers the bottom surface, none being allowed to pass off in waste. Three Irons the amount of work ordinarily executed can be done by the use of these Irons, which have now been in use in extensive Manufactories long enough to thoroughly prove their merits and evidence their entire success. FREEMASONRY IN NORTH WALES AND SALOP.

OUR last paper dealt with the Shrewsbury Lodges and their fortunes. In this we purpose giving a few particulars of Freemasonry as it exists in Oswestry, another town in Salop, the name being generally set down as a corruption of "Oswald's Tree." This Oswald was a Christian King of Northumbria, who, in a field where now stands the town of Oswestry, was defeated and slain on the 5th of August 642, in a battle with the pagan Penda, King of Mercia. The latter had the body of his fallen foe cut into pieces, which were affixed to stakes placed in different parts of the field. The Anglo-Saxon chronicler, the venerable Bede, recounts instances showing the miraculous properties of the earth taken from this field, while Oswald was admitted by the Romish Church into the list of their saints, and a church was raised to commemorate his martyrdom. In the vicinity of the town, at a place called by the Welsh "Cae Naef," that is, "Heaven's Field," is a remarkably fine spring of water, bearing the name of Oswald's Well, and over which as recently as the year 1770 were the ruins of an ancient chapel, also dedicated to him. The first charter was granted to the town in the reign of Henry II. by the lord of the manor, William Earl of Arundel, and his son having taken part with the barons against King John, the latter, in the year 1212, marched on the town and reduced it to ashes. A similar fate befel it later, at the hands of Llewellyn, Prince of North Wales; but in 1277 Edward I. caused it to be surrounded by a wall and ditch, some portions of the former still remaining, though the four gates were removed in 1769. The charter granted by Richard II. in 1397 exempted the burgesses from all customs throughout the kingdom, the liberty of the city of London being excepted. They also acquired during this reign, among other privileges, that of compelling the inhabitants of the eleven towns within the hundred to bring their cattle, corn, victuals, and wares into the market-place before sending them to any other market or fair. The Welsh tenantry of the hundred were also bound by their tenure to keep watch and ward for three days and three nights at the gates of the town during the fairs of St. Andrew and St. Oswald, but it being found that they ravaged and plundered the place instead of protecting it, they were very properly relieved of this duty, and were required instead to pay a sum of money to Englishmen for the safe custody of the town. So much for early history. Now it is a flourishing and populous town, and the chief depôt of the Cambrian Railway. No wonder, then, that we should find a brace of promising Lodges working as nearly as possible after the manner we have described at Shrewsbury. The elder of the two—the St. Oswald, No. 1124, founded in the year 1866—is very strong, and capable of imparting a vast amount of energy, and setting an admirable example to others which are less favoured in respect of members and means. It can boast on its roll of members the Marquis of Londonderry, Sir Watkin W. Wynn, Bart. M.P., the Grand Master of the Province, and Mr. Stanley Leighton, M.P., and it includes among its Past Masters and Officers several of the best and ablest Masons in the Province. Among the former must be singled out for especial notice Bro. W. H. Spaull, who is both Grand Secretary and Grand Scribe E. of the Province. Brother Spaull is a thorough good Mason, and a more learned one does not exist anywhere. He is a man of retired habits, abominating all attempts at display. To such a one it may easily be imagined that the mere parrot-like recitals of ritual are most objectionable, and that he courts discussion or, at all events, the consideration of, the abstruser and more mystic elements of Freemasonry. In a well-organised and well-governed Province the position of Prov. Grand Secretary must be as nearly as possible a sinecure; but this is the reverse with Bro. Spaull, who is constantly receiving letters from the brethren on every variety of subjects, and even on matters which it would be impossible to answer, or rather, which, in his capacity of only P.G. Sec., he could not take upon himself to answer. Another distinguished member is Worshipful Bro. Corfield, who is zealous as well as able, who has the best interests of the Fraternity at heart, and to whom, if he had the opportunity, nothing would give greater pleasure than to break through and remove the barrier of exclusiveness, so opposed to the principles of the Craft, which many among the members of this Lodge are apt to set up. Bro. George Owen, one of the Past Masters, has also rendered signal services to the Lodge, being highly esteemed for his knowledge of ritual, as well as for the generosity of his disposition and his readiness on all occasions to do everything for the welfare of the Province. Bros. Woods and Walker and Dr. Beresford are likewise among the supports of the Lodge, while Bro. John Thomas has distinguished himself by the rapid progress he has made in the acquisition of Masonic knowledge. The number of members is about forty. The sister Lodge, the Fitzalan, No. 1432, was founded in the year 1873, and can only boast, therefore, of a five years' existence. It has gone through many vicissitudes of fortune, and has not always been free from anxiety as to its future. The best men have not always been appointed officers, but, in spite of this and other drawbacks, it is in a fair way to prosper, thanks to the zealous efforts of Bros. Beresford, A. Walker, John Thomas, and E. B. Smith, who are among its Past Masters. The last mentioned brother, in particular, who has had great experience in London as a Mason, is an invaluable aid to the Fitzalan. His knowledge of the best principles for governing a Lodge, his zeal, and his ample acquirements render him especially fitted for the post of Secretary of a young and aspiring Lodge. No doubt, in time, the Fitzalan will become sufficiently powerful to be recognised by the St. Oswald, and then the members of the latter will not suppose it derogatory from their position to interest themselves in the welfare of their junior. More especially is this likely to be the case since we find that, though the younger of the two Lodges, it has attached to it a R.A. Chapter, so that R.A. Masons need not now journey to Shrewsbury or Welshpool, to which latter place we are about to betake ourselves.

Welshpool, with which are associated the Lords of Powys and their Castle, and which, like every other border town of England and Wales, was the frequent scene of strife and bloodshed when, as yet, the Principality was not subject to the Kings of England, should be properly written as two words. It is named from its vicinity to a lake or "Pool," the "Welsh" being added to distinguish it from Poole in Dorsetshire. So, at least, we remember to have read in some topographical dictionary. But be it as it may, Welshpool has a Lodge of Freemasons, No. 998, which bears the same name, and though numbering only some thirty-five members, is a model of discipline, and, in fact, an examplar in all things to its fellow Lodges in the Province. The pride of Welshpool—speaking, of course, Masonically—is its having been the birthplace of one of the grandest and most enlightened Masons England has ever known, and one to whom this Province of North Wales and Salop is indebted for its regeneration and present status. We allude, of course, to the late Dr. Goldsboro', than whom a more zealous, abler, or more enthusiastic Mason never entered the precincts of a Lodge. He was W. Master of the "Welshpool" for two years, and during that period regularly travelled from London in order to be present at its meetings. He initiated between forty and fifty brethren, and so highly valued were the services he rendered, not to this Lodge alone, but to the Province generally, that the present Prov. G. Master conferred on him the Office of Prov. G.S. Warden. No wonder, then, the "Welshpool" should be as we have described, or that it should include among its members, many able, experienced brethren, worthy emulators of the Goldsboro' virtues, such Masons as Bros. D. P. Owen, W. Collender, T. R. Morris, Past Masters—Samuel Davies, mayor of the town, Dr. G. Robinson, and J. Pugh Morris. The Lodge was founded in 1864, and we trust it may long remain an ornament to the Craft, of which it is a young, but flourishing branch.

MOIRA LODGE, No. 92.

THIS Lodge held its installation meeting on Saturday last, at the Criterion, Piccadilly. Bro. Alex. Mortimore presided, and there were present Bros. Wickham Noakes S.W. and W.M. elect, Harold Carter J.W., E. Horne P.M. Treasurer, R. F. Williams P.M. Secretary, G. C. Andrews S.D., H. T. Auldjo J.D., T. Wilkinson I.G., H. R. Brett P.M., Charles S. Sweeting P.M., R. F. Gould P.M., Henry Harben P.M., C. S. Amos P.M., G. J. Atkins P.M., Josiah Hoole P.M., Bertram Noakes and William Bohn, together with the following visitors, namely, Bros. Richard Pidcock 916, Chas. W. C. Hutton 96 P.G.D., J. J. Hamilton 1692, Sharon G. Turner 2, Crans. toun Kerr 1067, Lieut.-Col. Shadwell H. Clerke G.S.D., James Self P.G.S.W. Essex, John C. Walker 14, W. W. Morgan Sec. 211, C. A. Murton P.G.D., E. J. H. Booth S.D. 1692, R. M. Gardiner 34, George Lambert P.P.G.J.W. Herts, Rev. H. Smith P.P.G. Chap. Leicester and Rutland, C. C. Dumas P.A.G.D.C. P.M. 46, T. Davies Sewell P.G.S. P.M. 21, E. C. Goodhart W.M. 1692, John Sanders P.M. 1139, Wm. Kirkness, W. Elgood 871, W. Bartholomew 229, R. G. Webster W.M. 569. The Lodge having been opened with the customary formalities, and the minutes of the previous meeting having been confirmed, the ceremony of installation was proceeded with, and Bro. Josiah Hoole, who performed the part of installing officer, inducted Bro. Wickham Noakes into the chair of the Lodge in a highly effective and appropriate manner. Having been saluted in due form, Bro. Noakes appointed and invested his Officers as follow, namely, Bro. Harold Carter S.W., G. C. Andrew J.W., H. T. Auldjo S.D., T. Wilkinson J.D., William Bohn I.G. Bro. E. Horne P.M., having been re-elected Treasurer, was invested, and Bro. R. F. Williams P.M. was re-appointed Secretary. The other business having been disposed of, the Lodge was closed, and the banquet followed. On the removal of the cloth, the W.M. proposed the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts, remarking, in connection with that of the G.M., on the exertions His Royal Highness had made during the Paris International Exhibition in his capacity of Chairman of the Royal British Commission. Bro. Lieut.-Col. Shadwell Clerke replied for the toast of the Pro Grand Master, &c., &c., and expressed on behalf of himself and the other Grand Officers who were present the gratification they derived from the reception they had met with. He congratulated the W.M. on having attained his present position, and wished him a long continuance of prosperity. It then devolved on Bro. R. F. Gould P.M. to propose the important toast of the evening, namely, that of the Memory of Earl Moira, the Patron of the Lodge, and in the fulfilment of his duty Bro. Gould spoke as follows:—The subject of the toast, known successively as Lord Rawdon, Earl Moira, and finally as Marquis of Hastings, was the eldest son of the first Earl Moira; and having selected a military career, at the age of 17, joined the 15th Regiment as an Ensign, and being shortly afterwards promoted into the 63rd, accompanied this latter corps to America, where he was engaged in the bloody battle of Bunker's Hill, receiving on the occasion two shots in his cap, and being mentioned in despatches by General Burgoyne "as having stamped his fame for life"—a prophetic utterance which, as will be seen hereafter, was fulfilled to the letter, though not, perhaps, in the capacity of a soldier. Before attaining his 24th year he was appointed Adjutant-General to the British forces in America, and greatly distinguished himself during the hazardous retreat from Philadelphia to New York, receiving in consequence a separate command, during the tenure of which he defeated the American General Greene, at the battle of Hobkirk's Hill. In 1782, being succeeded as Adjutant-General by the unfortunate Major André, he returned to England, when he was created an English peer and appointed A.D.C. to the King, with the rank of Colonel. In 1793, he commanded a body of troops near Southampton, intended to co-operate with the Royalists in Brittany, and though his private expenditure at this period exceeded £30,000 a year, such was his delicacy that he would accept neither pay, emolument, nor patronage, whilst the troops under his command were kept in a state of indecision which did not promise real service. In the following year, he commanded a force of 10,000 men, sent to reinforce the Duke of York in Holland, and effected one of the most extraordinary marches of which military history affords an example. In 1813, he was appointed Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief of India, and during the ten years of his sway brought two wars of the greatest magnitude to a successful issue. As at the present moment a rupture with one Indian potentate is exciting apprehension, it may be interesting if I state, and in so doing I use Lord Moira's own words, "that on his acceding to the government of India, in 1813, there were made over to him no less than six hostile discussions with native powers, each capable of entailing a resort to arms;" and, likewise, that "the independent powers of India were so numerous and strong, as to conceive themselves equal to expel the British;" whilst at the termination of Earl Moira's rule, every native state in that vast region was in either acknowledged, or essential subjugation, to our Government. James Mill, the historian of British India, thus speaks of Lord Moira: "The administration of the Marquess of Hastings may be regarded as the completion of the great scheme of which Clive had laid the foundation, and Warren Hastings and the Marquess of Wellesley had reared the superstructure. The crowning pinnacle was the work of Lord Hastings, and by him was the supremacy of the British Empire in India finally established." In 1821, having meantime been created Marquis of Hastings, he returned to England, whence, in the following year, he proceeded to Malta as Governor and Commander-in-Chief. He died on 28th November 1826, on board H.M.S. Revenge, at Baiæ Bay, near Naples. Contemporary records state that his excessive liberality and unbounded generosity had so impoverished him, that his ample fortune absolutely sank under the benevolence of his nature. Earl Moira's Masonic services were also of a very distinguished nature, and greatly endeared him to the Craft. In 1789, he was appointed by the then Grand Master, the Duke of Cumberland, brother of George III., acting Grand Master, which position he continued to occupy until his departure for India in 1813. In 1804, he became the patron of this Lodge, which has since been designated by his name, and has held its annual festival on his birthday. In January 1813, on his leaving for India, a testimonial of the value of £1,000 was presented to him by the Craft, together with a jewelled collar of the additional value of £1,500. The Duke of Sussex presided, and no less than six Royal dukes were present on the occasion. His lordship remained, as I have before said, for ten years in India, and on relinquishing the Governor-Generalship, publicly declared "that his pride and exultation were complete, at its having been seen that Masonic principles had influenced him in the exercise of his authority." In 1823, on his return to England, great preparations were made by this Lodge to entertain him at a grand dinner, at which the Duke of Sussex G.M. was to have presided, and which was to have been open to the entire Craft, but owing to his lordship's ill-health, the idea was at first postponed, and then reluctantly abandoned. I may observe, brethren, that the toast we are about to drink, in the manner, and under the circumstances which connect it with our annual festival, has a special significance, which has been handed down from remote antiquity. I would first premise, that it was the custom of the Old Mediæval Guilds, from which we are undoubtedly descended, to terminate all occasions of initiation or commemoration by a grand drinking-bout. Of these Guilds it has been said, that whilst England was their birth-place, London was their cradle. Their essence consisted "in a brotherly banding together for mutual help and support," and their distinguishing characteristic was the assembly of their members at stated periods, at a common table, where they ate and drank together for the purposes of identification, and to ascertain whether any man was absent on unlawful business. Indeed, so much importance was attached, in some guilds, to an adequate observance of their festal obligations, that the allowance of the Master or Alderman, on the occasion of a festival, was fixed at two gallons of ale, and a wholesome rule existed that no member was to go to sleep, or to keep the ale up to himself. As regards this custom of meeting at a common table, to its happy influence is ascribed, by all authorities alike, the permanency and vitality of our guildic, as well as of our Masonic Institutions. On the decease of a guild-brother, memorial services were sometimes held for three successive days, but on the third day toasts were drank to all dead members. This particular usage, however, that of commemorating the virtues of the dead, is traceable to the very twilight of antiquity. It was a universal practice among the Pagans of the North to indulge in hilarious feasts, whose principal diet was furnished by victims offered upon the altars of their divinities. At these banquets the heroic deeds of distinguished warriors were sung, and toasts drunk, amid uproarious glee, to the memory of deceased friends, and in honour of their gods. The custom of toasting the memory of departed members of the Masonic fraternity, on festal occasions, has come down to us from this semi-religious observance of the Germans. At the feasts of the Northern people, a garland of flowers, with a rose prominently placed in the centre, was suspended from the ceiling, above the table, as a symbol that everything which might be done or spoken by the participants in the banquet should be held strictly secret. Hence has arisen the well known phrase sub rosa, or under the rose. To-night, therefore, brethren, in toasting the memory of Earl Moira, whilst commemorating the virtues of a Great Ruler in the Craft, at the same moment, and under the rose, for though the emblem of secrecy is not visible in our midst, its import is represented by this closely tyled room, we celebrate one of the most cherished of our traditional observances, which, hallowed by the associations of a remote past, is honoured in the present by our faithful adherence to time-honoured custom, and will, we hope, be perpetuated in the future, and for all time by our successors in the Craft. Bro. Gould concluded by reading the following lines, penned by Earl Moira in 1793:—"The Heir Apparent of the Empire is our chief. We fraternise for the purposes of social intercourse, or mutual assistance, of charity to the distressed, and goodwill to all, and fidelity to a trust, reverence to the magistrate, and obedience to the laws, are sculptured in capitals upon the pediment of our Institution." The toast was duly honoured, and then Bro. Mortimore I.P.M. rose, and in complimentary terms proposed the health of the W.M., who, in the course of his reply, expressed the sincere regret which he, in common with the rest of the Lodge, felt at the absence of Bro. Cornelius Thorne, a Past Master of the Moira, on whom last year had been conferred the honourable appointment of District Grand Master of Northern China. Bro. Noakes next proposed the health of the Past Masters, to which Bro. Mortimore replied, both speeches being short, but in excellent taste. Bro. Geo. Lambert responded for the Visitors. Bro. Bartholomew, a very old Mason, adding a few words, and reciting a few lines of impromptu verse in honour of the occasion. Bro. Carter acknowledged the toast of the Wardens, and Bro. Auldjo that of the Subordinate Officers, and in due course the concluding toast was drunk, and the brethren rose. A few of the old school, however, remained, for the purpose of enjoying a little social chat and talking over old times, the chat being occasionally relieved by recitations and songs, of which latter Thackeray's well-known chant of "Little Billie" may be mentioned as a fair specimen. Some quaint lines on Morrison's Pills were sung, and, indeed, a very pleasant subsidiary gathering was held when the chief one had been brought to a close. We must not omit to add that in the intervals between the toasts a selection of vocal music was given, under the able direction of Bro. Lawler, who was assisted by Bro. G. T. Carter and the Misses Matilda Roby and Helen Heath, the accompanyist being Miss Bernard. All acquitted themselves so well that little need be said. Yet it is worth while recording that Bro. Carter sang the old song, by Braham, "The Anchor's Weighed," with great expression. Bro. Lawler was very effective in his rendering of "I fear no foe;" Miss Matilda Roby quite enchanted the guests with her spirited and artistic execution of the old English song, "Come Lasses and Lads," while Miss Helen Heath, who sang "The Ash Grove" and "Wapping Old Stairs," was warmly and deservedly applauded. Miss Bernard, at the pianoforte, played well, and added greatly to the effect of the singing by the admirable manner in which she accompanied her fellow artists.

SEVENTY-FIVE DAYS' SEARCH FOR MORE LIGHT.

From the "Masonic Review."

As a delver in the mines of Masonic lore I frequently find precious grains of metal in unsuspected places. Just now, looking over the envelopes sent me here in London, I find some of the seals of the leading Craftsmen rich in symbolical meaning. Of these I will instance a few.

That of R.W. James H. Neilson, of Dublin, Ireland (a most painstaking student in Freemasonry, and Representative between the Grand Lodge of Egypt and Ireland), is a shield containing a mailed hand holding upright the head of a javelin.

That of Brother Robert S. Brown, of Edinburgh, Scotland, a diligent delver in the rights of Constantine, etc., and the Representative between the Grand Lodge of Kentucky and Scotland, is a cross (in red) enclosing the ancient form of Chi Rho cross, and the letters suggesting Constantine's visions, viz., I.H.S.V.

That of Brother Hyde Clark, formerly a most ardent Mason, and the founder of lodges in the Turkish dominions, is a rose within a wreath.

That of Hon. John F. Townshend, long the Deputy Grand Master of Ireland, is a portly stag, such as Virgil describes in his Aeneid, Book I, pp 189, 190, viz.: "· · · Capita alta ferentes Cornibus arboreis."

That of R.W. Bro. Alexander Tate, Provincial Grand Secretary of Ireland, is a monogram of the two letters A. T. most artistically interwoven and printed in red.

That of Col. W. M. Neilson, Provincial Grand Master of Glasgow, is the body, head and arms of a strong man, printed in black, he carries a heavy mallet upon his shoulder. Bro. W. Hyde Pullen, of London, uses the cockle-shell, in memory of the Order of Harodim, of which he was one of three initiates in 1859. The pilgrim's shell is more peculiarly appropriate to Bro. Pullen, as in his family coat of arms there are eleven of these objects. But I am taking too much space with this subject.

Nothing in all my foreign tours, thus far, has given me greater pleasure and profit than my visits successively, to the "Royal Masonic Institution for Boys," and the "Royal Masonic Institution for Girls." In these visits, I was favoured by the guidance of Bro. Pullen, named above, whose devotion to me during my stay in London was unremitting. The hospitalities of his table; the courtesies of his most amiable family; the conveniences of his office in Golden Square, where he is the Assistant Grand Secretary to the Supreme Council 33°, and one of the House Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, also Secretary of "The Friends in Council Lodge, No. 1383," etc., etc., made me in so many ways his dependant, that I almost wonder what this singularly-gifted and excellent frater will do with himself after I leave here.

On the 22nd of August, we went to the Girls' School, driving in a cab (best, and easiest, and cheapest, and pleasantest of all earthly conveyances) to Waterloo Station, and thence, four miles by express train, over the tops of houses and under the basements thereof, to Clapham Junction, where several hundred railways concentrate (I speak "after the manner of men,") and near to which is the beautiful edifice devoted to God in the holy service of Masonic Charity. How many years is it, since first I read of the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls? and here I am, where I have so long desired to be. As I enter the gateway, and my eyes and nostrils enjoy the first sweets of the variegated beds of flowers, my soul expands with my sensual organs, and I feel that I am on holy ground. Scarcely indeed can I restrain myself from baring my feet and kneeling, as though He who displayed His divine presence in the Burning Bush at Horeb were before me. No vain worship. He was before me, though invisible, and it was His spirit that prompted this noble enterprise when its corner stone was planted, when its cap stone was set up with shouting and praise, and through all its vicissitudes for nearly a century of life. Yes, the Divine Spirit dwells here, and through the thin veil that separates mortality from immortality, it demands no great stretch of faith to "see the Invisible."

The day of my visit to the School was emphatically a field-day, one of the most important days in its history; for by taking in 18 new pupils to-day, the total of membership is 200, the largest number ever accommodated here. Two hundred bright, loving creatures, healthy, untainted in heart and person, gathered in from all parts of England by Masonic vigilance; and to be boarded, clothed, educated, and fitted out for places of usefulness, and honour in society, from the proceeds of Masonic Charity. Happy event. Let me enter fully into the spirit of it.

And first, by the attention of the Head Matron I was shown every part of the Institution, kitchen, laundry, infirmary, dormitories, lavatories, gardens, playgrounds, orchards and what not. The very perfection of order and cleanliness reigns throughout. In the dormitories I was struck with the cleanliness, ventilation, separate beds exquisitely neat, large spaces for breathing, and all that is needful to afford delightful rest and loving dreams to the dear creatures for whom the whole is so bountifully prepared. Each dormitory, whether containing 30 beds or only 8, is overlooked from a teachers' room. Amplest precautions are made against fire. The lavatories, bath rooms, etc., are abundantly supplied with water, both hot and cold. In brief, the best care of this old and wealthy people has been exhausted to give these two hundred girls a happy place, in these the happiest days of their lives.

The uniform of the pupils is simply white dresses, with aprons trimmed in blue, the white emblematic of purity, the blue of the great Order which, under God, is acting as the guardians of these girls.

The seventeen new pupils were catalogued in due order. Each brings a Medical Certificate from a physician of note. Each, before election, has been fully reported as to moral character and advancement in the elements of learning. The limits of age are eight years and sixteen. As each is tolled off from the crowd and entered upon the books of the school, a "mother" is allotted to her out of the girls of her own age. The part of the mother is to teach the new comer the ways of the school, and introduce her to the rest of the girls, and rescue her from a too boisterous reception at the hands of the multitude. How completely the "mother" plays her part, and how proud she is of the title and the duties, I saw and heard abundant evidence. It takes but a short time for the tyro to forget the heartache of parting from friends, when an indefatigable "mother" is always by her side abounding in words and deeds of love.

After dining with the House Committee, and receiving attentions at their hands which I propose to acknowledge in another place, I had an hour to witness the exercises of calisthenics and the marchings of the pupils. The accuracy and precision of step, and manual exercises exceeded anything I had ever witnessed, and the memory of those ten score joyous figures as they marched and countermarched past me, exercised arms, knees and muscular parts generally, and flashed happy eyes upon me, will surely abide with me so long as I live. Then came evening prayers, reading and singing, which brought back to memory one of the earliest poems of Mrs. Hemans, which ends thus:

> "Earth will forsake,—oh happy to have given
> The earliest freshness of the heart to heaven."

My visit to the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys followed upon the next day. Here the occasion was similar, the reception of 35 new pupils swelling the aggregate of the School to two hundred and eleven, which is the largest number ever enrolled. The method of reception was substantially the same. The Medical Examiner (the accomplished Dr. Hall, who seems to have half London under his charge), gave due attention to matters in his department. Kisses were exchanged between the lads and ladies in black who had brought them there, and whose attempts to look cheerful at parting quite broke down, when the poor little fellows hid their faces in mother's bosom, and gave vent to irrepressible tears. As I sat quietly among them, I was witness to many an incident in nature's great drama. Last messages were exchanged, whispered words of good advice were imparted, pieces of money were furtively slipped into little hands, then veils were dropped and the ladies left for homes that will to-night seem strangely dark and solitary to them, while their minds revert to the sleepers in these dormitories who are haply dreaming of them. And so the world goes on.

The Freemason's Chronicle for next week will contain our Annual Summary of the Masonic Events of the Year.

The ceremony of Installation will be rehearsed on Tuesday, 31st inst., at 8.0 p.m., in the Mount Edgcumbe Lodge of Instruction, No. 1446, on which occasion Bro. W. H. Dean, W.M. 417, P.P.G.S.B. Dorset, will preside.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—Coughs, Influenza.—The soothing properties of these medicaments render them well worthy of trial in all diseases of the lungs. In common colds and influenza the Pills taken internally and the Ointment rubbed externally are exceedingly efficacious. When influenza is epidemic this treatment is easiest, safest, and surest. Holloway's Pills and Ointment purify the blood, remove all obstructions to its free circulation through the lungs, relieve the overgorged air tubes, and induce respiration free without reducing the strength, irritating the nerves, or depressing the spirits. Such are the ready means of saving suffering when afflicted with colds, coughs, bronchitis, and other complaints, by which so many are seriously and permanently afflicted in most countries.

OLD LODGE LISTS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The engraved list for 1729, recently presented to Grand Lodge, and so gracefully acknowledged by the Pro Grand Master at the last Quarterly Communication, is a most valuable addition to our "National Masonic Library." With its contents many brethren are already familiar, from its having formed one of the reprints with which Bro. Hughan has enlightened the Craft in regard to its past history; but it is gratifying on all grounds that the original should be placed along with the other ancient records of our Institution.

The list in question is remarkable for being the first printed book in which Lodges were arranged according to seniority of constitution. Numbers and dates of constitution are therein exhibited for the first time, and it is, moreover, the only official list we possess which ascribes actual dates to either of the four old (or pre-revival) Lodges. Original Nos. 1 and 2 being dated at 1691 and 1712 respectively. The latter of these Lodges has long since died out (1733), but the former, now the Lodge of Antiquity, No. 2, being our oldest English Lodge, a few remarks on its probable date of constitution, may not be out of place.

Memorandum.—"This day, May the 18th, being Munday, 1691, after Rogation Sunday, is a great convention at St. Paul's Church, of the fraternity of the adopted Masons, where Sir Christopher Wren is to be adopted a brother, and Sir Henry Goodric, of the Tower, and divers others. There have been Kings of this sodality."

This passage, besides disproving the statement of Preston (Illustrations of Masonry), that Sir C. Wren had been received into the Order at a much earlier date, would seem to justify the inference that from about the period of his actual initiation (1691) the meetings of the old Lodge of St. Paul began to be held statedly, and that from being what was then termed an "occasional," it became a "stated" Lodge.

The engraved list for 1729, by placing the date of constitution of the Lodge at 1691, adds weight to this supposition.

Yours fraternally,

R. F. GOULD.

P.S.—I should be much obliged to any reader of the CHRONICLE could he inform me where a copy of "Dalloway's Historical Account of Master and Freemason" can be seen?

CHARITY STEWARDS.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Having brought to a conclusion my remarks on the three heads which I proposed to myself for consideration in connection with the subject of "Charity Stewards," I now ask permission to submit to your readers my views with reference to the necessity for an extended support to our Masonic Institutions, and to the means by which it may be permanently assured. With this object I shall confine myself to an examination of the sources from which such support may be—and ought to be—obtained, other than those already treated of in association with the Anniversary Festivals.

The sources in question are—

1. Supreme Governing Masonic Bodies, viz.—
   - (a) The United Grand Lodge of England.
   - (b) The Grand Chapter of England.
   - (c) The Grand Mark Lodge of England.
   - (d) The Order of Knights Templar of England.
   - (e) The Supreme Council 33° of England.
   - (f) The Grand Council of Red Cross of Rome and Constantine.
2. District and Provincial Grand Lodges and Chapters under the U.G.L. of England. Similar organisations under the other Supreme Bodies.
3. Private Craft Lodges.
   - " R.A. Chapters.
   - " Mark Lodges.
   - " Preceptories of K.T.
   - " R.C. Chapters and Consistories 33°.
   - " Councils of Red Cross.
4. Individual members of the Order.
5. The Masonic Charitable Associations.

A full examination of the position of the first on the list—and, of course, by far the most influential and extensive—"The United Grand Lodge of England," in reference to the Institutions, will suffice for this letter.

The two Educational Institutions received support from Grand Lodge down to the year 1839, by a fee of 2s 6d on each certificate issued. The aggregate amount granted to that year was, to the Girls' School, £3,580; to the Boys' School, £3,533. The total amount for the fourteen years immediately preceding the commutation received from Grand Lodge was £1,536 6s 3d, giving an annual average of £109 14s 8d, the last year of the fourteen being £143 in 1839—when the fee of 2s 6d per certificate was commuted for a fixed sum of £150—at which it has ever since remained.

The inadequacy of the amount contributed by Grand Lodge, by way of annual support to the two Educational Institutions, must strike at once the most careless or inattentive reader. If a commutation of £150 per annum was considered fair and equitable in the year 1839, it must, ex necessitate, be admitted to be unfair and inequitable in the year 1878. In the year 1839 the amount contributed, £143, represented 1,144 certificates. The income of Grand Lodge was £2,829 15s 11d. In the year 1877, the number of certificates issued was 8,465, which, at 2s 6d each, would produce £1,058 2s 6d, the income of Grand Lodge being £12,519 12s 5d. In the year 1838 the number of girls educated and maintained in the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls was 58. The number of boys educated and clothed by the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys was 65, the income from all sums being £884 6s. In the year 1878, the number of girls educated, clothed and maintained is 200. The number of boys educated, clothed and maintained is 211.

In the face of these facts, the enormous progress, numerical and material—the continued and continuing prosperity of the Order—the immensely increased funds at its disposal, the Grand Lodge of England has not, as yet, even proposed to consider whether the time has not arrived for more substantial annual assistance to two Institutions whose resources are severely taxed—the Boys' School most prominently so—to meet the ever advancing claims upon them.

I do not lose sight of the grants by Grand Lodge from time to time—as set forth in the Official Calendar, nor of the large outlay necessitated for the rebuilding of Freemasons' Hall, Tavern, &c. Until the latter had been defrayed, and Grand Lodge freed from liability, none thought of seeking aid from its funds. Neither do I overlook the loss occasioned by the recent bank failure; happily that will not be seriously felt.

Grand Lodge has now nothing to do but to largely accumulate funds, after providing liberally for every branch of administrative charge, and I contend it may well be asked to take into its serious consideration the needs of our Institutions, which are by unanimous consent not only most important in themselves, but are also regarded with justifiable pride,—are under most distinguished and exalted patronage,—while unquestionably they are at the same time objects of solicitude and anxiety, and must continue to be so until, by well-directed munificence, they are rendered independent of precarious and intermittent support.

I am compelled to conclude this somewhat abruptly, and shall trouble you again at no distant date.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

FREDERICK BINCKES.

10th December 1878.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In my humble opinion, no good purpose is served in prolonging a correspondence when an attempt is made to divert the real and original argument from its natural channel by a side issue.

In reply, therefore, to Bro. Radclyffe, in CHRONICLE of the 7th, permit me distinctly to say, not in the least or smallest degree did I misunderstand his remarks in his letter published in your paper of 26th October last, but that I simply quoted his own words thus:—

"Would it not be an easy matter to compel every Lodge to subscribe, say one-third of their subscriptions?"

It was upon this absurd theory of compulsion I commented, and not upon Lodge funds being placed under different heads, as stated by Bro. Radclyffe in last letter, vide your issue of 7th.

I am in the habit of disposing of one question before opening another. If, therefore, our brother thinks there is any thing in this wild idea of compulsion, I ask him for argument in its favour, supported by facts and reason, or to throw it aside as one of those lop-sided ideas that now and then crop up with all who think, but which will not stand the test of further thought and investigation. But should Bro. Radclyffe adhere still to the original theory of compulsion, he might call to his aid "OLD FILE;" that is, if the latter can make up his mind whether this proposed system of compulsion is an obnoxious "Poll Tax," or a just demand upon the Craft as a body—I say, if "OLD FILE" can make up his mind on the subject, for evidently he had not, by the very opposite and contradictory remarks and ideas expressed in his letters in your issues of 30th November and 7th December, merely reminding our brethren that by the free and voluntary principle of "giving," hitherto in use by the Craft,—a principle and a system which has founded, maintained, and brought to a state of useful and efficient working those Charities which all good Masons point to with just and pardonable pride,—these Institutions, supported by the free offerings of the Craft to the extent of between thirty and forty thousand pounds per annum, a fact that at once proclaims free and voluntary "Giving is Charity," developed in one of its best forms, shedding lustre on the Order, making gladsome the hearts of all engaged in the good work, and in a degree to them far greater than to that poor humanity who merely receive the benefit of this free and voluntary giving.

I submit, therefore, that any machine made system of "compulsion," as embodied in the quotation which was extracted from Bro. Radclyffe's letter of 26th October, is fatal to the true character of Masonry: that it would reduce the Order to the level of a benefit society, and drive from its ranks some of our best and earnest workers, who labour for the Institutions, doing this from the fact that they are Charities in the truest sense, and dependent for their very existence (for the fulfilment of a mission) on this noble spirit of true "giving" uncompelled, which is "Charity."

Yours fraternally,

CHARLES GODTSCHALK,

P.M. 70 and 1255.

THE "OFF NIGHT" AT THE TRANQUILLITY.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Nothing in the world is more easy than to find fault, and, to some minds, there is scarcely anything on earth more pleasurable. Let the motives be of the purest, there is a secret sense of enjoyment in the feeling of superiority over one's fellows when pointing out their shortcomings, and, be the faults venial or important, the operation produces equal satisfaction to the censor. The professional critic, sometimes venomous and seldom unbiassed, is, as a general rule, sufficiently sincere and honest. Except in rare cases, he, however, takes little trouble to carry investigation any considerable depth below the surface. His aim is to please his readers and maintain consistency with some particular phase of thought. The amateur critic is a being of quite a different stamp. His is a labour of love. He delights in getting to the bottom of things. His research, under certain circumstances, is most profound and exhaustive; sometime induced by kindly motive, but more often actuated by desires it is unnecessary here to characterise. Of late your columns have been made the vehicle of various specimens of amateur criticism. Self-appointed censors have tasked themselves with the duty of lecturing the Craft upon the sins of unthriftiness, and considerately indicated the course to be pursued in future. Balance-sheets were analysed, and Lodges censured. To this there may be no objection per se, and there is no doubt their generally amiable dispositions, will enable Craftsmen to bear the impertinent infliction meekly. There is, however, a limit to forbearance when a Lodge like Tranquillity, No. 185, is assailed. "ONE WHO KNOWS" publishes the fact that a certain sum had been expended upon a supper for a number of brethren, and some of them, like "Oliver Twist," actually had the audacity to ask for more. This sort of thing was, to the feelings of the Masonic Bumble, outrageous and distasteful. "ONE WHO KNOWS" should take into consideration that Dickens's typical workhouse brat received his luxuries without pay, while the member who imitated poor Oliver's example is amply taxed. But "ONE WHO KNOWS" meant to find fault, and conveniently ignores the fact. "ONE WHO KNOWS" asserts that some of the members do not spend six shillings and sevenpence halfpenny, the cost per head for the above-named supper, upon their dinners for a whole week. Possibly so; but it will scarcely be asserted they can dine very sumptuously for that amount. Then why, in the name of charity, does he not look with the eye of leniency upon poor devils whose generally meagre fare might surely be held sufficient excuse for the offence of asking for a little more? "ONE WHO KNOWS" ought to know the status of the Lodge—the active support to the Masonic Charities inscribed on the records of the Institutions—the private Benevolent Fund, amounting to a magnificent sum, and a considerable surplus besides from the General Lodge Fund, placed at interest, with an ample annual revenue, and the many unpublished acts of benevolence periodically extended to the distressed, are all evidence of excellent management, and show that Masonic obligations are not neglected. Moreover, there is scarcely one amongst the members who does not annually subscribe, donate to, or otherwise assist the Charities. Then why, in the name of all that is just and fair, should a little extra indulgence be made matter for publicity, and held up to reprobation. Although I have no desire to enter into the controversy, so ably conducted in your columns anent the subject of revenue and expenditure of Lodges, I cannot resist the temptation to say a few words upon the matter. I have read with considerable interest all that has been said on both sides, and am led to question whether Lodges would remain prosperous, and consequently the Institutions so well supported, were the usual convivialities abolished or even greatly restricted. No one can doubt the benevolent instincts of the Briton. A call to afford succour to victims of a sudden calamity, be its occurrence near or far, at home or abroad, immediately creates the deepest sympathy, and obtains munificent response. But, ordinarily, when help is required in support of established benevolence, the adventitious aid of a good spread is always found an excellent stimulant to force into greater activity the humane impulses of man's nature. Another doubt is, whether it will be possible to maintain the rate of annual subscriptions. A Lodge can be carried on, and at the end of the year show a tolerable balance for the purposes of charity, for little more than one-fourth of the amount now generally paid. It is of no practical use to ignore the fact that the majority of brethren care not one jot for the working in the Lodge. Membership is upheld for the sake of meeting congenial spirits from time to time at the banquet table, and there can be no manner of doubt, were it not for that enjoyment, a considerable number would resign upon alteration of present arrangements. There are no terms too strong to condemn undue extravagance, to the neglect of higher duties. But it must be borne in mind that the Masonic Charities are maintained with the utmost liberality, and that immense sums are annually subscribed towards their support. The Craft, therefore, as a body, cannot justly be charged with forgetting their Masonic obligations. Although it must be admitted that some Lodges are oblivious of what is expected of them in the matter of Charity, yet I am inclined to believe them to be exceptions to the general rule, and I for one should be sorry to see the prevailing system, which has worked so well, and effected such considerable benefit, materially interfered with. Vinegar and water diet may be sufficient to exhilarate some natures, but these are scarcely fair judges of the beneficent effects of a generous régime upon a vigorous and healthy constitution, and how nearly allied is a sound digestion with sentiments of humanity, charity, and goodwill to every living creature.

Yours fraternally,

E. GOTTHEIL.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am sorry if my former letter on the subject has offended any one. I do not know if I am acquainted with the brother who writes the Masonic column for the Sunday Times. I read his reports and criticisms regularly every week, and I am anxious to assure him that, though I occasionally glean information from them, I have never yet found them "amusing." What did amuse was the contrast between your reporter's account and his. The two versions are not necessarily contradictory, but it is decidedly hard to reconcile the "gala night" views of the one with the extreme frugality on which the other lays so much stress. And with the letter of "ONE WHO KNOWS" before me, I should say his description is the more appropriate of the two. Six shillings and sevenpence halfpenny is a stiff price to pay for a mere supper, when every one knows he can dine well, if not sumptuously, at the Criterion, the Gaiety, the Holborn, the Horseshoe, &c., &c., for three shillings and sixpence, liquor not included. Put the cost of the Tranquillity supper at the same figure, and there remains a balance of three shillings and threehalfpence for attendance and fluids, &c., &c., a very liberal allowance, if malt liquor and tobacco were the order of the day. Still, as our brother of the Sunday Times says, this may be frugality in the Tranquillity, and yet be on a par with a gala banquet at other Lodges. However, I must not presume to criticise what other people choose to spend on refreshment, nor am I responsible for the introduction of the figure-test on this occasion. All I have to say further is, that there is something charming in the artless simplicity of your reporter, who describes as a marvel of frugality a supper which "ONE WHO KNOWS" tells us cost six shillings and sevenpence halfpenny per member. He would have been nearer the mark had he been able to show that it was something like the frugal fare we read of in "Ivanhoe"—the parched peas and the pure water from the Well of St. Dunstan, which the Holy Clerk of Copmanhurst offered to his guest the Black Knight.

Fraternally yours,

OLD FILE.

LORD CARNARVON'S MARRIAGE.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am delighted to see my suggestion under the above heading so heartily taken up by yourself and your readers, and I hope you will not permit the thing to drop. I think it would be very gratifying to make some presentation to our Brother the Duke of Connaught, as well as the Pro Grand Master; but the Earl of Carnarvon has served us so long and so well, and has done for the Craft such actual good work that I think some recognition in his case is imperative. Whatever is arranged eventually, I hope an opportunity will be given for country brethren to be present at the presentation, and probably a banquet at the Alexandra Palace, or some other convenient place, would be the best method of affording that opportunity.

I am, yours fraternally,

T. B. WHYTEHEAD,

236, 1338, P.M. 1611, Prov. G.D.C. N. and E. Yorks.

THE QUALIFICATION FOR THE CHAIR OF M.M.M.'s LODGES.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Owing to a technical objection, the acting M.W.G.M. at the Grand Lodge, on the 3rd inst., ruled that the recommendations of the Board of General Purposes as to the dispensing with the qualification as a W.M. or P.M. in the Craft Lodge for the chair of a Mark Lodge could not be discussed. It is unfortunate that the matter was omitted in the Board's Report, but it may possibly be all the better, as, through the opposition, it will give Mark Lodges an opportunity of expressing their opinion upon the alteration prior to the next Grand Lodge—and of supporting it, if they are in its favour.

I am no iconoclast, and deprecate change if merely for change sake—but this alteration commends itself to me, inasmuch as I know the advisability of removing the present restriction. In my own Lodge there are several Officers who have worked well, but who have not risen, and cannot rise higher than Warden, from the fact of their not having passed the chair in a Craft Lodge, and three of them do not even hold office in the Craft. The result will be, in two years, that the old P.M.'s must again commence the round—greatly to the injury of the Lodge, by the disheartening effect upon the present members, and the small inducement held out to new comers. As Mark Masonry is not, and never will be, recognised by Craft Masonry, it seems simply ridiculous thus to fetter its members, and to throw an unnecessary obstruction in their way. We wish for prosperity to our Order, and were thankful to the Board of General Purposes for thus, unsolicited, dealing with what has now become a crying evil. Little, therefore, were we prepared for an amendment upon this wise and timely proceeding.

It was said that Mark Masonry had progressed much of late years, and that with the enormous increase of Craft Lodges there ought to be no difficulty in recruiting our ranks with Installed

Digitized by Google

Masters from these Craft Lodges. But an ounce of fact is worth a ton of theory. We find that the great majority of Mark members are not from the rank of Installed Masters, but from those members whose chance of ever becoming so is very remote. And there is no earthly reason why this restriction should be retained. In the Arch it is no doubt a very wise precaution, but here we are governed, in a certain sense, by the Constitutions of the Craft, for Arch and Craft, in this way, may be considered as identical.

As to the objection that we cannot alter Constitutions without the sanction of the past generation who made them—and who are now no more—it is simply begging the question. The Craft has amended its own laws, and the Mark has amended its very ritual. To say then that we cannot change a law, in doing which we injure none of the ancient landmarks, traditions, or discipline of the Order, is what "no fellah can understand." It is not a fundamental law—it is not a landmark—introduced possibly with a view of ultimately bringing about a fusion with Craft Masonry—the primary object of it has vanished. "Cut it down then, why cumbereth it the ground?" why retain it to act injuriously upon private Lodges, by whom the Grand Lodge is "clothed and fed?"

I hope this matter will be considered by each private Mark Lodge, and resolutions upon it forwarded to the Board of General Purposes in ample time for them to frame their resolution aright, and so secure its adoption. It will be a blessing to the Order, and make the hearts of young Mark Masons leap for joy. Only, let them bear in mind that with them now rests the result. Resolutions in its favour, and the attendance of their W.M., Wardens, and Overseers, at the next Grand Lodge, is essentially necessary if this great boon is to be secured.

Yours fraternally,

7th December 1878. A P.M. IN CRAFT AND MARK.

A CONSTITUTIONAL QUESTION.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I am not quite sure that I rightly understand the query of your correspondent "J. W." He says the Lodge in question "being in the second degree, was 'resumed' to the third degree, instead of being 'opened' in the usual form." Clearly, a Lodge cannot be "resumed"—literally "taken back"—to a degree in which it has not been previously "opened." A Lodge must be opened in the first degree, then, if necessary, in the second degree; and then, on a like supposition, in the third degree. Then it must be closed down to the second degree for the resumption of business in that degree, and then to the first degree for a like purpose. In the case of a Lodge which, having been opened in the third degree and resumed to the second, has still business to transact in the third, it is my humble opinion that if the Lodge has been closed down, it must be reopened in the superior degree. But a Lodge which has been regularly opened up to the third degree and closed down, does not need to be reopened in either of the inferior degrees. Bro. "J. W." will find the case he contemplates provided for at p 184 of Oliver's Masonic Jurisprudence; where it is laid down as "the result of common sense," that the W.M. "cannot legally open a Lodge in the second degree without going through the ceremony of the first, nor in the third until he has passed through the other two; and if a Lodge open in the third is to be resumed in the first, the two superior degrees must be closed before the business of the preliminary degree can be entered on, for it will not be necessary to reopen it."

Yours fraternally,

"Q."

ANCIENT WARRANTS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I have read in your London Masonic contemporary a short notice of the Cosmopolitan Masonic Calendar for 1879, in which I find it stated that "the dates of the foundation of the Ancient Lodges have been given for the first time in any Masonic publication, thanks to Bro. W. J. Hughan." I can fully enter into the pardonable feeling of pride with which the editor of your contemporary draws attention to this new and important feature in the said Calendar. Such additional information is indeed valuable, but considering that Bro. John Constable P.M. 185 has been engaged for some time past in obtaining transcripts of, and forwarding to you for publication in your columns, the Warrants of Ancient Lodges; and, considering that Bro. Constable has accomplished four-fifths of his task, and but for his absence from England for six months, would, ere now, most probably have completed it, it strikes me that Bro. Hughan has flagrantly violated the traditional etiquette of journalism which forbids one man from infringing on the labours of another, and so diverting to himself the credit which properly belongs to that other. I admire the spirit with which the proprietor and editor of the Cosmopolitan Calendar labour in order to make it as nearly perfect as possible, but I protest against Bro. Hughan appropriating to himself or allowing others to award him any credit for the labours of Bro. Constable. The latter has worked energetically, and, to judge from a letter of his which recently appeared in the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, is still engaged in the prosecution of his task. The greater reason, therefore, why Bro. Hughan, who poses before the Masonic public as the historian of the Craft, should not meddle with the labours of others, whose fame as labourers in the field of Masonic literature is less firmly established. He has already won his spurs, and, if he has any sense of chivalry in him, will stand by and, if need be, encourage others in their efforts to win theirs. Nor are we aware that any ground of complaint against Bro. Hughan for furnishing the information in question. With a courtesy in every way worthy of your position in Masonic journalism, you arrested the publication of the Ancient Warrants during Bro. Constable's absence from England, though had you thought only of yourself, you might, I presume, have obtained access to the same sources of information as he had done, and with even greater facility perhaps. I will merely add to these remark that a former statement of Bro. Hughan's fully justifies my criticism, which is not made in any unfriendly spirit, but on the good old principle, palmam qui meruit ferat. In the letter you published from him on 12th October last, in which he attributed the entire credit of a certain discovery to Bro. Gould, he remarked "to whom also we beg to express our appreciation of the handsome manner in which he has always credited to 'Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's,' so unlike many writers, who take all from others and keep the credit to themselves."

Yours faithfully and fraternally,

SCRUTATOR.

THINGS ONE WOULD LIKE TO KNOW.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In your issue of the 16th ult. you inserted a reply from Bro. W. Smallpeice to my queries regarding the status and privileges of an honorary member of a Lodge, to the effect that he can neither take part in the Lodge proceedings—nor vote—nor hold office; also that he can only attend a banquet by invitation or on payment of the usual Visitor's fee. Assuming Bro. Smallpeice's ruling to be correct, cui bono an honorary membership? I have always understood that a brother so complimented was, in right of his membership, though honorary, privileged to attend both Lodge and banquet, without invitation and without payment of any fee, in all cases when the banquet was paid for out of the Lodge funds. I should be glad to hear further from Bro. Smallpeice, or any other of your readers, on this head.

Yours fraternally,

FORTE.

COMMITTEE MEETING OF THE BOYS' SCHOOL.

The monthly meeting of the General Committee of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys was held on Saturday last, in the Board-room, Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Capt. Wordsworth (West Yorkshire) presided, and the other brethren present were—Bros. Donald M. Dewar, Henry Muggeridge, Andrew Middlemass, R. B. Webster, W. F. C. Moutrie, G. J. Row, S. Rosenthal, the Rev. Richard Morris, J. G. Chancellor, H. Massey, G. J. Palmer, and F. Binckes Sec. The minutes of the House Committee, which were read, informed the brethren of the resignation of Bro. Peter Matthews, honorary surgeon-dentist to the Institution. The only business before the Committee was the consideration of the petitions of candidates for admission to the School, and the granting of outfits to late pupils. Three of the former were placed on the list, and four of the latter were granted, after which the Committee adjourned.

COMMITTEE MEETING OF THE BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

The Committee of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution met on Wednesday afternoon, at Freemasons' Hall. Bro. Col. Creaton occupied the chair, and the other brethren who attended were—Bros. Tattershall, S. F. Rawson, W. Hilton, Erasmus Wilson, James Brett, Cottebrune, F. Adlard, Geo. Bolton, T. Cubitt, Edgar Bowyer, John Wordsworth, C. F. Hogard, L. Stean, N. G. Philips, J. M. P. Montagu, and James Terry Sec. The presentation to the Institution, by Bro. C. J. Perceval, of 19 vols. of Household Words, and also a large parcel of other books, was reported. A vote of thanks for the gift was afterwards passed to Bro. Perceval. Two annuitants were reported to have died; and a considerable number of new petitions were admitted. The Committee assented to Bro. Terry's request for the use of the Hall at the Institution at Croydon for the annual Christmas Entertainment on 1st January, Bro. J. G. Stevens moving, and Bro. Cubitt seconding, a donation of £20 towards expenses of the treat. The brethren unanimously agreed to it, and after passing a vote of thanks to the Chairman, separated.

At a recent meeting of the Vestrymen of the parish of St. Anne, Westminster, it was proposed by Bro. Samuel Webb, seconded by Bro. J. E. Shand:—

"This Vestry is of opinion that the present practice of allowing Crown Servants to conduct large businesses, amounting to some millions per annum, with little or no profit, under the title of Civil Service Stores (they not having the usual trade liabilities or expenses), involves an unwholesome principle, and is extremely unjust to the regular trading and most heavily taxed class of the community, and will ultimately prove detrimental to the State, if not embarrassing to the Public Exchequer. Such practice is inconsistent with their appointment as Public Servants, and demands an effectual remedy, either in longer hours with full employment, or a large reduction in salaries, and no pensions or superannuations!"

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A series of articles, biographical, descriptive, and eulogistic, of some of the principal Masonic worthies of the day. They are well written, and though personal, by no means offensive, or intrusive into private life, and in Masonic society will be welcomed as an interesting series of word paintings of members of the Craft.—Standard.

"We do not remember to have read any similar series of sketches which surpass this in merit."—Land and Water.

"The book will be of great interest to Masons, containing as it does pen-and-ink sketches of the most distinguished men among them, and giving some considerable information on matters Masonic, from various points of view."—Lloyd's Newspaper.

"Admirably written, being free from what are too often observed in composition—inelegant language and prolixity."—Sunday Times.

"'J. G.' writes with a considerable amount of freedom, never hesitating to 'hit off' a weakness when he finds it publicly displayed by a 'distinguished brother;' at the same time he never loses sight of a good trait when it is displayed, either in connexion with the Craft or in the service of the public out of doors. The sketches are lively reading."—City Press.

"This is a neat book. The Portraits consist of a series of 'word pictures' of eminent English Masons. It styles Bro. W. J. Hughan 'Knight Errant,' and sketches thirty-two others under equally unique titles. We commend the book as worthy of a place in every Masonic library."—Voice of Masonry.

"It evinces much literary ability, and is a valuable addition to the few works we have in Masonic biography."—Philadelphia Keystone.

"The book ought to be in every well arranged Masonic Library."—New York Courier

"We value the work, and heartily thank Bro. Morgan for our copy."—Masonic Jewel.

"The portraits consist of a series of what we call 'pen and ink sketches' of brethren prominent in all the noble undertakings of English Masonry. . . . Prominent among his brethren we find Bro. Fred. Binckes, ('Our Hercules,' whose Herculean efforts in behalf of those blessed institutions, the charities of English Masons, have a world-wide reputation, which will live long after the zealous Craftsman has been, 'laid away to rest.'"—New York Square.

"The style of the author is pleasing, and the quality of his productions highly complimentary to his ability as a writer."—Masonic Advocate.

"It is a valuable contribution to English current lite ature."—Masonic Review.

"They belong to a kind of writing which has come to be amongst the most popular reading of the day. . . . . The types are as general as they are graphic. The salient characteristics are seized with an easy power, and happily hit off in felicitous phrase."—Sheffield Post.

"Good sensibly written articles. The writer prefaces each of his sketches with some pithy common sense remarks."—Cashel Gazette.

"Cleverly and agreeably sketched, and the work altogether forms a valuable addition to Masonic literature."—Kyde News.

"Very amusing, and beyond doubt, faithful portraits of the worthies who unconsciously sat for them."—Deal, Walmer and Sandwich Mercury.

"The members of the Craft will take it as an acceptable addition to their biographical literature."—Monmouthshire Chronicle.

"They are written in a fair and genial tone, thoroughly Masonic."—Leigh Chronicle.

"Should have a very large sale."—Kingsbridge Gazette.

"These sketches are drawn with sparkling ability.'—Banffshire Reporter.

"We must sincerely congratulate the author on the success of his endeavour to aim at faithful portraiture, while there is an entire absence of what might give offence to the most sensitive mind."—Folkestone Express.

"A very acceptable contribution to the history of the Order. The volume has our warmest commendation."—Keleo Courier.

"Drawn with no little humour, and embellished with many a deft stroke of good natured satire."—Figaro.

"The inquiring Brother who may wish to know something of the strength and beauty of the principles of Masonry, will find a pleasure in scanning the characteristic pictures in this book."—The Brighouse News.

"There is a piquancy in the ready off-hand dash that lends much zest to the subject, and bars it from studied rhetorical expression."—Hebrew Leader.

"There can be no doubt that the writer has produced a series of Portraits which will be a source of amusement and pleasure to Masons throughout the world."—Surrey Comet.

"Will be found very interesting and pleasant reading, especially to the Masonic world."—Barnet Press.

"Calculated to raise the Order—if that be possible—in the estimation of its members, if not of the outer world."—Trowbridge and North Wilts Advertiser.

"Written in a spirited, racy style, and conveying, in as clear a manner as possible, a 'counterfeit presentment' of some of the rulers of the Craft."—Essex Standard.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

ON Friday, at Windsor, the Queen presented new colours to the 2nd Battalion of the 4th Regiment of Infantry, which is under orders for the Cape of Good Hope. The Prince of Wales attended the Cattle Show at Islington on Monday, and on Thursday paid a visit to the Empress Eugenie at Chislehurst. The Duchess of Edinburgh, with her children, arrived at Clarence House on Sunday from Germany. The Grand Duchess of Hesse has been attacked with diphtheria at Darmstadt, but the last bulletin speaks favourably.

In the House of Lords on Monday Lord Cranbrook moved a resolution to charge the expenses of the Afghan war upon the Indian revenues, and gave an explanation of the causes that had led to the outbreak of hostilities. Lord Halifax moved an amendment disapproving the policy of the Ministry, which he declared to be a reversal of the policy pursued by all preceding Governments. Lord Lawrence, the Earl of Derby, and Lord Carnarvon denied the justice of the war. The Duke of Somerset took an opposite view, and Lord Napier and Ettrick also supported the Government. The debate was then adjourned. On Tuesday night the debate was resumed by Earl Grey (who supported the amendment), Lord Selborne, the Marquis of Bath, the Marquis of Ripon, Lord Northbrook, and Lord Cardwell. In support of the Government, the speakers were the Lord Chancellor, Lord Jersey, Lord Midleton, the Marquis of Salisbury, and the Earl of Beaconsfield. The House divided at half-past 2 o'clock, when the votes for the original resolution were 201, and against it 65, showing a majority for the Government of 136.

In the House of Commons on Friday Mr. Whitbread gave notice of a vote of censure on the Government. On Monday, the debate was opened by Mr. Whitbread, who, in the course of a long speech, maintained that the hostility of the Ameer Shere Ali had been provoked by the attempt of the Government to force him to receive a British mission. Mr. E. Stanhope contested this conclusion, and insisted that the reception of a Russian mission at Cabul, and the endeavours of the Ameer to excite the border tribes against us, rendered it absolutely necessary to adopt decisive measures. Mr. Trevelyan, Mr. Chamberlain, and Mr. W. E. Forster spoke against the Government, and Mr. Ridley and Mr. Marten in support. The debate was then adjourned. On Tuesday, the debate was resumed by Lord J. Manners, who was followed by Mr. Gladstone. The succeeding speakers were Sir R. Peel and Lord G. Hamilton, in support of the Government, and Sir C. Dilke and Mr. Leatham, who approved the vote of censure. The debate was again adjourned. The sitting on Wednesday was very short. On Thursday, in reply to Sir W. Harcourt, the Chancellor of the Exchequer said that the Government had been led to believe that the Russian mission at Cabul had been withdrawn, but they had since learnt that such was not the fact. The Government did not intend to acquiesce in Russian influence at Cabul in any form. The adjourned debate was renewed by Mr. Grant-Duff, who was replied to by Mr. Bourke. The subsequent speakers were Mr. O'Shaughnessy, Lord W. Hay, Mr. A. G. Hardy, Mr. Foljambe, Mr. C. B. Denison, Mr. Rylands, Sir J. Hay, Mr. Goschen, and Captain Nolan. The debate was again adjourned.

Cabinet Councils were held on Friday, Monday, and Thursday, all the Ministers being present upon each occasion.

In consequence of adverse rumours, which caused a run upon the Bank, the directors of the West of England bank, whose head office is at Bristol, on Monday, issued a notice of suspension, but intimate their conviction that the assets will be fully adequate to meet all liabilities.

The success of General Roberts at the Piewar Pass appears to have been complete. The guns and ammunition captured and the dispersion of the Afghan troops indicate the destruction of all obstructive power on the eastern side of the Shutargardan Pass, towards which General Roberts is directing his march. In the meantime, preparations are being made for hutting the troops in the Kuram Valley. The cold has become very severe, and the native troops are rather sickly, but the Europeans are all healthy. General Biddulph is about to occupy the Khojak Pass General Stewart has arrived at Quetta, and his division is at the Bolan Pass. A reply from the Ameer Shere Ali to the Viceroy's ultimatum has been received, dated 19th November, in which he complains of his independence being threatened, denies unfriendly intentions, and offers to receive at Cabul a small and temporary mission. There has been a change of Ministry at Constantinople, and Kheredine Pasha has been appointed Grand Vizier. The official explanation of the change is a desire to promote the extension of administrative reforms to all parts of the Empire, and to arrange the existing political difficulties pressing upon the Porte. The French Chamber of Deputies on Saturday, by 338 votes against 49, annulled the election of the Duc Decazes. On Tuesday the Chamber, contrary to the recommendation of the Committee, annulled, by 239 votes against 205, the election of Baron Reille, a Bonapartist. After a protracted debate, turning chiefly upon points of domestic politics, the Italian Chamber on Wednesday, by a majority of 74, rejected a vote of confidence in the Cairoli Ministry, which has since resigned. A new Cabinet, under Signor Depretis, is expected to assume office.

The Installation Ceremony will be rehearsed at the Prosperity Lodge of Instruction, Hercules Tavern, Leadenhall-street, on Tuesday evening next, at seven p.m., when the support of the Craft is earnestly invited.

KINGSTON—JAMAICA.

Royal Chapter, No. 207, Prov. 1.—At a Quarterly Convocation, held on 24th October, at the Friendly Hall, Present—M.E. Comps. C. H. Davis P.Z., D. Barned P.H. pro tem (P.Z. of the Phœnix), R. Langley (P.Z.) J. pro tem, J. Ward S.E., G. Campbell Treasurer, D. Alberga P.S. pro tem, Jones and Leon Assist. S.'s, T. Garsia S.N. pro tem; also M.E. Comps. J. Garsia P.Z. of the Royal, Dias P.Z. of the Glenlyon, L. C. Hollar J. of the Phœnix, and several members and visitors of sister Chapters. Two candidates were exalted. According to the Bye Laws the Companions proceeded to the election of Officers for the ensuing year, with the following result:—M.E. Comps. Langley P.Z. Z. (this Companion has held this office twice previously), Andrews H., G. Sergeant J., A. H. Jones S.E., T. Garsia S.N., E. X. Leon P.S., G. Campbell Treas. (re-elected), G. Magnus Janitor (re-elected). The Companions then elected M.E. Comps. Langley, Davis and Garsia as Life Members, in consideration of their valuable services in connection with the formation of this Chapter. M.E. Comp. D. Barned P.Z. of the Phœnix Chapter was elected an honorary member of this Chapter. The same honour was likewise conferred on M.E. Comp. Sherlock. After routine business, the Companions retired for light refreshments. The usual toasts were proposed and heartily responded to.

Phœnix Lodge, No. 914, Prov. 6.—The monthly ordinary meeting was held at Port Royal, on 7th November, presided over by Bros. G. P. Myers W.M., J. Tyndall S.W., J. Hall J.W., &c., &c., and a goodly number of members and visitors (the latter, we suppose, being due to the presence in the harbour of five vessels of war). There were four joining members elected, five candidates initiated, two candidates passed, and three raised. The several degrees were ably worked by the Master, assisted by the I.P.M. Bro. L. C. Hollar. The members of this Lodge having unanimously passed a resolution asking the Worshipful Master to import a Past Master's jewel, to be presented to the Wor. L. C. Hollar, as a reward of merit for the indefatigable services rendered, a Committee was appointed to prepare an address, and to present the same. The jewel having arrived, the Committee presented the following address:—

"Port Royal, 7th November 1878.

"To the Worshipful Luke Cole Hollar I.P.M. Phœnix Lodge, Port Royal, No. 914, Prov. No. 6.—Worshipful Sir and Brother,—We, the committee appointed by the members of the Phœnix Lodge, Port Royal, No. 914, Prov. No. 6, of Free and Accepted Masons, desire to testify our regard and esteem for you, and therefore take advantage to bear this testimony to your many good qualities, and the very efficient manner in which you have discharged the duties assigned to you as Secretary and Master. During your connection with us, your conduct, always regulated by true Masonic principles, your zeal for the welfare of our Ancient Order, your exertions to promote the harmony and brotherly love which have always characterised the Craft, and the ability and care with which you have filled the important offices to which you have been called, have won our esteem and regard. We beg your acceptance of the accompanying Past Master's jewel, as a tribute and reward of merit for the indefatigable services rendered. Wishing you every happiness this world can afford, and a hope that the G.A.O.T.U. will abundantly bless you, to smooth your steps in the rugged paths of this life, and, finally, to bring you to that world where all will be peace and love.

We remain, Worshipful Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

W. H. Rutherford.
Egbert de Pass sen.
John Tyndall M.D., R.N."

After which the Master placed on the breast of Bro. Hollar the jewel, amid hearty applause. Bro. Hollar made the following reply:—

"To the Worshipful Master, Past Masters, Officers, and Members.—Worshipful Sirs and Brothers,—It is with extreme delight I receive your kind address, accompanied with your valuable present. Although a few months have passed since I presided over this Lodge, yet to me it is a source of the highest gratification to know that the manner in which I have discharged the duties of Secretary and Wor. Master has met with your approval. It would be egotistic on my part were I to accord to myself all the praise you have thought fit to bestow on me, but I must here take the opportunity to state that much of the success of our Lodge is due to the indefatigable exertions of the officers of my administration, whose knowledge of the ritual of the several degrees rendered them of great assistance to me when required. It is with pleasure I can now observe among you not only an uncommon attention, but a spirit of active emulation, which must result in increased prosperity. I do with all sincerity thank you most heartily for your kind sentiments, and the jewel accompanying it, and hope that the G.A.O.T.U. will long spare our lives to unite in upholding and supporting our grand and noble institution, and let me beg that you will accept my unfeigned thanks for your invariable courtesy, prompt attention, and ready obedience to so humble an individual as myself.

I remain, Worshipful Sirs and Brothers,

Yours fraternaly,

Luke C. Hollar."

Other business transacted, Lodge was closed, and the brethren retired to a supper, when a very pleasant evening was spent. This Lodge has on its roll of members a good many of the officers, &c. of Her Majesty's ships. It is the only Lodge available for our brethren of the Navy and Army.

A Mark Mason's Lodge in connection with the Sussex Lodge was held on the 6th November.

It was decided to form a Masonic Literary and Archæological Society in connection with the Lodge, and a committee was appointed to make all arrangements for the same before the fine weather, when expeditions will be made to places of interest. Bro. T. B. Whytehead presented to the Lodge Dr. Mackay's Lexicon of Freemasonry, and a copy of the Memorial Volume of the Banquet to the American Pilgrims at Freemasons' Hall. The W.M. made a few remarks on the working of the Lodge, and said his aim would be to bring it up to the best pitch, following the "Emulation" working in London. In pursuance of a notice of motion, Bro. Isaac proposed that the initiation fee be raised to seven guineas. Bro. Opperman proposed an amendment, that Bro. Isaac's proposition be postponed until the names of thirty or more subscribing members are on the books; this was seconded by Bro. Wolton, and after a friendly discussion the amendment was put to the Lodge and was lost. The original proposition was then put, and carried, subject to a proviso by Bro. Fenner, that the same do not take effect until the first meeting in October next year. Lodge was then closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment, which was of a substantial though frugal character, and was well served by Bro. Fysh, assisted by Bro. Allardyce. After the usual toasts had been duly honoured, the health of the W.M. was proposed by Bro. C. K. Killick jun. in a very short speech, for which the W.M. thanked the brethren, and remarked that as his year of office progressed, he trusted his efforts to support the dignity of the chair, and the honour of the Kingsland Lodge, would meet with the approbation of the members. The Initiate's was the next toast on the list, and this was heartily honoured. Bro. Kentish replied: He thanked the brethren, and trusted he would not prove unworthy of the honour of being a brother Mason; he would strive to gain a knowledge of Freemasonry, and so be a credit to the Lodge into which he had that evening been initiated. The Visitors' toast was responded to by Bro. Wing, who thanked the brethren for the reception they had given him, and expressed the gratification he felt in finding himself amongst so many that he had the honour of being personally known to. Bro. P.M. Killick jun. responded to the P.M.'s toast; he expressed his hearty good wishes for the future of the Kingsland Lodge. The Officers' health was replied to by Bro. Isaac; their desire was to do their best to support the W.M., and ensure the prosperity of the Lodge. The evening was made very enjoyable by some excellent singing, by Bros. Opperman, Isaac, Fysh, and Wing. Bro. Hawkins favoured the brethren with a recitation. The Tyler's toast brought a very pleasant evening to a conclusion, and the brethren separated. During the evening a distressed brother applied for relief, and 10s was voted out of the Lodge Benevolent Fund.

Clement D. of Ceremonies, Dr. Cassanello Registrar, E. Gardelle Steward, and M. Lambroso acting Janitor. Members—Comps. Barsotti, They, Nurri, Blanch Treas., &c. The Chapter being duly opened in ancient form, Comp. J. H. Stevens (British Vice Consul) was elected, and invested as E., on the resignation of Comp. Davis of Perseverance Lodge, at Marsa Carnra in Italy, John Eymon of Carthage and Utica Lodge, at Tunis, Denti and Ben Zaineb No. 1717. The four candidates being present, were exalted to the sublime degree. Dr. N. Davis is the well-known author of "Carthage and its Remains," "The Ruined Cities of Africa," &c., and he conducted for several years, at the expense of the British Government, extensive excavations on the site of Ancient Carthage. On the termination of the ceremony the M.E.Z. expressed his pleasure in conferring the R.A. degree on so distinguished an author and old a Mason as Comp. Dr. Davis, who returned thanks to the Chapter in appropriate language. He said his gratification at taking the highest degree in English Craft Masonry was considerably increased by the fact that he had received it on the site of his old labours, and in a Chapter bearing the name of that famous city, associated with the dearest enterprise of his life. He promised to send from Italy a set of marble columns to further adorn the Chapter. M.E. Comp. Broadley expressed the acknowledgments of the assembled Companions. The first Principal then alluded to the loss the Chapter had sustained by the awfully sudden death of their Janitor, Comp. Henry Howard Haylock, who had fallen dead in the street on the preceding Friday, and an expression of the regret of the Chapter was ordered to be inscribed on the minutes, and the Chapter to remain in mourning till the end of the current year. Comp. John Eymon was then unanimously elected and invested as Janitor. The charitable collection having been made, the Chapter was duly closed and adjourned till the 20th December.

Robbins, in a very excellent speech, responded. The toasts of the Wardens, Officers, and Tyler were given, and after a very agreeable and harmonious evening the brethren separated. Davies, FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE, &c. The minutes of last regular meeting and of Lodge of Emergency having been ratified, Bro. P.M. Finch read letters of apology for non-attendance from Bros. J. P. Platt P.P.G.W., J. Wood P.P.G.R., F. Jackson Prov. G. Treas., E. H. Griffiths Prov. G. Sec., J. Hibbert P.P.G.J.D., and others. Some minor details having been disposed of, the important event of the day was proceeded with, and to that purpose Bro. Beresford introduced Bro. W. Harrison, the W.M. elect, to Bro. H. Finch, for the benefit of installation. The installing Master gave the customary address, with the ancient charges. The questions put by the acting Secretary were answered satisfactorily, and Bro. Harrison was solemnly obligated. The Lodge was now worked up to the third degree, after which Bro. W. Harrison was installed, proclaimed W.M., and as such received the salutations of the brethren. In due course the Officers for the next twelve months were invested, as follow:—J. Kirk I.P.M., H. Collier S.W., T. Burrows J.W., W. W. Shelmerdie, for the third time, Treas., T. Bullock (re-appointed) Sec., W. Booth S.D., G. T. Barrow J.D., T. B. Birch D. of C., G. Balfe Org., E. Stevens I.G., H. W. Mather S.S., J. Fox J.S., J. Meadows Tyler. The ceremony being so far accomplished, Bro. Finch delivered the addresses, and so brought to a close one of the most brilliant, successful, and enjoyable installations, it has been our good fortune to witness. The W.M. presented the I.P.M. with a P.M.'s jewel, in the name of the Lodge, for which Bro. Kirk returned thanks. The W.M. in a very cordial and complimentary manner, proposed a vote of thanks to the Installing Master, the same to be entered on the minutes. This was seconded by Bro. Col. Wilkinson very heartily, and supported by Bros. Dr. Beales, Beresford and Chapman, each in a most appreciative manner declaring they had never before witnessed an installation ceremony so admirably performed. The vote was put to the Lodge, and carried with applause. Bro. Finch briefly returned thanks. We must certainly congratulate St. John's Lodge in having a member—comparatively a young Mason—who has shown so much talent, and made himself so deservedly popular as Bro. Finch; nor must we omit to mention the musical talent it possesses. The able manner in which the choral service, which added greatly to the solemnity of the beautiful ceremony, was carried out, reflected great credit. The vocalists were Bros. Balfe, Edmondson, Alcock, T. Wilkinson, Kelsall, and W. Booth, with Bro. H. Collier S.W. presiding at the organ, and Bro. Col. Wilkinson at the piano. Hearty good wishes were tendered by the visiting brethren. The labours of the evening being ended, the Wor. Master closed the Lodge in due and antient form. The brethren now adjourned to the spacious dining-hall which forms a part of the building in which the Lodge is held, and sat down to a most enjoyable banquet. At its conclusion the Musical Brethren sang "Non Nobis Domine," and, the cloth being removed, the W.M. gave the toast of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, which was followed by the National Anthem. H.R.H. the Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family was next honoured, followed by a glee. The W.M. now proposed the M.W. Grand Master of England H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester, and was followed by Bro. Schofield, who gave that of the Pro Grand Master, Deputy Grand Master, and the other Officers of G.L. Past and Present. Glee, "Glorious Apollo." W. Bro. Beresford felt it a very great honour to propose the health of the R.W. Prov. Grand Master, Lord de Tabley. The former toasts had met with every cordiality from the brethren, and he felt sure that the toast he gave would be equally as loyally responded to. To Bro. Finch was entrusted the sixth toast on the list, and in proposing it he felt sure it would be warmly received by every member of the Lodge, and every visitor round the board. The prosperity of their province he attributed to the noble chief who was at their head, and to the highly capable and efficient staff that composed the Prov. G.L. Officers of Cheshire. Such a body of brethren reflect credit on the Order, and add lustre to the individual Lodges from which they are accredited. Honoured as they were by the presence of many worthy and distinguished Prov. Grand Officers, he felt regret in not having Bro. J. P. Platt among the company, for to him St. John's Lodge was greatly indebted. He also regretted that Bro. Dr. Beales had been compelled to leave by an early train. He called on the brethren to drink to the health of the Deputy Prov. G.M., and the other Officers of Prov. G.L. Bro. Beresford was the first to reply, and was followed by Bros. Colonel Wilkinson and Chetham. The W.M. gave the Sister Prov. Grand Lodges, which was responded to by Bro. J. Chapman, for Prov. Grand Lodge of Devon, and Bro. Hardon, for East Lancashire. Bro. Colonel Wilkinson proposed the next toast, and in doing so, said he really felt that it ought to have been placed in more able hands. Yet he felt a great deal of pleasure, and a certain identity with the toast, as he had watched the great progress made by Bro. Harrison in the Lodge, and the fidelity with which he had performed every office committed to his charge; that night he had reaped the benefit of his former labours, in being inducted into the highest office in the Lodge, a position all must look to from first to last with every degree of respect. He felt he was proposing the health of a brother worthy and capable of filling the chair of the Lodge, and he knew that the W.M. would do his work as thoroughly and efficiently in his present post as he had in the minor offices. He then gave them the health of the Worshipful Master, which was drunk with enthusiasm, the brethren honouring him with 21 guns. Bro. Balfe sang "Three times Three." The W. Master expressed his sincere thanks for the kind manner in which his health had been proposed and received, also for the honour conferred on him in being entrusted with the high position of Master for the ensuing year. He deeply felt the great responsibility, and would have accepted the office with diffidence were he not certain of discharging its duties in the same manner he had those offices which were the stepping stones to this. He was also sure of the cordial co-operation of the brethren, whether they were in or out of office, and that strengthened him in the work to be done. The W.M. proposed the health of the I.P.M., which was received with Masonic fire, and was followed by the glee, "Fill, Boys, and drink about." The I.P.M. acknowledged the honour done him by the brethren, at the banquet, in the Lodge room, and during his year of office. Bro. Beresford was entrusted with the toast of the visiting brethren, to which he did ample justice, extending a cordial greeting to all. Glee, "King Canute." The toast was most gratefully acknowledged by many visitors, and the next, put from the chair, was the P.M.'s of St. John's Lodge; this the W.M. proposed very cordially. Our musical brethren sang, "Let fortune smile or frown," and P.M. Schofield replied on behalf of the P.M.'s. In proposing the health of the newly elected Officers, the W.M. felt sure, with good P.M.'s and good Officers, the affairs of the Lodge must prosper. The Master of a Lodge felt somewhat like the Captain of a good ship, which, well-officered and well-manned, was a pleasure to command, he felt the good old ship, St. John's was well Officered and manned for the next year, as he hoped it would ever be. Glee: "Our Ship now goes," The toast was responded to by Bros. J.W., Secretary, and the other Officers. After which, Bro. Finch gave the Masonic Charities, which was ably proposed, and was responded to by Bro. Hardon. Bro. J.W., by request of the W.M., gave the Sister Lodges of Stockport, which was replied to by Bro. Chetham, and the glee "Life's a Bumper" ushered in the time for the Tyler's toast. The pleasant proceedings terminated by the Musical Brethren singing "To our next Merry Meeting." We regret we have been compelled to abreviate our report, as our space is again crowded.

Prudent Brethren Chapter, No. 145.—The installation meeting of this Chapter was held on Tuesday, the 10th inst., at the Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street. Comp. E. Moody Z., E. H. Thiellay H., Venn J., J. Boyd P.Z. Treas., G. S. States P.Z. S.E., Haslett P.S., and P.Z.'s T. Bull and H. Dicketts, with a goodly attendance of members and Visitors. The Chapter was opened and the minutes were confirmed. Comp. E. H. Thiellay was installed by Comp. T. Bull P.Z. into the chair, in a very efficient manner. The H. and J., Comps. Cox and Venn, were installed by Comp. J. Boyd P.Z. perfectly and impressively. Comp. J. Boyd was invested Treasurer, G. S. States S.E., Haslett S.N., Biggs P.S. There were several names on the agenda paper for exaltation. Bro. Woodliffe No. 87, and Rev. Bro. Fraser P.G. Chaplain, Ireland, were exalted into R.A. Masonry, the ceremony being perfectly worked. A very elegant P.Z.'s jewel was presented to the retiring Z., Comp. E. Moody, for the admirable manner he had discharged his duties in the chair during his year of office. This having been suitably acknowledged, the Chapter was closed, and the Companions partook of a very excellent banquet and dessert, provided by Bro. Best, Comp. E. Dawkins superintending. The Z. proposed the usual Loyal and R.A. Toasts. Among the Visitors were Comps. Rev. P. M. Holden, H. Dubois, &c., &c.

Sincerity Chapter, No. 174.—The regular convocation was held on Thursday, the 5th inst., at the Cheshire Cheese, Crutched-friars. Comps. J. Terry P.Z. as M.E.Z., G. Huggett H., Rawley P.Z. as J., W. C. Barlow P.Z. Treas., A. Leins S.E., Davey S.N., Bowyer P.S., Verry Janitor; P.Z.'s John Newton, Cook, Rawley and Bulmer. The Chapter was opened and minutes confirmed. Ballots were taken for the admission of Bros. H. Bond No. 174 and James No. 65, unanimously in their favour. The latter brother was duly exalted into R.A. Masonry by Comp. J. Terry P.Z. Comp. Perceval announced his intention to serve as Steward at the Anniversary Festival of the Girls' School. A letter was read from the M.E.Z., regretting he was unable to be present, on account of illness. A sum of 21s was voted to the inmates of the R. M. Institution towards their annual entertainment. Chapter was then closed until the first Thursday in March. The Companions partook of a good and substantial banquet provided by Comp. J. Wright. Companion J. Terry genially presided, and gave the Loyal and R.A. Toasts. In proposing the health of the newly-exalted Companion, who had been introduced by Companion Leins, Comp. Terry remarked he was one whom they all respected. After a reply from Comp. James, Comp. Newton P.Z. rose with feelings of pleasure, at the same time with diffidence, to propose the toast of the evening; the health of the acting Z., Comp. James Terry. The exaltee of the evening had spoken of how beautifully the ceremony had been rendered by their worthy Companion; he could speak of him from his youth upwards. But this was not necessary, as all knew his qualities. Personally, he (Comp. Newton) trusted it might be many a long day ere Comp. Terry was absent; it was always a red letter day when he was present. The acting Z. regretted the absence of the M.E.Z. on the present occasion. Some years since the Companions met but seven in number; now, he was pleased to say, they were a numerous assemblage. He and Comp. Newton had known each other from boyhood, and though at the present time he had other engagements, it was to him a source of great pleasure to be among his old friends, and he hoped the association might be continued for many years. The health of the H. and J. was given, and then the M.E.Z. proposed the health of the Visitors, Comp. H. M. Levy replying. With the toast of the P.Z.'s was associated the name of Comp. John Newton. Comp. Leins acknowledged the honour that was paid the Officers, and he was followed by Comp. E. Bowyer. Comp. Brown then came in for a due meed of praise, and then the Janitor was summoned. A very agreeable evening was passed, and Comp. J. Wright, the worthy host, was most assiduous in ministering to the comfort of the guests.

Confidence Lodge, No. 193.—The installation meeting was held on Monday, the 9th inst., at Anderton's Hotel, Fleet-street, in the new and commodious room. Bro. Henry Leah W.M. in the chair. Bros. Biddell S.W., Footit J.W., Warne P.M. Treasurer, J. Shakell P.M. Secretary, James S.D., Lemiere J.D., Hall I.G.; P.M.'s Bros. Reed I.P.M., King, H. Webb, Kershaw, Burt, S. Webb, and a numerous attendance of the brethren and visitors. The Lodge was opened, and minutes were confirmed. Bro. Reed P.M., by the courtesy of the W.M., passed Bros. J. Williams and Collins to the second degree. Bro. Biddell S.W. and W.M. elect was presented to the Lodge; a Board of Installed Masters was formed, and he was duly installed into the chair by Bro. S. Webb. At the conclusion of the ceremony, Bro. Webb was warmly congratulated by the brethren and visitors. The W.M. invested the following as his Officers:—Bros. Footit S.W., James J.W., Warne P.M. Treasurer, Shakell Secretary, Lemiere S.D., Fells J.D., Smith I.G., S. Webb P.M. D.C., H. Webb W.S., Riley Tyler. The several appointments seemed to give great satisfaction. Lodge was then closed, and the brethren sat down to banquet and dessert, provided by Bro. F. Clemow. The W.M., after grace had been said, proposed the usual toasts. Bro. H. Leah I.P.M. proposed the health of the W.M. This toast, he was sure, would meet with their approbation. He (Bro. Leah) had, during his year, received assistance from every Officer, and the W.M. who had just been invested had never been absent. This augured well for the future of the Lodge, and the success that must accrue will be due to the W.M., who can and will do his duty. Bro. S. Webb P.M. then artistically sang, "When time has bereft me." The W.M. replied; having been elected W.M. of the Lodge, all he could do to deserve their approbation he would endeavour to accomplish. With the health of the Visitors was associated the name of Bro. E. Gottheil P.M. 141, to whom the W.M. was indebted for the Masonic knowledge he possessed. Bro. Gottheil acknowledged the kind remarks of the W.M., and gracefully thanked him and the members of the Lodge for the kindness they had shown the numerous body of Visitors. The next toast given was the health of the P.M.'s, and in proposing it the W.M. was pleased to speak of their various qualifications. He would couple with the toast the name of Bro. H. Leah, to whom he had great pleasure in presenting a jewel unanimously voted to him at their last meeting. Bro. Leah thanked the P.M.'s for the assistance they had given him personally. All present had seen what Bro. S. Webb had done in the installation ceremony. As for Bro. Read, when he (the speaker) had been unavoidably absent Bro. Read has always been ready to render assistance, and this he would do for any W.M. He thanked them for their valuable gift; he felt it to be an honour to be a Past Master of the Lodge in which he was initiated. Bro. S. Webb said, as the oldest P.M. he had been pleased to perform the ceremony of installation, but the W.M. had had valuable assistance in the Confidence Lodge of Instruction, of which Bro. Gottheil is the able Preceptor; the W.M. would show his proficiency in his new capacity. The W.M. then proposed the health of the Officers. He knew they would emulate the example of those who had preceded them. After a song from Bro. Read, Bro. Footit responded, and he was followed by Bros. James and Shakell. The Tyler's toast was then given, and the brethren separated. The Visitors were—Bros. Clarke J.W. 1654, W. H. Cunningham W.M. 22, H. Rymell S.W. 206, W. Rowley 174, G. Vaughan, F. H. Clemow, J. Moss worked the first and second sections of the Lecture. The Lodge voted one guinea for the "Old Folks" Christmas Entertainment. One guinea was voted, to be placed on Bro. Medcalf's list, he acting as Steward for the Benevolent Institution. Bro. Biddle was elected W.M. for Wednesday next.

Percy Lodge of Instruction, No. 198.—At the Jolly Farmer's, Southgate-road, Islington, on Saturday, 7th December. Bros. Braated W.M., Gilham S.W., Millington J.W., Spencer S.D., C. Lorkin J.D., J. Lorkin I.G., and about thirty members. Minutes were read and confirmed, after which the ceremony of initiation was rehearsed, Bro. Hallam sen. as candidate. Several sections of the lecture were worked by Bro. Pearcy, the Preceptor. Bro. Gilham was elected to preside at the next meeting. During the evening a brother of Lodges 219 and 525 applied for relief. It was proved that he had been assisted by another Lodge held here during the week, and also at one the night before, held elsewhere, which the applicant seemed to have forgotten; his appeal therefore was not entertained.

St. Michael's Lodge, No. 211.—A meeting was held on Tuesday, at the Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street. Present—Bros. Alfred Green W.M. Alfred Withers S.W., W. Radcliffe J.W., W. W. Morgan Sec., C. Greenwood P.M. Treas., Dr. Waters S.D., Usher Back J.D., W. E. Young I.G., C. T. Speight P.M. Tyler; Past Master Bro. John Laver. Visitor—Bro. Greenwood jun. Business—Lodge opened; minutes were read and confirmed. Bro. Hitch answered the questions leading to the second degree. Lodge opened in the second, and Bro. Hitch was passed. Bro. Martin, a candidate for the third degree, was examined; the Lodge was opened up, and the candidate raised to the sublime degree. The W.M. gave the Traditional History and the Lecture on the tracing board of the degree, and completed the ceremony, as he had the former, in a very impressive manner. Closed in the third degree. Bro. Fellow Craft was admitted, and Lodge was closed in the second degree. After some routine business, a vote of thanks was passed, and ordered to be recorded on the minutes to Bro. Morgan, who had presented the Lodge with a new minute book. A proposed Lodge of Instruction was then advocated, and after discussion, it was moved by Bro. Back J.D., seconded by Bro. Radcliffe J.W., supported by Bros. P.M. Laver and A. Withers, that the necessary steps be taken. After the Lodge had been closed, the brethren partook of tea, and spent an hour together in conviviality.

Lodge of Good Fellowship, No. 276.—The annual meeting of this Lodge for the installation of Worshipful Master, appointment and investiture of officers, and for other purposes, took place on Thursday last at the Corn Exchange, Chelmsford, under favourable auspices. The ceremony of installation was entrusted to the Rev. F. B. Shepherd, an old Past Master of the Lodge, also of No. 1543, and P.P.G.S.W., and P.P.G.C. Essex; and was performed in a way that could not fail to give general satisfaction, and reflected considerable credit alike upon the Rev. brother and on those who selected him for the arduous task. He was ably assisted by Bro. D. M. B. Wheeler, the retiring Master. The W.M. Elect, Bro. Alfred Francis Glen, having been duly installed, he appointed and invested the following Officers:—Bros. D. M. B. Wheeler I.P.M., J. S. Brown S.W., J. P. Lewin J.W., F. Whitmore Treas., Rev. F. B. Shepherd Chaplain, J. Nicholls M.D. Sec., A. Durrant D.C., E. Shedd S.D., W. J. Upton J.D., A. Mead I.G., J. Scarlett Steward, and T. Sarel Tyler. A vote of thanks having been accorded to the Installing Master and the retiring Master, Lodge was closed in due form, and the brethren shortly afterwards assembled at the White Hart Hotel, to an excellent banquet, serve by mine host Bro. Sheldrake in capital style. Amongst those present, in addition to the brethren above named, were—P.M.'s A. Goodchild, J. Burton, J. F. Bott, J. P. Sarel, W. Pullen; Bros. J. Scarlett, T. F. Woodard, H. Bowles, W. Langham, and the following Visitors—Thos. J. Ralling, W. W. Brown, G. W. Patmore, E. Hennemeyer, J. H. Geere, F. J. Snell, F. M. Williams, John J. C. Turner, &c., &c. The usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured, and a musical programme, vocal and instrumental, of no mean order, was admirably carried out by Bros. Lewin, Upton, Brown, Bowles, Burton, &c., &c.

Shakespeare Lodge, No. 284.—A meeting was held on Tuesday, 10th December, at the Masonic Rooms, Warwick. Present—Bros. Brabazon Campbell M.A. W.M., Geo. Wilson M.D. S.W., F. Thursfield M.D. J.W., S. John Law was passed, and Bro. Wrigley was raised. Bro. Geo. Wilson M.D. S.W. was elected W.M. for the ensuing year.

Prosperity Chapter, No. 290.—Huddersfield. In our report last week of the meeting of this Chapter, we ought to have stated that after the exaltation of Bro. Vickers, that Companions Turner, Harrop and George Sykes were respectively installed into the chairs of Z., H., and J., in a very masterly manner by Comp. William Harrop.

La Tolérance Lodge of Instruction, No. 538.—Green Dragon, Maddox-street, W. Nearly fifty brethren assembled on Wednesday, the 11th inst., to hear Bro. W. H. Dean, W.M. 417 P.P.G.S.B. Dorset, rehearse the ceremony of Installation. The Officers of the evening were Bros. E. Child S.W., T. W. Cooper J.W., C. J. W. Davis Treas., S. A. Cooper S.D., A. Ginger J.D., G. Cundy I.G., J. Hurdell Sec., Bro. F. G. Baker P.M. The first three sections of the first Lecture were worked. Bro. B. H. Swallow P.M. 382 P.P.G.J.D. Middlesex was presented as W.M. elect, and installed into the chair in a manner reflecting the highest credit on Bro. Dean. The case of a foreign brother's distressed widow being brought before the Lodge, the small sum which the Lodge is empowered to give was augmented by the voluntary support of the brethren present, and £1 18s was collected. A cordial vote of thanks to Bro. W. H. Dean brought the meeting to a close.

Brecknock Lodge, No. 651.—This Lodge held its monthly meeting on Monday, the 2nd day of December, at the Castle Hotel, Brecon. Present—Bros. Richard Webb W.M., T. Butcher S.W., Thos. Jones J.W., Frank Grundy S.D., W. Webb J.D., J. A. Whittle Sec., John Morgan I.G., H. O. A. Maybery S., James Jones Tyler, Past Masters Rich and Phillips. The Lodge having been opened in due form and with solemn prayer, the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. The ballot was taken for Mr. Lewis Williams, a candidate for initiation, and declared to be clear. Subsequently the candidate was initiated by the W.M. into the mysteries of Freemasonry. Bro. Thomas Butcher stated that it was the custom of most of the Lodges to present a P.M.'s jewel to a retiring Master, but that it had not been the custom with the Brecknock Lodge, and he proposed that it now be instituted, for a more fitting opportunity could not probably be obtained than existed at the present time, as their W.M. (Bro. Richard Webb) was about to vacate the chair, which for two years he had filled not only with credit to himself, but with honour to the Lodge over which he had presided with such faithfulness and care. He therefore proposed that a P.M.'s jewel be presented to Bro. Richard Webb, the retiring W.M. Bro. H. O. Aveline Maybery, in seconding the proposition, cheerfully endorsed all that Bro. Butcher had said in favour of their W.M., and would willingly testify to the goodwill and esteem which he had earned from the brethren generally. The resolution having been put, it was cordially and unanimously passed. The W.M. stated that as the W. Grand Master the Prince of Wales was about to visit Maesllwch Castle, a few miles from Brecon, he had written to the Provincial Grand Master, Bro. Sir Geo. Elliott, suggesting that H.R.H.'s first visit to Wales would be an excellent opportunity for Masons in Wales to assist in any demonstration which might be got up in his honour, and that it would reflect credit upon the division over which Sir George presided were it to take the initiative. Sir George being abroad, the letter was referred to his Deputy (Bro. Marmaduke Tennant), who, with characteristic promptness, at once put himself into communication with the Secretary of the Prince of Wales, who in acknowledging receipt of the communication stated, that he had been directed by His Royal Highness to express his regret that his visit would not be prolonged sufficiently to enable him to attend a Provincial Grand Lodge at Brecon, but that he should be happy to receive an address at Maesllwch Castle. On receipt of this communication the D.P.G.M. called a Provincial Committee meeting to carry out the necessary details. At the close of the Lodge the W.M. in a few appropriate words presented handsome emblematical jewels to two of the brethren. The jewels bear the following inscriptions:—

"Presented to Bro. John Alfred Whittle, by the Loyal Brecknock Lodge, No. 651, for energetic services as Secretary. December 1878."

"Presented to Bro. Adam Orlapp, by the Loyal Brecknock Lodge, No. 651, for faithful services. December 1878."

The recipients having acknowledged the gifts, the Lodge was closed in ancient form, and the brethren adjourned from labour to refreshment.

The High Cross Lodge of Instruction, No. 754.—The 6th Anniversary Festival of this Lodge was held at the Coach and Horses, Lower Tottenham, on Wednesday, 4th December, under the Presidency of Bro. H. Stephens, the Worshipful Master of the High Cross Lodge, from which this Lodge of Instruction emanates, Bro. Waller, the Treas. being Vice President. Forty brethren and their friends sat down to the excellent dinner provided by Bro. Mattock. After the usual loyal toasts, the President proposed success to the High Cross Lodge of Instruction, and informed those gentlemen who were not Masons that Lodges of Instruction were for the purpose of perfecting the members in the duties of the Craft, and it had given him great pleasure whenever he visited the Lodge to see the manner in which those duties had been done, he called upon Bro. Oliver the W. Master for the time being to respond. Bro. Oliver thanked the President and gentlemen for the honour they had done him; he felt great pride in working up to the position, and had acquired a great amount of Masonic knowledge by attending this Lodge of Instruction, and invited brethren to come any Thursday evening and judge for themselves how the work was carried on. The Vice President gave the health of the President, thanking him for coming to preside over them that evening; he felt sure all those who had the pleasure of being acquainted with Bro. Stephens, and had the opportunity of witnessing the manner in which he conducted the business of his regular Lodge, would feel the same amount of pleasure in drinking his health as he did, and all would agree with him that the more they saw of Bro Stephens the better they would like him. Bro. Stephens thanked the Vice President for the flattering terms in which he had proposed his health, and also for the hearty manner in which the company present responded; he had always endeavoured to conduct the business of the Lodge over which he had the honour to preside during the present year to the best of his ability, and felt grateful for the kindly expressions he had received from its members since the time he first occupied the chair; he also experienced much pleasure in coming here to-night, and was pleased to see so many of the Past Masters and other friends around him. The President next gave the Vice President; the high esteem with which he was regarded by the brethren, and the willingness he at all times evinced in prosecuting anything for the benefit of Freemasonry made him so popular amongst them that he would not go into the history of his many good qualities, but would ask the brethren to unite with him in drinking his good health. Bro. P.M. Maller was grateful for the kind expressions he had received from the brethren that night, he took great interest in the Lodge of Instruction, of the funds of which he was the custodian, and had much pleasure in stating, after sending a goodly amount up to the Charities, he had still a balance in hand. It would always be his study to promote the welfare of the Lodge. Bro. J. H. Thompson P.M. then rose and said he had permission from the President to propose the next toast, it was the health of Bro. Driscoll the late Sec. It afforded him a double pleasure on that occasion, inasmuch as he had, in addition to proposing his health, another pleasing duty to perform. The members he was sure would all regret the retirement of Bro. Driscoll from his post, which he had filled from the formation of the Lodge; as for himself all the Masonic knowledge he possessed was obtained under the able tuition of Bro. Driscoll, and he had now the pleasure to present him with a slight testimonial as a mark of the esteem in which he is held by the brethren of the Lodge of Instruction. Addressing Bro. Driscoll, he presented him with a handsome eight day clock, subscribed for by the brethren, and trusted he might live many years to be occasionally amongst them. Bro. Driscoll, after thanking Bro. Thompson and the brethren for the handsome present they had made him, which would always be regarded by him far above its intrinsic value, said he was one of the founders of the Lodge, and up to the present had acted in the dual capacity of Preceptor and Secretary, and had certainly taken great pains to impart that knowledge to young members which is so calculated to make them good Masons, and his exertions had not been in vain; in fact, he felt almost diffident in preceptoring now in their presence, for some of them knew as much or even more than he did; he had pupils in whom he felt justly proud, and in retiring from his post, which he did through pressure of business, it gave him great pleasure to see that two of his pupils would fill the offices he had just vacated, Bros. Thompson and Garrod having been respectively appointed Preceptor and Secretary. The President then gave the Masonic Charities, coupling the name of Bro. Garrod the Secretary to the Second Tottenham, Edmonton and Enfield Charitable Association. Bro. Garrod was happy to say that the Charities were a great feature in Freemasonry, and after explaining the objects of these Associations, said the one in which he was particularly interested was a great success, for it numbered upwards of seventy members, and in the short space of eight months he had collected £130. He thanked the brethren for the support they had given. The health of the visitors having been proposed and responded to by Mr. Fuller and Dr. Hall—the latter gentleman stating he was particularly acquainted with one of the Institutions mentioned by the Secretary, he meant the Boys School, which was in their immediate neighbourhood; he had had occasion to visit it ever since it had been founded, and could safely say not only was it an honour to Freemasonry, but a credit to a nation. Thus terminated a very pleasant evening.

Royal Alfred Lodge of Instruction, No. 780.—On 6th December, at the Star and Garter, Kew. In the temporary absence of Bro. Costelow, Bro. Roe took the chair, supported by the following officers:—Bros. Goss I.P.M. 780 S.W., Gomm J.W., Blasby S.D., Botley (who received a cordial greeting upon his recovery after a serious illness) J.D., Gunner I.G. There were also present Bros. Tucker, Skinner, Beckett, McGee 154 I.C., and (later on) Bro. Costelow. Lodge was regularly opened and advanced to the third degree, when Bro. Roe impressively rehearsed the ceremony of raising, Bro. Beckett being the candidate. The brethren were called to refreshment; upon the resumption of labour the dues were collected, and Bro. Goss was elected W.M. for next meeting. Lodge was closed with due observance of ancient custom, and adjourned till 13th inst., at 7.30 p.m.

Dalhousie Lodge of Instruction No. 860.—On Tuesday evening last, at Bro. Smyth's, Sisters Tavern, Pownall-road, Dalston, Bros. Carr W.M., Brasted S.W., J. Lorkin J.W., Wardell S.D., Christian J.D., McClean I.G., Dallas Sec., Smyth Treas., P.M. Wallington Preceptor; also Bros. Webb, Smyth, Forss, Polak and others. The W.M. worked the ceremony of initiation, Bro. Polak candidate. Bro. Webb answered the questions; the Lodge was opened in the second degree, and the ceremony of passing rehearsed. Bro. Webb worked the first section of the Lecture, assisted by the brethren. Lodge was opened in the third degree, and regularly closed to the first. Bro. Giller of Lodge 1607, and Bro. Bedell of Lodge 860, were elected members. Proposed by Bro. Wallington, seconded by Bro. Dallas, that the sum of £1 1s be voted from the funds of the Lodge for the "Old Folks" Christmas festival. Carried unanimously. Bro. Brasted will preside next Tuesday.

Whittington Lodge of Instruction, No. 862.—On Wednesday, 11th December, at Bro. Hyde's, Red Lion, Poppins-court, Fleet-street, Bro. Tate, of the Mother Lodge, as W.M., supported by Pro Knill Abell S.W., Vizzard J.W., Brown S.D., Abell I.G., Long P.M. and Preceptor, and others. After the confirmation of the minutes, Bro. Thompson offered himself as a candidate for passing, and was duly entrusted. The Lodge was then opened in the second degree, and the ceremony ably performed by the W.M. The whole of the lecture was worked by the brethren. On the resumption of the Lodge to the first degree, Bro. Jones, of Lodge 862, was admitted a member, and Bro. Knill Abell was elected W.M. for ensuing week, when he will rehearse the ceremony of raising.

Wandsworth Lodge of Instruction, No. 1044.—A meeting was held at the Spread Eagle Hotel, Wandsworth, on Wednesday, the 11th inst, when Bros. F. Reed presided as W.M., J. Frost as S.W., and J. J. Holland as J.W. There was only a small attendance of brethren, many members being present at a Committee meeting formed for the purpose of giving a gratuitous dinner to 200 poor women and children on Christmas Day.

Hartington Lodge, No. 1085, Derby.—The December meeting of this Lodge was held on the 4th, at the Derbyshire Masonic Hall. Present—Bro. G. Pipes Prov. Grand Organist W.M., W. Heathcote P.P. D of C. Boden W.M. 353, J. Brown I.P.M. 731 Prov. J.G.D. and B. Cooper P.M. 787. Mr. Chas. Osborne received the benefit of initiation. Bro. Belfield was advanced to the third degree. The W.M. stated that he presented the annual return of the Lodge to the Prov. G. Lodge held on the 26th ult., and that the R.W. P.G.M. had been pleased to invest him as the Prov. Grand Organist for the ensuing year. Several matters relating to the R.M.B.I., and other charities, received attention, one result being the appointment as Charity Steward of Bro. W. W. Popplewell to represent the Lodge at the next Festival of the R.M.B.I. There were two nominations of candidates, and there was an unusual amount of other business disposed of, affecting, more particularly, the internal affairs of the Lodge, the most noticeable question being an increase in the annual subscription. The brethren after their labours adjourned to the banquet room, there to enjoy a spread, provided in excellent style by Bro. Steele. Bros. Dodd and Hudson contributed some exquisite music to the harmony of the evening.

Lord Warden Lodge, No. 1096.—A meeting was held on Friday, the 6th inst., at the Lodge-room, St. George's Hall, Deal, at half-past seven o'clock. Present—Bros. Edward Kirby W.M., John Laggett S.W., H. R. L. Botting J.W., T. J. Usher Secretary, Stephen Hinds Treasurer, J. Carpenter S.D., W. Carterfield J.D., J. Westaway Organist, S. Willey I.G., S. The Lodge was opened, and the minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. A candidate for Freemasonry having been regularly proposed and seconded at the previous Lodge meeting, was balloted for, and the ballot being found to be unanimous, he was duly initiated, after which the charge was ably delivered by Bro. S.W. A petition from the widow of the late Bro. J. Cressy Hall (who was initiated in this Lodge in 1868, and afterwards joined the Oak Lodge, No. 190, and the Cavese Chapter, No. 176), to the Lodge of Benevolence for some assistance, as she was in great distress, was read and signed by all the brethren present. Bro. Hall was in practice in London as a solicitor at the time of his death. Bro. Secretary announced that the Lodge of Benevolence had granted the sum of £40 to Bro. Trollope, to assist him in repairing the loss and damage he had sustained by the hurricane in October last; and Past Master Ayling stated he had seen Bro. Trollope, who was getting better, and on his behalf desired to thank Grand Lodge for their very seasonable assistance, and to the brethren of this Lodge for having recommended the prayer of his petition. The Lodge was then duly closed; the meeting adjourned until the third Friday in the present month, and the brethren afterwards spent a social hour together, separating about eleven o'clock.

Upton Lodge of Instruction, No. 1227.—At Bro. Bolton's, Norton Folgate, on Thursday, 5th December. Present—Bros. R. W. G.S.B., J. R. Young W.M. elect 148. After the minutes were read and confirmed, the W.M. introduced the subject of a new Masonic Hall. A long discussion ensued, after which a committee was appointed to go into the question, and report at a future meeting.

The next item brought before the Lodge was the desirability of sending a Steward to one of our great London Charities, and it is hoped a brother will be forthcoming to represent the Lodge in that capacity. The brethren next proceeded to elect a Ball Committee, to act with and support the General Committee. No further business being on the programme, the Lodge was duly closed, and the brethren adjourned to refreshment, after which the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts were given and responded to. The brethren separated in harmony.

Marquis of Ripon Lodge, No. 1469.—A regular meeting took place on Friday, 6th inst., at the Hall of the Metropolitan Societies Asylum, Balls Pond-road, Dalston. Present—Bros. Dr. J. Symonds W.M., John High S.W., J. Glaskin acting J.W., Wm. Stephens Treasurer, W. J. Murlis Secretary, C. Smith I.G., Gilchrist Tyler. There was no busines on the agenda but the balloting for a joining member. This being the last meeting in the year, Bro. Stephens made a special appeal on behalf of the Institution in whose Hall they met, and where they had been so comfortably located since the consecration of the Lodge. Nearly fifty years ago the Metropolitan Societies Asylum was established for the reception of aged persons of both sexes, members of any Benevolent Institution, who are provided with a free residence, coals, gas, medical attendance, and a weekly allowance towards maintenance. Her Majesty the Queen is Patron, but the Institution is but scantily endowed,—it is usual at Christmas time to entertain these old folks with a dinner, he therefore urged the brethren who had so nobly given to the Masonic Charities to do something for the inmates of an institution so worthy of their support. Bro. H. Patient the Secretary, a member of this Lodge, then prepared a list, and a sum of upwards of ten guineas was collected. For this he most feelingly thanked the donors. At the closing of Lodge a plain supper took place, and the usual toasts were proposed and honoured. Bro. Walford C.C. I.P.M. responded for the P.M.'s, Bro. Murlis for the Treasurer and Secretary, Bro. R. Wright P.P.G.D.C. Herts for the Visitors, Bro. John High for the Officers, Bro. W. Stephens for the Charities, and the Tyler's toast ended a most pleasant evening, most ably presided over by the Wor. Master, Dr. Symonds.

Saint Leonard Lodge, No. 1766.—The December meeting of this Lodge was held on 4th inst., at the Town Hall, Shoreditch. Bro. L. Stean W.M. presided, supported by Bros. G. T. Barr S.W., C. F. Barham J.W., C. Stevens Treas., E. Benjamin S.D., J. A. Jones J.D., A. A. Clement I.G., H. J. F. Gale D.C., R. Marshall S., G. C. Young Organist, and the Secretary. The Lodge was opened in ancient form. Messrs. John Tidball, H. J. Thrower, and R. Drysdale were initiated into the mysteries of the Order in a most impressive manner. Bros. Funstone, Henderson, Waynforth, King, and Matthews were passed. Bros. E. T. Henman 1243, R. S. Mendey 177, and Dr. W. Holt 928 were elected joining members of the Lodge. Various matters of business were transacted, and the proceedings were marked with much cordiality throughout. It appears that this new Lodge is progressing in a very satisfactory manner

IMPROVED

PERFECTION IN IRONING FOR EVERY SPECIES OF FABRIC.

Great Saving in Expense and Labour.

The price being only 22/, it is the Cheapest Iron in the trade, and can be had at all Ironmongers in the United Kingdom.

F. RATH & CO.'s IMPROVED GAS BOX IRON is extremely simple in its construction, and cannot get out of order; the merit of the invention is, that the heat produced from the burning gas is thrown on to the steel plate which covers the bottom surface, none being allowed to pass off in waste.

Three times the amount of work ordinarily executed can be done by the use of these Irons, which have now been in use in extensive Manufactories long enough to thoroughly prove their merits and evidence their entire success. They are as suitable for Family Use as for the Work-room, the Manufactory, or the Laundry.

Freemason's Chronicle;

SANCTIONED BY THE GRAND LODGE OF ENGLAND.

VOL. VIII.—No. 208. SATURDAY, 21st DECEMBER 1878. [PRICE THREEPENCE
Registered at the G.P.O. as a Newspaper.

THE TRUE MEANING OF GOOD WISHES.

THIS is an opportune moment for considering the little "amicablenesses" which brethren of the mystic tie are in the habit of exhibiting towards each other at divers times and under divers circumstances. In theory, Freemasonry is a beautiful art; in practice, it is often perverted into something which will not quite bear the application of such an epithet. This, of course, is not the fault of Freemasonry, but of a large number of its professors, who seem to think that according to a novel reading, all things are endurable in a society, one of whose guiding principles is to be in charity with all men. It is astonishing to witness the calm and unsophisticated manner in which a brother will suggest some unfraternal motive for the conduct of his bosom friend and brother. The former is under the impression that it is impossible to disassociate the simplest and most natural action from the baneful influence of self-interest. Accordingly, his brother relieves a friend, it is for the sake of patronage; or if he puts his name on a subscription list for a round sum, it is mere ostentation—he wants his name whispered about as a man of Charity. Perchance he is a little late at nights in reaching home—"what dreadful dissipation!" ejaculates our unsophisticated friend; "Going to the bad," says he, when he hears that his brother has been for once in his life away from home for two or three days. These and similar amenities, on every possible occasion, does our pleasant brother indulge in. He is, from one point of view, perhaps, an amusing study. It must need a considerable ingenuity on his part to invent the reasons he does for a friend's eccentricities of manner and conduct, not, indeed, in the cases we have cited, for they are of a very ordinary character, but in others where it is more difficult to establish a connection between apparent cause and effect. He must be something of an actor likewise, for at times his manner of relating a simple incident is more expressive than any words could be. That shrug of the shoulders, that smile or sneer full of intense meaning, yet meaningless to all but the closest observers, the tone in which he speaks, the displaced accent from one word to another, all these things need a master of the art of meaning more than your words convey, and this art, we need hardly remind our readers, is not acquired hurriedly. Now, O fraternal friend of ours, will you please to bear in mind that this is the season of Christmas, and among a very numerous section of this and most other countries, the season of Christmas is necessarily a period not only of festivity—that is the vulgar character with which it is endowed in the eyes of common people—but likewise of "peace and goodwill" towards men. Not to mince matters too finely, it is the season of all others when you and we, and indeed all men, should do our best to think and speak of others, and act towards them in a spirit of the purest kindness. We may or may not believe in Christianity, which has been rightly described as the religion of love, but we must remember there were Christians in heart if not in mind long before Christ came into the world. There is nothing paradoxical, nothing in the nature of an équivoque, in saying that there are as many Christians outside the pale of Christianity as there are inside it. So that we may wish a Jew or a Mohammedan A Merry Christmas, and yet have nothing sinister in our wish. When, as Christians, we address a Christian, and salute him thus, there is a depth of meaning in our language which can never be apparent to those of another religious faith. Yet the same kind wish expressed in behalf of those others has a reality about its meaning which cannot be questioned. It means that on whomsoever it may be addressed to, we invoke the blessing of Almighty God, so that, if hitherto he has been prosperous, that season of prosperity may continue in the new year which is approaching; or if he has unfortunately been unprosperous, that the season of his adversity may come to an end now, and give place to a long and uninterrupted course of prosperity. It means that we wish him a share in the present seasonable enjoyment, that he may have enough and to spare of the good things which make life so happy, and likewise that he may have a mind not only to enjoy himself, but also to promote the enjoyment of his neighbours, especially if they happen to be in a condition of poverty, or sick, or mourning the loss of some bosom friend or relative. The words "A Merry Christmas" have a magic ring about them, which no other words in the English language can boast, and this meaning is pure and unadulterated with equivocation or mental reservation, whether they be addressed to Jew or Gentile, Christian or Pagan. But there is an old saying, "The wish is father to the thought"—though why a wish should have been paternal rather than maternal we have never been able to discover. Well, we are aware that we are severely straining the true sense of the adage, yet do we see no just cause or impediment why it may not be taken in the sense that the words we utter with our lips are the true and genuine representative head, or father, of the thoughts by which we are inspired. The Thought is born unto the Wish, and the Wish like a true father is proud of his offspring. Be this as it may, "A Merry Christmas," like "Hearty Good Wishes," "We greet you well," "The Compliments of the Season," and a host of other similar expressions all have, or ought to have, the same force and meaning. They are intended to convey, by him who utters it, a prayer for the welfare of him it is addressed to. We have said it "ought to have" and is "intended to convey" a certain meaning, because in the minds of many people it is a conventional expression, a mere manner of speech, and oftentimes is used towards those whom the speaker looks down upon with an evil eye—as though the smile, the manner, and the words were a cloak to hide the malevolence of the speaker's heart. But it is time we pointed our moral to this quasi-sermon of ours. Do you not think, brother reader, that the next time you think, or speak of, or act towards your neighbour charitably, it would be as well if you threw a little sincerity into the thought, speech, or act? If you sit in judgment upon him, would it not be as well to infuse a little justice into your decision; and if justice requires you should condemn his acts, may we not hope that you will temper justice with just a modicum of that Mercy, which the greatest of our poets has told us, "is not strained," but "droppeth, as the gentle rain from heaven upon the place beneath;" that Mercy, which "is twice blessed," seeing that "it blesseth him that gives, and him that takes?" Yes, brother, the next time it occurs to you to assign reasons or impute motives to your neighbours, just think of that justice which demands of all men—be they Jew, Christian, Mahommedan—that they should do to others as they would be done by, and of that merciful consideration which will bless you and your neighbour alike, and make you both happy. Wherefore say we to all our readers,—"A MERRY CHRISTMAS!"

SEVENTY-FIVE DAYS' SEARCH FOR MORE LIGHT.

I have not thought best to encumber this article with statistics of the origin and progress of these two Masonic Institutions, although thanks to their respective Secretaries, Bros. Hedges and Binckes, I am in possession of ample details concerning them. At the dinner of the House Committee, which by their courtesy I shared, I learned many facts of the internal workings of the School which I shall embody in my report upon the two Institutions to the Grand Lodge of Kentucky. There is no instance reported of one of the pupils having turned out badly! This is a fact that speaks louder than words. In the 23 years in which Dr. Hall has been the physician of the Boy's School, only two or three deaths have occurred. An Infirmary, amply supplied with medical and surgical necessities, stands at a proper distance from the main edifice and there, in case of epidemics as (measles, etc.,) the patients are recluded and thoroughly cared for. At the monthly meetings of the House Committee an excellent dinner is provided the members (whose work, be it remembered, is strictly gratuitous) but strictly at their own expense. Not only so, but to my amusement and gratification, every invited guest to the dinner, pays like the rest. This is done to avoid any possible charge that the banquetings are at the expense of the Institution. Thus, although I was an invited guest, and received honours and attentions far beyond my just deserts, yet when the dinner was ended, I was expected to put my share of the cost upon the plate, and did so. This may seem to some of your readers too trifling to record, but I do not think so. I have had scores of invitations to dine in London. The hospitalities extended me have kept me in a steady round of feastings, but these were private entertainments. At the Boys' School, not] a penny is expended save for the purposes for which it was contributed.

As you enter the main hall, you see upon a panel to the right, a list of seven donations made the school for particular purposes. For instance, in 1852, a gift of eighty guineas (about 400 dols.) was made, the interest of which (about 12 dols.) goes annually to present a gold medal to good scholarship. In 1864, an annual donation of five guineas for good conduct. In 1867, one hundred guineas, in 1871, the same amount, and in 1872, the same amount. There is also a record of a stained glass window being presented, and a hand fire engine, and a microscope. I observed, too, that upon the tablet, room is left to record at least as many more gifts of these classes.

The Head Master of the Boys' School is of my own name, Dr. R. Morris, and considerable amusement was awakened at our introduction. But be heartily concurred with me that the name of "Morris" is full of famous characters. Dr. Morris, by the way, is the author of various educational works, published here by McMillan and extensively used in America. He has occupied his present important post about three years to the mutual content of pupils and employers. The foundation stone of the new wing of the present edifice was laid Aug 8th., 1863. The establishment was removed to Wood Green (its present locus) in 1856. The school was founded in 1798. I close with the motto as I copied it from the corner stone.

FLOREAT DOMVS.

MEETING OF THE LODGE OF BENEVOLENCE.

The December meeting of the Lodge of Benevolence was held on Wednesday evening, at Freemasons' Hall. During half the evening the chairs were filled by Bros. Clabon, Brett, and Rawson, but as Bro. Clabon had to leave between eight and nine o'clock, he requested Bro. Brett to take his place, and Bro. Brett's chair was then filled by Bro. Cottebrune. There was a large attendance of brethren, including among others Bros. Dicketts, Hogard, Cruttenden, Garrod, Valentin, Perryman, Cogan, Parish, Spooner, Edward Stephens, William Stephens, Godtschalk, Groombridge, Bolton, Lancaster, Christian, Keene, Berrie, Pillin, Davey, T. W. Allen, Col. Somerville Burney, Britten, H. Massey, C. Atkins, W. J. Murlis, G. R. Shervill, John Hervey G.S., H. G. Bons Asst. G.S., A. A. Pendlebury, and C. B. Payne G.T. The brethren granted £765, to twenty-nine of thirty-three petitioners. The amount of grants recommended to the Grand Master at former meeting, and confirmed at the meeting of last Wednesday, was £290. This being the last meeting for 1878, the brethren, before separating, exchanged the greetings of the season.

CAUTION.

UNITED MARINERS' LODGE, No. 30.

It having come to the knowledge of the brethren of this Lodge that applications for assistance are being made, both to Lodges and Ledges of Instruction, by some person or persons who allege that he or they are members of the above Lodge, it is requested that before complying with such applications, in future, the Secretaries of the respective Lodges will communicate with Bro. T. A. Gladwell W.M., 21 Gracechurch-street, City, or the undersigned.

JOSEPH DRISCOLL P.M., Secretary.

THE LATE BRO. WORTHINGTON P.M. 834, 858; P.Z. 834.

THE funeral of the late Bro. Worthington, of 19 Ball-street, Kensington, whose sudden death, which occurred whilst in the actual performance of his duties, we briefly noticed in our last week's issue, took place at the West London Cemetery, Brompton, at 12 o'clock on Thursday morning, the 12th instant. The deceased gentleman, whose untimely end is very deeply regretted by an unusually large circle of friends and acquaintances, was in his 50th year, and was appointed a collector in the service of the Western Gas Company in March 1859. In 1872 this company amalgamated with the Chartered, or Gas Light and Coke Company, which now supplies artificial light to fully three-fourths of London, and, at the time of his death, no officer of this immense company was more highly esteemed, both from an official and social point of view, than the late Bro. Worthington. His genial kind-heartedness, his unvarying courtesy, and his evident desire to make all things pleasant to all people, rendered him an universal favourite with all those whom, in the discharge of his most important duties, he was brought into contact. He had complained of a slight indisposition for some few days before his decease, and here we may remark that amongst the mourners at the grave was a gentleman on whom he called less than an hour before the sad event took place; but it seems extremely improbable that his illness had any connection with the cause of his death, which, according to the verdict of the coroner's jury, was occasioned by rupture of the pericardium. The melancholy procession arrived at the gates of the cemetery shortly after 12 o'clock, and was met by about 90 gentlemen drawn up in single file on each side of the road—brother officers, brother Masons and private friends. These, after the four carriages had passed, fell in two by two and proceeded to the chapel, where the service was most impressively read by the Rev. Companion Vaughan. At the grave two beautiful wreaths were placed on the coffin by two of his daughters, and the body was then reverently lowered to its last resting place, the solemn words were spoken, and his friends, after a last look, most reluctantly bade him farewell. The deceased gentleman—who leaves a wife and six children—was a Mason of high standing, he having been P.M. both of the Ranelagh, 834, and South Middlesex, 858. Amongst those present at the grave we noticed Bros. Hart 33, Turner 72, Ward 382. Read, Cooper, Avery, P.M.'s. Collings, Barker, Barrow 511. Millis, Borch, Knowles, Fisher, Bryett, Adamson, Lynes, Alais, Savage, Barker, Watt's, P.M.'s.—Purdue, Festa, Tarrant, 834. Egan, Kirk, P.M.'s. Bird S.W. Heather, Rankin, Till 858, Clinch 901. Somers P.M. 1602, and Williams 1767. The funeral arrangements were ably superintended by Bro. Millis P.M. 834. His brother officers were represented by, amongst others, Messrs. Inness, Loff, Ball, Davis, Thatcher, Fitch, Friend, Thompson, Hayman, Dowding and Mortimer.

Falcon Lodge, No. 1416.—The annual meeting of this Lodge for the Installation of the W. Master took place on Thursday, the 12th instant, at the Masonic Hall, Thirsk, Yorkshire, when there was a good attendance of brethren, the compact little Lodge-room being pleasantly filled. The ceremony was announced to have been performed by Bro. George Marwood, Past Deputy Provincial Grand Master for North and East Yorkshire, but at the last moment he was unable to be present in consequence of domestic affliction, and his place was filled by Bro T. B. Whytehead, Prov. G. Director of Ceremonies. The Lodge was opened at 2 p.m. by the W.M., Bro. Geo. Ayre, and after the reading of the minutes, was opened in the second degree. The chair was then assumed by the Installing Master, and Bro. Thos. J. Wilkinson, the S.W. and W.M. elect, was presented and installed according to ancient custom, and afterwards duly proclaimed in the three degrees. The working tools were presented by Bro. Wm. Paley P.M., De Grey and Ripon Lodge 837. The W.M. then appointed and invested his Officers as follow:—Bros. Geo. Ayre I.P.M., W. Coltman S.W., W. Hall J.W., Rev. C. E. Camidge P.P.G.C. Chaplain, H. Masterman Treasurer, J. Johnson Secretary, A. G. Duncombe S.D., R. Bell J.D., Chas. Elsley M.C., Z. Wright Org., J. Walton I.G., G. Anderson P.M. Almoner, W. Ayre and R. Long Stewards, J. Farmery Tyler. A banquet was afterwards held at the Fleece Hotel, to which about thirty brethren sat down. The W.M. presided, and was supported by his Wardens and Officers and many Visitors. In proposing the toast of the health of the Worshipful Master, and Prosperity to the Falcon Lodge, Bro. T. B. Whytehead said that the Lodge was happy in having secured a Master to rule over its destinies who was so thoroughly a Mason at heart, who was such a deep student of archæology, and who was in every sense such an intelligent Mason. It was impossible but that the Falcon Lodge should prosper under his guidance. He (Bro. Whytehead) had known Bro. Wilkinson now for some years as a Mason, and his only regret was that he had not known him sooner, that the privilege of his friendship might have been of longer duration. In replying to the toast of his own health, the Installing Master said that whilst it had given him very great pleasure to have had the opportunity of Installing his friend, yet he could not but sincerely express his regret at the circumstances that had led to the work being left in his hands. They would all have been only too glad to have seen that day in the chair he had so often occupied their good and respected Bro. Marwood, for whom the entire Province entertained such a sincere veneration and affection. Other toasts followed, and the evening was spent in a most pleasant manner. Amongst the visitors and members of the Falcon Lodge present, besides those already named, we noticed:—Bros. Geo. Balmford P.M. 236 P.P.G.O., T. S. Camidge 236 P.P.G.O., M. Knowles P.M. 940 P.P.G.S.D. (Durham), J. Hunton P.M. 940 P.P.G.D. (Durham), J. Richardson P.M. 1001 P.P.G.A.P., J. Fairburn P.M. 1337, C. Pallister P.M. 1337, J. W. Walmsley 1337, G. J. Robinson 1337, W. P. Husband 1611, W. H. Gainforth 236, G. Kirby 236, J. Rhodes P.M. 1416, H. Smith 1416, C. G. L. Kipling 1416, J. Harker 1416.

THE PRESTONIAN LECTURE.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—In the Official Calendar, issued under the authority of the Grand Lodge, under the heading of "Remarkable Occurrences in Masonry," I find, amongst other items, the following:—"Bro. William Preston, of the Lodge of Antiquity, author of the 'Illustrations of Masonry,' bequeathed, amongst other Masonic gifts, £500 Consols to the Fund of Benevolence, and £300 Consols for the Prestonian Lecture." Now I have been a Mason for some years, but it is very long since I ever heard of any Prestonian Lecture being delivered. Will you, Dear Sir and Brother, tell me when and where this lecture is delivered, if at all, but if the matter has fallen into abeyance perhaps some brother will kindly inform me to what purpose the interest of Bro. Preston's £300 Consols is applied.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

P.M.

THE QUALIFICATION FOR THE CHAIR OF M.M.M.'s LODGES.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Your correspondent, "A P.M. IN CRAFT AND MARK," evidently appears to think, nay, even says, that the restriction of the principal chair in the Mark degree to those brethren who have filled the chair of W.M. in a Craft Lodge is a crying evil, and instances his own Lodge, where Officers, who have not passed the Craft chair, but who work well, can never rise higher than Warden. From my own experience as a Deputy P.G.M. in a large province, I have found this rule most salutary and desirable, not only as adding dignity to the chair, but also as promoting a laudable zeal and ambition among those very members whom, your correspondent considers, it shuts out. A P.M. either forgets or else wilfully ignores the fact that any brother who has served the office of Warden can be elected W.M., and on receiving the dispensation of the Grand Master, can be formally and regularly installed. This dispensation only costs 10s 6d, and I do not know any case of its having been refused when properly applied for. In one Mark Lodge of which I am a member, we had for four years in succession a dispensation applied for and duly granted, the W.M.'s elect not being P.M.'s in the Craft. We then had three P.M.'s elected, and this year the S.W., who has not held office in the Craft, is regularly elected, although the J.W. is a P.M. of long standing. We find from experience if any position of honour is made too easy of attainment, it loses value accordingly, and were the office of W.M. of a Mark Lodge to be thrown open de jure to every member of the Lodge, few would take the trouble of going through the necessary steps. By the present law, the saving clause of the Grand Master's dispensation practically opens a road to those otherwise unqualified brethren who have worked well, and who deserve the distinction from their Lodge. I therefore trust that in two years' time the old P.M.'s in your correspondent's Lodge will not again commence the round, but that the necessary dispensation will be applied for to enable the S.W. to occupy the chair, and I for one will wish him a happy and prosperous year of office. Your correspondent must recollect the General Board place no difficulty in the way of the application for dispensation, and there is no necessity for any alteration in the laws to bring about the Mark Millennium of which he speaks, when "the hearts of young Mark Masters shall leap for joy."

Yours fraternally,

PAST GRAND WARDEN.

A CONSTITUTIONAL QUESTION.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—For the more precise guidance of "Q," the Lodge was opened in the first, second and third degrees; "resumed" to the second degree for business in that special degree, and then "resumed" to the third degree for business in that degree. The ceremony did not appear to be quite constitutional, and thus my reason for enquiry. If Oliver had touched the question, your pages would not have been troubled by,

CHARITY; IS IT GIVING?

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I beg the courtesy of a little space in which to support my views set forth under this heading, in which I urged that "mere giving" was not charity—that the extravagance of assertion on the part of sincere though thoughtless brethren would be harmful to the cause of true charity—and that "giving" was not the only object of Masonic existence.

I have been startled by the tone of the letter signed "DANIEL ACE, D.D." Some twenty years ago there was in a curacy of Clerkenwell a Rev. Daniel Ace, whose learning, piety, charitableness, (in all its senses beyond that of mere giving) endeared him to all who knew him. He passed away from the murky parish of handicrafters, but his memory is cherished in many hearts, and his reputation has spread far beyond the narrow circle there which knew his work. I was in hopes, when I saw "DANIEL ACE, D.D." in your columns that I should find that the loved teacher of the poor, whose charity was shown, not in the disposal indiscriminately of silver and gold, but in wise and charitable teachings, had, in the natural outcome of things, become a "brother." But, alas, I fear this cannot be, for the Rev. Daniel Ace of about twenty years ago in Clerkenwell would have pointed out that the Master whom he served, acted in the highest degree, on the principle I so warmly advocate, that of "discrimination in giving." He gave according to the necessities of each case. His charity did not consist in merely giving a penny to a beggar and passing on, or in sending a sum to a so-called "charity" for others to distribute for him. "DANIEL ACE, D.D." too, will remember that certain people of the class one may readily believe, who are always "carping" about what others may do for the poor, suggested that to do an act was waste, because that which was used "might have been sold for three hundred pence." "He who carried the bag" suggested it. I am sorry I cannot be more explicit, and I cannot, because I feel that in a Masonic organ it would not be right to enter upon a discussion of Christian ethics. But the incident of the charity of him who "carried the bag" has a logical moral which Dr. Daniel Ace may study with advantage. If he will then read my letter which commenced the controversy under this heading, he would see that he is not charitable in denominating my demand that we should be discriminating and careful as "Parsimony." Nor would he then say, because I decline to have my charity limited to Masonic objects, as Brother Binckes "logically" desires, that I am so lacking as to merit "many a curse."

Now a few words regarding the letters of our Brother Binckes. I am not going to attack "Hercules" in detail. He answers himself, but I must challenge him in the first place to show that there is any duty resting upon me, in consequence of my position as a Mason, to disregard all other outside direct charity in favour of distinctly Masonic charity institutions, I say that the only grounds of claim to my charity are the worthiness of the objects, and my power to help them adequately. In the case of a charitable institution I have a right to see if proper use is made of the funds, and to use my own judgment on this point. If I find that a charity school has a cost per head for its scholars of more than they could be boarded and educated at gentlemen's colleges, I have a right to say that in such a case twenty shillings are made to go as far as ten only, and that I shall give only where my money is made the best use of. I myself have heard Brother Binckes declare (in an after dinner speech, certainly) that the Masonic institutions are to have our first thoughts, and first care. That is to say, I am not to give to the perishing widow and children at my own door, whose necessities I know; but I am to give to a Masonic charity school where an immense sum is annually spent upon the keep and education of 200 children.

When I give, too, I hold that I have a right to expect that my giving shall raise the relieved, not degrade him or her. Does it do so in regard to the Masonic Boys' School? By appearances I should say the "giving" there does not, for not long since an appeal was made for one who had been educated there, that money should be subscribed to further educate him for Holy Orders! Here is the commencement of a bogging career. If the education given in the Boys' School is worth anything, it should teach the necessity of independence; but it would seem that the lad, adopting Brother Binckes' and Brother Radclyffe's "logic," that those who give have more to give, follows the plan which gave him, when he was helpless, home and education, and now that he is of self-helpful years and spiritually minded, he appeals for help to make him a parson. We shall next have some appeals to find the mercantile youths the capital to set up at once as merchants to save them the necessity of working their way up. While I see such fruits of Masonic "charity" given, I shall practically demur to Brother Binckes's dictum (and his alone, so far as I can find) that all other "charitable claims are subservient to those of Masonry." Whatever Bro. Daniel Ace may say about the "logic" of this assertion, I declare it to be in the highest degree uncharitable, unchristian, irreligious and unmasonic. If I had the time and you the space, and were this the place, I would enter upon these points "logically," but as we have only to deal with the last, I have but to remind you that our Masonic teaching tells us that our regard is to be paid to those who are "worthy," and that "prudence" is to be the guide of our charity. We have no authorised Binckes's ritual that I know of stating otherwise.

Bro. Binckes's letter of the 30th ult. reads like the report of one of his after dinner speeches. I will now appeal to the words of our Phillip given in a more sober strain, in the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE last Saturday. I point out a remarkable statement which he there gives. He states that in the year 1838 "the number of boys educated and clothed by the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys was 65 the income from all sources being £884 6s."

Bro. Binckes may have a good answer to the obvious contrast which arises—that less than £1,000 educated and clothed 65 boys, while now, roughly speaking, about £10,000 in a year is regarded as a "disappointing total" for the maintenance of 200! There is the old story of the Spanish beggar on horseback begging of the pedestrian. The latter said, "Why, you have a horse." "Well, replied the beggar, "There are two of us to keep." I dare say Bro. Binckes will "logically" answer, "If we cost so much, so much the more need you to give." There are, however, many of us active Masons, too, who judge of the tree by its fruit, and who feel constrained, in the interests of the deserving poor, in the interests of true Masonry, in the interests of the good name of our Craft, which, by illogical action, stands seriously imperilled, to insist that mere giving is not charity, and that consideration and discrimination, as well as money, are necessary. With the Old Men and Women's Institution, I find no fault, for I know of no faults of management in connection with it. You, Mr. Editor, can see that I have not failed in "logical" support to it; but I shall only support others when I feel convinced that the money is fitly applied—for charity money can only be "faithfully applied" (as is promised in Masonic teachings) when it is so husbanded that much is done with little. In my humble judgment, Bro. Binckes has yet to prove, in regard to the Masonic Boys' School, that the reverse of this is not the fact, and that the Masonic Institution for Boys does not do little comparatively with much. I, for one, shall be glad to find that this is not the case—if it can be shown, and I promise a "logical" result if it can be.

I am, Sir and Brother,

Yours faithfully,

DEUX ETOILES.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—I believe that Bro. Smallpeice's description of the privileges of an honorary member were quite correct, and I myself heard Bro. Hervey, the Grand Secretary, state that an honorary member had no status whatever in a Lodge as regarded its proceedings—that he could not move or second a resolution, or assume any legislative function whatever, and that all he was entitled to was to attend a banquet of the Lodge without invitation. I believe some years ago the Board of General Purposes reported upon this subject to the Grand Lodge, so that all doubts as to the position of "honorary members" should for ever be set at rest, and was to the effect of that stated by Bro. Hervey. At the same time, although this is tolerably well known, I have heard honorary members entirely ignore the rule thus laid down, and address the Lodge, in moving and seconding resolutions, with all the authority of paying members. It would have been an unpleasant thing for any brother to interrupt the speaker, and tell him he had no right to speak (unless wanted) upon the question, but I am of opinion that if any important motion should be carried on the proposition of an "honorary member," and that fact was reported to the Board of General Purposes, that such motion would be held to be illegal. These are my impressions, but if I am wrong in my facts, perhaps Bro. Smallpeice will kindly set me right.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

INQUIRER.

To the Editor of the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

SIR AND BROTHER,—I find on reference to my file of Grand Lodge proceedings that the status of Honorary Members has been declared by Grand Lodge. On the 7th of December 1864, a report from the Board of General Purposes to the following effect was accepted by Grand Lodge, and subsequently confirmed:—

"The Board have also to report that their attention has been directed to the question of the status and privileges of what are termed Honorary Members of Lodges, who are not mentioned in the Book of Constitutions. Upon this subject the Board have received a communication from the Colonial Board, which embodies the views of the Grand Registrar, whose opinion the Colonial Board had consulted. The Board fully coincide in the opinion expressed on the subject by the Grand Registrar, and adopted by the Colonial Board, viz., that the Book of Constitutions does not in any way recognise Honorary Members of private Lodges. When that book speaks of Members, it means only those brethren who are regularly contributing members to the funds of the Lodge to which they may belong. Such brethren only ought to be returned to Grand Lodge as Members of Private Lodges. The status of an Honorary Member must be strictly confined to the Lodge which so elects him, and can in no way give him any position in the Craft outside the door of his Lodge. He cannot, therefore, hold any office in the Lodge, or vote upon any subject which might, even remotely, affect the Craft at large. In short, his status and privileges as an Honorary Member entitle him to attend the meetings of the Lodge and partake of its refreshments without the necessity of being introduced by a Subscribing Member, provided always that he be a Subscribing Member to some other Lodge. Honorary Members have no other right or privilege whatever."

This seems to confirm the view taken by your correspondent "FORTE," to the effect that Honorary Members are entitled to the privilege of attending the meetings of the Lodge conferring the Honorary Membership, and of partaking of its refreshments without the introduction of a Subscribing Member. I take it, without payment of any fee is implied, though not expressed in the foregoing Grand Lodge resolution.

Yours fraternally,

A P.M.

"THINGS ONE WOULD LIKE TO KNOW."

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—Your correspondent "FORTE" asks for further information as to the rights and privileges of honorary members. I have carefully studied the Book of Constitutions, and have no hesitation in giving as my opinion quantum valeat that they have no legal existence whatever. I have often been present at Lodges where brethren have been elected honorary members, and it has always been done by show of hands immediately after the proposition, and has been considered simply as a compliment equivalent to a vote of thanks for some service rendered either to the Lodge or the Craft.

A few quotations from the Book of Constitutions will, I think, decide the matter. On p 65 par. 12:—

"No lodge can make a mason, or admit a member, without strictly complying with all the regulations enacted for the government of the craft." The italics are mine.

Again, p 83, par. 1:—"No brother shall be admitted a member of a lodge without a regular proposition in open lodge, nor until his name, occupation, and place of abode . . . . shall have been sent to all the members in the summons for the next regular lodge meeting; at which meeting the brother's grand lodge certificate, and also the certificate of his former lodge are to be produced, and the decision of the brethren ascertained by ballot."

Again p 96, par. 2:—"Every member of each lodge within the London district shall pay towards the fund of benevolence one shilling per quarter."

And p 99, par. 5:—"No mason registered under the constitution of the grand lodge of England shall receive the benefit of this fund unless he have paid the full consideration fee . . . . have continued a subscribing member to a contributing lodge for at least two years, and during that period paid his quarterly dues to the fund of benevolence."

And the only member of a Lodge exempt from the operation of this regulation are "secretaries who are by their lodges exempted from subscription," who "shall be considered subscribing members of their lodge." Now, in the face of the above, how can a Lodge be justified in electing honorary members who pay no subscription? and, as the names of all members must be returned annually to Grand Lodge, the fund of benevolence might thereby be defrauded.

If Lodges wish to put members on the free list there is nothing in the "Book of Constitution" to prevent a sum of money being annually voted to a member, and applied to the payment of his subscription, but I think that a brother who would accept membership of a Lodge on such terms would not add materially to its dignity. In conclusion, I think you will agree with me in the opinion that I have given, that honorary members of Lodges have no legal existence whatever.

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours fraternally,

6 Grays-inn-place. W. SMALLPEICE.

THE "OFF NIGHT" AT THE TRANQUILLITY LODGE.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—What a to-do about nothing. Quite a little hurricane in a teacup. Who would have thought a simple word, the obviously intended meaning of which happens to be misapprehended, should be sufficient to create a commotion, causing "OLD FILE" to shake his merry sides with laughter, fill with disgust the sensitive mind of "ONE WHO KNOWS," and irritate the presumably even temper of the Reporter of one of your contemporaries. And the cause of the disturbance? O ye who care to know, shiver while you read the awful revelation. Why, in those erst, immaculate columns, the supper provided on the "Off Night" at Tranquillity No. 185, was actually described as FRUGAL. After such an outrage, what might not happen next? Surely, Brother Editor, if you have the slightest respect for the reputation of your paper, and comfort of your correspondents, it is your bounden duty to at once dismiss the villainous reporter, order him to a place in the lower regions, or at all events reduce by one-half—at the very least—his liberal "screw" by way of penalty for the past, and reminder to observe greater accuracy in future. But, seriously. In their zeal the objectors seem to have overlooked that the obnoxious term might perhaps have been employed in a relative sense. As, for instance, to dine at sixpence per diem may be deemed frugal when placed in juxtaposition with luxuries obtainable for the expenditure of six shillings and sevenpence halfpenny per week. In like manner, in a Lodge where fifteen, twenty-one, and on Installation meetings, as much as thirty shillings per head has been expended, and where occasionally a wondrous quantity of champagne and other costly wines and liquors are consumed, a supper, consisting of ordinary joints, with a glass of ale to wash it down, may, I think, fairly be described as frugal, in comparison, without being subjected to an outcry insidiously implying want of truthfulness, or, at any rate, lack of judgment. That the Lodge had to pay a rather stiff price for comparatively so poor a spread does in no way militate against the propriety of the description, or the legitimate use of the term. It is really sad to reflect that so much equanimity should have been disturbed by so insignificant a matter, and my sole excuse for occupying your valuable space, waste printer's ink, and bestow an infliction on your readers, or notice the affair at all, is, that I am reminded that the time is fast approaching when "peace and goodwill among men" is supposed to reign supreme, and an anxious feeling to practise the Masonic injunction to "restore peace to troubled minds." It will, indeed, be most gratifying to learn that my explanation, meagre as it is, has had the effect of soothing the sensibilities of the triune objectors, restore their mental equilibrium, and so enable them to enjoy the coming festivities (alas, already marred by a sorrowful event), with greater ease and unruffled calmness. With hearty greetings and compliments of the season to the objectors, the Craft in general, and

FREEMASONRY IN NORTH WALES AND SALOP.

To the Editor of THE FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—It was with infinite pride and gratification that I read the article in your impression of the 14th December under the above head, but more especially so the concluding portion of it, in which you allude in such gracious and well merited terms to the services of our late dear departed Bro. Goldsboro P.G.S. Warden, of the Province of North Wales and Salop, and founder and twice W.M. of the Welshpool Lodge. The high eulogium you have been pleased to confer upon his many and energetic services in the Principality was well deserved, and by no one were they more keenly appreciated and recognised than by Sir Watkin Williams Wynn, the revered Provincial Grand Master, who indeed felt honoured when Dr. Goldsboro was numbered amongst the guests at his hospitable home. You have spoken of the number of times that Bro. Goldsboro made journeys from London to Welshpool to attend to the duties of his Lodge during the two years he presided over it as W.M., never on one single occasion being absent, but this indeed was a small amount of the work he did for the benefit of Freemasonry in other parts of the Kingdom, where he consecrated numerous Lodges and Chapters that are all now working and in a flourishing condition. In the Jordan Lodge and Jerusalem Chapter he attained to the highest honours, and by the members of both he was loved and esteemed. He was an honorary member of two other Lodges, and his affable manners and genial disposition won the goodwill of all. It is not only as a Mason that Bro Goldsboro's name will be held in grateful remembrance, for as an eminent physician he was ever ready to answer any call that might be made upon him in the hour of trial and danger, and very often without even a distant prospect of fee or reward, and on many occasions he even supplied from his own purse the means for providing necessaries which some of his poor patients were unable to provide for themselves. As one who had the honour of Bro. Goldboro's intimate friendship, I personally thank you for your tribute to his memory, and although he has departed from us I feel assured that his name will be enshrined in the hearts of all who had the pleasure and honour of his acquaintance, and with a sincere wish that he may be greeted with the cheering welcome of "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." on his arrival at the portals of the Grand Lodge above, "where the World's Great Architect lives and reigns for ever."

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Faithfully yours,

AMICUS.

ANCIENT LANDMARK LODGE, SHANGHAI.

The Annual Installation of the Office-bearers of this Lodge took place at the Masonic Hall, on Tuesday, 15th October. W. Bro. M. H. Cook, the W.M., had issued invitations to the District Grand Master of English Freemasons and his Officers, as well as to all Masons of eminence in the port; and it must have been gratifying to him, as well as the W.M. elect, Bro. D. C. Jansen, to find that over seventy brethren had responded, by their appearance in Lodge. At 9.15 p.m., the Lodge was opened by the W.M., and shortly afterwards R. W. Bro. Cornelius Thorne D.G.M., entered the Lodge attended by the following of his Officers:—W. Bros. Hart D.G.J.W., J. I. Miller D.G. Reg., T. W. Kingsmill President of Board of General Purposes, H. Evans D.G.J.D., L. Moore D.G. Sword Bearer, Geo. B. Fentum D.G. Organist, J. Brown D.G. Pursuivant, and was received with Masonic honours. The W.M. expressed to the D.G.M. the great pleasure it afforded the brethren of his Lodge to receive this friendly visit, and he had further to encroach upon the D.G. Master's kindness by asking him to officiate as the Installing Master. The D.G.M. briefly replied, and thanked the W.M. and brethren on behalf of himself and the D.G. Officers for their kindly reception, and at the call of the W.M. assumed the chair and proceeded with the installation. W. Bro. Jansen having been presented, was duly obligated and installed into the Chair of King Solomon in due and ancient form, and the customary proclamations having been made and salutes given, the D.G.M., at W. Bro. Jansen's request, installed the following Officers:—Bros. M. H. Cook I.P.M., N. P. Anderson S.W., A. Bruce J.W., J. Shadgett Treasurer, G. L. Skinner, Secretary, W. Graham S.D., A. E. Flagg J.D., and T. Hore Tyler; delivering a few appropriate remarks as he invested each Brother with the insignia of his office. The ceremony being concluded, W. Bro. Cook thanked the Officers and Brethren for their cordial support during the past year, and W. Bro. Jansen thanked the Visitors for their attendance, and said it was at all times particularly gratifying to his Lodge to receive visits from their brethren. He hoped on this occasion they would favour him by remaining to partake of the refreshment prepared in the adjoining room. The Lodge was then closed in peace, harmony, and brotherly love, at 10.45 p.m. Amongst the Visitors present, we noticed W. Bro. Pemberton W.M. of the Cosmopolitan Lodge, No. 578 S.C., W. Bro. Röhl of the Lodge Germania, German Constitution; W. Bro. Jamieson P.M. Northern Lodge of China, No. 570 E.C., as well as several other well-known zealous members. In the banqueting Room, a splendid cold collation had been laid out in that liberal manner so characteristic of our American Brethren, and after ample justice had been done to the viands, the newly installed W.M. rose, and in a neat speech proposed "The Rulers of the Craft," followed by the toast of the D.G.M. and the Officers of the D.G. Lodge. He thanked the R.W.D.G.M. for his kindness in installing the Officers of the Lodge and also for the attendance of the D.G. Officers. R.W. Bro. Thorne, in reply, said it was at all times a pleasure to assist in the Lodge ceremonies at Shanghai, where so excellent a feeling existed amongst the brethren working under various Constitutions. He alluded to the able working he had witnessed in the Ancient Landmark Lodge, and wished that the ensuing year might prove one of prosperity to the W.M. and his Officers. "The Sister Lodges" were kindly brought to the notice of the brethren, and on their behalf thanks were returned by W. Bro. Röhl and W. Bro. Pemberton. During the evening several songs were sung by brethren, who evidenced by their knowledge of music that they had not neglected the advice to cultivate at least one of the liberal Arts. W. Bro. Fentum added much effect to the installing ceremony by his careful performance on the organ. After the "Tyler's Toast" had been duly given, the brethren separated, about midnight, having spent a pleasant evening, feeling that to the cheerful and hearty disposition of the W. Master there was every prospect of success attending the Ancient Landmark Lodge whilst under his rule.—North China Herald.

The Right Wor. Alex. E. Burke, who held the position of P.G. Sec. for the last seven years, in the performance of his duties having given general satisfaction, it was with deep regret announced that that R.W. Brother would not consent to remain in harness, and it was thought the Provincial G. Master would have selected him as Sub. Prov. Grand Master, as he was the Senior Past Master (with the exception of Dep. Prov. Grand Master), but it is hoped some day honour will be conferred upon him for his noble services.

As it was stated on the arrival of the Right Wor. Hon. Dr. Hamilton, District Grand Master of East Jamaica, that Masonry would soon to revive in this island, we have been informed that the Phœnix Lodge, Port Royal, and the Royal Lodge, Kingston, have sent in a petition to have a Mark Lodge, which it is expected shortly will be opened. The Friendly Lodge, Kingston, has been granted a charter for a Mark Lodge, called the Clifton Mount Keystone. The first Master is the Right Wor. J. J. G. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—This medicine has resisted every test which time, prejudice, and vested interest could impose upon it, and it at length stands forth triumphant as the most reliable remedy for those derangements of the system so common at the change of seasons. When the air grows cooler, and the functions of the skin are retarded, an occasional dose of Holloway's Pills will call on the liver and kidneys for greater activity, and compensate the system for diminished cutaneous action. As alteratives, aperients, and tonics these Pills have no equal. To every aged and delicate person whose appetite is defective, digestion infirm, and tone of health low, this medicine will be a precious boon, confirming both ease and strength.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"A series of articles, biographical, descriptive, and eulogistic, of some of the principal Masonic worthies of the day. They are well written, and though personal, by no means offensive, or intrusive into private life, and in Masonic society will be welcomed as an interesting series of word paintings of members of the Craft.—Standard.

"We do not remember to have read any similar series of sketches which surpass this in merit."—Land and Water.

"The book will be of great interest to Masons, containing as it does pen-and-ink sketches of the most distinguished men among them, and giving some considerable information on matters Masonic, from various points of view."—Lloyd's Newspaper.

"Admirably written, being free from what are too often observed in composition—inelegant language and prolixity."—Sunday Times.

"'J. G.' writes with a considerable amount of freedom, never hesitating to 'hit off' a weakness when he finds it publicly displayed by a 'distinguished brother;' at the same time he never loses sight of a good trait when it is displayed, either in connexion with the Craft or in the service of the public out of doors. The sketches are lively reading."—City Press.

"This is a neat book. The Portraits consist of a series of 'word pictures' of eminent English Masons. It styles Bro. W. J. Hughan 'Knight Errant,' and sketches thirty-two others under equally unique titles. We commend the book as worthy of a place in every Masonic library."—Voice of Masonry.

"... inces much literary ability, and is a valuable addition to the few works we have in Masonic biography."—Philadelphia Keystone.

"The book ought to be in every well arranged Masonic Library."—New York Courier.

"We value the work, and heartily thank Bro. Morgan for our copy."—Masonic Jewel.

"The portraits consist of a series of what we call 'pen and ink sketches' of brethren prominent in all the noble undertakings of English Masonry. . . . Prominent among his brethren we find Bro. Fred. Binckes, ('Our Hercules,' whose herculean efforts in behalf of those blessed institutions, the charities of English Masons, have a world-wide reputation, which will live long after the zealous Craftsman has been, 'laid away to rest.'"—New York Square.

DEATH OF H.R.H. THE PRINCESS ALICE.

On Saturday intelligence was received from Darmstadt of the death of H.R.H. the Princess Alice, Grand Duchess of Hesse, who expired at half-past seven on the morning of that day. The deceased Princess was the second daughter of Her Majesty the Queen, and was born at Buckingham Palace, on the 25th April 1843. Her Royal Highness won the esteem of the whole country by the unremitting devotion with which she tended her father in his last illness, now 17 years ago. From the moment that illness assumed a threatening aspect she scarcely ever quitted his bedside, and in the result her own health was impaired. After his death the Princess proved a great comfort and support to the Queen in her bereavement, and her sympathy tended greatly to the resignation and composure of Her Majesty. In 1862 the Princess was married, at Osborne House, to Prince Louis, Grand Duke of Hesse, who a few days afterwards was authorised by Royal Warrant from Her Majesty to assume the title of his Royal Highness, and in the same year was nominated a Knight of the Garter. Hesse-Darmstadt, from that time the home of the Princess, is a small State, containing nearly a million inhabitants, mostly Protestant; and since the summer of 1877, when her husband became Grand Duke, the Princess has enjoyed more than the shadow of Royal power. In the meantime she had acquired further titles to esteem and affection both in her native and her husband's country—in England by reason of the promptitude with which she left her home for Sandringham when the Prince of Wales was struck down with the illness which so nearly proved fatal, and in Germany by the graces of her character, her unostentatious but ever active benevolence, and, above all, the services which she rendered to the sick and wounded during the Franco-German War. Her youngest daughter, Princess Marie Victoria Feodore Leopoldine died from diphtheria on the 16th November last; and it was in nursing her children and her husband while suffering from this disease that the Princess caught the infection which has proved so fatal.

The remains of Her Royal Highness were interred in the Mausoleum at Rosenhohe on Wednesday afternoon. The funeral solemnities commenced on Tuesday evening, when the body was removed by torchlight from the Grand Ducal Palace at Darmstadt to the church in the old castle. On arrival at the church, the coffin, covered with a crimson pall, was placed on a black velvet catafalque bearing the Grand Ducal Crown and the arms and orders of the Princess, and throughout the night was attended by a guard of honour. Between 9 o'clock and noon on Wednesday the church was opened to the public, and during that time some thousands of persons passed reverently by the coffin. By 2 o'clock, the hour fixed for the reading of the burial service, the edifice was filled with the nobility, representatives of the various municipal and other bodies, &c. Everything being in readiness for the service, the mourners—the Grand Duke of Hesse, the Prince of Wales, Prince Leopold, Prince Christian of Holstein, and the Grand Dukes of Mecklenburgh and Baden, among others—entered the church, and were conducted to their places with the ceremonies usually observed on such occasions. The Crown Prince and Princess of Germany were not present, the Emperor William having, after a consultation with his physicians, declined to permit them to attend the funeral on account of the risk of infection. In their absence the Imperial family were represented by General Goltz, Colonel Panwitz, Count Matuschka, and Count Seckendorff. M. de Quaade was in attendance for the King of Denmark, General Burnell for the King of the Belgians, and Baron Von Purglas and Count Durkheim for the King and Queen Dowager of Bavaria. The burial service, to which some anthems and chorales were added, was performed by Assistant-Chaplain Grein, one of the Ducal chaplains, and the Rev. Mr. Sillitoe, the resident English clergyman. The coffin was afterwards removed from the catafalque to a hearse drawn by eight horses, and the sad procession passed to Rosenhohe, the route being densely lined with spectators. The Mausoleum is not very large, and only the mourners and a few others saw the coffin as, after being received by a guard of honour with a military salute, it was carried to and deposited in the vault. During the funeral ceremony at Darmstadt and Rosenhohe a solemn service was held at Windsor Castle. The Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh, the Duke of Connaught, the Duke of Cambridge, and the Duchess of Teck arrived there from London shortly before 2 o'clock, and about half an hour afterwards accompanied the Queen, the Princess of Wales and Princess Beatrice to the private chapel. The ladies and gentlemen of the Royal household, with many of the Queen's domestic servants, were present. The service (which was an entirely private ceremony) was conducted by the Hon. and Rev. Gerald Wellesley, Dean of Windsor, who read some appropriate prayers. The choral portions were sung by Messrs. F. Marriott, Barnby, J. Tolley, W. T. Briggs, Hunt, Packer, Ramsbottom, Dyson and Stilliard, of St. George's Chapel, led by Sir J. G. Elvey. The anthem was, "The souls of the righteous are in the hands of God." At half-past 3 the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh, the Duke of Cambridge, and the Duchess of Teck and suites drove from the Castle to the Windsor Station of the Great Western Railway, and returned to Paddington by the 3-40 p.m. train. The Duke of Connaught remained at the Palace. In all parts of the country resolutions of condolence have been carried by Town Councils and other bodies. Minute guns were fired on Wednesday at Woolwich, Chatham, Portsmouth, and Devonport, and the flags of Her Majesty's and other ships were flown half-mast high.

OUR WEEKLY BUDGET.

IN consequence of the illness of the Princess Alice, the commemorative service usually held on the anniversary of the death of the Prince Consort, at Frogmore was omitted. Early on Saturday news was received by her Majesty of the death of her daughter. On Wednesday, the Queen, with the Princess of Wales and other members of the Royal Family, attended a special service in the private chapel of Windsor Castle, at about the same time as the funeral service was being held at Darmstadt.

A Cabinet Council, attended by the whole of the ministers, was held on Thursday.

At the meeting of the House of Lords, on Tuesday, an address of condolence with the Queen and Royal Family was passed.

In the House of Commons on Friday, the Chancellor of the Exchequer gave notice of a proposal for a grant in aid of the sufferers in the Rhodope districts. Mr. Anderson gave notice of opposition to the motion. The adjourned debate on the Vote of Censure was resumed by Earl Percy, and was continued by Sir W. Harcourt, the Attorney-General and others. A division was taken, and the Vote of Censure was rejected by 328 against 227. On Monday, after an Address of Condolence had been voted, the Chancellor of the Exchequer stated that he should not proceed with the motion for a grant in aid of the Rhodope sufferers, which gave occasion to some sarcastic remarks from Lord Hartington and Sir W. Harcourt. Mr. E. Stanhope then moved a resolution applying the Indian revenues to the cost of the Afghan war. Mr. Fawcett moved an adverse amendment, which was supported by Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Laing, Mr. O. Morgan, and Sir G. Campbell; while the Attorney-General, Sir G. Bowyer, and Mr. Smollett spoke in favour of the resolution. On Tuesday, after some preliminary discussion, the adjourned debate was resumed by Dr. Playfair, was continued by Sir H. James, Sir G. Balfour, Sir W. Dawson, Mr. Mundella, Mr. Childers, and Lord Hartington in support of Mr. Fawcett's amendment, and by Lord G. Hamilton, the Solicitor-General, Mr. Balfour, Mr. Hardcastle, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer in opposition to it. Upon a division the amendment was rejected by 235 against 125, showing a majority of 110 for the Government. The House adjourned till 13th February.

The election at Bristol on Saturday resulted in the return of Mr. Fry, the Liberal candidate, and that on Tuesday at New Ross in the election of Colonel Tottenham, Conservative.

On Thursday a gold and silver casket was presented, on behalf of British residents in California, to Earl Beaconsfield in recognition of his patriotic policy. The Premier, in reply, spoke hopefully of the Treaty of Berlin, which he believed would conduce to the peace of Europe.

General Roberts succeeded in reaching the summit of the Shutargardan Pass without opposition, but upon his return to the Kuram Valley, where he will take up his winter quarters, a baggage train was attacked by the Mangal tribe, who were beaten off by the accompanying guard. General Biddulph has obtained possession of the Khojak Pass, and Sir R. Browne is advancing upon Jellalabad. The weather in Afghanistan is very severe; but the European troops are healthy. A Sikh regiment has been sent back to Peshawur. The recent change of ministry at Constantinople is believed to have arisen from a suspicion of a conspiracy against the Sultan, in which Damad Pasha was implicated. According to the latest reports, the Ministerial changes have been satisfactory to the European Ambassadors to the Porte. The European Commissioners for the delimitation of Eastern Roumelia have experienced great opposition in the course of their enquiries, and the British Government has directed Sir H. D. Wolff to return to Constantinople. A French mail steamer on Thursday came into collision with an English steamer, the Rinaldo, near Gallipoli, on the Bosphorus. It is stated that the French vessel sank, with 150 persons on board. The Austrian and Hungarian Legislatures have been engaged in discussing several subjects connected with the occupation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, and, although strong opposition has been offered, the Government propositions have been generally sanctioned. In consequence of the adverse vote of the Italian Chamber, the Cairoli Ministry resigned, and after several days' efforts Signor Depretis has formed a new Cabinet, but its existence is deemed to be very uncertain. The resumption of specie payments in the United States has been virtually anticipated by the fall of gold to par compared with greenbacks. The last Cape mail brings news up to 26th November, Sir B. Frere had sent an ultimatum to the Zulu King Cetewayo, but no reply had been received. There was no news of operations in the Transvaal. The English cricketers in Australia have won their first match at Adelaide, and have since proceeded to Melbourne.

The Lodge was opened in due form, and with solemn prayer. The minutes of preceding meeting were read and confirmed. Bro. Liscott, a candidate, was entrusted, and raised to degree of M.M. The lecture appertaining to the degree was worked, 1st section by Bro. Soper, 2nd by Bro. Bingemann, 3rd by Bro. Dickins. It was unanimously agreed to adjourn, over the Christmas holidays, till 7th January. Bro. Baker was elected W.M. for that meeting.

Tranquillity Lodge, No. 185.—A meeting was held on Monday, at the Guildhall Tavern, Gresham-street, E.C. Present—Bros. Posener W.M., Pare S.W., Bayley J.W., P. Levy Sec., Croaker S.D., Staley J.D., Bilby Org., Bush I.G., Potter Tyler. P.M.'s Bros. Barnett, Ross, Bloomfield, Constable, N. Moss, Gluckstein; and other brethren to the number of about forty. The Lodge being opened, a candidate for initiation was formally introduced, and admitted to the benefit of the Order. It was explained by the W.M. that in consequence of the death of the Princess Alice the usual entertainment would not be given. In the course of the evening a notice of motion was handed in—that donations of ten guineas be presented from the Lodge funds to each of the Masonic Institutions, to be placed on the lists of the Stewards for the Lodge, viz.:—Bros. J. D. Barnett R.M.B.I., N. Gluckstein R.M.I.G., D. Posener R.M.I.B.

Confidence Lodge of Instruction, No. 193.—This Lodge held its usual meeting on Wednesday, the 18th of December, at Bro. Seaton's, Railway Tavern, Fenchurch-street. Present—Bros. Thos. B. Biddle W.M., Thos. W. C. Bush S.W., Walter James J.W., J. K. Pitt Secretary, John Constable Treasurer, J. E. Fells S.D., W. Medcalf J.D., Fred. Hy. Brown I.G. Past Masters Bros. E. Gottheil and Robt. The first section was worked by Bro. Moss, assisted by the brethren. Lodge resumed to first degree. Bro. Constable expressed his regret at being compelled to resign the office of Treasurer of this Lodge of Instruction, and, consequently, sever his connection for a time with many dear friends. The Lodge received this announcement with considerable regret, for Bro. Constable has long and carefully filled his post, to the perfect satisfaction of the Lodge. Bro. Gottheil intimated his wish that Bro. T. W. C. Bush would accept the office instead of Bro. Constable. This appeared to be the general wish of the brethren, and it having been proposed and seconded, was carried unanimously. Bro. Bush expressed his great pleasure. This was the first Lodge of Instruction he entered, to learn the rudiments of Freemasonry, and he promised to fulfil his engagements with fidelity and satisfaction to the brethren. He was sure all had heard with regret that Bro. John Constable had been compelled, through his business engagements, to resign the Treasurership, which position he had filled so worthily for a great many years. He would, therefore, propose that a cordial vote of thanks be given to our esteemed brother John Constable, for his services as Treasurer of this Lodge of Instruction, and for his many efforts to promote its success; and for the good of Freemasonry in general it receives his resignation with regret, and wishes him every success in his journey through life. This proposition was carried unanimously. The Lodge was then adjourned till Wednesday, the 8th January, when Bro. T. W. C. Bush will preside.

thanked the brethren for the kindness and courtesy shown him during his year of office. The Lodge being once more in the 1st degree, Bro. Buckle proceeded to appoint and invest the Officers, as follow:—Bro. W. Valentine I.P.M., G. C. Baskett S.W., W. H. Gainforth J.W., Rev. J. E. M. Young P.P.G.C. Chaplain, J. Todd P.M. Treasurer, G. A presentation of two barometers was made to the Lodge by Bros. Russell and Young, and several letters and telegrams of apology for non-attendance were read, from Bro. J. S. Cumberland W.M. Eboracum 1611, and others. The Lodge having been closed, the brethren adjourned to supper, where the W.M. presided. In proposing "The Queen and Craft," the W.M. made feeling allusion to the loss sustained by Her Majesty in the death of her favourite daughter, and said that he was sure that of all her subjects none would sympathise with her more deeply than the loyal Masons. In replying for the Earl of Zetland and the Provincial Grand Lodge, Bro. T. B. Whytehead P.M. Prov. G.D.C. said, that they were very happy in being ruled over by so good a Mason as their noble brother, who had proved the active interest he took in the Craft's welfare, and was so ably backed up by his Deputy, one of the finest old Masons in the world. Bro. Baskett S.W. proposed, in happy terms, "The Health of the W.M.," who he said had already proved himself to be the right man in the right place. The W.M. proposed "The Installing Master's" health, and Bro. J. Todd, in responding, said it had given him great pleasure to instal a brother who, he felt sure, would do honour to the Lodge and the Craft. The interests of the York Lodge were very near his (Bro. Todd's) heart, and he should spare neither time nor trouble to promote them. Other toasts followed, and a very happy and harmonious evening was passed. Amongst the members present, in addition to those already named, were Bros. Wm. Lawton P.M. P.P.G.R., G. Balmford P.M. P.P.G.O., F. Rawling P.M., J. Hollins, W. Wilson, J. Stead, G. C. Padel, W. Peace Lodge, No. 322.—The regular monthly meeting of this Lodge was held at the Warren Bulkeley Arms Hotel, Stockport, on Tuesday, the 10th instant. Present—Bros. J. H. Carrington W.M., N. Dumville I.P.M., James Worsnup S.W., L. D. Bradbury J.W., W. C. Fleming P.M. Secretary pro tem, Robt. Chetham S.D., Geo. Balfe J.D., W. Hicton P.M. Treasurer, W. H. Brown jun. I.G., J. Meadows Tyler. There was a goodly muster of brethren, who having ratified the minutes of the last meeting, proceeded, in conformity with notice, to sell the old furniture of the Lodge, as the brethren of 322 have fitted up their Lodge room with new and costly appointments. The old relics of bygone days were sold by auction—a novel feature in a Lodge room—to the highest bidder. The business of the evening being ended, the Lodge was closed in ancient form, and the brethren by request of the W.M. adjourned to supper. Each brother having done justice to the good things provided, the cloth was removed, after which followed the usual Loyal and Masonic toasts, which were well and heartily responded to. There were some good speeches and music, but our space will only permit us, on this occasion, to mention the fact.

Lodge of Unanimity, No. 339, Penrith.—This old and flourishing Lodge held its annual meeting on Thursday, 12th December, at the Crown Hotel. The brethren mustered in goodly numbers as a token of respect and esteem for the W.M. elect, Bro. Kirkbride, P.M., P.Z., P. Prov. G.S.W., the senior member of the Lodge. The W.M., Bro. Thwaites, opened the Lodge, and the minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, he opened the Lodge in the second degree. Bro. Thwaites then invited, in the name of the Lodge, Bro. John Bowes P.M., P.Z., P. Prov. G.J.W. to take the chair as Installing Master. The W.M. then presented his successor in the usual form, and the first part of the ceremony being completed, the Lodge was opened in the Master Mason's degree. The collars and jewels were now collected, Past Masters placed in the Wardens' chairs, and all requested to retire who were below the degree of Installed Master. A Board was opened, which, it was much to be regretted, is not done on all occasions when it is required. In all the other degrees the "opening" and "closing" ceremony is always performed, and why this necessary portion of our ritual should be omitted in this exalted degree passes our comprehension. In the Board of Installed Masters, Bro. Kirkbride was duly and solemnly placed in the chair of K.S. according to ancient custom, and afterwards saluted, proclaimed, and greeted by the Past Masters. The "cement" having received proper attention from the Worshipful brethren, the Board was closed in the name and fear. The brethren of the various degrees were then re-admitted, and the W.M. was saluted, proclaimed, and greeted respectively in those degrees. The Officers for the ensuing year were now invested by the W.M., and placed in their respective chairs, each one being appropriately addressed on his situation in the Lodge, nature of his duties, and the teachings of the emblem of office, by the Installing Master. Bro. Bowes then delivered the ancient addresses to the W.M., Wardens and Members, thus completing the beautiful ceremony of Installation. A cordial vote of thanks was awarded to Bro. Bowes, and carried by acclamation. After some routine business, the Lodge was closed, and the brethren adjourned to the banqueting room, where an excellent dinner awaited them. Ample justice being done to the choice viands, and grace after meat being said, the toast list was considered. The loyal toasts were followed by those of the Masonic Rulers supreme and subordinate, according to rank. The W.M.'s health was very cordially drunk, and attention was directed to his long services in the Lodge, and to the true Masonic spirit he always evinces in his intercourse with the members. After an appropriate response, the W.M. proposed the health of the Installing Master, Bro. Bowes. He said he had known that brother Masonically for some eighteen years, but when a couple of years since they were selected respectively to preside over the West and South of the Provincial Grand Lodge, their acquaintance became much more intimate. Personally, he must express his deep obligations to Bro. Bowes for travelling so far in such weather to place him in the chair of the Lodge. He told the brethren he had a treat in store for them, and he was sure they all agreed with him that Bro. Bowes had done their beautiful ceremony full justice. Bro. Bowes, in the course of his reply, said that it afforded him very great pleasure to instal his old friend, Bro. Kirkbride, and if the way he had worked the degree was acceptable to the brethren generally, his pleasure was enhanced. He felt quite one of them, for having lived in the Province and made a large circle of friends in it, he always felt "at home" when amongst them. The Wardens and other Officers of No. 339 was responded to with much loyalty, one and all of the Officers promising to render their best services to the W.M. during the ensuing year. The evening's proceedings were agreeably enlivened by some excellent songs, duets, &c., by brethren, and the Tyler's toast was given at an early hour. We wish Bro. Kirkbride and the Lodge of Unanimity a prosperous year.

Union Lodge, No. 414.—Held its monthly meeting on Tuesday, 17th December, at the Masonic Hall, Reading. Present—Bros. Baker W.M., C. Oades S.W., S. Bradley J.W., J. Leaver Sec., C. Stephens S.D., F. Ivey P.M. and Sec. 1101. The minutes of the last regular Lodge were read and confirmed. Two members were initiated by the W.M. The charge was delivered by Bro. J. Morris P.M., in his usual correct and effective manner. Bro. C. Oades S.W. was elected as W.M. for the ensuing year. Bro. Botley was re-elected Treasurer. The Secretary's resignation was accepted with regret, after a very long service. After voting a P.M.'s jewel to the W.M., with other business, the Lodge was closed.

Polish National Lodge, No. 534.—A meeting was held on Thursday, 12th December, at Freemasons' Hall. Present:—Bros. J. F. Ebner W.M., Aspinall S.W., Taylor J.W., Wm. Niedzielski was raised. Twenty-one sat down to an excellent banquet, the great feature afterwards being the masterly playing on the violin by the newly raised Bro. Niedzielski.

St. James's Lodge of Instructionn, No. 765.—At the Gregorian Arms, Jamaica-road, Bermondsey, on 29th November last, the Fifteen sections were worked by Bro. H. J. Butt and Davis. The whole of the business was conducted in an efficient manner, after which a vote of thanks was passed to the W.M., congratulating him upon his first essay of the Fifteen sections. Bros. Duckett 1670, T. Mortlock P.M. 186, T. Barber P.M. 652, and W. Beavis 879, were elected members. A vote of thanks to the brethren who had assisted in the work brought the proceedings to a close.

Preceptor; also Bros. McGee 154 Irish Const., H. D. Sewell 1444, Skinner, &c. Lodge was opened in due form, and the minutes of last meeting were read, confirmed and signed. Bro. Skinner answered the questions, and was passed. The call was given to refreshment, after which Bro. Skinner offered himself as candidate, and the W.M. rehearsed the ceremony of initiation. Bro. McGee drew attention to a matter of difference in detail between the Irish and English rituals in this degree. Bro. Sewell was unanimously admitted as a member of this Lodge of Instruction. Bro. Blasby will preside at the next meeting.

Royal Kensington Lodge, No. 1627.—A meeting was held on Friday, 6th December, at Freemasons' Hall. Present—Bros. W. E. Gordon Leith W.M., B. F. Cramer S.W., Chas. E. Soppet I.P.M. as J.W., D. M. Visitors—Bros. Raynham W. Stewart P.G.D. and P.P.D.G.M. Middlesex, Leopold Ruf P.M. No. 12, and C. F. Carlier No. 11. Business—After the minutes of the preceding meeting had been read and confirmed, Bro. Harvey was passed to the second degree, and Bro. Delacoste raised to the sublime degree of M.M. The rest of the business having been transacted, Lodge was closed and adjourned till the first Friday in February. The usual banquet followed.

It was also resolved unanimously, on the proposition of Bro. Spoor, that a plate bearing the names of the founders be affixed to the frame of the Warrant. A code of by-laws was read by the Secretary, passed, and ordered to be printed. Bro. Hill, who has at each meeting of the Lodge conducted the musical portion of the ceremonies, was appointed Organist. The brethren adjourned to a banquet in the Lower Hall, and a very fraternal gathering was brought to a happy conclusion. Bro. The programme was well selected, and the audience showed their appreciation of the performances of the various artists who gave their services by frequently and heartily applauding them. Part I. included a pianoforte solo—"Quatre Bras"—by Miss Ida Brooks, who exhibited both taste and skill as an executant, "Jack's Yarn," by Mr. Breckall, "The Storm," by Miss Taylor, "When the Heart is Young," by Miss Clara Perfitt, and "Jessie's Dream," by Miss Lemmon, all which were admirably rendered, and as usual were redemanded. The ballad, "My Sweetheart when a Boy," sung by Mr. C. B. Bulow, who has a voice of excellent quality and good compass, and a humorous sketch, "My First Dog," by Bro. Lytton, together with contributions from other artists, all of whom received well-merited applause. The Second Part was equally good. Mr. Breckall sang "Nancy Lee," Mr. C. B. Bulow, "The Warrior Bold," Mr. Walter Brooks played a solo on the cornet, "Martha," Miss Taylor sang, "Let me dream again," Miss Clara Perfitt, "Once upon a time," and Miss Lemmon, "Joyous Life," while Bro. Lytton gave two humorous sketches "The Jolly Jeremiahs" and "Called to the Bar;" all of which mightily pleased the audience. Bro. Lytton was also successful in an entertainment he gave on Tuesday, at the Great Arthur-street Mission Hall, Golden-lane.

PATENT GAS BOX IRON.

PERFECTION IN IRONING FOR EVERY SPECIES OF FABRIC.

Great Saving in Expense and Labour.

The price being only 22/, it is the Cheapest Iron in the trade, and can be had at all Ironmongers in the United Kingdom.

F. RATH & CO.'S IMPROVED GAS BOX IRON is extremely simple in its construction, and cannot get out of order; the merit of the invention is, that the heat produced from the burning gas is thrown on to the steel plate which covers the bottom surface, none being allowed to pass off in waste.

Three times the amount of work ordinarily executed can be done by the use of these Irons, which have now been in use in extensive Manufactories long enough to thoroughly prove their merits and evidence their entire success. They are as suitable for Family Use as for the Work-room, the Manufactory, or the Laundry.

THE MASONIC YEAR 1878.

AS this is the closing number of our Eighth Volume, and only a few days remain to complete the current year, we follow the plan adopted last year, and include our sketch of the Masonic Events of 1878 in the issue for the present week. A few Lodge meetings may take place between now and the 1st January 1879, but, to all intents and purposes, the labours of Freemasonry during the year 1878 are closed, and we are in a position to sum up the results of the last twelve months, as well as to look forward to the future, as certainly as though the last hour of the nearly defunct year had struck. And these results, what are they? The answer to this question, it seems to us, must be written down as eminently satisfactory. No striking event has happened during the period we are now reviewing. We have moved on placidly, not by "leaps and bounds," and, as our readers are aware, steady progress is the most desirable of all progresses. Nor has there been anything in the shape of drawback to the general tenour of our prosperity. We have, indeed, advanced all the more surely by reason of there having been no unusual circumstances associated with our career. As we remarked in our Review of 1877, Freemasonry as a Society is, in the main, independent of external influences. We do not mean by this that it is not affected, to a certain extent, by the degree of prosperity which is in store for the whole community. On the contrary, and as will be seen hereafter, the financial success of our Festivals in 1878 has shown a decided falling off from the last two years, in consequence of the political anxieties which have prevailed, and the commercial depression which has been the immediate consequence thereof. We are committed to the same outlay as last year in respect of our Institutions, but we have not succeeded in raising anything like as considerable an amount towards this outlay. But the times have been and are exceptionally grave, and we must be prepared to meet such occasional diminution in the donations and subscriptions to our Charities with equanimity. But if in this respect Freemasonry in this country has not achieved such triumphs as it did last year and the year previous, it is satisfactory to know that in all other respects it has more than held its ground, and that a comparison between its condition now and last Christmas leaves nothing to be desired. The improvement may be looked upon as one of consolidation rather than of extension. The number of new Lodges is very considerably under what it was last year, but it must be remembered that a mere multiplication of Lodges, as has been again and again pointed out, is very far from being a sign of increasing strength. The increase that has taken place has been chiefly in the Provinces and Districts abroad, while the London District can point to an addition of some half-score Lodges—a sure sign that the Craft has taken root, whether firmly or not remains to be seen—in new localities, where it had previously obtained no foothold, or where, as in the case of our more distant and sparsely populated colonies, it had previously had no opportunity of establishing itself. It must always be looked upon as a healthy sign when we find new Lodges in heretofore unoccupied places, whereas an increase in places already furnished with Lodges may mean little else than that certain brethren, already subscribing members of the Craft, are desirous of holding offices of greater or less distinction, or of multiplying the honours they have already had conferred upon them. We have many brethren who are members of three or four Lodges, and it may be of even more. This, however, is not necessarily an increase of strength to the Craft, but rather an imaginary increase of importance to the respective Craftsmen. As a rule we see little advantage to be gained by a brother—unless he be one of transcendent merit—being at one and the same time a member of several Lodges. He incurs a needless expense in the way of fees and subscriptions. He cannot distribute his attention among his several duties with any advantage to himself or to the Lodges of which he is a member, and it may be, except in isolated cases, a brother who is able to append P.M. of half-a-dozen Lodges to his name is not a better, but simply a richer Mason, and one who exhibits perhaps more than the average amount of regard for "tinsel." It was a very wholesome law which was enacted in former days against brethren being members of more than one Lodge, and though it may be useful for an experienced brother to preside over a new Lodge, the establishment of new Lodges in order that Past Masters of already existing Lodges may multiply their jewels is a practice most strongly to be deprecated. In offering these remarks, we must not be understood as in any way condemning brethren of eminence for starting new Lodges for the purpose of strengthening the Society. We are referring only to those who consider their Masonic accomplishments will be more highly esteemed the more numerous the Lodges with which they are associated.

So far we have spoken in general terms. If we turn to the roll of Lodges up to the time of the latest announcement, we shall find that whereas at the time of the Quarterly Communication in December 1877, there were nominally 1,732 Lodges in existence, the youngest Lodge at the beginning of the current month was 1,792. This gives a clear addition of sixty new Lodges during the year just concluded as against eighty-one in the year 1877, and seventy-two in the year 1876. This, of necessity, amounts to a diminution of increase to the extent of about twenty-five per cent. on the former, and of twelve-and-a-half per cent. on the latter year. The sixty are thus distributed:—Seven were warranted in the Quarter to March, fifteen in the June Quarter, twenty-five in the September Quarter, and thirteen in that which closed with the Communication of the 4th inst. Of these sixty, only eleven are in the Metropolitan district, while thirty have been added to the Provinces, namely, four in the two divisions of Lancashire, and four in those of Yorkshire; three in the two divisions of South Wales, two each in Berks and Bucks, Hants and Isle of Wight, Middlesex, and Somerset; and one in each of the following, namely, Cornwall, Derby, Devon, Essex, Herts, Norfolk, Northampton and Hunts, Oxon, Staffordshire, Surrey, and Warwickshire. The remaining nineteen are distributed thus:—Six in the East Indies, Bombay two, and Bengal, Madras, British Burmah, and China (Hong Kong), one each—three in South Africa, six in Australasia—New South Wales and New Zealand two each, and Victoria and South Australia one each; three in the West Indies, of which one is in the district of Jamaica, and one in Argentine Republic, South America. The result is that, of the Lodges on the Roll of the United Grand Lodge of England there are, in round figures, 290 in London and 950 in the Provinces, or a total in England and Wales of 1250; and abroad and military 430, or altogether, as nearly as possible, 1,670 working Lodges, the number of those in abeyance, or which have dropped from the Roll, either from having joined other jurisdictions, or through some other cause, being about 120. As regards the increase during the four years the Prince of Wales has been our Grand Master, there were fifty-two additional Lodges in 1875, seventy-two in 1876, eighty-one in 1877, and sixty in the current year.

As to the changes which have taken place in the personnel of the Grand and Provincial Grand Lodges, they are, we rejoice to say, but few in number. The office of Grand Treasurer has not yet been filled up, it having been thought desirable to keep it vacant pending the completion of the new arrangements for the financial administration of Grand Lodge. It will be in the recollection of our readers that in the early part of the year, the old-established firm of Messrs. Willis, Percival and Co., Bankers, of which Bro. S. Tomkins, our last G. Treas., now deceased, was a member, failed. At the time there were lodged to the credit of Bro. S. Tomkins, as Grand Treasurer of Grand Lodge and Grand Chapter, £3,543 and £388 respectively, in respect of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution and Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, £980 and £777—a further sum of £3,000 belonging to the former having been invested only a few days previous to the stoppage of the bank; and in respect of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys £1,566. The Girls' School had, a short time previously, had £1,000 on loan from the bank, so that in its case there was a set-off against the loss. However, the sums we have mentioned were not wholly lost, as arrangements were made by which the assets of the late bank were purchased by the Hants and North Wilts Bank, conditionally that the creditors were paid by the latter a composition of nine shillings in the pound. As regards, however, the Charitable Institutions, there will be little, if any, loss sustained by them, as several donations, amounting in the aggregate to a very considerable sum, have been contributed towards the formation of a fund to relieve them of any loss they might otherwise have had to endure. As to the new arrangements, the Committee, of which the Earl of Carnarvon was Chairman, appointed to draw them up, recommended at the June Quarterly Communication that, for the future, Grand Lodge Account should be kept at the Bank of England, in the names of the Grand or Pro Grand Master, the Deputy Grand Master, and Grand Treasurer, the latter of whom should give an authority to pay cheques signed as heretofore, and countersigned by the Grand Secretary. These arrangements, except as regards the Grand Treasurer, were temporarily carried out, and at the September Communication the necessary alterations were made in the Book of Constitutions for the purpose of giving full effect to the above resolution; so that the Grand Treasurer, on being appointed, will henceforth be called upon to give a general supervision of the accounts and sign cheques for payments authorised by Grand Lodge, which cheques must likewise bear the counter-signature of the Grand Secretary. We do not think it possible that any better plan could have been adopted. It should be added that the late Bro. Samuel Tomkins had filled the important office of Grand Treasurer for considerably over twenty years. Who his successor will be, remains to be seen. One other death has to be recorded in the ranks of our Grand Officers, namely, that of Bro. F. Pepys Cockerell, who for very many years had held the post of G. Superintendent of Works, and whose name will ever be associated with the new Hall or Temple in which Grand Lodge holds its meetings, he having been the architect of the new building, the first stone of which was laid on 27th April 1864, by Grand Master the late Earl of Zetland, and which was formally inaugurated by the same Grand Master on the 14th April 1869. The loss of one who had so highly distinguished himself in the profession of architecture, as well as in the science of Free and Accepted or Speculative Masonry, must be, and is, deeply lamented by the whole of the English Craft, and the Earl of Carnarvon, when presiding at the Communication this month, paid a just tribute of respect to the worth of our departed Brother. Having done this, his Lordship then invested Bro. John Gibson, who is likewise a distinguished architect, and a Past Master of the Prince of Wales Lodge, No. 259, with the insignia of the office of Grand Superintendent of Works, to which it had pleased His Royal Highness to appoint him. To have been able to find so worthy a successor to the late Bro. Cockerell is some slight consolation to us in the midst of our sincere regret for his premature death. And yet another member, high in rank in the Order, has passed away—to wit, Bro. John Bagshaw, who had held the post of Provincial Grand Master of Essex since the month of December 1854, or for little short of four-and-twenty years, and that of Grand Superintendent of the Provincial Grand Chapter of Essex since 1858. His death caused general regret throughout his Province, and among Craftsmen generally. During his P.G. Mastership no less than eleven of the seventeen Lodges, which now constitute the Province of Essex, were established. His successor has not yet been appointed. The Provincial Grand Mastership of Nottinghamshire, vacant since the resignation of the Duke of Newcastle, has been conferred on the Duke of St. Albans, while the latter's post as Provincial Grand Master of the neighbouring county of Lincoln has been filled by the appointment of Major W. H. Smyth, his Grace's Deputy. There has been a change also in Worcestershire, where Sir Edmund E. A. Lechmere, Bart., M.P., is installed Prov. Grand Master, in place of the late Bro. A. Hudson Rowds, who had presided over the destinies of the Province since 1869. Other losses we have sustained, two at least of which must be noted hereabouts. The first is that caused by the lamented death of Bro. Bentley Shaw, who had held the office of Deputy Grand Master of the important Province of W. Yorkshire for eleven years, till the appointment of Sir Henry Edwards, Bart., to be the Prov. G. Master. The late Bro. Shaw had been for upwards of thirty years a member of the Harmony Lodge, No. 275, of Huddersfield, and was a Past Grand Deacon; and so highly were his services appreciated by the brethren of the Province that, some years ago, he was presented by them with a grand and costly vase, which he had always regarded as the chief of the testimonials he had received. He had been for many years head of the firm of Bentley and Shaw, brewers; was a Deputy Lieutenant and Justice of the Peace, and at the time of his death was the Prov. G. Superintendent of the Royal Arch Masons of West Yorkshire. It is with similar regret that we record the death of Bro. Cowling, of York, Past Master of the "York" Lodge, No. 236, which celebrated its centenary last year. Bro. Cowling was an exemplary Mason, and one who took a deep interest in all that was connected with its literature.

Nor must we omit to mention another serious loss which Freemasonry, in all its numerous branches, has sustained. We allude to the death of Sir Frederick Martin Williams, Bart. M.P., who at the time was only in the forty-ninth year of his age. His place will not be readily supplied, especially in Cornwall, with which his name will ever be gratefully associated as one of the greatest magnates of his day. He was initiated in 1863 in the Phœnix Lodge of Honour and Prudence, No. 331, Truro, and was a member of several other Lodges. He was Deputy Prov. Grand Master of Cornwall, a Past Grand Warden, and representative of our Grand Lodge at the Grand Lodge of Portugal. He was Grand H., that is, Second Principal of the Prov. Grand Chapter, Prov. G.M.M.M. of Cornwall, Intendant General and a Past Grand Sovereign of the Order of Rome and the Red Cross of Constantine, and had taken the 32° in the A. and A. Rite. He was a Vice-President of the Girls' School, and a Vice-Patron of the Boys' School and Benevolent, besides being the moving spirit of the Cornwall Masonic Annuity Fund. His death was sudden, and was caused by a fit of apoplexy which attacked him while on a visit to a relative.

So much for the changes which have taken place among our rulers, and the losses we have to deplore. Turn we now to the few but important events by which the doings of our Grand Lodge during the still current year have been distinguished. We have already referred to the change in the arrangements for banking the funds of Grand Lodge in connection with the death of Bro. Samuel Tomkins, and the failure of the firm of bankers of which he was a member. It will not be necessary, therefore, that we should revert to it here. It will be in the recollection of our readers that at the Quarterly Communication, held on 5th December 1877, on motion duly made and seconded, it was unanimously agreed to appoint a Committee for the purpose of inquiring into the circumstances of the then recent change made in the Institutions of the Grand Orient of France, by which the doctrine of belief in a supreme being and a future existence had been struck out from the first article, and offering such recommendations as might seem proper. The Committee consisted of the Earl of Carnarvon Pro Grand Master, Lord Skelmersdale Deputy Grand Master, the Earl of Donoughmore, Lords Leigh and Tenterden, C.B., Æ. McIntyre, Q.C., Grand Registrar, Rev. C. J. Martyn, John Havers Past Grand Warden, J. B. Monckton President of Board of General Purposes, and R. F. Gould. The result of their deliberations was submitted to Grand Lodge at the Quarterly Communication on 6th March of this year, and took the form of four resolutions, of which No. 1 expressed the deep regret felt by Grand Lodge at "the steps which the Grand Orient of France had felt it necessary to take by eliminating the G.A.O.T.U. from their service." No. 2 was to the effect "that the English Grand Lodge, while anxious to receive foreign members in the same spirit as heretofore, could not recognise as true brethren any person admitted in a Lodge denying or ignoring a belief in the G.A.O.T.U." No. 3 laid it down "in the case of any visitor desiring to enter a Lodge under the English Constitution that the Master should exact the production of his certificate, or that he should be properly vouched for, and distinctly pledge his belief in the fundamental principles of our Constitution, namely, belief in the Great Architect of the Universe." Lastly, No. 4 provided that the above resolutions "be sent to the Masters of all Lodges holding under Warrant from the Grand Lodge of England," to this a rider being added, requesting the Worshipful Masters to read the resolutions in open Lodge. These resolutions were submitted and agreed to amid loud and enthusiastic cheering. Such, as will be seen from the report we gave at the time, was the course fixed upon as what Lord Carnarvon described the "minimum of precaution" it was our duty to adopt, and it will be noted that two points stand out prominently, the one that French brethren who were initiated in a Lodge in which a belief in the G.A.O.T.U. was recognised, as well as those who are willing to pledge their faith in such existence are eligible to be admitted into our Lodges; the other, that the sentence of excommunication passed by our Grand Lodge, applies exclusively to those who deny or ignore this fundamental principle of Freemasonry. A third point, as we remarked at the time, is conspicuous by its absence. Nothing is enjoined on our English brethren as to their entering or not entering French Lodges, so that we presume it is left to our discretion whether we shall do so or not.

The 24th April was a red-letter day in our Calendar for this year, for on that occasion Grand Lodge was honoured with the presence of His Royal Highness the Grand Master, this being the first opportunity the many demands on his valuable time had permitted him being in his place in Grand Lodge. Nor was this the only circumstance which made the celebration of our Grand Festival a subject for hearty congratulation. His Royal Highness the Crown Prince of Denmark, and Grand Master of Freemasons in that country, was formally received in Grand Lodge as a Visitor, and our Grand Master, in a brief but kindly speech, called on the brethren to give our Royal guest a hearty welcome. This, as may be imagined, was done with the heartiness characteristic of English Craftsmen, and was warmly acknowledged by the Crown Prince in a few well-chosen sentences. At the banquet which followed, and at which the Royal brethren—brethren by marriage as well as by the fraternal ties of Masonry—were both present, the Prince of Wales proposed the health of his Visitor, in association with the toast of Foreign Grand Lodges, and the toast having been duly honoured, was most felicitously acknowledged by the Danish Prince.

The other events of the year may be briefly dispensed. In June, a motion of sympathy with the Emperor of Germany—who is Protector of the Prussian Grand Lodges—at his having been attacked by assassins, as well as of congratulation that his Majesty's life had not been sacrificed, was agreed to unanimously, after which a sum of £100 out of the Fund of General Purposes was voted towards the relief of the members of the Igualdad Lodge, No. 653, Curaçoa, West Indies, who had suffered from the hurricane of the 23rd September 1877. At the September Communication a painful circumstance occurred. As our readers are aware, Grand Lodge elects certain members of the Board of General Purposes at the June Communication, and it having oozed out that an incorrect return had been made by the scrutineers appointed to examine the votes recorded for the different candidates, a special meeting of the Board was therefore held on 22nd July for purposes of inquiry, and in due course it was discovered that the paper recording the votes examined by Bros. Joseph Smith, Past Grand Pursuivant, and William Hilton, P.M. No. 780, contained the false return complained of, 113 votes being set down as recorded for a candidate whose total poll amounted to only 59. Bro. Smith's explanation proving entirely unsatisfactory, a second special meeting was held on the 30th July, when it was resolved that Bro. Smith had wilfully misrepresented the votes on the balloting papers examined by him, that he had made his return to Grand Lodge, knowing it to be false, and that having been thus guilty of a grave Masonic offence, as well as of having violated his solemn pledge as a scrutineer, he be suspended from all his Masonic privileges and functions for the space of two years. As regards his co-scrutineer, Bro. Hilton, it was not proved that he had been guilty of complicity with Bro. Smith; but it being established that he had been guilty of negligence in the discharge of his duties, he was admonished. As the necessary consequence of these resolutions, Bro. Smith has ceased to be a member of the Board of General Purposes, to which he had belonged for some twenty years, and of every other Masonic office he held, and he has further been officially suspended from all his functions and privileges as a Royal Arch Mason by the Supreme Grand Chapter of England. This is the one episode of the year which has caused a feeling of painful regret, not unmingled with shame, that an English brother, a Past Grand Officer, and one who had stood well with the Craft for many years, should have been found guilty of disreputable conduct, nor do we think the punishment was at all incommensurate with the magnitude of the offence committed. We need not, however, dwell further on this matter. At the same Communication in September, a small but important alteration in the rules of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, to the effect that wherever in the Laws and Regulations of the Institution, the word "pounds" had occurred, the word "guineas" should be substituted, received the sanction of Grand Lodge. Henceforth, therefore, all our Institutions will stand on exactly the same footing as regards subscriptions and donations, and the privileges they confer, except that the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution still gives a vote for every contribution of five shillings. An attempt made in March to alter the Constitution of the Board of General Purposes, was rejected by an overwhelming majority. One other circumstance must be recorded. At the Quarterly Communication on the 4th December the Earl of Carnarvon, who presided, announced that a valuable book, a record of the Lodges existing in 1729 in this country, had been presented to Grand Lodge by Bro. Edward Tyrrell Heath, Dep. Dist. Grand Master of Bombay. It showed that at the time referred to there were only fifty-four Lodges on the Roll of Grand Lodge, and now there are 1792, or making allowances for Lodges in abeyance, or which have ceased to hold under our Grand Lodge, about 1670. This valuable little book, which is in a perfect state of preservation, and of which but one other copy is known to exist, was accepted, and a vote of thanks to the donor was unanimously ordered to be recorded on the minutes of Grand Lodge.

Among the casual events in Craft Masonry which have distinguished the present year, are several which are well worth referring to in our Summary. Thus in the month of November, at the meeting of the Prov. G. Lodge of Wiltshire, the opportunity was taken of presenting Lord Methuen, who has presided over the destinies of Freemasonry in that Province for just one quarter of a century, with a testimonial in recognition of the valuable services he had rendered to the Craft during his tenure of the P.G. Mastership. The testimonial was worthy alike of the Provincial Grand Lodge which gave, and the Provincial Grand Master who received it, consisting, as it did, of a pair of magnificent solid silver candelabra of the value of six hundred guineas, accompanied by a testimonial on vellum, framed and glazed, and most elaborately embellished. On Bro. Gabriel Goldney, M.P., the Dep. Prov. Grand Master, devolved the pleasant duty of presenting the testimonial, and Lord Methuen in acknowledging the gift, was visibly affected by the kindness of the brethren he had ruled so long and with such success. Bro. Goldney at the same time presented his Lordship with a History of Freemasonry in Wiltshire, and orders were issued for its being printed. Prominent among the distinguished brethren present was Sir Daniel Gooch, Bart. M.P., Prov. Grand Master of Berks and Bucks, to whom Lord Methuen in acknowledging the gift paid a very high compliment, and attributed what good he had been able to effect, principally to the kind instruction he had received from him. A banquet and ball followed, and brought to a close one of the brightest and most auspicious days in the annals of Wiltshire Freemasonry. Turning from this Province to the Western division of Lancashire, in which, under the able rule of Lord Skelmersdale, Dept. G. Master of England, the Craft flourishes so considerably, we find the present year opened auspiciously. On the 2nd January the Skelmersdale Masonic Hall, Liverpool, was solemnly consecrated to purposes of Freemasonry, the officiating brother being Bro. H. S. Alpass, Prov. G. Sec. From the report we published at the time, it appears that there are only three Lodges in Liverpool which meet at an hotel, all the rest being accommodated in Halls, specially dedicated to Craft uses. This Hall, which is situated in Kirkstall-street, has been erected for the convenience of the brethren in the northern part of the town, and is described as a commodious as well as handsome edifice, and well worth the £2,000 expended on its erection. Later in the year—in the month of October—the Grand Lodge of this Province held its annual meeting at the Philharmonic Hall, Liverpool. Lord Skelmersdale in person presided, and the number of brethren present was upwards of one thousand, all the seventy-nine Lodges but two being represented. Two sums, each of one hundred guineas, were voted, the one to the Royal Masonic Institution for Girls, and the other to the West Lancashire Masonic Institution, the position and prospects of which are eminently satisfactory. As many as three hundred brethren partook of the banquet which followed, and at which the Prov. Grand Master presided. A third and important event in this Province remains to be recorded. Towards the end of the same month, Lord Skelmersdale laid the foundation stone of a new church at Southport, to be dedicated to St. Luke. About two hundred brethren were present, and everything passed off most satisfactorily. And yet another interesting episode must be recorded in connection with West Lancashire. In March a handsome epergne was presented at a complimentary dinner given in his honour to Bro. Dr. Daniel Moore, M.D., for his valuable services to the Rowley Lodge, No. 1051. There was a numerous gathering on the occasion, and Dr. Moore feelingly acknowledged the compliment paid to him. Turning to the annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of East Lancashire, which was held on the 29th November, under the presidency of R.W. Bro. Le Gendre N. Starkie, Prov. Grand Master—to whom in the early part of the year a testimonial was presented—we note that the handsome sum of five hundred guineas was voted towards the next Festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, at which Lieut. Colonel Starkie has kindly consented to preside. It was announced at the same time that over thirty brethren had resolved on acting as Stewards on the occasion, so that it is on the cards that East Lancashire may surpass the Western portion of the county, which gave over £1,500, when Lord Skelmersdale presided on a like occasion, and even Warwickshire, which contributed exactly £2,000 when Lord Leigh, its Prov. Grand Master, was President at a recent Festival. It should be added that a grant of £50 was made to the East Lancashire Systematic Masonic Educational and Benevolent Institution. Moving still further northward, duty requires we should make at least a passing allusion to a highly interesting meeting that was held at the Masonic Hall, for the purpose of presenting Bro. B. J. Thompson, P. Prov. Grand Senior Warden and Prov. Grand Secretary, with a handsome testimonial, consisting of a splendid massive silver tea and coffee service, with salver to match, in recognition of his valuable services to Freemasonry in the Province for a period of one-and-twenty years. It is likewise worthy of mention that the Grand Lodge of the Province of Northumberland was held this year at Alnwick, under the presidency of the Earl Percy, M.P., Prov. Grand Master, and heir apparent to the dukedom of Northumberland. When the business of the meeting was terminated, his lordship entertained all the brethren who were present—and between 600 and 700 were in attendance—in the great hall of Alnwick Castle. The Duchess of Northumberland, who for a few minutes witnessed the festive scene from the gallery, was loudly cheered by her son's guests.

Descending southward, we shall find a few events worthy of being noted in this record. The annual meeting of the Provincial Grand Lodge of Kent was held early in July, under the presidency of Viscount Holmesdale, M.P., Prov. Grand Master, for the first time for eighteen years, in the ancient city of Canterbury, so many of whose archbishops are supposed to have been associated with the Craft. By the kind permission of the Dean, the meeting was held in the Chapter House of the Cathedral, and in the course of the afternoon, the brethren in full Masonic clothing attended divine service in the sacred edifice, there being some five hundred Craftsmen present, while the congregation was far in excess of what it usually is, the non-Masonic inhabitants being attracted by a sight so unusual. Between three and four hundred pounds were voted in the shape of donations to the several Masonic Charities. On the 14th November, another event of considerable importance to the Masonic citizens of Canterbury was celebrated. The brethren of the three Lodges having combined together, and secured the lease of a house in St. Peters-street, for the purpose of turning the said house to account as a Masonic Hall, the premises were on that day formally dedicated in a quiet and unostentatious way to the purposes of Freemasonry. On the 10th July Lord Skelmersdale presided at a meeting of Prov. Grand Lodge of Essex, held at Clacton-on-Sea, for the purpose of presenting to the Life Boat Institution one of the two life boats which had been voted by Grand Lodge to commemorate the Grand Master's safe return from India. The Masonic ceremony passed off well. The after proceedings were not creditable to the municipal authorities of Clacton-on-Sea, or whoever had charge of them.

Let us now direct our attention to Royal Arch Masonry, of which we may at once say that, like Craft Masonry, it has prospered during the year now rapidly drawing to a close. Thirty-two new Chapters have been warranted during the year, namely, six in the first quarter, thirteen in the second, five in the third, and eight in the fourth. Thirty-three petitions were submitted and approved, but of these two were for a Chapter to be attached to one and the same Lodge; so that the number of additional Chapters is, as we have stated, only thirty-two. Of these, ten are London Chapters, and fifteen Provincial, namely, three in West Lancashire, two in East Lancashire, two in Surrey, and one each in Cornwall, Derbyshire, Devon, Durham, Hants and Isle of Wight, Oxford, South Wales West Division, and West Yorkshire. The remaining seven are in foreign stations; two being in the District of Bengal, one in St. Helena, one in North Africa (Tunis), one in South Africa, one in Gibraltar, and one in New Zealand. There is nothing noteworthy about these new Chapters except in the case of Ancient Carthage, No. 1717, which is held under the auspices of the Lodge bearing the same name and number, which had been founded only about six months when the warrant for the Chapter was granted. It was shown, however, that the Lodge, young as it was, numbered forty-two members, and, what was of still greater concern, there was no other Masonic body within two hundred miles of it; the prayer of the Companions, therefore, was unhesitatingly granted. There are now about 550 Chapters holding under the Supreme Grand Chapter of England, of which, in round figures, between 90 and 100 are located in the Metropolis, 350 in the Provinces, and 100 on foreign stations, or attached to Military Lodges. As to personal changes and losses, we note that Essex and Worcestershire have both lost their Provincial Grand Superintendents, the former by the death of Comp. J. Bagshaw, and the latter by that of Comp. A. Hudson Royds. Comp. Sir Henry Edwards, Bart., has been installed Prov. Grand Superintendent of West Yorkshire, in succession to the late Comp. Bentley Shaw, and Norfolk has a new Royal Arch ruler in the person of Colonel James Duff, who now occupies the place of the late Prov. Grand Superintendent Comp. Hon. F. Walpole, M.P.

The installation of Sir H. Edwards took place at Sheffield, and there were present close on 250 Companions on the occasion, Lieut.-Col. Le Gendre Starkie, Prov. G. Superintendent of E. Lancashire being the officer entrusted with the ceremony of installation, and right well Comp. Starkie fulfilled his part. It is also worthy of mention that before the Prov. G. Chapter was closed, the handsome sum of one hundred guineas was voted to the fund in course of being raised to perpetuate, in some way, the memory of Comp. Bentley Shaw, whose death we have already alluded to, and who was the immediate predecessor of Sir Henry Edwards as Prov. G. Superintendent of this influential Province. Less imposing—on the ground that the Province can point to fewer Chapters, but on that ground only—was the installation of Comp. Rev. C. J. Martyn as Prov. G. Superintendent of Suffolk. The appointment was made last year, but the formal induction of the Rev. Companion into office did not take place till the early spring of this. Some seventy R. Arch Masons were present, the most eminent being Comp. Lord Skelmersdale Grand H., who attended for the purpose of installing Rev. C. J. Martyn. We need hardly say the duty was admirably fulfilled.

At the Quarterly Convocation in February, the General Committee reported that there stood to the credit of Grand Chapter in the Three per Cent. Consols no less than £3,400, and as no immediate claim was likely to be made on the funds in question, it was recommended, and Grand Chapter approved of the recommendation, that £2,000 should be granted to our Institutions, namely, £500 to the Girls' School, £500 to the Boys' School, £500 to the R.M. Benevolent Fund (Male), and £500 to the same (Female Fund). Another vote, small in itself, yet showing clearly the goodwill which the R.A. Masons of Cheshire bear towards their Prov. G. Superintendent, may appropriately be referred to. A sum of sixty guineas was unanimously voted in order to complete the amount necessary to make Lord de Tabley P.G. Sup. a Vice-Patron of the Girls' School. A line, too, may be added as to the Wanderers' Chapter, the warrant for which was granted under exceptional circumstances. The Chapter was consecrated in March by General Brownrigg, C.B., Prov. Grand Superintendent Surrey, the gallant Companion being a distinguished member of the service which is so strongly represented in the Chapter.

Mark Masonry has made rapid progress in the course of the last twelve months. Indeed, each successive year finds this degree increasing in favour. At the Winter Half-yearly Communication, held on the 4th instant, the number of the latest Warrant issued was returned as No. 234, and since then the Clapton, No. 236, has been consecrated, so that, including the Time Immemorial Lodges, there cannot now be far short of 250 Lodges, while the number of Mark Masons holding under this Grand Lodge is close on 12,000, the actual numbers being 11,773. At the Summer Half-yearly Communication in June, Lord Skelmersdale, who had been elected Grand Master at the previous Communication, was formally installed by his predecessor, the Earl of Limerick, in the presence of a numerous gathering of brethren. In acknowledging the salutations which greeted him, Lord Skelmersdale expressed himself highly sensible of the honour conferred upon him, and having promised that he would devote himself to promoting the best interests of the Order, presented his noble predecessor with a handsome Past Grand Master's jewel, in token of the many and great services he had rendered during his three years' tenure of office. The gift was suitably acknowledged by the Earl of Limerick, and the Officers for the year were then appointed, the Earl of Donoughmore being made Deputy Grand Mark Master, and Lord Henniker and Bro. T. F. Halsey, M.P., Senior and Junior Grand Wardens respectively. From a financial point of view nothing could be more satisfactory than the state of Grand Lodge. There is an amount of £2,000 invested, one-half in respect of the General Fund, and the other in respect of the Benevolent Fund, the great success of the annual Festival of the latter having been such as to warrant the amount of invested money being increased to £1,000. This Festival was held in July, at the Alexandra Palace, Muswell Hill, under the presidency of Lord Skelmersdale, and the thirty-two Stewards among them raised over £370. It is also satisfactory to record that the Grand Royal Arch Chapter of the district of Columbia U.S.A. and Western Virginia have recognised and interchanged representatives with our Mark G. Lodge, Lord Skelmersdale and Bro. F. Binckes, with his chief's approval, being accepted as the representatives of Grand Lodge for Columbia and Western Virginia, while the G. High Priest McCoy, at the former and Ill. Comp. Cheever at the latter, each with the rank of Grand Warden, are representatives from this. A suggested change in the Constitution of the Mark G. Lodge, by which it would have taken under its banners certain side and other degrees, has not been entertained, but a scheme for establishing an Educational Fund in connection with the Fund of Benevolence, was duly sanctioned early this month in Grand Lodge. We have already adverted to the death of Sir F. M. Williams, Bart. M.P., by which event Cornwall is deprived of the services of a most distinguished ruler, and it may be mentioned that the Hon. H. Thoby Prinsep is the Prov. G. Master of Bengal, in place of Bro. Dr. Theodore Cooke. We cannot, however, allow this sketch of Mark Masonry to pass without including in it a reference to one of the highest and best beloved of English Mark Masons, who was alive, though in somewhat failing health, at the time we wrote our history of 1877. We allude to the death of that "Fine old English gentleman," Bro. John Sutcliffe, Prov. G.M.M.M. of Lincolnshire, than whom a grander fellow never existed. True, he died the day before last Christmas day, but the sad event, though noted in our columns in the last week of 1877, comes properly within the scope of our present record. It were foolish to say, "We ne'er shall look upon his like again," for we know not what good men may come among us, but it may well happen we shall never see a better. Bro. Sutcliffe was in his prime, and we might have hoped for a long continuance of service from him; but the fiat had gone forth, and a few days hence, and one year will have elapsed since he was among us. But though he has gone, his memory still liveth, and will live, while there is a sense of truth and respect among Mark Masons. The usual Moveable Grand Lodge was held at Keswick, in Cumberland, on which occasion there was a strong muster of brethren, for the purpose of witnessing the consecration of the Fletcher Lodge, No. 213, and the Henry, No. 216, the former being located at Whitehaven, and the latter at Fitzington.

One eminently auspicious event has happened in Templar Masonry. By special dispensation from Lord Skelmersdale Great Prior of England, an Emergency Meeting of the Cœur de Lion Preceptory, Province of Oxford, was held in November, at 33 Golden-square, London, for the purpose of installing H.R.H. Prince Leopold, into the Preceptor's chair. The ceremony was performed by the eminent Preceptor Sir Knight Rev. T. Cochrane Grand Prelate, who was assisted by Sir Knights Hyde Pullen, F. Richardson, Rev. John Robins, D.D., and Colonel Somerville Burney. When the special dispensation for holding the Preceptory in London instead of at Oxford, had been read, it was announced that the V.H. and E. Great Prior of Ireland His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, awaited admittance. A deputation of the Great Officers was formed, and conducted His Royal Highness into the Preceptory, where he was received with all honours, under an Arch of Steel. Prince Leopold was then installed, and having been proclaimed and saluted, briefly expressed his thanks and appointed his Officers, Sir Knight Rev. T. Cochrane being assigned the office of Pro Preceptor. Their Royal Highnesses subsequently retired under the Arch of Steel, and the interesting proceedings came to an end.

The Ancient and Accepted Rite can likewise boast of what, perhaps, may be regarded as the unique event of the year. On the 6th November, their Royal Highnesses the Duke of Connaught, K.G., and Prince Leopold, K.G., were advanced to the thirty-third and last degree of Freemasonry. Among the members present of the Sup. Council were Lord Skelmersdale M.P. Sov. G. Commander, Captain N. G. Philips Lieut. Grand Commander and Past S.G.C., Major-General H. Clerk Treasurer-General, J. M. P. Montagu G. Chancellor, and Lieut.-Colonel Shadwell H. Clerke G. Secretary-General, and several members of the thirty-third degree. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Grand Patron of the Order, accompanied by his brothers, arrived at 4 p.m., and having been received by Lord Skelmersdale and other members, were conducted to the Council Chamber, where the 31st and 32nd degrees were conferred upon them. The Supreme Council then adjourned to the hall, where the Duke and Prince Leopold had the 33rd degree conferred upon them in a most impressive manner by Lord Skelmersdale M.P. Sov. G. Commander, while the Prince of Wales personally invested his brothers with the insignia of the degree. Rightly have we described this as a unique event, for it is the first and only occasion on which the three Princes have met together in Masonry, illness or duty having hitherto operated to prevent this. They were then proclaimed and saluted by their style and titles as Sovereign G. Inspector-Generals of the 33rd degree, and as honorary members, ad vitam, of the Supreme Council of England and Wales. Be it added that sundry changes have taken place in the constitution of the Supreme Council, Ill. Bro. Dr. Hamilton having resigned his seat, and Ill. Bro. General Brownrigg, C.B., having been appointed in his stead, Dr. Hamilton, however, being elected a supernumerary member. In consequence, the Supreme Council is now constituted as follows:—Grand Patron H.R.H. Prince of Wales. Honorary Members—H.R.H. Duke of Connaught and Prince Leopold. Supreme Council—Lord Skelmersdale M.P.S.G.C., Capt. N. G. Philips P.M.P.S.G.C. and Lieut. G.C., Major-General Clerk G. Treasurer-General, J. M. P. Montagu Grand Chancellor, Lieut.-Colonel Shadwell H. Clerke G. Secretary-General, Hugh Sandeman G. Secretary Foreign Correspondence, Sir Michael Costa G. Captain of Guard, Colonel Alexander W. Adair S.G.I.G., and General Brownrigg, C.B., S.G.I.G., Dr. Hamilton (supernumerary member). Nor would it become us to pass unheeded the consecration of a new Rose Croix Chapter at Canterbury named the Ethelbert. The event was attended with considerable ceremony. A special meeting of the Supreme Council was called, in the first place to perfect candidates for the Rose Croix 18°, and then for the consecration of the Chapter and the installation of the Most Wise Sovereign. Captain N. G. Philips Lieut. G. Commander, J. M. P. Montagu G. Chancellor, Lieut.-Col. Shadwell H. Clerke, S. Rawson 33°, &c., &c., took part in the ceremony, and the compliment of honorary membership was paid to Captain Philips and his coadjutors.

One event by which the year 1878 has been signalised we have reserved for separate notice. We allude to the Pilgrimage or Pilgrimages—for there were two—of American Knights Templar to this country and to Paris to see the Exhibition. The first consisted of a party of Sir Knights of the Mary Commandery, No. 36, of Philadelphia, who, with their friends and some ladies, mustered about thirty. These visited Ireland, Scotland, and England, and wherever they appeared were heartily welcomed by the brethren of the United Kingdom. At the ancient city of York they were right loyally entertained, conspicuous among those who rendered service being Sir Knight T. B. Whytehead. The guests were shown over the fine old Minster, and inspected the interesting relics and records of the old York Lodge, the Grand Lodge of All England as it was named. At Sheffield Sir Knight S. B. Ellis was foremost among those who welcomed them, while in London they were entertained at a banquet at Freemasons' Tavern, at which a numerous gathering of distinguished members of our Craft were present. Since their return home the fratres have expressed themselves in the highest degree gratified with the hearty reception they met with in the old country. Sir Kt. Chas. E. Meyer, of Philadelphia Commandery, was among the most distinguished of the one batch of Pilgrims, while the illustrious Bro. Rob. Morris may be regarded as the most eminent of the other. These visits cannot fail to exercise a beneficial effect in strengthening and confirming the ties already existing between the two great Anglo-Saxon Communities, and we will venture to say that a party of English Pilgrims visiting the United States would meet with a welcome which would rejoice their hearts mightily and be a pleasant remembrance to them for the rest of their days.

We now come to a most important part of our record, many perhaps will consider it the most important. This is a review of our Charitable Institutions, what they have done, and what has been done for them in the course of the year. Speaking generally, we may say at starting that the year 1878 has been productive of less satisfactory results than its predecessor. There has been a decided falling off in the subscriptions to each of them. This might have been anticipated, and, moreover, is to be explained by the period of grave political anxiety and commercial depression through which we have passed. The possibility that this country might have been engaged in a tremendous war with one of the chief European powers will sufficiently account for the year's shortcomings, while the trade of the country has, as was to be expected, been in a most unsatisfactory condition. Therefore, while we note the falling off in the receipts at each of our three great Charitable Festivals, we may, perhaps, have reason to congratulate ourselves that the sums raised have after all been so considerable. In 1877, the Festivals together yielded not far short of £36,000. This year they resulted in subscriptions a little in excess of £30,000. Thus 1878 has been less profitable to our Charitable Institutions than last year to the extent of about £7,000. However, we must not be disheartened on this account. We may expect such variations, and under the circumstances we have alluded to, we may even go so far as to congratulate ourselves that a sum so considerable has been raised. As happens invariably, the Festival of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution was the first that was held. Freemasons' Tavern was the scene of the gathering, and the day the 13th February. The Duke of Manchester, Prov. G. Master of Northamptonshire and Hunts, was in the chair, and when the time came for Bro. Terry to announce the total contributed, he was in a position to give five figures—£11,133, with nine of the 225 Stewards' Lists still outstanding, the total result reaching ultimately £11,333. Thus, for the second year running, "A Zealous Officer" has taken the lead, his Festival having resulted in a larger subscription list than either of the other two. Of course, with so considerable a falling off, and taking likewise into account that a very material addition was made last year to the number of annuitants, it was found impossible to still further increase them to an appreciable extent. Consequently, the number of beneficiaries on the Male Fund remains as before 145, while that on the Female Fund has been increased from 130 to 135, the men receiving £40 each, and the women £32, while there are eleven widows who receive a moiety of their late husbands' annuities. Thus the Institution is committed to an annual payment of £10,342 in respect of annuities alone, and the working expenses raise this to £12,500 as nearly as possible. However, the accounts for the year to 31st March 1878 are eminently satisfactory, there being a balance on the Male Fund of over £2,380, and on the Female Fund of nearly £1,300. The permanent income of this Institution is respectable, Grand Lodge contributing annually £500 to the Male and £300 to the Female Fund, or together £800; and Grand Chapter £100 to the former and £50 to the latter, or together £150, making a total of grants from these two sources of £950, while the interest on invested moneys is over £1,400. These investments were further increased during the year in question by the purchase of £3,125 Consols. One most agreeable episode in the history of this Institution is deserving of a place in this sketch. Bro Dr. Strong has been honorary surgeon to it for seventeen years, and the Committee resolved that services so valuable should receive a commemoration than usual. Accordingly, on the 31st May, a testimonial, consisting of a service of plate of the value of one hundred guineas was presented to him at a quiet little dinner, and this worthy brother acknowledged the compliment in most feeling terms, not only thanking them for the gift, but promising likewise that so long as he enjoyed health and strength he would continue to give his professional services to the residents of the Institution at Croydon.

The Royal Masonic Institution for Girls next demands our attention. The number of pupils now borne on the establishment is two hundred, and the average cost for each girl for maintenance and education was, for the year ended 31st December 1877, £35 15s 11d. Therefore, taking the same average for the current year, the outlay under this head to which the Institution stands committed is £7,160 in round figures. The invested property consists of £39,000 Government Stock, one moiety being Consols, and the other Reduced Three per Cents. At the same time, owing to the heavy expenditure in connection with the additional buildings, there was an excess of expenditure over income of about £3,000, the ordinary receipts for the year 1877 having been as nearly as possible £11,830, while the expenditure, ordinary and extraordinary, reached a little over £14,690. This necessitated a loan from the bankers, but as the income for the current year will be about £10,000, it is clearly within the competency of the Institution to reduce the deficit, and in time remove it without lessening the efficiency of the School. The Annual Festival, which was held at the Freemasons' Tavern, on the 10th May, under the presidency of the Ear of Carnarvon, Pro Grand Master, resulted in subscriptions to the amount of £8,392, and with the sixteen lists outstanding this ultimately reached a total of £8,500. The Prince and Princess of Wales were to have paid a visit of inspection to the School some time in the month of March, but an outbreak of measles caused it to be postponed. On the 18th June took place the annual distribution of prizes, and the musical and other entertainments provided for the occasion passed off admirably, and showed that the system of education adopted was bearing good fruit. The gold medallist for the year, being the pupil who was most distinguished by her general proficiency, was Leila Putman. Mary Emma Barnes received the silver medal for good conduct, and Blanche Edith Morris, Louisa Hole, and Frances Harryman were bracketed together as recipients of Brother W. Winn's prize for proficiency. To these five were likewise awarded prizes for having passed the Cambridge Examination, and Louisa Hole and Blanche Edith Morris were also awarded prizes for drawing (model) by the Science and Art Department, South Kensington. So much for the School, but our sketch would be incomplete without some reference to the change which has taken place in the executive. For this reason is it that we have reserved our notice of Bro. R. Wentworth Little's death, so that, as seems most fitting, it might appear in association with the School for which he laboured so unremittingly, and with such signal success. Bro. Little's health for more than a year prior to his death had been such as to prevent him taking any very active part in the duties of his office. The last occasion on which we had the pleasure of meeting him was at a dinner of the Girls' School Club in October 1877, and it must have been a sense of duty, rather than any other cause, which induced him to be present. He was then in a most enfeebled state of health, and when at the Quarterly Court on 12th April, Lieut.-Colonel Creaton announced that Bro. Little's death had taken place the previous afternoon, it was evident that such an announcement had been for long expected. But notwithstanding this, the sorrow felt at the death of so valued a servant of the School was both deep and widespread. It was known that for the five years he had been Secretary Bro. Little had devoted himself with a will to the strict performance of his duties, making light of every sacrifice of personal convenience, when he saw there was a chance of his rendering some aid. Not only was there every tribute of respect paid to his memory, but the greatest sympathy was expressed with his widow in her bereavement, and the sympathy was not confined to mere words, but took the substantial form of a grant of salary, such as her husband would have received had his life been spared, till the September quarter. A memorial is also now being raised for the purpose of erecting a monument over his grave, and investing the balance, the interest to be enjoyed by Mrs. Little during her life or till her re-marriage, and the principal to be then handed over to the Institution. Such testimony was not needed to prove the estimation in which our late brother was held, but his friends will appreciate it the more for that very reason. Bro. Little had won distinction in all branches of Freemasonry. He was Deputy Prov. Grand Master of Middlesex at the time of his death, having been chosen to fill that office on the appointment of Sir Geo. Elliot, Bart. M.P., to be Prov. G. Master of South Wales, Eastern Division. He was also a leading Arch, Mark, Templar, and High Grade Mason, and, when his health permitted, was a frequent and valued contributor to contemporary Masonic literature. But it is as the Secretary of our oldest Charitable Institution that he will best be remembered, and it is to his memory as such that we have been desirous of paying this further tribute of respect. His death necessitated the election of a successor, and though several candidates came forward to contest the vacancy, it was evident the choice lay between Bro. F. R. W. Hedges, who had fulfilled all the duties of the office during Bro. Little's protracted illness in a most exemplary manner, Bro. Paul Storr, and Bro. C. F. Matier. The election was held on the 11th of July, and resulted in the return of Bro. Hedges by 373 votes, Bro. Paul Storr being second with 268, and Bro. Matier third with 153 votes. The general opinion appears to be that a better choice could not have been made, or a more fitting one, seeing that Bro. Hedges was already familiar with his work, and in the few months that have elapsed since, there is no doubt Bro. Hedges has fully verified the wisdom of the choice.

The Royal Masonic Institution for Boys, like its sister Institutions, has had a trying year, so far as regards the amount contributed to its support, and in this instance it is the more unfortunate seeing that the amount of capital invested is represented by the modest figure of £8,000, or considerably less than the sum necessary to defray one year's expenditure. Moreover, as in the case of the Girls' School, the number of pupils has been increased, and there are now 211 boys on the establishment; and if we take the average cost per boy at what it was last year—namely, £44 12s, we find the Institution stands committed to over £9,400, while all that it has to depend upon in the way of permanent income is the £150 granted by Grand Lodge annually, £10 10s from Grand Chapter, and the interest on the £8,000 already mentioned, or together about £400 per annum. The Festival was held on the 8th July, at the Alexandra Palace, and as H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught presided, and the Board of Stewards numbered some 250 brethren, it might reasonably have been expected that the subscription list would have been in excess of the year previous. But the influence of the general depression from which the country had been and still is suffering was too potent even for the interest and influence of our Royal brother, seconded as he was by so numerous a body of Stewards, to overcome, and the Festival yielded £10,169, with some twenty lists still outstanding. The subsequent receipts raised this to a total of about £10,500; or, say, £3,000 less than was contributed in 1877. We cannot but regret this falling off, at the very time, moreover, when it is desirable the amount of subscriptions and donations should be more considerable, and especially as it was the first occasion on which the Duke of Connaught had taken a part at any of our Festivals. But there is this comforting reflection, that the sum raised is immense when compared with the yield of our Festivals even half-a-dozen years since, and it is only the huge amounts to which Bro. Binckes has latterly accustomed us that make it seem so moderate. The recitations and annual distribution of prizes took place on the Wednesday previous (the 3rd July) under the presidency of Lord Suffield, Prov. G. Master of Norfolk. John Gilbert Whyatt won the silver medal for good conduct given by the Institution; Alfred Nutt the Canonbury gold medal given by Bro. E. Cox; G. S. Widdowson the silver watch and chain, given for good conduct by the Supreme Council A. and A. Rite; and W. Spottiswoode the silver watch, given by Bro. F. Ráth, for efficiency as monitor. Numerous distinctions have been won at the Cambridge Local Examinations, and those of the Science and Art Department, so that we know the efforts of Bro Dr. Morris and his able staff of assistant masters are bearing excellent fruit. Nor is the physical training of the lads lost sight of, and there is, as at other public schools, the average amount of good cricketing and athletic material generally to be found among our boys, so that when they reach the age for leaving the school and beginning the great battle of life, they are physically as well as mentally prepared for the conflict.

We have now completed our survey of the three Masonic Institutions. We have shown there has been a considerable falling off this year, the sums raised at the three Festivals reaching a total of £30,000 as against £36,900 in 1877, while the number of beneficiaries has been increased. There are now 291 annuitants provided for by the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution, 200 girls, and 211 boys, and the sum we are bound to raise to meet these demands on the resources of our Charities, may be set down at between £29,000 and £30,000, of which only a little over £4,000 is derived from annual grants by G. Lodge and G. Chapter, and from interest on investments. It is evident therefore, we have a heavy responsibility resting on us. It would never do to reduce the number of beneficiaries, and, therefore, at the very lowest figure, we need quite £30,000 annually, if we are to maintain the buildings in good repair, and keep up the number of pupils and annuitants. Let us hope that, though present circumstances are not of a very hopeful character, a time may soon come when, with a revival of trade and commerce, and a less trying period of political anxiety we may be in a position to point to a corresponding revival of support for these noble Charities.

We must now cross the St. George's Channel for the purpose of noting the position of Freemasonry in Ireland. Here, of course, we are confronted with a state of things which is but little remarkable in England,—a marked antagonism between the Craft and Roman Catholicism. This exists in most countries, but in Ireland the antagonism is more active on the part of the latter. This has not, however, had the effect of in any way lessening the just influence which Freemasonry exerts, wherever it is firmly established. Indeed, the Grand Lodge has been awarded a certain amount of credit by the organs of the Roman Catholic press, for the action it took towards the end of 1877, in respect of the recent Constitutional changes sanctioned by the Grand Orient of France. Nor have we heard anything further of the imaginary influence exercised by Freemasons on the flax trade of Belfast. On the contrary, the visit of the American pilgrims, already alluded to, was made the occasion of sundry Masonic gatherings, and the reception accorded to the American Sir Knights, was in the highest degree creditable to our Irish brethren. As regards the strength of Irish Freemasonry, it remains pretty much what it was last year, except that we can trace the establishment of four new Lodges, one in the Mauritius, one in South Australia, and two in New Zealand, thus raising the number of Lodges subordinate to the Grand Lodge of Ireland from 369 to 373. These are distributed in manner following:—Thirty-six are held in Dublin, and 256 in the Provinces at home:—Co. Antrim with seventy-eight Lodges, Co. Down with forty-six Lodges, Counties Armagh and Londonderry with Donegal, each twenty-two, and Tyrone with Fermanagh nineteen Lodges, being the strongest in point of numbers; fifty-four in Provinces abroad, namely:—Victoria fifteen, New South Wales eight, Queensland eight, South Australia ten, and New Zealand thirteen; nine are military Lodges, and the remaining eighteen are in different parts of the world, four in Ceylon, two in Peru, South America, three in Tasmania, &c., &c., &c., but under no Provincial Grand Lodges. But if there are but few new Lodges, and but few events to note in this country, it is a source of satisfaction to know that the Craft flourishes unmistakably, if we may take the admirable condition of the Dublin Female Orphan Asylum, and the Boys' School attached to it, as an evidence of what we say. The annual fête of this asylum was held in the Exhibition Palace, Dublin, on the 20th June, and in the unavoidable absence of Grand Master the Duke of Abercorn, who was prevented attending through the illness of his wife, the chair was taken by Bros. W. Shekleton, Q.C., Deputy Grand Master, who was supported by Bros. Robert Warren Grand Treasurer, Rev. John James MacSorley Grand Chaplain, Alderman Manning Grand Senior Deacon, and other Grand Officers, representatives of foreign Grand Lodges, among them Bro. Captain Hubard, and a strong muster of brethren. The report was highly satisfactory, and showed that the Institution had been enabled to add £2,000 India Four per Cent. Stock to its invested moneys, that the number of Girls who were receiving the benefits of the Institution were forty-five, and the number of Boys twenty-one, and it was hoped there would soon be an opportunity of increasing the numbers. There was a numerous array of the fair sex, and in addition to the musical entertainment provided by the pupils, the proceedings were enlivened at intervals by the band of the 21st Fusiliers. The principal prizes were awarded to Frances Smith who took the Ffennell (£3) for Scripture and History, the second Astley Prize English Division, and the first ditto French Division, and Gertrude Gill, who won the Ffennell Prize last year, and was therefore awarded a certificate, the first Astley Prize English, and second ditto French, together with the Nagle Prize in Class I. for General Proficiency. The Oldham good conduct medals were awarded to Jane Crymble (silver medal) and Henrietta Richards (bronze ditto). But the extraordinary event of the past twelve months is unquestionably the installation of H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught as Great Prior of the Order of the Temple in Ireland. This auspicious event took place on the 28th January, in the presence of a numerous and brilliant gathering of Sir Knights, among whom were Viscount Powerscourt Great Constable of the Order, Lord Dunboyne Grand Master's Standard Bearer, the Earl of Huntingdon Great Prior's ditto, Lord Ed. P. Clinton, Sir David Roche, Bart., &c. Lord Skelmersdale Great Prior of England had been deputed by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales Grand Master to be present and instal the Duke, but was unable to be present, and Captain Huband acted for him. The scene when the Knights were assembled in the Grand Lodge Room in all their gorgeous panoply, and just before the entrance of His Royal Highness was grand and impressive in the extreme. On entering, the Duke was received by Captain Huband, Acting Great Prior, and conducted to the robing room. A Great Priory of the Order was then opened in the Prince Masons' Chapter Room, whither the Duke was conducted by Viscount Powerscourt Grand Constable, and in due course followed the ceremony of obligation, which took place in the Priory Chapel, and the installation, which was held in the Grand Lodge Room. His Royal Highness was then proclaimed, and as his first official act, appointed Captain Huband Acting Great Prior. The Grand Officers, and subsequently the Sir Knights passed by the foot of the throne, and saluted the Great Prior, and the latter having resumed their places, the procession of Grand Officers was re-formed, and having conducted His Royal Highness to the throne in the chapel, the latter ordered the Great Priory to be closed. And so ended the most memorable day that has yet been known in the history of Irish Templar Masonry. The one subject of regret that is associated with this meeting is that Captain Huband, who played so distinguished a part on the occasion, and had the honour of installing His Royal Highness, has since died. Captain Huband was one of the most distinguished of our Irish brethren. He sat on the Board of General Purposes, as representative of Lodge No. 12 Dublin in Craft, and as that of Chapter No. 12 in Arch Freemasonry. He was Grand Standard Bearer of the Grand Chapter of Prince Masons of Ireland, and a Past Sovereign of the Original Chapter, as well as of Chapter 10, and had taken the thirty-first degree in the Ancient and Accepted Rite, Ireland, so that by his death Irish Freemasonry has to lament a very serious loss, and one that it will not be so easy to replace. There is yet another member of the Fraternity—Judge Keogh—whose death, especially from the cause which led to it, must not be passed in silence. We do not know that he took a prominent part in the doings of our Society, but he was one of the ablest of the Irish judicial bench, and was remarkable for the intrepid impartiality with which he administered the law, an impartiality which, albeit he was a Roman Catholic himself, brought down upon him the hatred of the Romish priesthood. This it was that had so disastrous an effect on his mental powers, that he was of necessity placed under restraint at times. However, he has gone from among us, and his place in the Lodge knows him no more.

If we turn to Scotland we shall find the page of Masonic history which has been written during the last year is not entirely unblotted. There is cause for satisfaction, seeing that Grand Lodge is slowly but surely setting its house in order, and after the state of chaos it was in till recently, this is indeed a subject for congratulation. But it is very far from being all plain sailing, and more than one unpleasant dispute has taken place during the year now ending. We will first of all note the condition of the Craft as regards the number of its Lodges. Last year we noted, without, however, under the circumstances, vouching for the accuracy of our figures, that there were 482 Lodges in working order, the highest on the roll being No. 609. Our Grand Lodge Calendar shows that the highest now is 627, and consequently eighteen new Lodges have been added to the list of those holding under the Grand Lodge of Scotland; so that the total now in active work is exactly 500 Lodges. Four of the new ones are located at home, and the remaining fourteen abroad, namely, four in New Zealand, three in New South Wales, one in Chili, one in China, one in Jamaica, one in South Australia, and two in Montreal. Of these last two we shall have occasion to speak presently. The most notable personal changes in the governing body of the Craft include the substitution of the Earl of Mar and Kellie as Depute Grand Master for Bro. Henry Inglis, of Torsonce, and that of the Hon. Macintosh Balfour as Grand Master of Scottish Freemasonry for all India in place of Captain Henry Morland, resigned. Their Royal Highnesses the Duke of Connaught and Prince Leopold have had the compliment paid them of being enrolled among the honorary members of Grand Lodge, while one such member, in the person of the late ex-King George V. of Hanover, has been removed from those enrolled. A further loss has been sustained through the death of the Right Hon. Lord Kinnaird and Rossie, of Rossie Priory, who was Grand Master Mason of Scotland, during the years 1830-1, and filled the office of Provincial Grand Master of Perthshire East at the time of his death. It was principally by his exertions that Freemasonry had made such considerable progress in the Province he presided over, and two years had not elapsed at the time of his death—which occurred on the 7th of January—since he had, in right princely fashion, entertained a number of his Perthshire brethren. He was in his 71st year, and at the time of this writing, a successor to him in the Masonic government of Perthshire East had not been found. These are among the capital changes which are worthy of note, and one of them—the appointment of the Earl of Mar and Kellie in place of Bro. Inglis needs a word or two further. Sir M. R. Shaw-Stewart, Bart., having already filled the chair of G. Lodge for over the biennial term, which is chiefly the rule in Scotland, has nevertheless been invited, and, what is more to the point, consented to remain another year in office, in order that the changes which have been made under what may be called the new administrative régime, and in which he has taken so deep an interest, may be brought more nearly into working order. However, the scheme for retaining the Most Worshipful Brother in his place for a further term does not appear to have met with universal approbation. It was proposed to nominate Bro. Inglis, but he declined, though the requisition was signed by some 500 members of Grand Lodge. It was afterwards not very satisfactorily discussed in the newspapers, and there was no small amount of somewhat unfraternal feeling exhibited. However, let us hope that all will be well, and that Scotland will have no reason to regret having entered on a new path armed with a particularly new broom, which is meant to sweep it clean of all abuses. Indeed, it was shown at the Quarterly Communication on 4th February that the income of Grand Lodge for quarter to 21st December previous had exceeded the expenditure by £940. At the meeting of Grand Lodge on the 4th November, statements equally satisfactory, were made as to the condition of the finances. The relations hitherto existing with the Grand Orient have been determined for the same reason that Ireland has discontinued intercourse with that Grand Body, and which has induced our Grand Lodge to lay down special regulations for the admission of foreign visiting brethren. Another event, which we had no time to include in our sketch of last year, seeing that it happened on the 21st December, and the number containing it was published on the 22nd, may appropriately be recorded now, especially as it is a testimony to the worth of a very prominent Mason of Ayrshire—no less, in fact, than its Prov. Grand Secretary, as well as Secretary to Mother Kilwinning, who in the early part of last year, had been a candidate for the vacant Grand Secretaryship. The gift consisted of an epergne, with a purse of 250 sovereigns, and a gold watch, chain, and brooch for Mrs. Wylie, and was presented to Bro. Wylie at a dinner presided over by R.W. Bro. Cochran-Patrick, of Burnside, and suitably acknowledged in the warmest terms by the recipient. A more important, because an essentially national, and at the same time, Masonic event, took place in the town of Kilmarnock, with which will always be associated the name of the great poet, Brother Robert Burns, as the place where the first edition of his work was printed, and where the only full collection of all the editions is to be met with. It was in the month of January 1877, that the idea of erecting some bust or statue to his memory arose, and the attempt to raise the necessary funds was so successful, and so greatly beyond the highest anticipations that had been formed, that it was resolved upon erecting a gothic monument, having two storeys and a tower, the entire height being seventy-five feet. The basement is intended for habitation and offices. Above this are to be a platform and balcony, in which is to be an alcove fifteen feet high, for the reception of a full length statue of the poet. Behind this is a room to be used as a museum of relics connected with him, and above this, and reached by a flight of steps, a balustrade meant to form a promenade. On the 14th September, the first stone of the monument was laid, with Masonic ceremonial, by R. W. Cochran-Patrick, Deputy Prov. Grand Master for Ayrshire, there being about 2,000 brethren present, while the trades and other companies doubled the number in the procession, and there were quite 10,000 in the park where the monument is to be erected. Both the poet's Lodges, his Mother Lodge, St. David's of Tarbolton, and St. James Kilwinning of the same place, were represented. The ceremony having been ably carried out, the procession reformed and dispersed, and in due time the monument will be completed and formally inaugurated. On the 12th of the same month, the annual meeting of the Grand Imperial Council of Scotland of the Red Cross of Constantine, of which Col. Francis Burdett is the Most Ill. Grand Sovereign, was held in Freemasons' Hall, Edinburgh. Col. Burdett presided in person, and several were admitted members of the Order, the whole proceedings concluding with a banquet. It is worthy of record that this Grand Imperial Council only came into existence in the autumn of 1876, when a deputation, including the late Ill. Bro. R. Wentworth Little and other distinguished Knights of the Order, visited Edinburgh, by command of the Supreme Grand Council of England, for the purpose of constituting this Grand Imperial Council. There were then six conclaves, and the number has since increased to nine, so there is every prospect of the Order establishing itself still more firmly north of the Tweed. We note, likewise, that a High Council of Soc. Rosic. in Scotiâ has been formed, C. F. Matier 9° being the Supreme Magus, and Lord Inverurie 9° Sen. Sub. Magus, and Harry G. D. Copland 9° Jun. Sub. Magus. At the time the High Council met—which was in January—the Metropolitan College, which had been in abeyance for some time, was reconstituted, the Hon. F. J. Moncrieff 8° being elected and installed Primus Adeptus. We have already noted the severance of fraternal relations between this Grand Lodge and the French Grand Orient, and we must add that a breach also exists between this Grand Lodge and the Grand Lodge of Quebec, which, to all appearances, is becoming more serious. This is not the place in which to discuss the merits of the difference. Let it suffice if we point out that the latter not being situated like the Grand Lodges of the United Kingdom, cannot compel Lodges which have never acknowledged her sovereignty to quit the jurisdictions to which they have always belonged, and with which they are desirous of remaining connected, while we think the Grand Lodge of Scotland would have done wisely had it made the recognition of the Grand Lodge of Quebec as a separate and independent body conditional on the Lodges which preferred remaining under the banner of Scotland being left unmolested. There seems also to be another little quarrel between the Grand Lodge of Scotland and the Grand Lodge of Scottish Freemasonry for all India, but to this we shall briefly refer when we come to India itself, for it is time that we quitted the old country and began our sketch of Freemasonry as it is in the Colonies, at least to the extent of those Lodges which hold under one or other of the three home Grand Lodges. Those which are independent, like those of Canada, Nova Scotia, &c., &c., will be dealt with separately. Before doing so we must draw attention to the visit paid by the Grand Master Mason of Scotland and his Grand Officers to the "Journeymen" Lodge, No. 8, of Edinburgh. Bro. H. Munro, R.W. Master, presided, and quite two hundred members of the Lodge were present. The Masters of several daughter Lodges were likewise present, and in the course of the evening Bro. Kerr read a highly interesting account of the History of the Lodge, which was established as far back as 1707, and owed its existence to the secession of a number of operative Fellow Crafts from St. Mary's Chapel, who formed a Lodge of their own. Bro. Kerr noted carefully the vicissitudes of the Lodge, which is still operative, and was warmly thanked for his address.

In treating of the Craft in the Colonies and Dependencies of the Crown, we must, as last year, note the three jurisdictions together so far as possible. We may say there are in all about 435 English, over 160 Scotch, and over 70 Irish, and the bulk of them will be found in the East Indies, Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa. Thus in India, we have some 33 in Bengal, 19 in Bombay, 9 in British Burmah, 15 in Madras, and in the Punjab 18. In China (now in two Provinces) and Japan there are thirteen Lodges. In South Africa there are no less than forty-one in different Districts or not ranged under any. But it is in the Australasian Colonies that we find the largest number of Lodges of the three Constitutions, England naturally taking the lead, and then Scotland and Ireland following in their order as given. One thing is eminently satisfactory, and that is, that the Lodges of the three systems work most harmoniously together, and save here and there, are on the most friendly terms with their mother Grand Lodges. The Victoria in Burmah Lodge, No. 832, does not seem to have been a model either of excellence or obedience, having, in fact, distinguished itself by a marvellous exhibition of discord on the one hand, and an utter disregard for the behests of Grand Lodge, which, as we have more than once pointed out, merits, and will, sooner or later, bring down upon it condign punishment. India has also been the scene of a difference under the Scottish Constitution, but, so far as we are able to judge, the fault does not rest with the Scoto-Indian authorities, so much as it does with the Grand Lodge of Scotland. That Bro. Balfour succeeded to the position of Grand Master of all Scottish Freemasonry in India, vacated by Bro. Captain Morland, and not that of a more Provincial Grand Master—appears to be indisputable. Yet the Secretary of the Scottish Grand Lodge has, to all intents and purposes, declined to recognise Bro. Balfour's true position—by whose authorisation we are unable to state. The question seems to us to lie in a nutshell. Is it to the interest of Scottish Freemasonry in India that there should be a man of higher status than that of an ordinary Provincial Grand Master? This appears to be the belief of the authorities at home, seeing that Dr. Burnes, Captain Morland, and Bro. Balfour have in turn been appointed to such a post.' That being so, it is only in due course that the chief of Scottish Freemasonry in India should be recognised as one of more than ordinarily exalted rank, or, to put matter more plainly, he should be treated as he deserves to be, and not as others may think him worthy We think it unfortunate any difference of such a kind should have arisen, and we hope that Bro. Balfour will be treated broadly and liberally, seeing that his responsibilities are of no ordinary character. There is little we need add to our review of Freemasonry in the Colonies. With the few solitary exceptions we have alluded to, there has been little, if anything, to disturb the even tenor of its way. There is some talk, it is true, of a new and Independent Grand Lodge of New South Wales, but our opinion is, that nothing of moment will come of it. The time may arrive when Australia is so thickly populated, that a separate and independent Grand Lodge may be desirable. But the bond of union between the Colonies and the Mother Country is too strong for any severance to meet with much favour just now and for some time to come. It is very possible the idea has originated with a few ambitious spirits, who are desirous of making a greater display or, at all events, of not hiding their light under a bushel. However, whatever may be in store for us in the future, we can never do otherwise than expressour hearty good wishes to all our Colonial brethren of the three jurisdictions. Whether they remain as they are now, or consolidate themselves into an independent body, we shall find them always the same kind and considerate brethren, and shall extend to them that hospitality which fellow Masons have a right to expect. We have now closed our review of the Craft in the United Kingdom and its Dependencies. We can say with just pride, that everything has prospered fairly well during the year, which, as far as we are concerned, closes this day. We have not concealed from our readers that the results of the year have not been altogether as favourable as might have been wished, but, at the same time we have shown that there is for this defect a fair and reasonable apology, and that, on the contrary, instead of too seriously deploring what we have not gained, there is some slight reason to be gratified that matters have gone so well. However, we will not stop to repeat propositions we have already uttered, or to express hopes or fears which may never be realised. We are, on the whole, and not without reason, satisfied with what has befallen at home; let us now look abroad, and see what has happened in other countries.

France, as our nearest neighbour, claims priority of attention. According to the Calendrier Maçonnique of the Grand Orient in July, there are 306 Lodges and other Masonic bodies in the country, a total differing to the extent of one from the return of last year, when it was 307. The details of these 306, when compared with those of 1877, give the following results, namely, 261 Lodges, 30 Chapters, 13 Councils, 1 Consistory, and 1 Gr. College of Rites against 258 Lodges, 33 Chapters, 14 Councils, 1 Consistory, and 1 Gr. College of Rites. As to the distribution of existing bodies, there are in Paris 47 Lodges, 4 Chapters, 2 Councils, and the College of Rites; in the Department of the Seine 9 Lodges; in other Departments 167 Lodges, 14 Chapters, and 6 Councils; in Algeria 8 Lodges, 2 Chapters, and 1 Council; in the Colonies 8 Lodges, 3 Chapters, and 1 Council; in foreign countries 22 Lodges, 7 Chapters, 3 Councils, 1 Consistory. Of these last there are 2 Lodges in Spain; a Lodge, Chapter, and Consistory at Leghorn; 5 Lodges and 2 Chapters in Roumania; 3 Lodges and a Chapter at Constantinople; 2 Lodges at Alexandria, in Egypt; 2 Lodges, 2 Chapters, and a Council in the Mauritius; and a Lodge, Chapter, and Council at Monte Video, the remaining few being at Corfu, Geneva, Beyrout, &c., &c., &c. As to the Supreme Council, in which is vested the government of the Order, the Officers are the same as last year, namely, Bro. De Saint Jean President; Bros. Cousin and Caubet Vice Presidents; Bros. Poulle and De Hérédia Secretaries; Bro. Barré Librarian and Keeper of the Archives, and Bro. Cammas, President of what we call the Lodge of Benevolence and Keeper of the Seals. The Council itself is composed of the same members as before, except that Bro. Thulié is now a member, and Bro. Andriaux, for whom among the successful candidates, the smallest number of votes was given, replaces Bro. Collineau, whose term of retirement would have been in the year 1880. Among the losses which have befallen the Order must be mentioned Bro. Richard, Venerable of the Lodge La Constance Eprouvée of Rouen, the noted financier; Bro. F. V. Rasparil, Venerable of the Lodge Les Amis de la Vérité, eminent both as a scientific and literary man and as a politician; Bro. Tajan-Rogé, and others of less conspicuous fame. Among the events which have occurred during the year must be mentioned the celebration of the centenaries of Voltaire and J. J. Rousseau, and that of the Lodge Union et Persévérance of the Orient of Paris, founded on 15th January 1768, under the title of Union Parfaite de la Persévérance. As we noticed at the time, having regard to the probable visit of foreign Freemasons to Paris, the Grand Orient placed a part of its hotel at their service, giving them at the same time every facility for correspondence, and receiving them with fraternal kindness. We drew attention also to the annual assembly of the Grand Orient, which was held as usual in the month of September, the actual session lasting from the 11th to the 16th—both inclusive—of that month. We may as well, however, again draw attention to the principal event of that meeting, which was the passing of a resolution to the effect that the Grand Orient was resolved on not constituting Lodges in those counties where a Grand Lodge or Orient was already established, and in friendly relations with itself, by which we presume is meant that the Grand Orient reserves to itself the right of constituting Lodges in countries where Grand Lodges already exist which are not on friendly terms with it. In such case we may expect to find French Lodges in London, which, as far as we are concerned, would of necessity be irregular and therefore not recognisable by us. Another resolution, having reference to the revision of the ritual consequent on the constitutional change made the year previous, at one time threatened to deprive the Council of the Order of its President. Indeed Bro. de Saint Jean, when a motion on the subject was carried in opposition to his views, rose, and having removed the insignia of his rank, retired from the Assembly. But he had no sooner done so than a Committee was appointed to wait on him at his residence, and press him to resume his post; and the day following Bro. de Saint Jean entered amid the heartiest plaudits, and again took upon himself the Presidency of the Assembly. We should certainly have regretted the circumstance had this respected brother thought fit to decline the request of the Committee, and we congratulate our French brethren at still having for the chief of their Council one who has so ably presided over it for the last six years. None can have read his addresses on various occasions, and especially that delivered at the distribution in August of this year of the prizes awarded to the pupils who attend the G.Or. courses of study, and to brethren and Lodges which have distinguished themselves during the year, without forming the opinion that a worthier President could not be found than Bro. de Saint Jean. One other event is noteworthy—the Masonic Fête which was held in the Palace of the Trocadéro, under the auspices of the Supreme Council for France of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, MM. Cremieux, who presided, Emmanuel Arago, and Jules Simon, and our own Bro. J. M. P. Montagu Grand Chancellor of the Supreme Council of the same Rite in England, being present and taking part in the proceedings, which, as may be imagined, were of a highly interesting character, and terminated with a grand banquet, at which Bro. Jules Simon occupied the chair. Be it added that the finances of the Grand Orient are in a satisfactory condition, and that its disbursements in aid of distressed persons and orphans are very considerable, showing that, however French Freemasonry may differ from Anglo-Saxon, it does not allow its peculiar ideas to, in the slightest degree, interfere with the practical duties of Freemasonry.

As regards Freemasonry in other parts of the Continent of Europe we have but few remarks to offer. Successful attempts have been made in Italy to strengthen the position of the Grand Orient, and to terminate the schism which for some time has kept some of the Palermitan and other Southern brethren aloof. But little news reaches us from Germany, where, however, we have every reason to believe that the Royal Art is studied with much assiduity and success. The same may be said of Dutch, Swedish, and Danish Freemasonry, and, indeed, of the whole Craft in the Eastern hemisphere. One item of news, however, must be given. In July the Grand Lodge of Greece met at Athens. H.I.M. Prince Rhodocanakis, who has been re-elected Grand Master for a further period of three years (1878-81), was duly installed in his office, after which he appointed his Grand Officers. Grand Lodge having been closed, the brethren adjourned to banquet. This was followed by a Grand ball, at which their Majesties the King and Queen of Greece and his Imperial Highness the Grand Master were present.

If we turn now to the Western Hemisphere we shall have every reason to congratulate ourselves on the condition of the Craft. We will first visit British North America, wherein are several Independent Grand Lodges, such as those of Canada, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Quebec, and British Columbia. Taking Canada first in order we find it has under its banner about 350 Lodges, a very considerable number if we have regard to the comparative thinness of the population, and to the fact of its having enjoyed a separate and independent existence for only three-and-twenty years. The Annual Communication of this Grand Lodge was held in Shaftesbury Hall, Toronto, on the 11th and 12th of September, Bro. W. H. Weller, Grand Master, who presided, being well supported by his Grand Officers and the representatives of Lodges. Bro. Weller, in the course of his address, reviewed the events of the year, mentioning the different special Communications, ten in number, which had been held, and at which he or one of his Grand or District Grand Officers had presided. He enumerated the eight Lodges for which dispensations had been issued, and gave a highly flattering account of the financial condition of Grand Lodge, the balance at the close of the year 1877 having been over 58,876 dollars, and the receipts during the half-year over 7,654 dollars, while the expenditure during the same period was close on 6,437 dollars, so that on 30th June, there stood to the credit of Grand Lodge no less than, in round figures, 60,094 dollars, of which over 55,048 dollars are invested in Government Stock, and 5,045 dollars at the Canadian Bank of Commerce. Bro. Weller was re-elected Grand Master and the following are his principal Officers:—Bros. J. A. Henderson Dep. Grand Master, B. Saunders Grand Senior Warden, T. H. Tracy Grand Junior Warden, Rev. C. W. Patterson G. Chap., E. Mitchell G. Treas., W. Lawson G. Registrar, and J. J. Mason G. Secretary. Nor is Royal Arch Masonry in a less prosperous state in the Dominion. Grand Chapter held its twenty-first regular Convocation, on the 14th August, when the M.E.Z. Comp. F. J. Menet presided, and delivered a most eloquent address, in which he reviewed the events of the past year, and the relations which existed between the Grand Chapter of Canada and other Grand R.A. Chapters. Comp. Menet likewise mentioned, among other things that he had granted dispensations for four new Chapters, that in accordance with the wishes of Grand Chapter a testimonial, consisting of a service of plate, had been presented to Comp. L. H. Henderson, Past Grand Z., in recognition of his services to R.A. Freemasonry, and that Comp. Daniel Sprey, who for the past two years had filled the office of Grand Scribe E., with so much credit to himself and such advantage to Grand Chapter, found himself unable to continue the exercise of his official duties. On the 11th October, the annual assembly of the Grand Priory of Canada was held in the Masonic Chambers. Colonel H. J. B. MacLeod Moore, Great Prior, presided in person, and delivered a lengthy and highly interesting address, after which he appointed and invested his Officers for the year. Of the many Masonic excursions, picnics, &c., &c., of which we read in the pages of that excellent contemporary of ours, the Craftsman, nothing need here be said. They are a pleasing feature, but of ephemeral and purely local interest. There is this in them, however, that they show there is a sound and healthy tone in Freemasonry, when we read of such parties of unostentatious pleasure being organised.

Next in prominence, if not in influence, is the Grand Lodge of Quebec, whose relations with our Masonic bodies, do not seem to partake of that harmony which is so desirable in the Craft. We have already alluded to the quarrel between it and the Grand Lodge of Scotland. Both appear to be in fault, so that it is very much like what is commonly described as "six of one and half a dozen of the other." G. Lodge of Scotland should have made its recognition conditional on the Grand Lodge of Quebec not in any way interfering with the Lodge in Montreal, which preferred remaining under the banner of Scotland, to joining the G. Lodge of Quebec. This we regard as error No. 1. Error No. 2, is the retaliatory measures which G. Lodge has thought fit to adopt by granting warrants for two new Lodges in Montreal, that is, within the jurisdiction of the G. Lodge of Quebec. Not, perhaps, but the former if it has cancelled its recognition of the latter, may not be within the limits of its strick rights, but such a course could have but one result, that of embittering the dispute. On the other hand, it was a most harsh and absolutely unmasonic proceeding, to speak of compelling the Lodges which preferred retaining their allegiance to the Grand Lodges of Scotland and England to join the G. Lodge of Quebec within a certain time, whether they liked it or not; indeed, in the case of the English Lodges, any such attempt to do so was a flagrant violation of the conditions on which England recognised the independence of Grand Lodge of Quebec. It is not as if Quebec were a sovereign and independent State in the sense that New York or Virginia is, for Quebec is but a part of the Dominion of Canada, which, in its turn, is part of the British Empire. Therefore, the old rule by which the Grand Lodges of England, Ireland, and Scotland constituted new Lodges in the colonies and dependencies of the British Crown did apply formerly to Quebec, and might be considered to apply still if Quebec were not recognised as a separate and independent body. It is a nice point, on which a great deal might be said, whether Scotland having once recognised Quebec can withdraw or cancel its recogni tion, especially as, unlike the G. Lodge of England, such recognition was unconditional. But after all these differences are miserable exhibitions of petulance, which are unworthy of men, much less of men who are professedly so happy and contented with all things and persons as are "ye Free and Accepted Masons." The proposed application by Grand Lodge of Quebec of Masonic force to Lodges, which are fully entitled to retain the old love, if they prefer constancy to the inconstancy of gadding about after a new love is merely an attempt to enhance the importance of a body which derives any importance it may have, firstly from Canada, from which it has seceded, and then through Canada, from the Grand Lodge of the Mother country. However, the question does not immediately concern us, and in fact we have devoted more space to it than we intended to have done; so, in conclusion, we may remark that if Scotland and Quebec prefer having a shindy to living in harmony together, they must e'en do as they list We shall only add to the imbroglio if we say more. Let us now give a few particulars of this jurisdiction. The Grand Lodge of Quebec held its Annual Communication in Montreal on the 25th September. Bro. M. Tait presided, and the address he delivered, it is needless to say was almost wholly occupied with this difference with Scotland. After this, the Grand Officers for the year were elected, and among them the following are the principal:—Bros. C. Judge Dep. G. Master, Arthur F. Simpson Grand Senior and C. M. Church G. Junior Warden, Rev. Bro. Scringer Grand Chaplain, T. H. Stearns Grand Treasurer, E. E. Spencer G. Registrar, and J. H. Isaacson Grand Secretary. The same day, and in the same city, was held the second annual Convocation of the Grand Chapter, Comp. J. H. Graham, LL.D., Grand Z., presiding. All the Chapters on the roll—as yet only eight in number—were represented, and the address of Grand Z. was very satisfactory, the chief items of interest being that this young Chapter had already been recognised by thirty-six sister Grand Chapters, the address to the Prince of Wales, and the recommendation to recognise the Mark Grand Lodge of England and Wales, &c., &c., which recommendation was subsequently endorsed by G. Chapter. The principal Officers for the present year are Comps. John St. Graham Grand Z, Isaac H. Stearns Grand H., Frank Edgar Grand J., James T. McMinn Grand Scribe E., Albert D. Nelson Grand Treasurer, and M. McCarthy Grand Registrar.

The Grand Lodge of New Brunswick was held in the city of St. John on the 25th and 26th September, Bro. Robert T. Clinch, Grand Master in the Chair. Bro. Clinch's address was of considerable length, and he referred with satisfaction to the imposing ceremony in which the Grand Lodge had taken so prominent a part in the month of July, when the corner-stone of the new City Hall, St. John's, was laid by him according to the ancient forms and usages of Masonry. The financial condition of this Grand Lodge appears to be highly satisfactory, the receipts with balance brought forward from last year being close on 3,550 dollars, the expenditure a little over 2,159 dollars, and the balance to credit at the close of the account in round figures 1,390 dollars. The assets are set down as being nearly 3,966 dollars. The principal Officers for the current year are Bro. Robert Marshall Grand Master, Benjamin R. Stevenson Dep. G. Master, Rev. Francis Partridge G. Sen., and Charles N. Scott G. Junior Warden Rev. Donald Macrea Grand Chaplain, James McNichol Grand Treasurer, and William F. Bunting Grand Secretary. The Grand Lodge of Nova Scotia held its Annual Communication at Freemasons' Hall, Halifax, on the 5th of June. Colonel J. Wimburn Laurie is Grand Master and Bro. Benjamin Curzen Grand Secretary. The more remote Grand Lodge of British Columbia, with its modest Roll of nine Lodges and some 300 members, must have had a most pleasurable excitement on the 22nd of April, a day which will be ever memorable in the annals of British Columbian Freemasonry. The event was nothing less than laying the foundation-stone of a new Masonic Hall in Victoria, the capital of the Colony. Quite 150 members took part in the ceremony, and the brethren marched in procession to the site of the new Hall, preceded by Haynes' Band. Bro. Teague, the architect, having submitted the plans, Bro. Trounce having, on behalf of the fraternity, presented the Grand Master with a beautiful silver trowel, and Bro. Rev. H. H. Mogg, Grand Chaplain, having offered up a prayer, the Grand Master laid the stone Masonically. The Grand Master of this Grand Lodge is, according to a correspondent of the Canadian Craftsman, Bro. Eli Harrison sen., Bro. W. F. Williams being the Past Grand Master and Bro. C. M. Chambers Grand Secretary. It is high time, however, that we crossed the border line into the United States, that we may briefly consider the state of Freemasonry among our American brethren. In respect of numerical strength, we think we are right in stating that there are about the same number—rather under than over—of subscribing Masons this year than in 1877. Bro. Drummond is our authority, and he gives the return at, in round figures, 600,000. But after all, the numerical question is a matter of little moment. Freemasonry will never rest its claims to public respect on this question. Indeed, we are inclined to believe that in all countries the Craft has grown to be more common than it should be by reason of this very increase in numbers. So we think at least in the old country, and doubtless the same holds good elsewhere. We do not, therefore, regard the announcement that there are 600,000 American Masons, as evidencing that the Craft is especially strong in the States. We judge of its merits by the solid substantial character of the work of which we read in the American Masonic papers and Magazines which reach us from time to time. For instance, if we take up a number of the Keystone, the Voice, the Review, the Jewel, the Repository, the Advocate, the Corner-stone, or any other of our exchanges, we are certain to find some satisfactory evidence that Freemasonry is working on steadily with but little outward display, but in a manner which shows that the brethren are earnest in all their undertakings, and sincerely anxious for the welfare of the Craft. The processions on occasions of unusual interest may or may not impress the outside world with the worth of Freemasonry, but however this may be, we know things are flourishing when we find the Grand and subordinate Lodge meetings are well attended, the work well done, and every care taken—as a rule, that is to say—to carry out the principles of Freemasonry in their integrity. No doubt our American readers will pardon us if we find sundry formidable obstacles in the shape of considerations of time and space to giving a complete sketch of the doings of the forty and odd Grand Lodges in the United States. We read about them with pleasure. We hear much of New York, of Pennsylvania, of Virginia, Massachusetts, Columbia (District of), Rhode Island, Illinois, &c., &c., and what we hear is always a source of satisfaction. But during the year that is now coming to an end, there have been few unusual events occur. The Centenary of a Grand Lodge, even in a country which can boast of so many Grand Lodges as the States, does not come every year. The centenary celebration of the Grand Lodge of Virginia was due in the month of October, but thus far we know not if there has been anything more than the formal reference which was made to it last year in the Grand Master's annual address, with which reference he coupled the suggestion that something should be done to mark so important an anniversary. We do know, however, that in all the Grand Lodges of which we have read accounts—and that means nearly all of those existing in the United States—the addresses of the Grand Masters have been, taking them altogether, eminently satisfactory. We know, also, that a Grand Lodge of the Royal Order of Scotland, with Bro. Pike as Grand Master, has been established at Washington, for the purpose of enabling American brethren to become acquainted with the principles of this interesting degree. We know, also, that Templar, Arch, and Cryptic Masonry, as well as the Ancient and High Accepted Rite, are all in a flourishing state, and, alas! that we should have to record it, we know that many eminent Masons have passed away to that country from whose bourne no traveller returns. If then we find a difficulty in saying more than we have said of living American Masonic celebrities, we can at least find space enough to express our deep sorrow and sympathy for some of those brighter luminaries of the American States, whose light has been extinguished for all time. How could we possibly forgive ourselves if, for instance, we allowed this summary to close without a reference to Bro. A. J. Wheeler, Past Grand Master of Tennessee, and editor and publisher of the Masonic Jewel of Memphis in that State. During the recent visitation of that terrible scourge of the southern parts of North America, the yellow fever, Bro. Wheeler remained at his post, and as Secretary to the Masonic Board of Relief was enabled to do much good for others. But this, alas! he did at the sacrifice of his own life. It must be some satisfaction to his family and friends, who so deeply mourn his loss, that he died at the post of duty from disease contracted in the performance of that duty. Let us hope that the monument he had erected to himself during these eight years past—the Masonic Jewel—may still live to be a perpetual memorial to his worth. To his family and to his brother Masons we offer our tribute of respectful sympathy. Nor must we omit mention of the Rev. Chas. Titus, Recording G. Sec. of Massachusetts, who died only a short time since, after a somewhat long and painful illness. He had been necessarily absent from the post of duty at the latest Communications of his Grand Lodge, but it did not occur to us that his absence was more than temporary. However, he, too, has passed away, and his Grand Lodge has done what in it lay to show its gratitude for his valuable services by interring him with Masonic funeral rites. But he is not the only distinguished member whose loss the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts has had reason to deplore. Bro. Isaiah Thomas, Past Grand Master, Bro. John M'Clellan are both gone, and these equally with Bro. Titus were honoured by Grand Lodge with Masonic funerals. The same Grand Lodge, too, buried Bro. Hon. F. Welch, Past Grand Master of Nebraska and a member of Congress, while New York has had to deplore the loss of Sir Knight Orrin Welch, Past Grand Commander of Knights Templar of that State, and Grand Warder of the Grand Encampment of the United States, and that of M.E. Past Grand High Priest Comp. Ezra S. Barnum, and Indiana is still mourning the death of Past Grand Master Hazelrigg. These are among the most distinguished of American brethren, deceased during this year; in all cases we offer the expression of our sympathy with their families and friends.

A few words remain to be said on the subject of Masonic literature. We have already enumerated the chief American Masonic periodicals, and it will suffice if we say that one and all of them retain those admirable characteristics which have so favourably impressed us. The second part of the Proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania has made its somewhat tardy appearance this year, and is in course of being reviewed at the present time. We have said that, considering the miserable support accorded to the first number by the brethren of Pennsylvania, we are surprised it should have been published at all. Great credit is due therefore, to the Library Committee of that G. Lodge for having pursued their task under circumstances so discouraging. Our contemporary Le Monde Maçonnique now in the twentieth year of its existence, is a model of careful writing, and though we are compelled to differ on sundry essential points, we are sensible of its many and great merits, and congratulate it on its evidently prosperous state. At home, we can point to another Masonic Cyclopædia, edited by our Rev. Bro. A. F. A. Woodford, which does great credit to his assiduity, diligence, and ability, and a work is now in the press, and will be published shortly, the subject being "The Four Old Lodges," and treated with eminent ability and judgment by the author, Bro. R. F. Gould, P.M. Moira, No. 92. It is a revised and enlarged edition of the series of papers on the subject which have appeared in our columns. The work of publishing the Ancient Warrants has been interrupted by Bro. Constable's absence from England, but as soon as time will permit, that zealous brother will resume his labours. For ourselves, of whom we reserve our notice till the last, we have no reason to complain of the increased support we have received during the past year. On the contrary, we are very grateful for such additional support, and it will be a pleasure as well as a duty for us to throw increased energy and, if possible, increased ability into the work we have been engaged upon for now four complete years. At the same time we think it only just to ourselves to point out that brethren should do what they can to help us in what is truly a labour of love. We have made many and great personal sacrifices, not of time and labour only, but likewise of money, in order to keep up the standard of our reputation. We must leave it to others to say whether or not we have succeeded. If we may accept the great increase which has occurred in the number of friends and supporters as a proof in either direction, we must perforce incline to the belief that our efforts have been appreciated. Still we might do better if our field of operations were enlarged, and hence our appeal to brethren to co-operate with us in confirming our position as a recognised organ of Masonic opinion. We do not claim to be exclusively the representative of Craft interests, but we shall steadily pursue our labours, and it shall not be our fault if the FREEMASON'S CHRONICLE does not retain an honoured place in the foremost ranks of Masonic literature. We shall cheerfully continue our sacrifices, and let the brethren help us to make them as light as possible. With these words we make our bow and exit, till we reappear again before our readers with the insignia of Vol. IX. imprinted on our pages. Vivite et valete!
