EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

[It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.]

A.D. 1928.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

"Jehovah reigneth, he is clothed with majesty: Jehovah is clothed with strength, wherewith he hath girded himself: the world also is stablished, that it cannot be moved.

"Thy throne is established of old; thou art from everlasting.

"The floods" (peoples) "have lifted up, O Jehovah, the floods have lifted up their voice: the floods" (peoples) "lift up their waves.

"Jehovah on high is mightier than the noise of many waters, yea, than the mighty waves of the sea.

"Thy testimonies are very sure: holiness becometh thine house, O Jehovah, for ever."—Ps. xciii.

It is well to remember that the Lord Jehovah reigneth in very deed, as we go out of the sheltered waters of the year 1927 into the great waters of the year 1928. Last autumn the writer sailed pleasantly from Friday to Sunday afternoon down the sheltered waters of the St. Lawrence in one of the C.P.R.'s comfortable boats. Then suddenly we passed out into the open waters of the Atlantic, and into heavy seas and storm. Perhaps it will be so this year in national and international affairs.

Three facts are stated in the Psalm we have quoted. The first is the unshakable fact Jehovah Reigneth. In this fact we may rest with all assurance.

The second is the fact that the peoples symbolised by "the floods" are lifting up their voice at this time as never before. The turmoil of the shoutings and roarings of the peoples fill the earth with tumult.

The third fact is that we have the sure guidance of the Testimonies of the Lord, which are very sure.

The fourth fact is that "Holiness becometh thine house, O Jehovah, for ever." Now who constitute the House of the Lord? Most certainly Israel. Thus the statement is that Holiness, or utter devotion to the King and the Kingdom of God becometh Israel now and ever.

Here then is our Guide, and our keynote, for the beginning of this year, so pregnant with great events.

What shall be the first step for us all in this great year? Let it be the renewal of our Covenant with the Lord. In the last issue we caused to be printed in The National Message and Banner the beautiful renewal of the Covenant Service which was prepared and given to the British and American Christian world by John Wesley. In the Book of Common Prayer there is the simple Confirmation Service, which is also beautiful. We urge that all of us who are bound together in the study of the Gospel of the Kingdom shall take the opportunity, alone or together, to renew our Covenant with our Covenant-keeping God.

It will be seen that the renewal of the Covenant, so prepared by John Wesley, is based at every step upon the Covenant made with the fathers Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and the further Covenant made with the House of David. It is a

Digitized by Google

British-Israel document all through. It will also be seen that not only is this the case, but every part of the Book of Common Prayer is a British-Israel document. It will also be recognised that, chief of all, the Bible is a British-Israel document, from the beginning to the end.

In the light of these teachings, before the week is over, or as soon afterwards as this appeal comes to our hands, let us retire alone or together, and there make the renewal of our Covenant with God.

It would be a great pleasure to us all if, having done this, a short letter be sent to us at Headquarters so that we may know of the brotherhood of the Covenant we have thus entered into and renewed. As John Wesley exhorts us, " Let us put our name into this Covenant with God."

Perhaps this is the first important step we should all take upon entering on the " traverse " this important year opens up before us.

Having done this, let us again approach God with united prayer for our Company of Nations, that they may be kept in the way of peace, as much as in them lie, if it be possible, as the Apostle Paul prays for the individual.

But let us further pray that, " if war should arise against us," as there is reason to fear, that even in this we may be confident, because of the protection of the Most High. Let us use Daniel's prayer of confession and supplication for Israel.—Daniel ix, 3-19. Let us pray that neither by word or action shall our Company of Nations provoke war. But let us also pray that by no want of action on our part shall the cupidity of the nations be aroused to attack and dismember the Empire or the United States of America. It is dangerous to flout our strength before an alien world. It is more dangerous still to hide our strength, so that the nations may be tempted to attack what they esteem to be our weakness, as they did in 1914. It is certain that with the strength of God behind us, nations can do no more than dash themselves to pieces upon our bulwarks, which are set and preserved of God. Let the nations therefore know our strength, that they may be preserved from mistaking it for weakness, and thus, by cupidity and hatred, be led to the attack. Let us pray to God that the right average may be attained in this regard.

Let us pray that our national sins may be forgiven ; that they may not form a reason before the Court of Eternal Righteousness for sentencing us to punishment for national transgressions. The Redemption has been provided. Yet for the pardon of these God has said " Nevertheless I will be enquired of by the House of Israel to do it for them." Let us set apart time, and either alone or together, let us go to God in intercession for our nations that they may be pardoned through the Redemption worked out for us by Our Lord.

The prayers of the few may save the many, even the nations of the Empire, from suffering.

Let us " be instant in season and out of season " in preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom. This is of infinite importance to the peace of the nations of our race, and of the world, at this time. Let us scatter literature with a free hand. It must do its work now, if it is ever to do it. We may not all be able to present the Truth by word of mouth. But we all can present the Truth in the form of a NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, a single number, or a subscription for six months or a year, or in the form of a book or pamphlet. Every day we have to thank God most heartily for champions won by the presentation of six months' subscription of the " Message " or of a book. Testimonies are daily coming. Many workers have purchased a recruit for the Truth by the expenditure of a few shillings. And the recruit has carried on the work on every hand.

Let us expect that God will come nearer to us again this year. We have been caused, in ways and cases which have startled us, to realise the nearness and reality of His presence this year. Let it be so more still in 1928.

Then let us rejoice at that which is going forward. The Bible is being read as perhaps never before. It is impressing the minds of strong men and women as the strongest of Books. It is approving itself to men of the professions as being ahead of themselves, even in their profession. This is true of the physician ; of the jurist ; of the biologist ; of the ethnologist ; of the historian ; of the theologian ; of the practical man of affairs ; of the military and naval man, regarding DEFENSIVE warfare ; of the practical Christian, both in the phase of Christian faith, and in that of Christian service or ethics.

It is a wonderful Book, beyond the minds of men to fathom, and therefore beyond the minds of men to produce. In it God speaks to us in our own language, illustrating eternal personalities, and eternal truths, by facts and figures well within the range of our own experience.

Let us preach it, demonstrating its inspiration by facts of natural science, by facts of history prewritten in prophecy, all of which facts are having due fulfilment ; and by the facts of experience which develop in the Christian heart following the receipt of the assurance of justification by faith, so clearly taught and demonstrated by John Wesley and his associates in his day and generation.

Again, let us look at the miraculous spread of the Common Law, which is the Israel Law, the Law of England, of Anglo-Saxondom, of the Empire, in the world. One third of humanity are now rejoicing in the freedom of the Common Law, as we shall take occasion to set forth in a series of articles just about to begin. In this spread of the Common Law we see the setting up of the foundation things of the Kingdom preparatory to the coming of Our Lord to reign.

Let us rejoice in this miracle of the last and present centuries, and see that it is the spread of the rudiments of the Gospel of the Kingdom, keeping pace with the spread of the Gospel of Salvation, and in many cases running ahead of the latter.

Whatever the year may have of activity and of turmoil it is a year which will bring us much nearer to God, and to the time of which Ezekiel wrote, when he said, " Then shall my people Israel know that I am Jehovah their God from that day and forward " and the companion day of which it is further said, " Then shall the heathen that are round about you know that I am Jehovah your God when I am sanctified in you before their eyes."

A good and a glorious day is coming for Israel and for the world.

Let us " gird up the loins of our mind, be sober, and hope to the end," and we shall be given to see the triumph of the Lord and of His Kingdom.

THE PRAYER BOOK.

IT IS THE DESIRE OF THIS MOVEMENT, and the people who are working together in it, to see the reunion in spirit of the Israel-British Church. For this we work and for this we pray. That union we all agree can never come except distinct and separate from the Church in Rome. There are doctrinal differences which are vital. There are differences in practice which are essential. There are differences in charter rights, as granted by God, and ratified by Jesus Christ, so vital and drastic that Our Lord refrained from bringing Himself into contact for even a moment with national organisations outside of Israel during the days of His ministry. He proclaimed, "I am not sent save unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel."

Consider this; and then be convinced that the Lord has placed a barrier in the way of our going outside the boundaries of the Kingdom of Israel to meet organised Rome. God has prepared the way and set the door widely open, for all nations to come into Israel-Britain. This will seem a strange doctrine to many. But the doctrine is not strange. It is clearly stated in the Bible, in the New Testament, and in the Old Testament. The trouble is that we have brought our "views" to the Bible, instead of reading the plain statements of the Bible, and the meaning which such statements bring.

This whole matter will arise in due course as the Lord carries forward the work of reuniting the world, ecclesiastically and nationally, within His own Church and Kingdom. In the meantime, let us—for the sake of the Lord who loved us and gave Himself for us—do the obvious thing, and bring about the unity of the Church in this land of ours and in the daughter lands overseas. This is within our reach if we approve ourselves to be men of good will.

Our counsel is to let the Prayer Book stand for the next ten years. The people have begun to voice their minds regarding the Communion service. It is the first sleepy growl of an awakening people. Better not arouse them further on that line. Let us sink every question but one; and that is: "What saith the Scriptures?" This will be the ultimate appeal of the people, we may be assured. Let the Leaders make the appeal first.

There are one or two other things, non-essential perhaps, which, if they had been carried through in the revised Prayer Book, would have tended later to bring the Biblical knowledge of the present generation of leaders into question. By no means let Abraham and Sarah be removed from the Prayer Book, for they with El Shaddai constituted the Divinely established family circle from which the whole Household of God has sprung. The whole of the Old Testament and of the New Testament is most clear upon this fact, and harks back to it again and again. So does the present Prayer Book. Let it stand.

In speaking of unity for the Church in Britain, the question of conformity arises. It is as useless to try to make all enjoy one form of service as it is to make all the birds of an aviary wear and enjoy the same kind of plumage. God has made the difference, and the birds delight in what He has done for them in the way of dress and beauty.

The crow loves his coat of shiny black. The pheasant loves his coat of rich colours. The crow loves his voice, as one can tell any summer day when he and his neighbours carry on their lively talking. The skylark loves to pour out his voice in song in greeting to the sunlight; but his song has more of a general character than the conversation of the crow community.

So in the mental world of humanity. Some love the sombre colours of Geneva. Others love the pure white of the English Church. Let us avoid the scarlet of Rome, for we have the assurance that it is not a colour beloved by Our Lord.

Some love to speak together in conversational tones; some love to sing aloud in unison of their faith and love to God. Now why should not each find his own fellowship as the birds do, and enjoy his own natural expression of love to God? Among every such sincere gathering the promise is made good. "Wheresoever two or three are met together in my name, THERE AM I, in the midst of them."

Let us recognise that there is a worship by the nation; and that there is also a worship by the individual. In the liturgy of the Book of Common Prayer, the nation collectively approaches the throne of God. What can possibly be more beautiful than this, if with understanding the people who constitute God's Kingdom-nation thus assemble and worship together praying in unison, "O Lord, bless thine heritage and make thy chosen people joyful. Govern them and lift them up for ever," etc.

The Divine law demands that each person shall so present himself before the Lord three times in each year.

Let us see the fact, startling when it is first recognised, that the Free Churches have not, as a rule, taken in hand to carry forward this national worship. But the Parish Churches have carried it forward throughout the land. Is there not a Providence in this?

Now when the liturgical service in the Parish Church is finished, the minister, having pronounced the benediction, comes forth from the Sanctuary, ascends the pulpit steps and begins to carry forward that individual service which is left in his own hands: to preach the Gospel to the people. Thus the National Church makes a distinction between the national and the individual worship.

Shall we not recognise this at large? Agree on all hands to adopt the two-fold form of service, and assemble three times a year, at least, at the national worship, and then find our place in the congregation wherein the fellowship is closest for us, whether in church or chapel.

Will not the day come when the Bishops will call upon Free Church ministers to join in leading the national worship?

Let us see that the Confirmation service is a matter of personal expression of faith and a personal dedication of ourselves to God. Let us also see that, for instance, the Renewal of the Covenant service as prepared by John Wesley, clergyman of the Church of England, and founder of the "Body of people called Methodists," is that service elaborated: namely, an expression of faith and a personal dedication to God.

Let us remember that the other Evangelical bodies are taking their people over the same ground, and are leading them to the feet of the same Saviour. Let us remember these things and be at one in spirit, and one in organised work as far as our natural types of mind will admit.

Let us try to put constraint on no man.

As leaders of the national side of worship, we believe that the Archbishops can put themselves at the head of the Church in Britain when they will.

Regarding individual worship, let there be the freedom which God gave to His people Israel: namely, that they should be free to worship in the home and synagogue on all occasions provided that thrice in the year they appeared before the Lord for national worship.

The Leaders of the Church of (all) England occupy the highest ecclesiastical position in the world. The centre of the worship of God in the earth is in Israel-Britain. To that centre of worship in Israel all other people shall ultimately come. In the meantime, that centre is here. And the Leaders occupying it stand in the most exalted position in the earth. They should not because of this assume authority, for God has made none to be "Lords over God's heritage"; but they should give the strongest possible lead in Evangelical truth and spirit, from this very standpoint. This will be the case in the immediate future, as the prophecies show.

With good will to all, and with prayer that this year will bring us all much nearer together, who in the sight of God constitute the Church of Christ in Israel-Britain, let us fall into step, and work toward this end so greatly to be desired.

THE NEW YEAR, 1928.

By the Rev. L. G. A. Roberts, Commander R.N.

We begin this New Year on the day the Lord Jesus arose from the dead.

This is a year fraught with the greatest blessing to our nation. Just over fifty years ago the struggle which Lord Beaconsfield foresaw was coming upon us (in 1874) began to take effect. Efforts were then being made to destroy the effects of the Reformation, and he brought in a Bill which should have resulted in our placing our house in order. It failed; but about twenty years ago a Royal Commission sat to enquire into the irregularities in the Church of England. This led to the revised Prayer Book, which, if carried in our House of Parliament, would have still further strengthened the hands of all who desire to unite with Rome. Now the verdict of the nation has gone forth. We will have none of it. It is remarkable to note the words of the Morning Post of December 16, in its epitome of "Commons reject New Prayer Book," when, as it says, a change of mood took place. "Within half an hour a complete reversal of mood had swept the Commons. That was not due to any request; it was forced on the assembly by a sudden flame of oratory into which—each taking fire from the other—a succession of speeches kindled and burnt steadily."

We would seriously invite attention to what has been stated in the columns of The Covenant People, and afterwards in The National Message and Banner, as to the times through which we have been passing. If we were right in our rendering of Rev. xi, the two witnesses were the British and English nations in their Churches; who at the Council of Whitby refused to imbibe the doctrine of Rome. This began in A.D. 664, when the British Bishops refused altogether to yield, and faithfully they relinquished their Sees which were then in the territories of the Anglicans. And no sooner had the Anglicans chosen Theodore as their Archbishop in A.D. 668, than they too refused to be interfered with by Rome. 1,260 days (years) of protestation had rolled away by 1924, when we find again, as of old, some in our Church willing to yield to Romish doctrine. Thank God the verdict of the House of Commons was given against the proposed revised Prayer Book. So in the language of Rev. xi: "After three days and a half the Spirit of life from God entered into them, and they stood upon their feet; and great fear came upon them which saw them." Now this is not all. We must distinguish in the text between the witnesses as in Heaven (where is God's Kingdom, set up by Him) and the witnesses who represented (or misrepresented) us at Malines, in the street of the great city spiritually called Sodom and Egypt, where also Our Lord was crucified (the domain over which the Papacy rules). The sequel to our admirable support in the Temple of God (Britain) is coming. This will affect the whole continent from Malines to Jerusalem. Our opinion must be guided by What saith the Word. We shall have to provide a home in these islands for the importunate widow of Luke xviii and Rev. xviii, 4. The command to us is plain—Isaiah xxvi, 20–21. Let us pray: "Come out of her, My people." Let us say to them: "Come up hither."

NEW YEAR MESSAGES.

From the Rev. Dinsdale T. Young, D.D.

My cordial greetings to the Editor and readers of The National Message.

May 1928 be rich to one and all.

The National Message has held on its way nobly during the past year. Its pages are opulent in construction and inspiration.

All who desire to know the Word of God and to see that Word fulfilled in British History and in the present life of the British Empire should revel in the pages of The National Message.

May we all realise more and more of the Gospel for the individual and the Gospel for the Empire.

From the Rev. Arthur Pritchard, M.A.

The Right Honourable W. E. Gladstone, referring to the domestic life of Queen Victoria, once said that "even among happy marriages her marriage was exceptional, so nearly did the union of thought, heart and action both fulfil the ideal, and bring duality near to the borders of identity."

Now, a similar conclusion, it seems to me, applies with equal if not greater force to the Biblical promises concerning Israel and their British fulfilments in history, their union ever bringing the supposed duality quite to the borders of identity, the Israel prophecies being very largely British history pre-written, and the British fulfilments being necessarily Israelitic prophecy fulfilled.

Digitized by Google

To the borders of identity between old Israel and modern Britain the National "Book of Common Prayer" has, by its adoption of Israelitic terms like "our forefather Abraham," "chosen people," "Thine inheritance" and such like, ever been leading us; but what the Prayer Book has been doing for centuries unconsciously, the NATIONAL MESSAGE is week by week doing consciously and so effectively withal, that British readers who hitherto have wrongly deemed themselves to be Gentiles, soon cease to recognise any supposed duality in respect to Israel and Britain, beholding instead, with joy and wonder, nothing less than actual and blessed identity. And such a discovery illumines the whole Bible, links Bible history to Britain's history, and begets such an embracing view of the Almighty and His love-purposes for Israel and the world at large, as to constrain them not to be content with being Israel by race alone but Israelites by race and grace, in fact Israelites indeed!

May the God of British-Israel bless and prosper THE NATIONAL MESSAGE more and more, and its editorial staff! Such is my daily prayer in which, I hope, many of the "Lord's Remembrancers" will join me.

From the REV. W. H. STUART-FOX, M.A.

WARM greetings to all readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE. This trumpeter of the dawn still sounds its clear and confident "Reveille" to the nation, and the ranks of the British-Israel army are forming up and getting into step. Its steady tramp is shaking up the kingdom of darkness, and arousing all kinds of antagonisms, but it shall be as with Israel of old: "The more they afflicted them, the more they multiplied and grew."

Let us brace ourselves up to bigger tasks and bolder witness—our King is counting on us—the nation and the world are thirsting for just such a message as ours.

From the REV. J. LUMLEY DAVIES.

I COUNT it a privilege to send a New Year's message to the Journal of the British-Israel-World Federation. My first word should be one of greeting to all readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, and one of sincere appreciation of the untiring energy of those who direct the operations of the Federation. The work is increasing with such rapidity to-day that no British-Israelite has any justification for pessimism, but much cause for praise. The spirit of the old word of our forefathers—Hallelujah, Praise ye the Lord—should be pulsating in every heart. History records a victory called "The Alleluia Victory," in which the ancient Druids of Wales and the soldiery shouted "Alleluia" and thus routed their foes. Maesgarmon, near Mold, in Flintshire, is still pointed out as the scene of "The Alleluia Victory." It is also recorded in a more remote period of history how another shout reverberated around Jericho and brought victory to God's people. How similar the methods! We, to-day, should be characterised by the same indomitable faith, for our God has done great things for us and will do still greater things for us. There is a spirit of expectation abroad. The glamour of scientific discovery has reached a high tension, and the limitations of possible discoveries are not in any way questioned, so that hopes are set high at the beginning of A.D. 1928.

Let me express my deep gratitude for the existence of a Federation which clings with such firm tenacity to the Bible. "Back to the Bible" is the clarion call of the British-Israel Federation, and I know of no other society which does so much to rivet attention on the solid Word of God. It is true that certain of its interpretations are not universally endorsed; and it were blind stubbornness to close our eyes to the forces arrayed against us. Critics are numerous, and the most assiduous among them are those who say that they believe the Bible. The irony of the situation is, that many who avow their belief in the Bible are its most destructive critics. The world for centuries has had its Renan and Bradlaugh, but to-day the atheist takes matters complacently, and looks on while Christian ministers do his work for him. "Gorilla sermons" are preached in the pulpit and out of it. Yes: critics there are in abundance. But—"the Word of the Lord endureth for ever." The Jehoiakims of the day may sit at their fires, penknife in hand; but the Sacred Roll will blunt all the critical penknives, even though they be "made in Germany." Let us thank God, fellow readers, that in the British-Israel-World Federation we have a society which clings with grim tenacity to the whole Word of Truth; which worships a Saviour not shorn of His Divinity; which believes all the truths necessary to salvation; and which is a great Evangelising power in the world to-day.

How to promote further the work of the Federation? Two texts come into my mind which may guide us. First: "Silver and gold have I none; but what I have, that give I thee" (Acts iii, 6). The first clause cannot perhaps be applied to all who belong to the Federation, for "silver and gold" they have, and they are most generous when they find a Cause that deserves a liberal response. (This is only a word in passing, for I have no intention to appeal for "funds.") There are many, however, who have not a rich abundance of "silver and gold," but even they cannot exonerate themselves from the second clause of the text—"what I have, that give I thee." Giving what we have is vital to the success of any movement. The truths of our religion are best illustrated by the way in which we give "what we have." Some have been given the power to influence others—"what I have, that give I thee." Others have time at their disposal—"what I have, that give I thee." Some have a wonderful power to lead others over the rugged path that leads to the highway of British-Israel Truth—"what I have, that give I thee." Some can find recruits and new homes for THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, the organ of the Federation—"what I have, that give I thee." Others are rich in mental resources, talented, scholarly, brilliant in the defence of truths fiercely criticised—"what I have, that give I thee."

The second text is: "I sat where they sat" (Ezek. iii, 15). We must get at the principle which underlies all true criticism. We must see our opponent's point of view. We can never understand him unless and until we "sit where he sits." I firmly believe that, however convinced we may be ourselves of the sterling reality of our Cause, we are not sufficiently equipped either to convince or to help him if we have not occupied that seat. Fervently do I now wish I could reach some of those who are on the fringe of the British-Israel Movement; those who are not satisfied with the teaching imparted to them during a number of years; those who are afraid to leave the old moorings lest something worse befalls them; those who attend our conferences and see others enjoying soul-pleasures which they cannot experience. My dear friends, I can fully sympathise with you. I know what it is to "let go" cherished interpretations which were almost sacred to me—sacred, not because I held them satisfactory and helpful, but because they were maintained by my forefathers. I can therefore sympathise with you, and can "sit where you sit." And if I could persuade myself to counsel experienced British-Israelites who perhaps wonder that some are slow in grasping truths which to them are so clear, my counsel would be this: To enforce the words, duty and obligation will not help those on the fringe of the Movement; the better way is to "sit where they sit," to share their difficulties, and to realise the tremendous strain which may be eating its way into their soul.

"Then I came to them of the captivity . . . and I sat where they sat." Is not this what Jesus Christ did? I believe I can see the full doctrine of the Incarnation here. Let me close here then, in the presence of Him Who hath left us an example. In that Presence let us pray for those who are longing for the soul-experience which they see is making others radiant with joy. May "the Dayspring from on high" soon visit them. For ourselves, and for the British-Israel-World Federation, let us say (in the words of another): "Thank heaven, the sun has risen, and the whole world shall yet be clothed in glorious day. Shine on, O Celestial Sun, and shine out. Climb to Thy meridian throne, and under Thy Divine smile may this desert-planet soon blossom into a Paradise-planet fit for angels to dwell in."

From JOHN LEECH, ESQ., K.C.

I AM sure that I am speaking on behalf of all the acquaintances of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER when I wish it a New Year of exceptional activity and blessing. During the past year our friend (THE MESSAGE) has gone ahead with leaps, but in the year on which we have entered we want to see it go with leaps and bounds; and to this end we wish to enlist the support of every reader. This dear friend of ours with its many and constant sweet whisperings of love and grace has earned the affection of those who have leant an ear to it, and has many times taught them lessons of wisdom and understanding; and those to whom it has talked are always eager for its visits and on the tiptoe of expectation to welcome this visitant to their homes. You have only to meet our friend once and you are sure to long for a further acquaintance, and to eagerly bend to listen to its converse. Then let all our readers gladly strive to publish the virtues of this friend and to introduce so good and helpful a companion to all their acquaintances.

From W. H. HESKETH, ESQ., J.P., President, Manchester Branch.

I KNOW of no better medium for the propagation of the greatest revelation of the age than that of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER. "Where there is no vision the nations perish" (Proverbs xxix, 18, R.V.), and if ever the British nation and race needed a vision of Divine truth to guide them safely through all the vicissitudes and perils of the great world crisis into which we have entered it is now, and I am firmly convinced that God has called into being the British-Israel-World Federation and THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER to supply this need. My prayer is that God's Holy Spirit may strengthen and bless you in all your endeavours.

From A. R. NELSON HEAVER, ESQ.

WHAT is BRITAIN thinking? What are the chief problems agitating the mind of the nation at the present time? These are questions of vital consequence to all charged with the duty of delivering a national message—a message to the NATION.

A recent analysis shows that WAR and RELIGION are the two questions uppermost in the minds of the people. For every one person in the NATION engrossed in the subject of ART there are twenty-nine worrying over the problem of WAR and sixteen concerned with the question of RELIGION. And of this fact a striking unanimity was evinced in the replies from the general public of every grade, and prominent men of affairs, alike.

The BRITISH-ISRAEL EVANGEL is alone fully equipped to meet these difficulties, for it comes charged with Divine inspiration, authority and power.

The GOSPEL of the KINGDOM—which Gospel must be preached throughout the whole EMPIRE as a witness to all nations—contains within itself (and in its final implications) the complete answer to all enquirers and enquiries after true religion.

The words of JESUS: "When ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars, Be ye not troubled . . . !"—when fully comprehended, are seen to constitute a Divine philosophy uniquely adequate to our present need of an explanation as to the significance and meaning of war.

Menaced by the flames of war, the world's peoples will seek religious faith and find Him Who is the only author of true religion.

It is through war and tribulation that GOD'S BRITH-ISH PEOPLE—calling upon Him Who alone can save—will find rest and regeneration. Finding CHRIST they will find courage to face the trials of the final whirlwind phase of tribulation, as it is written: "The people that do know their GOD shall be strong and do exploits!"

So shall we be strengthened in our march triumphantly into the KINGDOM of the NEW AGE and NEW CREATION of which "wars and rumours of wars" are but the birth-pangs.

To "THE NATIONAL MESSAGE," January 7th, 1928.

From MR. JOHN J. MOREY.

TRUE Messenger! For thy glad word of cheer,
At home and far, throughout our Empire lands,
A hearty welcome waits, and meed of praise.
As friendly beacon shining in the night,
Dispelling doubt, unfolding hidden truth,
Thou dost the ancient mysteries reveal,
And flood with light of gold life's cloudy way.
Thy glowing torch was never needed more

Than in this time of cold apostasy,
When servants become foes, disciples flee,
And round the Cross the Church is torn and riven.
The age dies quickly, and with cloud of fire
Jehovah leads His people to their goal.
Thou art a pilot to our troubled minds,
Guiding us safely as we near the shore ;
We see the harbour lights, and hear the bells
Ring welcome to their King Who comes to reign ;
But often in the darkness and the storm
Our hearts had failed, and hope had lost her hold
Hadst thou not bravely shown the higher way,
And with clear confidence led surely on.
Thou hast not failed us. Thy assuring word
Upholds and strengthens many weary souls ;
And now upon the threshold of the year
We gratefully remember mercies past,
And pray that in the days of gloom to come
Thy words of strength and hope may bring to all
Truth's own conviction, making sure His Word
Who reigneth still, and from His throne of power
Fulfilleth all His wise designs for men.
Great Message ! May thy timely clarion call
Rouse from their slumber all whose clouded minds
Know not the time, see not the approaching night,
And look not for the glorious dawn of day.
May thy strong witness to the sacred Book
Restore lost faith, give vision, kindle love,
And bring the nation's fainting heart again
To own allegiance to its Lord and King.

"EARTHQUAKES IN DIVERS PLACES."

BY BASIL STEWART.

II.

SINCE our previous article under the above heading appeared in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER (December 31st, 1927), we have received a series of Press extracts bearing upon this particular subject, sent to us for perusal by a correspondent, who, like the present writer, is interested therein, and particularly in their special significance at the present time.

Amongst these is the following significant item from Leningrad, dated July 7th last :—

" The Soviet Government is appearing in a new rôle—that of earthquake forecaster for the world. One hundred seismological stations are being built throughout the Soviet Union by the Academy of Science, for the purpose of forecasting earthquakes before they occur, in the hope of saving life and property. Professor Nikiforoff, a distinguished earthquake expert, is in charge of the work. Forecasting earth-disturbances has not before been scientifically undertaken, but the Soviet scientists intend making every effort to accomplish it."

Just a year ago, Professor A. Tchijevsky, of the University of Moscow, read a long paper before the annual meeting of the American Academy for the Advancement of Science, at Philadelphia,* in which he pointed out, as a result of prolonged and very careful researches in a new field of science which he has termed " historiometry," that abnormal solar activity, to which is due these intensified phenomena in nature, invariably synchronise with the great upheavals in human history, and citing many instances in the past—the Crusades of the Middle Ages, the fall of Constantinople, the Massacre of St. Bartholomew, the French Revolution—corroborating this theory. This view is confirmed by the well-known French astronomer, the Abbé Moreux, who has also noticed that increased solar activity not only brings about disturbances in the physical world, but also influences humanity in an adverse manner. It was in this way that he foretold the upheaval of 1914.

Our correspondent makes the following comment upon these activities in this branch of study on the part of Russian scientists. " It is suggested that this very active interest in this subject now being displayed by the extremely capable brains at the head of the Bolshevik Hierarchy is of an importance and significance that can hardly be overlooked." Readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, acquainted with the identification of the Gog of Ezekiel xxxviii, and the great significance of this prophecy, both in the world of nature and in the political sphere, for the present time, will see the force of this comment.

Accompanying these Press extracts are further extracts from a booklet, The Ark of Refuge, by " Ion," which anyone interested in the subject-matter of this article will find well worth reading.† In view of our remarks in our previous article respecting the attitude of scientists as a body towards the extraordinary phenomena through which the world is —and has been for the last three years—passing, we take the following paragraph therefrom :—

" Speculative ' scientific ' writers have unfortunately been confusing the public mind by their various conflicting theories, which, in brief, range from predictions of another Ice Age within the next few years, to soothing complacencies in semi-jocular vein asserting that there is nothing abnormal to be alarmed at, that it has frequently happened before, and that it will doubtless do so again without the world or anyone in it being very much affected.

" The difficulty that the man in the street must have, even if he is as yet sufficiently interested to investigate, is the apparent inability of even genuine scientists to agree as to the cause of such phenomena."

This inability is due to the fact that the majority of scientists are less interested in the causes than in recording the results, and noting effects, while of the few who do attempt to find a reason, they look not in the right direction. The causes lie much deeper than in the mere rise and fall of the barometer.

The Bible tells us that Satan is the Prince of this world, both in its physical aspect and in its human aspect (see Eph. ii, 2), and it is clear forces are being let loose upon this planet which formerly have been more or less under restraint. The fact that these phenomena are now invading zones hitherto comparatively immune—if not always entirely so—prove

(or, at least, supplies evidence in support) that we are not to-day witnessing the effects of a normal cycle of increased solar activity, but that something quite unusual is being superimposed thereon. It is not unlikely that some profound chemical change is taking place in the sun's incandescent interior, which is having its effect upon the quality of the light rays reaching the earth, producing an undue magnetic influence upon the earth and its inhabitants, for all these phenomena are magnetic in their origin. This would account for the extraordinary earthquakes, storms, and floods now visiting this globe, with their concomitant "uproars of the people," which Esdras foretold would accompany the closing hours of the "last days."‡

In our Times of the Gentiles (p. 139), we cited some unusual astronomical events, including apparent disturbance in the moon's motion which scientists are puzzled to explain. That all is not normal with our sun is also obvious, and has led some scientists to think it has suddenly begun to cool rapidly. And Luke xxi, 25-26, plainly tells us that the end of this dispensation will be marked by abnormal "signs in the sun and in the moon," with accompanying perplexity and unrest amongst mankind. Our Lord, however, while warning us that abnormal events would herald His Second Coming, and would constitute a sign to those able and willing to take note of them, comforts us with the declaration at the same time that "when these things come to pass . . . your redemption draweth nigh." Such was His encouragement to keep a stout heart in these anxious days.

A GOOD B.-I. STORY.

By Henry D. Houghton.

Though the following is written in the first person singular number, please do not think that it happened to the writer; it did not; but to a very esteemed and honoured friend, a most able and zealous British-Israelite always on the look-out for an opportunity to do good, and who related it to him, as near as may be, as here told, one evening after lecturing in Scarborough.

Some time ago I had been lecturing at Manchester and, desiring to get home the same night, I was pacing the platform at London Road Station waiting for the train which was to take me on my long journey home. The night was wet and cold. While pacing up and down the platform trying to make up my mind who to travel with, I saw a typical Jew with patriarchal beard also waiting, and at once determined he should be the one.

I waited quietly till the train came in, and the Jew took his seat alone in a compartment, and then finally I joined him, wondering how I should get into conversation with him, and more (what was my real purpose), tell him what I knew, and get to know from him what he knew.

With the good hand of my God upon me I soon had him talking; and for an hour and a half had one of the most instructive and happy talks it has been, as a long-established British-Israel believer, my privilege to enjoy.

At that time there were grave reports in the papers of trouble in the Balkan States, and using this as a means of introducing British-Israel teaching to him, I said, "There's more trouble brewing on the Continent, it looks like more war before long."

My companion replied, "More war, I should hope not, whatever do nations fight for?"

That question gave me the cue I desired. "Why," I said, "I should have thought you would have known that better than anyone."

"How should I know," he replied.

"Because you Jewish people know the Scriptures better than most people," I answered.

"What do the Scriptures say about these things?" he asked.

Then I reminded him of the question in the second Psalm, "Why do the heathen rage?" And I went on, "That is your question. Don't you see how they have raged and warred for world supremacy?" Then I reminded him how Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome had all striven for world supremacy, but strove in vain, as the Psalmist wrote, "Why do the people imagine a vain thing?"

I reminded him that the Lord had promised world supremacy to Israel alone in Daniel ii. "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever." The kings of the earth with its rulers always have been and still are setting themselves against the Lord and against His Anointed.

But my companion could not understand, so I explained to him that the nations were still plotting against Britain, and that Britain was Israel, the long-lost House of Israel.

I then offered him my hand as a brother in Israel, telling him that he was of Judah, and I was of Israel.

But he shook his head and said, "No, no!" However, I went on, "You know your brethren of Israel were lost many, many years ago." to which he readily assented.

Then I asked, "Don't you pray every week for them to be discovered and united to you?"

"Yes, yes," he answered.

"We, the British, are that Israel," I ventured to say; but no, he would not have it; and went on:—

"I should be most pleased if the British were Israel. You treat our people well, you give us kindness, and a home, and liberty, there is no nation on earth that treats us as you do, but you are not Israel. You are a mongrel race, you call yourselves 'British,' 'Saxons,' and 'English.' No, you are not Israel."

To which I replied, "Now I will make you prove to me that we are Israel."

"Me?" he answered.

"Yes, you shall prove it."

"But I cannot, not me, I do not know it."

"Nevertheless, you shall prove it, and to me here and now. You can speak Hebrew?" I went on.

‡ "When there shall be seen earthquakes and uproars of the people in the world; then shalt thou well understand that the most High spake of those things from the days that were before thee, even from the beginning. For like as all that is made . . . hath a beginning and an end, and the end is manifest: Even so the times also of the Highest have plain beginnings in wonders and powerful works, and endings in effects and signs." (2 Esdras ix, 4-6.)

"Yes," and he reached his bag down and undid it, taking out a sheet of printed lines and showing it, asked me what it was.

I said, "I can see it is Hebrew, but cannot read it."

"Yes," he said. "But will you excuse me a moment, it seems we are about to look into the Bible, and I always wash my hands before opening that." And hurrying out into the corridor he quickly returned, rubbing his now clean hands so that he might open the Book.

We at once resumed our conversation. "You know," I said, "we are the Ephraim nation. Old Jacob when he lay a-dying crossed his two hands and gave the birthright to Ephraim."

"Yes, yes," he replied. "But you are not Ephraim."

"Oh, yes, we are," I answered.

"No, no, you are Brit-ish, Sax-ons, Engl-ish!"

To which I answered, "Well, let us take your own words, and I will let you prove to me that we are your own lost brothers. Let us take your first word or name 'Brit-ish.' You can read Hebrew, now please tell me what 'Brit or Brith' means in Hebrew."

He reached for his Book, and presently said, "It means 'Covenant.'"

"Very good," I said; "now what does 'Ish' mean in Hebrew?"

"'Ish'," he answered, "is Man, 'Isha' woman."

I replied, "Now put the two together, and you have 'Covenant Man.' Who was the first 'Covenant Man,' was it not Abraham?"

"Yes, yes," he answered, in deep thought. But his face now lighted up with a light of discovery, and he went on:—"Brit-ish, Covenant-Man. I never saw that before. Veree clever, veree clever indeed, but" (hesitatingly) "it is what you call 'coincidence.'"

"Coincidence is it? Well, let us take your second word, 'Sax-ons.' You remember Abraham's favourite son, how do you pronounce his name?"

He answered, "You know we have no vowels in Hebrew, we do not pronounce it 'Isaac' as you do, we call it 'SRK' or 'Saac.'"

"Exactly. Now what would you call his sons?"

"SRK's" (and after an interval) "sons," he answered.

"Now say it quickly," I told him.

"Saaksons," he said; and then his face lighted up as though he saw something. "Ah, ah, that is veree clever indeed. Veree, veree clever; but it is only coincidence!"

"Well," I said, "there are two coincidences. Now let us proceed with the third name 'English.' Have you a word in Hebrew called 'NGL'?"

"Yes," he replied, "we have."

"Well," I pressed him, "what does it mean?"

He answered, "Now that is a very peculiar word, it is like some words which you have in English, it means two or three different things according to the way it is pronounced."

"Well, tell me one of them."

He reached again for his Book, and at length said, "Well, I will tell you, but it won't help you."

"Perhaps not," I replied, "but tell it me."

Then he seemed lost in thought for a moment or two; then at length he said, "How shall I explain it to you? It is like this——"

Here I thought he was going to give me as the explanation, "The Bull," but, to my intense astonishment and delight, he gave me a much newer, more forcible and appropriate interpretation.

"How shall I make you to understand?" said he. "Well, suppose that here is a very large tree, with thick trunk and great spreading branches; it is a fruit tree and full of fruit; it is harvest time, and yonder some distance away is a high wall, and the tree is so big and so weighed down with fruit that some of its branches with a great load of fruit hang down on the other side of the wall, that," he said, "is an Engl."

I could not now conceal my astonishment and delight. "Why, now," I said, "that is very singular. You know that old father Jacob in blessing his son Joseph, and telling him what should be in the latter days said, 'Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well; whose branches run over the wall' (Gen. xlix, 22) and you, yourself, have shown me that the first part of our name 'Engl' means that very thing, and it was to be in the latter days, which are these days! Now Jacob passed on the birthright to Ephraim: and we are that Ephraim nation, the head and leader of Israel. So what more natural than that the people when they came westward, crossing the mountains and crossing the sea—Ephraim thus stretching out his branches over the great wall of the sea—should call this 'Engl-land,' and themselves Engl-ish, the men of the Engl; THOSE WHO HAVE STRETCHED OVER THE WALL? You know mountains and seas are the walls of nations."

He seemed greatly astonished, and I was as greatly delighted to receive directly from the lips of an unbelieving Jew this strange confirmation of all our three names; and could not help thanking and praising God that He had given to me such wonderful and direct evidence in our very names as to who we are.

My Jewish friend, though greatly impressed, was not fully convinced, and replied: "All this you tell me is truly wonderful, but, after all, these things may be only remarkable coincidences. No, no," he went on to say, "Before I believe that the British are our long-lost brethren of the House of Israel, I shall require a lot more evidence yet."

That evidence I proceeded to give him at some length, and sketched him a portrait of what Israel must ultimately be like, according to the unconditional promises which God made to the Patriarchs and Prophets.

(1) They were to be Always a Nation. Jer. xxxi, 35–36.
(2) Always a Kingdom. 2 Sam. vii.
(3) To be a Great and Mighty Nation. Gen. xii, 2; xviii, 18.
(4) To have a Great Name. Gen. xii, 2.
(5) To possess the land from the Nile to the Euphrates. Gen. xv, 18.
(6) To become a Nation and Company of Nations. Gen. xvii, 16; xxxv, 11; xlviii, 19.
(7) To possess the gate of their enemies. Gen. xxii, 17.
(8) To have the heathen for an inheritance. Ps. cxi, 6.
(9) To have the uttermost parts of the earth for a possession. Gen. xlix, 22–26; Ps. lxxxix, 25–27; ii, 8.
(10) To be a blessing to all the Nations of the earth. Gen. xii, 3; xviii, 18; xxvi, 4; xxviii, 14; Micah v, 7.

As I showed the old gentleman how all these and a great many more unconditional promises were only to be found fulfilled in the British race and people, his doubts left him, and all his opposition broke down.

Raising his hands he exclaimed, " It is wonderful, wonderful, and I never heard of this thing in my life before."

By this time it was long past midnight, and having reached our journey's end, we bid adieu to each other as brothers in Israel, praising the Lord for all His goodness in keeping His covenant with His wayward and disobedient people.

THE WONDROUS STORY OF A RACE.

By JOHN H. TENCH.

" LOOK unto the rock whence ye are hewn, and to the hole of the pit whence ye are digged. Look unto Abraham your father and unto Sarah that bare you, for I called him alone and blessed him and increased him."

Who, Whose, What, and Where,
We British People really are?

The children of Abraham known as Israel and Judah are also known as Hebrews after the name Eber, an ancestor of Abraham. In Genesis we are informed that " Unto Eber were born two sons; the name of the one was Peleg (Division), because in his days the earth was divided; and his brother's name was Joktom."

In the 20th century B.C. God Almighty, having purposed to permeate the world with righteous principles by means of an executive people and kingdom, channelled the racial blood stream from Eber through the loins of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; into Judah for bringing forth the Messiah, Royalty and the Jews; into Levi for the work of the priesthood, and into the other ten tribal sons for the spreading of the kingdom. But they are not all Israel who are of Israel, neither because they are Abraham's seed are they all children, to wit, the Kaiser, who is as much a " treacherous " Jew as Judas Iscariot was, both being of the tribe of Judah by hereditary descent.

The Promises made to our forefather Abraham such as recorded in Gen. xii, 1-3, in Gen. xiii, 14-17; the Covenants such as we find in Gen. xv, 18, Gen. xvii, 4-8; and the Oath as given by the Angel of the Lord in Gen. xxii, 16-18, were all to be fulfilled in Isaac, the son of Sarah, his own wife; Ishmael, the son of the bondwoman, was passed by. The Promises, Covenants and the Oath were to be fulfilled in Jacob whose name was later on changed to Israel, a ruler with God, and that profane person Esau, although the elder brother, was passed by. He thought little of the Promises, Covenants and the Oath, and said, like many people of these latter days, " What profit shall this birthright do to me? " Of Jacob's twelve sons, of Judah was to come the chief ruler. Jacob on his dying bed said, " The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a lawgiver from between his feet until Shiloh come, and unto him shall the gathering of the people be," but the birthright was given unto the sons of Joseph. Reuben, the eldest son, was disinherited because he defiled his father's bed. So Jacob foretold of Manasseh, " He also shall become a people, and he also shall be great, but truly his younger brother [Ephraim] shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations." [The British Empire is now a Commonwealth of Nations and the United States of America a Great People.]

Later on Joseph went down into Egypt as a slave and in a few years became the second ruler in that land. Because of the famine in Canaan Jacob and his sons also came to Egypt, and together with Joseph's family the total number was 70. God had foretold to Abraham: " Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them, and they shall afflict them 400 years and also that nation whom they serve will I judge, and afterwards shall they come out with great substance." Moses, the man of God, was sent as a deliverer, and after the Ten Plagues God's people were brought forth from the iron furnace and came to Mount Sinai. Here they were made a nation, the Lord descended upon the mount and became their King and gave them those righteous laws known as the Ten Commandments. As we say in our Church Catechism, " Which be they? " " The same which God spake in the 20th chapter of Exodus, saying, I am the Lord thy God, Who brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage."

After wandering in the wilderness the space of 40 years they were brought into the land of Canaan under Joshua, divinely guided by the Lord, who told Joshua, " As Captain of the host of the Lord am I now come." Paul in his first apostolic journey was speaking to the men of Israel at Antioch in Pisidia, and he uttered these words, " When Joshua had destroyed seven nations in the land of Canaan he divided the land to them by lot, and after that he gave unto them judges about the space of 450 years until Samuel the prophet, and afterward they desired a king, and God gave unto them Saul, the son of Cis, a man of the tribe of Benjamin, by the space of 40 years, and when He had removed him, He raised up unto them David to be their king, to whom also He gave testimony and said, " I have found David, the son of Jesse, a man after Mine own heart, which shall fulfil all My will."

David was succeeded by Solomon, of whom his father said: " Of all my sons, for the Lord hath given me many sons, He hath chosen Solomon my son to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of the Lord over Israel." The sacred Scriptures bear record of Solomon that in his old age " King Solomon loved many strange women," " his wives turned away his heart after other gods, and his heart was not perfect with the Lord his God as was the heart of David his father." " And the Lord was angry with Solomon, and said, Forasmuch as this is done of thee, and thou hast not kept My covenant and My statutes, which I have commanded thee, I will surely send the kingdom from thee and will give it to thy servant. Notwithstanding, in thy days, I will not do it for David thy father's sake, but I will send it out of the hand of thy son. Howbeit I will not send away all the kingdom, but will give one tribe to thy son for David My servant's sake and for Jerusalem's sake which I have chosen."

This came to pass in the days of Rehoboam, Solomon's son, and the one tribe of the kingdom given to Rehoboam was the tribe of Benjamin, lent to Judah, until the Lord was betrayed for 30 pieces of silver as recorded by the prophet Zechariah in his eleventh chapter: " Then I cut asunder mine other staff, even Bands (or Binders) that I might break the brotherhood between Judah and Israel."

So the nation was divided into ten tribes, of which Jeroboam was king, and two tribes (Judah and Benjamin), over which Rehoboam ruled. When Rehoboam assembled a huge army to bring back the revolted tribes the prophet Shemaiah forbade him, and uttered the word of God saying, "This thing is from Me."

The kingdom of Judah existed for about 130 years longer than the kingdom of Israel until Jerusalem and the Temple were destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar, 588 B.C., and Zedekiah and many of his people were carried captives to Babylon, from where after 70 years about 42,000 returned, rebuilt their temple and city which remained until they wickedly put to death their Messiah, and Jerusalem was finally destroyed by Titus A.D. 70, and the Jews were scattered and became a despised and persecuted people.

The people of Israel for their idolatry were cast out of God's sight; they were divorced, and God said, "Lo-Ammi, ye are not My people." So they were carried captive by Shalmaneser, King of Assyria, 721 B.C., and he placed them in Halah, and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes.

The details of their wanderings and their prowess are recorded in various ancient books and manuscripts, and as the wondrous story is unfolded the evolution of the world's chief ministering race comes into view.

The beginning of the wanderings is chronicled in 2 Esdras xiii. "The ten tribes took this counsel among themselves, that they would leave the multitude of the heathen, and go forth into a further country, where never mankind dwelt, that they might there keep their statutes, which they had not kept in their own land. And they entered into Euphrates, by the narrow passages of the river, for the Most High then showed signs for them, and held still the flood, till they were passed over, for through that country there was a great way to go, namely of a year and a half, and the same region is called Arsereth. Now when He destroyeth the multitude of the nations that are gathered together, He shall defend His people that remain, and then shall He show them great wonders." Having brought His people Israel to Arsereth, which is situated in the country we now call Roumania, it is easy to see how their wanderings would be continued, for this country is bounded on the west by the Carpathian mountains in which rise several of the rivers which flow into the Baltic Sea, such as the Vistula, the Warthe, the Oder and the Elbe. Following the courses of these rivers would bring some of the tribes of Israel to the very district where the Sakaseme, Isaac's sons, or Saxons, the Angles, the Jutes, the Friesians and the Danes came from before crossing into Britain. God had foretold by His servant Ezekiel not only the scattering but also the gathering of His people Israel: "Therefore thus saith the Lord God; although I have cast them far off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries, yet will I be to them as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come. Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord God, I will even gather you from the people and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered, and I will give you the land of Israel" (Ezek. xi, 16, 17). This land of Israel is the place of security, the appointed place, mentioned by Almighty God in 2 Sam. vii, 10: "Moreover I will appoint a place for My people Israel, and will plant them that they may dwell in a place of their own and move no more, neither shall the children of wickedness afflict them any more as beforetime." In this appointed place in the Isles of the Sea, northwest of Palestine, as shown by the prophet Isaiah, evolving processes are ever at work, and never more so than now. Every year, every month that passes, is fraught with import of the high and singular destiny which awaits this realm, this empire, and this wondrous race. Unfortunately at present only a comparatively few Bishops, clergy and other ministers can appreciate their literal "text-book," the Holy Bible, to the full; but an increasing number of the thoughtful Scripture-reading laity are beginning to apprehend the cause, meaning and purpose of the ever-expanding British Empire and the fulness of kindred nations which it contains.

There are still many people in our land who are blind to their origin; they think we are a mongrel race, whereas our origin is from one man, Israel, and four different mothers, Leah, Rachel, Zilpah and Bilhah, which largely accounts for their variety. History is constantly repeating itself, and those British people who still hug the belief that the Ten Tribes are defunct, neither know themselves nor their destiny. They are like Joseph's brothers who told him to his face, "One is not." "The Ten Tribes are not" some are saying now, whereas they are the ruling race in the world to-day, and even the second ruler in the land of Egypt. Would that these unbelievers might see that their denial of Israel's existence as a nation breaks the integrity of the Scriptures and impeaches the veracity of God, Who said, "I am the Lord, I change not, therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed."

We often call ourselves Saxons, which means son of Saac or Isaac. This also shows the truth of God's Word, Who said, "In Isaac shall thy seed be called." Gen. xxi, 12, Rom. ix, 7, Heb. xi, 18.

Freeman, the historian, in his plea for the use of the word English, says that the nation in pre-Norman times was always called Engle or Angleyn. Engle is Hebrew for bull, Ephraim's banner or ensign, so we are known as "John Bull" in consequence.

Some prefer that we should be called British, which comes from two Hebrew words, "Brith" meaning covenant, and "Ish" meaning man. Abraham, our forefather, as we are constantly calling him in the Book of Common Prayer, was the Covenant Man, and there is not the slightest doubt that the Brith-ish are the Covenant People, because as Zacharias, the father of John the Baptist, said when he was filled with the Holy Ghost: "Jesus came to perform the mercy promised to our fathers and to remember His holy covenant, the oath which He sware to our father Abraham that He would grant unto us."

God's people Israel were being gathered into the Isles of the West, and there became the first Christian nation, for Our Lord's disciples and Apostles obeyed His command: "Go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel, and as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand," so the first Christian Church was built at Glastonbury by Joseph of Arimathæa and his companions A.D. 38, who were followed by Simon Zelotes, Aristobulus and Paul. So the early Britons under their Christian king, Lucius, was the first nation to accept Christianity, and Britain gave to Rome its first Bishop, Linus, son of Caradoc, and its first Christian Emperor, Constantine, son of Constantius of Rome, and Helen, a British Princess. Gildas, the British historian of the 6th century, wrote: "We know that the Sun afforded His light to our island in the last year of Tiberius Cæsar." Archbishop Usher says: "The mother church of the British Isles is the church in Insula Avallonia, called by the Saxons Glaston." It seems to have been about the size of the Tabernacle in the Wilderness, and was thatched with straw. Britain thus received its Christianity direct from Jerusalem, and its inhabitants considered themselves to be the oldest National Christian Church in the world, which four Church Councils from 1417 onward affirmed.

Jesus having visited and redeemed His people Israel, the Father runs to meet the prodigal son in a land a great way off (the furthest known land in the Roman days was Britain). The fifty-third chapter of Isaiah gives a full account of the redemption of the lost sheep of the house of Israel, and as a result of this, the barren woman, the divorced wife, is remarried and calls the Lord Ishi (my husband), and "in the place where it was said unto them Ye are not My people, there it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God" (a Christian nation). So Isaiah writes: "Sing, O barren, thou that didst not bear, break forth into singing and cry aloud thou that didst not travail with child; for more are the children of the desolate (Israel) than the children of the married wife (Judah) saith the Lord. Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thine habitations; spare not, lengthen thy cords, and strengthen thy stakes, for thou shalt break forth on the right hand and on the left, and thy seed shall inherit the Gentiles and make the desolate cities to be inhabited (prophetic of the colonising efforts of the British Empire), fear not, for thou shalt not be ashamed; neither be thou confounded; for thou shalt not be put to shame, for thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth and shall not remember the reproach of thy widowhood any more (the time of Israel's divorcement), for thy Maker is thine husband, the Lord of hosts is His name, and thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel, the God of the whole earth shall He be called. For the Lord hath called thee as a woman forsaken and grieved in spirit and a wife of youth, when thou wast refused, saith thy God. For a small moment have I forsaken thee, but with great mercies will I gather thee. In a little wrath I hid My face from thee for a moment, but with everlasting kindness will I have mercy on thee, saith the Lord thy Redeemer. For this is as the waters of Noah unto Me; for as I have sworn that the waters of Noah should no more go over the earth; so have I sworn that I would not be wroth with thee nor rebuke thee." Then follows a description of this wondrous race and kingdom: "Behold, I will lay thy stones with fair colours, and lay thy foundations with sapphires, and I will make thy windows of agates, and thy gates of carbuncles, and all thy borders of pleasant stones."

What a splendid prophetic vision is here shown of this widow's future, this once divorced wife, this Lo-Ammi, this barren wife. Can we not see all this in the course of fulfilment in the recent British Empire Exhibition at Wembley?

At the opening ceremony the Prince of Wales, in welcoming the King and Queen, said. "You see before you a complete and vivid representation of all your Empire. The Dominions, India, the Colonies, the Protectorates, and Mandated Territories under your care have joined together in the great task of presenting this picture of our Commonwealth of Nations. The Exhibition is thus the work of the whole Empire, and it shows the craftsmanship, the agricultural skill, the trading and transport organisations of all our peoples and all our territories. It gives also a living picture of the history of the Empire and of its present structure. It will suggest to the world, I truly believe, that this most powerful agency of civilisation has its heart set upon peaceful aims and the good of mankind."

The King, in the course of his reply, said that the Exhibition is a revelation of the whole Empire in little; an effort of co-operation between brothers for the better development of the family estate (the widow's jointure as shown above). It shows the infinite variety of the resources that are available in the many lands that owe a willing allegiance to the British Crown, and share in the blessings of British liberty. It illustrates the vast range of thought in architecture, in art, and in industry which is available within the bounds of the Empire. It typifies the long years of patient labour and great achievement which go to make up the history of the greatest combination of peoples that the world has seen (fulfilling God's promise to Israel: "A nation and a company of nations shall be of thee"). It offers an incomparable opportunity to study all that history means (and prophecy has foretold) and to consider the ways in which, in future, the Empire can be developed so that its resources and its skill may yield even greater results than those which are to be seen at Wembley.

The Rev. Arthur Pritchard in his book, "God in British History," says: "To trace the growth of a race spirit is not an easy task, for though advance generally goes along clearly defined lines there are so many side tracks, undercurrents, pauses and relapses, that only patient and persevering research can really fit them into the scheme of things. The spirit of the British race is mainly compounded of liberty, justice, and something which is a blend of trueness, reliableness and chivalry that is comprehended in the expression Fairplay for all. They are, indeed, the fundamental principles of humanity by which the world sooner or later is to be governed. Such, however, had to grow into this wondrous race before they became a characteristic, a passion, an inner force. So many of us forget that we must first be trained in the school of life before we can possibly attain success in life. Such a school in the providence of God was Egypt, and had not Joseph been Egypt's prisoner he had never been the second ruler of Egypt as he was, and as, in his descendants, he still is to-day. Thus it came about that the race had to be sent to the same school of Egyptian slavery and affliction, when the iron entered into their blood; and the love of liberty for themselves and others, liberty of conscience, liberty to speak and be the truth without fear, liberty to do right without hindrance, became a racial instinct or stored-up experience, a corporate memory that could never be forgotten."

Finally to this wondrous race, according to God's solemn promise, it was stated that David's seed should ever be enthroned somewhere in the earth and the throne of Britain has on it David's lineal heir, in George V, who can trace his descent back to David and on to Judah. David was the first king of the tribe of Judah, and David, our Prince of Wales, may be the last ere the Root and Offspring of David, the Bright and Morning Star, appears at the New Jerusalem to be the glory of His people Israel and the Light to enlighten all the other races.

GOD'S PLAN OF THE AGES.

By GEORGE MCGINNIS.

THE revolt of the Ten Tribes from Rehoboam and the setting up of the Kingdom of Israel, or the Northern Kingdom, was a part of God's plan for launching a new race (Anglo-Saxon), who were to carry out His purpose concerning humanity.

When Rehoboam read the riot act to the Ten Tribes and ordered them back into the Kingdom, these pioneering, progressive people marched away singing the Marseillaise of Israel, the war-cry of Ephraim, "To your tents, O Israel," which meant "Go home and prepare for war."

Rehoboam rallied 180,000 warriors to march against Israel; Shemaiah, the prophet of Jehovah, met them with this ultimatum: "Thus saith Jehovah. Ye shall not go up nor fight against your brethren, return every man to his home; for this thing is of me." "So they hearkened unto the words of Jehovah and returned."

Thus God protected His people from invasion by the enemy as He has done through the ages. From this time forward these two peoples were to have a separate work and destiny in the world. Judah was to be custodian of the Old Testament, and give, through the House of David, Christ to the world. Eventually she was to be broken up as a nation, scattered throughout the earth, becoming a byword among the nations.

The Ten Tribes were to be hidden in the pages of history, and become lost to the world, wandering among the Gentile peoples, and later to reappear in the tide of world activities, possessing the strategic gateways of the world, dominating every ocean, ports open to commerce day and night, ruling over many nations, filling the face of the world with fruit, bringing sanitary laws to undeveloped peoples, and education, enlightenment, and Christianity to those who sit in darkness.

It is becoming more evident every day that "God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform," and the light breaking in on God's mystery to-day reveals that Anglo-Saxondom is the nation Jesus had in mind when He said to the Jews, "The Kingdom shall be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof," for the Anglo-Saxon is to-day carrying out God's plan of the ages.

KINGDOM GOSPEL RIGHTEOUSNESS.

By H. E. TURNER.

THE aim and object of the "Gospel of the Kingdom" may be defined from the prophets as the establishment on earth of righteousness, justice and peace. (Isa. ix, 6-7; Jer. xxiii, 6.) Mankind could hardly be engaged in a grander and more beneficial endeavour.

The properties of righteousness are numerous and supernatural; to be righteous is beyond the limit of the natural man. "There is none righteous, no not one." If it be possible for all the virtues to be expressed in one word, that word is righteousness, the perfection of moral goodness. Righteousness belongeth unto God, Who is perfect in all His thoughts and ways; righteousness is perfection, and perfection is not vouchsafed to mankind on earth. Abraham was counted righteous, it was not his own goodness, it was bestowed, "Abraham believed God, and it was imputed unto him for righteousness."

Righteousness has a share in the Gospel of Salvation: "These shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal." "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation."

Righteousness is the great objective of the Gospel of the Kingdom. "The righteous shall inherit the land, and dwell therein for ever." "Open ye the gates, that the righteous nation which keepeth the truth may enter in." "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any nation." As God alone is righteous, how then may Israel attain unto righteousness and enter the Kingdom? That which to our limited knowledge is a mystery may be made plain by Holy Scripture. Perfection alone is not enough; a straight line or a circle may be perfect, it is the passive perfection of the inanimate, but righteousness is the perfection of active virtues. Kingdom Gospel demands the useful activity of the living. "In the way of righteousness is life." "Riches profit not in the day of wroth: but righteousness delivereth from death." We deem a man of integrity to be a righteous man, but "As the heavens are higher than the earth, so are My ways higher than your ways, and My thoughts than your thoughts." Yet, notwithstanding that it belongeth to God alone, the secular and national affairs of the nation shall some day be controlled by righteousness, and, by virtue of Divine appointment, Israel, the chosen servants and witnesses to God, have the honour of proclaiming the Gospel of the Kingdom for the establishment of righteousness, justice and peace on earth, under the reign of "Jesus Christ the Righteous." In a few words Scripture explains the mystery of man's righteousness which is not man's. "Abraham strong in faith believed God and therefore it was imputed to him for righteousness. Now it was not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him; but for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on Him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead." "Thy people also shall be all righteous; they shall inherit the land for ever, the branch of My planting, the work of My hands, that I may be glorified." "And this is His name whereby He shall be called The Lord our Righteousness."

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

THE LAW OF THE LORD, OR THE COMMON LAW.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

Introduction.

NEXT to the Gospel, which brings to us the good news of salvation, and which deals with matters pertaining to the present life and to that which is to come, is the Law of the Lord, which deals with individual and national ethics and government, and has relation for good to the life which now is.

The integrity and happiness of peoples and of nations in the present day is profoundly affected by the system of law under which they are called upon to live. So the choice of a system of law is a vital one. For the first time in modern history the nations seem inclined to exercise that choice.

The happiness of the people will further depend upon the person, or the personnel of the organisation which administers the law.

There are systems of law competing with each other in the earth at this time. For ages they have been in operation side by side. The time seems to have come when the world is moving forward to the selection of one system of law which shall be made universal in all the earth. If this were the result of the efforts of a body of enthusiasts who desire to see their own system established, as, for instance, that body of German leaders which had decided to make German Kultur universal in the earth, not because of its excellence, but because it was the system championed by themselves, we might disregard it as a passing phase. But inasmuch as this movement is from beneath, and is voiced by a rising tide of the people of the nations, we may look upon it as a movement which has come to stay, and which is destined to have its way in the selection of a system of law to be applied among all nations.

The Moslem law has fallen down in the fall of the Turkish Empire.

The civil law was buttressed by the Continental Empires. This because it was their inheritance from the parent Empire of Rome; and also because the distinction of classes recognised by it was dear to the soul of the rulers of the Continental peoples.

The Common Law is the inheritance of the Anglo-Saxon races, and is being carried by them wherever they go, and established by them in all countries which fall to them to govern.

The excellence of British rule, when compared with the rule of others, is explained in part by the fact that the British themselves are ruled by the principles of the Common Law; and when they institute that law in other lands they bring the races occupying such lands up to their own standard of equality before the law; abolishing privilege of class; and holding every person innocent until he is proved guilty.

What a wonderful arm of protection this throws around peoples who have been raised to share in the excellencies of the Common Law.

The law is made up of two great divisions: the ecclesiastical law, and the national law.

The ecclesiastical law is expressed in ORDINANCES. These are never IMPOSED upon the subject races of the Empire. They are offered as a boon, to be accepted or rejected. They are offered, not by the Government, but by the Church.

The ecclesiastical ordinances were established in the Wilderness (circa) 1496–1456 B.C., as we shall later see; and they ran as then established until the dawn of the Christian dispensation. The ordinances were then changed from the Mosaic to the Christian. Such change is officially recorded in the Epistle to the Hebrews. As changed, the ecclesiastical law will so continue until Our Lord returns.

The national law is expressed in COMMANDMENTS, STATUTES and JUDGMENTS; and, as a system, they stand as given in the Pentateuch, and shall so stand for ever, for they are the expression of THE ETERNAL LAW OF RIGHTEOUSNESS.

The Commandments are the codified expression of basic principles. There are ten Commandments, and taken together they underlie all life and conduct. Nothing can be added to make them more complete. Nothing can be taken away without destroying their universality of expression.

These Commandments are expressions of Divine law, or, if one prefers to call them so, universal laws; and they are equally applicable, as are all other Divine laws. For instance, the law of gravitation is a Divine law and is universally applicable. In fact, gravitation is a law which applies itself to all, in all ages. Ill will it be for the architect or engineer who ignores the law of gravitation in planning his structure. If he crosses the law of gravitation, his structure will collapse.

But if he builds in accordance with that law, gravitation will give to his structure solidity and endurance which could never be provided without it. So it is with the building of individual life and character, and national life and character. Disregard the Commandments, or the law expressed in them, and the life and character of man or nation will collapse. Build in harmony with the law contained in the Commandments, and life and character will be estabished, and will endure.

There never can be a wrong done by sweeping away another system and establishing the system of the Common Law among any people. If the system so removed be equitable and just, it will be the Common Law expressed in other terms, and the change will be only verbal. If it be not equitable and just, and the equitable and just Common Law be introduced in its place, then the change must of necessity be of benefit, and be welcome to the people who are brought under its benign influence.

It is well for us that such is the case. It is so, but we have not always known it. Therefore, when arbitrarily, we suddenly imposed the Common Law on the hundreds of millions of India, we really conferred on them a blessing next in importance to the God-given blessings of salvation; although we were not fully informed that such was the case.

Now a system which is beneficent to the highest races or classes must of necessity be "life from the dead" to the downtrodden and the oppressed. Therefore we need have no doubt about the extension of the Common Law. It has only blessings to carry, and the God who gave it is behind its principles.

Next to the carrying of the system comes the setting up of the administration. How drastically the British people called to task those who were responsible for the administration when first the effort to establish the law over non-Israel-British races in India took place, let the experience of Robert Clive and the impeachment of Warren Hastings show.

A good system of law may be made very burdensome by bad administration. Let our Members of Parliament take note of the fact, and also the Ministers of the Crown. But what shall be said of those who have taken it in hand to amend the law? Fortunately, they have left the principles untouched as a rule. But they have piled statute upon statute, and have rendered judgment after judgment, which pare away the rights and immunities which are the birthright of the people, especially in regard to the law of contracts and the statutes concerning financial matters.

Need of watchfulness on administration, and on administrative bodies is ever present. Especially is this the case when such bodies assume legislative powers.

The Common Law is unchangeably fixed in the Bible, which is the authorised expression of that law. Walking in the light of this, and acting within the scope of its directions, there can come no harm to person or nation; and the earth will be at rest under the benign sway of the Divinely-given law. To depart from that system will mean resentment and unrest in the minds of the people.

THE STATUTES.

The statutes which give expression to the Common Law are, first, those contained in the Bible. One does not ask for blind confidence in these statutes because they are to be found in the Book which is the basis of our faith and of our religious life. One asks for confidence in these statutes because they are illustrative of the principles contained in the Commandments, which ultimately resolve themselves into the unchangeable principles of eternal righteousness. "The statutes of the Lord are right," therefore confidence in them is secured by their manifest equity. Now the statutes of the Bible do not cover all the details required to meet newly-arising combinations and occasions as life becomes more and more complex. They are looked upon as illustrating the application of the universal principles contained in the Commandments. There will probably be found an illustrative statute giving such illustrative direction in every field of administration. Such statute may be very brief in expression, but will be found to be full in application. For instance, in the realm of separate effort, what shall be the principle followed: destructive competition? or constructive co-operation? The following statute makes its statement briefly, but fully, as to principle, "IF THOU SEE THE ASS OF HIM THAT HATETH THEE LYING UNDER HIS BURDEN, AND WOULDEST FORBEAR TO HELP HIM, THOU SHALT SURELY HELP WITH HIM."

Said a well-known barrister: "This statute shows that the law is a small thing, suitable only to a nomadic people. We do not use pack donkeys." We replied, "I am astonished at a professional gentleman, with a trained mind like yours, fastening on the illustration and missing the principle illustratively stated. True we do not use pack donkeys as our transportation system. We use railway companies and steamship companies, with their up-to-date equipment. They are now the 'common carriers,' as the pack donkeys formerly were. So strike out the illustrative 'donkey' and insert 'transportation system' which the pack donkey was in the old time, as you say, and this is what you have: 'If thou see the "transportation system" of him that hateth thee lying under his burden and wouldest forbear to help him, thou shalt surely help with him.'"

This is a clear statement of principle. There may be no destructive competition between such companies, but there must be helpful co-operation.

Having said this, the principle governing contemporary effort is established firmly once and for all. But the full working out of the expression of such a law may require both statutes and judgments. These, however, must be in line with the law expressed in the Bible, or they will be ultra vires.

THE JUDGMENTS.

These are the judicial application of the principles of equity as stated in the Commandments, and as illustrated in the Statutes, to new conditions and cases as they arise and develop with the increasing complexity of our life. Such judgments are constantly being handed down by the duly appointed judges. When they rest on principle, they are apt to stand. When they contravene the principles of the Commandments and Statutes, they are again and again set aside and cease to be the law.

THE ADMINISTRATION.

At the head of the administration is Jehovah the God and King of Israel.

Under Him, by Divine appointment, is the House of David, represented by the Royal Person seated upon the throne as the Chief Ruler in the Kingdom.

Under him again are the judges duly appointed, and representing the King.

The United States of America has departed from this system of administration by setting aside the Crown as the centre of administration.

Chief in authority in the U.S.A. is the written constitution of the United States.

Administering this is the Supreme Court of the United States.

After this, the authority is vested in the elected officers of the administration. This is the antithesis of the Divine establishment which vests the authority in the King. For in setting aside the House of David, the representative, Jehovah so represented would seem to be so set aside; unless the WRITTEN CONSTITUTION, founded upon the Biblical law, be considered to be His voice in the administration of justice.

The people of the U.S.A. elect their judges and administrative officers.

But the law administered by them is the Common Law.

The British Empire administers the law by a CENTRALISED administration. The United States administers the law by a localised administration. The experiment seems to show that the Divinely-appointed centralised administration is the more effective. In each case the law is the same. Only the administrative machinery differs.

The centralised administration is effective in lands such as India, Burma, and so on. Localised administration would not be effective in such conditions, as the people are not yet qualified to elect administrators of the law. Even though they were, centralised administration in the hands of appointed judges seems most effective.

We have a system of law which is perfect as to home needs. It touches national life in every department. It takes care for faith and worship, defending the people from false teaching and worship.

It takes care for the hallowed estimate of the Name of God. This is a most momentous thing in the life of a man or a nation.

It takes care for the Sabbath. A heritage of the Israel people, precious beyond estimate.

It takes care for the family life, upon which Biblical civilisation is based.

It takes care for life.

It takes care for property.

It takes care for character.

It takes care for reputation.

It takes care for the individual; who must eschew covetousness, the root of all evil.

The perfect application of that law will settle equitably the condition of labour, commerce and finance. It sets the rules for successful agriculture, for safe sanitation, for public health, and for international peace.

The preaching of the Gospel of the Kingdom, which is ruled under the Common Law, or the Law of the Lord, is next in importance to the preaching of the Gospel of personal salvation, and well will it be for the earth when all men shall give heed thereto. In the succeeding articles we shall deal more fully with this great theme.

RUSSIA.—I.

ROSH. CHIEF HEAD. RUSSIA. WICKEDNESS (in Heb.).

BY THE REV. L. G. A. ROBERTS, COMMANDER R.N.

WE assume that Russia is Assyria from so many prophetical points that, to our mind, there is no shirking of the question. That Russia, spelt backwards, as if in Hebrew, is Assur, may be but a coincidence. But coincidences when supported by historical and prophetical facts give a semblance of circumstantial evidence not to be lightly thrown on one side.

The word ROSH occurs first as a son of Benjamin, Gen. xlvi, 21. Another apparently misleading inference is with Asshur, as first it is said Gen. x, 11, "Out of that land (Shinar) went forth Asshur and builded Nineveh." And yet v. 22, Asshur is a son of Shem! This strange intimacy of Shemite with Accadian has caused great confusion in the ethnological world. We see the same afterwards with Rosh of Benjamin mixing with Tubal and Meshech, Gen. x, 2, and Ezek. xxxviii, 2, 3; xxxix, 1, sons of Japheth. In Isaiah xxx, 28-31, the overthrow of the Assyrian is said to be brought about by the "Sifting of the nations with the sieve of vanity; and there shall be a bridle in the jaws of the people, causing them to err." This is exactly the method God pursues with Gog of the land of Magog, the prince of Rosh, Meshech and Tubal (Young's literal translation). "I will turn thee back and put hooks into thy jaws and I will bring thee forth." It is in the land of Israel that "He will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all people and the veil that is spread over all nations. He will swallow up death in victory" (Isa. xxv). So our ethnologists are led astray, for they see not the Hand of God.

It is remarkable how consistent the Word of prophecy is when we grasp the fact that it is one long struggle between the kingdoms of this world and the Kingdom of God: or the seed of the serpent and the seed of the woman. This is apparent before the Flood, but becomes more definite afterwards, when God pronounced a curse upon Canaan and gave him to be "a servant of servants unto his brethren." "Blessed be the Lord God of Shem, and Canaan shall be his servant. God shall enlarge Japheth and He (God) shall dwell in the tents of Shem, and Canaan shall be his servant." This curse remains upon Canaan until "there shall no more be a Canaanite in the House of the Lord" (Zech. xiv, 21). This also is at the time of the victory of Israel over all his enemies (Ezek. xxviii, 20-26). This last internal curse to Israel is the result of disobedience on the part of Israel (Num. xxxiii, 55, etc., etc.).

Since the call of Abram, and the promises to him of the heirship of the world, the World Powers have been prominently Egypt, Assyria, Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, Rome, and Turkey. Here are seven heads, as first fully seen in Rev. xii, as the great red dragon in conflict with the woman (Israel) under the same figure as in the dream of Joseph, Gen. xxxvii, 9-10. In Rev. xvii, 11, the last development of the World Power is "the eighth and is of the seven and goeth into perdition."

This is told us as being the doom of the King of Assyria, Isa. xxx, 31-33; xxxi, 8; Rev. xix, 20; Isa. xiv, 25-26; Mic. v, 5-6. It will be seen that Asshur is Israel's enemy in Num. xxiv, 20. Amalek was the first of the nations to set his hand against the throne of the Lord, Exod. xvii, 16 (literal, Young), and Asshur is the last, v. 24. Israel's King is to be higher than Agag (lxx), and His Kingdom shall be exalted, when the Assyrian shall come into our land and this MAN shall be our Peace, and the Peace shall be accomplished in Jerusalem (Hag. ii, 9).

In several other places is the Assyrian seen to be Israel's great enemy; this is summed up in Ezek. xxxviii, 17: "Thus saith the Lord God: Art thou not he of whom I have spoken in old time by my servants the prophets of Israel, which prophesied in those days many years that I would bring thee against them? And it shall come to pass at the same time when Gog shall come against the land of Israel, saith the Lord God, that my fury shall come up in my face."

No one but God Himself could have foreseen that Rosh or Russia would be the head of the people Meshech and Tubal, nor does the name Rosh appear in history until 1,500 years after it had appeared in Ezekiel. The coincidence is that Benjamin on his separation from Judah, in consequence of the Crucifixion of Our Blessed Lord (Zech. xi, 10-14), broke away from the original Kingdom of Judah to which it had been lent (1 Kings xi, 31-36), having remained with Jerusalem and faithful to David (the beloved of the Lord) until Judah rejected David's Son. Of Benjamin, Deut. xxxiii, 12 says: "The beloved of the Lord shall dwell in safety by him; and the Lord shall cover him all the day long, and he shall dwell between his shoulders."

When Benjamin got away from Palestine, for we must remember that the Galileans were not Jews in the strict sense, any more than was St. Paul himself (Phil. iii, 4-5), and received the Lord Jesus gladly (John iv, 45; vi, 15; I., 12, 13; Acts ii, 7), Judas seems to have been the only true Jew among His disciples (Farrer). They appeared in Asia Minor, and were addressed by St. Paul (Acts xiii, 26): "Men and brethren, children of the stock of Abraham, and whosoever among you feareth God, to you is the Word of this Salvation sent." 47: "For so hath the Lord commanded us, saying, I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles, and that thou shouldest be for salvation unto the ends of the earth." From these emanated the teachers of the great Apostle to the Goths, Ulphilas, who translated the Bible into the then modern tongue of the districts in Ukraine. "The charge of Rome that he was an Arian must be taken as a hostile stigma of a pure Christian man."

From Asia Minor to Scandinavia seems a big jump, but we must lean to prejudice, even if it is assisting our understanding of Holy Scripture, and must not be as the sceptical or higher critical mind, and explain it all away as of no import.

Of Benjamin, Jacob says: "Benjamin shall ravin as a wolf; in the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil." Knowing as we do that Benjamin, the Galileans, separated from Judah, as Our blessed Lord told His disciples to do, and Josephus bears out the fact, it is but a little step to assume that they joined the Asœ from Asgard under Odin, who is known to have set up the Scandinavian or Norse Kingdom. It is from here the Vikings originated the great sea warriors, and the three Rurik chiefs in the 9th century of the Christian era: one into Normandy and another as far as Novgorod to the East. Like William the Conqueror they were all born rulers, after having ravaged Europe from South-East to North-West, and back again into Italy and Sicily. Rurik and Rollo, Rurik at Novgorod and Rollo at Rouen, made their names famous; another brother had invaded Kent. It is Rurik that Russ is derived from; they were also known as Verangians, and easily asserted their power as great leaders (see Rosh in Russia Japhet).

After being conquerors of Constantinople and other places, they were forced to leave (160-171) those they ruled over, Meshech and Tubal (Moscovites and Tobolskians), but these finding they had no power of government in themselves besought the Rosh or Russ to return. It was thus in the 9th and 11th centuries that Russ became an established head. Thence we trace Little Russia, White Russia, Great Russia, Bo-Russia (Prussia). Hence the name once Benjamite but declared in the 6th century B.C. by Ezekiel as ROSH. Meshech and Tubal appears ethnologically connected with the Japhet stock. The names Meshech and Tubal, as we have seen in the genealogies of Gen. x, are easily traced upon the inscriptions as far back as the 15th century B.C. by the Caspian Sea, as conquered by Assyria, again in 12th, 9th and 8th centuries, then absorbed into the Kingdom of Nebuchadnezzar. Thus Meshech and Tubal formed part of the great image over which the Head of Gold bore sway. It is well to recall where these names occur: Gen. x, 2; 1 Chron. i, 5; Ezek. xxvii, 13; xxxii, 26; xxxviii,

2-3; xxxix, 1. Tubal without Meshech is in Isa. lxvi, 19, and Meshech without Tubal in Ps. cxx.

If the Rosh became absorbed into the Moscovite and Tobolskian, we can only suppose that they eventually will be the means of their destruction, for the clay (Israel) cannot mix with the iron (Dan. ii, 35, 43, 45).

Meshech and Tubal were formerly of the Babylonian Empire. Since Babylon conquered Assyria, and Medo-Persia also contained the Babylonian possessions, then they were moving bodily northward, but do not seem to have migrated into Europe and Northern Asia until the A.D. era. This would be at the time when Rome was at its zenith. This should satisfy us that these originally formed part of all the four World Empires.

THE QUESTION OF THE PRAYER BOOK AND AFTER.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

I AM very delighted that Parliament has rejected the Deposited Prayer Book, and I am proud to say that months ago I voted against it in my official capacity. There are and have been two classes of opponents to the new Book—(a) those who object to it because it does not go far enough in the sanctioning of their Romanising illegalities, and (b) those who object to it because it goes too far, and in a very subtle manner undermines the Protestant foundation of the doctrine of the Church of England.

Personally, I am happy to have classed myself within the latter category, because I am wholly and absolutely opposed to anything that controverts our Protestant Faith, and savours of "Rome." The Archbishop of Canterbury stated months ago that the doctrine of the Church of England was not changed in the new Book; but after a careful study of the latter, I felt compelled to come to the conclusion that the doctrine of the Church of England would be changed if the new Book were to be sanctioned by the Law of the Land. It is more than difficult to understand how so great and statesmanlike an Archbishop as Dr. Davidson could have allowed himself to be persuaded that the new Book involved no change of doctrines. It is apparent to all—and witness the huge correspondence in the Times, Daily Papers, Church Papers, etc., for months past, in which every shade of opinion has been frankly expressed by clergy and laity of all schools of thought—that the doctrine of the Church of England, as expressed in the new Book, differs considerably from the doctrine of the present 1662 Book.

Dr. Frere has stated that if there is no change of doctrine, "there is a change of emphasis," which is a very subtle and dangerous change indeed, and a statement which amounts to a quibble. Alas! there are unfortunately hundreds of clergy (and witness the 1,400 priests who have stated and subscribed their intention not to obey the new Book, if passed) who not only want a change of doctrine, but who insist upon practising rites, ceremonies. and devotions before and connected with the Sacrament of the Holy Communion which are illegal and superstitious.

The whole question centres around the doctrine of Transubstantiation. This the Church of England since the Reformation has been bitterly opposed to. The chief work of the Reformation was to turn the Mass into a Communion, and to make the congregation partakers in it, instead of spectators of it. That our Church is "Catholic" in the original and etymological sense of the term none can deny, as stated in the words of the Prayer for all conditions of men, but the Archbishop of Canterbury was right when he said in the summer that "our Church is Catholic and reformed," and Parliament has proved that it will not sanction any tampering with the "reformed" condition of the Church of England to-day.

I find it hard to understand why so many clergy desire to see Transubstantiation "legalised." We cannot put the hands of the clock back; and to revert to medievalism in Church matters would be inconsistent, unless we also revert to medievalism in every other department of our social and national life. This would mean to give up electric light, trains, steamships, aeroplanes, hygiene, etc., etc., and to live and have our being just as they did in the Middle Ages. Besides, Transubstantiation, Adoration, and other illegal practices are rank superstition, as confessed by the Articles (cf. xxviii, xxxi).

Again, we want England for the English, Britain for the British, and the British Empire for Christ—not for the Pope. Why should we, with our great, noble, and Divine heritage, submit, or be drawn into an illegal submission, to the doctrines of an alien, Roman, and erroneous Church, whose doctrines and practices have demoralised, oppressed, and corrupted tens of thousands of the peoples of Ireland and the Continent? I have always maintained that the sub-conscious soul or mind of the British people is Protestant. As a nation we abhor Transubstantiation and Romanism. The man in the street—and also many people in the Church pew—may know little or nothing about Church doctrine, ecclesiastical law, and theological disputes; but the man in the street objects to Rome, just as we as a nation and Empire abhor allegiance to foreign dominion. So that is why Parliament rejected the Prayer Book Measure. It did not reject it because the Deposited Book did not go far enough to please the so-called Anglo-Catholics, but because it went beyond the precincts of our Protestant heritage, and thus Parliament has lifted the matter out of the bounds of politics and Church disputes, and by rejecting the Book has warned the Bishops, the Church and the nation that it will not sanction any weakening of our national Protestant principles, for which the blood of martyrs was so freely shed a few centuries ago.

The next step is difficult to foresee. The Bishops have got into a terrible quandary, and they are on the horns of a dilemma. They have refused (speaking generally, for the Bishop of Birmingham has made a bold stand against his law-breaking clergy) to prohibit illegal practices under the existing 1662 Book, and Parliament has rejected their 1927 Book. Consequently, their own position is now worse than ever. It is best not to be pessimistic, but the outlook is serious. Yet there are the 7,000 who have not bowed the knee to Baal, and "if God be for us, who can be against us?" We must hope and pray for the best, knowing, as we know, that truth must triumph, and that the simple Gospel of Our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ will win through in the end.

It is difficult to foresee whether Disestablishment will follow, but my own hope and belief is that it will not be allowed of God, since our King must always be "Defender of the Faith," and "knowing whose minister he is . . . duly considering whose authority he hath," it necessarily follows that the King is the titular, cherished, and hereditary head of our Kingdom-Empire, which is the Church-nation of Jehovah. A few years ago I was in conversation with Lord Robert Cecil (as he then was), and he said to me, "You must admit, Mr. Lancaster, that the Pope is the head of Christendom." But I replied, "No, my Lord, I will never acknowledge that! The head of British Christendom is the King, who is Defender of the Faith," and may His Majesty always retain that most honourable and God-given title.

In conclusion, it is very interesting to observe that it is approximately "time, times and an half," i.e., 1,260 years since the days of the famous Council of Whitby in A.D. 664, when they could not decide whether to adhere to the British use or to the Roman. They made a compromise at Whitby, and the result has continued to this day, some wanting British or Anglican traditions, and others desiring the Roman. Had the Council of Whitby settled the question finally in favour of the British wholeheartedly as against the Roman, the history of the Church of England during the past many centuries might have been very different, and perchance we should not have been in the difficult and delicate crisis of the present moment.

NEW YEAR MESSAGES.

From MAJOR J. KNOWLES, O.B.E., President B.-I.-W.F.

HEARTY greetings and best wishes to the Editor, the staff, and all the readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER. The year that has just passed has witnessed a wide expansion of the British-Israel Movement, and I look to a still further expansion during the year upon which we are now entering. Our weekly journal plays an ever-increasing part in the spread of the B.-I. Truth, and is read by thousands who seldom, if ever, hear the spoken Word. Let us all endeavour by every means in our power to increase its circulation; we can all do something, even those who cannot afford to take more than one copy can lend their copy to others, and those who can afford to take two or more copies will help greatly by so doing. If we all work together, we shall accomplish far more than we could hope to do working separately. The staff at our Headquarters are working loyally and devotedly, and look to all members and associates of the B.-I.-W.F. for their support. I earnestly hope that all readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, who have not yet joined the Federation, either as members or associates, will join during the coming year and thereby help to make known the great Truth for which we stand.

From the REV. J. MOUNTAIN, D.D.

I ADMIRE THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER more than ever, and I look for its arrival every Friday morning with an expectancy which is never disappointed. All the articles are most illuminating, and they shed light on many parts of the Bible which, for many years of my studious life, were obscure. As to the articles by Mr. Goard, the Editor, I read them not only with instruction but with positive delight. His exposition of the Bible, and, particularly, the light which he throws upon disputed passages and upon passages which generally escape the ordinary reader—these are exceptionally brilliant. He is, indeed, a born leader of intellectual and spiritual men, as well by his pen as by his voice.

From DR. W. GORNOLD.

IT is a blessed thing to be in the Fellowship of Israel. It is not only inclusive of the blood tie that—however remotely—unites us in the brotherhood of the Hebrew Nation, but above all brings us individually into direct relation with the Lord Jesus, Who is of the same blood with us according to the flesh, and thereby into direct relation with Jehovah Christ, the Son of the Living God! That surely is something to inspire our hearts during the coming year, and, indeed, for all time. But beyond those of the Hebrew Nation (which is the whole House of Israel), we must not forget to include all those who are affiliated to us by adoption and by grace, for these are those "companions" of both Ephraim and Judah of the North and South who are to become ONE NATION in the land upon the mountains of Israel. To these also may all the blessings of the life in Christ be extended. The first stage of the realisation of this prophecy is about to take its place in the history of our nation. We all know that the world is now entering the period defined by the Last Low Passage of the Great Pyramid, which is associated with the Tribulation of Jacob, which is Israel. British-Israel identity brings us directly into the line of action. By the end of August we shall know exactly where we stand and to what we are committed. I ask you to look through the mists which encumber the earth about us. To the eyes of Faith they are not impenetrable. Beyond you will behold that veritable Land of Hope and Glory which Abraham "rejoiced to see and was glad." For under the guiding hand of that great administrator known to us as Elias, who "verily must first come and restore all things," the Lord will "thoroughly purge His floor" (which is the earth) and get His House in order that He may abide with us for ever. We see, then, that after the rooting out of the tares and the gathering of the harvest into the barn, which is the assembling of Israel in the Land of Promise, there is an immense and glorious work for all of us to do. This work cannot be done in the dark. The light of Truth must reveal the path along which we have to go, and the shining light of British-Israel Truth, so powerfully unfolded in the soul-saving pages of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, is the first, as it is finally the greatest, of all the lights that seek to illumine the darkness of the Midnight Hour. The time by the great Clock of the Universe is now at 18 minutes to Twelve, and in this wider sense of the import of events I would wish for all a Glad New Year. There are strange lights and murmurings in the citadel. Let us go out into the night and look at the stars. "When ye shall see these things begin to come to pass then lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh."

From COLONEL G. W. BRAZIER-CREAGH, C.B., C.M.G.

WITH the opening of the New Year I take up my pen with great pleasure to bear witness in expressing my profound gratitude for the spiritual enlightenment I have drawn from the pages of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER during the record year just past.

The richness of the articles each week have been to me—and I make bold to assert, must be to all readers of the journal—beacons of light and refreshing wells of spiritual joy giving bountiful help to the Bible student. To my mind they are "Clarion-like," rolling out thrilling waves of sweet spiritual music that reverberates in the heart and soul of all searchers conscious of the accuracy and inspiration of the Divine Word.

It is no small wonder that there has been such a very great increase in the circulation of the Journal, but we must not be satisfied till we reach the high-water mark of a hundredfold increase. This can only be done by the willing co-operation of every fellow-reader and every fellow-worker in the service of the Kingdom by enlisting their friends and relations in the happy brotherhood of the B.-I. Federation, which under Providence now extends to the furthest outposts of the British Empire.

Our warmest thanks are indeed due and unstintingly given to the great leaders and all labourers at Headquarters, No. 6, Buckingham Gate, for the wonderful and unflagging zeal they have shown throughout the year, meeting every call in the rapidly increasing demands for British-Israel Truth.

"Ye have not passed this way heretofore."

Our motto for the New Year should then read:

"Another year, another link to bind our brotherhood closer."

From MR. HENRY PROCTOR, F.R.S.L., A.V.I.

THE God of Israel has again crowned the work of the Federation during the past year with abundant success.

As we look back upon the last quarter of a century, we can see how "a little one has become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation." And who can doubt that such doughty warriors and indefatigable workers, as God has been raising up within the last few years, have been specially sent by Him for the purpose of "raising up the tribes of Israel," by opening the eyes of this blind people and unstopping their deaf ears? Truly, there are clouds on the horizon, and we seem to be approaching midnight, but the day is at hand; the morning cometh. Let us therefore "LOOK UP, for (our) redemption draweth nigh," and though it is a time of "Jacob's trouble," yet we know that "he shall be saved out of it," for "no weapon formed against Israel can prosper." And we to whom these things are revealed are not of the night or of darkness, but sons of light and children of the day.

From REV. P. HUSBAND DAVIES.

GREETINGS and congratulations to the Editors, contributors and all-grade helpers in all the issues of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER. It is most welcome to our home week by week. We hail its light and follow, largely, its leading. We have noticed with joy and thankfulness its growing improvement, and increased influence. Its success is well deserved. Personally, I know of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE being uttered through clerical circles in North Wales, and the arresting challenge of this Banner is regularly unfurled in South Wales—whither we send copies by the King's messengers and otherwise. A great New Year to all the writers, readers, circulators, aiders! You are doing a great work. Let us pray—among other petitions—that all believers may become "workers together with God"—realizing the glorious difference thus, instead of merely working for God—or, rather, along with—Him.

From MRS. HOLBEIN HENDLEY.

To the Leaders of the B.-I.-W.F.

I only too gladly avail myself of this opportunity of greeting my fellow believers in the wonderful message of our Federation for the unbounded and remarkable success of its unceasing labours. It has long seemed to me in its work and teaching to be the final fulfilment of the promise quoted by St. Peter in his memorable Pentecostal address, Acts ii, 17–18:

> "And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy," etc.

There is a freshness, a lucidity, an inspiration, in the teachings spoken or written, that differentiates them fundamentally from the general run of what one hears from most pulpits. Somewhat as fresh water drawn from living springs—to what is taken from stagnant pools—which awakens, refreshes, and satisfies thirsty souls, revivifying, illuminating and convincing. This because drawn from that inexhaustible fountain of wisdom and truth, God's own Word, untouched and unmixed by traditions of men. It enters into the hearts and minds of hearers with power and conviction. Draughts of "the pure milk of the Word" bring life and light.

For the first time almost, we are taking heed to the "Sure word of prophecy," and finding in the events of history of our race the Master Key to its prophetic utterances, and thus our Society is no longer walking in darkness, but has become "Children of the Day!" We recognise what of the ancient prophets have already been translated into facts and are enlightened as to the things, momentous things, yet to come! THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, which records and sends abroad these teachings of the Spirit, seems to be no other than "That messenger" which Our Lord has promised to send to prepare His way before Him. For in His written and infallible Word; in the Pyramid; and in the Signs of the Times as given by Christ Himself, we are led to expect as imminent that "Manifestation of the Sons of God" in these Isles and our Dominions for which the whole creation now is travailing, when Our Lord Himself will be revealed, bringing His sheaves with Him. Them that sleep God shall bring with Him.

We therefore rejoice in the great and wonderful energy, wisdom, enthusiasm and zeal with which the Holy Spirit has girded the Band of Witnesses who are now commissioned to carry on their task of unearthing once more God's Book from the cobwebs of superstition and tradition, and disentangling it from the wrappings of ignorance and unbelief.

We must all fervently thank God for the great work they are accomplishing, and pray that they may be spared and increased more and more "Till the day break, and the shadows flee away."

"WHEN MAY WE EXPECT OUR LORD'S RETURN?"

PERSONAL LETTERS TO THE EDITOR ask as above :—

Our answer is : the Scriptures make it clear that we should be in an attitude of CONSTANT EXPECTATION. It was possible that He should have returned long ago, if certain combinations of actions and circumstances should be brought together. It was possible for Israel to bring them together. They were not brought together, and Our Lord has not as yet returned. (See Acts iii, 19-21.) "Whom the heaven must receive (or retain) until . . . " and the until has no reference to a certain date, but to the accomplishment of certain restorations in Israel.

May we be sure as to the date of His return? We may not. Our Lord states the fact that the day and the hour of the return of Our Lord is reserved in the Father's own power. Not even the angels in heaven know. Therefore it is certain that not even the angels which fell know. Perhaps this latter is the reason for the hiding of that time. It is "at such an hour as ye think not." To be "long-daters" is to join the ranks of those who say "My Lord delayeth His coming." Against this Our Lord spoke most severely, in the twenty-fourth of St. Matthew. To be a "short dater" is to run counter to the warning of Our Lord. "It is not for you to know . . . "

But as to the nearness of His coming, when certain events begin to happen then Our Lord declared that we may "know that it is near, even at the door." This we believe we now know. We believe that to try to go beyond this, either pro or con, is to presume on ground from which Our Lord has warned us.

The SIGNS of His coming are manifest. The Time—a continuation of that to which He referred when He commenced His ministry with the cry "the time is fulfilled"—is very nearly out. For instance, the times of the Gentiles are ended. The treading down of Jerusalem "until . . . " is finished. The time of the blindness of Israel passed at the same time as the treading down of Jerusalem ended. The times of Israel's punishment ended more than a century ago, and Israel has since been marching forward on a miracle path of expansion and uplift. Part of the time of Judah's punishment is gone, and only that which falls due to end in 1934-36 remains. The last period of Judah's punishment is fraught with that tremendous upheaval which will see the responsibility and power of world rule pass to the hands of a reunited Israel. The way is then open, as far as "the Scriptures of truth" are concerned, for the coming of the Son of man. But there are even then upwards of seventy years of the present dispensation to run. It may be that the coming will be at the end of the present times. It may be that it will be at the beginning of the seventy years, for the cleansing of the sanctuary. It may be that it will be at the end of the seventy years immediately before the millennial day.

We expect, and with good reason, that He will soon "come as a thief" and gather His forces to a place called in the Hebrew tongue "Armageddon." Whether He will then reveal Himself to His own or not, and whether He will then be manifest to His enemies, we do not know. Probably not.

After that, as the last great conflict deepens, He will move from Armageddon, His G.H.Q., to the Mount of Olives. "In that day His feet shall stand upon the Mount of Olives, and the Mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst from the top to the bottom . . . " Again, whether He will then be visible to His own, and to the enemy, we do not know. After that seems to come the Marriage Supper (Matt. xxv). After that the gathering and the judgment of "His own servants," "His ten servants," and the rewarding of them according to their service during the time they have "occupied till He come." Then after that, the coming in His glory, with all the Holy Angels with Him, and the Judgment of "All nations." These seem to be the very same "All nations" which He found gathered against Jerusalem to battle. Then the Kingdom! These stages will probably take up the full remaining years to the seventh millennium of Bible history.

It would seem that the rapture of the Church is indicated by the Marriage Supper. We are impressed at this time, but still with an open mind on the subject, that the rapture of the Church is at the time of the Marriage Supper and that it is after the Mount of Olives' presence of Our Lord. In that case the great deliverance will take place first. "Then shall my people Israel know that I am Jehovah their God from that day and forward." "Then shall the heathen that are round about you know that I am Jehovah your God when I am sanctified in you before their eyes."

This seems to indicate that the great triumph of the Kingdom Gospel will have brought the nation back to the Lord in penitence and faith ; and that the great triumph of the Gospel of Salvation will bring the world to Him, when "I am sanctified in you before their eyes." Thus we look to see both the triumph of the Gospel of the Kingdom and of the Gospel of Grace before the rapture of the Church ; and we look to see both before many years have gone. We imagine that this desired end will be in sight by the end of 1928 or very shortly thereafter ; at all events we believe that it will be in sight by 1936. "Because a short work will the Lord make upon the earth."

CHINA is standing at the cross roads! Will she turn toward the KINGDOM of BRITAIN or the kingdom of the Beast?[1]

Recent developments show signs of a revulsion of feeling against SOVIET activity which should greatly favour the successful conclusion of the former alliance.

The SOVIET attempt to make CHINA a base of operations against the BRITH-ISH EMPIRE in the FAR EAST will have miserably failed (if the Chinese Nationalists follow up their present change in policy), but the inevitable crisis in the NEAR EAST brought appreciably closer.

[1] In "The Mind and Face of Bolshevism," René Fülöp-Miller refers to the ancient legend cherished by Russian peasants that a day would come when "a Nameless Beast" would rule over them. "And now it is here," continues the author, "the 'Nameless Beast,' and has set up its kingdom. . . . An attempt is being made in Russia to make a correction in the arch-type of humanity itself, to wipe out the former type, 'that soul-encumbered individual creature,' and replace it by a higher type, by a new and more valuable species of living being, by collective man, freed from the evils of the soul." The term "Beast" is used by the Bible to represent "a military power." The Soviet are now credited with having the largest army in Europe.

A smashing blow through AFGHANISTAN to INDIA or the long premeditated descent upon PALESTINE and MESOPOTAMIA will be the only alternative means of striking BRITAIN, once the thrust toward the Great Pacific Ocean has been parried.

The Daily Chronicle New York correspondent (15.12.27) reports as follows :—" The definite turn to the right decided upon by the Shanghai Central Executive Committee of the Kuomintang, was emphasised last night by Kuo Tai-chi, the Vice-Minister for Foreign Affairs in the NANKIN GOVERNMENT. He confirmed the statement by Sir Frederick Whyte that the Nationalists having turned against RUSSIA would welcome BRITISH and AMERICAN support.

" 'We are facing here,' he said, 'a decision between a SOVIET and what may be termed an ANGLO-SAXON[2] FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

Bitter experience has proved the Soviet a false god. Hence, thoughtful leaders of the Kuomintang are ready to change, but they need your support and the support of the Western Powers other than Soviet Russia if a change is to be practicable.' "

This is indeed the issue shortly to be placed before all nations. The choice of an alliance with and adoption of the LAW as represented in the world by BRITAIN—LAND of the COVENANT—or submission to the reign of anarchy and lawlessness of which MOSCOW is the radiating centre.

Meanwhile all attempts from within BRITAIN to betray this country—the one centre in the world from which the Kingdom-influences of good government and peace can radiate—into the hands of civilization's enemies should be strenuously resisted. BRITAIN is the only true bulwark against aggressive Communism, and her power and might to defend the rights of weaker nations must remain unimpaired.

Meanwhile, Admiral Tyrwhitt's thrilling rescue[3] of threatened missionaries—by the despatch of H.M.S. Seraph —foreshadows the greater works the BRITH-ISH NAVY will shortly be called upon to do. And the work of the BRITISH NAVY—a defensive weapon of the KINGDOM—will be typical of the saving work that the KINGDOM as a kingdom will be called upon to perform.

" If the enemy comes in like a flood let us bow our heads meekly to aggression and offer our lives in martyrdom[4] to the cause of Peace ! " That is the doctrine being preached by certain prophets within the KINGDOM at the present time.

" When the enemy cometh in a flood the SPIRIT of the LORD shall put him to fight[5] ! " That is the doctrine of the Scriptures in a message addressed to ISRAEL IN THE ISLES.

Which is right ? Which is closer to the spirit of the SERMON on the MOUNT—Pacifism, or the doctrine of resistance to aggression as taught by ISAIAH ?

It is not the action but the spirit of the action that counts. If we once lose sight of this we lose the meaning of the Sermon on the Mount. And losing the purpose of this sermon we at once become easy victims to spurious one-sided doctrines of passive non-resistance.

The spirit of restraint has been a characteristic of BRITISH ARMIES from the very earliest times. It has grown purer and stronger during the passing of the centuries, and to-day is one of the finest influences in the world.

The BRITISH PEOPLE may be a war-like people, but they are not a military people. They are animated by the spirit of restraint[6] and not aggression.

Even the cruder manifestation of this spirit in early days attracted the admiration of other nations. Thus PLUTARCH described the behaviour of BRITONS :—" The greater or more war-like CIMBRI live in the NORTHERN OCEAN, at the very ends of the earth. They are not called CIMBRI from their manners, it is the name of their race.

" As to their courage, spirit, force, and vivacity, we can only compare them to a devouring flame. All that came before them was trodden down, or driven onwards like herds of cattle.

" Their forces injured no man's property. They neither pillaged the fields nor insulted the towns."

Would not the latter part of this description exactly fit the British Occupation of the Rhine following the Armistice of 1918 ? As an invasion of a conquering army, what a contrast was the British progress to the conduct of the German invasion of Belgium, 1914.

And yet if any people, humanly speaking, has cause for retaliation, surely those people were the British. With the barbarities and horrors of German submarine warfare still fresh in our minds, it would not have been extraordinary if our victory had tempted us to measures of revenge.

But, no ! Our enemy was beaten and we treated him with generosity and justice and respect. That is the Brith-ish way.

Again, in 1927, BRITAIN led the Great Powers in the despatch of to SHANGHAI. But we acted upon the principle of restraint and not aggression.

Had our forces entered the city in provocative fashion, and, in order to " make assurance doubly sure," actively opposed the approaching Chinese armies (that we might clear a space around the city) our action would have invited attack

[2] i.e., " Seed of Isaac," or Israel form of government. This is but one more example of the manner in which the influence of Kingdom-government and law is spreading. Mustafa Kemal Pasha in his famous seven day speech last year, complained that what the Opposition desired (at the time of the proclamation of the Turkish Republic) was " the establishment of a constitutional monarchy based on that of Great Britain . . ." This statement shows that there are or were leaders in Turkey prepared to follow the lead in government as given by the Great Land of the Covenant. Irak is following the Kingdom method already, and a well-informed writer to the Daily Telegraph (5.1.28) testifies as follows : " The building of a State on Arab lines in Arabia is building on sand. People's eyes have been opened to the fact that the only way to set up a kingdom in the Middle East is to build as the British are building in Irak—slowly but surely, on a constitutional basis. The significance of this is fully realised when we remember that the Brith-ish Constitution upon which these new constitutional governments are being modelled, is based upon and derived from the Divine Constitution. And the Divine Constitution is the Law of the Universal Kingdom which shall embrace the families of mankind in one great family."

[4] Martyrdom may be right for individuals under special circumstances, but it remains an individual responsibility. Jesus confirmed this, at the same time ratifying the Laws for National Defence as set forth in the Book of Numbers. See Matt. v, 17-18. It is clear that if Jesus ratified the Law, He confirmed the system of military service for the defence of the nation as a nation.

and have precipitated the very condition of chaos we purposed to avoid.

In the same spirit as British troops in 1917 entered the HOLY CITY of JERUSALEM, we entered SHANGHAI—as deliverers.

Thousands of Chinese from the native quarter of the CITY flocked into the CONCESSION for refuge. These people, together with Chinese residents in the Foreign Concessions, went down upon their knees in gratitude and thankfulness as our troops marched quietly through the streets.

If ever a people literally fulfilled the 39th verse of Matt. v, the British did before the barriers of SHANGHAI. For hours and days they stood behind the barricades and suffered every kind of assault and humiliation without retaliation.

We have said that it is not our actions but the spirit of our actions that count. Not our acts but the intents of our heart which in the sight of GOD are vital.

We have also shown that the Sermon on the Mount is definitely Kingdom-teaching and a part of that Gospel of the Kingdom which is (not for the Gentiles), but for Israel only.[7]

The whole purpose of this teaching is to show that Love is the fulfilling of the Law. There is no virtue in walking two miles with a stranger who asks us to walk with him one mile. The virtue does not lie in the actual figures concerned (in the letter of the law), but in our willingness to give a stranger a helping hand, our willingness to serve, to walk a thousand or any number of miles if necessary! The detail is of no importance.

There is no virtue in forgiving a man seven times nor for that matter seventy times seven. Forgiveness that is in any way subject to limitation is not forgiveness. Forgiveness if it comes at all must come from the heart; it must be as free and full and infinite as the love which inspires it.

"Resist not evil; Overcome evil with good!" Can this principle really be applied to Britain's armies at war? Can this really be reconciled to the rôle that the COVENANT LAND is oft-times called upon to play—that of executant of divine justice[8]?

Yes! most certainly reconciliation is possible. Restraint will be exercised to the utmost limit of endurance. But if aggression comes within the boundaries of the KINGDOM (or, frontiers whose integrity is guaranteed by the KINGDOM) then following the SPIRIT of the LORD, we must put him to fight[9]! "For all they that take the sword must be killed[10] with the sword." This is an immutable law of life from which there is no escape.

But whilst judgment will overtake the oppressor there will be no hatred[11] in the heart of GOD'S PEOPLE as they pursue the path of justice. There was no hatred in our hearts when we went into the last struggle.

"We go into the fray," said the Times, on August 5th, 1914, "without hatred, without passion, without selfish ambitions or selfish ends. We go into it united, calm, resolute, trusting in GOD. That is the mood in which our fathers fought and won. That is the mood in which we, their true sons, will fight to-day, with the humble but firm hope that in a just and righteous cause, the only Giver of all victory will bless our arms."

Such indeed was the spirit of our people as a people. May this spirit shine with greater brightness and purity of intention in the judgment days which lie before us.

THE GREAT PYRAMID'S SCIENTIFIC CHRONOLOGY.

BY BASIL STEWART

(Author of The Witness of the Great Pyramid, and others).

IN the course of an article recently (not, however, in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE) the writer came across the following sentence: "We must recognise that one theory about Great Pyramid date measurements is as good as another, until one of them is proved correct by historical happenings."

The foregoing illustrates but one instance from amongst the many unscientific treatises now current concerning the Great Pyramid, how misleading it is to rush into print ere the writer has properly mastered and understood his subject. Unfortunately, owing to the popularity of the subject, would-be expositors are coming forward who are ill-equipped in the necessary knowledge and technical training such a highly scientific subject demands. For it is surely obvious that if we are to carry conviction to the outside public, there must be agreement in essentials amongst writers thereon, and erroneous statements like the above avoided. The whole point about the Great Pyramid's prophetic chronology is that one theory is not as good as another, and to affirm that it is is to display a lack of understanding of the matter.

The chronology of the Great Pyramid is, in fact, far more scientific than many a so-called "science" to which the term "theory" would much better apply. There is no theory at all about the Great Pyramid, and history since it began has proved its chronology absolutely accurate.

Again, the geometrical continuation of the Grand Gallery floor line beyond the Great Step at its upper end has been spoken of as a "theoretical measuring line" which should be distrusted, the inference being drawn that the correct method is to measure up the step and then along the level passage beyond. This shows a lack of knowledge of the ordinary laws of geometrical representation and of the use of co-ordinates. One must not go round corners. Distrust of theory is certainly necessary at times, but here again we are confronted, not with any theory, but with true scientific geometry.

[7] Matt. x, 5-6. The Gentiles as a people (disregarding individuals who by accepting Christ come under the influence of the Covenant) are not yet ready for this teaching. The people of the kingdom are being trained as a nucleus for the future universal practice of the Divine Constitution.

[9] Compare Isa. lix, 19 (A.V.) with Rev. xi, 18 (F.F.).

[10] Bukharin's outburst (as President of the Communist International) on December 13th, forms a curious commentary on this scripture. In reply to interrupters, who declared that his report on the number of Chinese persons "physically destroyed" by revolutionists was "too few," he said:—"Quite right, we must and shall kill more."

[11] Lunatcharsky, Soviet Commissar for Education, recently stated:—"We hate the Christians. They preach mercy and love of one's neighbours which is in contradiction of our principles. Christian love curbs the development of the revolution. Down with love for one's neighbour! That which we must have is to hate!" What a contrast to the spirit of Brith-ain? And what a commentary on Gen. xxi, 31

Yet a third error which the present writer has seen advanced more than once, and into which a certain type of Pyramidologist falls, is "to calculate the Pyramid's measurements and symbolisms to synchronise with historical events, and thus prove the Divine inspiration of its builder."

This is putting the cart before the horse! To calculate the Pyramid's measurements in order to make them agree with history is about as unscientific as it could be, akin to "verdict first, trial afterwards," and, so far from proving Divine inspiration, merely proves the cunning of the investigator.

Many would-be expositors of the Great Pyramid seem not to appreciate, or understand, the fact that its chronology is founded on a strictly scientific astronomical and mathematical basis, and is not derived from any actual measurements taken. These latter, however, are sufficiently near to confirm the geometrically derived values of the ideal Pyramid. Again, actual measurements cannot be taken closely enough—the hundredth part of an inch is as accurate as can be expected, and under the peculiar and often difficult conditions found in the Pyramid, even this accuracy might not always be obtainable—to reveal the true interpretation of its chronology, whereas geometrically derived measurements will give much closer results, and this refinement is necessary if correctness is to be obtained.

The basis of this mathematical system is the year-circle, or the length of the solar-year expressed as a circle; which means that all dimensions of the Great Pyramid are mathematically related to, or derived from, a value of 36,524.2; 3,652.42; or 365.242 Pyramid inches.* A year-circle, on the scale of ten inches to a day, is geometrically defined as a rectangle of four times its area in the Pyramid itself, the width of this rectangle being equal to the diameter of the circle, and its length representing the circumference, to the same scale. This circle also falls exactly internal to the outer circle of stones forming Stonehenge. Stonehenge and the Great Pyramid, therefore, are set out on precisely the same mathematical basis—the year-circle—proving that the builders of the former were descendants of the same race that had erected the Great Pyramid.

Those, therefore, who attempt to explain the Great Pyramid's chronology, except upon scientific principles, are liable to find themselves astray. It is useless, for example, to fix arbitrarily some particular point—generally the junction of the Ascending Passage and Grand Gallery is taken—as defining a certain date, to take measurements from that point to others and so obtain equivalent dates, and then to claim such dates are historically accurate. Such procedure cannot produce the results claimed for it. Yet many who follow this assumption claim to determine as the terminal dates of the Pyramid's chronology the same dates as are scientifically deduced from its astronomical and geometrical data, notwithstanding also that their arbitrarily fixed basal dates more often than not disagree considerably with the Pyramid's astronomically defined dates. No really intelligent person—least of all one scientifically minded—can but regard such methods as suspect.

Another point not always understood is the change of scale from the top of the Great Step onwards, again due to non-acquaintance with the laws of geometry, while some critics, in order to make the Pyramid conform to their theories, will change the scale of representation two or three times over in this short distance, finally asking in despair: "Who shall decide which time-scale is correct?" If they properly understood geometrical representation, they would know that the Pyramid itself answers this question, and at the same time defines the scale.

Apart from geometrical indications, structural indications suggest a change of scale; firstly, by the Great Step at the top of the Grand Gallery breaking the continuity of ascent; and secondly, by the easier—and therefore quicker—progress along the level portion beyond.

That a new scale is introduced is indicated by the fact that the Antechamber and King's Chamber extend beyond the point where the primary scale terminates, namely in the Granite Leaf, at the point completing the 6,000 years of the Pyramid's chronology, while the fact that the basal date of this new scale, August 4–5, 1914, is given by both scales proves the geometrical connection between them and shows they overlap, thereby obtaining continuity of representation.

The scale itself is defined in the geometry of the Antechamber and King's Chamber. From the centre of the former to the opposite (or south) wall of the King's Chamber is a distance of 365.242 inches, the equivalent number of days in the solar-year, and this distance is the circumferential measure of a circle whose diameter is the length of the Antechamber. This is one instance of the use of the year-circle, referred to above, in the Pyramid's geometry.

This distance symbolises a great year of months, each of 30 days; that is to say, the geometrical measurements are set out as days of the solar-year, but on a scale wherein one day represents a month of 30 days, the ancient Egyptian and prophetic month, and according to Marsham Adams this is confirmed in the allegory of the Great Pyramid in the Egyptian "Book of the Dead," in which the mysteries of Osiris are a perverted form of the prophecies symbolically revealed in the Great Pyramid concerning Christ. The period thus designated extends from August 20, 1923, to August 20, 1953, or 30 years in all.

In this connection the writer has been asked: "If this distance represents in inches the number of days in a solar-year, how can the months be months of 30 days?" The answer is that 365.242 months of 30 days each is the same duration of time (10,957.26 days) as 360 of our varying months, which equal 30 solar-years.

That the scale of the Pyramid's chronology for modern times is correctly taken as an inch for a month is also borne out by the fact that the terminal year of this dispensation so obtained is the same as that given by the great "Seven Times" of Bible prophecy—viz., 1936.†

"The Christian on his knees knows more, and can see further than the philosopher on tip-toe."

* Detailed explanation will be found in the second edition of the Witness of the Great Pyramid, now in course of preparation.

THOUGHTS ON EZEKIEL'S "TWO STICKS."

BY "EYNSFORD."

IT is held by some opponents of British-Israel Truth that the union of the two sticks as foretold by the prophet (Ezekiel xxxvii) had for all practical purposes been fulfilled at the time of the return of the Jewish captives from Babylon, which was some seventy years after the parable was put forth. This theory implies that the present-day Jews represent the whole of the Twelve tribes. An idea, by the way, that is not entertained by the Jews themselves.

Other opponents hold that there are yet some remnants of the Ten tribes who will be found, and that they will be united to the Jews in fulfilment of this parable. These opponents maintain, however, that the Jews of to-day are made up of enough of the Ten to constitute them as fully representative of the Twelve tribes. This is hardly consistent, for it is clear from the parable that it is to be a union of Judah, not odd remnants, but with definite "tribes" in the Stick of Joseph. The prophet declares the reunion of two separated peoples, of two numerically unequal groups. If the Jews already constitute the Twelve tribes how can the Ten-tribed kingdom be united to them in the future? The parable does not give the impression that the Stick of Judah constitutes the Twelve. True, it speaks of Judah's "companions," consisting of members of the other tribes, but shows that the Stick of Judah does not embrace any one (or more of an) entire tribe of Israel. More of this anon.

Another exactly opposite view seems to obtain. It is the very reverse of that held by opponents, namely, that the present-day people of the Ten-tribed kingdom contain so many people of the House of Judah other than the present-day Jews, that they (the Celto-Anglo-Saxon race) constitute the complete Twelve tribes; that the Jews of to-day are not in this Twelve, but that they are, shall we say, a rejected people, who do not represent the real House of Judah!

The basis of this theory seems to be as follows. Within a few years of the destruction of the kingdom of Israel, and the main deportation of that people, another king of Assyria essayed to do with Judah as his immediate predecessors had done with Israel. This emperor, Sennacherib, invaded Judah and took practically all the fenced cities thereof till there was left only the capital untaken. This he would have accomplished, but for the marvellous intervention of God, who delivered Hezekiah and Jerusalem from his hand. As a result of this campaign, it is stated that some 200,000 people of Judah and Benjamin were deported by the Assyrians. The number, if correct, must have been a crushing depopulation of Judah. What became of these captives? They were not deported to Babylon. They had nothing to do with those who, over a century later, were taken to Babylon. They were transported to the identical regions whither the people of the Ten tribes had been carried, hundreds of miles away from Babylon. This meant a great accession of the men of Judah and Benjamin and of Levites to the captives of Israel. What an accession of Levites to the Leviteless people of Israel. It has been suggested that this enormous influx of the Judah people to the captives of Israel was nothing less than the union of the Stick of Joseph and the Stick of Judah as presented in Ezekiel's parable.

But this fusion here described took place more than one hundred years before the time of Ezekiel. The prophet was not describing a past event but was foretelling one in the then distant future. "Distant future," because the union of the two sticks was not to take place till after the events of the previous vision narrated by the same prophet. in the same chapter, namely, that of the Valley of Dry Bones (Ezekiel xxxvii). That vision showed what was to be the condition and rise of the House of Israel of the northern kingdom in its three distinct stages. It was not until after the restoration of Israel that there could be a union of the two sticks. The restoration of Israel, according to another prophet, Hosea, was not to occur till the dawn of the "Third Day." Nothing so far in the nature of such an union has taken place since the dawn of Hosea's Third Day, although the restoration of Israel on the Third Day has indeed come to pass in the period foretold. We await the reunion of the two sticks.

There must to-day be two separate peoples, one representing the House of Joseph, and one representing the House of Judah. Who are they then? We answer, the people of the British Empire and the United States of America represent Israel, while the Jews are the House of Judah. The twain are one day to be One Stick in the hand of God.

It is very important to note the prophet's exact description of the sticks. Who exactly constitute the Stick of Judah and who that of Joseph? It will be noted that each has his "companions," meaning, obviously, that in the Stick of Judah are representatives of the other tribes, and that in Joseph there are representatives of Judah and the other tribes. It is very striking that in the Stick of Judah there is only one entire tribe, namely, Judah; while in the Stick of Joseph there are not only representatives of all the tribes, but all the tribes, as entire tribes (save Judah, of course). The other "tribes," as entities, are in the Stick of Joseph and not in that of Judah. Here are the descriptions: Ezekiel xxxvii.

The Stick of Judah.

v. 16.—Take thee one stick, and write upon it, For Judah and for the children of Israel his companions.

The Stick of Joseph.

v. 16. Then take another stick and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions.

v. 19.—Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the TRIBES of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand.

Joseph and the tribes—Judah with no tribes. This is in keeping with what was indicated by Moses regarding Judah, when he blessed the Twelve tribes before his death. (Deut. xxxiii, 7.)

Hear, Lord, the voice of Judah, and bring him unto his people: The reunion of the ONE Tribe, Judah with the other ELEVEN.

OBITUARY.

THE LATE MAJOR W. J. R. HUTCHISON (ADELAIDE, SOUTH AUSTRALIA).

WE deeply regret to announce the death of a prominent supporter of British-Israel Truth in South Australia, Major W. J. R. Hutchison, on 21st October, at his residence in Magill, near Adelaide. He was born not far from Kingston in that State sixty-two years ago, and was educated at Scotch College, Melbourne, Victoria, and Whinham College, Adelaide.

After passing through the University of Adelaide he intended to take up the special study of civil engineering in England, but family changes prevented that being done. However, he studied hard along these lines at home, and after some years spent on a large sheep station, and another long period in business, he was found worthy of a better position and became accountant and confidential clerk to an extensive firm of pastoralists.

He took a deep interest in military affairs, and was connected with the military forces for over twenty-three years. For four years he acted as an area officer under the compulsory Training Defence Act, and was for a considerable time associated with the Australian Signalling and Intelligence Corps, holding the rank of Captain in both. In his earlier years he joined the South Australian Mounted Rifles and served twenty years with that unit. His skill in military surveying led to the completion of a topographical map which was highly praised by the military authorities. For some time he was commanding officer of the No. 1 Squadron of the 23rd Light Horse Regiment. On the outbreak of the Great War he acted for two years as Transport Officer on several steamers taking troops from Australia, and his work in that position was most highly spoken of. On his reaching the age limit in 1918 he retired with the honorary rank of Lieut-Col., and the V.D. Medal. All his life he was a great student, and diligently made the most of his time; and by joining the International Correspondence School gained a Diploma from London which enabled him to take an important position as a draughtsman in the Government Lands and Surveys Department, and this he held until his death.

British-Israel Truth was a matter of absorbing interest to him, and he devoted most of his spare time in later years to the propagation of its teaching. It was only after the most patient study that he became convinced of the Scripturalness of its tenets, and from that moment he delighted to tell the good news to others. He never wrote any books on the subject, though he was quite capable of doing so; his efforts being employed rather in contributing occasional articles to the Press, and especially in carrying on private correspondence with those who failed to grasp the Truth as he himself saw it. In this way he was the means of clearing away the doubts of many and of confirming them in the faith.

He was one of the founders of the Adelaide Branch of the B.-I.-W.F. in March, 1920, and held the office of President ever since its formation. It is safe to say that he knew the subject of British-Israel Truth better than any other person in South Australia except the late Mrs. Salter, to whom the Adelaide Branch is indebted for a valuable collection of books. He was always prepared to uphold B.-I. against all opponents; but this he did so courteously and graciously that he won the respect and esteem even of those who did not agree with his views. He will be greatly missed from the B.-I. meetings, where he made an excellent chairman. He was deeply interested in Scripture Prophecies, and was a most intelligent student of the Bible; he loved it better than any other book, and made it the test of every statement or doctrine that came up for discussion.

He was also a staunch upholder of the Protestant Federation, and was always ready to assist other kindred organisations. He was Minister's Warden of St. George's Anglican Church, Magill, and a most consistent worshipper therein; his upright and Christlike life being a splendid example to all.

His widow, a daughter of the late Mr. James Cooke, one of the early pioneers of South Australia, is an equally enthusiastic supporter in the British-Israel Cause, and freely uses her time, her talents, and her home, for its furtherance.

We at the London Headquarters are deeply grieved at the loss of our good friend. We shall miss his charming and always highly valued letters. To his widow and to all our South Australian supporters we tender our sincere sympathy.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

[It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.]

THE LAW OF THE LORD, OR THE COMMON LAW.—II.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

ONE of the great movements of the day is the spread of the Common Law to new peoples and nations of the earth.

Within the Empire, and within the scope of the rule of the United States of America, the law follows the flag.

This is a very easy statement to write. It is a very hard statement to understand in all its significance and extension. It means the removal of systems of law—such as that of Islam—from peoples who have been subject to them for ages, and establishing over them—not personal rule—not the rule of one race over another, but—the reign of the Common Law.

For ages the Common Law has been the birthright of the Anglo-Saxon people. For ages before Christ the body of law which Molmusius codified in the fifth century B.C., ran in these Islands. The basis of the Molmusius laws, the King Alfred laws, and the Common Law as expounded by Blackstone, was the same. The law arose "from the natural and revealed law of God." It is probable that the law was first introduced into these Isles by Israel colonists; as British Law was introduced into America by British colonists. The law had an earlier beginning than the Sinai Code, for the Sinai Code was, as we are clearly informed in Scriptures, but a restatement of a system of law already long in existence in the earth among the people of God. Such was also the Molmusian Code; the King Alfred Code; and so on. Each immigration of Israel people seems to have brought a renewal of the Divine Law.

The Common Law never became universal; in historic time it followed branches of one race, namely, the people descended from Shem; especially the Israel people, which people were and are divided into the House of Israel and the House of Judah. It was centred in the Jewish nation until the destruction of the nation of the Jews. From that time the Jews never had the opportunity of putting into force the national clauses of the Common Law, but were subject to the laws of the peoples and of the lands in which they dwelt through all the ages of the Christian dispensation.

Israel also went out from its own land and became for a time subject to the laws of Babylon and Medo-Persia. Then they went into a new land, "In order that they might keep their own statutes," as Esdras tells us.

The Common Law may well have been the guiding principle of Israel on the Continent during the ages of migration. From the somewhat vague testimonies of secular historians as to the inherent righteousness of the Israel peoples in Scythia and elsewhere in Europe, and as to the law they practised, we take it for granted that such was the case. From the triads of the ancient British, the "dooms," and the practice of the Saxons and of the Danes when they came into Britain, we know that it was true of them all in these Islands.

Since their settlement in Britain, we know that the Common Law has been the law of the Ancient British; the Anglo-Saxons; the Danes; and the Normans, who constitute the people. The Common Law has been "the law of the land."

So we find that this Common Law has been the birthright of the people of this land from the beginning.

It was the attempt to set aside the Common Law, and to establish personal rule in Britain, which cost King Charles his head, and the House of Stuart the throne.

When the "Mayflower" went out on its adventurous journey, the Common Law was, next to the Gospel, the most precious part of her cargo. It was, then, the bone of contention in Britain, and the determination to continue in its freedom sent forth to America the advance guard of that host which has since swelled to more than half a hundred million of British descent who followed in the footsteps of their leaders. In England the fight waxed fast and furious as the rebellion shook the country. It was the King on one side, fighting for personal authority ; and on the other hand, the people fighting for the continuance of rule according to the Common Law of the land.

Not until the final flight of James the Second was the matter settled in England, as only it could be settled, by the restoration of the full force of the Common Law. This was secured by setting up another branch of the House of David, whose throne should stand upon the basis of the Common Law. So that an attack on the Common Law on the part of the Crown or the Commons would now be an attack on the foundation of the throne and the rights of the House which sits upon it. The rule of the House of David is divinely established by an everlasting Covenant. The decision as to what branch or person of that House should occupy that throne is left open. Having thus made matters secure in Britain by making the ruling branch of the House dependant upon the Common Law, we may look at the extension of the Common Law to the Continent of America.

Let us bear in mind that not all the peoples which took their way to America were conversant with the Common Law. The Continental peoples had been subject to the Civil Law which descended from the Roman Empire. The United States adopted the Common Law of Britain, and established her system of Jurisprudence accordingly.

Canada, and all other British territories on the Continent of America, naturally organised government on the basis of the Common Law. Thus the law was established in the North American Continent, and now the whole of North America, north of the Mexican border, is governed in accordance with that great system of law.

The law went with the British settlers to Africa ; to Australia ; to New Zealand. It was carried there as the birthright of the colonising British people. It was second only in the list of their most treasured possessions. The first in the list was, and is, the Gospel of Our Lord Jesus Christ ; but the Common Law held the second place.

Thus throughout the widespread territories of the Anglo-Saxon nations the Common Law was established in the earth.

Think of the one little kingdom of the fourteenth century which had the light of the Common Law ; and then think of the widespread territories and the virile Anglo-Saxon nations which now glory in that law.

We now take another step forward, as we consider the extension of the Common Law among the other races within the Empire, and under the flag of the United States. The question agitated the United States when first her steps were turned to lands beyond her American borders, "Does the law follow the flag?" They thus asked a question of great importance to the overseas territories of the United States, as, for instance, Hawaii and the Philippines. But they asked a question which had a deeper significance than they then dreamed of. Of course the law follows the flag. So, revoking the Civil Law as administered by Spain, the Philippines, etc., came under the Common Law as adminstered by the United States.

This question had long before been decided for the Empire when the Common Law was established in the then new dependency of India. It was a strange and drastic thing when, for the first time, Judges of the British Bar were sent to put into operation the Common Law in India. Some hundreds of millions of our fellow subjects there are now being ruled according to the system of the Common Law. The rule of Britain over India has been beneficent, but irksome to India, as the rule of one people over another must always be. But the replacement of preceding systems by the Common Law has been welcomed by all classes, as securing equity and justice to all.

Still the great reform swept ahead with the extending of the boundaries of the British Dominion, Palestine being the last of the countries to come under the law, which law originally went out from thence with the march of the Israel people.

Under the flags of Britain and the United States there are now some six or seven hundred millions of human beings governed by the tenets of the Common Law.

Last summer, in the United States, there gathered a marvellous group of Jurists from the nations of the world, to consider the systems of that law, and to learn which of these systems was proving of the greatest benefit to the human family. British and American Jurists represented the exponents of the Common Law.

One of the great utterances of that great conference was made by the distinguished Japanese Jurist. He said in effect : that Britain is the fountain-head of law and justice. That the British system had been established throughout the Empire, in America, and in the British dependencies. A study of the various systems of law obtaining among the nations led to the conclusion that there is no other system so essentially righteous and equitable. He went on to say that the Common Law emanating from Britain, as from a fountain-head, is destined to become universal because of its essential righteousness. Some nations might not like to take the law from Britain. But whether they like it or not, the nations will be constrained, by the essential righteousness of the law, to adopt the system. So the Common Law will become universal.

Chancellor du Bois, of the Chicago Law School, declared in a public address at Chicago, and at Aurora, Illinois, that one of the many startling things which have taken place within the last few months was a declaration on the part of the Premier, or President, of France (memory is uncertain which) in favour of the Common Law, as contrasted with the Civil Law. The difference between the two systems is fundamental. For instance, the Civil Law holds that :

EVERY MAN—AND EVERY NATION—IS GUILTY UNTIL HE HAS PROVED HIMSELF to be innocent.

The Common Law holds that :

EVERY MAN—AND EVERY NATION—IS INNOCENT until he has been proved to be guilty.

The French leader has lately declared that this Common Law principle must be applied, for instance, in estimating the intent and action of Britain among the nations. This is a long step forward towards a better spirit in International councils, where always there has been that suspicion of guilty intent which has been the tap root of the Civil Law. This also gives to the individual some hope of relief from such tragedies as the Dreyfus case, wherein the charge, once laid against the suspect, goes into effect, failing proof of the innocence of the defendant at law.

This article does not pretend to draw the line between the countries ruled in accordance with the Common Law and the Continental nations under the Civil Law at this time. There may be countries in Europe which are approximating to the Common Law, as, for instance, Switzerland. It would take an international lawyer to draw this line clearly. But this article does point out the rapid spread from Continent to Continent, and from Nation to Nation, of the Common Law as it prevails in Anglo-Saxondom. The Common Law prevails in the Empire and in the United States of America. The Civil Law prevails among European nations largely.

The Moslem Law prevails in the free Mohammedan States. The latter two systems are giving way before the Common Law.

Now, when we remember that the Common Law is the continuation of the Divine Law, or, as Blackstone says, "the natural or revealed law of God" (vide Psalm xix), we see the miracle of the spread of that law in the earth in line with the sacred prophecies.

In connection with this there is another matter of interest and importance. The language in which the Common Law has been expressed for ages past has been and still is that of the English tongue.

The English language is also the language of the authorised, and of the revised, and other great versions of the Bible. The English language is the language of the Book of Common Prayer, in which the nation Israel expresses in such stately language its national and individual worship of Jehovah, the God and King of Israel.

The English language is the language of Shakespeare, Milton, and Bunyan in general literature. Next in importance to the Bible and Prayer Book—the great standards of religion—the English language is the language which embodies the Common Law. Every phrase, clause and term of the Common Law have been expressed in the English language, and have been subjected to the searching investigation of the courts. The meaning of the terms is fixed. The meaning of the phrases is known. To translate these into another tongue would be to endanger the continuance of the meaning and spirit of the law.

In view of these considerations, there has been set on foot a society for the making of the English language universal in the earth. At the head of the British wing of this society was the late Lord Northcliffe. The present centre of the organisation in Britain is at Oxford. At the head of the American wing of the organisation is Chancellor du Bois, of the Chicago Law School, with headquarters for America in Chicago. The society is carrying on its work in perhaps a score of different countries, and is achieving a good deal of success.

So we may say: The Latin and Greek tongues are the languages used to supply the terms of natural science. But the English language is the language in which is expressed the Common Law. The growth of the language, and the spread of the law, are two outstanding facts in the world at the present time.

RUSSIA—II.

THE KINGDOMS OF THIS WORLD VERSUS THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

BY THE REV. L. G. A. ROBERTS, COMMANDER R.N.

IT is essential to our mind to show that the great ruling races of Old Testament times have most of them migrated North and Westward. That is from the great platform of the original East. Those left behind, though once forming a portion of these races, have to a certain extent deteriorated, and with the exception of China, Japan and Arabia, are ruled over by the descendants of the former World Powers. Persia may be an objection. Theology, unfortunately, does not take the Bible as a sure guide, nor even treat it with the respect due to a scientific publication, but we can accept the Bible as the truest Ethnology and History as far as it goes. So with old maps (sacred especially) we trace the Western races as having originated from the East, but the veil is not yet lifted as we find stated it will be in Isa. xxv, and the nations are yet in "the sieve of vanity" (Isa. xxx, 28). Israel is now made manifest, also Turkey (Edom) and Rosh, Meshech and Tubal, Gomer and all his bands, the house of Togarmah, etc., etc. We are now becoming more and more familiarised with them. Concisely, we may say that all the powers of evil are included in the World Powers. More particularly those who have had the Gospel and the presentation of Jesus Christ made to them, and apostatized. The Kingdom of God will have others (individual and collective) joined to it, called "others besides the gathered ones," "the voluntary from among the people who are joined unto the people of the God of Abraham." In the dream of Nebuchadnezzar we have presented but four World Powers, as two, Egypt and Assyria, had been superseded by Babylon and his Head of Gold. Then came Medo-Persia, Greece (Macedonia), and Rome (including Turkey). These four being called upon the scene we know to-day have passed away. The last phase of the Roman is still on the tapis, and is expanded again in Rev. xvii. This is said to be an eighth head of the beast "which is of the seven and goeth into perdition."

Now, although Daniel only commences his World Powers with Nebuchadnezzar, and mentions but four Kingdoms or World Powers, Rev. xii, xiii and xvii takes us right back to the dragon power of Egypt, and thus includes Egypt and Assyria, making six, but Dan. viii adds another, Mohammedan, or Turkish Power arising out of the Grecian (Dan. viii), Roman (Rev. ix). This, then, makes seven. Again, the Roman, last of the four, includes also the Turkish and another which is an outcome of the four before either of the Apostasies began to develop, for Meshech and Tubal were not finally in the extreme North until about the 6th century A.D. (see Russia Japhet, Pl. iv, p. 51).

Hence we derive the eighth-head of the seven, as it has been so intimately associated with Togarmah or Turkey, which certainly constituted a World Power of dominance over Israel's birthright for at the least 400 years, Gen. xxvii, 40; promised to Esau (Edom).

All the great wars of the universe have been over right and wrong, good or evil, this is acknowledged by all historians; the Word of God alone gives us knowledge of the battles of the Kingdom of God. These are evident from the very first as early as Genesis. Now we realise that in the days of the four Kings of Babylon, 747 B.C.; Medo Persia, 710 B.C.; Macedonia, 776 B.C.; Rome, 753 B.C.; the God of Heaven sets up a Kingdom in Ireland, 583 B.C. (Ezek. xxix, 21; xvii, 22-24). The throne of David in Britain, which shall never be destroyed, which we hold to be the Throne of the Lord, Exod. xvii, 16 (comp. Rev. xv, 16) as to the final voice out of the Temple in heaven, and from the Throne, saying:

IT IS DONE.

Ezek. xxxix, 8, where also these words occur, we have the great struggle of Assyria against Israel—Armageddon.

Evidently Dan. ii, 35, 44, 45, the Stone smiting the image for the last time, is not yet come. The victory already won is but an incentive and promise of that greater one to which all that is now in fermentation and confusion is hurrying.

What is here meant by what is done? "It is done" refers evidently to Our Lord's cry of victory from the Cross, though probably but the beginning of "It is finished." The kingdom of this world now committed into Our Lord's power shall become the Kingdom of Our Lord. If we reconstruct the image of Daniel as intended at the time that Daniel interpreted it, it is seen to convey a forecast of historical events from the time of Nebuchadnezzar until the time of Christ, and that the metals (Powers represented by them) though in their initiative had not developed into ruling Powers, but by process of evolution gradually became each one successively strong enough to overcome its predecessor and rule over all. "Thou sawest till that a stone was cut out of the mountain without hands" implies that when the vision was first seen the stone cut out was a part of the vision, and looking from the head along what we now discern as the metals forming the complete body, gold, silver, brass, iron, with feet part clay part iron; the stone that was cut off did not belong to the image, but did belong to the mountain. So the whole mountain was not itself belonging to the image, at any rate when it was cut off. The language conveys the idea that the stone was at the feet of the image.

It is a geographical fact that at one time, probably a thousand years B.C., the British Islands formed part of the Continent (see LEISURE HOUR, 1874, pp. 421-423). The complete collapse of the image as related in Daniel as being "together" (though progress in the growth of the stone is seen to take place) does not take place until the end, for Dan. ii, 34, presents us with the warring power of the stone upon the feet of the image. This we know as a fact, the wars of Britain against France and Spain, until both Powers lost their hold of the image supremacy, which they did their best to reconstruct. But v. 35 gives us the destruction of the whole image by the same instrumentality, though who is the leader of this great colossal heterogeneous mixture we are not there told, but Rev. xvii, 11, describes him as "the beast that was, and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of the seven, and goeth into perdition." It is not that he is of the seventh, but he is of the seven. Which seemingly implies he originally belonged to each one of the seven.

This is exactly what we find has been the case with Meshech and Tubal: they were in the Assyrian, the Babylonian, the Medo-Persian, the Grecian, the Roman, the Turkish; and no doubt before any of these in the Egyptian Empire. It may well be styled the world struggle against the Kingdom of God. And as such, the last of this dispensation.

In Rev. xvii, 10, we are told concerning the scarlet coloured beast, who has seven heads and ten horns, that this beast, at the time of the vision's foreview, was one upon which the great whore sat, but at the moment when John saw it, only five of the heads were fallen, and one then was; this is asserted to be that great city which at the time (John was in Patmos) was reigning over the kings of the earth. As five were fallen, John lived during the development of the sixth. Egypt one, Assyria two, Babylon three, Medo-Persia four, Greece five, Rome six; the other was not yet come.

There is great difficulty in understanding who this sixth head refers to. But perhaps 2 Thes. ii clearly defines this as the Power which then contained within it, in St. Paul's time, "the mystery of iniquity which doth already work," but owing to its being in existence it restrained the full development of the man of sin. "Let no man deceive you by any means, for that day (the Second Advent) shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the Temple of God showing himself that he is God. Remember ye not, that, when I was yet with you, I told you these things? And now ye know what withholdeth (the Roman Cæsar's) that he might be revealed in his time. For the mystery of iniquity doth already work; only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way (on the fall of the Cæsars the Pope took possession of Rome). And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the Spirit of His mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of His coming." Here then is one continuous Apostasy lasting from the coming in of the Papal Power and ending only by the judgment brought about by the Word of God. Dan. vii, 22-28, describes this judgment. Although the Papacy is the one here predicted, there is running with it Mohammedanism, Dan. viii, 23-26. These two have lasted side by side, and both have equally sought the persecution and destruction of the Saints of the Most High; but here also, as with the Stone Kingdom of Dan. ii, 34-35, 44, 45, will only be completely destroyed at the brightness of His coming.

The ten horns are ten kingdoms which have received no kingdom as yet (at the time of John), but receive power as kings one hour (a definite time) with the beast, they have one mind, and shall give their power and strength unto the beast. These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them; for He is Lord of lords and King of kings, and they that are with Him are called (Abrahamic) and chosen (Israel) and faithful. This seems to bring us to the late war, and the commencement of the era of the last battle of the great day. Before this, as we have already seen, the eighth head of the beast which is of the seven, as we may read it, each one of the seven has had enmity against the Kingdom of God, and this eighth is the last phase of the Wicked one, which will go into perdition. This we believe to be, prophetically, Rosh, Meshech and Tubal.

We have already seen, at the French Revolution, the commencement of the ten horns, of which the seventh head was composed, beginning their hatred of the whore; now they will shortly make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh (withhold her subsistence), and burn her with fire. For the spirit of the eighth head, Sovietism, will infect them in such a way that God having put it into their minds to fulfil His will, they will agree and give their kingdom unto this eighth head of the beast, until the Words of God are fulfilled, as they have done hitherto to the Papacy.

This then is the completion of that foretold under the Seventh Vial. "And the seventh angel poured out his vial into the air, and there came a great voice out of the temple of heaven, from the throne, saying 'It is done.' And there were voices, and thunders, and lightnings, and there was a great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake and so great, and the great city was divided into three parts, and the cities of the nations fell; and great Babylon came in remembrance before God, to give unto her the cup of the wine of the fierceness of His wrath. And every island fled away, and the mountains were not found. And there fell upon men a great hail out of heaven, every stone about the weight of a talent, and men blasphemed God because of the plague of the hail; for the plague thereof was exceeding great."

This finale is related in sundry passages, the third woe which comes quickly after the destruction of Turkey.

RENEWAL OF THE COVENANT.

IN the final number of last year's volume of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER we published the form of Covenant renewal prepared by John Wesley, and by him given to the British and American Christian world.

In the first number of the present year we called attention to the fact, and invited our readers to thus enter into Covenant relationship with the God of our Fathers, and of us, or to renew their Covenant with Him; and having done so, to drop a line to that effect to Headquarters.

We are delighted to be in receipt of a stream of letters from groups, and from individuals, in response to the call. Thus a band of stalwarts is being formed, and recorded at Headquarters, of those who will specially work and pray together for the furtherance of the work which has been committed to our charge.

As THE MESSAGE bearing the form of renewal goes further afield, for it takes weeks for each issue to get to the limit of our great parish, we shall hear from many more, and shall delight to have the assurance.

One correspondent remarks: "The number of letters you will receive will be no indication of the number who have thus renewed their Covenant, as we are so diffident about speaking of such very private things." This, of course, is true. Yet the letters received are an indication of the strong current of spiritual devotion and power which is running beneath the surface of the Movement. Let us all thank God and take courage.

THE SECOND BOOK OF ESDRAS.

BY THE REV. J. H. SATCHELL, B.A.

AN excellent translation of the Syriac version of this book supposed to be the most correct of all the many versions, has in recent years been made and published by the Rev. Canon G. H. Box, Lecturer in Rabbinical Hebrew, King's College, London. In this version, as in all other Oriental versions of 2 Esdras, chapters i-ii and xv-xvi of our A.V. do not appear, and are considered by the best authorities as not belonging to the original Apocalypse of Esdras, but as a later addition belonging to Christian times, while the original work, date unknown, is supposed to belong to some time more or less prior to 100 B.C. Assuming these assumptions to be correct and regarding the whole work from a B.-I. point of view, it is not a little remarkable to find that both portions of the book clearly distinguished the ten tribes, or nine and a half tribes as in some cases, from the tribe of Judah. Thus in the assumed Christian part (i, 24), run these words: "What shall I do unto thee O Jacob? Thou Juda wouldest not obey me; I will turn to other nations and unto them will I give my name that they may keep my statutes. Seeing ye have forsaken me I will forsake you also," etc. Verse 30: "I gathered you together as a hen gathereth her chicken under her wings, but now what shall I do unto you, I will cast you out from my face." Verse 33: "Your house is desolate. I will cast you out as the wind doth stubble"; and then in verse 35: "Your house will I give to a people that shall come, which not having heard of me yet shall believe me," etc.; and verse 38: "And now brother behold what glory; and see the people that come from the East." Here, I think, as British-Israelites, we have no hesitation in seeing the other portion of the family of Jacob, viz., the ten tribes. A people coming from the East could not mean the Gentiles in general, but a particular people, cf. Matt. xxi, 43; and with these people from the East are immediately associated verse 39, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and the twelve minor prophets.

The second chapter contains further particulars about these people from the East, from which it is evident that they are Israel; their departure in the past is mentioned, verse 2: "The mother that bare them saith unto them, Go your way, ye children; for I am a widow and forsaken. I brought you up with gladness; but with sorrow and heaviness have I lost you." Verse 4: "Go your way O my children, and ask mercy of the Lord." Verse 10: "Thus saith the Lord unto Esdras: Tell my people that I will give them the kingdom of Jerusalem which I would have given unto Israel." Verse 16: "And those that be dead will I raise up again from their places and bring them out of the graves; for I have known my name in Israel" (margin, "thy name O Israel") and much more to the same effect, clearly meaning the redemption of Israel, who is addressed in verse 40 as Sion.

So much in brief for the Christian portion of 2 Esdras. Now, the original work, iii-xiv, but notice first a common theme running through both parts, viz. (iii, 2) the "desolation of Sion" and the coming deliverance; ii, 35: "Be ready for the reward of the kingdom"; vi, 19: "When the humiliation of Sion shall be complete." In this, the original Apocalypse of Ezra, the ten tribes are distinctly mentioned as a unit by themselves; xiii, 39: "these are the nine and a half tribes," and although doubtless Esdras contemplates Israel as a whole in her desolation, yet evidently the ten tribes are in special consideration; vi, 38: "But we, thy people whom thou hast honoured and hast called the first-born" (cf. Jer. xxxi, 9: I am a father to Israel and Ephraim is my first-born); vii, 59: "If for our sakes the world was created, why do we not inherit the world." Speaking of the signs preceding the end, one of them is (verse 5): "the stone shall utter its voice"; cf. xiii, 35: "But he shall stand upon the top of Mount Zion (note—here identified with the mountain cut out without hands). In the eighth chapter Ezra prays for Israel, viii, 20-36, and ix, 29-33. In answer a vision is given to Ezra of a disconsolate woman (Sion) who has lost her son, but is suddenly transfigured; x, 25: "While I was talking with her, lo! her countenance shone exceedingly and as the appearance of lightning became the look of her face"; and then, while he was looking, the woman suddenly became a city builded. In the interpretation which follows verse 44: "This woman whom thou hast seen, this is Sion which thou now seest as a city being built." The death of the disconsolate woman's son is interpreted as the fall of Jerusalem. It was when Solomon built the city that the barren bare a son. (It was at the close of Solomon's reign that Israel became a separate kingdom.) There follows upon this the remarkable eagle vision, at the close of which is seen the final answer to the prophet's prayer for Israel when the enemies of Israel having been destroyed, a multitudinous mass that was peaceable is gathered unto the Son of God; "these," said the Most High (xiii, 40) "are the nine and a half tribes." Thus it would appear that the burden of Ezra's apocalypse is the desolation of Israel, more especially the ten tribes, and the final deliverance, when the Son of Man shall stand upon the top of Mount Sion, and Sion shall come (verse 36) and be revealed to all prepared and builded as a mountain cut out without hands. (See Daniel ii, 45.)

RÉSUMÉ OF ADDRESS ON THE GREAT PYRAMID AND COMING EVENTS.

By Basil Stewart

(Author of The Witness of the Great Pyramid, and many others).

The Great Pyramid constitutes, in its system of internal passages and chambers, a prophetic record, expressed in the terms of geometry, of the 6,000 years of human history from the creation of Adam to the commencement of the Millennium.

This chronologic record is embodied in two separate systems, a General system on a scale of an inch to a year, and a Special system, applying only to modern times, on an enlarged scale of an inch to a month, represented in the level portion from the top of the Grand Gallery into the King's Chamber. It is with the events revealed in this special system, more particularly with respect to what is still future, that this address is specially concerned.

The most important event of recent years which this chart has indicated is the late Great War, which was exactly revealed by the first low passage between the Grand Gallery and the Antechamber, and which constituted the initial phase of the final tribulation marking the termination of this present age. The dates of its outbreak and its termination by the Armistice, August 4, 1914, to November 11, 1918, are determined on precisely the same scientific and geometrical basis as determine all other events in the Pyramid's chronology. It is therefore specifically recorded therein, and is not due to any desire to appear wise after the event.

By analogy with the first low passage, many expect that the second passage, leading from the Antechamber into the King's Chamber, and which is twice as long, will mean a war lasting eight years, from May 29, 1928, to September 16, 1936. Such, however, is far too drastic an interpretation of Our Lord's words respecting the last tribulation. No one can say what particular form it may take, but there is little doubt that the so-called war of Armageddon will form the climax to it, and this may be—and probably will be—short but sharp.

What is foreshadowed is an intensification of natural phenomena, such as earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, and storms, of world-wide extent and abnormal frequency, and these phenomena have been extraordinarily active during the last few years, and this year in particular.

The Antechamber between the two low passages symbolises a period of truce between these two phases of the final tribulation, and the events which take place on the dates particularly marked in it serve as warnings to the events of the final phase. It signifies, in fact, the "shortening" Our Lord referred to respecting the final tribulation (see Matt. xxiv), which would otherwise have been a continuous period extending from August 4, 1914, to September 16, 1936. To introduce this "shortening" by altering the scale in the final passage to a week to the inch, as has been suggested, is contrary to the laws governing the geometry in which the Pyramid's chart is expressed. A further shortening is possible, however, just as a contractor may complete his contract ahead of time by making a special effort.

What the symbolism of the Pyramid reveals is that, whatever the future may bring forth, God will intervene, if necessary, to usher in the days of "the restitution of all things" by September, 1936, but it is up to us, as God's builders of His Kingdom on earth, to finish our contract ahead of time, and we shall do this if we ask the help of the Almighty, even as the tide turned in our favour at the crisis in the late war when the nation at last went on its knees and prayed to God "to do it for them."

What the immediate future portends, therefore, are severe seismic and other related natural phenomena, accompanied by increased political and economic disturbances, and unrest generally, particularly in the East and Near East, stirred up by Bolshevist elements. For past history clearly shows that abnormal solar activity, such as is taking place to-day, and which produces these exceptional storms and earthquakes, is also invariably reflected in humanity in the form of political unrest and war. It was precisely on these grounds that the well-known French astronomer, the Abbé Moureaux, predicted the war of 1914. In the same way, the present prevailing unrest will ultimately lead, as cause to effect, to the war of Armageddon.

This will be brought about by the invasion of Palestine by Russia and her allies, in order to establish herself in the Near East, for this region is the centre of the land surface of the globe, and the Power so situated will be able eventually to dominate the world. The main objective will be Jerusalem. Armageddon is not a place of slaughter, but is the rallying-point, or place of safety, for the forces opposing Gog (i.e., Russia).

Furthermore, Gog's defeat is brought about by the forces of Heaven itself, aided by volcanic and seismic upheavals. This is very clear from all prophecies respecting Armageddon, particularly those of Ezekiel, Joel, and Zechariah. Both Nahum and Job also tell us it is the wicked who are reserved against "the day of destruction." Russia, by her blasphemous utterances in her press and from her platform, has deliberately challenged the Almighty, and God, by His prophet Ezekiel, has accepted that challenge, and at the same time has told us what the consequences will be. We shall, in fact, see repeated, but on a far larger scale, and in a far more terrible fashion, the fate which overtook the army of Sennacherib in one night at the hands of a single "mighty one." At Armageddon there will be legions of "mighty ones."

Prophecy clearly foreshadows a time of trouble in the near future, when the indignation of the Almighty will be poured out upon the nations, but Israel, His people, the British Empire—the "Stone" Kingdom of Daniel—are to hide themselves till this is past, and in the midst of it "sing for the majesty of the Lord, and cry aloud from the sea" (Isa. xxiv, 13-15). Thus, when God's judgments are in the earth, His people will be singing His praises as never before. Does it not seem that the present remarkable spread of community singing in this country, a feature unique to these Islands, is a preparation for this?

NEW YEAR MESSAGES.

From HERBERT GARRISON, SECRETARY-GENERAL, B.-I.-W.F.

To all our readers hearty greetings and best wishes for the year 1928.

We are living in stirring times. We have entered upon a great year, one fraught with important events and perhaps great changes, but we are in the sunlight of eternity, which is transfixing to plates more enduring than brass the actual portrait of the soul in every successive act, with all its attendant circumstances.

"Be strong and of good courage, and do it; fear not, nor be dismayed; for the Lord God, even my God, will be with thee; He will not fail thee nor forsake thee until thou hast finished all the work for the service of the house of the Lord."

Let the dead past bury its dead; do not let us spend much of our lives in reasoning on the past, complaining of the present and troubling for the future. "He shall be immortal," said Fuller, "who liveth till he be stoned by one without fault." Perhaps the hardest thing to learn is to know one's self; the easiest, to find fault with the doings of other people. Great causes are seldom tried on their merits; the cause is too often reduced to particulars to suit the size of the partisans, and the contention is often hottest on minor matters. This may apply to causes like ours. It does not apply to the Prayer Book controversy. Let us contend to the uttermost for the great prize—the enthronement of TRUTH—the British-Israel Truth, the great need for to-day, indeed the greatest need. For this we must have enthusiasm. It is the fashion in certain quarters to decry enthusiasm, but "enthusiasm is the genius of sincerity, and truth accomplishes no victories without it" said Bulwer Lytton. "Enthusiasm for what is good and great is the noblest condition the heart can know, a disposition in which it were well if it could continually abide," said Dr. Vinet.

We frequently say the TIME IS SHORT in which to do what we aim at, but do we realise how short it is? Time like a river rolls imperceptibly away, till it loses itself in the vast ocean of eternity. As every thread of gold is valuable, so is every minute of time. Our pulses each moment beat the funeral-marches to the tomb. We are chained to the chariot of rolling time. There is no bridling the steeds, or leaping from the chariot. To-day is ours, not to-morrow; many of us may not be on this earth at the end of 1928; a solemn thought and one not to be put away. How many people trifle with the precious privileges they possess, until at last they are gone for ever. Un-numbered millions have had to mourn lost opportunities. May God help us all to seize our opportunities and make the best possible use of them for His glory. Let there be no morbid forebodings as to what lies ahead of us. When God puts a burden upon us let us remember that He lays His hand underneath, so that the burden may not be too heavy, and that the darker the cloud, the brighter the bow in the cloud.

When inclined to be despondent let us contemplate the majesty, the power and the love of God, and His marvellous attributes of Omniscience, Omnipotence and Omnipresence. Let us realise if we can that the heavens are a print from the pen of God's perfection; the world is a bud from the flower of His beauty; the sun is a spark from the light of His wisdom; the ocean is a bubble on the sea of His power; and shout "Alleluia, for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth"; then let us go forward into the future with full confidence.

Our Federation has been wonderfully blest and great things have been accomplished. We thank God for the unity now within our ranks. Disunion is of the evil one. Satan assiduously seeks to divide the forces making for good. It is his favourite method, and many foolish Christians are misled by his subtle and plausible plans, to their own undoing and to untold injury to the cause of religion.

We should rejoice that every person brought to British-Israel light and truth through our efforts or self-sacrifice will bring satisfaction to our hearts and minds, and will do honour to our Covenant-keeping God; make for the stabilising of our race and nation, and so far promote the grandest cause for which any man or woman can work, the mighty task of bringing all to the knowledge of the Divine plan and to a personal acceptance of the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour and King.

With profound gratitude we can testify that the spoken word has through the agency of this Federation reached scores of thousands, and the written word hundreds of thousands. Let us one and all do our very best to double the numbers at least this year.

From the REV. CANON C. J. HOLLIS, M.A.

"Ought ye not to know?" (2 Chron. xiii, 5.)

I AM grateful for the opportunity, at the beginning of the New Year, of sending my cordial greetings to my fellow-readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER. I wish I could express adequately the debt which I owe to those who so ably superintend each issue. Verily they bring out of their treasure things new and old.

I rejoice that its Message, varied and inspiring as it is, is always true to the Word of God. I would remind you that it adds to the foundation truth of the Gospel of Salvation through Jesus Christ alone that equally fundamental proclamation, only recently explained as it should be, of the Gospel of the Kingdom.

I am thankful that it is insisting earnestly on the paramount obligation to observe the Laws of the Kingdom which, it is sometimes forgotten, lie back of the Common Law of this realm.

I have been heartened by its fearless and ceaseless defence of the integrity, authenticity, inspiration and sufficiency of the good old Book, as against, on the one hand, the disparaging and disintegrating activities of modernists and higher critics, and on the other, the views of those who would overlay and obscure the supreme authority of the Word of God with another authority, that of "the Church," which tends to supersede and efface it.

I am stirred by its manifest determination to study, interpret, and be guided by the prophecies which form so large a portion of the Bible, when so many are feebly content to spiritualize, or ignore them altogether.

I am convinced by its view that we of the Anglo-Saxon peoples are fulfilling precisely the rôle, and inheriting marvellously the blessings assigned to the descendants of Abraham in the House of Israel. "God has no favourites" men object. Then why did He deliberately choose Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses and David? The answer is that He did so choose, select and set them apart, not for their own merits or advantage, but that they might be His witnesses to their fellow-men throughout the world.

I am further encouraged and stimulated by its vindication of the faithfulness of God to His promises, and by the new light which it sheds upon the Word of God itself.

Fellow-readers—examine your title deeds, claim your heritage, possess your possessions, proclaim your belief, and God bless you, your mission and your testimony.

From CANON E. C. ASPINALL, F.R.G.S.

MY New Year Message to all readers: "Lift up your heads, O ye gates, and be ye lifted up ye everlasting doors, that the King of Glory may come in." When this was penned the gates were raised by manual labour. When the King suddenly appeared, all hands had to man the spokes of the wheel that wound up the chains. There is a hand's breadth on one of the spokes for each of you. During the past year the BANNER has fed and nurtured our life and zeal. The coming of the King draweth nigh, and that of the Kingdom is being made manifest. Be not weary in well doing. When I go from home I take a copy of our Journal, and on coming away I leave it, and I have heard of much interest awakened.

From the REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A., F.R.A.S., C.F.

AS the last President of the old Imperial British-Israel Association, and as one of those who helped to found the British-Israel-World Federation, it is with very great happiness that I join with you all in humble thankfulness to the Lord God of Israel for the way in which He has blessed and sanctified the great Truth which He has entrusted to our care.

It is surely gratifying to look back upon the work of the past nine years and to note the rapid, balanced, and progressive development of our Federation since its inception in 1919. Little did we know or foresee in those days the way in which it would grow into such wide expansion as that of to-day, and surely have we proved that, "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

* * * * *

But if only the peoples of our glorious Empire would unveil their eyes and see the great Vision of our Divine heritage, what a spiritual revival there would be! There is no blessing which the Lord will not give to His people if only they would hearken unto His voice, and obey His Commandments (Deut. xxviii, 1-14). Is God withholding some of His blessing because we have not yet attained unto that "righteousness which exalteth a nation"? Are unemployment, high taxation, disease (cancer and tuberculosis), and other national ills allowed of God as punishments or Divine warnings because of our continued blindness, hardness of heart, and contempt of God's Holy Word and Commandments? Can it be said that we are yet a righteous nation, when betting and gambling are the curse of thousands and thousands of homes; when drink is subtly but sorely undermining the constitution of all classes; when we condemn Spanish bull-fights, but condone the cruel "sport" of English hunting, which has not a single Christian feature to defend it? What would Christ say to the Divorce Courts, or to the problem of overcrowding, or to the unquenched thirst of non-Christian lands?

And so as we look forward to another year of privileged service in and for "the Gospel of the Kingdom," let there be no speech nor language where the voice of our Federation is not heard. May its line go out through all the earth, and its words to the end of the world. But just as "charity begins at home," so may you and I seek to waken England, nay the British Isles, to a deeper sense of Christian responsibility. "Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people. For what nation is there so great, who hath God so nigh unto them, as the Lord our God is in all things that we call upon Him for?" (Deut. iv, 6, 7). Notice the Question, "Is there anything too hard for me?"—the Challenge, "Call unto Me, and I will answer thee, and shew thee great and mighty things, which thou knowest not"—and the Answer, "There is nothing too hard for Thee" (Jer. xxxii, 27; xxxiii, 3; xxxii, 17)!

May this year of grace 1928, then, be a year of untold blessing; and it will be so if we all pull together and seek to make our Country, our Empire, yes, and the whole wide world too, respond in more faith, hope, and love, to the Call of Calvary, and to the Claim of Christ, the King of Israel and Zion's Redeemer.

Big things may be looming ahead, for the wheels of prophecy are still revolving, nor can the latter fail in the future, since it has never failed in the past. But, "beyond the dim unknown standeth God, keeping watch above His own," so with simple and child-like trust let us march on to victory, for "Jehovah-nissi," i.e., "The Lord is my Banner."

* * * * *

In conclusion, I want also to join with you all in tendering our heartiest congratulations to our President, Major Knowles, and to our Brothers Pascoe Goard and Herbert Garrison, for the record and world-wide results of the past year. And with them we would couple the names of our many other "helpers in Christ Jesus." May God bless them all and us in our work for Him during this New Year, whose threshold we have now just crossed.

From the REV. W. BROWN POLLOCK, M.A.

Greetings, Gratitude, and Grasp.

To send a word of greeting and encouragement to my fellow-readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER is an honour and privilege. The Kingdom age is on the eve of its renewal, even though the darkness deepens, and while it does we remember with confidence and courage born of faith that the darkest hour is the hour before the dawn. The same urgency compels a closer attention than ever to the Truth we hold, and, what is more important, which holds us. I have found THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER quite indispensable. To have a periodical that focuses attention at once on matters that are vital to the Truth we hold and keeps pace with the great movements of the age in which we live, and which possesses the vision of acumen which our beloved Pastor Goard and our able Secretary-General, Mr. Herbert Garrison, contribute to it, together with other writers, make it invaluable. They help us to see that our position as Israel becomes clearer as the mystery-age of the Kingdom draws to a close and the new age of Millennial greatness and glory is ready to burst upon a wounded, wondering and waiting world. They add strength to our convictions by confirming them, and establish the belief we hold by discovering its Scriptural supports, and rescue the Scriptures from the discredited position they are made to occupy by wrong or inadequate interpretation. THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER in their hands is doing for us this great work, with no interest to serve but to discover, propagate and defend the Truth of God. This is how it appeals to me, fellow-readers, and if rightly used our paper cannot fail to be a source of sound information and a true stimulus to further reading and research. We can show our appreciation by reading it more, by placing it in the hands and before the notice of others, and by working out in our lives the high and holy ideals which British-Israel Truth holds, honours and hastens.

A question has been exercising my mind and I pass it on to you. Is it just possible that the Ten Virgins in the parable of that name are the Ten Tribes, and that this is why this parable is not to be found in the Gospels of Mark or Luke, Matthew's Gospel being essentially the Gospel of the King, and the Kingdom? And if this be so, is there a significant parallel between the outward profession of the foolish Virgins and the deceptive likeness of the tares in the parable of the Tares and Wheat in the thirteenth chapter of Matthew's Gospel? There is necessity in the light of these parables to be real, to be ready, and to be roused.

From LT.-COL. H. M. MAXWELL.

THE NATIONAL MESSAGE has again throughout another year been the greatest help, comfort and joy. It has greatly helped in the understanding of many questions—religious, national and international which have been before the country during the past year by the able articles of our British-Israel leaders, so freely given to us week by week. I would earnestly advise everyone to obtain and study this most wonderful of all papers. Its great Message, "The Gospel of the Kingdom," how new to most of us, and yet how clear, how simple, how comforting! No more difficulties regarding the somewhat vague Heaven of our childhood, but a clear understanding of God's purpose for this world by the establishing of the throne of Jehovah, the King of Israel, on this earth, through the service of "My people Israel."

From J. E. NORMAN, ESQ., J.P.

IN sending you my hearty congratulations on another year's successful work for our grand Cause, possibly I cannot do better than to quote an extract or two from a letter received by me at Christmas from an old English friend now domiciled in the United States of America.

It is many years ago that I was permitted to bring to my friend's notice the glorious Truths of British-Israel. The seed has germinated, and I think a paragraph or two from his letter may be an encouragement to us all to spread the light whenever an opportunity occurs. He says, "The Bible is a new Book to me through the study of the pages of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER. I want to thank you from the depth of my heart for putting me in touch with it. I not only read THE BANNER weekly but have also read many of the published books. I have just read 'The Destiny of the British Empire and the U.S.A.' by 'Roadbuilder.' It is a wonderful book. I had the great pleasure of hearing the Rev. Wm. Pascoe Goard some two months ago at Aurora, about sixty miles from here. He came here from Canada, where he had attended the Conference. It was a great treat. I heard him give three lectures and would not have missed it for anything. His beautiful calm spirit, without the least excitement, and the logical way he explained things, and then brought the Word of God to back up his statements, was indeed very impressive."

I trust the year 1928 will be the most successful for the advancement of our glorious Cause we have yet seen.

From MAJOR E. PICKARD-CAMBRIDGE, J.P.

WE look forward confidently to the year 1928 bringing to readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER a continuous increase of happiness as we draw nearer to the climax of the wonderful history—past, present and to come—of the Holy Bible, the Word of God.

As year by year has passed on we have watched with joy and gladness the gradual unfolding of the prophetic mysteries of the Bible.

We have noted how remarkably these interpretations have been confirmed by D. Davidson in his exegesis of the Great Pyramid.

I feel sure you will all agree with me that we should express our gratitude to the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard and to the many other authors who have contributed to THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER those most convincing and heart-stirring articles which have led us along the paths of faithfulness.

It is a long time since I personally became acquainted with our Secretary-General, Herbert Garrison, and we have seen how God, our Father, has prospered him in the work he undertook. His efforts at times have almost overwhelmed him, but he has never failed to surmount them all, and has led us truly all these past years towards the climax to which I have referred. He has drawn around him a great company of men and women, all working to the one great end, and to them we send our New Year's greetings and assure them of our great regard for the work so ably carried on. The prevailing unbelief in the Holy Bible has brought appalling chaos into the spiritual life of our ancient Church of England.

The Modernist, the Evolutionist, the Romanist, the Higher Critic, etc., stalk unabashed and unashamed through the arid deserts of their various creeds.

Some great Missionary Societies have done likewise and have made the Word of God of none effect.

We fortunate people have still the Holy Bible to guide us, and we are specially thankful to our leaders that they have again shown in the past year their uncompromising opposition to any suggestion of doubt as to authority and integrity of Holy Writ. The Bible is the sure foundation of our Christian life and belief, and we should always bear in mind that it was fully and frequently endorsed by Christ Our Lord.

From DR. HORACE SWORDER.

WHEN, and not until Anglo-Saxons realise their Israelitish origin, will our Churches be filled (using a Prayer-Book only "enriched" inside the 39 Articles), labour troubles will be a thing of the past and want of patriotism will be practically unknown.

From MR. H. D. HOUGHTON.

I AM not surprised at the success of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER. Its articles have a grasp of the Scriptures utterly wanting in other religious journals, and there is a marvellous force behind them which assuredly is beyond the power of the mere words used, which can only be understood because they are of the Truth. God has committed to us all a great privilege and honour to share in the travail which makes His Kingdom come. Long life, prosperity and greater usefulness be to THE MESSAGE and all its readers.

THE Times newspaper still lives up to its reputation for being representative of everything that is essentially sane and sober in English Conservative opinion. But even the Times, in its review for the year 1927, could not fail to see something very abnormal in the recent behaviour of natural phenomena.

Thus it testifies :—"The year 1927 is likely to be remembered in various parts of the world as much for occurrences as for anything that befell within it.

"In ENGLAND the prospect in June of that rarest of sights on English soil—a total eclipse of the sun—excited millions beforehand, and the reality overawed the few who were fortunate as to see it through the timely clearance of an overcast morning sky.

"Earthquakes, Cyclones, Storms, Floods, did more than usual mischief in divers countries ; and in GREAT BRITAIN the weather was persistently hostile to crops and men."

A statement which from any other source might well be subject to the suspicion of being tinged with the colours of a sensationalist is here presented to us in the form of sober fact.

This is important because of the modern tendency to belittle the significance of these things. It has been claimed that their prominence in our mind is due to the publicity given to them by the daily Press. That in the days before the advent of newspapers these great natural upheavals were just as common as they are to-day but that they passed unnoticed by the masses apart from those actually involved in the disasters.

Whilst there is some truth in this argument (as far as it goes), yet expert* opinion and investigation is now providing demonstration of the fact that present-day phenomena is abnormal. That, for instance, there is actually a great increase in the frequency of bad earthquakes at the present time.

This testimony is valuable because of the connection between the time for the occurrence of these abnormal happenings and the fulfilment of prophecy regarding the Second Coming of JESUS CHRIST.

If these disturbed conditions are not abnormal they do not constitute a sign. If they are abnormal they are a sign of the first value.

Just as a great earthquake accompanied the crucifixion of the KING of the KINGDOM of HEAVEN, so in these last days, will "Earthquakes and in the World" mark the time of the crucifixion of the KINGDOM.

"Now is the CRISIS of this WORLD," ‡ declared the KING of the KINGDOM of HEAVEN regarding the time of His death and resurrection. Now, in the END of the AGE, THE WORLD CRISIS of 1914–1936 marks the appointed time for the manifestation of that race of super-men, the sons of GOD.

* Milne, Davidson, etc.

† See II Esdras ix, 3. This is a reference to the coming world-revolution. The waves of world-unrest, however, will break upon the rock of Britain. The pressure of world-revolution without will create a revolution after God's own heart within the soul of the Kingdom. This is the time of Jacob's trouble, but he will be saved out of it ! (Jer. xxx, 7). The "Jacob" element in the Kingdom wrestling with God in prayer will prevail and become "Israel"—rulers with God.

‡ John xii, 31 (Ferrar Fenton).

The Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin spoke better than he knew when he said that the Englishman was " made for times of crisis."

That is true. But not only has the ANGLO-SAXON RACE been made for crisis ; the crisis of the END of the AGE is going to " make "§ the ANGLO-SAXON RACE !

Chastened in the furnace of affliction GOD'S BRITH-ISH PEOPLE will be re-born into the higher biological scale of the sons of GOD.

In the days that are coming a real man will be " more precious than the golden wedge of OPHIR " ! Crisis is the test of manhood. And only a manhood founded on CHRIST will have power to stand.

The spirit of ENGLAND burns at its brightest at such times as these. Thus a correspondent [referring to the great Snow Storms in England following Christmas Day, 1927] writes to the Times :—" A common danger and common difficulty seems to evoke in England that kind of spirit which won the War, and, if your readers could have seen the working of that spirit in the outlying villages, it would have made them proud of their country.

" Everyone seemed anxious to dig everyone else out, and desperate and successful efforts were made in intense cold and with great difficulty to reach the outlying cottages and farms. Nobody seemed to rest content until it was known that everybody was provided with food and fuel and had access to a main road.

" If only this spirit could permeate our national life, how different things would be, and what a really happy New Year we should all have. Let us all try in 1928 to learn a lesson from and put it into practice."

Yes ! That is the spirit of the KINGDOM. It is the spirit of the KING. And if in the coming greater storm of world unrest we but lay hold upon CHRIST we shall find power to manifest that spirit of service, not only among ourselves, but nationally as GOD'S SERVANT NATION to the other nations of mankind.

That is our privilege. That is our destiny. To this end were we born. For this cause came we into the world.

WHY I ACCEPTED ANGLO-ISRAEL TRUTH.

BY THE REV. R. A. LEWIS (Chicago).

I REGARD it an honour to tell the readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER why I accepted this Truth of Anglo-Israel. I will strive to do so in all sincerity and thankfulness to God, Who opened my prejudice-blinded eyes to the glories of the whole of His Truth as we find it written in His manifold self revelation in His Word, in the Universe He has made, and in the history of human kind over which we believe He exercises a controlling, restraining and shaping guidance.

I esteemed it a privilege to attend a Convention arranged by Rev. Dr. McGinnis, at Aurora, Illinois, on the occasion of the visit of the Rev. Pascoe Goard, where I made my confession of faith before the British-Israel people there assembled.

My subject by its very nature compels me to deal with personal experiences and personal thought processes. I first met with the teaching of Anglo-Israel while I was in business in the city of Toronto, Canada. With a business acquaintance I several times discussed the peculiar beliefs of a mutual friend and fellow-Baptist. I was not acquainted with the precise nature of these beliefs. But my friend, due to longer and more familiar acquaintance, was able to give me a rough and somewhat inexact outline of Anglo-Israel belief, at which, I must confess, I was mightily amused.

Shortly afterward I yielded my life for the Gospel ministry, being sent to the mission fields of the Province of Alberta to begin my efforts. During the first few months of my work there I was too thoroughly busy to give much, if any, thought to the strange beliefs of Brother Blackaller. One day my watch rebelled at its constant exposure to sand, rain and hail storms, and refused to function any further without the attention of a watchmaker. A member of that profession had recently displayed his shingle in the town twelve miles from my cabin, so to him I hied me away.

After the pleasant manner of the prairie, I introduced myself first and my business of the moment afterwards. Thus it transpired that while I sat watching the repair-man at work, he startled me by the question, " Do you believe the Bible to be completely inspired and inerrant in all its books ? " Considering myself a fundamentalist of the fundamentalists, I replied with a somewhat vaunting assertive. But only to be floored completely by the second question that was shot at me as though from a gun : " Well, then, where is the King of the seed of David at present reigning on his throne as God promised him ? " Of the fumbling clumsiness of my answer I will say nothing, deeming it more merciful as well as advisable to veil such gross and heavy ignorance of the God into Whose service I had been called.

The upshot of the conversation was that my new friend gave me two or three pamphlets to read. I read them, superficially, and returned them still scoffing. He next requested that I read them once more, this time comparing their message with the teaching of the Scriptures relative to the House of Israel. This I did, though for the time I became more and more confused through trying to harmonise my preconceived notions with the Truth that was unfolding before my eyes. The result was that I first conceded its possibility as a theory, then I was forced to acknowledge that my possible theory had all the marks of probability. From that admission it was but a step to accepting and loving this Truth which had lain unnoticed on the pages of Holy Writ despite the fact that it is hidden only by man's blindness and wilful, stubborn prejudice.

Under the pressure of the constant round of duties which fall to the lot of the prairie missionary, I found but little time or opportunity to pursue my new vision of Divine Truth. But still, profiting by the fine collection of Anglo-Israel text-books in the Calgary Public Library, I progressed a little towards the understanding of the fundamentals of the teaching. Then, in my first pastorate in Eastern Canada, I found a fellow-believer who had first heard the Truth from his father, increased his knowledge of it by concentrated study, and now stood ready to pass it on to one hungry for more of its satisfying riches.

§ It will be the " making of " us in the sense that we shall undergo a process of re-formation, re-birth, re-generation.

At the time I did not stop long to enquire as to my reasons for accepting this Truth. I knew that it satisfied where others teachings failed to do so. I was aware that it opened up to me riches of prophecy in what were otherwise closed books. And with so much for reasons I was satisfied. But the opposition which greeted my new belief from fellow-ministers, and among my own relatives who followed the leading of a pastor who preached against Anglo-Israel without complying with the formality of enquiring what those teachings might be, led me to subject myself to a rigid cross-examination on that point. The brief remainder of my remarks will be taken up with the answers at which I arrived.

In the first place, I believe in the complete inspiration and inerrancy of the Bible. If I did not, I should cease to preach, and seek out some slightly more lucrative employment. Therefore, when I found myself faced by the inescapable argument that Anglo-Israel believers interpreted literally some passages which I, in common with other so-called orthodox believers, had been spiritualising, I was compelled to investigate, test and prove to discover whether this interpretation or mine was the truth. The result was my conviction that Israel had received certain very clear, unconditional covenant promises from Jehovah which I had believed to be temporarily withdrawn. I then commenced an investigation to determine whether there were any grounds for that widely-accepted hypothesis of the stoppage of Israel's time until the times of the Gentiles should be full. Of course I found none, for there are none in the Book.

The question was thus reduced to one of Scriptural inerrancy. And to that I had no answer. I was forced by my deep-seated conviction in that matter to accept as Truth that which my inerrant Bible taught. Because Anglo-Israel belief takes God at His word I accepted it, and to-day rejoice in holding it as a Divine revelation inspiring men to service.

Another question was suggested: "Does God ever change His mind?" To believe that He does to me, at least, does grave violence to the teachings of His holiness and omniscience contained in His Word. If He knows the end from the beginning, what reason could there ever be for a change of His mind? If He foreknew the failure of His Chosen People, as He certainly did for His servants foretold it, He could and would so plan as to avoid descent from His holiness by a change of mind had any change of plan been necessary, which it wasn't, for His plans were all laid before the foundations of the earth were made.

That God's mind does not change is demonstrated in the fact that though man's sin broke the fellowship between creature and Creator, He at infinite cost, through infinite agony, has provided a means for its partial restoration here and complete renewal in the home over there. His will to have fellowship with man is unchanged. The changed relationship between them is due entirely to man's sin and fall.

Thus, if God did not change His mind toward fallen man, I was and am satisfied that He would not change it toward a sinning nation which He had peculiarly set aside as His own. Thus I was forced to believe that somewhere in the world of to-day, unrecognised for the most part, was Israel to whom all the covenant promises were being fulfilled.

I believe in an omnipotent God. Jehovah would be less than the Almighty did He make promises only to find that outside considerations made it impossible for Him to keep them. Such weakness as that would place Him on a level somewhat below that of a strong, straightforward business man. That He gave covenants to Israel is unescapable. If then He gave those pledges, and does not change His mind, He certainly can, and because of His holiness surely will keep His promises. Thus I was forced to seek among the nations for one which was to-day as yesterday the recipient of the covenant blessings ruled over by a King of the Davidic line.

As I sought that nation I was compelled to study the Word of God with a new specialisation on those prophecies relative to Israel. Then I looked about to find the modern nation they described. This compelled me to turn to another of God's revelations of Himself, History—ancient, modern and current. For I believe that our God, Who can conscript even the wrath of men to serve Him, controls world affairs, bending and shaping even the discord introduced by the enemy to serve His Holy Will.

In History I found the life stories of nation after nation and multiplied lines of their rulers. But all Empires save one have waxed and waned and been lost. Dynasty after dynasty has fallen and been forgotten. But one now in one branch, now in another, has been in the ascendant, has weathered all the storms and still remains firm seated on its throne. That, of course, turned by growing conviction more strongly yet upon the Anglo-Celto-Saxon race, and the ruling House of its oldest division.

But there was yet more proof awaiting me, as I delved and dug seeking a decisive answer one way or the other. I looked into prophetic Scripture. I read of the House of Israel as inhabiting islands whose position was north and west of Palestine. I placed a compass on the map, and found those two islands which have mothered the Anglo-Celto-Saxon race, and from which it has spread, propagating its unique and lasting culture.

I read of a nation and a group of nations who were to be possessors of the gates of their enemies, a people whose greatness was to be on the sea. Which is the greatest of the Colonial Empires of the world? That of Great Britain, from whom also is sprung this great and beloved Republic. Who has long been mistress of the seas? Britain. And who to-day is her only near equal in Naval power? Her great daughter, the only other great independent Anglo-Saxon nation, the United States of America. These and a host of other proofs besieged my still reluctant brain and heart until at last I was compelled in honesty to give over my struggling and confess my faith in this great new vision of the dear old Truth.

It is not strictly within my subject, yet I am eager to go on for a moment longer to tell you the results of my so believing. In the first place, Anglo-Israel Truth is my first line of defence against the insidious attacks of modern infidelity. For no man who interprets the Scriptures literally, as do Anglo-Israel believers, can doubt the fundamentals of the faith contained therein. Secondly, in Anglo-Israel Truth I found a new light by which dark and difficult passages of prophecy are made clear and plain to anyone who will permit God to mean what He says.

And best of all, this new conception of the age-old Truth has given me a new impetus to evangelistic ministry. As a member of the chosen people, it devolves on me as a privilege and a duty to tell to the world the good tidings of the coming eternal Head and King of the House of David, Who shall take up the never vacant throne of His Royal father and reign therefrom for the ages of the ages.

THINGS WHICH CAN, AND CANNOT, BE SHAKEN.—I.

(Heb. xii, 27.)

By Daniel Farmer.

I.—The Earth Shaken.

"Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, Yet once, it is a little while, and I will shake the heavens, and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land."—Hagg. ii, 6.

So that the words "terra firma" by no means mean firm earth, which cannot be shaken. Seismologists years ago informed us that their instruments registered an average of 30,000 shocks per annum. The most disastrous ever recorded was that of 1556, in China—killing 820,000 people. Our daily papers are calling attention to the frequency of their occurrence, and quite recently Sir Oliver Lodge has told us of the unstable condition of the earth's crust. In the Book of Job we read "As for the earth . . . under it is turned up, as it were fire" (xxviii, 5), so that our volcanoes appear to be safety valves. When the Law was given at Sinai, "the whole mount quaked greatly" (Ex. xix, 18). When Our Lord died, "the earth did quake" (Matt. xxvii, 51), and when He comes again He tells us, "I shake, not earth only, but also heaven" (Heb. xii, 26). "The seventh angel poured out his vial into the air . . . and there was a great earthquake such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, and so great" (Rev. xvi, 18; Zech. xiv, 4, 5).

"He builds too low who builds beneath the skies."

II.—Earthly Kingdoms Shaken.

In Daniel ii we see, prefigured by the image of Nebuchadnezzar's dream, four powerful Empires—Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome. How stable they seemed, but where are they to-day? And those of Egypt and Assyria before them? Where are the Charlemagnes, the Napoleons and the Kaisers of more modern times? All, like the sand castles which the children build, swept away by the remorseless tide of time and circumstance. In the Cathedral of Vienna there stood a statue of the Emperor Frederick. One hand was uplifted, and on the tips of the extended fingers were the words, "Austia est imperare orbi universo—Austria will conquer the world." But where is Austria to-day? Said a writer for the British and Foreign Bible Society, "Our eyes have seen colossal powers of evil crash down into the dust, the fabric of civilisation has been shaken, and in some lands well-nigh shattered. All over Europe the old conditions are visibly crumbling and tottering. Men's minds and hearts have suffered shock."

III.—Human Systems Shaken.

The poet wrote—

"Our little systems have their day,
They have their day and cease to be."

Many timid, pious souls, who fail to distinguish between the scaffolding and the building, are not a little alarmed to-day because they see in many directions the former rapidly coming down. But that is a sign of completion, not failure. It is most significant that in our time not only the great fundamental verities of the Christian Faith are being assailed, but also the stately shrines which were built for their proclamation are showing signs of decay and collapse—both English and Continental. That need not alarm us, true, "that which decayeth and waxeth old, is ready to vanish away" (Heb. viii, 13). But the shell is not the kernel, and the cracking of the former indicates that the latter has reached its maturity.

"If the old lights are dim, the stars are shining still;
If shadows gather in the vale, the sun is on the hill;
Faith still abides, God is not dead,
And though old views depart,
A loftier temple domes our head,
A larger hope our heart."

These—more or less—man-made "sheep pens" are to be replaced by the "one flock" (John x, 16, R.V.). The growing youth and mature man find these ecclesiastical beds too short, and the covering too narrow (Isa. xxviii, 20). The title of a book, "The Decay of Churches," must not be thought to mean the decay of The Church. The Christian dispensation began with individual witness—and may end with the same. All organised religion tends to decay, and needs a reformation.

IV.—Sinners Shaken.

"All the men that are upon the face of the earth shall shake at my presence" says the Lord (Ezek. xxxviii, 20).

Even good men will feel the overwhelming majesty of Our Lord's personal return. Hunters of big game tell us that one of the most terrifying sounds is the roar of a lion in the forest at dead of night. Hosea says, "They shall walk after the Lord: he shall roar like a lion: when he shall roar, then the children shall tremble from the west" (Hos. xi, 10). The principal part of God's chosen Race—Amos iii, 2—is situated to-day in these isles North and West of Palestine (Jer. xxxi, 10). How alarmed the nation would be if that Divine roar-voice was heard. Community singing would soon become Community praying—especially for those who had not yet learnt individual prayer. Job tells us that so great will the shaking be that "the wicked will be shaken out of the earth." And the late D. L. Moody spoke of Rev. vi as "the world's greatest prayer-meeting."

"There shall come a night of such wild affright
As none before did know,
When the heavens shall shake, and the earth shall quake
In its last and deepest woe."

That in that dread Day we be not dismayed."

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

THE meeting at Headquarters on Wednesday next, January 25th, at 3 in the afternoon, will be addressed by Mr. J. J. Morey. On the following day, Thursday, there will be the Secretary General's Round Table Conference, commencing with tea at 4.30. A large gathering is anticipated. Friends may come and go at their convenience up to 8.30. There will be a number of short addresses. Questions may be asked. Suggestions are invited for extending our work and promoting the increased usefulness of the Federation.

The Rev. Joseph Gay gave two much-appreciated addresses for our Dover Branch on January 11th in place of Lt.-Col. Smythe, who was ill. The Rev. H. B. Simeon, M.A., presided at both meetings.

Our Liverpool Branch enjoyed an instructive address on January 12th by Mr. G. R. Gair, on "The Ethnology of the British Race." We are asked to say that Mr. Gair is finding it difficult to answer all correspondence in view of the claims on his attention in addition to his college studies. He will be glad if all those who wish for his services will apply to Mr. S. E. Steele, 18, Field Way, Wavertree, Liverpool.

Mr. Howard Rand, LL.B., gave a capital address at Headquarters on January 11th. The Rev. Pascoe Goard presided. A large company sat down to tea after the meeting. Mr. Rand has spoken with Mr. Morey for our Dorking Branch; he has also addressed two meetings for our Branch at Herne Bay.

The Annual New Year Prayer Meeting at Headquarters on January 12th was well attended. Mr. John Leech, K.C., presided. Among those who took part were the Rev. Pascoe Goard, the Rev. Commander Roberts and Mr. Garrison.

Our readers residing in Lancashire and Cheshire will have the opportunity of hearing the Rev. Pascoe Goard at the Religious Institute, 135, Deansgate, Manchester, on Monday next, January 23rd, at 7.45, and at Great George Street Congregational Church, Liverpool, on the following day, at 7.30.

Mr. Herbert Garrison lectured on Palestine on January 11th to a good audience at the Leas Pavilion, Folkestone. This week he is at Islington, Worthing and Cardiff.

An old and energetic worker for B.-I., Mr. Horn of Croydon, passed away a few days ago. Mr. W. J. Pilcher, who had known him for many years, attended the funeral on behalf of the Federation.

On Wednesday, January 4th, the members of the Sheffield Branch of the British-Israel-World Federation entertained 250 old folk to tea and musical evening. A most enjoyable evening was spent, the old people greatly appreciating the short B.-I. addresses, given between the musical items, by Rev. R. G. F. Waddington, M.A., and Mr. William Whitton.

THE PRETORIA BRANCH.

WE have received an encouraging report of the work of the above Branch for the year 1927, showing an increase of members and a praiseworthy zeal among the workers. Lectures have been given by Mr. W. E. Oldroyd, on "Our Hebrew Origin" and on "Palestine"; the Rev. W. Christison, on "The Great Pyramid"; Miss Poynton, on "Objections Answered"; Mr. C. Pringle, on "B.-I. Truth"; Mr. N. R. Waddington, on "Anglo-Hebrew Waymarks"; Mr. J. W. Aves, on "In the Latter Days"; Mr. A. B. Ker, on "Palestine, the Gentiles and Israel." During the month of June the Branch had the great pleasure of a visit from the Rev. Maxwell Carnson, our South African Missioner, whose addresses delighted large audiences. Mr. Carnson preached in two local churches by special invitation of the ministers thereof. Another visit by Mr. Carnson is planned for the first quarter of this year, and the members intend to do their part to make it even more successful than the last visit, and to arrange also for meetings in places around Pretoria, in some of which it is hoped to form new Branches. Mr. Oldroyd has visited the Capetown and Kroonstad Branches and given two lectures for each.

We heartily congratulate our friends on their endeavours, and we send them our best wishes for the New Year.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

[It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.]

THE LAW OF THE LORD, OR THE COMMON LAW.—III.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

We saw in the last number that the Common Law is making tremendous strides as the law of the nations of the earth.

But a short time ago historically it was the law of Britain. It extended with the growth of the British Empire.

It was established as the law of the United States of America. It is introduced wherever British and American rule has been established.

It is being closely studied, and is being introduced into China and Japan.

The leading statesman of France has declared in favour of it as against the Civil or Roman Law.

Three great systems have been in vogue in the earth among other lesser systems:

The Common Law (English).
The Civil Law (Roman).
The Moslem Law (Mohammedan).

The latter two systems are being replaced rapidly by the Common Law.

In order to get the significance of this it is necessary to remember that the Common Law is the Law of the Kingdom of God.

It is true that it has, in some regards, notably in the law of contracts, been interfered with by the meddlesome statutes enacted by Parliaments. In some cases it has also been interfered with by judgments handed down by the courts, which carry authority in the administration of the Common Law. In these regards there is work to do to restore the law in its purity. But these are details. The great body of the Common Law stands to-day, as it has stood for ages, as the law of the Anglo-Saxon lands.

We shall speak of it as though it were held in its purity, believing that the time has arrived when the Common Law will be sifted by common consent, and those things which are against its principles, whether found in Parliamentary statutes or in judgments handed down by superior courts, will be repealed or reversed as the case may require.

Statutes are repealed by Act of Parliament. Judgments are reversed by superior courts. Whatever is required in these lines to restore the details of the Common Law to conformity with basic principles will be done in due time. In the meanwhile the great body of the law stands as it was given to the Fathers.

What, then, is the origin of the Common Law?

We listened a short time ago to the head of a law school in the United States giving an address on the Common Law, its origin, and its widening acceptance among the nations. He declared that the Common Law, as far as modern times is concerned, came to us through the Anglo-Saxon people, and to America through Britain.

This will be accepted by all as an undoubted, and as an established fact. But whence did Britain get the Common Law?

The great authority on British Law, Blackstone, declares for the Divine origin of the Common Law. Inasmuch as the Roman Empire adopted the Civil Law, or developed it, and the Civil Law is fundamentally different from the Common Law, it is manifest that Britain did not receive the Common Law through Rome.

The source of the Common Law was Israel, and Britain received it through Jerusalem and Sinai, and not by way of Rome. It is important that we should make this matter very clear. For the law is second only to the Gospel in importance to the welfare of our nation and its people. Now we received the Gospel straight from Jerusalem, within a decade of the Resurrection of Our Lord, and NOT by way of Rome. And we received the Common Law straight from Jerusalem and Sinai, also not through Rome.

We turn to Blackstone, and from him we receive the instruction that we are carrying on under the law of the Kingdom, that is to say, under the natural and revealed law of God.

Again, we turn to that great Saxon lawgiver, King Alfred, who rivalled Charlemagne, of European fame; although Alfred, being British, has received less honour, as is usual with things and persons British, at the hands of historians. Alfred, we say, declares in the most specific terms that the Common Law of England came to us through the law given of God on Sinai. Indeed, Alfred declares for the direct reception of the law at the hands of God. He quotes verbatim, or nearly so, from the book of Moses.

This leads naturally to the enquiry:—What has Moses to say regarding the origin of the Common Law?

As the Evangelists—Matthew, Mark, Luke and John—give to us the supreme history of the fact of the great ordinance of Calvary, so overwhelming us with the presentation of the history that the significance of the fact is left in the background by them; so Moses overwhelms us with the history of the amazing facts connected with the promulgation of the law at Sinai. The fact of the promulgation standing out so clearly produces the impression that the occasion included the first-hand new revelation of that law. It was not the first statement of the law, nor the first formal introduction of it into the earth. The occasion was the formation of the new Nation, Israel; to whom it was necessary to teach the old law.

Let us look a little more closely at the details regarding the law in the writings of Moses, less spectacular but not less important than the graphic history of the Sinai promulgation. We are surprised to find that Moses carries the Common Law, consisting of Statutes, Commandments and Laws, back to Abraham; saying of Abraham, "Because that Abraham obeyed my voice, and kept my charge, my commandments, my statutes and my laws." (Gen. xxvi, 5.)

How accurate are the statements of Holy Writ! After the organisation of the nation, and the establishment of courts carrying Divine authority to give judgment on such cases as came before it, the form runs, "The Commandments, Statutes and Judgments of the Lord." But in the pre-Mosaic day of Abraham the term "Laws" is used instead of "Judgments." Why should this be the case? Why, indeed, but the evident fact that until the nation was organised, and the courts set up, there could be no judgments. The law was there. The udgments were yet to come.

But the Commandments, Statutes and Laws were; and Abraham, the friend of God, obeyed them four centuries before the organisation of the Kingdom, and before the promulgation of the law on that occasion, at the time of the organisation of the Kingdom.

Scholars have been much interested in finding that Hammurabi, contemporary with Abraham, had, and administered, a code similar to that of the Mosaic. How is it that they overlooked the fact that Abraham, the contemporary of Hammurabi, possessed and obeyed the laws at the same time?

We are here enlightened as to the fact that the Common Law was in existence and was the law of more than one branch of people at the time of Abraham.

It is interesting to know that the book of Jasher, mentioned in the book of Joshua, although not included in the Bible, states that Abraham learned the law in the household of Noah and Shem, and that he introduced it into his father's house in Ur of the Chaldees. The same book declares that the antediluvian patriarchs taught the people the law of the Lord.

Leaving the testimony of the book of Jasher, which is introduced as a matter of interest only—but as a matter of equal interest, and a document of equal authority, with those of Babylonian scripts which archæologists have discovered—let us get back again to the testimony of Moses.

Moses carries the origin of the law back to the Garden of Eden, and brings us to that wonderful point in the history of human psychology when, for the first time, the external law became impressed and imposed upon the life of man. Up to that moment the will of the man had been the law of the man. He had no other law; and, following it, he had no guilt, nor had he a consciousness of any such thing; for as the Apostle Paul declares: "Where there is no law, there is no sin." Created in the image of God, the will of man and the habits of man were doubtless on a high level. But the acts of man were on a level with the will of man; and there could be no uplift, although there might indeed be a sad devolution in habits of life and conduct.

Then came the moment when a higher law was to be given to man than the habit of his life, or the plane of his own will. It was a most momentous point, of which Moses writes in the following words: "AND THE LORD GOD COMMANDED THE MAN."

We have failed to note the tremendous significance which dwells in these seven words. We have rushed on to note that which was commanded. But the weight of significance is in the fact that there came a moment in the psychological history of man when he became endowed with the command of God.

Hitherto the will of man had been the law of his life. Now the Will of God became the law of man. What an honour! What a responsibility!

With the law came the possibility of failure; and the incurring of the guilt of disobedience.

With the law came the sanction of the law, that is to say, the appointed punishment for transgression. For had this not been provided, the man would have been content to fail, saying, "What does it matter that I cannot attain to obedience to a law which is the expression of a Will that is above me? I will turn back and do my own will, and that shall be the law of my life." But the deterrent to this was the declaration, "In the day that thou eatest thereof, thou shalt surely die." "And so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." (Rom. v, 12).

But also there came the fact of the Atonement. The man might sin; nay, would sin, and sin again. But, struggling to achieve the Will of the Divine, aided by Divine Grace, the time would come when the Will of God would be at once the law of man and the habit of his life.

By sinning he would incur the penalty: death. But the Substitute would be provided, "the Lamb of God slain from the foundation of the world," Who should bear the punishment of death for every man, in Whom every man "who willeth to do His Will" should find redemption and forgiveness of sins; by Whom such ones should enter into everlasting life.

So we return, and with wonder we see the advent into the earth of the Will of God, expressed in the Commandment of God. This was the advent of the Common Law into the earth. This was the "revealed law of God."

We now have reached the fountain-head of the Common Law, and we see the line of its descent clearly outlined down through the ages to the present day, namely, communicated from God to Adam; and so communicated from God to Adam's seed throughout their generations.

WHEN MAY WE EXPECT OUR LORD'S RETURN?

Personal Letters to the Editors ask as above :—

THIS is a most interesting question, and has been somewhat answered. The great point is to be ready at any moment. This is the clear issue in every case of Our Lord's exhortations. It has been assumed that even Our Lord Himself did not know, but Mark xiii, 32, says, οὐδὲ ὁ υιος εἰμὴ ὁ πατὴρ "neither the son, if not the Father," for so it may be rendered. The chronological order with reference to Israel and Rome is the subject of Psalm l, where the words (1-5) imply the very same as in 1 Thes. iv, 14-18, after which first stage of the coming as in Matt. xxv, 1-10, where He is received of those who are living up to their expectation, these go in with the wife (or bride) to the marriage supper (Rev. xix, 7, 8, 9). The word ἀπαυτησιν is used in both Matt. xxv, 6, and 1 Thes. iv, 17, "to go and return." The wise virgins I don't think we must confuse with the bride, but interpret these as Psalm xlv, 14. The pure bride of the TRUE BRIDEGROOM must be the ideal Israel (Isa. lxii, John iii, 29). The virgins, her companions, the much interested and closest associates (whether Jew or Gentile) the CHURCH of the Lord Jesus. This word is not so rendered in the Word of God, but means the "Assembly," "the whole Congregation" of the God of both Old Testament and New. The appropriation of this title by the false systems (as Rome and Greek Apostasies) is clearly implied in the Book of Revelation where the so-called Church of first love has lost touch of its Saviour, and He is seen as in Laodicea outside and knocking.

In every one of these "Churches" is seen "such as I love," some who hear what the Spirit saith unto the Churches, some who have "Kept the Word of my patience." These in Rev. xiii, 10, "Here is the patience and faith of the Saints," in the Roman earth; and in Rev. xiv, 12, "Here is the patience of the Saints; here are they that keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus"; these amongst the "redeemed from among men" being the first-fruits unto God and to the Lamb (Rev. xiv, 5; James i, 18).

Are these not in contrast to those in Luke xviii, 1-8, who are not in the heaven? Rev. xiii, 6, compared with xii, 12, and xix, 1-6. Here we see the sequence of events, 7-9, and afterwards the great battle of Armageddon, 11-16. We have heard it laid to the charge of the wise virgins that their want of love for their unwise virgins shows a lack of the Christian spirit! What if, however, "As in the days of Lot," these unwise virgins prefer to live in "Sodom, Egypt and also where Our Lord was crucified" (Rev. xi, 8). It is here that their lamps are going out. And if they heed not the cry, "Come up hither" and "Come out of her my people," is it the fault of the wise virgins? when our doors are shut (Isa. xxvi, 20). Those in the domain of the "unjust judge who fears not God nor regards man," where there is no faith on the earth (Luke xviii, 4, 8), will cry bitterly in their "time of Jacob's trouble," and God will deliver them. But when?

This is set forth in Luke xii, 36, "when He will return from the wedding," if they will then open the door (Rev. iii, 20). Even they will "sit with Him in His Throne" as an act of grace. It is not to be supposed that they will occupy the same jurisdiction in the time of Jacob's trouble (Rev. ii, 26-28; Psalm cx, 1-3, 5-7; cxlix, 6-9; Rev. xix, 11-14; Joel iii, 11), "thither cause thy mighty ones to come down, O Lord!"

May this period not be the great opportunity given to Judah (nearly 10,000,000) in Europe who have been forcibly held captive by Russia "within the pale," within their Ghettos, who passing through their birth-throes, "travailing in pain to be delivered," will yet come forth as described in Jer. xvi, 14; Hos. vi, 11; Micah vii, 15-20 with verse 11 at the appointed time?

The question When? In the sequence of the prophetic Word seems to be: very great trouble is coming upon the Roman earth as it did before August 4-5, 1914, only lasting for maybe double the length of time. This trouble to "the earth" is primarily caused by their envy at God's people (Isa. xxvi, 11). This we suggest is seen by the contrast in the low passages in the Great Pyramid with the Grand Gallery, capacious height and breadth signifying that Israel was free to preach the Gospel of God's grace in the Earth, but owing to the enmity of the world power this freedom was restrained within the narrowest limits; and yet this Gospel of the Kingdom is being preached into all the world (Isa. xxvi, 9), which is mainly Israel's dominion given to God's dear Son for His inheritance and His possession (Psalm ii, 8).

The floor line of the passages, the difference between white limestone and granite, symbolising the difference of firmness of Israel's march and his position; going more and more rapidly conquering and to conquer for Christ. If this is a true interpretation of the elements governing the roof line, it is the Gentile nations that are hastening their own destruction, and causing this "time of Jacob's trouble." This, though it begin on or about the 28th May, 1928, will by some sudden event occurring to (Rev. xvi, 18, 19) the European Powers, compelling them to give their kingdoms (after this tri-partite division now so clearly coming into vogue is realised) to the beast (Rev. xvii, 12-16, Russia); then hating the whore, making her desolate and burning her flesh with fire. GREAT BABYLON now comes into remembrance before God (Rev. xviii). Then comes the Great Hallelujah in Heaven (Rev. xix).

The Resurrection of the Two Witnesses will cause the cry to go forth (Rev. xi. 11, 12; xviii, 4), which will herald the doom of Babylon.

This may all happen very shortly. Now ensuing. Be ye therefore also ready! Can we get ready within such a short time? Is it not wise to be ready at once, as exhorted to in Rev. xvi, 15. Have we not signs around us enough? Why wait and wake up suddenly unprepared?

THE TWO WITNESSES.

THEIR PROTESTATION AND THE CESSATION. THEIR RESUSCITATION.

BY THE REV. L. G. A. ROBERTS, COMMANDER R.N.

THIS is told us in Rev. xi, where the death of the Two Witnesses is succeeded after three days and a half by their resurrection. It is after this that a great earthquake takes place, which is the passing away of the second Woe. Notice the language carefully, the Protesting Witnesses must have prophesied 1,260 days (or years), then met their eclipse and for 3½ days (years) been silenced. Then "the Spirit of life from God enters into them, and they stood upon their feet and great fear came upon them which saw them. And they heard a great voice from heaven saying unto them: Come up hither. And they ascended up to heaven in a cloud, and their enemies beheld them."

What is taking place in our House of Lords on these three eventful nights is but a repetition, on a very much larger scale, of what occurred about 1,260 years ago at the Council of Whitby; it was then, unfortunately for us, decided that the Anglican Church should be regulated by doctrine received from Rome. To this the whole of the British Bishops, to their honour, resisted; hence the British Bishops were called upon to relinquish their Sees, which they then did in England.

So that was the beginning of the Two Witnesses' testimony against the Apostasy. This was in A.D. 664. Three or four years after Archbishop Theodore was elected the first chosen Archbishop of the English Church. We must remember the British Church had been established in A.D. 178 under Lucius, though founded by Joseph of Arimathea in A.D. 35-38, or may be earlier. Now, 1,260 years of prophesying after 664 brings us to 1924, the very year this great rebellion of the extremists took place, which has resulted in the present Revised Prayer Book, which is afraid to own the teaching of the Bible as to Genesis or the Patriarchal histories; also denying the Words of Jesus on the integrity of the Old Testament, and has introduced "Reservation," which leads to idolatry. So also the cutting out from the Coronation Oath all the protests against the idolatry of the Mass, purgatory and prayers for the dead.

We are living about the time when we may anticipate the Resurrection of the Witnesses, when the Spirit of Life from God shall enter into them; 3½ years after 1924 brings us to 1927-1928. The English Church and nation is the other Witness, it also protested against any interference from Rome. This determination to be independent was a marked feature of both these Churches, and "MAGNA CHARTA" asserted in the first and last clauses that "The Church of England must be free." Wrestlings in Parliament, and also on the part of the King, bear out this protest against Rome.

The glorious Reformation broke the shackles which Italian clergy, sent here by the Pope, had imposed upon our Church. It became needful to resist the Papacy even to the extent of standing in military defence of our freedom as at the Spanish Armada, and under Cromwell to take the part of the Waldensian Churches in the Vaudois.

It was as the 1,260 lunar years since 664 and 666 had passed that the Romanising tendencies within our Church called for a Royal Commission to enquire into the illegalities which, creeping in, had brought in an increasing powerlessness on the part of the Bishops to enforce discipline. This Royal Commission, though pointing out the necessities for amendment of supervision and authority, having failed, the Bishops, with their Church Assemblies, have brought in a Revised Prayer Book, which dishonours the Word of God, materialises the Sacraments and virtually denies the Words of Our Lord, besides laying it open to any community not to pray for the King, substituting in the Communion Office the Bishop of the Diocese instead.

This alone is not all. The Archbishop of Canterbury has, we may say, by knowledge of what was taking place, allowed Lord Halifax, Bishop Gore, and others to hold conferences at Malines during the last three years, to seek out ways and means of union of the Church of England with the Church of Rome.

Here we have "the Street of the City which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt," extending to the locality of Jerusalem, "where also Our Lord was crucified." In this Babylonian City of the Great Whore, these leaders, without legal authority, have acted the part of traitors to our Church, and so falsified our Protestant Witness as to give those on the Continent to believe that we are but One Catholic Church with them, and so our Witnessing against Roman errors has been made to cease. We cannot but remember the large meeting of the Anglican Congress in July, 1923, under the auspices of Lord Halifax and the late Bishop of Zanzibar, which resulted in the decision to encourage the Reservation of the Sacramental elements for Adoration in every Parish Church in England. They thus brought in the Visible Presence of Our Lord in the Secret Tabernacle, the very error Our Lord warned us against, "If they shall say unto you, Behold, He is in the secret chambers; believe it not." Matt. xxiv, 26. They make their god and worship it.

What a terrible responsibility is laid upon us. How earnestly we should ask that God's Holy Spirit may descend upon our Houses of Parliament and dispose their minds to a right judgment.

December 16th, 1927. The Lord reigneth. He has so disposed the hearts of our House of Commons as to the Revised Prayer Book that it cannot be laid to their charge, or of the Nation at large, that they are willing to see the Word of God discredited in our House of Prayer, or His Holy Communion so befogged as to appear to admit the possibility of a material god created at the priest's invocation. The Lord Jesus is in no tabernacle made with hands, but is in the hearts of His people by faith.

We may patiently wait for the next move which apparently after the voice out of the Temple, which we have reason to suppose to be Israel, will come from the Throne, saying " It is done."

We have doubtless to submit to some changes in the present Prayer Book, such as some latitude in public prayers being introduced to meet special occasions, but no essential change is likely if we respect the wording of Rev. xi, 1 : " And there was given me a reed like unto a rod (canon) : and the Angel stood, saying, Rise, and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that worship therein." Here we have the canons of the British and English Church and all Protestant denominations built upon their Articles. So the latitude allowed must be measured by the doctrine inculcated by these Articles, so far as they are consistent with Holy Scripture. Art. vi, xvii, xix, xx, xxi, xxii, xxv, etc., etc.

Such is the canon or rod which, based upon the Word of God, comprehends this Temple of God. We arrive, therefore, at this conclusion that our Temple of God, having by the Holy Spirit's entry into the Witnesses resuscitated and purified our worship, so likewise a voice or " voices (Rev. xvi, 18), thunders and lightnings " will produce a great earthquake, such as never was since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake and so great.

This we take to refer to Rome, West and East (Rev. xvi, 19-21), hastened by the ten horns who have imbibed the mind of the eighth head of the beast. This is more set out in detail in Rev. xvii, 15-17, and Rev. xviii.

The " Come out of her, my people " of Rev. xviii, 4, synchronising with Rev. xi, 12. " And they heard a great voice from heaven (Britain) saying unto them, Come up hither. And they ascended up to heaven, and their enemies beheld them." The importunate " Widow," who, like Lot, preferred to dwell in Sodom, appealed to the rulers of the nations, now under Antichrist, who first refuses to take their part against their persecutors, but eventually will be glad to get rid of them. God will deliver His own elect from out of Sodom, as He did just Lot (Luke xvii, 28-33), when they call upon Him.

It is then that Isa. xxvi, 20-21, takes effect and " the earth," which has so terribly persecuted the Saints of God, will see that this is a Judge that judgeth the earth.

Then follows the " Third Woe cometh quickly," Rev. xi, 14, preceded by the ultimate overthrow of Turkey, the Second Woe.

It would appear to our mind that Scripture casts a hiatus upon an interval between " the Second Woe " as it affects Israel (ourselves) and " the Third Woe."

This hiatus is best expressed by Scripture itself, Isa. xxxii, 15-20 : " But peace shall be upon Israel," Ps. cxxv, 5. The rod of wickedness (Russia) shall not rest upon the lot of the righteous (opp). This wickedness (Russia) is seen in Zech. v to be the result of the Jewish perversion of Scripture, as in the parable of the Unjust Steward, Luke xvi. The two women, which seem to be the same as the one of v. 7 with v. 9, as the Roman Apostasy and the Greek, were originally one, and practise injustice and making use of the Name of Christ to further their own profit, even as the few corrupted the Old Testament, and have built up the Talmud in the land of Shinar, Roman and Grecian doctrine being derived from the example of those corrupters of the Word of God. " This mystery of iniquity " out of the midst, as it were, of those who said they had Abraham for their father, but did not the works of Abraham, grossly misled all the Gentiles whose worldliness and sensuality (Matt. xiii, 19-22) is the work of " the wicked one," especially in the first recipients of the Gospel. Now this wickedness (Russia Heb.), having come to a head, first punishes the dupes of a false religion, the Greek Church, and then of Rome, Isa. xxxii, 19 ; Rev. xvi, 19-21. Notice the " hail " and " great hail " in these passages.

The sequel must form the subject for another Article. Our position at present, that we may obtain the outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon us, is to engage earnestly in prayer to Almighty God that the Nation of Israel (ourselves) may repent and be converted as in Acts iii, 19-21, that we may enter more heartily and fully upon our last mission as set forth in Rev. xiv, 8-12, and warn the nations of Europe of that which is coming, in order that we may be the means of saving some of them, as also the Jews, as well as our own, who, like Lot, are still abiding in Sodom.

NEW YEAR MESSAGES.

From the REV. L. G. A. ROBERTS, COMMANDER R.N.

WE wish you all a very happy New Year. " Look up and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh."

It is with extreme thankfulness to Almighty God that He has graciously spared our staff of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, as well as all the officers of this great Society (B.-I.-W.F.), to continue the work they have so well taken in hand under His blessing.

THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER has been a very great comfort to all its readers, and has led very many to so read their Bibles and to love the Lord Jesus Christ as they never were able to do before. It has brought home the truth of God's Holy Word, the faithfulness of His promises, the object of His love.

Personally, I can testify to this by the number of letters pouring into my letter-box for " Israel's Scripture and Prayer Union " cards, which mostly contain references to the spiritual comfort received from THE MESSAGE.

We have an ideal to which all British-Israelites must attain ; we are not our own ; we must serve, in love, Him Who has wrought our redemption. We have to win the Jews ; we have to preach to the uttermost parts of the world, in the time close upon us, more so than ever. As God has blessed us, so let every Israelite give of his strength and energy, of substance, at least a tithe or tenth, into the Lord's treasury. By this means we can show the world Whose we are, that we expect Him shortly, that His Coming is our Hope, and His Kingdom our goal.

May the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob soon establish us as His memorial, and so bless our endeavours that in this coming trouble, as He has already shown us (Rev. xi, 11; xvi, 17; 2 Cor. ii, 14), He may be our comfort, and Israel may be brought to true repentance, and His Name be glorified.

From MR. JOHN H. TENCH.

I AM very glad to bear testimony to the splendid work done by THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER throughout the year 1927.

Its defence of the Bible from Genesis to Revelation has been most gratifying and has fully carried out Paul's teaching that "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God."

Speaking for myself, I can truthfully say that propagating British-Israel Truth is the joy of my heart and makes old age the happiest time of my life. It makes one realize the Psalmist's words, "My flesh and my heart faileth, but God is the strength of my heart and my portion for ever."

Best wishes to you and your glorious work in 1928.

From the REV. T. H. WHITEHOUSE.

WITH the passing of the Christmas festival has ended all too quickly the brief respite from the ceaseless round of evangelistic journeys and other activities which make up the working life of a B.-I.-W.F. Commissioner.

And now, with the birth of the New Year, away from the delights of fireside and home circle, one must fare forth again into the great field, and to the insistent preaching of the Gospel of the Kingdom, and to the tireless heralding of the Coming King.

And everywhere one goes, what a wonderful fellowship of kindred spirits one finds in readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER. Far and wide, in the great bustling cities, or along the peaceful countryside, one finds them—multitudes—labourers together in the same great Cause, sharers alike in the same glad expectation, brothers and sisters all!

And what a magnificent instrument of cohesion and unity our weekly paper is; penetrating thousands of homes; its every line devoured by eager readers, absorbing its wealth of information, exalted by its wonderful uplift, their spiritual vision clarified and enlarged—while its inspirational dynamic impels them to join in the never-failing broadcasting of the glad tidings of the Kingdom by whatsoever manifold and diverse means may be found to fit present opportunity; "instant in season, out of season."

May I be permitted to offer a hearty New Year's greeting to all my fellow-readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, whether known or unknown in person, yet linked as we are in blessed comradeship in the common interest and love of our Israel Truth? And may I fervently entreat one and all to join in a strenuous purpose to at least quadruple the circulation of this organ of our Movement, so that not only may we rejoice to see it become to others the gracious and helpful thing it is to ourselves, but also because by so doing we shall be digging deep into the national consciousness of Israel-Britain, and laying firm foundations for the building up among us of the City of God, Who is King in Zion.

From COLONEL F. HORNIBLOW, C.B.

HEARTY good wishes for the New Year to the Editor and all other writers and staff of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE and BANNER.

You have all done most excellent yeoman service during the last twelve months. One proof is this, that many people in this neighbourhood, like myself, look forward to Friday in each week because they know that what THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER will contain will not only be true and interesting, but that it will be full of good cheer and comfort to all Christian people who have the principles of the B.-I.-W.F. at heart.

From the REV. JOSEPH GAY, A.T.S.

WILL you please permit me to offer my sincere congratulations upon the completion of another year in the life's story of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER?

It has been in many respects the best year in our paper's history. You have covered a very wide field of Biblical research, and your expositions along the line of British-Israel Truth have been very illuminative.

It has been a most effective instrument in the hands of the Commissioner; an ally, if I may so speak, staunch and true, which has never failed us. Always confirmatory of the Truths we proclaim, we can refer our hearers to it with the utmost confidence.

The year upon which we have entered may contain many important events which may develop a world crisis unparalleled in the history of the world. I have no doubt THE NATIONAL MESSAGE will play its part with that courage born of a confident hope and faith.

May it long continue to strike that note of certitude which our age needs perhaps more than any other thing.

A happy New Year to all.

From COL. H. P. P. LEIGH, C.I.E., President, Bath Branch.

IN wishing all members of the Federation and British-Israelites in general a very happy New Year, I would say—Is it not a great satisfaction to know how the Truth is spreading? THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER is doing a great work, and the testimony to the effect it is having is wonderful. May we one and all do all that is possible to carry on the work during this very important year.

From MRS. A. MACDONALD.

IT is difficult to express what a comfort and blessing THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER is to those who read it. With its valuable and helpful expositions of Bible Truth, it is assuredly a feast of fat things, week by week. We cannot be too grateful for such a paper.

One feels what a great responsibility is ours who have been privileged to receive this Truth. "What manner of persons ought we to be?" "Our citizenship is in Heaven, from whence we look for the Saviour." Let us "Arise, shine; for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee." He is the Sun of righteousness, and we are called to be lights in the world, and tell about Jesus, Who is the true Light, to bring light and gladness to them who sit in darkness. May God help us to arise and shine. No need to be dormant when the Light has come. "Awake, thou that sleepest . . . . and Christ shall give thee light." The world is full of darkness, let us shine and be lights. The world wants bright souls. With the Word of God to lighten our path and lead us on the way "till the day dawn and the shadows flee away." We shall go forward into the future with faith and hope, knowing that He careth for us, and all will be well whate'er betide. Let us give glory and thanks to our God for all His mercy and loving kindness towards us in the years that are past. "Hallelujah, the Lord God omnipotent reigneth."

From LADY STANLEY.

I SHOULD like, at this the beginning of a New Year, to send a few words of greeting to you and all connected with THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, the articles in which are so inspiring and interesting, and which have made plain so much that was perplexing—and in this way God's wonderful plan for this our world is being unfolded before our very eyes.

It is most encouraging to read Mr. Goard's open letter, and to learn from it how the work of the Federation from its inception has been blessed, and how under Divine guidance it is ever going forward.

I firmly believe that this Federation has been raised up as one of the strongest weapons in God's hands to stem the tide of the evil which in these latter days is so active in the world.

May God's richest blessings ever rest upon it, and may all those who devote their lives to His service be given strength and help to carry on and through the good work.

We must all do our best to spread the "Glad Tidings," and to "pray for the peace of Israel."

From MISS E. P. ALEXANDER.

I AM most happy and esteem it an honour to give my testimony with regard to these glorious Truths, the Gospel of Salvation and the Gospel of the Kingdom, that are always so beautifully proclaimed in our weekly journal. I owe it a deep debt of gratitude.

I am greatly impressed with "The Renewal of the Covenant" in December 31st issue, and when reading it, I thought what a wonderful daily prayer it would be. In it we learn two great thoughts that have been laid upon my heart of late; the spirit of obedience, learning what the will of our Father is, and then obeying—Christ ever sought His Father's will; then, should not the disciple be as his Master? Christ's solemn words should ever be remembered, "Not every one that saith unto Me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, but he that doeth the will of My Father which is in Heaven."

The other lesson, that of humility—Christ, in the Upper Room, taught us such a lesson—when He arose and washed the feet of His disciples, it was as though He had said, "If ye be not clothed with humility, ye are none of Mine, your worldly and selfish ambition proves you still unworthy to enter into the Kingdom of Heaven—whose law is love, and whose glory is service; I have washed your feet, I am in your midst as He that serveth." (Here is a lesson for the individual as well as the nation.) We to-day need less of self and more of Christ; self obliterated; Christ honoured and glorified; then shall we obey the last Commandment—"Love one another as I have loved you." We should then, I feel sure, be able to go forth in this New Year knowing that we are brothers and sisters in Christ, caring only for the things our Heavenly Father would have us do, learning to be co-workers with God, labourers together in His vineyard, extending the knowledge of His glorious Kingdom, and doing all to the honour and glory of His Most Holy Name—O glorious Jehovah, God Omnipotent, Father, Son and Holy Ghost. Amen. So be it.

From COL. EDWARD F. GOSSET.

SURELY our N.M. & B. is the most wonderful journal in the world. It is "Israel's own paper," and none but Israel could, under God's leading, have brought it forth.

The band of contributors, some of whom seem almost inspired, cannot be too highly praised for their work. It has always been good, an inspiration, and a help; and the journal goes on from strength to strength, and will, I am convinced, continue so to go on till its work is done, and HE comes Whose right it is to rule over Israel and Judah.

From MR. H. KENDRA BAKER.

IN wishing THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER another year of prosperity and usefulness, I should like to say how much I have profited from its pages in the past.

There are two publications which I read religiously—whatever others may have to stand over—viz., The Times and the N.M. & B. By the one I learn what is happening in the world, and by the other I am helped to interpret such happenings in the light of B.-I. Truth. Without the latter as our searchlight a large proportion of world events would lose half their interest and significance, and it is on this account that so many articles in the N.M. & B.—notably the "Week by Week" notes—are of such peculiar interest and value.

Only those who have accepted B.-I. teaching can realise adequately how it widens one's outlook and how events which would pass almost unnoticed acquire, in its light, a new and remarkable significance.

The increased circulation of the N.M. & B. must not only be most encouraging to the Editorial staff, but affords tangible evidence of the widely increased acceptance of B.-I. teaching.

The Federation has a great mission. Let us, one and all, contribute to its advance by every means in our power.

From ALFRED DIXON, ESQ.

AND BANNER. He has indeed used our beloved Pascoe Goard, and the various and varied contributors, to pass on during 1927 such messages as I personally have never found elsewhere; truths dug out of the old Word and presented with such marvellous insight, light and inspiration that one feels the very breath of Heaven about them.

Personally, one wishes (as when one first knew the joy of Salvation) that everyone could see the blessedness of the Truth of God's Kingdom on earth, and that we Anglo-Saxons are the race chosen to reign with God, and to bring all nations to His feet.

One does sympathise with those of God's people who, as yet, do not see this Truth. Here patience is needed as well as perseverance, also a judicious passing on of literature suitable to meet each individual case.

Oh that THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER might be read by all clergy and ministers.

If every B.-I. member would secure at least two more regular subscribers this year, what great results might follow! May God strengthen and enrich our leaders with wisdom and grace, and inspire us to make 1928 the greatest of all years. We have such a Message as no other body of people have yet gripped.

B.-I. teaching includes the Gospel of Grace in its fulness, which alone is "the Power of God unto Salvation," and the Gospel of the Kingdom of God on earth.

What an opportunity we have to glorify the God of Israel in 1928!

From MRS. M. COOKE.

I PRAY God's richest blessing may rest on THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, to my mind the most important of all journals. Long may the Editors be spared to help us.

May I plead with each reader, in this year of the Great Awakening, to do something to instruct the young in their great heritage. The young—upon whom will fall so much responsibility—that they may be prepared for their high calling.

The Soviet boasts of three millions of children enlisted in its cause of murder and strife. Surely we must prove our greater devotion to the coming King of Peace by preparing His way amongst the young.

Our Lord Who loved the little ones will certainly bless us.

From MISS J. G. MODIN.

HEBREWS IV, 12, bears the message of my New Year greeting to THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

"The Word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword."

Two-edged! It is this double functioning of the Scriptures as a weapon in God's hand that we have in the past so largely overlooked.

Whilst the keen blade of the Gospel of the Grace of God has lost none of its brightness and power with centuries of wielding in the hands of the ministers of His Sanctuary, the once equally sharp blade of the Gospel of the Kingdom of God has grown blunt and dull with centuries of misuse and disuse.

Though the Churches to which most of us belong are all working and praying for Revival along the lines of the Gospel of individual salvation, it is in reality the National Message of the Bible which so needs to be revived. And then, linked afresh with the old, old story, the two-edged Sword of the Word of the Lord shall indeed pierce the heart of our race—His race—even "to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit."

In view of this, it was no mere chance which gave to our journal the title it bears of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE. Since its inception it has been to countless thousands a veritable whetting-stone upon which the blunted, rusted, powerless edge of the Kingdom Gospel has been re-sharpened and re-burnished till, to-day, it would seem that the time is close upon us for the outpouring of the greatest national and spiritual Revival of all the ages.

We must not forget, however, that a message requires a messenger. If we have ourselves no fuel to add to its burning message, we can at least help to make the sparks fly! Have we money, but no leisure? Let us provide the means for the circulation of free copies amongst the leaders of our national and religious life, to whom this Message is of such vital importance. Have we leisure, but little money? Let us be wayside sowers of the seed amongst likely neighbours in our home districts. The local newspaper is a great aid here! Have we neither means nor leisure? Then, let us pray. And indeed none of us who have experienced the comfort and power of the two-fold Message which this journal proclaims can turn aside from this last obligation.

Finally, this same sharp, powerful, two-edged Word of God is—so our verse declares—"a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart." What does it read in your heart and mine concerning our purposed consecration as messengers of the Message in the year that lies before us?

From MAJOR E. F. HOLLAND.

IT gives me great pleasure to send greetings at this time to you and to all the readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

It is now more than four years since I first heard this "National Message," and during that time, wherever I have been in Europe and in North and South America, I have found people interested in—and talking about this subject.

I am glad to hear that this journal, which teaches us to study history in relation to God's great "National Plan" in which we have implicit faith, is attaining such a wide circulation, and I hope that 1928 will see the number of readers more than doubled.

From HARMAN KEBLE, ESQ., J.P.

ONE who has for fifty years realised the value and importance of British-Israel teaching, I can truly say that the services rendered to this great Cause by THE NATIONAL MESSAGE is remarkable. In my case, its contents are devoured week by week with delight and profit. Its articles, every reader will agree, are on a high literary level, the outcome of wide knowledge and research, inspired by a sincere desire to proclaim the truth. It is gratifying to know that it has an increasing circulation in Britain and our Dominions and in U.S. America—the precursor, I trust, of a much larger sale in the coming year.

From MR. HARRISON HILL, Officer in charge of the Headquarters' Book Room.

THE expansion of our world-wide Movement is very quickly and vividly realised in the Book Room at No. 6, Buckingham Gate. Its door, the first on the right on entering our Headquarters, displays the announcement, "Book Room. Come Right In," and the people do.

From London and the suburbs, from great provincial cities and remote country districts, from every part of Great Britain, from the Dominions beyond the Seas, from the United States, and from the Continent they come.

The windows of the Book Room face the King's Palace. Each morning the King's Guard marches past with Band and Colour. An inspiring room, filled with inspiring books! Eager men and women of all ranks come in daily, to enquire, to discuss, to purchase. Here are a few types. A lady first. "Have you anything fresh? No. I've read all those," she tells us. The inability of the average clergyman to explain the Bible story as a connected whole had long left her cold to religious observances, and then—she came across British-Israel Truth. She studied it, and all the arguments against it. She compared and decided. "But it's so obvious," she said. "I can't imagine how people can escape it! I was always prepared to believe my Bible if anybody could make common-sense of it." And now she is telling her friends that the Bible is the most fascinating Book in the world when once they have found the key.

It would need a volume, and not a brief sketch, to tell the daily story of the Book Room and its visitors. Boys, fresh from the great Public Schools, and going on to the Universities. The new generation. Young men who fought through the Great War, and are ready to fight through the next, strong in the faith which British-Israel Truth has given them.

Hard-bit soldiers of the Empire whose honours and achievements occupy half a column of "Who's Who." Distinguished officers of the Senior Service.

One of our active helpers is a tactful, courteous taxi-driver, who, when he has driven a fare to one of the great termini, says, with a smile, "Will you accept this to read on the journey? I think it will interest you," and the proffered gift, a Special Number of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, is never refused.

Old B.-I.'s, young B.-I.'s, veterans and recruits, some whose names are illustrious, and many whose names are written only in the greatest Roll of all. These are our visitors, and to all of them, we who are proud to be associated with this department of the Covenant Publishing Company and its work, send from the Book Room our cordial greetings and best wishes for 1928.

As a practical expression of these greetings and good wishes, we would like to send to every reader of this note a valuable present. It is entitled, "CATALOGUE OF PUBLICATIONS, 1927."

From the REV. HECTOR MACTURK, M.A.

WITH so many evidences of God's blessing on the successful work of the B.-I.-W.F. in the past, at and from Headquarters, and upon THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER week by week, we have every need to thank God and take courage in the New "Year of Grace," 1928, whatever it may have in store for us, and for the world at large. There is every need, too, that we should all be "instant in prayer" as we see how "God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform."

From MR. W. G. DUNCAN THOMPSON.

TO my fellow-readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

There is a verse in chapter lix of Isaiah which seems to my mind to express the influence of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER most aptly.

"When the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him."

To one who in a city like Oxford is inevitably brought more or less into contact with the trend of modern thought and who endeavours to gauge the direction in which it is moving, the force and power of present-day knowledge appears almost overwhelming. Only the simile of a flood can express it.

In the rapidity and ruthlessness of its sudden rise it has swept away the very foundations upon which a few years ago were based our conceptions of space and matter, and its waves rising over the worlds of physics, economics and ethics have swept their wreckage even over the plane of religion. Upon that plane its effect has been tremendous and the noise of its waterspouts is even now echoing throughout the country.

The Christian world is faced with the spectacle of its religious leaders of all denominations and creeds being swept like straws into the current of this Modernism, and abandoning their hold upon the Truth as it is revealed in Jesus Christ and the Word of God. Some there are who, striving to escape the flood, have turned away from modern conditions and endeavoured to entrench themselves in mediæval ritual and dogma, but even there the waves are lapping.

Now it is when one's own faith seems ready to falter in the rush of waters that in turning week by week to the pages of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER one feels lifted above the flood to the serenity and calmness of the Rock. Here there is no drifting with the stream nor an attempt to evade it. Holding fast to the unshakable truths, the flood of modern knowledge and exposition and the significance of current events is met with a boldness and strength which no other Christian paper relying on purely spiritual teaching can produce. Showing forth an historical Christ; proclaiming the duties and responsibilities of His historical people; marking His very footprints on the rising waters of earth's troubled affairs, THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER does indeed inspire its readers to meet Modernism calmly and unafraid.

How near those approaching footsteps may be we do not know, but in this year of 1928, beneath our ensign a trumpet seems to be sounding "The King is coming," and I think that when that tremendous event takes place and Christ ascends His earthly throne of Israel to rule the world gloriously, there will be many who will thank God that they heard the National Message of the B.-I.-W.F. May we all have the courage to broadcast our Gospel of the Kingdom.

From the REV. CHAS. W. COOPER, F.G.S.

MAY I add my testimony to the valuable help I receive in reading THE NATIONAL MESSAGE.

Hardly a week passes but what I find some article illuminating some particular passage of Scripture, which the average commentary only beclouds by its strained exposition, just because these writers have never grasped the great Truths of Israel's continuance through the centuries as a nation, pardoned and redeemed, still preserved as God's chosen instrument to function in the world till Christ her Saviour should come again.

From J. FOSTER BEAVER, ESQ.

A MOTTO we British-Israelites might well take is that of Deut. xxix, verse 10, "Ye stand this day all of you before the Lord your God." We do need to grasp this great fact, that whatever the year may bring forth, the time of our opportunity is quickly passing. We have the solemn charge and responsibility, and it is on us to call our nation, our peoples, to repentance and faith, and prepare the way of the Lord.

We must work as never before for the spread of the glorious Truth, knowing that God will answer our prayers and bless our work, that all may be to His Glory.

From MR. B. H. NORTON, Editor, Covenant Race.

THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, by its very name, appeals to the multitude and indicates its benevolent intention not to extract so as to enrich its promoters but to impart so as to give out information to those who listen. The listening number grows weekly as THE MESSAGE becomes more necessary, showing its publication not as a work of presumption but of faith in eternal verities. How increasingly striking will THE MESSAGE become as the great Day of God Almighty dawns nearer and clearer! Wordsworth's line, "No check, no stay, this streamlet shows," may now be fearlessly applied to this publication. As one of a great army of pioneers, constantly being cheered with messages of approval and enlightenment from those who have "marked, learned and inwardly digested" Identity facts, I wish you God-speed! Truly, Mr. Editor, you have witnessed that "many strokes, though with a little axe, hew down and fell the hardest-timbered oak." Keep the axe well sharpened, sir. You will never want for a man to turn the grindstone!

From MRS. ZOE BELL.

BRETHREN of Israel and those in Israel, may our God be our Protector and Shield during this new and momentous year of 1928. Gen. xv, verse 1, "Fear not, Abram: I am thy shield, and thy exceeding great reward." Psalm xlvi, verse 10, "Be still and know that I am God: I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted in the earth." Deut. xxxiii, verse 29, "Happy art thou, O Israel: who is like unto thee, O people saved by Jehovah, the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thy excellency! and thine enemies shall be found liars unto thee; and thou shalt tread upon their high places."

Let us ask our God that we all may as a nation claim and keep our inheritance. Deut. xxxii, verse 4, "And Moses commanded us a law, even the inheritance of the children of Israel." Psalm cxix, verse 165, "Great peace have they who love thy law: and nothing shall offend them." These laws commanded and given to us by our God, His statutes and judgments, let us all keep, and, when we do this, then we shall see Jesus Christ as He is, face to face, because we shall then be like Him, perfect and holy. Acts iii, verse 21, "Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the age (world) began."

Is not this time now at hand? The Amen, the faithful and true witness, Jesus Christ, our Saviour and our King. Yea, come quickly, O Jehovah, Jesus Christ.

From A. G. COPELAND, ESQ.

I COUNT it a great privilege to send a greeting to THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER and its readers, and to have an opportunity to express my deep gratitude to the Editor and authors who are responsible for this wonderful paper.

What it has meant to me I try to express to its readers in this message. Read the Bible, read it regularly and systematically, and read it carefully and with the help of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER. Those who do this will be surprised at the wealth of help, comfort and stability which it contains for each one of us, and an amount of information never dreamed of by those who have never before read it carefully as a whole.

Let us all therefore do our best to pass on this good news to others and pray for ourselves and them.

O God, give us in this world knowledge of Thy Truth.

From RUSSELL LONGMORE, ESQ.

I WOULD like to add my testimony to the value of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE, to which I look forward eagerly each week.

Apart from the uplifting and inspiring Editorial, it is a unique magazine, unfolding as it does God's own wonderful message and purpose for His people Israel, and through them to the whole world. It does indeed help one to realise that, in spite of all the difficulties and troubles of these latter days, we may "look up," for our redemption draweth nigh. So I thank God for THE MESSAGE, and pray that He will bless and use it, as He has done in the past.

"It has been said that the inferences of the geologist militate against those of the theologian. Nay, not those of our higher geologists and higher theologians, not what our Murchisons and Sedgwicks infer in the one field with what our Chalmerses and Isaac Taylors infer in the other. Between the Word and the works of God there can be no actual discrepancies; and the seeming ones are discernible only by the men who see worst."—HUGH MILLER.

WEEK BY WEEK.

By A. R. H.

TRUTH has nothing to fear from the searching light of public controversy. Although the masses of the people may be temporarily confused by a babel of tongues, nothing but good can ultimately accrue from the exposure of the thoughts of leaders to the light of day.

Intellectual controversy may be regarded as the growing pains of mind and spirit. Certainly with the dawn of a New Age we must expect an increase of controversy rather than a decrease.

And with the rising tide of universal controversy will come an increase in the spirit of Compromise to meet the tide and check it.

Both these forces are engaged in a struggle for the mastery. Which will prevail? This is a question which concerns us all. For in the days which immediately precede the gathering together of all peoples into One Great Family, none of us can remain unaffected by the troubles of our neighbour.

Decision is being forced upon us in these critical days. There will be little opportunity for lukewarmness. We must be either "hot" or "cold." And since the law of life is progress, the momentum of controversy must inevitably overcome the inertia of compromise and a higher harmony of thought be thus established.

Having overcome, the world will find rest. But there can be no rest without victory, and no victory without strenuousness of effort.

To most students of prophecy these things will seem clear enough. But it is the fashion to-day to say that controversy is not christian, whereas controversy is perfectly lawful provided it be conducted in a Christ-like spirit. Controversy is inevitable over vital issues.

JESUS was the greatest religious controversialist the world has ever known. Perhaps the most amazing religious controversy of all history is that described by St. John, in the eighth chapter of his Gospel. Certainly there are few passages in human literature which breathe so fierce a fire of verbal conflict.

None but the SON of MAN would have dared to use the terms He used against the outstanding religious leaders of His day, and there seems to have been little of the modern spirit of compromise about most of Our Lord's utterances.

The ENGLISH PEOPLE are said to have a genius for compromise. But even compromise must be tempered with restraint! For like all virtues if pressed too far it naturally assumes the nature of a vice.

Here, then, are some of the great controversies which in these last days are to shake GOD'S BRITH-ISH PEOPLE out of false complacency and awaken them for the reception of the strong and vital spirit of the living CHRIST:—

"Hear ye now, what the LORD saith: Arise, contend thou[1] before the mountains, and let the hills hear thy voice. Hear ye, O Mountains, and ye strong foundations of the earth; for the Lord hath a controversy with His People, and He will plead with ISRAEL."

First comes the appeal[2] to remember the loving-kindness of the LORD as revealed in the stirring events of early Brith-ish history. Then follows a statement of the true cause of trouble and a clear warning as to the essential difference between the sacramental and evangelical viewpoints regarding Israel faith:—

"Wherewith shall I come before the LORD, and bow[3] myself before the high GOD? Shall I come before Him with burnt offerings, with calves of a year old?

"Will the LORD be pleased with thousands of rams or with ten thousands of rivers of oil? Shall I give my firstborn for my transgression, the fruit of my body for the sin of my soul?"

Does God require a repetition of the sacrifice "once offered once for all,"[4] in atonement for the sins of His People?

Now in answer comes an early statement of the doctrine of justification by simple faith:—

"He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; And what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" And down through the centuries we seem to hear the words of JESUS echoing:—"I will have mercy and not sacrifice!"[5] This was a phrase for ever on His lips.

Thus the plea to ISRAEL-BRITAIN comes reinforced with the authority of JEHOVAH-JESUS as Son of Man. It is a call to the "Israel" element in the nation to forsake idolatry and remain true to the REFORMATION. For the re-formed faith is based upon the unalterable WORD of GOD which remains the only final standard of pure doctrine.

Where there is a sacrifice there must also be a priesthood. In the Epistle written especially to the HEBREWS (i.e., the Brith-ish) we are definitely warned that if Christ were on earth He would not be a priest![6]

In the growing determination of the British people to-day (whether they be outside or inside the Churches) to prevent England, heart of the Empire, becoming a priest-ridden country, we see the clearest sign of a response to God's plea with His people to remain truly pro-testant.[7]

The faith of the "Jacob" element in the Brith-ish Nation is a simple one. Ask the average man if he believes in religion, and he will (in effect) reply: "In my opinion 'to do justice and judgment is more acceptable to JEHOVAH than sacrifice.'"[8] In other words the average man believes that "To live clean and play the game is more acceptable to GOD than going to Church on Sundays."

That is his attitude to what he calls institutional religion. It is a tragedy that he cannot work within the orbit of the Churches, but the reasons for that inability are many and clear to both sides concerned. His attitude, however, is

[2] Micah vi, verses 3-5.

[3] Genuflexions, etc.

[4] Heb. ix and x, especially verses 25-28 and 10-14. Compare this conception with that contained in the Report on the Malines Conference which states: "The Sacrifice of the Eucharist is the same sacrifice as that of the Cross. . . . ."

[5] See Matt. ix, 13. Cp. also Hosea vi, 6. "For I desired mercy and not sacrifice and the knowledge of God more than burnt offerings."

[7] Pro-testant, i.e., for the Covenant or Testimony. We are called upon to remain true to both Old and New Testament doctrine.

[8] Proverbs xxi, 3.

certainly a striking reflection of that spirit of militant protestantism animating the words of Isaiah[9] :—

" Is it such a fast that I have chosen? A day for a man to afflict his soul? Is it to bow down his head as a bulrush, and to spread sackcloth and ashes[10] under him? Wilt thou call this a fast and acceptable day to the LORD?

" Is not this the fast that I have chosen? To loose the bands of wickedness, to undo heavy burdens, and to let the oppressed go free and to break every yoke? "

That is the spirit of the BRITISH PEOPLE. That is true religion. That is the spirit of the KINGDOM and of the EMPIRE.

Let those who would change the spirit of the English Church for something alien to the spirit of the nation as a nation be brave enough to leave the Church and not subvert it! That has been the tradition of honest dissentients down through the centuries.

A preliminary climax to this controversy matured historically when on December 15th, 1927, the House of Commons rejected the Deposited Book of Common Prayer. This is said to have been the most remarkable debate in the HOUSE of COMMONS within living memory. It was an event unparalleled in our time. It eclipsed the debate at the outbreak of war, 1914, and the severance of diplomatic relations with RUSSIA in 1927.

But more remarkable still the course of the debates in both Houses (LORDS and COMMONS) revealed an outline in striking analogy to the greater controversies yet to come, the " Controversy of Zion "[11] (the Throne) and the " Lord's Controversy with the Nations."[12] (Gentiles.)

As we have seen, the Lord's Controversy with His people regarding Idolatry begins with the " Israel " element (the Churches) in the Nation. But finally it enters the realm of State Idolatry and challenges the STATE regarding the substitution of

for the law of GOD, as embodied in the DIVINE CONSTITUTION.

In the dispute between State and Church over Law and Lawlessness in the Church of England it was significant that the Opposition (to the Prayer Book Measure) was headed by the two Law Officers of the CROWN.

Judgment has evidently begun at the House of God. But the State will next be called upon to put its House in order. And the judgment on the State—the purging of the Law (by other means than making illegalities legal!) will not be achieved without some travail and excuse for bitterness!

[11] See Isa. xxxiv, 8. There is to be a special YEAR of RECOMPENSE for this controversy, for it has not arisen through any fault in the office of the CROWN. The controversy has arisen purely from unnatural and unprovoked jealousy on the part of other nations. The margin points us to Isa. lxiii, which gives an outline of the military campaign conducted by ALLENBY (Allah-enbi—Prophet of God) from BASRA to JERUSALEM. These are events connected with the coming YEAR of the REDEEMED of verse 4. The second Psalm also gives an outline of the controversy which is to rage around the BRITH-ISH DAVIDIC THRONE.

[13] See Micah vi, 16.

But now for the parallel between this national or Kingdom Crisis and the greater crisis on an international scale which is shortly to be consummated :—

From the Scriptures we learn that the Great Tribulation is to be concluded with the gathering of all nations before JERUSALEM in the Valley of Decision.[14]

From the BIBLE in Stone, the Great Pyramid, we learn that the World Crisis (which began in 1914, but has been restrained during the present ARMISTICE period) is defined by the Low Passage system as being a period of Chaos.

Finally, the indications are that on entry into the King's Chamber and Judgment Hall of the Nations, Chaos gives way to Cosmos and Lawlessness to Law and Order.

In studying the speeches in both Houses of Parliament we are first impressed with the continued and emphatic use of the word " Chaos " by both parties in debate in relation to the Church in its present and future condition.

The Church as a part of the Nation in its passage through the period of history defined by the Chambers of the GREAT PYRAMID is thus seen to be subject to the same influence as that which afflicts the Nation.

The Bishop of Hereford put it more distinctly still when he openly declared : " The CHURCH of ENGLAND is in TRIBULATION."

The Solicitor-General rivalled this testimony when he dramatically testified : " I pray GOD this HOUSE may not be found wanting in

in which it is." And the Bishop of Worcester felt constrained to use language amounting to tautology in order to properly appraise the occasion when he said : " We are faced with a Crisis of Judgment." [15]

A Crisis is a judgment! The World Crisis is a World Judgment. The Church of England Prayer Book Crisis is judgment beginning at the HOUSE of GOD.

Those who so bitterly complain that " in one day " the work of twenty years should have been swept aside must have temporarily overlooked the fact that " One day " and " One hour " [16] crises are a commonplace occurrence in the divine judgment of Nations, Churches and Peoples.

James Douglas sums up the situation with prophetic insight when he says : " It may be that out of all this Chaos and confusion the distracted CHURCH of ENGLAND may be regenerated."[17]

That is the faith we must take with us as we bow our heads on entering the next low passage. For CHAOS is but the birth-pangs of COSMOS. And our present darkness heralds a radiant dawn.

[14] Joel iii, 14.

[15] Cp. John xii, 31. " Now is the judgment of this world." Thus the A.V. translates this passage. Ferrar Fenton alternatively renders the word " Judgment " as " Crisis." Evidently we may regard these words as being, to all intents and purposes, synonymous.

[16] See Rev. xviii, 10, for instance.

[17] Again the parallel, between the KINGDOM CRISIS (judgment beginning at the HOUSE of GOD) and the greater WORLD CRISIS, is complete. JESUS speaking, of the MILLENNIUM which is to follow the last great TRIBULATION calls it the REGENERATION (Matt. xix, 28, A.V.) or NEW BIRTH (Ferrar Fenton).

NOTES AND QUOTATIONS IN RELATION TO BRITAIN-ISRAEL.

By PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc., &c.

No. 11.

THE following represents the unanimous voice of Belgium in its expression of the appreciation of its entire population concerning the effective work wrought by the British Empire on behalf of a ruthlessly persecuted people :—

"Thanks from nation to nation, from people to people, from man to man.

"During these unspeakable trials which our poor little country has had to put up with during these awful years, your people of Great Britain and Ireland have remained our hope and trust.

"If we have not despaired, during this hurricane of fire and blood, it is because we have never forgotten that you are watching over us, and that you never will permit our destruction.

"It was the confidence in British diplomacy, to that enlightened and generous diplomacy, that free and independent Belgium is indebted for its existence, and FOR EIGHTY YEARS OF PEACEFUL PROGRESS.

"The greatest need has conceived the mightiest, the wisest altruism the world has ever had the privilege to witness. The entire Belgium people feels riveted to your nation through eternal ties of blood."

An American writer asserts that :—"The Anglo-Saxons to-day, account for it as you will, are filled with the thoughts, THE HOPES AND SPIRITUAL ASPIRATIONS WHICH FLOW FROM GOD THROUGH HEBREW PROPHETS and poets, and are gathered up and perfected in Jesus Christ, the Son of David according to the flesh, but the Son of God according to the spirit of holiness."

Dr. Von Dollinger says :—"To the Anglo-Saxon race rather than to the German or Sclav is assigned, in the coming age, the intellectual supremacy that in ancient times belonged to the Greeks, and afterwards to the Romans. The Germans will have their share in this primacy, but they will have it indirectly, merely through the common medium of the English language."

Pere Hyacinth makes the following statement :—"These ancient Oriental books (he means the books of the Bible) are as thoroughly assimilated in England as if they were of English origin (and they were, for they came from Israel, and Israel of old is Britain of to-day), the growth of their language, history and piety. Nobody in England can free himself from association with Scripture which imbues every thought, and colours laws, manners, legislation and literature. The very infidels of England think and speak in idioms of Scripture."

Max O'Rell says :—"If I have not succeeded in proving that in spite of their thousand and one whims the Anglo-Saxons are the only people in the world who are perfectly free, I have wasted my time."

The noted General Bernhardi says :—"England organised the world's commerce . . . and has created civilised factors which promise to be of permanent value . . . Now it becomes England's task to spread European civilisation over other continents."

He also says :—"In England, political instinct and race instinct are far more strongly developed and far more general than in Germany. . . . National character and political aims are in harmony. . . . England has developed a far greater political power than Germany, which power is based on the unity of the national will. . . . By far the largest number of the world's newspapers stand under the influence of England.

"Every man must to-day have arrived at the conclusion that Germany's further development as a world-power is possible only after a final settlement with England."

The Rev. E. Budge says :—"This colossal British Empire has enthroned herself upon all the scientific discoveries of the age, and possesses the best opportunities for turning them to account, by the immunity it enjoys from external enemies. It exhibits a still more marvellous spectacle of unrivalled greatness, and, having thus taken the lead, she must retain it, if true to herself and the star of that destiny which has guided her throughout all her wanderings like the pillar of old, and this with undiminished brightness, beckoning her onward to a higher day of glory than earthly empires have yet enjoyed, even in their wildest dreams."

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

THE six special meetings addressed by the Rev. Pascoe Goard last week in the Central Hall, Westminster, were crowded. A deeply spiritual note was struck at the opening meeting, and the tone was not only maintained throughout the series, but intensified. The great gatherings in spite of wet weather with a cold wind were remarkable; more remarkable was the intense interest and spiritual fervour. Mr. Goard's addresses on Divine healing and kindred subjects made a profound impression. Many had come long distances. Expressions of deep gratitude for the help and uplift derived are reaching us daily. Reports of the addresses will appear in this journal in due course.

Two further meetings are being held at the Central Hall, Westminster, on Friday of this week (January 27th): Afternoon at 2.45 and evening at 7.30, to be addressed by the Revs. Pascoe Goard, W. H. Stuart-Fox, M.A., Mr. John Leech, K.C., Mr. Garrison and Mr. Morey.

Mr. Goard is addressing special meetings on Monday and Tuesday of this week at Manchester and Liverpool respectively.

Our Sheffield friends are making special efforts in re lectures on Monday and Tuesday evenings next (January 30th and 31st) by the Rev. Pascoe Goard and Mr. Herbert Garrison in the Montgomery Hall, at 7.30.

Mr. Goard and Mr. Leech are addressing meetings for our Dublin Branch on February 2nd and 3rd. They commence an eight-day Mission in Belfast on Sunday, February 5th, in the great Ulster Hall with an evening mass meeting. From Monday to Saturday they are in the Wellington Hall, and on Sunday, February 12th, again in the Ulster Hall. Mr. Garrison is to give two Lantern Lectures:—"Palestine," on February 13th, and "The Great Pyramid," on February 14th, in the largest hall in the city—the Grosvenor Hall.

We are undertaking a vigorous Forward Movement at once, and we have the pleasure to announce that the Earl of Dysart—a Life Member of the Federation—has most generously promised a donation of £700 provided we raise a further £1,300 in six weeks. Now, we MUST comply with this condition, and we appeal to those of our readers who have the means to come to our aid, and we feel sure they will do so.

Mr. Garrison lectured at the Polytechnic, Holloway Road, N., on January 16th; twice at the Connaught Hall, Worthing, on January 17th, to excellent audiences; also at the Central Library, Cardiff, on January 18th, and the Conference Room of the Bingley Hall, Birmingham, on January 19th. At Worthing the Rev. Canon Hollis, M.A., presided.

We are grateful for the response to our appeal for help in extending the circulation of this journal. Much more help is needed, and we most earnestly ask every reader to do his and her very best. Those who do not wish to mutilate the pages of the journal by cutting out the form can please write their wishes separately, and those who have no particular friends to whom they desire the journal to be sent are urged to send us the amount they can afford and we will carefully select the names of those we specially wish to be brought into contract with B.-I. teaching.

The Rev. T. H. Whitehouse has given addresses to keenly appreciative audiences at Redcar, Richmond (Yorks), Darlington, Durham and Stockton, on "Why the British Flag Flies over Jerusalem," and "Moscow versus Britain."

The Rev. R. G. F. Waddington, M.A., is doing a splendid work in the North, giving dozens of addresses and in many centres and forming new Branches.

British-Israel is very much in evidence in the Provincial Press all over the country, by means of reports of meetings we are holding, correspondence and contributed articles. Miss Cook, our Hon. Sec. at Herne Bay, has an interesting article in a local paper. Mr. Chapman sends us an informative article which he got inserted in a paper serving Hounslow, where he and local friends are forming a new Branch.

An elementary B.-I. Bible Study Class will be held at Headquarters on Tuesdays, from 6 to 7 p.m., for men only, commencing on Tuesday next, January 31st. Our readers are kindly asked to make this known to their men friends.

Professor Odlum's book—"God's Covenant Man"—has been revised and enlarged. Though only just out, one thousand copies have already been sold. The price is 6s. Postage sixpence.

The Rev. Pascoe Goard's new book, "The Kingdom of God," will be ready, it is hoped, in about ten days' time.

IS IT POSSIBLE TO SUPPOSE that the same compassionate Lord Who forbade His people to yoke together two animals of unequal size (Deut. xxii, 10) because both would suffer thereby; and Who in the days of His humanity used the beautiful parable of a shepherd's devotion to his dumb charges in illustration of His own love and sacrifice—can look with anything but the sternest disapproval upon the principles of Vivisection and upon those who commit these acts of "scientific" cruelty.

SIR G. D. THANE, Inspector under the Vivisection Act, told the Royal Commission that experiments under Certificate C (inoculations) "may cause great pain and suffering." Animals, it was admitted, are seen "miserable and dying, evidently in suffering." The Act allows the inoculated animal to be kept alive as long as the experimenter considers necessary. The Chief Inspector said that "some experiments for research purposes are very severe."

THE CHRISTIAN IDEAL is not to preserve the bodily life at all costs, but "if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out!" thereby preserving the soul unpoisoned by sin and self.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

[It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.]

THE LAW OF THE LORD, OR THE COMMON LAW.—IV.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

In the last numbers we have seen: (1) The presen. remarkable spread of the Common Law among the families of the earth. (2) The Divine origin of the Common Law. (3) The antiquity of the Common Law.

Let us now look at the organisation of the new nation which called forth a restatement and a new codification of the law, 1496-1456 B.C.: a restatement and codification which stands out clearly above all others, given by the voice of God; written by the finger of God; signed with the ineffable Name of God: "I am, Jehovah."

Let it be repeated that this was not the date of the first statement of the law: neither was this the date of the commencement of the administration of the Common Law in the earth. The Common Law is as old as from the lifetime of Adam, the father of the Adamic race. We have no hint of there ever having been on the earth an order of life obeying or striving to obey a law external to its own life until the time when "the Lord God commanded the man." We are assured by "the testimony of the Lord" that the law was laid upon the man Adam and upon Eve his wife in the Garden of Eden, and that the law has been in operation ever since that time in the Adamic family in the earth.

Let us now come to the organisation of the nation Israel, and the restatement of the law at Sinai.

We have read the preceding Genesis story of the Call of Abraham; the birth of his seed in Isaac; the dedication of his seed in Isaac in the great ordinance of sacrifice on Mount Moriah, to the express work of bringing humanity into harmony with the Will of God; which in other words is to bring them into harmony—1st, with the Common Law; and 2nd, with the full Gospel of Grace.

We have seen the regeneration of the man Israel at the brook Jabbok,* and of the household of the man Israel at Bethel†; and the placing of the name Israel on them to the end of time. Thus they are brought into fellowship with the rule of God, one part of which consists in the ceaseless promulgation, and the continuous administration, of the Common Law in the earth; and the other branch of the activity of the rule with God being the constant preaching of the Gospel of Salvation and the administration of the biological processes connected therewith, notably the New Birth of the sons of Adam, by regeneration, into the Kingdom and Family of God, as, in very fact and deed, the Sons of God.

We have seen that race Israel go down, for discipline and training in obedience, into Egypt, there to be oppressed for hundreds of years. We have seen them emerge from that discipline and training in obedience at the Exodus.

We are now to see them organised into the Kingdom-nation of the Lord. We have seen these things of which we have now spoken in the simple narrative of Genesis, and in the opening chapters of Exodus. Many scholarly men, who are specialists in certain lines, have questioned the historicity of the simple records of Genesis, and of the Pentateuch generally. But the corollary facts, such as the existence of the people and their possession of the law in such perfection as is not to be found elsewhere, and so forth, to buttress the simple narrative as to make the acceptance of it as history indeed much easier and more reasonable than to question and deny it. One may question a statement which is supported by fact. So if one should assert that two and two make four, the statement might be as readily questioned as the statement which might be made that two and two make five. But when the statement that two and two make four is made, and is known to be supported by fact, questioning it is seen to be useless. The fact establishes the statement.

So with the simple narrative of Genesis, Exodus, etc. One might question the historicity of the unsupported statement. But when the fact of the existence of the people in the assigned geographical position is known; and the further facts that they were there at the time indicated; that they were thereafter found to be in possession of the Common Law in greater perfection than is elsewhere found, notwithstanding the fact that the Common Law was not the law of Egypt under which they had been for centuries; that they were thereafter found to be organised as a nation in accordance with the Common Law, and that their rulers, judges and courts administered that law to perfection; then these facts and other such facts support the statement of the Pentateuch to such a degree that it is impossible to turn away from it. Such well-known facts support the statement as historical. Such facts refuse their support to the critical denial of the historicity of the books of Genesis and the remaining books of the Pentateuch, and the statement of the critic, failing to find support in the facts of the case on the one hand, and failing to account for known facts on the other, but being contrary to them, falls to the ground.

Yes, the narrative of the Pentateuch, the people, the geographical setting, the chronologies, and the possession of the system of the Common Law, etc., are all bound up together, and they stand; as every uncovered fact, and series of facts, must always stand.

The Exodus of the people from Egypt and their assembly at Sinai are now before us. It is the occasion of the organisation of the Israel-British nation; it is the founding of the Israel-British system of Justice; it is the promulgation of that law which modern nations have declared, as far as modern days are concerned, have a British origin. The law, inwardly written upon the hearts of the people, identifies the people as Israel, to whom the law was newly given well down in historical time: that is to say, in 1491 B.C. (circa).

THE INITIAL PROCLAMATION.

There came the preliminary proclamation to the nation Israel. It was not a proclamation for that occasion only. It was a proclamation which should run concurrently with the existence of the nation as long as the sun and moon endure, for such is the guarantee of continuance given to the nation Israel. One branch or another of the Israel people have thus continued to be God's "Kingdom of Priests" in the world, without ceasing.

The preliminary proclamation is as follows:

"Thus shalt thou say to the children of Jacob, and tell the children of Israel;

"Ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how I bare you on eagles' wings, and brought you unto myself.

"Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people; for all the earth is mine:

"And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and a holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel."

THE MANIFESTATION OF JEHOVAH, THE "GREAT KING."

In the next paragraph section of the literature contained in chapters xix and xx we have the most graphic account of the coming of Jehovah to establish Himself in Israel as King for ever. Please read, as part of this article, Exodus xix, verses 16-25.

And now we come to that which is most important for this particular study, namely, the promulgation of the Commandments, which form the basis of the Common Law.

THE COMMANDMENTS.

The self revelation of God the Lawgiver, and the relation of Himself to the law.

"I am the Lord thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage."

Monotheism.

"Thou shalt have no other gods before me."

Idolatry barred.

"Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of anything that is in the heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth:

"Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them; for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me;

"And shewing mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and keep my commandments."

The Name of God.

"Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain; for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain."

The Sabbath—an established institution.

"Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy.

"Six days shalt thou labour and do all thy work:

"But the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates:

"For in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed the seventh day, and hallowed it."

Thus far the Commandments deal with right relationship with God.

The family.

"Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."

Protection of life.

"Thou shalt not kill."

Protection of character.

"Thou shalt not commit adultery."

Protection of property.

"Thou shalt not steal."

Protection of reputation.

"Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour."

Protection of our own hearts.

"Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maidservant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor any thing that is thy neighbour's."

Thus were the great fundamental principles which underlie all life and conduct promulgated by the voice of the Lord our God.

It should be remarked that the Sabbath Commandment was amended in the second Decalogue. God's Sabbath continues unbroken; but alas He sware in His wrath that we should not enter into His rest. The reason given is, "Forty years long was I grieved with this generation and said, It is a people that do err in their heart. and they have not known my ways."

Those who are anxious to see us go back to what they esteem to be the original Sabbath of the Lord overlook the fact that God has by oath prohibited that. The Epistle to the Hebrews shows that such prohibition is still in force; although it holds out the promise that ultimately we shall be restored to that Sabbath again. "There remaineth therefore the keeping of a Sabbath to the people of God."

Thus under the most impressive circumstances were the commandments promulgated which form the basis of the Common Law. It will be seen that the Commandments are statements of principle, and that all life and conduct are provided for therein.

The great Pageant which accompanies the restatement of the law in Israel, and through Israel in the earth, formed the first day of a forty years' training course in which the new nation was perfected in law, worship and service; and to that forty years of training we shall next direct our attention.

"As a Poem, moral and didactic, the Bible is a repertory of Divine instincts—a collection of the deepest intuitions of truth, beauty, justice, holiness—the past, the present, the future—which by their far vision, the power by which they have stamped themselves on the belief and heart, the hopes and fears, the days and nights of humanity; their superiority to aught else in the thoughts or words of man, their consistency with themselves, their progressive, and their close-drawn connection with those marvelous and unshaken facts, are proved Divine in a sense altogether peculiar and alone."

G. GILFILLAN.

THE PASSING OF THE SECOND WOE, AND THE THIRD WOE COMING QUICKLY.

BY THE REV. L. G. A. ROBERTS, COMMANDER R.N.

How far Turkey (Edom) has received its doom (Ezek. xxv,14; xxxv; Isa. xxxiv; lxiii; Obadiah and Jeremiah xlix, 7–22) we must not dogmatise about.

It does appear to us, however, that from these passages Edom has yet to pass through some terrible judgment. There is yet a passage, Dan. xi, 40–Dan. xii, 1, which complicates the prophecy. The eleventh chapter has for its object Palestine, or the land of Israel, and the two Powers which wrestle in order to obtain the mastery in that land. These are called the King of the North and the King of the South—or Syria and Egypt; these two are clearly alluded to up to Antiochus Epiphanes and the Maccabean princes. Some commentators carry this on to v. 35. From v. 36 it is admitted that this is the Antichrist. The gap seems bridged in v. 35 as "the time of the end," "a time appointed." After Antiochus Epiphanes the Roman became King of North and also of the South until the Mohammedan Power, which is stated to be "the abomination of desolation." For 1,260 years, i.e., A.D. 637, Mahommedanism has had possession of the Holy Land and the North and South. But in 1882 Britain obtained possession of Egypt and thus became the King of the South. As such we have been pushing at this wilful King until we have dispossessed the Turk (Edom) and delivered the Holy Land. Palestine, with the consent of Europe, is now administered by Britain.

The language of v. 36–39 suits rather Rome than Turkey; in Daniel it is the fourth kingdom of Dan. ii which is viewed in the image, and here we have the right to assume that Turkey, being in possession of Eastern Rome, or Greece, was still King of the North until dispossessed by Britain. So that Britain holding Palestine is the Power which another Power, styled the King of the North, comes against. At present we see the Turkish Government established in Asia Minor and still in possession of Constantinople. There is intimate intrigue going on between Russia and Turkey, and we cannot say what may be in the very near future. "The House of Togarmah of the North quarters," Ezek. xxxviii, 6, with all his bands, is in the Confederacy of Rosh, Meshech and Tubal.

It should be well to look back to verse 30, and see another and more reasonable view. "The ships of Chittim shall come against him," that is, Antiochus Epiphanes, which brought about his terrible persecution of the Jews; the spoliation of the Temple and what took place after the battle of Pydua, 168 B.C., is a forecast of what took place under the Roman abomination. So these two are, as it were, blended in one. For though Antiochus did cause the sacrifices to cease and placed the abomination of desolation in the Sanctuary, his career was but short, and cannot be that which Our Lord meant in Matt. xxiv, 15. So this phrase refers to the passing of the Macedonian Empire and the introduction of the Roman, and is just what occurred in Judæa. The language is therefore thus suited; the 31st verse onward suits Rome, assisted by the Jews who forsook the holy covenant. It was they who set the authorities of Rome against the Christians. There is no doubt but what the distinction between Judaizers and Christians is maintained even to "the time of the end." Constantine and Theodosius both helped the Christians with a little help. But the Apostasy grew out of this, and the Roman Church, calling itself Israel, assumed the position promised to the nation to whom the Kingdom of God was given when it was taken from the Jews (Matt. xxi, 43, 44). Israel of the Old Testament was in hiding in the Isles of the West, in Britain. Now from v. 36 the Antichrist is the theme. Augustine of Hippo, in "the City of God," had some idea of what was taking place when he called attention to Rev. vii, "the Sealed Ones." As the 36th verse states, this new king did according to his will regardless of the God of his fathers, or of the desire of women; celibacy was his object to practise hypocrisy, he honoured the god of nature, let humanity have its full play, if only it would submit to him; heaping up to himself gold, silver, precious stones, and pleasant things. This strange god, for he exalted himself above every other, was the Papacy; and appointed his Cardinals, to whom he gave power to exact dominion over many for gain. Blended with this Western Apostasy is also the Eastern, and it is purposely implied under the little horns of Dan. vii, 19–28; viii, 23–26. Of the first little horn it is stated: "but the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and to destroy it unto the end." This is what is implied in Rev. xvi, 19. Whereas Dan. viii, 25, having described his career, goes on to state that this little horn stands up against the Prince of princes and shall be broken without hand. Here, then, is Isa. lxiii and Hab. iii. This last prophecy, with Zech. x, 11, gives us the key to work upon. Edom is the aggressor, when the pride of Assyria is to be brought down and the sceptre of Egypt shall depart away. The end and the beginning of the World Powers since Israel came on the scene are here destroyed together.

But we must revert to "the time of the end," Dan. xi, 40, when the King of the South (Britain as in Egypt) shall push at him. This was effectually done in 1917, when Turkey was driven out of Palestine and Jerusalem was freed. The next stage is "and the King of the North shall come against him with a whirlwind, with chariots, and with horsemen, and with many ships; and he shall enter into the countries, and shall overflow and pass over. He shall enter also into the glorious land, and many countries shall be overthrown; but these shall escape out of his hand, even Edom and Moab, and the chief of the children of Ammon. He shall stretch forth his hand also upon the countries: and the land of Egypt shall not escape. But he shall have power over the treasures of gold and silver, and over all the precious things of Egypt; and the Libyans and Ethiopians shall be at his steps. But tidings out of the East and out of the North shall trouble him; therefore he shall go forth with great fury to destroy, and utterly to make away many. And he shall plant the tabernacle of his palace between the seas in the glorious holy mountain; yet he shall come to his end, and none shall help him. And at that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people: and there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation, even to that same time; and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book," etc.

There is no doubt but what "the time of Jacob's trouble" is now come, for on comparing Jer. xxx, 7; Dan. xii, 1; Matt. xxiv, 21, 22; Rev. xvi, 18; and perhaps Ezek. xxxviii, 18, 19, all indicate the same trouble; Rev. xix, 11–21, giving the coming of "He that is Faithful and True." "The Word of God." "The King of kings and Lord of lords." There appears a gradual process in this revelation which may point to intentional development. We must be careful not to dogmatise. Is it not likely that there is a trinity in unity of the wicked one—Roman, Mohammedan and Grecian (or Russian)? "When I have raised up thy sons, O Zion, against thy sons, O Greece," Zech. ix, 13. Hence the vagueness of the language used in Dan. xi, 40–45, which can only be solved by careful discrimination. We cannot refrain from pointing to the language used in Isa. lxiii, 1–6, The Redeemer of Israel has all the burden; Zech. xiv, 3–5, and Hab. iii, certainly imply that it is the Lord Himself (see Isa. xxxi, 8–9; Mic. v, 4–5) Who comes and fights for His people. The policy of the day is Peace, the League of Nations is set upon Peace, but so is the little horn of Dan. viii, 25. So that "when they shall say Peace and Safety," then we are told "sudden destruction cometh upon them—and they shall not escape," 1 Thes. v, 3. The first stage of this dread calamity falls upon Europe first and Britain is isolated. Isa. xxvi, all the chapter, and xxxii, 15–20.

WHAT THEN MAY SHORTLY ENSUE?

We have always held to the historical interpretation, that the Man of Sin is the Roman Apostasy, that his term was 1,260 years, but his rise cannot be exactly defined, whether where Justinian issued his decree, A.D. 533; or Phocas, A.D. 607; or Vitallian enjoined the exclusive use of the Latin tongue, A.D. 663. Each of these have a terminus ad quem of greatest importance. This last with the attempt to compel the Church of England to renounce her Protestantism.

Of the three Apostasies, each individually the outcome of the Man of Sin, which is likely to lead the way to this last great struggle?

From Ezek. xxxv, especially v. 10, and xxxvi, 2, we gather that Turkey (Edom) will at the League of Nations (lips of talkers) lay claim to the possession once more of the Holy Places. It is then that the Lord God, seeing the peaceable disposition of our (Britain's) policy will bring about Himself that which will cause interference both on the part of Rome and Russia. We (Britain) shall withdraw from the League, as the verdict will be given against our judgment; the constitution of the League being altogether averse to Protestant interest, or the Will of God. It will then be the climax, but even this may take years of intrigue on the part of each one, in order to determine which Power—Rome, Turkey or Russia—shall occupy the Holy Places. Hence we consider the ambiguity. Rome may be strong Jesuitically, Turkey also by Islamism, yet Russia is the great Northern Power, the eighth head out of the seven!

We have reason to believe from Isa. xxvii, 13, and Zech. ix, 14, where the great trumpet is to be blown that we must rescue the Armenians (the lost) in the land of Assyria, this by using our troops from India. It is not at all likely that we shall relinquish our hold upon Jerusalem; and the lands of Edom,

Moab and Rabbah in Ammon may eventually be seized by our troops, which are at present in Egypt. But notice it is Turkey's action that provokes the war. Against him alone "the hand of my people Israel" is to act, (Ezek. xxv, 14) however unwillingly. The expression in both Jer. xlix, 19–20, against Edom, and Jer. l, 44–45, against Babylon, from the swelling of the Jordan, is singular and points to the land of Palestine, and "Who is like Me" and "Who is that Shepherd" are suitable to Jer. xxx, 21.

Whilst these things are taking place in the East of Palestine, Russia by her Sovietism and Communism taking advantage of the confusion in the League of Nations, and of Britain's isolation and withdrawal, will obtain the federation of the ten kingdoms (ten horns) who "hate the whore and will make her desolate and burn her with fire," thus "the cities of the nations fall" to her, "when it shall hail, coming down on the forest." Great Babylon will now come into remembrance before God. "The city shall be low in a low place." Compare Isa. xxxii, 18, 19, 20; xxvi, and see from the last verses how we shall be engaged in prayer. This will lead us to repentance as a nation (Acts iii, 19–21). God's marvellous work in our deliverance in the East will draw us nearer to Him. The fall of Rome (Babylon) will do the rest (Rev. xix, 1–6). Then the wife having made herself ready, the Bridegroom will come, the virgins her companions, the wise virgins shall be brought unto THEE, they shall enter in (Ps. xlv, 14–15); Rev. xix, 9.

THEN FOLLOWS ARMAGEDDON, THE LAST STAGE.

At this present moment we cannot tell what may eventually be the condition of the great Northern Power, such as to constitute it a maritime Power having many ships, but the ten horns (kingdoms) give their power and strength to the beast (Rev. xvii, 13–17) "until the words of God shall be fulfilled." This, then, carries us to the end. We know the Navy of Italy is in such a condition as may prove a foe not to be despised, should it join in the Northern Confederacy. That Russia may within the next few years become possessed of a large fleet in the Black Sea is possible. But a difficulty presents itself; why then should Russia (Ezek. xxxviii, 8, 9, 15, 16) be thus defined? No mention being made of any ships, but of horses to come against the land. Is the account of Dan. xi, 40, intended to be a flanking attack (Isa. xi, 14) of which the one in Ezekiel is the frontal? Then the question may arise as to who it is this King of the North comes against? To our mind it is against the Power that is in possession of Palestine; that would be Britain, unless indeed Turkey may have received subtle encouragement, and by a sudden blow assume (under instructions of the League of Nations) the environments of Jerusalem. We are led to this by the language used in Zech. ix, especially v. 8 taken with v. 1, and Isa. xvii, 1, 7, 8. For although this chapter, as far as v. 9, has had a preliminary fulfilment at the time of Alexander the Great, and when Our Lord came and was rejected of Judah, it awaits a complete fulfilment. We are aware also that Constantinople, now in the hand of Turkey (Edom), is to come eventually into our hands (Ps. cviii). Here is God's answer to Turkey's claim of the Holy Land (Ezek. xxxv, 10). We tried to obtain Constantinople at the beginning of our Turkish War, but God did not go forth with our hosts (Ps. lx, 10); we never asked Him, and we were turned back. This next time we shall be in the attitude of prayer. Consider diligently both these Psalms. If, as at present, we are so heedless of consequences, what more likely than that Russia, having all Europe (except the Locarno Pact) at her beck and call, should force the Bosphorus and Dardanelles before we are aware. This would bring on that mighty conflict on the sea spoken of in Hab. iii, which again is primarily begun from the Tents of Cushan when He walks through the sea with His horses, to perform His oath to the tribes, that Abraham may possess the Gate of his enemies. If, then, we close these gates, Bosphorus and Dardanelles, the ships of the Northern Power (confederacy) must meet God's forces (Britain's) on the sea. This would compel Russia to make use of the multitudes of horses she has been acquiring and training for mountain warfare. Who could have led Russia to this thought but the Prince of the power of darkness (comp. Ezek. xxviii; Dan. x, 20) counselling against "Michael our Prince" (Dan. x, 21; xii, 1; Rev. xii, 7–xiii) against "the Lamb" (Rev. xiv; xvii, 14) from beginning to end.

Every other prophecy of this coming struggle centres in the destruction of the Assyrians, which is the last head of the World Powers against Israel.

The expressions are strong, it is God who leads him forth. It is He who hastens his ruin, when the mystery of iniquity has acquired this head "Wickedness." (רשע) Russia (Zech. v, 8). No Apostasy has yet, until now, daringly proclaimed war against every god, even God Himself and the Lord Jesus Christ. But this began at the time of the Czar. "When this צר 'enemy' shall come in as a flood the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up the Standard against him" (Isa. lix, 19). It was Peter the Great whose dogma led the State and Constitution of Russia to this daring assumption, not that he exacted it in his own life, but his ambitions as proclaimed have led the Russian State to this daring challenge of God Himself. It is the Word of God which given to Israel, and the Redeemer coming to Zion, causes us to obtain the victory; see sequence in each case.

What the Kaiser attempted to do when he allowed himself and his consort to be enthroned, and photographed, on the Mount near Jerusalem, will yet be effected by this Head of the Confederated Hosts of Meshech and Tubal, under him who is prophetically known as Rosh, Russia.

Notice, however, Russia does not possess Jerusalem. This Royal City has been in the hand of Edom, and Edom is expelled by the saviours who come upon Mount Zion; it is Esau that is the theme in Obadiah. It is the Mount of Esau that is to be judged, and the Kingdom shall be the Lord's. Russia merely passes through, overflows, seizes the treasures in Egypt, but the lands of Edom, Moab, and the principal portions of Ammon, are in the hands of Israel (Isa. xi, 14; Dan. xi, 41); these obey Israel. So we read Zech. xii and xiv, and see how serious is the time of Jacob's trouble, but he shall be delivered out of it.

Our chief power is prayer, and God will strengthen His people by His Own Presence in their very midst.

THINGS WHICH CANNOT BE SHAKEN-II.

By Daniel Farmer.

I.—The Throne of God.

"Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever." "A sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of Thy Kingdom." (Heb. i, 8.) "Justice and judgment are the habitation (marg. establishment) of Thy throne." (Ps. lxxxix, 14.) His throne is in the heavens. (Ps. ciii, 19). His earthly throne. (Dan. ii, 44.)

"Thy throne, O Mighty God, it shall
For ever and for ever be,
The sceptre of Thy kingdom is
The sceptre of all equity."

II.—The Purpose of God.

"All the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing, and He doeth according to His will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth, and none can stay His hand, or say unto Him, What doest Thou? (Dan. iv, 35.) Pharaoh did so, and sought to defeat His purpose by drowning His people Israel: God drowned him. Haman also tried to stay His hand and planned to hang one of God's prominent men: God hung Haman on his own gallows. Nebuchadnezzar sought to burn three of His ambassadors: God burnt the men used to throw them into the furnace. God "worketh all things after the counsel of His own will." (Eph. i, 11.) "God is not man, that He should lie: neither the Son of man, that He should repent (change): hath He said, and shall He not do it? or hath He spoken, and shall He not make it good?" (Num. xxiii, 19.)

III.—The Word of God.

"The Word of the Lord endureth for ever." (1 Pet. i, 25.) "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but My words shall not pass away," said the Lord Jesus—and that majestic utterance stands to-day. The oldest part of Holy Scripture is nearly 3,500 years old, and the New Testament almost 2,000 years of age. The hostility of many of the keenest intellects down through the ages—from a cultivated Porphyry down to a coarse Tom Paine—has failed to dislodge a single stone of this Divine Temple of Truth. If the angels do any laughing, it must be in equal proportion to their weeping as they observe the twentieth-century pigmies, with their foreign-made pea-shooters, assailing this Divine Gibraltar—what the late W. E. Gladstone spoke of as "The Impregnable Rock of Holy Scripture."

This granite monument of Divine Testimony breaks the foreign-made sets of teeth of the foolish men who bite at it—and brings the heads off their Continental-made hammers.

"I stood one evening by the blacksmith's door
And heard the anvil ring the vesper chime,
Then, looking in, I saw upon the floor
Old hammers, worn with beating years of time.

How many anvils have you had, asked I,
To wear and batter all these hammers so?
'Just one,' the blacksmith said, with twinkling eye,
'The anvil wears the hammers out, you know.'

And so, methought, the anvil of God's Word
For ages sceptic blows have beat upon,
And though the sound of clanging blows is heard,
The Anvil is unchanged, the hammers gone!"

"I read it daily," said King George. Archbishop Cranmer counselled men of his day to "diligently search for the well of life, and not to run to the stinking puddles of men's imaginations"; whilst the late Archbishop Temple declared, "I doubt if we can do anything for people to be compared with helping them to understand the Bible."

IV.—The Church of God.

"Upon this Rock I will build My Church" (Matt. xvi, 18.) So said the Great Head of the Church. Upon what Rock? Peter? That is what the Church of Rome asserts. Not so! but upon the declaration which Peter made—viz., "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." This is the "Established Church" of Holy Scripture—against which the "gates of hell"—hades, the grave—cannot prevail—for its members "die no more, for they are equal unto the angels" (Luke xx, 36). This is the only "High" Church known to Holy Scripture—whose members, in the plan and purpose of its Founder, are already "sitting together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus" (Eph. ii, 6). So "high," indeed, that the "gates of hell"—in the sense of Satanic hatred—cannot get near it, still less "prevail" against it. This is the "Broad" Church—not in the accepted term of the word—as believing and tolerating anything and everything—but as being "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief corner-stone" (Eph. ii, 20).

"See the Gospel Church secure,
And founded on the Rock;
All her promises are sure,
Her bulwarks who can shock?
Count her every precious shrine,
Tell to after ages, tell
Justified by power Divine
The Church can never fall."

Our lot is cast in a day when the hearts of many God-fearing souls are "failing them for fear"; let all such take comfort in the fact that though the earth, earthly kingdoms, human systems, and evil men can and will be shaken, and shaken down—God's throne, God's purpose, God's Word, and God's Church cannot even be shaken, much less shaken down.

"Do you not often tremble?" was asked of one professing strong confidence in God's Word.

"Oh, yes, very often," was the reply, "but the Rock on which I stand never does."

Mr. David Davidson lectured on "The Great Pyramid: Its Divine Message," in the Hall of the Royal Society of Arts, Edinburgh, on January 25th. He is to lecture on the same subject on Thursday next, February 9th, at 8 p.m., in the Carfax Assembly Rooms, Oxford, when Lieut.-General Sir Arthur Phayre, K.C.B., is to preside.

NEW YEAR MESSAGES.

From W. T. CRAIG, ESQ., F.R.G.S.,

President, Northern British-Israel Council.

ALL good wishes to your readers for 1928, who, amid the troubles and distresses which have characterised the year 1927, have shared the many blessings bestowed upon the Chosen People of God; and if I were asked to name the greatest of these, my reply would be—the increased distribution and the penetration of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE to the ends of the earth. The teaching of that journal, founded upon the solid rock of Holy Writ, bids and enables the believer in British-Israel Truth to go forward with unfaltering step and high courage to meet whatever may betide in the New Year. Down the long corridors of time there comes the command to those in far-away lands, and to those at home, "Be strong all ye people of the land, saith the Lord, and work; for I am with you, saith the Lord of Hosts." And then follows the gracious promise of help and safety—"According to the word that I covenanted with you when ye came out of Egypt, so my spirit remaineth among you: fear ye not." That the forces of evil will increase their activity during the coming year is all too certain. What are we doing about it? One way at least is open to all—join up with the British-Israel-World Federation, support its work, and thus enhance its power in the preaching of the Gospel of the Kingdom. And, nationally, while we inherit the promise that the God of Israel "Will do better unto you than at your beginnings: and ye shall know that I am the Lord," let us earnestly pray for speedy fulfilment of the prophecy "I will yet for this be enquired of by the House of Israel to do it for them." We look for a great national awakening; may it come soon; for "the night is far spent, the day is at hand."

From MR. J. A. FORD (Manchester).

AS we enter 1928 we in the North send hearty greetings in the Lord to our well-beloved Leaders at Buckingham Gate; and our fraternal salutations to all readers of THE MESSAGE.

The year to which we have now come is marked by Pyramid students as opening up a dark period of tribulation; and so we tread softly and with trembling expectancy as we enter it. It is a matter of thankfulness and real comfort that at such a critical time we have the sane and sagacious guidance of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE at our elbow. Our guides are free alike from timidity and extravagance; they have the confident boldness of true leaders sure of their ground, and the unflurried steadiness of men who have real faith in God.

We are thankful beyond measure for the clearness and the definiteness with which our organ preaches the twin Gospels: the Gospel of the Kingdom, and the Gospel of Salvation from sin—known and loved down the years as the "Old, Old Story of Jesus and His Love." In such difficult and restless days as these, when perplexed and despairing men of undoubted sincerity are turning to Rome or Moscow or Geneva for the solution of their problems, our splendid British-Israel mentor has kept a cool head and an unruffled brow. Salvation will not be found in Continental religions or fantastic economic systems or in humanly-devised Leagues, but in the Israel of God. The Gospel for the whole world is the Gospel of the Kingdom—the Gospel for the masses and the Gospel for the classes—the Gospel for the masters and the Gospel for the men.

We wish our paper and its great Editors the abounding blessing of God, and a year of growing influence and power.

From COL. A. H. B. HUME.

THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER supplies in a remarkable way one of the great needs of the day.

We see doubts and suspicions, jealousies and disputes, distress and fear everywhere in private and public life. These are prominent in families and communities, villages and towns, countries and states.

The Editorials, articles and letters of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER show a marked contrast in that the writers possess a certainty of their faith, an agreement on all main issues, a simplicity, clearness and sympathy which produce intense interest.

This tends to unite all in one great kindly brotherhood.

The explanation, if needed, is that the foundation of the Federation and of its publications is the Word of God, as expressed in the Old and New Testaments.

I give gladly my gratitude to all the wonderful workers of the B.-I. W.F. I also send greetings to them and to fellow-readers of the journal, while joining, throughout another year, in the extension of our benefits to others.

WEEK BY WEEK.

BY A. R. H.

Wanted: A Leader. This is the cry of ENGLAND and of the WORLD. So a distinguished philosopher and student of politics would have us believe, in a PRESS article written under some such title.

"'It is the part of a leader to lead'" claims the writer. "A platitude of platitudes and worthy of Tupper? Not so; in these days a paradox and likely to remain so. For now, what we expect, and therefore what we get, from our leaders is anything but leadership.

"Our leaders are proud of their open mind and their suspended judgment. But I submit that it is the part of the leader to believe in the authenticity of his mission. He must hold strongly the opinion that all things are possible to the courageous, that the rightful cause must triumph, and that his cause is the rightful cause.

"The CANAAN to which he would lead us and which he has never seen must be as real to him as this EGYPT of ours with its taskmasters, its plagues, and its fleshpots is to us. If the leader doubt shall I have faith? If I have no faith shall I leave this known security for the perils of the unknown? But our leaders seem to regard the existence of as an open question, and a matter of dilettante speculation.

"I myself prefer to see my leader in the front of the host and not to hear him brawling encouragement from the rear or indistinguishable in the centre of the column. I like to see him in front, but not too far in front.

"To us, marching, the Promised Land seems very far, the ways are hard and blind, the desert is thirsty. . . . I need, therefore, the physical presence of my leader. I need the encouragement of his voice and figure no less than the spiritual communication of faith with faith. Let my leader be a great man, indeed, but still a man, a creature of the same clay and of like passions,[1] marching therefore with us and enduring the like hardships.

"How shall we know the way if we have no leader in the van? Columns of fire and columns of smoke? Our leaders think that ambiguous and hesitating commands are agreeable to the host. But this is not so. Before the host marched, then was the time for counsel and debate and compromise. . . . . Now, when the Amalekites are gathering in dense masses on our left flank, now is not the time for councils of war.

"Let us hear the crisp word of command which deploys the column of march into order of battle and exacts obedience because it claims it. A true leader in this Europe of ours, nay, in this England of ours, might do much. But he is not found. Shall we again find a true leader?"

Lord Beaverbrook thinks we shall! Writing[2] some months later he says:—"For my own part, I believe that there will yet be another in the ENGLAND of our time—that our youth will listen to the fiery words of a new WESLEY, and that some coming KNOX will expound a religious gospel in authoritative terms. The call and the need are there. Are we going to fail for lack of men? I do not think so . . ."

Meanwhile Dr. Barnes claims that the revival is already on the way. "ENGLAND seems to be shaping anew its religious convictions," he says.[3] "The work is being done less by professional ecclesiastics than by a few scholars. They combine with men of science, social reformers, and serious journalists, to give us a new understanding of the teaching of Jesus.

"The outcome of this movement will be of vital importance; and I see in it nothing of which we need be afraid.

"The SPIRIT of GOD is not confined to ancient institutions, and the prophet whom GOD inspires has usually been a layman and not a priest. Moreover men can do great things under the stimulus of a religion which they forge for themselves."

The conclusion of Sir Martin Conway's recent speech[4] also deserves to be recorded. As spokesman for the "thoughtful people" of our day, he says:—"We are waiting for someone who will not overthrow the old revelation, who will not disestablish the old faith, but will carry us on into a wider field and will give us a new vision of the unknown, of the eternal . . . .

"We want a new spirit,[5] a wider revelation. We are waiting for the man who shall come with his lips touched with the live flame from the Altar of GOD. He will bring, not a new Prayer Book, but a new revelation from Heaven of the meaning of the eternal verities, and when he comes we shall receive him gladly.

"As it is, our ordained shepherds know not where are the pastures[7], and so 'the hungry sheep look up and are not fed.'"

A wonderful testimony this; one that renews our faith in the existence of a man,[8] not yet universally acclaimed, who, in "the spirit and power of Elias," shall bring the Nation back to God and the Divine Law, preparatory to the coming of the King of the Kingdom of Heaven to reign over us.

"A new RELIGIOUS REVIVAL, a new JURISPRUDENCE, a new PHILOSOPHY, another GOLDEN AGE of ART and LITERATURE, new SOCIAL and ECONOMIC structures—there is room for all these. But their creators are not at present in evidence." Thus testifies the Daily Mail!

And hardly, had he consciously tried so to do, could the Editor have put the full implications of the GOSPEL of the KINGDOM "in a nutshell," better! Repentance[9], Conversion,[10] the restoration[11] of the DIVINE LAW in ISRAEL; these are the fundamentals of the KINGDOM GOSPEL. As for PHILOSOPHY; "Israel . . .", or as Benedetto Croce might just as truly put it:—Brith-ish Israel . . . "is the parent of the only true history, the history which is also philosophy, which sees the past alive in the present and pressing on toward a goal and consummation in the future." There's a new philosophy for you!

And as for new social and economic structures[12]; these are an essential part of Kingdom ambitions, development, and destiny. Once the people are become reconciled to GOD; once the ideal of the KINGDOM has been firmly planted in their hearts; once, with the return to the DIVINE CONSTITUTION, the outward environment of the people becomes conformed to a Kingdom of Heaven indeed (as well as in name and ideal only); then another Golden Age of Art and Literature will dawn as certainly Night precedes the Day.

There is no Golden Age of Art to-day because there is no vision. There is no Golden Age of Literature to-day because there is no inspiration.

But with the dawning of

what a transformation there will be! One's mind faints and swoons with the contemplation of the possibilities this glorious reality presents to all creators in the realm of Art.

LITERATURE, IDEALISM[12] and REALITY, all are made "one" in the vision of the KINGDOM of GOD upon earth.

Depend upon it; nothing is too good to be true! Human idealism falls far short of reality. And when the Kingdom comes in reality its glory and beauty will far outshine the highest imaginings we have ever conceived regarding it. Our highest ideals will be seen to have been nothing compared with the actual truth.

ADDRESSES AT THE CHURCH HOUSE, WESTMINSTER:

BY THE REV. CHARLES W. COOPER, F.G.S.

I FEEL it to be a very great pleasure and privilege to stand on this platform to-night. About the age of fifteen I was a Sunday School teacher. Even then I was of an enquiring mind. At the age of twenty-one I was a worker in the Church of St. George the Martyr, Southwark. I also spent four years at St. John's Hall, Highbury. After four years there I was ordained, and for over thirty years I have been studying and teaching what may be called the orthodox truth. From time to time friends used to send me literature about the British-Israel Truth. I was more or less interested in it, and I had a special Bible for the purpose and certain manuscript books, but I had my answers ready, and was not specially concerned about this Truth till about three years ago, when I was invited to Headquarters, 6, Buckingham Gate, and I went to the gathering there of clergy, and I was so profoundly impressed with the sincerity and the consistent way in which the Bible message was dealt with that I thought to myself—quite apart from the study of British-Israel Truth—here are people I can learn something from, and I must attend. This led on to a close study of the subject, and to-day I stand here as one who is convinced that this is God's Truth—namely, that of British-Israel. Now I consider myself as qualified to judge, as I have been speaking and preaching for over thirty years. I know the orthodox truth. I have spoken for the Advent Testimony Movement. I have spoken on the London Prophetical Society platform. I know their position, and I know now the position of British-Israel, and whatever else I stand for, I do stand for the simple, honest truth. If anyone could show me that I had misinterpreted the Word of God, I was willing to listen, and to consider it; and that is still my position to-day.

Now I happen to have the privilege of being vicar of a rather large Church, a Bible-loving Church and congregation, and I am conscious that when speaking upon this subject I am met with prejudice—people have been steeped in a certain line of teaching, and they find it extremely difficult to give a willing ear and to consider what we here believe to be the fundamental Truth about God's Word. Some time ago I called my Church Council together, and explained to them that I did not wish to go behind their backs and begin preaching certain truths which were new to the people, which had not been taught in the past hundred years—for we keep our centenary next year. I told them that previously I had known only one side of the truth, but that now, having closely studied it from the Word of God, I was able to say definitely that I stood for British-Israel Truth. I knew I could not ask them to accept it all at once; it was too big a question. All I asked of them was that they should keep an unprejudiced mind, and listen as I gave my Bible studies. I am holding those Bible studies every Thursday; and I do challenge the Bible-loving Christians to show me where I am inconsistent, and that I am stretching the meaning of God's Word. I stand for the full value of God's Word. We are just trusting for God's blessing.

If you would have some knowledge of this wonderful Truth, keep some definite point clear in your mind. I take a text like that in St. Matthew xxi, 43: "The Kingdom of God shall be taken from you (Our Lord is speaking to the Jews) and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." Now I challenge my people. I say, that cannot mean the Church; it must mean the nation. Then who are the nation? I say to my fellow-clergy. Take your own commentary. It is part of the parable taken from Isaiah v. It is perfectly clear who are in that vineyard. It says there definitely—Judah and Israel. We know that Judah forfeited his inheritance of the vineyard, and that Israel is in possession. Now I take a simple truth like that, and I force it home, and ask for an explanation. I would suggest to you that if you have a vicar or minister who will not accept the truth, get a few questions like that together, and ask him to answer them. I put that same question to a clergyman only last week, and I said to him, "Will you explain that verse to me?" and he said, "Well, I was taught to believe that it meant the Church." "Does it say so?" I asked. "Well, no, it does not." And I said, "What right have you to go on preaching what you know the Word of God does not say?" The last time I met him at a meeting; he said "I am an enquirer."

I want to say that as far as I myself am concerned this Truth has made my Bible far more precious than ever it was before. I see the contrast between my message now and my message in the past. God chose Abraham for Himself, and He made a solemn covenant with him, which the Epistle to the Hebrews explains that God swore by His own honour He would ever fulfil. God made those promises to His people. In due time Jesus Christ came to bring salvation to the world; and the Jews crucified Him. But we Christians say, "Oh, well, never mind. Jesus Christ is coming as King, and then every knee shall bow. When this world is all over, and when this world is defeated, Christ will come in His glory." I say that is a miserable message. To-day I see that God made His covenants with Abraham, and He has kept every one of them all down the ages. Men have fallen away. Israel sinned, but God's mercy overruled all these things. And now I see how wonderfully God's plan is being fulfilled in this nation. May we as a nation realise God's truth, and so bring glory to His Name.

BY THE REV. J. MOUNTAIN, D.D.

I FEEL it a great honour and a great responsibility to address this large and influential audience on the subject which has been given me. I am to speak to you on this subject: "British-Israel—Is it of God?"

Digitized by Google

I must, first of all, tell you how I was led to believe in British-Israel. It is exactly fifty-three years ago this month since I first heard of it. I was then thirty-two years of age—quite a young man; but I am bound to say that the literature which I read produced a deep impression upon my mind. If I had had someone like our President, or Mr. Herbert Garrison at hand at that time to guide me I daresay I might have become an Israelite fifty-three years ago. But instead of that, I came across two pamphlets, one by the Rev. John Wilkinson, and the other by Pastor Frank White, gentlemen whom I knew and whom I esteemed and honoured as godly men and devoted ministers of the Gospel. I read their pamphlets against British-Israel, and, I am sorry to say, that they drove me back. Well, it pleased God about a year after, under the influence of the Moody and Sankey Revival, to call me out as an evangelist along with Mr. Aitken in the Church of England. Well, I travelled up and down the country for eight years, and wherever I went I met with people who asked me the question, "What do you think of the Ten Tribes?" For eight years I travelled throughout England; I visited also Scotland and Ireland and Wales, and went as far as the Shetland Isles. Then I was led to go round the world for a seven years' tour. Still I was met by the same question, "What do you think of the Ten Tribes?" When I was in Tasmania and Queensland and New South Wales and Victoria and South Australia, and also in New Zealand. When I went to San Francisco, it was the same thing, "Well, what do you think of the Ten Tribes?" Well, I cannot say that I grew in appreciation of the Ten Tribes, and I can assure you of one thing—and I must be honest—I did not want to believe in them. It is very humiliating to make a public confession like that. But a man with a tender nervous organisation like mine naturally chooses quietude and serenity and peace, and I did not want to accept anything which would interfere with my ministry. And so I kept putting it off, and putting it off. However, at the last Mission that I conducted in New Zealand, I was staying with a magistrate, a man who was the very image of the great Lord Shaftesbury. I never saw two men so much alike. But the whole of his library was full of books on British-Israel. And when we got into the house, and I looked at the library, my good wife said, "Well, James, we have got among some British-Israelites at last." And so it was. And I had many an address during the fortnight from him; he was a gentleman and a Christian, and he knew exactly how to deal with me. When I left for San Francisco he put into my hands a book which I shall always esteem highly, Bishop Titcomb's "Anglo-Israel Post Bag." I read that book on the way. I read it as I was crossing from America to England, and when I landed in England I can honestly say I respected British-Israel Truth because of the scholarly, calm, reasonable, Biblical standard of this Bishop. Six weeks after I returned to this country I became minister of a fine church in Tunbridge Wells, and I thought to myself, I have got settled down now, and I shall not be troubled any more about this British-Israel Truth. I had not been there more than a week or two when I received a letter from a lady saying, "I am an invalid, but I have a pew in your church for my three servants. I cannot attend the church myself, but will you give me the pleasure of seeing you to tea next Wednesday." Of course I wrote accepting the invitation. I visited this invalid lady, and found her one of the handsomest women I have ever seen in my life. She was an invalid, although there were no signs of the invalid about her. There were half-a-dozen other ladies in the drawing-room with her, and she gave me a hearty welcome. I was just putting a cup of tea to my lips when she said, "Oh, Mr. Mountain, what do you think of the Ten Tribes?" I said, "I really cannot tell you what I think of the Ten Tribes, but it is quite evident that the Ten Tribes think a great d al of me, for they follow me wherever I go." She asked me if I would accept a book, Dr. Aldersmith's "Fulness of Nations." I read that book, and I thank God for what that book did for me. When I had carefully studied and read that book, I wrote to the invalid lady, and said, "Now I am quite convinced." And from that day to this, now more than thirty years ago, I have never hesitated in my adherence and my belief and my advocacy of this great and important work. It has led me to love the Bible. It has given me a fuller understanding of the Bible. It has strengthened my faith; and though it has caused me many a sneer, and closed many a door, and lost me many a golden sovereign and Treasury note, never have I regretted for one moment that I took my stand for this great Truth. Not only do I think it is of God, but I am CONVINCED of it; I believe it with all my heart.

I am going to tell you why. Because, first of all, it is true to the Bible. The Bible is our great authority, and from Genesis to Revelation we believe it to be true. There was a lady in Edinburgh who went to study in Germany, as I did myself many years ago. When she came back after her stay there, she began to circulate some of the German theology in Edinburgh. Her minister called to see her and found she was very unsound in the faith. So he said to her, "There is a passage of Scripture, if I could only just remember it, that would answer your difficulties. When I go home I will find the text, and I will come again." In a few days he called, and he gave her the text, and she replied, "Oh. that is just where Paul and I differ." We do not place Paul there and British-Israel there. What Paul says we believe. What the Bible says we accept.

Again, the British-Israel Truth is true to the claims of the Lord Jesus Christ and His teaching. You remember when Nicodemus came to Him by night, and with great respect bowed to Him, and said, "Rabbi, we know Thou art a Teacher come from God." You remember the answer of Christ, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born again he cannot see the Kingdom of God." The religion that we believe in is the religion of the Bible, and while we believe that British-Israel is a very important thing, yet our great aim is to bring people to the Saviour's feet. And no man can enter the Kingdom of God without the new birth, the new birth of the Holy Spirit.

Again, British-Israel makes a fair interpretation of the Bible. We do not spiritualise the prophecies. We do not give all the blessings to the Church and all the curses to the Jews. That is the general method to-day, you know. The fact is the early fathers did not know what to do with all these great promises to Israel, and so they applied them all to the Church, and so the error has gone down age after age. Did you ever hear what the great Bishop Ryle said about that form of interpretation? He said, "We have made a great mistake, and it is time we confessed it. We have been spiritualising the prophecies, and instead of believing that Judah means Judah, and Israel means Israel, we have been imputing them to the Church." We firmly believe that we represent the Ten Tribes.

I would just like to say in conclusion that when I look at the promises in the Bible, when I look at the British Empire, I see that they fit each other, like a lock and key, and I am as convinced of the Truth of this British-Israel Movement as I am of any of the great fundamental doctrines of the Bible. Are you aware of the greatness of the Empire to which you and I belong? We are the inheritors of the promises made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Oh, that we could get our nation upon its knees before God! Oh, that we could lead our people to repent of their sins, and to turn back again to the God of their fathers! Then we could say with even more pleasure than we do to-day, "Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto Thy Name be glory, and unto Thy Name give praise."

BY THE REV. HECTOR MACTURK, M.A.

MY experience goes back, I am thankful to say, to my boyhood when I was a choirboy in Lincoln Cathedral. I had the inestimable benefit of having as my choirmaster and teacher, Dr. Young, "an Israelite indeed in whom was no guile"; from every point of view an extremely fine man. And, going back some fifty years, he taught this Truth, and I suppose, as a boy, I became, as it were, spiritually inoculated with this great Truth; but I did not realise it fully until after I was ordained. In the first years of my life as a clergyman I was just one of the orthodox curates, teaching the same thing, Sunday after Sunday, with the Sacrament of the altar, and so forth, until people began to get weary of the monotony of my teaching. And then, when in my second curacy, the master of the Church of England School handed to me two copies of "The Covenant People," a periodical which was published before THE NATIONAL MESSAGE came out. I read them, and I became thoroughly interested, and afterwards thoroughly instructed along those lines. It was my privilege to preach my first British-Israel sermon on the Sunday that our soldiers came back from the South African War. My vicar, Canon Bullock, was away that Sunday, and it fell to my lot to preach the sermon, and I preached on the text, "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn. This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord." One of the members of the congregation was kind enough to congratulate me afterwards. That was my first British-Israel sermon. Ever since then, first as a curate, and then as a vicar of a Fen parish, and now of another in the country, I have had many opportunities of preaching about this great Truth. During the last thirty or forty years, in nearly all the churches in South Lancashire, I have never failed to preach this great Gospel of the Kingdom, according to the command of Our Blessed Lord and Saviour. "This Gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached unto all nations, and then shall the end come." I am always ready to point out that the end means, not the end of the world, but the end of the age. "Lo, I am with you always, day by day, even unto the consummation, the completed end of the age." We are expecting Him in the very near future, and are preparing to welcome Him and to glorify Him. In the meanwhile we do want our people and our brother clergy to know the meaning of this Gospel of the Kingdom. We want to realise it for ourselves. We want to take the Word of God as it stands, and to come to it with all simplicity of mind, as we pray in the Church of England Service, morning and evening, "Oh God, make clean our hearts within us, and take not Thy Holy Spirit from us. Endue Thy ministers with righteousness. Make Thy chosen people joyful."

NOTES AND QUOTATIONS IN RELATION TO BRITAIN-ISRAEL.

BY PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc., &c.

[The ollowing articles should be read with the thought in mind that they are not intended as a glorification of the Empire, nor of the Anglo-Saxon people, but as a recognition that Jehovah, the God and King of Israel, has in the Celto-Saxon people the basis of His Kingdom on earth. The Anglo-Saxon people have been trained for ages to be the Administrators of that Kingdom, and to carry its benefits, its liberty and its peace to all mankind.]

No. 12.

THE following Afghan chief, one of that most remarkable Israel nation, makes a statement far beyond the natural views of an ordinary Oriental.

Golab Shah, an Afghan chief, says: "The destiny of the British race and nation is to be a glorious one. The English will rule the world, because no other nation will prevail against her people. They have the thing of priceless value—Jacob's Pillar—as a Coronation Stone, and that makes their destiny great."

The London daily Times says: "Britain is the greatest and noblest Empire that Providence has permitted to exist on the face of the earth, and is still growing, still developing, still moving, and working towards an unborn form and majesty."

The famous writer, C. F. Cooper, says: "If we believe that there is a Power above in Whose hands are the destinies of the nations, we are warranted in thinking that England's power and England's destiny have been specially under the controlling influence which regulates the kingdoms of the world, ordering their prosperity and decline according to His own sovereign schemes of mercy and judgment. No mere human causes will suffice to explain this problem in the history of nations—that England has become what she is to-day."

We shall now hear from Renan: "Israel will ultimately triumph; Israel will only be vanquished if military force once more controls the world, re-establishes serfdom, forced labour and feudalism. This is hardly probable. After centuries of strife, kept up by national rivalry, mankind will be peacefully organised. With very few exceptions, every living being will be glad he was born. The Hebrew programme will be accomplished; justice will really reign over the world."

Dr. Geffcken speaks of the British Empire and "company of nations" as a "political creation unparalleled in the world's history."

Montesquieu, in his "Spirit of Laws," says of the English: "They know better than any other people on earth how to value at the same time these three great advantages—religion, commerce, and liberty."

Mr. Bhaonaggree, an Indian gentleman, says of the English people: "The confidence of the Indian peoples in your power, and in the benevolent motives of your administration, by which they are protected alike against external violence, and internal tyranny, and secured a peace and prosperity never before enjoyed by them at any period of their previous history, are the pillars on which the glorious edifice of the British Empire in India was first founded, and now rests as on a rock of everlasting adamant."

The Hon. Justice Field, of the United States, while in Canada, said: "Wherever England plants her foot, she at once establishes order; she makes laws; she protects life and property. And those who place themselves under that flag stay under it, assured that they can sit under their own vine and fig-tree. That is the secret of the British Empire—that she stands for order, for the sacredness of human life, for the protection of every interest, however humble. You (in Canada) have a great country to the north of us. I am filled with wonder; you are part of a mighty Empire.

"When I think of Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, India, and this great country to the north of us, I am filled with wonder. Justice and righteousness will make it last."

D'Aubigne, the historian of the Reformation, says: "England scarcely seemed to promise what she performed. Mistress of the ocean, and present at once in all quarters of the globe, she with the nations that were to spring from her, was one day to be the hand of God in shedding the seeds of life over the remotest islands and the largest continents."

The New York Tribune says: "The United Kingdom has increased from 16,000,000 to 37,000,000, or as much as the total growth of France, making the actual British increase the enormous total of 32,600,000. These figures eloquently and convincingly explain the incomparable pre-eminence of Great Britain as a colonising power and establishes her rank far above all competitors as a mother of nations."

THE SHIELD AND REWARD.—I.

By "EYNSFORD."

"AFTER these things the word of the Lord came unto Abram in a vision, saying, Fear not, Abram: I am thy shield, and thy exceeding great reward." (Gen. xv, 1.)

Such were the gracious words spoken by the Living God to a human being: a message fraught with strength and heart rest. What courage and comfort they must have inspired in the breast of the patriarch; what unspeakable peace must they have produced.

But why did God speak to Abraham thus and at such a time? These were not mere generally benevolent words. They were uttered at a special time, to meet a special need and to accomplish a special purpose. They met the need of a heart full of fear. Why did God speak to Abraham about a "shield" and a "reward"? There seems at first sight no call for either.

A shield is for protection in danger, and unless Abraham had been in special need of such protection the promise might have been superfluous. To all appearance things were very well with him just then.

The shield and the reward were not promised to him in any general or vague sense, but to meet a definite need and to confer Divine approval upon a trusting heart. The verse begins with the words, "After these things," and it is in the events to which they refer that we find the cause for the very gracious promise.

The preceding chapter, Gen. xiv, tells of the campaign of the Four Kings of the Two Rivers, and of their final great fight with the Five Kings of the Plain. The latter were utterly defeated, and the victors turned homewards with numerous captives and laden with immense booty. Among the captives were Lot and his family.

News of this disaster was brought to Abraham, who was then living in the plain of Mamre. He had no doubts as to his line of action. He did not argue that since Lot had chosen Sodom he must abide the consequences of his choice, or that having made his bed he must lie in it. Abraham was ever characterised by a great-hearted chivalry. Without hesitation he mobilised his servants, and induced his three friends, Mamre, Aner and Eshcol, to join him in a rescue party. It was a formidable undertaking, against fearful odds. A mere handful was about to attack the combined forces of the Four Kings, who had just terminated a successful campaign by a brilliant and decisive action.

The small band of pursuers easily came up with the great army, now hampered with much spoil and numerous captives. Military discipline was evidently entirely wanting in the victors' encampment. There seemed no call for caution or watchfulness, for they knew of no enemy who could attack them, and so felt at liberty to indulge in feasting and revelry.

In the darkness of night, Abraham, having divided his small forces, fell upon the unsuspecting host at several points, utterly routing them. Abraham's victory was complete; every captive was delivered, and all the spoils of war were recovered. It was a brilliant achievement.

The feelings of the Four Kings can well be imagined when they realised what an insignificant force had turned their many successes into one ignominious defeat.

Abraham's thoughts after his victory could not have been purely triumphant. He was beginning to realise the necessary consequences of his action. His very victory was pregnant with dread consequences; it clamoured for swift vengeance from the defeated kings. They could hardly endure such indignity or submit without a blow. How easy would it have been to muster their scattered forces or even to organise a new expedition against Abraham and his friends to destroy them. Abraham's position was not an enviable one; he was in imminent danger, and there was much ground for fear. Who would stand by him? Who would protect? His heart was full of misgiving.

It was in this dark hour that God drew near and said: "Fear not, Abram: I am thy shield." Supreme was the comfort, and the man was no more afraid. The Four Kings never retaliated; they quietly endured defeat, shame and loss! Here is one of the unsolved mysteries of military history. Our verse is the only valid solution. The great invisible "Shield" warded them off; Abraham was under the protection of the Almighty.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—Will you kindly explain to me the difference between the words "everlasting" and "eternal"?—ENQUIRER.

ANSWER.—There is undoubtedly a very great difference between the actual meaning of the above words. It is far better to use the word "eternal" consistently as the Revised Version does, as it connotes a much fuller and richer meaning, especially in a spiritual sense. The Authorised Version sometimes uses the one, and sometimes the other word, when the original is exactly the same in either case (cf. John iii, 15, 16).

But when we come to ascertain the original and root meaning of the word or idea comprehended in the Hebrew or the Greek, it is not quite so easy. It does not necessarily mean "everlasting" in the sense of "living for ever and ever," although that meaning is probably—or most certainly—embodied in Christian thought.

When Psalm xxiii, 6, says "And I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever," the Hebrew of the last two words means literally "for length of days." The actual length of "days" is undefined. From some of the strong expressions used in the Old Testament it may be surmised that the Hebrews believed that in death existence absolutely came to an end; compare, e.g., "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts (purposes) perish" (Psalm cxlvi, 4); "O spare me, that I may recover strength, before I go hence, and be no more" (Psalm xxxix, 13); "but man lieth down, and riseth not; till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep" (Job xiv, 7–12, cf. vii, 21). But in all probability these are only the strong expressions of despondency and regret over a life mournfully soon ended, and that never returns to be lived on this earth again. But the conception of Sheol is sufficient answer to the apparent doctrine which such quotations as the latter teach. Sheol is the opposite sphere of light and life; it is "the lowest hell," "Sheol beneath" (R.V. margin), the region of darkness (Psalm lxxxvi, 13), "a land of darkness as darkness itself, without any order, and where the light is as darkness" (Job x, 22). It is not to be identified with the grave, although the grave is often regarded as the mouth of it; while sometimes it is represented as a vast burying-place (Isa. xiv, 11; Ezek. xxxii, 23).

Hence, as death consists in the withdrawal by God of the spirit of life, the source of energy and vital power, the personalities in Sheol are feeble and flaccid. They are "shades" (Job xxvi, 5; Isa. xiv, 9). Their abode is called "silence" (Ps. xciv, 17); "the Land of forgetfulness" (Ps. lxxxviii, 12); "the living know that they must die, the dead know not anything" (Eccles. ix, 5); "his sons come to honour, and he knoweth it not; and they are brought low, but he perceiveth it not of them" (Job xiv, 21).

For the abstract term "eternity" there is no word either in Old Testament Hebrew, or in New Testament Greek. Four times, however, the word occurs in the A.V., and thrice in the N.T. Compare (1) 1 Sam. xv, 29 (A.V. margin); (2) Isa. lvii, 15, which really means "that dwelleth for ever," i.e., Who is not subject to change; (3) Jer. x, 10 (A.V. margin), meaning a King who is always reigning; (4) Mic. v, 2 (A.V. margin), meaning "from ancient days" (as in the R.V.); (5) Isa. ix, 6, "Father of eternity" (R.V. margin), meaning "one who cares for His people perpetually like a father (cf. Isa. xxii, 21); (6) Eccles. iii, 11. R.V. has "eternity in their heart," A.V. has "earth"—Hebrew probably means "antiquity" or "indefinite length of time."

It would be a very difficult thing indeed to ascertain the exact meaning of the Old Testament doctrine of eschatology had we never possessed or read the New Testament. Even the learned Jews of the Christian era have had their interpretations and thoughts coloured by Christianity and the Life of Christ. But the New Testament has fulfilled the Old Testament, and New Testament eschatology completes that of the Old Testament.

Yet in the New Testament it is doubtful if the word "everlasting" correctly translates the Greek αἰώνιος. "Eternal" is much better. The difference between the two ideas is best seen by comparing a sphere or ball with a hoop or wheel. The ball can roll in any and every direction on a plane surface, say, north, south, east or west. But the hoop will only go in the one direction of its circumference; it cannot roll or move sideways as can a sphere or a ball. Hence the ball has more latitude of movement, and connotes more ideas (directions of movement). So it is with the word "eternal." It means ever so much more than "everlasting" or "living for ever." "Everlasting" is like the hoop which can only roll or move forward ad infinitum; but "eternal life" embodies not only life forward (i.e., for ever), but life in every direction, and possesses "length, breadth, depth and height" (Eph. iii, 18). It embodies knowledge of Christ (John xvii, 3), the fulness of life, and "life more abundantly" (John x, 10). Hence St. John is the great exponent in his Gospel and Epistles of the true teaching of the word "eternal." It connotes also love and light, without which there is neither true life nor "life eternal." "Eternal life" therefore centres in and around the timeless Cross of Christ. If "everlasting" means "to the end of time," "eternal" means "timeless" and all that belongs or appertains to the Life of Christ indwelling heaven above and the Christian heart within.

"The great lesson to be drawn from the fact that Anglo-Saxon underlies, like original granite, all the strata of the English language, is, that to write in it is to write for the hearts of the people. It is their mother-tongue, strong, sinewy, and expressive; and they cling to it with a fondness which no change of usage can uproot, and no caprice of fashion can destroy. Just compare in point of force and significance, a "sanguinary action," with a "bloody deed"; "eternal felicity," with "everlasting happiness," and "the exemplar of the celestials," in the Rhemish version of the Scriptures, with "the pattern of things in the heavens," in our own; and you will feel at once how the language is emasculated by such attempted equivalents."—FRASER.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

THE Rev. Joseph Gay was the speaker at the meeting at Headquarters on Wednesday of last week. On the following day the Secretary-General's Round Table Conference took place. A large number partook of tea, after which the President—Major Knowles; Rev. Pascoe Goard—Deputy President; Mr. John Leech, K.C.—Commissioner-General; The Rev. Dr. Mountain—a Life Member; Mrs. Beck, Mrs. Zoë Bell, Dr. Horace Sworder, Captain Morrell, Miss Alexander, Mr. E. Pritchard, Mr. Barrow, Mr. Boon and others gave short addresses and contributed to the discussion of matters connected with the further promotion of the B.-I. Cause. Some remarkable testimonies were given which made a deep impression.

Two very successful meetings were held in the Central Hall, Westminster, on January 27th. The President presided in the afternoon, and the Secretary-General in the evening. Valuable addresses were delivered by the Rev. Pascoe Goard, the Rev. W. H. Stuart-Fox, M.A., Mr. John Leech, M.A., K.C., Mr. Howard Rand, LL.B., and Mr. J. J. Morey.

We are glad to report that new subscribers to this journal are being enrolled in great numbers, and that the response to our appeal for the active and generous co-operation of our readers in this matter is most encouraging; in fact, the resources of the Publishing Company staff are being heavily taxed. We ask for patience if answers to correspondence are somewhat delayed. There is great activity, too, in the Book department. One order alone with a cheque for £100 worth of books and journals came from Hong Kong.

Mr. E. W. Nock writes:—"The three days special 'Gospel of the Kingdom' mission at Barking was a great success. We feel that prayer has been answered in a marked degree. The Rev. Pascoe Goard gave three most inspiring addresses on 'The Triumphant Fulfilment of Prophecy in the Celto-Saxon Race,' 'The Present World Crisis in the light of Prophecy,' and 'The Great Day of God Almighty.' Over 1,500 people attended and keen interest was evinced. Many questions were answered. On the last evening all present stood and pledged their faith in and service to Our Lord and coming King. Said one man:—'Would that all the clergy preached this wonderful Truth; what a difference it would make in our country.'

"We had the great pleasure of welcoming Mr. Herbert Garrison—the Secretary-General; Colonel Brazier-Creagh, and Mr. Howard Rand one evening. Mr. Garrison gave a convincing account of the great work carried on at Headquarters and throughout the country. He made a strong appeal for increased circulation of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER. We feel confident of much blessing resulting from these meetings."

The first public meeting organised by the newly-formed Heston, Hounslow and Isleworth Branch was held at the Council House, Hounslow, on January 23rd, and in spite of unfavourable weather there was a large audience. The special speaker was the Rev. Joseph Gay, A.T.S., who completely held the attention of all present for 90 minutes. J. Lynwood Palmer, Esq., a Life-Member of the Federation and President of the Branch, was in the chair, and he was supported by well-known residents. The next public meeting is to take place on February 23rd, at 8 p.m., when Mr. Gay will give another address.

B.-I. sermons will be preached to-morrow at St. Saviour's Church, Hanley Road, Crouch Hill, N., by the Vicar, the Rev. W. H. Stuart-Fox, M.A. Services at 11 and 6.30. 'Bus 110, 111, 154 from Finsbury Park Station.

The Rev. Pascoe Goard addressed two excellent audiences at Manchester and Liverpool on January 23rd and 24th respectively. Reports to hand show that much good was done by the powerful impression made.

On January 5th Mr. G. R. Gair gave an address on "Heraldry" to a deeply interested audience at the newly-formed Bridlington Branch, and on the 19th Mr. Wm. Whitton, of Sheffield, spoke on "Britain in the Bible" to another most appreciative audience. It is mainly owing to the help and advice of Mr. Whitton that this Branch has been formed. The President is Mrs. Bradley Brown; Vice-Presidents, Miss E. Reed and Mr. J. A. Gawthorp; and Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. F. Shepley.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

[It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.]

THE LAW OF THE LORD, OR THE COMMON LAW.—V.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

Now we turn to the forty years of national training in the Law in the wilderness. We have before us the spectacle of a nation, subject to the bondage of Egypt and to enforced labour in the brick kilns there. We see that nation suddenly delivered miraculously from the power of Imperial Egypt; and rescued from Egypt's pursuing army. We see them passing dry-shod through the Red Sea, and coming to Mount Sinai in the desert, after three months of such experience as never nation had before.

At the end of those three months, the nation was assembled in solemn convention at Sinai, to meet with Jehovah their God. We hear the proclamation of the destiny of Israel thenceforth to be the Kingdom of God on earth; His Kingdom of Priests; and to be an holy nation.

We read with ever-increasing wonder the graphic description of the coming of Jehovah, the God and King of Israel, heralded with the Trump of God. We mark the natural phenomena which accompanied His arrival, self manifestation, and establishment for ever in Israel; and we see that the very same trumpet, and the very same phenomena, are destined to herald the coming again of Our Lord Jesus Christ to reign in Israel, and through Israel over all the earth. We consider the tremendous significance of the permanence of the Presence of Jehovah in Israel His nation, which nothing can ever disturb.

We have read the proclamation of the Commandments, restated, indeed, but newly heard by the new nation.

And now we pass to a consideration of the Divine task of instructing Israel in the Law, of setting up the machinery for the administration of the Law; and of the organisation of the activities of Israel in the prosecution of the business of life, in accordance with the Law. The forty years which Israel thus spent with God in the wilderness were the first four decades of the life of the Israel-British people. The modern principles, ideals and activities of Britain can never be understood unless we bear in mind that Modern Israel, her principles of action, and her ideals, are the continuance of all those things first established in Ancient Israel. The organisation of Israel at Sinai was the original organisation of Israel-Britain, and of the nations which have sprung from her loins. The Common Law then put into force in Israel-Britain is the Common Law of the Celto-Saxon nations at this time.

So then, in thought, we go back to the time when "all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea;

And were all baptised unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea;

And did all eat the same spiritual meat;

And did all drink the same spiritual drink: for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them; and that Rock was Christ."—1 Cor. x, 1-5.

Let us see that nation, our fathers, shut up alone with God for forty years in the wilderness.

They were cut off from international relationship. Egypt, which they had left behind, had been partially destroyed because of them, and was not their friend at this time. Palestine, to which they were going, was their prospective enemy, destined to be destroyed by their power. Edom, Moab and Ammon, kindred nations, held themselves aloof and refused friendly intercourse. Babylonia could only be reached through the land of Palestine. So it will be seen that except for the Arabians of the desert, they were utterly cut off from association with other nations.

Naturally they had no commerce. Also they had no industry. They built neither house nor city. They lived in tents, and so they manufactured no furniture for the houses. They grew no crops, and so they practised no agriculture. Their clothes did not wear out, therefore they neither spun nor wove to any great extent. They were miraculously fed, and so their food supply was not the result of their own activities. What an aimless, idle life this would seem to be. But was it either idle or aimless?

They built the Tabernacle, and the things connected with it; and they received the Ordinances of worship, and were trained to practise them throughout all the congregation.

They received the Statutes, in addition to the Commandments, and became thoroughly indoctrinated with them, so that their children found them to be the dominating force within their individual and national life.

THE FORTY YEARS IN THE WILDERNESS SAW THE NEW NATION AT SCHOOL, with the Lord as their teacher in all the ways of life. So the Law became their schoolmaster to lead them to Christ.

Out from that wilderness forty years; out from that wilderness experience came the clearest, most comprehensive knowledge of God and system of worship the world has ever seen.

Out from that wilderness forty years, and out from that wilderness experience came the most perfect system of Law, and the most perfect national organisation the world has ever seen.

Out from the wilderness forty years and experience came the system of truth and worship; the system of Law and Justice; and the system of national organisation, which have been and are the glory of our race and nation to this day. There is no other place in world history from which the great and otherwise mysterious systems of Law and worship could have come. They are not the product of Babylon. They are not the product of historic Egypt. They are not the product of any later period of Israel. They are too ancient to be the product of juvenile Europe. They are the product of the forty years of national schooling in the wilderness.

The Judges later administered the Law which they did not originate, neither did they train the nation in it. David found the Law in full perfection, sang of it, and administered it. Solomon applied his great wisdom to the administration of the Law. Ten-tribed Israel discarded the Davidic administration, but retained the Law in 975 B.C. Judah lost the full purity of it in the seventy years of Babylonish captivity, but assumed to re-establish it in the nation of the Jews. It was the point of divergence between the Jews and the Lord Jesus Christ that they followed the tradition of men rather than the Laws of God; that is to say, they followed Talmudic interpretation of the Law rather than the plain letter and spirit of the Law itself.

Greece had so far inherited the underlying system of truths as to build upon it her legal code, and out of it to found her philosophies. Her people, it must be remembered, were of Israel stock predominately.

The Law early arrived in the British Isles, long before the coming of Christ. The coming of the friends of Jesus, Joseph of Arimathea, and his companions; and the bringing with them of the Law, re-established and refreshed the knowledge of the Law in Britain.

Alfred the Great, taking the text-book of the Law, which is the Bible, taught the Saxons of Britain the Commandments and Statutes of the Lord.

The fact that the Law is found in this race, and in these Islands, is one of the great proofs that the people of these Islands are the people of the Lord to whom He gave the Law; at first writing them upon external tables of stone; but in the latter days writing them " upon the fleshly tables of the heart " of the people of Israel.

So we look upon the forty years in the wilderness as the most important years in all our racial and national history.

THE ORDINANCES.

This is that section of the Divine Law which pertains to worship.

In connection with the ordinances there was the planning and building of that most wonderful of Pavilions, the Tent or Tabernacle of Jehovah the King of Israel. The Tabernacle was constructed and erected in the heart of the camp of Israel. What wonderful literature are those portions of the sacred Scriptures which constitute the plans and specifications of the Tabernacle of the Lord.

As administrators of the ordinances there was the setting aside and ordination of the Aaronic Priesthood. This Order of Priests was the most majestic ever established on the earth. It was appointed and instructed of God. From Him the House of Aaron had its direct charter of Priestly rights. Ths ordinances of the worship which they conducted in Israel if still the basis of our approach to God, although the Order of Aaronic Priests has been so tragically removed.

The sacrifices which were ordained, in which the sinner, having selected from his flocks and herds the best, or purchased in the market the most perfect, and slaying the animal with his own hand, substitutionally offered his own life as guilty before God. In the sacrifice he also symbolically expressed his faith in the final great sacrifice of the " Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world."

These sacrifices met the materialistic level of a new people, who were just escaped from the grinding bondage and humiliation of an enslaved condition; and who were just coming into contact with the highest facts of Divine personality and of righteousness. To meet their need, to make conjunction with their undeveloped vision, the worship of the nation was put upon the plane of offering animal substitutes in sacrifice. This act, this system of acts, gradually developed in the minds of the people the consciousness of the significance of all these things. Thus, as the ages ran their course, although the sacrifices continued to be offered, we are able to see, by the utterances and the spirit of Psalmist and of Prophet, that the nation was rising to spiritual conceptions which would soon render the continuation of sacrifices unnecessary.

Then came the great and final ordinance of Calvary. Christians began to teach the fulfilment of the symbolism of sacrifice as an accomplished fact.

Then also came Pentecost, and the coming of the Holy Ghost among Israel as pure spirit, not incarnate in any body and not making contact with the material. And the wonder of it is, the people were able to rise to conscious association with the Holy Ghost without sacramental agency through the experience of the New Birth.

In A.D. 70 came the destruction of the Temple, and the final cessation of the sacrifices. Then the Aaronic ministry ceased for ever. Henceforth the people would attain to fellowship with God by direct approach, spiritual nature approaching God, Who is a spirit, "in spirit and in truth."

Thus step by step "The law of commandments contained in ordinances" became "our schoolmaster to lead us to Christ," even as the national Law contained in Commandments, Statutes and Judgments, is leading us to the actuality of the reign of Jehovah in Israel; and to the actuality of the imminent coming of Our Lord to "reign over the House of Jacob for ever."

The physical sacrifices, therefore, while not the highest form of worship, were the necessary stepping-stones for a nation just setting forth upon its course of training through the ages; training which should lead it finally into the highest and most spiritual association with God.

Any nation which should show a determination to return to the offering of physical sacrifices would show forth to men and angels that it had not left the initial stage of approach to the higher things of the spirit by way of the medium of physical material symbolism.

In the Christian dispensation the same gradation on a higher scale may be noted. In introducing working Christianity into the world, Our Lord grafted the Lord's Supper on to the initial sacrifice of the Mosaic dispensation. It was while they were seated at the feast of the Passover eating the paschal lamb, that Our Lord took the bread and the wine, and gave them to the disciples as physical symbols. This is the point where the physical and the spiritual should meet in the higher Christian worship. This is the lowest manifestation of the Christian faith that is within us.

Those who have least of spiritual contact with God will call most loudly and will lean most heavily upon the symbols, the bread and the wine. Those whose experience has attained to fellowship with Our Lord, and of the Holy Spirit, will lean least of all upon the material symbols, but will rejoice to meet Our Lord in spirit at His own Table. Those who have the least perception of all, on the line of the spiritual, will strive for the re-introduction of the very blood and the very body of the sacrifice of Our Lord, notwithstanding that it is contrary to the teaching of the sacred Scriptures, and of Our Lord Himself.

Let us labour and pray that all who bear His name of Christian shall so proceed to the experience of the spiritual reality that he shall no more lean upon the material symbol, but enjoy it, as we all shall do, when we eat and drink with Our Lord in His Father's Kingdom at and after His return.

Thus was inaugurated the ordinances which have been the driving force of our worship from the beginning; and which, energised and directed by the Holy Ghost, bring us into heart relationship with God.

During the first stage of the ordinances, while they were involved with the offering of sacrifices and the carrying out of the Mosaic ritual, the ordinances were centred by law at the Tabernacle, and the succeeding Temple. But when the spiritual development of the race had enabled that race to be set free from the offering of blood sacrifices, even as a symbol, then it was that the Lord commissioned His Apostles "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel unto every creature."

As we shall see later, however, the corresponding Gospel of the Kingdom was still restricted to the "Lost sheep of the House of Israel." The God-given right of the Kingdom of this world was still the right of the Cæsars outside of and excepting the Kingdom which the God of Heaven "set up . . . in the days of these Kings." The Lord said "render therefore unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's." Among the things which were Cæsar's was not the right to rule over Israel. Because of the foregoing fact the Kingdom of Heaven could not be preached outside of the Israel nations. But the time should come when the rights of the Cæsars should cease: namely at the end of the appointed seven times. Then the Gospel of the Kingdom also should be preached in all the world as a testimony unto all nations, and then should the end come.

The Church grows by penetration. It knows no boundary lines between races and kingdoms. On the other hand, the Kingdom grows by the expansion of its boundaries, absorbing more and more of the peoples of this world within the boundaries of the Kingdom-Empire, and it must continue to increase until "The kingdoms of this world are become the Kingdom of Our Lord, and of His Christ."

JOSEPH OF ARIMATHEA IN BRITAIN.

By Dr. G. H. Bennett.

We know little of this Joseph, but such information as Scripture, history and legend relate is very interesting.

(1) He is said to have been an uncle of the Virgin Mary, and of the House of David, and great-uncle of Our Lord.

(2) A great mass of legend and English folk-lore—much of it supported and decreed by Church Councils and individual chroniclers—tells us he was a merchant, trading for tin, etc., with Britain, and was the first person to introduce Christianity into Britain. All these stories are so circumstantial, so persistent and in such detail, that it is impossible for any scholarly person to thrust them aside as baseless. The fact that Geoffrey of Monmouth, in the twelfth century, was the first writer to give a detailed account of Joseph and his work strengthens these facts, when we remember that he could not possibly have invented these stories, but merely chronicled as consecutive the legends, songs and tales with which he must have been familiar in his youth, while living in the West of England. These songs and legends may still be heard to-day. The miners still sing their chant, "Joseph was a tin-merchant," and they still tell us emphatically that Joseph on one of his voyages brought with him Our Lord as a youth, that he loved our land, and would—had it been possible—have made it his home.

The main facts relating to Joseph of Arimathea as recorded in the Bible are as folllows :—

1. " He was a rich man " (Matthew, chapter xxvii, verse 57).
2. " He was an honourable counsellor " (Mark, chapter xv, verse 43).
3. " He was a good man and a just " (Luke, chapter xxiii, verse 50).
4. He " had not consented to the counsel and deed of them " (verse 51).
5. " He was a disciple of Jesus, but secretly, for fear of the Jews." (John, chapter xix, verse 38).
6. Associated with Nicodemus in Our Lord's burial (verse 39).

From these facts we may assume that his great wealth had accumulated from his trade with Britain, that he was a man of influence and position in the State, and was honoured and respected. At the Council recorded in St. John (chapter vii, verses 40-53), he and Nicodemus had deeply angered the Priests and others by refusing consent to the arrest and condemnation of Our Lord. No longer were these two men secret believers, they came out boldly as His disciples, well knowing that such an avowal would mean their own ruin. The Jews were determined after the resurrection of Lazarus to kill Christ and to destroy His followers and His teaching. The Romans were equally antagonistic to Him, fearing that the people might make Him a King. Joseph and Nicodemus therefore had made bitter enemies both of the Rulers of Church and of State in Judæa. Their condemnation and the confiscation of their goods were therefore certain, there was none to whom they could appeal. There was, therefore, no chance of their lives but in instant flight. Yet one more deed of love and reverence they tarried to do. Joseph " went boldly in unto Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus." What a daring deed was this ! And how favourably it contrasts with the threefold denial of Peter ! Pilate might have instantly ordered his execution as a traitor to Rome, or handed him over to the Jews to be stoned, and his riches confiscated to the State. Or was Pilate cowed by the signs and wonders which had followed Our Lord's death ? The request was granted, and Joseph and Nicodemus took the body of Our Lord, and laid it with spices, etc., in a newly-made tomb carved out of the solid rock, which Joseph had designed as his own. Well, he knew now that his own body would never lie there, for he would be buried in a distant land. When persecution arose, having done all he could, he must provide for his own safety and that of his dear ones. Where could he fly to be safe from the power of mighty Rome ? From the Jews he might easily escape. What more natural than to use one of his own trading ships, place his dear ones on board, and such property as he could hastily secure, and sail away from Palestine. Some might say why should Joseph go to such a then unknown part of the land as Glastonbury ? All down the Cornish coast and in the Scilly Isles he must have had many friends, British and Hebrew traders, artificers, labourers, etc., and with them he could still keep in touch with his House and his native land. I think the answer is simple. Joseph of Britain—as he now was—well knew that there were other trading ships beside his own, from Joppa, Acre, Tyre and Sidon, and even at that distance from Jerusalem his life would not be safe. The anger of the Romans or the vindictive fury of the Jews might bring about his assassination. He therefore sailed past the Scilly Isles into a new land, through what we now call the Bristol Channel—a land not then reached by the Romans in Britain, and a land still ruled by her native kings. There he felt safe, and there he planted his staff and claimed this fair land for Christ. Moreover, is it not highly probable that this Joseph, of the Royal House of Israel and of the Line of David, would be received with great favour and sympathy by the Royal House of Britain ? Intermarriages between the two Houses may have added yet another line of descent from David. The Tudor Family have made this claim.

There is also strong evidence that there was a Christian Church in Britain within a short time after the Crucifixion, before the Church spread abroad from Jerusalem, and years before Christianity was preached in Rome.

In support of this, the following is only one of the many instances in which the priority of British over other forms of Christianity has been admitted. At the Council of Constance, in 1517, it was decided " that the Churches of France and Spain must yield in points of antiquity and precedence to that of Britain, as the latter Church was founded by Joseph of Arimathea immediately after the passion of Christ (" statim post passionem Christi "). And this claim seems to have been freely admitted by Christendom.

THE SHIELD AND REWARD—II.

By " EYNSFORD."

" AFTER these things the word of the Lord came unto Abram in a vision, saying, Fear not, Abram ; I am thy shield, and thy exceeding great reward." (Gen. xv, 1.)

In the preceding section, the subject of the " Shield " was examined, and the pressing need for such a precious promise indicated. But this was not all. Not only did God assure His servant of complete protection, but also stated that He was his " Reward." " I am . . . thy exceeding great reward."

The call for recompense is not apparent on the surface. As in the case of the Shield, so here, it is a special promise to meet a felt need.

A reward is given for meritorious deeds or for unflinching loyalty. This promise implies that Abraham had merited reward. It may be well here to recall the fact that of Moses it was written that " he had respect unto the recompense of the reward," and, that it was in consequence of this, that he made his great renunciation of earthly riches and position. Had Abraham made any renunciation of earthly gain ? The answer is to be found in " these things " narrated in the previous chapter, Genesis xiv.

When Abraham returned from his great rescue raid he was met by Melchizedek, the Priest-King of Salem, who blessed him thus, " Blessed be Abram of the most high God, possessor of heaven and earth."

The king of Sodom also went forth to welcome him. This king, with one of his allies, the king of Gomorrah, had escaped capture in the great battle of the slime pits in the vale of Siddim and had fled to the mountains. He, upon hearing of Abraham's great victory, came out to meet him. He asked Abraham to deliver over to him all the persons of the rescued captives, and begged him to take all the rich spoils as a reward in payment of his great achievement. This was a very great offer, a rich prize. It would have made the already wealthy patriarch passing rich. It must have been a tempting offer. But Abraham absolutely refused it. Was he not the child of the Most High God, possessor of heaven and earth? What his Father gave him was sufficient. He would gladly be made rich by God, but he scorned being enriched by the heathen king of Sodom. He had naught to say against his allies, the three brothers, Mamre, Aner and Eshcol, taking their lawful share of the plunder, but for himself he only wanted what his God bestowed, he was happy to do without the treasures of Sodom and Gomorrah. To him godliness with contentment was great gain.

What an impression Abraham's action must have made on the heathen round about him. His action must have been incomprehensible and amazing to his allies and to the kings and people of the plain. How different must be his God from the gods they worshipped. How different was his relationship to his God from theirs to their idols. Abraham witnessed a good confession.

Thus Abraham returned home an unrewarded man because of his religious convictions. The only man without reward.

It was "after these things" that God spoke to him in that vision of comfort. God had been the unseen and silent witness of the episode. He had noted the loyalty of His child. He shall in no wise lose his reward. What shall it be? God meets him with the assurance that HE HIMSELF will be his "reward," his "great reward," his "exceeding great reward."

Many rewards and prizes in this life are inadequate, and some are held in small esteem, but what shall be said of Abraham's recompense? Words fail. This made up, and far more, to Abraham than any earthly loss; it more than met his need. This is what God wants to be to all His children. What value are we setting on our Reward?

The love of money is the subtle and ever-present snare that besets every believer. What an example Abraham is to those who wish to serve God and mammon; to those who strive for riches in doubtful ways or from dubious sources. "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His Righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

"Blessed . . . of the most high God, possessor of heaven and earth."

PYRAMID AND BIBLE DATES.

BY HENRY PROCTOR, F.R.S.L.

SINCE the Great Pyramid Chronology is, through the marvellous light lately thrown upon it, rapidly becoming

it is incumbent upon those already well acquainted with the chronological prophecies of the Bible to compare the two together, in order that the testimony of the one may establish that of the other. Now Mr. Davidson in his "Talks on the Great Pyramid" shows the immense importance of the Pyramid date—

5TH-6TH MARCH, 1924,

for at this time the Caliph and his son were compelled to leave Turkey, and the whole

HOUSE OF OTHMAN

were expelled by the 7th March. This he terms: "the definite termination of the Ottoman Empire." And "as a result of the post-war reaction in Turkey, the Turkish National Assembly displaced the autocratic rule of the Sultan and removed the seat of the government to Angora." This is just what the Bible chronology of

led us to expect in 1924, as pointed out in my article in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE (5.1.24), according to the principle laid down by Grattan Guinness that any crisis in the fall of Israel and Judah is answered at the end of the Seven Times by a corresponding crisis in the fall of those Powers which have been

of the Israel of God, literal and spiritual.

Thus the 2,520 years from the first year of Nebuchadnezzar ended in the deliverance of Jerusalem in 1917. But in his

which corresponds to 1924, we find that Nebuchadnezzar is again attacking and besieging Jerusalem; taking Jehoiakin the king, his mother, officers, nobles and eunuchs as prisoners to Babylon, and carrying off "all the treasures of the temple of the Eternal and the treasures of the royal palace." "He carried off all Jerusalem as prisoners; all the nobles, all the picked soldiers, ten thousand of them, with all the craftsmen." "No one was left but the poorest people of the land." (2 Kings xxiv, 11-17.) Thus we find between the Bible and Pyramid prophecies for 1924. But at the first glance there seems to be a difference of two years between the final date as given by Grattan Guinness and the date deduced from the Great Pyramid, for he gives

of Prophetic Chronology. He could see

NOTHING BEYOND 1934.

But we are now, being so much nearer the object sought, in a better position to judge. For as there is no doubt that the deliverance of Jerusalem in 1917 was 2,520 years from the first year of Nebuchadnezzar, so the nineteenth year which brought to a full end his campaigns against Judah must

CORRESPOND TO 1936.

Moreover in Jeremiah xxv, 1, we are told that "the fourth year of Jehoiakim" was "the first year of Nebuchadnezzar," and in verse 11 that the whole land shall be a waste and a horror and the people shall be subject to the King of Babylon. So that

This made up, and far more, to Abraham than any earthly loss; it more than met his need. This is what God wants to be to all His children. What value are we setting on our Reward?

The love of money is the subtle and ever-present snare that besets every believer. What an example Abraham is to those who wish to serve God and mammon; to those who strive for riches in doubtful ways or from dubious sources. "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His Righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

"Blessed . . . of the most high God, possessor of heaven and earth."

PYRAMID AND BIBLE DATES.

BY HENRY PROCTOR, F.R.S.L.

SINCE the Great Pyramid Chronology is, through the marvellous light lately thrown upon it, rapidly becoming

A POPULAR STUDY,

it is incumbent upon those already well acquainted with the chronological prophecies of the Bible to compare the two together, in order that the testimony of the one may establish that of the other. Now Mr. Davidson in his "Talks on the Great Pyramid" shows the immense importance of the Pyramid date—

5TH-6TH MARCH, 1924,

for at this time the Caliph and his son were compelled to leave Turkey, and the whole

HOUSE OF OTHMAN

were expelled by the 7th March. This he terms: "the definite termination of the Ottoman Empire." And "as a result of the post-war reaction in Turkey, the Turkish National Assembly displaced the autocratic rule of the Sultan and removed the seat of the government to Angora." This is just what the Bible chronology of

THE SEVEN TIMES

led us to expect in 1924, as pointed out in my article in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE (5.1.24), according to the principle laid down by Grattan Guinness that any crisis in the fall of Israel and Judah is answered at the end of the Seven Times by a corresponding crisis in the fall of those Powers which have been

of the Israel of God, literal and spiritual.

Thus the 2,520 years from the first year of Nebuchadnezzar ended in the deliverance of Jerusalem in 1917. But in his

EIGHTH YEAR,

which corresponds to 1924, we find that Nebuchadnezzar is again attacking and besieging Jerusalem; taking Jehoiakin the king, his mother, officers, nobles and eunuchs as prisoners to Babylon, and carrying off "all the treasures of the temple of the Eternal and the treasures of the royal palace." "He carried off all Jerusalem as prisoners; all the nobles, all the picked soldiers, ten thousand of them, with all the craftsmen." "No one was left but the poorest people of the land." (2 Kings xxiv, 11-17.) Thus we find

A CLOSE CORRESPONDENCE

between the Bible and Pyramid prophecies for 1924. But at the first glance there seems to be a difference of two years between the final date as given by Grattan Guinness and the date deduced from the Great Pyramid, for he gives

1934 AS THE "NE PLUS ULTRA"

NOTHING BEYOND 1934.

But we are now, being so much nearer the object sought, in a better position to judge. For as there is no doubt that the deliverance of Jerusalem in 1917 was 2,520 years from the first year of Nebuchadnezzar, so the nineteenth year which brought to a full end his campaigns against Judah must

CORRESPOND TO 1936.

Moreover in Jeremiah xxv, 1, we are told that "the fourth year of Jehoiakim" was "the first year of Nebuchadnezzar," and in verse 11 that the whole land shall be a waste and a horror and

FOR 70 YEARS

the people shall be subject to the King of Babylon. So that the 70 years would date from this announcement, although Nebuchadnezzar did begin the siege of Jerusalem in the previous year, "the third year of Jehoiakim" (Dan. i, 1), so that Grattan Guinness reckons from 605 B.C. and so gets 1923 instead of 1924 and 1934 instead of 1935.

However it was in his eighth year that he captured Jehoiakin and set up Zedekiah in his place. After this Zedekiah reigned eleven years, agreeing with the fact that his campaigns were spread over nineteen years. 2 Kings xxv, 8, gives us the very day on which the Temple was destroyed. "On the seventh day of the fifth month in the of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar." But the final ruin of Judah was not completed till some months later, when the remnant of the people "fled to Egypt in terror of the Chaldeans" after the murder of Gedaliah. That which began, therefore, in 604 B.C. and lasted nineteen years must have ended in 585 B.C., corresponding at the end of the Seven Times with our years 1917-1936.

We note in passing that by the second year of Nebuchadnezzar, Daniel and his three friends had become so proficient that they were to be arrested with the other sages and scientists of Babylon (Dan. ii, 13).

Daniel's influence on Nebuchadnezzar is also traceable in the name given to Mattaniah, viz., Tsedek Yah (Zedekiah) "the justice of Jehovah" who had delivered Jerusalem into his hand, thus showing his new-found faith in Jehovah which he had confessed to Daniel (ii, 47):

> "Truly your God is the God of gods, and the Lord of kings, and the revealer of mysteries."

It is absolutely necessary that we should test the Pyramid Chronology by the Biblical dates. Many of the latter have been proved by events, and so we have good ground for our faith in future dates. The 12th chapter of Daniel, for example, gives quite a number of dates by merely adding 622—the date of the Hegira—to Daniel's numbers:—

Thus 622 + 1260 = 1882—Capture of Egypt.
622 + 1290 = 1912—Balkan War.
622 + *1295 = 1917—Deliverance of Jerusalem.
Also A.D. 638 setting up of the Mosque of Omar—638 + 1290 = 1928, agreeing with Pyramid.

It would appear from all previous analogy that 1936 must see the full end of the Turkish nation. Its ruin must be as complete as that of Judah. The sin of Manasseh was that he "filled Jerusalem with innocent blood." Of this same sin, Turkey has for centuries been guilty—particularly among Armenian Christians. They have justified Daniel's title of the "abomination which maketh desolate" to the very hilt. And Israel is appointed to be the executors of God's vengeance upon them: "For the shall be a fire, and Joseph's house a flame, with Esau's house as straw to be kindled and consumed, till not a soul is left of Esau's house—by order of the Eternal." (Obadiah, verse 18). A.D. 1936 will also be 2,520 years from the destruction of Temple in the nineteenth year of Nebuchadnezzar (585 B.C.). So that the Temple will be built, or in course of building, by that year, on Mount Moriah, the Mosque of Omar having been removed, possibly during 1928, or at least by 1933. For this year is its 1,290th anniversary, and 1933 will be the 1,335th lunar year of its standing in the Holy Place.

There is no doubt, therefore, that we are on the eve of great happenings, and this foreshadowing should be a call to prayer not only to the Federation, but to all the nation.

For if wicked Nineveh † was saved through prayer even after the fiat had gone forth, and Ahab,‡ what might not God do for Israel in averting calamity, if they would turn to the Lord, as He says: "I will yet be enquired of by the House of Israel to do it for them."

* 1,295 solar = 1,335 lunar years.

THANKSGIVING.

A SERMON PREACHED AT HANCOCK, MINNESOTA, U.S.A., ON NOV. 20TH, 1927, BY THE REV. W. A. BAKER.

"BLESS the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits" (Ps. ciii, 2). National Festivals of Thanksgiving have been observed from very early periods. The day we now observe was of local origin, and gradually spread from New England, its birthplace, to the different States, but not to all of them, nor was it celebrated at the same time. During the Civil War, Abraham Lincoln began the practice of calling for a National Thanksgiving, which has been continued by his successors, and probably will be as long as we as a nation exist.

By usage the last Thursday in November has become the accepted date for this annual occurrence. These proclamations have summed up in their statements the mercies and blessings of the year which has passed and oftentimes they have pointed out national shortcomings and sins. They are calls to thanksgiving and repentance. They are the words of our chief executive as he scans the ship of State in her voyage of twelve months. They are State-papers and as such are worthy of our best consideration.

Calvin Coolidge says: "We shall do well to accept all these favours and bounties with a becoming humility, and dedicate them to the service of the righteous cause of the Giver of all good and perfect gifts. As the nation has prospered let all the people show that they are worthy to prosper by re-dedicating America to the service of God and man."

Thanksgiving Day has as its nucleus and ground of existence as a pæan of praise in this country the saving of our forefathers from starvation. The day was being observed as a day of fasting and prayer by the Pilgrim Fathers. They were in need; starvation was looming before them, but the arrival of a ship from England, loaded with necessary stores, turned the day into one of rejoicing and thanksgiving.

Thanksgiving and prayer and the acknowledgment of the shortcomings of the individual and the people have been from that time to this the theme belonging to this day. It has become in these days, however, more of a feast day, and the acknowledgment of our shortcomings, as individuals and a nation, is largely forgotten. Like the Israelites of old, we lay our prosperity to ourselves and the works of our hands, and forget or ignore the part played by God in the matter.

National holidays are valuable from the fact that they are waymarks set up to perpetuate and bring to remembrance some great principle or event. Every great nation has such days; they are the index fingers of the past and they also presage the future. And when a nation forgets them and they no longer stir the blood and heart with the emotions due them, then ideals lose their power and their glory fades, and they grow old and die.

The records of the past show that national holidays are mighty factors for perpetuating great principles and ideals. It takes a great principle or principles to hold a body of people together so as to make them a homogeneous whole. The past reveals the fact that no one factor is equal to this demand. Without such factors a nation cannot grow or increase, nor climb to the heights above. They are its life-blood. Men and nations cannot grow without the proper stimulus.

National holidays are a call to us as individuals and as a nation to more firmly implant in the currents of life the principles they represent. Thanksgiving is a day of the special recognition of the fact that all our material blessings flow from the hand of God, and that the Divine Being is underneath, around and above all our prosperity as individuals and as a nation.

The fact that the chief object of the day is often lost sight of and with too many made a day of feasting without regard to God, the Giver, is lamentable, because it is indicative of decay, a kind of dry rot in the religious life of the nation. Take the Fourth of July; its object is to perpetuate these self-evident truths: All men have an equality of rights corresponding to their God-given gifts, and have been endowed by the Creator with certain inalienable rights. And that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness as taught and expressed in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. These are the Magna Charta of our liberties and the life-blood of the nation.

These truths embodied in human hearts will make a nation responsive to the call of arms for their defence in the twinkling of an eye. You have but to touch the electric button, and you will see men crowding from the pulpit, college, school and counting-room, bank, store and farm to lay down their lives to meet the exigencies of the hour.

Lexington, Bunker Hill, Sumter, the Maine in Havana Harbour, and the World's Greatest War which closed but a few short years ago, all tell the same story. Washington and American liberty can never be separated. Lincoln and the Emancipation Proclamation are almost synonymous terms. When we think of Christmas we think of the emancipation of the world, and Christ, the mighty Deliverer. Lest we forget, let us look at some of the reasons for thankfulness.

As Anglo-Saxons we belong to the most progressive race in the world. You may turn to any field that you please—commerce, discovery, arts, sciences and literature—and we stand in the foremost rank, not only as moderns, but in all these the Anglo-Saxon ranks the world. Commerce, colonising, mining, agriculture and inventions have made us as a race wealthy beyond computation.

We are, and now I mean the English-speaking race, the most practical people in the world. Others may surpass us in speculative theories, but none in achievements and practical results which have for their object the upliftment of mankind.

We are the world's greatest rulers in point of territory and people. We have reached the high-water mark of all history. Our physical base is the largest and our numerical superiority the greatest the world has ever seen. No Empire of the past can compare in magnitude with this Colossus which has grown by leaps and bounds since 1799. The sun never sets on the shores and possessions of the Anglo-Saxon race.

Again, we are the greatest missionary people that have ever lived. Wipe out the missionary societies of the English race and the mission wheel would cease to revolve. We are fulfilling the destiny and plans of the Almighty in mission work predicted of Israel, which we are. There are about 15 per cent., rather less, of Protestant missionary societies of other nationalities outside of the English-speaking race.

We are the greatest colonisers and the greatest missionary race in the world's history, And of the many millions given to that cause, 95 per cent. is contributed by our race. The hundred years of missionary effort has done more to change the map of the world than any other one cause.

It is the province of truth to make an issue, and the issue once made will not down. It is bound to set up an irrepressible conflict. It was so ordained from the beginning. Truth must conquer, even at the cost of human life; truth is eternal, and its value is beyond computation. The English race (Israel) are truth's champions, and will be as long as they value truth and its rewards more than they do their heart's blood.

In the latter days we are to bear a charmed life; no weapon thatis formed against us shall prosper. We are the heirs of the world, for we are of the seed of Abraham. "For the promise that he should be the heir of the world was not to Abraham or to his seed, through the law, but through righteousness of faith." "For if they which are of the law be heirs, faith is made void, and the promise made of none effect."

The world does not understand the Anglo-Saxon race, nor does it understand why or how that race has become the dominant power of the world. As yet it has not recognised the hand of God. But it will in the near future. Again, we have the language of the greatest expansion and assimilative power. It is the most expressive of the modern languages. No other language can boast of such galaxies of writers. In poets we take the palm of the ages, both in rank and numbers. The same can be said of novelists, historians and scientists.

Some of the most eminent philologists declare it has all the elements of a world language. It is more practical than any other; it is twenty-five per cent. cheaper in telegraphy. Its vocabulary is ever increasing and is larger than any other race. In fact, it is larger than that of Germany, France and Italy combined. It is rapidly becoming the medium of international intercourse. Again, we are the world's greatest travellers. We do more travelling and send more telegrams than all the rest of the world put together. In twenty-five years there will not be a town of any importance in the world but you will find someone that can talk English.

The greatest and best of the world's writings are with us. Our race has produced the tallest men in the mental, moral and spiritual realms for the last nineteen hundred years. We so judge by the length of the shadow cast; the taller the object the longer the shadow. The shadow of the coming man who is to reign as the Prince of Peace is falling upon every clime.

What are the factors that are evolving such superb specimens of manhood among the Anglo-Saxon peoples? There are three. God has only entrusted them to two peoples who some day will become one. They are both descendants of Abraham, the heir of the world. These two are the Jews or Judah, who chose the law of God as their pathway and ignored the pathway of faith. The English-speaking race, the Ten Tribes (Israel), chose the pathway of faith and the tremendous values it carried.

It took Israel a long time to come to that conclusion; centuries of chastisement at last made them obedient and lovers of the truth. The Anglo-Saxon perceived in civil and religious liberty and altruism man's greatest inheritance; an inheritance that was worthy of surrendering fortune and life to retain.

The passing ages have seen this race ever placing a higher value upon these three things. Their civilisation and thought life have clustered around these three, and they have given birth ever and anon to higher expressions and ideals. Wherever this race has gone they have sowed these three principles in the hearts of the people they have come in contact with. They are the three virile forces of a pure civilisation.

The world to-day waits upon the decisions of the nations who are governed by these three factors, civil and religious liberty and altruism. Some nations have had one and even two of these factors, but the Anglo-Saxons have had committed to their care all three, in a fulness beyond all others.

ADDRESS DELIVERED AT THE CHURCH HOUSE, WESTMINSTER:

By the Rev. W. H. Stuart-Fox, M.A.

It is a very great pleasure to be here because it is the first time I have been in the Church House for such a meeting as this. I have sat here for the Diocesan Conference, and I should like to see the Bishops here to-day. We hope that some day it may come to that; I believe it will. R. L. Stevenson has shown us the picture of a man who tried to peg down the shadow of a tree, hoping when his work was finished he might retain the shadow within the compass of those pegs. It is rather like a man who tries to form a permanently settled creed, and to put God within its limits. Stevenson's man forgot that the earth moves; even so you cannot put a God, Who is ever moving out into fresh self-manifestations, within the narrow compass of a human definition.

Now I want to speak about two things. The first is that Our Lord's First Advent is marked by a special term called "the fulness of time." You remember in the Epistle to the Galatians we read "when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth His Son, made of a woman, made under the law." What for? "To redeem them that were under the law." Christ's Second Advent is marked by a similar term; only this time it is not "the fulness of time," but the "fulness of nations." "Blindness in part is happened unto Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. And so all Israel shall be saved; as it written, There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob." Who were these people of Galatia, to whom St. Paul was writing when he spoke to them of the fulness of time? Go to Bishop Lightfoot, that great scholar and theologian, who was not a British-Israelite, but who knew his Bible, and who knew something of history too. Read what he says on the Epistle to the Galatians, and you will find he says this: "There is little doubt that these sojourners of Galatia were Celts, and that they were of that sub-division made by the philologers of the great Celtic nation known as Cymri, the kindred branch of which, the Welsh, to-day are the modern representatives." And the language spoken by these people of Galatia was the language that was then current and spoken in Southern Britain.

Well, of what consequence is this to us? It helps us in this way that when you read—as all clergy should read—the Epistle to the Galatians in the right way, you will find that it was written, not to Jews, neither was it written to pure Gentiles; there was only one class left—that was the lost sheep of the House of Israel. And as you carefully study this Epistle you will find that this letter was written to the lost sheep of the House of Israel, and that these people were speaking a language which was current in Britain at that time.

Now this fulness of time—what does it mean? In what sense was it the fulness of time? First of all, it was the time that was set forth by the prophet Daniel in that wonderful prophecy of the seventy weeks of years—490 years— a measure of time confirmed by the Great Pyramid. It is amazing to me the awful hash those who pose as interpreters of the prophetic Scriptures have made of this wonderful prophecy of Daniel. Taking that prophecy of seventy weeks, they have cut off its tail; that is to say, they have cut off the last week, and they have buried it away, and it does not come to life again until the end of the age after the Church has been taken away. I believe very much in that great movement called the Advent Testimony Movement. I believe it is doing a tremendous lot to rouse people to the fact of the Second Advent of Jesus Christ. But what are you to make of this statement of one of its modern leaders? He says: "This is a day of grace in which God is gathering out of all nations the members of Christ's Body, the Church, and therefore it stands outside all historic dates. To-day is a parenthesis in God's dealings with the earth, and prophetic times cease to be reckoned." That is to say, that for more than eighteen centuries prophecy has been closed up, God has arrested His footsteps in prophetic fulfilment. How the Great Pyramid with its tremendous searchlight shows this up to be a fallacy, and more than a fallacy—an absolute absurdity; with the result that this poor little desolate week that has been banished to penal servitude has been sent back to join its sisters as fulfilled prophecy.

Now the second reason why this was the fulness of time, as St. Paul told these Galatians, was because it was the time of the fourth Empire revealed in Daniel. You remember those four Empires which were to succeed each other—Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, Rome. Now Rome, the fourth Empire, was at its zenith, and already the Gothic axe was being fashioned by which the legions of Rome were to be crushed. Therefore it was time that that fifth kingdom, the Stone Kingdom, the kingdom that was to last for ever, should begin to appear. And so when Jesus Christ starts on His work He begins preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom. And His great herald, John the Baptist, gives out his message which rings through the wilderness, "Repent ye, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." Now this is clearly an earthly kingdom, and clearly it cannot be any other than that fifth kingdom, the Stone Kingdom of Daniel, because that kingdom was to last for ever; it was this kingdom Jesus began to reveal. There was not a word about the Cross yet. Jesus had not lifted up His Cross before the eyes of His disciples yet. But there was something that Jesus taught about this kingdom that we British-Israelites need to lay very seriously to heart. When Pilate asked Him whether He was a King, He said, "Yes, but My Kingdom is not of this world." You want to re-state those words, otherwise you will misunderstand their meaning. What He really said was, "My Kingdom is not of this order of things." That is the real meaning of the Greek word, that order of things which existed in the Roman Empire, an empire built upon force. His Kingdom was a Kingdom after the heavenly pattern; all that represents God on earth must have its Heavenly pattern—the tabernacle, the temple, the city—the Kingdom of Heaven—all fashioned after the Heavenly order. Moreover Jesus taught this very clearly, that no citizen of that Kingdom of Heaven on earth could fulfil the great purpose of God; unless he was first a citizen of the Kingdom of God in Heaven. "Except a man be born again he cannot see the Kingdom of God." "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the Kingdom of God." And so I would say this very boldly this afternoon, that no man who is not a converted man ought to preach British-Israel Truth, because there would be a danger that he would lay emphasis upon mere correspondences, and miss the vital issues that are essential and fundamental facts in our teaching.

There was yet another sense in which that was the fulness of time, because there were three great national movements that were converging to meet the Christ. One was Rome; Rome representing a false national ideal. But there was something God had ear-marked for His purpose—the great Roman roads. God was going to use these by and by for the development of His purposes. Then there was Greece conquered, and yet living again in her wonderfully vital and beautiful language, and Greece was the representative of a false intellectual ideal. And yet again there was the Jew; Judaism was the representative of a false religious ideal. And yet beneath the dust of the superficial and human traditionalism, there was the solid bed-rock of Moses and the prophets. Roman, Greek and Jew all jostling each other. And right in their way is a Cross, and on the Cross there is an inscription in Hebrew, and Greek, and Latin, "Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews." Yes, and equally the King of the Romans, and King of the Grecians. But what did it mean? What was the significance of that inscription? Why this, that by means of that Cross Jesus had saved the soul of nationalism, of intellectualism, and of religion. The devil might have their bodies. He might fashion them into any shape he liked, and use them as the instruments of a false nationalism, of a false intellectualism, and of a false religion, but their souls would go marching along those great Roman roads, singing in the beautiful language of Greece the redemption song of the Hebrew prophets, to the music of the Passion; summoning the lost sheep of the House of Israel to mobilise round the banner of their King, to make His way known upon the earth, His saving health among all nations. To level up the valleys and to level down the hills, to straighten out all the crookedness in the earth, to smooth out all the rough places and so make a way for those glorious feet which were pierced, that Love, incarnate Love, might not only reign supreme in Heaven, but might also reign supreme on earth. And this is the message that was the challenge of John the Baptist to his day. It was also the message of the great prophet Isaiah; it was the prologue to that mighty programme of Israel, marching out with the great redemption song as her national anthem to the conquest of the world for Jesus Christ; as you have it in that marvellous second Book of Isaiah, from the fortieth chapter to the end. That kingdom, that work—what was it? I think we get an idea as we look again, in closing, at that fourth chapter to the Epistle to the Galatians. St. Paul there sees Jerusalem in bondage with her children. So she was. For in a little while she would be levelled to the dust, not one stone left upon another, and her children scattered all over the world—a byword among the nations. This is the earthly Jerusalem. Then he says, "But Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all." And to you, says the Apostle, for this is the drift of his teaching of the House of Israel, the freedom of that Heavenly city is given, that you might go forth in the power of that Divine Heavenly ideal, to rear a new Jerusalem where God will have it reared, and so set up His Kingdom on earth in His appointed place. We know that when God constituted Israel a nation there were produced there in the wilderness two mighty national movements, worship and government, long before they became environed in geographical centres, known by the name of Zion and Jerusalem. And when Zion and Jerusalem should be in God's sight nothing but a heap of stones, then the soul of that Divine worship and government would go forth and environ itself in a new centre, a new Zion and a new Jerusalem; and we believe and are sure of it by a thousand testimonies that that Zion-Jerusalem is found here in our midst to-day.

Moses told Israel that when there was a mighty harvest they were to bring forth the old because of the new. That is exactly what we are trying to do. We are trying to bring forth the old because of the new. The Modernist is trying to bury the old because of the new, and that is because he has failed to realise the great processes which God has set in motion in the realm of prophecy. Man cannot tell certainly whether to-morrow will be fine or wet; but God has hung up in the picture gallery of the prophets the picture of a nation hundreds of years before its time. This is how God brings the wisdom of this world to naught, and puts it to rout. For hundreds of years those pictures have hung in their prophetic frames, until they have grown old, and the critics have laughed and sneered. The vast spaces of the earth have watched silently like the sphinx and in loneliness for the coming of God's builders, and all the time God's invisible and invincible builders were at work preparing the foundations. In due course the Israel builders started building the walls, and presently were spanning the oceans to extend the kingdom, and now finally are eating up the vast spaces of the world as God's Kingdom-nation enters into its inheritance. Oh, wonderful kingdom! Wonderful building! God's architecture, festooning the continents with its battlements, a city of refuge for all who are oppressed, and holding out nothing but the menace of stern judgment for all agents of the devil. That is what we proclaim to-day. That is the purpose that God has for this Empire of ours. That is why we have to preach this Gospel of the Kingdom. When people have their eyes opened to see the truth, they will realise that this Bible from end to end is true.

IMPERIAL PRUSSIA was head of that great combination of CENTRAL POWERS (the Eagle) which between 1914 and 1918 challenged the ALLIED POWERS, chief among whom stood BRITAIN (the Lion).

This struggle was rightly called "The Great War for Civilisation." It was a war for Cosmos, and ultimately a war for CHRIST Who is the AUTHOR of COSMOS. The issue at stake was that of the choice between a world civilisation based upon the ideals of German or Gentile "kultur"—held and maintained by force—or a world civilisation after the Brith-ish or Israel pattern, based upon Liberty and Freedom.

The victory of the former (a movement based upon principles opposed to natural law) would have meant the inauguration of an era of universal chaos. The triumph of the latter spells a firm advance towards the goal of universal cosmos—a world-civilisation (known as the Kingdom of Heaven upon earth) which claims CHRIST as KING.

Since the signing of the ARMISTICE,[1] thoughtful German men and women have been looking into the causes of defeat. Their unanimous judgment seems to have been that the fundamental cause of their defeat lies (humanly speaking) in the character of the ENGLISH PEOPLE.

And the two chief influences shaping this character they believe to have been (a) the NATIONAL CHURCH, and (b) NATIONAL SPORTS.

The first named cause forms an encouraging testimony at the present time, when the future of our ENGLISH CHURCH seems to be cast in troubled waters. And our sympathy is one with the Bishop of Gloucester, who said :—" The existence of is of great benefit to the Nation—indirectly even to those who are outside its fold. I would gladly see it made even more comprehensive than it is, so that the great body of those at present classed as Nonconformists should find a home within its fold, and I am sure that it is right that we should make some sacrifices to preserve this national inheritance."

If the National Church in its present state of enlightenment has been empowered to exert so remarkable an influence on national character, what a marvellous opportunity lies before it in the future.

For with the dawning revelation regarding the literal truth of the historical background and foundation of our BIBLE and NATIONAL BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER there will come a grip upon the mind of the people magnetic in its power of attraction.

Advance along the lines of Brith-ish Israel revelation will mean for the English Church, and all the Churches, a line of progress, triumphant, profound and sure.

Moreover, from the temporary disintegration of existing forms of thought there emerges a re-casting of religious outlook definitely directed toward a Kingdom conception of Christian faith. This gradual preparation for the reception of the GOSPEL of the KINGDOM in all its purity and completeness is apparent on every side; the most recent example of this tendency being that manifest in the publication of a book entitled "Constructive Citizenship," by Dr. L. P. Jacks.

It must not be supposed that we necessarily agree with all of the author's claims and conclusions. We do not by any means do so. But the general trend of his message is unmistakable, and inevitably destined to encourage the Kingdom outlook among the masses of the people.

Wickham Steed believes that the Young People of Great Britain especially, "are likely to seek more and in the direction indicated by Dr. Jacks." Reviewing the book he further claims that: "It sets forth a truly religious philosophy of daily life for the Office, the Workshop, and the Home. Far from maintaining that religion consists of belief in any dogmatic system, or that the whole duty of man is to save his soul by ceremonies and sacred functions, Dr. Jacks looks upon life as a perilous adventure to be conducted upon the principle that he who loveth his life shall lose it.

"One thing only he promises—hard work and hard fighting[2] to the very end."

Even though destiny held nothing better in store for mankind that that of going out into the unknown "to die like gentlemen after the manner of Captain Oates," Dr. Jacks believes that his gospel would be justified.

"The main thing is to strive gallantly," he claims, "being men and women of all classes who act as trustees for others as well as for themselves, and who put into their work, as a religious duty, the highest quality and the highest skill of which they are capable."

"Already our civilisation is based upon trusteeship in a far fuller degree than is generally supposed. We need, however, that shall seize upon the capacities lying undeveloped in the millions of the people. The aim is to 'foster one equal temper of heroic hearts.'"

Yes! it is a conscious citizenship that we need to-day. We need supremely the vivid consciousness that we are citizens of the KINGDOM.

In times past an individual message seemed well sufficient for our needs which rarely ranged beyond the boundaries of a localised existence. But to-day, when national and international boundaries are being cast down, when the troubles of one member in the Family of Nations affects the life of every other member of the Family of Nations, we need the individual gospel (more than ever) reinforced by the national Gospel of the KINGDOM.

We know our duty in regard to our personal relationship to JESUS CHRIST as SAVIOUR. To-day we need to know our national duty toward other nations, and our relationship to the world as citizens of the KINGDOM of which CHRIST is KING and REDEEMER.

Answer to these questions and provision for these needs are contained abundantly in the Kingdom-Gospel which by divine fiat must be preached throughout as a witness to all nations.

To all nations is sent a call to enthrone CHRIST as King and prepare to enter a Kingdom built upon the biological basis of the Seed of Isaac. For the WORLD EMPIRE "after God's own heart" has as its nucleus BRITH-AIN, LAND of the COVENANT, and as its servant-citizens the Anglo-Saxon sons of Laughter.[4]

The spirit animating the great creative tasks to be undertaken by the people of the Kingdom is described by Dr. Jacks who, with remarkable insight, has caught the vision perfectly.

"The spirit and sportsmanship of play are needed in the realms of work" he writes. "'In the KINGDOM of HEAVEN they neither work nor play; they do both at the same time.' When the spirit of play inspires work, we shall be nearer the religious conception which prompted a stone mason in the MIDDLE AGES to chisel the back of an ornamental leaf, which no eye was ever likely to see, as carefully and as lovingly as he chiselled its front."

Oppressed with the cares and sorrows of the present time of tribulation we are apt to allow our theology to be clouded with the gloom of human disillusionment. We are apt to forget that the world was made by CHRIST and for His pleasure[5] it was created. We are apt to forget that the Law, far from being a frowning, dreadful, repressive thing, was meant to ensure our happiness.[6]

We are apt to forget that except we become as little children we cannot enter the KINGDOM of GOD. And humility is not the only child-like characteristic the sons of GOD will be seen to manifest. Like children, creation to them will be a joy, and work will be real play.

It is the sin of misdirected energies and of spiritual, mental and physical lawlessness that has settled down upon the sons of men like some hideous plague of blight. But if, for the perfect manifestation of this spirit we must await the coming of that race of super-men, the sons of GOD, in the meanwhile, we see in the people of Britain a foreshadowing demonstration of that spirit.

Indeed, the testimony of modern GERMANY rivals that of ancient EGYPT to the fact that this people (potentially) must be acknowledged "to be the sons of GOD."[7]

Here it is:—"ENGLAND is a land of amateurs, GERMANY a land of professionals; the quality most prized in ENGLAND is 'fair play,' in GERMANY 'discipline!' Though epigrams seldom express the whole truth, yet I am satisfied that the above words are nearer the truth than most epigrams are.

"When it is said that ENGLAND is a land of amateurs it is not meant that the amateurs are less skilful than the professionals, but that they approach things from a different angle.

"It has been claimed that, in order to make a Briton do his best, you must persuade him that he is playing a game; you must persuade a German that it is his duty to do so.

"British troops went 'over the top' on occasion kicking a football; to the German mind such a thing was frivolous and unworthy. To appeal to a Briton to play the game is more effective than to exhort him to be a Christian.[8] In Germany such an appeal sounds ridiculously feeble compared with the appeal to Duty and Fatherland.

"The fighting qualities of the British soldier during the war, had compelled German respect and admiration and (after the Armistice had been signed) they sought to find out what in KITCHENER'S ARMIES had taken the place of pre-war compulsory training. They soberly came to the conclusion that it was Sport."

To this we must add Emil Ludwig's testimony:—"Because the German nation has been drilled militarily through a long period of years, Germans prefer gymnastics and athletics to games like tennis, ski-ing, and golf, the former being based more on discipline, the latter more upon individual freedom.

"One of the greatest differences between the ANGLO-SAXON and the GERMAN is the joy of the former in games; the GERMAN finds his pleasure more in conforming to a set of regulations which as a rule makes him take everything very seriously and earnestly."

Now the significant thing about these facts is just this: Having come to the conclusion that "courage does not blossom at its best in the soldier forced by duty into military service, but in men who voluntarily become sportsmen, or go out in quest of adventure," the German people, enthusiastically

[5] Cp. John i, 3 with Rev. iv, 11.

[7] Cp. II Esdras ix, 13.

[8] It is a tragedy that this should be so—but the instinct behind the decision is (paradoxically) sound in the main. The average man is sure of Christ, but suspicious of Christianity. He believes that to "play the game"—to "do justice and judgment is more acceptable to Jehovah than sacrifice."

encouraged by the Government authorities, plunged into a tremendous campaign of organising national sports clubs.

"To-day," according to Emil Ludwig, "Germany stands among the best in sports, and ranks among the highest in European sport records."

But alas for human plans and schemes. "Not sport for the sport of the thing, but sport as a means to an end, is the idea of the powers that be in Germany." Human organisation may produce results in record-breaking by such artificial methods, but the free spirit of GOD cannot be coerced or inculcated by such means as these.

The spirit of sportsmanship which is the glory of the British People, whether they own it or know it or not, is a reflection of the spirit of the living CHRIST. It is the special mark, the sons of Laughter, the children of the KINGDOM.

As Canon Woods puts it:—"The spirit which all true Christians catch, of thinking first of the other man, of unselfish sharing, of living for something bigger than one's self, is wonderfully closely akin to the spirit of true sportsmanship; that spirit which makes a man play fair and play for the side, which gives him larger loyalties and a moral standard—'that's cricket' or 'that's not cricket'—that helps him to form right judgments on men and things.

"Then there is the Message that men may have life, and have it more abundantly. That abundant life may be experienced in many corners of the boundlessly broad fields of truth and goodness and beauty. To one corner of that great realm surely out-of-door games belong.

"The lifted drive for six into the pavilion, the swerving run at Rugger that just scores the try, the spurt down the straight that just breasts the tape first, the clean volley or the towering smash at lawn tennis . . . to experience these things is to experience, for a moment, 'the top of the fulness of life.'

"They are clean, and glorious, and satisfying; they make a man more alive.[9] And for anything that helps any part of my being, moral or physical, to live, I like to bring my humble tribute of thanks to the GIVER of LIFE."

True service, whether military or otherwise, can only be won under conditions implying a perfect freedom. It must depend upon co-operation and not coercion. It can only come as the result of a voluntary sacrifice of self to a high ideal. Freedom is the touchstone of true discipline, because it is the condition of true discipleship.

With the coming outpouring of God's spirit[10] upon the Brith-ish people there will be clearly manifest an increase in that true spirit of freedom, discipline and self-sacrifice, which even to-day, though it but feebly glow, yet so unmistakably characterises the people whose GOD is the LORD.

"All the genius and learning of the heathen world, all the penetration of Pythagoras, Socrates, and Aristotle, had never been able to produce such a system of moral duty, and so rational an account of Providence and of man, as is to be found in the New Testament."—BEATTIE.

[9] St. Paul had the genius to see that clean sport formed a wonderful analogy to the Christian life. Cp. 1 Cor. ix, 24-27.

NOTES AND QUOTATIONS IN RELATION TO BRITAIN-ISRAEL.

By PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc., &c.

[The following articles should be read with the thought in mind that they are not intended as a glorification of the Empire, nor of the Anglo-Saxon people, but as a recognition that Jehovah, the God and King of Israel, has in the Celto-Saxon people the basis of His Kingdom on earth. The Anglo-Saxon people have been trained for ages to be the Administrators of that Kingdom, and to carry its benefits, its liberty and its peace to all mankind.]

No. 13.

SIR JOHN LUBBOCK quotes from an American writer:—"No nation in the world has contributed more to the progress of human knowledge, no country has contributed so much to human progress . . . The flag of England waves on every sea and in every port, and the morning drum-beat of her soldiers, following the sun and keeping company with the hours, circles the earth with one continuous strain of the martial airs of England."

Ex-President Roosevelt says: "The scarlet-clad officers who serve the Monarchy of Great Britain have conquered many barbarous people in all the ends of the earth, and hold for their Sovereign the lands of Moslem and Hindoo, of Tartar and Arab, of Pathan and Malay, of Negro and Polynesian. In many a war they have overcome every European rival against whom they have been pitted. Again and again they have marched to victory against Frenchman and Spaniard through the sweltering heat of the tropics; now, from the stupendous mountain passes of Mid-Asia, they look northward through the wintry air, ready to bar the advance of the legions of the Tsar."

Lord Beaconsfield speaks thus:—"The world was never conquered by chicanery, but by faith. The power of the sword is as fleeting as itself, but faith is mighty and eternal, because it is divine."

Bismarck, through his newspaper, said:—"England is the Deus ex machina, the arbiter of the situation, from every point of view, and that the only remedy for the present ills would be for England to assume the position which she took up in 1815 and declare that the nation which first took up arms would be her mortal enemy, and would be obliged to withdraw or fight against two."

The American Review of Reviews, speaking of the American-Spanish War, says:—"British goodwill and its effective and timely manifestations were not the fortuitous circumstances, the lucky coincidence which half the public believe them to be, and they undoubtedly saved the States from the ugly necessity of facing the hostile fleets of at least two European nations besides Spain. The unwritten treaty of amity and mutual helpfulness is full of meaning to the family of nations, having the potentiality of a practical alliance of all English-speaking communities in the interests of universal order, equity and civilisation."

M. de Molins, Editor of La Science Sociale, said in 1898:—"It is useless to deny the superiority of the Anglo-Saxons. We may be vexed by this superiority, but the fact remains despite our vexation."

The American writer, Rev. Martin L. Streator, says:—"Manasseh becomes great as a nation; Ephraim becomes great as a multitude of nations. Manasseh becomes great as a people, and a company of peoples; Ephraim becomes greater as an empire and a company of nations. Manasseh becomes the United States of America; Ephraim becomes the United Kingdom of the World."

Admiral Dewey, of the States, says:—"After many years of wandering, I have come to the conclusion that the mightiest factor in the civilisation of the world is the Imperial policy of England."

Dr. Gaster, of Rumania, in 1902, said:—"England is the country which is now rightly considered as the home of freedom and liberty . . . . We dare not forget the freedom and liberty which our brothers enjoy under the benign sway of the King of all the Britons."

Hear from a great Roman Cardinal: "It is good for us to be here in England. This nineteenth century will make a great epoch in the history of the Church. It is yours, right reverend fathers, to subjugate and subdue, to bend and to break the will of an Imperial Race, the will of which, as the will of Rome of old, rules over nations and peoples, invincible and inflexible. Surely a soldier's eye and a soldier's heart would choose by intuition this field of England for the warfare of faith. It is the Head of Protestantism, the centre of its movements, and the stronghold of its powers. Weakened in England, it is paralysed everywhere; conquered in England, it is conquered throughout the world. Once overthrown here, all is but a war of detail. All the roads of the whole world meet in one point, and this point reached, the whole world lies open to the Church's will."

BRANCH ACTIVITIES.

Two addresses were given by Mr. John Leech, K.C., at the Hotel Metropole, Bexhill-on-Sea, on January 20th, which were exceedingly well attended in spite of very bad weather. Mr. Walmesley occupied the chair at the afternoon meeting, and Dr. Sydney Kent in the evening. Mr. Leech first spoke on the fulfilment of Bible prophecy, exemplified in the self-governing "Company of Nations" clustering round the throne of Great Britain. In the evening, the subject was "Coming Events and their Meaning for Britain," drawing attention to the world-wide restlessness and perplexity of nations, the general expectation of coming trouble, and showing the activities of Soviet Russia towards the hoped-for destruction of the British Empire, the one barrier to their ambitions; and, with the help of God, a sure one.

In the Great George Street Congregational Church, Liverpool, on Tuesday, January 24th, the Rev. Pascoe Goard gave a very clear definition of British-Israel Truth to a good congregation, some of whom came from long distances. The majority had never heard the teaching before, and good results are anticipated. The Pastor spoke very highly of the address, and expressed the hope that Mr. Goard would come again.

A very enthusiastic meeting of the Southend Branch was held at Elm Hall, Leigh-on-Sea, on Wednesday, January 25th. "The Pyramid, its Moral and Spiritual Value," was the theme dealt with by the speaker, the Rev. Joseph Gay, who held his audience closely for nearly an hour and a half. The chair was taken by Mr. J. A. Jubb. Great headway is being made in this district.

Mr. A. E. Dillon, of Manchester, gave an address on "Why the British Empire will never Fail," at the Common Hall, Hackins Hey, Liverpool, on Thursday, January 26th, to a very appreciative audience, showing from Holy Scripture and secular history the lineal descent of the Anglo-Saxons.

Mr. Howard Rand, LL.B. (from Massachusetts) spoke on "God's Covenants" at the newly-formed Blackheath Branch on January 27th. Rev. J. Lumley Davies presided. The meeting was greatly enjoyed, and many interesting questions were asked and answered.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

THE Rev. Pascoe Goard and Mr. Herbert Garrison addressed two excellent meetings in the Montgomery Hall, Sheffield, on January 30th and 31st. The audience on the latter date was said to have been by far the largest ever known for B.-I. in the city. Mr. William Whitton and the local members may be congratulated on their excellent publicity work.

On February 1st Mr. Goard and Mr. Leech proceeded to Dublin for meetings there, going on to Belfast on February 4th; while Mr. Garrison travelled on to Whalley, St. Helens, Keighley, Carlisle, etc., for a series of six lantern lectures, with large assemblies.

Big efforts are being made for Mr. Garrison's lectures in the Grosvenor Hall, Belfast, on February 13th and 14th, which seats nearly 2,500 people.

Captain A. Morrell has very kindly consented to give the Address at our meeting next Wednesday, February 15th, at 3 o'clock, at Headquarters. We feel sure all the friends will be delighted to hear Captain Morrell again after hearing his splendid testimony at the Secretary-General's round table last month.

Mr. Morey and Mr. Marchant were the speakers at Headquarters on February 1st and 2nd. Our readers are reminded that meetings are held at Headquarters each Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and each Thursday evening at 7.30.

We are very grateful for donations in response to our appeal in regard to the offer by the Earl of Dysart. Our readers generally will realise, we feel sure, the necessity for making every effort to comply with the condition stipulated, so that the means shall be provided for proceeding at once with a well-planned Forward Movement. The Secretary-General will be very glad to receive cheques or promises; address Headquarters, 6, Buckingham Gate.

British-Israelites the world over will be interested in the following from the Manchester Guardian :—

EARL HAIG ON BLACK SUNDAY.

(From our Correspondent.)

St. Andrews, Wednesday.

"Professor George S. Duncan, of St. Mary's College, St. Andrews, Presbyterian chaplain at general headquarters, British Armies in France, from 1915 to 1919, has made public an incident of the war which reveals in a remarkable way the deeply religious character of Earl Haig.

"In France, Earl Haig attended service regularly at 9.30 on Sunday mornings at a little wooden hut which served as the Presbyterian Church at general headquarters. He was never absent if in residence in the neighbourhood, but on that black Sunday following the outbreak of the German offensive of March, 1918, I felt (says the Professor) he dare not leave his desk.

"Suddenly he appeared, calm and resolute as ever, outside that hut on the ramparts of Montreuil. We shook hands in silence, and scarcely knowing what I said I expressed the hope that things were not too bad. Quietly, but reassuringly, he replied: 'They will never be too bad.' 'No,' I said, 'you who were through Mons and Ypres in the first year will never think anything too bad after that.'

"Then he said in tones which I had never heard him use before,—for although he lived his religion he did not talk about it—'This is what you once read to us from Chronicles: Be not afraid nor dismayed by reason of this great multitude; for the battle is not your's, but God's.'"

Professor Duncan adds that it was on that day that Earl Haig made what was for a Commander-in-Chief the "supreme sacrifice," by telegraphing to London urging that steps be taken at once to secure a generalissimo.

The Bible Class for men on Tuesdays at Headquarters, from 6 to 7 p.m., has made an excellent start. We feel confident of great benefit to all who can attend these elementary Bible Study Classes, under the leadership of Mr. W. Sleeman.

We would remind members and friends, and also visitors to our Headquarters, that the Reading and Rest Room is open each afternoon, except Saturday and Sunday. Here visitors may make acquaintance with each other, and with some of the large body of literature available. All are welcome. Teas are served from 4 to 5.30 in this room.

Startling figures are being published regarding the fabulous wealth of the mineral deposits in the Dead Sea. One writer estimates it at 300 times greater than the debt of Great Britain to the United States. We hope to be in a position to give some reliable information upon this important subject a little later. * * *

Our Publishing Company has just printed a pamphlet on "Prophecy," an appeal to Clergy of the Church of England, by the Rev. Hector Macturk, M.A. If every reader will send for one or more copies and present them to their clergyman or minister, much good work will be done for our Cause. Copies of the above may be obtained from the Covenant Publishing Co., Ltd., price 2½d., post free.

At last the reprint of Mr. Goard's articles on "The Kingdom" is ready. This attractive volume of 117 pages, clearly printed in large type, and nicely bound in blue cloth with gold lettering, is a fitting companion to the author's recent volumes on the Epistles to the Romans and Hebrews. Order a copy of "The Kingdom of God" to-day. The price is only 2s. 6d., by post 2s. 9d.

Commander Roberts's new map of Israel's migrations at 6d. is a marvel of cheapness. Printed in colours and bound in a neat blue paper cover, it is just the thing for handy reference. A printed guide goes with each map.

"Week-by-Week," page 60, N. M. & B., dated Jan. 28th, 1928: "December 15th, 1927," should read "December 16th, 1927."

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

[It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.]

THE LAW OF THE LORD, OR THE COMMON LAW.—VI.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

NATIONAL—THE STATUTES.

WE have seen the organisation of the new nation, Israel; and the restatement to that new nation of the ancient Law.

We have glanced at the Ordinances, which constitute that phase of the Law which pertains to worship and to the Sanctuary.

We now turn to the Statutes of the Lord which pertain to the national organisation and national administration.

THE PLACE OF THE INDIVIDUAL IN THE NATIONAL ORGANISATION.

"And the Lord spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, in the tabernacle of the congregation, on the first day of the second month, in the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying,

Take ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers, with the number of their names, every male by their polls;

From twenty years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to war in Israel: thou and Aaron shall number them by their armies."—Numbers i, 1-3.

It will be seen by the foregoing that the register of the personnel of Israel is most complete. First there is the family. It is on this basis that the national organisation is founded.

Next, each family is related to the "House of their fathers." That is to say, the "Clan"; which is the family on a wider scale.

Each family and person is numbered, taking therefor the numerical value of the letters which spell the name. For in Hebrew each letter stands first as a letter, and then for a numeral also; and each combination of letters can be read as a word, spelt out by letters; and as a number, formed of the letters read as numerals. So there is the family name, spelt out by the letters, and there is also the "number of their name."

"Every male by their polls." This is a matter of "counting heads" or, as an industrialist would say, "counting the hands," contributed by each family. We have the same word in "Poll tax," "Polling booth," and so on.

These armies of Israel are made up of "The sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel . . . from twenty years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to war in Israel: thou and Aaron shall number."

BY THEIR ARMIES.

It is to be noted that the counting for purposes of defence is of all the CONGREGATION of Israel, and that the numbering is to be done by Moses, who was "king in Jeshurun," together with Aaron, who was the High Priest. So it would appear that this is to be looked upon as both a national and religious duty. In fact, this register constitutes the "Book of life" in Israel.

What a wonderful thing is this numbering of Israel which still obtains in our national life. Take an illustration. The Province of British Columbia, in Canada, is just about introducing Old Age Pensions for her citizens. These must show their British birth, and their years of residence in Canada. Now there are many residents of British Columbia from the British Isles who have kept no record of their birth. Many of them could only guess the approximate date of their birth. For such it looked rather hopeless. But the information was sent forth by the department that such citizens as these, who were born in Britain, could obtain the necessary certificates by applying at Somerset House in London. Many made application, and promptly received their birth certificates from this national registry. They were utterly surprised, not being aware that the vital statistics of the country were being kept so carefully. The beginning of the registration was, as we see, in the wilderness. There have been times when the record has been neglected, but the remains of this national statute is with us still, and the restoration of it in Britain-Israel has been wonderfully complete for many years.

How well it will be by and by that we should also find that our names are " written in Heaven," " in the Lamb's Book of Life." This is just as matter-of-fact a registration as is that at Somerset House for those who qualify. We are too apt to make a mystery of the very matter-of-fact things of the Kingdom. When Our Lord returns, accompanied with the Elders and armies of Israel, we shall find that He and they will bring the register of our unbroken descent. We shall indeed be " gathered to our fathers " for the purpose of " active service " in the Kingdom.

Thus are the armies of Israel made up. The opponent of military enrolment, and of military service for the defence of the Commonwealth, may find to his sorrow that his opposition has cost him that which he would fain retain, namely, his registration in " all the congregation of Israel " by the King and High Priest of our nation and profession, Jesus Christ.

THE ELDERS OF ISRAEL, OR " THE HOUSE OF LORDS."

We shall insert the list of the original members of that House :—

" Of the tribe of Reuben ; Elizur the son of Shedeur.
Of Simeon ; Shelumiel the son of Zurishaddai.
Of Judah ; Nahshon the son of Amminadab.
Of Issachar ; Nethaneel the son of Zuar.
Of Zebulun ; Eliab the son of Helon.
Of the children of Joseph : of Ephraim ; Elishama the son of Ammihud : of Manasseh ; Gamaliel the son of Pedahzur.
Of Benjamin ; Abidan the son of Gideoni.
Of Dan ; Ahiezer the son of Ammishaddai.
Of Asher ; Pagiel the son of Ocran.
Of Gad ; Eliasaph the son of Deuel.
Of Naphtali ; Ahira the son of Enan."—Numbers i, 5–15.

The qualifications which went to the appointment of these original members of the House of Elders, or Lords, are as follows :—

" These were :
The renowned of the congregation ;
Princes of the tribes of their fathers ;
Heads of thousands in Israel."—Numbers i, 16.

It will be noticed that there is no place for an alien in the constitution of this House.

" And Moses and Aaron took these men which are expressed by their names :
And they assembled all the congregation together on the first day of the second month, and they declared their pedigrees after their families, by the house of their fathers, according to the number of the names, from twenty years old and upward, by their polls.
As the Lord commanded Moses, so he numbered them in the wilderness of Sinai."—Numbers i, 17–19.

THE NATIONAL ORGANISATION AT REST.

The form of the organisation is that of the hollow square, with a large space in the centre.

The faces of the square are oriented :—East—South—centre, the Tabernacle of the Congregation, with the camp of the Levites about it—West—North.

On each face of the square thus formed are :—

East : Judah—Issachar—Zebulun.

South : Reuben—Simeon—Gad.

Centre : In hollow square, at the back of every tribe—Levi. In the centre of the square of Levi—the Tabernacle of the Congregation, which is the heart of the nation.

West : Ephraim—Manasseh—Benjamin.

North : Dan—Asher—Naphtali.

This was the actual form of the encampment during the years in the wilderness. This is the basis of the national organisation for all time. The last view we have of Israel, future still by many ages, shows it as " the Holy City," " and the city lieth four square."

The armies of Israel were thus formed in a hollow square, pivoting on the Tabernacle of Jehovah, the God and King of Israel.

The armies of Israel were divided into four brigades of tribes ; each brigade containing three tribes, and each brigade holding one face of the square. The tribe first named in each brigade was the brigade leader, and each bore a brigade symbol :—Judah, the Lion ; Reuben, the Man ; Ephraim, the Ox ; Dan, the Flying Eagle. These are also the forms of the Cherubim of Ezekiel and of Revelation. The latter are called the " Zoon."

ON THE MARCH.

First came the brigade of Judah ; under the Lion standard ; three tribes.

Second came the brigade of Reuben ; under the standard of the Man ; three tribes.

Then came the tribe of Levi ; bearing the Tabernacle and the Ark of the Covenant.

Third came the brigade of Ephraim ; three tribes ; moving forward in the third rank. Ephraim was " the shepherd of the stone of Israel " ; doubtless bearing the Stone of Destiny : Lia Fail.

Last of all, in fourth place, came the brigade of Dan ; three tribes ; under the standard of the Flying Eagle. " They shall go hindmost with their standards."

"And the children of Israel did according to all that the LORD commanded Moses: so they pitched by their standards, and so they set forward, every one after their families, according to the house of their fathers."—Numbers ii, 34.

THE LEVITES.

Pass on now and see that the Levites are here set apart for their Levitical ministry, as a part of the national organisation; as we have seen the sons of Aaron ordained as a part of the ecclesiastical machinery of Israel.

The Aaronic Priests were consecrated as we see in connection with the Book of Leviticus. Now Leviticus is the handbook of ecclesiastical law. In it is the place of the Aaronic ministry which served at the Altar.

The Levitical Priests are set apart in connection with the Book of Numbers, which is the handbook of national organisation. The Levites have duties also in connection with the House of God, but they never ministered at the Altar. They serve in the Temple on behalf of the tribes of Israel. But they also have "the charge of all the Congregation." They are the national or civil servants; and they engaged in the four learned professions—law, health, tuition and publication.

The Aaronic ministry has been "taken away." The Levitical ministry continues.

THE CONSTITUTION.

We now come to that wonderfully beautiful Book, Deuteronomy. This is the digest of constitutional law in Israel. It was written as the handbook for the guidance of the King in the administration of justice to the end of time. We shall read it with this in view, with pleasure such as could not be experienced regarding a Book that is simply the record of a system which once was, but is passed. It is still the vital handbook of the Common Law as administered in the Celto-Saxon world, and in the associate non-Israel nations who have accepted the Law.

All these things were the outgrowth of the forty years in the wilderness. This period constitutes the fountain-head of ecclesiastical organisation, of national organisation, and of law administration.

As we have already said, there was no period prior to the forty years in the wilderness when the Law was so clearly set forth, and no people were ever so organised prior to that period. There has also been no period since which could account for the complete and unified organisation in religion, national organisation, and law. The forty years alone with God, in training in all these things, can alone explain the historic fact of this perfect and complex organisation in Israel which appeared in Moses' day.

"A right spirit is such a spirit as God requires and takes pleasure in; and such a spirit as becomes the condition of those who profess to be His followers. Such a spirit must be a spirit of faith and trust; a spirit of contrition and humility; a spirit of thankfulness; a spirit of love; a spirit of patience and submission; a spirit of zeal; and a spirit of firmness and constancy. Such is the spirit produced in all the subjects of Divine grace."—JAY.

WHAT IS THE BRITISH-ISRAEL POSITION?

FIRST we begin with the Divine self-revelation of God.

He first reveals Himself as the Creator of the Universe. —(Elohim.)

Next He reveals Himself as Jehovah-Elohim who "formed" Adam, and the Adamic Family. He further reveals Himself as the Judge of the Adamic Family and of Satan who deceived them.—(Jehovah-Elohim.)

This is the one story of the Creation told in two sequent stages.

Next, beginning with the last paragraph of the fourth chapter of Genesis and specifically with the fifth chapter, which sets forth and from thenceforward follows the progress of the "appointed" seed, descended as follows: God; Adam; Seth; and his seed is the beginning of the Biblical history of the Covenant bearing seed. In His relation to this seed and to this purpose through the seed God reveals Himself by the name—Jehovah.

This seed is traced from Seth to Noah; from Noah to Shem; from Shem to Abraham; Isaac; Jacob; Israel; and this is the heart of the narrative of the first eleven chapters of Genesis. It is the logical and necessary prelude to what follows.

Now comes the Covenant which has been the mainspring of history from that time to this; namely: the Abrahamic Covenant. We are now at the period before Christ which is approximately as far before Christ as we are after Christ. Say 1927 B.C.

God reveals Himself in His relationship to mankind generally at this period as Elyon El (The Most High God). But to Abraham for the purposes of the everlasting Covenant He reveals Himself as El Shaddai—(The God Father of the race).

The Covenant establishes the seed of Abraham through Isaac as the medium of Divine blessing to all the families of the earth.

The race was called in Abraham; born and dedicated in Isaac; regenerated and renamed Israel in Jacob.

The family thus covenanted descended to Egypt at the call of Joseph, under Jacob, seventy strong.

The family emerged from Egypt twelve tribed, and numerous.

The family was organised into God's Kingdom-nation at Sinai as we read in the xix–xx Exodus.

In that Kingdom-nation Jehovah established Himself as King FOR EVER.

To that Kingdom-nation at the same time Jehovah gave that Law which still forms the basis of the Common Law of Britain and the United States of America.

Thus the Kingdom of God was organised in the earth, consisting of (1) The nation—Israel, (2) the King—Jehovah, (3) The Law.

That nation was established in Palestine under Joshua.

In that nation was established the House, Throne and Kingdom of the House of David, also FOR EVER, which obviously includes our day.

The nation became two nations by Divine appointment in 975 B.C. These two nations were: the House of Israel, ten tribes; and the House of Judah, two tribes. In the House of Israel thus established into a separate nation there was no tribe of Judah. That tribe was the basis of the separate Kingdom. Therefore it is foolish to call separated Israel "Jews."

The House of David was established over Judah until the Captivity of Judah.

Other lines of Kings reigned over the House of Israel during the years it remained in the land of Israel.

In the meantime migrations of Israel people to Europe and Britain founded Ancient Britain.

The nation Israel was carried into captivity by Assyria, 740-721 B.C.

The nation Judah was carried into captivity by Babylon, 604-587 B.C.

The House of David was removed by Nebuchadnezzar, who killed all the immediate male heirs, and by doing so made the eldest daughter the heir to the throne. Unconscious of this Israel law, he then allowed the female heir to the throne of David to go free.

A remnant of Judahites returned from Babylon and formed the nation of the Jews. They rebuilt Jerusalem and the Temple. They re-established the worship; but not the rule of David.

To them Christ came. HE REDEEMED His people Israel, and made Atonement for the sins of all mankind.

We preach the Gospel of Salvation thus provided—to and for every creature, and urge all to accept Him as Saviour.

Meantime, Israel had colonised "the Isles." Isaiah plainly addressed his grandest prophetic message to Israel in the Isles, see from ch. xl on to the end of Isaiah.

To that Colony the daughter of Zedekiah, bearing the throne right, came, and there established the House, Throne and Kingdom of David.

To that Colony after ages of wandering the ten-tribed House of Israel came.

To that Colony most of the House of Judah also came.

To that Colony the tribe of Benjamin came, having separated from Judah after the destruction of the nation of the Jews in A.D. 70. They came to Britain as Normans.

That united Colony became the nation Israel regathered from all lands according to Divine prophecy.

That nation Israel is the Britain of the Christian dispensation, the Israel of prophecy.

That nation has expanded into a company of nations, and the great people of the U.S.A.

That nation and company of nations, and great people, are the Kingdom-nation of God still, and they are blindly carrying out the Divine plan.

The time is come for the nation to awake to its mighty privilege and glorious destiny as the agency which shall carry the blessings of the Kingdom to all nations of the earth.

Therefore we are to-day calling all Israel-Britain to a knowledge of her high mission, and of God's high purpose concerning her.

There is not a kingdom, nor a nation, nor a people, nor a tongue on earth which is not included in the great plan of the ages. But through the agency of Israel as God's Ministering Kingdom and Nation must the blessings of the Kingdom come to them. Therefore we are proclaiming "this Gospel of the Kingdom to all the world as a witness to all nations" at this time.

Will you not accept and help to spread the glad Evangel and by so doing help to prepare the Kingdom for the imminent return of Jesus Christ, for God shall give to Him the Throne of His father David, and He shall rule over the House of Jacob for ever.

It is shown in the history of Israel in Kings and Chronicles again and again how, when Israel's king and people repented and turned to God, He delivered them from the oppression of their enemies. In modern times, when Germany was winning the war on the Western front, after nearly three and a half years of war, our King called the nation to a day of national repentance and prayer, and the war we were losing was won that year. Then what is the British-Israelite or any believer in God to do when the Great Day of God Almighty dawns? At once individually and collectively ask that the King, representing the nation, shall call the whole Empire to national repentance before God.

"But thou hast not called upon Me, O Jacob; but thou hast been weary of Me, O Israel."

"Thou hast made Me serve with thy sins; thou hast wearied Me with thine iniquities." "I, even I, am He that blotteth out thy transgressions for Mine own sake." "Yet will I be enquired of by the House of Israel to do it for them."

THANKSGIVING.

THE headship to the world is the promise to the people that fulfil these obligations. As a race thus far we have come the nearest to carrying out their demands. The headship of the world is the hands of the sons of Joseph, Ephraim and Manasseh, Britain and the United States. Never before has there arisen a people able to combine and use these three in unison. To bring forth such a people has been the evolution of the centuries.

The value of these three factors consists in their expulsive force. They are the regnant forces for the individual and national life. They make issue with every individual sin and every national evil. They are fundamental, and no life or nation can be truly great without them. Cain founded a civilisation in the antediluvian world, and from his loins came the seed that brought the world that then was, to destruction. Every man did that which was right in his own eyes.

All the civilisations of the past have been failures. Cain's, the Hittites, Assyrian, Babylonian, Egyptian, Grecian and Roman have passed away. The same blight fell on all of them. They did not have the necessary factors to purge themselves from the accumulated dross, and they perished. Again and again in the history of our country may be seen the force of these three factors.

They gave to Wolfe's men as they climbed the rocky steeps to the Plains of Abraham sinews of iron and nerves of steel.

And when the morning sun arose, these men, panoplied in the strength of these Divine factors, slew autocratic despotism and claimed this country for Freedom's God. It was not American nor English blood that drove France and Spain out of North America. It was not American blood that drove Spain out of the West Indies and the Philippines and sank their Navies. It was the power of these factors which had taken possession and ennobled their manhood which made them omnipotent in battle. "Power belongs to God."

The destruction of the Spanish Navy at Santiago with the loss of one man, and the battle of Manila Bay, were as miraculous as the crossing of the Red Sea or the destruction of Pharaoh's host.

The false seed of slavery was planted early in the history of this country. In God's own time these three factors made issue with it and put the octopus to death. The world gazed in astonishment. They wondered what the outcome would be, but there was no doubt as regards the result in the courts of Heaven. They were bound to triumph. It was Omnipotence using the instrument of clay to fulfil His purposes. Turkey, Bulgaria, Austria, Hungary and Germany made issue with these three factors and went down to defeat.

Combine these three factors and they will conquer every issue brought against them. Each one of them is a giant, combine them and they become omnipotent. The rum power, for years, did everything it could to prevent altruism from cementing the forces of civil and religious liberty together. The thing she dreaded has come to pass. She has read the handwriting on the wall. Her doom has come. And some day we shall see it interred in the grave of oblivion where no trump can resurrect it. God has determined these three factors shall rule the world, and the race who gives the best expression of them must of necessity bear the world's supremacy.

It was no idle promise God made to His ancient people, that if they would be faithful to Him He would make them the head of all nations, and if not they should be the foot. Jesus Christ planted altruism in the soil of earth never to be eradicated. When He stretched His hands upon the Cross and shed His Heart's blood, He became the Brother of Mankind.

If the Spaniard had been animated by these factors, we should never have gone to Cuba, we never would have taken Santiago, and Schley would never have destroyed the pride of Spain as he did. God fought for us as plainly and mightily as He ever did for Israel of old, telling us as plainly as language could talk that we were still His people.

(Isa. lviii, 6): Isaiah in his ethical instructions says we are to loose the bands of wickedness and undo the heavy burdens, and to let the oppressed go free, and that we break every yoke. God called us to go to Cuba. God called for the Civil War that the oppressed might go free, and that the yoke of slavery that Manasseh had bound upon the neck of the black man might be lifted.

He called for the Revolution of 1776, that there might be a government of the people, by the people, and for the people on the Western Continent. David enunciated a Divine truth when he said, "The Lord is a man of war." Pacificism by force has been one of the means used by the Almighty for fulfilling His plans and purposes. If Anglo-Saxondom is Israel, then we are God's battle-axe (Jer. li, 19), and we shall be that to the end, until pacification by force is no longer needed.

Jeremiah xxxi, 36, says that Israel shall be a nation before Me for ever. Civil and religious liberty and altruism are spiritual forces, and are dependent upon men and nations for their manifestation. God always stands back of them. These factors are destined to rule the world and nations must grow souls in which these are the dominant factors or else be destroyed. Wars will never cease until these three factors possess the minds and hearts of men.

The world is rapidly coming to judgment. Its unholy forces are ripening for destruction. World peace waits not for a federation of nations. Peace is not the product of legislation, but of these Divine forces possessing the hearts of all mankind. The issues of yesterday are not settled. The world's greatest troubles lie ahead of us. If institutions are the lengthened shadows of a man, then we have in our national Constitution the grandest document that has been penned for 3,000 years.

The factors that we have been talking about produced the men capable of originating it, hence its God-like scope and character. Where were its principles of law derived from? Certainly not from Solon, Lycurgus, or Numa, but Christ. When the President takes his office he is not sworn on the Vedas or the Koran; but his oath or affirmation is an appeal to the Christian's God.

For the first time in history the Almighty has a race developed upon the lines of greatest resistance. It has taken the evolution of the centuries to produce a race of the nerve and fibre equal to that demand. Israel or the Anglo-Saxon have had a training of 3,000 years for that purpose. It has been specially trained by the hand of God as no other nation or race. Those three factors we have mentioned have made them the dominant power in the world.

The world has conquered these factors again and again in detail, but never united them together. They are the hand of Omnipotence grasping the problems of life. They are the forces of judgment as well as progress. No individual or nation can be considered Christian if these are lacking. Let us not forget that the major part of the wealth of the world is in the hands of the spiritual and natural seed of Abraham. That fact allied with the God of battles won the Great War.

Of the Tabernacle colours, Israel (Great Britain and the United States) have chosen the most significant, the red, white and blue, which they have incorporated into their national ensigns. France also has them in her flag, usually designated as the tricolour. But no particular meaning is assigned to their broad bands, but with Israel's banner it is different. I believe that, with few exceptions, these three colours have been adopted by all the liberty-loving nations.

Britain, according to prophecy, was to take the forefront as God's battle-axe. Jacob, when he adopted Joseph's sons and made them his own, crossed his hands, wittingly, as he gave them his dying blessing, and predicted that Ephraim should be the greater of the two. Ephraim was to have many children, but the birthright blessing of land and its fruits, and the hills with their treasures, and the sea with its abundance, were to be the heritage of both.

Jacob's crossed hands are memorialised in Britain's flag, and it is from this fact, sometimes called Jacob's flag, it has a white and a red cross of that kind, one representing Scotland and the other Ireland. Then we have the upright red cross, the Cross of St. George, though personally to me it seems to represent the Cross of Christ as well. It represents "the nation whose flag is the Cross." The Cross in the near future will divide the world. Britain has carried the Cross to every land and the isles of the sea. She sheltered and cared for us until we were able to go alone.

Israel has been the "Host of the Lord" since the conquest of Jericho and before, but here it was acknowledged and made known when He came and took command. Since then Israel has been redeemed, and redeemed by the one great offering of the Cross, and "Ephraim has become the nation of the Cross." Our devotion as Israel, "the Lord's Host," to the Cross has brought upon us the offence of the Cross. "This has caused the Devil to foment a revolt upon the earth against the people of the Cross." Seemingly the first blow will be aimed at the nation whose ensign is the Cross. "Language may divide nations; distance may divide nations; the sea may divide nations; opposing interests may divide nations; but the Great Divide is that of the Cross."

We have, as Israel, allied ourselves with it, believed in it, taught it, and made it our boast and our song. "The offence of the Cross has not ceased. It is to receive a greater and more terrible exemplification than it has ever yet seen. It is that that brings the last great conflict, where all nations must take part, that great and terrible day of the Lord." We should be thankful for the way that Britain has interpreted the red, white and blue in her history. She has stood guardian at Liberty's gate for the last thousand years. The red, white and blue are her national colours as well as our own.

The irrepressible conflict is not yet ended; we (Britain and America) as God's Israel are living in the world's Marathon. The red, white and blue are the world's gladiators in the amphitheatre of the ages, and the world's future is hanging on the result. As a nation we have much to thank God for, for what we are and what we are called to be. "Let all within us bless and praise His Holy Name."

Old Glory was never more significant than to-day. It challenges our deepest love and gratitude. Every one of its thirteen stripes are sacred. They not only stand for the thirteen original colonies, but they hark back to the time when, 3,400 years ago, we were marching as the thirteenth tribe of the Israel of God in the wilderness. Thirteen always has been and always will be our tribal and national number. Every one of its thirteen stripes is sacred; every star is a gem.

These old Tabernacle colours are pregnant with meaning. They have always stood for civil and religious liberty. They have been our companions for thirty-four centuries, and will be to the end. In that long trek of thirty-eight and a half centuries, when our national life was called into being through Father-Abraham, we have written most of this Holy Book. It is our Book, we wrote it. It is our Family Album; we are the Israel of God. Its most glorious pages are still to be written. Those three colours mean more to us than any other race or people. God chose them.

They tell me of the grandest literature found in the world. In its background I see some of the greatest of earth's heroes. In this land saved until the time appointed for Manasseh; it speaks of a Washington, a Lincoln, a Garfield, a McKinley. It speaks of battles on land and sea, of shackles falling from four million slaves. Its stripes have been crimsoned again and again. Millions of men have died to purchase the freedom of this hour.

We are debtors, all of us, to God's great host, who have fallen on sleep. Its white stripes are harbingers of peace when the conflict of the ages is ended. Those three factors, civil and religious liberty and altruism, are singing of victory, the passing of storms, and the glorious sunshine of God. The azure field, with its glistening stars, are beckoning hands to our homeland when we fall asleep. Yes, and it tells another story; it speaks of a Christ born among the lilies across the sea, Who loved these colours. His Father's choice, and Who died to make men free.

We are to stretch out the arms of the Cross until they cover every land, and the kingdoms of this world become the Kingdom of Our Lord and Christ. The time is coming and is near at hand when those emblematic colours will cover every land, for the kingdoms of this world are to become the Kingdom of Our Lord and Christ.

And the fifth Kingdom of prophecy, the Stone Kingdom, shall rule and reign for ever. Israel is to see the end of war and strife, and is to take the major part in that new order when the world is to be ruled in righteousness. Civic righteousness is to be established in the earth by Israel. She has David's throne and awaits its ruler from Heaven.

THE CHURCH OF GOD.

By JOHN H. TENCH.

AT a missionary class in Darlington the book studied during the winter session was "The Clash of Colour," by Basil Matthews. The blind evidence in this book that the Kingdom and Church of God is the British race, the Covenant people, the descendants of Abraham, whose seed was to become a multitude of nations, and their destiny to bless all the nations of the earth, is truly wonderful.

On page 13 he writes: "Rome, indeed, ruled the races of the world of its day; but the known world of the Cæsars was a miniature compared with ours."

On page 17 he describes a 'plane which "left the Nile delta and swung away southward, up the Nile over the Sudan, and across into Uganda. If the journey had been completed past the Lakes, or over the Tanganyika territory and the upper waters of the vast river Congo, down over the forest and veldt of the Rhodesias and so across South Africa to Cape Town, throughout that tremendous journey across desert, swamp, forest, lake and veldt, her wings would pass over thousands of miles of land, every inch of the way under the rule of the British race."

On pages 86 and 87 we read: "Britain achieved a dominion

in India which for the first time in all her history brought all her peoples under one rule. No one man dreamed it in its entirety ; Britain certainly never realised what was happening. It was not planned : it grew." (Here the writer is mistaken, for the Scriptures show that it was planned by God.)

" It is not open to serious challenge that the military and civil service by which the British Raj has been exercised in India has—as a whole—been unexcelled for efficiency, disinterestedness and humanity in the history of the government of any one race by another people."

Speaking of the team-spirit of a Christian school in Ceylon he says : " That spirit is simply the spirit of the Christian men from Britain who in the last fifteen years have built up the tradition and esprit de corps of the place on a rock-foundation of Christian character."

On page 152 he says : " Two brothers, for instance, play together as boys in a Bechuana tribal town in Africa. One grows up in the hands of his witch-doctor father ; he goes through the bestial and painful ritual of the secret camps where boys are equipped for manhood. The other meets David Livingstone and is later educated by the white men, who come to his land with their schools and their new faith. The one becomes a cruel, brutal, drunken, turbulent tribesman ; the other becomes King Khama, the famous chief who found his tribe small, poor and broken, and left it great, rich in cattle, and united."

One of the questions asked when we studied the last chapter of " The Clash of Colour " was " what does the Holy Church throughout all the world " mean to you ? I stated that this quotation was from the " Te Deum Laudamus," and to me the Holy Church throughout the world meant the Church of Israel—God's firstborn. Paul when bidding good-bye to the elders of Ephesus said : " Behold, I know that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more. Wherefore I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men. For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God. Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers to feed the Church of God which He hath purchased with His own blood " (Acts xx, 25-28). Paul, when writing to the Church at Corinth, calls it the Church of God (1 Cor. i, 2 ; xv, 9). These Corinthians must have been Israelites, for Paul, like the other Apostles, had obeyed his Lord's command : " Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not ; but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel, and as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand." He had found many of these lost sheep at Corinth, for the Lord in a vision said to him : " I have much people in this city." So Paul remained with them a year and six months. In chapter x he addresses the Church of God at Corinth with these words : " Moreover, brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant that all our fathers were under the cloud, and all passed through the sea, and were all baptized unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea ; and did all eat the same spiritual meat, and did all drink the same spiritual drink : for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them, and that Rock was Christ." Had these Corinthians been mere Gentiles it would have been absurd to have addressed them in this manner, for none but the fathers of Israelites were under the cloud, passed through the sea, were fed with manna for forty years, and drank of the spiritual Rock at Rephidim and Kadesh.

Paul divides the peoples of the world in this chapter into three divisions in verse 32, for he tells the Corinthians to " Give none offence, neither to the Jews, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the Church of God." Modern teachers in their ignorance divide the world's inhabitants into two divisions only and omit Israel, the Church of God.

Both Old and New Testaments teach us that the Church of God is His people Israel. Let us turn to Exodus xix, where we read : " Now therefore, if ye will obey My voice indeed, and keep My covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto Me above all people ; for all the earth is Mine ; and ye shall be unto Me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation." Here we see the Kingdom and the Church of God bound together as one, not merely the priests, Levites and the House of Judah, but all the tribes of Israel. God's plan has never been changed in spite of present-day teaching to the contrary. In the last of the Old Testament prophets, Malachi, we read : " For I am the Lord, I change not, therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." Paul, in the New Testament, writing to the Roman Church, says : " For the gifts and calling of God are without repentance " (Rom. xi, 29).

The word Church is not once mentioned in the Old Testament. The words Congregation or Assembly are used instead. In Ex. xii, 3, the Lord spake unto Moses in these words : " Speak ye unto all the congregation of Israel, saying, In the tenth day of this month they shall take to them every man a lamb according to the house of their fathers, a lamb for a house." In Deut. xvi, 8. we read : " Six days thou shalt eat unleavened bread ; and on the seventh day shall be a solemn assembly to the Lord thy God ; thou shalt do no work therein." In Lev. xxiii, 36, it is recorded in regard to the feast of Tabernacles : " On the eighth day shall be an holy convocation unto you, and ye shall offer an offering made by fire unto the Lord ; it is a solemn assembly, and ye shall do no servile work therein." Practical instances of the use of these terms appear also in the Scriptures at the Dedication of Solomon's Temple and also at the Water-gate of Jerusalem when the Jews returned from their captivity and had the Scriptures translated to them in the vulgar tongue.

Stephen, in his defence before the Sanhedrim (Acts vii, 37, 38), said : " This is that Moses, which said unto the children of Israel, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me, him shall ye hear. This is he, that was in the Church in the wilderness." The word here translated Church is the same as the word translated Congregation, or Assembly, in the Old Testament, and consisted of all the tribes of Israel.

Some years ago the Editor of The Covenant People wrote as follows : " The Greek word translated ' Church ' in the Authorised Version is Ekklesia, and means ' Assembly.' It means precisely the same as the Hebrew word translated ' Congregation ' and ' Assembly,' rendered in the Greek Version of the Old Testament sometimes by Ekklesia and sometimes by Synagogê which means literally a ' Gathering-together ' or 'Meeting.' Of course, both in the Hebrew Kahal and its Greek equivalent, Ekklêsia (the letters Kl in each represent the same root identical with our call, and sounded so, or cal, shorter) we cannot escape the idea of representativeness. The whole body politic embraces old and young men, women and children. The representative worshippers are the Kahal or Ekklêsia—those called or called out for this purpose."

Paul, when writing to the Hebrews in the twelfth chapter, says: "But ye are come unto Mount Sion and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and Church of the firstborn, which are written in heaven." Now God's firstborn is Israel, for we read in Ex. iv, 22, 23: "And thou shalt say unto Pharaoh, Thus saith the Lord, Israel is My son, even My firstborn; and I say unto thee, Let My son go, that he may serve Me; and if thou refuse to let him go, behold, I will slay thy son, even thy firstborn." This name of firstborn is also given to Ephraim, the leading tribe of Israel, for we read in Jer. xxxi, 9, "I am a father to Israel, and Ephraim is My firstborn." Now Jacob had prophesied of Ephraim that "his seed shall become a multitude (margin fulness) of nations." Everyone must acknowledge that this has been marvellously fulfilled by the British nation, the Covenant people, the Church of the firstborn, the Church of God, the Church of this nation. Dean Farrar declared: "The Church and State were merely the people of England, fearing God and working righteousness." In other words "a nation bringing forth the fruits" of the Kingdom of God. The historian Freeman, speaking of England, says: "A land where the Church and Nation were but different names for the same community." The Church of England is essentially the National Church. In its liturgy and prayers it embraces every member of the nation. They are all referred to and included as the people for whom its prayers and supplications are offered to the Most High. Every man, woman and child in the Kingdom has a right to its ministrations, and is entitled to the benefit of its spiritual comfort.

The New Testament Scripture tells us—contrasting Israel when entering the conditional Covenant at Horeb with Israel entering the unconditional Covenant in Christ—"But ye are come unto Mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels." Let us compare this with Rev. xxi, 10, 11, 12: "And he carried me away in the spirit to a great and high mountain, and shewed me that great city, the holy Jerusalem, descending out of heaven from God, having the glory of God: and her light was like unto a stone most precious, even like a jasper stone, clear as crystal. And had a wall great and high, and had twelve gates, and at the gates twelve angels, and names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel." This can only surely refer to "the general assembly and Church of the firstborn, which are written in heaven," who are to dwell for ever in that "great city, the holy Jerusalem," which is to come down from heaven! What right has any man living to say that the Firstborn is any other than the people upon whom God has put that title? Upon the authority of Moses and Jeremiah the Holy Spirit tells us that Ephraim-Israel is My Firstborn! Therefore, the Assembly and Church of the Firstborn can be none other than the re-gathered Nation and Congregation of that same Ephraim—the firstborn of God—who have accepted Christ! That the names on the gates of the New Jerusalem descending out of heaven from God are the names of the twelve tribes of Israel is fully confirmed in the Old Testament by the prophet Ezekiel in his last chapter, verses 31 to 35, which begin: "And the gates of the city shall be after the names of the tribes of Israel" and finish with these words, "the name of the city from that day shall be The Lord is there."

It may appear from the teaching of British-Israelites that the rest of the world who are not racially descended from Jacob are excluded from the Church of God, from the Assembly and Church of the Firstborn, but this is not so. The late Douglas A. Onslow says in his book, "The Kingdom of the Lord": "If the whole of the arguments be carefully studied, it will be seen that the main contention is that there has been no change in the Lord's plans, which were irrevocably laid down from the beginning. No alleged 'spiritual seed' of Abraham either has taken, or could possibly take, the place of Abraham's direct lineal descendants in the Almighty's favour. It does not follow, as a necessary consequence, that because the Jewish portion of Israel rejected Christ, therefore the non-Israelite Gentile was brought in to take all Israel's place. This is—most assuredly—not the teaching of Paul to the Romans in that famous and most exhausting Epistle. On the contrary, he most distinctly repudiates any such idea. 'God hath not cast away His people whom He foreknew' is his most emphatic declaration. But he as emphatically tells those Romans—addressing the non-Israelite Gentile portion of them, whom he calls 'wild olive' grafts—that they have been grafted on to the good olive-tree (of Israel) in the place of the natural Jewish branches who had been broken off because of their unbelief in Christ. He further tells them that this grace had been extended to them on account of their faith. But he warns them that unless they continue steadfast in that faith, they also shall be cut off; and that a time shall come when the natural broken-off (Jewish) branches will again be grafted on to their own good olive-tree.

"Now, seeing that the Jews never were on the 'Gentile Church' tree—which seems to be the 'good olive' of the Gentile Church supporters—it is quite evident, without argument, that the Jews never were broken off this mythical tree. The only tree they could possibly have been broken off was their own tree of Israel; their own natural stem, or trunk; which stem, if not Jewish, must of necessity be the other portion of Israel, the redeemed House of Israel. Paul's argument, which he addressed to his Christian converts in his Epistle to the Romans, applies with equal force to every race outside of the natural lineal descendants of Jacob. They all can be grafted on to that Israelite trunk, through faith in Christ; for this Gospel of the kingdom of God and of His salvation is open to all the world independent of race." Why then do the clergy and ministers of our land teach us that the Church of God is purely Gentile when anyone acquainted with horticulture must know that a wild graft remains a wild graft, although it partakes of the fatness of a good tree, and no amount of grafting-in will change the nature of the root or stem of a tree; it remains just what it was before? We therefore come to the conclusion that "the Holy Church throughout all the world" is the Church of Ephraim-Israel, God's firstborn, which continues the visible Church of God, in unbroken continuity, to this day.

FRANCE and BRITAIN are being drawn closer together with the approaching of the midnight hour. What are the ties which bind these peoples together? Are they purely ties based upon material considerations, common economic interests, ambitions, political aspirations? Or can it be some fundamental—invisible though none the less real—spiritual unity which compels the Tricolour to fly so bravely side by side with the Red, White and Blue standard of the KINGDOM?

A partial answer is suggested by Mr. Amery (Secretary of State for Colonies and Dominions), who in a recent speech strikingly exemplifies the similarity in ideal animating both nations in their common work of Colonial administration, at the same time pointing out the clear distinction in methods respectively pursued.

Speaking as the guest of the Union Coloniale in PARIS, Mr. Amery said:—"We are here as colleagues—I might almost say en famille! It is a happy innovation to bring together those who, on both sides of the Channel, are concerned with Colonial Administration, with the fine task of leading native populations, for their own good,[1] wisely and prudently along the line of progress.

"Not only the directors, but the pioneers of our civilisation—men to whom the honour of the flag is entrusted—will be able to exchange with profit closely related ideas, to support in common the and human brotherhood, to show that in the great domain of Colonial development we desire to co-operate.

"This desire extends over the whole of the field of our complex and intimate relations, as was shown by the (recent) happy meeting of our two Fleets at SPITHEAD.

"The work of the future must be one of peace and creation.[3] Each of our Empires, like the GAUL of JULIUS CÆSAR can be considered in three parts. The first task of FRANCE is the re-conquest for Latin Civilisation of the rich and beautiful lands which form the southern coast of the MEDITERRANEAN. Here France is engaged in the resuscitation of the history and method of Rome.

"Our task is different. We have inherited not the Roman method, but that passionate impulse to expand which launched the keels of the Saxons, the Danes, the Normans, upon the quests which led to the foundation of our first oversea colony—ENGLAND.

"A thousand years passed; the instinct of adventure stirred and rose; and since that time there have sprung up all over the world young nations, dowered with the English political tradition, speaking the English tongue.

"One, the greatest in population and in present riches, has long since severed itself from us; others have remained and will always remain united to us and to each other.

"In our time we have seen the birth, or re-birth, of many new States in Europe, but the entry of the British Dominions—by peaceful evolution within the Empire—upon the fulness of national[4] life was an historic event more important and more memorable than all these.

"In practice, our political cohesion is preserved by all that structure of traditions, of ideas, of common interests, whose foundation is the Imperial Throne,[5] of our unity.

"Though the conditions in the first category are very different for our two countries (i.e., Britain and France) the resemblance was closer in the second category, that of our INDIAN EMPIRE.

"Here we each have to deal with an ancient civilisation; more ancient than that of ROME. We are faced by a culture on which European influences can secure no hold. We can not change the souls[6] of peoples; we can only act as organisers.

"In the third category, the Colonial Empire proper, and particularly the CONTINENT of AFRICA, the domain of FRANCE is greater perhaps than ours.

"On the soil of AFRICA we have to direct the onward march of two European civilisations, and consummate the fruitful union of the tropical and temperate zones."

Now if modern FRANCE be representative of ancient SYRIA her work in the world along parallel lines to that of the KINGDOM can be appreciated in fuller significance. For Laban was a Syrian and intimately related to the Abrahamic peoples. Furthermore an entente cordiale between EPHRAIM and SYRIA[7] is recorded as far back as seven centuries before CHRIST! Although this particular confederation was not a particularly fortunate one, and came to a deservedly disastrous end.

Of all Latin (sic) Peoples in EUROPE the French are the most akin to the British in character and sentiment. And this fundamental unity probably has a surer foundation in blood kinship than most ethnologists would be prepared to admit.

We still speak of "Gaul" and "Gallic temperament" when referring to modern FRANCE, and these terms, by their very survival, show how intimate must have been the social contact and profound the influence of the Israel Peoples upon this country.

The NORMANS descending upon France from SCANDINAVIA left their mark. The BRETONS[8] in the south have exercised

[1] and [2] We seem to hear an echo of Deut. vi, 24, here:—"The Lord commanded us to do all these statutes, to fear the Lord our God, for our good always..." Or as the French render the latter words, "afin que nous fusions toujours heureux!" The Law was given in order that we might be happy. Obedience to the Law of God is both the guarantee and secret of happiness! A wonderful doctrine this.

The line of progress along which the native races of the world are being led is that of Local Law, Civil or Roman Law, Common Law, and, finally, the Divine Law. How closely are Religion and Law, Government and Faith, related? And the end and purpose of both is human happiness.

The Lord Chief Justice recently confirmed this view when he said:—"The administration of justice is of greater importance to a people than anything else, and it is confidence in the administration of justice which, beyond anything else, makes a people happy and contented." He meant, of course, "anything else" in the way of Government machinery. The administration of Justice throughout Anglo-Saxondom depends and is based upon the Divine Law.

[3] By virtue of national redemption the Brith-ish People have become co-workers together with God. Their task in the Kingdom consists in works of peace and creation.

an influence of distinctly Brith-ish flavour. But in France's mandate over Syria in ASIA MINOR and her stand with BRITAIN during the last great struggle, against the "Assyrian,"[9] we discern further confirmation of the continued activity along the lines of racial destiny, of those ancient inseparables, SYRIA and EPHRAIM.

With the defection of the Israel peoples the task of holding together the threads of civilisation, of law and order, passed temporarily into the hands of the Babylonian succession of GENTILE WORLD EMPIRES.

With the passing of the Roman, last of the Gentile Empires, Britain arose, and from her ISLES in the WEST, spread abroad, to every corner of the earth, those principles of Law and Government that have been her glory.[10]

FRANCE cannot share in this task of building up new Brith-ains—

LANDS OF THE COVENANT—

Overseas, for this is a work of Kingdom-administration and peculiarly a Brith-ish undertaking. It is a work entrusted to the Anglo-Saxon seed of Abraham alone.

But France has been allotted the privilege of exercising an influence over countries, which, at present remain beyond the boundaries of the KINGDOM, and building up in them a form of civilisation which will prepare them gradually for the great destiny which must surely be theirs.

Should France be the first of the EUROPEAN GREAT POWERS to adopt the COMMON LAW in place of CIVIL or ROMAN LAW another great stride along the path of progress will have been made. This move is becoming daily more imminent owing to pressure of political events. France is being forced to choose between the strengthening of alliance with progressive Brith-ish civilisation or an abandonment of this connection for a close identification with neo-Roman expansionist ambitions.

Thus Signor Mussolini's statement regarding the necessity for forming a great Latin bloc is discussed in the Echi e Commenti: "A widespread ENGLISH social-political literature base themselves on the premise of an undiscussable and absolute political and spiritual predominance of the ANGLO-SAXONS. The Anglo-Saxon bloc may be counterbalanced by the LATIN bloc in Europe and by the LATIN population of the whole of SOUTH AMERICA.

"ANGLO-SAXON civilisation cannot be considered as superior civilisation for two reasons: because the Protestant mentality is narrower than the Latin mentality, and because the Anglo-Saxon civilisation is eminently nationalistic."

The writer concludes that "if Anglo-Saxon civilisation should definitely triumph in the world this would mark a monstrous danger of a return to barbarism," and he invokes "an alliance between ROME and PARIS to save[11] the world from this danger."

There is little likelihood of PARIS heeding this call, unless by an unexpected turn at the Elections the REPUBLIC were overturned and the restoration of a French monarchy pave the way for France's inclusion in that "Catholic renascence which is being prepared throughout the world."[12]

The extraordinary extension of Anglo-Saxon or "Seed of Isaac" influence must seem rather irksome to neo-Romans flushed with the prospect of a revival of past splendours. But the past is gone, and the future belongs to the children of the KINGDOM. Co-operation would be welcomed. But an identification with a Catholic renascence would make co-operation impossible.

May the Protestant revival in BRITAIN flow to every corner of the EMPIRE and also strengthen our Gallic Ally, that we may stand fast and unshakable together in the stirring days which lie before us.

THE TWO CLERGYMEN—A B.-I. STORY.

BY HENRY D. HOUGHTON.

QUITE recently, after lecturing in the Midlands, I was entertained as usual at the very hospitable home of one of the keenest British-Israelites it is my privilege to know.

Chatting merrily after supper my host suddenly said to me, "Did I ever tell you about my tackling the two clergymen in the train?"

"No," I replied. "Tell me now."

So he began his very interesting story. "As I am a commercial I travel a great deal, and one of my journeys is to South Wales.

"On one of my periodical journeys I was waiting on Gloucester station platform for the train to take me on towards Cardiff when I saw two Evangelical clergymen of the Church of England on the platform evidently waiting to go forward by the same train.

"Now I greatly enjoy a friendly chat with any clergyman, or any Nonconformist minister whom it is my privilege to meet. So naturally I was longing to see them get into a compartment that I might join them; but they dallied so long that I thought it best to get in without them. Choosing an empty carriage, I was soon joined by a young man who took his place at the opposite end of the compartment.

"We were near starting-time when, to my delight, the two clergymen opened the door and sat down directly opposite. They, however, to my great disappointment, began to work out a crossword puzzle.

"However it did not occupy them very long.

"In the meantime the train had approached the beautiful

[9] Cp. Dr. Schwaner's declaration regarding Germany during the war, reported page 694, N.M. & B., 29.10.27.

[10] Speaking in the United States recently Lord Hewart said:—"We have a bond of union in the heritage of the Common Law, one of the two great systems of Law which are the basis of the Law of the whole Civilised World, the system of Law which has been called the Glory of the English-speaking Peoples." The people with this Law are the people of the Kingdom, the King of which (as Author of that Law) is known as the "Glory" of His People. See Luke ii, 32.

The King and the Law constitute the glory of God's People. To the Gentiles they are a Light.

[11] This plea that Italy and France should join to "save the world" from the spread of Anglo-Saxon (Seed of Isaac) influence forms a contrast to the appeal of President Doumergue, that Britain and France should "unite to save the world from fearful conflict." This is the appointed rôle of the Kingdom. The people of Brith-ain (Land of the Covenant), servants of the King Who, in the spiritual realm, died to save the world, are thus called upon (by acting in the political realm) to save the world from self-destruction through War.

[12] The Critica Fascista (official Fascist Organ) recently stated that the Fascist phenomenon might be interpreted as "a sign of the Catholic renascence that is being prepared throughout the world."

part of the River Severn where it opens out into the Bristol Channel, and on this particular day it was indeed a lovely sight.

"My companion opposite was evidently greatly impressed, for he looked across at me with the remark, 'What a beautiful view,' and then added further, 'Don't you think we are a favoured people?'

"Fancy this spoken to a British-Israelite! What an opening! Well, my chance had come, and I was not loth to avail myself of it.

"So I answered, 'Yes, indeed I do. But it is all ordained; and we may know that it is so if we know where to look for it.'

"Then very earnestly he asked: 'What do you mean?'

"To which I answered, 'It is all in your Book. If you have it with you and will turn to 2 Samuel vii, 10, you will find it all foretold and arranged for long years ago.'

"Moreover I will appoint a place for my people Israel, and will plant them, that they may dwell in a place of their own and move no more; neither shall the children of wickedness afflict them any more as beforetime."

"He appeared considerably surprised that a commercial with his bags should address such words to them, for by this time the other clergyman had become interested in the conversation.

"Then came the direct question: 'Do you think that we are Israel?'

"To that I replied: 'I don't think, I am quite certain of it.'

"He then asked me, 'On what grounds do you base your certainty?'

"Then I made reply, and said to the one opposite who was doing all the talking, 'Will you answer me three questions?'

"He answered, 'Yes, certainly.'

"'Then,' I replied, 'here is the first.'

"'Can you point out to me a nation on the earth which lends to any and every nation, and borrows from none?'

"He hesitated, and at length said, 'No, unless it is the British Nation.'

"To which I replied, 'Correct.'

"Then he bethought himself, and said, 'Ah, but what about America? We have borrowed from them!'

"'What,' I answered, 'have you never read about the sailing of the Mayflower? Have you never heard of the Pilgrim Fathers? Have you never read of them sailing from Plymouth Sound and what came of it? Has there ever been a foreigner as President of America?'

"Here his brother clergyman spoke for the first time, and said, 'Hello, George, he has got you there!'

"Then at some length I explained why old Jacob crossed his hands as he lay a-dying when blessing the two sons of Joseph.

"The second clergyman then broke in, 'I never could get an explanation of that, and it has puzzled me for years.'

"'Well,' said the first one, 'what is your next question?'

"'Here it is,' I answered. 'Can you point out to me a nation that possesses all the strategical points on the face of the earth?'

"To this he replied, 'No, I cannot, unless it is the British Race.'

"To this I answered, 'Right ho, you have it.'

"He then added, 'Of course there is one not in our possession, Panama, but you have me again with your American answer.'

"Here I pointed out to him how that this was included in the great blessing bestowed on Abraham by God's sworn oath at the offering up of his son Isaac.

"'By Myself have I sworn saith the Lord, for because thou hast done this thing . . . . I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore: and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies.'—Gen. xxii, 16, 17.

"He was now extremely interested, and asked for the third question.

"I answered, 'Both you and I sang in church yesterday (this was a Monday) "There is none that fighteth for us but Thou, O God." Now can you name a war which we have lost since the year 1066 when William the Conqueror came with the last of the Tribes to settle in these Islands, and consolidated God's nation Israel?'

"He answered, 'Only one that I know of; but you meet me with your answer again if I refer to the war of American Independence.'

"His fellow clergyman seemed to enjoy his friend's perplexity, for he joined in again with the remark, 'He has got you again, George.'

"Both of them then began to ask more about our great subject, and so I explained it all as best I could in the short time at my disposal.

"Just then we arrived at Newport, where we all three alighted. They then warmly shook my hand, declaring that a new light had been thrown on the Holy Book, and thanking me for the most profitable hour they had ever spent, and asking me if I had anything by which they could learn any more of the matter. I handed them both some pamphlets I had in my pocket and they passed from my sight, but not from my memory.

"But that was not all, for the young man whom none o us had noticed in the far corner of the carriage, and who was going further on, came to the window as I was leaving the platform and called out. I went back to him, and he said, 'Excuse me, sir, will you kindly give me your name and address?'

"'Certainly,' I answered, 'but what for?'

"He replied, 'I would like to know more about the subject of which you have been speaking. I was supposed to be reading my book, but, as a matter of fact, I have not read a word since you began to talk!'

"My name and address were quickly given, and also some literature.

"He also warmly thanked me, and said that it had been the most interesting conversation he had ever listened to. Then I left him, satisfied that I had given three people something to think about."

THE STORY OF A RESURRECTED NATION.

BY THE REV. JOSEPH GAY.

EZEKIEL tells us that he was carried away in the spirit of the Lord and set down in the midst of the valley which was full of bones. He gives us a vivid word picture of that wonderful valley of dry bones. He says, "There were very many in the open valley; and lo, they were very dry." He is viewing the conclusion of a long process of dismemberment and decay. At one time that valley had been filled with a virile host, with a mighty army; but death had finished its work, and that which once was mighty and strong, a combined force irresistible in its combination, had become dismembered bones bleached by the heat of the sun through many intervening years.

Now this vivid word picture is but the expression of a thought which had taken full possession of the mind of Israel and settled down into a fixed belief. "Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel: behold, they say, Our bones are dried up, and our hope is lost; we are clean cut off."

God can do nothing with a hopeless nation. So long as that belief in the hopelessness of their state and condition held sway over the mind of Israel, so long would she be unresponsive to the call of God, though the prophet of the Lord should proclaim it upon the housetop.

But this hopelessness was a very real difficulty which confronted the prophets of Israel. They were very much in the position of Moses when God commanded him from out the burning bush to go down into Egypt and proclaim Israel's deliverance, by the hand of Jehovah, from out the House of Bondage. "Behold they (Israel) will not believe me, not hearken unto my voice: for they will say, The Lord hath not appeared unto thee." A hopeless mind is invariably accompanied with a prayerless heart; and without prayer the soul of man has no avenue open towards God; while one very important approach of God to man is closed.

In the 36th chapter Ezekiel proceeds to show unto Israel God's purpose in their complete restoration and return to their own land. He does not spare them in reference to their sin and transgression, but he foretells a time when God will sanctify Himself in them and through them. "I will sanctify My great Name, which hath been profaned among the heathen, which ye have profaned in the midst of them; and the heathen shall know that I am the Lord, saith the Lord God, when I shall be sanctified in you before their eyes. For I will take you from among the heathen, and gather you out of all the countries, and will bring you into your own land. . . . Then the heathen that are left round about you shall know that I the Lord have builded the ruined places, and planted that which was desolate: I the Lord have spoken it, and I will do it."

But now comes the stumbling-block. Israel must pray for this thing. She must not take it as a matter of course, saying nothing and doing nothing. "For this moreover will I be inquired of by the house of Israel, to do it for them; I will increase them with men like a flock." But Israel saith: "Our bones are dried up, and our hope is lost; we are clean cut off." So long as Israel continues in that attitude of mind Israel will not inquire of the Lord, neither will she pray to the God of her fathers. Ceasing to pray she will cease to aspire, and the mountains of Israel will remain barren and unfruitful. This then is the prophet's task to breathe life, even the life of hope, into his dispirited people. He must somehow or other get them once more, as did their fathers, to believe in their God-appointed destiny. He cannot do it by anything that he himself might say unto them. They will not listen to his voice, nor does he expect them to. He immediately places himself in vital communication with Jehovah; that is to say, he does what he has declared Israel must do, and prays; in answer to his own prayer, he is carried away by the spirit of the Lord and set down in the valley of vision. The message of hope therefore comes direct from Jehovah Himself.

What justification had Israel for her hopelessness? Why should she say, "Our hope is lost"? She had every justification. So patent were the facts that the prophet seemed to be as one that mocked. Ezekiel was a prophet sent to "the Captivity" of Israel. He was one of the priests who went into captivity with King Jehoiachin in the year 597 B.C. He lived through a period of unprecedented public calamity, fraught with momentous consequences for the future. That was true of Judah and also of Israel. Both were scattered; their national life was broken up. Individual Israelites felt themselves as dead men, dragging out an aimless existence without hope in the world. So long as the national life of Israel remained they had something to live for, but now it was cut off, leaving only a mere question of an aimless existence; a sordid struggle for life which they felt was but death in life. Nothing could have illustrated the fact of Israel's hopelessness more than that valley full of dry bones. The prophet had no need to ask whence came these bones into the open valley; nor how came this mighty host into such a perished state? The question with which the prophet was concerned was not retrospective but prospective. "Son of man, CAN THESE BONES LIVE?" The question quickened in the prophet's mind. He throws it back to be answered by God. "O Lord God, Thou knowest." The answer of God is in action, moving towards a resurrection for the hosts of the slain. "Again He said unto me, Prophesy over these bones . . . then He said unto me, Prophesy unto the wind, prophesy, son of man, and say unto the wind . . ."

The agency by which Jehovah will effect His purpose and raise up this mighty army from the dead is the prophetic word. Let us remember this; it is by the prophetic word that God will effect His purposes. God's answer is a command to Ezekiel to prophesy. He must preach the Word of God to these dry bones. It is very clear that the fulfilment of the prophetic word must be twofold unless Israel and Judah be one and the same, which would altogether vitiate the message which follows, under the metaphor of the two sticks. If we have still to differentiate between the House of Israel and the House of Judah, then the prophetic word here must apply to both Israel and Judah. Let us see if that is so. I think we shall be agreed that the dismembered bones, "very dry," sets forth the state and condition of both Israel and Judah at the time Ezekiel wrote. Israel was captive in Assyria —that is to say, in the North—her national life utterly broken and dismembered; Judah was captive in Babylon, down the river Euphrates, her national life also broken and dismembered.

"Again He said unto me, Prophesy upon these bones, and say unto them, O ye dry bones, hear the word of the Lord." "Thus saith the Lord God unto these bones; Behold I will cause breath to enter into you, and ye shall live: And I will lay sinews upon you, and will bring up flesh upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live; and ye shall know that I am the Lord." A new creation surely. Not an unmaking but a remaking. "So I prophesied as I was commanded: and as I prophesied, thee was a noise, and behold a shaking, and the bones came together, bone to his bone. And when I beheld, lo, the sinews and the flesh came up upon them, and the skin covered them above: but there was no breath in them." This was the first stage of a great return.

Now review your knowledge of the way Israel on the one hand, and Judah on the other, came out of their great captivity, their "death in life." Follow once more the great trek of Israel through Europe, and the movement of Judah towards Jerusalem, and you have the first stage of the great return as here set forth.

So far so good. But there is as yet no consciousness in the valley. There is a restored physical form, but there is no conscious life; no knowledge; therefore there is no intention; no definite and fixed purpose. "Then said He unto me, Prophesy unto the breath, prophesy, son of man, and say to the breath, Thus saith the Lord God; come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live."

Is it that we have now come to the "breath" phase of Israel's eventful history? In reading that history one is very forcibly struck with the life which is without knowledge. "Blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in." (A.V.) "A hardening in part hath befallen Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in." (R.V.) (Rom. xi, 25.) Was it that the bone-to-bone period, the sinew period, the flesh and skin period, to speak after the manner of the vision, were all preparatory to that greatest of all periods when the breath of the Almighty should once more come into Israel, giving to her knowledge of her destiny, and a definite and fixed determination to pursue that destiny in full and complete obedience to the Divine will? Be that as it may, one cannot help feeling that we are here in that day when the "fulness of the Gentiles" has come in, and the breath of God, issuing through the prophetic Word, will cause His people to stand up a mighty host to usher in the day of Our Lord's return.

BRANCH ACTIVITIES.

FERNLEY HALL, Manchester, was filled with an earnest gathering, despite most stormy conditions of weather, to hear the Rev. Pascoe Goard on January 23rd, who spoke on the wonderful story of "The Bible and History" along the line of Chronology. The audience, many of whom were religious workers, found a great new territory opened up to them. The chair was ably occupied by Mr. F. O. Booth. On the 24th, the Council Chamber of the Church House was filled for a lecture by Rev. R. G. F. Waddington, M.A., whose outspoken vigour and eloquence well maintained the great impressions of the previous evening.

In the Assembly Rooms at Bath, on Wednesday, January 25th, Mr. G. R. Gair lectured to large audiences at afternoon and evening meetings, the subjects dealing with the Druids and the Celtic Church.

Mr. J. J. Morey lectured at the Prince's Hall, Richmond, on Tuesday, January 31st. He co-related Lord Allenby's entry into Jerusalem and the recent earthquake there with the Times mentioned in Daniel. He also spoke on what was shortly to be expected, and exhorted his audience to seek the Law of the Lord.

A four days' Mission was conducted by the Rev. T. H. Whitehouse in the Guildhall, Northampton, from Monday to Thursday inclusive, January 30th to February 2nd. The ground is practically virgin soil for British-Israel teaching. Fine reports appeared each day in both local newspapers, and it is almost assured that two new Branches will result. Mr. Everard Turner, of Rugby, rendered invaluable assistance in carrying through the arrangements.

MR. WILLIAM SLEEMAN.

We feel sure our readers will be pleased to see the portrait of Mr. William Sleeman, the genial and efficient Secretary of the Covenant Publishing Co., Ltd. The callers at Headquarters—and they are many—have personal knowledge of Mr. Sleeman's urbanity. His correspondents—and they are more—have experience of his helpfulness in various directions. Mr. Sleeman was appointed Secretary of the C.P. Co. when it was established a little over six years ago. The achievements of the Company have been truly remarkable. It is doubtful whether in some respects they have been surpassed by any other religious Publishing Company in the time. The Board of Directors and the Secretary may well be congratulated and heartily thanked by all who are interested in the spread of B.-I. teaching.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

WE have very encouraging news of the mission held by the Rev. Pascoe Goard and Mr. John Leech in Belfast last week; the audiences numbered from four to five hundred in the afternoons and fourteen to sixteen hundred each evening. That section of the public of Belfast keenly interested in the inspiration and authority of Holy Writ seems to have identified itself ardently with these meetings. We shall hope to have a more detailed report from our Belfast friends later on.

It was a bitter disappointment to Mr. Garrison that he was unable to fulfil his engagements to lecture in the Grosvenor Hall, Belfast, on February 13th and 14th. He caught a severe cold while filling lecture engagements in the North of England, and this developed bronchial trouble, so that the doctor absolutely forbade him going to Belfast.

The regular weekly meetings will be held at Headquarters on Wednesday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, and Thursday evening at 7.30.

The speakers at Headquarters on February 8th and 9th were Captain C. W. Haywood and the Rev. J. Lumley Davies. On February 15th and 16th Miss E. P. Alexander and Captain A. Morrell addressed the meetings.

Spacious rooms on the first floor, with a cosy fire, are ready for our Members, Associates and their friends, to make use of for Rest, Reading and Teas at our Headquarters.

Teas of the best quality provided for 9d. and 1s. from 4 to 5.30 each afternoon (except Saturday and Sunday).

The third monthly meetings at Tunbridge Wells were held, as usual, in the Crabb Memorial Institute on Tuesday, February 7th. Mr. John Morey has conducted each of the meetings, and has been assisted by Dr. Mountain and Mr. P. W. Thompson. Mr. Morey has won golden opinions by his clear and able advocacy of British-Israel Truth. The attendances have been excellent. Two meetings have been held on each visit. The chairmen on the recent occasion were Mr. Henry Elwig, J.P., and Mr. Alderman Caley, J.P.

Under the guidance of Mr. W. Sleeman, men will find the Elementary Bible Study Class, held at Headquarters on Tuesdays at 6 p.m., wonderfully helpful. The numbers at the first two have been most promising for a very successful development.

We are very grateful for the response so far to our appeals in regard to the special campaign for increasing the circulation of this journal, and for the Forward Movement. We hope or the continued help of our friends in these special efforts.

Readers will have seen the announcement of the new edition of "The Origin of the English" in our columns. This is a very attractive book of 278 pages, with an appendix and a good index, well printed and bound in cloth. Price 4s. 6d., by post 5s.

"Shouldest thou not have had compassion on thy fellow-servant even as I also had pity on thee!"

DO YOU WHO CLAIM TO BE CHRISTIANS and who read this, realise the principle upon which experiments on animals are founded and justified?

It is the evil principle that Might is Right!

The lower animals cannot defend themselves against man's superior intelligence: they cannot speak to protest: they are weak because inferior. Therefore, because we of the human race are strong because superior, we are free to use these feeble-fellow-creatures for any purpose, however cruel, however unjust! Is this the principle upon which Almighty God has dealt with men?

Sir W. F. Stoker (late Inspector of Vivisection in Ireland) actually admitted: "The amount of terror a dog feels even in being chloroformed is rather painful to witness . . . Experiments on dogs ought to be allowed only with the greatest possible reserve because they feel so much!"

Should not Christian people refuse to accept benefits that can only be purchased through the "terror" and suffering of a defenceless creature! Should they not rather

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

THE LAW OF THE LORD, OR THE COMMON LAW.—VII.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

DIGEST OF THE CONSTITUTION.

WE have seen the formation of the nation, in Exodus.

We have seen the organisation of the nation's worship; and the establishment of the Aaronic Priesthood to carry it on, in Leviticus.

We have seen the national organisation in the Book of Numbers. The appointment of the House of Elders, or Lords; and the appointment of the Levitical Priesthood; to carry forward the national affairs.

We now turn to the digest of the Common Law in the Book of Deuteronomy.

THE OCCASION.

The occasion of the giving of this digest of the Law was at the end of the forty year period of organisation, instruction and training, and on the eve of the new order of things as they were about to enter the land and undertake their duties therein.

The period of organisation and training had passed away. Forty years approximately had now been spent in the wilderness. The generation whose early impressions were those of a subordinate race, subject to overlordship, had passed away. The direct memories of Egypt, and all that was connected with it, had died with them. The generation now to carry forward the work of Israel under new conditions of freedom and national responsibility had been born to the free life of the wilderness. As the people of the British Empire know, there is nothing which renews the life, and which renews the blood of the race, like the freedom of the open spaces and the direct, independent contact with nature. Where the city bred would see barrenness and desolation, and would perish because he saw nothing with which to sustain life, the youth born to the conditions of the wilderness would find a land of delightful activities and of plenty. Perhaps one might give an illustration of this from modern life.

The scene lies in Canada at the junction of the vast Albertan Plains with the Rocky Mountains. The occasion was the building of the Crow's Nest Railway through the wilderness. Half of the three or four hundred miles was built on the plains and in the foothills. Half the line was built in the passes of the mountains. Everything had to be brought, and everything had to be done. It is not like building a railway in an old and well-settled community in an organised country.

Towns, villages, camps, stations, mills, R.R. yards, roundhouses, shops, storehouses, and so on, had to be constructed. "Toteroads," that is to say, wagon roads, and temporary bridges, had to be rushed ahead. Then began the making of the gradient, the bringing of the "ties" or sleepers, the laying of the sleepers, and of the rails. Every trade was represented, and some of the professions; such as medical and clerical. Shopkeepers, boarding-house keepers, carpenters, blacksmiths, masons, teamsters, pick-and-shovel men, graders, layers of ties, layers of steel, and so on, and so on. The men came, an army of them, from the settlements and cities of the east.

The men came, an army of them, from the settlements and cities of the east.

They were shepherded and provided for at every turn, after a fashion. If they were not well fed they had no recourse but to grumble. They were in the wilderness where, for them, there was nothing but what was imported and provided.

Then came the end of the work, and the paying off of that army of men. As soon as they had their pay envelope in hand, they rushed to catch the first train out of the country, which they feared as an inhospitable desert. Ill was it for that man who spent his money in drink, and could not pay his railway fare out of the country. Such were terrorised by the desolation, and fled, by stealing rides on goods trains, or on foot. They were a retreating army ; baffled and terror-stricken they went, by day and by night.

Being at the city which lay at the eastern end of the new line, my house was besieged by them, and much of my year's earnings went in feeding starving men, fleeing from the wilderness.

As they went out they met an army thronging into the country as into a veritable land of promise. Those coming were little better off, many of them no better off, than were those who fled the country. But they were born in the wilderness, or had been trained in it. To them it was a land of rich promise, and of present kindliness. On the prairie and in the forest alike they saw the material out of which to construct their homes. On the plains and in the rivers they saw the means of sustenance. There were fish in the rivers and lakes. There was game on the plains and in the lakelets, in the form of game birds of the land and waterfowl. There were deer in the forest, and antelope on the plains. There was a wealth of berries to be gathered in season. The turf would make a good home on the plains and the logs in the forest. The soil would yield quickly a crop of roots and of grain, and, the beginnings over, there was great promise of a rich and prosperous estate, to be personally owned by grace of a grant from the Crown of half-a-mile square of land, which could be added to by purchase, with unlimited time to pay out of crops yet to come. That army, which we saw come in, are now wealthy landowners and farmers. The crowd who ran away are still at their trades, earning a scanty living in the cities, or are struggling with the problem of a not wealthy old age, or have passed away.

Thus the people which came from Egypt had to be shepherded and cared for of God. They were fed with manna in the wilderness. But now the new generation had come, who would know how to reap their livelihood from the soil, alike from plain or mountain, from open field or forest. They were born God's free men, trained in His worship, organised for service, " learned in the law."

So the occasion was the coming of age, and into its own inheritance, of the wilderness-born generation. The manna was now to cease, and the land must be made to sustain the people. They were to go in and take possession of the land " Crown granted " of God to their fathers as an everlasting inheritance.

They had been trained in the law from their birth in the wilderness. This had been their system of education, and God Himself had been the Principal of their University. Now they were to put the established law into practice. Therefore there was given to them this handbook of constitutional law.

" These be the words which Moses spake unto all Israel on this side Jordan in the wilderness, in the plain over against the Red Sea, between Paran, and Tophel, and Laban, and Hazeroth, and Dizahab.

And it came to pass in the fortieth year, in the eleventh month, on the first day of the month, that Moses spake unto the children of Israel, according unto all that the Lord had given him in commandment unto them ;

. . . . . .

On this side Jordan, in the land of Moab, began Moses to declare this law, saying,

The Lord our God spake unto us in Horeb, saying, Ye have dwelt long enough in this mount :

Turn you and take your journey, and go to the mount of the Amorites, and unto all the places nigh thereunto, in the plain, in the hills, and in the vale, and in the south, and by the sea side, to the land of the Canaanites, and unto Lebanon, unto the great river, the river Euphrates.

Behold, I have set the land before you : go in and possess the land which the Lord sware unto your fathers, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to give unto them and to their seed after them.

And I spake unto you at that time, saying, I am not able to bear you myself alone :

The Lord your God hath multiplied you, and, behold, ye are this day as the stars of heaven for multitude.

(The Lord God of your fathers make you a thousand times so many more as ye are, and bless you, as he hath promised you !)

How can I myself alone bear your cumbrance, and your burden, and your strife ?

Take you wise men, and understanding, and known among your tribes, and I will make them rulers over you.

And ye answered me, and said, The thing which thou hast spoken is good for us to do.

So I took the chief of your tribes, wise men, and known, and made them heads over you, captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, and captains over fifties, and captains over tens, and officers among your tribes.

And I charged your judges at that time, saying, Hear the causes between your brethren, and judge righteously between every man and his brother, and the stranger that is with him.

Ye shall not respect persons in judgment ; but ye shall hear the small as well as the great ; ye shall not be afraid of the face of man ; for the judgment is God's : and the cause that is too hard for you, bring it unto me, and I will hear it.

And I commanded you at that time all the things which ye should do." (Deut. i, 1-18.)

We have a retrospect of the forty years in the wilderness from the standpoint of the law. It graphically shows how a whole people lost their opportunity by first failing to trust the Lord and go to the war when commanded, then by refusing to obey the Lord and refrain from going to the war ; and so they fought a useless battle, suffered defeat, and turned away from the Promised Land, to wander in the wilderness until death relieved them of their doom.

This is written in letters of fire in the beginning of our national history that we might learn to trust; and that we might learn to obey; and, in so doing, that we might LIVE. What an illustration of the Divine administration of the eternal law of righteousness. What an illustration of the demonstration of the unfitness of a whole generation to advance in the appointed path to glory, and to victory, in the highest plane, namely, in the plane of faith and obedience.

So the whole generation turned from the borders of their inheritance, with Moses, to die in the wilderness. Their children could not take up the march to victory until that unfit generation was dead, and so safely out of the way. Now the time of waiting was ended, the time to move forward had come. A new generation was advancing to take up the task in which their fathers failed.

They were not to meddle with their kindred nations, Edom, Moab and Ammon, as they moved forward.

COMMENCEMENT OF THE WAR.

There are many not fully informed scholars who condemn the Palestinian campaign because of the destruction of peoples of the land. Let us take one glimpse, and get a medical man to lend his knowledge. Israel came into contact with one branch of the people of the land and the men were enticed by the free love conditions prevailing in connection with idolatrous worship. The result was that twenty-three thousand men died in one day. Many would-be "interpreters" have charged "the God of the Old Testament" with this destruction of life. But, on the contrary, the plague was self-induced, and "the God of the Old Testament" miraculously put an end to the plague.

This historic experience shows the physiological condition of the wretched peoples of the land, and why they should be cut off. In reading the Scriptures carefully we are of the opinion that when a race becomes wholly infected with that class of disease, mentally and physically, God cuts them off in mercy. Witness the antediluvian world, which was wholly corrupted before God. Witness the Cities of the Plain. Witness the Canaanites, and so forth. At best such a race is proceeding to death, lingering and horrible. The whole generation was born to suffering and to final extinction. Wholesale death in such a case is God's anæsthetic to ameliorate the pangs of death. We have witnessed the passing of a people dying of mixed and corrupted blood. It is tragic in the extreme.

The sword of Joshua was used evidently to impress upon the Israel race the terrible nature of the sanctions of the physiological and psychological laws which had been universally violated by the Canaanites. "The iniquity of the Amorites" was full indeed.

THE COMMUNIST IS TO-DAY LETTING THE SAME REVOLTING CONDITION LOOSE UPON THE WORLD.

Moses prayed to enter the land. He was permitted to see, but not to enter it. He proceeded to voice an exhortation to Israel to keep the law. May God grant Israel-Britain wisdom to take this to heart as her message for this day.

"For the Lord thy God is a consuming fire, even a jealous God."

THE NEARER VIEW.

BY DR. GORNOLD.

IT has been well said that the test of Truth is harmony. When evidences from two witnesses hang together and mutually confirm one another, they are accepted as true. In the Platonic Trilogy of the Good, the Beautiful and the True, the single test is harmony. I propose therefore to demonstrate that which has all the appearance of truth when judged by this standard, from the mouths of two witnesses; Mr. D. Davidson who speaks to us from the plan of the Great Pyramid, and myself from the astronomical standpoint. My theme is the approaching Tribulation of Jacob and the Time of the End.

In correspondence with Mr. Davidson recently I pointed out to him that there would probably be need for some revision of the date 29th-30th May as defining the entry upon the last Low Passage, my reason being that there were no adequate celestial indications of a crisis at the end of May. The earliest critical period fell in August, and the last week of that month more especially, as will appear in the course of this statement. I was agreeably surprised and considerably informed by a subsequent statement by Mr. Davidson to the effect that during the summer of 1927 he had worked out the depth of the Four Grooves which stand as a symbol over the entrance to the second Low Passage, and found them to be "equal to half the width of the pilaster," according to Petrie's measurements. He further made the luminous suggestion that these grooves symbolised the withdrawal of the Spiritual Forces of Intervention which have been in operation since 1918. From these measurements Mr. Davidson came to the conclusion that this withdrawal is completed on the 23rd August, 1928. This is within a week of the date of my dating of the celestial climacteric of 29th August. A fine isometric projection of the Grooves and of the whole of the Horizontal Passage from the Great Step to the entrance to the last Low Passage is given in "The Great Pyramid," p. 280, Plate LVII, to which my readers are referred. From the dating of 23rd August, it would appear that the depth of the Groove is 2.8 inches.

Let us now see how this works out in connection with the known values of the reconstructed Pyramid features. The first Low Passage is close to 52 inches, and is equal to 1,560 circular days, extending from 4th August, 1914, to 11th November, 1918. The second Low Passage will therefore be 101 inches, agreeably to the symbolism of the 153 great fish which were brought up on the right side of the ship at the end of a long and arduous but unproductive day, the 52 and 101 inches making 153. It is the interregnum of the Antechamber period, denoted by 116.26 inches, which supplies the key to the situation, since it gives us the end of the Great War period and the beginning of the Tribulation period, and is indicative of that Power of the Spirit to which St. Paul refers in his cryptic Epistle to the Thessalonians. Let me quote here for reference. "Let no man deceive you by any means, for that day shall not come except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition; Who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, shewing himself that he is God . . . And now ye know what withholdeth that he might be revealed in his time. For the mystery of iniquity doth already work; only he who now letteth will let until he be taken out of the way. And then shall that wicked be revealed whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of His mouth and shall destroy with the brightness of His coming." Reflect that all war is of Satanic origin, and with such other weapons as earthquakes, floods, droughts, famines, pestilences, etc., the Arch-enemy seeks to destroy the Kingdom of Christ on earth, and yet that these machinations of the Prince of the Powers of the Air are continually turned against him. It is well to remind ourselves that some things happen by Divine Will, and others by Divine permission only. The Great War would have continued until the contending Powers were physically and financially depleted, but for the restraining Hand of Him Who alone is able to say, "Thus far, but no further." That Hand has been at work ever since, restraining the Powers of the Air from inciting to further desolations, and the Antechamber of the Pyramid reveals that intervention. The Hand is there.

The thumb, which is Haniel (the glory of God) rests between the first Low Passage and the Granite Leaf, and is of the measure of a cubit. The index finger (Zadok), on which rests the Ring of the Priestly Office, covers the extent of the Granite Leaf, a measure of 16¼ inches. There is an interval of about 3.9 inches represented by a pilaster, and then another groove for the second finger (Jophat), which is about 21½ inches. Another pilaster, and then a groove for the third finger (Michael), which extends equally for 21½ inches. Another pilaster, and then a groove for the fourth finger (Raphah), also of 21½ inches, the Hand thus terminating at the entrance to the last Low Passage, dated 29th May, 1928, the whole extent of the Hand being 116.26 inches, which is the diameter of the year-circle at an inch to a day. The included period is 3487.8 days, which is exactly the number of years from the Exodus date to the Adamic year 6000, or A.D. 2001. We hear again those wondrous words: "I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do"! The six great days of labour will then have finished. The Sabbath will remain. Now let us look at the covert agreement that exists between these measures and the actual days involved by (a) the Great War, and (b) the Tribulation. Represented as they are by the two Low Passages, which together extend for 153 inches, we find them to be equal to 4,590 circular days. But as the extent of the Great War was 1,560 days, the remainder will be 3,030 days. Here we come to the "dividing of time," so frequently referred to in prophetic expositions, and here represented in the Pyramid by the singular feature of two perpendicular stones of equal dimensions set side by side so as to form a single roof to the Passage. We are concerned with the first of these, which may be regarded as forming the South Wall of the Antechamber. Its extent is 50.5 inches, equal to 1,515 days.

And here is the wonderful demonstration of the prophetic significance of these two Low Passage stones, of 52 and 50.5 inches respectively, remembering always that the Antechamber ends in a series of grooves dating to 23rd August, 1928. "That which restraineth" is then wholly withdrawn from our defenceless heads.

The Great War—1914, 3rd August—12th November, 1918.
End of Peace (interregnum 100 days) End of War.

The Tribulation—1928, 23rd August (interregnum of 53 days) 15th October, 1932.

Total of days confirmatory of inches in Passages—153.

It will be more significant, perhaps, when it is learned that the 15th October in the year 1932 will be the Feast of Tabernacles, i.e., the 15th day of the 7th Sacred Month. This Day of Days is referred to in the prophecies as the Day of Remembrance, when all the world shall come up (by representation doubtless) to Zion to worship and to keep the Day of Deliverance in continual commemoration. Severe penalties, we are told, will attend any neglect of this anniversary.

If we count the days from the 23rd August, 1928, to 16th October we shall find them to be 1,515, equal to 50.5 inches. The fact that the limiting dates of the interregnum period exactly coincide with the requirements of the Pyramid seems to establish something more than a coincidence. The Pyramid is one thing, the modern calendar is another. In co-ordinating one with the other we light upon a third factor which exactly answers to one of the episodes of the Gospel narrative. When, further, it is found that this concatenation of signals is in close and even entire agreement with vaticinations made from astronomical pointers by one who has studied astral symbolism for close upon fifty years, it may be allowed that something in the nature of conclusive proof has been afforded.

Scripture history informs us that the Indignation began in −588, and that "seven times" were to pass over Israel before the favour of God was restored. The mark of God's displeasure was the departure of the Shekinah. Those "seven times" will end in 1932. The Glory of the Lord will be upon Zion, but "Elias must first come and restore all things." The astral symbols of the year 1928 are identical with those that witnessed the Fall of the House of Judah, thus completing the subjugation of the Whole House of Israel. The Sun in the sign Leo is the "Lion Rampant," which, in scarlet upon gold, formed the banner of the Royal House. Saturn was in Scorpio, the Dragon sign of death and destruction. In four years Saturn and the Sun were conjoined in the ruling sign of Judah. The Fall of Judah was in −592, four years later was −588, the Indignation. A new epoch emerges in 1928 after a cycle of 2,520 years. Four years later the Indignation will have passed. There is something in the nature of a golden Dawn even now visible through the smoke-cloud of the great devastation.

Referring now to the astronomical pointers we may note that the total eclipse of the Sun visible over part of England on the 29th June, 1927, was first brought into action by the transit of Mars over the line of eclipse on the 28th-29th January, when F.-M. Earl Haig passed suddenly away. After the ill-fated Lord Kitchener, he was doubtless the strongest link we had with the Great War. The second transit of Mars over the line of eclipse will be in October. In 1928 there is an eclipse of the Sun on the 19th May, which has the transit of Mars on the 6th August. This is estimated to give a shock to the markets of the world, and to lead to a state of political blindness which will find a more literal expression at short date thereafter. The most important eclipse this year is that of the Full Moon of 3rd June, the anniversary of H.M. the King. This will have the transit of both Mars and Saturn on the same day, namely, the 29th August. In this fateful month there are no less than four separate transits over eclipse positions. How remote from the world is the expectation of peace may be best judged from the almost frantic efforts that are everywhere being made to secure it, and the equally fevered activity of the world's great arsenals. Great efforts are being made to utilise the political and social power of women in this direction, and with the extended suffrage in view, the position becomes hazardous and even menacing to our national safety. The influence of women must be universally applied if it is to be effective for good in the world. To hinder or embarrass the Government in the matter of our national defences when other nations, such as Italy, openly scout the idea of arbitration by the League of Nations, or others, such as Russia, who are avowedly opposed to its whole policy, seek safety only in naval and aerial equipment. As my title suggests, the nearer we get to the Crisis, the more conspicuous are the evidences of the impending tribulation, to which none will give credence until, as in the days of Noah, the flood comes and sweeps them away.

"THE WISE SHALL UNDERSTAND."

By HENRY D. HOUGHTON.

THERE are many prophecies of the Word of God yet unfulfilled, but which are never mentioned in our churches.

Possibly they are not known, and therefore could not be declared; more probably they are known, but not understood; and in some cases, possibly, not believed.

Yet they are of vital importance to every man, woman and child in the nation, referring as they do to a time immediately before us, and so near, undoubtedly, that a large number of those now living may see and go through the stupendous happenings of those days.

The end of the Age is close upon us; how close we do not know; but that it is close is patent to all who have carefully noted the signs which Our Lord gave us for the very purpose not only of giving us information, but of preventing that terrible alarm and terror which would naturally follow, if taken by surprise.

Certain things in the twelfth chapter of Daniel are not easy to be solved, yet they seem to be of the greatest importance if we are to understand the things which are before us.

That chapter shows many things revealed to the prophet by his heavenly visitant, yet not all which Daniel desires.

In verse eight Daniel cries out, in his anxiety to know, "O My Lord, what shall be the end of these things?"

The enquiry was not answered; but, instead, the angel says, "Go thy way Daniel, for the words are closed up and sealed TILL THE TIME OF THE END."

Now, though the answer was denied to Daniel, yet these words clearly show that a revealing shall come at the time of the end!

The next verse states it most definitely: "Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried; but the wicked shall do wickedly: and none of the wicked shall understand; BUT THE WISE SHALL UNDERSTAND."

Now the words, "the wise," are there put in contrast with "the wicked"; so evidently it does not refer to worldly wisdom, but to Divine wisdom, and indicates a revealing to some who have made a choice of righteousness, and of these it says, "They shall understand."

It has been the fashion of late to deprecate and discourage all attempts to understand the succeeding words of the angel. But most assuredly that condemnation is not from above, for the Book gives to the wise these words of blessing and encouragement in their efforts to solve these dark passages of Scripture: "The wise shall understand."

Let us now ask, "Are the wise trying to understand? Are Christians generally setting themselves out to gain this new wisdom?"

Most assuredly, if they are, they may expect the promise will be made good to them, "The wise shall understand."

But what? What is it that they shall understand? Well, the very next verse gives certain data, and even certain figures, which undoubtedly are meant to be the foundation upon which the wise must come to their understanding.

Verse eleven of this twelfth chapter of Daniel undoubtedly holds a great secret; and, let us be quite clear about it, a great secret which it is the duty as well as the privilege of the wise (Christians) now to understand.

To put it in plain language, THE WISE OUGHT NOW TO UNDERSTAND! TO UNDERSTAND THIS VERY VERSE, ITS DATA, AND ITS FIGURES! Do they?

On the contrary, every attempt to understand it is deprecated, and even flouted.

It is a reproach to us all that this verse is not yet clearly understood. Most assuredly it was meant to be, and will be, for the full time and date of its promised revealing has come.

This is how the verse reads:—

"And from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away, and the abomination that maketh desolate set up, there shall be a thousand two hundred and ninety days."—Dan. xii, 11.

It is a strange verse, yet it ought to be possible to solve its mystery.

The next verse reads:—"Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days."

H. Grattan Guinness says of these two verses: "The remarkable feature about these two closing chronological statements is, that they name no terminal event; the former does not even suggest any; the latter only implies that its close will introduce the era of blessedness."

It has been suggested by some that the 1,335 years referred to the 1,335 lunar years of the Turkish Calendar, expiring A.D. 1917, when the Turks surrendered Jerusalem.

However interesting this may be, it can scarcely be the fulfilment, for neither to the Jews, nor to us, Israel, nor to the world has it brought "the era of blessedness" for which we all eagerly long, and to which the prophet referred.

So then some other solution must be looked for.

But possibly the passage might mean:—"And from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away UNTIL the abomination that maketh desolate is set up, there will be a thousand two hundred and ninety days." But in face of the evidence this is improbable.

Alfred Addis, B.A., a learned Hebrew scholar, of Trinity College, Cambridge, published, in 1830, an Exposition of Prophecy, in which he said: "In Daniel xii, 11, the Hebrew implies not—'FROM the time, etc.,' but simply, 'the TIME that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away and the abomination that maketh desolate, set up, shall be a thousand, two hundred and ninety days."

In that case this 1,290 days would reach down to the appearance or overthrow of the Antichrist.

The point for commencement of the reckoning seems made quite plain by Daniel viii, 11. Speaking of the little horn, which is generally taken to be Mahomedanism it says:—"Which waxed exceeding great, toward the South, and toward the East, and toward the pleasant land . . . . Yea, he magnified himself even to the prince of the host, and by him the daily sacrifice was taken away, and the place of his sanctuary was cast down."

Probably those words depict the capture of Jerusalem by the Saracens, indicating how it was, and when it was, that the daily sacrifice was taken away, from which the prophecy of Daniel xii, 11, is to be reckoned.

There is, however, in xi, 31, another reference which seems to call for a much later date of commencement, if verses 28 to 30 are future.

"And arms shall stand on his part, and they shall pollute the sanctuary of strength, and shall take away the daily sacrifice, and they shall place the abomination that maketh desolate." Evidently all these three passages (Daniel xii, 11; viii, 11; xi, 31) refer to the same event, and possibly ix, 27, also.

Undoubtedly, many Christians are now expecting the Antichrist speedily to be revealed, as the time is now shown to be expired, or on the point of expiring, when he is due to appear.

If, however, the taking-away of the daily sacrifice and the setting-up of the Abomination that maketh desolate both together form one commencing point as Grattan Guinness seems to think, then the setting-up of the Mosque of Omar on the Temple site A.D. 638 would necessarily be the commencing date of the 1,290 years. They would then expire during the present year 1928! And this fits the marginal reading:—"And from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away to set up the abomination that maketh desolate there shall be," etc. (This seems very remarkable in view of D. Davidson's discovery in the Great Pyramid respecting some great happening on May 29th, 1928.) In that case the ultimate event, the final happening at the end of the 1,290 years, is not revealed.

If this latter reading is correct, what can that future tremendous happening be which God as yet conceals? It still might be the uprising of the Man of Sin, the great Antichrist; and possibly of the Rapture itself, which, according to my reading of the Word, comes immediately before the revealing of the Man of Sin.

We may not know the day nor the hour, but assuredly we may know the period: for "the wise shall understand." "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all the children of light." (1 Thes. v, 4, 5.)

The city of Jerusalem was captured by the Saracens A.D. 637. And someone has written with respect to that event (I am now quoting from memory) that on its capture the Patriarch Sophronius cried out as the victors entered the Holy City, "Truly the Abomination that maketh desolate now stands in the Holy Place."

The Mosque of Omar, however, was not built till the following year, A.D. 638; and was built on the site of the Holy Temple.

Somewhere between those two dates, a time of a year or thereabouts, the daily sacrifice would cease: so that we can get a fairly correct starting-point for the reckoning.

Say the daily sacrifice was taken away some time during the year 637, then + 1,290 years would bring us to 1927.

If midway or end of 637, then it would bring us to the same month and day in 1927. For many years past the date of the building of the Mosque of Omar has been entered in my Bible as midway in 638: but at the moment I have no means of verifying it to that point of accuracy.

In any case, we know the commencing point to a year, and so then the concluding point to a year.

The commencement cannot be earlier than the capture of Jerusalem in A.D. 637. It cannot be later than the erection of the Mosque of Omar on the site of the Temple in A.D. 638.

As to what the final happening will be we may not know for certain, and one opinion may be as good as another, so it is very unwise to be positive when God has not spoken.

We do know, however, from other Scriptures that certain definite events have yet to come.

(1) Our Lord will return for His watching saints.

(2) Gog or Antichrist is to attack God's people Israel: this is Jacob's trouble.

(3) Israel, with the help only of her young lions and Sheba and Dedan, has to withstand the combined attack of Antichrist and all his hordes.

(4) Israel is to be miraculously delivered, and her enemies destroyed.

(5) Christ is to reign over His people Israel, with believing Gentiles who join Israel, for ever!

Which of these great happenings is indicated we may not say. But it seems very probable from Scripture that this prophecy, almost the last which the Angel gives to Daniel, will run out its time this year!

Now if the five happenings are in the correct order, as the writer thinks they are, then see what the first of them is.

But says one, "That is trying to foretell the Return of Our Lord."

Oh no, it is not. It is trying to understand, even at the risk of being misunderstood.

If the first great happening of the five herein mentioned should be Our Lord's Return and the Rapture, then that is The Next Thing!

But let us not forget the premonitory signs. "And great earthquakes shall be in divers places, and famines, and pestilences; and fearful sights, and great signs shall there be from heaven." (Luke xxi, 11.)

Digitized by Google

"And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken." (Luke xxi, 25, 26.)

All these are to precede Our Lord. Whether these have yet taken place to the full extent of this prophecy is very doubtful.

That they will be so pronounced as to be easily recognisable is very evident from verse 28.

"And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh." They must be recognisable or the admonition is useless.

This warning of Dan. xii, 11, is serious beyond all question: and the more so because the final event is not revealed; probably could not be!

It is as though our God had gone a step beyond His usual methods to warn His people Israel concerning the tremendous nature of the events involved, the beginning of which appears to be due very shortly.

That there is yet to come a clearer vision as the activities of the End approach seems very definite from the other words of the Angel. Daniel xii, 4, says: "So you, Daniel, conceal the events, and seal the record, until the fixed period, when many will travel and knowledge will be increased." (F. Fenton.)

Surely, surely, this is now!

And again, verse 9: "Go away, Daniel, because that is hidden, and sealed UNTIL THE FIXED TIME." (F. F.)

From the above, it is clear that there is a fixed period for the greater elucidation of this all-important prophecy of the 1,290 days and the 1,335 days. And that time is when "Many will travel and knowledge will be increased."

The A.V. says (verse 10): "The wise shall understand": but Ferrar Fenton translates it, "The Teachers will understand."

Where then are the Teachers who understand this verse and dare tell us what it means? These are the days when many travel and knowledge is increased, and so that large understanding and revealing are now due: and the shame is not upon those who try to understand it, but upon those who do not!

ADDRESS DELIVERED AT THE CHURCH HOUSE, WESTMINSTER:

BY THE REV. JOSEPH GAY.

I RECKON that I have had three fathers. I had a father after the flesh, one of the greatest men of his day, whose name became a household word in the North of England, and who exercised a fruitful ministry in the Gospel for some fifty years in the West Riding of Yorkshire. I do not know whether he was responsible, or my mother was responsible—but I fancy she must have been—in giving me the name of Joseph. But Joseph was a dreamer, and so am I. I had a father, a spiritual father, who was responsible for my conversion, and entrance into the Christian ministry. These fathers are dead. But my British-Israel father is very much alive, and he is here upon this platform, and is looking extremely well—I refer to our good and honoured friend, the Secretary-General of this great Federation, Mr. Herbert Garrison. I never felt so stupid in all my life as I did after he had finished talking to me, and I said to myself, "Well, to think you have lived all these years, and that you have exercised a ministry stretching into about thirty-five years, and you have never seen that before." It came to me by way of a revelation. I saw at once that my good friend had put into my hand a master-key. I give place to no one here to-night in his verbal knowledge of the Revised and Authorised Versions of the Bible; for as a boy I was taught to memorise the Bible, so that I can repeat, if need be, the life of Jesus Christ Our Lord in the four Gospels from beginning to end. Nothing but the Scripture. It was a marvel to me. It never occurred to me to link on any racial connection between Great Britain and ancient Israel. But this I have always said, as I said to Mr. Garrison on that occasion, and I have always preached, if ever ancient Israel were chosen of God for a Divine purpose, this great British people has been so chosen of God for the same Divine and sovereign purpose throughout the world; and that no reasonable man can deny. I am prepared to say to-night that, if the British Empire be not the Kingdon of God upon the earth, it is the highest expression of it we possess.

My testimony to-night is twofold. My testimony, first of all, is personal. I have told you who first introduced this great Truth to me, and who gave me this master-key. I will tell you two things that must unfold themselves to the mind of the thinker. First of all, it confirms the truth of the Bible, from Genesis to Revelation. And then—and in this I greatly rejoice, for I have always gloried in it from my boyhood—and, by the way, I began to preach the Gospel when I was twelve years old—this I have greatly rejoiced in, that the British-Israel Truth proclaims the sovereignty of God throughout the world. The Lord God Almighty does as He likes with His own, and He is doing it. He has not left this world without a witness; He has not handed the reigns of government over to any other. He still "holds the key of all unknown." That is my personal testimony.

May I add a word as Commissioner of the North London area. First of all, Commissioner of the North of England, my diocese stretching from Crewe to Newcastle. My testimony as a Commissioner is this. First of all, that the British-Israel Truth is phrased in a language understood of the common people. The difficulty with us to-day is to get spiritual truth and spiritual values into unspiritual minds. You cannot do it. The Church has been striving and struggling to do that for years, and she is failing to do it. The Church is not speaking in a language that the common people can understand. Spiritual things are only spiritually discerned. But this Truth, introduced to the people on their level, as it were, and in a language they can understand, grips them. I can testify of this as a result of experiences that have come to me during my travels. When returning from a lecture delivered at Oxford a little while ago, I travelled in the train with five or six gentlemen, and after I had secured their attention, I talked to them concerning British-Israel Truth, and when we were nearing Paddington Station, we wished our journey were only beginning instead of ending, for, as they said, they had never heard anything so interesting and so fascinating, and so easily to be understood as the message I had delivered to them on the journey.

You cannot get away from this great Truth. I emphasise it again, we are speaking a language that the man in the street can understand, and he can understand the Bible in consequence; and from that you lift him. And when he comes to grips with the great Truth of the sovereignty of God along that level, he will grip it more truly along the higher levels of spirituality.

Then another impression that I have had as Commissioner is just this, the readiness, the ease, with which, with this great British-Israel Truth, we can silence all anti-Christian voices. I do not know any platform that can silence more completely Communism than this platform. I am being allowed to address you definitely on the Communistic menace, and I hope to show you then how completely this great Truth of ours silences it, if you can marshal your facts. And we can marshal our facts right enough. And there is nothing more to be said. Let me give you a little up-to-date experience of my own: I was lecturing in Stratford the other night, and I had a little nest of Communists down on my left. And one man shouted to me that what I was saying was all rubbish, and that I was drawing on my imagination. "Yes I am," I said, "for do you know that imagination is God's gift to man. It is evident you do not know that because you don't exercise it." And with that in view I marshalled my facts. They listened. I still marshalled my facts regarding the British-Israel Truth. And what happened? When the time for heckling came, these men could not sum up one decent question; and they all got up and walked out. You can silence them every time along this line of British-Israel Truth, and it is worth while. For there are tremendous forces against Christianity, and you cannot reply to them unless you reply along the line of indisputable fact striking its roots deep down into the whole Word of God.

THE DIVINE NAMES.

By HENRY PROCTOR, F.R.S.L.

THE NAMES OF GOD, as found in Scripture, are a source of REST and comfort to every believer.

THE SAINTS of old understood this, and found therein a firm foundation for faith.

"THE NAME of JEHOVAH (said they) is a strong tower, the righteous runneth into it and is safe." (Prov. xviii, 10.)

"THE NAME of THE GOD of JACOB defend thee." (Psalm xx, 1.)

The BIBLE gives the following among others:—

1. ELOHIM (Gen. i, 1)—MIGHTY ONES (CREATORS).
2. JEHOVAH (Gen. xi, 4)—ETERNAL (EVER-LIVING).
3. EL ELYON (Gen. xiv, 20)—MOST HIGH.
4. JEHOVAH (Jer. xxii, 14)—PROVIDER.
5. SHADDAI (Ex. vi, 2)—ALL-SUFFICIENT.
6. JEHOVAH-NISSI (Ex. xvii, 15)—PROTECTOR.
7. JEHOVAH-SHALOM (Judges vi, 24)—PEACE.
8. JEHOVAH-SHAMMAH (Ezek. xlviii, 35)—PRESENCE.
9. JEHOVAH-TSIDKENU (Jer. xxiii, 6)—OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.
10. ABBA-FATHER (Rom. viii, 15).

1. ELOHIM means MIGHTY ONES: The Trinity concerned in the creation, The Father who created ALL things through JESUS CHRIST. "For in HIM was created all that is in Heaven and in earth; the visible and the invisible ALL has been created through HIM, and for HIM." (Col. i, 14, 16.) 20 Cent. N.T.: THE SPIRIT—the dynamic Power is seen also, "Brooding upon the face of the waters," to bring all things into being (Gen. i, 2).

2. The next in Biblical order is JEHOVAH-YAHWE—the self-existent one, ETERNAL, EVER-LIVING, ALPHA and OMEGA—the FIRST, and the LAST.

3. EL ELYON—Of whom Melchizedek (King of Righteousness) was Priest; who brought out bread and wine; a foretaste of THE LORD'S SUPPER and blessed Abram, saying:—

> Blessed be Abram by EL ELYON,
> Creator of HEAVEN and earth,
> And blessed be GOD MOST HIGH,
> Who has handed over your foes.
> (Gen. xiv, 20) (Moffat.)

4. JEHOVAH-JIREH—The LORD the PROVIDER. The first and greatest of all HIS provisions is symbolised in Gen. xxii, 8. "GOD will HIMSELF PROVIDE THE LAMB." This was done when HE gave us "THE LAMB of GOD, which taketh away the sin of the world." "Shall HE not freely with HIM freely give us ALL THINGS?" "MY GOD shall SUPPLY ALL YOUR NEED."

5. EL SHADDAI was the NAME in which GOD made HIMSELF known in very early ages. It occurs many times in the Book of Job, which is believed to be the oldest Book in the Bible. It is usually translated "The ALMIGHTY," but ALL-SUFFICIENT would be better.

It means THE GOD of the BREASTS, from SHAD—a breast. It indicates that GOD dealt with them as a mother with her children, giving them all that they needed to sustain life, just as a mother does her babe: giving even of her very substance.

"For as a mother comforteth her children, so comforteth THE LORD them that fear HIM." (Isa. lxvi, 13.)

"As one whom her mother comforteth, so will I comfort YOU." (Isa. xl, 11.)

"HE shall gather the LAMBS in HIS ARMS, and carry them in HIS BOSOM," and in this HE is more faithful than a mother. "They may forget, yet will I not forget THEE." (Isa. xlix, 15.)

6. As JEHOVAH-NISSI—THE LORD MY BANNER. "HE is our defence against foes of every kind."

"And when the enemy shall come in like a flood, THE SPIRIT of JEHOVAH lifts up a standard against him, and puts him to flight."

The shield of faith quenches ALL the fiery darts of the evil one.

7. HE is also JEHOVAH-SHALOM—The GOD of PEACE.

HE is our PEACE. HE sets us free from ALL anxiety, saying: Be anxious for nothing, but let your requests be made known unto GOD WITH THANKSGIVING.

"Do not be troubled about to-morrow. To-morrow will take care of itself. The day's own trouble is quite enough for the day." (Matt. vi, 34.) (Moffat.)

8. JEHOVAH-SHAMMAH—THE LORD is there: is cognate in meaning with EMMANUEL—GOD with us. That, however, is for the old dispensation, we have something much better. HE who dwelt with us, now remains within us. "I will inhabit, and walk about in them." (2 Cor. vi, 16.) "HE is never so far off, as even to be near; closer is HE than breathing, nearer than hands or feet."

9. In Jer. xxiii, 6, JESUS is called JEHOVAH-TSIDKENU—THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS. HE who knew no sin, was made sin for us, that we might be made THE RIGHTEOUSNESS of GOD, in Him. "HIM who never knew sin, GOD made to be sin, on our behalf." (2 Cor. v, 21.) "That we, through union with HIM, might become THE RIGHTEOUSNESS of GOD." Two other most comforting NAMES of GOD are:—

JEHOVAH ROPHI—THE LORD MY PHYSICIAN.

JEHOVAH ROPHEKHA—in which HE declares: "I am THY PHYSICIAN." A promise to the individual believer, fulfilled to everyone who abides in HIM.

For another NAME of GOD:—

AGAPÊ—LOVE, and "HE that dwelleth in LOVE dwelleth in GOD, and GOD in him."

And the blessed outcome of this abiding is that: "HE that dwelleth in the secret PLACE of ELYON (the Most HIGH) shall abide under the shadow of SHADDAI: and because thou hast made JEHOVAH, who is my refuge, even ELYON thy habitation, there shall no evil befall thee, neither shall any plague come nigh thy dwelling." (Psalm xci, 1, 10.)

> For HE puts you in charge of HIS Angels,
> To guard you wherever you go,
> To lift you in their Hands
> Lest you trip over a stone.
> (Psalm xci, 11, 12.)

But the power and efficacy of all these NAMES are concentrated in THE NAME of JESUS, which in Hebrew is "YAH-SHUA"—THE SALVATION of JEHOVAH. THE NAME of JESUS is exalted above EVERY NAME—for GOD raised HIM to the very highest place, and gave HIM THE NAME which stands above all other names, so that in adoration of THE NAME of JESUS EVERY KNEE SHOULD BOW IN HEAVEN, on earth, and under the earth, and that every tongue should acknowledge JESUS CHRIST AS LORD to the GLORY OF GOD THE FATHER. (Phett ii, 9—20 Cent.)

In many ages JESUS has been the Revealer, and manifestation of THE FATHER for:

> No man has ever yet seen GOD.
> GOD the ONLY SON, who is ever with THE FATHER
> HE has revealed HIM.
> (John xviii, 20—20 Cent.)

10. HE first taught us to say "OUR FATHER"; the very utterance of which title endears us to GOD; inspires us with loving confidence, and banishes fear; for although GOD is spoken of as FATHER, in the Old TESTAMENT, it is not in the individual sense, but as having adopted the whole nation; but now we are the SONS of GOD (2 Cor. vi, 18) by the NEW BIRTH, that is those who believe on HIS NAME, who owe this birth of theirs to GOD. "ALL who are guided by the SPIRIT are SONS OF GOD." (Rom. i, 14.) "So that CHRIST is the eldest of a vast family of Brothers." (Rom. viii, 29.)

THE EVIDENCE OF THE BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER—I.

BY CHAS. LAVENDER.

IT is generally r cognised by Christian people that the character of the Anglo-Saxon Race has been built up mainly on the Bible, and the eternal verities it contains. Second only to this is the "Book of Common Prayer," which in its present form has been the guide to the public worship of God in the Church of England for well nigh 400 years. That it contains large portions of the Holy Scriptures and is entirely founded upon them is perhaps self evident, for even the prayers and responses which are not actually found in the Bible so breathe the spirit of Holy Writ that the source of their origin is unmistakable. In the words of the second Preface "(concerning the Service of the Church)" "nothing is ordered to be read but the very pure Word of God, the Holy Scriptures, or that which is agreeable to the same."

Bearing in mind that the Book of Common Prayer is the manual for the public Services of that portion of the Christian Church known as the Church of England, and that Christianity only came into being after the death of Christ, or at the earliest during His earthly life, it will come as a surprise perhaps to some to find that the Old Testament fills so important a place in the Prayer Book. It is only necessary, however, in order to realise this, to remember that while two Lessons or passages of Scripture are directed to be read daily at Morning and Evening Prayer, one of them is always to be "taken out of the Old Testament," and that the reading or singing of one or more of the Psalms of David forms a portion likewise of each Service.

The surprise will be all the greater, probably, when it is understood that there are clear evidences as to the identity of the people for whose use it is intended with the Israel nation, the "chosen people" of God.

Before going into details of this kind, however, let us consider briefly a few facts concerning the history of the Book.

The history of the Early Church is somewhat difficult to follow: there are many "Legends," and although Legends are undoubtedly founded on fact, students frequently differ as to which are the foundations and which the superstructure—which the facts and which the embellishments and accretions of imagination.

In anything approaching its present form the Book of Common Prayer seems to have existed something less than 400 years, for it was during the reign of Edward VI (1549), the Boy King, that his "First Prayer Book" was compiled. Do not think that this was an entirely new thing, for Cranmer, the Archbishop who was principally responsible for it, had to select from a number of different Service Books, some of which had been in use since the eleventh century and even earlier. The great change consisted in the compilation of one uniform Book to be used throughout the land, instead of, as was formerly the case, each Bishop and almost each of the Clergy being a law unto himself as to what Service he should use and what portions of the Scriptures should be read. An even more important alteration was that it now became illegal for the Service to be conducted in any but the English language. For some hundreds of years Latin, as is still the case in the Roman Church, had been used. Henry VIII, the father and predecessor of Edward VI, had wished for the change, but had never quite seen his way to introduce it. Cranmer did not hesitate, when he had a free hand, to appoint a Committee of Bishops and Clergy, who under his direction were not long in completing the work. He was careful to state, and offered to prove, that the contents of the Book were the same as had been in use in the Church for 1,500 years past.

If, therefore, we are to get any idea of the real authors of the Book we must go considerably further back.

The idea that a stereotyped or liturgical form of Service is a modern innovation is quite a mistake.

We must go back at least to the time of David and Solomon for the foundation of our forms of worship, but long before their time we read of the people joining in songs of praise and psalms of thanksgiving. After the crossing of the Red Sea and the escape from the horrors of Egyptian slavery, under the tyranny of Pharaoh, we read that Moses and the Children of Israel sang a song unto the Lord, and a wonderful song it is. This, of course, was for a special occasion, but we can quite imagine that it must have been used many times during the sojourn and wanderings in the wilderness, and that it would be taught to the children as they grew up so that all might join in praising the Lord for His goodness and thanking Him for the marvellous deliverance He had wrought for them. It is in times of trouble that we naturally draw together that we may join in prayer to the All Father; also in times of rejoicing, that we may the more worthily thank and praise Him for His mercy and goodness, and it seems as though the desire for fellowship in this way is inherent in our race, and must always have sought expression in united prayer and praise.

When David brought the Ark of the Covenant to Jerusalem, after its adventures with the Philistines during seven months, its subsequent twenty years' sojourn at Kirjath-Jearim, and its three months' stay in the house of Obed-edom, he instructed the chief Levites to appoint singers and players upon instruments of music, that they might "lift up the voice with joy." We read, too (1 Chron. xvi, 7), that at that time David caused to be used for the first time a Psalm of Thanksgiving (the 105th and part of the 96th) written by himself.

David, we know, was not permitted by God to build the Temple, but he was privileged to have a large share in collecting and preparing the necessary materials. In 1 Chron. xxii we read of gold and silver, brass and iron, stone and timber, all provided in abundance, ready for the great work. But he did not make provision for the material side only; he did not forget that the Temple was to be a place, the place, of worship. He therefore organised in advance the arrangements for the various Services, and set apart different sections of the Levites for different duties, so that there should be no confusion and no misunderstanding. Certain families—the sons of Aaron—were given responsibility for the directly priestly duties—sacrifices, purifying, and so on. Some of them also "to thank and praise the Lord" morning and evening daily. Then there were those who had charge of the holy vessels, those who waited upon the priests, those who were responsible for the musical portions of the Services, and last, but by no means least, the singers. There were some who prophesied, either with or without harps and psalteries, and we are told that "the number of them that were instructed in the Songs of the Lord was two hundred four score and eight."

Thus both instrumental and vocal worship were provided for, and we may be sure that amid all this praise, prayer also was offered, and that in such form as the people could appreciate and understand.

The organising ability of David in purely religious matters is a side of his character often lost sight of, but none the less interesting and important.

Passing on to the dedication of the Temple which was built by Solomon, we have a full account of the sacrifices and the praises offered, as well as of Solomon's marvellous prayer; so comprehensive, so humble, yet so confident and so glorious. "The trumpeters and singers," we read, "were as one, to make one sound, praising the Lord, saying 'For He is good; for His mercy endureth for ever.'" While there is more evidence here of united praise than there is of congregational prayer in the form of a Liturgy, yet I think we must admit that one almost necessarily includes the other, and that we have in these two accounts, perhaps, the earliest detailed particulars of set forms of worship.

These forms were continued in use with no doubt some modifications until the destruction of the Temple by Nebuchadnezzar some 365 years later. At the rebuilding under Ezra, Nehemiah and Zerubbabel, they were restored and continued for a further 500 years or so, to the time of Our Lord.

It was after the return from the Babylonian Captivity that Synagogues began to be established throughout the land, and "a special ritual of readings and prayers was instituted." These were used regularly on Sabbaths and Feast Days, and short Services were also held on Mondays and Thursdays.

It will be seen, therefore, that Liturgical forms of Worship are of very ancient origin, and are sanctioned by Holy Writ, having been instituted by holy men of old for the more perfect rendering of the Worship of Almighty God.

The transition from pre-Christian to Christian worship was natural and easy. One writer says:—"When the members of a Synagogue were convinced that Jesus was the Christ, the old form of worship could go on. The weekly commemoration of the Resurrection supplemented but did not supersede the ancient Sabbath. The reading of the Life of Christ and of the letters of the Apostles supplemented but did not supersede the ancient Lessons from the Prophets and the singing of the Psalms, which were varied by Christian hymns composed for the purpose."

The "Apostolical Constitutions," probably compiled in the reign of Constantine the Great at the beginning of the fourth century, contains a circumstantial description of the Assemblies for Divine Worship. Part of this description runs as follows:—"Let the reader stand on a raised place and read from the Old Testament, and when two Lessons have been read let another sing the Hymns of David and let the people join at the conclusion of the verses; afterwards let there be a reading from the New Testament, all the people standing with profound silence, for it is written 'Be silent, and hear, O Israel.' . . . Then let the High Priest (Bishop) pray for peace upon the people, and bless them in the words of Moses: 'The Lord bless and keep thee; the Lord make His face to shine upon thee and give thee peace.'"

We see, then, that forms of Worship are of very ancient origin, and that " the Order for Morning Prayer " and " Evening Prayer throughout the year " have their roots in the distant past, stretching uninterruptedly, though with modification in form, from the time of David to the present day. Let us bear in mind also that, as we now know them, they have been in existence and in regular use since the beginning of the reign of Queen Elizabeth—1559—nearly 370 years ago. Apart, therefore, from their still earlier origin, they have the merit of long usage in their present form, and have met the needs of at least twelve generations of our race. Let us bear in mind also that they are largely used in the Liturgy of the American Church, as well as, of course, in the other daughter Churches of the Church of England, scattered throughout the Empire in our various Dominions, Colonies and Dependencies.

Having thus briefly glanced at something of the history of Liturgical Worship in general, and of the Book of Common Prayer in particular, the way is now clear for us to revert to the actual subject of the lecture : " The Evidence of the Book of Common Prayer to the Truth of British-Israel Teaching."

That a large proportion of the Book is intended for anyone and everyone is evident, but that much of it can only apply to, and rightly be used by, God's chosen people, Israel, is equally evident to those who consider the matter fairly and with unprejudiced minds.

For instance, the first of the " sentences " ordered to be read at the beginning of Morning and Evening Prayer is, " When the wicked man turneth away from the wickedness which he hath committed, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive." This obviously applies to mankind at large, and a glorious thing it is that salvation is free to all, whether black, white or yellow, whether Jew or Gentile, Israelite or Arab. " If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness " applies to all, irrespective of colour, nationality or character. " Whosoever " is a blessed word and embraces all who believe in Christ, Who Himself said " God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

On the other hand, many passages in the Prayer Book are almost meaningless unless those who use them are really Israel. As an example, why do we sing in the " Venite" (Psalm xcv) Sunday by Sunday—" When your fathers tempted Me, proved Me, and saw My works : Forty years long was I grieved with this generation," if we are not the lineal descendants of those who were miraculously brought out of Egypt and wandered for forty years in the wilderness ?

Another of the opening sentences, taken from Daniel's great prayer and confession of sin, when he and his people were in Babylon, runs thus :—" To the Lord our God belong mercies and forgivenesses, though we have rebelled against Him ; neither have we obeyed the voice of the Lord our God, to walk in His laws which He set before us." Daniel undoubtedly had his own people Israel in mind when he uttered this confession, and it was to them that God's laws had been delivered ; they have never been delivered in similar fashion, or in any fashion, so far as I know, to any other people or nation. Why, then, are these words selected as appropriate at the Services of our National Church if we bear no relationship to the nation to whom the laws were given ?

Let us consider further the various portions of Morning and Evening Service, taking from them examples having special reference to our subject. In the General Confession we refer to ourselves as " lost sheep." This is an expression which occurs several times, both in the Old and New Testaments. The last verse of Psalm cxix reads, " I have gone astray like a lost sheep " ; then there is the well-known verse in Isaiah liii, " All we like sheep have gone astray." Everyone realises, of course, that the word " sheep " is used figuratively to denote a person or persons, but there are many instances where we shall find, if we examine them carefully, that the context shows that it is to the nation Israel specially that the word refers. The first occasion seems to be when the pestilence destroyed 70,000 men because of David's sin in numbering the people ; David prayed to the Lord that the plague might be stayed, and acknowledging his wrongdoing he said, " Lo, I have sinned and done wickedly, but these sheep, what have they done ? " In the Psalms the nation is often referred to as sheep—" the sheep of Thy pasture," " the sheep of His hand," " His own people . . . like sheep." But it is when we come to Jeremiah that we see the full significance (ch. l, 6), " My people hath been lost sheep " speaking prophetically, as it were, in the future, and looking back to a state of things not yet come to pass. Christ Himself, as we know full well, spoke several times of " the lost sheep of the House of Israel," and there are numerous references to shepherd and flock, meaning, evidently, Israel—the sheep. How is it that the compilers of this prayer chose the expression which is so intimately connected in Scripture with the House of Israel ?

We now pass on to the Responses which follow the Lord's Prayer. The Minister says, " O Lord, open Thou our lips," and the people answer, " And our mouth shall show forth Thy praise." These words are evidently taken from Isaiah xliii, 21, where the Lord, speaking of Israel, says, " This people have I formed for Myself ; they shall show forth My praise." Then follows, " O God, make speed to save us " ; this is a prayer often on the lips of the Psalmist, and the words " O Lord, make haste to help us " are found almost verbatim in Psalm xxii, verse 19. " Praise ye the Lord " are words we read many times over in the Psalms, and how natural is the response " The Lord's Name be praised."

Incidentally it is worth while noticing how strong a note of praise is sounded in the Services of the Church. After exhortation, confession (denoting repentance), and the pronouncing of God's forgiveness for the truly penitent and believing soul, we are almost at once led to the expression of heartfelt praise and thanksgiving. This surely is most fitting. If we truly realise our sinfulness and God's wondrous all-forgiving love, we cannot help rejoicing, and here are we given help to express our gladness suitably.

" Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil ; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness ; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter."—ISAIAH.

By PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc., &c.

[The following articles should be read with the thought in mind that they are not intended as a glorification of the Empire, nor of the Anglo-Saxon people, but as a recognition that Jehovah, the God and King of Israel, has in the Celto-Saxon people the basis of His Kingdom on earth. The Anglo-Saxon people have been trained for ages to be the Administrators of that Kingdom, and to carry its benefits, its liberty and its peace to all mankind.]

No. 14.

THE following is a profound statement of far-reaching truth and fully explains itself :—

The American writer, Rev. H. Read, says : "The disposition of nations is purely Providential. As King of nations, God has at the present time, and for purposes we can hardly mistake, given an almost unlimited supremacy to the two most enlightened and Christian nations. England and America give laws to almost the whole world. I would rather say that the Anglo-Saxon race are extending an all-controlling influence over the entire earth. Where will you fix the limits of British power? Or where bound the influence of those who speak the English language? Will you circumscribe it within the vast bounds of the Roman Empire? Will you fix it on the Indus, or the Mississippi, or on the Ganges? You will have circumscribed the globe before you will have found the goal beyond which the Anglo-Saxon power and influence do not reach. Traverse the earth from pole to pole, and you can scarcely point out the spot where you may not trace the footsteps of Anglo-Saxon skill and civilisation. The sun, in its diurnal journey, never ceases to look down on some portion of the British Empire. We cannot but discern the hand of God, which has given such a decided supremacy. England is the Rome of the day."

The Nouvelle Revue of Paris, in 1882, said : "The continual progress of that immense family which is enveloping the world to the exclusive profit of the Anglo-Saxon race . . . . . Wherever our flags are side by side, wherever our rights even predominate over those of any other nation, the ground, skilfully mined, gives way under our feet. If we go hand in hand, we work for England."

We have the following words from Green, the historian : "One issue is inevitable. In the centuries that lie before us the primacy of the world will remain with the English people."

Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, in a public address, said : "I humbly believe we are destined by Providence to be the governing race. For that great qualities are required. Thank God, hitherto they have never been wanting in our history."

In 1881, Dean Farrar made this statement : "Glance with me for a few moments at English history, and you will see at once that the English Church and the English nation are and always have been one."

Japan has a word to say concerning the greatness of England : "Thy greatness, O England, is not thine own making. Thy commodious harbours of Liverpool, Bristol and Southampton were not digged by thee. The warm wind that comes from the West, and the fruitful rains which it brings, are brought to thy shores by a Power that is not thine own.

"Thou wast placed in the midst of the land hemisphere, and the whole world turns towards thee. Thou art the world's mart, and thy wealth is the world's. Then thy laws, literature and religion, they, too, are not all thy thinking. What were thy Hobbes, Austen and Blackstone, had there not been a Cæsar and a Justinian for thee? What were thy Milton and Shakespeare, had there not been Æschylus, Horace and Virgil, who unwittingly wrought for thee? What were thy Wycliffe, Knox and Wesley, had there not been Isaiah, Daniel and Paul who preached for thee? Rome, Greece, Judæa, Phœnicia, all contributed their parts to make thee great. Thou art the product of ages of human labour, from Abraham and Homer downwards. The world demands from thee a service which is thy due . . . . Thy fleet ought to be employed not merely to protect thy interest, but to right the world's wrongs. Thy pluck and skill ought to be freely given to help the helpless and to rescue the perishing. Japan, too, comes to thee, not to beg help of thee, but to claim from thee the fellowship of brothers, which is thy honour to give and ours to receive. In all our strifes of onward progress, great is our need of thy arts, thy laws, thy institutions, and thy literature as well. Be thou queenly, gracious, meek and true, and thou wilt surely win a sister empire in the Pacific. Attest thy greatness by a larger service to man."

By the Rev. G. H. Lancaster, M.A.

QUESTION.—Will you kindly enlighten me upon the meaning of this generation, in the text "Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled" (St. Matt. xxiv, 34). What are the implications of this statement made by Our Lord? Did He mean that when, at some date in the distant future, men began to see the opening of the events that had been foreshadowed that particular generation would live to see their entire fulfilment? This text was quoted to me by one who doubts the British-Israel standpoint.—H. W. R.

ANSWER.—I think I have tried to explain this verse before, and to a certain extent Matt. xii, 45 and xvi, 28 may be compared with it, and possibly Matt. xvii, 17 and Luke xvii, 25.

As is always the case, no text should be studied outside its context. This chapter (Matt. xxiv) contains one of the most remarkable prophecies in the Bible—especially in the Gospels. It takes in a long vista of events which were to come to pass, dated from the days of Our Lord's Ministry. Some were to be fulfilled in the Fall of Jerusalem, and some during the subsequent periods of history which (from our point of view) is now past history, while certain parts of this great prophecy refer to the Second Coming of Christ. Other portions are not necessarily prophetical at all, but simply convey spiritual warnings to those who are not ready either for death, or for the Lord's Coming.

It is not easy to separate the dispensational and prophetic elements into their respective and component or consequent parts. For example, supposing you are in a mountainous country, and supposing you see in front of you a mighty panorama of mountains. The distant series of ranges will all appear to be equally distant from your view point, and, owing to the clarity of the air, it may not be easy to distinguish the nearer ranges from the farther ones. Yet experience proves that one given mountain may be some 20 or 50 miles nearer to you than another mountain or peak which just shows itself against the former one. This will become more apparent still if the more distant mountain is higher in altitude than the nearer one, bearing in mind that the horizon always rises to the level of one's eye.

So it is in this chapter. Our Lord, in the one case, is speaking of events which were to happen within a few years of His own time on earth, while in the same breath, as it were, He is speaking of great dispensational and prophetic truths, the mightiness of which have already shocked the world, and may shock it still more in the future. In evidence of His statements Christ calls upon the witness of Daniel from the Old Testament and of the Solar system from the Heavenly Testament.

This chapter must be compared not only with the prophecies of Daniel, but also with those of the Major and Minor Prophets, and also with St. Paul's predictions (especially 2 Thess. ii).

Hence it will be seen that God is dealing with Israel redeemed as with no other nation (Psalm cxvii, 20) to whom is committed "this Gospel of the Kingdom," which has to be "preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come" (Matt. xxiv, 14).

This brings us therefore to ask the question, "Who or what is meant by 'this generation?'" It is obvious from what has been said above that this expression cannot refer or apply to one generation only, and to that generation which was then alive at the time in which Our Lord was speaking, since "all these things" were not fulfilled by the Fall of Jerusalem in A.D. 70. Certain rationalising interpreters, such as De Wette, etc., have endeavoured to prove that the prophecy of this chapter has failed, because it was not fulfilled in the first Christian century. But we know that prophecy cannot fail, hence we must look for another explanation of the word generation. The Greek word is ἡ γενεὰ (he genea), which has more than one meaning attached to it. It literally means birth, offspring, hence progeny, a generation of mankind (Matt. xi, 16; xxiii, 36, etc.). As with us the ancients regarded three generations as forming a century (Herodotus 2, 142; cf. Thucydides 1, 14).

But the Greek word also means a continuous sequence of generations, hence an age (Herodotus 3, 122), or a race, stock, tribe, nation, etc. (Homer, Iliad 20, 306; cf. Odyssey 1, 122, 16, 117; also Luke xvi, 8, and possibly Acts xiii, 36). In Hellenistic Greek (not the Greek of the Classics, but of the Greek-speaking Hebrews, and of North Africa, Palestine, etc., in Our Lord's day, and of the Septuagint and many parts of the New Testament), the above word certainly means a race or family of people. This will be seen in Jer. viii, 3, where "family" is translated in the LXX Greek by the above word γενεὰ.

Zacharias was not slain by the literal generation (in the usual sense of the word) to whom Our Lord was speaking (Matt. xxiii, 36, with 35), hence it will be seen that Christ was addressing Himself to the whole nation and people.

From the above it becomes clear that the words "this generation" mean not necessarily the existent generation living at the moment, who actually heard Our Lord speaking, but the whole nation to whom He was speaking prophetically, and to whom He applied the Old Testament prophecies as well. This whole nation can be none other than Israel, the nation whom Our Lord came to visit and redeem (Luke i, 68). They are the "elect," who are mentioned twice in this chapter (xxiv, 22, 31), and to whom, in the different stages of the fulfilment of prophecy the three Parables of the Vine (St. John xv, 1-6), the Fig Tree (Matt. xxiv, 32-35), and the Olive (Rom. xi, 16-24), are applied.

"Search undismayed the dark profound
Where Nature works in secret; trace the forms
Of atoms, moving with incessant change
Their elemental round; behold the seeds
Of being, and the energy of life,
Kindling the mass with ever-active flame;
Then say if nought in these external scenes
Can move thy wonder?"

"A good book is the precious life-blood of a master spirit, embalmed and treasured up on purpose, to a life beyond life."

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

WE heartily thank all those who have generously sent us donations for the Forward Movement mentioned in our issues of January 28th and February 11th. Many more are needed, and, to be able to claim the £700 conditionally offered by the Earl of Dysart, these donations must be in hand or be promised by the middle of March. We therefore earnestly appeal to all who can come to our aid to most kindly do so speedily. It cannot be too strongly urged that the portents for the year 1928 make this period the most important so far in the history of our Movement, in the sense that it should prove to be the one when people will be more responsive to our message than in any previous year; hence the urgency for a vigorous campaign quickly.

A great move forward has resulted from the meetings held in Dublin and Belfast by the Rev. Pascoe Goard and Mr. John Leech, K.C. Four meetings were held in the Diocesan Hall of the former city with excellent attendances. In Belfast ten meetings were held in the Wellington Hall, holding some 1,600; four meetings in the Ulster Hall, holding about 1,800; and two meetings in the Grosvenor Hall, holding nearly 2,500. The audiences were always large and in some cases full. In one or two instances people were turned away for want of room. An important conference was held with ministers and college professors with very gratifying results.

We have received an unprecedented number of newspaper reports of B.-I. meetings in various parts of Britain and Dominions, many of them from half a column to two columns in length.

Recently the Rev. T. H. Whitehouse has lectured at Northampton, Burton-on-Trent, Harrogate, Bingley, Ilkley, Halifax, Bradford, Birmingham, Coventry, Newcastle-under-Lyme, Stoke-on-Trent, Cheltenham, Dunchurch and Rugby.

From Northampton we hear of a man and his wife (to whom a "chance" copy of the MESSAGE was given), walking five miles from their home to the nearest 'bus, by which they rode eight miles into Northampton to attend afternoon and evening meetings. The return walk of five miles was through unlighted lanes in heavy rain. Their pluck was undoubtedly rewarded.

On February 1st Mr. Marchant gave a fine address at the Book Depot, Worthing, on "The Theory of the Antichrist." The Rev. Gurney Webb presided, other clergymen also being present.

The subject taken by Mr. Daniel Farmer at Swanage on February 6th was "Where do we get the name British from, and what does it stand for?"

The fourth meeting at Harrogate, when the Rev. T. H. Whitehouse lectured on "The Throne of David," was such a success that there is every confidence of a Branch being formed there very soon.

A very successful Conversazione was held in Bedford on February 8th, over 150 being present; Miss Hamilton Hunter gave an excellent address on "The Covenants of God." Col. James also gave a short address, and good results are looked for.

An effort is being made to form a Branch and arrange meetings in Colchester district. The first will be on March 22nd, at the Carlton Café, when the Rev. Joseph Gay is engaged to speak. We shall be glad to hear from those who are interested.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

[It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.]

THE LAW OF THE LORD, OR THE COMMON LAW.—VIII.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

WE have seen the formation of the nation Israel at Sinai, as recorded in the Book of Exodus.

We have seen the organisation of the WORSHIP of Israel; and of the CONGREGATION in connection with that worship; which congregation consists of every citizen of Israel who is not outlawed for crime. And we have seen the ordination of the Priests, the sons of Aaron, for the carrying on of that worship; as these things are set forth in the Book of Leviticus.

We have seen the detailed organisation of the nation, and the appointment of the House of Elders, or of Lords; the dedication of the Priests, the sons of Levi, to carry on their secular ministry in the nation; and the enrolment of the armies of Israel, as shown in the Book of Numbers.

We have seen the occasion taken for the recapitulation of the basic principles of the Law, in the form of a digest for the administrators' guidance; and the preliminary exhortation to the nation to give heed thereto.

We now follow, as far as we may, the wonderfully interesting and vitally important digest of the Law of Israel, in the Book of Deuteronomy.

It is not an idle saying that it should be the qualification of every candidate for election to the Houses of Parliament in the Empire that he should have read and memorised the handbook of the Law. The book is designed, as is clearly stated, that it should be in the hand of the King in administering the Law. It is provided that the King should write his own copy with his own hand. Surely it is not too much to require that every Law-maker should be also so equipped, and so informed, that he may not mislead the nations of Israel-Britain.

It is of infinite importance that Israel-Britain should be acquainted with the basic principles on which the Lord is dealing with her at this time. It cannot be but that the years immediately ahead of us should be full of responsibility, for manifestly the world is moving out upon another plane of organisation. The tremendous increase in the population of the nations during the last century and a half renders the old system of governing the peoples obsolete. As a matter of fact, Western civilisation is becoming unified in many lines. It is becoming one in financial organisation. It is becoming one in commercial activity. It is becoming one in industrial life. It is becoming one in ideals, and one in literature. The various interests are running into one; and are altogether overleaping national boundaries. There is no power which can ultimately keep them apart. This phase of the matter was discussed at length with the writer by the late Sir William Glynn Jones, whose insight, gained by wide experience, was very clear. Sir William had undertaken to write a series of articles on the matter for these columns, but his untimely death intervened immediately thereafter.

The national organisation of Western civilisation is manifold. It is cut up into nations, with distinct boundaries and with various systems of law and varied forms of government.

On a larger scale, Western civilisation is cut up into races such as Latin ; Teutonic ; Slavic ; Anglo-Saxon, etc. Among these are divers prejudices, and hereditary hatreds handed down. Notwithstanding this, it is manifest that Western civilisation must become one in organisation as a community of nations, as well as one in financial and commercial affairs, and that the movement towards unification is now on the way.

As we have seen, Jurists have been in session this year, representing Western civilisation as it is found in the West and in the East. These have had under consideration the various systems of Law ; and the move is one towards unification of the Law in Western civilisation.

These Jurists have declared for the system of the Common Law, which they have not perhaps fully recognised to be the Law of God. They will soon so recognise it, and that will hasten the matter. They now recognise it as British and American Law. Its general adoption, when it comes, may well lead to a move to enter, on equal terms, that community of nations now in being within the Empire, and to which the United States is closely related in language and in law.

Speaking with a man of affairs in the Empire a short time ago about the acceptance of the Common Law by other races and nations, the remark came as a matter of course : " Then they will also have to take the language."

This goes without saying ; for those who know how centuries of careful study and administration has made the English language the natural expression of the Law, as fixed and made sure by decisions of courts ; and by Acts of Parliament which carry definitions of terms. In accepting the Law there is an acceptance, not only of the language in which it is couched ; and the judgments which define the terms ; there is also an acceptance of the Kingdom in its widest sense. Details will come later. This is a movement which is not being artificially produced by the design of men. It is a movement as inevitable as the sunrise, and as much above and beyond human interference.

Britain and America must lead in this. As the Japanese Jurist said at the before-mentioned conference : " Britain is the fountain-head of Law and Justice." Thus is the plan of God being revealed in the actual life of the nations.

A distinguished Member of the British Parliament said to the writer regarding this matter : " Government has become too great a task for human wisdom, even when cut up as it is into comparatively small national sections. That is to say, national government has become too great a task for human wisdom. What would the government of a united civilisation be? "

To this the writer replied : " Your statement leads to the conviction that the time has come when ' the fulness of the nations ' which the world is experiencing demands the return of Our Lord in order to bring Divine wisdom to bear upon the problem of human government."

It becomes manifest that we are moving out into a larger scale of things in human society. Russia recognises this, as do the rest of the nations. Russia is organising, to try to wrest the supreme government from the hands of the Western nations, and to establish her rule in the kingdoms of this world.

Backing the Russian programme are some of the keenest minds in the Jewish world. This makes the matter more serious. For the Jew has been trained in the theory of Israel Law during the last thirty-five hundred years.

But Israel-Britain, in addition to theoretical training, has had thousands of years experience in " working " the system. It is manifest that a race so trained will take the lead in the contest which is coming as to who shall rule, and what the system of rule shall be.

Let it be understood that we are not talking of an ambition for world rule as a thing to be created. But of the question into whose hands that world rule, which is inevitably approaching, shall fall.

Israel-Britain led by Israelites will prevail. The nations of this world, even though led by a minority of Jews of Israel stock, will inevitably fail before Israel.

Inasmuch as British-Israel is being called upon by the nations to take over more and more of the rule of the earth ; inasmuch as British Common Law is being chosen by the nations ; and inasmuch as the rule of the earth is foretold for her ; it is a necessary qualification that she shall be instructed in the Law, and in all other things necessary for her to take up the duty of general administration according to the mind of the Lord.

Let us follow further the study of this wonderful theme.

A SYNOPSIS OF THE LAW.

To this end we shall include here three wonderful chapters ; well knowing that whereas the Bible lover will lay down his paper and take up the Bible to fill in the blanks which may be left, this journal will fall into the hands of many busy men en route, and at odd moments when the Bible will not be at hand, and the effect desired will thereby be lost if the quotation be not provided.

" And Moses called all Israel, and said unto them, Hear, O Israel, the statutes and judgments which I speak in your ears this day, that ye may learn them, and keep, and do them.

The Lord our God made a covenant with us in Horeb.

The Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day.

The Lord talked with you face to face in the mount out of the midst of the fire,

(I stood between the Lord and you at that time, to shew you the word of the Lord : for ye were afraid by reason of the fire, and went not up into the mount ;) saying,

I am the Lord thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage.

Thou shalt have none other gods before me.

Thou shalt not make thee any graven image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the waters beneath the earth :

Thou shalt not bow down thyself unto them, nor serve them : for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me,

And shewing mercy unto thousands of them that love me and keep my commandments.

Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain: for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.

Keep the sabbath day to sanctify it, as the Lord thy God hath commanded thee.

Six days thou shalt labour, and do all thy work:

But the seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, nor thy manservant, nor thy maidservant, nor thine ox, nor thine ass, nor any of thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates; that thy manservant and thy maidservant may rest as well as thou.

And remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out thence through a mighty hand and by a stretched out arm: therefore the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the sabbath day.

Honour thy father and thy mother, as the Lord thy God hath commanded thee; that thy days may be prolonged, and that it may go well with thee, in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

Thou shalt not kill.

Neither shalt thou commit adultery.

Neither shalt thou steal.

Neither shalt thou bear false witness against thy neighbour.

Neither shalt thou desire thy neighbour's wife, neither shalt thou covet thy neighbour's house, his field, or his manservant, or his maidservant, his ox, or his ass, or anything that is thy neighbour's.

These words the Lord spake unto all your assembly in the mount out of the midst of the fire, of the cloud, and of the thick darkness, with a great voice: and he added no more. And he wrote them in two tables of stone, and delivered them unto me.

And it came to pass, when ye heard the voice out of the midst of the darkness (for the mountain did burn with fire,) that ye came near unto me, even all the heads of your tribes, and your elders;

And ye said, Behold, the Lord our God hath shewed us his glory and his greatness, and we have heard his voice out of the midst of the fire: we have seen this day that God doth talk with man, and he liveth.

Now therefore why should we die? for this great fire will consume us; if we hear the voice of the Lord our God any more, then we shall die.

For who is there of all flesh, that hath heard the voice of the living God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as we have, and lived?

Go thou near, and hear all that the Lord our God shall say; and speak thou unto us all that the Lord our God shall speak unto thee; and we will hear it, and do it.

And the Lord heard the voice of your words, when ye spake unto me; and the Lord said unto me, I have heard the voice of the words of this people, which they have spoken unto thee; they have well said all that they have spoken.

O that there were such an heart in them, that they would fear me, and keep all my commandments always, that it might be well with them, and with their children for ever!

Go say to them, Get you into your tents again.

But as for thee, stand thou here by me, and I will speak unto thee all the commandments, and the statutes, and the judgments, which thou shalt teach them, that they may do them in the land which I give them to possess it.

Ye shall observe to do therefore as the Lord your God hath commanded you: ye shall not turn aside to the right hand or to the left.

Ye shall walk in all the ways which the Lord your God hath commanded you, that ye may live, and that it may be well with you, and that ye may prolong your days in the land which ye shall possess.

Now these are the commandments, the statutes, and the judgments, which the Lord your God commanded to teach you, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go to possess it:

That thou mightest fear the Lord thy God, to keep all his statutes and his commandments, which I command thee, thou, and thy son, and thy son's son, all the days of thy life; and that thy days may be prolonged.

Hear, therefore, O Israel, and observe to do it; that it may be well with thee, and that ye may increase mightily, as the Lord God of thy fathers hath promised thee, in the land that floweth with milk and honey.

Hear, O Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord:

And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might.

And these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart:

And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up.

And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes.

And thou shalt write them upon the posts of thy house, and on thy gates.

And it shall be, when the Lord thy God shall have brought thee into the land which he sware unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give thee great and goodly cities, which thou buildedst not,

And houses full of all good things, which thou filledst not, and wells digged, which thou diggedst not, vineyards and olive trees, which thou plantedst not; when thou shalt have eaten and be full;

Then beware lest thou forget the Lord, which brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage.

Thou shalt fear the Lord thy God, and serve him, and shalt swear by his name.

Ye shall not go after other gods, of the gods of the people which are round about you;

(For the Lord thy God is a jealous God among you) lest the anger of the Lord thy God be kindled against thee, and destroy thee from off the face of the earth.

Ye shall not tempt the Lord your God, as ye tempted him in Massah.

Ye shall diligently keep the commandments of the Lord your God, and his testimonies, and his statutes, which he hath commanded thee.

And thou shalt do that which is right and good in the sight of the Lord: that it may be well with thee, and that thou mayest go in and possess the good land which the Lord sware unto thy fathers,

To cast out all thine enemies from before thee, as the Lord hath spoken.

And when thy son asketh thee in time to come, saying, What mean the testimonies, and the statutes, and the judgments, which the Lord our God hath commanded you?

Then thou shalt say unto thy son, We were Pharaoh's bondmen in Egypt; and the Lord brought us out of Egypt with a mighty hand:

And the Lord shewed signs and wonders, great and sore, upon Egypt, upon Pharaoh, and upon all his household, before our eyes:

And he brought us out from thence, that he might bring us in, to give us the land which he sware unto our fathers.

And the Lord commanded us to do all these statutes, to fear the Lord our God, for our good always, that he might preserve us alive, as it is at this day.

And it shall be our righteousness, if we observe to do all these commandments before the Lord our God, as he hath commanded us.

When the Lord thy God shall bring thee into the land whither thou goest to possess it, and hath cast out many nations before thee, the Hittites, and the Girgashites, and the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, seven nations greater and mightier than thou;

And when the Lord thy God shall deliver them before thee; thou shalt smite them, and utterly destroy them; thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor shew mercy unto them:

Neither shalt thou make marriages with them; thy daughter thou shalt not give unto his son, nor his daughter shalt thou take unto thy son.

For they will turn away thy son from following me, that they may serve other gods: so will the anger of the Lord be kindled against you, and destroy thee suddenly.

But thus shall ye deal with them; ye shall destroy their altars, and break down their images, and cut down their groves, and burn their graven images with fire.

For thou art an holy people unto the Lord thy God: the Lord thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth.

The Lord did not set his love upon you, nor choose you, because ye were more in number than any people; for ye were the fewest of all people:

But because the Lord loved you, and because he would keep the oath which he had sworn unto your fathers, hath the Lord brought you out with a mighty hand, and redeemed you out of the house of bondmen, from the hand of Pharaoh king of Egypt.

Know therefore that the Lord thy God, he is God, the faithful God, which keepeth covenant and mercy with them that love him and keep his commandments to a thousand generations;

And repayeth them that hate him to their face, to destroy them: he will not be slack to him that hateth him, he will repay him to his face.

Thou shalt therefore keep the commandments, and the statutes, and the judgments, which I command thee this day, to do them.

Wherefore it shall come to pass, if ye hearken to these judgments, and keep, and do them, that the Lord thy God shall keep unto thee the covenant and the mercy which he sware unto thy fathers:

And he will love thee, and bless thee, and multiply thee: he will also bless the fruit of thy womb, and the fruit of thy land, thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep, in the land which he sware unto thy fathers to give thee.

Thou shalt be blessed above all people: there shall not be male or female barren among you, or among your cattle.

And the Lord will take away from thee all sickness, and will put none of the evil diseases of Egypt, which thou knowest, upon thee; but will lay them upon all them that hate thee.

And thou shalt consume all the people which the Lord thy God shall deliver thee; thine eye shall have no pity upon them: neither shalt thou serve their gods; for that will be a snare unto thee.

If thou shalt say in thine heart, These nations are more than I; how can I dispossess them?

Thou shalt not be afraid of them: but shalt well remember what the Lord thy God did unto Pharaoh, and unto all Egypt;

The great temptations which thine eyes saw, and the signs, and the wonders, and the mighty hand, and the stretched out arm, whereby the Lord thy God brought thee out: so shall the Lord thy God do unto all the people of whom thou art afraid.

Moreover the Lord thy God will send the hornet among them, until they that are left, and hide themselves from thee, be destroyed.

Thou shalt not be affrighted at them: for the Lord thy God is among you, a mighty God and terrible.

And the Lord thy God will put out those nations before thee by little and little: thou mayest not consume them at once lest the beasts of the field increase upon thee.

But the Lord thy God shall deliver them unto thee, and shall destroy them with a mighty destruction, until they be destroyed.

And he shall deliver their kings into thine hand, and thou shalt destroy their name from under heaven: there shall no man be able to stand before thee, until thou have destroyed them.

The graven images of their gods shall ye burn with fire: thou shalt not desire the silver or gold that is on them, nor take it unto thee, lest thou be snared therein: for it is an abomination to the Lord thy God.

Neither shalt thou bring an abomination into thine house, lest thou be a cursed thing like it: but thou shalt utterly detest it, and thou shalt utterly abhor it; for it is a cursed thing."—Deut. v, vi, vii.

BRITAIN AT PRAYER—OR—AT WAR.

GOD'S LAST CALL TO THE NATION.

WE believe that the time has come when the most solemn warning that we can possibly give should now be given to Britain.

Many voices from those who are informed from many quarters, of separate and distinct things which lead to the same conclusion, will tell and are telling Britain that she stands on the edge of a volcano.

Britain does not desire war. Britain is determined, so far as it is possible for her to control events, that she will have peace with all. But unfortunately Britain is in the position of the peaceful traveller, who is met and assaulted by highwaymen. She must submit to lose property, honour, and national life, with all that it stands for; or she must defend herself. The choice of peace is not left with her by the highwaymen.

Moreover, Britain is a servant nation. This she has been from the birth of her race in Isaac, some 1928 years (circa) before Christ; and from the organisation of her nationhood from 1496 B.C. (circa) until this day. She is the servant of Jehovah, her God and King. He has set her the task of serving the nations of the earth, as the administrators of His Kingdom in the earth. This service she must fulfil, even though the nations of the earth strive with might and main, with hand and sword, to prevent her carrying out the task.

Further, Jehovah, the God and King of Israel, has committed to Britain the treasures of the Kingdom. These, as Mr. Morey points out, include the national organisation; the House of David; the Throne; the Temple, or its Christian equivalent; the Law and its administration; the Lands; and all the precious things of the Kingdom of God in the earth.

Once more, Our Lord Jesus Christ committed His goods and His House to Britain, the ten-tribed servants of the Lord, when He went into the far country "to receive for Himself a Kingdom and to return." These "goods" consist of the Word of Truth; the Gospel of the Kingdom and of Salvation; the lands Divinely granted to the Kingdom; the Throne of His father David, to which He must ultimately, and soon, come; the "lost sheep of the House of Israel"; His inheritance in the heathen; and His possessions in the uttermost parts of the earth. These are His things, and they are precious in His sight. These goods He has committed to "His ten servants," with the command "Occupy till I come."

These things being so, we must defend our trust even to the death, individually and nationally.

Therefore Our Lord gives us no option as to that which we shall do if these things are attacked; or if men should endeavour to take them from our hands and from the protection of our nation. Our Lord warns us, "The strong man armed keepeth his house"; the strong man unarmed would be overcome and his goods despoiled.

No matter how peacefully disposed we may all be, it is most certain that "if war should arise against us," it will be also against Him, and we must not fail to defend that which He has committed to our charge.

Now it will be mental blindness to shut our eyes to the fact that there are powers organising to challenge our possession of these things; and there are powers organising to prevent our being able to carry on the work which God has instructed us to carry forward.

What choice is there but to defend ourselves, and the things which have been committed to our care, if such organisations make war upon us?

Is there any hope of persuading a nation such as Russia to keep the peace? Not while we hold the things which God has committed to our charge, and not while we carry out the work which He has commissioned us to do.

Great as is the love of peace in our hearts, and greater still as is our horror of war, that love, and that horror, is infinitesimal when compared with the love of peace, and the hatred of war, which is to be found in the manifested character of God.

And yet, if the free will of man is to stand, and that seems to be the most precious endowment with which our Creator has blessed us in the natural realm—even God cannot cause that war shall not take place. The nations who are even now busy with preparation have predetermined on having their way, and on denying us ours, even at the expense of war. That is a matter well known by many groups of informed men, whose knowledge comes from many and diverse quarters.

Alas that such is the fact of the case in world affairs to-day! The knowledge that such is the fact has come to men in many walks, and they are telling that knowledge out in many quarters. Now while it is true that Anglo-Saxons see war approaching, they are not at all planning it, nor desiring it, much less bringing it on. Long and long ago that knowledge was with the Lord and He has told us of the facts which He has so known for ages. Yet, knowing that such is the case, He has not planned that thus it shall be, neither has He done any act to bring it on. Neither can He prevent it without taking away human free will, and this latter would be a greater calamity still, for it would reduce the human species to a level with the lower orders of life, to be governed by instinct, and not by reason manifest in free will and choice.

Is there then no choice? A choice lies with those nations who are at this time determining that even to the point of war they will have their own way. There is a choice with them, and they have exercised it; and, as is well known in many quarters, they have already determined on war.

Is there no choice with Britain? There is no choice with Britain as to whether war shall take place. But what her part in the war shall be is within her choice. She cannot settle the place she shall have in regard to the war by wishing, nor by voting. She must settle her place in regard to the war by action expressing itself in prayer.

Britain's choice is as to whether she shall be the antagonist who shall meet and defeat the tremendous efforts our potential enemy will put forth, or whether she shall pass the conflict over into the hands of her God and King.

The choice is: Shall the enemy meet Britain in the field, and so waste Britain's strength and cause her untold suffering, before Britain can obtain the victory; or shall the enemy meet Jehovah, the God and King of Israel, in His own person and power?

If Britain shall determine to hold her present course and to stand up to the attacks which may be made on her in her own strength, then God help us—there is a time of supreme suffering ahead.

If Britain will recognise the fact of the actual Kingship of Jehovah in our nation, which is Israel, and will call upon Him "to do it for them," then Israel will not have to meet the enemy alone, but Jehovah will take the defence of Israel-Britain in His own hands. He declares in connection with this very matter, "Nevertheless I will be enquired of by the House of Israel to do it for them."

We may not until the event know the actual time of such a war. The enemy could give us the information. But we know that such a war is coming sooner or later. It looks as though it were coming now. Such are the signs and the warnings which we receive daily from many quarters, emanating from many sources of information, that believe we shall perhaps this year, perhaps next year, but soon, be involved in such a conflict. It is time to be ready. And we shall get ready either to fight as we have never had to fight in the history of our nation; or we shall get to prayer.

The same Book that foretells of the terrible struggle the enemy nations will make tells us that our God stands ready to take the whole matter upon His own shoulders, and to fight our battles for us, if we will repent, and turn to Him, and PRAY.

So there lies the choice with Britain.
If we love peace; then let us pray.
If we hate war; then let us pray.

Perhaps our prayer will affect many of our enemies, and turn them from the path into which they are being led—the path of death and confusion.

Whether this is the case or not, our prayer is that which the Lord declares He is waiting for, in order to take the conflict upon His own shoulders, and so relieve Israel-Britain from the terrible calamity of deadly war.

Britain will be at prayer, or at war, soon. That is our warning to-day.

Are there facts which will carry conviction to the minds of men who are inclined to be sceptical of such an appeal as this? There are abundance of facts in history, showing how peace and war depends on the movements of the Kingdom, and of the nations which resist the Kingdom, and which would fain take away the precious things committed to its keeping.

Let us take as a measuring rod the prophetical period of seven times; or two thousand five hundred and twenty years; and let us apply the rod to Israel-British history, as Grattan Guinness applied it to the Continental nations forty years ago.

Israel was sent into punishment for a period of seven times, and at the end of seven times she should be restored.

Israel first went astray from God in 975 B.C. Jeroboam then put away the true worship and the Bible as they then possessed it, and set up the worship of the Golden Calves. Because of this, and more, Israel was from God.

Now measure along the line of Israel-British history for two thousand five hundred and twenty years, and what do we find? We find the reign of Henry the Eighth, and, in his struggle to obtain from his queen, he first divorced Rome from the English Church, himself being recognised as the head of the National Church. He next divorced the scholarship of the Continental Universities which sided with the Pope in the struggle, and separated from their influence Oxford and Cambridge, etc., representing the scholarship of Britain. Then he divorced his wife.

Now read the first chapter of Hosea, which tells of the divorce of Israel under Jeroboam, and then read the story of the divorce of Rome from the English Church under Henry the Eighth, and tell if these parallels are accidental. How many have wondered at the strange symbols used by the Prophet Hosea, to set forth the separation of Israel from her God. Is it not certain that the purpose was to give the key to the reading of the events which should mark the return of Israel to her God at the end of the appointed period of punishment?

Jeroboam put away the Word of God, the priestly ministers appointed of God, and the pure worship of God. He established idol worship, under a new priestly order. Hosea was then commissioned to prophesy the fact of the DIVORCE of Israel from God.

Henry the Eighth put away a foreign order of priests, tore down much of the idol equipment in the land, and declared that thenceforth the BIBLE should be the final authority in British worship. This all came about over a process of DIVORCE.

Come now to the period around 745 B.C. (circa). At this time Israel with Syria was in violent conflict with Judah and Jerusalem, and the cause of the contention was THE HOUSE OF DAVID. When the allied armies of Israel and Syria were approaching Jerusalem for the purpose of overturning the dynasty of the House of David, Isaiah came to King Ahaz and prophesied, first, that the expedition should fail; and, secondly, that within sixty-five years Israel should cease to be a nation.

Two thousand five hundred and twenty years from that time Voltaire on the Continent was preaching his infidelity which was the beginning of the overthrow of the ancient Continental kingdoms, and which precipitated the French Revolution, with all its consequences.

Two thousand five hundred and twenty years from that same time John Wesley and his associates were preaching the great evangel which stabilised the thinking of Britain, and through her of the world, and which furnished the spirit which made possible the miraculous spread of the British Empire.

About that time (740 B.C.) Assyria moved against and carried captive the two and a half tribes which dwelt east of the rift of the Jordan Valley, and which were therefore exposed to attack by Assyria from the east without the protection of the Valley. This inaugurated that movement of Assyria against Israel which continued till all Israel had been carried captive to Assyria, a process ending about 704 B.C.

Two thousand five hundred and twenty years from that period Britain found herself in a terrific struggle with all the nations of the world, including the United States of America. This struggle continued until Trafalgar at sea, and Waterloo on land, brought final victory for Britain over all her non-Israel enemies, and brought about the modern dividing of Israel into Britain and America, Ephraim and Manasseh, which evidently was at once in the Divine foreknowledge and the Divine plan.

Thus through the terror of the Napoleonic period Britain marched to final victory at the end of her period of punishment, namely, at the end of two thousand five hundred and twenty years.

We now turn to Judah and Jerusalem, for that kingdom also had a share in the sin and in the punishment fully set forth in the sacred Word of God.

At about 603 B.C. Nebuchadnezzar marched against Jerusalem and took the city captive. Two thousand five hundred and twenty years after that Allenby set the city free.

Again, in 587 B.C., the forces of Nebuchadnezzar marched against Jerusalem, took the city, burned the Temple, destroyed the buildings, and left the site of the city bare and the country desolate.

Two thousand five hundred and twenty years from that date calls for the reverse action. But of all the times which had to run, this is the last of the series, and it is not yet expired. So we cannot go to the pages of history to see what events mark the end of this last seven times of the City of Jerusalem. We therefore turn to prophecy and we find that the last step of the great drama will be the gathering of all nations against Jerusalem to battle. Outside of the general tables, of which we have been speaking, the Bible gives no date for the last great siege. May we not assume that siege will take place, in line with the other events, two thousand five hundred and twenty years from the final destruction of the city and the Temple in the days of Nebuchadnezzar? It would seem that we should be justified in the expectation.

The Great Pyramid seems to lend assurance as to the time of the end. If we take the predictive element of the Great Pyramid, then the beginning of the end is close at hand. Its beginnings are indicated for this very year, for the Pyramid bears this message. What that beginning will be, and whether it will be recognised by the people and the world, we must await the events to see. If all these most probable things prove to be so, then such passages as in the prophecy of Joel, of Zechariah, of the 38th and 39th of Ezekiel, have given to us the outline of what may be expected.

We will not try to unravel the prophecy further than to say that the crisis seems to be on us, and we have, as a people, the choice of going to prayer, or of going to war. Read carefully the 38th and 39th of Ezekiel, and it will become clear that the Almighty is ready with organised forces of nature to fight this last battle for us. But also remember that He has declared "Nevertheless I will be enquired of by the House of Israel to do it for them."

What a tragedy it is that at such a time as this the religious leaders of the nation, instead of leading the nation in prayer, are setting the people by the ears with each other over FORMS of worship; and especially that, instead of purifying the worship of the nation from every semblance of that idolatry which has cost us so dear for ages, they should be bent on making such idolatry possible in the nation, under the law.

The tempest threatens to catch the nation, and them, unawares. The last tempest did so, and the Church did not in the least understand. The nation forgave them, because also the nation did not understand. But when the experience is repeated on a larger scale, and the nation does understand, there will be no forgiveness for the religious leaders, either by the people of the nation, or by the Lord; but the punishment Our Lord Himself indicated will be the bitter lot of those who have failed to lead the people in the day of crisis and danger.

May God grant that we, and all the nation, may hear His voice crying:—"The time is fulfilled, the Kingdom of God is at hand, and believe the Gospel."

REPENT YE,

This was Our Lord's first personal call to the nation as given by St. Mark in the first chapter. This is the last call to the nation as declared by Our Lord Himself in Matthew xxiv: "And this Gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world" (empire, according to Ferrar Fenton) "for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come."

Britain, heed the call of Our Lord to repentance, faith in the Gospel of the Kingdom, and prayer.

THE LITERAL INTERPRETATION OF SCRIPTURE.

BY DANIEL FARMER.

THE confusion of thought existing to-day in the Christian Church is principally owing to what Bishop Hooker called "the licentious and deluding art of spiritualising, making of anything what it listeth, and, in the end, bringing all truth to nothing." Bishop Ryle warned the clergy against the same by saying, "We must get rid of the pernicious habit."

"The historical and prophetical matters of Scripture"—wrote Bengel—"are the bones of its system, the spiritual are its muscles, blood vessels and nerves. The expositor who nullifies the historical for the finding of the spiritual brings death on all correct interpretation." Spiritualisers are like the Chinese, who burn paper representations of the various articles they wish to transmit to their dead relatives. True—and it is to this form of handling Holy Writ that the scathing observation of Matthew Arnold applies, viz.: "The theology of the Churches is the greatest hindrance to the proper understanding of the Scriptures."

Francis W. Newman affirmed "The apathy and ignorance concerning the Old Testament in our English Universities has made the Hebrew history almost a sealed book to us." Here is the tap-root of so-called Modernism. No man, properly informed concerning this part of God's Word, will be found in such company—British-Israel believers are not.

R. D. Wilson, Ph.D., D.D., of Princeton Theological College, said "I try to give my students such an intelligent belief in the Old Testament that they will never doubt it as long as they live." The Scripture informs us that "when the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him." (Isa. lix, 19.) That exactly describes the position and effort of the British-Israel Movement, which is an effectual check on the attempt to mystify, or to discredit, the historical accuracy of the Old Testament. Daniel Webster laid it down that "There is yet more valuable truth to be gained from the Sacred Writings that has thus far escaped the notice of commentators than from all other sources of human knowledge combined." Surely if Daniel Webster had been alive to-day he would not have been amongst those who tell us that the eleven-twelfths of Israel are absorbed in the one-twelfth of Judah. "If we are to understand the Bible aright," wrote Bishop Gore, "we must read it in large portions." Quite so—but our colleges send out their young men with microscopes wherewith to study hoarding posters—and, as one has well observed, it sends them tapping about the broad thoroughfares of Bible history like a blind man with a stick on the narrow pavement of our streets, instead of the bold, free walk of the man who can clearly see a landscape. Not only so, but this sort of tuition largely leads to that attitude of mind so hotly condemned by Dr. Johnson's dictum: "He that can set a hypothetical possibility against an acknowledged certainty is not to be admitted amongst reasonable beings." British-Israel believers are a body of Bible students who have left this school of "hypothetical possibility," and joined the Bible Institute of acknowledged certainty.

THE EVIDENCE OF THE BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER.—II.

By CHAS. LAVENDER.

Now follows the "Venite"—"O come, let us sing unto the Lord"; how familiar are the words—so familiar that perhaps we do not stay to ponder upon their meaning. The whole of it is wonderfully significant, but I want to point out one or two special features. "We are the people of His pasture and the sheep of His hand"; how often have we and thousands of others sung this; what do we mean by it? "We are the people of His pasture and the sheep of His hand." I know we are using the words of the Psalmist, but why should we? What did he mean by them? Undoubtedly he had in mind his own nation, the people of Israel, and the 34th chapter of Ezekiel confirms this, for it is a prophecy against the Shepherds of Israel, condemning them because they have fed and cared for themselves and neglected the flock. Because of this the Lord says He will set up one Shepherd over them who shall feed them, and He will make a Covenant of Peace and cause them to dwell safely so that they shall no more be a prey unto the heathen. "Thus shall they know that I the Lord their God am with them and that they, even the House of Israel, are My people, saith the Lord God. And ye My flock, the flock of My pasture, are men, and I am your God" (v. 30-31). There is no mistaking this, "the people of His pasture and the sheep of His hand" are the House of Israel. Why do we appropriate this description to ourselves, as we undoubtedly do every time we join in singing this Psalm?

Look at the next verses. I have already referred to them;

> "To-day if ye will hear His voice, harden not your hearts;
> As in the provocation, and as in the day of temptation in the wilderness;
> When YOUR FATHERS tempted Me; proved Me and saw My works;
> Forty years long was I grieved with this generation," and so on. If words mean anything, these mean that we identify ourselves with the Children of Israel in their desert wanderings. Again I ask, WHY?

After the chanting of one or more Psalms and the reading of a Lesson from the Old Testament, both varying according to the day of the month and the season of the year, the note of praise is resumed by the singing of the ancient hymn known as the "Te Deum," "We praise Thee, O God"; and a grand hymn it is. Its authorship is uncertain, but it was probably written either by St. Ambrose or St. Augustine of Hippo, and must therefore be at least 1,500 years old. As would naturally be expected, there is nothing here that we can trace as having definite reference to our identity; in one verse we say, "O Lord, save Thy people and bless Thine heritage," but here the authors may very well have had in mind the Christian Church, borrowing the special terms which originally applied to Israel. Beautiful therefore as this is, we leave it and pass on to other more direct references.

In the "Benedicite," given as an alternative to the "Te Deum," and which is mainly a Creation hymn, we find towards the close the injunction, "O let Israel bless the Lord; praise Him and magnify Him for ever." That Israel is distinct from other nations is shown by the previous verse, which exhorts the "Children of men" to "bless the Lord." We need only note here that the injunction first mentioned is to Israel, not to the Jews, from whom the Prayer Book is careful to distinguish them, as, for instance, in the Third Collect for Good Friday, where we pray "for all Jews, Turks, Infidels and Hereticks" . . . "that they may be saved among the remnant of the true Israelites."

After the Second, or New Testament, Lesson, we come to what is perhaps the most striking piece of evidence in the whole Book; the "Benedictus," or Song of Zacharias, as recorded in the first chapter of St. Luke's Gospel, and we again ask ourselves, "Why should this form part of the Daily Service of the Church of England?" From the opening verse, "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for He hath visited and redeemed His people," right through to the last verse, it refers to no people but Israel, unless it may be perhaps in the last verse where there is mention made of those "that sit in darkness, and in the shadow of death." There is no reference to the Church here; in fact, Zacharias spoke before the birth of Christ and the beginning of the Christian Church. There is nothing to indicate that a spiritual Israel is intended; rather the reverse, for we read that He "hath raised up a mighty salvation for us in the House of His servant David," as foretold by the prophets, "that we (Israel) should be saved"—not from our sins, but—"from our enemies, and from the hands of all that hate us. To perform the mercy promised to our forefathers and to remember His holy Covenant; To perform the oath which He sware to our forefather Abraham, that He would give us." Now what is the holy Covenant referred to? Surely it is important to know; yet how many of those who use these words regularly could give the answer? Part of it is to be found in Genesis xvi, where we are told (v. 18) "The Lord made a Covenant with Abram, saying, 'Unto thy seed have I given this land from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates.'" Later on, when Abram's name is changed by God to Abraham (Gen. xvii), God said to him, "I will make nations of thee, and kings shall come out of thee; and I will establish My Covenant between Me and thee, and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting Covenant," and so on. We have the summary of the Covenant and reference to the Oath in the twenty-sixth chapter, when the Lord appeared to Isaac and said, "Unto thee and thy seed I will give all these countries, and I will perform the oath which I sware unto Abraham thy father"—(the very words used by Zacharias)—"and I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven, and will give unto thy seed all these countries, and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." The importance of that part of the Covenant which may be described as purely material is shown in its repetition in these two verses; I mean the promise to give unto Isaac's seed "all these countries." It is worth while pausing to see which are the countries concerned; God told Abraham they extend from the river of Egypt to the river Euphrates. The Nile, of course, is the river of Egypt, and always has been, and therefore the country of Egypt is included; Palestine lies between Egypt and Mesopotamia, which, together with Irak (a name only familiar to us since the War), comprise the countries watered by the Euphrates, "that great river" 1,700 miles long. Presumably the length of the Nile was not generally known to the Ancients, but, as we now know, it is more than twice the length of the Euphrates, being no less than 3,600 miles from source to mouth; it is, in fact, the second longest river in the world, being exceeded only by the 4,000-mile Amazon in South America. In whose hands then are the vast territories watered by these giant streams? In accordance with the original grant from God to Abraham and his seed for ever, almost the whole of these territories are to a very large extent under the guidance and control of Great Britain. Does God keep His promises and Covenants? Are we Israel? Is King George V of the House of David, and does he occupy in that capacity the "Throne of the Lord"? If not, by what other nation are these lands likely to be occupied and governed, and when?—"That we being delivered out of the hands of our enemies . . . ." How truly we, as a nation, have been delivered; since the Norman Conquest no foreign foe has invaded our favoured land, and notable attempts have been frustrated, not by our own skill or cleverness, but by God's Almighty Hand. The Spanish Armada, Napoleon, the Kaiser—to name but the three outstanding ones—all their plans came to nought.

Much more might be said about this wonderful Song of Thanksgiving, but we must pass on. There are other treasures awaiting us.

In the "Jubilate"—"O be joyful in the Lord all ye lands"—a wider survey is taken, but the Israel theme creeps in—"We are His people and the sheep of His pasture"—terms applied in Scripture, as already pointed out, to Israel alone.

We pass now to the Versicles, and will notice first "O Lord, save the King." Is there anything significant in this? you say. I think so. Is there any other nation or people who greet their monarch with the prayer "God save the King"? I know of none. The French, when they had a king, shouted "Vive le Roi!" (Long live the King!), and so with most, if not all, of the Latin nations. The Germans, when they had an Emperor, contented themselves with "Hoch" or "Hoch der Kaiser" (Great Kaiser!). The Japanese, still an Imperial race (and almost the only one), express their feelings with calls of "Banzai" (Hurrah!).

Whence comes our beautiful Empire-wide greeting? Read I Samuel x, 24, when Saul had just been chosen King of Israel, "And all the people shouted and said, 'God save the King.'" Plenty of people don't know that it is in the Bible, but there it is, and that's where we got it from; it has been in our blood for 3,000 years! We find it again when the Boy King Joash was proclaimed in the Temple Courts at the instance of Jehoida the High Priest, as recorded in 2 Kings xi, 12.

A little further on in the Versicles the congregation says, "And make thy chosen people joyful." Why "chosen"? In what sense are we as a nation "chosen"? Remember the words occur in the Order for Morning Prayer in the National Church, and that everyone, whether an actual member of the Church or not, has a right to attend and take part in the Service. It seems rather straining a point if it is argued that the "Chosen people" means the "Church," especially when we find references in the Psalms plainly indicating that the nation Israel is thus designated (Psalm xxxiii, 12, and cv, 43), and also find Isaiah telling us (ch. xliii, 20) that the Lord Himself refers to Israel as "My people, My chosen."

It is sometimes said, by our opponents, that the idea that Britishers are God's chosen people will make us conceited, but is it not already true that most Britishers think themselves superior to other nationalities? After all, ought we not to be more concerned with ascertaining what is the Truth than with the effects of that Truth when discovered? But when it is realised, as it should be, that we, as with the nation of old, are chosen, not for self-glorification but for service, chosen that we may aid in carrying out the Will of God on the earth, the sense of responsibility is more likely to humble us than to increase our pride.

But to return to the Versicles:—the next two are equally significant, and, taken in conjunction with the last-mentioned, form a strong link in the chain of evidence. Listen: "O Lord, save Thy people; and bless Thine inheritance." Now let me read to you Jeremiah xxxi, 7: "For thus saith the Lord; sing with gladness for Jacob, and shout among the chief of the nations; publish ye, praise ye, and say O Lord, save Thy people, the remnant of Israel"; and Isaiah xix, 25: "Whom the Lord of Hosts shall bless, saying, 'Blessed be . . . . Israel Mine inheritance,'" and again in Psalm xxviii and the last verse: "Save Thy people, and bless Thine inheritance."

There is no mistaking the meaning of these words ; they refer primarily and definitely to Israel, the nation. Can we claim any right to use them if we are not Israel ?

Let us now turn to the Prayers : these, as might be expected, do not yield such abundant evidence, but there are, nevertheless, points of extreme significance. Take the Litany, for instance ; almost at the outset we are taught to pray, " Remember not Lord our offences, nor the offences of our forefathers ; neither take Thou vengeance of our sins ; spare us Good Lord, spare Thy people, whom Thou hast redeemed with Thy most precious blood," and later on, " That it may please Thee to bless and keep all Thy people." " That it may please Thee to have mercy upon all men."

" That it may please Thee to give to all nations unity, peace and concord."

" O God, we have heard with our ears, and our fathers have declared unto us, the noble works that Thou didst in their days, and in the old time before them."

" O Lord, arise, help us and deliver us for Thine honour."

Four things stand out clearly in these Litany petitions :—

First : The prayer of a redeemed people.

Second : The same people entreating Divine blessings on all nations and individuals.

Third : The acknowledging of God's noble works on their own nation during the " old time " before the dawn of Christianity.

Fourth : The calling for God's help as a right, and on which depends His honour.

Immediately after the Prayers and Responses just referred to comes the " Gloria," " Glory be to the Father and to the Son and to the Holy Ghost ; as it was in the beginning, is now and ever shall be, world without end.—Amen."

Did it ever strike you as strange that it should be introduced here ? What is the reason ? It is not the end of the Service or the end of a Psalm. What does it signify ? It must be important. The framers of this ancient form of prayer evidently took pains to proclaim some important truth ; Malachi iii, 6, tells us : " I am the Lord, I change not ; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." The unchangeableness of God is the theme of this verse, and this it is which is so forcibly expressed in the familiar words quoted ; and because of His Covenant promises to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and their seed, therefore His chosen people have a right to claim His help and deliverance.

The Almighty's unchangeableness is still further impressed upon us by the singing of the " Gloria " at the end of the various Chants and at the end of each of the Psalms in the Daily Services. Thus we extol the unalterableness of God's laws and the immutability of His purposes, together with the everlasting nature of His promises, so that whatever in His Holy Word we profitably (or correctly) learn, we may be sure He will indeed fulfil the same.

We are now nearing the close of the Order for Morning Prayer, and, as we know, that for Evening Prayer is similar, though with different Canticles and Psalms, as well as variation in some of the prayers. There is time to mention only a few of the more striking references to Israel.

In the " Magnificat," the wondrous hymn of thankfulness sung by Mary after the announcement that she was to be honoured above women by becoming the Mother of Our Lord, she says, " He remembering His mercy hath holpen His servant Israel, as He promised to our forefathers, Abraham and his seed for ever."

The ninety-eighth Psalm, sung occasionally instead of the " Magnificat," reminds us of God's "mercy and truth towards the House of Israel."

The " Nunc Dimittis " reminds us that God's salvation is to be " a light to lighten the Gentiles, and to be the glory of His people Israel."

The strange thing is, not that there should be these references in the writings and sayings of the authors, but that they should have been deliberately chosen by the compilers of our Prayer Book for the use of what is generally looked upon as a Gentile Church ! Spiritualise their meaning how we may, they are infinitely more appropriate when we realise that, instead of being Gentiles, we are of the same race as, and in direct lineal descent from, Abraham our Father through the Patriarchs Isaac and Jacob.

Prayers for the King's Majesty and for the Royal Family occur both in Morning and Evening Prayers. We also pray for them in the Litany and again in the Communion Service. Why so ? We refer to His Majesty first as " our most gracious sovereign lord King George " ; in the Litany as " Thy servant George, our most gracious King and Governour " ; then, in the Communion Service, as " Thy chosen servant George, our King and Governour." There seems an harmonious progression in these three descriptions. When we rise to a higher ideal and see in the King " Thy servant George," we recognise that he is not seeking his own aggrandisement, but is ruling as the Almighty's representative, and still more does he need our prayers that he may always endeavour to rule according to the everlasting principles of righteousness and truth. Rising still higher to the realisation that he is God's " chosen servant," we see the sacredness of his high calling and should pray, and pray earnestly, that he may always remember " Whose minister he is," and that he may " in all his thoughts, words, and works, ever seek the honour and glory " of Him on Whose Throne he sits.

But it may be asked, is he really God's " chosen servant " ? Is he not King by a fortuitous concourse of circumstances over which no one has any control ? Do we really think so ? or do we believe that not " the hearts of Kings " only but the Kings themselves " are in God's rule and governance " ? If we believe that King George V is directly descended from David, God's anointed, through Tea Tephi (or Tamar Tephi) the daughter of Zedekiah and her husband Eochaidh of Ireland through Fergus and Murtough, Kenneth McAlpin and Duncan, down to James VI of Scotland and First of England, as shown by the genealogical tree at Windsor (prepared by command of Queen Victoria), if I say we believe all this, of which to my mind there is ample proof, then we can understand how and why it is that our beloved King is the " chosen servant " of the Almighty, sitting, as did Solomon, his great and illustrious ancestor, on the "Throne of the Lord" (1 Chron. xxix, 23), ruling in His stead as His vicegerent.

Thoughts such as these help us to realise why it is that the Services of the Church of England include prayers for our King, and the realisation of these truths will surely help us to pray for him more intelligently, more really and with greater earnestness than can be the case with those who realise them not.

There is much more that might be said, but I trust the above will suffice to show that the Book of Common Prayer contains evidence of no mean order to the fact that the English nation is not only the inheritor of the promises made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, but that we who rejoice in the privilege of calling ourselves English men and women, Anglo-Saxons, Britishers, are their lineal descendants, and that the promises made to our forefathers are "this day fulfilled in our ears."

BRITH-ISH IMPERIALISM.

SOVIET-COMMUNISM. FASCIST-SYNDICALISM.

THE world to-day witnesses the initial stages of a triangular contest in the theory of government.

Communist Russia says:—In the dictatorship of the proletariat lies the future of world-government. This is the system that the world's workers must force upon the world whether humanity likes it or not. Our aim is the achievement, by means of universal revolution, of a truly LIBERAL STATE.

Fascist Syndicalism says:—PARLIAMENTARY and DEMOCRATIC systems have failed. There remain but two alternative systems of world control, the COMMUNIST and FASCIST. COMMUNISM is reactionary and chaotic; FASCISM alone, by virtue of its invincible vitality, is destined to reign supreme.

Both these systems, although outwardly antagonistic, possess striking similarities. Both are forms of absolute dictatorship involving the annihilation of opposition, freedom of press and individual rights. In both systems the individual is entirely subordinate to the State.

The BRITH-ISH EMPIRE, on the other hand, is a political experiment in a voluntary union of free peoples; a conception fundamentally opposite to COMMUNISM or FASCISM, being based upon Freedom and Liberty, not Force.

British Imperialism says:—Abandoning force, we find a better way in the voluntary association of free peoples, united by a common allegiance to the CROWN. We believe in the principle of unity without subordination. We believe in the largest degree of freedom for the individual within the bounds of the law of the State. We repudiate alike all forms of State Slavery or State Idolatry. The State was made for man, not man for the State.

Now if these three forms of government could be confined to the limits of their present boundaries, there would be room for each of them to work out their own destiny in the world without fear of collision.

But in days when the setting up of a single world control is recognised to be a universal necessity; when the gathering together of all peoples into one great family and one great civilisation (with the substitution of competition for co-operation in government, economic and industrial activity, etc.) will at last equip humanity in the great task—that of gaining dominion over the forces of nature and of the world—for the prosecution of which it was born; local ambitions and human aspirations must give way and come into line with the march of divine progress.

Each of the three great governmental systems in the world to-day have a universal aspect and a world appeal. But only one is destined to survive. They cannot each attain an unopposed supremacy: neither can they coalesce. On these points all are agreed.

Most significant of all, however, is the fact that each of these three developments is based upon the idea of a Kingdom of Heaven.

The connection between this idea and the doctrines of SOCIALISM and COMMUNISM has been apparent for some time. Not so apparent has been a possible connection between the idea of a KINGDOM of HEAVEN and the inspiration behind the doctrines of FASCISM and of the BRITISH EMPIRE. But of these two, more anon.

In relation to COMMUNISM, René Fülöp-Miller (Author of "The Mind and Face of Bolshevism") puts it very strikingly when he says:—"The Bolsheviks, who promised to bring salvation to RUSSIA took from Socialism only the conceptions of economic collectivity in which they found the promise of a material paradise on earth, the equal distribution of goods, and the possession of the world by the disinherited.

"But, by thus exalting economic materialism without more ado into a kind of millennial doctrine . . . that which, in the teaching of Marx, was meant merely as an economic premiss or starting-point, became the end itself in the eyes of the Bolshevists. Their yearning for led them to regard economic collectivism as the salvation of humanity from all evil, and to make it the sole content of Bolshevism.

"Once the Russians with their religious fanaticism had adopted the principle of impersonality and mechanisation, it followed naturally that they found religious ideas and dogmas in everything which, like organisation and technique, was allied with collectivist evolution. For, in Russia, all this was received by the wrong organ of perception—not in the spirit of scientific conviction but as the expression of religious feeling.

"Thus the elements of Marxism went astray and landed in the wrong chamber of the Russian's consciousness, in the 'Ikon corner' of his pious heart-brain. Consequently the simplest objects of technology immediately became sacred religious paraphernalia and fetishes for orthodox Bolshevists, and only a small error of thought was necessary to arrive finally at

Digitized by Google

of the machine as the fullest expression of the mechanised mystery of life . . .

" In a similar way the ' imitation of the machine' was soon elevated to a religious need, like the ' Imitation of Christ ' of old ; the whole of human society should henceforward be organised on technical principles, and a corresponding change be made in all forms of life.

" Just as pious mystics once strove to make themselves into an image of God, and finally to become absorbed in Him, so now the modern ecstatics of rationalism strive to become like the machine and finally to be absorbed into bliss in a structure of driving belts, pistons, valves and fly-wheels."

It is easier to appreciate the significance of this phenomenon when we realise that it is largely the product of Jewish brains and Jewish genius. In fact the struggle for leadership in RUSSIA at the present time is to decide " whether the logic of facts and of events, which is compounded of relativities (as represented by STALIN) will triumph over or succumb to the brain-logic of the Jewish Communists (followers of Trotsky)."

But now let us turn to the consideration of the Roman revolution. " FASCISM," according to Strachey Barnes[2] (in language which he states has Mussolini's approval), " may be defined generally as a political and social movement having as its object the re-establishment of a political and social order, based upon the main current of traditions that have formed our European civilisation, traditions created by ROME, first by the EMPIRE and subsequently by the CATHOLIC CHURCH.

" Conversely, FASCISM may be described as the repudiation of that individualist mentality that found expression, first in the PAGAN RENAISSANCE, then in the REFORMATION . . .

" For EUROPE, it stands at the Cross Roads, looking back toward two ROMES, IMPERIAL and CATHOLIC, that made her civilisation, and pointing to its straight continuance as the only safe road by which to advance. Thus its historical function and mission is simply this :—to prepare the ground for a new European political and social synthesis, founded on the sure foundations of the past. . . ."

In its universal aspect, we are encouraged to regard Fascism as calling for " the free re-union of Europe, of CHRISTENDOM, under the leadership of the dual ROME, that of POPE and that of EMPEROR."

" A NEW UNIVERSAL MESSAGE,"

FASCISM is presented to us by this writer as being essentially religious. " ' Each for all and all for GOD,' " an idea " which revives the mediæval ideal that was to have been realised in is the Fascist antidote to the principle of laissez-faire ;[4] ' Each for himself for the good of all,' and all the magniloquent hypocrisies of Demo-Liberalism."

This book, which is given an authoritative character by its Preface written by Signor Mussolini, is meant to commend Fascist doctrine to the British public. But British people will find it hard to reconcile the lofty religious setting of this presentation with the statements of Fascists in their own country. Thus Signor Bottai, in an article on " The Spirit of Fascismo " :—" Fascism is essentially anti-European, anti-Philosophic, anti-Christian, and anti-Democratic. Everything that the human brain can say it has said. Now, enough with the intellectual sports which are dangerous because there are people who take them seriously." He claims that true Fascists must keep silent and act ; they must not hold " mental conviction." They must be " resolute, hard, active, solar (sic) beings, and force only."

MADE OF FORCE,[5]

The June number of another Fascist organ, the Revista d'Italia, dedicated the whole of its number to MACHIAVELLI, and reaches the following conclusion :—" Machiavellism is perpetual not because it is divine (this nobody has ever dreamed of pretending), nor because, as has been said, it is diabolical. But simply because man is man, and so long as he exists, Machiavellism, which expresses the real truth of things and not their imaginary aspect, is profoundly, intimately, and adequately human. Neither above nor below man. Neither better nor worse."

Here then we have a statement of the philosophy and political creed which many believe to be the only final alternative to Soviet domination.

The Soviet Russians, so Wickham Steed declares, have been taught by LENIN that " only through collective action and organisation under the dictatorship of the proletariat, could capitalism be destroyed and be attained." They have now " come to accept, actively or passively, the idea that the true re-birth of humanity is to be brought about by the mechanical, external and purely cumulative combination of all individuals !

" In this way, the ' collective man ' becomes the human ideal, with the first of May as his festival, the machine as his god and the destruction of personality as his creed. This

[1] A similar tendency toward State Idolatry is evidently present in the Fascist system, for Strachey Barnes, in his " Universal Aspects of Fascism," tells us that the Catholic Boy Scout Associations were disbanded in order to check " those elements in Fascism which would idolise the State."

[2] The author makes out a splendid case for Fascism, theoretically, but has the wisdom to qualify his presentation with the statement that there must always be " a sharp distinction between what is absolute and what is contingent."

[3] In this phrase, coined by a Morning Post Reviewer, we have the emergence of the idea of a Kingdom of Heaven. In his declaration that Fascism is opposed to those kinds of Nationalism which are " in opposition to God and the Kingdom of God," Strachey Barnes inevitably identifies Fascism with the inspiration of this ideal.

[4] According to Mr. Barnes, Laissez-faire " issues as a logical consequence of the mentality engendered by the REFORMATION. Then it was that the great revolt of Individualism against authority was made manifest. This and the special influence of PURITANISM, the emphasis placed on the lessons to be drawn from OLD TESTAMENT HISTORY . . . . gradually transformed society from the form which the influence of the CHURCH had given it during the MIDDLE AGES, to the one we see around us now." It is from this lamentable (?) condition that Fascism would seek to deliver us !

[5] This forms an interesting comparison with Daniel xi, 38. Compare also " Week by Week," " N. M. & B.," issue dated 6/7/27.

fantastic notion of transforming mankind into an enormous automaton is only comprehensible in the light of Russian history and Russian conditions."

The idea of the true

RE-BIRTH[6] OF HUMANITY,

the establishment of a KINGDOM of HEAVEN or CITY of GOD upon earth, inspires both of these tremendous experiments. But whether we accept the process of blind destruction of human personality as advocated by RUSSIA or the exaltation of individual units of the STATE into men made of force and force only, as advocated by ROME, we still seem far from the spirit of the KINGDOM as revealed in prophetic Scriptures.

We have on one hand "the collective Man" ideal and "machine god." On the other hand, the "Man is Man" ideal and the "god of Force."

But there is a third candidate for world supremacy—and her name is BRITH-AIN. Behind the COVENANT LAND lies the one true scheme for the re-birth of humanity and the establishment of a Kingdom of God upon earth. It is the true scheme because it is not of human origin but is divine.[7]

Behind the re-born Isaac or Anglo-Saxon Race there lies the idea of a re-birth in JESUS CHRIST (the greatest of the sons of Isaac) into the biological ranks of a race of super-men, the sons of GOD. These are not "machine men" or "solar beings," but "elohim."[8] They are super-men because THROUGH Christ they have attained the spiritual and moral supremacy which gives them right to rule.

Not in human organisation but by spiritual re-birth in CHRIST lies the path of human progress. And this path which is open to the feet of people of every nation is based upon a biological foundation.

The ANGLO-SAXON RACE was re-born physically in ISAAC.[9] It is a race dedicated[10] to the service of other nations. But even to this race, nay, all the more to this race, the imperious command holds good:—"Ye must be born again!" A national—a racial re-birth is called for. BRITH-ISH—a race in covenant relationship with GOD—we may be by natural birth (as lineal descent of Abraham)[11], but we must become Israel. Only thus can and shall we become truly fit to rule with GOD.

But even in our present state we have a dim conception of the radiant vision. Far from believing that Man is Man or that Man must become a machine without a soul in order to rule triumphantly, our faith declares that > . . . man is not Man as yet.

> Nor shall I deem his object served, his end
> Attained, his genuine strength put fairly forth,
> While only here and there a star dispels
> The darkness, here and there a towering mind
> O'erlooks its prostrate fellows; when the host
> Is out at once to the despair of night,
> When all mankind alike is perfected,
> Equal in full blown powers—then, not till then,
> I say, begins man's general infancy.

This is as generally true of the Kingdom nationally as it is of mankind individually. For the Kingdom is not the Kingdom yet. It is in the process of "must be being restored."[13] And not until it is restored and the King has come to reign will begin the Kingdom's general infancy! Not until then will the Kingdom properly begin her work. Not until then will the people of the Kingdom (now manifested as that long-longed-for race of Super-Men, the sons of God)[14] have become fully equipped for the task of ministration to the other nations of mankind.

But in the meantime—until that phase of Kingdom-development has come, BRITAIN, as embryonic and potential KINGDOM of GOD upon earth, remains the centre of an EMPIRE, which although an enigma to other nations, yet on their own testimony, opens up to the life of peoples.

Evidence of dawning consciousness of Kingdom-citizenship was contained in the M.P.'s recent question before the House of Commons[16]:—"I do not know whether that (referring to the term—The Kingdom of Heaven) is applicable, but the BRITISH EMPIRE is the nearest we can get."

The world has three great systems, then, to choose from. The ultra-modern conception of a world-order as proselytised by MOSCOW. This is essentially a product of Jewish genius—a panacea proffered by members of "the broken-off branch through unbelief."

The revived ancient Roman-conception—essentially a Gentile inspiration based upon the logic of the Kingdoms of this World.

The Brith-ish conception representing the KINGDOM (of Daniel ii, 44) which is not of this World, essentially an Israel creative development—an experiment in liberty and moral-co-operation—which must prevail, for it is built upon the covenants and law of GOD.

"Life is not dated merely by years. Events are sometimes the best Calendars."—Disraeli.

"The sunshine of cheerfulness and hope will lighten every trouble."

[6] Strachey Barnes himself admits that "the final justification of the Empires of to-day can only be accomplished with a truly positive change of heart," but he seems to think that this can be achieved by Government discipline and Papal education. If Evangelical claims be right, however, we cannot expect the work of human organisations along human lines to bring about a true conversion. Only the spirit of Christ witnessing through the written Word of God can do that. Incidentally, the justification of the Brith-ish Empire will come as a result of the proclamation of the Gospel of the Kingdom. (See Matt. xxiv, 14.) (Ferrar Fenton.)

[7] Of divine origin, it is being worked out through human agency, that of the Brith-ish race, a race in covenant relationship with God.

[12] Israel means "ruling with God."

[13] Matt. vi, 10. (F. F.)

[14] See Rom. viii, 19, etc.

[15] This is the testimony of Don Luigi Sturzo, late leader of the Italian Popular Party. It is shared by many other noted foreigners. Only the knowledge of the Message or Gospel of the Kingdom is required to make this dawning vision of the Kingdom complete.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

WE are very glad to report a large number of new subscribers to this journal every week, and we are grateful to all those who have responded to our invitation to help to increase the circulation, by subscribing for extra copies for their friends or for any whom we may select.

The Rev. Hector Macturk, M.A., has addressed a successful and largely-attended Drawing-room meeting at Louth, by kind invitation of Miss Sharpley and Miss Tenny, whose enthusiasm resulted from their attendance at our last Congress. We heartily congratulate them and Mr. Macturk on having aroused the interest of several of the leading people of Louth. We understand that efforts will be made to follow on with a public meeting as soon as possible.

Mr. W. H. Hesketh, J.P., gave lectures to appreciative audiences at Darlington and Durham on February 22nd and 23rd. Mr. John H. Tench will lecture at the Lightfoot Institute, Bishop Auckland, on March 6th, at 7.30 p.m.

The Middlesex County Council last October decided by a large majority to maintain the closing of cinemas on Sunday. Persistent efforts are made by the cinema trade, however, to unseat those councillors who voted against them, and the Middlesex United Committee for Sunday Defence appeals for help on election day, March 7th. Motor-cars are required, and all are asked—women as well as men—to vote, so that no councillor loses his seat because he has resisted the commercialisation of the Lord's Day. It is a call to the Christian Church.

The Rev. T. H. Whitehouse gave a wonderful address on "Moscow versus Britain" for our Bradford Branch to a splendid audience on February 10th. Mr. Garrison being unable, through illness, to give his promised lecture on "Palestine" on February 17th, his place was taken by the Rev. Canon Parfit, Canon of Jerusalem, who made—the Hon. Secretary writes—"a fine substitute, though everyone regretted Mr. Garrison's absence."

B.-I. sermons will be preached to-morrow, March 4th, at St. Saviour's Church, Hanley Road, Crouch Hill, by the Vicar, the Rev. W. H. Stuart-Fox, M.A., at 11 and 6.30.

British-Israel is making rapid progress in the Hounslow district. Another large public meeting was held in the Council House on February 23rd, and it was attended by leading residents. The Rev. Joseph Gay was the speaker. The President of the new Branch—J. Lynwood Palmer, Esq., a life-member of the Federation—presided.

The Rev. Commander Roberts, R.N., and Mr. Howard Rand, LL.B., gave very interesting addresses at Headquarters last week.

The four meetings held in the Cambridge Hall, Southport, were all excellently attended, and real interest was aroused. Several of the clergy were present, one or two of them at all the meetings. Two clergy—Canon R. Blakeney, the Rector, and Rev. G. Barber—took the chair at two of the meetings, and the former declared his interest from the Empire point of view because he was convinced that the guiding hand of God was clearly to be seen shaping our Empire's ends. The Rev. Guy Waddington, who acted as substitute for the Rev. Pascoe Goard, received a very hearty welcome and a most attentive hearing.

Two very enthusiastic meetings were held in Croydon on the 10th, the addresses being given by Mr. Morey, who spoke on "Some Popular Errors" and "The Migrations of Israel and Judah into Britain." Good headway is being made by this Branch in all its work; the balance-sheet for 1927 was eminently satisfactory. A Prayer and Bible Study Class is being held on the fourth Wednesday of each month at the house of a member, who has very kindly offered her drawing-room for this purpose.

IT IS TWENTY-SEVEN YEARS since the "Cancer Research Fund" commenced its work. Its promises have drawn vast sums of money from an anxious public, and "more funds" are almost daily appealed for to carry on this—unscientific because un-Scriptural—Research, of which the annual results consist of NOTHING SAVE EMPTY PROMISES of some future epoch-making discovery! Meanwhile, nearly every kind of animal has been inoculated or otherwise artificially infected with this cruel disease, and every organ of their miserable bodies thus experimented upon!

TWENTY-SEVEN YEARS AGO the annual average death-rate of cancer was eight hundred and sixty-six per million.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation ; the inheritors of her Charters ; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction ; the executors of her commissions.

[It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.]

THE LAW OF THE LORD, OR THE COMMON LAW.—IX.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

WE cannot transcribe all the abstract of the Law contained in this wonderful Book: Deuteronomy. Certain we are that the reader who takes the trouble to read its stately sentences will find the Book of absorbing interest, when he takes into consideration the fact that it forms the basis of the Law by which Britain, and, with her, a third of the world's population, is governed.

The closing chapters are so important, and withal of such exceeding beauty, that we shall include them in this article.

We are reaching, as a nation and as a race, the end of a weary road of disobedience. It is that very end to which we believe we have attained ; therefore we look for the return of the nation to obedience ; and to God.

"And it shall come to pass, when all these things are come upon thee, the blessing and the curse, which I have set before thee, and thou shalt call them to mind among all the nations, whither the Lord thy God hath driven thee,

And shalt return unto the Lord thy God, and shalt obey his voice according to all that I commanded thee this day, thou and thy children, with all thine heart, and with all thy soul ;

That then the Lord thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return and gather thee from all the nations, whither the Lord thy God hath scattered thee.

If any of thine be driven out unto the outmost parts of heaven, from thence will the Lord thy God gather thee, and from thence will he fetch thee ;

And the Lord thy God will bring thee into the land which thy fathers possessed, and thou shalt possess it ; and he will do thee good, and multiply thee above thy fathers.

And the Lord thy God will circumcise thine heart, and the heart of thy seed, to love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, that thou mayest live.

And the Lord thy God will put all these curses upon thine enemies, and on them that hate thee, which persecuted thee.

And thou shalt return and obey the voice of the Lord, and do all his commandments which I command thee this day.

And the Lord thy God will make thee plenteous in every work of thine hand, in the fruit of thy body, and in the fruit of thy cattle, and in the fruit of thy land, for good ; for the Lord will again rejoice over thee for good, as he rejoiced over thy fathers ;

If thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the Lord thy God, to keep his commandments and his statutes which are written in this book of the law, and if thou turn unto the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul.

For this commandment which I command thee this day, it is not hidden from thee, neither is it far off.

It is not in heaven, that thou shouldest say, Who shall go up for us to heaven, and bring it unto us, that we may hear it, and do it? . . . . . .

But the word is very nigh unto thee, in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that thou mayest do it.

See, I have set before thee this day life and good, and death and evil;

In that I command thee this day to love the Lord thy God, to walk in his ways, and to keep his commandments and his statutes and his judgments, that thou mayest live and multiply: and the Lord thy God shall bless thee in the land whither thou goest to possess it. . . . . .

I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing: therefore choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live:

That thou mayest love the Lord thy God, and that thou mayest obey his voice, and that thou mayest cleave unto him: for he is thy life, and the length of thy days: that thou mayest dwell in the land which the Lord sware unto thy fathers, to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob, to give them" —Deut. xxx.

MOSES PASSES ON THE RESPONSIBILITY OF LEADING ISRAEL.

"And Moses called unto Joshua, and said unto him in the sight of all Israel, Be strong and of a good courage: for thou must go with this people unto the land which the Lord hath sworn unto their fathers to give them; and thou shalt cause them to inherit it.

And the Lord, he it is that doth go before thee; he will be with thee, he will not fail thee, neither forsake thee: fear not, neither be dismayed.

And Moses wrote this law, and delivered it unto the priests the sons of Levi, which bare the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and unto all the elders of Israel.

And Moses commanded them, saying, At the end of every seven years, in the solemnity of the year of release, in the feast of tabernacles,

When all Israel is come to appear before the Lord thy God in the place which he shall choose, thou shalt read this law before all Israel in their hearing.

Gather the people together, men, and women, and children, and thy stranger that is within thy gates, that they may hear, and that they may learn, and fear the Lord your God, and observe to do all the words of this law:

And that their children, which have not known any thing, may hear, and learn to fear the Lord your God, as long as ye live in the land whither ye go over Jordan to possess it."—Deut. xxxi, 7-13.

"And he gave Joshua the son of Nun a charge, and said, Be strong and of a good courage: for thou shalt bring the children of Israel into the land which I sware unto them: and I will be with thee.

And it came to pass, when Moses had made an end of writing the words of this law in a book, until they were finished,

That Moses commanded the Levites, which bare the ark of the covenant of the Lord, saying,

Take this book of the law, and put it in the side of the ark of the covenant of the Lord your God, that it may be there for a witness against thee."—Deut. xxxi, 23-26.

THE SONG OF MOSES.

"Give ear, O ye heavens, and I will speak; and hear, O earth, the words of my mouth.

My doctrine shall drop as the rain, my speech shall distil as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showers upon the grass:

Because I will publish the name of the Lord: ascribe ye greatness unto our God.

He is the Rock, his work is perfect: for all his ways are judgment: a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he.

They have corrupted themselves, their spot is not the spot of his children: they are a perverse and crooked generation.

Do ye thus requite the Lord, O foolish people and unwise? is not he thy father that hath bought thee? hath he not made thee, and established thee?

Remember the days of old, consider the years of many generations: ask thy father, and he will shew thee; thy elders, and they will tell thee.

When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, when he separated the sons of Adam, he set the bounds of the people according to the number of the children of Israel.

For the Lord's portion is his people; Jacob is the lot of his inheritance.

He found him in a desert land, and in the waste howling wilderness; he led him about, he instructed him, he kept him as the apple of his eye.

As an eagle stirreth up her nest, fluttereth over her young, spreadeth abroad her wings, taketh them, beareth them on her wings;

So the Lord alone did lead him, and there was no strange god with him.

He made him ride on the high places of the earth, that he might eat the increase of the fields; and he made him to suck honey out of the rock, and oil out of the flinty rock;

Butter of kine, and milk of sheep, with fat of lambs, and rams of the breed of Bashan, and goats, with the fat of kidneys of wheat; and thou didst drink the pure blood of the grape.

But Jeshurun waxed fat, and kicked: thou art waxen fat, thou art grown thick, thou art covered with fatness; then he forsook God which made him, and lightly esteemed the Rock of his salvation.

They provoked him to jealousy with strange gods, with abominations provoked they him to anger.

They sacrificed unto devils, not to God; to gods whom they knew not, to new gods that came newly up, whom your fathers feared not.

Of the Rock that begat thee thou art unmindful, and hast forgotten God that formed thee.

And when the Lord saw it, he abhorred them, because of the provoking of his sons, and of his daughters.

And he said, I will hide my face from them, I will see what their end shall be: for they are a very froward generation, children in whom is no faith.

They have moved me to jealousy with that which is not God; they have provoked me to anger with their vanities: and I will move them to jealousy with those which are not a people; I will provoke them to anger with a foolish nation.

For a fire is kindled in mine anger, and shall burn unto the lowest hell, and shall consume the earth with her increase, and set on fire the foundations of the mountains.

I will heap mischiefs upon them; I will spend mine arrows upon them.

They shall be burnt with hunger, and devoured with burning heat, and with bitter destruction: I will also send the teeth of beasts upon them, with the poison of serpents of the dust.

The sword without, and terror within, shall destroy both the young man and the virgin, the suckling also with the man of gray hairs.

I said, I would scatter them into corners, I would make the remembrance of them to cease from among men:

Were it not that I feared the wrath of the enemy, lest their adversaries should behave themselves strangely, and lest they should say, Our hand is high, and the Lord hath not done all this.

For they are a nation void of counsel, neither is there any understanding in them.

O that they were wise, that they understood this, that they would consider their latter end!

How should one chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight, except their Rock had sold them, and the Lord had shut them up?

For their rock is not as our Rock, even our enemies themselves being judges.

For their vine is of the vine of Sodom, and of the fields of Gomorrah; their grapes are grapes of gall, their clusters are bitter:

Their wine is the poison of dragons, and the cruel venom of asps.

Is not this laid up in store with me, and sealed up among my treasures?

To me belongeth vengeance, and recompence; their foot shall slide in due time: for the day of their calamity is at hand, and the things that shall come upon them make haste.

For the Lord shall judge his people, and repent himself for his servants, when he seeth that their power is gone, and there is none shut up, or left.

And he shall say, Where are their gods, their rock in whom they trusted,

Which did eat the fat of their sacrifices, and drank the wine of their drink offerings; let them rise up and help you, and be your protection.

See now that I, even I, am he, and there is no god with me: I kill, and I make alive: I wound, and I heal: neither is there any that can deliver out of my hand.

For I lift up my hand to heaven, and say, I live for ever.

If I whet my glittering sword, and mine hand take hold on judgment: I will render vengeance to mine enemies, and will reward them that hate me.

I will make mine arrows drunk with blood, and my sword shall devour flesh; and that with the blood of the slain and of the captives, from the beginning of revenges upon the enemy.

Rejoice, O ye nations, with his people; for he will avenge the blood of his servants, and will render vengeance to his adversaries, and will be merciful unto his land, and to his people."—Deut. xxxii, 1-43.

THE BLESSING OF ISRAEL, TRIBE BY TRIBE.

"And this is the blessing, wherewith Moses the man of God blessed the children of Israel before his death.

And he said, The Lord came from Sinai, and rose up from Seir unto them; he shined forth from mount Paran, and he came with ten thousands of saints; from his right hand went a fiery law for them.

Yea, he loved the people; all his saints are in thy hand: and they sat down at thy feet; every one shall receive of thy words.

Moses commanded us a law, even the inheritance of the congregation of Jacob.

And he was king in Jeshurun, when the heads of the people and the tribes of Israel were gathered together.

Let Reuben live, and not die; and let not his men be few.

And this is the blessing of Judah: and he said, Hear, Lord, the voice of Judah, and bring him unto his people: let his hands be sufficient for him; and be thou an help to him from his enemies.

And of Levi he said, Let thy Thummim and thy Urim be with thy holy one, whom thou didst prove at Massah, and with whom thou didst strive at the waters of Meribah;

Who said unto his father and to his mother, I have not seen him; neither did he acknowledge his brethren, nor knew his own children: for they have observed thy word, and kept thy covenant.

They shall teach Jacob thy judgments, and Israel thy law; they shall put incense before thee, and whole burnt sacrifice upon thine altar.

Bless, Lord, his substance, and accept the work of his hands; smite through the loins of them that rise against him, and of them that hate him, that they rise not again.

And of Benjamin he said, The beloved of the Lord shall dwell in safety by him; and the Lord shall cover him all the day long, and he shall dwell between his shoulders.

And of Joseph he said, Blessed of the Lord be his land, for the precious things of heaven, for the dew, and for the deep that coucheth beneath,

And for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun, and for the precious things put forth by the moon,

And for the chief things of the ancient mountains, and for the precious things of the lasting hills,

And for the precious things of the earth and fulness thereof, and for the good will of him that dwelt in the bush: let the blessing come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren.

His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the horns of unicorns: with them he shall push the people together to the ends of the earth: and they are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh.

And of Zebulun he said, Rejoice, Zebulun, in thy going out; and, Issachar, in thy tents.

They shall call the people unto the mountain; there they shall offer sacrifices of righteousness: for they shall suck of the abundance of the seas, and of treasures hid in the sand.

And of Gad he said, Blessed be he that enlargeth Gad: he dwelleth as a lion, and teareth the arm with the crown of the head.

And he provided the first part for himself, because there, in a portion of the lawgiver, was he seated; and he came with the heads of the people, he executed the justice of the Lord, and his judgments with Israel.

And of Dan he said, Dan is a lion's whelp: he shall leap from Bashan.

And of Naphtali he said, O Naphtali, satisfied with favour, and full with the blessing of the Lord: possess thou the west and the south.

And of Asher he said, Let Asher be blessed with children: let him be acceptable to his brethren, and let him dip his foot in oil.

Thy shoes shall be iron and brass; and as thy days, so shall thy strength be.

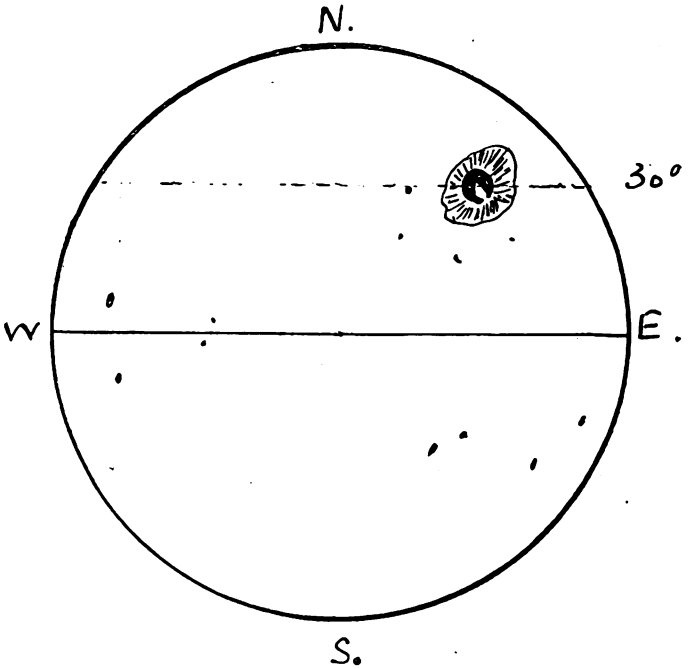
There is none like unto the God of Jeshurun, who rideth upon the heaven in thy help, and in his excellency on the sky.

The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms: and he shall thrust out the enemy from before thee: and shall say, Destroy them.

Israel then shall dwell in safety alone; the fountain of Jacob shall be upon a land of corn and wine; also his heavens shall drop down dew.

Happy art thou, O Israel: who is like unto thee, O people saved by the Lord, the shield of thy help, and who is the sword of thy excellency! and thine enemies shall be found liars unto thee; and thou shalt tread upon their high places."—Deut. xxxiii.

Thus on the eve of their starting upon that campaign which should restore them the land which God and Crown granted to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob four centuries, or thereabout, before, came the recitation of the principles of the Law to the nation by Moses, the aged man of God.



These were the last days of that training in the Law which had been continuing for the last forty years. Henceforth the Law should be translated into action, and should set the course for the Israel nations to the end of time, and which should finally become the Law of all the earth.

"Time has a marvellous power of ruin. Courts and cabinets tremble at its breath; dynasties are copelled before it like the foam upon the crest of the waves; it frets decay upon the temple-pile, and upon the oriel's delicate tracing; it makes mounds of the palaces where once kings rioted and beauty revelled—a roofless ruin, where owls hoot from decaying towers, and where the panther makes his lair."

MORLEY PUNSHON.

SUN-SPOTS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A., F.R.A.S.

Approximate positions of sun-spots, including big spot visible to the naked eye (30 deg. N.), showing umbra and pen-umbra of the latter. Sketched as seen through three-inch refracting telescope. February 22nd, 1928, 2.30 p.m.

"There shall be signs in the sun." (Luke xxi, 25.)

SUN-SPOTS are very interesting phenomena, but it is not very often that the man in the street or even the Bible student takes any considered notice of them. Little is known by astronomers either about the condition of sun-spots or about the cause of them. To the human eye they appear dark by contrast with the bright disc of the sun, but, on the other hand, they would look quite bright if they could be viewed alone. Sometimes they can be detected with the naked eye, provided that they are sufficiently big, and that the day be a foggy one, inasmuch as the fog prevents the ultra-violet rays of the sun from penetrating our atmosphere, so that the sun looks like a red ball in the sky. When the latter is the case, and if there be a big sun-spot in existence at the time, it is possible to detect with the naked eye a small black point on the red disc—never near the poles of the sun, but always within what are known as the two "sun-spot zones," one on each side of the solar equator, extending from latitude 40 deg. to about 4 deg. from the equator.

The aspect of a spot changes from day to day, and even sometimes from hour to hour. I have often observed them through my astronomical telescope, and find a study of them and of their changes exceedingly interesting, the more so as the very spots themselves prove that the sun is rotating on its own axis. Further, they show that different latitudes rotate in different time, since it has been proved that the equator takes 25 days, latitude 30 deg. takes 27 days, latitude 45 deg. takes 29 days, while the Polar regions appear to take some 35 days for rotation. But allowance has to be made for the movement of the earth in its orbit round the sun, so that the sun appears really to take 27½ days for rotation. This means that any given sun-spot may be on the visible disc, and so capable of being seen by us, for some 13 or 14 days, when it will disappear with the rotation of the sun, only to reappear again for another fortnight's observation.

It is probable that the sun is a variable star, viz., that its brightness waxes and wanes alternately in a given cycle. This variation of brightness would not be observed by any member of or in the solar system, owing to our close proximity to the sun. But it is possible that its variation in brightness might be seen by any supposed observer on a distant star, in the same way that we can determine which stars are variable, and observe the periodical regularity of their variation. The fact that the sun is an incipient variable may be due to, or may account for, the interesting phenomena of sun-spots. It has now been practically established that the spots undergo a great variation of frequency in a period of 11⅛ years, approximately one-ninth of a century. It took astronomers 250 years to discover this sun-spot cycle. During the progress of the sun-spot cycle, the spots, which generally appear in high latitudes (i.e., they are always born a long distance north or south of the equator), where none have been detected for ten years, very gradually close in on the equator, so that in the minimum period the spots are in equatorial latitudes. Then a fresh cycle breaks out again in high latitudes, before the old cycle has died away, so that the two cycles go on side by side for two years.

These cycles thus have two extremes, called the maximum and the minimum, and between one sun-spot maximum and the next sun-spot maximum there is this period of 11⅛ years, as is also the case with the minima.

My purpose in drawing the attention of our readers to such an interesting astronomical (or, more correctly, solar) study is because this year, 1928, is one that contains a sun-spot maximum.

At the moment of writing there are several sun-spots visible through the telescope, and one very big one which can be seen by the naked eye, provided that there be a low fog, with clear sky above, thus making the sun look very red. And so I was observing the sun on February 22nd at mid-day, and counted about one dozen spots of varying sizes. But amongst them is this very big spot (itself the centre of a group), with the umbra and pen-umbra clearly defined, and with a bright streak shooting across the centre. It is situated approximately 30 deg. N. of the equator so far as I could estimate, and its width is many times the earth's diameter.

Now people very often ask whether sun-spots have any influence upon our weather. But after a very careful analysis of the records of weather cycles compared with those of sun-spot cycles, no definite relation has been found, so that no apparent connection can be established, and the appearance of a sun-spot has thus no effect on the immediate weather, as is sometimes erroneously suggested. But it has been stated as an observed fact that there are more electrons in the air at time of sun-spot maximum than at minimum, while there may be effects and changes, similarly periodic, going on around us that have subtle but obscure influence on our health and temperament. Similarly, certain manifestations of earth magnetism, such as the length of the daily swing of the magnet recording declination, appear to be periodic, whose periods synchronise with that of the sun-spots. Likewise there is close connection with the terrestrial display of auroræ borealis; witness also the present volcanic disturbance within Vesuvius.

The thought has therefore occurred to me to see if we can trace any prophetic connection with sun-spots, and I submit the following facts without prejudice, and without having arrived at any dogmatic conclusion, yet bearing in mind the words of Our Lord that "there shall be signs in the sun." The simplest method is to reproduce the following tables derived from the Greenwich record of spots, commencing 1805:—

DATES OF SUN-SPOT MAXIMA AND MINIMA.

Maxima.		Minima.
1816	1883	1823	1889
1829	1894	1833	1901
1837	1906	1843	1913

Now a cursory examination of the above tables will show that the majority of the sun-spot maximum years have been closely associated with British Empire developments, while many of the minimum years have had some apparent connection with Empire events also.

For example, to consider first the maximum years. The year 1805 was famous for the Battle of Trafalgar; 1816 closely followed the Battle of Waterloo. 1829 was noted for the Catholic Emancipation Bill. In 1837 Queen Victoria came to the throne. 1848 marked a year of revolutions in almost every capital of Europe, the formation of the French Republic, the Irish Rebellion and the suppression of the Chartists, while in 1849 the Punjaub was annexed. In 1860 the Nile source was discovered.

In 1870 the famous Education Act was passed, while abroad the Franco-German War began, and the temporal power of the Papacy fell. In 1882 Lord Wolseley defeated Arabi in the Egyptian campaign at Tel-el-Kebir, only a few months before the maximum cycle of 1883. In 1894 Lord Rosebery succeeded Gladstone as Premier, and the Budget passed in this year is one of the Landmarks of national finance. In 1906 the Transvaal obtained self-government.

Of 1917 little need be said, since that year (1,335 lunar years from the Hegira, Dan. xii, 12) will ever stand out of world-wide and prophetic importance, since it saw the advent of the U.S.A. into the Great War, and, most important of all in modern history and in the fulfilment of Biblical prophecy, the deliverance of Jerusalem by Field-Marshal Lord Allenby, etc.

Now, turning to the minimum years, the outstanding features are as follows:—1833 saw the suppression of Colonial slavery, while in the same year the East India trade was thrown open. In 1878 took place the famous Treaty of Berlin, by which Cyprus was ceded to Great Britain, and the foundation possibilities of the Baghdad Railway were laid. In 1889 the famous London Dock Strike took place, while also the great Act for Prevention of Cruelty to Children was passed. In 1901, during the South African War, Queen Victoria died, and King Edward VII succeeded.

1913 prepared the immediate way for the outbreak of the Great War, while 1923 afterwards was an important prophetic year, being 2,520 solar years from 598 B.C., when Nebuchadnezzar deported Jehoiachin and sacked Jerusalem. It is impossible to give here all the important events associated with the year 1923, but I compiled a topical list in the Banner of Israel for February 13th, 1924, p. 84, and which may perhaps justify the importance of associating the minimum sun-spot cycle of 1923 with prophetic events.

Now we come to more recent times. Here we may notice that the curve of sun-spot frequency rises much more quickly from minimum to maximum than it falls again. The rise takes about four years and the fall about seven. Sometimes a double maximum occurs, and frequently a halt, and then a slight revival about half-way down the descent. So the last three or four years have been interesting. In 1926 (within the rise towards the present maximum of 1928) there were some large sun-spots. This was the year of the greatest Strike in human history. In 1927 there was a lull in the sun-spots, but it must not be forgotten that there was the great Total Eclipse of the Sun last year, visible in the North of England. Total Solar Eclipses visible in the British Isles are very rare indeed. The last totalities in England were in 1715 (visible in London) and in 1724. Then the recent one in 1927, while the next totality visible in England will not be until 1999 (to be visible in Cornwall). When the Greenwich staff took photographs of the Total Eclipse on June 29th last year in Lancashire and Yorkshire, it was found that there was much solar activity amongst the exterior appendages of the sun which may doubtless be connected with the sun-spot maximum due this year. There may also be a seismic or magnetic connection between last year's Total Eclipse (with the observed solar activity referred to) and the fairly big Earthquake which took place in July last in Palestine, not many days after the Eclipse.

Bible students who have devoted their time to the study of prophecy are agreed that this year (1928) is destined to be a very important one, nor must we forget that 1934 is gradually drawing nearer and nearer. We have in mind the words of Our Lord that "there shall be signs in the sun" (Luke xxi, 25), and so we cannot be wrong in seeking to interpret the various solar phenomena in the light of prophecy and current events. Solar activity and terrestrial magnetism are active at the present time. Certain great seismic changes are due to take place in Palestine before very long (Zech. xiv, 4), and the days of Armageddon are assuredly drawing nigh. Who knows what wonderful fulfilments of prophecy may take place in the near future?

ADDRESSES DELIVERED AT THE CHURCH HOUSE, WESTMINSTER:

BY THE REV CANON C. J. HOLLIS, M.A. (Chairman).

IT is a peculiar pleasure and honour to preside over this important meeting to-day, and I will go on to make it as clear as I can why I feel it to be such. Now a very composite and complete syllabus has been printed covering, at any rate, some of the many subjects that are in our minds to-day, and I am afraid I should not be able, from any point of view, to deal with many, and certainly not with all, of them. I understand that these meetings have been arranged to afford an opportunity for some of us at least to make quite clear our standpoint, and to make quite clear what we feel to be the blessing and the benefit of the teaching which has been brought home to us, the teaching of the British-Israel Truth, including, as I shall show in a moment or two, not only the Gospel of Grace, but also, and very specially and definitely, because it has been so much neglected, the Gospel of the Kingdom. It is quite possible that we have here this afternoon a certain number of people who are either strangers to this Truth, or who are anxious to know more about it, before they feel they can give their own hearty adherence to it. May I say this at the outset, I want to make it quite clear that we as British-Israelites do not claim any monopoly. We do not suggest, much less believe, that we are saved in any sense that other Christians are not. But I find that among groups of Christians and Churchmen the truth of the return of the Saviour King is not emphasised. In the British-Israel Movement that truth stands in the very forefront of the whole of their programme. While in the case of many Christians and Churchmen the Bible is unquestionably and lamentably losing its hold, so that we begin to see the possibility that is mentioned in Amos of there being a famine of hearing the Word of the Lord—while in many cases the Bible is losing its hold—as witness the sermons and addresses of great men in the Church—in British-Israel circles it is the very heart and centre of all their teaching, the Word of God, inspired by the Holy Spirit. Holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost. We do not take this or that passage of Scripture and say, "This is folk lore; this is oriental symbolism." We say, "This is the Word of God." "Thus saith the Lord." While among many Christians and Churchmen salvation by faith alone in Jesus Christ, the Lamb of God, Who taketh away the sin of the world, is duly proclaimed, yet the complemental truths of the Kingship of that same Lord, and obedience to the laws of His Kingdom, receive but slender emphasis; whereas in British-Israel Truth these two great subjects are held side by side. While the Gospel of Grace is the foundation, the Gospel of the Kingdom is the superstructure, and the first without the second is incomplete. I want to stress this thought, for here is, I believe, one reason why our Cause is suspect in some minds, and fails to secure the adherence of many earnest Christians. I believe you will agree with me that you cannot expect a sinner, a man of the world, to own Jesus Christ as King unless he has found in Him the Saviour of his soul. I hold in my hand a letter from an earnest Christian minister, which may be, and I think is, typical of the attitude of some, and accounts for the abstention or opposition of many good people. This is what he says: "I have no sympathy with the Movement, for I do not consider that it has the support of Scripture. To me the message the nation desperately needs is not, 'Ye must be Israel' (I do not think that any of us would say that is the message; certainly not in those bold terms), but 'Ye must be born again.' If we were Israel, which I do not believe, we should still need the new birth. This is the great truth that I find the British-Israel-World Federation does not emphasise." Is that true? (A voice,

Digitized by Google

"No.") I knew it was not true from my own reading of our literature, and from my own acquaintances. I have many friends who have helped me, and with whom I have been in touch, and I do not think this statement, however conscientiously made, to be well founded, or accurately stated. If I thought it to be true I should reconsider my position. I agree that Our Lord came to save His people from their sins, and that He said, "Except a man be born again he cannot see the Kingdom of Heaven," and "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the Kingdom of Heaven." And I know He also proclaimed in the early days of His ministry, "The Kingdom of God is at hand." He was understood to assert—and that was one of the charges and the taunts made against Him—that He Himself was Christ the King. And He said to the Jews of His day, "The kingdom shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof," which nation we believe to be ourselves.

Having made this point may I, as I hinted at the beginning, make this personal testimony. I have done it before, and perhaps it is necessary to do it again. As a Churchman I do not find that this Truth conflicts with my loyalty to my Communion. Indeed I believe I see, I am sure I see, that it illuminates the liturgy of the Prayer Book, which I love. As a Christian, and as a Churchman, I do not find that my belief in this Truth affects adversely, or detracts from, the foundation truths of salvation through Christ alone. I find that this belief tends to bring me into ever closer touch with my Saviour and Lord. I would say with the people of old, in the days of Absalom's defection from his rightful sovereign, his father David, "The king saved us out of the hands of our enemies. Why speak ye not a word of bringing the king back?" As a Christian and a lover and student of the Word of God this Truth gives new meaning and life to both Old and New Testaments, to the prophecies and parables, and a new conviction that in these days of a loosened hold on the Word of God, that here we have in the old Book a sure ground and a safe guide, and a supreme authority, the only antidote to Modernism, Sacerdotalism and Communism. For these reasons I am not ashamed of this teaching. For these reasons I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, which is at once and in one the Gospel of Grace and the Gospel of the Kingdom.

BY THE REV. J. H. SATCHELL, B.A.

IT is a little more than fifty years ago since the subject of British-Israel Truth was first brought to my notice. I was then, of course, but a boy, and boy-like I did not think very much about it, and I was not very much impressed. My mother was a great believer in the Truth at that time, and among friends who happened to be staying in the house was an elderly lady who was a very strong upholder of British-Israel Truth. Twenty years later I found myself a curate in the North of England and in rather an important town, and it so happened that the Superintendent of our Sunday School was a great British-Israel believer; he was always talking about it whenever he had the opportunity, and his strong point, as far as I could see, seemed to be just this, that we must be Israel, that is, the Ten Tribes, because we were fulfilling, and the only nation which was fulfilling, the promises made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, the fathers of old. Now that did not grip me. I inwardly smiled at it because I had been brought up in the atmosphere of the belief that those promises to Abraham and the fathers were fulfilled in the Person of Jesus Christ; and at that time I was quite satisfied with this, and I thought my friend, the Superintendent, was rather tending towards the materialistic side of things against the spiritual. I saw that Jesus Christ was indeed, and would be, a blessing to all nations of the world, and I thought that the promise of God that his seed should be like the stars in heaven, and as the sand upon the seashore, was fulfilled in the spiritual seed of Jesus Christ—His Church. There I felt quite satisfied, and there I felt I was impervious to the arguments and reasonings of the Sunday School Superintendent.

I now pass on another twenty years about, and again I find myself in a large city in the South of England. And one evening I happened to be at a meeting of British-Israelites in that city, and there I had the pleasure of listening to a gentleman who happens to be on this platform this afternoon. And as I listened to his words, wonderful words as they seemed to me, proceeding from his mouth, I recognised a man deeply versed in the Holy Scriptures; and that induced me to pay more and more attention. I thought, Here is someone who really does know, and one who has studied deeply God's sacred Book. And he was setting forth the British-Israel problem or truth, and he made me feel that, after all, those promises to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob could not have their complete fulfilment simply and only in the Person of Jesus Christ and the Church; that they demanded something more than a spiritual fulfilment; that they must have a literal fulfilment, otherwise the promises could scarcely be considered as honest promises. It is just as though you were to tell a man who came to you and asked for bread, "Come to me to-morrow, and I will satisfy you with bread." And the man came, and you gave him a verse or two of Scripture, and said, "There you are; there is good bread for you." I do not think the man would have much faith in you. So, in the same way, it seemed to me that God's Word must be fulfilled to the very letter, and that when God told Abraham that his seed was to become a company of nations, it could not possibly be that this was fulfilled through the coming of the Church of Jesus Christ. And so from that moment forward I began more and more to study the subject, and I have been reading about it and thinking about it ever since that time, and I can only testify this afternoon that all along the line my belief in this Truth has become stronger and stronger.

Perhaps you may say, "What is the good of it? What is the use of it?" I asked in that same city a committee of clergymen to allow me to bring forward, as a subject for consideration at one of their monthly meetings, the subject of the British-Israel Truth. I was told afterwards that the chairman of that meeting, in talking it over with others, said, "What is the good of it? It is a waste of time." So he thought, and so, I think, they thought; and so they turned it down. Well, now, what is the good of it? Well, to my mind, the good of it, first of all, is that it makes the Bible understandable. There was a good deal in the Bible which I could not at one time understand; now I understand it. I see that this teaching throws a great light on the Old Testament Scriptures. More than that, it also throws a beam of bright light upon the New Testament Scriptures, and enables one to understand, for instance, those inspiring messages of the mother of Our Lord and the father of John the Baptist, and the angelic messages to Mary. I can see what they mean far better with the light of British-Israel Truth thrown upon them. A few years ago I was in the city of Jerusalem, and there I met an elderly lady, a Christian, who had lived for long in that wonderful city. I took the opportunity of saying to her, "Are there any British-Israelites in Jerusalem?" And she smiled, and said, "Oh, yes, all the cranks come to Jerusalem." Well, let me testify this afternoon that the British-Israel teaching is not a crank; I believe before God that it is a deep reality.

REVELATION AND RUSSIA.

BRITISH-ISRAEL LECTURES AT WORTHING.

"RUSSIA, her part and ours" was the subject chosen by the Rev. L. G. A. Roberts, Commander R.N., for an address which he gave at the Heene Rooms, Worthing, on Wednesday afternoon, under the auspices of the local Branch of the British-Israel-World Federation. In the evening he gave a further address on "The Two Witnesses," referred to in the eleventh chapter of the Book of Revelation. The Rev. C. H. Prichard (Rector of Wiston) was chairman in the afternoon, and Canon C. J. Hollis (Vicar of Holy Trinity, Worthing) in the evening.

Russia, as it related to an historical people, said the lecturer, was quite a modern name. One might search for it before the ninth century and fail to find it. Yet if they looked into their Bible they would find the word "Rosh" as a descendant of Benjamin. He was also referred to in Ezekiel, or 1,500 years before any nation was called after his name.

Israel was distinct from the Jew. She was the nation unto whom the Kingdom of God was given when taken away from the Jew. The people in Palestine at the time of Our Lord were Jews and descendants of Benjamin. The latter broke away from the Jews because of the Crucifixion, as foretold in Zechariah, and many went into Asia Minor, where St. Paul addressed them as "men and brethren, children of the stock of Abraham," and declared that unto them was the Word of this Salvation sent.

These Galatians from Galilee were the ancestors of the Celtic nation in Britain. They were known to have passed through Europe into Scandinavia in the third or fourth century, and to have settled in Norway, Sweden and Denmark, joining their brethren the Jutes—"Jews of the tribe of Dan." (Holsatiæ Chronicon.)

NEBUCHADNEZZAR'S DREAM.

The name Rosh as Chief Ruler, however, was attached in Ezekiel with Meshech and Tubal. The Meshech and Tubal hordes could not govern themselves, and Rurik from Scandinavia in the ninth century became their leader. Hence Rosh, from Rurik, became the name of their leading governments. The Meshech and Tubal tribes, however, from their first mention to the last within historical times came under the Assyrian, the Babylonian, the Medo-Persian, the Grecian, the Roman, and the Turkish world powers. Therefore they were included in Daniel's interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream, that was to say, the eighth head or beast mentioned in Revelation xvii, which repudiated every religion and every God; by its own constitution, that of Peter the Great, the State was its own God and the Czar was God. This last form would very soon inveigle all the nations of Europe except those who adhered to the Kingdom of God set up by the God of Heaven.

But the head of this system was the "son of perdition," so this eighth beast also went into perdition. This evil influence would not only work its own ruin but would even set the European nations on fire, making it easy for Gog-Magog—"Rosh," or Russia—to unite them all against the British Empire, now thoroughly represented in Jerusalem. Our apparently defenceless position there would invite what Russia believed to be an easy prey; and our mainstay was repentance, a return to God, a spiritual revival, and a willingness to fight the battle of the Lord at Armageddon.

A REED AND A ROD.

In his evening address Commander Roberts pointed out that the death of the two witnesses referred to in the eleventh chapter of Revelation could not take place until the Turkish, or second, woe was passed. They were also told that the third woe, which was Russia, cometh quickly. It was Henry VIII who told the people that they were no longer to accept the Pope as head of the Christian Church, and although they were going to have another appeal almost directly to get that reversed, he suggested there would be such a revival in consequence of what was now going on that they would never go back to Rome. (Applause.)

The Temple of God, they read, was to be measured by a reed like unto a rod, which meant that the Kingdom of the Lord was to be measured by the character of its worship. That character, as set out in the Thirty-nine Articles of the Prayer Book had never changed in a doctrinal sense. It was a reed and could therefore be made to bend, but there was a rod to govern it, and it must be in exact accordance with the Word of God.—Worthing Gazette.

BRITISH-ISRAEL TRUTH EXPOUNDED IN SOUTHPORT LECTURES

BACK TO THE BIBLE.

A SERIES of lectures arranged by the Southport Branch of the British-Israel-World Federation was given in the Cambridge Hall on Thursday and Friday, February 23rd and 24th, by the Rev. Guy Waddington, M.A., of Bradford. The Rev. Pascoe Goard, F.R.G.S., of London, who is regarded as one of the greatest elucidators of Bible prophecy, was to have given the lectures, but illness prevented him from coming, and Mr. Waddington filled the breach.

MINISTERS' OPEN MINDS.

The Rev. George Barber, minister of Chapel Street Congregational Church, presided over a large attendance at the opening lecture on Thursday afternoon, and said those who invited him to take the chair knew he was not a British-Israelite and were anxious to convert him. If they could convert him he was quite willing to be converted. (Applause.) It had been said that the clergy and ministers of Southport had open minds, and he did not think there were any people with more open minds than the ministers of some of their Free Churches. He had come there as a learner and his mind was quite open. There were four things which struck him very forcibly about that Movement, and the first was the enthusiasm of the people who believed. They also had a vision and were doing their very best day by day to make that vision real. Any movement that was backed by enthusiasm had, at any rate, the prospects of success. He was conscious, too, that the Movement was growing. He believed that through their Movement people were being constrained to read their Bibles again. He knew business men who, after a hard day's work in the city, would go home and read, with growing interest, the story of the Bible, the revelation there recorded of the eternal purpose of God, and they were getting interested in it. If they could get people back to their Bible again, so much the better for the country. (Applause.) He believed what was at the root of the weakness of their national life was that the Bible was no longer the Book in the home, and if they could get it back into the home again, read with interest and joy, he did not fear the future for their country. Let the Bible be a neglected Book and he did not see much brightness ahead. The fourth thing which struck him about the Movement was that he was conscious of it much more than definitely coming up against it. He seemed to sense the backing of that Movement with a great deal of prayer. He believed they were a praying people, and if that was true, then all the elements were theirs that prophesied success and the advancement of the Cause they had at heart.

ISRAELITES AND JEWS.

The Rev. Guy Waddington, dealing with the case for British-Israel identity, said the moment they spoke of an identity between the British people and Israel there were those who would say at once, "We are not Jews." To that he would reply, "No. I have said we are Israelites." Then they would ask, "Are not Israelites and Jews one and the same thing?" and he would reply, "A Jew is an Israelite, but an Israelite is not necessarily a Jew." He was a Yorkshireman and a Britisher, but he thought Lancashire people would very much object to the statement that all Britishers were Yorkshire folk. An Israelite very much objected to the statement that all Israelites were Jews. There was all the difference in the world between an Israelite and a Jew. The Jew was just a very small portion of the House of Israel. The Jews, as they knew them to-day, did not even represent the whole House of Judah, much less could they represent the whole House of Israel. The Jews were not more than one-fifth of the House of Judah. In declaring the identity of Britain with Israel they were not declaring the identity of the British with the Jews. His heart's desire for Judah, for the Jew, was that he might be saved. Proceeding, he said some theologians declared that God had substituted His chosen Church for Israel, but if they accepted that it meant that God had broken His Word. If the Bible was untrue then Christianity was untrue. The authority of the Church was not worth anything in the face of a discredited Bible. The Church could only turn to the Bible for the proof of its creed, and if the Bible was discredited Christianity must go sooner or later. They had got something in their Bible which no other religion in the world had—prophecy fulfilled. The distinction between Israel and Judah, he said, was perfectly clear historically, and was just as clear prophetically, and he supported his submission with many references to Scripture. They would find wonderful harmony in Scripture he observed. They would never find the Bible contradicting itself, in spite of what some of the critics said.

WORK OF THE CHURCH.

There was a good attendance at the evening meeting, also held in the Cambridge Hall, where the speakers were the Rev. Brown Pollock (Rector of Cheadle) and the Rev. Guy Waddington.

The Rev. Brown Pollock, M.A., said he firmly believed in British-Israel. The First Epistle of Peter began with a very definite statement of doctrine and proceeded to reveal what the duty of everyone should be towards that doctrine. Still further on the Epistle dealt with discipline, and then they found those things being spoken about to Israel with very startling revelations. The second chapter and the ninth verse said something about the chosen generation, while Exodus made reference to such people in the fifth verse of the nineteenth chapter. In the fifteenth chapter of St. Matthew there was the parable of the treasure lost in the field, which clearly indicated the treasure of Israel and the Lord Incarnate. The tenth chapter of Peter made still further reference to this people. In Samuel in the Old Testament, David spoke in the presence of God that there would be a scattering of the chosen people, while in another Old Testament chapter it was said that they would be scattered in the latter day, meaning after the Crucifixion of Christ, to the North and to the West, which meant these Isles. Here were the very marks of the people Peter talked about. They could rest assured that God's purpose was being carried out and they could identify themselves with those people.

The Rev. G. Waddington, speaking about the story of the four Gospels in the New Testament, said that when they had a religion it either grew or fell when they applied this test—"Does it believe in Christ's Atonement?" If they did not believe in that, then theirs was not the Gospel of Christ but another gospel. Every lecturer held the full belief in the full Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. Their Gospel of the Kingdom was preached not as a substitute for His Gospel of Salvation, but as a witness. Three gifts had been offered to mankind. One was Salvation, and in making the offer God gave the opportunity to everyone of saying either "Yes" or "No." But God had set a time limit. He had appointed a day. When that day came it would no longer be left to man to decide whether he would serve God or not, but he would serve Him, or perish. He had said, "I will come when the Gospel has been preached to all nations." The work of the Church was to witness for Christ.

FRIDAY'S MEETINGS.

The Rev. Guy Waddington lectured on "Israel's Wanderings" at Friday afternoon's meeting, at which Mr. H. P. Allen presided. He (the Rev. G. Waddington) said that as men studied the Scriptures and found therein certain promises and prophecies concerning Israel, they were led to consider the possibility of identity between Israel and Britain. It was definitely a Bible subject, but it was also an historical and ethnological subject. The one thing the British-Israel-World Federation would insist upon was the fundamental belief in the Atonement of Jesus. That was the test which they must apply to their teaching and to all teaching which professed to be on the Bible. They claimed that it was only by British-Israel teaching that the many problems of Scripture could be elucidated and made clear to the man in the street. The British-Israel teaching, he said, was not only a Bible story but a history story as well.

GOD BEHIND HIS CHOSEN PEOPLE.

A further meeting was held at the Cambridge Hall on Friday evening, when the Rev. Canon Blakeney, R.D., presided.

The Chairman said he was glad to be there to show his interest in the great work the Federation was doing. They were all aware of the fact that many people made light of the Truths which were laid before them by the British-Israel Federation. He was quite convinced in his own mind that the attitude which those people assumed was due to ignorance and to prejudice. He had thought for a long time that the British people were people specially favoured by God. They had, he thought, only to look into past history to see that God had been, and was, and he believed, always would be behind them in their efforts for the furtherance of His Kingdom in the world. They were aware, as they read and studied the Old Testament history, how God was always behind His chosen people. They were called upon to face many trials and many difficulties, and they passed through many vicissitudes, but in their darkest moments light always dawned upon them, and a way was found for their salvation. From the little he knew of this great and important subject he thought they could make a special claim to God's protection as being the Israel of the prophecy. He could not help feeling that the arguments against accepting the principles of the Federation were by no means as numerous or as strong as those in favour of accepting them. He thought there were no people in the world who seemed to be fulfilling more the purposes and objects of God in this world than the British. They had only to think of those terribly dark years they passed through during the war, and they must admit that they were, as a people, most mercifully protected and helped by God in that great struggle. He believed the victory was given to them and their Allies because they were fighting to uphold those eternal principles of God's Divine Revelation—those principles which were so necessary for the uplifting of humanity. There were movements in the world to-day which were out to eliminate all principles of religion and all belief in God. He had only to remind them of one movement which was doing such terrible harm to so many millions of people. He referred to Bolshevism in Russia. Even in that small community of Southport he thought they must realise that half the people seemed to be for God, and unfortunately half seemed to be against God. No matter how many there were against God the principles of His Revelation and His Kingdom must and would prevail, and everything pointed to the path which our country—the British-Israel nation—was taking in furthering God's cause in the world. (Applause.)

The Rev Guy Waddington, in the course of his last address of the series, said the most marvellous phenomenon of the past 140 years was the production of the British Empire. He dealt with its remarkable growth, and said it was coincident with the great evangelical revival. It was more than a coincidence, it was the fulfilment of a prophecy.—Southport Visitor.

WEEK BY WEEK.

By A. R. H.

THE vision of the KINGDOM is opening up on every side. Whichever way men turn, they are being confronted with the kingdom issue and are being forced to make decisions according to their conception of it.

Lord Hugh Cecil's[1] challenge bids fair to turn the Prayer Book question into a controversy regarding definitions of CHURCH and KINGDOM. He believes that these two organisations are one and the same, and proceeding on this assumption, launches a spirited attack upon the idea that a STATE (a secular polity) should have power to amend or influence the government of the CHURCH (a spiritual polity).

Thus he writes to the Times:—"A nearer parallel would be if we imagine Parliament using its legal supremacy to overrule the Canadian Parliament on a purely Canadian question.

"This would be resented by Canadians, however much they might admit the grave tone of the debate, and the sincere and elevated patriotism of the IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

"It would be resented even by those Canadians who, on the merits, might think the IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT right, because it would be British interference in a Canadian concern.

"And State interference with the Church is like: only it is worse, because

THE CHURCH IS THE KINGDOM of CHRIST.

"This is not merely academic. It has both practical and religious importance. And State interference with the Church cuts at the heart of our religion; for the CHRIST we worship is not a remote historical figure who passed away 1,900 years ago, but a living and reigning KING in whose KINGDOM men have their appointed ministries. The spiritual concerns of this KINGDOM are beyond the sphere of the STATE."

Here is the challenge! Let us trust that it may be promptly taken up. For the coming struggle between authority of CHURCH and STATE will have been well worth while if it opens the eyes of the people to the exact distinctions between and specific definitions of CHURCH and STATE.

Lord Cecil's argument is based upon the widely believed fallacy that the terms "Church" and "Kingdom" are synonymous: a fallacy just as misleading as the dictum that the terms "Israel" and "Jew" are synonymous.

[1] The Times, January 30, 1928.

Digitized by Google

There is a sense in which the two (Church and Kingdom) are one, or to be more accurate still, will be one, but not in the sense that LORD CECIL would have us believe.

For, whilst it is true that every member[2] of the Church of Christ is a citizen of the KINGDOM of CHRIST, every citizen[3] of the KINGDOM is not a member of the CHURCH!

The CHURCH or BODY of CHRIST is a mystical union of all true believers—it is composed of a people called out of every race and denomination.

The KINGDOM of CHRIST is a national organisation in the earth built upon a biological foundation—that of the Anglo-Saxon (Isaac) seed of Abraham.

We are rapidly approaching the day when CHRIST (and His BODY which is the CHURCH) will be united to the BRIDE (the NATION or KINGDOM) and they shall become one. The present-time discordance may be interpreted as the birth-pangs of this coming perfect union of CHURCH and STATE. But until that day has dawned, we cannot truthfully speak of the CHURCH being the KINGDOM of CHRIST. The CHURCH might be rightly designated a kingdom but not the Kingdom. The KINGDOM of Dan. ii, 44, is not a Church, but, like its predecessors, an EMPIRE.

Still less can the CHURCH of ENGLAND claim to be (exclusively) the KINGDOM of CHRIST. For it is but one of many ecclesiastical organisations in the earth. It occupies an unique position, being the true centre and MOTHER CHURCH of CHRISTENDOM. But, even so, it is but a part of the whole—an ecclesiastical organisation within the Brith-ish NATION.

Being a national organisation, it is not surprising that the State should be found jealous to guard its integrity and purity. Freedom must always be subject to certain bounds. Freedom without bounds tends not to liberty but license.

To apply a Canadian constitutional parallel to the relationship between CHURCH and STATE in BRITAIN is quite unsuitable. For CANADA is not (like the National Church) an organisation within the EMPIRE representing BRITAIN, but a joint-heir with BRITAIN of the same great heritage.

The CHURCH and the KINGDOM then are not synonymous, although the day will come when they will be contiguous. The CHURCH of CHRIST is an ecclesia composed of a people called out of every nation, race and tongue.

The KINGDOM of CHRIST is a national organisation—a WORLD EMPIRE based upon a Brith-ish or Covenant Man Race.

The dawning realisation of this distinction as a fact of history found its most recent exemplification in the Rt. Hon. Amery's striking testimony on leaving CANADA[4]:—

"The EMPIRE is no longer a thing outside," he said, "but a force of which we are inseparable parts. To me, the EMPIRE for each one of us is like within us."

Thus, quite unwittingly, Mr. Amery has rendered the Cause of B.-I. a greater service than that of any other Statesman of recent times.

For in this simple statement, reported from one end of CANADA to another, Mr. Amery enunciates the claim that the BRITISH EMPIRE is like the idea of the KINGDOM of HEAVEN. And this over a territory where for years an army of B.-I. workers has been patiently teaching that not only were these two phenomena alike, but that the one was the fulfilment of the other. They are in fact potentially equipollent.

As an example of the interest aroused in the Canadian Press by this declaration, we quote the following from an influential British Columbian daily:—"For a man who bears the reputation for being the arch-realist of the Baldwin Cabinet, Colonel Amery does very well in an occasional imaginative touch of political definition.

"'The EMPIRE,' says the British Minister for the DOMINIONS, 'is not external to any of our nations. It is something like the Kingdom of Heaven—something within us.' This saying is worth looking at for a moment.

"When a Statesman borrows an allusion from HOLY WRIT—especially a Statesman on tour among the self-governing Dominions of the BRITISH EMPIRE[5]—he needs to have all his wits about him. The EMPIRE is essentially an indefinable institution[6] in the world. There is nothing else like it now; there never has been anything else exactly like it in history.

"Perhaps when Colonel Amery said it was something like the Kingdom of Heaven, he remembered the series of parables in which it was set forth that the Kingdom of Heaven was like unto a great many different things.

"In those parables the Kingdom of Heaven was likened unto such different things as the grain of mustard seed which grew into a great tree; the net cast into the sea; the leaven which leavened the whole; and the seed field where the enemy of the good husbandman sowed tares among the wheat.

"No doubt you could find inspiration in any one of those parables for a discussion of the nature of the Empire.

"Colonel Amery, of course, is on the side of the good husbandman. It is salutary for the good Imperialist to remind himself that there has been in other days a great and a harmful

[2] See Gal. iii, 29: "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." That is to say, "heirs of the Kingdom." (Cf. Jas. ii, 5, etc.)

[3] Citizens of the earthly Kingdom we may be by natural birth, being Brith-ish. But though we claim Abraham as our father after the flesh, that does not make us a member of the Body of Christ—the Church. We are born "Jacob." We must be re-born "Israel."

[4] January, 1928.

[5] Why should a Statesman have to take special care in quoting the Scriptures before British People? Why these People especially? Because the People of the Brith-ish Empire are the People of the Book and know the Bible better than any other race or people on the face of the earth.

[6] It is significant that such a very substantially material phenomenon as the British Empire should be described as "an indefinable institution." But so it is, and the designation is singularly apt. For the Brith-ish or Covenant Man Empire is the Kingdom-Empire of Dan. ii, 44, which is "not of this world." That is to say, it is in the world but not of it. As such, it must, to men of the world, appear to be "indefinable." Such men, arch-realists though they may be, can only fall back upon Biblical terminology and describe the Empire as being like the Kingdom of Heaven! And what is the Kingdom of Heaven if not the Kingdom that the God of Heaven set up of Dan. ii, 44? Whichever way we turn, then, in our attempts to comprehend that enigma or mystery known as the British Empire, we find ourselves forced to a British-Israel conclusion as the only possible solution.

sowing of tares among the honest wheat of the BRITISH COMMONWEALTH of NATIONS.

"But the parable is all on the side of a good hope. The tares were let grow until the harvest, and then they were gathered first and bundled and burnt. It is not yet the time of harvest with the EMPIRE, and perhaps there are tares still growing in the field that are not yet ripe for the burning. But the parable holds good if we remember that the husbandman knew the tares for what they were, and took his own way with them.

"It was not to any of those parables which Colonel Amery went for a likeness of the EMPIRE, in the first of his speeches in CANADA.

"He says the EMPIRE is not external to any of the BRITISH NATIONS. It is something like the KINGDOM of HEAVEN within ourselves.

"That is the conception of Empire which is growing in the minds of the people.[7] The EMPIRE is a code, the genius of a RACE—a CIVILISATION."

A BODY OF LAW,

Yes! The Brith-ish KINGDOM-EMPIRE might well be described as "a Body of Law," for it is the political manifestation of the people in whose heart is God's Law.[8] And the genius of this administration lies in the fact that the dictatorial "I will," and "They shall" clauses of the new covenant upon which it is based do not come into operation until the silent unseen writing of the Law upon the hearts and minds of God's Brith-ish People has secured the perfection of obediential love. The people gladly respond to the Law, for they consent to the Law in their hearts that it is good.

This is the path of constitutional progress[9] along which the Brith-ish People are marching.

Thus we witness the manifestation of the KINGDOM which JESUS had in mind, when, comparing it with ROMAN civilisation, He said:—"My KINGDOM (Basilea) is not of this WORLD (Cosmos)." No! the Brith-ish or Covenant Man Kingdom Empire of Dan. ii, 44, is not of the Roman Cosmos or Civilisation. It is an Empire based upon Freedom and Liberty not Force.

It is a new cosmos—a new civilisation. Unique in the world to-day: there has been nothing like it in the history of the past.

The subject "Is Britain destined to build a New World" aroused the people of Shirley, Southampton, so that on the 8th February the Branch had one of the best meetings ever held. Very special interest was shown and additions to the membership are looked for.

---

[7] Under the finishing touch of the full proclamation of the Empire-Gospel of the Kingdom (see Matt. xxiv, 14. Ferrar Fenton) this dawning conception of Kingdom-citizenship will burst forth as the definite re-birth or renaissance of the whole Brith-ish People.

[8] Cf. Isa. li, 8.

[9] Demonstration that the progress of this process of development was well advanced was provided by the reaction of the British People to the Strike of May, 1926. "We carry in our hearts the innermost core of the British Constitution," said the Prime Minister, Mr. Baldwin, in his review of this Great Crisis. See p. 509, NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, August 14th, 1926.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE.

"THE NEARER VIEW."

DEAR SIR,—The suggestion by Mr. Davidson respecting the significance of the four grooves in the end wall of the Antechamber in the Great Pyramid, over the entrance to the second Low Passage, which Dr. Gornold says in his article under the above title in this week's NATIONAL MESSAGE was communicated to him in the course of correspondence with Mr. Davidson, is very interesting.

Since these grooves run as high as the Antechamber, they denote the same freedom of space above, but in a limited degree, their total width being very much less than that of the Chamber.

Mr. Davidson's suggestion seems to imply, therefore, that the present truce is not ended absolutely abruptly by May 30th next, but terminates gradually throughout a period of 85 days, exactly analogous to the period of twilight between sunset and nightfall. We entered the first Low Passage without any such transition stage, and it is the fact that the Great War of 1914 literally broke over Europe like a bolt from the blue.

Whatever form the last phase of the tribulation may take, this significance of the four grooves seems to indicate that events will so shape themselves that the world will recognise thereby what is coming, and that those who at present deride the idea of the Great Pyramid having any message or warning to proclaim will have occasion to reconsider their views. Then shall the eyes of the blind be opened.

Yours sincerely,

BASIL STEWART.

THE SPIRIT OF TRUTH WILL GUIDE.

BY THE REV. GEO. MCGINNIS.

RECENTLY we attended a prayer meeting in a church of a former pastorate. The pastor was vacationing and an ex-preacher was presiding. He at once called me to the front and requested that I outline Anglo-Israel Truth. I did so and then threw it open for questions. A prominent member arose and said: "What do the leading men of our denomination think of this proposition?" Like Socrates, I replied by asking him a question. "Suppose that you had been a Jew in the days when Jesus walked and talked in Galilee and you were impressed with the truthfulness of His sayings and the divinity of His mission, but you decided before becoming a follower that you would consult the leading men of your church. You interviewed Annas and Caiaphas, the chief priests and Pharisees, and——" He broke in upon me, saying, "I get you, I get you." It is because of that dependence upon what the "highbrows" think and say that the Church to-day is floundering in the morass of evolution, seeking to find its way out and back to God. Someone has said, "Our intelligentsia are those who tell us the things we already know in language we can't understand." They assume a lofty air and look down on us in a patronising way. They don't seem yet to realise that evolution is a dead and exploded theory, and that its decaying carcass has been a stench in the nostrils of God for a quarter of a century. The falsity of their claims is manifested by that gap between the lowest human, and the highest ape, and their hope to find the missing link to bridge the gap has gone glimmering and faded from the minds of men. A little five-year-old, from an evolution home, walking with his mother passed an Italian organ-grinder. The monkey hopped off the organ and presented his cup for pennies. The boy said: "Mamma, isn't it a shame our ancestors have to beg for pennies." There is such a swing to-day, away from the monkey theory, that it won't be long till the evolution professors join their ancestors with begging cups.

The Catholic Church is what it is to-day because men looked to the "higher ups" for guidance in God's truth.

God has made every man a free moral agent, with power to choose the right. He has given him what He, Himself, possesses —reason, self-consciousness and a will. He has also given him the Bible, which is to serve as a lamp unto his feet and a guide unto his pathway. Christ said: "When he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth." Reason, the Bible, the Holy Spirit are the only monitors man needs to guide him to the truth. With these three great guide-boards for your inner consciousness you cannot go far astray. Many a man, having a smattering of Anglo-Israel Truth, has decided it was of the Devil and, "breathing out threatenings and slaughter" against it, decided to post up on it and blow it off the face of the earth, and invariably his eyes were opened and he became a convert himself.

"Truth is mighty and will prevail,
The eternal years of God are hers;
But error wounded writhes in pain
And dies amid her worshippers."

I don't hesitate to venture the assertion that if a man will come to the study of this Truth with open-mindedness, without prejudice, without any preconceived notions, and let God's Spirit guide him in his study of the Book, in relation to this great proposition, he will be convinced beyond the shadow of a doubt that this proposal is a part of God's plan of the ages, for archæology, history and the Bible confirm it.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A., F.R.A.S.

QUESTION.—Will you kindly explain why—in B.-I. literature —eight of Jacob's sons are ignored? One reads of Ephraim-Israel and of Manasseh, the two sons of Joseph; also of Judah (with whom is associated part of the tribe of Levi, and (for a time) Benjamin. Reference is made in one or two books to Dan; but what became of the descendants of the other sons of Jacob? And on what basis is it claimed that we, as a nation and a "company of nations" (including the U.S.A.), are the lost ten tribes of Israel, if we are simply Ephraim and Manasseh?

W. R. S. (Llanfairfechan).

ANSWER.—The expression "lost ten tribes" is purely a coined and conventional one, and one which I personally try to avoid using, as it is non-Biblical, and under examination probably wholly incorrect. The actual number of the tribes of Israel varied at different periods. The number 12 is a conventionally "round" number, as also appears to be the case with the descendants of Ishmael (Gen. xvii, 20; xxv, 13-16), of Nahor (Gen. xxii, 20-24), and of Esau (Gen. xxxvi, 15-19, 40-43). Simeon and Levi were to be divided in Jacob, and scattered in Israel (Gen. xlix, 7), so that when the tribe of Benjamin arose, there would be 11 tribes and not 12. Similarly Reuben in the period of the monarchy was an insignificant monarchy, and although mentioned (1 Chron. v, 26) as still existing about 734 B.C., had apparently become disintegrated some time before; this would be in fulfilment of Jacob's prediction (Gen. xlix, 3, 4). Although Reuben was the original "firstborn of Israel" (1 Chron. v, 1) he lost the birthright, which went to Joseph, thence to Ephraim and Manasseh (Gen. xlviii; Jer. xxxi, 9).

The tribes of Israel are arranged in twenty different orders in the Bible, only one of which (Num. ii, vii and x) recurs. Of these twenty different orders, 12 of them give 12 tribes, three give 11 (Ex. i and Deut. xxxiii), three give 13, one gives 14 (dividing Manasseh into two parts—East and West, i.e., (1 Chron. xii) and one gives 10. There may be an astronomical reason for the adoption of the conventional number 12, based upon the 12 signs of the Zodiac and the 12 months in the year (cf. Gen. xxxvii, 9), while Luther (probably incorrectly) assigned the number 12 to Solomon's partition of the land into 12 divisions, so that each might provision the royal household one month in the year (1 Kings iv, 7).

It is probable that the less important tribes were after a time absorbed into the bigger ones, since only Ephraim, Manasseh, Benjamin and Judah take predominance in later days. Levi had no tribal inheritance, since the priesthood drew heavily from this tribe, with the result that the word "Levite" became synonymous with "priest." In all probability the tribes of Simeon and Levi became more especially absorbed by Judah, while there is no mention of either Levi or Simeon in Judges v.

The result was that Ephraim, which received the bigger portion of the birthright blessing (Gen. xlix, 13-20), becoming known as God's "firstborn," assumed the headship of the House of Israel, while many of the tribes belonging to the Northern Kingdom came under the category of Ephraim.

The belief that Great Britain and the British Empire is Ephraim is due to the words, "his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude (fulness) of nations," and that Manasseh is the U.S.A. to the words, "he also shall become a people, and he also shall be great." Thus the former (Ephraim) has become a great commonwealth of nations under one sovereign head, while the latter (Manasseh) has become a great democracy.

If we assume that "the lost ten tribes" is an expression which refers to the tribes which revolted under Jeroboam, it is an incorrect expression for modern usage, since Benjamin, which was lent to Judah until the Crucifixion, afterwards returned to the House of Israel. So, bearing in mind the conventional number 12, it would be more correct to speak of "the lost eleven tribes," which expression is equally unworthy. The House of Israel—or simply (in our case) Ephraim-Israel—would be more correct.

The Rev. Commander Roberts gave two splendid and instructive lectures for the Worthing Branch on the 15th February, the subjects chosen being "Russia" and "The Prayer Book Crisis." The hall was crowded.

General B.-I. enthusiasm and activity was never greater than now. We have an ever-increasing demand for meetings, and for the appointment of additional lecturers and commissioners.

Mr. S. E. Steele addressed a large audience of the Liverpool Branch on February 23rd, on "The Druids and their Religion."

The Editor is overwhelmed with letters and he requests his correspondents to be patient if they do not receive replies for some days.

The Mission at Newark, by Rev. T. H. Whitehouse, is being organised by Mrs. Claud Lowe. All believers in the district are invited to attend and help. See List of Engagements.

The work of the Federation proceeds vigorously. Our Commissioners have more calls than they are able to fill.

Mr. J. J. Morey gave sixty-three public lectures in January and February to large audiences in various towns in the South of England.

He has opened several new centres, notably Guildford, Bognor, Chichester, Eastbourne, Brighton and Sutton. The work is flourishing everywhere, and eager audiences are glad to find a rock on which to stand in these troublous times.

During the week ended March 2nd Mr. Morey addressed two meetings at Putney, where the Y.W.C.A. Hall was crowded, followed by a full house in the Town Hall at Teignmouth ; then to Bognor, where two meetings were very well attended ; then to Ealing Y.M.C.A. Hall, where a new member, the Vicar of St. Paul's, presided, and on Friday at Guildford in the afternoon, and at Brighton in the evening. Our friend returned to Headquarters full of enthusiasm and rejoicing after a strenuous but delightful week. For all these glad experiences we render thanks to Almighty God.

On Wednesday, February 8th, a most interesting lecture was given on "Is Jesus Christ coming again ?" by Rev. Joseph Gay, at High Wycombe, where good work is being done. In the Guildhall, from March 5th to 9th, a Gospel Mission will be conducted.

Two excellent lectures were given at Dover on the 15th by the Rev. G. H. Lancaster, dealing with "Britain and the Near East" and "Britain and the Continent." At the afternoon meeting the chairman was Canon Watkins, of Canterbury, supported by Rev. H. B. S. Simeon. In the evening the chair was taken by Lieut.-Col. Smythe.

Welwyn Garden City made a fine beginning on February 17th, when Rev. Joseph Gay addressed the first meeting held in this district. Prospects are excellent for the speedy formation of a Branch. The same speaker spoke at a meeting held by the British Fascists at Kensington on the 22nd, the message "The Story of a Resurrected Nation" being accepted with great enthusiasm. Then on the 23rd, before a fine gathering at Hounslow, Mr. Gay made a return visit. There is a magnificent spirit here, giving every promise of development into a splendid Branch.

Mr. J. J. Morey is to speak at Herne Bay on March 13th, his lectures being "The Message Britain needs to-day" and "The Parables of the Kingdom." The chairmen are the Vicar, Rev. J. E. Woodward, M.A., and the Rector of Swalecliffe, Rev. R. H. Chaplin, M.A.

Mr. Garrison has lectured to full audiences at Stroud, Leominster and Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Special note should be made of the date Tuesday evening, March 27th, when the Rev. Pascoe Goard is to give a lecture on a very important subject in the Central Hall, Westminster. Further particulars next week.

The Rev. Commander Roberts gave two splendid and instructive lectures for the Worthing Branch on the 15th February, the subjects chosen being "Russia" and "The Prayer Book Crisis." The hall was crowded.

General B.-I. enthusiasm and activity was never greater than now. We have an ever-increasing demand for meetings, and for the appointment of additional lecturers and commissioners.

Mr. S. E. Steele addressed a large audience of the Liverpool Branch on February 23rd, on "The Druids and their Religion."

The Editor is overwhelmed with letters and he requests his correspondents to be patient if they do not receive replies for some days.

The Mission at Newark, by Rev. T. H. Whitehouse, is being organised by Mrs. Claud Lowe. All believers in the district are invited to attend and help. See List of Engagements.

The work of the Federation proceeds vigorously. Our Commissioners have more calls than they are able to fill.

Mr. J. J. Morey gave sixty-three public lectures in January and February to large audiences in various towns in the South of England.

He has opened several new centres, notably Guildford, Bognor, Chichester, Eastbourne, Brighton and Sutton. The work is flourishing everywhere, and eager audiences are glad to find a rock on which to stand in these troublous times.

During the week ended March 2nd Mr. Morey addressed two meetings at Putney, where the Y.W.C.A. Hall was crowded, followed by a full house in the Town Hall at Teignmouth ; then to Bognor, where two meetings were very well attended ; then to Ealing Y.M.C.A. Hall, where a new member, the Vicar of St. Paul's, presided, and on Friday at Guildford in the afternoon, and at Brighton in the evening. Our friend returned to Headquarters full of enthusiasm and rejoicing after a strenuous but delightful week. For all these glad experiences we render thanks to Almighty God.

On Wednesday, February 8th, a most interesting lecture was given on "Is Jesus Christ coming again ?" by Rev. Joseph Gay, at High Wycombe, where good work is being done. In the Guildhall, from March 5th to 9th, a Gospel Mission will be conducted.

Two excellent lectures were given at Dover on the 15th by the Rev. G. H. Lancaster, dealing with "Britain and the Near East" and "Britain and the Continent." At the afternoon meeting the chairman was Canon Watkins, of Canterbury, supported by Rev. H. B. S. Simeon. In the evening the chair was taken by Lieut.-Col. Smythe.

Welwyn Garden City made a fine beginning on February 17th, when Rev. Joseph Gay addressed the first meeting held in this district. Prospects are excellent for the speedy formation of a Branch. The same speaker spoke at a meeting held by the British Fascists at Kensington on the 22nd, the message "The Story of a Resurrected Nation" being accepted with great enthusiasm. Then on the 23rd, before a fine gathering at Hounslow, Mr. Gay made a return visit. There is a magnificent spirit here, giving every promise of development into a splendid Branch.

Mr. J. J. Morey is to speak at Herne Bay on March 13th, his lectures being "The Message Britain needs to-day" and "The Parables of the Kingdom." The chairmen are the Vicar, Rev. J. E. Woodward, M.A., and the Rector of Swalecliffe, Rev. R. H. Chaplin, M.A.

EXPERIMENTS known as the "pithing" of animals are recorded in the Journal of Physiology. (Vol. 34, No. 3, 1906.) In these frequent experiments, the dogs are deprived of their brains; then very severe operations, such as laying open the trachea or abdomen are performed. These animals, it is stated, after being "pithed," recommence to breathe and survive in this condition for many hours. Even experts differ as to whether the unhappy victims are alive or dead in these circumstances!

THE LAW OF THE LORD, OR THE COMMON LAW.—X.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

A Review of the Things we have seen in Outline.

The Book of Genesis is a precise synopsis of those historic things from the foundation of the world which are necessary for the introduction of that which is to follow.

It gives, in the first chapter of Genesis, that succession of creative acts which led up to and included the direct Creation of man.

Step by step, in exact sequence, the great drama of Creation unfolds before us. Reading the first verses of the chapter with the most up-to-date astronomical works in hand, one is impressed by the fact that Astronomy has been struggling up the hill of knowledge for ages to reach, at last, somewhat the same level of fact and truth that is presented by the first verses of the first chapter of Genesis. The astronomical nebular hypothesis is outlined as Biblical history of the Creation.

Reading the later verses of the first chapter of Genesis with dependable books of Geology in hand, one is impressed with the fact that geologists have been scrambling over rocks, descending into chasms, and seeking everywhere that an exposure of the rock measures may be found, to read therein the same process of Creation contained in the later verses of the first chapter of Genesis.

Passing on to the second chapter of Genesis, we cross-sect the history of the human race, and there witness the formation of Adam; the inbreathing into him of the breath of life; "and man became a living soul."

Reading on in the wonderful second chapter of Genesis with the latest reasonable books on Psychology at hand, we see the naming of this couple "Adam," the appointing of Adam to a specific task; and, finally, we read, "AND THE LORD COMMANDED THE MAN."

Up to this point there apparently has been no moral consciousness. We are not entering upon the unprofitable contest of wits in trying to furnish a time-table of Creation. THIS CANNOT BE DONE with any degree of certainty by marking the passage of time by present observed processes, as, for instance, the slow exhaustion of radio active substances, which, being exhausted of energy, leave a residuum of lead, indicating countless ages as the necessary period for the formation of lead, as one scholar lately advanced in a notable sermon. The facts may have been that, in the intense activity of the early nebular period, such as is now apparent in the sun, forces were exhausted in moments which would take countless years to exhaust in present conditions of the earth, where these forces are far on the way to death, and where alone we can test them.

For example, cotton is worn as a non-conducting protection against cold, and against bad weather generally; also as a non-conducting protection against heat. Cotton may be burned as a useful fire, slowly and safely. But cotton may be exploded with instantaneous effect, and with tremendous power. So with the other elements compounded in Nature. The original lead measures may have been, and probably were, prepared under such explosive circumstances, and came as lead into the cooled substances which form the compounds of the earth. So the presence of lead does not necessarily call for æons of time.

We have again and again seen time disregarded by natural forces we have had the privilege of observing. Things which were supposed to take ages in formation we have seen formed by Nature in an hour on a grand scale, as, for instance, a whole ledge of rock, the materials of which were brought, mixed, laid down, and hardened to the consistency of hard conglomerate rock, or of concrete paving, in an hour, the whole deposit being from one to twelve feet thick and stretching hundreds of yards wide and miles long, all laid down and hardened in a day, in fact, in much less time.

So we will not enter into the discussion of time, but will follow the main outline of facts. The wonderful psychological process by which the soul of man was perfected to such a degree that, contrary to the experience of all other known orders of life, THE WILL OF GOD BECAME THE LAW OF THE MAN.

It is at this point, in the second chapter of Genesis, that the

into the mind and heart of man, and through him into the earth, is made clear.

At this point of the narrative we add to the book on Astronomy, the book on Geology and the book on Psychology in our hand, the best book on Theology. These we compare with the Bible. Reading these together, we find the advent of the Law in the Garden, that is to say the revelation of the Will of God as the Law for the life of man made to Adam in the Garden of Eden, is the starting-point of systematic Theology.

Now comes the psychological establishment of choice of the plane on which the man shall live, or, in theological language, the establishment of Free Will. Shall he choose to do the will of man, that is to say, his own will? Or shall he elect to do the Will of God? The man may choose his path of action, but he must take the consequences of his choice. To obey is to "have life, and to have it more abundantly." To disobey or to sin is to become subject to death, under the sentence "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die."

The freedom of choice being thus established, there is open the whole field of temptation. The fact of temptation was made possible by the open door for choice, when the Will of God was imposed upon man as the law of his life.

Now appeared the tempter: and the sin: and the recognition of condemnation. "And so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned."

Then also appeared the Redeemer, "The seed of the woman." Again came the privilege of choice for the man: viz., that of receiving life abundant through the Redemption and the Atonement; or, to go on stubbornly to the second death.

The Gospel of the open door of choice for men and nations constitutes the story that the Apostles were commissioned to preach to the ends of the earth. The legal process governing in this field is the glory of Divine Jurisprudence.

There early came the intermixing of those whose choice differed. The choice of those who elected to do the Will of God, and to accept salvation through the coming Saviour, brought about one class of persons in the earth.

The choice of those who elected to do the will of the natural man, and to follow out the inclinations of the fleshly life, formed the other class. One class lived in conscious fellowship with God—the other class "went out from the presence of Jehovah."

But these two classes, the sons of God and the sons of men, intermixed in life and intermarried. The result was the rapid lowering of the plane of life, until the whole earth "had corrupted its way before the Lord." This corruption was PHYSICAL, PSYCHOLOGICAL AND SPIRITUAL. It brought about the last sad boon which God could give to the corrupted race, viz., the boon of death by the waters of the Flood. This was God's anæsthetic, easing the death-pangs of a self-corrupted race.

In the meantime there were the subordinate results of sin; namely, the withholding of the strength of the earth as applied to crops for the sustenance of life; and the intermingling of weeds with the crops. It would seem as though the evil thoughts of men brought about an evil crop in the botanical world; disease and death in the physical world; corruption and distress in the mental world; and eternal death in the spiritual world.

So the generations of men have gone forward with pain and labour, subject to sorrow, disease and death, during all the generations of the present life.

From Adam through Seth to Noah, and through Shem to Abraham, the line of the Covenant is kept unbroken. Although at the time of the Flood the redemptive Covenant remained with only one family, it came safely across the Flood in the life of Noah and Shem. It was carried forward to Abraham by the seed of Shem. In Abraham it was established anew and carried forward to the days when the seed of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were organised into the nation Israel.

Now the fact that we have in this great Book of Genesis the information we need, and no other information than that which is necessary for the introduction of the Bible, shows that it is a Book carefully prepared, as to every jot and tittle of it, for the supply of the intellectual needs of the ages then to come. To call it folklore is futile. Folklore does not arrange itself into sequent, specific history such as is necessary for a scheme of knowledge of things yet to be revealed, which things were still future at the time of the production of the literature in question. There is as much manifestation of the active direction of one supreme mind herein, as there is manifestation of the direction of one controlling mind in the preparation of the plans of a great structure, as, for instance, of the Great Pyramid; or even in the plan of the Great Architect of the Universe.

Thus we read Genesis to the end as one united whole, harmonising with Astronomy, Geology, Psychology, Theology, History, and other branches of exact science.

Having received this perfect introduction, we come to the setting up of the Kingdom in Exodus; of the worship prescribed for the Kingdom in Leviticus; of the national organisation in Numbers; and to a digest of the constitutional law in Deuteronomy.

The Books thus far are perfect, following each other in such exact sequence as to make one complete whole.

The Laws which are presented to us are specific in large matters, and general in the statements of principle, illustrated by statutes, and applied by judgments as we follow on. It is of this that David sang:

"The Law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul:
the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple.
The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart:
the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes.
The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring for ever:
the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether.
More to be desired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold:
sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb."
(Psalm xix, 7–10.)

LOOK UP AND LOOK FORWARD.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

We are now in the year to which the Great Pyramid has directed the attention of the Pyramid students for many years. The time has come for the final demonstration of the message of the Pyramid. We have no doubt but that the Pyramid will begin finally to justify its message before the eyes of all men at the appointed time. How it will do this we do not know. There are many who are asking us for advanced information on the matter. But we are not blessed with that advanced information. Like all the rest, we must wait for the event to make clear the meaning of the Pyramid's message. Bible prophecy is couched in words and figures. The message of the Pyramid is expressed in geometrical measurements to be interpreted by the event. So the reading of the Pyramid must be according to its method. The event will, we have no doubt, make clear the message of the Pyramid. Thus far we know: it is a message to Israel-Britain and the Anglo-Saxon race; for it is written in the standard of measure which that people have always used, in ancient and in modern days. It is a Divine message to Israel-Britain. It is a message which was designed for Israel-Britain to read, not in the ancient days of Israel, but in the modern days of Britain. For the Pyramid had not been opened in the days of Israel, and had it been, the event had not progressed far enough to make clear the meaning of the message of the Pyramid in that day. So the Pyramid is carrying a Divine message to Britain, to be read in this the day of Britain's greatest danger.

The message of the Pyramid has been running on for ages. From 4000 B.C. to the present time the outline of the history of God's dealing with His people is made clear by the event. It is a startling thing that the year has come, in which the message of the Pyramid is chronologically reaching the marked structural feature, the last Low Passage, which should make the final stage of its message clear.

As soon as it begins to be made manifest that the Pyramid has entered upon fulfilment as far as the coming Low Passage is concerned, then the message of the Pyramid will have been unveiled and given to the world. It will be a witness so far given as to be readable for all even to the end. When this takes place the Pyramid will be accepted by all. They will then demand information and instruction which the Pyramid is not formed to offer. The people will be ready to say "Yes, the Pyramid message is complete and it is true; it links up Israel with Britain, and shows that the race is proceeding under Divine guidance; but having made this clear, what must we do?"

As the Philippian gaoler cried to St. Paul and his associates, "Men and brethren, what must I do to be saved?"

So far as the British-Israel message is concerned, there has come from other sources than the Pyramid the demonstration of the fact of the identity of Britain with Israel. Towards this end the Movement has laboured for generations, and now the end is reached. But having reached it, is the work completed or only begun? We call attention to the fact that while the message of the Pyramid will be accepted and understood as to past, present, and future, the work of the Federation will have only begun.

At a certain point in the last great international struggle we have the solemn declaration of the Lord, "Then shall My people Israel know that I am Jehovah their God from that day and forward."

Of course this statement carries the reverse side of the statement also; for when Israel knows that Jehovah is their God, they will also know that they are Israel His people, for this is the obverse and reverse sides of the statement.

This statement is made more individualistic as the experience of Israel alone by the other statement made in the same connection, "Then shall the heathen that are round about you know that I am Jehovah your God, when I am sanctified in you before their eyes."

It is a great and glorious achievement in the world of knowledge and of experience to which we are coming.

Knowing that Jehovah is our God, and that we are Israel His people, are we to assume that we shall know all the truth connected with that fact? Obviously it does not imply such fullness of knowledge.

Let us follow some of the implications:—

The moment we know that Jehovah is our God, nationally, that moment we shall know that it is our duty instantly to give effect to all His law. This might be put briefly, as we have put it again and again, "Being Israel, we are subject to Israel's constitution."

Let the statesman and the politician, let the citizen and the leaders of the people think for a moment what this implies. In a word it implies nothing short of the restoration of the Divine law as the law of the nation. True it is the basis of our national law, but also true it is that we claim the right to amend, repeal, or add to that law, and we have, as a matter of fact, interjected our law into the national administration.

There will have to be the restitution of all things spoken of God by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began. National repentance must of necessity include this great reform.

Having given effect to the restoration of the Divine law, we shall of necessity give effect also to the restoration, in its completeness, of the Divine administration. Fortunately for us our branch of the Anglo-Saxon people has preserved the machinery of the Divine administration fairly completely. This consists of the House of David; the ministers of the Crown; the judges and other branches connected with the administration of justice and the preservation of order; the teachers; health officers; and scribes or publicists, all of whom are included in the administrative machinery of the Divinely-established State in the Kingdom of God.

The other branch of the Anglo-Saxon people have gone farther from the original machinery of Divine administration by putting away the House of David and vesting the final authority in the people.

In both branches the restoration of Divine machinery of administration will be carried into effect as a consequence of awakening to the fact that "I AM JEHOVAH YOUR GOD."

In the Church the change will be just as great. It will be recognised instantly that as Jehovah is still established in the midst of Israel His people, and remains the object of worship in Israel and for all who in Christ become "Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise," the centre of worship must of necessity be in Israel, where God, the object of such worship, has established His dwelling-place for evermore.

What a unification of worship! What an exalted spirituality will be achieved with the unveiling of this fact, which stands alike unshakable in the past, the present, and the future! Let us remember in this connection that Our Lord, our Mediator and Advocate with the Father, constantly offered the Person of the Father as the object of our worship, Himself leading us therein. For He declared "In the midst of the church will I sing praises unto Thee."

We shall not at present carry this analysis of the next stage of the presentation of truth further; our object in writing the present article is to call the attention of every reader of this Journal to the fact that our eyes must not be fixed, and our attention centred, on the coming physical struggle to the exclusion of the things of which we have spoken. We must look beyond to the great task then commencing. Neither must we envisage the sudden coming of Our Lord, accompanied with all His saints, as cutting short the necessity for further efforts on our part. Whether in the present body, or that which will be ours the moment after the resurrection and translation, the work must be carried forward to its completion.

In the meantime, let us remember that the expectation of such a coming of Our Lord at various times in the past led people to disarrange their appointed tasks and rendered them subject to disappointment, confusion and dismay.

Taking up those periods and looking back at them, we see that great fulfilments were justly expected at that time. If the minds of the people had not been preoccupied with a preconceived vision of just what was going to happen then, which vision was not justified by the Scriptures, they would have seen that the Bible was triumphantly justifying its prophetic message.

Their preconception, by its error, hid from the eyes of the world marvellous fulfilment of truth. Such a misconception again applied at this present time might work untold evil.

Let us see what the Scriptures indicate.

1. When the three evil spirits like frogs succeed in gathering "the kings of the earth and of all the world to the battle of the great day of God Almighty," then in connection with that event, or series of events, Our Lord declares, "Behold I come as a thief; Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame. And He gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon."

Here we have presented the coming of Our Lord as a thief. Now the outstanding characteristic of the coming of the thief is that he takes all possible pains to keep his presence hidden. Does not Our Lord indicate that when He comes as a thief this also will be His course?

Later on in the same struggle the invading forces reach Jerusalem and capture the city. In connection with that the simple statement is "In that day His feet shall stand upon the Mount of Olives, and the Mount of Olives shall be rent in twain from the top to the bottom."

Is this a visible coming? Or is not the fact that Israel shall flee from Jerusalem to "the valley of the mountains" an indication that it is not His visible coming with His saints?

Then comes the progressive statement of the twenty-fifth chapter of St. Matthew, "And at midnight there was a cry made, Behold the bridegroom cometh." Here seems to be the occasion when Our Lord will come to take to Himself His bride.

This is followed in Our Lord's own statement by His coming to Israel, "His own servants," "His ten servants," to whom He said, on going away, "Occupy till I come."

Now He comes to reckon with them concerning their stewardship. Regarding this He says, "After a long time the lord of those servants cometh and reckoneth with them." This also is manifestly not a coming visible to all the world.

Now the phraseology takes on a more majestic form, and the word a more stately measure. "When the Son of man shall come in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him, THEN shall He sit upon the throne of His glory, and before Him shall be gathered all nations. . . ."

We may deal with this progressive statement at large later on; we quote it now to indicate that he who brings the preconceived vision of Our Lord's lightning-like approach, accompanied by all the saints and all the holy angels, descending with a shout and with the trump of God, to each of these particular statements, the first two of which are related to particular earthly events, stands in danger of confusing the issue and of obscuring the truth.

Let us be sure of this, that when the coming of Our Lord is historic, and looking back we talk over the events connected with the establishment of His reign, we shall each and all agree that it was different from our preconceived visions of His coming.

Now there is before us the solid matter-of-fact task which it is ours to labour at, namely, to restore Israel to the full knowledge of Jehovah, its God and its King, to the restoration of His law and its administration, and to the purity of His worship. This is included in our national repentance, to which may the Spirit of the Lord incline our hearts without delay.

DUBLIN.

THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD, accompanied by Mr. John Leech, K.C., visited the South Irish Branch Association in Dublin on February the 2nd and 3rd, and gave a series of lectures in the Dublin Diocesan Hall. The attendance on both afternoons and evenings was excellent, the latter averaging 500, and the interest shown intense. Mr. Leech dealt with general questions on Identity matters and replied to some of the usual objections. Mr. Goard chose for his subjects : " The World Crisis and How to Meet It," " The Gospel of the Kingdom and the Gospel of Grace," " The Second Coming of Our Lord," and, lastly, " Armageddon, a Place of Strength and Refuge." His masterly treatment of these great subjects held the audience spellbound, and on all sides was expressed the hope that this, his first visit to Dublin, would be repeated before long.

The present South Irish Branch was formed at the beginning of 1927, and has made most gratifying and encouraging progress —the membership steadily increasing. In January of this year the Council were fortunate in obtaining excellent premises as offices in a most central and suitable position, overlooking the park of Trinity College, where there is now open a book depot and a small lending library. A member of the Branch is in attendance daily, to receive visitors, answer enquiries, and sell or lend the books. Study circles are being formed in order that enquirers may have centres in their own districts, where they can be in touch with the Movement. The first was formed in Sandymount, under the direction of Mrs. Rohu, and is working well. Others are in contemplation in Ballsbridge and Leeson Park.

The Rev. Wm. Dungan, M.A., holds a fortnightly Bible Class in the Parochial Hall of St. Andrews, by permission of the Rector, the Rev. R. Northridge. These classes, at which discussion and debate is encouraged, are attended by many enquirers.

BELFAST.

The success attending the eight-day Mission recently conducted in Belfast by Mr. John Leech, K.C., and the Rev. Wm. Pascoe Goard has more than fulfilled its anticipation. So delighted were the audiences with the opening addresses on the afternoon and evening of Sunday, the 5th February, that many who had travelled long distances expressed their intention to remain until the close of the evening meeting no matter what hour it might be. Thus, happily inaugurated, the interest became more intense as time went on, and at the end of the week the general consensus of opinion regarding the success of the Mission might be tersely summed up : " It was all too short and should have lasted a month." Such appreciation, however, is what we would expect from the Ulster people, who are deeply interested in the Holy Scriptures.

Among other interesting subjects dealt with were the following : The Divine Chronology of History ; The Coming World Crisis ; The Early Chapters of Genesis ; The Coronation Stone, or Stone of Destiny ; The Old and the New Covenants ; The Kingdom Law of Divine Healing ; Is Britain Safe ? ; The Divine League of Nations ; The Great Day of God Almighty ; The Second Coming of Our Lord ; concluding with a lantern lecture on the Great Pyramid of Gizeh.

Many who heard the Rev. Pascoe Goard for the first time were of opinion that his final address, entitled " The Great Day of God Almighty," was one of the most inspiring ever listened to. Without any apparent effort Mr. Goard delivered a most profound and spiritual message which terminated in a wonderful climax when that vast audience in the historic Ulster Hall rose at his invitation and solemnly dedicated the remainder of their lives to individual service in God's Kingdom.

A special meeting, arranged for the local clergy and addressed by the Rev. Pascoe Goard, was highly successful, giving promise of beneficial and far-reaching results.

Owing to the unavoidable absence through illness of the Secretary-General, Mr. Herbert Garrison, Mr. Leech generously volunteered to remain over and deputised on his behalf for two extra evenings in the spacious Grosvenor Hall, where he addressed a very large audience on both occasions.

His subject on Monday evening, February 13th, was " The Second Coming of Our Lord," which held his hearers spellbound by its very spiritual tone, while on the following evening his lantern lecture on " The Great Pyramid of Gizeh " —splendidly illustrated by Mr. Garrison's coloured slides— was of absorbing interest and greatly enjoyed.

It is, we consider, worthy of special mention that the success of the Mission just concluded is due in no small measure to the good work initiated twelve months ago by Mr. Leech and Mr. Morey in arousing the Ulster people to a lively interest in British-Israel Truth ; also to the local Committee, especially Messrs. T. J. P. McKeown, Vice-President ; J. Bryans, Secretary ; W. Marks, Assistant Secretary ; A. W. Metcalfe and W. Vance ; Mrs. H. L. Bradley, Hon. Treasurer, and Mrs. Hull, and to Mrs. Vance, Mr. George Stewart, Mr. J. McDonald, Mr. W. J. Bradley, and other members of the local Branch, who were indefatigable in zeal and effort to bring the meetings to a successful issue.

BRITISH EMPIRE IN PROPHECY.

GOD'S PROMISES TO ISRAEL NOW BEING FULFILLED.

IT is the contention of the British-Israel-World Federation that the Anglo-Saxon race must be Israel, who are elected by God for the service of blessing the world. Facts and figures and passages from Scriptures were quoted in support of the argument by Mr. John Leech, M.A., LL.B., K.C., who lectured to a large audience at the County Hall, Canterbury, on Monday night, February 27th, on " British Empire in Prophecy." The meeting was held under the auspices of the Canterbury Branch of the Federation. The lecture was of a particularly interesting character and Mr. Leech proved conclusively that the British Empire was foretold in prophecy.

Appropriate hymns were sung during the meeting and those taking part were the choirs of St. Mary Bredin and St. Stephen's.

The Rev. Canon W. D. Springett, D.D., presided, and was supported by the Rev. Canon T. B. Watkins, M.A.

The Chairman, in opening the proceedings, mentioned that this was the first meeting under the auspices of the Study Class recently formed in Canterbury. Since the previous meeting with reference to the Pyramid he had discovered from remarks he had heard how easy it was for anyone to be misunderstood, especially in matters like theology and politics. Some people evidently seemed to think that Canon Watkins and himself were about to form a new religious denomination. One old friend had said he did not see why they should start another Gospel—the old Gospel was good enough for him. Canon Springett said he advised that gentleman to be present at the meeting that night and he would then realise they were not going to preach a new Gospel but that they were going to throw such a flood of light upon the old Gospel that it would come home to people with more power than it had ever done before. The Chairman gave a convincing reply to remarks which he said he had heard concerning the organisation being a Cathedral organisation. Anyone, no matter of what denomination, would be welcomed as members of the Branch. Some people had even gone so far as to suggest they were going to get mixed up in politics; but that was not a political organisation. The organisation, however, could make people more patriotic. It was a patriotic association. Those connected with it believed in Israel; they believed in Britain, and as such they wanted to make others love their country, those who governed the country, those who taught God's Word, and their countrymen as a whole.

Mr. Leech prefaced his address "British Empire in Prophecy" by referring to two great barriers which stood in the way of the understanding of the prophecy and of the understanding of the Bible. The first barrier was the confusion of Israel with the Jews. Some people had got into the habit whenever Israel was mentioned of thinking of the Jews. Ever since the days of Solomon the two kingdoms had been absolutely distinct, and they had never been reunited. Therefore, when they were speaking of Israel, it must not be regarded that they were speaking about the Jews or of Judah. The other barrier that had been raised in the way of the understanding of the prophecy was what was known as spiritualising the promises which God had made to Israel. Promise after promise had been made. The Book was full of them; yet we had been told again and again that God had taken away promises which He made to Israel, and that they were in some spiritual way being transferred to a body to whom no promises were ever made. We wanted to get back to the Bible in its primitive meaning and see what God meant when He spoke to the Prophets, and when those promises and covenants were made. The first question was "Is the British Empire in prophecy?" If it were it was a wonderful thing, for we could find that thousands of years ago God foresaw this Empire which He appointed to us and made certain declarations with regard to it and gave certain promises to it. If what we claimed for Britain were true the British Empire must be found in prophecy. We found that the British Isles were referred to in the Bible in different places. They were referred to as "Isles" or the "Islands of the sea," and pointed to in the north and west or north-west, measuring from Jerusalem, which was God's place of habitation upon this earth. The British Isles were not the British Empire. They were only the centre or headquarters of the British Empire, and the British Empire meant something far greater and beyond these little Islands, wonderful as these little Islands were.

God made certain promises to Abraham whom He called from Ur to follow Him into an unknown land. The first promise He made was "I will make of thee a great nation." That was a wonderful promise to be given to this old man. We saw how that promise was fulfilled and later on God enlarged His promise as Abraham's faith grew large enough to receive it. God said "Thou shalt be a father of many nations." That was not fulfilled when Israel of old were in Palestine, because they were one nation, and up to the death of Solomon they continued to be one nation and one nation only. After Solomon died they were divided into two, but they were never more than two nations. Ultimately these nations were banished from the land on account of their sins, but God's purpose was going to be carried out notwithstanding the failure of man, and it had been carried out since that time. Subsequently God further enlarged His promise, but this time to Jacob, who was the son of Isaac and grandson of Abraham, through whom the promises were to be fulfilled. God said to Jacob "I am God Almighty: be fruitful and multiply. A nation and a company of nations shall be of thee, and kings shall come out of thy loins." That was not fulfilled when Israel were in the Promised Land originally. Here was a different promise; not merely a promise of a great nation; not merely a promise of many nations, but a promise of a company of nations. Later on God gave a promise to Ephraim, younger son of Joseph, to whom the birthright was given. Manasseh also received a promise, but not the best promise.—"Truly his (Manasseh's) younger brother (Ephraim) shall be greater than he, and his seed shall become a multitude of nations." This promise, like the previous ones, was not fulfilled when Israel was in Palestine of old. Therefore, it must be fulfilled in some subsequent time and in some other way. Going on further we find that Jacob "called unto his sons and said 'Gather yourselves together, that I may tell you that which shall befall you in the last days.'" Here, for the first time, dates, or the period during which prophecy was to be fulfilled, were given. It said the "last days." What were the "last days"? Every student of prophecy who had gone into the matter knew that we were now in the "last days," and that these "last days" or "latter days" were the period from the time that Our Lord was on earth. The "last days" were the period in which we now found ourselves. "Joseph is a fruitful bough." Mr. Leech likened this to a garden or walled-in field with a tree planted in the middle. The tree grew and grew until the branches spread and the garden or field was completely covered. As it continued to grow the branches passed over the wall and ran right away.

When they were talking about this they wanted to come down to facts and they wanted to see whether these promises had been fulfilled, and if so how, in what people and at what time? There had been in the history of the world once and once only a nation and a company of nations. There had been great nations who had ruled over the earth and who had had wonderful power but they were one nation, and when they conquered they put the conquered country under their heel, and it ceased to be a nation. It was under the domination of the great conquering power. We had to-day in the world something that never existed before. We had a mother country with her daughter countries around, each of them separate and independent with self-government and yet bound to the mother country, clustering around her and forming one Empire. Could this be the fulfilment of the promise to Abraham that the seed of Abraham would be a great nation and a company of nations? Coming down to this walled-in garden, with its spreading branches of the tree, could we not ask ourselves whether this was not the Islands in which we were walled-in by the ocean and unable to contain the spreading population? God said to David through Nathan, the prophet, that " I will appoint a place for my people Israel, and will plant them, that they may dwell in a place of their own, and move no more ; neither shall the children of wickedness afflict them any more, as beforetime." As Israel were in Palestine long before this it must have referred to somewhere else, and God was going to appoint some other place after they had been removed from the Promised Land. Israel were planted originally in Palestine, but because of their sins they were removed. They were taken, all the ten tribes of Israel, into captivity by the Assyrians, while Judah of the two tribes was taken into captivity by the Babylonians. Israel of the ten tribes never returned to the Promised Land.

During the Great War Mr. Leech said he found people very much frightened sometimes about the possible invasion of our land by the Germans. The Kaiser had made all his plans for an invasion. People thought what a dreadful thing it would be if the enemy came over, but he always said : " No, God, I believe, has pledged Himself that the enemy shall never invade these Islands. It is a promise and a wonderful blessing which He has given to our people in these Islands—the appointed place in which God had planted them." The reason he said that was because God had said that in the appointed place the children of wickedness would afflict Israel no more as heretofore. When Israel was in Palestine they were afflicted by their enemies, but God had said that in the place in which He was going to plant them in the future there would be no such affliction by their enemies. It could be proved historically that Israel after the Assyrian Captivity found their way north-west and ultimately entered the British Isles under different names. The whole of them did not come ; there were still some not here yet. God had been working while the world had been sleeping. His plans, His promises, and His prophecies had been fulfilled, and they would be completely fulfilled. They were bound to come true.

After dealing with the unsuccessful attempts to invade these Islands, mentioning in particular the Spanish Armada and the efforts of Napoleon, Mr. Leech proceeded to refer to Nebuchadnezzar's dream of the image with the head of gold and so on, and interpreted by Daniel to refer to the Babylonian kingdom, the Medo-Persian kingdom, the Grecian kingdom, and the Roman Empire, the fall of these kingdoms, followed by the Stone Kingdom, which was regarded as referring to Israel and to the Kingdom represented by Great Britain.

God had promised that He would set up a Kingdom that would continue for ever, and one that was going to be entirely different to everything before. Could we see that Kingdom anywhere else? What great power was there in the world that had taken the place of the four great world powers that had gone? We had to-day the British Empire, and there was not another Empire fulfilling the conditions as pointed out in the prophecy. If this Empire was not the one that was foretold, then this Empire must go to make room for the other, for two such mighty powers never could exist together, at least not for any length of time. Who were to be the people that were to possess this wonderful Kingdom set up by God in fulfilment of His promise to our forefathers? It was stated in the Book that in the days of this Kingdom the Lord would be the King over the Kingdom and He would reign over His people Israel. The " Saints of the most High " were to possess the Kingdom, and there was only one people referred to in the Old Testament as " The Saints," and that was God's chosen people Israel. Right through the Book we found that God referred to these people as " His people " and as " His Saints."

The Bible had left no doubt as to who those Saints were. Not only were references made in the Old Testament, but there was a definition in Psalm cxlviii in which we were told they were the children of Israel, " a people near unto Him." He had made a promise of this Kingdom to be set up ; to be given to Israel ; to grow and increase ; to spread and reach over the wall ; to be a nation and a company of nations, and ultimately to fill the whole world. We want to use our common sense, look about and see if it were not fulfilled or being fulfilled, and, if so, who were the people in whom it was being fulfilled? We know something of the mighty growth of the British Empire ; no human power could have made these Islands what they are at the present time.

Mr. Leech referred to British sea power which no power had been able to wrest from us despite many attempts, and observed God had said that the seed of Abraham should possess the gate of his enemies. The gate of our enemies was the ocean.

In his concluding remarks Mr. Leech said that he found, historically, that everything in the Book up to the tenth chapter of the Book of Revelation was fulfilled up to the time of the Reformation. When we came to that chapter we were then in the period, historically, of the Reformation—the wonderful period, the greatest time and blessing and revival our nation had ever seen. He had heard people say the Reformation was a mistake. He wished we had another Reformation. The sooner the better. Mr. Leech asserted that the British Empire fulfilled absolutely and accurately the promises God gave to Abraham and his descendants. There was no other country in the world, no other kingdom or empire or power which fulfilled these great promises. Therefore, he considered he was fully justified in saying that the British Empire was foretold in prophecy. (Applause.)

The Chairman voiced the thanks of the meeting to the lecturer, and mentioned that Mr. Leech would be prepared to lecture to them again on March 23rd upon the " Approaching World Crisis." All present were indebted to the lecturer for the great light he had thrown upon the Old Testament prophecies.

Canon Watkins seconded.

Canon Springett also thanked the choirs for their assistance.

Mr. Leech, in returning thanks, again referred to the British Empire, and said when war was declared between England and Germany the Kaiser was satisfied that the Colonies and British possessions would say "Here is our chance to be free. We will break the yoke now." But there was a great disappointment for the Kaiser. He found instead of breaking the yoke the Colonies sent their sons and shed their blood for us and they poured out their treasure in our support. Mr. Leech said he had heard the question asked "What is it that binds the British Empire together?" and he had heard it said "The Crown." That was a good link, but it was the power of God that bound it together. It would never be broken because God had formed it and bound it together and by His power it was held together.—Kentish Observer

"IF TRULY BORN ARISE! SHINE!" "FREE-BORN."

By Professor Edward Odlum, M.A., B.Sc., &c.

Perhaps there is nothing known to man more attractive and desirable than personal freedom.

In the olden days Paul announced he was a Roman citizen—free-born. A high Roman official informed Paul that he was a free man too, but he had purchased his freedom at a great price.

What student of history does not know that there were the free-born Romans, slaves, and those who were freed from slavery by purchase or for some valuable and remarkable service?

Freed men had, at times, succeeded in climbing to great positions of power, influence and rule. At times they rather prided themselves on having been slaves, then having been freed by money, kindness or real merit.

In pride of success the freed man, at times, was glad to show where he had been and to what heights he had climbed therefrom. A species of self-laudation!

The contrast between slavery and freedom was so great that the men and peoples who had passed from serfdom to liberty rejoiced in their latter state, and most reasonably.

Later on their children were able to go one better. For while their parents had been born in slavery and then been freed, they, the children, had been born in liberty. In other words, they were free-born.

Reliable history shows us that, in one case, a whole nation, running into millions, being born into bondage, was freed by a marvellous act, and that the succeeding generation of the entire nation constituted a nation free-born.

As free-born citizens, they entered the land of Canaan and possessed it by conquest. From that day forward they gloried in the spirit and condition of freedom. Their descendants in Asia, Europe, Africa, America and Australasia rejoice in personal freedom to-day. How natural! How logical! And while they thus glory and boast, they do so without suspecting the far-away origin of their innate love of freedom.

No wonder they sing: "Britons never, never, never shall be slaves."

No wonder they are a race and breed that will not go into religious servitude! No wonder they insist on intellectual freedom! No wonder they demand the freedom of the world and use it to the full! No wonder they, for thousands of years, have insisted on self-government! No wonder they are the de facto rulers of the world to-day! No wonder their prophets foretold that these strange free-born people would eventually rule all the nations and peoples of the earth! No wonder the mass of humanity both fears and hates this man of past and present dominance! No wonder the nations represented at the League of Nations daily ask, as they sip their morning coffee, the ever uppermost question: What will England do in the matter?

With bated breath they ask and wait for an answer.

What has been in the past will increasingly be in the future. However, the fact of a deep-seated love for personal and national freedom is a guarantee that wherever these people govern there will be a just and an uplifting rule. They are and always have been inspired by the basic principle of the golden rule, which, if one do. he will surely keep all the law of God.

The Afghan.

For long ages the Afghans have determinedly ruled themselves. Hundreds of millions of Asiatics might become slaves; the Afghans never. Their far-away forefathers were bondmen in a strange land, and, after generations of servitude, they entered into national and personal liberty. Then the following generations were more than free men, they were free-born, and no people on earth are prouder of freedom and more determined to maintain it than the Afghans.

The great nations around them have fought, conquered and lost. Their bounds moved this way and that, but the Afghans held their passes, their containing limits, their mountain peaks and deep defiles.

As a people they had been free, then in bondage, then in freedom, and now, for 2,200 years have been a race of free-born men and women. Their high, proud, freedom-loving spirits rule themselves and insist on being a free independent people.

As with the Briton, the Afghan, and others of similar origin, so with these people in groups, communities, provinces, states and nations.

Their love of freedom reaches into every possible realm of human activity, including religion, and in life and death they stand, work and live for a free humanity, which object, in the end, will be reached.

OBITUARY.

LT.-COL. H. P. P. LEIGH, C.I.E.

The Bath Branch has sustained a serious loss in the death of its President. For twelve years he had guided its affairs with firmness and discretion, and it is largely owing to him that the Branch has reached its present strong position. He was loved and honoured by all the members.

Col. Leigh was a distinguished man in many ways. As a soldier and administrator in India he was well known, and deservedly honoured. He was a loyal and staunch Churchman, and a willing and generous supporter of many religious and philanthropic agencies in his city.

His chief interest in life, however, was British-Israel. He was a scholar, and his acquaintance with the languages and people of the East enabled him to fortify his general knowledge of the subject by excursions into by-ways of research which, on occasions, served him well on the platform and in the Press.

He was never weary of seeking to spread the Truth, and, as might be expected in a great soldier, he was fearless in his advocacy of it in public as well as in private.

It will be long before we look upon his like again, and his loss will be very difficult indeed to replace.

W. H. C. R.

The testimony of his Rector, which he gave in a beautiful tribute to his memory at the funeral service which took place on Tuesday, February 28th, in the St. Saviour's Parish Church, made one realise that a truly good man had been removed from our midst. He said—

LIEUT.-COLONEL H. P. P. LEIGH, C.I.E.

"That in the passing of Col. Leigh there had gone from them a striking personality, not only of one who had served his country faithfully in the past by long service in India, but also of one who was just that type of courteous gentleman whom they could ill afford to lose in these days. He (the Rector) would only make one reference to his work on the Frontier of India. Col. Leigh saw and knew the value of the work of that great missionary, Dr. Pennell, and it was Col. Leigh who informed the Government that Dr. Pennell's work was worth two regiments of soldiers to the British on the North-West Frontier. Ever since that time he had been a supporter of missionary work overseas, and his son was now doing educational work in the Cambridge and Delhi Mission.

"Since Col. Leigh's retirement he had thrown himself into many useful activities in the city of Bath, but he (the Rector) would refer particularly to his love and devotion to their church life in St. Saviour's parish. As his churchwarden, Col. Leigh had held office for thirteen years and more, and his interest had never flagged in parochial life. Except when the state of his health forbade it, he regularly attended the early morning Communion in the church on Sundays. He was indeed a loyal layman."

The Rev. Joseph Gay, accompanied by Mr. C. F. Waddington, of Bristol, represented the Federation at the funeral service.

Our warm Christian sympathy goes out towards the members of his family in this time of their great sorrow, and with the members of the Bath Branch in the loss they have sustained in the death of their beloved and honoured President.

At the public meeting held in the Assembly Rooms on March 1st, when the Rev. Joseph Gay, A.T.S., was the lecturer, the following resolution was passed, the large audience standing to receive it :—

"This meeting of the Bath Branch of the British-Israel-World Federation desires to place on record its deep sense of loss in the death of its revered President, Col. H.P.P. Leigh, C.I.E.

"For twelve years he had guided the affairs of our Branch with wisdom and discretion, and for a much longer period had taken the keenest interest in the spread of British-Israel Truth through the Country and Empire he had served so well.

"Of deep learning and quiet, unostentatious piety, he was the ideal of a perfect English gentleman, and not only in British-Israel circles, but in many religious and philanthropic circles in the city, his loss will be almost irreparable.

"This meeting begs to tender its deep sympathy with his sorrowing relatives."

In 1877, as a member of the Indian Staff Corps, Col. Leigh commenced what proved a long and honourable career in India.

ENTERTAINED VICEROYS.

For some time he served in the 2nd and 16th Bengal Cavalry, and he entered the Punjab Commission in 1879. He did special duty in Kurrun Valley, 1886, and served in the first and second Miranzai expeditions as political officer in 1891. For his services he was mentioned in despatches, and received the medal and clasp and the Companionship of the Order of the Indian Empire.

During his service in India he became proficient in several Eastern languages. He made a study of Hindoo temples, and on more than one occasion entertained Viceroys of India at places where he was stationed.

A MESSAGE.

FROM THE REV. J. STANLEY WOODHOUSE.

I HAVE been a believer in British-Israel teaching for nearly fifty years and have read the various magazines issued, and though they were all interesting, none come up to THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER. I look forward with great pleasure to Friday mornings when it is delivered to me. I wish it and those who write its instructive articles every blessing, and may it be increasingly used by our loving Father in Heaven to teach those in authority what He has ordained for our Empire in the near future. I believe British-Israel teaching will remove the difficulties from Modernists. I am told that Bradlaugh was once a believer in the Bible, and that his faith was shattered when he read the wonderful promises made by God to Abraham and confirmed to Isaac and Jacob, and was told they had never been fulfilled. I am also told that one of our well-known Bishops found himself faced with the same difficulty and tried to get out of it by trying to prove that God had not made the promises. Our teaching shows that God has fulfilled His promises and is still fulfilling them in the British nation and the United States of America. THE NATIONAL MESSAGE brings out this teaching in a most convincing way.

"THE GATE."

BY THE REV. H. A. JAMES, M.A.

GEN. XXII, 17.—"Thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies."

This was the promise given by Jehovah, under oath, to Abraham, a promise rightly looked upon as being of great importance. Dr. Mountain, in "British-Israel Truth Defended," quotes Mr. Wilkinson, who admits that the "gate" of the enemies means "control," and is tantamount to our phrase "the key to the position."

He also quotes from Dr. Llewellyn Thomas' book, "God and my Birthright" (a book which I heartily commend to fellow B.-I. students). "To possess the gate of the enemy means that the Chosen Race is to be able to speak with their enemies in the gate, implying that they can dictate terms to the enemy, that they have an effective voice in the councils of their foes. It also means that they hold the strategic point in the defences of those that hate them, the position that controls the situation; for if the gate is taken, the city lies at the mercy of the captors."

Great Britain, intentionally in some cases, and unintentionally in many others, has long been acquiring these "gates," or "key positions," all over the world, placing herself in the position of being able to dictate terms, and also to confer benefits upon the weaker peoples. But the fact still remains that "gate" is in the singular, and not in the plural, and in all probability indicates one "gate" in particular; a "gate" of greater importance than all others.

And may it not be that Great Britain has just acquired that "gate" in Mesopotamia?

The obvious enemies of Great Britain to-day and in the future are in Russia, whose chief objective is the destruction of the British Empire, and whose eyes are fixed upon India and the Pacific. The only "gate" opening into that field is Mesopotamia, which Britain is holding.

We cannot but believe that in the critical times that lie ahead, Mesopotamia will play an important part, and the fact that Great Britain, by God's Providence, now possesses that "gate" will have an immense influence upon forthcoming events.

Mesopotamia has been a costly possession up to the present, and we can thank God that, in spite of the efforts which were made on the plea of economy to persuade the British Government to evacuate that country, this course was not taken. It is, surely, God's purpose that Mesopotamia should be in the hands of Britain, and the efforts of the enemies in our midst were bound to fail, as they always have and always will.

Being in possession of that "gate," it is now our duty to strengthen it, and to keep a good watch upon it, so that Great Britain may continue to maintain "control."

HOW TO OBTAIN ISRAEL'S OLD TESTAMENT BLESSINGS.

BY HENRY PROCTOR, F.R.S.L.

ALTHOUGH we are REDEEMED FROM THE CURSE of the law, the blessings of the law do not come upon those who do not keep the law. No unregenerate man has ever kept, or can keep, the Law of GOD; but are we, who are children of GOD, enabled to keep it?

Yes, the Scripture is very plain on this point, for "What law could not do, in so far as our earthly nature weakened its action, GOD did, by sending HIS OWN SON, with a nature resembling our nature (or in the guise of sinful flesh), to atone for sin. HE condemned sin in that earthly nature so that might be satisfied in us, who live now in obedience not to our earthly nature, but to the SPIRIT" (Rom. viii, 3-4—Twentieth Century N.T.), so that the requirements of the law is to be fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh, but after the SPIRIT (R.V.). JESUS HIMSELF said, "Do not think that I have come to do away with the law, or the Prophets; I have not come to do away with them, but to complete them." (Matt. v, 17—Twentieth Century.)

The word translated FULFIL here is PLEROSAI, meaning to fill up, or make perfect. This HE proceeds to do in promulgating that perfect law which is called the Sermon on the Mount (verse 21). In this the whole law, purely spiritual, holy and perfect is included; indeed—has been summed up in this one precept—"Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself" (Gal. v, 14), so "He that loveth his neighbour has fulfilled the law." (Rom. xiii, 8—R.V.) "Love never wrongs a neighbour, that is why love is the fulfilment of the law." (Rom. xiii, 10—Moffat); "Therefore love fully satisfies the law" (Twentieth Century).

If therefore we fully satisfy the law, through being made perfect in love, we can claim the blessings of the law.

Digitized by Google

It is GOD in us that enables us to fulfil the law, for GOD is LOVE, and he who lives in LOVE lives in GOD and GOD in him. (1 John iv, 16—Twentieth Century N.T.) Thus "The righteousness of the law is fulfilled in us who walk not after the flesh, but after the SPIRIT," and all the wonderful blessings of the law become ours, and the first of these is PERFECT HEALTH.

The ETERNAL will also free you from ALL sickness. (Deut. vii, 15—Moffat.) "Thou shalt be blessed above all peoples" (v. 14). The ETERNAL will make you

OVERFLOW WITH PROSPERITY. (Deut. xxviii, 11—Moffat.)

"All these blessings shall come upon you and overtake you if only you listen to the voice of the ETERNAL your GOD. (Deut. xxviii, 2—Moffat.) The first Psalm also assures us that meditation in GOD'S law (Torah) shall bring prosperity of every kind, spiritual and natural, for "Whatsoever he doeth shall prosper" (verse 3). But can we then also claim all the OLD TESTAMENT promises, whether made through Patriarchs, Psalmists, or Prophets?

YES, for in HIM is the YES that affirms ALL the PROMISES of GOD. (2 Cor. i, 20—Moffat.)

And JESUS CHRIST was a Minister of the circumcision, for the truth of GOD

TO CONFIRM THE PROMISES

made to the Fathers. (Rom. xv, 8.) There is not a single Promise of BLESSING anywhere in the Scriptures which a child of GOD,

ABIDING IN HIM,

cannot claim, for "All things are YOURS, who are

and joint-heirs with JESUS CHRIST." (Rom. viii, 17.) Weymouth renders 1 Cor. iii, 22: "Everything belongs to you."

But, alas, how true it is that few, very few indeed, of GOD'S people are living up to the privileges of the present dispensation of the Grace of GOD, for GOD promises to "Make us perfect in every good work, to do HIS WILL, by working in us that which is well-pleasing in HIS SIGHT." (Heb. xiii, 21—R.V.) "For it is GOD that worketh in you, both to WILL, and to DO."—producing in you both the will and the execution (Phil. ii, 13—R.V.), and French version (Twentieth Century N.T.) renders, "Remember it is God, who in HIS kindness, is at work within you, enabling you both to will and to work."

GOD thus enables us to keep the law, but what law?

THE LAW OF CHRIST,

as contained in the Sermon on the Mount, for Paul says, "I am under law to CHRIST (R.V.), or under CHRIST'S LAW" (1 Cor. ix, 21—Twentieth Century), viz.:—

(1) Swear not at all.
(2) Resist evil.
(3) Love your enemies.
(4) Not to hoard money.
(5) Judge not.
(6) Be anxious for nothing.

It is thus that we abide in CHRIST and become CO-HEIRS with HIM of ALL that GOD possesses.

All the promises of GOD must then be fulfilled to us. "All that ever you ask in prayer, you shall have, if you believe." (Matt. xxi, 22—Moffat.) We receive whatever we ask, because we are laying HIS COMMANDS to heart and are doing what is pleasing in HIS SIGHT. (1 John iii, 22—Twentieth Century.) "We get from HIM whatever we ask, because we obey HIS COMMANDS and do what is pleasing in HIS SIGHT." (Moffat.)

This, then, is the condition by means of which we can obtain healing for ourselves and others.

In the Book of Job, xxxiii, 19-28—

"Man is chastened on a bed of pain,
His limbs are all benumbed,
Till his soul turns from food,
And even dainty dishes he abhors,
His flesh grows lean and foul,
His bones stick out,
His life is on the verge of death
Near the destroying angels." (Moffat—19, 23.)

If there be an interpreter with him, one among a thousand, to show unto man

WHAT IS RIGHT FOR HIM,

then He is gracious unto him and saith, "Deliver him from going down to the pit. I have found a ransom, his flesh shall be fresher than a child's, he shall return to the days of his youth." "His early strength returns, he prays to GOD and wins HIS FAVOUR, he worships in HIS PRESENCE joyfully, he tells how GOD saved him, singing aloud to others: I sinned, I went astray, but HE has not punished me; HE saved me from death, and let me see the clear light of the living." (R.V. and Moffat.)

This is just such a testimony as we are continually hearing in Pentecost to-day, and being found in the oldest Book in the BIBLE is a proof that DIVINE HEALING was one of the earliest revelations of GOD to man.

We find it practised, both by Abraham and Moses, for the whole was healed at the prayer of Abraham (Gen. xx, 17), and Miriam was healed through the intercession of Moses (Num. xii, 10, 11), and the people who had been bitten by the fiery serpents were healed by looking in faith toward the Brazen Serpent which Moses

HOUSEHOLD OF ABIMELECH

PUT UP AS A STANDARD. (Num. xxi, 6-9.)

Abraham, when a hundred years old, had become so weakened that his body was "as good as dead" (Heb. xi, 12), (Rom. iv, 19), had his youth restored so that he lived to be 175, and had six sons by Keturah. This was according to a definite promise from God: "I will restore you as at the period of youth" (Gen. xviii, 10-14—Ferrar Fenton); also, there is a definite command and promise in Leviticus xi, 44: "I am your Everlasting God, who sanctifies you, and you shall be healthy."

This promise was fulfilled to all Israel, for while they were obedient "There was not one feeble person among all their tribes."

And when Moses was 120 years old " His eye was not dim, not his natural force abated." (Deut. xxxiv, 5.) Ferrar Fenton renders it : " His eyes were not weak and his strength had not gone."

Caleb also gave his testimony on his 85th birthday : " I am 85 to-day, and I am as strong and well as when Moses sent me to spy out the land of Canaan 45 years ago." (Joshua xiv, 7-11.)

BRANCH ACTIVITIES.

DURING February Captain Haywood addressed meetings at Haywards Heath, Guildford, Farnham, Herne Bay, Blackheath, and Headquarters.

A lantern lecture was given in the Salvation Army Hall at Swanage on February 27th, on " The Gates of Empire," by Mr. D. Farmer, to a very interested audience. British-Israel literature was widely distributed.

Big gatherings have filled the Halls at Bristol for the meetings held on February 27th and 28th, and at Bath on the 29th, tremendous enthusiasm being awakened in each city. Our Commissioner, Rev. Joseph Gay, has been greatly uplifted by the fine spirit shown. Several new members were enrolled. The subjects were : " The Seat of Authority in Science and Religion," " Is Britain Israel ? Our Critics Answered," " The Great Pyramid of Egypt."

Sheffield sends us this message in part : " New members joining up every week ; NATIONAL MESSAGE circulation increasing ; more places of worship being opened to our glorious Message. For all this progress we give God the glory. There was not an empty seat here on the 29th, when Mr. H. D. Houghton gave one of his splendid lectures."

Calgary Branch, Alberta, writes :—

Through the columns of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER we, the members of the Calgary Branch of the B-I.-W.F., at this, the commencement of a new year, desire to express our adoration and praise to Jesus Christ, our Saviour, Israel's Redeemer and King.

To the executive of headquarters, in all departments, we express our sincere appreciation for the splendid unselfish efforts put forth in the past year, which have met with such excellent results.

Our greetings for the new year include a fervent hope for a greater spread of Israel Truth ; a stronger faith in God's love and mercy to us : and the justice of His plan of the ages to bring all things to perfection and righteousness in and through the atoning Sacrifice of Jesus Christ, His Son.

In this our sphere of labour we are striving to carry high the banner of Christ. Our work is progressing both in numbers and influence. Many inquiries for literature are being received, which are promptly dealt with by the Publicity Committee. Suitable pamphlets are regularly mailed to a large and increasing number of people. We meet every Tuesday evening, when interesting and instructive addresses, reflecting careful preparation and knowledge of God's Word, are delivered by various members.

Our purpose this year is to bring about a wider spread of the Israel Message. Plans are under way to open up the work in different parts of the province by the establishment of new Branches. In the great Cause which engages our sympathy and labour we wish, to all possessed with a kindred purpose, God-speed and a Happy New Year.

THE following was written in 1907 by Professor Totten :— " I do not believe that it is possible for man—unaided—to extricate himself from the geometrically and rapidly increasing conditions that now surround and engulf him upon every side. We are lacking now but twenty-one years, Solar-Lunar measure, of the 2,520 years assigned to ' Gentile Rule ' over the Holy Places—' times and seasons '—and Holy Things ; dating on solar time from Jehoiachin's Captivity, and on lunar time from Belshazzar's Feast respectively, up to A.D. 1928.

" After some nineteen years of justification and correction, duly accepted with a view to be more and more accurate in and on all of the scales of time—and not mine, mind you, but God's astronomical scales—I find A.D. 1929 the very ultimate as to the ' political ' methods now in vogue—upon the Continent in particular ; and in the toils of which creation even Our Race groans—and has groaned since God gave Israel and Judah into the hands of the Gentiles ; and is to groan, yearly, more and more, until what is predicted in the Oracles of God transpires—jot and tittle !

" Now I have been flooding the Press of late, says one, with ' unqualified alarm.' Well I have, because I am alarmed for what is to come to pass ; but chiefly in Continental Europe.

Thank God we, 'Our Race,' are 'Israel,' and God has a use for us to-morrow. I do not preach an end of the Cosmos, but a beginning of the Ages! I interpret that the time is almost up of 'the Times of the Gentiles'—of Gentile Nebuchadnezzan insanity. God knows the human race needs an awakening, and a Golden Age!

"What age ever ended without a Crisis? Babylon fell with a crash; Medo-Persia with an earthquake; Greece with a cyclone; and Rome is disintegrating right before our eyes!

"What next! The second return of Our Race to its rightful possessions; its times of punishment expired; and the Second Coming of its King to rule it, and all other races righteously at hand!"

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

By THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—Will you kindly tell me the difference between Syria and Assyria? Also will you explain the connection between Assyria and Babylonia. Is Babylon in Assyria? I shall be glad to know where these countries are situated. I have always thought that Syria and Assyria were two distinct places, but I have been informed that they were one and the same place.—ANON. (Somerset).

ANSWER.—(1) You are perfectly correct in stating that Syria and Assyria were two separate and distinct places. This is apparent in the Old Testament, and is still more obvious from a study of Bible maps. Syria was more correctly known as Aram, and its people as Aramæans. The Syrians first made their appearance in the Euphrates Valley about 1300 B.C., and immediately pushed westward as far as the Hauran (East of the Jordan), making Damascus their chief city (Isaiah vii, 8). The Aramæans are first mentioned by Shalmaneser I, king of Assyria, about 1300 B.C. Rameses II, the great Egyptian Pharaoh (XIXth Dynasty), also mentions them in his inscriptions. The language of the Aramæans (Aramæan or Aramaic) gradually spread among the common people of Assyria and Babylonia, and, thus coming into general use, we need not be surprised to find that the Babylonian Talmud was written in it. Probably the Syrians commingled largely with other Semitic peoples, such as the Ammonites, Moabites and Israelites.

King David married a daughter of the Aramæan king, Talmai of Geshur, who became the mother of Absalom (2 Samuel iii, 3). After the murder of his half-brother, Amnon, Absalom took refuge with his maternal grandfather in "Geshur of Aram" (2 Samuel xiii, 37; xv, 8). David conquered Damascus (2 Samuel viii, 6), but this city regained its independence after the death of David. Syria was later on an ally now of Israel and now of Judah (1 Kings xv, 18); during the century from Ahab to Jehoash, kings of Israel, Damascus and Israel were frequently at war. The Aramæan kingdom then became weaker, although it made an attempt upon Judah in the reign of Ahaz (Isaiah vii). But it was finally subdued by Tiglath-Pileser III, the king of Assyria (known in the Bible as "Pul," 2 Kings xv, 19, 20), in 732 B.C.

The Aramæans continued to form the basis of the population in the region from Aleppo to the Euphrates and beyond, and when it became Christian (early in the Christian era) it gave birth to a noble Christian literature in the Aramaic dialect known as Syriac. In this connection it may be mentioned with interest that Our Lord and the Jews of His day spoke Aramæan with a Hebraic dialect. In fact, the ordinary people were ignorant of pure Hebrew, which henceforth became the language of students and of the Synagogue. Thus, when St. Paul stood on the stairs, and "spake unto them in the Hebrew tongue" (Acts xxi, 40), it means of course the Aramaic dialect, the language of the common people.

The Syrians had a great civilisation, and were famous for their arts and crafts, which at one period excelled the beauty of Egyptian art, since we know from excavations that the Syrian metal vases are finer than those of the Egyptian, and that the Syrian artists were brought to work in Egypt.

(2) There was always a very close and intimate connection between Assyria and Babylonia. But Assyria, strictly speaking, was a small district bounded on the North and East by the mountains of Armenia and Kurdistan, on the West by the Tigris, and on the South by the Upper Zab. The earliest capital was the city Asshur, on the West of the Tigris, but the term "Assyria" was widely different in meaning at different periods, as the limits of the kingdom gradually extended until the Assyrian Empire included all Mesopotamia, Syria, Palestine, and even parts of Asia Minor and Egypt. The Assyrians belonged to the North Semitic group, being close akin to the Aramæans, Phœnicians, and Hebrews; like the other Mesopotamian States, Assyria early came under the predominating influence of Assyria.

Babylonia, strictly speaking, was the district that lay between the two rivers Euphrates and Tigris, and was situated between Baghdad and the junction of the rivers North-West of Basra, thus containing such important cities as Babylon, Nippur, Ur, Eridu, etc. Its civilisation is traced back to pre-historic days, while its inscriptions can be read which possibly date back to 6000 B.C. Eridu, "the good city," which was originally built on the shore of the Persian Gulf, is now far inland, marked by the modern place Abu-Shahrein, the sea having retreated from it for a distance of 100 miles. In early times, however, Eridu was the chief Babylonian port. Excavations are now taking place at Ur, the birth-place of Abraham, known to-day by the place-name of Mugheir, while the wonderful treasures which are now being brought to light give abundant proof of the high civilisation of this most ancient and historic city. Three of the most famous Babylonian kings were Sargon of Akkad, about 2750 B.C.; Hammurabi, a contemporary of Abraham, and probably to be identified with Amraphel of Shinar (Genesis xiv, 1); and Nebuchadnezzar of popular fame. The Fall of Babylon took place in 539 B.C.

It was Assyria which deported Israel in 722 or 721 B.C. when Sargon (not the great Sargon mentioned above) captured Samaria (the only city ever built by the Hebrews), and exiled the flower of the nation to the number of 27,290 persons, and settled them in "Halah and in Habor by the river of Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes" (2 Kings xvii, 6).

It was Babylon which deported the Jews from 606 to 587 B.C., when Nebuchadnezzar made three attacks upon Jerusalem, finally sacked the city, and took Zedekiah captive to Babylon, and also "the remnant of the multitude" (2 Kings xxiv, xxv), which terminated the Kingdom of Judah.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

THE REV. W. H. STUART-FOX, M.A., will give the address at Headquarters on Wednesday afternoon next, March 21st, and Mr. John Leech, K.C., and Mr. Howard Rand, LL.B., will be the speakers for Thursday evening. The meetings last week were addressed by the Rev. Chas. Cooper, F.G.S., and Mrs. Tydeman Chilvers.

We would call attention to the announcement in our advertising columns of the special lecture to be given at Central Hall on Tuesday, March 27th, at 7.30, by the Rev. Pascoe Goard on a subject of very great importance. A full audience may be assured.

We have another important announcement to make: it is that the Queen's Hall has been engaged for Friday, April 13th, when the Rev. Pascoe Goard will speak on "The British-Israel Challenge, God's Last Call to the Nation," and Mr. Herbert Garrison will lecture on "The Great Pyramid," with lantern pictures. The hour is 7.45. Major Knowles, President of the B.-I.-W.F., will preside. Reserved seats, 3s. and 2s., unreserved 1s., Box Office, Queen's Hall, Langham Place, W.1.

All our friends are invited to help in every possible way to fill the Hall on this occasion. Leaflets will be available shortly.

The Rev. Joseph Gay addressed two excellent audiences for our Branch at Bath, in the Assembly Rooms, on February 29th, on "The Moral and Spiritual Values of the Pyramid," and "Is Britain Israel? Our Critics Answered," respectively. Great interest was manifested.

The seed which has been sown in the Queen City of Canada, Toronto, and throughout Ontario during these many years is bearing fruit. Interest in B.-I. teaching is being manifested everywhere. New Branches are springing up throughout the city and inquiries are coming in from all parts of Ontario asking for literature and information. For years the prayer has been that ways and means could be found to send out an Organiser. That prayer has now been answered. Mr. S. J. Frame, a life-member of the Toronto Branch and one of our Honorary Presidents, has come forward and offered to finance such a missionary. The man for the work was ready, and so, at a meeting of the Executives of the various City Branches, Mr. Thomas Ransome was appointed Organising Secretary of the British-Israel-World Federation for the Province of Ontario. Mr. Ransome will be starting out on his work as soon as the details of his mission can be arranged, and we would ask all readers of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER in Ontario, who wish Mr. Ransome to visit their communities, to communicate with him at 1079, Queen Street West, Toronto.

H. T. R., Buenos Aires, writes:—"I congratulate all the workers at Headquarters on their work and progress during 1927. I consider THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER the best medium of all for circulating B.-I. Truth. I am pleased to join your union of labourers for 1928, as also in the renewal of the Covenant. There is a strong and increasing body of the laity here who are B.-I. believers. May we all learn to become true servants of God."

Our venerable and beloved friend, the Rev. Dr. Mountain, is devoting himself to the spread of British-Israel Truth. He has just had two successful meetings with our Leicester Branch. Between the meetings an excellent tea was provided by the ladies of the Branch for a large number, some of whom came from considerable distances. The Mayor, Alderman James Thomas, J.P., presided at the evening meeting, wearing his chain of office. Dr. Mountain's address was on "The Heavenly King and His Kingdom." The Mayor moved a vote of thanks, and said that Britain needed more men like Dr. Mountain, who took such a firm stand for the literal acceptance and reliability of the Bible. Mr. A. E. Biggs, the President of the Branch, added his thanks to the lecturer, and proposed a vote of thanks to the Mayor and to the organist, Mr. Sidney Smith. Dr. Mountain's hymn, "Back to the Bible," was sung at both meetings.

Great efforts are being made in the United States to spread Israel Truth. Books and pamphlets on the subject can be purchased from the Anglo-Israel Federation (N.E. Branch), 110, Merrimack Street, Haverhill, Mass., U.S.A., who are agents for the publications of the Covenant Publishing Co., of 6, Buckingham Gate, London, S.W.1.

T. J. S., of Kuala Lumpur, Malay States, writes: "I am a regular reader of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER, and I greatly appreciate its teaching. I fully believe that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation, and the Executors of her commissions, and I am in perfect agreement with your interpretation of Holy Scripture. My daily prayer is that the Lord of Hosts may pour out His blessing on your work."

Our Tea Room at Headquarters is being increasingly patronised. The Earl of Dysart is a frequent visitor. Members and Associates appreciate the opportunity for social intercourse and conversation on the subject so dear to their hearts.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

[It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.]

THE LAW OF THE LORD, OR THE COMMON LAW.—XI.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

LET US NOW LOOK AT THE OUTSTANDING PROVISIONS OF THE LAW.

The Law of marriages to-day obtaining under the Common Law is the Law of Pentateuch. This we show by reading the statement in Leviticus xviii, and in reading that statement contained in the Book of Common Prayer, showing that English Law regards this latter statement as both Statute and Ordinance Law; that is to say: the Law national and the Law ecclesiastical.

FEMALE INHERITANCE.

The Law, or rather the Judgment, under which Queen Victoria and other British Queens have taken the throne, and under which the eldest child of Queen Victoria, being a daughter, was excluded from the throne; that is to say, the late Empress of Germany, who was the eldest child of Queen Victoria, is set forth in the Judgment rendered before the door of the Tabernacle in the wilderness, and which still controls the succession in Britain. The following is the Law report of the case:—

"Then came the daughters of Zelophehad, the son of Hepher, the son of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, of the families of Manasseh the son of Joseph: and these are the names of his daughters: Mahlah, Noah, and Hoglah, and Milcah, and Tirzah.

And they stood before Moses, and before Eleazar the priest, and before the princes and all the congregation, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, saying,

Our father died in the wilderness, and he was not in the company of them that gathered themselves together against the Lord in the company of Korah; but died in his own sin, and had no sons.

Why should the name of our father be done away from among his family, because he hath no son? Give unto us therefore a possession among the brethren of our father.

And Moses brought their cause before the Lord.

And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

The daughters of Zelophehad speak right: thou shalt surely give them a possession of an inheritance among their father's brethren; and thou shalt cause the inheritance of their father to pass unto them.

And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a man die, and have no son, then ye shall cause his inheritance to pass unto his daughter.

And if he have no daughter, then ye shall give his inheritance unto his brethren." (Numbers xxvii, 1-9.)

"And the chief fathers of the families of the children of Gilead, the son of Machir, the son of Manasseh, of the families of the sons of Joseph, came near, and spake before Moses, and before the princes, the chief fathers of the children of Israel:

And they said, The Lord commanded my lord to give the land for an inheritance by lot to the children of Israel; and my lord was commanded by the Lord to give the inheritance of Zelophehad our brother unto his daughters.

Digitized by Google

And if they be married to any of the sons of the other tribes of the children of Israel, then shall their inheritance be taken from the inheritance of our fathers, and shall be put to the inheritance of the tribe whereunto they are received: so shall it be taken from the lot of our inheritance.

And when the jubile of the children of Israel shall be, then shall their inheritance be put unto the inheritance of the tribe whereunto they are received: so shall their inheritance be taken away from the inheritance of the tribe of our fathers.

And Moses commanded the children of Israel according to the word of the Lord, saying, The tribe of the sons of Joseph hath said well.

This is the thing which the Lord doth command concerning the daughters of Zelophehad, saying, Let them marry to whom they think best; only to the family of the tribe of their fathers shall they marry.

So shall not the inheritance of the children of Israel remove from tribe to tribe: for every one of the children of Israel shall keep himself to the inheritance of the tribe of his fathers.

And every daughter, that possesseth an inheritance in any tribe of the children of Israel, shall be wife unto one of the family of the tribe of her father, that the children of Israel may enjoy every man the inheritance of his fathers.

Neither shall the inheritance remove from one tribe to another tribe; but every one of the tribes of the children of Israel shall keep himself to his own inheritance.

Even as the Lord commanded Moses, so did the daughters of Zelophehad." (Numbers xxxvi, 1-10.)

Is it not startling to find this Judgment still operative, expressing our Law of inheritance?

The basis of land ownership in Israel-Britain is expressed in the jubilee message:—

"And thou shalt number seven sabbaths of years unto thee, seven times seven years; and the space of the seven sabbaths of years shall be unto thee forty and nine years.

Then shalt thou cause the trumpet of the jubile to sound on the tenth day of the seventh month, in the day of atonement shall ye make the trumpet sound throughout all your land.

And ye shall hallow the fiftieth year, and PROCLAIM LIBERTY THROUGHOUT ALL THE LAND UNTO ALL THE INHABITANTS THEREOF: it shall be a jubile unto you; and ye shall return every man unto his possession, and ye shall return every man unto his family.

A jubile shall that fiftieth year be unto you: ye shall not sow, neither reap that which groweth of itself in it, nor gather the grapes in it of thy vine undressed.

For it is the jubile: it shall be holy unto you; ye shall eat the increase thereof out of the field.

In the year of this jubile ye shall return every man unto his possession.

And if thou sell ought unto thy neighbour, or buyest ought of thy neighbour's hand, ye shall not oppress one another.

According to the number of years after the jubile thou shalt buy of thy neighbour, and according unto the number of years of the fruits he shall sell unto thee:

According to the multitude of years thou shalt increase the price thereof, and according to the fewness of years thou shalt diminish the price of it: for according to the number of the years of the fruits doth he sell unto thee.

Ye shall not therefore oppress one another; but thou shalt fear thy God; for I am the Lord your God.

Wherefore ye shall do my statutes, and keep my judgments, and do them; and ye shall dwell in the land in safety.

And the land shall yield her fruit, and ye shall eat your fill, and dwell therein in safety.

And if ye shall say, What shall we eat the seventh year? behold, we shall not sow, nor gather in our increase:

Then I will command my blessing upon you in the sixth year, and it shall bring forth fruit for three years.

And ye shall sow the eighth year, and eat yet of old fruit until the ninth year; until her fruits come in ye shall eat of the old store.

THE LAND SHALL NOT BE SOLD FOR EVER: FOR THE LAND IS MINE: FOR YE ARE STRANGERS AND SOJOURNERS WITH ME.

And in all the land of your possession ye shall grant a redemption for the land.

If thy brother be waxen poor, and hath sold away some of his possession, and if any of his kin come to redeem it, then shall he redeem that which his brother sold.

And if the man have none to redeem it, and himself be able to redeem it;

Then let him count the years of the sale thereof, and restore the overplus unto the man to whom he sold it; that he may return unto his possession.

But if he be not able to restore it to him, then that which is sold shall remain in the hand of him that hath bought it until the year of jubile: and in the jubile it shall go out, and he shall return unto his possession." (Leviticus xxv, 8-28.)

Thus we see that God holds ultimate ownership of the land. He accounts the family whose inheritance the land is as "sojourners with me," that is to say, as guests of God. leasehold sale of rural property within a fifty year term only is allowed. Absolute sale of city property is provided for.

SOME FINANCIAL PROVISOES.

"At the end of every seven years thou shalt make a release.

And this is the manner of the release: Every creditor that lendeth ought unto his neighbour shall release it; he shall not exact it of his neighbour, or of his brother; because it is called the LORD'S release.

Of a foreigner thou mayest exact it again: but that which is thine with thy brother thine hand shall release;

Save when there shall be no poor among you; for the Lord shall greatly bless thee in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee for an inheritance to possess it:

Only if thou carefully hearken unto the voice of the Lord thy God to observe to do all the commandments which I command thee this day.

For the Lord thy God blesseth thee, as he promised thee: and thou shalt lend unto many nations, but thou shalt not borrow; and thou shalt reign over many nations, but they shall not reign over thee.

Thou shalt not lend upon usury to thy brother; usury of money, usury of victuals, usury of anything that is lent upon usury:

Unto a stranger thou mayest lend upon usury; but unto thy brother thou shalt not lend upon usury: that the Lord thy God mayest bless thee in all that thou settest thine hand to in the land whither thou goest to possess it." (Deut. xxiii, 19-21.)

We still have a six years bar to a debt. But Parliaments and Courts have changed it to a large degree. The basis of the six years bar is, however, clear.

THE SABBATH LAW.

"And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, Verily my sabbaths ye shall keep: for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the Lord that doth sanctify you.

Ye shall keep the sabbath therefore: for it is holy unto you: every one that defileth it shall surely be put to death: for whosoever doeth any work therein, that soul shall be cut off from among his people.

Six days may work be done; but in the seventh is the sabbath of rest, holy to the Lord: whosoever doeth any work in the sabbath day, he shall surely be put to death.

Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the sabbath, to observe the sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual covenant.

It is a sign between me and the children of Israel for ever: for in six days the Lord made heaven and earth, and on the seventh day he rested, and was refreshed." (Exodus xxxi, 12-17.)

"If thou turn away thy foot from the sabbath, from doing thy pleasure on my holy day; and call the sabbath a delight, the holy of the Lord, honourable; and shalt honour him, not doing thine own ways, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words:

Then shalt thou delight thyself in the Lord: and I will cause thee to ride upon the high places of the earth, and feed thee with the heritage of Jacob thy father; for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it." (Isaiah lviii, 13 and 14.)

These are sufficient examples as to how the Divine Law is the basis of our Constitutional life. We shall next consider in brief outline the history of the Law.

THE PRESENT CRISIS.

LECTURE BY COMMANDER ROBERTS.

"THE present crisis as it affects Christianity and all nations" was the subject of an address delivered by the Rev. Commander L. G. A. Roberts to a large audience at a meeting held in connection with the Richmond Branch of the British-Israel-World Federation, at the Public Library Hall, on Tuesday. The Vicar of Christ Church (the Rev. K. Dodds) presided.

The Chairman said that he need not introduce Commander Roberts to them, for they all knew that he was one of the veterans of the wonderful Cause, and had written many books upon the subject, which nobody had been able to effectively answer.

Commander Roberts said that perhaps it was a startling thing to some of them to be told that the history of the British nation, the United States, and the Anglo-Saxon dominions, as well as their future, were all told in the Book which they called "the Englishman's Book." Yet there were some who almost despised them because they said so, and were so peculiar as to almost despise the Book because the result was come to by all thinking men of whatever nationality. The history of Israel, as told in the Bible, and supported by all historical research when properly sifted, centred upon only one Kingdom upon earth set up by the God of Heaven. That history, together with prophecies relating thereto, took up nearly seven-eighths of the whole Book. Other nations were only spoken of as they made for disciplining or moulding that wonderful people. The whole tenor of the Bible was taken up with the nation, empire, or community of nations. Others, such as Egypt, Assyria, Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, Rome, and Turkey, were as world Powers existing during the training, educating and maturing of "this Power." Britain, the U.S.A. and Anglo-Saxondom were that empire of Israel. If they wanted the history of that people before Christ they went to the Old Testament historical parts. If they wanted it after Christ they could find it in the prophetical and the New Testament. The Book of the Revelation was the unveiling of Christ and His Kingdom as opposed to the kingdoms of this world.

"A CONSECUTIVE PROPHECY."

Continuing, the speaker said:—The first five chapters of Revelation give us as an introduction to the Lord Jesus and the several phases of Israel in the world throughout this present era or dispensation. From the sixth chapter to the end of the eleventh we have a consecutive prophecy of struggle of the Kingdom of the Lord Jesus, as in sections progressing through Europe into the place prepared of God until they arrive in the British Islands. Their especial antagonists are Rome Pagan, Rome Papal, Mahometan Saracen, and Mahometan Turkey. This brings us to the end of the ninth chapter. A survey of events in these Islands would not be amiss. The Kingdom of God was set up with power here before the Apostles had finished their ministry. It grew up until in A.D. 176 it became the National British Church, as told us by quaint Bishop Fuller. The light of the glorious Gospel has never yet been extinguished here. It was in A.D. 597 that Rome first attempted to bring us into her system; but notice that our Church, founded by Joseph of Arimathea in A.D. 35, according to Cardinal Baronius, was not only here at least seven years before the Gospel came to Rome, but also the first Roman bishop was himself a British Prince Linus, mentioned in 2 Tim. iv, 21. It was the Anglo-Saxon invasion of cir. 450-600 A.D. which gave Rome an opportunity of coming into Kent to convert these Saxons. But here even, in A.D. 597, she found that Queen Bertha was already a Christian, and a Christian congregation were at St. Martin's, Canterbury. The major portion of Anglo-Saxons was converted by Celtic and Gallic missionaries, and fifty-six years after Augustine's arrival the Roman mission had proved a failure. It was by an Anglo-

Saxon bishop in the See of Canterbury—not of Roman orders—that London itself was converted in A.D. 653. The two peoples, British and Anglo-Saxon or Anglian, attempted a union at the Council of Whitby, A.D. 664, but owing to a young Anglian of Northumberland, Wilfred, who had travelled to Rome and brought back the glare of Roman ritual, it was decided that the Anglian Church should follow Rome as to the celebration of Easter. But as this also brought on other ecclesiastical dogmas the British Church refused to have anything to do with Rome. This brought about a separation, and the British bishops preferred to give up their sees in Anglia rather than conform. Northumberland and Kent together chose Theodore of Tarsus, who became the first Archbishop of Canterbury, duly elected by the Anglian community. This was in A.D. 668. Now we come to the tenth and eleventh chapters of Revelation. In consequence of this truckling to Roman ideas and the ascendancy of the Norman Conquest, William the Conqueror, though he would not admit that he owed anything to the Pope, brought into England many Latin priests, and the custom of giving preference to the Pope's appointments and paying Peter's pence became very popular. It must be remembered that the doctrine of transubstantiation was not then generally acknowledged, even by Rome itself, and until A.D. 1215 it was not enforced. It was a bad day for King John when he yielded to the Pope's legate and allowed the British Crown to be so contemptuously treated. It, however, brought the Barons, our then House of Lords, to insist upon the Magna Charta Act. "The Church of England shall be free." So shortly after, we find Bishop Grostete of Lincoln, Bradwardine and Wycliffe, followed by the Lollards, all declaring from the Word of God that the Pope of Rome was the Antichrist.

THE REFORMATION.

This brought about the glorious Reformation. But consider the ignorance of the clergy, their tyrannical oppression, their determination to keep the people as ignorant as themselves! The Bible was not only an unknown Book, but in instances where it was known it was forbidden to be read. As to translating it, this was refused under condition of anathema and excommunication. There was nothing but the Vulgate Latin Scriptures, which few were allowed even access to, unless a priest. How much we owe to these noble anti-reformers many of us little know! But the mighty Angel takes up the part of His people mostly now in the British Islands. Some are yet left in the Roman earth. So the Lord Jesus Himself is seen "clothed with a cloud, as He went up into heaven: the rainbow, the covenant token of remembrance, His face as the sun, and He cried with a loud voice, as a lion roareth." Britain aroused, and when He cried, the seven thunders (of Rome) uttered their own voices. It was Henry VIII, according to the Acts of Parliament and his Royal decree, that every church in England should have the Bible, and his terrible denunciation against Rome, which caused Rome to launch forth her terrible blasphemy. Write them not! In this tenth chapter we have all the Reformation period depicted until Queen Elizabeth had, from A.D. 1552 to 1571, confirmed our Book of Common Prayer and the 39 Articles of our religion. Rev. xi now follows. "And there was given me a reed like unto a rod and the angel stood, saying, Rise, and measure the temple of God and the altar, and them that worship therein. But the court which is without the temple leave out and measure it not; for it is given unto the Gentiles; and the holy city shall they tread under foot forty and two months. And I will give power unto My two witnesses, and they shall prophesy, ... clothed in sackcloth." The temple of God is used in Zech. vi for Israel's temple; it is also, in 1 Cor. and 2 Cor., used for that community of saints saying, "For ye are the temple of God"; "Your bodies are the temples of the Holy Ghost, which dwelleth in you." In Ephesians this temple is called "the whole building fitly framed together and compacted, groweth unto a holy temple in the Lord." These expressions will give you the meaning, but remember God has said that He will "not give His glory unto another, nor His praise to graven images," but to Israel. Now, at the acceptance of the Book of Common Prayer in 1559, when Romish and Protestant bishops and clergy were assembled by Queen Elizabeth, under Archbishop Heath, and all the Roman bishops lost control of themselves, it was given against Romanism. All the bishops were then asked to submit to the oath of supremacy of the Queen as Governor over the English Church. All the Romish bishops but one, Kitchin, refused to do so, and so were told to resign their sees. This brought about terrible fulminations from the Pope, and to such an extent were his thunders that he ordered the murder of Queen Elizabeth, and ultimately the Spanish Armada was launched against England to bring her into subjection. But also immediately our Prayer Book and the 39 Articles were issued, the decrees of Pope Pius IV, "the Council of Trent," had been promulgated. It was the next Pope, Pius V, who declared that the assassination of Queen Elizabeth would be no murder. Let us ask ourselves whether we shall in any form or way again bring ourselves into such a tyrannous bondage as to submit to man's religion, instead of the freedom which we have had for 365 years under Jesus Christ. It is exactly 1,260 years that Britain has witnessed against Rome. It is just "a time and no longer" since Elizabeth had the boldness and the grace of God to declare that the Bible should be our guide. Are we to submit to the Malines Conversations? Are we again to seek union with a Church which would take away our Bible? The Word of God says after three days and a half the spirit of life from God enters into the witnesses, and they stand upon their feet, and great fear came upon them which saw them. There is no return to Rome on the part of Britain in this Word; it is all the contrary. The witnesses ascend up to heaven; they don't descend into the bottomless pit, from whence the beast is seen to arise. Let us, therefore, hold fast to our Book of Common Prayer, to our 39 Articles, and especially to our Bibles. Let us especially ask God to direct us all into the way of truth, that our last witness may be even more decided than it ever has been.

The Chairman, who declared that it was only the knowledge of "the truth" that kept him from going into the wilderness while he was at college, said that it was the experience of those who knew the truth that Modernism could not stand up against British-Israel Truth.

Mr. H. L. Gibbs, the Secretary, then made several announcements, and also spoke of British-Israel.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.—The Richmond Herald.

"THE GROUND OF ISRAEL'S REDEMPTION AND RECONCILIATION."

PART I.

ADDRESS AT HEADQUARTERS BY MRS. TYDEMAN CHILVERS.

PERHAPS I ought to give some sort of explanation for being on this platform this evening. I think Mr. Garrison would not have asked me had he not known I was in full sympathy with the Truth that is set forth here. I have been enjoying it for very many years, it has grown both in my appreciation and understanding, and I have prayed so much for the time to come when the subject could be spoken of without raising antagonism or creating prejudice.

It was long ago, when I was taking my Bible Class through that most interesting subject—"The restoration of Palestine for the Jews," that I became aware of what appeared useless tautology. The House of Israel and the House of Judah I had understood to be the same. Yet the sentences perplexed me. Until then I had thought that all Israel were Jews, for it was customary to speak of them as such. I did not give myself away to my class, telling them I did not understand and did not know, but I felt determined that when the course of studies were over I would thoroughly investigate, because I did not believe that God would employ useless tautology in the Scriptures.

I was praying for enlightened vision when God brought across my path one who had been converted and had received salvation by faith in Jesus Christ through coming to understand British-Israel Truth. It was that which led her to Christ. . . . Meeting her was my first introduction to it. I was informed that we, as the Anglo-Saxon race, are the descendants of the "Children of Israel," and I gasped! Setting myself to study the points of similarity, with a little help from some of the books on history, particularly that of Archdeacon Hanan, and Dr. Aldersmith's "Handbook for Inquirers," and seeking much illumination from God's Holy Spirit, it became clear as daylight to me. I have wondered since how anyone could fail to see it! I believe it to be the key to the prophetic Scriptures.

I have felt it much on my heart that if ever God gave me an opportunity of speaking on the subject I would speak of the grounds of Israel's redemption and reconciliation, for it is a matter of great perplexity and a very real difficulty with many, how it can be possible for the promise to be fulfilled, "All Israel shall be saved," and, too, this one," But Israel shall be saved in the Lord, with an everlasting salvation" (Isa. xlv, 17), referring to the nation as well as the individual. It is a theme which is very dear to my own heart, that the only ground of her redemption is the Sacrifice of Jesus, the Son of God, at the Cross of Calvary, and it is this that I want to take you through for a little while to-night.

We believe in the presidency and control of the Holy Spirit, and I trust you will note it when I tell you that I intended to refer you to the 12th chapter of Isaiah, together with some few verses from the 45th, prefacing my talk, which is the same Scripture reading that Mr. Pascoe Goard has given you—the Glory Song of the Kingdom, in which Israel's joyous praise for redemption, deliverance and salvation is so strongly set forth.

You have, of course, read in the Scriptures the precious fact that Israel as a nation was chosen of God from the beginning: "elect according to the foreknowledge of God the Father," chosen for service, for witness, and for representation. I delight to go through the Sacred Page to read of that Divine choice, and then to see how the just and holy God can, on the grounds of Calvary's Sacrifice, bring it to accomplishment. Were it not that we are assured by the Scriptures and understand what Calvary means, we should feel it could not be possible; but with the Cross in view, thank God it is gloriously possible. Israel is chosen to be established as God's representative in the world, chosen to be God's witness, and chosen for holy service to be God's messenger as a nation to the nations.

In Isaiah xliii we read:—"This people have I formed for Myself" (v. 1), chosen for Him: of course separated from all other nations "unto Himself," for they "shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned among the nations." "I have created him for My glory: Yea, I have made him." "Ye are My witnesses and My servant whom I have chosen." "Thou art Mine."

I see in the Divine choice of the nation for service God calling it "My nation," to "deliver captives," to "open prison doors." (Isa. xlii, 7.) The prophet says: "Israel shall bring Jacob again to Him," and shall minister for the enlightenment of the people. "He shall let go My captives, not for price or reward," said the Lord—the deliverance of the bound; He shall "restore the desolations of Israel," and shall be for "the raising up of the preserved of Israel." "My salvation to the ends of the earth" is the Word of the Lord.

I wonder if you have looked through the Scriptures and traced the varied names of the Chosen Nation; there are about 136 different names and titles given to them, and each beautifully characteristic and descriptive too. She is to "build the waste places" and even to repair cities; to be "a kingdom of priests" and "royal priesthood" unto the Lord. Do you realise that this is part of the special function of believing Israel? Is not this, too, the function of the Body of Christ to-day, seeking the interest of the Head of the Church, in prayer and intercession, to minister unto Him on behalf of His people?

In Exodus we are told, "Ye shall be unto Me a kingdom of priests." The Apostle Peter says, "Ye are a royal priesthood." But look at Israel nationally. How could it be possible for a people so far away from God, "backsliding Israel," loving her own way; turning from God unto idols and from His laws and statutes; indulging in sin and all kinds of wickedness; imbibing doctrines of demons; accepting in many cases that which it entails,—I ask you, judging from that and the picture of God's Word of His people's present-day condition, how can it be possible for such a wonderful purpose of Jehovah for them to be carried out? Only on one basis, and that the basis of Calvary. Hosea says: "The Lord hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God in the land. By swearing, and lying, and killing, and stealing, and committing adultery, they break out . . ." That is God's verdict —" The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib; but Israel doth not know, My people doth not consider." " Israel hath cast off that which is good." Do you not hear the heart-throb of the offended God in these cries? " Israel hath forgotten the Lord, his Maker "!

To-day, if you look round, is not that just a summary of the condition of the people? Yet, friends, with it all, is there not now surging underneath a real conscious hunger after that which is right and true and pure? Is there not a stirring among the dry bones? Are there not those who are turning, first to the one hand and then to the other, though searching for that which is not satisfying? " Spending their strength for nought, buying the bread which satisfieth not "? But does it not portray a very real soul-thirst? What is underneath this restless seeking for pleasure? Friends, what means this anxious search for comfort to-day, this quest for God—in many instances only to find the bitterest disappointment? Is it not that in various directions God is moving, creating the sense of spiritual hunger after that which only He can give, though the import of that hunger is mostly unrecognised?

It would be utterly impossible for men and women to know God apart from the Lord Jesus Christ, so the Apostle Paul in his letter to the Philippians gives us to understand. Because God is invisible and in His invisibility there would be no hope of knowing Him or comprehending His character unless by some means that " invisibility " could be laid aside and He became " visible." Christ—God the Son—did just that! Nor could God the invisible meet the need of the sinner; but Jesus laid aside His previous mode of Divine existence, His invisibility, and took upon Himself the human form, that in that human form we might come to know God the Father, and in that human form He might atone for the sins of His people and bear away their iniquity.

Again and again in His wonderful discourses Christ gives us a glimpse into the heart of God the Father as He, the Son, knew it; so in and through Christ Jesus we have come to know something of Him and to rejoice in the truth, " The Father Himself loveth you."

Thus to this world He came to " redeem His people from their sins." " He shall redeem Israel from all their iniquities." (Ps. cxxx, 8.) He came to transform them—to make it possible for them to fulfil God's purpose in the world; He came to put away the barrier that sin had made; He came to bring them " nigh unto God by His precious blood." "All things are of God, Who hath reconciled us unto Himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation." The word " reconciliation," so expressive, has this beautiful meaning—" a renewal of friendship."

OUR readers are reminded of the B.-I. Hostel at Glastonbury as a home where British-Israelites and their friends can be accommodated at moderate rates for full board and residence. A number are going there for Easter. No one should miss seeing the sacred sites at Glastonbury and remains of the noble Abbey.

MR. PANTON REFUTED.

BY THE REV. J. MOUNTAIN, D.D.

PART I.

1. THE REV. D. M. PANTON, B.A., is a striking illustration of the accuracy of his own words :—" Very holy people can hold very serious error."

2. We have known and admired Mr. Panton for many years. May great blessing continue to attend him in his important pastorate and in his editorial work! He is such an excellent man that we specially regret that he is not a conscious British-Israelite.

3. On Biblical subjects, concerning which he is fully informed, he writes with remarkable force and accuracy; but no one can write accurately upon a subject in which his knowledge is imperfect and concerning which his mind is unconsciously biased.

4. After several perusals of his attack on British-Israel—and on each occasion with increasing pain—we must, in all brotherly kindness, say that, in our judgment, his article suffers from both the above-mentioned defects; and as he has refused —although with much personal graciousness—to permit from our pen a reply in his Magazine, we gladly avail ourselves of the opportunity of answering him in these pages.

5. He says that British-Israel is " dangerous." So it is; but not in the way that he means. It is " dangerous " to Infidelity and Modernism; for it absolutely refutes them; and many unbelievers have been brought to the feet of the Lord Jesus by British-Israel teaching, and have become champions for the Divine inspiration and authority of the Bible. Yes, British-Israel is very " dangerous " to every form of Scepticism; for not only is it based upon the Bible, but it also vindicates the truth of the Bible.—All italics are ours.

MR. PANTON'S ERRONEOUS METHOD.

1. Mr. Panton approaches the subject of British-Israel from the standpoint of the Critic instead of from the standpoint of a Student. It seems almost incredible; nevertheless, it is a fact that he never mentions the patriarchs Abraham, Isaac or Jacob, from whom Israel sprang, and to whom the glorious Israelitish promises were made—national promises which we believe our Heavenly Father is fulfilling in the world-wide Empire of Great Britain to-day.

2. These promises form an important part of the foundation of British-Israel belief. Nevertheless, Mr. Panton fails to quote from any one of them.

3. There are hundreds of additional promises and prophecies which, in this connection, demand his consideration; but we mention only one, namely, that about " The Appointed Place," which God promised to David for His people Israel, and from which He stated that they should be " moved no more." (2 Samuel vii, 10, R.V.) This " place " is referred to as in the " North-west," and in " Islands "; and it corresponds exactly with the position of our British Isles.

4. But Mr. Panton does not deal with these important points. In other words, he attacks our conclusions, but ignores the arguments which have logically led to them ; and he questions the stability and reality of the British-Israel temple of truth, without examining its impregnable Biblical foundations. His article is purely critical and destructive ; but it is not thus that truth is won.

5. If Mr. Panton had entered upon the study of the subject from its Abrahamic beginnings ; if he had traced the history of Israel right through the pages of Holy Scripture ; and if he had made himself familiar with the prophecies which still await Israel's future ;—in that case we cannot think that so consecrated and able a man would have penned the article which is now before us.

MR. PANTON'S SEVEN CRITICISMS.

First : Mr. Panton states that British-Israel is—" Historically Impossible."

1. But a careful perusal of the Holy Scriptures will show that most of the things which he says are " historically impossible " were Divinely foretold concerning Israel—such as loss of name ; loss of language ; loss of religion ; yea, even loss of memory of their identity. What must have been the mental, social, and religious degeneration of Israel during the centuries of their Captivity, under circumstances which we now proceed to mention !—

2. They were to be " wanderers " in the earth ; " scattered " ; " driven away " ; " devoured " ; " lost " to the Mosaic Covenant ; " swallowed up among the nations." Yea, they were actually " divorced from God," who proclaimed them " Lo Ammi " ; " Ye are not my people, and I will not be your God." (Hos. i. 9.)

3. Mr. Panton implies that Britain cannot be Israel because they do not possess the Jewish features. But did the Ten Tribes possess these features ? There is no evidence which proves that they did. The Jewish physiognomy seems to have developed subsequent to their return from the Babylonian Captivity, when Syrian, Edomite and other blood was mingled with the Jewish. At the present time Jewish children in many cases have blue eyes and auburn hair ; and they approach near to the type of Anglo-Saxon children. This is the testimony of Holman Hunt, who spent considerable time in Palestine in order to obtain material for his remarkable picture of Our Blessed Lord.

4. Again, Mr. Panton denies that we are Israel because our language is written from left to right, whereas Hebrew—the language of the Ten Tribes—was written from right to left. But he seems to ignore the influence of Israel's centuries of Captivity, during which they separated into different bodies and wandered amongst the nations, adopting their manners and customs, and speaking their languages.

5. The history of the Jews furnishes valuable information in this connection.

Concerning their 70 years' Captivity in Babylon, Dean Prideaux says :—

" Common people, by having so long conversed with the Babylonians, learned their language, and forgot their own."

And if such a change could take place in 70 years in the experience of Judah, how much greater would be the linguistic changes in the experience of Israel during the many centuries of their Captivity !

6. All this is illustrated by the Jews even of to-day, of whom there are 14,000,000. They are divided into English Jews, German Jews, Spanish Jews, Italian Jews, Russian Jews, American Jews, etc. They all speak or write the language of the country of their adoption, writing from left to right and, to a large extent, forgetting their Hebrew language, which is employed only or mainly in connection with their religious services or with other ecclesiastical matters.

7. Israel, having abandoned the worship of Jehovah, and having become worshippers of Baal, would naturally soon forget their Hebrew language in which Jehovah's worship was formulated and rendered. In their centuries of wandering in Assyria, Asia Minor, and the Northern and Western nations of Europe, they would not only speak fresh languages, but would learn and practise the European method of writing from left to right.

8. Mr. Panton lays stress on another point against Britain being Israel, namely, the mixture of races in the British nation. But as to our population and that of Manasseh in America being " conglomerate " and not " a pure stock," it should be remembered that it is the Anglo-Saxon race who are the descendants and representatives of the Ten Tribes ; and that they came to our shores from one and the same stock in Asia at different times, but under different names.

9. It should be recollected that, as Joseph, who inherited the birthright, married an Egyptian, namely, Asenath, the daughter of Poti-pherah, the priest of On, it naturally followed that even Manasseh and Ephraim, his sons, were partly of Gentile blood. Nevertheless, the racial unity was not regarded as marred. It would seem, therefore, that, as a principle, the unity of the Israelitish Race was regarded as maintained if only the father or the mother was of Israelitish descent.

10. Moreover, as Ruth, the Edomite, and afterwards many other Edomites, were incorporated into Israel without affecting the dominant racial position of the official Chosen People, so the incorporation of other nationalities into Anglo-Saxondom is equally inoperative in the same sphere.

11. But it must be borne in mind that Israel was to become " A nation and a fulness of nations," m'lo hag-goyim. This, we contend, is being ever more and more fulfilled in Great Britain herself and in her world-wide Empire.

Second : Mr. Panton states that British-Israel is—" Irreconcilable with Explicit Scriptures."

1. But he is mistaken in his interpretation of Amos ix, 8. Amos did not announce the " final doom " of the Ten Tribes. He prophesied about 170 years after the disruption and about 76 years before the Assyrian Captivity, when the Northern Kingdom, as founded by Jeroboam, came to an end. Thus was fulfilled the Kingdom's portion of the prophecy of Amos. But he also predicted in the same chapter that God would watch over the captives, and, in due time, would extend His mercy to them.

2. The Divine threat in Deuteronomy xxviii, 62, that they should become " few in number," was, doubtless, carried out at some period after the disruption, and possibly during their chastisement; but we must not forget the glorious promises of Israel's restoration, and, in particular, the two following passages :—

"When thou art in tribulation, . . . if thou turn to the Lord thy God, . . . He will not forsake thee, neither destroy thee." (Deut. iv, 30, 31.)

"The number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered; and it shall come to pass that, in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people, it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God." (Hosea i, 10, R.V.)

3. It is evident that they were to "abide many days without king, and without prince, and without sacrifice," etc.; but repentance, forgiveness, deliverance, and reinstatement would come, in God's gracious time. And there are many cogent reasons for believing that those "many days" have, long ago, come to an end in the centuries of Royal British-Israel.

4. The huge numbers of the Anglo-Saxon race do not, therefore, disprove Britain's identity with Israel, as Mr. Panton asserts. On the contrary, their amazing multiplicity reveals, establishes, and demonstrates that identity.

Third: Mr. Panton affirms that British-Israel is—"An Unconscious Betrayal of the Gospel."

His allegation is entirely disproved by "British-Israel Truth," the very book from which he quotes :—

1. As to the Bible itself, this is the book's official testimony :—
"The Bible is God's INFALLIBLE WORD." (p. 141.)

2. As to the "Glorious Gospel" itself, the disproof is on one of the very pages from which Mr. Panton quotes. We give two extracts :—

"Israelite birth does not supersede the necessity for the new birth by the Spirit of Christ . . . Our views are no new religion." (p. 206.)

"This is the day of grace, and God now offers faith to the whole world lying in the wicked one, that by the Blood of Christ—the great Atonement—they may be saved." (p. 206.)

3. Surely, these extracts contain the very marrow of the Gospel; and I can testify from lengthened observation as well as from personal experience that they faithfully represent the convictions of the leaders of the British-Israel-World Federation and of all responsible British-Israelites whom I have ever met in any part of the world.

4. That Britain is a Divinely favoured nation Mr. Panton will not dispute. But why are we so signally favoured? It is certainly not on account of our merits, any more than it was in the case of ancient Israel. There was inscrutable mystery in God's choice of us. But why has God not chosen France, or Germany, or Italy? We can neither deny nor go behind the facts; but the reason of the facts is hidden in the eternal counsels of God. Then, let us not despise our Israelitish birthright; or sell it for a mess of unbelieving or traditional pottage.

5. God's choice of our nation and Empire is a cheering, but also a humbling fact; especially when we remember our national sins. Alas!—as we sorrowfully admit—in recent years, our people have gone far astray. We are almost as bad, in some respects, as Israel was at the commencement of their Captivity. Still, even then, they were God's people and God's Kingdom, until He gave them "the bill of divorcement." (Isaiah l, 1.)

6. In their divorced condition, the people of Israel abandoned the Mosaic Law, and its rites, ceremonies and customs—the rite of circumcision among them. Now, Judah—in spite of her apostasy—never was divorced; so she has continued to practise that rite up to the present day. She is still under the Mosaic Covenant. The Ten Tribes, however, nationally, have come under the New Covenant of the Gospel, in which circumcision is abrogated. No difficulty, therefore, as to Britain's Israelitish descent should arise in any mind from the fact that, as a nation and an Empire, we do not practise the rite of circumcision.

7. As to the "Church"—that is, indeed, a thorny question; but Mr. Panton and Archdeacon Hanan, whom he quotes, do not employ the word in the same sense. To the Archdeacon the New Testament Church is the continuation and development of the Old Testament Congregation—the whole nation of Israel who formed the Kingdom of God—and whom the Archdeacon calls "the Hebrew Church." It was what we should to-day speak of as "A State Church," comprising the whole nation, saved and unsaved, as the Kingdom of God; and the Government was a Theocracy.

8. In the spiritual realm of the New Testament economy, the "Church" and the "Kingdom"—although related—are distinct; the former—the "Church"—being an inner circle of the latter—the Kingdom. Hence, in the "Church," there is no question of nationalities or of differences of race. These appertain to the "Kingdom," not to the "Church." In the "Church" all are "One in Christ Jesus." Nevertheless, the Ten Tribes of Israel still exist as part of a distinct people; and as the Chosen Race, they continue to have the place in the boundless grace and infinite purposes of God.

Fourth: Mr. Panton says that British-Israel is—"A Profound Overthrow of Dispensational Truth."

1. This point occupies only half a page of Mr. Panton's article; but we grieve to say that we have never seen so much misconception in so limited a space. He makes a number of amazing allegations, which we will reproduce in his own words in quotation marks. Without exception, every one of these allegations is a misconception and absolutely inaccurate.

2. After mentioning "Nationalism—all favoured-nation claims before Jehovah—within the Church and under grace"—he then proceeds to make the following allegations in reference to the claim of British-Israel :—

(1) "It is a complete subversion of Church Truth";

(2) "It re-erects the barriers of the flesh which the Cross has thrown down";

(3) "It makes national prosperity and worldly greatness, instead of righteousness and truth, the hall-marks of God's spiritual favour—an error negatived even by the Law itself";

(4) "It ignores, and so implicitly denies, the individual regeneration and sanctity, without which no man shall see the Lord";

Digitized by Google

(5) " It concentrates the blessings of God on the British Empire becoming the mistress of the world."

(6) " The very fleshliness which is the glory of the British-Israelite."

3. Now, we do not question the sincerity or the pure motive of our esteemed brother ; but we are distressed beyond words to think that in an unguarded hour he formed and expressed such inaccurate and condemnatory allegations concerning one of the most important evangelical and beneficent Movements for the honour of God, the exaltation of the Lord Jesus, and the magnifying of the Bible as Jehovah's " Infallible Word."

ADDRESS DELIVERED AT THE CHURCH HOUSE, WESTMINSTER:

BY THE REV. T. H. WHITEHOUSE.

I HAVE been celebrating my jubilee as a British-Israel believer. I can hear some of you say, I should not have thought you were as old as that ! But I want to tell you that if you want to renew your youth you must become a British-Israel believer. I want to give you a little personal experience, how I became a believer, and what it means to me. First of all, I was in great danger of becoming an unbeliever. I had trouble in my mind about the truth of the Bible and of the Christian religion. I am speaking now of my boyhood. Then an old friend pointed out to me that in the Bible there were some remarkable promises which had received, not an ecclesiastical, but a national fulfilment, and he was good enough to challenge me to try and find out what was meant by those words of St. Paul, " Christ Jesus came, a minister of the circumcision, for the truth of God—a champion of the truth of God—to confirm the promises made unto the fathers." Well, now that presented the mission of Our Lord Jesus Christ to me in quite a different light. Not merely did He come as the Saviour of men, and as the Teacher of a wonderful new truth, but He came for some distinct national purpose to fulfil national promises made unto the fathers. I set to work to find out, first of all, what were those promises. To sum them up rather rapidly, I discovered that God promised to Abraham, " I will make of thee a great nation, and will make thy name great. Thou shalt be a blessing. And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee ; and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed." A nation, a great nation. A nation that never oppresses ; that never treads on the rights of its fellow nations, but blesses them. A nation that is always under Divine protection. A nation that is spread out to the ends of the earth to come into contact of blessing with every family of mankind. I looked around to see if this fitted to the Jews, but it did not. I looked around to see if it fitted to the Church, but it did not. I proceeded in my study, and discovered the next great promise made to the fathers was, " All this land will I give thee, from the river of Egypt to the great river, the river Euphrates." Two thousand miles up the Nile. Eight hundred miles from the river Euphrates. From the Mediterranean to the Indian Ocean, and all between those frontiers. This did not fit the Jews either. This did not fit the Church. Still another promise that was made to the fathers, " Thou shalt be as the stars and as the sand that is upon the seashore " (these words supplemented as the " dust "). That did not fit the Church, and it did not fit the Jews. Again, " Thou shalt possess the gate of thy enemies." That is distinctly a national promise which does not apply to the Jews, who are a nationality, but not a nation. Nor to the Church, which is neither. Going on I discovered that there were other promises in that wonderful cluster made to the fathers. " Thou shalt spread abroad to the west and to the east, to the north and to the south, and in thee, and in thy seed, shall all the families of the earth be blessed." World-wide expansion for the world's good. Supplemented later on by an expansion of that promise. " A nation and a company of nations shall be of thee ; kings shall come out of thy loins." Again this did not fit the Jews, nor the Church.

Reasoning it out, I looked around among the nations of the earth, and I saw that there is one nation which is a great nation, and its name is Great Britain. It has been a blessing. It never oppresses or treads down the weak and helpless. It is a nation which is ever and always under Divine protection. It has spread throughout the world, and has been brought into contact of blessing with every family of the earth. It is as the stars, and as the sand that is upon the seashore, and as the dust of the earth. It has spread out to build up the waste and desolate heritages. It is in possession of the gate of its enemies. And as it goes out on its world-wide mission, it will be confronted by those who would bar its progress for their own selfish ends, as it seeks to come into contact of blessing with the earth. It possesses all the naval and military situations ; this nation of ours spreads abroad to the west and to the east, to the north and to the south, to build up great, free Christian communities for the blessing of the families of kindred nations, the peoples of the earth. World-wide expansion for the world's good. And with this nation, this central nation in the north-west of Europe, is a company of nations at the ends of the earth, with its line of kings from the same race, all descended from the fathers. And these promises, having lain in abeyance all through the Old Testament period, were vitalised by Him Who came, the Champion of God's truth—" for the truth of God to confirm the promises made unto the fathers "—Who said to the Jews, " The Kingdom of God is taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." And He gave a dual commission to His disciples ; the first was, " Do not go to the Jews ; do not go to the Gentiles ; do not go to the Samaritans. But go ye rather to the lost sheep of the House of Israel. And as ye go preach, saying, The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." And with that the command, " Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." A dual Gospel—national and ecclesiastical, temporal and spiritual. And so Christ Jesus came to confirm the promises made unto the fathers, and recognising that, my own faith became strongly confirmed and I felt I was rooted and grounded on a rock, and, thank God, I have never had a shadow of doubt from that hour to this, but it has been the joy of my life, and I am glad to be able to stand with my brethren here, and proclaim up and down the country this glorious truth of the Gospel of the Kingdom, which God speed.

WHAT IS "HEAVEN"?

By A. R. Nelson Heaver.

To be in[1] CHRIST is to have entered into the KINGDOM of HEAVEN. For CHRIST has opened the Kingdom of HEAVEN to all believers. We have but to enter in, through CHRIST, the ever open DOOR of that kingdom of heavenly consciousness.

But to be in heaven is not the same thing as to have ascended into HEAVEN. HEAVEN, like any other country or cosmos, is first and only secondly a geographical environment.

JESUS, as Son of Man, long before He actually ascended into HEAVEN, testified to the reality of this fact when He referred to Himself as being "the SON of MAN which is in heaven."[2]

If CHRIST is in Heaven, then all who are in CHRIST are spiritually in Heaven, as it is written:—We "sit together in heavenly places in CHRIST JESUS."[3] HEAVEN is the natural spiritual environment of the soul re-born of GOD.

But whilst our real self, being in CHRIST, is in Heaven, we yet, waiting for the redemption of our physical body,[4] remain the meanwhile chained to the earth as prisoners to time and space.

The certain future endowment of a perfect physical body will render us equally habilitate in both our heavenly and earthly environments, in that day made one.

But in the meantime, even now, as potential sons of GOD (though walking in the flesh as sons of men) we can enter more and more into this experience or consciousness of being in heaven.

But what is Heaven? HEAVEN is the outward expression of the mind of GOD. And thus, we who are in CHRIST (and as St. Paul puts it, "have the mind of CHRIST,"[5] Who is God) are potential co-creators of a heavenly environment.

In the degree to which our every thought[6] is brought into captivity to the obedience of CHRIST are we in heaven and is that heaven reflected in our outward life. For the outward life of individuals as of nations is the reflection of their inner life.

If every member of the nation were in CHRIST, and thus in heaven, the KINGDOM of HEAVEN would immediately appear. Within the nation would reign supreme.

It is the function of the EMPIRE-GOSPEL of the KINGDOM[7] to hasten the consummation of this desirable transformation. So shall the KINGDOM-EMPIRE of GOD upon earth become the KINGDOM of HEAVEN in deed as well as in name or ideal only.

But what is the KINGDOM of GOD? And what is the KINGDOM of HEAVEN?

Actually, we would say that the KINGDOM of GOD is the KINGDOM set up by GOD, of Dan. ii, 44. And the KINGDOM of HEAVEN is the KINGDOM that the GOD of HEAVEN set up contemporaneously with the rise and fall of the great Babylonian succession of GENTILE WORLD-EMPIRES. To all intents and purposes the two are one.

But in reality we would say that the KINGDOM of GOD is the KINGDOM where GOD reigns, whereas the KINGDOM of HEAVEN is the KINGDOM in which GOD dwells.

For Heaven is the outward expression of the mind of God. God's environment. The place where God is.

And when we pray for the KINGDOM to come on earth as it is in Heaven, we pray that that perfect environment may become manifest in the earth.

This manifestation is in process of development or restoration, as it is written, "Thy Kingdom must be being restored."[8] But the climax to this process is to come with dramatic suddenness.

The Kingdom of Israel and Kingdom of Britain phase of kingdom-development is to pass through the KINGDOM of the FATHER[9] phase, and thence into the final stage, when the Kingdom shall be delivered up by the SON to the FATHER that GOD may be all and in all.

For hitherto the plan of world redemption has been proceeding fundamentally through the personal redemption of individuals one by one. But now, in the fulness of the times, a race and nation is to be in one day!

And to speedily effect this revolution, the Gospel of Salvation, which calls for the personal conversion of individual members of every race and tongue, comes reinforced with the EMPIRE-GOSPEL of the KINGDOM, which calls for the national conversion of the BRITISH PEOPLE as a nation.

An individual message for individuals is transformed and intensified into a national message for a nation. A national and racial re-birth is called for!

The whole of the ANGLO-SAXON (or Seed of Isaac) RACE is called upon, as an elect race, to take up the task, which hitherto has been the burden of the election of grace within the race.

[1] We become members of the mystical BODY of CHRIST by conversion. Conversion means that we have entered into the kingdom of heaven. (See Matt. xviii, 3, for instance.) If we are in CHRIST, we have, in the degree to which our every thought is brought into the obedience of CHRIST, "the mind of CHRIST." Since thought and will govern action, and thus control or influence environment, it is obvious that once we have the mind of CHRIST (or have the kingdom of heavenly consciousness within us), the Kingdom of Heaven will soon begin to appear around and among us.

[7] Matt. xxiv, 14. Ferrar Fenton translation.

[8] Matt. vi, 10. Ferrar Fenton.

[9] It is for this kingdom of the Father or millennial phase of kingdom-development and manifestation that we pray every time we say, "Our FATHER . . . Thy Kingdom come . . . on earth as it is in Heaven." The words "Thy Kingdom come" at first seem to suggest that the KINGDOM of GOD is a future kingdom. But we know from prophecy and Dan. ii, 44 in particular, that this is not so. What we pray for here is a better phase of the kingdom—the coming millennial phase. Jesus also referred to the millennial phase of kingdom-development under the title "KINGDOM of the FATHER." (See Matt. xiii, 43.)

[10] Isa. xlvi, 8, etc. This "born again" or regenerate NATION (The BRIDE) will be joined to all those who are in CHRIST JESUS (both dead and living) at His coming, and these two great mystic wholes (CHURCH or BODY of CHRIST and STATE, BRIDE, or KINGDOM of CHRIST) will become one.

only. JACOB is called upon to win his spurs as ISRAEL. The KINGDOM of BRITAIN must become a holy Nation—devoted to the service of all the other nations.

Meanwhile the lasting achievement of the Brith-ish Race—a race in covenant relationship with GOD—has been the creation of an EMPIRE, which, in likeness to a Kingdom of Heaven upon earth, is the nearest to the real thing that the world has ever seen.

But this condition falls " ten thousand times " far short of ultimate development. A thousand evils yet remain unconquered.

The KINGDOM-EMPIRE of the BRITH-AINS (or Lands of the COVENANT) only represents an initial stage in a better and a greater Kingdom-Empire yet.

The BRITH-ISH PEOPLE have but laid the material foundations and set the earthly boundaries of a KINGDOM which can only be finally established by a nobler type of man than British —namely " Israel."

The re-birth of the Brith-ish Race, with its restoration of the name of Israel, will be coincident with the manifestation of that race of super-men, the sons of GOD,[11] for whom the whole creation waiteth. These are elohim or great creators. Having put on CHRIST and become " Israel " they are truly fit to rule with GOD.

Under the divine-like guidance of a race of beings perfectly redeemed in spirit, mind and body, the ideal will be translated into the real, and the KINGDOM quickly dawn before our eyes in tangible reality.

AN OMINOUS EASTER GREETING.

UNDER the above title Prof. Totten writes in the " Our Race News Leaflet " for 1907 the following :

" On August 29th, 29-28 B.C., as a year 1, Augustus Cæsar was the official head of the 4th Beast, i.e., of the Roman Empire in due sequence of inheritance of whatsoever, under Satanic influence, had been transmitted since the times of the Gentiles began. (Dan. xi, 7.) He took the name 'Sebastos,' 'Augustus,' August 29th, A.D. 28, and, as the Ruler of Rome, was the Seven-fold Head of this 4th Beast, holding the authority of (1) Priest of Jupiter, (2) Auger, (3) High Pontiff, (4) Consul, (5) Tribune, (6) Censor, and (7) Imperiator. He was the Church, the State, and the Head of the Army. He possessed the complete power of Satan, and was the Great Red Dragon, literally personified. All of these dignities, 3 Sacerdotal, Mythological or Pagan, 3 pertaining to the State, and 1 to the mailed arm of both, sat upon the head of Cæsar as a crown with seven diadems, or rays.

" His empire was divided into ten horns or sections, nominally ruled by the Senate : 1, Africa ; 2, Asia ; 3, Galianarbonensis ; 4, Bactria ; 5, Achaia ; 6, Macedonia ; 7, Prythinia ; 8, Cyprus ; 9, Cyrene ; and 10, Crete. Their Governors were 'Legati Augusti.' But the Emperor himself had another geographical division into princedoms, each and all of which had once been independent monarchies, seven mountains—1, Egypt ; 2, Syria ; 3, Greece ; 4, Macedon ; 5, Judea ; 6, Africa ; and 7, Italy. He exercised his independent will, via the military arm, through all of these, but pretended to share the control, for instance of Africa and Italy, with the Senate in due advice and consent. Here, then, we have in outline the 'horns' and 'heads' and 'diadems' and 'mountains' of this two-fold Beast—a Republican-Empire ! [Sic !]

" Now 'Inspiration' either knew all of this, and outlined it, or it didn't. Nebuhr's history of Rome, however, verifies St. John's Apocalyptic visions to the letter—God stamped this 4th Beast with the name of a man—its founder—Romulus (666), with its own name Lateinos (666), and Romiith (666), centuries before Nebuhr's innocent analysis enabled anyone (who will) to examine and identify the agreement. The stamp is 666 ; in arithmography or 'number writing' —per numerical value of its letters ; and, besides any other applications it is strictly Astro-Chronologico-Historical as to Rome—in all of her periods and phases—and this to any degree of patience one may wish to approximate or analyse.

" Jesus Christ was born in 3996 A.M., which is 6 times 666 ; and at that time (4 B.C.), in full 7 fold and digital potence, the Great Red Dragon (represented by Cyrenius, Herod, Augustus, etc.), stood ready, before the Jewish Church to devour the Man Child ! but He, Christ, the Captain, was caught away.

" The new-born Church escaped, as prophesied, into the wilderness—the desolate places, to a land, and lands not numbered among the nations. But Rome made war upon her unto this day, belching forth floods of untruth after her—which the 'earth'—Continental Europe—has duly swallowed up—in the Reformation ! and what preceded it in England—that 'little stone from all the world disjuncted.'

" Let us now drop, as unnecessary, any further argument as to historical agreement with prophecy—re Rome in any of its phases—and pursue the outline in the simple Chronological way it is set forth. In 28–27 B.C. this Great Red Dragon began its sway—Cleopatra's fall being the end of Alexander's realm—and was in Palestine as the successor.

" In 666 years, 637–638 A.D. (Esau, Edom) the Turk, drove it (Rome) out, and took possession of the Holy Places ! For the next 666 years, to 1303 A.D., Rome existed in a Pago-Papal form, a mere image of its former self ; dual and capitalised at both Constantinople and the city of Rome, Eastern and Western Empires.

" Then began a war of 150 years (five prophetic months) and Constantinople fell, 1453 A.D., into the hands of Esau. This completed the end of the Eastern Empire.

" Then followed 'a year, a month, a day and an hour' (360, 30, 1, 1–24), and in 391–1–24 years, and in 1844, March 20th, Edom (Esau, Turkey) felt the hand of Israel (England) taking hold upon the Holy places. That was the 1260th year of the Hegira—or Mohammedan Era ; blessed is he who cometh unto the 1335th year thereof 1916–17 A.D. (Daniel xii). This 1335th Lunar year of the Hegira runs accurately from October 28th, 1916 N.S., to October 17th, 1917 N.S., and we expect to see lively times in Edom long before that time !

" Again in 128 B.C. Hyrcanus, Maccabean Prince and High Priest of Jerusalem, sent Ambassadors to Rome, and entered into primary, deliberate, unnecessary and official Allegiance therewith! In 666 years, 538 A.D., Justinian rearranged the Great Red Dragon out of the 10 Northern Barbarian Kingdoms, and gave it to the same old seven heads, Patriarchal now, as Bishopricks, or Exarchs; in which form it lasted for 666 years longer, or until 1204 A.D., when the Crusaders, under Innocent III, established at Constantinople the Latin 2nd Beast, or copy of the original Justinian 1st Beast—this was under Baldwin, and is called the two-horned beast in prophecy—a union of the Eastern and Western Roman Churches!

"Dandalo reigned in Venetia, Boniface in Thessalonica, and Baldwin was the founder. The actual 2nd Beast de facto was of short duration, but its shadow, image or semblance survived for the full measure of time 666 years; or until in 1204 A.D. plus 666 years; when, in 1870 A.D., its own Infallibility was blasphemously declared—and that self-same day France, the then Supporter of the Papacy, declared war with Germany, soon had to withdraw her military support, and New Italy, in one day,—year, 1870–71 A.D.—came into Rome, in Power, and the Papacy went into the Vatican!—or, as the French say, 'dans l'abism,' i.e., 'into the Abyss!'

"It is the consensus of the world that the Papacy lost its Temporal Power for ever in 1870–71 A.D. Now there remains between that date and 1928 A.D., 58 years, and less; in that the measure is from within the first unto some date in the last. Let us, however, apply the terrible measure, 666. It must be in lesser units, months first—months are 55.5 years from 1870–71 plus 55.5 years takes us to 1925–26.5; add now 666 days or 1.824 years, bringing us to 1927–28. We believe that this awful measure will be meted out upon the Official Papal Hierarchy, from the moment of its promulgation of 'Infallibility, July 18th, 1870,' and the declaration of the Franco-Prussian War; until, in 666 'months,' 666 'days,' 666 'hours,' 666 'half-hours,' 666 'minutes,' and 666 'seconds' the Vatican will be vacant and even its site a perpetual smoking! We could fortify this position with scores of ample and startling reasons, but we have sufficiently shown that Chronology has relentlessly pursued every phase of Daniel's 4th Beast, throughout its career, with the ominous number that at every application has punctuated its times and seasons.

"1900 years ago 100 Lunar Cycles; and, measuring them from the Fall of 27 A.D. when, in the 15th year of Tiberius Cæsar both John and Jesus began preaching, at an interval of five months apart—(in a Jubilee-Sabbatic Year 27–28 A.D.) to the Crucifixion in 29 A.D.—i.e., from about August 29th, 27 A.D. to March 17th, 29 A.D., as a period to be matched at this end of the 100th—centennial—cycle, we reach from about September 27th 1927 A.D., to April 24th, 1929 A.D.

"In our opinion the crucial date will be Monday, September 24th, 1928 A.D. Yom Kippur! But—within a year and 15 days—we doubt, at present, if anyone can yet measure fiducially.

"As a general rule every incident employed as a type in the Scriptures is related to it antitype, by most significant Astronomical and Chronological 'spans.' As, for instance, from Jonah to Jesus; and in all of the Chronological minutiæ of the type repeated in the antitype.

"But the Sign to this latter age, at the end of 'the times of the Gentiles,' and to the Second Advent, is explicitly that of Noah. Well, Noah got warning of the Flood 120 years in advance of 1656 A.M., the flood year. So to 1536 A.M., let us add three times 1444 years, the least common multiple period of the Solar System, and reach 5868 A.M., 1870 A.D., the Franco-Prussian War, when the Papacy went into the Vatican, with its decree of Infallibility. Add 120 periods, of six lunations each, and reach 1928–29 A.D.—as on a score of Astronomical Scales! For instance, 19 years is a Lunar Cycle; 19 times 19 or 361 years is a Superior Lunar Cycle—but 1444 is 4 times 361 or a Lunar Cycle of superlative Astronomical degree. It is 6 times 6, or 36 lunar cycles of 19 years each, and equal to 2520, plus a week, of years, 2527 years.

"But why multiply reasons along a true system of Chronology—which 'none of the wicked shall understand?'—nor any of the foolish virgins have in their vessels.

"They say 'Red sky in the morning, therefore take warning: and red sky at night a sailor's delight'—but they do not discern the fig tree—'Zionism'—putting forth buds! What shall wake them up,—but the sign of the Son of man? and that too late for oil even to be of use, to such as shall not have procured it in advance!"

HOOKS IN THE JAWS.

(EZEKIEL XXXVIII, 4.)

BY W. J. FOSTER.

To elucidate the circumstances more or less directly responsible for the present International unrest, and particularly with the countries mentioned in Ezekiel against ourselves (British-Israel), I would ask your consideration of historical facts which contribute to, and are responsible for, the baneful influence permeating the lives, and arresting the spiritual progress of the Gentile peoples. The adoption of ulterior designs is gradually fomenting bitterness that makes war the ultimate sequel.

According to Esdras, the ten-tribed House of Israel divided from Judah and Benjamin in the year 975 B.C., and established themselves under Jeroboam as a separate kingdom. In 721 B.C., 254 years later, Shalmaneser carried the ten-tribed House of Israel captive into his own land. About eight years after the House of Israel was taken captive into Assyria, Sennacherib, King of Assyria, besieged the fenced cities of Judah and carried a great number of the Phares-Judah line into Assyrian captivity. These people of Judah (computed to be about 200,000) evidently joined the ten tribes, coming into Britain as the Jutlanders, Judlanders (Judah-landers).

In the year 597 B.C. Nebuchadnezzar besieged Jerusalem, and took over 18,000 of the best men of Judah captive into Babylon, leaving only the poorer classes in the land. Seventy years later, in the year 536 B.C., at the end of the Babylonian captivity (as foretold by Isaiah and Jeremiah) Cyrus issued a decree permitting Judah to return to Jerusalem.

It is of this remnant of the House of Judah, distinct and apart from those of the same line, who joined the House of Israel in Assyria and in Brith-ain, that I now call your attention. In St. Matthew, first chapter, the sons of Zara are not mentioned, they having left Egypt before the days of Moses, and settled in Europe, and later in Ireland.

The descent of Phares is given thus :—Phares, Esrom, Aram, Aminadab, Naason Salmon, Boaz, Obed, Jesse, David, and on to Christ Our Lord. Now it was by this REMNANT of Phares-Judah line that Our Saviour was rejected and crucified, and of whom Our Lord spake when He said :—" I came to my own and my own received me not." Because of this Our Lord said :—" The Kingdom shall be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." In the year A.D. 70, Jerusalem was besieged, taken, sacked, and burned by Titus. 1,000,000 of the Jews perished ; 97,000 were taken prisoners ; besides an innumerable company who met their death in various ways. Christ foretold this dreadful punishment that the remnant of Judah would bring upon themselves. He also said (St. Luke xxi, 24) : " And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations." This REMNANT of Phares-Judah have always persisted, and still do, in their claim of sole right to the Holy Land. The Phares-Jew in Gentile lands, particularly Russia, is the most pronounced Communist and seditious element in ruling quarters (instance Jacob Borodin, whose real name is Michael Greusenburg—a Jew), creating enmity against the nation which holds the Mandate of their objective, the land given to the Brith-ain House of Israel. That is :—" The Land from the river of Egypt unto the great river, the river Euphrates." God says in the 38th chapter of Ezekiel :—" I will put hooks into thy jaws and bring thee forth." The Gentile nations have to a large extent succumbed to the powers of the Evil one, who has ever endeavoured to set the nations in open defiance of Almighty God and Our Lord Jesus Christ. The Jew, under the pretence of urging Russia onwards for world domination, feels assured of obtaining by stealth, from the House of Israel, the glorious land which they believe will be the centre of world government. They will succeed in gathering God's enemies against Jerusalem, when God will be glorified in the sight of the heathen.

The Judah-landers, who have become absorbed into and become part with the House of Israel, are not at all implicated as hooks to bring the enemies of God forth. It is only a remnant of Phares-Judah, who serve neither God or Christ, that hope to achieve their object of world dominion, and are proving in a great measure to be the hooks in the jaws of Russia to bring them into the Land.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

By the Rev. G. H. Lancaster, M.A.

QUESTION.—Will you be so good as to give me the explanation to which you referred in your Lecture at St. Leonards last month, regarding the blood that was to be placed in the bason and on the lintel and the two side-posts in the story of the Passover and of the slaying of the first-born (Exod. xii) ?

E. W. (St. Leonards).

ANSWER.—It seems to me that the whole secret of the original Hebrew Passover in Egypt centres around the actual meaning to be attached to the Hebrew word saf, which is unfortunately translated by the word bason in our Bibles. It is true in one sense that this word means bason, but it also means cup, bowl, door, gate, post, and threshold. The Greek Septuagint Bible (LXX) translates it by the ordinary word thura, meaning door, which, for example, is the same word that is used by Our Lord when He says : " I am the door " (John x, 7, 9). Similarly, the Latin Vulgate translates this same Hebrew word in the above passage (Exod. xii, 12, 13) by the word limen (from which we get the English word eliminate), meaning the lintel of a doorway, door-sill, threshold.

Philo-Judæus, from his Egyptian and Jewish experiences, describing the Hebrew Passover Festival, speaks of it as " the feast diabateria which the Jews call pashka." These diabateria are " offerings before crossing a border, hence threshold sacrifices." Rabbi Ishmael, a Talmudist, in explanation of the above passage of the institution of the Passover in Egypt, says : " One dug a hole in the (earthen) threshold, and slaughtered into that . . . for the Hebrew word saf signifies here nothing else than threshold."

From the above it will be evident that the English word " bason " (Exod. xii, 22) gives a completely wrong idea. The Israelites were instructed to sprinkle the blood on the threshold of the door, which was either slightly " cup-shape " by design, or gradually worn into a slight hollow by the constant footsteps upon it—so that it could retain the blood.

Then it was Jehovah who covenanted anew with Israel by " passing over," or crossing over, the blood-stained threshold into their homes, wheresoever He saw the blood, while it was His angel of death which " passed by " these Israelite homes, only to enter into the houses of the Lord's enemies to slay the first-born—a fact which proved that the gods of the Egyptians could not protect them !

Another instance of the way in which the Hebrew word saf has been translated unfortunately by cup instead of by threshold will be found in Zech. xii, 1-3, where it ought to read, " Thus saith the Lord . . . Behold I will make Jerusalem a threshold (or boundary stone) of trembling (reeling) unto all the peoples round about." The figure seems to be that of besiegers staggering as they come against that foundation or threshold stone, which the Lord has established.

Professor Hilprecht has shown that the Assyrian word sippu, which comes from the same root as the Hebrew saf, means only threshold, not bason or cup, which strengthens the above interpretation of the Passover passage in the Book of Exodus.

As you say, it all shows the power of the " precious blood " in the great doctrine of the Atonement, the blood itself always affording a beautiful type in the Bible of Christ's atoning sacrifice for us.

Speaking of types, perhaps I may mention that in this Passover chapter (Exod. xii) we have the first " sign of the cross " in blood. The first actual sign of the cross was when Jacob crossed his hands and blessed Ephraim and Manasseh (Gen. xlviii, 13, 14) ; but in this Passover incident the blood was placed on the lintel (the head), the side-posts (the stretched-out arms), and on the threshold (the feet), thus typifying the Cross, by which Our Lord Jesus Christ wrought redemption for Israel, and salvation for us from our sins.

F. J. W.—Your reading of the article on "Russia" is quite right, and, as you suggest, Rosh is the name of a chief or ruler. It first occurs as one of the sons of Benjamin. It is not applied to ethnological races until Ezek. xxxviii-ix, and then the leader or chief of Meshech and Tubal is called Rosh, 1,500 years before the name appears in Europe. Now we know that Benjamin passed from Palestine into Asia Minor, and many of them as Asœ from Asgard came into Scandinavia in the 4th century A.D. (circa) under Odin. These "Norsemen," or "Verangians," issued forth from Scandinavia in the early 9th century, and overran the country from Novgorod even to Kiev, and even besieged Constantinople. They were such excellent rulers that the barbarous Muscovites, after expelling them, found themselves incapable of self-government. They therefore besought the Verangians to return and become their leaders. The head ruler of these was Rurik, and the name Rosh derived from him became the patronymic of the countries overruled by his descendants. Hence we have Little Russia, White Russia, Great Russia, etc., etc., as also Bo-Russia, Prussia. The fact that this patronymic was assumed by the Muscovite tribes does not imply that these leaders are there to-day. If, as we assume, they were Benjamites, they came into Britain with the Normans, or, at any rate, joined their brethren later on. (See article on "Russia," p. 152.)—L. G. A. R.

BRANCH ACTIVITIES.

REV. J. GAY, A.T.S., accompanied by Mr. H. B. Rand, LL.B., conducted a mission at High Wycombe, from the 5th to 9th. Mr. Rand gave two excellent addresses on the first two evenings, Mr. Gay taking the remainder. For the district the meetings were well attended, and headway is being made. The Branch members are putting up a really heroic effort under the leadership of earnest and devout believers, and though progress sometimes seems slow, it is nevertheless sure.

The Liverpool Branch had a visit from the Rev. Guy Waddington, of Bradford, on Thursday, the 8th, when he gave a very interesting lecture to a large and appreciative audience on the approaching end of the age.

Mr. J. Foster Beaver addressed a crowded meeting on "The Constitution of the British Empire" on February 27, for the Ilkley and Ben Rhydding Branch.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

[It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.]

THE LAW OF THE LORD, OR THE COMMON LAW.—XII.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

LET US NOW LOOK BRIEFLY AT THE HISTORY OF THE LAW.

The law came into the world when the "Lord God commanded the man" in the Garden of Eden.

The law was kept by the Seth line to Noah. The law was taught by Noah and Shem to Abraham, as we learn in the book of Jasher, and was kept by him as the Bible testifies.

The law was given to Israel during the forty years spent at school in the wilderness. Never did nation spend forty more profitable years.

It is certain that the law was in Israel during the time of the Judges. It is a certain fact that the law was in existence in Israel before the time of David. It is certain that the law was in Israel during the reigns of David and Solomon, and was administered by them. It is certain that the law was in Israel during the time of the Palestinian Israel nations and kingdoms subsequent to the reign of Solomon.

Subsequent to the entrance of Israel into Palestine there are no years which could account for the appearance of the law in its perfection. We can see growth of law administration in Britain over a period of centuries. We see no such period of growth in Israel in Palestine. The law came suddenly, in perfection. There was no "Solon" in Israel to furnish the law subsequent to Moses, and the Solon of Greece would have been at fault but for the help he received from the Common Law of Israel.

Archæology and history have shown no such perfect system in the archives of any other nation. Therefore, when we have the statement of this period of training for Israel in the wilderness, with the whole life of the nation given up to the organisation of the national constitution and to mastery of its knowledge, a statement which fully accounts for the facts, it is not good scholarship, nor good logic, to refuse faith to the statements of Holy Writ. To deny is to leave the question in the air. To accept is to have the explanation at hand.

So indoctrinated were the Israel people after the generation of training in the wilderness that there were required neither King nor Parliament to teach, and enforce, the law during the first centuries of their national life. "Every man did that which was right in his own eyes." There can still be seen much of this self government in the descendants of the ancient Israelites in Britain to this day. Nowhere else in the world do people govern themselves and do that which is right or, as they like to put it, "play the game," as in these Isles. It is a sight worth seeing to witness the crowds in British cities under difficult circumstances, and to observe how they govern themselves. In crowded railway stations, in crowded and confused thoroughfares, and so forth, they require only instruction and direction, never compulsion to obedience.

For four centuries, during the time of the Judges, the people of the land governed themselves by that law which their fathers had learned by heart in the wilderness.

Then came the setting up of the Kingdom, and the enforcement of the law, which men began to forget. But the enforcement was along a straight course, as King David testified.

Then came the rupture of the Kingdom, and the departure of ten-tribed Israel from the Davidic administration of the Law. Israel, also, departed from the Lord by vesting the ultimate authority of the law in the people. This was to dethrone the Lord as the one and only lawgiver. The commandments, statutes and judgments of the Lord continued to be the model. But authority was assumed by the King and the people. So Israel of Palestine was sent away to wander in strange lands, and became subject to strange laws. For without the supporting arm of God the defence of the nation was gone.

But Israel was re-established, and with her the law, in Britain.

The Jew returned from Babylon and re-established the law in Palestine.

To the Jew in Palestine Our Lord came. Coming, He gave the manifesto of the Kingdom of Heaven and of His own administration of it in the "Sermon on the Mount." He gave a categorical ratification of the law in every jot and tittle, and He gave the guarantee of His Word solemnly spoken with the prefix "verily, I say unto you" that "not one jot or tittle of the law shall pass away until all be fulfilled," even though heaven and earth should pass away, as they are destined ultimately to do. So the law of Moses was ratified by Jesus, and made a component part of the New Testament.

Turning to British and American legal authorities, we may point out that Blackstone takes as the foundation of the Common Law, the law of God, natural and revealed. We here quote from the Encyclopædia Britannica, eleventh edition, under the heading English Law, as follows :—

"If we are content to look no further than the text books—the books written by lawyers for lawyers—we may read our way backwards to Blackstone (d. 1780), Hale (d. 1676), Coke (d. 1634), Fitzherbert (d. 1538), Littleton (d. 1481), Braston (d. 1268), Glanvill (d. 1190), until we are in the reign of Henry of Anjou, and yet shall perceive that we are always reading of one and the same body of law, though the little body has become great, and the ideas that were few and indefinite have become many and explicit."

"The other rivulet we may call Anglo-Saxon. Pursuing it through the code of Canute (d. 1035), and the ordinances of Alfred (c. 900), and his successors."

"This, it may be noted, gives to English legal history a singular continuity from Alfred's day to our own."

"Eyes, carefully trained, have minutely scrutinised the Anglo-Saxon legal texts without finding the least trace of a Roman rule outside the ecclesiastical sphere."

This brings us back to King Alfred; and of his law we quote the following. Alfred, the great Saxon lawgiver and administrator during the Saxon period, places the matter of the Divine origin of the law in the forefront. The following is taken from a book entitled "King Alfred and His Times," for it gives in a concise form just the thing we desire to show; viz., that the law of Moses was the basis of Anglo-Saxon administration. This quotation was extracted from a copy in the British Museum.

"CHAPTER XIV. THE KING'S LAWS.

. . . Coming, then, to his task with this in view, we find Alfred's code, or 'Alfred's dooms,' as they are called, starting with an almost literal transcript of the Decalogue. The only variations of any moment are, that the second commandment is omitted in its right place, and stands as the tenth . . . . Immediately after the ten commandments come selections from the Mosaic code, chiefly from the 21st, 22nd and 23rd chapters of Exodus, very slightly modified.

The most important variations are as follows :—

EXODUS XXI.	ALFRED'S DOOMS.
1. Now these are the judgments which thou shalt set before them.	11. These are the dooms that thou shalt set them :—If any one buy a Christian bondsman, he be bondsman to him six years, the seventh be he free unbought. With such clothes as he went in, with such go he out. If he himself have a wife, go she out with him. If, however, the lord gave him a wife, go she and her bairn the lord's. If then the bondsman say, I will not go from my lord, nor from my wife, nor from my bairn nor from my goods, let then his lord bring him to the church door and drill through his ear with an awl, to witness that he be ever thenceforth a bondsman.
2. If thou buy a Hebrew servant, six years he shall serve, and in the seventh he shall go out free for nothing.
3. If he came in by himself, he shall go out by himself; if he were married, then his wife shall go out with him.
4. If his master gave him a wife, and she have born him sons or daughters; the wife and her children shall be her master's, and he shall go out by himself.

5. And if the servant shall plainly say, I love my master, my wife and my children; I will not go out free :

6. Then his master shall bring him unto the judges; he shall also bring him unto the door, or unto the doorpost, and his master shall bore his ear through with an awl, and he shall serve him for ever.

The dooms continue an almost literal transcript of the 21st chapter of Exodus, with the exception of the 17th verse, which is omitted. The slight modifications of the Hebrew Law in the first verses of the 22nd chapter are again characteristic.

EXODUS XXII.	ALFRED'S DOOMS.
1. If a man shall steal an ox or a sheep and kill it, or sell it, he shall restore five oxen for an ox, and four sheep for a sheep.	24. If any one steal another's ox and slay or sell him, give he two for it, and four sheep for one. If he have not what he may give, be he himself sold for the fee.
2. If a thief be found breaking up, and be smitten that he die, there shall no blood be shed for him.	25. If a thief break a man's house by night and be there slain, be he not guilty of manslaughter. If he doeth this after sunrise he is guilty of manslaughter, and himself shall die, unless he did it of necessity. If with him be found alive what he before stole, let him pay for it twofold.
3. If the sun be risen upon him, there shall be blood shed for him; for he should make full restitution; if he have nothing then shall he be sold for his theft.

Digitized by Google

4. If the theft be certainly found in his hand alive, whether it be ox, or ass, or sheep, he shall restore double.

26. If any man harm another man's vineyard, his acres, or any of his lands, let him make boot as men value it.

6. If a man shall cause a field, or a vineyard, to be eaten, and shall put in his beast, and shall feed in another man's field; of the best of his own field, and of the best of his own vineyard, shall he make restitution."

To the eighth verse, treating of property entrusted to another, Alfred's Dooms add,

"If it were live cattle, and he say that the army took it, or that it died of itself, and he have witness, he need not pay for it. If he have no witness, and they believe him not, let him then swear."

We shall see that the obligation of an oath, which had no sanction attached to it apparently by West Saxon law till now, is very carefully enforced in a later part of the code. Alfred's Dooms then omit from the seventh to the fifteenth verse of the chapter inclusive, taking all the rest; with the variation, however, as to pledges, that the Saxons are to return a man's pledged garment before sunset only "if he have but one wherewith to cover him."

The third and sixth verses of the 23rd chapter are a puzzle to the King, so he substitutes Dooms in his own language, which are certainly clearer than the Hebrew ones.

EXODUS XXIII, 3, 6.	ALFRED'S DOOMS.
3. Neither shalt thou countenance a poor man in his cause.	43. Doom thou very evenly; doom thou not one doom to the wealthy, another to the poor; nor one doom to the more beloved other to the more loathed doom thou not.
4. Thou shalt not wrest the judgment of thy poor in his cause.

Alfred adopts the next three verses in the following form :—

EXODUS XXIII, 7, 8, 9.	ALFRED'S DOOMS.
7. Keep thee far from a false matter, and the innocent and righteous slay thou not, for I will not justify the wicked.	44. Shun thou aye leasings.
	45. A sooth fast man and guiltless, slay thou him never.
8. And thou shalt take no gift; for the gift blindeth the wise, and perverteth the words of the righteous.	46. Take thou never meed monies, for they blind full oft wise men's thoughts, and turn aside their words.
9. Also thou shalt not oppress a stranger; for ye know the heart of a stranger, seeing ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.	47. To the stranger and comer from abroad, meddle thou not with him, nor oppress thou him with no unright.

Then, omitting all the rest of the Levitical law as given in this part of Exodus, as to cultivation of the land, the sabbatical year, sacrifices and feasts, the Dooms end with :—

48. Swear ye never to heathen gods, nor in nothing call ye to them.

Having finished his extracts from Exodus, in all forty-eight dooms, the King proceeds :—

"These are the dooms that the Almighty God Himself spake to Moses, and bade him to hold; and when the Lord's only-begotten Son, our God, that is, Christ the healer, on middle earth came, He said that He came not these dooms to break, nor to gainsay, but with all good to do, and with all mild-heartedness and lowly-mindedness to teach them. Then after his throes, ere that His apostles were gone through all the world to teach, and while yet they were together, many heathen nations turned they to God. While they altogether were, they sent erranddoers to Antioch and to Syria, Christ's law to teach. When they understood that they sped not, then sent they an errandwriting to them."

Then follows verbatim James' epistle from the Jerusalem council to the Church at Antioch; after which Alfred again goes on :

"That ye will that other men do not to you, do ye not that to other men. From this one doom a man may think that he should doom every one rightly; he need keep no other doom book. Let him take heed that he doom to no man that he would not that he doom to him, if he sought doom over him."

So far it would seem that the King has no doubt, or need of consultation with anyone. These are, in his view, the dooms which the Almighty God Himself has given to the King and people of England, as well as to the Hebrews of old. The remaining dooms stand on different ground. They are such as have been ordained by his forefathers and their wise men, with such additions and variations as he and his wise men approve. They are introduced thus :—

"Since that time it happened that many nations took to Christ's faith, and there were many synods through al' the middle earth gathered, and eke throughout the English race they took to Christ's faith through holy bishops, and other wise men. They then set forth, for their mild-heartedness, that Christ taught as to almost every misdeed, that the worldly lords might, with their leave, without sin, for the first guilt, take their fee boot which they then appointed, except for treason against a lord, to which they durst not declare any mild-heartedness, for that Almighty God doomed none to them that slighted Him, nor Christ, God's Son, doomed none to him that sold Him to death, and He bade to love a lord as himself."

Nevertheless, Alfred and his witan, by the fourth article of their code, modify this of the synods, and place the king and lords on the same footing as other freemen, by recognising the king's and lords' were-gild. "They then," the preface goes on, "in many synods set a boot for many misdeeds of men; and in many books they wrote here one doom, there another."

"I then, Alfred the King, gathered these together, and bade to write many these that our forefathers held, those that to me seemed good; and many of those that seemed not good I set aside with my witan's council, and in other wise bade to hold them; for that I durst not venture much of mine own to set in writing, for that it was unknown to me what of this would be acceptable to those that came after me. But those that I met with, either in my kinsman Ina's days, or in Offa's, King of Mercia, or in Ethelbryte's, that first of the English race took baptism, those that seemed to me the rightest I gathered them herein, and let the others alone. I then, Alfred, King of the West Saxons, showed these to all my witan, and they then said that they all seemed good to them to hold."

Then follows the collected dooms, approved by Alfred and his witan, from other sources, and " Ina's dooms " by themselves, at the end of the code.

King Alfred made the identification of the English Common Law with the Law of God in the clearest terms, as we have seen.

Much could be written in this regard. It is sufficient for the lay mind to have the connection made. The student of Law will have no trouble in finding many other authorities in English, Welsh, Scottish and Irish Law literature, and general literature, which includes the subject of the Divine origin and development of Law.

THE KINGDOM WITHIN US.

By A. R. Nelson Heaver.

When we are dealing with Civilisations or Kingdoms or the Men who go to make up civilisations and kingdoms, we must always remember that each of them have a spiritual as well as a physical significance. There is always an inner as well as an outer aspect to all these things.

Let us take the most difficult illustration of this first. If we are in[1] Christ Jesus we can declare with equal truth that Christ is in[2] us. In fact we might truly say that if we are in Christ Jesus it is because Christ is in us.

For the Spirit of Christ dwelling in us makes us indwelling members of the Mystical Body of Christ which is the Church.

This is a great mystery. But as the illustration of a fact it holds equally good with reference to the Kingdom.

If we have entered into the Kingdom of Heaven we can declare with equal truth that the Kingdom of Heaven is within us. In fact, if the Kingdom of Heaven were not within us we could not have entered into the Kingdom of Heaven. For the Kingdom is first a state of consciousness and only secondly, by gradual process of development, a new environment.

That is what Mr. Amery was struggling to express, when, seeing the dual nature of this phenomenon as applied to the Brith-ish Empire, he said[3] :—" The Empire is not external to any of the British Nations. It is something like the Kingdom of Heaven within ourselves."

Why is the Empire like the Kingdom of Heaven within us? Why are we wrong in regarding the Empire as being solely something external to the people who inhabit it?

Because the Empire is something a hundred thousand times greater and more significant than a name or geographical environment. We must look beyond the external and material manifestation and gaze upon the inward spiritual if we would learn to know the Empire for what it really is.

Soul of the Empire

[1] Cf. 2 Cor. v, 17. [2] Cf. Col. i, 27.
[3] See " Week by Week," N.M. & B., dated March 10th.

For the Brith-ish Empire is the corporate expression of the mind and spirit of a People. Change the People or the mind and spirit of that People and the British Empire, even though it survive in name and geographical environment, and it would no longer be the Empire!

Here, surely, we have the beginnings, at any rate, of a basis of reconciliation for those students who cannot see a reasonable harmony between our Lord's spiritual teaching regarding the Kingdom and the striking details of material manifestation as taught throughout the Scriptures, especially by the prophets.

" But if the British Empire is the Kingdom of Dan. ii, 44, how can we talk of the Kingdom of Heaven being within us? " is the type of question one hears on every side, to-day. And again : " If we accept the fact that the Kingdom of God upon earth is represented by the Brith-ish Nation and Company of Nations[4] (or the modern descendants of Israel as represented by the Anglo-Saxon Race), how can we reconcile this view with teaching such as this :—' Except a man be born again, he cannot see[5] . . . . he cannot enter into[6] the Kingdom of God '? "

Before we answer these questions as applied to the Empire and to modern times it is as well to regard (the latter question at any rate) in strict relation to its context.

Here was a man, Nicodemus, who knew perfectly well that he had been born, by natural birth, a citizen of God's Kingdom Nation. " I am of the seed of Abraham," thought he, " and that is all that matters." But Jesus, to his intense surprise, told him that it was not all that mattered. To be able to say that he had Abraham as his father was not enough. Because although he might be of the seed of Abraham after the flesh, he must, for the purpose of kingdom-administration in the earth[7], become numbered as members of the spiritual seed of Abraham.

If we are of the seed of Abraham through Isaac we are born members of the Israel or Brith-ish Kingdom. But by natural birth we can never be more than " sons of men."

And the Kingdom can only be properly carried on as it is served by men who, through Christ, have become the sons of God.

Men make kingdoms; kingdoms do not make men. And everything depends upon the spirit of the men behind the Kingdom. We cannot have a kingdom of God if the men who make up that kingdom are inspired by the spirit of man only. The natural seed of Abraham is not enough. We must have a spiritual seed. The spirit of man behind the Kingdom is not enough. We must have the spirit of God behind the Kingdom.

Jesus carried this illustration to its extreme and logical conclusion when He further (on another occasion) testified[8] :—" Among them that are there hath not arisen a greater than John the Baptist; notwithstanding he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is [4] Cf. Gen. xxxv, 11. [5] and [6] Cf. John iii, 3 and 5.

[7] We are looking at this question purely from the Kingdom point of view. Therefore we disregard, for the moment, the greater eternal aspects of this question of spiritual re-birth.
[8] Matt. ii, 11.
[9] i.e., born after the flesh. The terms in contrast are :—" Born of women," " Born of God "; " born after the flesh," " born of the spirit "; " natural man," " spiritual man "; " sons of men," " sons of God "; " Jacob," " Israel," etc.

greater than he." Here we have a contrast between a man, however great, born of women (who remains a natural man) and a man, however lowly who (by spiritual re-birth) is born of GOD. It is obvious that the very highest type of natural man the earth can produce is not as good, for kingdom purposes, as the most humble person whose spirit has been truly born of God.

But since we cannot receive spiritual regeneration before we are born into the earth—since we cannot be born of the spirit before we have been born after the flesh—it is evident that, until the day dawns when, as has been prophesied,[10] the whole nation becomes in one day, there must exist side by side, within the national boundaries of the Kingdom, both a natural and a spiritual seed, both good and bad.[11]

GOD can use us in our natural state as seed of Abraham, up to a certain point. For the Brith-ish People are a people in covenant relationship with GOD. And since CHRIST died as Redeemer of His People they are a redeemed people.

But it is necessary, if the Kingdom is to be truly usable, for every member of the elect race to become members of the election of grace.[12] It is for this transformation that we pray, when (in our recitation of the Te Deum) we say :—" We therefore pray Thee help Thy servants whom Thou hast redeemed with Thy precious blood. Make them to be numbered with Thy saints . . . ." We pray for the salvation of a redeemed race. We ask that every member of the race that has been redeemed (or brought back into covenant relationship with GOD) and therefore can be used of GOD, may become a member of the BODY of CHRIST.

A definite step in the direction of an early fulfilment of this prayer may be discerned in the Bishop of Durham's recent declaration :—" The sense of citizenship in the is the lesson which needs most to be taught the coming generation of English men and women. They should learn how the EMPIRE was engendered in the BRITISH PEOPLE by the REFORMATION : they should lay to heart the principles on which it has been founded —justice, freedom and progress ; they should understand its magnitude ; the variety of its resources ; the greatness of its responsibilities and opportunities ;[15] and they should vow[16] to make themselves good citizens of that EMPIRE."

BORN OF THE SPIRIT[14]

What finer summing-up could we have than that ? For if the EMPIRE was born of the Spirit engendered by the REFORMATION, then it was a " Born-again of the Spirit of God " Empire. It was the handiwork of " born-again " Brith-ish men and women.

[10] Isa. xlvi, 8, etc.

[11] Many of the Kingdom parables illustrate this. See, for instance, Matt. xiii, 38–41, also verses 47–48, etc.

[12] The " election of grace " has previously been a minority within the Race.

[13] What a commentary on Daniel ii, 44

[14] If the spirit of God inspired the Reformation, then the Empire born of that spirit is an Empire born of the spirit of God.

[15] What people in the Empire teach all these principles more consistently than British-Israel believers ?

[16] Kingdom teaching naturally leads to personal consecration.

Truly an EMPIRE set up by GOD. For GOD uses His People as His agents in the effecting of His purposes in the earth.

And if the EMPIRE is to flourish and continue it must be carried on to-day by a " born-again " race or people.

The BRITISH EMPIRE is destined to find this justification as a result of the proclamation of the EMPIRE-GOSPEL[17] of the KINGDOM. Individually, as GOD'S BRITH-ISH PEOPLE " put on CHRIST "[18] and enter into the Kingdom of heaven, they will, finding at last the kingdom of heaven within themselves, be amazed to see the kingdom also manifest among and around them.

For just as a civilisation is the reflection of the heart and mind of the people who go to make up that civilisation, so it is with a kingdom. The life of a kingdom—the quality of a civilisation is the reflection of the life and quality of its peoples.

A people who, being in CHRIST, have

" THE MIND OF CHRIST,"[19]

and having come under the beneficent clauses of the new covenant,[20] can be described as the people in whose heart[21] is God's Law—such a people will reflect (or project into outward physical environment) the Christo-centric civilisation for which all nations long. When every soul in the KINGDOM is in CHRIST, Who is in heaven,[22] then the KINGDOM of HEAVEN will be manifest on earth in very deed.

MR. PANTON REFUTED.

BY THE REV. J. MOUNTAIN, D.D.

PART II.

FIFTH : Mr. Panton says that British-Israel is—" Fundamentally, an Abandonment of Grace for Law."

1. But how can this be maintained in the presence of the quotations which are given under point three of this treatise ?

2. He actually implies that British-Israelites base national blessing " not on obedience but on blood." Here again is an amazing statement which is absolutely without foundation.

3. British-Israelites reverently accept the words of Christ that " the flesh profiteth nothing."—John vi, 33. And they entirely endorse the words of St. Paul that, mere national privileges and racial advantages are only as refuse, in comparison with " the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus Our Lord," and of full salvation in Him. We are distressed, therefore, to read Mr. Panton's words : " the very fleshliness which is the glory of the British-Israelite " ; and we reply to this statement by saying :—

" God forbid that we should glory,
Save in the Cross of Our Lord Jesus Christ ! "—Gal. vi, 14.

4. But St. Paul did not undervalue his Israelitish origin, per se ; nor should we. He did not glory in it ; nor do we. Like unto him, we glory in Christ. But, as God, in the fulness of time, is revealing the fact that, in our British Empire, He is now fulfilling the wonderful promises which He made more than 3,000 years ago to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and David. Who are we that we should refuse to accept the privilege, the blessing, and the honour? Our duty is to praise Him; to make known the revelation of the mystery; and to do our utmost, as His "witnesses," to lead our fellow-countrymen to realise the special and heavy responsibilities which rest upon them.

Sixth: Mr. Panton also states that British-Israel "Presents to the World a Pitiful Travesty of the Kingdom of God."

1. But why should he stigmatise as "too utterly tragic," "ludicrous," and "politically dangerous," the idea that "the British Empire is the Divine Kingdom on earth, and the British throne the throne of David"? The Davidic Kingdom, and its continuity and perpetuity, are as clearly set forth in Old Testament days as anything could be in 2 Samuel vii, 8–16, and in many other places. We quote only one passage:—

> "I have made a covenant with my chosen; I have sworn unto David my servant: thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations."—Ps. lxxxix, 3, 4.

2. We observe with regret Mr. Panton's frequent implication that Britain cannot be God's Kingdom and possess David's throne, because of her apostasy. But, was not Israel God's Kingdom? Nevertheless, was she not idolatrous and apostate? Was not David God's appointed and anointed King? Nevertheless, what about Bathsheba and Uriah the Hittite? It is evident that Mr. Panton reads more into the words "Kingdom" and "throne" than is justifiable. This will account for much of his unfavourable and mistaken criticism.

3. The Davidic seed, the Kingdom, the monarch, and the throne were literal; and they must not be spiritualised away. That were to rob them of their earthly and national meaning. If the Ten Tribes are not to be found in the British Empire, where are they?

4. But prophecy has often a double sense—a preliminary, literal fulfilment, and—long centuries after—a fuller and grander fulfilment, of which the first one, however, was an anticipation and a preparation. It is so with the prophecies now under consideration. In these "latter days" we are realising all this, more or less; and we are longing for, and expecting their completest fulfilment in "David's Greater Son," when the morn of His Sacred Advent shall dawn. Then—

> "The Lord God shall give unto Him the throne of His father David: and He shall reign over the House of Jacob for ever; and of His Kingdom there shall be no end."—Luke i, 32, 33.

5. It is a fair question: "If the Anglo-Saxon race are the descendants of Ten-Tribed Israel, why was so important a fact not discovered at an earlier date?" But the answer is perfectly simple. The time which was Divinely appointed for the discovery had only recently arrived.

6. Israel was to be punished "seven times" for her sins.—Leviticus xxvi, 28. Now, these seven prophetical times would equal 2,520 years; and if we reckon from the year 721—the year of Israel's Captivity—the "seven times" would terminate about the year 1800 A.D. It was about that time that Britain obtained her great Colonial Empire with multiplicity of seed to populate it; and it was about the same period that God revealed to the minds of some of His people the true interpretation of the Biblical promises which furnished the signs and proofs of the identity of Britain with the Ten Tribes of Israel.

Seventh: Mr. Panton further states that British-Israel—"By Denying that the Coming Wrath is upon all Nations, Robs the World of its most Urgent Warning."

Under this section Mr. Panton again falls into several misconceptions: to one or two of which we may briefly reply:—

1. British-Israel does not "deny that the coming wrath is upon all nations." On the contrary, they urge men to "flee from the wrath to come," to repent, and to trust in Christ as their Saviour, and thus to enter the inner circle of the Kingdom—the Church.

2. It is the Anglo-Saxon race, or the descendants of the Ten Tribes, who have come under the New Covenant by the acceptance of the Christian Faith. It is to them that the wonderful promises were made which are recorded in the Bible, in reference to their beneficent mission in the spread of the Gospel of grace and salvation.

3. This sufficiently explodes Mr. Panton's strange notion that British-Israelites teach that the heathen and the pagan form part of the Comity of Israel merely because they are under the governance of the British Empire. The fact is that, they cannot become part of the Comity of Israel except by surrendering individually to the governance of Christ.

4. And it will sufficiently refute his misconception if we mention that in a most able book recently issued and strongly recommended by the Covenant Publishing Co., the mission of British-Israel is thus described:—

> "The chief work of Israel—the Elected Race—is to spread abroad in the whole world the triumphs of Redeeming Grace." *

MR. PANTON'S FOOTNOTES.

Having now replies to Mr. Panton's Seven Criticisms, we briefly notice his footnotes.

ISRAEL AND JUDAH.

1. Mr. Panton denies the present separation of Israel from Judah. But no text can be produced which states that the disruption of 975 B.C. has been healed. No text can be produced which says that Israel migrated into Judah; although many of them did pay visits to Jerusalem for the purpose of worship and "sacrifice" at the Temple. Moreover, no text can be produced which states that Israel returned along with the Jews to Jerusalem, at the close of the Babylonian Captivity.

2. The Jews throughout the world regard Israel as still separate from them; and in their synagogues they pray every week for their deliverance and return, in order to renew the Tribal Unity.

3. A letter from the Rev. Dr. Hertz, the Chief Rabbi, has recently been published, in which he says that the Jews of to-day—

> "Are the descendants of the Tribes of Judah and Benjamin, with a certain number of descendants of the Tribe of Levi."

* "Israel in Prophecy and History," by P. W. Thompson, p. 3.

Digitized by Google

There is no evidence that the Israelites have been absorbed by the Jews, and that the Jews represent any Tribes but themselves.

OUR LORD'S MISSION.

1. He recognised the cleavage among the Tribes as existing in His day; for He spoke of "the House of Israel"; and the title, "House of Israel," was the special, technical name of the Ten Tribes, as distinct from the Tribes of Judah, Benjamin, and Levi—commonly known as the Jews. These were sometimes called "Israel." All Jews are Israelites, being descendants of Jacob. But it does not follow that Israelites are Jews.

2. Again, Our Lord's first commission to His twelve Apostles was as follows:—

> "Go not into any way of the Gentiles, and enter not into any city of the Samaritans; but go rather to the lost sheep of the House of Israel."—Matt. x, 5, 6, R.V.

3. While Our Lord's gracious Ministry was exercised also among the Jews, there were special reasons for His saying to the Canaanitish woman:—

> "I was not sent but unto the lost sheep of the House of Israel."—Matt. xv, 24, R.V.

4. Moreover, the word "sheep," in the Old Testament, is nowhere employed as a symbol of Gentiles, but of Israelites, and of them in the most emphatic manner.—Ps. xcv, 7; Jer. l, 6.

5. Further, the word "lost" must be taken literally, and not in a moral or spiritual sense. All men are lost in a spiritual sense; but as applied to Israel by the prophets, and by Our Lord, "the lost sheep" are Israelites of the Ten Tribes whom He came specially to serve and save. The prophecy of Isaiah will yet be fulfilled:—

> "They shall come who were lost in Assyria."—Isa. xxvii, 13. M.

ST. PAUL'S DIVISION OF MANKIND.

1. Mr. Panton calls British-Israel "a myth"; and he says that "if Israelites are not among the 'Jews,' they are non-existent." But his remark is unwarranted. It is generally unsafe to found a definite statement upon a single verse. In this case Mr. Panton draws his inference from 1 Corinthians x, 32, and says:—

> "The inspired division of mankind is into Jews, Gentiles, and Church of God."

2. St. Paul in this verse gives a threefold division of mankind; but his inspired generalisations vary according to circumstances. For instance, in Romans i, 14, he divides mankind into "Greeks and Barbarians"; and, again, in Romans iii, 29, he divides the whole world into "Jews and Gentiles."

3. But even Mr. Panton's selected text—if there were no different ones—would not justify his inference. For, who were the Gentiles? The fact is, the term "Gentiles" included two classes: pure Gentiles and Gentilised Israel. As Mr. J. G. Taylor well remarks:—

> "To the Hebrew mind, the human race was formed of two groups—those under the Mosaic Law and those who were not; the latter being 'the Gentiles,' which simply meant 'the nations.' As the translators of the Revised Version point out, the word acquired a moral significance; and, in this sense, the Ten Tribes were Gentiles." *

AN UNWARRANTED SUSPICION.

1. Mr. Panton says that "a chief centre of 'tongues' in England for years has poured forth, supernaturally, constant and undiluted British-Israelism, and is paving the way to Emperor-worship."

2. In reply, we state most emphatically that "to pour forth, supernaturally, undiluted British-Israelism," and, at the same time, "to pave the way to Emperor-worship," or to any other form of idolatry, is a moral impossibility; for "undiluted British-Israelism" is "undiluted Bible Truth."

3. If Mr. Panton should ever find any of the leaders of the British-Israel Movement producing such testimony as evidence of the truth of their position, he would then be justified in his suspicion, and in issuing his challenge. But his coupling such testimony with our Movement, even hypothetically, is absolutely unwarranted and utterly misleading.

4. Moreover Mr. Panton should have remembered—if his judgment of the people to whom he refers be true and valid (which we do not accept)—that, nevertheless, demons were actually constrained to give their testimony to the Divine personality, authority, and ministry of Our Blessed Lord. For instance: we are told that, on one occasion, a demoniac cried out unto Him, saying:—

> "Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? Art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art—the Holy One of God."—Mark i, 24.

And it does not seem to have occurred to any of Our Lord's bitter opponents to call in question either His Godhead, authority, or ministry on account of that demoniac's commendatory testimony concerning Him.

Here, in conclusion, we must leave the matter, with every friendly feeling towards our eminent brother. We earnestly hope that, ere long, he will find time to make a full and complete investigation of the whole subject. In that case, we doubt not but that we shall soon have the pleasure of welcoming him as a convinced and an enthusiastic British-Israelite.

"THE GROUND OF ISRAEL'S REDEMPTION AND RECONCILIATION."

PART II.

ADDRESS AT HEADQUARTERS BY MRS. TYDEMAN CHILVERS.

IN the outworking of the redemption of the Lord Jesus Christ at Calvary we discover the transformation of the people; their new birth; their sins washed away, cleansed in the precious Blood of the Lamb, that they might be what God intended them to be, that they might fulfil their holy commission in the world.

Notice the term "redemption." "He came to redeem

them who were under the Law." Now "redemption" is "to pay back, to release from captivity or bondage, from any obligation or any liability to suffer by paying the equivalent." That is the dictionary explanation, but is it not a beautiful description of "redemption"? It is just what Jesus did. "Redemption" and "to redeem" is also "to purchase in the market," as a slave is bought in the market. The Apostle says "we are sold under sin," "having the sentence of death in ourselves." It is also "to buy out of the market, and the 'purchased' are never again exposed for sale." The Lord Jesus said, "They shall never perish, and none shall pluck them out of My hands." It is also "to loose and set free by paying a price." The price of Israel's redemption is the precious Blood of the Lamb. Redemption is also "a loosing away." The Apostle comforts us by the reminder that we are waiting for the "loosing away of our bodies." (Romans viii, 23.)

To retrace for a moment; because of Israel's condition, her idolatry, her whoredom and her rebellion, God declares that He must "put her away"; divorce her. If you turn to Deut. xxiv, 4, you will read what "divorcement" exactly means. Very reverently may I say it is what Jehovah said He would do with Israel on account of her sin, even though "He hateth putting away." But He must do it. "I put her away" He says. He cast her off. Yet listen—I find that at Calvary that dread bill of divorcement was torn up. "Where is the bill of your mother's divorcement?" It is gone, because the Divine Husband was at Calvary bearing the punishment and guilt of her sin; and the gracious result for her—life; freedom; liberty and release; fellowship with Jehovah; reconciliation with God, and an establishment in the Father's House. Calvary, friends, means all this; the prophecy of Isaiah liii describes very expressively that which Jesus suffered there in order to do away with that "bill of divorcement" and remove that which necessitated Him to write it. "It is expedient for us that one man should die for the people," said Caiaphas, who being High Priest "prophesied that Jesus should die for that nation." (John xii, 50-52.)

"He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon Him; and with His stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all."

That which was the barrier, which separated, which brought eternal death in its trail, as the margin reads, "He hath made the iniquity of us all to meet on Him." Here may I give you a sentence which comes from childhood's memory, "the accumulated sin of an accumulated people was charged on Jesus." "Thou shalt call His name Jesus, for He shall save His people from their sins." God is just; He can never cover our sin. Will you understand when I say God cannot forgive sin; He can only pardon sin on the ground of Christ's substitutionary sacrifice, where it is dealt with and put away, and then when thus the demands of God's righteous law are met, He forgives and pardons—then He covers. "And when God forgives, He forgets."

I see it was all foreshadowed in the sacrifice of the lambs by the Children of Israel, a type of the Sacrifice of the Lamb of God Who came to take away the sins of the world; and when He came "the Lord made our iniquities to meet on Him."

Sit down for a few moments, beloved friends, and try to think out that Divine statement "The Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all." It were enough if He only met mine, it were enough if He only met the iniquities of us all in this room; but the iniquity of His people—the accumulated sin of an accumulated people—met on His head. "He was numbered with the transgressors; for the transgression of My people was He stricken." He bears the sin and iniquity of Israel.

Yes, will you ponder over that Calvary picture? "He was led as a lamb to the slaughter; . . . He opened not His mouth. . . . He was cut off in the land of the living." All the Old Testament prophecies relative to that time were absolutely fulfilled and I find, oh how I rejoice, that Calvary means substitution, for if Jesus bore that iniquity of ours we are pardoned and freed from its penalty and guilt. If Jesus suffered the penalty for my sin; if He bore what I incurred, I am free; the law of God cannot condemn me; God acquits me, and now as I confess my sin He is faithful and just to forgive me my sin. Calvary means substitution. For me Jesus went there; for His people nationally He went there. Trace the thought throughout the Epistles and put a little mark around the words "for me," "for us," in your Bible. Blessed substitution: He—for me!

Then it means redemption. "He shall save His people from their sins," and sin which demanded the penalty of death. Jesus died, so He met that penalty. Again, Calvary means not only "redemption" but "atonement"—a death suffered and a life offered; and Jesus gave His spirit, soul and body to this redemptive work. His spirit He gave into the hands of His Father; His soul He poured out unto death; and His body He yielded to be crucified. ALL OF CHRIST for ALL OF ME! His spirit for my spirit; His soul for my soul; His body for my body; an all-round salvation by an all-round Saviour.

The message of the Cross of Christ is threefold. It is, first, Jesus died for me; and I do rejoice to know that this means Israel nationally, as well as any individual needing salvation, for while He died to redeem Israel He made atonement for the sins of the world. Jesus died for me, and the Apostle Paul in the sixth chapter of Romans gives us another side of it. That second aspect of Calvary is "identification." "I have been crucified with Christ," not literally, as far as His body was concerned, but Christ went to Calvary as the representative of His people, and the representative of the old creation-life of Adam. Hence, Paul, as he grasped that fact, exclaims "I have been crucified with Christ." "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creation," because having been crucified with Him and buried with Him we were raised up together and are seated together with Christ "far above all principalities and powers."

How much of that, beloved, are you experiencing to-day? It is a most practical truth; a victorious experience. The only way of victory in these days is by elevation. "Thou hast lifted me up above mine enemies round about me," living with Christ, "far above all." The third aspect is a joyous one, that at Calvary the devil was conquered. Jesus said the "prince of this world" is cast out. He was absolutely overthrown; brought to utter defeat, and fully and finally conquered. Jesus, the Son of God, went down into death "that He might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil." What is the meaning of the word "destroy" in that passage? Nullified, or rendered inoperative. For your practical experience, remember, only where and when you appropriate that truth is the devil rendered inoperative.

Is not this a gracious message of the victory of the Cross—the grounds of Israel's redemption and reconciliation, and indeed necessary for the nation's complete redemption as for the individual redemption? From the Garden of Eden right away through in the experience of God's "elect" people, there we hear of the adversary crossing and dodging her path, endeavouring to bring her to shame and destruction, and make void the promise of God "the seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head." Our Lord deals with the foe and as He, "The Lord, the Redeemer of Israel," rose from the grave that day of days He stripped off from Himself all principalities and powers; carried captivity captive; and rose to the right hand of the Father, triumphant over them all.

Praise God for such a wonderful redemption; such a wonderful conquest and wonderful triumph. But, friends, it can be a very definite personal experience, not only in relation to sin but in relation to the old creation-life; for those who believe and accept this wonderful salvation by a definite and living faith in the Lord Jesus Christ are delivered and are free from the guilt of sin, from the power of sin, from the thraldom of sin, from the dominion of the self life, and from the tyranny of the devil. Oh, it is a great redemption that Jesus came to bring, "for that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressors that were under the first testament, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance" (Heb. ix, 15), and the believer who now appropriates is justified, absolved and liberated from all bondage. Justified by faith the Old Book describes it, and to my joy I came across this passage the other day: "In the Lord shall all the seed of Israel be justified and shall glory." Is not that wonderful? God's Word says it and I believe it! On the ground of Calvary's Sacrifice alone God makes that possible. What a message to tell, no one too "far off" or out of "the way," "God is able to save to the uttermost all who come unto God by Him, seeing He ever liveth to make intercession for them." I do not wonder that Saul of Tarsus rejoices in the Gospel of Christ, "It is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth," and the basis of Israel's redemption and reconciliation is Calvary. Oh, that all knew it to-day! But there is a veil over the eyes of the people, a veil that covers (Isaiah says), and Paul declares that there is blindness and hardness of heart.

NOTES AND QUOTATIONS IN RELATION TO BRITAIN-ISRAEL.

By PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc., &c.

[The following articles should be read with the thought in mind that they are not intended as a glorification of the Empire, nor of the Anglo-Saxon people, but as a recognition that Jehovah, the God and King of Israel, has in the Celto-Saxon people the basis of His Kingdom on earth. The Anglo-Saxon people have been trained for ages to be the Administrators of that Kingdom, and to carry its benefits, its liberty and its peace to all mankind.]

No. 15.

ISAAC TAYLOR, in 1860, wrote: "On grounds of the surest calculation, we look forward another fifty years, or a hundred. At this time it is so, and at that time it shall be so in a new sense, that the Anglo-Saxon race, led on always in royal and noble style by the Insular-people, shall be, in course, at a rapid rate, to Anglicise the habitable earth. A boast this may seem in its sound; but a homely matter-of-fact in its substance."

Hear the New York Herald in 1900: "England is the only nation capable of carrying the torch of civilisation into darkest Africa. Her traditional love of personal liberty, her dislike of functionaryism and red tape, and her defence of the open-door policy, have enabled her to carry out a noble mission of civilising benighted parts of the world with a success that has been a distinct benefit to all the nations of the earth. Wherever Anglo-Saxons have made headway, they have left a path into which the French, Germans, Russians, and every other enlightened people are invited and are welcome to walk."

The Duke of Connaught in January, 1913, said: "Believing that the British Empire, the greatest that the world has ever seen, has been and must be built upon a basis of justice and freedom, order and good government, we pledge ourselves to hand on that heritage of our fathers undiminished; to maintain it, and to strengthen it; to carry on, guided by their spirit, the work of civilisation they have bequeathed to us."

Dr. Carl Peters, a German Colonial pioneer, says: "To Anglo-Saxon North America, to English Australia, to British South Asia, will be added Africa—English from the Cape to Cairo. An English world epoch rises ever more distinctly on the horizon of time, and nothing is left to the other nations but to reconcile themselves for good or evil to the historical fact."

In the Polish Evening News of January 13th, 1903, we read: "In those days of mediocrity and petty strivings which paralyse international politics, the deeds and policy of Britain compel our admiration. The possession of Gibraltar, Cyprus and Suez has secured her road to India, and with equal patriotism and manly spirit she has transferred her activities to other continents. After being mistress of Asia, where her predominance is now threatened by Russia, she has become mistress of Africa; and much as we may deplore the loss by the Boers of their independence, no one can doubt that their position under British rule, as compared with that of the Poles under the rule of Russia or Prussia, is as heaven is to earth."

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher of last century made the following statement: "I will not undertake to be the laudator of England; but this I can say. Through light and through dark, through good and through evil, she has proved herself the right hand of Almighty God for light, for liberty, and for victory."

The Russian Vernadsky last century wrote :—" Britain is a menace to the safety of Europe. She is the most aggressive power of modern times. There is no part of the world where she has not established her garrisons and her colonies. Her Fleet dominates every sea. What power is there that has not suffered from her ambition? She has built up by the sword a military power in Asia which secures her government over 300,000,000 in India. At Aden she holds the gate of the Red Sea. At Singapore she commands the road to China. From Fiji she dominates the Pacific. Her territory is vaster than Russia, and greater in extent than Europe without Russia. Britain is a spider whose web encompasses the whole world within her own dominions. She has all the resources of all the continents. Her Empire is stronger and vaster than any coalition of other States. She is a standing menace to all other powers, and her increasing strength is destructive of the balance of power. Nevertheless, unsatisfied and insatiable, she is still grasping for more territory. . . . It is only too clear that the power of Britain is too great to be compatible with the general safety, and that the aggressive Empire, unless speedily checked, will establish a universal dominion over all peoples of the earth."

If Vernadsky had recognised in the remarkable development of the British Empire not the rule of one race over other races, but the spread of the Kingdom of God in which all are equal before the Law, his fears would have been groundless and his hopes that the Kingdom should become universal might have been awakened.

THE NEW TESTAMENT.

EXTRACT from " The Bible : Its Christ and Modernism," by Rev. J. J. McCrossan, B.A., B.D. (now in the Press). Covenant Publishing Co., Ltd.

It is now a well-established fact among all classical scholars, who have really investigated the matter, that the Peshito or Syriac Version of the New Testament was completed by 150 A.D. This Version was written in Aramaic, the common dialect spoken in Palestine during the life of Our Lord. This Version includes the four Gospels, the Book of Acts, fourteen Epistles of Paul, First John, First Peter, and the Book of James. It only omits the Second and Third Epistles of John, the Second Epistle of Peter, the Epistle of Jude, and Revelation. Note that, while this great Version omits only five Books contained in our New Testament, it does not include one single Book which is not found in our New Testament.

Again we have the Old Latin Version of the New Testament Books. Jerome used this Version when he wrote the Vulgate. Tertullian, who was born about 150 A.D., quotes very fully from this Version of the New Testament.

Now this Old Latin Version of the New Testament contained the four Gospels, the Book of Acts, thirteen Epistles of Paul, the three Epistles of John, the First Epistle of Peter, the Epistle of Jude, and Revelation. It omits the Epistle to the Hebrews, the Epistle of James and the Second Epistle of Peter. It contains all the Books of the New Testament except three.

Then these two ancient Versions of the New Testament (Peshito and Old Latin Version), written about 150 A.D., or earlier, contain together all the Books of our New Testament with the exception of Second Peter, and they contain no other Books.

Reader, do not overlook the fact that hundreds of copies of these New Testament Books must have existed for years, and been widely read among the Churches ere they would be collected and put in one Version.

To still further strengthen faith in our New Testament Books, let us here mention a few of the Early Christian Fathers.

Irenaeus was born about 120 A.D. and died about 200 A.D. We know he was a pupil of Polycarp, who, in turn, was a pupil of John the Apostle. In his extant writings, as classical scholars know, Irenæus attributes the four Gospels to Matthew, Mark, Luke and John.

Clement of Alexandria was born somewhere between 160 A.D. and 190 A.D. He was a splendid scholar. In his extant writings Clement mentions Matthew, Mark, Luke and John by name, and in this order.

But what about the Apostolic Fathers, Clement of Rome, Polycarp, and Papias? These three were all born about 75 A.D. or earlier, while John the Apostle and other disciples of Christ were still living.

Eusebius says Clement of Rome died 95 A.D.; in his one extant Epistle to the Corinthians he mentions Peter, James, John and Luke. This Epistle is filled with references from at least eight Books of the New Testament.

Polycarp was born around 65 A.D. and died a martyr about 156 A.D. We know for a certainty that he was a pupil of John the Apostle. His Epistle to the Church at Philippi is still extant. In this one short Epistle he mentions : (1) The Resurrection and Ascension of Our Lord ; (2) The teachings of Christ and the Apostles ; and (3) The Oracles of Our Lord, meaning the four Gospels. In Polycarp's day the four Gospels were called " The Oracles."

Papias, Bishop of Hierapolis, was born about 70 A.D. He wrote a book called, Interpretation of the Sayings of Our Lord. This book, we know, was in existence until 1218 A.D., but has since been lost. However, both Irenæus and Eusebius have left us many quotations from this work of Papias. From these many quotations we learn : (1) that he knew personally and talked with two of Christ's disciples ; (2) that he knew the daughters of Philip the Evangelist ; (3) that he often met and talked with men who knew the Lord's disciples ; (4) that he kept a full record of these conversations ; (5) that both Matthew and Mark wrote Gospels ; (6) that the Gospel of John, one Epistle of John, one Epistle of Peter, and Revelation were then in existence, because he quotes from all these.

In addition to all this indisputable evidence, we have Tatian's Diatessaron. Tatian was converted to Christianity about 150 A.D., and shortly after this wrote this commentary on the four Gospels, for the word " Diatessaron " comes from " dia " (through), and " tessares " (four), and so means " Through the Four " (Gospels).

THE COMING KING.

BY THE REV. WILLIAM R. WOOD, D.D. (Augusta, Maine, U.S.A.)

" And His dominion shall be from sea to sea,
And from the river to the end of the earth."

ONLY one person in history answers to the description of the coming King found in this prophecy. That One came riding into Jerusalem on an ass 1898 years ago, and for a few hours received kingly honours.

Five days later He was taken out of the city and nailed to a cross, on which He died.

No man has ever succeeded in making himself King of the world. Various reasons have been advanced by historians and statesmen to explain the failure of Alexander, Cæsar, Napoleon and the ex-Kaiser to achieve their ambition of world-wide dominion. None of their reasons are sufficient : they are superficial. I turn to the Bible and there I find that perfectly explains why no man has been able to grasp the crown of world empire.

Almighty God has pledged this crown to His Only Begotten Son. This pledge is on record. It is recorded in the second Psalm. There, through the spirit of prophecy, the Ever-Living Son of God says, " I will tell of the decree : Jehovah said unto Me, Thou art My Son ; this day have I begotten Thee. Ask of Me, and I will give the nations for Thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for Thy possession."

The Psalmist concludes with this admonition : " Kiss the Son (that is, do homage to Him as King) lest He be angry, and ye perish in the way, for His wrath may soon be kindled."

I do not see how one can believe the Bible and doubt that Jesus Christ is to reign over the Kingdom of God on this earth.

But there is a task to be done by the Church before the King comes to reign over His Kingdom on earth.

In order to avoid confusion of thought we must distinguish clearly between the Church and the Kingdom. The Church is NOT the Kingdom. The Church is Jerusalem. The Kingdom is Zion. The Church is an ecclesiastical institution. The Kingdom is a political institution. The Church has to do with religion and salvation. The Kingdom has to do with law and government. The Church is for the whole world and for all races. The Kingdom is to be established in Zion for the House of Israel. The nations, indeed, will be subject to the Kingdom and all races will benefit by it ; but the Kingdom itself will centre about the throne of David, and the greatest of all David's line—" Great David's Greater Son "—the " Christ " of prophecy, the " Jesus " of history, and " The Coming King."

Then will all the glorious promises and prophecies of the triumphant dominion of Messiah be fulfilled. The majority of students have been confused because they have tried to find the fulfilment of Kingdom prophecies either in the progress of the Church, or in the life of the people known as Jews.

God's Covenant made with Abraham and confirmed in Isaac embraced the House of Israel. The Jews are but a small fragment of Two Tribes that returned to Palestine after the Babylonian captivity.

Now, God said to Abraham, " In Isaac shall thy seed be called," or, " In Isaac shall thy posterity be numbered." —Gen. xxi, 22. And to Isaac God gave a promise, saying, " I will make thy seed to multiply as the stars of heaven . . . . ; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed." —Gen. xxvi, 4.

Those who understand that the word " Saxon " is merely an abbreviation of " Isaac's Sons " have discovered that in the Anglo-Saxon race the seed of Abraham already has multiplied as the stars of heaven and in this race all the nations have been blessed.

The Kingdom promises have been, or are being, fulfilled in the history of the race that will comprise the Kingdom that is destined to " rule over all."

The Gospel of Christ includes both the Church and the Kingdom. Jesus began His ministry preaching " The Gospel of the Kingdom." He did not announce the Gospel of Salvation through the sacrifice of Himself until a few months before His Crucifixion. It was during a retreat at Cæsarea Philippi that Jesus drew from His disciples the great confession, " Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God."

" From that time began Jesus to show unto His disciples that He must go to Jerusalem and suffer many things . . . . . and be killed, and the third day be raised up."—Matt. xvi, 21.

Previously, He had been proclaiming the Gospel of the Kingdom. That was for Israel. When He sent forth the Twelve on their first mission, He told them what to preach : " As ye go, preach, saying, The Kingdom is at hand." And He told them to whom to deliver this message : " Go not into any way of the Gentiles : but go rather to the lost sheep of the House of Israel."

After His Resurrection, our Ever-Living Lord commissioned believers to " Go into all the world and preach the Gospel to the whole creation."—Mark xvi, 15. This is the Gospel of Salvation, for Jesus said, " He that believeth and is baptised, shall be saved."

The great task of the Church is to carry out this commission : to proclaim the Gospel of Salvation to the ends of the earth.

Now, despite the fond hope of many believers, there is no warrant in Holy Scripture that the Gospel will be accepted by all the world, or that the Kingdom of God will be established on earth through the triumph of Christianity.

No doubt the world has been improved immeasurably by Christianity ; no doubt millions upon millions have been saved because of their belief in " The Gospel of Christ : for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth ; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek."—Rom. i, 16. No doubt they will be numbered among the blessed ones embraced in the eternal Kingdom when Jesus shall have delivered up the earthly Kingdom to God the Father.—1 Cor. xv, 24. But the Kingdom will not be established on earth until the King to Whom it is promised sits on His throne. The Kingdom will not be established by the Church, it is now existent, a going concern ; in it Christ will hereafter establish His reign.

Now let me call your attention to certain facts bearing upon this supreme task of the Church, that indicate the nearing fulfilment of the prophecies that Jesus Christ is to reign over the Kingdom of God on earth.

(1) The present world situation is more favourable to the proclamation of the Gospel than at any previous time since the Crucifixion of Our Saviour.

The whole world is accessible to day as never before. Means of communication have been perfected within the past century more than in all preceding time. Telegraph, telephone, radio, steamships, steam cars, trolleys, automobiles and airplanes have combined to shrink the earth until the whole world, as regards communication, is smaller to-day than the New England of a century ago. Whispers heard in London or Tokyo to-day are published in our newspapers to-morrow morning.

It is a notable fact that during the last decade the Christian ambassador has faced a changing world.

ASIA has awakened from the sloth of centuries and is now on the march. AFRICA has ceased to be a land of impenetrable mystery and presents a ripe field for the Gospel harvest. RUSSIA is under the heel of a group of rabid anti-Christians, but the Russian people—tens of millions of them—are eager to hear the Gospel, and more than four thousand Gospel preachers are proclaiming the message of evangelical truth.

To men of faith and vision the present distressing conditions in CHINA contain more of promise than of menace.

The end of Mohammedan rule in the Holy Land, after just 1,260 years—a time, times, and half a time—is deeply significant; and it is even more significant that the control of Palestine has passed into the hands of the British Empire. It is significant because the word "British" is really a combination of two Hebrew words, "B'r'th," meaning "covenant," and "Ish," which means "man." Together, the words mean "Covenant Man." Now, the Covenant was made with Abraham, and the Holy Land was promised to him and to his seed 1917 years B.C. The promise was fulfilled in A.D. 1917, when the land came under the jurisdiction of the British, the "Covenant men," "Isaac's Sons," "Israel in the Isles"; and whose destiny is to hold the Land of Promise until the King comes.

What does this unprecedented world situation mean if not that the eternal purposes of God are being worked out before our eyes, and that He is preparing the world for the coming of the King Whom the Almighty will set upon His holy hill?

(2) Another indication of the nearing approach of the Coming King is found in the multiplying agencies for spreading the Gospel of Salvation.

One hundred years ago there were not more than a dozen feeble organisations formed for the purpose of sending this Gospel into all the world; and they were exceedingly unpopular among the rank and file of Christians. Now, there are nearly one thousand general missionary societies, and they are supported by tens of millions of Christian believers who have come to realise that if a Church is not missionary it is not Christian.

One hundred years ago the Christian forces on the firing line numbered only a few score devoted men and women who had taken their lives in their hand and adventured into the darkest regions of the earth for the sake of Christ and His Gospel. Now, there is an army of upwards of thirty thousand consecrated and trained ambassadors of Christ placed in strategic centres throughout the entire non-Christian world.

One hundred years ago the Bible had been translated into sixty-six languages. Now, the Scriptures are available to every race, and almost every tribe, in more than five hundred languages and dialects.

When we understand that the open Bible is God's appointed means of revealing Himself and His purposes to mankind, we cannot doubt, in view of the facts before us, that events are moving rapidly towards the consummation of the present world-order and towards the dawn of the Kingdom age.

(3) Another fact to be taken into consideration is the spread of the English language.

At the beginning of the 19th century, English was the language of only 20 million people; while French was spoken by 31 million, German by 30 million, Spanish by 26 million and Russian by 30 million.

At the beginning of the 20th century, French was spoken by 52 million, German by 84 million, Spanish by 46 million, Russian by 85 million, and English by one hundred and thirty million people.

The number speaking German and Russian increased nearly threefold; but in the same period the number speaking English increased six and a half times.

If it be a fact—and the evidence surely points in that direction—that the English-speaking people comprise a majority of the House of Israel, Isaac's sons in whom the posterity of Abraham is numbered, and whose identity has been lost for more than two millenniums, is it not high time for these Israel people to seek a closer alliance, to set their house in order, to awaken to their true identity, and to make ready for the coming of the King Who is appointed to reign over them in the Kingdom age?

(4) One more fact to be noted in this connection is the awakened interest in the Gospel of the Kingdom.

In the 24th chapter of Matthew, Jesus intimates that at the end of this age "the Gospel of the Kingdom" shall again be proclaimed. He said, "This Gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations: and then shall the end come."

Now, it is a most significant fact that within recent years this Kingdom Gospel has been preached by faithful witnesses, in the face of ridicule and opposition, throughout the English-speaking world, and in many regions beyond. But, as far as I know, it has been preached by none but English-speaking people.

In the light of what I have said, can we not see that through the tempest of hate that has swept over the earth, through the blazing fury of war, through the shocking confusion of a changing world-order, in the face of the suspicion and ill-will that looms darkly upon the horizon, serene and certain of His approaching triumph, onward moves Our Lord Christ to His Coronation as King of kings and Lord of lords? "And His dominion shall be from sea to sea, and from the river to the end of the earth." Therefore, the Prophet says, "Turn you to the stronghold, ye prisoners of hope."

"There never was found in any age of the world, either philosopher or sect, or law or discipline, which did so highly exalt the public good as the Christian faith."—LORD BACON.

"THE RUSSIAN BEAR."

THE following is taken from an article in "The Our Race News-Leaflet" of 1896, written by Professor Totten :—

"The Russian Empire stretches literally like a great Bear, all along the north quarters of the whole Eastern hemisphere. Facing south, this Siberian monster has now crawled up and over the Borean horizon, beneath which his huge body is largely still concealed, until with its left paw at Merv and its right at Odessa, its terrible head, visaged with the pent-up cold and hunger of centuries, rests upon Mount Ararat! Its rolling eyes, gloating now east, now west, fall most naturally southwards, down the sloping trail marked centuries ago by Noah, and lead on towards the same Pleasant Land. The right paw is stirred, and Europe trembles, the left is moved, and Asia quakes! What will the monster do?

"THE CHOICE OF GATES.

"The mass of Russian trade and commerce tends towards Europe. Its direct gate is Constantinople. This has been her aim for ages. But from this she has been drawn back by the Berlin treaty, verily 'a hook of six teeth.' For the present she pretends to have relinquished her hope in that direction, although no one can tell to what new life the present conspiracy of difficulties in which she finds herself may not raise it.

"In the meantime, checked 'on paper' in the West, she has since maintained a strong demonstration, armed and active, towards the gates of India. She is tireless in enterprise! But in this temporary change of base and operation towards the East, she has been thrown into exactly the position in which we have pictured her. Prone in all her might, she thus lies just where, having eyes, she cannot fail to see her way made clear!

"There is another gate, and she is at it! That between the Caspian and the Black Seas—the back gate, so to speak—the gate of the Caucasus!

"She holds this gate, and well into Armenia, in undisputed control. Batoum and Trebizond, Kars and Ardahan, Baku, Erwan, Erzroom, and Tiflis, all are there, and thence backward, underneath her body, run her railroads to the heart of Russia! In the elder days, 'Israel,' driven thither by the Assyrian hosts, occupied this very region, and thence escaping from the Mede, went northwards through this identical gate, and named its fortress as she went.

"What on earth is to prevent Russia from reversing this line of march, and descending on the Holy Places which she covets? All her lines of communication concentrate in Armenia, and thence it is that her armies may most advantageously debouche!

"GRAND TACTICS.

"Strategically this central gate is by far Russia's most important exit in the vast military game which she is playing. By massing her troops in Armenia they will be masked, and she herself will be at once upon a vantage ground, one better cannot be conceived. Such a demonstration, if made in full strength, would at once call 'check'!

"England would be forced to divide her strength into at least two armies, an Indian one, and one in Syria, Egypt, and a Constantinople fleet, while Russia would, in all her power, be in between them all. Here is consummate opportunity, and Russia has been blindly suffered to improve its whole preliminary programme undisturbed. If in some future day she mobilises towards the Trans-Caucasus, demonstrates strongly at Herat, and keeps everything in haste and preparation at Odessa, no human intellect will be able to divine her real intentions!

"A feint in either direction would have to be desperately prepared for, and the decisive effort could be made as she herself, sole master of the situation, might at any time elect. Consider the lines that would lie equally open to her (her railroads to the borders of Afghanistan, her steamboats and transports in the Black Sea towards the rear of Constantinople, and the Valley of the Euphrates to her innumerable horsemen) towards Palestine, the key to universal dominion!

"We have sadly mistaken the teachings of a military education, and misconstrued the reading and study of years upon 'the Eastern Question,' if we are wrong in what, were we a Sclav and had the Russian armies to direct, we would at least attempt to do!"

A well-attended meeting of delegates from Branches of the Northern Province was held at Manchester on March 7th, the following Branches being represented :—Ansdell (Fylde), Bingley, Bradford, Bridlington, Darlington, Halifax, Hull, Liverpool, Manchester, Preston, Sheffield, Stockport, Southport, and Wigan. Mr. John Leech, K.C., Commissioner-General, who was heartily welcomed, emphasised the need of every Branch doing its part to increase the sale of the N.M. & B. It was in the hands of Secretaries of Branches to make the page allotted for Branch reports, etc., a success. On the question of finance, Mr. Leech said that the demand for more Commissioners was constantly increasing. Headquarters, which practically provides most of the finances of the Federation, are doing all they can. The problem of providing more Commissioners must be faced. One plan suggested was the distribution to all members of a Pyramid collecting box. This plan had been well received in the South. If whole-heartedly taken up in the North, they would provide sufficient funds to justify the Federation in appointing two further Commissioners for the North. All contributions placed in the boxes, from the North, would be forwarded to Headquarters, ear-marked for the Northern Commissioners' work. He recommended that a Box Treasurer be appointed for each Branch.

The appointment of Mr. W. Whitton as Pyramid Box Secretary for the entire Northern Province was confirmed.

It was proposed, seconded and carried unanimously "That Branches of the Northern Province endeavour to provide £700 for the Commissioners of the North during the twelve months ending March, 1929."

It was also decided that the Northern Province Committee continues its work, two duly elected members from each Branch to constitute the Committee.

After tendering thanks to the Commissioner-General for the help he had given, the meeting closed with the Benediction.

At the beginning of the 20th century, French was spoken by 52 million, German by 84 million, Spanish by 46 million, Russian by 85 million, and English by one hundred and thirty million people.

The number speaking German and Russian increased nearly threefold; but in the same period the number speaking English increased six and a half times.

If it be a fact—and the evidence surely points in that direction—that the English-speaking people comprise a majority of the House of Israel, Isaac's sons in whom the posterity of Abraham is numbered, and whose identity has been lost for more than two millenniums, is it not high time for these Israel people to seek a closer alliance, to set their house in order, to awaken to their true identity, and to make ready for the coming of the King Who is appointed to reign over them in the Kingdom age?

(4) One more fact to be noted in this connection is the awakened interest in the Gospel of the Kingdom.

In the 24th chapter of Matthew, Jesus intimates that at the end of this age "the Gospel of the Kingdom" shall again be proclaimed. He said, "This Gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations: and then shall the end come."

Now, it is a most significant fact that within recent years this Kingdom Gospel has been preached by faithful witnesses, in the face of ridicule and opposition, throughout the English-speaking world, and in many regions beyond. But, as far as I know, it has been preached by none but English-speaking people.

In the light of what I have said, can we not see that through the tempest of hate that has swept over the earth, through the blazing fury of war, through the shocking confusion of a changing world-order, in the face of the suspicion and ill-will that looms darkly upon the horizon, serene and certain of His approaching triumph, onward moves Our Lord Christ to His Coronation as King of kings and Lord of lords? "And His dominion shall be from sea to sea, and from the river to the end of the earth." Therefore, the Prophet says, "Turn you to the stronghold, ye prisoners of hope."

"There never was found in any age of the world, either philosopher or sect, or law or discipline, which did so highly exalt the public good as the Christian faith."—LORD BACON.

"THE RUSSIAN BEAR."

THE following is taken from an article in "The Our Race News-Leaflet" of 1896, written by Professor Totten :—

"The Russian Empire stretches literally like a great Bear, all along the north quarters of the whole Eastern hemisphere. Facing south, this Siberian monster has now crawled up and over the Borean horizon, beneath which his huge body is largely still concealed, until with its left paw at Merv and its right at Odessa, its terrible head, visaged with the pent-up cold and hunger of centuries, rests upon Mount Ararat! Its rolling eyes, gloating now east, now west, fall most naturally southwards, down the sloping trail marked centuries ago by Noah, and lead on towards the same Pleasant Land. The right paw is stirred, and Europe trembles, the left is moved, and Asia quakes! What will the monster do?

"THE CHOICE OF GATES.

"The mass of Russian trade and commerce tends towards Europe. Its direct gate is Constantinople. This has been her aim for ages. But from this she has been drawn back by the Berlin treaty, verily 'a hook of six teeth.' For the present she pretends to have relinquished her hope in that direction, although no one can tell to what new life the present conspiracy of difficulties in which she finds herself may not raise it.

"In the meantime, checked 'on paper' in the West, she has since maintained a strong demonstration, armed and active, towards the gates of India. She is tireless in enterprise! But in this temporary change of base and operation towards the East, she has been thrown into exactly the position in which we have pictured her. Prone in all her might, she thus lies just where, having eyes, she cannot fail to see her way made clear!

"There is another gate, and she is at it! That between the Caspian and the Black Seas—the back gate, so to speak—the gate of the Caucasus!

"She holds this gate, and well into Armenia, in undisputed control. Batoum and Trebizond, Kars and Ardahan, Baku, Erwan, Erzroom, and Tiflis, all are there, and thence backward, underneath her body, run her railroads to the heart of Russia! In the elder days, 'Israel,' driven thither by the Assyrian hosts, occupied this very region, and thence escaping from the Mede, went northwards through this identical gate, and named its fortress as she went.

"What on earth is to prevent Russia from reversing this line of march, and descending on the Holy Places which she covets? All her lines of communication concentrate in Armenia, and thence it is that her armies may most advantageously debouche!

"GRAND TACTICS.

"Strategically this central gate is by far Russia's most important exit in the vast military game which she is playing. By massing her troops in Armenia they will be masked, and she herself will be at once upon a vantage ground, one better cannot be conceived. Such a demonstration, if made in full strength, would at once call 'check'!

"England would be forced to divide her strength into at least two armies, an Indian one, and one in Syria, Egypt, and a Constantinople fleet, while Russia would, in all her power, be in between them all. Here is consummate opportunity, and Russia has been blindly suffered to improve its whole preliminary programme undisturbed. If in some future day she mobilises towards the Trans-Caucasus, demonstrates strongly at Herat, and keeps everything in haste and preparation at Odessa, no human intellect will be able to divine her real intentions!

"A feint in either direction would have to be desperately prepared for, and the decisive effort could be made as she herself, sole master of the situation, might at any time elect. Consider the lines that would lie equally open to her (her railroads to the borders of Afghanistan, her steamboats and transports in the Black Sea towards the rear of Constantinople, and the Valley of the Euphrates to her innumerable horsemen) towards Palestine, the key to universal dominion!

"We have sadly mistaken the teachings of a military education, and misconstrued the reading and study of years upon 'the Eastern Question,' if we are wrong in what, were we a Sclav and had the Russian armies to direct, we would at least attempt to do!"

A well-attended meeting of delegates from Branches of the Northern Province was held at Manchester on March 7th, the following Branches being represented :—Ansdell (Fylde), Bingley, Bradford, Bridlington, Darlington, Halifax, Hull, Liverpool, Manchester, Preston, Sheffield, Stockport, Southport, and Wigan. Mr. John Leech, K.C., Commissioner-General, who was heartily welcomed, emphasised the need of every Branch doing its part to increase the sale of the N.M. & B. It was in the hands of Secretaries of Branches to make the page allotted for Branch reports, etc., a success. On the question of finance, Mr. Leech said that the demand for more Commissioners was constantly increasing. Headquarters, which practically provides most of the finances of the Federation, are doing all they can. The problem of providing more Commissioners must be faced. One plan suggested was the distribution to all members of a Pyramid collecting box. This plan had been well received in the South. If whole-heartedly taken up in the North, they would provide sufficient funds to justify the Federation in appointing two further Commissioners for the North. All contributions placed in the boxes, from the North, would be forwarded to Headquarters, ear-marked for the Northern Commissioners' work. He recommended that a Box Treasurer be appointed for each Branch.

The appointment of Mr. W. Whitton as Pyramid Box Secretary for the entire Northern Province was confirmed.

It was proposed, seconded and carried unanimously "That Branches of the Northern Province endeavour to provide £700 for the Commissioners of the North during the twelve months ending March, 1929."

It was also decided that the Northern Province Committee continues its work, two duly elected members from each Branch to constitute the Committee.

After tendering thanks to the Commissioner-General for the help he had given, the meeting closed with the Benediction.

(1) The present world situation is more favourable to the proclamation of the Gospel than at any previous time since the Crucifixion of Our Saviour.

The whole world is accessible to day as never before. Means of communication have been perfected within the past century more than in all preceding time. Telegraph, telephone, radio, steamships, steam cars, trolleys, automobiles and airplanes have combined to shrink the earth until the whole world, as regards communication, is smaller to-day than the New England of a century ago. Whispers heard in London or Tokyo to-day are published in our newspapers to-morrow morning.

It is a notable fact that during the last decade the Christian ambassador has faced a changing world.

ASIA has awakened from the sloth of centuries and is now on the march. AFRICA has ceased to be a land of impenetrable mystery and presents a ripe field for the Gospel harvest. RUSSIA is under the heel of a group of rabid anti-Christians, but the Russian people—tens of millions of them—are eager to hear the Gospel, and more than four thousand Gospel preachers are proclaiming the message of evangelical truth.

To men of faith and vision the present distressing conditions in CHINA contain more of promise than of menace.

The end of Mohammedan rule in the Holy Land, after just 1,260 years—a time, times, and half a time—is deeply significant; and it is even more significant that the control of Palestine has passed into the hands of the British Empire. It is significant because the word "British" is really a combination of two Hebrew words, "B'r'th," meaning "covenant," and "Ish," which means "man." Together, the words mean "Covenant Man." Now, the Covenant was made with Abraham, and the Holy Land was promised to him and to his seed 1917 years B.C. The promise was fulfilled in A.D. 1917, when the land came under the jurisdiction of the British, the "Covenant men," "Isaac's Sons," "Israel in the Isles"; and whose destiny is to hold the Land of Promise until the King comes.

What does this unprecedented world situation mean if not that the eternal purposes of God are being worked out before our eyes, and that He is preparing the world for the coming of the King Whom the Almighty will set upon His holy hill?

(2) Another indication of the nearing approach of the Coming King is found in the multiplying agencies for spreading the Gospel of Salvation.

One hundred years ago there were not more than a dozen feeble organisations formed for the purpose of sending this Gospel into all the world; and they were exceedingly unpopular among the rank and file of Christians. Now, there are nearly one thousand general missionary societies, and they are supported by tens of millions of Christian believers who have come to realise that if a Church is not missionary it is not Christian.

One hundred years ago the Christian forces on the firing line numbered only a few score devoted men and women who had taken their lives in their hand and adventured into the darkest regions of the earth for the sake of Christ and His Gospel. Now, there is an army of upwards of thirty thousand consecrated and trained ambassadors of Christ placed in strategic centres throughout the entire non-Christian world.

One hundred years ago the Bible had been translated into sixty-six languages. Now, the Scriptures are available to every race, and almost every tribe, in more than five hundred languages and dialects.

When we understand that the open Bible is God's appointed means of revealing Himself and His purposes to mankind, we cannot doubt, in view of the facts before us, that events are moving rapidly towards the consummation of the present world-order and towards the dawn of the Kingdom age.

(3) Another fact to be taken into consideration is the spread of the English language.

At the beginning of the 19th century, English was the language of only 20 million people; while French was spoken by 31 million, German by 30 million, Spanish by 26 million and Russian by 30 million.

At the beginning of the 20th century, French was spoken by 52 million, German by 84 million, Spanish by 46 million, Russian by 85 million, and English by one hundred and thirty million people.

The number speaking German and Russian increased nearly threefold; but in the same period the number speaking English increased six and a half times.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

EXTRAORDINARY interest is being taken in the subject of the Great Pyramid, and for large numbers all roads should lead to the Queen's Hall on April 13th next.

B.-I. is brought to the notice of millions of people by the "Pertinent Questions" put to the readers of various daily and weekly papers.

Excellent addresses were given at Headquarters last week but the Rev. W. H. Stuart-Fox, M.A., Mr. John Leech, K.C., and Mr. Howard Rand, LL.B. Owing to the Easter Holidays no meetings will be held at Headquarters next week.

* * *

An important Mission was held at Portsmouth last week. The speakers were Rev. Pascoe Goard, Mr. J. J. Morey, Mr. Herbert Garrison, and Mr. Howard Rand.

* * *

Mr. Morey gave two inspiring lectures to crowded and interested audiences in the Leas Pavilion, Folkestone, on March 15th. In the afternoon he took for his subject "The Prophecies of Daniel," and in the evening "The Near Return of Our Lord to Reign." Lt.-Col. Du Pre, D.S.O., very kindly presided at both meetings, and his few concise and earnest remarks from the chair, well chosen as they were, made a deep impression on those present. To God be all the glory for these wonderful times of refreshing in this town of Folkestone.

B.-I. is rousing great interest in the Hounslow district. A good audience assembled in the Council House on March 20th. Rev. Joseph Gay was the speaker, and his address on "God's Kingdom Nation" was received with enthusiasm. J. Lynwood Palmer, Esq., was chairman. The next meeting on April 23rd is eagerly looked forward to.

Mr. John Leech, K.C., gave two valuable addresses on March 12th at Tunbridge Wells.

We have received a copy of the 49th Annual Report of the Soldiers' Home at Dover, showing the excellent work being carried on by Miss K. A. Hayes, the Lady Superintendent, and her mother. They are devoted British-Israelites, and their spiritual work and B.-I. teaching is having a great and permanent influence upon the lives of large numbers of the men in the Army, who are taking the Gospel to their associates in many parts of the world. We greatly regret to see that there is a considerable deficit upon the year's working, and we think some of our readers may like to contribute something to make it up. Miss Hayes is the Honorary Secretary of our Dover Branch, and an earnest worker for the B.-I. Cause.

Two excellent addresses were given by Mr. J. J. Morey to the Dover Branch on the 14th. Many gained new thoughts on the Kingdom Parables and will read St. Matthew's Gospel with a new light. One could wish that all Dover had heard "The Message Britain Needs To-day," given at the evening meeting. Col. Smythe and Mr. Sutton, O.B.E., were the chairmen.

On the 15th the Rev. J. Mountain, D.D., made his first visit to the Harrow and Wealdstone Branch. He held the large audience in rapt attention as he described how he came to accept our teaching, the title of his subject being "British-Israel Truth. Why I Believe It." The Rev. A. C. Chambers presided.

The Rev. Guy Waddington has been addressing a series of meetings in his area during March, public meetings at Bingley, Liverpool, Bradford, Hull, Harrogate and Southport, and Bible Classes at several Churches and Chapels round about Bradford.

At Hull, he addressed a meeting of clergy and business men. The chair was taken by Col. R. Hall, J.P., who afterwards accepted the position of President of the Hull Branch.

It is with great regret that we learn of the death of Mrs. M'Keown, the revered mother of Mr. T. J. P. M'Keown, Vice-President of our Belfast Branch, and of Mr. Hannay M'Keown, also an honoured member of that Branch, and we tender them our sincere sympathy.

Members and Associates are reminded of the Annual Meeting at Kensington Town Hall, on April 17th, at 5.45, to receive the Annual Report and Balance Sheet of the Federation for 1927.

"Who was Boaz? He was the great Sheik of Bethlehem, the leading man there. His grandfather, Nahshon, used to carry the Standard of the Lion of the tribe of Judah and command all the hosts of Judah in battle—the Lion which is now on our Royal Standard, so near are we interlinked with these bygone stories. . . . What was there about Ruth superior to Orpah that enabled her at the critical moment, though she did not know it herself, to make a right decision which influenced the whole of her future life, which brought her into unexpected possessions and privileges, and made her one of the direct progenitors of the Son of God? What was it?"—Dr. A. T. SCHOFIELD.

"The night nurse gave the routine injections of fever and diphtheria anti-toxins. Almost immediately after the child collapsed and died."

THIS TREATMENT (through the administration of which twelve school-children lost their lives at Bundaberg, W. Australia, recently) is the result of injecting a preparation of diphtheria poison twice a week into a horse for several months until the poor creature ceases to "react": then bleeding it, and after the blood has coagulated, mixing the serum which rises to the surface with more diphtheria poison—the resultant "scientific" mixture being TOXIN-ANTITOXIN!

It should be understood that the manufacture (from worn out horses) of Serums and Anti-toxins generally is an enormously lucrative commercial undertaking, and, as a well-known statesman recently remarked in reference to another "vast trade organisation" which threatens to endanger the public health—

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

[It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.]

EASTER MORNING.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

THERE are many systems of religion in the world. Each presents its credentials to the human family. There is much to be said in favour of many of them. Great convocations of men of all faiths, and of all races, have been gathered for the purpose of studying comparative religions.

What are the essential credentials of the Christian faith? By what marks is it distinguished from, and by what fact does it demonstrate its superiority to, other systems of faith?

1. Shall we make reply: By the spirit which it invokes, namely, the spirit of love and self-sacrifice for the sake of others? Truly this is an ideal which is highest. If other systems have it in essence, and in degree, as clearly marked as has the Christian faith, then such other systems may compete in excellence of spirit. Is this an open question? or may we give to Christianity the palm because of the spirit which gives to it life?

2. Shall we make reply: By the excellence of its standard of morals? "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye also unto them." Nothing in morals can be higher than this perhaps. Is it equalled elsewhere? We find the negative of the statement, also excellent: "Whatsoever ye would not that men should do to you, do ye not to them." Is this equal to the positive rule? It will be clear that it is not. Because of the Golden Rule, shall we give the palm to the Christian faith which inculcates it?

3. Shall we say? in positive knowledge of God. The Christian Gospel brings to us the personal knowledge and contact with a Person, of whom it is well said "No man hath seen God at any time, the only begotten Son which is in the bosom of the Father He hath revealed Him." Other systems, and their teachers, have taught of God, and by such teaching have endeavoured to lead men to a conception of Him. But Jesus Christ has revealed God to us incarnate in the flesh. Answering the appeal of Philip, "Lord, shew us the Father, and it sufficeth us," Jesus replied, "Hast thou been so long time with Me and yet hast thou not known Me, Philip. He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father: how sayest thou then, Shew us the Father. Believest thou not that I am in the Father and the Father in Me. . . ." In the first chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews we read of Jesus "Who being the brightness of His glory, and the express image of His person."

Thus is God revealed in the flesh, in the person of Jesus Christ, the Son of God.

No other system of religion has so manifested the Father, therefore we give the palm to the Christian faith for this very real manifestation of the Personality of God.

4. Shall we say further? The Christian faith brings the believer into conscious personal relationship with God. Said Our Lord Jesus Christ, "No man cometh unto Me except the Father draw him." Said He again, "No man cometh unto the Father but by Me." And again, "If any man love Me, My Father will love him, and we will come and make our abode with him." Yet once again, "If I go not away the Comforter will not come to you; but if I depart, I will send Him unto you. And when He is come, He shall teach you. . . ."

Yet once again, "Behold, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

Thus the individual person, who sincerely believes in Christ, the Son of God, is brought into the most intimate and continuous relationship with the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost.

Digitized by Google

Is not the Christian faith unique in that it introduces the believer into this living fellowship?

5. Once more we say, the Christian faith brings to the believer the biological experience of the new birth into the family and household of God. This is not a matter of adoption in which a person of alien family and race is brought into the family circle and accorded the privileges of sonship as though he were a son; it is a birth from above into the family and household of God as matter of fact and real as birth into the family of man.

Thus it is declared, "To as many as receive Him to them gave He power to become the sons of God, which were born . . . of God."

The Christian faith transcends all other systems of faith, in that it brings to the believer the privilege of such a biological entrance into the family of God.

6. There is a demonstration, however, which though not more real than that of which we have just spoken, is more spectacular, and therefore more impressive to the mind of men. The Person of Our Lord is presented to us in the vivid pictorial phrasing of the first chapter of Revelation. We are caused to see Him in His majesty; shining in His dazzling splendour; standing among the seven golden candlesticks; living, articulate, powerful. And He cries: "I AM HE THAT LIVETH AND WAS DEAD, AND BEHOLD I AM ALIVE FOR EVERMORE AND HAVE THE KEYS OF HELL AND OF DEATH."

What a startling meeting this is between mortal man and the Immortal Christ, Who also had been mortal! We know His birthplace; we have vivid conceptions of His infancy; we glimpse His boyhood; we watch His marvellous ministry; we follow the tragedy of Passion Week; we see Him extended on the Cross; we hear Him cry "It is finished"; we see Him give up the ghost and hear the whisper of the multitude, "He is dead." We go to the tomb; we inspect the viceregal seal; we see the guard on duty; the weeping disciples; the bereaved relatives; and share in their consternation and grief. We go to the sepulchre on Easter morning; we see the seal broken; the guard stretched upon the earth as dead men; the stone rolled away; the grave-clothes in the sepulchre. The place is lightened by the presence of two heavenly visitors who enquire, "Why seek ye the living among the dead? He is not here; He is risen. Come, see the place where the Lord lay." What an amazing statement of what an amazing fact!

Easter morning has settled the controversy in comparative religion. Moses lived, carried out his wonderful mission, and died. Buddha lived, instituted his great organisation, and died. Confucius and Zoroaster gave forth their doctrines, and died. Mahomet instituted his organisation, and established his faith, and died. Every other great religious leader lived, and laboured, and died. There was no rending of the tomb; there was no revelation of resurrected presence and power. "There was no voice nor any that answered." But Our Lord declares, I lived; I laboured; I died; but I rose again, and "led captivity captive." "I am He that liveth, and was dead; and, Behold, I am alive for evermore."

Across the dark chasm of the grave and the place of the dead His voice rings out to every faithful follower who is living, and who is labouring, and who shall die—unless the translation experience intervenes—"BECAUSE I LIVE YE SHALL LIVE ALSO." Thus the Christian alone is privileged to follow a living Leader, Who has vanquished death, and "brought life and immortality to light" through the Gospel.

Let the triumph of the Easter morning which was, which saw the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, foreshadow the glory of the Easter morning which shall be, when you, and I, and every faithful believer, shall also be able to say "I lived; I died; and, behold, I am alive for evermore through the grace of God, and the gift of God, which is everlasting life."

THE LAW OF THE LORD, OR THE COMMON LAW.—XIII.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

A.D. 1—1 B.C.

LET us now come to the time of the Advent of Our Lord. At that time, the beginning of the Christian era, the law was in force in Britain contained ecclesiastically in the doctrines and ordinances of the Druids, and nationally in the code of Mulmutius.

The beginnings of Druidic doctrines were perhaps the earliest in the West, and perhaps also in the East. They had their beginnings in pre-Mosaic days, and were Patriarchal in essence. The knowledge and worship of the Triune God was held and taught. The administration of justice and the preservation of peace was the duty of the Druids. The spirit and doctrine of the Druids seems to have been more in unison with the Christian faith than was that of the Jews at Jerusalem. The latter bitterly opposed and rejected the Christ and His doctrine. The Druids gladly received both, as the long-expected fulfilment of their faith and hope. It is impossible to say just where the Druid faith ended and the Christian faith succeeded.

All the fables of human sacrifices and so forth are, as far as is yet known, absolutely without foundation; and are directly contrary to the known laws and spirit of Druid worship.

The National laws as then administered were the laws which had been codified by Mulmutius five centuries before Christ. All this is well established as the condition of the highly organised and well administered Kingdom of Britain at the beginning of the Christian era.

500 B.C.

Let us now proceed backward through the centuries to 500 B.C.

We are still in England, and, contrary to the teaching of scholars who ought to have known better, instead of a land of "skin-clad savages," we find it a land of law and order, occupied by a God-fearing people. It was at this time that King Mulmutius undertook to codify the law of the land.

The fact is manifest that the law was not introduced into Britain at this time. It was a time of re-coding of the law. The fact that the law was present in such form as to permit of re-coding, and that it had reached the condition which demanded a restatement, tells of a law which had grown old in the land at that time.

Always when there has been a new codification of the law there has been a revival of interest in the law. This interest is usually stirred up by one of two processes: sometimes by both. One process which stirs interest is a great missionary effort by which the law is sent to other lands. Now we know that the fifth and sixth centuries before Christ constituted a great missionary era both as to the law, and as to religion. Buddha, "the Lion of the Saxons," had undertaken his great mission in the East; Zoroaster did his work in the middle part of Asia; Ezekiel prophesied among captive Israel; Daniel and his associates in Babylon and Medo-Persia; and the law-givers and philosophers of Greece laid the foundation of her law code and philosophy. Jeremiah, after prophesying in Jerusalem to the end, carried his message to the British Isles. By these activities religion and law received a great incentive throughout the world.

The other process is the arrival of missionaries of the Gospel and of the law. A great migration to Britain from Israel and from Judah, consisting of refugees from the invasion of Israel and Judah by Assyria, and then of Judah by Babylon, arrived about this time in Britain.

These brought new zeal for the sacred Scriptures, and for the law of God. Among those who so fled for refuge from the Babylon power was Jeremiah and the daughter of King Zedekiah. According to ancient Irish and other annals, these arrived in Ireland by way of Spain. This immigration probably explains that great event, the codification of the law, by Mulmutius in England, his interest having been awakened by contact with these devotees of the Divine law. His code has been called the foundation and the bulwark of English liberties.

About this era, as we have said, Buddha in India and Zoroaster in Persia were establishing their great systems. It is significant that Mulmutius should then be re-coding the law of Britain. In the same general period the Jews gave to their own race the beginnings of the Targums and Talmuds which recast the Divine laws for them. It will be well to compare the cast-iron form of the Talmudic laws, with their rigid control in the physical, mental and moral life, with the simple statements of principle which form the Mulmutius code. The latter are free, and clean. The former constitute such a burden as no person or nation can bear, as Our Lord declared. We shall include some of the triads which incorporate the principles established in the code. In order to make contact with authorities, we first quote the following:—

"St. Paul in Britain," pages 53-54. "About five centuries before the Christian era, its civil laws were codified by Dunwal Moelmud, the British Numa, and have since that period remained the common, unwritten, or native laws of the island, as distinguished from the Roman, the canon, and other codes of foreign introduction. These British or Druidic laws have been always justly regarded as the foundation and bulwark of British liberties."

Now follow some of the Mulmutine triads:—

"These are the three tests of Civil Liberty: equality of rights, equality of taxation, freedom to come and go.

"There are three causes which ruin a State: inordinate privileges, corruption of justice, national apathy.

"There are three things which cannot be considered solid longer than their foundations are solid: peace, property and law.

"Three things are indispensable to a true union of nations: sameness of laws, rights and language.

"There are three things free to all Britons: the forest, the unworked mine, the right of hunting wild creatures.

"There are three things that require the unanimous vote of the nation to effect: deposition of the sovereign, introduction of novelties in religion, suspension of law.

"There are three civil birthrights of every Briton: the right to go wherever he pleases; the right, wherever he is, to protection from his land and sovereign; the right of equal privileges and equal restrictions.

"There are three property birthrights of every Briton: five (British) acres of land for a home; the right of armorial bearings; the right of suffrage in the enacting of the laws, the male at twenty-one, the female on her marriage.

"There are three guarantees of society: security for life and limb; security for property; security of the rights of nature.

"There are three things the safety of which depends on that of the others: the sovereignty; national courage; just administration of the laws.

"There are three things which every Briton may legally be compelled to attend: the worship of God; military service; and the courts of law.

"There are three things free to every man (Briton or foreigner), the refusal of which no law will justify: water from spring, river or well; firing from a decayed tree; a block of stone not in use.

"There are three orders who are exempt from bearing arms: the bard, the judge, the graduate in law or religion. These represent God and His peace, and no weapon must ever be found in their hand.

"There are three whose power is kingly in law: the sovereign paramount of Britain over all Britain and its Isles; the princes palatine in their princedoms; the heads of the clans in their clans.

"There are three sacred things by which the conscience binds itself to truth: the name of God; the rod of him who offers up prayers to God; the joined right hand.

"There are three persons who have a right to public maintenance: the old; the babe; the foreigner who cannot speak the British tongue."

These laws of Mulmutius are briefly summarised by Spencer:

"Then made he lawes; which some men say
Were unto him revealed in vision,
By which he freed the Traveller's highway,
The Churches' part, the Ploughman's portion;
Restraining stealth, and strong extortion,
The gracious Numa of great Britanny,
For all his dayes, the chief dominion
By strength was wielded without policy.
Therefore he first wore crown of gold for dignity."

After a memorable reign of forty years Mulmutius died, and was interred on the White Mound in Caer Troia. His eldest son, Belinus, succeeded him, and completed the roads his father began. A law was made throwing open these roads to all nations and foreigners, and placing them on the same footing of security as the river and the sanctuaries. "There are three things free to a country and its borders—the rivers, the roads, and the place of worship. These are under the protection of God and His peace. Whoever on or within them draws weapons against any one is a criminal." In this law originated the term "the King's Highway."*

Thus we are brought back to the middle of the millennium which separates Christ from David, the King of Israel, but we are still in Britain.

"THE GROUND OF ISRAEL'S REDEMPTION AND RECONCILIATION."

Part III.

Address at Headquarters by Mrs. Tydeman Chilvers.

Thank God the time is come when that veil is being removed and the blindness is being withered up and the hardness softened; when at last there is an awakening amongst God's chosen people, to realise the wonderful deliverance that Jesus Christ has brought to them. Shall we turn to 2 Cor. v, 18:—

"And all things are of God, Who hath reconciled us to Himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation; to wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation. Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us; we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God."

Brought back into friendship with God on the grounds of the Redeemer's Sacrifice! There I see Calvary overturning the Fall. At the "Fall" man was separated from friendship with God, for Adam before had "walked and talked with" his Maker; they had conversed about the works of His hand; Adam had evidently entered into God's plan, understanding and co-operating in that great scheme unfolded before his eyes. Our first father in those days—for how long we do not know—reigned in life, having dominion over all things upon the earth; but because of sin, alas, all was lost. But in Christ all is regained and man is brought back into friendship with God and "reconciled unto God." "Listen—'I have called you friends.' 'Ye are My friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you.'"

"Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea, rather that is risen again, Who is even at the right hand of God, Who also maketh intercession for us."

What is God's message to Israel to-day? Repent. "Cast away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed . . . for why will ye die, O House of Israel?" "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord." ". . . but now (God) commandeth all men everywhere to repent." (Acts xxvi, 20.) "Only acknowledge thy iniquities" for "if we confess our sin, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sin." "Return unto Me, I have blotted out thy transgressions as a thick cloud, and I will remember them no more for ever." . . . "I have cast all thy sins behind My back" . . . and He says to the heart that comes to Him, "I will pardon all thy iniquities . . . I will heal all thy diseases . . . I will restore all the years that the locusts have eaten . . . I will deliver and set you free."

Again, this is the message to Israel to-day: "Go through, go through the gates; prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people." (Isaiah lxii, 10.) "Take up the stumbling block out of the way of My people, saith the Lord." What are the stumbling blocks? I come across many, I think they may be chiefly unbelief, doubt, prejudice, indifference, ignorance of the Word of the Lord. "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge, saith the Lord."

Surely the time has come for Israel to recognise her own identity, that her long years of captivity are ended, and God is drawing aside the veil of darkness which has been clouding her mind—the time when she shall know her King; when she shall know that her King is her Saviour: "Whom the heavens must receive until the time of restoration of all things," and as Jesus said, "When ye see these things begin to come to pass, lift up your heads, your redemption (loosing away) draweth nigh."

My friend, has not the time come when from the signs of the times on every hand we may conclude that the coming of The King draweth nigh? The time is come! The time is up; "Up, this is the day!" Is He not at the doors? Then must we not impart the knowledge God has given to us? To prepare the way of the Lord: to take up the stumbling blocks out of the way of His people by giving them light on the Word of God, opening up what has hitherto been hidden, showing the way to the Saviour, and pointing to the signs of His Coming.

Never let us forget that it is "Jesus," our heart's Best Beloved, Whom we are expecting. Some while ago, when I was speaking about His return, one in the audience left with the determination not to come again. Afterward I asked her the reason. She said "I felt positively frightened . . . and resented what you were saying." But she did come again, and on that occasion I was showing particularly Whom we were looking for; the Christ of the pierced hands and feet; He Whose hands were laid on the children's heads in blessing and caress; He to Whom we had been praying for help and comfort all the years; Who has been our Brother "born for adversity and Friend of the grey days—it is He Whom we are waiting for," I said. As I talked her heart began to glow and afterwards she remarked, "I see, I had quite forgotten that. When I realised it was 'Jesus' it made all the difference." Yes, it is Jesus Who is coming again; Our Blessed Lord and Saviour; Oh, we shall recognise Him, as the hymn says:—

"I shall know Him; I shall know Him—
By the print of the nails in His Hand."

Then I think that God's message to Israel to-day is that they heed His call to prayer. The Holy Spirit is promised to teach us of things to come. "He shall show you things to come." Are we asking Him? "Ask Me of things to come; concerning My sons and concerning the works of My hands (and I fain would say this with bated breath—it is so wonderful)—command ye Me." That is a call to prayer in these days for us, friends. "Call upon Me and I will answer thee, and shew thee great and mighty things which thou knowest not " ; " I will be enquired of by the House of Israel to do it for them, saith the Lord."

In the thirteenth of Romans the Apostle tells of the urgency, even in his time, of God's children rousing themselves to the imminence of His return. " Knowing the time, that it is high time to awake out of sleep."

In closing, may I remind you of Our Lord's words in Luke xxi, which is specially for everyone of us, knowing our own susceptibility in these days : " Heaven and earth shall pass away, but My words shall not pass away. And take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and the cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell upon the face of the whole earth. Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass and to stand before the Son of Man."

Yes, the Christ of the Cross ; the Christ of Calvary, Who by His precious Blood hath made us nigh unto God, IS coming again, it is "as certain as the dawn." The signs given us are with us to-day on every side, and as far as one can understand that which God's Word reveals should be in place at such a time is in place now to-day. " Lift up your heads, for your loosing draweth nigh." Let us not be too absorbed with the " excesses " of life, duties, sorrows, cares, which often are life's surfeit—that we be not overcharged—lest THAT DAY come upon us unawares. Rather, may He so count us worthy, that when He comes and calls, we shall be caught up unto Himself in the Glory, there to be with Him for ever and for ever.

What joy that He Who hath removed the barrier of Israel's sin and by His own sacrifice hath brought us into friendship and fellowship with God Himself is coming for us, and coming to this same earth which bears the print of His footsteps and His outpoured Blood, to reign over the whole world in righteousness and equity and in justice.

COME, LORD JESUS : COME QUICKLY. AMEN.

WHY WAS THE TWENTY-FIFTH OF DECEMBER CHOSEN AS A DAY ON WHICH TO CELEBRATE THE BIRTH OF CHRIST?

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

IN early times Christmas Day was kept on varying dates. Clement of Alexandria speaks of April 21st, or May 20th, as being days upon which the Nativity was celebrated. In the Eastern Church it was generally kept concurrently with the Epiphany, January 6th, there being a tradition that Our Lord was baptised on that day. St. Chrysostom, addressing the people of Antioch, says that ten years were not passed since they came to the true knowledge of the day of Christ's Birth, which they before kept on Epiphany until the Western Church enlightened them (Hom. xxxi, de Natali Christi ; also Hom. xxiv, de Bapt. Christ). Other Churches followed this example, but to this day the Armenian Church continues to celebrate Christmas and the Epiphany on January 6th. However, the observance of the Christmas Festival on December 25th in the Western Church is most ancient, since it dates from the end of the third or the beginning of the fourth century. At Antioch the change was not introduced until about the year A.D. 375. The earliest mention of the Festival of Christmas is in the calendar of Philocalus, which was drawn up at Rome in A.D. 336, in which the words are, " VIII. kal. jan., natus Christus in Betleem Judee," which means that " Christ was born in Bethlehem of Judæa on the twenty-fifth of December." In this same calendar December 25th is marked N. Invicti, i.e., Natalis Solis Invicti, i.e., the birthday of the Unconquered Sun. St. Augustine says, " Natus autem traditur octavo kalendas Januarias," which means that the current tradition was that Christ was born on the eighth of the calends of January, i.e., on the twenty-fifth of December (de Trinitate, lib. iv, 5). Bingham says, " Now, the original of this Festival is by many learned men carried as high as the age of the apostles," but has then to confess that he cannot verify this belief (Antiquities of Christian Church, Bk. XX, chap. iv).

So much for the evidence of the early acceptance of the date of Christmas Day. But when we come to consider why the twenty-fifth of December became recognised in the Western Church, a very interesting study is opened to us. The Venerable Bede tells us that " the ancient people of the Angli began the year on the twenty-fifth of December when we now celebrate the Birthday of the Lord ; and the very night which is now so holy to us, they called in their tongue modranecht (modra niht), that is, the mothers' night, by reason we suspect of the ceremonies which in that long night vigil they performed " (De Ratione Temporum, chap. xiii). The Anglo-Saxon Chronicle appears to call Christmas " the mass-night of midwinter."

But while there is no Biblical or authoritative tradition bearing on the actual day of Christ's Birth, there can be but little doubt but that the twenty-fifth of December was adopted partly as a result of, and partly as a counteraction against, the popular and widespread worship of Mithra. With us nowadays the winter solstice (the shortest day) falls on December 22nd, but in the Julian calendar the twenty-fifth of December was reckoned the winter solstice, a day which was regarded as the Nativity of the Sun, because the day begins to lengthen, and the power of the sun to increase from that turning-point of the solar year, as was noted by Pliny in his Natural History (xviii, 221). Now with the decline of the ancient world the old Persian deity Mithra clamoured for recognition and sovereignty in the West. All over the Roman Empire monuments of Mithraic worship have been found, scattered in profusion, testifying to the great popularity of this deity. We cannot here devote space to a definition and description of the Mithraic cult, but suffice it to say that the latter proved to be an ugly rival to Christianity. Strangely enough the Mithraic cult appears to have presented many points of resemblance both to the religion of Cybele (Rhea) " the Mother of the Gods " and to Christianity. It combined a solemn ritual with aspirations after moral purity and a hope of immortality. Yet, in spite of its resemblance, Mithraism was deeply antagonistic to the Christian Faith. Both religions were of Oriental origin ; they were propagated about the same time, and spread with equal rapidity on account of the same causes, i.e., the unity of the political world, and the debasement of its moral life. At the end of the second century each had advanced to the farthest limits of the Roman Empire, although Mithraism possessed greatest strength along the Danube and the Rhine, while Christianity throve especially in Asia and Africa. They came, however, into collision at Rome, in Africa, and in the Rhone Valley, when the struggle became the more obstinate in consequence of the numerous resemblances between the two religions.

Now Mithra was regularly identified by his worshippers with the Sun, who, as quoted above, was called "the Unconquered Sun" (Sol Invictus). Hence his nativity also fell on the twenty-fifth of December, the winter solstice. Sir James Frazer in his Golden Bough (Vol. IV, Adonis, Attis, Osiris, Book II, Chap. vi, pp. 195-203) says, "What considerations led the ecclesiastical authorities to institute the Festival of Christmas? The motives for the innovation are stated with great frankness by a Syrian writer, himself a Christian. 'The reason,' he tells us, 'why the fathers transferred the celebration of the sixth of January to the twenty-fifth of December was this. It was a custom of the heathen to celebrate on the same twenty-fifth of December the birthday of the Sun, at which they kindled lights in token of festivity. In these solemnities and festivities the Christians also took part. Accordingly when the doctors of the Church perceived that the Christians had a leaning to this Festival, they took counsel and resolved that the true Nativity should be solemnised on that day and the Festival of the Epiphany on the sixth of January. Accordingly, along with this custom, the practice has prevailed of kindling fires till the sixth.' The heathen origin of Christmas is plainly hinted at, if not tacitly admitted, by Augustine (Serm. cxc, 1) when he exhorts his Christian brethren not to celebrate that solemn day like the heathen on account of the sun, but on account of Him who made the sun. In like manner Leo the Great rebuked the pestilent belief that Christmas was solemnised because of the birth of the new sun, as it was called, and not because of the Nativity of Christ."

"Thus it appears," says Sir James Frazer, "that the Christian Church chose to celebrate the birthday of its Founder on the twenty-fifth of December in order to transfer the devotion of the heathen from the Sun to Him who was called The Sun of Righteousness."

As is well known from the ancient Martyrologies and Menologies it used to be the custom in early Christian times to celebrate the death-day (martyrdom) rather than the birthday of a saint, hence the word "natalicia," which meant the real birthday of the martyr, i.e., the day of his entrance into the fulness of life through martyrdom. For this reason it has been asserted that it was unusual for the early Church to celebrate the Nativity of Christ. But it is of interest to observe that as the Nativity of Christ was celebrated on the day of the winter solstice, so the Annunciation of the Virgin Mary has always been celebrated on the twenty-fifth of March, which was formerly regarded as the spring equinox. This day is still "Lady-Day" with us, although the actual spring equinox is now regarded as falling on March 22nd. For this reason the death and resurrection of Attis (the son of the Mother of the Gods) were officially celebrated in Rome on the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth of March—the original spring equinox—the most appropriate time for the revival of a god of vegetation who had been dead or sleeping throughout the winter. But there was an ancient and wide-spread tradition that Christ suffered on the twenty-fifth of March, and accordingly some Christians regularly celebrated the Crucifixion on that day without any regard to the state of the moon (see Prayer Book Rule, which says, "Easter Day on which the rest depend, is always the First Sunday after the Full Moon which happens upon, or next after the Twenty-First Day of March; and if the Full Moon happens upon a Sunday, Easter Day is the Sunday after"). That Christ suffered approximately at the period of the ancient spring festival is obvious, and in harmony with all natural ideas and Semitic thought, since He was the Paschal Lamb, and could only have died during the lambing season. If therefore the Church was right in fixing the Annunciation at the time of the spring festival or equinox, it follows that Christ's Birth must, in the course of nature, have occurred nine months later, i.e., on the twenty-fifth of December. Thus Christ, according to the above, was born on the day of the Nativity of the Sun, and died and rose again at the time of the spring equinox. "But the resurrection of Attis, who combined in himself," says Sir James Frazer, "the characters of the divine Father and the divine Son, was officially celebrated at Rome on the same day (March 25th)." Now another name for Attis was Papas (Diodorus Siculus, iii, 58, 4), a name which corresponds with the modern title of "Pope," the supreme head of the Church of Rome. So, "taken altogether," says Sir James Frazer, "the coincidences of the Christian with the heathen festivals are too close and too numerous to be accidental. They mark the compromise which the Church in the hour of its triumph was compelled to make with its vanquished yet still dangerous rivals. The inflexible Protestantism of the primitive missionaries, with their fiery denunciations of heathendom, had been exchanged for the supple policy, the easy tolerance, the comprehensive charity of shrewd ecclesiastics, who clearly perceived that if Christianity was to conquer the world it could only do so by relaxing the too rigid principles of its Founder, by widening a little the narrow gate which leads to salvation. . . . Now the Easter rites still observed in Greece, Sicily and Southern Italy bear in some respects a striking resemblance to the rites of Adonis, and I have suggested that the Church may have consciously adapted the new festival (Easter) to its heathen predecessor for the sake of winning souls to Christ. . . . When we remember that the festival of St. George in April has replaced the ancient pagan festival of the Parilia*; that the festival of St. John the Baptist in June has succeeded to a heathen Midsummer festival of water; that the festival of the Assumption of the Virgin in August has ousted the festival of Diana; that the Feast of All Souls in November is a continuation of an old heathen feast of the dead; and that the Nativity of Christ Himself was assigned to the winter solstice in December because that day was deemed the Nativity of the Sun; we can hardly be thought rash or unreasonable in conjecturing that the other cardinal Festival of the Christian Church—the solemnisation of Easter—may have been in like manner, and, from motives of edification, adapted to a similar celebration of the Phrygian god Attis at the vernal equinox."

* The Parilia was an ancient herdsmen's festival (Ovid, Fasti, iv, 731-805), and was regarded as the birthday celebration of Rome which was supposed to have been founded on that same day. It was a great Bonfire Festival, when the shepherds leaped three times across the bonfires of hay and straw.

Mr. Jenkins, a resident at Nagpore, India, for twenty years, said: "The rise and progress of our power in India have been rapid and marvellous. Unlike other Empires, ours has been, in a great degree, forced upon us; built up at almost every step against our own deliberate resolution to avoid it; in the face, I may say, of every opposition which could be given to it by the legislature, His Majesty's Government, and by the Court of Directors. Every successive Governor-General sent from this country—including Lord Cornwallis, who went to India under the Act containing the well-known denunciation against conquest and extension of dominion—Lord Wellesley, Lord Minto, Lord Hastings, and Lord Amherst, have seen reason to enter into wars and negotiations, defensive in their objects, but generally terminating in that very extension of territory and dominance which was dreaded."

The Neue Freie Presse of Vienna, in 1885, says: "The rôle which for centuries past has been increasingly imposed upon England involves many tasks requiring intellectual, physical, and economic powers, such as, up to the present time, no other nation has been called upon to display. The Empire, ruled by the Queen of England and Empress of India, far surpasses in extent the ancient Empire of Rome; but, in spite of its extent and in spite of Ireland being an open wound, the only real danger to England comes from Russia, and to prevent this a magnificent system of fortresses is being erected on the Indian frontier. What, however, will prove far more important, if corroborated, is the news of an alliance between Great Britain and China."

The Frenchman, Paul Bert, says: "From Port Said, England alone reigns supreme in her language and her commerce. Everywhere I saw her flag waving—at Aden, Colombo, Singapore, and even in the Suez Canal, which was created by French genius and with the money of Frenchmen."

Dr. Jacob Grimm, the great German linguist, says of the English language: "Its highly spiritual genius and wonderful development and condition have been the result of a surprisingly intimate union of the two noblest of modern Europe, the Teutonic and the Romance.

"It is well known in what relation these two stand to one another in the English tongue—the former supplying in far larger proportion the material groundwork, the latter the spiritual conceptions.

"In truth, the English language, which by mere accident has produced and upborne the greatest and most prominent poet of modern times, as distinguished from ancient classical poetry (I can only mean Shakespeare), may with all right, and like the English people, appears destined hereafter to prevail with a sway, more extensive even than its present, over all portions of the globe.

"For in wealth, good sense, and closeness of structure, no other of the languages, at the present day spoken, deserves to be compared with it. Not even our German, which is torn, even as we are torn, and must first rid itself of many defects before it can enter boldly into the lists as a competitor with the English."

Dr. Schroer, a noted German educator, says: "There is already a universal language, and that is English. It is easily learned, and has an assured position as the future means of international intercourse."

The learned Craike says: "The greatest communities of the future, whether they are seated beyond the Atlantic or the Pacific, promise to be communities of English blood and English speech."

Mrs. Annie Besant says: "We make assertions and advance claims in our Prayer Book that have nothing whatever to do with our race unless those people are correct who assert that the English nation is descended from the lost Ten Tribes of Israel."

The London Times of 1876 says: "The greatest and noblest Empire that Providence has permitted to exist on the face of the habitable globe—the British Empire—is still growing, still developing, still moving and working towards an unborn form and majesty."

The following are the words of Professor Seely: "England has not become what she is in virtue of her own power or calculating sagacity. We seem to have conquered and peopled half the world in a fit of absence of mind."

KINGDOM GOSPEL-JUSTICE AND PEACE

By H. E. Turner.

In the 7th of January number, under the heading of Righteousness, we defined the aim and object of the "Gospel of the Kingdom" to be the establishment on earth of righteousness, justice and peace, during the approaching, unending government of Jesus Christ, when King on the throne of David. Righteousness, justice and peace are attributes of Our Lord: "The Lord the righteous judge": the "Prince of Peace." The attainment of peace throughout the earth will be effected by the righteousness and judgments of Our Lord. God alone is righteous, man cannot attain to that perfection, however good he may be; nevertheless man is able, by Divine grace, to perform acts of righteousness, bad though he may be, and, subject to the limits of human nature, man is able to do justice and to make peace.

Justice.

God requires the administration of justice. "Hear the causes between your brethren and judge righteously between every man and his brother and the stranger that is with him. Ye shall not respect persons in judgment; but ye shall hear the small as well as the great; ye shall not be afraid of the face of man; for the judgment is God's; and the cause that is too hard for you, bring it unto Me and I will hear it." (Deut i, 16.) The administration of justice has, through the ages, been one of man's highest achievements, it rebuffs the imaginary theory of evolution; from the time of Moses the Kingdom has been remarkable for equitable adjudication, until to-day the Gospel Kingdom judgments of the British courts, throughout the advanced to the farthest limits of the Roman Empire, although Mithraism possessed greatest strength along the Danube and the Rhine, while Christianity throve especially in Asia and Africa. They came, however, into collision at Rome, in Africa, and in the Rhone Valley, when the struggle became the more obstinate in consequence of the numerous resemblances between the two religions.

Now Mithra was regularly identified by his worshippers with the Sun, who, as quoted above, was called "the Unconquered Sun" (Sol Invictus). Hence his nativity also fell on the twenty-fifth of December, the winter solstice. Sir James Frazer in his Golden Bough (Vol. IV, Adonis, Attis, Osiris, Book II, Chap. vi, pp. 195-203) says, "What considerations led the ecclesiastical authorities to institute the Festival of Christmas? The motives for the innovation are stated with great frankness by a Syrian writer, himself a Christian. 'The reason,' he tells us, 'why the fathers transferred the celebration of the sixth of January to the twenty-fifth of December was this. It was a custom of the heathen to celebrate on the same twenty-fifth of December the birthday of the Sun, at which they kindled lights in token of festivity. In these solemnities and festivities the Christians also took part. Accordingly when the doctors of the Church perceived that the Christians had a leaning to this Festival, they took counsel and resolved that the true Nativity should be solemnised on that day and the Festival of the Epiphany on the sixth of January. Accordingly, along with this custom, the practice has prevailed of kindling fires till the sixth.' The heathen origin of Christmas is plainly hinted at, if not tacitly admitted, by Augustine (Serm. cxc, 1) when he exhorts his Christian brethren not to celebrate that solemn day like the heathen on account of the sun, but on account of Him who made the sun. In like manner Leo the Great rebuked the pestilent belief that Christmas was solemnised because of the birth of the new sun, as it was called, and not because of the Nativity of Christ."

"Thus it appears," says Sir James Frazer, "that the Christian Church chose to celebrate the birthday of its Founder on the twenty-fifth of December in order to transfer the devotion of the heathen from the Sun to Him who was called The Sun of Righteousness."

As is well known from the ancient Martyrologies and Menologies it used to be the custom in early Christian times to celebrate the death-day (martyrdom) rather than the birthday of a saint, hence the word "natalicia," which meant the real birthday of the martyr, i.e., the day of his entrance into the fulness of life through martyrdom. For this reason it has been asserted that it was unusual for the early Church to celebrate the Nativity of Christ. But it is of interest to observe that as the Nativity of Christ was celebrated on the day of the winter solstice, so the Annunciation of the Virgin Mary has always been celebrated on the twenty-fifth of March, which was formerly regarded as the spring equinox. This day is still "Lady-Day" with us, although the actual spring equinox is now regarded as falling on March 22nd. For this reason the death and resurrection of Attis (the son of the Mother of the Gods) were officially celebrated in Rome on the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth of March—the original spring equinox—the most appropriate time for the revival of a god of vegetation who had been dead or sleeping throughout the winter. But there was an ancient and wide-spread tradition that Christ suffered on the twenty-fifth of March, and accordingly some Christians regularly celebrated the Crucifixion on that day without any regard to the state of the moon (see Prayer Book Rule, which says, "Easter Day on which the rest depend, is always the First Sunday after the Full Moon which happens upon, or next after the Twenty-First Day of March; and if the Full Moon happens upon a Sunday, Easter Day is the Sunday after"). That Christ suffered approximately at the period of the ancient spring festival is obvious, and in harmony with all natural ideas and Semitic thought, since He was the Paschal Lamb, and could only have died during the lambing season. If therefore the Church was right in fixing the Annunciation at the time of the spring festival or equinox, it follows that Christ's Birth must, in the course of nature, have occurred nine months later, i.e., on the twenty-fifth of December. Thus Christ, according to the above, was born on the day of the Nativity of the Sun, and died and rose again at the time of the spring equinox. "But the resurrection of Attis, who combined in himself," says Sir James Frazer, "the characters of the divine Father and the divine Son, was officially celebrated at Rome on the same day (March 25th)." Now another name for Attis was Papas (Diodorus Siculus, iii, 58, 4), a name which corresponds with the modern title of "Pope," the supreme head of the Church of Rome. So, "taken altogether," says Sir James Frazer, "the coincidences of the Christian with the heathen festivals are too close and too numerous to be accidental. They mark the compromise which the Church in the hour of its triumph was compelled to make with its vanquished yet still dangerous rivals. The inflexible Protestantism of the primitive missionaries, with their fiery denunciations of heathendom, had been exchanged for the supple policy, the easy tolerance, the comprehensive charity of shrewd ecclesiastics, who clearly perceived that if Christianity was to conquer the world it could only do so by relaxing the too rigid principles of its Founder, by widening a little the narrow gate which leads to salvation. . . . Now the Easter rites still observed in Greece, Sicily and Southern Italy bear in some respects a striking resemblance to the rites of Adonis, and I have suggested that the Church may have consciously adapted the new festival (Easter) to its heathen predecessor for the sake of winning souls to Christ. . . . When we remember that the festival of St. George in April has replaced the ancient pagan festival of the Parilia*; that the festival of St. John the Baptist in June has succeeded to a heathen Midsummer festival of water; that the festival of the Assumption of the Virgin in August has ousted the festival of Diana; that the Feast of All Souls in November is a continuation of an old heathen feast of the dead; and that the Nativity of Christ Himself was assigned to the winter solstice in December because that day was deemed the Nativity of the Sun; we can hardly be thought rash or unreasonable in conjecturing that the other cardinal Festival of the Christian Church—the solemnisation of Easter—may have been in like manner, and, from motives of edification, adapted to a similar celebration of the Phrygian god Attis at the vernal equinox."

* The Parilia was an ancient herdsmen's festival (Ovid, Fasti, iv, 731-805), and was regarded as the birthday celebration of Rome which was supposed to have been founded on that same day. It was a great Bonfire Festival, when the shepherds leaped three times across the bonfires of hay and straw.

Empire, have the witness and admiration of nearly the whole world, but the ultimate purpose of Kingdom Gospel is the establishment, under Our Lord, of universal justice. "Justice and judgment are the habitation of Thy throne" (or establishment, see margin, Psalm lxxxix, 14) "For He cometh to judge the earth: He shall judge the earth with His righteousness, and the people with His truth." The result of absolute justice by the judgments of Jesus Christ the righteous will be everlasting.

PEACE.

During the meantime, "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God." Surely among the blessings contained in the Sermon on the Mount one of the highest blessings was awarded to the peacemakers. The Sermon on the Mount was retrospective as well as future, it is for all time. "For I the Lord change not." Has there ever been a time when peace was more eulogised and desired than the present?

Jesus Christ bestowed on His disciples a priceless gift: "Peace I leave with you, My peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you." There is a peace of mind which no power on earth can disturb or dismay; such, it may be imagined, was possessed by that eminent soldier, Earl Haig. "The peace of God, which passeth all understanding."

The word peacemakers has many inferences: on occasions, while human nature remains what it is, the restoration of peace can only be brought about by force of arms; the making of peace, in relation to war and lawlessness, was displayed in the history of Israel. In the wilderness the Almighty formed Israel into an army for war; and in Deut. xx gave directions for battle. David sang, "Blessed be the Lord my strength, which teacheth my hands to war and my fingers to fight." Balak was told that "Israel shall do valiantly." Thus saith the Lord to Israel, "Thou art My battle-axe and weapons of war." Jesus said to His disciples: "And when ye shall hear of wars and rumours of war be ye not troubled; for such things must needs be." Scripture illustrates the vindication of war, when waged in the cause of mercy, justice and peace, as when men, by faith, "Quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of aliens." (Heb. xi, 34.) The personal application of peacemakers may be considerably misunderstood and misapplied: it is not the feeble plea of the conscientious objector, in a time of national peril, whereby he evades duty and danger, by the profession of peace principles, but the warrior's manly resistance to lawless violence, that denotes a peacemaker. Let the advocates of "peace at any price" beware of being found blind, unfaithful watchmen and condemned, "For when they shall say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them." (1 Thess. iv, 3.) Deeds are required as well as words to make a peacemaker. "The works of righteousness shall be peace." "And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace." Not only individuals, but nations and associations may be peacemakers. Two leagues of nations are in existence in the benign interests of peace, one of human origin, diverse in race, subject to conflicting aims and ambitions, human frailties and failure: the other, created by God Himself and imperishable, composed of a nation and company of Israel nations, a league, already of world-wide reputation for justice and peace as expressed by the proverbial Pax Britannica. The policy of the British Empire is the maintenance of peace. "I want peace," said Nelson, "which is only to be had through our invincible Navy." Statesmanship takes its part in the great work: in 1878 Disraeli loosened the grasp of Russia on the throat of Turkey and brought back "peace with honour" from the Berlin congress. Of the makers of industrial peace, space will not permit us to write, nor of those happy individuals, of all degrees and nationalities, entitled to be called the "children of God."

One thing is clear, that absolute, unlimited peace on earth will not be attainable until that arch war-maker, our great adversary the devil, "prince of the powers of the air," and "of this world," wicked, malignant, deceitful, fierce and cruel, shall be no longer able to pervert the minds and hearts of mankind by his diabolical influence. Again, during the meantime, the peacemakers, and particularly those of the Gospel of the Kingdom, with its national and judicial activities, will be diffusing the blessings of the Abrahamic covenant among mankind in general, in preparation for the return of Our Lord. "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as you have seen Him go into heaven." "And His feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east": "and His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of His government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon His Kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this."

THE GARDEN TOMB.

"Now in proximity to the spot where He was crucified, there was a Garden; and in this Garden there was a new Tomb in which no one had ever been placed. There, then, the Tomb being near, they deposited Jesus, on account of the Preparation Day of the Judeans." (John xix, 41-42. Ferrar Fenton.)

IF the exact site of the CRUCIFIXION can be fixed, then the precise site of the GARDEN TOMB and scene of the RESURRECTION may be judged with almost certain accuracy. Ferrar Fenton's inimitable rendering of John xix, 41-42, brings out some of the points of evidence with peculiar clearness. The use of the expression "in proximity to," and again "there, then, the Tomb being near," are of great significance, and strongly support the claim that the GARDEN TOMB site rather than the CHURCH of the HOLY SEPULCHRE marks the true place where Our LORD lay and rose again, triumphantly, from the dead.

The identification of this site is of supreme importance, for it must be, in a very special sense, the most sacred spot in all the earth.

That this fact is yearly commanding wider recognition there can be no doubt. The recent publication of an article in the Daily Express on this tremendous subject may be taken as a striking sign of this ever-widening interest. The following extract may interest those who failed to see the original :—

Digitized by Google

"The CHURCH of the HOLY SEPULCHRE in JERUSALEM, which has been accepted for sixteen centuries as the traditional site of the RESURRECTION, will be regarded more critically this EASTERTIDE by visitors to the HOLY LAND, for new and sensational discoveries made in JERUSALEM have strengthened the belief already held by many archæologists that the SKULL HILL on the Jericho Road, near the DAMASCUS GATE, is

THE TRUE GOLGOTHA,

and that the tomb in the garden adjoining, known as the GARDEN TOMB, is the real scene of the RESURRECTION.

"Two of the new discoveries which may revolutionise theories that have been held for centuries are the recent location of the third wall of HEROD AGRIPPA, and the chance finding of a small carved stone.

"The Third Wall was built by HEROD AGRIPPA about ten years after the death of CHRIST to enclose the straggling suburb that had grown up to the north of the city. When the British engineers were making the new road leading from the DAMASCUS GATE, they discovered traces of this wall, and now the Palestine Exploration Society has uncovered it further and has definitely located its position for a considerable distance.

"This fixes the Second Wall, outside of which CHRIST suffered, as being identical with the present north wall. If this is so, the ground covered by the CHURCH of the HOLY SEPULCHRE must always have been within the city.

"The second important discovery was the finding of a small carved stone by Miss Hussey, who is in charge of the Garden Tomb. This, on being cleaned and examined, proved to be a small shrine stone of a Temple of Venus. It was unearthed some thirty feet from the entrance to the tomb.

"The discovery is of immense value when it is remembered that HADRIAN, after his conquest of the HOLY CITY in A.D. 135, decided to desecrate once and for all the places most sacred both to JEW and CHRISTIAN. To this end he built a Temple of Jupiter on the site of SOLOMON'S TEMPLE, and a Temple to Venus at the scene of the RESURRECTION.

"Almost two hundred years later CONSTANTINE, the first CHRISTIAN EMPEROR, destroyed this heathen temple, and built a magnificent basilica in honour of the Resurrection and to make amends for Hadrian's sacrilege. The Church of the Holy Sepulchre stands to-day on the spot where Constantine built his cathedral almost in the centre of the present city.

"It seems not improbable that CONSTANTINE deliberately chose to build, not on the actual spot, but within the walls and under the protection of their fortifications."

The writer finally concludes :—"Assuming that the SKULL HILL is the place where the CRUCIFIXION was held, then it must be obvious that the must be near. St. John says : 'In the place where He was crucified there was a garden, and in the garden a new sepulchre.'

"It is a remarkable fact that this tomb answering the scriptural description has been found in a garden on the slopes of the SKULL HILL. It is rock hewn and unfinished. It has been at some time closed with a stone. It is comparatively isolated and seems suitable as a private burial place.

"In addition there are signs that a building once stood over the tomb. Traces of two arches still exist ; there is also a fragment of stone paving and the remains of a column. Above the door are three small recesses which are usually found in heathen temples. All these seem to indicate the fact that Hadrian's Temple of Venus may have stood here, and the further finding of the shrine stone strengthens the theory.

"To-day this tomb—perhaps the most holy place in the world—is in the charge of a representative of the Garden Tomb Association."

The Garden Tomb Committee are charged with the responsibility for the upkeep of this GARDEN and the preservation of the TOMB. Subscriptions or donations would be most gratefully received by the Hon. Treasurer :—A. R. Heaver, Esq., c/o 6, Buckingham Gate, London, S.W.1. A Booklet, beautifully illustrated, giving further interesting information, may be obtained. Price 2s. 1½d., post free.

THE PROMISES TO THE FATHERS.

THE LAND OF THE COVENANT.

BY THE LATE REV. MARTIN LYMAN STREATOR, M.A. (U.S.A.)

"I will appoint a place for my people Israel, and will plant them, that they may dwell in their own place, and be moved no more."

The divine selection of the Islands of the West as a suitable place for the planting of the chosen people dawned upon the minds of men centuries ago. The ancients seem to have had a just conception of the meaning of the prophecies relating to it, without understanding the method of their historical fulfilment. In modern times Sir Nathaniel Bacon, writing in A.D. 1647, said in the "History of the English Constitution" :

> "It was long before the Son of God was inwombed, and while as yet Providence seemed to close only with the Jewish nation, and to hover over it, as a choice picked place from all the earth, that, with a gracious eye surveying the forsaken condition of other nations, it glanced upon this island, both thoughts and words reflected on isles, isles of the Gentiles, isles afar off (Isa. xlii, 4 ; li, 5 ; lx, 9 ; lxvi, 19), as if amongst them the Lord of all the earth had found out one place that should be to Him as the ring of this terrestrial globe : and if the ways of Providence may be looked upon as a gloss of those prophecies, we must confess that this island was conceived in the womb thereof long before it was manifested to the world. To recover the forgotten ways of past Providence is no less difficult than to search out the bowels of future promises."

The holy promise of God which He made sure in His everlasting Covenant with David concerning the appointed place prepared for the planting of Israel, and the prophetical statements of its location in the Islands of the West at the ends of the earth, is a demonstration that these islands were conceived in the mind of the God of revelation, prepared for their purpose by the God of nature, and appointed for His people Israel by the God of the Covenant, long before they were manifested to the world. God is a grand strategist. Palestine was the best place to plant Israel for influencing the great nations of antiquity. The British Islands was the best place to plant the elect race for the colonising of the world. In order to the fulfilment of the promises given to the fathers for the world-wide development of Israel, the eternal God, who comprehended all ages in His vision, promised King David, while the chosen people were yet in Palestine, another place, appointed by Him for their planting, in which they never more should be wasted, and from which they nevermore should be plucked up. In two prophecies given through Isaiah, Jehovah designates this land of the Covenant as "the Islands of the West," and shows by the description relating to them that they are located at the ends of the earth, the extremity of the old world. Going forth from hence "they passed over the sea" (Isa. xvi, 8), they established colonies in "the desolate heritages of the earth" (Isa. xlix, 8), that they might accomplish the divine purpose in filling "the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii, 6). Israel, the mother of nations, the many nations of prophecy, lost her first colonies, but retains all the others as her own in one great Company of Nations (Isa. xlix, 19-21). But the sceptic exclaims, this is too definite and specific for prophecy! Indeed! How do you know how specific prophecy should be? Judge prophecy by what it says and its fulfilment in history; not by your inner consciousness of what it ought to be. Nature was not understood till, discarding human theories, we studied Nature herself, and listened reverently to her own voice. Prophecy will not be understood till, discarding human speculations, we study prophecy itself, and listen reverently to its own voice. In each case it is the voice of God. Heed that voice alike in nature, prophecy and history. God Himself is the sole judge of what is best and most fitting to reveal concerning His purposes, of how much He shall make known, and when and how He shall declare it. It becomes us with the teachableness of children, the truthfulness of saints, and the wisdom of sages, to receive and accept with reverence whatever He says. Then we may understand the divine order of the ages, which reveals the true philosophy of history. Then we can see the vista of the ages as they appeared to the prophets of God.

In his "History of the English People," written with a beauty of diction worthy of so great a theme, John Richard Green says:

> "It is with a reverence such as is stirred by the sight of the headwaters of some mighty river that one looks back to these village-moots of Friesland or Sleswick. It was here that England learned to be 'a mother of Parliaments.' It was in these tiny knots of farmers that the men from whom Englishmen were to spring learned the worth of public opinion, of public discussion, the worth of the agreement, the 'common sense,' the general conviction to which discussion leads, as of the laws which derive their force from being expressions of that general conviction. A humorist of our own day has laughed at Parliaments as 'talking shops,' and the laugh has been echoed by some who have taken humour for argument. But talk is persuasion, and persuasion is force, the one force which can sway freemen to deeds such as those which have made England what she is. The 'talk' of the village-moot, the strife and judgment of men giving freely their own rede and setting it as freely aside for what they learn to be the wiser rede of other men, is the groundwork of English history.
> "Small, therefore, as it might be, the township or village was thus the primary and perfect type of English life—domestic, social and political. All that England has been since lay there." (Vol. I, p. 13, Harper's Edition.)

But whence came these people from whom came the Englishmen? They were not indigenous to the soil. After all, Friesland is not the headwaters of this mighty racial river. It was a fountain, but not the original spring of our racial life. It had flowed from afar. We can trace it back to the distant mountains of the Caucasus, of Media and of Arabia. The people themselves in that early Angeln retained the memory of their origin. Can we sing their songs? Can we find what they found? Can we bind ourselves with the band of truth that bound them to the Hebrew language with its triliteral roots, and vowel changes within the roots? They sang the songs that were sung in Samaria. Can we hold to what they held? The very genius of our language is akin to the ancient Hebrew tongue. Philology confirms our Hebrew origin. "Smith's Bible Dictionary," Hackett's Edition, under Shemitic languages, says:

> "Humboldt has named two very remarkable points of difference between the Japhetian and Shemitic language families. The first peculiarity is the triliteral root, as the language is at present known; the second the expression of significations by consonants, and relations by vowels—both forming part of the flexions within words, so remarkable in the Shemitic family. Widely different from the Japhetian primitive, a fully formed and independent word—the Shemitic one, even in its present triliteral state, appears to have consisted of three separate articulations, aided by an indefinite sound like the Sheva of the Hebrews, and to have varied in the shades of its meaning according to the vowels assigned to it. In the opinion of the same scholar, the prevalent triliteral root was substituted for an earlier or biliteral, as being found impracticable and obscure in use." (Vol. IV, p. 2983.)

It is worthy of recognition that this distinguishing characteristic of the ancient Hebrew language is a notable feature of the old English, and the old Anglo-Saxon. Even the modern English furnishes many examples of "the flexions within words" by means of vowel changes within the root. This indicates its affinity with the Hebrew in the very genius of the language, which forms its structure and inflections. The idiom of the English is very similar to that of the Hebrew. This unity in the genius of the two languages is far more significant than a close relation in their vocabulary, which also exists, although generally ignored under the demands of science, falsely so called, which rejects truth that is subversive of its theories.

The Hebrews were our ancestors in race and language, laws and literature. In making a survey to ascertain the homeland, can we set a stake in the site of their temple, and sit in the seat where they sat? In this single sentence we have in English an illustration of the old biliteral root, with five distinct modifications of the idea by means of vowel changes within the root. principle of vowel changes indicating the variation of the radical idea. Here I have found what you may find, that the genius of our language is akin to that of the Hebrew. We may lap with the lip of Gideon's band. In harmony with the distinctive principles of the Hebrew language we can speak as our fathers spoke, for we have sprung from the spring whence they sprang.

INSPIRATION.

Every consideration of the conditions of the New Covenant makes it abundantly manifest that to the living of a Christ-like life an immediate and continual inspiration is an absolute essential. For nothing is more plain on the face of Holy Writ than the fact that the believer can do nothing of himself (John xv, 5). And yet simple as it may appear it is nevertheless true that to have a God-given knowledge of the fact, and to act upon it continually, is the very acme of Christian perfection.

Christ's Dependence.

The most striking point about the earthly life of Our Lord was His complete dependence on the Father. He did not do His own Will or speak His own Words, or seek His own Glory. He did always those things that pleased the Father, Who wakened Him morning by morning to hear as one that is taught. In other words, He was the subject of immediate and continual inspiration. Every word was God-breathed (Theopneustos), every deed was energised, inwrought by the Father.

Now He that said: "I do nothing of Myself," hath left us an example that we should follow His Steps. We are predestinated to be conformed to His Image.

Man can have no mightier aim than this, to do the will of God perfectly as Christ did it. He allowed God to do all in Him. His whole attitude was that of the open ear; the ear of a disciple living by every word proceeding out of the mouth of God. As He lived by means (dia) of the Father, so are we to live by means of Him (John vi, 57). But for this there must be "an unceasing communication, a mutual communion" (1 John i, 7, French version) between God and the new creature.

Spirit-Led.

(1) An inspired walk is a proof of sonship. "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, these are Sons of God." Under the new Covenant God promises to work all in us:

"I will inhabit them and walk about in them." "I will put My Spirit within you and cause you to walk in My Statutes, and ye shall keep My Judgments and do them." For it is God who energises both the will and the work; Who produces in us both the will and the execution (Phil. ii, 13, French version). Nothing can be acceptable to God but that which is the fruit of His indwelling Spirit. For this purpose Christ must be revealed in us (Gal. i, 16), formed in us (Gal. iv, 19), living in us (Gal. ii, 20), working in us (Gal. ii, 8), and glorified in us (Gal. i, 24). For the Spirit comes to us and inhabits us, not only as the Spirit of the Father, but also as the Spirit of the Glorified Jesus (John vii, 39). I will not leave you orphans. I will come to you is the Pentecostal Promise.

The great mystery that has been hid throughout all the ages, but is now being made manifest to His saints, is: "Christ in you the hope of Glory." Christ dwelleth permanently (Katoikesai) in our hearts by faith.

Spirit Worship.

(2) Our prayers also must be inspired. It is the prayer inwrought by the Holy Spirit that is effectual. The energised (energoumene) prayer of the righteous availeth much (James v, 16).

No worship can be acceptable to God but worship in The Spirit. No prayer can be the means of building us up in our most holy faith but praying in the Spirit.

But this kind of prayer is infallible; it cannot possibly fail to be answered in some way, because the Spirit in us: "Maketh intercession for the saints according to the Will of God." The mighty prayers of Elijah, by means of which he "shut heaven" for three years and six months, so that: "It rained not on the earth," and opened it again, so that: "The heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit," are given as examples of the wonders that may be wrought by means of inspired prayer. No other kind can avail to save the sick; but wherever the inspired prayer can be prayed, there the sick will certainly be "raised up."

Our Speaking and our Preaching too must be Inspired.

(3) It must be "Christ speaking in me" (2 Cor. xiii, 3). Our speech and our preaching must not be with "Persuasive words of wisdom, but in demonstrations of the Spirit, and of power." "Not in words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Spirit teacheth; interpreting spiritual things to spiritual men" (1 Cor. ii, 4, 13, R.V., margin). It should not be we that speak, but the Spirit of our Father that speaketh in us; "For he that speaketh from himself seeketh his own glory."

"The words that I speak are not Mine, but His that sent Me" should be as true in us as in Him (1 John ii, 8).

Our Reading and Study of the Scriptures must be Inspired.

(4) For who among men knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of the man which is in him?

Even so the things of God none knoweth. But we have received the Spirit for this very purpose that "We might know the things that are freely given us by God."

"Things which eye saw not and ear heard not, and which entered not into the heart of man." But God reveals them unto us only through the Spirit. The letter has power to kill, but not to make alive (2 Cor. iii, vi).

We need, therefore, constantly to use the prayer of the Psalmist: "Open Thou mine eyes, and I shall behold wondrous things out of Thy law." To claim from God, "A Spirit of wisdom and revelation, that the eyes of our heart may be enlightened to know what is the hope of His calling."

Spiritual things can only be spiritually discerned by the continual, immediate guidance, unction and teaching of His Holy Spirit within us.

Our special need, then, is to have the ear of the inner man opened, that the Lord God should give us the ear of the learner and the tongue of a disciple (Isaiah l, 4-5). For this

the world. God is a grand strategist. Palestine was the best place to plant Israel for influencing the great nations of antiquity. The British Islands was the best place to plant the elect race for the colonising of the world. In order to the fulfilment of the promises given to the fathers for the world-wide development of Israel, the eternal God, who comprehended all ages in His vision, promised King David, while the chosen people were yet in Palestine, another place, appointed by Him for their planting, in which they never more should be wasted, and from which they nevermore should be plucked up. In two prophecies given through Isaiah, Jehovah designates this land of the Covenant as "the Islands of the West," and shows by the description relating to them that they are located at the ends of the earth, the extremity of the old world. Going forth from hence "they passed over the sea" (Isa. xvi, 8), they established colonies in "the desolate heritages of the earth" (Isa. xlix, 8), that they might accomplish the divine purpose in filling "the face of the world with fruit" (Isa. xxvii, 6). Israel, the mother of nations, the many nations of prophecy, lost her first colonies, but retains all the others as her own in one great Company of Nations (Isa. xlix, 19-21). But the sceptic exclaims, this is too definite and specific for prophecy! Indeed! How do you know how specific prophecy should be? Judge prophecy by what it says and its fulfilment in history; not by your inner consciousness of what it ought to be. Nature was not understood till, discarding human theories, we studied Nature herself, and listened reverently to her own voice. Prophecy will not be understood till, discarding human speculations, we study prophecy itself, and listen reverently to its own voice. In each case it is the voice of God. Heed that voice alike in nature, prophecy and history. God Himself is the sole judge of what is best and most fitting to reveal concerning His purposes, of how much He shall make known, and when and how He shall declare it. It becomes us with the teachableness of children, the truthfulness of saints, and the wisdom of sages, to receive and accept with reverence whatever He says. Then we may understand the divine order of the ages, which reveals the true philosophy of history. Then we can see the vista of the ages as they appeared to the prophets of God.

In his "History of the English People," written with a beauty of diction worthy of so great a theme, John Richard Green says:

> "It is with a reverence such as is stirred by the sight of the headwaters of some mighty river that one looks back to these village-moots of Friesland or Sleswick. It was here that England learned to be 'a mother of Parliaments.' It was in these tiny knots of farmers that the men from whom Englishmen were to spring learned the worth of public opinion, of public discussion, the worth of the agreement, the 'common sense,' the general conviction to which discussion leads, as of the laws which derive their force from being expressions of that general conviction. A humorist of our own day has laughed at Parliaments as 'talking shops,' and the laugh has been echoed by some who have taken humour for argument. But talk is persuasion, and persuasion is force, the one force which can sway freemen to deeds such as those which have made England what she is. The 'talk' of the village-moot, the strife and judgment of men giving freely their own rede and setting it as freely aside for what they learn to be the wiser rede of other men, is the groundwork of English history.

there must be a full and perfect surrender ; for whosoever will not renounce all that he hath, cannot be a disciple (Luke xiv, 33 ; Romans xii, 1).

He that would have the THOUGHTS of GOD, and the WISDOM of GOD must forsake his own thoughts and his own wisdom (Isaiah lv, 8, 9 ; 1 Cor. xix, 30). Then we must practise the presence of God, and be attentive to the voice of THE ETERNAL WORD which speaketh within us. And following the example of our blessed MASTER, we must seize every opportunity of waiting upon God in the secret inner chamber (Matt. vi, 6). No work of faith or labour of love reaps a richer or more certain reward than this.

There is no better preparation for service, or more certain method of obtaining the ear of the learner, than by constant waiting in silent expectation upon God (Isaiah xi, 31).

IT IS MUCH MORE IMPORTANT THAT I SHOULD HEAR HIS VOICE THAN THAT HE SHOULD HEAR MINE.

We must learn to be silent unto GOD—lit. "Dumb to JEHOVAH" (Psalm xxxvii, 7 ; lxii, 1-5).

God has promised to such waiters upon HIM that they shall exchange strength that is put off the human and put on (or become clothed with) DIVINE strength, by means of which they shall mount up with wings as eagles ; run and not be weary, and walk and not faint. Then will these earthen vessels be filled with GOD'S hid treasure, and our hearts so garrisoned with the thoughts of GOD that our messages will be always WORDS proceeding out of the MOUTH of GOD ; our will and our deeds being continually energised by GOD.

ISAIAH.

BY GEORGE GILFILLAN.

"I FELT," says Sir W. Herschel, "after a considerable sweep through the sky with my telescope, Sirius announcing himself from a great distance, and at length he rushed unto the field of view with all the brightness of the rising sun, and I had to withdraw my eyes from the dazzling object." So have we, looking out from our "specular tower," seen from a great way off the approach of the "mighty orb of song"—the divine Isaiah—and have felt awestruck in the path of his coming. He was a prince amid a generation of princes—a Titan among a tribe of Titans ; and, of all the prophets who rose on aspiring pinion to meet the Sun of Righteousness, it was his—the Evangelical Eagle—to mount highest, and to catch on his wing the richest anticipation of his rising. It was his, too, to pierce most clearly down into the future, and become an eye-witness of the great events which were in its womb enclosed. He is the most eloquent, the most dramatic, the most poetic—in one word, the most complete of the Bards of Israel. He has not the austere majesty of Moses—the gorgeous natural description of Job—Ezekiel's rough and rapid vehemence, like a red torrent from the hills seeking the Lake of Galilee in the day of storm—David's high gusts of lyric enthusiasm, dying away into the low wailings of penitential sorrow—Daniel's awful allegory—John's piled and enthroned thunders ; his power is solemn, sustained, and majestic ; his step moves gracefully, at the same time that it shakes the wilderness. His imagery, it is curious to notice, amidst all its profusion, is seldom snatched from the upper regions of the Ethereal—from the terrible crystal, or the stones of fire—from the winged cherubim, or the eyed wheels—from the waves of the glassy sea, or the blanched locks of the Ancient of Days ; but from lower, though lofty subjects—from the glory of Lebanon, the excellency of Sharon, the waving forests of Carmel, the willows of Kedron, the flocks of Kedar, and the rams of Nebaioth. Once only does he pass within the veil—"in the year that King Uzziah died"—and he enters trembling, and he withdraws in haste, and he bears out from amidst the surging smoke and the tempestuous glory but a single "live coal" from off the altar. His prophecy opens with sublime complaint ; it frequently irritates into noble anger, it subdues into irony, it melts into pathos ; but its general tone is that of victorious exultation. It is one long rapture. You see its author standing on an eminence, bending forward over the magnificent prospect it commands, and with clasped hands, streaming eyes, and eloquent sobs, indicating his excess of joy. It is true of all the prophets that they frequently seem to see rather than foresee, but especially true of Isaiah. Not merely does his mind overleap ages, and take up centuries as a "little thing," but his eye overleaps them, too, and seems literally to see the word Cyrus inscribed on his banner—the river Euphrates turned aside—the Cross, and Him Who bare it. We have little doubt that many of his visions became objective, and actually painted themselves on the prophet's eye. Would we had witnessed that awful eye, as it was piercing the depths of time—seeing the future glaring through the thin mist of the Present !

How rapid are the prophet's transitions ! How sudden his bursts ! How startling his questions ! How the page appears to live and move as you read ! "Who are these that fly as a cloud, and as the doves to their windows ?" "Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah ?" "Who hath believed our report ?" "Lift ye up a banner upon the high mountain !" "Awake, awake ; put on thy strength, O Zion ; put on thy beautiful garments, O Jerusalem !" "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters !" He is the divine describer of a divine panorama. His sermons are not compositions, but cries, from one who "sees a sight you cannot see, and hears a voice you cannot hear." He realises the old name which gradually merged in that of prophet—"seer." He is the Seer—an Eye running to and fro throughout the future : and, as you contemplate him, you feel what a power was that sight of the olden prophets, which pierced the thickest veils, found the turf thin and the tomb-stone transparent, saw into the darkness of the past, the present, and the to-come—the most hidden recesses of the human heart—the folds of Destruction itself ; that sight which, in Ezekiel, bare the blaze of the crystal and the eyes of the wheels—which, in Daniel, read at a glance the hieroglyphics of heaven—and which, in John, blenched not before the great white throne. Many eyes are glorious ; that of beauty, with its mirthful or melancholy meaning ; that of the poet, rolling in its fine frenzy ; that of the sage, worn with wonder, or luminous with mild and settled intelligence ; but who shall describe the eye of the prophet, across whose mirror swept the shadows of empires, stalked the ghosts of kings, stretched in their loveliness the landscapes of a regenerated earth, and lay, in its terror, red and still, the image of the judgment-seat of Almighty God? Then did not Sight—the highest faculty of matter or mind—come culminating to an intense and dazzling point, trembling upon Omniscience itself?

Exultation, we have said, is the pervading spirit of Isaiah's prophecy. His are the "prancings of a mighty one." Has he to tread on idols? He not only treads, but tramples and leaps upon them. Witness the irony directed against the stock and stone gods of his country, in the 44th chapter. Does he describe the downfall of the Assyrian monarch? It is to the accompaniment of wild and hollow laughter from the depths of Hades, "Which is moved from beneath," to meet and welcome his coming. Great is his glorying over the ruin of Babylon. With a trumpet voice he inveighs against the false fastings and other superstitions of his age. As the prospect of the millennial day breaks in again and again upon his eye, he hails it with an unvaried note of triumphant anticipation. Rarely does he mitigate his voice, or check his exuberant joy, save in describing the sufferings of Christ. Here he shades his eyes, holds in his eloquent breath, and furls his wing of fire. But, so soon as he has passed the hill of sorrow, his old rapturous emotions come upon him with twofold force, and no pæan in his prophecy is more joyous than the 54th chapter. It rings like a marriage-bell.

The true title, indeed, of Isaiah's prophecy is a "song." It is the "Song of Songs, which is Isaiah's," and many of its notes are only a little lower than those which saluted the birth of Christ, or welcomed Him from the tomb, with the burden, "He is risen, He is risen, and shall die no more!"

From this height of vision, pitch of power, and fulness of utterance, Isaiah rarely stoops to the tender. He must sail on in:—

"Supreme dominion,
Through the azure deep of air."

Yet, when he does descend, it is gracefully. "Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? Yea, they may forget; yet I will not forget thee." Tears in the eye of a strong man move more than all other human tears. But here are tears from a "fire-armed angel," and surely there is no softness like theirs.

The uniform grandeur, the pomp of diction, the almost painful richness of figure, distinguishing this prophet, would have lessened his power over the common Christian mind had it not been for the evangelical sentiment in which his strains abound, and which has gained him the name of the "Fifth Evangelist." Many bare with Milton solely for his religion. It is the same with Isaiah. The Cross stands in the painted window of his style. His stateliest figure bows before Messiah's throne. An eagle of the sun, his nest is in Calvary. Anticipating the homage of the Eastern sages, he spreads out before the infant God treasures of gold, frankincense, and myrrh. The gifts are rare and costly, but not too precious to be offered to such a being; they are brought from afar, but HE has come farther "to seek and to save that which was lost."

AN AMERICAN ON "BRITISH IMPERIALISM."

AN address by Hon. H. J. Allen, ex-Governor of Kansas, at a dinner given by the English-Speaking Union of New York. Published in the British Californian.

If you study imperialism as the British people understand imperialism, you discover that first of all there is a standard of realisation of their obligations. I visited two great banks in Shanghai, the British Bank of Shanghai and Hongkong and an American bank, and I asked one of the wisest Americans over there how the banks compared in their administration. He said, "Very, very different." He said, "The British bank over here seeks to make such loans and investments as help to build Shanghai and the country round about. The American bank over here skims the cream." Well, we are good bankers, and the British are good bankers, but there is no substitute for age in teaching the obligation of a nation to those to whom it takes the ministry of its business.

When we got over to Egypt we discovered again that there was a standard for imperialism if you get accustomed to it. When you hear an American talk in the Panama Canal Zone, and an Englishman talk in Egypt, you somehow get the idea there isn't much difference between the high quality of mission we are performing in the Panama Canal Zone and the mission the British are performing in the guardianship of the Suez Canal, and it is beautiful to hear both nations talk about it. But the British are doing it better than we are, because to them it has become a profound realisation of duty. . . . .

I asked the High Commissioner, observing that he was a man loaded with many cares, of what it was that kept him anxious and eager on the job in Cairo, and he made this peculiar answer: "I'd like to carry on so that when they excavate us in the future and dig me up they will say, 'Here was a Britisher who wanted to make life a little better for the Egyptians.'"

When you get to Constantinople you find the Turk looking like the Egyptian and praying like him and dressing like him and smelling like him. But his pound is worth 65 cents, and over in Cairo the Egyptian pound is worth $5.04, and the difference between 65 cents and $5.04 is British occupation.

And so when you go to Palestine you find they have given to the Holy Land a better government than either Moses or David or Solomon or any of the ancients gave to Palestine. A nation trying only to be just, with a determination to draw no issues between people, but to give every man and every woman a square deal.

And so I say, as you go around the world, following the trail of the British flag, you come to the realisation that there has been, as the moving force of modern imperialism, a realisation of the obligation, the humane obligation, of the Government to the people.

I am not asking for imperialism. I am not seeking to commit the United States to a policy of imperialism. But if we are going on as a part of the world, enabling American tradesmen and American manufacturers to pursue the policy of peaceful penetration, then we will have to stand behind them with an intelligence and a character that will make them realise what their rights are and will make us realise what our duties are.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

OUR anticipations of a crowded audience for the meeting at Central Hall, Westminster, on March 27th, were more than realised, a queue began to form outside the hall by 6 p.m. When the doors were opened at 6.45 there was such a rush for seats that the stewards had a very hard time to cope with it. By 7.20 there were hundreds seeking admission in vain. We had made provision for an overflow meeting, but the only hall available was too small. The next in size was that adjoining the one we had already filled—and was not expected to be free until after 8 o'clock; very fortunately the meeting there concluded by 7.25, when the hall was offered to us. We instantly accepted it; the doors were opened and in poured the waiting crowd, filling it also. The Rev. Pascoe Goard kindly consented to at once address that audience, while Mr. Garrison addressed the other over which Major Knowles presided. Mr. Goard condensed his lecture into a whirlwind address of forty-five minutes, and then returned to audience number one giving his lecture as advertised, and a very remarkable lecture it was, breaking entirely new ground in his theological and scientific approach. The subject was "The Chronological Trajectory and the Geography of Prophecy." The audience received it with immense interest and enthusiastic appreciation.

The Rev. W. H. Stuart-Fox, M.A., presided over meeting number two, where the Rev. Joseph Cay followed Mr. Goard with a rousing address. He in turn was followed by Mr. Garrison and the Chairman. The evening was one never to be forgotten for its spirit and enthusiasm in both halls.

Although expecting an overflowing hall we did not expect a crowd to come quite so early, nor in such numbers, resulting in some inconvenience. This, however, was cheerfully borne in the general gratification at the success attained.

This experience marks a new stage in our gatherings, and provision will have to be made accordingly to meet the new conditions. The suggestion was made and received with great enthusiasm that the Federation urgently requires a suitable hall of its own in London. At the close of the meeting one of the audience requested the privilege of making the first contribution towards a hall, and this was gratefully received.

Mr. John H. Tench, the President of our Darlington Branch, will give an address at Headquarters on Wednesday afternoon next, at 3 o'clock, and we hope for a large audience to greet him. There will be no meeting at H.Q. on Thursday, April 12th, in view of all efforts being concentrated on the Queen's Hall on the following day.

* * *

Illustrating the enormous increase in our work, a few years ago we at H.Q. were thinking in terms of Branches, then we had to think of Britain divided into Areas, manned by Commissioners, now we are compelled to think in terms of Dominions and Nations. Canada has organised from Ontario to the Pacific Coast; the Union of South Africa has organised under the Rev. Maxwell Carnson. Australasia is aiming in the same direction. Great developments are looming in U.S.A. All this, with the vastly increased activity in the London area, means a heavy call on our resources; for instance, our expense for one day in postage stamps alone we found to be nearly £30, and this not our largest day of postal expense.

The tickets for April 13th at Queen's Hall are going fast, and those who wish for good seats are strongly advised to lose no time in securing them.

* * *

The four B.-I. meetings in the Town Hall, Newark, were an unqualified success; excellent audiences listened with rapt attention to the Rev. T. H. Whitehouse's most interesting lectures. A return visit has been arranged for April 23rd, at 3 and 7.30 p.m.

* * *

A new Branch of the Federation has been formed at Brighton. Major J. Knowles, O.B.E., was unanimously elected as President, and Mr. R. H. Filtness was appointed Hon. Secretary. We heartily wish the Branch great success.

We regret to hear of the death of Mrs. Modin after a rather trying illness. She was a very ardent British-Israelite of many years' standing. We tender our sympathy to her family, especially to her devoted daughter—Miss Gladys Modin, known to our readers as the author of interesting articles in our journal and of some useful leaflets.

THE JOURNAL OF PHYSIOLOGY (Vol. 64, No. 1, recently issued) contains an article by two vivisectors (named) called "Observations upon the size of the spleen." They say, "The animal should not be under the influence of an anaesthetic . . . At first we carried out a number of experiments in dogs in which the spleen, though in the abdomen, could be seen through a celluloid window. In the next series we brought the spleen through the muscles so that when the wound healed, the spleen was between the body and the window; lastly, we dispensed with the window so that the spleen was situated outside the animal. One dog, muzzled, had his spleen outside his skin for eight months." EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

THE LAW OF THE LORD, OR THE COMMON LAW.—XIV.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

1100 B.C.

LET us now take a step further. We shall now go to the eleventh century before Christ, at about the time that the Kingdom of David was established for ever. We are still in England, and are still dealing with English history.

Two branches of the House of Judah had established two separate dynasties. Each branch was headed by a son of Judah. These were twins regarding whose birth there is told the story of the Scarlet Cord. The twin of the Scarlet Cord was Zarah-Judah. The twin who by a breach upon his brother became the firstborn was called Pharez.

Zarah, failing to receive the Headship of the tribe of Judah, had taken his followers and possessions, and had gone northward from Egypt to the Dardanelles, and had there established the city of Troy, and had founded the Kingdom of Priam. That Kingdom had been gathering force and development during the time Israel had been in the wilderness and in Palestine under the rule of the Judges.

In the meantime the people of Dan had steadily progressed north and westward until they came to Greece. There they had become the dominating strain of the people.

Troy and Greece became entangled over intermarriage and commerce, and the result was the Trojan war, which destroyed the city of Troy and broke up the Kingdom of Priam.*

Brute of Troy made his way to Britain, and established himself as King in the Islands about the time that David took the throne of Jerusalem. Thus Pharez-Judah was established in Jerusalem; and Zarah-Judah in New Troy—or London.

The greatness of the kingly line of Troy is incidentally affirmed in the Bible inasmuch as Solomon is declared to be as great as the great men of that line. Coming to Britain, Brute made certain innovations in the British legal system, bringing his contribution of Trojan-Israel laws to the Druidic-Israel colony already established in Britain. Of this we read as follows:—

> "Brutus is celebrated in the Triads as one of the three King Revolutionists of Britain, the Trojan system under him being incorporated with the Patriarchal. . . . ." It is satisfactory to find the text of the Triad confirmed by the most learned jurists, who refer the original institutes of our Island to the Trojan Law brought by Brutus. Lord Chief Justice Cope (Preface to Volume III of Report) affirms "The original laws of this land were composed of such elements as Brutus first selected from the Ancient Greek and Trojan institutions."

The Greek of the Classics had not at that time (1100 B.C.) emerged. The Greek and Trojan institutions from which Brutus culled his laws were the institutions which Zarah had learned from the Patriarch Judah and his father Jacob, and so back to Isaac and to Abraham. The Danaois laws on the other hand, that is to say, of the Greeks, were learned in the wilderness with Moses, and practised in their residence "on the banks of the Jordan." Of the Greeks who fought at Troy, Homer says, "The Greeks fought bravely in the trenches before Troy and there maintained that reputation for valour which they had previously established in their wars on the banks of the Jordan." (Iordian.)

From these sources, purely Israel, Brutus brought his contribution to British law.

Thus in Britain we are brought back to the eleventh century before Christ, or to within four centuries of the giving of the great code at Sinai. That is to say, we are brought chronologically as near to Sinai as we are in this year of grace 1928 to the days of Queen Elizabeth.

Let it be remembered that we have been all this while considering matters which developed in England. For Brutus at that time came to England, and began to make his contribution to English law.

Had we space and time we would follow up a stream of law which came to us from the Continent with the advent of the Anglo-Saxons. It is enough to say that the authorities trace this stream of law to the Aryan people. Now the Aryan people, it has been well demonstrated by independent students of Ethnology, are none other than the Israel peoples of the Captivity, together with previous voluntary Israel migrants. The Aryans have been, until late years, a mystery people. It is manifest, as the history of the B.C. centuries comes to be more and better known, that there was in existence, after a certain time, a race which was called Aryan. No race originated under that name. They must have been a race renamed, which originated under another name. What other name? When that question is answered, the race called Aryan will be known not only as to its later period, but also as to its earlier period. The answer has been found. The name of the people was originally Israel. The centre of the place of their captivity was marked by the city "Arya." They became known as Aryans, where they were found, in the East and West, by modern Ethnologists. They have been recognised by jurists as contributors to the Common Law of England. They were as a race, or rather as a part of a race, trained with Moses in the forty years in the wilderness, and the law there learned in the form of the great Sinai code has come with them through all their wanderings into Britain.

To make all these things clear, and to establish them by the testimony of great juristic authorities, would take a large volume, and would demand a legal training. We leave this task for better-equipped men. But we are assured that these things which we have written have been previously written bit by bit, "here a little and there a little," by the great Anglo-Saxon jurists and historians. Someone will do us the great service of collecting all these scattered statements, and writing the book which shall be the ultimate authority on the origin and history of the Common Law.

> "Hearken unto me, my people; and give ear unto me, O my nation: for a law shall proceed from me, and I will make my judgment to rest for a light of the people."—Isaiah li, 4.
> "Hearken unto me, ye that know righteousness, the people in whose heart is my law."—Isaiah li, 7.

It is of startling import that the Common Law, which is in principle the Law of the Lord, is the law of the Anglo-Saxon people.

The world has thought of the Jews in this connection. But the strange thing is, that while the Jews have had the sacred books of the law, they have kept them as holy things, shut up in the Tabernacle of the Synagogue. They have not guided themselves directly by these sacred records, but have obeyed rather the Targum and Talmud commentaries and enlargements of them. Our Lord charged that such enlargements made the Word of God of none effect.

Neither have they missionised the nations with the law. They have been subject to the laws of all nations, but they have exclusively withheld the law from the nations. They have not had the opportunity of nationally putting the laws into practice among themselves, nor of establishing the rule of the law among other people.

But the Anglo-Saxons have governed themselves by the law, and have taught all other nations that such is the highest form of government and of liberty. They have actually brought the law to the homes and lands of one-third of the human family.

This illustrates the saying of Our Lord to the Jews, "The kingdom shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."

Now the Anglo-Saxon people have shown that they are the people "In whose heart is my law." No other people have given the world that demonstration. The Civil law, the Canon law, the Mohammedan law, the Indian law, all these are not the Law of the Lord. Therefore the possession of the law identifies the people as "The people in whose heart is my law."

In connection with Celto-Saxon history we have looked at the past, and have traced the history of the law back to the giving of the great code at Sinai.

LET US NOW LOOK AT THE FUTURE OF THE LAW, AND OF THE PEOPLE IN WHOSE HEARTS AND HANDS IT IS FOUND.

It is certain that the world is emerging from the stage through which it has been passing during the Christian dispensation. That period may be said to have been, par excellence, the period of religious doctrine and organisation. It has been very largely taken up with ecclesiastical activity, and, as far as many races are concerned, has been marked by ecclesiastical rule. The time is come when there will have to be a restatement of religious doctrine; and perhaps the Movement with which we are identified is busy making such a statement. In the meantime it is manifest that the world is turning with all its heart to the study and the rearrangement of the law. Shall the Indian law be restored? We believe that India will itself say "No," with united voice. Shall the Moslem law be restored? By the sudden overturn of the Turkish Empire; the dethronement of the Sultan; and the removal of the Caliph from Turkey; by the statement of Kemal Pasha that Koran law must not be allowed to stand in the way of progress; and, by the adoption by Turkey of an European system of law, it seems that the Mohammedan world is ready to answer "No."

Shall the Civil law prevail? It seems from the rapid spread of the Common Law, and from the statements emanating from the great council of international jurists and elsewhere, that the nations are ready to say "No."

There remains the Common Law. It seems to be the decision of the nations that this system shall now be universally adopted.

Moreover, "The more sure word of prophecy" tells the same thing. "For out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." "Zion" is the centre of the Israel government and "Jerusalem" the centre of Israel worship. Neither reference is geographical. It indicates the flow of the law and the Gospel.

Like the spreading of a mighty ocean tide we see the progress which is thus being made. What a challenge is this to the nations. There is no exultation, as of one race over another, among the Celto-Saxon peoples. It is taken for granted that this great heritage is for all the families of the earth. All peoples are welcome to adopt its principles. All races are welcome to profit by the ages of experiment, and of experience, which the Anglo-Saxon peoples have made and endured. All peoples are invited to share in the liberties of the Common Law.

But the law as we hold it to-day is not perfect. We have added here, and taken away there. As a system it is the best humanity has known. As a system it is found expressed in perfection in the Bible. But we have incorporated many things in the system which must soon be removed. They are not great things. They are not radical innovations we have made. But we must excise the foreign elements, and bring the law back to its perfection as David sang of it. This will be the task of the present generation of the Anglo-Saxon peoples.

The law must be approved by all nations. The peace of the world depends on this. With the spirit engendered, and the uniformity of action secured by the Common Law, there will be little danger of war in the earth.

It is certain that there is danger of war at this time. Russia is organising for war, and other nations and peoples are backing her, and the intent of Russia and her allies is to attack Britain. Why? It would not be correct to say that the motive is a single one. Britain has much that Russia would fain possess. But the great stumbling-stone to peace is that Russia is bent on establishing in the earth a system which is antagonistic to the Common Law. That the latter is the Law of Jehovah Russia well knows, therefore she has included Jehovah, the God of Israel, in her defiance.

If Russia knew, and if Russia and other nations could be induced to take the excellent Law of the Lord as the rule of conduct for the individual and for the nation, the world would dwell at peace. But such is not the case, and there is danger of a great outfly of war again over this very question. Needless to say, "the righteous nation which keepeth the truth" will be carried through this last of her trials. By the time another ten years have rolled away, and 1938 has arrived, it is probable that all the world will have determined to accept the Common Law as the law of all the earth.

In the process the law will be purified of all human enactments, and will have been brought back to the simplicity of the Divine Code.

Now the ADMINISTRATION of the law comes in for thought. The administration of the law in Britain, to use the Bible phraseology, is carried on by the House of David; Divinely appointed to that task. The authority behind the administration is that of Ephraim, together with "all the tribes of Israel, his companions." There has grown up, at present, a lop-sided administration in Britain. The Commons has undoubtedly taken to itself too much licence.

The Commons and electorate have taken it into their heads that they have stepped into the seat of authority of Almighty God, and that what a majority of them decide to do that is to be the law of the land. The Lords, and the King, have ever kept in mind that their authority and power is limited by the Divine Law. But the Commons will yet learn wisdom, and will hold themselves bound by the letter and spirit of the written Law of God.

In America the law was taken, but the administration was refused. How far this is in line with the best interests of the nation it is for the people of the United States to decide. It is so wholly their affair that we refrain from comment, pro or con.

Both the law and the administration are carried to the ends of the Empire. It will be for other nations outside the Empire to say what shall be the method of putting the law in practice among themselves:—until . . . The King shall come.

He who excludes the superhuman from his calculations when thinking of the immediate future is doing unwisely. What in the Victorian era was held to be true as doctrine is to-day being experienced as fact. The stage we are passing through at this time is the stage of INDICATIONS, wherein signs, many and unmistakable, are given of the fact that the return of the Lord is imminent. Not any fact is more potent in warning than the passing of the great Empires which stood as the bulwark of the Roman and of the Mohammedan law systems. Not any fact is more potent than the miraculous spread of the Common Law. Equal to these is the great need for an administration to arise clothed with more than human wisdom, and which demands the coming of the Lord, in order to bring Divine wisdom to the task of administering the affairs of the world.

So we see the progress of this great thing which is coming to pass. We see the tendency of the law to become universal. We see the need of the King of kings to administer it. And in connection with all this movement we see our opportunity and our task.

Never in the history of the world has such an opportunity and such a responsibility come to the men of the legal profession. They are charged with setting up the courts for the coming reign of the King of kings.

The preachers cannot take credit to themselves that they have been a hundred per cent. proficient in their task in preaching the Gospel, and of setting up the Church of Christ, in humility, in love, in the earth. Will the lawyers prove of better material, and of more efficient calibre? The next few years will see.

But whether they do or not, under the urge of the Divine Spirit "the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." That is to say, the Law will go forth from the centre of administration, and the Word from the centre of worship, and so Church and State will unite to bring in His reign in righteousness.

The time is come when there will have to be a restatement of religious doctrine ; and perhaps the Movement with which we are identified is busy making such a statement. In the meantime it is manifest that the world is turning with all its heart to the study and the rearrangement of the law. Shall the Indian law be restored? We believe that India will itself say " No," with united voice. Shall the Moslem law be restored? By the sudden overturn of the Turkish Empire ; the dethronement of the Sultan ; and the removal of the Caliph from Turkey ; by the statement of Kemal Pasha that Koran law must not be allowed to stand in the way of progress ; and, by the adoption by Turkey of an European system of law, it seems that the Mohammedan world is ready to answer " No."

Shall the Civil law prevail? It seems from the rapid spread of the Common Law, and from the statements emanating from the great council of international jurists and elsewhere, that the nations are ready to say "No."

There remains the Common Law. It seems to be the decision of the nations that this system shall now be universally adopted.

Moreover, "The more sure word of prophecy" tells the same thing. "For out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." "Zion" is the centre of the Israel government and "Jerusalem" the centre of Israel worship. Neither reference is geographical. It indicates the flow of the law and the Gospel.

Like the spreading of a mighty ocean tide we see the progress which is thus being made. What a challenge is this to the nations. There is no exultation, as of one race over another, among the Celto-Saxon peoples. It is taken for granted that this great heritage is for all the families of the earth. All peoples are welcome to adopt its principles. All races are welcome to profit by the ages of experiment, and of experience, which the Anglo-Saxon peoples have made and endured. All peoples are invited to share in the liberties of the Common Law.

But the law as we hold it to-day is not perfect. We have added here, and taken away there. As a system it is the best humanity has known. As a system it is found expressed in perfection in the Bible. But we have incorporated many things in the system which must soon be removed. They are not great things. They are not radical innovations we have made. But we must excise the foreign elements, and bring the law back to its perfection as David sang of it. This will be the task of the present generation of the Anglo-Saxon peoples.

The law must be approved by all nations. The peace of the world depends on this. With the spirit engendered, and the uniformity of action secured by the Common Law, there will be little danger of war in the earth.

It is certain that there is danger of war at this time. Russia is organising for war, and other nations and peoples are backing her, and the intent of Russia and her allies is to attack Britain. Why? It would not be correct to say that the motive is a single one. Britain has much that Russia would fain possess. But the great stumbling-stone to peace is that Russia is bent on establishing in the earth a system which is antagonistic to the Common Law. That the latter is the Law of Jehovah Russia well knows, therefore she has included Jehovah, the God of Israel, in her defiance.

If Russia knew, and if Russia and other nations could be induced to take the excellent Law of the Lord as the rule of conduct for the individual and for the nation, the world would dwell at peace. But such is not the case, and there is danger of a great outfly of war again over this very question. Needless to say, "the righteous nation which keepeth the truth" will be carried through this last of her trials. By the time another ten years have rolled away, and 1938 has arrived, it is probable that all the world will have determined to accept the Common Law as the law of all the earth.

In the process the law will be purified of all human enactments, and will have been brought back to the simplicity of the Divine Code.

Now the ADMINISTRATION of the law comes in for thought. The administration of the law in Britain, to use the Bible phraseology, is carried on by the House of David; Divinely appointed to that task. The authority behind the administration is that of Ephraim, together with "all the tribes of Israel, his companions." There has grown up, at present, a lop-sided administration in Britain. The Commons has undoubtedly taken to itself too much licence.

The Commons and electorate have taken it into their heads that they have stepped into the seat of authority of Almighty God, and that what a majority of them decide to do that is to be the law of the land. The Lords, and the King, have ever kept in mind that their authority and power is limited by the Divine Law. But the Commons will yet learn wisdom, and will hold themselves bound by the letter and spirit of the written Law of God.

In America the law was taken, but the administration was refused. How far this is in line with the best interests of the nation it is for the people of the United States to decide. It is so wholly their affair that we refrain from comment, pro or con.

Both the law and the administration are carried to the ends of the Empire. It will be for other nations outside the Empire to say what shall be the method of putting the law in practice among themselves:—until . . . The King shall come.

He who excludes the superhuman from his calculations when thinking of the immediate future is doing unwisely. What in the Victorian era was held to be true as doctrine is to-day being experienced as fact. The stage we are passing through at this time is the stage of INDICATIONS, wherein signs, many and unmistakable, are given of the fact that the return of the Lord is imminent. Not any fact is more potent in warning than the passing of the great Empires which stood as the bulwark of the Roman and of the Mohammedan law systems. Not any fact is more potent than the miraculous spread of the Common Law. Equal to these is the great need for an administration to arise clothed with more than human wisdom, and which demands the coming of the Lord, in order to bring Divine wisdom to the task of administering the affairs of the world.

So we see the progress of this great thing which is coming to pass. We see the tendency of the law to become universal. We see the need of the King of kings to administer it. And in connection with all this movement we see our opportunity and our task.

Never in the history of the world has such an opportunity and such a responsibility come to the men of the legal profession. They are charged with setting up the courts for the coming reign of the King of kings.

The preachers cannot take credit to themselves that they have been a hundred per cent. proficient in their task in preaching the Gospel, and of setting up the Church of Christ, in humility, in love, in the earth. Will the lawyers prove of better material, and of more efficient calibre? The next few years will see.

But whether they do or not, under the urge of the Divine Spirit "the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." That is to say, the Law will go forth from the centre of administration, and the Word from the centre of worship, and so Church and State will unite to bring in His reign in righteousness.

RUSSIA.

By Rev. Commander L. G. A. Roberts, R.N.

THE subject I have selected to dwell upon is the last worldly power that exalts itself against the Lord Jesus Christ, and all other authority and power. The name Russia as here written does not occur apparently, unless indeed we go to the Hebrew Bible and read the name Assyria by the English mode of reading, that is left to right, then this word is Russia.

Read this way the word Russia means "Wickedness" (Zech. v, 8). It is also remarkable that the word Czar in Hebrew means "Enemy" (Isa. lix, 19). To some this may seem overdrawn, but it is an idea which asserted itself on my mind more than fifty years ago, and made me see that Russia must be our great enemy at the last and Czarism was the system by which Russia should be governed. Now, there have been three systems of Czarism—the Cæsar of the Romans, the Kaiser of the German or Prussian, and the Czar over all the Russias. Each one of these has set himself, or as a system, against God, and each one, as it has come into conflict with the people of Jehovah, has been broken. This not only as a confederated body which took place at its last endeavour, but also in its disjointed formations, such as Spain at the Spanish Armada, France at Waterloo, and Germany in our last war.

I also wish to show that Cæsar was the head of the Pagan Roman who claimed, as the Jews wished to do, "We have no king but Cæsar." So also the Roman ecclesiastical system which succeeded, "We have no king but the Pope." It must be recalled that the Kaiser was fighting for the Pope's restoration, so the Pope thought, and each of these was a form of religion, in the last case the Pope making himself a god. But Czarism, according to Peter the Great, if rightly developed (constitutionally), would centre all worship on himself. This was the leading thought in Prussia, "Might is Right." The Soviet rule of Russia would destroy every power upon earth but itself, even to the destruction of every religion and of God Himself. The perfection of man, not individually, but collectively, in the Strongest Man.

We have two extremes—one Fascism as Mussolini, the other Communism of Sovietism as in Russia.

In wonderful contrast to all these world powers is "The Kingdom set up by the God of Heaven." Israel under David her king. This system is upon the basis of Love—Love to the Lord Jesus Christ. This centres the eye, not upon a Man upon earth now, but upon that Man Who has won our hearts by the sacrifice of Himself once for all, and is now watching and waiting until His enemies become His footstool. This Kingdom is first intimated in Exodus xvii, established in Exodus xix, and typified under David and Solomon. For "Solomon sat on the throne of the Lord as king in the room of David his father." This first earthly dynasty fell, as must all earthly dynasties who have not the Lord for their God.

The division of the kingdom of Israel took place because of idolatry. Israel rebelled against the House of David in 975 B.C., and has never been reunited. But Judah also fell away, and her kingdom came to nought. The sceptre then came to Ireland and remains to this day, but established, because Israel believes on the Lord Jesus Christ. As a Christian nation ruled by God's laws, our King beloved by his subjects, he remembering under Whose rule and authority he is, he stands supreme of all earthly powers ruling in the fear of God.

So far then God has blessed us.

Now for the worldly powers. These have been principally Egypt, Assyria, Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, Rome and Turkey. All these named according to their ascendancy over God's Kingdom, which was permitted in order to discipline, correct and bring us into the knowledge that "there is none that fighteth for us but only Thou, O God." In the time of Daniel these powers, existing and still to come, were enumerated in chapters ii, vii, viii, and the time of their existence to "the Time of the End" (xi, xii).

Now, it will be seen that Meshech and Tubal are two sons of Japhet, and in early days, e.g., 1500 B.C., are mentioned as conquered by the Assyrian, again 900 B.C., and in 600 B.C. they were with the Babylonian under this head of gold, Nebuchadnezzar. They have been therefore in the purview of Dan. ii and vii from the very first, and formed part of the Persian, Grecian and Roman Empires. About the era of the early days of this Christian dispensation they moved northward, as all the modern nations of Europe have done.

We have, by the grace of God, overcome two of the Czars (enemies). The last one is of (out of) the seven. Egypt, Assyria, Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, Rome, Turkey. That is, Meshesh, Tubal, Moscow and Tobolsk formerly, as we have seen within the image Nebuchadnezzar saw, and forming a part of each of these empires, moved northward and became the Northern Colossus, the eighth head of the beast of Rev. xvii, which is the last development of worldly powers standing up against the Lamb. But the Lamb shall overcome this eighth head, though he has under his authority all the former ten kingdoms (now crownless), who shall hate the whore and make her desolate and burn her flesh with fire. Look carefully at the figure, Rev. xvii, and notice the phases of this world-power in Rev. xii, 4. The beast is Pagan, the seven heads are crowned, the ten horns (latent within) not yet crowned. Rev. xiii, 1, the beast is Papal, the seven heads (no crowns), the ten horns crowned. Rev. xvii, 7, chiefly Republican, neither heads nor horns crowned. This latter phase, although retrospective as far as v. 7, has the woman arrayed in scarlet, full of the names of blasphemy, sitting upon the beast. Whereas v. 8 commences the later development of "the beast that was not (Assyria) and yet is (Russia) and ascends out of the bottomless pit," has not the whore on his back, in fact is infidel (Dan. xi, 36-39). The whole system is an emanation from the Mystery of iniquity which originated in Shinar, Babylon (now the Great). Rev. xiii, 18, gives us the key Lateinos. Romiith = 666, its number. So also, "the seven heads are seven mountains"—"Palatine," "Quirinal," "Aventine," "Cœlian," "Viminal," "Esquiline," "Janiculum," "Hills" = 666. Besides leaders whose names make up in gematria 666. It is this last form of the beast which goeth into perdition. In this head will be included all the "Mystery of Iniquity."

This is Russia = Wickedness. This is the Enemy = Czar.

PYRAMID PROPHECY AND "THE CONSUMMATION OF THE AGE."

By D. Davidson.

I.—Bible and Pyramid Predictive Indications.

Nearly four years have passed since the first edition of "The Great Pyramid: Its Divine Message" was published. The work is now in its fourth edition, yet, in spite of criticism—biased and unbiased, informed and uninformed—I remain convinced of the truth of the Message, since my subsequent discoveries have afforded me ample confirmation of the accuracy of my work.

The simple truth of the matter is that the intention concerning the Design of the Pyramid's exterior is shown by the existing details of the exterior; by the Egyptian King Lists proving this Design to be the intention for the exterior; by this external design being the essential framework of the geometrical lay-out of the interior system of the Pyramid; and by the Egyptian King Lists proving this lay-out for the interior to be the intention for the interior. This is a simple statement of what I have given at greater length in my reprinted articles "Prophecy and the Great Pyramid." No criticism has shaken an item of this simple statement. It is upon the truth of this statement that the interpretation of the chronological prophecy depends. The astronomical relations of the exterior prove the chronology to be correct by several independent lines of demonstration. No identity depends upon a single line of demonstration. No item of criticism has proved an error in Pyramid chronology in any of the demonstrations, and any claim to have discovered such an error has been found upon examination to be due to the defective equipment and processes of the critic, or to his distortion of items of reference out of their context. Moreover, the Egyptian King Lists prove the intention of the Pyramid's chronological system, and the intention of its chronological prophecy; and the Coptic MS. account of the ancient Egyptian Pyramid tradition shows why the King Lists exhibit this peculiar property.

Doubt?

The nearest approach to doubt in my own mind concerned the inch-month scale applied to the predictive dating of the events of modern history. With this thought and the consequential feeling of responsibility forming a directing impulse I have sought many times, during the past four years, for evidence that would justify a doubt, however feeble. On each occasion, however, my criticism has brought forth fresh proofs of intention, throwing more light upon the interpretation first established. It is true that others who preceded me in interpreting the Pyramid's prophecy have proved to be wrong in the details of their interpretation. This unfortunate sequence of error has had the effect of discrediting the Pyramid's Message, and pseudo-critics have cited this sequence of error as necessarily proving that my own work is fallacious. There is, however, a difference between the work of my predecessors and my own work—the difference between attempting to build upon unstable foundations and the experience of building upon a really stable foundation.

In my own case I refused to accept the prophetic purpose of the Great Pyramid until the structure itself established its chronological intention and demonstrated its precise system of astronomical chronology defined to the day and year. Others before me had assumed that the Pyramid contained a representation of chronology, and had assumed the Epoch of the supposed chronology. Others before me had either read their interpretation of the Bible into the Pyramid or their interpretation of the Pyramid into the Bible. But none of these had shown, or had attempted to show, that the Bible and the Pyramid each prove to be independent witnesses that are confirmed in detail by other independent witnesses in historical and astronomical records.

Nevertheless, in matters such as this the finite human mind baulks at any absolute declaration of certainty. Yet, as matters stand, it seems like trying to discover an error in a clock that keeps perfect time, to discover where an error can possibly be. I am therefore as confident, as any human mind can be confident of anything, that the inch-month scale of the Pyramid has been proved to be true, and to contain a true prophecy, and that this prophecy defines the Last Tribulation as beginning on the night of 29th–30th May of this year.

Vagary and Vacillation.

Unfortunately many of those who endeavour to expound this matter endeavour also to supplement the interpretation from data neither Scriptural nor Pyramidal. In doing so they too frequently violate the principles of interpretation and the application of these, with the same facile genius as the majority of critics display in misapplying the principles of criticism. Thus I find a prevailing idea to the effect that, although the Pyramid gives the dates for the Great War, the date for the beginning of the Second Low Passage period does not give the beginning of the Last Tribulation—that for some unaccountable reason the Last Tribulation is to be shortened before it begins.

Another idea is of the nature of an apology before the need for apology is apparent. This is to the effect that we may enter the Tribulation on the date given and yet may not know we are in Tribulation until some considerable time has elapsed. Of course, we had our "business as usual" slogan during the early months of the Great War, but all I can say concerning the two theories mentioned is that if the average normal man does not realise that the British race is in a period of Tribulation during the early days of June of this year, then the whole inch-month scale interpretation of the prophetic allegory from the Great Step into the King's Chamber is proved to be erroneous. If the Pyramid prophecy has any purpose to serve, that purpose relates to guidance during the Last Tribulation. If there is any uncertainty in its dating for Tribulation beginning, where is the certainty of its guidance?

I have explained in my reprinted series of articles "Prophecy and the Great Pyramid" the conditions that are defined as applying to the shortening of the Last Tribulation. The date to which the Tribulation is to be shortened is "known to no man," and, if the Pyramid gives any indication of this date, the indication will not be disclosed until the date is past. For the Christ does not come in any phase of His Coming—whether one or many—until the "Last Trump"; and the "Last Trump" is after the Tribulation and before the Judgment. It is futile therefore to attempt to fix any date for the ending of Tribulation or for the Coming of the Christ, since the predictive dating is sealed in the Record of God's Foreknowledge, and is not to be revealed as a Divinely foreknown date until after the event has taken place.

Corroboration.

In "The Great Pyramid: Its Divine Message" I dealt with many lines of evidence that confirm the chronology of the Pyramid's inch-month scale of predictive symbolism. Additional lines of confirmatory evidence were disclosed by the data discussed in Booklet No. 3, "Pyramid Prophecy and Current Events." More recently new data were discussed in my reprinted series of articles "Prophecy and the Great Pyramid," and were shown to confirm the dated interpretation. I now propose to deal with data of a slightly different nature, and to show that these afford interlocking check indications confirming the interpretation of the chronological prophecy by disclosing the antitypical significance of events in current history.

In Booklet No. 3 (page 7) I drew attention to four significant chronological applications of the Scriptural number 153 (John xxi, 11). Other applications were suggested by the Rev. C. H. Coates' article in "The National Message" (August 6th, 1927, p. 503). I pointed out the connection with the number 153 in the October 1st, 1927, issue (p. 633). Thus interpreted Mr. Coates' data stand as follows:—

(The hours given are taken arbitrarily to show the exact duration of the periods).

(1) October 30th (8 a.m.), 1918, to May 29th (6 p.m.), 1928. Interval 10 Solar years less 153 days.

October 30th, 1918. Armistice of Mudros signed, ending war with Turkey.

May 29th, 1928. 2nd Low Passage Tribulation begins (4 p.m. Greenwich; 6 p.m. Pyramid time).

(2) December 11th (9 a.m.), 1917, to July 11th (7 p.m.), 1927. Interval 10 Solar years less 153 days.

December 11th, 1917. Allenby's entry into Jerusalem.

July 11th, 1927. Last Index dating of Antechamber (4.30 p.m. Greenwich; 6.30 p.m. Pyramid time).

Earthquake in Palestine; crack appears on the Mount of Olives.

"The day also when Turkey signed a decree allowing all adult Turks to choose their own religion, the death-blow of Mohammedanism as a national religion." (Mr. Maxwell Carnson, in The Natal Witness, December 24th, 1928.)

(3) August 5th, 1914 (2 p.m.) to March 6th, 1924 (midnight beginning).

Interval 10 Solar years less 153 days.

August 5th, 1914. Britain enters the Great War, 1st Low Passage period begins (4 a.m. Greenwich; 6 a.m. Pyramid time).

March 6th, 1924. Ottoman House expelled from Turkey. Caliphate ends in Turkey. Central Dating of Granite Floor of Antechamber and of square of equal area (4 a.m. Greenwich; 6 a.m. Pyramid time).

A Recent Corroboration.

A new check indication forms the subject of an interesting article by Mr. W. R. Young in The Messiah's Advocate (Oakland, California—issue of January 11th, 1928). In this article it is pointed out that, although the Caliphate was continued by King Hussein of the Hedjaz, Arabia, it was permanently overthrown by Ibn Saud, Sultan of the Wahabis, on October 3rd, 1924; that the Caliphate therefore ended at the very place where it began after Mahomet's death; and that the interval from October 3rd, 1924, to May 29th, 1928, is 1,335 days.

The application suggested by the above outline is quite in accordance with the Pyramid's symbolism. The 1,335 days' interval ends at the terminal date of the period of the Pyramid's Index datings of the "Triple Veil" symbolism. The application is therefore an Index Application intended to indicate that the Last Tribulation Passage leads to the Consummation at the end of the days (i.e., the 1,335 prophetic "days" of Daniel xii, 12 and 13). It is possible that current events may supply a similar antitypical application for 1,290 days from October 3rd, 1924. The date is April 14th, 1928. However this may prove to be the above identity led me to seek the essential symbolic check indication of intention. This was immediately found as follows:—

The Caliphate precariously continued for 212 days after its termination at Constantinople. This showed that the continued duration of the Caliphate was 153 days less than a solar year. The exact data are:—

(1) Midnight beginning March 6th, 1924. (2) A solar year thus beginning terminates at 6 a.m. March 6th, 1925. (3) The 153 days extend from midnight ending October 3rd, 1924, to midnight beginning March 6th, 1925.

The reader will have observed that all the examples given, in connection with the deduction of 153 days from the exact completion of solar years, relate to Turkey, the Caliphate, and the Holy Land; and that the interpretation is therefore complementary to the interpretation of exponents of Scriptural prophecy concerning Daniel xii, 11–13. Dr. Grattan Guinness read that the initial "time" of verse 11 refers to a period beginning in A.D. 70, when the Temple was destroyed by the Romans, and the "daily sacrifice" ceased; and ending when the first wooden mosque of Omar was set up on the site of the Temple. He understood this period as being the preparatory period to which Daniel's prophecies refer as the time during which the land was to be made "desolate," "for the overspreading of abominations" (cf. Dan. ix, 27). Guinness therefore adopted the reading that the 1,290 "days" and the 1,335 "days" are to be dated as years (Numbers xiv, 34; Ezekiel iv, 4 and 6) from the termination of the preparatory period of being made "desolate." He also, however, adopted the principle—confirmed in application in other cases—that each prophetic period has dated stages of beginning and corresponding dated stages of ending.

Now Omar—who conquered Palestine and built the mosque on the Temple site—succeeded to the Caliphate in the autumn of A.D. 634. The Caliphate ended 1,290 years later in the autumn of A.D. 1924. Clearly, then, the period relates to the rule of the Power responsible for "the abomination that maketh desolate." Omar's forces conquered Syria in the summer and autumn of A.D. 634, but consolidation was not completed until A.D. 638 when Omar first visited Syria. (Enc. Brit. 11th Ed. Vol. V, p. 24 d.) It is by the latter visit that the founding of the (wooden) mosque of Omar is to be dated. 1,290 solar years thus dated from the founding of Omar's mosque on the site of the Temple end in A.D. 1928—when by the Pyramid's prophecy, the Last Tribulation should begin.

On Plate LXVI, "The Great Pyramid: Its Divine Message," I have given the reckoning in lunar years, connecting the "Seven Times" with the date of Jeremiah's prophecy (of the Second Advent), in the midst of the siege of Jerusalem; with the beginning of Our Lord's Ministry; and with the date of completion of Omar's mosque. This reckoning places the 1,335 years as ending in A.D. 1936, at the entrance date of the King's Chamber. In my reprinted series of articles "Prophecy and the Great Pyramid" I have shown, however, that the Pyramid allegory of the Contract between the Great Architect and His "builders" fixes the latter date as the latest date for the "builders" finishing their specified work. The implication is that by finishing their work sooner, the "builders" can have the Tribulation period shortened for them, and the Second Advent brought nearer. The article to follow will be devoted to an emphatic reiteration that there is no indication of the beginning of Tribulation being delayed, and that Tribulation does not necessarily begin with war, but may be ushered in by a heavy burden of trouble for the real nature of which we must wait and see.

JACOB'S TROUBLE.

BY HOWARD B. RAND, LL.B.

"ALAS! for that day is great, so that none is like it; it is even the time of Jacob's trouble; but he shall be saved out of it."

Through the prophet Jeremiah, God refers to the troublous times at the close of the present dispensation in terms of Jacob's trouble. Thus, as our authority, we have His Word that the troubles of the present day will parallel those experienced by our father Jacob.

Many, who have failed to differentiate between Judah and Israel, have expected the seventieth week of Daniel—a week of seven years—to be fulfilled at the close of the Christian dispensation. Whereas, had they distinguished between the House of Judah and the House of Israel, they clearly would have seen that Daniel's seventieth week was fulfilled upon the Jews in the desolation caused by the Roman armies, and in the destruction of Jerusalem in the first century. At the close of the present age they would have seen that upon all Israel would come the trouble designated by God as even the time of Jacob's trouble, thus avoiding the error of trying to separate the seventieth week of Daniel from its real chronological setting.

That Jacob's trouble is not a period of seven years, or even a multiple of seven years, is clearly indicated in a study of his life. This period of trouble through which he passed has a definite chronological starting-point, and also as definite a time period for its duration. During these years Jacob, away from his home and his father's household, and outside the Land of Promise, experienced the trials which were a type of the troubles through which his seed would pass at the close of the latter days.

Let us briefly outline his history during these years, noting their beginning, duration, and close, and make the application to the days in which we now live as warranted by the Bible statement. Up to a certain point Jacob's history was that of any man living a pastoral life in his father's home. However, there came a day when his covetousness and desires, backed by his mother, led him to deceive his father, and to secure by such deception the blessing intended for his brother Esau. From that day commenced the period known as his trouble. Esau, having lost the blessing, purposed to kill Jacob. Jacob fled from his father's house, and as a wanderer entered a strange country. His bitterness of spirit is shown when he meets Rachel—"and he lifted up his voice and wept."—Gen. xxix, 11.

Jacob loved Rachel, and said to Laban, when asked what his wages should be, "I will serve thee seven years for Rachel." After the marriage supper, unbeknown to Jacob, Laban gave him Leah to wife, and in the morning Jacob accused Laban of beguiling him. Then he served yet another seven years for Rachel. Thus he rendered seven years of service for the wife he did not love, and seven years for the wife he loved. Of the years he served for Rachel it is said, "they seemed unto him but a few days, for the love he had to her." Fourteen years are thus passed in service to Laban for Leah and Rachel.

Joseph was born at the close of the fourteen years of service—"and it came to pass, when Rachel had born Joseph, that Jacob said unto Laban, send me away, that I may go unto mine own place, and to my country." But Laban, realising that God had blessed him because of Jacob, would not let him go, and asked that he still serve, appointing himself wages. Then follows the record, in the thirtieth chapter of Genesis, of Jacob's six years of service for his goods. Jacob testified to the hardship and privation of these years, when at their close he was angry with his father-in-law for pursuing him:—

"This twenty years have I been with thee; thy ewes and thy shegoats have not cast their young, and the rams of thy flock have I not eaten.

"That which was torn of beasts I brought not unto thee I bare the loss of it; of my hand didst thou require it, whether stolen by day, or stolen by night.

"Thus I was; in the day the drought consumed me, and the frost by night; and my sleep departed from my eyes.

"Thus have I been twenty years in thy house; I served thee fourteen years for thy two daughters, and six years for thy cattle; and thou hast changed my wages ten times."

After this Jacob passes on, sending messengers to his brother Esau. These messengers bring back word of Esau's coming with 400 armed men. Despairing of his life, Jacob offers the prayer contained in Gen. xxxii, 9–12:—

"And Jacob said, O God of my father Abraham, and God of my father Isaac, the Lord which saidst unto me, Return unto thy country, and to thy kindred, and I will deal well with thee:

"I am not worthy of the least of all the mercies, and of all the truth, which thou hast showed unto thy servant; for with my staff I passed over this Jordan, and now I am become two bands.

ment. It is futile therefore to attempt to fix any date for the ending of Tribulation or for the Coming of the Christ, since the predictive dating is sealed in the Record of God's Foreknowledge, and is not to be revealed as a Divinely foreknown date until after the event has taken place.

CORROBORATION.

In "The Great Pyramid: Its Divine Message" I dealt with many lines of evidence that confirm the chronology of the Pyramid's inch-month scale of predictive symbolism. Additional lines of confirmatory evidence were disclosed by the data discussed in Booklet No. 3, "Pyramid Prophecy and Current Events." More recently new data were discussed in my reprinted series of articles "Prophecy and the Great Pyramid," and were shown to confirm the dated interpretation. I now propose to deal with data of a slightly different nature, and to show that these afford interlocking check indications confirming the interpretation of the chronological prophecy by disclosing the antitypical significance of events in current history.

In Booklet No. 3 (page 7) I drew attention to four significant chronological applications of the Scriptural number 153 (John xxi, 11). Other applications were suggested by the Rev. C. H. Coates' article in "THE NATIONAL MESSAGE" (August 6th, 1927, p. 503). I pointed out the connection with the number 153 in the October 1st, 1927, issue (p. 633). Thus interpreted Mr. Coates' data stand as follows :—

(The hours given are taken arbitrarily to show the exact duration of the periods).

(1) October 30th (8 a.m.), 1918, to May 29th (6 p.m.), 1928. Interval 10 Solar years less 153 days.

October 30th, 1918. Armistice of Mudros signed, ending war with Turkey.

May 29th, 1928. 2nd Low Passage Tribulation begins (4 p.m. Greenwich; 6 p.m. Pyramid time).

(2) December 11th (9 a.m.), 1917, to July 11th (7 p.m.), 1927. Interval 10 Solar years less 153 days.

December 11th, 1917. Allenby's entry into Jerusalem.

July 11th, 1927. Last Index dating of Antechamber (4.30 p.m. Greenwich; 6.30 p.m. Pyramid time).

Earthquake in Palestine; crack appears on the Mount of Olives.

"The day also when Turkey signed a decree allowing all adult Turks to choose their own religion, the death-blow of Mohammedanism as a national religion." (Mr. Maxwell Carnson, in The Natal Witness, December 24th, 1928.)

(3) August 5th, 1914 (2 p.m.) to March 6th, 1924 (midnight beginning).

Interval 10 Solar years less 153 days.

August 5th, 1914. Britain enters the Great War, 1st Low Passage period begins (4 a.m. Greenwich; 6 a.m. Pyramid time).

March 6th, 1924. Ottoman House expelled from Turkey. Caliphate ends in Turkey. Central Dating of Granite Floor of Antechamber and of square of equal area (4 a.m. Greenwich; 6 a.m. Pyramid time).

A RECENT CORROBORATION.

A new check indication forms the subject of an interesting article by Mr. W. R. Young in The Messiah's Advocate (Oakland, California—issue of January 11th, 1928). In this article it is pointed out that, although the Caliphate was continued by King Hussein of the Hedjaz, Arabia, it was permanently overthrown by Ibn Saud, Sultan of the Wahabis, on October 3rd, 1924; that the Caliphate therefore ended at the very place where it began after Mahomet's death; and that the interval from October 3rd, 1924, to May 29th, 1928, is 1,335 days.

The application suggested by the above outline is quite in accordance with the Pyramid's symbolism. The 1,335 days' interval ends at the terminal date of the period of the Pyramid's Index datings of the "Triple Veil" symbolism. The application is therefore an Index Application intended to indicate that the Last Tribulation Passage leads to the Consummation at the end of the days (i.e., the 1,335 prophetic "days" of Daniel xii, 12 and 13). It is possible that current events may supply a similar antitypical application for 1,290 days from October 3rd, 1924. The date is April 14th, 1928. However this may prove to be the above identity led me to seek the essential symbolic check indication of intention. This was immediately found as follows :—

The Caliphate precariously continued for 212 days after its termination at Constantinople. This showed that the continued duration of the Caliphate was 153 days less than a solar year. The exact data are :—

(1) Midnight beginning March 6th, 1924. (2) A solar year thus beginning terminates at 6 a.m. March 6th, 1925. (3) The 153 days extend from midnight ending October 3rd, 1924, to midnight beginning March 6th, 1925.

The reader will have observed that all the examples given, in connection with the deduction of 153 days from the exact completion of solar years, relate to Turkey, the Caliphate, and the Holy Land; and that the interpretation is therefore complementary to the interpretation of exponents of Scriptural prophecy concerning Daniel xii, 11–13. Dr. Grattan Guinness read that the initial "time" of verse 11 refers to a period beginning in A.D. 70, when the Temple was destroyed by the Romans, and the "daily sacrifice" ceased; and ending when the first wooden mosque of Omar was set up on the site of the Temple. He understood this period as being the preparatory period to which Daniel's prophecies refer as the time during which the land was to be made "desolate," "for the overspreading of abominations" (cf. Dan. ix, 27). Guinness therefore adopted the reading that the 1,290 "days" and the 1,335 "days" are to be dated as years (Numbers xiv, 34; Ezekiel iv, 4 and 6) from the termination of the preparatory period of being made "desolate." He also, however, adopted the principle—confirmed in application in other cases—that each prophetic period has dated stages of beginning and corresponding dated stages of ending.

Now Omar—who conquered Palestine and built the mosque on the Temple site—succeeded to the Caliphate in the autumn of A.D. 634. The Caliphate ended 1,290 years later in the autumn of A.D. 1924. Clearly, then, the period relates to the rule of the Power responsible for "the abomination that maketh desolate." Omar's forces conquered Syria in the summer and autumn of A.D. 634, but consolidation was not completed until A.D. 638 when Omar first visited Syria. (Enc. Brit. 11th Ed. Vol. V, p. 24 d.) It is by the latter visit that the founding of the (wooden) mosque of Omar is to be dated. 1,290 solar years thus dated from the founding of Omar's mosque on the site of the Temple end in A.D. 1928—when by the Pyramid's prophecy, the Last Tribulation should begin.

On Plate LXVI, "The Great Pyramid: Its Divine Message," I have given the reckoning in lunar years, connecting the "Seven Times" with the date of Jeremiah's prophecy (of the Second Advent), in the midst of the siege of Jerusalem; with the beginning of Our Lord's Ministry; and with the date of completion of Omar's mosque. This reckoning places the 1,335 years as ending in A.D. 1936, at the entrance date of the King's Chamber. In my reprinted series of articles "Prophecy and the Great Pyramid" I have shown, however, that the Pyramid allegory of the Contract between the Great Architect and His "builders" fixes the latter date as the latest date for the "builders" finishing their specified work. The implication is that by finishing their work sooner, the "builders" can have the Tribulation period shortened for them, and the Second Advent brought nearer. The article to follow will be devoted to an emphatic reiteration that there is no indication of the beginning of Tribulation being delayed, and that Tribulation does not necessarily begin with war, but may be ushered in by a heavy burden of trouble for the real nature of which we must wait and see.

JACOB'S TROUBLE.

BY HOWARD B. RAND, LL.B.

"ALAS! for that day is great, so that none is like it; it is even the time of Jacob's trouble; but he shall be saved out of it."

Through the prophet Jeremiah, God refers to the troublous times at the close of the present dispensation in terms of Jacob's trouble. Thus, as our authority, we have His Word that the troubles of the present day will parallel those experienced by our father Jacob.

Many, who have failed to differentiate between Judah and Israel, have expected the seventieth week of Daniel—a week of seven years—to be fulfilled at the close of the Christian dispensation. Whereas, had they distinguished between the House of Judah and the House of Israel, they clearly would have seen that Daniel's seventieth week was fulfilled upon the Jews in the desolation caused by the Roman armies, and in the destruction of Jerusalem in the first century. At the close of the present age they would have seen that upon all Israel would come the trouble designated by God as even the time of Jacob's trouble, thus avoiding the error of trying to separate the seventieth week of Daniel from its real chronological setting.

That Jacob's trouble is not a period of seven years, or even a multiple of seven years, is clearly indicated in a study of his life. This period of trouble through which he passed has a definite chronological starting-point, and also as definite a time period for its duration. During these years Jacob, away from his home and his father's household, and outside the Land of Promise, experienced the trials which were a type of the troubles through which his seed would pass at the close of the latter days.

Let us briefly outline his history during these years, noting their beginning, duration, and close, and make the application to the days in which we now live as warranted by the Bible statement. Up to a certain point Jacob's history was that of any man living a pastoral life in his father's home. However, there came a day when his covetousness and desires, backed by his mother, led him to deceive his father, and to secure by such deception the blessing intended for his brother Esau. From that day commenced the period known as his trouble. Esau, having lost the blessing, purposed to kill Jacob. Jacob fled from his father's house, and as a wanderer entered a strange country. His bitterness of spirit is shown when he meets Rachel—"and he lifted up his voice and wept."—Gen. xxix, 11.

Jacob loved Rachel, and said to Laban, when asked what his wages should be, "I will serve thee seven years for Rachel." After the marriage supper, unbeknown to Jacob, Laban gave him Leah to wife, and in the morning Jacob accused Laban of beguiling him. Then he served yet another seven years for Rachel. Thus he rendered seven years of service for the wife he did not love, and seven years for the wife he loved. Of the years he served for Rachel it is said, "they seemed unto him but a few days, for the love he had to her." Fourteen years are thus passed in service to Laban for Leah and Rachel.

Joseph was born at the close of the fourteen years of service—"and it came to pass, when Rachel had born Joseph, that Jacob said unto Laban, send me away, that I may go unto mine own place, and to my country." But Laban, realising that God had blessed him because of Jacob, would not let him go, and asked that he still serve, appointing himself wages. Then follows the record, in the thirtieth chapter of Genesis, of Jacob's six years of service for his goods. Jacob testified to the hardship and privation of these years, when at their close he was angry with his father-in-law for pursuing him:—

"This twenty years have I been with thee; thy ewes and thy shegoats have not cast their young, and the rams of thy flock have I not eaten.

"That which was torn of beasts I brought not unto thee I bare the loss of it; of my hand didst thou require it, whether stolen by day, or stolen by night.

"Thus I was; in the day the drought consumed me, and the frost by night; and my sleep departed from my eyes.

"Thus have I been twenty years in thy house; I served thee fourteen years for thy two daughters, and six years for thy cattle; and thou hast changed my wages ten times."

After this Jacob passes on, sending messengers to his brother Esau. These messengers bring back word of Esau's coming with 400 armed men. Despairing of his life, Jacob offers the prayer contained in Gen. xxxii, 9–12:—

"And Jacob said, O God of my father Abraham, and God of my father Isaac, the Lord which saidst unto me, Return unto thy country, and to thy kindred, and I will deal well with thee:

"I am not worthy of the least of all the mercies, and of all the truth, which thou hast showed unto thy servant; for with my staff I passed over this Jordan, and now I am become two bands.

"Deliver me, I pray thee, from the hand of my brother, from the hand of Esau: for I fear him, lest he will come and smite me, and the mother with the children.

"And thou saidst, I will surely do thee good, and make thy seed as the sand of the sea, which cannot be numbered for multitude."

He wrestled all that night with the angel—as Jacob—and did not become Israel—ruler with God—until in his heart he was ready to make restitution to his brother of that which he wrongfully had taken. Then he became willing to give up anything, or everything, to secure the angel's blessing, for he said "I will not let thee go, except thou bless me."

The next morning we find him making the necessary restitution to his brother, as Mr. Goard has so often pointed out, of the lordship which he had wrongfully taken—"These are to find grace in the sight of my Lord."

Jacob's troubles were not over, for after this Simeon and Levi slew Hamor and Shechem, and Jacob said to them, "Ye have troubled me to make me a stink among the inhabitants of the land."

Then follows God's call to him to arise and go to Bethel, and here Jacob cleansed his household of all idolatry.—Gen. xxxv, 1-4. After this cleansing at Bethel, Benjamin was born, the last son born to Jacob, and Jacob was comforted, ending his time of trouble with the return to his father's house.

This period chronologically covers twenty-two years, beginning with the time Jacob fled from his father's house, and closing with the cleansing of his own household of all idolatry and their return to Palestine, when they became the household of God.

It is interesting here to note that in the Pyramid—the emblem of the Stone Kingdom, containing the chronology of the Children of Israel—that at the close of the latter days the monument records a period of trouble for Jacob beginning in 1914 and closing in 1936, the duration of which is also twenty-two years. Thus the Pyramid chronologically gives us as the length of their end time trouble the same number of years for its duration as the Bible records for Jacob's trouble.

Let us parallel events. The first seven years, corresponding with the years Jacob served for the wife he did not love, that period from 1914 to 1921, beginning with the world war and closing with the completion of the treaties and mandates. For the next seven years, 1921 to 1928, he served for the wife he loved, a period of comparative peace, but with domestic troubles and jealousies. With the British Empire, internal troubles and strikes. This year, 1928, corresponds to the year Joseph was born, the type of those to be removed from the household of Israel, for whom Jacob mourned as for one that was dead.

The next six years Jacob served under hardship for his goods, and if the Pyramid and the Bible bear true witness to coming events, Israel nationally must serve to retain and defend the Kingdom. At the close of these years Jacob despaired of his life when he heard that Esau was coming to meet him with 400 armed men, and was not assured of salvation until in his heart he made restitution. So Israel must make restitution of the Law, and restoration under the Law, before she will be truly blessed and become in fact as well as name Israel, ruler with God, and escape the overwhelming disasters that will face her at that time.

Then must follow the cleansing of the land of idolatry in all its forms. In the birth of Benjamin is the type of the light-bearers, for in his birth was Jacob comforted. So nationally will Israel be comforted when the King of Heaven establishes His rule in righteousness in the Land, for which time, and which restoration, all the Prophets from Moses downwards, and all the Apostles, have looked with glorious expectation.

ROME, THE BILL-POSTER.

By the Rev. H. A. James.

WONDERING why the early history of our race, in Great Britain, and its early religion, has been wrapped in such obscurity for so many centuries, it occurred to the writer that it is due to the bill-posting energies of the Roman historian. During the period of the Roman supremacy, everything was seen through Roman eyes, and painted for succeeding generations by the Roman brush. It was the aim of Rome that the world should become Roman; to merge all into the great Roman entity. Where Rome predominated, there must be no loyalty except to Rome: no religion which made adherence to Roman ambitions impossible.

The "Roman might" first began to crumble when it fell upon the "Stone" of Britain. It found here a religion which insisted upon loyalty to God, and to their country, which could not be merged into the Roman entity. The Druids taught that there were three great duties of men: to worship God; to be just to all men; and to die for their country. This teaching did not suit Rome. To obey Cæsar, to worship the great Roman Power, to die for Rome—those were worthy ambitions. But to die for their country, when that meant opposition to Rome, could not be tolerated.

So the Druidical religion had to be stamped out. To excuse the persecution that followed the Roman historian painted the religion of the Druids as a barbarous thing, a system of horrible rites, and human sacrifices. This was consistent with their portraiture of the Briton as a skin-clad savage. And for all these centuries our own historians and teachers have been content to accept and to confirm this travesty of historical fact.

The same thing has happened with the history of Christianity in this land. The recently published report of the Malines Conversations describes the agreement which was arrived at, by the self-appointed representatives of Anglican and Roman Churchmanship, that "to the Roman See the Churches of the English owe their Christianity through Gregory our father, who sent us baptism." What an amazing agreement, in the face of present-day knowledge that the Christian Church was established in this country more than 500 years before Augustine visited these shores in A.D. 597.

This ignorance of our early history, so prevalent among leaders and rank and file, is the work of the Roman bill-poster. It is a common sight to see the professional bill poster, bucket of paste, brush, and bundle of posters in hand, approach an advertisement hoarding. Usually he does not bother to take down the posters already on the boards, but merely pastes his own on top, effectually hiding and obliterating the writing underneath. That is exactly what the Roman historian did. He merely pasted his own posters on top of the others. We can thank God that he was unable to remove the old writings, or to destroy them, but was only able to cover them up. But this "covering up" has been effective for many centuries.

But now the top posters are rapidly being stripped off, and the older and truer writings being brought to light. This stripping process is the work of experts—experts in archæology, ethnology, philology, etc. The earth itself is yielding its ancient secrets to those who are delving into it with pick and shovel. The ancient manuscripts, the musty shelves of the libraries, traditions and folk-lore, are all contributing their quota to the patient man of research. There is rapidly being brought to light a vast and accumulating evidence of our wonderful past; the mystery of God's dealings with our race, forcing us to exclaim with a fuller meaning and a greater significance, "God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform." "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper." No, not even the deadly weapon of lying propaganda, nor the insidious weapon of mis-written history.

OUR LORD'S PARABLE OF THE GRASS.

By John H. Tench.

"If God so clothe the grass, which is to-day in the field, and to-morrow is cast into the oven, how much more will He clothe you, O ye of little faith?"

The Clothing of the Grass.

(a) The Root, in proportion to its size, is more fibrous and tenacious than that of any other plant. In some instances it is so vital that the more it is hacked and cut, the faster it spreads itself; and it runs so extensively, each joint sending up a new shoot, that it encloses a large space of soil. In this way the grass clusters closely together, and covers the ground as with a carpet; while in the absence of blossoms, which are often prevented from forming by the cropping of animals, the budding roots propagate the plant, so that the effect of grazing pasture-lands is always to increase the vegetation laterally, and make the verdure more compact. Hugh MacMillon, D.D., says in his "Bible Teachings in Nature": —"He maketh grass to grow upon the mountains. The wild grasses are taken, as it were, under the special providence of God. In their perennial verdure in regions above the zone of man's cultivation, we have a perpetual proof of God's care of the lower animals that neither sow nor reap. The mountain grasses grow spontaneously; they require no culture but such as the rain and the sunshine of heaven supply. They obtain their nourishment directly from the inorganic soil, and are independent of organic materials. Nowhere is the grass so green and vigorous as on the beautiful slopes of lawn-like pasture high up on the Alps, radiant with the glory of wild flowers, and ever musical with the hum of grasshoppers and the tinkling of cattle-bells. Innumerable cows and goats graze upon them; the peasants spend the summer months in making cheese and hay from them for winter consumption in the valleys. This exhausting system of husbandry has been carried on during untold centuries; no one thinks of manuring the Alpine pastures, and yet no deficiency has been observed in their fertility, though the soil is but a thin covering spread over the native rocks." It is manifest that, were seeds instead of living plants developed in the ears of the mountain grasses, they would be useless in the stormy regions where they grow. They would be blown far away from the places they were intended to clothe to spots foreign to their nature and habits, and thus the species would speedily perish, so our Heavenly Father "maketh the grass to grow upon the mountains" by means of the roots.

(b) The Stem is hollow, provided at intervals with knots, and invested, as if by some mysterious process of electrotype, with a thin coating of flint. It is constructed in this manner so as to combine the utmost strength with its light and elegant form; and so efficient are these mechanical appliances, that it rarely gives way under the force of the most violent winds, unless when heavy and long-continued rains lay it prostrate, and beat upon it until its elasticity is destroyed.

(c) The Leaves next exhibit an adaptation to circumstances no less remarkable. They are spear-shaped, and strongly ribbed with threads of flinty fibre, thus forming wedges admirably fitted for forcing their way with least resistance through the soil; they are long, narrow, alternate, and sheathing the stem for a considerable distance, in order to present as small a surface and give as light a hold as possible to the winds; they are destitute of branches, so as to qualify them for growing together in masses without suffering from want of air and light—the whole stem being succulent and covered with air-holes, thus acting as lungs along with the leaves.

(d) The Flower is a perfect miracle of design. It is produced from the upper sheath, which encloses it altogether when young; it is disposed in simple or branching heads, each head consisting of two or more chaffy scales, inserted the one above the other, like the plates of a steel cuirass. From each of these scales three slender white threads hang out, crowned with yellow dusty knobs, playing freely about in every breeze. These little threads or stamens are of the most vital importance; for without their agency the ears of corn would not fill with the nutritious grain. Upwards of 300 genera and more than 5,000 different species of grass exist in the world. The Creator has repeated the same pattern more frequently in the grass tribe than in any other order of vegetation as if in admiration of its grace and simplicity. In studying the grass, we seem to get within the veil behind which the Creator works in secret; we come in contact, as it were, with His mind and heart; we see Him Who is the Invisible. Standing on the green sward, each blade of grass whispers to the inner ear, "Take off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground."

The Clothing of Man.

"Therefore I say unto you, Be not anxious for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than food, and the body than raiment?"

The word "thought" as translated in the A.V. has made no little trouble in many minds. At the time our common translation of the Bible was made, "thought" had a different meaning from that in ordinary use to-day. It meant what the Greek word means: anxiety, over-solicitude, worry. Shakespeare ("Hamlet") says:—

Digitized by Google

"The native hue of resolution
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought."

And Bacon ("Henry VII") says:—"Hawis, an alderman of London, was put in trouble and died with thought and anguish."

In our pasture-lands we see the sheep converting, by some mysterious vital action, the grass which they eat into snowy fleeces to keep our bodies warm. We see the flax extracting from the earth the materials of those fibres which are to be woven into garments for us. Raiment, as well as food, comes from the same humble source, and the grass may, therefore, well be employed to teach us our frailty and dependence upon God for our temporal blessings. We know that the same law which regulates and limits the supply of our food from the grass also regulates and limits the supply of our raiment from the grass. We are apt to think that by aid of our vast mechanical appliances we can produce the materials of clothing in unlimited quantity, but the slightest reflection will convince us of the fallacy of this idea. Wool and flax are as difficult to produce as corn; nay, more so; for, while they are equally subject to the vicissitudes of the seasons—to blights, and storms, and diseases—they cannot like the corn be produced in every country, being confined to certain regions and peculiar climates. The annual stock of clothing materials, like the annual supply of food, is sufficient only for the annual consumption of the human race; so that year after year we have to work for our raiment as we have to work for our meat. We can no more accumulate and lay up in store our wool and flax than we can accumulate and lay up in store our corn. Unless immediately used, the moth will corrupt the one as the mildew will destroy the other. We are brought back from all our vain efforts and covetous desires to a simple childlike trust in Him Who hath promised to feed and clothe us as He feeds and clothes the grass of the field.

The Food of Man.

The prophet Isaiah tells us in his fortieth chapter: "All flesh is grass." This prophecy is true literally as well as metaphorically. Grass is the first organised agency that extracts, by its living energies, nutritious particles from the hard, inorganic soil. In its tissues the dust of the earth first becomes vital. Day and night, season after season, it is unceasingly purveying for the wants of the animal kingdom, gathering the materials of nourishment and strength from the air and earth, reducing the impalpable and evanescent forces of light, heat, and moisture, into solid and enduring forms, which can be eaten and transformed into complicated organisms and vital powers.

Man cannot live upon grass, properly so called. He cannot derive a direct subsistence from it. The experiment was once made in notable circumstances, but it turned out a deplorable failure. During the disastrous campaign of Napoleon's army in Russia, the soldiers, in the absence of all other foods, were obliged to boil and eat the common grass of the field, which they dug out from beneath its covering of snow and ice; and in every case where this wretched food was partaken of in sufficient quantity to allay the intolerable cravings of hunger, delirium and racking pains were the results. Though grass eaten directly would prove injurious to man, inasmuch as his digestive organs are not adapted for its assimilation, it forms the support of domesticated animals, which he rears exclusively for their use as human food. The materials of his structure are first derived from the air, earth, and water, by means of grass: they are still further organised and prepared by the agency of graminivorous animals; and they reach him at last in a proper condition for his nourishment in the shape of animal food. The grass of the field is thus indirectly, but most truly, man's stay and support.

But there is a way in which even directly grass forms human food. The stem and blades, and other inferior parts of the vegetation, are intended for the support of the inferior animals, but the fruitful ear, the more highly-organised seed, the crown and consummation of the plant, the "flower of grass" into which its vital powers and nourishing qualities are drawn up and concentrated, is reserved for food to man. We must not forget that the various kinds of cereal grain—such as corn, wheat, rice and maize—are the product of true grasses; and that while the straw and fodder are given to the beasts of the field, the nobler structure of man is maintained by the nobler part of the grass, which extracts virtue out of the sunshine and dew, and out of the forces which play beneath the varied skies of summer and autumn, and presents it in the simple form and peculiar mode of combination which is essential to healthy nutrition.

Reasons for Trusting in God.

1. Is not the life more than meat? Since God has given life, will He not see that means of sustaining life are given with it? For the one gift is vain without the other. We should give our chief attention to the true life, real life, and not, for the sake of saving it, do the wrongs that destroy it.

2. "Behold the fowls," birds of the air; for they sow not. God in nature does the sowing. Yet your Heavenly Father feedeth them. Not their Heavenly Father, for while they are His creatures, they are not His children as you are. How does God feed them? Not in idleness, nor by putting food in their mouths while they sit still in the trees and sing and wait; but by providing the food which they can obtain, and providing them with the means of seeing and obtaining food. Not idleness, but industry, is taught by God's care of the birds. "Are ye not much better, of more value, than they?" Did you ever hear of a father who fed the birds, but starved his children?

3. "Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature? and why take ye thought for raiment?" Anxiety is useless concerning a vast number of things beyond our power to change. Such things are as much beyond our control as the courses of the stars through the sky. A man can no more create his bread for a single meal than he can create a planet.

4. "Consider the lilies how they grow, they toil not, neither do they spin, yet I say unto you that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these." Because the glory of the flowers is part of their nature, not robes that can cover a heart that is like "a whited sepulchre." As the beauty of the flower is unfolded by the Divine Creator Spirit from within, from the laws and capacities of its own individual life, so must all true adornment of man be unfolded from within by the same Almighty Spirit. There is no human manufacture that can compare with the colours and the texture of the flowers, which under the microscope reveal perfections and glories unseen by the human eye.

5. "After all these things do the Gentiles seek." The heathen—other nations without true religion. This is what you would expect of those who know nothing of our Heavenly Father.

6. "Your Heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things." He does not forbid your wants but supplies them. Your distrust arises from not knowing your Heavenly Father. God loves to have you happy. He delights in your good. He wants you first of all to be good, to be heavenly, to have those qualities which make blessedness immortal. Sometimes He must deprive us of lesser good that we may possess the greater.

"Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things [food, clothing, etc.] shall be added unto you."

The Kingdom of Jehovah was established over Israel at Mount Sinai. There Israel became a nation, Jehovah descended on that Mount and became their King, and issued His righteous laws which we know as the Ten Commandments. He continues the King of Israel for ever, for we know that when Israel desired an earthly king, so that they might be like the surrounding nations, the Lord said unto Samuel: "Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee, for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected Me that I should not reign over them." In that Kingdom of Israel there came the establishment of the Davidic line to act as Chief Governor before the Lord in Israel, and that line is with us still in the person of our beloved King George. It is recorded in the first Book of Chronicles that David said: "Of all my sons, for the Lord hath given me many sons, He hath chosen Solomon my son to sit upon the Throne of the Kingdom of the Lord over Israel." The angel Gabriel, foretelling to Mary the birth of Jesus, said: "The Lord God shall give unto Him the Throne of His father David, and He shall reign over the House of Jacob for ever, and of His Kingdom there shall be no end."

The Kingdom and the Throne of David remained with the House of Judah until the days of Zedekiah, the last of the House of David reigning at Jerusalem, when from the highest branch of the tall cedar, a tender one, Tea Tephi, the daughter of Zedekiah, was planted in the height of Israel, for it is recorded in the Book of Daniel, chapter ii:—"In the days of these kings [of whom Nebuchadnezzar was one] shall the God of Heaven set up a Kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the Kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever." David's Kingdom over Israel is also to stand for ever. King George's genealogical tree shows that he is the lineal descendant of King David, and therefore that the British must be Israel.

Jesus warns us to seek the Kingdom of God first and His righteousness, and all these things—food, clothing, etc.—shall be added unto you. Surely "the Kingdom of God and His righteousness" must here mean the Lord Himself. To what else could the Lord have been alluding? We know that Jesus Christ is the righteousness of God.

When interpreting to His disciples the Parable of the Tares Jesus said: "The Son of man shall send forth His angels and they shall gather out of His Kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire, there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the Kingdom of their Father." Now Israel [The British] who form the Kingdom cannot remain therein unless each one has sought the Lord Jesus Christ, the righteousness of God; and all the heathen who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, the righteousness of God, will be admitted into that Kingdom.

This is beautifully shown by Our Lord's words to the Roman Centurion, who had such great faith in the mighty power of Jesus that he thought it unnecessary for the Lord to come to his house to heal his servant, but said: "Speak the word only and my servant shall be healed." Jesus said: "Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel, and I say unto you, That many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the Kingdom of Heaven, but the children of the kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness, there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editors of The National Message.

Dear Sirs,

I have had the very great pleasure of reading Rev. Wm. Pascoe Goard's new book, "The Law of the Lord, or the Common Law," in manuscript. Mr. Goard conferred this privilege because I am a practising Barrister, and have studied the Israel origin of our Common Law.

At first I was astounded at the audacity of a layman in writing on the Common Law and its origin. This upon further thought is the characteristic attitude of professionals toward laymen who deal with the secrets of their profession. The Bible has long been supposed to be a Book capable only of correct interpretation by trained Theologians. The supposition is wrong. Our Lord plainly intimated that the Holy Spirit will interpret His Word to all so plainly that the wayfaring man, though simple of understanding, may not err therein. So with the "Law of the Lord." It is not a subject for the professional man only. It is a laymen's field. It was intended by God that it should be taught by every father to every child.

Why all this mystery of law? The trouble is that Israel sinned in neglecting the Law of the Lord and followed the statutes of Omri and thus became a byword and a hissing. It is the blindness in part that has fallen upon Israel until this day.

Now Mr. Goard has pointed the way for Lawyers in this very valuable book. It would not do to change this book. Lawyers may write on the history of the law or upon its text, but this book is foundational. It gives the direction in which to search. Find the origin of the people and you find what was translation of the Bible was made, "thought" had a different meaning from that in ordinary use to-day. It meant what the Greek word means: anxiety, over-solicitude, worry. Shakespeare ("Hamlet") says:—

"The native hue of resolution
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought."

And Bacon ("Henry VII") says:—"Hawis, an alderman of London, was put in trouble and died with thought and anguish."

In our pasture-lands we see the sheep converting, by some mysterious vital action, the grass which they eat into snowy fleeces to keep our bodies warm. We see the flax extracting from the earth the materials of those fibres which are to be woven into garments for us. Raiment, as well as food, comes from the same humble source, and the grass may, therefore, well be employed to teach us our frailty and dependence upon God for our temporal blessings. We know that the same law which regulates and limits the supply of our food from the grass also regulates and limits the supply of our raiment from the grass. We are apt to think that by aid of our vast mechanical appliances we can produce the materials of clothing in unlimited quantity, but the slightest reflection will convince us of the fallacy of this idea. Wool and flax are as difficult to produce as corn; nay, more so; for, while they are equally subject to the vicissitudes of the seasons—to blights, and storms, and diseases—they cannot like the corn be produced in every country, being confined to certain regions and peculiar climates. The annual stock of clothing materials, like the annual supply of food, is sufficient only for the annual consumption of the human race; so that year after year we have to work for our raiment as we have to work for our meat. We can no more accumulate and lay up in store our wool and flax than we can accumulate and lay up in store our corn. Unless immediately used, the moth will corrupt the one as the mildew will destroy the other. We are brought back from all our vain efforts and covetous desires to a simple childlike trust in Him Who hath promised to feed and clothe us as He feeds and clothes the grass of the field.

The Food of Man.

The prophet Isaiah tells us in his fortieth chapter: "All flesh is grass." This prophecy is true literally as well as metaphorically. Grass is the first organised agency that extracts, by its living energies, nutritious particles from the hard, inorganic soil. In its tissues the dust of the earth first becomes vital. Day and night, season after season, it is unceasingly purveying for the wants of the animal kingdom, gathering the materials of nourishment and strength from the air and earth, reducing the impalpable and evanescent forces of light, heat, and moisture, into solid and enduring forms, which can be eaten and transformed into complicated organisms and vital powers.

Man cannot live upon grass, properly so called. He cannot derive a direct subsistence from it. The experiment was once made in notable circumstances, but it turned out a deplorable failure. During the disastrous campaign of Napoleon's army in Russia, the soldiers, in the absence of all other foods, were obliged to boil and eat the common grass of the field, which they dug out from beneath its covering of snow and ice; and in every case where this wretched food was partaken of in sufficient quantity to allay the intolerable cravings of hunger, delirium and racking pains were the results. Though grass eaten directly would prove injurious to man, inasmuch as his digestive organs are not adapted for its assimilation, it forms the support of domesticated animals, which he rears exclusively for their use as human food. The materials of his structure are first derived from the air, earth, and water, by means of grass: they are still further organised and prepared by the agency of graminivorous animals; and they reach him at last in a proper condition for his nourishment in the shape of animal food. The grass of the field is thus indirectly, but most truly, man's stay and support.

But there is a way in which even directly grass forms human food. The stem and blades, and other inferior parts of the vegetation, are intended for the support of the inferior animals, but the fruitful ear, the more highly-organised seed, the crown and consummation of the plant, the "flower of grass" into which its vital powers and nourishing qualities are drawn up and concentrated, is reserved for food to man. We must not forget that the various kinds of cereal grain—such as corn, wheat, rice and maize—are the product of true grasses; and that while the straw and fodder are given to the beasts of the field, the nobler structure of man is maintained by the nobler part of the grass, which extracts virtue out of the sunshine and dew, and out of the forces which play beneath the varied skies of summer and autumn, and presents it in the simple form and peculiar mode of combination which is essential to healthy nutrition.

Reasons for Trusting in God.

1. Is not the life more than meat? Since God has given life, will He not see that means of sustaining life are given with it? For the one gift is vain without the other. We should give our chief attention to the true life, real life, and not, for the sake of saving it, do the wrongs that destroy it.

2. "Behold the fowls," birds of the air; for they sow not. God in nature does the sowing. Yet your Heavenly Father feedeth them. Not their Heavenly Father, for while they are His creatures, they are not His children as you are. How does God feed them? Not in idleness, nor by putting food in their mouths while they sit still in the trees and sing and wait; but by providing the food which they can obtain, and providing them with the means of seeing and obtaining food. Not idleness, but industry, is taught by God's care of the birds. "Are ye not much better, of more value, than they?" Did you ever hear of a father who fed the birds, but starved his children?

3. "Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature? and why take ye thought for raiment?" Anxiety is useless concerning a vast number of things beyond our power to change. Such things are as much beyond our control as the courses of the stars through the sky. A man can no more create his bread for a single meal than he can create a planet.

4. "Consider the lilies how they grow, they toil not, neither do they spin, yet I say unto you that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these." Because the glory of the flowers is part of their nature, not robes that can cover a heart that is like "a whited sepulchre." As the beauty of the flower is unfolded by the Divine Creator Spirit from within, from the laws and capacities of its own individual life, so must all true adornment of man be unfolded from within by the same Almighty Spirit. There is no human manufacture that can compare with the colours and the texture of the flowers, which under the microscope reveal perfections and glories unseen by the human eye.

5. "After all these things do the Gentiles seek." The heathen—other nations without true religion. This is what you would expect of those who know nothing of our Heavenly Father.

6. "Your Heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things." He does not forbid your wants but supplies them. Your distrust arises from not knowing your Heavenly Father. God loves to have you happy. He delights in your good. He wants you first of all to be good, to be heavenly, to have those qualities which make blessedness immortal. Sometimes He must deprive us of lesser good that we may possess the greater.

"Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things [food, clothing, etc.] shall be added unto you."

The Kingdom of Jehovah was established over Israel at Mount Sinai. There Israel became a nation, Jehovah descended on that Mount and became their King, and issued His righteous laws which we know as the Ten Commandments. He continues the King of Israel for ever, for we know that when Israel desired an earthly king, so that they might be like the surrounding nations, the Lord said unto Samuel: "Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee, for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected Me that I should not reign over them." In that Kingdom of Israel there came the establishment of the Davidic line to act as Chief Governor before the Lord in Israel, and that line is with us still in the person of our beloved King George. It is recorded in the first Book of Chronicles that David said: "Of all my sons, for the Lord hath given me many sons, He hath chosen Solomon my son to sit upon the Throne of the Kingdom of the Lord over Israel." The angel Gabriel, foretelling to Mary the birth of Jesus, said: "The Lord God shall give unto Him the Throne of His father David, and He shall reign over the House of Jacob for ever, and of His Kingdom there shall be no end."

The Kingdom and the Throne of David remained with the House of Judah until the days of Zedekiah, the last of the House of David reigning at Jerusalem, when from the highest branch of the tall cedar, a tender one, Tea Tephi, the daughter of Zedekiah, was planted in the height of Israel, for it is recorded in the Book of Daniel, chapter ii:—"In the days of these kings [of whom Nebuchadnezzar was one] shall the God of Heaven set up a Kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the Kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever." David's Kingdom over Israel is also to stand for ever. King George's genealogical tree shows that he is the lineal descendant of King David, and therefore that the British must be Israel.

Jesus warns us to seek the Kingdom of God first and His righteousness, and all these things—food, clothing, etc.—shall be added unto you. Surely "the Kingdom of God and His righteousness" must here mean the Lord Himself. To what else could the Lord have been alluding? We know that Jesus Christ is the righteousness of God.

their law. The author possesses a sixth sense. Setting up his thesis that the Israel people, carried captive to Arya, took with them their law, but became known as Aryan, thence pushing westward they became known by various names, and proceeded by numerous migrations, always maintaining their liberties and their law. He then presumes that these things have been written "here a little and there a little" in technical literature, and calls upon someone to collect the authorities. Yes, they have been written just as the author anticipates. In one great work, Pollock and Maitland's "History of English Law," Second Edition, Vol. I, the history of our law is traced to an "Antiquity now immeasurable," indeed "back to a common Aryan tradition antecedent to the distinction of race and tongue between the German (should have said Saxon) and the Celt." This is probably the most authoritative text-book used by the legal profession on the history of our law, but Mr. Goard rightly takes the origin back to the Sinai and Israel from whence the people passed with their laws to Britain by Arya and the Carpathians and Scandinavia, and by even earlier migrations through the Mediterranean.

The beauty of it all lies in the hope of a return to the simplicity and grandeur of our former laws, the Law of the Lord which the Lord Himself can bless. Thanks again to Mr. Goard for showing the way.

Yours sincerely,
Wm. Savage.

TOP-DOG OR UNDER-DOG ?

By Henry D. Houghton.

Not a very elegant expression, but one used by our opponents, objecting to British-Israel speakers; for they say we want to make England top-dog, denouncing us for such unholy and wicked aspirations.

But let us consider a moment. Is it the under-dog they want to make us?

However generous and self-sacrificing such men may be, surely, surely—unless they be Bolshies—they would hesitate before they deliberately choose for England the place of the under-dog! Most certainly that is not what they are after for themselves.

It does very well to talk about, and looks wonderfully pious and self-sacrificing, but the whole world would quickly go to the bad if any of the more backward nations took the lead and brought England under subjection to their sway.

It is manifestly to the help and betterment of the world that England, in the providence of God, stands forth as the leader among the nations.

Leader? Yes! But not "top-dog" in the sense in which that term is used against us; to crush, grind down, and devour the under-dog. England does not do that, not even when she is absolutely and altogether the master. She has ever been, and ever will be, most kind and considerate to the other nations. Often more so to their nationals than her own!

Look how kind and considerate she was to her enemies in the days of the South African War, and to the Sinn Feiners in Ireland; while her own people to this day have not had a semblance of fair treatment or justice meted out to them. If they had been treacherous revolutionaries, or even open enemies, they would have been treated with the most scrupulous fairness and even generosity.

But if our opponents' objection is to England being the First, the Leader of the Nations, then they pit themselves against God—not us.

God has, for His own purposes, chosen a leading nation. We have not chosen ourselves, it would have been of no use if we had!

"When the Most High divided to the nations their inheritance, He fixed the bounds of their habitations according to the number of the children of Israel." A most remarkable passage, putting Israel at the head of all the nations, and only granting to the latter the land Israel did not need. Now, in the slang phrase of our opponents, who was top-dog then? And who made him so? Not only was Israel the first—ABOVE ALL—but the others were not allowed at all in the race for land and habitations if Israel needed them!

Say you, "That was unfair"? Then you call God to account! And who art thou that repliest against God?

Even when they were in the wilderness and constantly rebelled against God, they were not deprived of that honoured first place.

Later on, note what Nehemiah says (ix, 22): "Moreover Thou gavest them kingdoms and nations . . . so they possessed the land of Sihon, and the land of the king of Heshbon, and the land of Og, king of Bashan." "How awful," our critics would say: "That would mean Israel was top-dog, and such a thing could not be true."

But it goes on (v. 24): "So the children went in and possessed the land, and thou subduest before them the inhabitants of the land, the Canaanites, and gavest them into their hands, with their kings, and the people of the land, that they might do with them as they would."

"How unjust!" someone says. The horror of being top-dog never troubled Nehemiah. But it goes on: "And they took strong cities, and a fat land, and possessed houses full of goods, wells digged, vineyards and oliveyards, and fruit trees in abundance; so they did eat, and were filled and delighted themselves in Thy great goodness."

Whose were those strong cities, and that fat land, and those oliveyards and vineyards? What about the Canaanites from whom they were taken? Why did not Israel refuse to be top-dog? The answer is: God had made her so! And Nehemiah tells God so!

We can imagine our critics saying, "How terrible!"

What presumption the modern caviller would think that all this is! And further what partiality.

I can imagine them saying: "But Nehemiah, surely, surely, that cannot be true. That would be making Israel top-dog; and God could never be so partial. You must be wrong."

But Nehemiah had only proclaimed the same truth which Moses had proclaimed hundreds of years before. "And the Lord hath avouched thee this day to be His peculiar people, as He hath promised thee. . . And to make thee high above all nations which He hath made in praise, and in name, and in honour; and that thou mayest be an holy people unto the Lord thy God, as He hath spoken." (Deut. xxvi, 19.)

The term "top-dog" has a very sinister sound; and as it is understood to-day is utterly foreign to God's purpose in Israel, and also to England's work and plans in the earth.

"Top-dog" implies an under-dog, and one that is kept down by tyranny and oppression, and forced and compelled to remain there without a chance to rise.

Now, though Israel was to be the first of the nations, "High above all nations that He hath made in name, in praise, and in honour," yet there is not to be any compelling of the nations by brute force to keep their inferior position; indeed, God specially promised Jacob that his seed should be a blessing in the earth: "In thee and in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." (Gen. xxviii, 14.)

And later on, in many places of Scripture, Israel is spoken of as being a blessing to the other nations.

"And the remnant (fragments, F.F.) of Jacob shall be in the midst of many people as a dew from the Lord, as showers upon the grass, that tarrieth not for man, nor waiteth for the sons of men"! (Micah v, 7.)

Listen what Isaiah says: "Thus saith the Lord, In an acceptable time have I heard thee, and in a day of salvation have I helped thee: and I will preserve thee, and give thee for a covenant of the people, to establish the earth, to cause to inherit the desolate heritages; that thou mayest say to the prisoners, Go forth; to them that are in darkness, Show yourselves." (Is. xlix, 8, 9.) F. Fenton says: "And will give to the covenant people," etc.!

And Professor Odlum translates it: "And I establish you a covenant people for a light to the other nations."

There is no autocratic domineering tyranny there. But there is prominence in activity, elevation to favourable position, to be a help and a blessing to all the nations. And this is exactly England's position to-day. She has a hundred times sacrificed her own interests that she may serve and help and uplift the other nations.

Who beside England would have commanded their ships to patrol the seas to put down the slave trade?

Who beside England would have left her shores almost unguarded while she sent her armies abroad to put down the tyrants of the earth and to free the peoples?

Why are the eyes of all the nations turned to England? Why do the nations look to us to put down their oppressors, and set them free?

Do the peoples of the oppressed nations say: "When will Turkey come and set us free?" Or, "When will Russia come?" Or, "When will Germany come?" But they do say that of England! "Oh, when will England come?" That is the cry of thousands of suffering tyrannised heathen. There is the position God gave Israel, "High above all nations that He hath made in name, in praise, and in honour." But there is not a hint of the top-dog attitude in it all. But rather "above" to help. "First" to relieve. "Great" to bless and help the downtrodden, the less fortunate people of the earth: To raise and to lift up the nations; To say to the prisoners, "Come out," as F. Fenton translates it; and "To the dungeoned, 'Be free.'"

First of the nations, yes! But top-dog to tear in pieces and hold down, never! But first to deliver, first to sacrifice, first to teach, first to help with money, forces, time, to bless and relieve every under-dog the wide-world over!

BRANCH ACTIVITIES.

Mr. W. H. Hesketh, J.P., visited the Sheffield Branch on Wednesday, March 21st, and gave an inspiring address on "Be ye always mindful of the Covenant." The hall was well filled, many new enquirers being present; much literature was sold and new names handed in. The Truth is spreading in Sheffield.

On Thursday, the 22nd, Professor MacMahon, of Alabama, U.S.A., gave a very interesting and instructive lecture on "Manasseh in America" to the Liverpool Branch. The lecturer had prepared two splendidly coloured diagrams of the U.S. Seal, showing the obverse and reverse sides. At the request of the Professor, these were explained to the audience by Mr. Steele.

Mr. John Leech, K.C., M.A., Commissioner-General, spent the week of March commencing the 26th lecturing to fine audiences, in some places twice daily, at the following: Birmingham, Walsall, Leamington Spa, Hanley and Cheltenham, finishing up with a conference of delegates from the Midland area in Birmingham on Saturday, this concluding a most successful week of meetings.

* * *

Two lectures by the Rev. Guy Waddington, M.A., filled the hall at Bath both afternoon and evening. Large audiences also greeted him at Bristol on March 26th and 27th. At Nailsea he addressed a large meeting convened to hear a reply to an attack by local clergy in the Parish Magazine. It was easy to see where the sympathy and approval lay.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

FULL audiences may be expected for the eight meetings in Kensington large Town Hall next week as per announcement in our advertising columns. The Rev. Pascoe Goard will speak each day. On Tuesday evening he will give his lecture with Lantern illustrations on "The Chronological Trajectory of Prophecy," 2,520—not yards, but—years, which 500 people were unable to hear at the Central Hall owing to the hall being full before they arrived. We advise that tickets should be secured in advance; they may be obtained at Headquarters at once, or at Kensington Town Hall on Monday or Tuesday.

The Council will meet on Monday next at 5.45, and the Annual Meeting of Members and Associates of the Federation will take place on Tuesday next at the same hour to receive the Annual Report and Balance Sheet for 1927. Both meetings at Kensington Town Hall.

The next Congress will open (D.V.) on October 1st in the Central Hall, Westminster. We make this announcement well in advance so that our Overseas friends may be advised in time to make their arrangements, and also because members and others are already writing to us asking for the date.

* * *

Our Publicity Campaign is in full swing. It is creating enormous interest all over the country and in the Dominions. Letters of enquiry and requests for literature are pouring in upcn us every day. Our whole staff is working at high pressure to cope with this mass of correspondence.

Miss Maud Beck gave a highly spiritual address at Headquarters on March 28th and we hope to hear her again ere long.

Miss Rohde, the authoress, gave us a delightful Lantern Lecture at H.Q., on March 29th, on "Gardens Craft in the Bible." We hope to arrange for this to be repeated in a large hall. The date will be announced later.

The Rev. Pascoe Goard and Mr. Garrison addressed a full audience in the Town Hall, Gravesend, on April 2nd. Captain Harry Davis presided. A very fine spirit of enthusiasm was manifested. The members of the branch are to be congratulated on their organisation.

Our Commissioners are very active all over the country. We might fill this Journal with detailed reports of all that is going forward. As a clergyman writes us: "British-Israel is spreading like a flame."

* * *

The Rev. G. H. Lancaster, M.A., is to address our Worthing Branch at 3 and 8 p.m. in the Heene Hall, Heene Road, on April 18th.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

[It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.]

GREAT PERIODS OF ISRAEL-BRITISH HISTORY.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

IT is of interest to note that the great periods of history have coincided with the great periods of Israel-Britain.

Well-informed scholars now accept the fact that the racial history of the British begins with the call of Abraham; and that the national history of Britain begins with the organisation of the Kingdom of God on earth at Sinai. This latter great fact is clearly and strongly stated in the nineteenth and twentieth chapters of Exodus. The organisation was accomplished by bringingtogether three basic elements, without each of which there could not at any time be a Kingdom. The elements are: (1) the nation; (2) the King; (3) the law. The nation was, and is, Israel; the King, Jehovah; and the Decalogue, the underlying principles of the law.

This being the case, it follows that the history of Israel as found in the Bible is part one of the history of Britain. The history of Britain, rightly told, is part two of the history of Israel. The history of Britain has, however, been buried under a cloud of falsehood and fiction; which is complimented by being so called; and which has been taught in its place; and which, in fact, is still being taught in its place from primary school to University.

The history of the race, beginning in Abraham, and the history of the nation, beginning with Moses, we see that we have in hand some thirty-eight hundred years of complete and reliable history of our race, and thirty-four hundred years of history of our nation.

Egypt, the Arabs, and Esau or Edom, are the only other peoples extant which have preserved their racial and national organisation for any such period.

Assyria arose about the time of the fall of Troy. Babylon became an Empire after the fall of Assyria and of Israel in Palestine, and about the time of the fall of Judah.

Persia, and Greece, arose, and fell, in rapid succession after the fall of Israel in Palestine.

Rome was founded about the time of the fall of Israel in Palestine; and came to Imperial status after the fall of the Kingdom of Judah.

The colonisation of Britain had begun before the division of the Palestinian national organisation of Israel into two Kingdoms.

Brutus founded the city of London about the same time that King David founded Zion; and they were two branches of the same Judah stock.

The Kingdom of the House of David was transferred to, and set up in Britain, over "Israel in the Isles," at the same time, approximately, as Nebuchadnezzar was granted his kingdom by the God of Heaven, as set forth in the second chapter of Daniel.

Ten-tribed Israel came to the Kingdom in these Islands as the Saxons, etc., AFTER the Roman withdrawal from Britain; the Romans having been used of God to prepare a place in Britain for their occupation.

Benjamin came into the land in A.D. 1066, under William, the so-called conqueror. Really William the inheritor.

Well, sufficient has been said to indicate that the history of the Bible and the history of Britain are bound up together. British history furnishes the fulfilment of the Israel prophecy.

This being the case, and with this meaning upon the statement, the history of Britain truly written forms an integral and a vital part of the Bible. For the want of recognition of this great fact Dr. Driver was led to indicate in his introduction to the prophecies of Jeremiah that many of the promises made to Israel had never been fulfilled, and that now circumstances had so altered that they never could be fulfilled. With such an estimate of the literature he was about to write a commentary on, it is manifest that the task he had set himself to do, or that his University College had set him to do, namely, to write a commentary on Jeremiah, was rather a futile one, because he believed the great covenants and promises contained therein had hopelessly failed of fulfilment. One might as well set himself to gather the currency of a bankrupt State, such, for instance, as that of the South. American States after the war, which currency hopelessly lost its value, for the promises written on the face of the currency under the altered circumstances could never be fulfilled. So it was with European currency. The promises on the face of it could never be fulfilled.

But recognising that not in the Jews, as Dr. Driver imagined, but in Israel-Britain we must look for the fulfilment of Israel prophecy, we turn to British history and find that the promises and prophecies have been, or are in process of being, fully fulfilled before our eyes; and before the eyes of the world.

The two great documents contained in the latter part of Jeremiah, namely, the new covenant with the House of Israel, contained in the 31st chapter, and the ratification of the covenant made with the House of David, contained in the 33rd chapter, would have been "scraps of paper" if the nation Israel, as distinct from Judah, and if the House of David, had ceased to function, or had disappeared. Both are found to be in existence as going concerns, fully answering to the terms of the prophecies, being fulfilled in the Anglo-Saxon nations and the British throne.

Now we turn to world history and see that the great periods of world history during the last three thousand five hundred years have been the great periods of Israel-Britain.

The movement of Abraham from Ur of the Chaldees gave rise to the Abrahamic group of nations; namely, to the Arabs, the Edomites (Turks), the Israelites, and the Judahites.

The movement of Abraham from the valley of the Euphrates to the shores of the Mediterranean gave rise to the Mediterranean type of Western Asian civilisation, founded upon Israel, as contrasted with the Euphratean type; and gave rise to the Anglo-Saxon type of Western civilisation as contrasted with the Latin and Teutonic types.

It will be seen that, ethnologically speaking, therefore, the movement of Abraham out of Chaldea into Palestine was of the utmost importance.

We now come to the period of the Exodus. The ethnological questions of the day seemed to have been, "Should the Egyptian type of faith and civilisation, centred in the Nile Valley, or the Israel faith and type of civilisation, prevail?"

The Egyptian civilisation was reaching out strongly to permanently subjugate the nucleus of Western civilisation vested in Israel.

There came the struggle between the two types of faith, civilisation and people. By Divine aid, Israel broke from under the bondage of Egypt. One people broke from the bondage of another people, and one civilisation broke from under the dominance of another civilisation, which is a much more important matter.

Having broken free from Egyptian dominance, the people of Israel were organised into a nation; their faith was given form in doctrine and liturgy, priestly ministration and organised worship. Their national life, and their law in all its details, were organised so as to be administered according to the basic principles of Israel civilisation.

The "Common Law" which was introduced into the earth at that point in the Garden of Eden experience, of which we read the significant words "And the Lord God commanded the man," was given form in Israel in the commandments, statutes and judgments of the Lord; and it became the responsibility of the King and his ministers to administer the same.

Short of the great Redemption, and of the organising of the Gospel by Our Lord and His Apostles, no other such great thing, on such a comprehensive scale, has ever been brought to pass in world history as was the organisation of the Israel civilisation in all its departments, carried out during the forty years in the wilderness. Freed from every other task such as commerce, industry, and the building of the appurtenances of a permanent community, Israel was called upon to devote the whole time, energy, and life of a generation, to perfecting the organisation, and learning the underlying principles of the Israel civilisation thus Divinely organised.

At that particular period of world history, neither in the Nile Valley nor the Euphrates Valley is there connected in history any movement of such importance to the world as this. Well might the Great Pyramid indicate the commencement of the ascending passage at this conjuncture of human affairs, when the Kingdom of God in its national aspect was organised in the earth.

Let us go forward now and remark upon the great national development, equally, if not more, spectacular than that to which we have given attention, but still of less importance, because no underlying principles of civilisation were involved. We refer to the organisation of the Imperial succession of Empires in the Euphrates Valley.

The cylinder of Tiglath Pilezer the First, recently found, threw a flood of light upon the sudden crystallisation of numerous independent cities and tribes in the Euphrates Valley into one kingdom.

In the meantime, under their Judges, Israel was loosely organised in twelve tribal sub-States, held together by consanguinity, common language, common history, and common hope.

Ephraim, the leading tribe, as the birthright-holding tribe, inherited a certain authority over the other tribes, which apparently was exercised as a restraining influence, but failed to give a strong lead. This was all very well when the people of the Euphratean Valley were divided into thirty or forty States, civic and tribal; but when Assyria suddenly became unified into one State under the leadership of a strong king and started out on a process of conquest and aggression, it became apparent to the leaders of Israel that they must meet the menace by more complete unification in their national life, and by unified centralised authority. So they came to Samuel, and demanded a king, who should "lead them out and bring them in" to and from the field of battle. Under similar pressure was General Foch made Commander-in-Chief of all the Allied Armies during the war.

The United States of America is passing through a similar period in national life. It is composed of a number of sovereign States, federated together under a succession of Presidents. The system is operative under conditions of peace and industrial activity. Ex-President Taft, the head of the Department of Justice, has, however, declared that the decentralised administration of justice has broken down, and during the war unusual authority was centralised in President Wilson.

Thus we see the commencement of those unifications of Kingdoms which later developed into the unification of Empires, and which reached their highest development in 1914. During the conflict of the next four years these Empires came crashing to the ground.

We now come on to the period 740 B.C.–578 B.C. What a tremendous time in world history this was. Let us glance for a moment at the elements which entered into the activities of that period. They were such as to call forth the great utterances of Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel and Daniel, and of the minor prophets.

It was the Euphratean or Babylonian type of civilisation successfully struggling to bring the Mediterranean or Israel type of Western civilisation under its control.

Assyria and Babylon, more completely unified than the peoples on the Mediterranean, undertook military operations against the Mediterranean nations one by one. Israel and Syria fell, and their peoples were carried away, to be added, with a view of strengthening it, to Euphratean organisation.

Then Babylon succeeded Assyria; but it was only a change of dynasty, and may therefore be disregarded, as the policy of aggression was carried on.

Babylon moved against Judah, and carried the people captive.

It is more significant, although we shall not have time to develop the thought in this article, that Babylon moved against Jerusalem and Tyre: for these two great cities were the centres of the world's commerce and finance. The ramifications of their business spread over all the world in both hemispheres, and the dislocation of overseas commercial and colonial enterprise was a calamity beyond any estimate that has yet been made of the matter.

Babylon moved against the faith of Israel and Judah; destroyed the central temple, and carried away the priesthood.

Babylon moved against the organisation for the administration of the Law of the Lord; and so ended it that it never had free course in Palestine again, except perhaps for a period under the Maccabees, until A.D. 1917.

The civil law was substituted for the common law when Israel was thus subjugated.

The effect upon Western civilisation thus brought about has also not been duly estimated. No wonder the prophets wept over the tremendous overthrow of the Israel type of civilisation in Western Asia.

The things of which we have spoken inaugurated the dominance of Euphratean or Babylonian civilisation for the specific period of 2,520 years.

The period of Rome's greatest splendour under Cæsar Augustus and his immediate successors is most intimately connected with the first Coming of Our Lord, the great Redemption wrought out on Calvary, the re-establishment of the Israel faith, and the sending forth of that tremendous Christian agency which has gone so far towards re-establishing Israel civilisation, glorified by the Christian evangel through the agency of the Anglo-Saxon people.

We must now because of space limitations come to the period of world history ushered in on the night of August 4th, 1914.

We have in the Continental Empires the direct descendants in organisation, faith and practice of the Euphratean or Babylonian type of Western civilisation.

We have in the Anglo-Saxon peoples the direct descendants in organisation, faith and practice of the Israel type of Western civilisation.

Again the question of dominance arose; history repeating itself after 2,520 years.

Again the Euphratean type mustered its forces and launched them against our Israel type of civilisation.

It was not a question of people against people; it was not a question of army against army; it was the question of German "kultur" versus Anglo-Saxon constitutional liberty. One type of civilisation at grips with another type of civilisation. One type of faith at grips with another type of faith. One religious organisation against another religious organisation. The battle was joined; the Euphratean or Babylonian Empires fell, and the Israel civilisation marched out from the conflict predominant in the councils of the earth.

Thus far has world history unfolded the great drama. One scene still remains to be presented; one series of acts to be performed; and then the great consummation, when Israel organisation, Israel faith and Israel law will be universally accepted in the earth, to be administered by Jesus Christ Our Lord, Who is the King of kings.

THE LAW OF THE LORD, OR THE COMMON LAW.—XV.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

(Concluded.)

Once more we return, now by a clear historic route, from 1100 B.C. to 1496 B.C. The interim between is taken up by the administration of the Judges; the lifetime and administration of Joshua; and the forty years of Mosaic administration. Thus we come to Sinai, the Mount of God.

Can it be successfully questioned that the Law of the Lord was recoded there? Can the historicity of the Pentateuch be questioned in the light of the fact that the Common Law breaks upon us in all its fulness from that time and locality; and that it is not to be found elsewhere except in fragmentary form? Can it be doubted that the Biblical statement is right that prior to Moses, Abraham kept the commandments, statutes and laws of the Lord, and that they came to Israel as an inheritance from our father Abraham? Can it be doubted that these laws go back as a primal revelation to Adam in line with the solemn declaration of the second chapter of the Creation story, namely: "And the Lord God commanded the man"?

Digitized by Google

And now, how shall we explain the fact, the simple fact, otherwise the passing strange fact, that in these modern days only two branches of people in the world are found to be in possession of the Law of the Lord, namely, the Jews; who still preserve the Law in the Old Testament Scriptures, as a hidden and secret treasure; and the Anglo-Saxon peoples as the Law of their land, and of the many lands over which they have established their rule? The explanation is simple. Both the Jews and the Anglo-Saxons have inherited the Law from their fathers, the tribes of Israel. For the Jew is descended from Judah; and the Anglo-Saxon is descended from Ephraim-Israel.

Can it be doubted but that the Kingdom established at Sinai, consisting of the nation Israel; Jehovah, the King; and the Law of the Lord, is in existence still, and that the basis of that Kingdom is still "the people in whose heart is my Law"?

Can it be doubted that Jehovah is still the God of Israel in its modern development, inasmuch as He established Himself as King in Israel for ever?

Can it be doubted that the Law of the Lord is still the Divinely appointed Law of the land and of the people?

Can it be doubted indeed but that this is the heritage, infinite in importance and value, of the Celto-Saxon Race?

Can it be doubted that it was to this Jesus referred when He said to the Jews in His day: "The Kingdom is taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof"?

We close with a quotation from one of the sweet songs of Israel which triumphs in the possession of this great heritage of the Law; and which is still one of the great religious and national anthems, sung and chanted in our national worship:

> Give ear, O my people, to my law: incline your ears to the words of my mouth.
> I will open my mouth in a parable: I will utter dark sayings of old:
>
> Which we have heard and known, and our fathers have told us.
> We will not hide them from their children, shewing to the generation to come the praises of the Lord, and his strength, and his wonderful works that he hath done.
>
> For he established a testimony in Jacob, and appointed a law in Israel, which he commanded our fathers, that they should make them known to their children:
> That the generation to come might know them, even the children which should be born; who should arise and declare them to their children:
> That they might set their hope in God, and not forget the works of God, but keep his commandments:
> And might not be as their fathers, a stubborn and rebellious generation; a generation that set not their heart aright, and whose spirit was not stedfast with God. (Ps. lxxviii, 1-8.)

Read also the following stanzas of this great national song which sets forth the continuous fact that God dealt with our fathers, and still deals with us, their children, in accordance with our keeping of His Covenant made with our fathers and with us, and with our obedience to His Law.

PYRAMID PROPHECY AND "THE CONSUMMATION OF THE AGE."

By D. DAVIDSON.

II.—The Entrance on Tribulation.

SINCE the publication of the first edition of "The Great Pyramid: Its Divine Message," in 1924, certain claims have been persistently advanced for the correlation of astrological prognostications with the prophecy of the Great Pyramid. Owing to such claims many scientists have erroneously concluded that the Revelation of the Great Pyramid is advanced as a system of astrological prognostication. Fearing an erroneous identification of this nature, I purposely made the following mildly derogatory statement on page 283 of the work mentioned:—

"A point that is worthy of notice is that the ancient Chaldæan astrologers employed the stellar Zodiacal Signs in determining their astrological predictions, whereas modern astrologers employ the misplaced and misnamed solar signs. Whatever may have been, or may be, the predictive bases of the two schools of astrology, it seems clear that the two bases can have nothing astronomically in common. In making this statement, we neither profess to accept nor to reject the principles of a subject concerning which we know little beyond the fact noted."

IS ASTROLOGY A PYRAMID SCIENCE?—NO!

My own experience of the Great Pyramid's astronomical prophecy had shown me that a representation of the causal sequence of astronomical phenomena is employed in the Pyramid's science as a means of portraying a time-scale of reference for the Divine Revelation of future events, and not as a means of indicating these events as being shaped or controlled by any combinations of astronomical phenomena, whether these combinations be viewed as the direct result of the expression of physical laws, or as the remote effect of the operation of certain spiritual laws, the formulation of which is unknown to us. In addition to this, however, two separate allegorical themes of Divine Purpose are represented as rhythmically woven into the cyclic laws of astronomical phenomena, not specifically as the result of the operation of these natural laws, but specifically as the result of the phenomena of these laws being utilised collectively as the allegorical instrument of Revelation from the Creator to man. Precisely as Our Lord utilised the incidents of His own life and times as the basis of parable, so does the Great Pyramid's system of Revelation utilise the phenomena of astronomy and nature as the basis of an allegory that reveals the Hand of God in human history. The terms in which the Pyramid's Revelation is given are in all cases the terms of modern science. No terms occur in the Revelation except such as are the accepted terms of recognised branches of modern science. This convinced me that God in His Foreknowledge had projected into the Design of the Great Pyramid a Revelation addressed to modern times, to be read by the received science of modern times; and that anything not generally accepted by accredited science as appertaining to true science, in modern times, has no part in the Revelation. This necessarily excludes astrology from correlation with the Pyramid's Revelation, whether astrology is a true science or not.

Apart from this, astrology claims to be a science relating to the normal operation of the laws of astronomy. The Pyramid's Revelation, however, is concerned primarily with the incidence of Divine Intervention in the course of the normal operation of natural law in history. This is clearly a matter that is beyond even the best claims that astrology can make on its own behalf. With this thought in mind, I have patiently considered many of the astrological predictions that have been harnessed in correlation with the Pyramid's prophecy during the past four years. In no case can I remember a single alleged correlation that has been made other than by straining or breaking the basal principles of the Pyramid's science. Much as I have tried to retain a sympathetic attitude, the sequence of paradox in this relation has compelled me to suspect a like sequence of paradox as the basis of the astrological predictions. However this may be, I know of no demonstration or series of demonstrations in the whole course of the Great Pyramid's Science that indicates any recognition of the tenets of modern astrology. I do not make this statement with any intention of throwing discredit upon astrology, but as a protest—long over-due—against futile attempts to correlate astrology with the Great Pyramid's prophecy, when such correlation was clearly never intended and can never be effected. My main contentions are that if astrology is a true science it could predict the normal course of events for any year provided nothing out of the normal happens; and that if astrology claims to be able to predict the date of a Divine Intervention it is not making a true claim, and it is not a true science, since the principles of astrology as applied to the normal cannot be extended to include the super-normal.

THE WITHDRAWAL OF THE RESTRAINT UPON CHAOS.

My protest has been compelled by a recent allegation that I endorse the opinion, based on astrological prognostications, that the beginning of the Final Tribulation may be delayed until the end of August of this year. I think that the explanation I offer will remove all grounds for misunderstanding. At the same time, it will be seen that the incidental perplexity occasioned has had a good result in that a vital item of Pyramid symbolism has been brought prominently into the foreground for elucidation.

The accompanying Plate shows the symbolical feature to which I refer. Immediately over the Entrance Doorway of the Last Tribulation Passage four vertical grooves are cut in the South Wall of the Antechamber. These extend up to and beyond the ceiling of the Antechamber. The two essential facts bearing upon the symbolic purpose of these grooves are :—

(1) That they are not cut to pass through the ceiling blocks, but that they are cut to pass clear of the ceiling blocks along the continuation of the Antechamber South Wall, where it butts against the ceiling blocks; and

(2) That the grooves cut were not to form channels of connection with the roof surface of the Last Tribulation Passage, but to commence from a "chisel edge" over the Entrance Doorway of the latter passage.

The first fact indicates that the grooves signify an event that does not take place before May 29th, 1928. The second fact indicates that the same event does not extend beyond May 29th, 1928. The grooves therefore clearly portray channels of instantaneous ascent that symbolise the withdrawal of some vital influence at the end of the Antechamber period. The sequence of the symbolism determines that Tribulation begins in consequence of this vital influence being withdrawn. Now the geometrical symbolism of the Antechamber represents the Antechamber period as a period of Divine Intervention—a period of "Truce in Chaos." The grooves of "ascending withdrawal" therefore surely symbolise the instantaneous withdrawal of the Divine Restraint upon the Spiritual forces of Chaos. This withdrawal is not anything normal to the ordinary processes of spiritual or physical experience. One would have expected, then, that the dating of such an event should have been recognised as utterly beyond the predictive powers that astrology normally claims. It is, however, upon astrological grounds that the suggestion has been made to revise the Pyramid's definite dating for the beginning of the Final Tribulation. I had indeed mentioned that the depth of the grooves gave the date August 22nd, 1928, but I had also given the definite assurance that this date could not apply to any delay in Tribulation beginning, since the "chisel edges" of the grooves forbid this interpretation. The latter feature is clearly shown on Plate LVII in "The Great Pyramid: Its Divine Message." This Plate was cited when the suggestion, of which I complain, was made.

It would have been impossible to have indicated the symbolism of instantaneous withdrawal other than by cutting into the wall. To prevent the symbolism being interpreted as other than "instantaneous withdrawal," the grooves were cut with their lower ends forming "chisel edges" over the entrance on Tribulation. The "chisel edges" are now partly broken, but three of them still show the taper forming the "chisel edge." Petrie's measurements of the East and West grooves show that this taper ran out to the "chisel edge" exactly at the level of the roof of the Entrance Door.

Now let us suppose that the grooves had not been tapered off as shown, but that they were cut as channels of connection into the roof of the Last Tribulation Passage. This symbolism would have meant that Divine Restraint would be gradually removed between May 29th, 1928, and August 22nd, 1928; but not that the beginning of Tribulation would be postponed until the latter date. On no account, therefore, can it be said that there is any excuse for revising our interpretation of the Pyramid's inch-month prophecy. If we fail to find ourselves in Tribulation by the beginning of June, the whole interpretation of the inch-month scale of Pyramid prophecy is definitely proved to be erroneous.

THE CRITICAL EPOCH.

Let us, therefore, consider the nature of the events that are likely to be identified with the beginning of Tribulation. For it seems obvious, if a Divine Restraint is now in operation to prevent the many crises of our times developing, that the withdrawal of this Restraint will mean the full development of such crises as may be incidental to the 29th May of this year. Now in Booklet No. 3, "Pyramid Prophecy and Current Events" (p. 23), I have shown that the Antechamber symbolism provides a series of pointers or indices to the nature of the crises that will develop during the Tribulation period. The series of index events falls into three categories. (1) Events relating to Turkish, Egyptian and Moslem questions; (2) Communism and Communistic propaganda directed against the British Empire and the United States of America; and (3) International economic instability. The events of all three categories were interpreted as having an ultimate bearing upon the events leading up to Our Lord's Second Advent, when, as the prophecy of Zech. (xiv, 4) states: "The Mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof." Consider then the symbolic significance of the event that occurred on the last pointer date or index dating of the Antechamber. The date is July 11th, 1927, the central date of the Last Veil of the Antechamber period of revealing indications. This was the date of the Palestine Earthquake that cracked the Mount of Olives. From this coincidence it seems evident that Divine Restraint has been in operation to provide the warning indications of the Antechamber period, and that the foretelling of this and other special events of Divine provision cannot possibly fall within the province of the astrologer. It is only because the Pyramid's prophecy is a Divine Revelation that it was possible for the dates of these events to be indicated 5,000 years ago.

The general sequence of the events that fell upon the Antechamber index datings seems to indicate that the withdrawal of Divine Restraint during a period of world economic instability will provide the initial impulse of Tribulation. Scriptural prophecy represents this Tribulation as primarily upon Israel. From the prophecies of Joel and the 24th and 26th chapters of Isaiah, it is clear that the events of this Last Tribulation upon Israel relate to the final intensified operation of the "curses" of Deut. xxviii, 15-68; that these "curses" will cease when the conditions of Deut. xxviii, 1, have been satisfied; and that the blessings of Deut. xxviii, 2-14, will be poured out in abundance upon Israel when these conditions have been fulfilled.

The fact that requires constant reiteration is that none of the prophecies dealing with the events of Tribulation mention war as the burden of Tribulation. An invasion of Palestine and Egypt is certainly specified for the latter end of the Tribulation period. But taking a broad outlook upon the prophecies as a whole, this invasion is an incident among many incidents of greater moment. I wonder how many there are who realise that the prophecies of Scripture clearly define Armageddon as no Tribulation upon Israel, but as an event after Israel's Tribulation is finished; that "the great day of the Lord" refers to the period of Judgment and not to the period of Tribulation; that there is no darkening of the sun until after Israel's Tribulation; and that in consequence an interval of "waiting" occurs between Israel's Tribulation ending and the Coming of Our Lord. The essential thing to realise now, however, is that there are no sound reasons for assuming that the Tribulation begins with war.

THE BIBLE.

A WONDERFUL BOOK.

By Professor Edward Odlum, M.A., B.Sc., &c.

This remarkable Book, the Bible, required centuries for its construction. From the time of Moses and the Exodus, 1486 B.C., to the writings of the New Testament, we get fully 1,550 years.

This marvellous product represents the labours of many authors, and contains over sixty different books and booklets.

The historic stretch takes in over 4,000 years, and the prophetic outlook reaches to the present time and beyond. This gives the student a work including a period of 6,000 years, and therein differs from all other books wherever produced.

If we examine the Bible from the historic viewpoint, we are amazed at the immensity and accuracy of the material therein contained. Comprehensive, detailed, short-worded, direct, and fearlessly expressed, this Book differs from all books of all ages and countries.

Unlike all other books, it presents history pre-written. This we call prophecy; and at times the student is at a loss to decide which is the more interesting, important and instructive, the purely historic or the prophetic.

While the history is matchless for quantity, accuracy and truly valuable information, the prophecy is the most striking, in that much therein foretold has come to pass; and much seems ready-at-hand to be fulfilled.

Passing the historic and prophetic aspects, we may refer to the ethics, morals, or religion of this wonderful Book. For definiteness and fullness of its ethic statements the Bible stands supreme. The golden rule stands out clearly in the Old and New Testaments. It is expressed by many writers, and in such language as is for the greater part easily understood.

The science of the Bible is not approached by any other known book, produced 1,000 years before Christ and in the hands of students universal.

While it was not produced as a work on science, yet wherein it touches the sciences it rings true to nature and to nature's laws.

This Book, in its reach, lays its hands upon plants, animals, the inorganic world of matter and force, and always does so with the touch and grip of the Master.

The operations of clouds, heat, cold, rain, snow, storms, and the seismic actions in the crust of the earth are referred to in a sane, matter-of-fact manner, which indicated a thorough knowledge of the big and little things out in the great universe.

Our modern explorers, with pick and shovel, and up-to-date scientific knowledge, have digged and delved into the historied lands of the Bible, and lo! these worthy men and women have proved over and over again that in the minutest detail, where the Book has spoken, it has accurately related its story.

No other book, ancient or modern, has been able to pioneer into so many channels of interest and value to humanity as this Book has marked out, opened, entered and explored.

There is a freshness, a simplicity, a grandeur, a strength and a magnetic attraction in the pages of the Bible altogether unique.

This Book, this library, this literary, historic, prophetic, ethic, philosophic and scientific wonder of the ages, is read by more millions than any other book ever written.

As a guide to statesmen, men of jurisprudence, leaders of the masses, teachers of the public, and as a safe foundation and guide for the individual, this Book has a voice, a message, a direction, and an inspiration that comfort and safely lead through this strange, inexplicable human journey, the honest and lowly-minded man seeking to do his best among his fellow-men.

Perhaps the highest value of this Book is its guidance, offered to any and all, in the direction of life, a life truly different from the ordinary life.

A man desiring to enter a chemical, algebraic, or engineering life must be governed by reliable, capable books and teachers. As he does so, he finds himself taking on new phases of life he had no working knowledge of before.

So with the Book! It carries a message. It carries masterful authority. It shows the way to another life, not chemical or algebraic, but another just as real and surely as important.

"He who wills to do His will, shall know." Be assured that knowledge here is life.

And this Book is the key that opens the door to the great British-Israel teaching, thereby making plain the Divine-human plan of the ages.

THE SECOND COMING OF OUR ADORABLE REDEEMER, JESUS CHRIST.

By the Rev. E. McManus (Canada).

The Second Coming of Jesus does not mean the end of the world and the final judgment of the quick and the dead; but it does mean that "the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of Our Lord and of His Christ; and He shall reign for ever and ever."—Rev. xi, 15. He will then wipe out the present national divisions, and there will be one Kingdom established in the earth. The petty jealousies which have led to nearly all the past wars will no longer exist. The administrating ordinances of this vast Kingdom are recorded in the Bible.

The manner of His Coming is told by the two men in white apparel who stood by the Apostles as they watched Him ascend to Heaven, and they beheld the cloud which received Him out of their sight: "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into heaven."—Acts i, 9, 10, 11. Now this statement is not the utterance of merely devout Christians; it is an historical fact clearly attested by competent witnesses. St. Paul, who was afterwards converted by the voice of that same Jesus speaking out of the brilliant light which was above the brightness of the sun, was fully justified in his statement. (1 Thess. iv, 16, 17, 18.)

In St. Luke xxi, 25-28, Our Lord says, "And there shall be signs in the sun and in the moon and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory. And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh."

Our Lord now uses a parable, verses 29-33, to enforce and emphasise His previous statement, and the casual reader might think that in verse 32 Our Lord had reference to His disciples, to whom He was speaking in the first part of the chapter. The generation to which the disciples belonged passed away many centuries ago, and the Second Advent has not yet occurred. Our Lord in speaking to His disciples uses the second person pronoun, while in verse 27 He uses the third person pronoun, indicating that He was speaking of a generation yet future to whom would appear the signs He mentions. That we are that future generation of whom Our Lord speaks and that we have been observing the signs mentioned in verses 25, 26, the evidence of which it would be difficult to condense into a few words, is patent to any observer of the present world disasters. The sun and the moon exert a great influence over storms and tides. Only a few months ago the coast of Florida was swept by rising seas, destroying much life and property. Tornadoes and cyclones have wrought disastrous consequences to cities, such as St. Louis. And the floods which brought ruin of property with great loss of life to the Valley of the Mississippi and in the State of Arkansas, and just recently to Eastern Canada south of the St. Lawrence, and to the States of Maine and Vermont, were all signs to this generation.

These visitations of Providence have not been confined to America, for nearly all countries have had similar disasters. The declaration contained in verses 25, 26, gives a true picture of the state of our world at the present time. The next verse (27) tells us in Our Lord's own words, "Then shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud with power and great glory." Read the first chapter of Revelation, especially verse 7, "Behold, He cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see Him, and they also which pierced Him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of Him. Even so, Amen."

But there is another vision of St. John's that must take place at the close of Armageddon, either before Our Lord's Advent, or coincident with it. It is recorded in the first three verses of chapter xx:—"And I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand. And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil, and Satan, and bound him a thousand years. And cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years should be fulfilled; and after that he must be loosed a little season."

St. Paul tells us that the dead in Christ shall rise first and that the living who believe and trust in Him will be caught up to meet the Lord in the air. These resurrected saints, together with the living who have been transformed without passing through the grave, will no doubt rule with their Lord and King in His Kingdom established on the earth.

"No man knoweth the day nor the hour of His coming," but if I am correct in my interpretation of the signs which are to precede His Coming, then we belong to the generation which will not pass away until all be fulfilled.

"THE LAND SHADOWING WITH WINGS."

By G. W. Gayer.

Very few people realise that the East African possessions of Britain are specially mentioned in the Bible as destined to play a decisive part in the impending world struggle which is prophetically spoken of as Israel's sore tribulation. It is by no means fanciful to trace, in the trend of current affairs connected with these territories, the Divine Hand guiding us to our destiny.

Isaiah in his 18th chapter tells us what "the land beyond the rivers of Ethiopia" is about to do. He was speaking from Jerusalem, and Jerusalem is close to the 35th degree of East Longitude which passes through the Soudan, Abyssinia (Isaiah's Ethiopia), Uganda, Kenya, Tanganyika and Nyasaland. A glance at the map will show how the position these countries occupy answers to the description given by Isaiah more than 2,500 years ago. (Isaiah xviii.)

Higher Critics, or Modernists as they prefer to call themselves, tell us that the land "beyond" Ethiopia is, of course, Ethiopia itself. The reason for this curious teaching is not far to seek, for to them prophecy is nothing but "prediction" after the event. Isaiah, according to them, was written years after Isaiah's death, and after his prophecies and predictions had all been fulfilled. Under the circumstances they are unable to conceive that much of what the prophet saw is yet to be fulfilled, for it relates—as in the instance we are considering—to events leading up to Our Lord's coming to reign on the earth. The prophecy of 18th Isaiah is confirmed in Zephaniah iii, 10, where it says :—

> "From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia my suppliants, even the daughter of my dispersed, shall bring mine offering."

The period is given in the clearest terms as that immediately preceding the "Judgment of the Nations" and the millennial reign. The judgment of the nations according to the symbolism of the Great Pyramid will commence soon. To make it impossible for us to place the "land beyond Ethiopia" in Abyssinia itself Zephaniah in the twelfth verse of his previous chapter delivers God's decree on Ethiopia :—

> "Ye Ethiopians also, ye shall be slain by my sword."

They could not possibly be God's suppliants, the daughter of His dispersed, nor could they bring His offering when He had slain them with His sword. There can be no doubt about it, for the Bible tells us clearly that God's dispersed is "Israel," and that the "daughter" of His dispersed is in the "land beyond the waters of Ethiopia." "Mine offering" (or "present" as it is called in the seventh verse of Isaiah xviii) is clearly an "offering worthy of my sovereignty," which is to be brought to Christ's Throne in Mount Zion.

> "Ah, the land of the rustling of (or shadowing with) wings" (Revd. Version) where the daughter of His dispersed becomes His suppliant. In Exodus xxxii, 11, it is written of the people who were to become "His dispersed" :—

> "As an eagle that stirreth up her nest,
> That fluttereth over her young,
> He spread abroad his wings, he took them,
> He bare them on his pinions."

Modernists connect this rustling of wings with the "flies of Abyssinia." One cannot help wondering how many of these scholars have had first-hand knowledge of the flies of Abyssinia, and whether they were particularly struck by the rustling, or shadowing, effect of (or with) their wings. Perhaps had they seen a cock ostrich, in all the grandeur of his courting garb, crouch and wave, with that indescribable dancing movement, his outspread and curved shadowing wings to attract the lady of his desire, they might have been—as the writer irresistibly was—reminded of the opening words of this chapter and of the crouching ostrich which the imaginative Masai sees in the great peak that lends its name to our Colony.

Our mission from Eastern Africa will be to send ambassadors to a nation "tall and smooth" (other translations are "outspread and polished," "dragged away and peeled," "scattered and peeled") whom Zephaniah identifies with God's "dispersed," i.e., "Israel" or the "Stone Kingdom of Daniel." Then is God's ensign to be uplifted, the inhabitants of the world to be discomfited, and the nation "Israel" to bring "Mine offering," which will be an acknowledgment that Christ is—and always has been—their King.

"BE YE MINDFUL ALWAYS OF HIS COVENANT."—I.

By John H. Tench.

"O ye seed of Israel His servant, ye children of Jacob, His chosen ones. Be ye mindful always of His covenant; the word which He commanded to a thousand generations; even of the covenant which He made with Abraham, and of His oath unto Isaac; and hath confirmed the same to Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant." (1 Chron. xvi, 13, 15, 16, 17.)

This command given by David, the King, to God's people Israel is very seldom obeyed by the ministers of religion in these latter days. I have been a member of the Church of England since my baptism and yet I have never heard the words of Zacharias, the father of John the Baptist, explained from the pulpit. The Benedictus is sung weekly in Church by millions of people with the spirit but not with the understanding. The aged priest filled with the Holy Ghost uttered these words : "To perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember His holy covenant, the oath which He swore to our father Abraham that He would grant unto us." Our ministers never tell their congregations that God has been true to His Word which He commanded to a thousand generations, that every promise is fulfilled in the Brith-ish—the Covenant Race, who have in these latter days become Great, whose name is Great, whose kingdom is a Nation and a Company of Nations, whose people are as the stars of heaven and as the sand on the seashore, whose people have the gate of their enemies, and in whose seed all the nations of the earth are being blessed both spiritually and materially. This was the Covenant as stated at the beginning of this article which the seed of Israel are commanded never to forget, and of which the ministers of this age are not mindful.

Our Heavenly Father by Isaiah the prophet speaks to these ministers of His Word because they do not remember always His holy Covenant and says : " Hear, ye deaf ; and look, ye blind, that ye may see. Who is blind, but My servant ? or deaf, as My messenger that I sent ? Who is blind as he that is perfect, and blind as the Lord's servant ? Seeing many things but thou observest not ; opening the ears, but he heareth not." Paul also in writing to the Romans says : " Blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in, and so all Israel shall be saved as it is written. There shall come out of Sion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob ; for this is My covenant unto them when I shall take away their sins. As concerning the gospel, they are enemies for your sakes ; but as touching the election, they are beloved for the fathers' sakes, for the gifts and calling of God are without repentance." In a book I have recently studied, " The World Call to the Church," there is ample evidence of this blindness.

The Bishop of Salisbury says in the preface : " What is behind the British Commonwealth ? On what principle has it developed ? What in the last analysis is our justification for seeking to establish its existence and strengthen its bonds ? It is easy to say that it is the offspring of a series of chances ; that it has no plan ; that it has grown at haphazard without any particular principle behind it. Yet not one of us believes that it is a mere fortuitous growth. There is spiritual reality behind it ; both the motive forces which brought it into being and the bonds which hold it together are spiritual.

" But if this is so, we must recognise the fact. We shall shape our future aright only in so far as we are constantly aware of a Divine purpose behind us, a Divine Person Who will use us —if only we ourselves will have it so—as one of His instruments in the progress of the whole human race.

" And there is a further point. We are a wandering race. Every year we send out from these shores unnumbered individuals of British blood in every sort of capacity—governors, soldiers, sailors, civilian officers, merchants, planters, settlers— by whose labour and sacrifice the position of the Commonwealth and the influence of Britain have been constantly enhanced. To these we owe an incalculable debt. Their work and influence is of importance to the Commonwealth itself and to the World."

One of the things in The Everlasting Covenant which the seed of Israel should always be mindful of is " A nation and a company of nations shall be of thee." On page 2 of " The World Call " we get this blind evidence : " In the self-governing dominions our people overseas are seen as the makers of new nations. Since 1583, when Sir H. Gilbert took possession of Newfoundland by setting up a pillar with the arms of England, till the consummation of the Union of South Africa in 1910, the spread of our own people has brought into existence five self-governing dominions whose Prime Ministers gathered last autumn in London. These dominions, with the Irish Free State, occupy one-seventh of the earth's surface, comprising a large share of the cultivable, but as yet unsettled, areas of the world. Their population, however, is as yet less than one-half of that of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. They are in the infancy of their possibilities.

" Canada, as big as all Europe, has under ten million people. Her soil could support a hundred million. With her three colossal industries, agriculture, mining and lumbering, and her three smaller industries, fruit, fish and fur, she has everything—so Lord Byng reminds us—that nature can provide. And he does not mention her unlimited water power. Australia, the only nation with a whole continent to herself, is slightly larger than the United States and has but six million people. Mr. Bruce, her Prime Minister, claims for her that she is the greatest uninhabited country in the world suitable for the settlement of white people, and has the greatest resources and the purest stock within the Empire. South Africa, with the mandated territory which was German South West Africa, has a white population of scarcely one and three-quarter millions and a spacious realm pregnant alike with great possibilities and great problems. Newfoundland, our oldest dominion, with a quarter of a million people, has preserved within it many of the most sterling qualities of our race. New Zealand, our most distant dominion, with its population of one and a half million, in its natural beauties, and its qualities of character, seems to accentuate all that we most cherish in the homeland. These are the five nations which helped, by the French in Canada and the Dutch in South Africa, our own people overseas to build up.

" The first distinctive feature of our people's life in all these dominions is that they have pressed forward into hitherto unoccupied areas. In South Africa alone are they to-day in contact with a large native population of another race and character. They have been pioneers everywhere, and are pioneers to-day, exploring, prospecting, mining, farming, planting, afforesting, hunting and fishing, building roads and railways, making canals, dams and bridges."

" The World Call " states on page 29 : " Scientific discovery, too, is revolutionising overseas conditions. The physical loneliness which has been so marked in all pioneer life wil soon be a thing of the past. Already watches are set by Big Ben on the coast of Labrador ; England is in wireless-telephone communication with every part of the United States ; beam services to Canada, South Africa and Australia are now in operation at cheap rates ; a man who leaves England to-day, as he starts for five years' service in India, confidently expects that before he returns home wireless-telephonic connection will have been achieved. A few small wireless developments may have a wonderful effect on the broadcasting of the Gospel message. An aeroplane service is plying regularly down the West Coast of Australia from the pearl fisheries to the group settlements ; seaplane communications will make for rapid trade development in the West Indian, Melanesian and Polynesian Archipelagoes.

" Lord Clarendon, speaking recently to teachers on emigration, urged them to teach the new generation to regard a move to British Columbia or Western Australia as a change no more serious than a move from England to Wales. In this smaller, less lonely world, the task of the Church is changing. Where every settler owns a motor, a priest can expect a central church to serve a far larger district, and must extend the radius of his own journeys."

On page 39 we read: "The Commonwealth and State Governments of Australia agreed to expend up to £34,000,000 to arrange for 450,000 British people to settle in Australia within ten years. For Canada, in addition to the Three Thousand Families' Scheme, the Ottawa Government has just called for 14,000 men to go out as farm labourers in the West with the prospect of clearing their own land later on."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—Will you kindly explain the following passages in the Bible to me?

(1) I cannot understand Exodus iv, 24–26.

(2) I am not sure if I quite grasp the meaning of Matt. xi, 11.

"ENQUIRER."

ANSWER.—Your questions have been forwarded to me by the Secretary-General, and I have pleasure in replying to the best of my ability, as there are certain difficulties presented in each case.

(1) Certain portions of this passage (Exod. iv, 24–26) are obscure, especially when it says that "the Lord met him (Moses), and sought to kill him," and also when Zipporah said "Surely a bloody husband art thou to me." It is understood to mean that Moses was attacked by a sudden and dangerous illness, which appeared as if it would prove fatal, and which he knew to be inflicted by God. It is possible that Moses was uncircumcised (Ex. vi, 12, 30), and that his illness was a punishment of God in consequence. This being the case, it looks as if Zipporah, his wife, circumcised their son, so that Moses, not having been circumcised before his marriage, now became a "bridegroom by blood" through substitution, with the result that the wrath of Jehovah was appeased, and Moses recovered from his illness.

Against this, it is very hard to believe that Moses had not been circumcised, in view of the importance of the rite amongst the Hebrews, and further in view of the very important position which Moses held as Law-giver and Leader of Israel. It is not proved whether, when Moses said "I am of uncircumcised lips," he was speaking metaphorically or not. But it certainly looks as if Moses now became circumcised by substitution, and so became a "bridegroom of blood," and it is difficult to find any other explanation.

The origin of the rite of circumcision amongst the Hebrews is slightly obscure, nor, apparently, had the rite been fully carried out, since, "This is the cause why Joshua did circumcise: All the people that came out of Egypt, that were males, even all the men of war, died in the wilderness by the way, after they came out of Egypt. Now all the people that came out were circumcised; but all the people that were born in the wilderness by the way as they came forth out of Egypt, them they had not circumcised. . . . And their children, whom he raised up in their stead, them Joshua circumcised: for they were uncircumcised, because they had not circumcised them by the way. . . . And the Lord said unto Joshua, This day have I rolled away the reproach of Egypt from off you. Wherefore the name of the place is called Gilgal unto this day." (Josh. v, 4–9.)

Circumcision, which in general is to be regarded as a ritual tribal mark, was in no way a practice peculiar to the Israelites. It was common to a number of Semitic peoples in antiquity: Edom, Ammon, Moab, all were circumcised. Of the nations of Palestine the Philistines alone were uncircumcised (Judges xiv, 3; cf. Herodotus, II, 36, 104). The Arabs also practised this rite, which, in the Koran, is taken for granted as a firmly-established custom. Circumcision was known in Egypt from the earliest times, and we have the express testimony of Herodotus (above) and Philo (II, 210) that all Egyptians were circumcised, while Herodotus further says that those nations which practised the rite "imitate herein the Egyptians." Thus it appears that circumcision had its native home in Egypt, from which it had spread not only to the other peoples of Africa, but also to the Semites of Asia (see further Diodorus Siculus, III, 31, Strabo, XVII, 824). The Abyssinians still retain the rite, although they are Christians of the Coptic Church.

(2) John the Baptist was the last of the prophets who predicted a future Kingdom. After him the Kingdom became present through the Coming of Christ, and now men are eagerly pressing into it. Hitherto a prophet had been the highest style of man, and there has been no greater prophet than John the Baptist. The Prophets and the Law led up to the second Elijah—John, and so in John the Baptist's person the old order of things passes away. Hence he who holds the smallest place in the Christian Church (cf. the words of St. Matthew, who himself quotes Isaiah xl, 3, in Matt. iii, 3) is greater as regards his office than he who prepared the way for its founding (Matt. xi, 11). This is said not of the personal merits but of the official position of the two. Long before the John the Baptist there was a great ascetic prophet who sought his inspiration in the desert, and cried "Repent ye" with fearless impartiality before kings and common men. His life was a guiding star to many in the days of John—an age not unlike his own, when alien influences again threatened to extinguish pure Hebrew religion. Not to speak of the Essenes there was the hermit teacher of Josephus called Banus, who lived in the desert, covered himself with leaves, sustained life with fruits, and bathed frequently by day and by night, "whom," says Josephus (in his Vita, §2), "I imitated in those things, and lived with him three years."

But with John the Baptist the old order closed, the old dispensation terminated, and with the Coming of Christ the New Covenant began, so that no matter however powerful, mighty, or influential any prophet, priest or king had been up to the time of John the Baptist, himself included, the "least" or humblest member of the Christian Kingdom of Heaven "is greater than he."

BRANCH ACTIVITIES.

MR. TENCH gave an interesting address to a well-attended meeting in the Grove School, Ilkley, on March 26th, on "The Coronation Stone."

A series of four lectures, extending over two days, is being arranged to take place in the Drill Hall, Louth, Lincolnshire on Tuesday and Wednesday, April 24th and 25th, by Rev.

T. H. Whitehouse. So far as is known this is the first attempt on any considerable scale to introduce British-Israel teaching into the town, and it is earnestly and prayerfully hoped that much blessing may be given. The arduous task of organising the meetings is being generously undertaken by Miss Sharpley, "Fenton," High Holme Road, Louth, who would be delighted to give information or receive assistance from any B.-I. believers in the town or district.

Rev. Joseph Gay, A.T.S., visited the South St. Baptist Church, Greenwich, on Easter Sunday, April 8th, and preached to large congregations morning and evening, taking as his subjects, "Jesus is Alive" in the morning, and, as a natural sequence, "Is the Living Jesus Coming Again?" in the evening. The messages were well received.

On Bank Holiday Monday, April 9th, and Tuesday, April 10th, Mr. Gay again visited our Bedford Branch, lecturing at St. Peter's Hall on the Monday, and Wesley Memorial Hall on the Tuesday, to large and appreciative audiences, on "The Story of a Resurrected Nation" and "Is Britain in the Bible?" He passed on to Keysoe, St. Neots, on the Wednesday evening, and delivered his popular lecture on "The British Empire, its Origin, Development and Destiny."

This was entirely new ground. The audience which filled the Baptist Hall evinced great interest, and a good impression was made.

On Thursday, Mr. Gay again visited our Ealing Branch, and took for his subject, "Our Critics answered."

"THE SECRET AND MYSTERY OF ENGLAND."

This was the title of the address given by Mr. H. D. Houghton (President of the Nottingham Branch), on Tuesday, April 3rd, at the meeting of the Walsall Branch. He said that in order to understand the reasons for the pre-eminent position of England it was necessary to find out who the English people were.

Tracing the history of Israel of old, especially from the time of God's unconditional promises to David and the nation, as contained in the 7th chapter of the 2nd Book of Samuel, the lecturer showed that, although Israel was to be lost or hidden for many generations, she is the only nation whose continuance to the end of time was guaranteed by God. He (the lecturer) said that there were something like seventy signs or marks by which Israel was to be recognised, all of which were found in the British nation.

The late Lord Beaconsfield, in a memorable speech, once said that history would never record the decline and fall of England, because it would be said "This great nation is a wise and understanding people," using the very words spoken of Israel by Moses, as recorded in Deut. iv. 6.

"The Secret and Mystery of England" then is that the nation consists of the actual lineal descendants of the Ten Tribes (not the Jews), and that Britain is the "appointed place" of 2 Sam. vii, 10.

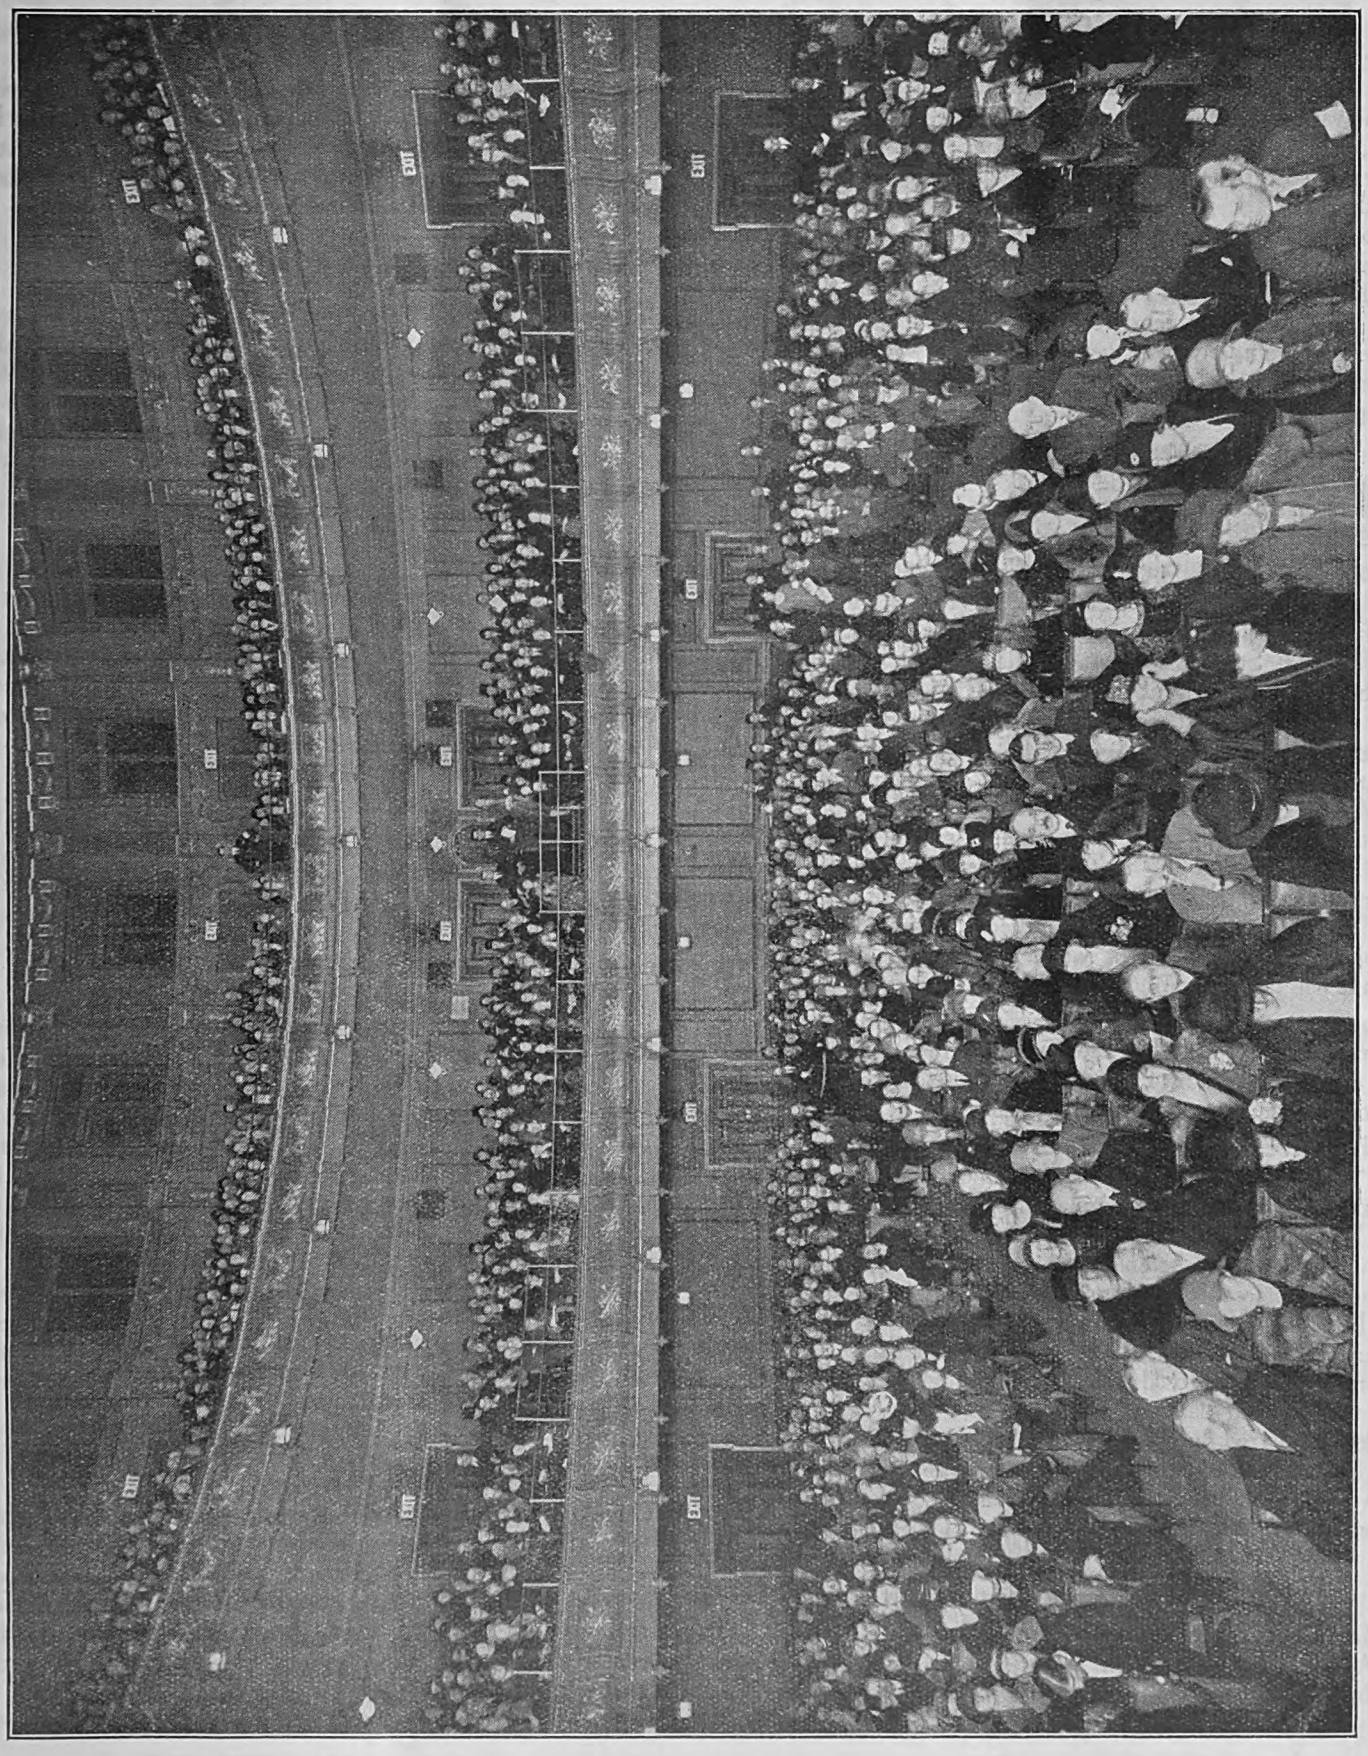
BELFAST BRANCH.—VISIT TO KEADY.

EFFECTIVE pioneer work is being carried on in Keady, Co. Armagh, by Mr. Thompson, Mr. Blackstock and other friends, who, having realised the value of the Gospel of the Kingdom as an antidote to modernism and unbelief, are anxious that Jesus Christ in all His plenitude as Redeemer of His people and Saviour of the world (whosoever) should be broadcast. Good work was accomplished by a visit in November last from two members of the Belfast Branch, and a further visit was paid by special request on Sunday, March 18th, when Mr. T. J. P. M'Keown occupied the pulpit in Second Keady Presbyterian Church at 4 p.m. and 7.30 p.m., and gave an exposition of Divine prophecy as exemplified in British history, showing that God's plan for the world's salvation is broader than the majority of Christians yet realise.

Large bills had been posted announcing the meetings, and the attendances were good. As before, the Rev. W. G. Lundie, B.A., presided in the afternoon, and the Rev. Samuel H. Martin, B.A., in the evening.

Through the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. Calvert, of Darkley House, a number of friends interested were invited to tea at their mansion. British-Israel Truth formed the subject for a brief exchange of views after tea.

Two further invitations for lectures were given, one being from Mr. Maxwell Williamson, the District Master of the Orange Institution.



We give God all the praise for His mercy and love in blessing humble efforts to advance His Cause.

THE MIDDLE PORTION OF THE GREAT AUDIENCE IN THE QUEEN'S HALL, LONDON, ON APRIL 13th, 1928.

Digitized by Google

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

THE British-Israel-World Federation scored another triumph in the vast audience and the remarkable meeting in the Queen's Hall, London, on April 13th. All but a dozen or so of the reserved seat tickets had been sold in advance, as also had hundreds of the unreserved. When the doors were opened there was a rush for the ticket office to secure the remaining unappropriated seats. Very few halls in London apart from the Royal Albert Hall could have accommodated the people. Mr. Spencer Shaw rendered selections on the great organ while the company was getting seated. An army of B.-I. stewards did good business by selling hundreds of our journals and pamphlets and books.

It was an inspiring sight for the President, the speakers, members of Council, clergy, ministers and others when they stepped on the platform to take their places. This may be understood on looking at the picture on the preceding page, though only the middle section of the audience is shown; large numbers are unfortunately shut out on each side.

The proceedings were opened by prayer offered by the Rev. W. H. Stuart-Fox, M.A., followed by a brief address by the President of the B.-I.-W.F.—Major J. Knowles, O.B.E., after which he introduced Mr. Herbert Garrison, the Secretary-General, who gave a portion of his lecture on "The Great Pyramid," illustrated by beautiful lantern pictures, projected by Mr. C. H. Connor. Mr. Garrison took occasion to correct the unfortunate impression which had gained publicity that the Federation taught that the Pyramid date—May 29th next—indicated the commencement of a war which was to last some years. The Pyramid symbolism undoubtedly foreshadows some form of world tribulation, but just what form it will take we cannot, and do not, venture to say.

For our race he emphasised the need for national repentance and national prayer. God had ever been faithful to His Word, and according to His Promise He would deliver His people out of trouble in the future as He had done in the past.

The Rev. Pascoe Goard followed with an impressive address on "God's Last Call to the Nation, and the B.-I. Challenge." He gave many effective examples of history fulfilling prophecy, and he made a powerful appeal for obedience to God's laws. Both speakers were listened to with rapt attention, and many of their points called forth great applause. A large number of city business men were among the audience, and eager interest was sustained throughout the two and a quarter hours. We are much indebted to Mr. W. J. Pilcher and Mr. P. W. Barnes and the devoted band of stewards who, under their superintendence, carried out detailed arrangements smoothly; also to Mr. W. Sleeman and his staff in charge of the book-stall; they had a busy time with the pressing crowds around them all seeking further information by way of our literature.

Mr. John H. Tench gave an acceptable address at H.Q. on April 11th. The usual meetings will be held (D.V.) on Wednesday afternoon and Thursday evening next.

The following engagements should be noted in addition to those on another page:—Durham, Windsor Café, Market Place, Thursday, 7.30, Mr. Houghton. Grayshott (Hants), Village Hall, Wednesday, 5 p.m., Rev. Canon Hollis. Manchester, Houldsworth Hall, Tuesday, 7.45, Mrs. Bloxam.

The next Summer Convention at Glastonbury will be held (D.V.) from the evening of Monday, August 6th, to Friday evening, August 10th. Particulars will be sent in response to applications addressed: "Convention," 6, Buckingham Gate, S.W.1. We would remind our readers that our hostel—Abbot's Leigh, Glastonbury, is open all the year round. Rooms with full board are available at moderate rates.

The Rev. Commander Roberts has, by special invitation of the Head Master of Crewkerne Grammar School, given B.-I. addresses to the scholars on three successive Sunday evenings, and has also addressed two Drawing-room meetings kindly arranged by Mrs. Hexter. Keen interest was shown in our subject and literature was asked for.

E. W. A., Tofino, B.C., Canada, writes:—"I always look forward more than anything to the mail which brings my NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER. We have only three mails a month here, so you can imagine how eagerly mail-day is looked forward to. I enclose five dollars and five addresses, and would like you to send the journal to each address for four months. I am writing myself to the five people, and am asking them to read each issue and not to pass an opinion until they have read them all. If they will do this with an open mind I have not much fear but that you will get five new permanent subscribers. If every B.-I. believer would send as many dollars as they could afford with names, and write to each personally, the number of new people reached with our Message would be enormous."

Sunday Dance Club Ended!

Good Work of the Lord's Day Observance Society.

A four months' Fight against the Sunday Dance Club at West Ealing Palais de Danse has just ended in another Victory for the Lord's Day Observance Society.

Huge Posters claimed that this Sunday Dance Club was "one of the most luxurious Dance Palaces in London," and Sabbath-Breaking patrons were exhorted to come along and "Dance with delight" at charges ranging from 3s. 6d. to 1s. 6d.

A visit was paid to this establishment on Sunday, October 9th at 8.45 p.m., by Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Martin and two Police Officers, with the result that the Licensee, Mr. Joseph Plotzker, was fined £10 and £5 5s. costs at Ealing Police Court for contravening the Dancing Licences Acts. Other opposition was organised, including a Petition to the Middlesex Licensing Authority against the renewal of the Licence. The Petition was supported by the Vicar of the Parish, Rev. A. H. Cooper, M.A., and by 40 residents in the immediate neighbourhood. The Sunday Dance Club supporters organised a counter Petition, but in the end the Club closed down and the Bench decided not to renew Mr. Plotzker's Licence. The Fight has cost money, but it has been worth while in saving Ealing from this latest attempted Sabbath profanation.

The Society which fought this Fight to a Finish is the same Society which of late has SUCCESSFULLY fought against Sunday Dog Races at Southend-on-Sea, Sunday Football at Edmonton, Sunday Cinemas at Middlesex—the Lord's Day Observance Society. This good work is largely carried on by the support of readers of "The National Message and Banner." Will you therefore help the Society this week in its new Victory Campaign against Sabbath Desecration at Seaside Resorts? We would not ask unless our needs were pressing.

God and My Birthright

By

J. LLEWELLYN THOMAS, F.R.C.S.,

Author of* "The Restoration of Israel."

The Church Family Newspaper says :

> The presentation of the subject is good, being on a Scriptural basis. . . . We recommend this work and wish it a wide circulation.

The Methodist Times says :

> The book leaves us with altogether a fuller and firmer faith in God as the Ruler of the World—the Over-Ruler—working out through all the ages the great promises made to our fathers.

A book which strengthens faith, in these days of spiritual unrest, deserves a wide public. It is a book which every B.-I. should possess and constantly read. "God and My Birthright" is a striking work which is enhanced in value as the "end of the age" draws nearer. To those who can read between the lines of a book which treats only of scriptural matters, the real meaning of world happenings becomes clearer. Buy it to-day, read it to-morrow, and keep it always on your shelf for re-perusal.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

[It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.]

WHAT SHALL ISRAEL'S PART BE IN THE LAST GREAT STRUGGLE?

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

Many are asking the question, "What is to happen to Britain during the last great struggle of the age as set forth in the sacred Scriptures; and what is about to happen to Britain during the low passage of the Pyramid."

We must continue to say in regard to the low passage that we have no means of knowing just what is portended there; the Pyramid marks a chronological progress indicating certain particular times and periods, but it is not accompanied by any explanation of what shall happen at such times or during such period.

Ages before the Exodus the Pyramid pointed in its sealed chambers to the date of the Exodus; but there was nothing to indicate what would transpire on that date.

In the sealed chronology of the Pyramid the time of the birth and of the crucifixion of Our Lord was indicated, but there was nothing to show what would take place at that time. Suddenly then the Grand Gallery shot up into its full height and continued until the night of August 4th-5th, 1914, ndicating the Christian dispensation, but there was no word to indicate that this was represented.

The Great Step broke the plane of ascent of the floor line of the Grand Gallery in 1844, but there was nothing to indicate that at that time Britain would begin to assert her authority over the ancient lands given to our fathers and over the Esau-Turkish administration therein.

The roof of the Grand Gallery suddenly descended marking the night of August 4th, 1914, and continued until the date of the signing of the Armistice, but only the outstanding fact of Britain's entry into the War, and emergence out of it, threw any light on the meaning of the first low passage. Dates were indicated during our progress through the Antechamber, but not until the newspapers were read in the days following the indicated dates did we know what events would mark those times.

The next low passage commences May 28th this year, but what it indicates in the great activities of Britain and the nations there will be no voice to say, and no fact to indicate until the day arrives and the period of the low passage develops its meaning.

The fact that the last low passage was marked by war is no guarantee that the next low passage will be marked in the same way.

Therefore our answer has been, and will be, to the question, "What will happen to Britain and in the world during the next low passage," "We do not know and have no means of ascertaining until the time shall come."

Let us now pass to the question, "What will happen to British-Israel during the period of the last great conflict as set forth in the sacred Scriptures?"

Now the Bible gives to us the statement that certain great events shall take place; it gives the description of the events and indicates the parties consisting of groups of nations which shall be involved in them. But the Bible does not specifically indicate the time when these things shall take place.

As to the past, the great things of the Bible and the great things of the Pyramid have coincided as to time. Will it be so in the future? That it is impossible to say. Not every great thing of the Bible has been marked in the Pyramid, and it is impossible to say in advance that this or that great thing in Bible prophecy yet to be fulfilled is marked therein.

So we do not know whether the last great conflict between Israel and the nations will be coincident with the low passage of the Pyramid.

Perhaps it will be safe to say that the probabilities are in that direction; but for knowledge, we must await the event and see.

We recognise, and have recognised, from the beginning of our journal, that there are some whose system of chronology calls for longer date than the present reading of the message of the Pyramid by Mr. Davidson and his associates.

There are several possibilities :—

1. There may be both a short and a longer reading of the Pyramid message, each indicating the progress of events; in which case both schools would be right.

2. There is the possibility that either of the schools may be wrong. The human element must always be taken into account in anticipating fulfilments of prophecy.

The following, however, is certain. If the Pyramid has a message for this generation—as we believe it has—and if that message is given through the inch to the month reading of the Great Pyramid, then its message must of necessity apply now. That being the case, it is of infinite importance that men like Mr. Davidson and his associates have refused to heed the voice of those who stand for a slower reading of Pyramid chronology, but have with stout heart and clear voice given forth their message.

If—which is very unlikely—some error should have entered their calculation, and the mind and heart of the nation has been put on guard to meet a tempest which is threatening but which failed to burst, no harm will have been accomplished. But if the short reading being true they had listened to those who pleaded for a slower reading and had kept silent, untold injury would have resulted; for it is a fact well known in many quarters that the message of the Pyramid, read on the inch to the month scale, has put the nation upon its guard and stirred the hearts of the people to prayer.

Thus we have made choice in the pages of this journal to allow the storm signals to be hoisted that mariners might have their ships prepared to meet the storm.

In any case, even though the improbable should transpire, and we should discover that we had read the chronological indications of the Pyramid by too short a scale, we should still be convinced that our course in this regard has been right.

Now may we assume that the events prophesied and described in connection with the last great struggle coincide with the last low passage of the Great Pyramid.

We do not know, but the probabilities all lie on the side of their being coincident.

When we look at the Great Pyramid we find a clearly defined date: May, 1928.

When we look at the Bible we do not see that May, 1928, is clearly indicated; but what we do see in the Bible is that there is a period which sees at once the decline of the Turkish power in Asia and the Imperial power in Europe, which began at the commencement of the nineteenth century and ends approximately A.D. 1934–6.

We also see during that period the passing of Israel from the constricted experience of national life which was her penalty during 2,520 years into that miraculous development which has manifested itself in the Anglo-Saxon race from the beginning of the eighteenth century to this day. And we see in that connection that the period of British development from 1800 to 1936 is a period marked by certain remaining elements of constraint, opposition and struggle, and that she shall not step out into full liberty and untrammelled development until 1934–6 is left behind.

We further see that from 1917 to 1934–6 there is a similar period of liberation, increasing development and final triumph for Judah and Jerusalem under the ægis of British-Israel in Palestine.

The military down-treading of Jerusalem ended in 1917. Any form of dominance not in accordance with God's Will shall be swept away by 1934–6, when the summit of Mount Moriah will be freed from the presence of "the abomination which maketh desolate."

The things of which we have been speaking are definite statements made and reiterated through many prophetic voices by the Lord Almighty. Here we believe we are on safe ground because we have the "Thus saith the Lord" of the sacred Scriptures setting the boundaries of the times and describing the various sequences of events in due order.

In other articles we have called attention once and again to the terms of the national covenant made by Jehovah with Israel as recorded in Leviticus xxvi. Specifically there we find it covenanted that if Israel disobeyed, four sentences of punishment should be imposed, each continuing for seven times. Now seven times is equal to 2,520 years.

Two of these sentences went into effect upon Israel of the ten tribes. Two of these sentences went into effect upon Judah.

We are not left to surmise that these things are so, for the prophets, speaking of the captivities again and again, declare that they took place because of the transgression of Israel and Judah. Especially is the prophet Ezekiel clear upon this matter, indicating first in regard to Judah and then in regard to Israel that the captivities were imposed under the law.

We know the beginnings of these punishments, namely, 740 B.C., 721 B.C., 604 B.C., 587 B.C. Adding 2,520 years (which is done by subtraction by the way) we arrive at the period which we have indicated from A.D. 1800 to 1934–6. within which period all these sentences finally end.

Running parallel to these is the time of opportunity of the Continental Empires in their succession, as set forth so clearly by the prophet Daniel. We know the beginning of that period of opportunity, namely, the date that Daniel interpreted the dream image to Nebuchadnezzar. Adding 2,520 years for the continuance of that succession of Empires we realise their opportunity has gone and that the Empires crashed in the late Great War.

Running parallel with the military image was the image later set up by Nebuchadnezzar on the plains of Dura; this was the establishment of religion in the Imperial succession of Empires. The temporal power connected with that ended in 1870, but the final end of the authority of the organisation and its ecclesiastical power to enforce that authority will not outlive 1934–6. By that time we may look to see the Christianity in the land which had been occupied by the Continental Empires purged of idolatry, purified in spirit, humbly taking its place as a remnant saved by grace in the true Church of Christ on earth.

It will be seen that the chains of sequence related by the sacred Scriptures are connected with:

(a) The House of Israel,
(b) The House of Judah, and Jerusalem,
(c) The Continental Empires, and that all these sequences show one great outstanding struggle yet to be.

We shall analyse the leading Scriptures dealing with these in our next.

WHAT IS THIS SIGN, MAY 28-29, 1928?

By the Rev. Commander L. G. A. Roberts, R.N.

This date is given to us on the Great Pyramid scale as the entrance into the last narrow passage leading from the Antechamber into the King's Chamber, and it certainly marks something very definite. The last time we passed through such a passage was from August 4th-5th, 1914, to November 11th, 1918; it meant war almost to the death. But since that time under the Granite Leaf we have an equally alarming sudden narrowing of the passage, and it meant to us internal and domestic troubles, since which time, though more relieved, we have still not been free from domestic or internal worries. May this not be to us a lesson? This lesson can only be taught us from the historical fulfilment of prophecy. We can but refer to that portion we have passed through since 1914. In our opinion it is the preparation of the return of God's people Israel to the Land of Promise. The first portion at the first did not apparently immediately concern us, but we were led by God's Spirit to take part, as it afterwards turned out that if we had not sacrificed ourselves for Belgium the whole of the image of Nebuchadnezzar would have become reconstructed. Palestine and the whole of Mesopotamia would have been under the dominion of the Kaiser, and the Times of the Gentiles prolonged indefinitely, through our refusal to act out our covenant with Belgium. As it was, at a very great sacrifice, which looks to us as the sacrifice of Isaac, we have had committed to our keeping the whole of the Land of Promise. If we had desired it, we could not have had a better claim if we had taken it over at once. Our actions prove we are not out for selfish motives, but to restore peace to Jerusalem, and "They shall prosper that love thee." The war, as we know, turned out the Mohammedan from the Promised Land. But there are two other foes of God's people—Rome and Russia. Both these are but emanations from the same source, the kingdoms of this world, under the Nebuchadnezzar image. If these should last beyond cir. 1936, "the times and seasons" which have hitherto proved so exactly to fit, from Pyramid and Prophecy, might be found to have misled us. But St. Paul by the Holy Spirit tells us (1 Thes. v): "Of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you: for yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief."

Now compare those words with the passing away of the Turkish Empire. (Rev. xvi, 12-16.) Have we not here in Europe and all over the world the three unclean spirits like frogs, croaking, swelling out in blasphemy against God and against them that dwell in heaven. (Rev. xiii, 6.) Perhaps you will say we don't see it. What about the spirits of Jesuitism, Communism, and infidelity, warning us "Behold, I come as a thief, blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked and they see his shame. And he gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue

Armageddon."

What is the meaning of this expression: "Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments." We, Israel, as a nation, have had upon us the testimony that we have set to our seal that we believe in the Once Offered Sacrifice of the Lord Jesus Once upon the Cross. We as a nation adopted this One Name above every name, the Only Name, the Wedding Garment. We shall keep this Garment. Rome may try her utmost to decoy us, but we must stand fast.

Those who have followed the Malines Controversy, the Prayer Book Revision, and know the struggle we have had, must have seen that this year is the year we must make our decision. We have a duty to perform. Even now, this month, before the Church Assembly meets on April 26th, to pray earnestly that we may be saved as a nation from going into Babylon again, from whence we have been once delivered; and even if the Church Assembly should fail in its duty, that our prayers may be effectual and Parliament may throw out the Measure which, in the opinion of a large body of earnest Christian people, leads us to modernism and idolatry.

This action on our part will no doubt usher in the three unclean spirit-like frogs to do the devil's work, and stir up the nations to the battle of our God against us. Of this stirring up we have evident signs. Rome to the South, Russia from the North, Turkey from the East, all against Our Lord Jesus Christ, "For he that is not with Me is against Me."

In The National Message and Banner of April 14th there is an article on Russia, where one can distinguish that this Power heads up in itself all that "Mystery of Iniquity" spoken of in 2 Thes. ii and Rev. xvii.

Digitized by Google

The work of deceiving the nations and preparing them for the great battle is the subject of prophecy, but its progress is clearly laid down, and its result in the last great battle is candidly set out. Thank God, Christ rules over all. He has promised His Holy Spirit to us before that great day comes. It is clearly set out in Rev. xi, 11 ; Acts iii, 19-21 ; Joel ii, 28-32, and elsewhere.

But now for our encouragement let us look back. Those who have seen God's Hand as revealed in Ps. lx will know why our Dardanelles exploit was thwarted. We had not consulted God, and yet He was merciful to us in the withdrawal of our armies from Gallipoli. We now know the German and Turkish plan was to seize the Suez Canal, but by this deflection of Turkish forces, and our forces concentrated in the East, this plan was thwarted, and all the German and Turkish material seized, and the way made open for our deliverance of Jerusalem at the very time and season appointed in prophecy and by Our Lord Jesus Christ.

Nor was this all. God had already sent a man, an archæologist, from Oxford, who not only thwarted at every turn the German plans for building their railroad to the Persian Gulf, but was himself of such a temperament that he won the affection, respect and confidence of the diverse groups of Bedouin and Arabs, learning their language, customs, habits, and so ingratiated himself that when the war broke out the archæologist became a soldier, reconciled the difficulties and quarrels of the Arab sheiks and shereefs, became himself not only a shereef but a king-maker. Under God he was able as a Christian, for he would not hide his colours, to worship Allah the true God, and for the occasion this sufficed with the Arabs, for they bore an inveterate hatred to the Turk. This Colonel Lawrence was able to combine all these Arab wanderers, regulars and irregulars, into a mighty army, and by his tact, genius and discipline, so to check the Turk, blow up his plant, destroy his ammunition and provisions, and also act as camouflage in such a way as to help General Allenby to such an extent as to relieve him of constant surprises and attacks, which would inevitably have weakened his attack on Gaza, Jerusalem, and eventually Damascus. This Colonel Lawrence, who refused every honour, scouted all popularity, God raised up at the right moment to be a leading figure in our deliverance of Palestine and Mesopotamia from the Mohammedan scourge.

What God did for us through Lord Allenby and Colonel Lawrence in the counteracting of the effect of the unclean spirit of Mohammed He will certainly do in the overcoming of Rome, and finally Russia. But for all this He will be enquired of to do it for us. We must give Him no rest till He establish Jerusalem a praise in the earth.

"Britain and America"—wrote Carlyle to Dickens in 1845—"are properly not two nations, but one ; inseparable by any human power or diplomacy ; being already united by Heaven's Act of Parliament and nature and practical intercourse ; indivisible brother elements of the same great Saxondom, to which in all honourable ways belongs life."

BRITISH-ISRAEL-WORLD FEDERATION.

ANNUAL REPORT FOR 1927.

Adopted at the Annual Meeting on April 17th.

With great gratitude to Almighty God we are able to record a year for British-Israel surpassing in some notable respects any previous year, especially in the vastly increased output of literature, and in the greatly increased interest aroused in the public mind, as evidenced by the thousands attending our meetings in place of hundreds in former times. The outstanding instances are: the huge assembly at the Royal Albert Hall ; the many thousands at the Congress ; the special meetings at the Church House, Westminster, soon thereafter ; the splendid series of gatherings in the largest halls in Belfast ; and the wonderful audience in the great Town Hall in Birmingham.

In a wondrous Providence and under the guiding hand of the Lord God of Israel there is occasion for legitimate pride in retrospect and for confidence in prospect. Devout students as British-Israel believers are of the Book of books, we behold with ever-increasing wonder and delight our Israel nation moving steadily forward to the goal marked out for her in the Divine counsels and foreshowings. That this marching onward is not being done so blindly and unknowingly as before is largely due to the British-Israel-World Federation and its more than Empire-wide influence and enlightenment. Perhaps its greatest asset, next to its leaders at Headquarters and the laborious and loyal fellow-workers who everywhere support them and the meetings they promote, is its weekly organ—The National Message and Banner, which there is good reason for believing is gradually moulding thinking minds and opening out the viewpoint that the time is at hand when politics can be and should be more consciously Biblical and more definitely religious, which, surely, is a consummation devoutly to be wished and worked and prayed for ; for then there will be no large army of neutrals, but only two great parties—those on the winning side of Christ and His Kingdom, and those on the losing side of Antichrist and anarchism.

The all-important work of getting the Kingdom more ready for the Lord Jesus to appear and reign over might be considerably hastened if a sufficient sum could be put at the disposal of the Board of the Covenant Publishing Co., to enable them to supply copies of our journal to all members of both Houses of Parliament during the whole of this current year. Such is the conviction of one of the Life Members of the Federation and a Member of Council, who expresses the earnest hope that the seed-suggestion now sown in the hearer's or reader's mind may speedily fructify.

Bis dat qui cito dat—he gives twice who gives promptly, and leaves results to the God who has thus inspired him or her. It is a matter for great satisfaction and thankfulness that the circulation of our journal is double that of two years ago, and that its influence is ever widening. We at Headquarters are making special efforts to double the circulation again during 1928, and we earnestly ask for the active co-operation of all our supporters in this endeavour.

We have letters from many parts of the world bearing testimony to the help and blessing our journal is bringing to thousands of homes.

Clergymen, ministers and lay folk alike tell us that Israel Truth is spreading like a flame.

The late Prime Minister of New Zealand, the Rt. Hon. W. F. Massey, said the last time we saw him, "British-Israel Truth is bound to win because it is God's Truth, it is winning now all along the line."

The British-Israel Movement has features which can be found in no other religious body; and is presenting Truths for which it has stood the sole sponsor for many years.

The unique feature of the work is that it seeks to send forth a doctrine, and to disseminate a spirit. It is the hope of the Federation that the Churches and Colleges will awake to the vital Truth of the doctrine and teach it in all the colleges, pulpits and literature of the land. It is also the hope that the spirit of Israel-British brotherhood will diffuse itself through all the organisations extant in our Celto-Saxon world.

A phase of this feature of our work is the unification of the workers of all the Churches, clergymen and ministers and laity. If all the denominations are together as one brotherhood within the scope of our Movement, our hope is that, as the Movement becomes universal, it will reunite Celto-Saxon Christianity in one unity of the Spirit.

All may meet in our circles in all good fellowship and brotherhood. May this spirit spread. The year has been marked by the extension of this widening fellowship at home and abroad. For this we are most thankful.

In doctrine, it has been our great privilege to bring forward once more the actuality of the Kingdom of God in its national phase as a still "going concern" in the earth.

In this matter we have the formal ratification of the Churches in the form of service they use, in the prayers they offer, and in the hymns they sing. But while they have used the form of service and have offered the prayers and have joined in the songs as a spiritual exercise, the words and the meaning so manifestly conveyed in them have been overlooked. It has been to them "as a tale that is told." Form, beauty, spirituality, there have been for them in the worship; but of practical meaning little, if any. For instance, in the prayer, "Lord, bless Thine heritage; make Thy chosen people joyful; govern them, and lift them up for ever," there has been spiritual striving and uplift, but no conception that God's heritage is His people; that God's chosen people is Israel; that the prayer is for NATIONAL government and general happiness of the NATION; and that most certainly it is of ourselves as a people, nation and government that we are praying.

On Easter morning, in a leading Nonconformist Church, the congregation joined in singing heartily the Benedicus, the Te Deum and the Jubilate, while almost within earshot the congregation of the Established Church were uniting in the beautiful form of service in the Book of Common Prayer. What these congregations were doing Church and Chapel were doing all over the land. In form they were taking the place of Israel, God's chosen people, worshipping the God of their fathers.

After the Benediction which closed the National service the preachers ascended their pulpits, and there, by their utterances, very generally manifested that their understanding differed very much from the form of service they had been joining in.

It has been our privilege to bring the doctrine forward once more which gave rise to the beautiful form of service, and to preach the NATIONAL phase of the Gospel of the Kingdom of God.

It is with thankfulness that we realise that hundreds of clergymen and ministers have awakened to the Truth, and are preaching it with spirit and power with marvellous results.

The post brings to us communications from such clergymen and ministers, who have found new life and new power in preaching the resurrected Gospel.

This year we mark in our progress the joining of forces on the part of a number of University Professors, Heads of Colleges and leaders of mighty religious organisations.

We are thankful to have the fellowship of these brethren as individuals; we are still more thankful for these brethren in their representative capacity because of their opportunity of spreading the good news among those who follow them.

The year 1928 will show great results in this particular line.

Our clerical and ministerial forces have begun to get together to give each other mutual support and so to further the work. This development we are hoping to see rapidly extend its influence from this time forward.

In the meantime, our library of literature grows apace. This may now be classified into departments. There is that class of literature which deals with the historical and ethnological sides of the question. A very valuable library of books dealing with this phase of the subject is being accumulated as author after author makes his or her contribution. Some day someone will co-ordinate all this mass of information into one standard book. We rejoice in the many excellent contributions made by the various authors toward that end.

Another class of literature is that which gathers together proofs of the identity of Israel with Britain. Formerly this was the leading type of literature demanded, but it appears that the public mind is now being prepared to accept the fact as having been proved, asking only that the historic information may be furnished as a special branch of history which is the contribution of our Movement to the historic literature of the day.

Another class, and a most important one, is that of Biblical exposition. The contributions which have been made this year have been not only to the British-Israel platform, but to Christian literature in general.

We are glad to say that the books which have been so written and published by our authors and the Covenant Publishing Company are attracting the attention and awakening the interest of theologians and Bible students at home and overseas.

The possession of the key to the Gospel of the Kingdom gives to our writers a vantage-ground which gives an introduction to the books, and assigns to them a place in Christian literature which, perhaps, they would not occupy if they were written concerning well-known phases of truth. The books, however, are well written. The authors are to be congratulated, and the unique opportunity presented for a new presentation in an old field of literature must be taken the fullest advantage of. Nearly ten million pieces of literature from penny pamphlets to 25s. books have been put in circulation by us during the last few years.

The greatest triumph for British-Israel in the way of meetings was most assuredly that achieved by the vast assembly on March 1st, 1927, in the Royal Albert Hall, London, the largest hall in Britain, holding some 10,000 people. Every ticket was applied for in advance, and all but a few ten days before the date. Hundreds were unable to gain admission and no hall was available for an overflow meeting. The scene presented by the magnificent gathering was one never to be forgotten by every British-Israelite privileged to be present. The audience represented every part of the British Isles—from Cornwall to Scotland, from East Anglia to Ireland, and from the Channel Islands to North Wales.

The President of the Federation, Major Knowles, presided. Canon Hollis offered prayer. The speakers were the Rev. Pascoe Goard, Messrs. John Leech, K.C., David Davidson and Herbert Garrison. Eagerness and enthusiasm marked the whole proceedings from the Chairman's speech to the National Anthem.

The influence from that meeting reached the five continents. It is immeasurable. Echoes of it reach us even yet, week by week.

After paying all the heavy expenses there was a net profit of over £650. Needless to say, nothing to approach this achievement has been experienced in the whole history of British-Israel.

The eighth Annual Congress, held in the large Central Hall, Westminster, in October last, proved a record one both in point of attendance and of revenue ; while the speaking standard was well maintained and the spiritual teaching and atmosphere were of a high order. The general interest aroused led to the engagement of the great Hall of the Church House during the same month for three meetings, and these also attracted excellent audiences, which listened eagerly to addresses chiefly by clergy and ministers as purposely arranged. One of many results of the Congress and of these supplementary meetings was a Clerical and Ministerial Conference, which led to the formation of a Ministerial Association within the Federation, from which good results may be expected in course of time.

A splendid series of meetings in the large halls of Belfast, lasting for a week, addressed by Mr. John Leech, K.C., and Mr. J. J. Morey, has given a fine fillip to the Cause in Ulster.

Mainly through the efforts of Mrs. Shine, the Rev. J. M. Dungan, M.A., Mr. John Leech and others, a Branch has been established in Dublin, and many excellent meetings have been held there.

The Rev. T. H. Whitehouse and his devoted band of workers organised a wonderful meeting which filled the beautiful Town Hall in Birmingham, the largest in the Midlands, in November last. It was addressed by the Rev. Pascoe Goard and Mr. Garrison. Its influence has reached to the limits of the Midland Area, and given a great impetus to our work there.

Hundreds of meetings on a less ambitious scale have been held throughout the country with far-reaching results, and these have been reported by the Provincial Press in a more generous spirit than formerly.

More new Branches have been formed during 1927 than in any previous year, and there are calls for still more.

* * *

Successful Conventions were held during the Summer at Glastonbury and at Llandrindod Wells.

Abbot's Leigh, our B.-I. Hostel at Glastonbury, has been maintained, and those who have stayed there speak in terms of gratification at the kind attention of our genial Superintendent, Miss Jennings. It should be widely known that the Hostel is open all the year round, and it is hoped that an increasing number will avail themselves of facilities offered for seeing the sacred and historic spot where the first Christian Church building in all the world was erected.

The Women's Auxiliary has carried on its work and rendered valuable help in various ways. Its efforts in connection with the Annual Sale of Work were rewarded by seeing a financial result greater even than that of 1926, though that year exceeded the net result of previous Sales nearly fourfold.

A steady increase of Members and Associates has been maintained, though we have to mourn the loss of several by death, among whom are :—

The loss of the Rev. David Wynne-Evans, our Commissioner for Wales, is a very heavy one indeed, as also is that of the Rev. Philip Young, a veteran in Israel Truth, and a preacher of it for fifty years.

Mrs. Roberts was the wife of our beloved Commander Roberts.

Mr. H. G. Locke had been in failing health for some years. He had rendered great service for several years as Secretary of the I.B.I.A. before it was merged into the Federation. We tender our sympathy to the relatives of all those who have passed on to the Home above.

The Rev. Pascoe Goard has again rendered yeoman service which is beyond all praise. He has placed us all under a deep debt of gratitude by his powerful and convincing speeches and by his illuminating articles, the influence of which has gone to the ends of the earth, bringing joy, comfort and enlightenment to unnumbered thousands, who have rejoiced in the light he has thrown upon God's Word written. May he long be spared to us. We are glad that Mrs. Goard is with him. We pray that the Divine blessing may rest upon them in rich measure.

We rejoice that we have still with us our two stalwart veterans, the Rev. Commander Roberts and the Rev. Dr. Mountain, and we are profoundly grateful for their continued strength and vitality, and for the good work they have been able to accomplish. We pray God to bless them and graciously spare them and their beautiful spiritual influence among us yet awhile.

We thank God for the great and ever-increasing army of noble men and women who are so faithfully labouring and witnessing for Israel Truth the world over, and for the splendid band of preachers, speakers, writers and workers connected with H.Q. and all our Branches everywhere, who are giving of their best for the grandest of all Causes. The God of Israel will reward them; we never can adequately, but we can and do thank them with all our hearts.

We have gladly welcomed on our staff, as a temporary Commissioner, Mr. Howard Rand, LL.B., of Massachusetts, U.S.A., the land of Manasseh, and we have learnt to value his character and fine spirit.

* * *

Our work in the Dominions has gone steadily forward, with progress in Australasia, and with accelerated pace in Africa and Canada. The Rev. Maxwell Carnson has won his spurs in South Africa, and has accomplished much in spite of special difficulties. He has travelled thousands of miles in that land of magnificent distances, and has addressed with great acceptance very many audiences from South to North and from East to West. We wish him and all associated with him continued success in the Land of Good Hope.

* * *

Our Commissioners in the various Areas from the Channel Islands to the Tweed have carried on a fine work. They tell their own story of expansion and ever-opening fields and increasing demands.

* * *

Canada is organising on an ambitious scale with a Confederation within this our Federation. The veteran Professor Odlum is still championing the Israel Cause on the platform, in the press and in the pulpit. A fine band of speakers and workers are carrying on from Atlantic to Pacific.

* * *

America is awakening and widespread interest is aroused there. We have hundreds of enquiries from nearly all parts of U.S.A. Our journal is circulating there in large numbers. There are many calls for the establishment of Branches, and it is hoped that Mr. Rand and others will be able to organise some in the near future.

There are considerable numbers of believers in India with whom we have correspondence, and they also are asking for organisation of Branches.

We have a vast correspondence with practically all parts of the English-speaking world, and not a little from foreign countries.

Our postage bill is very heavy.

Hundreds of thousands of copies of the special number of the "N.M. & B." have been issued, and it is very gratifying to receive the testimonies as to the interest aroused therein, as also those regarding the great benefit derived from B.-I. teaching from our Members and Associates everywhere.

* * *

We gratefully record our deep indebtedness to all the generous donors to our funds, without whose aid it would have been impossible to accomplish the work herein mentioned. Many donors wish to remain anonymous, otherwise we would in particular have liked to name some very liberal donors.

* * *

Our Book Room at H.Q. has done a great work by the sale of a vast number of books and pamphlets. Buyers and enquirers have come from all parts.

* * *

Mr. W. Sleeman and his staff of the Covenant Publishing Co. have had an exceedingly busy year. The output of literature has been enormous. Thousands of packages have been sent to the five continents. Several new books have been published. The "N.M. & B." and our monthly journal for beginners, THE COVENANT RACE are exercising an influence that cannot be estimated. We would tender our warmest thanks to all the voluntary writers of articles in these papers, and to the official proof-reader of the "N.M." — Mrs. Garrison.

* * *

By doctor's orders, and by kind decree of the Council, the Secretary-General and Mrs. Garrison were enabled to join a British-Israel party in a tour of Bible lands and other countries during the year, for which they are very grateful. It is especially gratifying that the expenses of the tour were recouped by the revenue from the Secretary-General's lectures on Palestine and the Pyramid, and from the sale of Eastern goods brought back from Damascus and Jerusalem, etc.

* * *

We wish to pay a tribute to the band of voluntary workers at Headquarters, and to thank them all most sincerely for all the splendid work they have done.

The Secretary-General has had what it seems a platitude to say—a very strenuous year. He wishes to express his best thanks for all the excellent work and devoted loyalty of his staff, and he must mention in particular the invaluable and skilful assistance of his private Secretary, Mrs. Barnes, and her husband, and that of Mr. Wakeford, the Superintendent of the Staff Room. He also wishes to express his keen appreciation of the unfailing courtesy and cordial co-operation of the Financial Secretary, Colonel Vincent R. Wright, D.S.O.

Mr. Garrison has given a very large number of lectures and addresses during the year, and it is particularly pleasing to him to have been able to earn for the funds of the Federation, according to the Balance Sheet, over £315.

J. Knowles, President.

ISRAEL'S SCRIPTURE AND PRAYER UNION.

The last number enrolled before closing the list for 1927 was 3,385, since which there has been an enrolment of 255 members.

We thank God for His evidence of the growing spirit of Prayer in our midst, and long to see the day when all Israel will be on their knees in repentance and gratitude for all God's love to them as a nation.

"Pray for the Peace of Jerusalem, they shall prosper that love thee."

This increase of membership has made it possible for us to give £10 for the circulation of B.-I. literature; £6 6s. 11d. of this to the Covenant Publishing Co., and £3 3s. 1d. to a local Branch for the same object.

L. G. A. Roberts, Hon. Sec.

The paper issued by "Britons Back to the Bible," issued by the Fellowship of Evangelical Churchmen, I signed, affixing:

"I am a British-Israelite, because I have never left the Bible, but believe it says what it means, and that God has not changed His purposes. Since then the English-speaking race has all the promises of God to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; therefore we must be Israel."

REPORT OF WORK BY THE COMMISSIONERS.

The year 1927 has been one of strenuous work and progress, for which we thank God. The calls on our Commissioners have been greater than ever before, and they have, in fact, been unable to cope with the demand. The attendances at the meetings, generally speaking, have considerably increased, and a number of new Branches have been formed; and although the opposition has sometimes been keen, the enthusiasm of the members and the interest of the public have grown appreciably.

There are many places throughout the Kingdom ready to be organised, and where Branches should be formed; but the lack of sufficient Commissioners and Lecturers has made it impossible to do all that should be done, though the existing staff have worked hard and accomplished much.

The Branches have loyally stood by Headquarters, and their officers and committees are deserving of great credit for the way in which they have laboured and organised their districts and arranged for and advertised their meetings; and their good work has been much appreciated by the Commissioners.

The attitude of the newspapers has, during the year, undergone a considerable change, which is one of the most remarkable evidences of the growing public interest in our Message. Formerly we were, with few exceptions, ignored; whereas now, there is exhibited a manifest desire on the part of the local Press in many places to report our meetings, and reporters are frequently in attendance and good reports inserted.

During the year a scheme was set on foot with a view to enlisting the support of the Branches towards a Commissioners' Fund, so that each Area might, as far as possible, be self-supporting, thereby relieving the Headquarters' funds and making it possible to appoint additional Commissioners and Lecturers. Conferences of representatives of the Branches in the respective Areas were held, and the scheme, which includes collections by means of Pyramid money boxes, put before them. The reception given to this scheme has been very gratifying, and important results are anticipated.

John Leech, Commissioner-General.

ANNUAL REPORT OF NO. 1 AREA FOR 1927.

The year 1927 has been one of remarkable progress. Everywhere I find unusual interest in our Truth, and in all the towns and large villages of my Area there are demands for lectures—many more than I am able to supply.

The year commenced with regular meetings in the following seventeen centres:—Clapham, Croydon, Dover, Folkestone, Gosport, Hastings, Herne Bay, Herne Hill, Hindhead, Horsham, Kingston, Portsmouth, Putney, Richmond, Rye, Southampton and Worthing.

During the year new Causes have been established in the following twelve centres:—Bexhill, Blackheath, Brighton, Canterbury, Dorking, Farnham, Fittleworth, Gravesend, Haywards Heath, Salisbury, Sydenham and Tunbridge Wells.

Arrangements have been made to open regular meetings at the following seven centres:—Bognor, Chatham, Chichester, Eastbourne, Guildford, Hayling Island and Sutton.

In addition to the work done in the Area, I have visited Dublin, Belfast, South Devon, Sheffield, Isle of Wight, Bingley, and various North London Branches.

A week's Summer School was arranged and successfully carried through with the kind assistance of Mr. H. D. Houghton at Glastonbury during Whit-week.

Special meetings were held in many London centres during September last.

I have given over 250 public lectures during the year.

A system of Pyramid Collecting Boxes to build a new Commissioners' Fund has been established, and over 250 boxes have been placed in my Area, in addition to boxes issued from Headquarters to London members and adherents.

I am greatly cheered by the hearty response I everywhere meet with, and find wonderful indications of a still more striking advance in the immediate future.

I beg to thank the Executive and officers for all the kindness and support I have received during the year, and beg to remain,

John J. Morey,
Commissioner Area No. 1
(South London and Southern Counties).

NORTH LONDON COMMISSIONER'S REPORT.

The first year of my Commissionership of the North London Area has been one of well-sustained effort consequent upon the loyal co-operation of our members. The Area includes the whole of London north of the Thames, together with the counties of Bucks, Oxford, Bedford and Herts. We have in the Area twelve Branches, and others are in course of formation. Two new Branches have been formed at Hounslow and Islington, while two others are in course of formation at Palmer's Green and Leytonstone. The Ealing Branch is opening up new ground at Hanwell. Cricklewood also is ripe for the formation of a Branch which will be undertaken early in the New Year. We have visited all our Branches at regular intervals during the year, giving occasional assistance to other Areas. During the year we have visited Darlington and district, the West Riding of Yorkshire, Hastings and the south, Exeter and the south-west, and South Wales. We organised and carried through a successful Bible Convention at Llandrindod Wells, Wales, last August. We have just returned from a most successful tour of the South Wales Area. 140 names and addresses of persons interested in our Truth were given in from South Pembrokeshire, and a similar number from the Rhymney district. Wales is ripe for the reception of our great Truth. With regard to our own Area it is cause for devout thankfulness to Almighty God that in every direction steady advance has been made. We might in this connection mention especially Stratford and Southend-on-Sea, where large audiences greet our lecturers on their arrival. The London campaign undertaken during the month of September in preparation for the Congress in October was fruitful of good throughout the entire Area. We have delivered during the year 200 lectures and sermons, reaching as far as Durham in the north, Hastings in the south, Exeter in the south-west, and Pembroke Dock in the west.

(Rev.) Joseph Gay.

MIDLANDS AREA, 1927.

The principal feature of the Commissioner's work in the Midlands Area during the year just ended has been that of strengthening and consolidating the Branches. He has visited them all in turn, many of them frequently, and is happy to report that they are all healthily active. It has also been a pleasure to him to assist Branches as required in several other Areas; and altogether he has given some 160 lectures in 33 towns during the year, besides many addresses and other official duties of scores of other meetings. He has also himself personally conducted seven missions in the Area, which have yielded excellent results; and, in addition, has found opportunities to preach the Kingdom Message in a number of Anglican churches. The climax of the year's work in Birmingham was reached at the magnificent meeting in the great Town Hall on November 28th, addressed by the Rev. Pascoe Goard and Mr. Garrison, and followed by several days of meetings the same week. Such new Branches as have been formed in the Area are due to the enterprise and courage of the Commissioner, who in every case has made himself responsible for the heavy expenditure involved. But obviously this has its limits, and the organisation of the Movement in the Midlands, on its financial side, has to be faced. In this connection some success has attended the recent endeavour to raise a central Midlands Area Fund, whereby it is hoped to make it financially possible to considerably extend the work in towns and districts where as yet no British-Israel work has been attempted. The response from Birmingham has been excellent, and the newly included Branch at Cheltenham is also preparing to do its part. It is earnestly hoped that every Midland Branch will join in this very necessary effort to find the means to systematically mission the whole Area during the New Year.

(Rev.) T. H. Whitehouse, Commissioner.

NORTH-EASTERN AREA.

I began work as an Hon. Commissioner in April, 1927, and from that time to the present I have been able to give 61 lectures, several of which have been delivered in Church of England parishes under the chairmanship of the Vicar. I have met with considerable success in this way, finding many Vicars quite willing to allow me to address their Bible Classses. It is also interesting to note another experience in this connection, for I find that the men are so "caught" by our Message that they are willing to stay on long past the prescribed time for closing the Class.

Work has been opened up in the following new centres: Newcastle, Middlesbrough, Bridlington, Sunderland, Stockton, West Hartlepool, Ilkley, Huddersfield and Harrogate; and it is hoped to get new Branches definitely going in all these centres.

I would like to put on record the great sense of indebtedness that I owe to Mr. J. A. Stell of Newcastle, Mr. J. Tench of Darlington, and to Mr. W. Whitton of Sheffield, who have paved the way for me in many places and made progress so much more easy.

Outside my Area I have lectured in Dublin, Hastings, Stockport, Morecambe and Llandrindod Wells.

So many are the opportunities that I could, I am sure, occupy my whole time in the work.

I would, therefore, conclude my report by an appeal for whole-hearted support of the Federation, so that those in authority may feel justified in increasing the number of paid Commissioners.

I would, I think, be willing to give up my present ministry and work my whole time for the Cause, and not, as at present, a limited part time.

(Rev.) Guy F. Waddington.

NORTH-WESTERN AREA.

During the past year Mr. S. E. Steele has visited all Branches, with one exception, in his Area. Some once, some twice, and one five times. He has, in addition, attended Headquarters on four occasions, attended one drawing-room meeting, and lectured at seven churches in Liverpool. A general increase of interest is manifested, in some instances amounting to keenness. Mr. Steele has also lectured outside his Area at Nottingham, Birmingham, Walsall, Stoke-on-Trent, and Leamington Spa. One new Branch has been formed at Blackpool. Many large towns, centres of industry in Lancashire, notably Bolton, Rochdale and Chester, have requested visits of speakers with the object of forming Branches, but lack of funds compels postponement. A large amount of Mr. Steele's time is occupied in distribution of literature, the sale of which shows an appreciable increase. Over £100 has been received from Northern Branches during the year.

By A. R. H.

The following testimony of a world traveller makes interesting reading when studied in the light of the fact that Ephraim and Manasseh are represented to-day, respectively, in Great Britain and the United States of America. Thus the traveller writes :—"At the close of a leisurely journey round the world that has taken me into most of the countries of Asia and of Europe, I realise that the three outstanding impressions made by my wanderings are :—

"(1) British control of nearly every strategic point[1] in world commerce or world trade, except in the New World ;

"(2) The increasing prevalence of American culture in all lands ;

"(3) The dominance of the English language to-day and, apparently in the future.

"If one takes ship at Yokohama or Kobe for London, the first port touched is Shanghai, a conglomeration of all nationalities, but a city in which British influence is unmistakably paramount.

"The next port is the city of Victoria on the island of Hong Kong, a British Crown Colony. Only the American ships then go to the American port of Manila, and only French vessels to the French port of Saigon. All other liners for Europe sail from the British Crown Colony of Hong Kong, to the British Crown Colony of Singapore, and then to the British Crown Colony of Ceylon with its lovely port at Colombo.

"The next stop is made at Aden, a bit of British soil at the entrance to the Red Sea, which is politically a part of the Bombay residency. All boats must pause for at least a few minutes at the entrance to the British-controlled Suez Canal and again as they leave it at Port Said to enter the Mediterranean.

"Some then touch at Alexandria, and a British army still remains in Egypt, while others call at the British island of Malta. Marseilles,[2] a French port, comes next, but British Gibraltar follows that, and then on through the Atlantic Ocean and up the Thames to London itself.

"It would be impossible to make this journey without gaining a new, deeper and broader conception of the British Empire, and without respecting the energy and ability of the people of

off the coast of Europe who have builded up this world dominion.

"Some individuals might find themselves greatly irritated as a consequence, but it is more probable that they would find their unjustified grudge melting away and giving place to genuine admiration and respect for the British People.

"For one who is in the least observant sees a great deal more than the red spots on the map as he makes his trip. Wherever there is British rule he sees good roads, good streets and good traffic observance ; he sees sanitary conditions which are frequently in striking and most pleasing contrast to the conditions near at hand, but just beyond the zone of British law ; he sees people working but working happily, able to retain the fruits of their labour and to enjoy them in peace ; he sees a colonial government that is strict in its insistence on

but that takes into consideration the rights and the peculiar susceptibilities of the peoples whom it governs ; he sees, in a word, conditions established and maintained by the British that are conditions under which he himself would desire to live and do business.

"Great Britain as a civilising, an educational, a sanitary power, as a force for justice and fair play, as a factor in the progress of the world is immeasurable.

"The boast that the sun never sets on the Union Jack may annoy some persons. I cannot but believe that such annoyance springs from ignorance. British government either at home or in the colonies is far from perfect, but it is so very much superior to dozens of other types of government that are displayed before the voyager around the world that he is compelled to remove his hat in respect to it.

"He reaches the conclusion that what Great Britain has given to the natives of India, of China, of the Malay States, is very much what the United States would have striven to give them if this country had been placed in a similar position, and he is prone to be proud of the kinship of the British and American peoples, to be thankful that basically they are rather than to let little surface differences loom as the most important factor in determining his attitude toward Great Britain.

One and the Same,

"If he be thoughtful, he realises that the United States is not placed in the same position, and then there dawns on him a conception of the place that the British Empire occupies in the world.

"English and Scotch energy and ambition refused to be bound and stifled by the handicaps nature placed upon them in the British Isles.[5] They sought a broader, more fertile field, and the field they chose was that of

The Whole World.[6]

"The United States would not be what it is to-day had it not been for this quality in the British People. The United States is a part, not of the British Empire, but of that broader, non-political empire, the Empire of the Anglo-Saxon."[7]

Finally the writer concludes:—"Slowly the world traveller reaches the realisation that British policy, both foreign and domestic, is dictated from a world standpoint.

"The United States occasionally refers to its 'splendid isolation,' although that isolation is rapidly becoming a myth, but the British Empire cannot possibly withdraw into its shell and say in substance: 'You leave me alone and I shall return the compliment.' It has no shell into which it might withdraw."

Having thus enjoyed a look at Britain through the eyes of an American, let us now look at Britain through the eyes of an Englishman. We have seen the two great branches of the Israel Peoples—Ephraim and Manasseh[8]—held up in mutual contrast. Let us now look at Britain in contrast to the other nations. Thus the Earl of Birkenhead:—"There has been among the people of this country an innate conservatism—to use the word of course in a non-political sense—a conservatism, a cautiousness and a prudence which have separated us very strikingly from the Latin races.

"We have always been a people very slow to reach a conclusion, very difficult to move to great anger, very difficult to draw into a great quarrel. But when after long and deep meditation we have determined that the security of this country was threatened we have not hesitated to act.

"It has happened to us recurrently about eight times in our history since the Norman conquest; and whenever we have become convinced at one of these periods that forces have arisen ultimately likely to be destructive to us as a nation this country has never hesitated. It never hesitated in the days of Philip of Spain, nor of Louis XIV, nor of Napoleon, nor of the Kaiser.

"We are told that we are living in days in which new and formidable menaces are emerging. It is perfectly true that we are the only country in the history of the world that has ever dared to confront the changes and the development of democracy with not fortified, as is that of the United States of America, by any constitutional safeguards.

"But I confess I am wholly unalarmed even by these modern changes, I do not believe that the

alters very suddenly, though it may, over a long period of time, rot and decay. Certainly the moment has not come for us to admit that we are in that condition, when we have just defeated—making ourselves the chief contribution to that defeat—the greatest military combination which has ever menaced the security and even threatened the very existence of this Empire.

"On the contrary, just as throughout the ages, notwithstanding our instinct that we are a pacific people with a great dislike and even loathing for war, we have known how to protect ourselves when, in spite of every effort, we have been driven to the arbitrament of the sword, so I am certain, that if menaces from within our own body were to become really seriously subversive to that order which Englishmen of all peoples in the world most value, then again it would be proved that the resources of the English People were still in existence, that their common sense was still available to solve those problems and, in the last resort, that the majority would not hesitate to impose their will by whatever means might be shown to be necessary upon what will always, after all, remain a small minority.

"This people, which has projected over every continent in the world from these tiny islands a teeming and dominant population, maintains at the present moment its position throughout the whole world in undiminished prestige and glory."

As final contribution to this picture of modern Ephraim-Israel in her relations to Manasseh-Israel and the Gentile Nations of Continental Europe, we submit the following extract from Mr. Baldwin's speech of welcome to the American Legionaries, on the occasion of their recent visit to this country. "You who fought know what the devastation was. You have some idea of the problems, moral and material, which the statesmen of the Old World have had to deal with. You will not be impatient with us. Many people I know are. It is said that we are still of

A Militarist Mind.

That, of course, is nonsense.

"But remember this—and it is so difficult in the New World to realise it—that in Europe, we have bound round our necks hereditary problems which have faced the peoples of Europe since the boundaries of the Roman Empire burst, and that all your people, from whatever part of Europe they came, by the mere fact of setting foot in the New World, shook off those problems and the responsibilities attaching to those problems as Christian in the 'Pilgrim's Progress' shook off his burden.

"Rejoice indeed, that this is your good fortune, but think twice before you blame those who stayed behind in the countries from which your ancestors came and who are still grappling with the problems from which they fled.

"We are doing our best, and we shall continue to do our best, and we are making progress. Be temperate in your judgments and let us always think, on either side of the Atlantic—as men who were once brothers in arms—the best of each other."

We have a truly wonderful picture here. Britain, Mother of the peoples who have laid the foundations of a progressive Christian civilisation in the New World, and Burden-bearer—

Only the American ships then go to the American port of Manila, and only French vessels to the French port of Saigon. All other liners for Europe sail from the British Crown Colony of Hong Kong, to the British Crown Colony of Singapore, and then to the British Crown Colony of Ceylon with its lovely port at Colombo.

"The next stop is made at Aden, a bit of British soil at the entrance to the Red Sea, which is politically a part of the Bombay residency. All boats must pause for at least a few minutes at the entrance to the British-controlled Suez Canal and again as they leave it at Port Said to enter the Mediterranean.

"Some then touch at Alexandria, and a British army still remains in Egypt, while others call at the British island of Malta. Marseilles,[2] a French port, comes next, but British Gibraltar follows that, and then on through the Atlantic Ocean and up the Thames to London itself.

"It would be impossible to make this journey without gaining a new, deeper and broader conception of the British Empire, and without respecting the energy and ability of the people of

off the coast of Europe who have builded up this world dominion.

"Some individuals might find themselves greatly irritated as a consequence, but it is more probable that they would find their unjustified grudge melting away and giving place to genuine admiration and respect for the British People.

"For one who is in the least observant sees a great deal more than the red spots on the map as he makes his trip. Wherever there is British rule he sees good roads, good streets and good traffic observance ; he sees sanitary conditions which are frequently in striking and most pleasing contrast to the conditions near at hand, but just beyond the zone of British law ; he sees people working but working happily, able to retain the fruits of their labour and to enjoy them in peace ; he sees a colonial government that is strict in its insistence on

but that takes into consideration the rights and the peculiar susceptibilities of the peoples whom it governs ; he sees, in a word, conditions established and maintained by the British that are conditions under which he himself would desire to live and do business.

"Great Britain as a civilising, an educational, a sanitary power, as a force for justice and fair play, as a factor in the progress of the world is immeasurable.

"The boast that the sun never sets on the Union Jack may annoy some persons. I cannot but believe that such annoyance springs from ignorance. British government either at home or in the colonies is far from perfect, but it is so very much superior to dozens of other types of government that are displayed before the voyager around the world that he is compelled to remove his hat in respect to it.

"He reaches the conclusion that what Great Britain has given to the natives of India, of China, of the Malay States, is very much what the United States would have striven to give them if this country had been placed in a similar position, and he is prone to be proud of the kinship of the British and American peoples, to be thankful that basically they are rather than to let little surface differences loom as the most important factor in determining his attitude toward Great Britain.

One and the Same,

"If he be thoughtful, he realises that the United States is not placed in the same position, and then there dawns on him a conception of the place that the British Empire occupies in the world.

"English and Scotch energy and ambition refused to be bound and stifled by the handicaps nature placed upon them in the British Isles.[5] They sought a broader, more fertile field, and the field they chose was that of

The Whole World.[6]

"The United States would not be what it is to-day had it not been for this quality in the British People. The United States is a part, not of the British Empire, but of that broader, non-political empire, the Empire of the Anglo-Saxon."[7]

Finally the writer concludes :—"Slowly the world traveller reaches the realisation that British policy, both foreign and domestic, is dictated from a world standpoint.

"The United States occasionally refers to its 'splendid isolation,' although that isolation is rapidly becoming a myth, but the British Empire cannot possibly withdraw into its shell and say in substance : 'You leave me alone and I shall return the compliment.' It has no shell into which it might withdraw."

Having thus enjoyed a look at Britain through the eyes of an American, let us now look at Britain through the eyes of an Englishman. We have seen the two great branches of the Israel Peoples—Ephraim and Manasseh[8]—held up in mutual contrast. Let us now look at Britain in contrast to the other nations. Thus the Earl of Birkenhead :—"There has been among the people of this country an innate conservatism—to use the word of course in a non-political sense—a conservatism, a cautiousness and a prudence which have separated us very strikingly from the Latin races.

"We have always been a people very slow to reach a conclusion, very difficult to move to great anger, very difficult to draw into a great quarrel. But when after long and deep meditation we have determined that the security of this country was threatened we have not hesitated to act.

"It has happened to us recurrently about eight times in our history since the Norman conquest ; and whenever we have become convinced at one of these periods that forces have arisen ultimately likely to be destructive to us as a nation this country has never hesitated. It never hesitated in the days of Philip of Spain, nor of Louis XIV, nor of Napoleon, nor of the Kaiser.

"We are told that we are living in days in which new and formidable menaces are emerging. It is perfectly true that we are the only country in the history of the world that has ever dared to confront the changes and the development of democracy with not fortified, as is that of the United States of America, by any constitutional safeguards.

"But I confess I am wholly unalarmed even by these modern changes, I do not believe that the alters very suddenly, though it may, over a long period of time, rot and decay. Certainly the moment has not come for us to admit that we are in that condition, when we have just defeated—making ourselves the chief contribution to that defeat—the greatest military combination which has ever menaced the security and even threatened the very existence of this Empire.

"On the contrary, just as throughout the ages, notwithstanding our instinct that we are a pacific people with a great dislike and even loathing for war, we have known how to protect ourselves when, in spite of every effort, we have been driven to the arbitrament of the sword, so I am certain, that if menaces from within our own body were to become really seriously subversive to that order which Englishmen of all peoples in the world most value, then again it would be proved that the resources of the English People were still in existence, that their common sense was still available to solve those problems and, in the last resort, that the majority would not hesitate to impose their will by whatever means might be shown to be necessary upon what will always, after all, remain a small minority.

"This people, which has projected over every continent in the world from these tiny islands a teeming and dominant population, maintains at the present moment its position throughout the whole world in undiminished prestige and glory."

As final contribution to this picture of modern Ephraim-Israel in her relations to Manasseh-Israel and the Gentile Nations of Continental Europe, we submit the following extract from Mr. Baldwin's speech of welcome to the American Legionaries, on the occasion of their recent visit to this country. "You who fought know what the devastation was. You have some idea of the problems, moral and material, which the statesmen of the Old World have had to deal with. You will not be impatient with us. Many people I know are. It is said that we are still of

A Militarist Mind.

That, of course, is nonsense.

"But remember this—and it is so difficult in the New World to realise it—that in Europe, we have bound round our necks hereditary problems which have faced the peoples of Europe since the boundaries of the Roman Empire burst, and that all your people, from whatever part of Europe they came, by the mere fact of setting foot in the New World, shook off those problems and the responsibilities attaching to those problems as Christian in the 'Pilgrim's Progress' shook off his burden.

"Rejoice indeed, that this is your good fortune, but think twice before you blame those who stayed behind in the countries from which your ancestors came and who are still grappling with the problems from which they fled.

"We are doing our best, and we shall continue to do our best, and we are making progress. Be temperate in your judgments and let us always think, on either side of the Atlantic—as men who were once brothers in arms—the best of each other."

We have a truly wonderful picture here. Britain, Mother of the peoples who have laid the foundations of a progressive Christian civilisation in the New World, and Burden-bearer—as successor to the ROMAN EMPIRE, last of the great Babylonian succession of GENTILE WORLD EMPIRES—of the age-long troubles of that part of the world which has now grown old.

With feet firmly planted in the ages of the past, and mind fearlessly reaching forth into the mists of a golden future, BRITH-AIN—LAND of the COVENANT—stands like a rock, unshakable ; an inspiration and tower of strength to the peoples of the world, both old and new.

"BE YE MINDFUL ALWAYS OF HIS COVENANT."—II.

BY JOHN H. TENCH.

ON page 42 the Bishop of Manchester is thus reported : "We have need to ask, what is the purpose of God for us in our generation ? We shall be false to our allegiance to Christ if we do not ask what is God's purpose for the British Empire, and seek to use our influence and our votes to keep it true to that purpose. The Christian citizen is bound to regard the Empire as a trust which we hold not for the gratification of pride, or the accumulation of wealth, but for the benefit of its own people and of the world."

"Every Briton going overseas, from the ambassador to the newest member of a group settlement, will see himself not as a missionary of Empire, but as an instrument God may deign to use for His purpose for the world. Whatever political or industrial problems he may have to solve—the question of extra-territoriality and concessions in China, how to vote on a Colour Bar question, or how to settle an African labourer's wages—the Briton overseas will find a guiding line in the thought of God's purpose alike for his own people and for other races concerned."

Another of the things in The Everlasting Covenant which the seed of Israel should always be mindful of is "In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed."

The blind evidence one may cull from the pages of "The World Call" is truly wonderful. On page 4 it is written : "India, the Crown Colonies and Mandated Territories occupy an area as large as that of the dominions, and contain an immensely larger population. These territories lie almost exclusively in tropical and sub-tropical regions. Here the circumstances and tasks of our own people differ radically from those of the self-governing dominions. They are dwelling under our own flag, but are in constant and close touch with other races. They are almost everywhere a white minority engaged in administration or in business, governing, educating, engineering, mining, trading, planting, working as a rule not with their own hands, but as superintendents of coloured labour. Into these regions they seldom go to settle for life. They may bring their wives ; they may have children ; but their base is usually the homeland to which, if they can, they send their children for education.

"In Asia and Africa, they live amongst multitudes of people whose life standards and moral codes differ fundamentally from their own. With the destinies of these millions their own destinies are inextricably mixed. For the future of these peoples they carry high responsibilities. Their task is not to make new nations of British stock, but to help the peoples of ancient civilisations to remake their own national life, or to guide the undeveloped races to civilisation and effective self-government. They are moulding the destinies of an India educated to demand the full privilege of nationhood, or a Nigeria or Kenya Colony at the time when the African is awakening from the age-long sleep of primitive man."

On page 93 we read : "The position of our people in India, Burma and Ceylon is unique in its nature and importance. Their lot is cast in the land which is by sheer weight of numbers by far the greatest of Britain's responsibilities. They help to guide the destinies of one-sixth of the human race in the only part of our Commonwealth that has a civilisation long anterior to Britain's, in a region where Britain has embarked on the task of preparing 320,000,000 people for self-government. They live in the midst of a people more sensitive to religion, more absorbed in the quest for God, than any other living race. India has given birth to two of the world's greatest religions—Hinduism and Buddhism—and to-day shelters one quarter of the world's Moslems. Our own people are amongst them at a time when these eagerly religious people are turning their faces towards our Master. In their hundreds of thousands the outcastes are moving into the Church ; while amongst the intelligentsia there is a 'mass movement of the mind,' if not towards the Church, yet towards the following of the Lord Jesus Christ. Man for man, the character of the Christianity of our own people counts to-day in India as nowhere else. For these and many other reasons, in no region are the people of our race confronted with greater problems, opportunities, and responsibilities." On page 107 we read : "Let us call to mind . . . the extraordinary power for or against Christianity amongst non-Christians of the witness of the life led by the average Briton in India. Remembering these things, let us lift up our hearts on their behalf, not forgetting the great traditions they represent—noble achievements in government and administration ; heroic leadership and endurance in time of peril ; the devoted labours of missionaries, of archæologists, of scientific workers ; the struggles with pestilence and famine ; the maintenance of exalted standards of courage, of justice, and of service. It is unthinkable that the inheritors of such things in the past are not destined to do a great work in the coming generations."

The promise included in The Everlasting Covenant that in Abraham's seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed is shown in the work of the great Missionary Societies on pages 36 and 37, where the work of the Church Missionary Society, the Universities Mission to Central Africa, and the Church Missions to Jews is recorded. "Besides societies which send missionaries to our own people overseas there are not a few Auxiliary Societies which in various and indispensable ways facilitate the work of the missionary. Pre-eminent amongst such is the oldest missionary society of the Church, The Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge. Founded in 1698, it early in its history handed over to the S.P.G. its function of sending out ordained men to the colonies, and now confines itself to auxiliary work ; it is an important helper of the Churches overseas, through the supply of literature, endowment of bishoprics, the training of missionaries and doctors, and through grants for Church buildings, schools and hostels."

Digitized by Google

"Of another auxiliary society, which serves all Christian bodies and not the Church of England alone, the Bishop of Salisbury writes: 'Without the British and Foreign Bible Society missionary work would be almost impossible.' Out of its total issue of 1,744,000 English and Welsh Scriptures in the year 1925-6 a large proportion went either to the dominions, to India, or to other countries overseas where English-speaking people are to be found."

In the British and Foreign Bible Society's Report for 1927 we read: "For the first time in the Society's history we are able to announce that in the space of twelve months fourteen new versions of Scripture have been added through our agency to the world's sacred literature, and the versions published or circulated by our Society now number 593. The list includes the entire Bible in 144 forms of speech, the New Testament in 138 more, and at least one complete book of Scripture in 311 others. During the past year the issues now to be reported being 1,136,123 Bibles, 1,219,997 New Testaments and 7,771,967 Portions—a total of 10,128,087. The following figures are significant, showing how this Society is blessing all the nations upon earth: over 1,500,000 volumes of Scripture were circulated in continental Europe; 438,000 in Africa; 412,000 in Canada; 159,703 in Australia; 25,762 in New Zealand; 436,000 in South America and the West Indies; 869,000 in India; 194,000 in Malaya; 236,000 in Japan; 640,000 in Korea; and 4,142,000 in China."

I give one more quotation from "The World Call" which shows that the British nation, the Covenant Race, is a powerful factor in blessing all the nations of the earth and so fulfilling The Everlasting Covenant—"'In Iraq,' to quote Mr. Amery at the Imperial Conference, 'we are building up a new element in Imperial relations; a country self-governing on its own lines, but being assisted in finding its feet by the co-operation of a band of enthusiastic British officials who . . . have brought about peace and order and contentment in a country which was in a state of permanent disorder before the War; are bringing into that country the beginnings of an educational, sanitary, and health system never known before, and helping these people, once a great people, to renew their old civilisation and to bring themselves on to a level with that Western civilisation behind which they have fallen.' In Persia our political agents find themselves in a Mohammedan land seeking to turn in a decade from absolute monarchy to modern democracy."

The concluding chapter of "The World Call" is written by the Bishop of St. Albans and these are some of the things he says: "The white man and the white woman living overseas are the real missionaries of Christianity to the peoples among whom they live and work. They outnumber, and always will outnumber, the regular missionaries—priests, teachers, evangelists, doctors and nurses. They represent to the native of India, Africa, the Far East, the Moslem World, as to the islander of the South Seas or the Atlantic, the Indian of Canada, or the aboriginal of Australia, what the peoples of these countries have come to recognise as the white man's religion—Christianity. In social life, in commerce, in industry, in government, these folk are in everyday life the living exponents of the social, commercial, industrial, and political implications of the Gospel of Christ.

"And Christianity is not merely a moral code or a philosophy, but a life; it is, we believe, the way of living all life. It began in a Life lived; it has been passed on from generation to generation in Christian countries by other lives lived; only so can it be passed on now to non-Christian peoples overseas—by lives lived in Christ's way.

"From a missionary point of view, therefore, the significance of the white man and white woman overseas cannot be exaggerated. They are for good or ill the missionaries of Christianity. The majority of these folk are of British extraction.

"We need to teach to all, and especially to the rising generation, a new and a more Christian idea of patriotism, not in terms of acquisitiveness or mere rule and dominance, but in terms of service: the making the best of your country and people in order to make the best and greatest contribution by the way of service to the whole family of nations."

Surely after reading the blind evidence given by the writers in "The World Call" we all must perceive that the blindness in part which is happened to Israel—the British race,—will soon be removed because "the fulness of the Gentiles is come in," which is the promise given to Ephraim by Jacob when dying: "He shall become a fulness of nations," which is a portion of The Everlasting Covenant of which the Scriptures tell us to be mindful always.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

DEAR SIR,—

JACOB'S TROUBLE.

If, as Mr. Howard Rand asserts, and apparently correctly asserts, we are now experiencing "Jacob's trouble" on a national scale, it is high time for us to take the course which Jacob took, under Divine guidance, to obviate the economic consequences of that trouble. We must individually become tithe-payers as Jacob did. (Genesis xxviii, 22.) The consequences of tithe-paying are manifold, but one result is that "all nations shall call you happy, for ye shall be a delightsome land, saith the Lord of Hosts." (Malachi iii, 12.)

When writing Israel in Prophecy and History I felt the necessity of stressing this point, but I beg for the opportunity of once again emphasising it in our weekly MESSAGE. I want every single British-Israelite to be a missioner of this good news of God's desire to bless us and preserve us individually, and, if the nation would only have it, nationally also, in these times of stress. "Blessed is he that considereth the poor. The Lord will deliver him in the day of evil." Out of our tithe we can—(1) Keep our Foreign Missionary work going; (2) Assist the hospitals and orphanages and the Poor Fund of the B.-I.-W.F.; (3) Support our Church at home; (4) STRENGTHEN THE HANDS OF THOSE WHO ARE SPREADING OUR PARTICULAR "NATIONAL MESSAGE"—the necessity of that special repentance before God and of a special trust in God which appertains to Israel.

Yours, etc.,

P. W. THOMPSON.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

WEEKLY meetings will be held as usual at Headquarters on Wednesday afternoons at 3 and Thursday evenings at 7.30.

Next week's issue of this journal will contain another article on the Great Pyramid by Mr. D. Davidson, and one by the Rev. Dr. Lincoln McConnell, of U.S.A., on Armageddon. There has been a great demand on last week's issue, which contained a very fine photograph of the Queen's Hall meeting, also a large diagram of the Antechamber, illustrating Mr. Davidson's Pyramid article.

A successful series of eight public meetings in the Kensington Town Hall last week attracted a large number of the general public as well as our members and supporters. The President of the B.-I.-W.F., Major Knowles, presided at the opening meeting. Other chairmen and speakers were the Rev. Dr. Mountain, the Rev. Commander Roberts, the Rev. Pascoe Goard, the Rev. G. H. Lancaster, M.A., the Rev. H. A. James, M.A., the Rev. Arthur Pritchard, M.A., the Rev. W. H. Stuart-Fox, M.A., the Rev. T. H. Whitehouse, Rev. Joseph Gay, Rev. Kenneth Dodds, Mr. John Leech, K.C., Major Richard Rigg, O.B.E., J.P., Dr. W. Gornold, Mr. Howard Rand, LL.B., Mr. J. J. Morey, Colonel Brazier-Creagh, Dr. Horace Sworder, and Mr. Herbert Garrison. Mr. Goard gave seven addresses. The closing meeting on Thursday evening proved the largest of the series. It partly took the form of a "send off" to Mr. and Mrs. Goard, who go for a while to Canada, where Mr. Goard is to address a number of meetings in the chief centres. He returns (D.V.) in September, well in advance of the next Congress, which is timed to open on October 1st. Reports of the addresses last week will duly appear in this journal.

A meeting of the General Council took place on April 16th, and the Annual Meeting of the Members of the Federation was held on April 17th, at both of which the Annual Report and Financial Statement for 1927 were considered and adopted, being regarded as very satisfactory and encouraging.

A meeting of the Clerical and Ministerial Association of the Federation was held on April 18th, under the chairmanship of the Rev. Pascoe Goard, when a good amount of business was got through and plans were made for future activities.

* * *

At the opening meeting of the week's series it was agreed, on the suggestion of the President, to send a cablegram of sympathy and condolence to H.R.H. Princess Alice, Countess of Athlone, on the sad bereavement she has sustained by the death of her son, Lord Trematon.

* * *

As we go to press we have a visit from an outstanding American preacher—the Rev. G. Arnold Hodgson, M.A., of California. He is on a world tour, and he has consented to give an address at Headquarters on Thursday evening next, at 7.30, we are glad to say. He is a friend of Bishop J. H. Allen, who was with us at our first Congress in 1920. We feel sure our readers will welcome the opportunity of hearing Mr. Hodgson. We are pleased also to announce that Miss Beck will speak at Headquarters on Wednesday afternoon next. Those who heard Miss Beck's address recently will be glad to hear her again.

A Canadian B.-I. Confederation has been formed at Toronto to operate within the British-Israel-World Federation. The Confederation has been incorporated by the Dominion Government. Mr. W. N. Blackaller, of Victoria, B.C., has been elected President. Major Knowles, O.B.E., the Rev. Pascoe Goard, and Mr. Herbert Garrison have been elected Honorary Presidents. Mr. S. J. Frame, of Toronto, has been elected Vice-President. Mr. A. A. Robeson, of Toronto, has been appointed Secretary, Mr. S. J. Crealock, Treasurer, and Mr. Thomas Ransom, Organising Secretary. Mr. S. L. Corbell is Chaplain. The Rev. George Speedie is Commissioner for Ontario. A long cablegram from the Confederation was read at one of our Kensington meetings last week. It was received with acclamation. We trust the new organisation will have the Divine blessing; we shall be glad to hear of its work and progress from time to time. A Convention is to be held in Toronto in the first week in May, when the Rev. Pascoe Goard is to be one of the principal speakers.

Miss Hamilton Hunter lectured to a highly appreciative audience at Walsall on the 17th, on "The Coronation Stone—Was it Jacob's Pillow?" She has also spoken at other Midland centres.

A special meeting of business men by invitation was held on March 19th, in the Waltham Street Wesleyan Church Vestry. Rev. G. F. Waddington, M.A., gave a splendid address, introducing British-Israel Truth, and Col. R. Hall, J.P., the new President of the Branch, occupied the chair. Three good meetings were held by this Branch during March.

KELCEDA WORKS——————LONDON, N.7

"Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap!"

IN NO DEPARTMENT of this deeply responsible mortal life does this Divine Law more surely operate than in the fatal System of Medicine that is founded upon the ungodly, unscientific and illogical basis of EXPERIMENTS ON ANIMALS.

One great outcome of the Vivisectionists' "healing art" is the invention of Serums (which, incidentally, bring large fortunes to enterprising manufacturers).

FOR INSTANCE: Although it is well known that Typhus is a "filth disease" which improved sanitation has long banished from this country, still it is interesting to note that the search for a Serum against the disease still continues.

THE BRITISH MEDICAL JOURNAL (June 11th, 1927) describes two methods of treatment:

The first consists of the inoculation of the blood serum of convalescent patients, or of "donkeys that have recovered from typhus fever." In the second, the inoculating material is graduated doses of "an emulsion of infected guinea-pigs' brains."

Fitting retribution, indeed, for those who would purchase cures at the price of cruelty!

WHAT SHALL ISRAEL'S PART BE IN THE LAST GREAT STRUGGLE?—II.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

We have seen what Isaiah has to say regarding the matter of the last great struggle. We have seen that Israel, "my people," are to enter into their chambers, and shut their doors about them during the indignation, when the Lord comes out of His place to punish the nations of the earth for their iniquity. We have seen that Israel is preserved "in this mountain," which is doubtless "the mountain of the height of Israel," as Ezekiel tells of it, to which the "tender one" of David's line was taken, and there planted (Ezekiel xvii).

We have seen Israel in that day as "A vineyard of red wine"—kept by the Lord night and day, "lest anyone should hurt it." We have seen that upon the nations of the Babylon succession is come the inevitable confusion which must arise by putting away the last vestiges of the power of the Babylon nations.

Let us now turn to those great chapters in which Ezekiel, after dealing with the successive experiences through which Israel shall be led, tells of the gathering of the nations against Israel under the leadership of Gog, the Chief Prince of Meshech and Tubal, or Russia.

The outstanding fact which starts the Russian combination is the defenceless, unarmed condition of Israel. "When my people Israel dwelleth safely shalt thou not know it? And thou shalt come." Israel is as a defenceless flock of sheep, which constitutes an irresistible attraction to the Russian Bear. This is the direct result, foretold ages ago, of the disarmament of Israel-Britain.

The opposing forces apparent to the world are set forth in this chapter. They are as follows:—

The Russian organisation versus the Merchants of Tarshish, and all the young lions thereof.

That which does not appear to the world, nor as yet to Israel, is, that there is a third party to the struggle, namely: JEHOVAH, the God of Israel. Now for a moment we shall analyse the parts assigned to each of these.

The parties are arranged under the following pronouns: I WILL—THOU SHALT—MY PEOPLE ISRAEL SHALL.

I Will.

"Behold, I am against thee, O Gog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal: and I will turn thee back and put hooks into thy jaws, and I will bring thee forth, and all thine army, horses and horsemen, all of them clothed with all sorts of armour, even a great company with bucklers and shields, all of them handling swords: Persia, Ethiopia, and Libya with them; all of them with shield and helmet:

Thou Shalt.

"After many days thou shalt be visited: IN THE LATTER YEARS thou shalt come into the land that is brought back from the sword, and is gathered out of many people, against the mountains of Israel, which have been always waste: but it is brought forth out of the nations, and they shall dwell safely all of them.

Thou shalt ascend and come like a storm, thou shalt be like a cloud to My People Israel Shall.

"Sheba, and Dedan, and the merchants of Tarshish, with all the young lions thereof, shall say unto thee, Art thou come to take a spoil? Hast thou gathered thy company to take a prey? To carry away silver and gold, to take away cattle and goods, to take a great spoil?" (Ezekiel xxxviii, 13.)

WHAT SHALL ISRAEL'S PART BE IN THE LAST GREAT STRUGGLE?—II.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

We have seen what Isaiah has to say regarding the matter of the last great struggle. We have seen that Israel, "my people," are to enter into their chambers, and shut their doors about them during the indignation, when the Lord comes out of His place to punish the nations of the earth for their iniquity. We have seen that Israel is preserved "in this mountain," which is doubtless "the mountain of the height of Israel," as Ezekiel tells of it, to which the "tender one" of David's line was taken, and there planted (Ezekiel xvii).

We have seen Israel in that day as "A vineyard of red wine"—kept by the Lord night and day, "lest anyone should hurt it." We have seen that upon the nations of the Babylon succession is come the inevitable confusion which must arise by putting away the last vestiges of the power of the Babylon nations.

Let us now turn to those great chapters in which Ezekiel, after dealing with the successive experiences through which Israel shall be led, tells of the gathering of the nations against Israel under the leadership of Gog, the Chief Prince of Meshech and Tubal, or Russia.

The outstanding fact which starts the Russian combination is the defenceless, unarmed condition of Israel. "When my people Israel dwelleth safely shalt thou not know it? And thou shalt come." Israel is as a defenceless flock of sheep, which constitutes an irresistible attraction to the Russian Bear. This is the direct result, foretold ages ago, of the disarmament of Israel-Britain.

The opposing forces apparent to the world are set forth in this chapter. They are as follows:—

The Russian organisation versus the Merchants of Tarshish, and all the young lions thereof.

That which does not appear to the world, nor as yet to Israel, is, that there is a third party to the struggle, namely: Jehovah, the God of Israel. Now for a moment we shall analyse the parts assigned to each of these.

The parties are arranged under the following pronouns: I will—Thou shalt—My people Israel shall.

I Will.

"Behold, I am against thee, O Gog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal: and I will turn thee back and put hooks into thy jaws, and I will bring thee forth, and all thine army, horses and horsemen, all of them clothed with all sorts of armour, even a great company with bucklers and shields, all of them handling swords: Persia, Ethiopia, and Libya with them; all of them with shield and helmet:

GOMER, and all his bands: the house of TOGARMAH of the north quarters, and all his bands: and many people with thee.

Be thou prepared, and prepare for thyself, thou, and all thy company that are assembled unto thee, and be thou a guard unto them."

(Ezekiel xxxviii, 3-7.)

"And it shall come to pass at the same time when Gog shall come against the land of Israel, saith the LORD GOD, that my fury shall come up in my face.

For in my jealousy and in the fire of my wrath have I spoken. Surely in that day there shall be a great shaking in the land of Israel;

So that the fishes of the sea, and the fowls of the heaven, and the beasts of the field, and all creeping things that creep upon the earth, and all the men that are upon the face of the earth, shall shake at my presence, and the mountains shall be thrown down, and the steep places shall fall, and every wall shall fall to the ground.

And I will call for a sword against him throughout all my mountains, saith the Lord GOD: every man's sword shall be against his brother.

And I will plead against him with pestilence and with blood; and I will rain upon him, and upon his bands, and upon the many people that are with him, an overflowing rain, and great hailstones, fire, and brimstone.

Thus will I magnify myself, and sanctify myself; and I will be known in the eyes of many nations, and they shall know that I am the LORD."

(Ezekiel xxxviii, 18-23.)

"Therefore, thou son of man, prophesy against Gog, and say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I am against thee, O Gog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal:

And I will turn thee back, and leave but the sixth part of thee, and will cause thee to come up from the north parts, and will bring thee upon the mountains of Israel:

And I will smite thy bow out of thy left hand, and will cause thine arrows to fall out of thy right hand.

Thou shalt fall upon the mountains of Israel, thou, and all thy bands, and the people that is with thee: I will cover the land, thou, and all thy bands, and many people with thee. Thus saith the Lord GOD; It shall also come to pass that shall things come into thy mind, and thou shalt think an evil thought. (Margin: Conceive a mischievous purpose.)

AT THE SAME TIME

And THOU SHALT SAY,

I will go up to the land of unwalled villages;

I will go to them that are at rest, that dwell safely, all of them dwelling without walls, and having neither bars nor gates,

To take a spoil, and to take a prey; to turn thine hand upon the desolate places that are now inhabited, and upon the people that are gathered out of the nations, which have gotten cattle and goods, that dwell in the midst of the land." (Ezekiel xxxviii, 8-12.)

"Therefore, son of man, prophesy and say unto Gog, Thus saith the Lord GOD; In that day when my people of Israel dwelleth safely, shalt thou not know it?

And thou shalt come from thy place out of the north parts, thou, and many people with thee, all of them riding upon horses, a great company, and a might army:

And thou shalt come up against my people of Israel, as a cloud to cover the land; it shall be in the latter days, and I will bring thee against my land, that the heathen may know me, when I shall be sanctified in thee, O Gog, before their eyes.

Thus saith the Lord GOD; Art thou he of whom I have spoken in old time by my servants the prophets of Israel, which prophesied in those days many years that I would bring thee against them?" (Ezekiel xxxviii, 14-17.)

saith the Lord GOD; this is the day whereof I have spoken.

And they that dwell in the cities of Israel shall go forth, and shall set on fire and burn the weapons, both the shields and the bucklers, the bows and the arrows, and the handstaves, and the spears, and they shall burn them with fire seven years:

So that they shall take no wood out of the field, neither cut down any out of the forests; for they shall burn the weapons with fire: and they shall spoil those that spoiled them, and rob those that robbed them, saith the Lord GOD." (Ezekiel xxxix, 8-10.)

"And seven months shall the house of Israel be burying of them, that they may cleanse the land.

Yea, all the people of the land shall bury them; and it shall be to them a renown the day that I shall be glorified, saith the Lord GOD.

And they shall sever out men of continual employment, passing through the land to bury with the passengers those that remain upon the face of the earth, to cleanse it: after the end of seven months shall they search.

And the passengers that pass through the land, when any seeth a man's bone, then shall he set up a sign by it, till the buriers have buried it in the valley of Hamon-gog.

And also the name of the city shall be Hamonah. Thus shall they cleanse the land." (Ezekiel xxxix, 12-16.)

"So the house of Israel shall know that I am the LORD their God from that day and forward."

give thee unto the ravenous birds of every sort, and to the beasts of the field to be devoured.

Thou shalt fall upon the open field: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord GOD.

And I will send a fire on Magog, and among them that dwell carelessly in the isles; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

So will I make my holy name known in the midst of my people Israel; and I will not let them pollute my holy name any more: and the heathen shall know that I am the LORD, the Holy One in Israel." (Ezekiel xxxix, 1-7.)

passengers on the east of the sea: and it shall stop the noses of the passengers: and there shall they bury Gog and all his multitude: and they shall call it The valley of Hamon-gog."

"And, thou son of man, thus saith the Lord GOD; Speak unto every feathered fowl, and to every beast of the field, Assemble yourselves, and come; gather yourselves on every side to my sacrifice that I do sacrifice for you, even a great sacrifice upon the mountains of Israel, that ye may eat flesh and drink blood.

Ye shall eat the flesh of the mighty, and drink the blood of the princes of the earth, of rams, of lambs, and of goats, of bullocks, all of them fatlings of Bashan.

And ye shall eat fat till ye be full, and drink blood till ye be drunken, of my sacrifice which I have sacrificed for you.

Thus ye shall be filled at my table with horses and chariots, with mighty men, and with all men of war, saith the Lord GOD.

And I will set my glory among the heathen, and all the heathen shall see my judgment that I have executed, and my hand that I have laid upon them." (Ezekiel xxxix, 17-21.)

"And the heathen shall know that the house of Israel went into captivity for their iniquity: because they trespassed against me, therefore hid I my face from them, and gave them into the hand of their enemies: so fell they all by the sword.

According to their uncleanness and according to their transgressions have I done unto them, and hid my face from them.

Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; now will I bring again the captivity of Jacob, and have mercy upon the whole house of Israel, and will be jealous for my holy name;

After that they have borne their shame, and all their trespasses whereby they have trespassed against me, when they dwelt safely in their land, and none made them afraid.

When I have brought them again from the people, and gathered them out of their enemies' lands, and am sanctified in them in the sight of many nations;

Then shall they know that I am the LORD their GOD, which caused them to be led into captivity among the heathen: but I have gathered them unto their own land, and have left none of them any more there.

Neither will I hide my face any more from them: for I have poured out my spirit upon the house of Israel, saith the Lord GOD." (Ezekiel xxxix, 23-29.)

As we look over this tremendous chapter we see that while it is true that Sheba, Dedan, the Merchants of Tarshish, and all the young lions thereof take up the challenge of Rosch, of Meshech and Tubal, and all his great combination, and in doing so doubtless feel that now indeed they are to enter upon the greatest conflict of the history of our race; IT IS JEHOVAH WHO TAKES UPON HIMSELF THE CONFLICT.

With a "hook of six teeth," if that is the meaning of the Hebrew phrase, He will strike the bow from the left hand, and the arrows from the right hand of Russia and her allies; and the six teeth seem to be set forth, namely: (1) EARTHQUAKE; (2) their own SWORD: "Every man's sword shall be against his brother"; (3) PESTILENCE; (4) an OVERFLOWING RAIN; (5) great HAILSTONES; (6) FIRE AND BRIMSTONE.

"THUS WILL I MAGNIFY MYSELF . . ."

Look carefully. It does not seem as though Israel would be called upon to fight the forces of Russia at all. Russia's destruction will be from within, and from natural phenomena.

Thus we may look to see Russia and her allies destroy their own military power in the last great conflict.

JOEL.

Let us now turn to the prophet Joel. Chapter i of Joel tells of the overthrow of Israel at the time of the commencement of her punishment.

Like many of the prophets, Joel now overleaps the intervening ages of punishment, i.e., 2,520 years, and goes to the time of the end, "the day of the Lord." We are suddenly introduced to the greater terrors of the final day of struggle. The artillery officer in the field is concerned for two things; and for two points of territory. The first is the spot on which he has planted his artillery, and from which the guns shall be fired: this is an important thing for the artillery commander to attend to. Even more important is the spot to which the shells are directed, and his concern is that they should reach that objective. So the prophet tells first of the time of uttering the prophecy; and then he tells of the time at which the prophecy shall receive fulfilment. No intervening time is allowed to take up the attention of the prophet, even as no intervening spot takes up the attention of the artillery officer. Point of fire, and point of hitting: these are the chief things with the prophet as with the artillery officer.

Now the time of utterance of the prophecy of Joel was about the time of the capture of Israel by Assyria. The time of the end of the prophecy is "the day of the Lord."

So we shall take up the statement of the prophet as to the personalities involved in fulfilment.

(1) The enemy nations. (2) Zion. (3) Jehovah.

The first paragraph deals with the coming of Assyria and Babylon against Israel. There is no sign of FIRE in connection with this campaign. The second paragraph, from verse 14, introduces "the day of the LORD." We are therefore transported from the time of the commencement of the term of Israel's punishment to the end of that term.

The instruction is now given to Israel and Zion to:—

"Sanctify ye a fast,
call a solemn assembly,
gather the elders and all the inhabitants of the land into the house of the LORD your God, and cry unto the LORD."

And thus forward.

Now comes the time of enemy movement against Israel at the time of the end. Chapter ii:—

"Blow ye the trumpet in Zion, and sound an alarm in my holy mountain:
let all the inhabitants of the land tremble:
for the day of the Lord cometh, for it is nigh at hand;

Digitized by Google

A day of darkness and of gloominess,
a day of clouds and of thick darkness,
as the morning spread upon the mountains :
A GREAT PEOPLE AND A STRONG ;
there hath not been ever the like,
neither shall be any more after it,
even to the years of many generations.
A fire devoureth before them ;
and behind them a flame burneth :
the land is as the garden of Eden before them,
and behind them a desolate wilderness ;
yea, and nothing shall escape them."

And so on from verses 4 to 11 :—

" And the LORD shall utter his voice before his army :
for his camp is very great :
for he is strong that executeth his word :
for the day of the LORD is great and very terrible ;
and who can abide it ? "

INSTRUCTION TO ISRAEL UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES.

" Therefore also now, saith the LORD, turn ye even to me with all your heart, and with fasting, and with weeping, and with mourning :

And rend your heart, and not your garments, and turn unto the LORD your God : for he is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and repenteth him of the evil.

Who knoweth if he will return and repent, and leave a blessing behind him ; even a meat offering and a drink offering unto the LORD your God ? "—Joel ii, 12-14.

CALL A SOLEMN ASSEMBLY.

" Blow the trumpet in Zion, sanctify a fast, call a solemn assembly :

Gather the people, sanctify the congregation, assemble the elders, gather the children, and those that suck the breasts : let the bridegroom go forth of his chamber, and the bride out of her closet.

Let the priests, the ministers of the LORD, weep between the porch and the altar, and let them say, Spare thy people, O LORD, and give not thine heritage to reproach, that the heathen should rule over them : wherefore should they say among the people, Where is their God ? "—Joel ii, 15-17.

ANSWER TO PRAYER BRINGS THE DESTRUCTION OF THE FOE.

" Then will the LORD be jealous for his land, and pity his people.

Yea, the LORD will answer and say unto his people, Behold, I will send you corn, and wine, and oil, and ye shall be satisfied therewith : and I will no more make you a reproach among the heathen :

But I will remove far off from you the northern army, and will drive him into a land barren and desolate, with his face toward the east sea, and his hinder part toward the utmost sea, and his stink shall come up, and his ill savour shall come up, because he hath done great things."—Joel ii, 18-20.

REASSURANCE TO ZION.

" Fear not, O land ; be glad and rejoice : for the LORD will do great things.

Be not afraid, ye beasts of the field : for the pastures of the wilderness do spring, for the tree beareth her fruit, the fig tree and the vine do yield their strength.

Be glad then, ye children of Zion, and rejoice in the LORD your God : for he hath given you the former rain moderately, and he will cause to come down for you the rain, the former rain, and the latter rain in the first month.

And the floors shall be full of wheat, and the fats shall overflow with wine and oil.

And I will restore to you the years that the locust hath eaten, the cankerworm, and the caterpiller, and the palmerworm, my great army which I sent among you.

And ye shall eat in plenty, and be satisfied, and praise the name of the LORD your God, that hath dealt wondrously with you ; and my people shall never be ashamed.

And ye shall know that I am in the midst of Israel, and that I am the LORD your God, and none else ; and my people shall never be ashamed.

And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh ; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions :

And also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my spirit.

And I will shew wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke.

The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and the terrible day of the LORD come.

And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the LORD shall be delivered : for in mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the LORD hath said, and in the remnant whom the LORD shall call."—Joel ii, 21-32.

ADDRESS AT KENSINGTON TOWN HALL

BY THE REV. W. H. STUART-FOX, M.A.,

ON WEDNESDAY, APRIL 18TH, 1928. (ANNUAL SPRING MEETINGS.)

FELLOW-CITIZENS of this great city, Abraham looked for a city whose builder and maker is God. I suppose the city is the ultimate goal of the average man. There is a lure about the city which is incontrovertible, and I suppose it is quite natural, because the city is the depository of all the great resources of civilisation ; and there is a hunger in the human heart for the best that life has to give. Hence the exodus from the country; hence the reluctance of the man, whose appetite is pampered by the taste of city life, even though out of work, to face the strenuous self-denying life of an emigrant farmer, great as the need is to-day.

Now, that lure of the city was foreseen by God in His plan and purpose for humanity. It was not only foreseen, but it was provided for by God, and, unfortunately, by the Devil also. The Devil's city very soon appeared on the historical scene, for this is what we are told: "Cain went out from the presence of God, and builded a city," and the foundations of that city were laid in a brother's blood; and that blood smeared the city walls, and all through the ages the great cities of the kingdoms of this world have been built in like manner; and from the foundations and the walls of these cities the blood of slaughtered Abels has cried out to the Lord of Hosts for judgment. So monstrous was the iniquity that emanated from the cities of Cain that the Flood swept them all away. After the Flood the great architect of Evil set his builders upon the plan of a city whose tower should reach unto heaven, but God frustrated his plan. The place was called Babel—confusion—all the works of the Devil end in confusion. Upon this site was built afterwards that great city of Babylon, the home of all those foul idolatries which, through the ages, have obstructed the course of Truth. and hampered the progress of the builders of the city of God.

It is not until you reach the 14th chapter of Genesis that you come across that city so intimately associated with God's purposes in the earth, and you find it in this wise. Abram is returning from conflict with the king of Shinar—later Babylon—and he is met by Melchizedek, king of Salem, priest of the Most High God. There is something extraordinarily suggestive about this meeting of Abram—founder of a great nation destined to be a kingdom of priests unto Jehovah—with its metropolis at Jerusalem—Zion—with Melchizedek, king of Salem, priest of God. There is something which is more than suggestive, there is something sacramentally prophetic about it. "Your father Abram rejoiced to see my day, and he saw it and was glad," said Jesus Christ. What are we to gather from that? Surely that the ultimate prospect in that vision of Abram was the triumph of Jesus Christ, in the seed of Abraham, over the kingdoms of the earth. But, while his eyes were being focussed to that wonderful vision, what was he seeing? As he gazed on that miraculously born child being nursed in the arms of the aged Sarah, did he see the manger cradle at Bethlehem? As he stood by the altar with the knife in his hand to slay his only Isaac, did he see the green hill far away, with its rugged Cross rudely carpentered for the body of the Messiah? And as he bowed beneath the blessing of the uplifted hands of Melchizedek, and received the sacramental seal of the heirship of the Kingdom centred in Jerusalem at his hands, did he see the Upper Room and the great and only Successor of Melchizedek bringing forth the bread and the wine, the seal of that New Covenant under which the seed of Abraham and all associated with them by faith in Jesus Christ should pass into the greater Kingdom which has its centre in the Jerusalem which is above.

Do you realise that it is here that these two great cities—Babylon and Jerusalem—are brought into contact for the first time? And in this meeting between Abram, coming from the war challenge of Babylon, and Melchizedek, with his peace mission, from Jerusalem, we have typified, as it were, the two-fold task of Abraham's seed through all the ages as "God's battle-axe and weapons of war," to resist the challenge of Babylon, and "God's witness" to carry forward to all the nations the reconciling peace-message from Jerusalem.

We are told that when the Queen of Sheba heard of the fame of Solomon concerning the Name of the Lord, she came to prove it. That is a very fine expression, "the fame of Solomon concerning the Name of the Lord." The fame of Solomon was only a shadow of the fame of Jehovah, and when she came she was overawed, she was humbled into the dust by two things—the glory of the Throne on Mount Zion, and the glory of the Temple at Jerusalem. The Throne of Zion was not the Throne of Solomon; it was the Throne of Jehovah, for we are told that "Solomon sat upon the Throne of the Lord," and the Temple was the House of the Lord, and once at least it was filled with the glory of Jehovah, so there were the government and worship of Jehovah established in Jerusalem, shedding their glory over the whole nation. You can go into any city in our land to-day—and there are two things that stand out prominently in every city: those two things are Government and Worship. The very orderliness and peace and freedom with which the citizens move about are the indication of good government, and there is provision made for worship as the natural and necessary duty of citizenship in the countless places of worship that you find in every city. You cannot disassociate these two things; they are bound up together, interwoven—Government and Worship. Go to Moscow and see the effect of bad government on worship, and realise the result on the national life; then come back to this land. And thank God for the State Church, which, with all its imperfections, is perpetually reminding the ruling authorities of those great Divine principles upon which our national constitution is based, and which are found in our wonderful Bible, which is at once the kingly charter of Royal authority, and the priestly charter of the spiritual mission of the Church.

You remember St. Paul gloried in his double enfranchisement. He was a freeman of Rome, "a citizen of no mean city." He gloried in that, but he gloried in something greater, in that he was a freeman of the city of God—"Jerusalem—which is above, which is free, and which is the mother of us all"; and St. Paul laid down that the duty of every Christian was to make his heavenly citizenship the driving force of the earthly. You remember how he said that the Church is the Body of Christ; that is, of the spiritual Christ. Thinking along these lines, the nation is the body of the spiritual Church—that is the real thing that counts about the Church. The label of denominationalism does not really matter so very much, so long as the national and spiritual authorities are bound up together. You may cut the legal knot that binds the Church to the State; you may drive Bishops out of the House of Peers; but you have the priesthood of the laity, and though the spiritual forces are in the minority, they are ever mightier than all the reactionary forces that are at the beck and call of the Devil. Just as it takes death to separate the soul from the body, so it will take the absolute destruction of the nation

A day of darkness and of gloominess,
a day of clouds and of thick darkness,
as the morning spread upon the mountains :
A GREAT PEOPLE AND A STRONG ;
there hath not been ever the like,
neither shall be any more after it,
even to the years of many generations.
A fire devoureth before them ;
and behind them a flame burneth :
the land is as the garden of Eden before them,
and behind them a desolate wilderness ;
yea, and nothing shall escape them."

And so on from verses 4 to 11 :—

" And the LORD shall utter his voice before his army :
for his camp is very great :
for he is strong that executeth his word :
for the day of the LORD is great and very terrible ;
and who can abide it ? "

INSTRUCTION TO ISRAEL UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES.

" Therefore also now, saith the LORD, turn ye even to me with all your heart, and with fasting, and with weeping, and with mourning :

And rend your heart, and not your garments, and turn unto the LORD your God : for he is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and repenteth him of the evil.

Who knoweth if he will return and repent, and leave a blessing behind him ; even a meat offering and a drink offering unto the LORD your God ? "—Joel ii, 12-14.

CALL A SOLEMN ASSEMBLY.

" Blow the trumpet in Zion, sanctify a fast, call a solemn assembly :

Gather the people, sanctify the congregation, assemble the elders, gather the children, and those that suck the breasts : let the bridegroom go forth of his chamber, and the bride out of her closet.

Let the priests, the ministers of the LORD, weep between the porch and the altar, and let them say, Spare thy people, O LORD, and give not thine heritage to reproach, that the heathen should rule over them : wherefore should they say among the people, Where is their God ? "—Joel ii, 15-17.

ANSWER TO PRAYER BRINGS THE DESTRUCTION OF THE FOE.

" Then will the LORD be jealous for his land, and pity his people.

Yea, the LORD will answer and say unto his people, Behold, I will send you corn, and wine, and oil, and ye shall be satisfied therewith : and I will no more make you a reproach among the heathen :

But I will remove far off from you the northern army, and will drive him into a land barren and desolate, with his face toward the east sea, and his hinder part toward the utmost sea, and his stink shall come up, and his ill savour shall come up, because he hath done great things."—Joel ii, 18-20.

REASSURANCE TO ZION.

" Fear not, O land ; be glad and rejoice : for the LORD will do great things.

Be not afraid, ye beasts of the field : for the pastures of the wilderness do spring, for the tree beareth her fruit, the fig tree and the vine do yield their strength.

Be glad then, ye children of Zion, and rejoice in the LORD your God : for he hath given you the former rain moderately, and he will cause to come down for you the rain, the former rain, and the latter rain in the first month.

And the floors shall be full of wheat, and the fats shall overflow with wine and oil.

And I will restore to you the years that the locust hath eaten, the cankerworm, and the caterpiller, and the palmerworm, my great army which I sent among you.

And ye shall eat in plenty, and be satisfied, and praise the name of the LORD your God, that hath dealt wondrously with you ; and my people shall never be ashamed.

And ye shall know that I am in the midst of Israel, and that I am the LORD your God, and none else ; and my people shall never be ashamed.

And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh ; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions :

And also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my spirit.

And I will shew wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke.

The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and the terrible day of the LORD come.

And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the LORD shall be delivered : for in mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the LORD hath said, and in the remnant whom the LORD shall call."—Joel ii, 21-32.

ADDRESS AT KENSINGTON TOWN HALL

BY THE REV. W. H. STUART-FOX, M.A.,

ON WEDNESDAY, APRIL 18TH, 1928. (ANNUAL SPRING MEETINGS.)

FELLOW-CITIZENS of this great city, Abraham looked for a city whose builder and maker is God. I suppose the city is the ultimate goal of the average man. There is a lure about the city which is incontrovertible, and I suppose it is quite natural, because the city is the depository of all the great resources of civilisation ; and there is a hunger in the human heart for the best that life has to give. Hence the exodus from the country; hence the reluctance of the man, whose appetite is pampered by the taste of city life, even though out of work, to face the strenuous self-denying life of an emigrant farmer, great as the need is to-day.

Now, that lure of the city was foreseen by God in His plan and purpose for humanity. It was not only foreseen, but it was provided for by God, and, unfortunately, by the Devil also. The Devil's city very soon appeared on the historical scene, for this is what we are told: "Cain went out from the presence of God, and builded a city," and the foundations of that city were laid in a brother's blood; and that blood smeared the city walls, and all through the ages the great cities of the kingdoms of this world have been built in like manner; and from the foundations and the walls of these cities the blood of slaughtered Abels has cried out to the Lord of Hosts for judgment. So monstrous was the iniquity that emanated from the cities of Cain that the Flood swept them all away. After the Flood the great architect of Evil set his builders upon the plan of a city whose tower should reach unto heaven, but God frustrated his plan. The place was called Babel—confusion—all the works of the Devil end in confusion. Upon this site was built afterwards that great city of Babylon, the home of all those foul idolatries which, through the ages, have obstructed the course of Truth, and hampered the progress of the builders of the city of God.

It is not until you reach the 14th chapter of Genesis that you come across that city so intimately associated with God's purposes in the earth, and you find it in this wise. Abram is returning from conflict with the king of Shinar—later Babylon—and he is met by Melchizedek, king of Salem, priest of the Most High God. There is something extraordinarily suggestive about this meeting of Abram—founder of a great nation destined to be a kingdom of priests unto Jehovah—with its metropolis at Jerusalem—Zion—with Melchizedek, king of Salem, priest of God. There is something which is more than suggestive, there is something sacramentally prophetic about it. "Your father Abram rejoiced to see my day, and he saw it and was glad," said Jesus Christ. What are we to gather from that? Surely that the ultimate prospect in that vision of Abram was the triumph of Jesus Christ, in the seed of Abraham, over the kingdoms of the earth. But, while his eyes were being focussed to that wonderful vision, what was he seeing? As he gazed on that miraculously born child being nursed in the arms of the aged Sarah, did he see the manger cradle at Bethlehem? As he stood by the altar with the knife in his hand to slay his only Isaac, did he see the green hill far away, with its rugged Cross rudely carpentered for the body of the Messiah? And as he bowed beneath the blessing of the uplifted hands of Melchizedek, and received the sacramental seal of the heirship of the Kingdom centred in Jerusalem at his hands, did he see the Upper Room and the great and only Successor of Melchizedek bringing forth the bread and the wine, the seal of that New Covenant under which the seed of Abraham and all associated with them by faith in Jesus Christ should pass into the greater Kingdom which has its centre in the Jerusalem which is above.

Do you realise that it is here that these two great cities—Babylon and Jerusalem—are brought into contact for the first time? And in this meeting between Abram, coming from the war challenge of Babylon, and Melchizedek, with his peace mission, from Jerusalem, we have typified, as it were, the two-fold task of Abraham's seed through all the ages as "God's battle-axe and weapons of war," to resist the challenge of Babylon, and "God's witness" to carry forward to all the nations the reconciling peace-message from Jerusalem.

Just as it takes death to separate the soul from the body, so it will take the absolute destruction of the nation to separate the spiritual from the national authority in the Kingdom-nation of God.

One hundred years ago there was a notable Parliamentarian, who was at the same time a profligate. He once went to Paris, where he was the guest of a very noted Parisienne; she was a bitter foe of Christianity. She said one day, "My lord, I am told that your English Parliament is made up of five or six hundred profound thinkers. Will you tell me how it is that the Bible is, by their authority, still recognized in your legislation, and why the obsolete religion of the Nazarene is still the State religion?" He said: "Well, Madam, it is just a temporary expedient. We are casting about for something better, and then the Bible and Christianity will go."

Well, the Bible and Christianity have gone—yes, they have gone—from the very heart of the British Empire in six hundred different languages and dialects into all the nations of the earth.

Come with me to the Bible. I ask you this, my friends: Do we want a mutilated Bible? We want a whole Bible. If you destroy an infallible Bible, you lose an infallible Christ. We want the whole Bible from Genesis to Revelation, and we want a Bible that is Divinely inspired from Genesis to Revelation. We do not want a mutilated portrait of Christ. We want the whole, majestic, glorious figure of the Christ. Have you ever thought as you look into that wonderful figure of the Christ of prophecy that there is a kind of composite picture in which a nation appears, too? The servant Son and the servant nation. "I have called my Son out of Egypt," in the prophet Hosea that is Israel, and in the Gospels it is Jesus Christ. Wonderfully does the picture of "The Servant" in Isaiah appear. Now it is the nation, now the Son of God, and Son of man. And so we want the whole picture.

I like to think of the Bible as God's love story. It is extraordinary the way some people read novels. They read a few pages or chapters; then they turn to the end of the book, and say they have read the story. Many people read their Bibles like that, and many ministers read their Bibles like that, too. There are great tracts of the Bible they do not know anything about. Crowds of our clergy know nothing about prophecy. It takes someone who lives amongst all those moving and wondrous scenes to tell the story aright. God moves among all the experiences of His nation. Listen to this:—

> "In all their affliction he was afflicted, and the angel of his presence saved them; in his love and in his pity he redeemed them; and he bare them, and carried them all the days of old."

And so the prophet Isaiah looks back along the tortuous road Israel has come down to that present hour. God has been with His people. But very soon now Israel was going out from the land of her fathers; she was going to be exiled because of her sins. Is that going to be the end of God's love story? Who were these people? They were the Covenant-bearers of the great unconditional promises made to Abraham and to David. They held God's honour and God's faithfulness in their hands. Is God a Covenant-breaker? God forbid. And so the prophet looks forward, and with inspired vision he sees Israel marching on and out through the centuries, ever westward; and then he sees a halt in the march, at a little group of Islands north-west of Jerusalem, and there he sees a nation growing up; he hears it singing the song of Redemption; he sees the fruitful stock of Joseph spreading over the wall. He watches and, looking out into the future, sees the march still going on—east, west, north and south—these people are going out into the wilderness and into the solitary desert places of the earth, and rivers flow and roses blossom at their feet as they go; and the slaves, with hands freed from their fetters, lift them up to heaven in songs of thankfulness at the march of these Covenant-bearers. They are Brith-Ish-Israel—Covenant-bearers—pilgrims every one, with the vision of the City in their minds. If Abraham was the first pilgrim on the road to the City, Jesus Christ was the greatest. He steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem. And what did Old Jerusalem do with Him? It cast Him out and crucified Him, and Old Jerusalem, as a consequence, went into captivity with her children.

What did St. Paul say about the New Jerusalem? The New Jerusalem is the mother of us all, and the children of the New Jerusalem, led by God, gathered into the appointed place in the power of the Christian faith to seek to build Jerusalem in England's green and pleasant land. The building was far short of the ideal. Yes, but at least they did this, these builders. They went forth into the great wide world, with the pattern of the Heavenly Jerusalem in their heart, and they created a new type of citizenship in the world; which challenged everywhere the works of the Devil, and they laid the foundation-stones of truth and love and justice, upon which, when the cities of a corrupt civilisation have fallen under the shattering judgments of God, the architects of the new age will build cities after the pattern of the Heavenly City.

Let us see to it that you and I, loyally and faithfully, are each of us trying to drive the foundations deep and true of this Heavenly Jerusalem in this greatly beloved land of ours,

PYRAMID PROPHECY AND "THE CONSUMMATION OF THE AGE."

By D. Davidson.

III.—THE FINAL TRIBULATION AND THE JUDGMENT.

The details of the Great Pyramid's construction prove that the structure was designed to withstand the shock and strain of a subsidence known to the Designer to be inevitable. The details of the structural allegory in turn show that subsidence and the effects of subsidence, as well as the provisions made to withstand the effects of subsidence, constitute a vital element of the allegory. The details of construction therefore disclose the fact that the Architect concentrated upon making adequate provision against collapse (due to subsidence), in the King's Chamber and in the Final Low Passage leading to the King's Chamber. For the Chambers of Construction over the King's Chamber form a perfect shock-absorbing "buffer" to keep the initial shock of subsidence from impinging directly upon the King's Chamber and this "buffer" is so designed as to distribute the effects of initial shock over and around the King's Chamber and the Final Low Passage leading to the King's Chamber. This Passage and the King's Chamber are also built entirely in granite to withstand the crushing strain of the distributed shock effects.

Digitized by Google

THROUGH TRIBULATION TO SALVATION.

Now let us see the allegorical significance of all this. The King's Chamber is known to symbolise a Refuge of Strength during the period of the Judgment, and the Final Low Passage to symbolise the Final Period of Tribulation prophesied to precede the Judgment. The interpretation given for the granite symbolism of the latter Passage is confirmed by the Scriptural prophecy of Divine aid being extended to Israel even in their greatest Tribulation. (Dan. xii, 1.) The Tribulation upon Israel is for the purpose of bringing Israel to repentance and not for Israel's destruction. Jeremiah says it is "the time of Jacob's trouble; but he shall be saved out of it." (xxx, 7.) The whole sequence from Final Tribulation to Judgment is dealt with in the 24th Chapter of Isaiah and in the three Chapters of Joel.

Suffering until they can suffer no longer, Israel is brought to repentance. "Then shall they lift up their voice . . . wherefore glorify ye . . . the Name of the Lord God of Israel in the isles of the Sea." Israel is then delivered out of her trouble, although the conditions of Tribulation still continue to exist upon the earth. For, after Israel's deliverance from affliction, as the Judgment approaches, "the foundations of the earth do shake" until in the Judgment period itself "the earth is utterly broken down . . . is moved exceedingly . . . . shall reel to and fro . . ."

The 26th Chapter of Isaiah explains Israel's part in this. "Lord, in trouble have they visited Thee, they poured out a prayer when Thy chastening was upon them" (verse 16). In consequence thereof they are brought under the protection and blessing of the Lord, and, thus delivered out of the Tribulation, receive the gracious command:—

"Come, My people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself as it were for a little moment until the indignation be overpast. For, behold, the Lord cometh out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity . . ." (verses 20 and 21.)

Wherefore "In that day shall this song be sung in the land of Judah; we have a strong city; salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks. Open ye the gates, that the righteous nation which keepeth the truth may enter in." (Verses 1 and 2.)

THE TRANSITION OF "THE BUILDERS."

The single difference between the prophecy of Isaiah and the allegorical prophecy of the Pyramid is that the "righteous nation" in Isaiah is Israel, whereas in the Pyramid's prophecy it is the nation of world "builders" employing the inch unit of measurement in their "building" transactions. The difference is explained by Matt. xxi, 42-44, where Our Lord employed the Pyramid allegory, with Himself as "the stone which the builders rejected" becoming "the head of the corner"; and with the work of building being taken from the Jews and "given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."

The Pyramid prophecy fixes the Tribulation of "the builders" as beginning in the night of May 29th, 1928; and Scriptural prophecy, by means of the interlocking check data of current history discussed in article I, appears to confirm this to the day. Both prophecies proclaim that the date of the termination of the "Nation's" Tribulation depends upon sincere and earnest prayer from the mass of the nation. The Pyramid gives the latest date for the Tribulation ending as September 15th, 1936, A.D. The Old and New Testaments give the Tribulation as ended at the "Last Trump." Appropriately the Pyramid date is the astronomical new moon of the Hebrew "Feast of Trumpets" in A.D. 1936. The Pyramid's "building" contract allegory, however, defines the "Trumpet" identity as symbolic, and the date as the latest possible date for the prayer of the nation of "builders" to be deferred. The contract work of the "builders" is earnest national prayer, in a spirit of true repentance. When this work has been completed, then, as is specified in the Scriptural Covenant, the "builders" will cease to exist as such, and will begin to fulfil a new function in the building as "living stones," having offered themselves as "spiritual sacrifices" in their national prayer (refer to 1 Peter ii, 4-10 and Peter in Acts iv, 10-11).

This change has to be effected before the national Tribulation is ended (Isaiah xxvi, 16 and 20-21 in relation to verses 1 and 2). The Tribulation is to be ended before the "darkening of the sun," etc., before the Coming of Our Lord, before the "Last Trump," and before the "Rapture." (Matt. xxiv, 29-31.) No such ordinary occurrence as an eclipse of the sun is referred to in this or in other related predictions. Joel ii (1, 2, 11, 30-32) explains the darkening of the sun, etc., as due to the atmospheric effects of volcanic action, and states that this immediately precedes Our Lord's Coming and the Judgment. Verses 28-32 explain that the Tribulation is to be ended by Israel calling upon the Lord for deliverance. The same statement refers to the time of the darkening of the sun, etc., as being related to this time of deliverance. Verses 10-11 show that the darkening, the Coming, and the beginning of the Great Day of the Lord all refer to the ending of the Tribulation and the beginning of the Judgment. Verse 31 specifically states that "The great day of the Lord" follows the darkening of the sun, and Our Lord in Matt. xxiv states that the darkening immediately succeeds the Tribulation and precedes His Coming. No loop-hole is left for any alternative, for any theory of various phases of Our Lord's visible Coming, or for any invisible Coming for a Rapture of "first fruits." "Christ the first fruits," says Paul in 1 Cor. xv, 23, 24, "afterwards they that are Christ's at His Coming. Then cometh the end; when He shall have delivered up the Kingdom to God, even the Father; when He shall have put down all rule and all authority and power."

"For," says Paul in 1 Thess. iv, 16-17, "The Lord Himself shall descend from heaven

AND WITH THE TRUMP OF GOD:

and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive to separate the spiritual from the national authority in the Kingdom-nation of God.

One hundred years ago there was a notable Parliamentarian, who was at the same time a profligate. He once went to Paris, where he was the guest of a very noted Parisienne; she was a bitter foe of Christianity. She said one day, "My lord, I am told that your English Parliament is made up of five or six hundred profound thinkers. Will you tell me how it is that the Bible is, by their authority, still recognized in your legislation, and why the obsolete religion of the Nazarene is still the State religion?" He said: "Well, Madam, it is just a temporary expedient. We are casting about for something better, and then the Bible and Christianity will go."

Well, the Bible and Christianity have gone—yes, they have gone—from the very heart of the British Empire in six hundred different languages and dialects into all the nations of the earth.

Come with me to the Bible. I ask you this, my friends: Do we want a mutilated Bible? We want a whole Bible. If you destroy an infallible Bible, you lose an infallible Christ. We want the whole Bible from Genesis to Revelation, and we want a Bible that is Divinely inspired from Genesis to Revelation. We do not want a mutilated portrait of Christ. We want the whole, majestic, glorious figure of the Christ. Have you ever thought as you look into that wonderful figure of the Christ of prophecy that there is a kind of composite picture in which a nation appears, too? The servant Son and the servant nation. "I have called my Son out of Egypt," in the prophet Hosea that is Israel, and in the Gospels it is Jesus Christ. Wonderfully does the picture of "The Servant" in Isaiah appear. Now it is the nation, now the Son of God, and Son of man. And so we want the whole picture.

I like to think of the Bible as God's love story. It is extraordinary the way some people read novels. They read a few pages or chapters; then they turn to the end of the book, and say they have read the story. Many people read their Bibles like that, and many ministers read their Bibles like that, too. There are great tracts of the Bible they do not know anything about. Crowds of our clergy know nothing about prophecy. It takes someone who lives amongst all those moving and wondrous scenes to tell the story aright. God moves among all the experiences of His nation. Listen to this:—

> "In all their affliction he was afflicted, and the angel of his presence saved them; in his love and in his pity he redeemed them; and he bare them, and carried them all the days of old."

And so the prophet Isaiah looks back along the tortuous road Israel has come down to that present hour. God has been with His people. But very soon now Israel was going out from the land of her fathers; she was going to be exiled because of her sins. Is that going to be the end of God's love story? Who were these people? They were the Covenant-bearers of the great unconditional promises made to Abraham and to David. They held God's honour and God's faithfulness in their hands. Is God a Covenant-breaker? God forbid. And so the prophet looks forward, and with inspired vision he sees Israel marching on and out through the centuries, ever westward; and then he sees a halt in the march, at a little group of Islands north-west of Jerusalem, and there he sees a nation growing up; he hears it singing the song of Redemption; he sees the fruitful stock of Joseph spreading over the wall. He watches and, looking out into the future, sees the march still going on—east, west, north and south—these people are going out into the wilderness and into the solitary desert places of the earth, and rivers flow and roses blossom at their feet as they go; and the slaves, with hands freed from their fetters, lift them up to heaven in songs of thankfulness at the march of these Covenant-bearers. They are Brith-Ish-Israel—Covenant-bearers—pilgrims every one, with the vision of the City in their minds. If Abraham was the first pilgrim on the road to the City, Jesus Christ was the greatest. He steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem. And what did Old Jerusalem do with Him? It cast Him out and crucified Him, and Old Jerusalem, as a consequence, went into captivity with her children.

What did St. Paul say about the New Jerusalem? The New Jerusalem is the mother of us all, and the children of the New Jerusalem, led by God, gathered into the appointed place in the power of the Christian faith to seek to build Jerusalem in England's green and pleasant land. The building was far short of the ideal. Yes, but at least they did this, these builders. They went forth into the great wide world, with the pattern of the Heavenly Jerusalem in their heart, and they created a new type of citizenship in the world; which challenged everywhere the works of the Devil, and they laid the foundation-stones of truth and love and justice, upon which, when the cities of a corrupt civilisation have fallen under the shattering judgments of God, the architects of the new age will build cities after the pattern of the Heavenly City.

Let us see to it that you and I, loyally and faithfully, are each of us trying to drive the foundations deep and true of this Heavenly Jerusalem in this greatly beloved land of ours,

PYRAMID PROPHECY AND "THE CONSUMMATION OF THE AGE."

By D. Davidson.

III.—THE FINAL TRIBULATION AND THE JUDGMENT.

THE details of the Great Pyramid's construction prove that the structure was designed to withstand the shock and strain of a subsidence known to the Designer to be inevitable. The details of the structural allegory in turn show that subsidence and the effects of subsidence, as well as the provisions made to withstand the effects of subsidence, constitute a vital element of the allegory. The details of construction therefore disclose the fact that the Architect concentrated upon making adequate provision against collapse (due to subsidence), in the King's Chamber and in the Final Low Passage leading to the King's Chamber. For the Chambers of Construction over the King's Chamber form a perfect shock-absorbing "buffer" to keep the initial shock of subsidence from impinging directly upon the King's Chamber and this "buffer" is so designed as to distribute the effects of initial shock over and around the King's Chamber and the Final Low Passage leading to the King's Chamber. This Passage and the King's Chamber are also built entirely in granite to withstand the crushing strain of the distributed shock effects.

THROUGH TRIBULATION TO SALVATION.

Now let us see the allegorical significance of all this. The King's Chamber is known to symbolise a Refuge of Strength during the period of the Judgment, and the Final Low Passage to symbolise the Final Period of Tribulation prophesied to precede the Judgment. The interpretation given for the granite symbolism of the latter Passage is confirmed by the Scriptural prophecy of Divine aid being extended to Israel even in their greatest Tribulation. (Dan. xii, 1.) The Tribulation upon Israel is for the purpose of bringing Israel to repentance and not for Israel's destruction. Jeremiah says it is "the time of Jacob's trouble; but he shall be saved out of it." (xxx, 7.) The whole sequence from Final Tribulation to Judgment is dealt with in the 24th Chapter of Isaiah and in the three Chapters of Joel.

Suffering until they can suffer no longer, Israel is brought to repentance. "Then shall they lift up their voice . . . wherefore glorify ye . . . the Name of the Lord God of Israel in the isles of the Sea." Israel is then delivered out of her trouble, although the conditions of Tribulation still continue to exist upon the earth. For, after Israel's deliverance from affliction, as the Judgment approaches, "the foundations of the earth do shake" until in the Judgment period itself "the earth is utterly broken down . . . is moved exceedingly . . . . shall reel to and fro . . ."

The 26th Chapter of Isaiah explains Israel's part in this. "Lord, in trouble have they visited Thee, they poured out a prayer when Thy chastening was upon them" (verse 16). In consequence thereof they are brought under the protection and blessing of the Lord, and, thus delivered out of the Tribulation, receive the gracious command:—

"Come, My people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself as it were for a little moment until the indignation be overpast. For, behold, the Lord cometh out of His place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity . . ." (verses 20 and 21.)

Wherefore "In that day shall this song be sung in the land of Judah; we have a strong city; salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks. Open ye the gates, that the righteous nation which keepeth the truth may enter in." (Verses 1 and 2.)

THE TRANSITION OF "THE BUILDERS."

The single difference between the prophecy of Isaiah and the allegorical prophecy of the Pyramid is that the "righteous nation" in Isaiah is Israel, whereas in the Pyramid's prophecy it is the nation of world "builders" employing the inch unit of measurement in their "building" transactions. The difference is explained by Matt. xxi, 42-44, where Our Lord employed the Pyramid allegory, with Himself as "the stone which the builders rejected" becoming "the head of the corner"; and with the work of building being taken from the Jews and "given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."

The Pyramid prophecy fixes the Tribulation of "the builders" as beginning in the night of May 29th, 1928; and Scriptural prophecy, by means of the interlocking check data of current history discussed in article I, appears to confirm this to the day. Both prophecies proclaim that the date of the termination of the "Nation's" Tribulation depends upon sincere and earnest prayer from the mass of the nation. The Pyramid gives the latest date for the Tribulation ending as September 15th, 1936, A.D. The Old and New Testaments give the Tribulation as ended at the "Last Trump." Appropriately the Pyramid date is the astronomical new moon of the Hebrew "Feast of Trumpets" in A.D. 1936. The Pyramid's "building" contract allegory, however, defines the "Trumpet" identity as symbolic, and the date as the latest possible date for the prayer of the nation of "builders" to be deferred. The contract work of the "builders" is earnest national prayer, in a spirit of true repentance. When this work has been completed, then, as is specified in the Scriptural Covenant, the "builders" will cease to exist as such, and will begin to fulfil a new function in the building as "living stones," having offered themselves as "spiritual sacrifices" in their national prayer (refer to 1 Peter ii, 4-10 and Peter in Acts iv, 10-11).

This change has to be effected before the national Tribulation is ended (Isaiah xxvi, 16 and 20-21 in relation to verses 1 and 2). The Tribulation is to be ended before the "darkening of the sun," etc., before the Coming of Our Lord, before the "Last Trump," and before the "Rapture." (Matt. xxiv, 29-31.) No such ordinary occurrence as an eclipse of the sun is referred to in this or in other related predictions. Joel ii (1, 2, 11, 30-32) explains the darkening of the sun, etc., as due to the atmospheric effects of volcanic action, and states that this immediately precedes Our Lord's Coming and the Judgment. Verses 28-32 explain that the Tribulation is to be ended by Israel calling upon the Lord for deliverance. The same statement refers to the time of the darkening of the sun, etc., as being related to this time of deliverance. Verses 10-11 show that the darkening, the Coming, and the beginning of the Great Day of the Lord all refer to the ending of the Tribulation and the beginning of the Judgment. Verse 31 specifically states that "The great day of the Lord" follows the darkening of the sun, and Our Lord in Matt. xxiv states that the darkening immediately succeeds the Tribulation and precedes His Coming. No loop-hole is left for any alternative, for any theory of various phases of Our Lord's visible Coming, or for any invisible Coming for a Rapture of "first fruits." "Christ the first fruits," says Paul in 1 Cor. xv, 23, 24, "afterwards they that are Christ's at His Coming. Then cometh the end; when He shall have delivered up the Kingdom to God, even the Father; when He shall have put down all rule and all authority and power."

"For," says Paul in 1 Thess. iv, 16-17, "The Lord Himself shall descend from heaven and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air . . ."

AND WITH THE TRUMP OF GOD:

" In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the Last Trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." (1 Cor. xv, 52.)

THE UNKNOWN DATE.

It is clear therefore that there is no Rapture before or during Tribulation, but, as Our Lord says in Matt. xxiv, 29-36, only " immediately after the Tribulation of those days." " But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but My Father only." No amount of mathematical ingenuity or perversity therefore can possibly discover the date at which Israel will be delivered out of the Tribulation. It was not until I saw the clear definition of the allegory of the building Contract in the Pyramid that I saw this sequence plainly. In my Booklet No. 3, I placed the King's Chamber correctly as symbolising the Refuge during Judgment; saw plainly that the entrance date on the day of the Hebrew Feast of Trumpets in 1936 logically agreed with this; and also from Matt. xxiv, 36, that the latter date could not be the date of the Rapture. I was faced with two possible alternatives. (1) That the Pyramid being the Father's record of His Foreknowledge gave the date Our Lord Himself did not know; or (2) That the sounding of the Last Trump represented a period of some duration; Our Lord coming for His Saints during Tribulation and at the beginning of the Trumpet being sounded; and, at the end of the sounding, coming with His Saints for the Judgment.

Matt. xxiv, 42-51, however, showed that the first alternative was impossible. I therefore adopted the second alternative. I was wrong in doing so, as comparison of Matt. xxiv, 29-31, 1 Thess. iv, 16-17 and 1 Cor. xv, 52, has shown. Let me therefore explain the building Contract allegory that brought me to a realisation of my error.

As the majority of my readers know, I believe in independent evidence. I have concentrated upon the interpretation of the Pyramid's evidence. In most matters of Scriptural prophecy interpretation I have found that the rendering of the historical school of interpretation agrees with the Pyramid's geometrical prophecy. There are two schools of prophecy interpretation, however, concerning the Second Coming, even amongst the expositors of the historical school. One school believes that the Rapture is before the end of Tribulation, and the other that it is at the end of Tribulation. The fixed date of the Pyramid's prophecy for the entrance into the Judgment period was what determined my preference for the former. As an engineer, however, I should have remembered in reading the Pyramid's building allegory that the fixed Contract date is not necessarily the date upon which the work of construction will be finished, but is necessarily the date at which the work must be finished for the builders to benefit from the Contract. A penalty is imposed for each day that the Contract is exceeded, and in urgent work a bonus is awarded in proportion to the number of days that the work is completed before the fixed Contract date. Once I realised that the Pyramid's building allegory must contain this element, my problem concerning the time of the Second Advent solved itself. The builders' bonus is the outpouring of the Spirit upon them; Tribulation then will be ended for them; Christ will come; and Judgment will begin at Armageddon. The remaining work of the nation of builders is national prayer in national sincerity of Spirit. Only Tribulation can bring this sincerity of Spirit, when it shall be said of them, as in Isaiah's prophecy of the Tribulation, " Lord, in trouble have they visited Thee, they poured out a prayer when Thy chastening was upon them."

THE TWO WITNESSES.

An important matter to realise is that Joel iii, 1, 2, 12, 14 and 15, by placing the gathering of the nations in the valley of decision as an event contemporaneous with the darkening of the sun, etc., indicates that Israel has been delivered from her Tribulation before this gathering. Joel i, 6, however, shows that the Russian invasion of Palestine and Egypt (Ezekiel xxxviii, 1-13, and Dan. xi, 40-43) has taken place during Israel's Tribulation. Joel ii, 20, refers to the overthrow of the Russian hosts (Ezekiel xxxviii, 18-23, and xxxix). Joel ii, 1-11 and 25, and the whole of the first Chapter of Joel, present the events of the Tribulation from the viewpoint of the Holy Land itself, whereas the Prophecy of the 24th Chapter of Isaiah pictures the world-wide effects of the Tribulation. From the whole sequence it is clear that the events of the Last Tribulation upon Israel relate to the final intensified operation of the " curses " of Deut. xxviii, 15-68; that these " curses " will cease when the conditions of Deut. xxviii, 1, and Joel i, 14, ii, 12-17, have been satisfied; and that the blessings of Deut. xxviii, 2-14, and Joel ii, 18-32, will be poured out in abundance upon Israel when these conditions have been fulfilled.

Surely this time of Tribulation is the time during which the " dragon " of Rev. xii, 1 wars with " the remnant of the woman's seed " (Israel); and in consequence of which " war " —not primarily literal war but spiritual war—the " dead bodies " of the " two witnesses " of Rev. xi, " lie (for $3\frac{1}{2}$ 'days') in the street of the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt, where also Our Lord was crucified." That this relates to the previous reference is proved by comparison of Rev. xi, 7, with Rev. xii, 17, and of Rev. xi, 3, with Rev. xii, 13 and 14. In Rev. xi, 15, moreover, the Last Trump is sounded by the Seventh Angel (refer to viii, 2, and x, 7), and the Judgment begins (xi, 15 and 18). This proves that the " taking up " of the " two witnesses " is not the " Rapture," since they are " taken up " before the Last Trump. The " taking up " must therefore relate allegorically to the spiritual ascension of Israel from " the great city, which spiritually is called Sodom and Egypt," into the Spiritual state of the Kingdom of God—the Spiritual state of the " New Jerusalem." For does not Rev. xviii, 4, in its parallel vision of the same symbolic " great city " of the earth, say " Come out of her, My people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." This is the same gracious command as is given in Isaiah xxvi, 20 and 21, already quoted.

The " two witnesses " then are of " the seed " of the " woman," Israel, an identity that is clearly confirmed by comparison of Rev. xi, 3, with Dan. xii, 7, and vii, 25, and Matt. xxiv, 14. Rev. xi, 4, however, explains that the " two witnesses " are " the two olive trees and the two candlesticks standing before the God of the earth." This imagery refers us to the "two olive trees" and the "two candlesticks," each with "seven pipes" to the "seven lamps" thereof in the vision of Zech. iv. The olive trees empty their oil into the lamps (verse 12). The seven branched lamp is the golden candlestick of the Temple, and is therefore symbolic of the Spiritual Light of Israel. The olive tree is the symbol of the Spiritually guided fruitful life of Israel. Israel was guided by the Law and the Prophets; hence the Light of the "Two Witnesses." Spiritual guidance lies in the Written Word and in the inspiration of the Holy Spirit. The Written Word was to be proclaimed to the ends of the earth by the Power of the Holy Spirit operating through the dispersed of Israel (Dan. xii, 7 read in relation to Matt, xxiv, 14, and Matt. xviii, 20). Then should "the end" come.

THE WARNING SIGNS.

Already the signs and warnings are written in fire, smoke and blood along the frontiers of Israel's scattered Empire. The Missioners of the Written Word are even now being rolled back from one end of the earth to the other as a token that the work of "the dragon," "the beast" and "the false prophet" of Rev. xii, 13-14, has already commenced in preparation for the final "(Spiritual) War with the remnant of the woman's seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ" (Rev. xii, 17). The prophecy of "The Two Witnesses" therefore seems to imply that, in consequence of spiritual degeneration, the modern Israel of God will, as a nation, be so spiritually dead as to cease witnessing as a nation for Christ for 3½ years. This period seems to occur during the Last Tribulation (Rev. xi, 11-15), and in consequence of the initial events of the Last Tribulation (Rev. xi, 7-10). This should mean that the 3½ years' "dead" period begins some time after May 29th, 1928, and ends some time before September 16th, 1936. Rev. xi, 11-15, completes the whole cycle of events up to Our Lord's Coming.*

Let it therefore be remembered that Spiritual Christians must remain in Israel's darkness of Tribulation as lamps to lighten that darkness; that their hope is not to look for personal physical deliverance from the period of Tribulation; but that their work should lie in enlightening Israel, in bringing Israel to repentance, and in thus bringing the Day of Deliverance nearer. Then, when "immediately after the Tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened . . .", Christians are instructed "when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh." (Luke xxi, 28.)

Too many read the events of the Great Day of the Lord, which is the time of Judgment, into the events of Israel's Tribulation—which is a time of affliction to cleanse and purify. Luke xxi, 24-26, clearly deals with the signs in nature and mankind, between Tribulation ending and Judgment beginning, that are indicative of the gathering storm of the Judgment. "Watch ye, therefore," says Our Lord in verse 36, "and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man."

For the parable of the ten virgins seems to indicate that many prepared in the Tribulation will not remain prepared after the Tribulation has ended. This surely implies a period of delay in the Bridegroom's Coming—a delay purposely to test the vigilance of the awaiting virgins?

"Watch therefore," saith the Lord, "for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come."

"But know this, that if the goodman of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched." (Matt. xxiv.)

"Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he should walk naked, and they see his shame."

"And He gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon." (Rev. xvi, 15, 16.)

"He which testifieth these things saith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus." (Rev. xxii, 20.)

ERRATA re 29 MAY, 1928.

Owing to an unfortunate error in draughtsmanship, 28 May, 1928, has appeared in lieu of the correct date, 29 May, 1928, on my plate in N.M.B., p. 245. The correct date is given in the accompanying text. Unfortunately, the Editor and the Rev. Commander Roberts have adopted the wrong date on pp. 257 and 259.

ARMAGEDDON!

BY THE REV. LINCOLN MCCONNELL, D.D., LL.D.

"And he gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon."—Rev. xvi, 16.

FOR more than two thousand years the Bible-reading world has been looking forward with dread to a time of trouble for the people of earth "such as has never been." Every great war has caused the trembling question to be asked: "Is this the beginning of the awful Armageddon?" Indeed, so often have fears been awakened only to prove groundless, that we have come now to quite a different attitude, on the part of many men, toward "Armageddon." Like the old story of the oft-repeated cry "wolf, wolf!" when there was no wolf, till the coming of the real wolf was ignored; so have people come to think that any fear of Armageddon is groundless.

Perhaps Satan has no more subtle device with which to destroy man's faith in God's Word than this. He causes men to misinterpret the Bible, wrest passages from their true position, and hence awaken groundless hopes or fears. Then he points out the fact that these hopes or fears were not realised and argues that it is the Bible which is unworthy of belief.

* Whilst deprecating any attempts to fix the end of Tribulation, it is worth noting that 3½ calendar years, or 1,260 days, from May 29th, 1928, end on November 10th, 1931. The latter date is precisely 13 solar years from the date of the First Low Passage ending and is also precisely 10 solar years from the date of emergence from the Granite Leaf symbolism. The known ending of two physical burdens, and the suggested minimum date for a spiritual burden ending, all three upon the eve of Remembrance Day, constitute a remarkable identity in view of our reading of the "Two Witnesses" prophecy. Attention seems to be directed to Remembrance Day of 1931 as to a special day of National Repentance and Appeal to God Almighty. Readers of my 1921 articles in The Covenant People may remember that, in dealing with a particular antitypical symbolism bearing upon the Antechamber prophecy, I pointed out how this symbolism indicated the Tribulation, beginning on May 29th, 1928, as definitely associated with the idea of religious revolution. I would now revise this interpretation somewhat by reading the revolutionary aspect as due to the sudden incidence of an evil spiritual environment. (Rev. xi, 7, and Rev. xii, 17.)

When Paul urged Timothy (and us) to "study" that he might "rightly divide the word of truth," he was pointing to the very heart of the greatest danger we have.

Now regardless of all the "false alarms" of the past, the fact remains ARMAGEDDON IS COMING! It is plainly foretold in God's Word, and it is so minutely described that there can be no question as to its coming if that Word is true. So do not be deceived by man's mistaken opinions in the past, nor the scoffing of those who sneer at the Bible as the Word of God in these days.

Had men had the true key to chronological prophecy in other days, they would have been compelled to see that Armageddon could not have taken place when they thought it at hand. The sun in its course runs no more true to the will of its Creator than do the affairs of man on this earth! God has never yet been "surprised" by man's conduct, nor have events He foresaw and foretold ever failed to materialise.

Ages before the days of Jesus, God foretold the race through whom He was to come and the facts of how He would be received when He came. He told Abraham of the mighty race that would spring from his loins, of the mistakes they would make, the things they would accomplish, and though Abraham was "as a dead man" through the decrepitude of old age when these promises were made to him, yet he lived to see their marvellous beginning. We to-day are seeing their no less marvellous ending!

God plainly warned the Israelites through Moses (Levit. xxvi) that they would be punished "seven times" for disobedience and sin, but that even so, afterward they would be brought back and led into the paths in which He would have them walk. Again and again, through prophet after prophet, did God repeat such warnings and such promises, and never yet have they failed to come to pass as foretold. In the light of these things, how can we fail to believe in the coming climacteric war known as "Armageddon"? And by the same token, why should men ever have expected it so long ahead of the time so plainly foretold for it? To be sure, many of the general "signs" were of such a nature as to be seen many times on earth But these same "signs," when seen standing out so plainly to-day, have a significance they never could have had before.

It was not surprising that, in days before the Gospel had been so widely preached and before the civilisation it has brought had so greatly blessed mankind, wickedness and unbelief should have been a common thing. But what excuse is there for them to-day? For nearly 2,000 years the world has seen the working of the Power of God in the Gospel of Christ. It has seen nations lifted from the mire through it. To-day it is the "Christian" nations that are the advanced nations, that exhibit the greatest intellectual development, the greatest liberty. Is it not strange that in the face of all this, the loudest jeers that are heard against God's Word come from these same lands!

So truly did Jesus and Paul and Peter foresee our day, it almost reads as though they were describing actual events rather than foretelling them. (Read Matt. xxiv; Luke xvii, 22-30; 1 Tim. iv, 1-3; 2 Tim. iii and iv; and 2 Peter iii.) I say, when we read these things to-day in conjunction with all the other signs, such as the increase of knowledge, Dan. xii, 4; Spiritism, 1 Tim. iv, 1-3. (Read Lev. xix, 26, 31; Deut. xviii, 4, 10; Isa. viii, 19, 20; 1 Sam. xxviii; Ex. xxii, 18; 2 Kings xvii, 17; Micah v, 12; Mal. iii, 5; Acts xxii, 16; Rev. xxi, 8, if you would know God's opinion of Spiritism); World-wide Evangelism, Matt. xxiv, 14; Lawlessness, Immorality, Violence, etc., etc., now common though much of this has been for ages past, it is but an added indication of danger to-day, the very day when for the first time the mighty chronological prophecies have run their course, and we see their very end before our eyes!

Jesus said, "Jerusalem shall be trodden down by the Gentiles until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled."—Luke xxi, 34. We now know that God's Word had shown that not until after A.D. 1918 could this final war come! The "times of the Gentiles" did not begin to run out until 1914 at soonest, and 1936 at latest. Hence to expect Armageddon sooner was without foundation.

We are to-day like men travelling to a great city by rail. We have been told of many things we will see just before our arrival: "The changing landscape," "the pleasure places," "the many converging roads," "the increasing number of houses." We cannot doubt that, though we have been a long time travelling toward the City, we are now very near it! Too many signs all about us to doubt that fact. Ages ago, long before Jesus came to redeem man from sin, Ezekiel foresaw our day—this day that would witness the culmination of God's wrath against those who scorned His Son. Read Ezekiel xxxviii, 39. Gog and his confederates are plainly warned as well as described. Who is "Gog"? None other than Russia! Now note. For centuries Russia was counted among the "Christian" nations. Her rulers were Christians, her State Church honoured the Name of Christ, even though it was sadly mixed with Pagan superstition. Men have long identified Russia with "Gog" and Germany with "Gomer," and the question has been, "how can this prophecy come true when these are Christian nations; people who are worshipping the God of Israel?"

BUT WHAT DO WE SEE TO-DAY?

Just this: in the very years when the great chronological prophecies are running out; we see Russia (Gog) throw off her mask, kill her "Christian" Ruler and come boldly out in the open as THE NATION THAT HATES GOD! Not only so. God's plan for the government of man is Theocracy! Himself as absolute Monarch!

Russia to-day blazes forth with the God-defying doctrine that "MAN SHALL GOVERN HIMSELF!"; that "he shall not even have a HUMAN ruler, but each must be absolutely free to do his own will!" It is a vivid contrast indeed we witness between these two ideas: God's and Russia's. And that Russia is determined to force the issue, you need but to note her world-wide activity to know. Not content to practise her doctrines in her own land, she is to-day sending agents into every land and government on earth, who are feverishly working to undermine, to destroy, to overthrow! Why this tremendous activity, this expenditure of millions of dollars while her own poor suffer for the very necessities of life? Why this furious meddling with the affairs of other nations? The answer is plain: That is her destiny! Just as Pharaoh was foreseen of God to do what he did and end as he did, so are the Satan-controlled Russians and her allies to-day being driven to their doom!

No, do not blame it on God! He did not ordain it. They are free agents and are doing just what they want to do! But what they are doing and will do was long foreknown and foretold.

Note two peculiar things in Ezekiel's prophecy (xxxviii, 9), "Thou shalt ascend and come like a STORM, thou shalt be LIKE A CLOUD to cover the land, etc." And again (Ezek. xxxviii, 15), "And thou shalt come from thy place out of the North parts, thou and many (other) people with thee, all of them RIDING ON HORSES, a great company, a mighty army." What does this "like a cloud, like a storm" mean? Just this. AEROPLANES! Ezekiel had never seen an aeroplane, but how better could he have told it? "Like a cloud, like a storm!" Wait! Before you drop this as a foolish notion, consider this question. WHY such feverish and SUCH AMAZING activity in RUSSIA and TURKEY building aeroplanes TO-DAY? Germany cannot build them IN GERMANY to-day, but SHE IS BUILDING more than ever before IN TURKEY AND RUSSIA. We told you just the other day about the monster aeroplane factory hidden away in the mountains of Turkey RUN BY GERMANS, WHILE the SAME IS TRUE IN RUSSIA. WHY? That they are not commercial planes is dead certain. Then again. Did you know that Russia to-day owns over half the horses in the world and is rushing everywhere buying more? Just this is true. Again, I ask WHY? Ezekiel answers for us!

BY A. R. H.

WE can have the love of peace in our hearts without being pacifist. Pacifism stands for peace at any price. But there is a price which even peace cannot command with honour. "If it be possible, as much as in you lieth live peaceably with all men." Thus spake the apostle PAUL; and he was right.

A "No More War" propaganda leaflet states that the idea that GOD has a chosen people has been the pitfall of individuals and of nations. This conception then, in the interests of peace, must be relentlessly stamped out. GERMANY, the latest of the great powers to become enamoured of this notion, has, in her fall and failure, taught the world a lesson it must be quick to learn.

The KAISER claimed to be the All-Highest, the vice-regent of GOD upon earth. Let no other throne or dynasty assume a kindred claim, for they will be brought to nought.

Thus the pacifist of to-day issues his challenge, dazzled by the brilliance of his own infallible logic.

But perverted notions do not cancel the true notion behind perversion. The GERMAN ARMY marched into battle with the words "Got mit uns" engraven on their uniform belts. But GOD was with us! GOD was with ISRAEL-BRITAIN.[1] not Assyria.

False claimants do not invalidate the rightful heir, any more than false christs nullify the true CHRIST or false prophets true prophets.

[1] Cmp. Isa. viii, 10.

Similarly, false alarms regarding the date and time of the second coming of CHRIST are not infallible arguments discrediting the fact that He will and is coming.

Rather are these false alarms—counterfeit organisations—spurious claimants—the strongest possible evidence that the real thing does very much exist somewhere!

Again and again the immediate coming of JESUS CHRIST has been declared. But the expectation has never yet been fulfilled and therefore never will be fulfilled. Thus the wiseacres and sceptics plume themselves in self-conceited vanity.

But just as truly as we know that there must first be the knowledge of the one true GOD before there can be the notion of a multitude of false gods, so we know that these false anticipations point unerringly to the certainty of a coming actual manifestation, in the fulness of the times.

The cry of "Wolf," "Wolf" may well be uttered many times before the coming of the destroyer of the flock. But that does not justify the indulgence of a state of unpreparedness. So, to-day, the cry goes forth regarding the coming of the Shepherd of the sheep. Be assured. He will come and will not tarry. Not tarry, at least, indefinitely—though indefinitely enough to take the watchman unawares. But there is a difference between being taken unawares and being surprised when unprepared.

We, who love His appearing, do not know the day or hour of His coming. But we do not mind the uncertainty if we are prepared to be thus taken unawares. The day will not overcome us like a thief if we are watching faithfully, although the actual moment will be in the nature of surprise, we shall be expecting to be taken unawares and will be ready for the surprise when it surprises us!

True, the LORD so cometh as a thief in the night. But we are not in darkness that that day should overtake us as a thief.[2] We are not the children of darkness but of the day; if it so be that the day-star has arisen in our hearts. Moreover, we have the more sure word of prophecy which is as a light [3] in a dark place.

As children of the Day, with the light of prophecy to dispel the gloom of doubt, we do well to exhort one another daily. For to-day we live in times when we can actually see the Day approaching.[4] Signs are multiplying daily. And above all signs we have, in a clear fulfilment of the parable of the Fig Tree, a final proof that the Day is near, even at the doors.[5]

Trees are nations. The Fig Tree is the Jewish nation.

Moreover, springtime is the time when Nature, urged by the spirit of God within her, bursts forth into newness of life. Nations, like trees, are subject to like laws of re-birth or decay. Mankind, passing out of a Dark and Wintry Age, already feels the glow and thrill of the New Age, an Age of Light, of Summer Suns and Regeneration.

The passage or transition from Winter into Spring and Summer [6] cannot be undertaken without travail, birth-pangs, great tribulation.

Albeit the immediate result of the signing of the Versailles Treaty which marked the end of the first phase of the great Tribulation (of which the bursting forth of the Trees is a sign) was the birth or re-birth of a dozen states in Europe.

Among the birth of nations, however, no birth was fraught with more significance than that of the JEWISH NATION, born as a result of the Balfour Declaration.

"Behold the Fig Tree, and all the trees; When they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that SUMMER is now nigh at hand. So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that is nigh at hand."

In his latest volume entitled Speeches on Zionism, LORD BALFOUR clearly shows that his faith in this great experiment is unabated and unimpaired.

"Ten years have now elapsed since the declaration on ZIONISM made by me on behalf of the BRITISH GOVERNMENT in 1917," he writes. "Nothing has occurred during that period to suggest the least doubt as to the wisdom of this new departure.

"The experiment was undoubtedly a bold one, dealing with a unique situation in a manner wholly without precedent in history.

"I am, however, convinced that, if it be supported by Jewish communities throughout the world, its success is assured, and that a Home will be secured for the Jewish Race in the land which is immemorially associated with their name."

Here we have the expression of opinion which is entitled to our respect. But alas, we cannot share this confidence. For stirrings of new life and beginnings of new birth in a nation are no sure guarantee of its continuance.

The manifestation of new life in the JEWISH NATION is a sign of the coming of JESUS and of the KINGDOM of GOD, because it is a fulfilment of the parable of the FIG TREE. But there is no promise that the TREE will bring forth fruit, for, of the Jewish Nation it is also written:—"Let no fruit grow on thee henceforward for ever." Presently we shall find that the much exalted Fig Tree of Zionism has withered away. Those who spake of "The Tragedy of were speaking better than they knew.

But why should the ideals of faithful zealots be thus destined to crash to the ground in unfulfilment?

Because PALESTINE is the Home of the Brith-ish People, a people in covenant relationship with GOD, not of the "broken-off branch through unbelief." The Holy Land belongs to the Holy People. To Israel, not to the Jew.

The Jew may make his home there with and by the side of his brethren of Israel. But the Union Jack or Union of Jacob (standard of the whole House of Israel) is destined to fly for ever over JERUSALEM; not the ensign of a branch or remnant of the House of Judah only.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

SIR,—The following extract from a leading article, entitled "Testingtide," in one of the London newspapers, may interest your readers:—

"That very curious calculations can be made from the measurements of the Great Pyramid is not to be denied. At present we neither believe nor disbelieve; we wait for evidence which shall be convincing one way or the other.

"Now, if we may credit the statements made at the Queen's Hall on Friday evening, such evidence is very shortly to be forthcoming. Mr. Herbert Garrison, who there delivered a lecture on the Great Pyramid, announced that Mr. Davidson, whom he declared to be 'the greatest living authority on the Pyramid,' has staked his reputation on the happening of some far-reaching world event on the 29th of May.

"That is perfectly definite, and we do not quarrel with the qualification that the enormous importance of this event, whose consequences are to persist for eight years, may not at once be obvious to mankind in general.

"That is quite reasonable, for, casting our minds back to July, 1914, which of us then guessed that the murder of an Austrian Archduke at Serajevo was to plunge the whole world into war, and to bring an American army into Europe?

"The point is that, as in that case, it will be possible subsequently to recognise the significance of the event, and that the date of it is not vague but fixed and definite.

"By the happenings on May 29th the whole Great Pyramid theory stands or falls. If they are such as these modern prophets predict, the most obstinate sceptic must yield to proof so cogent. But if, on the other hand, nothing happens on that day to which we can then, or within a short time, trace the beginning of the eight years' trouble with which we are threatened, then the whole theory fails.

"The offer of such a test, made, it must be remembered, on the initiative of the prophets themselves, is, we believe, unique, and we confess that we look forward with great curiosity to the result."

This article may be fairly regarded as symptomatic of the attitude of the Press as a whole. Interest has forced one newspaper at least to break the general silence.

Yours sincerely,
A. R. NELSON HEAVER.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—Can you tell me the authority for translating the word "unicorn" of our A.V. as "wild-ox" in the R.V., and with a hyphen too? And why, also, did the A.V. ever call it "Unicorn"? Was there ever an animal with only one horn, except a rhinoceros? Until the R.V. came out, I always thought that the unicorn meant a rhinoceros. Then it appears as wild-ox, which has obviously two horns.

In every mention of our Royal Arms we are apt to allude to that surprising heraldic animal as the Bull, the standard of Ephraim, which is very difficult to believe to be represented by a white horse with a horn in its forehead. Mr. Milner speaks of the White Horse being the badge of the Saxon kings, in his Royal House of Britain. The R.V. is responsible for the Wild-ox suggestion, I suppose. But I confess that I find it difficult to explain to cavillers what is the meaning, and where we find Ephraim in the Royal Arms. Please excuse this rather muddled enquiry.—L. P. (Hants).

ANSWER.—Your question is certainly a complicated one, though very interesting, and I will endeavour to answer it to the best of my ability. The unicorn (Lat., unicornis; Greek, μονόκερως having one horn; French, licorne; Italian, alicorno) is a fabulous beast, generally having the head and body of a horse, the hind legs of an antelope, the beard of a goat (sometimes), the tail of a lion (but sometimes a horse's tail), and for its chief feature possessing a long, sharp, twisted horn, situated in the middle of its forehead. Ctesias in his Indica opera gives the earliest description of an unicorn, and states that there were in India white wild asses, famous for their fleetness of foot, having on the forehead a horn a cubit and a half in length, red, white and black in colour; from the horn were made drinking cups, famous as a preventive of poisoning. Aristotle (Hist. anim., ii, 1; De part. anim., iii, 2) mentions two one-horned animals, the oryx (a kind of antelope), and "the so-called Indian ass." Pliny (Nat. Hist. viii, 30; xi, 106) also mentions the oryx, the Indian ass, and an Indian ox as being one-horned, and further says (xvi, 20) that the Monoceros was sometimes called Carcazonon, which might possibly be a form of the Arabic Carcadan, meaning the rhinoceros. Strabo, the famous geographer, says that in India "the horses have a single horn, with heads like those of deer." (lib. xv, i, § 56). Probably the origin of these statements is due to the rhinoceros, which was well known to the ancients, and partly to the narwhal (a name derived from the Gothic, signifying "beaked-whale"). This latter animal is known popularly as the "Sea Unicorn," and belongs to the Dolphin fraternity, as does the well-known Porpoise. The narwhal is an Arctic cetacean, with straight horn or horns developed from one or both of its two teeth. Specimens of its long tusk with its smooth and polished tip. Most likely the idea of the oryx having only one horn may be due to the fact of an animal such as the antelope having been seen with a passing glimpse in silhouette, when obviously the two horns would appear as one, or possibly an animal with one of its horns broken off may have given rise to the popular belief in the unicorn. After a while, when India became better known, and when it was found that the unicorn was unknown there after all, its habitat was changed to Africa.

The mediæval conception of the unicorn as possessing great strength and fierceness may have been due to the fact that in certain passages of the Old Testament (cf. Num. xxiii, 22; Deut. xxxiii, 17; Job xxxix, 9, 10), the Hebrew word re'em, more correctly translated by "wild ox" in the R.V., was translated by μονόκερως in the Greek Version (LXX), and by unicornis or rhinoceros in the Latin Vulgate, although in Deut. xxxiii, 17, it obviously refers to a two-horned animal. This Hebrew word represented a gigantic species of ox, now extinct, the formidable horns of which are alluded to in Psalms xxii, 21; xcii, 10. The characteristics of this animal were its formidable horns, its size and strength, and its untamableness (see especially Job xxxix, 9–12). The late Canon Tristram, F.R.S. (whom I had the privilege of knowing), says that it was "a beast which once roamed freely through the forests of Palestine, but now extinct, 'the Auerochs' of the old Germans, the Urus of Cæsar, Bos primigenius of naturalists." (Natural History of the Bible, pp. 146–150.) Cæsar says that the Urus was nearly as large as an elephant and untamable (B.G. vi, 28).

It has been shown more recently that the Assyrian rimu, from the pictorial representations on the Assyrian sculptures, was a gigantic species of Bos; and it is remarkable that four teeth of an ox similar to the Bos primigenius should have been discovered (says Tristram, Land of Israel, pp. 9–12) in the valley of the Nahr-el-Kalb, in the same neighbourhood in which Tiglath-Pileser I (1120–1100 B.C.) claims to have hunted and killed the rimu "opposite the land of the Hittites, and at the foot of the Lebanon."

The above passage (Deut. xxxiii, 17) obviously refers to a two-horned animal, since the two horns of the re'em are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and the thousands of Manasseh—both growing out of the one head, Joseph (cf. the R.V. here).

In heraldry the unicorn first appears as a single supporter about A.D. 1480 on two gold coins of James III of Scotland, so that the unicorn became firmly established by the end of the fifteenth century. J. A. Smith in "Notes on Melrose Abbey" describes a table dated 1505 on which are sculptured the Royal Arms supported by two unicorns. The Royal Arms are also supported by unicorns on the Great Seals of Scotland from the time of Queen Mary onwards. At the Union, when the unicorn became a supporter of the Royal Arms both of England and Scotland, a Royal crown was added on the head of the unicorn, in addition to the crown with chain and ring round its neck, but this crown was removed after the Hanoverian succession. In England after the Union the unicorn became the left-hand supporter. (See further Encyclopædia Britannica.)

Mr. David Catt, F.R.G.S., has kindly consented to give his lantern lecture on "John Bunyan" on Thursday evening next, May 10th, at 7.30. Mr. Catt has given this lecture to hundreds of audiences, and we feel sure he will receive a hearty welcome from our members and friends.

Very helpful addresses were given last week by the Rev. Commander Roberts, Miss Alexander and Mr. Daniel Farmer.

Mr. Wm. Sleeman is conducting a Bible Class for men each Tuesday evening, from 6 to 7. All men are welcome.

The Rev. Pascoe and Mrs. Goard sailed from Liverpool on the s.s. Montnairn for Canada on April 21st. Mr. and Mrs. Garrison, Mr. Leech, Dr. Sworder and party from Headquarters saw them off at Euston Station. A letter from Mr. Goard written off the coast of Scotland and bearing the Glasgow postmark tell of their well-being and comfort so far. They were due at Montreal on April 30th, where Mr. Goard was booked to speak, going thence to Toronto for a five days' Convention.

We are indebted to Mr. and Mrs. Howse-Crompton and a small committee for a fine piece of organisation at Haywards Heath, Sussex, where on April 23rd the Secretary-General was greeted by a full audience in the largest hall in the town to hear an address on "The Greatest Biblical and Racial Discovery of the Age." The keenest interest was manifested and sustained for two hours. Leading people came from many miles around by train, 'bus and some thirty motor cars. Police aid had to be called in to deal with the parking question. To most of the splendid gathering B.-I. was entirely new. A lantern lecture is proposed as soon as it can be arranged.

The Rev. J. Lumley Davies, Vicar of St. James', Plumstead, promoted a meeting in the beautiful Woolwich Town Hall on April 26th. Major Knowles presided over a deeply interested and warm-hearted company, who listened intently and frequently applauded the addresses by Mr. John Leech, K.C., and the Secretary-General. Mr. Harrison Hill was at the organ. The Chairman was supported by Col. Brazier-Creagh, Mr. Howard Rand, LL.B., the Rev. Lumley Davies and Dr. Sagar. Mr. Garrison promised to give one of his lantern lectures at an early date, and steps are being taken to form a Woolwich Branch of the Federation.

The Secretary-General is to lecture in the Subscription Rooms, Stroud, Gloucestershire, on Thursday, May 17th, at 2.30, on "Our World-Wide Empire," and, at 7.30, on "The Great Pyramid." General W. H. Fasken, C.B., will preside. Seats can be booked at Messrs. Dale and Forty's. Reserved 2s.; Unreserved 1s. Both lectures are fully illustrated by lantern pictures.

The Rev. Hector Macturk, M.A., writes :—

"Dear Mr. Garrison,—We have just returned from the B.-I. Hostel, Abbot's Leigh, at Glastonbury, after a most enjoyable holiday. We were favoured with splendid weather, and were able to get about in every direction. It has been an education. We cannot speak too highly of the comforts we received at Abbot's Leigh, thanks to Miss Jennings and her staff. It is a real Home, and Miss Jennings is an excellent hostess in every way. We are very grateful and shall look forward to our next visit. To have been at Glastonbury on such holy ground under such pleasant circumstances will always be a happy memory and much more. Abbot's Leigh is a great attraction, and should appeal to all British-Israelites. The charges are very moderate, the food excellent, and the fellowship a real help and comfort."

British-Israel sermons will be preached in St. Saviour's Church, Hanley Road, Crouch Hill, to-morrow, May 6th, at 11 and 6.30, by the Rev. W. H. Stuart-Fox, M.A.

We regret to record the death of the following members :— The Hon. Blanche Curzon, sister of the late Marquis Curzon; Miss Short, late Secretary of our Bath Branch; Mrs. Holmes, of Malvern; and Mr. Robert Derbyshire, of our Harrow and Wealdstone Branch, each of whom had laboured faithfully for our Cause. We tender our sympathy to the sorrowing relatives.

"He hath shown thee O man what is good, and what doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly and to love mercy!"

A CHRISTIAN WOMAN, on being asked to sign a petition against the Worn-out Horse Traffic, contemptuously refused, saying, "There are more important things to attend to than that!"

BUT WHAT A MISTAKE! The mistake so many "Christian" people make when the sad problem of animals' wrongs is presented to them!

ARE THERE MORE IMPORTANT THINGS than matters of Justice and Mercy?

IS THERE ANYTHING MORE CHRISTLIKE than Pity for the feeble and oppressed? And dare we ask His mercy for ourselves if we deny it to these humbler fellow-creatures so piteously in our power!

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

WHAT SHALL ISRAEL'S PART BE IN THE LAST GREAT STRUGGLE?—III.

By the Rev. W. Pascoe Goard.

Let us now analyse the last two chapters of Daniel.

Without controversy this is a wonderful passage of Scripture. It deals with the intrigues of kings; with the marching of armies; with the collecting of taxes; and with the outlines of statesmanship and of generalship, among certain nations. It speaks of that Kingdom of God connected with which is the final outshining of the glory of the righteous; the resurrection of the dead; and the millennial wonders of the Kingdom of Our Lord. It fills in the outline of history between in such a way as to guide us in the identification of the parties to the last great struggle.

There are three great factors in the Scripture to which we shall do well to take heed:

(1) The King of the North. (2) The King of the South. (3) "The people of the Holy Covenant."

It will be seen that the outline of history which is here presented begins with the dividing of the Grecian Kingdom into four parts.

Disregarding the Eastern and Western parts of the kingdom of Alexander the Great, the narrative follows the struggles between the Northern and the Southern Kings. At the outset the details are certainly referring to the time of the early struggles between these two parts of the Grecian Empire. Gradually the story goes on until we find that it is telling of the struggle in the last days. On it sweeps to the resurrection of the dead and the final glory of Israel. So we see that we have here the synopsis of the line of world history which refers to these two Powers, etched on a small scale, and stretching over a period of over two thousand years.

Let us take the last stages of this matter.

Introduction.

"Now I am come to make thee understand what shall befall thy people in the latter days: for yet the vision is for many days."

Thus we have the introduction showing that the purpose of the message is to reveal the condition of "thy people in the latter days" in which we now live. The date is assured. We are not simply reading history of ages past. We are reading of the latter days which are now upon us.

The beginning of the narrative.

"Behold there shall stand up yet three kings of Persia." History gives to us the knowledge of the period here named.

Now the message rapidly moves forward over reigns, and long historic periods. Always it records the struggle between the King of the North and the King of the South. Let us remember that these two stand for separate parts of the Babylonian succession of Empires. They are not successive parts, but contemporary parts, which struggle together.

The purpose of the rapid sketching of history seems to be to show that these two parts of the Babylonian succession are to be found opposed to each other—note what is now being said—the two parts of the Babylonian succession of Empires are to be found in opposition to each other in these last days. This includes neither the Eastern part, nor the Western part, but the Northern Kingdom against the Southern, or Egyptian, Kingdom.

This therefore cannot include Britain of the West (even should some who insist upon that which is not so be right; namely, that Britain was once a part of the Roman Empire, rather than a people held in subjection by that Empire, which is a very different matter). The West is not included, and the East is not included. It is the King of the North against the King of the South.

In Chapter xi, up to verse 28, we have a clear-cut struggle between the King of the North versus the King of the South.

THE TIME APPOINTED.—V. 29.

We have now the statement of the progress of the King of the North during the Mohammedan period. This seems to be quite clear by the pollution of the sanctuary, and the establishment of the abomination that maketh desolate. Thus we are swept forward in this outline of history; and by the events of history we should say "the time appointed" was the seventh century A.D., when the first period of time, times and half a time, expired; when the Mohammedan Power seized Palestine, and, closing the Christian Churches, established the Moslem worship, and the Moslem power.

AND AT THE TIME OF THE END.—V. 40.

We are now brought clearly to our own day. The personnel of the conflicting Powers still consist of the King of the North versus the King of the South. Note: These have not changed their identity. They have neither of them been transformed into the people of the Holy Covenant. This seems to be the clear-cut teaching of this great Scripture.

Let us see clearly. We are again to see an advance southward of the King of the North (Russia) and an advance northward of the King of the South.

THE KING OF THE SOUTH.

"And at the time of the end shall the king of the south push at him."

THE KING OF THE NORTH.

"And the king of the north shall come against him like a whirlwind, with chariots, and with horsemen, and with many ships; and he shall enter into the countries and shall overflow and pass over.

"He shall enter also into the glorious land, and many countries shall be overthrown; but these shall escape out of his hand, even Edom and Moab and the chief of the children of Ammon.*

"He shall stretch forth his hand also upon the countries; and the land of Egypt shall not escape.

"But he shall have power over the treasures of gold and of silver; and over all the precious things of Egypt; and the Libyans and Ethiopians shall be at his steps.

"But tidings out of the east and out of the north shall trouble him: therefore he shall go forth with great fury to destroy, and utterly to make away many.

"And he shall plant the tabernacles of his palace between the seas in the glorious holy mountain; yet he shall come to his end, and none shall help him."

"AND AT THAT TIME
SHALL MICHAEL STAND UP,

the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people; and there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to

THAT SAME TIME:

"AND AT THAT TIME thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book.

"And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt.

"And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever."

Here we have a struggle between two parts of the ancient Empires in which the West and the East are not involved. That is to say, it is a Continental struggle; or, perhaps, a phase of a wider struggle; for Daniel confines himself, or the Angel who caused Daniel to understand confines himself, to these two parts of the ancient Empire: namely, the King of the North and the King of the South.

The people of the Holy Covenant come into the matter when Michael, that great Prince, standeth up; and it is by His power alone that the forces of the enemy are brought to nought.

We see terrific struggle for the Continental nations. We see a time of terrible anxiety for our people who do not understand. But while there is for the world its Gethsemane, there is a bursting into light and glory for the people of the Holy Covenant.

Someone is sure to say: Is this fair? If the terror and the struggle has been FOREORDAINED of God; and if the suffering fell by His fiat upon the suffering nations as an unavoidable thing, it might seem to be not fair. But inasmuch as the whole of the turmoil has been self-determined by the contending nations, and as the Lord could not have prevented this short of taking away man's free will, the question does not arise as to the fairness of the Divine administration. There is, alas, much that is unfair in the attitude and in the activity of man towards man, and of nation towards nation. This is the case, and will be, as long as the nations are free to exercise their own will in national and international affairs. But God must not be charged with unfairness because of the unfairness of men and nations.

* This keeps our lines open to Basra, on the Persian Gulf.

This last struggle for power will be the end of experiments in self-government. The end will be the whelming of the earth in ultimate disaster. Thereafter, when the necessity has been demonstrated before men and angels, Our Lord will take the sceptre in hand, and will rule the nations with a rod of iron, "and the nations shall learn war no more."

Let us put this matter into present-day prose. The trouble at present is that four great Western Empires have fallen within the last ten years. With them have fallen four great centralised administrations. They fell suddenly, and passed utterly away.

The Governments which have arisen since that time have been PROVISIONAL. Many organisations have moved to become the heir of the authority so lately possessed and exercised by the administrations of the Empires. This could not well have been avoided. It is like many heirs struggling for the inheritance of an estate when the late possessor has died intestate.

Bolshevik influence is struggling to inherit the executive authority.

The international Jew is a candidate for the inheritance, and is putting up by far the most skilful fight to obtain it.

The Vatican is organised for the contest as a claimant to world authority. It had been hoped, by these and other organisations of men, that all the Empires would have fallen in the late great struggle. When the history of the terrible outbreak is revealed, as it will be in years to come not far distant, it will be found that the struggle was precipitated with that hope. But one Empire has stood, and become stronger. That is to say, Britain; and, behind her, America.

All the forces which desire to inherit the executive authority of the late Empires are seized of the opinion that the Empire of Britain must go, or that such power cannot be securely obtained and exercised. So they "have indignation against the people of the Holy Covenant," Now we turn to Young's Analytical Concordance for the exact meaning of the Holy "Covenant"; and we find the Hebrew word is Berith, or, as it would be written in Bible Hebrew, B'r'th, and means "Covenant, league." It is also the root word of the British name. This may well be applied to what Mr. Churchill characterised as "That smaller but more ancient league of nations, the British Empire." They have indignation against the Holy League, or Covenant; and seek to mass their forces against it, in order to remove the stumbling-block of the British Empire out of the way.

Once that is accomplished, then one Power may hope to be the heir of the executive authority of the world.

This time it will not be tried so much by hurling nation against nation as in the last war; but by setting class against class in each nation. Notice that the Roman Catholics are standing shoulder to shoulder in these days. Notice that there is a tremendous race solidarity among the Jews. Notice that the Communists are bound together by their sinister doctrines of destruction. Can the Anglo-Saxon, and the nations of Western Europe, be so divided that the forces the Powers are mobilising in Europe, in Asia, and in Africa, will be able to overwhelm them by an united onslaught. That is the hope and the aim of such organisation, and no secret is made of it.

This question, at present, is greater in the minds of the organisations named than is the question of RELIGION. It is greater than the question of commerce and industry. It is greater than the question of finance for finance sake. All these things are being subjugated to the one end. What shall that end be? The standing up of Michael, the great Prince, is the answer. Not all the forces of the nations combined will stand when He arises. Not all the powers of the nations and organisations will stand when the fury of Jehovah, the King of Israel, "comes up in" His "face." He will scatter them by the whirlwind of His presence. And Israel His people shall be saved in the day of His power.

In the seventh chapter of Daniel we have more light given to us in regard to this great struggle. This is in the form of a double statement, first, the vision which came to Daniel, and second, the explanation. It may help the reader if we place these in double columns, the vision in the first, the explanation in the second.

The Vision.

"In the first year of Belshazzar king of Babylon Daniel had a dream and visions of his head upon his bed: then he wrote the dream, and told the sum of the matters.

Daniel spake and said, I saw in my vision by night, and, behold, the four winds of the heaven strove upon the great sea.

And four great beasts came up from the sea, diverse one from another.

The first was like a lion, and had eagle's wings: I beheld till the wings thereof were plucked, and it was lifted up from the earth, and made stand upon the feet as a man, and a man's heart was given to it.

And behold another beast, a second, like to a bear, and it raised up itself on one side, and it had three ribs in the mouth of it between the teeth of it: and they said thus unto it, Arise, devour much flesh.

After this I beheld, and lo another, like a leopard, which had upon the back of it four wings of a fowl; the beast had also four heads; and dominion was given to it.

After this I saw in the night visions, and behold a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth: it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with

The Explanation.

"I Daniel was grieved in my spirit in the midst of my body, and the visions of my head troubled me.

I came near unto one of them that stood by, and asked him the truth of all this. So he told me, and made me know the interpretation of the things.

These great beasts, which are four, are four kings, which shall arise out of the earth.

But the saints of the most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever.

Then I would know the truth of the fourth beast, which was diverse from all the others, exceeding dreadful, whose teeth were of iron, and his nails of brass; which devoured, brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with his feet;

And of the ten horns that were in his head, and of the other which came up, and before whom three fell; even of that horn that had eyes, and a mouth that spake very great things, whose look was more stout than his fellows.

I beheld, and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them;

"But tidings out of the east and out of the north shall trouble him: therefore he shall go forth with great fury to destroy, and utterly to make away many.

"And he shall plant the tabernacles of his palace between the seas in the glorious holy mountain; yet he shall come to his end, and none shall help him."

"AND AT THAT TIME
SHALL MICHAEL STAND UP,

the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people; and there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to

THAT SAME TIME:

"AND AT THAT TIME thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book.

"And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt.

"And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever."

Here we have a struggle between two parts of the ancient Empires in which the West and the East are not involved. That is to say, it is a Continental struggle; or, perhaps, a phase of a wider struggle; for Daniel confines himself, or the Angel who caused Daniel to understand confines himself, to these two parts of the ancient Empire: namely, the King of the North and the King of the South.

The people of the Holy Covenant come into the matter when Michael, that great Prince, standeth up; and it is by His power alone that the forces of the enemy are brought to nought.

We see terrific struggle for the Continental nations. We see a time of terrible anxiety for our people who do not understand. But while there is for the world its Gethsemane, there is a bursting into light and glory for the people of the Holy Covenant.

Someone is sure to say: Is this fair? If the terror and the struggle has been FOREORDAINED of God; and if the suffering fell by His fiat upon the suffering nations as an unavoidable thing, it might seem to be not fair. But inasmuch as the whole of the turmoil has been self-determined by the contending nations, and as the Lord could not have prevented this short of taking away man's free will, the question does not arise as to the fairness of the Divine administration. There is, alas, much that is unfair in the attitude and in the activity of man towards man, and of nation towards nation. This is the case, and will be, as long as the nations are free to exercise their own will in national and international affairs. But God must not be charged with unfairness because of the unfairness of men and nations.

* This keeps our lines open to Basra, on the Persian Gulf.

This last struggle for power will be the end of experiments in self-government. The end will be the whelming of the earth in ultimate disaster. Thereafter, when the necessity has been demonstrated before men and angels, Our Lord will take the sceptre in hand, and will rule the nations with a rod of iron, "and the nations shall learn war no more."

Let us put this matter into present-day prose. The trouble at present is that four great Western Empires have fallen within the last ten years. With them have fallen four great centralised administrations. They fell suddenly, and passed utterly away.

The Governments which have arisen since that time have been PROVISIONAL. Many organisations have moved to become the heir of the authority so lately possessed and exercised by the administrations of the Empires. This could not well have been avoided. It is like many heirs struggling for the inheritance of an estate when the late possessor has died intestate.

Bolshevik influence is struggling to inherit the executive authority.

The international Jew is a candidate for the inheritance, and is putting up by far the most skilful fight to obtain it.

The Vatican is organised for the contest as a claimant to world authority. It had been hoped, by these and other organisations of men, that all the Empires would have fallen in the late great struggle. When the history of the terrible outbreak is revealed, as it will be in years to come not far distant, it will be found that the struggle was precipitated with that hope. But one Empire has stood, and become stronger. That is to say, Britain; and, behind her, America.

All the forces which desire to inherit the executive authority of the late Empires are seized of the opinion that the Empire of Britain must go, or that such power cannot be securely obtained and exercised. So they "have indignation against the people of the Holy Covenant," Now we turn to Young's Analytical Concordance for the exact meaning of the Holy "Covenant"; and we find the Hebrew word is Berith, or, as it would be written in Bible Hebrew, B'r'th, and means "Covenant, league." It is also the root word of the British name. This may well be applied to what Mr. Churchill characterised as "That smaller but more ancient league of nations, the British Empire." They have indignation against the Holy League, or Covenant; and seek to mass their forces against it, in order to remove the stumbling-block of the British Empire out of the way.

Once that is accomplished, then one Power may hope to be the heir of the executive authority of the world.

This time it will not be tried so much by hurling nation against nation as in the last war; but by setting class against class in each nation. Notice that the Roman Catholics are standing shoulder to shoulder in these days. Notice that there is a tremendous race solidarity among the Jews. Notice that the Communists are bound together by their sinister doctrines of destruction. Can the Anglo-Saxon, and the nations of Western Europe, be so divided that the forces the Powers are mobilising in Europe, in Asia, and in Africa, will be able to overwhelm them by an united onslaught. That is the hope and the aim of such organisation, and no secret is made of it.

This question, at present, is greater in the minds of the organisations named than is the question of RELIGION. It is greater than the question of commerce and industry. It is greater than the question of finance for finance sake. All these things are being subjugated to the one end. What shall that end be? The standing up of Michael, the great Prince, is the answer. Not all the forces of the nations combined will stand when He arises. Not all the powers of the nations and organisations will stand when the fury of Jehovah, the King of Israel, "comes up in" His "face." He will scatter them by the whirlwind of His presence. And Israel His people shall be saved in the day of His power.

In the seventh chapter of Daniel we have more light given to us in regard to this great struggle. This is in the form of a double statement, first, the vision which came to Daniel, and second, the explanation. It may help the reader if we place these in double columns, the vision in the first, the explanation in the second.

The Vision.

"In the first year of Belshazzar king of Babylon Daniel had a dream and visions of his head upon his bed: then he wrote the dream, and told the sum of the matters.

Daniel spake and said, I saw in my vision by night, and, behold, the four winds of the heaven strove upon the great sea.

And four great beasts came up from the sea, diverse one from another.

The first was like a lion, and had eagle's wings: I beheld till the wings thereof were plucked, and it was lifted up from the earth, and made stand upon the feet as a man, and a man's heart was given to it.

And behold another beast, a second, like to a bear, and it raised up itself on one side, and it had three ribs in the mouth of it between the teeth of it: and they said thus unto it, Arise, devour much flesh.

After this I beheld, and lo another, like a leopard, which had upon the back of it four wings of a fowl; the beast had also four heads; and dominion was given to it.

After this I saw in the night visions, and behold a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth: it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with

The Explanation.

"I Daniel was grieved in my spirit in the midst of my body, and the visions of my head troubled me.

I came near unto one of them that stood by, and asked him the truth of all this. So he told me, and made me know the interpretation of the things.

These great beasts, which are four, are four kings, which shall arise out of the earth.

But the saints of the most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever.

Then I would know the truth of the fourth beast, which was diverse from all the others, exceeding dreadful, whose teeth were of iron, and his nails of brass; which devoured, brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with his feet;

And of the ten horns that were in his head, and of the other which came up, and before whom three fell; even of that horn that had eyes, and a mouth that spake very great things, whose look was more stout than his fellows.

I beheld, and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them;

Until the Ancient of days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the most High; and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom.

the feet of it: and it was diverse from all the beasts that were before it; and it had ten horns.

I considered the horns, and, behold, there came up among them another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots; and, behold, in this horn were eyes like the eyes of man, and a mouth speaking great things.

I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like the pure wool: his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire.

A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him; thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him; the judgment was set, and the books were opened.

I beheld then because of the voice of the great words which the horn spake: I beheld even till the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame.

As concerning the rest of the beasts, they had their dominion taken away: yet their lives were prolonged for a season and time.

I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son

Thus he said, The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be diverse from all kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth, and shall tread it down, and break it in pieces.

And the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings that shall arise: and another shall rise after them; and he shall be diverse from the first, and he shall subdue three kings.

And he shall speak great words against the most High, and shall wear out the saints of the most High, and think to change times and laws; and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time.

But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and to destroy it unto the end."

of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him.

And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed."

THUS THE ATTEMPT TO OBTAIN WORLD RULE BY THE ORGANISATIONS NAMED IS FRUSTRATED, AND THE CONTESTANTS OVERTHROWN.

"AND THE KINGDOM AND DOMINION, AND THE GREATNESS OF THE KINGDOM UNDER THE WHOLE HEAVEN, SHALL BE GIVEN TO THE PEOPLE OF THE SAINTS OF THE MOST HIGH, WHOSE KINGDOM IS AN EVERLASTING KINGDOM, AND ALL DOMINIONS SHALL SERVE AND OBEY HIM.

"HITHERTO IS THE END OF THE MATTER."

THE PASSING OF THE THRONE OF DAVID.—I.

BY THE REV. L. G. A. ROBERTS, COMMANDER R.N.

FROM JERUSALEM TO BRITAIN.

THE twenty-second chapter of Isaiah contains a remarkable prophecy, confirmatory of the transition of the key of the House of David, v. 22. The language used is such that we cannot but appropriate it to what is given us in Rev. iii, 7, viz., to the permanency of the foundation of the Throne of David.

The character of Ahaz, as revealed in 2 Kings xvi, 2 Chron. xxviii, and further in Isaiah vii-ix, should be read before considering Isaiah xxii, which, written in the time of Hezekiah, points us back to "an iniquity which should not be purged till ye die." Read carefully how Ahaz had denied the God of Israel before the Assyrian King, and had an altar made like unto the pattern he saw made at Damascus unto Syrian gods; this altar he had erected in the court of the Lord's House to enquire thereat. This seems to have been set up by Urijah the high priest over against the brasen altar, thus with great contempt did he treat Israel's God. So "the Lord brought Judah low because of Ahaz, King of Israel, for he made Judah naked and transgressed sore against the Lord." "This is that King Ahaz." 2 Chron. xxviii, 19-22, and in v. 23 we have the climax. "Because the gods of the Kings of Syria help them, therefore will I sacrifice unto them, that they may help me. But they were the ruin of him (Ahaz) and of all Israel." It is remarkable how six times we have "the King of Israel" thus put for "the King of Judah." 2 Chron. xxi, 2, etc., etc. There, then, seems to be an intimation to Ahaz, Isaiah vii, 8, that "within three score and five years shall Ephraim be broken that it be not a people." (Comp. Deut. xxxii, 21.) And also that within a very little while "the land that thou abhorrest shall be forsaken of both her kings." So entirely are the lives of the kings of this world in the hands of God Almighty, as also the destiny of Israel, whose privilege hereafter will be to be honoured with the glorious Throne of the House of David for ever.

We shall now see why Shebna, who held the exalted position of being Hezekiah's Grand Vizier, was prophesied against. Isaiah xxii, 15-19. The gradual disinheritance of Shebna is seen in Isaiah xxxvi, 3, and xxxvii, 2, and the place given to Eliakim the son of Hilkiah. The fact is generally admitted by most expositors that Shebna was an alien, un-Hebrew, as his name implies. Probably his interests were anti-patriotic, i.e., both with Egypt and with Babylon (causing Hezekiah's great sin.—Isaiah xxxix). We can but surmise from Isaiah xxii, 15-19, that Shebna had presumed upon his position; lifted with pride, he had endeavoured to erect for himself a sepulchre, an habitation for himself in a rock. What a type we have here of a false servant of Jehovah, who layeth up treasures here for himself and is not faithful to his Master.

There must have been some seriously offensive action on the part of Shebna to bring upon himself such a sentence. "Thus saith the Lord God of Hosts, Go, get thee unto this treasurer, even unto Shebna, which is over the house, and say, What hast thou here? and whom hast thou here, that thou hast hewed thee out a sepulchre here, as he that heweth him out a sepulchre on high, and that graveth an habitation for himself in a rock? Behold, the Lord will carry thee away with a mighty captivity, and will surely cover thee. He will surely violently turn and toss thee like a bull into a large country: there shalt thou die, and there the chariots of thy glory shall be the shame of thy lord's house. And I will drive thee from thy station, and from thy state shall he pull thee down. And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will call my servant Eliakim the son of Hilkiah: and I will clothe him with thy robe, and strengthen him with thy girdle, and I will commit thy government into his hand: and he shall be a father to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and to the house of Judah. And the key of the house of David will I lay upon his shoulder; so he shall open, and none shall shut; and he shall shut, and none shall open. And I will fasten him as a nail in a sure place; and he shall be for a glorious throne to his father's house. And they shall hang upon him all the glory of his father's house, the offspring and the issue, all vessels of small quantity, from the vessels of cups, even to all the vessels of flagons. In that day, saith the Lord of hosts, shall the nail that is fastened in the sure place be removed, and be cut down, and fall; and the burden that was upon it shall be cut off: for the Lord hath spoken it."

Here then we have, we assume, the transplanting of the House of David in consequence of the ruin Ahaz brought upon all Israel. This transplanting is in accordance with God's promise to David, 2 Sam. vii, 10. It is prophesied of in Ezek. xvii, 22-24 and xxi, 25-27. In this last case there are three overturns of the sceptre, as we now know, from Palestine into Ireland, Ireland to Scotland, Scotland to England, where it remains until, as here foretold in Isaiah xxii, 25, it will be removed from Britain back again to Him Whose right it is, Eliakim "He whom God establishes," Hilkiah, "Portion of Jehovah." The allusion is to the establishment by God of His Kingdom set up by the God of Heaven, Dan. ii, 44; but this is a temporary arrangement until Christ comes to reign over His Ancients gloriously in Jerusalem and in Mount Zion, as Isaiah xxiv, 23.

THE SHIFTING OF THE CENTRE OF COMMERCE.—(XXIII.)

Isaiah xxiii. It is very remarkable how this picture of Tyre as the trading centre of the universe has been, by very many writers, looked upon as a forecast of what Britain, Tarshish, would be in the latter days.

Unfortunately, Bible commentators do not see that the land of Israel, being situate upon the Eastern shores of the Levant or Mediterranean, must have given these people an immense liking for the sea. Ethnologists such as Dr. Latham, Ethnology of Europe, p. 137, infers that the Danai originated from the tribe of Dan, and that Israel could not have confined themselves to Palestine, but must have gone westward by sea.

We now know this was the case. The settlement of Palestine, as first stated in Gen. x, 19, had considerably changed by the time Abram had the land promised to him (comp. Gen. xv, 18-21). It had further changed considerably by the expulsion of the Hyksos, or Shepherd Kings, out of Egypt just prior to the Exodus. We have also another insight given us in 1 Chron. vii, 20-24. In the time of Thothmes III, of Egypt, we are told that two of the cities he overthrew in Palestine (long before the Exodus) were called Jacob-El and Joseph-El. Besides this, the Philistines had settled in Palestine from Caphtor, and the Phœnicians had overthrown the Canaanite cities of Tyre and Sidon and formed themselves into a great mercantile people. It is seen from Josephus, Ant. i, vi, 2, that Sidon was built by Sidonius, a son of Canaan: whereas Ant. viii, iii, 1, Tyre was built 240 years before the Temple of Solomon. In the fourth sec. we are informed that Hiram the artificer out of Tyre was by birth of the tribe of Naphtali, on the mother's side (for she was of that tribe); but his father was Ur, of the stock of the Israelites. In 1 Kings vii, 13, it is stated, "And King Solomon sent and fetched Hiram out of Tyre. He was a widow's son of the tribe of Naphtali, and his father was a man of Tyre." In 2 Chron. ii, 14, Hiram is called "the son of a woman of the daughters of Dan, and his father was a man of Tyre." Then we must remember that Solomon, 1 Kings ix, 26, "made a Navy of ships in Ezion-geber .... and Hiram sent in the Navy his servants"; these in x, 22, are said to be Solomon's "Navy of Tharshish with the Navy of Hiram: once in three years came the Navy of Tharshish." Further light may be gathered from the Book of Joshua, where the whole land is subdued by Joshua, but xi, 8, though it mentions Great Zidon, also xix, 28, and in v. 29, "the strong city of Tyre," we never hear of Joshua laying hands upon either. This would surely imply a very strong affinity between Israel and these two. Judges v, 17. Why did Dan abide in ships and Asher continue in his creeks? This shows independence at any rate.

ADDRESS AT KENSINGTON TOWN HALL.

INTERPRETATION AND APPROPRIATION.

BY THE REV. ARTHUR PRITCHARD, M.A., Vicar of Rowington.

THERE are two ways of dealing with a Bible passage, one being interpretation and the other appropriation. Now, the Bible is intended to be food for our souls; and the better our spiritual health, the more we enjoy the food. So when we neglect the Bible, or when we do not spiritually digest it, we are producing a weak state of spiritual health which may end in spiritual death.

But the raw material which we call food needs to be properly cooked for us, alike in the home, the school, and the Church by those who are trained to do this work. If the male cook who wears an apron, a college gown, or a surplice, should bring us the best of food and spoil it in the cooking, "cui bono?" as the Latins say; or, "What good is it?" as we Anglo-Saxons say, the good food-material is both spoilt and wasted.

And this applies not only to those who cook our different foods, but to all of us who have to cook our own food.

Now, the Bible is food-material for our spiritual nature, and it has to be cooked in the proper way, or, to use a better phrase, properly interpreted before it can be properly apprehended. Let us try and realise the difference between interpretation and appropriation. In the first case we aim at, and draw out, the full surface meaning of the passage. In appropriation we use the text or passage by way of analogy or illustration, that is, we use it out and away from its primary meaning, and use it in a secondary sense ; in other words, we spiritualise it.

Personally I have not the privilege of hearing many sermons, and when I do, they are mostly appropriation rather than interpretation. What I mean is, that a subject is chosen by the preacher containing a lot of items maybe, and those items are then hung on to the pegs of some selected text like garments in a wardrobe. I once heard a very good address on "Reconstruction," and the text was, "Behold, I will do a new thing." The preacher never said a word about the context, but simply used the text as a pretext. He appropriated its meaning, applying it to something different from the interpretation, which refers to the blessings that in these last days God will confer on the Houses of Israel and Judah, and through them to the world, "shaping the larger liberty" through their preparatory smaller one.

We are now ready to illustrate this by one of Our Lord's Parables, and I hope we shall find that, like the wax tapers given us to carry in the Catacombs at Rome, it will make plain to the eye what else had been unnoticed or dim.

The Parable is that of Dives and Lazarus recorded in St. Luke xvi, 19-31. Every preacher, in his time, appropriates the spiritual lessons it contains or seems to contain, and probably adds others it was not meant to contain.

The question is, What did Our Lord really mean His hearers to understand by the Parable, and the generations which should have it handed down to them? Nobody has been really able to answer the question until recent times ; but now that the Holy Spirit Who inspired the writers of the Bible is revealing or unveiling the verities they embosom, the full truth is coming out, and so I want YOU to see as I myself see it.

THE HOUSES OF JUDAH AND ISRAEL.

When the Hebrew race split into two unequal parts (Judah and Benjamin occupying South Palestine, and the other Ten Tribes occupying North Palestine), the God of Israel would not let them fight about it, but said, "This thing is from Me."

The fact is that God had some great purposes to be performed in the world. From Judah, through David, was to spring the Messiah, and Judas His betrayer, and also the Judeans, His own tribal people, who when He came to them "received Him not." From Benjamin were to spring the other Apostles and the early Christians, and so the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin were kept together (along with many of the Levites) about a thousand years, until Jesus was born and lived amongst them ; and right on to A.D. 70, when the Benjamites escaped and the Jews were massacred by the million, or scattered over the then known world.

From remnants of the other tribes in Galilee and to the North and East of Palestine, the Saxons or Sons of Isaac were to be produced, and they were to be so trained and disciplined generation after generation, century after century, as ultimately to be made fit for their Creator's use in bringing about a perfect rule of justice and freedom in the earth.

In the meantime they should only half remember their origin or even lose sight of it altogether, as well as their own original name "Israel" (which means God's Ruler), as they gravitated towards the appointed place for their habitation.

The story of their wanderings from Asia through Europe reads so much like a romance that those who do not read it up for themselves think it is a romance ; but there are a growing number of speakers and writers whose words and works on the matter cannot be gainsaid. But apart from books about the Bible, let the Bible alone be studiously read, and particularly the Old Testament, and it will be seen that while Judah was to be rich, prosperous and exclusive in his home in the Holy Land, Israel should be an unprofitable servant, a prodigal son, afar off somewhere, and a poor miserable Lazarus until he got into Abraham's bosom of the Faithful.

That, however, could not be until the Good Shepherd had nationally redeemed the Lost Sheep of the House of Israel, and then received them one by one, by faith, into the New Covenant of His Flesh and Blood. It was in what we might term the interregnum period, between the seeking and the finding of the Lost Sheep or Tribes of Israel (not Judah or Jews, for they were never nationally lost), that Our Lord spoke His Parables, those allegorical representations of something real in life or nature intended to bring truth home to minds ready to receive it.

The Master had just been derided by the leaders amongst the Jews for paying so much attention to the Galileans, who were mostly Benjamites, and so He gave them some home truths beginning with the Parables of Luke xv. He had come to seek and to save these nationally lost "sheep," who wanted to be saved, and not those who considered themselves to be the only "just persons" who felt no need of salvation. He had come also to find the lost "coin" with God's image defaced on it, and to win back the prodigal "son" when he came to himself in the far country. Judah was the older brother who stayed at home, and Ephraim-Israel the younger who wandered abroad. The Father had divided unto them His living, when He said, "This thing (this dividing) is from Me."

It was in 721 or 2 B.C. that "all Israel" of the Northern Kingdom went into slavery into a far country further East than where Armenia now is, and they were degraded by the Assyrians then, as the Prussian descendants of the Assyrians would permanently have degraded the "Belgæ," and ourselves, in the late war, had they been so allowed. Herodotus and other writers, including Esdras of the Apocrypha, tell us that when the Assyrians were weakened, the remnants of the Lost Tribes, with changed names, began to wander ; and other writers follow them through Russia, Roumania, Austria, Germany, and Scandinavia, to the British Isles, thence, in part, to the United States and the British Dominions, all being of the same Hebrew blood, all designated as the younger son, called, for convenience, the "Prodigal Son."

But the Lord came as the Blessed Virgin Mary literally said :—to take Israel His servant by the hand ; and as the honoured priest, Zacharias, said :—to visit and redeem His people Israel ; and the first fruits of the prodigal son-nation in Palestine and in neighbouring regions soon arose and came to their Father, and so did the remnants in these isles of ours, who formed the first Christian National Church, of which we are happily the inheritors and continuers.

JUDAH AND LAZARUS.

Later, Jesus gave the same typical lesson in the Parable of the rich man and Lazarus, which Our Lord doubtless intended to have a National application, like the other Parables of the Kingdom. Individually, poor men are no more fitted for Abraham's Bosom than rich men, and rich men no more fitted for "hell" than poor men. Nationally, Judah's "House," restored to God's favour after the seventy years' captivity in Babylon, were rich in their stewardship of the Holy City, the Temple, the Scriptures, the "Kingdom," and other privileges, clothed, as it were, in purple and fine linen, and faring sumptuously every day. Nationally, Joseph, the younger brother's "House," were divorced from God. They were "lo ammi," that is not God's people, without national glory, wanderers and outcasts, as it were, from their original home, beggars and full of sores, as it were, when they visited it, looking to Judah for the spiritual benefits from which they had been deprived, and sometimes finding appeasement in the philosophical systems of so-called Gentile "dogs," of whom the Parable speaks, which, metaphorically speaking, came and licked their sores.

In the Old Testament the House of Israel is represented as "lost" and "dead," "lost in the land of Assyria" (Isa. xxvii, 13), and "when he offended in Baal he died" (Hos. xiii, 1). But Christ came to seek these lost sheep of the House of Israel, and, in St. Paul's language to the Colossian Israelites, they were the first who "died in Christ." Being dead in Christ, Abraham's testament or covenant of faith began to be operative, and so, metaphorically, they were carried into Abraham's Bosom, for Christ had come to perform the mercy promised to our forefathers and to remember His holy covenant.

He thus redeemed the House of Israel nationally. This is testified by Lazarus, who was the first to die and to be redeemed from death. In the Old Testament, Ephraim-Israel was informed by Jehovah that some day He would give him a new name. That was not fulfilled by Jehovah-Jesus when on earth, unless Lazarus (short for Eleazar, with its suggestive meaning, "Helped of God") is a fulfilment. Dr. Watts' hymn, "O God, our help," was declared by John Bright to be the best in our language; and it was also Lord Oxford and Asquith's favourite hymn. When we British-Israelites nationally realise that Jesus called us "Lazarus," or "Helped of God," thus giving us a new name, for the time being, after so many centuries of national helplessness, perhaps Dr. Watts' paraphrase of the oldest Psalm in the world—Psalm xc—"A Prayer of Moses, the man of God"—will become an ever-increasing delight.

So Lazarus was the first to die, the whereabouts of his body being "lost" to the world; but because he was uniquely so named there was hope for him even in and after his national death.

But the other also died, called by commentators Dives (the Latin for rich), though we interpreters of Luke xvi, realising the identity of the unrighteous steward and of the unfaithful steward in that chapter, had better call him Judah, which is obviously his real name, the whereabouts of his sepultured body being known.

When did Judah nationally die? Surely at the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus A.D. 70, when he was symbolically "in hell," being in anguish, the anguish of the curse of God, which the Jerusalem Jews brought upon themselves when they, and not the Galileans, shouted before Pilate, "His blood be upon us and our children." In the words of St. Paul, "Wrath came upon them to the uttermost." Then Judah appeals to "Father Abraham" (no Gentile would have done this), but the answer is, "Son remember," thou didst not make use of the opportunities which thou hadst, so thou hast lost them. Israel is comforted, thou, Judah, art in anguish.

As Isaiah foresaw when he said, "Comfort ye, comfort ye, My people (Israel not Judah), saith your God," and as the Blessed Virgin said, in the Magnificat, "He hath filled the hungry (Lazarus or the Galileans) with good things, and the rich (Dives the Jew) He hath sent empty away." "God hath holpen or taken by the hand His servant Israel," certainly not the Jew.

But there is a great gulf fixed between Lazarus and Judah. What is it but the gulf of obstinate unbelief? I read the Jewish Chronicle very often, and I see that the paper derides Christians for accepting the teachings and writings of the heretic Hebrews at the beginning of the Christian era. Blindness or hardness is the word St. Paul uses for such unbelief; and, nationally, the Jews will remain in it until Our Lord convinces them with His presence at the real battle of Armageddon so many students of Prophecy, in the Bible and in the Great Pyramid expect within this present decade.

There is no time or need to deal with other details of the Parable, some of which cannot be well applied, either by appropriators or interpreters; but in the Old Testament the going down into captivity is called "descending into hell." This can be read in Isa. xiv, 14, and in verse 13 the honourable men are said to be "dried up with thirst," the very symbology used by Our Lord in the Parable. The Master's audiences knew their Old Testament better than we do, and the references wouldn't be lost on them as they have been so long lost on us.

Notice that the rich man told Abraham that he had five brothers. "Why not any other number," Douglas Onslow asks in his logical book, "The Kingdom of Our Lord"—a book of enlightenment on most of Our Lord's Parables. Is it the usual number of brethren possessed by rich, self-indulgent men? Now, if the rich man represents Judah, as appears probable, the answer is plain. Judah's mother, Leah, had six sons, Judah therefore necessarily had five brethren. Then the rich man or Judah wanted a message sent to the brothers from the dead, showing, by the way, that God's disciplinary punishment or Saviour-Judgment was having a reformatory effect as it is always designed to do. "They have Moses and the prophets, and they must not expect more," was, in effect, the answer. Certainly the Jews HAD more when Jesus Himself arose from the dead, but they would not be persuaded to believe in Him Who not only raised the dead, but Who raised Himself from the dead.

And the Jews amongst us to-day (multitudes of whom have lost faith in the Old Testament) have more, for they see, in actual possession of all the land promised to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, the British-Israel people, formerly Ezekiel's great army of dry bones, which, having come out of the graves of their oblivion, have been Divinely re-assembled, re-organised, re-inbreathed, re-endued, and re-vivified, and yet they do not recognise us as their long-lost half-brother Joseph, but keep on praying (such of them who still pray) in their synagogues for our recovery and reappearance. And, if perchance, some enlightened doorkeeper ever interrupts their praying by urging that their prayers had already been answered, their reply would be much the same as that given to Rhoda under analogous circumstances: "Thou art mad."

Thus it is that the Master's intimation is sadly true: "If they hear not Moses and the Prophets, neither will they be persuaded if one rise from the dead," and disclosing his identity, say to them "I am Joseph your brother," who having been deemed "dead" is very much alive again, and having been considered "lost" is gloriously found.

The meaning is that if they, and such as they, whether Jews or Gentiles, do not believe in "God's Word Written," neither will they be persuaded by God's Word declared, or evidenced in fulfilment, for they will call it chance, fortuity, coincidence, or by some other term dishonouring to the God of Truth, against Whom, knowingly, or unknowingly, their unbelief is really directed.

THE SIN OF UNBELIEF.

Let me say, in conclusion, that the sin of unbelief is the greatest of all sins against God, whether in Jews, Israelites, or Gentiles, and certainly it is not likely to decrease, as apparently it is to be the last peal to call down the judgments of God on this generation, for when Christ comes to it, belief and confidence (as He has forewarned us) will be at a discount.

Moses and the Prophets all pointed to Christ. The Old Testament pointed to the New. God's promises to His chosen People of the Ten Tribes are being fulfilled before our very eyes to the Celto-Saxon Race, and what is written and being revealed are that we may believe that Jesus, the Son of God, is the Redeemer of Israel, and the Saviour of the world, and that believing in Him, individuals and nations, and especially the Israel-British Nation, may have fullness of life in His Name.

Oh, that our leaders in Church, in Parliament, and in Industry, might realise who they and we really are—LAZARUS of the Parable, embosomed in the Abrahamic Covenant, "Helped of God," the secret of Britain's greatness, her security from invasion, and her victory in war—then, when confronted with "the unruly wills and affections of sinful men" in the forthcoming social, political and economic upheaval prophesied of as "Jacob's Trouble," they would cease to act any longer on their own initiative, and their hearts and voices would be uplifted in supplication to the God of our forefathers, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; for only so have they and we a right to expect that in place of storm there may be calm, in place of strife industrial peace, in place of restlessness His Rest.

"O God, our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Be Thou our guard while troubles last,
And our eternal home."

ADDRESS AT KENSINGTON TOWN HALL.

BY THE REV. H. A. JAMES.

TUESDAY, 17TH APRIL, 1928.

I AM a new-comer to the ranks of British-Israel. Although I come from Manchester, I am not a native of Manchester; I am a native of Wales. I am a descendant of the ancient Cymri, who passed out of Asia northwards on the commencement of their long trek to this country, and in Wales we still call ourselves by that name—Cymri.

During the War I was serving in France as a chaplain, and during those dreadful days of March, 1918, I happened to be with the 5th Army, that bore the brunt of the first overwhelming attack by the Germans. After about a fortnight of a very trying time in that hasty retreat of ours towards Amiens, I slept for the first time for some days on the floor of a little French cottage. In the morning I had a little conversation with the good lady of the house. She was very pleased with life indeed. She told me that the War was soon going to be over, because we were retreating. She did not care who won the War; she only wanted to have it finished and done with. Shortly afterwards, in speaking to an officer acquaintance of mine, I mentioned this incident to him, and asked him what he thought about it. I was not a British-Israelite then, and knew nothing about it, but I told him I could not help thinking that somehow or other we would muddle through as we generally had done. He said, "I do not think, I know we are going to get through, because we are told so in the Bible: 'No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper.'"

I did not quite understand him, not knowing anything about British-Israel at that time, but I have often thought of it since, and what a tremendous waste of opportunity it was for me personally at that time not to have known British-Israel Truth. What a lot of anxiety I might have saved myself and others; what a number of converts to the Truth I might have made if I had known it then, in the light of after facts. It is very humiliating to think I have wasted so many years of my life in ignorance of these great Truths.

I want to speak very briefly upon the Book of Nehemiah. As you know, the Book of Nehemiah is a very fascinating book. It contains a very wonderful and inspiring story of Nehemiah and his faithful few, who, in face of the greatest difficulties, dangers and opposition, rebuilt the wall of Jerusalem. You will remember that Nehemiah was very saddened by the reports which came to him in Babylon of the state of things which existed in Jerusalem, and his unaccustomed sadness was noted by the king, Artaxerxes, who asked him the cause; and when it was explained to him, Nehemiah was given permission to return to Jerusalem for a time, in order to rebuild the wall of the city. So he departed for Jerusalem, armed with letters to the governors beyond the river, and the keeper of the king's forests; the former to ask those governors to assist him on his way, and the latter that he might be provided with timber from the forests for the gates and walls of the city.

I am going to use this story as a sort of allegory of the British-Israel position in these days. Immediately Nehemiah arrived in Jerusalem, he encountered an atmosphere of opposition. When Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant, the Ammonite, heard it, "it grieved them to think that there was come a man to seek the welfare of the children of Israel." There was this atmosphere of opposition the moment he arrived. Nehemiah's first task was to make a sort of tour of inspection of the city, and he found out the magnitude of the task before him; then he collected together the Jews, nobles, priests and the workmen, and he managed to make them ashamed of the condition of things which they had allowed to exist in Jerusalem, and to fire them with a little enthusiasm for the work. So the work was started; but it was not to be carried out without a great deal of opposition. This opposition was on the part of Sanballat the Horonite, Tobiah the Ammonite, and Geshem the Arabian. These three represented that element which were opposed to the building of the wall of Jerusalem. They attempted to pour scorn and derision on the work, and when they found the work was actually started, they began to belittle it.

> "Sanballat spake before his brethren and the army of Samaria, and said, What do these feeble Jews? Will they fortify themselves? Will they sacrifice? Will they make an end in a day? Will they revive the stones out of the heaps of rubbish which are burned?" (Nehemiah iv, 2.)

That was the first attack—belittling the materials with which the wall was going to be built.

I said I was going to use the story as a sort of allegory of the British-Israel position. Is not that the first attack made upon British-Israel Truth, belittling the material with which we work? The modernist and the higher critic says: "What are you building with? What are your materials?" We say, "The ancient narratives of the Bible." They say, "Myths, stories, legends, nice for children, but not for grown-up people. The prophecies of the Old Testament are very fine, glorious ideas, but quite impossible. The promises of God to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and to their seed for ever, well-intentioned, but circumstances have so altered that it is impossible for God to keep those promises!" That is what they say. Just imagine for a moment what a conception of God, controlled and limited by circumstances.

Then the second attack made upon Nehemiah was by Tobiah the Ammonite. This was upon the nature of the structure as far as it has progressed up to that time. Third verse of the 4th chapter:

> "Even that which they build, if a fox go up, he shall even break down their stone wall."

Do not we British-Israelites have to face exactly the same sort of criticism in these days, belittling the structure already erected? We are told it is utter nonsense, a ridiculous position, indefensible, and so forth; all kinds of names are applied to us, belittling the structure as far as it has progressed.

These remarks of Sanballat and Tobiah were intended to discourage the work, but it failed, because we read that the people had a mind to work. Just think of it—they had a mind to work. And is not that the position of British-Israelites to-day? Is there a single British-Israelite who has not a mind to work, as soon as he becomes enthused with British-Israel ideas? As soon as one has learned these great Truths, one immediately wants everyone to know about them. You immediately become a worker.

Then following this, as the wall went on and was built towards completion, the opposition of the enemies of Nehemiah became more and more active, and it developed into an actual physical and violent attack on those carrying on the work. We have a very beautiful picture, and it is worth studying, of these workmen as they built the wall. 9th verse, 4th chapter:

> "Nevertheless, we made our prayer unto our God, and set a watch against them day and night, because of them."

They first of all prayed, and then set a watch. Following that we have a wonderful picture of these workmen, who were armed with swords in one hand, and the tools of their work in the other, ready at any moment not only to carry on the work, but also to repel any physical attacks made upon them, ready for any eventuality.

I remember reading a story of a meeting of the senators of the U.S.A. which took place many years ago. In the middle of the meeting there was a total eclipse of the sun. It was in the days when less was known about these things than is known now, and these senators had had no warning of what was coming, and, when it came, many of them were plunged into utter terror and panic, and some of them shrieked that the end of the world was coming. You see, they were making the same old mistake, that Our Lord's prophecies were referring to the end of the world, instead of the end of the age. They said the end of the world is coming. But one of the senators called for candles to be brought in, so that, at least, the King when He came might find them working.

I think with that picture in our minds, and the picture of these workmen of Nehemiah as they went on with that glorious work of building the walls, we can realise exactly the position which we ought to be taking up, the nature of our own work at this time. The day and the hour we cannot tell when the King shall come. We have just been told of some of the signs, that the coming of the King is near, and it is our duty to pray and to work and to watch and to be prepared; to follow the example of those wonderful workmen of Nehemiah, so that we may be ready for that time, when our swords and weapons of war shall be finally beaten into the implements of peace.

THE confusion in the interpretation of prophecy which is the inevitable result of regarding the terms "Israel" and "Jew" as being synonymous, is well illustrated from the following recent newspaper report from PALESTINE:—

"A new Messiah, who will become King of the Jewish Nation, and whose appearance will put to an end the next world war, is predicted by the orthodox Jews of Palestine.

"They declare that He will be a super-man, and that His Kingdom will be a great centre from which will radiate peace and brotherhood extending throughout the whole world.

Digitized by Google

"The revelation of the Messiah will be preceded by the rebuilding of the TEMPLE, they say, adding that this will cause the enmity of many nations, especially those of the Moslem world.

"The Last World War will focus itself in PALESTINE, and at the critical moment, when all appears lost, the Messiah, coming from Heaven, will gain a decisive victory, according to the predictions. It is said that He will be proclaimed King, the first King of the Jews for twenty centuries.

"Of the 150,000 Jews in PALESTINE (says a British United Press, Jerusalem, message) most of whom have returned to the country since the War, at least 50,000 are expecting developments to occur rapidly until at an unexpected moment the Messiah will be revealed.

"'The Jews are praying every day for the coming of the Messiah,' declared the President of the Town Council of Peta Tikva, the largest Jewish agricultural colony in Palestine.

"'The Jews believe that a Messiah will come some time, who will bring good not only to the Jews but to the whole world,' remarked Mr. D. Smithson, who was decorated for distinguished service in PALESTINE during the War. 'This idea is spreading throughout the country,' he continued.

"The ideal of the restoration of the TEMPLE just prior to the coming of the Messiah is soon to be realised, the Jews hope. Ever since the destruction of their Temple in A.D. 70 by the ROMAN EMPEROR TITUS, the Jews here have gathered daily at the famous 'wailing' wall in JERUSALEM, praying for the REBUILDING OF THE TEMPLE.

"The invasion of the Moslems in the seventh century resulted in the erection of the MOSQUE of OMAR. 'The Mosque of Omar will be torn down soon and a wonderful TEMPLE like Solomon's shall be built there,' exclaimed a rabbi happily as he looked out over the Temple area from the windows of his synagogue.

"Rumours are widespread that the specified parts of the Temple have already been prepared in various countries, ready to be transported to PALESTINE, and assembled at a moment's notice.

"The circumstances making possible a war in PALESTINE will be the withdrawal of the British administration, or so it is thought. The secretary of one of the synagogues here says, 'The Jews have been waiting 2,000 years for Britain's help, but the British will not always remain here. A certain rabbi making a prophecy 700 years ago foretold that the British would come into PALESTINE in 1916, but that they would leave before the expiration of a quarter of a century. This has yet to be fulfilled.

"'Then,' the rabbi said, 'there will be a big war here.

THE LAST WORLD WAR

will occur in PALESTINE. The kings of the earth shall fight against the Jews in PALESTINE, but the Messiah will come and cause the enemy to be defeated.

"'The Messiah will be recognised as the great world leader, the law of the LORD shall flow out of ZION, and nations will learn of war no more.'"

There is much of significance in this version of scriptural prophecy in spite of its garbled nature, and the impossibility of reconciling its outline with the chronology of events as indicated in the Great Pyramid.

The testimony as a whole may be rated at the same value as that of any other perverted version of the truth. It would be strange indeed, if after having waited for 2,000 years for the help of Brith-ain (Land of the Covenant and home of the Covenant People of God) the Jews were to make no further headway until the chosen people had withdrawn their aid and support! That is the point where this strange theory chiefly breaks down.

Incidentally, there is more than a hint contained in this statement, of the possibility that, if, by the irony of fate Britain should not fulfil the desired programme and withdraw within the prophesied twenty-five years, a line of action might have to be adopted that would spell an attempt to force the issue.

Then would the prophecy of Ezekiel be fulfilled, as it is written:—"Son of man, thy brethren. even thy brethren the men of thy kindred, and are they unto whom the inhabitants of JERUSALEM have said, 'Get you far from the LORD: unto us is this LAND given in possession.'"

This is exactly the force of Zionist ambition to-day. Zionism claims that Palestine is the home of the Jewish people exclusively.

But now note the reply to this misguided declaration:—"Therefore say, thus saith the LORD GOD: Although I have cast them (i.e., the Israel People) far off [10] among the heathen (i.e., Gentiles), and although I have scattered them among the countries,[11] yet I will be as a little sanctuary in the countries where they shall come."

Then, turning away from the Jews of Jerusalem, the prophet addresses the Israel People in terms of consolation and assurance:—"Therefore say, thus saith the LORD; I will even gather you (i.e., Israel) from the People (i.e., from dwelling in all parts of the world save the old homeland of the Promised Land), and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered, and I will give you (Israel, not the Jew)

THE LAND OF ISRAEL."

Turning back to the Jew, the prophet continues:—"And they (i.e., the Israel or Brith-ish People) shall come thither, and they shall take away all the detestable things thereof and all the abominations thereof from thence.

"And I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within them; and I will take the stony heart out of their flesh, and give them an heart of flesh; That they may walk in My

[9] Could any description be more definite than this: "All the House of Israel wholly"? This in contrast to the Jews of Jerusalem who are but a remnant of one of the tribes of Israel only. To-day, all the House of Israel wholly are found ranged under the Union Jack. The Union of Jacob is a sign that all the sons of Jacob have been united in the Isles of the West. There could be no Union of Jacob if Judah one of the sons was not included. Judah is officially included in this union, a fact confirmed by the presence of the Judah heraldry (the Lion of Scotland) in our national arms. Only a remnant of Judah, the Jews, remain outside. These are the "broken-off branch through unbelief." But they can be grafted in again. By accepting Christ, individually or nationally, they can enter into the Union of Jacob and finally into the coming Kingdom.

statutes and keep My ordinances, and do them : and they shall be MY PEOPLE and I will be their GOD."

This latter verse unmistakably links up the people here addressed with those addressed in the new covenant of Jer. xxxi, 33 to 37, and thus confirms the double line of interpretation to Ezekiel xi. Note the significance of the fact that the House of Israel and the House of Judah are mentioned in the preamble of Jer. xxxi, verse 31, but the House of Israel alone is named in the first of the clauses of the new covenant which follows ! A sinister commentary this on Jeremiah xix, where Judah and Jerusalem are likened to a potter's earthen bottle which, once broken, cannot be made whole again, whereas the House of Israel are likened to potter's clay,[12] which in the hand of the Potter, though marred, can be once more made good.

These prophecies can only be fully appreciated when we see the modern attempts to force fulfilment into a Jewish rather than an Israel outline. Any compromise[13] will do so long as some real attempt is made to satisfy the necessary conditions.

Thus on March 24th, the daily Press informs us :—" Professor Patrick Geddes, the eminent philosopher and planner of towns, who has designed one of the greatest universities that the world has yet seen, yesterday revealed in an exclusive interview with a special Daily Express representative, how one of the most significant prophecies is now being translated into actual fact in JERUSALEM.

" It is, indeed, the modern equivalent to the rebuilding of the TEMPLE in the form of a HEBREW UNIVERSITY, and a further stepping-stone towards what is fondly hoped to be in certain circles, Quoting Isaiah ii, 2, the representative writes :—" This scriptural prophecy of ancient times is now being realised in PALESTINE, where Professor Patrick Geddes has designed one of the greatest Universities in the world, which is considered to be the modern equivalent of the rebuilding of Solomon's Temple.

THE NEW JERUSALEM."

" One of the many interesting features associated with this new Palace of Wisdom in the HOLY LAND is the fact that Professor Geddes, a Scotsman,[14] was chosen by the Zionist leaders to build it for them.

" The Hebrew University, as it is named, stands on the top of MOUNT SCOPUS and overlooking the Kedron Valley.

" When the foundation stone was laid by Dr. Weizmann in 1918 the site was surrounded by our own troops and guns, while MOUNT EPHRAIM, SAMARIA and CARMEL were still being held by the enemy.

" This, however, did not prevent the stone from being laid, and Lord Allenby, who was present at the time, regarded the ceremony as truly remarkable in the circumstances.

" When the first section of the University was opened in 1925, Lord Balfour spoke of it as being built on the loftiest plane of human endeavour. . . . .

" A pleasing feature of the opening ceremony was that the delegates from all the Scottish Universities delivered their addresses in Hebrew.

" The grand dome of the University has been designed so that it will be in complete harmony with the characteristic domes of the HOLY SEPULCHRE and the so-called mosque of OMAR, better known as

and which is practically the site of the ancient TEMPLE."

Few of us, however, are likely to feel satisfied with this claim for a fulfilment of Isa. ii, 2. The building of a University may satisfy the Zionists as being the modern equivalent to rebuilding the TEMPLE. It may, indeed, be a project based upon the loftiest plane of human endeavour.

But what of it ? What of human plans and man's endeavour ? Except the Lord build the House they labour in vain that build it. It is evident that the plan to make the Land of Palestine a national home (exclusively) for the Jews has not the inspiration or authority of GOD behind it.

When the return to the LAND of ISRAEL does take place, it will be representative of all of God's Brith-ish People. They will come " one of a city, two of a family."[15] The Jewish People can participate in this return, but not monopolise it.

There will be room for all. For the larger PALESTINE of Genesis xv, 18, known as THE PROMISED LAND, embraces an area of over three million square miles.

And under the predicted climatic changes (with JERUSALEM, natural centre of the railway systems of the world, now linked to the MEDITERRANEAN as a flourishing seaport) life in this " land fit for heroes to live in " will be pleasant indeed.

It is almost with a sigh of relief that, in conclusion, we turn to the Rt. Hon. Josiah C. Wedgwood's latest book, entitled " THE SEVENTH DOMINION."

" The ' Seventh Dominion ' is Palestine," writes a Times reviewer, " which the author would like to see emerge from her chrysalis-stage of mandatory experimentalism and Zionism exclusiveness and become, in conjunction with Transjordan (which seemingly has drifted away into a tutored independence while this book was in the press) a full-fledged member of the BRITISH COMMONWEALTH.

" Colonel Wedgwood makes a spirited attack upon the cautious conservatism of the present administration of PALESTINE. He blames it for having abdicated many of the functions of Government into the hands of Zionists and for labouring, as it were, to keep the ring while the Zionists wrestle therein with their problems, without official assistance or advice.

" He blames the Zionists for having constructed an imperium in impero and for keeping themselves too much to themselves in their racial exclusiveness, and trounces those who, in the supposed interests of keeping the peace between jealous creeds, have imposed a communal municipal franchise upon Jerusalem from which British subjects have been carefully excluded.

" Amid a wealth of comparisons and analogies drawn from experience in India and Macedonia, Cyprus and Ceylon, [13] " Then alone will the expectation of the Jewish Nation be fulfilled, for the Messiah whom they desire, and for whose advent they are preparing ; it is no other than Israel himself—the Jewish People—whose reign over all the peoples of the world will be the coming of the Messiah."—Le Juif seloń de Talmud, p. 101.

[14] This is interesting when it is realised that Scotland has the heraldry of the Lion of the Tribe of Judah. The Jew, moreover, is often styled " the wandering Jew." Scots also claim to be the wanderer's race. Both are descendants of Judah. Of these people the Scriptures say : " They shall be wanderers among the nations." See Hos. ix, 17. It is, indeed, a proverb that wherever you go all over the world even in the most unlikely places, you always find the Scot and the Jew.

South Russia and South Africa, the author makes breezy suggestions full of good sense. Colonel Wedgwood, however, who makes no apology for his Imperial outlook, prefers to rely upon an intelligent administration by good men from GREAT BRITAIN to effect the beginning of his suggested reforms."

Yes! An intelligent administration by good men from the Great Brith-ain (or GREAT LAND of the COVENANT) is best fitted to guide the destinies of the SEVENTH DOMINION—which, after all, is the original Land of the Covenant, the ancient Homeland of the Brith-ish or Covenant Man Race—to its exalted position as reconstituted centre of Israel dominion and glory in the earth.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

DEAR SIR,—Is it possible to have more light thrown upon the number 153 and its meaning, especially from the context where the number is first mentioned (John xxi, 11), from which I gather it is assumed to represent "the elect"?

Much interesting detail concerning this number is given in No. 3 "Talks on the Great Pyramid," by D. Davidson, page 7, and also in THE NATIONAL MESSAGE of April 14th, 1928, page 230.

I see it recorded also "that the division on the Reform of the Prayer Book was defeated by 241 to 88 votes, a difference of 153."

The Morning Post of April 28th gives 153 as the number of votes against the Revised Prayer Book Measure in the Church Assembly.

From this latter it would seem that the number possesses a "positive" value, if it may be so described, while in the former its value would seem to be more of a "displacement" nature.

So also with the various occasions quoted by Mr. Davidson, it seems to have these two values, and to be a number not only related to dates but also to men and their doings.

Possibly some of your readers may be able to give some more useful information on this subject.

I am, Sir, yours faithfully,

A. G. COPELAND.

To the Editor of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

29TH MAY, 1928.

SIR,—There is a baffling sequence of error in the reporting of everything relating to the Pyramid's prophecy concerning this date. My Royal Albert Hall address in March of last year was wrongly reported throughout the world as referring to war beginning on 29th May, 1928. I know of no single Pyramid interpreter who, in the press or from the platform, has had the audacity to make an assertion of this nature. Nevertheless, this is the assertion that is repeatedly being reported.

Again, in October of last year, Mr. Basil Stewart was reported as having made a similar assertion, although no such statement was made by him. At the same time Mr. Stewart was wrongly reported as giving the date 28th May, 1928, when the date he mentioned for Tribulation beginning was 29th May, 1928. This mistake was obviously due to a printer's error. But this error has been copied by journals throughout the whole world, together with the wrong report as to a prediction of war beginning on this date. These errors one could understand. But when my own draughtsman—who knows my own work intimately—inadvertently makes the same error in date (28th May for 29th May) on my Plate in "N.M. & B.," p. 245; when I, in checking, fail to see the error; and when you, Mr. Editor, and the Rev. Commander Roberts, next quote ("N.M. & B.," pp. 257 and 259) the error from the Plate, instead of the true date from the text accompanying the Plate, I feel compelled to direct attention to the peculiar sequence of "coincidence" by which the error has been perpetuated.

The true date by the Pyramid is late afternoon or evening of 29th May. This may mean that we cannot know the circumstances beginning Tribulation until 30th May, as we did not know we were at war with Germany until the morning of 5th August, 1914. The critical date was the 4th August, on the Tuesday following Bank Holiday Monday. The 29th May, 1928, again falls on Tuesday after Bank Holiday Monday (Whit-Monday). Now it is generally stated that we were at war with Germany on 4th August, 1914, whereas the British Ultimatum to Germany did not expire until midnight ending 4th August. We were not, therefore, at war until early morning of 5th August, and it is early morning of 5th August, 1914, that is given by the Pyramid.

Yours, etc.,

D. DAVIDSON.

BRANCH ACTIVITIES.

SHEFFIELD reports that Wednesday, April 18th, was another red-letter day, when Mr. David Davidson gave a lecture on "The Great Pyramid," during which he stated "I took up the study of the Pyramid in order to smash the idea of its Divine origin—I being at the time an agnostic—but instead of doing any smashing, the study has lifted me up into the pulpit." This was the first time in his career that Mr. Davidson lectured from a pulpit. His audience numbered over 800.

On the same date two excellent lectures were given in the Dover Institute, in the afternoon by Canon Springett of Canterbury, who gave "Fresh Facts on British History" that he had been gathering. Canon Watkins took the chair, supported by Rev. H. B. S. Simeon and Lt.-Col. Smythe, the latter of whom lectured in the evening on "The Early Church in Britain," giving the records of Joseph of Arimathea's journey into Britain, the conversion of the Druids, the traditions of St. Paul's visit, and his friendship with the British Royal Family in Rome, and the ancient Councils of the Church which testify to the British being the first to accept Christianity nationally.

Mr. J. H. Tench addressed a meeting at Ilkley on April 19th, and was greatly appreciated. He spoke on "The Great Pyramid." It was voted unanimously that the meetings be continued monthly throughout the summer.

A new Branch is now in process of formation at Northampton as the result of a series of lectures recently given there by the Rev. T. H. Whitehouse, who again visited the town and gave two further lectures on April 13th. Still others are being planned. Friends of our Cause in that district are asked to send names and addresses to the Secretary, Mr. D. Y. Young, 7, Cambridge Street, Northampton.

Some of our friends in the town of Wellingborough are also preparing to form a Branch. Mr. Whitehouse gave two lectures there on April 18th, which aroused great interest, and it is earnestly desired that more shall follow. All who are at all interested are asked to send names to Mr. John F. Sharman, 17, Mill Road, Wellingborough, Northants.

The prospects of a vigorous Branch at Newark (Notts) are very hopeful. Our teaching has taken deep root there since the Midlands Commissioner's visit some weeks ago. Two more meetings were held on April 23rd, again arranged by the skill and enterprise of Mrs. Claude Lowe, to whom we are deeply indebted. At both meetings the chair was taken by the Rev. Canon Hunt, M.A., and the lectures were given by the Rev. T. H. Whitehouse, and were listened to with rapt attention by excellent audiences. We earnestly desire that everyone interested will send name and address to Mrs. Claude Lowe, 23, The Park, Newark.

Our new venture at Louth (Lincs) was rewarded with great success. Four meetings, covering two days, April 24th and 25th, were addressed by the Rev. T. H. Whitehouse, and the keenest interest was displayed. Parties came in from the surrounding villages, and many clergy were present. Great credit must be accorded to the organisers, Miss Sharpley and Miss Tenney, for their energy and generosity. All B.-I. believers in the district please rally up for the next step, and send name, etc., to Miss M. Sharpley, "Fenton," High Holme Road, Louth. Don't fail.

Our North London Commissioner, the Rev. Joseph Gay, A.T.S., visited Dublin, April 18th to 20th, and delivered six lectures for the South Irish Branch in the Diocesan Hall to large and enthusiastic audiences. They followed his incisive reasoning with the deepest interest and confirmed the truth he uttered with continued applause. Clergy of the Church of Ireland supported the platform and occupied the chair on several occasions. One of the leading Presbyterian ministers of the city also presided at one of the evening meetings. Mr. Gay had the opportunity of meeting some of his brother ministers in private conference and was very sympathetically received. The Secretary, Mrs. Page Shine, is to be congratulated upon the success of this series of meetings, the interest being demonstrated by a considerable number joining the Branch. This Dublin Branch is very much alive. They possess special offices in the centre of the city, and from them radiates a continual stream of British-Israel influence. It was unfortunate that Mr. Gay could not accept the very pressing invitation which was extended to him to remain over the Sunday and preach in one of the leading Presbyterian churches. He has promised to do so if he should revisit Dublin on some future occasion. He wishes us to state that he would be always ready to place his services at the disposal of any minister or clergyman on the Sunday to deliver our glorious Message, "The Gospel of the Kingdom."

On the Monday prior to his departure for Dublin, Mr. Gay lectured at the St. Gabriel's Hall, Cricklewood, but, owing doubtless to the May meetings held at the Kensington Town Hall, there was only a fair attendance.

Returning from Ireland on the Saturday, Mr. Gay visited the West Hendon Brotherhood on the Sunday afternoon following, and received a very warm reception from the brothers who, such was their favourable hearing, promised to promote a lecture on some week evening in the near future. It is more than likely a Branch will spring up in this neighbourhood as the result.

The Hounslow Branch held a public meeting at St. John's Hall, Isleworth, on Monday, April 23rd, Mr. Gay was the lecturer. The hall was well filled. Mr. Palmer, the President of the Hounslow Branch presided, and the Vicar of St. John's was present on the platform and opened the meeting with prayer.

Mr. Gay visited Tunbridge Wells on Tuesday, April 24th, the scene of the labours of our esteemed friend, Dr. Mountain, and delivered two lectures to good audiences. Mr. P. W. Thompson, M.A., the author of "Israel in Prophecy and History," an excellent work, worthy of a front-rank place in every British-Israel library, also spoke at both meetings.

Mr. Gay paid his second visit to Abingdon, and, under the presidency of his Worship the Mayor, delivered his lecture on "Biblical Prophecy and the Signs of Our Times." The following day he conducted two Bible studies for the Oxford Branch. On the Friday Mr. Gay revisited Welwyn Garden City and spoke on "The Coming World Crisis and Britain's Place in it." Col. Maxwell and his associates are to be congratulated upon the success which has attended the three meetings which have been held. A Branch will be formed in this delightful, modern city in the early autumn. And so the work goes on from day to day, reaching out to that glorious consummation, confidently to be expected, when this great Truth of God's great Kingdom upon the earth shall receive universal acceptance.

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL'S NEWS AND NOTES.

MR. JOHN LEECH, M.A., K.C., will be the speaker at the meeting at Headquarters on Wednesday afternoon next, and Mr. Daniel Farmer on Thursday evening next. Last week we had addresses from Miss Beck and the Rev. G. Arnold Hodgson, M.A.; the Chairmen were Mr. Leech and Mr. Garrison. Mr. Hodgson was greeted by a large audience, and his speech called forth frequent applause. He had some trenchant things to say about the state of religion in America. His references to his association with the Rev. Bishop J. H. Allen, of California, gave much pleasure to all those who heard the good Bishop when he was with us in 1920. Mr. Hodgson responded to the Secretary-General's invitation to give another address next month, also to be one of the speakers at the next Congress, on his return from his Continental tour. Mrs. Hodgson was presented with a beautiful bunch of flowers, with which she expressed her delight.

We gratefully acknowledge a gift of 200 volumes of books for our Library from Miss Honoria Matthews, also a gift of a handsome marble clock for our Reception and Tea Room from F. G. Whittall, Esq., of Birmingham.

Mrs. Bloxam gave a very interesting address on "How Prophecy is being fulfilled in Palestine to-day" for our Liverpool Branch on April 26th, to an appreciative audience.

We regret to learn of the death of the Rev. W. Oliver Hutchinson, and we tender our sympathy to his relatives and his co-workers.

British-Israel Truth has found a fruitful soil in the Southland of the U.S.A. At St. Petersburgh, Florida, the Rev. Dr. McConnell has lectured to thousands of tourists from every State in the Union, from Canada and from other countries. The large Tabernacle, seating over 2,000, has been filled week by week. The interest in the Great Pyramid has been unabated throughout the whole Winter season.

There has also been organised a Pyramid Club, which has held weekly meetings at which Mr. F. Haberman has spoken on Pyramid symbolism from Mr. Davidson's great book. The interest both here and at Tampa, where Dr. McConnell has also lectured, has been keen, and B.-I. literature has been at a premium. The result has been the establishment of a Book Depot where this class of books can be secured.

The Rev. T. H. Whitehouse is to speak at Ebenezer Church, Steelhouse Lane, Birmingham, on May 14th at 7.45; Y.M.C.A. Hall, Coventry, on May 15th at 7.45; Mrs. Powell's Residence, Dunchurch, May 18.h at 3 p.m.; Hobley's Cafe, Rugby, May 18th at 7.30.

Mr. Daniel Farmer speaks at St. Albans on 14th May, and at Lavender Hill, S.W., on May 15th.

Congratulations and hearty good wishes to Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Marchant, of Brighton, who celebrated their golden wedding on April 20th. They have been working for British-Israel for nearly fifty-four years. Mr. Marchant has resumed his Sunday work on Brighton Beach.

We commend the book by Mr. P. W. Thompson, M.A., on "Israel in Prophecy and History." It is an able analysis of British History from the twelfth century onwards, and shows that Wycliffe and the Lollards began a movement which culminated in the Wesleyan Revival, the influence of which had an enormous effect upon our nation, and was coincident with the great material expansion of the British Empire, and with a far-reaching spiritual restoration at the end of the "Seven Times."

We have a chance to open a Book Depot in a main thoroughfare in the East End of London, and we ask for 1,000 shillings to enable us to seize it. A suitable shop is available at the moment, but no time must be lost. An enthusiastic and zealous band of young men are prepared to work the Depot on a voluntary basis (taking turns), and they should have all the encouragement we can give them. The Secretary-General feels sure that our friends will gladly come forward with the modest amount required for rent and other small items. He will gratefully acknowledge donations for this special effort to get B.-I. Truth known among the millions of East End workers.

A successful meeting in re the prosecution of Open-Air work during the summer months has been held at Headquarters. Another meeting will be held on Wednesday, May 30th, at 7.45, and each Wednesday evening until the end of July. Addresses will be delivered and instruction given calculated to help those who can undertake to speak or otherwise assist in this special sphere of work. Those who can volunteer for such work are cordially invited to attend.

We are happy to report that the circulation of this journal is increasing every week. We shall welcome a further response to our appeal for efforts to double the circulation this year.

It is encouraging to note that the Provincial Press are giving greatly increased attention to our teaching by publishing letters and reports of our meetings all over the country.

Readers who have not yet joined the Federation are invited to do so either as Members at one guinea or as Associates at five shillings per annum. We need every ounce of support in the great and urgent work we have in hand. Forms will gladly be sent on application.

MR. J. GROVES, M.P., IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS on April 5th described what he had seen at the Government Lymph Establishment at Hendon.

HE SAID: "I am sure if members on the front Government bench saw what we saw they would be indignant. The calves are manacled and bolted down to the table. They could not move the sixteenth of an inch. Their abdomens are cleanly shaved, a surgeon comes along and makes some incisions which are filled with poison, and the calf left so many days. Then another surgeon scrapes away what we would call the festers. The pus is taken to a laboratory and goes through certain performances. . . . These calves are hired from a local butcher and are afterwards sent back and sold for human food."

As many as 150 cuts are made in a single calf in some laboratories. The word lymph simply means the diseased matter obtained from the festering sores produced upon the miserable animal either from its inoculation with small-pox or cow-pox, and thence introduced into the human system.

How many generations have been deprived of their birthright of health through this unholy rite!

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

[It should be understood that Authors alone are responsible for the views expressed in their Articles.]

THE BIBLE.

THE PRIME MINISTER'S FAITH AND TRIBUTE.

A MEMORABLE speech on the Bible, described by the Archbishop of York as "a revelation of the springs of personality," was delivered by Mr. Baldwin, the Prime Minister, at the Annual Meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society at Queen's Hall on May 2nd.

"For myself," Mr. Baldwin said, "I say that if I did not feel that our work and the work of all others who hold the same faith and ideals, whether in politics or in civic work, was done in the faith and the hope that some day the Kingdom of God would spread over the whole world, then I should have no hope, I could do no work, and I would give my office over this morning to anyone who would take it."

SCRIPTURES AND EMPIRE.

"The circulation of the Scriptures may be said to have grown side by side with our Empire. But you acknowledge, in your work, no limit of place or of tongue. You have circumnavigated the whole world, and have brought to naught the confusion of the tongues of Babel."

It was Milton who said that books were not dead things, that they contained some potency of life, and that their activity was dependent on the soul whence they sprang. "That," said Mr. Baldwin, "is supremely true of the Book which you circulate.

"It is not only mere literature—whatever that phrase may mean. It is not only the greatest literature in the world, but above and beyond all that, it always has been and is in the nature of a high explosive in the world."

Referring to the fact that for every copy of the Revised Version the Society sold 86 copies of the Authorised Version, the Prime Minister continued:

"Now that made me realise, if I had ever had any doubt, that whatever might be the reason there is nothing that can take the place of the Authorised Version in the affections of the English people.

"That great Bible of 1611 was the fitting climax of a series of translations. In it you have the noblest qualities of our great language linked with great national emotional experiences, and in the result you have a translation of incomparable simplicity, incomparable beauty, and incomparable majesty.

THE TRANSLATORS.

"We must not forget that these companies of translators who worked at Oxford and Cambridge and Westminster had before them, not only the original text, but those great versions of Tyndale and Coverdale. They had one before them which had been done in Geneva, and one by the Elizabethan Bishops. They had a version of the New Testament which had been done by the Catholics from the Vulgate, and they had a great version of the Bible done by Luther in Germany.

"They were a company of great scholars, and they had a profound feeling for the excellencies and glories of their own tongue. Their contemporaries were Shakespeare, Marlowe and Ben Jonson, and Bacon and Walter Raleigh. The immense popularity of that version caused our countrymen at that time to steep themselves in it, and you find a man of genius, such as Bunyan, so soaked in it that when he wrote his 'Pilgrim's Progress' you might read page after page of it and believe it came straight out of the Bible."

The hope and anticipation expressed by Erasmus in 1516, that the Bible would reach to all classes and all parts of the world almost came to pass literally in the next century. The Bible penetrated the life and the thought of our people in the Seventeenth Century, and transformed their daily experiences, and it effected this not only because of the supreme quality of the literature but because "the Spirit breathed on the Word."

"To-day, if it be that these figures are maintained of the supremacy of the version which we read in our childhood, it is that for three centuries it has shaped the lives, coloured the traditions of our people, fashioned our literature, and filled our memories with unforgettable experiences of childhood.

"It was that version, too, that inspired so many of our hymn writers who for two centuries past have played so large a part in the spiritual elevation of the British people.

"There are many who share the fears expressed many years ago by Matthew Arnold, that large numbers of people read no Version, Authorised or Revised. If that be true, it is not for me—it is not for us—to allocate the blame. But I do feel that much of the blame should be shared, and must be shared, by some of us who are here. Neither politicians nor ecclesiastics of many denominations can be altogether free from blame if that be true.

RELIGIOUS REVIVALS.

"No living man can tell or know how that Book in its journeyings through the world has started the individual soul in 10,000 different places into a new life, new belief, new conception, and new faith.

"These things are silent until some man or some people is touched beyond all others by the Divine Power, and the result is one of those great revivals of religion which repeatedly through the centuries have startled the world and stimulated mankind, and it is as sure as we are in this hall that such will occur again.

"So much of our time in this world we seem to be carrying on our struggle in twilight or in fog. Friends—or men who should be friends—are kicking blindly in the melée, and wounding men who are—or ought to be—their brothers; and nothing but the light that comes from that Book can lighten that twilight or dispel that fog."

The Archbishop of York said that the Prime Minister's speech afforded some explanation of the place which, irrespective of politics, the personality of the present Prime Minister had won in the hearts of the people.

We cordially thank the Editor of the Morning Post for his kindness and courtesy in allowing us to reprint the above from the report in his most excellent and influential journal, which stands for what is highest and best in our national life.

The members and supporters of the British-Israel-World Federation everywhere will be deeply grateful to the Prime Minister for his noble pronouncement, and to the Morning Post for giving it wide publicity. No organisation stands more fully, consistently and unreservedly for the inspiration and authority of the Bible than does our Federation; it is our Chart, our Charter and our Sheet Anchor. It is to us the DIVINE LIBRARY. Like a majestic cathedral it has been built up during many centuries, knit together so as to form a Holy Temple of God, illuminated by thousands of varied lights and studded with thousands of precious gems. To us it is a consequent Bible, fitting like a perfect mosaic. No book, no chapter can be spared from it. Those who slight or discredit the Old Testament have utterly failed to understand the Divine plan for the ages, though it is there for all to see. The scarlet thread of the Atonement, and the silken cord of Israel's mission run all through the completed Testaments—the Old and the New. Eighteen times in the Epistle to the Romans there is an appeal to what is written in the Old Testament as final in its decision upon every point of doctrine and of duty presented. In the Old Testament there are 122 predictions concerning the Messiah, every one of which has been fulfilled or is in process of fulfilment. The moment we open the Bible the eye rests upon the words "GOD SAID." These words occur ten times in the first chapter of Genesis, and the same words or the equivalent expressions are found 501 times in the Pentateuch; 292 times in the historical Books and Psalms; 1,111 times in the Prophets—in all 1,904 times in the Old Testament, besides almost innumerable allusions to the words contained in the Scriptures as in fact the words of Jehovah.

In spite of this, there never has been a time in history when the Bible has not had to encounter fierce and persistent opposition, but it stands, an "Impregnable Rock." The heaviest artillery has been unable to knock away a splinter big enough to make an eyeball quiver.

Those of us who have had the inestimable privilege of journeying over Bible lands can testify to the fact that the experience made the Sacred Volume indeed a living Book. Every archæological or other discovery in those lands confirms the Book. No discovery of any kind at any time or place has ever discredited it. No Biblical prophecy has ever failed. Ninety-five per cent. of the prophecies have been fulfilled, and the remaining five per cent. are being fulfilled before our eyes.

Nor is the Bible out of harmony with true science (with science falsely so called it may be). There is in the Bodleian Library at Oxford a manifesto drawn up and signed by 617 scientific men, most of them of the highest eminence, declaring their belief not only in the inspiration of the Bible, but its perfect harmony with natural science.

"The Bible," said Sir William Jones, "contains more true sublimity, more exquisite beauty, more pure morality, more important history, and finer strains of poetry and eloquence than can be collected from all other books, in whatever age or language they have been written."

"In the Bible," said Dean Law, "your most glowing wishes will be gratified. Here the noblest thoughts live in the noblest language. The historic annals—mighty in the mightiest of truth—are arrayed in majestic purity of style. The enraptured poetry soars on loftiest wings of dazzling sublimity. The odes are melting melody; the narratives are pictures of real life; the traits of character disclose the secret workings of the heart. In beauty, pathos, and majesty, the Bible pales all other writings, as the midday sun blots out the canopy of stars."

Newton laid not his dying head on his "Principia," but on his Bible; Cowper, not on his "Task," but on his New Testament; Hall, not on his wide fame, but his humble hope; Michael Angelo, not on that pencil which coped with the grandeurs of the "Judgment," but on that grace which for him shore the Judgment of its terrors; Coleridge, not on his genius, but on "Mercy for praise, to be forgiven for fame."

For spreading the teaching and precepts contained in this inestimable treasure-house, our precious Protestant Bible, and for the honour of its Inspirer, our Covenant-keeping God, we, the members of the British-Israel-World Federation, live and pray and labour. We are thankful for the Prime Minister's emphasis of the value of the Authorised Version, and for his pointing out that its circulation has been coincident with the expansion of the Empire. We hope he realises the explanation of this. Would that the whole nation saw clearly why the Oracles of God are in the keeping of our Race, and why this Race has done twenty times more to circulate the Scriptures than all the rest of the world put together.

We would call particular attention to Mr. Baldwin's reference to the Divine Power and to Religious Revivals, and more especially to his confidence that another Revival will come. This public statement by Britain's Prime Minister is very gratifying and impressive, confirming as it does what has been said again and again from our platforms.

Is it too much to hope that very soon the nation will be officially called to repentance and prayer? Then indeed a great Revival may be expected to sweep over our beloved country and our world-wide Empire.

HERBERT GARRISON,
Secretary-General, B.-I.-W.F.

THE PASSING OF THE THRONE OF DAVID.—II.

BY THE REV. L. G. A. ROBERTS, COMMANDER R.N.

THE BURDEN OF TYRE.

IT is to be noticed that Tarshish is the objective right through. "Howl, ye ships of Tarshish, for it (Tyre) is laid waste," so that there is no house, no entering in, from the land of Chittim it is revealed to them. Notice it is the Ships of Tarshish which were held up at Chittim, Cyprus, also called Kition. Evidently these ships, coming with their trade from Tarshish, had arrived at Chittim, when they heard that Tyre, their rock emporium, was no more their port of entry. It would ease our explanation could we say with certainty where Tarshish then was. We know at the present day that Solomon's ships traded with Spain. Villalpando, in his "Commentary on Ezekiel," tells us that Segontium in Spain, the modern Murviedo, has revealed to us Hebrew inscriptions pointing back to Solomon's time. (See British History traced from Egypt and Palestine, p. 58.) Besides we have Edward Creasy's History of England. This name Segontium we find in Britain. Other reasons lead us to look beyond Spain to Tarshish. Jer. x, 9, mentions "Silver spread into plates (tin) is brought from Tarshish (i.e., Britain) and gold from Uphaz (? India), see Studies in Jeremiah, p. 32, Ezekiel xxvii, 12. "Tarshish was thy (Tyre's) merchant—with silver, iron, tin and lead." Tarshish is called "the inhabitants of the isle," v. 6, "her own feet have carried her afar off to sojourn." She went by her own fleet, she was not taken captive. Her sojourning was her own act of colonisation. Tyre was a city that imparted crowns to her colonies. Tyre is called "the daughter of Tarshish"; and again "the daughter of Zidon"; some say this should read "daughter of Zion." Sp. Com. v, 13, is a little difficult unless it is intended to reveal to Tyre that it is not Assyria that should besiege her, but rather the Chaldeans, or Babylon, which until recently was but a home for the refuge captivity of Assyria's spoil; these builded the towers of Babylon and set up the palaces. As in the time of Esarhaddon, when he took Manasseh to Babylon, 2 Chron. xxxiii, 11. Babylon was on her way to prosperity. 2 Chron. xxxii, 31; 2 Kings xx and Isaiah xxxix. Tarshish is never called in this chapter "the daughter of Tyre," but vice versa. So we gather that Zidon was the ancient city when Tyre's builders (Israelites we believe), probably Phœnicians, also set up their trading community and founded the "strong city of Tyre" of Joshua's time. Considering both Josephus and Scripture and other incidents, we are surely within the mark if we assume that these "Ships of Tarshish" were Hebrew traders and colonists, with also Phœnician sailors.

We are told by Rollin that the Tyrians escaped with all their precious things to the islands, and here in Isaiah xxiii, 18, we are informed that "her merchandise and her hire shall be holiness to the Lord: it shall not be treasured nor laid up; for her merchandise shall be for them that dwell before the Lord, to eat sufficiently, and for durable clothing." This language can only mean that in this place from whence came the ships of Tarshish in this New World were dwelling God's people Israel, and her commerce being transferred here, as in xxiv, 15, it should be retained for the furtherance of the Kingdom set up by the God of Heaven, in the Isles of the West (sea). It should be remembered that after the captivities of Israel and Judah the inhabitants round about ancient Tyre would scarcely be of the same descent as the traders who had made their escape over the sea. (xxiii, 7.)

THE DESOLATION OF PALESTINE (ISAIAH XXIV TO V. 12).

The word erets occurs in this chapter sixteen times, generally rendered earth, but three times, 3, 11, 13, "land." It is likely, however, here to be referring to the land of Israel as a miniature of the world. If Israel's light is eclipsed the whole world would be in darkness. These are set forth as regenerators and a blessing to mankind, but if they fail there is apparently no hope. It would appear from these verses that Israel's constitution, her domestic affairs, her priestly character, have entirely broken down; in consequence of this the world languisheth and breaketh away, for Israel has broken God's laws and her covenant is put on one side. The whole land has come under the curse, the city is broken down, every house is shut up, the land is a desolation. Is there, however, no hope? Has God forgotten to be gracious? Ah! He has remembered His covenant to David. "Moreover I will appoint a place for my people Israel." So although "the harvest is past and the summer is ended," yet, "when thus it shall be in the midst of the land among the people, there shall be as the shaking of an olive tree, and as the gleaning grapes when the vintage is done. They shall lift up their voice, they shall sing for the majesty of the Lord, they shall cry aloud from the sea (West). Wherefore glorify ye the Lord in the fires (lights), even the name of the Lord God of Israel, in the isles of the sea (West). From the uttermost part of the earth have we heard songs, even glory to the righteous." As in Elijah's time it was told him that God had reserved 7,000 men who had not bowed their knees to Baal, even so these fugitives had found their way into the British Islands. It is a matter of record for us, who believe God's Word, that migrations into these islands had been carried out for centuries, and these migrants had found instituted here the worship of the Hebrew community, as we find related by a blind witness, Rev. J. A. Wylie, D.D., in his History of the Scottish Nation, 1886, p, 87, 93, 98, 102-115. Druidism is the exact facsimile of the Hebrew doctrines, ceremonials and sacrifices, and they worshipped no images. So we may affirm that Isaiah xxiv, 14-16, is exactly what we now know to have taken place in these islands, centuries before Christ came.

Notice the expression "From the uttermost parts of the earth" in v. 16, and compare it with Acts i, 8. Britain was always understood by this term.

From v. 16 we have first the glory to the righteous, and secondly the famishing condition of those of Israel who had transgressed God's laws, changed His ordinance and broken the everlasting covenant. After this God's vengeance overtakes the nations who have been instrumental in wreaking their enmity against God's people. The picture displayed is that of terrible earthquakes and simultaneous outpourings from on high, similar to that which took place at the Deluge. There is no doubt but that here is a description of what Our Lord says in Luke xxi, 25-28, "the powers of the heavens shall be shaken," and Heb. xii, 27, 28 ; Hag. ii, 6.

So we are brought to the close of this dispensation when God's Ancient ones, Israel, having been prepared for Christ's Coming, Acts iii, 19-21, Our Lord's Kingdom will be established in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem gloriously.

NOTES AND QUOTATIONS IN RELATION TO BRITAIN-ISRAEL.

By PROFESSOR EDWARD ODLUM, M.A., B.Sc., &c.

[The following articles should be read with the thought in mind that they are not intended as a glorification of the Empire, nor of the Anglo-Saxon people, but as a recognition that Jehovah, the God and King of Israel, has in the Celto-Saxon people the basis of His Kingdom on earth. The Anglo-Saxon people have been trained for ages to be the Administrators of that Kingdom, and to carry its benefits, its liberty and its peace to all mankind.]

No. 17.

HAROLD BEGBIE quotes from our own great Milton some words of truth worth reading carefully. Milton had the vision of fact :—"Methinks I see in my mind a noble and puissant nation rousing herself like a strong man after sleep, and shaking her invincible locks. Methinks I see her as an eagle mewing her mighty youth, and kindling her undazzled eyes at the full midday beam ; purging and unscaling her long-abused sight at the fountain itself of heavenly radiance ; while the whole noise of timorous and flocking birds, with those also that love the twilight, flutter about, AMAZED AT WHAT SHE MEANS, and in their envious gabble would prognosticate a year of sects and schisms."

In Milton's days Britain had her enemies without and her traitors within, even as now.

Now, we will give some words direct from Harold Begbie himself which carry much weight with all men who know how to read, and are loyal to our great British Community of Nations, ruled over by our loved and honoured King George, who is the modern representative of King David on the Throne of Israel,—"The Throne of the Lord."

He says :—"We must believe in ourselves and our mission. We must learn, and see that our children are taught the same lesson in the public schools, that to serve God and honour the King is the beginning of our English wisdom ; and that without faith in the moral beauty of British civilisation we cannot accomplish those mighty things for which our fathers prepared the way." . . . "Glorious may this British Empire easily come to be, beyond the imagination of mankind ; but not without faith, courage and creative enthusiasm."

"As England may rightly say to India and Egypt :—'I give you freedom from civil war, and from daily fear of the murderous invader, at the cost only of obedience.' So she herself, England, must learn that to hold dominion over land and sea implies utter and unquestionable obedience to the laws of the universe and the will of God."

Cæsar, speaking of the Britons of his day, says they were "an infinite multitude of men"—"infinita multitudo hominum." Hence they were not only a few scattered tribes of naked, painted savages.

Morgan says of our British ancestors :—"In all the solid essentials of humanity, our British ancestors will compare to great advantage with the best eras of Greece or Rome. In war, the Briton, after the Julian invasion, walked the streets of Rome, the only freeman in Europe. Hence the words : "Invictus Romano Marte Britannus." The Briton unconquered by the Roman god of war.

The Roman Dion Cassius tells us that when the Emperor Augustus prepared to invade Britain with a great fleet and a mighty army, a British fleet swept the English Channel.

The Briton Cynvelin had a British army at Dover to defend England against Rome. Augustus decided to make a treaty with the Britons, and gave them better treaty relations than were in force at the time of his meditated invasion.

Even the Roman tariff against British trade was reduced, as Strabo informs us.

And yet our High Schools and Colleges tell our young men and women that the Britons were naked, painted, ignorant, barbarous savages. And the lie is brazenly taught to millions within the Empire.

"No man has come to true greatness who has not felt in some degree that his life belongs to his Race, and that what God gives him He gives him for mankind."—Phillips Brooks.

THE PARABLES OF THE KINGDOM.—I.

AN ADDRESS BY MR. J. J. MOREY, Kensington Town Hall, 16th April, 1928.

IT is our custom in these meetings to produce all the evidence we can that the great Israel people of the Bible are the British or the Anglo-Saxon peoples. The Bible clearly sees an Israel, Christian, in the Christian era, and I want to produce what evidence I can from the New Testament, because there are people who tell us that we try to find all our evidence in the Old Testament, and that we ignore the New. That is not true. We glory in the individual Gospel of Salvation, but we also find in the New Testament the Gospel of the Kingdom, a Kingdom which is being prepared in this world for the Lord Jesus Christ, prepared by a people whom He calls "the Lost Sheep of the House of Israel"—a Christian Israel existing and working before He returns.

I want to speak about the Kingdom teaching of Jesus Christ, and to show—if it can be shown—that Our Lord foresaw in the Christian era an Israel people, the seed of Abraham, to whom He would entrust the preparation of His Kingdom on earth.

To any here who are critical, let me say there are chapters in the Bible which describe the millennium—beautiful chapters—but where do you find them? You find them in the Old Testament. You find they are Israel chapters. You find Isaiah seeing Christ's Kingdom in the millennium, but in every case the millennial chapters describe the final stage of the Kingdom of Israel. The conclusion is, therefore, that the Kingdom of Christ on earth will be the final stage of the Kingdom of Israel, preserved, restored, cleansed, and become Christ's Kingdom in this world.

I know that I am confronted with the popular idea that the Kingdom teaching of the New Testament is something simply spiritual. There are many who have never got beyond that point, because in the teaching of the Church—in my day at any rate—the meaning of the Parables has all been twisted up, until nobody knows clearly what they mean or what they refer to.

Look at them for a little while. There are people who tell us that the Kingdom of the Parables is just a spiritual experience, and they quote that great verse in St. Luke: "The Kingdom of God is within you." Let me remind you that in the Revised Version the verse does not read "within you," but the revisers have found it necessary to put the word back that was in the margin in the Authorised Version, and in the Revised Version the text reads: "The Kingdom of God is among you," but within, out of sight, like the seed growing secretly; for that is one parable Christ uses to explain the meaning of that word "within." However, there are plenty who think that the Kingdom of Christ, and the Kingdom of God, in the Gospel refers to a spiritual experience. There are others who say, "No, it is the outward and visible Church." I know a couple of clergymen who will fight for that to the last ditch. It cannot be both, because if it is the outward and visible Church, it is not a Christian experience, and there is confusion at once. Then there are others who say that it is the scope of Christianity in the world, and when you pray for the extension of the Kingdom you are really praying for the growth of Christianity. That is rather different. It cannot be all, and I think we shall see that neither of these correctly describes the Kingdom about which Christ speaks in the parables.

Let me ask you, first, to notice that in His Kingdom teaching Our Lord sees a period when the Kingdom is out of sight, not open to observation; it is to be hidden for a long time, and He gives you a parable in which He sees a gardener sowing his seed, and the seed is buried in the soil, sometimes for a long period before it comes through. The parable says when the man has sown the seed he goes to bed and gets up; he cannot do anything to make it grow, all he can do is to wait. And there is a period when the Kingdom is like a seed—in hiding. The people asked Him one day when it was going to appear. And He said, "It cometh not by observation"; it is going to be hidden for a long time; it is like the seed growing secretly—it is within. The Kingdom of Heaven is among you. And it is within; it is underground at present, but it is coming up by and by. Until He removes the veil, and comes to take His Kingdom, He clearly teaches that there will be a period when the Kingdom is out of sight, among you, but hidden. The parable of the "hidden treasure" just confirms that thought. The Lord says the Kingdom is like treasure hid in a field, which, when a man hath found, he hideth, and he goeth and selleth all that he hath and buyeth that field. Now, what is that treasure? Do you say that the treasure is the Lord Jesus Christ? I say He is greater treasure than that. He is not the treasure of the field. If you say the Lord Jesus is the treasure, how does it come about that He is the best known character in all the universe—not hidden. It does not fit. There is no one better known to all nations and to all ages than the Lord Jesus Christ. Surely treasure hid in a field cannot refer to Him. Or do you say the treasure is the Gospel? The Bible is the best selling Book in all the world. It is not hidden in a field, but it has been sent out from this land to all nations—millions of copies—and surely that is not treasure hid in a field. No. But just think, who is the man in the parable? The man in the parable is the Son of Man. He knew where the treasure was, His treasure; and what is His treasure?

If you will read the 19th chapter of Exodus, He—for He is Jehovah—said to the people gathered round Sinai, "Ye shall be to Me a peculiar treasure; ye shall be to Me a Kingdom." Then the Kingdom is the treasure, and they are the people of the Kingdom, and they were lost; the world did not know where they were, or who they were, but He knew where His lost treasure was, and He came and sold all that He had and bought it with His Blood; He bought the field. And in the previous parable He tells you the field is the world, and in that field He hid the Kingdom. That is also the seed growing secretly. There it is—within, not yet observed, not yet known to human sight, coming not with observation, but unseen, unknown, the Lost Sheep of the House of Israel. The hidden seed in the ground before it appears, and the hid treasure, represent the hidden Kingdom. It is the Kingdom of God, the Kingdom of Heaven, Heaven's plan for the government of earth and for the righteous nation which is to come, Christ's Kingdom, the Kingdom of Israel, hidden at that time in the field of the world.

And now I want to bring you to a well-known verse, at any rate to British-Israelites, because there are so many things hanging upon it in the parable story. Jesus said one day to the Jews: "The Kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." I ask my critics this question: What was it that was taken from the Jews? Are you still trying to think that the Kingdom is just salvation; that the Kingdom is eternal life; that the Kingdom is the great gift of God in Jesus Christ? Is that taken from the Jews? That is not taken from the Jews. They are coming into it to-day. Then salvation is not the Kingdom; for the Kingdom is taken from the Jews. What did Christ mean? He meant that, as they had rejected the King, they could not build the Kingdom. They had rejected Him in their hearts already, and He knew they were going to reject Him, and the people who rejected the King could not build His Kingdom. And so the responsibility, the privilege, the honour, of preparing Christ's Kingdom on earth is taken away from the Jews and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof. Let me quote another text which refers to this. I had a very interesting question asked me the other night. A gentleman said: "Will you tell me which sect Our Lord meant when He said, 'Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom'?" I said, "No sect at all, sir, nothing so small as that in the thought of Our Lord." Our Lord told the Jew that the Kingdom would be taken from him, and given to a nation; then that nation must be the "little flock," and cannot you see that if the nation is to have the Kingdom, and the little flock is to have the Kingdom, then they are the lost sheep of the House of Israel who are that nation, and you must identify the flock and the nation. There are, however, several "little flocks" who claim to be the elect of that Kingdom. I could name half a dozen of them just now, but I will refrain. You must fit those two texts together, for that little flock is the flock of the lost sheep represented by those Galileans, and the descendants of those Galileans are here to-day; they have come across with the rest of their people, and you are the descendants of that little flock, and you are the nation to whom Our Lord said He would give the Kingdom with its treasure and responsibility. I have quoted that text, because I think it has to do with two or three parables. Take this one. Personally, I have a strong conviction that here is truth. "The Kingdom of Heaven is like unto a merchantman seeking goodly pearls, and when he hath found one pearl of great price, he selleth all that he hath and buyeth it." Who is that merchantman? Do you suggest the Lord Jesus Christ? The Lord Jesus Christ does not buy or sell, He gives, and it does not fit. The Lord Jesus Christ does not traffic in souls. He does not trade in Eternal Life. Or do you say the Lord is the pearl of that parable? I say, He is an infinitely greater pearl than that; for that pearl can be bought and sold. You cannot buy and sell Eternal Life; it is the gift of God. Our Lord is the gift of God. "God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son." It does not fit, for the pearl is bought and sold. No, it is a Kingdom parable, and that is where we have made the mistake. It is not an individual parable. There are individual parables, but those beginning with "The Kingdom of Heaven is like" refer to the Kingdom, and to the nation and the race that are going to build it.

"BRITISH-ISRAEL UNDER NEW SEARCHLIGHTS."

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE AUTHOR BY ELLIOT FITZGIBBON.

MY DEAR SIR,—I have just read your pamphlet entitled "British-Israel Under New Searchlights"; and, feeling distressed to observe anyone in your unfortunate predicament, I cannot refrain from some small effort to help you out of it. You state that "there are four avenues of evidence by which the subject can be approached:—Scripture, Ethnology, Tradition and Legend, and Secular History." You state that you have not explored the first three, because, while wandering along the fourth, you found yourself "up against a stone wall which I could neither climb over nor break through."

I sincerely trust that you have not hurt yourself in your vain efforts to negotiate this formidable obstacle, because walls are not intended to be climbed or broken through, but are usually furnished at some point with a gate, through which all quietly disposed persons with no sinister motives may pass without inconvenience. So that there is really no need to tear your finger nails and the toes of your boots, trying to climb over or break through impatiently, just because the gate does not happen to be in front of you. All you have to do is to walk along the wall until you find the gate. You may then try the latch; but if that should be disappointing, pray do not lose hope; you may knock, "and it shall be opened unto you."

But before proceeding further I must beg you to reflect on the illogical nature of your apology for failure. You state that there are three other avenues of approach, but that "if this wall cannot be negotiated, the other avenues cannot be reached." You confess that you are still on the wrong side of the wall, and that all the other avenues are on the other side of it. But what, pray, can you know about what is on the other side of it? Or whether indeed there is anything there at all? It cannot be so low that you were able to peep over the top; else I feel sure that one so agile would have been over it without much more difficulty or loss of time.

Now, you may object that this wall has no gate. If so, it is certainly not an ordinary wall, and would not be approached by an avenue. People do not make avenues up to blank walls, nor walls across avenues. It must have been a squirrel-run that you were following; and if so, you would have found yourself up a tree before long—unless, of course, you lost your way, which would be an easy thing to do; for squirrel-runs are none too easy to follow.

But if it be true that the wall has no gate, it must be the wall of a well or pit; for that is the only kind of wall I can think of which has no gate. If so, your plight is a sad one; and I am truly sorry for you, that you should have fallen into such a place; for they are nasty, stuffy places, oppressed with an unnatural darkness, and harbouring gruesome animals.

I have a friend who has such a pit—about three feet deep. It is for the gasometer of his country house; and one of my friend's first duties each morning is to rescue from the pit any unfortunate hedgehog or two which may have fallen into it. There is nearly always one there, in the summer, and often have I looked in, to see the unhappy little animatearing his poor little nose and claws against the rough bricks and mortar; in vain endeavour to "climb over or break through" the wall of his accidental prison. It is a supreme pleasure to lift the little fellow out and set him free once more among the flowers and the shrubs of the garden, and in the grateful warmth of the sun, and the fresh flower-scented summer air.

If I perform a similar service now for you, it is with similar feelings of compassion and satisfaction. But—my dear Sir! How ever did you get there? And—if I help you out, I trust that you will promise, or at least resolve, not to go tumbling in again. For that is a fault of my hedgehog friends. Over and over again the same little animal is found in the pit; and it is really very stupid.

Now I suppose it is this unfortunate wall which, having so impeded your vision and restricted your activity, that you are unable to approach any avenue to an understanding of the British-Israel teaching, except one which does not lead there; I suppose it is this obstruction which has caused you a fundamental misapprehension which undermines your whole argument. You refer to "British-Israel Truth" as "the great text-book of the subject." Yet in the Introduction to the thirteenth edition it is stated that "the book does not profess to be a complete statement, neither is any part of it to be looked upon as an authoritative statement"; and again:—"This book must be in no case considered the authoritative utterance of the British-Israel Movement, but as a helpful contribution."

So you see, the object which you have set out to knock down is an object set up by yourself for that purpose. You may pretend for your own amusement that it is the castle and fortress of some dreadful enemy; and I am sure that nobody will wish to prevent you from setting up any number of similar cock-shies and imagining similar things concerning them; but you must not try to persuade other people that such delusions, in themselves harmless, are really the truth. In fact, neither is "British-Israel Truth," nor any other book, "the great text-book of the subject," except the Bible. There is no other "text-book," but there is a vast number of erudite and masterly treatises bearing upon the subject.

Thus your whole argument is vitiated by two assumptions which are false: First, that there are no avenues of approach to the subject, accessible to the rest of mankind, from that in which you yourself have been groping blindly "up against a stone wall"; and secondly, that the book you have "examined" (without however reading the Introduction) is the authoritative text-book, which it is not.

Moreover, the sub-title of your pamphlet is also misleading. Searchlights are employed to illuminate objects concealed in darkness. British-Israel teaching is not such an object; having enjoyed the full light of day for a great many years—a light in which your searchlights look like fusee matches in the sun, illuminating nothing, but giving forth a deal of smoke.

With your argument from secular History I shall not attempt to deal in detail. Much of it is irrelevant. But that stone wall has a large hole in it which I must point out to you. On page 13 of your pamphlet you state:—"Here we are up against a stone wall. [I assume that this is the same old wall.] That the Normans did not all come to England with the Conqueror—or after the Conquest either—is patent to everyone . . . Now the present people of Norway, Sweden, and Denmark, and a large section of Germans, Sicilians, Italians, Russians, Icelanders and Greenlanders, are descended from those same Danes, Norsemen, Angles and Saxons . . . Are the modern Danes, Norwegians, Swedes, Saxon Germans, etc., etc., etc., therefore, to be included amongst the British-Israelites! And if not, where are we to draw the line?"

Sir, you are to draw the line here: at your own presumption arbitrarily to set bounds to the power of God to do anything whatever, and particularly to fulfil His declared intention and spoken word. "God is not a man, that he should lie; neither the Son of Man, that he should repent: hath he said, and shall he not do it? Or hath he spoken, and shall he not make it good?" "For, lo, I will command, and I will sift the house of Israel among all nations, like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth . . . And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the Lord thy God."*

No, Sir; the Swedes and the Germans, etc., etc., etc., are not to be included amongst the British-Israelites any more than the Eskimos, the Kalmucks, the Yakuts, the Dyaks, the Comanches, the Cherokees, or the Chinooks, etc., etc., etc.

So much for your stone wall, which you "could neither climb over nor break through." I recommend you to creep through the hole in it which I have indicated, and upon the other side explore to your heart's content, and your mind's enlightenment, the avenues from which you have falsely imagined yourself to be irremediably cut off; particularly the first, namely, "Scripture." To creep through a hole in a wall, however, will necessitate your adopting a crouching attitude, somewhat suggestive of humility. I trust that such an exercise will not be distasteful to you; and that you are neither too old nor too stiff to perform it; for apart from its primary object in this instance, a little stooping is very good for the general health, especially of those who are not careful of their diet, and who partake too exclusively of one kind, or too freely of any kind, of indigestible food.

Finally, there is yet another false assumption in the last sentence of your pamphlet:—"Seeing that the theory, even if its truth could be demonstrated, would lead to no practical result, it seems calamitous that it was ever started." There are, in fact, two fallacies in this short sentence. First, the Truth of British-Israel identity has long ago been demonstrated to the satisfaction of hundreds of thousands of educated and thoughtful people, who have taken the trouble to study all the evidence. And secondly, who, pray, will have the temerity to assert that the demonstration of any truth whatever would lead to no practical result? Is the dissipation of erroneous belief, or the enlightenment of ignorance, or the correct interpreting of Holy Scripture, to be condemned as having no practical result? Tut, tut, Sir! Such an opinion, advanced even carelessly, is unbecoming a student of History. Will you try to estimate the "practical results" which would follow from a general realisation, among the Anglo-Saxon-

Celtic peoples of these islands and of America, of the stupendous fact that they are all one race, with one common destiny as the chief instrument of God's purpose in this world; descended from one common stock, having been sifted from among all nations "like as corn is sifted in a sieve"; and shortly about to fulfil their common destiny as the unified Kingdom of Our Lord on earth? What "practical results" would inevitably follow from a general realisation of this among, first, the people most nearly concerned, and, secondly, all other races of mankind; it is utterly impossible to estimate.

And so, I bid you farewell; trusting that your progress henceforth will not be impeded by any more "stone walls."

Yours truly,

ELLIOT FITZGIBBON.

THESE FATEFUL YEARS.

BY EDWARD P. SMITH.

WE may be definitely certain that the time of tribulation is coming, and that we shall be sorely tried; but we have the assurance that it is no blind catastrophe. It will have a definite end, and after that peace and prosperity such as the world has never known. We know that, however dark the prospect of the next few years, we cannot be submerged, and that God has prepared a wonderful future for His chosen people Israel, whom we know ourselves to be. We have this assurance both from the fact that we are the only nation actually enjoying the wonderful privileges and promises made by God to the patriarchs for their descendants; but also from innumerable direct proofs of our lineage.

Why then should we despise our birthright and the comfort that the knowledge of that birthright brings? Is it wise to ignore the fact that God Himself told both Daniel and St. John that the books were sealed to the time of the end, when the wise should understand? Do not the words of the prophets of old ring like a trumpet-call when we read them in the light of our interpretation? Do not our hearts burn within us when we realise that the most important events there foretold are being fulfilled before our very eyes? Is it not clear, too, that just such important events are taking place in this period, opening with the Great War, as would have stood out to the prophetic eye looking down the vista of the ages? Are we not wilfully blind if we shut our eyes to the significance of the "times" of Daniel's prophecies which enabled Grattan Guinness to foretell the liberation of Jerusalem so many years before it happened, or the facts of Pyramid dating which marked the period August 4th, 1914–November 11th, 1918, as one of intense tribulation?

A stumbling-block, I know, to many is the change of scale in the Pyramid from an inch to a year to an inch to a month at the beginning of the Great War. It should not require much faith, however, to imagine that God could have devised the method, known to every engineer and draughtsman, of increasing the scale of His working model the Pyramid, when He wanted to show details more clearly, and at a time when those details crowded more closely together. He did it, too, at a time when people would be sufficiently instructed by the events taking place—as, for instance, the Great War—to take advantage of the greater detail given, and to take comfort therefrom at the time when it was most needed. There are other mathematical reasons which make it absolutely harmonious.

At the same time it is impossible to believe that God would change the scale again in any arbitrary and uncertain fashion; therefore we must believe that the inch-month scale still continues, and, so far as can be seen by comparison of the Bible terminal dates and those of the Pyramid, must continue till the time of the end—probably for the very reason that God has foreknown the fact that that length of tribulation will be required before the nation turns to Him with an absolutely whole heart, His own condition for coming to our help. Undoubtedly God could foresee this lack of change of heart just as certainly and clearly as He could foresee the Crucifixion, and the beginning and the ending of the War.

As an ordinary layman—brought up to the scientific profession of engineering, with a fair knowledge of mathematics—the chief facts that have convinced me are:—

(1) The interpretation of the 70 weeks' prophecy on the year-day basis, and the wonderful accuracy of its fulfilment on both solar and lunar scales to the Crucifixion.

(2) The fact that the same year-day interpretation led to 1917 as the year of the liberation of Jerusalem from Turkish rule.

(3) Daniel's vision and interpretation of the great image, and its wonderful fulfilment in all its stages, more especially striking in the double phase of the Roman Empire.

(4) The wonderful mathematical and scientific relations embodied in the Pyramid—facts about weights, distances and dimensions of earth and sun, and the relations between them, that could not possibly have been known to Egyptian science, however advanced in certain branches of knowledge.

(5) The fact that if an East and West line is set out through the Pyramid and on it is laid the angle of the ascending passage, the line resulting passes exactly through Bethlehem, a fact which cannot be explained away by coincidence, more especially when taken in conjunction with the measurements of Our Lord's Birth and Crucifixion as fundamental points in Pyramid time interpretation.

(6) The exact fulfilment according to the inch-month scale of the days of the first tribulation period, August 4th 1914–November 11th, 1918.

With all these clear proofs given us by God Himself through the mouths of the prophets, and through important dates marked by the Pyramid, to show His foreknowledge, we cannot close our eyes to the fact that we must go through this repeatedly foretold period of tribulation; but with an equal assurance that Christ's own words of comfort will be fulfilled—that when we see these things begin to come to pass we can lift up our heads, for our redemption draweth near. We can foresee the fulfilment of the golden prophecies of Ezekiel, Isaiah and Malachi—the rising of the Sun of Righteousness with healing in His wings as the end of all these things, and we can rejoice in the midst of our afflictions with an exceeding great joy.

WEEK BY WEEK.

By A. R. H.

ONE of the most vital of kingdom activities is that of the circulation of the Scriptures. Of all organisations within the kingdom, private or public, the British and Foreign Bible Society wields the most extensive influence. Year in and year out this wonderful Society sends out the BOOK, translated into almost every tongue, to all the peoples of the earth.

The versions of the Scripture published or circulated now number 608, including the entire BIBLE in 145 forms of speech, the New Testament in 146 more, and at least one complete book of Scripture in 317 others. Scriptures have been issued during the past year at an average rate of 27,000 a day.

"The Society acknowledges no limit of place or tongue in its work," claims Mr. Baldwin in a striking tribute given at the Annual Meeting. "It (the Bible) has circumnavigated the whole world and brought to naught the confusion of the tongues of BABEL."

But why is this work of such supreme importance from a purely kingdom point of view?

It is important because the BIBLE enshrines the ideal and remains the foundation of our belief in the manifestation of the KINGDOM of GOD upon earth. It is important because the BOOK contains the secret of the thought and civilisation of the PEOPLE of whom it is written :—"Every place where the soles of your feet shall tread shall be yours."[1] It is important, because it performs the rôle of Messenger, going to prepare the way of the LORD and of the people of the LORD.

The PEOPLE and the BOOK! How inseparable they are! Indeed, what would be the character of the PEOPLE of the BOOK deprived of the influence of that BOOK. And, indeed, what would be the value of the BOOK if the PEOPLE of the BOOK no longer lived to read it and fulfil its thrilling prophecies?[2]

"The circulation of the Scriptures may be said to have grown side by side with our EMPIRE," testified Mr. Baldwin, little guessing perhaps that in this description of Britain's dual rôle as Leader of Missionary and Colonisation enterprise, he is uttering a commentary on prophecy and parable fulfilled in history. But so it is.

For the circulation of the BOOK of the KINGDOM, containing the WORD of the KINGDOM, by the PEOPLE of the KINGDOM, is one of

of Heaven referred to in holy writ.

The Parable of the Sower[4] is a Missionary Parable telling of the sowing of the WORD[5] of the KINGDOM in the heart of individuals throughout the Kingdom and the uttermost parts of the earth.

The Parable of the Tares and the Wheat—or as it might be alternately titled "The Parable of the Householder who sowed good seed in his field "[6]—deals with the colonising and emigratory activities connected with kingdom development.

The one deals with the acceptance by the world of the Word of God and of the Kingdom, as enshrined within the pages of the BOOK. The other with the cleansing of the Kingdom of "the People of the Book," within the world, prior to the time when the boundaries of the kingdoms of the world and the KINGDOM of GOD on earth shall become one boundary; in fact, conterminous.

By the first means (Missionary enterprise and circulation of the Scriptures containing the MESSAGE of the KINGDOM) the Kingdom extends an intellectual influence into regions and realms where it cannot as yet extend politically.

The WORD of the KINGDOM exercises

AN EMPIRE OVER THOUGHT

where it cannot fail to rest within the boundaries of the national KINGDOM. But where the WORD of the KINGDOM rests, there, eventually, must the KINGDOM ultimately appear. And this as surely as the daylight follows dawn. For the conception of the kingdom in the heart and thought of man spells the certain future birth of the KINGDOM in visible and outward form.

The field[7] for the working out of these great activities is a world-wide one. Birth, Embodiment, Manifestation, must surely attend conception, in glorious ways beyond our wildest dreams, in the days when, from the midst of God's Kingdom Empire in the earth, there are removed all things which offend, and them which do iniquity.[8]

The BIBLE "is a high explosive," claims Mr. Baldwin, "but it works in strange ways, and no living man can tell or know how that BOOK in its journeyings through the world has started individual souls in ten thousand different places into a new life, a new belief, and a new faith."

Like the leaven[9] which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal till the whole was leavened, so the "highly explosive" leaven of the MESSAGE works unseen and in mysterious ways; but with equal power and with equally sure results. Both with the working of the WORD of the KINGDOM and the actual development of the KINGDOM in the earth itself, we do not see or understand the manner of its working, but we have the evidence of results.

"These things are hidden," says Mr. Baldwin, "until some man, some people, is touched by the Divine fire, and the result is one of those great revivals of religion which repeatedly, through the centuries, have startled the world and stimulated mankind, and which will recur again.

"So much of our time in this world we seem to be carrying on our struggle in twilight or in fog. Nothing but the light from the Book can lighten that twilight or dispel that fog. The KINGDOM of GOD may be very far off . . . . , but if I did not feel that work was done in the faith that at some day, would spread over the whole world, I could have no hope, I could do no work, and I would give my office over this morning to anyone who would take it."

A wonderful testimony this from a Prime Minister. Still more so coming from the Prime Minister of Brith-ain, LAND of the COVENANT. The vision of the KINGDOM of GOD alone upholds the Prime Minister among the servants who are holders of the charge, received from the KING of the KINGDOM of HEAVEN, "Occupy till I come."[10] Is this not the vision one would expect to find animating the minds of those who lead the NATION[11] to whom the KINGDOM of GOD has been given?

Alas that this faith should be a blind faith! Alas that this vision should be a concealed vision! But thank God for the certain assurance that the blindness is passing! And that the vision is becoming an open vision! This is the testimony received on every side.

We have seen something of the manner of extension by the word of the KINGDOM. Let us look at the manner of expansion followed by the national boundaries of the KINGDOM.

"It is indeed very difficult, when one looks back, to realise how the BRITISH EMPIRE as we understand it, came into existence at all," exclaimed the Earl of Birkenhead on a recent occasion. "One fact emerges, and that is that, with perhaps one or two exceptions, it owes nothing to any particular British statesman. It is certain that hardly an English statesman or Dominion statesman during the critical and decisive years . . . . . realised the which the BRITISH EMPIRE in its loose correlation might ultimately adopt.

"The history of the whole affair proves how immensely the soul and spirit of a people[12] may defeat the calculations and the purposes of statesmen. It is not by calculation or by statecraft that the British Empire has been made up. It is founded deeply upon the indestructible attachment of people who come from the same stock, think the same thoughts, and intend to adhere together in good fortune or bad. There can not have been a greater illustration of this than in the late War.

"The EMPIRE will stand indestructible, I believe, and permanent, because it is founded deep and sure on the character of the ANGLO-SAXON. The qualities that have made that People great will keep them great."

The BRITH-ISH EMPIRE, being the "never to be destroyed" WORLD EMPIRE of Dan. ii, 44, will most certainly stand indestructible and permanent. It is founded deep upon the character of the ANGLO-SAXON or Isaac-seed of ABRAHAM. The GOD-like qualities that have made this PEOPLE, and alone can keep this People great, are the fruits of GOD-consciousness. Or more particularly JEHOVAH-consciousness. The PEOPLE who know that their GOD is the LORD—JEHOVAH, have access to power undreamed of. Their greatness is but the reflection of the promise made to the father of their Race as it is written:—"I will bless thee, and

MAKE THY NAME GREAT,[13]

. . . . . and in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

Now it is evident that when GOD Himself shall deign to take a hand in the making of the greatness of a PEOPLE, saying, "I will . . . I will . . . . and thou shalt be . . . . " then, something is going to happen! The world will be presented with a political phenomenon unprecedented and inexplicable by the ordinary means of rational critical processes.

The world speaks in tolerant amusement of a PEOPLE who have stumbled into EMPIRE in a fit of absence of mind! Are we not an EMPIRE malgré nous—in spite of ourselves? It is GOD alone Who has made us what we are. For without Him we could have done nothing.

If, as Queen Victoria put it, the secret of Britain's greatness is the BIBLE (and what, pray, should the secret of the greatness of the LAND of the COVENANT be, if not the BOOK containing the Covenants upon which its very existence depends?) then it is equally true that the secret of the continued beneficent activity of GOD'S BRITH-ISH PEOPLE in the world is GOD.

GOD, the PEOPLE of GOD, and the BOOK of GOD. What a mighty combination. And these three agree in one by virtue of the national redemption wrought out on CALVARY by the REDEEMER.

"It is a great thing," declares the Archbishop of Canterbury, "to realise that the deepest bond of the English Race is a reverence for the English Bible. I hope that the acceptance of this standard of moral faith will be steadily maintained and that we can be assured that the new generation are steeped as their fathers were in this literature which revealed and impressed a certain type of character.

"There is one way in which both politicians and ecclesiastics of all kinds must unite, and that is to see that in all our schools the Bible is still the basis of education, and the BIBLE not merely as history and literature but as leading up in divers manners to its fulfilment in the revelation of GOD. There is something wrong with CHRISTIAN ENGLAND if we cannot all combine to secure in all the schools a Christian education based on the BIBLE.

"It will be a loss to the NATION if a new generation is to arise which knows not its BIBLE, and who can exaggerate what our Imperial Race might be if it were everywhere animated by the standard of character set before us in the Holy Scriptures? Then, indeed, the EMPIRE would be no empty boast as it is apt to be, but for the Briton everywhere would fulfil that picture of the witness to the GOSPEL which was drawn in incomparable language by Bunyan:—'The LAW of TRUTH is writ upon his lips, the best of books is in his hand and his eyes are lifted up to HEAVEN.'

[10] Matt. xxi, 43.

[11] Luke xix, 13.

[12] The soul of the People of God is in the hand of God. The Spirit of God breathes upon the spirit of His People. Wrestling with God they will ultimately prevail as it is written (Isa. lx, 21): "Thy People shall be all righteous."

[13] Gen. xii, 2 and 3.

" I am certain, too, that if we all set our minds to fulfilling the character disclosed in the Gospels, we shall be very near to attaining that unity of faith we all desire.

" If all the nations agree to acknowledge one supreme international LAW, we can feel that the unity of nations is not far off, and yet at the present time all Christians acknowledge their obligation to one supreme inter-Christian LAW.

" The more we study the greatness of that LAW the more we shall see the basis on which our common faith will rest. In my negotiations for many years past with my Nonconformist brethren it has been a delight and surprise to find ourselves united so often by a common appeal to the Holy Scriptures. Let us in the future make not less but infinitely more of that fellowship of faith which unites us in the Bible. The fact of the Bible's inspiration remains unquestioned. In every variety of circumstance and culture there is nothing in the world so amazing as the still-continued power of these old words to speak, a living voice to living men and women, plainly coming from a living GOD."

The ISRAEL-BRITH-ISH or ANGLO-SAXON (seed of ISAAC) type of character is the type destined to dominate the earth. The coming of universal acceptance of the LAW of ISRAEL as the LAW of all the earth will bring and bind all nations lovingly within the fellowship and commonwealth of the coming universal BRITH-ISH KINGDOM.

B.-I.-W.F. ANNUAL MEETING.

THE Annual Meeting of the Members and Associates of the British-Israel-World Federation took place in the Kensington Town Hall on April 17th, the President, Major J. Knowles, O.B.E., in the chair. The Rev. Arthur Pritchard, M.A., opened the proceedings with prayer.

In the absence of the Financial Secretary, Mr. M. Spencer, of Messrs. Price, Waterhouse and Company, the Auditors of the Federation, attended and explained the Financial Statement and Balance Sheet for the year 1927. He congratulated the Federation on the soundness of its position, and its progress, and spoke in praise of the manner in which the accounts were kept. A vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Spencer for his attendance and his testimony. The Auditors—one of the best-known firms in Britain—were unanimously re-elected.

The Annual Report was read by the Secretary-General, and it was considered very satisfactory and encouraging. It was received with general applause and was unanimously adopted. The Rev. Pascoe Goard referred to some special features of the year's work, and spoke of the courage and devotion of the Secretary-General and Mrs. Garrison. He proposed that the best thanks of the Federation be tendered to them ; this was seconded by the Rev. Commander Roberts, supported by Dr. Horace Sworder, and carried unanimously with acclamation. On the motion of Mr. Herbert Garrison, seconded by the Rev. Pascoe Goard, the warm thanks of the Federation was accorded to the President, Major Knowles, for all the splendid work he had done during the year. The mover spoke in the strongest terms of gratitude for the invariable courtesy, cordial and generous support he had received from the President, and this was echoed by the seconder. A similar vote was accorded to Colonel C. Vincent R. Wright, D.S.O., the Financial Secretary, for the excellent way in which he had carried out his work.

The Commissioner-General, Mr. John Leech, M.A., K.C., presented his Report and those of the Commissioners. On the motion of Mr. C. F. Waddington and Dr. Sworder, the Reports were adopted and the Commissioners were heartily thanked.

It was moved by Mrs. Zoe Bell, seconded by Mrs. Fletcher Stevenson, and carried, that the warm thanks of the Federation be tendered to Mrs. Knowles, the President of the Women's Auxiliary, and the members thereof for their work of the year.

Mr. Garrison announced that the Ninth Annual Congress would be held (D.V.) at the Central Hall, Westminster, in the week commencing on October 1st next.

On the motion of Mr. Leech, seconded by the Rev. Arthur Pritchard, it was resolved that the meeting do stand adjourned until October next at the time of the Annual Congress.

The meeting, which was enthusiastic and entirely harmonious, closed with the Benediction.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of THE NATIONAL MESSAGE AND BANNER.

DEAR SIR,—May I ask for the hospitality of your pages to express my appreciation of the excellent meetings which were held in the Kensington Town Hall, from April 16th to April 19th, inclusive?

The large audiences, at both afternoon and evening meetings, during the whole period of the four days, were a tribute to the interest which is so rapidly spreading in the B.-I. Movement.

May I refer to an Editorial comment upon the British-Israel-World Federation which appeared in the Guardian, the Church newspaper, of the 20th April, the concluding day of these Kensington Town Hall meetings?

This Editorial referred to " that curious Movement, the British-Israel-World Federation," and they were surprised to hear of its alleged rapid progress, as they were under the impression " that so fantastic a set of notions had long since been exploded." The comment continues, " To the belief of the Federation in the Bible and in Christ we must give consent." The italics are mine. That is extremely kind and condescending in a Church newspaper, to consent to our belief in the Bible and in Christ. But even that consent is given grudgingly, as though they would have been glad to refuse even that concession.

It is surely not too much to ask, that before such criticism is launched, that the writer should make himself acquainted with the foundations of British-Israel Truth.

I am,
Yours faithfully,
(Rev.) H. A. JAMES.

"THE WITNESS OF THE GREAT PYRAMID."

A SECOND edition of the above work by Basil Stewart is now ready. It is a popular edition in demy octavo format, price 7s. 6d., and the publishers are confident that in its new guise it will appeal to an even wider circle of readers, successful as the original quarto volume has been. Readers already acquainted with The Witness of the Great Pyramid will find in this new edition much fresh matter, and new evidence not hitherto published, based upon the most recent researches. Thus intensely interesting and significant facts in respect of the missing top-stone are given, while the Bibliographical Index shows that the range of research has been considerably extended.

We feel certain this edition will prove itself an outstanding popular work on a subject now attracting world-wide attention. While primarily intended for the non-mathematical reader, the narrative form in which the technical and scientific side of the subject is presented should interest also the astronomer and mathematician.

THE BOLDNESS OF PETER AND JOHN.

BY THE REV. DR. GEORGE MATHESON, D.D.

"When they saw the boldness of Peter and John, they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus."—Acts iv, 13.

THESE two men drew one quality from the same source; they had both become bold from living with Jesus. Yet it was not the same kind of boldness. Peter and John were both courageous; yet the courage of Peter was as unlike the courage of John as the sun is unlike the moon. When Christ gives the same quality to two men He does not thereby make them the same man. The light which shines on the wall comes from the same source as the light which shines on the river; but no one would mistake the light on the river for the light on the wall. Even so, no one would mistake the courage of Peter for the courage of John. They are not only different; they are in some sense opposite. Peter has the courage that strikes; John has the courage that waits. Peter is a force of action; John is a force of bearing. Peter draws the sword; John lies on the bosom. Peter crosses the sea to meet Jesus; John tarries till the Lord comes. Peter goes into the sepulchre where the body of Jesus has lain; John merely looks in—keeps the image of sorrow in his heart. Christ needs each of these types. There are times when His Kingdom requires the courage of the hand—the power of actual contact with danger. There are times when it needs the courage of the heart—the power to wait when nothing can be done, and to keep the spirit up when the hand must be let down. Life has both its Galilee and its Patmos—its place for work and its place for waiting; and for both it requires courage.

And yet methinks, my soul, thou needst it most for Patmos. John's courage is the least shining, yet it is not the most difficult! There are men who could be bold in Galilee who could not be bold in Patmos. It is a hard thing to keep the vision of hope before thee when thou art in island life. It is comparatively easy to have courage in the battle; the sight of the multitude inspires boldness. But to have courage in the moment of isolation, to have courage when there is no spectator, to have courage when thou art alone with thine own thoughts and hearest not the chorus of human sympathy—this is an arduous thing! And this is the thing that is most asked of thee. Thy most tragic moments are thy Patmos moments. Thy deepest struggles are ever in the wilderness. The duty most required of thee is to bear. Not to say to this mountain, "Be thou removed!" is thy greatest need. The power wanted of thee is to keep this mountain on thy breast without fainting. The courage of faith can cast it into the sea; but only the courage of love can bear its pressure. They are brave soldiers that meet Christ in Galilee; but methinks the honours of the day are reserved for the men of Patmos. Meet Him in Patmos, O my soul!—(Rests by the River.)

WHAT IS KEEPING CHRIST OUT OF HIS KINGDOM?

BY P. S. MURRAY.

ACTS III, 19-21:—"Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord;" (the times may be said to be with us now). "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which was preached unto you: Whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began."

Add to this the message of Jesus Christ, not to the Jews, but to Jerusalem, the ecclesiastical side of Israel.

Matt. xxiii, 37-39:—"O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, Thou that killest the prophets—For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." Follows on the injunction in the 36th chapter of Ezekiel:—"I will yet be enquired of by the house of Israel to do it for them."

Projected into the last time, in the 118th Psalm we get Israel's answer:—"Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the LORD: we have blessed you out of the house of the LORD."

Three things stand out clearly in the writer's mind.

First, that the British-Israel people are keeping Christ out of His Kingdom.

Secondly, when the British people realise it, they will be only too anxious to make all the restitution in their power.

Lastly, that the Father will not allow His Son to be kept out of His Kingdom indefinitely, and that would appear to be the message of the Great Pyramid. It seems quite obvious that Christ cannot reign over a semi-heathen nation; further I would point out the extraordinary position of those who are praying for the Second Coming of Christ and at the same time by opposing British-Israel teaching are unwittingly preventing it.

LAW OF THE SCRIPTURES.

WHY ONE WITNESS DOES NOT SUFFICE IN SCOTLAND.

EXTRACTS from an old text-book on jurisprudence showing that Scottish law follows the injunctions of the Scriptures were quoted by Mr. MacMillan, K.C., presiding at a meeting of the Committee which is inquiring into the law and practice of street offences.

Mr. MacMillan read the following from the Book of Deuteronomy as an illustration that under the Dispensation two witnesses were required for corroboration :—

> One witness shall not rise up against a man for any iniquity, or for any sin, in any sin that he sinneth : at the mouth of two witnesses or at the mouth of three witnesses shall the matter be established.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY THE REV. G. H. LANCASTER, M.A.

QUESTION.—Christ said to the woman of Samaria, "Salvation is of the Jews." How do you reconcile this with British-Israel teaching?

The Prophets say, "David shall never want a man to sit upon the throne of Israel." Since the Scriptures are interpreted literally by British-Israel, how do you account for the Queens Elizabeth, Mary and Victoria?

These questions have not been answered by the local organisation here. Would you kindly reply?

M. G. (Winnipeg).

ANSWER.—(1) The above question may at first present certain difficulties, but a careful study of the context will help to explain it, bearing in mind the strained relationship which existed between the Jews and the Samaritans.

The whole verse must be noted, together with the accent upon "Ye" and "we," thus, "Ye worship ye know not what; we know what we worship; for salvation is of the Jews" (St. John iv, 22). This is the only case in the Gospels in which Our Lord speaks thus, with the emphasis on "we." Never elsewhere does He speak to one so set in opposition to the fulfilment of prophecy on a point where He Himself and the seed of Abraham stood together for God's truth. He is now speaking as a member of the Jewish orthodox faith, in contrast with a woman who was of the Samaritan faith. Compare Our Lord's answer to the Canaanitish woman (Matt. xv, 24, 26). In Our Lord's reply here there is a veiled reference to the Incarnation, since the power of Judaism lay in the fact that it was not simple deism, but the gradual preparation for the Incarnation. The Jew was not without his Messianic hope, even though he failed to see the Messiah in the Person of Jesus Christ. The Samaritan religion consisted of the teaching of the Pentateuch, and it knew little or nothing of the Prophets; hence its outlook was limited, whereas the Jews had the whole of the Old Testament (cf. Our Lord's reading of the Scriptures at Nazareth, Luke iv, 16–21, from Isaiah lxi). For this reason Jesus said, "Ye (Samaritans, emphatic) worship ye know not what; we (of the Jewish religion) know what we worship."

And yet it will be observed that Our Lord did not say that "redemption is of the Jews," for it was not. Redemption was of and for the House of Israel (Luke i, 68). But the Jews of Jerusalem—in fact the whole Jewish State—had the Messiah and the Saviour of the world in their midst, if only they had known it, and had recognised Him as the Christ of their Messianic hope (cf. Acts iv, 12; xiii, 26. See also Rev. vii, 10; xii, 10; xix, 1). At the same time it will be observed that Our Lord predicts that neither the Samaritan centre of worship, nor the Jewish centre, shall in the course of time become permanent (John iv, 21), since through Israel redeemed the spreading of the Gospel shall cause God to be known as "the Father," Who shall be worshipped "in spirit and in truth" by "the true worshippers" in all parts of the world. So it may be said that Our Lord predicts that the Faith which He came to instil within the hearts of men is greater than that of either the Samaritan or the Jewish worship, both of which were limited and wholly incomplete.

(2) Obviously the word "man" does not here mean the male sex alone. It means "descendant," one of David's line, male or female, king or queen, i.e., "the seed royal" (2 Kings xi, 1).

THE BIBLE.

BY GEORGE POSTON (Sheffield).

THIS BOOK CONTAINS THE MIND OF GOD: the state of man; the way of salvation; the doom of sinners; and the happiness of believers. Its doctrines are holy; its precepts are binding; its histories are true; and its decisions are unchangeable. Read it to be wise; believe it to be safe; and practise it to be holy. It contains light to direct you, food to support you, and comfort to cheer you. It is the traveller's map; the pilgrim's staff; the pilot's compass; the soldier's sword; and the Christian's charter. HERE, PARADISE IS RESTORED, Heaven opened, and the gates of hell disclosed. CHRIST IS ITS GRAND SUBJECT; our good its design; and the glory of God its end. It should fill the memory, rule the heart, and guide the feet. READ IT SLOWLY, FREQUENTLY, PRAYERFULLY. It is a mine of wealth, a paradise of glory, and a river of pleasure; it is given you in life, will be opened at the Judgment, and remembered for ever. IT INVOLVES THE HIGHEST RESPONSIBILITY; will reward the greatest labour, AND CONDEMN all who trifle with its sacred contents.

FRIENDSHIP.

I CAME to where a dour grey boulder stood, foursquare and brave, oblivious to the storm that swayed the trim young larches in the wood. Behind the boulder it was still and warm—and there, tho' wind and weather never knew, a tiny primrose grew.

Grateful for shelter at the peep of morn, the primrose smiles up at the silent stone, and says :—"But for you I might have been forlorn; sport for the wild north-easter. Now alone I grow in sweet contentment without end, because you are my friend."

So much means friendship. It's a coat of steel; a beacon in the hour of dark despair; a tireless toiling for another's weal; at once an inspiration and a prayer; a binding vow—"I'll answer every call; myself counts least of all."

"The hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies!"

DR. WARSHAW, M.A., lecturing at Worcester, said: "Vivisection was under a system of inspection, but it was a system that protected no one but the Vivisector."

TO SUPERINTEND 267,000 VIVISECTIONS PER YEAR IN THE UNITED KINGDOM, THERE WERE TWO INSPECTORS ONLY! How was their yearly report compiled? It was a compilation of reports sent in by the Vivisectionists themselves, and, of course, they did not give the show away! It was just an elaborate piece of eyewash to quiet the awakening conscience of the people!"

Any agony can be inflicted upon these poor patient, friendless creatures with perfect impunity if neither of the two Inspectors happens to be present.

Do not be deceived by the plausible excuse that rats are chiefly used. All the worst experiments are made and the most fiendish scientific curiosities gratified upon dogs, cats, horses and rabbits, all highly organised and sensitive creatures!

THE LATEST AND BEST WORK FROM THE PEN OF

"DISCIPULUS"

In his Preface the Author writes :—

"There are undoubtedly large numbers of people interested in the Great Pyramid, who, however, do not appreciate why it has particular significance for us, a significance not properly apparent until our real identity is revealed and our whole past history made manifest. This and the purpose and message of the Great Pyramid are so closely related, that, if the significance of the latter is to be fully understood and appreciated, these two subjects must be taken together."

THE WITNESS OF THE
GREAT PYRAMID

Makes clear and deeply interesting to the lay mind the advanced science underlying the building of this "Bible in Stone."

The book is written in an easy flowing, easily readable literary style, and an enviable command of the English language. It will take a very high place among the literature of the Great Pyramid.

Every reader of this Author's earlier works on this subject should accompany him in his deeper and more interesting researches.

EDITORIAL.

The following should be read in the light of Israel truth, namely, that the Anglo-Saxon nations are the continuation of the Israel nation; the inheritors of her Charters; the possessors of her guarantees and immunities from destruction; the executors of her commissions.

WHAT SHALL ISRAEL'S PART BE IN THE LAST GREAT STRUGGLE?—IV.

BY THE REV. W. PASCOE GOARD.

FOLLOWING that which we wrote in our issue of May 12th as to the last great international struggle, we shall now follow with the analysis of certain great passages which deal with these things. But before we go on to that let us recall the fact that a double process is going on.

If we go back two thousand five hundred and twenty years, or seven prophetic times, we see the commencement of these great movements which are to-day culminating in world uproar. The centre of civilisation was at that time in Western Asia. That civilisation was the parent from which has sprung European or Western civilisation.

Draw a line through the Middle East, as it was ten centuries before Christ, running from north to south, and it will be found that such line would divide sharply two types of Asiatic civilisation. One type had its centre on the banks of the Euphrates, and might be termed Euphratean civilisation. The other type had its centre on the shores of the Mediterranean, and might be called Israel in type, or, if preferred, Mediterranean.

The Euphratean civilisation was founded upon Baalistic worship and Imperial organisation. The Mediterranean or Israel type was founded upon the worship of Jehovah, and upon the Kingdom organisation established at Sinai.

Between the nations organised upon these competing types there was war from the beginning. Little by little the Israel nations fell before the power of the Euphratean nations and were finally by them carried into captivity.

Thereafter the Asiatic civilisation fell, and the European civilisation arose. The two types reproduced themselves in Europe. The Euphratean type formed its European centre in Rome, and the Israel type formed its centre in Britain.

These two types of European civilisation transplanted from the Euphrates and from Israel have competed and struggled together for ages in Europe.

In Asia the Euphratean or Babylonian type prevailed, and took the Israel type captive, with the people upon whom that type rested.

In the European struggle which is still on, which is growing in intensity, and which is nearing its final struggle, the Israel type centred in Britain, built upon the worship of the One True God, Jehovah of Israel, is proceeding to ultimate and final victory.

Regarding this period there are many prophecies, some of which we shall now proceed to analyse. The first to which we shall turn our attention is that passage of Isaiah which occupies Chapters xxiv-xxvii. Perhaps the theme is carried farther, but these chapters are as much as we shall have space to deal with. We must ask the reader to take the Book of Isaiah in hand and read chapter by chapter as we proceed.

In systematic manner Isaiah gave forth his messages to each nation in succession which inhabited Western Asia and Africa.

Turn from message to message and it will be seen that he speaks in succession to the following, which we give rather in geographical order than in the order they appear in the prophecies.

Judah and Jerusalem, Chapters i-vi. The House of David, Chapters vi-xii. Ephraim (Israel), north of Judah and Jerusalem. Syria, north of Israel or Ephraim. Ammon, Moab, Edom, south and east of the former three nations. The desert of the sea, Arabia, Babylon, Assyria. The land shadowing with wings beyond the borders of Ethiopia. Egypt, this includes all Africa.

These are among the messages which Isaiah sent forth to the people indicated.

For the nations of Western Asia the story of the prophecies is one of coming destruction. It is the story of the fall of Asiatic civilisation.

The African messages evidently do not apply until the end of the prophetic period of seven times, and then it speaks of delivery for the land shadowing with wings by the "people scattered and peeled," "which have been terrible from their beginning": that is to say, by Israel.

As to the message to Egypt, it gives a résumé of Egyptian history and takes up the special message to Egypt at the time the pillar of witness shall be unveiled and at the time that from the throne of Jehovah, which as the Bible states is occupied by the House of David, a great one and a saviour is sent who shall smite Egypt and heal it. This message then is for the day in which we are now active.

Summing up all these things, spoken of the nations of Western Asia and Egypt, in astonishment he cries:

"BEHOLD THE LORD MAKETH THE EARTH EMPTY, AND MAKETH IT WASTE, and TURNETH IT UPSIDE DOWN, AND SCATTERETH ABROAD THE INHABITANTS THEREOF."

This is most certainly spoken of the whole civilisation of Western Asia in the B.C. period.

Now, when the Asiatic civilisation, and the nations upon which it was founded, should thus be brought to nought; the birth of a new civilisation in the "Isles of the sea" is sung in the following striking words:

"When thus it shall be in the midst of the land among the people, there shall be as the shaking of an olive tree, and as the gleaning grapes when the vintage is done.

They shall lift up their voice, they shall sing for the majesty of the Lord, they shall cry aloud from the sea.

Wherefore glorify ye the Lord in the fires, even the name of the Lord God of Israel in the isles of the sea.

From the uttermost part of the earth have we heard songs, even glory to the righteous." (Isa. xxiv, 13-16.)

The theme now swings back from "the Isles" to "the earth" of Asiatic civilisation, and to Palestinian Israel involved in it.

"But I said, My leanness, my leanness, woe unto me! the treacherous dealers have dealt treacherously; yea, the treacherous dealers have dealt very treacherously.

Fear, and the pit, and the snare, are upon thee, O inhabitant of the earth.

And it shall come to pass, that he who fleeth from the noise of the fear shall fall into the pit; and he that cometh up out of the midst of the pit shall be taken in the snare: for the windows from on high are open, and the foundations of the earth do shake.

The earth is utterly broken down, the earth is clean dissolved, the earth is moved exceedingly.

The earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard, and shall be removed like a cottage; and the transgression thereof shall be heavy upon it; and it shall fall, and not rise again." (Isa. xxiv, 16-20.)

This brings us to the end of the seven times of prophecy.

IN THAT DAY.
